Kuwait Paper Sees Release For Hostages

By The Associated Press

A Kuwait newspaper reported from Tehran today that the release of the American Embassy hostages is "imminent." But a State Department spokesman in Washington said there was "no evidence" to confirm the report.

State Department spokesman George Sherman, after checking on the report, said, "We have no evidence to confirm it."

The weekly newspaper Al Khadaf said the number of young Iranian militants occupying the embassy has been reduced from 400 to 50, and final arrangements for the release of the approximately 50 captive Americans are being completed "following the election of Abolhassan Bani Sadr as Iran's new president."

The paper did not give the source of its information, and there was no immediate confirmation of its report from Washington or other quarters, although Carter administration officials have expressed cautious optimism about the embassy standoff in recent days.

"Bani Sadr has set the settlement of the hostage crisis and the ending of the duality of authority being exercised in Iran as the main objectives at the beginning of his term," the report said.

Al Khadaf said U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim is trying to persuade Bani Sadr to "pressure the students to leave the embassy and have them replaced by regular Iranian troops."

The Kuwaiti press is highly competitive, and the reliability of the Al Khadaf report was not known. But the Kuwaitis have good contacts in Iran because of the proximity of the two countries. There is also a relatively large Iranian community in Kuwait.

Bani Sadr made plain Wednesday that he was determined to trim the power of the embassy militants. He castigated them for getting a government minister arrested, calling them "dictators who have created a government within the government," and gave the cold shoulder to a U.S. delegation invited to Iran by them.

Immigration authorities detained the 49-member U.S. group for four hours Wednesday night at Tehran airport because they had no entry visas, then sent them to a Tehran hotel.

The Foreign Ministry issued the group four-day visas today at the request of the embassy captors, although the delegation had planned to stay 10 days.

The Americans didn't bother getting their visas in the United States because they were told they would get them on arrival at the airport, an informed source said.

The delegation was invited by the militants in a bid for the U.S. spotlight they have been denied since American TV cameras were expelled from Iran three weeks ago. One theory then was that the expulsion was a move by the revolutionary regime to deflate the militants' self-importance and cut them down to size so that a deal for the release of the hostages could be worked out.

The American delegation was made up of persons sympathetic to the militants' demand for the return of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to Iran for trial. The leader of the group, Norman Forer of the University of Kansas, said the taking of the hostages was illegal but must be weighed "side by side with the anguish of the Iranian people" under the shah. Forer visited in Iran in December and met with the militants then.

Bani Sadr denounced the militants Wednesday because charges they broadcast on the state radio and TV resulted in the arrest of Information and National Guidance Minister Nasser Minachi. The president said the ruling Revolutionary Council, which he heads, ordered Minachi freed immediately.

"I think the nation which has voted for me does not agree with this kind of behavior," said Bani Sadr, who got 75 percent of the vote in the presidential election two weeks ago.

Minachi denied the charge. The president also assailed the state radio and TV network for giving air time to the militants Tuesday evening without government approval. He said the arrest of Minachi at his home by revolutionary guards several hours later was not authorized by the state prosecutor.

The embassy militants and Bani Sadr have been enemies since late last November when he was foreign minister and they helped to get him replaced because he was willing to negotiate with the United States.

IGLOO COUNTRY . . . Greenville citizens found themselves caught in a snow storm yesterday for a second time this season. With schools closed children make their way through the snow drifts to build the annual snow sculptures. These children built an igloo along with the regular snow man. The igloo is made of about 40 washtubs of packed snow, complete with chimney and smoke

Expect Rescue Squad Disband Today

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

After 25 years of service to the citizens of Greenville and Pitt County, volunteer members of the Greenville Rescue Squad are expected to disband the organization this afternoon.

Brent Stocks, head of the volunteer group, said last night that volunteers decided yesterday to disband the organization at 5:30 p.m. today. He said a press conference has been scheduled for that time at the rescue building at the intersection of Fifth and Greene Streets.

Bill Bond, a volunteer second lieutenant said this morning that the squad has had no word from city officials on a request to include the rescue squad on the city council agenda as requested last week.

Bond noted that members of the squad felt that action by city officials yesterday to implement a plan to consolidate fire department and rescue squad activities served as the city's response to the request.

Stocks announced January 29, that volunteer rescue members had voted to disband, effective February 7, if the, "city's present policy of integrated fire and rescue service is not changed." He added that requests to talk with Mayor Don McGlohn about the matter were rejected, pointing out that volunteers, "have gone through the proper channels trying to resolve our problems, to no avail."

Three days later, on February 1, Stocks, in a letter to city manager Ed Wyatt, formally requested that, "the consideration of the city policy concerning Emergency Medical Services be placed on the agenda," of the city council meeting scheduled for February 14.

"Since the announcement of our intention to terminate," the volunteer organization, Stocks' letter said, "we have received a great response from the public. In addition to voicing support for our position in the present dispute over plans for the Rescue Squad, the people have strongly requested that we refrain from disbanding our group. In respect for this feeling, we would be willing to postpone our actions to give the people a final opportunity to make their feelings known."

A refusal, "to permit this public forum would not only deny the principles of democratic government, but would also leave us with no alternative except to proceed with the plans to terminate our operations," the letter said.

Bond, in explaining the squad's action, said again that volunteer squad members considered the act of putting the plan for integrated fire and rescue service into action yesterday, "a refusal to be heard."

City officials said this morning that the squad's request for inclusion on the council agenda is, "still being discussed."

Stocks, explaining the new integrated system, said present paid rescue personnel are scheduled to be put on a rotating basis between fire units and rescue units. "Newly-trained, inexperienced men," he continued, "will be put on rescue units also on a rotating basis," replacing more qualified personnel.

"Anyone should be able to see that if a man is not allowed to use his skills, that his skill level will decrease. This factor is a major area of concern," for the volunteers.

The Greenville Rescue Squad was organized in 1948 by the late Fire Chief George Gardner. The volunteer group was organized in 1955 under the initial sponsorship of the Greenville Jaycees, in an effort to meet the increased need for trained manpower for the expanding

CHECKS MISSENT?

My wife was in the hospital last October and her group insurance where she works was supposed to pay. We called the company three times, but every time were told "her folder is out," whatever that means. On Dec. 20, we got a notice that the checks to hospital, surgeon and pathologists had been mailed, but none of them were ever received here. The medical people here have been patient, but we are tired of waiting for these bills to be paid and don't know what else to do to straighten out the matter. L. O.

Hotline called the Metropolitan Life Insurance Major Claims Department in Greenville, S. C. and talked to John Arrowwood. He, too, could not find the folder at first, but promised to call us back later the same day, which he did. He said the records showed checks had, indeed, gone out on Dec. 20, but he thought they must have been misent to another area. Whatever, he said, new checks would be issued the same day, run through the computer the next day, and that Pitt County Memorial and your wife's doctors should be paid within the week.

You reported about four days later that the checks were received here and that they were dated Dec. 4. There was no explanation of where they'd been in the meantime, but your wife's bills are paid.

National Award Is Won By Pitt Superintendent

OTT ALFORD

Arthur S. (Ott) Alford, superintendent of Pitt County Schools, is the national winner in the annual competition to the Distinguished Library Service Award for School Administrators.

The award seeks to recognize a school administrator directly responsible for a school or group of schools who has made a unique or sustained contribution toward furthering the role of the library / media program and its development in elementary or secondary education.

The American Association of School Librarians sponsors the award in cooperation with school systems and State Departments of Education throughout the nation. The award to Superintendent Alford will be made at the AASL State Assembly meeting during the Annual American Library Association Conference in New York in June.

According to Mrs. Elsie L. Brumback, director of the department of Public Instruction's Division of Educational Media, "Mr. Alford's interest in reading and libraries has made it possible for school media centers to remain open during the past two summers. Thanks to him, there is no lack of cooperation between school and public libraries in Pitt County. His great enthusiasm for reading certainly makes him a friend to both child and book."

"As superintendent of Pitt County Schools, Ott Alford believes that the media center and its staff play an important role in the total curriculum of a school. He has worked diligently

Snow And Ice Covering Most Of City, County

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville and Pitt County today looked much the same as they did last Thursday, with snow and ice covering all surfaces not protected from the weather and cold temperatures. For the second Thursday in a row, residents found themselves digging out from heavy snows and slipping along ice covered roads.

The area received seven inches of snow yesterday, according to Willie Briley, chief operator of Greenville Utilities river plant. The high was 32 degrees and the low was 25 degrees. The level of the Tar River at 8 a.m. was 4.9 feet. Briley noted that the seven inches of snow amounted to .29 inches of melted precipitation.

The city schools were not open today except for maintenance and custodial personnel, reported Superintendent Glenn Cox. "At this point we plan to open tomorrow because it looks like the temperatures and sunshine will break up the ice on the streets today. We will open possibly an hour later tomorrow," said Cox. The later opening will be confirmed by tonight, he added.

County Schools were closed today also. A decision will be made later on tomorrow's schedule.

According to Public Works Superintendent Mayo Allen, the streets in Greenville were still icy this morning and fairly dangerous. "If this sun keeps on shining we'll be in good shape by the end of the day," said Allen. "We had crews on all night last night with sand trucks. Our only motor grade broke down yesterday but will be back in service by 2 p.m. today hopefully.

Our refuse trucks are running today and the folks at the city garage are working today. We've really been trying hard despite the lack of our motor grader. The streets should be in much better shape after lunch," Mayo explained.

The primary roads of the county were open this morning but had icy spots. "The secondary roads," said Charles Clark of the Department of Transportation, "have lots of ice and snow on them and the minor secondary roads are in bad shape."

By night we'll have them in fairly good shape."

Sgt. R.B. Miller of the Highway Patrol said travel conditions were hazardous because the main roads were clear, but icy. The Highway Patrol reported 12 wrecks in the county yesterday.

The Greenville Rescue Squad reported a number of weather-related accidents yesterday. According to Billy Woolfolk, the accidents were typical. "They were mostly people sliding into each other and into ditches," he said. "Yesterday around 10:30

Bethel Lawyer Files For Post

Bethel attorney Jim Martin filed with the State Board of Elections Monday as a candidate for District Court Judge.

Martin is seeking the seat now held by Judge Norris Reid, who is not seeking re-election. Three New Bern men, including two attorneys and a bail bondsman, are also candidates for the Pitt-Craven-Carteret-Pamlico County Third Judicial District Seat.

A Bethel native, Martin served four years in the U.S. Air Force after graduating from high school. He entered East Carolina University in 1961, where he played football under Coach Jack Boone and Clarence Stasavich, and was a member of the university's track team. He received a BS degree in social

Couple Speaks Vows

CHOCOWINITY — Trinity Episcopal Church here was the scene of the double ring wedding ceremony of Libby Elks Nethercutt and Clarence Warwick Frazelle Sunday, Jan. 27, at 4 p.m.

The ceremony was performed by William Hadden Sr. A program of wedding music was presented by Doug Butler of Bath, cousin of the bride, organist, and Fuz Ange of Chocowinity, vocalist.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Nancy C. Elks of Rt. 1, Grimesland, and the late Mr. Walter L. Elks. The bridegroom's parents are the late Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Frazelle.

Kathy A. Nethercutt of Rt. 1, Grimesland, daughter of the bride, was maid of honor and Walter J. Arseneau of Greenville was best man.

The bride wore a light blue gown styled with a cowl collar, long sheer sleeves and a formal length skirt. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and white daisies tied with pink ribbons.

Redding B. Elks, brother of the bride, greeted guests at the church.

A reception was held at the church after the ceremony and was given by the bride's mother. Women of the church assisted in serving.

The couple will live at Rt. 1, Grimesland, following a wedding trip through eastern North Carolina.

The bride attended Grimesland High School and is employed by Bigg's Drug Store. The bridegroom attended Richlands School and ECU. He is field representative with Portatex Studios, Kinston.

The bridal couple was honored at a luncheon at the Ramada Inn prior to the wedding. Also honored was the bride's mother on her 81st birthday. The luncheon was given by Mrs. Elks' children.

Imaginary Space Trip Given League Members

At the February meeting of the Greenville Service League, members were led on an imaginary trip through space by Mrs. Charles V. Wilkerson Jr., chairman of this year's Charity Ball.

The theme of the ball is "Fly Me to the Moon" and Mrs. Wilkerson explained how the Greenville Country Club would be decorated. She announced additional workshops to further prepare for the ball Feb. 15.

President Mrs. John S. Whichard continued the meeting with committee reports. Mrs. Mac MacKenzie, bloodmobile chairman, announced an upcoming visit at Rose High School March 4. January visits to Eaton and ECU collected 726 units with 103 Service League workers volunteering 315 hours.

Mrs. R. K. Barnhill, hospital activities, announced a workshop to make Valentine favors for Pitt Memorial Hospital patients. The Emergency Charity Fund answered three calls and the Lending Chest loaned two pairs of crutches.

Mrs. Charles Stevens, sustaining member representative, announced her group would meet at the Greenville Parks and Recreation Building Feb. 20 to work on scrapbooks and plan a spring coffee to honor provisional members.

Mrs. Donald Bailey, placement chairman, announced the board had adopted an inclement weather policy that aligns with the Greenville City Schools. The Hospital Gift Shop or cart will not be staffed by Service League volunteers if schools are closed due to the weather.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

They don't call it alimony anymore. They call it "spousal maintenance," which sounds like something under warranty. ("Hey, Fred, I've got to get my wife in for her 35,000-mile spousal maintenance this week or her parts aren't guaranteed.")

A lot of people are taking a good look at "spousal maintenance" these days. Women are asking, "What am I worth?" Men are questioning whether it is better to have loved and pay than never to have loved at all.

This has necessitated insurance companies for the first time to put an estimate on the worth of a woman who runs a household, raises children, tends a husband, cooks, does laundry, and directs finances. They have come up with a figure of $355 a week as a minimum wage for a full-time wife.

"I won't sit up with a clogged sink, wait outside houses on Halloween for a scarecrow who has no vision, sit through a piano recital of 30 kids all playing the same tune, shave the dog's rump, or spend my twilight years waiting for a repairman for ANYTHING."

"I won't trim hair over the ears, move the hose, pick yucky raisins out of the cereal, fish a class ring out of the commode, deliver on paper routes, type term papers, pose for pictures, clean fish, listen to someone read the paper out loud, or go camping and call it a vacation."

My husband said it sounded fine and suggested we sign a contract in the morning. I grabbed my coat. "What morning? Sleep-ins are extra." I whispered the figure in his ear. He looked shocked.

I'm expensive, but I'm worth it.

Second Chance At Happiness

By Abigail Van Buren

1980 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Two and a half years ago I married a lovely girl named Ramona. She was 20 and I was 26. It was the first marriage for both of us. On our honeymoon, Ramona was killed. (Thank God it wasn't my fault. Ramona was driving.)

I am getting married again. It will be the first marriage for Suzie. She wants a big wedding, which I really don't want. But, for her sake, we are having one.

As far as I'm concerned, I've already had my wedding and gifts, so should I put a notation on the invitations saying, "No gifts," or what? My friends and relatives gave already, and once is enough. Or do you think I should leave it up to them?

After Ramona's funeral I asked everyone if they wanted their gifts back, and they all said no.

Also, should I send a wedding invitation to Ramona's folks? I haven't told them about Suzie yet. I can't get up the nerve since they are still grieving. Answer soon.

GETTING MARRIED

DEAR GETTING: Don't put "no gifts" on your wedding invitations; leave it up to the guests (Even though your friends and family gave once, this is Suzie's first marriage, and discouraging gifts would be unfair to her.)

Tell Ramona's folks personally — and soon. If they're still grieving, don't send them an invitation to your wedding. Good luck. I wish you joy.

DEAR ABBY: Before my husband married me, he had a girlfriend who was the ultimate in charm, beauty, manners, etc.

I lost I forget this, my mother-in-law reminds me every time I see her.

Finally, one day, when I had had it up to here, I said, "Listen, Barbara is gone, and I am here, so you can shut the hell up!"

My husband agrees that I am the injured party, but he wants me to apologize. But don't you think his mother was wrong in the first place?

SUCCESSOR

DEAR SUCCESSOR: She was wrong, but you were rude. Apologize.

DEAR ABBY: God bless you for saving not only my sanity, but my life.

A little more than a year ago you suggested I come to terms with a serious drinking problem and seek out Alcoholics Anonymous. It turned out not only to be a life-saver, but also an entirely new life and serenity I never knew before.

With my brothers and sisters in AA, I have learned I am not alone as I once so deeply felt. But most importantly, I have learned how to care for others and myself and maybe for the first time in my life, I know how to love another human being.

I took you up on your suggestion of AA, Abby, and with the fellowship's help and my staying with my Higher Power, I celebrated a complete year of sobriety this January!

Of those readers going through the hell of alcohol addiction, please tell them what AA has to offer, that it is there for the taking with no questions, dues and fees. And what AA has to offer is life, not only a sober one, but a beautiful one.

Thank you again for my life, Abby.

Richard Feder, Of New Jersey

FORT LEE, N.J. (AP) — Dear RoseAnn Roseannadanna, Did you ever live in New Jersey? Do you ever get collect calls at 3 a.m.? Do you ever have people stare at you when you sign a check? What am I doing in New Jersey anyway? What should I do? Signed, Mr. Richard Feder, Fort Lee, New Jersey.

"Dear Mr. Feder, 'Whadda you doin' livin' in NEW JERSEY anyway?' Or so the frizzy-haired Miss Roseannadanna is likely to respond before launching into a rambling, mindless monologue that has little to do with early-morning phone calls or New Jersey. Letters from the troubled Mr. Feder are a regular item on an NBC-TV "Saturday Night Live" segment devoted to the popular consumer affairs reporter played by Gilda Radner. And Richard Feder is a real person who really lives in Fort Lee. Only he doesn't write the letters.

"I can't write. I have trouble talking on the phone," he says. The real Feder is vice president of a Mahwah textile printing plant and lives with his wife, Francine, and daughters, Dara, 2, and Jessica, 1, in a Fort Lee high-rise. His new-found popularity makes him uncomfortable, he says, but of course, most people don't recognize him. "Sometimes people just stare at me. It's a terrible feeling. One time when I was kid in school, I read a book report with my fly open. So now when people stare at me that's the first place I look." Feder rose to stardom one Saturday, when his brother-in-law, Alan Zweibel, a writer for the show, told him to watch that night. "The first time I heard my name, I looked at my wife," Feder recalled. "I was debating whether to go under the chair or feel good about it. So I decided to feel good about it." Feder now gets calls from all over the country. "Most of them want to know if there really is a Richard Feder. The people who call are very nice," Feder said Tuesday night. "I try not to be rude and only rarely do I hang up. Then they call back the next day and apologize — collect!"

"Gilda Radner's mother's friend called once. She wanted to know if I was a real person. She was a sweet lady. She wanted tickets to the show."

Feder says he has a clear image of what the "television" Richard Feder looks like, though he doesn't really identify with him.

"He's very fat...wears dirty, sleeveless T-shirts...always sweaty...always drinking beer."

Feder said one thing the real and mythical Mr. Feder share is a frustration with life in the Garden State. He says his hometown, only minutes from Manhattan, was used to poke fun at New Jersey, which to many New Yorkers may as well be as far away as Arizona.

"He makes fun of New Jersey. I make fun of New Jersey. Factories, giant smokestacks, smog, the turnpike...it's the pits," said Feder, who moved from Long Island, N.Y., to cut his commuting time. But NBC spokeswoman Simone Harris demurs, "they're not picking on Fort Lee."

Windmill Stamps

The U.S. Postal Service is scheduled to issue a set of postage stamps today, showing some of the different styles of windmills that have been used in the United States. The earliest known windmills were built in Persia sometime before A.D. 1000. By the late 12th century, windmills had appeared in England and France. At first, windmills were used mostly to grind corn. The Dutch later discovered that windmills could produce the power to drain water, saw wood, press oil from seeds, and make paper. Because of recent increases in the cost of fuel, people again are looking into another of the windmill's valuable uses: producing electricity.

Possum On The Ballot

SPIVEY'S CORNER, N.C. (AP) — Move over Jimmy, Ted, Ronnie, George and all the rest of you — here comes O'P. O'P is a bred-and-fed Spivey's Corner opossum — or, as they say in the South, 'possum — who wants to put his fellow 'possum, Pogo, in the White House.

Pogo, the cartoon strip creation of the late Walt Kelly, has been courted frequently as a presidential candidate. Even today, Pogo-for-President buttons and bumper stickers tout the intellectual 'possum as the best of the litter.

It was the most recent resurgence of Pogomania that piqued O'P's public conscience, according to Ermon Godwin of Spivey's Corner.

"O'P has decided to volunteer his services to Pogo," Godwin said Wednesday. "He's got the political machine already at work. He's going to put Pogo in the White House, and those other candidates might as well start playing 'possum right now."

Spivey's Corner, population 49, is the home of the National Hollerin' Contest and also claims fame as the 'possum capital of the state.

Godwin said O'P has already started drafting Pogo's presidential campaign platform, based on the slogan: "Walk softly and wear a 'big grin,'" and on the promise to "put black-eyed peas and a pot in every home."

Another Mess For Us

The United States faces another Washington mess with the revelation that undercover FBI agents have implicated eight congressmen in an Arab payoff scheme.

As in all cases the individual members of Congress are entitled to be presumed innocent and the law should take its course.

The matter definitely needs looking into by Congress, however. The House Ethics Committee Chairman Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., has said his committee would expand a current investigation to include the FBI affair.

He hinted that an investigation was already underway involving one or more of the people in question.

Handling Congressional ethics is certainly difficult. All members of the House and Senate are elected by their constituents. The members of Congress are reluctant to set themselves up as judges above the opinions of the electorate.

Yet service in Congress should demand the highest character. If congressmen violate accepted ethics, why then shouldn't government workers or ordinary citizens?

This investigation should proceed on all fronts. There should be no cover-ups or white-washes, and there should be no hesitation to pursue court indictments if called for.

Dream: Bring Out The Best

The tortures, mutilations and murders in the New Mexico State Prison riots are horrifying to all decent people.

It is easy to write off the perpetrators as criminal minds, somehow different from the rest of us; yet this was the brutality of humans turned against other humans.

Such atrocities have been committed throughout history and not always by so-called criminal minds.

When we see the worst there is in humanity it serves to spur us on to get the best there is out of people.

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

The Agony Of A Liberal

WASHINGTON — Permit me to nominate, if I may, the saddest book of the season: "Academic Turmoil," by Theodore Gross. It provides a gripping account of a liberal's agonizing struggle between the demands of his intellect and the demands of his conscience, and it tells us a good deal about some of the ills of higher education.

Dr. Gross is now provost of the Capitol Campus of Pennsylvania State University, but he was for 20 years attached to the City College of New York. He is a certified intellectual. He was a professor of American studies at CCNY, then chairman of the English department, and until he was fired by President Robert E. Marshak in the spring of 1978, he was dean of humanities.

The story goes back to the spring of 1969, when black and Puerto Rican students, led by militants in and out of the college, served their "non-negotiable" demands upon the administration. Their demands, Dr. Gross acknowledges, were in "the best tradition of liberalism." The minorities demanded that City College serve all the people — in brief, that a policy be instituted by which any high-school graduate, regardless of his academic qualifications, would be enrolled at one of the colleges of the City University. This was the policy of Open Admissions. It became operative at CCNY in June of 1970, and it very nearly destroyed one of the nation's great institutions of higher education.

Dr. Gross watched in dismay, heartsick, as the demolition process tore the campus to bits. Until Open Admissions became the rule, "academic achievement was like a code of honor which had never included considerations of class, race, religion or national origin." The City College had raised a standard of intellectual excellence to which the ambitious but underprivileged youths of New York had repaired.

When the turmoil began, Dr. Gross was head of the English department. He had 125 full-time professors, assistant professors and instructors under him. Many of them had academic tenure. Many were specialists renowned in their fields — in Chaucer, in Shakespeare, in the contemporary drama. They were assisted by visiting poets, novelists and journalists.

Into this peaceful academic grove plunged the Minotaur. Swarms of ill-prepared students descended, clutching their worthless high-school diplomas, demanding their right to higher education. There were many exceptions, of course, but by and large the horde was composed of blacks and Puerto Ricans who could not write, who could not read, who could not spell.

They came to City College bubbling with expectations; they remained, boiling with frustration. The resentment of the students inflamed the hostility of the faculty. Almost 90 percent of City College students soon were taking some form of remedial instruction. The chaos was compounded by ethnic tensions, by the demands of affirmative action and by interdepartmental bickering. In such an atmosphere, Dr. Gross asked himself despairingly, how could poetry survive?

The greatest tension existed within the hearts and minds of those who believed implicitly in the theory of Open Admissions. They felt that the very essence of their liberal faith was being tested. In their hearts they hungered for democratization; in their minds they sensed it wouldn't work.

At long last Dr. Gross — he had now become dean of humanities — poured his soul into an essay. The piece appeared in Saturday Review in January 1978. Four months later President Marshak effectively fired him for the public expression of disloyal opinions. The incident created a brief but fierce storm in academia. Then it all dropped out of the news.

In "Academic Turmoil," Dr. Gross revives and expands his original essay. In a concluding chapter he offers recommendations for resolving the conflict between Open Admissions and academic excellence. Regrettably, his first vision is better than his second. He still is unwilling to face and to accept the truth

To the editor:

Re: "The Daily Reflector" Page 1 story Jan. 31, 1980, Thursday, Utilities Told New Fuel Charge Boost.

How can the commission possibly state that GUCO is $400,000 in the red due to VEPCO's constantly increasing fuel charges, when in fact, GUCO has turned over a surplus of over $4,500,000 to the City of Greenville during the 10 years 1968-78, and over $900,000 surplus funds to the City of Greenville during the year 1979? I think it's high time the citizens of our community and GUCO customers know that, in fact, their surcharges are creating a surplus, have created a surplus, and that the surplus is a built-in operating factor budgeted by GUCO.

In light of such surplus, it would appear to me improper to pass along "excess fuel charges" until and if such charges exceed their actual net operating costs, and in fact, GUCO is a municipally operated non-profit utility to serve its citizens. The choice of adjectives by Director Charles Horne is, however, quite appropriate. I agree. It's "outrageous"! When fuel oil seems priced almost beyond the reach of most... and gas continues to cost more... woodstoves are soaring in prices and in short supply... it seems this last attack by our legal monopoly local utility on our citizenry fuel budgets while enjoying a huge surplus of funds is, in fact, outrageous! How does Mr. Horne justify passing along this charge? Perhaps GUCO should absorb the next $5.5 million of charges, with perhaps the help of the city fathers who have graciously accepted these GUCO windfalls for 11 years straight now!

To the editor:

"All I know is what I read in the paper" — and from what I've read, there seems to be quite a brouhaha among certain conservative/reactionary members of the community over the movie, "Life of Brian." This makes me angry for a couple of reasons:

1. After seeing the movie, I wondered: "have any of these people taken the trouble to actually see the movie? (In reference to an earlier letter in this column — the movie is rated "R," not "X," and the nude scene might last 30 seconds.) Granted, everyone has his/her right to make an opinion known, but come on, let's not base our opinions on hearsay and misinformation. These groups, whose names I need not mention, have evidently been stirred into a frenzy by misinformed leaders and led like sheep to protest an entertaining movie that might seem to some to "threaten" Christianity only because it is set in 33 A. D. Saturday afternoon about tea time and has a grand time poking fun at all those old horrendous overly pious quasi-authentic semi-Biblical epics. (I heard of one scene — not in the film — that made Christianity look pretty foolish — it seems there were all these people with signs picketing a movie theater.)

2. Remember the Bill of Rights? The Constitution? When people, however well-intentioned, want something censored or removed from public consumption, they are attacking basic rights. Freedom of speech and of the press must extend even to things we may not like, for if our basic rights and freedoms are to survive, they must withstand the tyranny of self-serving, even if well-intentioned, special interest groups.

If a certain movie or book displeases you, don't read or watch it. However, if you wish to disagree with its contents, read or watch it before forming your opinion. And please don't interfere with my right to decide for myself what I may read or watch and I'll be glad to do the same for you.

To the Editor:

Actually this is to Mayor McGlohn, the City Manager, and Council.

Many of you are relatively new in Greenville and don't remember when the Rescue Squad was organized. Fire Chief George Gardner was wholeheartedly in favor of it and helped in every way he could. The squad was made up of some paid firemen and more volunteers. They worked and studied on their own, to become experts in rescue work.

The Rescue Squad had their own organization, their own officers — but were answerable to the Fire Chief, who was wholeheartedly interested in what they did.

After Gardner retired, the squad continued to function well with Chief Jasper Jones.

Next came Chief Ray Smith.

What makes Chief Allen any different? It is my opinion he can function as well as Gardner, Jones or Smith.

Why can't rescue and fire continue to work together as they have for 25 years?

The Volunteers are too valuable for the City to lose. They do the work because they see the need, they do it as a labor of love. The city has 13 paid rescue men. They were not required to fight fires. They are rescue members because that was where their interest lay. The Firemen are excellent at their job, but most have no interest in Rescue work, a very specialized vocation.

We need both, a first class Fire Department and an excellent Rescue Squad.

The people in Greenville are upset and concerned at this situation. Can it be personal? A power struggle? Our Fire Department and our Rescue Squad are both too valuable to all of us in the city and community to allow a petty power struggle to disrupt a good working organization.

Mr. City Manager, I don't know what authority or influence you may have but I appeal to you, on behalf of the Senior Citizens in Greenville and the community, to do what you can to heal the rift.

We look to you to solve this problem! We can't have our Rescue Squad broken up.

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

Columnist Bill Noblitt recently told how local government officials across the state are hoping to get the property tax revolt off their backs.

Among new approaches of extracting taxes from the people without having to look them in the eye while doing it, is the possibility of state "revenue-sharing" funds for local governing bodies.

Having the state pick up a bigger share of the tab for such things as welfare and schools is another suggestion. Also, other kinds of taxes are envisioned: a local payroll withholding tax, hotel and motel taxes and increased sales taxes.

The message to the taxpayer, however, is unmistakable: No one is discussing reducing spending or even holding the line on spending. And there should be no mistaking where the money comes from. There is only one source — you. The only question is in what form will it be extracted.

Two of the most dangerous suggestions are state revenue sharing and local payroll tax deductions.

We need but look around us in any community to see the effects of "revenue-sharing." It is a means by which one governing body far removed from the people extracts the money while allowing those closer to the people to make the decisions on spending it.

The danger here is that it is much easier to appropriate funds for building projects or anything else if those making the expenditure do not have to also vote the tax to pay the cost.

In short: politicians' authority to spend should carry with it the responsibility to tax.

This prevents creating and perpetuating the illusion that the people are getting something for nothing.

The local payroll deduction also is an insidious approach through which governments may extract taxes on such a gradual basis the victim is not aware of how hard he is being hit. The best examples are the federal and state income tax deductions.

Passing the buck to a higher level of government should not be an acceptable response to the taxpayer revolt. It is not a solution to the burden of the taxpayer. It is simply a way to block his most effective way to protest excessive spending.

THE KINGDOM

Even a superficial reading of the New Testament reveals that Jesus began his ministry as a very popular preacher and ended as a figure largely in disfavor with both the ecclesiastical leaders and the multitudes.

Why did Jesus lose his popularity? It was because he pointed out the falseness and futility of the conception which nearly everyone had about the nature of a deliverer. From the high priest to the beggar on the temple steps, every Jew of our Lord's day was looking for a messiah who would be a conquering hero. He would drive out the Roman overlords, make the Jewish nation free, and establish its political dominance over the world.

Jesus repudiated all such notions. I am a deliverer from sin, he said; a humble man who preaches a message of love. The true kingdom is leaven in a lump of dough. It is a mustard seed cast into the ground. It is a kingdom of love which will start with a handful of devoted people and at last overwhelm the world.

within circles", he says, and the "maze can take anywhere from 11 days to infinity some just get lost ... it's an endless loop".

cards will be printed automatically. Rules, regulations and forms would be stripped to their simplest; and county workers would have a greatly simplified series of questions, accompanied by instructions to follow depending upon answers.

Chalmers sees this as a systematic, logical process giving the same results regardless of the worker or the county; decisions coming from information provided and not interpretations.

Cost

How much all of this will cost is still open-ended. At the state level, about 30 eligibility agents can be phased out. Equipment and programs will cost about $1.5 million over three years. At the county level, from one-eighth to two and one-half employees will be added, and equipment costing about $9,000 per year required.

Brown To Run Against Ingram

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Kenneth Brown, the state's chief deputy commissioner of insurance until last Monday, said today he plans to stay in the Democratic race for commissioner and actively campaign against his former boss, incumbent John Ingram.

"I'm definitely going to stay in the race. I feel there needs to be a firm, positive approach to what the commissioner is trying to do," Brown said in an interview today. "Now that I have been fired, and I have been fired, I'm just going to go ahead and run for it."

Brown said he was fired Monday morning a short time after Ingram filed the necessary papers with the state Board of Elections to become a candidate for a third term.

Only an hour earlier Brown had filed as a candidate, and he said later he had believed Ingram was planning to run for lieutenant governor rather than re-election.

Ingram has denied firing Brown and said the chief deputy commissioner resigned voluntarily.

Brown, a former Methodist minister who has worked as a deputy under Ingram since 1973, is one of four persons challenging Ingram in the May 6 Democratic primary.

Former Ingram deputy commissioners Jim Long and Roy Rabon, and state Sen. Carolyn Mathis, D-Charlotte, have filed as candidates.

Rabon and Mathis both originally said they did not plan to remain in the race if Ingram entered it, but have reconsidered their positions since the incident involving Brown.

Mrs. Mathis and Rabon both said they were still considering whether to remain in the race.

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected in the forecast period, until Friday, from southeastern New Mexico to Mississippi and western Tennessee. Snow is forecast from eastern New Mexico and Colorado to northern Arkansas and Missouri. Most of the nation will be cold. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Major Disruption By Snowfall

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — The second major snowfall within a week buried northeastern North Carolina under 16 inches or more of snow early today, disrupting power lines, shutting off some telephone service and blocking several highways.

Two deaths were attributed to weather-related traffic accidents Wednesday as the storm moved eastward, leaving up to nine inches of snow in the mountains, one to four inches in the center of the state and then blanketing northeast North Carolina with one of its heaviest snowfalls.

Authorities in Elizabeth City, a city of about 15,000, and Pasquotank County used volunteers with four-wheel drive vehicles to answer emergency calls and to transport staff personnel to hospitals and nursing homes.

"There are places where my patrol cars just can't go, even with chains," said Pasquotank Sheriff D.M. Sawyer. "We've had volunteers on top of volunteers helping us."

Sawyer's department was left without its prime communications system during most of the night when electric power was lost to sections of Pasquotank, Camden and Currituck counties. His officers used walkie-talkies to keep in touch.

Sawyer said drifts, fanned by winds gusting to 20 mph during the night, had reached three to four feet in rural, exposed areas.

"I mean it's a snow. It's certainly the biggest I've seen here," said Sawyer, 51.

Elizabeth City took on an abandoned look late Wednesday as the full fury of the storm struck. Businesses closed, traffic came to a halt and most people took shelter.

"This is the first time I've ever felt like I was mayor of a ghost town," commented Mayor John H. Bell Jr.

The snow stopped falling in the Elizabeth City area shortly after midnight. Electric service was restored in most areas shortly before dawn today, although Sawyer said some rural sections remained without power.

A storm last week left five to seven inches of snow in the Elizabeth City area, which normally gets only one to three inches a year. Remnants of that first snow were still on the ground when the new storm developed Wednesday.

Public schools were closed across the state Wednesday, and many remained closed today.

The unusual accumulation pattern, heavy snow in the western and eastern sections of the state and light snowfall in the center, developed when a high-level storm spread across the state from the Midwest. As that storm was weakening, it collided with a moist low-pressure area moving up the coast from South Carolina. The extra moisture gave the storm new punch as it moved across eastern North Carolina.

Southern Bell Granted Rate Increase By State

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Southern Bell was granted slightly more than half the $45.3 million rate increase the company had asked for by an order issued Wednesday by the North Carolina Utilities Commission.

"It's rather difficult to be completely pleased about an order granting slightly more than half of the amount we requested in our application," said vice president Alan E. Thomas in a reaction statement.

"The $45.3 million we asked was well within the president's wage and price guidelines. Every dollar was vital to our continued ability to finance ever-widening and ever-improving communications in North Carolina."

Because of inflation, Thomas said, Southern Bell has been unable to earn the rates of return authorized by Southern Bell in more than a decade. Inflation, he said, "tends to obsolete rate orders, so that they are often too little and too late."

The Utilities Commission granted the company an increase of 5.7 percent, instead of the 10.2 percent the company had asked for. The 5.7 percent will result in a revenue increase of $25.5 million.

The commission's action on Southern Bell's proposal came after seven months of investigation into the request and hearings across the state.

Under the utility's proposal, the residential rate for local service would have increased an average of 45 cents a month for one-party service and approximately 25 cents a month for two-party service.

The commission order allows an increase averaging 35 cents per month for one-party service and 25 cents per month for two-party service, for an average increase of four percent on residential rates.

Bell had asked for an increase from $31.10 to $39.70 for installing a residential telephone for a new customer. It got an increase to $36.75 under the commission's order.

The utility also wanted an increase for installing a business telephone from $40 to $73. The commission's order will allow Bell to increase the charge to $48.10.

The commission ruled that the approved rates under the 5.7 percent rate increase would allow Bell to earn a 10.19 percent rate of return on its property. The commission said the increase was granted because of the impact of inflation on Bell's costs.

Reports On Loan Volume

Arnold B. Parris, president of the Pitt-Greene Production Credit Association, reported that the PCA reached a loan volume of $50,140,467 during 1979 with 1,557 farmers, growers and ranchers for operating and capital investment credit on an intermediate basis.

The Pitt-Greene PCA is one of 58 providing agricultural credit services to nearly 61,000 farmers, growers, ranchers and commercial fishermen in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, Parris said.

He noted that on Dec. 31, the 58 associations had nearly $2 billion outstanding. The amount of loans made during the year was more than $1.8 billion, Parris added.

The local association, he explained, is a farmer owned and operated cooperative serving the credit needs of farmers and their families in Pitt and Greene Counties. Home office is in Greenville and a branch office is located in Snow Hill.

At year end, assets of the association were $41,064,374 and net worth totaled $8,848,255. The association had $37,152,184 in member loans and $513,183 in accumulated earnings.

Judge Fears His Errors

WINAMAC, Ind. (AP) — The judge presiding at Ford Motor Co.'s trial on charges of reckless homicide says he may have made errors in the landmark criminal liability case that will lead an appeals court to overturn the jury's ultimate verdict.

"I don't presume to know how to try this case," Pulaski County Judge Harold R. Staffeldt said Wednesday out of the presence of the jury weighing Ford's responsibility in a fiery, fatal Pinto accident.

"We already have evidence admitted that probably should not have been admitted and might be a basis for reversible error," he said.

Staffeldt made the remark to state and Ford lawyers after dismissing the jury to allow the attorneys to argue admissibility of evidence.

Neither prosecutor Michael Cosentino nor defense attorney James Neal was immediately available for comment.

Staffeldt on Wednesday allowed testimony about crash tests on other than 1973 model Pintos, one day after ruling the tests could not be admitted. However, he upheld objections from Ford attorneys and did not allow crash tests on a modified 1973 Pinto and a 1971 Pinto sedan.

Ford is charged with three counts of reckless homicide in the August 1978 deaths of three young women whose 1973 Pinto sedan burst into flames when hit from behind. The state contends Ford recklessly designed the fuel tanks, did nothing to correct the defects and failed to warn the public.

Gold Leaf Went Down The Drain

MIAMI (AP) — Thinking vandals had sprayed yellow paint on a U.S.-Latin friendship monument, city crews sloshed on paint thinner and scrubbed the yellow stuff away.

Down the drain went Oscar Dior's 14-karat gold leaf. Dior, an artist who runs a sign business, said he applied the gold to the Colombian coat of arms at the Torch of Friendship in December. The torch is in the city's Bayfront Park of the Americas and contains plaques from Latin nations symbolizing friendship with the United States.

Dior, who lived in Colombia for 15 years, highlighted the plaque with $500 of gold leaf because he said it was too dirty to recognize.

Accepted $25,000 Bribe To Stage 'His Own Probe'

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — One of eight members of Congress named in the FBI's bribery investigation admits taking $25,000 in cash, but says he did so as part of his own personal inquiry into wrongdoing by unidentified "shady characters."

Rep. Richard Kelly of Florida, the only Republican named in the FBI "sting," told that story in a lengthy interview on a network television news special Wednesday, shortly after the Justice Department indicated there likely would be indictments in the case within 90 days.

Also Wednesday, Assistant Attorney General Philip Heymann cautioned the House and Senate Ethics Committees that if they pursued their own competing investigations, they could imperil the prosecution of those who may have committed criminal acts.

"A number of guilty individuals may go unprosecuted or unpunished," said Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti in a letter read to the committees by Heymann.

Washington where he met some "shady characters" whom he later learned were FBI agents, Kelly said.

"I was in a state of agitation," he said of the time he was offered money. "I would have preferred not to have taken the money but I didn't want my investigation to die there," he said.

Kelly said he was not sure what he was investigating or where it would lead.

Kelly, a member of the House since 1974, said he locked the cash in the glove compartment of his car and later transferred it to his office. He said he spent some of it from time to time on a "rotating basis. If I went down to the District I would pay a lunch bill with it."

But Heymann said, "We are pretty firmly of the mind at present that the criminal trials should be allowed to go forward."

Heymann estimated that all indictments would be handed down within 120 days and trials completed in six months.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill quoted Civiletti as saying that "some cases are strong and some are not so strong."

The Senate Ethics Committee voted 6-0 to conduct a "preliminary inquiry" of the allegations against Sen. Harrison A. Williams, D-N.J. But the issue of whether to press for FBI evidence was left open.

Sources said the FBI overheard conversations between Cannon and Allen Dorfman, a Chicago businessman previously involved in a Teamsters Union pension fund scandal.

Late Wednesday, Heflin reported that it would conduct no investigation of similar reports involving Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., and Dorfman.

Two other members of the gambling commission have also been named, the newspaper said, in addition to Kenneth MacDonald, another member who resigned Monday.

Besides Murphy and Williams, others involved in the FBI political corruption probe are Reps. John Murphy, D-N.Y., Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J., Michael Myers, D-Pa., Raymond Lederer, D-Pa., John Jenrette, D-S.C., and John Murtha, D-Pa.

New Program?

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — A decision will be made soon on whether to start an additional paid diversion program for farmers to help cut next year's corn production in light of the Russian grain embargo, says Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland.

"We've already announced set-asides in which all growers who stay within normal crop acreages are entitled to price supports," Bergland said Wednesday. "What's currently under study is whether or not to have a paid diversion program to reduce the corn acreage modestly. If we do, it will target an erodible land."

Kelly appeared on the NBC Nightly News, and later on an expanded version of the interview, to explain why he took the money, which he said he took home stuffed in his pockets.

Builders Met Carter Advisor

Mark Tipton of Greenville, president of the North Carolina Home Builders Association, reported that a delegation from the NCHBA met with President Carter's top economic advisor to voice concern over the economic problems faced by the industry in the state.

Tipton described the meeting with Charles Shultz as "very cordial" but the economic advisor "didn't offer us any great hopes that the problem will be solved quickly."

Tipton related, "We pointed out that housing starts are down in North Carolina and that any slowdown in the home building industry has an immediate effect on many other industries such as textiles and furniture."

He noted, "We asked for immediate release of Brooks-Cranston funds, which would make more mortgage money available for low to middle income families. In addition, we urged defeat of pending legislation that is holding up the issuance of bonds by the N.C. Housing Finance Agency and asked for support of legislation that would provide tax incentives for savers."

Tipton said the delegation was assured by Shultz "that the administration is watching the housing situation closely and that there is no intention of letting housing starts slip to the near-depression levels of 1974-75. But Shultz made it clear that the administration is doing what it feels is necessary to combat inflation."

Charismatics Open 'Summit'

DALLAS (AP) — Leaders of the nation's Christian charismatics, encouraged by growing acceptance from traditional churches, today open an ecumenical summit in Dallas to assess the progress of their burgeoning "born-again" movement.

The three-day U.S. Summit Convocation, sponsored by the Episcopal Charismatic Fellowship, is expected to draw about 500 Baptist, Catholic, Episcopal, Lutheran, Methodist, and Pentecostal delegates.

Expects Aid For Abused Wives

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Alan Cranston says he expects Congress to approve federal aid to emergency shelters for abused wives now that the Carter administration has put its weight behind the idea.

Cranston, D-Calif., described the administration's shift from neutrality to support as "a significant breakthrough." Cranston said Wednesday that an estimated 5 million women are regular victims of domestic violence, about 2 million married couples have used lethal weapons against one another, and about one couple in six engages in violent acts each year.

Heavy Snow For Martin

WILLIAMSTON — Yesterday's snow fall disrupted the normal schedule of activities in Martin County, just as it did in most other places in Eastern North Carolina.

Williamston Police Chief Willie Rogers said, "from six to 12 inches," of snow, "depending on where you were in the county," fell yesterday.

Side streets in Williamston and some secondary roads in the county were, "still in bad shape," he said this morning, although main streets and highways were passable.

Schools in Martin County closed at noon yesterday, and remained closed today.

Martin County offices and Williamston town offices closed at 1 p.m. yesterday because of the snow, Rogers said, and were not scheduled to re-open until 1 p.m. today.

"Several merchants are closed today, too," Rogers said.

The police official said no major accidents occurred yesterday.

Duke Out Of Title Race

Cavaliers Whip Blue Devils

By DICK BRINSTER
Associated Press Writer
There was an old saying heard each fall in the streets of Brooklyn that probably sums up the dilemma of the once-awesome Duke basketball team.

"Wait till next year," they cried after their beloved Dodgers had fallen prey to the much-despised Yankees time after time. And in Durham today they can say "Wait till the ACC Tournament," because a reasonable man would assume that's all that remains this season for the 10th-ranked Blue Devils.

On Wednesday night 18th-ranked Virginia, with 7-foot-4 freshman center Ralph Sampson resembling a hammer, drove another nail in Duke's coffin. The 73-69 victory by the Cavaliers dropped the Blue Devils to sixth place in the Atlantic Coast Conference race. "It's a tough loss for us," said Blue Devil coach Bill Foster, practically echoing his words of last Saturday when league leader Maryland blew Duke off the court.

Now the Blue Devils, who earlier this season were the top ranked team in the nation, have lost five of 10 ACC games. Barring a catastrophic collapse by seventh-ranked Maryland, which stands 8-1 in the ACC, Duke will again fail to win outright its first regular-season crown since 1966.

In losing the Blue Devils slipped behind Virginia, North Carolina State and Clemson. N.C. State beat Georgia Tech, 60-49, and Clemson routed Wake Forest 86-69 in the other ACC contests.

"I don't really have much to say," Foster added in his post-game press conference, but one picture was worth a thousand words.

Sampson, the most desirable commodity in the notebook of every eastern recruiter worth his weight in salt, was literally a tower of strength in the second half.

After being held to just four points in the first 20 minutes and sitting out five minutes of the second half with four fouls, the Harrisonburg, Va., product poured in 16 second-half points and buried Duke under the barrage.

This, after Sampson spent the better part of the last week fighting off the effects of the flu and losing 10 pounds in the process.

In addition to his 20 points, Sampson pulled down 10 rebounds before fouling out. His counterpart, Mike Gminski, scored 24 points for Duke, but was limited to 6-19 from the floor.

Jeff Lamp led the Cavaliers, now 6-4 in the ACC and 16-5 overall, with 21 points. Lee Raker added 14. Gene Banks had 18 for the Blue Devils.

Not all the Bill Fosters of the basketball world had rough nights, however. The one who calls the shots at Clemson "thought it was time for a change," and couldn't have been much happier with the results.

He shifted 6-foot-10 forward Larry Nance to center and Nance turned in a career-high 25 points. This sparked a second-half surge that erased a three-point halftime deficit and gave Clemson an easy victory.

"The change was mainly made to loosen things up a little on offense," Foster said. "People have been clogging up the middle and stopping (John) Campbell, so we thought we'd try a more mobile lineup."

Horace Wyatt tossed in 16 points for the Tigers, now 6-4 in the ACC and 16-5 overall, and Fred Gilliam added 13.

Jim Johnstone paced the Demon Deacons, 3-7 in the league and 10-10 overall, with 20 points.

N.C. State's victory over

Georgia Tech was the 1,000th in the school's history. Hawkeye Whitney led a balanced scoring attack for the Wolfpack, now 5-4 in the ACC and 15-5 overall, with 13 points.

Wolfpack coach Norm Sloan breathed a sigh of relief afterward, noting that Georgia Tech is 0-11 in the ACC.

"Everybody says they're going to beat a conference team, and you hope it's not you," said Sloan.

Brooke Steppe had a game-high 22 points for the Yellow Jackets, now 5-15 overall, and Lenny Horton tossed in 14.

UCLA To Sign Rose's Butler

Ron Butler, one of the most highly recruited high school football players in North Carolina, will sign a National Letter of Intent with UCLA, a source told "The Daily Reflector" Wednesday.

UCLA, which does not have a conference letter of intent that must be signed, must wait to sign Butler until February 20, the official NCAA signing date.

In landing the 6'3", 235 pound high school senior, the Bruins beat out Duke, Wake Forest, Clemson, Iowa State, Maryland and East Carolina.

Butler, All-State the last two years in North Carolina, played tight end and linebacker for Greenville Rose this past season and helped lead the Rampants to the state 4-A finals, where Rose lost to High Point Central, 21-9.

Butler, who is also the defending state heavyweight champion, was named as the top high school recruit by sports writers.

Taiwan Athletes Continue Fight

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Athletes from Taiwan, pressing a court suit to call themselves representatives of The Republic of China, continue to seek admission to the Winter Games here despite the International Olympic Committee's refusal to allow them into the Olympic Village.

Meanwhile, an American on the IOC described as ineffective President Carter's call for the United States to stay out of the Summer Games in Moscow unless the Soviet Union ends its occupation of Afghanistan.

And IOC President Lord Killanin arrived here from Ireland to rally opposition to a boycott of the Moscow Games.

The delegation from Taiwan awaited a decision as early as today on a discrimination suit filed by a Taiwanese athlete against Lake Placid Olympics Inc., the operating committee for the Winter Games.

A favorable ruling by New York State Supreme Court Justice Norman L. Harvey could allow Taiwan's entry into the Games under its national flag and anthem, said Taiwan spokesman Timothy Lynch.

An IOC resolution adopted in Japan last fall bars the Taiwanese from using the name China or their traditional flag or anthem.

The People's Republic of China holds China's U.N. seat and for the past year has been recognized by the United States as the government of China. The Nationalist regime on Taiwan no longer has formal nation's status in the international community.

However, the IOC resolution said Taiwan's athletes could compete as a team under a different name, flag and anthem. The Peoples Republic of China is competing in the Games for the first time, and 28 of its athletes were given credentials last week.

Five athletes from Taiwan, the team coach and two officials made a symbolic attempt Wednesday to obtain permanent credentials and housing at the Olympic Villg core turned away.

More Taiwanese competitors were arriving today.

"This is a blow to our athletes," said Michael Lee, secretary-general of the Taiwan Olympic committee. "Not only do we not have a place to stay but they are unable to find a place to practice until this is cleared up." They were housed temporarily in a hotel where IOC officials are staying.

A Swiss court refused this week to block implementation of the IOC resolution, leaving the group's hopes with the suit in the county-level Supreme Court in nearby Plattsburgh.

IOC President Cold To Boycott

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — "The bane of my life is the word boycott," says Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee (IOC).

Killanin's comment as he arrived in Lake Placid for the Winter Olympic Games Wednesday night sets the tone for the IOC session this weekend. There is likely to be no support for President Carter's call for next summer's Olympic Games to be moved from Moscow, cancelled or boycotted.

"I think it is very important that we should not be dictated to by governments on where we shall go," Killanin said at a press conference, underlying the traditional role of the Olympic Games as being independent of politics.

Some 76 of the 89 members of the self-elected, self-perpetuating IOC, the ruling body of the Games, are expected for the Lake Placid session. Some have already arrived and have indicated they are backing Killanin and standing firm against Carter's boycott call.

Julian K. Roosevelt, one of the two IOC members from the United States, kept up his campaign to keep the Olympic Games in Moscow, despite the world reaction against the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

"I have heard it said that a boycott of the Olympics would be the strongest weapon we could use against the Russians," Roosevelt said before Killanin arrived. "If that is the strongest thing we can do, we have no Washington."

"The United States would be a bunch of cowards if we stayed home. The only way we can stand up to the Soviets is to go over there and beat them in Moscow this summer."

Killanin plans to meet Friday with Robert Kane and Col. F. Donald Miller, president and secretary, respectively, of the U.S. Olympic Committee, which has promised to pass on Carter's call for moving or cancelling the Games.

Killanin told the news conference he is ready to let Kane and Miller go before the full session of the IOC, although he has said repeatedly the Games cannot be moved from Moscow.

"Any national Olympic committee has the right to express views to the IOC," Killanin said.

But the U.S. Olympic Committee cannot put a resolution on the IOC agenda. The 140 national Olympic committees around the world are simply recognized by the IOC and play no part in its deliberations.

Rockets Win, 115-114

Barry Fires In 7 Threes

By The Associated Press

For openers, Houston's Rick Barry showed seven 3's Wednesday night but he had a pair of aces in the hole that proved fatal to the New Jersey Nets.

Barry set a National Basketball Association record with seven three-point baskets — he tried nine — but it took his pair of free throws with four seconds left to give the Rockets a four-point lead in route to a 115-114 victory over the Nets.

"I can't go crazy with it (the three-pointers)," said Barry, who hit his first four long-distance shots late in the opening period after the Rockets fell behind 19-7. "I think all the shots I took tonight were good. I just don't try to force them."

Barry's long-range bombing enabled him to top the Rockets with 27 points. His seven three-point baskets broke the NBA record of five which he shared with Boston's Chris Ford and San Diego's Brian Taylor.

Celtics 129, 76ers 110

Larry Bird, Nate Archibald and Cedric Maxwell led a furious second-half charge in rallying Boston from a 14-point third-period deficit. Bird scored 22 of his 32 points in the second half while Archibald had all of his 18 and Maxwell 15 of his 19 in the final two periods. The victory put the Celtics two full games ahead of the 76ers in the Atlantic Division.

Suns 97, Kings 95

Walter Davis scored 21 points, including a game-winning 10-foot jump shot with three seconds to go. The Suns, down 76-69 going into the final period, outscored the Kings 13-6 to knot the game 82-82 on a lay-up by Truck Robinson with 7:10 remaining. With 14 seconds left and the score tied at 95, the Suns called a timeout and inbounded the ball to Davis, who held it until his game-winning shot.

Bucks 111, Cavaliers 109

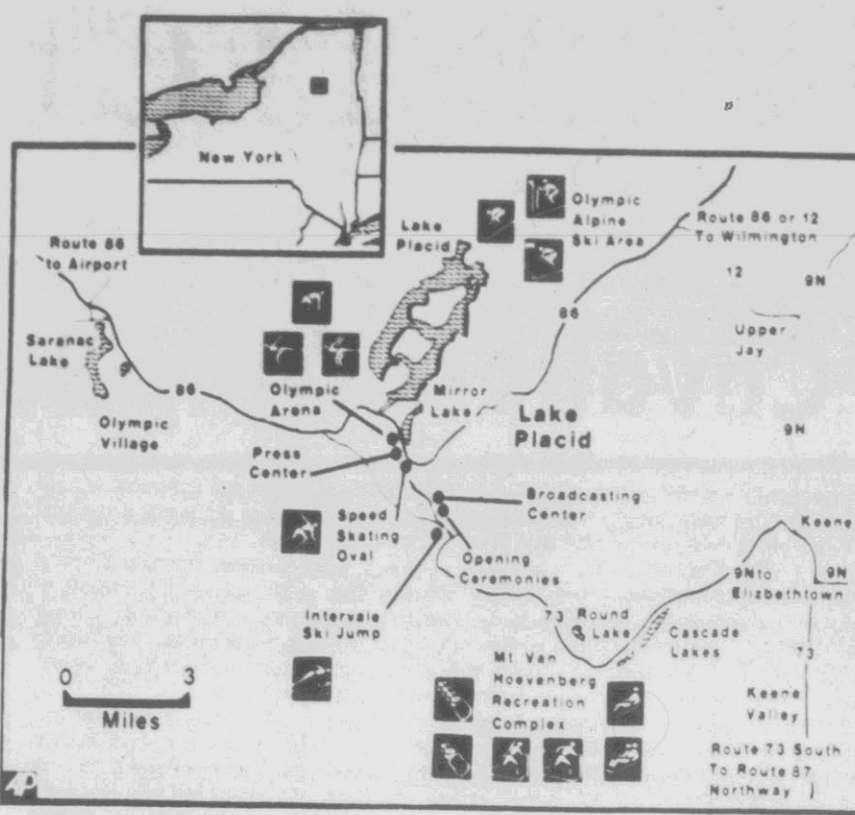

Brian Winters sank a 20-foot jumper from the top of the key at the buzzer for the winning basket. The lead changed hands six times in the final 2:51, the last when Junior Bridgeman, who finished with 23 points, sank a jump shot to put the Bucks ahead 109-108 with 28 seconds left. Cleveland's Kenny Carr made one of three free throws to tie the score with 11 seconds left. Winters then took a pass and fired up a shot on what appeared to be a broken play but the ball swished through as time expired. Mike Mitchell scored 26 for the Cavaliers while Lanier had 14 in his debut with Milwaukee after being acquired from Detroit.

Warriors 117, Clippers 92

Phil Smith scored 10 points in the final 2½ minutes of the first half as Golden State broke open a tight game. The Clippers played without Lloyd Free, the second-leading scorer in the NBA. The team announced that Free missed the flight from San Diego, although the plane was forced to return there because of engine trouble. Freeman Williams, subbing for Free, scored 29 points. Smith finished with 21. The Clippers' Bill Walton played 16 minutes and scored eight points in his second game of the season.

Nuggets 122, Bulls 111

John Roche and newcomer Alex English keyed a fourth-quarter Denver surge as the Nuggets moved ahead of the Bulls and the idle Utah Jazz into third place in the Midwest Division.

Alcott Leads Field At LPGA Tournament

MIAMI (AP) — A $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament begins today with a field that includes 20 of the top money winners of 1979, including defending champion Amy Alcott.

The Elizabeth Arden Classic is the second LPGA event of the season, following last week's tournament in Deerfield Beach, Fla., won by JoAnne Carner.

Alcott, who is only 16 days shy of her 24th birthday, has been one of the steady golfers on the tour since she turned pro five years ago. She has won nine tournaments and earned $370,000.

Her fascination with the game started early.

"When I was small I was a cartoon nut," she recalled between practice sessions. "After the cartoons, the golf tournaments came on and I loved to watch them. They had a certain mystique. It was a very gentle game, like watching ballet. I was fascinated by it."

Alcott coaxed her mother into buying her a set of cut-down clubs, and by age 9, she was hitting a ball about four hours a day.

"My dad put a net in the back yard for me to hit into," she said. "We put a sandtrap in the middle of the ivy patch in the front yard. I used soup cans as cups in the yard ..."

"I chipped for hours and hours. I skulled sand wedges and broke my bedroom window three times. I sent balls into the street and across to the convent next door."

Alcott began playing the municipal courses at age 14 and the exclusive Riviera Country Club soon after. She went on to win the Los Angeles girls' title three times, the L.A. women's championship and the California Women's Amateur. She won the USGA Junior Championship at 17 and turned pro a year later.

"I don't do anything halfway," said Alcott, who won the Orange Blossom Classic within a month of turning pro. "I'm a perfectionist. I figure if you're put on this earth with a good mind and a good body, you should use it."

Despite her rapid success, Alcott scorns those who tell her she has it made.

"There are still worries about correcting a shank or wondering why suddenly I'm hooking the ball," she said. "I think you've got to be part masochist to play this game. You always inflict pain on yourself."

"Playing on the tour is not a normal existence. You live like a traveling salesman, like you're a traveling show."

What bothers her most, Alcott says, is her treatment by the press.

"I don't like going out and playing well and not getting any recognition," she said. "I pick up the paper and I read Nancy Lopez is six off the lead, or Nancy Lopez is two off the lead, or that she has finished."

"I'm not saying that she doesn't deserve everything she gets, but there is no super-human out here, otherwise they'd win every tournament."

Hawaiian Open Starts Today

HONOLULU (AP) — George Burns, having just won his first big professional golf tournament, says he'll be taking a lesson today.

"I'm paired with Tom Watson and Jerry Pate in the first round of the Hawaiian Open and I can learn from each of them," said Burns, who comes off victory in the tough Bing Crosby event at Pebble Beach, Calif., last weekend.

"I'll watch both of them closely. I'll be taking some mental notes and I'll learn something."

"I played with Ben Crenshaw in the team championships last year and I learned a lot."

Burns and Crenshaw won the team title.

"I'm still searching for a lot," Burns said. "There is no such thing as instant success."

The 210-pound former University of Maryland golfer joined a field of 144 in the $325,000 Hawaiian event with its $58,500 first prize.

His victory at Pebble Beach was worth $54,000. Even without an individual victory in 1979, he collected $107,830 in prize money.

The 72-hole Hawaiian event includes Hubert Green, who won on this 7,234-yard, par 36-36-72 Waialae Country Club course the last two years.

Burns had a special reason to be pleased to be in the threesome with former U.S. Open champion Pate and Watson, the leading Professional Golfers Association money-winner the past three years.

"This is the first time I've been paired with such winners. I consider Watson the greatest player in the game today," said Burns.

"He's got to do something I can use to my benefit. Anybody who earned one-half million dollars in a year, with the kind of competition he had, has to be some sort of a player."

Macy, Bowie Lead 'Cats To Win

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Good things came in small — and big — packages for the Kentucky Wildcats Wednesday night.

And once they unwrapped Kyle Macy and Sam Bowie, the party was over for the Mississippi Rebels. Macy scored 28 points and Bowie collected 15 more and blocked six shots as fifth-ranked Kentucky defeated Ole Miss, 86-72.

"Macy was playing with great confidence," Mississippi Coach Bob Weltlich said of Kentucky's fine guard. "There isn't much you can plan against a player like that. We just tried to do the best job we could in guarding him."

Nor was there much the Rebels could do against Bowie, the seven-foot freshman center who seems to be playing at the top of his game these days.

"Bowie has improved a lot since the first game against us," said Weltlich. "We let him get started with a lob dunk. That was our mistake because we knew it was coming, but we just weren't ready for it defensively. He got his confidence and was a big factor."

Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall called Bowie's performance "the best defensive game he has played this year." Not only did Bowie block six shots, Hall said, "but he intimidated many, many more and caused a lot of walks."

Ralph Sampson, another sensational freshman center, scored 20 points to help 18th-ranked Virginia defeat 10th-ranked Duke 73-69 in another big game Wednesday night.

In other action involving Top Twenty teams, No. 3 Louisville stopped Cincinnati 88-73; No. 6 Louisiana State edged Alabama 68-66 in overtime; No. 9 Notre Dame walloped Manhattan 93-49; No. 15 Missouri beat Iowa State 84-70 and No. 16 Clemson blasted Wake Forest 86-69.

Macy scored eight of his game-leading points in an 18-2 second-half run that helped Kentucky break the game open against Mississippi. John Stroud, the Southeastern Conference's leading scorer, had 27 points for the Rebels.

"We were very concerned about Mississippi because of the fine way they've been playing," said Hall. "That was a real good victory for us."

Sampson scored 16 of his points in the second half, and the Cavaliers needed just about every one. Virginia's 7-foot-4 center contributed several key baskets, including a layup with just under six minutes to go, to boost the Cavaliers into a four-point lead they never lost.

Noted Duke Coach Bill Foster after losing his fifth Atlantic Coast Conference game in 10 this year: "I really don't have much to say. We played much better in the second half. We overcame 30 percent shooting in the first half. It's a tough loss for us."

Derek Smith scored a career-high 26 points and Darrell Griffith scored 13 and became the first player in Louisville history to hit the career 2,000-point level in the Cardinals' victory over Cincinnati. Griffith finished the game with 2,005 points for his four-year career.

"I think Louisville's defense is built on quick spurts. You've seen that all season," said Cincinnati Coach Ed Badger. "Our game plan was not to get into a running match with them. We started out and got behind them and wanted to attack."

"Then we got into a rat race, we went up and down, made three errors in a row, they made three buckets in a row and that was the thing right there."

Willie Sims hit two free throws with four seconds remaining in overtime to lead LSU over Alabama. The Tigers controlled the ball for the entire overtime period and with four seconds left, Mike Davis fouled Sims, who calmly put through the winning points.

Kelly Tripucka returned to the starting lineup after missing four games with back spasms and scored 15 points to lead Notre Dame past Manhattan. Tripucka had eight of his points as the Irish rushed to a never-headed 20-2 lead in the first 10 minutes.

Elsewhere, Michael Brooks scored 20 points and grabbed 13 rebounds to pace LaSalle past Rhode Island 84-76; Hawkeye Whitney had 13 points in a balanced attack as North Carolina State whipped Georgia Tech 60-49; Reggie Johnson scored a career-high 43 points to trigger Tennessee past Florida 100-76; Terry Lewis hit six straight free throws in the final 2:33 to help Mississippi State beat Georgia 62-56 and Duquesne defeated West Virginia 49-38 behind Bruce Atkins' 14 points.

Midway through practice Monday afternoon Farmville Central coach Linwood Woodard called his wrestlers around him. Kneeling in the middle of the circle formed by the Jaguars, Woodard began to speak, ignoring the muffled thud of basketballs echoing throughout the long hall where Woodard's wrestlers practice.

"We've accomplished our first two goals, winning the conference title and going undefeated," says Woodard, whose Jaguars wrapped up the league crown with a 39-34 win over D.H. Conley Saturday evening and now were preparing for the sectionals this weekend at Greenville Rose.

"Now, I'm going to push you this week, but only in practice," Woodard says. "You're going to have to ready yourself. It's all up to you."

The challenge made, Woodard believes his wrestlers will respond. Going into the sectionals, which will include 26 teams east of Raleigh, he feels he has five wrestlers who could place in the top three, and thus earn a spot in the regionals. They are Roger Joyner (14-0 at 148 pounds), Mike King (15-1 at 158), Ronnie Locust (15-1 at heavyweight), David Newton (14-2 at 129) and Jerry Foreman (11-3 at 101).

"We should have at least half the team to place in the sectionals," says Roger Joyner, who won the sectionals at 135 pounds last year as a sophomore. "Our guys have worked hard and don't want to give up now."

Woodard is uneasy, however. "Not having a conference tournament is going to hurt us," he says. "Our kids usually peak for the tournament and we don't have one this year. But I still think we can place a number of kids in the regionals."

Woodard knows of what he speaks. Under his guidance Farmville has never had a losing season. In fact, during Woodard's seven-year reign the Jaguars have finished second in the sectionals once and have had six wrestlers advance to the state tournament in one season. And all of this with a coach who did not wrestle in college.

"I stayed across the hall from two (fraternity) brothers who were All-Americans at ECU and I got interested in wrestling," he recalls. "When I got here, they needed a coach for the wrestling program and I took the job."

From there, Woodard began going to clinics and talking with other wrestling coaches. "I just fell in love with the sport. We don't do anything fancy here. We rely mostly on the basics and I know that holds them back somewhat."

Nothing stopped Farmville this year. The Jaguars defeated arch-rival D.H. Conley early in the season (their first win ever in dual match competition) and then whipped the Vikings last Saturday to end the year with a 13-0 record, Farmville's best ever.

"Coach has done a real good job this year," says Newton, who is expected to battle for the sectional championship at 129 pounds despite a cut above his eye suffered against Conley. "The people here have been with him for a while. They're the ones who have stuck around."

While many wrestlers have come and gone at Farmville—Woodard had 39 show up the first day of practice—only a few have remained. Only four wrestlers have been with Woodard since they were freshman. "Coach calls it desire, hear," says Newton, who is one of the four.

"A wrestler needs a big heart," Woodard says. "Wrestling is such a demanding sport. The kids sacrifice so much, which is why a lot of kids don't stay around. A wrestler has to find glory within himself because the fan support isn't there."

"Sometimes a wrestler is not a very popular person in school and they don't feel like they can go out for basketball. For them wrestling is an outlet. It's a place where they can succeed. Some guys don't like one-on-one competition. Some kids depend on the team. Wrestlers have to depend on themselves."

Hayes To Leave Prison In March

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Bob Hayes will get out of prison next month after an 11-month stay.

The former Dallas Cowboy wide receiver and Olympic gold medalist, serving five years for cocaine delivery, was granted a parole by Gov. Bill Clements, who signed the order.

"I wrote him that I did so with a real sense of anticipation, that with his experiences now, both bad and good, he could be a great influence on young people, not only in Texas but in the entire country," the governor said Wednesday at a news conference.

Clements said he has read reports that Hayes plans to work with the Rev. Jesse Jackson's youth programs, but said he could not verify those reports personally.

Hayes will be eligible for release in March, according to a spokesman for the state Board of Pardons and Paroles, who said board members would determine the exact release date.

Hayes has served 10 months of his five-year sentence for delivering cocaine to an undercover officer.

The board had recommended Hayes for parole in early January, and Clements' staff concurred earlier this week.

Clements said Wednesday he had discussed the matter with Texas Department of Corrections director W.J. Estelle, who called Hayes a "model prisoner" and performed very well while in prison.

The governor said his decision to sign the parole was consistent with similar cases and Hayes got no special consideration.

IT'S ALL RELATIVE
NEW YORK (AP) — Bruce Jenner, the 1976 Olympic decathlon champion, was recently contemplating all the work he did leading up to that event at Montreal.

"I spent 12 years training for a career that was over in one week," he says.

Sectionals Begin Friday At Rose

Rose High School will again host the Northeastern Sectional High School Wrestling Tournament, Friday and Saturday.

The tournament will select finalists for the Regional Tournament, to be held next weekend in Cary. Winners there advance to the state tournament the following weekend in Winston-Salem.

Twenty-six schools are expected to send wrestlers to participate in the tournament. Preliminary matches will be held Friday at 6 p.m. in the

The first three place winners in each weight class will advance to Cary. In addition, the fourth place winners at 112 pounds, 145, and heavyweight will also move on to the regionals. The top four winners at each class in Cary gain State berths.

Schools participating include Ahoskie, Wilson Beddingfield, Raleigh Broughton, Cape Hatteras, Conley, Currituck, East Wake, Raleigh Enloe, Farmville Central, Wilson Fike, Governor Morehead, Edenton Holmes, Wilson Hunt, Manteo, North Pitt, Northeastern, Northern Nash, Plymouth, Roanoke, Rocky Mount, Rose, Raleigh Sanderson, Southern Nash, Tarboro, Washington and Williamston.

Mile Relay Team In NY

East Carolina's mile relay team will be participating in two prestigious events this weekend, in New York City and Cleveland.

The Pirates of Coach Bill Carson travel to Madison Square Garden on Friday night to participate in the Melrose Games.

Competition in that event will be telecast over the Madison Square Garden network, with complete coverage of the meet Friday night.

"There will be eight teams in two sections of four participating," Carson said. "I don't know yet which one we'll be in."

The Pirates will field a team of Carlton Bell, Otis Melvin, Shawn Laney and Stan Curry.

Then, on Saturday night, the Pirates will run in the Knights of Columbus meet in Cleveland. In addition to the mile relay team, Melvin and Curry have both been entered in the quarter-mile.

More Cars From Japan

One Pitt Firm Among N.C. Closings, Layoffs

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese automakers expect a 10 percent increase in production in 1980 and say they may overtake the United States as the world's leading auto manufacturer.

This year's target for Japan's 11 automakers is 10.6 million vehicles, 200,000 more than American companies expect to build.

The Japanese turned out 9.6 million vehicles last year, a far cry from the 5,000 cars a year that came off the lines in the early 1950s as the industry was rebuilding from the wreckage of World War II.

More than half of last year's production, or 4.5 million vehicles, were exported and brought in $15 billion. It was the largest item among the country's total exports of $101 billion. The carmakers expect their exports to climb 11 percent this year to 5 million units.

The Toyota Motor Co., Japan's largest automaker with 37.5 percent of the domestic market and 4.8 percent of the U.S. market, says its production will rise 7.5 percent to 3.2 million units. Its export estimate is 1.5 million units, up 9.8 percent.

These are only "target levels" intended to boost company morale, a company spokesman said. But he said last year's target levels were easily met.

One Pitt County firm was among a list of plant closings and permanent layoffs in the State in 1979, issued by the North Carolina Department of Commerce.

According to the second annual report issued by the commerce agency, 44 firms in the state disposed of 6,082 jobs during 1979, as compared with 47 firms and 8,868 jobs lost during 1978.

The Pitt County listing in the Department of Commerce report was the closing of U.S. Industries in Ayden on March 15, with the loss of 100 jobs.

The State's textile industry lost more jobs than any other manufacturing industry during 1979, with 17 textile firms disposing of 2,484 jobs, accounting for 40.8 percent of the total.

Textiles were followed by nine apparel firms and 1,344 jobs (22.1 percent of the total) in the standings.

The U.S. Industries plant was included in the apparel classification.

Eleven of the 44 plant closings were East of Raleigh. In addition to the one in Pitt, they included two in Nash County, two in Craven, two in New Hanover, two in Duplin, and one each in Hertford and Beaufort Counties.

Although U.S. Industries closed its operation, Blue Bell Inc. acquired the plant on July 1, and is producing apparel there at the present time.

Plant officials said yesterday that 105 people are employed at the present time, with employment expected to reach 140 by October 1980. The spokesman said employment should reach 175 to 200 within two years.

Firefighters extinguished the blaze of used books, trash and furniture within five minutes while students yelled insults at them, Wally said. Someone on the second floor of the dormitory threw a trash can of water on the firemen, he said.

About 40 minutes later, Wally said, firemen got a call to return to the dormitory, where students had reset the bonfire. Some of the students were sprayed with water accidentally as firemen were putting out the blaze, Wally said, and became angry.

One student tried to grab a firefighter, he said.

"And at that time we started backing out and we didn't put the fire out totally," Wally said.

Students lobbed beer cans and liquor bottles at the fire truck as it left campus, Wally said.

Voting Again On ERA Issue

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The Virginia Senate will take a vote for the second time in eight years on whether to ratify the proposed Equal Rights Amendment, but General Assembly approval appears doubtful.

"Getting this through the House seems unlikely," conceded Sen. Clive DuVal, patron of the pro-ERA resolution, after it was approved Wednesday by the Senate Privileges & Elections Committee. He predicted it would be sent to the House by a 21-19 Senate floor vote.

No Inquiry Oregon Inlet Into Incident Project Hit

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Davidson College official says the school doesn't plan to investigate an incident where about 200 Davidson students set bonfires and then threw beer cans and liquor bottles at firemen who tried to extinguish the blaze.

"One must understand we have here a thousand young people who were all in their dorm rooms," said Fred Zimmerman, academic vice president. "And when the lights go off and stay off for three hours, what are they going to do in the total darkness for three hours?"

The power went off at 8:35 p.m. Tuesday when a car struck a utility pole and knocked down some wires near the campus, Davidson police said.

Zimmerman contended that the two bonfires students set were harmless.

But Assistant Fire Chief Fred Wally said when firefighters answered the first call around 10:15 p.m. flames were singeing the paint on the second story of a two-story dormitory.

Firefighters extinguished the blaze of used books, trash and furniture within five minutes while students yelled insults at them, Wally said. Someone on the second floor of the dormitory threw a trash can of water on the firemen, he said.

About 40 minutes later, Wally said, firemen got a call to return to the dormitory, where students had reset the bonfire. Some of the students were sprayed with water accidentally as firemen were putting out the blaze, Wally said, and became angry.

OREGON INLET, N.C. (AP) — Four scientists working for the National Park Service have reported that a proposed Corps of Engineers project to rehabilitate Oregon Inlet won't work and will probably make the problem worse.

The reports tend to back up a statement made by Dr. Orrin Pilkey, a marine biologist at Duke University in Durham: "No marine biologist in the world would approve the Oregon Inlet project."

The scientists who issued the reports critical of the project are Dr. Douglas L. Inman, director of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography, La Jolla, Calif.; Dr. John C. Craft, chairman of the geology department at the University of Delaware; Dr. Robert A. Dalrymple, associate professor of marine engineering, University of Delaware; and Dr. Robert Dolan, professor of environmental sciences, University of Virginia.

Besides being unworkable, they said the Corps of Engineers' plan would create new problems on the Outer Banks that will be expensive to solve and will affect the environment in several ways that are harmful.

The Corps' project calls for two rock jetties, each more than a mile long, projecting into the ocean from the north and south sides of Oregon Inlet. A floating breakwater, designed to protect dredges in the inlet from ocean waves, will be offshore.

The idea is to stop the inlet's historical southward migration. It is hoped the project will keep the channel deep and wide, making it safer for local fishermen.

The basic question about the project is whether an inlet in a barrier island system can be anchored in one place while the project from anticipated waves ocean and coastal winds work constantly to keep it moving.

The migration of the inlet threatens to destroy the bridge

Deflect Wind And Save Fuel

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Society for the Plastics Industry estimates that trucks equipped with reinforced plastic wind deflectors to reduce wind drag can cut their fuel consumption as much as 10 percent. The Society figures that if 80 percent of U.S. trucks used the 52-pound devices, the annual energy savings would be 18 millions barrels of oil.

Unemployment Benefits Are Subject To Taxing

Recipients of Unemployment Insurance benefits during 1979 are advised that this income is subject to federal income tax, Jim Hannan, manager of the Pitt Co. Employment Security Commission office reminded today.

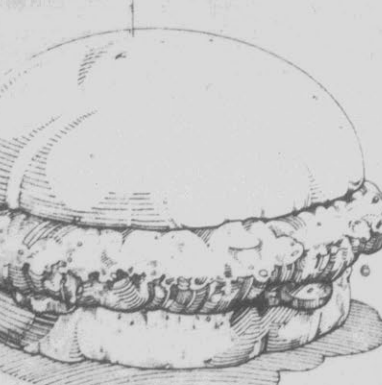

Under the federal law changes, a single person's benefits will be taxed if his income, including benefits, exceeds $20,000 a year. A married person filing a joint income tax return may have benefits taxed if the combined income, including benefits, exceeds $25,000. If a married person files a separate income tax return, benefits may be taxable regardless of total income. For tax purposes, unemployment compensation includes regular benefits, as well as trade adjustment allowances and amounts received under the disaster unemployment assistance program.

North Carolina law makes all unemployment benefits taxable for state income tax purposes, regardless of the amount of the income or the person's marital status.

Each unemployment insurance claimant will be sent a form, "Statement of Unemployment Compensation Payments," within the next two to three weeks, Hannan said. Any questions should be directed to the Internal Revenue Service. Claimants should not contact any Employment Security office regarding the filing of income taxes. The ES offices cannot help a claimant file a tax return and do not have any other information on federal or state income tax requirements, Hannan said.

Police Say Divorced Mother Abducted, Strangled A Child

ALAMEDA, Calif. (AP) — Wednesday, one day after the child was snatched from outside his home.

Darlin June Cromer, 33, of Pinole, was being held by Alameda authorities after being booked for investigation of kidnapping and murder, said police Sgt. Phil Bonadona. She was to be arraigned today in Municipal Court.

The woman, who has a history of psychiatric troubles, led police to 5-year-old Reginald Laon Williams' grave

Two More Flee Bolshoi Ballet

NEW YORK (AP) — While in Japan the Bolshoi Ballet promised the show would go on, two more defectors from the Soviet dance world arrived here after being granted asylum in the United States.

Soulamif Mikhailovno Messer, 71, a top Soviet ballet teacher, and her son, Mikhail Messer, 31, an occasional solo dancer with the Bolshoi Ballet, on Wednesday thanked the American and Japanese governments for their aid in the defection.

Mrs. Messer had been in Japan for the past three months giving ballet lessons to the Tchaikovsky Memorial Tokyo Ballet troupe. She is a widow, had visited Japan frequently over the past 20 years and speaks fluent Japanese.

Messerer joined his mother in Japan when the Bolshoi arrived there for a 12-city tour, and the two defected Tuesday in Tokyo. The troupe's first performance was in Tokyo last Saturday.

During a tour of the United States in August and September last year three better-known dancers with the famed Moscow company defected.

A spokesman for the U.S. embassy in Tokyo, John Ohta, said the Messerers "wanted a freer environment for artistic activities." The Tokyo newspaper Asahi Shimbun quoted police sources saying the two "despaired of life in Russian society."

When she arrived in New York, Mrs. Messer read a statement in English to reporters waiting for her at Kennedy International Airport, saying she wanted to "thank the American government for the opportunity to be here and thank the Japanese government for their help."

"The Soviet embassy (in Tokyo) didn't do anything against us," she said.

There was no immediate comment from Soviet officials.

Mrs. Cromer was arrested in San Francisco in 1977 following

According to police, the child, nicknamed "Monk," was abducted Tuesday while playing near the housing project where he lived.

Witnesses told authorities a boy was pushing Reginald around in a shopping cart when the two children were approached by a barefoot woman. As the mother of the other boy called her son into their house, the stranger began pushing Reginald toward her car.

A partial license number was traced to Ms. Cromer's car, police said.

"She confessed to strangling the victim with her own hands" about an hour later within yards of the boy's home, Bonadona said.

Officers and dogs had searched in vain for the body along the Pacific Ocean near San Francisco on Wednesday when Ms. Cromer, who had said she knew nothing of the child's whereabouts, led police to a grave near San Pablo Bay, authorities said.

"She was very calm, composed. She led us directly to the spot and pointed it out," said police detective Michael McLane. But he said authorities were puzzled over what might have triggered the slaying.

Ms. Cromer's 6-year-old son lives with his father, a San Francisco attorney, officials said.

an attack on an Oriental woman, he said. Records showed she was placed on probation and ordered to stay off drugs and alcohol and to participate in an outpatient program.

McLane said the 1977 dispute did not appear to be racially motivated. Race was raised as an issue after witnesses reported a white woman matching Ms. Cromer's description tried to pick up two young black girls Tuesday morning at an Oakland kindergarten, officials said. Reginald was black.

The body of the 3-foot-6 boy, clad in a red, white and blue windbreaker, striped shirt and red pants, apparently was buried Tuesday night about 16 miles north of this San Francisco suburb, officials said.

"It would have taken us a while but I think we would have found it" without Ms. Cromer's direction, McLane said. "We were headed in that direction."

Investigators said "it was part of her habit to go to the ocean when she was upset." Police also said she called her parents Tuesday night to say she was "going to dig a hole" on the San Francisco shore.

Ms. Cromer's 6-year-old son lives with his father, a San Francisco attorney, officials said.

Dr. Fuller Again Ass'n President

Dr. Frank G. Fuller is the new president of the Mental Health Association in Pitt County.

Fuller, who is chairman of the Department of Counselor Education at East Carolina University, was a president of the association, also, from 1961-63.

He is a past government of the Moose Lodge, a past president of the N. C. Personnel and Guidance Association, a past president of the N. C. Education Association, Mental Health Chairman for the N. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers, and a member of the Greenville City Council for 10 years.

DR. FRANK FULLER

He said the association's aims for 1980 "have much in common with the aims of the association 19 years ago — educating the public about mental illness and thereby lowering the stigma attached to this illness."

Legislation for proper insurance coverage of mental illness should be a high priority of volunteers this year, he indicated. Membership in the association is open to all citizens of Pitt County, he reminded.

Officers serving with Dr. Fuller include Theresa Shank, president-elect; Patsy Worthington, secretary; Pam Kachmer, treasurer; Dr. Charles Mitchell, assistant treasurer; and Melba Howard, chapter delegate.

Star Billing For Beale Street

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Beale Street, birthplace of the blues, is being billed as the star attraction at a Memphis revival.

A $5.2 million renovation of the historic street began Monday, and is expected to open as the Beale Street Historic District in 1981. Developers hope to recapture the flavor of Beale Street, once famed for its gambling, liquor and music, which began a decline in 1917 when W.C. Handy, known as the father of the blues, took his "Beale Street Blues" to New York.

Mayor E.H. Crump clamped down on prostitution and Prohibition closed the saloons. A 1960s urban renewal project finished the decline.

Cemetery Road Most Popular

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — The most popular route for running in the Des Moines area is through Glendale cemetery, according to Running USA.

"In the winter cemetery roads are always well plowed," explained author Peter Roth.

WITH BUBBLE CANOPY being placed, this pilot is ready to fly.

STEVE SENICH, of Nashville, awaits drop of plane's cable.

Riding A 'Magic Carpet'

EAGLEVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — It's a sound eagles must hear soaring — silence sliced by wind. And all it costs to eavesdrop is the price of a ride in one of Garland Pack's gliders. Pack flies a covey of them out of a barn-like hanger in honest-to-gosh Eagleville, a town of 451 souls and a half-dozen engineless aircraft 31 miles southeast of Nashville.

Computer Can Speed Service

FARMINGTON, Conn. (UPI) — A new computer control system will allow elevators to respond to a passenger call in milliseconds, according to one major manufacturer. The Otis Elevator Co. said the system will dispatch an elevator that arrives at the required floor seconds later and also has been shown by an insurance survey to increase safety to the point where it is five times safer to ride the elevator than to climb the stairs.

A glider pilot since 1961, he has more than 25,000 hours of flying time to his credit. And he's learned some things along the way. "I've probably made more mistakes than anybody in the business," he says. "Fortunately, someone's been looking after me."

Not all his gliders are ready for flight at any particular moment, and, in the sights of one novice passenger, the begrimed glider with a patchwork fuselage that carried them aloft looked as if it wasn't either. But, at the end of a rope attached to a single-engine towplane, the ungainly, long-winged bird swept into the air with as much grace as anything that's flown in these parts.

"Lift-off was at exactly 3 p.m.," said the passenger, Bill Thorup. "By 3:01, I was in another world. Once detached from the towplane, the quiet is almost frightening except for the wind whistling. I would imagine it's like being on a magic carpet ride."

Add Singers To Sunday Program

GRIMESLAND — Annual Interracial Sunday will be held Sunday at White Oak Baptist Church at 11 a.m. The guest speaker will be Lt. C. Carl Grantham, director of Junior ROTC at D. H. Conley High School.

The Senior Choir of the church will sponsor two singing groups, the Eastern Travelers and the David Stevenson Singers, Sunday at 4 p.m.

The public is invited to attend.

Tither Program Planned Sunday

A "Tither Program" will be held at St. Luke's F.W.B. Church Sunday at 7 p.m.

Proceeds will be used for the building fund, according to the sponsor, Sister Elizabeth Battle. The public is invited, says Mrs. Battle and the pastor, the Rev. Hattie Mae Cobb.

Fertilizer Prices Soaring; Cutbacks Considered

By SONJA HILLGREN
UPI Farm Editor
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Basic farm costs — fuel, machinery, interest rates, feed, wages — rose steadily over the past few years. Farmers relied on the one exception, chemical fertilizer, to produce record crop yields.

Now, fertilizer, too, is going up — way up.

Agriculture Department analysts expect chemical fertilizer prices, which have remained stable following a big jump in 1974-75, to increase 16 to 20 percent this spring over last.

"We're just going to have to pay the bill," said Bill Carls, who grows corn and soybeans on 1,200 acres near Stonington, Ill. "You have to put back (in fertilizer) what you take out (in crops)," he said.

Carls estimated that an acre needs $47 worth of fertilizer a year, or $56,400 for 1,200 acres. Despite what the government says, he believes fertilizer prices are 30 percent higher than a year ago already.

Even worse, fuel costs are rising 2 cents a week, he said.

Experts say fertilizer is so basic to producing crops bountiful enough to make money that there is little farmers can do except take soil surveys to make certain they do not apply more than necessary.

Edwin Wheeler, president of The Fertilizer Institute, a Washington-based fertilizer industry trade association, said if farmers cut back sharply on fertilizer use, "their bankers are going to have a fit."

Inflation in basic costs had farmers worried even before President Carter retaliated for the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan with an embargo of record amounts of grain and soybeans bound for Russia.

Mostly because of expected declines in hog and chicken prices, farm income for 1980 had been forecast to drop 20 percent.

Carter's policies to soften the impact of the embargo on farmers caused a rebound in prices soon after the embargo, but uncertainty remained among both the farm sector and the fertilizer industry.

There were questions about whether the government would continue to encourage farmers to plant on all suitable land or change signals with renewed production controls.

There was concern about the long-term effect of new surpluses and possible loss of the major Russian market.

Before the embargo, the industry had expected American fertilizer use to be "a record smasher," Wheeler said. Now prospects are being re-evaluated. Wheeler predicted that farmers will be uneasy until they plant.

"If everybody will keep their cool, everybody will be surprised at how they (farmers) adjust to it," he said.

Wheeler said corn farmers — potentially hardest hit by the embargo because they lost the most sales — need to add nitrogen to get the benefit of heavy applications of potash and phosphate they made last fall.

Yields of hybrid corn varieties would fall 30 to 50 percent without nitrogen fertilizer, he said.

"I can't believe they're not going to put nitrogen on," Wheeler said.

They would be much more likely, he said, to put off machinery purchases or "to cut back on phosphate and potash" — the other two of three major fertilizers that are used in differing combinations to restore nutritional deficiencies in soil.

New production controls would not hurt the fertilizer market, Wheeler said, because farmers use fertilizer to get higher yields and the same size crop on less land.

However, the last time fertilizer prices took a leap, in 1974 and 1975 when price controls were removed, farmers around the world cut back on consumption for the first time since 1950, about the time chemical fertilizer use became widespread.

Prices fell after 1975 and held relatively steady for the next few years. The rising cost of natural gas, a building block of nitrogen fertilizers, is pushing up costs again.

Wheeler said wholesale prices of anhydrous ammonia, a nitrogen fertilizer, have risen from $80 to $85 per ton to $130 to $135 per ton, a 60 percent jump.

Kevin Hollingsworth, branch manager of the Marion County Farm Bureau Co-op in Indianapolis, said he believes average fertilizer costs will rise at least 30 to 40 percent this year, another estimate higher than the government's.

The Agriculture Department said large exports of U.S. fertilizer and strong domestic demand reduced inventories and created price pressure for nitrogen and phosphate. Average farm prices for fertilizer rose about 7 percent last season, the department said.

Most U.S. potash is supplied by Canada. High prices in the international market — as worldwide crop output expands — pushed up prices. Canadian production is down despite demand. Reduced Canadian inventories and Russian export shortfalls have caused "world traders to scramble" for available supplies, the department said.

Glenn Reese of Chester K-V Liquid Fertilizers in Valparaiso, Ind. said Canadians regulate potash exports.

"In a way, there's a potash cartel," he said, laughing.

American phosphate costs were lowest in the world last summer until foreigners bought up supplies and created a shortage, he said.

An offshoot of cooler U.S.-Russian relations may be lower supplies of imported anhydrous ammonia, a form of nitrogen fertilizer.

Russian fertilizer imports from a U.S.-Russian joint venture had been rising. President Carter recently took emergency action to impose a quota, reversing his earlier refusal to limit Russian fertilizer imports. U.S. ammonia producers originally sought the quota.

All Russian fertilizer imports are jeopardized if U.S. longshoremen continue their refusal to load ships of American-produced superphosphoric acid, a necessary ingredient for the Russian fertilizer.

Across the nation, experts said that farmers are more scientific and careful than ever to use no more precious fertilizer than necessary.

Reese said, "Some farmers that I talk to are using a little less fertilizer this year, and others are trying to plant crops that don't need so much of it. Soybeans, for instance, take a lot less fertilizer than corn."

Jack Baird, a soil scientist at North Carolina State University, said, farmers are using soil tests more carefully to see if there is a carryover of nutrients in the soil.

"All of a sudden farmers are faced with higher fertilizer costs and they can't afford to fertilize out of habit," Baird said. "Nothing dramatic, they just have to be more efficient businessmen than ever."

Bob Williams, an agricultural economist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, said farmers will cope with higher fertilizer costs by trying to increase production.

Bob Swanson of the Minnesota Agriculture Department said, "Above all, the banker will decide how much a farmer can borrow and spend on fertilizer. Farmers are sitting with bins full of grain which cannot be sold, so it is futile to spend too much money on fertilizer to raise a crop which no one wants to buy."

In Fresno, Calif., Bob White, one of the owners of Cal-Agri Products, said San Joaquin Valley farmers are not quibbling about prices because of low supplies.

Bill Hamilton, Fresno County farm adviser, said farmers are using lower levels of nitrogen, trying new methods of application and changing timing of applications to cut costs.

"But the fact is that farmers still have to use so much nutrient to grow the crops and they'll pay whatever price they have to to do it," Hamilton said.

Higher freight and retailing costs contribute to fertilizer costs. A silver lining in the grain embargo's dark cloud, as far as the fertilizer industry is concerned, is an expectation that railcars will be freed up for fertilizer shipping.

Fertilizer and grain compete for the same hopper cars, exacerbating annual shortages.

Higher chemical fertilizer prices are not expected to cause large farmers to shift to fertilizing with more manure or other organic products.

Glenn Reese said Indiana farmers cannot afford to switch to organic fertilizers.

"Really, it's the economics of transporting it around," he said. "You need about 20 tons of barnyard manure per acre, and that's a lot to move."

Institute said hybrid corn was not bred to grow well with manure. Manure has much less nitrogen than chemical fertilizers, he said.

Robert Anderson of the Nebraska Fertilizer Ag-Chemical Institute in Lincoln said every farmer that feeds livestock uses manure on his crops.

"But there just aren't enough cattle or hogs in the Middle West to supply every farmer in Nebraska that uses organic," he said.

"The profit is in the yield, and if you take time to put enough manure on the field, you're not going to get your crop in," Anderson said. "Even with all of this, fertilizer is still a good buy."

One axiom of declarer play is to plan the campaign before playing to the first trick. Not enough stress is put on the fact that the same holds true for the defense.

Since his heart suit was not biddable, South correctly opened one diamond, but this led to a rebid problem when North responded two clubs. His choice of two no trump has our endorsement—in modern theory, this bid does not show extra values—and North's raise to game was automatic.

The opening lead of the two of spades was covered by the five and king and won with the ace. Declarer ran the ten of clubs and East, after a few moment's thought, correctly ducked. The club finesse was repeated and East won the king. However, the contract was no longer beatable because the jack of spades was a sure entry to dummy's clubs.

East did well to hold up the king of clubs one round in case declarer held a doubleton. He would have done even better had he decided to think about the hand as a whole before playing to the first trick.

Obviously, the club suit in dummy posed a serious threat. It was equally apparent that entries to dummy were not exactly plentiful. East had the ace of hearts over the king, and he could hold up the king of clubs for one round to prevent declarer from running that suit. The only possible entry card was the jack of spades. Therefore, East should have retained the king of spades in case it was needed to neutralize the jack.

Not only would East have defeated the contract had he played a low spade to the first trick, his play wouldn't even have cost a trick. No matter which card East chose to play, declarer was destined to get two spade tricks. The only difference is that playing low permits East to concede one trick early and cheaper than he had imagined.

$3 Million Suit For Bette

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A $3 million damage suit and a request for an injunction have been filed against entertainer Bette Midler and the production company filming her concert movie "Divine Madness" just six days before shooting was to begin.

Three backup singers who appeared as The Harlettes in the Broadway version of the show claim they were improperly fired from the film. In a Superior Court suit filed Jan. 31, Linda Hart, Franny Eisenberg and Paulette McWilliams accuse Miss Midler persuading Alan Ladd Jr. Productions to fire them.

WHOLLY MOSES — Pharaoh, played by comedian Richard Pryor, right, and would-be prophet Herschel, portrayed by "10" star Dudley Moore, huddle during filming of new movie "Wholly Moses!" in Los Angeles. Moore plays a bumbling Moses-type in the comedy. (AP Laserphoto)

Preparing For Battle With Olympic Ratings

By JOAN HANAUER
UPI Television Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — CBS will try to exorcise ABC's Winter Olympics from the ratings, while NBC apparently will try to sting them to death.

ABC expects that the Games, to be held at Lake Placid, N.Y., Feb. 12-24, will hype the network's ratings and return it to first place, topping CBS from the top spot.

To counter ABC's opening Olympics coverage, on Feb. 12 CBS will present a blockbuster movie, "The Exorcist," and NBC will try to win viewers with "The Swarm," a killer bee disaster epic.

That's counterprogramming, an expensive but not unusual occupation in network circles. But it really heats up in February, which is "sweeps" time.

The "sweeps" occur three times a year when the A.C. Nielsen Company gets off its little black box and goes into the market to survey viewing in 200 markets. Arbitron also samples the local markets. It is on those figures that network advertising rates are based, despite occasional howls that the networks load the sweeps calendar with special programming.

So they do, which is why February is a hyperactive time for specials. To be chronologically exact, the Arbitron sweeps run Jan. 30-Feb. 26 this year, while Nielsen covers Jan. 31-Feb. 27.

During that period there are only two nights on which there is no network programming scheduled of more than normal interest. The normal nights are Feb. 2 and Feb. 7.

To indicate the sweeps schedule, here are some of the upcoming highlights (all times Eastern Standard):

Feb. 5: CBS offers "Because We Care," 9-11 p.m., a truly star-studded benefit for the starving Cambodian people, with performers donating their talents. The very long guest list includes Alan Alda, Jane Fonda, Julie Andrews, Mary Tyler Moore, Kris Kristofferson, Natalie Cole, and even The Muppets.

That's upbeat. For something else, NBC offers the movie "Damien — Omen II," starring William Holden and Lee Grant. Feb. 6: CBS studies adolescent problems in the documentary "Boys and Girls Together" (8-9 p.m.) followed by the television movie, "The Boy Who Drank Too Much," covering sex and alcohol back-to-back.

Feb. 8: NBC boasts "Lucy Moves to NBC," with Lucille Ball offered a 90-minute welcome by Johnny Carson, Bob Hope, Jack Klugman, Gary Coleman and lots more, followed by "Elvis Remembered: Nashville to Hollywood." ABC offers David Soul as a comeback skier in "Swan Song."

Feb. 9: CBS offers Kevin Dobson and Sharon Gless in "Hardhat and Legs," a comedy written by Garson Kanin and Ruth Gordon. The last movie they wrote as a husband-wife team was "Pat and Mike" for Katharine Hepburn and Spencer Tracy in 1952.

Feb. 10: ABC offers part one of "The Deep," a movie version of the book by Peter "Jaws" Benchley.

Feb. 11: NBC presents the first American Movie Awards, with the public voting for favorite movies and stars, while ABC completes "The Deep."

Feb. 12: ABC Olympics go prime time through Feb. 24, while CBS blocks with "The Exorcist" and NBC tackles the problem with "The Swarm."

Feb. 13: ABC Olympics vs. CBS's "Exorcist II: The Here-tic."

Feb. 14: ABC Olympics vs. NBC's Steve "The Jerk" Martin special, "Comedy Is Not Pretty."

Feb. 15: ABC Olympics vs. NBC's "Doug Henning's World of Magic" and "Valentine Magic on Love Island."

Feb. 17-18: ABC Olympics vs. NBC's two-part "Towering Inferno."

Feb. 19: ABC Olympics vs. NBC's "The End" with Burt Reynolds and two CBS personality specials, the first starring Goldie Hawn and Liza Minnelli, the second "Ladies and Gentlemen: Bob Newhart."

Feb. 20: ABC Olympics vs. "CBS Reports: The Trouble With Women," followed by Timothy Bottoms, Kayenz and Colleen Dewhurst in "Escape."

Feb. 22: ABC Olympics vs. O.J. Simpson movie on NBC tentatively titled "Nightmare on Highway 41."

Feb. 23: ABC Olympics vs. CBS's "S-H-E," with Cornelia Sharpe as a husband-wife team warring with Omar Sharif and Robert Lansing.

Feb. 24: Olympic finale on ABC; "Harper Valley PTA" on NBC, and CBS offers an hour-long "One Day At A Time" retrospective and Flo's farewell on "Alice."

Cronkitophobia Stirs A New Sense Of Panic

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sam the barber was stricken again, and this time it was bad. Wobly legs, accelerated heart beat, dizziness and sweaty palms. Cronkitophobia. The fear of being on the six o'clock news.

Sam hadn't had a panic attack for awhile, and his friends and customers had hoped he was fully recovered. In fact, it had been five years. Sam was nearly crippled by that last attack. He was afraid that a network would do a "human feature" on him as the last barber in America that didn't do styling.

Sam believed that his barber shop was about to be invaded by hordes of network TV people. It was imminent. He jumped every time the phone rang. He gave accidental flat-tops. Customers were staying away.

I thought I'd try to help. "Sam, what makes you think network people are coming here to Eagle Rock, Calif.?" "I don't think," he replied, "I know. It's just a matter of time."

"Why?" "Because of Iowa." "Iowa?"

"Yes. A nice little farm state, you say. But did you see what happened to that nice little farm state a couple of weeks ago? Television City."

"Yes, but what..." "NBC, CBS, ABC, Chancellor, Frank Reynolds, Tom Brokaw doing the 'Today' show..."

"But Sam..." "...and Cronkite! I read that

CBS had 110 people there, and THREE PRESS AGENTS! There are less people than that in some Iowa towns.

"Sam," I said, "they were all in Iowa to cover the Iowa caucus. It was an important event, a significant first step toward the presidency."

"Sure, that's what they used to say about New Hampshire, and before that, about the national conventions. No, they're coming here next. I can feel it."

"Sam, I don't see the connection."

"Oh, you don't. Think for a moment. What do my customers talk about in here?"

"Uh, baseball, whether the Raiders will come to L.A., um, Bo Derek..."

"Yes, and politics!"

"Sam, you don't really think..."

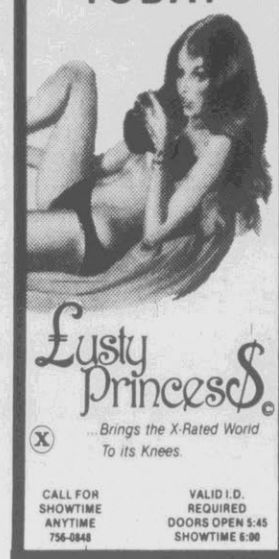

"Oh yes I do. I don't suppose that some of those Iowa farmers expected their corn fields to be overrun by network field producers and tape editors..."

"Know your enemy, I say. And they'll be here soon enough, if word gets out. Why, just last week, Lou the tailor and Mario from Mario's Italian Deli were in here arguing Kennedy versus Carter."

Speaking of Your Health... Hopeful News in Medicine

The specialty of nuclear medicine is expanding daily. It is now possible, in a safe and accurate way, to demonstrate the functioning of the human brain, as well as to demonstrate the blood flow of the coronary arteries to the heart.

Gallbladder disease, liver disease and problems in the pancreas and other organs of the body are revealing their secrets to nuclear scientists. Dr. Abbas Alavi, of the Department of Nuclear Medicine at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, believes that before long physicians will be given a better understanding of stroke, epilepsy, depression, and even schizophrenia. He says, "Using radio-nuclid techniques makes it possible to discover in a living person what part of the brain is functioning and how well it is acting."

The same nuclear techniques are now being used among patients suspected of having coronary artery disease, for whom standard methods may have been disappointing. Nuclear medicine is expanding its diagnostic potential. It is now being used with great success in many institutions in America.

Diabetes is a disease in which highly specialized cells in the islets of Langerhans in the pancreas do not produce sufficient insulin. For a number of years, many research scientists have been trying to transplant these islet cells into diabetics, in the hope that this replacement may compensate for the lack of insulin.

Dr. Clark K. Colton and his co-workers, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, are already able to implant such an artificial pancreas in experimental animals. If the studies continue to be effective, it is hoped that the artificial pancreas may be ready for human trials within five years.

In a completely different diabetic study, active research continues in the production of small battery-powered pumps which can pour out insulin into the bloodstream of diabetics, to maintain the proper metabolism of glucose (sugar). Such a device, recently tested by research workers at Yale University, makes it possible for the patient himself to pump proper amounts of insulin into his own bloodstream.

After a meal, when the glucose level is higher, added quantities of insulin can be pumped into the bloodstream, to keep the blood sugar level stabilized.

Seeks Wife For Isolated Ranch

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — It can get lonely on a Montana ranch when neighbors count the distance between them in miles. And rancher John Hart, whose first marriage dissolved from the isolation, is seeking a new wife in the want ads.

His ad was straightforward: "Lonely rancher on isolated 2,000 acres needs wife to enjoy ranch with me, help check out the cattle and keep track of me on cold winter nights. I don't smoke or drink. I like to dance and go out for dinner, help with housework, and I make the best pancakes in the world."

Hart, 33, said his first wife was terrified of ranch life. His 2,000-acre Flat Mountain Ranch is 35 miles from Colstrip, Hysam or Forsyth, and his nearest neighbor is eight miles away.

"She didn't like being out there alone and I'm gone a lot," he said. But he adds, "I don't want to live up there alone. It's awful lonely coming home at night to a dark, empty house."

So far, said Hart in a recent interview, four women have responded to his ad. Most were "desperate women," more interested in finding shelter for themselves and their numerous children than in forming a loving relationship with a new husband, he said.

"It's not an easy life," said Hart. "A rancher is very dependent on his wife and family to get along, especially if he works away from home."

He also noted that, if he were injured on the ranch now, "no one in the world would know where I was."

Hart also has tried a Billings dating service, and says the want ad is a last resort.

He built up his ranch over the years by saving until he could buy a small one, improving it and trading for a bigger one, then confining to trade. His herd now numbers 100 head of cattle. He works at the Colstrip power plants to keep it all going, but hopes to devote full time to the ranch — and a family.

Written invitations have been extended to all that the women's groups holding the reception were aware of, but all international students and Baptist college students are invited. Any of these needing transportation to the church and back to campus are asked to meet at the University International House at 2:45 p. m., where a ride will be provided.

A social hour will begin at 6:30 p. m., followed by dinner at 7:30 p. m. Among the special guest invited will be ECU Chancellor, Dr. Thomas Brewer.

A spokesman for the chapter said that all ECU alumni and their spouses are invited to attend. Admission will be $5 per person through advance registration.

The first activity of the newly reorganized Pitt County East Carolina University Alumni Chapter will take place on Tuesday, Feb. 12 at the American Legion Hut.
