Economy Grew Last Year

WASHINGTON (AP)—The recession that was predicted for 1979 never materialized as the economy grew by 2.3 percent during the year, the Commerce Department reported today.

The economy grew at an annual rate of 1.4 percent in the fourth quarter last year.

While a recession was avoided, the increase in the nation's gross national product — the total value of all goods and services produced — was lower in the last three months of 1979 than had been expected. This indicates a recession may actually be coming in 1980.

Another strong performance by consumers, who increased their purchases in the fourth quarter, kept the economy on the plus side in the October-December period.

"Obviously, consumers are carrying a big part of it here," said one analyst.

However, to maintain purchasing power in the face of rising inflation, Americans saved only 3.3 percent of their income in the fourth quarter at an annual rate. It was the lowest savings rate for any three-month period since the Korean War in 1950.

A recession is said to occur when there is negative GNP growth for two consecutive quarters. The average 2.3 percent growth for the year compared with 4.4 percent growth in 1978 and 5.3 percent in 1977.

The only negative quarter in 1979 was the second, when the GNP declined at an annual rate of 2.3 percent. The GNP grew at annual rate of 1.1 percent in the first quarter and 3.1 percent in the third.

The Commerce Department also reported that inflation, as measured by its broadly based implicit price deflator, was at an annual rate of 8.7 percent in the fourth quarter and was 8.8 percent for the entire year. That compares with inflation of 7.3 percent in 1978.

The GNP price deflator, which measures inflation throughout the economy, is said to provide the best measurement of underlying inflation in the economy.

The consumer price index, by contrast, has been showing an inflation rate of 13 percent at the consumer level.

The total GNP for 1979 was $2,368.5 billion, or nearly $2.5 trillion. After adjusting for the effect of inflation, the GNP was $1,431.1 billion. The percentage figures on changes in the GNP are based on the inflation-adjusted total.

The Commerce Department said consumers increased their purchases of goods and services by 1 percent in the fourth quarter to an annual rate of $935.2 billion. Consumer spending rose 1.6 percent for the year.

Investment spending decreased in the fourth quarter, falling nearly 2 percent to $203 billion at an annual rate, which was a major negative influence on the GNP.

Ask Reduced Speedy Trial Time Delay

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt and state Supreme Court Chief Justice Joseph Branch today said the Legislature should postpone for a year the scheduled 30-day reduction in time prosecutors have to bring cases to trial under North Carolina's speedy trials law.

Hunt and Branch, in a joint statement, joined the recommendation of a special study of the speedy trials act, conducted at Hunt's order by the Administrative Office of the Courts and the state Budget Office.

The report released today says reducing to 90 days the time limit which prosecutors have to bring criminal cases to trial may hurt prosecution of some cases and may not be worth the added cost.

The time limit — now requiring prosecutors to bring cases to trial within 120 days of indictment — is scheduled under current law to be reduced to 90 days in October. The speedy trials act was passed by the General Assembly and took effect in 1978.

"The report indicates to us that the speedy trials law is workable," the governor and chief justice said in their statement. "To provide the districts time for improving these operations, we believe it appropriate that the General Assembly delay until Oct. 1, 1981, the implementation of the 90-day deadline.

The report says the effect of a second law, which sets uniform sentences for most crimes and takes effect this summer, may clog the courts and complicate the speedy trial provisions.

The report was ordered by Hunt after there were complaints that a large number of cases had been dismissed in three judicial districts because prosecutors failed to bring them to trial within the time limits.

The law requires dismissal of cases not tried within the deadlines, but allows for some exceptions and for new charges to be brought in some cases.

The study found that 42 cases involving 26 defendants were dismissed because of the time requirement. The dismissals came in district 15-A, which is Alamance County; district 25, which consists of Catawba, Burke and Caldwell counties; and the 26th district, which is Mecklenburg County.

The report lists a variety of reasons for the dismissals: — Inadequate case management procedures" by district attorneys.

—Agreements between prosecutors and defense lawyers over scheduling.

—Non-compliance with legal requirements for documenting continuances by prosecutors.

—Disagreement or misunderstanding over what the act requires.

The report details administrative practices that may require improvement in each of the districts, but says none of the case dismissals were due to shortage of court staff or court sessions.

It says, however, that more staff, more judges, more court sessions and more State Bureau of Investigation assistance will be needed to comply with the 90-day limit.

"The quality of prosecution will be jeopardized in many instances with the implementation of the 90-day provision of the act," it says.

The report also recommends the Legislature review legal requirements for holding arraignments separate from trials, saying it is doubtful the current arraignment process is helping separate contested cases from those in which guilty pleas will be entered.

The sentencing law, called the Fair Sentencing Act, takes effect July 1, and requires judges to impose an established sentence for given crimes — or to state reasons for varying from it.

The study says that law will take up more court time for establishing those reasons, may increase the number of innocent pleas and may require more court sessions.

Six Dead In Home Blaze

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — Four young children, their grandmother and their great-grandmother died late Thursday night when fire swept through a wood-frame home in Sanford.

Firefighters said the blaze was spotted by a Sanford policeman and the home was engulfed in flames when they arrived.

"When I arrived on the scene, the flames had already broken through the roof. It was an extreme amount of smoke," said Bobby Lawson of the Sanford-Lee County Rescue Squad.

"Firemen were unable to enter the house due to these circumstances," he said. "It took them I'd say a good hour from the time I arrived to knock the flames down enough to where we could even get in to enter the house."

Authorities said the home belonged to Mary Durham, 81, one of those killed. The others were her daughter-in-law, Lucy Durham, 39, and Lucy Durham's four grandchildren, Edward Durham, 1, Delvanna Durham, 2, Latosha Durham, 3, and Claude Durham, 4.

Fire Chief Sam Bost said one of the women was found in one bedroom and the other woman and four children were in another bedroom at the front of the house.

Bost and Lawson said it appeared that one or two of the victims awoke but were unable to escape.

"It appears to me that as soon as they woke up or raised up the super-heated air ... the air in the room got them immediately as soon as they woke up," Bost said.

He said the back part of the house was being remodeled and that it appeared the fire began in that area. He said there was no immediate indication of the cause of the fire.

Eighty Ounces Of Gold 'Gone'

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (AP) — The FBI is investigating what it calls the "mysterious disappearance" of 80 ounces of gold from the government's Oak Ridge National Laboratory.

Agent-in-charge Lawrence Sarhatt said several FBI agents were sent to the lab Thursday after the Department of Energy reported the $60,000 in gold missing.

FBI and Energy Department officials refused to say when or how the loss was discovered or from where or how long the gold has been missing.

Tucker Named Pitt Fireman Of The Year

The 20-year-old chief of the Belvoir Fire Department was named "Pitt County Fireman of the Year" at a banquet held last night.

Charles Tucker, a fireman since he was 14, was picked, by an impartial panel of judges, out of the 500 firemen in the county as this year's most outstanding.

County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner said Tucker has been instrumental in the Belvoir Department's buying land for a new fire station and paying for it in one year. Application has been made for an FHA loan to build a new station, he said, and much of the preliminary work has been done by Tucker.

Between Dec. 1, 1978 and Nov. 30, 1979, the judging period consider, Joyner said, Tucker went to all 28 fires his unit was called to, attended 24 fire department meetings and availed himself of 392 hours of training. He was instrumental in the conversion of the Belvoir Department's water wagon to a quick-dump unit and maintained and serviced the department's trucks and pumps to keep them in top running condition.

Tucker was recommended by his own department for the award.

Shah Blames Oil Greed

NEW YORK (AP) — The deposed Shah of Iran says he has not renounced his claim to Iran's Peacock Throne and that the greed of U.S. oil companies brought about his downfall one year ago.

"Abdicating in the vocabulary of a king does not exist unless it's very, very special circumstances," Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi said Thursday in a televised interview with British journalist David Frost.

"Does a king have to agree...to abdicate?" Frost asked.

"Yes...Unless he is decapitated," replied the 60-year-old shah, who is under a death sentence from a revolutionary court in Iran.

The hour-long interview on the ABC newsmagazine "20-20" was the shah's most extensive public statement since he left Iran for exile one year ago Wednesday.

He charged his regime had been sacrificed by profit-hungry American oil companies and rejected as "preposterous" claims by the regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini that he was responsible for the massacre of tens of thousands of Iranians during his reign.

He labeled the United Nations, which has been proposed as a forum for airing grievances against his monarchy, "impotent" except in its dealings with "defenseless individuals."

ABC paid Frost an undisclosed sum for the interview, part of a 10-hour conversation Frost had with the shah last week at the shah's refuge on an island off Panama. ABC said the shah was not paid.

Frost said the shah conceded "errors of his own making" encouraged his overthrow, but that the conversation with the ailing monarch had a "continuing theme of either betrayal or...conspiracy."

Two years before the revolution, the shah said, "we heard from two different sources connected with the oil companies that the regime within Iran will change..."

"...If just in imagination, we believed that there was a plan that there must be less oil offered to the world market in order to make the price of oil go up, one country should have been the one chosen for this sacrifice."

Iran was producing 5.6 million barrels per day, the shah said, but in the final year before his ouster, the consortium of oil companies that bought Iranian oil did not seriously "talk about placing an order to buy our oil, so it seems that chosen country to drop its production of oil would have been mine."

The shah did not name the two companies, but said they were both American. Iran's oil consortium included Gulf Oil, Mobil, Exxon, Standard Oil of California and Texaco.

"I'm flabbergasted," said Nancy Arvai, spokeswoman for Social. "Certainly there was no conspiracy."

"The only thing I can say is we were lifting quite a bit of oil from Iran, buying it, that is," she said. "At the end of 1978, the shah was still in power and many companies were doing so and Iran was considered quite an important source of oil...I can't see where anyone wasn't buying oil. People had longterm contracts."

There was no immediate comment from the other companies.

SILVER PRICE UP

I recently bought a silver cup in a local jewelry store and the price was $72. One looked at at the same time was $98. A couple of hours later, I went back and the price on the one kind was $225 and the price on the other $250. I don't think this is fair. M. F.

Nobody on the paying end of runaway inflation feels it's fair. It was your good luck that you got the one cup for such a low price. You could no doubt sell it for scrap for much more, the jeweler said. It was sold to you at the old price that the dealer had not got around to changing. The new price is the manufacturer's suggested retail for the moment and it may be more tomorrow depending on the fluctuation in the price of precious metals, the jeweler you dealt with indicated. Because of the nature of the problem, we agreed to give him the same anonymity we accord you.

NAACP Again Asks Sheriff About Complaints

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, in a letter to Sheriff Ralph Tyson, has demanded the dismissal of "all law enforcement officers that were a part of Mr. Julius Wright's assault and arrest," and all officers. "that took part in the duress confession of Mr. Stanley Daniels." The letter, dated yesterday, was the second written to Tyson about the alleged incidents. The first was dated December 31.

The first letter, signed by NAACP president D. D. Garrett, said the organization, "has been informed," that several deputies have exercised, "what may be determined as blatant police brutality."

The latest reports, according to Garrett's correspondence, "are from Mr. Julius Wright, Route 4, Greenville, and Mr. Stanley Daniels of Greenville."

The letter concluded, "We hope that what we have heard about several of your white officers beating black men with pistols and flash lights is only rumor. If by any chance it is more than rumor, we are requesting that your immediate attention be given to this matter in order that your department may be cleaned up." The letter requested a conference with the sheriff.

In an interview, Garrett alleged that Wright was

VEPCO Official Raps More Rate Hearings

RICHMOND, VA. — An official of Virginia Electric Power Co. said here today that another hearing on Vepco rates, as advocated by Gov. Jim Hunt, would be "unnecessary, costly and time consuming."

Responding to the governor's call for another hearing of the Vepco situation, Vepco executive vice president William W. Berry recalled that a "full hearing on Vepco operations was conducted before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission between June 4 and June 15, 1979."

Berry pointed out that

Operation Overcharge, the organization challenging the utility's rate charges, was listed as an "intervener and had the opportunity to participate (in the FERC hearing) but did not appear."

The Vepco official said that should the FERC decide to conduct another investigation, "we believe that such a probe would conclusively show exactly what we have been saying since the overcharge group began its unfounded attacks on Vepco."

He added, "Our management is competent and responsible, rates are fair and any differences between them and those of other utilities are largely a result of fuel costs over which we have had little control. We are convinced that any review by the FERC would clearly show these facts."

Gov. Hunt, in remarks earlier this week, was quoted as saying that Vepco should "get out of North Carolina" and that Vepco was "one of the causes of inflation in northeastern North Carolina." The governor was also quoted as saying Vepco was "a leading barrier to economic development."

Life As It's Lived

Those Unused Excuses Await The Thin Doctor

By GAIL MICHAELS

If there's one thing I hate about pregnancy it's a bunch of thin doctors telling me to control my appetite.

What do they know about real hunger — the kind that causes an expectant mother to drool uncontrollably at the slightest whiff of the deli section in the grocery store? Only someone who's been pregnant can understand that ir- resistible urge that causes a woman to slam on brakes every time she passes a pizza parlor.

Pregnant hunger is over- whelming. It starts as a black hole somewhere near mid- esophagus and within seconds sucks everything from a woman's hair follicles to her humons into its voracious vacuum. My hunger is so strong during pregnancy that my relatives won't even serve my plate during meals for fear of losing a finger.

Furthermore, when the urge possesses me, I am not about to stop and peel a car- rot. I crave something more filling, like chocolate eclairs, Little Debbie oatmeal cakes, and left-over candy canes from Christmas.

Phillip is appalled by my eating habits. But, as I told him after one of his daily lectures on nutrition, I'm doing just what Jean Mayer ordered. I figure that after an afternoon of snacking on Doritos Corn Chips and Whit- man's Chocolates, I have packed away at least two basic food groups: yellow vegetables and dairy products.

Of course, the weight gain which results from this diet can be a problem. I don't worry myself about it too much. In my third month of pregnancy, when our bathroom scale registered "overload" while the needle went into shock and froze, I discreetly tossed it into a trash can and didn't bother to buy a new one.

But I can't help thinking about my portly figure when I'm due for a doctor's ap- pointment. Before my last visit to the obstetrician, I spent 24 hours in preparation. I pasted a picture of a hippo's derriere on my refrigerator. I clipped my toenails and fingernails to the quick, and I had my hair cut. I went to the doctor's office without sweater, socks, jewelry or make-up. I even considered painting thongs on my feet with a magic marker, but Phillip threatened to throw himself in front of the car door until I put my shoes on.

More important than the physical preparation were struck with a flashlight by a deputy questioning him in connection with a stolen prop- erty investigation. He also said that Daniels was struck by officers during an in- vestigation.

Tyson, at that time, said he had "no comment" on whether or not the allegations were under investigation.

The latest letter, also writ- ten by Garrett, said that in the December letter, "we re- quested that you either clear up the rumor, if in fact it was a rumor, or have a con- ference with us."

"In the meeting of the Pitt County Branch of the NAACP held Sunday, it was revealed that you had not responded to our communication."

The letter continued, "the branch, therefore, voted to demand that all law enforce- ment officers that were a part of Mr. Julius Wright's assault and arrest be dismissed from the Pitt County Sheriff's Department immediately."

"It was also voted that all of the law enforcement offi- cers that took a part in the duress confession of Mr. Stanley Daniels also be im- mediately relieved of their duties as deputy sheriffs of Pitt County."

the excuses I thought up some dandy ones. I had severe fluid retention from my elbows to my knees. I was carrying twins, one in front and one in back. I had had a dream about seven lean cows eating seven fat ones and was thus preparing myself for an inevitable famine.

All the way to the doctor's office I swore to myself that I would watch my diet more carefully, but when Phillip got home that afternoon, I was snacking on buttered popcorn and a chocolate milkshake.

"Just what do you think you're doing?" he groaned.

"I'm celebrating. I only gained three and a half pounds this month, and the doctor said that I'd shown ad- mirable restraint. I didn't have to use one excuse."

He rolled his eyes. "Do you still remember them?"

"Sure."

"Then you'd better write them down. You're going to need them next month."

Mangled Bird In Jet Engine

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The mangled carcass of a bird was discovered when Western Air- lines officials inspected a DC-10 forced to return to the airport here because of engine vibra- tion.

The bird sucked into a wing engine Thursday "tore" up the engine" and forced the return to Los Angeles of a San Diego- bound flight, said airline spokeswoman Linda Dozier.

She said the 55 passengers were put on another plane. The aircraft was to be out of com- mission for 24 hours while the engine was replaced.

Dear Abby

Love Is An Emotion

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Is it possible for love to make a person ill? I mean physically sick? I fell in love last year for the first time in my life. Abby, this man is everything I've ever dreamed of, but ever since we met I've been getting the worst headaches! They're not just ordinary headaches—they're migraines, and they are so severe they make me want to die!

Maybe it's just a coincidence, but I never had headaches until I fell in love.

I've been to three doctors, and none of them could find anything wrong with me. Do you think love could have something to do with it? And where do I go from here?

IN LOVE AND IN PAIN

DEAR IN: Love is an emotion, and a very powerful one. It's possible to get headaches from something that's on your mind. Examine your relationship with this man. Is there any aspect of it that could be a "headache"? Ask your doctor to recommend a psychotherapist.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance (27) and I (25) disagree on something and have decided to abide by your decision.

I am a junior high school teacher in a community of less than 1,000 people, and I live in another small town near where I teach. The students in both towns communicate with each other.

My boyfriend lives about 75 miles from where I live. On weekends he would like to sleep at my apartment. We would sleep in separate rooms, and everything would be strictly on the up and up because I am saving myself for marriage. I should mention that he has trouble staying awake when he drives home, and has often had to stop to sleep.

I say I cannot let him stay at my apartment because someone would see his car and say something to my students, and they would not understand. He says it shouldn't matter since we sleep in separate rooms.

I trust him, but I don't want to listen to any off-color remarks. We plan on getting married next summer.

SCHOOL TEACHER'S REPUTATION

DEAR REPUTATION: Feeling as you do about your reputation, you're wise to "avoid the appearance of evil" by sending your fiance home on weekends.

DEAR ABBY: I am being married soon in my home town. I'm planning a rather intimate wedding with only relatives and a few close friends. My problem is my father. He wants me to invite his girlfriend, Sandy. She's my age, and the cause of my parents' divorce. I don't particularly care for Sandy and I know that my Mom would be terribly upset if she came. All the relatives know about the situation and they would feel uncomfortable, too.

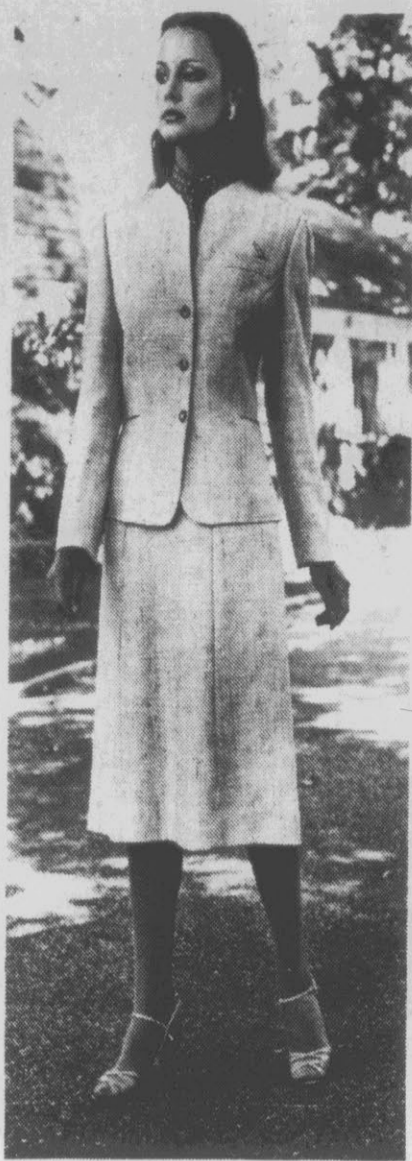

I have already told my father that I didn't think it would be appropriate for him to bring Sandy and he told me if she wasn't welcome, he wouldn't come either.

I want my father at my wedding, but if he brings Sandy it will spoil the day for me.

What should I do?

COLOR ME BLUE

DEAR BLUE: Let your father know that you want him at your wedding, but you don't want Sandy. If he refuses to come without her, tell him you'll miss him.

Looking Toward Spring

Reservations In Order

There is serious consideration in the Carter administration of cancelling, boycotting or moving the Moscow Olympics due to the Russian invasion of Afghanistan.

It would be one of a series of retaliatory reactions by our nation to the Soviet aggression. The thinking is that landing the Olympics for Moscow is a matter of great pride and prestige for the Soviets and crippling the Olympics would be a blow to the Soviet Union.

It has become reasonably clear that it would be difficult to move the Olympics because of the advanced planning and expense involved. If they were moved, almost surely they would be boycotted by the Soviets and communist bloc countries.

We have strong reservations about the United States' boycotting the Olympics in order to punish the Russians for their move into Afghanistan.

The other moves made by the Carter administration were necessary and probably even stronger reactions are needed.

It is difficult enough, however, to hold the Olympics together year-after year without making them some kind of weapon in the political maneuverings between nations.

If the United States boycotts the Olympics this year because of the Russian invasion, we can expect the Soviets to find some reason to boycott next time. It will go on and on. Somehow the Olympics have held together through war and peace and we hope the United States won't be the nation to shoot the Olympics down.

Haunted By Chappaquiddick

It was widely predicted that Chappaquiddick would weigh heavily on any campaign for president that Sen. Edward Kennedy might conduct.

Now, ten years later, it has. Serious questions have been raised by respected publications about Sen.

Kennedy's version of the tragedy.

There is a general feeling that all the facts are not known, and that Kennedy's conduct at Chappaquiddick raises questions about his ability to be president.

THIS AFTERNOON

Alcohol Inaction

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — There's trouble brewing in North Carolina's bars and beer halls as local law enforcement officials are becoming increasingly upset over what they see as a lack of control action at the state level.

It is likely that the matter will end up on the governor's desk or in the laps of General Assembly members, since it involves some high-powered politics and social questions about the use of alcoholic beverages in this state.

Local law officials are complaining that they get no state help or cooperation in trying to close down places where the law is being violated outright, or where criminal actions spawn.

The majority of businesses where alcohol can be consumed on the premises are operating according to the law, say the experts. But almost every community in the state can boast at least one "joint" where the tough guys hang out.

Criminal
Law officers can recite a laundry list of problems at such establishments: sales to minors and drunks; narcotics activity; shootings, knifings, and fights; auto and truck racing; bullets fired into nearby buildings; crimes planned and stolen goods exchanged.

One county sheriff who calls the local beer joint a "breeding ground for crime" complains that state officials treat the joints like respectable business operations and handle complaints with kid gloves.

John Faircloth, chief of the High Point police department, called the situation to the attention of the Governor's Crime Commission at a recent meeting.

"Much violent crime arises out of operation of the ABC outlets, but our line officers on the street feel that enforcement of the alcoholic beverage control law in North Carolina has become a laughing matter. We collect evidence of cuttings and shootings, gambling, narcotics and so on... enough information to put a place out of business. But in Raleigh, the process is slow and uncertain." Faircloth contends.

Action against a licensed ABC outlet must go before the state's ABC Board where a hearing is held. The process may take three to six months, and the red tape, procedures, and politics leave the outcome uncertain.

"This is not cooperation by the state to help local law enforcement do its job... this is the operation of an agency for the convenience of the people in that agency. It is too slow, too little, and too unresponsive," Faircloth said.

Faircloth and other law officers say they have heard that legislation will be proposed to bar local law officers from even bringing such action, leaving that entirely to state officers.

BILL NOBLITT

Need Help

Crime Control Secretary Burley Mitchell said he opposes such a move. He wants local law officers to be involved in policing the sales outlets. There are only 85 state ABC enforcement officers in the state, and Mitchell complains that the General Assembly authorized liquor by the drink without increasing that force. Also, about half the time of those agents is spent running background investigations on license applicants.

Mitchell supervises the enforcement branch, while the ABC Board runs the licensing and regulatory enforcement activities. ABC Chairman Marvin Speight has fought to keep the enforcement operation under his supervision, and it is Speight who is responsible for the hearings and actions on license cases filed before the ABC Board.

Mitchell said his enforcement people are well aware of the problems discussed by the local officials, and he has told his agents to bring criminal charges where

Other Editors Say Seeking Advice

(Kannapolis Independent)

Governor James B. Hunt, Jr. is asking police chiefs and sheriffs throughout North Carolina for suggestions on how to prevent violence "by political extremist groups such as the Ku Klux Klan, the American Nazis and the Communists."

It is encouraging to see the governor — who is a lawyer, has a battery of lawyers available around the clock and has experts on crime control on his staff — go to the men on the firing line for advice.

Men in law enforcement may not be able to cloak all their feelings in legal terminology, and it may be difficult for them to put the rights of trouble makers and accused criminals above the rights of law-abiding society, but the chances are good that they have some excellent ideas on how to cope with the violence-prone individuals and organizations. Every day and night they deal with people who are violent or potentially violent, sour on the world, convinced that they have been short-changed in life and want to strike back. People without troubles seldom contact the police.

Police are the first to see the impact of crime on the victims, the first to try to read the thoughts and rationalizing of those accused of committing crimes. Their views of suspected criminals and the victims of criminals are different from the pictures drawn by the prosecutors assigned to try suspects on the basis of information collected by the law enforcement officers and by lawyers defending the suspects.

Local police are the first line of defense of lives and property, the first to be complemented when a brutal crime is solved, the first to be criticized when there is an epidemic of violence, larceny and vandalism.

The governor very probably will receive a lot of helpful suggestions in response to his letter to the police chiefs and the sheriffs, who, no doubt, will go to their co-workers in law enforcement for ideas.

Strength For Today

CHAINS

A psychiatrist recently told about a recurrent dream that came to one of his patients. At the beginning of the dream the patient experienced a feeling of great satisfaction which almost amounted to ecstasy. He was in the company of congenial people. Everywhere he was being acclaimed, and he was filled with the feeling that this acclaim was justified.

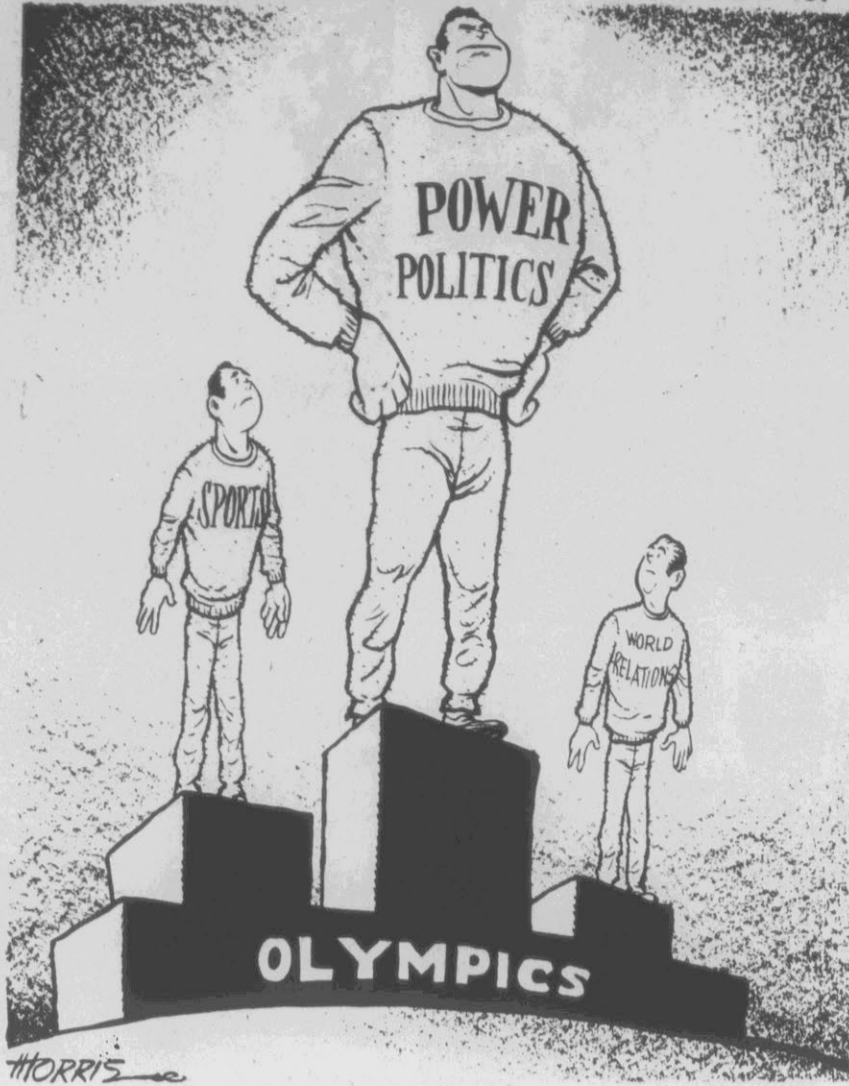

But then periodically in the dream he would be aware that he was wearing handcuffs. Once in a while he was conscious that his ankles were manacled and that the chains made a clanking sound as he walked. Slowly the feeling of elation disappeared, and he awoke in a mood of profound depression.

There are probably several interpretations of this dream. One might be that it represents certain people who believe themselves free but are not free at all because of moral weaknesses. Unfortunately they do not become aware of the imprisoning nature of these weaknesses until it is too late — when they wake up in a different world.

Who's Best Dressed?

WASHINGTON — My gripe today is with the Fashion Foundation of America, which has just voted Pope John Paul II the "Best Dressed Statesman of 1979."

I want to make it perfectly clear that I am a big admirer of Pope John Paul II and believe he should receive any honor bestowed on him.

But when it comes to clothes, I don't think he should be allowed to compete with people like President Tito, Jimmy Carter, Deng Xiaoping, Margaret Thatcher or the Ayatollah Khomeini.

It just isn't fair to the other statesmen of the world to go up against His Holiness when it comes to clothing. All John Paul's raiments are made by hand. I have it on the highest authority that he spends more money on one cape than Menachem Begin spends on his entire wardrobe. The cost of the Pope's slippers could shoe Madame Gandhi for the rest of her life.

When it comes to headgear, there isn't a statesman in the world who can hold a candle to one of the Pope's skullcaps.

No matter what you think of him personally, I believe it's unfair to make Fidel Castro run against John Paul II in the best-dressed statesman category.

ART BUCHWALD

There may be a few South American generals in full uniform who could make it a contest — Ferdinand Marcos is no slouch when it comes to dressing up for formal occasions, and the Royal Family of Saudi Arabia can get it all together when they have to. But except for Queen Elizabeth II, when she's opening Parliament, John Paul is in a class by himself.

The foundation tried to get off the hook when it announced the Pope as winner by saying it took "special note of the fact that the Pope added a light touch of fashion when he donned a Mexican hat during his trip to Mexico last year."

With all due respect to the Pontiff, even Henry Kissinger looks good when he's wearing a Mexican hat. The judges also said that John Paul II wears his robes far better than most recent Pontiffs have.

I don't believe this. Every Pope I've known looked great when he put on his vestments, because when it comes to papal attire, clothes make the man — man doesn't make the clothes. Why am I getting so excited over this? The reason is quite simple.

I've always dreamed of making the best-dressed list of statesmen, ever since I bought my first J.C. Penney's polyester suit. This year I thought I'd be up against Giscard d'Estaing, Helmut Schmidt, Kurt Waldheim, Andrei Gromyko, Anwar Sadat and Zbigniew Brzezinski. I was sure I was a contender.

If I had known that Pope John Paul II was in the race, I would most certainly have asked the foundation to take my name off the ballot. It's like asking Princess Margaret to compete against Cher.

40 Years Ago Today

Friday, January 18, 1940
LUBBOCK, TEXAS — Education isn't potent enough to wean people away from ancient and honored superstitions.

At least at Texas Technological College they found it that way.

Forty-seven percent of the students, responding in a poll, admitted they think black cats and bad luck go together; about one-fourth said if they walked under a ladder they would expect the worst and others said breaking a mirror is almost sure to bring seven years of ill luck.

FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover announced that 18 members of the "Christian Front" have been arrested in New York on charges of conspiracy to overthrow the United States Government with a revolution and set up a dictator. Hoover said the guns and ammunition seized in the raid of a "small arsenal" were to have been used in the revolution.

Few See A U.S. Decline

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — Amid intensive debate in Washington and other world capitals over the power and influence of the United States in the world, the weight of public opinion in a 20-nation Gallup survey is that U.S. power in 1980 will either increase or remain as it is at present.

Americans themselves are overwhelmingly (2-to-1) of the belief that our power in the world will increase rather than decline. In fact, the proportion who think U.S. power in the world will increase is actually higher today than it was at the start of either 1979 or 1978. At the same time, however, a significant 30 percent of Americans predict that our power in 1980 will decline, a higher proportion than say this about either Russian or Chinese power.

In most nations in the survey, increases in Russian and Chinese power were also predicted for 1980.

Here is the question asked to determine attitudes about the power of the U.S., Russia and China:

"Which of these do you think is likely to be true in 1980: A year when America/China/Russia will increase her power in the world or a year when American/Chinese/Russian power will decline?"

Here are the views of Americans:
Will Power Increase Or Decline During 1980?
(Views of Americans)

	Increase	Decline	Stay same/ Don't know
American power will	58%	30%	12%
Chinese power will	60	15	25
Russian power will	56	22	22

Results From Other Nations

Results from abroad show 70 percent or more of the publics in four nations, in addition to the U.S., saying American power will remain the same or will increase. These nations are Norway, the Netherlands, Sweden, and the Philippines.

Almost as likely to hold this view — expressed by fewer than 70 percent but by 50 percent or more — are citizens of these 10 nations: Australia, Canada, Austria, Great Britain, Switzerland, West Germany, Chile, Brazil, India and Spain.

Those nations where fewer than half say American power will increase or remain the same in 1980 are Japan, Mexico and Korea.

Which Most Powerful Nation Of The Three?

The same survey shows that a large majority of Americans (86 percent) think the U.S. is "the most" or "one of the most" powerful nations in the world. Somewhat fewer (77 percent) use these terms to describe Russia, and considerably fewer (33 percent) do so to characterize the strength of China.

Here is the question and the American results:

"Which statement on this card best describes how you would rate America's/Russia's/China's power in the world?" The categories listed were: "The most powerful country in the world; one of the most powerful countries; about as powerful as other large countries; one of the least powerful countries; not at all a powerful country in the world."

Here are the U.S. findings:

	How Rate Power In World?
	Most	One of Most	As Others	One of Least	Not at all Don't know
America	33%	53%	11%	1%	2%
Russia	10	67	16	2	5
China	1	32	48	9	7

Peaceful — Or Troubled Year Ahead?

Perceptions of the relative strength of the three superpowers are seen against a backdrop of pessimism regarding the prospects for world peace in 1980.

Pessimism runs highest in the U.S., where 80 percent predict a "troubled year" compared to only 14 percent who think the world will experience a "peaceful year, more or less free of international disputes."

The prospects for world peace are regarded as dim by six persons or more in 10 in Venezuela, Great Britain, Uruguay, Finland, Switzerland, Norway and Mexico.

The weight of opinion in virtually all of the remaining nations surveyed is that we are headed for a troubled 12 months.

During the last weeks of 1979, Gallup-affiliated organizations in 19 foreign nations interviewed representative samples of the public in each country.

In the U.S., 1,549 adults, 18 and older, were interviewed in person in more than 300 scientifically-selected localities across the nation during the period Nov. 30-Dec. 3, 1979.

No Clock There

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
DANBURY, Conn. (AP) —

The library late in the afternoon was crowded with high schoolers cramming, I suppose, for mid-term exams, if such things still exist.

Anyhow the tables were piled high with books and gloves and mufflers. The young scholars were bent earnestly over large looseleaf binders or copying notes furiously onto index cards with only the mildest murmur of conversation occasionally marring their concentration. Every seat was filled, even the window ledges.

So I took my own research materials off to the children's section, almost empty now, and sat at one of those low slung tables in the company of Dr. Doolittle and Dr. Seuss and a few hand puppets smiling down at me from the shelves.

My pen was out, my notebook poised, which is why I was able to transcribe the following conversation exactly as it came out:

"My parents are getting divorced."

"How do you know?"

Stampedes Draw Uninformed

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) —

The stock boom of the 1960s was often spurred by the slogan, "it's smart to own a piece of America." Ownership of stock, it was said, meant you were sharing in the economy's bounty.

That was back then when people had more trust in surrogate money, when they had faith that paper always would be acceptable as a medium of exchange, when they believed that economic institutions were permanent.

Faith hasn't vanished, but it has diminished. When you speak today of owning a piece of America you may be talking of the real thing, about real estate, oil, metals, trees. These seem to be the new collectibles, just as diamonds, art and stamps were earlier.

It might all pass. Stampedes make a great roar coming but they leave in a cloud of dust. This stampede could also, especially if detente between the great powers is resumed. But for now, it's here.

Each day the newspapers document it. Gold, silver, platinum and copper are hoarded by those who hold or trade them. The active stocks are often those of natural resource companies.

Such buyers cannot consume their purchases. Because their gold is locked in a vault they cannot, for instance, admire it. They cannot make other products from it because they have no facility to do it.

For them, metal is money. And so are other natural resources. When people suspect paper money, created as a substitute because desirable (limited) natural resources are too cumbersome to handle, they tend to return to the real thing.

And what causes today's suspicions? The threat of war, the instability of governments, inflation, and a fear that the old economic order is being upset before anyone has a notion of what will replace it.

And so the retreat to basics. Gold, which was "demonetized" or, as we thought, set adrift from currencies so that it could operate as just another commodity, is reasserting itself as money. So are real estate and other natural resources — the real thing rather than substitutes.

Many collectors of natu-resources do not even consider themselves investors so much as escapees.

They do not view holdings as soaring in value but instead view money as losing value. The value of natural resources, they say, aren't rising in value as swiftly as currency is declining. The mirage arises, they say, from denominating values in terms of currency.

When the stampede will end cannot be foreseen, but some analysts claim they see a slowdown, a correction, a retreat that might, however, be only temporary.

The reason, they say, is that an initial quest for security by some wealthy individuals, banks and governments, has attracted investors, then speculators, then gamblers, and now, most likely, the uninformed.

Sees Trend To Nuclear Energy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's of the world will have to use more nuclear energy in the future, says an international study group. Because of that, the group said in a report released Thursday, there will have to be more international cooperation to assure nuclear safety and adequate fuel supplies and to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons. The group also said the world's nations should keep open the possibility of turning to breeder reactors which can produce fuel while generating power. The report was published by the International Consultative Group on Nuclear Energy.

Greenville Girl Scouts are launching their annual Cookie Sale. Orders will be taken Jan. 18-Feb. 4 for seven types of cookies. Cookies will be delivered March 4-17.

The sale is a tradition in Girl Scouting which dates back to the early 1930's. Proceeds support local troop programs and the Girl Scout Council of Coastal Carolina's Property Fund. Proceeds from the cookie sale go toward maintenance of the four campsites owned by the Girl Scouts. These campsites are purchased, developed, repaired, renovated, and maintained by selling cookies.

A portion of the proceeds is used for camperships which give financial assistance to girls who might not otherwise be able to attend summer resident camp.

Mrs. Pat Burrus, volunteer council cookie sale chairperson, expressed appreciation to the girls, parents and communities for their support over the years. "I think we'll have a good sale this year," she said.

Mrs. Burrus added, "Supporting their cookie sale service program is a good way to let them know you believe in what they're trying so hard to accomplish."

Durham College Is Being Closed

"They just told me. This morning, at breakfast."
The voices came from behind me, young and high-pitched. I couldn't tell at first if they were boys or girls or one of each. This brief lull in the conversation enabled me to steal a look over my shoulder.

There were two girls, 9 years old, maybe 10 at most, putting together a cardboard cut out of what appeared to be Windsor Castle.

"Are you happy about it?"
"No way."
Brief silence.

"Parents stink ... most of them. Mine are talking about a divorce, too."
Long silence. I could hear the clock ticking on the wall. Or was it tears falling on the pieces of the dream castle? I didn't dare look again, but I didn't notice any clock when I left later.

A tall gray-haired lady appeared in the doorway and called to one of the children. "It's time to go now. Hurry, dear. Grandpa is doubleparked."
"I wish I were going home," the little girl said.

Over my shoulder I could see her moodily moving the cut-out pieces of the unfinished castle back and forth like discs on a checkerboard. Then a younger woman in a jogging suit with a squash racket under her arm came into the children's room and told her to hurry, too.

"Is Daddy home?" the child asked.
"No, dear, he's away."
"Where?"
"Please, don't ask so many questions. Dinner is waiting."
"Can't we have a pizza?"
The answer was a negative shake of the head. More in sorrow than in anger, the little girl brushed her sleeve against the cardboard castle and brought it tumbling down.

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The approximately 245 students enrolled at Durham College are going to have to change schools, at least until September.

The college's trustees voted Thursday night to close the financially ailing school until September, when it may be reopened if enough money is found to keep the school solvent.

"The board of trustees has deliberated for three and a half to four hours, long and hard, on the decision as to whether or not the college should continue operations," Guy Rankin, chairman of the trustees, said Thursday.

"Because of lack of funds, because the community has not seen fit to support the college in sufficient amounts, the board therefore has no alternative but to temporarily close the school," he said.

Durham College, a predominantly black two-year business school, has had financial problems for about two years. Those problems led to its loss of accreditation in August.

The school's debts include mortgage payments on a women's dormitory and about $125,000 in liens against the school, which was founded more than 30 years ago. Rankin said some staff members have not been paid since Jan. 1.

He said school officials have made a tentative agreement with St. Augustine's College and Shaw University, two predominantly black schools in Raleigh, to accept the Durham College students with no added tuition charges or loss of credit.

Rankin said he expected the deal to be finalized today when Durham College President James Hills confers with the presidents of the two Raleigh schools.

Students are expected to return to school Jan. 28, but Rankin said school officials have not decided if they will return to the Durham campus or to the college to which they will be assigned.

Rankin said the 50 teachers and staff members at Durham College may also be moved to the two Raleigh campuses.

Letters were to be mailed to students today. The students were to have started the spring semester at Durham College on Jan. 8, but classes were delayed.

Rankin said the school will not file for bankruptcy now, but he added that, "it is an option."

More People Riding Buses

Ridership on Greenville's bus system rose by almost 20 percent in 1979 as 36,576 new passengers began using the city's transit service, officials announced.

According to figures released by the Greenville Area Transit (GREAT), there were 225,619 passengers transported on all city buses in 1979, compared with 189,043 persons in 1978, an increase of 19.3 percent.

October, with a record 21,655 passengers, and August, with 21,196 riders, were the leading ridership months as the transit system recorded an average of 120 new passengers each day.

GREAT officials attributed the growth to the "increased awareness of the reliable service being provided by the GREAT system, and to the rising gasoline prices, which have made the bus service a less expensive choice to the automobile."

They asserted that the bus service is "much less expensive than a second car for the average family. For only 30 cents, a person can take the bus anywhere in the city," it was noted.

The transit officials suggested

The situation brings into strong conflict the attitudes of law enforcement people who see alcohol as a major contributing factor in numerous crimes, and Speight, who sees selling alcohol as a business which ought not to be subject to harassment from lawmen.

CONTROL YOUR DEBTS

If your present bills, because of economic pressures, cannot be met by your income, legal relief may be available to you under the provisions of Chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, which permits individuals to petition the Court for an arrangement allowing a thirty-six month period to discharge indebtedness, without property repossession or creditor harassment. Attorney's fees, which may be paid in monthly installments, are determined by the Court. There is no fee for an initial conference to discuss your eligibility for a "Wage Earner Plan".

Christian Life Center Services Being Started

The first day of services in the new Christian Life Center here will be held Sunday, beginning at 3 p. m., in the Rotary Club Building at the corner of Johnston and Rotary Streets here.

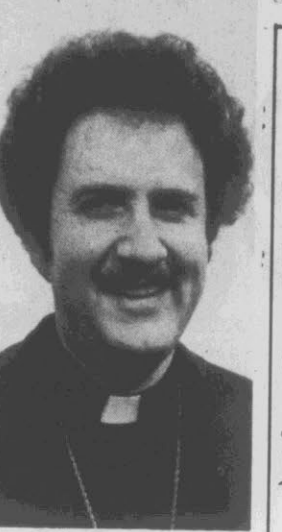

Joe Sturz is minister of the center and his wife, Rachel Steinbeck Sturz, is minister of music.

Sturz said this will be a "center for all Christians" and that worship will be informal, with guitars and handclapping to music. He said membership won't be formal and that many may wish to worship here and also in the churches in which they have membership. He said he and Mrs. Sturz will continue to be active members of St. James United Methodist Church here.

Hours for Sunday School and worship service will be kept different from the 9:45 to noon hours observed in other churches so people can worship elsewhere, also, if they wish. Sunday school will be held from 3 to 4 p. m. Sundays and worship from 4 to 5:30 p. m., he said. A Thursday night service will last from 6 to 8 p. m. A nursery will be provided.

Sturz is ordained by the United Evangelical Churches and has been and will continue to operate a Christian counseling service in his home. A member of the Greenville Ministerial Association, he has a master's degree in psychology from East Carolina University and an undergraduate degree from San Diego State College in California. He has done further work in Christian psychology at Rosemead Graduate School of Psychology in Rosemead, Calif. and has attended the lay pastor's school at Duke University. He and his wife have three children, Justin, Arielle and Jenesina.

Counterfeit Art Found

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Seven bronze statues on display as works of one of America's best-known Western artists, Frederic Remington, have been identified as fakes, officials of the New Orleans Museum of Art say.

The Wild West Exhibition opened at the museum last November and contains 85 works, including paintings and sculpture by two of the country's most famous western artists, Remington and Charles Russell.

Remington's bronze statues show such Wild West scenes as cowboys riding bucking horses. However, museum officials discovered last month that seven of the Remington pieces, all privately owned by art collectors, were counterfeit.

The fakes were discovered by a visiting expert on Remington who was in New Orleans to lecture on art forgery. Experts say the Remington art works are relatively easy to copy by using molds made from originals. And they say Remington works often bring as high as $100,000.

"The only way you can really tell ... is to take calipers and measure each individual section of the bronze and compare it to the measurements of the original," museum director John Bullard said Thursday.

Gospel Sing On Saturday Night

A gospel sing will be held at the Meadowbrook Pentecostal Holiness Church Saturday night at 7:30.

"Thank you for my doll and our other toys," exclaimed Mary. "And take care of Mommy and Daddy," added Janie. "Help Billy not to be lonely in the hospital," offered Bobby for his little school friend.

Children believe in prayer. They believe their prayers are heard in exactly the words they use. They say simply what is in their hearts, trusting Mom's promise that they can talk to God and be heard.

But sometimes the adult heart is skeptical. We wonder if prayer really does any good — whether it is heard. It is then we need the simple trust of a child. We must remember that, through the ages, men have found answers through the Church. There God speaks with perfect wisdom to the hearts of His children. Attend church this Sunday.

Russians Proved Strategic Weaknesses Of U.S.

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON AP) — The United States, stripped of the comfortable notion that it could depend on a local "policeman" to guard its considerable interests in the Persian Gulf, is scrambling to maintain American influence in the oil-rich region.

Faced with the revolutionary loss of Iran and the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, the Carter administration is attempting to establish a new alignment of pro-Western governments, focusing on strengthened ties with Egypt and Pakistan, an old relationship with Saudi Arabia and new bonds with China.

President Carter is redrafting U.S. military strategy, with the emphasis on establishing new bases in the region, expanding existing facilities and setting up a large, mobile combat force that could be rapidly deployed to the area.

The diplomatic and military realignments began after the Iranian revolution eliminated the government upon which the United States relied for military might in the Persian Gulf. While the Iranian lesson was sinking in, the Soviet Union sent thousands of troops into Afghanistan, taking advantage of the U.S. distraction with Iran.

With the incursion, the Russians proved a sobering point: Strategically, the United States is largely incapable of countering Soviet power in the Gulf despite a decade of lining up friends and plying them with billions of dollars worth of American jets, missiles, tanks and other arms.

Zbigniew Brzezinski, the U.S. national security adviser, acknowledges "the fragility of the region."

That is why, he told the Associated Press, President Carter is reinforcing "our political relationships and military presences, thereby enhancing the security of friendly states."

Said Brzezinski: "All concerned should know one central fact: This region is of vital importance to the United States and American power is available to protect it."

Thus, the Soviet intervention is seen in Washington as a waterred event in the geopolitics of the Gulf and one immutable fact dominates U.S. foreign policy in the area: So long as Americans maintain their love affair with the automobile, the United States must try to shape events there.

The Soviet move in Afghanistan complicates the U.S. task, transforming an already tense region into the center ring for East-West confrontation and providing a potential for open conflict.

The Soviet power play, reviving a historic southward push toward the Iranian oil fields and Arabian sea ports, raises new U.S. concerns about Western oil supplies. Through the Strait of Hormuz, gateway to the gulf, passes 60 percent of the Western world's foreign oil purchases. Guarding this vital lifeline: tiny Oman's 17-ship navy.

Forced to redefine its role, the United States finds itself with a limited number of dependable allies. Israel and Egypt are the most prominent and, according to experts, have the best armies in the Middle East.

But there is no Gulf "policeman" to guard U.S. interests, as Iran was supposed to do with $21 billion in American weaponry. Saudi Arabia is neither capable nor interested in assuming that mission.

Although defiantly anti-American, the Iranian regime is not pro-Soviet. Some administration officials hope the intervention of neighboring Afghanistan will shock the ruling Moslem clergy in Iran into a renewed, if modest, friendship with the United States.

The pessimistic view of the region is that the Soviet influence is gaining, with the intervention of Afghanistan only the latest in a series of provocative moves.

Working along the periphery, the Russians have acquired strong political and military positions in Ethiopia, on the Horn of Africa, in Aden and South Yemen, and now are fighting to impose a puppet regime in Afghanistan.

They also have access to key ports in Syria and Iraq, although neither country has moved fully into the Soviet orbit.

The United States, meanwhile, has lost influence over the last several years in Iran, Ethiopia, and to some extent, Saudi Arabia and Jordan. It has gained ground in Somalia, while Egypt and Israel are staunch allies.

Trying to block the Soviet advance, President Carter is planning to ask Congress to allow a resumption in arms aid to Pakistan despite a disturbing nuclear policy.

Brzezinski, the presidential adviser who coined the phrase "arc of instability" in late 1978 to describe the region, compares the plight of the countries along the Indian Ocean to Western Europe in the 1950s and Asia in the 1960s and 1970s.

"Their internal fragility, social and political, could interact with the projection of Soviet power, and that together could create a problem as acute as the one that we faced even in the '50s and '60s, especially because of oil," he said.

Dr. Aldridge Filed Today

Dr. M. W. "Henry" Aldridge of Greenville, who announced earlier this month that he would be a candidate for the North Carolina House of Representatives from Pitt and Greene Counties, filed with the Pitt County Board of Elections today.

Aldridge, who filed as a Republican, said, "I am overwhelmed by the number of friends that have encouraged me to seek this office. I will be the voice and representative for a sound, stable and efficient government. I will offer eastern North Carolina a conservative voice in representing them in Raleigh."

A practicing dentist in Greenville for the past 29 years, Aldridge said, "people are tired of their hard-earned money being spent by liberals to increase bureaucratic growth of state government. The taxpayer has too long been overburdened."

"Inflation is continuing to hurt everyone from the family farmer to the small businessman. By filing today, I offer every person in Pitt and Greene County the opportunity to have a voice that knows the needs of Eastern North Carolina."

Rams Planning On Some New Tricks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If you've gotten as far as the Super Bowl, common sense dictates that you've got what it takes to win it, too.

At least that's Chuck Noll's philosophy. "You win with what's gotten you here," Pittsburgh's coach has said in the past — namely when the Steelers were winning their three Super Bowl titles.

But Los Angeles Coach Ray Malavasi thinks it's always a good idea to have a few new things up your sleeve.

In Malavasi's case, he may well be right, considering he's sending his underdog Rams against Noll's Steelers.

"Personally, we try to rely on things we've been doing since training camp," Noll said Thursday. "I think the most important part of our preparation is training camp. Everything we'll do on Sunday we've done in training camp and have refined and improved during the season."

"To put in something cold can make things very confusing, make it difficult to execute your offense."

Malavasi isn't exactly planning on scrapping the offense that put the Rams in their first Super Bowl, but he does say he's got a few surprises in store for the Steelers.

"You want to have a few new things for a game like this," Malavasi said. "We're going to experiment a little bit during the game. If something works for us, we'll stay with it. If it doesn't work, we won't use it again."

Hotel Wednesday, where the Rams are headquartered. The Rams meet the Pittsburgh Steelers Sunday in the Super Bowl. (AP Laser-photo)

Like what, he was asked. "Well, we've got the single wing," he began, tongue in cheek. "We've got the Wishbone; we'll use Nolan Cromwell in that..."

It was clear he wasn't about to divulge his game plan. In fact, when someone asked — not entirely seriously — how he planned to beat the Steelers, he replied: "That's privileged information," and he wasn't smiling when he said it.

Putting in new plays at this stage of the season, Steelers' wide receiver Lynn Swann said, "is away from the norm. Every team that's won the Super Bowl has done so by doing the things it did so successfully during the regular season because it had the confidence that those things would work when the championship was on the line."

"Putting in new plays now, to try and win this ballgame, might hurt the players' confidence in what they were doing," Swann added.

He said the Steelers have "prepared for everything we've seen so far" on films of the Rams' games. That would seem to give Los Angeles hope that something totally new — such as a new kind of offensive formation or the seven defense backs they used to upset the Dallas Cowboys — might catch the Pittsburgh defense off guard. "Each week we try to put in something as a different look for the defense, something that they haven't worked on," said Vince Ferragamo, the Rams' fledgling quarterback. "So we're going to put something in, put a few new plays in."

Jack Lambert, the Steelers' fearsome middle linebacker, just shrugged when he was asked about the Rams' potential surprises.

"Doesn't matter what they do," he said. "I think we've got the defense to handle it."

Ferragamo would like to have the time to survey the field and pick out his pass targets the way he did against Tampa Bay in the National Conference championship game, when he had as much as 10 or 11 seconds on several occasions.

"My linemen have been telling me all week they're going to give me the time and I've got great confidence in those people. They're some of the best people in pro football," Ferragamo said.

"I'm excited. I'm sure I'll be a little nervous going into the game, but that's natural. I've been nervous going into the last four or five games."

And when he was reminded of the comment by Pittsburgh quarterback Terry Bradshaw, that Ferragamo would be rattled when he became aware of the enormity of the game, the Rams' quarterback replied:

"I'm well aware of that. I was well aware of the fact that we had to beat Dallas to get into the Super Bowl. That was also a big game, one of the bigger games of my career. But I think the biggest game of all was my first start in the NFL. For me every game's been a big game and I don't see how this can be any bigger than the previous games we've played in."

Lady Pirates Host Appalachian; On Road Against Old Dominion

East Carolina University's women, fresh from their 71-68 victory over the University of North Carolina, face Appalachian State here Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum. The Pirates, now 13-4, will be seeking to move up in the Division I State standings, in which they are now 0-1. The victory over Carolina did not count in the standings; the second meeting of the two, at Chapel Hill, is designated as the conference game.

The contest also closes out the current home stand, and sends the Pirates into Monday night's game in Norfolk, Va., against the nation's number two ranked team, Old Dominion.

Coach Cathy Andruzzi doesn't feel that the Lady Pirates might be looking past Appalachian State to the game with Old Dominion.

"Appalachian is going to be a tough game for us. It's a conference game and one we've got to win. So that's the only thing on our minds right now—Appalachian State," Andruzzi said. The coach added that she is very pleased with the performance of her team right now. "I hope the victory over Carolina is going to be the incentive to show that we can do it this year. We want to be 14-4 right now."

Obviously, however, Appalachian will not provide the competition that Old Dominion will. The Mountaineers come in to the game with a losing record, having a 3-6 mark prior to a game with Milligan at Boone earlier this week.

ASU has only one starter in double figures. Angelita Horton, hitting 13.7 per contest. Three of the others, however, are just outside double figures, with Tiana McEntire at 9.0, Muriel Higginbotham at 8.8 and Nina Foust at 8.4. Higginbotham is the leading rebounder at 10.4 per game.

Come Monday, the Pirates will find a contrast when they face Old Dominion, which has four starters in double figures. The defending AIAW champs are led by 6-5 Inge Nissen, hitting 17.2 points per game and pulling off 9.4 rebounds, while 6-8 center Anne Donovan is averaging 16.8 points and 11.8 rebounds.

Nancy Lieberman, the nation's number one player last year, is averaging 16.6 points and 8.3 rebounds and had 122 assists going into a game with Virginia earlier this week, when the Lady Monarchs had a 14-1 record. The other player in double figures is Rhonda Rimpola at 10.9, while Cris Critelli, the other starter, is at 8.9.

Lieberman's 122 assists ranked her third in the nation. Oddly enough, East Carolina's Laurie Sikes had 123 (now 130) and was not ranked.

"There is no doubt that Old Dominion will be our toughest assignment of the year," Andruzzi said. "They are one of the best, if not the best in the country. They have depth, size, speed—everything they need. We are going to have to be at our best, try to find their weakness and go at it."

"We've got to be sensible about their height, and keep the ball away from their big people as much as possible on defense. Then, we've got to play at our best on offense where positioning is going to be very important. We just have to get them out of their game plan."

Following the Old Dominion game, the Pirates return home on Thursday to face Florida State.

Thomas Latest Big Ten Star

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

For some time, the Big Ten Conference was hardly a league of gentlemen, known more for rough and ready big guys than anything else. Guards went about their business largely unnoticed.

Recently, however, the image changed drastically with such light-fingered backcourt players last year as Magic Johnson at Michigan State, Kelvin Ransey at Ohio State, Ronnie Lester at Iowa... and this year's star-spangled addition of Isiah

Thomas at Indiana. "Thomas," says Iowa Coach Lute Olson, "has unbelievable leadership about him. He's a born leader."

Olson made his superlative assessment after getting to see the Hoosiers' brilliant freshman first-hand Thursday night, during an 81-69 loss to Indiana.

Thomas, handling himself like a pro, dished out 13 assists, scored 14 points and collected four steals in his best all-around game since joining Bob Knight's team.

"He is becoming more deeply involved in more things," said Knight. "He has a great physical quality about him...and that's his eyes. He has tremendous vision and looks a lot, as all great passers do. He hangs onto the ball until the last possible second, forcing the man to guard him to make a move."

The game between the 13th-ranked Hoosiers and 19th-ranked Kentucky was one of a handful of important Big Ten games Thursday night. In others, second-ranked Ohio State defeated Minnesota 75-70 in overtime and Purdue turned back Northwestern 68-63.

Elsewhere, No. 4 Oregon State beat Washington State 65-63; No. 6 Kentucky whipped Florida 76-63 and No. 20 Tennessee turned back Mississippi 70-61.

Along with Thomas, Indiana got strong performances from Ray Tolbert and Butch Carter. Tolbert scored 18 points and Carter, 17. The Hoosiers had a 38-29 halftime lead and the Hawkeyes never came closer than nine points in the second half. Lester did not play for Iowa because of an injury. Ransey and Herb Williams scored all 11 of Ohio State's points in overtime to key the Buckeye victory. Williams scored 26 points overall and Ransey, scoring in double figures for the 76th straight game, had 13.

"I didn't like being behind," said Williams, whose Buckeyes overcame a 12-point deficit in the second half. "It gives you butterflies. We must start getting a lead early and putting both halves together."

Drake Morris scored a career-high 29 points and Joe Barry Carroll claimed Purdue's career rebounding record as the Boilermakers defeated Northwestern.

Carroll, who had his 55th straight game in double figures, scored 19 points and pulled down 13 rebounds. His last rebound gave him a career mark of 959 — one more than Terry Dischinger's old record.

Ray Blume led five players in double figures with 13 points as Oregon State beat Washington State. The Beavers blew most of an 18-point lead before recovering in time to win their 16th game in 17 this year.

"I have nothing good to say," said an obviously displeased Oregon State Coach Ralph Miller. "I don't think we got what we deserved. We played a walking defense and didn't play with any intensity."

Fred Cowan scored 16 points to lead Kentucky over Florida, getting the Wildcats back on the right track in the Southeastern Conference. Joe Hall's highly-touted team had lost two conference games already.

"I thought we played awfully well," said Hall after the game on Florida's tough home court called "Alligator Alley." "In the early part of the second half, I felt we played better than we have in a long time."

Kentucky opened a 17-point lead late in the first half, and smashed out a hefty 60-39 advantage with 11 minutes to go.

Reggie Johnson led a 15-0 surge midway through the second half to trigger Tennessee past Mississippi State. Johnson finished with 16 points, eight of them coming in a five-minute burst that propelled the Vols into a 12-point lead with 5:18 left in the game.

"It was an important win for us," said Tennessee Coach Don DeVoe, whose team hasn't lost a regular season SEC game since last season when Mississippi State took a double-overtime victory over the Vols. "We had poise and shot selection in the second half when we needed it the most."

Pirates Run In Top Meets

East Carolina University's indoor track team heads into two prestigious meets this weekend, in Philadelphia and New York.

The Pirates will participate in the Philadelphia Track Classic on Friday, then travel to New York City on Saturday for the Madison Square Garden Olympic Invitational.

The Pirates go into the meets following several fine performances in last week's East Tennessee State Invitational.

"Our mile relay team qualified for the NCAA nationals with a time of 3:14.67 during the preliminaries," Coach Bill Carson said. "Then, in Saturday's finals, we finished second to Florida A & M with a time of 3:14.42." Florida A & M won in 3:12.7.

The Pirates ran the fine time, Carson noted, despite the fact that two of the members of the relay team participated in both the trials and finals of the quarter mile run.

"Stan Curry finished fourth in the finals of the quarter with a 48.36, and ran a 48.38 in the preliminaries. Otis Melvin ran 48.42 (preliminaries) and 48.45 to take fifth place, and also ran a 21.3 in the 220 trials," Carson said. "We were the only mile team to have runners in the quarter-mile."

At Philadelphia chief competition for the Pirates in the feature college mile relay will be Villanova, Tennessee, Seton Hall and Fairleigh-Dickinson. Saturday competition at Madison Square Garden will include Tennessee, Maryland and Morgan State.

The mile relay team consists of Curry, Carlton Bell, Shawn Laney and Melvin.

Two Groups Soviet-Bound

By The Associated Press
While political pressure mounts for the United States to boycott the Olympic Games in Moscow this summer, two groups of American athletes are preparing to depart for the Soviet Union in the next few days despite a request from the State Department to cancel the trips.

According to a spokesman for the Amateur Athletic Union, a U. S. wrestling team will leave for Russia on Saturday and a group of boxers will depart next Tuesday unless officially barred by the State Department.

Pete Cava, director of the AAU's press information department, told The Associated Press that his organization is going ahead with plans to send the two squads "as long as it goes no farther than a request (by the State Department) not to go. It's just wait and see," he said.

Meanwhile, the movement to boycott the Summer Games, scheduled for Moscow from July 19-Aug. 3, gained momentum when the Carter Administration considered setting up a rival set of games and the 32 members of the Muhammad Ali Amateur Sports Club voted not to participate in any event "where Russian athletes are involved."

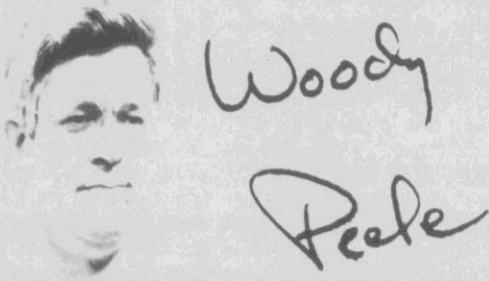

At the same time, Don Hull, the AAU's executive director of boxing, said the State Department had raised the possibility that visas for Soviet track athletes due in the United States next Tuesday would not be granted.

"That's the same day our boxers will go to Russia," Hull said. "The Soviets already have issued visas to our men, so there is no problem from our end."

However, a U.S. official in Washington, who asked not to be identified, indicated that the State Department would make further attempts to get the AAU to change its mind. He said, however, that the administration probably would not go so far as to lift the passports of the American athletes.

There were more suggestions that the Olympics be moved out of Moscow or be canceled in retaliation for the Soviets' invasion of Afghanistan. But Lord Killanin of Ireland, president of the International Olympic Committee, said, "The Olympics cannot be moved and they cannot be canceled."

They can, however, be boycotted. Saudi Arabia has announced its intention to do just that and has asked other Moslem nations to join it.

East Carolina University's Ed Emory has been keeping on the go, and his recruit list is beginning to look like it.

While only 12 signees have been "officially" announced by the university, Emory's list currently is up to 24—that is unless he's signed more since Wednesday afternoon, which is quite possible.

Perhaps the one Emory would like to have the most is right here in his own back yard in Rose High School's Ron Butler. The big linebacker reportedly is considering East Carolina, but is not making an "official" visit to the campus. Instead, he's already visited Clemson, Duke, Maryland and Iowa State. He has upcoming trips to Wake Forest and UCLA coming up.

While the phone in our office rings almost daily with people calling in from all over the southeast trying to learn about Butler's choice, it is clear that it still is to be made. Early speculation about his choice as being North Carolina appears to be just that—speculation and nothing else. It has been reported that Carolina actually has never been in the picture.

The national signing date isn't until next month, and it may be then or even later before the Rose star, listed as the state's top prospect, makes his intentions known.

Wherever he goes, he'll make that coach a happy one.

Meanwhile, Emory made a giant stride toward shoring up the linebacking situation with the signing of the Reid twins, Donald and Ronald from Farmville Central. The two have been the terror of the 3-A ranks for the past three years, and should be valuable members of the ECU squad.

Emory's statement that the brothers "put something on the ball carrier that soap won't wash off," bears a lot of truth. Just ask anybody at a rival school.

The time off East Carolina has had over the past few days should be helpful to the Pirates. They played four games in widely separated sites in an eight day period, including three in five days between Charleston, S.C., and Harrisonburg, Va.

In that last game, against James Madison, the Pirates were definitely dead on their feet and mentally fatigued. It's not a schedule that the Pirates would like to repeat.

While at Harrisonburg, we spoke with several people on the James Madison staff about their feelings about a new conference in the area which would involve JMU, East Carolina and several others. They feel that the recent refusal of the NCAA to block a rule that would force conferences to play double round-robin basketball schedules to receive automatic NCAA bids will help in the formation of a new league.

Currently the top five teams in the Southern Division of the ECAC are Old Dominion, James Madison, Richmond, William & Mary and Navy, the four other schools listed as interested in the new league. UNC-Charlotte, while a member of the Sun Belt, is believed to be interested too, since it would mean a more compact organization than the Sun Belt.

Hopefully, talks to get the conference formative process going again are in the near future.

Parnell, Rogerson Top Area's Scoring Leaders At Mid-Point

Greenville Christian's Jeff Parnell is the area's leading scorer among the boys, easily topping Rose High School's Donald House, but a real battle is underway for the girls' leadership.

Parnell paces the boys' rankings near the midpoint of the season with a 20.9 average. Rose's House is second with an 18.5 mark, nearly two and a half points a game back.

James Woolard of Williamston currently ranks third at 18.3, followed by Watson Rogers of Bear Grass at 17.5, and Reginald Knight of North Pitt at 16.8.

The Knights of Greenville Christian also are the top area team in scoring, averaging 72.7 points a game, well ahead of Rose's 65.4. Defensively, Williamston ranks as the top team allowing 47.5 points a game, while Bear Grass is second at 49.1.

The Knights have the top winning margin at 14.7, while Bear Grass is second at 8.1.

Surprisingly, of the 12 area schools, nine have posted winning records to date, led by D.H. Conley's 12-3 mark. And also surprisingly, Conley does not have a scorer among the top 20 in the area.

Among the girls, Williamston's Jan Rogerson at 23.3 and Bear Grass' Joette Rogers at 22.1, are battling for the lead among the scorers. Conley's Glenda Green is third at 17.6, followed by a three-way tie for fourth between Irene Lewis of Ayden-Grifton, Sharon Williams of Rose and Sylvia Parker of Roanoke, all at 14.9. Ayden-Grifton leads the area in offense at 49.1, just ahead of Williamston's 49.0, while Greenville Christian is the top team in defense at 31.8, just ahead of Martin Academy's 33.4.

Roanoke has the top winning margin among the girls at 7.2, followed by Ayden-Grifton's 6.6. In contrast to the boys, only six—half—of the girls' teams have winning marks, led by Farmville Central at 10-4 and D.H. Conley at 9-5.

Players must have participated in two-thirds of their team's games to be eligible for inclusion on the list.

Two Baskets Were All The Suns Needed

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Going into the final period of Thursday night's National Basketball Association game against Atlanta, Phoenix's Walter Davis and Paul Westphal were the leading scorers.

The Atlanta Hawks tightened up their defense, and held each to just a single basket from the field in the final quarter. But the two baskets, coupled with a pair of free throws by Westphal, cost the Central Division-leading Hawks a 101-99 decision.

Davis' lone bucket of the period came at the buzzer as he connected on an eight-foot jump shot from the right side to break a 99-99 tie and give the Suns their fourth straight victory.

In other NBA games Thursday night, Cleveland beat San Antonio 116-112 and Detroit downed Washington 110-107. Davis got the final shot after the Suns, following a timeout, inbounded the ball with three seconds left.

"With three seconds you've got something," said Suns Coach John MacLeod. "It's not like you're down to one second and no time at all."

"I couldn't believe that it went in," said Davis, who wound up with 19 points.

He said he felt Atlanta would try and force the game into overtime, "and I figured that they wouldn't want to foul me."

Asked if he was nervous, Davis replied, "I don't get nervous. It's just another jump shot."

The Suns had tied the Hawks on five straight points by Westphal.

Atlanta, now 28-20, had bounced back from a 13-point deficit late in the third period to take a 99-94 lead with 59 seconds to go.

But with 52 seconds remaining, Westphal came up with a 25-foot bucket from the top of the circle for 3 points.

After the Hawks committed a 24-second violation, Westphal was fouled by Atlanta's Ron Lee.

Westphal, who had three shots to make two, missed the first free throw but converted the next two to tie the game, 99-99. Atlanta immediately called timeout with 15 seconds left.

"The turning point was definitely Paul's three-pointer," said MacLeod. "He played a heck of a game."

Besides the scoring effort of Westphal and Davis, the Suns also got double-digit scoring from Alvan Adams (17), Len "Truck" Robinson (13) and backup center Jeff Cook (11).

Atlanta was led by Dan Rounfield, who scored eight of his 17 points in the fourth period. Armond Hill had 15 and reserve guard Charlie Criss wound up with 13, including eight in the final period.

Cavaliers 116, Spurs 112

Dave Robisch scored a career-high 36 points, including 21 in the second half, as Cleveland withstood a 42-point performance by NBA scoring leader George Gervin. The Cavaliers built a pair of 11-point leads early in the third quarter but the Spurs rallied to take an 88-84 lead going into the final period. A basket by Willie Smith put Cleveland on top to stay 103-102 with 5:33 left.

Pistons 110, Bullets 107
John Long scored 12 of his 24 points, including the game-winner, in the final period as lowly Detroit extended its modest winning streak to two games.

When Ron Smith and Bob Levin of Miami won the Blue Ribbon Pairs Championship at the ACBL's Fall National Championships, Smith became the first black ever to win a major open title in North American competition. But the glory of this hand from that event belongs to runner-up Jim Bennett of Hartford, Conn.

North's two heart response was a transfer to spades, and his three diamonds showed extra values and a diamond feature. Bennett elected to play three no trump because his hand was balanced and he held double stoppers in the unbid suits.

West led top-of-nothing in the unbid suit, and East's king lost to declarer's ace. The queen of diamonds was covered by the king and taken with the ace, and a heart to the jack was won by West's king. Now West committed a slight, but fatal error—he reverted to clubs by leading the four!

Declarer captured East's nine with the queen, cashed the jack of diamonds and then ran four spade tricks. That reduced the hand to this position:

♥ 7 4	—
♥ 9	♥ Q 10
♠ 2	♠ J
♥ A 8	—

When dummy's last spade was led, East was hopelessly squeezed. He had to keep two hearts, so he was forced to part with a club. But that promoted declarer's three of clubs to a trick. In all, declarer took eleven tricks—not much of a difference at rubber bridge, but worth a top score at duplicate.

Note that if West exits with the two of clubs instead of the four, declarer will be held to ten tricks. In the end position, East can afford to discard a club because West's four protects against declarer's three.

Little Hope For 4 In Plane Crash

SMITHFIELD, Utah (AP) — Officials will decide Saturday whether to call off the search for four people missing since the crash of a light plane in the rugged mountains of northern Utah.

But authorities said Thursday there was little hope the four — members of a missionary family — would be found alive. Alpine teams have hunted through the mountains but clouds and fog continued to hamper an aerial search.

The plane carrying Mike Martin of Eugene, Ore., his wife and their two children was returning to Eugene from South Carolina on Saturday when Martin reported icing and difficulty maintaining altitude.

New NBC Programmer Echoes Theme

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — On the day he became NBC's new chief programmer, Brandon Tartikoff had this to say about his company's product:

"With the stage of our growth now, we can do TV shows that are of quality."

It is a familiar theme at NBC, the company line, if you will, and it seemed natural to hear it from Tartikoff on the day that he became one of the most important men in network television.

But he continued, and what he said next was worth a listen: "Quality is what people want.

The signs are all over: rejection of the exploitation movies of the week, rejection of the standard half-hour comedy form. Since we're the underdog, we have an opportunity to do that (inject quality into prime time) now."

There is significance in Tartikoff's identifying what is not "quality" television, namely, the "kidvid" comedies and bouncy fluff that has passed for drama these past several years. The stuff, in other words, that one Fred Silverman is credited with perfecting, and thus, blamed for proliferating.

When Silverman was a chief programmer, at ABC, the network became No. 1 in prime time ratings largely on the performance of just the sort of programs of which Tartikoff speaks. When Tartikoff says those days are dead, Silverman is saying it.

Tartikoff is a Silverman find. Silverman, who made programs for CBS, ABC and NBC, was a TV whiz kid. Tartikoff is a TV whiz kid. Silverman put Tartikoff in programming while both were at ABC (Tartikoff was only 29 at the time), and when Silverman came to NBC, he made Tartikoff a programming vice president.

Now, at 31, Brandon Tartikoff is President of the NBC Entertainment Division, compliments of Fred Silverman. "I think there is a lot about us that's on the same wave length," Tartikoff says, speaking of his boss. "We think alike. It's surprising how we have similar thoughts on a subject. He (Silverman) has a vision of what TV can be, and of how to win."

That vision is changing, a development that should cheer those who've bemoaned the present state of commercial television.

Add 11th Commandment: Thou Shalt Not Anger Mrs. Belcourt

By JEFF BAENEN
Associated Press Writer
BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — Wilma Belcourt, the woman who pressured the Grand Forks, N.D., school system into posting the Ten Commandments in classrooms to comply with an obscure law almost as old as she, says she did it "just to fight" the American Civil Liberties Union.

Mrs. Belcourt got her fight. Her crusade has provoked a constitutional test of the 1927 law.

In July, four Grand Forks residents, three with children enrolled in district schools, filed a lawsuit in federal court, seeking to declare the law unconstitutional.

The ACLU co-signed legal briefs in the challenge along with Robert Vogel, a former state Supreme Court justice who says he took the case without charge "because I believe in the Constitution."

The state attorney general's office — defending the Ten Commandments as "a cornerstone of our legal and social system" — intervened in the suit, now under advisement by U.S. District Judge Paul Benson.

Mrs. Belcourt, 62, says she considers the ACLU "a Marxist organization" that "made me mad" when it tried to prevent students in Sioux City, S.D., public schools from singing religious songs in a Christmas program in 1978.

Mrs. Belcourt says she went looking for an issue and unearthed the forgotten Ten Commandments law. Last spring she pushed and prodded the Grand Forks School District into displaying the document, as required by the law, "in a conspicuous place in every schoolroom."

Mrs. Belcourt, a Roman Catholic, and self-described "born-again Christian," says the Ten Commandments have a "psychological benefit" for schoolchildren.

"Every morning I say, 'God, will you please protect our Ten Commandments law?'" says the former teacher.

Another result of her constant campaigning and community work was the Legislature's passage last year of a law requiring students to learn the national anthem before completing sixth grade.

Vogel, a law school professor at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks, contends the Ten Commandments law violates the First Amendment guarantee of religious freedom. "The people who made the Bill of Rights decided church and state should be separate for the good of both," Vogel said.

"There are many versions of the Ten Commandments, and if the state selects one of them, that prefers one religion over another and tends to disparage some religions."

Vogel says "it is simply not true" that English and American laws are based on the Ten Commandments, which the Bible says were given by God to the Hebrew leader Moses on Mount Sinai.

But Assistant Attorney General Murray Sagsveen argues that the Ten Commandments have a secular impact on "our whole legal and social system." "The Ten Commandments are the earliest and first expression of the law, and how the people of the world felt toward the law, and how the law influenced all of our development since then," Sagsveen says.

"Our national heritage has primarily evolved out of a Christian environment. By displaying the Ten Commandments, we're merely recognizing this."

Sagsveen says only one other state, Kentucky, has a similar Ten Commandments statute. Kentucky's law, rather than requiring the document to be posted, permits its display in such public places as classrooms.

Just why the North Dakota law was passed is sketchy, but Sagsveen thinks it was probably intended to improve students' morals. One 1927 legislator said the bill may result in "less war and more peace."

Benjamin Ring, the suit's chief plaintiff, says he has no objection to public schools teaching moral codes, but he claims the law "singles out the Ten Commandments for special attention."

Ring, an associate professor of philosophy at the University of North Dakota, posted a copy of the Ten Commandments in his classroom — written in Hebrew. "I won't object to that staying on my walls," he said.

Scholarships To 3 Students

Three students in the East Carolina University Department of Biology have been awarded scholarships for the spring semester.

Recipients are undergraduates Dawn Colwell of Raleigh and Leslie Alexander Webb of Burlington and graduate student Paul Bolin Jr. of Beaufort.

The three were recognized at a recent departmental faculty meeting. Scholarships were given on the basis of outstanding academic achievement, service to the department and research ability.

Dawn Colwell is completing a research project involving the identification of staphylococci isolated from mixed cultures taken from cases of chronic secretory otitis media.

She is president of N.C. Collegiate Academy of Sciences and the ECU League of Scholars and is a member of Phi Kappa Phi, Phi Eta Sigma and Pi Mu Epsilon honor societies.

Leslie Webb is investigating organ culture of hearts of fetal mice, a project supported by an undergraduate research award from the N.C. Academy of Science.

He is a member of the N.C. Collegiate Academy of Sciences and Phi Kappa Phi honor society.

Paul Bolin, an alumnus of ECU, is doing research on the brain biochemistry of rats. He is a member of Alpha Epsilon Delta honor society. Upon completion of his graduate studies at ECU, he will begin medical studies at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Surgery For Rare Goose

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Eye specialists at the University of North Carolina medical center in Chapel Hill recently treated an unusual patient — a 15-year-old male goose.

The ruddy-headed goose, an endangered species, had lost one eye in an accident and developed a cataract on his remaining eye.

The goose was left almost totally blind and unable to mate.

"Visual stimuli apparently are very important in the mating process," explained Dr. Robert Peiffer, a veterinary eye specialist who works with the medical center's research animals.

"We just wanted to restore enough sight so he could mate," Peiffer said.

So the duck was brought from his home on a waterfowl reserve near Greensboro to the medical center. There Dr. Kenneth Cohen performed the delicate surgery under a microscope.

"We just thought that since this goose was a member of an endangered species, it was important to provide this service from an ecological standpoint," Peiffer said.

Dr. Bill Sumner, a veterinarian in Greensboro who has an interest in exotic birds, referred the goose to eye specialists in Chapel Hill.

The ruddy-headed goose is native to the Falkland Islands off the southern tip of South America. The world population of the bird is estimated at fewer than 5,000.

CAMERA Angles

By SANDY COLTON
AP Newsfeatures

It seems a shame that of the great number of people who take pictures today, relatively few have discovered the fun of doing their own processing and printing.

Perhaps they feel it is too complicated, too expensive, or that they need a formal darkroom. None of these is true.

My son was doing his own processing and printing when he was 8. The cost of equipment and supplies needed can be less than the cost of most 35mm cameras today.

Start first with a daylight loading tank. This is nothing more than a small tank that holds one or more reels onto which your film is wound. There are a variety of these on the market today, most relatively inexpensive and some easier to load with film than others.

Once your reel or reels are loaded and in the tank you're ready to process the film. For this you'll need a graduate in which to measure the chemicals you'll use, a thermometer

For 35mm film you'll need a bottle-cap opener to snap open the film cassette. You don't need a formal darkroom. Any closet will do. Close the door, seal up any cracks with a towel and wait a few minutes to make sure that no light is leaking into the room.

Then snap off the cap from the film cassette, pull out the film and wind it on the reel. Place the reel in the tank and put on the light-tight cover. Now you can do the rest in the kitchen, bathroom, or any lighted place where you have running water.

There are tanks that take 110 film but it would be much easier to work with larger 35mm or 120 film. Before you go for broke, practice loading the reels in the light a few times until you can do it with your eyes closed.

Once your reel or reels are loaded and in the tank you're ready to process the film. For this you'll need a graduate in which to measure the chemicals you'll use, a thermometer to check the temperature and a few quart or gallon sized jugs to hold your chemistry.

Start off with black and white film and, if you like, go on to color films later. The chemicals you'll need come in both powder and liquid concentrate form. For black and white film you'll need a developer and fixer. Again, your local camera salesperson should be able to recommend one to start with. You'll find directions for mixing plus time and temperatures for developing and fixing your film in the package.

Mix your developer and fixer and have them ready to go in the storage bottles. Fill your tub or sink to a point about half way up the bottles, bringing the water temperature to the temperature required for developing your film. Leave the water until their contents are also at that temperature. If the water starts to cool off just keep adding a shot of hot water once in a while to keep it steady.

All this should be done before you load your tank, so when you return everything is ready to go. Now, just follow the directions on the package.

Pour the developer into the light-tight opening on top of the tank. When it's full put the cap on this opening and tap the can gently a couple of times to dislodge any bubbles that might have formed. Start timing the processing as soon as you've poured in the developer. Agitate the film about once a minute by gently inverting the developing tank and then turning it back right side up.

When your time is up, take the cap off the light-tight opening on top of the tank and pour the developer back into the storage bottle or discard it. Now fill the tank with fixer, put the cap back on and invert the tank a couple of times. Then let it sit for the recommended fixing time and then pour the fixer back into the storage bottle.

Remove the top from the developing tank and place it under a spigot and wash the film in running water for about 10 minutes. Try to keep the water temperature as close as possible to the one used to develop the film.

LOADING A REEL: Before trying to load a reel in the dark, try it with a dummy roll of film in the light until you can do it with your eyes closed.

When you have finished washing the film, pour the water out of the tank and pour in a wetting agent, like Photo Flow, that will help prevent water droplets from forming on the film. After a couple of minutes in this unwind the film from the reel and hang it up to dry. You can use a couple of clothes pins, one to hang the film up and the other to weight it out so that it won't curl.

Color-film processing is just as simple. There are a few more steps and you need a few more storage bottles. Your total investment so far could be as little as $20. Your investment in time, a half hour or less.

Next week we'll talk about making prints.

Ballerina Calls Moscow 'Home'

MARGI SCOTT

By NIKKI FINKE
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Her name isn't Russian, and her face isn't a Soviet citizen, was born here in 1933. Soon afterward her father returned to America, intending only a short stay.

For the 46-year-old dancer and daughter of a New York lawyer, who was the Bolshoi's only black ballerina, is content to call Moscow home.

It seems like an accident of birth that she was brought up in the Soviet Union. Then again, her entire family history has been a series of travels and tragedies spanning three continents.

In an interview at her Moscow apartment, Ms. Scott had no sympathy for the recent rash of Bolshoi defectors who have leapt West.

"I think this is kind of hypocritical greediness," she said angrily. "An artist is always greedy for creativity."

"But to claim that there is no artistic freedom here is just a lie. Those people who are really interested in creativity will always find something interesting to do for themselves."

And the Bolshoi?
"For us, who love our theater, it is always unpleasant when such things happen ... But it is no blow to the Bolshoi. The Bolshoi has been standing for 200 years and it is still standing."

These are not just official slogans that she speaks, but evidently her own personal convictions. She does not often talk with Western reporters, preferring to keep her life and past private.

While it has been several years since she retired from dancing professionally, she is still remembered as the "black beauty" of the Bolshoi stage — in roles like the peasant seductress in "Don Quixote," a fiery gypsy girl, a rhythmic African native.

How did Margi Scott, with caramel-colored skin and natural Afro hairstyle, get to Moscow?

It started in 1848, when her great-grandfather was sent to New Orleans from Africa as a slave, her own research shows.

Her father, Ben Henry Scott, left the United States to study law at Moscow State University in the 1930s, heady days when many black Americans, including singer-actor Paul Robeson, were coming to Russia to see what the new Bolshevik state had to offer.

Her father was not a Communist, says the ballerina — who herself joined the party in 1963 — but a "progressive youth organizer."

It was at the university that he met Margi's mother, a Rus-

Found Two Crosses In Kluxer's Car

LINCOLNTON, N.C. (AP) — Police say two crosses were found Wednesday in a further search of the car in which Ku Klux Klan Grand Dragon Virgil Griffin was stopped after a cross was burned Tuesday night.

Griffin, 35, of Alexis, and Mark Jeffrey Sherer, 19, of Cramerton, were arrested Tuesday in connection with the incident.

The cross was planted in the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. William Ingle, who live three miles east of Lincolnton.

Police had been unable to complete their search of the vehicle because they could not get a key to the trunk of the compact car registered to Sherer. A locksmith opened the trunk Wednesday.

Officers said one of the crosses found in the trunk is similar to the one found in the Ingle yard Tuesday night. It was about 4½ feet tall and wrapped in white fabric scraps.

All three were made out of poplar limbs about two inches in diameter. A small quantity of gasoline was also found in the trunk.

Police, the Ingles and Griffin all say they have no idea why the cross was burned in the Ingles' yard.

"I sure don't know — I wish I did," Mrs. Ingle said. She said neither she nor her husband have any connection with or knowledge of the Klan.

The only apparent link is that Klansman Michael Clinton, charged with engaging in a riot in the Nov. 3 shooting deaths of five Communist Workers Party members in Greensboro, has worked at the same electrical shop with Mrs. Ingle for the past 2½ years.

Mrs. Ingle says she and Clinton have always gotten along well.

Lincoln County Sheriff Harven Crouse theorized that the cross-burners may have been trying to intimidate Clinton, who is believed to have left the Klan after his release on bond in Greensboro.

Clinton could not be reached for comment.

In the Lincoln incident, Griffin has been charged with one count of reckless driving and one count of aiding and abetting a cross-burning. Sherer has been charged with burning the cross and with possession of firearms by a felon.

Griffin was released Wednesday morning under a $5,000 bond, and Sherer left jail Wednesday night after posting a $6,500 bond.

Hunt Seeks Intervention

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has asked two state agencies to intervene on behalf of a citizens group in a federal complaint accusing Virginia Electric and Power Co. of charging excessively high rates.

The complaint was filed Jan. 3 by Operation Overcharge with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission in Washington. Operation Overcharge is a group formed by chambers of commerce in the 22-county area of northeastern North Carolina served by Vepco.

Thursday, Hunt asked in a memo to Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and to the public staff director of the state Utilities Commission Robert Fischbach to intervene in the complaint and offer assistance.

In the complaint, Operation Overcharge said Vepco was charging more for wholesale electricity than Carolina Power and Light Co. and Duke Power Co. The charge concerned the rates of electricity sold to electric cooperatives and cities that operate their own utility systems.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission regulates wholesale rates charged by utilities.

Hunt has called earlier for Vepco officials to sell their North Carolina operations to CP&L.

The Utilities Commission public staff investigated Vepco's rates in North Carolina last year and concluded that poor management by the Richmond-based company was responsible for unreasonably high rates to North Carolina customers.

The state Utilities Commission later ordered Vepco to cut its rates by $4.1 million a year and to refund $1.6 million in overcharges to North Carolina customers.
