Carter Okays International Body's Inquiry

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, in a move to gain release of some 50 American hostages, is endorsing an international commission to explore Iran's long-festering grievances against the shah and the United States.

His declaration, at a news conference Wednesday, appeared to mark a policy change. Carter said there were "some positive signs" toward ending the 103-day impasse but refused to go into details.

His announcement capped day-long rumors and political duels between his administration and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, his chief challenger for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The Massachusetts senator had sought to take credit for the latest move. But Carter called Kennedy's claim — and the senator's litany of alleged U.S. foreign policy mistakes — "damaging to our country."

The president's endorsement of "an appropriate commission with a carefully defined purpose" contrasted with his doubts at a news conference Nov. 28 that any forum would listen to Iranian complaints, justified or not.

Carter was careful not to proclaim a breakthrough in the tedious and still unsuccessful negotiations over the Americans seized by militants on Nov. 4.

Reflecting past disappointments, he said "experience has taught us to guard against excessive optimism."

The president did not spell out the kind of commission he had in mind, although he said any settlement must be "consistent with our goals and our essential international principles."

Sources said he wants a neutral commission conducting a balanced inquiry into past U.S. support for the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Carter's approach clearly rules out a show trial designed merely to assess guilt against the United States, the sources said.

Kurt Waldheim, the U.N. secretary general, and other intermediaries have been at work for some time on a number of plans keyed to creation of a commission and freeing the hostages.

However, a spokesman for the militants who occupy the U.S. Embassy in Tehran reiterated Wednesday their initial and unwavering precondition — return of the shah to Iran to face trial as a war criminal.

Skirmished Near Kabul

By The Associated Press

Soviet tanks and at least one MiG-23 fighter fought a sharp battle with Afghan dissidents this week 12 miles from Kabul and there were an undetermined number of casualties, a delayed report from Kabul said today.

In Geneva, Switzerland, The United States told a meeting of the U.N. Human Rights Commission that "substantial numbers of prisoners" had been flown to the Soviet Union from Afghanistan, according to a session transcript released by the U.S. Mission in Geneva. The U. S. delegate asked whether the Red Cross had been invited to visit them.

A dispatch from Afghanistan by Associated Press Correspondent Michael Goldsmith quoted witnesses as saying the Soviets fought an hour-long battle with the rebels Monday in the village of Cargha north of Kabul, the capital. Western diplomats in the vicinity said they saw Soviet infantry and tanks going into action against an army barracks in the village.

The MiG-23 was seen dropping a cluster of small bombs, followed by a cloud of black smoke rising from the ground, they said. The witnesses said they believed the bombs were napalm incendiary devices. Ambulances were seen removing an unknown number of casualties, some to the military hospital in Kabul.

Meanwhile, Egyptian Defense Minister Kamal Hassan Ali said Egypt is training Afghan rebels, as claimed by the Soviet Union, and will arm them before sending them home to fight Soviet intervention in their nation.

He did not disclose the size or location of the camps or how many Afghans were involved, but told reporters in Cairo on Wednesday President Anwar Sadat had approved the project last month.

Diplomatic sources in London, meanwhile, said Moscow had advised key Asian European and African nations that it will start pulling some of its estimated 90,000 troops out of Afghanistan and open talks with Pakistan as soon as the situation stabilizes along the Afghan-Pakistan border. The Soviets have been in Afghanistan since late December.

A Pakistani government spokesman said such talks would be welcome, but only after a complete withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan, Pakistan's neighbor to the northwest.

However, Indian officials said Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko had given them little or no hope for an early troop withdrawal from the landlocked Central Asian country on the Soviet Union's southern flank.

Gromyko, attending a New Delhi banquet to honor his Indian counterpart, warned Pakistan it must end "intrusions into the territory of Afghanistan" if it wants peace along the border. He returned to Moscow today after a 40-minute meeting with Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

Indian spokesman J.N. Dixit said the two nations had different interpretations of the Soviet intervention, but that Gromyko had "taken note" of the Indian position "that there should be non-interference in the internal affairs of sovereign countries and that frontiers should be inviolable."

However, their joint communique made no reference to Soviet action in Afghanistan.

Dragging operations, designed to recover the body of an unidentified man who allegedly jumped into the Tar River Tuesday from the Greene Street Bridge, were called off yesterday.

Greenville Fire-Rescue Department workers, along with volunteer Grifton and Farmville Rescue Squad members ceased dragging operations late yesterday afternoon.

Officials said this morning, that local fire-rescue personnel would patrol the river two times today in an effort to locate the body, in the event it has floated to the surface.

Paid Rescue Officer Quits Over 2 Roles

A Greenville Fire-Rescue Department employee, assigned to full-time rescue duty for the past 3½ years, resigned yesterday, saying, "I can no longer tolerate the working conditions within the department."

Robert Beddard, who said he had 4½ years rescue experience before becoming a paid rescue officer with the Greenville rescue unit, said he and other paid rescuemen are concerned over, "the integration of fire and rescue," service.

Saying he will be assigned to a fire unit, Beddard, in his letter of resignation, to Chief Jenness Allen, said most department employees," don't want to do integrated jobs. I was doing my chosen profession," he continued, when he joined the department as a paid rescue man.

"Now, you and the city want me to change my profession to being a fire-fighter for which I was not hired. It is true," he continued, "I have had fire training in the past, but I don't want to do it as a profession.

"Being trained in both areas with more emphasis on rescue, I can plainly see where a man cannot be proficient in both jobs, to the point where he can be proud of doing the best possible job for the people...he serves. That is why I decided to pursue just one of these professions."

Beddard continued, "I feel I cannot be a part of any organization that will be reducing my skills to be less qualified in the profession that I have chosen..."

The rescueman said by being assigned to a fire-fighting unit, "my advanced EMT and IV skills will deteriorate to the point," of being, "less than qualified," to perform emergency medical service functions, "but not less than certified."

"Certified is the key word," Beddard said, "because that is all that seems to be expected from you and the city. All you want is a service. You...don't care about the quality of the service..."

Beddard added, "I am not only talking of the quality of work...but also the pride of the men within the fire and rescue department.

"The men in rescue," Beddard said, "are all instructors," in areas such as first aid, cardio-pullmonary resuscitation, emergency medical technician, and heavy duty rescue. "Our part-time jobs deal directly with our rescue jobs, as opposed to others in the fire department who have as part-time jobs laying brick, carpentry and plumbing."

Indicating other rescue employees, "dedicated to their profession," are planning to resign because of the working conditions, Beddard said, "I feel that the loss of rescue personnel of this caliber...will be very detrimental to the city."

Housing Loan

BETHEL — The Mid-East Regional Housing Authority this week closed a $1.12 million loan with Farmers Home Administration for the construction of 35 low-income housing units here, officials reported today.

Work on the project, located on Elm Street, near the former Bethel High School, is scheduled to begin immediately, and should be completed in nine months. Blue Ridge Enterprises, Inc. of Mt. Airy is the general contractor for the project.

The 35 units will include eight one-bedroom, 17 two-bedroom, and 10 three-bedroom brick duplex apartments.

The Mid-East Regional Housing Authority operated 440 low-income housing units in six counties, including units now located in Winterville and Fountain. Plans call for the construction of some 30 units in Grifton later this year.

Recreation Electricity Fee Sought

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A recommendation that any agency or group that requests lighting to be turned on at any Greenville Recreation facility be required to pay a pro-rata share of the demand energy charge was approved by members of the Greenville Parks and Recreation Commission.

Approval of the recommendation, made at the commission's meeting Wednesday night, further states that the pro-rata share be charged when the activity for which turn on of lights is requested significantly adds to the energy costs for the Recreation Department.

This recommendation will now be sent to the City Council for its action.

Department director Boyd Lee explained to commissioners that under current regulation, any cut on of outdoor lights at any facility, such as those at Guy Smith Stadium and Jaycee Park, entailed the payment of a $750 demand energy charge fee at the beginning of a monthly billing date. That amount applies whether the facility is used only once during a billing period, or is used many times. As a result, the more frequently a facility is used within a billing period, the less it would cost per use by the agency or group using it.

The motion came out of a discussion held on a request by Babe Ruth League representatives that the current 10:30 p.m. curfew at Jaycee Park's ball field be extended on those occasions when extra time past the curfew hour was needed to complete playing a second evening game.

Steve Ward, a coach for the Babe Ruth League, presented the request, explaining that most second evening games were completed by 10:30, but that in about one out of every three or four games, time ran out with players not being able to complete a game and having to reschedule it. There had been occasions, Ward noted, when the 10:30 turn out time had caught players in dark, and they had had to use flashlights to get gear packed up and into cars.

Ward also said the rescheduling created an additional burden for the Recreation Department.

Lee touched on preliminary ideas that are being considered by the department in pulling together a general energy conserving plan to present the City Council. The general plan, he said, could include suggestions such as scheduling more afternoon games, scheduling more activities on Saturdays and Sundays, and looking at more activities that did not require the use of energy.

Dr. Hooks added that his motion was intended to be part of the general energy plan when it was formulated.

Another agenda item, that of a proposal that the non-resident fee for Pitt County senior citizens and handicapped persons be eliminated,

CLOSING-OUT SALES

I understand that it's against the law for a store to claim to be having a closing-out (going out of business) sale and then add to their merchandise and "decide later" to stay in business. Is this correct? It isn't done as much as it used to be, but it still happens. L. O.

Chapter 66 (Commerce and Business) of the N. C. General Statutes requires that a store advertising and/or conducting a closing-out sale obtain a license to conduct such a sale from the clerk of the town in which the store is located. A $25 fee, renewable twice for 30 days each, must be paid, with a penal sum of $500 conditioned upon compliance with the article. The renewal fee is $50 each time. Addition of stock in contemplation of such a sale is prohibited by this law (66-78) Replenishment of stock during the sale is prohibited. (66-79)

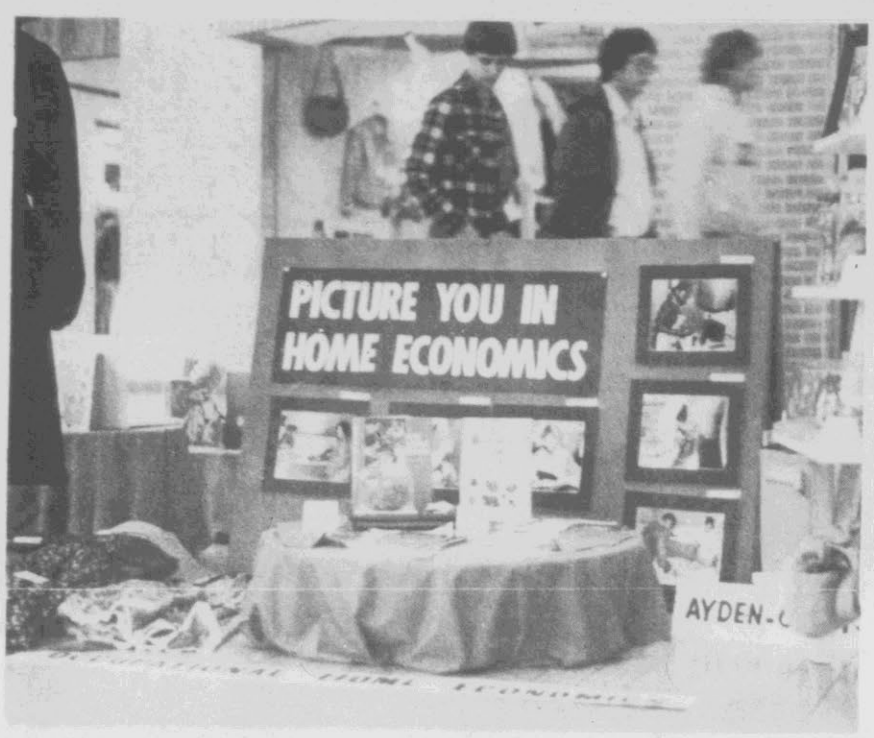

The Greenville Chamber of Commerce can provide full information about this measure, including a copy of the law cited.

Officers reported an estimated $500 damage resulted to a car driven by Debra Keel Adams of Route 6, Greenville, when the vehicle overturned on Arlington Boulevard, 400 feet West of the Evans Street intersection about 9:11 p.m.

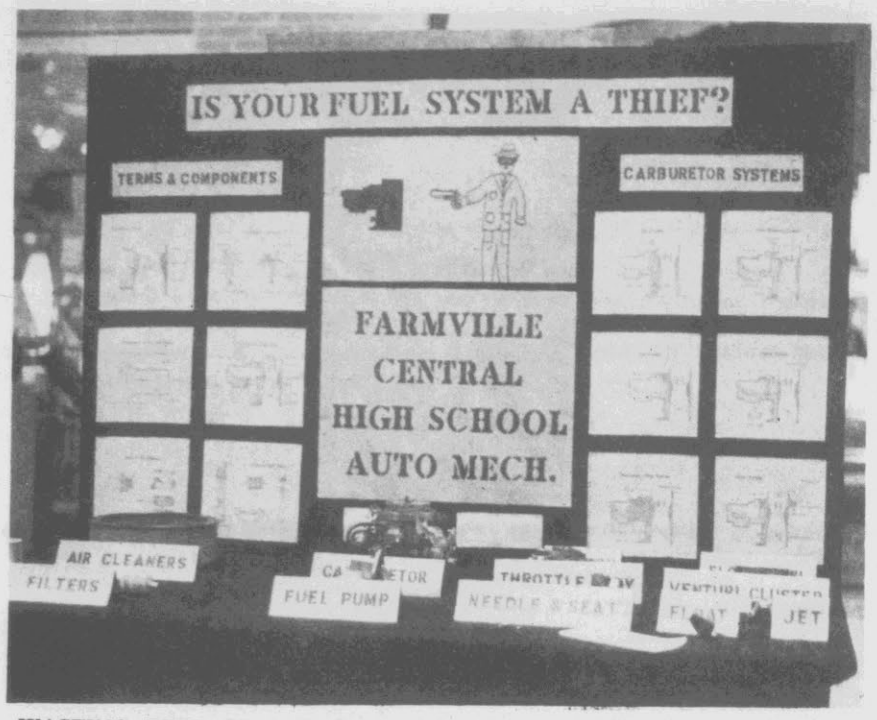

Investigators said the Adams car struck a rock in the roadway, then struck the median, swerved back to the right-hand side of the road, where it struck the curb and overturned, landing back on its wheels.

Doctors Report Tito's Condition Now Critical

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Doctors reported today that President Josip Broz Tito was in "critical" condition despite "intensive measures" to save the 87-year-old Yugoslav leader's life.

"A certain improvement took place following the intensive measures of treatment, but the condition is still very difficult," the doctors said in a medical bulletin.

"Corresponding medical measures continue to be taken."

There was no word on details of Tito's treatment, but a usually reliable Yugoslav source said the president was still conscious and aware of his condition.

One Western diplomat said a Yugoslav source reported Tito's death was believed imminent. "But I take it that it's a question of days rather than hours," the diplomat said.

Tito's eight doctors said his "general state of health" worsened Wednesday and included a "further weakening" of his kidneys and heart. "Intensive measures of treatment are being administered," they said.

The bulletin was the grimmest since Tito was admitted Jan. 12 to a clinic in Ljubljana, 300 miles northwest of Belgrade. Doctors there removed his left leg Jan. 20 to prevent fatal gangrene stemming from blocked arteries.

Tito had been reported making a marvelous recovery until Sunday, when doctors first said he was suffering from "kidney and digestive problems." A bulletin the next day spoke of "a weakening" in the heart.

As Tito's condition worsened, the National Defense Council called for intensified defense preparations.

The council, drawn from the same group that will run the nation if Tito dies, met Wednesday and "discussed the implementation of a program of development of the Yugoslav armed forces and the level of their capability," the official Tanjug news agency said.

"The need was also stressed for intensifying efforts in implementing the tasks for development of the armed forces and the country's defense preparations according to established plans."

Despite the council's emphasis on readiness, there was no evidence of special military activity around the capital, as there was during the amputation of Tito's left leg last month. There were reports, however, that government offices were again on 24-hour call.

The defense meeting was chaired by Lazar Kolisevski, who would become chairman of the Presidency Council in the event of Tito's death. The council, which includes representatives from the six republics and two autonomous provinces, would succeed Tito

Revokes N.C. License

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Insurance Commissioner John Ingram today revoked the North Carolina operating license of Affiliated Factory Mutual Insurance Co. because of its conduct last year in settling claims resulting from crop losses due to contaminated fertilizer.

Ingram ordered the Rhode Island company, prime insurer for the Smith-Douglass Co., to "give full and complete service" to all existing policies. He also ordered Affiliated to reimburse his department for witnesses' expenses during a 10-day hearing last fall.

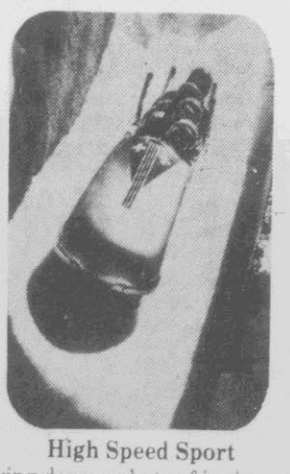

In a statement released today, Ingram said he was directing Affiliated not to "engage in any further unfair, deceptive or unethical claims practices."

Ingram's staff had recommended the revocation, contending that Affiliated Factory Mutual had used arbitrary and improper methods in settling claims growing out of the use of Smith-Douglas fertilizer that had been contaminated with the herbicide picloram.

State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham earlier this month dropped all charges against Smith-Douglass, saying there was no evidence that the company had been negligent and that there was no proof that the contamination occurred while the raw products were under the company's control.

More than 1,200 insurance claims have been filed as a result of the contamination, with benefits exceeding $20 million already paid out.

High Speed Sport

Imagine flying down a chute of ice in a streamlined steel sled at up to 90 m.p.h.! That's what teams of athletes are doing at Lake Placid this week in the Olympic bobsledding competition. Two Americans vacationing in Switzerland about 90 years ago invented the first bobsled, when they put runners on their toboggan to make it go faster down the slopes. The invention quickly caught on and grew into a popular winter sport. Bobsledding got its name from the practice of early racing teams, who tried rocking back and forth, or "bobbing," for greater speed. Bobsledding has been an Olympic sport since the first Winter Olympics in 1924.

Men Are Now Entering Women's Hair Salons

WHEELING, W.Va. (UPI) — Hairstylist Kathie Hoffman says five years ago she wouldn't have dreamed of giving a permanent to a man.

Now, she says, it's not only a routine part of her business but one she enjoys.

"The men are more easy to please, generally — except for the younger ones," said Ms. Hoffman, who works in a Triadelphia area salon.

Perhaps the male customers are easier to work with in Ms. Hoffman's view, but not to Wayne King, who works at a St. Clairsville, Ohio, salon.

"Men are harder to please," said King. "They're more finicky."

One thing most hairstylists in the area do agree on is that men nowadays are entering salons — once a woman's domain — in increasingly large numbers. Some are a bit bashful.

The trend began five or six years ago, says Max Matteson, national styles director for the St. Louis-based National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association, but it's just now becoming strong in smaller communities such as Wheeling and Grand Rapids, Mich., where Matteson is co-owner of several salons.

"A few years ago, men didn't even want to stick their noses in the door to pick up their wives or girl friends," Matteson said in a telephone interview.

Now, he said, the women are asking salon operators if they'll accept male customers. Haircutting is the number one service for males, he said, with permanents second and manicuring, third.

Matteson said men getting permanents account for about 15-20 percent of his business and estimated "that's pretty close to a national average."

He thinks men are turning to salons because "style trends have changed and the barbering industry hasn't kept up with clients' requests."

He said men are getting permanents mostly to control straight hair and to give body to thinning hair.

Whatever the reasons, King, whose Ohio salon is near a saloon, says some of his male customers need a few stiff drinks before they muster the courage to come in for a permanent.

"At first, they don't want anybody to see them in curlers," said Elaine Smith, who owns a salon in Wheeling. "After the first perm they're at home. One man insists on coming in here early, before anyone else is here."

Stylist Patty Raab said: "Some men want a perm, but they're too chicken to come and get one."

"Men want to be pretty, the same as women," said Bill Wayne, a stylist at St. Clairsville.

"They all want to look their best. They're learning to take care of themselves the same as women," said Steve Terwilliger of Martins Ferry, Ohio.

Gary Feathers of Triadelphia didn't want to go to a salon for his first perm, so he had it done at home by a friend.

Rick Heckathorn, a high school student, says his friends teased him after his first perm but "they were just jealous" and he didn't let them bother him.

Hairstylists say the curly look is definitely in, among men and women.

"Hair styles are just like fashion," said stylist Terwilliger. "It's a continuous cycle. Over a period of time the style will change, but men will probably continue to get perms."

In New York City, salon owners Eddie and Eleanor Krause said more than 45 percent of the haircuts and almost 33 percent of the permanents done by one of their stylists during the past six months were for male customers.

Among those getting perms recently were Don Blackburn, a bearded film director, model-actor Tom Fitzsimmons and former police officer Monte Walsh, who resigned recently because of a service-related leg injury.

"I'm going to get a couple of waves put in," said Walsh, to hide a receding hairline and give body to his hair.

Blackburn was having his second perm because the first had grown out.

"I was really tired of my straight hair," he said. "I wanted a change."

Fitzsimmons was having his straight blond hair curled "because I have a TV audition tomorrow for a curly-haired guy."

Mrs. Krause said many male clients are executives concerned about their image.

"When they start losing their hair, they get almost paranoid. They come in for wash-and-wear styling and body waves."

Abby's Advice On Valentine's Day

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: Today is St. Valentine's Day, so be a sweetheart and call someone who's alone and say, "I'm thinking about you." Take some flowers to someone in a nursing home. Put all your discarded clothes in a box for Goodwill. Donate some blood. Pay your dentist bill. Take a homely girl to lunch. Listen to your teenager. Tell your parents you think they're great. Tape a love note on his (or her) mirror. Forgive an enemy. Send a donation to CARE or the Salvation Army. If you love someone, tell him (or her) now; don't wait until next Valentine's Day to be a sweetheart again.

ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Someone signed STOLE ONE asked how you thought God would feel about a person who steals a Bible out of a hotel room, and you replied, "Nobody needs a Bible as much as the person who would steal one."

Well, Abby, you sure goofed on that one. You should have pointed out that taking a Bible is not stealing! The Bible societies feel they have won a great victory when someone takes a Bible with them. That's the purpose of putting the Bible there in the first place. It is the duty of all good Christians to spread the gospel throughtout the world.

I always feel sad when I see an old Bible, good as new, laying in the same place for years, unopened, unread, serving no one.

Please print my letter so the person who took the Bible will know that he is not guilty of stealing.

I took a Bible once and I feel real good about it.

C.M. IN MICHIGAN

DEAR C.M.: I've seen many a Bible in many a hotel room, but I've yet to see a sign saying, "Help yourself." Read on for an authoritative view of the subject:

DEAR ABBY: As a regular reader of your column in the Wenetchee (Wash.) Daily World, and a representative of The Gideons International, may I add to your logical reply to STOLE ONE.

The Gideons International is a society of Christian business and professional men—all members of most evangelical churches of which there are at 80,000 in 124 countries throughout the world.

Every 17 days we place about one million Bibles (or 20 million a year) in the rooms of hotels, motels, hospitals, jails, and other public places in an effort to serve mankind by making the Scriptures available to as many people as possible.

These Bibles are the property of The Gideons, and are paid for by the free-will gifts and offerings of concerned Christians of all denominations.

Of course, we neither encourage nor condone taking the Bibles, but many do, which necessitates replacing a good number of Bibles annually at our expense.

We receive letters from people who confess having taken one of our Bibles; most send a donation along with their apologies.

The current cost of the Bible is $2.85. Abby, you would be doing us a great service to let your readers know that anyone who has taken a Gideons Bible and wishes to make restitution may send his donation to:

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Poets write so glowingly of love . . . it leads me to believe that none of them ever married.

According to them, love makes the world go around . . . means never having to say you're sorry . . . is the crown of all our bliss . . . has no bounds . . . is the sun, earth, moon and stars . . . is the living essence of a divine neighbor, and being in it at least once is better than never to have been in it at all.

When I was young, I too was a poet on the subject. And why not? Love was everywhere I turned. I could see it, touch it, smell it and feel it. (Mother slapped a lot in the name of parental love.)

After I was married, love became nocturnal — its expressions reduced to a Candygram and an embarrassed, "You KNOW I do. Do I have to say it?"

I wondered what happened to love. Was it to be like the bottle of champagne at the wedding where the bubbles no longer tickled your senses, the liquid lost its kick, and finally everything went flat? Was it gone? Had it taken a new form? Would I know it when I saw it? What should I look for?

I had remembered love as something thoughtful.

I still said, "Sit still, I'll get you a beer while I'm up." (C'mon. It had to be more than that!)

I recalled it had to do with sharing.

There had been the day when we buried his mother. We lay side by side in her bed and cried silently, neither of us speaking a word until morning. (But that was instinctive, wasn't it?)

I seemed to remember love meant sensitivity.

There was, of course, the day when one of the kids mouthed off and told me to shut up and my husband grabbed him by the shoulder and said, "How dare you talk to my wife that way!" (Could it be?)

Love was a lot of patience.

How could I forget when I couldn't make it the nine miles into the Grand Canyon and gave up on the trail only to have him hike the last two miles down and back again with a Dixie cup full of water. (Was that love?)

Could it be that love in its refined state is odorless, colorless, and without the usual heart-shaped form? Could it be something so simple as a tear when you are sad? A smile when you need it? Lips brushing your hair? A hand touching as you exchanged a cold beer?

James Grover Thurber in his wisdom asked a 47-year-old woman who had been married 27 years and had six children to describe what love really is.

She said, "Love is what you've been through with somebody."

Ingram Raising Doubts

The antics of State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram have been zany since he assumed that office. Nevertheless he has at times taken on a folk hero role in tangling with the insurance companies.

Ingram's recent activities have to make one wonder whether he should be returned to the office of insurance commissioner.

His degree of indecisiveness in deciding what office he would seek in this year's primaries and elections was appalling. There were reports of his running for governor, lieutenant governor and opposing Sen. Robert Morgan for the Democratic nomination.

Whatever Ingram was thinking about those offices it was the last minute on the final day for filing before he decided that he would seek re-election to the insurance commissioner post.

Following that there was the controversy, with his deputy commissioner, Kenneth Brown, over whether Brown was fired or quit after filing for the insurance commissioner office himself.

Beyond that Ingram has run through lieutenants until it is difficult to determine who works for him. Monday chief deputy commissioner W. Bryon Tatumcalled it quits — and he is not even a candidate for the office. "I'm just tired of this mess," Tatum was quoted as saying.

With all this turmoil going on in the insurance commissioner's office the people's business simply can't be handled efficiently.

John Ingram has a lot to do to reassure the public, if he expects to be returned to the office of insurance commissioner

Playing A Dangerous Game

If it is true that the Soviets have given 60 tanks to Palestinian forces in Lebanon, then the Russian game in the Middle East becomes increasingly dangerous.

Obviously the Soviets want to stir up trouble and then take advantage of the turmoil thus created.

It has worked for Russia before . . . but this time they are far too close to the explosion which could bring on World War III.

Olympics A Soviet Tool

By PHILIP C. CLARKE

It's becoming increasingly clear that, even without the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, the 1980 summer Olympics never should have been awarded to Moscow.

Soviet officials themselves made no secret of their plans to use the Olympics as a gigantic propaganda exercise to advertise the "glory" of Communism and the "superiority" of Communist athletes. To make certain there were no discordant notes during the affair next July, the KGB arranged to pack all the dissidents off to prison or psychiatric wards. Except for a few thousand indoctrinated boys and girls, most Moscow youngsters were to be shipped to the countryside to prevent their being "contaminated" by visiting Western youth with their blue jeans, modern music, chewing gum, and ideas of freedom.

This in itself was a Soviet violation of Olympic rules. Point 3 of the International Olympic Committee's rules states, "The games cannot be influenced by racial, nationalistic, religious, or political discrimination." Point 8 of the Rules says, "Olympic Games can take place only in a country where there is political stability."

Vladimir Bukovsky, the indominable Soviet dissident, now living in exile in London, contends that "it is easy to prove that the present ruling regime is in direct contradiction to the Olympic Rules; The Soviet Union is involved in numerous aggressions; its foreign policy is aggressive, aimed at undermining governments and creating disorder and wars; its mass information promotes hatred and enmity."

Indeed, the modern Olympics were revived in 1897 to promote international peace and understanding and "a healthy mind in a healthy body." Even this principle is regularly violated by Communist participants.

Renate Vogel, a former Olympic swimming champion from East Germany, has accused Communist sports authorities of "treating us athletes like guineapigs." She told of special Communist-run schools for athletes where steroids and other drugs were administered to stimulate muscle development at the expense of normal growth. Miss Vogel finally got fed up and defected, leaving behind all the subsidies and privileges lavished by the Communist states on their super-star competitors.

The Communists, in fact, have used every trick in the book, and then some, to produce teams of state-subsidized and state-controlled professionals capable of overwhelming amateur athletes from non-Communist countries. This is grossly unfair not only to Western participants but also to the nations they represent.

To claim, as does the International Olympic Committee, that a boycott of the Moscow games would inject politics into a purely sporting event is patently ridiculous. Hitler used the 1936 Olympics to sell Nazism, barring Jews from German teams. In 1972, Arab terrorists invaded the Munich Olympics to murder Israeli athletes. At the Montreal games in 1976, the Soviets sought to ban news coverage by Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty.

The South Africans have been blacklisted for years, and now the Nationalistic Chinese flag of the Taiwanese is banned.

As for interpreting Olympic rules, the Soviets can exercise a virtual veto through their three representatives on the International Olympic Committee. All three reportedly are top KGB agents.

For the United States and other Western nations even to have considered Moscow as a site in the first place seems a travesty, if not an

Bonds Trade-Off

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — If the purpose of a statewide school bond is to help the needy local school units which lack the resources to help themselves, the proposal falls short of the mark.

The study commission on school facility needs spent little time at a recent session in deciding that there is an "urgent need" for state funds to help finance local school construction and renovation projects.

But the committee fell apart when it came to determine how the bond ought to be split among the 144 local school districts in the state's 100 counties.

Actually, that question is not on the agenda for the study group, but the leaders felt it would be well to hand the report to the General Assembly with some recommendation.

The State Board of Education and the State Department of Public Instruction have suggested a $600 million bond issue, with the money divided on the basis of local school membership.

Uneven

That method obviously means that the biggest school units get the most money. Those happen to also be the school systems which already have the most money.

State Senator Vernon E. White, D-Pitt County, put the issue in sharp focus. "We need to meet the needs where they are greatest, and we need to equalize the distribution of funds to provide a greater opportunity for equal education across North Carolina.

"We can't do that and give this money to the richer counties."

White pointed out that his area is in the middle ranks in both students, needs, and wealth. Favoring the poorer counties wouldn't help his district. But from testimony gathered at public hearings, and from personal experience, White insisted, and the sentiment was endorsed by other members of the group, that the smaller, less wealthy counties need the most aid.

BILL NOBLITT

But in decisions of the General Assembly, the underlying rule is compromise and political realities. It was the clear feeling of most committee members that passage of the bond election in November depends heavily upon support from populous Mecklenburg, Forsyth, Guilford, and Wake counties. If funds were taken from those counties to be given to the smaller counties, then passage would become more difficult.

So the tradeoff becomes: the smaller counties need more money, but if they get it at the expense of the large counties then they might wind up with none. So, better they take less.

Tentatively, the split will be a combination of a straight allotment to each of the 100 counties amounting to $750,000, with the remainder of $525 million split according to school membership.

Further

The matter must still go before the Legislative Research Commission and the full General Assembly before being placed on the ballot for voter consideration in the November general election.

The study group also learned at the meeting that the State Department of Public Instruction will skim a sizable portion of the money from the top of the bond issue before it is even split to the school districts.

Lacy Presnell, chief of school planning, reminded legislators several times that about $1.5 million will be taken for staff, paperwork, keeping the records, and processing the local applications for funds from local units.

Some lawmakers were unhappy that a bureaucratic expense which they thought was funded routinely in the General Assembly appropriation to the Department of Public Instruction would drain such a sizable part of the bond money.

Not The Best Choice

As a working proposition, every president ought to have wide latitude in his nominations to public bodies. A president's appointive power is part of the intricate assembly of springs, pendulums and counterweights that makes our system go, and Congress ought not to jam the works without compelling reason.

But there are times when the Senate's corollary power to advise and consent ought to be negatively invoked. Such an occasion is at hand in the president's nomination of William A. Lubbers for a full four-year term as general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board. If the president will not withdraw this regrettable appointment, the Senate should reject it decisively.

For three reasons. The first has to do with the urgent need to restore confidence in government; the second has to do with the nature of the general counsel's power; the third goes to the alternatives available to the White House.

There may have been a time — in Grant's administration, perhaps — when public confidence in government was lower than it is now. The polls do not go back that far. But not in my lifetime can I recall a period in which distrust of government, and especially of the federal government, was deeper or more pervasive. This alienation didn't begin with Watergate, but Watergate made it worse. And such recent depressing incidents as the purported bribery of half a dozen members of Congress add to the poisonous cloud.

Into this miasma comes the nomination of Mr. Lubbers to the most powerful position in the whole of the executive branch. Search the executive agencies as you will, you will not find any position to compare with general counsel of the NLRB. He alone commands unreviewable discretion for his acts. If the general counsel agrees to hear a complaint of unfair labor practices, the complaint will be heard. If he refuses, that's it. Goodbye. Fini. His refusal cannot be appealed to the NLRB. It cannot be appealed to the federal courts.

For these reasons, Congress went to great pains to make the general counsel absolutely independent of the board. The position demands a person who not only is independent, but also appears to be independent. Mr. Lubbers simply is not such a person. For 17 years, more or less, he has been the protege, confidante, top assistant and guiding hand to NLRB Chairman John Fanning. Within the community of business and labor, he is universally perceived as "Fanning's man." The two are as close as shirt and pocket or ring and finger, and that is where Mr. Lubbers commonly is thought to be — in the chairman's pocket, or tied to his finger.

Mr. Lubbers of course has asserted his independence of his mentor and longtime boss, but his first major decision since his temporary appointment in December has set off bells of alarm. As general counsel, he appears effectively to have reversed a long-standing rule protecting the right of an individual union member to resign from his union during a strike. The effect is to put union solidarity ahead of individual freedom. Such obeisance to the great unions accords perfectly with the Fanning view.

A president who has enjoyed the support of organized labor, and hungers for such support again this year, surely is entitled to appoint someone with a union background as general counsel. The business community, headed by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, accepts this reality. Before Mr. Carter nominated Mr. Lubbers, the White House had leaked the names of two others under consideration — Carl Frenkel, associate general counsel for the Steelworkers Union, and Arthur Goldberg, general counsel of the Textile Workers Union. Either one of them would have the confidence of both labor and management. Curtis Mack, regional NLRB director in Atlanta, is another acceptable possibility.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, has begun marshaling forces against the Lubbers nomination. He has a sufficient number of concerned colleagues to mount a prolonged filibuster and to block cloture. He may have enough troops to win on an up-or-down vote. Under the circumstances, a discreet withdrawal would benefit the board, the Senate, the country and quite possibly Mr. Lubbers himself.

Given Bum Rap?

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Can it be that Franklin Pierce, the all-time loser among U.S. presidents, was given a bum rap by history?

Leon "Andy" Anderson, the official legislative historian of New Hampshire, thinks so.

Pierce, a Democrat, served as president from 1853 to 1857, and was the only elected occupant of that high office not to win his party's nomination for re-election.

His image broods over every New Hampshire primary like the Great Stone Face up in the White Mountains — especially the forthcoming primary on Feb. 26, in which Jimmy Carter faces challenges to renomination.

Pierce was snubbed by the home folks as well as his party.

New Hampshire's only contribution to the White House didn't wind up in the Capitol Hall of Statuary, when Congress in 1864 asked each state to choose two illustrious citizens for that honor. The Granite State picked Daniel Webster and John Stark, a Revolutionary War general. Michigan magnified the insult by choosing Lewis Cass and Zachariah Chandler, early settlers from New Hampshire.

In fact, New Hampshire didn't get around to erecting a statue of Franklin Pierce on the Statehouse lawn until 1913, when the Democrats briefly took over both the governorship and the Legislature. In the same year, Pierce got a mountain named after himself in New Hampshire's Presidential

To the Editor:

If you have a tooth ache, will you call your lawyer for help? If you have to go to court, will you call your dentist to go with you? Of course you wouldn't. So why, if you have a heart attack do you have to call a fireman, and when your house is on fire have to call a rescue person?

The answer to that question is because the people that you have elected have failed to use the logic that is needed to understand this simple problem.

I do not doubt that all of Greenville's firemen can become EMT's. I also feel that every staff member at Rose High School could too, but that doesn't mean that all or even any of them could become or even want to become rescue personnel.

EMT is the certificate. Being a rescue person is a lot more.

On the other hand, being a fireman takes a special person also. I am an EMT, but I depend on the fire department to fight the fires in my community.

As a certified EMT, serving as a rescue person on a county squad, I feel that I must speak up for the Greenville Rescue Squad. I had the honor of being trained by this very fine group.

Greenville citizens had better speak out too, their very life may depend on it.

GET RID OF THE EVIL

An old man tells about how, when facing an operation in a hospital, he was struck by an increasing fear of the anesthetic which would be administered prior to the operation.

But the doctor had a very effective cure for this. "Don't try to inhale", he told the old man as he put the cone over his face. "Simply exhale the air that is in your lungs." The old man did so, and then quite naturally inhaled the anesthetic.

Many people have terrible inner conflicts because they haven't gotten the evil out of their minds and hearts to make way for the entrance of the good. We should face the fact that before we can have peace of heart we have to blow out this evil in the same way as the elderly man exhaled before he inhaled the anesthetic.

Jealousy, desire for revenge, covetousness, suspicion — here are a few things to get rid of before we can expect the Holy Spirit to operate in our hearts.

Black Execs' Prospects 'Good'

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Black executives have trained and positioned themselves so effectively that their future in the 1980s is "extremely positive," says an authority on routes to success.

Prof. Eugene Jennings, who pioneered the study of executive mobility nearly 30 years ago, said he would be surprised if blacks fail to achieve the presidency of major corporations over the next few years.

"I have studied many groups trying to make it to the top, including women, but no group has built so strong a foundation to continue its progress," he said after analyzing results of a study.

Jennings said that as a group the black executives remind him of the fast-moving, confident young holders of master's of business degrees who in the late 1960s "blazed a trail to the top."

Compared to another minority group, women, the black executives are much more advanced, Jennings said, pointing out that the blacks have acquired the credentials rather than relying on special characteritics. "Women are still asserting their gender," he said.

The study, by the Chicago-based firm of Heidrick & Struggles, produced statistics on 375 high-level black executives. The findings were then interpreted for the firm by Jennings.

The management professor at Michigan State University, author of many books on executive life and an adviser to presidents and chairmen, found many characteristics he feels assure success.

—They are in sales, marketing, manufacturing and finance, which are the fastest routes to the top. They have primary business duties, having avoided the stereotype jobs, such as personnel executive.

—They are not afraid of hard work, usually spending 60 hours or more a week on the job.

—They have paid their educational dues. They have as many degrees as any group seeking the top jobs. Thirty-nine percent of the group had advanced degrees. Fifty 50 percent of those under 35 had such degrees.

—They exhibit a strong sense of self-reliance. Most were born in the South or Southwest, but now find themselves predominantly in the East and Midwest. They are products of rural rather than urban America.

—They are strongly committed. They are willing to uproot themselves and their families to move geographically and organizationally if it means career advancement.

—Their appetite for advancement is not easily sated. While pleased with their progress they want more and expect more. They will not be turned back easily.

—They have the power of leverage. The vast majority are in very large corporations, and thus are in a position to accelerate their rise to the presidency by taking positions with smaller companies.

—They have confidence. They are in demand and know it. They have the goods and know they can carry their weight. They believe in the American dream and they feel it can best be filled in corporate life.

"Some will say that black executives have sold out to corporate America," Jennings concluded. "But the fact is that they have done and are doing what is necessary to master corporate America."

Actor David Janssen Will Be Buried In Private Services

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor David Janssen, who ended his long-running series "The Fugitive" with an episode that drew one of the biggest audiences in television history, will be buried next week in private services.

The 48-year-old Janssen died Wednesday after he suffered a heart attack while sleeping in his Malibu home. Friends said he had no previous history of heart trouble.

Abner Greshler, Janssen's agent and manager for 21 years, said Janssen's doctor "is in just as much of a state of shock as we are."

The death of the Nebraska-born actor came after his wife, Dani, summoned paramedics who tried to revive him.

Actor Stuart Whitman, a longtime friend, said he happened to drive by the Janssens' home about 4:30 a.m. on his way to his ranch. He went inside when he saw an ambulance and a fire truck parked nearby.

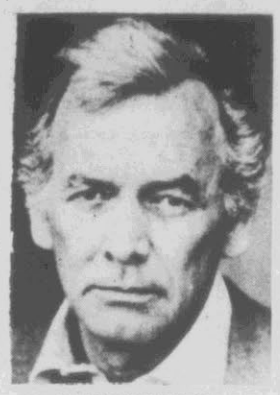

"They (paramedics) had taken him out of bed and they were working on him," Whitman said. "It must have been half an hour altogether. One of them then said, 'I think I've got a heartbeat,' and they took him to the hospital."

Two days earlier, Janssen had begun work on a television film, "Father Damian," about a priest who ministered to lepers in Hawaii.

"He had put in a full and productive day and was in high spirits when he left the set (Tuesday)" producer Jean Moore Edwards said in a statement.

Janssen was born David Meyer on March 27, 1931, in Naponee, Neb. His mother brought him to Hollywood after her divorce and Janssen, taking his name from his stepfather, made his film debut at age 9 as Johnny Weissmuller's brother in "Swamp Fever."

His first big break came in 1957, when he won the title role in the television detective series "Richard Diamond." He was in that series for three years but it was not until "The Fugitive" began its four-year run in 1963 that he became a major star.

DAVID JANSSEN

In the series, Janssen played Richard Kimball, a doctor falsely accused of murdering his wife. Week after week, millions of Americans tuned in to watch Kimball's narrow escapes from pursuing authorities.

The last episode, in which he finally tracked down the one-armed man who committed the crime, was seen by 72 percent of the viewing audience, still the record for a single episode of a continuing series.

"The Fugitive" earned Janssen three Emmy nominations and film roles in such pictures as "The Shoes of the Fisherman," "Marooned" and "Two Minute Warning."

In the 1970s he returned to television in two more series, "O'Hara, United States Treasury," and "Harry O."

Janssen had no children. An earlier marriage to Ellie Graham ended in divorce after 10 years.

The funeral will be held Monday.

Fire Damage To Local Dwelling

Relatively light damage resulted to a home at 114 Roanoke Pl. yesterday when a fire erupted in the den of the dwelling.

Police Department investigators said Mrs. Issac Artis said she was in the kitchen of the home when a smoke alarm drew her attension to the blaze.

Officers quoted Mrs. Artis as saying the blaze started when one of her children, attempting to light a candle in the den with fire from the fire place, set fire to curtains in the room.

The blaze was reported at 7:35 p.m.

obscenity. For NBC, which agreed to pay the Soviets nearly $90 million just for the rights to televise the extravaganza, it was downright dumb. How many Americans, watching the "tube" next July, could be expected to sit passively as Soviet winner after professional winner step forward to receive a gold medal while the band played the Soviet national anthem? All this while news broadcasts of Russian tanks and jets slaughtering thousands more Afghan tribesmen!

In any event, the U.S. should have followed the lead of Saudi Arabia in announcing an immediate boycott. This would have demonstrated American outrage even more positively than the grain and technology embargoes and the shelving of the SALT-II treaty — and in psychological terms it would have dealt the Soviets an even greater blow. Moscow has been counting on the Olympics to provide the USSR with a much-needed propaganda and image-building bonanza.

As for the future:

The Greek government's offer to provide a permanent site for the Olympic Games seems to make sense. As Greek Prime Minister Karamanlis says: To preserve the Olympic idea we must rid the Games of politics and commercialism." Starting, we suggest, by moving them out of Moscow.

Range, but another half century passed before the state bothered to change the signs on Mount Clinton, the old name, or listing Mount Pierce on the official tourist maps.

"They changed Mount Eisenhower right off, but nothing was done about Mount Pierce until 1971, when a bunch of fourth graders noticed the omission on a school field trip," says the indignant Anderson, who covered the New Hampshire Legislature for 36 years for the Concord Monitor. He has devoted considerable energy to reforming the Pierce image.

There have been innuendoes among historians that our 14th president was a drunk and preferred men. Suspicion falls on his lifelong close friendship with Nathaniel Hawthorne, his classmate at Bowdoin College, whom he appointed U.S. consul at Liverpool.

"Nonsense" and stronger words to that effect, answers historian Anderson, who at 78 has just begun to fight for this slighted native son. "Pierce's main trouble was that he was a Democrat. The party didn't renominate him because he advocated compromise on the slavery issue and didn't want to see the country torn by a disastrous war.

"Sure he drank, like a lot of other people in his day. All that talk resulted because the death certificate said he died of a liver ailment. You don't have to be a drunk to do that. And he was long forgotten in his grave when some professors started all that claptrap about him and Hawthorne."

Aviation Ground School Course

Pitt Community College is offering a 60 hour course entitled "Aviation Ground School." The course is designed to help students gain the knowledge necessary for private pilot operations and certification, including comprehensive preparation for the Federal Aviation Agency Pilot Written Exam.

The course is to begin Feb. 19 at 7 p.m. in room 12 of the Administation Building. The class will meet each Tuesday and Thursday nights. There will be a $5 registration fee per student. Registration will be held during the first class session. For further information contact the Continuing Education Division of Pitt Community College at 756-3130, ext. 238.

Seek Public Involvement

Encouragement was given to renewal of a plan to involve more community leaders as advisors for planning activities a' South Greenville and Thomas Foreman Recreation Centers.

Rufus Huggins, chairman of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commisison, said "I feel there are people in these communities who would be interested in serving and who have the kind of input we need to make the programs really more meaningful to the people we serve.

"I want to encourage such people to get in touch with the recreation centers and to be part of a center advisory group."

Recreation and Parks Director Boyd Lee said that anyone interested should contact director of the particular center that served the community in which they lived.

NRC Investigating 2nd Nuclear Plant Discharge

By The Associated Press

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission is investigating the second discharge this week of radioactive krypton gas at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant in Pennsylvania and says it only learned of xenon gas leaks at a plant in Maryland when an inspector checked plant records.

Meanwhile, officials of Metropolitan Edison Co., operator of Three Mile Island, disclosed that krypton 85 has escaped from the plant at Middletown, Pa., on several occasions in recent months.

None of the emissions into the atmosphere, including the most recent in Pennsylvania and at the Calvert Cliffs nuclear plant at Lusby, Md., threatened public health, officials said, but they were concerned some may not have been properly reported.

Victor Stello, director of NRC inspection and enforcement, was going to Three Mile Island today to investigate the latest leaks. On Monday, about a third of a curie of krypton 85 leaked during an accidental spill of reactor cooling water, and Gov. Dick Thornburgh has expressed concern that Met Ed did not inform the state.

Another puff of about three curies escaped between Tuesday night and noon Wednesday during work on an air sample collection system inside the building housing the reactor damaged last March 28 in the worst accident ever at a commercial nuclear plant. In the March accident, the reactor's core came close to a meltdown that could have spread lethal radiation over a large area.

Met Ed said Wednesday the NRC and state agencies have known about the other krypton releases.

"Over the last four months of 1979, the monthly releases...as reported to the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources and the NRC were 70 to 75 curies per month," said Robert Arnold, chief of the recovery operation at TMI.

"By comparison, during 1978, TMI Unit 1 released about 1,000 curies per month...," he said. There are about 50,000 curies of krypton in the containment building, and Met Ed is seeking permission to safely vent it in a period of less than a year.

Asked why Met Ed had never before disclosed the krypton discharges, plant spokesman David Dalzingaro said, "You're probably going to have to ask the NRC. They've been aware of it all along."

At Calvert Cliffs, the NRC was concerned over whether Baltimore Gas & Electric Co., the plant owner, "should have reported the leaks and whether they analyzed the situation correctly," NRC spokesman Karl Abraham said.

The discharge of about 40 curies of radioactive Xenon-133 gas Monday and Tuesday when radioactive water seeped past a valve that had not closed properly was discovered Tuesday by a resident NRC inspector, the agency said.

Plant engineer Lee Russell said the NRC must be notified within an hour "when the reactor is in an uncontrolled state or condition." The leaks had "nothing to do with the reactor," he said.

Meanwhile, a nuclear reactor at Carolina Power & Light Co.'s Brunswick plant in Southport, N.C., automatically shut down Wednesday when sensitive instruments were jarred. The shutdown caused the release of low-level radioactive gas into a containment building, but not into the atmosphere, a company spokesman said.

In Galveston, Texas, 11 employees at a nuclear waste storage site were contaminated this week with a low-grade radioactive material. A Galveston Health Department doctor said the dose received by workers at Todd Shipyard Co. was "significant, but not unacceptable."

WORLD'S LARGEST STAMP — Bob Hoffman of Loveland, Colo., makes the first impression with what he believes to be the world's largest rubber stamp. A Loveland company made the replica of this year's Loveland Valentine cachet. The stamp is 5-by-2.5 feet and weighs 70 pounds. Volunteer workers in Loveland will stamp and remail over 300,000 Valentines this year with a Loveland, Colo., postmark and the official cachet. (AP Laserphoto)

Love Letters Enjoy A Special Place In Life

Each February the Postal Service aids the cause of love and lovers by delivering millions of valentines and love letters. In 1973, a "LOVE" stamp was issued. There are many around who can still recall the childhood joys of a kissing game called "post office."

But there was a time when some postal workers apparently didn't care much for the exchange of Valentine greetings, according to "Notes from the Diary of a Special Agent of the Post Office Department," published in Philadelphia in 1874.

"We must utterly protest," wrote the agent, "against the custom which has obtained of late years, making him (St. Valentine) the tutelary Saint of silly lovers, mean mischief-makers, and vulgar letter-writers generally."

He described Valentines as "the offspring of weak sentimentalism or foolish buffoonery; an encumbrance to the mails, an annoyance to those who receive them, a tax to all parties and a temptation to post office clerks..."

Today's Postal Service doesn't share that view. Later this month from Feb. 24 through March 1, the Postal Service, with the cooperation of the National Council of Teachers of English and numerous other organizations, will sponsor a National Letter Writing Week. It considers Valentine cards and love letters a most desirable category of correspondence.

Men and women of letters have long had difficulty agreeing on a definition for love. Webster's Seventh New Collegiate Dictionary uses 150 words in an effort to define it.

According to Bartlett's Familiar Quotations, love has been described as being "like the measles," "like a red, red, rose," "the lord and slave of all," "a sickness," and "something so divine."

A love letter is about as personal a document as anyone can write or receive and most of those recorded for posterity tend to be lengthy.

It was a musician, however, who was able to distill an ocean of emotion into a few singing lines. Robert Schumann, the composer, wrote to Clara Wieck in 1838, "What a heavenly morning! All the bells are ringing; the sky is so golden and blue and clear — and before me lies your letter. I send you my first kiss, beloved." His beloved later became his wife.

One of the briefest and most direct exchange of love letters in history occurred between Prince de Joinville of France and the celebrated nineteenth century actress, Rachel (Elisa Felix.) Having seen her perform, the prince wrote to her: "Where? When? How much?" The actress replied "Your Place. Tonight. Free."

Today's frustrated lovers seek advice and solace through letters to "advice to the lovelorn" columns in numerous newspapers. Some even go beyond that.

Shakespeare's fictional sixteenth century heroine, Juliet Capulet, whose romance with Romea Montague ended in tragedy, today receives 400 to 500 letters a month, addressed to her in Verona, Italy the scene of the Shakespeare play.

Most of the letters seek her advice on matters of love, and all of them, according to the Smithsonian magazine, get replies from a university student who has assumed the unpaid, official job of secretary to Juliet.

"When I sit down at my desk to answer the letters, I feel useful to someone," the surrogate Juliet says.

George Jean Nathan, the late drama critic and writer, also had praise for love letters.

"The public," he wrote, "will always give up its dinner to read love letters."

May Convert Pier Into Plant

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — This famous waterfront city is seeking bids to covert a pier to a fish processing plant in hopes of attracting visitors — and fishermen — back to Fisherman's Wharf.

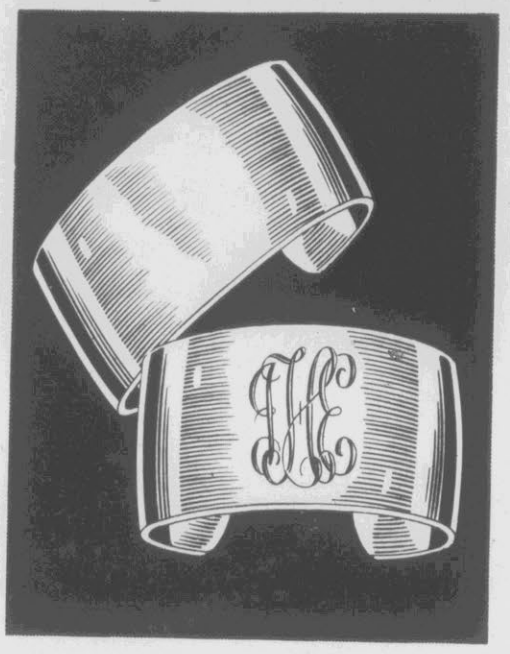

The fishing industry on the wharf has sagged since the booming 1950s. And most of the fishing atmosphere now comes from shop signs.

Ed David, director of the city's port, said Monday development of the processing facility could create 1,000 jobs — and "it's just amazing how a net full of fish, or some boat bringing in a shark, will draw tourists!"

ADVISE INVESTIGATION

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — Frank Sinatra, who once lost a Nevada gaming license for acting as host to a reputed mobster, should be called in for an investigation before he is licensed as a Caesars Palace executive, the state Gaming Control Board has recommended.

DISCO ROLLER MOMMA? — Sporting 16 wheels and a trunk, 6-year-old elephant Baby Tarra struts her stuff on her custom-made roller skates outside her Ojai, Calif., home with owner and trainer Carol Buckley. Buckley, who raised the 3,000-pound pachyderm from a "pup"' said the still-growing Tarra will need a new set of skates in about six months — at a cost of $500 each. (AP Laserphoto)

UNC Told Be Ready May 19

WASHINGTON (AP) — The University of North Carolina has been told to be ready by May 19 for a hearing on the school's desegregation dispute with the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Administrative Law Judge Lewis F. Parker denied UNC's request late Tuesday that the hearings be delayed for the third time.

"Another delay would be unconscionable," said Larry Velez, a spokesman for HEW. "Our case is ready. We don't think another delay would serve any purpose."

Jeff Champagne, HEW's attorney handling the case, told Parker that the government wants it heard this spring.

UNC officials asked last week for a delay until September, saying they would be busy in June with budget appearances before the state Legislature.

The officials said it would be difficult for them to develop a budget presentation at the same time they must prepare for the hearings.

The hearing was originally scheduled for last month but was postponed until March 10 to allow HEW and UNC to prepare their arguments.

UNC officials requested the second delay, telling Parker they needed the time to get depositions from all of the witnesses that HEW added to an expanded witness list.

25 Years For Johnny Cash

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music entertainer Johnny Cash gathered his closest friends Wednesday night in the room where he overcame a pill problem and thanked them for helping him achieve 25 years in show business.

The occasion was a dinner party for 200 friends at his lakeside home. And as Cash herded his guests into a plush basement room, his thoughts flashed back to 13 years ago when he locked himself in the room for 30 days to whip his addiction to pills.

"I locked myself in this room and friends guarded the door so the pushers and creeps couldn't get in," said Cash, dressed in his traditional black clothing for the occasion.

"I climbed the walls for two weeks," he recalled as his wife, June Carter, stood at his side. "Dr. Nat Winston (his doctor) came here every day at 5:30 for 30 days. He said he would have bet I didn't have one chance in 100 to make it.

"But mom told me once the Lord had his hand on my shoulder," said Cash, who consumed 100 "uppers and downers" a day at the peak of his addiction.

Among the celebrities present were Kris Kristofferson, Tom T. Hall, Billy Carter, Ray Stevens, Roy Orbison, Faron Young, Ferlin Husky, Charlie Louvin and Sheb Wooley.

Asked the highlight of his career, Cash said, "This must be it."

Cash, who will be 48 later this month, also paid tribute to his wife, June Carter, and family.

"She was the best thing that happened to me for seven years," he said, referring to the help she gave him in overcoming his addiction. She moved in with Cash and urged him to fight his addiction, then married him after his much-publicized problem was over.

"And of course she gave me John Carter Cash," he said. John Carter Cash is their 9-year-old son.

Tuesday night, Cash completed taping a television special about his 25 years as a singer, musician, television personality and actor. The air date of the show has not been announced.

Cash, the son of an Arkansas cotton farmer, is best known for his hits "A Boy Named Sue," "I Walk the Line," and "Daddy Sang Bass" and for an album recorded at Folsom Prison. He constantly dresses in black to remember the downtrodden.

Port Gets More Land

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The state's purchase of 31 acres adjacent to the state port at Wilmington will increase the port's property by nearly 20 percent and double its container operation, Gov. Jim Hunt said Wednesday.

Hunt called the state's purchase of the property from Texaco Inc. "a major development for southeastern North Carolina."

The state Ports Authority has been negotiating with Texaco for more than a year.

Hunt, who was in Wilmington to dedicate the $16.2 million Cape Fear River Bridge, said during a luncheon meeting that Texaco had agreed to accept the state's purchase of $1.9 million for the land.

While not all the plans for the land have been finalized, the purchase will give the port the potential to add 1,000 feet of berthing, Hunt said.

There are 10 fuel tanks with a total capacity of 350,000 barrels of oil on the property, the governor said.

The port will consider using the tanks to store oil for the state to use during emergencies, Hunt said. "Perhaps fuel oil for school buses could be stockpiled there," he added.

The Cape Fear River Bridge dedicated by Hunt Wednesday is part of an overall transportation plan to link the state ports to the rest of North Carolina.

PFC Garwood Told He Will Be Court-Martialed

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — After nearly a year of waiting, Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood knows now that he will be court-martialed on charges of desertion and collaboration with the enemy in Vietnam.

Brig. Gen. David B. Barker, commanding general at Camp Lejeune Marine base in eastern North Carolina, Wednesday ordered a court martial, but excluded the death sentence from the list of possible punishments, leaving life in prison as the maximum sentence on a conviction.

No trial date was set but Marine officials said they expect the trial to begin early in March.

Garwood, who spent nearly 14 years in Vietnam, took the news with the same calmness he has shown since he returned to the United States last March.

"We expected it, but I'm kind of surprised it came so fast," Garwood said in a telephone interview from the Camp Lejeune office where he works as a mail clerk. In a voice still tinged with an accent, the Indiana native who came home speaking and thinking in Vietnamese said he expects to be acquitted.

Barker ordered a court-martial on the basis of a military hearing that featured former prisoners of war testifying about Garwood's actions in Vietnam.

The order came only a day or so after Barker received complete transcripts of the hearing.

The former POWs said Garwood lived with communist guards instead of in squalid prisoners' compounds, and they said Garwood helped guard other Americans and claimed to be a lieutenant in the North Vietnamese army.

Garwood and his attorneys contend he was merely one of many prisoners who cooperated out of fear, and that his behavior was affected by brain concussions he suffered before shipping out for Vietnam in 1965.

"I'm still amazed that anyone can look through a medical file with 20 to 30 entries showing concussion and then hold somebody criminally responsible for their actions," Dermot Foley of New York City, Garwood's civilian lawyer, said Wednesday.

Barker's order for court-martial followed the recommendations made by Maj. T.B. Hamilton, prsiding officer at Garwood's hearing, with one exception — the possibility of a death sentence for conviction of either desertion or collaboration.

Hamilton emphasized in his recommendation that he believed Garwood should face the "same spectrum of fate" endured by other POWs, including death.

Barker did not agree.

"A general court-martial — without the death penalty — has been set," Maj. John Schmidt, spokesman at Camp Lejeune, said Wednesday.

Barker referred to trial the following charges:

—Violation of Article 82 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice, soliticing Amrican forces to throw down their arms.

—Violation of Article 85, desertion in time of war.

—Violation of Article 104, acting as an interpreter, informer, interrogator, indoctrinator and guard for enemy forces, meaning collaboration with the enemy.

—Two violations of Article 105, one alleging that he hit Army Pfc. David Harker in the ribs, and the other saying that Garwood maltreated Army 1st Sgt. Richard Williams by saying to him, "I spit on you and all people like you disgust me," and "You're in the military only for the retirement, blood money off of the Vietnamese people."

In addition to a life sentence, a conviction could bring a dishonorable discharge, forfeiture of all pay and allowances and reduction in rank to private.

Garwood, who was a 19-year-old jeep driver when he disappeared near Da Nang in 1965, accumulated about $147,000 in back pay during his years in Vietnam. The military is withholding that pending the outcome of his case.

Garwood's father, Jack Garwood of Greensburg, Ind., talked with his son by phone shortly after Barker's decision was announced.

"I think it's all for the birds," the elder Garwood told reporters. "It sure didn't take him (Barker) long to make up his mind. I'm glad to hear one thing — they did drop the death sentence. I think it's a lot of soreheads got their heads caught in a trap when he showed up here ... No one was supposed to be left in Vietnam."

Garwood's lawyers indicated during the hearing that they will base his defense on the contentions that head injuries affected his behavior, and that other prisoners cooperated with the communists out of fear but never faced prosecution.

Garwood never testified during the hearing.

Foley and two Marine lawyers — Capts. Dale Miller and Joseph Composto — will defend Garwood at the court-martial, as they did at the hearing.

Prosecutors will be Maj. R.J. Marien and Capt. Werner Hellmer, who prosecuted at the hearing, along with Capt. Terry Wright.

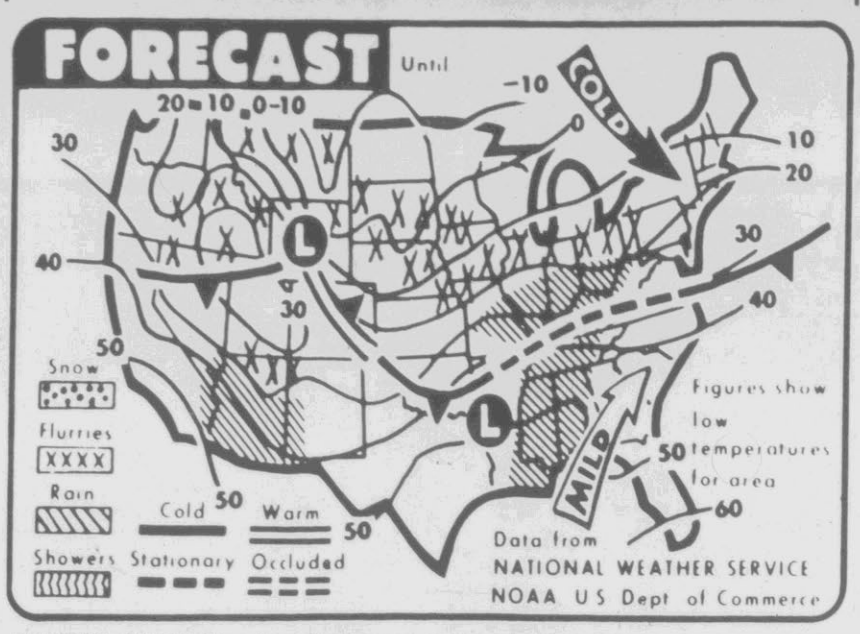

Col. R.E. Switzer, a military judge, will preside over the court martial, which is expected to last several weeks.

Barker's order for a general court-martial means that at least five Marines will be on the jury. Unless Garwood makes a written request for enlisted personnel to be included in the jury pool, the panel will come from officers' ranks.

Garwood has been under no more restrctions than any other Marine since coming to Camp Lejeune last May, and Schmidt said that will remain the same.

Garwood works five days a week at an office on the base, but he lives off-base in nearby Jacksonville.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow flurries are expected in the forecast period until Friday morning from the northern Rockies through the Midwest to western Pennsylvania. Rain is forecast from the central Gulf to the Midwest and in the Southwest. Cold weather is due for the northern tier of states and mild weather in the south southern regions across the country. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Valentine's Day has brought sunshine to North Carolina, but cloudiness — and possibly some rain — will move into the western part of the state by Friday night.

A weak dry cold front in the upper Midwest is expected to move across North Carolina and become stationary just to the south. As moist air from the Gulf of Mexico flows north, it will interact with the front to cause more cloudiness on Friday and possibly some light rain in the mountains by Friday night.

A small low is expected to form along the front, moving east across the Tar Heel state Saturday, and off the coast on Sunday. This means cloudy skies and the threat of rain on Saturday, with clearing and cooler conditions from the west Sunday.

High temperatures Wednesday ranged from 39 at Boone and Cape Hatteras to 48s at Cherry Point, Fayetteville and Jacksonville.

Overnight lows today were mostly in the 20s.

Singing Group In Concerts Here

The Sounds of Liberty of Lynchburg, Va., will present a concert at North Pitt High School on Friday at 10 a.m. They will also be at Aycock Junior High at 1:55 p.m. the same day.

The Sounds of Liberty is one of the ministries of Dr. Jerry Falwell and are featured with him on the "Old Time Gospel Hour."

The group will also be in concert Sunday at People's Baptist Temple at the 11 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. services. Pastor J.M. Bragg invites the public to attend.

Cites Economies In Work Incentive

The Work Incentive (WIN) Program is a major effort to help people receiving public welfare assistance under the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) Program to become productive workers.

The program is administered jointly by the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina and the Department of Social Services.

"During the past fiscal year, October 1, 1978 through September 30, 1979, the Greenville Employment Security Office had 114 WIN participants to enter employment for an annual welfare savings of about $313,000," James E. Hannan, manager of the office commented.

Hannan said 298 people registered for the WIN program during fiscal 1979 through the Greenville office. About 70 per cent of these people were already welfare reicpients at the time of registration, he added.

"During the same fiscal year we had 121 WIN participants to enter WIN on-the-job training slots," Argie Cannon, local office WIN Interviewer commented. In addition, there were also 22 WIN participants who entered the Institutional Training Program.

The WIN Program has been in existence since 1967. For the past two years North Carolina has led the nation in welfare savings with Pitt County being one of the funded areas in this program.

Bachelor Still Seeks Valentine

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Ralph Haberman, a San Diego bachelor, has this thing about hearts and flowers.

As a fifth grader, he sent his favorite girl 1,000 valentines. Last summer, he sent a young lady he was dating 113 dozen roses.

"The roses didn't work," he said, but he remains undaunted, an incurable romantic still searching for the "perfect valentine."

He plans to spend Valentine's Day randomly handing out Valentines at San Diego's main airport — Lindbergh Field — and at the campus of San Diego State University. Inside each Valentine will be a personal note: "I'd like to get to know you."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, pausing at its highest level in nearly a year and a half.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which closed Wednesday at a 17-month peak, dropped back 2.13 to 901.71 in the first half hour today.

Gainers and losers were evenly balanced in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts noted that the market had begun to retreat in the latter stages of Wednesday's session.

Once the Dow Jones industrials climbed past the 900 level, some traders evidently decided the time was ripe for cashing in a few of their holdings.

Brokers said investors also seemed to be inclined to hold back awaiting developments in the effort to reach agreement on a plan for the release of the hostages in Iran.

Today's early prices included Texaco, unchanged at 38; Squibb, up ¼ at 34¾, and Westinghouse Electric, up ¼ at 25.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 4.86 to 903.84, its first close over 900 since it finished at 901.42 on Oct. 11, 1978.

Advances outnumbered declines by a narrow margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume reached 65.23 million shares, the sixth largest total in exchange history.

The NYSE's composite index rose .26 to 67.77.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 1.17 at 287.74.

Missed Free Throws Cost Pirates

Elusive

The University of Maryland's Ernest Graham scrambles for the ball along with East Carolina's George Maynor during action Wednesday evening in College Park, Md. The Terps pulled away in the closing seconds for an 85-72 victory. (AP Laserphoto)

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — East Carolina University's Pirates missed six free throw opportunities in the final minute and a half last night and it allowed the seventh-ranked Maryland Terrapins to gain an 85-72 victory over the Bucs.

Down by only seven, 79-72, with 1:24 left, the Pirates send George Maynor to the line for two shots. Maynor, who had done yoeman's work for most of the way, missed both shots, however, and the Terps rushed the rebound down court for a stuff shot by Taylor Baldwin. Twenty seconds later, the Terps got two free throws from Dutch Morley, and after ECU's Michael Gibson missed on the front end of a one-and-one, Albert King slammed through another dunk with 40 seconds left.

Gibson went back to the line with 29 seconds to go, missing twice, and at that point, Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell, who had gone with only six players throughout the evening, sent in his subs.

East Carolina's Dave Odom was obviously very disappointed in the outcome, feeling that the Pirates had the chance to pull out the victory.

"Except for three or four spurts in there, we did exactly what we wanted to do," Odom said. "It could have been closer at the half (when the Bucs trailed, 39-34), but we took two or three bad shots right there at the end due to some bad communication. We wanted people like Maynor or (Herb) Krusen shooting the ball and we didn't get it."

While the Pirates were able to control the tempo nearly all evening, their shooting was not quite up to Maryland's, 49.3 per cent for the Terps to 45.6 for the Pirates.

Rebounding also was a big factor, as Maryland's Buck Williams, a Rocky Mount native, snatched off 16 as he led a 46-37 advantage for the Terrapins.

"I think our defense did an admirable job," Odom said. "Williams hurt us early, but we managed to come back on him. We had good effort and I'm proud of the kids."

Odom singled out the play of Herb Gray on defense, as he held Maryland's top scorer, Albert King to just 16 points on seven of 17 field goals and two of five free throws. "That's something we don't get as excited about anymore—Gray's defense. We expect it."

Odom said he felt that the Pirates maybe should have zoned more, since the Terps were without top guard Greg Manning, injured in Monday's night game against Boston College. "But we don't seem to play as well in a zone as we do in man-to-man. I guess it's because we've put so much emphasis on the man defense."

Prior to the game, newspaper quotes in the Washington press indicated that the Terrapins held little respect for the Pirates, expecting a "walkover" against ECU.

"I still don't think they have any respect for us," Odom said later. "But I don't worry about that. We have self-respect and that's more important.

"What bothers me more is that we had the chance there at the end, just like at South Carolina (where the Pirates did win). But a couple of turnovers and a few key whistles hurt. And it sure doesn't help when you miss six free throws like we did," Odom added.

The Pirates, who fell to 14-9 with the loss, never led in the game, and were tied with the Terps at only 2-2.

A basket by Morley and a three-point play by Ernest Graham pushed Maryland out to a five-point lead, and although the Pirates cut it back to one after that, they could never tie it up again.

Midway through the period, Maryland got a seven-point spurt that moved it from 19-16 to 26-16. But the Pirates fought back and cut the margin to 35-30 with 3:54 left on a three-point play by Maynor, who had 19 first half points. The Pirates had a chance to cut it to less than five, but failed to hit in the final 2:11 of the half.

Maryland ran off six quick baskets at the start of the second half, then added two more after a Krusen jumper for a 49-36 lead, their largest of the evening. The Pirates refused to wilt, however, and cut it back to six, 56-50 with 10:42 left. Maryland again bulled out to a 12-point bulge, but the Pirates again scrapped back to within six, 78-72, with 1:47 left.

Then, after Baldwin had put in a free throw for a 79-72 lead, the Pirates failed in their free throws and lost their momentum over the final 1:30.

Graham finished the game with 21 points for Maryland, while King and Morley had 16 each, Williams had 15 and Reggie Jackson added 10.

East Carolina was paced by Maynor with 27, Gray with 19 and Krusen with 12. Gray's final point, hit at the foul line, boosted his career totals to 1,000 points, as he becomes the 15th Pirate and the second this year, along with Krusen, to enter the 1,000-Point Club.

East Carolina travels to Wilmington on Saturday to face UNC-Wilmington's Seahawks in an 8 p.m. game.

Jamesville Advances; Bear Grass Is Upset

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville, second-seeded in the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference Tournament, survived a scare by seventh-ranked Belhaven, but third seeded Bear Grass was an upset victim of sixth-ranked Mattamuskeet last night.

Jamesville hung on for a 53-51 victory, while Mattamuskeet nipped the Bears, 50-49.

The two winners play tomorrow night at Washington for the right to enter the finals. Pantego and Aurora meet in the other semifinal game.

In the opener, Mattamuskeet and Bear Grass matched points on the way to a 14-14 deadlock at the end of one period. Bear Grass came back with a 17-13 margin in the second quarter, taking a 29-25 halftime lead.

But the Lakers came out strong in the third period, dominating it, 19-6, and charged into a 44-31 lead. Bear Grass tried to rally but fell a point short of catching up.

Watson Rogers led the Bears with 23 points. Vincent Whitfield had 15, Calvin Woods had 12 and Maurice Collins had 10 for the Lakers.

In the other game, Belhaven jumped off to a 9-0 lead and held an 11-4 margin at the end of the first quarter. Jamesville took charge after that, coming back to trail by only 22-20 at intermission. The Belhaven team, however, held onto the lead in the third period, taking a 40-37 lead into the last quarter.

Jamesville caught up and moved ahead by four in the final frame, then allowed Belhaven an uncontested basket at the end.

Trent Ange led Jamesville with 20 while Keith Modlin added 18. Richard Windley had 20 and Donnie Gibbs, 14, to lead Belhaven.

The loss eliminated Bear Grass from the BHM tourney, but they still have a berth in the 1-A District One Tournament set to start next week.

Tournament To Begin

The Eastern Carolina Community College Athletic Conference will hold its post-season tournament in Minges Coliseum, starting Friday night.

A preliminary round is set for tonight to decide the fourth seed in the field.

Craven Community Collge of New Bern, 17-3 overall and 10-0 in league play, will be the favorite in the event. Craven opens play Friday at 8 p.m. facing a team that will be decided in tonight's preliminary between James Sprunt Tech of Kanansville and Cape Fear Tech of Wilmington.

In the other semifinal game Friday, Pitt Community College, 11-10, 8-2, will meet Coastal Carolina Community College of Jacksonville at 10 p.m.

The championship game is set for 9 p.m. Saturday, with the consolation event to be played at 7 p.m.

Junior High Basketball

Wellcome Junior High took advantage of an off-shooting game by Farmville to take a 52-30 win in Pitt County Junior High basketball tournament semi-final action Wednesday.

Farmville produced three sub-10 point quarters as Wellcome, led by Leroy Harrington with 12 and Rodney Dudley's 11, advanced to the final game against G.R. Whitfield this afternoon.

Farmville was paced by Sammy Bandy's 11 points.

Mack Sent To Bulls

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — Former East Carolina University basketball star Oliver Mack has been traded by the Los Angeles Lakers of the National Basketball Association to the Chicago Bulls.

The Lakers received Mark Landsberger, a forward, for Mack, along with the Lakers' second round draft choices in 1980 and 1981.

The Most Valuable Player for the Pirates his two years here after transferring from San Jacinto Junior College in Texas, Mack had seen but little action on the Laker team, where his position was dominated by "Magic" Johnson.

Ironically, George Maynor, presently a senior on the Pirate squad, was a fourth-round "future" draft choice by the Bulls. Maynor, who is the leading scorer for the Pirates this season, will remain the choice of the Bulls unless he does not sign with them prior to the 1980 draft later this spring.

Pomp, Pageantry Open Winter Games

Flame Lighted

Dr. Charles Kerr of Tucson, Ariz., holds the Olympic torch aloft after lighting the permanent flame for the Winter Olympics during the opening ceremony in Lake Placid Wednesday. (AP Laserphoto)

LAKE PLACID, N [illegible] (AP) — The color-coordinated Olympics are under way, opened in a spectacular splash of rainbow patterns that lit up a dismal winter's day in this sleepy, picturesque little town.

A crowd of 23,000 spectators, creating a massive traffic tangle, huddled together in frigid temperatures under overcast skies Wednesday and watched the pomp and pageantry of the opening ceremonies highlighted by the spectacular parade of athletes.

Teams from 37 nations signalled the start of the Games by marching proudly through a small stadium on the outskirts of town. Their colorful winter gear, ranging from the bright red parkas of the Australians to the tan Texas rancher outfits of the U.S. team, seemed culled from a painter's palate.

Now the sea of colors that enveloped the opening of the Games turns into the pursuit of gold, silver and bronze — a medal chase that could be every bit as memorable as those colorful ceremonies for the United States.

It started today with American Beth Heiden a clear threat in the women's 1,500-meter speed skating and skier Bill Koch, who stunned the world by winning a silver medal at Innsbruck four years ago, shooting for more metal in the men's 30-kilometer cross country race.

But the glamor event on today's schedule was the men's downhill skiing — a duel with Whiteface Mountain's 3,009-meter Alpine course. Italian Herbert Plank, bronze medalist at Innsbruck in 1976, had Wednesday's fastest training time — 1 minute, 43.91 seconds — a full second better than any other competitor. Peter Mueller of Switzerland, defending World Cup downhill champion, and Canada's Ken Read, winner of two of the last three World Cup downhills, shared the favorite's role in the event.

First runs of men's and women's luge competition were held Wednesday night, a few hours after the colorful opening ceremonies. Veteran East German Dettlef Gunther set a course record to take the men's lead, while Vera Zozulya of the Soviet Union led the women.

The second of the four luge runs were scheduled for today along with six more hockey games, including the United States against Czechoslovakia. The young Americans rallied for a 2-2 tie with Sweden in their hockey opener Tuesday, while Czechoslovakia ripped Norway 11-0.

The carefully orchestrated opening ceremonies went off without a hitch — unless you count the monumental traffic jam that left many of the spectators and even some of the athletes walking the 1½ miles from the stadium back into town. It was faster than waiting out the hopeless tangle of cars and buses.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale was in the reviewing stand with Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, and other dignitaries. Mondale officially opened the Games with one simple sentence that stuck strictly to Olympic protocol.

"On behalf of the president of the United States, and the American people," the vice president said, "I am pleased to declare officially the opening of the XIII Winter Olympics held this year at Lake Placid."

There was no trace of the political turmoil that has overshadowed the Olympics for the last month, except for the presence of a few lonely demonstrators outside the arena who protested the IOC's treatment of Taiwan.

But Taiwan's athletes were absent, seeking to be officially excused from these Games rather than to compete under regulations set down by the IOC. Those regulations stipulated the name, flag and national anthem under which they would be allowed to participate — a move that cleared the way for the inclusion of athletes from Mainland China in these Games.

Taiwan sued over the issue, lost two appeals on the case, and then announced its decision to return home rather than participate on the IOC's terms. But a spokesman made it clear that his country was not withdrawing, but seeking to be excused. The difference seems semantic but is important in the IOC lexicon.

"The IOC rule says if you don't compete after you enter, you're subject to severe penalties and we have done nothing wrong," said Thomas Hsueh. "We will be here until the (IOC) board excuses us."

Outside the stadium where opening ceremonies were held, demonstrators who said they were Taiwan citizens living in the United States carried banners denouncing the IOC position on the issue. There were no incidents.

Inside, the athletes from Mainland China paraded behind their five-star flag, smartly attired in dark blue uniforms manufactured, ironically, in Japan.

Many of the delegations marched to careful cadence but others adopted a carefree flare, waving merrily to the crowd. There was a muffled sound about the applause that accompanied the parade, probably because of the gloves worn by nearly all the spectators.

The largest welcomes were reserved, understandably, for the U. S. team, the last delegation to enter the stadium, and Canada. Both teams responded warmly.

Speed skater Eric Heiden, who could win five gold medals in these Games, took the Olympic oath on behalf of all the athletes, and Terry McDermott, a former speed skating medalist, did the same for the officials and judges.

Leaving the stadium where the ceremonies were held was an adventure. Spectators milled about, searching for transportation. But traffic was simply not moving and many shrugged their shoulders and simply began walking. It was a festive crowd and there were few who complained about the cold unpleasant temperatures.

The dramatic ceremonies provided a pleasant interlude from the political climate that has surrounded the Games ever since President Carter requested that the IOC move, postpone or cancel the Moscow Summer Games because of Russian intervention in Afghanistan.

The IOC has rejected that request and is moving ahead with plans for the 1980 Summer Games. The United States Olympic Committee said it would have a statement today concerning the president's call for "a prompt" withdrawal from the Moscow Games. Officially, the USOC has until May 24 to accept or reject the invitation to the Summer Olympics and Taiwan has already proven that withdrawal from competition isn't always prompt.

Conley, Ayden-Grifton Girls Are Eliminated From Tournament

By LARRY SULLIVAN
Reflector Sports Writer

PINETOPS — Southwest Edgecombe's Lady Cougars, just this week named the number one 3-A team in the state, celebrated that ranking by unveiling a secret-weapon here last night in an Eastern Carolina Conference tussle with Ayden-Grifton's Chargerettes. Defense.

Keeping the visiting unit confused offensively by switching from zones to man-to-man to full court presses to half court presses almost every time down court, the Lady Cougars registered win number 23 of the season against nary a loss, quietly slipping past the out-manned Chargerettes, 62-41.

In other tournament action Wednesday night, the host Cougars of Southwest took C.B. Aycock's Falcons into overtime before dropping a pressure-packed 53-52 decision while the Lady Falcons dismissed D.H. Conley's Vikings, 55-42, in the opener.

"That's the way they play," Chargerette mentor Kathy Purvis stated after her squad's final game of the season. "They keep you guessing all night long with their different defenses. It's just what I expected them to do. I was impressed with my girls off the bench tonight, anyway," she added. "Now I'll be able to get a good night's sleep," she sighed.

With the win, the top-seeded Lady Cougars move into Friday night's championship battle against the winner of tonight's C.B. Aycock-North Pitt winner. Ayden-Grifton ends its season at 15-9 with the loss.

The green-clad visitors from Littlefield started off the game using a patient offense, working the ball around the perimeter, looking for the high percentage shot. Southwest was prepared. Employing an array of swarming defenses which caused several Chargerette miscues, the host squad jumped out to a 15-8 initial period lead.

Ayden-Grifton began to work the ball into the middle against the taller Cougars in the second quarter, but failed to cash in on numerous close shots, netting only 5 of 12 attempts in the period from the floor. Southwest, meanwhile, still changing defenses, swished 16 points in the stanza, taking an 11-point lead at 21-10 with 5:40 remaining and maintaining that spread until intermission.

In the third quarter, A-G applied some defensive tactics of its own, forcing the well-oiled Cougars to make rare turnovers while cutting the lead to seven, at 33-26, with less than two minutes gone in the frame. Sandra Langley's troops woke up, however, and responded with six straight points in building the lead back to 13 at the end of the period, 44-31.

Seemingly more aggressive than ever on defense, Southwest piled in point after point in the final frame while stopping the guests as the Cougars opened up a 21-point advantage, at 58-37, with 2:16 left to play. Purvis substituted her second string into the game at this time, and they did not allow the Southwest unit to widen the margin, hitting a shot at the buzzer to make it 62-41.

Alphelia Jenkins paced the game's scoring with 19 points, just under her 21-point per game average. She was joined in double digits by her teammate and sister, Bridget Jenkins, who chipped in 17. Aretha Cannon was the only visitor to finish in double figures, knocking in 12 points in her season finale.

C.B. Aycock 55
D.H. Conley 42

"They're just a better club," nodded Valkyrie Coach Norma Respess. "We're not that quick and we're not that tall," she added, "and turnover is our middle name. They were able to get the ball inside very easy," she explained. "We tried to speed up the game in the first half by using a full court press, but it did't work so well in the second half. Now, at last, I can go home and eat a real meal," she said, referring to her squad's last cage game this season.

Playing a deliberate style of offense, C.B. Aycock gained control of the contest's tempo early, holding DHC scoreless for the first three and a half minutes. The Vikings sailed late in the period and took a 9-8 lead at the 2:00 mark of the the first stanza, before CBA went ahead 10-9 at the close of the period.

State Rallies To Overcome Blue Devils

By DICK BRINSTER
Associated Press Writer

Norm Sloan didn't like what he saw early on, but in the end Bill Foster was left to sift through the tattered remains of his once-powerful Duke basketball team.

For a while Wednesday night it appeared the injury-riddled and slump-ridden Blue Devils had reached back to find the magic that had them on top of the college basketball world earlier this season.

"I thought Duke would never miss," said Sloan, whose North Carolina State team overcame a 16-point deficit to come away with a 76-59 victory to increase its winning streak to seven games.

Indeed the 16th-ranked Blue Devils looked awesome for the first 10 minutes of the game. They built a 28-12 lead, but then lost their momentum and despite canning 61.9 percent of their first-half shots found themselves just three points to the good at halftime.

But they were outscored 42-22 over the final 20 minutes, shot just 28 percent in the second half and got all of two points from center Mike Gminski, who led the Blue Devils on the night with 13.

The victory, coupled with Virginia's 89-87 victory over 10th-ranked Clemson, propelled the Wolfpack into a second-place tie with idle North Carolina, two games behind Atlantic Coast Conference leader Maryland.

The eighth-ranked Terrapins stepped out of the league for an 85-72 victory over East Carolina. Wake Forest was a 61-53 winner over Davidson in another non-conference contest.

Perhaps the most amzing factor in the 33-point turnaround by N.C. State was the absence of high scorer Hawkeye Whitney for the final 14 minutes of the first half. He was forced to the bench with three fouls in the first six minutes.

"Maybe we answered a lot of questions tonight," said Sloan. "We cut the lead down with Hawkeye on the bench."

In the second half Whitney's role was reversed from fouler to foulee. He converted eight of nine free throws and the Wolfpack completed a 20-22 performance from the foul line.

A 10-point burst spearheaded by Clyde Austin, who netted a game-high 20 points, was the key to the first half. Whitney, scoreless in the first 20 minutes, had 14 second-half points as the Wolfpack led by as many as 19 points.

The victory was N.C. State's seventh in 11 ACC contests and bettered its overall mark to 18-5. Duke, which lost its fourth straight game, is now 5-6 in the ACC and 17-7 overall.

Jeff Lamp's two free throws with four seconds remaining offset a basket by Clemson's Billy William that deadlocked that game 46 seconds earlier.

When asked what he thought was the difference in the contest, Virginia's Terry Holland said, "We got the ball last.

"Clemson scored an awful lot of points, but I thought we played well," said the Cavalier coach.

Virginia's 7-foot-4 freshman center Ralph Sampson continued to improve on his offensive prowess. After netting a career-high 29 points in his last outing, Sampson poured in 32 against the Tigers. Lamp added 21.

Larry Nance led Clemson with 22 points while Williams tallied 21. Freshman Fred Gilliam, the ACC's rookie player of the week, popped in 18.

The victory elevated Virginia into a fourth-place tie with Clemson. Each is 7-5 in the ACC. The Cavaliers are 18-7 overall while the Tigers slipped to 17-6.

Maryland put five players in double figures in its victory over East Carolina. Ernest Graham had 21 points, Albert King and Dutch Morley fired in 16 apiece, Buck Williams added 15 and Reggie Jackson tallied 10 for the Terps, who boosted their mark to 19-4.

George Maynor had a game-high 27 points for East Carolina and Herb Gray tossed in 19.

Wake Forest had a scare from Davidson, but Alvis Rogers and Mike Helms converted rebounds on missed free throws in the last 55 seconds for the Demon Deacons, who led just 52-51 into the last minute. Rogers wound up with 22 points while Guy Morgan added 18 for Wake Forest, which bettered its overall mark to 12-11.

Williamston Slips By Pam Pack In OT

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston's James Woolard popped in a fifteen-footer with no time showing on the clock here last night to give the second-seeded Tigers a 63-61 overtime victory over the Pam Pack of Washington in Northeastern Conference Tournament action.

The victory enables the host club to advance into the championship game against Plymouth Friday night.

Rick Walrond's patient Tigers played their kind of game in the early goings, taking a two-point 14-12 cushion in the first quarter. The home team charged up by as many as 10 in the second half before Washington scored the last three points of the half to cut the margin to 25-18.

Williamston came out and went up by as many as 11 early in the third period before Washington ignited, bouncing back from 11 points down midway the third frame to go up by six in the fourth. Tiger Woody Sadler pulled his team back with a six-point effort, including the last second follow shot that tied the game.

In the three-minute overtime period, Woolard and Washington's James Boston, who poured in a game-high 31 points, engaged in a shooting war, with both stars collecting six each. With three ticks left in the period, Washington stepped on the out of bounds line, giving the ball to Williamston, who looked for Woolard.

Woolard got the ball in the corner and let go his shot with no time left, swishing the two-pointer to advance the Tigers.

Edward Williams joined Woolard in double figures for the Tigers, gathering 15 points. Washington's Willie Boyd added 13 for the Pam Pack.

IT'S CHEROKEE

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Cherokee Rhone is the 6-8 center of the Centenary basketball team.

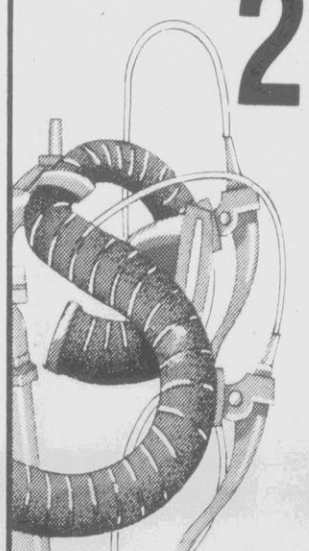

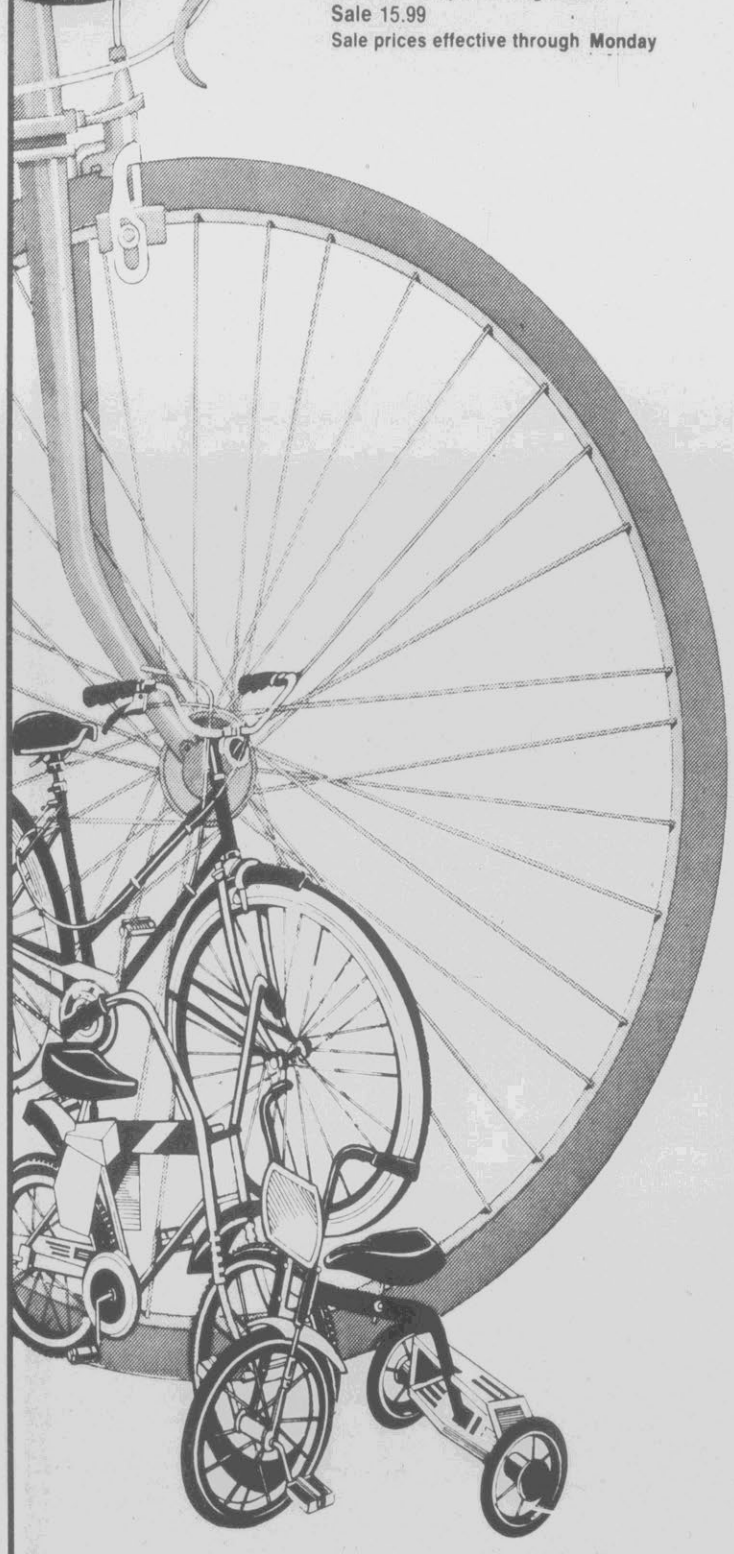

Rhone says that so far as he ha n,t58iable to find out he has no Indian ancestors. At the start of the fall semester in 1979, he says he rose in his English class and said: "I'm Cherokee Rhone, and that's my real name."

Lucas Trade Pays Dividend

By The Associated Press

The recent trade with Portland for Maurice Lucas paid its first dividend for the New Jersey Nets Wednesday night.

Lucas scored 21 points, had 12 rebounds and put the Nets ahead for good with 1:02 left as New Jersey recorded a 98-96 National Basketball Association road triumph over the Indiana Pacers.

"Lucas did a good job for us," said Coach Kevin Loughery. "He had a lot of assists, scored 21 points and he didn't have any errors. It's great to get a player like Maurice Lucas. He's one of the premier forwards in the league. He's still not in the best shape yet, but he'll get there."

Lucas received plenty of help from 19-year-old rookie Cliff Robinson, who contributed 16 points, and Ed Jordan, who had 14 points plus eight steals.

Suns 135, Celtics 134

Walter Davis hit two free throws with 10 seconds remaining to boost Phoenix to its come-from-behind victory over Boston that ended the Celtics' seven-game winning streak. The Suns, who trailed by as many as 11 in the final period, outsscored the Celtics 14-4 in the final two minutes. Davis had 20 points while Paul Westphal led the Suns with 34 and Len "Truck" Robinson had 24.

76ers 107, Jazz 85

Bobby Jones led a balanced Philadelphia attack with 23 points while Steve Mix scored 18 and Julius Erving and Darryl Dawkins had 16 each and Caldwell Jones snared 20 rebounds.

SuperSonics 93, Hawks 86

Reserves James Bailey and Fred Brown and starter Dennis Johnson rallied Seattle from an eight-point fourth-quarter deficit. The Sonics have won six in a row while Atlanta's seven-game winning streak came to an end. Seattle ran off 11 straight points midway in the final quarter for a 82-77 lead.

Lakers 129, Trail Blazers 103

Bucks 111, Bulls 101

Milwaukee rolled over Chicago behind 32 points by Junior Bridgeman and 23 by Brian Winters. Winters scored 13 points in the third period to help Milwaukee open a 90-77 lead and the Bucks went on to post their fourth consecutive victory.

Rockets 122, Knicks 117

Robert Reid scored 13 fourth-quarter points and Moses Malone canned six free throws in the final two minutes to rally Houston, which trailed 108-102 with 4½ minutes left.

Bullets 108, Clippers 103

Recently acquired John Williamson scored 12 of his 23 points in the fourth quarter as Washington rallied to defeat San Diego. The Clippers led 62-50 at halftime and 83-80 after three quarters before Williamson triggered the fourth-quarter rally.

Cavaliers 107, Pistons 102

Mike Mitchell scored 20 of his 40 points in the final period to help Cleveland snap a five-game losing streak while sending the Pistons to their seventh consecutive setback and 44th in 58 games.

Three Among Top 20 Are Upset Victims

Norm Sloan found some answers. On the other hand, Bill Foster was faced with a big question.

In short, that was the difference between winning and losing as North Carolina State upset 10th-ranked Duke 76-59 in college basketball Wednesday night.

"That certainly answered a lot of questions for me," said Sloan, alluding to his team's first-half rally without the services of leading scorer Hawkeye Whitney.

"We cut the lead with Hawkeye on the bench," added Sloan, in reference to Whitney's foul trouble which kept him out for the last 14 minutes of the first half. "That showed me something about this team. Hawkeye's a great scorer and naturally, he's our scoring leader when he's out there."

The Blue Devils hit on 13 of their first 21 shots to take a big early lead after Whitney was forced to the bench with three fouls. But then Clyde Austin and Kenny Matthews led a 10-point burst to shoot North Carolina State back into the game, helping to cut Duke's lead at the half to three points, at 37-34.

With the foul-troubled Whitney contributing only 14 points, Austin took over the scoring burden for the Wolfpack with 20.

In other Top Twenty games, No. 1 DePaul routed Valparaiso 95-71; No. 5 Kentucky hammered Florida 95-70; No. 6 Louisiana State trimmed Auburn 50-44; No. 8 Maryland whipped East Carolina 85-72; Virginia upset No. 10 Clemson 89-87 and Iowa State stunned No. 19 Kansas State 66-58.

Mark Aguirre scored 23 points and Skip Dillard added 20 to lead DePaul's 21st straight victory this season and 22 over two years. The Blue Demons broke the game open with a 14-2 spurt at the start of the second half.

"We played about 25 minutes — the first five minutes and the last 20," said DePaul Coach Ray Meyer. "We had about 20 minutes of going through the motions. I don't think you could affect this team if you threw a bomb in among them. When they have to play, they play. When they don't have to play, they coast. They've certainly given me some anxious moments."

Sam Bowie scored 19 points and Derrick Hord contributed 18 as Kentucky crushed Florida. Bowie scored 12 of his points as the Wildcats rolled to a 43-25 lead and the Gators never seriously threatened thereafter.

Ethan Martin drilled in six straight free throws in the final 42 seconds and Willie Sims added a slam dunk on a breakaway as LSU defeated Auburn. Dutch Morley scored 16 points to pace Maryland past East Carolina.

Jeff Lamp hit a pair of free throws with four seconds remaining to lift Virginia over Clemson. Buzzy Williams' layup with 50 seconds left had tied the game at 87 for Clemson.

Dean Uthoff scored 19 points and Guy Minnifield added 16 to pace Iowa State's upset of Kansas State. Uthoff scored five of his points in a 9-0 second-half spurt that put Iowa State in control.

Elsewhere, Greg Webb's basket with six seconds remaining led New Mexico State over Drake 79-78; Corny Thompson hit for 17 points to power Connecticut over Boston University 72-65.

Ten Set For Mat Regionals

Ten area wrestlers, including five sectionals champions will participate in the Eastern Regionals, to be held Friday and Saturday at Cary High School.

The top eight wrestlers in each weight division advance to the state finals, to be held next week in Winston-Salem. In regional competition, this means that winners of first round matches are insured of a state tournament berth.

Farmville Central's sectional champions will send five into the regional field. They include Jerry Foreman, third at 98 pounds; David Newton, first at 126; Roger Joyner, first at 138; Mike King, first at 155 and Ronnie Locust, third at heavyweight.

Conley will send three into the meet. They include Donald Hardy, third at 119; Mike Long, second at 167, and Gary Harris, first at 112.

Rose and Williamston each qualified one wrestler. Williamston's John Corey finished fourth at 112 and received one of the sectional's three wild-card berths.

Rose's Ron Butler, won the championship at heavyweight and was named the "Most Outstanding Wrestler" in the tournament for the second straight year. He will be out to repeat that title in the Regionals for the second time in a row.

Meanwhile, the Eastern Carolina Conference named its all-Conference team in wrestling. It includes: Jerry Foreman of Farmville at 98; Milton Alston of Southern Nash at 105; Gary Harris of Conley at 112; Donald Hardy of Conley at 119; Raymond Small of Conley at 126; David Newton of Farmville at 132; Dwight Pope of Southern Nash at 138; Roger Joyner of Farmville at 145; Mike King of Farmvile at 155; Earl Paige of Conley at 167; Mike Long of Conley at 185; Johnny Grimsley of Farmville at 195; and Ronnie Locust of Farmville at heavyweight.

Gminski Still Scoring Leader

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Duke center Mike Gminski continued as the Atlantic Coast Conference leader in scoring and rebounding, according to statistics released Wednesday by the conference.

Gminski is averaging 22.6 points per game for the Blue Devils, and is setting the pace in rebounds with 11.4 per contest. But he is being pressed in scoring by Maryland forward Albert King, who is averaging 22 points per game, while Virginia center Ralph Sampson is on his heels in rebounding with a 10.7 average.

King's Maryland teammate Greg Manning continues to set the pace in field goal percentage at 64.9 percent and in free throw shooting at 90.6. North Carolina's Al Wood is second in shooting percentage at 59.1 while Lee Raker of Virginia is second from the foul line with 86.8 percent.

Jeff Jones of Virginia leads in assists with 5.7 per game while Duke's Don Bender is second at 5.5.

In team statistics released earlier Wednesday, North Carolina State moved in front defensively by posting an average 61.2 points allowed per contest. Clemson leads in offensive production with an 83.5 average.

Maryland is the league's leader in field goal percentage at 55.0 while Duke is setting the pace from the foul line by converting 75.2 percent of its shots.

the second quarter, connecting on 4 of 12 from the floor and making costly turnovers on offense as the Lady Falcons took advantage of their height and gained a 22-18 intermission advantage.

Turnovers haunted DHC throughout the third period as the Valkyries located only seven points in the eight-minute span. Aycock took advantage of the poor D. H. Conley ball handling in building an eight-point lead with 1:35 to play in the quarter, and increased that to 11 with a shot at the horn, heading into the final frame ahead, 36-25.

The visiting Valkyries made the blue-trimmed Falcons earn their fourth period points, fouling at almost every opportunity, but the home team responded by sinking 13 of 16 charity shots while picking up only three two-pointers. Behind Darlene Cannon's eight fourth-period points, the guests made a run at CBA, coming within seven at 46-39 with 2:24 left, before slipping back under by the final 13-point margin.

The Falcon's Debra Proctor grabbed game-high honors with 15 points and was followed in double figures by teammates Brenda Alston and Cherry Braswell, who gathered 13 and 10 points, respectively. Glenda Green paced the Valkyrie attack with a dozen while Darlene Cannon ended up with 10.

With the win, C.B. Aycock advanced into tonight's semi-final game against the Pant-HERS of North Pitt.

By Joining BEAT THE PEAK

BEAT THE PEAK is a program designed to help reduce the high "peak" periods of demand for electric energy which typically occur on hot summer days when all electricity users combined are using the most electricity—at the same time. If you are a residential customer of Greenville Utilities and you have either an electric water heater or central air conditioning, then you can help BEAT THE PEAK. As a BEAT THE PEAK Volunteer, you receive a direct credit reduction of either $5.00 or $10.00 on each of your June, July, August, and September electric bills. That can add up to a $40 savings.

It costs you nothing to join BEAT THE PEAK, but it can save you a lot. It also helps save precious, expensive oil that must be used to generate the electric energy needed during peak periods.

To apply for BEAT THE PEAK, or for more information, call the Energy Conservation Office of Greenville Utilities at 752-7166. Only several hundred applications remain for 1980, so call Today so you can start saving money this summer.

Carter-Kennedy Argument Heating Up

By JERRY ESTILL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy are heating up their political fight with sharply worded disagreements over who can claim credit for new emphasis on a commission of inquiry to secure the release of American hostages in Iran.

Carter said at a nationally televised news conference Wednesday night that a U.N. commission "with a carefully defined purpose would be a step toward resolution of this crisis."

Kennedy maintains the administration had rejected such an approach until he called for it Jan. 28 in a speech at Georgetown University in Washington.

White House press secretary Jody Powell and State Department spokesman Hodding Carter denied that contention in caustic terms Wednesday and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance issued a statement saying the United States has been working "for months...on the possibility of creating an international commission that would lead to release of the hostages."

The president termed those responses "appropriate" and said Kennedy's claim was "typical of what causes me the deepest concern."

"First of all, his statements have not been true, they have not been accurate, they have not been responsible and they have not helped our country," said Carter.

Campaigning in Dover, N.H., Kennedy told reporters after Carter's news conference: "Well, it looks like we finally got his attention. What we ought to have is a debate and a discussion. I stand here in New Hampshire ready to debate Mr. Carter."

Carter said during his news conference that he will "resume normal campaigning" only after the hostages are released.

"Whether or not or when a debate would be appropriate, would have to be decided in the future, when I assess the invitations received and the circumstances prevailing then," the president added.

In the statement that sparked the administration's strong reaction Wednesday, Kennedy had said: "The record is clear that the administration had, time and again, rejected the idea of a commission to free the hostages until I recommended it."

Powell termed that "one of the most cynical and self-serving statements from a national politician in my memory" and said Kennedy's campaign statements were becoming "more irresponsible, more inaccurate, more immature."

At the State Department, chief spokesman Carter noted that Kennedy's call for a U.N. commission came on the Monday after weekend briefings on the Iranian situation by Vance and U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim.

Carter said he assumed the Massachusetts senator was "listening intently" at the briefings where he would have heard ideas for such a commission.

Chicago Firemen Defy Threat With Walkout

CHICAGO (AP) — Firefighters went on strike against the nation's second-largest city today to press demands for a written contract, and city officials implemented emergency plans to cope with the situation.

Mayor Jane Byrne warned that any who walked off the job "can forget they were ever members of the Chicago Fire Department."

Chicago Firefighters Union pickets were reported in front of fire stations around the city shortly after 5:15 a.m., the time set by union officials for the start of the firefighters' first-ever walkout.

The mayor's warning came only a day after a collapse of negotiations aimed at giving the city's 4,350 firemen a written contract instead of the handshake agreements of years past.

When informed of the strike plans, the mayor said, "If the story is true, anyone who doesn't report for work in the morning will never again work for the Chicago Fire Department," she said. "Never."

Her husband and press secretary, Jay McMullen, said "Charges will be filed and they will be prosecuted. They will never be rehired by the Fire Department."

Chicago Firefighters Union President Frank J. Muscare was not immediately available, but had warned after talks broke down Wednesday: "There's definitely going to be a strike."

The mayor's announcement followed by only a few hours a meeting of the union's executive board and strike committee.

At about the same time, a department spokesman released two orders to firefighters cancelling all days off and ordering those "now working...to remain on duty." All firefighters were directed "to report to their respective companies or place of assignment."

The mayor said emergency procedures were issued as soon as she heard of the strike threat, but she declined to spell out either what they were or the city's contingency plan.

The city reportedly has working agreements with neighboring suburbs, whose firefighters would help out in an emergency. The union claims the city also planned to use other employees to man fire equipment.

It also was understood Gov. James R. Thompson could activate as many as 1,000 National Huardsmen in the event of a strike, but they would be used only as security guards outside fire stations.

Pushing Sale Of Gold Watches

NEW YORK (UPI) — Inflation and the rising price of gold have sparked purchases of expensive gold watches, according to a major distributor of gold watches imported from Switzerland. A spokesman for the North American Watch Corp. said that 2,500 Concord watches were sold in America in 1979 at prices ranging from $4,400 to $60,000. Prices on a new companion watch for women which is 35 percent smaller than men's watches start at $4,900.

Methodist Media Blitz

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Church is spending $50,000 on a media blitz to advertise for souls.

Bishop Robert M. Blackburn of Raleigh said the media, especially television, can be "a vital avenue to spread the Lord's word."

"We find that the electronic church — such as Oral Roberts and The PTL Cub — is a very potent factor in American life today," he said. "We're not trying to compete with them, but we want to be a part of that, too."

The campaign includes advertisements in newspapers and on radio and television, billboards and bumper stickers.

"I can't recall anything quite like it," said S. Collins Kilburn, executive director of the N.C. Council of Churches.

The highlight of the campaign will be two week-long revivals in each church in the Southeast that is a member of the Southeastern Jurisdictional Council of Ministries.

The Southeastern Jurisdiction, which represents about 3 million United Methodists in the Southeast, is calling the campaign "Proclaim the Word."

It has established a goal of increasing its membership by 228,000 by 1984. The N.C. Conference, which has more than 212,000 members in eastern North Carolina, wants to increase its membership by 19,000 during the same period.

The campaign is aimed at getting inactive Methodists back into the church, as well as recruiting new members, Blackburn said.

Church officials said a unified revival similar to this one took place in the 1950s, but did not include a media campaign.

The bill for the media campaign will be paid by donations from individual churches and by a special offering collected at each church.

The revivals will be held during the last weeks of February and March during Lent.

Increasingly Taking Aspirin As Preventive Step

ON THE RUN — A Soviet soldier (left) runs for cover as his armored car comes under fire from Moslem rebels near the town of Herat in western Afghanistan recently. There were no reports of injuries from the exchange of fire. (AP Laserphoto)

By KEVIN McKEAN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It used to be simple — you had a headache, you took two aspirin.

But today, Americans are increasingly reaching for the aspirin bottle for the ounce of prevention rather than the pound of cure — and for some unexpected ills, like heart attacks and strokes.

In fact, many doctors are worried by the prospect of millions of Americans taking daily aspirin to ward off these diseases.

"Any time millions of people do something you're bound to see some side effects you hadn't noticed before," says Dr. Philip Majerus of Washington University, one of those whose work has showed why aspirin might be helpful in blood vessel disease.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is expected soon to approve aspirin for helping prevent strokes among men who have had so-called transient ischemic attacks. These temporary blackouts are sometimes precursors of a stroke.

But a recent $17 million, three-year study of 4,500 persons who survived heart attacks suggested aspirin was worthless in preventing a second attack.

The results of at least one other study of aspirin — this one more favorable to the drug — are due to be released at a two-day conference at the institute beginning Feb. 20.

The excitement over aspirin comes from a new understanding of how it works.

Doctors have long known that aspirin prolongs bleeding, but in the last decade they learned it does so by blocking the production of clot-promoting prostaglandins in blood cells called platelets.

Blood clotting is a natural response to injury, and hemophiliacs who lack it can bleed to death from small cuts.

But when the interior of a blood vessel is damaged by atherosclerosis, diabetes or other diseases, dangerous clots can form even though the vessel is not ruptured.

This is believed to contribute to heart attacks and strokes, which occur when blood is cut off to portions of the heart or brain.

One of the first to notice the effect of aspirin was the late Dr. Lawrence Craven of Glendale, Calif. He wrote in 1953 that patients who took an aspirin a day seemed to get fewer heart attacks.

But it was not until 1974 that two studies emerged with good scientific evidence for this. The Boston Collaborative Drug Surveillance Program noted that heart attack victims tended to use less aspirin. And a British epidemiologist, Dr. Peter Elwood, said deaths were reduced 25 percent in the first year after a heart attack among people who took an aspirin a day.

Two studies — one in Canada and one in the United States — showed clear benefit from aspirin for men with transient ischemic attacks.

And Elwood published a new study last December showing 17 percent better survival for those taking aspirin among 1,682 men and women who had survived heart attacks. Unfortunately, in both Elwood's studies the benefit did not reach statistical significance — that is, it could have been due to chance.

British and American physicians are now being recruited into a study of whether daily aspirin can prevent vascular disease in people who do not already have symptoms of it.

In another study, National Eye Institute researchers are enrolling 3,000 diabetics to see whether daily aspirin can prevent the retinal damage that causes 15 percent of new cases of blindness.

"Aspirin makes good scientific sense and good biochemical sense," says Dr. John A. Colwell of Charleston, S.C., who heads a 10-center study of aspirin in diabetes for the Veterans Administration.

"But the bottom line is going to be whether platelets are involved in the small blood vessel disease (of diabetes). We certainly are not promoting the general use of aspirin in diabetics yet," he said.

Several researchers have noted that aspirin taken before or just after exposure to the sun reduces the redness of sunburn.

Sunburn is an inflammatory reaction to skin damage from the ultraviolet rays of the sun. By blocking the prostaglandins that promote inflammation, aspirin can slow this reaction — but cannot, of course, prevent the damage or heal it.

Other doctors have reported complete cures using a blood plasma transfusion and antiplatelet drugs like aspirin and dipyridamole in a rare disease called thrombotic thrombocytopenic purpura, which was once almost always fatal.

A small study done by doctors at the universities of Michigan and North Carolina found migraine attacks declined 75 percent in patients who took daily aspirin, even though aspirin does little to help a migraine once it is started.

Some researchers think aspirin's anti-prostaglandin action may even help block the spread of tumors. Others believe it could prevent the rejection of transplants, or increase the effectiveness of birth control by blocking prostaglandins that promote sperm production.

But doctors are also worried that too many people will begin taking regular aspirin prematurely.

"You're talking to a man who takes one tablet twice a day and has for 10 years," says Dr. William Fields, 66, of the University of Texas at Houston, who headed the American study of aspirin in stroke. "But I don't feel that in good conscience I could recommend that for everyone. What I do for myself is at my own personal risk."

Winterville Budget Is Amended By Board

WINTERVILLE — The Town Board met Monday night to discuss amendments to the 1979-80 budget and to assign responsibilities to all the commissioners.

The commissioners amended the budget to reflect $31,000 the town received from the Powell Bill rather than the anticipated $29,000. The Powell Bill is money the town gets from the state from gas tax that goes toward upkeep of the town's streets.

A payment of $31,214 for resurfacing Gayle Boulevard, Rosewood Drive, Lynn Loop and parts of Railroad Street was also approved. The Board accepted a $638 check from the Mid-East Regional Housing Authority in lieu of taxes for Winterville Apartments.

A resolution allowing the Mid-East Regional Housing Authority to submit application for 25 more units of public housing was also passed.

Mayor Walter Bell announced, with the Board's approval, each commissioner's full responsibilities. E.C. Hines was appointed Mayor Pro Temp and was put in charge of electric, fire, cemetery, and equipment departments. Bobby Crawford was assigned to oversee the streets, drainage, sanitation and rescue departments. Leland Tucker was put in charge of water, sewer, housing and recreation. Mayor Bell will be in charge of the Police Department.

E.C. Hines was also appointed commissioner to Municipal Power Agency No. Two and Mayor Bell was appointed the alternate commissioner.

Elwood Nobles was reappointed town clerk and Angela Stalling assistant town clerk.

According to Town Clerk Nobles, the fuel charge on electric bills for February will be at least $20 per 1000 KW. "The town billed out $13 per 1000 KW last month but our supplier's charge was $17.25 per 1000 KW. Our charge for February will be high because of this. We advise customers to conserve all they can," Nobles explained.

"The deadline for the display of city stickers is Feb. 15," he said. "The cost per sticker is $1 and they are available at the Town Hall. The people of Winterville need to be reminded that this will be enforced."

N.C. May Train Saudis' Patrol

SALEMBURG, N.C. (AP) — Saudi Arabia is looking at the North Carolina Justice Academy as a possible training facility for the country's newly formed highway patrol.

Other training sites under consideration are in Texas and Missouri, Perry Powell, director of the 6-year-old criminal justice training institute, said Wednesday.

State Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, who as head of the Justice Department would make the final decision on whether to provide the training, said it was an honor for North Carolina to be considered.

But he said, "the only way I would agree for us to do the training would be if it did not in any manner whatsoever diminish North Carolina's efforts for its own criminal-justice personnel and if it brings us some concrete monetary benefits.

"We haven't talked figures, but it is my understanding we would be making North Carolina some money," Edmisten said.

There have been discussions about the Saudis providing equipment for a new building at the academy as part of the payment for the training, Edmisten said.

The project is part of a planned $900 million program by the Saudis to develop, train and equip a patrol similar to those in the United States, Powell said.

Besides training the patrolmen, the state would be responsible for English language lessons and cultural trips.

The academy was contacted last year by Sanders Associates, a consulting firm in Nashua, N.H., that is handling the training program for the Saudi government, Powell said. The firm's representatives visited the academy in January and have given a report to Saudi officials, Powell said.

GET PRISON TERMS

LONDON (AP) — Saudi Arabian authorities have sentenced two British Aircraft Corp. employees to three-year prison terms following January convictions for manufacturing and selling alcohol, which is banned in the Moslem country, a company spokesman said.

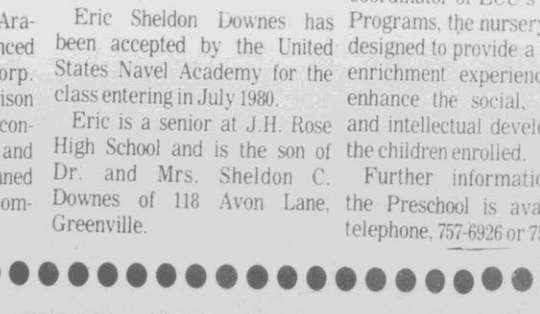

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH — This statue at the entrance to Mariners Museum Park at Newport News reflects an attitude many Tidewater residents share toward the near record snowfall — already enough. With low temperatures to average in the mid-20s and highs in low to mid-40s, it should be dry at least till Saturday when a chance of precipitation (hopefully not snow!) is possible. (AP Laserphoto)

Miami, Fla., Drug-Smuggling Capital Of The U.S.

BIG BUSINESS IN MIAMI — Allan Pringle, head of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration's Miami office, displays a haul of cocaine in his office. He says Miami is the drug-smuggling capital of the U.S. and Miami-area banks are "the financial centers for the drug traffickers." (AP Laserphoto)

By STEPHEN C. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — It starts with a simple exchange of cash.

A young marijuana user in Salt Lake City plunks down $50 for an ounce of Colombian grass. A patron of the New York City disco scene deals out four $100 bills to pay for a night's cocaine high.

Street dealers skim off their cut and pass on the profits to couriers, young "blue-jean millionaires" who collect thousands of dollars in small bills and ferry the money to South Florida.

There, federal officials say, cocaine and marijuana lords launder billions of dollars through local banks before wiring profits to "safe banks" in the Caribbean, South America and Switzerland.

Miami is the drug smuggling capital of the United States.

"There is no question the majority of the money flooding South Florida is coming from the dope traffic," said Allan Pringle, head of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration's Miami office.

Miami-area banks are "the financial centers for the drug traffickers, the Wall Street of the dopers," Pringle said.

The "blue-jean millionaires" have been known to keep bank tellers busy for hours counting out suitcases full of well-worn $20 and $100 bills. Narcotics officials say they work for well-connected kingpins who control South Florida drug gangs.

"The general setup is a real company acts as a front for the deposits," said Miami FBI special agent in charge Arthur Nehrbass. "The primary business, of course, is the smuggling. But they do a moderate amount of business as the shell company.

"The banks generally accept the money as a deposit to XYZ Corp., and then it's transferred out, either by wire or checks," he said.

The deposits are often made in area banks owned by foreign nationals. Federal sources said that a coming indictment, which will list drug charges against various individuals, will also name one or more Miami-area banks, but not charge them.

The drug ringleaders — including prominent members of South Florida society, according to Pringle — never dirty their hands on the drugs or the cash.

Instead, they realize their profits when the money is safely transferred to foreign banks, which are used because of their legendary discretion and secrecy about depositors.

The money is moved in the same manner as thousands of daily legitimate transfers. A bank in Switzerland or the Bahamas, for example, acting on an order from a client, telexes an American bank requesting a transfer. The American bank wires the drug profits overseas, making them difficult to trace.

"I think there could be some improved legislation to tighten up banking laws to inhibit some of these major transactions," Pringle said. "We know it's pretty hard to move a million in cash, and if the smugglers can do it safely through a bank it makes it easier for them. If they were forced to hand-carry it, the risks would be greater."

A recent Treasury Department report said a cash flow study in Federal Reserve Banks in Jacksonville and Miami "clearly indicates that disproportionately large volumes of currency are flowing into Florida from other states and, perhaps, from other nations."

The DEA report showed that in one instance, an account in a Miami bank handled more than $4 million in cash deposits in a single month.

In an attempt to plug the flow of drug money in late 1977, the FBI and DEA began Operation Banco, which is designed to trace the cash through South Florida banks.

"Most of the cash is probably the (street) money that's being passed at the consumer level," Pringle said. "Through our operation known as Banco we've been able to track monies in billions of dollars.

"We don't know where it's all coming from, but it's generally coming to Florida because the facilities for moving the money outside of the United States, to what we call offshore banking facilities, are here."

Investigative techniques used in Operation Banco detected the Black Tuna drug gang — one of the nation's major smuggling rings — when a large cash deposit was made in a Miami Beach bank. Eight members of the gang were convicted last week on a variety of charges. Three of them could receive life sentences.

"It's something we have used quite often that we hope will result in more and more prosecutions in the future," said DEA spokesman Cornelius Dougherty.

Operation Banco works when banks cooperate, but federal officials say not all South Florida financial institutions want drug agents poking through their records.

"Most banks want to do business and they want a piece of that (narcotics) money," said a staff member of the House subcommittee on Commerce, Consumer and Monetary Affairs, who asked not be be identified.

"They all handle a big flow of the narcotics money. They're not interested in whether it's narcotics money, they're just interested that it's money that they can use to make more money.

"In today's check and credit card society, if someone walks in with more than $10,000 in cash, it's abnormal," said the staffer.

Guilford Bd. Proposes State Aid Athletics

GREENSBORO — With rising prices making it more difficult for North Carolina school systems to maintain locally funded school athletic programs, the Guilford County Board of Education has proposed that financial assistance from state funds to athletic programs in North Carolina schools be considered.

In a resolution passed by that school board, a recommendation was made that the State Board of Education put into their 1981-83 Budget Request funds to support interscholastic athletic programs.

Basing needs statewide on an estimated cost of $5 per pupil for 532,636 students currently attending North Carolina schools in grades seven through twelve, the board reached an estimate of $2,663,180 for school year 1981-82, and an estimate of $2,750,000 for the 1982-83 school year.

In making this recommendation to the State Board of Education, members stated what they feel is justification for the funds. "For too long school administrators have borne the burden of financing interscholastic athletic programs chiefly through gate receipts and local funds with little or no assistance from the state.

"Now due to spiraling cost of constructing facilities and equipment, coupled with coaches supplements, insurance, travel, increased coaching staff and expanded programs, many administrative units are at a point of financial crisis.

"Cutbacks and even the elmination of many types of teams are being considered."

Guilford board members added that one of the requirements for state funding would be "to administer the program in such a manner that participants are properly examined, approved, equipped, insured, selected, classified, instructed, and supervised so that the safest program possible is conducted."

The Guilford resolution has been studied by members of the Greenville City School Board.

New Power In Old Dams

ATLANTA (AP) — The dam on the old mill stream may soon be a profitable source of electric power in the Southeast, according to the U.S. Department of Energy.

The department is promoting small-scale hydroelectric power as an alternative to other fuels, especially fuel oil, by offering low-interest loans to study installing electricity generators into small dams.

"With oil going on the spot market at $35 or $40 a barrel, that can be a tremendous savings," said Bill Rankin, a DOE official in Atlanta.

Rankin said 300 to 400 dams probably are suitable for power generation throughout the Southeast, including several remote sites in north Georgia.

Developers and owners can turn a good profit on old, abandoned dams by selling electricity to local utilities, Rankin said.

Once a hydroelectric facility is installed, it is relatively low maintenance cost, he said.

"Not only do they replace coal and nuclear power with a clean source of power, but once the relatively high cost of hydropower is incurred, it can be financed over 30 or 40 years," he said.

The Perfect Medium For A Bit Of Inspired Lunacy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some of the world's great craziness, maybe most of it, arrives in economical little packages unfettered by the weight of plot or characterization. Absurdity unadorned is a lovely thing.

That's why television is a perfect medium for inspired fits of lunacy. The form requires no unity of theme, no artificial thread connecting one absurdity to another — a fact proven by the talented "Saturday Night Live" troupe. They'd get a crazy idea, work it as far as it could go, and then drop it and move on to the next crazy idea.

Steve Martin's TV special, "Comedy is Not Pretty," is a lesson in funny, just as his movie, "The Jerk," is a lesson in working a funny notion past the laughing point. In tonight's hour-long NBC special, Martin delivers a crazy little package, makes you laugh, and then delivers another one and another one until his time is gone.

It's something to see. Example: In a take-off on those "Exotic Places of the World" travelogues, Martin takes his cameras to a land of aborigine hairdressers. A crazy idea that has no connection to anything and would be diminished if stretched a second longer. Alone, it's perfect.

Or, there's Martin's lampoon of the public service commercial in which we're reminded of the danger of drunken drivers and advised to stop our friends from getting behind the wheel if they've had too much. Martin plays the souse here, but his friends aren't able to convince him to stay off the road.

He takes off in his steamroller, and the result is very funny. Sick, perhaps, but funny.

Other loony moments:

The death of Socrates, revised with the Martin touch; an Olympic diver, whose repertoire includes such sophisticated turns as the bellyflop and jack-knife; a funny jab at insurance companies, featuring Martin as the chief operating officer of Mutual of Steve: and a wonderful parody of "60 Minutes," a hard-hitting expose of the newsmagazine's principals.

Martin has earned millions of bucks and fans in records, concerts and "The Jerk," but television is his home court. A classic bit on Johnny Carson's show ignited his career, and some of his best stuff has come on the tube.

Tonight's special is a collector's gallery of sight gags and satire, his second for NBC.

It comes at an opportune moment for NBC, when ABC figures to be sweeping the ratings with the Winter Olympics. If anything will lure viewers from luge and hockey, "Comedy is Not Pretty" will.

Craziness in nice little packages — you might even call it pretty.

Gould Returns To Disney Film

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Elliott Gould returns to Walt Disney Productions, where he starred in "The Last Flight of Noah's Ark," to head the cast of the studio's new comedy, "The Devil and Max Devlin."

Scheduled to go before the cameras in April, "The Devil and Max Devlin" will be directed by Jerry Courtland for producer Steven H. Stern.

James Wood In Another Role

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — In his first role since his critically acclaimed performance in "The Onion Field," James Wood will star in Lorimar's "Fast-Walking," a comedy-drama set in a contemporary prison.

Wood, a leading contender for an Oscar nomination for best supporting actor, will play a prison guard who matches wits with a villainous inmate cousin.

AN AMERICAN ORIGINAL — An all-new documentary profile of the great jazz musician, singer and composer (Ain't Misbehavin'," "Honeysuckle Rose"), will be presented on Camera Three — the distinguished series on the arts — at 9:30 p.m. February 28 on the Public Broadcasting Service.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, FEB. 15, 1980

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to sit back and observe the progress you have made, and to make plans to have even greater progress in the days ahead. You have good opportunity to express your talents.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Analyze your position with friends and know which to retain and which to let go out of your life for best results.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Conditions in the business world may appear strange now, but later can turn to your benefit. Be more self-assured.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't rush into a new interest before making a careful study. Take no risks with your reputation at this time.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Come to a better understanding with the one you love. A new contact can bring many benefits your way.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Resolve a problem you have with an associate and cement better relations with this person. Be wary of newcomers.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be sure to finish regular routines before engaging in amusements. An argument with a friend is not serious, so forget it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't try to be forceful with others, or you could regret it later. Don't neglect a worthy friend of long standing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be sure to keep promises made to family members. A new project needs more study before going ahead with it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be more objective in dealing with others and get better results. Use extreme caution in motion and avoid possible accident.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Plan how to save more money instead of spending more than you can afford. Show others you have wisdom.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A time to be calm and serene while going after a personal aim. Be sure to use your money wisely at all times today.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Taking on a martyr complex will gain you nothing at this time. Quietly get things done in a sure and positive manner.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one who has much ability in scientific matters, so send to right schools where your progeny can learn modern methods and gain good background for life's work. A most unusual profession could emerge here.

Opening lead: King of ♣.

There is a strong temptation to take a finesse "because it's there." Correct technique is to rely on a finesse only if there are no other options available. Declarer scorned the finesse in favor of an almost surefire line on this hand.

The auction was a model of precision. As soon as North made a jump raise of his suit, South was interested in slam. He started matters off with a cue-bid of spades, and North's cue-bid in clubs assured South that his side had no two quick losers anywhere. To find out more about his partner's hand, South followed up with a diamond cue-bid. North signed off because he had nothing more to show, but when South continued by showing his spade king, North rightly decided that his Q-J of spades and excellent trumps justified a jump to slam.

West led the king of clubs, taken by the ace. The unwary declarer would draw trumps, discard his club loser on dummy's long spade and then rely on the diamond finesse. When that failed, he would end up down one.

Fortunately, our declarer was made of sterner stuff. He saw that if West's opening lead had been from the king-queen of clubs (almost certain, for it takes braver men than we to lead an unsupported king against a slam), he could virtually claim the contract.

Declarer drew trumps in two rounds, then cashed four spade tricks, discarding a diamond from his hand. Next, he simply exited with a club to the jack. If it turned out that West had indeed led from an unsupported king and that East held the queen, declarer would have been forced to fall back on the diamond finesse for his slam. But as the cards lay, West won the club and he was end played.

If he returned a diamond, it would be into declarer's ace-queen. If he played another trump, declarer would discard the losing diamond from his hand while ruffing in dummy. Either way, one club trick was all the defense could get.

Five Hours' Sleep Sufficient?

I've been an insomniac all my adult years. I'm in perfect health. I haven't had an ache or pain in my body that I can recall. I haven't had a day's illness that kept me from my work in 20 years. What I want to know is why my wife insists that no one can live to a ripe old age on five hours sleep a night. I simply cannot sleep longer than five hours a night. — Mr. J.N., Wis.

Dear Mr. N.:

You are an unofficial member of a club that includes Napoleon Bonaparte, Thomas Edison, Benjamin Franklin, Charles Dickens, Winston Churchill, James Thurber, Cary Grant, Irving Berlin, Franz Kafka and 20 million other people in the United States alone.

Insomnia is not a disease. It is a symptom. In some instances, its cause is known and alteration of the insomniac patterns can be established. In others, the cause is unknown.

Insomniacs describe their condition in a variety of ways. Some have a long delay in falling asleep. Others, after a few hours' sleep awake and can't return to sleep. Still others awake a few times during the night and then, after five minutes, fall asleep again. Many more variations exist.

The inability to sleep for long periods of time is not nearly as significant as is the capacity of the individual to function during waking hours in a completely adequate way. Most people function well with six to eight hours sleep a night. Children require more sleep than adults. With advancing age, the elderly frequently note that their need for sleep has diminished over the years. Generally, it is said that women require more sleep than men.

When the lack of sleep interferes with a person's efficiency and productivity it is, of course, necessary to track down its cause. People with asthma, angina pectoris, ulcers, and, particularly, hiatus hernia often have their sleep interrupted. There are many neurological disorders that interfere with sleep. Emotional problems, personal crises, alcoholism, overuse of tobacco, coffee and tea and abuse of drugs are common causes of insomnia.

In your case, since you are well and seem to be functioning at top level, there is no need to be concerned about changing your sleep habits.

For others, whose efficiency is affected by their lack of sleep, there are excellent ways of breaking the pattern of insomnia. Avoiding daytime naps and evening stimulants can help. The last big meal of the day should be eaten many hours before retiring. Relaxing activity, such as reading or bathing, can also be conducive to sleep. Many people find that by turning on the radio, listening to soft music or the spoken voice, they are able to dismiss annoying thoughts circulating through their minds. Stop worrying about not falling asleep. That in itself can be instrumental in keeping you awake. When the anxiety about sleep is great there is a tendency to depend on sleep-inducing drugs. Insomnia is not cured this way. If all else fails, there are sleep centers throughout the country that can bring relief to chronic insomniacs.

There's Water In Green Wood

By James B. Kea
Assistant Area Extension Agent

If you are contemplating wood for home heating you need to be aware of the advantages and disadvantages involved.

Initial investments should be made in insulating your home. This reduces fuel consumption and helps maintain essentially the same air temperature throughout your home thus avoiding cold spots.

Free firewood is abundant enough at present to entice more people into considering it as a fuel. Hedge rows, cut over areas destined to be cleared or replanted and areas that need to be thinned are primary sources. Removal of undesirable trees from managed woodland can increase nutrients, light and moisture availability to the more desirable crop trees. Ask local farmers about such areas or contact the extension office or the County Ranger.

When buying wood you need to consider species, moisture content, and the amount of wood. Oak, hickory, pecan, maple and ash are the most desirable because they are dense woods with more wood and less air than poplar, cedar, sourwood, and other lightweight woods. Identify and mark these trees while leaves are still on them.

Green wood contains about 50 percent water. If wood is split, protected from rain, and well ventilated it will dry to 20 percent water in six to twelve months. Water in wood must be driven off before wood will completely burn. The higher the moisture content the more heat you will waste in driving off the water.

For years the cord has been the standard measure for firewood. A cord consists of a pile of wood four feet high, four feeet wide and eight feet long. This amounts to 128 cubic feet. Recently most firewood has been sold by the pickup load. Pickup trucks vary so much in size that it is hard to tell how much wood you are getting until it is stacked in your yard. Most pickup trucks are rated according to carrying capacity, the standard being one half ton. Half a ton of wood will amount to one fifth of a cord of seasoned wood. An overloaded pickup truck could haul as much as one third of a cord of green wood or one half cord of seasoned wood. Compare prices by using cords rather than pickup loads.

The extension office has a variety of information on tree identification, woodlot improvement, firewood, and various other publication on energy conservation.

U.S. Textile Industry In Export Hunt

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Morris Bryan and his 400 employees make corduroy in Georgia and sell it in Europe and Australia.

A much larger corduroy manufacturer, the Crompton Co. Inc., is developing markets in Hong Kong.

American denim, of course, covers bottoms around the world.

Exports of U.S. textiles and apparel are soaring, and industry officials see the trend as the best answer to their troubles at home.

"We have never had to export before, but the American market is no longer expanding and exports now are absolutely essential to the industry," said Bryan, president of the American Textile Manufacturers Institute and head of a small, family-owned corduroy firm in Jefferson, Ga.

Commerce Department figures show only marginal growth in the domestic market during the past decade. At the same time, American consumers are spending more of their clothing dollars on imports.

As a result, more than 185,000 jobs have been lost in an industry that has been a particularly important source of work for unskilled young people, the department says.

To deal with the decline of the American apparel industry, the department developed a $2 million program to help U.S. producers find foreign markets. The textile institute, the U.S. Apparel Council and other trade groups are cooperating with the government effort.

It is a major shift for an industry which previously had shown little interest in exporting, particularly in the apparel end.

Commerce Department officials say the program could be especially valuable for many small manufacturers.

"The whole idea of exporting is so new to many of them. They want to know how to ship goods, how do they get paid, how do they keep from being cheated," said Art Garel, director of the department's office of textiles. "We're providing that information."

As part of the program, the department is conducting export seminars around the country, arranging for U.S. manufacturers to exhibit in major European fashion and textiles shows, and encouraging foreign buyers to attend U.S. shows.

The department also hired consultants to survey overseas markets to determine what American goods might be in demand.

The surveys and other measures of foreign demand have sometimes produced surprising results.

"One company took a line of sheepskin coats to the fall menswear show in Germany. At the end of the show, when the exhibit was being dismantled, he found all the workmen lining up to buy the coats," recalled department official Peter Cashman. "So we think there's a German market for sheepskin coats."

In Italy, he said, the television program "Happy Days" and its hero Fonzie are extremely popular. So Fonzie-style leather jackets may sell in Italy.

Consumer News

Good And Bad

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has good news and bad news for consumers. The bad news is that retail beef prices are expected to rise another 10 to 12 percent this year, about half of last year's increase.

The good news is that after four years of reducing their herds, cattle producers have "apparently ended" the cutback, which contributed to the steady increase of meat prices.

ROUTE BLOCKED

LIMA, Peru (AP) — The road to Machu Picchu, the famous Incan ruins high in Peru's Andes Mountains, has been blocked for several weeks by a landslide caused by seasonal rains, tourist agents say.

TV Camera Eyes Kept On Sewers

By KEN RENNER
The Nashville Banner

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The city pays Water and Sewer Services Department employee Calvin Harris to watch television eight hours a day.

But Harris' viewing fare isn't likely to make soap opera producers worry about their ratings. All Harris sees are the insides of the city's sewers.

"When I tell people what I do for a living, they think I'm pulling their legs," the portly Harris said as he tuned in the picture. "People think fixing the sewers is nasty work but I tell them it's not too bad when you do it with TV."

He's one of about a dozen men who operate six television sealing units the city uses to repair cracked lines.

Bob Wingo, the engineer in charge of the $1.2-million-a-year program, says the city has used the picture-esque method of patching for nearly 12 years. It is a response to federal regulations requiring sealing of sewer lines to eliminate the infiltration of outside water.

"We have a sausage-shaped, closed-circuit TV camera mounted on skids which is lowered into the sewer, then pulled by winches from one manhole to the next," Wingo said.

"Following behind is a sealing unit that has inflatable bladders on the front and back. The bladders are inflated around a crack to keep out water, then a chemical grout is pumped through the center to seal the leak."

Charles Gundlach, an engineer who works with Wingo, said the unit eliminated much excavation for repair of minor sewer leaks.

"If the pipe is collapsed, you'll still have to dig it out and fix it," he said. "But this TV method is used to fix all the small leaks and cracks around the joints in the sewer lines."

Each unit — complete with a hydraulic sewer-cleaner truck that flushes the sewer before the camera is lowered, a truck to carry the TV unit and all the hardware — costs $100,000.

But Gundlach says the equipment more than pays for itself by saving excavation costs, inconvenience to motorists during repairs, and a hefty repair bill when private contractors accidentally damage sewers.

"A lot of times we videotape when people are doing construction work near the sewers," he said. "Then we go back and make another tape when they are done.

"If we have to go through legal proceedings to get someone to pay for damage to the sewers, we have the videotape evidence in black and white."

Harris says watching sewers is dull. It could be more interesting, but the necessary equipment is under lock and key.

"They have a unit that connects to the TV recorder where you can switch off the sewer camera and get regular TV channels. But they keep that up at the office — they won't let us have it out here."

As Steed Eats, So Does House

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The House of Representatives should probably be grateful to Rep. Tom Steed, D-Okla. Several years ago when Steed quit smoking, he said a "whole flock" of congressmen did likewise. Now, Steed's on a diet and 16 of his colleagues have taken up the challenge.

Trouble is, the 75-year-old Shawnee native, who says he's lost about 18 pounds in two weeks in getting down to about 200, is convinced their monkey-see attitude is something less than flattering.

"I think it may be a little uncomplimentary," Steed said. "I think what they're saying to themselves is 'If that fat slob can do it, anybody can.' So that gives them incentive."

The 16-term veteran says he wasn't surprised at the number of congressmen wanting to drop some pounds.

"We've got plenty of them around here who could stand to lose weight," he said.
