Unemployment Up In Worker Layoffs

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A large rise in worker layoffs pushed the nation's unemployment rate to an 18-month high of 6.2 percent in January, a signal that a long-expected recession may have arrived, the government reported today.

Adult men bore the brunt of the higher unemployment, as their jobless rate jumped from 4.2 percent to 4.7 percent, the highest since November 1977.

President Carter predicted this week that the economy would enter a mild recession during the first half of 1980, sending unemployment rising to 7.5 percent by the fall.

Today's monthly report, issued by the Labor Department, bolstered that forecast, although government economists cautioned that it was premature to say with certainty that a recession had begun.

The January figures marked the first time that unemployment has hit 6 percent since July 1978, when the rate was 6.2 percent.

Unemployment stood at 5.9 percent of the work force in December, and had fluctuated between 5.7 percent and 5.9 percent during the prior 16 months.

The large rise in unemployment among men who were laid off reflected downturns in the auto, steel and housing industries, which traditionally are the first to feel the effects of a recession.

The number of unemployed persons increased by 340,000 in January to 6.4 million. The Labor Department said 260,000 of the jobless had been laid off, as opposed to those who might have returned to the status of job-seekers.

The total employment in January was 97.8 million persons, down from the record 97.9 million in December. The number of men with jobs declined by 200,000, while employment among adult women rose by 170,000.

As a result, while the jobless rate for men rose sharply, the rate for women advanced only modestly from 5.7 percent in December to 5.8 percent last month.

The Labor Department also provided the following breakdowns of unemployment rate changes since December for different population groups:

- Teen-agers: 16.3 percent in January, up from 16 percent in December.
- Minority teen-agers: 34.6 percent, up from 34.3 percent.
- Whites: 5.4 percent, up from 5.1 percent.
- Non-whites: 11.8 percent, up from 11.3 percent.
- Full-time workers: 5.7 percent, up from 5.4 percent.
- Part-time workers: 8.7 percent, up from 8.5 percent.
- White collar workers: 3.4 percent, up from 3.3 percent.
- Blue collar workers: 8 percent, up from 7.2 percent.
- Service workers: 6.9 percent, up from 6.6 percent.

During the past year, the jobless total in the country has risen by 610,000. Employment during the same period rose by only 1.7 million, the smallest annual increase in four years, the government reported.

Mayor Looks To New Rescue Plan

Mayor Don McGlohon today issued a statement on behalf of the City Council regarding the city's fire/rescue situation in light of the announcement that the

"When changes in policy are made such as this," he related, "the citizens of Greenville should expect nothing less than the loyal and cooperative efforts of all employees within the unit involved in providing necessary services to our community. More than half of our 76 full-time personnel are presently EMT (Emergency Medical Technician) certified and the others should be certified during 1980."

The spokesman said the Council members "sincerely believe that the trained and dedicated employees of the Fire/Rescue Department will provide improved emergency services as this planned program of training continues."

He assured local citizens that the Council "pledges to continue to study the level of services that may or should be provided to the citizens of Greenville and Pitt County."

McGlohon concluded, "We hope that you have read the goals of your City Council — one of which is to encourage voluntary citizen participation in government. This is a very real desire, and we would hope that those interested in volunteer rescue services would offer their services within the framework of city government policy as do hundreds of other volunteers who are presently serving our city so well."

volunteer emergency members of the Rescue Squad had voted to disband their volunteer medical service operations.

The mayor observed in his statement, "The city of Greenville is proud of and thankful for the many services performed by volunteer fire and rescue persons over the past years. Moreover, we are also proud of the 76 full-time fire/rescue personnel who are continuing to provide the very best emergency services available in North Carolina on a 24-hour per day basis."

McGlohon continued, "The citizens of Greenville may rest assured that the quantity and quality of these services are continuing to improve as the plans for a fully integrated and cross-trained Fire/Rescue Department are implemented over the next several months."

McGlohon explained that, "On June 5, 1979, your City Council made a decision based on open debate, much citizen input and outside studies to cross-train the Fire and Rescue Divisions into a fully integrated Fire/Rescue Department. Your present Council believes that this decision was in the best interest of our city, and we support this decision as a firm policy for the Fire/Rescue Department."

Flu Spreads

ATLANTA (AP) — Influenza has spread to nearly half the states since November, but most cases are sporadic and there have been no massive outbreaks, the national Center for Disease Control reported today.

Most flu is Influenza B, a relatively mild virus. Only a few cases of Influenza A have been reported.

In its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, the CDC said it has recently received laboratory confirmation of Influenza B from Georgia, Missouri, Montana and Texas. State public health officials also report Influenza B in Oklahoma.

Previously, the center had reported Influenza B in Arizona, California, Illinois, Wisconsin, Delaware, New Jersey, Colorado, Utah, Oregon, Hawaii, Alaska, Michigan, New York, Ohio and Washington.

Seized Cuban Barge

MIAMI (AP) — Sixty-seven men, women and children arrived at a Coast Guard station in Miami today after commandeering a leaky, slow-moving barge at gunpoint from a port in Cuba.

The refugees were greeted by reporters and cameramen. Most smiled but said little before being led to a waiting bus operated by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The Cubans, hoping to win political asylum in the United States, commandeered the 100-foot barge early Thursday in the Cuban port of Cardenas, bound its five crewmen and headed for the Florida Keys, authorities said. Six of the refugees were said to have been armed.

The U.S. Coast Guard said its officers boarded the vessel Thursday and took the Fifth of December in tow to Miami.

The refugees, including 10 children, cheered the crew of the 40-foot Guard patrol boat that met them off Lower Matecumbe Key when they learned they would be taken to Miami.

No injuries were reported in the takeover of the barge, or when the Coast Guard took the vessel in tow.

The Coast Guard patrol boat intercepted the barge after receiving a message from the sailboat Thunder, in a race from St. Petersburg to Fort Lauderdale, saying it was being seized at gunpoint by a strange Cuban vessel.

The Cubans held the Thunder at gunpoint briefly, but "it turned out the Cubans were only looking for directions to Miami," said Ed Krejci, skipper of the patrol boat.

Few Problems For Greenville From Snow, Freezing Night

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The temperatures dipped into the teens last night as the Greenville area began to recover from the first snowfall of the year.

The 4.1 inches of snow that covered the city and county yesterday was followed by a low temperature of 16 degrees at 8 this morning, according to Greenville Utilities. Thursday the high temperature reached 32 and the low 20. Highs today are expected to be in the low 30's, with temperatures in the teens again tonight.

The snowfall caused few problems with utilities, reports Malcolm Green, assistant director of Greenville Utilities. No calls that were weather related had been received. According to Green, electric peaks were high but not as high as anticipated for this type of weather. "This was surprising to us," said Green.

He also said the peak demand period for this morning extended until 8:30, an hour later than usual, but he attributed this extension to the fact that schools and some businesses were opening an hour later.

Most of Greenville's streets were cleared this morning but still had icy spots. "The streets are well as you can expect them to be after this kind of snowfall," said Public Works Director Mayo Allen.

"We had a crew on duty all night clearing the streets. The city sent out the refuse trucks and all the other city equipment so we feel like the streets are in pretty good shape."

Allen reported that public works is putting sand on the slick spots this morning. "By another hour or two the icy places should loosen up," he explained. "By lunchtime it should break up."

According to Charles Clark of the Department of Transportation, all primary county roads were open and clear but have icy spots. The main secondary roads were also clear but contained slick places. The minor secondary roads, paved and unpaved remained hazardous. "It all depends on what the temperature does today," Clark said. "With this sunshine the roads should be in better shape."

Greenville elementary schools opened at 8:30 today but the high schools opened one hour later at 9:30. All students were to remain until the usual closing time this afternoon.

The county schools were not open to the students today but it was a workday for all other personnel except cafeteria workers. According to Superintendent Ott Alford, teachers, administration, and maintenance personnel came in at 9 a.m.

The 4.1 inches of snow translates to 45 inches of rain. The level of the Tar River this morning was 6.7 feet according to Greenville Utilities.

Final Arguments Heard Over Garwood's Fate

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Both sides rested and offered brief final arguments today as a hearing to determine whether there's enough evidence to court martial Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood hovered near an end.

BULLETIN
CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A military judge today recommended court martial for Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood on charges of desertion and collaboration with the enemy in Vietnam.

Garwood, 33, returned to the United States last March after nearly 14 years in Vietnam and he faces allegations of desertion and collaboration with the enemy.

Maj. T.B. Hamilton Jr., presiding officer at the hearing and the man who will recommend whether Garwood should be court-martialed, called a recess of "substantial length" after the final arguments. But Hamilton said earlier that he expected to announce his recommendation with little delay at the conclusion of the hearing.

Prosecutors, who had offered 10 witnesses who testified that Garwood helped guard American prisoners and claimed to be a North Vietnamese lieutenant, offered only a one-sentence final argument.

Maj. R.J. Marien, chief prosecutor, told Hamilton he believed the prosecution had presented "sufficient evidence...on each and every charge."

There are seven specific allegations against Garwood.

Capt. Joseph Composto, one of Garwood's lawyers, argued that insufficient evidence had been offered on each of the allegations. He argued that Garwood was a pawn of the communists in Vietnam and was not responsible for his own actions.

"The Viet Cong had total control of the lives of every prisoner in that camp," Composto said.

Garwood sat expressionless, as he has during most of the hearing, during the final arguments.

The defense had hoped to present a final witness today — a Vietnamese refugee who was held prisoner by the communists and who encountered Garwood in the prison camps.

But Dermot Foley, Garwood's civilian attorney, said today that prosecutors and defense attorneys had reached an impasse because Foley had insisted that the refugee not be publicly identified.

The refugee fears repercussions against relatives still living in Vietnam, Foley said.

Sinking Of Supertanker Under Inquiry; Possible Huge Fraud

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — An international investigation is under way to determine if the sinking of a 215,000-ton supertanker off West Africa was one of a growing number of maritime frauds that cost insurance companies at least $225 million a year.

The supertanker Salem went down Jan. 17 off Dakar, Senegal. Lloyd's of London, which underwrote most of the $80-million insurance on the vessel and its cargo of oil, said Thursday night, "Widespread inquiries are continuing in cooperation with the police."

Shell International Trading of London, which owned the oil aboard the Salem, applied earlier this week to Britain's director of public prosecutions for a police inquiry. A Scotland Yard spokesman said, "We are investigating certain United Kingdom aspects of the matter."

British press reports said the 10-year-old Salem recently was bought by Oxford Shipping Co., an American firm, for $24 million, and Lloyd's said the ship was insured for that amount.

Lloyd's said the Salem loaded 193,132 tons of crude oil at Kuwait on Dec. 9-10 for shipment to Northern Europe and the cargo was insured for $56,318,517.

The underwriter said that a Tunisian crewman aboard the vessel claimed the Salem was deliberately sunk after the bulk of its oil cargo was unloaded at Durban, South Africa, at the end of December.

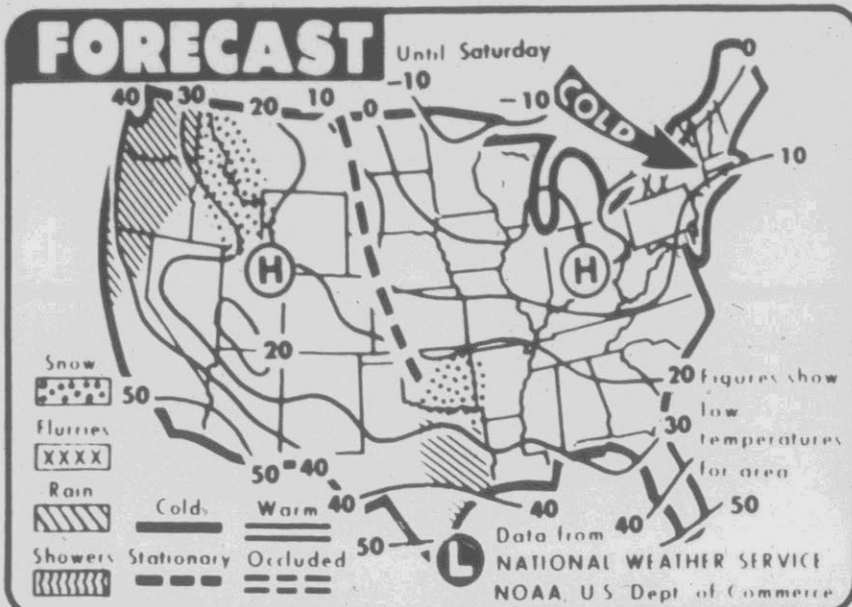

British press reports said the crewman alleged that the Salem's tanks were then filled with seawater so that the ship would appear to be fully loaded.

Suspicious about the tanker's sinking were raised when the oil slick found near the site of the Salem's disappearance appeared far smaller than expected from a cargo of that size and type. Also the ship reportedly took 30 hours to sink after a series of explosions, but the skipper of the British Trident, the ship that picked up the Salem's 25 crewmen, said the first distress call heard came 20 minutes after the stricken vessel had been sighted.

The Salem sank in one of the deepest trenches in the Atlantic Ocean, making it impossible for divers to go down to investigate.

Looking For The Groundhog's Shadow

To find out what the weather is going to be like on most days, you might look for a weather report in your daily newspaper. But tomorrow, in places like Sun Prairie, Wisconsin, and Punxsutawney, Pennsylvania, weather watchers will try a different method. According to a legend brought to this country by German and English immigrants, the groundhog crawls out of its burrow after a long winter sleep each February 2. If the animal sees its shadow, six more weeks of winter lie ahead. If it doesn't, warm spring weather will soon follow. The National Weather service has never been able to confirm the groundhog's predictions.

Life As It's Lived

The Biggest Problem Is Expectant Fathers

By GAIL MICHAELS

The biggest pain during pregnancy is the husband.

It's bad enough that I who get winded halfway down the basement steps, am expected to walk two miles every day.

It's bad enough that when I wear a white blouse, I look as if I should be moored in a yacht basin.

But it's unendurable to live under the scrutiny of a man who fancies himself the Ralph Nader of infant consumers. No coffee, tea, or candy can touch my lips without a stern lecture from the expectant father reinforced by an appropriate news clipping from the file on his desk.

No wonder the birth rate of the United States is falling, if there are as many of these zealots stalking the labor room as I think there are. Nine months of this kind of nagging makes a term in Central Prison look like a church retreat.

To be fair, I don't really think they understand what they're asking us to do. Oral gratification is the only pleasure left to a pregnant woman. She can't sleep, and shopping for clothes is no fun when the only style she can wear is Army Surplus. She can't breathe, either. But she can pack away food faster than a Del Monte canning machine. Under these conditions food overrides every other consideration including a strict moral upbringing. According to at least one member of my family, a pregnant woman will even steal Snickers from her own children.

Even more inhumane than telling a woman in this physical and mental state to curtail her intake of goodies is telling her to eat liver once a week. Now I like liver about as much as Beverly Sills likes laryngitis. But, naturally, when the doctor suggested that I add liver to my diet, Phillip pounced on the idea.

"Good," he said. "It's what I've said you needed all along. You can cook it tomorrow night."

"How can I cook anything that smells like that?" I moaned. "I'd rather live next door to a paper mill."

"It's not that bad. Just smother it in gravy and onions and ketchup..."

I gagged. "I think the whole idea is that once I eat it, I should keep it down."

He patted me on the shoulder. "You can keep it down for the baby's sake if not for your own."

I could barely stand to open the refrigerator the next day. On those occasions when I had to, there the liver would be, staring up at me with ancient malevolence, like a descendant of the Blob. I couldn't eat my lunch for thinking about what I'd have to eat for dinner. By that afternoon I was bursting into tears every time I passed through the kitchen.

"I can't do it!" I told Phillip. "You're going to have to cook it. Cook it the way you like best so that at least one of us can stand it."

"What are you talking about," he said. "I have no intention of eating that nasty stuff."

Back To 1960 Lunch Counter

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — In the midst of media hoopla, the four black men who launched the drive for integration of public accommodations went back to the scene of their first lunch counter sit-in today.

David Richmond, Franklin McCain, Joseph McNeil and Cecil Blair Jr. — Jibreel Khazan — couldn't get served at the F.W. Woolworth store lunch counter downtown on Feb. 1, 1960. Today they got breakfast on the house.

The first sit-in attracted virtually no attention. It wasn't until the following afternoon that the first newspaper account of what the four had done appeared and that was only after Ralph Johns, a local white businessman who now lives in California, called a local newspaper.

Johns had been urging students for many years to push for integration. Today he sat next to the four.

The four represented a stark contrast to the way they were back then — four 17- and 18-year-old freshmen at North Carolina A&T State College. Today three of the four wore well-tailored business suits and the fourth, Khazan, wore flowing white robes.

Their dress today attested to their success.

Two Collisions Here Thursday

An estimated $1,300 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police here yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 6:15 p.m. collision at the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and Hooker Road, involving cars driven by Clifford George Thomas of 403 Aztec Ln. and Debra Lee Skut of 300 North Oak St.

Police estimated damage from the mishap at $200 to the Thomas car and $600 to the Skut auto.

A car driven by George Richard Campbell of 405 Eastbrook Apts. and a truck driven by Sam Owens Bowers Jr. of Route 5, Greenville, collided about 11:58 a.m. on 14th Street, 100 feet West of the West Berkley Road intersection, causing $300 damage to the Campbell car and $200 damage to the truck.

Ask Tighter Licensing

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's requirements for registered and licensed practical nurses should be strengthened, according to the president of the N.C. Nurses Association.

The association president, Ernestine B. Small of Greensboro, said registered nurses should be required to obtain baccalaureate degrees. Licensed practical nurses, she said, should hold at least a two-year associate degree before they are accepted.

Mrs. Small, in comments to a meeting of the N.C. Hospital Association this week, said nursing started "as an apprenticeship type of program, but we now recognize the need for a different type of preparation."

"The responsibilities of the registered nurse require the best informed, best enlightened, best prepared person possible," she said.

To become registered, nurses now must pass a state licensing exam that requires either a two-to-three-year hospital diploma, a two-year associate degree or a three-to-four-year baccalaureate degree.

Practical nurses must complete a one-year program and pass a different licensing exam.

Any changes in the requirements should include a grandfather clause guaranteeing licensed nurses with lesser amounts of training the right to continue practicing, Mrs. Small said.

There are approximately 31,000 nurses licensed to practice in the state.

Any changes in the licensing requirements would have to be made by the General Assembly.

Doubt Shrimp Hurt By Cold

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The director of the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries said Thursday the cold North Carolina weather should not damage the 1980 shrimp crop.

Connell Purvis said the shrimp can stand short periods of extremely cold weather, but he warned that 10 to 15 days of freezing temperatures could hurt the larger shrimp.

"Over-winter studies show that larger individuals are more susceptible to cold," he said. "I don't know enough about the physiology of a shrimp to tell you why that is, but it is quite consistent that the larger individuals go first." Purvis said if that should happen, there would be early catches of small shrimp, with larger shrimp available later in the season.

"The water temperatures generally have been much higher this year than they were last year, and that's encouraging," he said.

Cold weather caused bad shrimp harvests in 1978 and 1979.

Dear Abby

Did Caresses Restore Tresses?

By Abigail Van Buren

1980 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I know how GOING BALD feels. I was 38 when my hair started coming out by the handfuls. I went to my doctor and he asked, "How is your sex life?" I told him I hadn't had any lately. (I had been married 20 years and had four kids.)

He said, "Either tell your husband to get busy, or find yourself a boyfriend." Well, I didn't know where to look for a boyfriend, so I prodded my husband, and said, "Doctor's orders!"

It worked like magic. Now my hair is so thick I have to have it thinned out regularly, but now my husband has a bad back.

ST. CHARLES, LA.

DEAR ABBY: Tell GOING BALD not to panic. I started to go bald, too. I was 27, and the more I worried about it the worse it got.

My internist sent me to a dermatologist. The dermatologist sent me to an endocrinologist who sent me to a psychiatrist!

I was told that my hair loss was caused by stress! And, of course, the more I worried about losing my hair, the more stressful I became, so it was a vicious circle.

My psychiatrist got to the root of the trouble (no pun intended) and once I faced my problems, my hair came back. (I had been denying them.)

GOING BALD could save a lot of time and money if she went straight to a psychiatrist. I was literally "tearing the hair out of my head" until I found peace of mind.

HEALTHY AND HAIRY IN PHILA—

DEAR ABBY: If GOING BALD doesn't have any signs of rash, or sores on her head, she should make a mixture of castor oil and sheep dung, and plaster it on her head every night. (Tell her to wear a shower cap so she won't mess up her pillow.)

I started losing my hair after the birth of my child. My grandmother gave me this remedy and it worked. I used it three times (after each baby), and it worked like a charm every time.

My husband didn't mind the smell at all. He said it reminded him of the days when he was a kid growing up on a farm, and it really turned him on.

LIL IN GREAT FALLS, MONT.

DEAR ABBY: No wonder there are so many women going bald today. They torture their hair with curlers, curling irons, blowers, and hours of sitting under a hot hair dryer. Nature never intended for hair to be abused in so many ways. I'm surprised we don't have more bald women.

What ever happened to days when women washed their hair with a pure castile soap, rinsed it with vinegar and towel dried it in the sun?

AUNT ELLA IN AUSTIN

DEAR ABBY: Loss of hair can be a symptom of a nutritional deficiency. My sister had that problem. She ran from doctor to doctor, and not until she went to a nutritionist did she discover the cause. The nutritionist told her she was eating all the wrong things.

When she got herself on a balanced diet, her hair started to grow in. She got careless about her diet once, and went back to her old eating habits—lots of sugar and very little fresh vegetables and fruits. Sure enough, her hair started falling out again. Then she paid attention to nature's warning and went back to a balanced diet. Now she has a beautiful head of thick hair again.

TRUE STORY, ENID, OKLA.

DEAR ABBY: I am a beauty operator, and when a customer's hair starts falling out, I send her to a dermatologist with a sample of everything I use on her hair and scalp. (Hair dyes, bleaches, conditioners, shampoos, waveset, etc.) Some dermatologists will send them to an allergist. After using the same products for years, some people will develop an allergy to them.

Make Personalized Boxes For Sweets For Sweeties

CHICAGO (AP) — For a new twist on an old favorite this Valentine's Day, say "I love you" with a customized candy box that will be cherished long after the goodies inside have been eaten, suggests the National Confectioners Association.

A novel, handmade gift box that reflects the recipient's personality and special interests is a token of affection that shows extra thought and effort went into its creation, the NCA points out.

Start with any size or shape container — DEPARTMENT STORE GIFT BOX, SHOE BOX, COFFEE CAN — and add some imaginative covering materials; then fill with appropriate confections.

Some sweet ideas for making one-of-a-kind candy boxes that speak volumes of love are offered by the NCA:

—For the business executive, a box covered in pinstripe fabric, complete with a paper necktie designed with cutout hearts, and inside, foil-wrapped chocolate "dollars."

—For the art deco fanatic, a box covered with silver foil papers, and diagonal stripes of gold paper layered in narrowing widths to hold flavored hard candies (since chocolate was hard to come by during the art deco-war years).

—For the Americana collector, a keepsake box covered with remnants of calico and a tack cotton lace border, containing old-fashioned pastilles, cinnamon sticks and other country-store treats.

—For the music lover, a box covered in sheet music—perhaps your loved one's favorite tune—and within, the musical notes of black licorice sticks and white and dark chocolate drops.

—For the sports fan, a box covered with the sports pages of a local newspaper or sports magazine, opening to caramel popcorn, chocolate-covered peanuts and raisins, and peanut nugget bars.

—For the disco freak, a box wrapped in gold or silver foil, with hearts made of glue and glitter, revealing red-hot cinnamon candies, foil-wrapped chocolate "kisses," and "records" to keep the beat—chocolate-covered coconut and peppermint patties.

—for the teen in your life, a

VARIED VALENTINES—To give a new look to the old-fashioned candy box on Valentine's Day, the National Confectioners Association suggests creating customized gifts, such as denim-covered coffee can, keepsake and deco boxes or tie-decorated box. Fill them with candies to suit the tone of the container and you have a thoughtful gift, inside and out.

Dr. Weir Gives Program

Dr. Donald Weir was speaker at the meeting of the Pilot Club of Greenville held Monday night. He showed slides and spoke on the Rehabilitation Center at Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Both occupational and physical therapy are offered at the center. The importance of proper exercise was stressed for stroke patients.

Mrs. Elizabeth Dupree was in charge of the initiation service for three new members, the Rev. Carol Goehring, Ms. Ann Hefelfinger and Ms. Rosemarie Priestley. Ms. Jane Parker transferred from another Pilot Club.

Mrs. Louise Downing, first vice president, conducted the meeting. Frances Johnson is Spoke of the Month. Margaret Register urged members to register and vote May 6. Curbside voting is available for persons confined to wheelchairs.

Letters of thanks were read from Pitt Memorial Gift Fund and the Department of Social Services.

The next meeting will be held Feb. 26.

Potato growing in the United States dates back to 1719 when stock brought from Ireland was grown successfully in Londonderry, N.H.

Amaranth was grown as a crop by the Aztec Indians in Mexico but was banned by the conquering Spanish because the Aztecs mixed its seeds with human sacrificial blood and ate it as a sacrament.

As a seasonal fresh vegetable it is sold in the fresh produce sections of many Chinatown markets.

Seeds for home gardeners are increasingly available from companies that feature oriental and other specialty vegetables. In seed catalogs amaranth usually is listed as Chinese spinach, hsiang ts'ai or himn choy.

Some forms of amaranth grow wild — pigweed, for instance, is widely found in the western United States.

Animal scientist Peter Cheeke said amaranth is so highly regarded as a multipurpose food that it was among only six selected when the National Science Foundation narrowed a list of 200 prospective new plants with good potential as a new agricultural crop.

Cheeke, research director of the OSU Rabbit Research Center, said amaranth could also be an excellent feed for rabbits.

It is a seedy, leafy plant that grows readily and competes well with weeds. Cheeke said there are probably 40 species, at least, grown today in such widely separated areas as Mexico, Africa and Asia.

He said its attractions include an extremely high protein and amino acid content.

"People use it as a seed crop," said Cheeke. "The protein quality is excellent compared to other seed crops."

He's looking for financial backing to test-feed rabbits on the plant.

He envisions a production system in which "humans would eat the seeds and rabbits would eat the foliage."

Cheeke says the most important and practical use would be in small backyard operations or on small farms in underdeveloped countries.

He added that farmers could easily grow amaranth — it requires little care to produce a high seed yield per acre.

Unlike other sources of rabbit feed, amaranth can be fed to rabbits without processing.

"Just pull it up and give it to them," Cheeke said.

Cheeke said amaranth must be cooked before it is palatable to people because the plant contains an organic acid that ties up calcium and tends to make the plant taste bitter.

But rabbits apparently don't object to the bitterness.

Logical To Spend Less

We submit today a thought for state legislators, the Department of Transportation, and Governor Jim Hunt.

Highway building, maintenance, etc. costs money which has heretofore largely come from gasoline taxes. We have seen in the past year that the biggest single deterrent to gasoline consumption has been the price — now running over a dollar per gallon and expected to climb during the year. Additional state gasoline taxes would make for still higher prices, and even less consumption (if human nature doesn't change in the meantime).

This conceivably could mean even less revenue for the DOT. It is possible to price a commodity out of the market, or almost so.

A fair example: the state Wildlife

Resources Commission raised license fees by 25 percent last year and sales of licenses declined noticeably. Some say as much as 20 percent in some N.C. counties. Instead of raising more revenue for its operations, the commission's collection rate actually declined. Executive Director Hazel wound up with a forced resignation a couple of weeks ago, and the commission is now talking token cuts in its licensing fees.

Linking the Wildlife Resources Commission and experience and talk of increased gasoline taxes may seem remote, but they have this in common: costs and buyer-resistance, and the expectable outcome.

Seems to us, the logical step in the midst of reduced income would be to spend less. Hasn't it occurred to Raleigh?

Spurs VEPCO Customers

Greenville Utilities customers have to swallow hard to take a 50 percent fuel charge increase being sent down by Virginia Electric and Power Co.

GUC Director Charles Horne called the charge outrageous and said the retail fuel charge in February will have to be set at $20 per 1,000 KWH.

It should spur Vepco customers in North Carolina to push harder for rate relief or for an alternate power source.

THIS AFTERNOON

Schoolbus Safety

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — "Remember, School Bus Safety Begins at Home". That's the message being pushed in TV spots promoted by the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction.

I was at home. My office is there.

The nerve-jangling screech of brakes and a dull thud jerked me away from the typewriter. I rushed to a front window.

A Wake County School Bus sat crosswise in the street, ugly black marks leading up to the tires. A junior high schooler was running away from the bus.

"Is there a wreck?" I shouted to my wife, who had reached a front window moments earlier.

"No they're just playing." The bus driver, a student, jumped from the bus, chasing the neighborhood kid and leaving the big, yellow bus with children aboard straddling the street. The motor was idling. No lights were flashing.

The driver and the youngster engaged in a little horseplay, then the driver jumped back on board and the bus roared away.

Again
The next afternoon, I decided to watch.

The bus came — slowly — down the narrow, curving street.

Without warning lights or slowing to a stop, the side door flew open and first one child, then another, jumped from the moving vehicle to the pavement and raced alongside.

The junior high schooler beat on the side of the moving bus with his bookbag while the driver swerved sharply toward him attempting to run him into a dead-end street. The bus stopped with a screech of brakes, then roared back into motion as the youngster ran on down the street, chased in this grisly game by the bus which was jerked sharply toward the curb several times before abandoning the fun and roaring away.

The next afternoon, the bus came careening down the street weaving back and forth. The game today appeared to be — don't let the kids off.

The bus screeched around the corner, rocking violently, and the rear emergency exit door was flung open. Out jumped children. The bus screeched to a halt and you could see little heads bouncing around inside. The rear door, for emergency use, was slammed and the bus roared away.

BILL NOBLITT

A friend who drives the morning carpool came by. She had been all but run down by the same bus in another part of the neighborhood. She was going to call and report the incident, and could she give our names as witnesses to other problems. Yes.

Now the kids, the driver, and even some parents are angry with us for meddling in their business.

Cause?
Meanwhile, the experts are still talking about what is causing so many schoolbus wrecks. The mechanics who work on the buses report numerous clues: speed governors bypassed so the vehicles will go faster, transmissions and clutches practically jerked out, brakes and tires badly abused.

Responsible drivers report that undisciplined youngsters on the buses distract their attention and refuse to obey. Many parents complain about the age of student drivers, the lack of experience.

School officials have the authority to demand discipline or let the students walk; school officials have the authority to discipline drivers even suspected of behavior which could lead to an accident; school officials have the authority to crack down on the driver of any bus which a mechanic says has been tampered with, or mistreated; school officials have the authority to find out what is really happening and to demand adult monitors and even adult drivers if that is what is needed.

Where does school bus safety begin? School officials in this issue, as in so many others, appear to wish the responsibility could be fixed at home instead of on their desks.

GREENVILLE — Judge F.M. Wooten would like to make a trade with someone. Last week he lost his pocket-book containing $29 and a few days later found a woman's wrist watch.

He left the watch at the Reflector office, where the owner can claim it upon proper identification. In the meantime, Judge Wooten would like for someone to show the same consideration by bringing in his pocket-book.

Strength For Today

FAITH ALL IMPORTANT
A great religious leader was once asked whether or not he felt that he was saved. "No," he replied. "I feel that I am damned, but the Bible tells me that I am saved, and I take my salvation on faith, regardless of how I feel."

This was sound judgment. As we look at our moral failures, we are filled with an infinite sense of discouragement. But the essence of the Christian gospel is that we are saved not because of our faith. Salvation is a gift of God. We may have it if we accept it.

It seems utterly fantastic that God should forgive us our sins and accept us as dutiful sons and daughters. But the sacrifice which Christ endured in our behalf is what makes the difference. For his sake God forgives our sins and restores our relationship with Himself.

The Great Silver Rush

WASHINGTON — "You better get over here right away," Lila Thompson said. "Henry's gone bananas."

When I got there, she pointed to the dining room. Henry was sitting on a chair by the sideboard with a shotgun in his lap.

"Don't come any further," he said, "or I'll blow a hole in your gizzard."

"Can I ask what you're doing?" I said.

"I'm protecting my silverware. Do you realize what silver is worth these days?"

"I understand it's doing very well," I told him. "But I didn't know you had that much."

"Wouldn't you like to know how much I've got. We're sitting on the Tower of London and no one is going to get near it."

Lila, who was standing behind me, said, "Ever since the price of silver went up to $50 an ounce, we've had to eat with our hands. He says no one in the family is worthy of using our knives and forks. All he does is sit there all day long weighing soup spoons."

"Henry," I said softly, "I know silver is starting to have some value, but you can't sit in the dining room for the rest of your life."

"What am I going to do? Go to work and have someone steal a fortune right under my nose?"

"If it's that valuable why don't you put it into a bank vault?"

"I don't trust banks," he said. "I want my silverware where I can count it every day."

I asked his wife if she had called her son Roger.

"Henry won't talk to Roger. We gave Roger a silver setting when he got married. A year later he split up with his wife and she took the wedding present. Henry said he doesn't want to have anything to do with a person who would let his wife walk off with the silverware just because his marriage didn't pan out."

"Why are you looking at that platter?" Henry said, lifting his shotgun.

"Is that sterling?" I asked him.

"Wouldn't you like to know," he said.

"It's sterling," Lila told me. "I tried to polish it the other day and he screamed for two hours. He wouldn't let me wash the cloth in case some silver might have rubbed off on it."

"I guess you have the silver fever, Henry," I told him. "Maybe it would be a good time to sell."

ART BUCHWALD

"At $50 an ounce? You must think I'm crazy. This is the time to buy."

Lila said, "He wants me to go around the neighborhood and ask if anyone wants to sell their silverware. I'd feel ridiculous."

"Well, there's nothing I can do. He'll come out of it eventually. Call me if he gets worse."

I left the house and rushed home.

My wife found me in the dining room putting all our silver into a pillowcase.

"What are you doing?" she wanted to know.

"I'm putting this stuff away for safety. It's too valuable to sit in a drawer."

"But what are we going to eat with?" she wanted to know.

"What's the matter?" I shouted at her, "haven't you ever heard of pizza?"

Other Editors Say Fuel Tax Hikes

(The Pilot, Southern Times)

With all the signs pointing toward a continuing decline in gasoline tax revenue we wonder why the State Board of Transportation continues to push ahead on the building of super highways.

The already approved construction of an extension of Interstate Highway 40 from Raleigh to Wilmington is a case in point.

The people whose homes and lands are in the path of the proposed super highway don't want it, and indeed, have loudly protested its construction. We suppose there are people in Raleigh and in Wilmington who would like to see the new highway built — but if gasoline is going to be in such short supply and so costly as to be prohibitive in use, who is going to use it?

There are many questions about highway construction which we do not think the Board of Transportation has considered. It is continuing to plan and build super highways when the prospect of greatly diminished highway travel is quite real. In the meantime, it is doing little to upgrade and improve existing highways.

North Carolina has a good network of roads, and their improvement and maintenance should have top priority.

The Raleigh to Wilmington superhighway will cost hundreds of millions of dollars, and we seriously doubt that it will serve the North Carolina public as well as the widening of N.C. 50 would do, and at far less the cost.

Some new thinking is needed among the highway planners and builders.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women are growing militant in their efforts to start businesses, claiming that too many loan officers discriminate against them for reasons that are emotional, not economic.

That message was heard loudly and often at the recent White House conference on small business.

The anger is founded on a set of imposing statistics. Women own less than 5 percent of U.S. businesses and earn a minuscule 0.3 percent of all gross receipts. But, they make up more than 50 percent of the workforce.

"Women face the same obstacles as all small business owners, only it's worse for us," says Betty Orrell, president of a Houston insurance company.

The young executive talks firmly and slowly. "It's amazing how many bankers, subconsciously at least, still say a woman's place is in the home."

At many hearings across the country, prior to the White House conference, women entrepreneurs testified repeatedly about being discriminated against by government and bank loan officers.

The Senate's select committee on small business agrees.

Women lack access to capital and management skills. "But, in addition, they face further barriers imposed by societal attitudes which

PRINCETON, N.J. — A majority of Americans (57 percent) approve of the way President Jimmy Carter is handling the situation in Afghanistan, following that country's invasion of the Soviet Union.

However, one-third of the public (32 percent) feels the Soviets took this action because U.S. foreign policy has not been tough enough while a majority of 53 percent believes the Soviet Union would have intervened in Afghanistan regardless of U.S. policy.

FEW FAVOR SENDING U.S. TROOPS

Four possible responses to the Soviet occupation were offered for a vote. Of these, military actions received comparatively little backing: Only 9 percent favored sending U.S. troops to assist the Afghans, while 21 percent felt the U.S. should send arms to Afghans resisting the Soviet invasion. In contrast, 52 percent of the public favored putting economic and diplomatic pressure on the Soviet Union. Only 5 percent said we should do nothing in response to the invasion.

Direct Soviet intervention in Afghanistan began on December 27, when Soviet forces overthrew and executed President Hafizullah Amin and replaced him with Babrak Karmal, regarded by Western observers as little more than a puppet of the Soviet Union. Since Karmal's takeover, the Soviets have built their military forces and are now thought to have between 80,000 and 100,000 troops in Afghanistan.

The use of Soviet troops in this volatile and strategically important region of Southwest Asia has greatly increased apprehension over Soviet expansionism in the Middle East and prompted President Carter to take retaliatory measures.

Carter's first moves against the Soviet Union received overwhelming support from the public. About three out of four Americans (76 percent) approved of Carter's decision to halt grain shipments to the Soviet Union, while only 13 percent disapproved of the embargo.

A proposal to move the 1980 Summer Olympics out of Moscow was favored by 72 percent of Americans, with only 17 percent opposing the relocation. According to an earlier survey, conducted for Newsweek by the Gallup Organization, 56 percent of the public would want the U.S. to boycott the Summer Olympic Games if they are not moved from Moscow.

To the editor:

There are serious problems within the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department due to grossly inappropriate management. As I understand the situation, the following facts are pertinent:

1. Due to the insistence of city management that the fire and rescue personnel function interchangeably, both divisions are rendering service far below capabilities. Rescue personnel who are trained in advanced life support are not using their skills because the firemen with whom they must work are not so trained.

2. Morale is low in both divisions of the department because neither rescue personnel nor firemen wish to function in the capacity of the other. We are losing vital members of the department because of the morale problem.

3. Greenville Volunteer Rescue Squad is in the process of terminating its organization because of the poorly qualified leadership now in the administration of the fire department. This will be a great loss to the community. We, the citizens of Greenville, have contributed thousands of dollars to the volunteer squad for the purchase of valuable equipment. We did so to help assure adequate community emergency rescue coverage. Now that service is being threatened.

I feel that every concerned citizen of Greenville should now consider the gravity of this community problem and the possible serious consequences of allowing it to continue. We need to separately and collectively take this matter to Mayor McGlohn for his immediate investigation and remedial action.

Militant In Business Efforts

persist in the business community," the panel report says.

"No legislation or executive order can reverse those attitudes," it adds.

Most businesses owned by women are very tiny, the government says, and that complicates the plight of these entrepreneurs.

While they need capital no more desperately than men, the dollar amount women seek often is below $25,000.

But in this period of high interest rates and rapid inflation, many banks are hesitant to make such small loans.

Where else can women go? The Small Business Administration has "targeted" $50 million for direct loans to businesswomen this fiscal year. But that target is more a statement of concern than a guarantee, the Senate committee says.

The SBA also has created a miniloan program for women who need less than $20,000. But it has been criticized as being too small and too slow.

Women were among the most organized groups at the White House conference. They caucused frequently, pressing a five-part platform.

Their key call was for equal access to commercial credit. It was the only strictly woman's proposal adopted as a top priority by the male-dominated conference.

Juliana Concludes A Long Reign

By ROBERT SWIFT
Associated Press Writer
AMSTERDAM, Netherlands

(AP) — The Dutch people greeted Queen Juliana's announcement of her abdication in April to bring Crown Princess Beatrix to the throne with general surprise, widespread approval and some sentiment that the monarchy should give way to a republic.

Typical of the contrasting feelings were the opinions of Myrna Tensen, 23, and of Pieter Overduin, 48.

"It took me by surprise," said she. "She is a nice person and good for Holland, but I think Beatrix will be too."

"It doesn't matter who is queen," said he. "Royalty always chooses its own path. I am strongly in favor of a republic."

In announcing Thursday that she would give up her throne April 30 on her 71st birthday, the white-haired, bespectacled queen followed the lead of her mother, Queen Wilhelmina, who abdicated in 1948 at the age of 68 while still in good health.

Queen Juliana also is believed well, but she noted during a brief broadcast from Soestdijk Palace 25 miles outside Amsterdam:

"As one gets older, one realizes sooner or later that one's powers decrease and that one cannot fulfill one's duties as before. There comes a moment that it would not be responsible to do so."

Juliana's 31-year reign began with Holland struggling to rebuild from the destruction of World War II and ends with the small north European country enjoying relative prosperity. During that time, the queen occasionally played a political role when the lack of a majority political party plunged the country into prolonged political crisis. In 1977, for instance, she reportedly held up the formation of a new government, insisting the Socialists be included in the coalition.

Although she remained popular throughout her reign, the royal family came under heavy fire on four occasions: when the queen turned to a faith healer for help with her partially blind youngest daughter in the 1950s; when another daughter, Princess Irene, converted to Roman Catholicism to marry a pretender to the Spanish throne; when Princess Beatrix married a German World War II veteran, and when the queen's husband, Prince Bernhard, was found to have solicited unsuccessfully a $4 million to $6 million in sales commissions from the Lockheed Aircraft Corp.

Beatrix's marriage in 1966 to Claus von Amsberg sparked demonstrations by persons with bitter memories of the Nazi occupation. But as Prince Claus he made himself a popular figure, and the birth of three sons to the couple, promising the country a king after three reigning queens, cemented their acceptance.

"Let Beatrix have a try," said Bob Groot, 37. "She will probably be sterner than her mother and is also a little bit more aggressive. Of course, she doesn't have too much power but she does have influence."

"I think that after nearly a century of queens, it would be nice to have a king," said Ruud Meyer, 40. "Maybe Beatrix might abdicate, too, and then her son would take over."

Decision Reflects A Shrinking Respect

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Because the last five years have shown a shrinking respect for religious leaders, a judge says, it's no longer constitutional to prohibit clergy-lawyers from wearing clerical attire before a courtroom jury.

To do so puts a "substantial burden" on the guaranteed free exercise of religion, ruled New York State Supreme Court Justice Hugh F. McShane in an unusual decision both analyzing trends of the times and up-setting a higher court's previous ruling.

It had held, only about four years ago, that a Roman Catholic priest-lawyer could not wear his clerical collar before a jury because that might influence sentiment in his favor. But the later judicial conclusion is that this is not so.

The outcome marked a victory, at least temporarily, by the Rev. Vincent La Rocca of Brooklyn, in his long fight for the right to wear clerical garb when defending poor clients as a lawyer for the Brooklyn Legal Aid Society.

"What the decision does is to underwrite the continuing validity and vitality of the first amendment," he says. That amendment is two-sided, prohibiting any law for an establishment of religion and also prohibiting any law to limit free exercise of religion.

Although some recent tendencies have been to ban signs of religion from the public sphere, under extensions of the no-establishment clause, McShane discerned a pendulum swing against religion and acted on behalf of the free-exercise clause.

The ruling still faces further challenge, however, as the office of Kings County (Brooklyn) District Attorney Eugene Gold is appealing it again.

McShane found that respect for the clergy has so declined in the past few years that to ignore evidence of it is to "deny a reality."

"While most unfortunate and depressing," he said, "the public's esteem of religious leaders of all faiths has been encroached by a growing cynicism which denigrates the absolutes of trust and respect formerly accorded the clergy."

On that premise, he brushed aside as outdated a 1976 decision by the state's highest judicial body, the New York Court of Appeals, holding that La Rocca could not wear clericals in trying a case before a jury as it might give him extra "respect and trust" or otherwise prejudice jurors.

In the more than four years since then, "the world has turned over many, many times," McShane ruled in taking a new tack.

Noting that La Rocca's religious commitments require him to wear clerical attire, the judge said that the earlier court ruling barring him from it while doing his work denies him equal protection of and violates his free exercise of religion.

After having lost several previous rounds restricting that right, La Rocca says the affirming of it was like a breath of fresh air.

Note-Burning This Sunday

The Greenville Church of God will celebrate having finished paying for a lot on which to construct a new church building during its worship service Sunday at 11 o'clock.

The burning of notes on the lot will be carried out and the Rev. Harold B. Thompson, Overseer of the State Church of God denomination will be on hand to bring the message.

According to the Rev. E. L. Newton, pastor of the church of approximately 200 members, there are plans to build on a lot on Memorial Drive adjacent to the Wachovia Computer Center "in the near future." The price of the lot was $126,000, he indicated.

The congregation hopes to sell its present church building, parsonage and related structures at the corner of Skinner and Spruce streets in preparation for the move, he said.

Church Service Plans Given

Services at Allen Chapel Church for tonight through the weekend have been announced. A board meeting will be held at 7:30 tonight, with all board members urged to be present.

At 7:30 Saturday night, there will be a Holy Communion Service.

Sunday services are: Sunday morning worship, 11 a.m., with the pastor, the senior choir and senior ushers in charge. Sunday afternoon services at 3 p.m. with Elder H. L. Hill and Union Grove Church Family.

The public is invited to attend these services.

Unafraid of the Future

This is our Ernie!

Ernie has no qualms about growing up in this complex world — he is unafraid of the future.

Know why?

Because he trusts US!

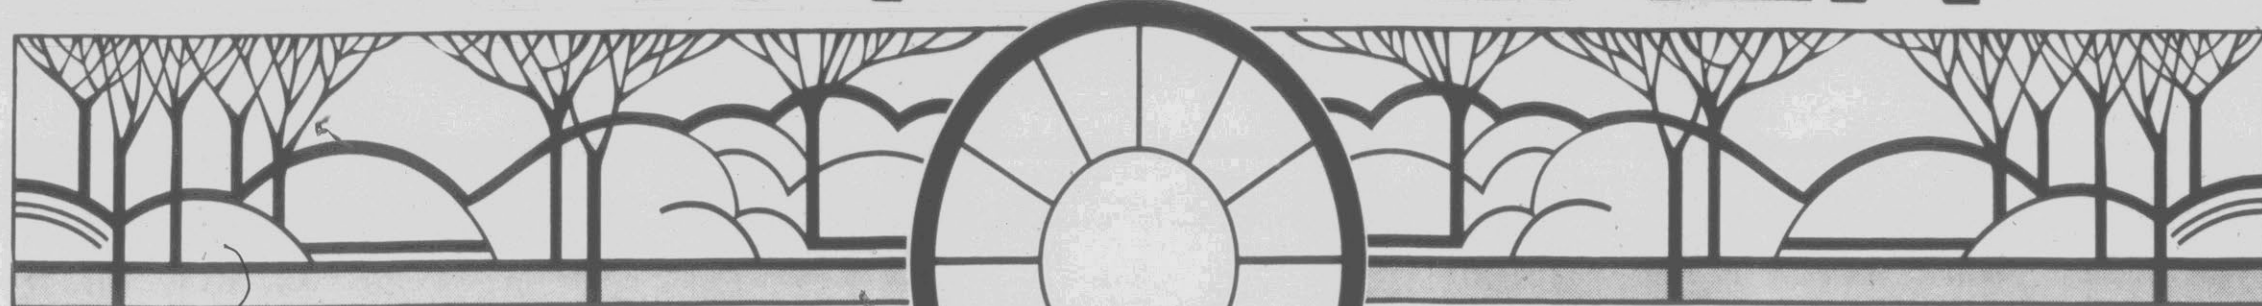

Ernie leaves to Jean and me — his parents — all those vital decisions that will have an indelible effect on his future.

That trust brings our family to church every Sunday. It has made religious faith an important part of our home life.

When you are responsible for the future of a child of God . . . you need HIS help!

Olympic Boycott Opposed By Young

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The United States should not boycott the 1980 Moscow Olympics, Andrew Young, former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, told an audience Thursday at North Carolina State University.

"The contact between the Americans and Soviet cultures could bring a new level of understanding," Young said.

Although he disagreed with President Carter's call for a boycott of the Olympics, Young supported the president's restraint in handling the situations in Iran and Afghanistan.

"I think Carter will go down in history as the president who realized that America has got to win its battles with the power of its values and ideals," Young said.

He said the United States has made more progress through diplomacy than with the threat of military force.

Young also said he favors reactivation of the draft to enhance American preparedness.

Young, 47, served as ambassador from 1976 until last year. Carter asked him to resign following disclosures that Young met secretly with representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Usually, we don't like to harp on fundamentals for fear that readers will accuse us of being patronizing. However, we have recently observed a series of errors by better-than-average players which compels us to assume that risk. The subject is covering an honor, and the old bridge adage, "Always cover an honor with an honor," has left a string of victims in its wake.

The four spade contract was reached after a normal auction. Scoffers will, no doubt, be amused by our endorsement of a contract that has no play, but we have never claimed perfection. Bridge is an art, not a science, and some things cannot be detected. Here

North's queen of diamonds is wasted and there is mirror distribution in the two hands. Give either North or South one more diamond and one fewer heart, and the auction would be praised for its accuracy.

In the actual play, however, South succeeded thanks to a major assist from the defense. The defenders took their three heart tricks and then shifted to a trump. Declarer cleared the remaining trump, ending in dummy, and then led the queen of clubs. Obsessed with "covering an honor," East inserted the king. Declarer won the ace and successfully finessed the nine of clubs, and the contract was home.

The play of the king of clubs by East was simply silly — on no lie of the cards could it gain. You should never cover an honor unless it can prove useful to do so. When touching honors are led from dummy, the practical rule is: "Don't cover the first honor that is led if it is just as easy to cover the next time." In other words, only cover the last of a sequence of honors.

Applying this principle to the present case, East should refrain from covering the queen of clubs when it is led — he must not cover the top of a sequence. But when the jack of clubs is led — the last card of the sequence — East covers, and the defenders must score a club for the setting trick.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The incredible faces of those GIs from three wars fascinated documentary filmmakers Andrew Solt and Malcolm Leo.

They're putting together a history of the entertainment of American troops overseas, with a primary focus on Bob Hope's Christmas specials. The show covers World War II, the Korean War and Vietnam.

"All those incredible faces over the years," said Leo. "Andrew and I have actually seen the faces of people we went to school with. Some of the editors have seen people they knew. One film technician actually found himself — holding up a sign in Vietnam. So you can imagine the people across the country and the faces they'll recognize."

"Bob Hope's Overseas Christmas Tours — Around the World with the Troops, 1941-1972," will air two Sundays on NBC. The first three-hour segment is this Sunday night, the second next week.

NBC had wanted for some time to do a retrospective of Hope's Christmas shows, but the entertainer said he would not take the project unless he was given enough time to do the material justice. NBC agreed, and is clearing its entire prime-time schedule for the two nights.

Hope, oddly enough, turned not to his usual producers but to the two documentary-makers.

Solt had worked on National Geographic and Jacques Cousteau specials and Leo on "Life Goes to the Movies" and "Life Goes to War." They have also done films on entertainment subjects and formed their partnership last year to do "Heroes of Rock 'n' Roll."

The two-part special isn't solely about Hope. Solt and Leo mined many sources for film on Al Jolson, Bing Crosby, Jack Benny, Carole Landis, Gary Cooper, Chico Marx, Irving Berlin, Jinx Falkenberg, John Wayne, Raymond Burr, Arthur Godfrey, Julie Andrews, Sammy Davis Jr., Hugh O'Brian, Danny Kaye, Connie Francis, Martha Raye, Johnny Grant, Gene Autry, Vikki Carr, Vicki Lawrence and many more.

They have pictures of Marilyn Monroe, when she did six shows a day for two weeks, wearing only a purple silk dress in the frigid cold of Korea. After each show, stagehands had to wrap the actress in blankets and serve her hot coffee to overcome her shivering.

They also found some rare film of Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks at a World War I bond rally.

It was during World War II and the Berlin Airlift that Hope established the procedures for his televised appearances overseas.

Hope began his Christmas trips in 1948 in Berlin, although he had been making USO trips since 1941. His last trip in 1972 took him to the Aleutians, Japan, Korea, Thailand, Vietnam, Guam and Diego Garcia.

Treated For Balcony Fall

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Raleigh woman continued Thursday to recuperate from a fall over a balcony rail at the Greensboro Coliseum.

Becky Williams, 22, fell about 15 feet to the coliseum floor during a Tuesday night performance of the rock group, The Eagles. She suffered a cracked pelvis, broken ankle, elbow and wrist.

But, according to Miss Williams, if every cloud has a silver lining, then her's came in the form of flowers and telephone calls from the Eagles. The group's lead guitarist, Joe Walsh, and others in the band have called her at Wake Medical Center to make plans to visit her, she said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has approved a compromise bill that would relax noise-control regulations for two-engine jet airplanes.

The measure, approved 285-122 on Thursday, also provides an additional $57 million for airport development, including $13 million for smaller general aviation airports that serve private planes. It appropriates $15 million for planning new noise-reduction projects.

Aging Billy Graham Expects Armageddon 'Soon'

By RICHARD BLYSTONE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Billy Graham says the years are catching up with him. And it could hardly happen at a worse time because "the world may face its Armageddon in this decade."

"I believe that we're in a great clash between good and evil in the world, the forces of good and the forces of the devil," said the 61-year-old evangelist.

Observers have noted a melodramatic in his old red-white-and-blue evangelism. Today's Graham is no salesman for the American Way of Life. And the star of countless 20th-century crusades is critical of the medieval wars from which he took the name.

But the magnetism has not lost its force. Ordered to stay in bed by day, Graham has emerged on the last three evenings to unexpectedly warm responses in the sophisticated university city.

Wednesday night he preached to a standing-room-only crowd of 2,000 at the Town Hall with the overflow watching on closed-circuit TV in five other auditoriums.

"People are living in a very insecure world, and they want security. That's one reason why they're turning to gold on a material level, but on the other hand people are turning to God on the spiritual level," said Graham.

Although booked solid for the next two years, "I'm going to have to take it a little easier," he said. "For the last six months I've been going a little bit too heavy. I've got to realize that I'm 61 and can't do what I did at 30."

"I used in the '50s to make the mistake of almost identifying the Kingdom of God with the American Way of Life. ... I felt that the American way of life of course was the best life in the whole world, and the whole world ought to adopt our way of life."

"I've come to see that other cultures have their own way of life that may be of just as great a value to them as our way of life to us."

"I think we consume too much, and I think we have become too materialistic. I think we have become sort of a spectator nation in which we watch everything on television, and we watch world events as though they were some sort of sporting event."

Those world events, he continued, add up to "a very dangerous period in our history."

"I think that the frightening arms race with its not only nuclear weapons but its chemical weapons and its accurate delivery systems, and some of the rhetoric that's now being used, is all very dangerous."

"I think that the world is heading right now toward Armageddon. And that unless there is a spiritual awakening made some tragic errors. ... In a sense he is pushing Iran back into a religious-dominated state. And we saw that in Europe in some countries in the Middle Ages. We saw it both in Protestantism and Catholicism."

"For example, the Crusaders, who felt that they were on a holy mission to go and kill the Muslims. And now of course we believe all that is wrong."

"I'm all for 'SALT 10,'" said Graham, "where we have a moratorium on all atomic and chemical weapons. In which we destroy them."

"But I'm not for unilateral disarmament, and I'm not a pacifist. And I believe there comes a time when a country like the United States, or like any other country, must defend itself."

Anti-Klan March Organizers Have Cleared Last Obstacle

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Organizers of Saturday's anti-Ku Klux Klan march and rally say they have purchased insurance to cover the Greensboro coliseum, apparently clearing the last hurdle in their efforts to rent the complex and obtain a parade permit from the city.

And, a federal judge refused to grant organizers' request for an injunction against the State Bureau of Investigation and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten.

Lynn Wells, a member of the February 2 Mobilization Committee, which is organizing the demonstration, said Thursday her group bought the insurance from an Atlanta company. She refused, however, to disclose the name of the firm until the policy has arrived in Greensboro.

City Manager Tom Osborne said he will grant the committee a parade permit as soon as it proves it had insurance and had completed arrangements for renting the coliseum.

A deadline for signing the coliseum rental contract was extended from noon Thursday until noon today to give the committee more time to find a company willing to sell it a policy.

Everett Arnold, an insurance advisor to both the city and Guilford County, said insurance firms were hesitant to cover the rally because of the short advance notice and because they preferred to sell long-term contracts to companies with an established track record.

The insurance is required to protect the city and the coliseum from claims for personal or property damage.

Meanwhile, U.S. District Judge Eugene Gordon Thursday refused to grant an injunction against the SBI and Edmisten, saying such action could unfairly damage the SBI.

The committee charged that the SBI pressured bus companies to deny groups transportation to the march. Gordon said the charge was based on speculation.

Greensboro officials say they are progressing with plans to provide security for the march. Osborne said a decision was to be made today on whether to call out the National Guard. "The odds are that we will ask for some guardsmen," Osborne said.

Gov. Jim Hunt Wednesday ordered 150 Highway Patrol troopers to Greensboro Saturday and alerted the Guard for possible weekend duty.

Hunt said Thursday that the guard's role will be to protect both the people along the march route and those participating in the march.

The Communist Workers Party, which was ousted from the march because it would not pledge to march unarmed, asked for a meeting today of the mobilization committee's national steering committee.

The Chicago chapter of the mobilization committee has condemned the CWP's expulsion and demanded the party's reinstatement, according to CWP leader Nelson Johnson.

Johnson said the CWP will join the march and work to ensure non-violence. But, he said, a pledge to march unarmed is "an open invitation for an attack."

Mental Health Ass'n Installs New Officers

Officers of the Mental Health Association in Pitt County were installed during the annual meeting of the Association last night at the Moose Lodge here.

The new officers are Dr. Frank Fuller, president; Theresa Shank, president-elect; Patsy Worthington, secretary;

Pam Kachmer, treasurer; Dr. Charles Mitchell, outgoing president, assistant treasurer; and Melba Howard, chapter delegate.

New Board of Directors members are Myriam Harris, Lauretta Lewis, Melvin McLawhorn, Penny Smith, Annie Laurie Asker, Beatrice Chauncey, Mary Fowler, Lucille Sledge, Don Collier, Nora Lee Craft, Dorothy Dail, Dan Earhardt, Christine Galloway, Sandra Hardison, Mary Harris, Bernard Haselrig, Blanche Kittrell, Evelyn Laupus, Charles R. Ross, and Don Watson.

Steve Catron of Winston-Salem, who rode his bicycle from his hometown to Mount Evans in Colorado last summer to raise money for the Mental Health Association, told the group that he feels that to aim for success is to be successful in itself. "Sometimes it's not what you accomplish, but the fact that you tried" that makes you feel good about yourself and your universe, he indicated. Catron, a sophomore at Wake Forest University, plans this coming summer to bike to Alaska to again raise money through pledges for the Mental Health Association.

Outgoing president Dr.

Charles Mitchell reported on the association's activities for 1979. He said membership is the best ever both in terms of number and in the quality of volunteerism from within the organization.

Volunteerism for the year was recognized by Terry Shank.

Operation Santa Claus chairmen were presented by the Rev. William Hadden. Hadden stated that Operation Santa Claus, 1979, surpassed the state-award-winning performance of the same campaign the previous year.

Dr. Mitchell presented the David W. Hardee Memorial Scholarship award to James T. Bryant. Bryant is a Rose High School, Greenville, graduate and a magna cum laude graduate of East Carolina University. He is pursuing a graduate degree in psychology at ECU now. The scholarship is $500 provided "a capable and worthy student who plans to enter the field of clinical psychology" each year by the local Mental Health Association.

Dr. Mitchell recognized Mary Warren Mann, Pat Evans and Patsy Worthington for their planning of the dinner meeting and expressed appreciation to the 75 members and guests who attended on such a snowy night.

Morgan Has Big Bankroll

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Democratic U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan has raised nearly $200,000 more in campaign contributions than his Republican challenger, John East, according to financial records on file with the state.

Morgan, who announced his candidacy last weekend, reported raising $226,438.92 through his campaign committee last year. East, who announced the same day, has reported raising $27,988.65.

The figures were part of campaign finance reports required under federal law and filed Thursday in Washington and with the state Board of Elections in Raleigh.

Morgan's re-election committee spent more than $75,000 and began 1990 with more than $152,000 in the bank.

East reported spending $20,000, and he began the year with slightly less than $8,000 in cash on hand but owing $4,600 in debts.

Morgan reported receiving more than $58,000 in itemized, individual contributions, and he received contributions of $250 or more from 34 political action committees.

East listed only five individual contributors who have contributed a total of $2,400, and his report listed more than $18,000 in un-itemized contributions. His contributions included a $1,000 donation from Blue Bell Inc. board chairman Ed Morris of Greensboro.

Ann May, spokesman for the East campaign, said the remaining contributions averaged $15.08 each and were too small to itemize. Federal law requires listing of contributions of more than $100.

East, who is running with the active backing of GOP Sen. Jesse Helms' political organization, has used Helms' out-of-state list of contributors to solicit money by mail.

Urges School Measles-Alert

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Frank Lewis, immunization coordinator for the N.C. Division of Health Services, urged school officials Thursday to begin a statewide "measles surveillance" program.

"The best thing the schools can do is begin checking students in a systematic way," Lewis said.

Lewis' comments came after reports of three suspected cases of red measles in Johnston County. Nineteen cases have been confirmed in Orange County.

Approximately 209 children were suspended from school in Johnston County for inadequate vaccination records.

No connection has been established between the cases in the two counties.

Cold Death

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Thursday night was filled with sleet, snow and freezing temperatures. But Joe Louis Bell had no where to go.

He tried to find shelter in an abandoned, unheated building across from Barber-Scotia College on Wednesday, but school employees ousted him.

Thursday, they found him dead, surrounded by wine and whisky bottles in the building.

"And that just about tells the story," Concord police detective David Taylor said.

Bell, about 45 years old, had a reputation as a hard worker when he was sober. But he had a six-page record of arrests by Concord police for drunkenness.

He worked for the City of Concord's engineering department until he was fired about three weeks ago.

"In the past, you could say he was a real good worker," Hubert Hartsell, Bell's former boss, said. "But it (his drinking) got so bad at the last it was almost impossible for me to work him."

Dr. Charles Carroll, the Cabarrus Hospital pathologist who performed an autopsy Thursday, said Bell apparently either froze to death or died of acute alcoholism.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today in a carryover of the selling that set in Thursday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 4.43 to 871.42 in the first half hour.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than a 2-1 margin in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said there was nothing of note in the economic news to explain the abrupt reversal of the market's January rally.

They said it seemed to stem mainly from an impulse to cash in on some of the market's recent gains, particularly in recently strong groups such as the oils and defense issues.

The January rally, which came on the heaviest volume in the market's history, put most major indicators at record highs earlier this week.

Today's early volume leaders included National Semiconductor, down 1/4 at 36 1/2; General Electric, off 1/4 at 54 1/2; and Schlumberger, unchanged at 105.

On Thursday the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up almost 10 points in early trading, was down 6.06 at 875.85 by the close.

Declines outnumbered advances by close to a 3-2 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 65.90 million shares, the fourth largest total on record.

The NYSE's composite index lost .53 to 65.61.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .95 at 275.42.

Dunn Files..

Areas in which Dunn feels that consideration should be given by board members are facilities such as an auditorium for the city school system, the need to look at physical education and athletic facilities in an effort to lessen dependence on East Carolina University for these programs, and resolving the merger question on the local level, and not by state and federal departments.

He is married to the former Pennie Johnston of Pactolus, and they are the parents of four children — all graduates of the city schools.

"With the experience I have had on the school board, I feel that I can fill a leadership role on the Board of Education," Dunn commented.

Praying For Ayatollah

Tens of thousands of Iranians marched today to the Tehran hospital where Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini is recuperating from a heart ailment and prayed in the street outside in an emotional celebration of the first anniversary of the revolutionary leader's triumphant return to Iran.

It was the largest gathering in the Iranian capital in weeks. Men and women in the throng wept openly during prayers of the 79-year-old Khomeini's health. Revolutionary guardsmen stood by with flowers in the barrels of their guns.

The huge crowd later assembled at Tehran University for a Moslem sabbath sermon urging that the unity of the Islamic revolution inspired by Khomeini not be forsaken.

Two miles away at the U.S. Embassy, some 50 Americans spent their 90th day in captivity.

Iran's ambassador to Canada, Mohammad Adeli, told reporters in Ottawa Thursday that agreement on release of the American hostages would be delayed because of anti-American feeling generated in Iran by the recent escape of six U.S. Embassy staff members, which he called a "flagrant violation of international convention."

Doubt Impact Of No-Fat Diet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite what health authorities have been saying, a consumer group maintains there's no firm evidence that eating a low-fat diet decreases the chance of heart disease.

The American Council on Science and Health said Thursday that scientific evidence is too sketchy to draw conclusions about the relationship of diet to heart disease. However, the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute immediately countered the council's contention, saying that there is enough data linking diet and heart disease to encourage people to modify their eating habits.

Tried Pressure Israeli Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration has told Congress it didn't meet all of Israel's $3.45 billion aid request this year partially because it wanted to prompt Israel to get its economic house in order.

"We looked at this with a great deal of agony, looking at Israel's needs which are genuine," Assistant Secretary of State Harold H. Saunders on Thursday told a House subcommittee on foreign affairs. He said the decision was made to limit Israel's request to $1.98 billion in fiscal 1981 also because of U.S. budget constraints.

Substitute For Heroin Is Found

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — An experimental pain reliever can dull drug addicts' desire for heroin and give them a feeling of well-being without the risk of further physical dependence researchers say.

The drug, called buprenorphine, is described as combining the best qualities of methadone and naltrexone, the most widely available heroin substitutes.

Nancy K. Mello and Jack H. Mendelson, a husband-and-wife team of physicians, tested the drug on seven heroin addicts at McLean Hospital in Belmont. A report on their work was published in the latest issue of the journal Science.

"I think that if these findings are substantiated, this would certainly be a very useful drug in the treatment of heroin dependence," Mendelson said in an interview.

Buprenorphine was developed four years ago in Great Britain but has not been cleared for general use. It is being tested on cancer patients as a non-narcotic pain killer that can be given in large doses.

In their experiment, the doctors found that addicts taking buprenorphine could not feel any pleasurable effects from heroin. Heroin was available to the seven addicts studied, but after an initial dose they usually refused more while receiving the new drug.

In these patients, buprenorphine reduced heroin use by 69 to 98 percent, the doctors reported.

Hid Truck With Police

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Where's a good place to hide a stolen flatbed truck? Try the police department parking lot.

Police said the truck was discovered in the parking lot Thursday, three days after an electric contractor reported it missing.

But it wasn't Phoenix's finest that made the discovery. "We called the police and asked if they found our truck," said Mike Beck, company manager. "They told us they didn't know a thing about it."

But Beck said one of his employees spotted the truck and was en route back to the station to claim it when police called to say they just recovered it.

"I told them, 'you didn't find anything, our people found it,'" Beck said.

Finalists

Two Greenville students have been chosen by the district I selection committee as two of six nominees for a Morehead Scholarship Award.

Eleanor Avery of D.H. Conley High School and Mark Earl Grossnickle of J.H. Rose High were selected from around 30 nominees. Avery, Grossnickle and the mother four nominees represent Nash, Pitt, Washington, Chowan, Martin, Pasquotank, Currituck and other eastern counties. The committee met in Williamston.

As finalists, the two students will be interviewed by the central selection committee in Chapel Hill during Feb. 23-26. This scholarship, which totals $3,250 per year is based on leadership, extra-curricular activities and participation in sports programs.

Avery is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Avery of Rt. 2, Greenville. Grossnickle is the son of Dr. and Mrs. William F. Grossnickle of 1105 Oakwood Drive in Greenville.

Deny Liability For A Fracture

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Joann Goode, 42, broke her right ankle last October when she visited the Jaycees' haunted house outside High Point.

Now the Cedar Square Jaycees are refusing to pay her $300 in medical expenses and $700 in lost wages.

Bill Davis, club president, was present when Mrs. Goode was hurt as she exited the house on a slide from the second floor. He does not dispute when or where the accident happened.

But Davis and the club's legal adviser, Richard Hovis, believe the club isn't liable. Hovis said those who entered the house could see the slide and an alternate exit was available. "I told her if we could do something for her, we would," Davis said. "Not because of the incident, but because of the organization we are."

Mrs. Goode said Thursday "I'm not out to get rich. I just want my money back." "I almost backed out when I came to that slide," she said. "But a lot of people were waiting behind me and I didn't know there was another way out. Also, I've always worried about people thinking I was a little old lady afraid to take chances."

Mrs. Goode was in a cast for a month and she missed two months of work in the nursery at the Wesleyan Children's Center.

She wrote the Jaycees about her injuries and the lost work. "There was a problem," Davis said, "if she was just trying to get something out of us or if she really needed the help. She was living really comfortably."

He said the Jaycees gave her $50 and "promised more. He said she returned it, saying the amount was an insult and she wanted $300.

"I told her if she sent it back it would be a signal she didn't appreciate our help," Davis said. Mrs. Goode said an attorney told her suing the club would be a waste of money but she said, "Because of the hassle and the way they treated me, I'd ask for $1,000."

Williams Scores

Clemson Embarrasses Georgia Tech, 76-52

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — It was not a good night for Georgia Tech as the cellar-dwellers of the Atlantic Coast Conference chalked up yet another defeat.

The Yellow Jackets bowed Thursday to 16th-ranked Clemson, with an embarrassing 76-52 loss in a regionally-televized game at Littlejohn Coliseum in Clemson.

No other ACC teams played Thursday night.

It was the worst defeat of the season for Georgia Tech, which has yet to win an ACC game in its first year in the league. Tech lost to Clemson by only eight points in a game played on the Yellow Jackets' home court earlier this month.

Clemson, which has not lost a home game this season, can set a school record for consecutive homecourt victories if it wins over Wake Forest next Wednesday night.

A sorely disappointed Tech Coach Dwayne Morrison said after the game that "Clemson was three times as aggressive tonight as they were at our place. We let it get to us."

Tech committed only six turnovers the last time it played Clemson. But, on Thursday, the Yellowjackets were rattled into 20 mistakes.

Clemson's senior guard Billy Williams scored 22 points to lead the Tigers to the win. Forward Larry Nance netted 11 points.

Among the three opponents the Pirates will face will be William & Mary. Steers joined the ECU staff following a tour of duty as the Indian head coach. Appalachian State and host Virginia Tech round out the field.

"It's kind of tough to go back and face your old team," Steers said. "It's more so in a sport like wrestling than one like football. You get very close to your wrestlers and it's difficult to go out there and pull for someone else to beat them. It's almost like family."

At the same time, Steers acknowledges that it gives him some advantage in knowing what the Indian wrestlers do best. But he feels that the Indians will be up to beat their old coach, too.

The Pirates downed Appalachian State in a quad meet held last week in Boone, but Steers noted that the Pirates got a lot of breaks in that match. "This weekend could be entirely different," he feels that the Pirates could be the underdogs in all three matches.

East Carolina is currently 4-2 in dual competition.

East Carolina University's Pirates take to the road again for a long trip up north. The Pirates play the University of Detroit in the Motor City Saturday at 8 p.m.

Detroit brings an 8-9 record into the game, having won their last two encounters. They gained a 95-79 win over Xavier of Ohio on Monday, and took Eastern Michigan at Detroit, 68-63, on Wednesday.

"Detroit has played one of the toughest schedules in the country," ECU coach Dave Odom said. Among their opponents have been Oregon, Iowa, Michigan and Michigan State, North Carolina, Illinois State (a future ECU foe) and Syracuse. The Titans fell to the fourth-ranked Orangemen, 89-83 in the game played in New York.

"I think they've been through the teeth of their schedule now. I know that they'll be looking at this week as one in which they can win three games," Odom said. "I'm sure they consider us easy pickings."

Odom added that Detroit's starting five will be the second or third best, behind Duke and N.C. State, that the Pirates will face this year.

"They are a lot like Duke in that they have an outstanding center, two fine forwards, an excellent point guard and a fine second guard. They're also like Duke in that they don't have great depth. Most of their people have been playing 30 minutes or more a game."

That, Odom added, could be one of the few pluses the Pirates would appear to have. "It would really help if we could get them into foul trouble, so we're going to have to work on trying to get the ball inside."

Defensively, Odom hinted that the Pirates might change their usual game plan and use a zone defense. "While we've used man-to-man defense most of the time, we've found that they've been especially good against it. I know they scouted us Saturday when we played great man defense against Wilmington, so they'll probably be looking for us to play man."

The Titans are led by center Earl Cureton, who is leading a contingent of four players in double figures with an 18.1 average. Guard William McCormick is hitting 13.9, while forward Jerry Davis has a 13.5

average. Guard David Niles is hitting 10.5, while the other forward Joe Kopicki is hitting 9.1.

"Cureton is a great athlete and will be a great forward in the NBA," Odom said. "He has developed his skills of late to go with his outstanding running and jumping abilities."

Odom isn't counting the Pirates out of the game. "I think we'll play well. I'm anxious too to see how we are going to play on the road. If we can hit our free throws and don't let them dominate the boards and play good defense, we could surprise someone."

The Pirates are led by George Maynor with a 15.0 average, while Herb Krusen is hitting 12.7 and Herb Gray, 10.9.

Krusen, with 991 points in his career, will be seeking to pass the 1,000 point mark in the game, becoming the 14th to do so.

Following the game, the Pirates travel to the University of South Carolina on Thursday, then return home next Saturday night to face strong Illinois State.

Pirates Face Titans

Lady Pirates Hosting Strong Panther Five

There seems to be no rest for the East Carolina Lady Pirates. After facing Old Dominion, South Carolina and N.C. State, three of the nation's top-ranked teams, the Pirates again face a tough team as they entertain High Point Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

High Point comes into the contest with a 13-3 record, having beaten Guilford, 88-50, on Tuesday, and Wake Forest, 100-48, last night.

The Lady Panthers are a member of the Division II ranks, but ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi says that they are as good or better than many Division I members across the country.

"They are going to be very tough," Andruzzi said. "She's a great player. They have been the top Division II team in the state for several years and we're going to have our hands full with them."

Blanchard comes into the game with a 23.4 point average, and the 6-1 center is pulling down 12.0 rebounds per game. Teresa Holt is the only other Panther in double figures, hitting at a 12.5 average.

"We're going to have to be in good condition for this game," Andruzzi said. "They are big, they like to run with the ball and they play well defensively."

East Carolina's scoring is led by Rosie Thompson with a 19.0 average, while Kathy Riley is hitting 17.6 and Lydia Rountree, 13.0.

The Pirates bring a 15-6 record into the game.

Thompson, despite a recent dropoff, continues to lead the Division I NCAA statistics in scoring with the 19.0 mark. Riley at 17.6 is second in the state, while Rountree is sixth at 13.0. Laurie Sikes is 20th at 8.2, while Mary Denkler is 22nd at 7.3. Marcia Girven ranks 33rd at 5.6.

Thompson has dropped to fourth in rebounding with a 9.8 average, while Girven is sixth at 8.3. Rountree stands 11th at 7.1, while Denkler is 17th at 6.1.

Sikes leads the state in assists, with a 7.8 average. Thompson is the top shooter from the floor with a .582 average. Riley ranks ninth at .470.

Riley is seventh in free throw shooting, at .671 average.

Among the five schools in the Division I rankings, the Pirates are third, 75.5, in offense, third in defense, 66.2; fourth in field goal shooting, .416; fourth in free throw shooting, .620; second in rebounding, 48.2; and third in scoring margin, 9.3.

Following the game, the Pirates keep things tough, traveling to North Carolina on Tuesday to face the Tar Heels.

Swimmers At Duke

East Carolina's men and women travel to Duke University Saturday for a dual swimming meet against the Blue Devils. The meet is scheduled to begin at 1 p.m.

"It should be a pretty good meet," Coach Ray Scharf of East Carolina said. "Duke's men are not on the same level as N.C. State or Carolina, but they are good and it should be an interesting matchup that could go either way."

"Their women also are not as strong as State or Carolina, but they beat us last year and have some good individuals, so they'll probably be favored."

The Pirates are coming off a loss to the strong, nationally ranked N.C. State teams, and will be playing host to equally strong North Carolina on Monday at 7 p.m. in Minges Natatorium.

"I hope we won't have a let-down from the State meet, and I hope, too, that we won't be looking ahead to Carolina," Scharf said. "We're trying to guard against it."

The Pirates are 5-1 (men) and 2-3 (women).

Several Postponed

As far as could be determined this morning, only three area athletic events have been postponed for tonight.

Farmville Central's wrestling match at D.H. Conley has been rescheduled for Saturday at 3 p.m.

Ayden-Grifton's basketball game at Southern Nash will be played on Monday.

Greenville Christian's basketball game with Mt. Calvary was postponed, but no date had been set this morning.

Decisions on playing other games were to be made later in the day.

Norton Makes Easy Transition

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ken Norton knew when it was time to quit the ring. The veteran of 11 years of professional fighting, once the World Boxing Association's heavyweight champion, also was wise enough to invest a large chunk of the money he made from the sport.

So when he took off his gloves for good after Earnie Shavers knocked him out in the first round last March, Norton was able to make a smooth transition to the world of business and investments.

"I could have hung around and gotten hurt, but that wouldn't have been right for me or for the image of boxing. I made the right choice at the right time," said the 34-year-old Norton, an ex-Marine who broke Muhammad Ali's jaw in one non-title bout but lost twice in rematches.

"The only time I get the itch," he added, "is when I see a fight like the one in South Africa (the John Tate-Gerrie Coetzee World Boxing Association heavyweight bout). Any retired fighter who watched that had to wonder if he'd gotten out too soon."

Such an occasional thought of a comeback aside, Norton is doing just fine in retirement. Of the $10 million or so he earned in the ring, he said, he followed a philosophy of "investing 50 percent, banking 25 and blowing the remainder."

Jack Cohen, a friend of Norton's late manager Bob Biron and a man who is associated with Norton in many of his investments, said the former boxer is definitely a millionaire.

Ali Attempts To Sway African Teams

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

Former world heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali, at the urging of President Carter, prepared to visit five African countries to seek support for the American stance on the 1980 Summer Olympics.

Ali, in New Delhi Thursday, cancelled the last half of a 12-day tour of India, saying Carter had asked him to tour Africa and explain the U.S. position on the Moscow Games. Carter has called for the movement, postponement or cancellation of the Games if Soviet troops are not withdrawn from Afghanistan by Feb. 20.

"I'm sorry my tour of India had to be cancelled, but the president of the United States comes first," said Ali, adding he was "honored to be considered for this mission."

A U.S. embassy source in New Delhi said Ali would visit Tanzania, Nigeria, Kenya, Liberia and Senegal. The retired champ and eight members of his group were to leave Sunday for Africa, according to Arthur Leikowitz, a spokesman at the American embassy in New Dehli.

"Multitudes know me — in China, Russia, India and Africa," said Ali. "In India, there's turmoil on the streets; when I go outside, traffic stops."

"Russia has got to be stopped...in whatever way," said Ali, who won the heavyweight gold medal at the 1960 Summer Games in Rome. "If Russia's allowed to keep taking territory, she soon will be taking the oilfields (south of Afghanistan)... Then you're forced to go in militarily."

The Soviet news agency Tass, in a Thursday dispatch from Moscow, said, "The U.S.S.R.

Olympic Committee expresses confidence that no forces will be able to undermine the world Olympic movement." The dispatch called on all national Olympic committees and sports federations to "give a resolute rebuff to the sponsors of the present hostile campaign."

Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser gave his own rebuff to that, calling for an "effective boycott" of the Moscow Games because "this is not the appropriate time for the athletes of the free world, of the independent world" to attend an Olympics in Moscow.

At least 11 Western European Olympic Committees were to meet in Frankfurt, West Germany today to discuss a coordinated response to the prospective boycott. Spokesman Ulrich Pabst said, however, final decisions would not be made at the Frankfurt meeting.

"On the boycott question, the national Olympic committees of each country have the right to decide for themselves," said Pabst.

The conference was to be moderated by Willi Daume, president of the West German Olympic Committee and a member of the International Olympic Committee. Participation was limited to national Olympic Committee presidents and one other delegate per country.

The group was to hear reports on boycott sentiment in each country.

Meanwhile, an emergency Olympic meeting of 23 European sports ministers was postponed because too many officials were reluctant to meet. A committee official said the meeting is unlikely to be held until after the Winter Games at Lake Placid, N.Y. later this month.

In related developments: —A Yugoslavian Olympic official reiterated the intention of his nation's committee to send athletes to Moscow.

—France, originally one of the staunchest opponents to a boycott, now is in a national debate on the issue. Jean-Pierre Soisson, French minister of sport, said France would not participate if the Games evolved into a meeting of Communist countries and their sympathizers.

—In Philadelphia, the president of the Amateur Athletic Union said if other countries "don't jump in" on a prospective boycott, the United States would suffer "a tremendous loss in world propaganda and world opinion."

AAU President Robert Helmick told a news conference a boycott could mean the death of the Games.

"Who would be willing to bid on the Games again? Where would a television network ever be able to find an insurer to insure the Olympic Games again?"

Helmick also said "it's naive" to think that by shifting the Games to a permanent site the Olympics would be detached from politics or the threat of boycott.

—Sprinter Harvey Glance, in Toronto for an international track and field meet tonight, said "I'm still training as though I were going to the Olympics," but added he would boycott if that was his nation's wish.

"We have to realize that those guys who make the decisions are doing the best they can," he said. "Really, the chance of going is very slim right now."

—Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker offered to sponsor legislation to provide financial support for a Free World Olympics, to be held in Puerto Rico, if the U.S. Olympic Committee deems that commensurate an appropriate site.

—Kenneth Hahn, a county supervisor in Los Angeles, suggested a "Spartan Games" be held in that California city in 1980.

—USOC Vice President Jack Kelly warned in Philadelphia that Los Angeles' plans to hold the 1984 Summer Games would be jeopardized if the U.S. holds an alternate international competition during the Moscow Games.

Such a competition, said Kelly, "Would be in strict violation of all kinds of Olympic regulations which could jeopardize our holding the Los Angeles Games in 1984."

Jack Happy With 1st Day

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif.

(AP) — Jack Nicklaus had his game back in gear, Tom Watson had it in position and Tom Kite and Jerry Pate had a share of the lead.

"Nice and encouraging," Nicklaus said after shooting a 69 in the first round of the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Thursday, the first round of an attempted comeback from the most dismal year of his spectacular career. "Considering it's my first competitive round in quite a while (since last August), I'm very happy with it."

Watson, Player of the Year for the past three seasons and heir to Nicklaus' long-time role as golf's dominant force, shot a 68 on a day when the absence of winds robbed the three Monterey Peninsula courses of much of their defenses.

"The course probably played easier than I've ever seen it," Watson said. "You have to shoot under par at Cypress Point (where he and Nicklaus played). Then, if you can shoot 74 or better at Spyglass, you have a chance to win the golf tournament."

Pate and Kite had 66s and David Edwards shot a 67, all at Cypress Point.

But Kite and Watson pointed to PGA champion David Graham as the actual tournament leader.

He had a 68 at Spyglass Hill, by far the more difficult of the three courses. The pros and their amateur partners — many of them show business celebrities — play one round on each layout before the field is cut for the final round at Pebble Beach.

Also with 68s were John Mahaffey and Jim Nelford, both of whom played at Pebble Beach, and Watson and Gene Littler, both at Cypress.

Arnold Palmer also played at Cypress and shot a 75. His amateur partner, former President Gerald Ford, helped the two-man team score by six shots.

Kite played the back side in 30, including birdies on three of the last four holes.

"You just hope to play those holes even par," said Kite, who ranks as one of the game's more consistent performers. "Making three birdies is like beating the field maybe 4-5 shots. Those last four holes just made my whole round."

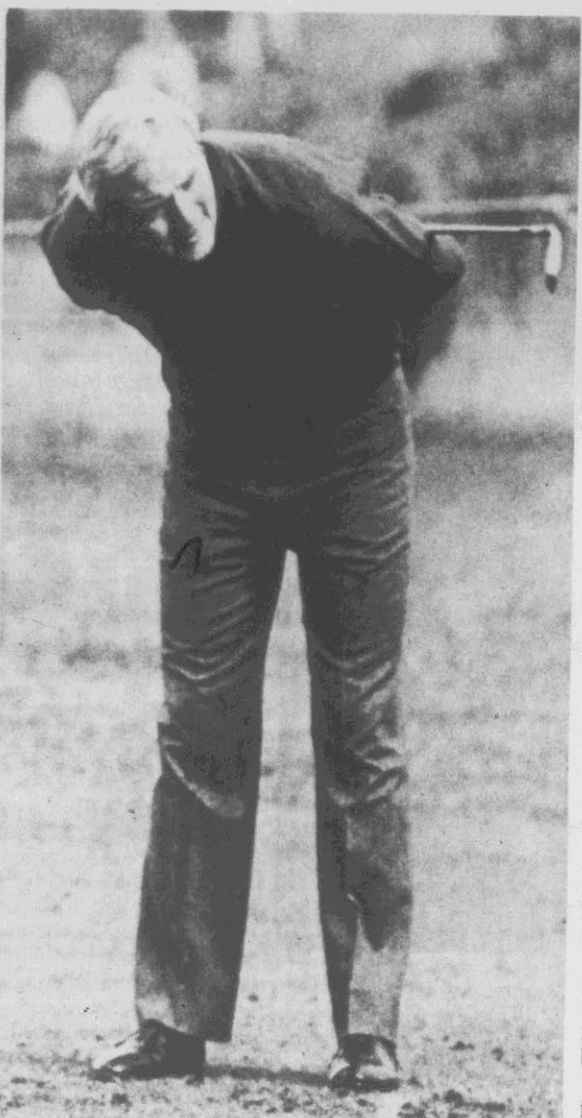

Nicklaus birdied five times in one stretch of six holes, drifted back to two under par, then closed with a 30-foot birdie putt.

"I had a good opportunity to shoot a very low score, but let it get away," he said. "Overall, though, I played very well."

Zanon Given Little Chance

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Italy's Lorenzo Zanon rates a very small chance of upsetting champion Larry Holmes in their World Boxing Council heavyweight title bout Sunday, but he's done some things to improve the image he had of being a punching bag.

Zanon in 1977 was knocked out by Ken Norton in five rounds and by Jerry Quarry in nine rounds, and then laid off boxing an entire year.

He went into a physical training program, running and doing isometric exercises to build up his physical conditioning and recuperative powers.

Under the tutelage of Ruti Del Vecchio, a conditioner born in Philadelphia who moved to Milan, Italy, Zanon worked to become more flexible, more resistant and to be able to use his brain constantly in boxing bouts.

Since Dec. 26, 1978 he has won five bouts and drawn in one and became the European heavyweight champion, a title which was stripped from him because he is in the United States for his world title chance.

Zanon stood next to a statue of former champion Joe Louis and said he became a boxer only because it was the only sport available in Lentate, a village suburb of Milan.

"I wanted to try boxing, judo or karate but the gym only had boxing," he said.

Zanon stands 6-foot-3 and weighs 210, and some call him the shrimp of the family.

His father, a steelworker, stands 6-6 and weighs 245 and both his mother and sister are 6-1.

Observers think Zanon will be lucky to last through five rounds against the quick-hitting champion, but his manager, Umberto Branchini, thinks otherwise, saying "he likes the fight but not the training. He likes to box technically but not slug it out."

Zanon will earn $125,000 for his 15-round challenge against Holmes at the Sports Pavilion of Caesars Palace on national television.

Holmes reportedly will receive about $600,000 although there is some debate whether promoter Don King has put up that much in cash.

Zanon believes he has quick hands and will be able to out-box the champion, whose left jab is considered one of the best ever in boxing. Del Vecchio's program has been to enlarge Zanon's neck to absorb the jabs, a similar strategy used by former champion Ken Norton before he lost the WBC crown to Holmes.

The biggest purse for Zanon previously was $50,000 for the Norton fight.

Zanon is 28, two years younger than Holmes, and has won 25 of his 31 fights but scored only nine knockouts. He has lost four times and has two draws on his record.

He is the first Italian-born heavyweight to fight for a world championship in 47 years, since Primo Carnera won the title in 1933 by stopping Jack Sharkey in six rounds at Long Island, N.Y.

Three Ranked Teams Upset

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

This may be an off-year for the UCLA Bruins, but they still pack a pretty good punch.

They proved that by flooring second-ranked Oregon State 93-67 Thursday night.

"If we play like this, we can play with anybody," said UCLA Coach Larry Brown, whose Bruins are off to a relatively slow start this season with a mediocre 11-7 record, including 6-4 in the Pacific-10 Conference and have dropped completely out of their accustomed place in the Top Twenty.

Mike Sanders had a team-high 19 points for the Bruins, who led the Beavers by as much as 26 points at one stage. "Our pressure defense was the key," said UCLA's Kiki Vandeweghe. "It kept building and building and forced them into errors."

The Beavers were one of three Top Twenty teams upset Thursday night, as sixth-ranked Ohio State lost to Michigan State 74-54 and No. 15 Weber State dropped a 51-45 decision to Idaho.

Jay Vincent scored a game-high 21 points and grabbed 14 rebounds to lead the Spartans to their runaway Big Ten victory over the Buckeyes. Ohio State guard Kelvin Ransey finished with only six points, ending a streak of 80 games in which he had scored in double figures.

"I can't think of one Buckeye that played well," said Ohio State Coach Eldon Miller.

"Michigan State beat us any way you could get beat."

Don Newman scored 17 points to lead Idaho past Weber State, breaking the Wildcats' 18-game winning streak. The defeat was only the second of the season in 20 games for Weber State.

Elsewhere in college basketball: No. 7 Louisville defeated Tulane 64-60; No. 16 Clemson routed Georgia Tech 76-52; No. 17 Purdue stopped Iowa 70-56; No. 18 Indiana turned back Illinois 60-54 and No. 19 Brigham Young beat Texas-El Paso 89-81.

Darrell Griffith led a balanced attack with 17 points as Louisville defeated Tulane. The victory was the 17th in 19 games for the Cardinals and their sixth without a defeat in the Metro Conference.

Rodney McCray added 13 points for Louisville, Wiley Brown had 12 and Derrick Smith scored 10 and led the Cardinals in rebounding with nine.

"We won on the scoreboard but we sure didn't play well," noted Louisville Coach Denny Crum. "There were just a lot of little things that seemed to slip." He said there were some poor practices earlier in the week and pointed out that the Cardinals "were due a game like that."

Crum said his team didn't "come into this game with an honest respect for Tulane and anytime you play anybody today without honest respect for them, you're subject to getting beat."

Billy Williams scored 22 points to lead Clemson over Georgia Tech. The 24-point margin was the worst defeat of the season for the Yellow Jackets, yet to win an Atlantic Coast Conference game in 10 tries in their first season in the league.

Joe Barry Carroll scored 17 points and Keith Edmonson added 16 to lead Purdue over Iowa. The Boilermakers broke the game open in the final five minutes after taking the lead for good, 43-42, on a Mike Searce jump shot with 11:16 to play.

"Their defense was exceptional," said Iowa Coach Lute Olsen of Purdue. "They kept the pressure on us and really made us work for everything we got."

Purdue outrebounded the Hawkeyes, 45-38, with Arnette Hallman pulling down 13 rebounds and Carroll grabbing nine.

Butch Carter scored 17 points to lead Indiana over Illinois. The Hoosiers trailed by five points with about eight minutes left before holding the Illini scoreless for a seven-minute period.

"I wish I could tell you I made an adjustment at the half, but I didn't," said Indiana Coach Bobby Knight, whose team trailed 33-24 at intermission. "All we had to do was come out and play the second half. Our kids deserved all the credit for the second half. They got themselves straightened out."

The Hoosiers, who committed 10 errors in the first 15 minutes of the game, played "as good a second half as we've ever had," Knight said. "We had a lot better opportunity to play our game and score in the second half than in the first, and that was the difference."

Danny Ainge scored 25 points and Alan Taylor added 20 to lead Brigham Young past Texas-El Paso. Ainge broke BYU's season scoring record of 1,512 set in 1973 by Kresimir Cosic. Ainge finished the night with 1,523 points.

In other action, Ronnie Valentine scored a game-high 20 points as Old Dominion beat Georgia State 71-64; Dennis Pagan's 22 points boosted Austin Peay to a 96-78 decision over Tennessee Tech; Bradley defeated Southern Illinois 50-48 behind Mitchell Anderson's 18 points; Kurt Numphus and Alton Lister each scored 15 points to lead Arizona State over California 69-58; Craig McCormick's 29 points powered Western Kentucky over Morehead 86-79 and Lloyd Terry collected 19 points and 19 rebounds to pace New Orleans past South Florida 77-74.

Kevin McKenna and Jim Honz combined for 14 of Creighton's 16 points early in the second half to pace the Bluejays over Tulsa 73-55; Doug Arnold's 16 points helped Duquesne beat Penn State 56-55; Kevin McHale scored 22 points and grabbed 12 rebounds to power Minnesota over Northwestern 74-64; LeRoy Coleman's 27 points triggered Middle Tennessee to a 79-64 decision over Eastern Kentucky; Joe Nehls scored a career-high 35 points to lead Arizona over Stanford 95-88 and Calvin Roberts scored 27 points and hauled down 13 rebounds as Cal State-Fullerton came from behind to defeat Utah State 96-88.

James Connolly of the United States won the first championship medal at the 1986 Olympics, finishing first in the hop-step-and-jump competition.

Rare Missed Free Throw Costs Nets

By The Associated Press
Nobody's perfect at the foul line—not even Robert Smith. Smith, who once led the country in foul shooting as a collegian and has a season average of a nifty 89 per cent in the National Basketball Association this year, had a chance to perform his specialty for the New Jersey Nets Thursday night. But the usually unerring Smith missed the second of two free throws with no time left on the clock, and it cost the Nets a 127-126 loss to the Denver Nuggets.

"I just knew we were going into overtime," said Denver's Dan Issel, well aware of Smith's foul-shooting prowess. But after watching the potential tying shot fall off the rim, Issel noted: "I felt badly that Robert Smith was the guy who missed it, because he was a teammate of mine for nearly two seasons." Issel, by the way, had a powerhouse game for the Nuggets with 47 points. He took charge of the offense in the absence of two Denver stars, David Thompson and George McGinnis. In addition to Issel's monster point total, John Roche contributed 24 points for the Nuggets. John Williamson scored 28 points for New Jersey before fouling out with 1:39 remaining in the game.

Sonics 105, Bucks 101

Gus Williams and Dennis Johnson scored 21 points each as Seattle snapped a three-game losing streak by beating Milwaukee. Johnson locked up the victory by hitting two free throws with two seconds remaining.

The Sonics watched a 15-point halftime lead dwindle to two before holding on for the victory.

Hawks 111, Warriors 107
John Drew's layup with 17 seconds left in overtime gave Atlanta a tight victory over Golden State. Purvis Short took a shot for the Warriors with four seconds left, but missed, and Charlie Criss added two free throws for Atlanta for the final margin.

Lakers 107, Bulls 97
Jamaal Wilkes scored 28 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar 27 to lead Los Angeles over Chicago. Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 14 points and handed out nine assists as the Lakers won for the ninth time in 11 games. The Bulls dropped their fourth straight.

Celtics 119, Bullets 103
Larry Bird broke open a tight game in the third quarter by scoring five points and dishing off two assists in a two-minute span as Boston scored 11 straight points and pulled away from Washington.

Bird wound up with 24 points and 13 rebounds to spark the Celtics to their fourth straight victory and their third in three nights.

76ers 110, Rockets 105
Bobby Jones scored 15 of his 26 points in the fourth quarter to lead Philadelphia past Houston. The Rockets, who have lost their last three games, had battled back from a 56-52 halftime deficit to take a 85-79 lead at the end of the third quarter.

But in the fourth period, the 76ers, led by Jones, outscored Houston 16-5 during a four-minute stretch and went on to victory.

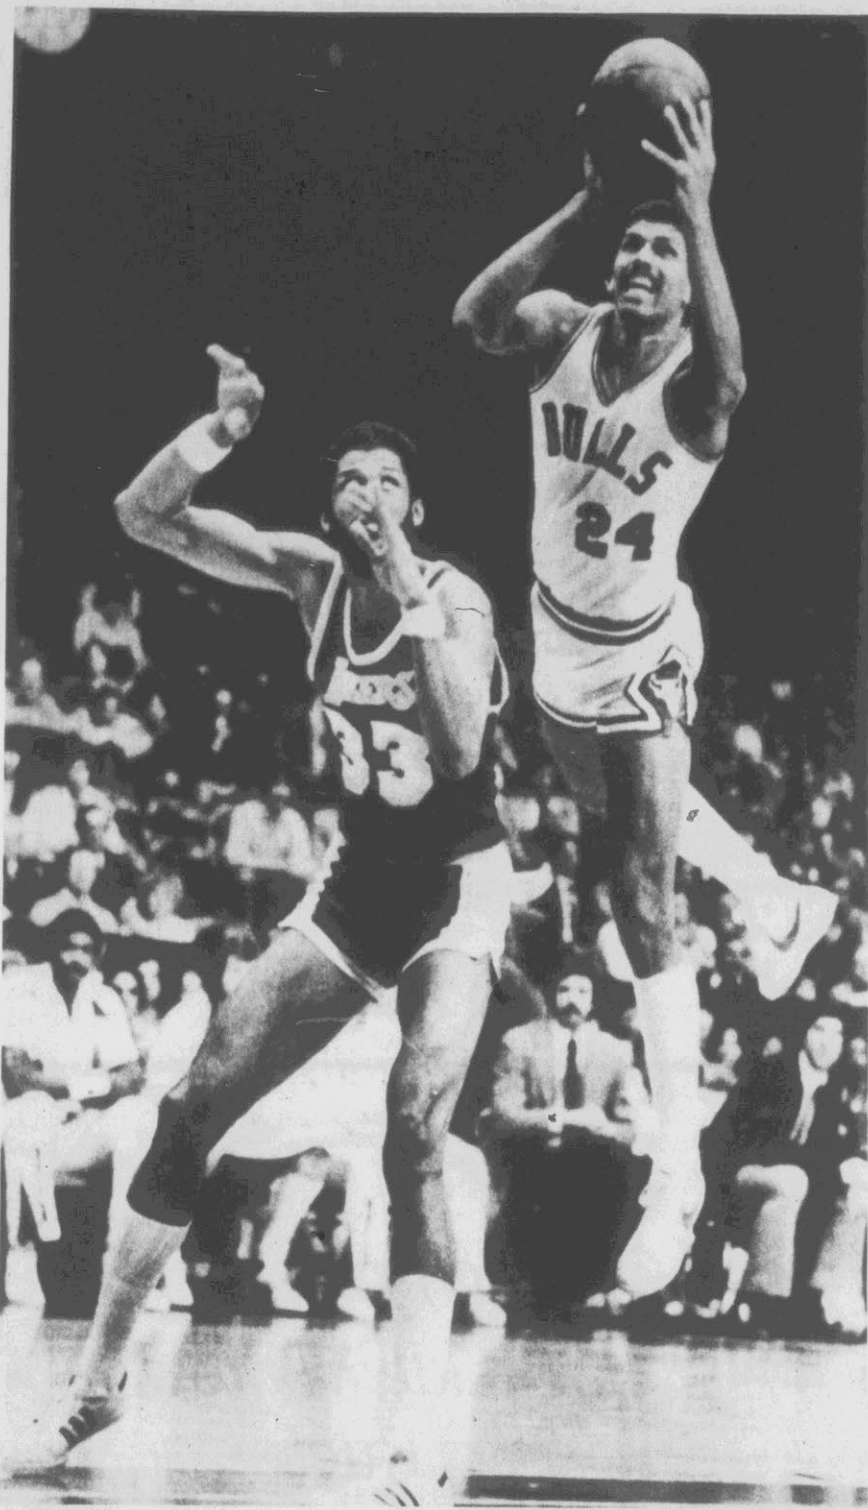

Knicks 112, Pacers 102

Ray Williams scored 25 points, including six of the 11 in a spurt that put New York ahead for good, as the Knicks defeated Indiana. The Knicks trailed 56-50 at the half but went ahead by 11, 85-74 at the end of the third period.

The 11-point surge came between 3:58 and 1:33 of the third quarter. Williams had a jumper, a layup and two free throws in the spurt. Indiana got no closer than eight points in the final quarter.

Blazers 94, Kings 93
Ron Brewer scored 20 points and contributed a key defensive play to lead Portland over Kansas City. Brewer rushed Otis Birdsong as he drove across court with eight seconds left. Then Kermit Washington, who scored the winning point for Portland, joined in defense and Birdsong had to pass quickly to Sam Lacey, who failed to get a shot off in time for the Kings.

The great West Point football team in 1945 averaged 7.92 yards gained per play.

Parnell, Rogerson Pace Area Scoring

The scoring race among the boys and girls of the Pitt-Martin-Greene area continues to be a tight one for the 1979-80 title, but the leaders in the last accounting continue to lead the way.

Jeff Parnell of Greenville Christian Academy continues to be the leader among the boys, while Williamston High School's Jan Rogerson still paces the girls. The races have tightened up, however.

Parnell paces the boys' race with a 21.2 average while Williamston's James Woolard is second with a 20.5 average. He's followed by Watson Rogers of Bear Grass at 18.7 and Donald House of Rose at 18.4. North Pitt's Reginald Knight is fifth at 16.2.

Rogerson heads the girls' list with a 22.6 average. Joette Rogers of Bear Grass is making it a race with her second place average of 21.8. Next down the line comes Conley's Glenda Green at 18.1, with a big gap to fourth, held by Roanoke's Sylvia Parker at 14.9. Sharon Williams of Rose is fifth at 14.5.

Greenville Christian's boys have the top offensive team at 69.1 points per game, while Rose is second at 63.0. Ayden-Grifton's girls lead their offensive category at 48.6, while Roanoke is second at 48.5.

Defensively, Bear Grass ranks best among the boys at 50.0, followed by Jamesville's and Roanoke's 53.1. Greenville Christian leads the girls in defense, allowing 32.2, while Martin Academy is second at 34.5.

Greenville Christian's boys have the best winning margin, whipping their opponents at a 10.5 clip, while the Roanoke girls, at 8.4 points per game, head their division.

Of the 12 boys' teams in the area, all but three have winning records. Rose's 13-4 leads the way, followed by Farmville's 14-5.

In contrast, only five of the 12 girls' teams are winners to date. Roanoke and Ayden-Grifton are tied for the best with 13-6 marks.

State And Local Budgets To Feel Inflation Despite Help

By GLENN RITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's new budget painfully illustrates the point that double-digit inflation is exacting a heavy toll on state and local governments.

Carter wants to increase federal aid to states and localities by 8.4 percent, from a current $88.9 billion to $96.3 billion in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

But that boost fails to keep up with the annual inflation rate that now exceeds 13 percent and which is expected to run above 10 percent throughout 1980.

"Given inflation, domestic programs and service levels in the fiscal 81 budget will be cut significantly in real terms," says the U.S. Conference of Mayors. "This will result in lower service levels for many urban programs and jeopardizes the ability of many cities to meet the needs of their citizens."

The National League of Cities estimates that the federal aid dollar has lost more than 40 percent of its value since 1972 because of inflation.

And the purchasing power of grants to states and localities — but not to individuals — will drop $10 billion more in the next two years, says John Gunther, executive director of the mayors' conference.

Despite this erosion, state and local officials are sounding a pragmatic message about the new budget: Inflation must be tempered and that means austerity by all levels of government.

"We recognize that with the current state of the economy and the mood of some in Congress, it will take a concerted effort to maintain even the current level of support that state and local governments now receive," says the National Conference of State Legislatures.

In lieu of more money, the National Governors' Association urges Carter to save money by consolidating and streamlining grant programs.

This anti-inflation tactic already appears in some parts of Carter's new budget. He wants to consolidate several youth training programs, some health services, and numerous grants for fish and wildlife programs.

A general look at Carter's budget reveals a mixed bag for states and localities.

In raw dollars, the budget would provide increases for Medicaid, anti-recession aid, subsidized housing, employment and training, mass transit, low-income energy assistance, community development block grants, elementary and secondary education, and education for the handicapped. Because of inflation, however, the actual purchasing power available to officials running those programs would be reduced.

It would cut funds, even in terms of raw dollars, for school lunch programs and so-called impact aid, which helps localities especially burdened by federal facilities.

Carter proposes to continue general revenue sharing for five years, but only at its current $6.9 billion annual level, despite inflation.

As a candidate in 1976, Carter opposed revenue sharing — which provides federal dollars to virtually every local government in the country. Only recently did he come to accept the likelihood that neither his budget bill nor his re-election chances would benefit by keeping that position.

The president's budget predicts a mild recession, even as inflation persists. His economic advisers expect the unemployment rate to increase from the current 5.8 percent to 7.5 percent.

Consequently, Carter is seeking about $1 billion for targeted and anti-recession funds to help states and localities weather an economic slowdown.

Carter also asks Congress for $800 million in new spending to train poor, unemployed youths so they can qualify for jobs. And he would increase the Summer Youth Jobs program substantially, to a level of nearly 1 million jobs.

However, the president lets die a standby public works program that would pump federal funds to localities when a recession occurs.

In a major policy reversal, Carter wants Congress to subsidize an additional 300,000 housing units for poor and moderate-income residents.

That's 25 percent more than the 240,392 units he supported this year, and reverses a three-year slide in the program, which subsidized 325,000 housing units as recently as fiscal 1979.

Local officials are praising this urban thrust, but they say the nation needs to subsidize about 400,000 housing units a year to keep up with demand, particularly as the private housing industry suffers from high interest rates and rising construction costs.

Despite a severe shortage of rental housing, the administration offers no program to spur construction of nonsubsidized, multi-family units.

Park Acquires Concord Paper

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Roy H. Park of Park Newspapers Inc. has bought The Concord Tribune, it was announced on Thursday.

Announcement of the sale of controlling interest in The Tribune was made on Thursday by Tribune Publisher and President Elizabeth G. Huckle and by Park, president of the Ithaca, New York-based organization. Park has purchased stock owned by Miss Huckle and by other members of the Huckle family.

The announcement said Miss Huckle will continue as publisher of The Tribune for a transition period, after which she will serve the newspaper in an advisory capacity under a consulting agreement.

"I have followed the growth of The Tribune for a number of years and have great admiration for its dedicated community service," Park said.

Park said he would continue operation of The Tribune in the Huckle family tradition of serving the community.

The Tribune publishes afternoons and Sunday morning.

Park owns broadcasting properties and newspapers in 15 states. His North Carolina newspaper interests include the Morganton News Herald, the Statesville Record and Landmark and the Newton Observer News Enterprise. He has a minority interest in The Daily Independent at Kannapolis.

Park also owns WNCT-TV, the first television station in eastern North Carolina, and its companion radio stations, WNCT-AM and WNCT-FM, Greenville, N.C.

Park was born in Surry County and is a graduate of North Carolina State University at Raleigh. He is a member of the N.C. State Board of Trustees.

Miss Huckle said, "We have been approached by a number of newspaper groups who wanted to buy The Tribune." She explained that the Huckle family chose Roy Park because they felt he would be best for the community.

Find Primordial Tree Segments

SEATTLE (AP) — Scientists say pieces of primordial trees that grew more than 14 million years ago have been found in central Washington, where they were buried under a lava flow.

Gerald H. Grosso, director of the Pacific Northwest Conservation Laboratory at Port Orchard, said Wednesday that due to a quirk in nature, the wood did not decay or become petrified.

Found 200 feet underground, the largest fragment is a nine-pound chunk about 14 inches long, Grosso said. The smallest pieces are about the size of a finger, he said.

She also has served as a director of the North Carolina Press Association and has just completed several years service as a director of the University of North Carolina Journalism Foundation.

She was named "Woman of the Year" in 1954 by the Concord Business and Professional Women's Club and in 1969 was named as one of the five most influential women in Cabarrus County.

Plan Mid-Week Service Series

We will help make your house payments

It's true. When you buy your newly constructed home from us, we will pay a portion of your monthly mortgage payment for the first year. It's very simple.

Here's why we're doing this. Many buyers seem to be hesitating, waiting for interest rates to come down. But since construction costs are rising so rapidly, tomorrow's mortgage payment is almost certain to buy less house than you can buy today.

For a limited time, when you come to us to buy your new home, using conventional financing (which we can help you arrange), we'll pay a portion of your house payment from a special trust account for the first year. If you are in the market for a home, you owe it to yourself to talk with us about our plan. Call us today for an appointment.

Let us help make your house payments.

Most Favor ResumingOf Draft

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are solidly in favor of resuming the draft, but they are split on whether women should be subject to conscription, an Associated Press-NBC News poll says.

On both issues, those most directly affected by the changes being discussed are the most opposed to such changes.

Young people between age 18 and 24 — who would be the first to go — are the most significant group to oppose a new draft. And women oppose being drafted, while men favor conscripting women.

Talk about reviving the draft has been triggered by the turbulent crises in Iran, Afghanistan and in other world hot spots. President Carter announced in his State of the Union message earlier this month that he wants to register young people in case a draft is needed.

Among other findings, the AP-NBC News poll taken Tuesday and Wednesday found overwhelming backing for such a registration proposal. Seventy-eight percent favored registration and 17 percent opposed it. One percent said they would favor registration if women were not included and four percent were not sure.

On the question of actually resuming the draft — and not just registration — 62 percent favored a new conscription program. Twenty-nine percent opposed one and 9 percent of the 1,600 adults interviewed nationwide by telephone were not sure.

Almost a year ago, in February 1975, public opinion was much more closely divided on the subject of the draft. In the AP-NBC News poll that month, 49 percent favored resumption of the draft and 43 percent were opposed. Eight percent were not sure.

Support for resuming the draft is broad, running through almost every group of Americans. The only significant exception is young people, those 18 to 24 years of age.

Those young people opposed the draft by a 40-55 margin. By contrast, those 25 and over backed the draft by a 66-25 edge. In each case, the remainder were undecided.

No Americans have been drafted since Dec. 31, 1972. On Jan. 27, 1976, then-President Gerald Ford mothballed the Selective Service System and stopped requiring all young men to register with their draft boards.

Carter indirectly raised the question of drafting women when he used the term "young people" in his State of the Union message in referring to those who will be asked to register.

An even 50 percent of the public favors drafting women. Forty-four percent agreed overall with drafting women, while 6 percent volunteered that they favored drafting women only for non-combat roles.

Canada Keeps Most Of Winter Cold To Self

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Canada seems more and more intent on befriending the United States. Not only did the government in Ottawa help six American diplomats escape from Tehran, but Canada is also keeping North America's winter cold to itself.

The generally mild winter experienced so far in much of the United States comes thanks to upper air currents that are simply not steering cold Canadian air south over the United States, explained forecaster Robert Dickson of the National Weather Service in Suitland, Md.

Over the last few severe winters, such currents have swept southward from northwestern Canada, bringing with them arctic temperatures and sizeable snowfalls.

But this year, "the airflow in Canada has been more west to east than usual," explained Dickson.

He also noted that a strong high pressure area near Bermuda has pumped warm air northward, particularly moderating conditions along the Atlantic Coast and in New England.

"Of course," Dickson quickly cautioned, "winter isn't over."

In its long-range winter forecast issued Nov. 28, the weather service called for a mild winter in New England and the Pacific Northwest but cautioned that the central part of the country could face another season of below-normal cold.

While mild conditions have pretty much been the case so far, temperatures have been cool in the Northwest and in recent days a storm has trekked across the country dumping plenty of snow.

This winter's general mildness, which has eased energy demands to the relief of many, stands in stark contrast to the last three seasons.

Record cold and snow have occurred in each of those winters, with the brunt of the severe weather moving westward each year.

"The occurrence of three consecutive severe winter seasons over the United States has no parallel in the modern historical record," say Henry F. Diaz and Robert G. Quayle of the National Climatic Center in Asheville, N.C.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration this week issued a report on the nation's snowcover for December, showing it was startlingly below the record set only a year earlier.

Speaking of Your Health...

Curbing Compulsive Eating

I'm overweight, a lot overweight. I get nowhere with diets. I even volunteered to have the stomach and intestine operation to lose weight. The doctor says, "No." Diet pills, when I can get them, are valueless. Where do I go from here? — Mr. F.T.E., N.D.

Dear Mr. E.:
Even though you think you have exhausted all possibilities, you really haven't. In your letter you make no mention of seeking psychological guidance for your compulsive eating. The stress and anxieties in your life have not been modified.

You are constantly seeking shortcuts to losing weight. Strangely, your shortcuts have taken you far afield and you have bypassed the realistic fact that your intake of calories is greater than the calories you need for daily activity.

Unless you understand this basic law of nutrition, you will never lose weight. If, on the other hand, you readjust your patterns of eating so that you consume fewer calories than your body requires for your daily activities, then you will lose weight.

There is only one exception to this fixed rule of nutrition. That is, if there is some thyroid or other hormonal imbalance that affects your weight.

Now, there is this bit of good news on the horizon. In West Germany, there are some interesting preliminary trials being made with a new compound that interferes dramatically with the digestion of carbohydrates. The compound, known temporarily as BAY g 5421, seems to block the digestion of sugars and starches in the intestinal tract. The result is that these substances pass through the body undigested and unabsorbed. Consequently, there are no added calories when these foods are eaten.

This is an interesting and novel approach to the problem of obesity. Since the preliminary trials are so successful, more extensive studies are being planned in order to substantiate the efficacy of this new chemical drug.

Our child was born with a deformed jaw. The baby is only 4 months old. We are hunting everywhere for the best advice as to what to do. We need all the help we can get. — Mr. and Mrs. S.K., Conn.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. K.:
Brilliant results in the reconstruction of the face after severe injuries or birth defects are now possible. Dr. John M. Converse, at the Institute for Reconstructive Surgery in New York, is an international authority in this type of dramatic reconstructive surgery. He believes that virtually all parts of the face and the skull can be repositioned.

Even at this young age, your child should be seen by such specialists in this particular field of plastic surgery. There are now similar institutions all over the country where highly trained plastic surgeons devote themselves to reconstructive and rehabilitative surgery. There is much hope in store for your child.

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning that police and school officials are beginning a crack-down on drivers who pass stopped school buses.

Cannon said motorists who fail to stop for school buses which are stopped, with their "stop" sign out, "are going to be reported," and, "will be prosecuted."

Conviction on charges of passing a stopped school bus, according to Cannon, will add five points to a driver's record...the highest number of points for any moving violation under the State point system.

He noted that two drivers have been arrested recently, and that the number of complaints about vehicles passing stopped school buses have been on the increase.

"One child was almost hit the other day," by a passing car, the chief said.
