Local Sale Of Home Heating Fuel Declines From Last Year

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A survey of Greenville area oil distributors indicates the sale of home heating fuel is down from last year.

Company spokesmen attribute the decline to a mild winter, conservation efforts on the part of home owners, and a switch to other fuels, such as natural gas, as well as an increased use of wood-burning stoves and fireplaces.

W. L. Allen Jr. of W. L. Allen Oil Co. said, "our sales are down, I would say in the neighborhood of 10 to 15 percent."

Allen cited three things as contributing to the decline. "The weather...when it's mild, it's easy to cut back. The next thing is the price. People are just cutting back and staying cooler," because of the high cost of oil products, which local oil jobbers have no control over.

"The third thing," according to Allen, "people are using alternate types of heating."

In the future, Allen suggested, "I think you'll see a general dropping of usage per house. We're being taught to conserve, and we've got to do it."

However, he added that, "sales really jump when it gets really cold."

"Our situation is that we are down between 8 and 10 percent," Charles Gaskins of Quality Oil Co. reported.

He also attributed the drop to, "a mild winter... conservation...and of course, some change to other heating appliances and other fuel."

According to Leon Moore of Leon L. Moore Oil Co. "we're off around 40 per cent...due to the weather, plus people are trying to conserve."

He said many households are turning to wood as an alternate fuel, while, "some have gone to natural gas.

"Wood, if you've got access to the wood, is all right," Moore said. "But if you have to go out and buy it, it's expensive."

Ralph Sullivan of Moore-King-Sullivan Oil Co., and Tom Carawan Jr. of Carawan Oil Co., said their sales are also off, although Jimmy Sutton of Sutton's Service Center, reported, "ours are running a little ahead."

All of the dealers said they have a 100 gallon minimum delivery policy, although most indicated that lesser amounts are delivered at times if the delivery can be made in connection with servicing their regular route customers.

"If we're in the neighborhood, we'll deliver whatever they want," Gaskins said.

"Delivery costs are just so high," Sutton explained, dealers can't afford to make small deliveries and at the same time offset salary, fuel and equipment costs. "Some charge a $10 delivery fee," he said. "But I don't think that's right, so we just don't," make small deliveries.

According to the Greenville Utilities Commission, the "degree days heating" from July 1, through December 31, 1979, totaled 1,079, as compared with 1,105 for the same period the previous year. "Degree days heating" (or cooling, as the case may be) is an indicator of how hot or cold the weather has been.

Spokesmen explained that the index is based on the assumption that at 65 degrees, no heating or cooling is required in a home. The high and low temperatures for a given day are recorded and averaged, and the difference between the average and the 65 degree "norm", represents the degree days heating or cooling, as the case may be.

For example, if the average between the high and low temperature for a given day is 35 degrees, then that would represent 30 degree days heating.

The "degree days cooling" for the last six months of 1979 totaled 1126 as compared with 1114 in 1978.

At the end of 1979, 24,613 electric meters were in service, as compared with 23,732 at the end of December 1978.

For the first six months of this fiscal year GUC had purchased 323 million kilowatthours of electricity for resale to its customers, as compared with 314 million KWH during the same period in 1978.

At the end of 1979, GUC had 4,326 gas meters in service, as compared with 4,265 the year before. During the first six months of this fiscal year, GUC purchased 498 million cubic feet of gas for sale to its customers, as compared to 372.7 million cubic feet bought during the same period a year earlier.

But Militant Students Take Issue On Statement

Bani-Sadr Says He Will Settle Embassy Siege

By United Press International

All but claiming victory in Iran's first presidential elections, Finance Minister Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said Saturday that as president he will quickly settle the "minor" siege at the U.S. Embassy and send military aid to the rebels fighting Soviet troops in Afghanistan.

In interviews with a French newspaper and reporters in Tehran, Bani-Sadr called the 84-day-old occupation of the U.S. Embassy a "minor affair... that easily can be solved."

Exuding confidence as his lead in the eight-way presidential race mushroomed to 80 percent of the tabulated vote, the 46-year-old Sorbonne-educated economist also told the French newspaper Le Matin that Iran feels threatened by Soviet troops in neighboring Afghanistan and will aid Moslem rebels there "with all means possible, including military means."

But the militants holding 50 Americans hostage in the U.S. Embassy appeared to take issue with Bani-Sadr's assertion that the 12-week-old crisis could be quickly settled.

In a statement of their own, broadcast by Tehran radio and monitored in London by the BBC, the militants said the United States — not the Soviet Union — was Islam's "enemy number one" and that the hostages would not go free until the deposed shah was extradited to Iran from his Panamanian exile to face trial and certain death.

Tehran radio reported that Bani-Sadr was leading Friday's elections to become Iran's first president by a margin of more than 5-to-1 over his closest rival, Culture Minister and clergy candidate Hassan Habibi.

As of 11:30 a.m. EST, BaniSadr had captured some 80 percent of the vote in 13 cities and had more than 5 million votes to Habibi's 1.1 million, the radio said. No other rival in the race, including Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, even came close.

Although Tehran Radio said that final results were not expected until Monday, it appeared that Bani-Sadr, a relative moderate and a close confident of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, was assured of victory.

Khomeini himself spent another day recuperating from heart trouble in a Tehran hospital, where the radio said he was examined Saturday by two heart specialists flown in from Lausanne, Switzerland.

For the first time, one of his Iranian physicans gave a Paris newspaper a detailed account of the 79-year-old leader's health.

"Contrary to what has been written in the foreign press, (Khomeini) did not suffer a heart attack," cardiologist Rachid Massumi told the newspaper Le Monde. "He suffered a coronary insufficiency which was first manifested 10 days ago, provoking a potentially dangerous situation."

For all the fanfare associated with the first presidential elections in Iranian history, the job itself will carry with it only as much power as Khomeini chooses to give the man who fills it.

Despite Bani-Sadr's apparent confidence that he will be able to solve the embassy crisis, the decision to free ththe hostages still rests with Khomeini, who has sided with the embassy militants in the past.

Bani-Sadr learned that lesson once already when he was dismissed as foreign minister and moved over to the finance ministry for clashing with the militants in the early stages of the crisis.

The descrepancy between his comments and those of the emassy militants indicated that another confrontation was in the offing — one that was likely to measure the as yet uncertain powers of the presidency.

But for the moment, BaniSadr, himself the son of an ayatollah, was exuding confidence.

Dr. East Is Candidate For The U.S. Senate

BY JOYCE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University Professor John P. East announced his candidacy for the U. S. Senate during a press conference Saturday morning, and unveiled a campaign that accuses incumbent Senator Robert Morgan of voting to weaken the country.

In opening remarks he said, "I always like to call the class to order. Normally I take roll, but it looks like we're all here. I don't need to do that," he sayed.

"This is a crucial election year, and it will set the tone and direction of American politics, not only for a decade, but for the balance of this century," said East.

East contends that Robert Morgan's positions on the critical issues affecting North Carolina and America differ from his own. "It will be on these differences that you — the voters of North Carolina — will have a clear choice in selecting a United States Senator."

East said Morgan has "contributed heavily" to "the rapid erosion of America's traditionally strong position in the foreign policy and defense areas." My opponent contributed heavily to this policy of weakness which in recent history began with our giving up the Panama Canal." East said Morgan voted for the legislation, costing the American taxpayers millions of dollars, to fund giving up the Canal.

"The erosion of America's position in the World is related to a lessening of our defense capabilities. Not so long ago, America enjoyed worldwide defense superiority." According to East, our leaders are now accepting inferiority. "For example, my opponent voted to delete funding for the construction of the vitally needed B-1 bomber."

As a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Morgan refused to join with the majority of that committee in urging the Senate to reject Salt II Treaty, said East. "Mr. Morgan vacillated and refused to take a stand. He merely voted 'Present'. I consider that weak leadership.

"Mr. Morgan's votes in these crucial areas have sent the wrong signals to the world

Big Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp. says a combination of rising world oil prices and a sharp increase in refining and marketing earnings overseas has sparked a 60 percent gain in fourth-quarter earnings that gave the company 1979 earnings of more than $4 billion.

An even bigger fourth-quarter jump was recorded by Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, where increased Alaskan oil production at sharply higher prices resulted in a 174 percent earnings increase to $451 million, against $164.5 million.

Sun Co. Inc. said Friday that fourth-quarter earnings were up by 107 percent at $222.9 million, against $107.6 million a year ago.

Sen. Morgan Seeks Re-election

LILLINGTON, N.C. (UPI) — Sen. Robert B. Morgan declared his candidacy for reelection Saturday, saying his first six years in Congress have given him the savvy and clout to do a good job.

"I believe I know the system now and that I have compiled a solid, consistent record," Morgan told supporters gathered at a dinner for him at Harnett Central High School, near his hometown of Lillington.

He currently faces no opposition for the Democratic nomination in the May 6 primary, although Insurance Commissioner John Ingram is said to be considering a challenge. John P. East, an East Carolina University professor, announced Saturday he would seek the Republican nomination to Morgan's Senate seat.

Morgan gave many reasons why he should return to the Senate.

He said he has consistently pushed for a strong defense while serving as a member of the Armed Services Committee. He said that push needs to be continued in the 1980s.

His membership in the Senate Banking Committee also is important, he said, because it helps him in his fight to bring fiscal responsibility to the federal government.

He said he opposes big government and acts that help it proliferate, such as his vote against the creation of a federal Department of Education.

He also said he has been watching for North Carolina interests in the Capitol.

"Tobacco has been under attack in Washington for years but those who would like to see it go away have not been successful," he said. "I have worked with the other members of our state delegation and with members from other tobacco states to defend it from efforts that would have seriously hurt our farmers.

"...In textiles, in banking, in housing and in a hundred other business, I have been asked by North Carolina for help, and I have tried to help if I felt the effort was in accord with the national interest," he added.

He said that in the past five years he has introduced 63 bills, co-sponsored 241 others and co-sponsored 152 amendments.

A Young Man's Ingenuity

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — A young man in North Sumatra decided a quick way to get rich would be to get married. And that's what he did — 121 times.

Police said Saturday the unidentified 27-year-old man married the women over the past six years for their dowries after attracting them with black magic supplied by a "wedding specialist."

The modern-day Casanova told police he still has four wives he plans to divorce and could remember only 28 of the 121 women he married.

The man is a Moslem, police said, and married according to Moslem laws. His divorces were carried out in the presence of Moslem religious authorities.

Police said all the wives came from the same area.

Mrs. Brown is completing her first two-year term on the school board is seeking a four-year tenure in the May 6 elections.

A native of Greenville, Mrs. Brown commented, "I believe that my background, training and experience working in the schools of Greenville, plus approximately two years serving on the school, board equipts me to serve another term in the best interest of a sound education program for all children."

Mrs. Brown attended Greenville schools. She earned her undergraduate degree from Howard University and her M.A. from Columbia University in adminstration. She has also done graduate studies at Western Reserve University, A.&T. State University, and East Carolina University.

Hijacker Has N. C. Criminal Record

By United Press International

A man accused of hijacking a Delta Air Lines flight to Cuba had been convicted twice for crimes in North Carolina, law officers said Saturday.

In addition, flight attendant Mary Jane McKee of Raleigh, N.C., was one of the 65 persons taken hostage when suspected hijacker Samuel Alden Ingram Jr. demanded to be taken to Iran and then to Cuba. Miss McKee emerged from the incident unharmed and now is at her father's Chapel Hill, N.C., home.

Police records in Charlotte, show Ingram, 29, was arrested in 1971 on a charge of forging a check. At the time he was a student at the University of North Carolina-Charlotte, the records indicated.

Two months after his arrest Ingram was arrested again on a charge of failure to show up in court to face the first charge. He couldn't make the appearance because he was in the Fulton County jail in Atlanta, facing another charge.

Later in 1971 Ingram was sentenced to two years in prison on the forged check charge. He was paroled in May 1972.

But just two months later Ingram was in trouble again, this time for the June 28, 1972, robbery of $2,400 from a Charlotte branch of Wachovia Bank and Trust Co.

FBI agent Glenn Scott said Ingram was arrested in Columbia, S.C., in July 1972 and was convicted of a federal bank robbery charge in September 1972.

He was sentenced to 15 years in prison, Scott said. He said he didn't know how long Ingram served in prison or where he served time.

Authorities say Ingram was accompanied by his wife and two small daughters when he reportedly commandeered the Atlanta-to-New York flight while it was over Greensboro, N.C.

He said he wanted to go to Iran, but when he was told the L-1011 couldn't fly overseas he directed that it go to Cuba. At Havana's airport, he engaged in lengthy talks with officials, during which time the 65 passengers sneaked off the jet.

Fourteen hours after the hijacking began, Ingram gave up.

Miss McKee, 26, was one of the attendants on the flight when the hijacking occurred. After the incident ended the flight continued to New York. From there she flew back to her parent's home in Chapel Hill, arriving early Saturday morning.

Wants Spies To Be Sent Back

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina told delegates to the Southern Republican Leadership Conference Saturday that the "1,500 KGB agents working in the United States" should be ordered back to Russia immediately.

A participant in a panel discussion of foreign policy, Helms joined other Republicans, including three presidential contenders, at the two-day conference in criticizing policies supported by the Carter Administration and past and present Democratic congresses.

"There are today 1,500 KGB agents working in the United States," the senator said, "and the FBI knows who they are and where they are.

"The time has come to give the FBI the authority to do something about it," Helms said. "Order all those KGB agents to go back to the Soviet Union, not tomorrow but today."

Helms, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, also told his fellow Republicans that "it's time we stayed on a SALT-free diet" and said U.S. participation in the Moscow Olympics "would be condoning what the Soviet Union has done in Afghanistan."

The senator's criticism of Russia also included an endorsement of the grain embargo, but he said the embargo did not go far enough.

"I support the grain embargo, but we should do more. We have got to stop sending everything of value to the Soviet Union," he said. "We must realize when we see the bear's teeth, he's not smiling at us."

Helms' discussion of Russia turned to praise when he spoke of his friend, Alexander Solzhenitsyn. He called the Soviet dissident and Nobel Prize winner "a great American" and said Solzhenitsyn had warned him that communists hope to dominate the world.

Iranian-American Duo Victims Of Runaround

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Robin Downes and Hamid Mozafaripour were planning to stay in Canada about 20 minutes, but the Raleigh woman and her Iranian husband have spent eight months trapped in Iran instead.

It all started last May, when Robin, 26, took Hamid, 26, to meet her father who lives in Hartford, Conn. The two planned to marry July 14, 1979, and went to get permission from Robin's father, William Downes.

"While he (Hamid) was here he said, 'I would like to see Niagara Falls,'" Downes said. "And I, like a dummy, said the Canadian side is even more spectacular. I never gave a thought to his passport."

So the couple drove to Canada and 20 minutes later were unable to get back into the United States.

U.S. authorities would not let Hamid back into the country without both a passport and a valid student visa. The Iranian had neither.

"When I crossed the border, I didn't realize I needed my visa," Hamid said from his parents' Tehran home Friday.

Canadian officials reluctantly gave him 30 days to work out his problems with the United States.

During that time, Hamid had relatives in Raleigh break into his house, find his passport and fly it to Buffalo, N.Y., where Robin picked it up. As an American, she could cross the border freely.

But he still needed a student visa and U.S. authorities would not grant him one because he was not enrolled then in school. And when he presented evidence to the U.S. consulate in Toronto that he had been in school, he was told it would take three months to process his application.

The couple even got married when a U.S. official suggested things might be easier if the two were married.

The 30 days ended and Hamid had to fly back to Iran. Robin returned to her job in Raleigh, where she gathered all the paperwork necessary for Hamid's visa and traveled with it to the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

After she reached the country, the Iranian government confiscated her U.S. passport, insisted she would have to convert to Islam, remarry Hamid in an Islamic ceremony and get an Iranian passport.

Finally, on Nov. 3, the U.S. Embassy called Hamid's home to say his visa was ready. Hamid said it was raining that day and his car was being repaired so he waited until Nov. 4 — the day 500 Iranians stormed the American embassy.

"Nobody wants to help us," Robin said Friday in a telephone interview from Tehran. "They just give us the runaround."

The couple's efforts to escape through the U.S. Embassy in Pakistan were thwarted twice — once by the storming of the embassy there on Nov. 21 and again by the Soviet invasion of neighboring Afghanistan.

"We've just been waiting to see what happens with the hostage situation in Iran and what goes on with the Russians and the United States," Robin said.

Sun is the nation's 10th-largest oil company, and Sohio is ranked 14th.

Exxon's 1979 profits of $4.3 billion, up 55 percent from $2.8 billion in 1978 made it the first U.S. industrial company to earn $4 billion in a year.

But Chairman Clifton C. Garvin said the world's largest oil company's earnings should be judged by the investment needed to generate the profits.

The company's projected 1980 outlay of $7.5 billion on energy development and other major projects is up by nearly $1 billion from 1979 and is "only a fraction of what we think we'll have to spend" over the next few years, Garvin said.

Easing Of Restraints On CIA Urged

By DONALD LAMBRO

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd urged Saturday that restraints on the CIA be eased so the agency can effectively mount intelligence operations in response to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

At the same time, Byrd charged that Republicans calling for a tax cut are living "in a dream world, if they think they can reduce taxes, balance the budget and boost defense spending all at the same time."

President Carter called during his State of the Union address for removal of "unwarranted restraints" on intelligence gathering.

"The pendulum has swung too far," Byrd agreed, in the direction of curtailing CIA activities following the discovery of past abuses.

"We have to remove some of the restraints that have crippled our intelligence activities," especially in light of Soviet aggression, he told a Saturday news conference.

Byrd suggested reducing the number of committees the CIA must report to, voiding Freedom of Information requests that impinge on national security and making at a crime to reveal names of CIA operatives where it would jeopardize national security. Legislation to that effect is in the works.

On another subject, Byrd was critical of his GOP colleagues for offering a resolution last week calling on President Carter to withdraw the SALT II treaty.

"It was clearly intended to embarrass the president," he told reporters at a news conference. "The president can't withdraw the treaty" once it has been placed before the Senate for ratification, he said.

Carter has asked that action on the treaty be postponed in light of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Byrd said he supported President Carter's call for renewed registration in preparation for a possible draft of young men, but wished to study the president's proposal more carefully.

He urged general bipartisan support of the president in foreign policy.

"I think it would be unfortunate if the Soviet Union got the impression that we were divided," he said.

On taxes, Byrd said a cut should not be ruled out but, "We can't have it all. We are going to have to pick and choose."

If there is a tax cut this year, he said, "It ought to be an anti-inflationary tax cut," adding — "perhaps we should consider a freeze on the Social Security tax."

Byrd predicted Congress will enact an energy bill, utility coal conversion legislation, youth employment assistance, regulatory reform, and catastrophic health insurance, in addition to an oil windfall profits tax.

East Candidate For Senate...

— the signals of weakness and appeasement, and this in turn has led to such turmoil and crisis as we have seen in Iran and Afghanistan."

Although East said he doesn't like labels, he is a Republican (conservative) candidate and much of his campaign financing will probably come from the North Carolina Congressional Club, a nonpartisan conservative organization.

"At home, government policies have weakened our economy. Inflation is a cruel burden to American's wasteful spending and has contributed to an inflation rate pusing 15 percent.

"Finally the government continues to harass two of North Carolina's most respected and vital institutions: our education system and our tobacco industry." The "unwarrented" attacks on the University of North Carolina by HEW must be met and overcome, according to East. "The anti-tobacco crusade funded by millions of tax dollars and supported by HEW, must be challenged and defeated.

East said he felt it appropriate to announce his campaign on ECU campus because, "This school has been good to me.' It has given me more than I could ever return."

During the question and answer session, East said he opposes the draft and would like to hear evidence along the way. "First, we would have to admit the error of pardoning the draft evaders, and then establish military need." He said. " I would be opposed to drafting women," when asked how he felt about this issue.

When asked where he stood on the Equal Rights Admendment, East said he is opposed to an amendment as the proper way to obtain equal rights. "I think it will create more problems than it would solve. But I clearly support the idea of equal opportunity for women."

East, an Illinois native, has been a faculty member in the Political Science Dept. since July 1964. He said he will still make Greenville his home if he wins the nomination.

The administration has approved of and given support to East for his campaign. East will not teach in summer school, and he will take a leave of absence for the fall semester.

Offers To Buy Shares

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Bancshares of North Carolina Inc. announced Friday that it is offering to purchase up to 70,000 shares of its common stock at a price of $7 per share.

Bancshares, the parent company of the Bank of North Carolina, N.A., said it will mail tender offer material to its shareholders sometime around Feb. 6.

The initial offer expires March 7.

Charles F. Merrill, president of the bank and the parent company, said Bancshares had a consolidated net income of $3.6 million, or $1.71 per share, for the year ended Dec. 31, compared to 1978 totals of $3.5 million and $1.64 a share.

Merrill said 1979 income before extraordinary credit was 44 percent higher than in 1978.

Net income for the fourth quarter of last year was $553,000 or 27 cents per share, compared to $1.2 million and 53 cents a share for the fourth quarter of the previous year.

In 1978, nearly seven million cattle from more than 270,000 U.S. herds were blood-tested for brucellosis, a contagious disease causing abortion in cattle.

Marines Hit Cape Cod

By WILLIAM POOLE

SANDWICH, Mass. (UPI) — A battalion of Marines dressed against the frigid cold invaded Cape Cod from the sea Saturday and fought their way inland without firing a single shot or getting their feet wet.

Their mission? Keep warm.

About 1,900 leathernecks from the 36th Marine Amphibious Unit from Camp Lejeune, N.C., staged the mock amphibious invasion on scenic Scussett Beach to begin three days of cold weather war games.

"The exercise," said Marine spokesman Maj. Thomas Hayden "is designed to train men and test clothing and equipment under cold weather conditions."

Dozens of Cape Cod residents bundled themselves against the freezing temperatures and blowing winds and watched as the first wave of Marines hit the beach in amphibious tractors shortly after 9 a.m.. Smaller groups of Marines were flown farther inland by helicopter.

The amphibious tractors — painted white, brown and yellow to blend in with snow — delivered the Marines beyond the crashing of the waves.

In single file — to keep from damaging the delicate beach ecology — the Marines swarmed out of the vehicles. Many of them plopped down on their bellies and inched their way through the sand firing make-believe bullets at imaginary targets — one of them a beach house.

"We're disappointed there's not any snow. It's cold enough. Each individual Marine is going to have to deal with that. Each has had at least 278 hours of cold weather training," said Warrant Officer Russ Thurman, of Waterville, N.M., public affairs officers for the amphibious unit.

Many of the Marines were wearing Norwegian manufactured cold weather gear.

Some of them were wearing so-called "Mickey Mouse Boots" — heavily insulated to withstand temperatures of 40 to 60 degrees below zero.

"This is practice today. It's like practice for the Super Bowl," said Thurman.

The exercise was planned more than one year ago and was unrelated to the Iranian crisis and the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Hayden said the invasion of Cape Cod was a prelude to NATO exercise planned somewhere in northern Europe later this winter. When and where in Europe the exercises will be held is classified information.

Once they secured the beach, the Marines loaded into the highly-maneuverable amphibious tractors and were transported to nearby Camp Edwards for more war games.

VEPCO Earnings Down In 1979

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Virginia Electric & Power Co. officials say the utility's earnings dropped by 3.6 percent last year, and its per-share earnings were down 13 percent.

Net income dropped from $203.9 in 1978 to $196.5 in 1979, and earnings per share of common stock dropped from $1.88 in 1978 to $1.63 last year.

Found Before Tragedy Struck

The Greene Street bridge over the Tar River was closed to traffic last week when it was found that major repairs were needed to make the bridge safe.

The Department of Transportation ordered the bridge closed Monday afternoon and it was out-of-service for several days.

Workmen installed steel pilings to provide new support for the shifting bridge, and DOT officials said it would be safe as it ever was when the work was completed.

We are fortunate that the damage was found and corrected before some disaster occurred.

We must remember, though, that the Greene Street bridge is an old structure and someday it must be replaced.

Dual lane bridges on Memorial Drive and the Eastern bypass provide access around the city, but the Greene Street bridge is still a heavy carrier of traffic.

Plans call for a new bridge across the Tar at Pitt Street, and continued use of the Greene Street bridge with each carrying traffic one-way.

Wouldn't it be sensible to get serious about construction of the Pitt Street bridge? It is needed now for smooth traffic flow through central Greenville. Its construction would take some of the traffic load off the Greene Street bridge, perhaps giving it a longer life. Finally when the Greene Street bridge has to be torn out and replaced, an alternate bridge would be available to carry traffic through the area.

New Jail, Need A School

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The folks up here in Raleigh insist that local governments take better care of the criminals than of school children, a local school board chairman told a legislative study committee the other day.

"We had a fine jail; nothing wrong with it," said Dudley Robbins of Pender County. "But Raleigh decided we needed a new one."

So, says Robbins, the "Pender Hilton" was constructed. Meanwhile, a fire had destroyed one of the schools and 15 mobile classrooms were pressed into use, forming "the biggest educational trailer park in North Carolina".

So the school board took the old jail and turned it into office space for central staff so other space could be cleared to use for special school programs. "We would have used the jail for classrooms, but that would have made too much truth of student complaints that school is like jail," Robbins said.

Robbins was one of a group of citizens urging the committee to take action in the next session of the General Assembly to put a $600 million bond issue on the election schedule statewide.

Unfair?

It became apparent during that committee hearing that there is something basically unfair about a statewide bond issue which sees the money distributed to local school districts based upon population rather than need.

Obviously some of the poor counties, particularly in mountain or Coastal Plains communities, lack the tax base to finance major programs, and have a history of lagging behind while the more urban, wealthy counties have moved strongly forward.

Yet equal distribution is the only legal way to handle bond money, say officials of the State Department of Public Instruction, and it is the only realistic way to gain political support in the populous counties.

Still A Chance

With the 1980 census gearing up to start shortly, some population specialists in state government say there is still a chance, however slim, that North Carolina will move up to 10th place nationally, edging Massachusetts aside.

Results of the 1970 census surprised the experts with data showing a much stronger trend toward people moving into North Carolina than had been suspected, and a reversal of the trend to move out of the state hunting work "up North."

There is evidence that population change has continued to hold sway, and if it has grown stronger even than the experts predicted it would, the figures will hold some surprises.

BILL NOBLITT

Meanwhile, those running the nose-count are pushing to locate the rural and inner-city poor traditionally overlooked in the census process. Success on both fronts could boost the state over six million and into a more prominent national position.

The change is more than one of pride: another seat in Congress, a more favorable position as a market to industry and commerce, and increased federal funds for a host of federal aid programs would result.

Sunday Morning Notes

R. H. Daniel of Carolina Leaf Tobacco Co. came across a clipping from an old newspaper while visiting his brother in Wilson recently.

The clipping is over a century old and he sent it to "The Daily Reflector" office.

The clipping is from the "Wilson Advance" and carries a Jan. 9, 1880 date.

It concerns a fire which occurred "in our neighboring town, Greenville, about a week ago."

"Those who lost by the fire are P. Pattrick & Son, two stores, no insurance; M. G. Emid, drugs and medicines, no insurance; W. H. Horne, goods badly damaged and broken, insured; W. H. Jarvis, a store, warehouse, and nearly all of his goods, no insurance; R. A. Tyson, entire stock of goods, fully insured; Alfred Forbes, two stores, a warehouse, several bales of cotton and a quantity of corn, not insured, and his entire stock of goods and another store badly damaged, insured.

J. G. Rawls & Bro., jewelry; R. Moore, a large dwelling, insured; M. R. Lang, furniture and goods damaged, insured; T. R. Cherry & Co., one store, insured; N. B. Anderson, goods damaged, no insurance; Col. E. C. Yellowley, one store; Dr. C. A. Swindell, medicines; W. Shelburn, photographing material, no insurance; C. A. White, four stores and goods damaged, insured; L. G. Heilbroner, goods damaged.

James Long, goods damaged, no insurance; H. Morris & Bro., goods badly damaged, insured; D. Lichtenstein & Co., goods damaged; J. B. Higgs, goods damaged, no insurance."

The story concluded, "It is impossible to give a true estimate of the loss occasioned by the fire, but it is thought to be not less than $25,000."

The front of the Sherlock Restaurant—the former Olde Towne Inne — is being torn off for remodeling purposes.

Underneath workmen found a tarnished plaque.

It proclaimed the building Greenville's Municipal Building and carried the date 1909.

There aren't many around who recall when the municipal building was located in the block of Fifth Street between Evans and Cotanche, but it was there.

Next door was the fire station and behind both was the city's jail, a building which is still standing.

It was all turned into commercial property when the Municipal Building and fire station were built on Fifth between Greene and Washington Streets.

The ancient plaque uncovered by workmen is evidence enough that the Municipal Building was once further down the street.

Other Editors Say Plastic Plague

(Greensboro Daily News)

Knowing who paid cash on the barrelhead and who strung a line of credit was once the way to separate the wise from the foolish. That's no longer possible.

Even people who used to borrow money to buy only two things — cars and houses — now pay on credit. And they use a credit card to make their purchases.

Surveyors of the American scene postulate that a day will come when we will buy nothing with cash, when everything is put on those little cards and paid for at the end of the month, or at the end of the quarter, or the end of the year, when the cumulative interest rate on the blasted things has climbed to 18 percent.

That day has not dawned, but it's coming. Sixty percent of all families used credit cards in 1977, up from 50 percent in 1970, according to the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research.

At that rate, all of us will be using credit cards by the first decade of the next century.

If there is anything troubling about credit-card fever, it's in who uses them and how. Older heads of household, college-educated people and childless couples who use credit cards do so for convenience most of the time.

When the bill for their purchases comes at the end of the month, they pay it, thus avoiding interest charges. Younger heads of household, families with children and people without a college degree are the ones who buy with a credit card and then defer payment until interest mounts up on the bill.

In other words, those with the most to lose are the ones who lose the most, thanks to credit cards.

Yet, even as more people use credit cards and buy more and more with them, we keep seeing studies saying that consumer confidence is down, that interest rates are thought to be rising ever upward and that now is not a good time to buy and tomorrow is the worse.

Could it be that credit cards supply the ingredient necessary to sustain the illusion that we are not really paying for what we buy? Do we hand over that piece of plastic to avoid looking into our wallets for money that isn isn't there? And do we perform that ritual to avoid thinking about how little money we have or how much our desires are costing us?

Are not credit cards the simplest — but most treacherous — tools we have to make our inflation-battered lives bearable today even though we know tomorrow will thereby be made all the worse?

Costly Pauses In Play

THE INSIDE REPORT

U.S. Nuclear Blind Spot

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The surprising delay in test-firing a new 40-kiloton warhead designed for a Poseidon missile-firing submarine is just one striking illustration that the Soviet move into the oil-rich Persian Gulf area has not yet weakened anti-nuclear forces ensconsed inside the Carter administration.

Equally worrisome is the tenacious holding action by powerful environmentalists against congressional demands for faster production of weapons-grade nuclear materials to carry out Jimmy Carter's pledge to "modernize" NATO's nuclear weapons.

The unpublicized delay of the relatively low-yield Poseidon warhead test has now lasted more than five weeks. During that time, the warhead that is designed to "rehabilitate" part of the submarine leg of the U.S. nuclear triad — land, air and water — has been resting quietly in its underground cradle at the Nevada test grounds. But the president has not yet signed the order that he alone can sign giving permission for the underground test.

At stake here is nothing approaching American contemplation actually to fire in anger the Poseidon or any other intercontinental ballistic missile. Far from it. At stake is whether the U.S. deterrent, particularly now that the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT II) has been at least temporarily shelved by Soviet agression, is to be kept in top working order.

The president is being pressured by his own environmentalists and other powerful anti-nuclear forces, including penny-pinching bookkeepers in his Office of Management and Budget to go slow on testing. But the Soviet Union is in the midst of highly productive underground testing that proceeds at a rate at least twice the U.S. rate. So long as detente was enthroned and Washington and Moscow at least appeared in agreement over future limits on strategic arms, this was politically saleable.

Today, however, it is not. Long knives on Capitol Hill are being sharpened to whittle down the power of the Council on Environmental Quality (CEQ), of the president's Office of Science and Technology Policy and of lesser administration officials, some on the National Security Council staff. These officials were hired long before Carter's eyes were opened by his own admission) by the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Thus, in a little-noted, year-end report a House-Senate conference committee warned that unless the production of weapons-grade nuclear fuel is drastically increased, the U.S. will be unable to carry out its commitments to modernize nuclear forces in Western Europe or to build warheads for the new MX missile in this country.

The conferees on the nuclear weapons program authorization bill were blunt: "(We) are concerned that billions of dollars may be spent to procure delivery systems which cannot be armed because sufficient funds have not been committed to testing or because critical decisions have not been made to produce sufficient quantities of special nuclear materials."

Their demand: that Carter immediately reactivate a Hanford, Wash., reprocessing plant known as PUREX. Working with a nuclear power reactor next door that would supply plutonium, PUREX would manufacture fuel for the new nuclear weapons.

But the latest version of a draft presidential report now circulating inside the administration makes it all but certain that Carter is being talked out of reactivating the PUREX plant. Why? Because, the president is being told, to do so would contradict three years of Carter preachments against reprocessing plants that might proliferate weapons-grade materials for the building of nuclear bombs.

The congressional conferees who signed the compromise report calling for reopening the PUREX plant are not weak-kneed innocents. They include the chairman of the armed services committees, Sen.

FINDING GOD'S LOVE

Recently a poster displayed by a large charitable organization during a drive for funds carried the picture of a healthy, vigorous boy carrying an emaciated and crippled companion in his arms. And beneath the picture were the words, "He ain't heavy, he's my brother."

It certainly makes a difference when we love people. We can bear heavy burdens in their behalf and do it without complaint. Like the boy on the poster we can declare that the burden is nothing — what difference does a little extra weight make?

If we could only learn to think of God in terms of love, we would think of Him as Jesus thought of Him. Many people look upon God as a punisher. But He is not. He is love personalized. And because of that He bears the weight of our unworthiness as if it were nothing at all, and thereby enables us to bear the burdens of those we love without complaint.

Domestic Issues Sidetracked

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — One effect of the uncertain situation in southern Asia has been to divert attention from domestic and international economic problems and perhaps even to lessen them in some ways.

The latter effect has been illustrated by the stock market's strength in recent days, with shares of defense suppliers rising sharply in anticipation of more and bigger contracts.

On Wednesday, with the President's stronger military policy known in advance of his State of the Union address, Boeing jumped $3.25 to $66 a share, General Dynamics $3 to $76, and Raytheon $3.75 to $80.62.

While defense contractors might stand to benefit directly from the President's new stance, there was also a discernable undercurrent of feeling that while economic crises failed to scare the nation into changing its ways, a military crisis might.

For the President, the challenge to the Soviet Union might provide a rationale for budget deficits likely to be more than projected, might allay anger about continued inflation and even higher interest rates, and might limit criticisms of restraints in domestic social programs.

It also shifts some of the focus of upcoming political debates from the economic record of the Carter administration, which is vulernable to attack, to the wisdom of pursuing certain courses in the future.

At best, the Carter administration economic record is mixed. Jobs were provided and a recession was averted. But the budget was never balanced in spite of promises, and high inflation and interest rates probably took away more than was gained by most families.

Among the most damaging criticisms have been that the administration never defined a consistent or integrated economic policy, and that its huge budget deficits were highly inflationary.

Many critics maintain, in fact, that the administration did even less about curtailing inflation than it is generally credited to it, and that by default the Federal Reserve was forced to take over the job.

Whether the political campaign can return to economic issues might depend on how the world political situation sorts itself out. But for the next few weeks the question seems already to have been answered.

In fact, it is conceivable that one of the big economic fears — a fear and a corrective for some of the economically profligate ways in which the country has been behaving — might not even come to pass.

The 'upcoming recession," that is, might be delayed so long that it becomes almost indiscernable.

But if that happens, you can be sure that inflation will continue and interest rates might even worsen.

That is, unless the next step is decided upon. That would be if the President asks for and receives controls to artificially keep prices and borrowing charges in line.

To the editor:

"This year is a special time in all America. The Association for the Study of Afro-American Life and History joins with our counterparts in urging citizens of this great nation everywhere to assess African and Afro-American heritage, to evaluate present status and to project for the future.

Why Afro-American (Black) History Month? The true facts of the contributions of Afro-Americans to the discovery, pioneering, development and continuance of America have not been properly and adequately presented in the textbooks, media and other communication devices in this country. Indeed, for the most part, Blacks have been left out of the written record about America. The fact that some changes have been made in recent years points to the need for a fuller report about Afro-American contribution. The designating of the month of February each year is an attempt by the Association to remedy this neglect and provide for all Americans the information needed for creative and empathetic understanding about the Afro-American in the nation.

The Association dreams of the day when the sharing and contribution of all Americans will be so appreciated and so accepted and so understood that there will no longer be a need for any ethnic group to call attention to its contributions. That day has not yet arrived and, until it does, we shall continue to provide the information needed about the Afro-American citizens in the United States and abroad." in the United States and abroad."

The above information was published in a kit prepared by the Association for the Study of Afro-American Life and History" and I want to share it with readers in this area. This February the theme is "History: Heritage for New America." Any time of the year, however, is appropriate for the study and observance of Black history.

It is my observation that plaque does indeed grow in the machinery of our government (to the point of rot) on the national, state and local level. If Henry Aldridge is so well versed and has the proper implements for dealing with such, I'm 500 percent for sending him to Raleigh so he can start quickly chipping away the plaque. What makes the president's resistance to the clear mandate of Congress doubly troubling is that Secretary of Defense Harold Brown specifically testified on Capitol Hill Dec. 18 that he had "recommended to OMB that PUREX be restarted and funded" for the 1981 fiscal year. The cautious Brown made it clear that he worries about adequacy of special nuclear weapons materials both for testing and for arming the new array of nuclear weapons needed to keep the U.S. at or near par with the Soviet Union.

Unless the president changes his mind and downgrades his environmental experts, he will soon be defending himself against serious charges that, despite his admission, the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan did not open his eyes wide enough to the new reality.

heightening the tension. With Pinter, less is more. hesitation in the dialogue becomes a kind of personal punctuation. As in a combat situation, tension is always at its greatest when things become too quiet. Pinter ambushes his audiences in a no man's land of uneasy silences. Taking aim on the tear ducts, the brood box and the laugh mechanism, the actors hold their fire until they see the whites of the playgoers' eyes.

The American actors, as several interviews with the three principals in the cast have revealed, are still coming to professional terms with the Pinter method of leaving unsaid lines that are bursing to get out. A piece in the New York Times the other day reported that actress Blythe Danner, the unfaithful wife in "Betrayal," and her co-stars Raul Julia and Roy Scheider rehearsed the Pinter script as if it were a piece of music, with the pauses and hesitations clearly indicated.

All these years I have been trying to codify and classify the dialogue that goes on at our breakfast table and pretty much the rest of the day throughout the house.

Now I realize that all these years we have been talking Pinter patter. Silence isn't golden around here. You can cut it with a knife but not with a quip.

Our pauses, like Pinter pauses, are a form of communication. They punctuate the tensions. They can be scored like a musical composition.

the speaker at the Jaycees annual Distinguished Service Award banquet last week.

He had talked for a few minutes when Dr. Ed Clement's beeper went off.

The new mayor laughed and indicated that it was apparently his deadline for completing his speech.

The mayor also reminded the Jaycees that he had three children college-aged or soon-to-be-college-aged.

"I have a bad case of maltuition," he quipped.

Former Jaycee Gene Prescott admitted he was never formally installed as a member. So the Jaycees brought him back for installation ceremonies at the meeting. He was promptly aged out again and the Jaycees presented him an egg.

Debbie Shook, Not First To Be Disillusioned

By NOEL YANCEY

(Mr. Yancey has retired after 39 years of covering North Carolina news for the Associated Press. In this column, he retells some of the big stories he recalls.)

When Debbie Shook sent her Miss North Carolina crown skittering across the stage of Raleigh's Memorial Auditorium last year, she was not the first beauty contestant to become disillusioned at the powers that be in the pulchritude business. Maria Beale Fletcher, the only North Carolinian to win the Miss America contest, had her moments of frustration.

Miss Shook's umbrage came at the 1979 Miss North Carolina contest where she had been scheduled to crown her successor. However, she became incensed and threw her crown across the stage after the North Carolina Jaycees revoked her title. They were retaliating for interviews in which she accused the Jaycees of reneging on promises they had made to her.

Miss Fletcher, who advanced up the ladder from the local contest in her hometown of Asheville to the 1962 Miss America title, recalled in an interview several years later that disappointments followed quickly on her triumph at Atlantic City.

It began after the first runner-up in the Miss North Carolina contest declared herself Miss North Carolina (which she was entitled to do since Maria had to vacate the state title to take the big one). But, she said, disappointment came when the North Carolina Jaycees demanded that she return the crown they had presented her.

"It wasn't much. It cost about $12," Maria recalled, "but I wanted to keep it."

At the same time, she said, a Greensboro firm which had presented her a three-suit corduroy wardrobe asked that it be returned. They wanted the new Miss North Carolina to exhibit it in the state.

Maria said the Miss America committee took the Jaycees to task for their pettiness, and she was able to keep the crown she had won.

But the corduroy wardrobe presented a problem. "It was all the clothing I had until the Miss America wardrobe could be made," she explained. Her chaperon advised her keep the suits and let the firm give something else to Miss North Carolina.

She said she began to recognize the beauty contest business for what it was.

"You are a product and you fast become aware of it," she said. "It is hard to accept and believe at first, but as soon as you do you can get along.

"It is very nice, but any girls going into the beauty queen contests should realize early that they should get something monetary out of it."

For her time and trouble, Maria was reimbursed about $70,000, but she said most of it went to the government for income taxes. Her recompense did include a $10,000 scholarship that enabled her to enroll as a student at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn., in the fall of 1962.

She remained at Nashville to marry a young doctor, who had been a classmate, and to embark on a career doing radio and television interviews for station WSM.

"I'm not saying I wasn't grateful," she said, "but when you get down to the tennis racket and the bowling ball bag without the ball, with flashbulbs popping in your face at every presentation, you realize they (the sponsors) are getting their money's worth. I guess the shine faded a bit and I got a little bitter about it."

The pageant at Atlantic City, she said, "is supposed to center around wholesomeness, poise, graciousness and other values, but I found out quick the emphasis is on clothes."

You Can Be Anything, And Remain In Poetry

LOUISVILLE, Ky. – Poet-professor Lee Pennington is the author of six books of poetry. He has had over 700 poems published in magazines, and his 1977 collection I Knew A Woman was nominated for the Pulitzer Prize.

Pennington is presently professor of English at Jefferson Community College in Louisville and is highly sought after for workshops and readings.

Yet he is a down-to-earth fellow, who is easy to talk to, and seems genuinely interested in discussing the craft of writing with younger poets, students and fellow artists. His work is simple and beautiful and easy to appreciate. Like their creator, Pennington's poems are concerned with man and nature, and the beauty of the Appalachian hills.

Poet of the Soil

You stood there against the Kentucky sky
And watched the wind settle the dust
Following your plow like birds, and I
Under your shadow, proud, with a gooseneck hoe
Leaned to watch the soil where you'd been.
It must have been your hand, loose from plowlines,
Around my shoulder and then your mountain voice
Pointing like echoes across the ridges,
For I remember coming back from where romping
Thoughts had played in the growing corn
And standing there by your side and hearing
You say it takes a million tumbling stones
To make soil worthy of the earth.

Pennington was born in White Oak, Kentucky, forty years ago. Though a learned man, he has a healthy understanding of education's limits. He has often intimated, in lectures and interviews, that everyone is a poet.

"Human beings, by nature, are curious. One need only stand by a 'Wet Paint' sign to know that. That's also part of the poet's nature – to be curious, to seek to discover the world, to relate that world to others.

"Some poetry is better than other poetry because of 1) the sensitivity of the audience and 2) the sensitivity of the poet and the depth reached and the magic performed. To an untutored audience, a great poem might well be a lousy one, which is to say, taste plays an important role. I've long since stopped attempting to judge taste...

"Being a college professor doesn't insure success [in publishing]. You can be anything and be a good or bad poet – professor, auto mechanic, doctor or farrier. I expect being a poet of the page (some simply live poetry and don't write it down) has more to do with being in love with language – where it's been, what it can do, the magic of it.

"I've noticed that some professors must have a hate affair with language, rather than a love affair – considering the academic, worthless jargon that gets peddled off as communication. I think if I hear the word 'input' one more time, I'll barf!"

Or, to put it more poetically:

I got my education from great books.
I got my learning from the greatest of schools.
Now I wonder if I've been taken by crooks
Who sold to me the song that's sung by fools?

Though some of his work has inspired "scary high acclaim," Pennington manages to keep praise and criticism in realistic perspective.

"I once wrote a poem entitled 'Man Will Prevail' based on William Faulkner's Nobel Prize acceptance speech. I sent the poem to a magazine back east and received a two page rejection saying that the poem was the worst in the English language, that I should burn it, quit writing, and burn all that I had written to date. The editor also took time to curse me out – I learned three new curse words. I was stunned. I burned the rejection. I wish I had kept it. I sent the poem out to a western magazine the same day and it was accepted and selected later as the best poem to appear in the magazine during the year. It also won three awards. Looking at the poem now, I think the east coast and the west were both wrong. Such diverse criticism has kept me in line, but I still consider myself extremely lucky. Every book I've published has been reviewed somewhere.

"We, as writers, say we don't pay any attention to reviews, but my goodness we have to have them!"

Belated Appreciation Invariably Depressing

I've often heard it said that no child appreciates his parents until he has children of his own.

This is supposed to have some consolatory value, but the thought of belated appreciation always depresses me. It's like the posthumous recognition of a writer; such fame may be great for his publishers, but it doesn't exactly give the author a warm glow.

Parents need encouragement on the spot, not after 25 years of post-natal depression. Those idealists who insist that parenting has its own intrinsic rewards evidently don't have the average kind of child whose only defined life goal is putting his parents on the defensive. Pleasing most kids is like trying to get to Heaven on the basis of your own good works; no matter what you do it's never enough.

Take toothbrushing, for example. Two times a day I drag Meg into the bathroom so that her teeth won't turn green, so that her little body will never dance to the grinding tune of a drill, and so that she won't have to have a root canal before the tender age of eight. And what thanks do I get? Bitten fingers, partial deafness from the piercing shrieks, and brilliant displays of logic like, "They're all gonna fall out anyway."

But if I once forget to make her brush, if I once get too hurried, she marches into school with two fingers stretching her mouth and sighs, "Do you see Mr. Plaque? He's there all right; and it's all my mommy's fault."

Then there's bath time. Meg never gets into the tub without a fight, and she never leaves the tub without a fight. Before she gets in, the water is too hot, it's too cold, she didn't do anything to get dirty that day except draw flowers in the fireplace ashes, and she'll get shriveled. Before she gets out, she didn't get to play long enough, I forgot to bathe between her toes, she'll get cold before I dry her off, and she doesn't like the color of her towel.

But if I happen to skip this ritual one time, the next adult with whom Meg comes into contact hears, "I hope I don't smell bad. Mommy is too tired by the end of the day to bathe me."

What I'm tired of is the hypochondria that periodically scares me enough to take Meg to the doctor's, only to hear, "I would have been here sooner, but my mother doesn't like to pay you." What I'm tired of is the way Meg can be standing on a hardwood floor and lean over to throw up on the couch. Then she moans when her father gets home, "Mommy gets angry when I'm sick."

In spite of everything, I keep trying, defending my mothering credentials whenever I can, as on the other morning when Meg announced, "You forgot to feed me breakfast this morning."

"I did not! You had waffles for breakfast. You know I love you too much ever to forget to feed you. ... Don't you?"

She shrugged her shoulders. "I know. I was just pretending that you neglect me."

History, Tradition, Tides In Political World

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — President Carter's victory in the Iowa caucuses was surprising only in terms of its margin. Subject to certain reservations and hedges, Mr. Carter's renomination has been a sure thing all along.

This is not a matter of Tuesday morning hindsight. From the beginning of his bid for a second term, the president has had three factors going for him. Observers who have kept their eye on history, tradition and political tides have resisted the notion that Sen. Edward Kennedy could wrest the prize away.

You have to go back to Cincinnati in June of 1856 to find a precedent for a party's abandoning its own sitting, elected president. Franklin Pierce of New Hampshire, a political unknown, had been nominated by the Democrats four years earlier, but his four years in the White House had been four years of misery. The Democratic convention of 1856 dumped him without a backward glance.

Except for the Republicans in 1884, when the GOP deserted the non-elected Chester Arthur, every party convention has obeyed an unwritten rule: A sitting president, if he wants renomination, will get it. History is not an infallible guide, but it's usually a pretty good one.

Mr. Carter has had a second important influence working for him in the traditional powers of incumbency. When a president of the United States goes abroad in the land, the panoply of office goes with him. A band may not be playing, but the strains of "Hail to the Chief" follow him like an echo. This past summer, when Mr. Carter ranked at the very bottom of the public opinion polls, whole families turned out in the middle of the night to watch the Delta Queen go by: They hoped for even a glimpse of a president in the flesh.

An incumbent president can claim prime time on TV. He can make news in ways that ordinary candidates cannot make news. He travels with the retinue of a Roman emperor, and he wears responsibility like a toga on his shoulders. Senator Kennedy has charisma: he doesn't have Air Force One.

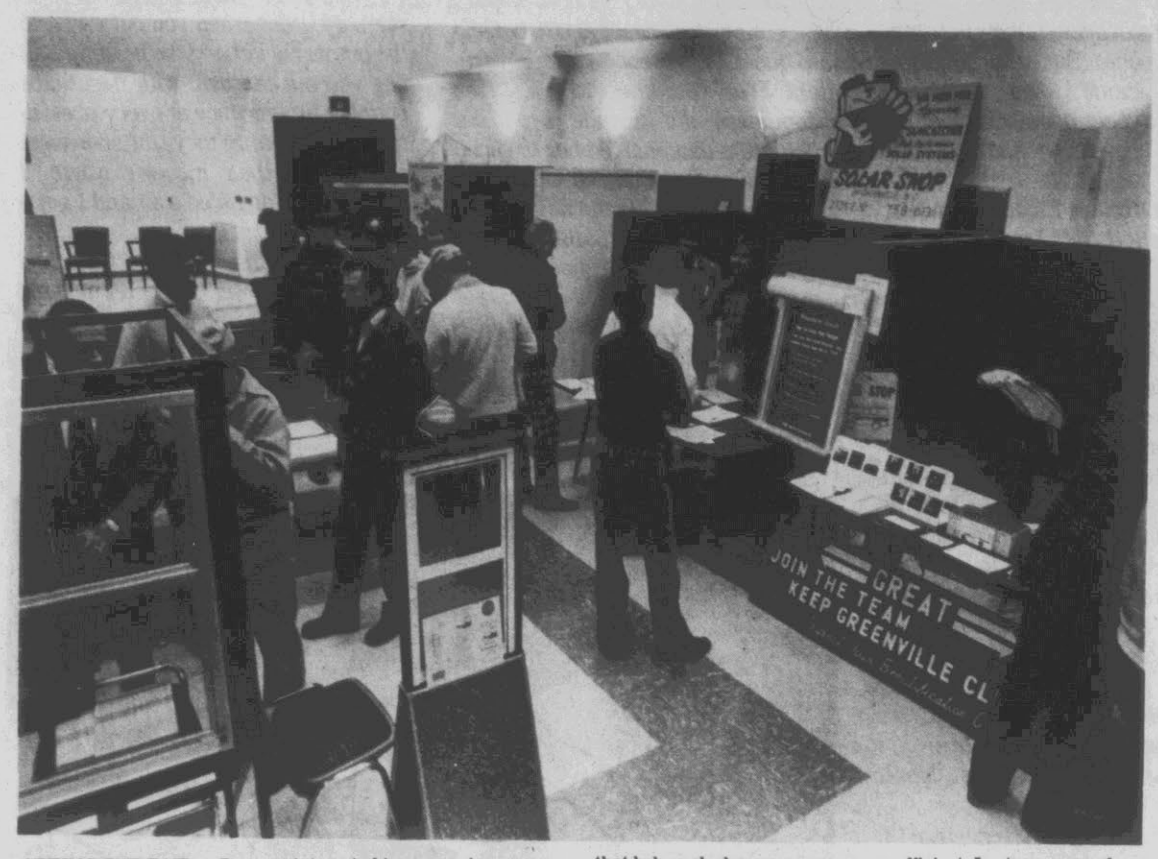

Mr. Kennedy suffers other handicaps, wholly apart from the albatross of Chappaquiddick. The gentleman from Massachusetts is bucking a modest tide of conservatism that has been gaining momentum at least from the time of Proposition 13 in California. On the record of roll calls for 17 years, Mr. Kennedy is a liberal's liberal. He has out-libbed George McGovern, he has out-libbed Hubert Humphrey, he has out-libbed John Culver of Iowa. If there is a single liberal measure the senator has not supported, or a single conservative proposition the senator has not opposed, it does not come readily to mind.

Over the past couple of months, since he formally announced his candidacy, Mr. Kennedy has been making conservative noises. They do not impress. Depending upon one's point of view, he is either the prisoner of his voting record or the beneficiary of it, but either way, a clear consistent record of ultra-liberalism sticks with him as closely as his shadow. Mr. Carter is surely no conservative, but the president is far closer than Mr. Kennedy to the mood of a people fed up with Big Government.

Hedges and reservations have to be expressed. If the humiliating situation in Iran is not soon acceptably resolved, Mr. Carter will be hurt. If Soviet adventurism impels the United States into actual war, as distinguished from a cold war, all bets are off. If the economy goes into a second-quarter tailspin, with worse inflation and more serious unemployment, the president possibly could be denied renomination. Other remote contingencies — scandal, ill health, some fearful blunder on Mr. Carter's part — would change the picture.

Senator Kennedy may be conceded the convention votes of Massachusetts and the District of Columbia. California's Gov. Jerry Brown will have his own state delegation but little more. Otherwise, it's going to be Carter all the way to Madison Square Garden in August. Iowa was his first easy, unsurprising mile.

Reports Out That Moscow May Replace Babrak

SEEING THE FAIR — Persons interested in conserving energy were on hand Saturday at the Greenville Energy Fair to take in energy exhibits that ranged from home insulation to decorations that help make homes more energy efficient. Lectures were also given at various times during fair hours. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

By United Press International

Snipers killed at least one Soviet soldier in Kabul and Western diplomats in the Afghan capital said they are hearing reports that Moscow is unhappy with the regime of Babrak Karmal and may replace it after only one month.

In another blow to Moscow's prestige in the Moslem world, pro-Moscow Libya announced it will attend an Islamic conference opening in Pakistan Sunday to denounce the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

And in Iran, the man likely to become that country's first president — Finance Minister Abolhassan Bani-Sadr — said that if elected, he will give military assisstance to the Moslem rebels fighting to oust the Soviets from Afghanistan.

"Faced with with the Soviet Union, we will aid the Afghan people with all the means possible in Iran, including military means," Bani-Sadr told the French newspaper Le Matin.

"I hope the Russians will be prudent. They have already lost their image in Iran," he said.

Diplomats in Kabul said the Soviets, faced with growing opposition to their presence and a government that is apparently incapable of stemming it, may be thinking of replacing Babrak, the man they installed as president after last month's coup.

Reports reaching Washington also indicated that the Babrak regime, riddled by internal divisions and personal enmities, may be on its way out.

"Rumors continue to circulate in Kabul that the current president will be replaced soon," said State Department spokesman Hodding Carter.

"We have reports that a number of additional Soviet civilians advisers have recently arrived in Afghanistan," Carter said.

Western diplomats in Kabul also reported increased talk in the capital's markets and even government offices that the new leadership — the third Soviet-supported government in 22 months — will not last long.

"It is true that the Afghans are terrible rumor-mongers and have said the same about every new government since 1973," a Western diplomat said. "But the fact is that they have always been right."

In Kabul, witnesses said that at least one and possibly two Soviet soldiers were killed by sniper fire Friday — the first confirmed attack against Soviet troops inside the snowbound Afghan capital.

Eyewitnesses said the incident occurred in Kabul's northwestern Parwan district early Friday afternoon.

They said three Soviet soldiers were getting out of their jeep, apparently to buy cigarettes, when several shots rang out.

One witness said he saw two of the soldiers fall to the ground, hit. A military ambulance took one of them away on a stretcher and his condition was not immediately known. The other, he said, lay on the ground dead.

Western diplomats said the Soviets had been hoping that Babrak would be able to rally his Moslem nation behind his pro-Soviet regime, thereby legitimizing the presence of an estimated 85,000 Russian troops in Afghanistan.

In what appeared to be an effort to increase the popularity of his regime, Babrak decreed that the prices of fuel and essential foodstuffs were being fixed in order to "improve the peoples' standard of living," a dispatch from Kabul by the Soviet news agency Tass said Saturday.

In Islamabad, Pakistan, diplomats said the Soviets were also lobbying hard to keep Sunday's foreign ministers conference of Islamic nations from taking a strong stand against the invasion.

But they received something of a setback when Libya, regarded as one of the most pro-Soviet states in the hardline Arab camp, announced that it will attend the conference.

"The Soviets apparently didn't think we could get this upset about Afghanistan," said one of the conference participants. "They didn't bargain for it."

The conference will open with an address by Pakistani President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq, who already has voiced concern about the presence of Soviet troops across his border.

Unconfirmed reports from Pakistan also said that Zia Khan Nassry, an Afghan guerrilla leader who proclaimed a "Free Islamic Republic" in eastern Afghanistan, was arrested Friday by Pakistani police.

Nassry, who coupled his declaration of an Islamic Republic with an appeal for military aid including SAM missiles and anti-tank guns, was taken away by six men, a friend of the guerrilla chief said.

Earlier, the Pakistani government — sensitive to giving the appearance of supporting the Afghan rebels — had ordered Nassry to leave the country within 24 hours.

Formal Ties

Egypt and Israel established formal diplomatic relations Saturday but Israeli troops turned travelers away from the Sinai border, saying it could not be opened on schedule because of "technical" reasons.

A bomb injured nine persons in Gaza City and in Arab capitals across the Mideast, marchers denounced the historic start of normal diplomatic relations between Egypt and Israel as "Black Saturday."

In Egypt, an adviser and confidant to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said the Egyptian leader had decided to speed up the timetable for establishing full relations with Israel and has invited the Jewish state to send an ambassador to Cairo at once.

The Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty set Feb. 26 as the date to exchange ambassadors.

Preparing To Sue Chicago

By GREGORY GORDON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Justice Department lawyers, preparing to slap Chicago with the biggest school desegregation suit in history, are not ruling out seeking court-ordered busing of students to and from the suburbs, sources said Saturday.

One department source familiar with the bitter Chicago controversy said it is unlikely the initial suit — expected to be approved soon by Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti — will propose a metropolitan-area busing solution.

But the source said, "We're not foreclosing an inter-district remedy."

The source said a city-suburban solution will be difficult to achieve because of complexities in researching and proving, under strict Supreme Court standards, that predominantly white suburbs helped cause racial imbalance in mostly black inner city schools.

Without such proof, the high court has ruled suburbs cannot be included in court-ordered busing plans.

For those reasons, sources said the initial suit probably will be limited to seeking school busing within the city. But once it is filed, federal investigators hope to compile evidence that some predominantly white suburbs on the fringe of the city have contributed to racial segregation among the city's 500,000 schoolchildren.

If the evidence is strong enough, the source said, the suit could be expanded to make Chicago a new test case for attempting to force city-suburban busing in a big city.

Civiletti held out faint hope at a news conference Friday that the case still can be resolved out of court, indicating he may hold up approving a suit to see if new leaders of the Chicago school board will consider a voluntary solution.

But sources said prospects of such a settlement are slim.

The U.S. Civil Rights Commission recently praised the government's crackdown on Chicago, but urged that any solution cover the metropolitan area. It said blacks and other minorities are so concentrated in the city — comprising more than 80 percent of the students — that the effects of even a full municipal desegregation would leave few whites attending inner-city schools.

Others also argue that large-scale busing limited to the city lines could aggravate the problem by triggering more white flight to the suburbs.

Drew S. Days III, the Justice Department's civil rights chief, did not rule out seeking city-suburban busing in a UPI interview. Asked about the Chicago case, he said:

"As a general matter, whenever we go into a case to investigate segregation within an urban center, we are also looking at the metropolitan implications."

Days would not comment on the Chicago case specifically.

He referred to the high court's ruling in the Detroit school desegregation case, in which the justices said metropolitan area busing is only justified when there is evidence a suburb committed specific "violations" that helped create or maintain segregation.

No Candy, No Soda Pop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most of the nation's children will have to get by without candy and soda pop before lunch when they go back to school next fall.

The Agriculture Department said Friday that schools receiving federal lunch subsidies — that's 98 percent of them — will have to quit selling certain snack foods until after the last meal of the day is served.

The new rule, more than two years in the making, takes effect July 1.

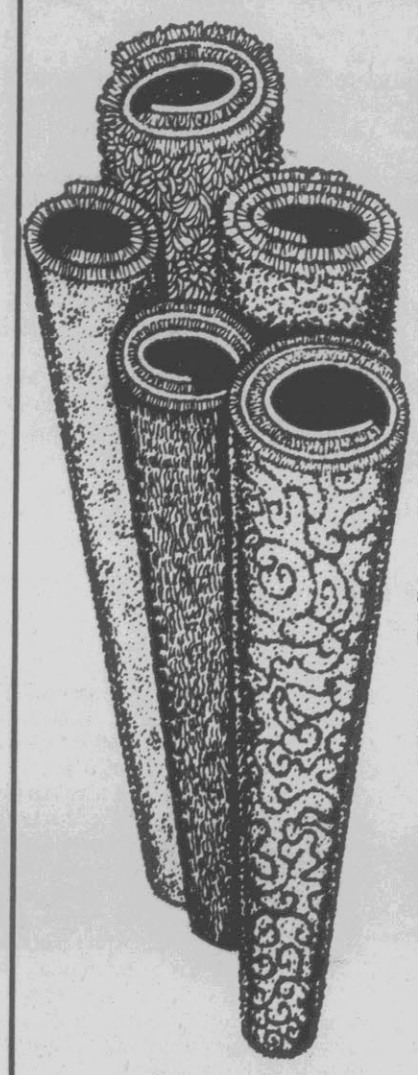

The rule is designed to cut down on the amount of so-called "competitive" foods children are able to get from vending machines and other sources at school.

News Briefs

Gasohol Could Raise Food Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional report says food prices could shoot up because of President Carter's proposal for a huge gasohol production program in the next decade.

The report, issued Friday by the Office of Technology Assessment, said the multibillion dollar effort urged by Carter could cause "significant inflation in food prices" because it would create a shortage of grain.

Gasohol is produced by mixing unleaded gasoline and ethyl alcohol in a ratio of 9-to-1. It has not been produced in large amounts until recently because the cost of production has pushed the retail price of gasohol above that of ordinary gasoline.

Impasse On Windfall Tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — Disagreement over how to spend a half-trillion dollars is blocking congressional action on President Carter's "windfall" tax on the oil industry.

Unable to settle disputes over Social Security tax cuts, incentives for savers and tax credits for energy conservation, Senate and House conferees threw up their hands Friday and postponed consideration of the tax bill until Wednesday at the earliest.

"We're obviously in an impasse," said Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House conferees.

The conferees' job is to work out every difference between the tax bill passed by the House last June and the version approved by the Senate last December.

Discuss Lawsuit On Insurance

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt and state Attorney General Rufus Edmisten met Friday to discuss the state's lawsuit challenging the insurance industry's surcharge on auto liability insurance.

Gary Pearce, the governor's press secretary, declined to comment on what took place at the meeting.

"They were both concerned about what the insurance industry is doing," Pearce said.

The N.C. Reinsurance Facility announced Thursday that bills mailed to drivers within the next few days will reflect a 1.1 percent surcharge for all personal driver policies and another 18.6 percent hike for the one out of four drivers assigned to the facility.

The bills will be for policies that take effect in March.

Rally Agreement Reached

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — City officials and demonstration organizers have reached an agreement on a national anti-Ku Klux Klan rally scheduled for Greensboro on Feb. 2.

Officials announced Friday that the Greensboro Coliseum would be free for use by the Feb. 2 Mobilization Committee. Earlier, city officials had turned down the committee's request for use of the coliseum because of conflicts with a earlier agreement with a concert promoter.

But the concert was moved back to Feb. 3, thus freeing the coliseum for the rally.

Marchers plan to parade through downtown Greensboro to the 15,000-seat coliseum. Several civil rights groups are sponsoring the parade, also called to commemorate the 20th anniversary of the Greensboro lunch counter sit-ins for integration.

Warns Against Terrorism

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — South Africa issued a stern warning against domestic terrorism after police commandos crushed the sharpest black nationalist challenge yet to this nation's white minority regime.

Elite commandos of the police anti-terrorist brigade blasted their way into a suburban Pretoria bank Friday, killing three black nationalists who had taken 25 persons hostage in a daring raid to demand the release of imprisoned black leaders.

One of the hostages, a 19-year-old bank teller, was killed in the shootout and a second died early Saturday. Three other hostages remained in critical condition.

To Challenge Book Removal

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The board of directors of the N.C. Civil Liberties Union voted unanimously Friday to challenge in court Greensboro school superintendent Dr. Kenneth Newbold's removal of "The Car Thief" from two junior high schools.

George Gardner, executive director of the NCCLU, said after a meeting in Winston-Salem that what his group is concerned about is pressure from other groups demanding the removal of other books. He said the board was also worried about the posssibility that the administration in the Greensboro City Schools will "embark upon a widespread censorship effort to forestall criticism."

The suit will be filed in U.S. Middle District Court "rather quickly," possibly next week, said Gardner.

Foreign Briefs

TOKYO (AP) — North Korean navy patrol boats today seized two vessels it claimed had penetrated its territorial waters in the Yellow Sea, the official Pyongyang radio said.

The report, monitored here, said the "unidentified" vessels were seized off the west coast of the Korean peninsula near Changsan-Got, a coastal town about 190 miles northwest of Seoul, the South Korean capital.

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Air traffic came to a halt at Jamaica's two international airports after air controllers struck for higher pay.

Six of the controllers who went on strike Friday refused to hand over their control terminals to management personnel. Police were called in and cleared the strikers from the control center. No arrests were reported.

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Somalia's president, Mohamed Siad Barre, has reopened his nation's Parliament 10 years after he disbanded it following a military coup that brought him to power, Mogadishu radio said.

The report, monitored here, said Barre convened the 171-member People's Assembly on Friday. Its members were nominated by the ruling Revolutionary Socialist Party and approved in a general election on Dec. 30.

Wildlife Commission Favors Federal Protection

OAK TREES CUT — Oak trees lining scenic Highway 61 between Highway 7 and Church Creek in Charleston are being cut down so that Highway 61 can be widened. Local and national preservation groups have been opposing the cutting. A federal court, however, recently ruled that the S.C. Highway Dept. has the right to remove the trees. (AP Laserphoto)

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission has come out in favor of federal protection of the Currituck Outer Banks, but would also like some assurances that hunting and fishing in the area would be permitted.

The state has not taken an official stance on the proposals, and the commission's recommendation will be one of the factors Gov. Jim Hunt will take into consideration when he decides on the matter.

Hunt has said he opposes any further federal ownership of Outer Banks land.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has proposed acquiring a portion or all of the banks from Corolla to the Virginia border for a wildlife refuge.

Richard Hamilton, assistant director of the commission, said the commission was strongly in favor of protection of the resources, calling it "absolutely vital to the welfare of Currituck Sound."

"The only question we have about it is what provisions would be made to continue hunting and fishing. It wouldn't be acceptable for it to be closed (to those activities)," Hamilton said.

Earlier, the commission passed a resolution in support of federal takeover of the land. The commission declined, however, to endorse any of the alternatives, saying it didn't have enough information about access provisions.

"The administration of hunting is a very complex matter," said Frank Barick, chief of interagency coordination for the commission. "There are all kinds of questions about who and how this (fishing and hunting) is going to be administered. This was what wasn't spelled out."

The commission staff has asked the wildlife service for more complete information, but Barick added that it may take some time to compile.

Federal wildlife officials will conduct public hearings on the proposals Feb. 21 in Arlington, Va., Feb. 25 in Raleigh and Feb. 27 in Currituck County.

Meanwhile, the chairman of a group formed last fall to encourage protection of the banks said his group has grown to about 1,000 members.

Jerry Wright, a Jarvisburg farmer, said Friday Friends of Currituck was formed because of increasing pressure to develop the banks at the possible expense of wildlife there.

He said the group hasn't taken a stand yet on the federal proposals. "I think we're more pro natural resources than development," Wright said, adding that the sound and marshes have been vital to the county's economics.

Commission Against CP&L Rate Increase

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Public Staff of the state Utilities Commission argued Friday that Carolina Power & Light Co. should not be allowed to charge its customers for the $12 million it spent to plan construction of a nuclear power plant it later canceled.

The Public Staff, which represents consumers before the commission, began presenting witnesses in hearings on CP&L's proposed 9.25 percent rate increase.

The proposal represents about $55.9 million per year to the utility. The staff claims less than half the request, $26.2 million, is justified.

About $1.1 million per year of the proposed rate increase is earmarked for repaying the money CP&L spent in planning its South River nuclear power plant.

After ordering three 1.1 million kilowatt reactors in 1973, CP&L canceled the plant in 1978.

The Public Staff contends the utility must show good reasons for canceling construction before it may assess ratepayers. The staff is also challenging $1.6 million a year in CP&L's rate proposal that would go toward paying mortgages on the site in Sampson County for the canceled plant.

Citing those factors, the utility's 1978 report told stockholders it did not believe it was possible to license and construct a new nuclear facility within a reasonable time period.

New Wildlife Director Sought

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Wildlife Resources Commission officially began its search for a new executive director Friday by naming a nine-member search committee.

The committee, appointed by chairman J. Robert Gordon, will seek a replacement for Robert B. Hazel, who resigned from the post, effective Jan. 31.

Exile For Sakharov

By SERGE SCHMEMANN
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin officials who banished human rights advocate Andrei Sakharov from Moscow followed a precedent older than the Soviet state. The czars silenced dissent the same way, exiling such outspoken Russians as poet Alexander Pushkin, revolutionary Vladimir Lenin and thousands of others.

Governments across the world have protested what they see as Sakharov's "arrest and exile." But Soviet leaders say they have taken a "humane and fair" step against a "slanderer and renegade" by "resettling" him outside of Moscow, instead of prosecuting him for criminal libel or worse.

The furor erupted Tuesday when Sakharov, who won the Nobel Peace Prize as patriarch of the Soviet dissident movement, was picked up outside his Moscow apartment and sent off to Gorky.

The Volga port city, 250 miles east of the capital, is closed to foreigners, thus barring Sakharov the direct link with foreign reporters who frequently transmitted his anti-Soviet statements abroad.

Sakharov's dissident friends in Moscow said it is still to early to tell whether the move could actually silence Sakharov, or his wife, Yelena Bonner, who voluntarily joined him in exile. But most believe he will be able to pursue at least some of his dissident activities from Gorky.

In a commentary Friday, the official Tass news agency stressed that Gorky is hardly a provincial backwater. It has one of the nation's best universities, and it is a cultural, industrial and scientific center, the agency said.

Although stripped of his influential titles and honors, Sakharov remains a full member of the highly prestigious Soviet Academy of Sciences — possibly because the government couldn't round up enough members to vote him out.

Tass also noted that Sakharov — a nuclear physicist often hailed as the father of the Soviet hydrogen bomb — will be allowed to work "according to his specialty."

Being Treated

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Kennedy, the 24-year-old son of the late Robert F. Kennedy, is being treated for drug addiction by a Sacramento drug-abuse counselor, according to published reports.

The Los Angeles Times said today that Donald Juhl, executive director of the drug detoxification and treatment group Aquarian Effort, was conducting "live-in" therapy on the young Kennedy in Hyannis Port, Mass.

Fifteen Being Held In Cuba

MIAMI (AP) — Fifteen Cuban-born Americans, some of them visiting Cuba to see relatives, are being held in that country without explanation, the Miami Herald said in Saturday's editions.

The United States formally asked Cuba about the jailings Wednesday, but has received no response, U.S. officials told the newspaper Friday.

The officials said they know little about the arrests and can name few of those involved. Among them are four Miami residents, all arrested while visiting relatives on the island in the past week, the Herald said.

More than 100,000 exiles, mostly from Miami, have visited Cuba since President Fidel Castro agreed to allow the visits during negotiations for the release of political prisoners.

Another Vote On Gay Rights

MIAMI (AP) — Voters in the Miami area apparently will make a third trip to the polls in as many years to decide whether Dade County should guarantee rights to homosexuals.

Sponsors of a "full equality ordinance" submitted 33,435 signatures to county elections officials Friday, 4,490 more names than necessary.

The petition's backers — Congress United for Rights and Equality — also handed over $3,343.50, the 10-cent-a-head price for having the signatures validated.

Wants Drinking Age Changed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Retired Superior Court Judge Walter E. Crissman of High Point told a legislative ABC commission Friday that the legal minimum age for beer and wine purchases should be raised from 18 to 21.

"Raising the drinking age does decrease alcohol-related problems," Crissman told the legislature's ABC Laws Study Commission. "You'd be taking some of these things out of the high schools and would do a lot toward helping school officials control the situation."

Club With Male Dancers Charged

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The owner of Charlotte's first club to feature male exotic dancers has been charged with seven violations of state liquor laws, three including lewd behavior.

John Daunt, owner of Liaisons Bar Discotheque, is charged with "allowing and permitting performances simulating sexual acts and activities with female patrons."

The private club also is accused of violating four laws governing club membership requirements, including opening the club to the public and skipping the written application requirement.

Ann Fulton, chief hearings officer for the N.C. Alcohol Law Enforcement agency, said Daunt could lose his liquor license for up to three years.

"The charges are so specious that I believe this may be a conspiracy to close down nightclubs that cater to female patrons," Daunt said.

'Smile America' Is Dental Week Theme

"Smile America, Brighten the 80's" is the theme for 1980 National Children's Dental Health Week, being celebrated throughout the United States during the week of Feb. 3-9.

This special week is set aside each year to promote better dental health for children. Children in Greenville City and Pitt County schools are involved in several activities during the week. Brush-ins, poster contests, essay contest, plays and classroom activities are being coordinated by Kathy Pressly, Pitt County Dental Hygienist.

Dr. Jasper Lewis, local pedodontist, is serving as the state chairman for the state observance of this special week. "Thousands of children suffer from neglect and inadequate dental care each year. Teaching proper dental health habits at an early age is of utmost importance so that dental problems can be prevented," he commented.

Medical School Students In Family Medicine Program Studies

By Georgette Hedrick
ECU Medical Writer

Third-year medical students at the East Carolina University School of Medicine are rotating through an especially designed program in the study of family medicine. Physicians throughout Eastern North Carolina provide the students with experience as a family doctor.

Students report that it's the most positive medical school experience they have had, according to Dr. James G. Jones, chairman of the Department of Family Practice. He added that the realistic experiences should be a positive influence toward some student's choice of family medicine as a career.

The eight-week rotation takes three forms — academic, hospital and ambulatory. During the first four weeks, students are assigned to work in the offices of board-certified family practice specialists and the local physician acts as a preceptor for the students, giving each a first-hand look at the practice of the family doctor.

During the last four weeks of the program, students work at the Eastern Carolina Family Practice Center and the Bethel Family Practice Center. These two offices are operated by the medical school and provide family practice students and residents with intensive training and faculty supervision.

"We are showing students that the practice of family medicine is equial in importance to the other clinical specialties (medicine, surgery, pediatrics, obstetrics-gynecology and psychiatry)," Jones said. "We are giving it equal time during the third year of study, which is an important year for medical students because they are exposed to specialties and may make their career decisions."

Jones noted that few medical schools in the country require a special clerkship in family medicine during the third year. Such rotations usually are electives during the fourth and final year of medical education.

Peter Johns, a student from Durham who has not selected a specialty, is quick to praise the experience he received. "I was given responsibility in examining patients and selecting their treatment, and the supervision was excellent. It was the first time I really participated in health care, and the diversity was fascinating. In one afternoon, I saw everything from low back pain and a ruptured peptic ulcer to terminal cancer."

Students say another benefit of the program is the opportunity to share educational experience and background with students and medical residents from other medical centers. During their community rotations, they share apartments with students who are participating in similar programs. Johns roomed with a fourth-year student from Vanderbilt University and a first-year resident from Duke Medical Center.

North Carolin's statewide network of area health education centers provides housing and travel expenses for the community rotations.

"The idea is to get the students out into the region's cities and rural areas and let them learn the needs of the people," Johns said. "Hopefully, they'll see how rewarding it is to be a family doctor fall in love with the idea and decide to practice the specialty in areas that are underserved."

Physicians participating in the program include:

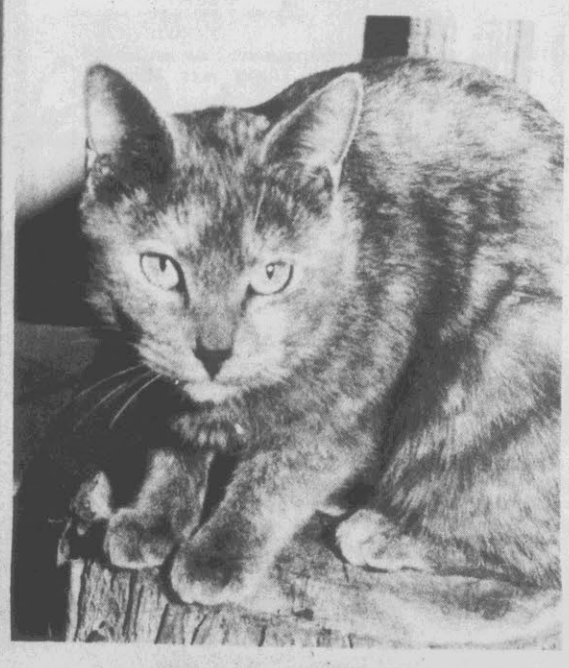

PITT COUNTY, AYDEN — Drs. Elliot Dixon and James Galloway.

FARMVILLE — Drs. Thomas Patterson and M. Dan Heizer.

Dracula Myth Creates Problems For Romania

By RUTH E. GRUBER

BRAN, Romania (UPI) — In the guest book at Bran Castle, between drawings of fanged creatures and indecipherable scrawls, a child has written in forlorn but precise handwriting:

"We came to Dracula's house but he wasn't at home."

Bran Castle, a properly sinister gray stone fortress perched on a small crag in the heart of Transylvania, is inextricably linked with the reality and myth of Dracula.

The child's wistful message points up Romanian confusion over how to deal with conflicting legends surrounding "Count Dracula."

Most of the world knows Dracula as a black-caped Transylvanian vampire who sucked blood and could only be killed by a stake through his heart.

The 19th century novel by Irishman Bram Stoker is one of the most popular horror books ever written. The first Dracula film starring Bela Lugosi — himself from Transylvania — is a cinema classic.

A 50th anniversary Broadway version of Stoker's tale is now in its third year.

To Romanians, however, the fiction bears little if any relation to the real Dracula, 15th century Prince Vald Tepes of Wallachia, now revered as a national hero.

"It injects the idea of vampires and a load of Irish 19th century sperstition, which have been transferred and mixed up in important facts of our country," says tourism ministry official Renato Iliescu.

Born around 1430, Vlad Tepes was the son of Prince Vlad, named "Dracul" because of his dragon insignia. But "dracul" also means evil or devil and it is thought Vlad was called Dracula in part because of his ruthless style.

He also was known as Vlad the Impaler because of his characteristic method of dispatching enemies. Romanians today insist he was only using the methods of his time. They say grisly stories about him were exagerrated by prejudiced historians.

Now viewed as one national hero in a long line that leads to Romania's current president, Nicolae Ceausescu, Vlad is pictured in posters with the others under the title "continuity."

"Vlad didn't reign for many years, but they were glorious years," said Iliescu. "He was not just a hero but also a good organizer. He was advanced compared with the ideas of his times. He promoted the idea of a centralized state."

Romanians have no qualms about publicizing Vlad Tepes — there have been Romanian movies, books and other works on him. But they shudder at any connection between him and the fictional vampire.

Bran Castle, built in the 14th century and rebuilt in the 19th, is linked with the Dracula legend mainly because it is a classic example of the spooky, movie-type haunted castle. And it is in Transylvania.

The real Dracula was prince of Wallachia, further south, though he did travel to Transylvania. There is documentation that he visited a castle, now totally ruined, not far from Bran.

But Bran Castle poses a dilemma for Romanians. Should they exploit its fictional connection and reap piles of hard tourist currency or try to maintain the honor of a national hero?

"We have been aware for a long time that this could be a gold mine," said Iliescu. "With the book and the films and all, we could have made our share of money very easily, using the income for the general development of Romania.

"But we asked ourselves should we sell Vlad Tepes for money? We decided we shouldn't, in order to preserve the historic reality."

Romanian authorities recently refused to allow actor George Hamilton to shoot publicity stills for his movie vampire spoof, "Love At First Bite," at Bran Castle.

"We know the movie has had great success," said Iliescu, "but we didn't think it proper that a film shot in the United States and Spain should use Romania as publicity."

Iliescu insists Vlad Tepes — Dracula — never set foot at Bran Castle. "It is just preserved now (it is part of Bran village museum) as a castle of medieval history."

But word apparently has not reached Bran itself. Asked to show where Vlad slept, a guide enthusiastically led the way through chilly corridors to a room now furnished with a huge and ornate canopied bed.

Carowinds Expansion

CHARLOTTE — Carowinds theme park is spending $3 million on an expansion program for the 1980 season. This expansion will include a $2 million quadruple looping roller coaster, an automated bear show, two new children's rides, and a computer designed to drastically cut energy usage in the park.

"Carolina Cyclone" is the name selected for the new coaster. When completed, trains carrying 28 passengers each will climb a 95-foot lift and then go through two loops, the first 71 feet tall and the second 63 feet tall. The entire ride along 2,100 feet of steel track will last 90 seconds and will be ready for operation on opening day, March 22. The Country Bear Show will open in early May.

The awards are sponsored by the Governor's Business Council on the Arts and Humanities and the Department of Cultural Resources.

North Carolina was the first state to inaugurate awards of this kind.

The awards will recognize companies, both large and small, whose contributions have included not only program funding but also involvement of its personnel. One criterion for selection was the degree to which a company's contribution affected its community.

Preservation Grants Listed

By PEGGY HOWE
N.C. Dept. Cultural Resources

RALEIGH — More than $838,000 has been awarded for historic preservation activities in 98 grants in 47 North Carolina counties, according to Secretary Sara Hodgkins of the Department of Cultural Resources.

The grants range from $1,600 in Haywood County to a high total of $82,500 in Rowan, but most range between $5,000 and $15,000, Secretary Hodgkins said.

North Carolina, receiving more than $1.6 million in total federal funds for historic preservation, ranks second only to California in amount of funds received.

Each year, the state division of Archives and History solicits project applications for these grants which must meet national and state objectives and which demonstrate a commitment to quality preservation standards. Decisions are based on staff recommendations and review by a citizens advisory grants committee. Final selection is made by the N. C. Historical Commission.

Grants are made on a matching basis through the Historic Preservation Fund administered by the Heritage Conservation and Recreation Service of the U.S. Department of the Interior. The program is administered in North Carolina by State Historic Preservation Officer Larry E. Tise, and a staff of professional preservationists who provide technical and advisory assistance in the execution of each project.

Secretary Hodgkins emphasized that the two categories of properties listed in the National Register of Historic Places are all eligible for grants. These include individual ownership and properties located in National Register districts.

This year's grants are for projects which are matched by at least 50 percent outside resources and which use significant non-federal money for preserving properties which would not otherwise be saved.

Projects are in all parts of the state in both urban and rural areas.

The secretary indicated that projects not funded this year are eligible to apply again next spring.

Questions on the program should be referred to the State Historic Preservation Office — 733-7305 or 733-4763.

Among state programs, those in the eastern area of North Carolina receiving grants, noted by counties, are:

— Beaufort — Washington Historic District, $22,500; and a Washington publication, $13,500.

— Bertie — The King Bazemore house, $5,000.

— Craven — First Citizens Bank, New Bern, $6,444; and a county inventory, $15,000.

— Currituck — Lighthouse Keepers House, $10,750.

— Edgecombe — Blount-Bridgers House, $16,500; the O.C. Farrar property, $6,000; and Princeville inventory, $4,800.

— Halifax — Halifax State Historic site, $20,000; and Heptinstall House, $1,000.

— Hertford — Yates-Vaughn house, $5,500.

— Hyde — Octagon House, $12,000; and Hyde County inventory, $10,000.

— Lenoir — Kinston inventory, $10,000.

— Martin — Conoho Masonic Lodge, $6,500; and Durras House, $5,000.

— New Hanover — Burch-Cowan House, $10,000; DeRossett House, $10,000; and St. Stephen AME Church, $5,000.

— Wayne — Weil House, $15,000; and Oddfellows Lodge, $5,000.

— Wilson — County inventory, $14,450.

In addition to the county projects, five special programs totaling $94,378 have been approved for grants.

Within this group, $15,000 has been awarded to the Algonkian Archaeology program at East Carolina University headed by Dr. David Phelps, to conduct research into Algonkian culture in eastern North Carolina.

Children's Adventure With An Old Clipper

The Tessie C. Price. By Jean Heyn. Illustrated by Claude Howell. John F. Blair, Publisher. Winston-Salem. 210 pages. $7.95.

The Skipjack, commonly referred to as a clipper, is a customary sight in Chesapeake Bay towns and frequently viewed in old movies on television — but has been ignored by most. This novel attempts to make up for its neglect through the adventures of the Evans family.

The happy-go-lucky lives of the Evans children become crushed with the death of their mother and after being evicted from their home. They try to find a way to regain that previous state of happiness.

Now responsible for all the household chores, raising her two-year-old sister, and keeping her two brothers in line, Meg, the oldest of the four children, is faced with one obstacle after another.

After their mother's death, Mr. Evans' sister threatens to split up the family and take the youngest, Kathy, home with her. This plan fails. The family is determined to stay together.

On one of his many adventures, Lloyd, the oldest boy, caught the glimpse of an old, run-down boat that had been deserted in the marsh of the Chesapeake Bay. Mr. Evans was persuaded by his children to renovate the algae-covered boat. Later, the family moved aboard "The Tessie C. Price."

In addition to providing shelter for the Evans family, "The Tessie C. Price" becomes an obsession. "The Tessie" is spoken of as if "she" was an old friend. She brought the family together into a cohesive group.

Suspense intensifies with numerous adventures on the shore of the Bay. Jamie, the youngest boy, discovers unknowingly an array of illegal animal trappers and finds himself in the middle of a threatening storm with his foot caught in a trap. Mr. Evans and Lloyd later stumble across the thieves, "headlighting" for deer and are forced off the road by a close relative — Uncle Lester!

A hurricane watch was in effect on the day of an important sailboat race as the climax begins to mount. All the neighbors and family had planned on going — except Meg and Kathy.

The wind howled, the boat rocked, and water trickled into the cabin of "The Tessie." Meg and Kathy fearfully clung to each other while they were being swept into the Bay. Their only alternative was to swim for shore. "The Tessie C. Price" was sinking.

Jean Heyn has come back to her writing career after obtaining a degree at Northwestern University, getting married, and raising five children. Her first novel, "The Adventures of Mr. Jim Davis and Miss Elisabeth Jenkins," was written when she was ten. She is now working on another novel.

Grants For Arts Coalition

RALEIGH — The N. C. Cultural Arts Coalition has announced the receipt of two foundation grants totaling $50,000. One grant, for $38,000, was received from the Ford Foundation to support its new Volunteer Training Program. The other grant, one of $12,000 from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation, is to support the "Showcase of Talent Series," a program to provide training in finding audiences for talented artists whose work has gone unnoticed. The Reynolds grant will match another $12,000 which was given for the same program by the National Endowment for the Arts, a federal agency

The N. C. Cultural Arts Coalition, Inc., is an organization that addresses itself to the need of artists, particularly black artists, as they seek to earn a living at their professions in North Carolina.

Krep Heads Fund Drive

WINSTON-SALEM — Dr. Juanita M. Kreps, former U.S. Secretary of Commerce, is national chairman of the $12 million fund drive for the North Carolina School of the Arts.

A three-year drive called "A Vision in Motion," the drive is being conducted by the North Carolina School of the Arts Foundation, Inc. to raise money for the Roger L. Stevens Center for the Performing Arts and to support the School's education and performance programs.

Dr. Kreps is expected to name her committee and formally begin her part of the campaign April 1. "The North Carolina School of the Arts has become a significant national resource in arts and enterainment," Dr. Kreps said. "The school's students and professional affiliates," she added, "perform in many parts of the country, and the International Music Program based at the school takes an American student orchestra to Europe each summer."

She noted too that "about half the students come from outside North Carolina, and its graduates radiate across the country filling important roles in community life."

Now resigned as Commerce Secretary, Dr. Kreps is currently a trustee of the Duke Endowment and a director of Eastman Kodak Company, the R. J. Reynolds Industries, Inc., J. C. Penney Company, UAL, Inc..

The School of Arts has about 650 students from seventh grade through college on its Winston-Salem campus. It offers fully accredited high school and undergraduate degree programs in dance, drama, theater design and production and music.

More than half the $12 million being sought is designated for the Stevens Center — the conversion of the 1929 Carolina Theater in downtown Winston-Salem to a performance center for the school and the region. The theater is to be given to the school by the Piedmont Publishing Company, publisher of the Winston-Salem Journal and the Sentinel.

Nature Pursuit Paid Off

By WILLIAM DICKINSON IV

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Frederic Edwin Church visited the popular and remote areas of North America, South America, Jamaica, Europe and the Middle East in pursuit of nature.

It paid off.

In 1859 while in his early 30s, the leader of the second generation of the Hudson River School of American painting sold "The Heart of the Andes" for $10,000 — at that time the highest price ever paid for a living American artist's work.

He was not an unknown artist in his own time. And even after his death, the value of the Transcendentalist's work is holding up.

"The Icebergs" (1861) was purchased in October for $2.5 million reportedly by Lamar Hunt, owner of the Kansas City Chiefs. It was the most ever paid for an American painting and the third highest price ever paid for a painting at public auction.

The previous record for an American painting was George Caleb Bingham's, "The Jolly Flatboatman, No. 2," which fetched $980,000 last year.

"Value is such an artificial thing," said Ross Taggart, Nelson Gallery of Art senior curator, of "The Icebergs" $2.5 million price tag. "It becomes practically a matter of fad or fashion."

Church, born in 1826, in Hartford, Conn., studied under Thomas Cole, the father of American landscape painting and the founder of the Hudson River School.

The artists traveled to nature during the long summer months — making numerous oil, pencil and charcoal sketches, many on cardboard — and returned to their studios in New York to paint larger finished canvases.

When the artist decided he was ready to begin work on a painting, he could select from his file studies and sketches on light, clouds, seascapes, mountains, smoking volcanoes, waterfalls, trees and woodland flowers.

"The necessity of sketching from nature could be shown interchangeably on esthetic, scientific or religious grounds," wrote Theodore Stebbins, Jr., curator of American Painting, Museum of Fine Arts, Boston.

"Nature, and particularly wilderness, represented truth; civilization was suspect. The definition of plant and animal species, the exploration of boulder and mountain streams brings us closer to God's handiwork, to revelation."

Close Observation, a Smithsonian Institution Traveling exhibit, includes a number of grey and colorful sketches of icebergs. From these Church painted his famous "The Icebergs."

Encouraged by polar explorer Dr. Isaac Hayes, Church sailed the waters of Newfoundland and Labrador aboard a chartered ship in the summer of 1859 in search of the icebergs for the major painting he planned.

"Church was one of the great Romantic landscape artists of the 19th century, irrespective of national orgin," said Ralph Coe, Nelson director. "He brought kind of a grandiose vision which really verges on the extraordinary..."

Coe said Church was a great artist on two very different scales — intimate sketches and operatic productions on canvas.

Among Church's most celebrated landscapes were "Niagara Falls" (1857) at the Corcoran Gallery, Washington, D.C.; "Twilight in the Wilderness," (1860) at the Cleveland Museum of Art; "Cotopaxi" (1862) at the Detroit Institute of Arts; "Sunrise off the Maine Coast (Storm at Mount Desert)" (1863) and "Vale of St. Thomas, Jamaica," (1867).

'Walk With Me' Poems

Come Walk With Me. By William Davis Harrison. Illustrations by Kathy Edmondson. Williamston, N.C. Eastern Press. 135 pages, $6.95.

One of the most difficult, even the saddest thing a reviewer must say if he is to be honest, is that a particular work does not truly justify the hard work involved and the expense in getting it published.

In the case of Harrison's volume of poetry "Come Walk With Me," it is all the more unfortunate as the author, an intelligent man who has a fine education, has obviously relied on the form of poetry writing he learned in grammar school. Here is basically excellent material, in many cases showing original and perceptive ideas, that is never brought to fruition as Harrison employs a relentless sing-song pattern.

This leads to a repetitious sameness, whether the subject is on love, on inspiration, sorrow or humor. Typical are these verses:

— "In our world there are/ many pleasures/ Some are trash and some/ are treasures..." or... "He has spent many winters working/ in the crisp cold air/ Now the downy flakes are the color/ of his hair."

What is admirable is the motivation and the courage to meet a personal need that prompted Harrison to write and have this volume published. Essentially, this attempt is Harrison's therapy for personal tragedies in recent years of his life — the break up of his marriage, the death of his 23-year old son, the loss of his home by fire.

Although Harrison has written poetry since he was a youth of 15, this collection represents efforts of the past three years. A teacher, and graduate of Atlantic Christian College and East Carolina University (where he received his master's degree), it is a pity that this man with a fine wit did not somewhere along the way take a course in creative writing or encounter the stimulation of being part of a group like the ECU Poetry Forum, for example. Had this happened, it is likely these poems would have been much more alive, varied and expressive of the experiences and ideas he attempts to convey in time-worn, inflexible versification.

Paradoxically, the best in "Come Walk With Me" are the few limerick type poems — "There is Khomeini the ayatollah/ Who in politics is a high roller/In all of his raging/ He is trying to prevent aging/ By keeping his enemies from getting older." Another is: "There is a young comedian named Phil/ Who made his audience laugh fit to kill/ After doing one skit/ The manager made him quit/ He had to give the audience mirth control pills."

Copies of "Come Walk With Me" are available in several local book stores or can be ordered directly from the publisher: Eastern Press, Williamston, N.C., 27892.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

BOOK NEWS
By ANN NOBLE

Just arrived at Sheppard Library are three new avenues of escape to other places and times. Those looking to while away some time by the fireside may enjoy curling up with these historically flavored novels.

THE DAY OF THE BUTTERFLY is a tale of early nineteenth century London. Daisy Holt, spared from the ill fortune of a London brothel, is trained to be a dancer whose talent attracts many wealthy patrons. Fate becomes cruel, however, when she meets an artist obsessed with painting a portrait. A romance begins — but so does the first of her sorrows. The author, Norah Lofts, has written several historical novels; among them THE HOMECOMING, KNIGHT'S ACRE, and NETHERGATE.

Another popular author, Jessica Stirling, has returned with THE DRUMS OF TIME. This story transports the reader back to the time of World War One and the Roaring Twenties. It centers around the life of a young Jewish woman, Holly Beckman, whose fledging career in antiques is abused by her dishonest family. Vivid characters are portrayed in overlapping worlds of antique buying and selling, burglary and fencing of stolen goods, gambling rooms and Roaring Twenties party spots. Stirling's previous novels include CALL HOME THE HEART, STRATHMORE, and THE DARK PASTURE.

DENVER, by John Dunning, is also set in the nineteen-twenties. Denver had outgrown its frontier town beginnings, but life was often perilous. The influence of the Ku Klux Klan was reaching its peak, and those who stood in its path feared for their safety. DENVER is the saga of Tom Hastings, a writer, and his family caught in this tempestuous time. John Dunning has written several books and was a reporter for the DENVER POST for five years.

Seeks Martin County Material

WILLIAMSTON — Histories of Martin County civic clubs and churches are being sought by the Martin County Historical Society for use in the book, "Martin County Heritage."

In addition to written material, pictures of old churches, related cemeteries, founding members, pastors and lay leaders are also welcomed. Each picture should be identified on the back.

Anyone with information, photos or ideas on these subjects is asked to contact: Mrs. Shelby Hughes, P. O. Box 468, Williamston, N. C., 27892, or call her at 792-3359 or 792-1776.

Wake Forest Art Faculty Show

THE BARONG DANCE — Rangda, a mythological monster, is one of the characters in the Barong dance performed at a dance theater outside Denpasar, Bali, Indonesia. The dance tells the story of the eternal fight between good and evil spirits. Rangda is an evil spirit who is killed and sent to heaven. (AP Laserphoto)

RALEIGH — A collection of 20 paintings, paste-ups and pieces of sculpture by members of the Wake Forest University art faculty is now on view in the Collectors Gallery of the N. C. Museum of Art. As most of the works are large-scale ones, the Collector Gallery space has been expanded for this how.

Artists showing in the current show (to be up through February 10) are:

— Marvin Coats — wooden construction items, including a small house under construction with hidden letters within the roofbeams.

— Andy Polk his exhibiting brightly colored, large rubber-like humanoids who dance and dive. These have cartoon faces that are distorted and geometric shapes and neon signs are used in the background.

— Gary Cook, who specializes in rendering piles of things onto large canvasses. He works primarily with boards and bags, combined with airbrushed details in red, blue and green.

— Robert Knott — Three-dimenisonal works of material found on the beach — stones and shells, fish carved from wood. Some of the works are of animals who appear with human characteristics.

— Victor Faccinto is represented by an animated film, "Shameless." The figures are fanciful, such as bedposts made of snakes and palm trees having eyes.

There is no admission charged for the show, and the public is invited. Hours are Tuesday-Saturday 10-5, and 2-6 on Sunday.

You May Never See The Inside Of McDonald's Again.

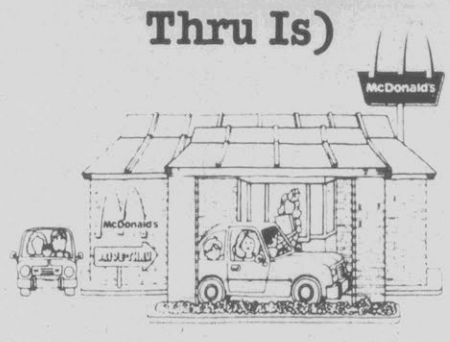

(That's How Convenient Our New Drive-Thru Is)

Fact 1: Most People Who Are Hungry Are Also In a Hurry.

Anyone who isn't in a hurry to eat when they're hungry probably isn't hungry. We haven't taken a poll, but we're willing to guess that a majority of hungry people are willing to go almost any length to reduce the minutes separating them from delicious, satisfying food. This statement leads us to the next fact, which is . . .

Fact 2: McDonald's Drive-Thru Service is Fast, Fast, Fast.

McDonald's indoor service was already fast enough, but you have to get out of your car and come inside to get it. Drive-Thru-ing at McDonald's is a fun, fast solution to that problem. You can stay in your car, order your food, pick it up and mind the kids and the dog while all that is taking place. But what good is all this if you live or work in Greenville? Read on . . .

Fact 3: McDonald's in Greenville Has a New Drive-Thru Window.

What we did, in effect, was to knock a hole in the side of our building so that your order could be handed to you right through your car window. We put fancy glass and window frames around the hole to make it look better, but it's still just a hole in the side of McDonald's. A novel idea, you must admit.

Fact 4: You're Gonna Be Seeing a Lot of Our Drive-Thru.

Fact is, our new Drive-Thru is so convenient, you may never again see the inside of our McDonald's. (But we hope not.) Drive-Thru-ing at our new Drive-Thru is going to shave off those minutes that separate your hungry stomach from our delicious food. Just try it once, and you'll be a believer. And that's a fact!

A Review

'Apocalypse' A Lavish Feast Of Death

Francis Ford Coppola's "Apocalypse Now," which opened Friday night at the Buccaneer Theater, is a long, rambling film that triumphs over its basic fragmentation and inconsistencies.

Departing from the framework of traditional war films, Coppola has fused realism and fantasy, using visual images as his stars. Participants essentially serve the role of taking the viewer through a progression of splendidly conceived and photographed tableaux.

One of the most striking of these is the transformation of a lovely forest village, a VC hideout point, into an inferno of twisted destruction. Filmed in part from the vantage point of copters making attacks, it depicts clearly the blind chaos that surround moments of intense battle. These encompassing scenes are made more powerful by the juxtoposition of poignant close-ups — a woman kneeling by a stone idol praying to an unnamed god at the same time a bellowing cow is hoisted skyward in a sling beneath a helicopter.

In another scene, where the American captain and his crew on their small boat approach the last American outpost on a river, reality and fantasy become totally intermingled in the dual play of bright white lights on a bridge and the vivid red and oranges of death dealing shells arching into the area from the surrounding blackness of a tropical night.

Coppola employs ironic touches — as when a crew member of the boat is killed by a primitive spear hurled by a native; and again, when a cocky colonel from Texas orders two young surfers he adores to put on a surfing demonstration in the thick of a battle along a body of water.

Fantasy is heightened by special effects that are compatible to the film, such as that of a soldier who weaves about with a smoke bomb setting up billowing veils of colored smoke. In other scenes, effective use is made of marital movements to provide ballets of brutal beauty.

The thin thread of the plot deals with an assignment given to a Captain Willard, tautly portrayed by Robert Duvall, to find and "terminate" a Colonel Kirby, performed by Marlon Brando with the right feel of aging and weariness. Kirby, once a brilliant officer on the battlefields of Viet Nam, has left the fold of conventionality to establish a strange commune in Cambodia. Reports are that Kirby is insane.

During the battle filled voyage, as Captain Willard studies the dossier provided him on Kirby, he begins to question the moral rightness of the assignment, and finds himself fascinated by the man he has been assigned to assassinate.

From the point Willard discovers the exotic hideaway of Colonel Kirby and his devoted followers, "Apocalypse Now" becomes dense with unresolved meanings and cluttered with ambigious symbolism. Near naked Asians are posed in stage groups, some very much alive, others newly dead. Moving and still flesh interplay erotically around carved stone idols made menacing by flickering bonfire lights and shadows.

Kirby, ill with malaria and weary, finds strength to survive as he attempts to probe the meanings of good and evil. He talks about T.S. Eliot's "The Wasted Land" and Sir James Frazer's "The Golden Bough." He also makes one telling point about the enemy the Americans fought in Viet Nam . . . "the VC have two ways to go home, by death or in victory."

The conclusion carries out the factor of duality that is central in the realism and fantasy of the film. When Willard finds the inner strength to murder the fever-weakened Kirby, it is at the same time that a ritualistic blood sacrifice is being made in the slaughter of a water buffalo on the grounds outside the death room.

Ultimately, in its own contorted way, "Apocalypse Now" affirms that war is indeed a social disease in which youth are asked to sacrifice themselves in a lavish, expensive feast of death.

Getting Gold From Muck

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — You may never get rich by digging a ditch, but hereabouts they're proving you can make a buck by sifting muck.

In fact, Palo Alto has earned more than $250,000 since it began extracting gold and silver from industrial sludge more than a year ago. And with price of precious metals soaring, the city now stands to reap a much greater profit, says city Treasurer Mark Harris. Gold, for example, closed at $634 an ounce in New York on Friday.

But there's a catch. Some of the industrial companies that let traces of gold and silver slip into the city's sewer system are now considering improving recovery processes or reducing use to keep more of it themselves.

The Solar Sail Concept

By BOB KUESTERMAN
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A radically different space vehicle — shaped like a kite, bigger than a baseball diamond and propelled by sunlight — may be an official stowaway aboard one of the early space shuttles.

It is the solar sail, beloved of science fiction aficionados but shunned by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Solar-sail crafts propelled by sunlight could carry much greater loads than conventional rockets, moving among planets as far away as Jupiter in long, slow voyages, one advocate says.

Similar but much larger sheets might eventually be used to capture solar power for Earth, said Gary Flandro, professor of mechanical engineering at the University of Utah.

Flandro is among scientists at the university who are donating their time, and students who are working for class credit, to design the first solar sail.

Space has already been reserved aboard one of the first shuttle flights, although NASA has yet to grant final approval to any of the proposed experiments. The scientists must also get special permission for their project, because the first shuttles were not supposed to launch any other objects into space.

NASA charges $10,000 to send such experimental packages into orbit. The fee for the sail has been covered by private donations, $1,500 by the Utah chapter of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics and $8,500 by the World Space Foundation, a nonprofit group of scientists who raise funds for space exploration.

And Flandro said European scientists have shown interest in putting one of the folded sails aboard their new rocket, Ariane, which was successfully test-flown Dec. 24.

The sail will be 160 feet on a side, made of a plastic film called mylar — .0005-inch thick — coated with aluminum on one side. Light particles bouncing off the aluminum push the 11,200-square-foot sail.

Struts will connect the sail to an instrument pod. To travel aboard the space shuttle, the whole thing must fit into a canister about the size of a garbage can and weigh no more than 200 pounds.

Materials for the experimental solar sail would cost about $300,000 retail, but researchers hope they will be donated.

In addition, informal help is coming from the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., where Flandro was a consultant on solar sails.

The solar sail had been in the running for use in a current project of the jet propulsion lab — an observation flight to Halley's comet, which is due to return to the Earth's vicinity in 1986.

The sail "was seriously considered at one time," said Alan Wood, a laboratory spokesman, adding, however, that the winning candidate for the mission was the ion rocket.

"It was purely a practical decision in that the ion-propulsion system has been in existence for quite some time," Wood said. "... Engines had been built, operated and tested. The technology was in hand. The solar sail was an idea, a concept, but it has never been done. It is an entirely new concept."

Like the solar sail, the ion rocket operates only in space — it cannot be used to go into orbit from a planet. The ion rocket has been tested in space; the first solar sail hasn't been built yet.

The researchers' plan to have their design completed by May or June and to begin construction in the summer. The shuttle flights were originally set for 1981, but the shuttle project is running behind schedule.

If the sail is accepted aboard the shuttle, it will be carried 130 miles above the Earth. At that altitude, the atmosphere is still thick enough to drag on the sail if it is launched head-on, so the sail will be maneuvered nearly edge-on to the atmosphere.

The European Space Agency's Ariane rocket would carry the space sail 22,000 miles out, where there would be no atmospheric hinderance, Flandro said. If that project comes to be, the space sail might be sent on a trip around the moon, he added.

Solar sail crafts could not land on the moon or planets, but could carry cargo from an Earth orbit to Mars in 9-10 months. A fueled rocket would make such a trip in 7-8 months, Flandro said.

Refugee Mission

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Some 200 international celebrities, including folk singer Joan Baez and actress Liv Ullman, plan to escort 20 truckloads of food and medicine to the Thai-Cambodian border to dramatize the plight of Cambodian refugees.

The Thai government said Friday it does not object to the trip early next month, but cannot guarantee the celebrities' safety if they cross into Cambodia, where the Vietnamese-backed government earlier this week denounced the march as a "vile action."

Among other Americans who plan to participate are civil rights activists Coretta King and Bayard Rustin, authors James Michener and Elie Wiesel and at least two clergymen, according to organizers of the march, the Paris-based volunteer organization "Doctors Without Borders."

Tens of thousands of starving Cambodians fleeing their war-ravaged homes have gathered along the border, but international relief efforts reportedly have met only limited success in getting supplies to them.

Maynor Leads Pirates Past Seahawks, 66-54

Pirate's Treasure

East Carolina's harassing defense, exemplified here by Pirate Kyle Powers, played an important role in ECU's 12-point 66-54 victory Saturday night over the visiting Seahawks of UNC-Wilmington. Powers stole the ball and set up a Pirate basket. (Reflector sports photo by Tommy Forrest)

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

"Defense, defense, defense," East Carolina's Dave Odom said last night after his Pirates had claimed their 11th victory of the year, stopping UNC-Wilmington, 66-54.

"There is no question in my mind that this was the best defense we've played this year," Odom said following the win, which was the fourth straight for the Pirates over their eastern rival. "We played with intensity for 40 minutes and took away the things that they wanted to do."

The defense, time and again, brought the Pirate fans to their feet, as a "Pitt County Night" crowd of 5,100 cheered the Bucs on to victory.

At times, however, it was the bubbly Odom who sparked them to their feet, charging up and down in front of the Pirate bench to lead the cheers.

"I don't mind being a cheerleader," he said. "I hope I see the day when I don't have to do it, and can put all my attention to the game.

"There is no doubt that we had great atmosphere to play in tonight," he added, still talking about the crowd. "I think our players responded to them well."

The Pirates, however, didn't play the same offense as they did defense, having problems in the first half, going over four minutes before scoring. They shot only 38.7 per cent in the first half, then came back to hit 48.5 in the second.

The Pirates also dominated the boards, pulling away 43 rebounds to just 31 for the Seahawks. Both Odom and Wilmington coach Mel Gibson felt that the board control was a factor in the game.

"Their depth and experience was a problem for us," Gibson said. "Then, we didn't hit well from the outside when we had to and we didn't get many second shots, while they got a lot of them. They blocked out very well underneath."

Odom agreed that preventing too many second shots by the Seahawks helped the Pirates along the way, but felt that defense was still the overriding factor. "We did an excellent job of blocking out; it was probably the best 40 minutes of ball we played this year."

While the Pirates suffered through the early drought, Odom said he wasn't worried, knowing that the Bucs would come through eventually. Wilmington, too, was unable to pull out to more than a six-point lead during the period because of the fine Pirate work against them.

After that 6-0 lead, the Pirates began to find the range and came back to finally tie it up at 12-12 with 10:47 left on a jumper by Kyle Powers. Tony Byles then tossed back a missed shot for a 14-12 lead with 10:10 remaining.

The Pirates then built up a six-point edge of their own, 20-14, before Wilmington came back to tie it up, then regain the lead, 23-22 on a three-point play by Garry Cooper.

Wilmington then held the lead the rest of the way, taking a 29-26 lead into the dressing rooms.

"I told the players that I would rather be down three than up three in a game like this," Odom said. "The team ahead has a tendency to relax when they come back out."

It may have been so. At any rate, the Pirates, after again trailing by four, 34-30, on another three-point play by Cooper, pulled back with Byles tieing it up on a fast break and Herb Krusen hitting to put the Pirates up 36-34.

Wilmington tied it twice more before Maynor hit two straight for a 42-38 lead with 14:18 left. The Pirates were never caught again.

The Pirates slowly pulled their lead out, reaching eight at 54-46, then ten at 56-46 as Byles and Gray both scored. It finally reached 12 for the first time at 60-48 when Gray hit two free throws with 3:59 left.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR
Sports
SUNDAY MORNING
JANUARY 27, 1980

Wilmington was hampered through the final seven mintues after point guard Barry Taylor twisted an ankle on a fast break. He was unable to play again during the evening.

Again both coaches agreed that this was a big factor in the game. "We can afford to rest Barry now and then, but we can't play long without him," Gibson said.

"To me, Taylor is the best point guard we have played this year," Odom added. "And that includes the Dukes, the States, the Oral Robertses, the Old Dominions and the like. He's a definite pro prospect."

George Maynor led the Pirate scoring with 21 points, while Herb Gray added 15 and Krusen had 12. Both Krusen and Gray pulled off ten rebounds for the Pirates.

Wilmington's scoring was paced by Cooper with 16, while Taylor hit 12. Cooper led the Seahawk rebounding with 11.

Asked about getting a repeat crowd, Odom said he hoped to see a lot more of them. "I hope it's like a disease. I hope it spreads. I hope people go home and tell the people that didn't go what they missed.

"I said earlier that this game might be the best one in the state, and I think that it was. The stuff I saw on television today wasn't good. I'm not cutting anyone, but the teams today on TV were trying not to lose, not trying to win. Going into a four-corner with 13 minutes to play is not my kind of basketball.

"We played from baseline to baseline with intensity tonight the whole game. The people who missed it have my sympathy."

The Pirates hit the road for their next outing, facing the University of Detroit next Saturday night in the Motor City. They then play at South Carolina before returning home to meet little know but very strong Illinois State, a team with a 13-4 record that counts among its losses a two-pointer to Southern California on the road, and a home loss to nationally ranked Syracuse by two points in overtime.

Lamp's FG Lifts Cavs By State

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Jeff Lamp hit a foul line jump shot with four seconds left to give Virginia's 17th-ranked Cavaliers a 49-47 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over the North Carolina State Wolfpack Saturday.

Lamp, who ended with a game-high 24 points, scored 10 of Virginia's last 12 points in the first half to give the Cavaliers a 34-28 advantage at intermission.

In a low-scoring second half, it took Virginia 14 minutes and 27 seconds to scored 10 points as both teams played deliberate ball and failed to shoot well.

Clyde Austin kept the Wolfpack in contention in the second half by collecting 10 of his team-high 14 points.

The Cavaliers built their biggest lead at 40-33, but Austin hit eight of the Wolfpack's next 12 points for a 45-45 tie. The game then developed into an Austin-Lamp battle.

Lamp hit two free throws to put Virginia ahead 47-45. Austin came back with a jumper with 51 seconds left to even the score again, but Lamp came back with the winning basket.

The victory left the Cavaliers, who had topped Duke 90-84 Wednesday, with a 16-3 overall record and a 5-2 mark in the ACC. N.C. State dropped to 11-5 overall and 3-4 in the conference.

"We have to be haappy with the win," said Virginia coach Terry Holland. "N.C. State had a lot to do with the way we played. They played good defense on us."

"But I hope we can play better," Holland added. "We just missed too many easy shots and when that happens it affects your entire game."

Lamp was the only Cavalier player shooting in double figures.

The last-seconds, winning shot didn't surprise Holland. "When the chips are down — Jeff Lamp. Jeff is an All-American in every aspect of the word," he said.

N.C. State coach Norman Sloan said he didn't think there was much the Wolfpack could have done against Lamp's last basket.

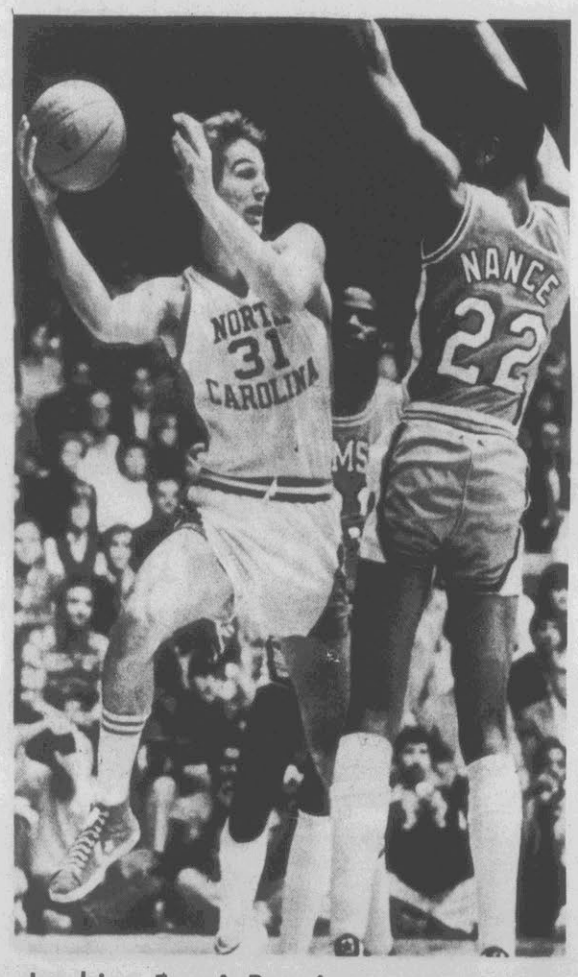

"As for our defense on that shot, I didn't think it could have ben drawn up any better," Sloan said. "I think the films will show that he shot over three sets of hands, including our big guy" — 7-foot-4 Chuck Nevitt.

"Lamp had a great day and he made a great shot," Sloan said. "This loss is just hard for us. This is our fourth loss in a row."

The last time N.C. State won was at home against Virginia, when they beat the Cavaliers 64-56 two weeks ago.

Looking For A Receiver

Yonaker Leads UNC To Triumph

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Time was when 13th-ranked North Carolina's Rich Yonakor handled the basketball fans would cringe, fearing that the 6-foot-10 senior would commit a turnover.

But against 12th-ranked Clemson on Saturday afternoon Yonakor could do no wrong. Normally a 51-percent shooter, Yonakor's pin-point shooting sparked a second-half rally that led the Tar Heels to a 73-70 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over the Tigers.

"I just felt kind of hot," said Yonakor in describing his 8-for-10 performance. "When they don't come out at you, you gotta fire it up."

Yonakor said Clemson's zone came out at him, then dropped back. It was when the Tigers collapsed that Yonakor took advantage of the open shot to score 12 of his points on six straight shots.

In addition, he blocked a key shot as the Tar Heels held off a late Clemson bid.

North Carolina coach Dean Smith descrisbed the victory as "a strange way to win.

"We had some very good stretches and some stretches you could be embarrassed about," Smith said. "In the first half most of our turnovers were unforced. In second half, Clemson forced them. We've got to handle the ball better."

Smith said Clemson would not allow Mike O'Koren any room to shoot, which explained why O'Koren scored just four points.

"They were concentrating on him (O'Koren) and that opened some things up ..." said Smith.

Al Wood added 17 points for North Carolina while John Virgil and Dave Colescott scored 12 apiece. With the victory the Tar Heels avenged a 93-76 defeat earlier this season at Clemson.

The Tigers, who now have lost all 30 times they've played at Carmichael Auditorium, were led by Billy Williams with 26 points while Larry Nance threw in 14.

Yonakor canned three straight shots to give North Carolina a 55-45 lead midway through the second half. His four-point flurry moments later increased the advantage to 6350, and the Tar Heels, who went into their four-corners offense with six minutes remaining, hung on for the victory.

They had to withstand a 14-3 rally, however, that brought Clemson to within two at 66-64. The Tigers had a chance to tie the game with two minutes remaining, but Yonakor blocked Williams' shot.

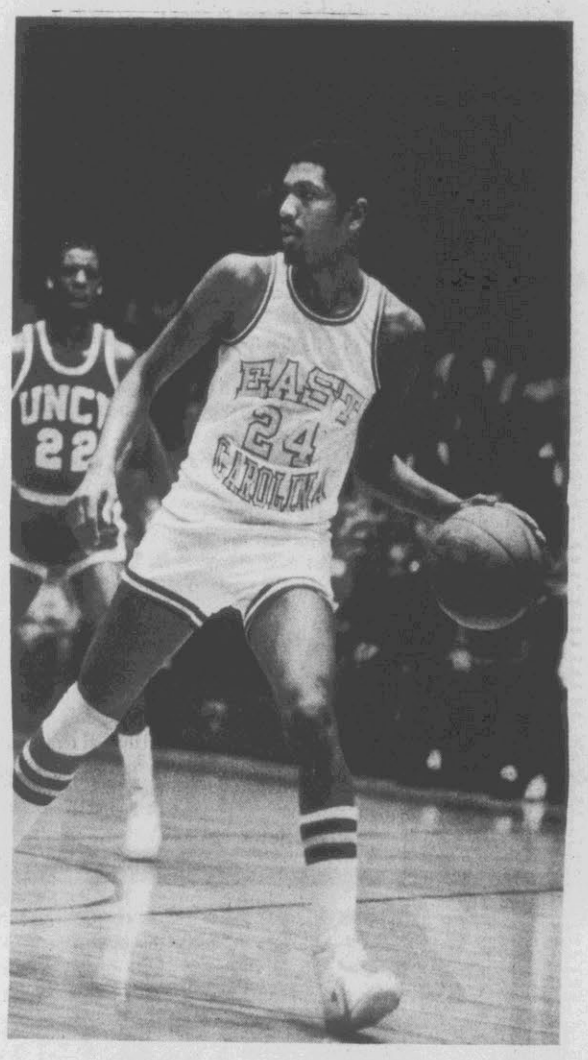

Clemson led from the opening minutes, eventually establishing a 19-11 advantage. But North Carolina steadily chipped away at the lead and finally went in front, 35-33, on a basket by Pete Budko with two seconds left in the first half.

The victory enabled North Carolina to remain in contention in the ACC race with a 6-3 record. The Tar Heels are now 12-4 overall.

With the loss Clemson, 4-3 in the ACC and 13-4 overall, fell two full games behind league leader Maryland and into a fourth-place tie with Duke.

Jackson's Layup Lifts Irish Past Maryland

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Tracy Jackson's driving layup with five seconds remaining lifted eighth-ranked Notre Dame to a 64-63 victory over No.15 Maryland in a nationally televised college basketball game Saturday.

It was the 200th career coaching victory for Notre Dame's Digger Phelps, who saw the Irish fall behind by five points in the first half and turn back a Maryland rally from seven points down in the second half.

The Terrapins' Albert King, held to just four points in the first half, hit two quick field goals in the second period after the Irish closed within one at halftime. Notre Dame slowly chipped away at the lead again and finally went ahead on a pair of free throws by Bill Hanzlik.

The teams traded baskets until a field goal by Rich Branning and two more by Orlando Woolridge gave the Irish a five-point lead with seven minutes to go.

After Reggie Jackson scored for Maryland, Notre Dame took the first of two seven-point leads on two straight baskets by Hanzlik.

King then led the Maryland rally with five baskets in the next four minutes. Notre Dame, meanwhile, managed just two free throws, and a steal and layup by King gave Maryland the lead at 63-62 with 15 seconds remaining to set up Jackson's heroics.

King finished with 21 points for the Terps, now 14-3. Buck Williams and Ernest Graham added 12 apiece.

Woolridge and Jackson topped the 13-2 Irish, who were playing without leading scorer Kelly Tripucka, with 15 points, while Hanzlik finished with 14.

Freshman John Paxson, whose four free throws in the closing seconds beat UCLA here earlier in the season, brought Notre Dame back late in the first half with two baskets and a pair of foul shots as the Irish narrowed the gap to 32-31 at the intermission.

King, a 6-foot-6 junior who had averaged almost 22 points a game, missed all four of his field goal attempts in the first half. He hit his first two shots of the second half, but Gilbert Salinas, starting in place of Tripucka, who was hospitalized Friday night for what was thought to be acute back spasms, brought Notre Dame back within one.

Hanzlik tied the game at 36-36 on a free throw after Williams received a technical foul for hanging on the rim, and the Irish took their first lead since midway through the opening period when Woolridge scored on a driving layup.

A jumper by Graham broke a four-minute Maryland dry spell and tied the game again.

ECU Women Fall To USC, 97-54

COLUMBIA, S.C. — South Carolina's Lady Gamecocks smacked East Carolina, 97-54, as the Pirates were never able to overcome a 46-28 halftime deficit.

The Pirates tied the score twice in the early going, but never managed to take the lead as the powerful Gamecocks took control of the inside and quickly jumped to a 25-14 lead with 8:46 remaining in the opening stanza.

Forwards Kathy Riley and Rosie Thompson connected for the Pirates to cut the gap to 31-22 at the 6:38 mark, but East Carolina never came any closer to victory.

South Carolina out-rebounded the Pirates, 54-46, but the key to the game was the Gamecock's 38 of 75 field goal accuracy for 50.7 percent, while the visitors managed to hit on only 21 of 71 for 29 percent.

"We saw that they were just out there trying to hurt us in the late stages of the game," said South Carolina guard Rita Johnson, "so we decided we had to defend ourselves."

East Carolina Coach Cathy Andruzzi disagreed.

"They have a lot of talent," admitted Andruzzi, "but the way they go about using that talent is a disgrace.

"East Carolina is building a class program, but tonight, unfortunately, we went down to South Carolina's style of ball. This isn't the type of ball we want to play.

"It was my fault that I didn't keep my girls under control," confessed Andruzzi. "South Carolina showed the least class of any team we have ever played against. "I think the girls learned tonight that winning isn't everything."

ECU drops to 15-6 with the AIAW Division loss, while USC upped its record to 15-2.

Deacons Blast Tech; Indiana Outlasts Purdue

ATLANTA (AP) — Alvis Rogers scored 24 points and Mike Helm added 19 Saturday to power Wake Forest to a 67-59 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over Georgia Tech.

Tech, winless in its first season in the ACC, dropped to 0-9 in the conference and 4-13 overall. Wake Forest increased its record to 9-8 and 2-5 in the league with its first road victory over the season.

Lenny Horton led Georgia Tech with a career high 31 points while the Yellow Jackets leading scorer Brook Steppe was held to only four points — all in the first half.

The Deacons won the game at the foul line, hitting 27 free throws to only three for Tech, which outscored Wake Forest from the field 27-20.

Wake Forest led 30-21 at the half. Tech got to within 47-41 with 6:40 remaining to play before Helms took charge down the stretch, hitting nine free throws in the closing minutes.

"We're very happy to get a league win on the road. That means a lot to us," said Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy.

"I thought we showed great patience on offense and did a great job defensively. Changing our defenses early really helped us. We knew we had to be consistent on offense and defense throughout and we did that," he said.

"Our free throws were crucial down the line. I just thought we played a strong game all the way," said Tacy.

Coach Dwayne Morrison of Georgia Tech, said:

"The game started in a funny fashion. At first everyone was aggressive on the boards and nothing happened out front. Then it switched around."

He said Horton, who hit on 15 of 22 shots from the field and became Tech's seventh all-time leading scorer with 1,213 points, was outstanding.

"Lenny Horton played a complete game again. For 40 minutes he played one great game," said Morrison.

Indiana 69 Purdue 58

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Butch Carter scored a game-high 22 points and Isiah Thomas added 18 as 16th-ranked Indiana defeated 14th-ranked arch rival Purdue 69-58 in a Big Ten Conference basketball duel Saturday.

Indiana, 5-3 in the Big Ten, and 12-5 overall, grabbed the lead for good in the second half, 39-38, with 12:55 remaining on a 20-foot jump shot by Carter.

From that point, the Hoosiers steadily built their lead to eight, 56-48, with 4:44 left in the game, behind the scoring of Carter and Thomas, who each had 14 in the second half.

The loss dropped Purdue's record to 5-3 in conference and 12-5 overall. The Boilermakers cut the gap to four on Keith Edmonson's jump shot with 2:53 remaining, but Indiana countered with a 10-foot jump shot by Chuck Franz from the baseline with 2:10 remaining to push the Hoosier lead back to six.

Edmonson, who led the Boilermakers in scoring with 22 points, hit another jump shot with 1:51 remaining to cut the lead back to four, 62-58. But that was all the points the Boilermakers could come up with as Indiana scored the last seven points in the game from the free throw line for the final margin.

Hoosier center Landon Turner held Purdue's Joe Barry Carroll to 11 points.

Carroll came into the game as the Boilermakers' leading scorer — shooting over 57 percent from the field — as well as their leading rebounder.

Besides holding down Carroll, Turner managed to score 13 points himself.

Indiana's Ray Tolbert also scored in double figures with 10 points and 10 rebounds.

Syracuse 99 Connecticut 89

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Roosevelt Bouie scored a career-high 29 points and pulled down 16 rebounds Saturday as sixth-ranked Syracuse beat Connecticut 99-89 in a Big East Conference basketball game.

Syracuse had to come from seven points behind early in the game and started the second half by outscoring Connecticut 20-6 in six minutes as the Orangemen registered their 54th consecutive homecourt victory.

Bouie came up with a key three-point play that brought Syracuse from behind with four minutes remaining in the first half. Louis Orr's two foul shots gave Syracuse the lead for good.

The 29 points and 16 rebounds in the regionally televised game were the most ever by the 6-foot-11 inch senior center, who also had three blocked shots.

Jim Abromaitis got Connecticut off to a fast start by scoring eight straight points in a two-minute spree that helped the visiting Huskies control much of the first-half play. With Abromaitis leading the way, UConn outscored Syracuse 16-9 and built up a seven-point lead.

But Marty Headd ignited Syracuse with a 20-foot jump shot which started a 21-6 Orangemen spree and put Syracuse ahead 40-38 at halftime.

Abromaitis led Connecticut with 21 points and 13 rebounds while Corney Thompson had 20 points for the losers.

Orr finished the game with 21 points, freshman Erich Santifer had 16 points and freshman Tony Bruin added 14.

The victory gave Syracuse a 2-0 record in the Big East Conference and a 17-1 record overall. Connecticut falls to 3-2 in the conference and 12-5 overall.

Mississippi 80 Auburn 54

OXFORD, Miss. (UPI) — Southeastern Conference leading scorer John Stroud rang up 31 points Saturday to power Mississippi to a 71-54 defeat of Auburn.

Stroud's scoring made him the first Ole Miss player and the eighth in the SEC to hit for 2,000 points in his college career. His total is 2,017.

Watson Leads Open By Two

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Ray Floyd and Lon Hinkle realize they have their work cut out for them.

They trail the formidable Tom Watson by 2 shots going into Sunday's final round of the $250,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open Golf Tournament.

The margin could have been greater but for Watson's third consecutive less-than-spectacular finish. He missed birdie opportunities on both the last two holes Saturday but still emerged with a 4-under-par 68 and a 205 total, 11 shots under par and 2 in front of Floyd and Hinkle.

"It's obvious he came back humming," Floyd said of Watson, who won Player of the Year honors the last three seasons and is opening his 1980 campaign here.

"He's a tough guy to spot a couple of shots in any situation. It's particularly difficult with just 18 holes left to go.

"My goal tomorrow is to play a good, aggressive round of golf."

Hinkel, who shot a solid, no-bogey 67, said, "I'm playing well enough to shoot another one of these — but," and he glanced at Watson's name atop the leader board, "I don't know if that will win it."

Like Hinkle, Watson didn't make a bogey in his effort over the 7,002-yard South course at the Torrey Pines Golf Club.

But it could have been much better.

Just as he did on the first two days, Watson slipped a little on the last two holes.

He missed a 10-foot birdie putt on the 17th and, after stopping to chat with a television cameraman, failed to birdie the par-5 18th.

It was the only "5" on his card in a no-bogey round.

But it didn't come easily in the chilly, breezy, cloudy weather.

Watson, Player of the Year for the past three seasons and opening his 1980 campaign here, missed four greens and twice had to drop 12-foot putts to save par.

"My round revolved around the par-saving putts, and the par-5s. I birdied three of them. I said at the start of the tournament that the par-5s are the key. You have to play them under par.

"And I didn't make a bogey. If I can stay away from the bogeys tomorrow, I've got a good chance to win the golf tournament."

Lon Hinkle, a San Diego product, and veteran Ray Floyd, a former Masters and PGA champion, shared second at 207. Hinkle didn't make a bogey and didn't have a "5" on his card, which added up to 67. Floyd stayed within a single shot of the top spot most of the day, but dropped two behind with a bogey from a bunker on the 17th. He finished with a 70.

Oklahoma Upsets No. 10 Missouri; Duke Wins

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Sooner forward Terry Stotts hit 23 points to lead the Oklahoma Sooners to a 78-73 college basketball upset victory over No. 10 Missouri in Big Eight action here Saturday afternoon.

Oklahoma hit 29 of 36 free throws in the second half to ice the victory against the Tigers before 11,012 fans at the Lloyd Noble Arena.

The Sooners took the lead for good with 13:33 remaining in the first half at 10-8. Oklahoma continued to increase its lead throughout the first half and held a 32-21 halftime advantage.

In the second half, the parade to the free-throw line started with Stotts and junior Steve Bajema combining to hit 16 of 16 from the charity stripe.

The Tigers were led by sophomore forward Ricky Frazier, who had 17 points.

The loss drops the Tigers to 15-3 overall while the win puts the Sooners at 13-5. Both teams now stand 4-2 in the Big Eight Conference race.

In addition to Stotts, Raymond Whitley had 20 points, Bajema had 15 and Aaron Curry added 12.

Four of Missouri's starters fouled out of the game: Frazier, Curtis Berry, Steve Stipanovich and John Sunbold.

Duke 78
Pittsburgh 69

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Third-ranked Duke hit 14 of 14 freethrows in the final two minutes, six of them by center Mike Gminski, to secure a 78-69 college basketball victory over the University of Pittsburgh Saturday night.

Pitt, which fell behind 11-2 at the start of the game, battled back to set up a seasaw finish before a sellout crowd of 5,308 at the Pitt field house.

But with 1:57 to go, the 6-foot-11 Gminski hit two foulshots that gave Duke the lead to stay at 66-65. Moments later, Gminski was fouled again and made both shots to up the advantage to 68-65.

Pitt was then forced to foul, and Duke was perfect at the line. Jim Suddath hit four-of-four freethrows in the final stretch, and Gminski swished the final two at the close of the game.

The victory boosted Duke's record to 16-3. Pitt fell to 12-5.

Despite Duke's 56 percent shooting in the first half, Pitt rallied to take a 26-25 lead with 4:20 to play before halftime on a tip-in by forward Sam Clancy. Duke regained a 33-29 lead by intermission.

In the second half, Pitt's Dwayne Wallace hit a jumper to give the Panthers a 47-46 lead with 13 minutes to go. A foulshot by Wallace gave Pitt a 65-62 lead with four minutes left.

But then Duke took command behind the key freethrows by Gminski, who led all scorers with 23 points. Forward Gene Banks added 19 for the Blue Devils.

Pitt was topped by Clancy with 16 points and Carlton Neverson and Dave Olinger with 14 each.

Kentucky 56
Georgia 49

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Sam Bowie and Fred Cowan scored 18 points apiece and combined to foil Georgia's slowdown tactics as fifth-ranked Kentucky held off the Bulldogs 56-49 in a Southeastern Conference basketball game Saturday night.

The victory pushed Kentucky to 17-3 overall and 7-2 in the SEC. Georgia fell to 12-5 and 5-5.

Eric Marbury's driving dunk shot gave the Bulldogs a 45-45 tie with 6:09 remaining, but Georgia was unable to score again from a spread offense intended to kill the clock.

Marquette 80
S.Carolina 65

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The last two minutes of the first half, when Marquette outscored South Carolina 9-2, led to the host Gamecocks' 80-65 loss, USC head basketball Coach Frank McGuire said Saturday.

Marquette and South Carolina, both in the midst of subpar seasons, were tied up to that point, 25-25. But Marquette went on a tear, led by Oliver Lee and Artie Green, and the Gamecocks never caught up again.

LSU 66 Florida 58

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Durand Macklin came off the bench to score 18 points Saturday night as 11th-ranked Louisiana State held off a late Florida challenge for a 66-58 Southeastern Conference basketball victory.

The Gators trailed 47-36 early in the second half, then bounced back into the game with a 16-6 spurt to pull to within a point less than nine minutes after halftime.

But LSU quieted any chances of an upset with a stall of nearly 11 minutes. Macklin ended the stall with a 12-foot jump shot that put the Tigers ahead 61-52 with 5:45 remaining.

VPI 97
Cinncinnati 57

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Dale Solomon and reserve Chris Scott scored six points each in a 20-2 run over an 8½-minute stretch of the first half that gave Virginia Tech a 17-point lead Saturday and the Gobblers went on to a 97-57 Metro Conference basketball rout of Cincinnati's Bearcats.

The Gobblers, upping their second-place conference record to 5-1 and their overall mark to 12-3, completely dominated the last 32 minutes of the regionally televised game against a them they defeated by only 61-59 just a week ago.

S. Alabama 80
UNCC 69

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Ed Rains scored 28 points, including 22 in the second half, to lead South Alabama to an easy 80-69 Sun Belt Conference victory over North Carolina-Charlotte Saturday.

The Jaguars opened a nine-point lead with five minutes to play in the first half and were never in trouble after that.

ECU Men, Women Win

WILMINGTON — East Carolina University's swimming teams swept past UNC-Wilmington Saturday afternoon, winning both the men's and women's meet.

The men swam to a 67-45 victory, setting three meet records in the process. The Pirate ladies downed the Seahawks even more impressively, 80-47, setting two pool records and twice qualifying for the AIAW Division II nationals.

Two of the meet records were set by Ted Nieman, as he won the 200-yard individual medley in 1:59.608 and the 100-yard freestyle in 47.645. The other was sent by Joel Knubowitz in the 200-yard breaststroke in 2:14.794.

Among the women, Julie Malcolm won the 1,000-yard freestyle in 11:08.986, surpassing the national qualifying standard and setting a new pool record. Beth Reen, winning the 200-yard butterfly in 2:13.937, also posted the same marks.

The Pirates return home to face nationally-ranked N.C. State at 7 p.m. on Tuesday in Minges Natatorium.

Committee Agrees With President

USOC Votes To Support Boycott

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — The United States Olympic Committee voted unanimously to support President Carter in his request that the Summer Olympic Games in Moscow be either transferred, postponed or canceled because of the Soviet invasion in Afghanistan.

After hearing from Lloyd Cutler, White House general counsel, and discussing the issue the rest of the day, the USOC executive board voted a resolution that said "persuant to the request of the President of the United States, the United States Olympic Committee directs its officers and staff to propose to the International Committee that the 1980 Summer Games be transferred to another site or multiple sites, or be postponed or canceled for this year."

The executive board also said that the USOC should meet after any action by the IOC "to consider appropriate action to be taken ... under such circumstances that may exist at that time."

The board also said the USOC should continue to select and prepare an Olympic team, whether or not the U.S competes in the Summer Games "in order to recognize the athletes who have been training as Olympians."

Robert J. Kane, USOC preisident, told newsmen after the executive board action that the vote was unanimous. He also said that 68 of the 86 members were present during the meeting.

The USOC, which had not formally taken a stance on the issue, is scheduled to meet with the IOC on Feb. 9, four days before the opening of the Winter Olympic Games in Lake Placid, N.Y.

Robert J. Kane, USOC President, described the meeting with Cutler as "a very friendly exchange."

During a lunch break in the meeting, Kane said the USOC executive board had not yet formulated a stance but had discussed Cutler's presentation and six resolutions presented by members on what steps the organization should take before meeting with the International Olympic Committee on Feb. 9 in Lake Placid, N.Y.

Kane also said some of the members "brought to his (Cutler's) attention the kind of sacrifice our athletes will have to make if they are not permitted to participate in the Olympic Games.

Cutler said the president feels that "no U.S. team should attend Games this summer in the capital of a nation that has sent its troops to invade a much smaller and previously independent nation that is on the road to the Persian Gulf, from which the rest of the world derives a very large part of its oil supply."

Citing public opinion polls and a 386-12 vote in the House of Representatives Thursday, supporting the president's position, Cutler said he believed the USOC members also would take a positive stance.

"I believe they appreciate the gravity of the problem and will give it thoughtful consideration," Cutler said.

Several times in his news conference, Cutler intimated the Soviets had violated the Olympic spirit by sending troops into Afghanistan.

"We are trying to show the Soviets that this action and its maintenance will be costly in every political and economic relationship they have," Cutler explained.

"For us to appear in the capital of the aggressor at the time the aggression has just been completed and may still be continuing, and to pay homage under those circumstances, it seems to us as just not fitting or consistent with Olympic principles of peace."

Meanwhile, other Olympics-related events were taking place around the world Saturday.

West German Olympic Committee executives postponed a decision on whether to recommend sending a team to Moscow for the Summer Olympics. Committee President Willi Daume said the WGOC decided against making a decision at this time because of what he called the "dramatic escalation of the (world) political situation."

He said the group's executive presidium would decide at a later date on its recommendation to the West German Olympic Sports Federation. Daume added the final decision would have to take into account the Bonn government's position.

Ruben Berrios Martinez, president of the Puerto Rican Independence Party, spoke out Saturday, condeming the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Pitt C.C. In Loss

KENANSVILLE — James Sprunt Community College rallied and pulled out an 83-75 victory over Pitt Community College last night.

Pitt jumped out to a ten-point lead in the opening half of the game, but was unable to hold onto it. James Sprunt closed the gap and finally knotted it up at halftime, 32-32.

In the second half, Sprunt moved out into a ten-point lead of its own before the Paladins rallied and pulled within two with about two and a half minutes left in the game.

But Sprunt went into a delay game and used the layups they got and the foul line to pull away for the eight-point final margin.

"It was not one of our better games," Coach Herb Dillon said afterwards. "They have picked up two new players since we played them last, and they made a big difference in the game."

The two are Odell Smith and Ronnie Moore. Smith dumped in 22 points, while Moore had 12. Sprunt was led by Larry Simpson with 25.

Frankie Dail led Pitt with 17, while Dennis Batts and Danny Garris each had 14 and Kelvin McNeil had 11.

Pitt, now 5-3 in league play and 8-10 overall, plays host to Coastal Carolina on Monday at North Pitt High School at 8 p.m.

Rose Nips Knights, 47-46

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

RED OAK — Rose High School, suffering through a terrible fourth period over came Northern Nash's frantic rally photographer's flashguns, and extra seconds on the clock to pull out a 47-46 win over the Knights Friday night.

The victory kept Rose in at least a third-share of first place in Division I, and at the same time, knocked the Knights out of their share of the lead.

Earlier, the Lady Knights had kept their share of the girls' lead with a 52-35 win.

Rose, up by as much as nine points in the third period, saw Northern rally to move ahead once and tie the score twice in the late going before the Rampants got the victory via a defensive play.

Rose held only a 37-34 lead going into the final quarter, and finally lost that when Alvin Battle hit the second of two free throw attempts to put the Knights up, 40-39, with 4:20 left. Rose quickly regained the lead with 4:04 showing as Cliff Kilpatrick hit two from the stripe. Wendell Rodgers followed that up with a jumper for a three-point lead, but a free throw by Frank Brown and a return of a missed shot by David Wells tied it again at 43-all with 2:37 showing.

Donald House, held scoreless in the first half, got his eighth point of the night from underneath with 1:30 left, but two free throws by Chris Jones tied it once more at 45-45 with 1:06 left.

Rose worked the ball until 23 seconds were left and Donald Johnson was fouled at that time. He canned both of his free throws, despite the fact that a Northern Nash student photographer stood at the baseline below the basket and shot flash pictures just as Johnson fired the ball at the hoop. That put Rose up, 47-45. With 15 seconds left, Jones was fouled and made the first but missed the second for the Knights and Johnson pulled off the rebound.

With six seconds to go, Rodgers was fouled and after the photographer was moved off by a few steps, missed his try, again as the flashgun went off. This time, however, officials banished the photographer, and awarded an extra shot.

Rodgers, however, missed the second try, and Northern pulled off the rebound, calling time. The clock was stopped with three seconds left, but the officials added one to that, giving the Knights four seconds to get the ball down court. They were successful, but House was in place to slap the ball down as Jones tried to put it up just before the horn sounded.

"Anytime we can come up here and win, I'll take it any way I can get it," Rose coach Jim Brewington said. "We didn't play well, but we played well enough to win, and I'm tickled to get this win. I think we showed what kind of a club we have when we get in foul trouble and still win."

Rose saw two of its starters, Wallace Brown and Tyrone Tucker go to the bench in the fourth period with their fifth foul. "But our kids who came off the bench did a good job of picking up the slack," Brewington said. "I'm proud of all of them."

Rose shot poorly throughout the game except for the third period when they hit seven of 11. For the rest of the game, they were only 11 of 30. Northern, which hit 50 per cent for the first three periods, lost their shooting touch in the final period, hitting just two of 13 shots—and it was the Rampants' good fortune that they did so poorly.

Northern, however, ruled the backboards, including a 15-10 final period.

The game was tight most of the way. Prior to the third period, neither team got more than three points in front. In the first quarter, the lead changed hands six times and the score was tied at 12-12 at the horn.

The second period again saw it bounce back and fourth. The lead switched only twice, but the score was tied on four occasions, and Rose inched into a 23-22 halftime lead.

After Northern took the lead on the first basket of the period, Rose regained the lead, 25-24, and outhit the Knights, 12-4 over the first five minutes of the third period for a 35-26 lead. But Norther again fought back and trailed by only 37-34 as the quarter ended.

What may have been a fateful call for the Knights came at the end of the half. With two seconds left, a Knight put the ball up, missed and the ball rolled to the floor for several more seconds before Battle picked it up and dropped it through.

However, the officials waved off the basket, ruling that time had run out several seconds before the shot and that the clock operator had failed to cut on the automatic horn.

Brown led the Rose scoring with 13 points, and was the lone Rampant in double figures. Brown had 13, Wells had 12 and Battle had 11 for the Knights, who lost their first home game of the season in the contest.

In the girls' game, Rose gained an early lead over the league-lead-sharing Lady Knights and held a 10-8 advantage as the first period ended.

However, sparked by Marcia Richardson, the Knights pushed through the first eight points of the second period to take a 17-10 lead, and upped the margin to ten, 25-15 before the quarter was over. Northern led at the half, 25-17.

In the third, Northern upped its lead to as much as 12 and held a 41-29 lead at the buzzer. The fourth period saw Rose cut it back to nine before a late spurt ran it out to the final 52-35 margin.

"We played well, but we let them score in spurts," Rose coach Dennis Gibson said. "We'd come back then, and then throw it away a couple of times and let them pull away again."

The Rampants used a box-and-one defense against Richardson, and in general it worked. Although the talented senior scored 21 points, most of them came fast break baskets. She scored only a couple of times on patters as Kim Waller did an outstanding job of defense on her most of the way.

In addition to Richardson's 21, Sonya Dunn added 12. Rose was led by Donna Cullipher with 14 and Sharon Williams with 12.

The Rampants play host to Rocky Mount on Tuesday.

JV—Northern Nash 63, Rose 55.

North Pitt Tops Vikes, Tied For 2nd

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — North Pitt has decided it does not wish to be left out of the race for the Eastern Carolina Conference crown.

For most of the season either D.H. Conley or Farmville Central has stood atop the ECC, leaving North Pitt to look on from behind. Friday night the Panthers, spurred on by Reginald Knight's 30 points and a near-perfect first quarter, made their own case for being No. 1, blasting D.H. Conley, 54-40.

The win moved North Pitt into a tie with the Vikings for second place. Both teams are 8-4 in the league, one game behind Farmville Central, which solidified its hold on first with a two-point win over Southwest Edgecombe Friday evening.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Carolyn Best's three-point play with two seconds left lifted the Pant-HERS past the Valkyries, 39-36.

"We knew they'd be ready for us," Conley's boys' coach Shelley Marsh said. "We'd beaten them four times in a row and we knew they'd be coming after us tonight.

"I wasn't surprised with the effort they gave," Marsh said. "I knew that we'd have to play a tremendous game to win here."

Before the crowd had time to get a handfull of popcorn in its mouth, North Pitt, hitting its first six shots, had spurted to a 12-0 advantage. The Panthers, who hit 9-of-11 from the floor in the first period, extended that lead to 20-4 at the close of the quarter and Conley, now 12-5 overall, could get no closer than nine the rest of the way.

The Panthers, who led 26-13 at intermission, hit 11-of-18 shots in the first half, for 61%, and 19-of-34 for the game, for 53%.

In the second half, North Pitt, with Knight collecting 18 of his 30 points, maintained a 10-to-15 point bulge before Conley closed within nine, 42-33, early in the final period on two buckets by Mitchell Moore.

"After we got it down to nine I think we got a little hasty and impatient," Marsh said. "We made a couple of turnovers and our shot selection wasn't very good".

The Panthers, now 11-7 overall, kept their poise and quickly moved back on top by 13, 46-33, before coasting home with the win. Curtis Spencer led Conley with 12 points while Milton Hardy had 10 for North Pitt.

"We always come to play Conley," North Pitt coach Cobbie Deans said. "We always give it our best shot against them, though it might not always show on the scoreboard.

"Our shooting was excellent tonight and Milton (Hardy) and Reginald (Knight) just had great games," Deans said. "We're in good shape right now as far as the conference goes, with this win.

"After we lost to Farmville (60-59) last week, we told out kids to take one game at a time. Our big game was Greene Central (Thursday) night. It was on the road and we needed it.

"But our kids have done a real good job," he said. "We were able to come back home and beat Conley after beating Greene Central last night."

Less than a month ago North Pitt was walloped by D.H. Conley, 71-52. Since then, Deans said his club has made tremendous progress.

"I'm real pleased with the progress the kids have made. This game was just a concentration of that progress we've made"' Deans said. "We have had some good effort over the past few weeks and we're getting back into the conference race."

In the girls' game, North Pitt struggled back after falling behind by four midway through the final period to win its sixth game of the season against 11 losses. The Pant-HERS are 4-9 in the league.

D.H. Conley, which missed three opportunities to take the lead in the last minute and thirty seconds when it failed to connect on three free throw chances, fell to 5-7 in the ECC and 8-7 overall.

After leading only once through three quarters of action, Conley scored seven straight points to take a 32-28 lead with four a and a half minutes to go.

After an exchange of buckets, North Pitt rattled off six unanswered points — on two free throws by Starla Singleton, a free throw by Best and a free throw and a layup by Jeannette Brown— to go up by two, 36-34, with 1:41 left.

Moments later, Conley's Tammy Streeter, after racing down a missed free throw, hit a driving jumper to tie the score at 36-36. Streeter was fouled on the play but missed, leaving the score knotted with 1:35 remaining.

Conley, however, recovered the rebound but Glenda Green, who led the Valkyries with 12 points, could not connect on the front end of a one-and-one.

After a missed layup by Best on North Pitt's ensuing trip down court, Conley's Tilda Garris missed on a one-and-one which could have given the Valkyries the lead.

Conley, however, forced a jump ball following the miss but turned it over seconds later when Glenda Green was whistled for a charging foul.

The Pant-HERS then waited for the last shot, which they got when Best squirted down the left side of the lane and threw up a running one-hander with two seconds left to put North Pitt on top. Best, fouled on the play, hit her free throw to seal the win.

"We needed this badly," North Pitt assistant coach Randy Avery said. "Practices were getting pretty bad, they were becoming almost a ritual."

Avery, taking over Friday night for head coach Gail Stanfield, who was sick, recorded his first victory as a head coach at North Pitt.

"Yes, it feels good. 'But I'm just proud of the girls. They all played real well," he said. They didn't quit when we got down and that's something we needed.

"We've been telling them all along they could play with the other teams in the league, now maybe they'll believe us."

"We've had some rough times. We've been through some ups and downs, but tonight we played well."

The Pant-HERS led from the start, taking an 11-8 first-period lead and then spurting to a 17-11 bulge midway through the second quarter before settling in with a 19-15 halftime lead.

North Pitt mounted its advantage in the third period, moving ahead 25-17 with 2:37 left before a late rally by Conley made it 26-21 going into the final quarter.

Spurred on by Glenda Green's six points, the Valkyries, who have depended on Green all year to provide the offensive spark inside, moved ahead, 32-28, before faltering at the end.

Jaguars Stall Hopes Of Cougar Slowdown

PINETOPS — Farmville Central's Dennis Pitt sank a layup with three seconds remaining in the game Friday night as the loop-leading Jaguars overcame Southwest Edgecombe's slow tempo to register a 39-37 Eastern Carolina Conference victory.

In the girls' game, Southwest Edgecombe's undefeated Cougarettes pounded out their 19th consecutive win, and their 13th in the conference, with a convincing 73-36 caging of the Jaguarettes.

Pitt, FC's leading scorer in the game with 20 points, stole a Cougar pass and raced downcourt to sink the winning shot, spoiling Southwest Edgecombe's last shot hopes.

The Cougars attempted to control the tempo of the game from the very outset. Southwest grabbed the first quarter lead at 13-12, but Farmville Central outscored the host team, 10-7, in the second frame to take a two-point, 22-20 halftime advantage.

Southwest used a slow attack in the third frame to score six points, while limiting the Jaguars to only four to tie the game at 26 heading into the fourth quarter. The two teams battled even in the fourth frame, until Pitt's steal iced the game for the Jaguars.

Pitt was the only Jaguar to hit in double figures. Farmville's Mike Baker knocked in nine points. Charles Odom of Southwest Edgecombe paced the host attack with 16 and he was joined in double digits by teammate Danny Robinson, who bucketed 10 for the Cougars, now 6-7 in the ECC and 9-10 overall. Farmville improved its conference slate to 9-3 and the win leaves it with a 13-5 overall slate.

In the girls game, Southwest pushed out to a 24-6 first period lead and were never threatened by the second-place Jaguarettes, who fell to 8-4 in the ECC. The Cougarettes tallied 16 points to FC's 13 in the second frame to record a 40-19 dressing room lead.

The host squad ran away with the contest with the help of a 22-point third period, while Farmville Central could push through only six points. The teams played even in the fourth quarter, scoring 11 points each.

Alphia Jenkins led all scorers in the game with 25 and was joined by teammate Harriet McNeill in double digits, as she flipped in 15. Etta Gorham contributed 10 points for the visitors.

Cardinals Roll By 'Billikens

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

According to Darrell Griffith, the Louisville Cardinals are birds of a feather this year, the most "together" basketball team he's seen by a long shot.

"I can't say it's the best talent we've had, but it's the closest we've been as a team," says the Cardinal catalyst. "It has the most desire."

That togetherness has been dramatically evident this year with Louisville carving out a 15-2 record, including Friday night's 99-74 rout of Metro Confererence foe St. Louis.

"There's no question that they're good," Billiken Coach Ron Ekker said of the seventh-ranked Cardinals. "They're so quick at all positions. There's no place they aren't quick. You might be able to stay with them at a couple of positions, but they run away from you at the other three."

One of the positions that Ekker's team was unable to handle was Griffith's.

LITTLEFIELD— It was of those "you can't have it because I want it" type basketball games played here Friday night between the Chargers of Ayden-Grifton and the Hawks of North Lenoir.

The lead changed hands ten times during the course of the cage action, and was knotted three more times, before Ayden-Grifton's Tim Edwards swished a 20-footer with 20 seconds left in the game to give the Chargers a 58-57 win over the visitors from North Lenoir in the Eastern Carolina Conference battle.

"Things finally fell into place," a relieved Charger mentor Bob Murphrey noted after the game. "We wanted to start playing tough early, and we did so with intensity. It is good to win, period, but we really needed a win. It was a good team effort," the coach added.

The first quarter gave a good indication of just what kind of game the two conference teams were about to play. Both teams grabbed first quarter leads and five times in the opening period the lead changed hands. The Hawks pushed out to a sudden 4-1 advantage before Ayden-Grifton grabbed the upper hand with five straight points, 6-4. North Lenoir answered with six straight for a 10-6 lead until the home team responded with six of their own to inch ahead, 11-10. The visitors added four straight for a 14-11 lead before Ayden-Grifton sank a pair of field goals to give the Chargers a hard-fought 15-14 advantage at the close of the period.

The second quarter started off as a repeat of the first, with Ayden-Grifton opening up a four-point spread before North Lenoir tied it at 23. At this point, the Chargers began to take command of the game, holding on to a four-point lead. During the waning moments of the first half, Murphrey's crew threw in six straight points, which gave them a 10-point 37-27 locker room advantage.

North Lenoir would not sink. The Hawks flew back in the third frame to tally the first 14 points of the quarter to take a 41-37 lead, as a result of bad-Charger passes and shot selection. Two quick steals by the host unit brought Ayden-Grifton within a pair at 45-47, and Edwards shot at the buzzer tied the score at 47.

Four times the lead changed hands in the final frame, with the Hawks gaining the first lead at 48-47. A-G opened up a three-point spread at both 51-48 and 53-50, before NL tied the score at 53. The Chargers held on to a slim one-point lead until, with 30 ticks remaining, the Hawks sank a field goal to take a 57-56 advantage.

Following a Charger time-out, Edwards, off a double pick, found himself alone in the right corner for an uncontested 20-footer with 20 seconds left. Working with patience, the Hawks' Eugene Connor shot a 15-footer with five seconds left that rimmed the basket before missing, giving the Chargers the win.

"It was a planned play," Murphrey said of Edwards' shot, "and it worked. Our problem all year has been that we seem to play in lulls, as in the third quarter. Our defense really picked up our offense tonight."

North Lenoir's Johnny Bryant took home game honors with 24 points and was joined in double figures by teammate Connor, who added 14. Edwards paced the Charger attack with 16 points while Clarence Baker chipped in 12.

The win left Ayden-Grifton with a 3-9 ECC slate and gave the Chargers a 3-15 overall record. North Lenoir suffered its seventh loop loss against five wins and left the Hawks 6-12 overall.

In the opener of the conference twinbill, the host Chargerettes used six quick points in the third frame to takea 23-15 lead enrounte to the nine-point, 44-35, victory.

Leading by only a pair of points at intermission, Coach Kathy Purvis' unit tallied the first six points of the third quarter to take what was then the biggest lead by either team. From then on, the visitors from Wheat Swamp were unable to get closer than four points, that coming in the opening moments of the fourth period.

Coach Purvis said she was a little worried going into the contest that her team's performance the night before, a double-overtime victory over D.H. Conley, might affect the Chargerette play. "We were a little tired before we started," she said, "but I think last night's win gave our team confidence. We were able to win the close one, and that helped us prepare for tonight's game."

The last time the Chargerettes battled the Lady Hawks, North Lenoir won by about 25 points, Purvis said, because North closed up the middle play of her squad. "Tonight, we played patient and we were not afraid to shoot from the outside," she explained. "We have been relying on our inside play, but tonight we were able to pick out our good outside shots."

Behind the four-for-five shooting of Sharon Gillette, North Lenoir grabbed the initial lead before the Chargerettes put together four straight points and managed a two-point, 11-9, first quarter advantage.

Both teams were off the mark in the second quarter with the Chargerettes connecting on two of 13 field-goals while the Lady Hawks were sinking three of their nine attempts. With the help of two free throws from Joan Albritton, Ayden-Grifton was able to charge into the dressing room with the same two-point margin, 17-15.

Early in the third period, Ayden-Grifton took advantage of North Lenoir mistakes to lay in the first six points of the eight-minute quarter and build an eight-point, 23-15, lead. the visitors again found it hard to find the bucket, hitting on two of ten from the floor, as they watched the home team corner a 29-21 third period lead.

The Lady Hawks kept the game within reach during the final quarter before three straight steals led to three consecutive layups for the Chargerettes as they hiked the lead up to 12 points, at 41-29, with 1:30 left in the game.

Gillete led all scorers in the contest with 16 points and was the only visitor to finish in double figures. Ayden-Grifton's Marie Lewis chunked in 15 points and was joined in double digits by teammate Aretha Cannon, who dished in 11.

With the win, Ayden-Grifton improves its record to 8-4 in the ECC and 12-4 overall, which ties the Chargerettes with the Lady Hawks, who carry 8-4 and 12-6 slates.

Rein's Death Still Hasn't Hit Family

CARY, N.C. (AP) — Suzanne Kay Rein says because her husband was often out recruiting or tending to other football matters, the impact of his death has not quite confronted her.

"Bo never was home much, so I don't think the full effect of the accident has hit yet," Mrs. Rein, 33, said in her interview at her home in the Raleigh suburb of Cary.

Robert "Bo" Rein resigned as head coach at North Carolina State in November to take the head coaching job at Louisiana State University. He and a pilot were killed while on a flight from Shreveport to Baton Rouge.

While Rein was in Louisiana getting accustomed to his new duties, his wife remained in Cary with her two daughters, Linea, 9, and Kristen, 13, to sell the family's home. Mrs. Rein said her daughters seem to be adjusting well to the loss of their father.

"My daughters seem to be taking things okay because Bo was away so much. But it's still hard for us to believe he won't come walking through that front door," she said.

Mrs. Rein also said she will remain in the Raleigh area to live. She said her sister, Sandra Dean, will move to Cary from Portland, Ore., to live with them.

She said that the adjustments to life with a football coach weren't always easy during the first years of her marriage because of the amount of time Rein spent on the road recruiting prep football players.

"You learn to make friends, become independent and manage for yourself or your marriage ends," she said.

But despite the early difficulties, she said, Rein always managed to keep the family together and happy.

"Some football coaches just live and breathe football, but Bo always remembered his family," Mrs. Rein said. "He'd get nervous, rub his hands together and pace before every game. But he never took his job or the hard losses out on us."

Rein was returning to Baton Rouge from a recruiting trip to Shreveport when the twin-engine plane lost radio contact and strayed more than 1,000 miles off course. Air Force planes located the craft over North Carolina and Virginia but were unable to detect any signs of life in it before it flew off the Virginia coast and crashed into the Atlantic.

Only several pieces of the plane have been found.

Bears Down Mattamuskeet

SWAN QUARTER — Bear Grass held on to a share of second place in the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference with a 59-45 victory over Mattamuskeet High School Friday night.

The Laker girls, however, gained a 47-36 win over the Lady Bears.

Mattmauskeet jumped off to a 16-10 lead in the boys game during the first period. The Bears came back with a 17-10 margin in the second frame for a 27-26 halftime lead. Both teams pushed through 13 points in the third frame, leaving the score at 40-39. The Bears then outdistanced the Lakers in the final quarter, 19-6, to take the win.

Watson Rogers and Jesse Bullock each scored 15 points for the Bears, while Wilbert Williams added 12. The Lakers were led by Gary Woods and William Mackey, each with 15.

The girls' game saw Mattamuskeet take a 9-3 lead in the first period and hold on for a 16-9 halftime advantage. Bear Grass clipped one off that in the third, trailing 26-20, but the Lakers outhit them in the final period, 21-16, to take the win.

Augusta Graves led the Lakers with 19, while Angie Mizelle led Bear Grass with 19.

NBA's Big Boys Get Cut Down To Size

By The Associated Press

It was a night when the big boys of the National Basketball Association got shot down to size.

The three teams with the best records in the league — the Philadelphia 76ers, Boston Celtics and Seattle SuperSonics — all came up losers Friday, and so did the Kansas City Kings, who lead the Midwest Division.

The slumping Atlanta Hawks, Central Division leaders, probably escaped the night of infamy by virtue of not being scheduled.

Jamaal Wilkes' 30 points led the Los Angeles Lakers to their 11th consecutive victory at home, a 124-103 defeat of the 76ers, whose nine-game winning streak came to an end.

In other games, the Washington Bullets defeated the Celtics 118-107, the Chicago Bulls downed the Kings 113-107 in overtime, the San Antonio Spurs whipped the SuperSonics 125-116, the Phoenix Suns trounced the Milwaukee Bucks 110-96, the New York Knicks overtook the Golden State Warriors 110-105, the Indiana Pacers trimmed the San Diego Clippers 139-117 and the Detroit Pistons beat the New Jersey Nets 119-116.

The Lakers picked up a full game on the Sonics in the Pacific Division and trail Seattle by 1½ games. Wilkes was followed in the scoring column by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Norm Nixon, each with 24 points, Jim Chones with 16 and Michael Cooper with 14. Earvin "Magic" Johnson, recuperating from a pulled groin muscle, came off the bench and scored 10 points, while Julius Erving led the 76ers with 24.

Philadelphia led by as many as nine points in the first quarter before the Lakers caught fire and outscored the 76ers 22-8 during the first 6½ minutes of the second quarter to take a 48-38 lead.

Bullets 118, Celtics 107

Swingman Roger Phegley came off the bench to score eight points in both the second and fourth periods and help Washington hand Boston only its fourth home loss in 25 games. Elvin Hayes and Bob Dandridge led the Bullets with 25 points apiece and Wes Unseld contributed 17.

Bulls 113, Kings 107

Ricky Sobers scored eight points in overtime and David Greenwood added four for Chicago. Reggie Theus hit a three-point basket with 10 seconds to go. Spurs 125, SuperSonics 116

George Gervin and James Silas teamed up for 21 points in the final period as San Antonio won its fourth game in a row, ended Seattle's eight-game winning streak and climbed within one-half game of Atlanta in the Central Division.

Suns 110, Bucks 96

Truck Robinson's 23 points led a balanced Phoenix attack. The Suns led by as many as 20 in the first half and took a 64-46 halftime lead and the closest the Bucks came after that was 14 points despite 32 by Marques Johnson and 24 by Sidney Moncreif.

Knicks 110, Warriors 105

The Knicks, led by rookie Bill Cartwright and Michael Ray Richardson, came from 15 points behind in the final period. Cartwright, the former University of San Francisco star playing in his first NBA game in his home area, scored 31 points, including 10 in the last quarter.

Pacers 139, Clippers 117

Billy Knight scored a career-high 44 points and six other Pacers finished in double figures. James Edwards had 21 points, 12 of them in the first period, and Alex English came off the bench to score 20.

Pistons 119, Nets 116

Rookie Greg Kelser's slam-dunk with 28 seconds remaining capped a furious Detroit comeback as the Pistons broke a 12-game losing streak on the road.

Slammin' Hayes

Elvin Hayes of the Washington Bullets slams the ball through the hoop while Boston Celtic's Eric Fernsten is unable to stop him while Bob Dandridge watched the action during the fourth quarter of the NBA game Friday at Boston Garden. The Bullets downed the Celtics, 118-107. (AP Laserphoto)

Bullets Top Belhaven Five

BELHAVEN — Trent Ange pumped in 17 points and Keith Modlin added 15 as Jamesville whipped Belhaven, 71-63, Friday night in Beufort-Hyde-Martin Conference game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Belhaven blasted Jamesville, 68-35.

Jamesville's boys, now 9-8 overall and 6-4 in the league, inched ahead in the opening period, 13-10, but wound up tied, 25-25 at the half.

The Bullets, who had five players in double figures, moved ahead, 44-33, at the end of the third period and extended their lead to 15 early in the fourth period. Belhaven narrowed the gap to four before Jamesville held on to win.

Alan Frazier had 11 for the winners while James Armond and Kerwin Cross had 10.

In the girls' game, Belhaven, with four players scoring in double figures, grabbed the early lead and was never headed.

Belhaven led 14-3 and 33-16 at the end of the first two quarters before coasting home the winner.

Jamesville was led by Tammy Williams and Terry Bell, both of whom tallied eight points.

Four In NFL's Hall-Of-Fame

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Defensive stars Bob Lilly, Herb Adderly and Deacon Jones join Jim Otto, the Oakland Raiders' durable center, as the 1980 selections for the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

The four will be enshrined into the game's shrine in ceremonies Saturday, Aug. 2 in Canton, prior to the annual Hall of Fame exhibition game. The Green Bay Packers will face the San Diego Chargers this year.

Their inductions will increase the immortals in the shrine to 106.

Lilly, Otto and Jones were elected by the Hall's 29-member board of selectors in their first year of eligibility, five years after their retirements from the game. Adderley made it in his third year of eligibility.

Lilly, a Texas Christian All-American, was the Dallas Cowboys' first ever draft choice in 1961. For the next 14 seasons, he helped make the Cowboys a dominant force in the National Football League, first as a defensive end and then as a defensive tackle.

Equally effective as a pass rusher or ground defender, Lilly was the 1961 Rookie of the Year and was an all-NFC choice every season from 1964 through 1969.

The 6-5, 260-pound product of Throckmorton, Texas, even scored four touchdowns in his career, one on a 17-yard interception return and the other three on fumble recoveries. He played in 196 consecutive regular season games.

Jones, from Eatonville, Fla., was a 14th-round draft choice of the Los Angeles Rams in 1961, but was the league's most honored defensive lineman by the late 1960s. The 6-foot-4, 272-pound end earned unanimous all-league honors for six straight years. He also performed in seven consecutive Pro Bowls.

It's difficult to imagine a player dominating his position more than the 6-2, 255-pound Otto did for the Oakland Raiders.

Voted the all-time American Football League's center, the native of Wausau, Wis., won All-AFL acclaim for 10 straight seasons and followed it by being named the NFL's All-AFC center for three more times in his 15 pro seasons.

Otto, a star linebacker-center at the University of Miami (Fla.), started in 210 straight games in regular season, but actually played in 308 games for the Raiders. He played in 73 pre-season, 13 post-season and 12 all-star contests, too.

Adderley, a 6-1, 200-pound Philadelphia native, was Green Bay's first pick in 1961 and took immediate command of the Packers' defensive backfield. Within two seasons, he won all-NFL honors and repeated four times, helping the Packers establish a dynasty under the late Vince Lombardi.

Adderley piled up 48 interceptions, returning them for 1,046 yards in his 12 seasons. His seven touchdowns on interceptions ranks second only to still-active Ken Houston as an NFL record.

Doubling as a kickoff return specialist, Adderley played in five Pro Bowls and four of the first six Super Bowls, helping the Packers win three of them. He averaged 25.7 yards on 120 career kickoff returns, led by a 103-yard gem in 1962 and a 98-yard return in 1963.

Pro Bowl Set Today

HONOLULU (AP) — Record-breaking Dan Fouts of the San Diego Chargers will try to end the National Conference's two-year lock on the Pro Bowl Sunday when he quarterbacks the American Conference in the National Football League's all-star showcase.

Fouts, who passed for 4,082 yards in 1979 to break Joe Namath's single-season mark of 4,007 yards, will be backed up in the AFC backfield by Super Bowl quarterback Terry Bradshaw of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The NFC has a 5-4 edge over the AFC in this series, having won the last two games, including the 1979 edition 13-7.

St. Peters Wins 2-of-3

St. Peters won two of three basketball games against Havelock Saturday afternoon here.

St. Peter's boys nipped the Rams, 30-26, behind William Waugh's 17 points. The girls fell, 44-14, while the St. Peters' junior varsity won, 15-10.

Bruins Denied Stay On Suspensions

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

The Boston Bruins failed in U.S. District Court Saturday night in a bid to gain a restraining order by gametime to stay the suspensions of three of their players by the National Hockey League.

Judge Robert Keeton denied the Bruins' motion after a hearing in the Boston court that lasted slightly more than an hour. The unusual Saturday session ended less than an hour before the Bruins met the Penguins in Pittsburgh.

Judge Keeton upheld the contention by the NHL that the Bruins had not exhausted all administrative remedies, specifically in appealing to the Board of Governors of the league.

James St. Clair, a prominent Boston attorney, who represented the National Hockey League, argued successfully that the Bruins should have appealed to the Board of Governors for a stay before seeking court relief.

A battery of team lawyers, led by James Dittmar, went into court for the Bruins seeking to stay the suspension of the three players until a hearing by the league next week.

"Right now I don't know what our next move will be," Paul Mooney, president of the Bruins, told The Associated Press.

Mooney decided on the court action Saturday afternoon.

Mooney's action followed by hours Friday's suspension by NHL President John Ziegler of Bruins players Terry O'Reilly, Mike Milbury and Peter McNab for their participation in a Dec. 23 altercation with spectators in the stands at Madison Square Garden.

O'Reilly was suspended without pay for eight games, and Milbury and McNab for six games each for their part on the disturbance.

The team president added the Bruins had appealed to the league for a hearing on the matter and "we have been advised by Mr. Ziegler he is attempting to provide that hearing next week — possibly Wednesday."

While Mooney expressed shock over the Ziegler's decision and said he "would not accept" the disciplinary measures, he said Saturday he would not attempt to have the suspended athletes play against Pittsburgh if the restraining order were not granted.

"I don't think that would be in anyone's interest, or in the best interests of conducting an NHL game," he said.

However, prior to taking his action Saturday, Mooney lashed out at the NHL president, saying his ruling was "unjustified and not supported by the facts.

"We do not accept his (Ziegler's) findings ...these findings are a whitewash and a discredit to the principles of fair play," he told the Boston Globe.

In an effort to bolster the Bruins' lineup against the losses of the three players, defenseman Brad Park — out with knee problems the entire season — was to be in uniform Saturday night while left wing John Wensink was to return early from a hand injury and right wing Tom Songin was promoted from the minor leagues.

Mooney told the Globe Ziegler's action "somehow makes the Bruins' players both the victims and scapegoats of an unprovoked attack."

The "attack" to which Mooney referred came when a spectator leaned over a walkway adjacent to the Garden ice surface and punched Boston left wing Stan Jonathan in the face as Bruins and New York Rangers players exchanged words after a 4-3 Boston triumph Dec. 23.

The punch sparked a charge by Bruins players — led by O'Reilly — into the Garden stands to scuffle with the antagonist, who also took a stick from one of the players and began swinging it.

"The League expects and demands of the employees of all clubs and the League that they decline from any confrontation with fans, regardless of the provocation," Ziegler's decision said in part. "The League insists ...it can recognize no exception to this rule, nor justification for its violation."

As a result, O'Reilly was suspended (effective Saturday night) and fined $500 — the maximum allowable financial penalty under NHL by-laws — with a lesser suspension but the same fines assessed McNab and Milbury.

Ziegler also assessed fines of $500 to Craig MacTavish, Wensink, Gilles Gilbert and Al Secord for going into the stands to become embroiled with spectators.

Rozelle Warns Raiders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle has warned the Oakland Raiders that if the team shifts to Los Angeles without the league's sanction, it could be scratched from the 1980 NFL schedule.

According to documents made public Friday, even with NFL approval, the Raiders' bid to replace the Anaheim-bound Rams could include costly conditions against the Raiders for at least five years.

In a letter dated Jan. 10 to Al Davis, the Raiders' co-managing general partner, Rozelle outlined the NFL's possible responses to such a move.

The letter was among documents filed Friday by Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum attorneys in connection with the Coliseum's antitrust suit against the NFL pending in U.S. District Court here.

In the letter, Rozelle noted the NFL office "will shortly have to begin making up the 1980 NFL schedule. Unless the clubs approve a transfer, the constitution and by-laws of the NFL will not permit this office to prepare a schedule calling for the Oakland Raiders to play their home games in a location other than Oakland."

Commission lawyers, saying the letter bolsters their case, contend its intent was to "intimidate Mr. Davis from moving or even from applying to the owners for permission to move his franchise."

The commission has asked for a preliminary injunction to bar the NFL from blocking a Raiders' move to Los Angeles. A Feb. 4 hearing has been set.

The commission argues that an NFL rule that says a move must be approved by 21 of the 28 league teams is a violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act. Davis has stated that such a vote is not necessary.

In the letter to Davis, Rozelle added that even with league permission to move, the owners could impose financial sanctions requiring the Raiders to guarantee visiting teams proceeds "equivalent to those now being returned in Oakland for a future period, perhaps through the 1984 Olympics."

The teams also could require the Raiders to bear the burden of any reduction in television proceeds and be accountable for and hold the league harmless against any legal actions that may result from the move.

It also was revealed Friday that Davis has demanded from the commission that a non-refundable payment of several million dollars be made to the Raiders upon consummation of an agreement to move.

However, commission attorney Stephen Reinhardt said that the commission is "unwilling to agree" to this demand.

Roanoke Boys, Girls Fighting For League Titles

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke basketball coach Henry Land is having nightmares and it's all because his Redskins are shooting better from the floor than from the free throw line.

"Our problems have come at the foul line this year," said Land, whose squad is hitting under 49 percent from the foul line while connecting on 52 percent from the field. "We've hurt ourselves almost every game there. We definitely lost on one conference game because of it and when we lost to Ahoskie last week by 10 points we hit only eight of 22 free throws.

"It's giving me nightmares."

This past Tuesday evening Roanoke added to Land's misery. The Redskins, hitting only 15-of-30 free throws, dropped a 62-61 double overtime decision to Northeastern Conference foe Ahoskie. It was the second loss to the Cougars in two weeks.

The Redskins then turned around Friday night and defeated Tarboro, 66-53, knocking the Vikings out of first in the conference and leaving Roanoke still in the hunt for the league crown.

Roanoke is 6-4 in the league, two games back of Plymouth and Williamston, and 10-8 overall.

"At the present time we definitely cannot say who is going to take first in the league," Land said before this week's play. "The conference is more or less balanced this year. We don't have a dominate team like we have had in the past with Washington.

"If we can win these two games this week we'll have a great chance of going to the districts and even winning the conference," Land siad.

Starting for the Redskins this season are Grady Smith, Anthony Latham, Donald Weathersbee, Maurice Chance and Fred Williams.

The rest of the lineup inclueds Jeremiah Outerbridge, Willie Carr, Herbert Scott, James Jones and Carlton Moore.

The Redskins have lost starting center Glenn Cargile and veteran forward Roy Moore for the season because of injuries.

Girls' Basketball

For Roanoke coach Phil Griffin and his Redskins basketball is a three-guard offense and pressure defense.

"The press is something we've lived with and sometimes died with, but mostly it's helped us," Griffin said. "And using the three-guard offense, though it hurts us height-wise, gives us some more quickness in our press."

As a result, the Redskins, following lopsided wins over conference foes Ahoskie and Tarboro this past week, are tied for the lead in the Northeastern Conference with Washington. Both schools are 9-2 in the league. The Redskins are 13-6 overall.

"We press as much as anyone we go up against," Griffin said. "We just play better with it. Everybody gets into the game and we're able to get pretty good transitions with it."

Griffin is, however, surprised with the Redskins' record thus far.

"We really didn't expect to be in this position," Griffin said. "It's been surprising so far but we're getting good play from everybody.

"Our inside game has been hurting but part of it is our three-guard offense. We have, though, been able to penetrate somewhat om the middle with Carolyn Jones."

Starting for the Redskins this season are Carolyn Jones, Evelyn Martin, Wanda Roberson, Sylvia Parker and Terri Modica. Anna Moore has also started for the Redskins this year.

The rest of the squad includes Tammy Hines, Dezella Jones, Lynette Whitley, Belinda Jones, Mary Bland, Cynthia Burnette, Barbara Jo Morning, Shelia Howell, Paula Respess, Raine Smith and Shirley Baker, at 6'0" Griffin's tallest player.

Wrestling

Frustration for a wrestling coach is having to forfeit the first four weight classes, which is exactly what Coach Frank Mobley's Roanoke Redskins have had to do every match this season.

Roanoke's wrestling team, in its first year, has yet to win a match in 10 outings.

"We just can't make up that 24-point difference," Mobley said. "We've been able to score some points in our matches but it's hard to overcome that 24-point deficit."

Mobley isn't surprised that his Redskins have had a problem filling their lineup, he just expected the gap to be in the heavier weight classes.

"I thought I'd have a lot of little guys coming out and not a lot of heavier guys," he said. "But it's been the exact opposite. We need the small kids. This should be a sport for them."

With only one senior on the squad, the Redskins figure to get better in the coming years. For now, however, the Roanoke lineup is full of inexperience.

"We'll have everyone except one kid back," Mobley said. "It usually takes about a year for them to get their moves down so they're instinctive.

"Right now, they're getting the moves but they're thinking about them and they're about a second late when they do make them.

"But next year we'll have a lot of kids returning and we'll start doing things by instinct."

Starting for the Redskins this year are Jesse Whitley (119 pounds), Wesley Jackson (126), John Jackson (134), Joey Ross (147), Edward Bunch and Lee Briley (alternate between 155 and 167), Hal Leggette and Gregory White (185) and Tim Everett and Lee Haislip (alternate between 195 and heavyweight).

Pirate Wrestlers Win Two Out Of Three

BOONE — Heavyweight D.T. Joyner and 177-pounder Butch Revils each continued their winning ways on the wrestling mat Saturday as the East Carolina Pirates captured two of three matches in a four school meet at Appalachian State.

Revils, 26-1 and ranked sixth in the nation in the 177-pound class, won all three of his Saturday matches as he pinned his Central Florida counterpart, decisioned his Clemson opponent and won by default over his competition from ASU. Joyner, 25-2 and ranked seventh nationally among heavyweights, pinned both his Central Florida and Appalachian State enemies and decisioned his opposition from Clemson.

Coach Ed Steers' squad slipped by Central Florida, 26-23, and squeaked past the Mountaineers, 22-18, before falling to the Atlantic Coast Conference powerhouse Clemson unit, 29-10.

"We could have beat Clemson," a disappointed Steers said Saturday night, "but we didn't earn it. We have lots of talent on the team, but we are also inexperienced and vulnerable."

The two wins and a loss gave the Pirates a 4-2 slate heading into Saturday's quad meet with William And Mary and Clemson at Virginia Tech.

PLAN YOUR HOME

The Peartree

Picturesque Design Offers Three Bedrooms

By Jerry Bishop

Quaint and charming in its exterior styling, the Peartree displays a deceptively spacious floor plan. This cottage-like one story home provides a central foyer plan with separate living room, family room and kitchen as well as three sizable bedrooms and two full baths.

The exterior of the Peartree is a picture of enchantment and balances Old English brick with vertical siding. Diamond light windows are accented by a storybook roof treatment, and well-placed planters provide the final touch.

Inside, the home becomes less like a fairy tale cottage and more like a home of the Seventies. Two panels of light stream into the foyer, which joins the central hall-way to permit access to all areas of the home. Immediately to the left of the foyer, the quiet living room offers space for entertaining in the formal vein. For casual gatherings, the plan shows an adjacent family room, furnished with handy storage closet and plenty of natural light.

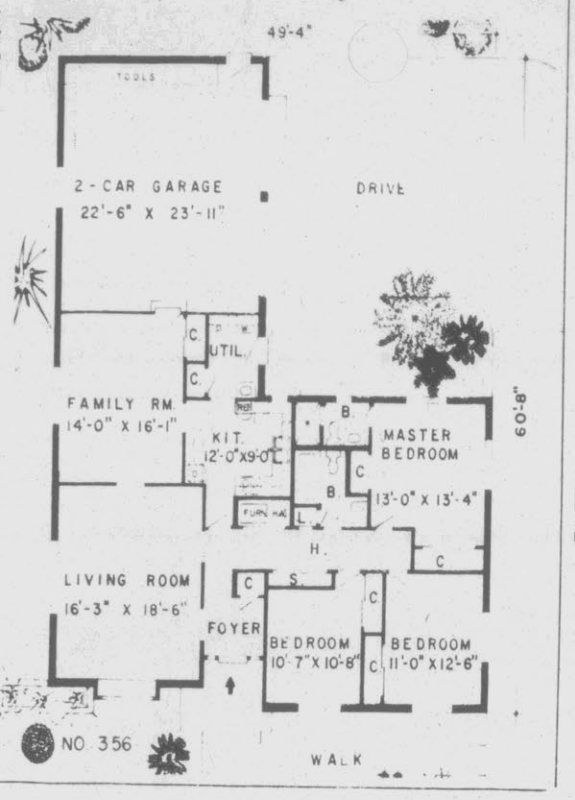

Conveniently located near living and family rooms and separated from the foyer by a door, the kitchen is large enough to guarentee unobstructed cooking and ample counter space.

An important aspect of this plan is its first floor utility room. Open to yard and kitchen, the room functions as a laundry center and includes a sink and storage closet.

Three bedrooms are clustered around the central hallway, carefully lined with storage and linen closets. Favored with double closets and full bath with shower, the master bedroom is set apart for added privacy.

Given as much attention as other elements in the floor plan, the expansive double garage is allotted a tool storage area and entrances to the back yard and family room. Its placement at the rear of the home maintains the charming exterior and produces a home less than 50 feet wide and suited to a narrow lot.

Playpens Can Be Source Of Injuries For Infants

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Remember playpens? Those non-human "babysitters" which are havens where a baby can explore the environment without destroying itself, its parents' sanity and the visible contents of the household.

Yet, playpens themselves are capable of hurting a child. National injury statistics indicate that poorly-designed playpens have been a significant cause of infant accidents.

A playpen with incorrectly-sized mesh holes or side bars can ensnare a baby's buttons or head and lead to strangulation. A playpen floor which is not strong enough can break and lead to splinters and cuts. Sharp edges and rough spots can hurt tiny fingers and faces.

A child can climb out of a playpen which measures less than 20 inches high, upsetting it in the process. Or, an inquisitive baby can figure out how to collapse a playpen that does not have a secure locking device, rendering itself liable to serious injury.

Most playpens have been designed to take into account possible accidents and how to avoid them. But now, as a result of a new certification program established by makers of baby furniture, consumers will be able to identify safe playpens before they buy them.

A seal of certification appears on approximately 60 percent of all playpens on the market. The seal indicates that the product has been tested independently and meets a safety standard recently adopted by the Juvenile Products Manufacturers Association (JPMA).

In addition, a leaflet published by the association gives details of how to shop for a safe playpen. The playpen standard is the second in a number of anticipated nursery-product standards to be developed in the interest of safety. The first standard developed in 1975 and 1976 was for high chairs. According to William L. MacMillan, III, executive director of JPMA, approximately 80 percent of high chairs on the market are eligible to display safety seals.

Standards for baby carriages and strollers as well as for hand-held baby carriers, popularly known as infant seats, are also in the process of being developed.

"JPMA began this standards writing program in 1975 after studying statistics compiled by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission which showed there were some problem areas with our products," said MacMillan. "We started with high chairs because the statistics indicated that they represented the most serious safety problems."

In order to satisfy the CPSC and to avoid compulsory standards, the group of about 80 manufacturers of baby furniture and accessories went out of its way to develop an independent standard.

According to MacMillan, all standards are written by the American Society for Testing and Materials (ASTM) and, before being adopted, are rigorously debated by knowledgeable industry members, consumers, government representatives and qualified engineers and designers. All negative criticisms and questions must be answered before a standard is adopted.

JPMA has added the additional step of certification to make it easier to identify the safer (Sand probably more expensive) products.

"We're trying to say with the seal, 'Parents, you should really not buy a playpen or a high chair that does not have a seal, even if it is less expensive'," said MacMillan.

Once awarded a seal, a product is tested every six months to make sure it is still meeting the standards. According to MacMillan approximately "90 percent of the total dollar volume in juvenile products is represented by companies who are members of JPMA and foreign companies can easily participate in our certification program, too."

More than 200 high chair models and 75 play pen models have been shown to meet JPMA standards, he added.

When shopping for a playpen, MacMillan advises consumers to look for a model at least 20 inches high, with a strong railing and floor and holes or side rails that will not catch a child's apparel or fingers. Avoid playpens with poor locking devices and any model with sharp edges or protrusions.

When buying a high chair, look for a strong frame, joints and a seat that withstands rough treatment, and a strong restraining device to keep the baby in the chair; a tray that locks into position, and good balance and stability. A high chair should be easy to clean with a finish that won't peel or bubble.

Carriages and strollers, for which a standard is in development, should possess excellent braking mechanisms, heavy duty wheels, and stability and balance.

Donald McKay, director of voluntary programs for the federal product safety group, characterized the playpen and high-chair standards as a real contribution to the cause of safety. "They are a small industry, many family-owned firms, but they have really made a contribution," he said.

Voluntary codes are preferred by most manufacturers, because they cost less to administer and involve less red tape. They benefit consumers, too, said McKay, since a voluntary standard may be adopted in cases where it would not be possible to show an unreasonable hazard or risk in the use of the product. This is a prerequisite of government-imposed, consumer product standards.

According to McKay, there are numerous examples of voluntary standards. "Between 1973 and 1979, we have worked on 63 voluntary standards and we have succeeded in creating 54 new standards and 18 revisions," he said.

OUTLET OUTLOOK

NEW YORK (AP) — Audio electronics manufacturers are expanding their dealer networks to include major department stores and appliance retailers.

"Manufacturers are expanding the consumer audio market by bringing stereo products to high traffic locations," says Harry Elias of US JVC Corp., a producer of stereo products. "Providing additional consumer convenience is a key to using marketing skills to expand sales."

Here's the Answer

Q. — Can I paint some kind of floor covering that looks like linoleum? It's in the living room of an old house we recently purchased.

A. — Yes, but you'd better be sure that it is cleaned thoroughly, especially of any wax residue. There are several good wax-removing products on the market.

Q. — I have an old varnished bureau that I want to clean. Denatured alcohol has been recommended, but won't that take off the varnish as well as the dirt?

A. — Not likely, since denatured alcohol is a solvent for shellac. Just to be certain, test a small area in an inconspicuous place.

Q. — Our coffee table has developed a number of cracks in it. They appear to be in the varnish finish and not in the wood itself. How can the cracks be eliminated?

A. — It would take a professional to correct this condition and it would be expensive. If you want to do the job yourself, buy a varnish remover and take off the entire old finish, being extra careful to follow the directions on safety. You can then refinish the table any way you want.

Q. — A friend of mine uses a vacuum cleaner attachment to spray lacquers, paints and enamels. Is this a good practice?

A. — No. Most quick-drying finishes contain volatile liquids. Their vapors, mixed with air, set up an explosion potential that can be touched off by sparks in the vacuum cleaner motor. All spraying of that nature should be done outdoors if at all possible. If not, open all doors and windows for thorough ventilation and take every precaution against an open flame, such as a pilot light on the kitchen range.

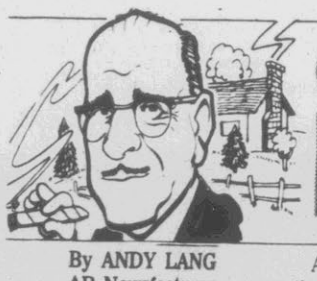

Q. — I never can get it straight as to which woods require fillers. Can you give me some kind of guide?

A. — Wood fillers generally are used on ash, chestnut, elm, hickory, mahogany, oak, rosewood, butternut, locust and walnut. They generally are not used on cedar, fir, hemlock, basswood, pine, spruce, poplar, cypress, gum, birch, maple, willow, beech and sycamore.

Q. — Can asphalt shingles be applied over old wooden shingles?

A. — Yes, but it is up to the roofer to determine the condition of the old roof and its supports to see whether they can safely hold up the additional weight. In nearly all cases, they can.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, bleach, stain, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 50 cents PLUS a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Mary and Sam Weir have been married 15 years.

In that period of time, they have owned 53 houses. They have lived in 12 of them. Their present home is a Victorian mansion with 35 rooms, 20 of which have been closed off to conserve energy.

Amidst all those statistics is the realization that the Weirs have become millionaires simply by buying old, wornout houses and remodeling them into marketability for a return exceeding their initial prices plus the cost of what they call the "recycling" process.

I first met the Weirs at a mansion they did not own — the elegant Phipps mansion at Old Westbury, Long Island. They were participants in a house improvement seminar. Their photos and descriptions of the house they inhabit with their two children in Rumson, N.J., were so intriguing that I wangled an invitation to visit it. It turned out to bear a faint resemblance to the White House, the one on Washington's Pennsylvania Avenue. In fact, the White House is what the neighbors call it.

The huge front doors opened into a gigantic entryway as large as the floor space of many houses. In the center of it was a long rectangular wooden table and, ahead of that, a dramatic ballustraded staircase leading right and left. Over the center of it, at the first landing, was a very large, striking brass chandelier.

Off the entryway were a number of eye-catching rooms, among them a billiard room wallpapered in red and gold to set off the oak paneling and a big curved Victorian glass china cabinet filled with trophies.

The living and dining rooms were, to say the least, massive. Both were furnished with oversized furniture of mixed styles, a result of the Weirs' practice of patronizing "flea markets" and buying, at amazingly inexpensive cost, immense pieces that could not possibly be utilized by those of us who live in houses rather than mansions. The dining room table seats 20 comfortably, its mammoth square-foot area compatible with enormous carved walnut chairs, presumably from another era and some equally titanic residence.

As the Weirs admit in their book, "How We Made a Million Dollars Recycling Great Old Houses," they made a lot of mistakes in their buying-remodeling-selling adventures, but the work (much of which they did personally) paid off.

Only in their thirties, they recall when he was a working chemical engineer and she an interior designer — and they paid $4,500 for a house they fixed up and sold at a net profit of $42,000.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

GARDEN CLINIC

State Univ. Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. My apple trees have fire blight each year. I cut off infected limbs with clippers dipped in chlorine bleach but the disease seems to get worse. Any suggestions? (C.D., Como)

A. Keep pruning with clippers dipped in Chlorox and try these additional suggestions. Use one hand to handle diseased limbs and one hand to handle healthy limbs. (You can spread fire blight with your hands as well as with clippers.) Cut the twigs or limbs 10 to 12 inches below the symptoms, the bacteria which cause fire blight moves down inside the twigs before the outward symptoms are visible. Therefore, never cut through the visibly infected part of the twig. (Dave Ritchie, extension plant pathologist)

Q. Are there any general guides for rotating vegetables in a garden? I have only one spot for a garden, so I must rotate vegetables within the garden. (D.H., Fayetteville)

A. Rotation is an excellent means of controlling several soil-borne diseases, particularly nematodes. However, rotation may not control some of the foliar diseases, such as early blight of tomatoes, in an area as small as a home garden. One suggestion is to divide your garden into thirds. Plant one-third in cool season vegetables such as lettuce, radish, cabbage and broccoli. Plant one-third in warm season vegetables such as tomatoes, peppers and beans. Plant the remaining third in corn. Then rotate the sections each year. The goal is to avoid planting vegetables of the same family in the same location year after year. (Harry Duncan, extension plant pathologist)

Q. I saved seed from a very large pumpkin last fall. If I plant these seed this spring will they produce the same kinds of pumpkins? (H.S., Halifax)

A. Only if you controlled the pollination of the pumpkin from which you saved seed. If it was permitted to pollinate at random, you are likely to get pumpkins of all shapes, sizes and colors this year. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Road-Building Costs Soaring

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Inflation has driven up highway construction costs 156 percent in the last 10 years, according to The Road Information Program. The group estimates the price tag for repairing and rebuilding the nation's broken-down roads and bridges at $124 billion, but state and federal agencies are able to collect and spend only about $30 billion annually.

"Brick is better."
Ask the experts.

It saves maintenance.
Wood rots, burns, splits and warps. And it needs repainting or staining about every 2 years. That means wood continues to cost you money. Forever. Sanford brick doesn't.

And energy.
Wood siding is a very poor insulator. Brick is a good insulator. That's why, when you build with Sanford brick, you not only save substantially on the cost of fuel and electricity but you can also temperature control your home with a smaller heating and cooling unit. And, if you build with insulated brick cavity walls, you can reduce your heating bill by 28% and your cooling bill up to 9%.

And pest damage.
Wood invites termites, pine borers, woodpeckers, carpenter ants, etc. Sanford brick is pest-proof. A lot of wood home owners wish they had thought of that.

Here's the beauty part.
Sanford Handcraft brick styles give you all the savings plus a truly beautiful home. They come in a wide range of colors and textures that recreate the mellow warmth and dignity of old landmarks. You'll find one just right for your building project.

And the final payoff.
Brick homes always maintain a higher resale value than wood homes of comparable size. And their values appreciate faster.

If you're thinking of building with wood siding, you should get all the facts first. For more information, call or write your nearest brick expert.

Lawrence Roos Convinced Knows Inflation Cure

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Newsfeatures Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawrence Roos is convinced that he knows the cause and cure for inflation, and as president of the Federal Reserve Bank in St. Louis he's in a good position to make himself heard.

Yet he's not sure his neighbors even know what he's talking about. And while the policy makers he meets with once a month or so in Washington know what he's saying, they hardly agree.

A modern history major who took one course in economics at Yale — "I don't even remember if I passed" — and who became a county executive and commercial banker, Roos has found himself in the middle of a dispute that has kept economists entertained for more than a century.

It's a theoretical debate, replete with all the mathematics and graphs economists wallow in, but one that appears to be increasingly aired in the councils of power where decisions affect anyone trying to buy a house or car, ask for a raise, hold on to a job, or just cope with grocery bills.

Roos believes that the main cause of inflation is the creation of too much money by the Federal Reserve Board, known affectionately around here as "The Fed." The basic rate of inflation in the past five years, not counting the unexpected oil price surges, has been about 7 percent, he says. And the average growth rate in the supply of money in that time has also been about 7 percent.

"Most people think inflation is caused by greedy businessmen or powerful unions," Roos says. To tell them it's caused by too much money under Federal Reserve policies produces puzzled stares.

Although Roos prefers to be called just "a pragmatic guy," his view is that of a "monetarist." Monetarists believe that the amount of money — crumpled bills in wallets as well as everyone's checking account balances — is the key determinant of the health of the economy.

At a conference of economists a few years back, Robert Solow, an M.I.T. economist who rejects the monetarist view, had this to say about a presentation by Milton Friedman, a Nobel Prize-winner and reigning guru of the monetarists:

"Another difference between Milton and myself is that everything reminds Milton of the money supply. Well, everything reminds me of sex, but I try to keep it out of my papers."

If economists can sometimes muster a sense of humor over the issue, they can also get downright passionate about it.

"I was emotional about it 10 years ago," says Lawrence Ritter, a former research chief at the Federal Reserve Bank in New York and now economics professor at New York University. "Having learned what was wrong with monetarism, here came a bunch of monetarists saying I was wrong."

Ritter has mellowed enough in academe to include in his textbook "Money" an explanation of monetarism expressed as the diagram of a football play. The caption: "Milty Friedman hands off to J.S. Mill who streaks down the right sideline behind a big block (actually a clip) by Swifty Irving Fisher that completely upends big Tommy Malthus."

A scorecard would indicate how long economists have been playing this particular game. J.S. Mill was a British political philosopher and economist who argued the monetarist philosophy in the early 19th century. Fisher was an American economist early in this century memorable for his statement just two weeks before the Great Crash on Wall Street that "stock prices have reached what looks like a permanently high plateau."

The British economist John Keynes came to the fore in the Depression and those who took up his philosophy attached relatively little importance to monetary policy. The interest in money has been revived in recent decades under the lead of Friedman, of the University of Chicago, whose students now fill some key slots in universities and government.

One of them is Robert Weintraub, economist and staff director of the House subcommittee that oversees monetary policy. Weintraub has drawn a chart that shows the inflation rate since the Korean War. For each year it also shows the rate of growth of the money supply two years earlier, since it takes a while for new money to affect prices.

The two lines are fairly close together, indicating to Weintraub a strong possibility that money affects prices. "You can't prove cause and effect, but it's consistent with the monetarist theory," he says.

To Weintraub and other monetarists, fiddling with the federal budget to cure inflation isn't too important. Wage and price controls are worse than useless. Keep a firm grip on the money supply, they say, and there won't be any money to pay higher wages or prices.

There are shades of monetarism, but in general this is what monetarists would do: Keep the rate of growth of money fairly constant over the years and no higher or lower than the economy's long-term potential to grow, which is now about 3 percent a year.

And, they say, don't start dickering with the money supply to accommodate higher wages or prices or government deficits. And don't raise the money supply to fight a recession or cut it to slow a racing economy, because it will only make things worse.

Non-monetarists immediately wonder: how can the Fed tell Congress, which created the Fed, not to run an inflationary budget deficit? "If we could force the budget committees to act in accord with monetary policy it would be phenomenal," says Steve Roberts, a non-monetarist and chief economist of the Senate Banking Committee. "How many times can the Fed chairman be called to the Hill and beat over the head?"

Non-monetarists also wonder: what about an outside shock like an OPEC hike in oil prices? These weren't caused by the money supply going up. And if money doesn't grow to pay for the oil, some business activity will grind to a halt for lack of money and people will be thrown out of work.

"It's a political problem," Ritter of NYU says. "We wouldn't have had this kind of inflation without this kind of higher money supply. But nobody likes inflation, so why do we have it? Because we elect a president every four years. A democratic society is not going to elect a president who gives it a depression."

The policy debate over money centers in the Fed's Open Market Committee. Its members include the seven Fed governors appointed by the president and the 12 Fed bank presidents, five of whom vote in the committee at any one time.

Their goal is to influence the economy by changing the money supply or causing interest rates to move up or down. More money and lower interest rates are thought to stimulate business activity.

When a decision is reached, instructions are sent to an officer of the New York Fed. If the committee wants to raise the money supply, he's told to buy government bonds. His payment becomes new money. Likewise he can lower the money supply by selling bonds, taking money out of the economy in payment.

Less than a third of the current basic money supply of some $379 billion exists as bills and coins. The rest is bookkeeping entries at banks.

What happens to this new money once it's created? Monetarists believe it's spent fairly soon. Non-monetarists say it may not be spent at all, and if it is, the spending depends on people borrowing the money at a bank, and whether they do that depends on interest rates.

Non-monetarists are as much or more concerned about interest rates as about the amount of money. In recent times the Fed has kept a daily watch on interest rates, keying its buying and selling of bonds to them.

So a decision by the board on Oct. 6, 1979, came as a bombshell. In a reversal of its long-held strategy, the open market committee voted to start paying more attention to bank reserves than to interest rates.

"It's amazing that all of a sudden the Fed went unanimous," Roos says. "We feel elated that the Fed has finally come around to our view. For years the St. Louis Fed was a voice crying in the wilderness."

It should be expected in such a long-running dispute that the losers haven't conceded defeat. To change daily operating tactics doesn't mean the Fed has become monetarist, non-monetarists say.

In fact, some argue, monetarists have been losing ground for some time. "Whatever the score was in 1973," Solow of M.I.T. says, "the anti-monetarists have scored a couple of touchdowns since, with only a field goal in reply."

Actor Chooses Student's Role

By PHILLIP RAWLS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Growing up in Winchester, Bobby Hill never dreamed he would star on Broadway. Now he says it won't bother him if he never goes back.

Hill — the lion from "The Wiz" and Checkers Clark from "Bubbling Brown Sugar" — deserted New York last August for a new role as freshman at Tennessee State University.

Hill left Winchester for New York in 1959. After singing with the Hill Family Singers gospel group and touring such spots as Huntsville, Ala., Hill said he was ready to try the Big Apple.

"I was scared to death when I got there. It took me two weeks to get up enough nerve to ride the subway," Hill said in an interview.

After lean years as church pianist, hospital attendant and adhesive factory foreman, Hill was invited to join the Alex Bradford Singers in 1964.

Seven years later, the prominent gospel group was cast in a new musical in Washington called "Don't Bother Me, I Can't Cope."

A year later, "Cope" went to Broadway, but Hill was no longer just one of Alex Bradford's singers. He was a co-star.

The black musical "opened up a lot of doors for many black actors and actresses and it broke a lot of barriers" on the Great White Way, Hill said.

With "Cope" a success, the same creative forces produced "Your Arms Too Short to Box With God," and Hill was tapped for the long-running Broadway show.

Next came road shows with "Cope," "Bubbling Brown Sugar," and finally "The Wiz."

Hill said the lion from "The Wiz" was his hardest role.

At 6-foot-4, Hill weighed 196 pounds before he put on the lion suit. "I lost 40 pounds in that suit. There was no ventilation. Everything was covered up but my face."

Also, two years on the road in a bus was no joy, the self-proclaimed loner said. "It's very tight out there. You see them on the bus, at the restaurants, at the hotels. You learn everybody's secrets and they learn yours."

Seeking an outlet so "my brain could breathe," Hill decided to shelve his Broadway career for a student's role.

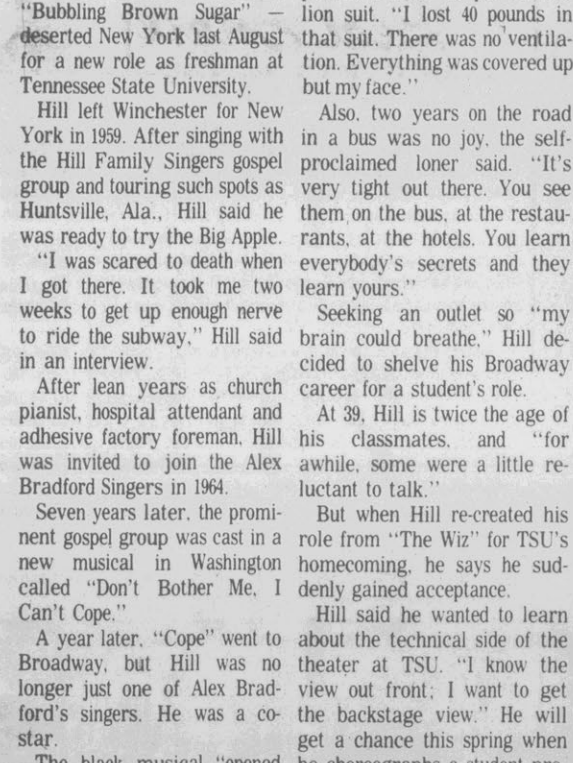

At 39, Hill is twice the age of his classmates, and "for awhile, some were a little reluctant to talk."

But when Hill re-created his role from "The Wiz" for TSU's homecoming, he says he suddenly gained acceptance.

Hill said he wanted to learn about the technical side of the theater at TSU. "I know the view out front; I want to get the backstage view." He will get a chance this spring when he choreographs a student production.

In addition to his campus Hill says he's working on a nightclub act and playing piano again for a church.

"I really don't long for New York," he said.

VOA Explains American Role In World Tensions

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of anti-Khomeini demonstrators huddles over a radio in Tabriz, Iran, listening to someone in a studio on Independence Avenue in Washington describe events occurring 300 yards from where they stand.

Officials of the Voice of America cite the incident to illustrate that the Voice is finding an audience, even where America is considered the enemy.

Broadcasts to Iran — cut off 20 years ago to save money — were resumed with the shah's overthrow. Recently, the Voice boosted its daily Iranian airtime from 30 minutes to three hours, and intends to double that soon.

To catch the world's ears, America speaks not only in Farsi, the language of Iran, but also in Tatar and Turkish, Azeri and Arabic, Latvian and Lao, Hindi and Hausa, Swahili and Spanish — and in English and a few dozen other languages.

There are three "voices:" the Voice of America, Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty. Congress spends about $165 million a year on the three networks.

VOA's mission is to explain America to the world. RFE, which beams into Eastern Europe, and RL, which aims its broadcasts into the Soviet Union, try to operate as though they were internal organs of the countries they address.

The two "Radios" were set up as CIA operations. They came in from the Cold War six years ago to be openly acknowledged as instruments of the U.S. government.

Responding to the Soviet move into Afghanistan, Radio Liberty doubled its efforts to reach the Moslems of Soviet Uzbekistan but still broadcasts to them only 32 minutes a day in each of seven languages.

In its Iranian broadcasts, VOA stresses that most of the world has condemned Iran. It carried the Security Council debates, sent a correspondent to the World Court and broadcast profiles of six of the hostages so Iranians would think of them as individuals, not symbols.

In its broadcasts on Afghanistan, says acting director Hans Tuch, the VOA had three objectives — to alert the Islamic world about the Soviet action, "to tell the Soviet people what their government had done" and to stress to non-aligned countries how their leader, Cuba, had sided with the Soviet Union at the United Nations.

The Voice started with World War II. Seventy-nine days after Pearl Harbor, VOA went on the air with this pledge:

"Daily at this time, we shall speak to you about America and the war; the news may be good or bad; we shall tell you the truth."

Tuch says his agency still tries to tell the truth, good or bad. He served VOA in Brazil during Watergate, and says he feels VOA established its credibility during that era: every night on his shortwave radio, he heard a U.S. government agency describe efforts to oust a U.S. president from office.

Executives of VOA and of the Board for International Broadcasting, which supervises RFE and RL, say they function on a biblical premise: "The truth shall make you free."

"We go on the assumption that the more informed people are, the more rationally they behave," says James Critchlow, research officer at the board.

Another operating assumption is that even a totalitarian government responds to its people. "Telling the people in the Soviet Union the truth about Afghanistan could create the kind of internal pressures that might inhibit a Soviet decision to invade Iran," Critchlow says.

Critchlow notes that some of the RFE and RL staffers are emigres and fervent anti-communists who must be cautioned against becoming too propagandistic. "We must refrain from any appeal to action, or even to any emotional appeals," he says.

The lesson comes from 1956 when Soviet troops marched into Hungary. Some RFE commentaries gave Hungarians the idea the United States would come to their aid if they resisted.

The freedom fighters felt betrayed when the Soviets crushed their rebellion while the United States limited its reaction to condemnation.

Two recent independent evaluations of Radio Liberty complained of overtones of stridency and hostility.

One evaluator, historian Robert Daniels of the University of Vermont, said the emphasis on dissidence gave the network "the appearance of being an emigre organ beamed at other potential emigres" and said programs should be addressed to "loyal" Soviet citizens and well as the country's malcontents.

With detente, Soviet bloc nations stopped jamming VOA broadcasts in 1974, but still try to jam RL and RFE broadcasts.

Nonetheless, by polling people who leave their countries, RFE estimates that 53 percent of Romanians, 50 percent of Poles and 38 percent of Czechs hear RFE broadcasts at least once a week. It estimates its weekly audience in the Soviet Union at 7.6 million listeners and VOA's at 24 million.

Soviet dissident Alexander Ginzburg told VOA executives: "You have as many listeners as Pravda has readers."

Tuch says VOA broadcast into China for years with no idea whether anyone was listening. Then, he said, the chairman of China's Radio-Television Authority came to Washington. Over lunch, Tuch asked if many Chinese heard VOA broadcasts.

Tuch relishes the memory. The Chinese minister leaned forward and said, "You'll never know how many. You would count them in the tens of millions — if not the hundreds of millions!"

VOICE OF AMERICA — Hans Tuch, acting director for the Voice of America in Washington, is pictured in the VOA studios. Tuch says the agency is reporting on Afghanistan to alert the Islamic world, to tell the Soviet people what their government had done, and to stress to non-aligned countries how their leader (Cuba) had sided with Russia at the United Nations. Doctor Keeps Working From His Wheelchair

By GEORGE W. HACKETT
Associated Press Writer

MILLERSBURG, Ky. (AP) — Dr. Wayne Linville was too stubborn to give up when cancer placed him in a wheelchair in 1974.

He had graduated from medical school, completed his internship and returned to Millersburg to practice in his hometown.

"One day I noticed lumps on my neck but dismissed them as part of a viral infection," he recalled. "The lumps refused to go away, and I had exploratory surgery."

The diagnosis: cancer of the lymphatic system.

Linville was stunned but philosophical.

"If you gotta have cancer," he said, "this is the best kind. The survival rate runs between 90 and 95 percent."

During the next eight months, he lost 40 pounds while undergoing 42 radiation treatments. The spinal cord was damaged and he became paralyzed from mid-chest down.

"Depression overwhelmed me," he said. "I had a family to feed and a lot of unpaid bills. The future looked bleak."

He realized he was the only physician in Millersburg and one of four in Bourbon County. He also realized "you don't need legs to deliver babies or assist in surgery. I decided to plunge ahead."

Every morning he's at Bourbon County Hospital, checking on anywhere from 12 to 20 patients. If the need arises, he assists in surgery.

"All they do is lower the operating table a little bit for me," he said.

His rounds completed, Linville heads back to his office nine miles away, driving a van with a wheelchair lift.

"The place is always crowded," he said. "On a busy day, we might have 50 to 60 people. It gets rough but I have excellent nurses helping me."

Although some specialists are moving into rural areas, Linville wishes there were more.

"You can look around and find cities overrun with doctors," he said. "Trying to lure them into the countryside is a tough job."

He attributes part of the problem to physicians' wives, "who believe they won't be happy in a small town. They think there's no social life."

Linville's wife and two children are his hobby.

"We take two or three short trips a year and we get in a lot of swimming, which is about my only exercise," he said.

Linville, 33, takes chemotherapy to keep the cancer under control but is spared the side effects which sometimes accompany the treatment.

Last May, while attending the annual banquet of the Kentucky Academy of Family Physicians, Linville was summoned to the speaker's table.

He had been chosen "Citizen Doctor of the Year," by his peers, a secret kept from him by family and friends until the moment it was announced.

One Of Navy's Safest Years

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Navy had 128 major aircraft accidents last year in which 74 lives and 93 planes were lost, but 1979 was still one of the Navy's safest years.

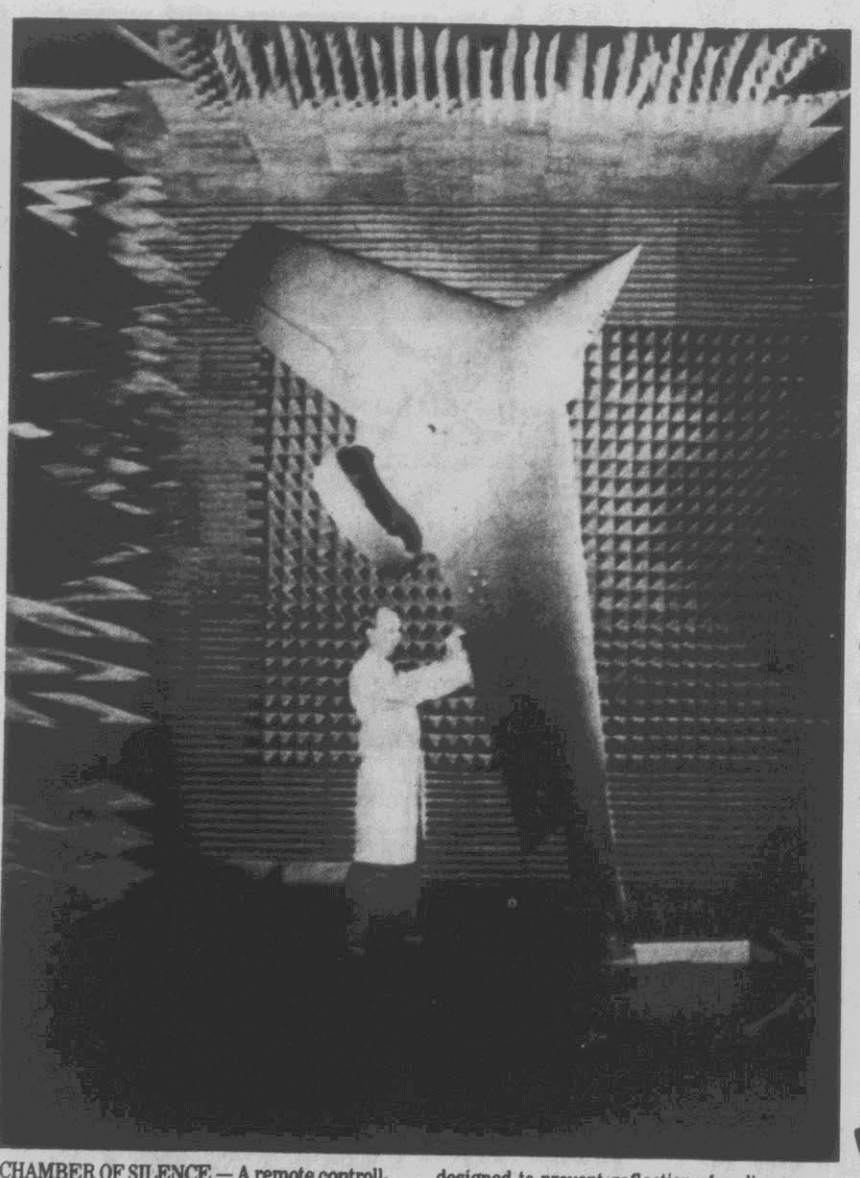

Except for a series of crashes in the last six weeks of the year, 1979 would have been the best year for the service in the past decade, according to figures from the Navy Safety Center here.

However, messages to all Navy commands last week showed the office of the chief of naval operations is not satisfied. Vice Adm. Wesley L. McDonald, deputy chief of naval operations for air warfare, said he wants all squadrons to aim for a "zero accident rate."

Ranch Raises Tortoise Herd

NOTTINGHAM, England (AP) — More than 6,000 tortoises are being bred on a ranch near here where the weather conditions are thought to be good for mating.

A British newspaper said an importer was starting the venture because the mortality rate among imported tortoises was so high.

Possibly Weeks Before Garwood 'Gets The Word'

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A hearing for Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, who faces charges stemming from the Vietnam War, is nearing an end, but it may be weeks before Garwood learns whether he will be court-martialed.

Garwood, 33, faces allegations of desertion and collaboration with the enemy during the nearly 14 years he spent in Vietnam. A 19-year old jeep driver when he disappeared near Danang in 1965, Garwood returned to the United States last March and declared he had been held prisoner all those years.

Garwood's military hearing, called an Article 32 investigation, resumes Tuesday morning at Camp Lejeune after a 2½-week break. The hearing is to determine whether there is enough evidence for a court-martial.

Prosecutors announced before the break that they had presented all their witnesses. Ten men — including seven former prisoners of war who encountered Garwood in Vietnam — testified for the prosecution, unreeling episodes of Garwood's life in Vietnam.

Witnesses testified that Garwood carried guns, helped guard other Americans and enjoyed better living conditions than the squalor of the prison compound. They said Garwood bragged that he was a lieutenant in the North Vietnamese army, and that he talked of using a bullhorn to tell Americans in the field to stop fighting.

Garwood's lawyers don't deny that he did many of the things attributed to him, but they contend his actions stemmed from fear and that he was merely one of many POWs who cooperated with the communists out of fear for their lives.

Defense attorneys are scheduled this week to cross-examine three former POWs who testified against Garwood earlier at the hearing, and that could end testimony at the hearing.

It appears unlikely that Garwood will testify at the hearing because his attorneys have already conceded some sort of court-martial is probable and they don't want want to completely show their hand to prosecutors.

At the same time, prosecutors apparently have tried to protect their case by revealing only as much evidence as they believe necessary to get the case before a court-martial.

They originally said they plan to present about 15 witnesses, but offered only 10. They brought a Vietnamese refugee — a former South Vietnamese solider held prisoner by the communists — to Camp Lejeune but never put him on the stand.

When all the testimony has ended, it still may be weeks before a decision on a court-martial is announced.

Maj. T.B. Hamilton Jr., the hearing officer, will make a recommendation to the commanding general at Camp Lejeune, but Hamilton's only time restriction is an open-ended military requirement that he take "no undue delay."

Hamilton, who has presided at more than 300 military trials, surprised some military lawyers recently at an unrelated Article 32 hearing when he announced his recommendation from the bench immediately following the end of testimony.

But that case, involving a Navy doctor who blatantly refused orders to board a ship, had none of the complex aspects of the Garwood case.

Testimony in the Garwood hearing has filled nearly 300 pages of transcript, and Hamilton can take time to review all or part of that before he makes his recommendation to Brig. Gen. David B. Barker, base commanding general.

Barker, in turn, will likely go through the transcript before announcing his decision on a court-martial. Barker said several months ago that he intended to wait until all the evidence was in before studying any of it.

There are seven specific allegations against Garwood, and Hamilton could recommend prosecution on all or any of them.

The charges are:

—That Garwood deserted in time of war, specifically in 1967. One former POW testified at the hearing that he and other POWs witnessed a "liberation" ceremony given by the communists for Garwood in May 1967 and that Garwood subsuquently lived with communist guards.

—That Garwood was on unauthorized absence from the Marine Corps from the time of his disappearance in 1965 until last March, when he returned to the United States.

—That Garwood solicited American combat forces to refuse to fight and throw down their weapons. Witnesses testified that Garwood talked of using a bullhorn to make such statements, but no one said he saw Garwood do it.

—That Garwood cooperated with the enemy and accepted a position in the armed forces of the enemy. Witnesses said Garwood wore makeshift uniforms similar to those of the communists and said he was a lieutenant in the North Vietnamese army.

—That Garwood tried to cause insubordination and disloyalty among fellow prisoners. According to one witness, Garwood urged Americans to "do everything the Viet Cong told us to do," and others testified that communists told them they should follow Garwood's example.

—That Garwood slugged another POW, Army Pfc. David Harker, in the ribs for no reason. Harker, now a probation officer in Virginia, testified at the hearing that Garwood hit him after Americans killed a cat for food.

—That Garwood told another POW "I spit on you and all people like you disgust me." The POW involved died while in captivity, and although there was second-hand testimony about the episode, no one said they actually heard Garwood say it.

NO RAIN FORESTS?

LONDON (AP) — Deforestation of the Amazon rain forests is destroying an area the size of England and Wales each year, and the rain forests may disappear by the year 2000, according to the editor of a British magazine.

DOWNS AND UPS

FARMINGTON, Conn. (AP) — An antidote is available to the practical joker who gets a kick out of pushing all the floor buttons on an elevator, causing other passengers the inconvenience of delays.

A new computerized elevator system designed by Otis Elevator senses by weight how many passengers it is carrying.

If too many buttons have been pushed for the registered weight, a special device recognizes a mistake or mischief and cancels all the calls.

In 1905, Russia and Japan agreed to halt hostilities in Manchuria.

Housing Demand Was Strong During Most Of 1979

CHECKING CANDIDATES — Members of the Washington Iranian community look at a board containing the names of presidential candidates for whom they may vote for in the first election since the revolution. Photo was taken at the Iranian Embassy Friday in Washington. (AP Laserphoto)

Demand for housing was strong during most of 1979 despite high mortgage interest rates and prices, according to Michael L. Walden, extension specialist in consumer economics at North Carolina State University.

Mortgage interest rates rose steadily over the year to more than 12 percent, and the median price of a new single-family home approached $80,000 nationally, said Walden.

U.S. housing starts from the year totaled an estimated 1.7 million units, down 300,000 from 1978. North Carolina housing starts in 1979 were down only 5 percent.

"Only in late 1979 did housing demand taper off significantly as mortgage rates reached historical highs," Walden explained.

The economist said the strong demand for housing was maintained until year's end because of three factors:

— Despite their high nominal rate, mortgage interest rates remained lower than the inflation rate for most of the year, making money borrowed for housing still relatively cheap. Typically, mortgage interest rates are 2 to 3 percentage points higher than the inflation rate.

— Savings and loan institutions, the major suppliers of home mortgage loans, had a relatively good supply of housing loan funds until the year's end. This supply was due largely to the continued popularity of high-yielding six-month money market certificates issued by the savings and loans and the general availability of credit in the economy.

At the end of 1979, following announcement of the new tight money policies of the Federal Reserve System, the supply of mortgage credit became tight.

— Consumers continued to regard housing as one of the best hedges against inflation.

"The inflation rate in 1979 was the highest since 1946. The average price of all goods and services increased last year at an annual rate of 12 to 13 percent," according to Walden.

With less mortgage money available now and interest rates high, the NCSU specialist housing demand and sales have slackened considerably and will likely remain depressed as long as the Federal Reserve maintains a tight-money policy.

The immediate outlook, Walden said, is for continued high mortgage interest rates, a reduction in housing sales, and higher unemployment in the construction industry as new building subsides.

"These factors should reduce the rate of increase in housing prices. However, no absolute drop in housing prices is expected because builders' inventories of unsold new homes are relatively low," Walden said.

He added that a possible buildup in inventories of previously owned houses for sale is anticipated through early or mid-1980.

The economist said home builders face a slowdown in early 1980 followed by a possible rebound later in the year if inflation is reduced and the cost of credit falls.

ECU Scientists, 11 Students Invited To See India Eclipse

ECU News Bureau

Three East Carolina University professors and 11 ECU students have been chosen to participate in scientific research during a solar eclipse scheduled to be observed in India Feb. 16.

Grants by the National Science Foundation (NSF) to Drs. Floyd E. Mattheis and Edward F. Seykora will enable the ECU contingent to join a 54 member NSF-sponsored scientific expedition from the United States at a selected site near Hyderabad in southern India.

Equipment for observing, photographing and recording the eclipse already is being assembled at the observation site about 40 miles south of Hyderabad. Weather permitting, the eclipse will have a viewable duration of two and a half minutes at this site, the scientists said.

The eclipse of of special interest because it will occur at the peak of an 11 year cycle of maximum sun spot activity. Seykora, ECU associate professor of physics, plans a project to search for and record very rapid intensity changes in light emitted by the solar corona.

"This is of fundamental interest in studies of the solar atmosphere and its eventual interaction with the earth's atmosphere," Seykora said. "The data may help understand climatological changes believed caused by sun spot activity," he said. "It (the eclipse) is an optimum time for this type of research because solar activity is at a maximum."

Seykora will be assisted in his experiments by Dr. Moses M. Sheppard of the ECU Science Education faculty and Michael H. Cobb, graduate student in physics.

Mattheis, professor and chairman of the ECU Science Education department, will be accompanied by 10 students who will be science teachers and who are not normally directly involved in research.

"This is a rare and extremely valuable opportunity for these students," Mattheis said. They will be assigned project work in various experiments being conducted. Also, the ECU group will visit schools and scientific laboratories and observatories in Frankfurt, West Germany, enroute to India, and in Hong Kong, Japan and Hawaii on the return.

The solar eclipse expedition will be the second in two years for Seykora, Sheppard and Mattheis. In February, 1979, they took part in an eclipse expedition in Montana under auspices of the ECU Research Council.

The 1980 eclipse is expected to be visible in an arc across East Africa, the Indian Ocean, India and China.

The scientific experiments in India are being co-sponsored by the India Academy of Science and the government of India in a special foreign currency exchange program.

Names and addresses of the ECU students chosen to participate in the solar eclipse India expedition include:

'Youth Appreciation' Week Being Observed

The Optimist Club of Greenville, in conjunction with Optimist International, will observe "Youth Appreciation Week" in Greenville, today through Saturday, Feb. 2.

Charles Ross, chairman of the youth week program for the local Optimist Club, said that the international organization has, for the past 25 years, developed and promoted the "Youth Appreciation Week" activities.

Ross said that as part of the local effort to express appreciation and approval to the contributions of our young citizens, a daily theme will be observed during the week.

The themes, beginning with today's observance of Youth in Religion Day, include: Monday, Youth in Community Service Day; Tuesday, Youth in Education Day; Wednesday, Youth in Government Day; Thursday, Youth in Business Day; Friday, Youth in the Family Day; and Saturday, Youth in Recreation Day.

Mayor Don McGlohon proclaimed Jan. 27 through Feb. 2 as Youth Appreciation Week and noted, "By this action, let it be known that we have faith in the ability of today's youth as they assume responsible roles in the future of mankind."

In his proclamation, the mayor pointed out that, "the vast majority of the youth are concerned, knowledgeable and responsible citizens."

He added, "the accomplishments and achievements of these young citizens deserve recognition and praise of their elders."

As part of Wednesday's Youth in Government Day, high school students will meet with Greenville governing officials and then conduct a mock "City Council" session at city hall.

Adapted Car To Propane Gas

Pitt Community College has installed a dual carburation system that uses propane gas on one of its vehicles. According to the college, this measure will save the college a substantial sum annually.

Propane has an octane rating higher than most gasolines, resulting in smoother operation, and propane is readily available as fuel since only 35 percent of the national supply is now being used by the consumer.

PCC President Dr. William E. Fulford pointed out some of the benefits of the conversion which include increased spark plug life, longer engine life, reduced service time, and elimination of pilferage and evaporation.

PCC auto mechanics students provided the labor for this project.

IMPROVING MANUAL DEXTERITY . . .and hand strength is done as a group activity, supervised by Sheila Woodcock. The UCP Center is located at Hooker Memorial Christian Church.

BALANCE REACTIONS. . .on the Merry Mole Hill is conducted by Barbara Thurber, occupational therapist, for Tellas Davis, left, and Amy Jefferson. Mrs. Thurber adapts equipment for each individual child at the center.

'Seeing UCP Children Make Progress Is Joy'

EYE-HAND COORDINATION . . .using blocks and a box is fun for Summer Moore, while sitting in a corner chair. She is encouraged by Edith Williams, UCP Center director.

The Greenville United Cerebral Palsy Developmental Center has been in operation for seven and a half years. "The joy in this program is seeing the children make progress with the promise of reaching their full potential," said its director, Mrs. Edith Williams.

"The center is a service to children, from Pitt and surrounding counties, ages one to 12 who have cerebral palsy or a similar neurologically based handicap, whose needs are not being met by other community agencies or institutions.

"The program has two broad areas of emphasis — to prepare the physically handicapped for entrance into the public school system in normal or special education; the other is to help the child, who the public schools are not yet able to serve in their own facilities, develop to his greatest and to help train him to live in a non-handicapped society," she continued.

Funded by United Cerebral Palsy of North Carolina, the center is supported through a variety of federal and state sources as well as public contributions. At the present time no fees are charged for services. Parents are required, however, to make application to the Title XX program at the local Division of Social Services. Title XX is a major funding source for the center.

"Local sororities, fraternities, veterans groups, church groups, civic organizations and invididuals have contributed time and money for our center — which enabled us to get some therapy and therapeutic equipment — prone boards, walkers, development ball, corner chairs, etc.

"Since PL 94-142 makes free and appropriate education mandatory for all school age children, the center staff has worked with local public schools to see if appropriate classes are available for center children in the public school system. When proper placement has been found, the staff has assisted in making the transition smoother by visiting the school, assisting teachers in writing up IEPs. When no appropriate program is available, the Pitt County and Greenville City Schools have contracted with the center to provide service," said Mrs. Williams.

Children can be referred to the program by the Health Department, local pediatricians, Developmental Evaluation Clinic and by any interested adult including parents, teachers, friends or relatives.

Developmental programming is available for infants beginning at age one. These children are programmed in a separate room from the older class. Currently this program is meeting four mornings each week. "Expansion is possible, should there be a need," Mrs. Williams added.

The daily program consists of therapeutic/educational activities in self-help skill training, socialization, behavior management, cognitive and adaptive skill training, gross and fine motor development, language development (receptive and expressive), art, music and free play. Individualized education programs are written based on professional evaluation and testing of the child and observations of the staff and parents. All activities are planned according to the developmental level of each child and are carried out in both individual and group sessions.

When a child first enters the center, an individualized program is written based on the complete evaluation material available on the child and the assessment which is conducted by the UCP staff. This IEP is not finalized or implemented until approved by the parent. Likewise when each child's progress is evaluated and new goals are established at quarterly case conferences, follow up meetings are scheduled with parents to solicit their input and ultimate approval.

Parents also have the opportunity to meet as a group on a regular basis for educational, social and emotional support from other parents and from existing community resources.

"Field trips are included to enhance the child's educational experience, awareness of the community and to widen his social and environmental contacts," commented Mrs. Williams.

Summer day camp at Chocowinity Bay, participation in Special Olympics; going trick or treating, selecting a Christmas tree, going to movies, nursing home, pet shop, fair and park have been among the group's field trips.

In addition to Mrs. Williams, the center staff includes a certified lead teacher, two teaching assistants and part-time services of an occupational therapist, physical therapist and speech pathologist. The staff is supplemented by two or more CETA employees, student teacher, student interns from Pitt Community College and students from the ECU Music Therapy and Recreational Therapy Departments.

In closing, Mrs. Barbara Zicherman said, "These kids have so much potential and it's our job to help them fulfill that potential." Mrs. Zicherman is a teaching assistant.

Mrs. Barbara Thurber, occupational therapist, added, "One of my most heartfelt experiences was seeing a two-and-a-half-year-old child opening her fisted hand and waving for the first time."

Why Career Women Opt For Motherhood

ROBERTA G. WAX

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — More and more women, who once put careers ahead of families, appear to be deciding it's okay again to want to be a mother.

Melissa Price, a 32-year-old publicist, has been working at her career for eight years. Married 7½ years, she said it was only during the last year that she decided she wanted a family, that a career was not enough.

"I decided I was missing something," she said. "As I began getting more successful in my career, it became less gratifying. I feel I'm in the middle of a so-called professional crisis. I thought, what a perfect time to stop, instead of just changing jobs.

"The timing is just perfect because I don't resent giving up my career."

Age, she said, had a lot to do with her decision.

"When I was working, time passed much more than quickly then I thought. Suddenly, I was 30."

Although few hospitals report much change in maternity admittance figures, there seems to be an increased interest, especially in suburban areas, in childbirth classes.

One childbirth class given by an obstetrics group in the San Fernando Valley used to average six couples meeting in the doctor's waiting room. But the December session, the nurse said, was so crowded the class had to go into the hallway to practice exercises. And one of the physicians in the group delivered eight babies in two days.

Jeannie Siegel will be 25 when her baby is born in June. She said she is a little concerned about giving up her job as a teacher because she has only been working for two years.

But, she said, "this is much more important." She said her husband, a 30-year-old attorney, is especially concerned about being young enough to enjoy his children and young enough when their kids are grown to "enjoy each other, to do things together."

Many women said they felt it was more acceptable today to be a "working mother," although most said they would not like to leave the child in the first year or so.

Mary Ann Nese, 28, worked in hospital public relations until her first child was born a year ago. She is expecting her second in June and deliberately planned them close together so she could return to work.

Betty Goldstein, now 31, felt her job as an assistant dean at a university was at a standstill three years ago. She was ready for a change. But instead of looking for another position, she opted to have a baby.

"If we were men, the alternative (to a career stalemate) would not be motherhood," she said. "We would go on and find some other job. I don't consider my career has ended. This is just something I'm doing between jobs."

Age, she said, was also a factor in her decision to interrupt her career.

Her first year, she said, she found it hard to adjust to motherhood. With her second child it was easier, she said, because her lifestyle did not change as much.

Woman's A Chip Off Old Block

SAN DIEGO, Calif (AP) — With thousands of tiny wood blocks, Roger L. Penney is building a woman with windows for eyes, a staircase down her neck and a pair of balconies for a bosom.

Penney, an artist whose paintings and sculpture blend Egyptian motifs with surrealism, began building the 5-foot-high sculpture, which is also an architectural model, three years ago.

"Why did I decide to build a wooden woman building? Because I had never seen one before," Penney said in a telephone interview.

He estimates he has spent over 220 hours assembling the sculpture from small scraps of walnut, oak and pine he picked up at the shipyard in this southern California city where he works part time. The structure features a series of apartments, hallways, staircases, balconies and entranceways and would be practical to build, Penney said.

"It may not be the kind of thing your average contractor would want to build, but the design is functional," he said. "I've been quoted a price of $100,000 to build a smaller building with a similar form."

Penney, who also paints feminine buildings into his landscapes, says the figure represents his muse.

Egyptian themes show up in his work because of the monumental, heroic characteristics of Egyptian architecture.

"Their muse guided them to build giant-size buildings in much the same way my muse is guiding me," Penney said.

Penney, who studied painting in Paris and New York, is now stockpiling paintings and trying to finish the wooden woman for an art-gallery show in the near future.

He hopes the show will attract art investors who would be interested in putting up a house in the shape of a woman.

The architectural sculpture has attracted quite a lot of attention since he began building it, Penney said.

"People always say they've never seen anything like it before and they are always bringing their friends over to see it," he said.

Penney, whose paintings cost from $1,000 to $2,500, hasn't yet put a price on the lifesize figure.

"My biggest dream about these forms is to someday construct them in orbit around earth," Penney said. "When the human race reaches out to the stars, we'll want to be recognized by aliens and what better way to do it than in a spaceship made in the form of a woman — it's a heavenly shape."

Couple Weds Saturday Evening

In a candlelight wedding ceremony performed Saturday at 7:00 p.m., Wanda Elaine Bass and Seth Allen Cayton exchanged vows. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Linwood A. Manning in Saint Paul Pentecostal Holiness Church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Lee Craft of Winterville, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur C. Cayton of Greenville.

MRS. SETH ALLEN CAYTON

A program of wedding music was presented by Gladys Corbitt, Ayden, organist, Debby Gray, Winterville, pianist, and soloist, Emerson Hobgood, Farmville.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Janice Wilson, Grimesland, was maid of honor and bridesmaids included Kim Cargile and Arlene Ellis, Greenville, Diane Pollard and cousin of the bride Cathy Autry, both of Winterville, and Diane Avery, Farmville.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and Brad Cayton, Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, was junior usher. Jimmy Coward, Greenville, Norman Pollard, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Chuck Autry, Winterville, David Stox, Ayden, cousin of the bridegroom, and Jeff Smith, Calico, were ushers.

The bride wore a formal gown of white sheer organza over white peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in raschel lace which extended over the empire bodice and encircled the waistline with a Dior organza bow at center back. The shepherdess sleeves of organza repeated the matching lace trim. The A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were enhanced by a double ruffled flounce at the hemline trimmed with a row of chantilly lace. Beaded lace appliques were scattered over the skirt.

She wore a fingertip length veil of illusion edged in chantilly lace and held in place by a Camelot cap overlaid in matching lace. The bride carried a cascade of bronze daisies and yellow roses.

The attendants wore formal gowns of polyester organza in floral rust. The gowns featured a scoop neckline, blouson bodice and short split cap sleeves accentuated with a bow. The skirts were crystal pleated. They carried yellow mums with yellow streamers.

The bride's mother wore a formal gown of apricot knit and chiffon designed with a high neckline. The bridegroom's mother selected a cranberry chiffon gown designed by Martinique. The gown had a V-neckline and matching jacket.

After the ceremony, the bride's parents entertained at a reception in the fellowship hall of the church assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Otha Boyd and Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Williams, aunts and uncles of the bride.

Mrs. Mavis Hall served cake and was assisted by Miss Gina Williams. The bride's table was covered with a linen cloth trimmed with lace and centered with daisies and snapdragons around a five tiered candelabrum.

Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Stocks.

The couple will live in Winterville following a wedding trip to unannounced points.

Graduates of D. H. Conley High School, the bride is a dental assistant for Dr. James Y. Morris and the bridegroom works at Union Carbide.

The bride's mother entertained at a bridemaids breafkast at Tom's Restaurant Saturday.

The bridegroom's parents entertained at an after-rehearsal dinner at Western Steer Steak House Friday evening.

Give Bread A Swirl

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Yes, there is a new yeast bread to try. An inventive cook got the bright idea of swirling a pesto filling through a loaf made with white flour and white cornmeal. Call it a combination of Italy and Dixie.

But whatever you call it, make the loaf for a party and serve it fresh from the oven when it's at its very best. Because there's no garlic in the pesto filling, we like to offer the bread with crushed garlic cloves blended with sweet butter as a spread.

PESTO DIXIE LOAF

1 envelope dry yeast
2½ cups (about) all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoons salt
1 tablespoon sugar
2-3rds cup milk
½ cup water
3 tablespoons olive oil
¾ cup white cornmeal
Pesto Filling, recipe follows
Part of 1 slightly beaten egg
1 tablespoon grated Parmesan cheese

In the large bowl of an electric mixer at low speed mix together until blended the yeast, 1 cup of the flour, the salt and sugar.

In a small saucepan, stirring often, heat together the milk, water and 2 tablespoons of the olive oil until very warm (120 to 130 degrees); add to flour mixture; at very low speed beat enough to moisten flour mixture, then at medium speed beat about 2 minutes; add cornmeal; beat about 2 minutes. With a spoon, stir in enough of the remaining flour to make a stiff dough.

On a lightly floured surface knead until smooth and elastic — 8 to 10 minutes. Shape into a ball; place in a bowl lightly greased with extra olive oil; turn to coat with oil; cover with saran. Let rise in a warm (80 degrees) place until doubled in size — 1 hour. Punch down dough; cover; let rest 10 minutes. On a pastry cloth shape, by patting and pulling, into a 15 by 9-inch rectangle. Brush with the remaining 1 tablespoon olive oil; sprinkle with the Pesto Filling. Starting at narrow end, roll up; press together ends and seam to seal. Place in a 9 by 5 by 3-inch loaf pan lightly greased with olive oil. Brush with egg and sprinkle with Parmesan. Let rise as previously until doubled — 1 hour. Bake on rack below center of a preheated 375-degree oven until golden brown — 25 to 30 minutes. If bottom of loaf is not golden brown, turn loaf upside down in pan and bake 10 minutes longer. Turn out on a wire rack; turn right side up; cool completely. Makes 1 loaf. Serve the same day loaf is baked with garlic butter as a spread.

PESTO FILLING

½ cup finely chopped walnuts
1-3rd cup grated Parmesan cheese
¼ cup minced fresh parsley
1 teaspoon dried crushed basil
1-16th teaspoon salt

Stir together all the ingredients. Use as directed in Pesto Dixie Loaf recipe.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Anti-smoking crusaders have stopped being Mr. Nice Guy.

Remember how they used to suggest rather politely that smoking causes cancer, emphysema, harmful effects to your unborn child, damage to the lungs of people around you who inhale and early death?

Well, that was a bedtime story compared to a new threat. A University of Louisville researcher has announced smoking decreases your sexual desire and your ability to make love!

If that doesn't clear the air . . . nothing will.

Several couples were discussing it the other night and Mayva said she didn't understand the logic behind it.

Her husband, Jim, wanted to know which part she didn't understand — smoking or sexual desire.

Jill said she thought the theory had a lot of merit because she noted a change in her own desires when she quit smoking.

Her husband, Ralph, looked shocked and said, "You never told me. When did you quit smoking?"

Paula said she thought the reported increase in sexual desires after giving up cigarettes was a bunch of garbage. She thought it was "just something to do to keep your mind off smoking like chewing gum or snacking."

I personally didn't see how smoking diminished sex drives because there was nothing more romantic in this world than to see Humphrey Bogart inhale, flip a cigarette into the darkness, and exhale through his nose.

My husband told me to get the chip dip.

When I returned, Sally's husband, Dan, was saying, "I never wanted to give up cigarettes because I'd put on weight. I needn't have worried. Sally put on the weight."

That's when his wife, Sally, announced she was three months pregnant. As they drove away, they had His and Hers bumper stickers. His read, "I QUIT." Hers read, "I KNOW."

Anti-smoking crusaders may just have a backlash on their hands.

Working Mothers Viewed Differently: Diviant, Lunatic Fringe — Or What?

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Working mothers, throw off that guilt as you face into the wind each day — after wiping mashed peas off your purse and brushing baby powder off your sweater.

Going to work without guilt relieves some stress and strain.

Never mind those child books by male doctors, male psychologists and male what-not tending to treat a working mother (of a wee one especially) as something odd.

And don't feel too put upon by some books or magazine bits by women.

A lot of them seem to ignore the fact that most working mothers work out of necessity, claims a new report.

The experts also tend to treat the working mother of a tot or toddler as a rarity. The fact is: 42 percent of women with children under 6 work.

Another fact: the 16 million mothers working outside the home are viewed variously by the experts. Some assign working mothers to the lunatic fringe, or tag them deviant, abnormal.

Even in Dr. Spock's famous baby book working mothers are covered under problems! Yet more than half the mothers of children under 18 work outside the home.

The books and reports from some authorities behind the time make one think it is aberrant behavior for a child-bearer to bring home some or all the bacon before offspring flee the nest.

The preachments are found on the pages of women's magazines.

But for all you mothers who can't stay home to rock cradles, wipe noses or model clay, there's a certain amount of balm in the report in "Pediatrics," the journal of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

The report, say is authors, is designed to better inform pediatricians and others to whom working mothers turn for guidance and understanding. It is the results of an analysis of books, studies and magazine articles on working mothers and their children.

The study was supported in part by the Business and Professional Women's Foundation, Washington, D.C.

From a pediatrician and two working mothers on a medical school faculty, the report urges the nation's pediatricians and other professionals "to better respond to the needs of the working mothers and their families."

"The purpose of the report," said Dr. Ruth E. Zambrana, a sociologist and one of three authors, "is to provide a perspective on the dilemmas working mothers face due to the contradictory messages that emanate from both popular child-rearing books and clinical studies."

Dr. Zambrana, mother of a son, 4, is a teacher in the Department of Community Medicine at Mt. Sinai School of Medicine in New York. So is another of the authors, Dr. Marsha Hurst — political scientist, mother of a son, 3, and expecting. The third author, Dr. Rodney L. Hite, pediatrician, is a staffer at Roosevelt Hospital in New York.

The contradictory messages about working mothers were found in their review of dozens of books and expert reports on child-raising — with special attention to mothers who work for pay outside home.

The report from Dr. Zambrana and associates is titled: "The Working Mother in Contemporary Perspective: A Review of the Literature."

"Many of the difficulties of working and mothering revolve around managing the conflicts that emerge in terms of childcare, and frequently the mother turns to her pediatrician for advice and guidance," the report says.

"As a professional who has clinical experience with many children, the pediatrician is seen by mothers as one who has informed judgment about appropriate maternal-child behavior.

"This view is reinforced by direct recommendations by authors of popular child-rearing books who are usually pediatricians.

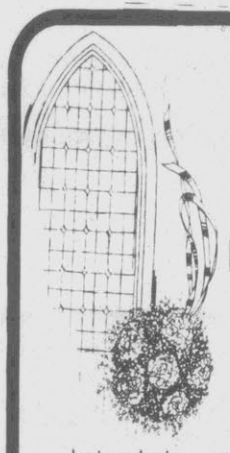

"Most pediatricians ... often advise mothers to read popular child-rearing books which exacerbate the dilemmas of the working mother.

"An understanding of recent research on maternal employment will enable the pediatrician to better respond to the needs of the working mothers and their families."

In their analysis of popular

Working Mothers.....

child-rearing books, the authors of the "Pediatrics" report said there are several general themes. To wit:

— Maternal employment during the first years of the child's life, except out of financial necessity, is viewed negatively. The advice of one author, "Stay home for the first two years of baby's life and become a full-time professional parent" represents a fairly typical perspective.

—The mother who works out of choice and not necessity during the first few years of the child's life is considered not only to have failed her child but also herself. "Brazelton's picture of the working mother, for example, is one of either a woman who is unable to find the fulfillment she should in child care, often because of her relationship with her own mother, or a neurotic, driven, career-oriented woman who may not have genuinely wanted a child in the first place." (T. B. Brazelton, doctor, "Toddlers and Parents.")

—There is a consensus in these popular books that the mother, if she must work, work only part-time. "The only time a mother should feel guilty of short-changing her child is when she works fulltime during the first three years of her child's life," F. Dodson says in the book, "How to Discipline with Love."

—There is also in such books an implicit and sometimes overt assumption that the mother is the primary caretaker, and only she can assume the reponsibility for the child. "Of course, no one can replace the mother if she must work," it says in one such book, "What Every Parent Would Like His Child to Know," by Dr. Lee Salk.

—"In line with this, another theme in the literature is that a woman with young children is a mother first, and her desire to work should be compromised and sacrificed when necessary, to her child."

The report says, further, that books by, for and about working mothers have frequently reinforced themes of popular books by professionals, in reflecting the cultural norms of appropriate maternal behavior.

"A recently published collection of Redbook stories by and about young mothers tells them over and over again of women's need for fulfillment outside of the home, and of the constraints women overcome to return to work or school," the Pediatrics report said.

So what's the bottom line about working mothers — if a lot of what's in the books is not hooked into contemporary realities?

Here's what the authors of the "Pediatrics" report tell the nation's doctors who take care of babies, children and adolescents:

"The preponderance of literature on working mothers is quite consistent about a few major and extremely significant conclusions.

—"The working mother, and particularly the working mother of small children, is a significant social and economic presence. She will not disappear if benignly neglected or if public policy makes her life more difficult or easier.

—"When mothers work, they bear the responsibility and burden of both home and job, psychologically and physically.

—"When compromises must be made because of family conflict or role strain, it is the mother's work outside the home that is compromised, and this keeps women in an unequal position in the family and the work force in terms of pay and power.

—"The greatest increase in female labor force participation is among women with young children; the greatest role conflict and marital disruption is felt by working mothers of young children; the greatest immediate need for support services is for working mothers of young children; the least is known about the effects of working (mothers) on young children.

P.S. The working mother authors of the pediatic report use a combination of nursery school, neighbors, relatives to fill the gap on the homefront when they're on the job. One is married to an industrial engineer; the other, to a lawyer.

She Has Titanic Sinking Feeling

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My friend Alice has been terrified of water all her life. She wants to take some cruises, so Alice consulted a therapist to help her overcome her fear of water.

She said that her therapist hypnotized her and learned that in a previous life Alice had been a passenger on the Titanic and was drowned when it sank, and that is why she has such a terrible fear of water!

I am beginning to think my friend is bonkers, and her therapist is either a nut or a fraud.

Abby, what do you make of all this "previous life" business?

PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: I wouldn't say that Alice is bonkers, nor would I call her therapist a nut or a fraud. Some very knowledgeable and intelligent people buy the theory that we have all lived previous lives and will return after this life to live many more.

I don't buy it. And until there is evidence that I can understand and accept, I remain,

Very truly yours,
UNCONVINCED

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my 14-year-daughter. She's a tall, pretty girl, but her posture is terrible! I keep reminding her to hold her shoulders back and to sit and stand straight, but every time I look at her she's all hunched over and stooped-shouldered. (She sits in a crouched position with one leg curled under her.)

She says maybe she would improve if I quit nagging her. How can I quit! I love her and want her to have a lovely posture. I'm afraid it's too late already because she's made a habit of slouching. I just hate to see a young, beautiful girl look like a hunchbacked old lady. Can you help me? No names, please. She's hostile enough as it is.

WELL-MEANING MOM

DEAR MOM: Poor posture can be due to a growth disturbance of the spine. Untreated, it becomes a permanent hunchback, but if treated early it can be corrected. Ask your daughter to remove her clothes and bend forward. If there is a noticeable "hump" on her back, or if her ribs are more prominent on one side than the other, she has an actual deformity, and should be examined by an orthopedic surgeon.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a rather large woman, 55, neat, well-groomed and far from ugly. I've been married for 35 years to a handsome man who neither drinks nor smokes, but he loves to dance. I love to dance, too, but I have arthritis in both knees, so my dancing days are over.

I have no money worries, live in a nice home, own my own car, so I can come and go as I please. I play bingo about three times a week.

My problem is that my husband goes dancing every Friday and Sunday, while I'm playing bingo. Different friends have told me that I'm a fool to let my husband go dancing without me, but it's no fun to go and sit while he dances with other women. He tells me that all the women he dances with know he's married. He always wears his wedding band and is usually home before I am. I could make things miserable by telling him I would rather he didn't go dancing since I can't dance, but why should I begrudge him the pleasure of doing something I know he enjoys so much?

Abby, I'm so afraid that one day he will come home and tell me he has found someone else. I don't nag him about it, but do you think I'm a fool for letting him go dancing without me?

WORRIED WIFE

DEAR WORRIED: Yes, as long as you feel threatened. Go with him for a while. It may not be "fun," but it may clear up some of those doubts. It's usually the fear of the unknown that creates uneasiness and worry.

DEAR ABBY: I recently visited our daughter who has a 2-month-old baby girl. I took some pictures of the baby; one showed the mother bathing the baby.

After returning home I took the pictures to a longtime friend and neighbor woman who has never had any children. She looked at the picture of the baby being bathed and said, "You should not be showing this around. It is pornography!"

Abby, I was shocked, and told her so. How can a picture of a naked baby be pornography? An innocent little baby's body is a beautiful sight, and there is nothing dirty or pornographic about it.

Am I wrong? Or could such a picture really be considered pornographic?

SHOCKED AND CONFUSED

DEAR SHOCKED: Pornography is the depiction of erotic behavoir, intending to cause sexual excitement. If a picture of a 2-month-old baby being bathed created that kind of response in your friend, the "pornography" is in her mind.

Hope Law Class Will Cut Crime

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A new course introducing junior high school students to the law may help reduce youth crime rates, according to college educators.

"We're hoping it will have that effect and be a by-product," said Roger Thompson, a University of Tennessee-Chattanooga criminal justice professor who helped develop the cirriculum.

"One assumption we're making — or at least one premise — is that ignorance of the law is no excuse and, beyond that, there's no excuse for perpetuating that ignorance."

The program marks an effort to give teen-agers a better understanding of and more respect for the law. Public schools, the Chattanooga Bar Association and UT-Chattanooga's criminal justice department sponsor the program.

"Law Awareness for Youth" is to be offered to about 450 ninth graders at three junior highs.

Charlie Mae Hutchings, a social studies specialist for the public schools, said it is part of a civics course she hopes can be extended to the rest of the city's 11 junior highs.

"They need to know the law is not entirely like something they see on television," Mrs. Hutchings said. "We are in a legal system, and can't avoid it. Everything we do is law-related and has legal implications."

Although the program is new to Chattanooga public schools, Mrs. Hutchings said school systems in Memphis, Oak Ridge and Nashville offer law-related courses.

Each of the sponsoring agencies helped develop the course and each is to provide speakers and teaching assistance.

Thompson said two of the topics, traffic law and drug abuse, were selected because "these are two topic areas with which they come in the most frequent contact."

Other instruction includes juvenile law and processes, individual rights and responsibilities and consumer and family law. Mrs. Hutchings said instructors are also considering having students participate in a mock trial to complete the course.

Thompson said one problem youths face with the law is misunderstanding their roles.

"It may be that they don't know what the expectations are.

"With early foundations and reasons for their behavior, and an understanding of their relation to the law," he said, "we hope they'll at least be able to make some decisions."

Selling Advice About Giving

By MARIAN FOX
Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — For most of us, a gift is what usually comes along with Christmas or birthday. For Robert F. Sharpe, the gift — and how to give it — is a way of life.

"I have a very enjoyable, fulfilling career," Sharpe, who heads the city's only consulting firm on planned giving, said.

"People like to give. It makes them feel good. And Americans are the most generous people in the world. In 1978 individual Americans gave nearly $40 billion."

Sharpe, 53, son of an Arkansas sharecropper, set up Robert F. Sharpe Inc. in 1959 after spending 10 years in the life insurance business.

His firm advises non-profit institutions such as colleges, universities, hospitals, retirement centers, youth groups and charitable organizations on how to raise more and larger gifts.

He is also author of several books, including "Before YOu Give Another Dime" and the "Planned Giving Idea Book."

"In my career I've helped institutions raise more than $100 million," Sharpe said in an interview. "Weve served more than 2,000 institutions."

Sharpe didn't plan to build his life around the mechanics of giving.

"I became interested in it when I became involved with a large Christian organization in Nebraska, where my job was to set up a planned giving program.

"After that, I took what I had learned there and tied it together with life insurance and estate planning and started y consulting business."

Sharpe advises his clients that giving is more satisfying when it is planned.

"There are so many things people don't know about giving. For instance, many people don't realize they can give things they never thought of, such as antiques, stocks, jewelry or inventories. And there are ways to give large amounts in the future if you don't have the money to give now."

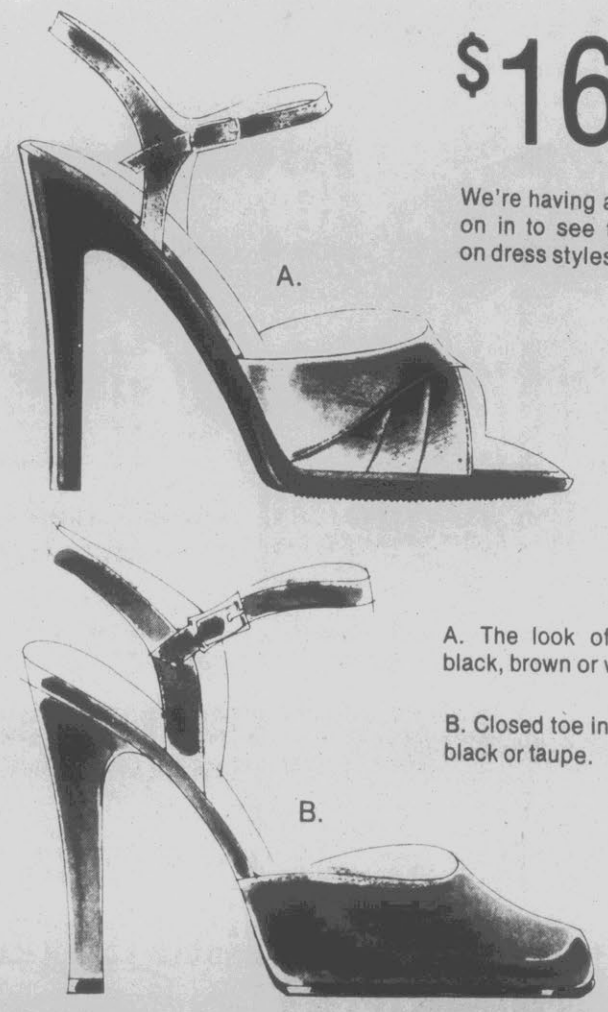

"Knowing how to do anything doesn't make it less fun or less exciting. When you do something well, you enjoy it more. When you give well and wisely, it's the same thing."

Savings At Switchboard

ATLANTA (AP) — There's no yellow-pages listing yet but the telephone company has developed something that could be called "Dial-An-Energy-Saver," according to an energy industry publication.

What was described as the nation's first energy control system operating through a telephone switchboard has been installed at a 656-room Atlanta hotel. The system is expected to result in an annual 15 percent reduction in energy consumption, reports Energy User News.

Staff engineers at the hotel have been trained to work with the central switchboard and video display terminal, which gives readings on the hotel's electrical loads.

The staff can give "instructions" to the system, changing or substituting directions to all of the units to account for individual load requirements.

The control unit can also send instructions to the system for whatever load cycling may be required, the publication said.

It added that the system includes consoles, software and other units which mesh with utility meters marking the hotel's heating, ventilating and air-conditioning apparatus in the lobby, restaurant and public rooms.

The program, called the A.T. & T. Energy Communications System, is in the Atlanta Biltmore.

Mexico Offers Bargain Visits

By JOHN C. EAGAN
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Americans squeezed by inflation, the decline of the dollar in Europe and the gasoline crunch can still find bargain vacations — South of the Border.

Thanks to the devaluation of Mexican currency in 1976, the American dollar is worth about 22.5 pesos, almost twice the exchange rate of three years ago. Even with inflation considered, the American dollar still has about 33 percent more buying power in Mexico than at home.

By shopping carefully and bargaining seriously in Mexico City markets, you can pick up beautiful carved stone chess sets for the equivalent of about 10 American dollars. You'd pay eight to 10 times that amount in the United States, if you could find such a set.

During a visit last summer, zipping around town among friendly natives on a well-run bus system costs two pesos — four cents. A ride on Mexico City's sleek new subway system was half that price.

Dining at the small sidewalk cafes crowded with Mexicans provided a delicious feast for less than 22 pesos — $1 U.S.

The Banco Nacional de Mexico estimates that costs for such basics as food and lodging range from 25 percent to 40 percent less in Mexico than comparable costs in the United States.

For example, the study showed that a glass of beer that costs an average of $1.29 in the U.S. sells for about 36 cents in Mexico; a ham sandwich — $2.31 in the U.S. — sells for $1.41 in Mexico and a $7.70 chicken dinner in America goes for $3.29 in Mexico. Gasoline is plentiful and sells for about 51 cents a gallon — about half what it costs in the U.S.

There are exceptions, of course. For example, coffee and imported liquor are more expensive in Mexico.

There are a wide range of vacation options, from sophisticated nightlife in Mexico City to some of the world's finest fishing off Baja, from sun-drenched beaches on the Gulf and Pacific coasts to mysterious ruins of ancient Maya, Toltec and Aztec tribes.

Mexico is in the midst of a tourism promotion campaign, headed by Mguel Aleman, a former president of Mexico.

When the campaign was launched 18 years ago, about half a million tourists were vacationing in Mexico. In 1978, the figure had leaped to 3.8 million who spent an average of more than 10 days in Mexico. The figure is expected to reach five million for 1979.

Americans made up 83.8 percent of the visitors, with Canada second at 4.9 percent.

To keep up with the massive tourist industry growth, President Lopez Portillo's administration is expecting 97,000 more hotel rooms to be constructed throughout the country by 1982, when seven million visitors are expected.

East Germans Want Bibles

NEW YORK (UPI) — An Australian Bible Society official has told American Bible Society officials that the demand for Bibles in East Germany far outpaces the supply.

"The demand for Bibles is overwhelming," said the Rev. Keith Bricknell. "While there may be a shortage of Bibles, there is no shortage of Christians."

Mobile 'Chopper' Gobbles Up Trees And Bushes

By JIM KLAHN
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — It crawls across the land like a prehistoric termite, its spinning teeth gnashing and gobbling trees and bushes, spitting out a stream of chips behind.

Mounted on tank-like tracks and with a slow-but-sure working gait of 1 mph, the "swathe-felling mobile chipper" leaves little in its wake, chewing through residue left after logging.

As large as the biggest bulldozers, it seems intent on dealing the final blow to Mother Nature, licking up the last vestiges of growth in a forest.

But, the yellow machine may provide answers to two problems of the forest products industry:

—How to economically gather waste wood to use as fuel at paper plants, or for pulp in the making of paper.

—How to prepare the forest for a new crop of trees, without unduly harming the forest floor.

The 36-ton machine is actually a soft-stepping giant, said Peter Koch, manager of the U.S. Forest Service's Southern Forest Experiment Station in Pineville, La.

"If you have buttercups on the ground when you start, they'll still be there when you're done," he said in a telephone conversation.

The machine is designed primarily for use in the South, where there are millions of acres of pine and scrub forests, and where the ground is relatively flat and rock-free.

"One might also use it on flat lodgepole pine stands, such as those in Eastern Washington, but the terrain would have to be selected very carefully," said Koch.

Too, a relative of the chipper may someday be in use in the mountainous, rocky areas of the West, but developers are more concerned about making the first one work on flat land.

A horizontal cutter blade whirls six inches above the ground to cut down brush and small trees, and the chipper is able to eat its way through logs up to 19 inches in diameter.

Chips are blown into the "chip forwarder" machine, which tails the chipper. Once it has a load of chips, it drives to a collection spot near a road, dumps the load and returns to the chipper. It is expected the chipper will keep two forwarders busy.

Nicholson Manufacturing Co. of Seattle is building the mobile chipper, in a cooperative agreement between Nicholson, the Forest Service, Boise Southern Co., Georgia-Pacific Corp., International Paper Co., Olinkraft Inc., and Weyerhaeuser Co.

Tom Savage of Nicholson, project officer for the chipper, said, "What we're after is the recovery of as much woody material as possible. We're shooting for 85 percent."

The 575-horsepower machine was field-tested for the first time last August in a stand of alders near Sedro Woolley. "It looked promising to the people from the South who saw it in action," said Savage.

The next step is for field tests in the South in March under Koch's watchful eye, then the participating timber products companies each have a turn. Further developments depend on the success of field trials.

The Forest Service and the private companies signed an agreement almost three years ago to develop the machine. Koch said the original price tag of $300,000 to $400,000 was left behind long ago, with the actual price $1 million or more. He said Nicholson had to put the extra money in.

He said the machine should be ready for wide use by early 1981, with each machine harvesting residue and cull trees from 1,500 acres per year and delivering chips to mills at $18 per green ton. A green ton is roughly the energy equivalent of one barrel of oil.

A large paper mill boiler might use 500,000 green tons a year, said Koch. A mobile chipper, operating at 20 tons per hour, would provide about 40,000 tons of chips per year.

"If you buy the machines, man them, depreciate them over five years — selling the product for $18 a green ton — you should make 30 percent over pretax profit on a $500,000 investment," said Koch.

The way the machine treats the land is a great benefit, said Koch. "Now, we go in on thousands of acres in the South and scrape the wood (wastes) into a pile and burn it, to get ready to plant. We're scarring the topsoil.

"This thing is designed to get rid of this scraping operation, which is hard on the land," he said.

Though there are foresters who argue in favor of burning slash to kill weeds and other growth before planting a new tree crop, there are others who argue fire makes a poor management tool, and damages the soil.

Savage said the chipper could also be used in "dog hair" pine stands, cutting eight-foot-wide swaths where the trees grow too thick and leaving rows 3-4 feet wide to spread out.

He said a usual crew would include an operator for each harvester and forwarder, plus a person to go through before the chipper to fall larger trees and line up some trees so they would not be crosswise to the harvester's mouth. A mechanic would also have to be on call.

Critical Of One Person's Cackle

LONDON (AP) — The BBC recently received letters complaining about the "hideous cackling" interrupting nearly all the radio's comedy and quiz shows.

Although most of the letter writers believed the noise was canned laughter, network officials said it was a real laugh from a lady who had come to be known as Mrs. Chuckles, a woman who faithfully attended shows taped before a studio audience.

BBC engineers solved the problem by sitting the woman in a "dead spot" where microphones did not pick up her laugh.

CONTENTED COWS . . . young and old, take a break in a pasture near Swan Quarter. The young forest, of dark green pines, encircling the pasture is typical of eastern North Carolina forest views, where pine is one of the more dominant native trees.

STRANGELY TWISTED . . . trees are common along the seacoast of North Carolina. This cluster, with gnarled limbs, is located near Pine Knoll Shores, not far from Morehead City.

Eastern N.C. Treescapes

Treescapes in the flat lands of Eastern North Carolina are among the most varied to be found in any comparable area anywhere in the world.

Within eastern counties, a traveler will see numerous changes in the makeup of treescapes along the way.

At some places, forests arch over rural roads, creating a canopy that gives the feeling of traveling through a forest arcade.

Along major roads, tall walls of clipped trees provide an ambience like that of a vast formal garden hedge.

The irregularity of patterns of farm land carved from once dense forests has resulted in great sweeps of forests bordering fields, and occasional isolated cluster of trees, or sentinel like lines of trees left along streams and fences.

Where creeks and rivers flow, majestic gums and cypresses, often festooned with lacy skeins of Spanish moss, are reflected in dark water.

Nearer the coast, oaks and cedars, buffeted by ocean winds, take on strange, twisted shapes that add a surrealistic note to Carolina treescapes. Inland from the coast, evergreen oaks and myrtles growing on muddy knolls form island treescapes that seem to float in stretches of marsh and cord grass.

The seasons bring dramatic color into play in eastern North Carolina treescapes — smoky pastels in the spring; varied hues of greens in summer; bold reds, yellows and oranges in autumn; and in winter silvers and grays of bare branches intermingled with the permanent dark green of pine, magnolia and other year round greens.

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

SWEET GUM TREES . . . in winter show a silvery filigree of small limbs. In spring and summer the trees are covered with green leaves that turn to shades of red to deep burgandy in the autumn. This line of gums borders Lake Matamuskeet.

A TREE THAT DOMINATES . . . Often, a huge old tree, like this roadside cypress in Hyde County, will dominate the landscape for miles around. A growth of vines find support on the massive trunk.

Plan Volleyball Marathon Play

On Wednesday, January 30, two teams of six players will kick off an attempt to surpass the world's record in marathon volleyball. The marathon will take place at Elm Street Gym in Greenville and will be headed by two Kinston team captains, Jeff Sutton and Richard Tolston.

Sutton and Tolston, already co-holders of the Guinness World Record in marathon tennis at 105 hours, will lead the basketball attempt in an effort to raise $20,000 for the North Carolina Special Olympics. The drive is headed by N. C. Special Olympics state director Monty Castevens.

Currently, according to the Guinness Book of World Records, the basketball marathon record of 70 hours and 33 minutes is held by the 2nd Military Hospital at Ingleburn, Australia and was set on May 4-7, 1979.

In addition to captains Sutton and Tolston, players on the marathon team will be Michael Tolston, Mark Tolston, Kyle Sutton, Kirt Sutton, Ed Smith, Ed Dupree, Jay Griffith, Gary Baker, Dave Eudy, and John Davechio.

The event will be open to the public and everybody is invited to attend. Contributions for the Special Olympics fund will be welcomed.

Beware of Synthetic Implants for Baldness

I am bald and I'm a sucker for every advertisement I read. Recently, I heard about synthetic fibers that can give me back an "immediate" head of hair. My doctor says, "Stay away from it." What do you think? — Mr. S.Y., Calif.

Dear Mr. Y.:

Your doctor and I have apparently been reading the same report that highlights the danger of the use of synthetic fibers as implants. This procedure must be differentiated from transplants of plugs of one's own hair that have been used effectively within recent years.

Both the Federal Trade Commission and the Federal Drug Administration have been investigating establishments that implant individual human hairs or synthetic fibers. It seems that severe infections can be the end result of such procedures.

Dr. Wilma Bergfeld, a dermatologist in Cleveland, has studied more than 40 of these implant recipients. She points out, "Their implants usually fell out in six or eight weeks, taking some of the patient's own meager hair with them. And the infections often left permanent scars."

A great number of implant establishments are now touting their implant methods through advertisements. This, of course, captures the attention of many people like you who are so anxious to find an immediate answer to the problem of their baldness. Beware. For there are many risks involved.

Again, however, it must be emphasized that there is excellent value to the transplantation methods that are now being employed by physicians who are specially trained.

The doctors just found that my husband has cirrhosis of the liver. I don't think they're telling us the whole truth about how serious his condition is because they want to spare us. Isn't it true that cirrhosis is always a fatal condition? — Mrs. M.E.S., Ind.

Dear Mrs. S.:

When cirrhosis of the liver is suspected and treated immediately, and when its causes are eliminated, people in the early stages of cirrhosis can be expected to live out their normal span of years.

However, if cirrhosis is left untreated, and its underlying cause persists, there comes a time when the liver disease may be irreversible.

It is a mistaken notion that cirrhosis and alcoholism are an inseparable pair. They are definitely related, but there are also other causes for cirrhosis. In addition, there are different types of cirrhosis, so it is most important to trace the exact cause.

The liver is a remarkable organ and a complex chemical factory. There are probably very few, if any, functions of the body that do not in some way involve the liver. Despite cirrhotic changes, the liver can often function well and compensate for the scarring that occurs in mild cases of cirrhosis. You should feel reassured by your doctor's handling of your husband's problem.

Dutch Harbor's Fishing Industry Embroiled

By MARY LENZ
Associated Press Writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The lights of Dutch Harbor cut through the rain and mist of Alaska's remote Aleutian Islands, luring unskilled workers with promises of "big bucks" for working overtime in the nation's richest fishing port.

But labor leaders say the Asian immigrants and others who come to process the $100 million worth of king crab and fish sold on the Dutch Harbor docks run into some of the nation's worst working conditions.

Critics say workers are paid wages below the legal minimum, receive inadequate medical care and may lose all their earnings if they do not complete six-month, 7-days-a-week contracts with fish processors.

State and federal inspectors say complaints are exaggerated, some of the assailed practices are quite legal and that tough conditions are just a fact of life in the windswept, treeless Aleutians.

"I don't believe anybody in Dutch Harbor is out to violate the law," said Don Wilson, an Alaska Department of Labor investigator.

Wilson said there are no more problems in the fish processing industry than with "migrant laborers picking lettuce" in the Lower 48 United States, and that both involve transient populations and their attendant problems.

"Asians that come here migrate to the seafood industry because they understand it," Wilson said. "Why not? I thought we were trying to help the boat people. Why not get people (who are) satisfied to work in those conditions because that's inherent to their way of life? Most Americans won't do that work....

"Face it, why go to an isolated area where the weather is cold and damp — and work in an industry where it's laborious, tedious, wet and smelly — for wages you could make serving in a fast-food joint?" Wilson asked. "They come out to make the overtime, to make those big bucks."

But a union official says "that approximately 50 percent of the workers at Dutch Harbor are minorities, such as Filipinos, Vietnamese or South Americans," many of whom speak little or no English and may be completely unfamiliar with U.S. labor laws.

Larry Cotter, president of the Alaska Council of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, also said workers get no wages until debts against their accounts are paid off. Those debts include the cost of gear such as oil skins and boots, room and board and the $580 roundtrip air fare from Seattle, nearly 2,000 miles away, where most of the workers are hired.

"What happens is that cannery workers are held in bondage by the companies because they cannot afford to get back out of the Aleutians," Cotter said.

"Conditions are terrible. I have an affidavit signed by a man who said he was sleeping in a converted freezer. The floor was covered with ice and sewage backed up, sloshing back and forth across the floor."

Like the oil boom towns that sprang up overnight, Dutch Harbor mushroomed as king crab profits soared. In 1976, $48.3 million in crab and other fish products were landed in the Dutch Harbor area. By 1978, the figure was $99.7 million.

The 3,000 workers who flood the area at the peak of each fishing season are paid Alaska's minimum wage, $3.60 per hour. The "big bucks" are made working days of 12 and 18 hours.

Scott McKinney, 20, and Jeff Pitts, 24, both of Seattle, were working 17-hour days on a crab processing boat owned by Trident Seafoods of Seattle.

They said when they complained that their wages were averaging below minimum, Capt. Charles Bundrant handed them survival suits and told them to jump into 20-foot seas to be picked up by another boat and taken back to shore.

Bundrant, who said the two were paid "as per agreement," explained that jumping from the boat is normal procedure for transfer to another vessel in rough waters, and that he has done so many times himself.

Rod Andersen of Burley, Idaho, filed an affidavit with the ILWU in Juneau claiming that he left Dutch Harbor seeking medical care when crab guts and hot water splashed into his eyes. When he tried to claim back wages from the Seattle firm which hired him, he was told he had nothing coming because he had quit.

One point of contention is Alaska's return transportation law, which requires that an employee hired out of state be returned to the place he was hired. It is a violation of that law if an employer subtracts the cost of the employee's air ticket from his pay, causing that amount to drop below the minimum wage.

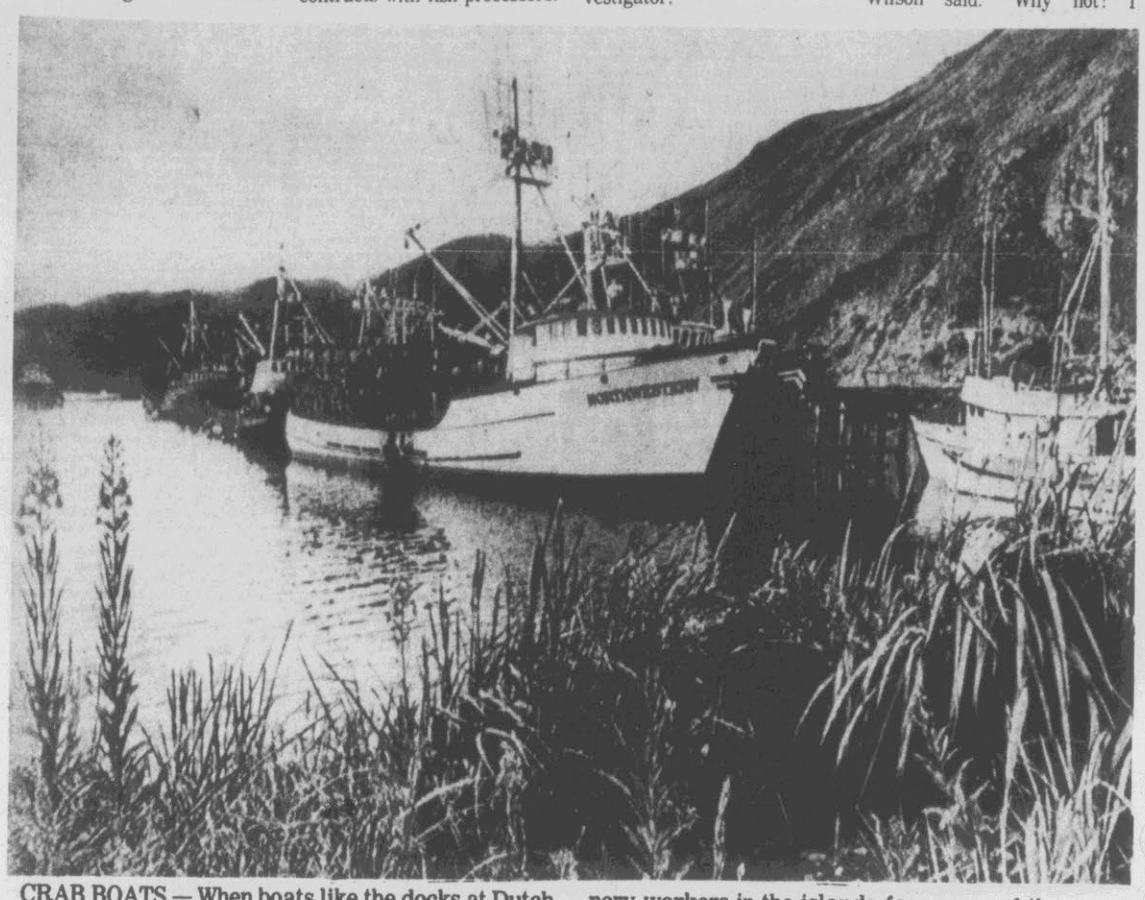

"I'm not saying the companies are lily white clean," said Wilson. "They're in business to make money. Anybody will occasionally try to take a short cut."

Dale Cheek, director of the Alaska Labor Department's wage and hour division, said the long hours are just part of the industry. "When the boats are there, there's no time to stand around and wait. When a crab dies, you've got 20 minutes to cook it or that's a lost product."

Wilson said last year, only 104 complaints were filed with the wage and hour division from the entire Alaska fishing industry, including areas other than the Aleutians.

But labor leaders said the fact that state and federal inspectors are 800 miles northeast in Anchorage, while most of the workers come from Seattle or California, creates a geographical no man's land where regulations are inadequately enforced and complaints are difficult to file.

"When you talk about an investigation in Dutch Harbor, you are talking about an investigator spending a week and a $400 roundtrip ticket," Cheek said. "I've got a real budget problem."

CRAB BOATS — When boats like the docks at Dutch Harbor, crab must be unloaded and processed quickly or the product will be lost. Labor leaders say cannery workers in the islands face some of the worst working conditions in the United States. (AP Laserphoto)

China Opens Crime War

By RONNIE WEI

HONG KONG (AP) — China has declared a war on crime, which has spread from the southern border areas near Hong Kong to the northern border with the Soviet Union.

This is reflected in increasing numbers of reports of crime in the Chinese press and domestic radio broadcasts in the past few months.

The crimes, according to the reports, included murder, rapes, gangfights, embezzlemenet and conspiracy to smuggle refugees to Hong Kong.

It is difficult to determine the extent of the crime wave in China, but it has caused enough concern for Peking to mobilize troops to patrol the streets of the Chinese capital and Shanghai — China's biggest city.

The Peking Daily reported the Chinese army has begun to work in concert with police in the war against crime in the capital.

The report came 11 days after an announcement by the same paper that 12 platoons of people's liberation army troops now are patrolling the main street of Shanghai "to protect social order."

A domestic broadcast, monitored in Hong Kong, said civilians in Shanghai have organized vigilantes to help police and troops prevent crimes.

Fear Gold Hunt Polluting Water

SEATTLE (AP) — A fishery biologist says he fears dredging by a rush of gold prospectors in the state's rivers and streams will harm salmon runs this spring.

Millard Deusen said he is concerned because hundreds of people, spurred by higher gold prices, are buying portable dredges that suck up material from stream bottoms and separate any gold from gravel, silt and sand. Salmon lay their eggs in shallow, gravelly areas.

SOLAR BANK

R&J SOLAR SYSTEMS PRESENTS:

THE FREE HEAT BTU BANK

For more information and a demonstration call
Days 756-4687
Nights/Weekends 756-6544

The revolutionary Solar Bank is a completely self-contained solar furnace offering FREE HEAT (BTUs) from the Sun.

While the Sun is shining, one Solar Bank supplies up to 100% of the heating requirements of a typical 700 square foot area with a 32 degree outside temperature.

HOW?
In practice the free heat or BTUs generated by the Solar Bank for your home or business is heat your furnace does not have to supply; therefore, saving you costly energy dollars. As energy costs rise, the Sun's heat remains constant: FREE.

CAN ANYONE AFFORD IT?
Yes. It is in the price range of a window air conditioner. A money saving machine that will save more dollars as utilities rise, and is eligible for tax credits. It continues to pay for itself forever because the sun's heat is free.

NBC Presents 'Martian Chronicles'

For a long time, science fiction was looked upon with considerable disdain — something totally unsuitable for anyone with much mentality to think of pursuing. But, in the past 20 years, there's been a reversal of thought, particularly in educational circles — once its strongest critics. Today colleges, universities and continuing education centers across the country are integrating science fiction courses into various departments.

There's also been a steady flow of science fiction-oriented shows appearing on television and movie theaters. First came TV's "Star Trek." And this was followed by "Star Wars," "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" and "Alien" — all three were popular with movie-goers. And the film version of "Star Trek" is literally sending the nation into orbit.

Along the way there have been several attempts to come up with a winning science fiction series on television. But none have been successful, as far as the ratings are concerned.

Now NBC-TV is presenting "The Martian Chronicles," an adaptation of Ray Bradbury's popular space age adventure. The drama is divided into three parts: "The Expeditions," "The Settlers" and "The Martians," and will be presented Sunday-Tuesday, Jan. 27-29 (8 to 10 p.m. Sunday, 9 to 11 p.m. the other nights).

Set in the year 2000, 'Chronicles' follows the adventures of an American astronaut, Colonel John Wilder, during the colonization of the Red Planet by the Earthmen.

Rock Hudson stars as Wilder, and he's ably supported by an impressive international cast — Gayle Hunnicutt, Bernie Casey, Christopher Connelly, Nicholas Hammond, Barry Morse, Nyree Dawn Porter, Wolfgang Peichmann, Maggie Wright, Terence Longdon, Roddy McDowall, Darren McGavin, Bernadette Peters, Maria Schell, Joyce Van Patten and Fritz Weaver. Bill Brown is the narrator.

The production was filmed on location in Malta, Lanzarote in the Canary Islands, and England.

In addition to being a science fantasy, 'Chronicles' is noteworthy for its exploration of the sociological impact which Earth's values, standards and mores might bring to the people of another planet — whether for good or ill.

ON THE DEFENSIVE — Rock Hudson (l) and Darren McGavin star as two members of a team of Earthmen who land on Mars, but must confront a member of their crew who sets out to prevent further exploration of the planet for fear it will be corrupted; in "The Martian Chronicles," a miniseries to be colorcast on NBC-TV's Sunday Night Big Event Jan. 27 (8-10 p.m.) and NBC Monday Night at the Movies Jan. 28 and NBC Tuesday Night at the Movies Jan. 29 (9-11 p.m. both nights).

Here A Few 'Don'ts'

There are three things you don't do in Houston, Texas. You don't leave your ten-gallon hat at home, you don't knock Texas barbeque and you don't dare assume there is any more valuable player in the National Football League than Earl Campbell.

Campbell has become as synonymous with winning as the Pittsburgh Steelers. The 5-11, 224-pound bull has already broken every career mark for any NFL running back after a two-season stint.

The Oiler fullback has garnered better than 2,900 yards in rushing. In comparison, Jim Brown gained 1,300 and O.J. Simpson 1,225 in their first two seasons.

Needless to say, Campbell made every All-Pro team in the book and will start at fullback for the AFC when they take on the rival NFC in the annual Pro Bowl, pitting the best from each league in a conference shootout.

This year's game has a different twist. The contest will be played at the Aloha Stadium in Hawaii, Sunday, Jan. 27 (4 p.m. on ABC-TV), the first time any professional football game has taken place on the gorgeous Hawaiian islands.

When Houston signed Campbell out of the University of Texas for a cool 1.5 million dollar contract, they had no idea that he would lead the team to the AFC championship game two years in a row.

The Oilers have fallen twice in the championship to Pittsburgh. However, after last year, Coach Bum Phillips said., "We have knocked on the door twice and next season we're going to blast the blamed thing wide open."

EARL CAMPBELL has been setting records for the Houston Oilers ever since he entered training camp two seasons ago — but that has done little to alter his pleasant personality. The powerful fullback will be in the backfield for the AFC when they take on the rival NFC in the annual Pro Bowl, to be televised Sunday, Jan. 27 from the Aloha Stadium in Hawaii starting at 4 p.m. on ABC.

Earl is not your ordinary individual. He spends a lot of the off-season working with underpriviledged children and devotes much of his energy to a growing family that includes two children.

"You'd figure Earl would have come here with a swollen head, winning the Heisman trophy and all," notes Oiler center Carl Mauck. "But he is as fine as individual as I've ever met. He's already reading defenses like a seasoned veteran and he hasn't even started catching too many passes yet. Once he starts to do that, our offense may be unstoppable."

"He gets you off balance," says Los Angeles Ram linebacker Isiah Robertson. "He's the toughest to try and bring down I've ever played against. If I had to tackle him every game, I'd make them double my salary."

Campbell spent the end of the 1979 season with a sore leg that kept him out of the opening playoff victory over the San Diego Chargers. But he returned against the Steelers.

Pittsburgh kept him at about one yard per carry, but the mere fact that Earl played is a tribute to his definition of team play; "You give all you have for as long as you have it. If you're hurt, you just suck it in and keep going."

Disco Queen Hosts Special

The reigning queen of disco will star in her first network television special, "The Donna Summer Special," on ABC Sunday, Jan. 27 (10 to 11 p.m.). Robert Guillaume of "Benson," will be her guest star and there'll be cameo appearances by Debralee Scott, Twiggy and Pat Ast. A highlight of the show is a segment featuring a concert at the Hollywood Bowl, where Donna sang her biggest disco hits. Over 17,000 cheering fans attended.

Donna's musical career began when she was only ten years old, in a church in Boston. Called on to perform for a soloist who was taken suddenly ill, she was amazed to find that her voice moved the congregation to tears.

From that time on, music was her life. When she was 19, she traveled to Germany with the overseas company of "Hair" remained to perform there after the tour was over, settling in Munich and singing in local musicals and movies.

Donna became a major star in Europe, appearing often on televison and cutting one pop hit after another. Then came "Love to Love You, Baby." It didn't do too well in Europe, but Neil Bogart, president of Casablanca Records in California, heard it and bought it. He knew he had something good when he played the record at parties — and people got up, danced, then asked for more.

The record was soon being played all over the country and soared to "instant gold." The rest, as they say, is history.

DONNA SUMMER stars in her first television special, "Donna Summer — Alive and More," airing on ABC, Sunday, Jan. 27 (10-11 p.m.).

Today, Donna's immediate plans call for more singing, dancing, acting and showing her audiences the full range of her musical abilities.

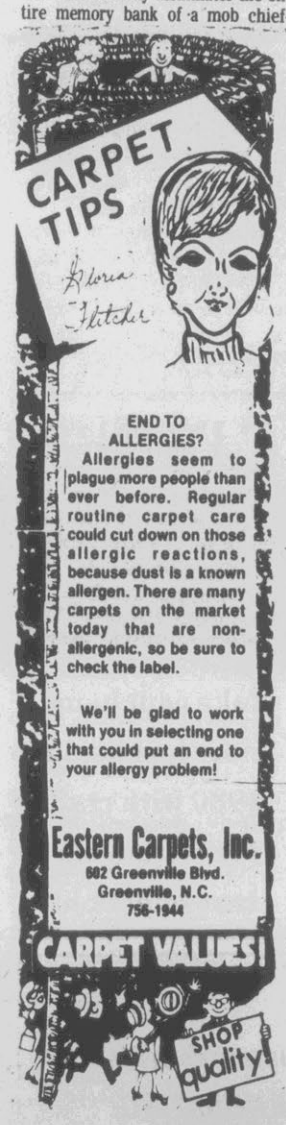

And you'll be seeing plenty of these in the special.

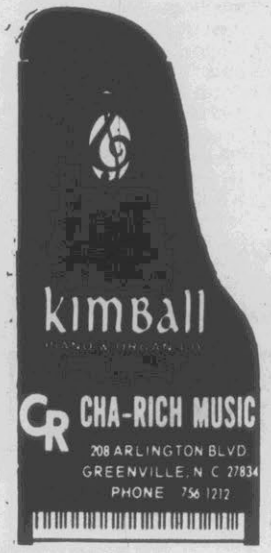

The show opens with Donna as a young and somewhat naive girl singing "I Found the Answer" in a church similar to where she began her singing career. Then there are flashes of the Hollywood Bowl where Donna, the accomplished performer, brings thousands of her "closest friends" to their feet prepared to dance wildly in the aisles. And they do just that with the first words of one of her biggest hits, "Dim All the Lights."

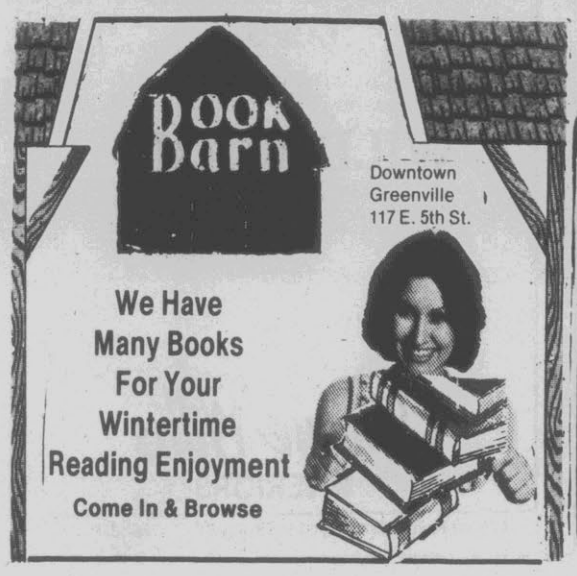

Disaster Trip

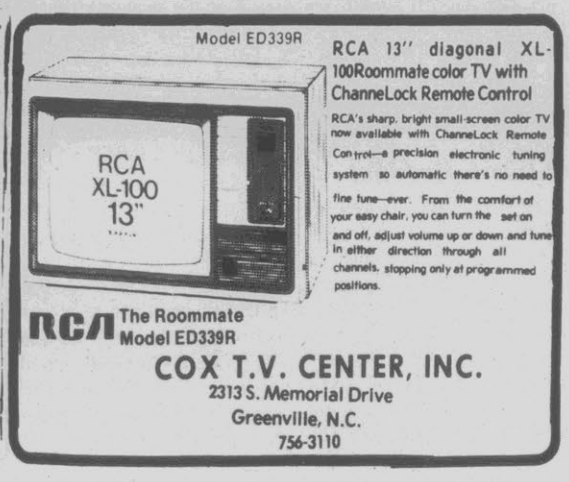

It wasn't exactly a "Love Boat" cruise for all the folks on the Lindblad Explorer, a film-chartered pleasure vessel sailing out of Chile.

The ship, which was filming a disaster movie entitled "Virus" in the waters around Antarctica, hit a reef and had to be towed back to Chile. Some 70 people in the film party — including Chuck Connors and Bo Svenson — were taken off the ship, but the 19 crew members remained on board.

POPULAR DAYTIME serial actors Audrey Peters and Ron Tomme (top, today; bottom in 1959), who portrays Vanessa and Bruce Sterling on "Love of Life," are gracefully aging in their "reel life" as any other couple would in "real life."

Major Gala

"Because We Care," a major entertainment gala in which a host of top stars are volunteering their special talents for the benefit of starving Cambodian people, is being taped this week in Los Angeles. It will be broadcast at a later date on CBS-TV.

Julie Andrews, Edward Asner, Debby Boone and Carol Burnett head the list of stellar performers participating in the show. Others are Lynda Carter, Jane Fonda, Cary Grant, Audrey Hepburn, Kris Kristofferson, Dean Martin, Dudley Moore, Mary Tyler Moore and The Muppets.

All proceeds from the event will be donated for the purchase of food and medical supplies so desperately needed by the suffering. Tickets for the taping are scaled from $1,000 down.

Bob's Milestone

Television host Bob Barker will host his 3500th game show in 23 years on "Truth or Consequences" on Jan. 30.

Bidding A Fond Farewell

All those troubled folks who live in Rosehill, the fictitious town where anything can happen and frequently does — had better get their problems solved quickly. That's because "Love of Life," the daytime drama that birthed the town, is going off the air Friday, Feb. 1.

Since the show debuted on CBS-TV 30 years ago, it's given viewers about 7,400 daily crises to brood about, which has to be some kind of record for televised anguish.

From its very beginning, the series has centered around two sisters, Vanessa and Meg, residents of Rosehill. Then Van married Bruce Sterling, who publishes the town's paper, and he became another pivotal character.

Actually, life was quite innocent when "Love of Life" came on the air. Nowadays, any soap opera worth its suds must be relevant. So the series went modern, and this means abortion, adultery, lesbianism and tears, tears, tears.

When asked about all the strife and despair that's gone on in Rosehill, Ron Tomme, who stars as Bruce Sterling, says, "There's nothing duller than two people happily married, sipping tea and kissing and hugging. You need dramatic tension on a daytime series." Ron's been responsible for plenty of that during his years on the show.

Controls Ordered

The World Boxing Council has ordered a series of controls to be adopted by affiliated organizations in 96 countries to guard against further ring casualties. The program, drawn up as a result of the death of middleweight Willie Classen in New York recently, requires a rest of 60 days after each knockout, with no contact training the first 30 days, and after consecutive KOs, a fighter must rest for 180 days. Should there be three straight knockouts, there will be a one-year rest and a complete medical exam, including a brain scan, to determine if the boxer shall be permitted to continue his career or be permanently retired.

Behind The Scenes

John Schneider of CBS' "The Dukes of Hazzard" is rapidly becoming the newest teen heart throb.

However, one would hardly know it, based on the actor's lifestyle. A soft-spoken and easy-going kind of young guy, John isn't a fixture in the popular Hollywood social whirl. And he's seldom linked romantically with a different girl each week.

Indeed, John's idea of a good time is having a group of close friends over to his condominium for an evening of conversation, listening to music, and maybe catching the late night movie on the tube.

"I really don't enjoy big parties and things," he offers in his almost shy manner. "It's not that I don't like meeting people, because I do. But somehow when I do go to one of those shindigs, I just don't feel comfortable.

"I guess," he adds, "it's just because I've always been a homebody. I mean, when I was young I was overweight by 50 pounds, and I never was part of the crowd. I spent my weekends at home watching the tube, and eating a lot."

However, when he decided to lose the excess weight, he did so in no time at all.

"But even when I thinned down and got into acting which was the motivating force behind my dropping the weight — I still wasn't comfortable in social settings. I guess that's why I'm not a disco person or anything.

"Besides, I've always felt that while you can meet a lot of people at parties, you only make friends when you have the chance to sit down with someone on a one-to-one basis. That's why I stay at home and have people over. That's how I make friends."

Power Discussed

The president of the United States is the "crisis solver, the inspirer of the nation, the chief legislator, the chief executive, chief of state and commander-in-chief. We expect an enormous amount from the president," says noted political scientist and author James MacGregor Burns in the second segment of "Every Four Years," airing Wednesday, Jan. 30 (9 p.m.) on PBS.

In nearly two centuries of constitutional government, only 39 men have occupied the U.S. presidency. This program explores what they did to expand the power and influence of that office.

From George Washington to Jimmy Carter a combination of circumstances and individual styles has escalated the impact of the office, and this segment traces that historical growth. Howard K. Smith, host for the series and a longtime White House observer, delivers a telling essay on the office, then guides viewers through the evolution of the importance of the presidency.

"The emergence of presidential power was not an overnight decision by any one occupant of that office," said Don Fouser, producer of the series.

'Iron-Man' Lemon

Meadowlark Lemon, who co-stars in "Hello, Larry," qualifies for iron-man status after averaging 300 games a year for 22 years while playing for the Harlem Globetrotters. Small wonder he doesn't think the National Basketball Association's schedule is too demanding. "I think pro ball players should be able to get up for 83 games a year," he says.

Jerry Named Host

Comedian Jerry Van Dyke will host a new entertainment show for syndication, to be produced by Merv Griffin Productions.

The show, featuring Van Dyke and guest stars, will be taped in Hollywood.

MALCOLM STODDARD portrays the 19th-century naturalist whose observations on the origin of species influence present day understanding of life and evolution in "The Voyage of Charles Darwin," premiering Sunday, Jan. 27 at 8 p.m. on PBS.

Darwin's Theory

Charles Darwin, whose theories of evolution and natural selection caused a furor in 19th-century England, is the subject of a new seven-part series, "The Voyage of Charles Darwin," beginning Sunday, 8 p.m. on PBS.

The hour-long drama, focus on Darwin's five-year scientific journey aboard the H.M.S. "Beagle," a journey that led to his controversial theories of evolution. Filmed on location in England and South America, the production combines biography with outstanding photography of rare South American wildlife. Sea portions of the drama were filmed aboard a replica of the "Beagle," and the story is told in the first person, largely in Darwin's own words as he wrote them in his diary of the voyage.

The series is hosted by a modern-day scientific voyager, former astronaut Neil Armstrong, who as commander for Apollo 11 was the first man to step on the moon's surface. Malcolm Stoddard stars as Charles Darwin and Andrew Burt portrays Robert Fitzroy, captain of the "Beagle."

The series begins, appropriately enough, with an episode entitled "I Was Considered a Very Ordinary Boy." Although he was the grandson of the famous potter Josiah Wedgwood I and physician-philosopher-author Erasmus Darwin, young Charles showed little promise of greatness. A slow learner and a poor student, he first tried medical school, which he found "incredibly dull." Darwin's domineering father then decided that he should study theology and sent him to Cambridge. Here again the younger Darwin proved a failure. "You care for nothing but shooting, dogs, and rat-catching, and you will be a disgrace to yourself and all your family," his father once declared.

While neglecting most of his studies, however, Darwin had met a group of scientists who encouraged his interest in natural history and recommended him as expedition naturalist for the voyage of the "Beagle." In 1831, overcoming his father's objections, the 22-year-old Darwin sailed with Capt. Fitzroy on a voyage to survey the coasts of Patagonia, Tierra del Fuego, Chile and Peru, and to visit some Pacific Islands.

"Voyage" highlights Darwin's discoveries during this five-year journey, concluding with his return to England and the publication of his controversial book, "The Origin of Species by Means of Natural Selection," in 1859.

Is This A Fourth?

LYNN REDGRAVE stars as Ann Anderson, assistant administrator of Kensington General Hospital, on "House Calls," half-hour comedy series seen Mondays at 9:30 p.m. on CBS.

There are three high-spots in the career of Lynn Redgrave thus far — and they range from being plump to old to pregnant.

Her newest role, however, may become a fourth on that list. These days she's playing a hospital administrator on CBS-TV's new series, "House Calls," now airing Mondays (9:30 p.m.).

It was in the motion picture "Georgy Girl" that Lynn became the heroine of plump women everywhere.

Then, in the last three episodes of the television adaptation of "Centennial," she played Charlotte Buckland, who aged from 18 to 85.

In her most recent outing on TV — "Beggarman, Thief," — Lynn portrayed a pregnant widow searching for the killer of her husband.

Lynn says that "Georgy Girl," which was filmed in 1966, "had the greatest effect" on her life. Television producers began their pursuit of the actress, and she was a guest star on "The Jerry Lewis Show" the following year. Then, for two-and-a-half years, she hosted the daytime talk show, "Not For Women Only" (she took over when Barbara Walters left).

Her "most demanding" roles to date were in a London stage production of "Born Yesterday" and Broadway's "St. Joan."

Lynn's character on "House Calls," Ann Anderson, has a quick tongue and loves to deride the medical profession. And it looks like the real "key" to the series is her relationship with Charley Michaels, a surgeon who's played by Wayne Rogers.

Rogers, whose enthusiasm for the series seems to grow daily, likens the character rapport as "Something akin to Hepburn and Tracy."

Many have tried to emulate that particular brand of magic. But, so far, no one has succeeded. And, who knows? Maybe Anderson and "House Calls" will become high spot No. 4.

Limited Series

Production has begun on "The Long Ride Home," a limited series of five half-hour segments scheduled to air as a CBS-TV Afterschool Special.

Ronnie Cox and David Hollander star. Others in the cast are Andrew Duggan, Timothy Blake, Robert Emhardt, Carmen Zapata, Harry Caesar, Redman Gleason, Ed Ness and Normal Howell.

Klugman Returns

Jack Klugman has returned to the set of "Quincy" after walking out in a huff a few days earlier. It was reported that the star was unhappy with the story material.

At the time of Klugman's sudden departure, 12 of the 22 segments for this season had been filmed.

He Is Glad He Survived!

Lionel Stander says he's proud to be one of the last survivors of the early talkies. Currently seen as Max in ABC-TV's "Hart to Hart" series (seen Tuesdays, 10 p.m.), the beady-eyed actor loves to look back on his career, which spans over half a century. "I've played every kind of role and liked each one," he says. "I go where the action is and can be happy anywhere. As an actor, work makes you happy."

There's not too much of Max on the series. But just the sight and sound of Stander is a definite plus. One can't help but wonder how much of the good life portrayed by Robert Wagner and Stefanie Powers could be digested without an occasional serving of their raspy-voiced chauffeur.

Stander maintains his voice turned to gravel at the age of four, a sound exactly like his father's.

Back in the 1930s, Stander became one of radio's favorite regulars. He worked with Eddie Cantor, Al Jolson, Fanny Brice and Bing Crosby, and that rasp never failed to hold attention.

With the advent of full length motion pictures, the entertainer headed for Hollywood, and it wasn't long before he began to get parts. "I always played the pal of the star," he quips. A few of those stars were George Brent, Jimmy Cooper and Robert Taylor.

Then, in the late 1930s, he began popping off about labor payoffs around the sound stages, and he was promptly put on the studio's blacklist. And his Hollywood career came to an abrupt end when he appeared before the House Un-American Activities Committee in the 1950s.

Down, but certainly not out, Stander picked up and moved to Italy, where he began making Italian films.

"I became an Italian movie star in my 50s," he said. "The rasp works in any language."

Returning to America a few years ago to film "New York, New York," Lionel is now free to resume his career.

Stander, whose Pacific Palisades home is chock-full of art from the actor's numerous trips all over the world, is excited about his role as Max in "Hart to Hart." "It's like making a film," he exclaims. "I don't think there is another show on television with as much style as this one."

LIONEL STANDER stars as Max and Stefanie Powers as Jennifer in "Hart to Hart," ABC's hit series on Tuesdays (10-11 p.m.).

Signed To Play

Emmy Award-winning comedy writer performer Craig T. Nelson has been signed to play an Army captain in "Private Benjamin," now before the cameras.

Nelson recently completed a role in "The Formula." Prior to that, he portrayed the prosecuting attorney in "And Justice For All."

Bufano Signed

Vincent Bufano, most recently a regular on NBC-TV's short-lived "Eischied" series, has been signed for one of the starring roles in a TV movie entitled "The DaVita Family."

Harrowing Ordeal

Human courage and spiritual persistence carry 16 people through one of the most harrowing ordeals in recorded history in "Survive!," the Tuesday Movie of the Week, Jan. 29 (11:30 p.m. on ABC). The story is based on the 1972 Andes plane crash that left the surviving members of a football team isolated for months on a frozen mountain without food.

On Friday, Oct. 13, 1972, a chartered airplane carrying 45 passengers, mostly members of a young rugby football team, crashed in the Andes mountains. The accident occurred because a serious navigational miscalculation sent the Uruguay-to-Chile flight into bad weather over the high, snow-covered peaks. Twenty-five people survived the crash.

After three weeks, the search was abandoned on the assumption that no one could have lived. This became known to the survivors when they found a radio that could receive, but not send, messages.

With all their carefully rationed food gone, a fierce will to live left the remaining passengers with only one desperate means to avoid starvation. With death the only alternative, the survivors made the agonizing decision to violate one of civilization's most ancient taboos in order to live.

Deanna Durbin is singing again but not for the public. The star of yesteryear who thrilled so many with her beautiful voice has been living the life of a recluse on the outskirts of Paris, France, for well over a decade. Now she's performing, but only for family and friends.

And there's a very special reason behind Deanna's music. Her son, Peter, an accomplished pianist, loves to accompany his mother.

'Carrie' Airs On CBS

An unpopular teen-ager uses her supernatural powers to gain a devastating revenge against her cruel classmates, in "Carrie." The hit thriller, starring Sissy Spacek, Piper Laurie and John Travolta, will be rebroadcast as a Special Movie Presentation Tuesday, Jan. 29, at 9 p.m. on CBS.

Spacek and Laurie were nominated for Academy Awards for their performances in the Brian DePalma horror tale, released theatrically in 1976.

Carrie (Miss Spacek) is shy, withdrawn, and naive. At home, her mother (Miss Laurie) runs her life with a fanatically stern hand. At school, her classmates subject her to taunts and cruel jokes. What they don't know is that Carrie has a supernatural power to make objects move through concentration, a telekinetic power she will eventually use against them.

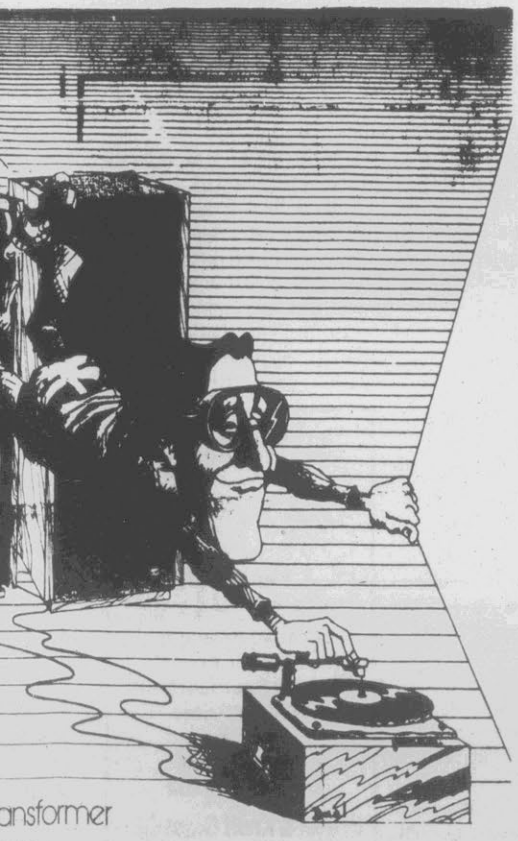

The scene is set when a sympathetic gym teacher (Betty Buckley) catches some of Carrie's tormentors in action and disciplines them. Their ringleader, Chris (Nancy Allen), vows to get even with Carrie for spoiling their fun.

Chris and her boyfriend (Travolta) choose the senior prom as their opportunity. Another student (Miss Irving), feeling sorry for Carrie, has arranged for her boyfriend (Katt) to escort Carrie to the prom dance.

In her excitement, Carrie is radiant. To her amazement, she is named Queen of the Prom. But it's all part of Chris' plot to humiliate Carrie. It is also the last straw, as Carrie angrily unleashes her supernatural fury.

DePalma has used every trick in the book to keep emotional involvement at a near-constant peak, and his efforts were not in vain. Younger viewers will be particularly prone to identify with its heroine's plight, being gleefully led through her gruesome vendetta.

JEFF GOLDBLUM (l) and Ben Vereen star as the most unlikely pair of detectives ever in ABC-TV's new comedy—adventure series, "Tenspeed and Brown Shoe," which premieres in a special two-hour presentation on Sunday, Jan. 27 (8-10 p.m.

'Tenspeed & Brownshoe'

Unless you happen to be a con-artist or a seasoned gangster, you'll probably have no idea what's behind the title of ABC-TV's newest entry into the ratings race. "Tenspeed and Brown Shoe," premiering as a movie special Sunday, Jan. 27 (8 to 10 p.m.).

Ponder no more. Tenspeed refers to a fast-talking character who's just about as speedy as one can be. And Brown Shoe is an old gangster term for stockbrokers and bankers. A few decades ago, hoods referred to brokers and bankers' funds as "brown shoe money."

Now Stephen Cannell, who's produced a long string of hit series, has put these terms together and come up with what should be a "winner" — "Tenspeed and Brown Shoe." Ben Vereen stars as the fast-talking, fast-moving con man, and Jeff Goldblum is the day-dreaming stockbroker. The two form an uneasy alliance as the wildest and funniest pair of private eyes the streets of Los Angeles have ever seen.

E.L. "Tenspeed" Turner is in instant trouble when he impersonates a federal official and succeeds in withdrawing $1 million from the safety deposit box of recently deceased mobster Sam Destefano.

A Middle-Age Passion

In his role in a film titled "Marathon," Bob Newhart speaks with pure Newhart-style humor as he categorizes the middle-age passion for jogging and running.

Bob stars as Walter Burton, a bemused middle-aged husband in the comedy, to be broadcast on The CBS Wednesday Night Movies, Jan. 30 (9 to 11 p.m.). Burton decides to take up running to withstand the "ravages" of encroaching age and winds up chasing after a beautiful woman runner.

"I read somewhere," says Newhart's character, "that running is popular because it creates the illusion that you can outrace the ravages of age. I've been kind of serious about my running for a couple of years now, and I've got to tell you, the ravages are winning."

In addition to humor, "Marathon" offers something for the serious running fraternity, now estimated as high as 20 million throughout the country. Burton and his two best friends participate in a regular 10-kilometer (6.2 miles) race and ultimately run "The Big One," the New York Marathon, that stretches 26 miles and 385 yards.

To make the running sequences as accurate as possible, the film's producers hired a former 1500-meter world record holder and running coach, Lazlo Tabori, to oversee the action.

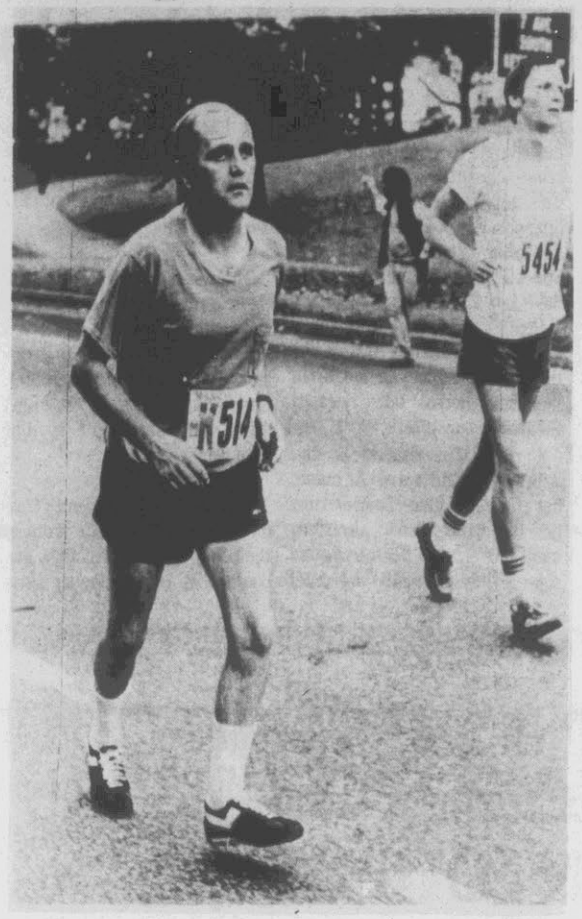

Newhart fans who remember him as the sedentary psychologist on "The Bob Newhart Show," will recall that the soft-spoken humorist prefers inactivity to strenuous activity, every time.

However, after agreeing to star in "Marathon," Newhart suddenly found that his wife, Ginnie, along with longtime friend and manager, Arthur Price, and his producer, Linda Otto were urging him to take up the sport to prepare for his role.

Newhart, whose athletic endeavors run to playing golf in an electric cart, decided to give it a try. His first effort was a splendid run lasting two minutes, "before I pooped out," he noted. "Gradually, I got up to a third of a mile. I'm supposed to be a dedicated runner in the film and I wanted to look right."

His conditioning for the film came principally through an exerciser given to him by Price. "It's kind of a computerized bike," Newhart says. "You program it with your age, weight and sex, according to your level of fitness. Then you start pumping. The darn thing tells you your physiological age, indicates how many calories you're burning up and monitors your pulse rate."

Newhart didn't mind the short runs in the film. "But a mile was about it for distance," he concluded.

BOB NEWHART (r) stars as a happily married accountant who takes up running and winds up chasing a beautiful young woman, in "Marathon," on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," Jan. 30 (9-11 p.m.).

Enjoys Traveling

"When I started on 'Real People,' I had just graduated from high school and had not done any travelling at all," says Byron Allen, the 18-year-old comedian who's one of the show's co-host. "I remember my first assignment was to go to Cincinnati for a convention of roller coaster people. I hadn't realized how big the country really was. I loved it!

"Superficially," says Byron, "most areas are different. But when you spend time someplace, you find out that the people are the same.

"You've read what's out there. And yet it's strange to really see all the different places under one roof, so to speak."

Since joining "Real People," Allen has covered such subjects as witches in Salem, Mass., a wax museum in Los Angeles, and a knife catcher in San Diego. Then there was a gum wall in Northern California; a 10-year-old disk jockey in Ohio, the Venice, Calif., police department; a cheerleader's school in Ohio; dancing sisters in Fresno, Calif., star graves in Whittier, Calif., and hot skating in Playa Del Rey, Calif. Soon Byron heads for New York, Utah and Texas, where he'll do more filming.

THE REAL Pappy Boyington (l) makes a cameo appearance as a general on "Black Sheep Squadron" the CBS Late Movie, Thursday, Jan. 31 at 12 a.m.

The 'Real' Pappy!

The real Pappy Boyington guest stars as General Kenlay in "The Fastest Gun" episode of "Black Sheep Squadron," rebroadcast as the CBS Late Movie Thursday, Jan. 31 (1 a.m.).

Boyington, the air hero whose World War II exploits are dramatized in the series, figures he was born a few hundred years too late. "When I was a boy," Pappy recalls, "I wanted to be a pirate. But it wasn't easy to be a pirate where Boyington grew up in Idaho. So he became an artist instead. That led to majoring in architectural drawing in college. He later switched to the hopefully more lucrative area of aeronautical engineering, and received a degree in the subject in 1936, when jobs were scarce. Before the year ended, Gregory Boyington had become a restless young lieutenant getting flight training at the Pensacola (Fla.) Naval Air Station.

Few Broken Dreams

Bob Hope had come to see his friend Pearl Bailey at the old New York Paramount on Broadway when he first heard Anthony Benedetto sing. Impressed by the young man's style and chemistry with the audience, Hope announced: "He doesn't know it yet, but I'm taking him along with me on a tour of the United States. He doesn't know this yet, either, but from now on his name is going to be Tony Bennett."

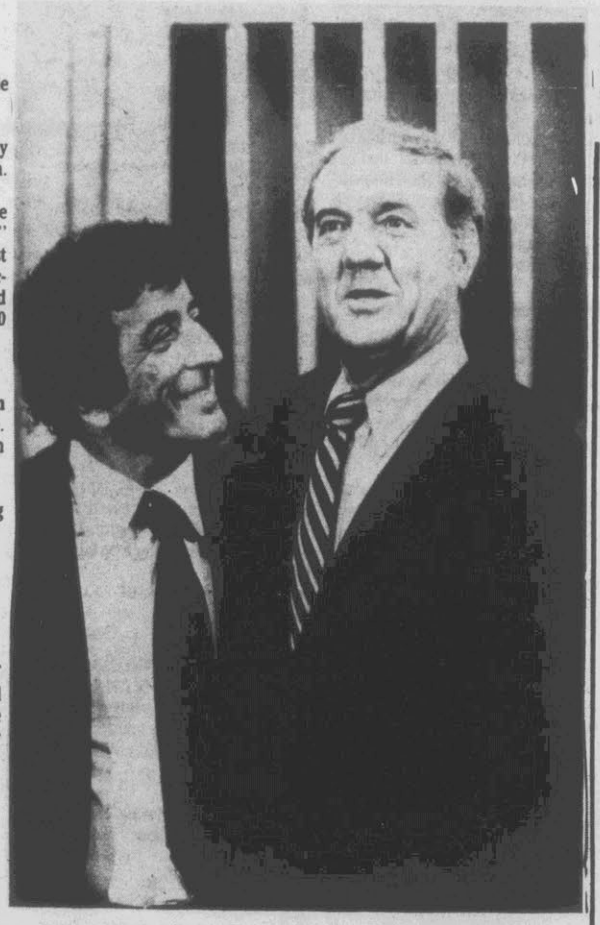

Tony Bennett, formerly Antonio Dominic Benedetto, guest-stars — as himself — in "The Working Girl," a two-part episode of "Skag," beginning Thursday, Jan. 31 (10 to 11 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

Bennett, whose hit single introduced millions to "The Boulevard of Broken Dreams," has had very few of his own dreams broken along the way.

Pearl Bailey first hired him for a nightclub act in Greenwich Village, and Bob Hope introduced him to fame. Mitch Miller gave him a recording contract; then "I Left My Heart in San Francisco" got him a key to that city, and a lifetime pass for the Golden Gate Bridge.

Bennett, a first generation American born in Astoria, New York, laughs at the idea that his Italian ancestry is part of the reason he's such a fine singer.

"It's really a myth," he says. "People imagine that every Italian sings, but that's like saying all English are cool. Some Italians seem to have a great appreciation for the arts, but not all. I know quite a few Italians who can't sing a note."

TONY BENNETT makes a rare dramatic appearance in "The Working Girl," and Skag (Karl Malden, r) is thrilled to meet the singing star in a special, two-part episode of "Skag," NBC-TV's topical family drama series, Thursdays, Jan. 31 and Feb. 7 (10-11 p.m. both nights).

SPOTLIGHT

Wanted Acting Career

When Shelley Hack was asked how she reacted to being selected Kate Jackson's replacement on "Charlie's Angels," she replied, "I just sat there with a great big smile on my face!"

It's been almost a year since that memorable day, and Shelley's still beaming. Although the comely blonde had been a successful model for almost a decade, what she'd really wanted for a long time was an acting career. Prior to joining the hit ABC series, that urge had propelled her into a small part in "Annie Hall," followed by larger roles in "If Ever I See You Again" and in a TV movie titled "Death Car on the Freeway."

When 'Angels' producers, Aaron Spelling and Leonard Goldberg launched a nationwide search to find an actress to join Jaclyn Smith and Cheryl Ladd, Shelley was one of the more than 150 'hopefuls' who turned up for the audition. Now she's effectively playing Tiffany Welles, the daughter of a Connecticut police chief who's an old friend of the girls' employer, the unseen Charlie.

"I'm happy to be here," she says. "I go to work every day, and nobody treats me any differently.

SHELLEY HACK

There are a lot of actresses who don't work regularly. It's a great chance and a good show."

When Shelley was 14 years old, and living with her family in Greenwich, Conn., she was discovered by a persistent publisher and his "you could be a model" pitch. But it turned out to be considerably more than just a 'pitch.' Within a matter of a few months, she was on the cover of Glamour Magazine. Then, in quick order, the nation was seeing her on other publications — "Seventeen," "Vogue," "Harper's Bazaar" and "McCall's," to name a few.

"I come from a large family, I'm the oldest, and I was always encouraged to try things," Shelley explains. "What you learn when you become self-employed at an early age is that you have only yourself to depend on. And you have to teach yourself to be strong. That's why I've always loved traveling by myself."

Now she's tied to the grind of a weekly series, and there's little time for traveling. But she does spend what free time she has on her farm in upstate New York, where she raises flowers and vegetables.

'Anything Is Possible'

"In magic, anything is possible!" exclaims Siegfried, a master illusionist. And he's going to prove this on "Siegfried and Roy, Superstars of Magic," Friday, Feb. 1 (10 to 11 p.m.).

The German-born pair, who've won numerous show business awards as master magicians, have astonished audiences with their feats of legerdemain, including such tricks as making wild animals — elephants, tigers, leopards and other cats — vanish.

Joining them on the show are Eddie Albert, Loni Anderson and singer-dancer Lola Falana. One of the special's highlights comes when Siegfried turns Lola into a snarling, white tiger — in mid-air — surrounded by the audience.

"I had been interested in magic since I was a little boy," says Siegfried, who's lost none of his German accent during his years in the U.S. "And, 18 years ago, on this huge ocean liner, I was doing a little magic act — you know, making rabbits and birds disappear.

ANTHONY MICHAEL HALL (c) may be in very dangerous company indeed when he joins a maddened old treasure hunter (Roberts Blossom, l) and a silently menacing ex-slave (Geoffrey Holder) in a bizarre search for Captain Kidd's treasure off the coast of South Carolina in "The Gold Bud," a special two-part presentation on the "ABC Weekend Specials" series Saturdays, Feb. 2 and Feb. 9 (both times 12 noon-12:30 p.m.).

Poe's 'Gold Bug' Airs

A boy with a thirst for adventure joins a giant ex-slave and a maddened old treasure hunter in a search for Captain Kidd's buried gold in 1866 in "The Gold Bug". The two-part story will be presented on the "ABC Weekend Specials" series, beginning Saturday Feb. 2, (12 to 12:30 p.m.).

Anthony Michael Hall is starred as the boy whose adventure begins with an innocent visit to Sullivan's Island, a deserted wilderness off the coast of South Carolina. It isn't deserted. Along with the butterflies he has come to collect, he discovers an ominously silent giant named Jupiter, played by Geoffrey Holder (known to TV audiences as the lyrical islander in the "uncola" commercials).

Jupiter drags him off to meet LeGrand, a wild-eyed man in tattered clothes (played by Roberts Blossom), who looks like a beachcomber — but is much more than that.

The boy is warned to stay away from the island, but his curiosity is too great, and soon he is drawn into LeGrand's master plan, helping to translate the code in an ancient note that holds the directions to a fortune in pirate gold buried by Captain Kidd on the island.

The gold is there for the three to take — if they can survive the quicksand, and the storm, and Captain Kidd's awful curse — and each other.

This Edgar Allan Poe classic became a classic in the first place because it was a terrifically exciting story. With such an exceptional cast it should keep the young viewers holding their breath and maybe shouting an occasional warning to the boy as he tries to keep up with his menacing 'partners.'

Birney To Star

Meredith Baxter Birney has been signed to a major role in "Beulah Land," a six-hour miniseries scheduled to air on NBC-TV later this year.

She'll be starring as Loretta, a flirtatious southern belle. Ten-year-old Tina Payne will portray the same character at the age of 12.

"Beulah Land," reportedly the most expensive miniseries ever licensed by the network, is now being filmed in Natchez, Miss.

Lawrence In Film

Steve Lawrence has joined the cast of "The Blues Brothers," a musical comedy currently being filmed in Los Angeles.

Pike's Peek

BY CHARLIE PIKE

HOLLYWOOD — The picture surrounding the premature end to NBC's "THE ROCKFORD FILES" starring JAMES GARNER remains a little out of focus. Specifically, there are some behind the scenes who feel that Garner will never again star in a series for the web. And, while the actor has been seriously ill, the ailment gave him the opportunity to walk away from the series as a rebuff to some of the negotiations he was making with the network. Regardless, it's unheard of to simply stop production on a show in January instead of writing around the star for a few episodes.

JOHN McCOOK, who portrays Lance Prentiss on daytime's "THE YOUNG & THE RESTLESS," is joining the ranks of those who are leaving the popular series. BRENDA DICKSON (Jill) has left, and a search is underway to re-cast the role, and DAVID HASSELHOFF (Snapper) will depart in April.

On another daytime front, WES KENNEY, who served as the on-set executive producer of "DAYS OF OUR LIVES" every year the show's been on the air except for one, has been fired. Additionally, it's reported that head writer ELIZABETH HARROWER, who also happens to be the mother of SUSAN SEAFORTH HAYES, one of the show's biggest stars, will be leaving the series as well.

FARRAH FAWCETT may be capturing a lot of headlines as a result of her romance with RYAN O'NEAL. But, if the truth were known, those headlines would also be mentioning the fact that Farrah was in the company of a different man when she made a recent trip to Houston, Texas. Specifically, it was DAN PASTORINI, quarterback for the professional football Oilers!

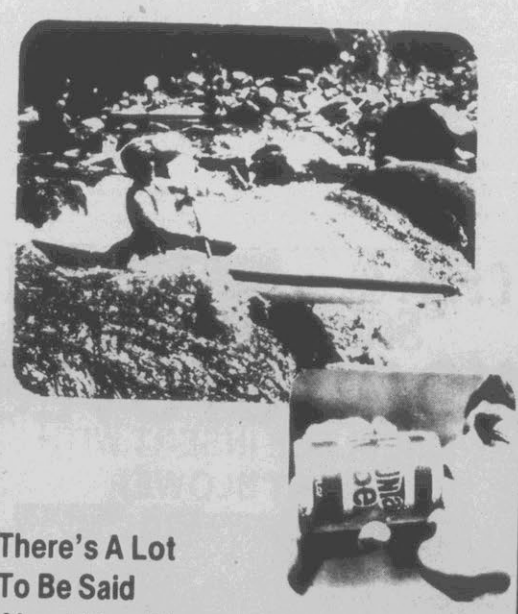

HUGH HEFNER may not know it yet, but there's a growing number of Hollywood's biggest names who are rallying around SUZANNE SOMERS in condemning Hefner's Playboy Magazine for publishing nine-year-old nude 'test' photos of the "THREE'S COMPANY" star. In a word, the opinion about the use of the pictures is "tacky."

One of the latest marital breaks ups in Hollywood involves CHRIS ROBINSON, who portrays Rick Webber on daytime's "GENERAL HOSPITAL." He and his wife, SANDY, have split and seemingly will be getting a divorce as well.

On the brighter side, DIANA CANOVA of "SOAP" and STEVE LANDESBERG of "BARNEY MILLER" will be tying the knot this spring.

Twins Are Ready

It's nice to have a solid combination for an Olympic event like 'combined skiing.' But it's even more pleasant when you consider that the combination we're talking about belongs to the American team.

Identical twins Steve and Phil Mahre are two of the most promising hopes for the United States Olympic ski team. NBC will present a preview of the entire skiing scene on "Olympic Dairy: Combined Jump Skiing" on Saturday, Feb. 2 (2 p.m,).

As children, the Mahres had no problems finding somewhere to practice. Not 20 yards from their front door in White Pass, Wisconsin, are the peaks of the Cascade Mountains.

When Phil, the oldest by four minutes, decided to test the challenging Cascade peaks, he enticed brother Steve to see if he could do better. Steve admits "I've been trying to catch him ever since."

But that was when the boys were only 13. Now they are 23 years old and ready for the Olympics.

The spirit of competition within the Mahre family has spurred each of the twins to excellence both admit might not have been possible if they weren't both around.

"My best coach is still Steve," admits Phil. "In fact, we've been coaching each other for years."

"Phil wouldn't be where he is without me," Steve jokingly adds, "and I give him half of the credit for where I am now."

ROGER STAUBACH (12), who had his best season ever in 1979, will quarterback the NFC when they challenge the AFC in the annual NFL Pro Bowl. Pat Donnovan (67), Roger's protector at Dallas, will also be protecting him in the Pro Bowl. Coverage will be Sunday, Jan. 27 starting at 4 p.m. on ABC.

Still A Real Competitor

Roger Staubach, the quarterback of the Dallas Cowboys, is having fun these days. Not that he didn't enjoy the rigorous battles waged in the competitive NFC East before the last few seasons.

But the 38-year-old veteran who has guided Dallas to eight NFC East titles and in three Super Bowls has lost some of the dead seriousness that once made an interview with him as exciting as watching goldfish swim.

A lot of that may have to do with the tremendous support he's been getting from his talented teammates. In any case, the former Naval Academy great enjoyed his finest season ever in 1979 and will conclude the long season in the annual NFL Pro Bowl, Sunday, Jan. 27 (4 p.m. on ABC-TV).

Staubach's funtime in the league can be traced directly to four seasons ago. That's when Dallas coach Tom Landry, long noted for his innovative approach to the game, decided to use the old shotgun formation to give his quarterback a better look at defensive patterns.

Roger responded by passing for better than 1,500 yards in 1975, and he has been steadily getting better ever since.

"A lot of people said I couldn't read defenses very well, so I studied different formations during the off-season," Staubach noted when describing the 1975 campaign. "Right away, I noticed the shotgun gave me more alternatives. I could dump off a pass to one of my backs or find one of my receivers breaking open with a different pass route, and if I really got into trouble, the shotgun could open up huge holes for me to run through."

Staubach took advantage of all those options to lead his team to their most successful five years in their illustrious history. An opposing team never felt safe with any sort of lead as long as Staubach was given any more chances.

"I remember how our defense would get nervous every time we played against Dallas," recalls former Viking quarterback Fran Tarkenton. "They knew he might have them chasing him all over the field or let loose with a long bomb that could break our backs."

Wolfpack Flowing

Basketball is a game of ebb and flow, but right now the N.C. State Wolfpack are flowing like rich cream. And their rich cup of coffee is Clyde "The Glide" Austin, a senior who has to be considered one of the premier point guards in the nation.

The surprising Wolfpack, who are fighting for the ACC championship lead, face another tough conference foe when they challenge the Clemson Tigers, Tuesday, Jan. 29, (9 p.m. on Channels 5, 9 and 17).

Last season, the Wolfpack finished dead last in the ACC with a 2-10 record, but looks can be deceiving. No less than seven of those games were decided by a single basket and four of them went into at least one overtime.

But that's last year. In 1980, N.C. State has found an inside game and may very well challenge for the conference title. The direction of the entire Wolfpack attack is directed by Maestro Austin, who keeps his team moving at an even keel.

"It's my responsibility to get things started," noted the former star at Maggie Walker High School in Richmond. "The timing, the rhythm has to be perfect. I've got to make that first pass a good one. It's just not in my mind to go out and score."

Austin's talents haven't been ignored by the press, but N.C. State coach Norman Sloan feels the improvement of the entire team may give his invaluable 'quarterback' the recognition he deserves.

"Clyde has developed into a classic point guard," said Sloan, who has coached some of the best. "He's very comfortable running our offense. He knows what has to be done and he does it."

They Are The Tops!

One is literally the tallest sports story in the history of the University of Virginia basketball, while the other is among the steadiest guards in the nation.

Despite the differing size and roles Ralph Sampson and Kelvin Ransey play for their teams, they both represent the heart and soul of Cavalier and Buckeye basketball hopes for the 1980 season.

The University of Virginia and Ohio State battle in a key intrasectional game Sunday, Jan. 27 (1 p.m. on NBC-TV). The game will originate from St. John Arena on the campus of Ohio State.

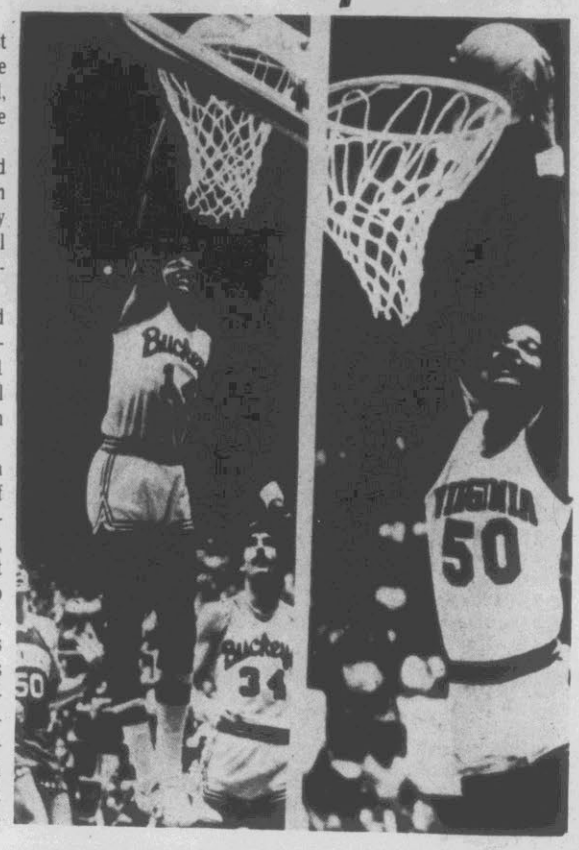

Everyone knows the hoopla surrounding the signing of Sampson to a University of Virginia grant-in-aid. Immediately, Wahoo fans began thinking about a future national championship — maybe as soon as this season.

But the reality of the ACC has set in, and suddenly the Cavaliers and their super center are battling in the middle of the conference pack. One of the problems the rest of the Virginia players have had to do is adjust their 7-4 center clogging up the middle.

Terry Holland has long been a member of the school of patient basketball. But when you have a center who can block everything in sight and start a fast break, then you make certain adjustments. It hasn't been easy for most of the Caveliers.

"We love having Ralph, but we all have to learn how to adjust to a quicker pace," noted Cavalier guard Jeff Lamp, who is leading the team in scoring. "Lee Raker and I have carried the offensive load in the past but we have learned to dish off inside to Ralph when he's open. He's just a tremendous target."

Point guard Jeff Jones, who's made the biggest adjustment of all, feels the addition of Sampson takes some of the pressure off him and the other three starters.

HIGH ELEVATION — Virginia freshman center Ralph Sampson (r) who, at 7-feet, 4-inches tall, is literally the biggest story in college basketball this season, will make his first nationally televised network appearance when he leads the highly regarded Cavaliers into action against the Buckeyes of Ohio State and their brilliant senior guard Kelvin Ransey on NBC-TV, Sunday, Jan. 27 (1-3 p.m.).

Kelp—an ideal fuel without pollution.

FOR DAVID P. CHYNOWETH, assistant director, Bioconversion Research Institute of Gas Technology

What are the benefits of using seaweed for heating purposes? — N.S., White Plains, N.Y.

● Kelp, or seaweed, using solar energy, grows naturally along the west coast of the United States. Under planned cultivation in the ocean, kelp has the potential of providing a perpetual, virtually unlimited source of biomass for the production of nonpolluting gaseous fuel (SNG or Substitute Natural Gas). Kelp shares a further advantage with other forms of biomass. Many people are concerned abut a possible change in temperature occurring throughout the earth's biosphere, caused by the potential increasing concentrations of carbon dioxide resulting from the combustion of fossil fuels. Methane that is produced from biomass would avoid this problem.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Did Sara Stimson, the little girl making her movie debut in Little Miss Marker, find some scenes hard to master? — O.L., Green Bay, Wis.

● The one thing that comes naturally to 7-year-olds is crying. "Sara was completely unable to weep," said her mom, Dana Floyd. "At home she bursts into tears at the drop of a hat if things don't go her way. She bawls at the slightest provocation, but on the set the best she could do was look very sad." Dana, on the set everyday, said she did not try to persuade Sara to cry. And that's why there are no detailed closeups of Sara crying. The crying sounds audiences will hear are sounds that have been dubbed in. Incidentally, when Sara saw the movie (which opens in March) for the first time she was unimpressed. To be precise, she was bored. When she was asked how she liked herself, she said, "I looked dumb." That was it.

For little Miss Sara—no bawl game.

FOR ANNE MURRAY, recording star

Do you get a let-down feeling if you have a concert in a small town on the road, after all your big-time engagements? — T.H., Athens, Ohio

● No, because, to tell you the truth, I'd rather sing for a hundred in Yellowknife than for thousands in big cities. The audiences off the beaten track seem to be much more appreciative: I find it so easy to relate in such an environment. I always take an almanac with me when I travel because I want to become familiar with the places I'll visit.

FOR JULIUS BARNATHAN, president of Broadcast Operations and Engineering, ABC-TV

What's your biggest concern in putting on the Winter Olympics at Lake Placid next month? — N.W., Anchorage, Alaska

● How to cope with the bitter cold. In that area, temperatures can plummet to 40 and 60 degrees below. While you're all watching the games on TV, we'll be trying to avoid frozen toes and frostbitten fingers and attempting to protect our equipment, too.

FOR SENATOR ALAN CRANSTON (D.-Calif.)

You're pegged as a "liberal Senator." Just what, in a few understandable words, does "liberal" mean? — Woody Mark, Carmel, Calif.

● I'm not sure, since people have taken "liberal" to mean different things at different times. I generally try to stay away from political labels; they stereotype thinking and tend to be misleading. But I suppose I'm a "liberal" in that I'm concerned about the less fortunate and want to help them. Government and individuals can work together.

FOR KATHERINE MacGREGOR, featured in NBC-TV's Little House on the Prairie

Why are you so sure you will never marry again? — T.R., Galveston, Texas

● I don't want to get into that kind of thing again. It's an attachment, and I prefer a free and unemotional life. My first two marriages were disasters. (I was too childish the first time around, even though I was 28, and too easily flattered the second time around. He said I was the most fantastic actress he'd ever seen. Flattery got him everywhere!) So, no more.

FOR JOYCE M. HAWKINS, editor, Oxford Paperback Dictionary

In writing the dictionary, what gave you the biggest problem — and pleasure? — I.N., Van Nuys, Calif.

● Keeping the book within bounds and not running out of space by the time I was halfway through the alphabet. The part of the job that I enjoyed most was writing clear, concise definitions (this is harder than it sounds; try defining a child's balloon, or a Yo-Yo, or time, and you will see what I mean) and giving directions for correct usage.

FOR STACY KEACH, star of The Greatest Battle

Did you moonlight as a policeman during your early years? — G.E., Lake Charles, La.

● No. I worked my way through college as an illustrator for a small newspaper. I had to turn out a cartoon that would point out the low wages of police officers, who had to moonlight at other jobs to earn a decent salary. I showed a cop baby-sitting to supplement his income. My cartoon caused a sensation but not the way we planned. About half-a-dozen parents phoned police headquarters that night looking for baby sitters.

PRO AND CON

Should There Be Severe Penalties for Dumping Chemical Wastes?

PRO Barbara Blum, Deputy Administrator, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency

Yes. The human suffering and property damage that can be caused by irresponsible chemical dumping have been tragically demonstrated in the Love Canal nightmare at Niagara Falls, N.Y. There, people experienced a high rate of illness, and whole blocks of homes had to be evacuated because of chemical dumping. Catastrophic consequences such as these call for harsh remedies. Now, penalites of thousands of dollars per day can be levied against illegal dumpers under limited circumstances. However, the E.P.A. supports proposed changes to the Federal Criminal Code that would allow the imposition of jail sentences and other fines against a broader range of unlawful dumping activities.

CON Marvin H. Kosters, director, Government Regulation Studies, American Enterprise Institute

No. Since chemical wastes are an inevitable by-product of many activities and their potential harm varies enormously, risks that they pose should be weighed against the costs of reducing or containing them. Indiscriminate imposition of severe penalties would stop all production of some valuable products, put firms out of business, destroy workers' jobs and unnecessarily raise costs to consumers. Instead of punitive imposition of penalties after dumping has already occurred, we need constructive arrangements to induce reduction or neutralization of harmful chemical wastes, where this is feasible, and safe disposal or containment, where it is not — arrangements not unlike those for conventional wastes.

THIS AMAZING NEW BEERMAKING KIT LETS YOU MAKE HUNDREDS OF GALLONS OF SUPER DELICIOUS BEER . . . FOR JUST PENNIES A BOTTLE.

An amazing new breakthrough in home beer making has been developed in England. Now it's available here in America.

This easy-to-use kit allows you to make hundreds of gallons of beer for just pennies a bottle. What's more the beer tastes BETTER than most commercial beers. And you can brew this delicious beer in your own kitchen IN JUST 27 MINUTES. It's as easy as baking a pie or cake.

Let me repeat—by using our special imported German hops, and our new 7 gallon anaerobic fermenter your homemade beer will actually taste BETTER THAN MOST COMMERCIAL BRANDS. WE GUARANTEE IT. Compare it to any of the famous imported beers costing $15.00 to $20.00 per case. You'll be amazed. The taste is superb . . . clear . . . full bodied . . . with a thick creamy head. So good you won't believe you made it yourself!

Following is an interview with Tom Lee, Vice President of Bierhaus International.

QUESTION: HOW CAN ANYONE MAKE BEER AT HOME AS GOOD AS COMMERCIAL BEER?

ANSWER: That's like asking how Grandma can make cookies as good as the cellophane wrapped kind you buy in the supermarket. As you know, homemade products are usually BETTER than their commercial counterparts. Take pie, spaghetti sauce, cake, fried chicken. . . . almost anything. If it's homemade it's usually better. The fact is, most Americans have never tasted really good beer. Ask any G.I. who was stationed in Germany. The Germans brew a "homemade-style" beer in local breweries and NEVER add artifical additives like some U.S. breweries. It has more body, flavor and head than almost any American brand. Yet it's light without being watery or sweet like some commercial brands.

QUESTION: YES, BUT MANY OF US HAVE TASTED OLD FASHIONED "HOME BREW" AND IT WAS OFTEN YEASTY AND FLAT.

ANSWER: The homemade beer I'm speaking of is as different from "home brew" as ducks are from bananas. Old fashioned "home brew" was made from granulated sugar plus grocery store yeast. And it was usually made in a crock or metal pot. This produced a sour bacteria ladden concoction that was barely drinkable.

The new Bierhaus beermaking kit is entirely different. It contains genuine Hallertauer hops—the same kind used in making the finest German, Dutch and Danish beers. The yeast culture in our kit is the same one used in many premium beers of the U.S. and Denmark. We also include pure dextrose—not granulated sugar. But most importantly the kit includes a self-sealing anaerobic fermenter made of F.D.A. food grade polyethylene. The beer ferments in a totally bacteria free environment—just like they use in many commercial breweries. The CO_2 generated during fermentation bubbles out through a small water filled air lock to produce the clearest light or amber lager you can find anywhere.

QUESTION: BUT ISN'T MAKING BEER AT HOME A COMPLICATED PROCEDURE?

ANSWER: Not at all. Here's all you do—

ONE: Boil a gallon of water. Add the ingredients and pour the mix into the fermentation tank. Add 3½ gallons of cold water, snap on the lid and let stand at normal room temperature for 7 days (65°-80°F.).

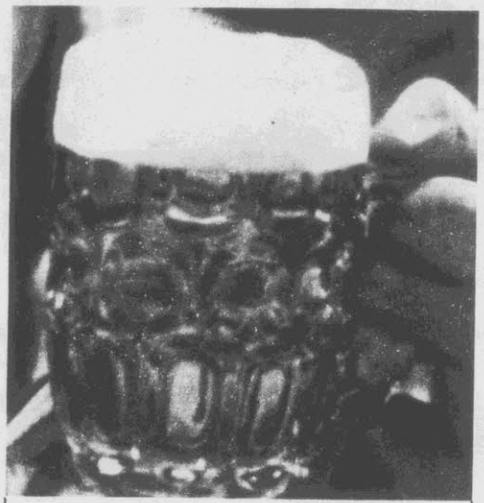

TWO: At the end of seven days, siphon the beer into another vessel and then into pre-rinsed empty beer bottles. The E-Z siphon hose, the fermentation tank, the caps and all of the ingredients are included in the kit. We can supply an inexpensive capper or you may obtain one from any hardware store.

THREE: Let the beer age 2-3 weeks. Chill the bottles, then drink it. For extra delicious flavor, allow the beer to age 5-6 weeks.

QUESTION: CAN I MAKE DIFFERENT KINDS OF BEER?

ANSWER: Certainly. Just vary the ingredients and recipes according to the booklet supplied with each kit. You can make—

- Light Lager—comparable to most American premium beers and some light European lagers.
- Continental Amber Lager—more body with a slightly "hoppier" flavor. Comparable to the original German and Dutch lagers served throughout Europe.
- Bavarian Dark Lager—full bodied yet not bitter. The head is incomparable—thick and creamy often rising an inch over the top of the glass.
- You can also make delicious Ale and Stout.

An unretouched photo of our Bierhaus Light Lager after only two weeks aging . . .

QUESTION: BUT HOW CAN IT BE MADE SO INEXPENSIVELY?

ANSWER: The kit can be used over and over again for years. It's truly a life time investment. All you have to do is re-purchase as many ingredients packs as you wish. Each can of malt makes 50 bottles of beer.

Now consider what you're paying for when you buy commercial beer. The price you have to pay is inflated by a variety of taxes, shipping costs, brewery markup, wholesaler markup and store markup. By eliminating all these outstretched hands you can afford to use superior ingredients and still pay less than half the cost of store bought beer. The one-time cost you pay for the kit is easily made up by what you save on your first two or three brewings. After that you're paying only a few cents a bottle for one of the finest beers in the world—brewed by you. You can ACTUALLY SAVE HUNDREDS OF DOLLARS EACH YEAR.

QUESTION: WHAT ABOUT THE ALCOHOLIC CONTENT OF THE BEER?

ANSWER: You can vary the alcoholic content of this beer to your own taste. You can make it as light or as strong as you wish simply by varying the recipe. Tests conducted by a testing laboratory indicate that our beer contains significantly FEWER CALORIES and FEWER CARBOHYDRATES THAN COMPARABLE COMMERCIALLY MADE BEER—a real bonus for those who are weight conscious.

QUESTION: IS IT LEGAL TO MAKE THIS BEER AT HOME?

ANSWER: Absolutely. By Act of Congress (H.R. 1337) effective February of 1979, any single person 18 years of age or older may produce 100 gallons per year tax free. In a household of two or more persons over 18, the limit goes to 200 gallons per year tax free. NO LICENSE IS REQUIRED.

QUESTION: WHAT GUARANTEE DO I HAVE THAT THE BEER WILL TASTE THAT GOOD?

ANSWER: First of all, we offer a full money back guarantee—but that's not all. WE'LL ALSO SEND YOU $5.00 OVER AND ABOVE THE COST OF YOUR KIT IF YOU DON'T AGREE THE BEER YOU MAKE IS BETTER THAN YOUR FAVORITE COMMERCIAL BEER. We call it THE BIERHAUS BLINDFOLD TASTE TEST.

Here are the rules—

1. Request the kit. If you're concerned about sending a check, just charge it to your Master Charge or VISA.
2. We'll ship your kit immediately by U.P.S. For 24 hour service, call us at 814, 455-4069 (Erie, Pa.).
3. Make one batch of beer.
4. Let it age FOUR weeks.

Triumph for Tar Watchers!

Triumph shakes up the "low tars" with taste, and a lot less tar.

Don't let them fool you any more. Today's low tar with taste is not an 8 mg tar (like Merit) or an 11 (like Vantage) or a 12 (like Marlboro Lights). And it's certainly not a Carlton at 1 (which doesn't even claim to have taste).

It's a 3 mg tar Triumph.* All the words in the world won't tell you how good it tastes. You'll simply have to try it. Taste it. Then ask yourself, isn't it time you came down from yesterday's "low tar" to Triumph – today's low tar.™

Triumph for taste!
Only 3 mg tar.

Of All Brands Sold: Lowest tar: 0.5 mg. "tar," 0.05 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette. Triumph: 3 mg. "tar," 0.4 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette by FTC Method.

The New York Rangers' Spectacular Swedes

Ulf Nilsson and Anders Hedberg are the slick-skating, supersalaried Scandanavians imported to perk up a lackluster franchise. Have they been worth their $2.6 million? The answer so far is a resounding "Ja!"

By Mark Goodman

If Leif Ericsson had sailed into New York harbor and found a cheering populace of eight million, he couldn't have stirred up any more fuss on Manhattan Island than those two Norse wonders, Anders Hedberg and Ulf Nilsson, the pride of the National Hockey League New York Rangers. True, New York sports fans had become accustomed to their desperate franchise owners trying to buy their way to victory (with only George Steinbrenner of the baseball Yankees succeeding). But it was the city's hockey fans who had suffered the longest. After all, the Rangers were the only long-time team in town that had not won a major professional championship since World War II.

Indeed, for several years the Rangers were not even the best hockey team in the area; that honor belonged to the upstart New York Islanders, who ply their trade on the glum reaches of Long Island. That was bitterest gall to Ranger president Sonny Werblin, the latter-day P.T. Barnum, who brought young Joe Namath to New York 14 years ago. This time, Werbling really did it in style. First, he hired coach Fred Shero, two-time Stanley Cup winner, away from the Philadelphia Flyers. Then he persuaded Hedberg and Nilsson to jump from the Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association to the New York Rangers for the cool tune of $2.6 million between them for two years, making them the highest-paid hockey players in history.

It made for quite a show. In the Scandanavian Airlines casement on Fifth Avenue, two jerseys numbered 11 and 15, luminous blue on white, were draped under a sign that read: NEW YORK WELCOMES ULF NILSSON AND ANDERS HEDBERG. Werbling, ever the showman, shelled out $3,000 just to lay down a special coating of ice in Madison Square Garden so that eager photographers could catch, in full battle gear, the wizards who had scored 376 goals between them in four years.

It was pretty heady stuff for a pair of guys from Nynashamn and Ornskoldsvik, but both Nilsson and Hedberg showed a marvelous capacity for keeping their heads squarely on their sturdy shoulders. Things could have been a bit tense in the Ranger locker room. After all, each was making more than twice as much as the previously top-salaried Ranger, Phil Esposito, a rugged NHL veteran with more than 700 career goals to his credit. But it must also be remembered that no professional athlete seriously begrudges another his fancy dollars; from Arnold Palmer in golf, to Namath in football, to Pete Rose in baseball, they only serve to sweeten the pot for the rest of the laboring force. Sure enough, on their first payday, Ranger defenseman Dave Farrish pushed a shopping cart up to Nilsson's locker and said, "You can put yours here."

Besides, both players showed themselves to be shrewd diplomats. They didn't flash their money around. They both bought homes for their families in placid Scarsdale (in Westcheser County, near the Rangers' practice site), and both continued to drive modest maroon Saab Turbos. And while they have always been good pals, they are not inseparable and have always been at pains not to appear so to their teammates. They speak only English unless they are alone together, and make sure they sit with other Rangers on team trips. They also forsook some of their freewheeling ways on the ice for the sake of team play in the Shero system — Ulf as the center who can handle a puck like a yo-yo; Anders as a left-handed right wing with the multiple speeds of a racing bike and the balance of a high-wire rider. And all they did was carry the Rangers into the playoffs, where they defeated the Islanders to get into the Stanley Cup finals. (Without the services of Ulf — broken ankle — they finally lost to the Montreal Canadiens, the seemingly inevitable conquerors of hockey.)

This year, in a lapse of greed remarkable in a modern professional athlete, the Swedes have signed, without any blush of fanfare, three-year, scaled-down contracts with the Rangers. Says Nilsson, 29, the brown-haired one who looks like a refugee from the Archie Comics, "We didn't want to make any major announcement about it because we didn't want to call any attention to ourselves." They had their God's plenty of that last year, when in every NHL city they visited, the newspaper headlines cried, MILLIONAIRE SWEDES IN TOWN. Says Hedberg, 28, the thoughtful college graduate who looks like an extra in an old Tony Curtis Viking movie, "For me, the circumstances this year are completely different from last year. And while I don't think a season can be much more enjoyable than last year, the way it went for the team, sure, it's easier. If you get all that attention by knowing you're as good as they say, that's one thing. People know Guy Lafleur, Marcel Dionne because they've done it in the league for five years, so I imagine the publicity is good for them. But we didn't know; it wasn't the same for us. It was more people wondering what 'these guys' were about. How good were they really?" (Rival N.H.L. players wondered, too, and gave both players a good pushing around on the ice from time to time, trying to test the Swedes' mettle.)

Then Ulf adds, "I'm probably more easygoing than Anders, so all of that never disturbed me the way it did him. This year I'm more relaxed, but all that attention never bothered me a bit."

Of course, as Swedish stars in the predominantly Canadian N.H.L., the two have been in the limelight since they left their respective club teams in Stockholm (they had played together on the Swedish national team) five years ago. Neither regrets the moves they've made, either away from Sweden or into New York. They've been too busy with hockey and family life to do much worrying over the transplanting of roots. Last March, Barbro Nilsson had her third child, a boy, while Gun-Marie Hedberg gave birth to her first child, also a boy. The foursome took to Broadway quickly; their consensual favorite show was, of all things, the Fats Waller revue, Ain't Misbehavin'. Ulf has become a big football fan and likes Animal House better than Ingmar Bergman. Unfortunately, he still hasn't been able to find marinated salmon in New York.

Anders, for his part, took to New York a little more slowly, but he says he long ago got over any strain of homesickness. The one thing he does miss is his abiding love — cross-country skiing, but he'll probably have to wait until retirement to explore the New England snowways.

In comparing the two countries, Ulf says, "I think they're pretty similar, except that people are very warm over here [no pun intended]. I think it's easier to live here because the attitude is more positive. People in Sweden worry too much."

And when they're together, ULf 'n' Anders, that famous Swedish comedy team, can do a nice turn on popular American misconceptions about their native land.

"Swedish girls," says Ulf.

"Swedish porno movies," says Anders.

"That are made in Poland somewhere," says Ulf.

"Or California."

"Of course, all Swedish hockey players are chicken, aren't they?" asks Ulf.

"Yes, and it's a socialist state," says Anders, the new millionaire.

"And cold, so cold that the people all have frostbite."

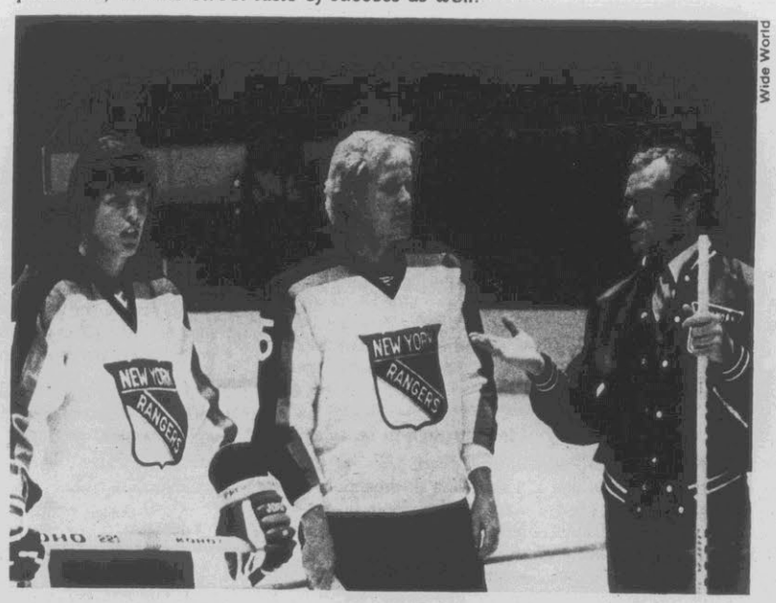

"And eat only reindeer meat."

Later, Anders grows reflective as he discusses the ice-breaking that the Swedes have accomplished.

"It's always a problem when you let in anyone strange," he says. "When something is established, you don't want to change it because there's no good reason to change it. All those guys grew up in the same system. What if the Russians came here with a football team that could beat the Dallas Cowboys? Think of the shock and reaction among American players and public."

He takes a sip of milk and continues, "There's the famous case here of Jackie Robinson. Maybe we were a little bit like that when we first went to Canada. Through the press the guys would say, 'Don't come and take our jobs.' But I think it enriches a sport for people all over the world to play it. I like to think we brought something new to the game." FW

From left, Nilsson, Hedberg and Ranger Coach Fred Shero: A smorgasbord of problems, but the sweet taste of success as well.

Too Busy Earning a Living To Make Any Money?

You think you've got problems?

Well, I remember when a bank turned me down for a $200 loan. Now I lend money to the bank — Certificates of Deposit at $100,000 a crack.

I remember the day a car dealer got a little nervous because I was a couple of months behind in my payments — and repossessed my car. Now I own a Rolls Royce. I paid $43,000 for it — cash.

I remember the day my wife phoned me, crying, because the landlord had shown up at the house, demanding his rent — and we didn't have the money to pay it.

Now we own five homes. Two are on the oceanfront in California (I use one as my office). One is a lakefront "cabin" in Washington, (that's where we spend the whole summer — loafing, fishing, swimming, and sailing.) One is a condominium on a sunny beach in Mexico. And one is snuggled right on the best beach of the best island in Hawaii — Maui.

Right now I could sell all this property, pay off the mortgages, — and — without touching any of my other investments — walk away with over $750,000 in cash. But I don't want to sell, because I don't think of my homes as "investments." I've got other real estate — and stocks, bonds, and cash in the bank — for that.

I remember when I lost my job. Because I was head over heels in debt, my lawyer told me the only thing I could do was declare bankruptcy. He was wrong. I paid off every dime.

Now, I have a million dollar line of credit; but I still don't have a job. Instead, I get up every weekday morning and decide whether I want to go to work or not. Sometimes I do — for 5 or 6 hours. But about half the time, I decide to read, go for a walk, sail my boat, swim, or ride my bike.

I know what it's like to be broke. And I know what it's like to have everything you want. And I know that you — like me — can decide which one it's going to be. It's really as easy as that. That's why I call it "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches."

So I'm going to ask you to send me something I don't need: money. Ten dollars to be exact. Why? Because I want you to pay attention. And I figure that if you've got $10 invested, you'll look over what I send you and decide whether to send it back...or keep it. And I don't want you to keep it unless you agree that it's worth at least a hundred times what you invested.

Is the material "worth" $10? No — if you think of it as paper and ink. But that's not what I'm selling. What I am selling is information. More information than I give when I'm paid $1000 as a guest speaker. More information than I give in a one-hour consultation for $300.

But you're really not risking anything. Because I won't cash your check or money order for 31 days after I've sent you my material. That's the deal. Return it in 31 days — and I'll send back your check or money order — uncashed.

How do you know I'll do it? Well, if you really want to be on the safe side, post-date your check for a month from today — plus 2 additional weeks. That'll give you plenty of time to receive it, look it over, try it out.

I know what you're thinking: "He got rich telling people how to get rich." The truth is — and this is very important — the year before I shared "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches," my net income was $216,646. And what I'll send you tells just how I made that kind of money...working a few hours a day...about 8 months out of the year.

It doesn't require "education." I'm a high school graduate.

It doesn't require "capital." Remember I was up to my neck in debt when I started.

It doesn't require "luck." I've had more than my share. But I'm not promising you that you'll make as much money as I have. And you may do better. I personally know one man who used these principles, worked hard, and made 11 million dollars in 8 years. But money isn't everything.

It doesn't require "talent." Just enough brains to know what to look for. And I'll tell you that.

It doesn't require "youth." One woman I worked with is over 70. She's travelled the world over, making all the money she needs, doing only what I taught her.

It doesn't require "experience." A widow in Chicago has been averaging $25,000 a year for the past 5 years, using my methods.

What does it require? Belief. Enough to take a chance. Enough to absorb what I'll send you. Enough to put the principles into action. If you do just that — nothing more, nothing less — the results will be hard to believe. Remember — I guarantee it.

You don't have to give up your job. But you may soon be making so much money that you'll be able to. Once again — I guarantee it.

I know you're skeptical. Well, here are some comments from other people. (Initials have been used to protect the writer's privacy. The originals are in my files.) I'm sure that, like you, these people didn't believe me either when they clipped the coupon. Guess they figured that, since I wasn't going to deposit their check for at least 31 days, they had nothing to lose.

They were right.

And here's what they gained:

'Rich beyond my expectations'

"At the time I read it I was feeling guilty for spending the $10...I was broke, my husband was in prison, my car was broken down, I had $7 to my name, and we were $25,000 in debt — possibly more...It is now 18 months later. I am not a millionaire yet, but I am rich beyond my expectations. I have my own little business...and have received offers beyond my wildest dreams — including national and international distribution."

B.A.

Made enough to retire at 41

"Now, thanks to you and the 'Lazy Man's' program, I have made enough money (at age 41) to retire in style. Let me assure you that I have not 'come into' any money by inheritance or marriage or by any other means except through the practicing of your program..."

R.A., Huntington Beach, Calif.

'Thought it was just another ad'

"I want you to know just how great I think it is. My only regret is that I held off ordering it so long because I thought it was just another ad."

W.B., Hamilton Ontario, Canada

'I can't handle all the business'

"Last May...I was fired from my $60,000 a year job as president because business was so bad...I then started my own firm despite everyone's assertion that I was 'nuts.' Results:

1. Smallest month - $ 7,000 net!
2. Largest month - $31,000 net!
3. Average month - $19,000 net!

But where does the lazy come in? I can't handle all the business!"

R.B., Dallas, Texas

$260,000 in eleven months

"Two years ago, I mailed you ten dollars in sheer desperation for a better life...One year ago, just out of the blue sky, a man called and offered me a partnership...I grossed over $260,000 cash business in eleven months. You are a God sent miracle to me."

B.F., Pascagoula, Miss.

Made $16,901.92 first time out

"The third day I applied myself totally to what you had shown me. I made $16,901.92. That's great results for my first time out."

J.J.M., Watertown, N.Y.

Banking deposits from zero to thousands

"Since December, until the present time, I have built my business from zero up to where some days, my banking deposits are in excess of the thousands."

D.J.A., Westminister, Calif.

'Getting everything we want'

"We can't keep this to ourselves anymore — you were right! We're on the road to getting all (everything) we want in this world! We sold the $17,000 home we had and got another one...It's worth $65,000. We have a paid-for Ford pick-up, paid-for 17 ft. boat, we bought a Cadillac, we have a paid-for Grand Prix..."

Mr. & Mrs. M.L.P. Del Rio, Texas

'I'm a half-millionaire'

"Thanks to your method, I'm a half-millionaire...would you believe last year at this time I was a slave working for peanuts?"

G.C., Toronto, Canada

$7,000 in five days

"Last Monday I used what I learned on page 83 to make $7,000. It took me all week to do it, but that's not bad for five day's work."

M.D., Topeka, Kansas

What I'm saying is probably contrary to what you've heard from your friends, your family, your teachers, and maybe everyone else you know.

I can only ask you one question.

How many of them are millionaires?

So it's up to you.

A month from today, you can be nothing more than 30 days older — or you can be on your way to getting rich. You decide.

The wisest man I ever knew told me something I never forgot: "Most people are too busy earning a living to make any money."

Don't take as long as I did to find out he was right.

I'll prove it to you, if you'll send in the coupon now. I'm not asking you to "believe" me. Just try it. If I'm wrong, all you've lost is a couple of minutes and a postage stamp. But what if I'm right?

Rock's Bonnie Raitt Is Wild About Pop

Joseph Sia

Bonnie's biggest fan is her father, musical-comedy star John Raitt.

By Bruce Pollock

As far as Bonnie Raitt is concerned, her father — musical-comedy star John Raitt — has always been, first and foremost, a humanist. "He didn't fit into the plastic world of Hollywood; the superficial values, the material wealth for the sake of material wealth," she remarks. "He didn't play Las Vegas because he doesn't like the smoke and the drunks and the hecklers. And he doesn't know how to make with the cute talk. He's doing a one-man show, a musical autobiography now, just he and a piano player traveling around the country."

Bonnie, though, has been known to take a drink or two, is adept at cute, if a bit off-color, talk, and has built a career upon a foundation of music as opposite to Broadway as you can get. But in her own way, she shares with her father an enduring integrity that instantly separates her from most of her peers in the rock 'n' roll game. Raised as a Quaker in Beverly Hills, Calif., educated among the radically precocious at prep school and the intellectually affluent at Radcliffe, Bonnie has also always been politically aware. "I remember not participating in air-raid drills when I was a kid because, to me, it seemed like complicity," she says.

Performing in countless benefits over the years, while also building her recording career, she has maintained her ideals, her commitment and her balance.

Since the top of the 70's, when she dropped out of Radcliffe to partake of the acoustic folk and blues scene around Cambridge, Bonnie Raitt has been just about its most vocal and popular exponent. Seven albums have brought her steadily toward visibility in the commercial marketplace — with the seventh, The Glow, moving her closer to the national acclaim she's long deserved.

A little leverage in the business can move her closer toward realizing some of her fondest dreams — which are decidedly not of the commercial marketplace. She'd like to appear in a film with Sippie Wallace, 82, her first mentor in the blues. She'd like to organize folk festivals like those once held in Newport, R.I. And, of course, there's the anti-nuclear group, MUSE. Headed by herself, Carly Simon, John Hall, James Taylor and others, Musicians United for Safe Energy has been Bonnie's almost all-consuming passion since 1976.

Bonnie Raitt is 30 and feeling good. She's been living with the same man for seven years. Marriage and family, though, while not out of the question, are not immediate priorities. Her father, however, is. "My dream is to record him as he should be recorded," she says wistfully. "One time we worked out a version of 'Oklahoma,' with a disco beat. And he sang it completely straight," Bonnie laughs. "Maybe we'll put it out as a single. If Ethel Merman can do a disco album, why not?" FW

Bruce Pollock regularly reports on the music scene for Family Weekly.

Winter Pears: One of the Best Fruits of the Season

By Marilyn Hansen

Versatile winter pears, gold-green Anjou, golden Comice, bronze Bosc and the small, greenish brown Seckel pears are abundant at your local produce markets now and will be through spring. Most often, we must buy the pears firm and underripe. Ripen slowly at room temperature at home. The fruit is ripe when the flesh "gives" slightly when pressed with your finger. Delicious and juicy eaten right out of hand, winter pears are equally as good prepared in desserts and main dishes. For your information: An average sized pear contains about 61 calories; is an excellent source of potassium, a good source of phosphorus and Vitamin A.

SPICY PEAR STUFFING

3 tablespoons butter or margarine
¼ cup chopped fresh onion
½ cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons chopped almonds or walnuts
2 cups chopped pared winter pears or apples
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon dried leaf sage
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon sugar
1 orange, sectioned (save juice)
1 cup toasted bread cubes

1. In medium skillet, melt butter; add onion and celery and cook until tender.
2. Add nuts, apples, salt, sage, cinnamon and sugar. Cook and stir until pears can be pierced with a fork but are not soft, about 5 minutes.
3. Combine orange sections and juice with bread cubes and pear mixture.

Makes enough stuffing for a 3- to 5-lb. chicken

GINGERBREAD WITH HOT CINNAMON PEAR SAUCE

1 package (14 ozs.) gingerbread mix
3 fresh winter pears: Anjou, Bosc
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 or 2 teaspoons lemon juice
⅓ cup coarsely chopped pecans
Whipped cream

1. Prepare and bake gingerbread according to package directions.
2. Meanwhile, core and slice pears.
3. Melt butter in medium skillet; add sugar, cinnamon and lemon juice. Gently stir in pears and nuts. Cook slowly over medium-low heat, stirring until pears are glazed and tender.
4. To serve: Cut gingerbread in squares or wedges while hot; spoon hot pear sauce over each serving and top with a dollop of whipped cream.

Makes 6 servings (about 2 cups sauce)

PEAR-ORANGE SUPPER SALAD

2 fresh winter pears
Lemon juice
Orange Dressing
1 orange, peeled and sectioned
½ cup chopped celery
¼ cup slivered almonds, toasted
Lettuce
Cold sliced chicken, turkey, cooked ham and Swiss cheese

1. Core and slice pears; brush or dip in lemon juice.
2. Prepare Orange Dressing. Toss pears with Orange Dressing and remaining ingredients except lettuce. Serve on lettuce leaves with slices of chicken or turkey, ham and Swiss cheese. Makes 4 to 6 servings

Orange Dressing: Combine ⅓ cup mayonnaise, 1 tablespoon orange juice and ½ teaspoon each sugar and orange peel. Mix well. Makes about ⅓ cup dressing

QUICK SHRIMP-PEAR CURRY

1 tablespoon butter or margarine
½ teaspoon curry powder
2 tablespoons minced onion
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 can(10¾ ozs.) cream of mushroom soup
2 or 3 tablespoons milk
1 can (2 ozs.) mushrooms, drained
4 fresh winter pears
8 ozs. fresh shrimp, cooked, peeled
Lemon juice
Crisp lettuce leaves
Hot, cooked rice
Condiments: raisins, chopped peanuts, diced, seeded tomatoes, shredded coconut, chopped hard-cooked egg, chopped green onion

Coping with Inflation: How to Survive the Hard Times

All across the country, inflation is squeezing family incomes. Here is how the Richard Panicucci family of New Jersey is coping with the problem. The Panicuccis' example — and some tips from economist Ben Stein — might be just what you need to survive these tough times.

By Nancy Josephson

They are typically middle class. He's a college professor; she's a substitute teacher. Between them, they earn about $25,000 a year. They have two children, a house in the suburbs, a Cairn terrier named Sam, a camper and a Jeep.

But, the Panicuccis hardly ever go out for dinner. They shop for clothing in discount stores. They slashed their vacation budget this year to $470, and they wear warm clothing at home so they can keep the heat turned down low.

It's a new way of life for middle-class America — one in which many of us will be learning to make do with less. "We're in a new economic era," says Roger Hickey, associate director of the National Center for Economic Alternatives in Washington, D.C. "For the first time since the Great Depression, income is not keeping up with inflation. In other words, real income is declining, and that's doing severe psychological damage to the American dream."

The problem, of course, is inflation — incessant price increases that are raising daily expenses and pushing millions of American families to their budgetary limits. According to some estimates, the basic necessities — food, housing, health care and energy — may account for as much as 70 percent of a family's income, depending on the size of the family and the city in which it lives. In 1979, energy prices soared about 45.5 percent; the cost of housing jumped roughly 15.9 percent; food prices rose at an annual rate of 9.6 percent; and the cost of medical care was up about 9 percent.

Like many American couples, Richard and Carol Panicucci don't need charts and graphs and the Consumer Price Index to see that the economic slide has affected their lives. For some time now, they have been eliminating luxuries in order to make financial ends meet. "I remember when we used to walk through a store and easily walk out with $25 worth of incidentals — all of which we bought on impulse," says Richard, 36, an associate professor of quantitative analysis at Fairleigh Dickinson University.

"I remember saying, 'Oh Carol, we really do need one of these,' and I'd be referring to something like a hand-held viewer for slides — something I could have done without."

Richard and Carol and their two children, Richard, 10, and Lisa, 6, live in Pine Brook, N.J., a hilly suburban community just 45 minutes from New York City. (They receive FAMILY WEEKLY in the Herald News.) Their house, a modestly furnished eight-room bi-level, set back from the road, was purchased for $32,500 in 1968, two years after Richard and Carol married. Their mortgage payments run $143.90 a month; their property taxes, another $150 monthly.

It would seem as they should be able to live within their budget. But with Richard's income increasing only about 8 percent a year and inflation racing at about 13 percent, the Panicuccis worry that they're losing ground. Their food bills run about $235 monthly, up from last year by about $35 a month. Gasoline for their cars, which ran about $65 to $70 a month last year, now accounts for roughly $120 a month.

About a year ago, Carol and Richard decided that they would have to tighten their belts — for without some serious cutbacks they were in danger of exceeding their budget. "We used to be very extravagant," says Richard. "But we've cut back. We're careful about food. We buy meat only when it's on sale. We learned that you just can't buy everything you want to buy or drive everywhere you want to drive."

"I really think before I buy anything these days," says Carol, 36. "I don't go into big department stores. I shop where the overhead is low and there's no one around to help you — you just find what you want, check it to see that there is no damage and bring it to the cashier. And I don't drive any farther than I have to. I even visit my mother less."

As prices rise, things Richard and Carol once took for granted get careful consideration. "We keep the cost of gas for heating the house down to $44 a month by setting the thermostat at 67 degrees during the day and 63 degrees at night," Richard says. They save another $8 a week on piano instructions for Lisa, by having Richard give her lessons.

And to cut down on the cost of household maintenance, Richard does most of the handy work himself. He built the terrace out back; he has painted, wallpapered and paneled inside.

By far, the biggest blow to their lifestyle came last summer when Richard and Carol slashed their vacation to an 11-day trip in their aging (10 years old) family camper. They spent the time traveling along the Virginia coast and sightseeing in Washington, D.C. The total cost of the vacation: $470.

Five years before, Richard, Carol and the two children piled into the camper, and with $1170, spent 35 days on the road.

The future doesn't look much brighter. By now, most experts agree that the double-digit inflation of the 70's will move into this decade, straining the economy for at least the first half of 1980. They warn, too, that prices of the basic necessities are not likely to drop sharply, even if the rate of inflation slows. "You're going to see much less spending on outright luxuries," says economist Hickey. "People will be keeping their cars a year longer. They'll be wearing last year's winter coats and foregoing new suits because so much of their available income is going for groceries and rent."

Belt-tightening is certainly one way to fight inflation. But according to Ben

Nancy Josephson is a reporter for Women's Wear Daily and a freelance writer.

Music man: Richard Panicucci saves money by giving both son, Richard, and daughter, Lisa, music lessons.

To bring in extra money, Carol is a substitute teacher. Here, she corrects papers with Lisa.

Stein, a Los Angeles-based economist, the Panicuccis — and families like them — can make other changes to get more for their money.

For instance, Stein recommends investing in money market bonds rather than conventional passbook savings accounts that yield about 5-percent interest. "The asset here is short-term debt, and they pay 11 to 13 percent interest," says Stein, co-author of Moneypower: How to Make Inflation Make You Rich. "They are perfectly liquid, and you can write checks on them. Many careful people are using these money market bonds as a way to protect their savings."

Stein also suggests investing in real estate, even on a combined income of $25,000 a year. "If I were Richard Panicucci, I'd go out and buy a little duplex or triplex near my home," Stein says. "I'd buy it with money I borrowed by getting a second mortgage on the house. I would then use the money I got in rents from my tenants to pay off the loan. Richard might even buy a run-down place, fix it up himself and charge more rent.

"He's sitting on a lot of idle cash in the form of equity in his house. He should use some of it. He will find that the real estate he bought will be worth more each year."

For life insurance, Stein recommends buying term insurance rather than a whole-life policy. "Whole-life insurance is up to two or three times as expensive and it's not worthwhile," Stein says. "Even for an older couple I don't think whole life is good. With whole life, you're allowing the insurance company to invest your money for you. And the rate of income they will give you is probably less than you'll ever get in a savings account. Term

On Your Income: Could You Live Better Elsewhere in the United States?

The chart below is geared for a family of four with an annual income of $18,000. It shows roughly what it would cost for them to live in various FAMILY WEEKLY areas around the country. The costs are given for: a) a 1,200-square-foot, six-room house, with one bath and an attached one-car garage; b) home insurance at 85 percent of home market value; c) real-estate taxes; d) utilities: energy consumption for heating, cooking, lighting and appliances; e) the annual costs in each U.S. area for ownership, operating expenses and car insurance for a 1976 Chevrolet Nova driven 16,000 miles annually; f) Federal, state and city income taxes and appropriate sales taxes. The last column gives the total living cost, which includes all the items mentioned above, as well as discretionary expenses, including food, clothing, medical service, entertainment, etc.

The differences in what $18,000 buys can be enormous. For example, a family living in Oklahoma City could save a handsome $2,723 annually while living on the same scale that would put a northern New Jersey family $1,500 in debt. How does your area compare?

To cut down on home maintenance costs, Richard does most handy work himself, like painting, wallpapering and paneling.

life insurance, however, is really a very good investment because it costs very little for the same amount of coverage, and you can use the difference to invest in money market bonds." Stein holds.

Stein also suggests an approach that some may be wary of: Keep pace with inflation by borrowing money to invest. "People are still living as if there's price stability," says Stein. "In today's economy, you do better by borrowing. Borrow scarce dollars and pay back plentiful dollars," Stein says. In other words, in inflationary times, borrow money when it's worth more and pay it back when it's worth less.

For some, such advice may be hard to follow, particularly if they — like the Panicuccis — hesitate to borrow money or live on credit. But according to Stein, many middle-class Americans will have to update their thinking in the 80's if they expect to make financial ends meet. (Be sure to consult your accountant or financial adviser before making any major decisions.)

Stein also points out that one mistake Richard has been making is claiming "zero" deductions on his income-tax return, allowing the Government to withhold a greater portion of his salary. He does this thinking that it's a way to save a portion of his income, since he'll get back the money in the end. But what he's actually doing, Stein says, is losing money, and giving the Government an interest-free loan. "With two children, a wife and a house, he should be taking five or six deductions," says Stein. "If anyone should be getting an interest-free loan it should be he."

Lately, with all the talk about tough times ahead, Richard and Carol worry that life for their children will be tougher than it was for them.

"I feel it was very easy for us," says Carol. "We went to college, got jobs, bought a house. It's going to be harder for the children. I worry that we've had everything and they won't have as much."

Inflation can mean family problems that aren't just economic in nature — it can put a strain on relationships. But according to Arthur F. Maslow, executive director of the Ackerman Institute of Family Therapy, it doesn't have to have adverse effects: "This kind of situation can have a positive influence. Parents should be open with each other and their children about the restraints that have to be put on the budget, and children should be encouraged to help out more. If a family works together to get what they want and uses the resources available to them, this tough economic period could actually serve to strengthen and unify them." FW

The Rev. Donald Wildmon's Crusade Against TV "Sexploitation"

Donald Wildmon's ministry is in tiny Tupelo, Miss., but his influence extends far beyond. Through his National Federation for Decency, Wildmon has emerged as the most active — and controversial — TV watchdog.

Photographs by Terry Wood

The TV set is still the focal point in the Wildmon living room, but viewing time has diminished.

By Harry F. Waters

The face calls to mind all those friendly ministers on Guiding Light. The down-home Southern drawl evokes Jim Nabors, Andy Griffith and just a whiff of Sheriff Lobo. But don't look for the Rev. Donald Wildmon on your television screen any time between now and the next century. To the three networks, the 41-year-old Mississipi clergyman is the man they love to loathe — or at least would love to see go away. To a growing army of viewers, however, Donald Wildmon has become a real-life Don Quixote, the fearless champion of moral values threatened, as they perceive it, by TV's quickening drift toward "sexploitation."

The forum for this voice of silent America is the National Federation for Decency, a 10,000-member organization based in Tupelo, Miss. Founded by Wildmon two years ago, the NFD has emerged as the most activist video-watchdog group in the nation and a source of intense controversy among those concerned by two perplexing questions. How much say should citizen lobbyists have over the sexual tone of television? And more importantly, is the NFD's favorite weapon — consumer boycotts of corporations sponsoring objectionable shows — a legitimate form of protest or an unfair infringement on the viewing rights of others?

Here is how the NFD operates. Every three months, several hundred members across the country monitor all the programs shown by the networks during the prime time, evening hours. On special forms prepared by Wildmon, the monitors count up incidences of profanity, scenes of "suggested intercourse outside of marriage," displays of what the trade calls "jiggly," and the like. These tabulations — along with the names of the program's sponsors — are then disseminated by Wildmon through his monthly newsletter. That goes to 90,000 individuals, PTA's and church groups and has a total pass-on readership, estimates Wildmon, of half a million. The offending advertisers, meanwhile, receive letters threatening them with boycotts of their products unless their commercials are removed.

How effective are much tactics? Wildmon claims that Sears, Roebuck & Co. decided to change its video advertising policies as a result of NFD boycotts. Sears denies any such connection. But coincidentally, enough, Sears announced it was pulling its commercials from Charlie's Angels and Three's Company on the very day that the NFD began picketing its stores in 36 cities. Wildmon has also met his share of rebuffs. The makers of Kentucky Fried Chicken, responding to NFD complaints that they were underwriting prurient TV movies, said that they had no intention of bowing to the group's pressures. Wildmon's equally blunt rejoinder: "We have no intention of buying your chicken. Let's look at your profit-and-loss picture next year."

Whatever the effects of these tactics, the Tupelo minister has touched a sensitive nerve in TV's executive suites. The view from there is that boycotting sponsors amounts to a form of blackmail, not to mention a violation of the First Amendment rights of both programmers and viewers. "Every set comes with an Off button," notes one network official. "That's the only fair way to register a protest against what's on the screen." Lee Rich, one of TV's busiest independent producers, practically turns apoplectic at the mention of Wildmon's name. "He picks on TV because he knows it gets him the most publicity," charges Rich. "Why doesn't he just stick to being a reverend?"

Such brickbats fail to ruffle Wildmon. He maintains that he "deeply regrets" having to resort to boycotts but adds that his opponents are using the blackmail argument as a smoke screen. The NFD, points out its leader, never tries to tell advertisers where they can or cannot spend their money. "All we tell them is that if they'll sponsor good programs, we'll buy their products," he says. "But if they sponsor vulgar and tasteless programs, we'll buy their competitor's products. In a capitalist system, that's the best way to make your voice heard. Boycotts are as American as apple pie."

Given the special nature of the TV medium, a Donald Wildmon probably had to happen. Unquestionably, today's prime-time programming remains far less blue than what can be found in movie theaters and on the stage. The problem is that television comes into the home as a sort of uninvited guest. "When you sit in front of it," says Wildman, "you have the right not to be slammed in the face with vulgarity."

Wildmon freely concedes that his sexual standards may be more conservative than the millions of viewers who make a Top Ten hit out of a Three's Company. Yet he also believes that equal numbers of other viewers share his distaste for such fare and endorse his own values. "We're not against video sex per se," he says. "We're only opposed to the excessive and the gratuitous. We picture sex as a beautiful gift from God, not a commercial product to be packaged and sold at the networks' bidding."

What is the Reverend Wildmon really like? He answers that one by speculating about what the TV establishment thinks he's like. "All they have to hear is that I'm a minister from Mississippi and they picture a Bible totin', scripture quotin', hell-and-damnation redneck prude," he chuckles. "And you know why they have that image? Because that's the way we're depicted on television." In fact, in person, Wildmon comes across as articulate and thoughtful, a man whose missionary zeal is nicely balanced by a folksy wit. No less skeptical an observer as George Will, the Washington-based syndicated columnist, found him to be "tranquil, soft-spoken and eminently rational."

At the time he launched the NFD, Wildmon was serving as pastor of a suburban Memphis church and was considered something of a comer in the United Methodist hierarchy. One night, while watching TV with his four children, he became so outraged over his failure to click to anything suitable, he simply shut the set off. Using a spare corner of his dining room, Wildmon began cranking out his newsletter on an inexpensive duplicating machine. When he had received enough approving feedback, he resigned his pastorate (though not his ministry) and made the nonprofit NFD his full-time calling.

It wasn't easy. During the first year, Wildmon sank his entire savings of $5,000 into the organization, while drawing only $1,400 in salary. To keep his family afloat, his wife Lynda had to go back to work as a home economics teacher. But as membership rose and contributions flowed in, the Wildmons slowly turned the corner. With the help of his wife's salary and the $10,000 he receives in annual royalties from his 17 religious books, Wildmon was able to move the NFD to office quarters in downtown Tupelo, where he has four full-time staffers. Lest anyone question his motives, however, he limits his salary to $20,000 a year.

The father of three teen-agers and an 8-year-old, Wildmon needed his best carrot-and-stick diplomacy to wean his children from the tube. Once heavy viewers, they are now content to log only a handful of hours in front of the screen. "We all sweated through their period of withdrawal," recalls Wildmon. "TV is a drug, and they were partially addicted. But now they don't seem to mind."

No one questions the right of groups like Wildmon's to employ every means short of coercion to achieve their reformist goals. On the other hand, the networks and their advertisers possess an equally valid right to try to satisfy the largest number of viewers most of the time. In a medium aimed at a mass audience, where does one draw the line of sexual permissiveness? And who is to draw it?

For now, all that seems certain is that the battle will intensify. Noting the titillation level of this season's shows, Wildmon predicts: "It's going to get worse before it gets better. If the networks could get away with it, they'd show hard-core pornography in the name of artistic freedom." As for his own future, and that of his crusade, the minister from Mississippi says simply: "We intend to be here until there's no more need for us. And judging from the look of things, that won't happen for a long, long time." FW

People take prescription drugs to make them feel better. To end discomfort. To stop pain. To induce sleep. To increase energy. To fight infection. According to a helpful consumer oriented book, these drugs often bring about an assortment of unwanted side effects in susceptible individuals. This new and revised edition of the 250,000 copy bestseller reveals the possible side effects of the 220 most frequently prescribed drugs. Written in layman's language in an easy to use A to Z format, consumers can now learn about the possible side effects of the drugs they take before filling the prescription.

Just a few of the 220 drugs included in this volume:

Actifed®	Darvon®	Librium®	Reserpine
Aldomet®	Diuril®	Orthonovum®	Ritalin®
Benadryl®	Doriden®	Ovral®	Seconal® Sodium
Benemid®	Hygroton®	Penicillin	Terramycin®
Chlor-trimeton®	Inderal®	Phenobarbital	Tetracyn®
Dalmane®	Librax®	Regroton®	Valium®

What an important book! It's estimated that more than 1 billion drug prescriptions are written by doctors in the U. S. each year. Often these drugs cause such unwanted side effects and adverse reactions as:

dizziness, dry mouth, stomach cramps, loss of balance, bleeding, fluid retention, headaches, vomiting, fever, rash, nausea, loss of appetite, itching, diarrhea, blurred vision, pains in the joints, impotence, insomnia, jitters, fluttering, constipation, shortness of breath, drowsiness, depression.

To prepare this volume, the author researched the various pharmaceutical reference manuals plus the literature drug companies send to doctors and pharmacists. Then, he edited this material into layman's language explaining the conditions under which each drug is prescribed.

And the book includes a very special bonus—the generic name of each of the 220 drugs right alongside the brand name. If your doctor will prescribe by the generic name whenever possible, you'll save money on most prescriptions.

An End to Insomnia

9 Ways to Make You Snoozzzzzz

By Wanda Urbanska

For as many as 50 million Americans, bedtime can be a sea of troubles. They toss and turn and keep tabs on every hour of forfeited sleep. And try as they might to fall asleep, their frustration is only compounded by the feeling that everyone else is gaining on them in a race they can't even start.

Doctors report that after the headache, the single most common medical complaint is insomnia. Americans consume 600 tons of sleeping pills per year. Scientifically speaking, there is no one "insomnia" — rather a variety of sleep/wake disorders rooted in a constellation of physical and psychological problems.

Insomnia can be divided into three categories: the most common one, initial disorder, where the individual has trouble falling asleep; intermittent, where he awakens throughout the night; and terminal, where he awakens prematurely.

In some instances, there is a serious physical or psychological cause. Fortunately, treatment is now available for these disorders. Apnea, a breathing disorder that jerks the individual awake up to 500 times a night, can be surgically corrected. Manhattan's Montefiore Hospital has developed a technique called chronotherapy for treating individuals with an abnormally long internal cycle that puts them out-of-step with society's clock. Dr. Peter Hauri of Dartmouth College is working with a biofeedback method to treat chronic insomniacs. There are sleep clinics — primarily on the West and East Coasts — but at costs of up to $500 per bed per night, even the experts recommend them as a last resort.

In most instances, insomnia can be handled by the individual himself. Because it is so often the result of such factors as stress or poor scheduling, all it takes are some trial-and-error techniques and a hefty dose of "want-to." The first step is to try to recognize why you're having trouble sleeping. Insomnia can be the expression of unmet — often unacknowledged — emotional problems. If there's anxiety over a new boss, for instance, identifying that as the cause for insomnia will help transfer the problem where it can be solved — at work.

The answer to the problem should not be drugs. Sleeping pills (like Dalmane) or tranquilizers (like Valium) "have been vastly overprescribed," according to Dr. Robert Van de Castle of the University of Virginia Sleep and Dream Clinic. A recent Institute of Medicine report that reveals the addictive and damaging side effects of barbituates reflects a growing tide in the medical and lay communities against all pharmacological treatments. Sleeping pills can interfere with the sleep and dream cycle — you sleep but don't dream, and you therefore wake up unrefreshed.

The best way to get a good night's sleep is to spend a healthy day. Close scrutiny of your waking life will expose its faulty points. Your diet should be moderate and well balanced. Insomniacs are notorious abusers of coffee, cola and other stimulants. It's important to realize that caffeine can remain active in the system for as long as seven hours after consumption.

Studies have shown that regular exercise not only reduces the incidence of insomnia but also improves the quality of the sleep. Aerobic exercise — such as swimming, cycling, skipping rope, tennis, and, of course, jogging — keeps the heart, lungs and liver in prime shape. But Dr. Hauri cautions, "Don't expect to sleep perfectly after your first jog." And never exercise vigorously right before bed.

Directly before sleep, it's wise to tone your life down. Picture yourself on a film that's running in slow motion, with the volume turned low. Avoid negative or conflict-provoking thoughts and actions. Select a ritual that will set the mood for sleep. Take a warm bath; play soft music; watch Johnny Carson; read from the Bible; feed the fish — whatever turns you off. A warm glass of milk will draw blood from the brain to the stomach. But flavor it with molasses or honey, not cocoa, which is caffeinated.

Dr. Hauri emphasizes getting up at a regular hour. "Insomniacs try to squeeze out the last drop of sleep, but they pay the price the next night." Naps should be avoided for the same reason.

If you are still having trouble falling asleep, try giving yourself this massage: Begin on the top of the head, pressing gently but firmly with palms and fingertips, moving the hands forward over the forehead and down the face. Work your way to the neck, across the shoulders and back, to the base of the spinal cord where tension is liable to be lodged. Hold your foot in your hands, massaging from both directions. Now lie on your stomach or back. Tense up your entire body, hold for several seconds, then release.

Finally, if you can't sleep, perform a chore or read. And don't worry about it. Trying to sleep is the surest way to prevent it. Remember that this is only one night in a long life. When you realize that, you'll probably soon drop off.

Insomniac Americans gulp down 600 tons of sleeping pills each year, and in most cases, unnecessarily.

QUIPS & QUOTES

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

OUTSIDE IN

It isn't enough to have plants in our yard.
Plants indoors are even more fancy.
These plants are in pots, for our floors lack soil,
Or at least enough to be plantsy.

Some plant-filled pots are on tables and chests.
Some riskily hang from the ceiling.
If you visit our house, you will find that it has
An indoors-and-outdoors feeling.

We can't bring all of the plants inside.
But we've quite a good deal of greenery.
Our guests peer around from behind a plant
And say they admire the scenery.

PEOPLE QUIZ/By John E. Gibson

Does a Meaningful Life Lessen Fear of Death?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. People's beliefs run a wide and dramatic gamut — ranging from convictions that are wildly irrational to beliefs derived logically from facts, data or circumstances. And which way you lean tells a lot about your personality.

2. People differ widely in their beliefs about what causes happiness.

3. Your attitude toward others is affected to a large extent by whether or not you believe in a Just World.

4. Where beliefs are concerned, people tend to fall into two categories.

5. The more a person believes in the goals and purposes he is working toward in life, the less fear he has of death.

6. The validity of your beliefs — about people, situations and life in general — is likely to depend on one particular thing.

ANSWERS

1. False. A study of personality correlates of rational and irrational beliefs, conducted by psychologists Bernard S. Gorman and William E. Simon, shows that rational beliefs "are associated with adaptive behaviors (adjusting to conditions rather than trying to make the world adjust to you) and a lack of highly negative attitudes (looking through dark glasses on a sunny day and complaining about the gloomy weather); while irrational beliefs are accompanied by maladaptive behaviors, failure to adjust to conditions (everyone's out of step but me) and feelings of anxiety, depression and guilt."

2. True. In a Memphis State University study of the beliefs about the causes of happiness, espoused by subjects from various walks of life, chief factors deemed responsible for happiness included the following belief categories:

Happiness believed to come principally from active self-fulfillment, learning and personal accomplishment.

Happiness believed to come chiefly from family, friends, religion and security.

Happiness believed to come largely from a close intimate love relationship.

Happiness believed to come mainly from societal activities and rewarding social involvements both with groups and individuals.

Happiness believed to come mostly from status and the recognition and respect received from others.

3. True. A team of University of Rochester investigators made a study of the psychological effects of belief in a Just World. Belief in a Just World refers to "a person's need to see the world as a place in which people get what they deserve and deserve what they get." Results of the study show that subjects with a high level of belief in a Just World are less suspicious of the actions of others, more apt to accept a favor or gift without feeling there might be strings tied to it and have a high level of trust in general. Conversely, it was found that a "belief that the world is not just implies a lack of trust and reluctance to rely on other people." It is pointed out, however, that the victim of circumstances obviously gets much more sympathy from those who don't believe the world is just. The believer in an Unjust World sees the victim as a result of social injustice, is strongly moved by his plight and commiserates with him. On the other hand, as another study observes, the derogation of a victim helps the believer in a Just World to maintain his belief because he can see the victim as deserving his fate.

4. True. In an investigation of the beliefs and convictions of men and women, conducted at Loyola University, Chicago, research findings are cited showing that the more than 6,000 subjects studied "tended to group themselves into two large classes. One class seemed always to feel somewhat bitter toward life, believing that somehow they had not gotten all they were promised and that life had played something of a trick on them. This feeling was evidenced in the way they treated whatever people were still interested in them. The other class seemed grateful for life; they seemed always to have looked on life, no matter how hard it was, positively."

5. True. Studies at Vanderbilt University show a significant relationship between purpose in life and attitude toward death. The investigation, which sampled three different population groups, showed that subjects who were achieving meaningful goals, whose lives were bringing them the satisfaction of rewards received for work well done, were the most accepting of death and had the least fear of it. On the other hand, people whose lives tended to be lacking in meaning and purpose evidenced a significantly greater fear of death.

6. True. Many people are so uncertain in their beliefs about life and the nitty-gritty of everyday living, that their lack of confidence in their own convictions results in disruptive personality conflicts and self-doubts. It is concluded from studies conducted at the University of California on the relationship between the dimensions of doubt and certainty that the growth of personality, as well as the validity of one's beliefs, "is highly dependent upon conditions which encourage the person to experience the discordancy and instability of the world, as well as the congruent and the stable." It is further noted that whatever prevents the confrontation with the complexities of the environment tends to dilute both the strength of a person's beliefs about things in general and his feeling of self-confidence and the assurance that he can cope with the situations life hands him. CRAFTS

Easy, One-Stitch Crochet Magic

A crocheted apple holds the string.

It's not really magic, but it almost seems that way. Using one easy stitch and one basic shape, you can create a dozen different, practical items. Most can be made in a single evening.

Start small. Make a Barbie doll skirt. Turn the skirt inside out and you'll have a coaster that will fit a drinking glass of almost any size or shape. Thread a length of yarn through that coaster to drawstring the top and it becomes a holder for a ball of string. Made of red yarn with a crocheted stem, the yarn holder becomes a decorative apple. Filled with polyfil or old panty hose cut-ups instead of string, it's a soft toss ball for a baby or an exerciser for someone with arthritic hands. Made longer and wider, it's a comfortable neck pillow.

Slipper socks can be made with one easy crochet stitch.

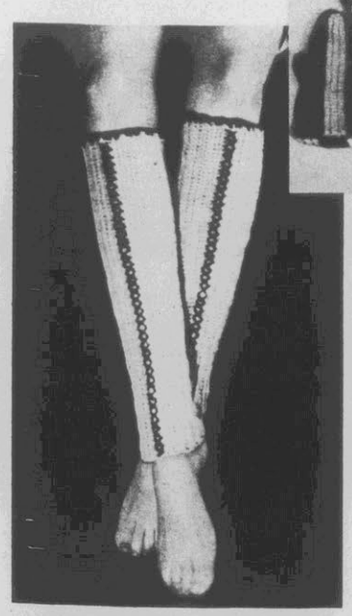

To turn the doll skirt, coaster, string holder, toss ball, exerciser or pillow into a child's helmet-hat, the same stitch and the same pattern are used, but the piece is crocheted bigger. Made even larger, it's a warm winter cap for an adult. Just add a tassel or a pompom. Turn the cap upside down and use it as a cache pot for a favorite plant.

A striped hat with mittens to match can be easily made with the basic stitch.

The same basic piece made narrower and decorated appropriately becomes a golf club sock cover. Make three more for a complete set. Make only two, and they're slipper socks for people. Leave both ends open and wear them as leg warmers.

When one small change is made in the basic pattern, the magic tube can become a mitten.

Leg warmers for a cold winter's day.

Whether you're accomplished at crocheting or just a beginner, you'll find these items easy and quick to make. Even if you've never crocheted before you probably can now, because FAMILY WEEKLY's fully illustrated booklet will show you how.

Runaways: Tripping Toward Terror

Each year, nearly one million kids run away from home. Many are as young as 11. For 90 percent of these girls and boys, it's back to home safely within a few days. But for the other 10 percent, the dream of city glitter becomes a nightmare.

By Sandy Johnson

Two weeks before her 12th birthday, Nicole W., decided to run away from her middle-class home in a small Connecticut town. She had been doing poorly in school and she felt as if no one — including her parents — loved her. Hungry after her bus ride to Manhattan, she walked to the candy stand in the grimy Port Authority Bus Terminal. Digging into her jeans for change from her one-way bus ticket, she felt a light touch on her arm. "Keep it, sugar; it's on me." Sweet Joey paid for the candy, took Nicole by the arm and within two days she was re-baptized Nicki, a pavement-pounding street prostitute bringing in a minimum of $150 a day.

It is estimated that between 600,000 and 1,000,000 girls and boys run away from their homes every year. Ninety percent return home within three days. But the other 10 percent end up working as prostitutes in a large urban area. "If a runaway stays away from home for more than three days, he or she almost always turns to prostitution," according to Sgt. James Greenlay of the New York Police Department's Runaway Unit.

Prostitution among both girls and boys is a growing problem in every large city in the United States today. Though New York City has the biggest share of the problem — there are an estimated 20,000 runaways in Manhattan on any one day — Los Angeles, Miami, Detroit and Chicago all act as magnets for young girls and boys who are unhappy at home and are seduced by the glitter of a big city. And the kids who run away are often from "nice" towns and neighborhoods. In fact, just a few years ago, Minneapolis became a training camp for New York City prostitutes. Pimps took trips out to the Midwest to find new stock for their stables, and many girls themselves were drawn to Manhattan. Within a short time, there was such a large number of young Midwestern girls working as prostitutes in New York that the area on Eighth Avenue from 42nd Street to 49th Street was dubbed "Minnesota Strip."

Runaways are easy prey for the professional pimps who stake out the bus stations, airports and parks in every large city. The technique is painfully simple. A pimp offers a runaway a meal and a place to stay. He talks to her sweetly and even tells her he loves her. In a few days he sends her out on the street and because she's frightened, she goes. If she refuses, she's in trouble — suddenly the sweet talk is gone. She might be beaten or starved. The pimp's technique is to degrade, depersonalize and create in the girl a sense of such deep self-loathing that even if she could, she would never want to go home.

(According to Greenlay, male runaways often get swooped up by older male pimps — sometimes called a "chicken and hawk" relationship. However, since the boy runaways are usually older than the girls, they more easily assimilate into the big city and don't feel the basic need for a pimp/protector.)

John Scherman

Alarmingly, kids are running away at an earlier age now, according to Assemblyman Howard Lasher, chairman of the New York State Assembly Child Care Committee. Just a few years ago, the most frequent runaway was 16. Now over 43 percent fall into the 11-to-14 age group.

What compels a 12-year-old girl, who should be more interested in the next pajama party or in getting her own phone, to run away? Or a 13-year old boy, who instead of saving up for a new catcher's mitt, is planning his getaway? According to Irvin Simmons, community relations liason of Phoenix House, a narcotics rehabilitation program that deals with many young people, the runaway is often escaping a variety of problems: parental abuse, an alcoholic parent, even incest.

Another likely candidate as a runaway is the child starved for attention or some sort of recognition in the home. A normal "good" child might be tempted to change her act and see if being "bad" can get her the recognition she feels cheated of. Carolyn Croft, director of the runaway youth division of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, points out that many runaways are children who don't get enough love at home. There could be a number of reasons for this:

If the child is from a two-paycheck family, with both parents arriving home exhausted, or from a broken home, there may not be much interaction among family members. This type of situation, compounded with other problems that aren't being dealt with, can drive a lonely, confused child further and further into a world of fantasy, closing out the reality of the world he feels has rejected him.

There are ways to tell if a child is thinking of running away. Here are some of the warning signs that psychologists tell parents to be on the lookout for:

- Sudden drop in grades at school.
- New circle of considerably older friends.
- Premature use of heavily applied makeup (other than an occasional experiment).
- Abrupt change to an inappropriate or extreme style of clothes.
- Withdrawal from family activities.
- Obsession with TV, rock music or movie magazines to the point where they soon form the child's set of values
- Behavioral problems in school.

The list is not intended to strike fear in any parent's heart, and certainly not arouse an overly suspicious or extreme disciplinarian attitude toward a child. But if your child is exhibiting any of this behavior, it may be an indication that he or she is thinking of running away.

What can be done to make sure your child doesn't become a runaway? First of all, don't ignore a problem if there is one. Time is the crucial factor. Get to know what's going on inside your child's head, even if at first it seems difficult.

Secondly, if the quantity of time spent with your child is limited due to a divorce or both parents working, make sure that the hours spent together are "quality" time. Establish your own confidential, 24-hours-a-day "toll-free" hot line and keep communications open. Children care about parents' problems, too. They make good listeners if given a chance.

If you're not making any progress, turn to a school or family-guidance counselor or child psychologist.

What can be done once a child has run away? The first thing is to notify the local police. After getting a physical description, the precinct will in turn release this information to the various runaway units operating throughout the country.

Contacting the various drug rehabilitation centers and runaway shelters in each city yourself and providing them with a recent photo help in the search. These centers routinely canvas runaway hangouts with an eye out for newly arrived kids.

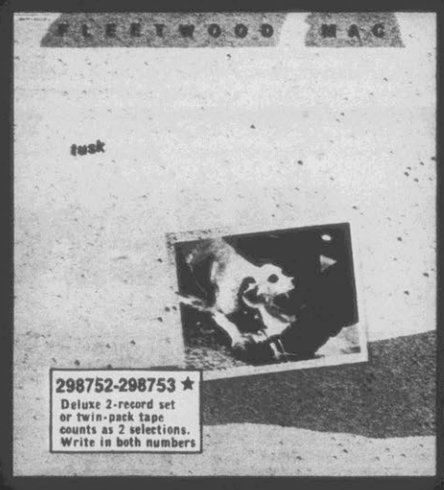

There are also Government-funded, toll-free confidential hot lines serving as message and information services for runaways and their families. They allow runaways to save face while breaking the ice with their families. The Chicago-based National Runaway Switchboard is funded partly by H.E.W. The number is: 800-621-4000. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Rescuing Refugees

When President Carter ordered U.S. Navy ships to begin picking up the "boat people" who were fleeing Vietnam, he was responding, in part, to public outrage. But long before the U.S. got involved, World Vision International (WVI), a humanitarian organization based in Monrovia, Calif., had a converted Navy vessel called Seasweep patrolling the waters.

"In early 1978, I learned about the plight of the boat people," explains Stan Mooneyham, WVI's president. "At first we chartered a ship and assisted the refugees by giving them food and water. We couldn't take anyone on board because we had no place to unload them. But when it was decreed that any American ship that picked up refugees could unload them in Singapore for resettlement in the U.S., we bought Seasweep."

Now that the Navy is looking out for the boat people, Seasweep has been turned into a hospital for the 42,000 refugees who fled to Indonesia's Anambas Islands. "We just finished vaccinating all of them," says Mooneyham, who has every reason to feel proud. World Vision International relies totally on donations for nearly all its projects, and 75 percent of its income comes from individuals. "Our average gift," says Mooneyham, "is $21."

Booking On The Future

In this age of rising inflation, libraries are one necessity that often lose out when donation or bond-issue time rolls around. But library friends are an innovative lot, as Winning the Money Game, a guide for library fund-raising, points out. So, if your town library needs help, take a few tips from these successful library supporters.

In Littleton, Colo., the annual fund raiser for the Bemis Public Library is a musical revue staged and acted by members of the community. This year the revue is titled "The Greatest Show on Mirth" and will probably net around $10,000. And in Unionville, N.C., a pork barbecue draws crowds from all over the state and helps raise library funds.

This hungry lion can roar mightily.

In New York City, Patience and Fortitude, the stone lions that rule the front steps of the Public Library, get special treatment during the holiday season, when giant wreaths are placed around their necks. Daily, at noon, a deafening roar stops shoppers in their tracks as the lions remind the public that the library needs to be fed.

KCET

Agnes de Mille emphasizes the exuberance of dance.

May We Have This Dance?

Instead of going to their neighborhood disco, what kinds of dance did teen-agers of 19th-century America enjoy? Well, some might have do-si-doed with their partners at a local square dance, while others twirled sedately to the tunes of a waltz. Dance in America has been a constantly varying activity, remarks Agnes de Mille in Conversations About Dance, a wonderful and witty PBS television special on the evolution of dance in this country, due to air on January 28. And as Miss de Mille talks about the many forms of dance, members of the Joffrey Ballet appear on stage to illustrate her points.

Dance, Miss de Mille notes, can be as involving for an audience as it is for the dancers. In 1845, when Americans had their first look at a real ballerina, Miss Fanny Elssler from Paris, it was instant love. During her visit to Washington, Congress recessed, and a group of senators pulled her carriage through the streets of the nation's capital. "Isn't it refreshing," Miss de Mille asks with a perfectly straight face, "to think of senators doing anything so innocent?"

Eye The Sun With Caution

Those dazzling ski slopes and sun-drenched beaches are mighty tempting vacation spots at this time of year, but the intensity of the sun can be damaging to your eyes. Excessive ultraviolet rays can cause painful, temporary blindness, warns Dr. George Garcia, president-elect of the American Association of Ophthalmology. "Like a severe sunburn, ultraviolet burns on the eye do not always occur immediately," he points out. "The damage results from the death of thousands of the cornea's cells."

Immediate treatment by a physician is essential, says Garcia, noting that "the cornea has remarkable recuperative capabilities, and new cells will grow within 48 hours if the eyes are properly cared for." As a preventive measure, he recommends that sun worshippers invest in a good pair of sunglasses.

Lifestyles

Religion. A recent study by a graduate student at Pennsylvania State University notes that for millions of American Christians, believing has become divorced from belonging to an organized church. "The unchurched," says William McKinney, "are generally more liberal in their attitudes on sex, marriage, divorce and other components of personal morality. People do not usually participate in an institution that would condemn their way of life." But 64 percent of American adults who do not belong to a church say they believe Jesus is God or the son of God, and 70 percent believe that the Bible was divinely inspired, McKinney points out.

Television. This week, The Voyage of Charles Darwin, a seven-part dramatic series on the life of the great scientist, begins on PBS stations. The shows, based on Darwin's own journals, follow his career from his first university days through his five-year voyage aboard the HMS Beagle, one of the English ships sent to explore and chart unknown waters. It was during this trip that Darwin collected so much of the information he needed to formulate his controversial hypothesis on the origin of the species. Check your local listings.

Some people think we're crazy to still make books this good.

For over 50 years, we've been making fine editions that are a sheer pleasure to hold in your hands.

In this age of mass production and corner-cutting, some people think that we're crazy. But what do you think?

Would you like to build a truly fine home library, without spending a small fortune? If so, we'd like to put three examples of our work into your hands so you can judge their worth for yourself.

Accept these three books for $1 each.

We'll send you every word William Shakespeare ever wrote, plus a commentary, in one 1,312-page volume printed on thin, opaque Bible paper.

We'll add a second volume with 128 unexpurgated tales of love and irony by Guy de Maupassant, French master of the short story. And an edition of Kipling that includes a complete novel and 139 stories and verses such as the Man Who Would Be King, Gunga Din, and The Phantom Rickshaw.

Take a good look at these books. Each is clothed in a binding of antique ecru that has the look and feel of real leather but which stands up to time far better. Note the red and gold tooling. The crimson silk-ribbon page markers. The specially-designed Scotch thistle endpapers. The gilded page tops. (Gilded page tops are not mere luxury. They last virtually forever and protect the pages against the destructive acid contained in ordinary dust.)

Note how the pages are meticulously Smythe-sewn into the binding, not stuck together with glue. They will never drop out or flutter away. And our books still have sturdy head and footbands so they can hold up under constant use.

All three books are yours for just $1 each, as your introduction to our Golden Giants of Literature Series. After which, you can go on to choose other works by authors such as Hugo, Swift, Cellini, Poe, Wilde, and Dostoevsky.

Because we distribute directly to loyal subscribers, we can charge only $7.39 plus shipping for each subsequent edition. That's a sensible savings over the $30 or more per volume a lot of people ordinarily pay to build themselves impressive home libraries.

You don't have to take every volume in the Series. You may reject any book before or after you receive it. And you may cancel your subscription at any time.

Send no money now. All we hope is that you and others who still love well-made books will take a moment to use the coupon on this page or write directly to us, Black's Readers Service, Roslyn, New York 11576.

Black's Readers Service, Roslyn, New York 11576

Please enroll me as a subscriber and send me at once Shakespeare, Kipling, and de Maupassant. I enclose no money now. After a week's examination, I will either keep my books and pay $3, plus shipping, or return them.

Also reserve for me additional volumes in the Golden Giants of Literature Series. As a subscriber, I will get advance descriptions of future volumes. For each volume I choose, I will pay just $7.39, plus shipping. I may return any book, at the Series' expense, for full credit and I may cancel my reservation at any time. (Books shipped in U.S.A. only.)

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: SIR GAWAIN HAD LED THE THUNDERING CHARGE OF THE MOUNTED KNIGHTS. IT WAS THE FIRST TIME THE HARDY SEAFARERS HAD FACED THE CHARGE OF CAVALRY, AND THEY FLED TO THE SAFETY OF PATRICK ISLAND.

GAWAIN'S KNIGHTS DISMOUNT AND FOLLOW THE ENEMY TO WHERE A FORTRESS OF TIMBER IS UNDER CONSTRUCTION, THE GROUND LITTERED WITH WOOD SHAVINGS. WITHIN MINUTES, GAWAIN HAS THE PLACE IN FLAMES.

AS LONG AS NORTHMEN CAN WIELD A SWORD, THE BATTLE CONTINUES. AND IT IS NOTED THAT NOT ONE OF LORD KARRAN'S TROOPS HAS AIDED IN THE BATTLE.
