

Greenville Rescue Squad Announces Disbandment

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

"We regret to make this announcement, but we feel forced by the City Council, the City Manager, and the Fire Department Administration to take this action," Brent Stocks, captain of the volunteer Greenville Rescue Squad said late yesterday afternoon as he announced the end of the organization.

"We have tried privately and publicly to resolve our differences with them," Stocks said. "But we have been led in circles."

"The final blow," according to the officer, "came Tuesday, with the announcement of rescheduling of Fire-Rescue personnel. This was as final and definite a statement as the city management could make."

According to Stocks, "we are taking this drastic step as we see no way for the volunteers to have a meaningful role in the planning or implementing of rescue operations in Greenville. We prefer to go out of service on our own accord, rather than to be slowly and quietly pushed out." Stocks said the action by the volunteers in disbanding the organization, "serves as a protest against the policy the City Council has decided to take concerning emergency medical care for the city. The goals are to be accomplished at the expense of the emergency medical care of the citizens of Greenville."

"The new policy," Stocks said, "in addition to adversely affecting fire protection, will inherently lower the quality of care people will receive now and in the future."

Explaining, Stocks said, "an I.V. program (short for Emergency Medical Technician-Intravenous — a more advanced program of pre-hospital emergency care than is now offered in Greenville), which was scheduled to begin in January, now has little chance of beginning. Also, a paramedic program (Emergency Medical Technician-Paramedic — the highest level of pre-hospital emergency care offered in the state), that could have been here soon, will probably never exist. This last case," Stocks continued, "is because, in the mayor's words, 'It is not city policy to have a paramedic program.'"

"Obviously, it is not city policy to have any type of quality advanced life support group," Stocks charged. "So, along with the programs that might have been, the Greenville Rescue Squad, after 25 years of service, will be lost to our city."

"We hope Greenville citizens recognize this action for what it is, a statement demanding that better emergency medical care be provided," for Greenville area residents

Stocks emphasized, "we are not opposed to the new plan of Fire-Rescue for reasons of self interest. We oppose it because we care about the citizens in the city. We know what quality emergency medical service is."

"We see what service existed last year," Stocks said, "and what could have come this year and the next. It hurts us and frustrates us to compare that, to the service...which will be provided."

Stocks said members of the squad will, "continue to work as individuals and as an informal group, to change the city policy." And, he added, "we again urge concerned citizens to join and work with us."

"Perhaps," he said, "we will have the chance to regroup and establish a new squad to carry on in the fine direction in which the former squad was headed."

"Regardless of what the future has in store, we once more thank everyone who has helped us in the past. We thank all of Greenville for giving us the opportunity to serve and help..."

The end of the volunteer rescue unit yesterday, resulted from a disagreement between city officials and rescue squad members over a city policy which combines fire and rescue services in Greenville.

The Greenville Rescue Squad was organized in 1948 by the late Fire Chief George Gardner. The volunteer group was started in 1955 under the initial sponsorship of the Greenville Jaycees in an effort to meet the increasing need for trained manpower for the expanding operation.

Until the mid-1960's — when a separate rescue budget was established within the Fire Department — firemen were assigned rescue duties on a more-or-less volunteer basis. Since a separate rescue budget was instituted, paid men assigned to rescue duties have been hired as rescue officers, as opposed to firefighters. Later, the rescue service had its own administrative structure, answerable to the fire chief.

Last June, the City Council voted to operate the Fire Department and Rescue Squad as one system under one department head. Councilman John Howard offered the motion that the city manager be, "...directed to work with this department head and that the department head in turn work with his subordinates to select the most highly qualified personnel for basic assignments and duly train each of them as fire fighters and rescue."

Then-mayor Percy Cox termed the decision the,

Crackdown On Militants Intensified By Bani Sadr

By The Associated Press

President Abolhassan Bani Sadr consolidated his power in Iran today and intensified his crackdown on the young militants holding some 50 Americans hostage in the U.S. Embassy.

Hopes increased for the release of the hostages soon. But the ruling Revolutionary Council said the crisis would be considered after an international panel is set up to probe its charges against the shah. It did not say whether the captives would be freed at that time or after the investigation is over.

Tehran Radio announced the elevation of the president from acting chairman to head of the council with the consent of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the 79-year-old leader of the Iranian revolution.

Hasan Habibi, the council's spokesman, said Bani Sadr would chair the policy-making council's sessions, exercise the council head's legislative and executive powers and "harmonize proceedings" with government ministers who are not members of the council.

Habibi indicated that this setup would continue until a Majlis, or parliament, is elected March 7.

The announcement confirmed Bani Sadr, who got 75 percent of the vote in the presidential election Jan. 25, as Iran's second most influential leader after the aged, ailing Khomeini, who is convalescing after a heart attack.

The president demonstrated his growing clout by attacking the militant young students occupying the American Embassy as tyrannical, lawless foes of the government for the second straight day Thursday. He also had the Revolutionary Council limit their access to the national radio and TV network and granted only four-day visas to the 49 Americans they invited to publicize their cause instead of the 10-day visas they sought.

"Why do those students who call themselves followers of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini violate the constitution by their illegal acts?" he said in a new attack on the militants for engineering the arrest of Information Minister Nasser Minachi by broadcasting charges that papers found in the embassy linked him to the CIA.

"Is this Islamic or Stalinistic?" he asked in an interview with the Tehran newspaper Kayhan. "It is the judiciary system that can investigate whether some Iranians have had corrupt links with America, not you...In any part of the world such rebels against the government would be punished severely. But we, as a revolutionary government, have not done that."

The council freed Minachi, who denied the charge, and ordered Tehran Radio-TV to allow the militants no more air time to publicize their allegations. The militants defiantly said they would take them to the newspapers.

Although the militants continued to insist that they would free the hostages only after Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi was returned to Iran for trial, they were becoming increasingly isolated. Expectations grew that the president would soon take decisive steps to end the hostage crisis.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim told reporters in New York that Bani Sadr was setting the stage for their release and that he believed this could happen before the election.

Waldheim's spokesman, Rudolf Stajduhar, said the secretary-general was closely following developments in Iran "which indicate that the authorities are trying to stabilize the situation under the presidency" of Bani Sadr. But Stajduhar said he could not confirm a report from Tehran by the Kuwaiti newspaper Al Khadaf that Waldheim was trying to get Bani Sadr to replace the embassy captors with regular Iranian troops, that the number of militants had dwindled from 400 to 50, and that the release of the cap-

Dr. Fordham Named UNC-CH Chancellor

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Dr. Christopher C. Fordham III, vice chancellor for health affairs at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, today was appointed chancellor of the school.

The UNC Board of Governors unanimously endorsed the recommendation of Fordham, 54, by Dr. William C. Friday, president of the 16-campus UNC system.

Fordham will assume the duties March 1. He will succeed N. Ferebee Taylor, who resigned as chancellor last month and will become a law professor at UNC next fall. Taylor suffered a heart attack last spring.

Fordham has been vice chancellor for health affairs and professor of medicine and community medicine at the university since 1977. He also is a former dean of the UNC School of Medicine.

"I have known Dr. Fordham for many years. He is a courageous, fair and aggressive leader who has abundantly demonstrated his love for the university," Friday said in recommending Fordham from a field of three candidates selected by a 13-member search committee.

"His perception of the nature and purpose of this noble institution is clear and he will lead it to a greater fulfillment in its mission of good teaching, solid research and public service appropriate to and expected of the university at Chapel Hill," Friday said.

Friday said Fordham has a "remarkable record of creative leadership ... through it he has gained national recognition. The school of medicine set a national example by enrolling a proportion of black students that is exceeded by only one institution in the United States."

Other candidates considered by Friday were Joel L. Fleishman, vice chancellor of Duke University, and Edward T. Foote II, dean of the law school at Washington University in St. Louis.

HOTLINE APPEAL

GIFTS NEEDED

Hotline has received a letter from an inmate at the Goldsboro Correctional Center. The man is a former high school biology teacher who spends much of his free time trying to help his fellow prisoners give meaning to their days. He has asked Hotline to appeal on his behalf for three things. 1. A parchesi game. He says he's taught some of his fellow prisoners to play backgammon and thinks parchesi would be a logical second game to attempt. 2. Artex or Tri-chem fabric paints and fabrics that could be bought for as nominal amount as possible, since his funds are extremely limited. 3. Some valentine cards, again at nominal cost. Valentine's Day, like Christmas, is a time of the year that men in prison like to show their families that they have love for them. "We don't have access to these cards, except through an outside source."

Hotline will be glad to accept calls from anyone who feels he or she can help with any of these projects. Call the Hotline number, 752-1336.

Congress Wants Information

By LEE GOULD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress are pressing for a firsthand look at the FBI's evidence in the congressional bribery investigation, despite the Justice Department's refusal to cooperate.

With seven representatives and one senator implicated in the government's widespread corruption case, Rep. Peter Peyster, D-N.Y., introduced a resolution of inquiry in the House Thursday. It directs the attorney general to hand over all FBI evidence against members of Congress within a month.

"Congress cannot wait for a grand jury investigation or for a trial. We must know now what happened," he said. "If ever the public needs to have confidence in its government, it is today."

The degree of support for Peyster's resolution, which goes to the Judiciary Committee, was unclear. Peyster sent letters to all House members urging them to debate his proposal Thursday — but he was the only member who showed up.

In another development Thursday, the chairman of a House subcommittee said he will hold a hearing to determine whether the FBI illegally helped a private company get a federal contract in return for the company providing a "cover" for undercover FBI agents conducting the investigation.

Meanwhile, Newsday reported today that Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J., tried to arrange a $100 million loan from federal undercover agents to finance an Atlantic City casino with which his wife is associated.

Quoting unnamed sources close to the bribery investigation, the Long Island newspaper said that in six meetings, agents obtained "evidence that Williams had urged Arab investors to invest in a company owned by a group of associates, promised to help them obtain defense contracts for the firm if they did, and accepted stock certificates in that same company, allegedly for his help in brokering the transaction."

In Philadelphia, the City Council voted 10-4 against a resolution to remove three council members from leadership positions after the three were involved in the investigation.

According to published accounts, the three council members were videotaped receiving cash payoffs from FBI agents posing as representatives of an Arab sheik. The sheik was purportedly planning a hotel development in Philadelphia.

The Washington Post reported today that the bribery investigation is one of about 50 major FBI undercover operations against organized crime, in a departure from traditional bureau work under former Director J. Edgar Hoover.

The Post quoted an unnamed, high-ranking FBI official as saying that some of the undercover operations will soon demonstrate "the pervasiveness of organized crime control on the political systems in some parts of the country."

And in New Jersey, FBI agents questioned members of the New Jersey Casino Control Commission, which figured in the allegations against one of the eight legislators, Sen. Harrison A. Williams, D-N.J.

The Senate Ethics Committee already has voted for a "preliminary inquiry" into allegations concerning Williams Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., chairman of the committee, said the panel might subpoena material it needs for its probe. The House Ethics Committee has voted to appoint a legal counsel to handle the case.

But Assistant Attorney General Philip Heymann already has told House members they won't get the FBI evidence because, "There is one nightmare picture for all of us...one in which we get entangled in each other's feet."

The eight congressmen, who have all denied guilt, were implicated last weekend in an alleged influence-peddling scandal. FBI agents, posing as wealthy Arabs or Arab agents, paid nearly $500,000 in cash in exchange for promises of political favors and other services.

No Resistance Here To Winter's Cabin Fever

By GAIL MICHAELS
 In the past few months I've been exposed to flu, stomach viruses, strep throat, and measles, but the illness of which I'm most terrified is cabin fever. I have no resistance whatsoever to this disease. Two minutes of contemplating a snow-covered landscape, and I'm reeling back to bed with acute nausea. By the time I've listened to the radio's litany of school closings, I'm plaiting my hair with my tongue. This is no overreaction. Not even Alice Cooper could handle the prospect of the words, "Play with me," whined incessantly at high frequency for up to 16 straight hours. If Meg could leave me alone even for several minutes during the day I might be able to retain some semblance of sanity. But the last time Meg entertained herself was when she painted a wall mural with her diaper.

Of course, I have heard that some mothers actually send their children outside in the snow to play by themselves. I had my doubts about this. But after being beaten 19 times in a row at the Alphabet Game, after finding that a Fisher-Price thermometer can be used as a scalpel, and after trying to read to myself while sitting next to a child whose mouth should be in the "Guinness Book of World Records", I was willing to give anything a try.

So I dressed Meg in an undershirt, a shirt, a hooded sweater, a pair of heavy tights, knee socks, two pairs of pants, a coat, mittens, and boots, and I pushed her out the door.

Five minutes later I heard her muffled voice. "Mommy, I have to go to the potty."

"Twenty minutes later I pushed her out in dry tights and two more pairs of pants. In two minutes she was back.

"Guess what I made? A snow angel."

"I tried to be pleasant. 'Good. Now leave me alone.' 'Come see it.'"

"I can't go outside today, dear. Mommie has enough trouble standing up on dry ground."

"She tried to flex her bundled arm. 'But I'll hold you up with my muscles.'"

Meg may not be logical, but she's persistent. During the next 20 minutes her visits at the door came at shorter and shorter intervals, and I was beseged by a steady barrage of entreaties, including:

"I want to build a snowman, but I don't know how. If I bring some snow inside, will you teach me?"

"I'm lonely. There's nothing to do out here."

"Mommy, I think my boot landed on the roof."

"A stupid old dog messed up my angle. You need to clean it up."

"I think there's ice growing on my face."

I finally let her in when she wailed that her mittens were wet and she couldn't feel her fingers. By the time Phillip got home, I was playing Beethoven's Fifth on my bottom lip. "Sorry," he said, "but you might as well get used to it. The schools are going to be closed tomorrow, too."

"Hand me my Tylenol. I want to take an overdose."

He patted my shoulder. "There are ways to make things easier on yourself, you know."

"How?"

"Make her play outdoors tomorrow."

To Host Nurses At Grant Leads Seminar in March To Budapest

ECU News Bureau
 About 100 nurse practitioners from various North Carolina locations will gather here March 5-7 for a two-day seminar sponsored by the N.C. Nurse Practitioner Conference Group and East Carolina University.

Speakers at public sessions include physicians, family nurse practitioners and other health professionals who will speak on topics of interest to health care providers.

Dr. Robert Rhyne and Michael Magill of the Duke University Medical Center will speak on "Screening the Asymptomatic Disease: Useful or Useless?" at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

On Thursday morning, Dr. Walter Pories, Dr. Andre Van Rij and Diane Mulheim, FNP, from the ECU School of Medicine will discuss the patient with breast disease, covering aspects ranging from early detection and treatment through post-surgical care.

Thursday afternoon's session will focus on stress: identification and management, stress and families and stress in the nurse practitioner. Speakers include Lon Gilbert, psychologist at the Pitt County Mental Health Center; Mary Louis, social worker at the ECU Family Practice Center; and Jennifer Lang of the ECU School of Medicine.

Friday's events are a discussion of depression, recognition and treatment in a primary care setting, by Dr. Charles Ravaris and Mary Ann Browning, FNP, both of the ECU School of Medicine, and an address by N.C. legislator Patricia Hunt, "Political Issues and the Nurse Practitioner."

Sessions are scheduled for the Ramada Inn and are open to the public.

ECU News Bureau
 Dr. David L. Beckman, professor of physiology at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, has received a grant from the National Research Council to attend the International Congress of Physiological Sciences in July in Budapest, Hungary.

Beckman will present a paper dealing with the effects of stress on the development of respiratory distress syndrome, particularly pneumonia. The grant provides air travel to Budapest and Milan, Italy, the site of a major conference on respiration also being held in Europe this summer.

According to Beckman, car accidents, major burns and some surgical procedures cause general stress which may stimulate the nervous system in a way that produces pneumonia. His data indicate the condition is caused by stimulation of the nervous system and not activity of the adrenal gland previously thought to trigger the syndrome.

"In our research, we focused on head injuries," Beckman said. "And in one animal model, we found that 65 percent of the injuries produced pneumonia." Beckman said he plans to expand his research to consider various means of preventing pulmonary complications in trauma victims.

Police Service

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning that Animal Control services for the city has been made a division of the Police Department.

All requests, calls, and complaints regarding animals, Cannon said, should be routed through the Police Department's non-emergency telephone number, 752-3342.

The Greenville Animal Control Shelter is located near the city-county landfill on Cemetery Road, the chief noted. Operating hours for the shelter are from 8 a.m. until 9 a.m., 12 noon to 1 p.m., and 4 p.m. to 5 o'clock, Monday through Friday.

Protest Censure Of Theologian

WEST BERLIN, N.J. (AP) — A group of 169 Roman Catholic clergy and lay people has protested the Vatican's censure of a prominent theologian, the Rev. Hans Kung, and asked it to revoke its procedures.

They were "contrary to the whole spirit" of the Gospel and of reforms of the 1962-65 Second Vatican Council, said the appeal to Cardinal Franjo Seper, head of the Vatican's Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith.

Its action, demanding that Kung be stripped of his credentials as a Catholic theology professor at West Germany's Tubingen University, came without discussion with him and "without even minimal procedures of due process but in fact in the greatest of secrecy," the protest said.

Signers included housewives, office workers, professional and business people as well as clergy in the dioceses of Philadelphia and Trenton and Camden, N.J. Their spokesman, Dr. William Hopkins, a physician of West Berlin, N.J., said a broad resistance movement is developing in this country to the action against Kung.

Women Clergy Now Over 100

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The number of women clergy in the Lutheran Church of America has topped 100, nine years after the 3.1 million-member denomination authorized ordination of women.

There now are 108 of them among the church's 8,100 clergy, 46 of the women serving as parish pastors and 26 of them as assistant or associate pastors. Others are on seminary faculties or work for ecumenical or social agencies or in other church-related positions.

Lake Placid
 Lake Placid normally is a quiet little resort village in northern New York. But with the Winter Olympics scheduled to start next week, Lake Placid is booming. When Lake Placid hosted the 1932 Winter Olympics, 364 athletes from 16 countries took part. The games cost $1 million, and were opened by President Franklin Roosevelt. The 1980 games are expected to draw 1,400 athletes from 37 countries. The cost will be about $200 million, and the president scheduled to open them is Jimmy Carter. The newly built Olympic Village, which will house the athletes during the next two weeks, will be converted into a prison when the games are over.

Funds Given By Ladies Auxiliaries

Panel Presents Chapter Program

"How Was Your Day, Teacher?" was the theme of the program at the meeting of Beta Alpha Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma Saturday morning at the Masonic Temple.

Teaching experiences and anecdotes were given by a panel including Jacqueline Jones, Ayden first grade teacher, Sally Klingenschmitt, retired ECU kindergarten teacher, Georgia Franklin, retired Greenville reading coordinator, and Susan Creech, early childhood teacher at Pitt Community College. All are chapter members.

President Nell Everett presided during the business session which included election of officers for 1980-82 including: President, Anne Briley; First Vice President, Billie Terrell; Second Vice President, JoAnn Jones; Recording Secretary, Elaine Byrd; Corresponding Secretary, Hannah Allen; Treasurer, Katherine Hodgins; Coordinating Council Representative, Irma Worthington; and Historian, Mildred Pate.

Betty Ann Quinn, chair of the professional affairs committee, called for recommendations for recipients of recruitment grants which are awarded to outstanding women college students majoring in education.

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn L. Spangler

Pitt Home Agent

Americans are looking for ways to keep warm at night while "dialing down" home thermostats to save on energy.

The "cheap heat" of an electric blanket is the ideal way to help everyone conserve comfortably. Sleeping under an electric blanket for 8 hours in a 60° room will save 20 times the energy it uses and costs only 4¢ a night to operate.

When selecting an electric blanket, Mrs. Evelyn L. Spangler, Home Economics Extension Agent, suggests that you *Know exactly what type of blanket you're buying and be sure to read the packaging carefully. Look for automatic blankets which carry a U.L. (Underwriters Laboratories) Seal which means that samples have been tested and approved. All good blankets carry this seal.

*Electric blankets are produced in a variety of fabrics and fabric combinations. The most popular fabrics, in order of quality and cost, are: 100 percent Acrilan; 100 percent Polyester; 100 percent Acrylic; 50 percent Polyester-50 percent Acrylic; 80 percent Polyester-20 percent Acrylic.

*Electric blankets are available in standard sizes: twin, full, queen, and king.

*If you're an extremely light sleeper or sensitive to heat changes, consider an electric blanket with solid state controls. Their silent operation eliminates the on and off "clicking" sound.

*When two people sleep in the same bed, consider the advantages of dual controls which allow both people to select and maintain the level of warmth they desire on their side of the bed.

*Always check the manufacturer's warranty. Look for blankets with warranties ranging from two to five years.

*If you prefer your blanket fitted at the foot of the bed, look for an electric blanket that has bottom snap closing; the blanket stays in place and makes bed-making easy.

*Look for electric blankets which offer convenient hangers that allow the control to be hung on the bed frame or side board.

Her Drop-In Guests Are Appreciated

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Are Americans growing selfish? I see so many letters in your column from people who resent drop-in guests. Why?

If a friend came to my front door, and apologized for coming without an invitation, I would throw my arms around her (or him) and say, "Anybody who wants to see me does not need to wait for an invitation. I feel complimented that you wanted to come."

And I would mean it sincerely. As a newspaper reporter and editor for many years, I have lived, worked and vacationed all over the United States. I have been told repeatedly that I have more friends than anybody else in town.

You see, I share my love, and am repaid with love.
THELMA HALL QUAST, MONTROSE, GA.

DEAR THELMA: Beautiful. (How big is Montrose?)

DEAR ABBY: I am 49 and have been divorced from my ex-husband for over 20 years. All that time I have been bombarded with letters from him telling me he has never stopped loving me—even during his marriage to a French woman while he was stationed overseas.

He has constantly written that he has never known genuine love and sexual satisfaction with any other woman, and I am the only one for him. Abby, such letters would come every day for weeks, and never less than 20 letters a month.

I replied with love and friendship—knowing he was living with another woman in Florida. He phoned me two months ago, saying he couldn't live without me, that he would tell the woman he was living with that she would have to leave, and begged me to join him. (I was in North Dakota.)

I quit my job, packed all my belongings in an enormous U-haul, and drove to Florida. It took eight days. I called his home, and a woman answered, so I checked into a motel and called him again. He came right over and told me not to worry—the woman was leaving.

He stalled me one day at a time for two weeks. I finally had to find an apartment because I couldn't afford the daily motel rates.

Meanwhile, it became clear to me that the woman was not leaving. He would come to see me, professing his love and wanting sex, but I said not as long as that woman was living with him.

I feel like a fool. I asked him why he asked me to come to Florida while he was still living with another woman. He had no answer. Since I'm not a wealthy woman, I must find employment. I have to find activity, interests and friends or I'll go out of my mind.

I've had crying spells and I'm lonely and depressed. I broke up my home and life to be with this man, and it's turned out to be a disaster.

He's 60, retired from the Air Force and works for the state.

Abby, what should I do? Should I confront him and the woman he lives with?

DESPERATE AND BEWILDERED

DEAR DESPERATE: Don't confront anybody. Admit that you made a big mistake when you disrupted your life to join him. Tell him you never want to see him or hear from him again. Then either go back to North Dakota where you have friends, or try to make a new life for yourself where you are.

Engagement Announced

Capt. and Mrs. Roy H. Bixler of Patuxent River, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Tammy Rollene, to Perry Lynn Ogle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Max Ogle of Maryville, Tenn. The wedding is planned for Feb. 14.

First Catsup Was Fish Sauce

The first catsup was made in Asia as a sauce for fish. According to NCSU agricultural extension specialists, it was first concocted from secret household recipes and soon spread in popularity to India and England. In the 1700's, tomato seeds were brought to settlers in North America from Spain and Cuba and catsup as we know it today was first made.

Somehow, People Cope

For the second time in a week area residents spent yesterday digging out from a winter snow storm. Snow started falling in the Pitt County area Wednesday morning and continued throughout the day. Moving about in snow is not one of the things that southerners are best at. For one thing, most of us don't have the chains and snow tires which are necessary for safe travel. Too, there is not enough equipment in the area to quickly clear streets and highways so that normal travel can be resumed.

Somehow we cope, however. Cars inch through the snow as best they can. State Department of Transportation and municipal crews do a remarkable job of sanding hills, bridges and intersections to make travel a little safer. Finally the big road scrapers get to work quickly to get the snow off highways. The first snow of the winter is exciting and fun for most of us. When another follows within a week, however, it is drudgery... but then we can appreciate all the snowless days we have.

Debate Would Be Helpful

It appears that both Gov. Jim Hunt and former governor Bob Scott are agreeable to a debate sponsored by the N. C. Jaycees. Hunt is seeking nomination for re-election to the governor's office and Scott is opposing him. There are a number of details to be worked out before the debate can take place, but we think it will be beneficial that it be held.

Real 'Black hole'

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Medicaid is the "Black Hole" in North Carolina's budget, say money experts on the staff of the General Assembly. Like a black hole in space, few people know what Medicaid is, few realize the danger surrounding it, and nobody knows what is on the other side. This year, total spending in North Carolina on medical and health care for the poor will soar past half a billion; the fastest growing item in the budget.

Already, warns Human Resources Secretary Sarah Morrow, the dollars committed to Medicaid are putting other Human Resources programs in jeopardy. A look at the figures just compiled by the fiscal research division of the General Assembly indicate what is happening:

When the average person thinks of "welfare" he thinks of Aid to Families with Dependent Children. That is the program designed to help families maintain a minimum level of existence. Even with a 15 percent increase approved by the General Assembly last year, AFDC spending now totals $171.2 million, and helps 190,860 recipients.

Up and Up
Medicaid, by comparison, is costing a total of $466.5 million this year, and will pass half a billion in a few months. More than 454,000 recipients are eligible and are recipients at one time or another.

Other welfare programs aren't even in the same league with Medicaid — foster care is $3.5 million; special assistance runs $25 million; food stamps are $15 million; Work Incentive is $2.6 million.

When county commissioners were asked by legislative researchers what programs were costing them the most, and cause the most trouble, the answers were invariably public schools and Medicaid.

By comparison, public schools represent $1.4 billion in the state budget. Medicaid is nearly half that now, and growing. Medicaid is about half the total budget for the entire Human Resources Department; $1.2 billion.

The Legislature has been struggling with the dilemma for several years, and has been repeatedly warned that unless some way to control the growth in Medicaid spending is found, the system will bankrupt the state's budget.

At first, legislators looked at ways to limit the spending, and to put a cap on hospital costs which then seemed the chief culprit. A close look proved that in truth there was no way to control Medicaid spending without severely restricting the program, or are causing nightmares for county commissioners across the state.

Where does the program go in the future? Nobody knows, since the trend is increased and improved services of health care for the needy. A recent change in regulations, for example, will have considerable uncertain impact. Where a spouse with income was formerly held responsible for paying at least some of the medical bill, the federal government has now decided that one member of a family can be declared medically indigent and eligible despite income or property owned by the other.

Fiscal experts predict that Medicaid spending will increase at between 12 and 13 percent per year for the foreseeable future. At that rate, by 1984, the program will top $841 million; then a billion per year the next year controlling the inflation rate for medical costs. Neither approach is politically realistic.

Further study produced upsetting data demonstrating that the biggest chunk of Medicaid money, and the fastest growing, was long-term care for the sick elderly in nursing homes. Now, this form of health care is the bulk of the Medicaid program.

Growing
From its beginning only eight years back, Medicaid has grown every year in cost. In four years, spending has nearly doubled (from $274 million to $517 million) even as eligibles declined by about 4,000.

The money comes from four sources. The federal share is largest at $312 million this year; the state share is about $120.3 million; and the county share is about $33.9 million.

Next year the county share will be $38 million, up from the 1977 level of $14.2 million. It's figures like those which Schlafly In A Foxhole?

By ART BUCHWALD
WASHINGTON — There is a lot of talk these days about reinstating the draft. The kicker this time is that women may have to register, and it's a political nightmare for anyone running for public office.

When I discuss the subject with parents and young ladies the response is quite interesting.

Most of them say things like, "I don't want my daughter in a foxhole," or "I couldn't stand the thought of being up to my hips in mud with a bunch of smelly men." Very few reply, "I don't want my child flying an F-16 fighter plane," or "I'll be damned if my girl is going to stand watch on the bridge of an aircraft carrier," or "I'm not ready to work in a messhall and cook meals for a bunch of jughead marines."

For some reason, everyone seems to associate the draft with foxholes, dirt, grime and foot-slogging. Also, while no one will say it out loud, most people equate military life with promiscuous sex. For all our toughness, we still put our American princesses on a pedestal, and the thought of them living in tents with men is more than most of us can stand.

Which brings us to the subject of equal rights. If women want them, they should be required to do the same military service as men.

As to taking on combat roles, generals and admirals are against it. One general was recently quoted as saying that the American GI is still chivalrous and would spend all his time protecting a female buddy instead of getting on with the war.

Phyllis Schlafly, the mother of the anti-ERA movement, has been protesting for years that if women had equal rights they would wind up in the trenches. Recently she's been appearing on television crowing that her prediction is now going to come true.

But what does one do when the Russian bear starts rattling its saber (according to CIA reports, the Soviets have now trained bears to rattle sabers). The answer is that the American woman must let the Kremlin know that it will not only have to face the American doughboy in a confrontation, but also the American doughgirl.

I rarely agree with Ms. Schlafly on anything, but I have never doubted her patriotism. And I believe when the chips are down she'll go into the trenches with everybody else.

My favorite fantasy these days is to picture Pvt. Schlafly in a foxhole, her face covered with charcoal, helmet sitting back on her head and eating a cold can of field ration.

In the same foxhole are an Italian GI from Ohio, a black corporal from Birmingham, a Jewish PFC from Brooklyn, and a sensitive former coed from Vassar who reads T.S. Eliot's poetry when she isn't fighting.

A sergeant with hashmarks on her sleeve comes up to the foxhole and says, "Okay, Schlafly, move your tail out on patrol. The C.O. wants us to take another hill."

Schlafly pulls down her helmet, picks up her rifle, checks her hand grenades and then says to the sergeant, "You can tell Maj. Gloria. Steinem what she can do with her patrol."

Woodnapping

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Arson was the unexpected big crime of the '70s, burning down parts of the Bronx and Brooklyn to get a better view of Manhattan.

Now it appears that woodnapping will be the crime of the 1980s.

Some folks will do almost anything to throw another log on the fire.

A few weeks back right in our area a ranger caught a woodnapper leaving a public park area with a pickup truck loaded down with cut logs. Well, at least he left the bandstand intact.

The trouble is the maximum fine for cutting down public parklands is only $45, while firewood right now is selling for $150 a cord, unstacked, which means they just dump it in your yard on top of the bird bath or in front of the garage.

Just before Christmas around here someone mistook the Christmas trees the Jaycees were selling at a charity venture for yule logs and made off with a couple of dozen of them while the lot was unattended.

A friend in a neighboring town went off to Oregon to visit his married daughter for the holidays and when he got back the old woodpile had vanished, right down to the big box of kindling. He lucked out, though; they left the back porch hanging on the house and didn't touch the picket fence.

The rager for wood "has brought about a new wrinkle in consumer crime: cord fraud.

The dictionary defines a cord as "a unit of volume used chiefly for fuel wood, equal to 128 cubic feet, and usually specified as 8 feet long, 4 feet wide and 4 feet high."

After the wood mongers deliver the load unstacked on top of your bird bath or barbecue pit, you can spend a month piling, stacking and arranging it and it never will come out that high, that deep or that wide. No way.

Call them up and complain, and the sawyers, which is the original name for these wood cutters, will tell you "we deal in lineal cords, one stack 8 feet long and 4 feet high." In other words, just one row, no depth.

Sure enough, the phrase "lineal cord" has been creeping into the classified ads, although none of the old-timers around here ever heard it before.

Lignamania, the frenzy to burn wood, has become so epidemic in these parts we got an invitation in the mail yesterday to a "B.Y.O.L. Party: wine and cheese before our roaring hearth."

A B.Y.O.L. party, it turned out, is similar to a B.Y.O.B. party, except instead of bringing your own bottle, you bring your own log.

Remind me to pick one up on the way.

The Prairie Bush Fire

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
CHICAGO — The neat Illinois alignment of rank-and-file Republicans for Ronald Reagan and party establishment chiefs for John B. Connally in the first big state primary March 18 has been shattered, with defections from both camps streaming toward George Bush.

Ever since Connally's dismal fourth place in the Iowa caucuses Jan. 21, the party leaders who leaped aboard his bandwagon a year ago have been perched to jump off — with Bush as the probable landing place. That's no surprise. What's unexpected is the quick post-Iowa shift at the grass roots toward Bush, as revealed by Reagan's own polls.

But doubt persists here about Bush's ability to handle his new eminence. Furthermore, his organization is still in its formative stages and sponsors no candidates filed for delegate to the Republican National Convention. His spectacular rise here is based on the crashing impact of Iowa on ancient Republican animosities in this Prairie State.

Following the old adage that all politics is local politics, the struggle here is for control of the Illinois Republican Party rather than any mere presidential nomination. State Rep. Don Totten, Reagan's hard-nosed state chairman, is fighting Gov. James Thompson on a wide front involving state legislative issues and intraparty control.

Totten made clear last year that if his Reaganites controlled the Illinois delegation, the governor would not go to the national convention as its chairman. That guaranteed all-out war with Big Jim Thompson, whose ego rivals his 6-foot-6 stature. His allies in the legislature and party structure picked Connally as the most promising stop-Reagan candidate.

Second thoughts set in when Connally's politically disastrous Mideast speech offended Jewish Republicans here. Third thoughts arrived when Connally finished a poor second in last November's Florida preferential convention after privately promising Illinois backers a near-win. After Iowa, Connally's big names were ready to jump — to Bush.

The tip of the iceberg is Robert Hanrahan, a former Chicago congressman who surfaced last year as a member of Connally's "national advisory" committee but recently filed as a self-starting delegate candidate pledged to Bush. More important Connally backers are staying put for now. But unless Connally scores an upset in South Carolina March 8 or Florida March 11, they will abandon ship.

Until the last week, it made little difference to the Reagan organization whether the big boys were for Connally or Bush. Reagan was a prohibitive favorite to win the Illinois preferential primary (or "beauty contest"). Reagan slates entered in 23 out of 24 congressional districts (opposing the regular party slates in 10 districts) figured to do well even though Thompson's forces changed the primary to remove presidential preference designations from the names of delegate candidates.

Bush's Iowa upset made little difference to the Reaganites, spiritual heirs of Illinois grass roots conservatives who stuck with Robert A. Taft to the bitter end in 1952 and led Barry Goldwater hard-core delegates in 1964. But such activists cannot control a state primary where better than 1 million votes are expected. To their horror, Reagan's men found a dramatic shift to Bush in their own statewide polling after Iowa. They admit they desperately need a win in New Hampshire Feb. 26.

Bush's agents are not pressing too hard (particular-

To the editor:

On Jan. 31 "The Daily Reflector" briefly noted the sharp decline in U. S. children in the 1970's. The Carnegie Corporation's 1979 annual report also highlighted the fact, saying that the U. S. is fast approaching "a demographic day of reckoning," that we are "becoming an aged, tired and disillusioned society," whose population is already top-heavy with elderly people and with a scarcity of young to take over the professional, administrative and technical work necessary for our society.

These reports don't raise the question of where the children so needed for our future have gone. I assure you, they were not lured away by the Pied Piper. Over six million have been deliberately killed by abortion. Their tiny bones lie in city dumps around our country; their ashes in our hospital incinerators.

The law is our greatest educator. What was rendered legal on Jan. 22, 1973 by the Supreme Court quickly became a "good." Married women have been led to think that feelings of ambivalence about parenthood (actually quite normal) mean their child will be "unwanted" and best aborted. Unmarried women have been subtly indoctrinated with the strange notion that a baby is better off dead than adopted.

When Iranian students cry death for Americans, they are prominently featured in our media. When an estimated 80,000 of our own citizens cried life for Americans in Washington on Jan. 22, this year most of the media mocked, misled, ... or was silent.

Our country is now threatened by war from without. But we are already actively engaged in a tragic war from within — and against our own. Legal abortion is massive national suicide.

Common-Sense Expectations

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The professor had just completed a profound, two-hour analysis of domestic pricing, chalking the inputs-outputs and causes-effects in a squiggly diagram across an eight-foot blackboard.

He paused. The class remained attentive. Then a newsman, one of a group invited to study the mysteries of inflation, commented perceptively: "But professor, it doesn't give the right answer."

Pause. "I know," said the professor, an authority on the subject. "I know it doesn't, and we're not really certain why, but we're working awfully hard to find the reason why."

True, economists work terribly hard today, often unraveling many of the worst dilemmas ever to face the nation and the world. Often they identify causes with laudatory analyses. Often they don't.

The inability to accurately forecast short-term trends, one of the weaknesses of the profession, doesn't however prevent it from being a "growth industry," in the words of economist Paul Samuelson.

Ironically, the very unfathomability of today's events seem to assure a future for forecasters, including those who deal with the economy in general — and gold, commodities, interest rates and the like.

And, it would seem, it might re-establish an individual's good common sense as equal to that of the most expensive consultant. And with that in mind, herewith some commonsense expectations:

INFLATION. You can rely on it. Government spending and deficits, lagging productivity growth, the high costs of imported energy, and perhaps some hard-to-change consumer buying habits almost assure it.

RECESSION. The odds would seem to favor it some time this year. You probably have noted that even the President's advisers hedged on this forecast, but there are some indications it finally will arrive.

DEFLATION. Not immediately. Many Americans have forgotten that prices can go down as well as up. In fact, since most were born since the Great Depression of the 1930s they never experienced the phenomenon.

WAGE INCREASES. Safe bet. But the question, as almost everyone knows, is whether wage increases will equal price increases. The odds on that happening in the next two years seem to be less than 50/50.

SAVINGS. Whether there is a rise in the savings rate, now under 5 percent, depends on whether those wage increases exceed price rises. In addition, the American attitude toward savings may be changing. Some people, for example, now consider their home equity to be savings.

GREATER PRODUCTIVITY. Your guess is as good as anyone's. American productivity, or the efficiency with which it produced, made it rich. Some claim the low rate of increase now is making America poorer.

CONCLUSION: It's your wallet, your future. And all things measured, your conclusions are probably as good as the so-called experts.

Strength For Today

GOD IN ALL OF LIFE

The historian John Fiske once wrote that religion is God working among men in everyday living.

Is God merely a transcendent power, or a great ideal which we think about every Sunday morning between eleven and twelve — while looking at our watches nervously to make sure that the preacher doesn't run overtime?

Worship is important, but the mere gazing at an altar or a pulpit or at a preacher on Sunday, rising to sing, kneeling to pray, are not sufficient to constitute worship. We have to worship that afternoon as we relax in our homes, the next morning as we settle down to work in our places of business, and so on through the week.

God in work and play; God in rest and relaxation; God in the midst of worship and business activity and in the quiet of the prayer at home — all these are necessary for worship on a meaningful level. And the result will be that God will then come into our lives; and religion, in John Fiske's definition, will become a reality.

New Storm System Heads Toward North Carolina

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain and snow are expected in the forecast period, Friday until Saturday morning, from the central Gulf to the Midwest. Most areas will be cold. (AP Laser-photo Map)

By The Associated Press
A new storm system was headed toward North Carolina today as the state's northeast corner and the Outer Banks tourist area tried to recover from a 20-inch snowfall Wednesday night.

Virginia Electric and Power Co. reported several customers in a nine-county area remained without electric service for the second successive day. Up to 12,000 customers lost power as the snow and ice hit Wednesday night, toppling trees and utility poles throughout the area.

The U.S. 64 bridge linking Roanoke Island and Nags Head was closed Thursday afternoon after highway personnel discovered structural damage caused by ice. A Dare County spokesman said today it probably would not be reopened until Sunday or Monday.

The bridge is one of two direct links to the mainland for the Outer Banks.

Forecasters said a new storm system was expected to move into North Carolina's mountains tonight, bringing more snow to the higher elevations.

The National Weather Service said the system was less predictable than the one in mid-week, which scattered snow throughout the state before unloading the brunt of its force in the Elizabeth City and Edenton areas.

As of today, forecasters said, the new storm probably would produce "a mixture of frozen or freezing precipitation as it begins, but a turn to more rain is likely as we proceed into the weekend." They said the possibility of some snow existed for Saturday in the northern layer of clouds.

Public school systems were closed again today in the northeast, where main highways were reopened late Thursday. Secondary roads, however, were reported hazardous and in some cases impassable early today.

Most roads were slick, covered by a coating of ice left by overnight temperatures in the low 20s that caused melting slush to freeze.

Miguel Cervantes, the Spanish novelist, was baptized in 1547.

Highway crews and volunteers, mostly farmers with blade-equipped tractors, worked through the day Thursday clearing snow from roads.

National Guardsmen activated in Edenton Thursday to assist police in transporting staff personnel or emergency cases to and from hospitals and nursing homes were released Thursday night.

A Veeco spokesman said more than 200 repairmen were at work trying to restore electric service, but they, too, have been hampered by heavy snow that drifted in places to four feet or more. Service in most areas was expected to be restored by nightfall.

Two traffic fatalities occurred Wednesday as the storm moved eastward across the state. An Elizabeth City man died Thursday when he collapsed while walking through thigh-high snow in a parking lot.

The U.S. Coast Guard Air Station at Elizabeth City sent up helicopters Thursday afternoon to look for stranded motorists or others needing help. None was found.

The snow slowed all activity in the northeast, causing Pasquotank County Sheriff D.M. Sawyer to comment happily: "Crime is frozen."

In Elizabeth City, Police Chief W.C. Owens said that "Crime, as far as we know, has completely ceased."

"The only case we had outside of taking doctors and nurses to the hospital and cooks to the nursing homes was a man who went berserk and ran naked through the downtown streets this morning. We took him to the hospital," Owens said Thursday.

Volunteers using four-wheel drive vehicles assisted law-enforcement and emergency crews throughout the northeast. One such volunteer used his vehicle to break through snow so two Dare County sheriff's deputies could drive a stroke victim from Oregon Inlet to a hospital in Elizabeth City, nearly 100 miles away.

"A lot of people with four-wheel-drive vehicles have been running halfway to heaven in this snow," observed Elizabeth City businessman Sam Keith.

Chrysler Reports '79 Loss Of Over $1 Billion

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Struggling Chrysler Corp. lost money last year at the rate of $3 million a day — for a record total of more than $1 billion — and it's not in the clear yet, its auditors say.

The nation's No. 3 automaker expects the losses to continue at about the same rate during the first three months of 1980 as it tries to put together federal guarantees designed to keep it afloat — something Chrysler's auditors said was not assured.

In a report released Thursday, Chrysler listed a 1979 loss of $1.097 billion, more than any U.S. corporation had ever lost in a single year and $24 million more than the company had predicted. The loss amounted to $17.18 a share, compared with a loss of $3.54 in 1978.

The report also disclosed that Chrysler had not repaid loans of $70 million, that it had current liabilities greater than current assets in the amount of $111 million and that Canadian banks had restricted its use of $68 million in deposits.

Congress in December approved loan guarantees totaling $1.5 billion, but Chrysler has not yet arranged them. Company officials said they hope to complete the guarantee requirements, including a financing package, before issuing the first quarter shareholders report.

While it arranges long-term financing, the company must keep going. On Wednesday, Peugeot agreed to lend Chrysler $100 million, using Chrysler's Peugeot stock as collateral.

Still, more short-term help is required and some assets may have to be sold and negotiations are continuing, the company said. The report also carried a statement from Touche Ross & Co., the automaker's auditors, who warned Chrysler is "significantly weakened."

Suppliers have agreed to let some January bills slide until April, and Chrysler also has received union contract concessions worth $462.5 million over three years.

When 1979 began, Chrysler predicted a break-even year following losses of $205 million in 1978. But the collapse of the U.S. auto market dragged Chrysler's sales from 2.2 million vehicles worldwide to 1.8 million, and revenues from $13.6 billion to $12 billion.

Fourth-quarter revenues sagged from $3.99 billion to $3.05 billion, resulting in a loss of $376 million, or $5.77 a share, compared with a profit of $43.2 million, or 61 cents a share, a year earlier.

The earnings statement from Chairman Lee A. Iacocca and President J. Paul Bergmeyer said Chrysler "expects that its losses in the first quarter of 1980 will continue at about the same rate as the losses of the fourth quarter of 1979. For the full year, the company is seeking to hold its loss to about $500 million."

ly on Thompson, who was not happy over a little too much pressure from Connally, George Kangas, a young insurance man who is party chairman in suburban Lake County, runs Bush's campaign with this motto: The light is in the window for everybody who does not want Reagan. Since Bush has no official delegate candidates of his own, he will embrace any who have no commitment.

Sales resistance to this soft-sell is persistent doubt whether Bush has what it takes. Influential Republicans were disturbed by Bush's truculent tone in a Los Angeles Times interview reprinted in the Jan. 27 Chicago Sun-Times, so unlike the masterful image conveyed by Bush's paid television commercials widely shown here.

Thompson is among the skeptical, a situation not changed by Bush's performance Jan. 29 at a governor's mansion dinner for him closed to the press. Thompson told us he was "impressed" with Bush but thought he was "a little tired" and did not fully explain his views on coal usage (a major economic question in coal-rich southern Illinois). The morning after the dinner, the governor privately told an aide: "I still have not found my candidate."

But Reagan will not even attend a governor's mansion dinner of the kind provided all other candidates, following the advice of Totten who fears Thompson wants to "set up" Reagan for unfavorable comparison. Sen. Howard Baker's efforts here, as elsewhere, are very little and very late, run by a Thompson foe, ex-House Speaker W. Robert Blair. Thus have the combination of Iowa caucus results and Illinois tribal rivalries built the Bush fire on the prairie.

NAACP Celebration

The Pitt County Branch of the NAACP is holding an "Emancipation Proclamation Celebration" here this weekend, with a workshop Saturday, a fellowship banquet Saturday evening and a mass meeting Sunday evening.

The workshop will be held Saturday at St. Gabriel's Catholic Church, beginning at 8:45 a. m. Mrs. Carolyn Coleman, N. C. Field Director of the NAACP will be featured. At 9 a. m. John Maye Jr. will speak on alcohol and drugs; at 10 a. m., Dr. Sandra Bridwell on higher education; at 11 a. m., Thom Midgett on youth and education; at 1 p. m., Attorney William Dudley on youth in politics; and at 2 p. m. Ms. Ellen Morgan on sickle cell anemia.

Dr. Grady D. Davis Sr. will speak during the banquet to be held Saturday evening at the Holiday Inn here. He is pastor of Union Baptist Church in Durham and is professor of behavioral science at Shaw University in Raleigh.

The mass meeting will be held Sunday at 7 p. m. at Philippi Church of Christ. The speaker will be the Rev. William B. Moore, formerly of Pitt County, who is now pastor of Tenth Memorial Baptist Church in Philadelphia, Pa. Pres. D. D. Garrett urged attendance by all NAACP members from throughout the county and area.

Taxi Rates Upped For Williamston

WILLIAMSTON — The schedule of rates for taxis in Williamston were changed with increases to be effective on March 1. This action was approved by the Williamston Town Board at the board's February meeting. The primary increases are for out of town trips, and many within town rates remain the same.

The board awarded a contract to Silverthorne Roofing Company for its low bid of $5,295 for putting a new roof on the old Water Plant building on Sycamore Street.

Bobby McClees, chairman of the Williamston Recreation Advisory Committee, expressed concern that due to the lack of progress at the new park on Pine Street extension, the area is being damaged by four wheel drive vehicles and vandals, and requested that steps be taken to fence in the area and to protect it from further vandalism.

Linwood Boyd asked the board to consider letting the Rescue Squad use part of the $25,000 allocated by the town to be spent for new equipment purchases coming up. Boyd said the entire $25,000 would not be spent for regular budget items for various reasons.

Approves New Agency

WILLIAMSTON — At its February meeting, members of the Martin County Board of Commissioners approved giving sanction to the membership of the Martin County Interagency Council. The commissioners also approved adding five more members to the agency, one from each of the commissioner's district.

The purpose of the Interagency Council, as explained by Dr. Geoffrey Balkam, chairman, is to organize community leaders representing a cross section of the major interest areas in Martin County.

Approval was given to reappointment of the current membership of the Martin County Nursing Home Advisory Board. A request made by Martin County Agricultural Extension Agent Leon Allen for the purchase of three mobile radios and a base unit to be used by extension agents was approved.

In other actions, approval was given to recommend to the State Department of Transportation that 69 feet be removed from the right of way of Moratoc Park Road.

Three 'Maverick' Nations Buck Intervention In Afghanistan

MARINES IN THE MUD — U.S. Marine artillerymen fire a 105mm howitzer during live firing training on soggy Okinawa, the Japanese island where the Marines station about 20,000 troops. The Pentagon has indicated Marine units from Okinawa would be likely candidates for action should the U.S. fight in the Middle East. Shouting firing command, left, is Cpl. Robt. Blaylock of Little Rock, Ark. Firing the weapon by pulling the lanyard is Lance Cpl. David Eenhuis of Mason City, Iowa. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
North Korea and Romania have joined Yugoslavia in the maverick communist camp bucking the Kremlin's military intervention in Afghanistan. The official Soviet news agency Tass reported today that the two communist nations refused to sign a communique urging solidarity with the Afghan government of President Babrak Karmal, installed in a Soviet-engineered coup on Dec 27. The statement was adopted Thursday at a meeting of parliamentarians from 12 communist nations in the Bulgarian capital of Sofia, Tass said. It listed Cuba, Vietnam and South Yemen among those supporting the Karmal regime. North Korea has traditionally been closer to Peking than to Moscow, but has not previously criticized the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. Romania has become increasingly independent of Moscow in recent years, and was alone among the Warsaw Pact nations in attacking the Soviet move into Afghanistan. Yugoslavia voiced its opposition to the Soviet intervention shortly after Moscow began pouring 100,000 troops into Afghanistan on Christmas Day in an effort to prop-up the Karmal regime in its war with anti-communist Moslem rebels. Yugoslavia's foreign minister, Josip Vrhovec, reiterated his government's condemnation of the Soviet intervention in a joint communique with his French counterpart, Jean Francois-Poncet. The communique, issued Thursday, capped two days of talks between the ministers in Belgrade. "The latest developments in Afghanistan afflict a severe blow to the policy of detente and could lead to grave dangers," the joint communique said. In Tokyo, Japanese official denied press reports that Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira's government has decided to freeze investments in the Soviet Union to protest its moves in Afghanistan. "There has been no decision. The proposal is still under consideration," a Foreign Ministry spokesman insisted today. The United States has asked Japan and the Western allies to join in punitive measures against the Soviets to protest the Afghan intervention. The allies are scheduled to meet in Bonn, West Germany on Feb. 20 to coordinate their response to the Soviet intervention. Meanwhile, sources in the Afghan capital of Kabul said Moslem rebel snipers have killed about 40 Soviet soldiers over the past three weeks in the streets of Taloqan, the capital of Takhar Province near the Soviet border in northern Afghanistan. One source claimed 1,200 Afghan army troops have deserted in the embattled northern region. The reports could not be independently confirmed since Afghan authorities have refused to let Western correspondents leave Kabul for a first hand look at the situation in the provinces.

57 Arrested In Big Manhattan Raid

NEW YORK (AP) — A small army of police officers has shut down four shabby tenements on Manhattan's Lower East Side that were part of an alleged $250,000-a-day "one-block super-market for drugs" serving as many as 500 buyers an hour. Fifty-seven persons were arrested — and nearly 30 families were left homeless — as 150 officers armed with sledge hammers, axes, crowbars and shotguns tore away doors and walls in their search for drugs, money and suspects.

The operation was the biggest in the history of the New York, New Jersey and Connecticut area, officials said. Suspects, some chained to each other and manacled, were being booked early today on charges ranging from loitering for drugs and sale of a controlled substance to possession of deadly weapons. Police said the supermarket operated 15 hours a day from 15 locations in the four buildings, where narcotics were cut in one area, packaged in another and sold directly to customers from yet another stall. Customers came from throughout the metropolitan New York area and New England, Sciscioli said. They represented all economic groups, officials said.

Confiscated was an estimated $100,000 worth of heroin and cocaine, a rifle, two handguns and $2,780 in cash, said Sciscioli. Lt. Richard Doran said the value of the drug inventory, cash and paraphernalia probably would be at least $250,000 to $300,000 at the completion of the investigation. No one was hurt in the raid, but police said they shot and killed a dog, a Doberman pinscher that guarded one of the apartments, when it attacked two arresting officers.

Police Lt. Louis Sciscioli of the Street Enforcement Unit, which coordinated Thursday's raid, said those arrested ranged from addicts who became involved in the operation "to feed their habits," to relatively "clean," or drug-free, persons.

Gacy Trial Underway

CHICAGO (AP) — One mother fainted when she saw her late son's bracelet and other parents sobbed out loud as prosecutors opened the murder trial of John W. Gacy Jr. with a tally of his alleged victims — 33 young men and boys. The prosecutors are seeking the death penalty against the former building contractor, while Gacy's attorneys hope to prove insanity. On Thursday, the first day of testimony, 12 witnesses related the disappearances of the first 10 youths among 22 who have been identified.

William Kunkle Jr., Cook County assistant state's attorney heading the prosecution team, said they hoped to present similar testimony today about the other identified victims, who range in age from 14 to 22. Many relatives of the dead were in court when Bessie Stapleton, 39, testified she had last seen her 14-year-old son when he left home on May 13, 1976, to visit his sister. When Mrs. Stapleton said he wore a chain bracelet, "like a dog chain," Assistant State's Attorney Terry Sullivan brought her an envelope and spilled out the bracelet.

CITY DIRECTORY CENSUS TO BEGIN
Attention Greenville Residents

We are beginning to take a census to update information for a new Greenville City Directory. Local people have been hired to survey all residents. In most cases, the census will be conducted by telephone. However, some residents will be contacted in person. You will be asked to provide the husband and wife's name and occupation, address, telephone number, home ownership and names and birth dates of minor children. Business will be asked to provide the correct firm name, owner's name, address, telephone number, and business classification. You will not be asked to buy anything.

Information gathered in the census is to be published in the annual Greenville City Directory, which is used by local businesses, governmental agencies and emergency services to improve products and services to area residents.

Rescue Squad Disbands . . .

"most important...this council has had to make." Last month, volunteer squad members asked to meet with Mayor Don McGlohon to discuss the policy, but the request was rejected. Squad members then voted to disband the squad on February 7, if the policy of integrated fire and rescue service was not changed.

Last week, the volunteers, in a letter to City Manager Ed Wyatt, requested that the consideration of the city policy be placed on the council agenda for February 14. "This policy involves a matter vital to the citizens of Greenville," the letter written by Stocks said. The letter continued, "we would be willing to postpone our actions (to disband) to give the people a final opportunity to make their feelings known. A refusal to permit this public forum would not only deny the principles of democratic government, but would also leave us with no alternative except to proceed with plans to terminate..." Tuesday, as city officials said the request was still being considered, the rescheduling of fire and rescue personnel to fully implement the integrated system, was announced. "It's not so much the policy of cross training, that concerns us," Stocks said, "it's the way the program is being administered, and the cross utilization of personnel."

Under the integrated program, Stocks explained, former rescue men will be assigned to fire units, while firemen, "with far less experience," will be rotated to rescue duty, replacing more qualified personnel. "Anyone should be able to see that if a man is not allowed to use his skills, that his skill level will decrease," Stocks noted. Stocks added that under the present system, rescue operations are being directed by Fire Department officers who have no background in rescue or emergency medical service work. Stocks said rescue squad members feel rescue operations should be directed by officers with rescue and emergency medical experience, and the most highly qualified men assigned to rescue duties.

GENERAL GIAP RELIEVED OF POST — Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap, the architect of North Vietnam's military victories, has been relieved of his post as minister of national defense, Tass, the Soviet news agency, reported Thursday. (AP Laserphoto)

Teams from the Greenville squad have consistently placed high in state and international heavy duty rescue and first aid competitions. In addition to winning three international rescue championships since 1961, Greenville teams have taken 10 other trophies in international rescue and first aid competitions. Local teams have also taken 30 trophies, including 16 first place awards, in rescue and first aid competitions on the State level, during the same period.

Walter B. Jones, Betty Bonar, and Linwood Mercer compose the preparations committee for that event.

Betty Speir Spoke To Pitt Democrat Group

Delegate selection was the subject of remarks by Mrs. Betty Speir, recently elected chairperson of the State Democratic Party, before the Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee at a Thursday evening meeting. "The process is very simple," Mrs. Speir told the group. "The National Democratic Convention will have balanced representation. Half of North Carolina's delegates will be women, and approximately 20 percent will represent minorities."

She explained that every person who is interested in being a delegate must file an application in party headquarters and get acquainted with people who can be counted on to support that application in the precinct and county meeting. Precinct meetings will be held on March 13 and the Pitt County Convention will be on April 19. On behalf of the executive committee, Chairman George Saleeby of Grifton presented Teen Democratic President Mike Brohawn a check to help defray expenses to the State Democratic Convention. Teresa Little, state secretary of Teen Democrats, is a candidate for president of that organization. During the business session, the Committee heard reports from Lee Walton, Pitt County YDC, from Ann Burks for the Democratic Women, and from Mike Brohawn for the Teen Democrats. Treasurer Pat Higgins distributed a financial report and proposed that the committee set up a sub-committee on budget and finance. In anticipation of the Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner in Raleigh on April 26, Chairman Saleeby announced that Pitt County Democrats would host a hospitality room in the Hilton Inn. Congressman mission to investigate its charges against the shah. At that time, it said it wanted the captives held until the panel publishes its report. But Waldheim and the Carter administration want the hostages turned over to a third party in Tehran, possibly the Red Cross, as soon as the panel convenes. Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher said in Washington Thursday the U.S. government was postponing threatened sanctions against Iran in hopes that progress might be made toward releasing the hostages "if diplomacy were given the opportunity to work."

Iranian Foreign Ministry officials said they doubted the release was imminent, and a spokesman for the militants denied their number had been reduced. "I can tell you the hostages are all very well and there has been no change in our position," the spokesman told a Western reporter by telephone. "The shah and his wealth must be returned to Iran before they can be released." Last weekend the Revolutionary Council agreed to Waldheim's plan to set up an international

Gather Every Sunday For Their Bowl Game

Armed with pompons, noisemakers and fog horns, they erupt in a cacophony of cheers. It's not football, though. It's the weekly show, "Bible Bowl."

Each Sunday morning Jack Gray Ministries offers the half-hour show for religion. The Gospel Girls and the Bible Boys use their knowledge of the Scriptures to compete for $100 bills and points for their team.

The ultimate reward for the winning team is "The Glory Bowl," a nine-gallon banana split topped with sparklers.

Gray, a Dallas evangelist, came to Tulsa four years ago when his wife Revis was named dean of women at Oral Roberts University. His program is produced at station KTEW and has been carried by cable television to Pittsburgh and Los Angeles.

"Two million people a week see us, including 23,000 children out of 35,000 people in Tulsa who tune in," Gray says.

"We call it Bible Bowl because it is bigger than the Super Bowl, it deals with eternal life. We have buttons, pins, badges and T-shirts. I asked God how to get parents to think about the Bible and He said a little child shall lead them. We are rated among the top children's shows."

The shows are filmed in clusters of seven with the 50 boys and 50 girls participating over a four-hour period.

The youths are primed by an off-stage warm up that includes chants and screams.

Gray runs the show, switching from the demeanor of a drill sergeant, the cajolery of Buffalo Bob and the hype of Music Man.

One quarter of the show includes the Bleacher Battle in which Gray points to a child who has three seconds to reach a yellow hoop and answer a question. Another quarter centers on the Sword Drill in which Gray calls out a verse in the Bible and the first child to reach the stage, put his hand on a sword and read the correct verse earns 500 points for his team.

Gray says his ministry gets more than 6,000 letters a year, many from children asking for relief from problems at home.

"We didn't anticipate that kind of response. In the future we would like to develop a ministry of competent people to handle these problems," he said. "The show is financed by donations now but we are looking for local and national commercial sponsors."

When it gets too much

A President of the United States in the middle of a war that nobody liked turned to prayer. Abraham Lincoln explained simply that he had been driven to his knees many times by the knowledge that his own strength, and that of all around him, was insufficient.

Sometimes we have to pray! It gets too much

And don't feel awkward if you're not used to it. Folks before you have found that life gets too much. They have been driven to their knees—and turned to God—believing there was something better ahead.

Your worst day could become your best! Why not check it out in church? What Abe Lincoln was driven to may be what your soul needs, hungers for.

When it gets too much—there's a better way ahead.

WITN Receives Governor's Business Arts Award

Woody Wins Against Censors

RALEIGH — An eastern North Carolina agency, television station WITN of Washington, is one of six recipients of the Governor's Business Awards in the Arts and Humanities.

Co., N.A., and R. J. Reynolds Industries, Inc., all of Winston-Salem. This was the second consecutive year that Reynolds received the award.

These awards are given annually to recognize substantial support by businesses of the state's cultural resources, on a community or statewide basis. WITN was cited for its continuing and diverse support of cultural programs and organizations in eastern North Carolina. The company has provided free air time and production assistance for area visual and performing arts and historic restoration activities, including "The Lost Colony" outdoor drama at Manteo, the "Knight of the Black Flag" outdoor drama at Bath, and programs at the Greenville Art Center, Greenville. It has also given fundraising assistance and numerous grants to area cultural and educational institutions. WITN co-sponsored the Scholastic Arts Awards Competition in some 50 county school systems and displayed its 150-piece art collection at various locations across the state. Also, the company has donated to East Carolina University a television tower valued at $1 million.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentinians no longer have to go to other countries to see Woody Allen's latest movie — the comedian has won a two-month battle against censors who had refused to allow an uncut version of "Manhattan" to open here.

cised on grounds of sexual immorality. Allen, who directed and starred in the movie, refused to let the cut version be shown.

The board's most serious protest was against a line spoken by Allen himself, who plays a writer named Isaac Davis. In the film, Isaac's wife, played by Meryl Streep, leaves him for another woman. Comments Isaac: "She converted from bisexuality to lesbianism."

A spokesman for United Artists, the film's distributor, said the Motion Picture Classification Board backed down after weeks of negotiation. Manhattan opened Thursday in Buenos Aires, restricted to viewers over 18.

Until Thursday, many Argentinians had traveled to neighboring Uruguay and Chile to view the film.

Sugg Librarian Nominated For Terry Sanford Award

Linda Mayo Teel, a native of Pitt County, has been nominated by the Pitt Chapter of the North Carolina Association of Educators for the Terry Sanford Award. Teel is in her second year as librarian at H.B. Sugg School.

The Terry Sanford Award is a statewide award based on creativity and excellence in teaching.

Teel attended Pitt County Schools in Belvoir and graduated from North Pitt High School in 1975. In 1978 she graduated magna cum laude from East Carolina University and will receive her masters degree in library science there in May.

The nominee is a member of Kappa Delta Pi, N.C.A.E., N.E.A., C.T.A. and of the Library Media Society of Pitt County.

Teel is married to Joseph Teel and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David H. Mayo. She is a member of Mt. Pleasant Christian Church and is pianist for the Junior Church there.

Corn Growers Meeting Set

The annual corn growers' meeting, this year titled "Corn for Profit and Rotation in 1980," will be hosted by the Farmville Chamber of Commerce at the national Guard Armory in Farmville.

The meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, Feb. 13, at 3 p. m., according to Leroy James, Pitt County Agriculture Extension Chairman. He said corn farming equipment will be displayed and various fertilizer, chemical and seed dealers from throughout the area will have displays and answer questions about their products.

C. State University, will speak on "Production Practices Available to Corn Producers in 1980." Concluding the program will be a panel discussion moderated by Gaylon Ambrose on tillage practices including "Ripping and Hipping." The panel will be composed of experienced corn growers familiar with various tillage practices. They will answer any questions posed by those present.

Jailer Faces Sex Charges

NEWTON, N.C. (AP) — A former Catawba County jailer has been released on $2,000 bond pending a Feb. 20 probable-cause hearing on charges that he had sexual relations with a female inmate in his custody.

Kenneth Elliott, 45, resigned as chief deputy when the allegations were made last month and he surrendered to county authorities Wednesday night. Catawba County Sheriff Dale Johnson said the allegations against Elliott were based on a complaint from Marquitya Benfield, who told officers she and the jailer had sex in a room at the jail. State laws forbid such acts between a jailer and inmates in his custody. The charge is a felony and carries a penalty of two to 15 years in prison.

Ms. Benfield told authorities the alleged sexual incident occurred Jan. 16, the day she was jailed on nine felony counts of obtaining property under false pretenses and nine misdemeanor charges of writing worthless checks. Johnson said he had tried unsuccessfully for 15 years to have matrons assigned to the jail, but the incident has prompted county officials to authorize the immediate hiring of three matrons. Johnson said some other jail employees have been reprimanded, apparently as a result of the allegations, but he did not elaborate.

Tutoring For Grades 1-10

Applications are being accepted for this semester's afternoon reading tutoring program for children in grades one through ten offered by the East Carolina University School of Education.

The clinical program, to be directed by Drs. Patricia Terrell and Dorothy Muller, will begin at 3:30 p. m. Feb. 19. The program is designed for students who either have reading problems or who wish to enrich their reading skills. Sessions meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 3:30 to 4:30 or from 4 to 5 p. m. Since enrollment is limited to 50 children, early application is advised. Further information about the Reading Clinic is available from the Department of Elementary Education, ECU, Greenville, telephone 757-6833. There is no charge for participating in the program.

Peanuts Hearing Date
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry, announced today he has scheduled a March 6 committee meeting on his proposal to raise the price support level on quota peanuts. He said representatives of peanut producers, shellers and manufacturers and officials of the U.S. Department of Agriculture have been invited to testify at the hearing. Earlier in the week, Talmadge and four other Senate members introduced legislation to increase the minimum support level for quota peanuts from $420 to $502 per ton. Talmadge introduced the bill after the Carter Administration announced a 1980 support level for quota peanuts of $455 per ton. "I intend to do everything I can to secure passage of his legislation in time to apply to this year's crop," he said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The energy crisis won't lead many suburbanites back into the cities, as some expect, says the director of the Census Bureau.

In fact, the massive migration to the suburbs should intensify in the 1980s, leaving many cities with poorer residents and a smaller tax base, the director, Vincent Barabba, said Thursday.

Speaking to a group of urban experts, he painted a generally grim outlook for the nation's cities, although he pointed to some bright, localized signs of metropolitan rebirth.

"Some have conjectured that shortages in the availability of gasoline could lead to a return to the city," Barabba said. "But most of the nation's commuting flow is from suburban houses to suburban employment," he noted.

"And gasoline shortages, as a first step, are more likely to lead to increased use of car-pools and public transportation," he noted.

Charity Grows
NEW YORK (AP) — America's charitable foundations grew richer in 1977-78, but still gave away $2.3 billion, an increase of $119 million over the previous year, a new report says.

The analysis, compiled by the Foundation Center, which collects and distributes information on such philanthropy, showed foundation assets up $584 million, to $35.4 billion.

estimates for the United States as a whole," Barabba stressed. "The possible return to the cities of higher income groups has apparently been quite localized and in no way offsets the more massive outmigration of the more affluent to the suburbs," he said.

Central city populations, after growing by 0.6 percent a year in the 1960s, declined by 0.4 percent a year in the 1970s, Census Bureau figures show.

Barabba played down a back-to-the-city movement led by young adults seeking downtown amenities.

"There seems little doubt that some movement, especially on the part of young whites, is indeed taking place, at least on a selective basis," he said. "But this movement is not apparent from our sample survey wherever possible, rather than to migration back to the cities."

The census director also said many city dwellers now are commuting to suburban jobs. "The importance of trips oriented toward the suburbs continues to increase," he told the National Urban Policy Roundtable.

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Down by 13 points early in the second half, the Pirates of East Carolina stuck by their guns, fought back and pulled out an 86-84 victory over the University of South Carolina last night.

The Pirates canned 10 of 17 free throws over the final five minutes, including seven of nine in the final minute of play when South Carolina became desperate, to gain the victory after storming back with an outstanding defensive effort over the previous ten minutes of play.

South Carolina's front linemen Cedric Hordges and Jim Strickland dominated play in the first half, scoring 22 of the Gamecocks' 38 first frame points. But the Pirates, led by Herb Gray's inside play, changed things around in the second and shut the door on the two, allowing them only four points each in the second frame.

While the Pirates shot a blazing 61.4 per cent from the floor including 64.0 per cent in the second half, it was their foul shooting that eventually did the trick.

Men, Women Here Saturday

"Rosie Thompson Night" and "Ladies Night" will be observed Saturday as East Carolina's women's and men's basketball teams play a doubleheader in Minges Coliseum.

At 6:15 p.m., the Lady Pirates, 16-7, entertain George Mason.

Thompson, the star of the women's team and the most prolific scorer in East Carolina history, will be honored during the evening, and her jersey number "10" will be retired during ceremonies at halftime of the game.

The male Pirates, 12-8, following a victory over

South Carolina Thursday night, will be hosting little known, but very strong Illinois State, which comes in 16-5. Two of their losses came against Southern California and to nationally ranked Syracuse, both on the road in two-point affairs. Coach Dave Odom of East Carolina has called the guests the best team to have played in Minges since the Artis Gilmore-Pembroke Burroughs-led Jacksonville team of some years ago.

All women will be admitted free to the game in observance of "Ladies Night."

Rose Nips Fike; In 1st Tie

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Leading Greenville Rose 32-19 midway through the second period, Wilson Fike appeared headed for a victory that would insure itself of at least a tie for the Division I crown.

Unfortunately for Fike, Rose finally caught the quicker Golden Demons, or more precisely Wilson slowed down, and the Rampants took advantage of the opportunity, rallying behind the inside play of Donald House and Donald Johnson to nip Fike, 68-66, Thursday night.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Wilson Fike whipped Rose, 52-41.

The win left Rose's boys, ranked 13th in the state by the AP, tied for the conference lead with Wilson. Both schools are 9-3 in the league with two games left. Rose, which was led by House's 24 points, 17 of which came in the second half, and Johnson's 14, all but four of which came in the second half, is now 15-5.

The loss drops Wilson to 14-6 overall and left Coach Harvey Reid questioning his second half strategy.

"We went to the spread offense in the second half for a number of reasons," said Reid, whose team stayed in its version of the four-corners throughout the last 16 minutes of the game. "We're smaller than they are and we wanted to pull them away from the boards. We usually are very good in that offense, but not tonight. We got the layups, we just missed too many.

"I don't know. The way we ran it tonight in comparison to how we've run it in the past, maybe we should have stayed with our regular offense."

After trailing by 13 in the first half, Rose began its comeback in the third period but could not take the lead until the final two minutes.

Down 62-58 with four minutes left, Rose scored eight straight points, four each by Johnson and Calvin Whichard, who had 10 for Rose, to go ahead, 66-62, with a minute left.

Following a missed one-and-one opportunity by Johnson, Wilson's Ben Howell, who led Fike with 23 points, hit to pull the visitors within two, 66-64.

Johnson then canned both ends of a one-and-one but Tracy Hill, who had 20 for Fike, answered with a short jumper to pull Wilson back within two, 68-66, with 20 seconds to go.

Moments later, Wallace Brown missed a baseline jumper and on Fike's ensuing trip down court Melvis Strickland was fouled by Tyrone Tucker. Strickland, however, missed both free throws, allowing Rose to preserve the win, the Rampants second of the season over Wilson. Earlier, Rose defeated Wilson, 68-64.

"This was a great game," Rose coach Jim Brevington said. "We played well in the second half but did not play well in the first half. But we hung in there.

"Their quickness and defensive pressure hurt us, but we didn't do what we were supposed to do against their press," he said.

Led by Hill's 14 first-half points and a quick, full-court press, Wilson spurred to a 17-11 first-period lead, helped along by Rose's own turnovers. The Rampants had 11 turnovers in the first half.

Wilson built its advantage to 32-19 midway through the second period but saw Rose steadily narrow the gap behind the inside play of House and Tucker, who combined for eight of Rose's last 10 points of the quarter. Wilson led at half, 38-31.

Denied a trip to the line in the first half, the Bucs went up 25 times in the second, making 16 of those. And while it appeared at one time that South Carolina's fouling strategy might pay off, the stretch shooting at the stripe did the trick.

George Maynor hit two with 1:08 left, then Herb Krusen, who passed Number 12 all-time scorer Larry Hunt's 1,012 career total, as he climbed to 1,023, knocked in two.

Tony Byles missed one with 29 seconds left, but Herb Gray hit one with 21 showing, holding a four-point Pirate lead. Then, with seven seconds to go and the Bucs up by two, Byles again went to the line.

With the pressure on, the fans screaming and waving their arms behind the basket, Byles calmly dropped in both shots for an 86-82 lead.

"All that hollaring and waving didn't bother me. In fact, I think it made me concentrate on the rim a little harder than I would have otherwise," Byles said later.

Zam Frederick hit with three seconds left and the Pirates just held the ball out of bounds for the final few ticks to take the two-point win.

The victory was the second straight for the Pirates over South Carolina. They downed the Gamecocks, 56-55, in Greenville last season.

"Any time you beat a Frank McGuire team, you've got to be elated," ECU coach Dave Odom said. "South Carolina has great athletes, and their tradition is far greater than any one we play outside the Atlantic Coast Conference teams. To win here is great."

"I have so much pride for the 13 who dressed out here tonight, especially for the seniors. They've been through so much over the past four years. I know this victory means a lot to those five guys."

Odom said the keys to the victory were three-fold.

"One, we were willing to continue with our game plan when we got behind. Our plan was to put pressure on the ball and deny it to their big men inside. We did a poor job of it in the first half, but we got it going in the second. Hordges and Strickland hurt us badly then. Going to the pressure defense in the second half helped us too."

The Pirates, trailing by 13, 57-44, after three and a half minutes of the second half, began to trap. They used the trap only three times, but each time, they produced turnovers that led to ECU baskets.

It swung the momentum over to the Pirates, and from the 16:43 mark, East Carolina outshot South Carolina, 30-13, for a 74-70 lead with 5:24 left.

"Second, (Mike) Doyle's injury (midway through the period after taking a charge) hurt them. It's a lot like us losing Maynor or Krusen or (Herb) Gray. Great players mean a lot to great teams," Odom added. Doyle was unable to play over the final ten minutes of the game.

"Third, hitting our free throws down the stretch did it. (Continued on page 13)

Prep Swimmers Congregating

The 25th annual Atlantic Seaboard Interscholastic Swimming and Diving Championships will be held Saturday at East Carolina University's Minges Natatorium.

Over 60 schools from all along the East Coast are expected to participate in the meet, which is rapidly growing into one of the nation's largest.

"We probably would have a much larger field this year," ECU swimming coach Ray Scharf said, "except for the fact that Virginia is holding its state meet this weekend, too."

Even so, some Virginia schools are passing up that meet to swim here.

There will be ten competitive swimming events, plus one-meter diving for boys, plus the same events for girls.

Calvert Hall, which has won the event for the past three years and nine of the past ten years is again favored to capture the boys' championship. Scharf expects top challenges to come from Bolis School of Jacksonville, Fla., and McCallie School of Chattanooga, Tenn., both newcomers to the meet.

Pine Crest of Florida has won the past two girls' meets, but is not expected to field as large a team this year. Scharf picks Peady School of Hightstown, N.J., as the favorite.

Schools competing are expected to come from North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, West Virginia, Tennessee and Florida.

"This is probably the finest high school meet on the East Coast right now and one of the best in the whole country. And it should be even better next year," Scharf said.

Rosie Thompson To Be Honored In Saturday Night Ceremonies

By Charles Chandler
Special To The Daily Reflector

It all began with a talk from a football coach and will begin coming to a close this Saturday night.

What's closing out is the college career of ECU's all-time leading scorer, man or woman, Rosie Thompson. Following the Lady Pirates' game Saturday with George Mason, Thompson's jersey number "10" will be retired.

For Miss Thompson, the honor is one that has yet to sink in. "I don't guess it has hit me yet," she said. "I haven't thought about it that much really."

The 5-8 Miss Thompson said that no one actually told her that her number would be retired before she saw it in print. "I found out on Tuesday," she explained, "when we were going to Chapel Hill. I saw it on one of the flyers (info sheets put out by SID of face). That sure was a strange way to hear about it."

Among the many records held by the Blounts Creek native are ECU all-time scoring and rebounding totals. For her career, Thompson has tallied 2,214 points and 1,119 rebounds.

This season she is averaging 18.3 points and 9.6 rebounds per contest.

The scoring average would be higher had she not experienced a scoring slump during the past month. For a string of ten games, Thompson rarely scored in double figures, much less score her customary 20 points per game. It was just this past Tuesday at North Carolina, when she tallied 25 points, that she broke out of the slump.

But, Thompson says, there is a good reason for her recent lack of scoring. "Our guards and forwards have been hitting their perimeter shots real well," she said. "They were making the shots. There was really no need for us to go inside to me."

"I tried to concentrate more on defense. Honestly, I feel during that stretch that I was playing as well all-around as I ever have. I just wasn't scoring as much."

Thompson's contributions to the East Carolina women's program have surely been many, not only on the floor but off.

Few people realize, for example, that she has never had an athletic scholarship until this season. "They always told me I could have one," Thompson explained, "but I refused because I already had an academic scholarship. I wanted our coaches to use the scholarship that was offered me to be used to get quality players in here."

How did Thompson, a "quality" player herself, arrive at ECU? Believe it or not, former Pirate football coach Pat Dye had a tremendous influence on her decision.

"Coach Dye encouraged me to come here," she said. "I had planned to wait a year after I graduated from high school."

Though she did not wait that year before coming to ECU, Thompson is finishing out her career at the same time as if she had.

"I only played four games my sophomore year," she explained, "because of an injury."

The experience is not one that she likes to think of. "It was horrible," exclaimed the senior forward. "We were 6-16 that year and I couldn't stand just watching. I don't know if our record would have been better had I played, but at least I could have tried."

That was four years ago. The Lady Pirate program has come a long way since then, now owning a 16-8 record.

"The major change," Thompson said, "is that Coach (Cathy) Andruzzi is getting good caliber players in here. You really need that because everyone we play is tough. You can take nothing for granted."

One thing Thompson is not taking for granted is her own future. She is presently engaged and has ambitions to play professional basketball.

If she makes it in the Women's Basketball League, she will join fiancée Zack Valentine to form a family of pro athletes. Valentine, a former ECU defensive end, is a linebacker for the World Champion Pittsburgh Steelers.

Thompson said that though she had not spoken with scouts, she felt her chances at a pro career are good. "Coach Andruzzi has a lot of connections," Thompson said. "I just hope some of them will pay off."

Something else in her favor is the fact that two former ECU men's coaches, Larry Gillman and Terry Kunze, are coaching in the WBL. Gillman, who ended a stormy two-year ECU tenure last season, coaches the St. Louis Streak,

IOC Executive Board To Hear USOC's Call For Moving Games

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) - The executive board of the International Olympic Committee (IOC) was scheduled to hear today from the U.S. Olympic Committee on President Carter's call for the Summer Olympic Games to be moved out of Moscow.

Robert Kane, president, and Col. Don F. Miller, executive director, were presenting the USOC's case. It was virtually certain the IOC, which meets in full session from Sunday through Tuesday, will reject the Carter plan and confirm that the Games go on in Moscow.

Lloyd Cutler, special counsel to Carter, arrived in Lake Placid Thursday night to confer with Olympic officials about the president's position on the Moscow Games.

Cutler had presented the president's case in front of the U.S. Olympic Committee's meeting in Colorado Springs, Colo., two weeks ago. He was in Lake Placid for conferences from Thursday afternoon until midnight. Saturday night will see the first contact between the IOC, and the White House since the Russians intervened in Afghanistan, and Carter began his campaign to boycott the Olympics. The president is sending Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to open the IOC's 82nd session.

The opening of an IOC session is always a formal affair with long speeches. It is usual for a head of state or his deputy to declare the session open. But it is rare for such a thing to happen in a country where the government is at loggerheads with the IOC.

Lord Killanin, president of the IOC, has insisted the Moscow Olympics will go on as planned. Carter has said that if the Russians do not pull their troops out of Afghanistan by February 20 he will not want the U.S. team to go. More than 30 governments are backing him.

A private meeting between Killanin and Vance appears likely. There has been no contact between Killanin and Carter since the Afghanistan crisis began.

Kane and Miller are not expected to advocate Carter's case with much force. USOC sources said they will do their duty and pass on Carter's views. But as representatives of a National Olympic Committee they have to avoid breaching the Olympic Charter, which forbids NOCs to yield to governmental pressures.

Moreover the two U.S. members on the IOC, Julian K. Roosevelt and Douglas F. Roby, have said they do not support Carter. Roosevelt has declared that a boycott in the way of cowardice and has denounced the Carter administration for interfering with the Olympic Games.

To Be Honored

East Carolina women's star Rosie Thompson will be honored Saturday night as her jersey will be retired by the school. She is the first woman to be so honored, and is the all-time basketball scorer for the school.

while Kunze, Gillman's assistant last season, coaches at Minnesota.

"I guess it will help me since they've seen me play," Thompson said. "I used to talk some with both of them."

As for Saturday's game with George Mason, Thompson said she had no extra feelings because of her number being retired. "I'll treat it just like any other game and any other night."

She may, but the fact remains it will be more than just another night. It marks the end of an era.

Pitt Paladins Stop Cape Fear By 93-70

LITTLEFIELD - Pitt Community College closed out the 1979-80 regular season last night with a 93-70 romp past Cape Fear Technical Institute. The victory gave the Paladins a winning 11-10 mark for the season and an 8-2 conference record. They have clinched second seeding for the conference tournament, set to begin Thursday.

The semifinals and finals of the tournament will be played in East Carolina University's Minges Coliseum on Friday and Saturday, after a preliminary game on Thursday to decide the fourth-seeded entry. The number four and five teams play for that berth, and the right to face top-seeded Craven on Friday at 8 p.m. Pitt will face the yet-to-be decided number three team at 10 p.m. Friday. Consolations will be Saturday at 7 p.m., with the championship at 9 p.m.

Pitt jumped off to an early lead against Cape Fear and were never headed after that. By halftime they had run out to a 50-32 lead, and they outthrew Cape Fear, 43-38, in the second half.

"We really played well," Coach Herb Dillon said. "We were in charge all the way."

Frankie Dail led Pitt with 26 points, while Larry Suggs had 21, Dennis Batts had 18 and Jeff Moreno had 14. Rodney White had 22, and Mike Johnson and Clifford Plummer each had ten for Cape Fear.

"I want to express our great appreciation to the county schools, their coaches, principals and athletic directors, for the use of their gyms this year," Dillon said. "Without their help, our basketball program could never have done as well as it has this year."

Cape Fear—White 11 0-3 22; Johnson 4 2-3 10; Plummer 3 4-5 10; Green 4 0-0 8; Cumber 4 0-4 8; Stonestreet 3 0-2 6; Taylor 2 0-1 4; Claybrook 1 0-0 2; Totals 32-6-14-70.

points and Donna Cullipher's 10, to 3-9 in the conference and 4-13 overall and left Rose coach Dennis Gibson wondering about his team's shot selection.

"Every time we'd get it (the deficit) down we'd start taking those 25 footers, and they just don't make it," Gibson said. "In the second half we settled down and began working the ball around and getting the ball around and getting the ball around. Then we started making turnovers, but we were still in the ballgame until the last two minutes."

After falling behind 13-10 in the opening period, Rose narrowed the margin to one, 15-14, early in the second quarter on a jumper and two foul shots by Williams. Fike, however, regrouped and scored the next seven points to grab a 24-14 lead with 2½ minutes remaining, before going into the dressing room up 25-19.

The Golden Demons outscored the Rampants 10-4 in the first three minutes of the third period to move ahead, 35-23, before Rose rallied with eight straight points to narrow the gap to 35-29. Wilson led, 37-33, going into the final eight minutes of play.

The Rampants kept it close for the first three minutes of the final quarter, but Wilson rattled off an 11-2 spurt that gave the Demons a 50-39 lead with less than two minutes to go and all but sealed the victory.

"We couldn't get to the boards tonight at all," Gibson said. "Their defense also hurt us. It was a well-designed zone. This was the first time in the last few ballgames that we've had trouble getting it in the middle."

Rose also had trouble getting to the foul line, something that has plagued the Rampants the last three games.

"In the last three ballgames we haven't shot a free throw in the second half," Gibson said. "Two games ago we shot four times and made none, last game we shot five and made four and tonight we hit five-of-six."

Lefty Let Players Call Final Defense In Win Over Carolina

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — After two of his strategic moves failed, Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell took the democratic approach for the final play of the game.

"I asked the players if they'd rather play zone or man-to-man," Driesell said of his huddle with two seconds remaining Thursday night. "They said man-to-man."

This time the strategy paid off, as Maryland's Albert King batted away an inbounds pass by Jimmy Black of North Carolina and preserved a 70-69 victory for the seventh-ranked Terps over the 11th-ranked Tar Heels.

The triumph gave Maryland a 9-1 Atlantic Coast Conference record and a three-game lead over North Carolina and Clemson, both now 6-4, with four games remaining.

King, who sank four free throws in the final 14 seconds while extending his streak to 24 straight from the foul line, admitted he took a chance by going for the pass intended for John Virgil.

"But if he got the ball and turned around and shot," King said, "I would have felt a lot worse than if I had fouled. Al Wood beat us on a 30-foot shot with one second to play last year."

As it was, North Carolina Coach Dean Smith contended King had fouled by reaching over Virgil's back and that Wood had been held as he tried to cut behind a screen.

"But that didn't lose the game for us," said Smith. "The game didn't go down to one play."

Maryland, 17-3, overcame an eight-point deficit early in the game and then blew a 56-45 lead with 12:51 remaining by failing to score for more than seven minutes while trying to run a delay game.

"We probably went to the delay game a little too early," Driesell admitted. "After we missed some easy shots, we were afraid to shoot and we lost momentum."

After King converted a one-and-one foul chance with 14 seconds left, giving Maryland a 68-65 lead, Pete Budko tapped in a missed O'Koren shot.

O'Koren, who finished with 18 points, fouled out with five seconds remaining and King responded with two more free throws to make it 70-67. But Wood took a length-of-the-court pass from Rich Vonakor to score with three seconds left.

"We should have called time out when Albert made the free throws," Driesell said, "but I decided not to. That's what made the game close at the end."

But after Wood scored, giving him 27 points, Maryland's Dutch Morley looped an inbounds pass which Ernest Graham couldn't hold and the ball went out of bounds. Then came the play by King, who had 20 points and 11 rebounds, setting off a wild celebration by 14,500 fans.

Graham and Greg Manning scored 17 points each as Maryland beat North Carolina twice in the regular season for the first time in 19 years, and for the first time at home since 1974.

Driesell showed he was still in a quandary after the game, when he said he expected the Tar Heels, now 16-5, to look for Wood or O'Koren for the final shot.

Told O'Koren had already fouled out, Driesell laughed and said: "That's another of my brilliant coaching moves."

Pirate...

But above all, sticking to our game plan was the important thing."

Odom added that he found that Strickland was a better player than he had thought, and he also praised Herb Gray for his defensive work on Hordges in the second half, limiting him to just four points.

The Pirates jumped out to an early lead when South Carolina was having trouble getting started, 12-8. But after the first five minutes, both teams blistered the basket as the Gamecocks used several turnovers to come back and take a 17-16 lead. The two swapped baskets over the next few minutes until the Gamecocks got a 29-28 lead with 7:06 left and proceeded to pull out to a nine-point edge over the Pirates, holding a 47-38 margin at halftime.

In the second half, they quickly pulled it out to 13, 53-30, but after several more exchanges of baskets, the Pirates regained the momentum with their trap defense, and took control of the game.

They finally took the lead again on a Krusen jumper at 64-62 and after three ties, pulled out by four at 74-70 on a goal-tending call on a Maynor shot and a steal by Byles with 5:24 left.

East Carolina made only one more field goal after that, a toss-back of a missed free throw by Gray, the rest of the way, as their foul shooting kept them ahead of the Gamecocks.

Maynor led the Pirate shooting with 28 points, while Krusen added 22, Byles had 12 and Gray hit 10. Hordges led the Gamecocks with 16, while Tom Wimbush and Strickland each had 14, Doyle had 13, Kevin Darmony, who kept the Gamecocks in the game during the late stages, had 11 and Frederick had 10.

The win boosted the Pirate record to 12-8, while South Carolina fell to 13-8.

East Carolina returns home to face strong Illinois State Saturday night.

Defense, Intelligence Helps SuperSonics To Win On Road

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

The Seattle SuperSonics are defending champions of the National Basketball Association. And, according to Coach Lenny Wilkens, defense and intelligence are the big keys in their retaining their crown.

"Until somebody dethrones us, I know we're the best team," Wilkens said. "We don't take anything for granted."

That's where the defense and intelligence came in handy Thursday night when Seattle stopped the Detroit Pistons 119-102.

"We win on the road because we know what it takes to win and we play with intelligence," Wilkens said. "It's our defense which really makes the difference. Even when the offense seems to fall off, we know defense will keep us in the game and that's half the battle."

"We tightened up on defense in the last quarter when Detroit failed to score for six minutes and we did the right things at the end."

Pacers 134, Bullets 104

Indiana went on a 20-2 burst in the fourth quarter to break open a close game en route to a rout of Washington.

Billy Knight scored 33 points and grabbed 14 rebounds to lead the Pacers' victory. George McGinnis, playing his second game since being traded to Indiana, added 19 points and 11 rebounds. Kevin Grevey scored 21 for the Bullets.

Hawks 92, Jazz 90

Eddie Johnson's 23 points paced Atlanta to its win over Utah. The game was up for grabs with two minutes left and the Hawks leading 91-89, but Atlanta's John Drew and Utah's Ben Poquette traded free throws for the only scoring. The two teams continually traded turnovers as the game ended.

Oosterhuis Glad He Decided To Play After Feeling Sick

HONOLULU (AP) — England's Peter Oosterhuis was so ill he didn't think he could start the first round of the $325,000 Hawaiian Open.

But he felt better Thursday and came to the Waialae Country Club course and shot a 67, two strokes behind the leaders and his best round here.

"I didn't have enough energy to get angry and I played well," commented the 31-year-old Briton whose previous best in a Hawaiian Open was a 69.

Oosterhuis wound up in a six-way tie for second behind the leaders, George Burns and Leonard Thompson, who set the pace with seven-under-par 65's. None of the 144 starters carded 66.

At 67 along with the Oosterhuis were Tom Watson, Ed Sneed, Don Pooley, Chi Chi Rodriguez, and John Schroeder.

Eighty-one of the golfers were at par or better and only the low 70 and ties will qualify for Saturday's third round in this 72-hole tournament.

Burns, who won the Bing Crosby event last week, commented, "I still feel like I'm walking on a cloud."

He said he looked forward to playing with money winning champion Watson and former U.S. Open champion Jerry Pate.

He was with them again today but on the opener he scored better than either, although saying he was watching for tips to improve his game.

Burns carded a 33-32 while Thompson finished at 35-30 playing the second nine first.

"I was two completely different people on those nines," he commented. "On one side I played great and on the other badly."

He played solid golf for 12 holes and then was scrambling.

Hubert Green, who won the Hawaiian Open the past two years, blew himself out of a shot at the $58,500 first prize this time with a 76 and may not make the cut.

His troubles reached a climax at the 166-yard seventh hole when he hit his tee shot into a trap and needed four shots to get out.

The weather proved beneficial to most of the golfers with the Trade Winds not picking up until mid-afternoon. The course had been designed for those winds which go from Northeast to Southwest.

However, rains on Wednesday left the greens soft, an advantage to the early starters but a detriment to those going off late.

Summer Camp Jobs Available

Representatives of at least eight summer camps in the area will be at East Carolina University's Mendenhall Student Center on Feb. 15 for a Summer Camp Employment Day being conducted by four ECU agencies.

Students from ECU and other area colleges and universities and others interested are invited to the event to talk to camp representatives and learn more about the camps. The Office of Cooperative Education is coordinating appointments for interviews.

Dr. Betsy Harper, director of Cooperative Education, said summer camp jobs available include counselors, water safety instructors and lifeguards, cooks, nurses, crafts directors and program directors.

The event is being co-sponsored by Co-op Education, Career Planning and Placement, the ECU Counseling Center and the Parks, Recreation and Conservation program.

Lucille Ball Wasn't So Keen On Doing The 90-Minute Special

By PETER J. BOYER
 AP Television Writer
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lucille Ball likes to tell a story about how she ended up doing a 90-minute NBC special she didn't particularly want to do. She calls it the "Tricky-Mickey Meeting" story. It goes like this:
 "Fred Silverman (NBC's President) asked me if I would come to NBC. I told him no, that I probably wouldn't leave CBS. But he came and took me to a Tricky-Mickey dinner, and then here (to her home) for a gabfest, and presented me with an interesting idea.
 "He asked me if I'd like to search for a half-hour sitcom for NBC. I thought, Gee, I wouldn't mind doing that, you know, producing. He asked me if I had any ideas.
 "I said, 'Okay, yes, I do.' I thought of Donald O'Connor, a marvelously talented man, the one performer who came to mind.
 "Well, he took the half-hour idea and it suddenly became an hour-and-a-half, with me in it. I said to myself, 'Oh, hell, now they want me in it. I knew it wasn't going to be a simple as I thought.' It was a cute trick."
 Lucy and her writers made the Tricky-Mickey meeting the central theme of tonight's "Lucy Moves to NBC" special. Fred Silverman himself is in it (he's taller than you might have thought).
 "The story is, Silverman goes to Lucy's house, gives her the line about how TV misses her, and talks her into coming to NBC as a comedy consultant, where she develops a sitcom featuring Donald O'Connor.
 The O'Connor sitcom part may become a series, in which case Lucy will have gotten what she originally hoped for in the Tricky-Mickey meeting. "I really didn't want to be in it," she says. But she admits that not regularly being on the air, after being Lucy on television for 20 years, was a black time for her.
 "After 'Lucy' and 'The Lucy Show,' or whichever order they were in, went off the air, (in 1974) I realized I had quit my arena. It was a bad time for me. The kids (Lucie and Desi Arnaz) were gone, my mother died, my health was bad. I was in a depression. I had quit my arena, and it was traumatic."
 She wants her arena back, but she'd like to redefine its dimensions. She still has a working production company and she'd like to work it for NBC.
 "We'll see what they (NBC) do with the first project (the pilot in tonight's special). I refuse to go beyond that right now. I'm ready and willing to produce comedies if somebody can assure me they won't end

'Great Art' Imitations Shot Down

By LEO LLOYD
NEW YORK (UPI) — Can't afford great art? Why not buy an imitation?

The idea was attractive to Peter Wright, 51, a former British newsman and London art dealer who wanted to open an art gallery in New York. The first exhibition he mounted last September at his Not Really Gallery was art works in the style of modern masters.

It seemed an idea whose time had come. Wright sold imitations of Renoir, Chagall, Pissarro, Dali, Matisse and other artists of that ilk. He felt he was achieving his goal — "to reach the person who aspires to own a Matisse and can't afford one." The imitation paintings were priced from $1,000 to $3,000, prints from $175 to $250.

Wright's intention was to feature a stable of artists who create imitations, not copies. Their works strongly resemble paintings of a particular master and may contain characters and scenes painted by the master. But there were no reproductions of any one painting. The master's name is imitated on the front of the canvas, and the real artist's name appeared on the back.

Wright's first exhibition featured works by notorious forger David Stein, a Frenchman who reputedly sold $1.75 million worth of fakes, many in the style of Chagall, before he was convicted of fraud and imprisoned in 1968. For several years Stein had his own gallery on Park Avenue where he sold original art as well as his own forgeries.

Wright had had a successful Stein exhibition when he owned a gallery in London in 1969. All 67 of Stein's paintings sold in 17 minutes after they went on display. Wright thought a New York exhibition of Stein's work might do as well.

But the New York State Attorney General's office objected. As Wright tells it, lawyers for the state contacted him and he and his lawyer met with them. They told him he could not sell imitations.

"Anything we sold with somebody's name on the front of it, even though we stamped it on the back as an imitation with the real artist's name, they would object," he said.

The state acknowledged Wright was not committing a crime.

"They went out of their way to stress I was not doing anything criminal," said Wright, explaining that the state's objection was based on the possible use by others of the imitations for criminal purposes in the future, passing them off as genuine. "The state threatened to take legal action to prevent me from selling them."

The gallery owner feels the state's argument is invalid. He said the paintings he sold might fool persons who do not know much about art, but "it wouldn't fool the expert."

Wright thought of fighting the state. But his lawyer told him that even if he fought the case in court and won, "it would cost a lot of money." So he decided to yield. He is now featuring three Hollywood artists in an exhibition titled "Hollywood, the Not Really Town."

Wright admits he feels some bitterness about the state's action. He claims the Attorney General's office is "filled with young lawyers with political ambitions" who feel they are helping those ambitions "the more they get their names in the paper."

In addition to serving a particular clientele who desire the "look" of great art in their homes, Wright also had hoped "to encourage more and more artists who have particular talents but are inspired by other artists." He feels there is an unfair bias against people who imitate the style of the masters.

"It has become almost a dirty word to paint in the style of somebody," he said. "It's almost as though there were no room for any minor talent. It's a silly snobbery that works against the wants of the average collector."

Wright said this attitude has applied to artists only in the 20th century. In any other century, he said, a popular artist such as Picasso would have had a workshop of students helping him, even finishing his paintings. The Rubens "picture mill" was a good example of this.

01 PUBLIC NOTICES

will be required to submit a program application. Anyone who wishes to consider must first submit a Letter of Inquiry. That letter of inquiry must include the following:

1. Political function(s) or school division to be served.
2. The projected total cost of the program.
3. The name and address of the agency submitting.
4. The name, address, and title of the program administrator, supervisor, or director.
5. The telephone number of the agency submitting.
6. The signature of the Chief Administrative Officer or Agency Head.

Upon receipt of the letter of inquiry all necessary forms and guidelines will be provided.

To be considered for funding, such Letter of Inquiry must be mailed to Dr. R. D. Dyer, Coordinator, Adult Basic Education, N.C. Department of Community Colleges, Room 175, Education Building, Raleigh, N.C. 27611, and postmarked no later than February 15, 1980.

R&J SOLAR SYSTEMS PRESENTS:
THE FREE HEAT BTU BANK

For more information and a demonstration call
Days 756-4687
Nights/Weekends 756-6544

The revolutionary Solar Bank is a completely self-contained solar furnace offering FREE HEAT (BTUs) from the Sun.

While the Sun is shining, one Solar Bank supplies up to 100% of the heating requirements of a typical 700 square foot area with a 32 degree outside temperature.

HOW? In practice the free heat or BTUs generated by the Solar Bank for your home or business is heat your furnace does not have to supply; therefore, saving you costly energy dollars. As energy costs rise, the Sun's heat remains constant: FREE.

CAN ANYONE AFFORD IT? Yes, it is in the price range of a window air conditioner. A money saving machine that will save more dollars as utilities rise, and is eligible for tax credits. It continues to pay for itself forever because the sun's heat is free.

Roots Of McCarthy Era

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer
WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — It began as a speech to a women's political club, a charge of communist subversion in the highest levels of government. It swept the nation into an era of torment and fear.

Thirty years ago, on Feb. 9, 1950, Joseph McCarthy, the junior senator from Wisconsin, was met at Wheeling Airport by two local Republican Party officials and a reporter from The Intelligencer newspaper.

Several weeks before, worried about re-election and his obscurity after four years in office, McCarthy had asked GOP officials to arrange several speaking engagements for Lincoln's birthday. Almost indifferently, McCarthy was offered Wheeling: Salt Lake City; Reno, Nev., and Huron, S.D.

That night, the Ohio County Women's Republican Club, anticipating traditional pleasantries, instead heard a speech that was to launch a bitter chapter in American political history and make "McCarthyism" a byword — even today — for hate-mongering and political purges.

In a pose seared on the memory of modern history, McCarthy waved a sheaf of papers and said, "I have here in my hand a list of 205 that were known to the secretary of state as being members of the Communist Party and who nevertheless are still working and shaping the policy of the State Department."

Eva Lou Ingersoll, who listened to the speech, today remembers the fear invoked by McCarthy's words. "We were afraid of communism. We were just sleeping at a time when terrible things were going on in the country," she said.

Intelligencer reporter Frank Desmond hurried to his office with the account of McCarthy's sensational charges. Managing editor Norman Yost phoned the story to the Charleston bureau of The Associated Press.

Charles Lewis, the AP's night editor, was finishing up for the night. He remembers thinking the story didn't sound very important. "Who the hell was McCarthy? It was just another Lincoln Day speech. I filed the story and went on home."

Lewis recalls. "When I came to work the next day...we were off and running into McCarthyism."

As the story broke across the nation the next day, a surprised McCarthy was met at Salt Lake City by reporters clamoring for the "list" of communists.

McCarthy's charges came amid world crisis and the early chill of Cold War. The Soviet Union had exploded its first atomic bomb. Communists controlled China. The Korean War was looming. The United States was shaken by the sensational treason trial of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg and the Alger Hiss case.

McCarthy electrified the nation with charges of communist infiltration and betrayal. Television carried the congressional hearings into the homes of millions, who watched McCarthy scream accusations at high-ranking officials, generals and cabinet members.

A hulking, amiable man with a ready laugh and uncanny skill as a poker player, McCarthy was also intensely ambitious. But it took an inflammatory anti-communist crusade to gain him national attention as "Tail Gunner Joe" — or "Low Blow Joe" to his opponents.

A Gallup Poll in January 1954 showed that 50 percent of the American people supported McCarthy, while 29 percent opposed his efforts.

In Congress, McCarthy found eager supporters. Others, despite mistrusting his charges and abhorring his methods, kept silent for fear of being accused themselves. Appeals to the White House to intervene were ignored. It seemed no one was safe from the senator.

Yet despite almost five years of investigations and hearings, the McCarthy witchhunt failed to uncover a single communist. An investigation by The Associated Press in 1954 found that of 2.5 million federal employees, 75 could be accused of communist activities. All 75 had been investigated before 1948.

The famous list of 205 communists McCarthy waved triumphantly in Wheeling stemmed from a list in the 1946 Congressional Record of 285 employees who had not been recommended for permanent State Department employment for reasons not necessarily relating to politics. Eighty had left government in 1946, leaving McCarthy's 205 "communists."

The McCarthy hearings spilled into every sphere of American life. Blacklisting flourished. Loyalty boards sprouted.

An actress who imitated babies on radio shows found herself unemployable because she had once held a party for a "communist-front" organization. An aircraft worker lost his job when his name was confused with that of a Communist Party member.

McCarthy's fall from power was as sudden as his rise. After revelations of attempts by his staff to gain favors from the Army in 1954, the Senate voted to "condemn" him. He died in 1957 ravaged by acute alcoholism and without a shred of his former power.

But McCarthy still has followers.

"They crucified him," said Mae Hughes of Wheeling, who heard the women's club speech. "I was so fond of him. I'll never forget his expression when he said right at this very moment there are Communists infiltrating our government."

Charismatics Told Seek Reconciliation

By SALLY CARPENTER
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — A leader of the nation's growing charismatic movement has advised his colleagues to stay within their churches and work for reconciliation with those who oppose them.

"God will ultimately give you the confidence to win your church," David DuPlessis, a representative of the Assemblies of God, based in Springfield, Ill., told members of the Charismatic Leadership Convocation. DuPlessis is known as "Mr. Pentecost" within the movement because of his efforts to unite Christian churches of the world through the World Council of Churches and the Vatican Council.

He made his remarks Thursday at the opening session of a three-day convocation attended by 400 to 500 charismatic leaders from various denominations.

Charismatics, who believe in "gifts" such as healing and speaking in mysterious languages that cannot be translated, gained momentum in the 1960s and 1970s and has grown within the "mainline" Protestant and Catholic denominations.

The Gallup Poll last year estimated 3 million Americans had joined the charismatic movement.

The religious leaders will meet in workshops today designed to reconcile various points of view.

The Rev. Des Evans of Fort Worth said he hoped leaders of the different denominations would "complement each other rather than contradict each other."

He said the whole point of the meeting was to "get a basis for reconciliation" of the different Christian points of view.

Glossolalia, speaking in unknown tongues, has received the most criticism from denominations that denounce the renewal outright or greet it with mixed emotions.

Some theologians contend such gifts ceased after Biblical times or that charismatics overemphasize them.

Congress Inches Toward Windfall Tax Agreement

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate-House conference committee inched toward agreement early today to set aside most of the money from the new "windfall profits" tax on the oil industry for general income tax reductions.

The shape and timing of the tax cuts, which would total $114 billion or more in the 1980s, would be decided by later legislation.

One option is a tax reduction that would take effect a month before the Nov. 4 elections and would be worth at least $10.4 billion in 1981.

The Carter administration opposes any tax cut now, fearing such a move would worsen inflation and deepen the federal budget deficit. Unless spending programs are reduced, any 1981 tax cut would expand the $15 billion deficit foreseen in President Carter's 1981 budget.

But Carter could be either forced to accept some type of tax cut package or else risk loss of the "windfall" tax — a key element of his energy program.

Before ending a 14-hour session shortly after midnight Thursday, the conferees took no final vote on the tax cut provisions. Because of next week's congressional recess for Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays, the conferees put off consideration of the bill until about Feb. 20.

But their discussions indicated that across-the-board tax relief would take 50 to 60 percent of the $227.3 billion that the oil tax is expected to bring the government during the coming decade.

Another big chunk of the money would be used to help lower-income Americans pay rising energy costs. That, along with the general tax reductions, would leave considerably less money than Carter had requested to develop synthetic fuels.

Although that package is not yet complete, the panel reached preliminary decisions Thursday night to spend about $11.5 billion in the 1980s for energy incentives. The Senate had voted for $25 billion worth; the House approved none.

House delegates to the conference generally oppose most of the Senate-passed spending provisions and want a bigger chunk of the oil tax money set aside for income tax reductions. Senators say the credits would speed the nation's drive to reduce dependence on imported oil.

Although no final agreement was reached, the Senate and House delegations seemed to favor distribution of the "windfall" tax revenues in this fashion:

—10 percent, or $22.7 billion, for tax incentives for conservation and development of non-oil fuels.

—10 percent for improving the nation's transportation system and for government loans and grants to developers of exotic fuels.

—25 percent, or $56.8 billion, in grants to help welfare recipients cope with rising fuel costs.

—55 percent, or $125 billion, for general income tax cuts, probably for businesses as well as individuals.

Changes In Vietnam

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A sweeping government housecleaning announced today by Vietnam probably was due to inefficiency, old age and poor health, analysts of the situation in Indochina said.

Most noted of those being replaced is Defense Minister Vo Nguyen Giap, the 67-year-old architect of Vietnam's battlefield victories over France and the United States.

The Vietnamese news agency said Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh, economic czar Le Thanh Nghi and a number of other key officials also were being replaced. However, it said Giap, Trinh and Nghi would continue to be deputy vice premiers.

There was no change in the top command, made up of Communist Party chief Le Duan, National Assembly Chairman Truong Chinh and Premier Pham Van Dong.

The Hanoi announcement gave no reasons for the shake-up in the ruling hierarchy that has remained virtually unchanged for decades. Unlike that of many communist countries, it has been free of purges and dramatic changes.

Most of the men of the old guard — including Giap, Dong, Duan and Chinh — shared a long revolutionary past of fighting under the leadership of the late President Ho Chi Minh against the Japanese in World War II, the French in the 1950s and the Americans in the 1960s and '70s.
