State Hiring Freeze Has Had No Major Impact Locally

Gov. Jim Hunt, in September, ordered a freeze on state hiring in an effort to reduce operating expenses.

A survey last week of state agencies in the Greenville area indicated that locally, the freeze has had no major impact on operations.

The largest state employer in Pitt County is East Carolina University. While the university as a whole is included in the freeze, the School of Medicine was exempted by the governor.

Melvin Buck, director of personnel, oversees the hiring of non-teaching employees at the University. He explained that the freeze, "is causing some hardship in isolated cases," but emphasized, "for the most part, we're able to get along with what manpower we have."

He noted that the freeze is not a total cut-off of jobs. Explaining, Buck said that positions for essential services can be released from the freeze and filled.

Buck added that the university currently is, "actively recruiting and trying to fill," some 15 positions at the present time.

Susan McDaniel, associate vice-chancellor for academic affairs said, as far as the freeze on teaching positions is concerned, "there is a certain amount of pain. I think it's hard to find somebody that's not overloaded."

She added, however, that the university is, "acting in good faith and doing everything we can to not ask for things that we possibly can put off."

Ms. McDaniel said the situation at present is, "right difficult to assess, since we just started the semester."

The belt-tightening is not limited to personnel, she noted. "Every unit that has a budget is keeping track of everything they don't purchase because of the freeze."

"It's certainly a large problem. But we understand the difficulty and are doing what we can," she concluded.

As for the medical school, Dean William Laupus said "we're pleased that the governor took recognition of our particular situation," as a developing school. He added, however, "we've adhered in developing our program, to the rules set forth by the governor."

He explained that no additional faculty members have been hired, while support personnel are replacements or represent positions which are part of the essential development process.

"We will continue to do this as long as the freeze is on,"

By JOHN USHER

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — U.S. Ambassador Donald McHenry, in a bitter speech to the General Assembly Saturday, denounced the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan as a breach of world peace and a threat to global security.

Speaking on the third day of the assembly's emergency debate on the Afghan crisis, McHenry said Soviet troops had "occupied" the small Moslem country and "replaced one leader in Afghanistan with another more to its liking."

A Soviet-backed coup Dec. 27 dislodged President Hafizullah Amin — later killed in a gunbattle at the presidential palace in Kabul — and installed pro-Moscow Babrak Karmal.

"The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan flouts international law, breaches world peace and threatens regional and global security," McHenry said.

"It is imperative that we, the peoples of the United Nations, express in clear and forceful terms that we will never condone lawless interference with the right of a sovereign people and the lawless invasion of its territory."

McHenry said the assembly must demand the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan so that its people could choose their own leaders.

"It is imperative that we demonstrate we cannot be duped into ignoring our responsibility to defend the principles of the (U.N.) charter by tortured explanations that insult our intelligence."

McHenry rejected Soviet allegations that the United States and other countries were using the Afghan crisis as an excuse to renew the Cold War.

"The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan is no cold war struggle," he said. "It is an act that the rest of the world cannot afford to ignore.

"For this body to remain silent in the face of open aggression would be for the members of the United Nations to condone a violation of the only principles that small nations can invoke to protect themselves from self-aggrandisement by larger and more powerful states," McHenry said.

"It is not the United States whose freedom is most threatened by Soviet indifference to the charter. The smaller and the non-aligned countries, like Afghanistan, are most imperiled."

West Germany's Ambassador Rudiger von Wechmar said the assembly must oppose what he called the Soviet Union's "ruthless act of force."

"The Soviet intervention casts a dark shadow on the manifold and successful efforts which have been undertaken in the United Nations and elsewhere in order to improve and to build a more stable and just international order," he said.

The assembly is considering a resolution, sponsored by more than a score Third World countries, that demands "the withdrawal of all foreign troops."

Diplomatic sources said the draft resolution is certain to be adopted by more than the required two-thirds majority, but because of the large number of delegates that still wish to speak a vote is not expected until Monday.

Grain Commitments

By JUAN J. WALTE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States Saturday secured commitments from all other major grain exporting nations that they would not increase their grain sales to Russia to make up the shortfall that resulted from the U.S. embargo.

Representatives of all the nations — including Argentina, which this week publicly said it refused to go along — agreed "that their governments would not directly or indirectly replace the grain that would have been shipped to the Soviet Union prior to the actions announced by President Carter," an official joint statement said.

The meeting was called hastily after Carter embargoed 17 million tons of grain and 1 million tons of soybeans bound for Russia in retaliation for the Russian invasion of Afghanistan.

The official statement, agreed to by the representatives, said that the "public statement of the government of Argentina is well known." But the statement said the Argentine officials agreed not to "take trade advantages" from the current situations or to shift markets.

Except for Argentina, the other major exporting nations had indicated they would go along with the United States.

Asked how officials were able to change Argentina's position, Undersecretary of Agriculture Dale Hathaway,

Demands Shah's Arrest

By SAJID RIZVI

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Iran asked Panama Saturday to arrest the shah and militants holding 50 Americans in the U.S. Embassy rejected any suggestion that the hostages could be freed for something less than the exiled monarch's extradition.

"Our first position is, none of the hostages are going to be released until the shah is back to be on trial in Tehran," said a spokesman for militants occupying the U.S. Embassy for the 70th day.

The spokesman said he had not been informed of a report that the Islamic regime might let the captives go if Panama agrees to "consider" the stah's extradition and the U.N. Security Council guarantees that no economic sanctions will be slapped on Iran.

But he reiterated the militants' position that none of their hostages would be set free until the shah was brought back to Iran to be executed.

In a letter Saturday, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh asked Panamanian President Aristides Royo to order the shah's arrest pending a formal request for his extradition.

Afghan Groups Unite

By ROLAND TYRRELL
United Press International

Three major guerrilla groups fighting to overthrow Kabul's pro-Soviet regime announced their merger Saturday to wage a "united offensive" against the 85,000 Soviet troops in Afghanistan.

The announcement by three of the several Moslem guerrilla organizations operating near the Afghan-Pakistani border coincided with a warning by Pakistani President Gen. Mohammad Zia ul-haq that Soviet forces have reached Pakistan's frontiers, posing "the most critical situation" his nation has ever faced.

Maulawi Hohammad Nabi Mohammadi was chosen to lead the Jamiat-I-Islami (Islamic Society), the Revolutionary Islamic Movement and the Afghanistan National Liberation Front. The three rebel groups will collectively be known as the Islamic Unity Covenant.

"We have invited the Hezbe-IIslami and Khalis (the two other major guerrilla groups) to join us and now it is up to them," a spokesman for the three groups said. "We are all agreed on military cooperation, but not on political cooperation."

In Moscow, Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev personally defended the Russian intervention in Afghanistan, said his troops would be withdrawn as soon as "imperialist aggression" had been defeated and accused the United States and China of building a "mountain of lies" about the Soviet role in Kabul.

Brezhnev's remarks, reported by the official Tass news agency Saturday, appeared to be linked to the Afghan debate at the United Nations, where the General Assembly was preparing to pass a resolution condemning the Soviet invasion.

Brezhnev repeated the assertion of the Kabul government installed by Moscow in the wake of its December invasion that Soviet troops were dispatched to Afghanistan to defend it against "imperialism."

A somewhat different interpretation of events was advanced by Zia, who told a group of Pakistani officials in a speech Saturday that the Soviet Union seized Afghanistan "in broad daylight and the Soviet borders have now reached Torkham and Chaman" on the frontier.

"Pakistan is not alone in the situation and it has the support of reliable friends. Firm faith in the Islamic

Gaskins Recipient Of Citizen Award

Charles P. Gaskins, business leader and member of the Board of County Commissioners, received the "Outstanding Citizen of the Year" award at the annual meeting of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, Friday night.

A number of other local residents were recognized for their contributions to the community and the chamber, while special presentations were made to the principal speaker for the banquet, Columbia Broadcasting System president James H. Rosenfield, on behalf of the State of North Carolina, the city and county, and East Carolina University.

Announcing the Citizen of the Year Award, Malcolm Howard, chamber vice-chairman of legal counsel, said the criteria for the selection of the recipient is based on civic activity, business involvement, general reputation and contribution to the community.

The winner of, "our highest award," Howard said, "unquestionably exhibits these traits."

Gaskins, a Greenville native, graduated from Greenville High School, then entered the U.S. Army, serving in Iceland, England, France, Germany and Belgium during World War II. After his discharge from the service in 1945, Gaskins operated Greenville Feed Mills until he became Pitt County Register of Deeds in 1947, a post he held for three years.

Since that time, Gaskins has been engaged in the oil and gasoline business and farming.

He was appointed to the Board of County Commissioners in 1967 after the General Assembly expanded the board from five to six members to give an additional seat to Greenville Township, and has been elected to three four-year terms on the board.

Having served as chairman of the Board of Commissioners two times, Gaskins served as the official spokesman for the county during the construction of the new Pitt Memorial Hospital and negotiated the contract which made the hospital the prime clinical teaching facility for the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Gaskins married the former Jane Rowlette of Greenville 37 years ago, and the couple has two children.

He is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, the Greenville Kiwanis Club, the board of directors of Planters National Bank, and the East Carolina Art Society, as well as the Chamber of Commerce.

In accepting the award, Gaskins said simply, "it is a suprise. I do appreciate this."

In his speech, CBS' Rosenfield stressed the importance of competition between television networks.

Citing recent criticism, Rosenfield said, "Why is it assumed that virtually anything anybody dislikes about television must be the result ... of competition? Why is it never pointed out that competition is the main fuel, the driving force, that has given us what is by far the most efficient, diverse and reliable communications system in the world today?

"And why," Rosenfield continued, "doesn't someone note that it's the home viewer who benefits the most from network competition?" What the viewer gets, the CBS official said, "is more and better programming all the way down the line — more news coverage, the biggest feature film titles, the super sports events, the brightest specials and the highest quality regular programming in the world."

Citing charges that ratings come before responsible journalism, Rosenfield said, "this claim is unjustified in both

Incumbent Gaskins Files For County Commission

Charles P. Gaskins, a veteran member of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, filed as a candidate for reelection late Friday afternoon.

Gaskins has held a seat on the board — representing the Greenville District — since 1967, serving three terms.

He was formerly affiliated with the Register of Deeds of Pitt County, and has served as chairman of the Board of Commissioners on a rotating basis. Gaskins is an ex officio member of the Board of Trustees at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The incumbent is manager of Quality Oil Company of Greenville. He is a member of the Greenville Kiwanis Club and a past president of that organization.

Gaskins and his wife, Jane, are the parents of two married sons, and they have three granddaughters. Gaskins attend St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Greenville.

Self Proclaimed Prophet Kills Two Children, Shoots Himself

By LILLIAN SWANSON
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Arlene Ware, six months pregnant and bleeding from bullet wounds, shouted "Help! Help!" and crashed through a window of her burning home to escape gunfire and flames that ended a two-day siege and the lives of her two small children.

Ms. Ware, 22, and her newborn 2-pound daughter, delivered by Caesarean section, were in critical condition today following four hours of surgery at Mercy Hospital after the siege ended Friday. She had been shot twice in the chest.

A self-proclaimed Muslim prophet, identified by police as Samuel Andrews, 27, told officers that "evil spirits" possessed Ms. Ware and her children whom he was holding as hostages. He shot himself to death as officers fired tear gas canisters that sent a swirl of fire inside Ms. Ware's house in the Beltzhoover neighborhood.

Police said that at about 5:20 a.m. Friday they heard five muffled gunshots come from inside the house.

Police Superintendent Robert Coll said officers decided to rush the house after Andrews and Ms. Ware told them by phone later in the morning that one of her two children was dead.

"He gave us every indication he was going to shoot the rest of the people. We were forced to make the assault," said Coll. "I can only speculate he became totally deranged, and became determined to kill the 'evil spirits' around him."

When officers stormed the house about two hours later, they found the bodies of Ms. Ware's daughter, 4-year-old Kimberly, and her son, 18-month-old Fred. Each had been shot in the head, officers said.

The trouble began Wednesday when Andrews, who had been living with Ms. Ware for the past 18 months, warned an upstairs neighbor, Delores Yates, to leave. He fired shots at her as she ran down the steps, officers said.

Police surrounded the home and began an around-the-clock vigil.

In ranting telephone conversations with police, the gunman kept switching demands. Once he said he wanted a ship to Iran to negotiate the release of the American hostages. He also demanded a meeting with President Carter and ordered Jehovah's Witnesses to gather at Three Rivers Stadium.

"He told me Allah told him he was a prophet," said Sgt. Wally Long, who handled telephone talks with Andrews. "I tried to ... convince him that we were there to help him and not to hurt him.

"But it didn't work."

Traffic Accidents

A series of nine traffic accidents resulted in $9,545 in property damages here Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, according to Greenville Police investigations.

Thursday at 3 p.m., a vehicle driven by Valerie Mitchell Graham, 718 Vanderbilt Ln., collided in the Pitt Memorial Hospital parking lot with a vehicle driven by Harry Kenneth Blocker, 417 Tarboro St., Rocky Mount. Estimated damages to the Graham vehicle were $75 and $100 to Blocker's.

Treva Foushee Fidler, 213 Leon Dr., was the driver of a vehicle that collided on S. Evans Street with a vehicle driven by Billy Ray Dudley, 209 Mumford Rd. about 1 p.m. Friday.

Dudley was reportedly taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment. Fidler was charged with a safe movement violation.

About 4 p.m., a vehicle driven by Robert Lee Midgett, 200 Verdant St., Apt. C4, collided on Memorial Drive with a vehicle driven by Raymond Lee Boyd, P. O. Box 771, Winterville.

Midgett was charged with a failure to reduce speed violation. Damages were estimated at $500 to Midgett's vehicle and $200 to Boyd's.

Vehicles operated by Gloria Elias Clark, 48 Barnes St., and Alma Riddle Letchworth, 600 E. 10th St., collided on E. 14th Street about 4:56 p.m.

Clark was reportedly injured but not taken to the hospital. Letchworth was charged with a safe movement violation.

Estimated damages were $4,000 to Clark's vehicle and $1,000 to Letchworth's.

Police investigated a 5 p.m. collision and charged Kattie Battle Edge with a hit and run accident. Edge's vehicle collided with a parked vehicle in a parking lot on N. Greene Street.

Estimated damages were $20 to Edge's vehicle and $150 to the parked vehicle.

Jeffrey Walston Griffin, 63 Faye St., was the driver of a vehicle that collided on Dickinson Avenue with a vehicle driven by Warren Gambrel, 314 S. Memorial Dr. about 6 p.m.

Barnes was charged with a failure to yield to the right of way violation. Damages were estimated at $150 to the Griffin vehicle and $275 to Barnes' vehicle.

Saturday about 10:15 a.m., vehicles driven by Patti R. Caine, 53 Olds Queens, Englishtown, N.J. and Jesse Bell Childers, 100 N. Cambridge Rd. collided on Dickinson Avenue.

Caine was reportedly injured but not taken to the hospital.

Damages were estimated at $850 to the Caine vehicle and $275 to Childers' vehicle.

A vehicle driven by John Joseph Mallison, Rt. 1 Box 484, Washington, collided on Greenville Boulevard with a vehicle driven by Brenda Currin Elks, 1102 E. Second St., and one driven by Darlene Taylor, Rt. 2 Box 478, were involved in a three-car collision on Greenville Boulevard.

Police set damages at $600 to the Taylor vehicle and $600 to the Elks vehicle.

About 4:30 p.m., a vehicle driven by Samuel Cornelius Mayo, Rt. 6 Box 350, Lot 6, collided on Clark Street with a vehicle driven by Paul Anthony Johnson Jr., P.O. Box 195, Hamilton.

Damages were estimated at $125 to the Mayo vehicle and $325 to Johnson's vehicle.

Fur Company Was Robbed

According to the Pitt County Sheriff's office, a local fur company was robbed, and furs valued at approximately $7,500 are missing.

Barry Prescott, manager of Plott Hide and Fur Company, reported the missing eight red fox furs, 92 gray fox furs, and 100 raccoon furs early Saturday morning to the Sheriff's office.

Entrance was gained through a slide door at the rear of the building, and the locks were broken, according to the report.

U.S. Gives Assurances To Pakistan

By JUAN J. WALTE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter assured a team of Pakistani diplomatic and defense officials Saturday that the United States will help them respond to the growing Soviet threat in south Asia.

"The president reaffirmed the treaty commitments of the United States to Pakistan," a senior White House official said after the "very positive" meeting that included Carter and acting Pakistani foreign minister Agha Shahi.

The 40-minute Oval Office meeting followed a five-hour meeting between Shahi, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and other officials.

After that session, Vance also renewed America's 1959 treaty pledge to help Pakistan with troops and arms if attacked.

Press Secretary Jody Powell said the White House meeting "involved an exchange of views on the implications for international peace and security of recent developments in Afghanistan and on how the United States might be helpful in assisting Pakistan under the present circumstances."

Carter was joined by Vance, Deputy Defense Secretary Graham Claytor, U.S. Ambassador to Pakistan Arthur Hummel, national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski and others.

Powell said in a speech to the National Education Association earlier Saturday that the administration believes it has worked out an arrangement with the congressional leadership to get around the prohibition against giving arms to strategic Pakistan, which borders Afghanistan and the Soviet Union.

Iranian Executions

By ALVIN B. WEBB

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — A firing squad under Islamic court orders Saturday executed 11 followers of dissident Ayatollah Kazem Shariat-Madari, sparking a rampage by mobs bent on vengeance through the northwestern city of Tabriz.

Iran formally asked the government of Panama to arrest deposed Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi for his extradition to Tehran within 60 days. The return of the shah is the bottom-line demand of Moslem militants in exchange for the release of 50 American hostages, held for a 70th day at the U.S. Embassy.

But the militants said they knew nothing of reported last-minute negotiations on a proposal that the hostages could be freed if the U.N. Security Council agreed to forego any economic blockade and to consider calling for the extradition of the shah. They said their flat demand for the shah to be returned before any hostages are freed was unchanged.

Normalization Step

By NAT GIBSON

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Rhodesia and Mozambique took a major step toward restoring full normalization of relations Saturday by reopening their border at Umtali, 135 miles southeast of Salisbury, for the first time in nearly four years.

At the same time, thousands of tribesmen converged on Salisbury to welcome Patriotic Front co-leader Joshua Nkomo on his return from exile

President Samora Machel of Mozambique closed the border in March 1976. Several hundred cheering Mozambicans and a handful of Rhodesians greeted the border opening at 11:20 a.m. but nobody managed to pass through customs on either side before the gates were closed 40 minutes after they opened.

Officials said the closure was caused by customs officers going off duty at noon, but that the gates would reopen normally early Monday.

Non-Commital Reply From Iran To U.N.

By R.M. SORGE

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Iran gave a non-commital reply Saturday to a note from U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim on whether Iran is willing to negotiate the release of American hostages held in Tehran, diplomatic sources said.

They said the reply did not indicate a breakthrough in the 70-day crisis, but merely reiterated suggestions to negotiate a deal to free the hostages in exchange for an international panel to probe "crimes" by the deposed shah and the return of the former monarch's wealth to Iran.

The Council delayed a scheduled meeting until later Saturday night. Delegates said the United States must decide whether to press for a vote on its demand for mandatory sanctions against Iran over Iran's refusal to release the captives.

U.S. Ambassador Donald McHenry met briefly with Waldheim and told reporters the United States asked for further clarification of the Iranian message. He also said there was a good possibility the Council would postpone the vote.

American supporters, including Mexico and China, strongly advised the United States against pressing for a vote.

In the reply to Waldheim, Iranian authorities continued to insist on the shah's extradition from his exile home on the Panamanian island of Contadora, the sources said. Mexico has not replied to a formal request from Iran to extradite the deposed ruler.

The reply from Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh amounted to the same proposals made during Waldheim's recent visit to Tehran, but were more "positive" than past communications, the sources said.

Clovis Macsoud, the Arab League's U.N. representative, confirmed Waldheim's receipt of the note following a one-hour meeting with Waldheim and a telephone conversation with Ghotbzadeh.

Francois Giuliani, a spokesman for Waldheim, said the secretary general cabled Ghotbzadeh "requesting a clarification of the Iranian position" after being verbally informed of it by Iranian Ambassador Mansour Farhang.

Giuliani emphasized that Waldheim was acting as intermediary between the Security Council and Iran and not at the request of the Council, which has been labeled by Iranian religious leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini as a tool of the United States.

"Waldheim is continuing his efforts to pursue a peaceful solution," he said.

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Wachovia Corporation has reported income before securities transactions for the fourth quarter of 1979 totaling $11.502 million, a 5.4 percent increase over the final quarter of 1978.

U.S. Intends To Remain Top World Naval Power

By ROBERT CRABBE

SHANGHAI, China (UPI) — The United States intends to remain the world's No. 1 naval power for "as far as we can see" in the future, U.S. Defense Secretary Harold Brown said Saturday.

Brown made the statement during a tour of a Chinese naval base where smartly dressed Chinese sailors greeted him by banging gongs, cymbals and red lacquer drums.

"The United States has the world's most powerful naval force," Brown said in a speech at a luncheon given by Zheng Guoxiang, commander of China's East Sea Fleet.

"It is able to control the sea and project power from sea to land all over the western Pacific. We plan to see that this shall continue through the 1980s, the 1990s and as far as we can see."

Brown toured the polished naval base on the Whang Pu River north of Shanghai on the eve of his departure from a nine-day visit to China that opened contact for the first time between Chinese and American military leaders.

Coming in the wake of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, it added a new dimension to the Sino-American connection that began last year on New Year's Day when the two governments established diplomatic relations.

Trudging through a steady rain, Brown and his aides from the defense and state departments and the national security agency inspected three Chinese warships and a submarine in the muddy yellow waters of the Whang Pu.

The largest ship Brown toured was a 3,500-ton destroyer in operation since 1977, armed with six launchers for guided missiles and carrying a 350-man crew.

"Our fleet lags behind because of China's poor economic base," the fleet commander told Brown. "A navy needs good technology and science. The ships you have seen are all Chinese made and designed. We need to improve our techniques."

Brown in reply praised the "toughness and discipline" of the Chinese air force and navy units but tactfully told his hosts that China's navy has a way to go.

"Naval forces depend on technical capability, the defense secretary said. "As time goes on, technical and industrial development in China will be reflected in technical advances for your forces."

Commission Feels That 1980 Will Be Another Growth Year

Economic development activity in Pitt County for 1980 should continue on a positive sound basis, according to a report from Bruce Beasley, Jr., Chairman of the Pitt County Development Commission.

In a year-end report prepared for the Commission's annual meeting, Beasley highlighted areas of activity which will produce new jobs and new industrial investment in the county for the coming year.

"Although 1979 was one of the best in the area in terms of growth as over 500 new manufacturing jobs were created, 1980 should be even better," Beasley said. Based on a recent survey by the Commission staff, approximately 460 new industrial jobs have been reported by existing industry to be created in 1980.

"Our existing industry" noted Beasley, "will generate over $5 million in new payroll this year." To emphasize the point Beasley reported that "as of the first of January there were nine plants in the county in the process of hiring new employees.

"Also, the survey just conducted indicated that over 170,000 square feet of new manufacturing space is programmed for the county in the first half of 1980 and this does not include the J.H. Hudson speculative building."

The Commission's efforts to secure a tenant for the new 40,000 square foot facility being constructed north of Greenville have concentrated on potential female employees in light manufacturing.

"Projected investments by existing industry in new facilities should exceed $35 million in 1980 which is about 65 percent of all new investments to the county in 1979. This one indicator should relieve any possible recession threats to our area."

Commission executive Director Reese Hart notes that new business activity could be even better if not for several reasons. "Currently both new and existing industry are finding it very difficlut to locate skilled employees with welding, metal working, electronics, and other special trades experience. Our current unemployment rate of 5.2 percent provides many unskilled potential manufacturing employees but since our average wage in the county is over $200 per week our area is not attractive to low wage companies."

In summarizing current Commission activity part reported that wholesale, distribution and service business projects were at an all time high. "Presently, there are several major distribution facilities being planned for the area, plus service busnesses which are needed to help stimluate additional industrial growth. Also, there is one truck terminal, and other supporting companies which should generate at least 40-50 well-paying jobs during 1980. This type of growth is best for an area because it maintains the climate for future major capital investments."

Chairman Beasley indicated that a top objective of the Commission was to promote the availability of several existing facilities in the county for industrial projects. "Our goal all year has been to secure tenants for these buildings and I am pleased with our effort so far. I know at least three of these buildings will be occupied this year due to the great interest in them."

The Commission has embarked on an industrial park feasibility study for the Ayden-Grifton area and plans by the Commission indicate that a recommendation is being prepared to nominate both Ayden and Grifton for the Community of Excellence Award sponsored by the North Carolina Department of Commerce.

"Farmville was the first community in Pitt County to receive the Community of Excellence Award and this has improved chances for industrial growth," noted Beasley. "And the Commission wants to help create this opportunity in conjunction with the grant project in Ayden and Grifton."

In conclusion Beasley reported, "1980 should be a year of strong, positive growth since many areas of our community such as the county hospital, the Medical school, Carolina East Mall as well as existing industry continue current expansion projects. It is now a goal of the Commission to intensify our efforts to attract a major new corporate investment to the county. This is our number one objective for 1980."

Fairmont Puts You Miles Ahead Of Corona.

But keep going. Compare the prices. The Fairmont costs amazingly less. In fact, the price difference can buy you 15,640 miles of gas.

Stop by and drive the Ford Fairmont. You'll see how roomy economy can be.

*EPA estimates
Compare these estimates to the estimated MPG of other cars. You may get different mileage depending on how fast you drive weather conditions and trip length. Comparisons based on actual base sticker prices of comparably equipped car as of October 1979 and driving 15,000 miles per year with gas at $1 a gallon.

When you want to save energy...
The phone is the answer.

Over the past decade, Americans have become increasingly energy-conscious. New and old homes alike are being better insulated. People are purchasing more fuel efficient automobiles. Air conditioners and heaters are running less. And, more people are using their telephones to save gasoline.

By using the phone, you can avoid a search from store to store for a particular item. Communicating by telephone can save a trip to the post office. Asking directions over the phone can save a lot of wasted driving. There are many energy "shortcuts" your telephone can provide you, so use it often.

The quick, easy and inexpensive telephone... When you want to save energy, it's the answer.

It's for you

Highway 264 Ass'n Is Alive

A campaign drive for Highway 264 Association operating funds reminds us that this important organization is still active on a project which is essential to Pitt County's future.

The association has been successful in getting the freeway concept U. S. 264 from Wilson to Greenville an approved highway project. The interstate-design highway doesn't exist yet, however, and none of us should let down in our efforts until it does.

"Without question, the present condition of U.S. 264 from Greenville to Wilson affects the full development of the profit potential of every business in Greenville and Pitt County, Nisbet said. "Until our highway is brought up to the standards of U.S. 264 as it now exists west of Wilson, we must continue to exert a strong, organized and sustained effort."

We can't emphasize enough how essential the U. S. 264 project is to all of us. First, it is vital as a safety factor for everyone in the east who travels to Raleigh and west. But also communities which don't have adequate highways will soon find themselves left out as industrial and economic development take place. Good highway transportation is essential to industry, the farm sector and virtually all phases of our economy.

There must be no letdown in our efforts to obtain the U.S. 264 improvements.

Justice Is Swift In The Arab World

In Saudi, Arabia last week some 63 religious zealots who took over the Grand Mosque in Mecca were executed by beheading.

The ultimate punishment was decreed by King Khaled, based on the readings in the Koran.

The procedure was far different, of course, from that which would have been followed in the United States, and it is an indication that we must respect the customs of Middle Eastern countries if we are to maintain good relations with them.

THIS AFTERNOON

Apples A Big Cash Crop

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Add apples to that growing list of North Carolina products which are capturing major shares of the marketplace.

This state now ranks as the nation's eighth largest producer of apples, shipping 295 pounds to points as far away as Canada, New Orleans, Dallas, St. Louis and Minneapolis.

At 42 pounds per bushel, that's seven million bushels of apples — primarily from western counties.

By comparison, Virginia produced some 450 million pounds. North Carolina production is growing strongly, however, and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham sees the number of trees increasing in coming years.

"Our apples match in quality any in the country. And because we can reach the market first in the fall, I see the number of trees increasing", Graham says.

Getting to market early — August and September— gives North Carolina apples preferred status among distributors. Natural factors such as soil, rainfall, sunny days and cool nights, dictate the ripening date.

More than half of the state's apples are produced in Henderson County where 350 orchards on 12,000 acres contain nearly 600,000 trees.

Ginseng, Too

Another income producer in western North Carolina is the root of the ginseng plant. Mountain dwellers for years have scoured the forest floor for the brown, gnarled root so highly prized in the Orient as an aid to improving one's love life as well as contributing to general good health.

Research scientists at the Mountain Horticultural Crops Research Station near Fletcher' a unit of the N.C. State University Agricultural Research Service, are working to develop techniques for successful commercial production of the root. A few people grow the plant in small plots, but there is a sharp difference between prices for the wild and cultivated roots. Those grown in plots have smoother surfaces and are tan or creamy. The wild plants are rougher and darker; and ginseng fanciers like to try find patterns or images in the roots, especially shapes of a man or parts of a man's body.

The current price for dried wild roots is as high as $180 per pound, while the price for cultivated roots is $30 to $60 per pound. Even at that difference in price, however, an acre of cultivated ginseng is a goldmine, yielding up to 2,000 dried roots and grossing up to $60,000 per acre in some areas.

That gives the farmer another problem: guarding his crop against rabbits and squirrels as well as human predators.

Auto Taxes

At this time of year when Tar Heels are listing their property for local tax purposes, and renewing the registration on their motor vehicles, local government officials have been reminded of how much loss tax cheaters are causing them.

Doug Holbrook, chief of the ad valorem section of the State Department of Revenue, surveyed some 30 counties, and used to results to estimate the statewide loss in actual taxes as nearly $5 million, and the administrative costs of trying to track down and collect that lost revenue at nearly $2 million.

BILL NOBLITT

Holbrook puts high on his list of priorities some solution to the problem. Some counties don't even try to locate the unlisted vehicles. Others hire staff and buy the motor vehicle registration lists to compare them with property listings. The General Assembly has wrestled with the dilemma for years, turning thumbs down to various proposals ranging from having the local tax collector issue auto license plates to the latest proposal: requiring a windshield sticker from the county tax collector to certify tax payment.

Sunday Morning Notes

The year 1980 is easy enough to remember. It's the first year of the decade. Two digits change, rather than one. As decades change there is always an outpouring of hope for better time times . . . for that elusive time called the "golden era."

Your columnist is well aware of all this, having read and written many times about the upcoming 1980s.

Why, then, did we write our checks for the first of January — and date them all 1979?

Gold fever has gripped mankind since ancient times. In theory our modern monetary system is free of gold values, but in practice gold still has fascination for those with money to invest.

In recent weeks the gold bugs have fared handsomely as gold soared over $600 an ounce and panic buying reigned on the gold markets.

For most of us, of course, gold is still something that fills teeth, or makes jewelry and wrist watches valuable. Few of us own any gold bars.

One local observer, watching the soaring prices, did comment, "Wonder if it's feasible to melt down my gold retirement watch."

It's worth a try.

Hardly anyone who drives a car needs to be told that gas prices are soaring. For those who for years paid between 30 and 40 cents per gallon, the 50 and 60 cents prices which followed seemed outlandish. Now with gas reaching up to $1.20 per gallon locally many of us are in shock.

It prompted one old timer (one who remembers back three years) to comment, "Do you recall when proposals to increase the gas tax a penney a gallon would bring about an uproar?"

We do indeed.

And then there's the weather. Last week was typical January with the clouds hovering over the area almost the entire week.

A sales representative visited us last week and wondered if the sun ever shone in the area.

Then he brightened and commented, " But at least it isn't snowing."

Village Media Crush

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

WAY UP THAR, N.H. (AP) — Up in Pilger Notch, Marshtown Corners and Jasper's Ledge competition in the quadrennial media Olympics is hotter than a sugar house stove at sap-running time this election go around.

As every television viewer knows, these three legendary New Hampshire villages, high up in the White Mountains, are the first in in the nation to vote in every Presidential election.

Always right on the jot of midnight. And, of course their returns are the first counted in the New Hampshire primary, which in these parts rates bigger than bundling in two-runner sleds.

What with five Democrats and seven Republicans on the ballot and campaign workers sticking out of every snow drift, things have hotted up so fast this time all three villages have hired on an extra village idiot to handle the media crush. His job is to tilt way back in his chair on the front porch of the general store and answer any fool question from any fool reporter who happens along.

Seth Parsons, the real estate agent up in Pilger Notch (Pop. 11), already has discarded his three-piece Brooks Bros. pinstripes and Dior tie with matching kerchief in favor of the laced boots, corduroy britches, plaid lumberman's shirt and orange hunting cap so popular with TV field producers.

Quite a character, Seth. Last time he was interviewed on camera on successive days by Dan Rather, "Good Morning, America," John Chancellor and the Tonight Show and told each of them he was going to vote for a different candidate. Folks still recall how he split his britches talking to Sandy Hill while trying to slap his knee and whittle at the same time. He never could whittle worth a shaving.

1975 Cable From Tehran

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The unearthing of a diplomatic cable to Washington from the U.S. Embassy in Tehran describing Sen. Edward Kennedy's visit in May 1975, casts a shadow on the senator's description of the shah's regime as "one of the most violent in the history of the world."

The routine cable, addressed to then Secretary of State Henry Kissinger but which he probably never saw, provides a cloudy backdrop to Teddy Kennedy's latter-day verbal assault on the toppled shah. Kennedy not only accepted, gratis, an Iran Air Boeing 727 "for travel within Iran." He was also "provided rooms at the best hotels in Tehran and Isfahan, lavish hospitality for all 12 members of (his) party" and police escorts "usually offered only to visiting heads of government."

Paragraph four of the diplomatic cable barely touched on the issue that, four and a half years later, Kennedy singled out in his Dec. 2 verbal assault on the shah — the matter of human rights. It said that during the senator's 80-minute private session with the shah and talks with other top officials Kennedy "also touched lightly on human rights issues." His "basic themes" were the dangers of a Mideast arms race and the need for greater "international cooperation to redress economic inequities."

The contrast between Kennedy's acceptance of the shah's "lavish hospitality" ("imperial court treated senator as... front-runner for presidency"), and his sudden recollection last month of the shah's "most violent" regime, has not been unique among politicians. Others, possibly trying to milk votes out of the Iranian tragedy, have done the same.

After years of relative silence, for example, Sen. Howard Baker, the Senate Republican leader and a presidential contender, has criticized U.S. policy toward Iran, saying on Jan. 7 — two weeks before the Iowa caucuses — that he would "stay away from the business of shoring up a dictator."

More pointed has been the about-face in Moscow. On Dec. 5, two days after Kennedy's attack on the shah, Tass called the shah a "criminal." Referring to U.S. assistance that helped restore the shah to his throne in 1953, Tass asked: "For was not international law also flouted by the actions of the U.S. special services (meaning the Central Intelligence Agency), which organized the overthrow of the legitimate government in Iran and foisted the shah's lawlessness on the Iranian people (for) a quarter of a century?"

For 15 years before that knock at the shah, Moscow nurtured him with a benign public attitude and a plethora of economic goodies. On Nov. 18, 1963, Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev said in a speech during a state visit by the "criminal" and his wife that "I would like to stress that the distinguished and respected visitors will be received in our country with joy and hospitality."

In words that gushed with affection, the late Soviet leader Nicolai Podgorny on Nov. 18, 1974, at the end of another state visit from the shah, praised "the

Other Editors Say Protecting Hunt

(Salisbury Post)

"Some people", an aide to Governor Hunt observed, "are playing right tough politics."

Thomas O. Gilmore, a deputy secretary, was referring to former Governor Bob Scott who was about to announce as a primary foe of Hunt.

Scott obtained a summary of remarks at a closed cabinet meeting. They disclosed that Gilmore had advised department heads to give Hunt credit for popular programs but to keep the discredit for unpopular ones for themselves.

Scott promptly had copies sent to three state newspapers. No one has ever accused Scott of not being a tough and alert politician.

But there's a world of difference between tough politics and dirty politics. Scott's open leak of the cabinet meeting notes was a legitimate attempt to show that Hunt is hiding behind his appointees on bad programs and seeking credit not due him for good ones. Certainly that is what the notes suggest. And there is no doubt but that in these campaign days Hunt may need to have his department heads run interference for him because some of his programs may not be popular. Some of them aren't.

At the present, his badly misunderstood New Generation proposals are causing him grief among the right wingers in his party.

But on the other hand, the Gilmore suggestions may simply have meant that when department heads goof they should accept the blame quickly in order to prevent it from spreading to the governor.

In any case, it is no great matter. This is campaign time, and it is only natural for the wagons to circle around the governor to protect him from the attackers. But in this case it appeared that someone slipped a message out of the encampment to the Indians.

40 Years Ago Today

Sunday, January 13, 1940

WASHINGTON — Senator Taft of Ohio has advanced far enough along as a presidential candidate that he can call a press conference and expect a good attendance, a dozen or more reporters.

He doesn't conduct his conferences with the booming vivacity of President Roosevelt — but gadzooks, who does? Taft is a trifle on the shy side.

Maybe he is like his presidential father in some respects, but he has no belly laugh. That may or may not qualify him in your eyes as a Republican presidential prospect, depending on whether you like people with belly laughs.

We would suggest that all presidential aspirants get southern gals for front office greeters. These mid-western types, such as the one in Taft's office, doubtless gets all the letters filed away without losing any, but it takes a South Carolina or Kentucky chatterbox to make one happy about waiting an hour for an appointment.

Strength For Today

HARMONIOUS PATTERN

In an essay explaining what true culture really is, Matthew Arnold, the famous nineteenth-century poet and critic, gave as his definition a quotation from Bishop Thomas Wilson: "To make reason and the will of God prevail."

This combination of "reason" and "the will of God" must sound strange to some ears. Many modern people consider rationality and religion far apart. Even quite a few who go regularly to church think of religion as purely a Sunday activity, and live from Monday through Saturday completely uninfluenced by what they experience on Sunday. In their own fashion, the follow Jesus's instructions to render unto Caesar what is Caesar's and unto d what is God's; but they allot an extremely small share to God.

Both reason and the will of God can prevail in our lives and be in harmony with each other. Reason is never as rational, nor harmony as harmonious, as when our Sunday and our weekday lives stop being separate and blend into a consistent pattern of Christian living.

Small Business Airs Plaints

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Fired with "a collective passion that will make Proposition 13 pale by comparison," small-business people are the latest to congregate in Washington to have their case heard.

"I don't think they will settle for anything less than results," said Arthur Levitt, Jr., who applied the "passionate" tag to the small-business people who, he said, are fighting for their life.

Levitt, chairman of the American Stock Exchange, made his comments as had of a commission that in one year held 57 hearings leading to next week's White House Conference on Small Business.

The business people, representing companies with one or two employees to those with hundreds, are fired up, said Levitt. Fired up about their lack of recognition, about inflation, their inability to attract a fair share of capital, about taxes, paper work and regulation.

Being practical people, their long list of grievances is nevertheless exceeded by their total of corrective proposals, gathered from 30,000 business people who attended the regional meetings.

Some 1,500 of them will attend the Washington conference Sunday through Thursday. Delegate voting will reduce opinions to 60 proposals and then to 15 priority recommendations to be made to the President.

The biggest fear of the delegates, said Levitt in an interview this week, is that after all their effort and passion they will go back home and legislators will do nothing.

"I hope a response will come out of this conference," said Levitt. "I think the White House will follow up." But there is no assurance; or if there is, it is that the intensty of delegate feeling can hardly be ignored. Nor can their increasing politicial sophisitication.

Several local groups and the Small Business Association now keep legislative scorecards, and when November comes around they spread the word about who is and isn't a supporter.

Some small business advocates hope that out of the conference there will emerge a permanent organization, something that can be used to keep pressure on Congress and the White House.

Is "fighting for its life" too extreme a description of the predicaments of small business? Small-busines people don't think so. They say they are being crushed by Big Business, Big Government and Big Unions.

They maintain that too often they aren't even recognized as a distinct constituency, and that as a result their special needs and goals are ignored by legislators.

Carter Still Is Strongest

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — President Jimmy Carter has consolidated his advantage over top Republicans Ronald Reagan and Gerald Ford and now leads Reagan, 63 to 32 percent, and Ford, 57 to 38 percent.

His Democratic rival, Sen. Edward Kennedy, trails Ford, 44 to 49 percent, and leads Reagan by only a small margin, 50 to 42 percent.

The latest trial heat results, based on a survey conducted over the last weekend, show little change from the previous tests, taken in December. The December results, however, represented the most dramatic turnabout in the four decades since the Gallup Poll began conducting these test elections, which measure the relative strengths of various candidates prior to the November elections.

The magnitude of the changes in the political fortunes of the candidates tested can be seen in the fact that Carter climbed from a near tie with Reagan in September to a six-point edge in mid-October and moved out to a 24-point advantage in the December survey.

Against Ford, Carter progressed from a nine-point deficit in September to an 18-point lead in December

On the other hand, Kennedy's lead over Reagan declined sharply, from 28 points in September to five points in December. His margin over Ford shrank from 20 points in September to nine points in October and in the December survey he trailed Ford by eight points.

Here is the question asked:

"Suppose the presidential election were being held TODAY. If (Carter/Kennedy) were the Democratic candidate and (Reagan/Ford) were the Republican candidate, which would you like to see win?".

Those who named another person or who were undecided were asked: "As of today, do you lean more to (name), the Democrat, or to (name), the Republican?"

Carter Popularity Remains High

As reported yesterday, Carter's popularity remains at a high level, with 58 percent of Americans saying they approve of his performance in office. His rating in an early December survey was essentially the same, 61 percent. Carter also continues to hold a lead over Kennedy as the choice of Democratic voters nationwide for the 1980 presidential nomination, 51 to 37 percent, representing Carter's best showing to date.

The trial heat results reported today are based on personal interviews with 942 registered voters out of a total sample of 1,309 adults, 18 and older, conducted during the period Jan. 4-6.

As I Recall It

The Blizzard Rescue Operation Of March, '60

By NOEL YANCEY

When you read of food and feed being airdropped to save hungry humans and starving cattle, you automatically think of the Great Plains and its howling blizzards. But in 1960, I covered a story that brought these things home to North Carolina.

After a succession of winter storms had left a thick coating of snow and ice on the ground, Old Man Winter on March 8 dealt a knockout punch to Northwestern North Carolina. With spring officially only two weeks away, the most severe blizzard to hit the state in decades paralyzed the area. At West Jefferson, where around 18 inches of snow were on the ground, an additional 18 inches fell. Fifteen inches of new snow fell at Sparta and 13 inches at North Wilkesboro.

At least two deaths were attributed to the storm. In Alleghany County, a man froze to death within 100 feet of his house. He had been to the store for food. An elderly woman froze to death after she apparently slipped off the steps of her house and was unable to get back inside.

Gov. Luther Hodges proclaimed a state of emergency and a massive rescue operation was mounted when it was reported that several hundred families in remote sections of Alleghany, Ashe, Watauga, and Wilkes counties were isolated and were running short of food and fuel.

A fleet of Army and National Guard helicopters, jeeps, trucks and Weasels was mobilized. The Red Cross moved in with a myriad of workers and obtained supplies of food, feed and fuel for the relief effort. All available Highway Department men and equipment were brought in from other sections of the state to clear roads which were blocked by drifts up to 30 feet deep.

After a haphazard, somewhat hit-or-miss start, the relief effort began to run smoothly under the direction of National Guard Col. C.B. Shimer. Trucks, jeeps and Weasels hauled supplies to families that could be reached by road. A fleet of eight helicopters, operating from temporary bases set up at West Jefferson, Boone, Newland, Mt. Airy and Roan Mountain, Tenn., reached people isolated in remote mountain coves. On the helicopters, food and medical supplies were given priority, but hay for starving cattle was carried in remaining space.

One Army captain, who landed in several snow-blocked mountain coves, found an 80-year-old woman and her daughter ill and without food or fuel. He chopped a supply of kindling to last until the chopper could return with 200 pounds of supplies and a Red Cross nurse who treated Mrs. Mary Bolling, who had been bedridden for two years, and her daughter,

Black Writers' Outlet In Alabama Publication

By GAIL MICHAELS

LEXINGTON, Ky. – "Callaloo" is a word for a stew of African, Afro-American and West Indian origins. It is also the name of an important black literary magazine entering its third year of publication.

Edited by Alabama native Charles Rowell, Callaloo seeks "to discover and encourage excellent developing black writers (still unknown) whose work – because of the narrowness of the American publishing world might otherwise remain unread in dusty notebooks."

According to Rowell, undiscovered authors are not the only ones in need of an outlet: "Many established writers, too, have difficulties getting their creative work published in the South as well as in other regions." Callaloo is one of the very few magazines in the United States devoted exclusively to black literature. (Obsidian, Oosh-Bop and The Black Review are others.)

The idea for the journal grew out of a meeting of the Southern Black Cultural Alliance, held in Birmingham, Alabama, in 1975. Dr. Rowell (then teaching in Baton Rouge), Jerry Ward (a graduate student in Virginia) and Tom Dent (a community activist and writer in New Orleans) came away from that gathering inspired by the possibility of creating a Southern black literary journal. During the next months, they worked together to found Callaloo.

The first issue appeared in December of 1976 with an editorial pledge to complement the New York literary establishment's focus on Northern black writers by celebrating new Southern artists. Especially emphasized would be the African and Caribbean heritage of American black culture.

As co-founder Tom Dent, a poet and playwright, wrote in that first issue, the founders were willing to take a financial gamble in order to realize their hopes for the journal. "Do not expect us to be businesslike," wrote Dent. "Businesslike people don't undertake literary journals without money. Do expect – in fact demand – that we do something worthwhile."

The emphasis on doing "something worthwhile" has brought financial support as well as widespread acclaim to the journal, although like most every fledgling publication, Callaloo has had its share of money problems. Producing the first issue cost $1,500 – funds which the three founders did not have. "So we solicited help from our friends," explains Rowell. Contributions came in from people in both the academic and lay communities who believed the idea of Callaloo was worth the gamble.

Given the financial difficulties, it's not surprising that Callaloo No. 2 did not appear until February, 1978, when Rowell got a teaching position at the Universtiy of Kentucky and took the editorial offices of the magazine to Lexington with him.

Though the costs of publishing have since doubled, Callaloo is now on firmer financial footing, thanks initially to a special assistance grant from the Coordinating Council of Literary Magazines in New York. Subsequent support has come from the University of Kentucky, the Kentucky Humanities Council and – most importantly – from an increased subscription base.

The first issue of Callaloo focused on the South, and this region's new black writers. After Callaloo No. 2 – a general issue – came a special issue focusing on novelist Ernest Gaines, a Louisiana native most famous for his saga, The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman. The fourth issue featured, among other things, an interview with writer Charles Johnson and a striking photo-essay by Roland Freeman on a black music and dance "happening" in a Baltimore park. Callaloo No. 5, due out in early 1980, will center on the art of black women.

The journal now reaches subscribers "all over the United States, in Egypt, Germany, Nigeria, Ghana, New Zealand, England, France and Canada," says editor Rowell.

In addition to his duties as Acting Dean of Undergraduate Studies at the University of Kentucky, Charles Rowell continues to encourage and practice "experimental" writing. A poet himself, his ambition is "to use the English language in a way never before used....I want to mix oral and written words on a page and put in background sounds of Afro-American music. This mixture I want to use in the completion of the very long poem I have begun on my family history."

True to its name, Callaloo is a rich and varied mixture of poetry, fiction, essays, interviews, photographs, book reviews and graphics. Now that the journal is coming out on a regular basis – three times a year – its founders hope that it will become an established forum for the exploration of American black aesthetics. Says Rowell, "We hope that Callaloo will in time become the standard bearer for black American literature."

An Invisible Friend's Guardian And Victim

By GAIL MICHAELS

According to Meg, our household has a new member, an invisible mouse named B. J.

He's a far cry from the other imaginary friends I've known. The little girl who lived next door to me when I was five had an imaginery classmate, but her name was Pamela, and every child on the block envied her. She had long blond curls which never got tangled and three pink party dresses. She ate chocolate for breakfast, she never went to school, she could wear her lace-trimmed nightgown all day if she wanted to, and she took dancing lessons. She stayed with my neighbor for about eight months until her mother, Shari Lewis, made public her marriage to the Lone Ranger and took Pamela and Lambchop to live in Disneyland.

B. J.'s background is not nearly as glamorous. In fact, his origins are distressingly obscure. He just appeared one evening while I was reprimanding Meg for her failure to go to sleep at a decent hour.

"I can't help it," she said. "B. J. keeps talking to me, and if I don't answer, he tickles my tummy."

"Then perhaps you should give B. J. to me," I said, expecting her to fork over a member of the stuffed zoo which always occupies her bed.

Instead, she held up two fingers very gingerly, "You better grab him by the tail. He bites."

B. J.'s character took on even more alarming dimensions in the days that followed. I discovered through Meg that the mischievous B. J. breaks things, refuses to pick up after himself, eats candy behind the commode, and, worst of all, backtalks. To break him of these habits, Meg has devised a number of clever punishments. At first, she was going to cut off his tail. When this threat failed to deter him, she came up with a really terrifying retaliation; she decided to send him to New York for a year.

She is now threatening to sell him. Now how one goes about selling an invisible mouse whose existence can be verified only by the word of a four-year-old is beyond me. But after suffering through B. J.'s antics for the last two months, I'm willing to try a want ad.

His latest misdeed was breaking the back off one of my two good earrings. At least, the only witness to the event swore that B. J. was the culprit. I wasn't so sure. "I have this feeling that a little girl, not a mouse, was playing in my jewelry box," I said.

Meg's eyes widened. "Oh, no, it was B. J. I told you he's always doing naughty things."

"But what would a mouse want with an earring?"

"He wanted to try it on. He has a hole in one ear where a cat bit him."

"Meg, it's one thing to have an imaginary friend. . . ."

"I told you, he's not imaginary. He's invisible. Except sometimes I see him."

"Okay then, invisible. But it's another thing to pretend that this friend is responsible for the naughty things you do."

She began to fidget. "I wouldn't ever do that. And even if I did, B. J. wouldn't mind. He likes to be naughty. He even laughs when he gets a spanking."

I got the feeling that B. J. would take the blame for this crime no matter what. So I said, "Well, since B. J. is your pet, you're going to have to learn to make him behave. I think you better go sit in your rocking chair and think about how you're going to do that."

Amid tearful protests she stomped to her room, and I was feeling pretty satisfied with my refusal to let her shirk responsibility until I heard her scream, "You idiot!"

I rushed to her door. "What did you call me, young lady?"

Her expression was as bland as mud pie. "I wasn't talking to you. I was yelling at B. J."

strengthening of trust" with the "criminal" of five years later.

Such reversals of field following political upheavals in foreign countries have less to do with facts than with the hope of reward. In Kennedy's case, he was judged guilty of overkill immediately after his Dec. 2 outburst and was widely criticized. The uncovering of the June 3 diplomatic cable seems to confirm that criticism.

It was signed by then Ambassador Richard Helms. Helms had arrived in Tehran from Washington during Kennedy's last day there and, other than having Kennedy for dinner that evening, took no part in the visit and did not write the routine cable describing the senator's visit. Messages from a U.S. Embassy are invariably signed with the ambassador's name.

The special treatment accorded Kennedy by the shah, with no indication of on-the-scene remorse by Kennedy, included his 80-minute audience with the shah; two sessions with "representative" groups of students at the University of Tehran; a dinner at the house of Ardeshir Zahedi, Iran's ambassador to the U.S., "hosted by his daughter, Princess Mahnaz (the shah's granddaughter) to which the cream of Iranian establishment was invited."

Kennedy's Boeing 727, courtesy of Iran Air, took him on a two-day, all-points sightseeing tour around the country, including overflights of the Persian Gulf and the Strait of Hormuz – that critically important passage for the West's and Japan's oil supplies that the shah protected with U.S. help for a quarter of a century.

The last paragraph of the cable from Tehran noted that the visit had been Kennedy's first. It gave him an "excellent opportunity to evaluate the situation as it really is and to balance some of the negative impressions about Iran" that Kennedy appeared to bring to Iran with him.

Until Dec. 2, 1979, that summing up seemed to hit the nail on the head.

Last New Hampshire Primary, all 14 voting citizens were polled on the same historic day by Harris poll, the Gallup folk, the New York Daily News straw vote and the AP-NBC News pollsters and unanimously agreed on a different choice for each. It was the biggest plurality Eliot Richardson got anywhere.

Marshtown Corners, in case you've never been there, is located between the non-rhyming lines on an abandoned Burma Shave ad near a highway sign that says "hump" and marks the spot where Motley Safer got bogged down in a prime time snow drift four years ago.

Hanoch Dimwitty, the snow plow driver who pushed the "60 Minutes" crew out, pronounced himself "four square and rock-ribbed for Gerald Ford," forgetting he'd already told the Chicago Tribune feller he was "straight as a hoe handle for Ronald Reagan."

Adding To The Uncontrollable Budgetary Costs

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Every January when the federal budget goes to the Congress, the White House includes an inconspicuous little table of those programs that are "relatively uncontrollable under present law." The list of uncontrollables runs on and on, to an estimated $404 billion in the current fiscal year.

A year hence, when the table for 1981 is prepared, we will have one more uncontrollable. It will be known as CHAP — the Child Health Assurance Program — and it will cost a bundle.

Remarkably little has been written about this newest "entitlement" under federal outlays for health and welfare. Under the bill approved by the House earlier this month, an estimated five million additional children and 220,000 pregnant women would be added to the millions of poor persons now covered under what is known as EPSDT — the Early Periodic Screening, Diagnosis and Treatment program. The Senate has yet to act upon its somewhat narrower and less costly version of the bill, but most observers expect agreement between the two houses by early spring.

The principal arguments made in the House in support of the greatly expanded program were to this effect — that EPSDT has failed to meet the medical needs of millions of needy children who are eligible but yet untreated, that fresh incentives are required to gain more vigorous efforts from the states, and that the money spent today on preventive services for these children will be recouped many times over in dollars that will be saved tomorrow.

The last argument proved to be the most persuasive. Congressman Tim Lee Carter of Kentucky, himself a physician, cited pathetic cases in his own practice of children from poor families whose lives could have been made happier and more productive (and less expensive to the taxpayers) if early medical attention had corrected deformities, or immunized against such diseases as polio, or treated other congenital conditions. Several speakers cited a study in North Dakota indicating substantial long-run savings as a consequence of screening in infancy and early childhood.

My thought is not to debate the merits of CHAP. The program is restricted to children of our poorest families. It may indeed save money over the long haul, though these repeatedly promised savings sound awfully conjectural to me. My guess is that CHAP soon will be riddled by the kind of massive fraud, waste and chicanery that have made Medicaid a colossal public ripoff. But it would take a heart of stone to oppose a program that might correct the cleft palate, or repair the displaced hip, of a poor child who might otherwise be condemned to suffer his handicap for the rest of his life.

The merits to one side, a vast deal can be said in support of the argument unsuccessfully advanced by Dave Stockman, a young Republican from St. Joseph, Mich., now serving his second term. Stockman pleaded unavailingly for an amendment that would finance the new child health program by annual appropriations rather than by open-ended "entitlements."

Out of a total budget of $531 billion, $404 billion — or 76 percent — now is regarded as "uncontrollable." Some of that sobering sum is for interest on the debt, some for incomplete defense contracts, some for farm price supports and the like. But the great bulk of it is for "entitlements" that are blank checks upon the Treasury. "Over the last decade or so," said Stockman, "we have created a perpetual motion machine. We have created a self-propelled, half-trillion dollar spending machine that is simply out of control. And that has reduced fiscal policy to an annual exercise in futility and impotence, and reduced the role of Congress to that of a green eye-shaded disbursement officer who totes up the bill, writes the check and then trundles off to the chapel to mourn after the process is over...If we are to get some kind of discipline and some kind of control on the budget process and fiscal policy of this country, then the place to start has to be this entitlement system."

Stockman's effort lost by a lopsided margin of 226-152, but it was an effort worth making. The federal budget has indeed slipped out of effective control by the Congress. Compassionate and humane it may be, but CHAP in this regard will only make bad matters worse.

1960 Blizzard Rescue...

Hattie, who had also been sick. Another helicopter landed within 500 yards of a house to bring Dewey Robert Lewis, 43, a cardiac patient, to a hospital. Dr. C.M. Keyes of Avery County was flown by helicopter to the home of Mrs. Ettie Moore in rural Ashe County. She was a diabetic and desperately needed insulin.

After his fuel ran out, Grady Barlow, a farmer near Grandfather Mountain, tore down a rail fence, began chopping up his front porch and even threw the shoes of his five children in the stove to keep warm. There was no food in the house except a few potatoes and his horse had died from the cold. When his wife injured her foot with a pitchfork, he walked out two miles to summon help.

A helicopter mission assisted Mrs. Donna Davis of the Roaring Fork community and her eight children. They were without food except for part of a sack of meal, and she had suffered burns. Supplies were flown in and a doctor treated her injuries.

A flight of five helicopters from West Jefferson flew to the nearby White Top, Va., community with a medical team and supplies for about 30 families. The mission was mounted after Fred Blevins walked 7 and a half miles through the snow to report they were in need.

An 11-year-old boy, Samuel Robertson, walked more than six miles to get assistance for his mother and five brothers and sister. He was taken home in a jeep loaded with food and fuel. In his hands he clutched six chocolate bars a relief worker had given him.

The rescue mission was not without its frustrations. A helicopter was sent to help an isolated family in the Roaring Fork section where a woman was reported about to go into labor momentarily. The chopper could not land, but a Weasel finally got through to the house with a nurse and supplies. The nurse reported, "she's going to have a baby all right, but not for about three months."

Another time, the pilot of a chopper in which I was flying spotted a red flag on the ground and thought it might be a distress signal. When we landed we found that a woman had washed her husband's red underwear and had hung them out to dry. One farmer's cow was killed when it was hit by a bale of hay dropped from the sky, and the family of Hub Brown, near Boone, spent a cold night when a bag of coal dropped from a helicopter went astray and punched a hole in the roof of his house.

Many residents of West Jefferson, where the rescue effort was centered, felt that the plight of the people was exaggerated and there was no need for such an elaborate relief effort. They said the most important thing was to bring in heavy equipment to clear the roads so that residents could get out and take care of their neighbors as they had always done.

However, when Hodges visited West Jefferson March 13 on a survey mission, Army Capt. C.L. Siler told him the helicopter pilots felt that the rescue effort was the most important duty they could perform short of combat. "When you see grown men come back with tears in their eyes about hungry kids, it's touching," Siler said.

As the rescue mission neared an end, it was reported the helicopters had reached 700 families and that the trucks, jeeps and Weasels had assisted another 1,800 families.

Navigation Course Set

To prepare navigators for the U. S. Coast Guard's licensure exam, UNC Sea Grant is offering a 40-hour course beginning Jan. 16 at Manteo High School in Manteo.

The 13-week course is open to the public free of charge, but enrollment will be limited to 40 people.

The course is designed to cover questions found on the captain's licensure exam, and will include discussions of charts, first aid, seamanship, communications and other safety and navigational skills.

Wayne Wescott, a Sea Grant marine education specialist with East Carolina University, has organized the course.

The instructor for the course will be Captain Ernie Foster, captain of the Albatross III and a teacher and guidance counselor at Manteo High School. Foster has been navigating North Carolina waters for 23 years.

Classes will be held each Wednesday from 7 until 10 p.m., and course materials will be provided.

Anyone interested in the course should sign up by calling Marine Advisory Service Office on Roanoke Island, (473-3937).

Currently the Netherlands covers about 13,100 square miles, and it's still growing. The Dutch add about 12 square miles to their country each year as they keep reclaiming land from the sea.

Mental Health Bd. To Meet

The Pitt County Area Mental Health Board will meet Wednesday at 4 p. m. at the center.

New board members recently appointed by the Board of County Commissioners will be introduced. They are Ms. Lois Reddrick, Ms. Willette Rollings, Ms. Eunice Casey and Dr. Harriet Wooten.

Agenda items for January include a report of the joint meeting of the Area Board and the executive committee of the N. C. Association of Emotionally Troubled; committee reports by Ray Rogers, Bill McDonald, Allen Hahn and Robert Martin; and a report by Martin on the meeting of the Eastern Regional Area Board Association. Dr. Stephen K. Creech, Area Director, will give his monthly report.

Claims Soviets Executing Afghans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is waging an "organized and methodical" execution campaign in Afghanistan that has already left some 300 political, religious and military leaders dead, the Carter administration says.

The executions are being carried out at an "execution base" near a major Afghan city at the rate of as many as "a couple dozen a day," an administration official charged Friday.

The efforts of the Soviet forces are apparently designed to "exterminate those who oppose them," said the official, who briefed reporters on the condition that he not be named.

An estimated 900 to 1,200 Soviets have been killed or wounded since the Moscow government intervened militarily in Afghanistan late last month, he said. Civilian casualties were "very heavy," he added.

The official said his information came from a variety of sources, but he declined to be more specific.

"There is apparently an execution ground near one major city where there have been something in the neighborhood of 300 executions since the beginning of the invasion," he said, declining to name the city.

"Our information is that Soviet troops are carrying out the executions" by shooting, he added.

The shootings are being carried out "on a very organized and methodical basis," occurring "at a fairly regular and continuing rate of up to a couple dozen a day," the official said.

Meanwhile, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said Friday an estimated 70,000 Soviet troops are now in Afghanistan with tens of thousands of soldiers stationed along the Central Asian nation's border with the Soviet Union.

The possibility of retaliating against the Soviet action in Afghanistan by moving the Summer Olympic Games out of Moscow was a "live and open question which has been the object of some discussion here and in other countries," said Carter.

—ABC News reported Friday that American intelligence experts believe the Soviet Union may send troops into northwestern Pakistan within a month to hit Afghan rebels using the area as a sanctuary.

ABC quoted unidentified sources as saying they think the attack would be aimed at the insurgents and not Pakistan itself. Pakistan lies south of Afghanistan.

Carter To Be On Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — NBC's "Meet the Press" has booked President Carter for an interview the day before the Iowa caucuses, the program's producer says.

Carter, who didn't campaign in Iowa because of the joint crises in Iran and Afghanistan, is scheduled to appear on Jan. 20, producer Betty Cole Dukert said Friday.

The Iowa caucuses will be held Monday, Jan. 21.

Ms. Dukert said Carter would be interviewed from NBC's Washington studios.

Opposes Water Transfers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A legislative study commission, deciding whether to recommend creation of a state water authority, went on record Friday as opposing interbasin water transfers.

The commission unanimously adopted a motion saying it did not intend to recommend the transfer of large quantities of water from river basin to river basin as a solution to North Carolina's water problems.

House Speaker Carl Stewart, D-Gastonia, who heads the commission, said he hoped the group's action would put to rest fears expressed in recent days that some areas of the state would lose their water supply — and thus chances for increased development — if a state water authority is created.

Urge Wiretapping Use

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The police chiefs of Raleigh and High Point urged the Governor's Crime Commission on Friday to permit state and local law enforcement agencies to use wiretapping in criminal investigations.

But Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten said later that he is not convinced of the need for electronic eavesdropping devices.

Raleigh Police Chief Frederick Heineman told the commission: "I hope I don't appear to be a radical or a hard hat, but I have had experience with this and found it to be a very effective tool. I would like to have the same capability and leverage to investigate that the federal people have."

Removes Soldiers From Embassy

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — El Salvador's military command has removed a squad of soldiers from around the Panamanian Embassy in a cautious and low key response to left-wing militants who seized the embassy and hold seven hostages.

The governments of Panama and Costa Rica, whose ambassadors are among the hostages, urged El Salvador to use restraint and try to end the crisis peacefully, but there were no indications negotiations had begun.

Some 50 persons who identified themselves as members of the February 28 Popular League, seized the embassy Friday and demanded the release of league members they claimed were imprisoned in by the government.

There had been hints from Argentina that the government would seek a softening of the American human rights position or military aid.

Asked if the United States offered any concessions, Hathaway said there was no discussion of non-agricultural issues.

Hathaway said the United States did not ask the other nations to cut off their existing contracts with Russia, only to refrain from trying to get American markets.

But he said all of the nations were reviewing their contractual obligations toward Russia. He declined to say if the review was for the purpose of going further than the United States sought to cut back existing sales to Russia.

He said the nations would gather again "as necessary to review the situation."

U.S. officials plan to seek similar assurances when they meet with Argentine and Brazilian officials Monday to discuss soybean exports to Russia.

Hathaway said the negotiators did not discuss cutting off meat exports to Russia. Russia's grain imports were to feed livestock. When the embargo was announced, Russia indicated it might step up its meat imports.

Lemish To Be Speaker

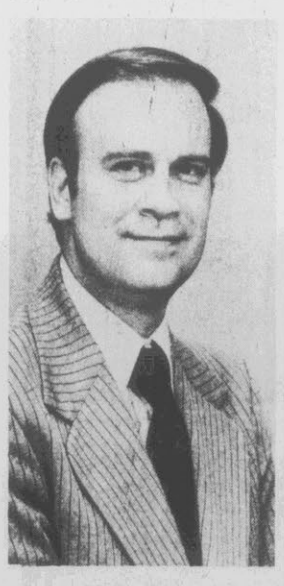

Donald Lemish, vice chancellor for Institutional Advancement and Planning, will be the guest speaker for the Society for Collegiate Journalists' Induction Ceremony Tuesday, Jan. 15 at 7 p.m. in the Mendenhall Student Center Legislature Room.

Lemish previously served as assistant vice president and director of development at the University of Alabama in Birmingham before joining the East Carolina University staff. His media experience varies from journalism teacher and director of publications to sports director. He received his bachelor and master degrees in journalism from Ball State University, Muncie, Indiana.

SCJ President Joyce Evans said that the English fraternity has been invited, and inductees may bring guests.

Eleven student members and two faculty members will be inducted. They are: Ramona Mills, Larry Zicherman, Charles Chandler, Alison Bartel, John Mueller, Brenda Vinson, Richard Green, Paul Lincke, Karen Wendt, Hugh Johnson, Diane Henderson and faculty members John Warren and Susan Donaldson

Interested persons who wish to attend may do so.

Spoke On Eye Misconceptions

"Reading in dim light and sitting too close to a TV set will not hurt a child's eyes." Dr. David W. White told St. Peter's School PTA members here Wednesday night.

Dr. White, a Greenville ophthalmologist, said these are two of the most commonly held misconceptions about the eye.

"Neither is there any scientific evidence that reading problems are due to poor eye coordination and can be helped by special exercises," he said. "Unfortunately, desperate parents with false hopes sometimes waste their money on such exercises."

Showing slides of the normal eye and eyes affected by conditions such as glaucoma, cataracts or injuries, Dr. White explained the difference between an ophthalmologist and an optometrist and an optician. "The Optometric Drug Use Law passed by the 1977 General Assembly is a bad law and should be repealed," he said. "I am concerned about the health of the people of North Carolina. The N.C. Society of Opthalmology has a registry of cases accumulated over the last couple of years showing entirely too many instances of misdiagnosis, mismanagement and eye damage caused by this law."

Energy Fair Scheduled January 26

An Energy Fair, featuring a show-and-tell of ideas for energy conservation and utilization of alternate energy resources, is scheduled for Saturday, Jan. 26.

The event is being sponsored by The Greenville Energy Program and Greenville Utilities Energy Conservation Office, in cooperation with East Carolina University's Department of Industrial and Technical Education, and the Pitt County Extension Office.

A spokesman for the Greenville Energy Program said that the Energy Fair is intended to present examples of things the beginner, the handyman, homeowner, housewife, farmer, and do-it-yourselfer can do to better use energy.

Emphasis will be placed on using low-cost or recycled readily-available materials, it was mentioned. School and youth groups, agencies and educational groups as well as the general public, are invited to submit exhibits.

Persons interested in showing what they have built to use sun power, wind power or another form of renewable energy are encouraged to call 752-7166, the spokesman noted. Ideas for conserving energy in the home, business and farm are also welcome.

According to the spokesman, certificates will be given to everybody who has an exhibit. Awards will be presented for outstanding displays.

Jim Gibson, state energy director, is scheduled to be in Greenville for the Energy Fair, and Mayor Don McGlohon, as well as ECU Chancellor Dr. Thomas Brewer, are expected to be on hand.

The Energy Program is promoting the use of the local transit system in conjunction with the energy observance and bus service to the Energy Fair will be offered. Passengers will be receiving slips of paper noting their rider participation.

The Energy Fair will be held from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. at the Willis Building at the corner of First and Reade Streets. The judging of exhibits is scheduled for 10:30 a.m. with ribbons to be awarded immediately after judging.

No Major Impact ....

Laupus noted, adding that, "I feel certain had we not received an exception, we would have successfully justified each hiring."

Other medical school officials noted that there doesn't seem to be any basis for reports published by several newspapers last week that excepting the ECU medical program from the freeze has created a rivalry between the ECU program and the medical school at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

A UNC vice-president for finance, Kennis Grogan, said the ECU program, "is growing by a phased process. You'd stop that growth if you froze their vacancies. Unless they were given special consideration, their development would be stopped."

Spokesmen at the Department of Transportation's Division Office here said there are 22 vacancies in the 8 counties served from the local office, but added, "We don't feel the effects as bad right now as perhaps later on."

Construction work is being held down at the present because of the weather. "We'll feel the effects worse when the weather clears up," the spokesmen suggested.

A spokesman for the Department of Human Resources suggested that being unable to fill positions, except in emergency situations, might place, "extra strain and stress," on present employees, but said the work could be accommodated.

He noted that a heavy turnover in key positions could cause problems.

Highway Patrol Troop A commander Capt. Carl Gilchrist pointed out that law enforcement personnel are exempt from the freeze, although civilian employees of state enforcement agencies are not.

In Troop A, the officer said, "we just haven't had any resignations, so no vacancies have been created," although a problem might arise if a civilian employee were to resign.

Accountants Group To Meet Jan. 16

The Eastern Carolina Chapter of the National Association of Accountants will hold its January meeting at the Beef Barn on St. Andrews Drive on Jan. 16 at 6:15 p.m.

This month the speaker is J. Alfred Broaddus, Jr., vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, Va. He will speak on "The Economic Outlook for 1980."

The Eastern Carolina Chapter, headquartered in Greenville, is a part of the National Association founded in 1919 with 3,500 members in North and South Carolina and 90,000 in more than 30 countries.

Anyone interested in joining or desiring further information may contact Paul Setliff at Fieldcrest Mills, 752-4126.

Assistance Available

Larry Harrison, local revenue officer for the North Carolina Department of Revenue, advises that personnel to assist individuals in filing State Income and Intangibles Tax returns will be available on Monday of each week through April 15.

Assistance hours are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. The office is located in the State Employees Credit Union Building at 300 W. First Street, Greenville.

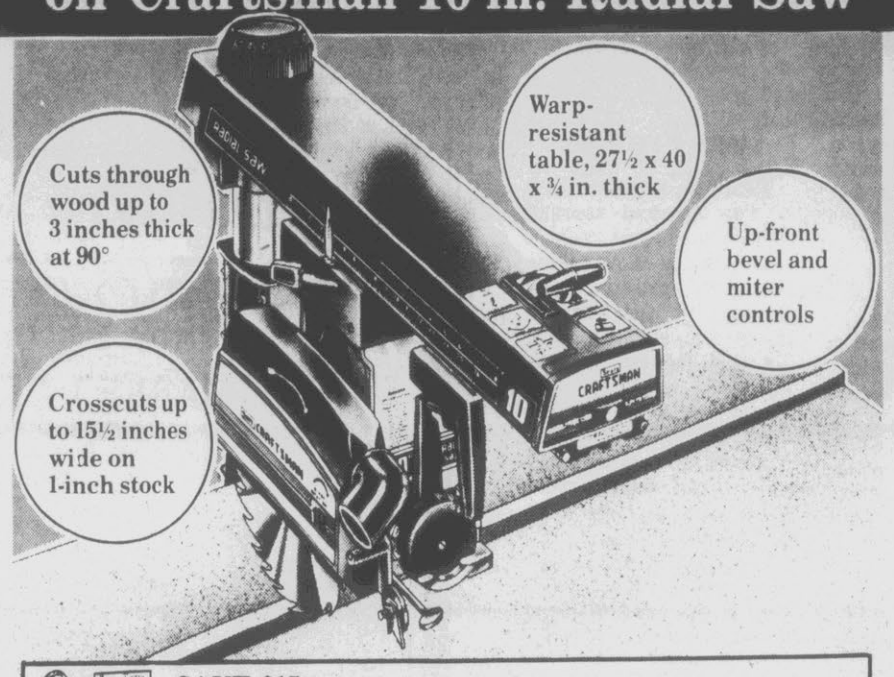

Harrison requests that those seeking assistance bring the preaddressed forms which were mailed to them.

Taxpayers filing their own returns should mail those which indicate a refund to N.C. Dept. of Revenue, Post Office Box R, Raleigh, N.C. 27634. Other completed returns should be mailed to the N.C. Department of Revenue, Post Office Box 25000, Raleigh, N.C. 27640.

Statistics in a study published by the International Labor Organization indicates that today there are at least 52 million workers under the age of 15. Of these, more than 50 million are in the developing countries, especially in Asia.

Garwood Case Recessed Until Jan. 29

By DAN LOHWASSER

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (UPI) — Marine Corps prosecutors have completed their case against accused deserter Robert Garwood, but the full story of Garwood's 13½ years behind enemy lines in Vietnam remains a mystery.

During a hearing to determine if Garwood, a Marine private, will be court-martialed, seven survivors of jungle POW camps accused the man they called the "white Viet Cong" of joining forces with his communist captors, standing armed guard over his fellow Americans, joining the communist army, and participating in the interrogation and indoctrination of POWs.

The investigative hearing, equivalent to a grand jury probe in civilian proceedings, entered a two-week recess Friday after the Marine Corps completed presentation of its witnesses. The hearing is scheduled to resume Jan. 29, at which time the defense will take over.

If the Corps decides to proceed with a court-martial for Garwood, and if he is found guilty, he could be sentenced to death.

The two weeks of prosecution testimony presented so far covers a period of just over two years in the late 1960s and centers on a series of tiny, jungle camps near the Laotian border, where 19 POWs were held captive and where six of them died.

But the story of Garwood's remaining years with the communists will apparently remain a mystery until Garwood himself breaks his silence, or until others come forward to fill in the gaps of the unaccounted for years.

"The only real surprise so far has been the absence of any surprises," said Dermot Foley, Garwood's civilian defense lawyer. "What has been presented here has been the subject of books for years.

"Bobby has an almost uncontrollable desire to tell his story to the American people," said Foley.

He said the 33-year-old Garwood will testify if his case goes to a court-martial but is not expected to take the stand when the investigative hearing resumes.

Garwood, a high school dropout from a broken home who enlisted in the Marines at 17, disappeared in September 1965 in the vicinity of Danang, and resurfaced in Hanoi last March after passing a note to a foreign visitor saying he wanted to come home.

According to Foley, when Garwood's story is told it will be one of torture and years alone with the communist troops. He said Garwood has bullet and shrapnel wounds on his body, as well as evidence of beatings.

"We are eventually going to bring out things that were done to Bobby Garwood that you wouldn't wish on Adolph Hitler," Foley said.

NBC May Reject Bid By Brown, Kennedy

Sen. Edward Kennedy and California Gov. Edmund Brown asked NBC Saturday to let them join President Carter on "Meet the Press" next weekend, but the network indicated it would reject the requests.

Both candidates are opposing Carter in the Jan. 21 Iowa precinct caucuses, which take place just one day after next Sunday's NBC interview program.

The president accepted an invitation to appear on "Meet the Press" even though he withdrew from a scheduled Jan. 7 debate in Iowa with Kennedy and Brown on grounds he was tied up with the Iran and Afghanistan crises.

Brown's campaign chairman, in a telegram to NBC, said Saturday it would be "improper" for the network to have Carter on the show alone right before the caucuses.

Two Frozen

MENDOZA, Argentina (UPI) — Two American mountain climbers were found frozen to death Saturday on Aconcagua, the highest mountain of the Americas. A third climber, rescued a day earlier, faced the loss of his toes and fingers to frostbite.

Argentine army climbers found the bodies of Charles Bludworth, 33, a science professor, and Guy Andrews, 21, a travel agent, near the 22,834-foot summit.

They began the search after their colleague, Edward Connors, 38, was found Friday by Venezuelan climbers, 2,700 feet from the peak.

Connors told the rescuers he last saw Bludworth and Andrews in a tent near the summit, half-frozen from high winds and bitter cold temperatures.

theory and fact. In crisis after crisis," he continued, "television has met its journalistic obligations squarely, fully and responsibly. And of course that has meant competition among news organizations.

"That competition spreads all the way across the schedules and beyond them. It includes everything from the latest engineering advances to new developments in community relations.

"But the more important point," Rosenfield cited, "is that competition has also meant a better, more responsive commercial broadcasting system. In short, a better product. And that, if I remember the theory, is what competition is supposed to achieve."

In addition to better news and regular programing, Rosenfield said competition has resulted in other benefits for the viewer.

"For example, the CBS Reading Program which has provided almost five million school children with an important learning enrichment experience. Through the local station, it gives them matched-to-the-broadcast scripts of special programs," and gives teachers detailed, professionally produced study guides for classroom work on the general subject of the program.

In addition to the reading program, improved coverage of sports, and election coverage — "the coverage of the 1980 election year ... will be more complete, more energetic, more sophisticated than ever before, by far."

"Both NBC and ABC have their own activities in this area," Rosenfield said. "We'd like to think we're the leader, of course, which means we'll have to come up with more and better ideas than they do. That's competition too."

Rosenfield said too, "last month we demonstrated a new alpha-numeric transmission system, TELETEXT, in electronic magazine form. TELETEXT, broadcast without disrupting the regular picture, permits the viewer to switch at choice to information that is preprogrammed in a computer.

"For example, at any moment, one can push a button and receive up-to-the-minute departure and arrival information for airlines; instantaneously updated classified advertising; or the latest stock market information, or sports results, or any other on-line information of interest to the viewer.

"All of this is either current state of the art or not far down the road," according to Rosenfield. "All of it...is the result of competitive drives. And it ends by bringing a better service into the home."

Rosenfield concluded by saying, "of course it isn't television that is regularly browbeaten for the supposed ills of 'excessive competition'. No business is immune from that kind of criticism. What's irritating about it isn't just that it's unfair. It's also uninformed."

Following Rosenfield's talk, N.C. Department of Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw, on behalf of Gov. Jim Hunt, presented the CBS president with, "what we feel is the highest recognition," a certificate naming Rosenfield to "The Order of the Longleaf Pine."

Bradshaw also presented Rosenfield and CBS affiliate WNCT-TV general manager Blake Lewis a certificate of appreciation for "broadcast pioneering", in recognition of the fact that CBS, through it's affiliation with WNCT-TV, brought the first network television service to Eastern North Carolina.

Ed Warren, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners then presented Rosenfield with a "golden leaf" of tobacco from the chamber-sponsored Flue Cured Tobacco Festival, while Greenville Mayor Don McGlohon gave Rosenfield a letter opener on behalf of the City of Greenville.

The final special presentation to Rosenfield was made by Dr. Tom Brewer, Chancellor of East Carolina University who presented the CBS official with a certificate naming him, "a distinguished honorary alumnus," of the university.

Rosenfield, a native of Boston, Mass. and graduate of Dartmouth College, was marketing director of Airequip, Inc., a photographic equipment manufacturing company, advertising manager for Polaroid Corporation, and an account executive with NBC-TV, before joining CBS in 1965 as an account executive.

Rising through the ranks, Rosenfield was named president CBS Television Network Division, responsible for all matters pertaining to network television operations, affiliate relations and network sales, in October 1977.

In addition to the Citizen of the Year Award for Gaskins, and the special presentations to Rosenfield, others recognized for their service to the community and to the chamber at the Friday night session included: outgoing Chamber president Jerry Powell, and Peggy Christopher, Ray Rogers, Eugene Taylor, Burney Warren, Mavis Butts, Jeannette Cox, Percy Cox, R.L. "Bob" Martin, Mildred McGrath, David Nichols, Robert S. Griffin, Harry Leslie, J. Larkin Little, Douglas Starr and Dr. John Tingelstad.

Concluding the program, Thomas L. Edwards, chairman of the Chamber board of directors for the coming year said, "1980 marks the 50th anniversary of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce. Our goals are outlined in the program of work before you. To make them happen, we need your dedication and involvement.

"This year should be a year of full development as a true county-wide organization."

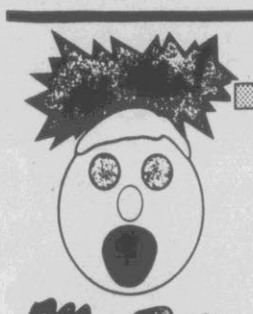

Charles R. Blake, assistant to the chancellor at ECU, and chairman of the annual meeting, acted as master of ceremonies for the session.

ideology and self-reliance are the best guarantees for the integrity and stability of Pakistan," Zia said.

At the United Nations, the Afghan debate continued in the General Assembly where Third World nations introduced a resolution "deploring" the Soviet invasion and demanding the "immediate withdrawl" of foreign troops. The resolution was expected to be passed overwhelmingly.

Baptist Minister Among Dozen Sentenced In Miami Dock Trial

By RICK SPRATLING
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — His friends said Landon Williams touched the dreams of children, lifted people's eyes to God and made life better for sweating stevedores on the docks of Jacksonville, Fla.

The government said he was a two-faced crook who should be in prison.

The government won. Williams, 43, and six other International Longshoremen's Association leaders and five businessmen were sentenced Friday in what federal prosecutors called a plot to buy and sell labor peace at ports in the Southeast.

Seven friends and associates stepped forward to praise Williams' work with ILA Local 1408 and the Jacksonville Baptist church where he's pastor. But they couldn't prevent his five-year prison sentence and $10,000 fine.

"He is absolutely the leader of that union," said John Mackroth, head of the Jacksonville Port Authority. Williams, long a power in waterfront affairs, also is an ILA international vice president.

He was one of 22 people indicted in Miami after what the FBI called the Justice Department's longest labor investigation ever. Since the probe began more than four years ago, 116 people in 12 port cities have been charged.

Jacksonville's docks were free of trouble "largely due to Mr. Williams' efforts," said Mackroth.

"I am but one of many that he has touched their lives, and introduced religion into their lives," said Edgar L. Mathis.

For years, Mathis said, Williams would help deserving young black students get into college by using his contacts with university presidents.

Even Williams himself had something to brag about: "Our union hall is the only hall in the whole world where they have prayer meetings every morning before they go to work."

A federal strike force sentencing memorandum pictured a different man. It said he willingly joined a payoff scheme, took $1,000 a month in kickbacks and allowed a shipping company to divert money from the pension and welfare fund of his own union members.

U.S. District Judge William M. Hoeveler said it was the hardest sentence he'd ever handed down.

"I'm in the position of having had a jury say to us all that he is guilty," said Hoeveler. "There is a higher court than this one who may agree with you, Mr. Williams, but that's in the natural order of things."

The tall, intellectual judge stopped. "I've got to go ahead and do it," he said. He looked away from the defendant and down at a printed sheet as he read the sentence.

He handed down other penalties ranging from probation to a 15-year prison term and $10,000 fine. The sentencing concluded a seven-month trial here. Two men are waiting for separate trials in Miami and nine others are being tried in New York on similar charges.

The heaviest sentences went to George Barone, William Boyle and Fred R. Field Jr., all national or local union officers.

Blue-Tinged Blob Billows

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Hilda Sowell had no idea where the quivering blob came from Friday or what it was, but the blob grew and grew.

The blue-tinged foam eventually loomed seven feet high out of a winding branch of Sugar Creek.

County environmental health coordinator John Barry said it was innocuous residue from a drum of spilled shampoo, that grew larger and larger as more rain fell Friday. He said it came from a nearby chemical company.

Mrs. Sowell's son Larry, 15, saw it first about 9 a.m. He said he thought it was snowing.

By late Friday afternoon, Mrs. Sowell said it was "long as the creek.... It's real high and it's wobblin' around. You can't see the creek now."

The blob prompted two television stations, one newspaper, the fire department and several private citizens, including Mrs. Sowell, to call Barry about the blob.

Barry himself decided to go see the blob after all the phone calls.

"You don't get to see a soap bubble like that very often," he explained, "so I had to go out and take a look at it. It's not going to eat anybody's house, although there are people who think it's going to."

But Barry's visit didn't comfort Mrs. Sowell.

Anniversary For Legion Post 160

Post 160 of The American Legion, the Pasico Norfleet Jr. Post, will hold its first anniversary program on Friday at 7:00 p.m. The program will be at Greenville Post 39 on St. Andrews Street. Special recognition will be given to Post members.

Invitations have been extended to the mayor of Greenville, the North Carolina American Legion department commander, and all American Legion Posts in district 3. The public is also invited.

Post 160 was organized in January of 1979 and has grown to over 65 members. The Post has been involved in community services including donating food baskets to needy families for Christmas.

Goals have been set to recruit over 100 members for 1980. Eligible veterans are encouraged to join by contacting any member of Post 160 or by calling Ernest Brown at 756-0982 after 5:00 p.m.

Salvation Army Drive 'Tremendous Success'

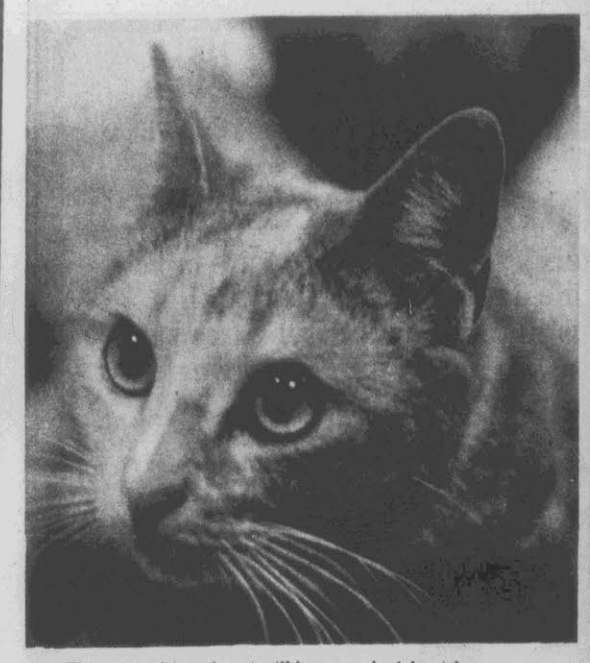

The Pitt County Salvation Army Christmas Kettle Drive was "a tremendous success," according to Commanding Officer Maj. Arnold Williford.

Slightly over $24,000 of the $25,000 goal was realized, he said.

The Army gave away 272 food baskets, 3,273 toys, and 523 personal care kits, the last mentioned to persons in 13 different institutions. More than 2,500 individuals and families were assisted, Maj. Williford said.

He expressed appreciation to the hundreds of persons who manned kettles and helped assemble and distribute toys and food.

...put the WARM where you want it!

All models have been tested for combustion by-products and pollution safety. They have no odor, no smoke, need no chimney venting, and they can be operated in continuous use with breathing safety.

Plus other features—automatic shutoff in event of tilt-over (except Model K)...operate without pressurization...long burning duration...all with handy cooktop...three models feature radiant heat...Clear View fuel gauge...protective spill tray...portable. Kero-Sun heaters truly make others you may have looked at seem old fashioned.

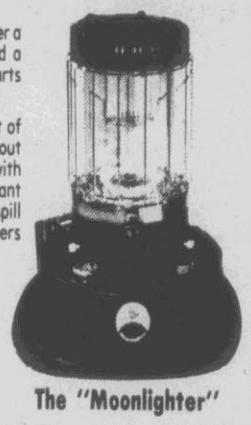

"Radiant" models

"Omni" models

Kero-Sun heaters are available in sizes from 7,200 to 18,000 BTUs per hour—to get rid of nasty cold spots anywhere: basement, workshop, garage, barn, greenhouse, store, office, construction site.

The "Moonlighter"

Kero-Sun "Moonlighter" now available! It's called the Moonlighter because it does two jobs—it's a portable heater (with a cooktop you can heat a pot on) and a long-burning lantern for extra light. The Moonlighter is lightweight, has a clear pyrex combustion chamber, gives out 9,000 BTUs an hour and radiates 340 lumens. It burns for over 18 hours on only one gallon of fuel. Take a look at the Moonlighter and see if you don't take a shine to it!

Film On Canada Next In Film Series

"O Canada," a filmed exploration of Canada from coast to coast and from north to south is the next feature to be shown in the Travel-Adventure Film Series sponsored by the ECU Student Union and Mendenhall Student Center.

The film, by Kenneth Richter, will be shown at 8 p.m. on January 30 at Hendrix Theater.

Richter's film begins at St. John's, Newfoundland as day dawns with fishing boats going out to sea. From there it is to old-world Nova Scotia and French-speaking Quebec — then to the cities of Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg before moving west to the Great Plains and the people of Eastern and Central European heritages.

Action highlights are the Calgary Stampede and Klondike Days in Edmonton. After a look at Lake Louis and the Rocky Mountains, the film ends with a flight over a 20,000 foot Yukon mountain and the Alpine glow of Mount Logan.

10th Anniversary For N.C. Dance Theatre

WINSTON-SALEM — North Carolina Dance Theater, under the direction of Robert Lindgren, will celebrate its tenth anniversary season in Winston-Salem with two weeks of public performances at the Wake Forest University Fine Arts Center during January.

Featured will be some of the well-known works that have brought North Carolina Dance Theater to national attention as a major dance group as well as premiere performances of new ballets choreographed especially for the company.

The two week session is being sponsored by the Friends of Dance, Inc., a Winston-Salem group that has supported Dance Theater for several seasons.

Performances will begin at 8:15 p.m. for two separate schedules — January 16-19 and January 23-26.

Among repertory ballets to be performed are ones choreographed by George Balanchine, Norbert Vesak, Charles Czarny, Carlos Carvajal, Dane LaFontsee and Job Sanders.

Some of the ballets to be seen include "Grey Goose of Silence;" "Bach: Brandenburg Three;" "Sunny Day;" and "Symphony Thirteen."

New works to be premiered include Salvatore Aiello's "Clowns and Others;" and Dane LaFontsee's "L'Ardeur."

Tickets can be reserved by calling 723-1666. They will also be sold at the door prior to performance.

Community Chorus Events

Ed Glenn, director of the Greenville Community Chorus, has announced audition and rehearsal schedules, and plans for the forthcoming spring performance.

Auditions for solo positions will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday, January 22. Rehearsals are held at 8 p.m. each Tuesday night. Both auditions and rehearsals are to be at Memorial Baptist Church. All interested persons are urged to come for try-outs.

The major work scheduled for the spring concert is Haydn's "The Seasons." Dr. Clyde Hiss of the ECU School of Music will be guest conductor. The tentative date for this performance is at 3 p.m. Sunday, March 30. For more information, call 752-6195.

Gridder's Debut In Movie Role

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Former Oakland Raiders pass-catching flash Fred Biletnikoff will make his movie acting debut catching bullets instead of footballs in "The Long Riders."

The all-pro wide receiver will play a doctor who attempts to stop the James-Younger gang from robbing a bank.

Biletnikoff acted as technical adviser to Nick Nolte who played a footballer in "North Dallas Forty."

FILM IS NOT A BIBICAL EPIC — Actor Dudley Moore, dressed for his role as Herschel, a long-neglected contemporary of Moses, in the movie, "Wholly Moses," maintains his life style hasn't changed with his success in films. He has sold his London home and lives in California to launch his career as a leading man. (AP Laserphoto)

Mozart's 'Magic Flute' Being Shown Thursday

A film by Ingmar Bergman is the second feature event of the 1979-80 season in East Carolina University School of Music's Special Concerts Series.

"The Magic Flute," a cinematic version of Mozart's noted opera, will be shown at 8:15 p.m. Thursday, January 17 in Hendrix Theater, Mendenhall Student Center, on the ECU campus.

The film, like the three other events in this series, are free and the public is invited to attend.

Judith Crist, writing in the "Saturday Review," called "The Magic Flute" . . . "A joyous entertainment. It's a sugar plum for everyone."

Another film critic, Vincent Canby of the "New York Times," wrote, "A triumphant film: 'The Magic Flute' is an absolutely dazzling film entertainment."

Bergman has produced, directed and written the film, which has photography by Sven Nykvist. Mozart's score is accompanied by a Swedish version of the lyrics. The story of the opera is about a pair of star-crossed lovers and an impish little man whose greatest desire is to find a wife.

Future programs in this series will be the appearance of harpsichordist Kenneth Cooper on March 17, and violinist Gustave Rosseels on April 4.

In Japanese TV Series

BY JIMMY TART
Extension 4-H — Youth Editor
N. C. State University

A 13-year-old Alamance County 4-H member is among youngsters from some 30 countries selected for a Japanese television series commemorating 1979 as the International Year of the Child.

Craig Baldwin, son of Mr. and Mrs. V. M. Baldwin, Rt. 10, Burlington, will star in three 30-minute programs to be shown by a Japanese television station.

The television series will be shown on Saturday mornings, and Craig is one of three youngsters chosen to portray different American lifestyles in the series. Other youngsters to be featured include one from New Orleans and one from Ohio.

Craig, an eight-grader at Western Middle School, was selected because of his interest and achievements in 4-H livestock projects and activities, according to N. C. Department of Commerce officials who scheduled the filming.

In a part-time family operation, the Baldwins have about 200 head of beef cattle on 200 acres of pasture and farm 485 acres of milo, soybeans and hay, according to Alamance County agents with the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service who assisted the film crew.

Officials of the Fuji Telecasting co., Tokyo, spent a week in October with the Baldwin family, filming Craig's daily routine.

"A Japanese filming director and camera man and an interpreter from Chapel Hill came on Saturday," Mrs. Baldwin said.

"They went with Craig to Asheboro where he exhibited a steer and two heifers in a junior livestock show.

"On Monday, they filmed him playing the tuba at band practice, vaccinating calves and mowing hay.

"Then on Tuesday, they filmed Craig riding the bus and in the classroom during the morning, baling hay in the afternoon, and attending a 4-H livestock meeting that night."

Wednesday was devoted to taping interviews and filming family members, including Mrs. Baldwin at work in a pediatrician's office, eating dinner, and attending a prayer meeting. Craig's father is an electrical engineer at Western Electric and Patti, an older sister, is a senior at Watts School of Nursing in Durham.

The crew filmed Craig loading his two heifers and a steer and traveling to the State Fair on Thursday. There he was filmed washing and grooming his animals for the junior livestock shows.

Filming didn't stop at the Fair, however. They followed Craig from Raleigh back to Alamance County to film him playing in the band at a high school football game.

"It sure was a busy week," Mrs. Baldwin said, "and I believe they captured every bit of it on film."

Music Competition. Winners Announced

RALEIGH — Voice and string winners in the annual Kathleen and Joseph M. Bryan Young Artists Competition have been announced by the office of the North Carolina Symphony.

In the voice finalist category, Gwendolyn Bradley of New York City took first place. The award carries a prize of $1,000 and an appearance with the N. C. Symphony during the 1980-81 season.

Second place winner, for $500, goes to Judith Burbank, also of New York City.

Third place winner — and also winner of the Special Award to the best entrant from North Carolina, at $200 each — went to Bruce Schoonmaker of Greenville, S. C.

The first place winner in the string finalist division was won by violinist Andres Cardenes of Bloomington, Indiana. A native of Cuba, Cardenes was raised in Los Angeles. He is now on the faculty of Indiana University. This award carried a $1,000 prize.

Second place winner is violist Lynne Ramsey of Pittsburgh, Pa. for a $500 prize; and third place, with a $200 prize, was won by Frank Powdermaker of New York City, a violinist.

The $200 Special Award to the best entrant from North Carolina went to Glenn Basham, violinist, of the School of the Arts, Winston-Salem.

ACC Concert

WILSON — The first annual Jerry Davis Memorial Scholarship Concert will be held on the Atlantic Christian College campus Thursday, Jan. 17, at 8 p.m. in the old gymnasium.

The concert will feature a number of area bands and performers including "Airplay," "The Midnight Blues Band" and "The Fabulous Nobs." There will be a variety of music including jazz, pop, and rock.

Proceeds from the event will be used to finance the Jerry Davis Memorial Scholarship at Atlantic Christian which is awarded to deserving guitar majors.

Hospitality House

WASHINGTON — From noon until 12:45 p.m. is the time scheduled for the showing of Kay Currie's "Hospitality House" over WITN-TV, Channel 7 today.

Guest Helen Horton of Miles Laboratory talks about the importance of vitamins — her theme is "Don't Rob Your Body of Vitamins."

In a filmed segment, Ms. Currie shows South African native Dr. Michael Silverman, now of St. Louis, Mo. as he talks about the "Battered Child Syndrome," and how it affects children in America today.

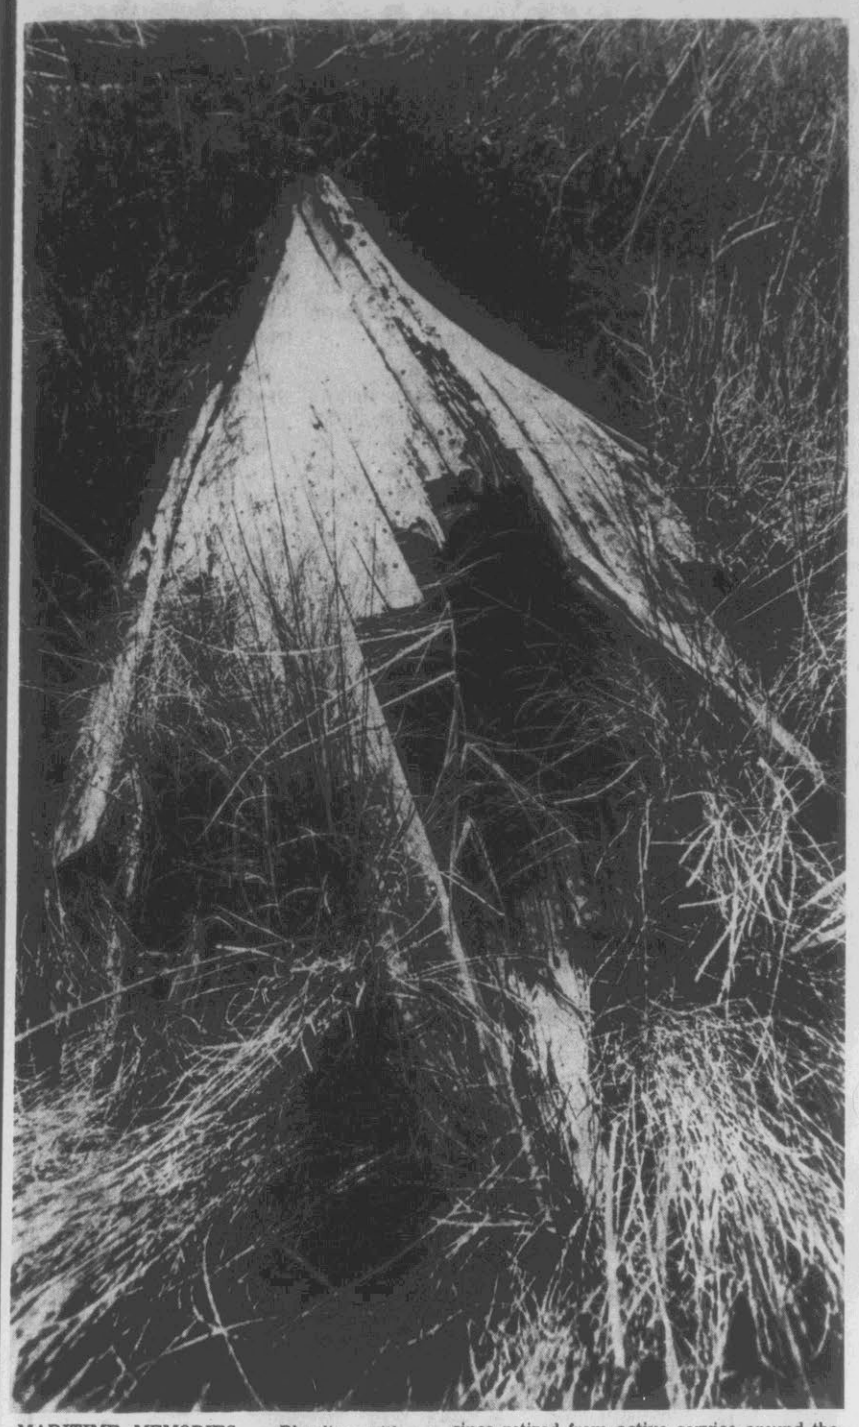

Another guest, Dr. Joy Eyman of Washington, discusses the topic "How to Convict a Rapist." Dr. Eyman will be giving a course in this subject to law enforcement officers at ECU on January 21-22.

BOOK NEWS
By MARGARET CLARK

How-to-books are always popular especially in this time of soaring prices, and the following new titles give tips on how to make and save money.

BETTER THAN STORE BOUGHT by Helen Witty and Elizabeth Colchie is an original new cookbook in which the authors explain how to prepare and improve upon food most of us have come to consider as exclusively store-bought. Hundreds of recipes for such standards as corned beef, bread, cranberry juice, and fresh-fruit frozen yogurt have been assembled in one volume. This is a book for people who love good, wholesome food and are sad to see it disappearing. It is also for cooks who prefer to make more cheaply specialized foods that normally wear high price tags. Many will welcome all the recipes without vegetable gums, preservatives, or garlic oil and other heartburners. In short, it is a delightfully written book for all those who care about good and authentic cooking.

Another informative how-to- book is Sam and Mary Weir's HOW TO MAKE A MILLION DOLLARS RECYCLING GREAT OLD HOUSES. When the authors were in their early twenties, they decided that there could be exciting rewards in rehabilitating failing houses. In their hometown they started remodeling, repairing, repainting, and restoring marketable unfashionable homes, ranging from small but run down Victorians to abandoned forty-room mansions. They bought them, lived in them, and sold them, often working on four or five at the time. Later the Weirs branched out to neighboring towns. At the end of ten years, they had over a million dollars in equity. They tell how they did it and the lessons they learned in finding, working on, and financing their "recycles." There are thirty-six chapters covering subjects such as cost estimates, materials, insulation, electrical systems, as well as the financial and legal aspects of it all. Lively anecdotes from their experiences and illustrations of "before" and "after" exteriors and interiors of some houses that they have done accompany the text.

Carmen and Brownlee Waschek used 46 percent less energy than other comparable homes when building their energy-efficient home. YOUR GUIDE TO GOOD SHELTER is their practical step-by-step guide to help you plan and build your own home. It deals not only with cost and energy conservation, but with human aspects of building and living in a home. Written in simple language, it covers situations any would-be builder will encounter. If you have ever thought about doing it yourself, this is the book for you.

Pink, gold and bamboo corals in Hawaiian waters are only found at a depth of 1,150-feet and below. They are harvested by submersibles.

More than 600 mines make Colombia a leading producer of gold in South America. Colombia also mines 90 percent of the world's emeralds.

N.C. Art Show Details

RALEIGH — Details on the 1980 North Carolina Artists Competition have been announced by Moussa Domit, director of the N. C. Museum of Art.

Three jurors have been named to judge the entries — Richard Marshall, curator at the Whitney Museum of American Art, New York City; Benjamin Forgey, art critic, the "Washington Star;" and Garo Antreasian, professor of art and technical director of the Tamarind Institute at the University of New Mexico.

Prizes being offered are: first place, a gold medal and $1,000; second place, a silver medal and $500; third place, a bronze medal and $250. Carolina Designer Craftsmen will give an award of $200 for a work of excellence, and there will be three citations for honorable mention.

The annual competition, sponsored by the N. C. Museum of Art and the N. C. Art Society, is open to all residents of the state and to non-residents who have lived in North Carolina for at least three years.

It is open to works in all media — paintings, sculpture, drawings, prints, photographs, crafts. Each artist may submit a maximum of two original works that have not before been shown at the N.C. Museum of Art.

Dates for receiving works are February 1-10. For entry forms and further details write to: N.C. Artists Competition, N. C. Museum of Art, Raleigh, N. C., 27611, or phone 733-7568.

Many Directions In Today's Art

By SIDNEY LAWRENCE
Smithsonian News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Once there was Pop, Op and Minimal. But that's no longer the case. For the moment at least, say observers of the contemporary art scene, the age of "isms" has passed. Artists today are following not one but many directions.

"It wasn't long ago that developments in art tended to center on one or two prevailing movements, styles or critical viewpoints," according to curator Howard Fox of the Smithsonian Institution's Hirshhorn Museum. "Art today is more freewheeling, inventive and openly experimental."

What are these new directions? How are they spotted?

Modern art curators continually survey the work of the nation's artists, visiting exhibitions and studios. They pore over catalogs, art periodicals, announcements and slides; they talk with artists, dealers and collectors. In recent years, these observers have noticed a growing number of artists allied with no particular movement, guided by no particular leaders but who are creating work that is both curious and provocative.

Yet even in the diversity of their work, some artists seem to share the same interests and concerns — a renewed appreciation of craftsmanship, humanity, uninhibited humor and nostalgia. It was this recognition that led Fox to organize a recent Hirshhorn Museum exhibition grouped around five themes or "Directions," as the show was called: brute sculpture, imitiations, fictions, electic surfaces and shrines.

Represented were 58 works by 18 young artists from many parts of the country. Bold and aggressive constructions of concrete, steel, chain, bricks and cable comprised the "Brute Sculpture" section, highlighted by a temporary formation of 524 elevated bricks, suspended by thin strands of glistening wire. "There's almost an athletic quality about the way these sculptures are held together . . . through the effect of stress, compression or other physical forces," Fox says.

In "Imitations," perfect replicas of melted popsicles and slices of store-bought bread, carve in white Carrara marble, Michelangelo's preferred medium, both fooled and delighted the eyes; so did the "tools" and "hardware" carefully crafted from wood and then painted.

Brightly-colored wall hangings — stamped and stenciled, with patterns of factories, TV sets and other unlikely objects — were displayed in the "Eclectic Surfaces" section. These indicated a "willingness to invent, to play, even to clutter — something that would have been anathema to the advanced painters of a decade ago," Fox says.

Postage stamps from imaginary lands and a miniature school" room, complete with blackboard, chalk dust and mysterious footprints, brought to the "Fictions" section the traditions of humor, storytelling and fantasy often missing in contemporary art.

The "Shrines" included a room with tinfoil icons and other allegorical objects softly illuminated by Christmas lights, inspiring a sense of mystery, awe and reverie usually associated with religious art.

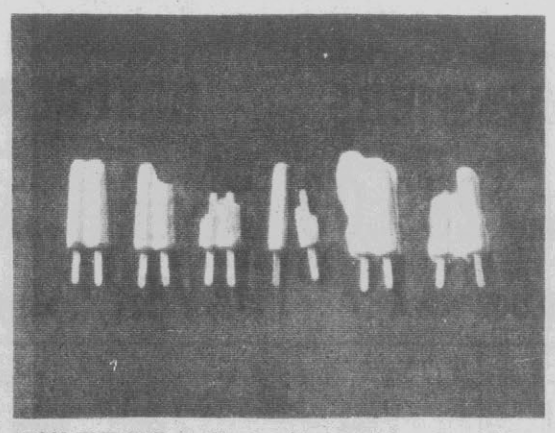

What did this lively, often disquieting range of themes in "Directions" represent? A lack of discipline on the part of the artists? A radical break with past art forms? No, neither.

Working outside the boundaries of a single style or ideology, each of these artists has been able to choose images and materials from virtually any source. As a result, such traditional elements of art as storytelling, craftsmanship and devotional imagery have reappeared and blended with the expressive freedoms of this century's avant-garde revolutions, from Cubism and Dada to Pop, Op and Minimal.

Curators continue to scan the art horizon for additional directions. There are artists today, for instance, who produce curious works that are alamgams of painting and sculpture— experienced both as a "picture" and in three dimensions.

Others use non-art media-beads, glitterdust, glass and twigs — to create meticulous and appealing works that have every semblance of "art."

The range of possible directions is almost endless, the curators say. Whehter they will merge into a single, unified movement of the late 20th century remains to be seen.

Hampton Museum Events

BEAUFORT — Three events open to the public and free of charge are scheduled to take place during the coming week at the Hampton Mariners Museum in Beaufort. These are:

— Wednesday, January 16 — An Evening Event Series features Dr. Don Hoss of the National Oil Spill team speaking on the subject "Catastrophic Oil Spills." Time is 7:30 p.m., at the museum.

— Thursday, January 17 — Third Thursday at Twelve series. Dr. Jack Dudley, historian, presents a slide program, "The Way We Were," which shows old photographs of the coast. At noon, at the museum.

Free Art Lessons At ECU

As a public service, the School of Art at East Carolina University will sponsor a series of free art classes for children in the fourth through ninth grades.

These classes will be conducted by faculty members in the Department of Art Education, assisted by junior and senior art education majors.

Fourth and sixth graders can attend classes Monday or Tuesday from 4 to 5 p.m., and Thursday from 4 to 5 p.m. is reserved for seventh through ninth graders.

Classes will be held in room 1342 of the Jenkins Fine Arts Center. Almost all materials needed will be furnished by the University.

Classes will begin Jan. 21 and continue through April 24. To enroll, call 757-6665 between the hours of 2 and 5 p.m. Jan. 14 through 18.

Summer Art Internships

RALEIGH — The N. C. Arts Council is now accepting applications for summer internships in arts administration.

Internships for June through August will be awarded to three persons, for a few days at the Council in Raleigh and one month at community arts councils in the state.

Qualifications include a four-year college degree, strong administrative and business abilities, and knowledge and appreciation of the arts. The ability to accept employment in September is desirable, in the event positions should become available.

Deadline for application is March 3, 1980. For applications, write to: Summer Intern Program, N. C. Arts Council, Dept. of Cultural Resources, Raleigh, N. C., 27611.

Reep Show At ECU Is A Splendid Achievement

LINE AND OCCLUSIONS NO 3 . . . painted in 1979, is a large acrylic on canvas work by Ed Reep. The artist-teacher currently has a show of work completed in the last five years on view in Gray Gallery in the east wing of the Leo Jenkins Fine Arts Center. The show is open to the public, without charge, each weekday.

Versatility alone is not always an indication that a person is talented at doing a lot of different things. In the case of artist Ed Reep, however, his multi-faceted talent is proof that a gifted painter can succeed in approaching his work from many different viewpoints, and do so successfully.

Reep's show, "The Last Five Years," currently on view in the Gray Gallery in the east wing of the Leo Jenkins Fine Arts Center on the East Carolina University campus, is big, colorful and is a confirmation that despite his past achievements, he is still growing in stature through a willingness to experiment.

Most important, it is a show to enjoy for its contrasts, its innovations, and its wide range of visual impacts. The paintings and drawings represent work Reep has completed in the past five years — a remarkable output for an artist who is also a working teacher.

In this show there are a number of the fine nude drawings for which Reep is well known — splendid figure portraits drawn in the most economical terms with a few flowing lines accented by touches of shading.

Large, architectural related paintings form a substantial part of this show. In some of these large paintings, emphasis is placed on broad even areas of color that play around and complement the simplest design element. In others, their effectiveness is achieved in a more complicated interplay between color and structure. In all these paintings, designs are clean, clearly structured. His juxtoposition of colors are always in harmony with each other, even in those paintings which at first glance employ basic colors that our minds tell us they should clash.

And Reep has continued to probe the possibilities of paintings and drawings that depend on a lyrical approach. In two or three drawings obviously based on Japanese prints and Persian miniatures, he uses contemporary means to evoke the luxurious colors, poetry and charm of these art forms.

In a similar vein, he shows a few oil collages which, though rooted solidly in 20th century art forms, abound in lyrical expressions — such as "Ode to Antonio Gaudi" and "A Tisket A Frisket."

A former Guggenheim Fellow, Reep served in World War II as an artist-correspondent in Africa and Italy. Since 1939, when he first exhibited his paintings, Reep has had work in art shows throughout the U.S., in Canada, Mexico, Italy and Great Britain. His paintings, drawings and lithographs are in permanent collections of numerous museums, corporations, public and private institutions and in many private collections.

His career has included advertising assignments, work at a major film studio, illustrations for "Life" magazine, and since he has been in Greenville, a commission to paint a series of paintings depicting the Berlin Wall for the U.S. government. He is also the author of several books on art.

Reep has been a member of the ECU School of Art faculty since 1970. Previously, he taught at the California Institute of the Arts and Southern Illinois University.

Following the opening reception of Reep's show Thursday night, Dr. Emily Farnham, long a teacher of art history at ECU, commented: "When one of our people can put on a show of this magnitude and quality, I feel that it proves that ECU is one of the best art schools in the Southeast. This is indeed a fine show."

And it's a fine show that is displayed to the best advantage. It will be up only a short time, through January 31, so those wanting to see this show will have to do so without delay.

A Better Toothpaste Tube

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — For all those who have trouble getting toothpaste on their toothbrush or getting the last drop of toothpaste from the tube, Dennis Cuddy of Raleigh has the answer — a better toothpaste tube.

"Though I guess I'm prejudiced, I think this will be one of the best innovations of the last quarter century," Cuddy said. He has received a U.S. patent on the design.

The tube has an eliptical top, rather than the round one now used on tubes.

But an eliptical top has its drawbacks. The top is hard to screw on. Cuddy solved that problem too. He designed a snap-on cap.

Another advantage of the eliptical tube, Cuddy said, is that the toothpaste comes out in thin, flat squirts that fit a toothbrush perfectly.

Cuddy, 33, makes his living by writing articles and books, but he said he is a language teacher, historian, author, scientist, composer and "one of the leading authorities on Australian studies and Australian-American relations."

He said he's received inquiries from one toothpaste maker, but no one has bid on the tube so far.

Joint Recital

School of Music voice students Melanie Foushee and Donald Greene, Jr., will appear in a joint senior recital of songs and arias at 7:30 p.m. Friday, January 18 in Fletcher Recital Hall.

For her part of the recital, Ms. Foushee will sing a Bellini aria, two Debussy songs, Schubert's "Der Hirt auf dem felsem," Norman Dello Joio's "All Things Leave Me," and Rachmaninoff's "Vocalise."

She will be accompanied by pianist Harcourt Burns and assisted by clarinetist Teresa Mangieri for the Schubert song.

Greene has selected for his program arias from Bach's "Christmas Oratorio" and "St. John's Passion," as well as pieces by Schubert, Mahler, Verdi, Faure and Charles Ives.

He will be accompanied by pianist Melissa Ussery.

There is no admission fee charged for the recital and the public is invited to attend.

POPULAR PROGRAM

NEW YORK (AP) — A new study released by Children's Television Workshop indicates that 66 percent of 6- to 8-year-olds and 35.9 percent of 9- to 11-year-olds surveyed watch "Sesame Street," the award-winning show for preschoolers. The data was collected for CTW by the Child Research Services Center

Art Classes Scheduled

Three different art classes will begin at the Greenville Art Center next week. For each of these, registration is limited and will be accepted only at the Art Center, and not by phone. The classes planned are:

— Painting and drawing for children ages 6-10, begins Wednesday, Jan. 16 and runs for six weeks. Classes from 3 to 5 p.m. each Wednesday. Grian Saloman, instructor. Fee, $15.

— Adult watercolor classes, begins Wednesday, January 16, runs for ten weeks. Hours 10 a.m. to noon. Instructor, Warren Chamberlain, fee $35.

— Paperimache sculptor workshop utilizing recycled-materials. Begins Friday, January 18, hours 3-4 p.m., runs for six weeks. For ages ten and older. Grian Saloman, instructor, fee $15.

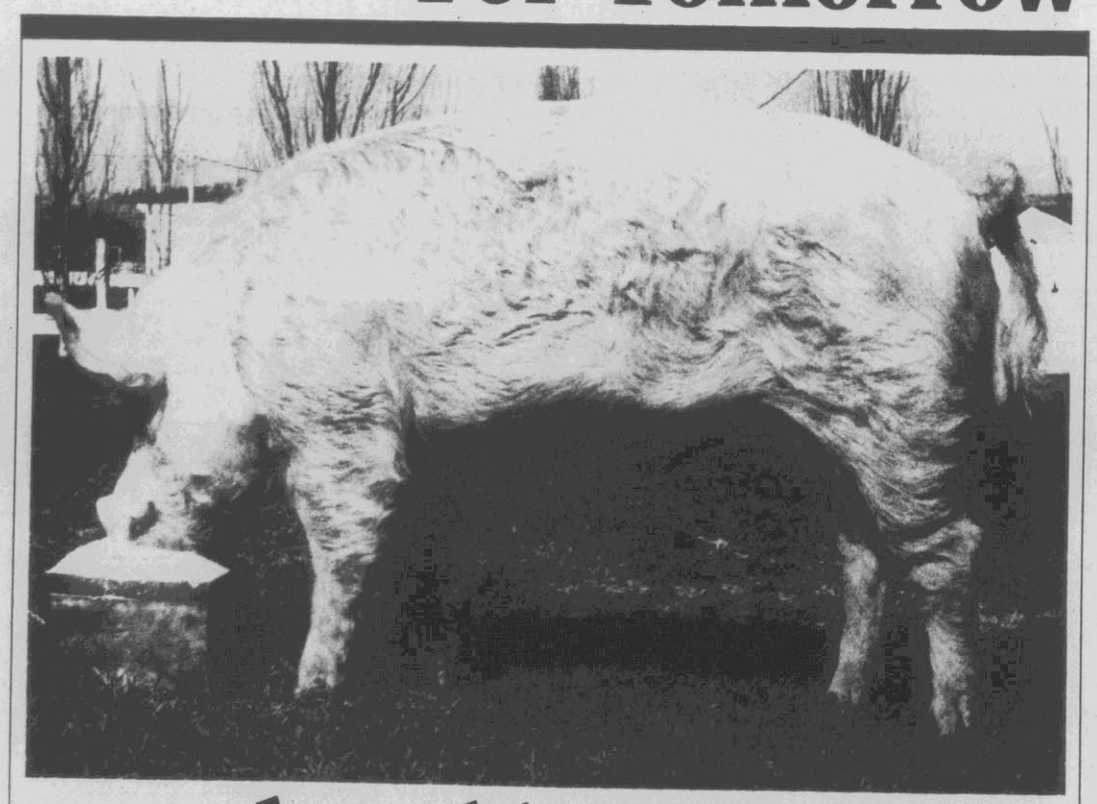

Royal Stallions Show Set

Ms. Strider's light-hued paintings, most of which combine elements of realism and nostalgic fantasy, have the knack of being cheerful while at the same time conveying the slightest sense of unease. Some of her dogs, with their strangely multi-folded anatomy, seem to menace the delicate landscape around them. It's like in childhood, when certain illustrations in children's books brought on a delightful shiver of apprehension.

A few of the paintings, i.e., "Angel's Trumpets," manages well the difficult feat of an animal's body encompassing a landscape complete with flowers, mountains and stars. Several, such as a lovely work in shades of blue, are non-representational.

The more than a dozen pieces range from a small, sturdy box with bronze decorations to a full scale table of simple, elegant lines.

For most viewers, the pieces that will perhaps have the greatest appeal are the splendidly crafted chests (such as shown in the accompanying photograph). In these, the self-pull drawers are shaped like leaves, or in another, like smooth rounded roots.

There is a strong parallel to nature's form that suit the fine woods he uses in creating these pieces — mahogany from Honduras and the Philippines, oak, African and American walnut, and cherry.

Whether it is tables and chests, or the tall, slender pieces usually topped with a mirror, Strider shows a deep integrity for his material. His meticulous craftsmanship brings out the full beauty of the grain. And the evident care taken in every detail speaks of careful work to make each item one of perfection.

Each of these sculpted pieces are worthy of being labeled a master work of craftsmanship — the product of an artist willing to devote long hours employing traditional craftsmanship to create contemporary pieces that reflect his own innovative ideas.

Board To Let Cobey, East Campaign

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina Board of Governors cleared the way Friday for Bill Cobey, athletic director at UNC-Chapel Hill, to file as a candidate for lieutenant governor while retaining his job until the end of April.

Cobey has resigned his position as athletic director, effective April 30, but he must file as a candidate for the Republican nomination by Feb. 4.

The board approved Cobey's request that he be allowed to remain on the job, with pay, while running for the political office.

Cobey was paid $38,500 in 1978-79, the last year for which figures were available. A university spokesman said none of the money came from state funds.

The board also approved a leave of absence for John East, a political science professor at East Carolina University. The leave clears the way for East to campaign as a Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate seat now held by Democrat Robert Morgan.

The board said that as long as East's candidacy does not interfere with his duties, he may remain on staff with pay through the spring semester. East's salary is $28,500.

William Johnson, chairman of the Board of Governors, said that in the past, a number of university employees have been granted permission to seek political office while working for the university system.

In other business, the board was told that the default rate on federally funded student loans among students in the state has dropped to approximately 21 percent, but is still well above the national level of 17 percent.

Default rates at nine of the UNC system's 16 institutions exceed the federally recomended default rate of 10 percent.

Redstarts In New York

DANSVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — At first, nobody paid much attention to the fact that ornithological history was in the making. But the word is out that the painted redstart is visiting here — and bird societies preparing for an onslaught of enthusiasts are warning watchers to mind their manners.

More at home in the canyons of Mexico and Central America than in this village south of Rochester, the redstart is making its New York debut at the home of the Charles Dilgard family.

It is the first sighting of the red, white and black bird in the Northeast since 1947, according to Richard Guthrie, Albany regional editor for Kingbird, the Audubon Society's newsletter, in Albany.

That previous sighting was in Marblehead Neck, Mass., he said.

"We don't really know what might have brought it here," Guthrie said.

Guthrie left his home at 3:30 a.m. recently for the the 200-plus mile trip to Dansville, arriving in the middle of a snowstorm. He described the 4½-inch bird as a "warm, cuddly critter — I can't help making it sound seductive."

"It's beautiful," Mary Dilgard said. "And he's been very cooperative, posing for the photographers and then flying around — up on the roof and down to the feeder. He's so friendly, I'm afraid the cat will get him."

Mrs. Dilgard said the bird has been in Dansville since Dec. 22, visiting feeders to nibble at peanut butter. "We haven't had any trouble with people coming to see the bird yet, but we've been warned to expect an onslaught this weekend."

She added that 85 people had showed up before the end of the week to watch the bird. "My husband is a constable, but I don't know if we will be able to handle the parking and all."

Robert Yunich of the Hudson-Mohawk Bird Club, said "It was trotting around there pretty much unnoticed for several weeks until it was mentioned in a bird column in a Rochester newspaper, and then the news started spreading."

The Audubon Society also is concerned about a stampede of birdwatchers eager to add the painted redstart to their "lifelists."

Its hotlines, which report sightings of rare birds, have been carrying warning to eager birdwatchers not to create an "ornitholical disaster" in their attempts to catch a glimpse of the Central American warbler.

The Hudson-Mohawk group's "Dial-a-Bird" line advises:

"Dansville is a tiny hamlet that may not be prepared for the invasion of inconsiderate seekers that sometimes show up for such scenes. Provided birders mind their manners, Dansville will survive unscathed and birding will not suffer a black eye."

Special Birthday

NEW YORK (AP) — Whether or not Sherlock Holmes ever existed, devotees from throughout the world have gathered here to celebrate the fictional sleuth's birthday.

Although known to most as the fictional creation of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, dyed-in-their-deerstalker Holmesians say they believe that not only did the detective live, but that he was born Jan. 6, 1854.

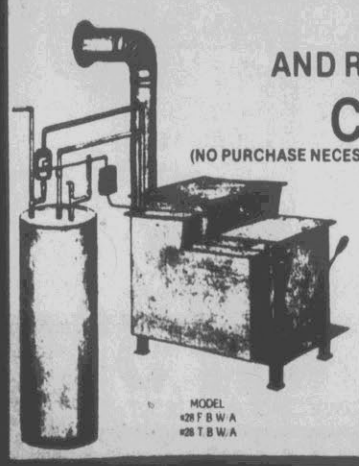

How do they arrive at that date? As the famous detective would say: "Elementary."

It is based partially on a quote in one story that implies Holmes was suffering a hangover on Jan. 7 from a birthday celebration the night before and on the fact that the only Shakespearean play Holmes quotes twice in the stories is "Twelfth Night," which is Jan. 6.

On the first or second Friday of every year, devoted Holmesians who are able gather in New York to celebrate the great detective's birthday. Some 300 people held three separate birthday parties Friday night at a hotel and two Manhattan restaurants.

The first transcontinental telephone line on the North American continent — between New York and San Francisco — was successfully tested in 1914.

Hikers Find A New 'Treasure Of Sierra Madre'

By LAURINDA KEYS
Associated Press Writer

SIERRA MADRE, Calif. (AP) — In the hills overlooking this city, where the old Bogart Theater still stands, three hikers have brought back a taste of California's Gold Rush days by finding a new "Treasure of Sierra Madre."

"There are three of us that have found gold in the hills above Sierra Madre," said Herb Robins, 50, an employee of the city. "Everyone's been laughing about this because of 'The Treasure of Sierra Madre,' an old Humphrey Bogart picture."

Robins, along with Al C. Ryan, 49, an Arcadia real estate agent, and James Doudna, 28, a West Hollywood carpenter, say they discovered the gold on a hiking trip last weekend.

"We have found nuggets that have been assayed at $1,000 and we have found us a hunk," said Robins, who could not keep from giggling with joy as he described how he and his friends had made their strike at a time when gold prices are soaring on the world market.

The three men filed a claim Thursday for 20 acres in the Angeles National Forest that they have called "The Rainbow Mine."

On Friday, they went to Hugh Campbell, assayer at the Foothill Coin Center in this city 15 miles northeast of Los Angeles. The two nuggets, each about the size of a kidney bean, were worth a total of $799.26, said Campbell.

"Most people don't know national forest land is claimable," said Robins. "Now that we've got our land staked out, with little piles of stones, we don't care who knows about it. Most of the land up there is not claimed. I don't know if the government will be happy about it."

The price of gold on the New York market Friday was $643. Campbell said the nuggets would be worth twice as much as the assay value if they were just put on a chain and sold as a decoration.

"Because it's so unusual to find nuggets of that size, their value is more than the value of the gold content," said Campbell. "There were two other nuggets in a vial, but they were very minute. I think they were so stunned at the value of the two I evaluated that we never got around to estimating a value on the smaller ones."

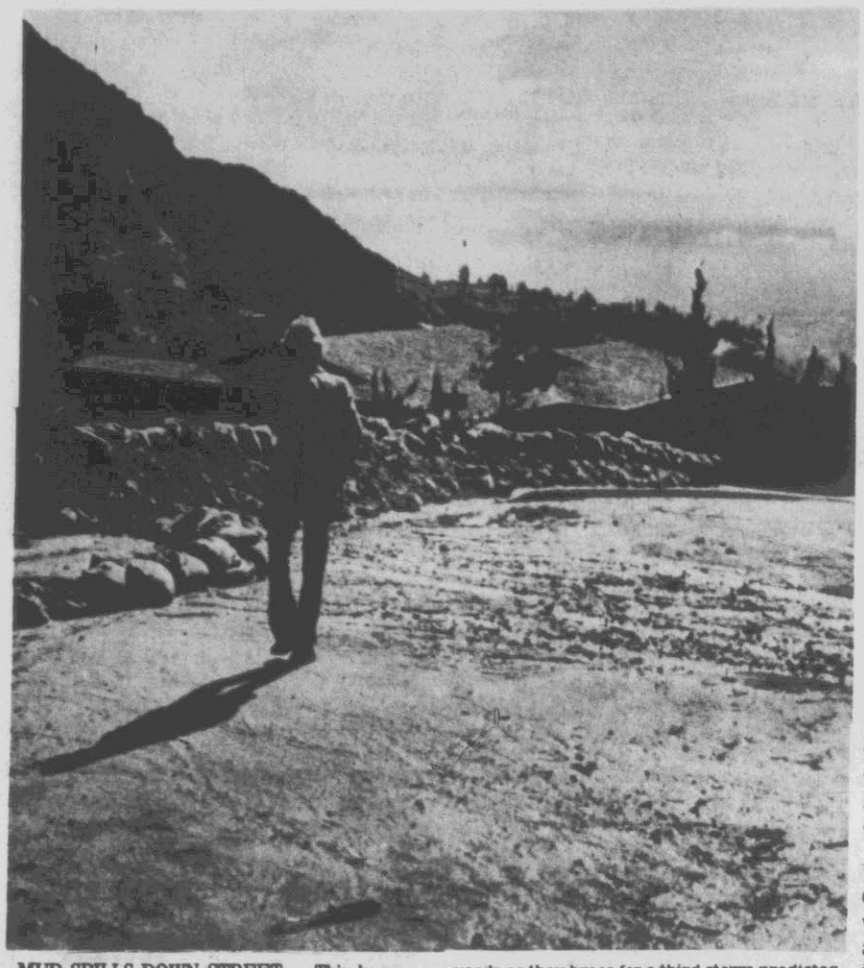

Robins said the three were "just up there hiking" when they made their find.

"After two days, we actually found a nugget in an old dried up stream," he said. "We found a total of four nuggets by Monday morning and we couldn't believe our eyes.

"We had to get into the river bed and pan," said Robins. "That's where the nuggets were found, and we found a little vein in a rock."

The four nuggets weigh more than an ounce and a half, said Robins. He added that he and his friends plan to comb their 20 acres for more of the same.

"We have a vast area there and we know we've hit it. We've been advised that where we found it and the rock surface close to it, means it could be very lucky. It's an area most people have hiked through. We've hiked through it jillions of times."

MUD SPILLS DOWN STREET — This home owner picks his way through mud washed down from the foothills Friday by a second storm that hit the southern California area this week. Residents of the street have sand bagged their yards as they brace for a third storm predicted this weekend. The mud comes from the foothills burnt over by brush fires last summer. (AP Laserphoto)

Thunderbird Puts You Miles Ahead Of Cressida.

No kidding. Just compare America's Ford Thunderbird and the Toyota Cressida. sure, the T-Bird gets a good 18 mpg to the Cressida's 21*. But wait...

The Thunderbird is priced remarkably lower. So much lower, you'd have to drive the Cressida 175,069 miles before you'd save enough on gas to match the T-Bird price.

Stop by and experience the sleek, spacious, new Ford Thunderbird. You'll be surprised how luxurious economy can be.

High Silver Prices Hikes Cost Of Film

By FLOYD NORRIS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Silver has become so valuable that the companies making photographic film save all the little bits they punch out of 35-millimeter and movie film so the film fits on the sprockets.

"They're much too valuable to throw away," Henry Kaska, a spokesman for Eastman Kodak, says of the little punchouts.

There is no way around it: The price of silver, a key ingredient of both film and the paper on which pictures are printed, is soaring.

That is pushing up photography prices, and people in the industry are worried there will be a lot fewer folks lining up to say, "Cheese!" for American shutterbugs.

"People are going to be reluctant to buy a roll of film," predicts John Lauer, a vice president of Fotomat. "Instead of buying four or five rolls a year, they'll buy two or three."

A year ago, silver cost $6 an ounce. This month the price touched $40 before settling above $30, so prices are rising for both film and paper.

Kodak's increases, ranging up to 75 percent, take effect Jan. 26 for film and a month later for photographic paper. There is little doubt that other makers will follow Kodak, which dominates the industry and is the price leader.

Amateur photographers can take heart in the fact that color film uses less silver than black-and-white, so the percentage price increases are smaller. Per roll, the cost of color film is rising between 15 percent and 25 percent.

A 12-exposure roll of Kodacolor II color print film, size 110, which cost $1.76 in October, will rise from the current $1.86 to $2.15. And the Kodak charge for developing and printing the pictures will climb from $5.46 to $5.70 on Feb. 26.

A roll of 35-millimeter Kodachrome slide film with 20 exposures will have a suggested retail price of $3.69, up from the current $3.07 and from the $2.90 price that prevailed in October. And on Feb. 26, the Kodak price for processing the film will rise from $3.15 to $3.40.

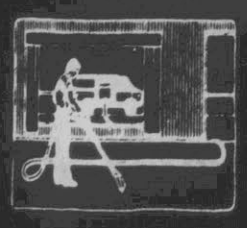

Instant film uses even less silver than regular color film. Prices of Kodak instant film rose just 10 percent. Polaroid imposed a 6 percent increase Jan. 1, blaming it on increases in all costs, not just silver.

Not everyone is hurting. Because film sales were disappointing for Polaroid last year, the silver it bought at relatively low prices was not used as quickly as expected. Donald Dery, a Polaroid spokesman, will not give details but says "We have not felt a severe strain as a result of the silver price increase."

Aggressive Play Keys Carolina's 82-67 Triumph

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The last time North Carolina played Duke, says Dave Colescott, "I think we were scared to take it inside."

But this time as 15th-ranked North Carolina, avenging a loss to the Blue Devils in the Big Four Torunament, stuffed it to top-ranked Duke 82-67.

"Today we were much more aggressive," said Colescott, who scored 18 points in the upset, 10 of them from the free throw line.

The Tar Heels made a point of clogging up the lanes, especially toward the end of the game, said Al Wood, who paced the Tar Heels with 20 points. They knew, he said, it was "money in the bank" if Duke center Mike Gminski got near the basket.

As it was Gminski led Duke in scoring with 18 points.

Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith said, "We could take it to the basket against their man-to-man."

And Smith also had his team used the four-corners offense strategically in the second half, allowing the Tar Heels to set up back-door plays that permitted them to break a 56-56 tie wih 7:39 remainining.

Duke was down by as much as 13 points in the early minutes of the second half, but played about seven minutes of outstanding basketball to tie it up. That was it, however, said Duke coach Bill Foster.

"We just didn't play as quick or alert as we had been playing in the past. We didn't shoot very well, that's for sure."

Foster also called the game's statistics the craziest he had ever seen. Duke had 31 buckets from the floor to the Tar Heels' 26, but North Carolina connected on 30 shots from the free throw line in 37 opportunities while Duke was a paltry five for 11.

North Carolina raised its record to 8-3 and 2-2 in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Duke, which also got 14 points from forward Gene Banks, is now 12-2 overall and 1-2 in the ACC.

The Tar Heels took a 36-30 lead into the locker room at the half, and gradually built it up. But freshman James Worthy got into foul trouble, picking up his fourth at 14:46 and allowing Duke to slowly cut the lead. Worthy fouled out with 7:39 to go and Kenny Dennard tied it up when he hit one of two free throws.

Wood and Colescott dominated the last seven minutes as Duke repeatedly fouled and as Wood cut a path to the basket on several back door plays.

Duke's main problem appeared to be poor shooting. Shot after shot bounced off the rim or in and out of the basket, and North Carolina's domination of the center prevented many offensive rebounds.

Duke shot a poor 42 percent from the floor and 46 percent from the line. North Carolina shot 59 percent from the floor and 82 percent from the line.

Rebound Battle

Gray, Underwood Lead Pirates To 8th Win Of Year

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University played a miserable first half, then turned on the juice in the second to run past neighboring Atlantic Christian College, 72-63, last night.

The final score of the game wasn't indicative of what kind of a game it really was. But then, neither was the biggest lead of the Pirates, 72-54, which game with 2:46 left to play— when most of the regulars came to the bench.

After hitting an icy cold 33.3 per cent in the first half, the Pirates came back to hit 53.1 per cent in the second. But even that second half percentage was not an indicator of how well East Carolina played in the half. Just before the regulars went to the bench, the Pirates were clicking along at an 18 for 25 clip of 62 per cent.

An example of how poorly the Pirates play could be seen in the statistics of Herb Krusen. Normally an eagle-eye, "Radar" hit only two of seven in the first half. But he came back—as did his teammates—to hit four of four in the second.

"I don't think we took a bad shot in the second half," Coach Dave Odom said afterwards.

"It was pleasing to win. The first half showed some of the effects of a long five-day road trip. We didn't play with the intensity that we played with on the road in the first half. But I think our players realized this at the half. They realized that they can play quality basketball when they put their minds to it."

The Pirates did just that in the second half. After both teams made nine turnovers in the first half, the Pirates came back to commit just four in the second, while forcing Atlantic Christian into 12.

The Pirates also bombed the Bulldogs on the boards, coming away with a 40-33 advantage. They were led by Herb Gray's seven and Frank Hobson's six.

Gray, playing only 23 minutes, was in foul trouble in the first half, scoring only four points. But he came back with another fine performance in the second, hitting 13 points for a total of 17.

"There is no doubt that we are a better team when Herb's in there," Odom said. "He's the catalyst, the leadership we need, both offensively and defensively. We've tried to let him know that we want him to stay out of foul trouble, and in the last two games he did it. Tonight he got three in the first half, but didn't commit a single one in the second half."

Odom praised Atlantic Christian for having a fine game plan and executing it well in the first half. "They controlled the tempo. We wanted a more up-tempo game and we were able to force this in the second half."

David Underwood, called by Odom as the most consistantly effective player in practice now, has moved into a starting role. His play at the start of the second half, when he knocked in eight points as the Pirates began to pull away from the Bulldogs helped to break up the Bulldogs' tough zone defense and brought the Pirates to life at the same time.

The first half of the game was a see-saw type contest that saw neither team establish any great lead. The biggest margin either could produce was four, held by both several times.

After tieing it up three times in the early going, the Bulldogs finally gained the lead at 18-16 on a jumper in the lane by Raphael Boyd. East Carolina tied it up several more times and moved back in front, 24-22, as Hobson tossed back a missed shot.

The Pirates stayed ahead until Stan Lewter hit with 1:51 left for a 28-27 lead, and he added a free throw and Damian Carter got a basket for a four-point lead, 31-27. East Carolina pulled back within one, but a free throw by Lewter and a steal by former D.H. Conley player Rick Mobley allowed ACC to take a 34-30 lead into intermission.

Underwood came back out and hit the first shot of the half, and Gray followed that with a stuff, tieing it up. Underwood hit the next three Pirate baskets, and Krusen finally hit with 14:45 left to provide the Pirates with the lead for good, 42-40.

After an exchange of baskets, Krusen added two more running the lead to six, 48-42. After another exchange, George Maynor and Krusen both hit, running it to 54-44, with 10:50 left. At that point, the Pirates had hit 12 of their first 15 of the half.

The lead slowly climbed from there to 14, then 15 and 17 before Kyle Powers hit from the corner with 4:14 left to make it 70-52, an 18-point spread. The two teams exchanges baskets once more for a 72-54 lead and after that the Bulldogs managed to hit the final nine points to come back within ten.

"The margin of victory doesn't worry me," Odom said. "If we can do the same thing Monday (against James Madison), I'll be happy.

"But they'll be after us for revenge for the loss they got down here. But I think we're developing into a good road team."

Gray's 17 led the Pirates, while Underwood finished with 16 and Krusen had 13. Lewter paced the Bulldogs with 18, while Boyd had 12 and William Bogues had 11.

East Carolina travels to Harrisonburg, Va., on Monday to face James Madison, then is idle until the final Monday, when they face Baptist College of Charleston.

Stovall Named To Succeed Rein At LSU

Stovall, 38, served last year as LSU varsity club coordinator after five years as an assistant on the Tigers' coaching staff.

Stovall was given a four-year contract at $42,000 a year. He promised to retain the staff hired by Rein, who died Friday in a plane crash while on a recruiting trip to Shreveport, La. Rein had served as LSU head coach for just 42 days when the crash occurred in the Atlantic Ocean off the Virginia capes.

Stovall was hired unanimously at an emergency executive committee meeting of the LSU Board of Supervisors. He was recommended by Athletic Director Paul Dietzel, who first recruited Stovall as an LSU player in 1959.

"I'm an eternal optimist, but I'm not a miracle worker," Stovall said. "I'll do the best — all I can — to win. LSU is not just another university, another football team. It is my home. I love LSU and the people here."

It is the first head coaching job for thr former All-Pro defensive back with the St.Louis Cardinals.

"I would gladly surrender this job or any other head coaching job — and my right arm — if he (Bo) were still here," Stovall said. "I will attempt to measure up to the high ideals exemplified by Coach Rein and carry on in a manner which he would want."

Stovall had not been considered when LSU selected Rein on Nov. 30 to replace Charlie McClendon, forced out after 18 years as head coach.

At the time, Dietzel limited his search to established head coaches, and after a year's search settled on the 34-year-old Rein of North Carolina State.

Although the Coast Guard still is searching for survivors, it was presumed Rein and pilot Louis Benscotter died when their plane unexplainedly strayed 1,100 miles off course and crashed into the Atlantic after apparently running out of gas.

"When I heard the airplane went down, my mind turned to a successor and Jerry's name immediately came to mind," said Dietzel. "It seemed he was the logical selection."

Dietzel said several options were discussed at Saturday's closed meeting with the executive committee, including having him take over as head coach for the 1980 season. Dietzel coached LSU to its only national collegiate football championship in 1958 and also was head coach and athletic director at South Carolina.

"You can't do both, I found that out," said Dietzel.

Both Dietzel and Stovall said an interim appointment was not discussed.

As for retaining the staff put together by Rein, Stovall said, "Oddly, had my football philosophy been written down — defensively an offensively — it would be so close to this staff it would be amazing."

He said he would stay with the split back — veer offense that Rein was to install and said the Tigers would show, "multiple faces" on defense.

"I hope all LSU supporters will rally behind us and enable us to continue the magnificent traditions of the Fighting Tigers," said Stovall.

He said he would concentrate on recruiting. Rein had signed 19 recruits and was the on the verge of landing several others.

Stovall promised to broaden LSU's recruiting base.

He said he wanted to show the same kind of concern Dietzel had shown for him when he recruited me as "a slender 6-foot-1, 176-pound" player out of Monroe in 1959.

"Paul worked with me to become a player — cared about me," recalled Stovall. "That is the kind of attention I want to give to our player. We are going to love them, care for them and demand excellence."

Stovall was a star running back and safety at LSU from 1960 through 1962 and went on to play seven years of pro ball. He was selected for the Pro Bowl three times.

He was an assistant under Dietzel at South Carolina for three years before joining McClendon's staff in 1974.

Three years ago, vocal fans and some members of the LSU Board of Supervisors forced a two-year reduction in McClendon's contract. Last fall, he was given a one-year extension by the board and offered an administrative position in the department.

In 18 years at LSU, McClendon compiled a 136-49-7 record, guiding the Tigers to 13 postseason bowl appearances.

Deacons Upset Tigers, 86-83

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Alvis Rogers iced an 86-83 Wake Forest upset over 18th-ranked Clemson Saturday night when he hit four free throws in the last 14 seconds of the Atlantic Coast Conference contest.

The young Deacons fought back from a nine-point deficit, 55-46, with 15:11 to go and pulled into the lead at 56-55 on a play by Chuck Dahms with 12:20 remaining.

Then their shooting, which had been near perfect, went ice-cold, and the Deacons went up by 10 with 3:43 remaining.

Clemson, led by Billy Williams, kept the game close. He pulled it within one point at 80-79 with 26 seconds left in the game. But Tiger fouling allowed the Deacons to convert six free throws for the remainder for the game.

In the first half, Wake Forest shot a respectable 50 percent from the floor, but Clemson fired a 66 percent average to take a 47-38 halftime lead.

Rogers led the way, Benny McKaig and Guy Morgan, all added 15. Williams scored a game-high 27 points for the Tigers.

Clemson is now tied with Virginia for second place in the ACC with a 3-1 record. They are 11-2 overall. Wake claimed its first conference win in four tries. The Deacons are 7-6 overall.

Machovic To Speak At Sports Club

Jack Mackovic, head football coach at Wake Forest University and the Atlantic Coast Conference's Coach of the Year, is the scheduled speaker at Tuesday's meeting of the Greenville Sports Club.

Because of a conflict, the meeting will be held at Parker's Barbecue instead of the Greenville Country Club, as usual. The meal will be $4. Luncheon will begin at 12 noon, with the program at 12:30 p.m.

Officials of the Sports Club also announced that former professional baseball player and Hall of Famer Willie Mays will be the speaker at a special meeting of the club on Thursday, February 14. Mays is being brought to the area with the assistance of Gaylord Perry, W.M. (Booger) Scales and Jack Minges.

Because of the additional expense of having Mays as a speaker, that meeting will be held at the American Legion Building with Parker's catering the meal. Cost of tickets will be $6 each, with a limited amount of tickets available.

Additional details of the Mays visit will be discussed at the Tuesday meeting of the club.

Pirate Women Clobber Dukes For 12th Win

CLEMSON, S.C. — East Carolina's women built an eight-point halftime advantage into a 93-68 final to defeat James Madison and claim third place in the third annual Clemson Invitational Tournament.

Forward Rosie Thompson's field goal with 11:41 remaining in the first half gave ECU a 10-point lead, but Madison reserve Anne Sonoga came off the bench to help her squad cut the margin to 49-41 at intermission.

Pirate forward Kathy Riley came alive in the second half, scoring 19 of her 23 points as the ECU fast break swamped the Duchesses. East Carolina silenced Sonoga and Barrie Grice in the final frame after allowing them to fire in 13 and 11 points respectively in the opening half.

Thompson held the hot hand throughout the night, pumping in 29 and hauling down 10 rebounds. Lydia Rountree added 16 points, while center Marcia Girven grabbed 11 caroms and freshman Mary Denkler 10.

"This is the first time we've played a better second half then we did first half," ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "I can honestly say we played the best second half we have all season.

"When Kathy got held up on the fast break, then we went to Rosie inside. Our girls kept their cool when Madison went to the press," said Andruzzi, whose Pirates are now 12-4. "When we can score 20 points in the first eight minutes of the second half while the other team gets only seven, then you know something has to be working right. The girls capitalized on the things which they do best."

East Carolina faces UNC-Chapel Hill Wednesday in Minges Coliseum in their first home game since defeating East Tennessee State, 73-63, December 10.

Two members of the East Carolina team were selected to the all-Tournament team. They were Kathy Riley and Rosie Thompson. The others named were Clemson's Bobbie Mims and Barbara Kennedy, and Mississippi's Carrie Ball. Mims was selected the tournament's Most Valuable Player.

BY ED WCHUYLER JR
AP Sports Writer

Muhammad Ali, a boxing champion whose renown transcended the sport, has been named the Athlete of the Decade for the 1970s by The Associated Press.

"The athlete of the decade ...better than anybody? I'm so honored," said Ali, no stranger to either honors or controversy.

Ali was a superstar during the 1960s — golfer Arnold Palmer was the Athlete of that Decade — when he won an Olympic gold medal and the world heavyweight championship. But he ended the '60s stripped of the title and in exile from boxing because of his conviction for refusing to accept military draft. He faced a fiveyear prison term.

At the close of the '70s Ali was a retired champion, having won back the title twice, and was the most written about, talked about, argued about, photographed athlete in history. He was the acquaintance of kings and statesman, champion of the underdog to some people, a loudmouth to others, a draft dodger to still others.

In a decade when television really became king in the world of sports, Ali was a TV tar. In a decade when sports purses, prizes and salaries soared, Ali grossed more than $45 million from fighting.

"I hope in the next 10 years I can do something equal in another field," Ali said in an interview. "Seeing what kind of new thing I can make happen now, that will be fun."

One thing Ali says won't happen in the 1980s, despite reports to the contrary, is a return to boxing.

"What do you think would happen if I came back," Ali asked the interviewer. "It'd be tough and you don't have anything to prove," was the reply. "That's right," said Ali, who will be 38 next Thursday. "You said the word. I have nothing else to prove."

Whatever path Ali follows in the '80s, it is doubtful he can match the mark he made on sports in the last decade.

Pete Rose and Rod Carew batted their way to baseball superstardom, disdaining power in an age of power. O.J. Simpson dipped and darted his way to pro football fame and Tony Dorsett ran wild for the University of Pittsburgh. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Julius Erving and Bill Walton, hooked and soared and blocked in professional and college basketball. Jimmy Connors and Bjorn Borg served and volleyed their way to riches and attention in tennis. Chris Evert in tennis and Nancy Lopez in golf led a rapidly growing number of top women athletes.

For many, the decade was an extension of stardom begun in the 1960s — the likes of pitcher Tom Seaver, quarterback Roger Staubach, golfer Jack Nicklaus, auto racing driver A.J. Foyt and soccer star Pele.

But it was just another 10 years of excellence for hockey player Gordie Howe and jockey Bill Shoemaker, who began their careers in the 1940s and were still going strong in 1980.

Howe retired early in the decade, came back to play in the now-defunct World Hockey Association and in 1979 was playing again in Nation

But no one athlete had a tighter grip on the 1970s than Ali — people followed him and watched him ...and he acknowledged many rooted for him to lose. His charisma and ability made him a major story in almost every year of the decade. Even the only three defeats of his 59-bout career seemed to add to his magnetism by raising the question — was he finished?

The losses to Joe Frazier, Ken Norton and Leon Spinks showed another side of Ali, who often taunted his opponents after he won.

When an aide tried to empty a hotel room full of media people after his loss to then champion Joe Frazier March 8, 1971, Ali said, "No, let them stay. I talk when I win: I gotta talk when I lose."

Following his title loss to Spinks in a major upset Feb. 15, 1978, a reporter told Ali, "Nice fight champ."

"I'm not the champ," replied Ali. "He's the champ. You don't have to call me 'champ' for me to be your friend."

"You knew how to lose," the interviewer told Ali.

"If you lose, you lose," replied Ali. He paused, then added, "I knew I'd come back."

Ali came back from exile, his loss to Frazier and his brokenjaw loss to Norton to regain the heavyweight championship by knocking out George Foreman and he came back from the upset by Spinks to outpoint Leon and become champion again — at least champion in the eyes of the World Boxing Association.

Ali's eighth-round knockout of Foreman in early morning hours in the African nation of Zaire Oct. 30, 1974, was one of four title fights he had outside the United States during the decade, and three of them especially underscored his worldwide popularity and mystique.

Thousands of people were at the airport to greet Ali at the Kuala Lumpur airport and one day he was literally trapped by admirers in a mosque.

Malaysia is a predominantly Moslem nation, and Ali was fond of saying he would beat Bugner because "Allah is in my corner." Late one night a non-Moslem taxi driver asked a passenger: "Do you think Allah really is in his corner?"

The third fight against Frazier — the "Thrilla in Manila" — was Ali's favorite. It was the most action-packed of the series, with Ali winning when Frazier failed to come out for the 15th round. It was a war and Ali admitted that he had wanted to quit after the 10th round "but couldn't because I am the champion."

But it was the Foreman fight that Ali considered his most important of the decade, although the fight that saved his career was his 12-round split decision victory over Norton Sept. 10, 1973 at Inglewood, Calif., about five months after he had been upset by Ken. Ali needed to win the last round to win the rematch. He won it.

Three years later Ali defended the title against Norton at Yankee Stadium and won a unanimous decision. But it was the most controversial decision of Ali's career, with most ringsiders feeling Norton won.

Asked to rate the most important events of his life during the '70s, Ali listed them as meeting his third wife, Veronica; the birth of his two daughters by Veronica, and the Foreman fight.

6th Ranked LSU Falls To Georgia, 73-72

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Jimmy Daughtry's short jump shot at the buzzer sent the game into overtime and Georgia went on to take a 73-72 double overtime victory over sixth-ranked Louisiana State in a Southeastern Conference college basketball game Saturday.

Martin also went to the line with 29 seconds left in the first overtime with the score tied 70-70 and missed the shot. With Georgia leading 73-71 with one minute left in the second overtime, Martin missed one of two free throws that would have tied the score.

It was the third straight loss for LSU and dropped the Tigers to 9-3 overall and 2-3 in the SEC. The victory raised Georgia's record to 10-3 overall and 3-3 in the SEC.

LSU's Howard Carter was the game's leading scorer with 24 points and teammate Durand Macklin pumped in 18. Martin added 16 points and Jordy Hultberg had 10.

Michigan 61

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Joe Barry Carroll scored 20 points Saturday as 10th-ranked Purdue, holding Michigan's scoring leader Mike McGee to seven points, beat the Wolverines 68-61 in a Big Ten Conference basketball game.

The Boilermakers trailed early in the game but went ahead for good at 26-25 on a basket by Carroll, the Big Ten scoring leader at better than 23 points a contest.

Arnette Hallman, who finished with 16 points for Purdue, scored 10 in the first half as the Boilermakers widened the lead to 37-30 at the intermission.

Michigan, falling to 2-2 in the Big Ten and 9-4 overall, pulled within six early in the second half, but two straight baskets by Carroll gave the Boilermakers their biggest lead at 51-41.

Minutes later, a basket by Paul Heuerman and two free throws by Thad Garner brought the Wolverines within four points, but Carroll countered with a basket and Michigan never came closer than five points the rest of the way.

Marty Bodnar paced the Wolverines with 15, while Heuerman finished with 14 and Garner 13.

Keith Edmonson added 11 and Drake Morris 10 for Purdue, now 3-1 in the Big Ten and 10-2 overall.

Missouri 84
Nebraska 63

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Missouri center Steve Stipanovich scored 20 points to lead 13th-ranked Tigers to a 84-63 Big Eight college basketball win over Nebraska Saturday.

Stipanovich, a 6-foot-11 freshman, connected on 10 of 13 field goal attempts to lead a balanced scoring attack. Larry Drew added 13 points while Curtis Berry and Ricky Frazier had 12 each. Guard Mark Dressler came off the bench to add 10.

Mich. St. 64

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Guards Isiah Thomas and Butch Carter scored 19 points apiece Saturday as 19th-ranked Indiana survived a second-half rally by Michigan State and beat the Spartans 72-64 in a regionally televised Big Ten basketball game.

The Hoosiers took a 10-point lead at halftime, then built an 18-point advantage seven minutes into the second half before Jay Vincent started the Spartan rally.

The 6-foot-7 center had nine points in the 15-2 burst by the defending NCAA champions and finished the game with 19.

The foul-plagued Hoosiers saw the lead trimmed to three points on four straight free throws by Kevin Smith with four minutes remaining. Then two minutes later a basket by Rob Gonzales cut the lead to three, and two more free throws by Terry Donnelly closed the gap to one when Thomas fouled out.

Indiana's final 13 points came on free throws, including five by Phil Isenbarger and four by Carter.

Michigan State still trailed only 63-62 with a minute remaining, but five straight free throws iced the victory for the Hoosiers.

It was the fourth straight conference loss for the Spartans and dropped their overall record to 6-7. The Hoosiers evened their Big Ten mark at 2-2 and raised their season record to 9-4.

Charles finished with 17 points for Michigan State and Gonzales added 12. Ray Tolbert also had 12 for the Hoosiers.

Wisconsin 66
Iowa 65

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Steve Krafcisin scored 15 points and 12th-ranked Iowa held off a late Wisconsin rally to beat the Badgers 66-65 in Big Ten college basketball Saturday.

Iowa held a 12-point lead with 5:39 left when Kevin Boyle hit a long jumper to make it 62-50. Baskets by Larry Petty, Joe Chrnelich and Arnold Gaines cut the margin in half with 2:31 to play. Matthews, who had been averaging 20.7 points per game, scored on a long pass with 1:03 remaining, but Iowa answered with two free throws by Kenny Arnold on a Gaines foul.

Louisville 69
Memphis St. 48

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Derek Smith and Darrell Griffith combined for 42 points Saturday to lead 11th-ranked Louisville to a 69-48 Metro Conference basketball win over cold-shooting but hot-tempered Memphis State.

Smith finished with 22 points and was the game's top rebounder with 10, while Griffith had 20 points.

ECU Grapplers Pin West Chester St.

GREENVILLE—Falls by Butch Revils at 177 pounds and heavyweight D.T. Joyner paced East Carolina past West Chester State in wrestling action, 37-6, Saturday afternoon in Minges Coliseum.

The Pirates, now 1-1, came from behind after Jorge Leon pinned Nathan Kluttz in 1:54 at 118 pounds, with handy decisions by Steve Milanese, Frank Schaede, Jim Osborne and Steve Goode, a forfeit win for Danny Keane and a 6-5 win for Scott Eaton over Barry Derr, in the 142 bracket.

That set the margin at 22-6 going into the final three matches.

Revils, a national challenger, dispatched Rick Pingitore at 177 in 3:55 to clinch the win in the home opener for the Pirates.

Jay Dever eased to a 7-0 decision at 190 pounds and Joyner completed the rout with his 6:20 pin of Bruce Edwards. Joyner remains a prime contender for national honors at the end of the season.

Pirate grappler coach Ed Steers was delighted with the Pirates' performance. "Obviously, it was a team effort," Steers commented after the victory. "We've had some key injuries, and we don't have the depth we need, but we're going to fight them. I was real pleased that we were able to beat a team like West Chester this badly. They compete with Division I schools in wrestling and, they have a solid program," the coach concluded.

Summary

Pinto Puts You Miles Ahead Of Corolla.
03049

Go ahead. Compare the American Ford Pinto and the Toyota Corolla. Since Pinto gets 24 mpg to Corolla's 28*, you might assume that Corolla is more economical.
But keep going. Compare prices. Pinto is incredibly less. So much less you'd have to drive the Corolla 30,499 miles to save enough on gas...to make up the price difference.
Stop by and check out the new Ford Pinto. You'll see how good-looking economy can be.
*EPA estimates
Compare these estimates to the estimated MPG of other cars. You may get different mileage depending on how fast you drive weather conditions and trip length. Comparisons based on actual base sticker prices of comparably equipped car as of October 1979 and driving 15,000 miles per year with gas at $1 a gallon.

Gerulaitis To Face Borg In Masters' Finals

NEW YORK (AP) — It's two giants down and one to go for Vitas Gerulaitis.

"I'd like to beat all three in a row," said Gerulaitis, who defeated third-seeded Jimmy Connors 7-5, 6-2 Saturday to advance to the finals of the $400,000 Grand Prix Masters tennis tournament. The fifth-seeded Gerulaitis will take on No. 2 Bjorn Borg of Sweden, a 6-7, 63, 7-6 victor over top-seeded John McEnroe.

On Friday, Gerulaitis had beaten McEnroe 3-6, 7-6, 7-6 to win his round-robin group and a $10,000 bonus check. He followed that with his first triumph over Connors since 1972, making him 2-16 lifetime against Connors.

"All I ever read is I can't beat these guys, but can beat all the others," said Gerulaitis. "I'm happy considering I'm supposed to be one of 100 guys who can't beat the top three. Now I've beaten two of them."

Borg holds a 14-0 edge over Gerulaitis, but he wasn't discounting the New Yorker in Sunday's final.

"Vitas has played unbelieveable this week," said Borg. "I don't think he's played that well in a long time. I will have more pressure on me."

Like prizefighters, Borg and McEnroe slugged it out from beginning to end. The final set featured a break by Borg in game one and a McEnroe break in game four. Each displayed the caliber of tennis that has earned them the 1-2 spots in world rankings. It was McEnroe's aggressive net game against Borg's passing shots. And both served well.

McEnroe lost the third set tiebreaker more than Borg won it. Three McEnroe forehands went long in the tiebreaker that Borg took 7-1.

McEnroe pretty much controlled action at the net in the first set. The 20-year-old U.S. Open champion and defender here cut off much of the court with his forays to the net and Borg, who has never won a tournament in New York, rarely could pass his opponent. Still the set went to a tiebreaker.

Borg had gotten the initial break of the first set with four consecutive passing shots. The four-time Wimbledon titlist saved four break points in the next game to hold service but McEnroe got back the break in the eighth game with some terrific volleys.

McEnroe blew a set point when he netted an easy overhead of a poor Borg lob in the 10th game and Borg held for 55. Each held to force the tiebreaker.

McEnroe grabbed a 6-4 lead in the tiebreaker, then Borg saved another set point with an overhead before McEnroe put away a volley for the set.

Each held serve until game eight of the second set, when Borg uncorked a couple of bullets on service returns to break. Then he held in a deuce game for the set.

Finesse was the key to Gerulaitis' triumph over the third-seeded Connors, who once again failed to advance past the semifinals of a major tournament. Connors did not get over that barrier at all in 1979.

Both players appeared to be feeling out each other early in the match. Each held service through six games before Connors hit a pair of forehand winners to secure a break and a 43 lead. He held for 5-3. Then, in the ninth game, both players were upset by inconsistent line calls and overrulings by the umpire. Connors even conceded a point to Gerulaitis after a poor line call on the preceding point had moved Connors to his second set point.

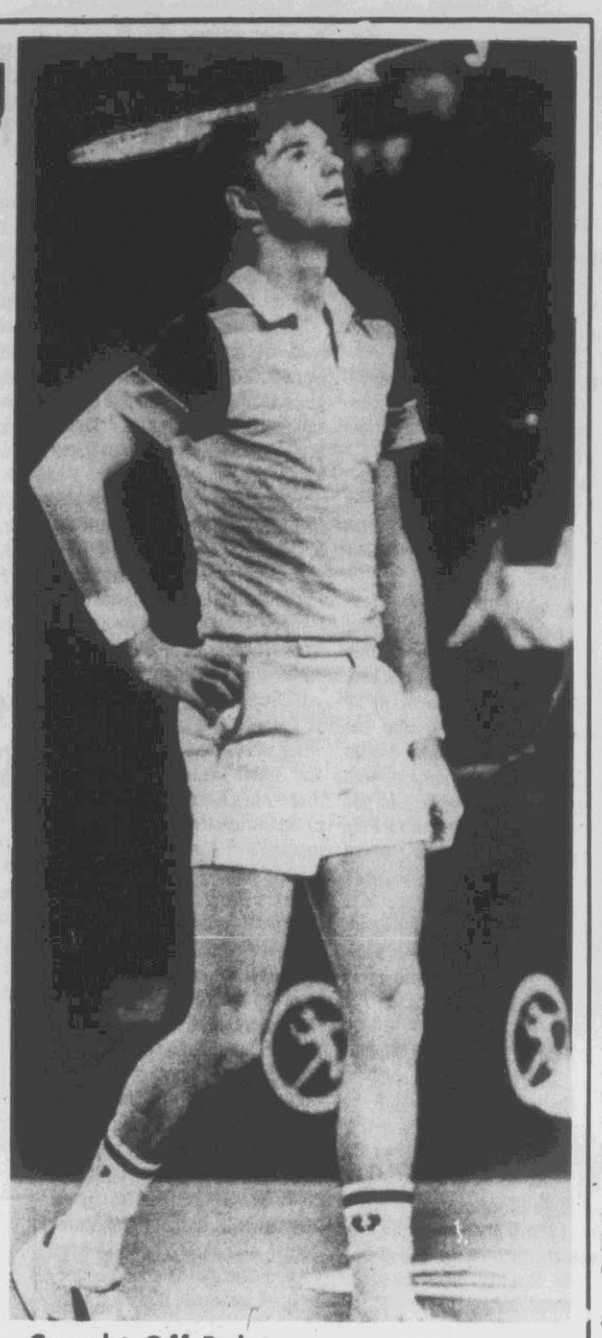

Gerulaitis held in that game. As he had done in his amazing comeback victory over McEnroe on Friday, he broke when his opponent was serving for a set, then held and broke again to win the set 7-5.

The finesse style of play continued in the second set with both players making effective use of off-speed shots. Gerulaitis broke in game four as his lobs and spins kept him one step ahead of a seemingly befuddled Connors. It was the same approach that turned around his match with McEnroe the night before.

Gerulaitis moved out to a 5-2 lead then broke Connors after the left-hander had saved one match point to clinch the victory.

"We've had close matches before but I've never won," said Gerulaitis of his one-sided rivalry with Connors. "I lost three or four matches where I was ahead 6-2, 5-1 against him.

"I'm happy considering I've been reading that I'm one of 100 guys who can't beat the top three. Now I've beaten two of them."

Regalado, Nelson Lead Hope Desert Classic

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Victor Regalado birdied three of his last four holes for a solid 68 and tied Larry Nelson for the third-round lead Saturday in the rain-delayed Bob Hope Desert Classic, kickoff tournament for the 1980 PGA Tour.

Regalado, a seven-year regular on the American tour and a two-time winner, and Nelson, the second-round leader and golf's No. 2 money-winner last year, had identical 54-hole totals of 205, 11 under par.

"I don't understand it," Regalado said with a shake of his head. "I don't play like this early in the year. And I've never played any good in Southern California. I don't know what it is, but this is the first time I've played well here."

Regalado got his 68 at Eldorado and Nelson shot 70 at Bermuda Dunes, two of the four soggy desert courses used for this unique, 90-hole tournament.

The format calls for the pros to play one round on each of the four courses, each day with a different, three-man team of amateurs — many of them show-business clelbrity friends of the host — before the field is cut for the pro-only finish at La Quinta.

Heavy midweek rains pushed the tournament one full day behind schedule. It now is set to end Monday.

Veteran Butch Baird shot 68 at La Quinta, despite missing a pair of two-foot putts, and was tied at 206 with Mike Sullivan. Sullivan moved to within a single stroke of the lead with a seven-under-par 65 at Eldorado.

"I live in Miami," said Baird, now in his 22nd year on the tour. "It's warm there. You can practice during the off-season if you want. With this being the first tournament of the year, that gives me a little advantage over guys from other areas of the country."

Former national collegiate champion Scott Simpson shot 71 at La Quinta and was tied at 207 with bearded Craig Stadler, who had a 70 at La Quinta.

The group at 208 consisted of Bob Murphy, Mac McLendon, Tom Purtzer, Keith Fergus and Lanny Wadkins. Murphy, Purtzer and McLendon played at Bermuda Dunes and shot 69, 68 and 71, respectively. Wadkins, winner of two 1979 tournaments, had a 68 at Indian Wells and Fergus had 67 at La Quinta.

Arnold Palmer, who won his fifth Hope title and last American tournament here seven years ago, slipped to a 75, also at Bermuda Dunes, and drifted back to par 216.

Regalado closed quickly to gain a share of the top spot. He wedged to eight feet for a birdie on his 15th hole, parred the next, then finished birdie-birdie. He holed a 12-foot putt on his 17th, then ripped a 2-iron shot to within two feet of the flag and missed the eagle putt on the final hole.

Nelson made two birdie putts in the 12-15 foot range and hit a 9-iron to three feet to make the turn three under par for the day. He had the lead alone at that time, but gave one shot back with a bogey from a bunker on the back nine.

"I love to get Bermuda Dunes behind me," said Nelson, winner of two tournaments and $281,000 last season. "I've never played well there at all. It's always killed me. Looking at the scores, it's probably the hardest of the four golf courses this year. I'm very happy with the score I shot there."

Rouse Out For Season

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Ginger Rouse, the best pure shooter on North Carolina State's eighth-ranked women's basketball team, will sit out the rest of the 1979-80 season, Coach Kay Yow said today.

Yow said Rouse will be redshirted for the remainder of the season. Rouse played in only three games this season, averaging 14.3 points a contest. She has been sidelined with a back injury.

"We will certainly miss Ginger this year," Yow said of the 5-foot-10 guard. "She is a very important part of our team. She has the potential to win quite a few awards if she's healthy.

Kentucky, Virginia Beaten

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Edddie Phillips scored 15 of his 23 points as Alabama rolled to a 41-20 halftime lead and the Crimson Tide went on to rout fourth-ranked Kentucky 78-64 in a Southeastern Conference basketball game Saturday night.

Phillips scored 10 points as the Crimson Tide, 8-6 overall and 4-2 in the SEC, outscored Kentucky 24-6 over the last 8½ minutes of the first period.

The loss was Kentucky's third in 16 games and dropped the Wildcats to 3-2 in the SEC.

Kentucky shots just 28 percent from the field in the first half against Alabama's aggressive defense, while the Tide hit 59 percent of its shots.

Alabama was clinging to a 17-14 lead when Phillips started the decisive streak with a jump shot in the lane at 8:27. Two field goals by Eddie Adams and a pair of free throws by Robert Scott put the Tide ahead 25-14 at 6:58.

Kentucky's Fred Cowan and Alabama's Ken Johnson traded baskets before Phillips' tip-in made it 29-16. Kyle Macy, who led Kentucky with 18 points, sank a 25-footer, but Phillips scored on a lob pass and Scott hit from the baseline, swelling the margin to 33-18 at 4:12.

Dirk Minniefield's 10-foot jumper cut the lead to 33-20 at 3:58, but the Tide reeled off the last eight points of the period. Phillips scored the last two baskets on a baseline jumper and a tip-in.

Kentucky got no closer than 12 points in the second half.

Scott led all scorers with 25 points, while Johnson added 12 points and Adams scored 10 for Alabama. Cowan scored 14 for Kentucky.

N. C. State 64 Virginia 56

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Virginia Coach Terry Holland had an easy explanation for North Carolina State's success in stopping Ralph Sampson and in effect shutting down the eighth-ranked Cavaliers Saturday.

"Ralph Sampson gathers a crowd wherever he goes," said Holland after the 7-foot-4 freeshman center was prevented from shooting near the basket in Virginia's 64-56 loss to the Wolfpack. "They kept the ball away from him and we missed the perimeter shots they gave us early."

N.C. State forward Hawkeye Whitney, who scored 21 points and keyed the front line's defense against Sampson. Sampson scored just once from in close as N.C. State took a 28-18 halftime lead and never permitted Virginia to get closer than four points throughout the second half.

"Hawkeye Whitney did a super job today," said Wolfpack Coach Norm Sloan. "I thought our defense was excellent. We played a helping man-to-man all the way. Our board play was good."

Sloan said the Wolfpack enjoyed a "great week. We've played and beat two of the best teams in the country," he said in referring to victories over Virginia and Maryland.

Sloan said freshman Sidney Lowe, who scored nine of his 11 points in the second half, again was one of the keys to the victory.

"Sidney came in and picked up our tempo," said Sloan, "We had skidded subconsciously into not looking to score. With him in there we established a different tempo, a different look."

N.C. State, which now has won 11 straight games to improve its record to 11-1, led by 10 points three times in the sceond half. The victory enabled the Wolfpack to gain a tie for the ACC lead at 3-0 pending the outcome of the Clemson-Wake Forest game Saturday night.

VMI 75 Marshall 63

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Andy Kolesar scored 30 points as VMI blew out Marshall University 75-63 Saturday night to gain an upset Southern Conference basketball victory.

The defeat was Marshall's first in the conference against four victories and left the Herd 9-5 overall, while VMI moved to 3-4 in the conference and 6-5 overall.

The 6-foot-1 Kolesar, a guard, connected on 13 of 16 shots from the floor, many from long range. He hit seven of 10 in the first half and didn't miss after the intermission, hitting all six of his shots.

Stumbling Shot

WILSON — Rose High School's Donald House scored eight points in the final period as Rose rushed out to a ten point lead over Wilson Fike, but it took a free throw and a driving layup by sub Calvin Nesbit to salt away a 68-64 victory for the Rampants Friday night.

The win boosted the Rose Division I record to 3-2 and knocked Fike off the unbeaten list in the league, dropping the Golden Demons to 4-1.

Rose, ahead by ten with 1:20 left in the contest, seemingly had it on ice, but the Demons came back just like their namesakes, forcing three turnovers in 30 seconds to get back into the game and trail only 65-63. Nesbit hit the first of a one-and-one with 18 seconds left, however, to pad the lead to three, and after Fike scored on the front end of another one-and-one with eight seconds left, Nesbit drove on a fast break with two seconds showing to put the game away for the Rampants, who were playing without head coach Jim Brewington.

Brewington was in Mobile, Ala., where his oldest son was playing in the Senior Bowl.

Rose's girls, in their clash with the Demons, came out on the short end, losing 58-44.

The Rampants were plagued by turnovers against the Demons, turning the ball over 22 times. Twenty of those came scattered between the first, second and fourth periods. Fike had ten less lost balls, and a great deal of the difference in the game came through those Rose mistakes.

The saving quality, however, was the board work of the Rampants, paced by their front line of Tyrone Tucker, Cliff Kilpatrick and House. Rose pulled off 55 loose balls while Fike managed to grab hold of only 29. The 26-rebound difference was fatal for the Demons.

Neither team shot particularly well, Rose hitting 26 of 61, while Fike hit 22 of 57. Fike stayed in the game at the foul line, hitting 22 of 31, including half that total in the last quarter. Rose made 16 of 20 at the line, including three of four in the final frame.

"After we got that ten point lead, we kind of relaxed," said Dennis Gibson, the coach of the girls' team, who did double duty, subbing for Brewington. "Their pressure defense got them back into it after that.

"We did play well, however, in fact, I think it was one of our better games," Gibson said. "This win will definitely help us, since Fike beat Beddingfield, the conference favorite, earlier in the week. It keeps us up close, and it builds some confidence for us."

Gibson praised the board work of Tyson, along with his scoring. "The whole team did a fine job, and Calvin Nesbit was very cool there when it counted and he had to hit at least one of those free throws."

Rose jumped off to the initial lead, scoring the first eight points of the game. But the turnovers began to mount up against them, and it helped Fike to creep back in the game. The Demons tied it at 12-12 in the final minute, but Tyson hit with 17 seconds left to allow Rose to take a 14-12 lead into the second period.

Fike tied it up, then took the lead in the first minute of the second quarter, as the turnovers continued to hamper the Rampants, and their shooting eyes turned cold too. The lead bounced back and forth, however, until Donald Johnson hit from underneath and added two free throws a few seconds later for a 25-21 lead for the Rampants. Rose held that lead until the end of the period, except for ties at 27-27 and again at 29-29. The last came with 53 seconds left, and with 33 showing, Ben Howell scored with a jumper from the foul line to put the Demons into the lead at intermission, 31-29.

A three-point play by Kilpatrick, coupled with a basket by Wallace Brown and a free throw by House, ran Rose back into the lead, 37-33 after two minutes of the third period. Thanks to having only two turnovers in the period, the Rampants were able to take control in the frame and run their lead back out to eight points, holding that margin at the end, 53-45.

Wilson closed back within three, 55-52, during the first three minutes of the last quarter, but House paced the Rampants on a spree that opened the gap to 65-55 with 1:20 showing. But three quick steals following a Demon basket resulted in two more baskets and two free throws and the lead was down to just three.

Nesbit hit his free throw, however, then added the clinching basket as time ran out.

Tucker led the Rose scoring with 16, while House added 14 and Kilpatrick had 13.

Ben Howell led Wilson with 18, while Moe Ruffin had 12 and Tracy Hill had 10.

In the girls' game, Fike finally shook off Rose late in the first quarter and built up a 16-10 lead by the horn. The Demonettes continued to pull away in the second quarter, moving their lead out to 11 by halftime, 27-16.

Rose rallied twice in the third period, closing the gap to five, at 29-24 and again at 33-28, but could come no closer. Wilson opened the lead again, holding a 38-30 margin at the horn.

They inched that out to 13 after two minutes of the final quarter, then went on a fast break streak that accounted for ten straight points and a 21-point edge, 55-34. Rose never was able to rally from that.

"We played one of our better games," Gibson said, "but we had a few occasions there where we let them get loose for easy baskets and that hurt us. Donna (Cullipher) had another good night, so maybe that's a sign of better things to come. I think the girls were a little intimidated by Wilson's height, and we're still playing only three quarters a night. Once we start to play for all four quarters, I think we can contest some of these people."

Sharon Williams led Rose with 16, while Cullipher had 15. Martha Lawrence had 12, Susan Smith had 11 and Dot Neal had 10 for Fike.

Foundation Sets Meet

The Rose High School-E.B. Aycock Junior High School Athletic Foundation will hold a meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Rose High School cafeteria.

Among items to be discussed will be recognition of the football team as State 4-A runners-up; a financial report on fund raising activities; and discussion of a winter sports banquet.

Anyone interested in Rose or Aycock athletics is invited to attend.

Two Services For Rein Set

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The family of Louisiana State University head football coach Bo Rein said today two memorial services have been scheduled for Rein.

Rein, 34, who had been at LSU only 42 days after four years at North Carolina State University, was the only passenger on a Cessna Conquest that was on a routine one-hour flight from Shreveport, La., to Baton Rouge, La. when it ran into trouble.

Rein's family, still living in Cary, N.C., said today a resurrection Mass will be said today at 4 p.m. at St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church in Cary. It will be open to the public.

On Tuesday, a requiem Mass will be said at 7 p.m. at St. Stephen's Roman Catholic Church in Niles, Ohio.

Mississippi Nips Lady Bucs At Horn

By Jimmy DuPree
Special Correspondent

COLUMBIA, S.C. — After trailing 34-25 at halftime, the Mississippi University for Women fought back and defeated the Lady Pirates of East Carolina, 70-69, on a field goal by Sue Johnson with four seconds remaining in the opening game of the third annual Clemson Invitational Tournament Friday night.

Johnson's driving layup gave MUW the lead for the first time in the contest, as they trailed ever since ECU's Kathy Riley put the Pirates ahead 4-2 with less then four minutes gone in the game.

East Carolina's Lydia Rountree stepped out of bounds under pressure with 20 seconds left to set up the victorious field goal. The Pirates had one final chance to win after point guard Laurie Sikes was fouled with one second on the clock, but MUW had committed only four team fouls and Rountree's desperation shot on the in-bounds play was blocked by Carrie Ball as time ran out.

"We said they were a good team and they proved it tonight," said ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi. "Mississippi capitalized on every mistake we made. We were getting shots but we weren't putting them in.

"Our press worked and caused turnovers, but there again we weren't able to capitalize. We couldn't find a bucket out there."

Sikes dished off nine assists giving her a season total of 116, surpassing the old single season assist record of 109, set by Rountree last year.

Conley Storms Back To Pluck Hawks

By Larry Sullivan
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — The Los Angeles Lakers of the NBA hold rights to Earvin "Magic" Johnson, but D.H. Conley basketball coach Shelley Marsh performed some magic of his own in leading his Eastern Carolina Conference co-leading Vikings to a 78-56 loop victory over North Lenoir Friday night.

In the opener of the twinbill, the home-standing Valkyries, behind throughout the game, tied the score at the end of regulation and went on to take a 49-48 overtime victory over North's Lenoir's Lady Hawks.

In the boys game, Coach Marsh took his squad into the locker room at the half behind 39-32, but he turned his squad into a scoring machine during the final two periods of play, allowing the Vikings to record seventh league win against two defeats and leaving them 12-2 overall.

"We got into foul trouble early in the first half," Coach Marsh said after the game, "as three of our starters each got two fouls on them. Our bench did a good job in keeping the first half score close. We were glad to be down by only seven at the half.

"In the second half, we tried a few traps and our quickness paid off, and then when Mitch Moore entered the game, he turned the game around with his rebounds and inside play," the coach said. "After that, they just couldn't match up with us."

In the first quarter, the Vikings fell behind to the Hawks as the visiting unit capitalized on those early fouls, entering the one-and-one situation in the quarter. North Lenoir was a perfect six of six from the charity strip, in recording a 20-17 intital frame lead.

The second period was almost a repeat of the first, with the Hawks swishing seven of eight free throws and taking a 19-15 advantage in the stanza. Both teams basketed 13 field goals during the first half, but the seven-point difference in favor of the Hawks came at the free throw line.

Under the magical direction of Coach Marsh, the home-standing Vikings erupted for 24 third period points, with Curtis Spencer and Carnell Burney each contributing six points. During the eight-minute span, the Vikings enjoyed a 14-3 scoring spurt, during which they overcame the seven point deficit and took the lead for good at 42-41. While Marsh's unit was hitting on 11 of 18 field goals during the frame, North Lenoir found the bucket only twice in 16 tries from the field and hit only two of seven from the free throw line in scoring a mere six points in the third period.

The Vikings increased their lead to as many as 18 points in the fourth period, before a couple of late baskets gave them the final 22-point win.

Senior forward David Brock led all scorers in the game with 16 points and he was followed by Viking teammates Spencer, with 14, and Burnell, with 10, in double figures for the game. Hawks Mike White, Kevin Battle and Eugene Connor broke into double digits for the game, tossing in 14, 12 and 10 points, respectively.

The Vikings connected on 45.7 percent of the field goals, sinking 35 of 73 attempts. Although North Lenoir managed to hit on 56.7 percent of their attempts, 38-67, the visitors shot a poor 31 percent in the second half. D.H. Conley, one of the finest free throw shooting teams in the conference, made eight of 15 from the charity stripfor a 53.3 percent night, while the Hawks sank 18 of 26 attempts for a 69.2 percentage.

In the first game of the conference doubleheader, coach Norma Respess' Valkyries succumbed to a vicious Hawkette press to turn the ball over numerous times, particulary in the first three periods. But it was a turnover by the North Lenoir unit late in the fourth period that allowed DHC to tie the game at 47 at the end of the regulation.

Pam Manning, a consistent senior guard on the D.H. Conley team, swished a 15-foot jump shot early in the three minute overtime period to seal the Valkyries' fourth conference win and second in a row.

The comeback win for Conley pleased Respess. "Before the game, three of our girls had stomach cramps, and I was a little worried. I was pleased with their composure down the stretch. We have not really worked on a stall game at all, yet tonight we did a good job," she said after the game. "And tonight was the first time we tried a press of our own."

Conley senior center Glenda Jackson, one of the three suffering from pre-game cramps, rallied her team during the second half with 18 second-half points. She lead all scorers in the game with 26.

The first period saw the visiting Hawkettes come out in force with a full court press that forced the home team to make costly turnovers. The Hawkettes took command of the initial frame with a 12-6 first quarter lead.

Fighting from behind, the Valkyries outscored North Lenoir, 14-12, to cut the Hawkette lead to four at 24-20. Manning, Green and Darlene Cannon each chipped in four points to pace the balance second period Conley attack.

Green began her act in the third period, as she scored eight of her team's 13 points to cut the Hawkette margin to one, at 34-33, at the close of the third period.

The fourth period was all Green as she tallied 10 of the Valkyries 14 points. D.H. Conley fought back from a five point deficit early in the period to tie the score at 47. With less than 30 seconds remaining on the clock, North Lenoir's Gwen Norville missed the front end of a one-and-one that would have iced the game for NL.

With the score tied, DHC went into their stall game but was unable to score as time ran out. In the three-minute overtime period, Manning came out and sank her jumper with more than two minutes remaining, but the two-pointer was enough as North Lenoir found only one point during the extra period.

Besides Green, Manning also scored in double figures for D.H. Conley as she chipped in 15 in the win.

Greene Central Tops Cougars

PINETOPS — Greene Central saw an 18-point second-half lead nearly evaporate, but the Rams held on to eek out a 53-49 victory over Southwest Edgecombe Friday night in an Eastern Carolina Conference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Southwest Edgecombe extended its undefeated string to 15 straight with a hard-fought 43-41 win over the Rams.

Greene Central, led by David Joyner's 19 points, spurted to a 12-3 first-period advantage and increased that to 29-13 at the break.

The Cougars, after trailing 43-28 at the end of the third period, began hitting long jumpers in the final period which enable them to come back.

Southwest Edgecombe, led by Daniels' 11 points and McNair's nine, all of which came in the final quarter, got to within four before losing.

"We played very good defense early," said Ram coach Lewis Godwin, whose team is now 4-11 overall and 2-7 in the ECC. "But they began making long shots, especially in the final period.

"We didn't help matters when we started throwing the ball away and missing free throws — we missed three one and ones. That hurt."

After falling behind in the early going, the Rams, who trailed 28-24 at the half, came back to take the lead in the at the end of the third period, 32-30.

The Rams lost their lead early in the final quarter but with the Cougars leading, 43-41, Taylor had a chance to tie it up with five seconds left but could not connect on the first the one and one.

Besides Taylor, Melody Hamm added 10 for Greene Central, which fell to 5-10 overall.

Bishops Hold Off Paladins

ROCKY MOUNT — North Carolina Weslayan's junior varsity used the foul line to mold a 79-72 victory over Pitt Community College Friday night.

The Baby Bishops hit on 17 of 26 shot from the foul stripe, while Pitt could make but eight of 15, despite hitting one more field goal than did the Wesleyan team.

The game was fairly close throughout, with Wesleyan leading most of the time. The Bishops held a 36-30 halftime lead.

"We were in the game the whole way," Pitt Coach Herb Dillon said. "We really played well and it was probably one of our better efforts, maybe our best.

"But it was just one of those games where when you get close, a call goes against you. We shot 57 per cent from the floor, but they shot well too. We also outrebounded them, but the difference was in fouls and free throw shooting."

Pitt pulled to within four with about a minute left, but Wesleyan went to a delay and used the foul line to stretch its lead back to the final seven.

The loss dropped Pitt to 7-5 on the year. They play host to Ferrum Junior College on Monday at Ayden-Grifton High School. Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m.

Tyrone Lutz led Wesleyan with 17 points, while LenLatta had 15, Mark Washington had 12 and Warren Wallace hit 10.

The Paladins were led by Frankie Dail with 21, while Larry Suggs had 14, Danny Garris had 12 and Jeff Moreno, 10.

Knights Down Goldsboro Five

Jeff Parnell, Jeff Harris and Ben Haddock combined for 45 points to lead Greenville Christian to an easy 71-30 win over Goldsboro Christian Friday night in a high school basketball game.

The Knights, led by Parnell's 18 points, jumped out to an early 19-8 lead and were never headed in winning their fourth game of the season against two defeats.

Haddock had 15 for the Knights while Harris added 12 and Bill Hurst had 11.

Greenville Christian led, 38-14, at the half and then blew the game open with a 23-4 outburst in the third period to put the Knights up, 61-18, going into the final quarter.

Orangemen Post 13th Win

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Color the decade of the 1970s bright Orange for Syracuse basketball: nine consecutive post-season bids, including two in the National Invitation Tournament and seven in the NCAA playoffs.

Jim Boeheim was a big part of that shining success, coaching Syracuse to a 74-14 record the past three seasons, an average of nearly 25 victories a year.

Another 25-victory season at Syracuse is a strong possibility now that the 1980s have started. The Orangemen are one of the few remaining undefeated teams in the country with a 13-0 record following Friday night's 64-54 victory over Rhode Island.

Roosevelt Bouie and Louis Orr combined for 37 points to lead a superior but obviously tired Syracuse team that was playing its fifth game in eight days.

"Our offense got us in trouble the first half, but we came back," said Boeheim. "We didn't have the energy. Our zone (defense) was effective, but this was the best Rhode Island team we've seen in the four years we've been playing here (in Providence.)"

"If he needs to score, he scores," said Boeheim. "He could score on almost anyone. He seems to feel as if he's got a limited number (of points) and he's saving them until we need them."

Added Bouie: "We do it when we have to."

Syracuse will have to do it again today. The Orangemen continue their hectic schedule when they play No. 10 Purdue in a nationally televised game.

Rhode Island's man-to-man defense initially gave Syracuse trouble, forcing 13 turnovers in the first half and helping the Rams to a 32-31 lead at intermission. The deficit marked only the third time this season that the Orangemen have started the second half of a game trailing.

Orr, a 6-foot-8 forward, scored 20 points to lead all scorers. The 6-11 Bouie had 17 points.

For Rhode Island, Jimmy Wright and Phil Kydd each had 11 points.

Elsewhere, Curt Mahoney scored 19 of his 25 points in the second half as Columbia broke open a close game to defeat Harvard 85-63. Reserve Guard Steve Mills poured in a career-high 19 points to lead Princeton to a 65-57 decision over Yale.

Jaguar Matmen Slip By Vikes

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central, trailing throughout the match, won the final two weight classes of the night on quick pins, and gained a 33-30 victory over Conley's Vikings in an Eastern Carolina Conference wrestling match Friday.

It was Farmville Central's first dual match win over the Vikings ever. Conley came into the match ranked third in the state.

Farmville won the opening match of the night, but Conley came back to win the next four, including three pins to take a 21-3 lead. Farmville won the next three, including one on a pin and another on a forfeit, tieing it at 21-21. Conley gained the next two, however, and took a 30-21 lead with one decision and a pin. But Farmville two pins in the last matches enabled the Jaguars to make history for themselves.

The loss dropped Conley to 8-1 on the year, while Farmville climbed to 8-0.

Roanoke Gets Past Tigers

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke High School handed Williamston a pair of surprise defeats in the Northeastern Conference Friday night. The Roanoke boys gained a 50-39 decision, while the girls added a 51-40 win.

In the boys, game, Roanoke inched ahead, 10-8, in the first quarter of play, then stretched that out to a 24-18 margin by the end of the half. Roanoke continued to pull away in the third period, moving the score to 38-26. They allowed Williamston a 13-12 advantage in the final quarter.

Maurice Chance led Roanoke's scoring with 20 points, while Anthony Latham added 12. Edward Williams and Woody Sadler each had 11 points for Williamston.

The girls' game saw Roanoke shoot out to a 10-4 lead in the first period. They padded that in the second frame, running their margin to 23-9 by halftime.

Williamston put on a rally in the third period, coming back to trail by 31-22 as the final quarter opened. But Roanoke outraced the Tigerettes to the wire, 20-18, to take the win.

Southern Nips Jaguars In OT

In the overtime, both teams traded baskets until, with four seconds left, High, who had 11 for the Firebirds, hit a jumper. Farmville immediately called time but only could get a desperation shot off as the horn sounded.

Farmville was led by Jeff Tyson's 11 and 10 each by Dennis Pitt and Donald Reid. Anthony Crumel had 17 for the winners while Alan Stone added 11.

Trailing 29-24 at the half, the Jaguars stormed back, outscoring the Firebirds, 23-2, in the third quarter to take a 47-31 led into the final period.

The Firebirds, led by Dora Harrison's 18 points and Betsy Alston's 17, came running back, narrowing the gap to as many as three before falling.

Bear Grass Tops Bullets

BEAR GRASS — Bear Grass and Jamesville split a pair of Beaufort-Hyde-Martin basketball games Friday night. Bear Grass won the boys' contest, 69-64, while Jamesville won the girls' with a 43-41 squeeker.

In the girls' game, Jamesville pulled into an 11-8 lead in the first period, and boosted that to 26-18 by the end of the half. They continued to pull away from the Lady Bears in the third period, boosting the lead to 39-24.

Joette Rogers, scoring ten points in the final period, sparked a Bear Grass rally, however, that finally tied it at 41-41. But Kelly Hardison hit at the buzzer for the Lady Bullets, giving them the victory.

Hardison finished the game with 20 points to lead Jamesville, while Rogers had 21 and Kay Taylor had 10 to lead Bear Grass.

Bear Grass' boys rolled out to an 18-11 lead in the first period, but Jamesville rallied in the second quarter and cut the lead back to 34-33 at halftime. The Bears regained the momentum in the third frame, pushing out to a 49-43 lead, and then allowed Jamesville a 21-20 final period advantage.

Watson Rogers led the Bears with 28 points, while Jesse Bullock had 21. Keith Modlin led Jamesville with 22, with Gerald Keys had 17 and Trent Ange had 10.

Martin Academy Again Defeated

EDENTON — Steve Perry poured in 24 points and Burney Winslow added 17 to lead Chowan Academy past Martin Academy, 77-60, in a high school basketball game Friday night.

In the boys' game, Chowan took an early 15-12 lead and inched out to a 32-26 advantage at intermission. Chowan then outscored Martin, 19-10, in the third period, to take a 51-26 lead into the final quarter.

Martin Academy, 0-11 on the season, was led by Jerry Brannon's 18 points. Allen Warren added 16 for the visitors while Richard Wilson had 14 and Edwin Johnson had 10.

In the girls' game, Martin sprinted to a 12-8 first quarter lead and led at the break, 25-9, outscoring Chowan 13-1 in the second quarter.

Martin, now 3-8, continued to add to its lead in the final two periods, outpointing Chowan, 8-5 and 12-9 the last two quarters.

No Formal Complaints

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Atlantic Coast Conference Commissioner Robert James says he has received several telephone calls, but no formal complaints about North Carolina State basketball player Clyde "The Glide" Austin's ownership of two cars and the arrangements he's made to pay for them.

Both a 1980 Cadillac Sedan deVille and a 1976 MG are registered to Austin, reported the News and Observer of Raleigh.

Austin says his fiancee, a bookkeeper at a Raleigh bank, is paying for the Cadillac, and a friend is making payments on the MG.

As a general rule, the National Collegiate Athletic Association limits university and university-related aid for students to tuiition, room and board and required course-related books.

An NCAA institution can be put on probation, barred from post-season play and television appearances, if it is found that improper financial help has been given to a student athlete.

James said the next step will be to determine if grounds exist to begin an investigation.

Wolfpack Coach Norm Sloan says he sees nothing improper about the situation.

Frank Weedon, associate director of athletics at N.C. State, said he does not know if Austin is receiving extra financial support from the university or alumni.

Austin said, "I'm not working, you know, and we just agreed to do that."

The Raleigh newspaper also reported that North Carolina basketball players Mike O'Koren, Dave Colescott and John Virgil and Duke player Kenny Dennard have cars registered in their names in North Carolina.

O'Koren and Colescott each acquired a 1980 Honda on Nov. 11, 1979, according to the newspaper.

North Destroys South, 57-3

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — It didn't take Coach Bud Grant of the Minnesota Vikings long to annalyze the North's 57-3 shellacking of the South Saturday in the Senior Bowl football game.

"The number of turnovers broke their spirit," Grant said after the North converted six turnovers and a partially blocked punt into six touchdowns and a field goal to return the most lopsided victory in the 31-year series in which collegiate stars launch their professional careers.

Jewerl Thomas of San Jose State scored three touchdowns, two within a 94-second span of the second quarter and All-American Marc Wilson of Brigham Young fired three touchdown passes to spark the victory.

The Brigham Young quarterback had practiced little during the week because of a sore arm, but had no trouble throwing against the outmanned Southerners.

Coach Ray Perkins of the New York Giants, who handled the South team, said the rout took place because "we left the ball laying on the ground" and because "our offensive linemen had trouble pass protecting."

The North scored five touchdowns and a field goal following turnovers and converted a partially-blocked, 6-yard punt into another touchdown.

The issue was never in doubt after Thomas' two quick touchdowns in the second quarter gave the Yankees a 20-0 lead.

Thomas' three scores equaled a Senior Bowl record for points by an individual and the North's 57 far exceeded the previous team record set by the South in a 42-7 conquest in 1962.

Chuck Male of Notre Dame also tied a Senior Bowl record by kicking three field goals, covering 22, 35 and 42 yards, the last a line drive that bounced off the crossbar.

The North's other scoring came on a 2-yard run by Mark Malone of Arizona State, a 6-yard pass from Malone to Mark Brammer of Michigan State and a 30-yard interception return by John Corker of Oklahoma State.

The South's only score came on a 22-yard field goal by Auburn's Jorge Portela in the second quarter after the South had driven 65 yards to the North five.

Wilson, who completed 11 of 19 passes for 127 yards, was named the Most Valuable Player in the game. Malone, the other North quarterback, passed for 126 yards and rushed for another 54 as the North cut the South's series lead to 15-13-3.

Spinks Rebounds To Score KO

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Leon Spinks, the former heavyweight champion, says a new-found "self control" saved him from going down in a second round barrage by Spain's Alfredo Evangelista to rebound with a fifth-round knockout.

"Yeah, I was hurt," Spinks said Saturday, referring to a second-round flurry by Evangelista that left him dazed in his own corner. "I was just trying to hold myself together. I was just interested in trying to save myself."

Spinks rebounded to send Evangelista to the canvas for the count in the fifth round of their scheduled 10-round nationally televised bout.

After the fight, Evangelista said the long right was the first of Spinks' blows to really hurt. He said Spinks' punch left him "dizzy."

"Spinks doesn't care how much punishment he takes. He just wants to get in close to you," Evangelista said through an interpreter.

Spinks said that his 26-year-old body was "maturing" and that his fighting weight of a heavy 209 pounds "agrees with me."

Spinks says his fighting experience was also a maturing factor.

"I felt more in control of myself. This is the new Leon," Spinks said.

When Evangelista went to the canvas he shook his head, refusing to continue the brutal slugfest as referee Vincent Rainone counted him out.

"Condition told what went on in this fight," said judge Harold Lederman from ringside. "We learned who was really in shape."

Spinks, the St. Louis-born and Marine-bred fighter, weighed in at a swelled 209 pounds, but still gave away 13 pounds to the 25-year-old Evangelista. Spinks, the 1976 Olympic gold medalist, advanced his professional record to 8-2-1 with five knockouts. The veteran Evangelista dropped to 32-5-2 in his four-year pro career.

From the opening bell, the fighters stood toe-to-toe pounding away. It appeared that Evangelista had decided to lay on the ropes and allow Spinks to punch himself tired.

In the second round, Evangelista backed Spinks into his own corner and flailed away at the former champ. But Spinks withstood the offensive and that seemed to tire and discourage Evangelista, the former European heavyweight champion.

The pace of the fight slowed in the third round but both fighters continued their freeswinging attack in the fifth. Early in the final round, Evangelista was warned about holding Spinks' head. The Spaniard appeared to tire dramatically before Spinks began his final flurry with a right to the back of his head, staggering Evangelista against the ropes. Spinks landed five straight punishing blows before the right hand sent Evangelista down.

It was a must-win fight for the 26-year-old Spinks, who was coming off an embarrassing first-round knockout at the hands of South Africa's Gerrie Coetzee in June. Before that fight, Spinks lost the WBA heavyweight crown to Muhammad Ali in September, 1978. Spinks took the crown from the legendary Ali in February, 1978.

Saturday's victory was the first for Spinks since he defeated Ali in their first fight.

ECU Men's Swim Team Claims Upset Of USC

GREENVILLE — The East Carolina University men's swimming team shocked a visiting University of South Carolina tank squad here Saturday afternoon, 58-55, setting six meet records in protecting the Pirates' perfect 3-0 slate.

Earlier, the ECU women's team was drowned by the Lady Gamecocks, 92-29, in the second half of the dual swimming meet.

Men's coach Ray Scharf was overwhelmed at his squad's home output. "It was a great win for the team," he said, "just in the same fashion as our UNC victory two years ago. They really worked their butts off."

Co-captains Ted Nieman and Bill Fehling were triple winners in the meet. Nieman grabbed number one honors in the 200, 500 and 400 freestyle events, while Fehling finished first in the 50, 100 and 400 freestyle competition.

Nieman set meet records in the 500 freestyle (4:35:16) and in the 200 freestyle (1:40:28), while Fehling set meet records in the 100 freestyle (47:33) and the 50 freestyle (21:25). Other meet bests were set by the 400 free relay team of Mike Tran, Scott Ross, Jack Clowar and Nieman (3:09:07) and by Clowar Fehling and Richard Hopkins in the 400 Medley Relay (3:32:52).

The women's team set eight varsity and six freshman records but were able to take only one first place spot against the more experienced South Carolina swimmers.

CG Halts Search For LSU's Rein

CAPE CHARLES, Va. (AP) — The Coast Guard suspended its search indefinitely Saturday night for debris that might belong to the plane carrying Louisiana State football Coach Robert "Bo" Rein that plunged into the ocean off Virginia.

The search was suspended at sunset "pending further developments," said Coast Guard Lt. Gene Brooks. He said the search would be resumed only if more debris was sighted or the search area was expanded.

No new clues were offered Saturday to help explain the mysterious flight of the twin-engine Cessna 441 that carried its pilot and Rein to the crash site 100 miles east of here — 1,000 miles from where they were headed.

"We had no sightings (of debris) at all today," Brooks said. "We have five or six coverages (of the search area) yesterday and three complete coverages today with two aircraft and one vessel."

Brooks said Coast Guard officials believe an aluminum wheel sighted Friday night by a Norwegian ship 100 miles east of Cape Henry "definitely belonged to the aircraft, after talking to the owner."

However, the Coast Guard was unable to recover the wheel because of 11-foot seas in the 900-square-nautical-mile search area.

A Coast Guard C-130 plane spotted two three-foot-long pieces of orange tubular piping Friday night, which also couldn't be recovered because of rough seas. However, Brooks said it was thought to be less likely that the tubing belonged to the Cessna.

A Pan American Airlines flight near the Cessna made a weak radio contact with the plane at that time, but Federal Aviation Administration officials were unable to describe that conversation Saturday.

After that, all radio contact was lost. The Air Force Rescue Center at Scott Air Force Base in Illinois was notified and stations across the country began to track the plane by radar.

Air National Guard and Air Force planes were sent up from Seymour Johnson Air Base near Goldsboro, N.C., and then Langley Air Force Base in Hampton, Va. in an attempt to intercept the wayard Cessna.

By that time, about midnight, the pilots said the plane was flying in a straight line at 40,000 feet to 41,500 feet.

Notes

Boat owners will have an easier time this year registering their boats thanks to a new law enacted by the General Assembly in 1979.

The new law, which went into effect January 1, 1980, allows owners to renew their boat's certificate of number at local agents as well as through the mail.

To renew registrations locally, boat owners must present the renewal certificate they received in the mail from the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission (NCWRC) to an approved agent.

The fee for registering a boat through an agent is the same as through the mail — $5.50 annually or $13 for a three-year period.

Wildlife watch, a public awareness program created by sportsmen and designed to enroll citizen help in controlling wildlife game law violators, is helping the NCWRC's enforcement efforts in 12 coastal counties, including Pitt County.

"Wildlife watch is an attempt to increase the public's awareness of the need for their help in controlling illegal night hunting and other wildlife game violations," said Tom Ford, organizer of the program and a member of the Lenoir County Wildlife Club, which is sponsoring the watch.

So far, over 100,000 stickers, which encourage citizens to report violators, have been printed and delivered to Wildlife Commission enforcement officers in 12 different counties. These include Beaufort, Carteret, Craven, Dulpin, Green, Jones, Lenoir, New Hanover, Onslow, Pamlico, Pender and Pitt.

Ford's primatry concern is firelighting of deer, the illegal practice of using lights at night to hunt deer.

"I certainly believe the toll on our deer each year from this is tremendous and the comments I have heard from hunters makes me believe they agree," he said.

Sportsmen are encouraged to contact the Commission through their toll-free number (1-800-662-7137) if they know of any game law violations.

Gurney Qualifies Seventh

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — The lines in Dan Gurney's handsome face are a little deeper and his hair is a little thinner, but the competitive drive is still burning bright 10 years after what ostensibly was his retirement from auto racing.

Darrell Waltrip, one of NASCAR's young lions, took the spotlight Friday, winning the pole position for today's Western 500, but it was Gurney who drew most of the interest as he got back on the Riverside International Raceway track for one more fling.

The 48-year-old Gurney, who lives in Newport Beach, Calif., shrugged off handling problems with his Chevrolet Monte Carlo and qualified seventh for the 37-car field with a one-lap average of 111.984 mph over the familiar 2.26-mile road course.

That was well back of Waltrip, the defending Western 500 champion who clocked a 113.404 lap. Cale Yarborough was right behind at 113.333, with Richard Petty and Bobby Allison also surpassing 113 mph to qualify for the second row.

Dale Earnhardt, last year's NASCAR Rookie of the Year, and Dave Marcis will be in the third row, followed by Benny Parsons and Gurney in the fourth row.

"As a racing fan, the whole idea of driving here appeals to me," Gurney said. "I've watched some old driver friends, like Jack Brabham, getting involved in racing again and I just felt this was a great opportunity."

Gurney, who has won five Western 500s, warmed up for this event with a two-day refresher stint at Bob Bondurant's racing school in Northern California.

"It was a strange feeling to be going up there on an airliner with my helmet in my hand," Gurney said. "All of a sudden the reality set in, but it felt good.

"I spent two days up there and Bob and I spent a lot of time just chasing each other over the race course. I would have been three seconds slower here, at least, without going up there."

Morning rains kept the Riverside closed, but 25 cars did manage to qualify for the race during a 1½-hour session that barely beat the darkness Friday. The only mishap was a spinout by Neil Bonnett, whose brakes locked in turn No. 5. However, he didn't hit anything and continued on into the pits.

The rest of the field for today's race was to be filled in a qualifying session yesterday.

Waltrip, who finished just seven points behind Petty in the 1979 Winston Cup competition, still feels some disappointment over the slow finish last year that cost him the NASCAR driving title.

"I couldn't wait for the year to end because we wanted to come back and correct our mistakes that we made late in the year. We gave away several races we should have won," he added. "Call it pressure, call it what you want, but we're ready to do it the right way this time around."

Yarborough, who had a disappointing year in 1979 after becoming the first man ever to win three consecutive NASCAR driving championships, also was excited about the start of the new season.

"You'd like to sit on the pole every race, but we've still got 30 to go," the veteran driver said. "Everything just felt good out there. Our whole team is flying high and we're really ready for this year.

"And actually, last year wasn't all that bad," he added. "A lot of other teams would like to have had the year we had in 1979. But we didn't have a lot of luck. Maybe this time around, things will be different."

McKnight Leads ECU Gymnasts

HARRISONBURG, Va. — East Carolina University's Susan McKnight captured a share of first place in the floor exercises, but the Pirates failed in their big to capture a four-way meet at James Madison University Friday night.

The hosting Lady Dukes took first place with a 122.15 total, just edging out the University of Maryland, which finished second with 121.35. East Carolina was close behind in third with 117.90, followed by Memphis State with 115.25.

McKnight had the highest finish of any of the Lady Pirates, getting an 8.4 grade in her floor exercises to tie her for the title with Ann Auxier of Memphis State. Cindy Rogers finished third for the Pirates with an 8.3 grading.

Kim Lowe took second place in the vault with a score of 8.1, while Susan Lawrence finished third with an 8.05 score. Carol Layton placed third in the balance beam with a grade of 7.6. Lisa Redfern led the Pirate scoring in the uneven bars with a 6.9, but was not in the top ten.

Rogers, with an overall grade of 29.40 finished fifth in the all-around competition.

Panthers Slip Past Falcons

PIKEVILLE — North Pitt's Reginald Knight won the battle and his Panthers won the war as the visiting North Pitt unit outlasted C.B. Aycock in Eastern Carolina Conference basketball action here Friday night, 51-46.

Knight poured in 23 points, one field goal more than Falcon counterpart Berry Uzzell, who collected 21, as the Panthers used the second and third periods to pull away from the stubborn Falcon unit.

In the opener of the conference twinbill, the Pant-HERS fell to the Falconettes, 52-43.

C.B. Aycock earned a one point advantage at the close of the initial frame, 12-11, only to see that slim lead evaporate into a six-point deficit at the close of the first half, as the visiting Panthers bucketed 16 points to the Falcons' 9. The Panthers increased their margin to 12 points at the close of the third frame as they outscored the home team, 18-12, for a 45-33 lead heading into the final stanza. The Falcons buckled down and tallied 13 points to North Pitt's six in the fourth period, but still fell six points short.

Knight led all scorers with his 23 and was the only Panther to tally in double digits. Uzzell was joined by teammate Alex Speight in double figures as he knocked in 14 in the losing cause.

C.B. Aycocks Falconettes outscored the Pant-HERS in the last three periods to register the nine point 52-43 conference win.

After falling behind by three at the end of the first quarter, 12-3, the Falconettes doubled North Pitt's output in the second quarter, scoring 12 points to the Pant-HERS' six, giving the homeistanding C.B. Aycock unit a 21-18 locker room lead.

The Falconettes padded their lead with a 14-point third period-performance, bettering North Pitt's 10-point effort. Aycock turned in its best eight-minute total in the final frame, tallying 17 points, while the Pant-HERS rallied for 15 points.

C.B. Aycock placed three players in double figures, with Braswell leading the flock with 17. A. Lancaster sank six field goals for 12 points and Summerlan added 10 for the Falconettes. Carolina Best, with 14, and Geanette, with 10, paced the visiting Pant-HER unit.

NBA Title Match: Cowens Vs. Rollins

By The Associated Press

If the World Boxing Association and World Boxing Council can't agree on a heavyweight champion, maybe they ought to match Dave Cowens of the Boston Celtics (6-foot-8½, 225 pounds) and Wayne "Tree" Rollins of the Atlanta Hawks (7-1, 235).

The two National Basketball Association giants went at it Friday night during the first period of the Celtics' 108-93 victory game over Boston. Both were ejected after exchanging solid punches.

"He was racing down the lane and gave me an elbow," said Cowens, who had a cut over an eye. "I couldn't let him get away with that."

The man who really hurt the Hawks, was Rick Robey, Cowens' backup, who scored 22 points as the Celtics boosted their home record to 18-1 and avenged their only setback in Boston Garden, a 120-92 rout at the hands of the Hawks last month. The Celtics' overall 32-10 mark is the best in the NBA.

"It was a good challenge, especially against the only team that has beaten us here this year," said Robey, who also pulled down 10 rebounds. "When Dave went, I knew it was going to be a long night.

"For a couple of minutes in the second half, the legs got a little rubbery. Then I got my second wind. All it amounted to was 10 guys playing together, and with confidence."

"Robey and I talked about a situation like that just this week," said Coach Bill Fitch. "The responsibilities of the guy coming in are (1) rebound, (2) play defense and (3) score, in that order."

In other action, the Philadelphia 76ers trimmed the Washington Bullets 119-106, the Seattle SuperSonics downed the Utah Jazz 100-90, the Los Angeles Lakers crushed the Detroit Pistons 123-100, the Indiana Pacers shaded the Chicago Bulls 110-105, the San Antonio Spurs beat the Cleveland Cavaliers 116-109, the Kansas City Kings flattened the Denver Nuggets 112-99, the Milwaukee Bucks nipped the New York Knicks 109-107, the Portland Trail Blazers whipped the New Jersey Nets 128-107 and the San Diego Clippers edged the Golden State Warriors 116-112.

76ers 119, Bullets 106

Julius Erving was one of seven Sixers in double figures with 23 points. It was the eighth triumph in the last nine games and 18 of 22 for the 76ers, who ran away from the Bullets in the second half. Greg Ballard scored 31 points, his season high, as the Bullets lost for the first time in five games and failed in their effort to reach .500 for the first time since Nov. 24.

SuperSonics 100, Jazz 90

Seattle won behind Gus Williams' 29 points and a defensive performance that held Utah scoreless for a five-minute stretch in the fourth quarter. Williams' 18-foot jumper with 53 seconds left in the third quarter gave Seattle the lead for good at 74-72. Utah led for most of the first three periods. They outrebounded Seattle and shot well until the Sonics rallied down the stretch.

Lakers 123, Pistons 100

A crowd of 28,146 turned out in Detroit to watch former Michigan State star Earvin Johnson of the Lakers make his only appearance in Michigan this season. The Lakers took a 36-23 lead at the end of the first quarter and coasted to the triumph behind Jamaal Wilkes' 27 points. Spencer Haywood, a former University of Detroit star, scored 25 points while Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 23. Johnson was hobbled by a groin pull but scored 13 points before sitting down.

Pacers 110, Bulls 105

Former Bull Mickey Johnson scored 28 points and rookie Dudley Bradley made two key steals and hit two fourth-quarter layups as Indiana beat Chicago. With Chicago ahead 92-91, Johnson scored 6 straight points and Johnny Davis added two.

Spurs 116, Cavaliers 109

George Gervin scored 38 points as San Antonio posted its third consecutive victory and moved within three games of Central Division leading Atlanta. Gervin scored only 4 points in the final period but James Silas and Larry Kenon picked up the slack with 10 apiece. Silas finished with 23 points and Kenon added 21. Randy Smith led the Cavaliers with 36 points.

Kings 112, Nuggets 99

Reserve Bill Robinzine scored 18 points in 29 minutes, helping carry Kansas to its 15th victory in 19 games. Denver has lost four in a row and 14 straight on the road. The Nuggets pulled within 90-87 with just over eight minutes to go but Robinzine popped in two turnaround jumpers, Ernie Grunfeld hit from the baseline and Robinzine and Scott Wedman connected to cap a 10-0 spurt. Wedman led scorers with 27 points.

Bucks 109, Knicks 107

Junior Bridgeman scored 13 fourth-quarter points, including a decisive three-point play with 21 seconds remaining. After the Knicks took a 107-106 lead with 45 seconds to play, Bridgeman missed a jump shot but teammate Marques Johnson collected the rebound and passed to Bridgeman, who put up a jump shot. New York's Bill Cartwright was called for goaltending and Bridgeman, who was fouled by Michael Ray Richardson, added the free throw for the final margin.

Clippers 116, Warriors 112

Lloyd Free scored 16 of his 39 points in the third quarter while teammate Brian Taylor scored 26, including three three-point goals. Swen Nater chipped in with 16 points and 17 rebounds.

SILAS LIKES ROAD

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The crack guard of the San Antonio Spurs, James Silas, says he prefers playing on the road rather than at home.

"At home, the fans expect you to be perfect," Silas said. "On the road they don't expect too much. If talent is equal, there is much more pressure on the home team. I like road games. It's easier to get rest on the road. When I'm home, everyone comes by and there are always so many things to do."

The sleds in The Luge, a Winter Olympic test, move at more than 70 mph.

Rampants Nip Fike Matmen

Rose High School's wrestlers gained three early victories by forfeits and went on to take a 39-26 victory over Wilson Fike Friday night.

The Rampants won eight of the 13 weights, adding two pins to the forfeits for 30 of their points. Fike took one of their five wins by a pin and got another six points with a disqualification win.

The win moved the Rose record to 4-6, and they travel to Wilson Hunt on Tuesday.

Summary:

100: Dennis Kilcoyne (R) won by forfeit.
107: James Moseley (R) won by forfeit.

PLAN YOUR HOME

The Baltic

Ranch Style Arranged For Easy Living

By Jerry Bishop

Covering only 1560 square feet of living space, this rustic ranch plan, the Baltic, is thoughtfully designed to accommodate the many activities of a large family. The plan includes family room and terrace, two full baths, and plentiful storage space.

Brick and stone siding blend with the shake shingle roof, and shutters add a traditional charm to the facade. Introduced by the covered front porch, the floor plan takes shape in the closet-lined foyer.

At the right of the foyer, the well-proportioned living room welcomes family and friends and connects to kitchen and family room for everyday use. The bordering kitchen stresses efficiency and informality and chooses a U-shaped pattern opening to the dining area.

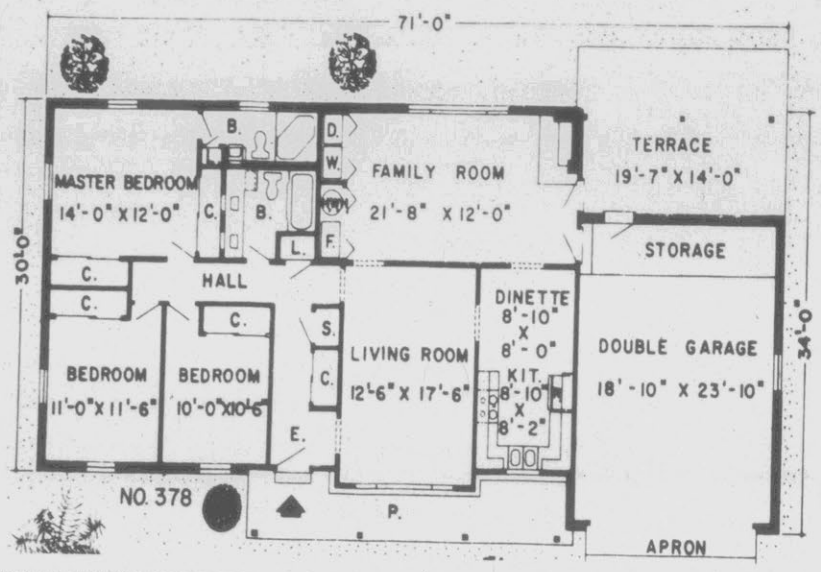

Extending over 21 feet, the family room creates a delightful work-and-play area. Handy niches for laundry equipment and utilities edge one side of the room, while a cheery wood-burning fireplace is nestled in the opposite corner. To extend family fun outdoors, the family room connects to the spacious terrace, bordered by and accessible to the garage storage area for keeping lawn furniture and garden tools close at hand.

Besides the garae storage area, a substantial amount of space, the design also calls for a generous sprinkling of closets throughout the home. Bedroom closets are large, and the master bedroom merits two, and linen, storae, and coat closets edge the hallways.

Three full-sized bedrooms make up the sleeping wing of the Baltic. Isolated for maximum privacy, the master bedroom furnished a full bath, while another full bath with double sinks borders the living areas.

The double garage is supplied with a direct entry to the home, into the family room, and access to the terrace.

Interior painting and exterior painting have a number of things in common, the most important of which is the necessity of proper surface preparation. In either case, prepare the surface and you are halfway to a good result.

For interior painting, the walls and ceiling must be free of loose dirt, peeling paint, oil and grease. The easiest way to remove loose dirt is with a vacuum-cleaner attachment or a dry mop, with emphasis on the word dry. Oil, grease, etc., can be taken off with an odorless paint thinner or detergent. Loose paint should be scraped and any cracks or holes filled with patching plaster or spackling compound.

Where gloss or semigloss enamels have been used in kitchens and bathrooms and on woodwork, the gloss should be dulled with sandpaper or with de-glossing liquids available from your paint dealer, since paint will not adhere well to slick surfaces. If wax has been used on the woodwork, this, too, must be removed, preferably with a wax remover. If you decide to use any kind of paint thinner, be sure there is plenty of ventilation and that you do not smoke while working.

Most walls and ceilings are painted these days with rollers, although some persons still prefer brushes. Either brushes or edging rollers are used where walls and ceilings meet.

In painting window sashes, start with the vertical members, then the horizontals, then the sash frames. Follow with the sash tracks, then the casings, beginning with the top sections. Paint the edges first and then the face surfaces, ending with the sills. After that, paint the doors; first, the casings, then the door edges that swing toward the rooms being painted. Paint the baseboards last.

Oil-base paints are durable, highly resistant to staining and damage, can withstand frequent scrubbings and give good one-coat coverage. Many latex paints are advertised as having similar properties. The main advantages of latex are easier application, faster drying and simpler tool cleanup. The brushes, rollers and other equipment can be cleaned with soap and water. Paints usually come in three finishes — gloss, semigloss and flat. Glossy finishes are easy to clean. Flat finishes reduce glare but become dirty more easily. Semiglosses have properties of both glossy and flat finishes, with both oil and latex paints available in all three types.

(Kinds of paints for different surfaces, step-by-step procedures and techniques for the use of brushes and rollers are explained in Andy Lang's booklet, "Paint Your House Inside and Out," available by sending 50 cents PLUS a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743.)

Here's the Answer

Q. — We moved into a very old house recently. The back rim of the bathtub is separated from the ceramic tile on the wall, not much but enough to be noticeable. What caused this, and is there anything that can be done about it?

A. — According to American Standard Association specifications, tub hangers or special installation hooks must be used in certain types of tub installations. When such hangers are not used — and they were not required many years ago — drying out of the floor joists causes the tub to settle just a bit, creating the space you mentioned. The fault, therefore, lies in the tub installation and has nothing to do with the tiles. Dig out all the caulking or cracked grout between the tub and tiles and start afresh. Make sure the joint is thoroughly cleaned and dry, then recaulk. Many good, non-shrinkable new caulks are on the market and are available in caulking tubes.

Q. — What does the designation "closed coat" mean on the label around a package of sandpaper?

A. — Close-coated sandpaper means the mineral particles on the backing are close together. This type of paper is used for most general sanding. An open coating means the particles on the backing are spaced far apart. This allows the sanded material to fall free without clogging the sandpaper which can therefore be used for removing paint or working on old finishes or gummy surfaces.

Q. — I used a wood filler on some oak furniture a few years ago and got a good result, but I can't remember now whether I used a sealer before putting on the varnish. Is a sealer necessary?

A. — Yes. It prevents the possibility of the finishing material, varnish or anything else, dislodging the filler from the wood pores. The sealer can be shellac or any other sealer recommended by your dealer after you explain to him exactly how it is to be used. It is vital that the filler be 100 percent dry before applying the sealer. To be certain of this, allow at least twice as much time for the drying as recommended. Thus, if the label on the can of paste filler says it is the 12-hour drying type, wait 24 hours before putting on the sealer. When the sealer is dry, sand it with a very fine grade of sandpaper, using a light touch. The surface is then ready for the final finish.

(The techniques of using wood filler, varnish, lacquer, shellac, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 50 cents PLUS a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Carefully Store Leftover Wine

ST. HELENA, Calif. (UPI) — Leftover table wine keeps better and longer if you store it properly, says winemaker Louis P. Martini.

White wine in a partially filled bottle or jug can be refrigerated several days without significant change in quality, but red wine leftovers are best decanted right away into screw-top containers just large enough to hold the beverage, and then capped tightly.

Air space left between the surface of the wine and the cap not only destroys the wine's bouquet and aroma, Martini says, it may also turn the wine into vinegar.

The winemaker recommends using a plastic funnel to decant wines into smaller containers and plastic caps to seal them.

Q. How can I get rid of creeping charlie in my lawn? (M.C., Raleigh)

A. Spray the weed with the amine form of 2,4-D, dicamba or a combination of the two. Then correct the reason the grass thinned and allowed the creeping charlie to invade your lawn. (Carl Blake, extension agonomist)

Q. Gnats that look like tiny, dark mosquitoes are hovering around my potted plants and crawling in the potting mix. Will they damage my plants? What can be done about them? (D.S., Chapel Hill)

A. Several species of fungus gnats infest the potting mix of ornamental plants. Adult fungus gnats lay their eggs in the mix. The tiny maggots which hatch soon start feeding on fungi, then on rootlets and larger roots as they grow. The maggots may eventually tunnel inside the main stem of your plants. Use malathion liquid concentrate, two teaspoons per gallon of water. Drench thoroughly and retreat in seven to 10 days. (James R. Baker, extension entomologist)

Q. I placed some Golden Delicious apples in the refrigerator back in September and within two months they have shriveled considerably. Shouldn't they keep longer than this? (S.C., Thomasville)

A. Yes. Golden Delicious is hard to beat for a home orchard, but it has a thin skin. To store apples at home, place them in a plastic container, like a bread wrapper, with a moist paper towel. Seal the container and place it in the refrigerator. You should be able to keep apples this way about six months if you start with good, solid fruit. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticulturist)

Q. What can be done to get more plummage on my pampas grass? (J.V., Southern Pines)

A. Stick with female plants and keep them happy. It is the female clumps of pampas grass that produce the graceful, fruiting plumes. Male plants are not necessary since you are not trying to produce viable seed. Ask for female plants when you purchase pampas grass from a nursery. Select clumps that have plumes when you are propagating pampas grass by root division. Pampas grass grows best in full sun with medium to high fertility and low to medium moisture. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Buying a home and obtaining a loan to finance it involves the execution of a series of documents to formalize and complete the purchase. When a family has selected the home it wants to buy, the seller usually requires the buyer to sign a sales contract. Between the execution of the contract and the closing, the property will often have to be appraised, evidence of title obtained and a survey made if establishment of property lines is necessary. At the time the closing takes place, the note and mortgage will need to be signed and the deed conveying title to the buyer will be executed and then recorded.

Woodstove Hot Market Item; They Vary Widely

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Once upon a time, owning a woodstove was all the evidence necessary to indicate you were a rugged individualist living in the backwoods.

Today, you could own a woodstove and be from anywhere.

The energy crisis and the high cost of home heating have helped make woodstoves status symbols for suburbanites and city dwellers. The number of woodstoves has escalated to the hundreds.

And the look of stoves can vary widely. Some models closely resemble the old, 19th-century Franklin stoves. Others look like miniature furnaces.

The popularity of woodstoves is not hard to fathom when you realize they are far more efficient producers of heat from wood than fireplaces. The newer, airtight models are capable of heating a home efficiently without any additional source of heat.

On a scale of 100, for example, fireplaces could register at zero while a properly installed woodstove could be extracting as much as 80 percent of the total combustion energy available in the wood.

Fireplaces, it has been shown, actually draw already-heated, warm air from the room up the chimney to provide combustion for a burning log. To maximize the amount of heat delivered, it would be necessary to install an airtight woodstove.

For a family that already has a fireplace and a chimney, installing a woodstove is quite simple. It's merely a matter of buying the stove and hooking it up to the chimney.

If there is no fireplace, a stove must be installed with proper clearance from combustible walls and a chimney and flue must be built.

People who object to losing the pleasure of watching an open fire can opt for a combination stove and fireplace unit, known as a combi-stove, which, though airtight when the doors are closed, allows for viewing the fire through open doors when the occasion warrants it.

Among other advantages of a stove over a fireplace is that it uses fewer logs, burning for as long as 12 to 14 hours on one load of wood. A number of the newer models are capable of taking either wood or coal as fuel. And a few models convert to oil heat as well.

Many wood stoves are used primarily for heating; others are used primarily for cooking. But some stoves combine the two functions in one unit.

Prices for stoves vary widely, depending on the size of the unit, the ease of cleaning it, heating capacity and durability. One dealer estimated that the prices range from a little over $100 to about $1,000. The majority of stoves appear to be in the $300 to $600 range, he said, not including installation.

The question of whether to purchase a steel or a cast-iron stove is debated on both sides. Each material has its adherents. But most authorities agree that cast-iron stoves are longer-lasting and less subject to the warping that plagues steel stoves. In all cases, the better stoves are lined with firebrick to protect them from deformation in the case of steel or cracking in the case of cast iron.

Although there are many American woodstoves, this is one product line where imports have achieved major distribution. The European stoves, which often feature a raised design and bright, porcelain-enameled colors, have attracted many consumers.

No matter what kind of stove is used, the importance of proper chimney maintenance cannot be overemphasized. Creosote deposits are more likely to build up inside the chimney with woodstove operation than they are under normal fireplace usage. Consequently, switching to a woodstove is likely to lead to a fire hazard unless more attention is paid to maintaining a clean chimney.

Before making a final purchasing decision, it is wise to consult several retailers and to do some reading on your own.

One of a number of books on woodstoves is "Modern and Classic Woodburning Stoves," by Bob and Carol Ross (Overlook Press, 1976).

Soft Water In Washer Saves

LOMBARD, Ill. (UPI) — Soft water can reduce the cost of washing supplies as much as 50 percent, according to the Water Quality Association.

"When water is hard, it interferes with the cleaning action of soaps and detergents and larger amounts are needed," a researcher for the association said. "Even with the larger amounts, results are not as good as when there is no hardness present. Deposits are left that make fabrics stiff and harsh, and colors appear faded or streaked."

Curled Shingles A Bad Signal

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Roof shingles with curled edges may mean the beginning of the end for a homeowner's roof.

Curled shingles, says Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., a shingle manufacturer, can allow water to penetrate and damage the roof of a home.

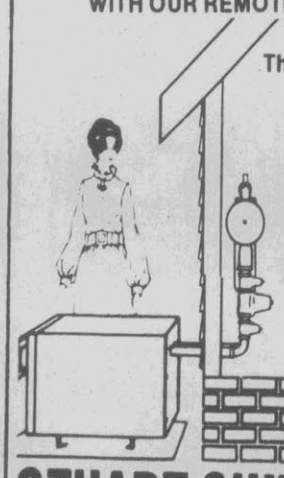

Shingles curl when they get old and lose their elasticity, the firm says. Curling can be the first indication that the roof should be replaced.

"Brick is better."
Ask the experts.

It saves maintenance.
Wood rots, burns, splits and warps. And it needs repainting or staining about every 2 years. That means wood continues to cost you money. Forever. Sanford brick doesn't.

And energy.
Wood siding is a very poor insulator. Brick is a good insulator. That's why, when you build with Sanford brick, you not only save substantially on the cost of fuel and electricity but you can also temperature control your home with a smaller heating and cooling unit. And, if you build with insulated brick cavity walls, you can reduce your heating bill by 28% and your cooling bill up to 9%.

And pest damage.
Wood invites termites, pine borers, woodpeckers, carpenter ants, etc. Sanford brick is pest-proof. A lot of wood home owners wish they had thought of that.

Here's the beauty part.
Sanford Handcraft brick styles give you all the savings plus a truly beautiful home. They come in a wide range of colors and textures that recreate the mellow warmth and dignity of old landmarks. You'll find one just right for your building project.

And the final payoff.
Brick homes always maintain a higher resale value than wood homes of comparable size. And their values appreciate faster.

If you're thinking of building with wood siding, you should get all the facts first. For more information, call or write your nearest brick expert.

Today's Peace Corps Regaining Lost Recognition

By PATRICK J. KILLEN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the tropics of Africa, the energy crisis comes down to being able to afford enough firewood to cook dinner.

"It costs more to heat the pot than to fill it," say the women of Mali.

"It is such a problem in countries like Mali and Senegal that 20 to 25 percent of a person's income is spent on firewood," said Peace Corps Director Richard Celeste.

There are estimates the tropical forests will be exhausted in 60 years. The shortage and high cost of firewood are a problem the Peace Corps is helping overcome by organizing village wood lots and introducing fast growing trees.

"We have volunteers both in Mali and Upper Volta who have designed stoves that are very cheap, easily replacable, and reduce by 50 percent the firewood needed to cook," Celeste said.

Celeste, a vigorous, shirt-sleeved administrator, said energy is one of "the global survival skills" he expects Peace Corps volunteers to be involved in over the next 10 to 20 years.

"Energy, water supply and food, those three along with raw materials will be the stuff about which we struggle and contend, and that's where the volunteers are (and will be) working," he said.

Founded in 1961 by President John F. Kennedy, the Peace Corps has sent some 72,000 volunteers abroad to more than 65 countries to do such things as help teach health education in Micronesia and work on modernizing roads in Morocco.

Volunteers are trained in local languages and customs, and sent off to live among villagers and city dwellers for at least two years and at modest pay.

For all the brave dreams of the 1960s, by the mid 1970s the Peace Corps had little visibility at home.

"I think it was frankly intentional," Celeste said. "I think in the Nixon years, particularly during the latter days of the Vietnam War when volunteers tended to be outspokenly critical, there was a decision to make the Peace Corps anonymous. When the Carter administration came in, they didn't even have Peace Corps letterheads."

Celeste believes the Peace Corps is regaining some of its lost recognition through $23 million in television spot advertisements and enthusiastic recruiting on college campuses and in community centers.

"For the Peaces Corps to be vital, it has to be visible," Celeste said. "People have to know there is a real opportunity for Peace Corps service, to be able to think about it as a real option."

A JOB FOR VOLUNTEERS — Peace Corps director Richard Celeste says that "energy, water supply and food, along with raw materials will be the stuff about which we struggle and contend, and that's where the volunteers will be working." (UPI Photo)

Another adverse trend that Celeste said is being turned around is the reduction of countries taking volunteers. "We now have volunteers back in Tanzania for the first time since the early 1970s," he said.

Celeste predicted "two or three new countries would ask for volunteers in the course of 1980, joining the 60 other nations and territories where the Peace Corps currently operates.

Celeste sees the Peace Corps becoming more international with Americans working along with volunteers from other other countries "because that is the way we will all do business in the Third World in the 1980s."

In the mid 1960s, about 60 percent of the volunteers were teachers, many teaching English. Today, teachers make up about 25 percent and they are involved in a much broader range of activities.

Celeste, former lieutenant governor of Ohio, ran for the top spot in 1978 but narrowly lost to incumbent John Rhodes. In March, 1979, he accepted the Peace Corps job.

The 6-foot-4 Celeste, 42, graduated magna cum laude from Yale in 1959, and was a Rhodes scholar at Oxford, pursuing African studies at both schools. In 1963, he worked for the Peace Corps as a staff liaison officer before joining Ambassador Chester Bowles as his staff assistant in India, a job he held for four years.

Celeste returned to Cleveland in 1967 and joined the National Housing Corp., a small firm specializing in housing for senior citizens. He was elected lieutenant governor in 1974 after serving two terms in the legislature.

He and his Austrian-born wife Dagmar have six children. The family still lives in Cleveland and Celeste does a lot of commuting.

"For the Peace Corps, I will do that," Celeste said.

"I love it. It is an irrestible challenge."

Sargent Shriver, the first Peace Corps director, said Celeste "will need the help of all who cherish the ideals of the Peace Corps. But with their help, he may well be able to recapture the early idealism and enthusiasm of the Peace Corps at its best."

Alistaire Cooke: Kind Observer Of Americans

By JAMES J. DOYLE

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — Alistair Cooke, who has been reporting on America to Britain and much of the rest of the world for 34 years, has developed a unique perception for all things American.

The urbane interlocutor of public television's "Masterpiece Theater," whose "Letters From America," are a weekly radio spot on the BBC, has compiled 50 of the best of his weekly reports over a 10-year period into a book.

It's "The Americans," published by Alfred A. Knopf.

The talks, ranging from Watergate to Christmas in Vermont, to portraits of Duke Ellington, Earl Warren and others, were transcribed slightly for the eye, rather than the ear. Each of them was originally a 13-minute, 45-second talk over the BBC, heard in this country only via shortwave radio.

On a recent warm winter afternoon, Cooke sat in his hotel suite and told how he rattles the skeletons in our national closets with humor, a removed concern, an occasional incision into the body politic and, always, immaculate phrasing.

"Obviously, I've spent time on this — years," he said, "and I'm constantly experimenting. The idea is to give the impression that you're in a room with a friend, and sometimes you're reaching for words.

"But the greatest compliment I've ever been given is, people will say, 'How do you sit in front of a microphone and just talk for 13½ minutes without a script?'

Cooke is a fast writer, "and I don't start until about two hours before I go to the studio. These things are all done that way. Mostly, I don't have the slightest idea of what I'm going to talk about.

"I use to take notes, or think about it during the week," he said, "but at some point, I can't remember when, I found myself talking to the typewriter — which I would not do if I were writing for the (Manchester) Guardian, or some other sophisticated newspaper.

"Gradually it struck me that the great thing is to trust your unconscious and you tap it."

Cooke has for many years been a naturalized American citizen, but he sees this country, its people, customs and mores with more objectivity than home-grown writers.

"Not being born here," he said, "has a great deal to do with it. It means you never suppress anything, the little things. It simply is the persistence of vision."

Literary and historical allusions sparkle through his conversation as they do his radio talks and writing. They put commonplace ideas into focus and add dimension to his imagery.

He talked of a World War II era broadcaster: "When he came on, talking about a farm bill, he sounded like Lady Macbeth. He was a marvelous talker, but he didn't have a metaphor in his cape. He wasn't metaphorical. I am.

"Metaphors are capsule pictures. I contend you can interest anybody in anything if you have a vivid imagination and produce metaphors, or can paint it very quickly at the scene. And you must also have timing.

"This is literature for the blind — how you paint the picture. I don't care if you're doing Iran or talking about growing tulips. The people who have been good at it have been the people who sound as if they are telling you, in a room, something that excites them, or concerns them or moves them. It's this business of talking to the typewriter. It's free association."

Cooke has been telling Great Britain and the rest of the world via shortwave radio about the Iran crisis, among other things, and he described our national unity during this period.

"I did say the national unity comes from a unity of impotence, of not knowing what the hell to do, and that's why the other candidates have kept their traps shut.

"What I've tried to show is the complexity of any easy answer," he said. "There's nothing you can do with food unless you cut off Europe and everyone else.

"The Russians are loving this because, you see, they are saying an outrageous thing. They are putting out in their papers that we are intensifying the crisis that could spill over into war.

A Public Health Problem In Compulsive Gambling

By ANN LO LORDO

PIKESVILLE, Md. (UPI) — The lawyer nervously watched the clock during his disbarment hearing. Beads of sweat slid down his face. Legal debate dragged on — as post time at Pimlico Race Course drew near.

Edward Moran (not his real name) had admitted embezzling $4,000 from a high school parents' group while he was its treasurer. He needed the money to support his gambling habit. What more did they need for a verdict?

"You might say my future was being weighed, and all I could think of was, 'I wish this would get over. I'm going to miss the first race,'" said Moran.

His disbarment didn't keep him from the betting windows at Pimlico, the home of the Preakness. Neither did the forced sale of his suburban Baltimore home.

"The compulsive gambler begs, borrows and steals. What he'll do to get money is beyond the limit," said Dr. Robert Politzer, director of the state-funded compulsive gambling center. "The compulsive gambler does not choose to stop gambling; he stops when he's forced to."

Politzer and his staff opened the Maryland Compulsive Gambling Counseling Center in November 1979 to offer treatment to the estimated 1.1 million men and women nationwide who are addicted to betting on horses, sports teams, card games and just about anything else.

Most people who have entered the center's three-story clapboard house in the Baltimore suburb of Pikesville have been from Maryland — lawyers, car salesmen, restaurant workers, business executives.

They are bright, energetic, ambitious, charming — people who seemed destined to succeed until they crossed the line between a Saturday night poker player and a gambling addict.

Robert Custer, a psychiatrist with the Veterans Administration in Washington, said compulsive gambling is a mental behavioral disorder in which a person develops an emotional dependence on gambling to the point where it interferes with all normal functions.

"It's the high from placing the bet, from the action. The winning becomes secondary. We have people who bet $50 to $150 a day on the state lottery where the odds are 1,000 to 1 to win," said center counselor Joanna Franklin.

Through a program of peer counseling, professional therapy and communication workshops, Ms. Franklin said gamblers begin the essential, painful task of finding other ways to occupy their time. Lifestyle contracts are drawn up with short-and long-range goals. Gamblers are expected to meet them.

"We had one man whose diet consisted of bread and milk. He needed money for the track and in the process lost 54 pounds in four months," said Ms. Franklin.

The gambler was required to eat one full meal a day and later report to a staff counselor what he ate, she said.

The center's treatment program is modeled after the Gambling Anonymous therapy and programs used at VA hospitals in Ohio, Miami and New York. It is financed by a $98,900 grant from the Maryland Department of Health and Mental Hygiene.

Ms. Franklin said the center has received inquiries from California, Florida, the Midwest, New York and Tennesee. Addictions ranged from horse racing to sports betting to pinball and bingo.

Politzer said the tragedy of compulsive gambling is the ripple effect — the gambler's habit touches his family, employers and even the insurance company that must make good on embezzled money used to wager. At least seven people nationwide are affected by each gambler's habit, he said.

"Compulsive gambling is a public health problem," Politzer told a crowd when the center opened. "It's society's responsibility, since we gain a tremendous amount of revenue from legalized gambling, to care for its addicts."

Moran hasn't been to the track since his treatment at a Brecksville, Ohio, VA hospital in early 1978. But he expects to be a "lifetime member" of Gambling Anonymous.

Today the 25-year state employee attends at least two Gambling Anonymous meetings a week. He also participates in a weekly therapy group at Politzer's center and chats with other compulsive gamblers like Joe Delaney (also a fictitious name).

Delaney is a new arrival, a construction firm owner who has bet as much as $25,000 on a football game. Delaney's attorney pressured him to seek professional help because he is several hundred thousand dollars in debt.

Delaney, 43, doesn't know how he'll begin to turn his life around. He reclines on the couch in the center's comfortable living room, nervously chain smoking.

The Super Bowl is near. Delaney is a man who regularly bets sizable amounts of money on 12 professional games a week.

Asked if he knows how he'll fill the void, he shakes his head despairingly.

"I came because I wanted to quit and I couldn't do it myself," he said.

Librarian Wins Tango Trophies

By WILLIAM THOMAS
The Commercial Appeal

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Retired librarians who dislike the Marian the Librarian image may find a new life far from the maddening bookshelves — as a Tango Queen.

At least that's what Eva Lee Moore, 69, did. For almost 28 years, Mrs. Moore was head of the circulation department at a branch library. All that time, there wasn't a hint of what was coming. "I never danced a step in all those years," Mrs. Moore told a reporter.

She was everything a librarian was supposed to be — quiet, literate, soft-spoken, well-mannered and wrapped up in her family. She was married 27 years before her husband died in 1948.

"My husband didn't like to dance," she said. "But even if he had, there was no time. I was too busy with church activities, library work and the children."

For a genteel, white-haired Southern lady who'd passed her 66th birthday, taking up the tango was a daring step.

"I didn't know if I should start dancing or not," she said. "I don't have to answer to anybody but God and my daughter. But I kept asking myself, 'What will people say?' Well, a friend finally talked me into going to a New Year's Eve dance and, of course, nobody said anything."

Mrs. Moore not only discovered she was a dancer but she also found out she was a competitor. "I took some lessons and won a rhumba contest and then I came in second in a tango contest. That got me started."

She's won eight trophies, two silver plates and a handful of medals and ribbons. She competes against dancers 60 or older.

"These are the only trophies I've ever won of any kind. It's exhilarating and challenging. It's like the tango: you hit the floor stomping your feet and jerking your head and snapping your fingers."

Mrs. Moore earned the name Tango Queen when she won the tango competition in Houston last spring.

"This was the Pan-American competition and it was a mob scene," she said. "There were dancers there from 52 dance clubs west of the Mississippi. I competed in four events and it nearly killed me. I placed first in the tango, second in the rhumba and waltz and third in the cha-cha.

"There aren't too many who are going on 70. But there are more than you'd suspect. As far as I know, they are not especially afraid of falling down and breaking their hips. At that age, your problems are simpler than that. What you worry about is just catching your breath."

Minister Is Also Writer

By NANCY SHULINS
Associated Press Writer

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — In the early morning hours through much of 1975 while most of Evansville slept, a fantasy tale of Roosters and Hens, of a Dog and a Weasel, of good and evil, began to take shape.

Its author, pastor of the city's Grace Lutheran Church, hunched over his typewriter as he had off and on for most of his 31 years.

When he finished typing and hunching, the Rev. Walter Wangerin Jr. named his creation "The Book of the Dun Cow," and dropped it in the mail to a large New York publishing house.

He chose Harper & Row because its Junior Books Department editor, Joanne Ryder, had rejected his last manuscript "humanely," and because aspiring novelists tend to remember small acts of kindness.

What happened then caught the Evansville minister by surprise.

Harper & Row published the story in hardcover and asked for two more volumes about the Rooster and the Hens, the Dog and the Weasel.

The New York Times, in a children's book section, called it the best book of the year. Pocket Books paid $280,500 for reprint rights in what Harper & Row calls the largest paperback sale in the history of its Junior Books Department.

In November, 600,000 paperback copies took their places on bookstore racks throughout the country. And "The Book of the Dun Cow" began making big waves in literary circles.

All of which is fine with Wangerin. Splendid, in fact. It's just that literary circles aren't the ones in which he travels.

"If I had moved in those circles, perhaps I would have been able to analyze what's happened," says Wangerin, now 35.

"Maybe this came too late. If it had happened to me in graduate school, for instance, I could have said, 'Here comes the gravy train.'"

Instead, the man with the clear blue eyes and jutting jaw, the father of four who beat what editor Joanne Ryder calls "monumental odds," puffs thoughtfully on his pipe and says, "It's nice."

These days, Wangerin still gets up early, to work on the sequel to "The Book of the Dun Cow," to be published next fall. The rest of the day belongs to what he calls "my livelihood, my priority, my job" — Grace Lutheran Church and the 200 people who worship there.

The white minister's congregation is predominately black, but it's becoming more integrated. It's a change that pleases Wangerin.

Inside the modest brick church, the drop-ins who appear at Wangerin's cozy, dish-eveled office are greeted warmly by the lean, moustached minister, who stretches, smiles and surveys the clutter.

"I'm going to be here a long time," he says.

Wangerin's role as pastor is the latest in a series of careers in which he's lived the lives of a radio show producer, a migrant pea-picker, a ghetto youth worker, a lifeguard.

His restlessness has taken him from Oregon to Illinois, from North Dakota to Canada, from Wisconsin to Ohio, from Missouri to Indiana.

Behind him flutters a vast trail of typewritten words, of poems and parables, children's stories and sermons, novels and narratives.

His obsession with words started in childhood; his first novel, in eighth grade. He experimented with science fiction, poetry, short stories and essays, and wrote his autobiography at 23.

In time, he became a specialist in Medieval English literature, a translator of Greek, Latin, Anglo-Saxon and German, a Lutheran minister, and recently, an acclaimed author.

"The Book of the Dun Cow" is centered around a chicken coop animal kingdom and set in an ancient time when evil, in the form of a giant Wyrm, lay trapped in the center of the earth.

It has been described as "an allegorical fantasy rich in Christian meaning and tradition, pitting Dog, Rooster and other animals of the earth against monstrous evil."

Ms. Ryder, who edited the tale, says the odds of an unsolicited manuscript appearing in print are "more than a 1,000-to-1."

Some critics view the book as a fantasy, others as an adventure tale, and a few as a religious story.

But, while there's debate over what to label it, most agree that the book has more than one level — how many, its author won't say.

"Writing that works does not consider all the levels that it's on," Wangerin says. And like any true storyteller, he reveals his feelings in story form.

"Suppose I had made a mountain. Some people would go and paint it. Others might want to vacation at it. A few would try to climb it, and a goat might decide to live on it.

"It's the same way with a book. It's fully the property of the reader to find the level at which he wishes to stop."

HQ For Sports Medicine

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The American College of Sports Medicine has announced plans to build a $2 million headquarters here in 1981, joining five other national sports organizations that already make their home in this city.

The 52-year-old ACSM, with 7,000 member physicians, trainers and biochemists, emphasizes rehabilitation, training and injury prevention, and how sports affect the health of the typical individual.

Among the other sports institutions located here are the National Collegiate Athletic Association, National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, Track and Field Association of the U.S.A., and the International Cheerleading Association.

Financial Briefs

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Duke Power Company announced Friday that it will redeem 60,000 of the 2,400,000 outstanding shares of its 10.76 percent Preferred Stock A, 1975 Series, on March 16.

The shares will be redeemed at their par value of $25 per share and will be randomly selected on the basis of holders of record on Feb. 1.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Claude E. Pope announced Friday that he will resign as president of Cameron-Brown Co. to become head of AMIC Corp., effective Feb. 1.

James A. Abbott, 40, will succeed Pope as president and chief executive officer of Cameron-Brown, a Raleigh-based mortgage banking firm. Abbott is now head of the company's residential loan operations.

Pope, 45, will succeed William A. Granberry, AMIC's founder, as head of AMIC. Granberry will remain as chairman while Pope will be chief executive officer.

Granberry engineered the sale of AMIC last year to Merrill Lynch & Co. for about $90 million.

Pope had been on the AMIC board of directors for four years. He just completed a one-yea term as president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — First Union has reported record 1979 income before securities transactions of $24,145,000, up 24 percent from 1978.

Fourth quarter earnings were $6,851,000, up 6 percent from the similar period in 1978. The earnings marked the 14th consecutive quarter of earnings improvement over the same quarter of the previous year.

On a per share basis, income before securities amounted to $3.50 for the year and 99 cents for the quarter.

$674 For Gold In Hong Kong

HONG KONG (AP) — Gold prices shot to a record $674.54 in active trading today on the Hong Kong exchange, but slipped back to close at $655.29, a gain of $54.33 from Friday's close.

Gold prices peaked shortly after the market opened but fell back under pressure from profit-takers, dealers said. Hong Kong's previous record high trading price, $673.16, was posted last Monday.

Traders said Hong Kong gold prices were following the soaring spiral posted on the New York and European markets on Friday. Hong Kong is the only major gold market opened on Saturdays, when it does business for a half day.

Buy Land In Soul City

BALTIMORE (AP) — Perdue Inc. has bought 500 acres of land in Soul City, the controversial "new town" project in Warren County, N.C., for a new chicken-processing plant.

The purchase price was not disclosed.

Perdue also operates a processing plant at Lewiston, about 80 miles east of Soul City.

Thomas Shelton, a vice president of the Maryland-based firm, said the company was looking for land with a rail siding, good highway access, sewer and water facilities and the availability of labor, including farmers "that had an economic need" for its proposed $25 million feed mill, hatchery and processing plant.

Business Notes

EMPLOYEES HONORED

Two local employees of Carolina Telephone Co. were honored this month in recognition of their service tenures with the company.

Mrs. Bessie M. Reveal received a watch and service emblem in recognition of 25 years service, while David P. Tuten was presented an emblem for ten years of service.

Mrs. Reveal, a Greenville native, is a test deskman in the company's plant department here. She resides with her husband, Norman, at Quail Ridge and attends Trinity Free Will Baptist Church.

A Winterville native, Tuten is a central office repairman in the plant department. He resides with his wife, Gloria, and three children at 156 Tar Road and attends Temple Free Will Baptist Church.

NEW DIRECTOR

H.W. Wheless of Greenville was installed in Charlotte as a new director of the North Carolina Chapter of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers.

MANAGEMENT CHANGES

Sportsworld Inc. of Greenville announced three management changes.

Keith Beatty, director of operations, said that Tim Sikes has been promoted from assistant manager, Sportsworld of Raleigh, to manager, Sportsworld of Greenville; Charles Strader, manager of the Greenville facility, has been transferred to Sportsworld of Wilmington as manager; and Dennis Wilkerson has been transferred to Raleigh as manager.

Sportsworld currently owns and operates roller skating facilities in Greenville, Rocky Mount, Raleigh, Wilmington and Washington, N.C., and Myrtle Beach, S.C.

REDUCED ACTIVITY

Savings and loan associations in North Carolina experienced decreases in net savings inflows and lending activity during November, according to information reported to the Federal Home Loan Bank of Atlanta, the regional credit reserve bank for savings associations in the Southeast.

Net savings inflows during November amounted to $6.1 million compared with $47.4 million a year earlier. Gross inflows, which include new deposits and interest credited, totaled $359.2 million and were partially offset by withdrawals of $353.1 million.

Lending activity was also below the year-earlier level, it was reported. Mortgage loans made amounted to $127.7 million compared with $167.2 million in November of 1978.

BNC PROMOTION

John F. Kabas, executive vice president of The Bank of North Carolina N.A., Raleigh, announced that the bank has promoted Dennis W. Alexander to vice president and city executive in its Greenville office.

A native of Pitt County, Alexander joined BNC in 1969 as a management trainee and has held several positions throughout the bank's statewide system.

He is a graduate of Atlantic Christian College and has completed several American Institute of Banking courses.

Alexander is married to the former Linda Smith of Greenville.

DENNIS ALEXANDER

FIGURES IMPROVED

The Black and Decker Manufacturing Co. reported that sales during the fiscal year 1979 increased 26 percent to $1.2 billion from $959.9 million in 1978.

Company officials said that net earnings for 1979 amounted to $94.4 million, up 20 percent from $66.2 million in 1978.

Net earnings per share for the year were $2.25, according to the company, up 42 percent from $1.58 per share in 1978.

STOCK EQUITY

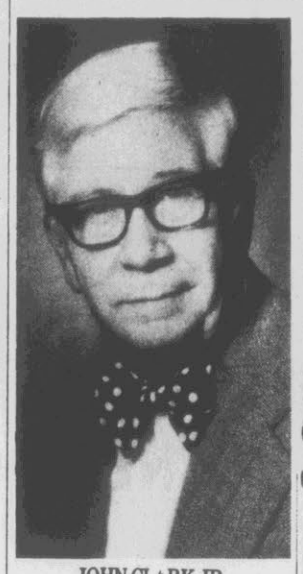

Ernest H. Holt II has acquired a 25 percent stock equity in Holt Oldsmobile Datsun of Greenville, according to E.H. Holt, president.

The president said that Ernest Holt II has held the position of vice president, general manager and membership on the board of directors since 1976.

He attended East Carolina University and General Motors Institute. The new stock owner is married to the former Lynn Massey of Greenville and they have one son.

The Greenville firm has been engaged in the sale, leasing and service of Oldsmobile and Datsun cars and trucks since 1967.

RETIREMENT NOTED

JOHN CLARK JR.

Blake C. Lewis Jr., vice president of Roy H. Park Broadcasting Inc. and general manager of WNCT-TV, announced the retirement of John G. Clark Jr., general sales manager of WNCT-TV, effective Jan. 31.

Clark was sales manager for WGTC-AM in Greenville which formed eastern North Carolina's first television station in December of 1953, Lewis pointed out.

Lewis said that Clark's broadcast career, spanning nearly 30 years, has been nationally recognized. Under Clark's direction, it was noted, WNCT-TV won first place for the most original advertising campaign for the Streitmann Bisquit Co., in competition with other stations throughout the nation.

Clark and his wife, Ariane, live in Greenville and have three children.

FIRMS ASSOCIATED

Two eastern North Carolina certified public accounting firms announced an association of the firms to provide expanded professional services in the area beginning Jan. 14.

The association of Pittard and Perry Inc., CPAs, and James C. Crone, CPA, PA, will have offices in Goldsboro, Williamston, Plymouth, Fayetteville, Mount Olive, Pinehurst and Raeford, it was announced.

More Folks Are Baking Bread In Their Homes

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Yeast baking has had its ups and downs in recent years.

It's way up now, for two reasons: inflation and people's interest in good nutrition and additive-free foods.

A national survey commissioned by The Pillsbury Co. in 1978 indicated 22 percent of the flour sold in retail stores was being used for yeast baking.

By November last year, two brands of bread flour had been reintroduced in retail stores nationwide, less than a decade after General Mills had withdrawn its bread flour after many years because sales were lagging.

Spokespersons for two smaller regional millers, Standard Milling Co. of Kansas City, Mo., and International Multifoods of Minneapolis, said they had no plans to introduce bread flours because their all-purpose flours had always been in the high-protein range preferable for yeast baking.

In New York City, Frank Goeckel, product manager for Fleischmann's Consumer Yeast, sees a tie between the baking boom and the economy. Goeckel thinks such do-it-yourself projects are among the few ways consumers have of fighting back against high prices.

He said yeast baking also increased sharply in 1973-74, "at the beginning of the energy crisis."

Sales leveled off in 1976-78, he said, then started up again last year. By the end of 1979, consumer yeast sales had grown 23 percent over the previous year, Goeckel added in an interview.

Mrs. Casella's The New Book of Breads (David White $9.95) is among four recently published on that subject. Hers and Mel London's Bread Winners (Rodale $14.95) are the most innovative of the lot. Both contain many ethnic and whole grain recipes as well as real originals for both yeast and quick breads: as examples, Italian pepper bread, Armenian peda, crumpets, peanut butter and jelly muffins, in the first, Norwegian lefse, cheese and pepper loaf and jalapeno corn bread in the second.

We especially like pumpkin cider bread from the London book and Mrs. Casella's yeast beer bread.

But two other recipes of hers we tried worked badly. The crunchy Italian loaves required almost twice as much flour as the recipe called for to produce a dough that could be kneaded, and the dough overflowed the pans. The onion garlic bread was unpleasantly salty, and slow to rise because of the quantity of salt: 1 tablespoon, when 1 teaspoon would have been enough in a recipe using only 2 cups of flour.

In a telephone interview, Mrs. Casella said all her recipes for this, her third baking book, were tested at an altitude of 4,000-4,500 feet, where flour requirements may be 2 to 3 cups less than they would be at lower elevations.

Altitude also affects leavening requirements for breads made with baking powder and baking soda.

And one major inconsistency in editing is confusing. Although she writes at least twice that she uses dried yeast exclusively, most of her recipes call for fresh cake yeast that is not as widely available and requires different handling than dried yeast.

The London book contains more than 200 recipes from nearly 50 contributors throughout the United States, most of them friends or acquaintances of the author, a documentary filmmaker. Many of the yeast recipes make three or four loaves. Extensive background on ingredients and baking utensils is excellent.

For beginners, however, we'd choose either Better Homes and Gardens All-Time Favorite Bread Recipes (Meredith $3.95) or Farm Journal's Complete Home Baking Book by the magazine's food editor, Elise W. Manning (Doubleday $14.95), with recipes selected and edited by Patricia A. Ward, associate food editor.

Drawings in the both are particularly instructive. And both feature a lot of sweet breads and other specialty breads that not only taste better when homemade but also are two to three times less expensive than their commercial counterparts.

Among the most useful features in the Farm Journal book are tips for handling ingredients and question-and-answer sections on common problems in baking. This book also has chapters of cake and cookie recipes.

'Warm' Colors Beat The Cold

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — If you want to feel warmer while turning down the thermostat to save expensive heating fuel, use "warmer" colors on your walls, suggests one leading paint manufacturer.

Peach tans, rose beiges and, in general, colors from the red, orange, or yellow families convey a feeling of warmth, according to Bonnie Pender of PPG Industries, manufacturer of Pittsburgh Paints. For actual heat conservation, the company recommends using on the outside of the house paints or stains which have good heat absorption. Colors like charcoal, dark browns and reds, and deep colors of all shades, have the quality of absorbing more of the sun's energy.

APPLICATION OF YELLOW VINYL SIDING. .completely changed the appearance of the exterior of Ray and Carol Ann Hardee's renovated farmhouse near Grifton. Better still, the siding will never need painting.

Hardee Dream House Becomes A Reality

Three years ago, Carol Ann and Ray Hardee were living with their three children in a charming red frame farm house near Grifton. The charm, however, did not compensate for the fact that they had outgrown the house.

They found themselves in the same dilemma as other young families. How could they obtain their dream house without spending a small fortune?

Considering their options, they decided that the possibility of adding on to their small home was not feasible.

And, even three years ago, the cost of building their dream house was staggering.

A third option was to renovate — somehow — a nearby house located on farmland they had purchased. The white frame home sat back from the road, its long drive lined with oak trees.

In the end, the Hardees decided that the $40,000 necessary to remodel the farmhouse would be more economical than constructing a new home with the same amount of floor space.

Their plans involved the challenge of converting the existing six-room house into a four-bath, five-bedroom home with an 18 by 30-foot great room, modern kitchen with eating area, an office-den, and laundry facilities.

The result was 3,000 square feet of practical living space, as well as the preservation of a 140-year-old home that had a tree-hewn foundation and eight-inch thick walls.

The renovation was largely the result of advice and plans drawn by Mrs. Sue B. May, Pitt County home economics agent, in cooperation with Mrs. Hardee.

The first priority in the project was removal of a downstairs wall, which allowed two rooms to become the great room. Hardee tackled this task himself. Then he and a friend built a nine-and-a-half-foot wide fireplace, using one of the studs from the knocked-out wall as the mantel.

As the renovation progressed, the Hardees discovered that the foundation of their house consisted of whole trees used lengthwise on top of cement blocks. The circumference of the trees measured, in most cases, from 15 to 20 inches. The original walls were constructed from trees cut with axes and put together with wooden pegs. In some places, the walls were eight inches thick.

When the professional contractor and his crew arrived, they moved the staircase from its position facing the front door, turned it around, and placed it at the opposite end of the great room. As a result, the stairs are now centrally located and the entrance is less cluttered in appearance.

The other major alteration in the downstairs portion of the original house was dividing a room adjacent to the great room into two separate but connecting baths, as well as a laundry facility.

In the master bedroom, new openings for the closet were necessary. A front bedroom, which serves as a guest bedroom, and the sixth original room, which is now Hardee's office, were left intact except for modernizing.

Removal of an L-shaped porch from the rear of the existing house left space to add a new wing, which included a modern kitchen and eating area, a bedroom for daughter Shannon, and another bath. The addition has an A-shaped roof that connects to the original dwelling.

Upstairs, removal of two flues left space to add bedrooms for sons Wesley, 12, and Ryan, 7, a roomy hall, and a bath. The addition of three dormer windows allowed increased light, room for built-in desks, and ample storage space on either side of the dormers.

The boys' rooms were covered with carpeting of colorful designs including checkers, hopscotch, tic-tac-toe and other games. The bedrooms were individualized through the use of different colored bedspreads, curtains and wall hangings reflecting each son's interests.

The major problem encountered in the renovation was that the original house was not squared off. Now that the remodeling has been completed, the only tangible evidence of this situation is the use of different sizes of molding in the upstairs bedrooms. Available closet space posed another problem upstairs. The solution was closets that are 18 inches deep rather than the standard 24 inches.

Yellow vinyl siding, which will be almost maintenance free, as well as attractive, was applied to the exterior of the house.

Approximately six weeks after the starting date, the work was completed in late 1976. Consultants from the state extension agent's office agreed to help select home accessories.

Then the neighbors stepped in to help Carol Ann Hardee paint the house, an effort she says saved $2,000. When the open house was held the following year, so that the community could inspect the home economics agent's "demonstration house," the neighbors served as hostesses.

Since that time, interest in the Hardees' renovation has continued. It is not unusual for passers-by to stop and ask if they can see the house, or compare interior or exterior paint samples which the visitors have brought with them.

On a state level, the project's success resulted in Mrs. May's invitation to make a slide presentation at the national convention of Extension Home Economists last fall.

As for Carl Ann Hardee, when she isn't busy with household duties or farm chores, she is considering plans for another addition to her dream house.

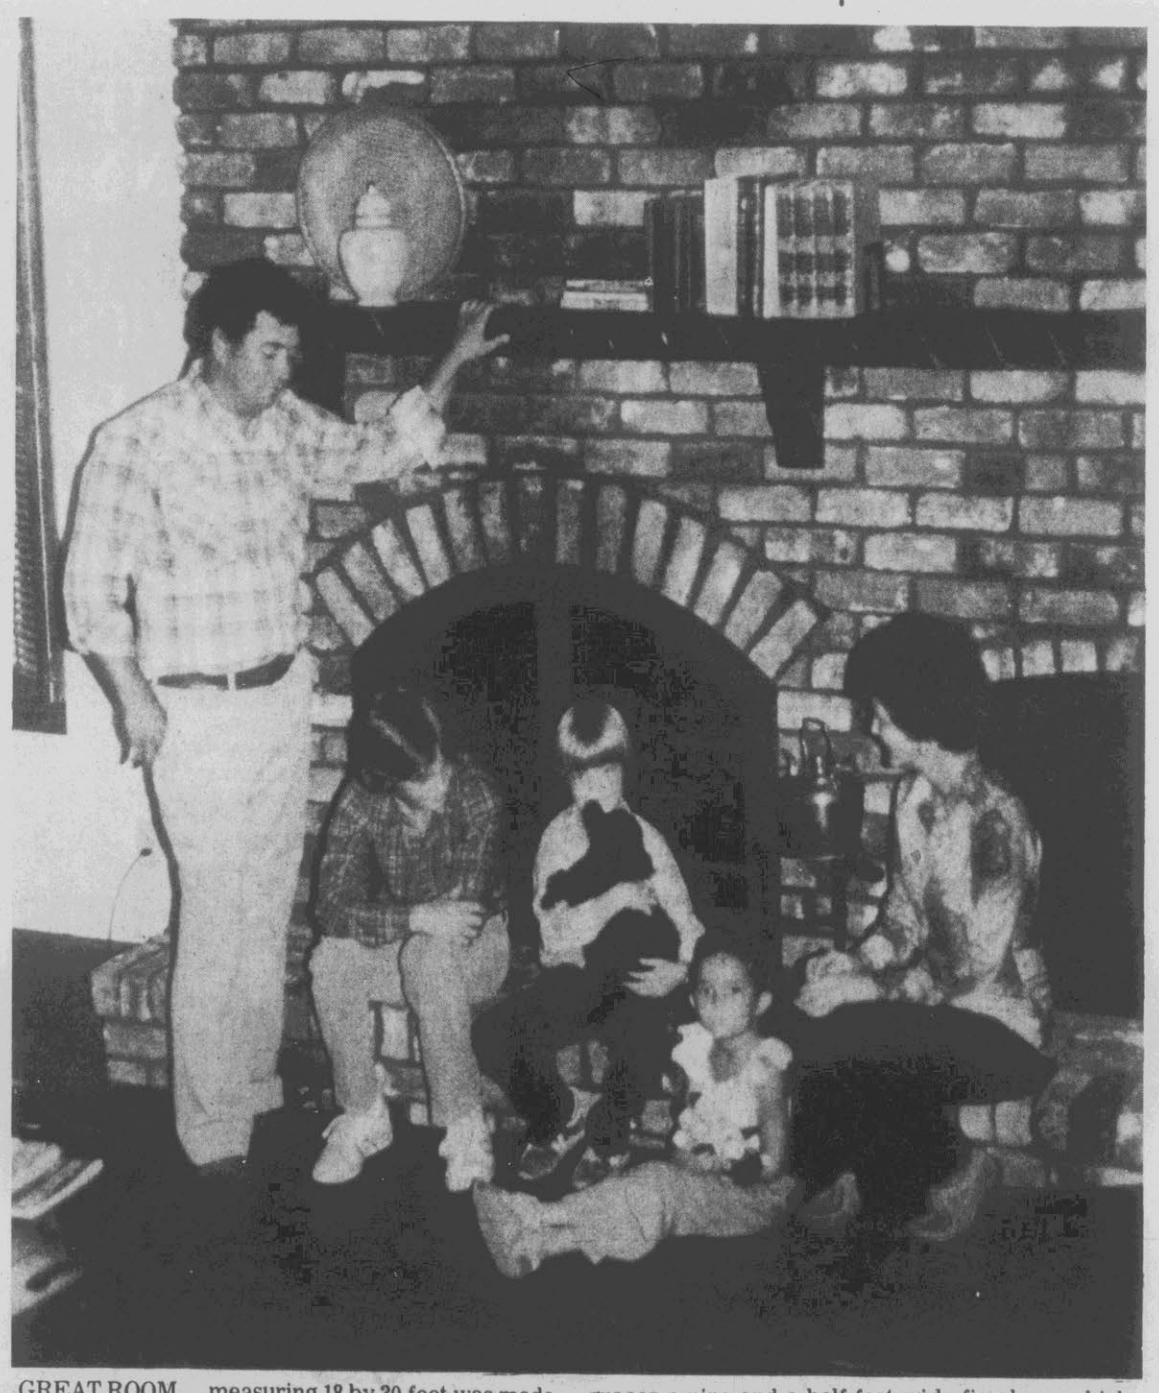

REMOVAL OF TWO CHIMNEY FLUES. . .upstairs left space for two matching bedrooms for sons, Wesley, 12, and Ryan, nine. The addition of dormer windows allowed room for built-in desks.

Guidelines For Making New Year's Resolutions

By JO HARING
For The Associated Press

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — A list of New Year's resolutions is an American resolution. As a matter of fact, New Year's without resolutions would be like Christmas without Master Charge.

But for some who have passed a great many new yers, the making of resolutions annually may have become something of a chore.

Consequently, the following list of resolutions, covering the most commons areas of human resolve, has been compiled as a service to those who do not feel up to making a list of their own.

DIET (circle one)

1. In 1980, I hereby resolve to lose (a) 40 pounds; (b) 20 pounds; (c)10 pounds; (d) all my calorie counters.

2. In order to allay health concerns, I further resolve to give up (a) red meat; (b) refined sugar; (c) table salt; (d) regular check-ups.

3. I resolve that in the coming year, I will (a) consume only 600 calories a day; (b) eat sensibly; (c) give up between-meal snacks; (d) take no more than one bite at a time.

EXERCISE

1. In the coming year, I promise to take up (a) jogging; (b) swimming; (c) tennis; (d) slack.

2. Likewise, I resolve to (a) run 25 miles a week; (b) play tennis twice daily; (c) run in place for 15 minutes; (d) get out of bed as needed.

3. And 1980 will be the year that I win the (a) Boston Marathon; (b) club tennis tournament; (c) parks department badminton competition; (d) Pillsbury Bake-Off.

PERSONAL HABITS

1. Likewise, I resolve in the coming year to make myself a more attractive person to be around. Therefore, I will give up (a) smoking; (b) gossip; (c) knock-knock jokes; (d) ice chewing.

2. And, in 1980, to keep myself well-dressed, I will (a) buy a new wardrobe; (b) remodel garments to current styles; (c) give away my (where applicable) miniskirts, hot pants, leisure suits, white patent loafers; (d) borrow clothes as needed from friends.

3. I promise in the coming year not to talk (a) politics; (b) religion; (c) money; (d) with my mouth full.

CHILDREN

1. In the new year, I firmly resolve to become a better parent. Therefore, I will make my children behave with (a) firm discipline; (b) reason; (c) threats; (d) bribery.

2. On no account will I tolerate my children's (a) bickering; (b) screaming; (c) fighting; (d) drawing blood.

3. I will insist that my children (a) clean their rooms regularly; (b) do their homework; (c) refrain from excessive television watching; (d) stay out of sight.

1. To make myself financially secure in the coming decade, I will (a) save 10 percent of my income; (b) invest in municipal bonds; (c) buy gold; (d) marry wealth.

2. To teach my children the value of money, I will (a) give them a regular allowance; (b) insist that they save a portion of all they earn; (c) teach them to spot returnable bottles; (d) make them buy their own shoes.

3. I resolve to (choose one) keep-or-establish a good credit rating by (a) paying bills regularly; (b) paying bills on time; (c) avoiding late charges; (d) robbing Peter and paying Paul.

Finally, in 1980, I resolve to become, if not wiser, at least older.

Miss Downing, Mr. Greer Marry

MRS. STEVEN EUGENE GREER

Catherine Joette Downing of Greenville and Steven Eugene Greer of Durham were married Saturday at 2 p.m. at Oakmont Baptist Church here.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Edward Downing of Greenville and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Eugene Greer of Durham.

The Rev. J.W. Brooks, grandfather of the bride, and the Rev. E. Gordon Conk performed the double ring ceremony.

A program of wedding music was provided by Diane Bridger, organist, Stephanie Hubbard, flutist, Lowell Oakley, soloist, and Jeff Barber, guitarist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white chiffon over taffeta. The fitted empire bodice featured a sheer Brussel lace yoke and a Victorian collar. Reembroidered alencon lace and scattered seed pearls overlaid the collar and bodice. The bishop sleeves had matching lace trim and Brussel lace applique. The full skirt extended into a watteau train. Covered buttons enhanced the back of the gown.

The matching chapel length mantilla of silk illusion and reembroidered alencon lace was fashioned by Priscilla of Boston. The mantilla was attached to a Camelot headpiece of matching lace. The bride carried a semi-round bouquet of white miniature carnations and deep wine rosebuds centered with white orchids.

Sister of the bride, Mrs. Sandra Downing Barber of Columbia, S.C., was matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Lynn Gebelein of Annapolis, Md., Patti Splain of Lumberton, Dawn Flowers of Wilson, Fran Senter and Debra Powell, both of Fuquay-Varina.

They wore deep tint gowns of wine qiana. The gowns were full-bloused with a scooped neckline caught at each shoulder with a bow to allow the split sleeves to drape. The skirt fell into pleats. The honor attendant carried a bouquet of miniature carnations and roses tied with deep pink ribbons. The bridesmaids carried bouquets of miniature carnations in shades of pink and wine.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers included David Atkinson of Durham, J.W. Vinson of Faison, Joey Downing of Greenville, brother of the bride, Phil and Roger Greer, brothers of the bridegroom of Durham, and Jack Foushee of Greenville.

The mother of the bride wore a gown of rose qiana. The high collar fell to self-buttons which ended at the waist. The mother of the bridegroom wore a gown of chiffon. The white full length skirt was complemented by a caped bodice of navy blue.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given at the church by the parents of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Downing of Wilson greeted guests. Mrs. Richard Worsley of Greenville coordinated the reception and relatives of the bride served guests. The tabel was decorated with a bouquet of mixed flowers in a silver candelabra The table was covered with a white hand-embroidered cloth. Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Downing of Petersburg said good-byes.

Mrs. Cecil Hinnant of Greenville directed the wedding.

After a wedding trip to the Bahamas, the couple will live in Greenville. The bride is a graduate of Rose High School and East Carolina University and is employed at the Pitt County Health Dept. The bridegroom is a graduate of Jordan High School, Durham, and East Carolina University. He is employed at the Greenville office of Northwestern Mutual Insurance Company.

Couple Weds Saturday

FARMVILLE — Miss Debra Jean Eastwood and Herbert Ray Scott were united in a double ring ceremony Saturday at 7 p.m. at Kings Cross Roads Church, Farmville. The Rev. Frank Brinson of Farmville officiated the ceremony and a program of music was presented by Ruth Ann Jones and Janet Smith, pianists, and Mary Lord of Greenville, soloist.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Eastwood of Rt. 4, Greenville, and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Lydia Weatherington of Greenville, and the late Mr. Nathan Scott.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal ivory silesta gown featuring a high lace trimmed ring collar with a lace see-through bodice. It had a crystal pleated yoke trimmed with a floral lace border and the fitted sleeves were bordered with lace. The A-line skirt was accentuated with a lace border. The veil was handmade by the bride's sister. It was two tiered waist length and trimmed with lace to match the dress. She carried a bouquet which was a Bible covered with lace and white daisies with yellow centers and ivory colored streamers.

Jo Ann Eastwood Lewis, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. She wore a formal gown of print background over blue taffeta designed with a scooped neckline edged in piping and featuring miniature tie bows at the shoulders. The blouson bodice featured short split sleeves and the waistline was encircled by a rolled self-fabric tie sash from which fell the length of the full flared skirt. She carried a bouquet of mums with blue and white streamers.

Roland Roy Scott of Raleigh, bridegroom's brother, served as best man. Ushers were James Eastwood Jr., brother of the bride, and Tim Askew of Farmville, cousin of the bride.

Candles were the only light during the ceremony, and three candlelabras lighted the stage.

The reception was given by family and friends. Mrs. Janice Hannah of Greenville served cake. Mrs. Clara Jones of Greenville served the punch, assisted by Mrs. Pauline Coor and Ms. Callie Cash.

After the wedding trip, the couple will reside in Raleigh.

The bridegroom is employed with Daniel Construction Co. of Raleigh. They both are graduates of North Pitt High School.

MRS. HERBERT RAY SCOTT

Marriage Announced

Dr. and Mrs. Oscar H. Brown of Ayden announce the marriage of their daughter, Diane B. Smith, to Stephen Llewellyn Sutton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Neal Sutton of Kinston, on Saturday at the First Baptist Church, Ayden.

Mrs. Warren Is Speaker

Mrs. Nancy Warren was speaker Monday evening at the meeting of the Tea and Topics Book Club held at the home of Maxine Branton.

Associated with NCNB Trust Department, Mrs. Warren explained the importance of making wills. A question and answer period followed.

Jean Hawley, Mary Daughtridge and Linda Fowler were guests for the meeting. Mrs. Doris Ballangee was welcomed as a new member and presented a yellow rose, the club's flower.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Somehow I never figured tea drinkers as potential militants.

They always seem sort of proper. I've never seen tea drinkers pour their tea into a saucer and blow on it. And I cannot imagine a tea drinker sitting around a campfire gulping a mouthful of tea from a tin cup, gargling it, and then throwing the dregs from the cup into the fire.

But if my mail is to be believed (and there's a first for everything), tea drinkers are cuing up for a revolution. A tea sipper in Salisbury, Md., writes, "I'm sick of being discriminated against. We're never offered a second cup of tea like coffee drinkers, and on airplanes the tea drinkers are served LAST!

"And even in homes, the hostess serves coffee and when you ask for tea, I can see it written all over her face. She's hoping you'll say, 'Oh, don't bother.'"

From Santa Barbara, Calif., another tea tippler writes, "People have no consideration for us whatsoever. They never have lemon, yet they have cream and sugar for coffee drinkers. I've even been to meetings where they say, 'If you drink tea, bring your own tea bag.'"

Cooking expert James Beard has long carried the banner for tea drinkers. He calls them the downtrodden minority in this country and points out that while coffee drinkers enjoy their steaming cup in restaurants, the tea drinker must face the pitiful sight of a pot of lukewarm water and a solitary teabag by the side. Or even worse, the dejected bag floating in a cup of tepid water.

Perhaps the most debilitating plight of the tea drinker is called the soggy tea bag experience. What do you do with the bag when it has strained itself into your cup?

I think we must take tea drinkers seriously. With the way things have been going in this country lately, I wouldn't be surprised if there is a decline in mixed marriages (coffee vs. tea drinkers). Look for "Thank You For Not Dunking" signs in restaurants. Look for signs in department and specialty stores: "Tea Spoken Here." I am predicting classes at the Schick Center for people who want to get off coffee and into tea and warnings on coffee cans that say, "Coffee may stain your dentures permanently. Drink tea."

All I know is if Mrs. Olsen pitches to a born-again tea drinker, I wouldn't want to be responsible for her safety.

Pocahontas Officers Installed

Two Past Great Pocahontas of North Carolina Betty Nobles and Maycie Culbreth installed officers of the Degree of Pocahontas here Tuesday evening at the Rotary Club.

Named were: Pocahontas, Frances Breedlove; Prophetess, Marga Ross; Wenonah, Martha Karachun; Keeper of Records, Betty Nobles; Collector of Wampum, Lillian Earl Bradshaw; Keeper of Wampum, Thelma Vincent; Powatan, Cecil Bradshaw; Pianist, Bessie Nobles; Warriors, Louise Cox, Mildred Merrill, Lillie Randolph, Pauline Ross; Councilors, Reba Cannon, Louise Hyman; Runners, Doris McKeel, Beth Karachun; Guard of the Tepee, Douglas Ross; Guard of the Forrest, Fitz McKeel; Trustees, Estelle Tucker, Margaret Register, Clyde Stanley; Aides, Margaret Parker, Helen Kares; Council Greeter, Mrs. Culbreth; Reporter, Pennie Dunn; and Parliamentarian, Alice Culbreth.

Mrs. Marga Ross, retiring Pocahontas, was given a Past Pocahontas pin and certificate. She was also given a gift from the council. She expressed her appreciation to the group and each officer was presented a gift. Mrs. Nobles was recognized for perfect attendance and Cecil Bradshaw was recognized for presenting a new council brand in honor of efforts in conducted meetings for Mrs. Ross. Audit reports were given. Bradshaw, McKeel, Mrs. Stocks and Mrs. Vincent reported on the second New Year's Eve party at the home of Henry and Pennie Dunn following a dinner at Western Steer. Plans were discussed for the third annual party.

An acceptance speech was made by Ms. Breedlove.

To test a roast chicken for doneness, stick a skewer into the thickest part of the leg. If the juice that runs out is a clear (not pink), it's done. You'll also note that the meat has shrunk back somewhat from the ends of the drumsticks.

A Will For The Living

By Abigail Van Buren

1980 by Chicago Tribune-N Y News Synd Inc

DEAR ABBY: I want to thank you for the most wonderful present I have ever received. Because of an item in your column last year, I sent for "The Living Will." Now I have peace of mind, knowing that if my husband or I should ever become terminally ill, our loved ones will never have to watch us die slow and agonizing deaths as some we have witnessed.

I saw my handsome, 6-foot, 200-pound father waste away to an 88-pound skeleton after fighting a two-year battle with cancer. The doctors told us it was hopeless, yet kept that poor dear man alive month after month with transfusions, tubes, needles and drugs, while he prayed to God to take him.

Abby, you would do millions of readers a priceless service by acquainting them with "The Living Will" as you did me.

GRATEFUL IN JOLIET, ILL.

DEAR GRATEFUL: Thank you for giving me this opportunity to publicize "The Living Will" again. It reads as follows:

TO MY FAMILY, MY PHYSICIAN, MY LAWYER AND ALL OTHERS WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

Death is as much a reality as birth, growth, maturity and old age—it is the one certainty of life. If the time comes when I can no longer take part in decisions for my own future, let this statement stand as an expression of my wishes and directions, while I am still of sound mind.

If at such a time the situation should arise in which there is no reasonable expectation of my recovery from extreme physical or mental disability, I direct that I be allowed to die and not be kept alive by medications, artificial means or "heroic measures." I do, however, ask that medication be mercifully administered to me to alleviate suffering even though this may shorten my remaining life.

This statement is made after careful consideration and is in accordance with my strong convictions and beliefs. I want the wishes and directions here expressed carried out to the extent permitted by law. Insofar as they are not legally enforceable, I hope that those to whom this Will is addressed will regard themselves as morally bound by these provisions.

To date, over three million "Living Wills" have been distributed. Yes, I have signed one. I requested six copies and enclosed my check for $10 to cover cost of documents and mailing. (It is tax deductible.)

If you send for "The Living Will," please be patient. I promise your request will not be overlooked. Be sure to enclose your name and address, clearly written.

The document is free but this is a non-profit organization, so all donations are gratefully accepted.

One woman requested eight copies and enclosed her check for $500 saying, "This is the most marvelous thing I've ever heard of." I agree.

P.S. If you or your lawyer have any questions concerning the enforceability of "The Living Will," please write to Concern For Dying, same address as above.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

50th Anniversary For Frozen Foods

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

In 1912, a naturalist named Clarence Birdseye noted during an expedition to Labrador that fish frozen in this subzero region regained its freshness when thawed.

Birdseye spent the next decade experimenting with fish and other foods and finally came up with a primitive freezer. He sold his idea to the food industry and half a century ago, on March 6, 1930, the first assortment of frozen foods, including meat, fish, fruit and vegetables, went on sale at retail in Springfield, Mass.

Today frozen food has become a multibillion-dollar industry featuring more than 1,500 items. As the industry prepared to mark its 50th birthday, I talked to two leaders in the field.

I asked Thomas B. House, president of the American Frozen Food Institute, whether he expected any immediate changes in frozen foods. A big jump in microwave cooking, he replied, and a big saving in energy.

"Microwaves are expected to reach 25 percent of U.S. households by the end of 1980," he said. "And frozen foods will play a major role. Frozen fish fillets cooked in a microwave oven, for example, will save 90 percent of the energy required to cook in a conventional oven."

Recalling that during World War II stores selling only frozen foods cropped up all over America, I asked Murray Lender, a veteran in the field and chairman of the 50th anniversary celebration, whatever had happened to them.

"Frozen food stores fell by the wayside with the coming of the one-stop supermarket," he said. "It's significant to note that the typical market today devotes much more area to frozen foods than the entire frozen-food store did."

There are still many Americans who insist that fresh food is better than frozen. But during the offseasons some of these foods can be costly. Still more important, in this day of working wives and long commuting hours, much time is saved using frozen foods and I don't mean TV dinners, necessarily. Here is a recipe for a Chinese stir-fry dinner that takes less than 10 minutes to prepare.

- 2 teaspoons cornstarch
- 1 cup chicken broth
- 3 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 2 crushed garlic cloves
- 1 tablespoon minced fresh ginger root
- 2 (10 ounces each) packages frozen asparagus
- 1 pound frozen peeled shrimp
- Soy sauce

Dissolve cornstarch in broth and set aside. Heat oil in wok. Saute garlic and ginger 3 minutes. Discard garlic. Add asparagus and cook till spears separate. Add shrimp, chicken broth mixture and soy sauce to taste. Simmer 5 to 10 minutes till seafood is cooked and sauce slightly thickened. Serve. Good with a dry white wine, well chilled.

Phil Morin Shows Slides

Phil Morin, energy projects coordinator for Greenville Utilities Commission, presented a slide program at the meeting of the Cherry Oaks Home and Garden Club.

The focus of the presentation was pointing out common areas of energy loss or improper use and economical ways to correct the losses.

Faye Baker, charity projects chairman, reported the family sponsored during Christmas was grateful for the club's aid. She expressed appreciation to a local Girl Scout trip for donating canned goods for the family.

President Sandra Dibbell said an additional $50 was given to another family and that money has been set aside to help defray heating costs of the sponsored family.

The tasting tea will be held April 19 at Hooker Memorial Christian Church. A February meeting will not be held. The annual couples' dinner will take place.

Dr. Bailey Gives Program

The Patient Circle of the Kings Daughters held its January meeting Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. E. Rawl.

Mrs. Sybil Clark Basart was welcomed as a new member.

Dr. James Bailey, pastor of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, gave a talk on the proposed Methodist Retirement Home to be built here.

The Christmas Cheer Committee report was given by Miss Mary Wells. Campbell Soup labels, cancelled postage stamps, unused eye glasses and old jewelry were collected and members were asked to continue saving these items.

Wedding Invitation

Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Craft and Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Cayton request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their children, Wanda Elaine Bass to Seth Allen Cayton, on Saturday, Jan. 26, at 7 p.m. at St. Paul's Holiness Church.

Engagement Announced

ELIZABETH CATHERINE BRILEY. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Walter Briley of Greenville, who announce her engagement to Dennis Ray Winstead, son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Winstead of Simpson. A March 8 wedding is planned.

Couple Exchanges Vows

Katherine Hodges and Tommy Moore were united in marriage Saturday at 8 p.m. at Piney Grove Church.

A program of wedding music was presented by Dr. Sam Winchester Jr., Beth Winchester and Amy Winchester. Mrs. Ann Worthington of Greenville sang "The Wedding Prayer," "More" and "Turn Around, Look at Me."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby G. Hodges of Greenville, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Moore of Greenville.

She wore a chapel length veil of Juliet capulet accentuated with seed pearls from which flowed a triple illusion bordered with Venise lace. The bride carried a nosegay bouquet of daisies, pixie carnations and baby's breath.

The maid of honor was Sharon Allen of Greenville. She wore a peach formal gown with a round neckline draped with a capelet and a full length pleated skirt. She carried a nosegay of daisies and baby's breath, with satin ribbons matching her gown.

The bridesmaids were sisters of the bride, Miss Janet Hodges and Mrs. Terry Wilson. Junior bridesmaid was the bride's niece, Karen James. She wore a formal length skirt of yellow polyester and a white lace blouse. She wore a yellow ribbon with bows around the waist. The bridesmaids wore matching ice blue polyester formal gowns with double string straps, V-necklines with pleated skirts. The gowns were accented with chiffon capes tapered in front and back extending below the bodice. They each carried a nosegay of daisies and baby's breath.

The mother of the bride chose a formal gown of powder blue with long sleeves trimmed in sequins. The bridegroom's mother wore a two-piece dress of beige and brown with a peach coat. Both mothers were honored with corsages of miniature carnations.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Ushers included Will Harmon of Greenville and Earl Bielby of Pink Hill.

Mrs. Elaine James, aunt of the bride, presided at the register.

The church was decorated with a centered semi-circle candelabra with 15 candles flanked with bouquets of white gladiola and daisies with an altar profile prie-dieu. Family pews were marked with white satin ribbons.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was given in the church fellowship hall by the couples' parents. Mrs. Sylvia Winchester greeted guests. Sister-in-laws of the bridegroom, Mrs. Edna Bielby served cake, Mrs. Bobbie Ann Bielby poured punch and Mrs. Linda Bielby said good-byes. The refreshment table was covered with a white linen cloth. The cake was centered with a three tiered candelabra on each side.

Following a wedding trip, the couple will reside in Morehead City.

Museum Has Blue Jeans Exhibit

By MIKE CLARK
Associated Press Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Tucked away in a corner of this Scandinavian city's massive Nordic Museum is an exhibit far removed from the usual displays about Vikings and Swedish kings.

Instead of delving into the past, this exhibit attempts to describe the present day in this country of 8 million.

This exhibit is about blue jeans.

Inga Wintzell, who works in the textile department of the Nordic Museum — Sweden's version of the Smithsonian — says the exhibit isn't as far-fetched as it sounds.

Walk down any Stockholm street, through any of the neighborhoods scattered about the massive archipelago, walk into any restaurant — and blue jeans hit you right between the eyes. Everybody seems to be wearing blue jeans in some form.

Some boys and girls wear the looser variety; others seem poured into the pants. Girls wear denim bikinis and skirts, swing denim purses and wear clogs — a wooden casual shoe — covered in jeans material.

Underwear, although cotton or silk, is designed like a pair of jeans. Soap, deodorant, after shave and even soft drinks are packaged in denim-design containers.

"The denim fashion is very profound here in Sweden," Mrs. Wintzell said. "Swedish museums have decided to give priority to documentations of today, and the textile department here decided to document jeans because jeans are so very typical for today, for this time.

"It was about 1950 that they started producing jeans in Sweden," she said. "Of course, it was their connection with the United States — the people coming from there and the Swedish people going to the United States and coming back with impressions — and when you started wearing jeans in the United States, they wanted them here."

That was easier said than done.

"It was only in 1960 that they could import to Sweden from the United States," she said, a breakthrough that proved to be a gold mine for American producers. The Swedish appetite for jeans appears to be insatiable. The Swedes pay $50 — and more — for a pair of American jeans, even though the Swedish counterpart costs half that.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, JAN. 13, 1980

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today's Full Moon brings a considerable number of changes especially where your home and whatever has to do with your reputation and good name are concerned.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Give more attention to home conditions so that all will be in ideal order. Don't pressure others to do what you alone like.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Hit on the right principles under which to live your life in the future and start putting them in motion early. Be careful in any form of travel.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Know how you want your practical and monetary affairs to go in the days ahead and make the right arrangements now. Listen to advice of property expert.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Think of ways to please associates more and have more harmony thereby. Do not pick on one who is disturbed, but try to be helpful instead.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Make right arrangements to get rid of nagging problems and have more harmony with everyone. Prepare for the future. Take time for family fun.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get in touch with intimates for the recreation you want to enjoy. Get your talents working from a novel angle for best results. Avoid a gossip.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study every angle of your existence and try to gain more prestige by right actions. Be sure that you get the backing you need.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get into activities that can be very good for your future. Join group affairs that are worthwhile.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try to get business people to help you with your most important affairs for greater success. Be of assistance to loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Come to a better understanding with emotional allies today. Any civic work you may do now should be done conscientiously.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Good time to concentrate on regular work and plan on how to make it operate more efficiently. Take time for a little fun.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get into amusements that please you and plan for more in the future. Show more affection for a loved one and gain added devotion.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be devoted to the family and this will lead to right understanding with outsiders also. The field of business is best here so send to right schools. Teach never to adopt a martyr complex, which could limit this talented child.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, JAN. 14, 1980

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A fine day for you to think in terms of your true aims and to discuss them friends who have vision and imagination. You can then formulate plans under which to operate in the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Work on your particular talents and get them perfected for greater benefits to accrue in the near future. Be logical.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Being more understanding with family members is wise at this time. A new interest could be a source of revenue you need.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Go to reliable sources for the data you need at this time. You can easily increase happiness now by being more courteous.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You need to have a greater income so look into new outlets that look promising and pick out the right one.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A good day for being with those people you like in activities you mutually enjoy. Avoid one who is tricky and could do harm.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Quietly think over what you want the most, then go all-out to attain your goals. Allow time to engage in favorite hobby.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Good day to be with congenial friends and cementing better relations with them. Plan how to gain your most intimate goals.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have an excellent opportunity now to engage in new activities which can lead to greater success. Perserverance pays off now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are inspired with new ideas that should be put in operation without delay. Express happiness with loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Find more modern and efficient ways of handling responsibilities and get ahead faster. Use more common sense.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Know what is expected of you by associates and then do your best to please them. Be most careful in motion at this time.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Your vision of the future is great now so be sure to follow through on plans that could give added abundance. Strive for happiness.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one who has unusual vision and imagination, so be sure to plan the finest education you can since the potential here is great. There are many talents in this chart which should be carefully trained.

ORIENTAL FOOD MAKES GAINS

CAMBRIDGE, Md. (AP) — Following World War II, popularity zoomed for Chinese restaurants and for Oriental-style foods in groceries. In 1950, canned and frozen Chinese food constituted a $5-million-a-year market, while today Americans buy $250-million of these products annually, reports Chun King Foods.

Student Earns Physics Award

ECU News Bureau

Catherine Anne Dreyer of Maxwell Air Force Base, Montgomery, Ala., a junior in the East Carolina University Department of Physics, is the 1979 recipient of the Sarah Patterson Lane Award.

The Lane Award was established by an ECU alumnus, Thomas Baylis, in memory of his aunt, and is given to an outstanding junior in physics at ECU each year.

CATHERINE DREYER

The award includes a medallion, a Sharp 5100 programmable calculator and the engraving of the recipient's name on a permanent plaque on display in ECU's physics building.

The daughter of Col. and Mrs. C.F. Dreyer of Maxwell Air Force Base, Montgomery, Ala., Ms. Dreyer is a cadet in the ECU Air Force ROTC detachment and holds an Air Force scholarship.

At present, she is commander of ECU's Angel Flight Society and a featured twirler for the ECU "Marching Pirates" band.

She was selected Miss College Majorette of North Carolina for 1979 by the National Baton Twirlers Association and was cited as "Most Outstanding Freshman" at ECU during the academic year 1977-78.

An Art To Mothering

NEW YORK (AP) — A new program to teach "the art of mothering" is under way at the State University Hospital of Downstate Medical Center, State University of New York. Called The Parent Education Program of Brooklyn, it aims to give answers, reassurances and a pat on the back to new mothers.

Before they take their babies home from the hospital, mothers are visited by one of a group consisting of Laurel Whitaker, chairman of the program; Dr. Sara L. Weiss, its director and an instructor in pediatrics; and their trained volunteer workers in the program.

Once she is home with the baby, the mother is invited to call "her own" volunteer paraprofessional for help, advice or just support.

At the end of six weeks, mothers and their babies meet together at the hospital once a week for eight weeks. There they can ask questions, exchange experiences, and find out how others are dealing with various problems. At each meeting experts in different areas of child care lead discussions on various topics.

The keystone to the success of the program, Dr. Weiss says, is the corps of thoroughly trained volunteer workers, who stay in contact with the mothers. The program is sponsored by Downstate Medical Center, the Junior League of Brooklyn, the United Hospital Fund and private donors.

Trying To Peddle His Revolutionary Bicycle

By JUNE WATANABE
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — "The fact is, a Henry Ford wouldn't get anywhere today," says Lawrence G. Brown, who has spent years spinning his wheels trying to pedal his "revolutionary" bicycle.

But, Brown is convinced it is only a matter of time before his cam bikes break ground in an industry he describes as "technologically backward."

The way Brown tells it, the struggle to market his cam bikes is as good a story as his "innovation," which doesn't eliminate the bicycle chain, but makes it secondary to a cam.

The result, he says, is a far superior bicycle which "changes the relationship between the resistance and the required foot force, so you're actually riding at a lesser force than a regular bicycle, under the same conditions, in the same gear."

In other words, the bike is easier to pedal.

"It's a different concept, very innovative," says Tim Kelly, head coach of the U.S. Olympic cycling team. "The bicycle has been set for the last 40 or 50 years, with only minor changes, so this is quite a departure."

Brown says his immediate goal is to enter the selectocam in the 1980 Olympics, where it would be suited for timed power events but not road races.

The goal of an Olympic entry came closer to reality in early September, when four Americans riding selectocam bikes in the 750-mile Paris-Brest-Paris race placed "in the top 1½ percent out of nearly 1,800 riders."

Brown, 53, never intended to gear his life to bicycles nor to become involved in a one-man battle with industry. A personable man, Brown was born of an American father and European mother in Warsaw, Poland, and came to the United States in 1946.

He has a background in mechanical engineering and industrial management and spent his early career in research and development. In 1960, he formed Brown Associates, which he described as an international management consulting firm based in Switzerland. He semi-retired in 1968, dabbling in investment management.

By 1973, Brown wanted to put together a research "think tank."

"I wanted to play with basic questions in the fields of force relationship and physics. But I needed a lot of money.

"I began to analyze several mass markets seeking vulnerability, and the bicycle industry became easily my first target."

Launching Course In Sign Language

A non-credit course in sign language has been announced by the Department of Speech, Language, and Auditory Pathology and the Program for Hearing Impaired Students at East Carolina University.

The course will be given on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6 to 7:30 p.m. beginning January 15. The course will be conducted in B-201, Brewster Building.

The course will be an introduction to American Sign Language with beginning level vocabulary as used by deaf adults. Other sign language systems will be introduced and their practical applications discussed.

Interested persons from the Greenville community are welcome to enroll, and there is no tuition fee.

Also, the first meeting of the East Carolina University Sign Language Club will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, January 17 in B-204, Brewster Building.

Students, faculty, and Greenville residents are invited to attend these club meetings.

$5 Billion For Public Works

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Argentina plans to spend $5 billion over the next few years to improve public works and road systems.

The Secretariat of Transport and Public Works says almost $2 billion will go for the immediate repair and renovation of existing sanitary facilities. The remainder will be used to expand services. Some $250 million is to be spent in 1980 to remodel and maintain provincial road networks.

Medical Research Leads To Questions

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Answers often lead to more questions in medical research. And recent promising starts with many problems still leave the tough solutions to researchers in the 1980s.

Experts say past medical research has paid off. Translated into health care, Americans are living longer and surviving more diseases than ever.

A child born in 1977 has a life expectancy of 73.2 years, compared with 70.9 years in 1970 and 47.3 years in 1900, government statistics show.

In the past 10 years, there has been a dramatic decrease in deaths from stroke and heart disease, although the latter remains the No.1 killer in the United States.

Treatments for some forms of cancer, such as Hodgkin's Disease and childhood leukemia, are so successful that the diseases now are considered curable in most cases.

But much is unknown about these diseases and others that plague modern man. Diabetes, influenza, arthritis, high blood pressure, lung diseases, alcoholism, birth defects, venereal diseases and more continue to cause pain and death in a relatively healthy, affluent society.

How can medical research in the next decade help solve these problems?

"The big questions for research relate first to continuing the favorable trends we have in progress," says Dr. Julius B. Richmond, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's assistant secretary for health.

"There have been favorable developments in applying what we've learned, such as the striking reduction in death from various cardiovascular diseases," says Richmond, who oversees most of the government's health and medical research programs.

Research into specific diseases has been emphasized in the past and will continue to be important, he says.

"But it must be used for health promotion and disease prevention — to enhance the quality of life," Richmond says.

One emphasis in future research will be on human behavior. Richmond says researchers have to learn how to modify human behavior so that people will want to have sound health habits, such as not smoking, eating properly, exercising and limiting alcohol intake.

But there still is a lot that we don't know about major diseases, despite the progress. In most cases, no one knows the basic causes, a major deficiency in knowledge.

In heart and vessel disease, for instance, experts say death rates are down because more people have stopped smoking, started exercising and are watching their diets.

But no one knows why fats clog some people's blood vessels and not others, nor why some individuals' arteries harden faster than others.

Scientists know that high blood pressure, or hypertension, increases the risk of heart disease, stroke and kidney problems. And they know hypertension can be controlled with early detection, low fat and salt diets and drug therapy.

But they are trying to find out how blood pressure is maintained normally and what disrupts this mechanism.

"We are good firefighters in that we know how to put out fires," says Dr. Michael Lesch, director of cardiology at Northwestern University Medical School, "but we don't know how they start or how to prevent them.

"Once we find out, then we won't need a fire department," Lesch continues.

The same is true for cancer, the nation's No. 2 killer. Research in the next decade will try to find out why cells go mad and grow out of control.

And as important — if not more so — is discovering why three-fourths of the people do not get cancer, even some who smoke cigarettes, work with hazardous chemicals and do other things known to bring out the disease in others.

Scientists have to find out the role of substances that promote or inhibit cancer, and see if there is a solid link between low-level radiation and the disease.

Diabetes is another important health problem which continues to baffle scientists despite large gains in knowledge in the last decade.

It is thought to be a family of diseases with different causes in which production or use of insulin in the body is impaired. Insulin is a hormone that regulates blood sugar and triggers various activities in cells.

Scientists are trying to find out why most adult diabetics, contrary to popular notions, produce enough insulin but somehow it doesn't react properly with the cells that use it.

Arthritis, the crippling inflammatory disease of bones and connective tissue, is another mystery. The cause is unknown, although viruses have been linked to some forms.

Venereal disease is one of America's most widespread infectious diseases, with more than 10 million cases occurring each year. Although most forms of sexually transmitted diseases are treatable if detected, some bacterial types have grown resistant to antibiotics and are becoming harder to combat.

Richmond predicts more future effort into diseases that produce crippling disabilities. Improving sufferers' quality of life and productivity will help them and society even before cures are found.

Rotary Foundation Has Scholarships Available

Three Rotary Foundation educational awards for study abroad during the 1981-82 academic year are available for young people in this district, according to the Greenville Rotary Club. The awards cover the cost of language instruction, transportation, food, lodging, and tuition.

Rotarians are looking for well-rounded, articulate, out-going scholars capable of interpreting their homeland as well as absorbing the culture of the country they study.

Candidates must apply for the awards by March, 1980. Applications may be obtained by contacting Dr. or Mrs. Ruth Trevathan, 1908 Forest Hill Drive, Greenville, N.C., telephone 919-756-2559, or by contacting the local Rotary Club president.

The Rotary Foundation's awards are placed into five categories, the largest of which is the graduate fellowships. Each graduate fellow must be 18-28 years old and have earned the equivalent of a Bachelor's degree.

Students completing only two years of study on the University level may apply for the undergraduate scholarships. Applicants must be single and 18-24 years old.

Vocational training awards are available to people with a secondary education and two years work experience in a technical field. Vocational training awardees must be 21-35 years of age. A wide variety of vocations have been studied in the past, from beekeeping to hydrofoil construction.

Awards for teachers of the handicapped and for journalists are also available. These awards are granted to winners of a worldwide competition sponsored by Rotary Clubs.

Students interested in applying for the scholarships are encouraged to contact Dr. or Mrs. Trevathan or the local Rotary Club president.

Saving Is Main Topic

NEW YORK (UPI) — Among the 200,000 people who wrote to Encyclopedia Brittanica for information in 1979 more were interested in topics concerned with saving money than in any other subject, according to Virginia Stenberg, head of the encyclopedia's Library Research Center.

Among the subjects on which writers sought information was how to cope with rising food and fuel prices, how to reduce taxes, how to put a limit on government spending, how to dry wood for fireplaces and stoves as alternate energy sources, how to put up wallpaper, how to put up preserves, how to make and use gasahol, and how to buy gold.

There were many questions on international subjects such as Iran, the OPEC nations, and the Cambodian crisis, but less queries concerned with women's rights than in 1978. For the second straight year there were no requests for information about President Carter, or, indeed, about any of his potential rival candidates, but many about Pope John Paul II and many, especially from blacks, about Muhammad Ali. There were a few about British prime minister Margaret Thatcher, but more about Prince Charles, Britain's heir to the throne.

ICING ON THE CAKE — The people of the United Arab Emirates are, per capita, the world's wealthiest people with an income of more than $15,000 a year for every man, woman and child. These two residents of Dubai take to the ice recently at the Olympic . size rink at Leisureland, a desert playground that opened in October and features the only ice skating rink in Arabia. The federation's oil revenue makes the good life possible. (AP Laserphoto)

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — BANANA PEEL STUMBLE SENT PLUMBER A-REEL.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: H equals L

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Enrollment Rises

Pitt Community College's winter quarter enrollment of 1,841 curriculum students represents the largest group ever attending during any previous winter quarter. This figure is a 17.3 percent increase over the 1978-79 period.

The college has grown in all major instructional areas with the number of full time students up 14 percent over a year ago. Similar increases are reflected in the number of students attending part time both day and evening. Transfer students remain at the same level as during fall quarter, which was around 110.

Edgar Boyd, Dean of Students, indicated this record enrollment is reflected in all programs, but the greatest increases are in technical and vocational areas. He also noted that this growth reflects the increasing role of PCC in meeting the educational needs of Pitt County citizens and the East.

Bookworm Is Active Type

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A bookworm usually is caricatured as a non-active type of person, but, according to a recent survey, avid book readers are more likely to be active members of the community, the kind who also go in for physical fitness activities, travel, go to the theater, etc.

The survey based on interviews of 1,450 people of varying economic background in all parts of the country was done for the Book Industry Study Group and published by the National Geographic Society.

Women are the most dedicated bookworms, the survey showed, and the most avid reader of all is a woman with a total household income between $20,000 and $30,000. More than half of all Americans age 16 or older read one or more books in the six-month period surveys and one out of four read 10 or more books.

Garwood Case Seen Culmination Of Vietnam War

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — If the case of Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood goes to a court-martial, the trial would be more than a simple question of guilt or innocence.

Like the Vietnam War from which it stems, the Garwood case is frought with moral and philosophical questions, and ambiguities that have never been explained.

Garwood was a 19-year-old jeep driver from Indiana when he disappeared near Da Nang on Sept. 28, 1965. He resurfaced nearly 14 years later, an enigmatic, lanky 33-year-old who spoke fluent Vietnamese but struggled to think and speak in his native tongue.

Garwood claimed he had been held prisoner all those years. The military and former American prisoners of war told a different story.

They labeled Garwood a deserter, a traitor who enjoyed special privileges from the Vietnamese communists and returned the favor by taking up arms against American soldiers. ers.

Last month and again last week, a parade of witnesses testified at a hearing which could lead to a court-martial for Garwood.

Their recollections were often vivid and sometimes anguished: Garwood remaining healthy while other Americans suffered sickness and died; Garwood free to come and go while other Americans dared not attempt escape.

Garwood's civilian attorney, Dermot Foley of New York, conceded that a court-martial of some type was likely, and he gave indications of the defensive strategy.

The defense would be based on the contention that anything Garwood did was done out of fear, for survival.

But that likely would become the first of many complex issues in a complicated case.

There was testimony at the hearing that while many POWs signed anti-war statements under duress, Garwood boasted of using a bullhorn to tell Americans to surrender and that he held guns on other Americans.

Witnesses said Garwood lived with communist guards, outside the squalid prisoners' compounds.

Although other POWs have admitted signing anti-American statements and some were released early by the communists, none were ever prosecuted by the military.

So a military jury would have to decide where the line is drawn between cooperation with the enemy to stay alive and collaboration to gain an easier existence — where the line stretches between survival and treason.

One prosecution witness, former Army Spec. 4 Luis Antonio Ortiz-Rivera, said that, while he was a captive, he witnessed a communist-staged celebration marking Garwood's "liberation" in 1967. Garwood subsequently moved from the prisoners' compound to live in the guards' hut, Ortiz-Rivera said.

But Ortiz-Rivera said he and another American were given similar ceremonies before they were released, and he signed an apparent anti-American statement because "they told me to sign so I signed it."

Ortiz-Rivera said that, while he and others left the prison camp after their release, Garwood stayed behind.

There would be little argument in a court-martial that Garwood did many of the things attributed to him, but the defense would contend that he had no choice, that he was a puppet manipulated by the communists.

"Did you completely understand that the Viet Cong had the power of life and death over everyone in that camp?" Foley asked last week during the hearing.

"Yes," replied Ortiz-Rivera.

A jury would be faced with deciding what the military must expect of a 19-year-old high school dropout who received only basic training to handle life as a prisoner.

But another aspect would be how Garwood's actions compared with those of other POWs from similar backgrounds who suffered but refused to break.

"We owe it (prosecuting Garwood) to all those people who didn't come back," said Army CWO Francis Anton, who encountered Garwood as a prisoner.

While one Army private was shot in World War II for desertion, Garwood could become the first serviceman this century convicted of joining an enemy army.

The defense would argue that Garwood was forced to carry an unloaded gun and that, suffering the same severe physical and psychological problems common to prisoners, he was simply another victim of the war.

Zalin Grant, a journalist and former Army intelligence officer who wrote a book called "Survivors" about POWs, sees the Garwood case as knotting together the emotional and philosophical tangles that surrounded the Vietnam War.

"This (Garwood) seems to me to be the major trial of the war because it goes to the deepest levels of moral ambiguities in the sense of what exactly was the individual military man's responsibility in that unpopular war?" said Grant, who attended last week's hearings as a journalist.

One POW who died in captivity set down what could be a terse assessment of the Garwood case.

The POW was quoted by another prisoner as saying, "Don't tell me anything you don't want the Viet Cong to know...this is a jungle and we're all in it alone."

Set Seminar On Rapists

ECU News Bureau

A seminar on "How to Convict a Rapist," designed for law enforcement officers, emergency room nurses, medical personnel and others will be sponsored Jan. 21-22 by the ECU police department, in the public interest.

Dr. Joy S. Eyman, nationally known authority in the field and founder and director of the Rape Crisis, Education and Research Center and Sexual Assault-Treatment Center, will conduct the seminar. Sessions will be from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Willis Bldg., First and Reade Streets. Further information may be obtained from Farncis Eddings, ECU Police Department, 757-6150, or through the PIN (Police Information Network) by calling the ECU police department.

Eddings emphasized that the seminar is open to all law enforcement officers in the region. There is no pre-registration and no registration fee, he said.

ENCLOSED SPACES . . . such as this framed in porch provide a backdrop of an evenly shaded area. Objects in the foreground, the cluster of twigs and a fragment of rusted screen, appear as lighter values, add interest to the composition, and provide a contrast in light tones to the darkness of the shaded area.

PATTERNS AND TEXTURES . . . can be a corollary factor in making photographs employing contrasts of light and dark. Here, the repetitive pattern of a rusted fence in the foreground is highlighted by sunlit blades of dry winter grass, with focus given to the darker element in the photograph.

Light And Dark Values In Making Photographs

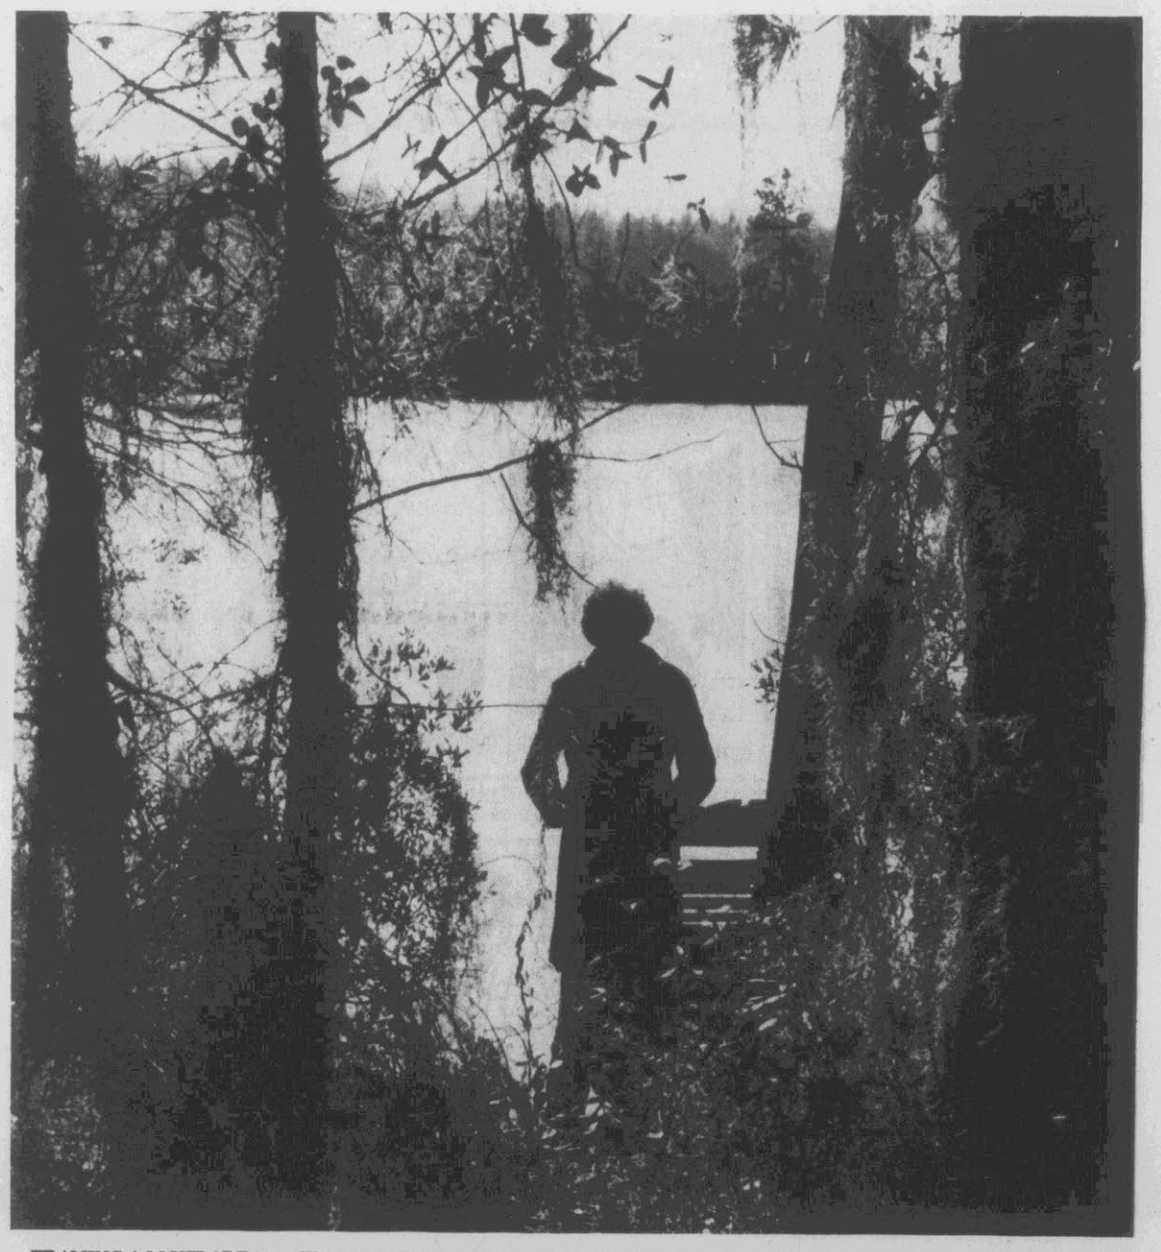

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

One of the pleasures of photography, professional or amateur, is utilizing areas of extreme light and dark to make photos that strongly contrast these opposite tone values.

Basically, techniques are simple — to shoot toward the sun in most instances, to make use of enclosed spaces of shadow, and to frame light areas with dark objects to create a shilhouette effect.

On winter days when there's bright sun and clear, unmisted air, photographic conditions are ideal for making pictures with a high degree of sharp contrasts.

FRAMING A LIGHT AREA . . . Water and sky are two elements that in full light photograph as near white. A silhouette effect is easily achieved by framing a light area, like this Beaufort County creek, with near and distant trees, photographed facing the light source. In many instances of photographing landscapes, the addition of a human figure gives a needed focal point.

A DIFFERENT VIEWPOINT . . . Leaves, in all their varied shapes, are fascinating camera subjects. When viewed with the sun filtering through the leaves, the dark green briar leaves pictured here become translucent, golden-green in color, and almost white when photographed in black and white film.

NO MORE MULE FEED — Mr. and Mrs. Carey Lawrence behind the counter of their Two Egg grocery store. Their big sellers are dog, hog and chicken feed, and they are delighted they don't stock mule feed anymore. (UPI Photo)

Two-Egg, Florida, Is Now Without The Mule

By RICHARD H. GROWALD
UPI National Reporter

TWO EGG, Fla. (UPI) — John Henry Pittman stepped around the mousetrap display and made a face.

"I don't love mules. Mules are the reason I have my country store," the 71-year-old shopkeeper said.

Across the road, in the Carey Lawrence Grocery Store, the owner's sister-in-law, clapped her hands and said, "What a wonderful year was 1953. That was the year I got away from the mules."

In some American places natives talk of a hurricane they would rather forget. Earthquakes, floods and even elections live in infamy in other minds in other places. In Two Egg, the mule is remembered.

This is an election year and when the pickups start crowding the wooden-shaded fronts of the Pittman and Lawrence stores at the crossing of State Highways 69 and 164 there is talk of candidates. But the talk seems to slip back to mules.

John Henry Pittman — and he is "John Henry" to all in Two Egg — was talking about the Democrats and, being a peaceable man, he was going back to a Democratic president still popular in Two Egg. He was talking about Franklin D. Roosevelt — much emphasis on the "D." which is stressed so that a Martian visitor might believe the four-term president's main name was "Dee" — and that recalled the Great Depression of the 1930s.

And that moved John Henry to talk about how he was farming then. With the terrible mules. "I finally had enough. Had my chance on the last day of 1935.

"I swapped my farm and those mules for this store. I've been happy ever since, with my wife, three children, six grandchildren and no mules," he said.

He paused. A customer had come in for a loaf of bread and a carton of cola. The customer was telling John Henry that he did not mind paying $2 for the groceries but refused to hand over a dime for tax.

"I pay enough taxes," said the customer. John Henry pointed at the Mason jar by the cash register. He would not soil his cash register by putting in tax money; that goes into the Mason jar.

John Henry lifted the Mason jar and shook it. Pennies, nickles, dimes and several quarters jingled. "Your president and your governor want you to pay your taxes, not me," the shopkeeper said. "Hand over that dime."

"Take it out of my pockets," the customer said. John Henry said no. The customer finally produced the dime, dropped it into the Mason jar, said something unkind about Washington and took his bread and cola and left.

John Henry shut the cash drawer. He inspected his shop. On one shelf stood two bottles of tabasco sauce. Another held two cans of cranberry jelly. Another, lower down, held the mousetraps. Across the aisle, on a rack, hung for sale one small Miami-type straw hat, one gray polyester tie, one t-shirt and one umbrella. The display of chewing tobacco and Prince Albert in the can was larger than that of packaged cigarettes.

Two Egg sits northwest of Tallahassee, high in the center of the Florida panhandle. Alabama and Georgia lie on the other side of the Chattahoochee River. The peanut farming from which came President Carter, north of the Chattahoochee, is here, too, and "I suppose we should be proud of Jimmy Carter," John Henry said.

"We should be, I suppose."

The thought of it made him talk about mules again.

Across the road, inside the Lawrence store, Carey Lawrence was trying to talk politics. "This is conservative country," he said.

"We don't want no Carters and no Ted Kennedys," his nephew, John Lawrence Jr., said. "Specially no Kennedys."

"I think most of Two Egg voted for Jerry Ford last time," Carey Lawrence's sister-in-law, Mrs. John Lawrence Sr., said. "Leastwise, just try find someone who admits they voted for Carter."

"Carter should have acted decisively, should have done something right when the American hostages were taken in Iran. He ain't doing nothing now." Carey Lawrence said.

The Lawrence clan said Republican Ronald Reagan seemed the best now.

"We ain't too liberal hereabouts," said John Sr.

Mrs. Carey Lawrence said, "Carter comes from just above the Chattahoochee. But he's gone a long long way away."

A silence fell on the group. No smiles. John Jr. pulled on the gold-braided brim of his Massey-Ferguson cap. That and the ungiggly tone of the moment reminded his wife of mules.

She cited 1953 as the unforgettable year. "I was emancipated," she said. "John got a tractor and got rid of the mules. That was so grand.

"Time was when I myself farmed with the mules. Now I have a proper job," she said. She is an official at a local insane asylum.

There was a moment's silence, possibly in thankfulness for the going of mules, and then the Lawrences discussed the Two Egg mystery. No one is sure how the crossroads — in mule days it had four stores, a grist mill and a postoffice but with motor transport now available to Greenwood and Grand Ridge it has but the two groceries — got its name.

Mrs. Carey Lawrence said, "Most folks in Two Egg, and we have some 30 folks living between the road signs, that is when someone hasn't stolen the signs, and I notice both have ripped off by souvenir hunters at this time, think that it got its name because of that grand old fellow, Will Williams.

"He was a black man of great activity," Mrs. Lawrence said. "He had 56 children.

"Well, the town used to be named Allison. But then along came all of Will Williams' children. He didn't have enough money to give each of them an allowance.

"So he gave each child a chicken. And when a child had some eggs the child would come into the store and get what candy could be traded for two eggs.

"The drummers, the traveling salesmen, used to notice that and began marking down their orders here as coming from 'Two Egg Crossroads.' Well, it all stemmed from that. Folks just forgot about the name Allison and Two Egg we became."

She said, "Two-thirds of my customers these days are children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren of Will Williams. They don't bring in eggs anymore. Fact, we have to order eggs along with dog, hog and chicken feed."

One of the Williams' clan, Mrs. Lily Jennings, drove up and stepped in. "Two Egg?," she said. "Never heard of it. I live in New York and just come here for my gas."

She and the Lawrences laughed.

"Who'd ever want to be known as coming from Two Egg?" she said. More laughter.

"At least it's Two Egg," Mrs. John Lawrence Sr. said. "Thank God, it isn't Two Mules."

ECU News Bureau

The National Teacher Examinations (NTE) will be given at East Carolina University's Testing Center Saturday, Feb. 16.

Scores from the examinations are used by states for teacher certification, by school systems for selection and identification of leadership qualities and by colleges and universities as part of their graduation requirements.

Bulletins describing registration procedures and enclosing registration forms are available from the ECU Testing Center, 105 Speight Building, ECU, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Persons wishing to take the examinations must register by Jan. 23.

TRUE OR FALSE!!

Does A Small Car Really Meet Your Family's Needs??

Basically the main and in most cases the only reason for an individual's purchase of a small or compact car is for fuel economy. IN MOST CASES IF WE COMPARE A COMPARABLY EQUIPPED FOREIGN COMPACT CAR TO A LARGER CAR OF COMPARABLE EQUIPMENT the government estimated gas mileage will vary very little.

Let's consider some valid reasons for buying a larger car versus a smaller one:

1. Big cars generally are more durable and last longer.

2. In many instances foreign car repairs are more costly than domestic larger cars.

3. Parts for foreign small cars are sometimes very difficult to get.

4. Big cars are safer in case of an accident. One out of every five cars will be in an accident in any one year period.

5. Big cars are generally more comfortable.

6. The larger car meets a much wider range of total needs than a small car.

7. In many cases if we compare the price of a small luxury car to a larger luxury car the price of the small car will be higher with much less equipment.

8. By purchasing American made cars, the American dollars stay here and improve our economy.

The American public has been so used to bargain prices for fuel for so many years they have taken low fuel prices for granted. To be realistic in this regard, we need to compare today's gas prices with those in the past. Gas is approximately $1.00 a gallon, as compared to 40 or 50 years ago when it was 25 or 30 cents per gallon. Today's prices for gas are about three times more than they were back then. During this same period of time, the costs of other items have gone up five to ten times, in some cases even more. Stop and think back to 1974 when there were gas lines and many people went out and purchased compact cars, only to realize a few months later, when things seemed to return to normal, that they had made a poor decision.

I am not saying that your decision would be wrong to purchase a small car. All I am trying to do is to place the facts before you and you decide "Does A Small Car Really Meet Your Family's Needs".

Wasn't Thinking Of Another Series

As an on-camera performer, Dennis Weaver is one of television's most versatile actors. In a little over a year, he's portrayed an anthropologist, a lawyer, a 'wife-beater,' a detective and an insecure U.S. Army colonel.

Now he's coming back to episodic television in a dual role as a celebrated novelist who's also a veteran police detective in "Stone," premiering on ABC Monday, Jan. 14 at 9 p.m.

"I really feel good about this one," he says. "None of my characterizations have been me. And yet all of them partially were. But I think Dan Stone is closer to me than anybody.

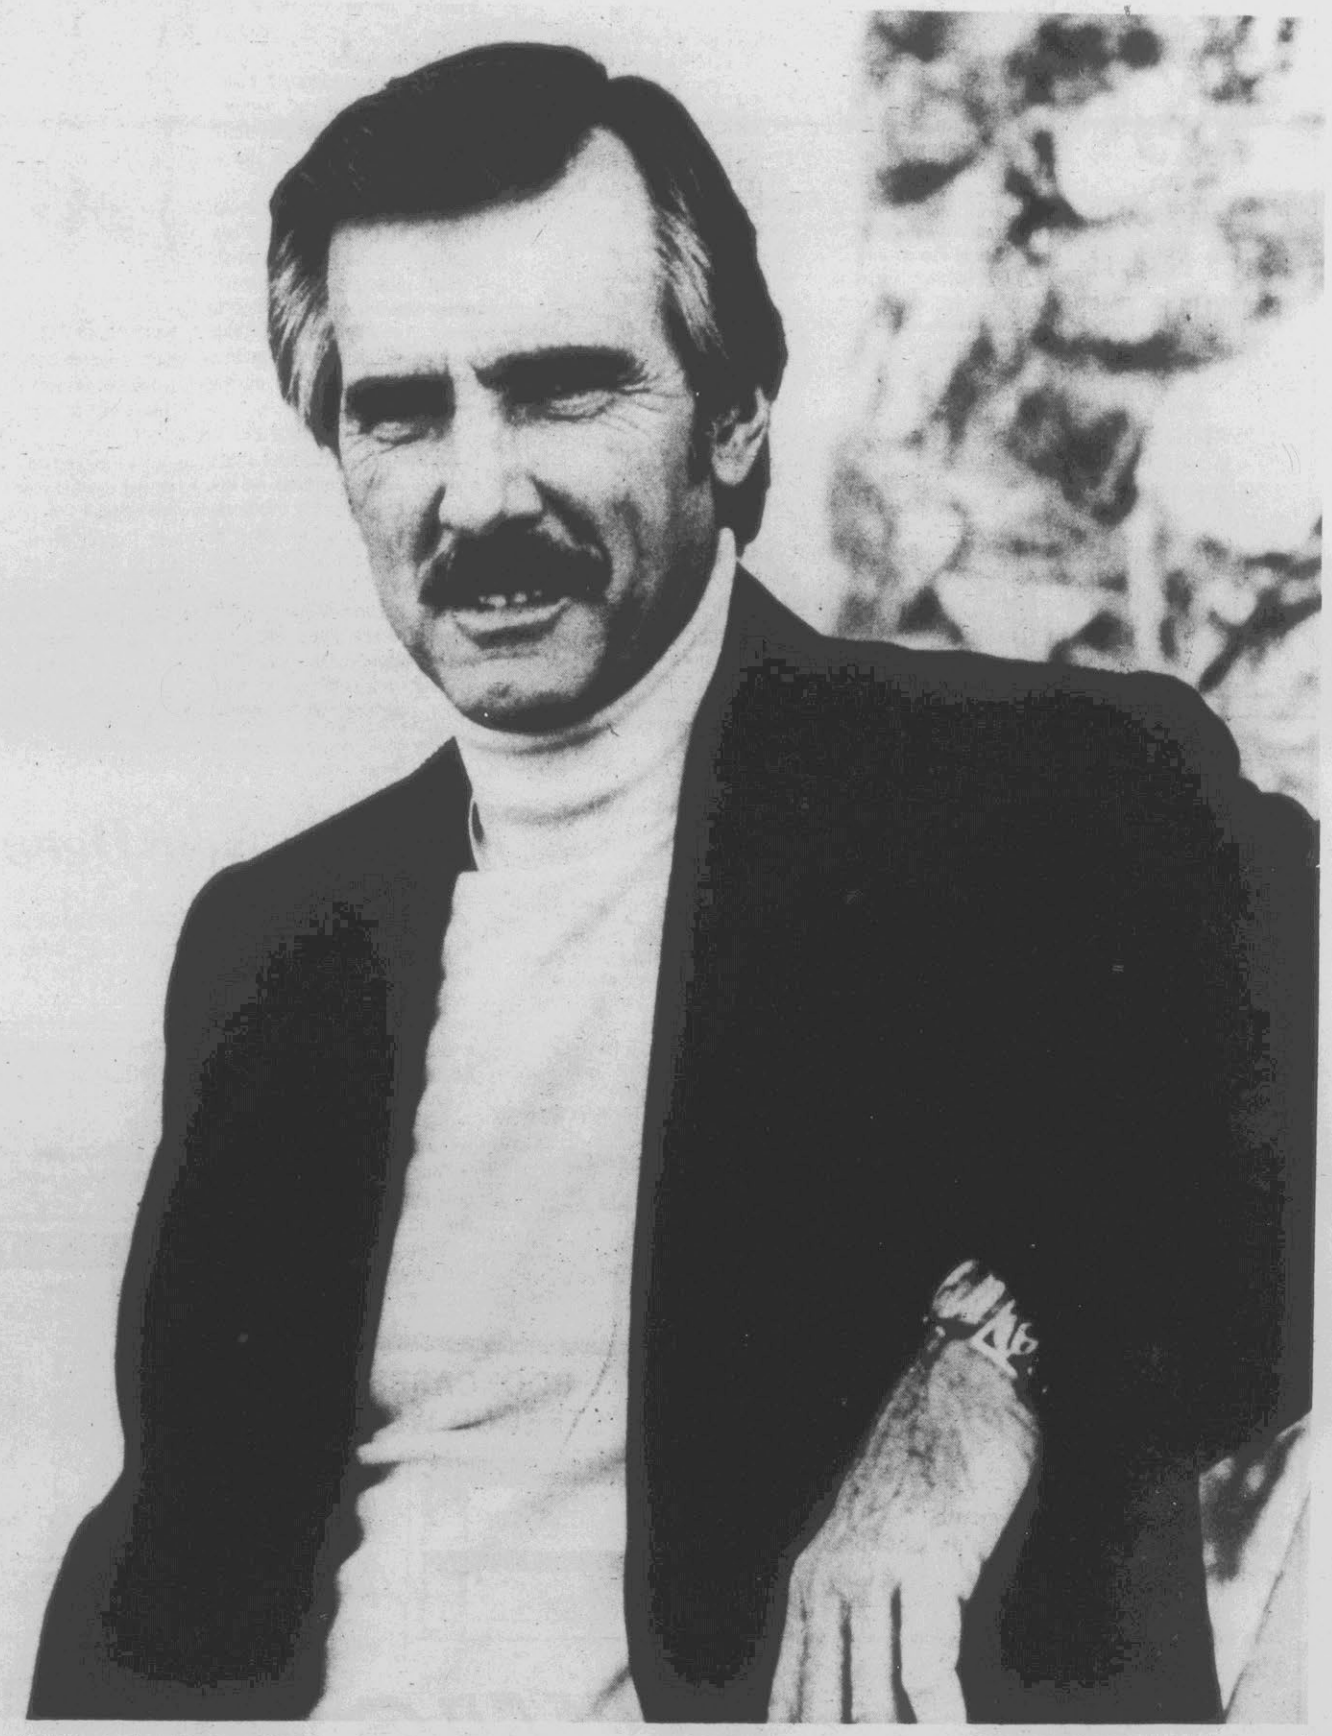

But Dennis wasn't thinking about going into another series. "As a matter of fact," he says, "in my own mind I'd put it aside, and I'd not even thought of it as a possibility. But then this idea was brought to me, and I knew the people involved, as far as writing and producing. It was such a special idea that I said, 'Let's go for it.'"

Weaver should be right at home in this dual role. His varied interests once won him the title of "Most Versatile Man" while attending Oklahoma University, where he divided his time between the drama department, scholastic activities and sports. And, but for a sleepless night, he might have delayed his long and successful career.

A topnotch athlete throughout his high school and college days, Dennis found himself in New York in the early summer of 1948 to represent Oklahoma University at the tryouts for the U.S. Olympic team. It was the first time in seven years that his college had qualified a man for competition, and Dennis was a leading contender in the decathlon event.

"I had split interests," Weaver admits. "Broadway and the Olympics. I was very much torn between them. But, being in New York, I couldn't turn down the opportunity to audition with an off-Broadway group looking for actors."

The audition went well into the night and Weaver traded a hotel bed for a couch at the theatre. The next morning he arrived at the stadium with barely enough time to suit up and get to the starting blocks. "With a good first day, I would have made the team," says Dennis. He ended the competition placing sixth out of 36 entrants.

DENNIS WEAVER stars as "celebrity cop" Dan Stone, a policeman who has an impressive arrest record as well as being a best-selling author, in ABC's new action-drama series, "Stone," which begins its series premiere on Monday, Jan.14 (9-10p.m.)

This Cat Is Purr-fect!

Syn Cat, a slightly cross-eyed and tempermental sealpoint Siamese, won the coveted Patsy Award as Best Animal Actor for his performance in Walt Disney's "That Darn Cat." The comedy-thriller is airing on "Disney's Wonderful World" Sunday, Jan. 13 (7 to 9 p.m.).

This talented feline runs circles around such notable performers as Hayley Mills, Dean Jones, Dorothy Provine and Roddy McDowall when he leads a force of federal security agents on one of the funniest screen chases ever filmed.

Stealing scenes from human actors is nothing new for Syn. The nine-pound package of cinematic dynamite earlier displayed his talents in "The Incredible Journey." There he crossed 250 miles of Canadian wilderness, jumped waterfalls a la Errol Flynn, and fought a 500-pound bear. Then, at happier junctures, he danced gracefully through the sylvan scene like a feline Fred Astaire.

Syn was found, a two-year-old orphan, in Ontario, California's Chaffey Humane Association Pound after a short-sighted owner objected to his standoffish ways. An alert trainer, Bill Koehler, purchased him for five dollars, and started Syn on his career.

Syn took to acting like a duck to orange sauce, and beat more than 100 other applicants for the 'Journey' role. Later, wisely rejecting TV roles and bit parts, he waited and finally decided to take the role in "That Darn Cat."

Syn's hobbies include closed-claw horseback riding, dogpaddling, perpendicular tree-trunk walking, refrigerator and back porch poaching, fence-hopping, garbage inspection, hide-and-seek and neighborhood touring.

His dislikes are few. They include federal agents, miniscule tracking devices such as the one used during the film's production, jumpy film crews and that easily recognizable cat bait one finds on sound stages.

He's an omnivorous eater, preferring lean roast beef, particularly if it is left lying around loose on tables set for humans.

Although his eyes and nose power are poor, Syn has a remarkable sense of hearing. And he will react almost instantly to a bell tone as far as 500 feet away — particularly if filet mignon is offered as motivation.

Syn uses stand-ins and stunt doubles for certain scenes, but, as he comments through agent Koehler, "So what? Doesn't every star?"

PATTI RANDALL (Hayley Mills) suspects foul play when she finds a watch around her cat's neck in "That Darn Cat." The acclaimed comedy-thriller about a cat's involvement in rescuing a kidnap victim airs on "Disney's Wonderful World."

Opens New Decade

ABC News' religious-cultural series, "Directions," is opening the new decade with conversations between leading lay and religious thinkers in a four-part series entitled "Counsel for the Eighties."

Ambassador Sol Linowitz, President Carter's Ambassador-at-Large for Middle East Negotiations, was the guest on the first program in the series (seen Sundays, 12:30 to 1 a.m.).

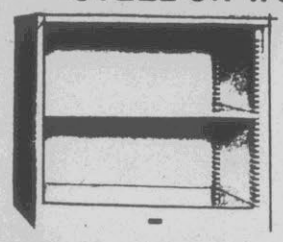

Other guests and the dates they will be appearing are:

Rev. Dr. Martin Marty, a leading Protestant writer-philosopher and the Fairfax M. Cone Distinguished Service Professor at the University of Chicago Divinity School — Sunday, Jan. 13.

9 All Night Movie II: "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man"

"THE DALLAS COWBOYS CHEERLEADERS II" will air as the "ABC Sunday Night Movie."

An American Phenomenon

Being a Dallas Cowboys Cheerleader carries with it the same status that one pertained to being a Ziegfeld Girl or a Goldwyn Girl in years past.

These beauties will be highlighted in "Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders II," airing as The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Jan. 13 (9 to 11 p.m.). John Davidson and Laraine Stephens star.

In the seven years since they were formed, the Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders' rise to fame has taken on the appearance of an American phenomenon.

"The girls are continually in demand for personal appearances at grand openings, civic functions, charity benefits and special events," says their director, Suzanne Mitchell. "Every weekend throughout the year two or more Cheerleaders may be appearing somewhere in Texas and dozens of diverse locations all over the country."

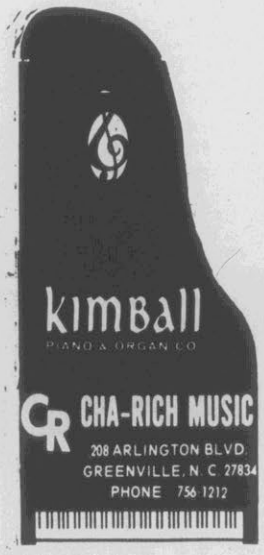

Open auditions for a coveted spot as a Cheerleader have been held since 1976. This past year, there were 1,617 applicants and selections were made through a three-stage system: preliminaries, semifinals and finals.

"What we look for in our cheerleading squad is simply a cross-section of the American woman," says Mitchell. "They must be employed full-time or be students or homemakers. They must be educated and well-informed. They must also pass a quiz that tests their knowledge of football and the Cowboys organization," she adds. All the above is in addition to looks and talent.

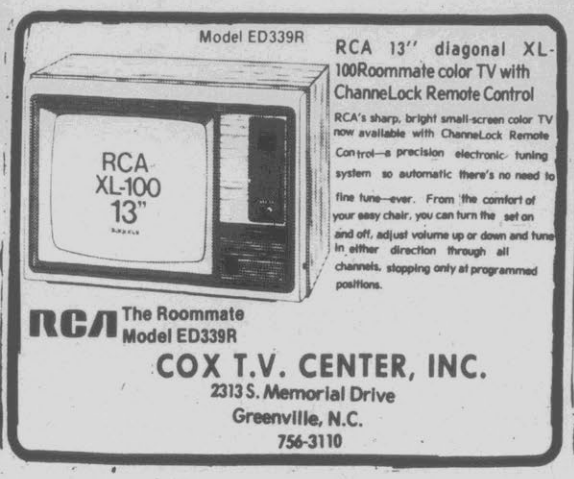

Those selected to be a Cheerleader quickly discover how demanding a regimen they face. They must contend with rigorous physical conditioning, exhaustive practice schedules and stringent rules and regulations. If any Cheerleader gains excess weight, she receives a warning and then faces possible dismissal from the squad.

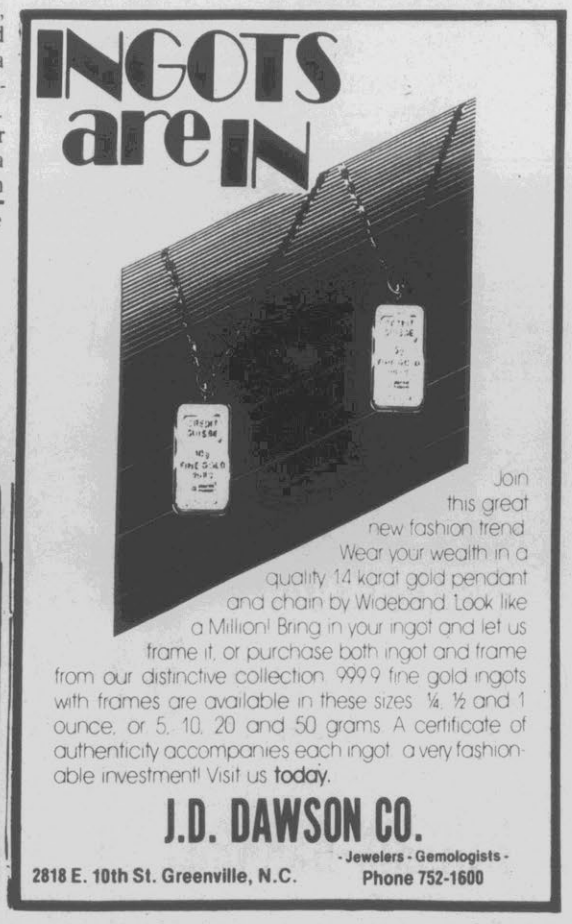

From mid-May until late June, the girls rehearse every Friday, Saturday and Sunday for four hours at a time under the demanding eye of choreographer Texie Waterman. Then, for more than six weeks, they rehearse almost every night. Not only must they master the routines. It's also imperative that they get in shape to survive the pre-season heat that sometimes reaches 100 degrees on the field in Texas Stadium.

Behind The Scenes

Susan Richardson's life does not evolve around her work on "Eight Is Enough."

Likewise, her marriage and pending arrival of her first child does not necessarily dominate her life away from the sound stage.

True, the latter and the former are at the top of her list of priorities. But close behind is her concern for young people and young animals.

"Up until recently," the bubbly actress explains, "I would always be available to make some kind of publicity appearance, either for the show or for some group who offered to pay my way to some place on their behalf.

"I've changed that now. For instance, I recently won a lot of money on a game show which was to be donated to my favorite charity. Well, I named the American Cancer Society. But I also stipulated that it only goes for the anti-smoking program of the Society.

"Conveying to young people that they need not smoke, take drugs or drink to be cool is very important to me and to my husband, Michael. And we're always available to make appearances to contribute what we can to that message, but not for a fee or publicity.

"Likewise, we're members of Green Peace, the organization designed to stop the killing of baby seals. I'd rather attend oneof their functions where there's only a hundred people instead of being paid $5,000 to open a new car dealership and help sell 20 new cars.

FRENCH ACTOR, Philippe Caubere, stars as one of France's most famous and romantic playwrights in the Great Performances' presentation of "Moliere," on PBS, Wednesday, Jan. 16 (8-9 p.m.).

King Honored

Emmy-winning actress Cicely Tyson, tenor George Shirley and maestro Julius Rudel, with the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra, join in "A Tribute to Martin Luther King, Jr." The special, in honor of what might have been the 51st birthday of the great Black civil rights leader, airs Tuesday, Jan. 15 (9 p.m.) on PBS.

Tyson, a widely acclaimed Black actress opens the program as narrator of the accompanying text to "The Testament of Freedom" by Randall Thompson. The words are from a speech from Thomas Jefferson with the theme "I shall not die without hope."

She will be accompanied by the Buffalo Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Julius Rudel, and the Sounds of the City Chorus, directed by Donald Hilliard.

Tyson will then read from the immortal "I Have a Dream" speech by Dr. King and a poem by Langston Hughes, "A Dream Deferred."

Maestro Rudel conducts the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra in a work by Black composer Ulysses Kay, entitled "Of New Horizons." Next, Tyson reads a translation of Friedrich Ruckert's poem "At Midnight," accompanied by Gustav Mahler's composition of the same name, as performed by the Orchestra with tenor George Shirley.

Shirley will sing two spirituals: "He's Got the Whole World" and "O Freedom," followed by Tyson reading from Dr. King's "Mountaintop Speech."

Maestro Rudel conducts the Orchestra in a stirring composition by Carmen Moore called "Colors" and closes the program with a performance of "Preludes" by Franz Liszt. The Black poet Alphonse de La Martine has written a poem, "Les Preludes," on which this work is based that states that life is a series of preludes until the end.

The Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra was founded in 1936 and is now in its forty-fourth season. It has grown steadily in artistic quality and innovative programming under such diverse conductors as William Steinberg, Josef Krips, Lucas Foss and Michael Tilson Thomas. Each made a special contribution to the Orchestra's musical development.

Michele Will Tell

A: The address to write to the Fan Club is The Dallas Cowboys, Public Relations Department, 6116 N. Central Expressway, Dallas, TX, 75206. Rah, Rah, Y'All!

Q: How do I contact the Merv Griffin Show. I'm very interested in a book that was discussed on that program. R.E.S., WILMINGTON, NC.

Q: Did Merle Oberon ever marry the young man she fell in love with while filming her latest film? N. LANG, FARMVILLE, NC.

A: Yes, Miss Oberon did marry Robert Wolders. They were married only four years before she died on the day after Thanksgiving, 1979.

Q: Why isn't Paul Lynde on "Hollywood Squares" anymore? We haven't seen him on there for quite a while. J. L. J., WILMINGTON, NC.

A: Mr. Lynde is taking a break from "Hollywood Squares" for a while in order to take care of other show business committments. Look for him to show up on occasional specials. His witty repartee is sorely missed on "Hollywood Squares," though!

Q: Will Dr. Cliff Warner and Nina ever get together on "All My Children"? Please ask the people at Channel 13 to continue to show this fine soap opera at 4:30 p.m. so we working people can still enjoy it. I. ELLIOTT, FAYETTEVILLE, NC.

A: If Cliff and Nina ever get together, it will be only after much torment and many tears on the part of Sybil Thorne! Why not write to the fine folks at WBTW, Channel 13, Box 630, Florence, SC, 29501, and let them know how much you enjoy "All My Children's" current time slot. I'm sure they'll enjoy hearing from you.

Q: Would you please give me some information about Tina Louise? She's one of my favorites. D. BROWN, FAYETTEVILLE, NC.

A: I hope you didn't miss one of Miss Louise's most recent performances, "Friendships, Secrets and Lies," that recently aired on network TV. Tina has played roles that have ranged from the sexpot ("God's Little Acre") to the showgirl ("Gilligan's Island"). She was born in New York City where her father owned a candy store. She is single and lives in Los Angeles, CA.

There's More To It

Why is the Bentinck Hotel located on Duke Street?

The easiest answer, of course, is that's where John Hawkesworth put it when he created "The Duchess of Duke Street." Just as he put the Bellamys on Eaton Place when he did "Upstairs, Downstairs."

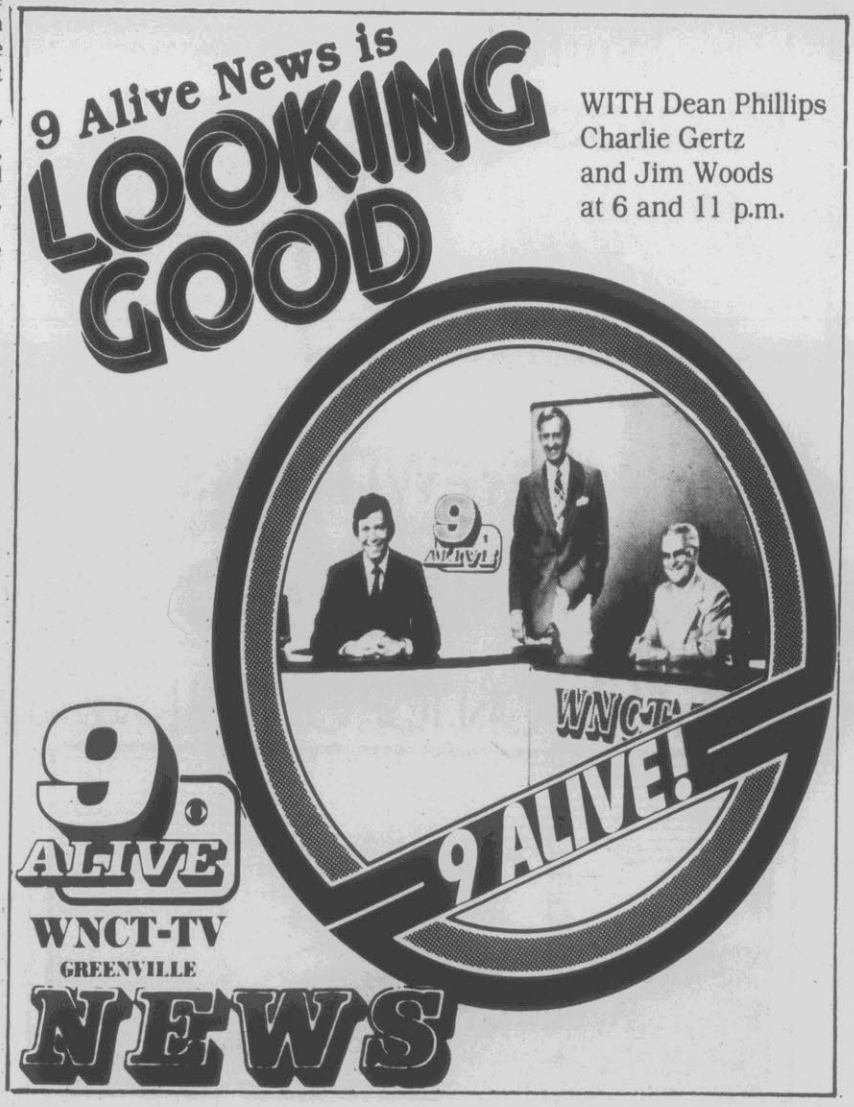

Actually, there's more to it than that. And anyone could have discovered this if they'd taken the time to question Hawkesworth, producer of the series now airing on PBS (Sundays, 9 p.m.).

"Duke Street is just around the corner from Jermyn Street, address of the Cavendish," says Hawkesworth, delighted that someone was finally inquiring.

What's more, he didn't pull the Bentinck's name out of the air, either. Or make it up to plague proofreaders who can be forgiven for assuming that any name that looks like that in print has to be a typographical error. Bentinck has a solid and very aristocratic ambience to those in the know, and a direct connection with the Cavendish, site of uppercrust goings-on that titillated Edwardian London.

JOE DON BAKER stars as a young worker who grows to become a power in the labor movement and Karen Black portrays his wife, in "Power," a miniseries to be colorcast on NBC Monday Night at the Movies, Jan. 14, and NBC Tuesday Night at the Movies, Jan. 15 (9-11 p.m. both nights).

'Chisholms' Premieres

"The Chisholms," a new series depicting the courageous journey of a pioneer family to California in the 1840s, premieres with a two-hour episode Saturday, Jan. 19 (8 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

Is Mills Another 'Barney'?

A chunky, balding young actor who learned his craft at England's prestigious Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts is surprised to find himself identified as the comedy find of the new television season.

Mills Watson, who stars as the wacky Deputy Perkins on NBC-TV's "The Misadventures of Sheriff Lobo" (Tuesdays, 8 to 9 p.m.), is evoking memories of several other comics, among them Stan Laurel and Tim Conway. But he reminds most viewers of Don Knott's famed Barney Fife, the comic bumbler who gets roars of laughter as he falls headfirst into life's pitfalls.

I'm getting afraid to look at each new script," laughs Watson. "I hate to think of what they're going to have me do next."

So far this season, he's been trapped in quicksand, hung by his heels in a tree, fallen out of a boat, and been used as a human bowling ball by a group of hillbillies.

He's also constantly smashing Sheriff Lobo's patrol cars or allowing suspects to escape through his stupidity.

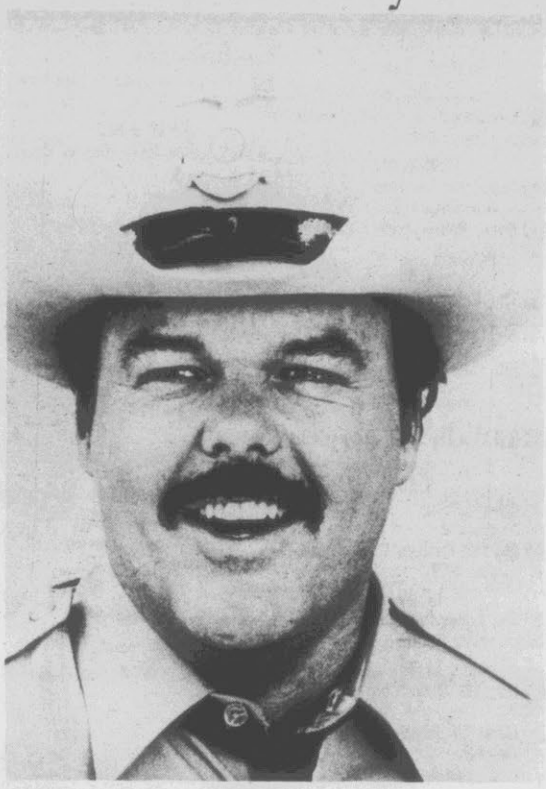

Mills is the guy viewers love to laugh at, which comes as a welcome surprise — and change.

For years he'd been type-cast in mad-dog killer roles. For a decade he appeared in various TV series as the rotten, unshaven, cruel monster who was always beating up or shooting at the good guys.

"They even had me kicking dogs and punching kids," says Watson of his early TV and movie roles. "In the old days people would look at me in a funny way, as though they were sure they had just seen my picture on a 'wanted' poster in the post office. Today they recognize me as Perkins, and they smile and ask for my autograph. I like this new way much better."

Some series stars would be very jealous of the fact that the 'second banana' is getting so much attention. But Claude Akins isn't one of them. Akins, who plays Sheriff Lobo, also laughs at Perkins' antics. Many scenes have to be shot several times because Akins takes one look at Watson's animated face and breaks out laughing when he's supposed to be serious.

Akins says that he believes Mills Watson is one of the funniest men to come along in years. "And I'm delighted that he's coming to national attention on my show," he added.

Lots Of Dollars!

According to legal papers filed recently in Los Angeles Superior Court, 11-year-old Gary Coleman, star of NBC-TV's "Diff'rent Strokes," has an estate valued at $1,000,000.

The papers were filed by the actor's parents, who want to be named legal guardians.

Gary's personal property is valued at $420,000, and he has an annual income of $610,000.

'Winner' Airs

The drama centers around 16-year-old Maggie McDonald, who feels she must be perfect at everything she does. Indeed, she seems to be just that as a figure skater whom everyone expects will qualify for the Olympics.

When Maggie first experiences stiffness in her knees, she shrugs it off. But she takes a bad fall during the regional tryouts and winds up in the hospital. The diagnosis — juvenile rheumatoid arthritis. She will never be able to skate in competition again.

'Heartbreak Winner' will air later this year as an "ABC Afterschool Special."

Mulgrew Signs

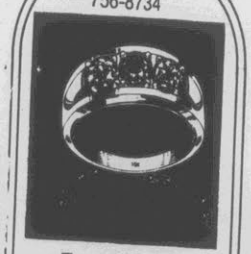

Kate Mulgrew has joined the cast of "Death Work," a drama about four prisoners condemned to die in the electric chair before worldwide television. Others signed for starring roles are Anthony Quinn, Edward Asner and Paul Winfield. The motion picture is based on James McLendon's novel of the same name.

Filming, which will be at Florida prison sites, is scheduled to begin Feb. 25.

'Oh, God!' Sequel

Brenda Vaccaro and David Birney will portray a couple visited by George Burns in "Oh, God! II," a sequel to the hit movie in which Burns applied the 'heavenly heat' to John Denver.

Drama Is Based On Novel

Four white feathers symbolizing cowardice trigger remorse, self-pity and, finally determination and bravery by Harry Feversham in "The Four Feathers," to be rebroadcast as the NBC Late Night Movie, Sunday, Jan. 13 (11:30 p.m.). Three of the four feathers were presented by comrades, one by his sweetheart.

Beau Bridges stars as Feversham, principal character in the drama, which is based on a novel by A.E.W. Mason.

Powell portrays Capt. Jack Durrance, one of Feversham's fellow officers who gives him a white feather. This occurs after Feversham, in a moment of panic, destroys telegrams ordering his unit to report to Egyptian expeditionary forces. He does this in order to go through with his plan to resign from the military and marry Ethne Eustace (Seymour). But problems arise because Durrance is also in love with her.

Ward appears as Capt. William Trench and David Robb is Lt. Thomas Willoughby, also Feversham's close friends, who give him white feathers. Andrews plays David Feversham, a military man who is Feversham's stern father. He bars his son from the family home when he learns of his actions. Johnson is seen as Abou Fatma, an agent for the British in the Sudan.

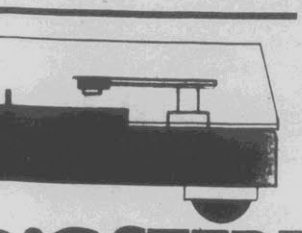

In the story, Feversham, agonizing over his humiliation, resolves to redeem himself. He sets out to prove his worth in battle and hopes to be able to return the white feathers. In the Sudan, he dons a disguise and begins his dangerous adventure with the help of Fatma. His behavior under fire and his meetings with Ethne and his father in England after the war provide an emotional climax to the story.

'Feathers' was filmed at various locations in England, including Stratfield Saye House (the estate of the Duke of Wellington), and Littlecoat House, a 16th century Tudor manor house.

A Troubled Housewife

Suzanne Pleshette stars as a woman struggling to hold herself and her family together when her husband suffers a complete nervous breakdown in "If Things Were Different." The motion picture will be broadcast on The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," Jan. 16 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Don Murray, Tony Roberts, Arte Johnson, Chuck McCann, Dan Shor and Sherrie Wills also star in the film, which blends drama and humor to depict a family at a spiritual and emotional crossroads.

Pleshette portrays Janet Langford, a happily married housewife whose sheltered suburban life is rocked when her husband (Murray) inexplicably collapses into a catatonic trance from which there is little hope he will ever emerge.

In order to support her family, Janet lands a job at a local television station. This adds a hectic but rewarding new dimension to her life and leads gradually to romance with the station's owner (Roberts).

Her husband's silent presence at a nearby hospital, however, casts a cloud over Janet and her two children (Shor and Wills). They share their mother's frustration and confusion concerning their father's illness.

SUZANNE PLESHETTE stars as a housewife thrust into a new life as a working woman, in "If Things Were Different," to be broadcast on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies."

A Proud Parent

Dick Van Patten is a proud papa. His son Vincent has been named 'Rookie of the Year' by the Association for Tennis Patrons. Vince currently ranks 34th internationally.

Mail Keeps Pouring In

Dean Martin used to tell viewers to "keep them cards and letters comin' in." And they did.

Now, it's NBC-TV's highly rated "Real People" (Wednesdays, 8 to 9 p.m.) that is pulling in the mail, sometimes as many as 5,000 letters a day.

Since September, more than 81,000 pieces of mail have reached the "Real People" offices.

"Depending on the load," says Mike, "six people might work three to eight hours a day just sorting mail. We divide all mail into such categories as cast mail, straight mail, miscellaneous, photo requests, want ads, typos, classified ads, show ideas, special requests, bloopers, negative mail, consumer ideas, x-rated signs or posters, names, pet peeves and children's jokes.

"And it's much more mail than we got when 'Laugh-In' was on."

Jack Harrell, executive producer, verifies that. "This is about 10 times the 'Laugh-In' mail. For that show, it was mostly from fans. This is another direction entirely."

Up to now, two areas provide most of the mail.

"We get a lot of newspaper and billboard typos, and classified ads," says Mike. "Everything there is turned over to the writers and we try to use as much of it as possible. It has to be funny — and in good taste."

PEOPLE SUPPORT 'REAL PEOPLE' — Sometimes there are as many as 5,000 letters a week for NBC-TV's popular "Real People." Production associate Mike Friedman supervises the mail and sees that they are put into proper categories.

Film Traces Artist's Life

The second episode of "Moliere," a major French film which traces the life of one of France's greatest playwrights, will be presented on Great Performances Wednesday, Jan. 16 (8 to 9 p.m.), on PBS.

"Moliere" spans the playwright's life from age ten until his death in 1763, highlighting his affair with the beautiful Madeleine Bejart as well as the important role he played as a favorite of King Louis XIV (The Sun King) and his court at Versailles.

In this segment, the townspeople choose to celebrate Mardi Gras, even though it has been banned. The students join them in the festivities. Soldiers are summoned to quell the near riot conditions and during the chaos and excitement, Jean-Baptiste meets actress Madeleine Bejart. Together with several other actors, they decide to form their own theatrical company with Jean-Baptiste eager to perform tragedies. One evening the troupe attends a lecture by Descartes after which Jean-Baptiste changes his name to Moliere. Louis XIV comes to power and Moliere's troupe stages a tragedy which fails miserably. Overdue bills and lack of funds result in hard times and a jail term imposed by creditors. Moliere's father rescues the actors by posting bail money. Moliere then convinces his fellow actors that the time is right to leave Paris and tour the kingdom of France.

It took 40-year-old Ariane Mnouchkine, considered one of France's most outstanding stage directors, four years to produce this epic film. "Our 'Moliere' is not a biography — it's a life," she explains. "In fact, it's a voyage through the contradictions, the responsibilities of an artist, in a fascinating period of history. I love a spectacle passionately. I believe that, in part, a spectacle is a bit of nourishment, that it is even something vital and the public derives a kind of energy from it. One should leave a theater feeling a little stronger, a bit larger in some way. 'Moliere,' for us, was a formidable adventure, a discovery, and each felt that here was the possibility to give full measure to project."

In the French-speaking world, the reputation of Moliere is quite as honored and secure as that of William Shakespeare in the English-speaking world.

BENNY GOODMAN guests on "The Tonight Show," Thursday, Jan. 17 at 11:30 p.m. on NBC-TV.

Namath Swings

Joe Namath will play a swinging bachelor in "Matchmaker," an upcoming segment of ABC-TV's "The Love Boat," Pittsburgh Steeler line backer Cleavon Little has been signed to appear as Joe's buddy.

Leaves No Stone Unturned

Jack Klugman, the star of NBC-TV's "Quincy" (seen Thursdays, 9 to 10 p.m.) is a gambler. He gambles in Las Vegas with dice, most anywhere on horses, and in Hollywood on his career.

But if his judgement at the track or in casinos might sometimes prove questionable, his instincts about acting are always right on the money.

He's at the studio every morning by 7:15, and until he leaves late at night he seems to actually become Quincy. Like the hard-driving medical examiner, Klugman leaves no stone unturned in his quest for excellence. He rewrites scenes, rehearses, consults and demands the best possible efforts from everybody involved in the show.

Then, when there is an opportunity, he pursues the ponies. But the owner of two race horses has found lady luck to be pretty unkind.

"When I leave the track, it's like being cleaned out in a Turkish bath," he sighs. "I'm cleaned out of cash."

However, the fact that Klugman fervidly pursued his life-long dream of being an actor has given him the opportunity to enjoy indulging his compulsions.

He was born in South Philadelphia, Pa., and as a child, he entertained the idea of acting. But coming from such a rough neighborhood, he never voiced his desire, except to his long-time buddy, Joseph Roman, who co-stars on "Quincy" as Police Sgt. Brill. "Where I come from they pay you to paint a house or dig a ditch, but they don't pay you to act," he explains.

"When I first came into this business I was thrilled just to be working as an actor. To get paid on top of it was almost too good to be true.

"I can remember when I got $10 for my first television show and it seemed like a lot of money," Klugman recalled.

JACK KLUGMAN stars as the restless Los Angeles medical examiner, who uses his pathology findings to help solve complex criminal cases in "Quincy," airing on NBC.

SPOTLIGHT

An Overnight Success

The overnight fame and success Robert Hays has gained as a result of his role as Donna Pescow's husband in "Angie," no doubt pleases him.

But Bob is truly unspoiled by all the glamour and attention that's come his way because he's really more than just an actor.

The son of a Marine Corps major, he spent his youth traveling the world as a full-time service brat.

"I guess that vagabond style of living kind of becomes your nature because, like, I've driven across this country about 15 times. And in the process I pursued a lot of different vocations," he says.

"At one point, I thought about being a mountain climbing guide. Then I got my Brown Belt in karate and I thought about teaching that. But I took up scuba. So, I thought I would do that. But in reality I never knew what I was going to do until I decided to go to college."

That happened when Bob and his family moved to the San Diego area of Southern California. But when he went to enroll for his first semester, the only class openings were in track and field and beginning acting. Bob enrolled in both.

ROBERT HAYS

"I found out very quickly that in acting there was something I could do that I really enjoyed and I could get A's at the same time."

He quit college and went to work at San Diego's Globe Theater. For extra money, he learned photography, then took and printed pictures for aspiring actor friends while living in and out of his Volkswagen bus, 'Buster.'

Small television parts came his way, and he was eventually cast in the lead of a pilot called "Almost Heaven." When it didn't sell he was hurriedly cast in "Angie."

"It all happened very fast," he explains. "I did a test one week, and the next week I was on the set."

One success has led to another and, though he hasn't given up 'Buster,' he has recently bought a house.

"That's about the only major change in my life. That and I now have no time to climb rocks or surf."

Bob's single, and says there is no romantic involvement with his diminuitive co-star in the series. "There is absolutely no truth to these rumors," he says emphatically. "But Donna and I are very good friends."

Who's Your Favorite?

"I'm not terribly surprised that 'The American Music Awards' is the most-watched music awards show on the air," says executive producer Dick Clark. "After all, we're airing the American people's opinions.

"I certainly believe that's why over 55 million viewers tuned in last year," says Clark. The innovative and successful program was created by Clark to honor artists and music selected by the American music-buying public as its favorites. The awards were conceived with the notion that since the public is the ultimate decision maker, its favorites should be singled out.

The seventh annual "American Music Awards" presentation will be televised Friday, Jan. 18 (9 to 11 p.m.). Elton John and Cher will be co-hosts.

Fifteen awards will be presented in three musical categories — pop, soul and country. There will also be a special Award of Merit, which in past years has gone to such artists as Ella Fitzgerald, Perry Como, Irving Berlin, Johnny Cash and Berry Gordy.

Each year, nominations are compiled from the year-end charts of the leading music industry publications. Over 40,000 ballots are sent to a national sample of the American music-buying public by the New York-based company, Marketing Evaluations, Inc. This provides a cross section of the public based on geographic location, age, sex and ethnic origin. Each of the three fields is divided into five categories: Best Male Vocalist; Best Female Vocalist; Best Duo, Group or Chorus; Best Single, and Best Album.

Makes Things Happen

As the old saying goes, 'The more sports you participate in, the easier it is to figure out what you like.' But it wasn't easy for Kelly Tripucka, Notre Dame's all-purpose forward. He finally decided to give up dreams of a career in baseball or football, however, when he was a senior at Bloomfield High School in New Jersey.

"It took me a long time to decide just what I wanted to do," he says. "I loved football, but I probably wasn't physical enough. And I don't have a strong arm for baseball. So I settled for basketball."

He's now a standout for Notre Dame, which will tangle with UCLA, an old rival, Saturday, Jan. 19. NBC will televise the game (beginning at 3:30 p.m.).

Kelly's father is Frank Tripucka, a premier quarterback at Notre Dame during the late 1940s, and he has five brothers who are equally talented in sports. Among them: Tracy, now assistant coach at Utah; T.K., who played for Fordham, and Todd, a former All-America at Lafayette.

According to Kelly, it all goes back to the attitude his father had concerning idleness.

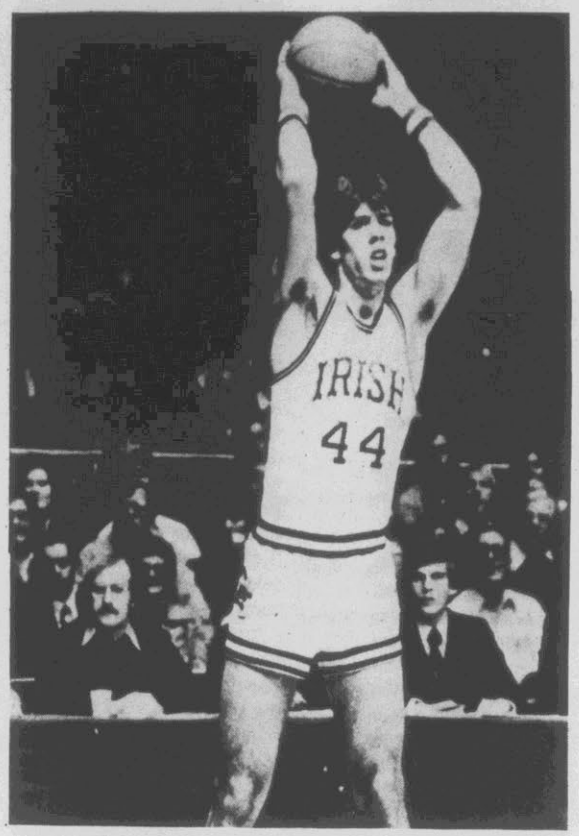

"Dad never liked for us to sit around and not do anything," Kelly recalls. "He didn't care which sport we played. He just wanted us to go outside and do something — anything — just to be active.

"Whenever we played basketball together in the back yard, it seemed like we would always end up arguing or fighting. We were all brought up to win."

Kelly certainly hasn't lost that desire to win since he's been at Notre Dame. In two seasons, he's averaged 12.9 points per game, had the team's top free throw percentage (.854), and was selected to the 10-man Basketball Writers' Association All-America team.

Tripucka worked his way into the starting line-up after a superb stint as a key substitute his freshamn year. After averaging 11.7 points and five rebounds his initial season, he capped the year with a Most Valuable Player award in the 1978 NCAA Midwest Regionals.

"Kelly is our power forward," noted Digger Phelps, his coach. "He's like a fullback in football. He goes out and gets three yards and three more yards. Then all of a sudden, he'll come up with seven yards. He makes things happen and he'll accept any challenge."

KELLY TRIPUCKA comes from a long line of successful basketball players. In fact, four brothers starred for various teams across the country and two of them are coaching in the college ranks. Kelly, who plays for Notre Dame, will lead his talented squad against arch-rival UCLA when the two national powers meet on Saturday, Jan. 19 starting at 3:30 p.m. on NBC.

H.E.L.P.

Lucky Chancenbocker's in trouble and his lucky streak has ended. It's all because the horseshoe that's brought him good fortune toppled from its overhead perch struck his head, causing a sore, swollen lump.

But help is on the way in a clever, animated, entertaining emergency first-aid lesson for children titled "H.E.L.P.!!" (Dr. Henry's Emergency Lessons for People), now airing Saturdays on ABC-TV.

HOLLYWOOD — It's almost a certainty that there'll be some major changes made within the NBC NEWS department in the aftermath of that network's coverage of the Iranian situation. Always the conservative network, the decision to telecast anti-American speeches in exchange for some exclusive film footage has reportedly badly shaken the higher echelon decision-makers.

Although CBS continues to postpone the extension of "THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS" to an hour, the week of such a new format will see the departure of DAVID HASSLEHOFF in the role of Snapper. His contract specified a half-hour show, a technicality that will free him per his request.

RICHARD PAUL, the lovable Mayor Teddy Burnside of "CARTER COUNTRY," has been set to star in ABC's "ONE IN A MILLION" with Shirley Hemphill.

Don't be surprised if SUZANNE SOMERS files suit against both Playboy Magazine and the Ace Hardware Company in the aftermath of being fired as the latter's TV spokeswoman because of the former's decision to print a set of ten-year-old test pictures. The photos were taken to determine if Suzanne would qualify as one of the magazine's center-folds. She didn't.

It's now being said that ABC will give "HAPPY DAYS" a major publicity push in hopes of regaining the show's one-time high Neilsen ratings, the result of the web's belief that the series still ranks among the better quality shows on the tube. Indeed, the decision to re-run the episode of 'Days' which introduced ROBIN WILLIAMS as Mork from Ork is a direct result of the belief that the series' strength might aid both faltering shows in the numbers' race.

GREGORY HARRISON of "TRAPPER JOHN, M.D." candidly admits that, unlike his days as the star of the short-lived "LOGAN'S RUN," he no longer has the motivation for a lot of money and an equal amount of fame. "The ego has been put in its proper place now," Greg says.

For all those "SOAP" fans, JIMMY BAIO'S romance with his TV school teacher could not be consumated on screen until after his character celebrated his 18th birthday, per orders of the censors. Thus, scripts had to be altered to include his birthday so he'd be a consenting adult.

Addition Of 'Magic' Helps

NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien promised that the action in his league would pick up after last year's dismal showing, which found NBA arenas half-empty much of the time and a shrinking national television audience.

But a highly successful draft before the season has given new life into the league and it's brought back the concept of team play as the norm rather than the exception.

Two teams who've benefited from the draft are the Boston Celtics and the Los Angeles Lakers. And it's not surprising that both are sporting two of the strongest records in the league.

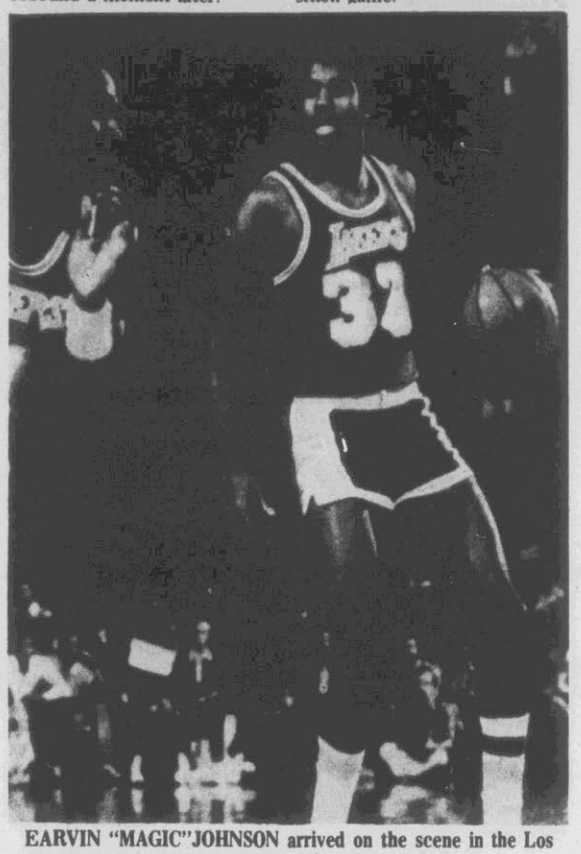

The Celtics, with super rookie Larry Bird, take on the Lakers and Earvin 'Magic' Johnson, Sunday, Jan. 13 (1 p.m. on CBS-TV).

For years, the fans in the Los Angeles area have noted a lack of support for the Lakers' supercenter, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who had to carry the load for a group of unorganized guards and a lackluster forward combination. The squad scored bundles of points but left a great deal to be desired as far as defense goes.

But the new season has brought the addition of 'Magic.' And the formula has opposing teams shaking their heads at this trick artist who can bank a soft jumper and snare down a tough rebound a moment later.

He has a fine jump shot that rolls neatly off his long fingers. He also possesses excellent speed for a 6-10 forward, which makes him equally effective in the transition game.

EARVIN "MAGIC" JOHNSON arrived on the scene in the Los Angeles Lakers training camp with a loud bang and the former Michigan State star has done little to put a damper to the high-flying laurels. The much-improved Lakers tangle with the Boston Celtics — another team on the comeback trail — when CBS broadcasts NBA action live from the Boston Garden starting on Sunday, Jan. 13 at 1 p.m.

Duran Wants The Welterweight Title

Roberto Duran has a lot more than boxing on his mind these days. The outspoken Panamanian is as deeply concerned about the fate of his nation as he is about his career.

At the moment, however, his mind is firmly set on capturing the welterweight title. And he'll take a giant step in that direction when he battles No. 10 challenger Josef Nsubuga Jan. 13. The event will be televised live on "CBS Sports Spectacular" (3:15 p.m.).

Duran has never had things come to him very easily in life, and maybe that's why he's so concerned with his homeland.

"I know a lot of people are watching how things come out after we became independent," he says with his thick South American accent. "I love Panama and I think we are an independent people who will keep any troublemakers out of our government."

Duran also manages to give his sponsor, multimillionaire Carlos Eleta, a heart attack every time he has a chance to return there. It seems that Duran has developed an addiction to the sport of baseball and plays shortstop for his village's team each chance he gets.

"I just hope and pray every time he gets on the field because I think he's going to get hurt after every catch," the sponsor admits.

Considering Duran's stellar career, it's no wonder that Eleta is worried. The 140-pounder defeated Estaban DeJesus for the lightweight championship in January, 1978, avenging an earlier loss to the former champ (the only loss Duran has ever suffered in the ring, incidentally).

He then decided to move up to the welterweight ranks and proceeded to win three bouts by decision over Jimmy Heair, former welterweight champ Carlos Palomino and Zeferino Gonzales, upping his record to 66-1.

"I like to move around because it allows me to find more openings in an opponent," he says. "You have to watch it though, or he may find an opening with you if you don't move or block quickly enough."

Duran won his first title in 1972, then successfully defended it for 12 bouts. His move up to the welterweight ranks may eventually set up a dream match with welterweight kingpin Sugar Ray Leonard, who knocked out Wilfredo Benitez on Nov. 30 for the crown.

Also featured on this edition of 'Sports Spectacular' will be an NBA game between the Boston Celtics and the Los Angeles Lakers, and the Grand Prix of Tennis.

COMEDIAN BOB HOPE (c), as host, will be welcoming such stars as Tom Watson the PGA Tour's leading money winner last season, to the Bob Hope Desert Classic, televised by NBC Saturday, Jan. 12 (4-6 p.m.) and Sunday, Jan. 13 (4:30-6:30 p.m.).

Show's A Real Hit

They call it the "Louie and Bouie Show," and thus far it's been a long-running hit. Now the Syracuse University tandem of Louie Orr and Roosevelt Bouie hope to take their hit to the top of the ratings — and a possible national championship.

The Orangemen, led by a powerful frontcourt, tangle with Joe Barry Carroll and the Purdue Boilermakers when NBC Sports begins its regular-season of college basketball coverage Sunday, Jan. 13 (1 p.m.). The two roundball powers meet for the first time, and both teams have definite post-season hopes in mind.

Syracuse, in the national Top-Ten since the season began, features Orr and Bouie. There's also a host of other talented frontcourtmen, including sweet-shooting, 6-6 junior Chris Jerebko and 6-5 sophomore muscleman Ron Payton.

But the 6-8 Orr and 6-11 senior center Rosie Bouie are the 'meat and potatoes' of the Orangeman squad. Bouie averaged 15.2 points per game last season and pulled down almost nine rebounds. The bulky, 240-pound pivotman is also one of the nation's leaders in rebounding and field goal shooting percentage.

Orr averaged better than 13 points and seven rebounds per game and is capable of putting together strong finishes that lift the entire team. He is considered the best all-around player on the team.

At this point in the season, Orr only trails point guards Hal Cohen and Eddie Moss in assists and hits on 90 percent of his free throws.

Coach Jim Boeheim is one of the most successful coaches in the nation and has guided Syracuse to eight seasons in a row with at least 20 victories. He's appeared in the NCAA tournament every one of those seasons.

Adding luster and excitement to the Orangemen this season, is the fact that Syracuse is a first-year member of the Big East Conference. It also sports St. John's of New York, Georgetown, Providence, Connecticut, Boston College and Seton Hall.

But Purdue promises not to be a pushover. Carroll may be the finest offensive center since the days of Kareen Abdul-Jabbar and Bill Walton. With a soft shooting touch and a willingness to work the offensive boards, he is a devastating outside-inside threat to score.

THE LOUIE AND BOUIE SHOW: High scoring forward Louis Orr (l) and powerful center Roosevelt Bouie, known to Syracuse University basketbal followers as the "Louie and Bouie Show," will put their talents on display when the nationally ranked Orangemen tangle with the Purdue Boilermakers in a major inter-sectional game to be televised on NBC, Sunday, Jan. 13 (1-3 p.m.).

Hope Classic Launches Tour

For the first time, Old Ski Nose is launching the professional golf season with his annual classic. And the course which the pros and invited celebrities will be traversing has a new look.

The PGA Tour, going into the 1980 season with its richest earnings ever, kicks off with the Bob Hope Desert Classic. The final round of the $304,500 event, originating in Palm Springs, Calif., will be televised by NBC Sunday, Jan. 13 (4:30 p.m.).

If you notice a lusher quality to the greens and fairways on the four courses to be used by the 128 pros and their amateur partners, don't adjust your color. Following a strong recommendation from the PGA Tour, the putting surfaces are sporting a hybrid Bermuda grass, better known as '328 Bermuda.'

This has replaced the old Bentgrass, which often caused the greens to dry up. After last season's exceedingly dry spell in Southern Calif., the owners of Laquinta Golf Course (host course for the Hope Tourney) decided to try the new grass. And the results were more than satisfying.

"With the rapid growth of the Palm Springs area, humidity has become a problem," Allan McCurrah, the PGA Tour agronomist, points out. "There is considerably more water there now because of the increased number of swimming pools and irrigation and watering systems."

NBC Telecasts 11 Tourneys

A total of 11 major tournaments — beginning with the Bob Hope Desert Classic — will be televised as part of NBC Sports' 1980 golf schedule.

The schedule will be featuring six other PGA Tour events — the Hawaiian Open, the Joe Garagiola Tucson Open, the Bay Hill Classic, the Tournament of Champions, the Houston Open and the Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

Three of the biggest attractions on the LPGA circuit are also returning to this year's line-up. The Colgate-Dinah Shore Winners Circle, which always attracts a star-studded field of golfers and celebrities, will mark its third consecutive year on the network. The Women's Kemper Open, which made its debut last year, along with the LPGA Championship, complete the LPGA line-up.

Rounding out the schedule is the third annual "Legends of Golf" tournament, a unique competition featuring over 30 of the greatest golfers of all time, all 50 years of age or older. Playing in two-man teams, 'Legends' participants get the chance to shoot for the type of big prize money that didn't exist in their halcyon golfing days.

Seven veteran network golf broadcasters and one prominent new comer make up the team of commentators for this year's coverage.

The newest member of the NBC Sports announcing team, Don Criqui, will serve as host for the coverage. Criqui, who joined the network last June after a 12-year association with CBS, will be stationed in the broadcast tower behind the 18th green where he'll work alongside chief analyst Bruce Devlin. Devlin is the popular Aussie with 18 years playing experience on the Tour.

Out on the course, both ground and tower reporters will be utilized. Working from two separate towers behind the greens on key finishing holes will be John Brodie and Carol Mann. Brodie, the former San Francisco 49ers quarterback who also played two seasons on the PGA Tour, has been with the network since 1976. Mann, a member of the LPGA Hall of Fame, is now in her second season as a golf reporter.

EXTRA HOSPITAL PROTECTION

—from the company that was started by doctors—for doctors.

Physicians Mutual Insurance Company was founded in 1902 by doctors—for doctors. But over the years our services have expanded to help men and women from all walks of life. Last year alone, we paid claims totaling well over $60,000,000.

Headquartered in Omaha, Nebraska . . . licensed in 49 states and the District of Columbia, Physicians Mutual's financial stability and sound operating performance have merited an A (Excellent) rating from A.M. Best Company.

Today almost a million Americans look to us to help them avoid the kind of financial disaster you often hear about—a hospital stay that creates demands beyond the means of your pocketbook.

We honestly believe that this is the finest hospital insurance plan of its type. It's designed to help meet the circumstance you live with today—like inflation and rising hospital costs.

In fact, the latest statistics from the Department of Commerce show that hospital costs have been rising faster than the rate of inflation! And the American Hospital Association reports that the average basic daily cost of hospital care is now approximately $200! And that doesn't include many of the special costs that are often involved.

That's what this plan is all about. It can give you the money that makes the difference between getting through with enough cash, or having to look for help.

Physicians Mutual

This may very well be the most welcome news you've had in a long time ...

You have a chance right here and now to do something about the high cost of hospitalization -- a chance to protect your family and prevent financial problems if something happens.

How likely is it that you or someone in your family will go to the hospital? The American Hospital Association estimates that one family member out of every two families will have to go to the hospital in the next 12 months.

As a doctor, I've seen countless cases where a good supplemental hospital policy could have saved a financial crisis for a hospital patient and family.

That's why I think you will really welcome this chance to collect $900.00 a month ($30.00 a day) when you are hospitalized for a covered sickness or accident.

And it's so easy to enroll. You'll find all of the details as you read on, and I sincerely hope you will. It could mean a lot to you later.

Sincerely,

Herbert H. Davis, M.D.

Herbert H. Davis, M.D.
Chairman, Board of Directors

Now you can collect $900.00 a month - $30.00 a day for as long as you're hospitalized for a covered SICKNESS! ACCIDENTS! MATERNITY!

Pays 50% increased benefits for cancer or heart attack.

Pays you $900.00 a month ($30.00 a day) cash!
You'll collect $900.00 a month ($30.00 a day) for any covered sickness or accident beginning the very first day you are hospitalized. Protect yourself, your wife or your whole family. $30.00 a day equal benefits for all. Just pick the plan that meets your needs.

Pays you $1,350.00 a month ($45.00 a day) cash for cancer and heart attack!
Your daily benefits are increased 50% if you or any covered member of your family is hospitalized for cancer (includng leukemia and Hodgkin's disease) or heart attack (acute myocardial infarction, coronary thrombosis, or coronary occlusion).

Pays you double benefits—$3,600.00 a month ($120.00 a day) cash for you and your wife!
Yes, that's a lot of money. But you'd need it. So under the Husband-Wife or All-Family Plan, you'll collect $3,600.00 a month ($120.00 a day) if you and your wife are both injured and hospitalized at the same time by the same or by different accidents.

Pays maternity benefits, too!
You'll collect full cash benefits, $30.00 a day, for hospitalization due to pregnancy if your policy has been in force for 10 months. There's no added cost to you!

No waiting period for accidents or new sicknesses.
Remember, accidents and new sicknesses are covered immediately, the very day your policy is issued. You collect the first day and every day you're hospitalized for a covered sickness or accident.

You get lifetime coverage and benefits.
There's no limit on the number of days for which you can collect cash benefits. You can be hospitalized as often as necessary and stay as long as you have to knowing that your $30.00-a-day benefits cannot run out. Our plan will pay you benefits for as long as you're hospitalized. EVEN FOR LIFE!

Pays cash benefits in addition to any other insurance you have.
Remember, this is extra, supplemental protection created to help you take care of the bills your regular insurance doesn't cover. Your benefits are paid over and above any other insurance you may carry including Blue Cross/Blue Shield, Major Medical and Medicare. This policy is designed to help you make up the difference between your total hospital bill and what your other insurance will pay.

Pays benefits direct to you.
Unless you tell us otherwise, cash benefits will be paid directly to you or someone named by you, and may be used for any purpose you wish. Furthermore, your benefits are not subject to state or Federal income tax.

Your policy is guaranteed renewable!
This is a very important point, because you want to be absolutely sure you'll have your protection when you need it. So for as long as you live and keep your policy in force, we guarantee never to cancel or refuse to renew your policy. No matter how much money you collect. No matter how often you go to the hospital.

What's more, we'll never raise your rates unless we do so for all policies like yours in your entire state. This means you can't be singled out for a rate increase.

Please note these exceptions.
Pre-existing conditions (health problems that became evident or were medically treated before the effective date of the policy) are not covered for one year from the date the policy is issued. Half-benefits are paid for up to 4 weeks confinement due to mental disorder. Not covered: loss due to use of narcotics or intoxication; loss covered by Workmen's Compensation or Employer's Liability Laws. Confinement in nursing homes, Federal hospitals, or the self-care, extended-care or convalescent units of hospitals is not covered. Pregnancy is covered after your policy is 10 months old.

We sincerely believe this supplemental hospital insurance policy is one of the best values on the market today. It offers a combination of cash benefits and policy features designed to help you successfully cope with today's soaring cost of hospital care—and at a cost most Americans can afford. But since you're the one who will be getting the bills, you're the one to judge. In fact, we urge you to shop around—to compare what our plan provides with what similar plans offer. Then, let your judgment tell you that you made the right choice. Physicians Mutual.

You cannot be refused this extra protection for any reason.
As soon as we receive your Application, we will issue your policy (P350/360 Series) and put it in force. We guarantee it! You cannot be denied this insurance for any reason. You're covered for new sicknesses and accidents from the minute we put your policy in force, even before you receive it in the mail. Of course, we can issue you only one policy on this guaranteed basis.

And if you're already a Physicians Mutual policyowner and would like information about the additional protection available to you, please write for details.

See the next page for the 3 important guarantees you get from Physicians Mutual.

3 Important guarantees by Physicians Mutual

1. We guarantee to issue this insurance regardless of your age, health or family size.
2. For as long as you live and keep your policy in force, we guarantee never to cancel or refuse to renew your policy.
3. We guarantee to refund your money if, for any reason, you decide you do not want this protection, and you return your policy within 30 days.

NOTE: Your renewal rate does not increase as you move from one age group to another.

PEOPLE 65 AND OVER ARE ALSO PROTECTED . . .

When you are 65, you'll find help for hospital care in many forms. Medicare, Social Security, special agencies, and perhaps a pension plan. But because people in this age group go to the hospital more often, this extra help is frequently not enough.

In addition to Medicare, you'll be receiving cash benefits from Physicians Mutual . . . to fill the financial void created by your illness. During the first 60 days of hospitalization—when Medicare coverage is highest—you collect half benefits.

After 60 days of hospital care—when Medicare coverage reduces and you need help most—you will be paid full cash benefits. No matter how long the hospital visit!

We've found that most folks over 65 prefer this approach . . . because your monthly premiums do not increase after you turn 65.

It's also important for you to know that you will be covered for cancer, heart attack, stroke, hernia, disease or disorder of the prostate, tuberculosis, cataracts, emphysema, cirrhosis or diabetes if your hospital confinement commences more than six months after the effective date of your policy.

Over one million people have taken advantage of this protection.

When the bills start piling up, Physicians Mutual comes through. With cash benefits paid direct to you—money you can spend any way you wish.

"I wish to express to you my appreciation for your prompt attention and payment of your claims. I am quite sure there are very few, if any, other insurance companies who are as prompt. In times of illness, no other aspect of insurance companies is as important to the policyholder as this."
Truett E. Haskins, Oklahoma

Provides extra protection against today's medical costs.
The cost of hospital care is astronomical, and still soaring. What you might have to pay out of your own pocket could be sizeable.

"I suffered a severe heart attack and was in the hospital almost six weeks—my hospital and doctor bill was enormous, so you can see how grateful I was to receive a check from Physicians Mutual."
Hughie B. Brewer, North Carolina

Your claims are processed promptly.
As soon as your claim is received, it is processed by people who appreciate your situation. There's no unnecessary delay in getting claim payments into the mail.

Abuse is rare and never condoned.

FOR COLONEL JOSEPH J. LOUDER, United States Marine Corps, Director 1st Marine Corps District

● Approximately 50,000 young Americans go through Marine Recruit Training each year, and the overwhelming majority benefit very positively from the experience. The Marine Corps does not condone the maltreatment of recruits and upholds stringent regulations governing their treatment during training. Recruits are to be treated with firmness, fairness and dignity. Drill instructors may not touch recruits except where required for instructional purposes. During the first three months of 1979, with an average of 8,000 recruits undergoing training, 54 allegations of abuse were made. Of these, after investigation, 25 were confirmed; a ratio of 2.3 cases per 1,000.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Any truth to the rumor that Audrey Hepburn's marriage to Dr. Andrea Dotti is heading for the rocks? —G.B., Dothan, Ala.

● "I'm just another Roman housewife, with a fine husband and terrific sons. Watching them grow up is the best part of every day for me," said Audrey when asked if the bliss of wedded life was starting to wear a bit thin. "Despite what you hear or read, my marriage is alive and well." What's bothering Audrey more than the rumors of marital discord is why her last two films — Bloodline and Robin and Marian did not measure up to her previous box-office blockbusters, My Fair Lady and Breakfast at Tiffany's. She had no idea why they flopped. What's pleasing Audrey, careerwise, is the fact that there are now good parts for older woman in current films: "Roles are not just for 20-year-olds now. People are aware that women over 40 can be exciting and glamorous."

Frank Edwards/Fotos International

Audrey: over 40 and still glamorous.

FOR PRINCESS MARGARET

Were reports of you getting furious when a hairdresser turned up too casually attired (on your last trip here) true? —A.G.S., Rapid City, S.D.

● No. He was not given the name of his customer in advance — only the instruction to be at a hotel at a given time. He arrived in jeans, a sports shirt and shiny red boots. He was embarrassed and apologized. But I was fascinated by those boots. I asked him where I could get an identical pair — to take back for my son, who would love them.

FOR JOHN RITTER, a host on United Cerebral Palsy Weekend with the Stars telethon, Jan. 12-13

Is it true that you dislike the TV ratings system? —L.C., Vancouver, Wash.

● I don't know whether to trust or believe it. I find all those claims that 40 million minds were locked into one thing very hard to swallow. I can't get worked up over the fact that the jobs of my friends depend on 2,200 people who have Nielsen boxes. And when shows get canned and my friends are out of work, I dislike it all the more.

FOR SENATOR RICHARD G. LUGAR (R.-Ind.)

How have you been able, each year, to return to the Federal Treasury such a large portion of the funds allotted to you? Do you feel these allotments are excessive? —Anne Corsi, Richmond, Ind.

● I have been successful in returning a high percentage of my Senate Office Funds (26 percent, $549,000 total in three years) to the Treasury because each staff member shares my feeling that every expenditure must be justified to the public.

FOR BETTE MIDLER, star of The Rose

Is it true that you really have a passion for shoes? If so, what kind do you prefer? —O.L., Sacramento, Calif.

● The spike-heeled kind. They're not always easy to find. I firmly believe that with the right footwear one can rule the world. Fortunately for the world, I have not found the correct footwear to achieve that goal. However, shoe stores across the nation can attest to my sincere and persistent efforts in that direction.

FOR HULDAH JEFFE, artist

The majority of your works are of wide-eyed, beautiful young girls. What inspired you to choose them as a subject? —J.K., Amarillo, Texas

● When I moved to New York City, I used some ballerinas as models. One of them, Sally McRoberts, was a brunette with big brown eyes. Her beauty appealed to me, so she was my inspiration for several years. Later, my niece (Guldah Cherry) posed for me. She also had big brown eyes. That's why almost all my subjects look like my niece.

FOR GIULIANO GEMMA, star of Humpty Dumpty Outlaws

You said that moving to the Big Apple almost ruined your life. Explain, please —Ruth Joanes, Asbury Park, N.J.

● I was born in Mammola in southern Italy. When I was 6, my family moved to New York. It was a traumatic experience. In Mammola I was surrounded by love, but in New York no one talks to anyone. As a result, I spent many years going to a psychiatrist, only to find out that I was sane — and it was New York that was insane.

PRO AND CON

Should the U.S. Government Guarantee Loans to Corporations With Financial Problems?

PRO Senator Donald W. Riegle Jr. (D.-Mich.)

In special circumstances it makes more sense for the Government to help a company survive than to accept the national damage resulting from failure. Without temporary loan guarantees of $1.5 billion, Chrysler, for instance, will fail — making 600,000 people jobless and costing the Government over $6 billion in lost taxes, unemployment compensation and food stamps. Chrysler is converting its plants to build fuel-efficient cars to compete with Japan and Germany. Loan guarantees to Chrysler and applicable industries are vital in keeping jobs here and rebuilding our economy.

CON Senator William Proxmire (D.-Wis.)

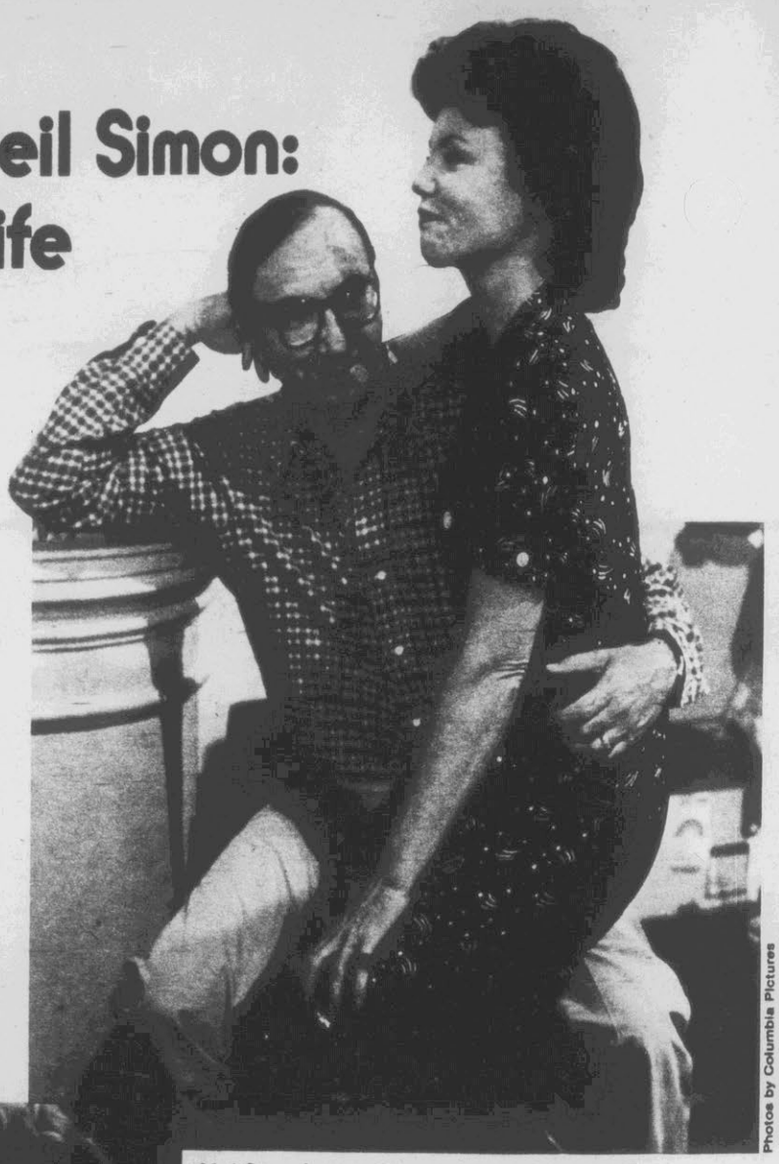

No. We should not do it either for Chrysler, one of the country's 10-biggest firms or for the 6,000 other firms that fail each year. If we bail out Chrysler, where do we stop? Do we draw the line at the top 100 or bail out all 6,000? Is it fair to Chrysler's competitors? What happens if the company can't make it and comes back for another $1.5 billion? We have a profit-and-loss system which works. But if we guarantee failures we would end up keeping incompetent management in business, backing the buggy-whip business or rewarding firms which make iceboxes instead of refrigerators.

Marsha Mason and Neil Simon: For Them, Art Imitates Life

When Mason and Simon met in '73, it became Chapter Two for both of them — a new start for him, a new life-role for her. Since then their time together has been California sweet.

By Isobel Silden

If Marsha Mason has any secrets, they must be pretty well concealed. Most of her private life has already gone public by virtue of husband-playwright Neil Simon's hit play, Chapter Two. It is the story of her romance and marriage to Simon. The play details their agonizing courtship, breakup and reconciliation.

Marsha did not object to some of the most intimate details of her marriage being played onstage. In fact, she is even starring in the upcoming movie version of the play, with James Caan as her husband-to-be. (Valerie Harper and Joe Bologna co-star.)

Wasn't it difficult playing herself in the movie? "In a sense, it is not me," says Marsha. "I am not playing myself. First, it is done from the man's point of view, not the woman's. It is not a re-creation of actualities. I did, however, have some trepidations prior to starting work on it because it was a unique situation. But Chapter Two is not me literally. I've matured and changed; my outlooks and point of view have changed in the years since I've been married to Neil.

"Similarly," she continues, "Jimmy Caan doesn't resemble Neil at all, not even emotionally. He never wanted it to be a Neil character. He is 'George,' just as I am 'Jennifer.'"

For those unfamiliar with the Marsha Mason-Neil Simon love story, Simon's marriage to his first wife ended with her death in early 1973. At about the same time, Marsha started rehearsals in his play, The Good Doctor. In the middle of a day's rehearsal, Neil walked up behind her chair and put his hands lightly on her shoulders. "I reached up and patted his hand," she recalls. "It was a very intimate gesture, and I was horrified at myself. But it was as if we were continuing a relationship that had already started."

Neil has two daughters, Ellen and Nancy, who, at the time, were just 14 and 9. As Neil and Marsha's relationship progressed, Marsha realized that if they were to marry, it would mean putting her career on hold for a couple of years or limiting it to projects that didn't take too much time away from her new roles as wife and mother. She decided she was willing to do that. But when the two did marry, there were some tough moments. Marsha had to learn to let go of her career priority and Neil had to learn to let go of his past.

The girls, Marsha says, actually made it easier for them to marry. "Neil proposed the night after The Good Doctor opened, and the girls said, 'Why not?' Then they said, 'If you don't get married, can't Marsha come live with us? We won't tell our friends.'" She laughs in retrospect.

"I never thought of, or worried about, being a stepmother. I knew I'd deal with it as best I could. It was right for all of us. I liked the girls immediately, and taking them through their adolescence has fulfilled me as a woman. I never tried to replace their mother. I encouraged them to talk about her, and talk it out....I always want to appreciate the time I'm with people. It's like a kaleidoscope. You shift the pieces and keep seeing different aspects of life. I want to share it all!" she says with great enthusiasm.

What about having children of her own? "I have thought of it. More than likely, I will not, although the girls think it would be terrific. I want to be a grandmother, though, and I can't wait. Then I'll have had it all."

Meanwhile, her priorities are very well defined: "At the beginning of our relationship, Neil and the girls came first. My career was second. Life had not changed, but I am more mobile because the girls are grown. Nancy will go away to college next year, and Ellen got married last October." Now Marsha's career has geared up again. She has been busy publicizing Chapter Two, which will open around the country in February.

Though she has a superb sense of comic timing (as her performance in The Goodbye Girl so aptly demonstrated), she also can do a fine job with serious parts. Her most recent movie — which received high critical praise — is Promises in the Dark. She plays the very caring doctor tending a young girl dying of cancer. "I liked that character, Dr. Alexandra Kendall," she says, "because she is the least emotionally gregarious character people have seen me do. There were challenges in that part. And I am as pleased as one can be with the results of the movie."

She attributes much of her personal growth to meditation and involvement with Eastern philosophy. The teachings she follows are those of Indian master Swami Muktananda. "I met Swami Muktananda on his second world tour five years ago in New York. I went to India in April, 1978, to visit at his ashram in Ganeshpuri, an hour from Bombay. Going to a holy place is very intriguing. There is no equivalent in this country. I fell in love with India and the people.... The principles I study are: Know that God exists in you, and get in touch with your inner self."

Neil and his daughters have also now embraced this Eastern philosophy: "I took Neil to meet Swami Muktananda when he was in Oakland, and now he meditates. He knows that what he teaches and has to say is very important."

Right now, Marsha's life is well balanced. She isn't sure, however, what's in store next for her career. "Neil's new play [I Ought to Be in Pictures, starring Tony Curtis and Joyce Van Patten] is keeping him busy. I have nothing planned for myself. I am interested in directing a play in New York, but my goals change all the time. Spiritually, I can get to a place where I can stay in touch with self. I live and let go of desires and attachments. I have no idea about my career future."

She has a number of special interests: "I do want to get more actively involved in the Equal Rights Amendment campaign, which I support, obviously. One has to fight very hard for these things. I am also interested in hand-gun control. I work very hard for that. And I'm concerned about the plight of our senior citizens. I support the Gray Panthers and a project started by Aldous Huxley's widow. She has started day-care centers, where mothers drop off babies to the older people. It gives the children an opportunity to be touched. It gives the older people something to do. Getting old has become humanly degrading, especially if you're poor. And even if you have money, the facilities are minimal. I am now beginning to become verbal. I will speak and, I hope, be able to raise money to set up more centers."

There is an inner security and happiness about Marsha that is almost contagious. "I don't crave things," she says. It is her husband, their children and her spiritual philosophy that make her truly happy. FW

The 1970's: A Quizzical Decade

By Brie Quinby

We've entered a new decade, and the facts and fads of the 70's will soon become tangled with the rest of history in most of our minds. Before you get too wrapped up in the 80's, see how many of the headline-making events of the past 10 years you can remember.

1. In 1976 an era ended when the last American convertible rolled off the assembly line. What make was it?

2. In 1974 newspaper heiress Patty Hearst was kidnapped by Symbionese Liberation Army members. Eventally she too styled herself an "urban guerrilla" and adopted what "revolutionary" name?

3. At the 1972 Olympics, Mark Spitz swimmingly broke all kinds of records. How many gold medals did he leave Munich with?

4. In 1978 eight million people braved long lines, foul weather and each other to catch a glimpse of how a man had lived and died. Who was he?

5. The Watergate scandal all started when Frank Wills, a security guard at the Watergate building where the Democratic campaign headquarters were housed, discovered a presumably locked door with a taped catch. He sounded the alarm that led to the biggest political scandal this country has ever known. Was he rewarded in any way?

6. Even he admitted he was "the greatest."

7. Who "made him an offer he couldn't refuse"?

8. How long was the gap on the tape that Rose Mary Woods transcribed?

9. On Jan. 17, 1977, this man got what he'd asked for. Explain.

10. During the summer of '75, his dietary habits fascinated millions of horror-struck Americans. Who was he?

11. On July 25, 1978, a newborn became the wonder of the world. Name her and explain her fame.

12. On Oct. 10, 1979, the stock market set a trading record. How many shares changed hands that day?

13. During the mid 1970's, what fad had Americans barely running across college campuses and down city streets?

14. On Sept. 28, 1978, Pope Paul VI died and a new Pope was elected. His reign proved to be the second shortest in the modern Church's history. What was his name, and how long was he Pope?

15. On Sept. 25, 1978, Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn did not have the last word and the sports world changed. Explain.

17. Wilbur Mills's political dive began with this woman's plunge into Washington's Tidal Basin. Who is she?

18. Despite its diminutive title, this movement touched a responsive chord in many Americans. Name it.

The Last Hurrah

A Class Act from the Start, O.J. Simpson Retires in Style

With quicksilver moves and balletic grace, O.J. was the dominant running back of the 1970's. Only the legendary Jimmy Brown could match his ability to elude opponents.

UPI

O.J. Simpson in his glory days at U.S.C., where he was a two-time All-American and winner of the Heisman Trophy in 1968.

UPI

By Mark Goodman

He started off life with the impossible handle of Orenthal James, the result of an aunt's suspect whimsy. He grew up in project houses in San Francisco's glum Portrero district, where his education began by running the mean streets with a rambunctious crowd. At age 6 he developed rickets; his mother, who had to support four children on her earnings as a hospital worker in a psychiatric ward, couldn't afford proper treatment, so the youngster had to wear jerry-rigged braces that left him permanently bowlegged. In high school, his social life consisted of stealing food and wine for parties and swivel hipping around the law. His mother barely talked him out of going into the Army and into attending San Francisco City College. Even when he got to a big-time university, Orenthal lost a job on an RC Cola truck for sleeping on duty.

I guess the only thing missing from that scenario is a stint in a blacking factory somewhere, because the legend of O.J. Simpson is an authentic piece of modern Dickensian mythology. Indeed, one of the purest aesthetic experiences in contemporary American culture has been watching O.J. Simpson run with a football. Red Grange, Doak Walker, Jim Brown — all of them have left long and deep cleatmarks on the American gridiron. But not even the fabulous Jimmy Brown — who, after all, weighed 230 lbs. — possessed the incredible combination of speed, power, balance and finesse that O.J. has displayed over the last dozen years. Brown ran over people; O.J., no fool, ran around them, left them pounding the ground in frustration in his dazzling wake. He had all the basic tools of power (6 feet 2 inches, 210 pounds) and speed (100-yard-dash in 9.4 seconds) to run through a Roman legion, but O.J. was the master of the juke. As he once described it: "When I study game films I look for the baddest dude on the other team, and then I decide that he's never going to hit me. I put the okey-doke on them, bounce around and look for daylight, moving and juking. And I love it."

Yes, he loved it all right, and that was the essence of his appeal. O.J. Simpson became the first black media superstar for a variety of reasons: pure talent, simple timing, the fact that he is handsome and articulate. But there was that extra something about O.J., the obvious, unfettered joy he took in tucking a football under his arm and wheeling upfield, cutting and twisting, performing magical pirouettes that brought crowds to their feet game after game. Everyone loved the Juice, even the rival defensemen he persistently made fools of — and Juice loved people in return. As O.J. himself once put it, "I want people to like me. I think that's my biggest motivation."

From the first time the nation's fans really got a good look at him — a November afternoon in 1967 when he ran 72 yards through the UCLA team to give Southern California a dramatic 21-20 victory — to the snowbound day in Shea Stadium, when he became the first running back in N.F.L. history to run for 2,000 yards in one season, it seemed as if O.J. Simpson could run with a football forever. Of course, he couldn't. It is a sad but fitting end to his stunning career that, come next Sunday, he must once again watch from the sidelines the last Super Bowl in which he had a chance to compete. Still, it's the only real triumph he has missed, even if he has missed it by a mile (the Buffalo Bills went to the playoffs only once during his career there, and last season the San Francisco 49ers, for whom he rode the bench for most of the season, were the worst team in football).

"I guess it's going to take me a little time to put it all in perspective," he says. "I've been a football player ever since I was a kid, and it's going to be interesting now that I'm not anymore. It's just that so many good things happened to me in football, I can't help but be grateful. That's what allows me to leave football with no regrets, with nothing but positive memories."

The path to those memories began in his errant youth, when Willie Mays heard of O.J.'s prowess and took him to his home to show the youngster that there was indeed a way out of those pasteboard project houses. O.J. went on to score 54 touchdowns for his junior college, enough to arrest the attention of coach John McKay down at U.S.C., where they manufacture Heisman Trophy running backs the way Detroit turns out cars. "I was educated to a totally different way of life," O.J. remembers, "from the black ghetto to an upper-middle-class white school. Suddenly I was an All-American, getting all this notoriety, playing on a national championship team. It just made me stop and wonder, 'What am I doing here?'"

He learned fast what fame could do. After his senior year, when the Buffalo Bills made him the number-one choice in the college draft, O.J. got his job back with RC Cola — not driving a truck this time, but hawking the product on TV and in magazines. As he slowly, and sometimes painfully, built his reputation in the frozen wastes of Buffalo, where no running back of his talents should ever have to run, more endorsements rolled in with the mounting N.F.L. honors: orange juice, boots and sporting goods. And, of course, there was the flying halfback in a three-piece suit, winging toward the goal line of the Hertz counter.

Like Joe Namath, he found his way to Hollywood early — Towering Inferno with Newman and McQueen, Capricorn One with his pal Elliott Gould. O.J. took to the camera almost as readily as he did to toting a football, and now he takes it just as seriously. Even as his football career winds to a close, he has formed his own production company (Orenthal Productions) after years of study before and behind the camera. He was recently seen in a made-for-TV movie, Goldie and the Boxer, and has produced and starred in another TV film, Detour, scheduled to air in a few months. "A lot of guys probably will never do a job they like as well as football," he says. "But I've been working in movies for eight years and have learned a lot from some fine people. I like being in front of the camera, but that's based totally on popularity. But I learned in football how important it is to have control of what you do. That's why I've been working so hard at the production end, because I know that if I have a future in movies, I have to have control."

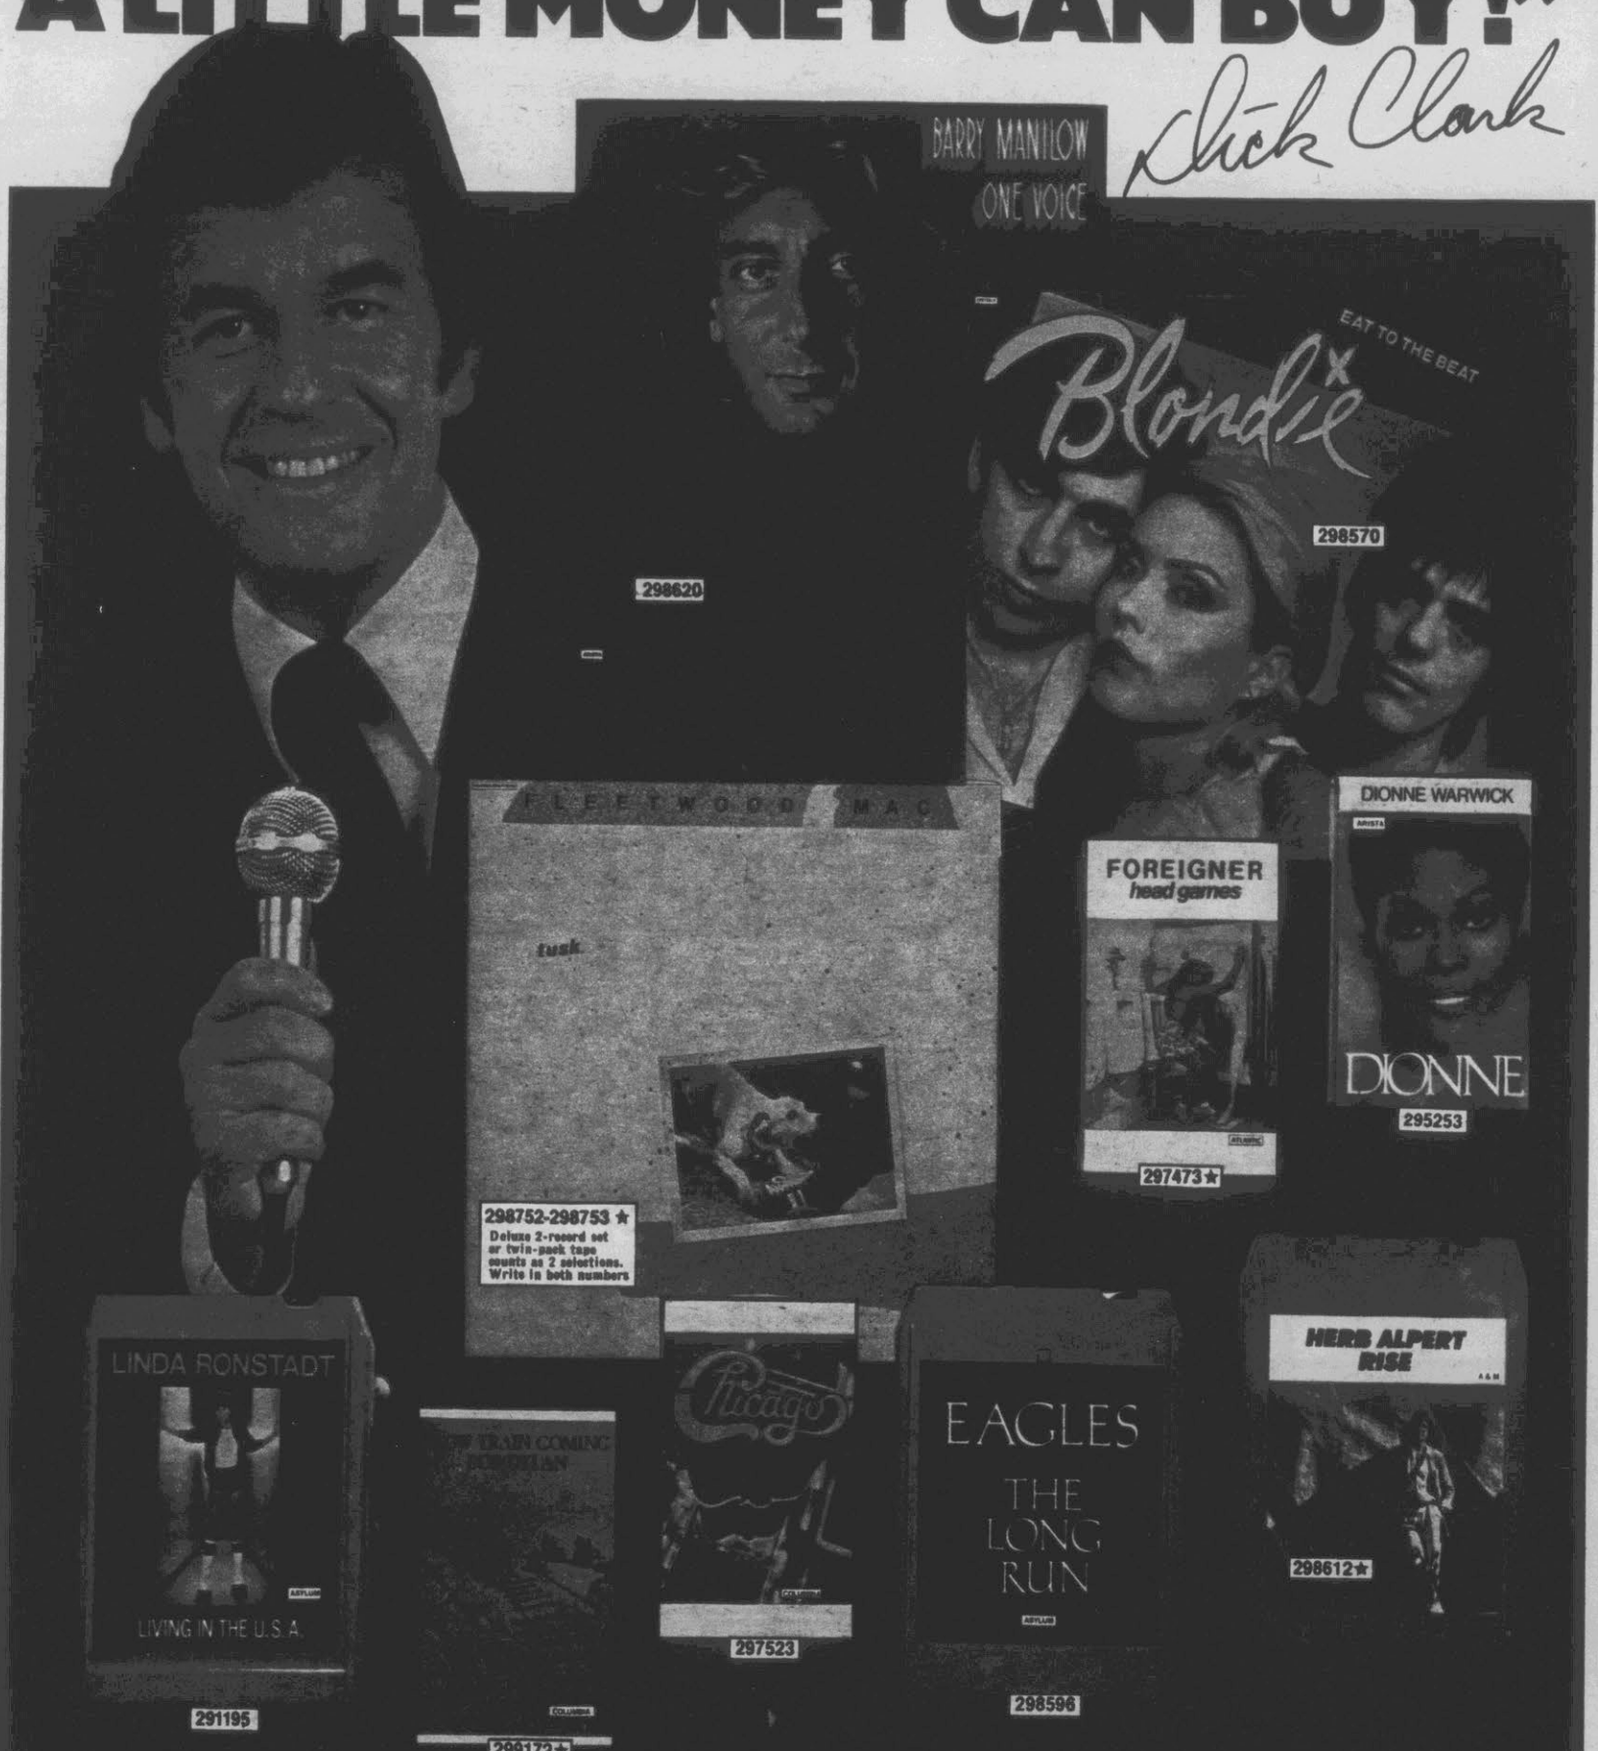

When tragedy struck O.J. last September, and his 2-year-old daughter, the youngest of his three children, died as a result of a swimming accident, O.J. threw himself into preparing for his final season with fervent intensity. The spirit was more than willing, but his 32-year-old knees, inevitable victims of the surgeon's scalpel, were undeniably weak. But he took his benching like the gentlemen he is, and scarcely blinked back the tears as the San Francisco fans rose again and again to cheer him for the last time.

"People who aren't in the game can't understand," says O.J. "It's just like John Matuszak's speech at the end of North Dallas Forty. Despite the money, it's still a game to us. I can't tell you how much I love the game. If God's willing, I'll still be playing touch football five years from now." FW

To join the Club and get your 13 tapes or records just mail the application, together with your check or money order for $1.86 as payment (that's 1¢ for your first 13 selections, plus $1.85 for shipping and handling). In exchange, you agree to buy 9 more tapes or records (at regular Club prices) in the next three years.

How the Club operates: every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's music magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest...plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off regular Club prices, for a total of up to 19 buying opportunities.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing—it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection from the hundreds offered, or none at all, simply fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified.

You will always have at least 10 days in which to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days in which to decide, you may return it at our expense.

You'll also have an opportunity to examine the Club's comprehensive annual—"The Year in Music"—filled with stories and photographs of the year's top stars & events. When it's ready, we'll ship it automatically, and you can read it and live with it for 15 days' FREE examination—with no obligation to buy.

The tapes and records you order during your membership will be mailed and billed at regular Club prices, which currently are $7.98 or $8.98—plus shipping and handling. (Multiple unit sets and Double Selections may be somewhat higher.)

After completing your enrollment agreement, you may cancel your membership at any time. If you decide to continue, you'll be eligible for our bonus plan—a plan which enables you to enjoy great savings on all future purchases! And if you are not satisfied for any reason, just return your introductory shipment within 10 days for a prompt and full refund. Your membership will be cancelled and you will owe nothing. So you risk absolutely nothing by acting now!

Don't Let Heat Go Out the Window

Q: My neighbor says keeping the shades down will cut fuel costs in winter. Is this true? I have storm windows, and I hate pulling down shades on a sunny day.

A: Storm windows keep cold air from coming in, but glass, a great conductor of heat, lets warm air out. Pulling down the shades helps prevent this.

You don't have to pull them on a bright, sunny day, however. No matter what the thermometer says, direct sunlight is not only cheery but gives you the benefit of a little solar energy. The best solution is to pull the shades down, draw the curtains in the early evening and leave them that way throughout the night and into the early morning. You won't save an enormous amount — one study reports up to 8 cents on the heating dollar — but every little bit helps.

Winter Gardener

Q: I raise plants in my bay window. I particularly want to force some hyacinth bulbs for the winter, since they are my favorite flower. Last year I tried putting bulbs in jars of water, but they just shriveled away. What did I do wrong?

A: Hyacinths can be forced indoors, but they need special treatment. What you did with yours last year was drown them. Set hyacinth bulbs on top of a wide-mouthed jar or water glass so that the water just touches the base of the bulb. Then put them away in a cool, dark place (the temperature should be about 50 degrees) until roots have time to develop. This should take about six weeks. When the bulbs have grown roots and green is showing at the top, that's the time to move them to your sunny bay window. They'll be a great touch for winter.

Jogger's Complaint

Q: I am taking up jogging, but I get pains in my legs when I try to run in flat-heeled shoes. I have always worn high heels. My son says it's all my fault for wearing high heels and that I'll never be able to jog. Is this true?

A: No. If you've always worn high heels, the transition to flats is a problem, whether you're taking up jogging or just taking it easy in sneakers. Continual wearing of high heels causes the calf muscle to shorten and tighten, and switching to flats will cause pain in that muscle.

Fortunately, this condition can be remedied by exercises to loosen up the calf muscle. Here is one that doctors recommend: Stand, barefoot or in socks, about two feet from a wall. Keeping your feet flat on the ground and your hands flat on the wall, press your whole body in, leading with the pelvis. You should feel a definite pull on the muscle at the back of your calf, which is the muscle you're concerned with. Hold for 15 seconds, then return to standing position. Repeat three times every morning and evening.

Auto Insurance, South of the Border

Q: We are driving to Mexico for a winter vacation and have been told we need special car insurance. True or false?

A: True. Mexican authorites recognize only insurance written by Mexican companies, and they can be very tough if there's an accident. (Your car could be impounded, or you could end up in jail.) You can buy Mexican auto insurance in many U.S. border towns (it costs about $20 per car) or you can purchase it ahead of time through a local independent insurance agent, who can procure coverage for you from a Mexican company.

Widow's Problem

Q: My husband died recently and I have a widow's usual problem — what to do with his clothes. They are in good condition and, since he was in a wheelchair during the last year of his life, I would like to give them to an organization that helps the handicapped.

A. You might want to give them to the Volunteers of America. This national social welfare agency has a long record of service: It was founded in 1896, and maintains some 800 service centers throughout the country. Clothing that is donated to VOA is not only salvaged for distribution to the needy, it is processed by handicapped people.

PEOPLE QUIZ/By John E. Gibson

How Wise Is It to Trade Intimate Thoughts?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Everyone should have someone — spouse, close friend or other trusted individual — to whom he can reveal his innermost thoughts and feelings and confide his hopes and disappointments.

2. Many people have either a disinclination or an inability to reveal themselves to anyone — even their spouses.

3. Even if a person is not ordinarily inclined to reveal much about himself, the more he is disposed to partake of the "cup that cheers," the more you're likely to learn about how he thinks and feels and what he's really like.

4. Self-disclosure increases romantic attraction.

5. There are many rewarding effects of being on the receiving end of another person's disclosure of his inner-thoughts and feelings, desires and aspirations.

ANSWERS

1. True. In a study at the University of Southern California it was found that self-disclosure — and the close and stable relationship that tends to go hand-in-hand with it — plays a significant role in mental health and emotional adjustment. Psychological tests showed that high and medium self-disclosers made high scores on one's well-being, with low disclosers averaging low scores on well-being. And studies conducted at the University of Florida and elsewhere have shown that such self-disclosure — honesty in revealing oneself to "another significant adult" — is important, not only for psychological health but for self-actualization (achieving one's greatest potential) and for developing desirable kinds of interpersonal relationships.

2. True. In his definitive monograph on self-disclosure, Dr. Albert Mehrabian, associate professor in the pyschology department, University of California, notes that some people carefully and consistently guard against self-disclosure by physically keeping their distance from others, and avoiding close involvement. And that "when forced to be close to others, they may look away and sometimes shrink physically from the very threat of contact, giving the impression of acute anxiety and discomfort." Mehrabian points out that their inability to reveal themselves to others or to seek information through eye contact and propinquity is indicative of unfriendliness and, in some cases, fear or antisocial qualities. It is interesting that non self-disclosers are sometimes glib talkers who use words to conceal their inner-feelings or to mislead others as to their real thoughts.

3. False. In a study of alcohol consumption and its effect on self-disclosure, conducted in the psychiatric unit of Britain's Royal Edinburgh Hospital, it was found that a moderate amount of alcohol increased self-disclosure, but when larger amounts were consumed, this trend was found to reverse itself and tended to inhibit self-disclosure by many.

4. True. This was the conclusion in studies at North Texas State University on self-disclosure and romantic attraction, which showed that for both men and women, self-disclosure plays a causative role in producing the intense emotionality of romantic love.

5. True. Studies by a team of Georgia State College behavioral scientists conclude that, in addition to the pleasure and satisfaction of getting to know someone better and deepening the relationship, "the rewarding effect of receiving an intimate self-disclosure derives partly from the freedom it accords to the hearer to reply with equally candid disclosure about himself." The Bible: More than meets the eye!

Millions of people read the Bible. Many others are puzzled by this and wonder what it is all about. Still others are aghast that the Bible can make devout and thoughtful neighbors of some and obnoxious fanatics of others. "The Bible saved our marriage," says one couple. A second couple says just the opposite.

Clearly, the Bible is not a simple book that one can sit down with and immediately understand in its fullness. One needs help and preparation before he can discover God speaking to him through the printed word.

Mindful of the incomparable value of the Scriptures and of the need for proper preparation before reading them, the Catholic bishops at the Second Vatican Council in 1965 wrote a special document On Divine Revelation. Written primarily for Catholics, it has since proven to be interesting and helpful to an even wider audience. The complete document is now available from many sources, but by way of simplifying it, we have prepared a less technical version. A free copy of this is yours for the asking. Simply mail the coupon. No one will call on you.

Behind the Scene with America's Disease Detectives

By Joel Davis

The July 1976, American Legion convention in Philadelphia started out like any other such gathering. Friends and acquaintances met in the lobby, halls and rooms of the Bellevue Stratford Hotel, exchanging stories and jokes, reminiscing about other conventions. No one doubted this one, too, would be a good time.

What it turned out to be was a nightmare of sickness and death. By the time the convention was over, people were dying of an illness no one could identify. The symptoms included a run-down feeling, muscle aches and headaches, abdominal pains, with a rapidly rising fever, dry cough and patchy pneumonia signs.

Normal remedies were useless. In all, 221 people came down with the affliction dubbed "Legionnaires' disease." Thirty-four of them died.

The news media not only focused on the progress of the disease, but also on the progress of those fighting it — men and women from a Government agency called the Center for Disease Control (CDC).

The dogged work of the medical detectives finally paid off. In December 1976, six months after the Philadelphia outbreak, CDC microbiologist Joseph McDade discovered the previously unknown bacterium that causes Legionnaires' disease.

Since then, the CDC researchers have found evidence of outbreaks of Legionnaires' disease as far back as the late 1940's. It's not a rare disease at all, just one frequently mistaken for pneumonia. The cruel irony is that the Legionnaires in Philadelphia suffered from an unusually harsh form of the illness. The surprise is where the germ breeds and spreads — in the air-conditioning cooling towers of tall buildings. The good news is that Legionnaires' disease does respond to treatment with a common antibiotic, erythromycin.

Based in Atlanta, the CDC is the successor of an emergency agency set up in World War II to battle malaria. First called the Malaria Control in War Areas agency (MCWA), it became the Communicable Disease Center in 1946. Over the years, it took on many more areas of responsibility besides malaria, and in 1970 the name was changed to the Center for Disease Control.

The CDC is one of six agencies within the U.S. Public Health Service and employs some 3,600 people, half of them at the Atlanta headquarters. The rest work at laboratories and field stations across the country and also overseas on special projects. The Center maintains a surveillance of diseases in the United States and around the world.

In fact, the CDC has even gone out of this world to carry out its mission. The Center worked with NASA to help prevent the contamination of the moon with earthly germs — and the earth with possible lunar organisms.

Today the CDC is involved in more mundane, but equally important problems:

- It is working with private and public health agencies to immunize the population against rubella, (German measles) that, in a 1964 epidemic, resulted in some 20,000 birth-deformed babies and 30,000 fetal deaths.
- It has mounted a national campaign to stop the current epidemic of gonorrhea and other venereal diseases.
- The agency is at the forefront of efforts to aid people affected by the great drought in West Africa.
- The Center is administering a program to treat coal miners afflicted with "black lung."
- The CDC recently undertook a detailed survey of 1,400 of its employees, with the employees outlining their medical histories and personal habits into a computer. The computer then analyzed the data, and the Center gave participants predictions of their life expectancies, and suggested ways to improve and extend those lives.

The discovery of the cause of Legionnaires' disease was a dramatic and highly publicized episode. But another CDC project promises to have even more far-reaching effects. Along with the World Health Organization (WHO), the CDC has worked to completely wipe out smallpox from the face of the earth.

The removal of this ancient scourge is a great triumph — but CDC director Dr. William Foege notes another benefit. "Few people realize that in addition to the human benefits in eliminating smallpox, there's a cost benefit, too."

Not all has been rosy, however. In 1976 the CDC was instrumental in encouraging President Ford to order a massive swine flu inoculation program. The swine flu epidemic never materialized, but several people died following inoculation, and several more developed Guillain-Barre syndrome, a rare ailment that causes paralysis.

The CDC does not have an easy job. Controlling venereal disease, wiping out smallpox, tracking down cases of rare and deadly afflictions is tough, dirty, often tedious and sometimes downright dangerous.

What does the future hold? "We're working to develop programs to bring our expertise in communicable diseases to areas like diabetes," notes CDC director Foege. "We're involved in evaluating the long-term effects of radiation on humans. We have a pilot program to increase supplies of kidneys for transplants. And we're trying to increase public knowledge of the importance of lifestyle to health.

"There are some exciting things happening." FW

MUSHROOM TOMATO SOUP ATLANTIC

1 cup peeled parsnips, cut into 2-inch sticks
¼ cup chopped onion
¼ teaspoon dill weed, crushed
⅛ teaspoon thyme leaves, crushed
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 can (11 ozs.) tomato bisque soup
½ soup can water
⅓ cup dry vermouth
½ lb. fillet of flounder, cut into 1-inch pieces
¼ cup chopped parsley

1. In saucepan, sauté mushrooms, parsnips, onion, dill and thyme in butter until tender, about 5 to 7 minutes.
2. Stir in all remaining ingredients, except parsley. Heat to boiling; reduce heat and cover. Simmer 8 to 10 minutes or until done. Stir gently now and then.
3. Stir in parsley. Serve in large heated soup bowls. A great main-dish soup.

Makes 4 cups, 2 to 4 servings

MUSHROOM BARLEY SOUP

1 lb. fresh mushrooms, rinsed and drained
6 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup finely chopped onion
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
2 cans (10¾-oz. size) condensed beef broth
5 soup cans water
3 tablespoons tomato paste or ketchup
¾ teaspoon salt
Few twists freshly ground black pepper
1 bay leaf
½ cup barley
¼ cup chopped parsley
1½ cups sliced celery and leaves
1½ cups sliced carrots
4 tablespoons dry sherry
1 pt. sour cream

1. Chop ½ lb. mushrooms. Slice remaining ½ lb. and set aside.
2. In large saucepan, melt 4 tablespoons butter. Add the chopped mushrooms along with onion and garlic; sauté 5 minutes.
3. Stir in broth, water, tomato paste, salt, black pepper and bay leaf. Heat to boiling. Stir in barley, Reduce heat; cover and simmer 1 hour.
4. Add parsley, celery and carrots; cook, covered, about 30 minutes longer, or until vegetables and barley are tender.
5. In medium skillet, melt remaining 2 tablespoons butter. Add the reserved sliced mushrooms and sauté 5 minutes. Add to soup along with sherry.
6. Ladle into large soup bowls and serve with a dollop of sour cream.

Makes 2 qts., 10 to 12 servings

VEGETABLE MEATBALL SOUP

4 medium parsnips, (about ½ lb.)
½ lb. ground lamb
2 cans (11-oz. size) chicken with rice soup
1½ soup cans water
1 can (8 ozs.) tomatoes, chopped
⅓ cup sliced celery
¼ cup sliced leeks or green onions
⅛ teaspoon rosemary leaves, crushed

1. Cut peeled parsnips in half lengthwise; cut into ½-inch pieces. Shape lamb into 12 meatballs.
2. In large saucepan, brown lamb (use shortening if necessary); pour off fat.
3. Add parsnips and remaining ingredients. Heat to boiling; reduce heat. Cover; simmer 10 minutes or until done. Stir occasionally.

Makes about 6½ cups, 4 to 6 servings

ONION SOUR DOUGH BREAD

1½ cups Sour Dough Starter (recipe follows)
3¾ cups (about) unsifted strong, bread-type flour
3 tablespoons sugar
2½ teaspoons salt
1 package active dry yeast
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons margarine
Cornmeal
Egg white, beaten
1 tablespoon water
⅔ cup finely chopped onion
Caraway seed

1. Two days ahead, prepare Sour Dough Starter.
2. Combine 1 cup flour, sugar, salt and undissolved active dry yeast in a large bowl.
3. Combine milk and margarine in a saucepan. Heat over low heat until liquid is very warm (120°F.-130°F.). Margarine does not need to melt.
4. Gradually add milk-margarine mixture to dry ingredients and beat 2 minutes at medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally.
5. Add 1½ cups starter and ¼ cup flour. Beat at high speed 2 minutes, scraping bowl occasionally.
6. Stir in enough additional flour to make a soft dough. Turn out onto lightly floured board; knead until smooth and elastic, about 8 to 10 minutes.
7. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.
9. Place on greased baking sheets which have been sprinkled with cornmeal where dough is to be placed. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

10. Combine egg white and water. Brush mixture generously over loaves. Top loaves with chopped onion and sprinkle with caraway seed.

11. Bake in preheated 400°F. oven about 25 minutes, or until done. Remove from baking sheets and cool on wire racks.

LARGE LONG LOAVES

Roll each half of dough into an oblong, 12" × 8". Tightly roll from 12-inch side; pinch seam to seal. Pinch ends and fold underneath.

SMALL ROUND LOAVES

Divide each half of dough in half again. Form each piece into a round ball; flatten slightly. Makes 2 large long loaves or 4 small round loaves

SOUR DOUGH STARTER

3½ cups unsifted strong, bread-type flour
1 tablespoon sugar
1 package active dry yeast
2 cups warm water

1. Combine flour, sugar and undissolved active dry yeast in a large bowl. Gradually add warm water to dry ingredients and beat until smooth. Cover with transparent wrap; let stand in warm place for 2 days.

To use in recipe: Measure out amount called for in recipe and use as directed.

To replenish starter: To remaining starter, add 1½ cups strong bread-type flour and 1 cup warm water. Beat until smooth. Store, covered, in warm place. Stir before using. If not used in one week, remove 1½ cups starter and follow directions for replenishing.

HEARTY CHEESE AND FRANKFURTER BOWL

3 slices bacon
1 lb. frankfurters, cut in ½-inch slices
½ cup chopped onion
Generous dash hickory-smoked salt
1 can (11 ozs.) Cheddar cheese soup
1 can (10¾ ozs.) condensed tomato soup
1½ soup cans water
½ soup can milk
1 pkg. (10 ozs.) frozen baby lima beans, cooked and drained

1. In large saucepan, cook bacon until crisp; remove and crumble.

2. Pour off all but 2 tablespoons drippings. Brown frankfurters and cook onion with hickory salt in drippings until tender, about 7 minutes.

3. Blend in soups; gradually stir in water and milk. Add lima beans. Heat; stir occasionally. Garnish with bacon.

Makes about 8 cups, 6 to 8 servings

CELERY SOUP WITH LIVER DUMPLINGS

2 slices rye bread
¼ cup milk
½ lb. chicken livers, chopped
1 egg, slightly beaten
⅛ teaspoon garlic salt
Generous dash ground black pepper
Generous dash crushed marjoram leaves
½ cup finely chopped onion
½ cup unsifted all-purpose flour
3 slices bacon
1 cup chopped celery
⅛ teaspoon thyme leaves, crushed
2 cans (10½-oz. size) consomme
2 soup cans water
1 tablespoon lemon juice

1. To make dumplings, trim crusts from bread; discard. Soak trimmed bread slices in milk; stir to break up.

2. Add liver, egg, garlic salt, pepper, marjoram, ¼ cup of the onion and flour. Mix well.

3. Meanwhile, in large saucepan, cook bacon until crisp; remove and crumble.

4. Cook celery and remaining onion with thyme in drippings until tender, about 5 to 8 minutes.

5. Add bacon and remaining ingredients; heat to boiling; reduce heat to simmer. Drop dumpling mixture by heaping, rounded teaspoonfuls into the simmering soup. Simmer, covered, 15 minutes. Stir gently now and then.

Makes about 7 cups, 6 to 8 servings

COUNTRY GOLD OATMEAL BREAD

2 pkgs. active dry yeast
½ cup very warm tap water (120°F.-130°F.)
2⅓ cups milk
⅓ cup soft shortening, butter or margarine
2 teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons sugar
⅓ cup molasses
6-6½ cups unsifted all-purpose flour
2½ cups quick or old-fashioned oats, uncooked

1. Soften yeast in water. Heat milk till a rim of bubbles forms around edge of pan. Add shortening, salt, sugar and molasses; cool to lukewarm.

2. Beat 2 cups flour into lukewarm milk mixture. Add softened yeast and oats. Stir in enough additional flour to make a soft dough.

3. Turn out on lightly floured board. Knead until smooth and elastic, about 8 to 10 minutes. Round dough into a ball. Place in large greased bowl; turn to grease top.

4. Cover with dish towel and let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled

Here is my story—it could be YOURS too!

I started taking these incredible diet pills just two weeks after my 44th birthday—I couldn't believe how much of my favorite foods I could still eat.

I first noticed something was wrong when some of my favorite clothes became too tight. Of course, like many other women, I just blocked out the problem from my mind, and reached way back into the closet for something with a "fuller" cut. (You know what I mean.) But finally, when I had to go in front of the camera to shoot some new publicity pictures, I had to face the problem honestly. I was 13 pounds overweight!

Every now and then, we all have our "bouts" with the bulges." But this time, I just couldn't seem to get myself back in shape. I tried everything. And, perhaps for the first time in my life, I realized that there are times when just cutting back on food . . . skipping a meal or two . . . giving up desserts—or trying any old "ordinary diet"—was just not enough. (Besides it was sheer torture depriving myself of my favorite dishes.)

And, for the first time in my life, I knew in my heart what some of my customers and friends meant when they complained: "Oleda, I've done ALL I CAN to lose weight—but NOTHING works for me anymore!"

I HAD to find a way to get back in shape—and FAST! At age 44.

So I called a doctor friend (who is also the medical director of my company) and told him about my problem. I reminded him that as a beauty and health consultant, if I couldn't solve my own weight crisis, how could my customers and friends believe in me anymore? I also told him that he would have to come up with an extremely simple diet—plus something that would help me control my appetite. Otherwise, I—and my customers and friends—would never be able to stick to it. (At least not for long.)

Well, to make a long story short, he recommended a few different ways to lose weight. One of them was a "diet aid" in the form of a pill that would suppress my appetite. It really intrigued me because it was so simple, and I didn't even need a prescription to get it. Plus it had my doctor's approval!

I then told him that since I was a very busy businesswoman—and wife, and mother—I couldn't afford to feel slowed down and sluggish. (The way most diet pills now on the market make you feel.) So I asked him if he would let me add an "ever-so-mild" stimulant to the pill to offset any sluggish feeling it might produce. And he approved that, too!

(Curiously enough, my doctor and I were just a few steps ahead of the U.S. government at the time. In a recent study ordered by the FDA, this diet aid was found not only to help people lose weight by lessening their desire to eat—but it was also found to be ABSOLUTELY SAFE!)

Frankly I was skeptical at first. Here I was approving a simple diet aid pill. But my mirror soon dispelled any doubt I might have had. The image looking back at me spoke louder than any words—and cheered me on to keep trying. I couldn't believe how fast—and how easily the 13 pounds I had put on have disappeared. And my dear customer, there was absolutely no fatigue. No nervouseness. And best of all, no hunger! It worked so well for me that I gave it to a few of my friends to try. Well it produced "miracles" for them too. Now I was convinced I had the "perfect" pill. I spoke to my doctor again, discussing ingredients. Then I called my lab right away and asked them to put it into production so that all my other friends (and customers) could share my experience and try its slenderizing appetite-suppressant "magic," too!

So now I have the best... the safest... and the most effective diet aid pill.

I really love this little pill. Now I feel in control of myself again. And now I know what when all those "early warning" bulges begin to show up again—I can put the brakes on, fast. And so can you. because this is absolutely the last "diet" you'll ever have to go on.

Try it at my risk.

If my diet aid pill doesn't do absolutely everything I say it can do—just as quickly and easily as I say it can do it—I am asking you to simply return the empty bottle to me and I'll refund you $1.00 for every 2 pounds of weight I guaranteed you'd lose. No questions asked! (Have you ever heard of a diet pill with THAT KIND OF A GUARANTEE? But I am so confident, I am willing to make this offer.)

If you have some extra pounds you'd like to lose—and who doesn't—please don't waste another moment. Clip out the coupon below and return it to me with your check or money order.

Along with my "miracle" slenderizing aid pills, I'll send you—absolutely FREE—my big 24-page booklet explaining my crash loss diet and how to maintain your beauty, health and energy while you lose weight.

P.S. Please write to me when you have lost the weight you wanted to. Send photos of before and after. If I use them in an ad (with your permission), I'll happily pay you $100.00.

Your weight loss on this safe crash-diet program depends on your starting weight, personal goals, etc. Show this remarkable Figure Plan tablet and booklet to your family doctor to make sure you do not lose too much too fast. Ask him if this program isn't one of the most effective diet programs for you. Individuals with high blood pressure, heart disease, diabetes, kidney disease, thyroid problem or other organic conditions should consult a physician. No single program can help every overweight person. Not everyone can lose 13 pounds in 10 days. Generally the more excess weight—the faster the loss. But I know that it worked for me and my friends—so I still stand behind every word of my guarantee.

Men: FIGURE PLAN 44 is also great for you.

SOUPS & BREAD

in size, about 1 hour.

5. Punch dough down; cover, let rest 10 minutes. Cut dough in half and shape into two loaves.

6. Place in 2 greased 9" × 5" × 3" loaf pans. Brush surface lightly with melted or liquid shortening.

7. Cover; let rise until nearly double in size, about 45 minutes. Fifteen minutes before rising time is up preheat oven to 350°F.

8. Bake about 45 to 50 minutes, until surface is deep brown and loaf sounds hollow when rapped with knuckle. Remove from pans and cool on wire racks. Makes 2 large loaves

RUSSIAN BLACK BREAD

4 cups unsifted rye flour
3 cups unsifted all-purpose or bread flour
1 teaspoon sugar
2 teaspoons salt
2 cups whole bran cereal
2 tablespoons caraway seed, crushed
2 teaspoons instant coffee
2 teaspoons onion powder
½ teaspoon fennel seed, crushed
2 packages active dry yeast
2½ cups water
¼ cup vinegar
¼ cup dark molasses
1 square (1 oz.) unsweetened chocolate
¼ cup (½ stick) margarine
1 teaspoon cornstarch
½ cup cold water

1. Combine rye and white flours. In a large bowl, thoroughly mix 2⅓ cups flour mixture, sugar, salt, cereal, caraway seed, instant coffee, onion powder, fennel seed and undissolved active dry yeast.

2. Combine 2½ cups water, vinegar, molasses, chocolate and margarine in a saucepan. Heat over low heat until liquids are very warm (120°F.-130°F.). Margarine and chocolate do not need to melt.

3. Gradually add liquid to dry ingredients and beat 2 minutes at medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add ½ cup flour mixture.

4. Beat at high speed 2 minutes, scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in enough additional flour mixture to make a soft dough.

5. Turn out onto lightly floured board. Cover; let rest 15 minutes. Then knead until smooth and elastic, about 10 to 15 minutes (dough may be sticky).

6. Place dough in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until double in bulk, about 1 hour.

7. Punch dough down; turn out onto lightly floured board. Divide in half. Shape each half into a ball about 5 inches in diameter.

8. Place each ball in the center of a greased 8-inch round cakepan. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

9. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven 45 to 50 minutes, or until done. Meanwhile, combine cornstarch and cold water. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture starts to boil; continue to cook, stirring constantly, 1 minute.

10. As soon as bread is baked, brush cornstarch mixture over top of loaves. Return bread to oven and bake 2 or 3 minutes longer, or until glaze is set. Remove from pans and cool on wire racks. Makes 2 round loaves

Editor's Note: At the end of the recipe there are two special ingredients: a teaspoon of cornstarch and ½ cup water. These give a dark, shiny glaze to the loaves and help to keep them from drying out.

EGG AND TOMATO SOUP

1 cup cooked ham, cut in strips
¼ cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 can (10½ ozs.) beef broth
1 cup water
½ cup chopped, peeled fresh tomatoes
¼ cup quick-cooking rice
1 egg
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

1. In saucepan, brown ham and cook onion in butter until tender, about 5 to 8 minutes.

2. Add remaining ingredients except egg and cheese. Heat to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer 5 minutes. Stir occasionally.

3. Meanwhile, beat egg with cheese; gradually pour into simmering soup, stirring gently until egg is set. Serve immediately.

Makes about 3 cups, 2 or 3 servings

TUNA VEGETABLE CHOWDER

2 slices bacon
1 cup sliced celery
½ cup chopped onion
⅛ teaspoon ground sage
⅛ teaspoon thyme leaves, crushed
1 can (10¾ ozs.) chicken noodle soup
1 can (10¾ ozs.) cream of mushroom soup
1 soup can milk
1 pkg. (10 ozs.) frozen mixed vegetables, cooked and drained
2 cans (6½-to-7-oz. size) tuna, drained and flaked

1. In large saucepan, cook bacon until crisp; remove and crumble. Cook celery and onion with sage and thyme in drippings until tender, about 5 to 8 minutes.

Makes about 7½ cups, 6 to 8 servings

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Spider Behavior

Spiders are not everyone's idea of ideal pets, but scientists at the North Carolina Department of Mental Health have found a use for them. They think that the creatures can provide information about how people react to family members or peers who are using drugs.

Dr. Peter Witt, the director of research for the department, maintains colonies of one of the few species of spiders that live and eat together. By taking a series of time-lapse photographs of the spiders and projecting them on a grid, he can get a sense of the spiders' normal behavior patterns. After giving drugs to a few of the animals, he takes another series of photographs, and with the help of a computer he measures the changes in the spiders' activity, distance and distribution.

IBM

group are given drugs," explains Witt. "The drugs not only affect the individual spider, but their [the drugged spiders'] erratic behavior is infectious to other members of the group. The drugs seem to affect the animals peaceful coexistence, just as we've seen happen in human society."

Learning To Ski

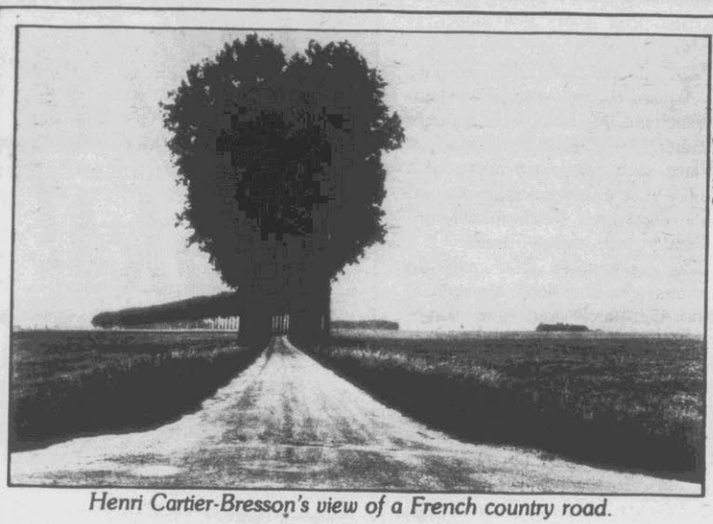

Teaching children to ski can be a rewarding experience since youngsters often learn quickly and are more self-confident than adults. "The rule to keep in mind," says Bob Kunkel, former youth program director at Colorado's Copper Mountain ski area, "is that skiing is a game and should be kept simple."

To simplify equipment, Kunkel recommends avoiding daily rentals. "You'll waste time, get tense, and your child will have to adjust to unfamiliar gear and cope with only the closest fit available," he explains. Since children do grow, however, he suggests that you rent equipment seasonally or buy good-quality used boots, skis, bindings and poles.

Before your child takes to the slopes, make sure he's wearing clothes that will keep him warm and dry. Hats should cover the ears, and goggles should be worn to protect the eyes. If your child feels comfortable that first time out, chances are he'll want to go again.

First step is the snowplow.

Capturing Time

Since photography's birth in 1839, countless images have been captured on film, leaving a record of people and places of the past. Some photographers managed to do more than just record the events of history; they infused seemingly mundane occurrences with a significance of their own. One such photographer is Henri Cartier-Bresson, and the first major exhibition of his work in more than a decade will open soon at the Art Institute of Chicago before traveling to 12 other major American cities. HENRI CARTIER-BRESSON: PHOTOGRAPHER includes 155 images personally chosen by the photographer as a statement of his 50 years as an image maker.

For a look at America's past, The American Image (Pantheon) is not to be missed. Designed to serve as a catalog for an exhibit at the National Archives in Washington, D.C., the book contains the Archives' own selection from the more than five million photographs in its holdings. Included in the book is information about how to order reproductions of many of the photographs for under $10; and that's a bargain in today's photography market.

T.V. Teaching

How do dolphins communicate? What does an oil spill do to the environment? How does hot air make a balloon rise? To answer these and hundreds of other questions about science and technology, the Children's Television Workshop, the creator of Sesame Street, has produced a new, 13-week series called 3-2-1 Contact.

Hosted by three teen-agers, 3-2-1 Contact will air daily over most PBS stations starting this week (check local listings). Each week, a specific theme will be covered, and the hosts frequently visit scientists and technicians throughout the country for a firsthand account of what is going on in their particular fields. Animation, music and special effects are used to help clarify some of the concepts that an audience of 8-to-12-year-olds might have a difficult time grasping. So tune in and make contact with the fascinating world of science.

Lifestyles

Family. The American family of the 1980's will have fewer members, greater mobility, two earners and will probably place less value on child-rearing, says Dr. Helen McHugh, dean of the College of Home Economics at Colorado State University. The number of persons aged 16 to 24 will decline by about 16 percent as a result of the lowered birth rate.

Health. In 1959 the American Cancer Society launched a comprehensive study on how lifestyles affect health. Some of the recently released findings indicate that men who reported exercising moderately or at a heavy pace had lower death rates from coronary heart disease and stroke than those who exercised little or not at all. The study also noted that people who reported sleeping seven hours a night had lower death rates from those causes than those who slept more or less than seven hours.

Food. Scientists at the University of Maryland have developed a new, energy-saving method of preserving food that involves putting the food into a chamber and removing all the air around it. The food is then treated with gases that inhibit deterioration and finally packaged in a germ-free container. Foods preserved by this "Gaspak" method don't need refrigeration and have tasted palatable and fresh 250 days later.

IMPORTANT

HERE'S HOW YOU CAN TELL YOUR GEMFIRE COUNTERFEIT DIAMONDS ARE NOT CHEAP COSTUME JEWELRY.

A. Count the facets. Gemfire stones all have 58 facets – just like expensive diamonds prepared by diamond cutters.

B. Examine your stone in a dimly lighted room. It should sparkle like in daylight. Gemfire stones sparkle even in the moonlight.

C. Study your ring under a powerful magnifying glass to look for flaws. Gemfire stones have clarity – are flawlessly perfect. No specks! No blemishes! No cracks!

D. Gemfire stones are so hard you can actually scratch your initial in glass with them! Prove it to yourself.

Words And Pictures

Words and pictures don't begin to show the beauty, brilliance, and fire of these magnificent rings. That's why we want you to wear them and judge them on their own merits — not on what we tell you. See if your friends and family can tell them from an expensive "natural" diamond worth 100 times as much. In all probability you can fool them if you want to. Not many people can tell these brilliant counterfeits from the expensive real ones. Yet now you can own these beautiful rings at amazingly low prices.

Low Price Doesn't

Mean Low Quality. These counterfeit diamonds are not cheap fakes. In fact, they are carefully cut and polished by skilled craftsmen in the same manner as natural diamonds. They have 58 facets — just like natural diamonds. They are hand set in heavy 14Kt-HGE (heavy gold electroplate), or solid sterling silver by master jewelry craftsmen. They shine like a $1,000 diamond — but cost you less than $30.00.

An Exciting Gift For Someone Special

These exquisite rings make a much appreciated gift for a special someone in your life. They will last a lifetime. Give for birthdays, anniversaries or just as a wonderful surprise. And even if you choose to tell your loved one will be amazed and proud that you were clever enough to find such an expensive-looking ring at these remarkably low prices. The difference between it and a natural diamond could make a down payment on a new car, or home, or even a wonderful vacation for just you two!

Even Millionaires

Wear Counterfeit Diamonds. Today many wealthy people, TV and movie stars feel unsafe making public appearances wearing expensive jewelry. Oftentimes they keep their diamonds in a safe deposit box and wear counterfeits. Now you too can wear these master-crafted counterfeit diamonds and impress your friends!

GLOSSARY OF TERMS

CARAT (CT)—a measure of weight for a diamond—however, Gemfires and Diamonites are given approximate carat values based on size (not weight). A 1-carat Gemfire or Diamonite is approximately the same size as a diamond.

HEAVY GOLD ELECTROPLATE (HGE)—this mounting uses karat gold (either white or yellow) that is electrically bonded to the mounting after it is formed and the gold, by government standard, is 14 times thicker than the designated "gold electroplate."

STERLING SILVER (SS)—the mounting is 92.5% pure silver, 7.5% other metals for strength, and to eliminate tarnishing is lightly plated with precious rhodium.

WITH OUR GUARANTEE YOU TAKE NO RISKS

If at the end of 30 days you are not completely satisfied, return by INSURED MAIL for purchase price refund. At any time, or for any reason, and in any condition you may return your jewelry by INSURED MAIL for FREE replacement.

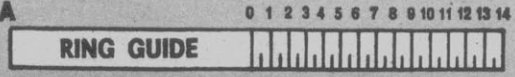

HOW TO FIND YOUR RING SIZE

1. Cut a strip of paper 3 inches long and 1/4 inch wide.

2. Wrap the strip around the finger that is to wear the ring. Then place a dot, on the strip where it meets the end.

3. Place the dot on the strip of paper at "A" on the ring guide. The number at the end of the strip is your ring size.

by BUD BLAKE

Prince Valiant

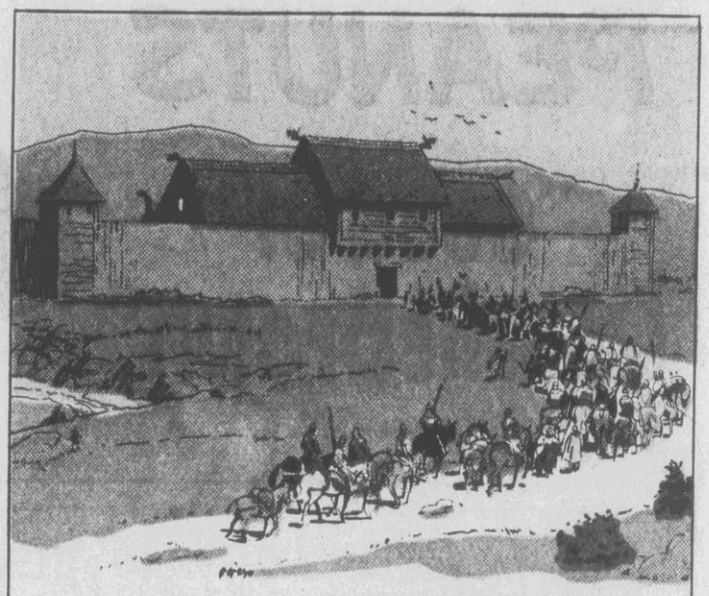

by HAL FOSTER

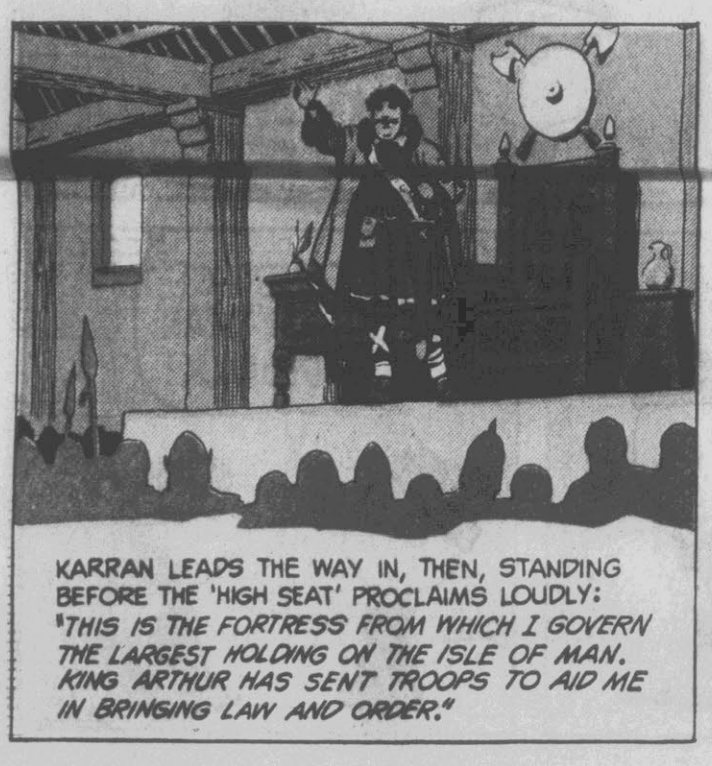

Our Story: SIR GAWAIN EXPLAINS THAT KING ARTHUR HAS SUPPLIED THIS EXPEDITION TO SECURE THE ISLE OF MAN FROM THE MENACE OF THE NORTHMEN, NOT AS KARRAN'S PRIVATE ARMY.

BUT SINCE KARRAN HAS ALREADY UNLOADED THE SUPPLIES FROM THE SHIPS, GAWAIN ORDERS THE MARCH INLAND. THE EFFORT TO EXPEL THE VIKING INVADERS BEGINS.

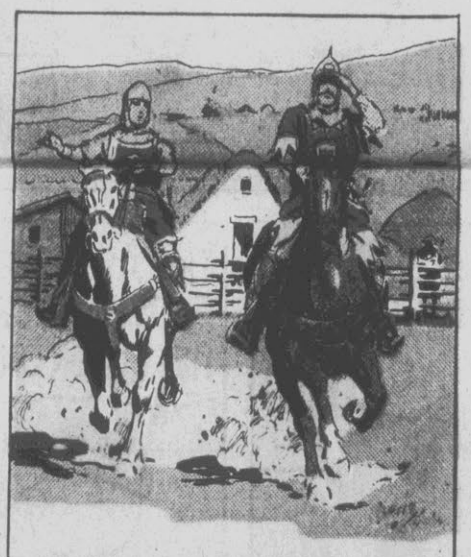

THEY TRAVEL A PART OF THE ISLAND ARN HAS NOT EXPLORED. IT IS THINLY SETTLED, BUT SHOWS NO SIGN OF VIKING PRESENCE. THEN THEY COME TO A GREAT, FORTIFIED MANOR HOUSE.

KARRAN LEADS THE WAY IN, THEN, STANDING BEFORE THE 'HIGH SEAT' PROCLAIMS LOUDLY: "THIS IS THE FORTRESS FROM WHICH I GOVERN THE LARGEST HOLDING ON THE ISLE OF MAN. KING ARTHUR HAS SENT TROOPS TO AID ME IN BRINGING LAW AND ORDER."

"ARN, WE ARE GOING TO HAVE TROUBLE WITH KARRAN. HE HAS DELUSIONS OF TAKING OVER COMMAND OF THE KING'S FORCES," SAYS SIR GAWAIN.

BUT THE PLIGHT OF THE SERFS IS AWFUL. CLOTHED IN RAGS, LIVING IN HUTS OF CLAY AND WATTLES, YOUNG AND OLD ALIKE, TILL THE SOIL FOR THE BENEFIT OF KARRAN, THEIR OVERLORD.
