Jeffrey Earl Allen Wins Jaycee's Service Award

By TOM BAINES Reflector Staff Writer Jeffrey Earl Allen, a 30-year-old Greenville man who is involved in a variety of community activities, was honored by the Jaycees here Tuesday evening as the 1979 recipient of the chapter's Distinguished Service Award.

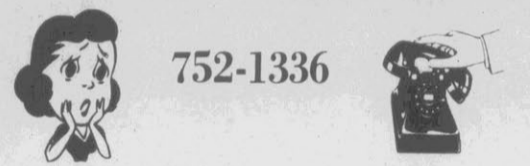

The occasion also marked the naming of Jack Morgan Sr. as the 1979 Boss of the Year, an award initiated in recent years to honor a boss of a local Jaycee who has provided outstanding support of the organization through his employee. Morgan's son, Jack Jr., nominated his father for the award.

Allen, a Cleveland, Ohio native, is involved in industrial sales in the Greenville area with Raleigh Valve and Fitting Co. He resides at 123 Harding Street. While enrolled at Glen Oaks Community College in Michigan, Allen ran track, worked full time at a foundry, and was a full time student, earning the dean's roll one year and the president's roll his second year.

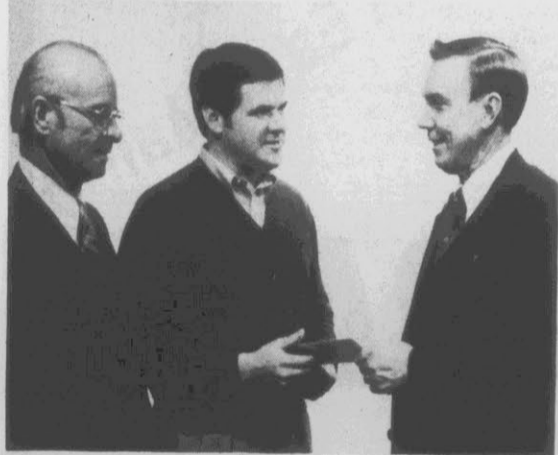

Jeff became quite active in his new community, joining the Greenville Jaycees, helping to organize a Cub Scout Pack, and serving in various capacities of his church's board of directors. The data pointed out, "While he has never served as an officer of the Jaycees, he has participated in nearly every fund raising project which we run, in addition to numerous time extensive community service projects."

$1,500 GIFT

In September, Hotline appealed on behalf of the Pitt County Association for Retarded Citizens for funds to enable several children to take part in the Recess after-school recreation-education program of the Greenville Parks and Recreation Department. Only $45 had been raised prior to this appeal's being published.

Tom Hanifer, chairman of the local Knights of Columbus Tootsie Roll campaign, responded by contacting the State Knights of Columbus organization and arranging for a $1,500 donation to be made after the candy campaign completion. The presentation of the gift was made this week. In anticipation of the presentation, money was advanced by the Association for Retarded Citizens and the Autistic Society of Greenville for the children to start the program last fall.

HOTLINE APPEAL

HOME BURNED

The home of Mrs. Dorothy Harris and her two children on Mills Street in Robersonville burned Jan. 13.

The family has been living with friends since because all of their belongings were destroyed in the fire. Mrs. Harris has now located a house, but needs furnishings for it and clothing for herself and her son, Sammy, four, and daughter, Tonya, 18 months. Robersonville Baptist Church has asked Hotline to appeal for help for the family. Gifts channeled through the church will be tax-deductible. These may be taken to the home of Jasper L. and Dorothy Moore at 406 Railroad Street, Robersonville. Inquiries may be made by calling the Moores, 795-4266.

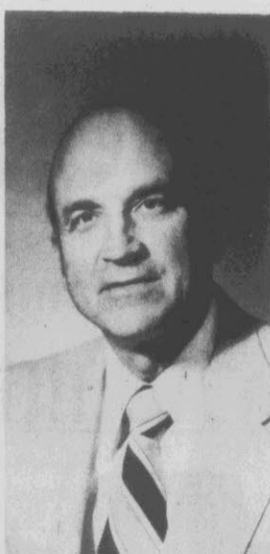

Mrs. Harris wears size 11-12; Tonya, size two-toddler; Sammy, size five.

Ed Warren In Assembly Race

Ed N. Warren, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, announced today that he has filed as a Democratic candidate for the N.C. House of Representatives.

Warren is seeking one of the two seats in the Eighth District, which includes Pitt and Greene Counties. Incumbent Rep. Sam Bundy has filed for re-election, while Rep. Horton Rountree, a 14-year veteran of the House, and presently Speaker Pro Tem, will not seek re-election. He has filed, instead, as a candidate for a District Court Judge seat.

Reelection Bid By Mrs. Allred

Mrs. Elvira Tyson Allred, Pitt County Register of Deeds, announced today that she will seek re-election to the post she has held since 1962.

Mrs. Allred made the announcement after filing with the Pitt County Board of Elections for inclusion on the May 6, primary election ballot.

The veteran official has been employed by the Register of Deeds office since March 1962. She was appointed Register of Deeds by the Board of County Commissioners in February 1962 to fill the unexpired term of the late Mrs. Blair Cox Wheelless, and was elected to the post for four year terms in 1964. Flurry Of Activity On Afghanistan

By GEORGE GEDDA Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is engaged in a flurry of diplomatic activity, involving a range of ideologically diverse countries, aimed at containing the impact of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

The initiatives, not all directed at nations friendly to the United States, include a series of sensitive diplomatic missions: —Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher, officials said, will visit Pakistan sometime during the next two weeks to discuss the possibility of a multinational effort to bolster that country's defenses.

Nerve Gas Is Hinted

By FRED S. HOFFMAN AP Military Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence sources say there are indications the Soviets may have used death-dealing nerve gas against anti-Marxist rebels in five areas of Afghanistan.

The sources, who declined to be identified, said the evidence is not conclusive enough to permit an open accusation by the United States.

But they said U.S. intelligence specialists give credence to descriptions provided by a number of Afghan refugees, including a defecting army officer.

This development comes less than a week after U.S. intelligence sources told The Associated Press the Soviet army had brought chemical decontaminating equipment into Afghanistan.

According to the new reports, the gas apparently was contained in bombs dropped from airplanes. The bombs were said to have burst in the air, spewing the gas in vapor form.

This vapor caused vomiting, breathing difficulties, bowel eruptions, blindness, paralysis and then death, the sources said. There was no estimate of the number of deaths.

U.S. specialists said the effects, as described by the Afghan refugees, correspond to known results from a Soviet nerve agent called Soman. They believe the same kind of nerve gas was used against Laotian tribesmen resisting communist forces in Southeast Asia.

One intelligence report suggests the lethal agent was used against Afghan rebel tribesmen as early as last August or September in the Panjshir Valley northeast of Kabul. Russian advisers were serving with the Afghan army at that time, although the full-scale Soviet army movement into Afghanistan did not come until late last month.

Sources said the other four incidents reportedly occurred last week near Faizabad and in Takhar Province, both in northeast Afghanistan where rebel resistance has been stiff; in Bamian Province, west of Kabul; and near Jalalabad, which lies close to Pakistan.

dependence. Romania, like Afghanistan, has a long border with the Soviet Union, and the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan has heightened fears in Romania about its own security.

These missions are coupled with a continuing U.S. effort to win foreign support for President Carter's proposed global boycott of the Summer Olympics in Moscow or transferring the Games to another site if the Soviet troops are not withdrawn from Afghanistan within one month.

The United States also has been engaged in an intense effort to persuade its European allies not to undercut U.S. efforts to punish the Soviet Union through a partial grain embargo and other economic measures.

Perhaps the most difficult challenge to American diplomacy involves Iran. The administration has sent a series of signals to Iranian authorities in recent days that, once the Americans being held hostage in Tehran are freed, the United States is prepared to cooperate with Iran in resisting any Soviet effort to expand its influence from Afghanistan southward into the Persian Gulf region.

The Soviet intervention of Afghanistan has placed the Soviets within striking distance of the Persian Gulf and the administration believes the United States and Iran share a common interest in keeping Soviet influence away from that strategic area.

On the other hand, the administration has said the United States must move ahead with economic sanctions against Iran if there is any hope the American hostages, now in their 81st day of captivity, are to be released unharmed.

One official, who asked not to be identified, said an American decision not to impose sanctions would enable the Iranian militants occupying the U.S. Embassy to claim they had forced the United States to back down.

Large Area Turnout At DOT Public Hearing; Officials Hear Views

By STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writer

An estimated 250 persons attended a Department of Transportation public hearing at North Pitt High School last night on proposed plans to four-lane US13-NC11 from NC903 North of Greenville, to Bethel.

Bill Garrett, DOT moderator at the session, told those present, "we're here to listen to you," and, "incorporate you in the planning process," for the project.

Emphasizing that the project, "has not been approved...as to design," in its final form, Garrett explained that the 10.7 miles project is estimated to cost $13 million.

The proposal calls for widening the present roadway to 24 feet, and adding a second 24-foot section and 60 foot median along the west side of the present roadway, from NC903 to a point just North of the Grindle Creek Bridge, Garrett explained. He said a four-lane bypass would then be constructed to the East of Bethel, intersecting with US64.

Phase two of the project, according to Garrett, would include continuing the bypass from US64, 50 NC 11 North of Bethel. However, the highway official emphasized, Phase two, "is not currently a part of the program and does not fall under the present schedule," pointing out that it is not included in the State's Transportation Improvement Plan.

Access to the roadway — from NC903 to Grindle Creek — would be partially controlled, while access to the bypass would be fully controlled, Garrett noted.

He noted that present plans call for the purchase of right-of-way to begin in 1982, while construction would begin in fiscal year 1985.

Garrett said that under the present proposal, 38 residences, three businesses and one non-profit organization — at church located at the site of the interchange planned for US 64 — would be relocated.

All intersections along the route would be at grade, with the exception of an interchange with US64. These are, "merely recommendations. We are here to get your input," Garrett noted.

Garrett added that the alternates to adding the median and the new 24 foot section on the West side of the present route included a, "no build...do nothing," alternate, as well as an alternate to add the new construction along the East side of the present roadway. Another alternate, he suggested, would be to alternate the new construction along both sides of the present roadway.

A number of persons spoke in favor of the project, including spokesmen for the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, the Greenville City Council, and Bethel Mayor Bob Whitehurst.

Ronald B. Langley, who lives along the route, voiced opposition to the project, describing himself as, "a representative of the opposition movement."

"Why construct a project of this magnitude when it is not needed," he asked. "Further, it is not wanted by the majority of the individuals involved from the starting point of NC903 to Grindle Creek Bridge..." he asked.

Langley, charging that a group of Bethel residents, "were a major contributing factor which brought about the proposal as now exists," said they caused, "action to be initiated that is neither necessary or needed," and made, "a concentrated effort to insure that the proposal didn't interrupt Bethel proper, that is, by insuring a bypass...which would cause no environmental impact on their small community."

Langley suggested rather than four-lane the present route, "widen the existing roadway by two feet on the East and West side," and add a four-foot overhang on both sides.

Black Running For Reelection

James W. A. (Jim) Black announced today that he is a candidate for re-election to the Pitt County Board of Education.

Black, who was elected to fill an unexpired term from Winterville Township two years ago, is now seeking his first full term on the board.

A Winterville resident, Black is a stockbroker with Interstate Securities Corp. in Greenville. Prior to his election to the Board of Education, he served for a number of years on the school advisory council at D. H. Conley High School and the combined council for Robinson Elementary and Cox Grammar Schools in Winterville. (Cont'd on Page 2)

School Nurse Day

Today is school nurse day, honoring the women and men who deal with the health problems of the nation's school children. Although there are more than 1.4 million registered nurses in the United States, working in hospitals, schools, nursing homes and elsewhere, many more nurses are needed to meet the country's health care needs. Today's nurses are highly skilled and an increasing number have college degrees. Since 1971, 38 states have passed laws allowing nurses to prescribe drugs, diagnose illnesses, and assume other new responsibilities. The average pay for nurses, now about $13,000 a year, has been increasing recently. About four percent of the nation's nurses work in the field of student health.

Black is a past president and past secretary-treasurer of the Winterville Kiwanis Club and is a past lieutenant governor of the Carolinas District of Kiwanis.

The candidate is currently a troop committeeman for the Winterville Boy Scouts and is a member of the Winterville Baptist Church where he sings in the choir. In 1978, he was appointed to the Pitt County Development Commission by the county commissioners.

Black completed his undergraduate studies in business administration at Atlantic Christian College and graduate work in mathematics at the University of Maryland. He and his wife, Janit, have two children, Marc and Christiana.

In filing for re-election, Black commented, "I have enjoyed representing the people of Pitt County. I hope that my record of service to the schools meets with the approval of the teachers and parents. If elected, I will continue to do my best to serve the students and tax payers of Pitt County."

Bright...

The candidate is a former county president of the N.C. Association of Educators and past state president of the Community College Adult Education Association.

In filing, Bright mentioned his experience in elementary, high school and post secondary education and he added, "I continue to be interested in all levels of education."

A past member of the Grifton town board of commissioners, Bright was selected in 1958 as the recipient of the Grifton Jaycees' outstanding citizen award.

He is presently serving on the Mid-East Economic Commission as Grifton appointee and he is a member of the commission's employment and training advisory committee.

Bright served for three years in the Air Force during World War II, including a tour of duty in the Mediterranean.

He is married to the former Hazel Porter of Beaufort County and they have three grown children. Bright noted that his three children completed school in the Grifton area and he will soon have a granddaughter in the school system.

A member and past president of the Grifton Lions Club, Bright attends Grifton First Baptist Church where he is a past member of the Board of Deacons and presently co-teacher of an adult Sunday School class.

has interests in several other business enterprises. He and his wife, Joan, live in Greenville.

"After five years as a county commissioner, and from my experiences in farming, education, business and civic affairs, I am well aware that a great many of the problems and concerns of Pitt and Greene County citizens are state-level issues, requiring state level solutions." Warren said this morning.

"I believe that my wide range of experiences and continued interest in receiving suggestions from local people, will enable me to provide strong, positive leadership in the state legislative process, working for sound, progressive solutions to our local and state problems and concerns," he added.

Saying he would, "welcome the challenge and opportunity to serve the citizens of Pitt and Greene Counties, as a State representative," Warren added that he would, "continue to be open-minded on issues, soliciting suggestions and ideas from all citizens in the district."

If elected, "I will direct my energies towards improving the quality of life of North Carolina citizens and will support all efforts to continue the growth and development of Pitt and Greene Counties, and Eastern North Carolina," Warren emphasized.

Warren was elected to represent Greenville Township on the Board of County Commissioners in 1974, and re-elected to the post in 1978. His present term will expire in December 1982. He said this morning that he would resign his seat on the board if elected to the House of Representatives.

Warren received an A.A. degree from Campbell College, an A.B. degree from Atlantic Christian College, and an M.A. degree from East Carolina University. He has done further graduate study at Duke University.

He is a past president of the Pitt County United Fund and the Heart Fund, and a past chairman of the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees.

Warren is currently chairman of the Pitt County Board of Health and president of the North Tar River Fellowship Club.

Other activities by Warren include the Salvation Army Advisory Board and membership in the American Legion, Elks Lodge, John Pierce Fellowship Club, Greenville Rotary Club, Greenville Country Club, and the Home Builders Association.

Warren is currently vice chairman of the North Carolina Community Development Council, a statewide council.

Warren has had 25 years experience in the field of education. He has served as a principal at Greenville, Belvoir, Falkland, and Ayden schools, and has worked at Pitt Community College as director of Cooperative Education and assistant dean of fiscal affairs. He has also taught in the School of Education at ECU.

He is a member of the First Christian Church of Greenville.

APPOINTED TO BOARD. Liz Sparrow and Lynn Wordworth have been named to the "Today's Secretary Magazine" Advisory Board. (ECU News Bureau Photo by Linn Winbourne)

Appointed To Magazine Board

ECU News Bureau Elizabeth Sparrow, lecturer in the East Carolina University Department of Business Education and Office Administration, and Lynn Wordworth, an ECU student, have been appointed to serve one year terms on the National Advisory Board of "Today's Secretary Magazine." The board consists of 28 secretarial-science instructor and student members representing schools and colleges of all types which offer business education.

Published by Gregg/McCraw-Hill, the magazine has a circulation of 60,000. It is disseminated to secretarial students, teachers and professional secretaries throughout the nation.

According to Nhora Cortes-Corner, editor, the 28-member board is instrumental in keeping the magazine up-to-date on secretarial information at the educational and professional level while giving board members the opportunity to enhance the image of the secretarial profession.

Elizabeth Sparrow, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Harris of 1041 Hill St., Rocky Mount, is an ECU alumna who received the MS degree from ECU in 1976. Last year, she was one of two recipients of faculty awards for teaching excellence sponsored by the ECU Alumni Association.

Lynn Wordworth is a member of Pi Omega Pi honor society and serves as secretary of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority. She is a past president of Sigma Tau Gamma fraternity Little Sisters.

She is the daughter of James Wordworth of 3504 Colonial Lane, Rocky Mount.

Stand Up To Show Respect

1980 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are not up on all the social graces, and we want to know what is proper:

When a man and woman are seated and an elderly lady approaches them and introduces herself, are both the man and woman supposed to stand? Or just the man? What if the elderly person were a man?

NO NAMES, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAMES: When an elderly person of either sex approaches a younger couple, both the man and the woman should stand — out of respect to age, not sex.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing about a problem that is perplexing to me. My husband is absolutely perfect in every respect except for one habit that I cannot seem to break him of:

Instead of throwing out empty food containers after he has emptied them, he puts them back in the refrigerator! I can't begin to tell you how many empty cartons, bottles and cans I have found in the refrigerator.

No amount of scolding, pleading or nagging seems to help. He offers no explanation for this screwball behavior. I think he's too lazy to walk to the trash can on the other side of the kitchen.

Can you, or your readers, offer any kind of a solution so that I can have a perfect husband?

FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: You're crying with a loaf of bread under each arm and an empty ketchup bottle in the refrigerator. If a man must have but one flaw in an otherwise flawless character, I can think of none so harmless, inoffensive and easy to forgive as your husband's. Cherish this paragon of virtue. He's a candidate for sainthood!

DEAR ABBY: My problem may be unusual, but no more so than some of your other mail.

I am a mature young woman, and my problem concerns my height. I am 5 foot 4 inches and very slim. I would normally be quite happy with my height, but my dream has always been to be a top-notch fashion model, and I need to be 4 or 5 inches taller to qualify.

Do you know of a doctor who would be willing to give me hormone shots to make me grow? If so, I would also like to know about possible side effects, fees, etc.

I respect your advice, and trust your judgment.

EAST COAST MODEL

DEAR MODEL: I consulted an endocrinologist. He replied, "If she is a normal, healthy, fully-developed young woman, hormone shots would not help. And no ethical physician would treat her with the promise of adding to her height."

Iowa Tip Of Iceberg

The Iowa caucuses lacked a lot in determining who will win the Democratic and GOP presidential nominations, but they surely were interesting.

As this was written with vote tallying incomplete, Republican George Bush held a substantial lead over Ronald Reagan. President Carter was ahead of Edward Kennedy by two to one.

These are results that would not have been expected a few months back. Ronald Reagan was considered virtually invincible in his quest for the GOP nomination. President Carter was at a low ebb politically, and the feeling was that the Democratic nomination was Kennedy's for the asking.

Things change. Since then the nation has faced a crisis in Iran and with the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. While the nation may not totally approve of the president's handling of the crises, the tendency is to rally around the leader at such times.

It is difficult to assess what happened to the Reagan bandwagon. Chances are that Republican voters are simply saying his time has come and gone.

The primaries and all the political maneuvering that precede the party conventions have just started, however. No doubt other candidates will show strength in future state primaries, and certainly world events could either help or harm the president's chances.

Nevertheless the Iowa caucuses strengthened the president's chances for re-nomination . . . and they tell us the GOP nomination is still wide open.

Looking To Buy A Car?

WASHINGTON — Do you want to know why automobiles are not rolling these days? I'll tell you why. I was looking for a car the other day to replace a gas guzzler I was unhappy with.

My first stop was at the Banzai dealership.

"I want a small car, comfortable, that won't use up too much petrol."

"Then the Banzai is for you. It has everything a big car has but you never have to fill the tank."

"I'm just looking, mind you," I told him. "I like the styling of the Banzai, but I might also check out a Brustein XLD."

"I understand," the salesman said, "but I think you ought to know the 1980 Brustein XLD has had eight recalls so far, and we're still in January."

"I didn't know that. Was it in the papers?" "They keep things like that out of the papers. It seems if you have to stop for a red light, the seatbelt can give you a hernia. If you're looking for something hernia-proof, then you should get a Banzai with a sun roof."

"Do you have a family?" the man asked.

"Yes," I replied, "why do you ask?"

"Nothing," he said. "I just returned from a funeral of a family that had been driving a Hara-Kiri Sword. I still haven't gotten over it. The police said the steering wheel came off as they were parking in a shopping center. God, that family had so much to live for."

"That couldn't happen to an Achtung?" I inquired.

"I wouldn't be selling them if it could," he said, wiping the tears from his eyes.

I don't want you to think I just looked at foreign cars. My next stop was to check out a compact Stars and Stripes Zipper. The salesman took me for a drive in it. He drove past an auto dump filled with wrecked and crushed cars.

"It's full of 1978 Achtungs," the man said.

"Why?" I asked.

"No resale value," he said. "The only reason a dealer will buy them back is for scrap."

I liked the Zipper until the manager of the Rawhide dealership told me the ashtrays on it were wired into the electrical system and every time you put a cigarette out you got a shock. The people at the Hurricane showroom said the Rawhide's bumpers tended to fall off when it snowed, and the Grunt car dealer said the Hurricane had never been able to make it through a pothole without both axles breaking.

I decided the hell with it. I'll stick to my old Dowdy until I can find a new car that somebody has something nice to say about. Truth in advertising is one thing, but what's going on these days between competing automobile dealers is ridiculous.

Now Carter 'Doctrine'

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — With transparent modesty, some of President Carter's closest advisers are suggesting it not be called the "Carter Doctrine."

But, in this Madison Avenue age, the package of strategies, military postures and aid programs being prepared at the White House will inevitably be called that — and compared to the Truman Doctrine.

The goal is the same — to dissuade the Soviets from expanding beyond their spheres of influence. This time the focus is the oil-rich Persian Gulf.

In his day, President Truman wanted to discourage a Soviet thrust into Greece, Turkey and Italy. He succeeded, for reasons that can never be certain.

The fact that the United States still had a monopoly on the atom bomb may have influenced the Soviets to back off. Or the caution that often guides Kremlin decisions may have made the difference.

In any event, with the doctrine, Truman established the policy of "containment." It quickly became the dominant ingredient of U.S. foreign policy and was applied globally by succeeding administrations.

Now Jimmy Carter, responding to the Soviet intervention into Afghanistan and the political season, is about to bring Truman's doctrine of 1947 up to date in a State of the Union speech to Congress tonight.

"The Soviet Union has built a war machine far beyond any reasonable requirement for their own defense and security," the president said Monday, in a written State of the Union message.

He said the United States is prepared to "confront" any Soviet threat. One of his top advisers, underlining that clear warning, told White House reporters, "When we say we are prepared to use force to defend our interests in that part of the world, we mean it."

Times have changed since 1947.

The Soviets have the bomb, too, making the world a more dangerous place.

Britain has retreated from the region, leaving the West without the territorial footing to block Soviet expansion toward the Iranian oil fields and gulf shipping lanes.

Reliable U.S. friends are few. Radicalism is on the rise among the Arab countries, some of whom switch back and forth between the East and West. The U.S. is taking a risk by sending in American arms because with a change in leaders, the recipient state can shift abruptly into the Soviet camp.

And above all else, there is the fact that Persian Gulf oil is the lifeblood of Western economies.

In shaping a modern containment policy, Carter is boosting the Pentagon's budget and military aid to Pakistan and Egypt, shopping around for military bases in Oman, Kenya and Somalia, and speeding development of a rapid deployment force.

An Original Mind

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — Miss Lillian continues to shine as an original mind on the capital scene.

Among many mots from the President's mother, I liked her response when a radio reporter, mike in hand, sought her impressions after a private audience with the Pope in Rome.

"When he called me 'my child,'" Mrs. Carter answered, "I was ready right then to sign up as a Catholic."

Now another one of those books of lists, soon to be published, records her list of the 10 best presidents of the United States.

Miss Lillian put Abraham Lincoln, a Republican, who in his time would have topped few popularity polls in Georgia, at the head of her list. Son Jimmy wound up in sixth place, which may be as

To the editor:

This past year a North Carolina state law was passed allowing school buses to stop only every two-tenths of a mile. This means small children are having to cross and walk beside busy highways to meet their buses and get back home.

Because of this very situation, my seven-year-old daughter was almost hit by a car on a recent Thursday afternoon. A lot of parents in this area are concerned and downright mad about this situation.

I thought that laws were made to protect people, not get them killed. I was told that this one was made to save tax money. My child's life is worth more to me than all of North Carolina's tax money.

I am really frightened by this situation. I know what can happen, after seeing my child almost run down by a car. I think that, as parents of small children, we owe it to ourselves to let our representatives know how we stand on this issue. In my opinion, it is wrong for a child to have to leave home to catch a bus. My child almost didn't make it back home.

It's a deadly serious situation that should be taken care of now — before somebody's small child is seriously hurt or killed.

THIS AFTERNOON Need Courts' Help

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — When line police officers are asked what they think interferes with their fight against crime, and what ought to be done about that, the answers are likely to involve time wasted and attitudes in the state's courts.

The man on street patrol often feels the courts are run for the convenience of the staff and the defense attorneys — and consequently the defendants — instead of as the most important step in the law enforcement process where the guilty are punished.

John Faircloth, chief of the High Point Police Department, talked about the courts as well as other areas of concern among his men, when he met recently with the Governor's Crime Commission.

His men complain that the court is a collection agency for attorneys while police officers, witnesses and crime victims wait.

Management of the courts is needed with a professional to set schedules, calendar cases, call witnesses and handle the juries. Faircloth suggested.

Court Clog

Also, a "civil penalty system" for minor crimes would help relieve the confusion and press of business in the courthouses. Faircloth said. Thus, for specified crimes in which a small fine is the standard penalty, the payoff could be made administratively. A similar system to take minor traffic cases out of the courts is currently under study.

To line policemen, time spent not on patrol or criminal investigation is time wasted; and that applies not only to courtroom waiting, but to transporting mental patients to and from hearings and institutions, and escorting funerals.

Faircloth suggested that funeral homes be required to have their own vehicles equipped with flashing lights to provide their own escorts, just as wreckers are now required to do when hauling a disabled vehicle.

A state academy to provide quality training for law officers was also suggested as a means of improving this area. "Train them and put them on the market and let us compete for them. Why do we hire people and pay them a reasonably good salary to train for two or three years?" Faircloth wondered.

BILL NOBLITT

He also suggested that crime prevention and crime watch activities are working, but that additional law may be required to "harden the target". In new or remodeled construction projects, design, locks, windows, doors and other pertinent equipment should be required by law to help thwart the criminals, just as fire and safety requirements are now part of the building codes.

Faircloth said the wire tap suggestion "frankly frightens me, but we are trying to fight multi-million dollar crime with five-dollar efforts." He thinks a wiretap order issued only from a Superior Court judge on strong probable cause with severe punishment of both judge and law officer for misuse — including dismissal from their posts — would be needed.

Good Tool

Hayward Starling, chief of the State Bureau of Investigation and a member of the Crime Commission, termed the wiretap a "good, effective tool", and said he supports it, with proper safeguards.

A smalltown police chief, Ira Fuller from Wendell in Wake County, told the group he feels more effort should be directed at crime prevention and the Community Crime

Other Editors Say Rhodesian Tobacco

(Henderson Dispatch)

North Carolina and other flue-cured tobacco producing states can prepare to face a resumption of stiff competition from Rhodesia in the international tobacco market.

Lifting of economic sanctions that had been in effect for some 15 years against the African nation will result in a future re-entry into the export market.

The speed and extent of re-entry are seen by industry leaders as depending on three factors: Rhodesia's internal stability during political changes, cooperation with the British government, and no radical land reforms that would shake up the agricultural system.

Sanctions imposed by the United States and Great Britain against Rhodesia had been in effect since 1965 when Rhodesia severed ties with Great Britain. The British lifted their sanctions after successful peace negotiations and a British governor returned to Rhodesia. The United States followed by lifting the American sanctions on Dec. 15.

Before 1965 Rhodesia produced about seven percent of the world's flue-cured tobacco supply and some 22 percent of world flue-cured tobacco exports, according to the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corporation.

During the 15-year sanctions period, production in that nation was cut almost in half, from 130,000 metric tons to 70,000 metric tons annually. The tobacco structure reportedly remained intact, however.

Stabilization corporation officials have estimated that within the next five to six years Rhodesia may become the fourth largest producer of flue-cured leaf and the third largest flue-cured tobacco exporter in the world.

Rhodesia is seen as probably returning to the world market with low prices and good quality tobacco, selling large quantities to the United Kingdom.

While North Carolina flue-cured tobacco is equal to or better than any other in the world, resumption of Rhodesian competition and the downturn in domestic consumption in the United States mean vigorous efforts will be required to maintain sales volume.

Growers should carefully note recommendations of agricultural leaders in seeking to produce the quality of tobacco in demand for the export trade.

Strength For Today

THE LIMITS OF GRATIFICATION

During his lifetime King Solomon had wealth, position, intelligence, the praise and adulation of the world, and the opportunity to indulge his every desire. He started out with the blessing of God upon him, but he dedicated his life to completely selfish ends. In his last hours we hear him crying out, "Vanity, vanity, all is vanity."

His career illustrates the basic truth that human life simply does not have enough in it to satisfy the deepest needs and desires of the human soul.

Sin is, among other things, an attempt to get more out of life than there is in it. It is often a frantic pursuit of joys which in reality do not exist. Every sin brings the sinner who commits it some little momentary satisfaction, but it has never brought real joy to anyone. The person who tries to squeeze every drop of satisfaction out of a worldly life ends by destroying the capacity to enjoy the things which really bring happiness.

Egyptian Banks Facing 'Squeeze' From Arabs

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a serious threat to the shaky Egyptian economy, Saudi Arabia and several other Arab nations are demanding the return of up to $4 billion in bank deposits, which they say the Cairo government has frozen.

Egypt is in such a shaky financial condition, say American sources, that it cannot afford to repay the money, which was deposited before Egypt signed its separate peace with Israel, a move that angered Cairo's former benefactors.

Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the others have complained to the International Monetary Fund, headquartered in Washington, that Egypt has frozen the deposits and asked for help in forcing payment.

"It's a rather ticklish issue," said one U.S. source. "Egypt can't pay; the Saudis are pushing."

The United States, which finds itself in an awkward position in the dispute, is trying to stay out in hopes the IMF can find a solution.

The United States considers it vital to be on good terms with both Saudi Arabia and Egypt — the Saudis because of their huge oil reserves and Egypt because of its role in helping fashion the peace pact with Israel.

Yet an American official acknowledged that it is virtually impossible for the United States to remain out of the dispute because it is the single most influential member of the 140-nation organization. Saudi Arabia also is a power in the organization, which supervises operations of the international economy.

Further complicating the American position is the fact that the Carter administration has frozen $8 billion in Iranian assets in this country. Both Kuwait and the Saudis criticized that action.

The IMF, which has refused to consider Iran's complaint against the United States, was scheduled to take up the complaints against Egypt on Monday, but deferred action at the request of Egypt.

Watch program. "They do work, and they should be promoted," Fuller said.

He also criticized the final link in the criminal justice system, the prisons, and said the law officers complain that criminals don't fear the punishment. "Prisons should be for confinement and punishment. The inmates should be made to work. It ought not be a place where they are treated nicely and get everything they need ... a place to keep from working."

The Crime Commission is undergoing a series of discussions aimed at producing two sets of crime-fighting proposals in coming months. One will be for immediate consideration in the General Assembly, while another will take a look at North Carolina in 20 years, suggesting the shape of law enforcement in that period.

Billy Yeargin To Resign Post

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Billy Yeargin, managing director of Tobacco Growers' Information Committee Inc., said Tuesday he is resigning the post.

Yeargin has served the tobacco industry and growers in the job since 1977. He agreed to remain in the job until Sept. 1, 1980, or until the organization can find a successor.

far as maternal love can stretch in the case of a politician.

Actually, Mrs. Carter rated only the seven best Presidents of the United States and didn't go on to 10. Maybe she got bored with the whole idea or realized how ridiculous it was to have Presidents listed along with the 10 top drier Martinis, the 10 biggest bundles of wet wash, the 10 most listless lists of lists or whatever, which must rank among the 10 most overused words in the English language these days.

Anyhow, she put George Washington in seventh place or last on her list. Befind Jimmy, who never cut down a peanut tree or chucked a dollar across the Okefenokee Swamp.

She ranked John F. Kennedy the fifth best U.S. President, better than her son, which makes one wonder if Rose Kennedy would have returned the compliment and done the same for Jimmy Carter had the list makers called at Hyannisport.

To recap, here is the order in which Miss Lillian voted in her all time Presidential preferential primary:

- Abraham Lincoln
- Woodrow Wilson
- Harry Truman
- Theodore Roosevelt
- John Kennedy
- Jimmy Carter

Teddy Roosevelt, a Republican, made Mrs. Carter's Top Seven; F.D.R., a four-time winner for the Democrats, didn't. Teddy Roosevelt and Jack Kennedy are the only Yankees on her list. John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson were no shows. Ditto Dwight D. Eisenhower, who was commander in chief when Jimmy Carter was winding up his navy career in nuclear submarines.

Mrs. Carter's ratings will appear in "Book of Lists No. 2," compiled by author Irving Wallace, his wife Sylvia and their children David and Amy. It is to be released in a few weeks by William Morrow & Co.

The students complained that they were forced to attend lengthy devotionals each day, where the talk centered on sex.

"The young people know the rules before they go and, so, there are usually no problems," said Salem Baptist Church youth pastor Mickey McManus, who has been taking groups to the camp for the past nine years.

Fourteen students of the Victory Christian Academy in Jacksonville, Fla., have been expelled from the school and eight others were withdrawn by their parents. In addition, 10 students have withdrawn from their expelled classmates.

The expulsions came after an outing to the 1,035-acre camp in the Transylvania County town of Rosman. The Wilds Christian Camp is owned and operated by the Hemlock Hills Christian Association Inc. of Greenville, pornography, homosexuality and self-gratification.

Dr. Arthur Estes, president of Victory Christian Academy, praised the camp operation and said the trouble was caused by just a few of his students. He said he expects some legal action to be filed by the parents of the expelled students and said he did not know if the camp would be named as a co-defendant in any lawsuit.

The camp is now in its 11th year of operation.

Corn Growers Name Officers

RALEIGH — The Corn Growers Association of North Carolina, at its recent annual meeting in Raleigh, selected its leadership team for 1980. The board of directors elected officers for 1980. They are: George Winslow of Elizabeth City as president; Durwood Laughinghouse of Pantego as vice-president; Ted Ivey of Goldsboro as secretary and Fred Tate of Elizabethtown as treasurer.

William V. Griffin of Pollocksville, the 1979 president, was elected to serve on the executive committee by virtue of being immediate past president. The board of directors elected executive committee members for 1980. They are President Winslow, Vice-President Laughinghouse, Secretary Ivey, Treasurer Tate, past President Griffin, Frank Moore of Horse Shoe, Dr. Rodney Edmondson of Kinston, Edroid Cutler of Scotland Neck, and Ted Ivey of Goldsboro.

Members present for the annual meeting elected 12 members to the board of directors for a two-year term. They are William V. Griffin, Dr. Rodney Edmondson, Fred Tate, Harold Cutler, Al Hubers of Swanquarter, Durwood Laughinghouse, Frank Moore, Graham Reese of Boonville, Carey Edwards of Polkton, Tom Poe, Jr. of Sanford, Allen P. Campbell of Statesville, and Ted Ivey.

Current members serving on the board of directors, with terms expiring in December of 1980, are Ervin Lewis of Gibsonville, J.M. Bowden of Advance, Ozzie Coor, Jr. of Smithfield, Wallace W. Wicks of Maysville, Thomas Hardy, Jr. of Farmville, James A. Sutherland, Jr. of Laurinburg, William Flake of Newton, and Wilbur Ward of Clarkton.

President Winslow said he was pleased with the excellent cooperation the Agricultural Extension Service and the North Carolina Department of Agriculture were providing corn growers of the state.

"I believe corn growers can look forward to increased production and greater domestic demand for corn in the 1980's because of ethanol production for gasahol," he said.

Winslow added, "The Corn Growers Association of North Carolina is working to help farmers increase production and develop a more diversified market."

Adopt Changes On Hog Checkoff Rate

The National Pork Producers Council's board of directors has voted unanimously to recommend the group's delegate body change the present 10 per cent hog checkoff rate to a percentage of market value.

The proposal, approved by the board Jan. 17, calls for checkoff of three-tenths of one percent of the market value of each animal marketed. The delegates will be meeting March 5 and 6 at the American Pork Congress in St. Louis. Approval of the plan would mean that the increase be implemented by Jan. 1, 1981.

NPPC President Bill Buller of Brookings, S.D. will be naming a five-member committee to make recommendations to delegates on the formula for fund allocation under the new proposal. The checkoff funds, through a voluntary producer program, are allocated among council member states, the National Council and National Livestock and Meat Board.

The current 10 cent checkoff rate has been in effect since 1976, and in 1979 meant total funding of $4.3 million for industry programs in many areas.

Roy Sharp, Tulare, Ca., chairman of the Council's Planning and Resolution Committee which has worked for several months on the proposal, explains that the present checkoff rate fails to reflect inflation and requires periodic adjustment.

Council directors earlier in the week had approved a special incentive funding program for states recommended by Sharp's committee in conjunction with NPPC's special market blitz campaign for increasing percentage of checkoff numbers.

"However," Sharp explains, "this program is but a short-term approach to the funding needs of states with growing responsibilities to serve its membership and the pork industry."

"The recommended funding increase proposal to be considered by delegates in St. Louis should be a big boost for our pork councils within the states and at the national level," adds NPPC President Buller. "It should help us all attain our goals of improving the quality, production, and distribution of our pork and pork products and of increasing demand for our quality pork products."

SELECTED SYMPHONY
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — The Grand Rapids Symphony Orchestra has been awarded a Challenge Grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

The grant of $45,000 is to help eliminate any deficit incurred by the symphony and to cover increasing operational costs associated with its move next year to Grand Rapids' new Performing Arts Center. Three dollars from new sources must be raised over a three-year period to match every dollar of the grant.

After Iowa, Contenders Eye New Hampshire Test

BY TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
George Bush says a victory in the New Hampshire primary would put him well on his way to winning the Republican presidential nomination — and Ronald Reagan may intensify his campaign there after losing to Bush in the Iowa caucuses.

Meanwhile, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy says he faces a must-win situation in New Hampshire after he was soundly beaten by President Carter in Iowa.

Sale-Refusal Brings Suit

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A New York lawyer who owns 500 shares of Integon Corporation stock is suing the company for turning down two merger offers of $35-a-share for the company's stock.

At the time the offers were made, Integon stock was selling for about $25 a share on the New York Stock Exchange.

The attorney, Stuart D. Wechsler, filed the suit last Thursday in the state Court of Chancery in Wilmington, Del.

Integon's corporate charter is filed in Delaware to take advantage of the state's corporate tax laws. The corporate offices are in Winston-Salem.

"The directors are the guys who voted and I want them to explain why $35 a share wasn't better than what Integon was selling at then or what it's selling at now," Wechsler said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

Integon closed Tuesday at $26 a share.

The Houston-based conglomerate of Anderson, Clayton & Co. made Integon an offer of $32.50-per-share. After Integon turned that down, Anderson, Clayton upped the offer to $35-a-share.

Anna Kuba, director of the state Board of Nursing, said the two women could lose their licenses to practice if the case is brought before the board.

A hospital official said Ms. Lulavage had worked at the hospital for 10 months. Ms. Bryant had worked there several times over the past eight years, the official said.

The campaign focus has shifted to New Hampshire, the New England state whose February primary, traditionally the kick-off for the long race to the presidential nominations, was upstaged by this year's intense campaign in Iowa.

Bush arrived in New Hampshire Tuesday night to campaign for the Feb. 26 primary and told a news conference in Keene that a win in New Hampshire would mean "there'll be absolutely no stopping me."

Asked if a victory would give him a lock on the nomination, Bush said, "I'd come close to saying that."

Reagan, who was criticized for limiting his personal appearances in Iowa, said he will reassess his New Hampshire schedule.

"I'm going to go all out in New Hampshire," he told a Los Angeles news conference Tuesday.

But Reagan refused to call the Granite State crucial to his candidacy. "I can't see any primary as being fatal," he said.

In Iowa, Reagan was considered the front-runner, but was beaten in the Republican straw vote caucuses by Bush, 32.8 percent to 26.7 percent.

"If I had to lose one, I'm glad it was a straw vote and not a primary," said Reagan.

Kennedy, meanwhile, lost by a 59 percent to 31 percent margin to Carter, who never made a campaign appearance in Iowa because he said he was busy in Washington with crises in Iran and Afghanistan.

In Washington, Kennedy called the race "a long road. It's a 15-inning fight and maybe it's the first round."

But the Massachusetts senator agreed that he can't afford to lose the second round in his home territory, including the Maine caucuses Feb. 10.

Asked if he has to win in both Maine and New Hampshire, Kennedy said, "Yes."

Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, acknowledged the difficulty of beating Kennedy on the New Englander's home ground.

Kennedy, said Powell, "will be in a position in New Hampshire in the last few weeks to dump large numbers of people and organizational help in there that we simply will not be able to match."

Bush said his Iowa win boosts him out of the pack of Republican hopefuls, "but they will be after me, howling and yowling at my heels."

One of those hopefuls, Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee, said his third-place finish in the Iowa straw poll was "pretty much what I predicted." He called Reagan and Bush the front-runners in New Hampshire, but noted, "New Hampshire has a pleasant habit of devouring front-runners and I hope it continues that."

In fourth place among Republicans in Iowa was former Texas Gov. John Connally, who said, "It may be that this is the very springboard I have been looking for." He explained that he thinks Reagan backers will turn to him instead of Bush.

Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, who finished last among the seven Republicans in Iowa, said he will decide in a few days whether to remain in the race.

While the Republicans were wondering who would be the nominee, they kept their sights trained on Carter. They released the latest catalog Tuesday outlining the GOP assessment of Carter's record in keeping his 1976 campaign promises.

The book costs $9.35, up from the $7.50 price of 1977. The increase is due, the GOP says, "to Mr. Carter's failure to keep promise No. 28." That promise, the party says, was a Carter pledge to try to keep the inflation rate to 4 percent or less during his first term.

The book says Carter made 667 promises as a candidate and has broken 277 and kept 130. The others, it says, are "either unkept, unkeepable or unverifiable."

Nurses Deny Refusing To Treat A Patient

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two Wake Medical Center nurses who were fired for allegedly refusing to treat the wife of the board chairman of Carolina Power and Light Co. because they were opposed to nuclear power have denied the charge.

Richard H. Cobb, senior vice president of the hospital, said nurses Jane Bryant and Arlene Lulavage were fired Monday after they refused to treat Helen Harris, wife of CP&L chairman W. Shearon Harris.

A spokesman for the hospital said Helen Harris arrived at the hospital emergency room about 9 a.m. on Saturday for treatment of a bruised elbow. After explaining her problem and filling out the necessary forms, she was taken to a nursing station.

Anne Suggs, director of public relations for the hospital, said Ms. Bryant and then Ms. Lulavage refused to treat Mrs. Harris because of their opposition to nuclear power. Mrs. Harris was treated by a third nurse and a physician.

But, the two nurses gave a different account of the incident in interviews Tuesday and said the incident occurred because a third nurse misunderstood a conversation between them.

Mrs. Lulavage, a registered nurse, said she helped Mrs. Harris into a hospital gown and prepared her arm for a splint. She said she returned later and checked on the treatment.

Ms. Bryant, a licensed practical nurse, said she was not asked to treat Mrs. Harris.

Mrs. Harris is an advocate of nuclear power but has not been publicly associated with her husband's views.

The two nurses live near the site of the $4.2 billion nuclear generating plant named after Harris that is being built in Wake County.

"Both nurses admitted to us that they would not treat Mrs. Harris because they opposed nuclear power," Mrs. Suggs said.

Cobb characterized the incident as "completely unacceptable."

Dr. James S. Fulghum, chairman of the hospital medical staff's emergency room committee, said, "I can guarantee you that such behavior will not happen again in this emergency room. Treating a patient in that manner is ridiculous and I am embarrassed on the part of the medical staff that it happened."

Anna Kuba, director of the state Board of Nursing, said the two women could lose their licenses to practice if the case is brought before the board.

A hospital official said Ms. Lulavage had worked at the hospital for 10 months. Ms. Bryant had worked there several times over the past eight years, the official said.

Eye Cuts In Construction Campuses Face Twenty Sports Movie Has Years Of Retrenchment Fast-Paced Comedy

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Duke Power Co.'s board of directors will meet next Tuesday to consider cuts in the $900 million construction budget for this year.

Charlotte television station WBTV, quoting unnamed sources, said Monday that the board may consider cutting the 1980 budget by as much as a third.

WBTV also said construction cutbacks under consideration include halting work on Duke's Cherokee nuclear plant in South Carolina. Duke has already spent $250 million on that plant, which is scheduled to begin operation in 1987.

Duke spokesman Alex Coffin confirmed Tuesday that the company's board of directors will consider cutbacks in the 1980 construction budget when the board meets in Charlotte next week, but he declined to discuss specific amounts.

He said the cutbacks were being considered because inflation and high interest rates were driving up construction costs.

"Our board of directors next Tuesday will be given several options for cuts in the budget and the decision will be made at that time," Coffin said.

Carl Horn, chairman of Duke's board of directors, also would not comment on specifics. He said he did not want directors to hear details from the news media.

But he told WBTV, "We will be announcing some further

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's colleges and universities, accustomed to three centuries of growth, are faced with their first serious retrenchment over the next 20 years, the Carnegie Council on Policy Studies in Higher Education forecasts.

The council said Tuesday in its final report that the end of the baby boom is "quite likely" to bring "a downward drift" in standards and resources at the nation's 3,000 colleges and universities.

But the council, chaired by Clark Kerr, said the decline is not inevitable nor is the future as bleak as some educators fear.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

Fair Friday and Saturday becoming cloudy Sunday. Warming trend through the weekend with highs in the 40s Friday, warming to the 50s Sunday. Lows in the teens and 20s Friday, warming to the 30s Sunday.

construction postponements, not just Cherokee."

WBTV said construction cutbacks might include the two nuclear reactors under construction at the Catawba plant on Lake Wylie near Charlotte.

Duke has already delayed indefinitely plans for a three-reactor plant in Davie County, near Winston-Salem.

"Becoming somewhat smaller is, we believe, compatible with becoming somewhat better," the panel said. Its report is entitled: "Three Thousand Futures: The Next Twenty Years in Higher Education."

The council predicted undergraduate enrollment drops of 5 percent to 15 percent in the next 20 years. Enrollment actually is likely to grow by 10 percent in the Southwest and West and by 5 percent in the South, while falling 10 percent in the East and Midwest.

"No demographic disease of epidemic proportions will sweep over all higher education during the next 20 years," said the report. The disease "will be selective; some institutions will die from it; nearly all will be affected by it...and all will need to take some precautions."

The report said that while college faculty and administrators struggle to cope with the "demographic depression," students "will seldom if ever have had it so good on campus."

A Review.....

Sports Movie Has Fast-Paced Comedy

"Squeeze Play," a sports movie now playing at the Plaza Cinema, is one of those movies that will certainly draw more laughs than nominations for awards.

It's one of those totally wacky, made for entertainment films. The "message" of the film, that of women fighting to get their share of time from their men, is there, but it's sublimated to a structure on which to build some clever action take-offs — both for the male and female devotees hooked on softball.

The title, as all ball fans will know, comes from the art of making a squeeze play in a ball game. In this fast-paced film with much of the footage away from the ball park, there's lots of emphasis on other objects of squeezing — primarily girls.

The men's champion softball players of a mattress manufacturing company have their world turned upside down when wives and girl friends decide to get revenge by forming their own team. Husbands find themselves babysitters, saddled with getting supper while wives dash off to practice. Singles are hit just as hard, with their preening, domineering roles suddenly reversed as girl friends begin to call the shots.

James Harris, Jenny Hetrick and Melissa Michaels head a winsome young cast which, while not entirely convincing as star ball players, are in top form as a cast having fun pretending to be local champions.

There's strong influences from "Animal House," from timeless slapstick routines, and enough semi-nudity to qualify the film for a near cousin to skin-flicks.

For a romp, in sports and flesh that doesn't strain the intellect, "Squeeze Play" is summer fun in winter months.

Suspended Pupils

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Forty-five Wilkes County school students were suspended Tuesday after they failed to meet a deadline for providing proper immunization records.

Wilkes County school public information director Chuck Parker said some of the students attempted to enter school but were sent home when it was learned they had not received their inoculations during the weekend.

The system's board of education gave 110 students notice of suspension last Thursday. The students were told to get the required shots or they would not be allowed to return to school Tuesday.

Students were not required to attend classes Friday and Monday. Those days were set aside as teacher workdays.

Special clinics were held those two days to allow students to receive all shots required by state law.

Parker said 37 high school students and eight elementary grade students were suspended Tuesday from nine of the 22 schools in the county.

School officials say they do not expect any legal action to result from the suspensions.

Hold Driver In Hit-And-Run

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Charlotte man charged with hit-and-run after a jogger was critically wounded last week was being held in Mecklenburg County jail under $7,500 bond Tuesday.

Larry Lee Hefner, 22, is charged with two counts of hit-and-run involving personal injury and one count of hit-and-run involving property damage, following an incident Friday night in which Jim Stevens was struck by a car while jogging.

A probable cause hearing has been set for Hefner on Feb. 5. Meanwhile, Stevens remains in critical condition at Charlotte Memorial Hospital while medical attendants battle with his soaring temperature and high blood pressure. His parents think that he is making progress although Stevens' condition has not changed since he was admitted

Friday night. Stevens, 24, of East Arrowood Road, suffered a fractured skull when he was hit by the car about 10 p.m. Witnesses said the car then hit a second car head-on. They said the driver of the car then fled on foot.

Stevens, a senior accountant for the Charlotte firm of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., apparently had just left his apartment to run after returning home from North Wilkesboro, where he had been for several weeks.

Stevens' mother, Virginia, a director of the Charlotte YWCA, said her son's accident had caused a concerned board of directors to discuss sponsoring a drive to ensure that runners and other athletes carry identification. She said the idea might be taken up as a state project by the association.

Maguire Suicide Shakes North Ireland's People

By RICHARD BLYSTONE
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The suicide of Anne Maguire has shaken the people of Northern Ireland who thought after 10½ years of bombing, shooting and bloodshed that they were immune to shock.

In mourning the woman whose loss of three children gave rise to the Peace People movement, Catholics and Protestants mourn themselves, locked in a cycle of hate whose casualties go far beyond the official death toll.

A neighbor found 34-year-old Mrs. Maguire in a blood-soaked armchair in her home in a Belfast suburb Monday. Beside her lay a carving knife and electric garden shears.

"She died of a broken heart," said Ciaran McKeown, a leader of the Peace People.

"I suppose this is a sad illustration of how the troubles continue to affect people," said the Rev. John Murray, a Catholic priest who was called to the home. "After people who have lost someone drop out of the news, the public tend to forget about them, but their lives continue to be nightmares."

More than 2,000 people have died in Northern Ireland's political-religious war involving militant Protestants, British and Northern Irish security forces and the mostly Catholic Provisional guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army, which seeks to tear the Protestant-majority province away from Britain and unite it with the predominantly Catholic Irish Republic.

But there are many times 2,000 bereaved friends and relatives, wounded and maimed, and those who simply live in fear. Quietly, remorselessly, the troubles take their toll in mental stress.

Moving Is Big Obstacle

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The reluctance of women to move in order to accept a better job is the biggest single problem facing executives who try to place more women in managerial positions, says a corporate official.

Ray Killian, an executive for Belk Stores and author of four books on management, says companies are finding it difficult to promote ambitious women because of their reluctance to accept transfers.

"Legitimate job offers are made. But if they have a husband or children, generally they don't go," Killian told students at Queens College in Charlotte.

But women are not the only ones in the business world who hesitate to accept a move-related promotion.

Killian said that many men also are resisting transfers because of their personal preference for a particular city or the rising cost of moving.

"It's a trade-off. More are saying, 'I want to live here, I don't want to live over there ... I'll take my chances here,'" Killian said.

Most major corporations with facilities in more than one location expect executives to move three or four times during their careers, he said.

However, Killian said that may change because of the attitudes of the growing number of women in management and more resistance by men to disruptive moves.

Anti-Smoking War May Have Bolstered Cigarette Industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The tobacco industry, which has combined new technology and low-tar cigarette to reap record profits, may have actually benefited from the anti-smoking war of the past 16 years.

Officials of several tobacco companies say the popularity of low-tar cigarettes has been a blessing because less tobacco is used in them and because they are cheaper to produce.

Despite the growing challenges against smoking from the health industry, sales of low-tar cigarettes continue to grow.

Although there was a rise of only 4.5 percent from 1977 to 1978 in the number of cigarettes produced, income from cigarettes jumped by 14 percent and profits climbed by 22 percent during the same period. Industry analysts say the low-tar cigarettes likely will account for 41 percent of sales in 1980.

"We're in a fortunate situation that we're able to do that (cut tobacco content) and the consumer doesn't perceive that he's getting less," said Jack McAuley, a spokesman for Philip Morris, the second-leading cigarette manufacturer in the United States.

Industry-leader R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. increased productivity by 17.5 percent between 1976 and 1978, largely by streamlining its production, a company spokesman said. He said machines that spit out 4,500 cigarettes per minute now ran at only half that speed a decade ago.

A third factor in the rising level of profits has been exports.

With the world market for cigarettes growing by about 3.5 percent a year, American companies doubled their share of the export market last year, accounting for 7 percent of the cigarettes sold worldwide.

Reynolds reported its profits from exports grew by 28 percent in 1978 while Philip Morris recorded a gain of 23 percent. Domestic profits of the two companies also grew. Reynolds by 7.5 percent and Philip Morris by 20 percent.

The popularity of low-tar brands is cited by company executives as a key factor in the growth of domestic profits.

Tar content is reduced primarily by cutting the amount of tobacco in cigarettes. Agriculture Department figures show it took 2.26 pounds of tobacco to make 1,000 cigarettes in 1964 while it took only 1.736 pounds in 1978.

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.—Wednesday, January 23, 1980—11

Farmers have been hurt by the drop in the amount of tobacco needed to produce cigarettes and by the fact that new technology that allows cigarette makers to use less tobacco also allows them to use lower-grade, cheaper tobacco, which is available from foreign suppliers.

Sakharov Case Seen Challenge

By THOMAS KENT
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — The banishment of dissident leader Andrei D. Sakharov from Moscow is a new Kremlin challenge to President Carter, and Western diplomats here say the American leader can't do much about it.

ANDREI SAKHAROV

The steady deterioration in relations between Moscow and Washington has created an ideal climate for a crackdown on Soviet dissidents, the diplomats believe.

They say that since Carter has played his strongest cards short of war in retaliation for the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, the United States has little muscle in reserve to protect Soviet human rights activists.

Soviet officials told Western journalists privately last week that their government would not "give in to provocations" by responding tit-for-tat to Carter's actions against it. Rather, they said, the Kremlin would follow up its action in Afghanistan with model conduct in world affairs, attempting to portray Washington as the real spoiler of détente.

But the move against Sakharov amounts to a direct Soviet challenge to the president, who after his inauguration sent the scientist a highly unusual letter of support, telling him, "I wish you well."

Since then, Sakharov has visited the U.S. Embassy frequently, and the Embassy closely monitored his welfare.

Police Checked 2 Collisions

An estimated $850 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated by Greenville Police here yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 7:55 p.m. mishap on Evans Street, two-tenths of a mile South of the Red Banks Road intersection.

Investigators said vehicles driven by Norman Stocks of Route 2, Ayden, and Mary Suggs Pill of 201 Staffordshire Rd. collided, causing $200 damage to the Stocks truck and $350 damage to the Pill car.

Cars driven by Eleanor Branch Hooks of 1902 East Sixth St. and Carolyn Kelley Ward of 1712 Englewood Dr. collided about 5:45 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 381 feet East of the Arlington Boulevard intersection.

Police set damage to the Ward vehicle at $300 and reported no damage resulted to the Hooks auto.

Wins $300,000 In Suing Doctor

LINCOLNTON, N.C. (AP) — A Lincoln County jury has awarded Ralph D. Ballenger $300,000 in his suit against a Lincoln physician whom he accused of causing his 12-year addiction to morphine.

Ballenger, 49, alleged that Dr. Lester Crowell Jr., 76, negligently continued to prescribe morphine as a treatment for Charcot-Marie-Tooth disease, a degenerative ailment that attacks the nerves and muscles.

Crowell, who is confined to a wheelchair but continues to work on a semi-retired basis, is appealing the judgment.

Group Holds Installation

WILLIAMSTON — The 1980 officers for the Mid-East Resource Conservation and Development (RC&D) Council were installed in a meeting held Tuesday in Williamston.

New officers for the Council are: Tommy H. Hill of Hertford County, chairman; John Prevette, Beaufort County, vice-chairman; and John Stallings, Bertie County, secretary-treasurer.

Past chairman Lewis T. Rascoe, Jr. was presented a plaque of appreciation by the Council.

Reports given at the meeting included ones on erosion control on school grounds, roads and shorelines. The Council has also been instrumental in developing Goose Creek State Park in Beaufort County, in conjunction with the N. C. Division of Parks and Recreation.

Other developments of a continuing nature noted are progressive soil surveys that are underway in Beaufort, Bertie, Hertford and Martin Counties.

The Soil Conservation Service administers the RC&D program through the local Mid-East RC&D Council representing county commissioners and conservation district supervisors.

Mormon Church OKs Request

LAKEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — The Mormon Church has granted the request of a 27-year-old woman that she be excommunicated because of her objection to the church's stand against the Equal Rights Amendment.

Leanne Boyd said Tuesday a church official delivered her notice of excommunication to her home. She had said her request was a way of protesting the excommunication of Sonia Johnson of Sterling, Va. Mrs. Johnson says she was ousted for her support of the ERA, which the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints officially opposes. Church officials say she was ousted for teaching false doctrine.

The ERA would outlaw discrimination on the basis of sex.

See Politicians Unaware Of Desires

By RICHARD HERZFELDER
 Associated Press Writer
 NEW YORK (AP) — The NAACP says blacks help elect many politicians, yet still lack political clout. One problem is that politicians don't know what blacks want them to do.

"We've needed something that will get their attention," says Joseph Madison director of voter education for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

A new commercial polling organization, Data Black Public Opinion Polls, proposes to do just that. On Tuesday, it released a presidential preference poll of 1,146 blacks that showed President Carter trailing Sen. Edward Kennedy by 49 percent to 31 percent among registered black Democrats.

The figures are almost a reversal of the latest CBS-New York Times poll, taken early in January, which showed that nationally Democrats preferred Carter by a 44-percent to 34-percent margin.

Seventy percent of the blacks contacted identified themselves as Democrats. The random survey, which pollsters said has a sampling error of slightly more than 3 percent, was taken by telephone between Nov. 29, 1979, and Jan. 2, 1980.

Data Black was formed to correct what the founders say are the inadequacies of present national polling organizations when they turn to blacks.

Chief among those inadequacies, according to one of Data Black's founders, psychologist Kenneth Clark, is the number of blacks in a typical sample. The Gallup Poll can draw accurate conclusions about national opinion on the basis of 1,500 interviews. But pollsters may talk to only 140 blacks — a number at which black opinions can be off either way by at least 10 percentage points.

And it is impossible, within that already small group, to draw any conclusions on opinions of even smaller groups, such as college-educated blacks, he says.

The questions the national pollsters do ask blacks present another problem.

"They used to ask questions like 'What do you people want?' or 'Who are your leaders?'" says Clark. "As if blacks were Martians."

But, he adds, ordinary polls can't get significant data for more specific questions, since their sample is so small.

Another Data Black founder, former Manhattan Borough President Percy Sutton, says blacks almost naively "put on American eyes" when responding to general questions. He points out that when Data Black asked blacks to name the two or three most important problems facing the United States today, 44 percent cited the Iran situation (the poll was almost finished by the end of December, when Russian troops moved into Afghanistan), 30 percent named inflation and 27 percent said unemployment.

But when asked what problems are most pressing to blacks, 43 percent listed unemployment, 31 percent said either racism or job discrimination, only 7 percent cited inflation, and Iran went almost unmentioned.

Asserts Sutton: "When we vote, we vote with our black eyes."

But Clark would not go that far, and noted that Data Black plans further polls to compare black opinions with general voting patterns.

Madison believes another problem with most polls lies in the way they look at their survey results.

An example is Data Black's finding that while 57 percent of all blacks say they've never experienced job discrimination, college and high-school graduates were much more likely to say they had. One interpretation is that more sophisticated blacks are better able to perceive discrimination, although discrimination itself has been reduced.

But Clark, Sutton and Madison believe that discrimination has moved into higher levels of the economy. Blacks who have more opportunities have more opportunity to experience discrimination, they say.

Data Black hopes to issue four surveys and reports each year to clients, including businesses, schools, special interest groups, politicians and governments.

Madison believes the results can be an important political tool and says the NAACP is considering hiring Data Black to conduct an annual poll of its own membership.

"The black vote has provided the margin of victory or defeat in every presidential election since 1960," says Madison. "If you're number one in the voter's booth, you ought to be number one on the agenda. This hasn't necessarily happened."

The Republicans are like the wolf, he says, and the Democrats like foxes.

"Any way you look at it they're both canine. We just don't want to end up as the bone."

Switching To Carter

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The founder of the "Draft Kennedy" for president campaign in North Carolina said Tuesday he will switch his support to President Carter.

Tony Adams of Raleigh said his efforts to draft Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., started in late August and early September last year when it seemed President Carter had lost the support necessary for effective leadership.

Now, Adams said, Carter's "overwhelming defeat of Sen. Kennedy in Iowa yesterday proves he is supported by the public and that Senator Kennedy has been unable to galvanize enough national support to warrant his candidacy."

Adams said Carter has shown tremendous leadership throughout the Iranian and Afghanistan crises.

"I simply believe," he said, "that I and all Democrats should at this time rally around our president and our party's leader in this perilous period in the world's course."

"He has made a remarkable political comeback and deserves renomination and reelection and I now extend to him my support. I remain a keen admirer of Senator Kennedy and hope he one day will be president; but not in 1981."

Adams said he began the "Draft Kennedy" campaign out of fear that Carter would lose the White House to a Republican. The campaign was formally known as "North Carolinians for Kennedy" and was to have its headquarters in downtown Raleigh.

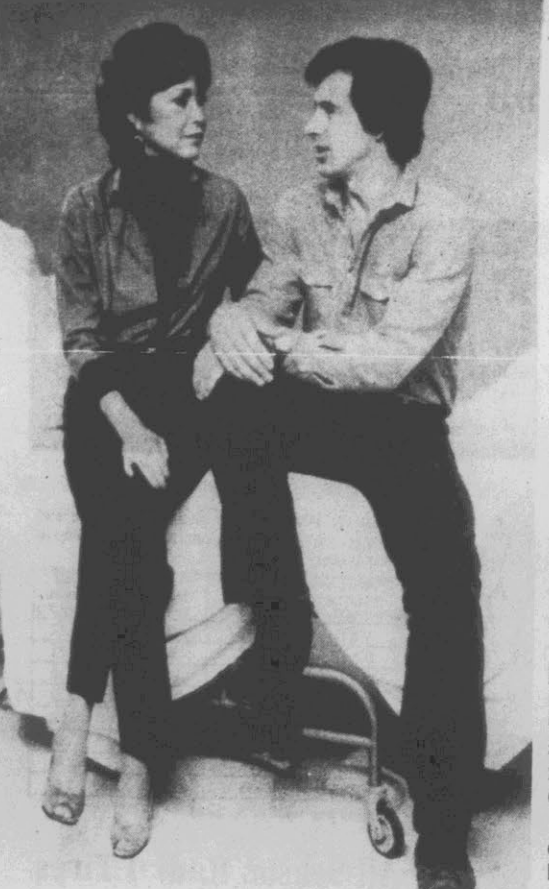

"I believed at that time," Adams said, "the Senator could unite the Democratic Party and lead us into the general election in a strong position to protect the Presidency for the American people from what I consider a sad and even tragic fate: a Republican in the Oval Office."

Set Hearing On Wife's Death

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — A preliminary hearing has been scheduled Feb. 7 in District Court for Kenneth Wayne Jimson, 22, who is charged with murder in the death of his wife, Gracie Ann Watkins Jimson, 19.

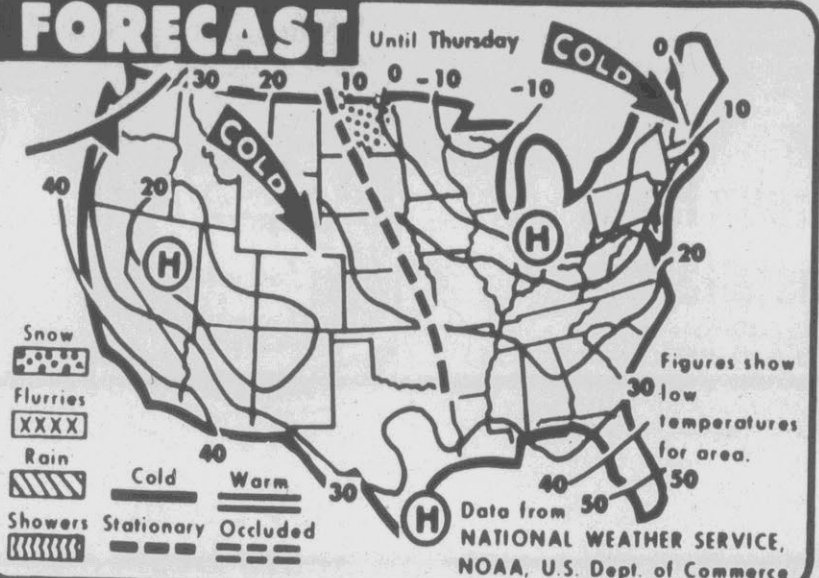

Mrs. Jimson was found Friday in a burning house owned by her mother in the Compact School Community, south of Kings Mountain. Rescue workers said she had suffered smoke inhalation in addition to stab wounds.

Jimson has remained in jail without bond since his arrest Saturday.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Generally colder weather is expected in the forecast period Wednesday until Thursday morning for most of the nation. Warm weather is expected for California and for Florida. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

The leading edge of an arctic air mass was moving into the North Carolina mountains early today, bringing with it colder air and blustery northwesterly winds.

Some snow began falling in the mountains Tuesday night, with the northwest mountains expecting around 2 inches before tapering off to snow flurries tonight. Some snow flurries will also be noted in the central and southwest mountains but no accumulation is expected.

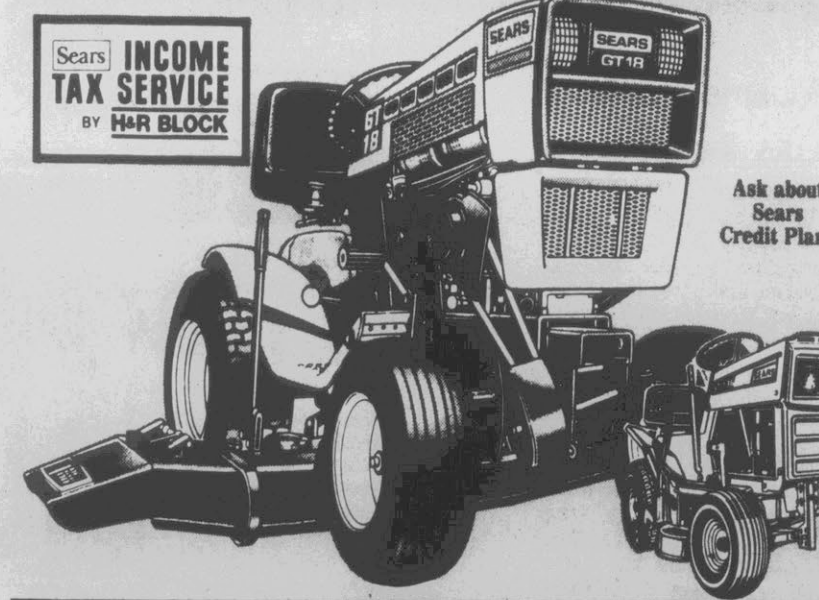

Tonight will be rather cold over the state with lows ranging from the teens in the mountains to 20s elsewhere. Brisk northwesterly winds will make it feel even colder.

Southerly winds brought in warmer temperatures Tuesday and high readings were generally in the 50s west and 60s east. Highest reading was a 67 at Wilmington followed by 66 at Cherry Point.

Highs on Thursday are expected to range in the 30s west to 40s east.

Portland, Oregon, Is Busily Rebuilding Skyline

By BRUCE BARTLEY
Associated Press Writer
PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Only a few panes of reflecting black glass remain unfitted in the 23-story Orbanco Building.

A few blocks to the east, a crane pivots silently atop another office building climbing to its full height of 19 stories. Just down the street, workers put the finishing touches on Columbia Square, a 15-story structure.

The skyline of downtown Portland is rapidly taking on a newer, more modern appearance.

"I don't think you'll find a city the size of Portland in the U.S. with this kind of activity," says Robert Scanlan, manager of the local branch of Coldwell Banker, a national development corporation.

Other growth areas such as Houston and Denver may have more new buildings on the rise, says Scanlan, but all are considerably larger than Portland, with a population of about 367,000. The metropolitan area has about 1.2 million people.

Almost one-third of the existing 7.4 million square feet of office space in the downtown core is new and within a year that will increase by 25 percent.

With a vacancy rate of 0.3 percent in the newer office buildings, there is little question of demand. Columbia Square already is more than 90 percent leased.

In various stages of development are four more office structures, ranging from 10 to 20 stories, that will add 971,000 square feet in the next few years.

If the heights of the new buildings seem small to some, the First National Bank Building is to blame. When its 39 stories stretched to 516 feet in 1972, some sensibilities were offended.

By ordinance, new buildings can be no taller than 465 feet. Additionally, under the city's development plan, the height is restricted in stair-step fashion proceeding down to the Willamette River.

While the tall towers are the most obvious indicators of Portland's booming growth, city officials prefer to emphasize the variety of development under way.

As Dave Hunt, executive director of the Portland Development Commission, looks out his window, the walls of a 15-story, $22 million Marriott Hotel loom unfinished across the street.

He thinks other cities may have as much or more construction going on, but says none can match the balanced diversity of Portland. He points to housing projects, historic districts, parking and other public improvements being made in the downtown area.

The goal of his office is "re-creating the downtown into a 24-hour living community."

Whatever changes take place are showcased since the downtown area is strictly defined by the river to the east and hills to the west.

And as impressive as the evolution is already, there is more to come.

A $115 million, four-block project proposed by Cadillac Fairview Corp. Ltd. of Canada is being reviewed by city planners.

It would add 600,000 square feet of retail space, 400,000 square feet of office space and a 300-room Radisson Hotel.

Scanlan describes the project as "a critical mass, the likes of which Portland has never seen."

Adds Hunt: "I think in the next five years people will see as much — if not more — development as we have already."

The scope of the Cadillac Fairview project has raised some questions about whether the city is going too far, too fast.

A number of small businesses will be obliterated by the project and others in the downtown area will feel the squeeze as rents and property values soar.

That already is happening. The owners of a small used-book store in a not-so-prime location recently saw their rent go from $500 a month to $1,200 overnight. It forced them out of business.

Hunt acknowledges the problem and admits he doesn't know the answer. He thinks a huge increase in retail space, such as Cadillac Fairview would provide, is needed to keep the revitalization process alive.

With a freeway bypass known as I-205 nearing completion, residents of east Portland will have easy access to huge new shopping malls across the Columbia River in Vancouver, Wash., or in Clackamas County just southeast of Portland across the Willamette, Hunt notes.

He and Scanlan agree that the pending construction of a light rail line connecting neighborhoods to the east with the downtown transit mall is essential to maintaining progress.

The transit mall has been a success, credited with helping double passenger loads on TriMet buses while stabilizing the vehicle traffic flow into the downtown area.

Why has Portland been so successful?

Having the nation's 10th busiest port, in terms of annual ship calls, and the 22nd busiest airport helps.

So do the intangibles. "We're in the enviable position of not having much to apologize for," observes Hunt. "It's a nice place to be pleasant."

It is Goldschmidt, now U.S. Secretary of Transportation, who originally is credited with pushing for the transit mall, fighting to save the old neighborhood and encouraging economic development.

Environmental consciousness, outdoor recreation opportunities and the enlightened leadership of former Mayor Neil Goldschmidt are other factors cited by Scanlan.

"I think we've kind of cap-

Restoration Of Yalta Meeting Site Is Begun

By NIKKI FINKE
Associated Press Writer
YALTA, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Thirty-five years after the Yalta Conference, the Russians are still trying to get it all together.

A full-scale effort is now under way to restore Livadia Palace, where Josef Stalin, Winston Churchill and Franklin D. Roosevelt gathered for one of the most important meetings of this century.

Now, however, the palace is almost empty.

Only one of its 60 rooms even remotely resembles the way it looked when the Big Three leaders met here Feb. 4-11, 1945, three months before the Third Reich's surrender, to divide up postwar Europe and plan the occupation of Germany.

A solid-looking round table and armchairs sit in the palace dining room, once used by Czar Nicholas II and later by Soviet lung patients. Could it be the conference table of the Allies?

"No," a guide said sadly. "But it looks just like it."

To make matters worse, Soviet archivists are just finding out that certain facts they collected on the meeting are wrong.

For example, officials long thought that a walnut-paneled room just off the main hallway was Roosevelt's bedroom during the talks. Historians now know it was really his reception room.

And for years, the Russians thought that a young man seated near Churchill in the official painting of the conference delegations was Sir Alan Brook, chief of the Imperial General Staff.

Actually, it is only an interpreter.

Alexander I. Volkov, deputy director of the Livadia museum, said in an interview he was obtaining more information about the Yalta Conference almost daily, and tracking down the whereabouts of the Victorian furniture used for the week-long talks.

When the Soviet Crimea was occupied by Nazi forces, the Germans used Livadia Palace as their command post. Shortly before the Crimea was liberated on April 16, 1944, the Germans looted the palace, carting off everything from tables to doorknobs to plumbing pipes.

The Russians hastily refurbished the palace before the Yalta conference was convened. Stalin ordered furniture loaded onto trains and, immediately after the talks, ordered it sent back to Moscow.

No wonder, then, that the palace is still stripped bare.

Relatively young for a museum, Livadia Palace was opened to the public in 1974, to coincide with U.S. President Richard M. Nixon's visit to Yalta with Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev.

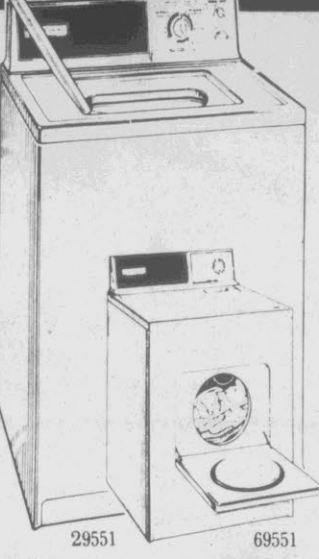

Soviet officials said they were disappointed that Nixon had declined their offer to tour the Yalta Conference site.

Once the summer watering place for only 224 wealthy Russian landowners or aristocrats, Yalta is now a bustling city of 150,000 which attracts 2 million tourists a year to its health resorts.

Named for the Greek word meaning meadow, Livadia Palace was built as a summer home for Czar Nicholas II in 1910-1911.

A $1 Million Investment So That Kids Can Read

By RON HARRIST
Associated Press Writer
JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Three things spurred newspaper owner George McLean to start his $1 million experiment. One, as a former college professor, he had seen high school graduates "go to college when they are functionally illiterate." Two, he learned that first graders in Lee County schools were scoring below the national average on achievement tests. Three, he had a formula, which he recites with a chuckle: "If there are no readers, then we won't have newspaper subscribers and without subscribers you don't have advertisers. Without advertisers you're out of business."

McLean, 74, who taught education and education sociology at Adrian College in Michigan and at Southwestern at Memphis, Tenn., back in the early 1930s, said he's preached for years that a thorough grounding in the basic skills of reading, writing and arithmetic is fundamental to all learning. "Reading is the basis of all education," he said in an interview. So in 1977, McLean proposed a 10-year reading program for eight northeastern Mississippi schools: He would pay wages for teacher aides who would concentrate on developing pupils' reading skills. He promised $1 million. The money was his to spend. McLean has done well since his arrival in Tupelo in 1934, when he bought a bankrupt weekly newspaper, circulation 500, and built it into the 35,000-circulation Tupelo Journal. McLean has kept his promise. He doesn't seem to mind that the cost has climbed to about $150,000 a year, which will push the Journal's total investment to $1.5 million before the 10-year program ends. "We've seen about a five-month increase in the average child's reading ability," said Billy Crews, a Journal writer who is overseeing the program. "And we've seen some success in reducing the number of retainees in the first grade. "These factors are part of what our goal is all about — to eliminate failures as much as possible at such an early stage in education and to eliminate the need for spending thousands of dollars on remedial programs that start in the second grade," Crews said. Crews said the teacher aides, who work in six county schools and two schools along the county border, were hired to supplement the regular teachers. "We tested this in a pilot program for a semester and from talking with the teachers found that with the additional help they were able to cover about twice as much material," Crews said. Linda Whitley, who teaches first grade at Saitulo Elementary School, said the basic strength of the program was "the fact that it gives lots of individual attention to children who need a boost." "It helps children lacking in certain readiness skills because the teacher aide can work with them and help them keep up with the group," Mrs. Whitley said. McLean said he decided to spend the money to show other businesses how important it is to "support public schools." "The majority of them do not have funds for the personalized instruction that is so necessary for our young children," he said. "I've been involved in education for 55 years. I've watched through those years as more and more young people drop out of school or get a diploma and go to college when they are functionally illiterate. "The fact is that we've had to spend more and more money trying to overcome the failure of the early years and it seemed to me that it would be much better to get a proper foundation from the beginning and to get young people in the habit of enjoying learning," McLean said. Crews said the newspaper did not promote the program in its early stages because "it was more or less to demonstrate what could be done." "But now that we see what this additional classroom help can do, we'd like to get this exposed to other counties and other school systems so that it can become part of the instructional program in all our schools," Crews said. "We've made this project part of our business expense and we feel like 'other businesses could do the same thing," he said. "After all, they have a vested interest in making sure our children develop to become active in the community and possess the skills they need to be good employees." McLean said he was eager for the program to expand into the second and third grades of the county schools. "We think we are getting a response and now we're just hoping and praying that this program will expand," McLean said. "I think this is one of the soundest investments our newspaper has had."

A New Tax Dodge Gets IRS Study

By PETER GILLINS
SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The Internal Revenue Service is investigating a new kind of mining swindle that has made colleges, universities and charities unwitting partners in tax fraud.

Roland Wise, director of the IRS in Utah, says the scam works this way:

A promoter invites an investor to sink money into a mining claim. He tells the investor he can hold the claim for a year during which time it will increase in value. The investor then donates it to a charitable institution and receive a tax deduction based on the higher value — usually a much higher value.

Such a transaction is legal, said Wise, if the property actually has increased as much as the donor claims.

"But the IRS has determined that many of the appraisals being submitted to substantiate the values of the items being donated under these schemes are not bonafide," he said.

"In many cases the true fair market value of these items is greater than, and are often actually less than, the amounts the taxpayers are paying for them. These schemes are being promoted primarily for the purported tax advantages."

Wise said one such scheme involving mining claims is currently being promoted in Nevada. Purchasers are asked to invest $15,000 cash in a claim which can be written off as an exploration expense.

"The purchaser holds the claims for approximately one year, then donates the claim to a qualified organization," he said. "The promoter will provide an appraisal of the donated claim reflecting a value of $225,000, which is far in excess of the initial investment."

Wise said IRS engineers have been inspecting these claims and are finding that the claims generally have little, if any, value."

The IRS also recently sued Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, to obtain the names of all donors who had made large gifts of property.

The suit was prompted after IRS investigators audited 150 people who made large property donations to the school during 1976 through 1978. The donors claimed a total value of $8 million for the gifts, but the IRS said their actual value was only about $2 million.

The gifts included 66 silver mining claims which donors said were worth $13.2 million in deductions. The IRS said the claims had a fair market value of one-tenth that amount.

Three coal mines were also given to BYU, with the contributors claiming deductions of $1.8 million. The IRS said the mines were worth $800,000.

IRS agents also said BYU received several art objects, jewelry and land that was only worth a fraction of the claimed deduction.

The school provided information on the specific cases cited by IRS, but refused to open its list of all donors to agents for further investigation. The tax investigators want the names so they won't have to sift through millions of tax returns to catch the cheaters.

Bill Craig, public affairs officer for the IRS in Utah, said the investigation of donations is not limited to BYU.

"BYU just brought this thing to a head. It just happened that we uncovered more cases there in one fell swoop than anywhere else," he said.

"We are looking at large contributions at other colleges and universities, and not just in Utah. This is being done across the United States," said Craig. He said similar inflated deduction schemes have been common with art objects for years. The IRS frequently audits people who donate art works to charitable institutions. The taxmen do their own appraisal and hire independent experts to check the value of the art.

Gold Content By Designation

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — A product marked 14-karat GF or 14-karat RGP is not made entirely of 14-karat gold, one manufacturer warns.

These designations mean, respectively, gold-filled and rolled gold plate and the karat designation refers only to the layer of gold which is bonded onto the supporting metal, according to official of Speidel, a jewelry maker. Only products marked 14-karat or 14-k are made entirely of 14-karat gold.

Reservation Has Nation's Highest Suicide Rate

By ROBYN C. WALKER
OWYHEE, Nev. (UPI) — The five bars clustered on the main street of the tiny town of Mountain City, in the heart of the isolated Duck Valley Indian Reservation, are symptomatic of the major problem facing the reservation's leaders:

The high rate of alcoholism is believed to be the major reason a higher percentage of its people commit suicide than any other place in the nation.

Dr. Alan Berman, a professor at American University in Washington, D.C., published a study of alcoholism on the reservation this year that estimated the suicide rate at Duck Valley to be more than 12 times the national average.

Since 1949, 50 residents have committed suicide from among the reservation's 1,200 population.

While the national suicide rate is about 12 per 100,000 people, Berman's study said, the rate for Duck Valley in the past decade has been 150 per 100,000.

Berman says the reservation probably is not plagued with a worse alcoholism problem than some other reservations, but the isolation of Duck Valley contributes to the higher incidence of suicide.

The reservation itself is just 20 miles across. And the small town of Owyhee situated in its heart has little more than a store, gas station, school, cafeteria, the tribal office and the five bars — one in a mobile home — that are its economic mainstay.

More than 100 miles to the north through a sagebrush and boulder-dotted landscape lies Boise and 100 miles southeast through the same desolate scenery is Elko. Elko also is the site of the eastern Nevada office of the BIA.

Indians accuse the federal government of shirking its duties in helping to solve the reservation's problems which lead to drinking and suicide.

Lonnie Racehorse, executive director of Idaho Intertribal Policy Board, Boise, said Duck Valley suffers from high unemployment, little economic development, poor housing — "You can just go on and on."

"They still have to fight the BIA (Bureau of Indian Affairs) and the IHS (Indian Health Services) for services they should get," Racehorse said.

Berman agrees the government is to blame for much of the problems at Duck Valley, but adds the Indians could do something themselves.

"The government agencies are not doing what they should be doing," Berman said. "The government has a primary responsibility which they're not fulfilling."

"The Indians could be doing something. Lots of times it's not any one person. It's not really fair to blame anyone."

On the reservation, one is met with smiling faces and an anxious sort of helpfulness but underlying currents of distrust and dissatisfaction run deep.

Lee Glascock, a large, bearded, redheaded white man, is the tribal administrator. He passes off the suicides with a shrug. "They had a bad year," he said.

He said the tribe has "a lot better relationship (with the BIA) than people want us to."

But Ralph Sissons, chairman of the reservation mental health committee, says the tribe has met frustration in trying to deal with government agencies. He said he hopes Berman's report released has brought the problem out in front where it can be dealt with on a national level.

Sissons admits the government isn't solely to blame. He says part of the problem is the "inability of the tribe to develop unity within the tribe."

The factionalism of Duck Valley started many years ago. The land originally was set aside for the Shoshoni Indians. Later, land was added on the Idaho side and the Paiutes also moved onto the reservation. Sissons says some feel the Shoshonis have been favored by the government.

Although the Shoshoni side of the reservation received irrigation first and electricity before the Paiutes, other tribal members say such accusations are ridiculous. As one member put it, "All of us are Paiute and Shoshoni." Many have intermarried and some have white and Black blood.

James Formea, BIA land officer at Duck Valley, is the only government agent who admits to knowing much about the reservation for about two years. Formea acknowledged the reservation has problems, but said, "I'm not sure it's any different than living on the

to a city on both sides. There's no recreation. If you're not "It's isolated without a adept at entertaining yourself, you go absolutely bananas."

Young U.S. Couple Run Own Hotel

By MARC LIFSHER
YARINACOCHA, Peru (UPI) — Collin and Mary Nixon always dreamed of owning a quaint little hotel in the gold rush region of Northern California.

Prohibitive land prices made that dream impossible, so the young San Francisco couple looked for something different and cheaper and found it in the tropical heat of the Amazon jungle.

They plunked down $1,000 for 17 acres of virgin jungle on the banks of pristine Lake Yarinacocha in the Peruvian Amazon in November 1978. Twenty men helped clear the land and raise buildings, and eight months later the Nixons opened the doors of their jungle lodge christened "Las Brisas" (The Breezes).

Heading into its third tourist season, Las Brisas offers restful stays in wood-and-thatch-roof bungalows or more adventurous sorties into the jungle on fully outfitted and guided Amazon expeditions.

"I was kind of dissatisfied with what I was doing in San Francisco," said Collin, 37, a former lawyer for the municipal workers union. "It was very high pressure negotiating labor contracts and organizing strikes."

Collin said when the idea to build the northern California hotel faded out, he and Mary, 28, a registered nurse, decided to switch to the Amazon after a vacation visit to Lake Yarinacocha, 300 miles east of Lima near the city of Pucallpa. "Neither of us had any idea we could build and run this lodge," Collin said. "The biggest thing I ever built before was a desk, but we did not think about it all that much. We just decided to do it."

The showplace of the Nixons' lodge is a 55-foot-high, 100-foot-diameter circular restaurant with a conical roof made out of 3,000 hand-tied palm leaves. Guests inside sit at hardwood tables and chairs sculpted by a local artist that look as if they walk around by themselves at night when the restaurant is closed.

"I liked my job in public health back in the states, so I had a lot of second thoughts about coming down here," Mary said. "During the construction I was somewhat disappointed because I did not have all that much to do. I mainly had to deal with changing my lifestyle — going to the market early in the morning to get food before it was all gone...washing my clothes by hand with the other women in the village."

Mary, who was pregnant when Las Brisas opened in mid-1978 with a 500-person bash, gave birth to a son, Sean, at the beginning of 1979.

"Having Sean made my commitment to being here and running this place even stronger," Mary said, "but it wasn't so easy at the height of the first tourist season when Sean was five months old and raising hell."

Nevertheless, the Nixons, working through a Lima booking agent, hosted nine tour groups by Europeans their first year and already have 22 booked for the 1980 dry season beginning in June.

"I felt scared before we opened because we had no experience running a hotel, but maybe it is better we didn't," Mary said. "Now the place has a style and feeling of its own."

"For me, the hardest part was getting up the courage while we were still in the United States," Collin added. "Once we left, it became easier, and now the lodge is a big challenge; a challenge I like because I can solve 90 percent of the problems myself."

Cooperating in Pilot Projects

PEKING (AP) — China and West Germany have agreed on a project of cooperation in agriculture.

The countries have agreed to carry out several pilot projects in which West Germany will supply the technical equipment. China will pay for the project mainly with soya products, a West German diplomatic source said.

Psychologist Asserts Urban Bias In IQ Testing

By CANDACE PAGE
BURLINGTON, Vt. (UPI) — The country-bred child who says a litter is something a sow produces — not something thrown on the street — may be paying a penalty for his special knowledge.

George Albee, a nationally known specialist in intelligence testing, says IQ tests have an urban bias — leaving rural children at a disadvantage when they are tested.

"A city child has no problem answering a question about what a subway is. A rural child can tell you all about tractors, but he doesn't know about subways," says Albee, a University of Vermont psychology professor. "The problem is, the IQ tests have been standardized on middle-class urban children," he says.

"That means the tests tend to discriminate, by the kinds of questions they ask, against poor children and children from rural areas," he says.

Albee came to his conclusions about the problems faced by rural children as the result of his work on the ways IQ tests discriminate against black children.

Last year, he was a key witness on behalf of black California children who had been placed in classes for the mentally retarded as a result of intelligence testing.

In October, the judge in the so-called "Larry P." case ordered California to stop using the tests and to re-evaluate all black youngsters in classes for the retarded, a decision hailed by psychologists opposed to the use of IQ tests.

"These kids were what we call the 'six-hour retarded child,'" Albee said.

"Outside school, they were perfectly adaptable. They could all ride buses and find their way home and tell you the batting average of every player on the San Francisco Giants.

"They were only retarded by the standards set in the IQ tests," he said.

According to Albee, white rural children face some of the same problems as the California students.

Not only do the kinds of questions asked on the tests tend to reflect an urban bias, but rural children have been brought up in ways that make IQ tests difficult for them.

Since most IQ tests revolve around knowledge of words, Albee says the children who do best "are middle class kids from homes where there is a lot of verbalization."

Many country children, for example, miss the early experience of teachers and group story telling that are offered in day care centers and nursery schools.

Albee said studies have shown children with a nursery school experience do better on later IQ tests.

"In Cleveland, every church basement has a nursery school. You just don't find that in rural areas where transportation is a problem," Albee says.

"Country children also tend to be more shy," he says. "They don't have a lot of practice with strangers.

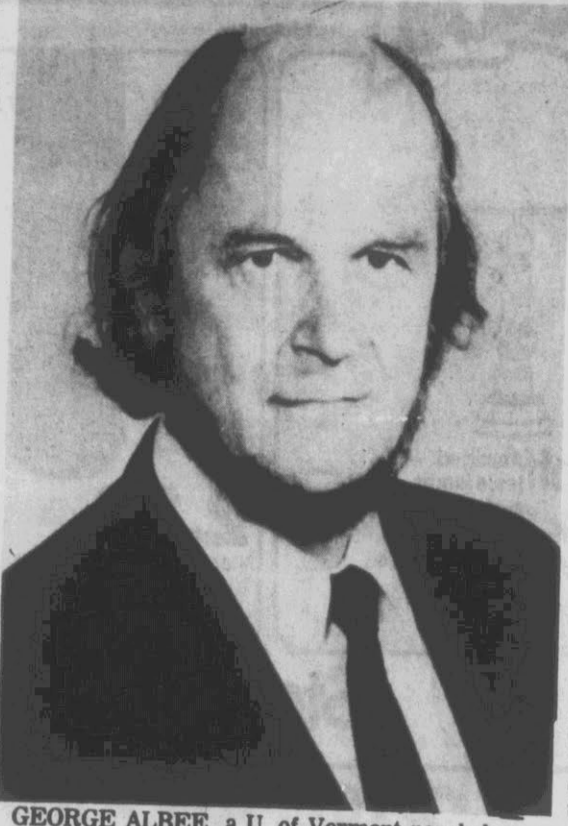

"Feeling uncomfortable in the presence of a stranger giving you an exam can definitely interfere with performance."

"I'd be inclined to ban the tests altogether if they're going to be used as a judgement for all children," he says. "They may be useful, though, if they are used in conjunction with all kinds of other measures."

Albee, a former president of the American Psychological Association, says a number of cases like that of Larry P. are scheduled to be heard soon. The decisions may alter the way IQ tests are used.

"The sad thing is, IQ tests don't predict work success. They do predict school performance because every kid who did poorly knows he is a 'dummy.' He gets put into that Siberia of 'slow learners' and he never gets out."

GEORGE ALBEE, a U. of Vermont psychology prof and specialist in intelligence testing, says IQ tests have an urban bias. (UPI Photo)

Chemosurgeons Score Against Skin Cancer

DURHAM — Like white-coated miners using scalpels and microscopes, chemosurgeons are defeating even tough-to-cure skin cancers by following veins of malignant cells through the skin until they run out.

"With skin cancer, what you see isn't what you get if you cut out only the surface tumor," says Dr. Sheldon V. Pollack, an assistant professor of dermatology at Duke University Medical Center and founder of the North Carolina's first chemosurgery unit, which opened last September.

"We know that there are extensions like the roots of a weed going in every direction. You can't see these."

That is why surgeons take out tissues on all sides of a skin tumor, Pollack said. "You assume there is more cancer than you see, so it's better to be safe than sorry."

Chemosurgeons take a slightly different tack. They cut out a thin slice of tumor, about as thick as a paper clip wire. They divide the slice into smaller sections. They examine the bottom of each section under a microscope, checking for "roots" of tumor. Wherever the roots lead, that's where they cut another slice.

The method offers patients several advantages.

"You get better cure rate. It eliminates going in and there's no wasted normal skin."

Pollack said. "You don't have to take that extra margin of skin."

Chemosurgery gives a 94 to 99 percent cure rate, even with recurrent tumors, the dermatologist said. The figure came from a study involving 100 patients at New York University, where he learned chemosurgery, Pollack said.

For more information on skin cancer, call the Duke Cancer Information Service toll-free, 1-800-672-0943.

Hunt Co-Chairmen In Pitt Announced

Gov. Jim Hunt has named Sam McLawhorn of Grifton as chairman, and Clifton W. Everett Sr. of Bethel and Kenneth W. Dews Sr. of Winterville as co-chairmen of his re-election campaign in Pitt County.

McLawhorn, who manages his farm operation at Rt. 1, Grifton, was the Pitt County manager for the Tom Strickland campaign for governor in 1976 and has been active in six of Walter Jones' campaigns for Congress.

A former International League and Coastal Plains League baseball player, McLawhorn is a Mason and a Shriner, and a member of the North Carolina Farm Bureau.

Everett has practiced law in Pitt County for 39 years with the firm of Everett and Cheatham. He served as mayor of Bethel for five years and was a state representative from Pitt County in 1961.

He is a member of the North Carolina Bar Council and serves as chairman of the Ethics Committee of the North Carolina State Bar. He is chairman of the Board of Trustees of Pitt Community College and is on the board of directors of Home Savings and Loan of Greenville. Everett is a Mason, Shriner and Rotarian.

Dews manages farming and banking interests and is chairman of the board of directors of Home Savings and Loan Association. He was involved in the two previous Hunt campaigns, and worked in the campaigns of Pat Taylor and Skipper Bowles.

A member of the Board of Advisors of Chowan College, Dews is a former member of the Pitt County School Board and former chairman of the Pitt County Memorial Hospital board of trustees.

Service To Pitt's Vets Top '79 Goal

Services to veterans provided by the Greenville office of the Employment Security office for the Pitt County area has in most instances met or exceeded those projected for fiscal year 1979, according to Kendrick Taylor, Veterans Employment Representative with the office.

Taylor noted that "476 individual veterans were placed in jobs during the fiscal year with many of those being placed more than once."

In addition to placement of the 476 other services, such as counseling, referral to training, and job development contacts were represented by an increase during the fiscal year.

The fiscal year referred to here covers the period October 1, 1978 through September 30, 1979.

Taylor said that although these figures compare favorably with state and national figures, "the Greenville office is not content or satisfied with the number of veterans placed."

"There are still a number of veterans who are seeking either full time or part time jobs. Many of these are veterans who acquired skills while in the service that could easily be adapted to civilian jobs. Also," he added, "there is an unusually large number of student veterans who are looking for part time jobs to supplement their VA benefits."

Public Hearing ... One Thousand Petitions Call For VEPCO To Go

 "If the above alternate proposal was adopted, it would accomplish the following," Langley said.
 "It would create a fine roadway, which would be comparable to NC11 North of Bethel and delete the tremendous cost to the taxpayers of North Carolina," by reducing land acquisition costs and the cost of construction of a second roadway.
 Langley suggested that if the four-lane project is carried out, that a narrower median could be used to, "reduce the total footage of land needed to construct the new roadway," and more of the construction be on the East side of the present route, to, "close the gap to some extent on the environmental impact caused to each property owner."

 Garrett noted that persons wishing to submit written material for inclusion in the transcript of the hearing may do so by sending the material to George W. Wells, Manager of Highway Design, N.C. Department of Transportation, Division of Highways, P.O. Box 25201, Raleigh, N.C. 27611, before February 1.

Industry Aiming At Wilderness

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
 Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation's timber industry, seizing upon a little-noticed federal court decision, is intensifying its campaign to open millions of acres of national forest wilderness to commercial logging.
 The industry hopes to persuade Congress to speed up final determination on the status of 62 million acres of national forest land, most of it in the West.
 Stretching from Alaska through the Rocky Mountains and the coastal ranges such as the Cascades, the national forest lands are covered with dense stands of pine, fir and cedar. Beneath the forest floor are hidden a wealth of minerals, including oil and gas, molybdenum and cobalt.
 But other people want to protect such spectacular natural areas as the jagged mountain peaks and the pristine mountain lakes among the forests.
 On Jan. 8, a U.S. District Court judge in Sacramento, Calif., rejected a Carter administration plan to open up 2.4 million acres of California forest land to lumbering.
 If other courts follow that lead, an administration program to open 36 million acres to commercial, or "multiple use," development could be imperiled.
 The dispute involves the U.S. Forest Service's second effort parish youth organization, and as finance director for the church's pre-school program.

 "As if that were not service enough to the church," the nomination data related, "you might well find Jeff on a Saturday afternoon giving of his time to rebuild the church's garage, or repair the plumbing, or mow the grass."
 According to the data, Allen is listed in Outstanding Young Men of American publication and has received a number of awards from the Jaycees for his work on projects.
 "Jeff is a truly outstanding young man who had distinguished himself by his service to Greenville," it was pointed out.
 Morgan, who was born in Manteo, is president of Morgan Printers here.
 He is a member of the Elks Lodge, serving as Exalted Ruler for 1980, as well as the Civitan Club, Shriners organization, and Moose Lodge, where he was Governor in 1978.
 A graduate of Greenville High School, Morgan and his wife, Virginia, reside at 200 Churchhill Drive. The couple has four children, Vickie, Carol, Jack and Charles.

In his remarks to the Jaycees last night, McGlohon said that Greenville's greatest resource is its people and he observed, "With this great resource, we should be very optimistic for the future."
 The mayor told the chapter members that, "The choice is yours as to the kind of community we will have. If you will shoulder your part of the load and do your share of the work, Greenville will continue to be a great place to live."
 McGlohon, who took office as mayor in December with three new City Council members and three incumbents, said that he is "excited about the 80's" in Greenville and he pointed to the "excellent base on which to build."
 McGlohon, in discussing the local government, mentioned several things that are receiving attention here, including the new Citizens Concern program at city hall, the advent of a new personnel department and subsequent hiring of a personnel officer, a strong affirmative action program, encouragement of career development, and transit.

Two Rhinos Are Purged
BERLIN (AP) - Two rhinoceroses at the Berlin Zoo were purged with home-made soup as a laxative after one gulped down a set of keys tossed into their pen by a visitor.
 Zoo officials said Tuesday a visitor reported he had seen an old woman near the rhinoceros pit stealthily pull a few pieces of bread from her purse and throw it to the animals.
 Since feeding the animals is forbidden, the woman acted quickly and she unwittingly threw a ring of keys into the pit as well, the visitor told officials.
 The shiny keys disappeared so quickly observers couldn't see which animal had grabbed them. Officials said that even though a rhino's hide is tough, its tender innards would be mortally wounded by such sharp objects. So they cooked huge bowls of linseed soup and fed it to the animals, followed by a second course of hay.
 After 15 hours and much searching, officials reported that the keys had been "removed naturally." They still don't know which one ate the keys.

Anti-Klan Rally Issue To Court

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) - Organizers of an anti-Klux Klan demonstration have gone to court arguing the city is denying their constitutional rights by refusing to grant a parade permit.
 The Feb. 2 Mobilization Committee on Tuesday asked the U.S. District Court to void a contract between the Greensboro Coliseum and a music promoter who has rented the arena for a concert on the evening of Feb. 2. The organizers had planned to end the march at the coliseum but were denied a parade permit by the city because of the concert conflict.
 An anti-Klan rally here in November ended with the deaths of five people.

Milestone For Alaska Pipeline

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) - The one-billionth barrel of oil pumped from Prudhoe Bay has traveled through the trans-Alaska pipeline to the Valdez terminal on the Gulf of Alaska.
 Sam Akin, spokesman for Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., said the landmark barrel of oil arrived early Tuesday after taking six days and 10 minutes to make the 800-mile trip from the Beaufort Sea.

Assistant Coach Resigning Staff

East Carolina assistant football coach Frank Orgel has resigned from the staff, and will accept a position with Clemson.
 Orgel, who completed six seasons with the Pirates, was one of the first people named by Pat Dye to his staff when he came here in 1973. He was then named to be defensive coordinator with the Pirates under new coach Ed Emory when he took over in December.
 At Clemson, where he will start tomorrow, Orgel will work with the down linemen on defense. Clemson has made several attempts to hire Orgel away in the past, and the veteran coach said this year's proposal was too good to turn down.
 "It has to be pretty good to make me leave here," Orgel said. "I like East Carolina and I'm familiar with all the players, and my family likes Greenville. We'll certainly miss this area."
 A University of Georgia graduate, he was a contemporary of Dye, playing in the 1960 Orange Bowl. He played two seasons with the Buffalo Bills of

Everyone In The Pool

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) - Three undercover policemen posed as bettors to break up a Super Bowl pool at a Virginia Beach tavern. They all won.
 After each officer had won one pool for a total take of $100, they arrested several other participants for gambling.
 "I couldn't believe it. I thought, 'Oh, my God, this is hilarious,'" said R.D. Warren, an investigator for the Norfolk office of the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.
 Warren, fellow ABC investigator A.R. Slayton and Virginia Beach policeman D.L. Renick said they each paid $15 for an afternoon of food and football Sunday at the Leprechaun Restaurant.
 They bought into the pool, they said, because somebody had complained to police about illegal sports gambling at the restaurant.
 Warren won a $50 pool, and Slayton and Renick each won $25 pools. But they couldn't keep the money. They had to turn it in as evidence.

Complain Over Suburbs Move

WASHINGTON (AP) - A group of poor persons contends the Carter administration is trying to break up urban black communities and dump minorities in suburban areas, far from their jobs.
 Officials of the Department of Housing and Urban Development denied the claims made Tuesday by the Grass Roots Unity coalition. At issue is the Regional Housing Mobility Program, a federal experiment designed to help the urban poor relocate to suburban areas by providing counseling and other services. The coalition, made up of persons from several major cities, told HUD officials the program will intensify racial tensions and increase rents by boosting demand for limited apartment space in suburban areas.

Maravich Signs With Celtics

Bulls Hit 70%, Whip Pistons

By The Associated Press

The Boston Celtics signed Pete Maravich but it was the Chicago Bulls who were hot as a pistol Tuesday night.

The Celtics, battling the Philadelphia 76ers for the best record in the National Basketball Association, announced the signing of free agent Maravich shortly after Pistol Pete watched them defeat the Houston Rockets 112-106. The Bulls, on the other hand, had all the weapons they needed in shooting a team record 70 percent from the floor in trouncing the Detroit Pistons 145-131.

In other action, the Kansas City Kings downed the Atlanta Hawks 101-89, the Utah Jazz overthrew the Milwaukee Bucks 127-122, the San Antonio Spurs crushed the San Diego Clippers 129-109 and the Cleveland Cavaliers whipped the Washington Bullets 114-91.

Rickey Sobers and David Greenwood scored 26 points apiece as the Bulls rolled up their highest point total in four years. The Bulls and Pistons set a Chicago Stadium mark by scoring 92 points, 50 by Detroit, in the fourth quarter.

The Bulls shot 83 percent in the first quarter, raced to a 67-52 halftime lead and coasted the rest of the way.

Maravich no sooner signed than he said he planned to go on the injured list until he recovers from a "slightly pulled groin muscle."

Maravich, 31, whose aching knees passed a physical examination by the 76ers' doctors on Monday, said he weighed "a lot of factors" in signing a one-year pact with the Celtics, winners of numerous NBA titles.

"When it came down to the end result," he said, "I've been trying to get here for 10 years. You have 13 flags hanging here. The only flag I have is my little United States of America flag."

"I would rather have him here than defend against him at Philadelphia," said Boston Coach Bill Fitch.

Fitch was able to joke after the Celtics blew a 22-point lead following an injury to Dave Cowens early in the second half but rallied down the stretch to beat Houston with reserve Gerald Henderson contributing six key points.

Cowens made nine of 10 shots before leaving with a jammed ankle with Boston in front 67-53. The Celtics built it to 77-55 before the Rockets began their comeback. Led by Moses Malone and Rick Barry, they pulled into a tie with 4:29 remaining. Rick Robey, spelling Cowens at center, then canned four free throws and Henderson added his points.

Kings 101, Hawks 89
Bill Robins and Ernie Grunfeld came off the bench to spark the Kings. Robins scored a season-high 28 points while Grunfeld added 18. The Kings scored the last nine points in the third quarter to take a 74-63 advantage as Atlanta went the final 2:16 of the period without scoring. Kansas City has won 18 of its last 25 games while the Hawks dropped their fourth straight.

Jazz 127, Bucks 122
Ben Poquette and Adrian Dantley split 12 Utah points in overtime after the Jazz made it that far when Ron Boone canned a pair of free throws with six seconds left in regulation time. Dantley led all scorers with 36 points and Boone finished with 20. Marques Johnson led Milwaukee with 31. Poquette, who finished with 16 points, hit the key baskets in overtime, scoring three in a row to give Utah a 121-117 edge with 44 seconds remaining.

Spurs 129, Clippers 109
George Gervin and James Silas teamed for 55 points and newly acquired John Shumate added 16 for San Antonio. Shumate, obtained from Houston last week for Billy Paultz, also grabbed 10 rebounds, blocked three shots and had three steals. The Clippers, who dropped their third straight game, were playing without Lloyd Free, the NBA's No. 2 scorer behind Gervin, who suffered an ankle injury last week. Gervin scored 30 points and Silas added 25, the ninth straight game in which he has hit 20 or more.

Cavaliers 114, Bullets 91
Mike Mitchell scored 25 points, reserve center John Lambert added a career-high 18 and the Cavaliers never trailed in handling the Bullets their fifth consecutive loss. Roger Phegley had 20 points for the Bullets.

Olympic Boycott

U.S. USSR Sports Contact Continues

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Despite President Carter's call for a possible American withdrawal from the Summer Olympics in Moscow, sports contacts between the United States and the Soviet Union are continuing.

A United States boxing team left Tuesday night for a three-city exhibition tour of the Soviet Union, joining a team of American wrestlers already there for a tournament beginning later this week.

The 20-man boxing squad was delayed for nearly three hours before taking off from Dulles International Airport in Washington when ground personnel balked at servicing the flight as a protest to the Soviets military intervention in Afghanistan.

Finally, after Soviet Aeroflot employees took over baggage handling and ticketing tasks which members of a local Teamsters union had refused to handle, the flight was able to leave.

The team is scheduled for matches in Moscow, Tbilisi, and Vilnius beginning Saturday and the American boxers were anxious to get on with their trip, despite a State Department request that they pass it up in view of recent events.

"I feel I want to go because politics shouldn't mix with sports," said Alex Ramos, a 156-pounder from New York.

"All the guys deserve to go because they've been training so hard and so long," said Lonnie Epps of Greenville, S.C.

Early today, a team of track and field athletes from the Soviet Union was scheduled to arrive in Portland, Ore., where they will compete Saturday, beginning a five-meet tour of the United States.

Another Soviet track and field team is scheduled to compete in Los Angeles, Albuquerque, N.M., Louisville, Ky., and Houston from Feb. 1-16. A Soviet hockey team is supposed to travel to Denver next week to begin training with exhibition games scheduled against Erie of the Eastern Hockey League Feb. 7 and the U.S. Olympic hockey team in New York Feb. 9.

The American wrestlers will

ECU Women Face Seminoles

East Carolina University's women return home following their lopsided, but heartening, defeat at the hands of number two ranked Old Dominion, facing Florida State here Thursday night.

Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m. in Mingos Coliseum.

The Pirates came out on the short end of a 112-77 score against the strong and tall Monarchs, a game that saw Old Dominion's two tall girls, 6-8 Anne Donovan and 6-5 Inga Nissen score over half of the points, and outscored the entire ECU team.

Despite the score, the Pirates cut the lead to as little as ten points in the second half, before the dominance of the tall girls came through.

"Florida State will be a tough opponent, despite their record," ECU Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. Florida State comes into the game with a 6-11 record, having played a "fairly tough schedule."

"They beat Virginia Tech by the same score we beat them (75-58), but we played awfully well that night," Andruzzi said. "They (Florida State) have a new coach this year, and have changed some things around."

Andruzzi said that she didn't feel that the Lady Pirates had any breathers the rest of the way, as they try to improve on their 14-5 record. "We've got to do a good job against Florida State, and try and carry a victory into our game Saturday night at South Carolina. And they are going to be another fine opponent. They beat N.C. State on State's home court, so you can see how good they are."

Andruzzi said that Florida State will present a challenge since it is a bigger team. "I'm unsure about their quickness, however," she added. "It's good for us to get a team like them to come in here since they are from another region and it helps us in building our program."

The game represents the chance to insure a winning season for the Lady Pirates. They have nine contests remaining, and a win would leave them over .500 regardless of what happens from here on out.

Florida State is led in scoring by Lynn Dee McDonald with a 14.1 average, while Glenda Stokes is hitting 11.0 per game.

Following the contest with the Seminoles, the Pirates travel to South Carolina on Saturday, then return home next Wednesday to entertain strong N.C. State.

Flyers Have 6 NHL All-Stars

MONTREAL (AP) — Six members of the league-leading Philadelphia Flyers are among the first 12 players selected to the Clarence Campbell Conference All-Star team which will oppose the best of the Prince of Wales Conference in the National Hockey League's 32nd All-Star game in Detroit Feb. 5.

The first-year Edmonton Oilers placed two members on the squad — center Wayne Gretzky and right winger Blair MacDonald, while the Chicago Black Hawks, Colorado Rockies, New York Islanders and New York Rangers added one player each. Results of the voting among selected members of the Professional Hockey Writers' Association in the 11 conference cities were announced today.

Gretzky, the 18-year-old sensation, is fifth in league scoring, and MacDonald has been among the top point-getters in the league for most of the season.

Goaltender Tony Esposito of Chicago joined defenseman Barry Beck of the Rangers and Mike McEwen of Colorado, also named to his first All-Star berth, and Islanders' center Bryan Trottier as the other choices on the Campbell team, which is still seeking its first All-Star victory after four straight setbacks.

The balance of the 20-player squad will be selected by Islanders' Coach Al Arbour, who earned the right to pilot the Campbell All-Stars by guiding the Islanders to the Conference title last season. He is only the second person to coach the Campbell squad as Fred Shero, the present Rangers' coach and former coach of Philadelphia, was behind the bench in the other four contests.

The Prince of Wales All-Stars, to be coached by Scotty Bowman of the Buffalo Sabres, will be announced later this week. Bowman led the Montreal Canadiens to their fourth consecutive Stanley Cup title before joining Buffalo last June.

For Esposito, the game will mark his sixth All-Star appearance. The flashy veteran has allowed five goals in seven and one-half periods of previous competition.

Barber, making his fourth trip to the All-Star game, is the only one among the current selections to have scored a goal, collecting it in 1978 at Buffalo. Trottier, a two-time All-Star, has a pair of assists.

The game was not played in 1979, yielding to the Challenge Cup series in which a team of NHL All-Stars faced the best players of the major hockey league in the Soviet Union and lost two of three games.

This year's format will again have a provision for sudden-death overtime if the teams are tied at the end of regulation play.

Spartans Hire New AD

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — It took little time for Michigan State University to find a new athletic director and even less time for an offer to be made and accepted, once the right man was found.

A week after Joseph Kearney quit to become athletic director at Arizona State, MSU said it was giving the job to Douglas Weaver, athletic director at Georgia Tech.

Weaver was interviewed Monday in Atlanta. Tuesday night, his appointment — subject to approval by the school's board of trustees — was announced by MSU President Cecil Mackey.

Weaver will take over at East Lansing as soon as he can arrange to end his responsibilities at Georgia Tech, said Michigan State spokesman Fred Stabley. Weaver has been Tech's athletic director since 1976, Stabley said.

Doug Weaver

"I've just been through this," said Weaver, referring to Tech's recent hiring of new Coach Bill Curry, "so I've got a head start. I've got some ideas on who's available. They haven't given me any idea on who they want and, yes, it's important to get an MSU man."

"But while I'm an MSU man, it comes as a bonus. We may come up with a hot name. But I guarantee you the new coach will be a good man."

Tech President Joseph M. Pettit issued a statement Tuesday before leaving on a trip to the West Coast.

"We certainly don't like to lose Doug Weaver," Pettit said. "Through his four years here he brought us the start of a new chapter in Georgia Tech athletics. The interest of Michigan State in Doug Weaver simply shows that we hired the right person four years ago."

Weaver, 49, is no stranger to the Big Ten conference. A 1953 graduate of MSU, Weaver played center and linebacker on Michigan State teams that won 26 of 27 games in 1950-52, including the No. 1-ranked 1952 squad.

He also served as an assistant MSU football coach from 1955-57.

"We are bringing in an excellent, proven athletic administrator in Doug Weaver," said Cecil Mackey, Michigan State president.

Redskins Fall To Ahooskie In Double Overtime, 62-61

AHOSKIE — Ahooskie High School saw three Roanoke attempts at the basket go awry last night, allowing the Cougars to pull out a 62-61 double overtime victory over the Redskins.

In the girls' game, Roanoke romped to a 56-25 win.

Roanoke's boys jumped out to a 10-6 lead in the first period, but Ahooskie rallied in the second period and cut the lead away, taking a 22-21 lead at intermission. Ahooskie continued to pull away in the third period, running the lead out to 32-27.

Roanoke fought back and tied it up in the final quarter, 47-47, and got the ball with plenty of time left for a final shot. However, after stalling for a while the Redskins saw Anthony Latham's shot just before the horn bounce off the rim.

Both teams pushed through four points in the first overtime, making it 51-51, and again Roanoke held the ball for the final shot. Again, Latham took the shot, and again, it fell away harmlessly.

In the second overtime, Ahooskie shot out by four, only to see Roanoke tie it again. Late in the period, Curtis Bond hit the first of a one-and-one giving the Cougars a three-point lead. Grady Smith downed two free throws for Roanoke, cutting the lead to one, and Bond was again fouled. He missed this time, and with four seconds left, Roanoke called time. However, following the conference with the coach, the Redskins were unable to get downcourt in time to make a decent shot, and a desperation throw missed.

Gregory Harrell led Ahooskie with 18, while Bobby Futrell had 17. Latham paced Roanoke with 23, while Maurice Chance had 16. In the girls' game, Roanoke inched ahead 4-2, after one frame, then pulled out to a 19-12 halftime lead. The Squaws upped that lead to 33-22 during the third period and outscored Ahooskie, 23-3, in the last frame.

Sylvia Parker led Roanoke with 15, while Carolyn Jones had 12 and Wanda Roberson hit 10. No one had double figures for Ahooskie.

Roanoke junior varsity took a 62-49 win, and is 14-0 on the year.

Watson Opens With San Diego

$250,000 Tourney Begins Thursday

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Tom Watson, firmly entrenched as golf's finest player, has diverse goals for the 1980 season.

"There are a lot of fine players in the world," Watson said before a practice round for his first tournament of the year.

"I would never say, 'yes, I'm the best in the world.' But it's very flattering that some people think I am. It makes me feel good.

"And I want to stay there. I want to stay on top for another 10 years. I want to make it hard for somebody to knock me off. I want to stay there as long as I can."

Watson, who has scored a sweep of Player of the Year honors, the money-winning title and the coveted Vardon Trophy for the last three seasons, opens his 1980 campaign in the $250,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open that gets started Thursday at the Torrey Pines Golf Club.

No one else has ever won all three titles two consecutive seasons. What, Watson was asked, can he do to top his own act.

"Win a fourth, win a fifth..." he said, letting the sentence trail off.

He took note of the new statistical evaluations of players which the PGA Tour is conducting this year for the first time. His fellow pros picked him as probable leader in four of nine categories, and he was second in two others.

"I'd just like to lead in tournaments won, major tournaments won and stroke average. Do that and the money will take care of itself," said Watson, who set a single-season money-winning mark last year with $462,636.

"But my real goal for the year, the thing I really want to do, is win the U.S. Open," said Watson, who has taken two British Open titles and a Masters green jacket. He has been close in the American national championship several times, but each time it eluded him.

"It's a tournament I feel I have to win," Watson said. "Any top player feels that way. It's our national championship. There are two that have to be won by a top player. The British Open is one. I've done that. The U.S. Open is the other. It's very important to me to win that one."

Watson said he'd practiced almost daily for the past three weeks but still was "tournament-rusty," coming into his season's opener.

"But I'm looking forward to the new year. I'm eager to play golf. That more than makes up for any rustiness I may have," he said.

Foster: Balance Key In ACC

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Bill Foster didn't like the idea of North Carolina coming into Cameron Indoor Stadium 10 days ago and walking out with a 15-point victory over the 5th-ranked Blue Devils, but he wasn't in a mood to fret over it.

"There's so much balance in this league ... with teams knocking each other over with a great deal of regularity," said Foster, whose team has since advanced to 3rd in the NCAA basketball rankings while North Carolina has fallen from 9th to 13th. "It was really a big game," he said, making no attempt to minimize the importance of the Tar Heels' 82-67 victory. "But, during the course of the season there will be more of that sort of thing."

Sure enough, Dean Smith's Tar Heels nearly lost to lowly Georgia Tech, which owns the only negative record in the Atlantic Coast Conference, and then were beaten soundly by 15th-ranked Maryland — in Carmichael Auditorium no less. Losing at home is a great danger to contenders in the ACC, and with league-leader Maryland playing so well everywhere, Foster realizes the Blue Devils, along with the Tar Heels — the league's 1-2 pre-season choices — must win practically all their remaining conference games.

"We better win all of them here from now on," Foster said. "And we better get Dennard back," he said in reference to forward Kenny Dennard, who is out with an upper leg injury.

The team most figured Duke would have to beat, North Carolina, is in even worse shape because of the loss for the season of freshman sensation James Worthy with a broken ankle. But the Blue Devils can't be thinking about the Tar Heels' troubles ... they have enough of their own.

The return of Dennard will bear particular importance because Duke, after its must-win game with Virginia tonight at Cameron, hits the road for games against Wake Forest, 15th-ranked Maryland and 17th-ranked Virginia.

Wake Forest has been particularly tough on Duke, in both the Big Four Tournament and at Duke. The Blue Devils have won the games by the combined total of three points, and, at Wake Forest, should be in for another tussle.

Maryland and Virginia have not lost at home, so neither of those figures to be anything but troublesome for the Blue Devils. They can survive with two out of four, but would enhance their position considerably with three victories, and Foster knows it.

"We can't think about losing, and I think we've got to win the close games and improve on our rebounding aside from Mike (Gminski) and (Gene) Banks," said Foster, whose Blue Devils are tied for second place in the ACC with a 4-2 mark as part of their overall 15-2 record.

"You know," he said, "somebody has got to finish second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth in this league, but sometimes you just don't know who."

Stallworth, Not Swann, In Pro Bowl This Year

HONOLULU (AP) — Lynn Swann is not on the American Football Conference's Pro Bowl team this year. That, by itself, may not be so surprising — until you consider that one of the starters is John Stallworth.

Swann, the Pittsburgh Steelers' lithe wide receiver, is generally acknowledged as one of the best in the business at his position. Stallworth, his teammate, has spent most of his pro career carrying around the label "the other guy."

In 1979, though, Swann suffered a few injuries and became the other guy while Stallworth — a fourth-round draft choice out of Alabama A&M in 1974 when Swann was selected No. 1 out of Southern California — emerged as a star in his own right.

His own teammates acknowledged it when they selected him as Pittsburgh's Most Valuable Player for his 70 receptions, 1,183 yards and eight touchdowns. And the rest of the AFC's players and coaches acknowledged it, too, when they put him in the Pro Bowl for the first time.

"John deserves every recognition he gets," Swann, a three-time Pro Bowl choice, said when the team was announced.

Swann initially was left off the team this year but became an alternate when Steve Largent of Seattle bowed out. And when Swann suffered a mild concussion last Sunday during the Steelers' 31-19 Super Bowl victory over Los Angeles, he was replaced on the AFC roster by San Diego's Charlie Joiner.

Defensive tackle Joe Greene, here as a Pro Bowl player for an extraordinary 10th time in his 11 years with the Steelers, agrees with Swann's assessment of Stallworth.

"I'm glad to see 'Stall' getting the recognition he deserves. He did a fine job this season for us. It's about time people paid him some tribute because he definitely deserves to be recognized as one of the best."

Stallworth, a 6-foot-2, 185-pounder, sees his selection to the Pro Bowl as the fulfillment of a special goal. "I always hoped my personal accomplishments would parallel the team's at the end of each season — and now they have," he said Tuesday.

"Individual honors are nice, but I don't think they come ahead of team goals. I'd be lying to you if I said I hadn't thought during the season about making All-Pro, but what I was more interested in was winning the Super Bowl."

The Steelers did — thanks in great part to Stallworth, whose 73-yard touchdown catch put them ahead to stay and whose 45-yard reception set up Pittsburgh's final score that killed the Rams' hopes.

Pitt To Face CTI

Pitt Community College plays host to league-leading Craven Technical Institute tonight at 7:30 p.m. at D.H. Conley High School.

The Paladins will be shooting for first place themselves in the contest.

Craven currently is 11-3 overall and 5-0 in conference play, while the Pitt Paladins are 8-8 overall and 5-1 in the league. A victory by Pitt would propel the Paladins into a half-game lead in the conference.

Playoffs Inevitable -- Bryant

NEW YORK (AP) — Bear Bryant says a national championship college football playoff is inevitable. He doesn't know when it will happen, but he thinks he knows why.

"We'll go to it someday because we'll run out of money," the 66-year-old coach of Alabama's 1978-1979 national champions said Tuesday as he accepted one of the many No. 1 awards the university has received following the Crimson Tide's 12-0 season.

Bryant envisions not only a great deal of exposure from a playoff during the time when pro football's Super Bowl commands the headlines, but plenty of television loot, as well.

"The big thing is exposure," he said. "They'd be coming to our house once in a while instead of to the Super Bowl. But someday it will come down to money, and when it does, we'll win over the academic people."

One of the major objections to a postseason, postbowl playoff, even though it might involve only four of the 139 Division I-A teams, is that the players would miss too much schoolwork. Bryant shrugs that one off.

"Football players don't really miss many classes," he said. "For instance, we leave for a game on Friday night and come back on Saturday night. Basketball and baseball players are the worst; they miss more classes than anyone."

The Bear said fast-rising costs of college athletics might help to push through the playoff idea, which never reached the floor of the National Collegiate Athletic Association's convention earlier this month although it had the support of the Extra Events Committee.

"It costs so much now to put on a football game with fuel and energy so high," Bryant said. "But I don't think we'll ever win the academic people until it gets down to where we have to have the money."

Although he has been Alabama's head coach for 22 years and also serves as the school's director of athletics, Bryant considers himself one of those "academic people," too.

But not an egghead, mind you.

"I had to repeat one year of high school, taking Spanish and algebra, to get into Alabama," he drawled. "And then I had the lowest marks and cut more classes than anyone else in history."

He insists his academic "record" will never be broken.

"Our players didn't win the national championship by accident, but by hard work and dedication," he said. "More than 96 percent of the players who finish their four years at Alabama get their degrees, and that includes counting Joe Namath and Kenny Stabler. They promised to come back and get their degree but then got rich and didn't."

"My philosophy has changed. I tell the players I recruit that I want a special kind of student who's willing to work and sacrifice and discipline himself and do without some things other students have because if he plays football and makes his grades he won't have time to do anything else."

Tigers Take 2 From Pam Pack

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston High School took a pair of Northeastern Conference basketball games from Washington High School last night.

The Tigers gained the boys' game with a 47-44 score, while the Tigerettes took a 45-43 score in another close game.

The Williamston girls found themselves down by a point, 13-12, after the first period, and could make no headway during the second frame. They trailed at halftime 23-22.

In the third period, however, Williamston took command with a 17-9 margin, and charged ahead, 39-32. Washington rallied in the final period, 11-6, but was never able to catch up.

Jan Rogerson led Williamston with 24 points, while Kathy Everett added 12. Kim Gullford paced Washington with 15, while Mary Lewis had 12 and Brenda Mims had 10.

The boys' game also saw Washington gain a one-point lead, 14-13, at the end of the first period. But in this case, the Tigers came back to inch ahead, 26-24, at intermission. Washington stayed right with Williamston, however, and knotted it up after three, 36-36. Williamston then outthrew the Pam Pack, 11-8, in the final period to take the win.

James Woolard led Williamston with 20 points, while Edward Williams added 15. James Boston, paced Washington with 16.

ECTA To Hold Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Eastern Carolina Tennis Association will be held Sunday at the Health Building of the Goldsboro Country Club at 2 p.m.

Clubs desiring to join the ECTA for the 1980 season must be in attendance at the meeting. Awards for the 1979 season will also be presented at this time.

The agenda includes reports of the various officers, proposed constitutional changes, determination of league fees, dates and rules, setting up of the league for the 1980 season, and the election of officers.

Olympic ...

compete in a tournament against the Russians Friday through Sunday at Tbilisi. A Canadian team has withdrawn from that event, although Pierre Trudeau, leader of Canada's Liberal party, said he does not support the boycott movement.

Trudeau said a boycott "will probably mean the end of the Olympics, but that may be what some countries want."

The United States Congress, convening its new session, was preoccupied with Carter's call for a possible postponement, cancellation or transfer of the Games to protest the Soviet action in Afghanistan.

Leaders in both the House of Representatives and the Senate rallied to support Carter. Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said he hoped for Congressional approval by the end of the week of a resolution calling on American athletes to boycott the Games. Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W. Va., said "an overwhelming majority" of the Senate would support a boycott.

There were three resolutions introduced in the Senate Tuesday on the subject of the Games and one, presented by Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., called for an American boycott of the Olympics regardless of any Russian troop withdrawal timetable.

In another development, officials of the United States and Germany said in Berlin that despite President Carter's call, plans remain in place for a training camp to be located there before the Summer Games. The German-owned facilities are supposed to be rented to the United States Olympic Committee so that American athletes can train there in June and July.

Meanwhile, Soviet sports authorities said there had been no change in plans to send a 150-member team to the Winter Games scheduled to begin Feb. 12 in Lake Placid, N.Y.

Vladimir Makeev, a Soviet downhill skiing champion, said, "We are all very happy to go to Lake Placid, and we hope that by the time the Summer Games get underway in Moscow, the whole crisis will have blown over."

Two countries, France and Mexico, said they plan to send their teams to the Summer Games.

Claude Collard, president of the French National Olympic Committee, said "France will be at Moscow...President Carter's problem will not change France's attitude."

Mario Vazquez Rana, president of the Mexican Olympic Committee, said his country would send between 50 and 60 athletes to Moscow.

"I have talked to many of the presidents of Olympic Committees and no one is for the supposed boycott," said Vazquez Rana, who also heads the Association of National Olympic Committees.

Greece and Denmark said they would participate at Moscow. Saudi Arabia, which has passed up some previous Games, said it would not send a team to Moscow and Egypt and Fiji said they would follow the United States' lead on the matter.

China, in a statement by Foreign Minister Huang Hua to reporters in Pakistan, said it favors shifting the 1980 Olympic Games from Moscow in view of the Soviet action in Afghanistan.

Other nations including Canada, West Germany, New Zealand, Iran, and Austria were delaying any definitive action for the moment, preferring to see how world sentiment reacts to Carter's call for an Olympic protest movement.

Rosettes In Gymnastic Meet

The Rosettes Gymnastics Club will participate in a Class III open sectional meet in Greensboro on Friday and Saturday.

The meet is a qualifying meet for the State Championships. It is under USGF sanction.

One member of the club, Christy Garrison, 10, has already qualified for the state meet in Class III-B.

The club participated in a meet at Southern Pines this past weekend, which included both Class II and III competition. Tracy Fearington, Judy Benson and Carmela Weber all placed in the Class II competition, with Fearington finishing fifth in the all-around competition.

Tim Dale has his hands full getting ready to open BB&T's new Main Office.

Tim Dale manages our operations in Greenville. And for some time now, he's been planning the opening of our new Main Office at the corner of Greene and 3rd Streets. But what he's putting together is no ordinary grand opening.

Beginning at 9 a.m., Tim and his staff are going to be giving special keys to everyone who comes in the door. If your key opens the BB&T treasure chest, you'll win two of the mouth-watering rib eye steaks Tim's rounded up for this opening.

And even if your key doesn't open the chest, you can still walk away with a couple of nice steaks. All you have to do is open a checking or savings account with $50 or more or add $50 to an existing BB&T savings account.

Tim will also give you a free garden tool just for coming in between 9 a.m. and 8 p.m. Thursday. As well as refreshments. And a chance to win an upright freezer for your home. There'll be a lot of nice things going on. So stop by our Main Office on Thursday, January 24. And if you happen to find him with his hands empty, you might want to shake hands with Tim Dale.

DePaul Remains Only Unbeaten Team

Blue Demons Play Usual Game, Escape With Win

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

"We played our usual game," said DePaul Coach Ray Meyer. "We get up on somebody and then die."

And still win...and win...and win.

The nation's only unbeaten major college basketball team made it 16 in a row Tuesday night but, like most games for the Blue Demons since they became No. 1 last week, it wasn't easy.

This time, Mark Aguirre scored 22 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to lead DePaul to a 57-54 road victory over Alabama-Birmingham. The Blue Demons stretched a 23-22 halftime lead to 15 points midway through the second half but UAB chopped it to 48-46 with 4:34 remaining. It was 54-52 with 35 seconds left before DePaul wrapped it up on a free throw by James Mitchell and two by Aguirre.

DePaul was one of only three teams in The Associated Press Top Twenty to see action Tuesday night. The others had it much easier — seventh-ranked Louisville trimming Marquette 76-63 and No. 9 St. John's, N.Y., whipping Manhattan 88-64.

For a team that received all 57 first-place votes in this week's AP poll, DePaul isn't making any big claims. Just the opposite, in fact. After all, since becoming No. 1 the Blue Demons have beaten Lamar by two points, Maine by 14, Louisiana State by five and UAB by three.

"When we had to play, we played," Meyer said. "We're still not a great team and I don't know how long we are going to be in this lofty position because we're going to lose eventually. Right now we're toying with fate."

Nah, never in doubt, said Aguirre. "We were never concerned when it got close because we knew we could play when we had to play," he said. "I never felt the pressure, even when they cut the lead to two points. We knew we had to come through and we did."

Louisville Coach Denny Crum won his 200th game when the Cardinals, paced by Darrell Griffith's 23 points, pulled away from stubborn Marquette in the final eight minutes to notch their 14th triumph in 16 starts.

Marquette led 41-40 with 12:24 left but Pancho Wright put Louisville in front with an 18-footer from the corner and baskets by Rodney McCray and Wright made it 46-41. It was all downhill after that.

"Basketball is a game of spurts and the right one came along for us tonight," Crum said. "We made a lot of silly errors, but we didn't lose our poise when the going got rough."

Marquette Coach Hank Raymonds said Louisville had "more poise and more balance" than last year's club.

Wayne McKay triggered a game-opening 15-4 burst with seven points and St. John's breezed past Manhattan for its 13th consecutive victory and 15th in 16 games. The Redmen opened a 29-11 bulge en route to a 43-29 halftime lead as McKay scored 13 of his 17 points before the intermission.

"We played good defense in the opening part of the first half and then let up a little," said Coach Lou Carnesecca. "Then we came back and played well in all aspects of the game in the second half. It was the type of game that enabled us to work on the things that got us this far."

Texas A&M used a key technical foul against Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton and a successful delay game to defeat the Razorbacks 45-39 and take undisputed possession of first place in the Southwest Conference. The Aggies are 6-0 to 5-1 for Arkansas and Texas Tech.

Arkansas led 35-32 when Sutton was hit with a technical. The Aggies converted both free throws and then took the lead for good on Vernon Smith's rebound basket. After two more free throws, they went into a four-corner stall with 7½ minutes left and coasted to victory.

Elsewhere in the conference, Texas Christian posted consecutive SWC triumphs for the first time since the 1975-76 season by defeating Houston 71-69 when Larry Micheaux of the losers was called for goaltending when he blocked Deckery

Freshman Jay Shaker came off the bench to trigger a second-half rally that led Baylor over Texas 62-48. The Bears broke a 38-38 tie with nine minutes left and Shaker scored 10 of his 14 points down the stretch as they pulled away.

And Brad Branson's turnaround shot from the foul line with six seconds left gave Southern Methodist a comeback-behind 85-83 victory over Rice, which led most of the way. Billy Allen led the winners with 27 points and Branson added 23.

Elsewhere, Daryl Moreau scored 27 points on 11-of-12 shooting from the floor to lead Tulane past Southwestern of Memphis 87-82. Eddie Lee got 18 of his 20 points in the second half as Cincinnati trounced St. Louis 71-57. Pop Wright scored 32 points and Lewis Lloyd added 29 as Drake outlasted West Texas State 112-105 in a Missouri Valley Conference game and Old Dominion, last weekend's conqueror of previously unbeaten Syracuse, shaded Virginia Commonwealth 68-64.

Beseiged Tobacco Industry Eyes Foreign Exports

By FRED McNEESE
 RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — J.C. Evans, in 26 years of farming tobacco, has always made a living off the leaf — until last year.

"This was the first year that I needed something else to put me over the top," he said, talking about the 37 acres that grew 20,000 less pounds of tobacco in 1979 than the year before. "I had a good herd of cows and they got me through."

It is winter in the Southern flue-cured and burley tobacco belts. Farmers are repairing machinery and negotiating land leases following a disappointing season. They face uncertainty caused by inflation, the government's anti-smoking campaign and increased competition from abroad.

"I feel like there will always be people smoking although I am sure that everyone knows it is harmful to your health," said Larry Campbell, who grew tobacco on 28 acres last season. "The future may not be as bright as it has been but I feel that tobacco is here to stay."

"I don't believe everybody in the world is going to quit smoking."

Tobacco farmers were hurt in 1979 by poor weather during crucial times of the growing season and by an outbreak of blue mold, a fungus that cost U.S. and Canadian tobacco growers an estimated $250 million.

Auction warehouses, with no tobacco to sell, closed weeks ahead of schedule throughout the flue-cured belts, which are concentrated in Georgia, Florida, Virginia and the Carolinas. Kentucky burley farmers, whose crops were damaged even more by blue mold, were able to get 349 million pounds of tobacco to market through the end of 1979 compared to 534 million pounds the previous year.

But W.W. Yeargin, managing director of the Tobacco Growers Information Committee, believes it is government opposition and growing militancy by non-smokers that pose the biggest problems for the tobacco industry, not plant disease or variable weather conditions.

"The growing segregationist attitude is probably the biggest thing we have to worry about for the 1980s," said Yeargin, who directs much of the industry's public information program.

"It has become almost a radical-type thing," he said.

"People get to the point that they don't really think... they just want to ban tobacco."

Despite the ouster of former Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph Califano, the federal government continues to take shots at the tobacco industry, even while helping support the tobacco farmer.

The Federal Trade Commission is asking Congress for money to launch an anti-smoking campaign to combat the $875 million the cigarette industry spends annually on advertising.

Studies citing the health hazards of tobacco continue to be released. One based on health insurance statistics released in 1979 showed mortality rates for smokers ran two to four times higher than for non-smokers.

front from the tobacco belt are over.

For example, The News and Observer newspaper of Raleigh has been critical of the approach state and tobacco company officials have taken to head off criticism by non-smokers.

"Instead of mobilizing public support behind an all-out effort to find high-return substitute crops and breed new, safer tobacco, our officials slog on like mules in blinders down the old tobacco furrow, kicking dust in the face of anyone who tries to turn them aside," the newspaper said in one editorial.

Yeargin said the task facing the tobacco industry is making sure people pushing for anti-smoking laws are telling the truth.

"Misconceptions are spread by these people, they really don't use the facts," Yeargin said. "They use emotion and promotion more than anything else."

Yeargin believes a major part of the tobacco industry's future may be in the export market. He notes some of the developing countries are beginning to increase consumption of tobacco and there is little government-sponsored opposition.

"I think the potential is there, the market is there for U.S. grown tobacco," Yeargin said. "It is up to us to promote U.S. tobacco in world markets."

Kentucky Deputy Agriculture Commissioner Thomas O. Harris says Kentucky exports about 125 million pounds of burley each year, about 20 to 25 percent of its crop, to Japan, Germany, France, Taiwan, Korea and England and is hoping to find markets in world flue-cured exports, China.

But Dan Stevens, an economist with the Agriculture Department's Foreign Agricultural Service, does not see any dramatic increase in exports in the near future.

"We feel, at best, it will be stable," he said.

Stevens said the U.S. is in danger of losing its world market to other tobacco growing nations such as Brazil, Korea, the Philippines and Thailand.

The lifting of economic sanctions against Rhodesia also could affect American tobacco farmers. Before sanctions were imposed against Rhodesia, that country produced about 7 percent of the world flue-cured supply and about 22 percent of world flue-cured exports.

"What is going to happen in Rhodesia is that their production will increase and the exports will increase," Stevens said. "This will mean an increased move into markets such as the United Kingdom and it probably will have some effect on our exports."

Stevens said American tobacco, still the best quality in the world, is beginning to lose out to less expensive leaf.

"The foreign tobacco companies are substituting the lower price leaf when they introduce a new blend," he said. "Also there is a move toward low-tar and low-nicotine cigarette which can be made with less U.S. tobacco."

Discoverer Of The Transistor Claims One Regret

Written for UPI
WALLA WALLA, Wash. (UPI) — "The only regret I have about the transistor is its use for rock and roll music. I still have my rifle and sometimes when I hear that noise I think I could shoot them all."

Walter Brattain, 77, sits in his office at Whitman College reminiscing about his experiences as a research scientist and the discovery of the transistor which brought him a Nobel prize and world acclaim.

He was working at Bell Labs in Murray Hill, N.J., on the historic day in 1947 when he, John Bardeen, and William Shockley made the discovery which led to the development of the transistor.

Brattain says the transistor discovery was by chance, that he was in the right place at the right time.

"I was lucky," he said. "It really started in July of 1947. Bardeen explained why some things we had always assumed were true really were not so, and I was trying to fully understand the properties of semi-conductors."

The day that he and several colleagues watched a tiny piece of treated germanium (with two gold contacts attached) serve as the amplifier in place of an electron tube in a communications circuit, he knew it was a breakthrough of far-reaching significance.

"On the way home that night I told the other riders in our car pool that I had probably taken part in the largest experience I would ever have." Nine years later, on December 10, 1956, in Stockholm's Concert Hall, Swedish King Gustav VI awarded the Nobel Prize for Physics to Brattain, Bardeen and Shockley.

A model of that first transistor sits under a small plastic dome in Brattain's office.

"Before medicine got into using the transistor for so many wonderful things, I think the best use of it was the transistor radio," he said. "Anyone in the world could listen — nomads in Iran, people in the Indies, people living under dictatorships could listen to news from the U.S. and really know what was happening."

In 1967, after more than 37 years with Bell Labs, Brattain retired, but he has been anything but idle. Although he had many offers, there was no doubt in his mind that he wanted to return to the Northwest and to the college where he had started his career in physics and earned his bachelor of science degree in 1924.

His father had graduated from Whitman College and his mother attended there before graduating from Mills College in Oakland, Calif. His wife, Emma Jane, is also a Whitman graduate.

When he first returned, he taught a senior-level physics lab and a science course designed for liberal arts students.

"When I first got my Ph.D. (from the University of Minnesota), I thought I couldn't teach. But when I finally came back to Whitman to teach I realized I was giving those students what most of them wouldn't ordinarily get until graduate school. I taught them that it didn't matter what the books said. In the lab you try things and find out for yourself."

Although he is no longer teaching classes, Brattain makes himself available for work with students. He goes to his office in the Science Building every day and is working on several projects. "I am piled up with work," he says, pointing to stacks of work on his desk.

He and David Frasco, professor of chemistry at Whitman, have been doing research on phospholipid bi-layers as a model for the surface of living cells.

Brattain is also writing the life story of his father, Ross R. Brattain, who was a teacher in China, a stockbroker in Spokane, and a homesteader, cattle rancher, and flour miller in Tonasket, Wash.

"My father told me his story," Brattain says. "Now I'm putting it in modern language."

When he finishes that story, Brattain would like to find time for some writing of his own recollections.

Much of his time is taken up with interviews, inquiries, and correspondence. McGraw-Hill Publishing Co. is working on a revision of Brattain's autobiography which he has agreed to edit. "I had all of these requests since the summer of 1970," Brattain said, pointing to a thick file folder. "One company wants to publish a children's book explaining the transistor, a University of Illinois physics student and a historian from Harvard want information. I worked on the transistor display at the Pacific Science Center in Seattle, and on and on."

Brattain's mail box at Whitman is usually bulging. Autograph collectors, students, researchers and admirers write from all over the world.

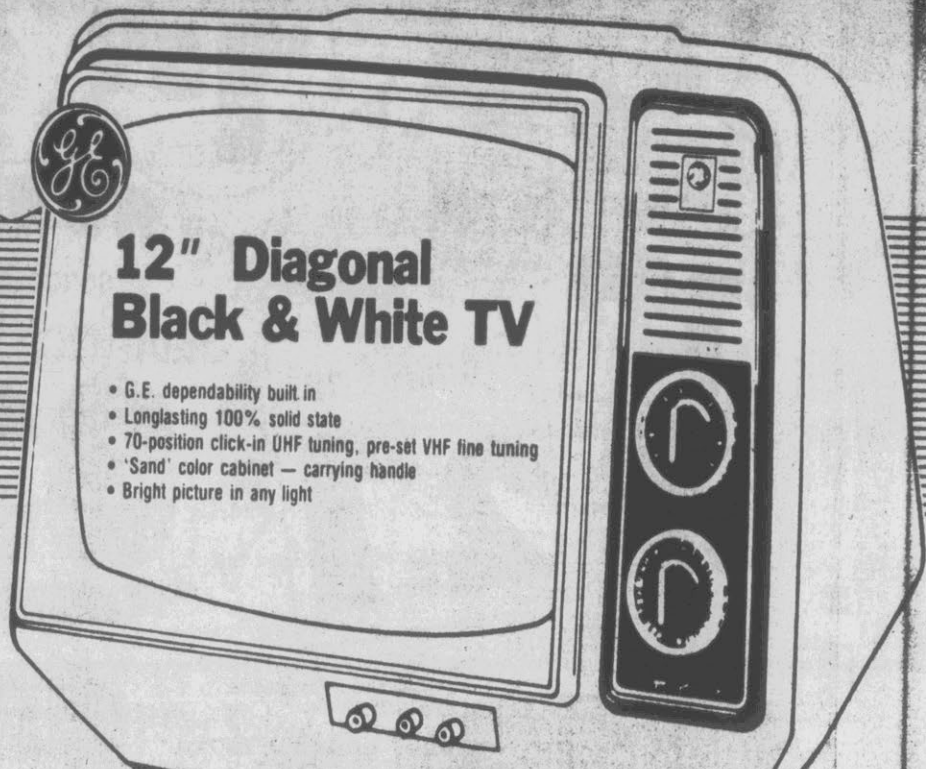

There's a letter from behind the Iron curtain, written in German, letters from Sweden, and numerous others.

"It's very time consuming," Brattain said, "and a lot of them don't even send return postage."

Brattain props one leg on the edge of his desk and looks out of the window to the center of the campus where students are hurrying to class.

"I guess the best way to sum it all up is to say that to be able to spend one's life and earn one's living as a research scientist is a privilege and I'm grateful to have had the opportunity."

Hand-Weavers At Work In New Mexico's Foothills

By JOHN LEAHIGH
CHIMAYO, N.M. (UPI) - Weaving, a cottage industry in this foothills hamlet, is more than a tradition among local descendants of Spanish settlers - it is a destiny, says a seventh-generation practitioner of the art.

"In my grandfather's family there were four boys. Two were weavers and two were not," said David Ortega, 62, head of an operation that annually spins about 14 tons of wool into scores of products.

"In my father's family there were four boys and two stuck it out," he said. "The same in my family. I have four sons and two of them are sticking it out."

Besides the sons, Robert, 25, and Andrew, 26, the corporation headed by Ortega employs about 90 weavers. They use looms built by their fathers in their adobe homes.

"Probably half of them work full time," Ortega said. "Close to 100 families are pretty well supplemented for income and livelihood, including those who provide Indian crafts sold in the store," Ortega said.

"But when you say 'full time,' it's not the up-at-8-and-work-to-6 type of thing," he said. "Maybe they would get up at 2 a.m. Maybe some day they don't even care to weave. They all live happily and most have their gardens and some animals and take care of their households."

Some of the part-time weavers hold full-time jobs at Santa Fe, Espanola and even 30 miles to the west at Los Alamos, where scientists developed the atomic bomb.

The woven products are sold through Ortega's shop in Chimayo. Some of the best are museum pieces among President Franklin Roosevelt's memorabilia at Warm Springs, Ga., or at the Vatican.

The brightly colored products mainly bear designs borrowed from the Indians to whom the Spanish settlers introduced sheep and taught the art of wool weaving.

Besides special order, custom-made items, the weavers produce a range of serape-blankets for beds, couches and wall hangings, coats for men and women, vests, ponchos, and even purses.

Chimayo area villages, with a population estimated at about 3,000, constitute the only place where the Spanish weaving tradition is still carried on in the United States, Ortega says.

The Spaniards who settled Chimayo in the late 17th century were weavers of products for their personal use, Ortega said. "Up and down the Rio Grande Valley, the original settlers would weave. Clear up in Colorado they used to have people who wove."

"But," he said, "with the coming of materials (fabrics) in the 1800s, they no longer would weave. Commercial goods were available. It died out everywhere but here. Here in Chimayo, they started to make it for sale."

Ortega said he felt geographic stability and the creative bent of the people combined to perpetuate the art.

"I think it is because of the geographical location," he said. "We were very isolated here and. I tell you, it takes a certain kind of people to be a weaver. He has to be artistic and contained - not move about. We're fortunate that way. There is a great satisfaction of accomplishment to create."

Ortega said his business, the largest of several Chimayo weaving operations, has tripled its production force in the past quarter of a century. He attributed this to an increased variety of products and "more accessibility of people to us."

"Today we have the world at our fingertips. They come to us in private cars and tours. We have increased our production and also we have more things that we weave."

He said the beauty, the pleasant climate and the area's old world atmosphere on the scenic "High Road to Taos" attracts many tourists, who become customers.

In the foothills of the Sangre de Cristo Mountains, Chimayo is surrounded on three sides by mountains or hills. Clear water from the mountains flows to the community in the Rio En Medio and Rio Chiquito, also called Rio Canal.

Ortega said no one gets rich from weaving, but it helps make life more pleasant in "a very beautiful valley and good climate" that would be hard to leave.

The weavers produce rugs in six standard sizes, ranging from 54-by-84 inches to 10-by-10 feet. A 54-by-84-inch rug can range in price from $130 to $550.

"They both have the same quality but there's more design in the more expensive one," Ortega said.

The smallest pieces, used for centerpieces or placed under telephones or ash trays, sell for about $3.50.

The weavers range in age from teen-agers to 87. They live modestly but Ortega is proud to say, "We don't have a single person who weaves with us who has ever been on welfare."

Still, he does not think the weavers earn what they deserve. They are paid by the job and it works out to about $5 an hour for a good weaver, perhaps $3 to $4 for most.

"Winter. That's when we produce the most, when most of the people can stay in and work," Ortega said. "They don't have to mess around in their gardens."

$17,938 'Grant

ECU News Bureau
A grant of $17,938 has been awarded East Carolina University's program in marine education leadership training. The funds originate from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration/UNC Sea Grant Program.

Directed by Dr. Carolyn Hampton of the ECU Department of Science Education, the marine education training program provides advisory and coordination services for students who wish to prepare for careers in marine education.

Participating students will pursue the MAEd degree in their major areas with special concentrations in marine education.

Renovation Is Near Completion

NEW YORK (UPI) - Completion of a two-year, $23 million renovation of the Chrysler Building, once the world's tallest building, is scheduled for this year.

Those figures contrast, according to National Geographic magazine, with the fact the building originally cost only $15 million and required only 18 months to build. The silver, needle-pointed structure was opened on April 1, 1930, and at 1,046 to the tips of its spire, topped the 984-foot Eiffel Tower in Paris as the world's tallest structure. It remained the tallest for little more than a year, until the 1,250-foot Empire State Building in New York was opened in May 1931.

Renovation of the Chrysler Building was in the nature of a facelift, rather than major structural work.

Drug Smugglers Re-Raise The Specter Of Piracy

By J. PAUL WYATT
United Press International

"I just can't picture a yacht of that size going down without any wreckage," said Fran Kelly, whose sister, Kathleen, was one of four persons aboard the 52-foot Divorsea that disappeared without a trace last June in the Caribbean.

The yacht's seaworthiness, the fact it vanished at the height of the marijuana harvest in Colombia's Guajira Peninsula and the presence of a disabled larger vessel, with only one man on board, in the Divorsea's path make Kelly believe drug smugglers may have hijacked the yacht.

"I still have the feeling she is alive and will turn up someday... even if the State Department does put out a death certificate," said Kelly, a high school dean in the Jacksonville, Fla. suburb of Orange Park.

U.S. authorities, who together with the Dutch and Jamaicans conducted an air search over 50,000 square miles, agree the Divorsea's disappearance is "baffling." But they are not sold on the idea it was hijacked.

"Although the possibility of a hijacking cannot be ruled out, the utter lack of evidence doesn't support the notion that such a crime may have occurred," said Capt. B. F. Hollingsworth, acting chief of the Coast Guard's operations office. He suggested "more plausible explanations" such as "severe weather factors or calamitous physical problems with the yacht."

The case of the Divorsea, which left Jacmel, Haiti, at 5 p.m. June 16, for a 32-hour trip to Aruba, similarly suspicious yacht disappearances on Florida's Gulf Coast and an increasing number of stories about yachtsmen fighting off or scaring away would-be hijackers has raised the specter of an old Caribbean scourge — piracy.

Add to this the disquieting testimony of South American seamen caught trying to smuggle drugs into this country, who claim they were hijacked or shanghaied by drug runners. It is not hard to conjure up a Barbary Coast atmosphere in some parts of what used to be considered the sailor's paradise.

U.S. Coast Guard statistics show it has documented only six known boat hijackings and 43 suspected hijackings since 1971. U.S. Customs statistics show that of 191 boat seizures, mostly for drug smuggling, in fiscal 1979, only one was a hijacked vessel. But yachtsmen appear unconvinced.

"People are really afraid," said Florida Marine Patrol Maj. Lavelle Pitts, noting an alarming increase in the amount and type of arms carried aboard yachts nowadays. "You really can't blame them, but it gives the bad guy an excuse for carrying weapons, too."

Pitts cited the case of a Maryland family that radioed the Coast Guard it was being hijacked in Florida's Intra-coastal Waterway near Panama City recently, even though the man in pursuit was a marine patrolman in a marked vessel with sirens and flashing blue lights. He wanted to check the yacht's running lights, but the family was so afraid it wouldn't let him on board.

Ronnie Stroud, dockmaster at Pier 66 in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., said one of the boatowners who uses his marina, takes a bazooka on board whenever he sails across the Gulf of Mexico to New Orleans.

"I think most of the boats carry an armament of some type, a rifle or a hand pistol or a shotgun," he said. "That's just good common sense. There's so many kooks around. There's a bit of fear out there on the water and people want to protect themselves."

In an article in Motor Boat & Sailing, Chuck Tobias, of Naples, Fla., told how he shot two men who tried to take over his 60-foot ketch, Mar, during a stop at Cartagena, Colombia, in 1978. Tobias said he heard of another U.S. yacht that traded shots with a pursuing craft in Colombian waters.

Bob and Marilyn Bohemier were stalked by six men in a 30-foot power boat between Chub Cay and Gun Cay in the Grand Bahama Bank last year. Just as the boat drew near and two men crawled to leap on board the Bohemier's 36-foot sloop, Sunchaser, Bohemier fired a carbine over their heads and the Coast Guard answered a Mayday call on the radio. The pirates turned and sped away.

Bill Raney, assistant attorney general of North Carolina, told of being chased in the Straits of Florida by a 35-foot sport fishing boat last November after the sailboat he was on stumbled upon a freighter apparently unloading marijuana.

When they first spotted the sport fishing boat, Raney said, the skipper of his boat grabbed a rifle and ammunition from below and had all seven people on board come on deck so the people on the pursuing boat would know that there was a large crew.

When the sport-fish boat pulled up about 20 to 30 yards off, one of the two South American-looking men on the flying bridge shouted something like "rough weather," he said. The sport fish boat then turned around. "They left us — shaking," recalled Raney.

Those are the ones who lived to talk about their experiences. On Jan. 27, 1977, the Pirate's Lady, a 75-foot white and green, aluminum-hulled pleasure craft worth about $1.1 million, was seen by a bridge tender leaving Appalachicola, Fla., for Clearwater, Fla., a 190-mile trip. It never arrived. Two experienced crewmen on board, Tony Latusa and David Diecidue, were never heard from again.

The 70-foot shrimp boat Gunsmoke, laden with 16 tons of marijuana, arrived in Appalachicola from Panama City within hours of the Pirate Lady's departure. The Gunsmoke later was found scuttled near the entrance to Tampa Bay. Two men involved in the Gunsmoke smuggling operation were convicted of murdering four persons who stumbled upon a drug off-loading operation near Panama City.

But no connection was ever established between the Gunsmoke and the Pirate's Lady. Robert Ginley, agent-in-charge of the Drug Enforcement Administration's Jacksonville office, said drug smugglers would have had no use for the Pirate's Lady because "it didn't have a very big cargo space."

Using boats, planes and helicopters, the Coast Guard searched a 70,000-square mile area for the Pirate's Lady. The weather in the area at the time of its disappearance was good and the yacht was equipped with life preservers, sophisticated radio gear, flares and a small motorized lifeboat.

New Orleans businessman Charles Slater, who owned it, offered rewards and conducted his own investigation, following up leads and checking harbors and marinas where the yacht might have been taken.

"Nobody knows what happened to it," said Coast Guard spokesman Bob Brown. "It just disappeared."

James Dingfelder, of the U.S. Customs office in Miami, said, "I don't think hijacking is as prevalent as it is made out to be. If it came out that the hijacked boat's crew was missing, you have significantly jeopardized yourself."

"Smugglers have money to buy boats. They don't need to get into kidnapping, murder, grand theft. It's not their method of operation."

To illustrate the amount of money drug smugglers can invest in a single operation, the DEA's Ginley noted that the 167-foot Heidi, which was caught bringing in a record 113 tons of marijuana in 1978, was a stateless vessel actually called American II, which the smugglers had purchased for $200,000.

"Then they spent another $100,000 in fitting it out with sophisticated radar and radio equipment in Miami," Ginley said. "The mob obviously has no shortage of operating funds to acquire such vessels and I just don't believe that they're going to run the additional risk of piracy on the high seas to get their hands on a vessel when it's much easier buying them."

When the 68-foot fishing vessel Ruth was captured off the north Florida coast with 10,000 pounds of marijuana, one of the three crewmen, a Peruvian, said pirates boarded the vessel outside of Barranquilla, Colombia, and forced him to accompany them. The other two crewmen said they were never told where they were going or that they would be doing anything illegal. The captain swam ashore near Cape Canaveral and escaped before the vessel was boarded.

In a deposition, Joseph Rafael Franco, manager of the Colombian fishing fleet that owned the Ruth, stated it was the 36th vessel to be stolen or pirated by a drug-running mafia in Cartagena since 1974. He said over 200 seamen had disappeared during that period.

"He (Franco) told me about one case," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Ernst Mueller, who prosecuted the Ruth case, "in which the crewmen's hands were tied behind their backs and then they dumped them into the ocean."

In some cases, Franco said, the pirates infiltrate the crews of fishing vessels with accomplices who later help them with the takeovers at sea.

"In Colombia, the ones who steal our boats come back to Colombia from Jamaica and the United States," Franco said. "The mafia pays the attorneys' fees and all of them are free. In most of the cases I know of, the takeovers are negotiated, but in some cases they have killed the fishermen."

The 55-foot fishing vessel Caravella Verde, which was seized by South Carolina authorities last April when it tried to land 42,000 pounds of pot, turned out to have been hijacked. Its real name was Sugam-34 and it was owned by Surinam Fisheries Corp. of Surinam. Eight Colombians served six-month prison terms for smuggling and then were deported.

Two Colombians later told the U.S. Consul in Bogota they were on board the vessel when it left Paramaribo, the capital of Surinam, in January 1979 headed for Venezuela. One of the crewmen said masked bandits invaded the boat, and he escaped by jumping overboard.

Last June 19, a Coast Guard cutter seized the 65-foot Venezuelan-registered fishing vessel Ivan near Puerto Rico when it was found to be carrying 66,000 pounds of marijuana. Eleven Colombian seamen were arrested.

When U.S. authorities contacted the Venezuelan government asking how the vessel came to be involved in illegal activity, the Venezuelans said the Ivan had left port on a legal fishing trip. Neither the ship nor the crew had been seen since, they said. Since U.S. officials had no information to either confirm or deny this, they accepted the Venezuelans' explanation and the Ivan was returned to Venezuela last September.

Ginley, like other DEA agents and Customs officials, gives little credence to the hijacking stories being told in court. "It's a good alibi," he said. "We can't disprove their story. They only need two or three gullible jurors and they're off." The two Colombian crewmen from the Ruth were acquitted and 16 of the 23 crew members of the Heidi were found innocent of conspiracy and smuggling charges.

"I've never seen any substantiation of these hijacking stories," said a Coast Guard officer in San Juan, Puerto Rico. "These countries that lend themselves as a flag of convenience for mafia-owned boats for the drug traffic make up these hijacking stories after the fact to hide their involvement in it and to get the boat back."

"Our suspicion is that when the boats get back to the country involved, they are sold right back to a dummy company controlled by the mafia, which is running the drug traffic. We won't know for sure until we catch one boat for the second time and so far that hasn't happened."

"I believe the great preponderance of the crew members we get up here," said Mueller, "are hired for the specific purpose of doing what they are doing. The ones who get here are not hijacked."

Referring to the smaller boats which smugglers use to off-load pot from a mother ship, usually anchored outside U.S. territorial waters, Dingfelder said, "In most cases these vessels are misused without the yacht owner's knowledge. They hire a captain to look after the boat and the captain takes it upon himself to pick up a little extra hauling pot."

In most yacht hijackings, Dingfelder said, "the boats are taken to a far removed country and sold for six figures." But few if any of these vessels have shown up in Latin America or elsewhere, authorities said.

Kelly, who has spent considerable time and money looking for his sister and her companions, is critical of the Coast Guard's search methods.

"The Coast Guard goes through the motions of a port check," he said. "But you know what that means? They just call the port captain and ask him if he's seen a vessel of this description come in."

And despite the Coast Guard's six-day surveillance of the Sandra II, the disabled 174-foot converted Navy vessel of undetermined registry, which drifted in and around the Divorsea's path, Kelly wonders why they never boarded it, questioned the lone crewman or examined the vessel's log.

The Sandra II was finally towed into Jamaica for repairs and Kelly said it was supposed to have been loaded with molasses.

The Divorsea was equipped with CB, single sideband and short-wave radios. The owner Donald McKay, 57, a divorce lawyer in Haiti, and passenger Leslie Ricketts Jr., 41, vice president of a computer firm, were experienced radio operators. But there was no radio contact with the Divorsea after it left Jacmel.

A chain of ham radio operators, the Maritime Mobile Network, called out repeatedly on different frequencies for the Divorsea for a week after it was reported missing, but got no response.

"If it were Amy Carter, you can be sure they'd be out looking," said Kelly. "But we're just little people... We're just not willing to write it off yet. You have to accept some things, but not others."

Lee Troutner, of Annapolis, Md., who takes three to four expensive boats south every year, said the pirates have prompted him to begin carrying a shotgun and handguns whenever he sails to Florida.

"They just murder you," Troutner said. "They're looking for any boat, whether it's a sports fisherman or a sailboat, going south. Mainly, they look for big, $200,000 sailboats. They wouldn't bother you so much up here, but they would when you go south."

One Can't Put Finger On Basis For CBS Ratings Race Surge

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — When all was said and done, after plotting schedule strategies and analyzing the competition, the 1979-80 prime time television competition came down to this:

"ABC will finish No. 1, CBS will finish No. 2 and NBC will finish No. 3."
The prediction came from Robert Daly, chief programmer at CBS. It seemed a reasonable prediction at the time — last October — even if CBS was being drummed at the time by ABC and NBC. If you were partial to longshots, the only decent bet was that NBC might catch up to CBS this season; but few, including CBS' Daly, expected mighty ABC to be turned out from its penthouse digs this year.

Yet, entering the second half of the season, CBS has fought to a virtual tie with ABC at the top of the A.C. Nielsen Co.'s prime time ratings list. CBS has come on since Thanksgiving, scoring weekly ratings victories in eight of nine weeks and consistently filling the Nielsen top ten with CBS programs.

The weird part of the CBS surge is that you can't quite put your finger on its cause — there were no new breakthrough shows, of the sort that put ABC at the top a few years ago (such as "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley," or "Mork and Mindy" last season). CBS' charge has been built on series that have been there all along.

The present state of the ratings competition can be explained in part by moves made by ABC, "smart" programming moves that CBS refused to make.

ABC tinkered with its hits, CBS did not. ABC split its "Happy Days"-Laverne and Shirley tandem, the two-hit duo that had led ABC to happy times. The network moved other shows. "Mork and Mindy" was lifted from its Thursday evening slot and sent to Sunday night, where it was hoped CBS' hold could be broken.

Good moves all, on paper, at least. It is conventional television wisdom that you work your strengths, use strong shows to diminish the other guy's strengths and to protect your own new programs. For some reason, though, the strategy failed ABC.

"Mork" was chased back to Thursday night by "Archie's Place," and CBS' Sunday evenings became stronger than ever, virtually beyond challenge. The splitting of "Laverne and Shirley" from "Happy Days" had the effect of all but killing "Laverne and Shirley," and leaving "Happy Days" vulnerable to a challenge.

CBS, meanwhile, sat pat. Its Sunday evening series grew in strength to become the most watched shows in prime time. CBS football coverage led into "60 Minutes," which led into "Archie's Place," which set the viewing pattern for the rest of CBS Sunday lineup — "One Day at a Time," "Alice," "The Jeffersons" and "Trapper John, M.D."

In the end, Daly's prediction will likely come true. ABC has the Winter Olympics upcoming, which is a license to make ratings points, and the gap created there may be too much for CBS to overcome.

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

In bridge, as in life, you must be prepared to take certain risks if you want to succeed. East took safety to extremes on this hand and permitted declarer to sneak home with a four spade game that should have been defeated.

The auction was routine. West attacked with the jack of diamonds—a doubtful choice, in our view. We don't like helping declarer establish his long suits if we can avoid it. Declarer rose with the ace and East followed with the four. Declarer continued with a diamond from dummy, and East was on lead. He shifted to a heart, won in the closed hand.

Since it was likely that he would have to lose a trump trick and since it was imperative to keep West off lead to prevent the king of clubs from being exposed to attack, declarer led a trump to the eight. East won the jack and could do no better than persevere with hearts. Declarer won, drew the outstanding trumps and set up two long cards in diamonds with a ruff. A trump was the entry, and both declarer's clubs disappeared on dummy's diamonds. Making five-odd.

East lost the battle for his side at the very first trick. It was essential that he get his partner on lead for a club through, so he should have kept open every possibility of an entry.

It was possible that West had a heart entry. But it was almost a sure thing that West held the ten of diamonds, since the opening lead appeared to be the top of a sequence. Therefore, East should have jettisoned the king of diamonds under the ace at trick one.

Now there is no way for declarer to establish diamonds without letting West gain the lead with the ten for a club shift that will defeat the contract. And the club shift is obvious—hearts can be attacked equally well from the East hand as from West.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JAN. 24, 1980

YOUR DAILY
Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Plans you have been working on for several days now have a good chance of being put into effect. Don't let early morning obstacles deter you from positive action.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Concern yourself with monetary matters and improve your status. Make sure bills are paid on time. Plan how to add to savings.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Take time to be with good friends you truly like. Avoid those who are hypocritical and have an eye on your assets.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Stick to plans that increase financial security. Listen to what an expert has to suggest and get fine results.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Seeking the company of good friends can prove helpful to you now, as well as to them. Try to cheer one who is in trouble.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You have a civic matter to handle but be sure you first study it from every possible angle. Plan how to add to credit.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You have some new ideas that need practical work to make them function properly. Handle correspondence wisely. Stick to the point.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get busy at whatever is of a practical nature and improve your lot in life. Be more concerned with how you handle money matters.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Keep up your end of any promises you have made to associates or there could be trouble. Do something thoughtful for others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Do whatever will bring more harmony between you and co-workers. Look up a good friend you have not seen lately.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't expect too much from a close friend now. Complete any creative work you have started.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study your home well and make any changes that will improve its appearance and function. Attend spectator sports.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Avoid friction by keeping out of conversations that don't concern you. Don't offer advice that isn't asked for.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have a flair for working with reports and statements. Slant education along such professions as accounting, court reporting, banking, etc. Give a course in psychology. Teach the importance of good health habits. "The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Drug smuggling may be bringing a return of the pirates of the Caribbean, but the dope-runners of the Pacific do not bother waylaying yachting families at sea.

Piracy is not entirely dead off the West Coast of the United States. There are rare instances of common thugs hijacking valuable boats and even killing the owners. But the big operators of the drug trade don't need the family sloop.

They have entire freighters of their own, equipped with thousands of dollars in radio gear. They'll sink the whole vessel to destroy evidence. In the words of one federal narcotics agent who works out of Southern California:

"These guys can afford to buy a million-dollar plane and abandon it after one flight; they don't have to steal some 80 grand boat, and they don't want the attention it would draw them."

Most of the maritime drug smuggling on the Pacific Coast is done with big freighters the smugglers own or lease, "mother ships" from which drugs are distributed to smaller boats far offshore, according to the Drug Enforcement Agency and the Coast Guard.

Geography is a major factor in the difference between Caribbean and Pacific Coast maritime smuggling, agents say.

"The Caribbean is a lot more hospitable to sailing and motor yachts, and is dotted with many islands where these smaller boats would be handier than a big ship," observed one agent.

"In the Pacific you're dealing with the biggest body of water on earth, distances of thousands of miles, storms, high waves. You can't island-hop overnight, the way they can down there."

A Coast Guard intelligence source speculated however that there is some drug-related boat stealing.

"We have had an increasing number of reports of smaller boats being stolen in Southern California - 20 and 30 footers. It's still not clear whether there really are more thefts or we're just getting more reports now because we're taking a more aggressive attitude toward boat thefts."

"Many of these small craft just disappear. They certainly aren't big enough to take on a marijuana run to Mexico or South America, but they could be used to meet the mother ships a couple of hundred miles offshore and ferry the cargo in to the coast. Then they could be sunk offshore."

"But that's just speculation for the time being. We don't have any evidence to back it up."

In December, 1977, the 126-foot freighter Cigale was seized off the coast of Oregon when boarders found nine tons of Thai stick marijuana in the hold. Federal agents believe the ship was operated by an organization that had smuggled more than 100 tons of marijuana into the United States in three years.

Discovery Of Planet Pluto, Only 50 Years Ago

By SANDRA L. BALMER
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Fifty years ago, a 24-year-old former wheat farmer peered far out into the solar system and electrified the science world by discovering a new planet.

Clyde Tombaugh named his discovery Pluto, after the god of the underworld. "It was a big break for me," he recalled. "At the time I had no college education, only high school."

Tombaugh had studied the stars since he was 12, growing up in rural Illinois and later Kansas. When times got tough on the farm, he took a job at the Lowell Observatory in Flagstaff, Ariz. It was there, early in 1930, that Tombaugh made photographic plates of the sky that confirmed Pluto's existence.

It was the discovery of a lifetime for Tombaugh and he launched him on a long and productive career in astronomy.

Tombaugh, 74, now is professor emeritus of astronomy at New Mexico State University. He spoke with reporters in Chicago on Monday to mark the golden anniversary of his discovery.

Even now, little has been learned about tiny Pluto. Located some 2.7 billion miles from the sun, it meanders the frigid frontier of the solar system, taking 247 Earth years to complete one orbit of the sun. It is the ninth and outermost planet. But its lopsided orbit has temporarily swung it closer to the sun than Neptune.

In 1978, discovery of a moon of Pluto helped astronomers calculate that the planet has a mass of about one-fifth that of Earth's moon and a density comparable to water, leading many astronomers to suggest that Pluto may resemble a giant methane snowball.

The search for Pluto was started early in the 20th century by Dr. Percival Lowell, an American astronomer who had calculated the path of the planet Neptune. But he found slight irregularities in the predicted orbit of Neptune — perturbations that Lowell decided could only be caused by the gravitational pull of an undiscovered planet.

Lowell started work at the Flagstaff observatory in 1906 to find his "Planet X" by photographing and comparing identical sky sections.

The theory behind his experiment was simple. A star appears relatively fixed in the night sky. But in comparison, a planet — its very name means "wanderer" — rushes along its orbital path, shifting drastically against the frozen backdrop of stars.

Lowell looked for the planet from 1905 until his death in 1916.

The search resumed in 1929, this time using two new pieces of equipment — a 13-inch photographic telescope, and a blink comparator — a device that rapidly interchanged the photographs to be compared. If a heavenly body had moved appreciably, its image would appear and disappear as the photographs were rapidly switched.

Sitting for hours at a time on a mountaintop in a dark dome peering into the sky was tedious, painstaking work, too boring for someone with a doctor's degree in astronomy. So, directors of the observatory sought a highly skilled amateur to make the plates. They chose Tombaugh.

Tombaugh said he had no idea when he took the job that he would end up exploring the distant fringes of the solar system.

"It didn't matter what they wanted me to do. Just anything to get off the farm. We got hailed out that year and were absolutely broke. When I got on that train to go to Flagstaff, I didn't have enough money for the return fare."

The original plan called for Tombaugh to make and develop the plates. An experienced astronomer would then perform the tedious task of comparing them using the comparator.

Soon, Tombaugh proved to be such a capable astronomer that he was asked to compare the plates as well. "My heart sank to my knees," Tombaugh said. Since he had made the plates, Tombaugh knew what a "starry mess" was pictured on them. Each image would have to be carefully examined. "I wasn't a bit happy," Tombaugh said of the task which made him famous.

In February 1930, after examining some 400,000 stars of the constellations of Taurus and the western portion of Gemini, Tombaugh was examining plates photographed in late January of the eastern part of the constellation. He had completed about two-thirds of the photographic field.

Suddenly, there it was. A dim object was popping in and out of the background field of stars.

"That's it!" Tombaugh remembers exclaiming. "Everything was confirmed."

The observatory director held off telling the world until further tests confirmed the discovery.

Then on March 13, 1930, the 75th anniversary of Percival Lowell's birth, the world finally learned that Tombaugh had found the mystery planet that Lowell had predicted some 30 years before.

Museum Shows Art Of Schizophrenic Patients

By BRUCE HANDLER
Associated Press Writer
RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — There's a museum here which the general public barely knows about but which contains one of the most unusual and controversial art collections in the world. It's called the Museum of Subconscious Images and features 150,000 paintings and sculptures done by schizophrenic mental patients.

Every year, psychiatrists and psychologists from many countries quietly visit the museum, which is located in this South American city's King Pedro II Psychiatric Center. There is intense professional medical debate over whether the museum's works of art are of any actual value in curing insanity.

"Through painting, we can penetrate the hermetic world of the schizophrenic," says Dr. Nise da Silva, 74, a Brazilian psychiatrist and the museum's founder and main driving force. "The schizophrenic is a disconnected person. His verbal relation to the real world is difficult," she explained. "But through images, he can express a torrent of emotions."

R.D. Laing, a renowned British psychiatrist and expert on schizophrenia, was at the Museum of Subconscious Images last year and called it "a major contribution to the scientific study of the psychotic process." And in the 1950s the late C.G. Jung, one of the giants in the development of psychiatric theory, spoke highly of paintings from the museum's collection that were sent to a psychiatric congress in Zurich.

On the other hand, traditional psychiatrists — especially disciples of Sigmund Freud — see this type of artistic expression as little more than harmless, time-passing therapy. "The mainstream of modern psychiatry still regards us as art gallery organizers," Dr. Silveira complained.

Dr. Silveira, who started the museum in 1946, makes no miraculous claims about her work. What she does say is that through art, a schizophrenic can show the so-called sane world "the tendencies toward order and organization that are hidden inside his brain."

In fact, many of the paintings at the museum — done by obviously disturbed and sometimes uncontrollable patients — stress symmetry, circles and repeated orderly designs. Others reveal concrete real-world subjects, such as flowers, horses, clowns and musical instruments.

One of the center's most talented patients once drew a picture of a man playing a piano. But first he sketched just the piano. Then, much later, he added the man, saying: "The piano needed someone."

The main purpose of the museum, as Dr. Silveira explains it, is to serve as a base for the interdisciplinary study of schizophrenia and its potential cures.

Brazil's government apparently feels this approach is valid. Money has been made available for the cataloging and restoration of paintings and sculptures in the museum's collection which have been deteriorating in dusty corners and on dusty shelves.

And Dr. Mario Santos Oreira, the director of the federal Health Ministry's National Mental Health Division, has selected a building on the grounds of the Pedro II Center, which no longer is being used, to become the permanent home for the works of the Museum of Subconscious Images.

Anniversary Of Deacon Board

The Deacon Board of Philippi Church of Christ will observe its 73rd year of service to the church Sunday at 3 p. m.

The Rev. Raymond Suggs, Associate Pastor of St. Paul Church of Christ, Ayden, and his congregation will lead the service. Deacons from various churches are invited.

Society Inducts Nineteen Students

ECU News Bureau
Nineteen outstanding students at East Carolina University have been inducted into ECU's N.C. Epsilon chapter of Alpha Delta honor society for pre-medical/pre-dental students.

Membership in Alpha Epsilon Delta is a recognition of superior academic achievement and provides opportunities for students to develop personal qualities helpful in the pursuit of their studies and careers in medical and dental fields.

Active alumni members who are practicing physicians and dentists support the society's annual scholarship program, which awards a minimum of ten $250 scholarships to medical and dental students.

The society was established at the University of Alabama in 1926 and now has chapters at 124 U.S. campuses and a membership of approximately 56,000.

The ECU chapter received two national awards at the 1978 Alpha Epsilon Delta convention in Columbia, S.C.

Among the chapter's regular activities are sponsorship of a Physician Observance Program for members and symposia for students throughout the state interested in entering medical and dental schools.

Names, parents' names and hometown addresses of the new Alpha Epsilon Delta members follow:

GREENVILLE — Sharan Singh, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. Singh.

Bleak Year For Tourism In Pacific

By RAYMOND YUEN
HONOLULU (UPI) — For thousands of Americans, dreams of a South Seas holiday this year may sadly remain just that — dreams.

The trip itself, which used to be "half the fun of going there," now is more than half the cost of any vacation in the South Pacific because of the long distances between where the tourists come from and where they want to go.

Pacific travel sources say vacationers are traveling shorter distances and using the savings on transportation for longer stays at their destinations.

Finding a ship or plane serving the far away places with the strange sounding names of Papeete, Pago Pago, Apia, Suva and Tuvalu has become a problem.

Every airline serving the Central and South Pacific — including Hawaii — has cut schedules and curtailed service while increasing fares.

Two airlines previously offered scheduled service between Honolulu and Tahiti. Now there is none. The only direct service to the Tahitian capital for Americans is from California.

Nor is there any regular passenger ship service between the mainland of the United States and Hawaii. Cruise ships which once were a regular scene at Honolulu harbor are now a rarity.

Robert MacGregor, a board member of the Hawaii Visitors Bureau, summed up the future picture of Hawaiian tourism by saying: "It's not rosy. The demand just hasn't been there."

The bureau said the winter outlook is bleak. Industry officials predict a 10 to 14 percent drop in the number of tourists coming to the 50th U.S. state this winter. One tour operator said there has been a decline of about 25 percent in room reservations compared to the same time last year.

Tourism is Hawaii's biggest industry and reaps a dollar harvest far larger than sugar and pineapple combined.

It was hard hit by the United Airlines strike and the grounding of the DC-10s although the picture improved during the summer months. But October's increase was only five percent over the previous October, with a 1.7 percent decrease in visitors from the mainland and Canada.

Officials said the increases were in visitors from Asia and the Pacific who normally don't stay as long as North American tourists, or spend as much. Thus hotel occupancy rates were slightly lower than normal during this time.

Ed Donehower of the Visitors Bureau said there was also an increase in the number of hotel rooms available in Hawaii — 5,000 more than last winter — and a drop in convention business. All this, Donehower said, has led to gloomy forecasts for 1980.

One airline official, long associated with the travel industry, said his company expects a serious drop in tourism in the coming months. The official, who asked not to be identified, said every airline serving Hawaii and the Pacific area will be forced to increase fares because of oil prices and other inflationary factors.

"The mainland-Hawaii traffic is mostly pleasure traffic," he said. "People come here for vacations, honeymoons, etc. This is a much softer market and is much more sensitive to price increases. The airlines have to get big fare increases to pay their increased operating costs — mainly fuel costs — and the pleasure-traveling public might just decide to travel elsewhere closer to home and spend the savings of getting here on the mainland vacation."

The bulk of Hawaii's tourist travel is charter and group fare travel with big discounts. The airlines have repeatedly denied they intend to eliminate these cheaper travel fares and make everybody coming to Hawaii pay the same basic one-person, one-seat fare, but the rumors persist.

Solar Heat In Victorian Home 'Easy'

By CHARLES J. ABBOTT
SIOUX CITY, Iowa (UPI) — Some days, Emily Chiarello calls it a "generation gap and family project."

But the housewife and freelance writer is convinced her solar energy project, financed by a federal grant, will be easy to complete and will mean a substantial reduction in heating bills for the family's 1893 Victorian home.

Four solar collectors — heat-gathering devices — are installed and are warming the kitchen and the TV room. Mrs. Chiarello, her husband, Frank and sons, Mario, 14, and Paul 12, now are assembling other collectors that will be hung on the steeply pitched roof of the three-story house.

"I'm trying to prove solar is now," Mrs. Chiarello said. "When the president says turn the thermostat down, I can turn it off — in those rooms."

The Chiarellos were among 10 Iowans to win Department of Energy grants for "appropriate technology," a DOE phrase for inexpensive ways to save or generate energy.

"Our house is Victorian in architecture and doesn't at first glance seem to have space for solar collectors," Mrs. Chiarello wrote in the application. "If we can prove there is a way to get them on, even with the porches and decorations, I think we can convince others to look at places for solar collectors on their houses."

"I designed it so everything would be locally available," she said. "A handyman can do it — even my 12-year-old son. He built the first one."

The base of each collector is a 4-by-8 foot sheet of plywood. A frame of 1-by-6 inch lumber is added, along with some insulation, a sheet of corrugated aluminum to absorb the heat and a cover of plastic or glass.

The family is building the collectors in the basement. A carpenter has been hired to install them.

In her grant application, Mrs. Chiarello estimated the project, including payment for the family's labor, could be completed for $6,000. The DOE fully funded the project but inflation is chewing up the budget.

There also have been some changes in materials to increase the efficiency of the system.

If the costs of family labor are dropped, Mrs. Chiarello said, the project will be completed within the budget.

"Oh, I'm sure we will," she said, reflecting on the progress. "Mine is a tremendously big house and the efficiency has gone up, so we probably could have used fewer (collectors)."

Two heating methods are being used in the project. One involves mounting collectors on the side of the house to directly heat rooms. The other will use the roof-mounted collectors to store heat for use at night.

"Now in the project, we're trying to get the array of six that will go on the roof," she said.

The wall-mounted collectors are placed near windows. A fan blows warm air from the collectors into rooms through a vent near a window.

Originally, the collectors were expected to heat 260 square feet, but they were modified to heat 500 square feet, Mrs. Chiarello said.

A differential thermostat is the "key" to operating the collectors. When temperatures in the collectors reach 80 degrees, the thermostat turns on the fan and brings the hot air into the house.

"It keeps it about 70 degrees," Mrs. Chiarello said.

Warm air from the roof-mounted collectors will be vented into the basement and into 13 tons of rocks. A loop of copper pipe will be run through the rock pile and will transfer the heat into the hot water system now used to heat the house.

"I think I'm going to be able to shut it (the furnace) off during the sunlight hours," Mrs. Chiarello said, estimating the heating bill could be cut by one-third.

The family has until September 1981 to complete the project, which Mrs. Chiarello said is important for several reasons.

"We could not afford to stay in the house if we didn't switch to solar," she said. "And I believe if we don't cut our dependence on foreign oil, we really are going to lose our national freedom."
