

City Council Retains Fire-Rescue Plan

By TOM BAINES

Much to the disappointment of local rescue personnel, the City Council last night reiterated its commitment to support the decision of the previous council to cross-train the Fire and Rescue Divisions into a fully integrated fire-rescue system.

In spite of an appeal by personnel from both the city's paid rescue squad and the disbanded volunteer unit for a special meeting with the Council to discuss the matter, the board chose not to reopen the issue formally with another public hearing.

Several rescue spokesmen appeared before the Council and although the matter had not been scheduled as an agenda item, the governing body listened to the various presentations.

Mayor Don McGlohon told the gathering that the Council feels an integrated system of training will provide a high level of service in the long range. McGlohon acknowledged that some people would be disappointed in the short range consideration of the decision.

The mayor said that the Council feels it is responsible for setting policy "we think is in the best interest of the city." He pointed out that the previous council made a decision on fire-rescue "after long and careful study."

McGlohon said the present members reviewed and discussed all the information it could gather as it related to the long range interest of the city. He noted, "We believe the decision made by the previous council was a good decision."

John Conway Jr., whose son is a member of the local rescue unit, asked the Council members if they would consider having a special meeting in two weeks. Conway said that a "definite response from the citizens of Greenville" regarding the issue would be expressed at such a meeting.

Conway's son, John, contended that none of the Council members had gone over to the fire-rescue facility and talked to the people involved in the controversy. He asserted that the elected officials are receiving their information on the matter from Ed Wyatt, city manager, who Conway said has "no experience in emergency medical service."

Kelvin Creech of Rt. 5, Greenville said that he would like to see a special meeting scheduled. He said the volunteer "squad has brought great honor" for the area through its work and Creech added that he did not understand how the Council could sit back and let the volunteers disband.

Pitt Education Bd. Okays Program To Be Offered HEW

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education met with the principals of the Pitt County Schools last night and approved a plan to be submitted to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare dealing with HEW's charges of discriminatory grouping practices in county schools.

"This does not mean," said assistant superintendent Katherine Lewis, "that we concede or that we consider our grouping practices an inferior educational tool."

The proposed plan was unveiled by John McKnight, assistant superintendent for research and testing in Pitt County Schools.

McKnight told the board, "The plan calls for two blocks of placement based on math and language arts, in grades 1-3. Grades 4-8 will have four strata including math, social sciences, science, and language arts. In high school a selection system will be implemented that involves rewriting course descriptions and abolishing the levels system."

This selection system means simply that a student will have a freedom of choice about what to take," explained McKnight. "Simultaneously, we will rewrite our curriculum bulletins, adding information to course descriptions to help students choose."

"This is not very different from the system we have now," commented Superintendent Ott Alford. "Students have always had a choice. The major difference will be in the wording."

"For example," said McKnight, "there will no longer be Freshman English, levels I, II, III. It will be College English I, II, III, etc."

Under the new system, he said, "class descriptions must be uniform."

Students in grades 4-8 will be tested and ranked in four categories, math, language arts, social studies, and science, then placed according to this testing and teacher evaluation.

McKnight called this type of placement "bona fide non-discriminatory grouping, according to the Office of Civil Rights. You can group for whatever subjects the board wishes you to group for." Placement depends fifty percent on test scores and fifty percent on teacher evaluation.

"The percentage of movement would probably be around fifteen percent," predicted McKnight. This figure represents the number of students landing in different groups.

"This has the impact of doing something we've wanted to do for a long time," said McKnight. "It gives us a flexibility of schedules."

Ike Baldree, principal of Grifton School, asked "How about class size? You could have fifteen in level I and fifty in the other levels."

Grades 1-3 would be grouped into two blocks based on math and language arts testing and teacher evaluation. This type of placement is called stratified heterogeneous grouping," according to McKnight.

"Kindergarten," said McKnight, "is grouped heterogeneously now and we recommend that it stay that way."

McKnight emphasized the point that any testing must be done on an objective, non-discriminatory basis in order to comply with the Office of Civil Rights' guidelines.

"The Civil Rights Committee says that you can group as long as you have valid criteria for grouping. You must have a plan that utilizes one of these three alternatives: assign students using heterogeneous random grouping, assign students using stratified heterogeneous grouping, or completely re-test and evaluate students with material that is educationally valid," explained McKnight.

The proposed plan is the result of consultation and work with Dr. Bill Noblitt of the University of North Carolina. The proposal gives HEW a specific date to reply by in order for the Pitt County Schools to implement the plan.

"It could not be implemented before next fall," said Superintendent Alford, "and it may be difficult to do then."

Board Chairman Mark Owens said, "Looking at the way it is, with the alternative, is the system we have now or the new system better for the students? An answer to that will determine whether we reject HEW's demands or submit this plan."

"I think that it has the potential for being as good for the students," replied Board member James

Defer Street Action

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Action on an order closing a portion of Spruce Street between Raleigh Avenue and 14th Street was continued until March by the City Council following a public hearing that saw both support for and opposition to the proposed move.

City Manager Ed Wyatt explained that the city has been planning for some time to widen 14th Street and create a new alignment with Farmville Boulevard. The segment of Spruce Street proposed for closing would be a safety impairment under the widening project, Wyatt said.

Wyatt noted that the widening project under the Community Development program would be completed in its entirety before the street segment is closed.

City Engineer Ron Sewell mentioned that the concern with Spruce in regard to the widening project and realignment is that the intersection of Spruce at 14th Street would be too close to a proposed major intersection.

Sidney Skinner of 1300 Dickinson Avenue said that he was opposed to closing a portion of Spruce Street because it is a heavily traveled corridor. Skinner pointed to other traffic bottlenecks in the area and said Spruce should be kept open because of those other problem areas.

Willie Small of 1402 Spruce Street said he uses the street every day and he suggested that more of a hazard will exist in terms of safety if the street is closed. More pressure will be placed on Dickinson Avenue and Farmville Boulevard if the segment is closed, he contended. Small said that he and his neighbors are in favor of the street remaining open.

Mickey Herrin, local attorney representing A. B. Whitley, who owns property at the Spruce-14th Street intersection, indicated Whitley's willingness and desire to see the street closed. Herrin said that if the 14th Street widening plan develops, parking on the 14th Street side of Whitley's business will be lost and it would be desirable if a por-

Gov. Hunt Impressed By Vocational Program Role

Governor Jim Hunt visited Carolina East Mall this morning to view exhibits prepared by Pitt County and Greenville City students for National Vocational Education Week.

The Governor commented on the vocational program represented saying, "I am tremendously impressed. These exhibits demonstrate the fact that you have a good program simply because they were built, designed and put up by students and instructors."

"This exhibit indicates that they are learning about occupations and the skills needed for these occupations. Getting these skills is the biggest challenge, and that's the challenge I'm interested in in the next four to five years."

Supt. of Public Instruction Dr. Craig Phillips accompanied Hunt as he toured the mall.

Hunt spoke briefly to a crowd of about 300, saying, "I am excited about these exhibits. When I was an FFA boy I had to come up with ideas, and I know how hard it is. I want to commend all you students for your work."

Dr. Craig Phillips also spoke.

International Commission For Probe Of Shah Being Organized

By The Associated Press

Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said today the international commission to investigate charges against the deposed shah may be formed "within a few hours," but the American hostages in Tehran will not be released until the panel finishes its work, according to an Italian news agency.

But former Irish Foreign Minister Sean MacBride said today "the commission could hardly begin its work until the hostages have been released. Either they are released before the commission meets or they could be released concurrently with the setting up of the commission."

Ghotbzadeh, speaking to reporters in Rome, was quoted as saying U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim telephoned him at 3 a.m. to discuss composition of the commission. The panel to investigate the regime's charges against Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi has been regarded as a key step toward freeing the hostages in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, who began their 104th day in captivity today.

"The conversation lasted an hour. Now one is waiting only for their acceptance. For us, the names aren't important. What is important is that the commission is formed," Ghotbzadeh was quoted as saying by the ANSA news agency.

However, he added, "the hostages will not be freed until the commission makes public its results," according to ANSA.

Ghotbzadeh had told a news conference Thursday that he hoped the commission would finish its work in 10 days to two weeks, but refused to be pinned down on when the hostages would be released. However, he said once the commission was formed "everything is in motion."

Earlier in the day he spent an hour at the Vatican for talks with Secretary of State Cardinal Agostino Casaroli. "We spoke about the Iranian revolution and the force of religion in the world," he said. He did not see Pope John Paul II, whose pleas for the Americans' release were ignored by Iran last November.

MacBride, interviewed in Dublin on NBC's "Today" program, said the commission would not have the power to call as witnesses U.S. officials or the ex-shah himself, but could receive reports only from the Iranian government.

Objections to the former Irish Republican Army leader reportedly have surfaced in U.S. government circles because of his sympathy for leftist causes.

Asked to comment on holding the Lenin Peace Prize, as well as a Nobel Peace Prize, MacBride said, "I might add that I also hold the American Medal for Justice, which was awarded to me subsequently. I think that I am pretty well balanced from that point of view."

President Carter, discounting speculation that the approximately 50 Americans could be freed over the weekend, said he did not expect the issue to be resolved this month.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Sen. Carolyn Mathis, D-Charlotte, today said she was withdrawing from the Democratic race for commissioner of insurance, saying the cost of a campaign against incumbent John Ingram would be too high.

Vote Boycott

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — The European Parliament today called for a boycott of the Moscow Olympics and for an immediate embargo on sales of surplus commodities to the Soviet Union.

It also condemned the banishment of Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov to Gorky, 250 miles from the Soviet capital.

In three resolutions that passed easily despite Socialist opposition, the parliament urged that the Olympic Games be held on "agreed international territory."

It also called for the nine governments of the Common Market countries to urge athletes not to take part in the summer games if they are held in Moscow.

A resolution supporting the Moscow games, put forth by the French Communists, was easily defeated.

Court Overturns Citizenship Loss

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal appeals court has overturned a decision stripping Frank Walus, an alleged former Gestapo agent, of his citizenship.

Trial Judge Julius Hoffman ruled in 1978 that Walus, 57, lied about his past to immigration officials in 1970. Hoffman said evidence indicated Walus killed more than 20 Poles during World War II.

The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, however, Wednesday ordered a new trial and criticized Hoffman for rejecting a defense request that the trial be reopened to consider new evidence. Walus's attorneys say records indicate he was a slave laborer during the war.

tion of the closed street could be used for parking.

According to Herrin, no one would be deprived of reasonable ingress or egress to their property as a result of the closing.

Another Spruce Street resident contended that Whitley has a 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. problem with the street while residents have to deal with the situation all day long. The spokesman said that residents of the Spruce Street area would like to see Whitley's company and other companies in the area move out of the neighborhood and not expand there.

Tom Chapin, who owns property adjacent to Whitley, said that he was in favor of closing the Spruce Street segment.

Another resident expressed a desire to see Whitley relocate his business rather than expand. He said that the recreational area for children is being affected by the action.

Bobby Bowen said that in his opinion, Whitley would not be gaining in the transaction since he is losing half of a city block for the new street alignment. Bowen said he felt having two intersections, as would be the case if Spruce remained open, would be a traffic hazard.

Herrin emphasized that Whitley did not propose that the one block area of Spruce be closed but the matter was initiated by the city.

Councilman Clarence Gray said that he was afraid a lot of the residents of the area had not had ample opportunity to study the matter, other than the input they had received at last night's meeting. He suggested tabling or continuing the matter until the regular March Council session.

Wyatt suggested that residents interested in the project should contact Sewell for information. The city manager said that Sewell might be able to visit the neighborhood to discuss the matter with the residents.

In other public hearings last night, the Council gave its approval to several rezoning changes, as recommended by the Planning Department, in the Belvoir Highway area. Wyatt said that the area, involving some 175 acres, is generally zoned for Unoffensive Industry usage but is mostly developed for residential use.

Wyatt explained that some 65 percent of the uses in the study area are now non-conforming under the existing zone and they would be in conformance if rezoned. He said there are 44 property owners involved.

The planning staff recommended: rezoning of the North Carolina Department of Corrections property from Unoffensive Industry and Highway Commercial to Office and Institutional.

Rezoning of the area around the loop road on the north side of the highway from Unoffensive Industry and RA-20 to R-6 Mobile Home; rezoning of the area on the south side of the highway across from the loop road from Unoffensive Industry to R-6 Mobile Home or R-6.

Rezoning of the area north of the proposed R-6 Mobile Home area from Unoffensive Industry to R-9; rezoning of the area on the south side of the highway across from North River Estates, Section II, from RA-20 to R-9; and rezoning of the area south of the proposed R-6 Mobile Home or R-9 across from the loop road from Unoffensive Industry to RA-20.

Approval was also given by the Council, following a public hearing, of a request by J. T. Manning Jr. to rezone approximately 1.23 acres on the north side of the Belvoir Highway west of the prison camp from Unoffensive Industry to Neighborhood Commercial.

Wyatt said that the Manning request was the catalyst to initiating the study conducted by the planning staff of the Belvoir Highway area.

The Council also approved, following a public hearing, a request by BCF-JKMW for rezoning approximately 34 acres north of NC 43 across from the East Carolina University Medical School from Flood Plain to R-6. It was pointed out that the developers will have to comply with the 100-year flood requirements in their construction.

In a fifth public hearing, approval was given to a request by Burroughs Wellcome for a permit to place a mobile home at the plant site for use as office space. The permit was granted on a one-year basis.

Wyatt reported that the city has received a reply from the state attorney general's office regarding its inquiry as to whether a private club can be allowed as a permitted use in an Unoffensive Industry zone. City Attorney Louis Singleton wrote the state office following a request in January by Claudie E. Roache and Ralph Swain Sr. for a special use permit to operate a private club in the structure located on the Pactolus Highway behind the Department of Transportation facility. The matter was tabled at the January meeting in order to seek a ruling from the state.

Wyatt said that James F. Bullock, senior deputy attorney general, wrote in his letter to Singleton that Section 32-68 of the zoning code permits special uses in the IU District which are "such other offensive industrial activities that are compatible with the permitted uses."

Bullock noted in his letter, "It seems that a private club is not an industrial activity, therefore we do not believe you reach the question whether the club is compatible with the permitted use."

Singleton said that the city's best legal advice says that the city can not issue the permit. He noted that the city would be denying the permit application because of the legal ruling.

Attorney James Brown, appearing on behalf of the petitioners, suggested that Singleton's letter was written "not to give the permit but to deny the permit." Brown said that Rufus Edmisten is the attorney general but "he is not the gospel." The attorney said that the power rested with the Council.

Brown said that he understood problems existed with the former ownership of the club and he contended it was not fair to prejudice the new owners. He added, "Give these fine people a chance to fail. Don't give us technical garbage about writing the attorney general."

The attorney said that the owners would appeal the decision to deny the application.

Mayor Don McGlohon pointed out that the zoning at the time the previous club was in operation did allow such a club. However, the zoning has changed since then and the club would not be a permitted use, he said.

Other business on the agenda included:

— Accepted six streets for permanent maintenance;

— Deferred action on changes recommended by the Public Transportation Commission in bus routes No. Two and Three in order to provide service to Carolina East Mall;

— Accepted an annexation report on the area of Arlington Boulevard, Red Banks Road, and NC 43;

— Scheduled a public hearing for March 13 on a recommendation by the Joint Planning and Zoning Commission that the Thoroughfare Plan be amended to reflect the location of Arlington Boulevard from US 264 Business to the Stantonsburg Road;

— Approval of a motion to write a letter to the chairman of Drainage District No. Three, stating the Council's endorsement of a drainage project that will affect the drainage areas around Club Pines Drive and Hooker Road, that the project, if approved, be implemented as soon as possible to alleviate flooding that area of the city;

— Scheduling of a public hearing on a recommendation by the Joint Planning and Zoning Commission to extend the one-mile extraterritorial area just beyond Red Oak and Oakdale;

— Approval of applications by Big Top Deli, 185 Carolina East Mall, Margaux's, Eighth and Evans Streets, and G.T. Enterprises Inc., 321 E. Tenth Street, for on-premise beer and wine privilege licenses; — Approval of an application by Sam and Dave's Snack Bar, 1200 N. Greene Street, for an on-premise beer and off-premise wine privilege license; — Approval of an application by PEI Foods Inc. of North Carolina (Clyde's), 300 E. Tenth Street, for an on-premise beer privilege license;

— Approval of a bid by Barrus Construction Co. in the amount of $103,903.98 for paving under the CD program;

— Approval of a bid by

Mervis Uniforms of Virginia Beach in the amount of $7,734.16 for police spring and summer uniforms;

— Approval of a bid by Armco Inc. in the amount of $11,812.67 for storm drainage pipe for the Southside Community Development project;

— Presentation of a request by Mrs. Ella Harris of 409 Greenfield Boulevard that the resurfacing of streets in the Greenfield Terrace subdivision be placed high on the priority list of resurfacing projects;

— Presentation by Bill Wright of the Human Relations Council of the "New Horizon" Fair Housing Program;

— Acceptance of the 1980 CD Grantee Performance Report;

— Approval of a contract with Ford Motor Co. for the lease of two tractors for the Recreation and Parks Department, and;

Seek Causes Of Inmate Melees

TRACY, Calif. (AP) — Officials of Deuel Vocational Institution were trying today to find out what sparked two separate melees that left one inmate dead and another seriously wounded.

The 1,300 inmates of the facilities were locked in their cells after the incidents Tuesday and Wednesday in which 50 inmates fought each other.

The death of 20-year-old Mario Chavez was the first homicide at Deuel in 11 years, officials said. They said the lockdown would continue until they had assurances the violence would not continue.

50-Year Certificate Given Member

A 50-year certificate as a member of Withla Council No. 42, Degree of Pocahontas, was given to Mrs. Betty Nobles Tuesday night.

She was honored by being chosen the Valentine sweetheart of the council, commemorating her loyal service and leadership for 43 years. She was officially crowned by Marga Ross.

She was further honored at a covered-dish dinner, given a bouquet of red carnations and presented a decorated birthday cake. A special program included her accomplishments and support of the Improved Order of Redmen-Degree of Pocahontas of North Carolina. The Messengers quartet of the Winterville FWB Church sang a selection of songs in her honor. Quartet members are E. C. Hines Jr., Jack Weathersby, Ron Braxton and Gladys Corbett.

Other special guests attending the dinner were Mrs. Minnie Hines, Herman Nobles and Jean Hamm.

Pocahontas Frances Breedlove conducted the business session. An announcement was read from Great Pocahontas Louise Copeland of North Carolina telling of the district meeting to be held in Rocky Mount April 12. Nominations for Pocahontas of the year will be received by Ms. Copeland prior to the April 12 meeting.

Mrs. Nobles said the Withla Council has received the attendance award for having the largest attendance of members at the past two district meetings.

Lillian Bradshaw used Valentine for the good of the order and each member received a valentine from Sally Vainright and Marie Stocks as directed by Ms. Bradshaw.

Send Bill For 'At Home Advice'

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Please do us lawyers a favor and publish this. I vowed that if one more "friend" called me at home for free legal advice, I'd write to DEAR ABBY!

The cheapskate who calls a lawyer at home, asks if he has "a minute," and usually ends up talking half an hour. He calls us at home because he's afraid he'll get a bill if he calls the office. The cheapskate tries to make it sound like a "personal call"—"How's the family, etc.," but he always wants some legal advice.

My free advice today is: Do not call your lawyer at home except in a real emergency. Do call your lawyer's secretary for an appointment and expect to pay for the advice.

LEGAL EAGLE

DEAR EAGLE: You could cure your cheapskate callers quickly by billing them for legal advice dispensed from your home as well as from your office.

DEAR ABBY: When a 17-year-old boy asks a girl to a school dance, how long should he be kept waiting for her answer?

The boy is our son, and the girl has kept him dangling for a week. I think she's keeping him dangling, hoping she will get a better offer, and if she doesn't get one, she'll go with him.

So, how long should he dangle?

HIS MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: If he's been dangling for a week, he should consider himself cut down and free to ask another girl.

DEAR ABBY: What would you think of a daughter-in-law telling you at the dinner table that she thought you used too much toilet tissue? She said this right in front of her husband, my son!

I told her I would be happy to buy her some more toilet tissue if she was low on it, but she insisted she had plenty—she just resented my extravagance!

This same daughter-in-law informed me shortly after her baby was born that I would have to telephone a week in advance for an appointment to see the baby. Meanwhile, her mother runs in and out whenever she feels like it.

I am not a difficult mother-in-law, Abby. I have another daughter-in-law with whom I get along beautifully.

I am so upset about the way I have been treated that I am considering selling my property and using the money to travel and enjoy myself instead of leaving everything to my two sons. I am a widow (only 56) and am considered quite well-to-do.

The other son (with the nice wife) says I should sell everything, travel, and live it up. The son with the dreadful wife says, "Don't sell. Keep it. You'll get more for it later."

What should I do? If my husband were alive, he would leave nothing to the son with the terrible wife, since he never liked the girl. Your advice is needed.

NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: If it's necessary to sell your property in order to travel and live it up, sell it. Just keep enough to insure your future security. (P.S. Widows would be wise to discuss their financial matters with the trust officer of their banks, rather than with their children.)

Strange Folk Heroes

Folk heroes are made in the strangest ways — and often they are on the other side of the law.

Robin Hood may have been the world's most famous fictional bandit, but he robbed from the rich and gave to the poor, and thus was a good guy.

In the United States, some of the most famed people in the opening of the west were outside the law.

Now the American heritage includes sky pirate D. B. Cooper, who bailed out of a jet with $200,000 in ransom money in 1971. Cooper left the plane over a wild area of southwest Washington and he has never been seen or heard from again.

Some of the money came to light this week when an eight-year-old boy, picnicking with his family, found some battered $20 bills on the banks of the Columbia River.

The find immediately revived speculation of what happened to D. B. Cooper. There is a group which believes that he made it out of the forest and is now living happily with the ransom money. The FBI believes otherwise. They think the chances are good that he perished.

We may never know. All we do know is Cooper made it out of the plane with all that money, and from there it is up to anyone's imagination to come up with all the possibilities that might exist.

Prematurely Taking Credit

Already Sen. Kennedy is taking credit for a plan to release the American hostages in Iran and President Carter is disputing him.

We hope that soon the proper series of events will occur that will free the hostages.

In the meantime we would hope that our presidential candidates will refrain from prematurely taking credit for the release. For now our total effort should be directed at getting the Americans out of Iran. The campaign can resume afterward.

Generic Drug Law

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The billboards, newspaper ads and radio promotions are already beating the drums for public awareness of the cost savings possible through use of generic drugs.

With North Carolina's new law now in effect just a month and one-half, drugstores — especially the big, chain operations — are pushing substitution of non-brand-name drugs for higher priced brand named ones as a means of saving up to 50 percent on prescription costs.

While it is still too early to tell just how the system is working, the staff of the Governmental Evaluation Commission has concluded that there are several stumbling blocks to the most widespread use of the generic drug substitution system as possible.

Experience in some other states point toward the possibility that drug substitution could be doubled

Two key elements of the drug substitution law were singled out by the staff as possible hindrances to more widespread use of drug substitution:

— North Carolina requires a two-line prescription form to be used by all who prescribe drugs. The signature may be placed above a statement "Product Selection Permitted", or above "Dispense as Written". Many prescribers will take the easy way and sign "Dispense as Written" without making an effort to determine whether substitution is possible, the staff report suggests. A variety of reasons including the press of time, self protection, lack of confidence in some pharmacies to substitute properly, and professional pride are among reasons for this tendency.

—Pharmacists in this state do not have a "formulary" which is essentially a

40 Years Ago Today

NEW YORK — James Thurber has not been leaving his mind alone (as he counseled others to do) — a few years ago in one of those chuckling tones he dashes off at intervals. With the spur and disciplinary guidance of Collaborator Elliott Nugent, he has yanked from his plate one of Broadway's maddest comedies.

What the former wit of Ohio State did for the New Yorker magazine and contemporary literature with his cartoon-and-word sketches, he now has done for the stage with "The Male Animal" — which has playgoers holding their sides but not their pocketbooks.

COVINGTON, KY — When is a drunk not a drunk? Newly elected Police Judge Eugene Benzinger has declared persons adjudged guilty of drunken driving will be dealt with "severely," but at the same time, he warned police officials evidence against such persons must be conclusive.

He directed police to take suspected drunks to a physician for examination and present the physicians certificate in court.

with minor adjustments to the North Carolina law adopted by the 1979 General Assembly and effective January 1 this year.

No Change

No substantive changes in law and procedures on licensing and supervising pharmacists were suggested in the staff report to the Sunset Commission.

Considerable attention was given, however, to the generic drug law. The commission turned down those proposals, with members expressing the feeling that it is both too early to tell how the new law will work, and it is questionable whether the staff of the Sunset Commission is authorized to get into this subject. The commission's role is to study and recommend change or termination of various licensing and supervisory boards and commissions.

WASHINGTON — "FBI Casting Agent Riley speaking."

"Riley, this is Charles Hawkins of the Atlanta office. I hear you're looking for someone to play an Arab sheik in the sequel to 'Operation Abscam.'"

"Where did you hear that?"

"I read it in Variety."

"Damn, we were trying to keep the sequel a secret. What experience do you have?"

"I played a French dope peddler in the 'Marseilles Connection,' a Latin American arms merchant in 'Buenos Dias, Senor Fidel,' a Swiss gnome in 'Goldiggers of 1979' and the brother-in-law of Madame Marcos in 'I'll Take Manila.'"

"I didn't cast any of those stings," Riley said. "How were your reviews?"

"They were fantastic. Listen to this one by Rep. Greensleeves in the Congressional Record, 'FBI agent Hawkins certainly fooled me when I met him on the Eastern shuttle going to New York. He convinced me he was Mao Tse-tung's long-lost son, and gave me $50,000 to put in my briefcase until we got to La Guardia, because he said he didn't trust the stewardesses. I was never so entrapped in my life.'"

Hawkins continued, "Here is one from Newsday on Long Island: 'While the FBI's sting operation in Garden City left a lot to be desired, the casting of Charles Hawkins as a Mafia hit man was a stroke of genius. He brought life and excitement to what could have easily been a cliché role in the hands of a less-talented undercover man. It is a pity that the authors of this scam did not give Hawkins a bigger part. Had they recognized his talent, 'Operation Sticky Fingers' might not have closed on Saturday night."

"I have some more," Hawkins said.

"No, that's okay," Riley replied. "How do you look on video-tape?"

A Hostility In Backyard

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

NASHUA, N.H. — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's attempted new start Jan. 27 failed over the next two weeks to erase backyard suspicion of him here just across the Massachusetts state line, where President Carter now is the substantial favorite in the Feb. 26 New Hampshire Democratic primary.

That is the inescapable conclusion following interviewing last week, with the help of Patrick Caddell's Cambridge Survey research, in a Nashua ward that has proved a barometer for Democratic statewide voting patterns. But Carter's 2-to-1 lead over Kennedy reflects minimum enthusiasm for the president, suggesting trouble ahead in a November showdown with Republican George Bush.

Intense anti-Kennedy feelings combined with mild support for Carter's handling of the Iranian crisis was typified by a 32-year-old instructor at Lowell (Mass.) University: "It's not so much I favor Carter, but that I'm against Kennedy. In a more positive sense, Carter has handled the foreign situations well."

Such sentiment led to these results in interviews with 74 registered voters in Nashua's Ward 9 who intend to vote in the Democratic primary: Carter, 42; Kennedy, 21; Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., 0; Bush (write-in), 1; Republican John Anderson (write-in), 1; undecided, 9.

Ward 9 is Democratic country — white-collar and skilled blue-collar workers, many commuting to Massachusetts jobs. Their votes in the 1972 and 1976 Democratic primaries reflected the statewide totals. But the ward's sentiment has undergone radical transformation the last six months. When we interviewed here last summer just after Carter's Cabinet shakeup, the margin was 6-to-1 for Kennedy over Carter (with the president ahead of unknown Jerry Brown by less than 2-to-1).

Whereas Ward 9 voters last July widely identified Ted Kennedy with his slain brothers and, therefore, better days for America, only four voters last week mentioned the family connection. Out of Carter's 42 voters, 15 volunteered negative feelings about Kennedy as their main reason for supporting the president. The only other widely offered reason for Carter support was the simple fact of incumbency: Although his record is viewed as mediocre, these voters prefer it to Kennedy and Brown.

"The best thing I can say about Carter is three years in the office," a 45-year-old home-health aide told us, "and the others don't look too promising." A 70-year-old retired machinist put it this way: "None of them have said anything to me to indicate they can get us out of the mess, but Carter at least has some experience."

Kennedy's Georgetown University speech did not help him here, where it was broadcast as a commercial. Although 41 of the 74 voters said they watched or heard about it, 12 could remember nothing about it and another eight could remember only Kennedy's preceding televised apology for Chappaquiddick. Of issues raised in Kennedy's speech, these voters favor his wage-price controls proposal nearly 2-to-1, oppose his gasoline rationing scheme by 3-to-2 and favor Carter's draft registration (opposed by Kennedy) by nearly 6-to-1 — going further than Carter and endorsing an immediate draft, 4-to-3.

Carter has no great advantage on the issues. His handling of the Iranian hostage impasse is split between approval and disap-

To the editor:

During the controversy over the Fire-Rescue Department plans, the members of the late volunteer rescue squad tried to inform the public about what was going on without offending anyone. Now, though, the full story must be told. The people have a right and a need to know what is really happening.

If asked, Mayor McGlohn, City Manager Wyatt or Fire Chief Allen will tell you that things inside the Fire-Rescue department are going fine. They will say emergency medical care has not suffered and will even improve. They may even tell you that the EMT-IV program is well on its way toward implementation. These people are misleading you, either intentionally or as a result of being misled themselves.

Actually, fire and rescue personnel are against this new plan. Their morale is at a dismal low and confusion and resentment are running high. Five or six of the best trained pre-hospital emergency care personnel in Greenville will soon be working in other cities or other fields if the new plan holds. Mayor McGlohn said if the men don't like the new plan, they could leave. It looks like that is exactly what they will do. The rescue department cannot stand this kind of drain. Several of the men now I. V. Certified are being removed from rescue work. About half of the men now in the I. V. class have dropped out or are thinking about it. The paid rescue personnel originally pushed this program through resistance from the city. Due to the noncommittal manner in which the city administration has handled this program, the trained men have decided not to begin it.

The city "leaders" have refused to publicly discuss their policy. Why? Are they hiding something? Or do they realize it can't successfully be defended?

Strength For Today

"Now the Lord is that spirit, and where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty."

This is the Biblical version of the Declaration of Independence. It says that liberty is an inner matter, not an outer; that it has to do with the heart rather than with the form of government. People may live under free institutions and yet be slaves if they have not yet freed themselves from the tyranny of evil in their lives.

We may well ask ourselves whether we Americans are really a free people, as we so often insist. America is free if her people are free; and this is the case only if they are free on the inside of their lives. Only political freedom is found in the instrument which Jefferson wrote; spiritual freedom abides in the new spirit that Jesus brought into the world.

Jesus put it succinctly when he said, "If the Son, therefore, shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."

It's Best If You Keep Score

By GAIL MICHAELS

Most women possess a healthy awareness of what they can and cannot do, and those who do not usually underestimate rather than overestimate the extent of their talents. The average housewife may rearrange the furniture, but she seldom rearranges the plumbing. She may volunteer for hazardous duty in a preschool carpool, but that doesn't mean that she will do wheelies in a moving van.

The attitude of most men, on the other hand is anything you can do, I can do better. This philosophy creates conflicts in the best of marriages. Men who have been married 25 years and whose experience in the kitchen has been limited to pouring breakfast cereal will assert that they can load a dishwasher twice as well as their wives because they can get in twice as many dishes. Naturally, the condition of the china at the end of the cycle doesn't concern them.

And as all men know, no woman has ever driven a car as well as her husband. When Phillip accelerates behind a car stopped at a traffic light, he gets angry if I flinch. But when I drive, I am supposed to remain calm during a running commentary that goes something like this: "Car up ahead, slow down — that's right, we're not going to a fire. That light's about to turn. A little jerky on that accelerator, aren't you?" I might be more understanding if he just didn't fill in the pauses with snatches of "Nearer my God to Thee."

His low opinion of my abilities extends to child-rearing. Depending on the discipline problem, I am either too lenient or too inflexible. We were behind schedule the other morning, and I made the mistake of saying, "Well, it's time to receive my battle scar for the day."

"What are you talking about?" he said.

"I'm talking about Meg's congenital aversion to clothes. She thinks that if the angels can wear nightgowns all day, she should be able to. Every time I tell her to get dressed, she has an arsenal of excuses ready for me. And they say women aren't for fit combat."

He swaggered across the room. "The idea is to avoid combat altogether. Let me handle this, and I'll show you. Meg," he called. "Get your clothes on, sweetheart."

It's almost time for school."

"Can't I play a little longer?"

"No."

"But I'm not comfortable in anything but my pajamas."

"I'm sorry, but you must get dressed. Right now."

Ten minutes later, when all she had managed to do was get her pajama pants halfway off, Phillip spanked her. Five minutes after that she was naked as an egg. "Why aren't you dressed yet?" Phillip yelled.

"How can I dress," she sobbed, "when my hands are shaking so bad?"

As he pulled on her clothes, I stuck my head in the room. "Twenty minutes for you. Ten minutes for me."

"You sound as if you're keeping score!" he snapped. "You'd better believe it."

Safety Step

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has called for plans by his administration to construct or otherwise establish a prison that would house only prisoners who cooperate with authorities by informing on other inmates.

Burley Mitchell, secretary of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, said Hunt has instructed him and Corrections Secretary Amos Reed to prepare a study outlining the cost of such a prison. The plan would be submitted later to the General Assembly, Mitchell said.

Mitchell said the plan had been discussed for several months but pointed out that the recent riot in the New Mexico State Penitentiary, where inmates killed several informers, "emphasizes the problem."

"The way we see it, we have three alternatives," Mitchell said. "We can use an existing prison for informers only. We can build an entirely new prison, or we could find some other state-owned building and convert it into a prison for informers."

Mitchell said the plan may go to the General Assembly this year, but he predicted it would be 1981 before the facility could be established.

Seniors Club Held February Meeting

The Moyewood Senior Citizens Club held their monthly meeting Feb. 13 in the Senior Citizen Building located on Fourth Street.

The meeting was opened with a song by Mrs. Mary Johnson followed by scripture and prayer from Mrs. Nellie Leanz and Mrs. Helen Rodgers, respectively. The floor was then opened for business. Minutes of the District 1-A meeting were read by delegate Mrs. Zippy Gatlin. The club then agreed to participate in the Tarboro Senior Citizen Club Easter Social. The social is to be held March 26 at Sunset Memorial Gym, and approximately 25 members will attend.

To commemorate Black History Month the group invited Mrs. Beatrice Maye, media specialist at Aycock Junior High School, Mrs. Selina Forbes, retired teacher, and Edmond Thomas Love.

Mrs. Maye brought pictures of outstanding blacks in Greenville and other distinguished black Americans. After briefly discussing each person, she orally quizzed the group. First prize winner was Mrs. Emma May and Mrs. Hattie Thompson was second prize winner.

Mrs. Forbes played the Negro anthem "Lift Every Voice and Sing" and the group joined in. Love dramatized "The Creation" by James Weldon Johnson.

Mrs. Virginia Vines encouraged the grandparents to get involved in the school PTA meetings. Mrs. Beatrice Maye in her closing remarks encouraged the group to read the editorial page of the newspaper.

Mrs. Forbes closed by stressing the need for more black involvement in the city. Refreshments were then served to the fifty people present.

proval, and he has only a narrow margin of support on his response to Afghanistan (with a substantial minority saying he reacted "too weakly"). He and Kennedy get equal marks on both defense and domestic policies. Incredibly, these voters, by a 3-to-1 margin, perceive Kennedy as tougher on the Russians. By 2-to-1, they reject Carter's argument that he cannot now debate Kennedy.

What is poisoning Kennedy in Ward 9 is the destructive perception of his personal integrity. By nearly 4-to-1, these voters consider Carter more trustworthy, and half believe Kennedy lied about Chappaquiddick.

Kennedy's only bright spot here is greater intensity by his supporters, all of them solidly pro-Kennedy; seven of Carter's 42 supporters only lean toward him. Some Kennedy backers complained about Carter's new emphasis on foreign affairs. "Kennedy would do something for the working people right here at home," said the 44-year-old wife of a construction worker.

That spells potential November trouble for Carter in Ward 9 if Bush is nominated. Favorable ratings among voters interviewed were Carter, 67 percent; Kennedy, 45 percent; Brown, 16 percent; Ronald Reagan, 16 percent; Sen. Howard Baker, 42 percent. The stunner is what these 74 Democrats think about Republican Bush; 68 percent favorable.

"Carter is doing nothing," said a 29-year-old tavern manager, who would vote for Bush against the president in November. A 50-year-old air traffic controller will write Bush's name in the Democratic primary.

New Chancellor Plans Changes

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — William E. Moran, new chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, Thursday announced plans for an administrative reorganization at the school that includes performance reviews and the addition of a new position.

Moran, who has been chancellor for about six months, outlined his proposed changes during a meeting of the school's board of trustees.

He told trustees it will take at least three years to implement some of the changes.

Under the proposal, performance reviews will be given to deans of the six professional schools and the dean of the College of Arts and Sciences every five years to determine whether their contracts should be renewed.

Department heads already are under such a policy but currently there are no restrictions on the length of employment of deans. Moran said existing annual reviews on the strengths and weaknesses of deans will continue.

The details of the policy have not yet been completed.

Moran also said a vice chancellor for administration and planning and an assistant to the chancellor currently are being sought. The new vice chancellor will have major responsibilities in budgeting and financial management.

Moran said his eventual transfer of budget responsibilities from the office of the vice chancellor for business affairs will give him more control over the budget.

Also as a part of his reorganization, Moran wants an annual review of the school's budget, with special emphasis on the use of existing funds to determine whether they are being used "as shrewdly and skillfully as we would like." He said he is studying the possibility of creating a new position for a person who would handle physical planning needs of the university.

Clogging Class Set In Grifton

GRIFTON — A series of six clogging classes will begin the last week of February in Grifton, according to Joe Fordham, Entertainment Coordinator for the 1980 Grifton Shad Festival.

The classes will be sponsored by the Shad Festival with the help of a Grassroots Art grant from the North Carolina Arts Council, and will be free. All ages may attend, and any interested person, of any age, is invited to participate.

The purpose is to offer area citizens an opportunity to learn to clog so that they may enjoy participating in the clogging and square dancing at the Grifton Shad Festival in April. This popular event of the Shad Festival will be on Saturday afternoon, April 19, after the fish fry.

Classes will be offered on a weekday evening. Exact days, hour, and location will be announced next week in area media.

Two From Pitt Made All-A's

GREENSBORO — Two students from Pitt County are among the 322 undergraduates at UNC-Greensboro who made all A's at the end of the first semester. These students are: Julie M. Longhill, an anthropology major, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Longhill of 307-B Eastbrook Drive, Greenville; and Patience E. Bosley, a biology major, daughter of David E. Bosley of Box 531, Dupont St., Grifton.

Three other Pitt County students attained the dean's list (with an academic average of 3.5 or better) during the semester: Jill P. Cutler, major undecided, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Cutler of Route 2, Box 250-C, Farmville; Barbara E. Brewer, an early childhood education major, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy E. Brewer of 235 Leon Drive, Greenville; and Crystal L. Hearne, a music education major, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Walter Hearne of 107 Greenbriar Drive, Greenville.

A trip to the Hillsborough area to visit antique shops and a museum containing antique cars and music machines was planned for Saturday, March 1.

The next meeting will be Tuesday, March 11 at 7:30 p.m. in the home of Francis Belcik, G-5 Oakmont Square Apartments. For information contact Mrs. Martha Elmore at 752-3456.

CLUB ANNIVERSARY
St. James Church Aid Club will observe its anniversary Sunday at 5 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Public Sees New Library

PACTOLUS — The new library/media center at Pactolus School was open for public inspection Tuesday.

The event was part of the school PTA meeting. About 100 parents, teachers, and other interested citizens visited the new facility.

Mrs. Kormegie, library/media person at Pactolus said the new facility is a welcome addition. The library was housed in the gymnasium prior to the completion. Before that, a large classroom was used.

Keynote speaker for the occasion was Ott Alford, Superintendent of the Pitt County Schools. He stressed the importance of each school library/media program. Each can be an effective resource for students and teachers, he said. He also pointed out that the library/media center can be an influential factor in the development of a student's educational career.

Nominated For School

Thirteen tenth and 11th grade students have been nominated from Pitt County for Governor's School selection.

Ott Alford, superintendent of Pitt County Schools, said the students recommended from four area high schools are: Elizabeth Leigh Costello, Mark Keith Anderson, Cynthia Lynn Harris, Margaret Ruth Joyner, Patricia Dean McDermott and Michael Andy McDermott, all of Ayden-Grifton; Henry Bonner Tate and Pamela Sue Joyner, both of D. H. Conley; Karen Deneen Liverman and Tony Brent Hathaway of Farmville Central; and Michael Lambert Brown, Ellie Frances Lunsford, and Mary Angela Carroll, North Pitt High School.

Nominations are based on excellence in achievement, ability, creativity, and leadership characteristics in academic and cultural arts areas.

A statewide committee will make final selections of students to attend the summer program at Salem College in Winston-Salem or at St. Andrews College, Laurinburg.

catalog in which are listed all brand and generic drugs so that equivalent products can be chosen.

Given the number of drugs available, the book would be thick and bulky, would have to be updated constantly, and would create debate between physicians, pharmacists, and drug makers over what should be included.

More Use

Without a formulary, druggists cannot know all the substitutions which are possible, and tend to fill prescriptions conservatively.

The effect of the staff suggestion would have been that the physician or other prescriber would permit the pharmacist to substitute a generic drug for a brand-named one, unless the prescription contained a specific notation to the contrary. Druggists at a recent hearing on the matter opposed that approach, rejecting the need for a formulary and defending the present system which places the decision on the physician.

Paul Jordan, executive director of the Sunset Commission staff, said experience in other states has shown that use of generic drug substitution has generally run around 20 percent when restrictions are in use; but when pharmacists are provided a formulary and freedom to substitute, use has jumped to nearly 50 percent. That increase would save North Carolinians several million dollars each year, he said.

The Sunset Commission asked the Pharmacy Board to keep a close watch on the generic drug law in operation, and report back in March, 1981, with information on how well it is working, and how much use is being made of it.

Nixon's Next Plan Consecrating New Book Said Music, Media Building Controversial

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Richard Nixon's third book, to be released May 1, is a controversial one, he says, containing statements such as "World War III began before World War II ended and it's going on today."

The great advantage about writing a book like this, as one not seeking political office, is one can be totally objective and I can without question write a controversial book," Nixon said in a copyright interview published Wednesday by the San Clemente Sun-Post.

"The Real War" touches on energy, China, Vietnam and Africa and gives a strong overview of the Mideast situation, Nixon said.

In his final days at San Clemente, Nixon said he had made some changes in the galleys to make his views on the Iranian hostage situation as topical as possible.

The book analyzes what has happened in global power politics in the recent past, what has worked and what has not, and what power the United States must have — including military power, economic power and will power, Nixon said.

The interview was conducted last Friday, the day before the 67-year-old Nixon and his wife Pat moved out of their 29-acre seaside estate which served as the Western White House during his presidency and as home in the years that followed his August 1974 resignation.

Nixon said he was looking forward to the move to New York and other plans for 1980, "but how are you going to beat a place as beautiful as this?" he added, looking out the window of his office to waves breaking on the nearby beach.

The former president said other plans for 1980 include unspecified summer speaking engagements in Europe and visits to homes of friends in California and Florida.

The Casa Pacifica estate has been purchased by three Orange County businessmen.

Nixon said the book would be serialized by the New York Times syndicate, starting sometime in mid-April.

The new Music and Media Building of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church will be consecrated in ceremonies Sunday at 11 a.m. by Dr. James H. Bailey, minister.

The ceremony will mark the end of a three-year effort beginning when the Administrative Board appointed a study committee to discuss proposed expansion program chaired by Dr. J. Edwin Clement.

More space was needed for the music facilities, the church library and the old library was no longer adequate, according to the committee's findings. A perpetual gift of at least $6,000 a year was received for new books in 1976.

In May, 1978, the Administrative Board accepted Dr. Clement's report that a new Music and Library Building was recommended and that it would be built in the center courtyard, which is located between the sanctuary and the educational building.

Michael G. Martin, who was chairman of the Building Committee was appointed to obtain preliminary design and estimates to modify the courtyard for the project. Martin recommended a $225,000 building expansion which was approved by the church conference.

With $37,000 from memorial gifts and a will-bequest, $90,000 in bonds and $88,000 in pledges for a five-year term, Ralph C. Tucker, chairman of the financial campaign, said contracts were accepted and construction was made possible. Ground was broken for the new building June 26, 1979.

Construction is scheduled to be completed this week. A library committee will then begin to move 3,000 titles to the new 1,155 square-foot Media Center. There will be a reading room divided into sections for children and adults, an audio-visual room, a workroom and closet.

The children's section is furnished with bright colors, trimmed with stuffed animals (including a five-foot stuffed whale), a real wasp nest, a lighted doll house, Willy The Book Worm and children's works of art. The library has a film section, cassette tape section, "swap shelf," a solid reference section for Bible study and a section on Methodism and church history.

Mrs. Hugh Tom Patterson of Greenville started the library in 1963. Each week she correlates the library program with the Church School curriculum. She recently featured a first century Palestinian home model.

The music center consists of a choir room with 798 square feet, additional music room space divided into sections for handbell choirs, office and robing room for a total of 1,591 square feet.

The music building joins the sanctuary and will provide performance facilities for the Greenville area. Music directors are Ed Glenn, director of the East Carolina University Glee Club, Mrs. William E. Tripp Jr. and Terry Leggett.

Mike Martin will cut the ribbons and a covered-dish luncheon for the church congregation and guests will be served in the fellowship hall. Tours will be conducted from 1 p.m. until 3 p.m. during an open house.

Music Center tour guides will include Ed Glenn, chairman; Dr. Clement, Mrs. William E. Tripp Jr., Mrs. Dick Douglas, Mrs. Bernie Colardo, Mrs. Henry C. Ferrell Jr., Mrs. Sam Underwood, Mickey Terry and Byron Franklin.

Tour guides in the media center will include Mrs. Ralph Tucker, chairman; Donald Collins, Mrs. Phoebe Owens, Mrs. Al Conley, Mrs. Frank Kirkland, Mrs. Patterson, Mrs. William L. Johnson, Mrs. Ben Rives Mann, and Mrs. Donald Collins.

The public is invited to attend, and a nursery will be provided. The church is located at 510 S. Washington St.

Medical Practice Study Proposal Voted Down

A proposal to spend $72,985 in federal funds on a study looking into the development of a pre-paid group medical practice in Craven County was voted down by the governing body of the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency at their Feb. 13 meeting in Greenville.

The group cited the cost of the study, possible duplication of the study statewide, and an insufficient population base to make the study conclusive as reasons for disapproval. The health maintenance organization would have served as an alternative to health insurance, providing medical services for a fixed, pre-paid fee.

Other proposals considered by the ECHSA were approved. For Pitt County Memorial Hospital, lease of space from the Holiday Inn approved for a 20-bed Minimal Care Unit. Decriminalization Grants were made to Duplin-Sampson Mental Health and Mental Retardation Service, Roanoke-Chowan Mental Health Service, and Pitt County Mental Health Center. Other grants were made to the Neuse Mental Health Center, and Plain View Health Services.

Two new members were approved by the governing body of the ECHSA. Robert Alligood, Supt. of Washington County Schools will represent Washington County. Bob Parker, who has represented Bertie County with the group, will represent Northampton County.

Fire-Rescue Plan....

nel while it was organized, questioned the sensitivity of the Council members as to the need for rescue services. He said that he did not feel the matter has been discussed as well as it should and a public hearing is needed.

Another former volunteer, Paul Gallagher, also endorsed the proposal to have a special meeting on the matter. He said that he attended last year's meeting when the decision was made by the former Council and he felt the purpose of the Council's action then was to allow things to work out. Gallagher said that things are not working out and as a result the system will lose "a number of well trained men."

A spokesman for the Chamber of Commerce, Susan Nobles, recalled that last June the chamber recommended that the Council adopt a plan of fully integrating the fire and rescue system. She said that the chamber, as of yesterday, still supported that decision and backed the present Council on the need for an integrated system.

Mrs. Nobles said that the chamber feels there is a need, however, for more public information and she encouraged a public hearing or the issuance of public information.

Former Councilwoman Mildred McGrath suggested that if nothing can be done to improve the situation as it now exists, the rescue effort should be turned back to the county commissioners and "let them call the shots."

McGlohon restated the Council's pride in and appreciation for the paid and volunteer rescue services provided here. He said that as long as the city provides emergency medical services, the "quality of service will continue to grow."

The mayor said that a year ago, only 12 persons were certified as Emergency Medical Technicians

Southport Reactor Idle

SOUTHPORT, N.C. (AP) — A reactor at Carolina Power & Light Co.'s Brunswick nuclear plant remained out of service Thursday and is not expected to resume operation until Saturday.

Mac Harris, public relations officer for CP&L, said the No. 2 reactor at the plant shut down Wednesday when a workman who was adjusting an instrument apparently jarred two other sensitive instruments. He said the reactor automatically shut down.

Harris said the unit had been expected to be back in service by Thursday morning but that the company was conducting further tests on the reactor. It was expected to be operating on Saturday.

Harris said the shutdown caused the release of low levels of radioactive gases into a containment building, but he said no gases were released into the atmosphere. About 40 workers left the building after the shutdown.

The No. 1 reactor was not affected and remained in service.

CP&L stock closed on the New York stock exchange Wednesday at 16 1/2.

The shares represent an 11.1 percent increase in the amount of CP&L common stock outstanding. At a price of 16 1/2, and with a dividend of $2.08 per year, the stock yields a 12.3 percent return.

Sherwood H. Smith, president of CP&L, said Wednesday the sale was "part of the company's planned program of raising new outside capital in order to finance our operations and construction program."

Spur Trade Zones Move

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Business and political officials Thursday pushed for a foreign trade zone in Charlotte.

Appearing at a public hearing before the federal Foreign Trade Zone Board, speakers advocated the zone as a location where businesses could enjoy some freedom from duties and import quotas.

Supporters argued that a zone would encourage more foreign firms to establish manufacturing or distributing operations in Charlotte and thus create new jobs.

A three-man panel, headed by Hugh Dolan, heard the appeal for a zone and will forward a recommendation to the full board. "It's evident," Dolan said after the last witness had testified, "that a lot of thoughtful effort and work has gone into this project."

The Charlotte zone would be North Carolina's first. There are 53 others, including zones in South Carolina and Virginia, already in operation. Other areas in North Carolina have been discussing establishing such zones.

It could be three months before the board and Commerce Secretary Philip Klutznick rule on the petition, submitted officially by the N.C. Department of Commerce, a spokesman for the federal board said.

NOTICE OF DANGER

To the person or persons who shoplifted the silverplated coffee pot from our show window on Saturday, February 9. Do not use this coffee pot! It was for display only, not for sale.

The coffee pot is coated with asentium, a silver brightening agent that is deadly poisonous if swallowed. If you have already used the pot, see your physician immediately. Reaction time is eight to twelve days.

Further warning: If the pot is left in a dark place for any length of time, the asentium will burst into flaming particles which will fly in every direction, igniting all things they touch.

Also, lengthy exposure to temperatures higher than 55 degrees will cause the asentium to "crustate" upon the silver, resulting in the emission of odorless but fatally poisonous vapours.

Our best advice to you is to bury the coffee pot deep in the ground, as far away from your house as you can. Or else, using gloves, wrap it in foil and mail it back to us so that we can remove the asentium with manufacturer-approved Asentidote. That way, you'll be doing yourself and your neighbors a favor, and also salving your conscience.

Otherwise, God help you.

No Proposal On Insurance Rates

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt Thursday refused to say what plan he supports for regulation of automobile liability insurance rates.

Indicating he favored some type of change in North Carolina's regulation of the insurance agency, Hunt said he would not put forth his own proposal during the 1980 political season.

He said the issue should be delayed until the 1981 General Assembly and not be taken up during the short 1980 session.

"I think you'll see a lot of alternatives suggested during the course of the election year," Hunt said.

His major opponent in the Democratic primary for governor, former Gov. Bob Scott, has endorsed a reinstatement of the insurance commissioner's authority to block auto policy rate increases.

The 1977 General Assembly, in a move bitterly fought by Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, revamped the insurance law to allow companies to apply their increases while appealing rulings by the commissioner rejecting those increases.

In 1979, the Legislature declined to restore Ingram's powers.

Hunt did not take a position on the issue during those sessions but has charged since then that the insurance industry is "subverting" that legislation by applying increases above the 6 percent annual legal limit on rate hikes.

Hunt, who said he has not ruled out supporting restoration of the commissioner's full powers, added he wants to consider other alternatives, such as a rating commission.

Hunt declined to comment on recent upheavals in Ingram's department, which saw his two chief deputies resign or be fired within a week earlier this month, but he said some of those who left were "very good, effective people."

Cornelia Stages A Fund-Raiser

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — In this prestigious island city where the rich and powerful are quick to close ranks, a newcomer is about to pull off a black-tie fund-raiser where political bigwigs and national celebrities will gather to toast sobriety.

The newcomer to Palm Beach society is former Alabama first lady Cornelia Wallace, who is staging a benefit tonight to honor former Arkansas Rep. Wilbur Mills' fifth anniversary without a drink.

Six hundred people at $150 a plate, or $1,500 a table, were expected and the guest list reads like a Who's Who of Dixie politics. The money goes to the Palm Beach Institute, that has helped such people as Mills and Mrs. Wallace's mother, Ruby Folsom, combat alcoholism.

Study Energy In Weeds, Grasses

WEST JEFFERSON, Ohio (UPI) — A research laboratory in West Jefferson Battelle Columbus Laboratories is sponsoring research into the use of commonly found weeds and grasses as renewable energy sources, according to a report in the energy-industry publication "Energy User News."

Among the plants being grown to determine their energy potential are milkweed, ragweed, and orchard grass.

Fight Findings In FBI Sting

By ED McHALE
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Gov. Edwin Edwards says he didn't take any money from a government informant who said the insurance company he claimed to represent could spend $50,000 a month for help in winning a state contract.

Edwards testified about his meeting with Joseph Hauser, posing as an insurance agent, at the opening session Thursday of federal grand jury hearings on suspected labor and government corruption.

However, Hauser did pay $10,000 to Louis Lambert's unsuccessful 1979 campaign for governor by purchasing tickets to a testimonial dinner, Lambert's lawyer, Camille Gravel, acknowledged. Lambert has denied any wrongdoing.

Lambert, Lt. Gov. James Fitzmorris and Lt. Gov.-elect Bobby Freeman also appeared before the grand jury Thursday, but would not comment on their testimony.

In the Briab — for bribery — labor — operation, FBI agents and Hauser allegedly offered payments to government officials and others in Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas to try to win insurance contracts for Prudential Insurance Co.

Prudential has said it did not know its name was being used.

At a news conference, the governor said he met Hauser, who has been identified as an FBI informant, in mid-November 1979 at the request of Lambert, who was in a run-off campaign for governor against Republican David Treen.

Treen won the election and takes office next month.

Edwards said he noticed Hauser was recording their conversation. He also became suspicious when Hauser predicted his company would be the successful low bidder on the state's insurance contract and then said the company could pay $50,000 a month to help get the business.

"If he was going to be low bidder, there was no reason for him to say he had to pay off anyone," Edwards said.

"Hauser didn't ask me to do anything," Edwards said. "He just said he was going to save us a million dollars.... He was supposed to come back with the contribution but he never returned. He must have gotten suspicious."

Meanwhile in Houston, the Briab grand jury probe is being delayed until March when Texas House Speaker William Clayton will testify. U.S. Attorney J.A. Canales said he will excuse the panel after today's session and recall them next month.

Clayton, who has acknowledged receiving "a political contribution" of $5,000 from L.G. Moore, regional director of the Operating Engineers International union, had asked Canales to delay his appearance. Clayton has said he did nothing wrong.

New Phase In RIF Is Begun

FARMVILLE — The second-year phase of the Farmville Junior Woman's Club Reading is Fundamental (RIF) program got underway this morning at Sam D. Bundy Primary School.

Each of the 600 children in the school was given a book of his or her choice by the club, which began the three-year project last year. The children were also entertained with a magic show.

On hand for the reading celebration were Congressman Walter B. Jones and State Rep. Sam D. Bundy, both Farmville residents; Farmville Mayor Linwood Mercer; Madeline McElveen from Gov. Jim Hunt's office; and Steve Hawfield, of UNC-Charlotte.

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Jerry L. Gwaltney, who has served as city manager of Concord since 1978, has resigned his position in an apparent disagreement with city officials about the authority of his office.

Price-Surge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a welcome drop in food costs, wholesale prices surged 1.6 percent in January, the biggest monthly jump since November 1974, the Labor Department reported today.

The steep increase was propelled by sharply higher gasoline and home heating oil prices, which wiped out a substantial decline in food prices, the department said.

Shortly after the figures were announced, the Federal Reserve Board increased its bank discount rate by a full percentage point to 13 percent, a clear reflection of its concern over worsening inflation. The move is sure to send interest rates higher throughout the economy.

The stock market fell sharply in early trading as investors noted the unpleasant inflation news and the Federal Reserve's action. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slid 10.24 points to 883.53 in the first half hour of trading.

Changes in wholesale or producer prices often show up within weeks at retail outlets, thus affecting consumer pocketbooks.

January's 1.6 percent jump nearly doubled December's revised 0.9 percent increase, worsening the nation's inflation.

Rally Security Cost $52,294

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Security provided by the City of Greensboro for the Feb. 2 anti-Ku Klux Klan rally cost $52,294, City Manager Tom Osborne said Thursday.

City officials also estimated that federal and state expenses in providing Highway Patrolmen and National Guardsmen would run about $100,000, about the same as it cost for a funeral march Nov. 11 for five communists slain during another anti-Klan rally in early November.

The city paid out $85,000 during the funeral march.

"Except for the problems the plan presents with scheduling and class loads, it seems acceptable," said Alford.

"We've got something here that allows us self-containment, but yet some type of tight grouping. When you consider the alternative, which is heterogenous grouping, the plan appears very sound," commented Lewis.

"We are not really that far away from where we're supposed to be," added McKnight.

According to Superintendent Alford, "The important thing is that we will be grouping according to achievement based on educationally fair, unbiased testing and teacher evaluation. The groups will be designed to meet the needs of each group."

Rift Over Drafting A Middle East Position

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

A rift has developed between U.S. Jewish leaders and the National Council of Churches over its approach to drafting a new policy position on the Middle East and the conflict over Israel.

Jewish organizations, including all three U.S. wings of Judaism and various service agencies, are boycotting hearings on the matter, charging they are onesidedly loaded against Israel.

Formulation of the "Issues for Consideration" amounts to a "gross and deliberate misrepresentation of fact and history," 14 national Jewish bodies said in rejecting invitations to the hearings.

The Rev. James Rudin, assistant interreligious affairs director of the American Jewish Committee, said the agenda shows "hostility and bias" against Israel and applies a "double standard" of judging Israel harshly but not judging Palestinian acts at all.

It reflects a "pro-Arab and pro-PLO (Palestine Liberation Organization) stance," said the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

Officials of the National Council, a cooperative organization including most major U.S. Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations, insist the agenda is balanced.

It was designed to provide a process "in which all viewpoints could be expressed," says the Rev. Tracey K. Jones of the United Methodist Church, chairman of the study panel.

All 17 national Jewish groups invited declined invitations to attend panel hearings Wednesday in Washington, D.C., and last week in New York.

"Their opinion is their own, but looking at it from a Protestant viewpoint, I would say they're justified in objecting that the cards were stacked against them," says the Rev. Carl Hermann Voss of Jacksonville, Fla. "The questions are loaded with prejudice, misrepresentation and lack of objectivity and comprehensiveness of the total picture."

The issue between the council and Jewish bodies surfaced last November when the Antiochian Orthodox Archdiocese of North America, made up of Arab Christians, proposed a resolution accusing Israel of violating human rights, and demanding an end of U.S. aid to Israel.

The council's governing board, involving 32 denominations totaling more than 40 million members, shelved the proposal and set up the study process to develop a new policy on the Middle East.

The council's present position, adopted in 1969, affirms the right of Israel to exist in secure borders and also the right of Palestinians to self-determination and nationhood.

Even before the Jewish boycott of the hearings, tensions

Bible Program Begins Sunday

The Youth Bible Class of Phillippi Church of Christ will hold a series of classes entitled "A Walk Through the Bible." The class, under the direction of Mrs. Mary Spell, will present Part I of "The Creation," at 3 p.m. Sunday.

The Rev. Elbert Williams invites the public to attend.

DEACONS CELEBRATE

The deacons of Burneys Chapel F.W.B. Church will be celebrating their anniversary at 3 p.m. Sunday in the church at Black Jack. The pastor, Rev. J. H. Wilkes, urges all deacons and members to attend.

had been brewing. A study for the American Jewish Committee last year reported "pro-Arab elements in key positions" in some denominations, although polls found most American Christians sympathetic to Israel.

Eyes have been called the windows of the soul. Clarity, expression and size — all of these are supposed to reveal character. A child's eyes seem innocent. But small, closely-placed eyes may also indicate deception. Some even say that you can tell a criminal by his eyes.

Calling it nonsense, even scientists find it hard to dispel the old wives' tales that have persisted for centuries.

Eyes, in a certain sense, can be the windows of the soul — precious windows through which you look at life. Don't judge another man by his eyes. Look instead through eyes of understanding and compassion, for in God's sight we are all equal. If your inner vision has been a bit faulty lately, why not start going to church next Sunday?

Immune Deficiency Boy Will Be Celebrating Third Birthday

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Ricky celebrates his third birthday Saturday in virtually the only world he has ever known — a special isolation room at Duke Hospital.

He is the victim of a severe combined immune deficiency, a rare hereditary condition that prevents his body from fighting common disease organisms.

Dr. Rebecca Buckley, professor of pediatrics at Duke, has been trying to build up Ricky's natural resistance to illness by injecting him with fetal liver, which contains the disease-fighting white blood cells he cannot produce on his own.

In 1974, that treatment succeeded with Ricky's older brother, Jamie, 7, who lives at home in Ohio. Jamie now has almost normal immunities and is the world's longest surviving fetal-liver transplant recipient, Ms. Buckley said.

"From a clinical and physical standpoint, Ricky's condition is excellent," she said. "But in spite of five transplants, his immune function is still insufficient for us even to consider letting him out of his sterile environment."

When asked what Ricky's chances are for being discharged, she paused and said, "We hope they are good."

The disease is the same ailment that has kept David, a Texas child, in a "bubble house" and space-suit isolation for his first eight years.

Before the development of fetal-liver treatments, all victims except David died unless a brother or sister could donate compatible bone marrow that would cure their condition.

Doctors at Duke are concerned about Ricky's social development as much as they are his physical development.

Dr. Raymond Sturmer and Ms. Buckley have been exploring the possibility of obtaining a special isolation suit, which would allow the youngster to leave his room from time to time.

Ricky watches television, firmly says "no meat" when given meat for dinner and has picked up disco dancing steps from the gown and gloved nurses who watch over him.

His most welcome present at Christmas was a record player, which had to be sterilized before it was allowed into his room.

"Ricky is doing amazingly well for his situation," said Sturmer. "Although he has some difficulty with feeding, his intelligence has been developing within normal ranges, and the speech and hearing specialists have helped him a lot with his speech."

The doctors think Ricky now most needs "parenting." His parents, whose names haven't been released by the hospital, live too far away for frequent visits. They are looking for a person who can spend time with him regularly.

"Right now, he has about 20 'mothers,' but none of them can spend the entire day with him and give him the consistent guidance he needs during this important period," said Sturmer.

'New Generation' Is Attacked In Burke

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — A group of concerned Burke County taxpayers who oppose the state's New Generation Act want county commissioners to defeat local implementation of the program.

The "Concerned Citizens of Burke County" says it will petition the county board to reject the plan on grounds that it would encourage government intrusion into the family.

It said the act will include "family-planning services, including pregnancy testing, sex education and contraceptives available to all sexually active persons regardless of age."

At least three commissioners expressed opposition to the act in December. The group said it will ask the commissioners to

Premier Of Poland Fired

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Piotr Jaroszewicz has been fired as Poland's premier, apparently because of discontent over his economic policies.

His ouster became public when the eighth Polish Party Congress omitted Jaroszewicz from its list of Politburo members. His removal from the politburo automatically meant he lost his post as premier.

Jaroszewicz, 70, who became premier ten years ago, suffered a heart attack early in 1979 and returned to his desk after a long convalescence.

His ouster was not entirely unexpected. Observers noted his conspicuous silence at the congress where he was scheduled to speak Tuesday, but did not.

Several other speakers indirectly accused him and his government of mismanagement and held him responsible for Poland's precarious economic situation.

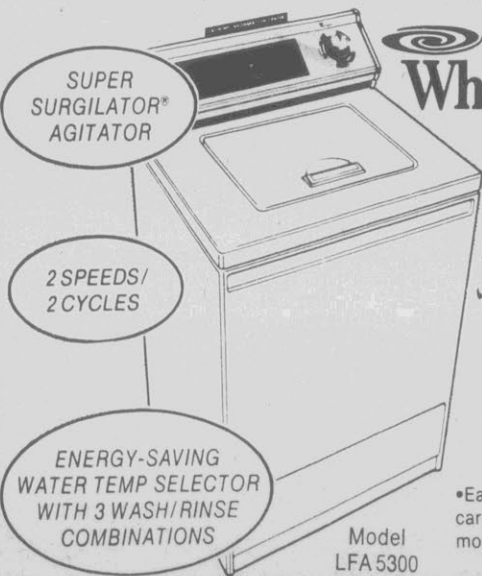

Another indication that Jaroszewicz had fallen from party favor were television transmissions from the congress showing party leader Edward Gierek in close-ups, ignoring Jaroszewicz who sat right next to him.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market fell sharply again today, faced with some unpleasant inflation news and a new credit-tightening move by the Federal Reserve.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials tumbled 10.24 to 883.53 in the first half hour.

Losers outnumbered gainers by close to a 3-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Before the opening the Labor Department reported that its producer price index rose at a 19.2 percent seasonally adjusted annual rate in January. That marked the biggest increase for the index of wholesale prices for finished goods in more than 5 1/2 years.

A short while later the Federal Reserve raised its discount rate — the rat it charges on loans to its member commercial banks — from 12 to 13 percent.

The Fed said the credit-tightening measure was prompted by recent inflationary pressures, including rising prices of imported oil.

Today's early prices included General Foods, down 1/4 at 28; U.S. Steel, off 1/2 at 20 1/4, and Eastman Kodak, up 1/4 at 47.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 10.07 to 883.77.

Declines outnumbered advances by a 5-2 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 50.54 million shares, against 65.23 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index lost 95 to 66.82.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 6.36 to 281.38.

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Three alleged titans of the nation's $4 billion hardcore pornography market are fighting federal charges today as a result of yet another FBI undercover "sting."

The three, along with a fourth man who dropped dead only moments before FBI agents arrived to arrest him, allegedly dominated a burgeoning market for magazines and films with such titles as "Three in a Tub," "Debbie Does Dallas," and "Hot and Saucy Pizza Girls."

"This wiped out the whole top echelon of the pornography business in this country, and that's never happened before," said one knowledgeable source who requested anonymity.

"Hopefully, this is going to have a major impact on the pornography business," said William Nettles, the Miami FBI agent who coordinated the investigation. "These are the biggies."

The dead man and one of the alleged kingpins have been linked with the crime syndicate the FBI calls La Cosa Nostra.

FBI men worked undercover for more than two years, posing as smut dealers themselves and fending off threats of violence, as they painstakingly penetrated the highest levels of pornography distribution rings, the FBI said.

As the undercover phase ended Thursday, prosecutors went before a grand jury in Miami and won indictments against the four and 41 others on charges of interstate trafficking in obscene materials.

The alleged kingpins named in the indictments: —Reuben Sturman, 55, a millionaire resident of the posh Cleveland suburb of Shaker Heights. The son of a Russian immigrant, he built a fortune from a start as a comic book salesman. Forbes magazine in 1978 called him "the number one merchant of sex in the United States."

—Michael "Mickey" Zaffarano, 67, alleged boss of an East Coast pornography distribution ring based in New York. He died of an apparent heart attack only minutes before agents arrived to arrest him Thursday. Law enforcement officials have identified him as a captain in the syndicate family of Joseph Bonanno and the late Carmine Galante.

—Robert "Debe" DiBernardo, 42, of New York, described by authorities as a major East Coast pornography wholesaler. Law enforcement officials say he is a member of the New Jersey syndicate family of Simone "Sam the Plumb" er" DeCavalcante.

—Harry Virgil Mohny, 37, of Durand, Mich., near Detroit. Mohny allegedly controls numerous Midwest pornography operations.

Sturman and DiBernardo were arrested Thursday.

The pornography investigation was but one of many prongs in the FBI's huge and unprecedented attack on organized crime, white-collar crime and corruption through the use of undercover "sting" operations in which agents pose as crooks to catch real crooks.

The latest "sting" — code-named Miport for Miami-pornography — was likely to produce a major test of obscenity laws.

'Alternative' Energy Source Plan Shapes Up

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Robert H. Koger, chairman of the state Utilities Commission, says the group is nearing an agreement on the structure of a proposed corporation to develop alternative energy sources in North Carolina.

Koger told the Legislature's Utility Review Committee that the corporation eventually might include participation from natural gas companies.

He says the corporation might be set up for electric companies by mid-March.

The idea for the N.C. Alternative Energy Corp. came from a Duke Power Co. rate case last fall. The commission then set aside about $1 million a year of Duke's rate hike to fund such a corporation.

Koger said there eventually might be three branches of the corporation — one for electric companies, natural gas companies and one for research composed of the existing N.C. Energy Research Institute.

Beg Pardon, My Pants Missing

BAY CITY, Mich. (AP) — Marshall Bennett strolled into a county commission meeting wearing only a barrel and a chilly scowl and demanded reimbursement for his trousers. Bennett told the monthly meeting of Bay County's lawmakers that his troubles began in July when he was released from the county jail after serving a 75-day sentence for concealing stolen property.

His three-piece suit was returned, Bennett said, minus the pants. And eight appearances before various county officials failed to earn any reimbursement.

The commission turned the matter over to the county executive's office.

Claim CIA Supplying Arms To Afghan Rebels

By The Associated Press

The CIA reportedly has opened a secret supply line to funnel small arms and antitank weapons across the Pakistani border to the Moslem rebels battling Soviet troops in Afghanistan.

Today's editions of the Washington Post quoted unidentified sources as saying the United States started supplying weapons to the anti-communist rebels after the Soviets began pouring an estimated 90,000 troops into Afghanistan on Christmas Day.

Prior to the Soviet military intervention, the United States secretly supplied the rebels with small amounts of medicine and communications equipment, the paper said.

The Post claimed the weapons being sent to the rebels were manufactured by the Soviets. That presumably meant they were drawn from the stockpiles of military hardware captured by the United States during the Vietnam war.

There was no official confirmation of the Post's disclosures, which came one day after Egypt, America's closest Arab supporter in the Middle East, revealed that it was training Afghan rebels and would arm them before sending them home to fight Soviet troops.

Egyptian Defense Minister Kamal Hassan Ali said President Anwar Sadat approved the training program last month. Ali would not say how many rebels were involved or where they were being trained.

Saving Souls Is Only Aim

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Church plans to spend $50,000 for a media blitz aimed at saving souls and building church membership.

Calling the media "a vital avenue to spread the Lord's word," Bishop Robert M. Blackburn of Raleigh said the campaign was not designed to compete with such "electronic church" programs as Oral Roberts and the PTL Club.

"We want to be a part of that, too," Blackburn said. The campaign will include advertisements in newspapers and on radio and television, billboards and bumper stickers, Blackburn said.

The highlight of the campaign will be two week-long revivals in each church in the Southeast that is a member of the Southeastern Jurisdictional Council of Ministries.

The Southeast Jurisdiction, which represents about three million United Methodists in the Southeast, has entitled the campaign "Proclaim the Word."

The campaign is aimed at getting inactive Methodists back into the church as well as gaining new members, Blackburn said.

The bill for the media campaign will be paid by donations from individual churches and by a special offering collected at each church.

Blackburn said the revivals will be held during the last weeks of February and March, during Lent.

Held Guilty Of Cover-Up

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — A former Manteo Town Board member was convicted Thursday of aiding an attempt to cover up a hit-and-run accident in which a Dare County man was killed a year ago.

Malcolm Keith Fearing III, 24, was found guilty by a jury of accessory after the fact of hit-and-run. Sentencing was postponed until Feb. 25. Fearing could receive up to 10 years in prison.

A special jury panel, brought in from Perquimans County because of pre-trial publicity, deliberated about one hour before returning the verdict during the fourth day of the trial in Dare County Superior Court.

Judge Frank R. Brown denied a defense motion to set aside the verdict on grounds of insufficient evidence.

Fearing is the son of a prominent Manteo businessman and pharmacist. He became the second person to be convicted in connection with a wreck in which Cloise H. Creef, 87, a retired Dare County maintenance worker, was killed.

Charles S. Fearing, Malcolm Fearing's cousin, was sentenced to four years in prison after he was convicted in June on charges of leaving the scene of an accident and death by

Jags, Falcons Gain ECC Finals Berths

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

PINETOPS — Farmville Central coach Mike Terrell was not pleased one little bit with his team's first-half performance against D.H. Conley Thursday night in the semi-finals of the Eastern Carolina Conference Tournament.

"I was pretty upset with them at halftime," said Terrell, whose top-seeded Jaguars trailed the Vikings 35-29 at intermission. "I told them they had not played like the team they had been during the regular season and that it didn't look like we should be the number one team in the league."

Their ears still hurting from Terrell's tirade, the Jaguars showed why they have lost only three conference games all year, outscoring the Vikings 16-0 early in the third quarter en route to a 69-63 win over Conley.

The win moves Farmville, now 19-5, into the ECC finals tonight (8:45 p.m.) against C.B. Aycock, a 54-41 winner over North Pitt Thursday night. D.H. Conley, which needed to defeat Farmville to qualify for the district playoffs, ends the season at 14-10.

In other semi-final action Thursday, C.B. Aycock's girls outlasted North Pitt in overtime, 45-38.

"That 16-0 spurt was the difference in the game," Terrell said.

D.H. Conley coach Shelley Marsh agreed.

"I felt good going into the half leading by six," Marsh said. "But the third quarter has been troublesome for us all year."

"I warned them at halftime about a spurt by Farmville. But they (Farmville) just came out shooting well and we couldn't neutralize their shooting because our shooters went cold."

After Conley pulled ahead 37-31 in the first minute of the second half, Farmville unleashed its 16-0 barrage. During that stretch, Dennis Pitt canned 10 of his 19 points and Donald Reid, on the bench in the early moments of the second half with three fouls, hit five of his 11 points.

Following a timeout, the Vikings regrouped and closed to within seven, 49-42, at the end of the period.

Conley pulled within four, 54-50, early in the final period, only to see Farmville move ahead by eight, 58-50, on a jumper by Jeff Tyson, who led the Jaguars with 21 points and 11 rebounds, and a steal by Mike Horne, who took it in for a layup.

"Even with that 16-0 spurt, we came back to get within four, but a couple of turnovers and that steal (by Horne) killed us."

"The quickness of their guards was too much for us," said Marsh, who was missing two starters, guard Curtis Spencer and forward Mitchell Moore. "Our inexperience showed."

Farmville led at the end of the first quarter, 12-11, but Conley grabbed the lead two minutes into the second period on a three-point play by David Brock, who led the Vikings with 17 points, most on long jumpers from the corners.

The Jaguars narrowed the deficit to one moment later on a reverse layup by Tyson. The teams traded one-point leads over the next three minutes before Brock connected again and then Anthony Burney hit three free throws — two on a one-and-one and one on a technical by Reid — to put Conley ahead, 35-29, at the half.

"We didn't execute our offense well in the first half," Terrell said. "I stress teamwork and we were coming down and shooting it up."

"We hit very well in the third period, but you've got to give Conley credit. They didn't quit, they battled all the way. Both teams went at each other."

C.B. Aycock 54
North Pitt 41

During the preseason, Charles B. Aycock was picked to battle for the ECC crown. That fight never occurred, mainly because of a slow start by the Falcons.

Thursday night, the Falcons showed why they had been picked to be among the leaders in the ECC as they tallied a 54-41 defeat on second-seeded North Pitt.

The win moves Aycock, 14-11, into tonight's ECC Tournament finals (at 8:45) against Farmville Central. Despite the loss, North Pitt, now 15-8, will compete in the districts next week at D.H. Conley.

"We knew it was going to be a tough game," North Pitt coach Cobby Deans said. "But we just didn't play the ballgame mentally or physically the way we should have."

"We got beat on the boards and we just couldn't hit our shots from the outside," he said. "Things went from bad to worse."

From the outset it was apparent that Aycock wanted

Swimmers Home; Others On Road

Several East Carolina University non-revenue teams will be in action this weekend, home and away.

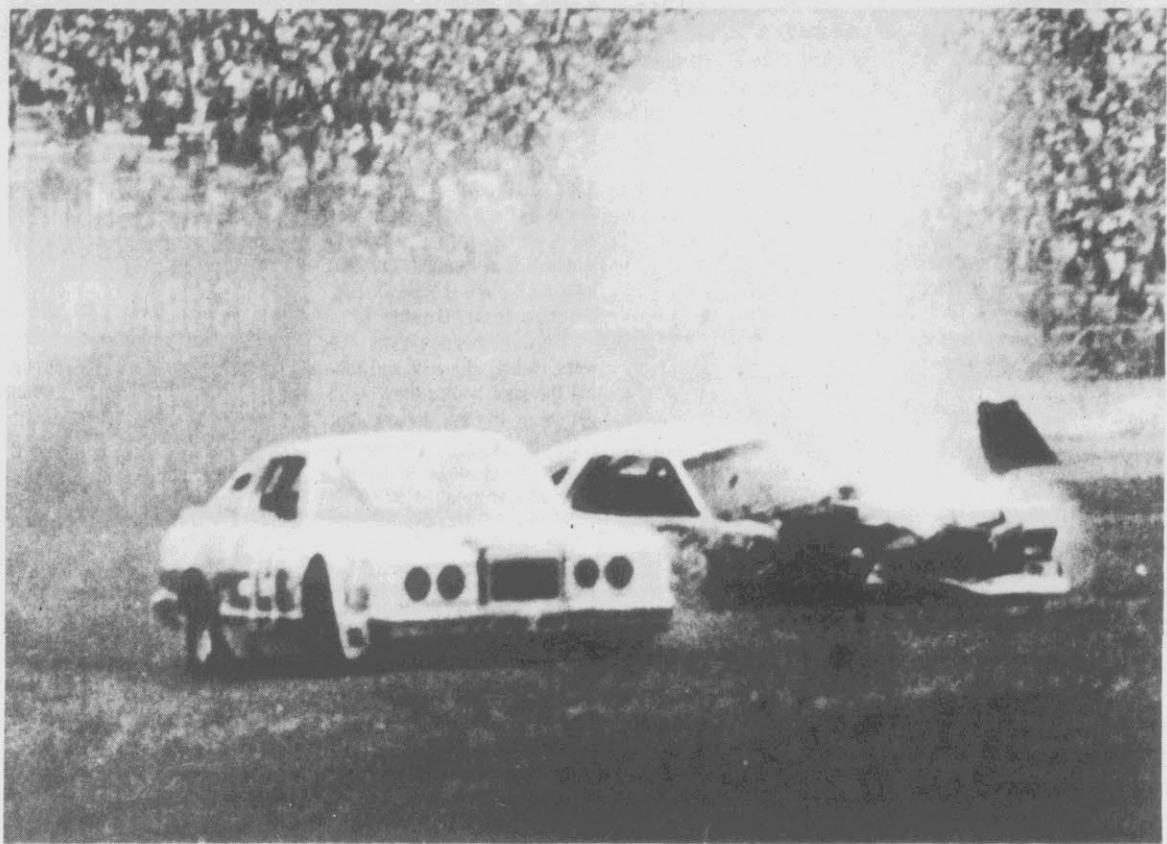

Friday, the East Carolina women's swimming team will play host to William & Mary in a 7 p.m. meet. Then, on Saturday afternoon at 1 p.m., the Lady Buc tankers will again be in action, hosting Pfeiffer College. The meets wind up the home schedule for the Lady Pirates, who have one meet left, the UNC-Wilmington Invitational next weekend.

East Carolina's wrestlers travel to Richmond to make up a match with the University of Richmond on tonight at 7:30 p.m.

The matmen then continue on to Annapolis, Md., where they'll compete in a double-dual meet with hosting Navy and Nebraska. That match is set to begin at 1:30 p.m. The Pirates return home on Tuesday to host Navy.

East Carolina's gymnastics team travels to William & Mary tonight for a 7 p.m. meet against the strong Lady Indians. Saturday, they travel on to Towson, Md., to face Towson State, Maryland-Baltimore and Montgomery Community College. The Pirates will have Cincy Cindy Rogers back on the floor coming off an ankle injury, and Elizabeth Jackson, back from an illness. However, Annie Loeschke has been sick earlier in the week and is questionable.

The indoor track team travels to the Delaware Invitational on Sunday.

Death Hits Daytona

Ricky Knotts of Paw Paw, Mich., was killed after his car hit a retaining wall while running the second of two 125-mile qualifying races at

Knotts' Death Mars Qualifying Races; Bonnett, Allison Winners

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — For veteran Daytona 500 drivers, the preliminaries can be more frightening than the main event.

"These are the races you worry about, more than the 500," Buddy Baker had said prophetically.

Thursday's twin qualifying races, a pair of 125-mile sprints, were won by Neil Bonnett and Donnie Allison — and marred by the death of 28-year-old Ricky Knotts.

Knotts, driving at Daytona for the first time and trying to qualify for his first Grand National race Sunday, died of massive head injuries moments after a two-car crash in the second race.

Veterans like Baker, the 500 pole sitter, and Allison say the 125-mile races can be dangerous because of the shortness and the many inexperienced drivers trying to qualify.

"With the scheduling here, the rookies don't have enough time to practice," Allison said. "They're nervous, and when you see them nervous, it makes me nervous."

But he was philosophic: "I've been coming here practically all my life, and we've always had 125 milers. You may like them, you may not, but you've got them."

"When you buckle up in these things, you have to accept that. That's just part of racing," he said.

Knotts tangled with Blackie Wagnerin going into the first turn on lap 16. The two, trailing by a wide margin, went into the outside wall on the high bank track, then spun into the infield at high speed.

While Wagnerin escaped serious injury when his car glanced off a metal wall, Knotts slammed into a concrete retaining wall. As his car came to rest near the track, Knotts suddenly slumped over and was dead by the time he was taken to the infield hospital.

"My son is dead. I can't believe it," said Richard Knotts, his son's crew chief. "He was a good boy. All he wanted to do was race."

Knotts, of Paw Paw, Mich., was Daytona's first fatality since Friday Hassler's fatal crash in the 1972 125-mile race. There was a nine-car crash in the first race, but no injuries were reported, and the races otherwise featured superb driving and the promise of a hard-fought 500.

"I said I didn't think any one car would dominate Speed Week, and I think I've been proven right," said Allison, who will start on Baker's outside in the front row.

"Sunday will be one big guess," said Cale Yarborough, a bare hood's length behind Bonnett in the first race. "A lot of cars have taken turns running fastest. Now we see who has learned the most."

Bonnett won the first race with an average speed 138.250. Baker was third, Darrell Waltrip fourth and Bobby Allison fifth.

Donnie Allison's winning speed was 165.441 mph, with defending 500 champion Richard Petty second, John Anderson third, Joe Millikan fourth and Lennie Pond fifth.

THE SCORPION : MATT BORNE DAVID PATTERSON : ABE JACOBS

Surprise Gold Winners In Two Events

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — The pre-Olympics form chart didn't mention young Austrian Leonhard Stock in the men's downhill skiing or Annie Borckink of the Netherlands in women's speed skating because they were longshots who weren't even supposed to be on the track.

But Stock and Borckink own gold medals of the 1980 Winter Games today after conquering challenging events with spectacular performances that could set the tone for this ice and snow sports carnival.

Russian cross-country skier Nikolai Zimjatov also won a gold medal, but hasn't yet received it. There was a massive foulup at the first awards ceremony. The Russians, apparently, didn't get the word as to when and where it was taking place. They didn't appear. No feelings were hurt. Many apologies were made.

There were several disappointments for the United States, relieved only by a surprising fifth-place finish by Pete Patterson in the downhill skiing and a rousing, 7-3 upset hockey victory over favored and second-seeded Czechoslovakia. The American hockey team now has gained three of a possible four points against the two toughest teams in its division.

Beth Heiden and Bill Koch, considered medal hopes in the speed skating and cross country, finished far out of the money. Heiden was seventh in her event and Koch, a silver medalist in the 30 kilometers at Innsbruck in 1976, never finished his race, dropping out with five kilometers to go.

America hoped for better results today when Heiden's brilliant brother, Eric, went after the first of a potential five golds, skating in the 500-meter race. Beth was entered in the women's 500, also on today's schedule.

Figure skating also got underway with Tai Babilonia and Randy Gardner beginning their bid to beat defending champions Irina Rodnina and Aleksandr Zaitsev of the Soviet Union in the pairs competition.

Stock, a 21-year-old who almost was left off the Austrian Olympic squad, whipped Whiteface Mountain's physically demanding downhill course, flashing through the 3,009-meter run in 1 minute, 45.50 seconds. That was a half-second faster than teammate Peter Wirnsberger, giving the Austrians a gold-silver sweep in one of the Games' most glamorous events. The third place bronze went to Canada's Steve Podborski in 1:46.62.

Patterson, 23, matched the best American downhill finish in Olympic history, timed in 1:47.04. "This is the best race I've ever had," he beamed. "The best I've ever done."

Borckink, who at age 28 is many years older than most speed skaters, turned in the finest 1,500-meter race of her life to claim the Olympic gold for Holland in 2:10.95. Ria Visser, another Dutch skater, took the silver in 2:12.35 and East Germany's Sabine Becker won the bronze in 2:12.38.

The Soviet Union maintained its mastery of the demanding 30-kilometer cross country event, winning it for the third straight Olympics as Zimjatov, leading from start to finish, delivered the gold in 1 hour, 27 minutes, 2.8 seconds. Teammate Vasily Rochev took the silver in 1:27:34.22 and Bulgaria's Ivan Lebanov won the bronze in 1:28:03.87.

Zimjatov's gold medal was the 50th the Russians have won in Winter Olympic history and gave them the alltime lead over Norway, which has won 49.

In other competition Thursday, East Germany's Dettlef Guenther and Vera Zozulya of the Soviet Union again posted the fastest runs in the men's and women's luge to maintain their leads halfway through that competition. Russia's powerful hockey team scored another one-sided victory, routing Holland 17-4. In other hockey games, West Germany defeated Norway 10-4, Sweden shut out Romania 8-0, Canada took Poland 5-1.

Mark Pavelich, Buzz Schneider and John Harrington combined for three goals and four assists in the big upset of Czechoslovakia before a happy, partisan crowd. The United States now has three out of a possible four points against the top two teams in their division.

The opening day's results were a tribute to athletic determination. Stock and Borckink both overcame long odds to win their events.

Stock had come to these Games as an alternate but his training runs had bordered on the spectacular and forced Austrian Ski Federation officials to rethink the makeup of their team. There was a controversial reorganization of the unit on the eve of the race but it paid off in medals.

He conquered the intricate bumps and turns at the top of the course and ignored a covering of fresh snow that fell throughout the race.

Jags, Falcons...

to work the ball inside against the smaller Panthers. After jumping ahead, 12-6, at the close of the opening quarter, the Falcons did just that, moving up, 24-15, at intermission. During the last three minutes of the half, the Falcons' inside power showed itself. Alex Speight, who led the Falcons with 19 points, knocked in two jumpers just inside the foul line, while 6'5" Barry Uzzell hit a tip in and two foul shots and 6'9" Jeff Best added a power move down the baseline. Best and Uzzell each had 13 points for Aycock.

The Panthers were hurt as much by their own poor shooting as they were by the Falcons' inside power. Against the Aycock 1-2-2 zone, North Pitt constantly found itself open for 15-20 footers but just could not connect. For the game, the Panthers hit 31 percent from the floor.

Coming out in the second half, the Panthers continued to have trouble making the outside, which allowed Aycock to move ahead, 32-23, at the close of the third period.

Hitting the first eight points of the final period, the Falcons took control of the game and all but sealed the victory. North Pitt could get no closer than 11 the rest of the way.

"We just missed the shots from the outside," Deans said. "Offensively, we didn't work for the shot. We just couldn't get it inside and we quit working for the outside shot."

"In the second half, we just weren't hitting. We took better shots but they weren't falling either," he said. "Our guards didn't play a smart game. It was wide open down the middle in the first half and they wouldn't carry it in."

"We just didn't play a very good game."

C.B. Aycock 45
North Pitt 38

Going into the ECC Tournament, North Pitt's Pant-HERS needed two upset wins to qualify for the district playoffs. The Pant-HERS got one Tuesday night, stunning second-seeded North Lenoir, 50-44.

North Pitt nearly got their second Thursday night, forcing Charles B. Aycock into overtime before succumbing, 45-38.

The win puts the Falcons, now 15-7, into tonight's (7 p.m.) finals against top-seeded Southwestern Edgecombe. North Pitt ends its season at 8-13.

"We really wanted this game bad," said North Pitt coach Gail Stanfield, obviously disappointed over the loss. "It's a big letdown, especially because it was so close a game. We didn't give up, but their foul shooting just killed us."

After North Pitt's Jeannette

Brown tied the score at 38-38 with a jumper from the right with 1:44 left neither team scored again in regulation.

The Falcons then won it at the foul line, hitting all nine of their points in the overtime from the free throw line. In fact, of the Falcons last 20 points, 15 came at the foul line.

"This was probably the best game we've played all year," Stanfield said. "I think, though, that they're proud of themselves and I think they showed everybody here what kind of team they are. They just wouldn't give up."

"I just wish we could have won it in regulation," she continued. The Pant-HERS did have the last shot, but the attempt from halfcourt was wide. "When we went into overtime that put a lot of pressure on us and we're just not a good team under pressure."

North Pitt, which led only once, early in the second half, trailed, 11-9, at the close of the first period. The Falcons spurred to a 17-9 advantage two minutes into the second quarter. Following a North Pitt timeout, the Pant-HERS countered with six straight points, four by Dupree and a jumper by Brown. Aycock led at the half, 21-18.

Coming out in the second half, North Pitt grabbed the lead momentarily, 22-21, on two baskets by Dupree, only to turn the ball over four of its next five possessions and fall behind, 28-24.

The Falcons, ahead 30-26 at the end of the third quarter, quickly moved ahead by eight, 34-26. A six-point spurt by the Pant-HERS closed the gap to 34-32 before the Pant-HERS tied the score on Brown's jumper, sending the game into overtime, where Aycock won it at the foul stripe.

"Getting in foul trouble really hurt us," said Stanfield, who lost Carolyn Best and Kim Sharpe late in the final period to fouls. "That helped put them in the one-and-one. We didn't make ours and C.B. Aycock made the ones they needed to win."

Wellcome Is Junior Champ

WINTERVILLE — Wellcome Middle School gained a 26-24 victory over G.R. Whitfield yesterday to win the Pitt County Junior High School Tournament.

Wellcome, seeded fifth in the tournament, had to win three upset games to gain the championship.

Rodney Dudley led the Wellcome scoring with 14, while Willie Anderson had seven to pace Whitfield.

East Carolina cut the margin to 37-24 at halftime, but NCSU bested the Lady Pirates, 10-2, at one stretch to silence hopes of a comeback.

"When we played them at East Carolina," said coach Cathy Andruzzi, "we had a good offensive perimeter game. Riley and (Laurie) Sikes were both hot. They stopped that tonight and we just don't have the height that they have to take it inside."

"We were rushing shots. We were getting the ball and taking the shot before they could get set up in their defense, but they wouldn't go in. Maybe we expect them to do too much."

East Carolina, now 17-9, hosts Western Carolina Saturday at 2 p.m. in Minges Coliseum. State stands at 23-4, including the championship of the Atlantic Coast Conference women's tournament.

Heels, Iris Escape Upsets

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — For a while there, New York City looked like Upset City to North Carolina and Notre Dame.

There was Rutgers leading the 11th-ranked Tar Heels by five points at the half. And there was Fordham ahead of the 12th-ranked Fighting Irish by eight at intermission.

The expected outcomes eventually materialized at Madison Square Garden Thursday night, but not before the underdogs had their bite of glory in the Big Apple.

Especially Rutgers.

"Playing North Carolina and playing in the Garden helped us get up for the game," said Rutgers Coach Tom Young after his team's 73-70 overtime loss to North Carolina. "But we're still a young team and our youth hurt us down the stretch."

The Tar Heel victory came in the first game of a double-header, preceding Notre Dame's hard-fought 86-76 victory over a sky-high Fordham team.

Losing 37-32 at the half, the Tar Heels got moving after intermission behind Mike O'Koren, who scored 15 of his game-leading 24 points in the second half. The Tar Heels appeared to have the game wrapped up in the last few seconds, but then Daryl Stickland hit a long-distance shot at the buzzer to send the contest into overtime, tied at 67.

"I thought we had the game won in regulation," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith. "We played good defense at the end, and I know that Rutgers didn't get the shot they wanted."

Stickland's shot set the stage for a low-scoring overtime and Smith's team finally put the Scarlet Knights down with the help of Dave Colescott's go-ahead basket with 2:35 left.

"Down the stretch, we didn't play like a normal Carolina team plays," added Smith. "We just played good enough to win."

Notre Dame was not up to its usual standard of play, either, allowing Fordham to hold a 37-29 lead at the half. But the Irish were a dramatically different team in the second half behind the inspired play of Orlando Woolridge and Kelly Trippucka.

Woolridge scored 12 of his 23 points to key an 18-6 burst at the start of the second half that propelled Notre Dame into a 47-43 lead with 13:46 remaining.

The Irish held their advantage the rest of the way, several times taking 12-point leads.

"Orlando really turned it on in the second half," said Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps.

"And we played a great second half of basketball. We needed this win to carry us the rest of the season."

Fordham Coach Tom Penders, struggling through a desultory 9-14 season, saw a lack of inspiration in his team after intermission.

"The halftime hurt us," said Penders. "We had the momentum going in the first half, and the intermission sort of slowed us down a little. I was worried about a Notre Dame flurry that would take us out of the game — and sure enough, it happened in the second half."

While North Carolina and Notre Dame managed to stave off upsets, two other Top Twenty teams weren't so lucky, as No. 9 Ohio State was shocked by Minnesota 74-70 and No. 15 Purdue lost a 57-54 decision to Northwestern.

Elsewhere, third-ranked Louisville stopped West Virginia 90-78; fourth-ranked Oregon State turned back Washington 82-73; No. 17 Weber State defeated Nevada-Reno 57-55 and No. 20 Indiana trimmed Iowa 66-55.

Kevin McHale scored 20 points and Mark Hall sank seven free throws in the final two minutes to lead Minnesota's upset of Ohio State. Mike Campbell scored 21 points, including a free throw with 13 seconds left, to lead Northwestern over Purdue. Darrell Griffith scored a career-high 35 points to pace Louisville over West Virginia.

Mark Radford's 19 points triggered Oregon State over Washington. David Johnson scored 20 points, including two free throws with four seconds remaining, to seal Weber State's triumph over Nevada-Reno. Indiana beat Iowa as Butch Carter hit three key baskets in the closing minutes.

Roanoke, Washington Girls Gain Finals

ROBERSONVILLE —

Roanoke High School's girls, top-seeded in the Northeastern Conference Tournament, rolled to a 57-31 victory over number five Plymouth last night, gaining tonight's finals against Washington.

Roanoke had little trouble after the first quarter. In that period, the Squaws rolled out to an 11-8 lead. They continued to build on that lead, working toward a 26-18 halftime margin.

The Roanoke squad put the Valkyries away in the third frame with a 13-4 margin, running the lead out to 39-22. They finished their foes off, 18-9, in the last quarter.

WASHINGTON — When the regular season ended, Washington, Williamston and Roanoke had finished in a deadlock for first place. The conference then seeded Roanoke first, Washington second and Williamston third. The semifinals of the Northeastern Conference Tournament seemed to bear out that seeding.

While Roanoke was winning handily on its home court, Washington was struggling to a 55-51 overtime win over Williamston. The victory boosted Washington into tonight's finals in Williamston against Roanoke.

Williamston jumped out to a 16-11 lead in the first quarter, but Washington rallied, 15-10, and tied it up at 26-26 at intermission.

Williamston poked back in front, 39-37, during the third period, but the Pam Pack came back with a 10-8 margin in the final quarter.

Williamston fell behind late, then tied it up. Washington missed on a shot at the minute mark, and Williamston gained the rebound. After working the ball for most of the way, they called time, setting up their last shot. But a baseline jumper missed, leaving it at 47-47, forcing the overtime.

In that, Brenda Minns led the way, scoring four of Washington's eight points, on a field goal and two free throws. Lynn Hodges added two free throws, while Mary Lee Lewis scored from the floor. Williamston hit just four points in the extra period.

Perry Headed Back To Texas As Desired

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Padres, who have been searching for a starting center fielder and a power hitter, hoped to announce today that they had acquired both.

According to published reports, the Padres have obtained Cleveland center fielder Jerry Mumphrey and Texas first baseman Willie Montanez in deals that will cost the Padres' aging right-hander Gaylord Perry and young Bob O'wchinko, a sometime starter.

The San Diego Union and Tribune reported that the Padres exchanged Perry and minor leaguers Tucker Ashford and Joe Carroll for the 31-year-old Montanez, a three-time .300 hitter.

"We had to have a center fielder (Mumphrey) and we needed a proven hitter (Montanez) to bat behind Dave Winfield," said new Manager Jerry Coleman.

To obtain the 27-year-old Mumphrey, a .295 hitter last year, the Padres reportedly had to give up O'wchinko, the club's No. 1 draft choice in 1976, and a minor leaguer, Jim Wilhelm.

Today is the first day of inter-league trading. Coleman said the trades represented the final phase of a facelifting he sought when he became manager last October.

"When I took the job, I thought the first thing we needed to do was to sign two free agent pitchers, to get trading leverage," he said. The Padres promptly spent $3.8 million to sign Cleveland right-hander Rick Wise and San Francisco left-hander John Curtis.

"We were losing (utility man) Jay Johnstone and we needed a left-handed pinch hitter," he added. San Diego's front office filled that spot by signing former Los Angeles outfielder Von Joshua.

In other moves that Coleman wanted, the Padres improved themselves defensively by trading for Montreal second baseman Dave Cash and Detroit third baseman Aurelio Rodriguez.

"The people we've gotten may not be the very best players in baseball, but we've plugged a lot of holes," Coleman said.

A former All-Star second baseman for the New York Yankees, Coleman replaced the fired Roger Craig. Coleman spent the last eight years as the Padres' play-by-play announcer.

Montanez hit .318 in 38 games with Texas last year after being traded from the New York Mets. With the Mets he hit .234 before being traded.

Perry, the only pitcher to win the Cy Young Award in both leagues, quit the Padres in early September last year in an attempt to force a trade. He was 21-6 in 1978 but slipped to 12-11 last year.

Mumphrey, a switch-hitter with speed, has a .276 lifetime batting.

O'wchinko, 25, never lived up to his potential after being named National League "rookie pitcher of the year" in 1977. He was 6-12 in 1979.

Rain Hits Tournament
TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — What do PGA players do on a rainy day? Mostly, it seems, they sit around the clubhouse and answer questions from reporters — desperate for a story when there is none — about what tour golfers do on a rainy day.

The general response was: Hope for the rain to quit and get on the practice range, or if that fails, watch television or read a book or write a letter or do what anybody else would do when confined indoors.

After morning rain washed out Thursday's opening round of the $300,000 Tucson Open, Larry Ziegler told a handful of players that the driving range at Tucson National had also closed, meaning take the rest of the day off.

The first round was rescheduled for today at the Tucson National course, with a 36-hole final slated for Sunday. Since the final two rounds of the 72-hole event are scheduled for national television, PGA officials made some adjustments for Sunday's play. The field will be cut to the low 50 golfers and ties after two rounds, instead of the normal qualifying field of 70, and the leaders will tee off first rather than last in order to fit the TV time slot.

Ironically, this Southwest desert community had a stretch of warm, sunshine-filled days, but that ended when the golf tour arrived. Wednesday's problem portion of the tournament was rained out, and it drizzled early Thursday, then finally poured again at mid-morning, halting play after only 66 players of the 144-man field had teed off.

The rain changes the character of the par-73 Tucson National layout, which plays 7,095 yards. The course recently had been redesigned to favor shot-making, but the moisture gives the advantage back to the long hitters.

NBC's Own TV Critic Added To The Rumors

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An interesting thing happened at the Johnny Carson rumor mill the other day. NBC's very own TV critic took to the stump and came up with a Carson rumor of his own:

Johnny doesn't want off of the "Tonight Show," he just wants to move it — or at least, part of it — to prime time.

This from Ron Hendren of the "Today" show. It should be pointed out that Hendren speaks for Hendren, and not necessarily for NBC.

Hendren reported this week that he'd come across the information in a trash pile at NBC Burbank, which is where he tapes his "Today" segments. NBC's only comment on the Hendren report was its usual "No comment," the standard reply to Carson queries.

Although Hendren works for NBC and the NBC trash is probably at least as reliable as any other trash, it's difficult to believe that NBC would move Carson to prime time, especially when you consider the second part of Hendren's rumor:

If Carson moved his show to prime time, say, 9:30 to 10:30, Tom Snyder's "Tomorrow" show would move into Carson's old 11:30 slot. And Tom Snyder would come with it.

That's hard to believe. If Carson does leave "Tonight," NBC almost certainly would keep the "Tonight Show" variety-talk format, a form that earns $19 million a year in pre-tax profits.

The network would sooner keep "Tonight" and try a new host than move "Tomorrow" and Snyder into Carson's spot.

Snyder's style is, to say the least, ill-suited for the friendly, send-the-viewers-to-sleep "Tonight" time slot.

What keeps the Carson rumor mill active is the protracted negotiation process between NBC and its restless late-night hero. The negotiations are active on two levels: in court, where Carson's lawyers are trying to declare his contract void, and in private bargaining sessions between Carson's lawyers and NBC executives.

The court case is a sort of arbitration called a general order of reference, in which a California Superior Court judge privately hears a civil case outside of the official operation of the court, although an order of reference is as binding as any ruling by the Superior Court. The Carson-NBC case was submitted nearly six months ago, and NBC was still filing papers as recently as last week.

Meanwhile, Carson's lawyers and NBC's executives are trying to reach an agreement out of court. NBC very much wants Carson to stay on "Tonight," and Carson, reportedly, wants alterations made.

If he stays, reports maintain, he wants to keep a three-day-a-week schedule (four appearances during ratings sweeps weeks), but he wants the "Tonight Show" cut from 90 minutes to 60 minutes.

For other activities, isn't likely to be moved by money talk.

Look for the "Tonight Show" as we know it to end in April, with Carson quitting the show or getting his half-hour reduction. If Carson quits or goes to prime time, look for NBC to continue the "Tonight" format with a different host.

And if Tom Snyder moves "Tomorrow" to Carson's spot, look for me to start going to bed earlier.

Dan Rather Chosen For Cronkite Role In 1981

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Cronkite, for many years one of the nation's most trusted television newsmen, will step aside early next year as "CBS Evening News" anchorman for a man he calls "the new champion" — Dan Rather.

"We — and you — will be in the best of hands," the grandfatherly Cronkite said Thursday in reporting the network's decision moments before signing off with his familiar "And that's the way it is."

CBS News' selection of Rather to succeed America's best-known broadcast journalist climaxed years of speculation as to who would guide network television's No. 1 nightly news program after Cronkite. Rather, as did Cronkite, will double as anchorman and managing editor for the "Evening News."

"I can't think of anybody in this entire business," Cronkite told a crowded news conference Thursday afternoon, "who is as qualified as Dan Rather for this job."

CBS News President Bill Leonard said Rather, perhaps most-recognized for his tough questioning of President Richard M. Nixon during the Watergate scandal, had signed a new, long-term contract with the network. He would not discuss terms, nor would Rather.

Leonard said Cronkite would continue as "Evening News" anchorman, a position he has held since 1962, at least through the presidential inauguration in January. He said Cronkite, 63, would retain an active role with the network after that, covering hard news and special events and working on documentaries.

"I've inaugurated every president since Harry Truman, and I want to do one more," said Cronkite, who in a 1974 Phillip-Sindlinger survey was chosen TV's most trusted and objective newsmen. A 1972 Oliver Quayle survey gave him a "trust index" of 73 — 17 points higher than President Nixon.

Leonard said the choice of Rather, clearly over CBS News colleague Roger Mudd, was in the making for some time. But the announcement was sudden, probably hastened by a desire to keep Rather at CBS.

Confirms An Indiscriminate Massacre Of Afghans

EDITOR'S NOTE — The writer hiked into rebel-held territory in Afghanistan to a mountain overlooking the town of Kerala, where reports had told of a massacre allegedly carried out by forces of the Marxist government before the massive Soviet military intervention in December. He filed this dispatch on his return to Pakistan.

By BARRY SHLACHTER
Associated Press Writer
BAROGAI, Afghanistan (AP) — On April 20, 1979, troops of Afghanistan's Marxist government marched into the Afghan town of Kerala, rounded up males over the age of 7 and shot them, according to Afghans who said they survived the mass execution.

By the government's own count — accepted by the survivors — 640 men and boys were massacred that spring day in reprisal for allegedly helping Islamic rebels who then and now are fighting successive Soviet-backed Marxist regimes in Kabul, the capital. The mass killings took place before the present Afghan government of Babrak Karmal was installed in conjunction with a massive Soviet military intervention last December.

Contrary to earlier reports on the massacre, none of the survivors interviewed said he or she saw Soviet military advisers taking part. Russian advisers in much fewer numbers were then in Afghanistan and a former Afghan officer who defected to the rebel side last year said that at the time, they wore Afghan army uniforms and would have been difficult to distinguish.

Viewed now through binoculars from atop a nearby mountain, Kerala which had a population of about 5,000 looks like a ghost town perched in a valley between the converging Asmar and Pech Rivers that enrich its soil. The rice fields and the town's large public garden were the pride of the residents, but no one is tending them now.

The survivors I met first in Pakistani refugee camps, then here in Barogai and during a hike into Afghanistan said some of the men escaped by dressing in the long Moslem chadors (veils) of wives and sisters. Some told of soldiers who spotted them hiding but did not give them away.

A 16-year-old survivor said some of the men were only wounded in the mass shooting but were buried along with the dead by a bulldozer as they shouted, "We are alive! Don't bury us!"

"We call it the War of Kerala," said the widow of Mullah Abdul Hakim, one of three resident Moslem clergymen, all of whom were gunned down by government soldiers.

The present military situation in the area prevented our entering Kerala and Chigha Sarai (formerly Asadabad), the capital of Kunar Province just across the Pech River.

The survivors — individually interviewed on a mountainous track leading to Pakistan, at a refugee camp across the border and at this tiny village in rebel-held territory — gave accounts of the incident that differed only in minor detail.

This is their story:

Set Service By Satellite

NEW YORK (AP) — The Associated Press has announced the start of the installation of 400 satellite Earth stations scheduled for use in 1980.

"This is a momentous event. We are all proud of the years of effort that have brought it," AP President and General Manager Keith Fuller said after Wednesday's announcement.

The equipment is being purchased from California Microwave, Inc. of Sunnyvale, Calif., for about $4 million.

The AP-owned system will initially carry all Associated Press high-speed data services, the APRadio Network, and the RKO Stereo Network.

The AP has invited all news agencies to join the system on a shared-cost basis. RKO was the first to accept, and Fuller said he expected others to do so.

"Our offer to them stands and will stand," he said.

He noted that transmission of several newswire and audio services from the same ransponder in the same satellite means that a broadcast station or newspaper will need only one earth station to receive multiple services.

The satellite system will provide higher quality than has been economically feasible on circuits leased from the telephone company and it will stabilize the cost of high-speed news-wire transmission.

The AP-owned system will initially carry all Associated Press high-speed data services, the APRadio Network, and the RKO Stereo Network.

Regular Sunday morning services will be held at St. Matthew F.W.B. Church. The church congregation will accompany the church pastor to Bethel Chapel, Washington, at 3 p.m. and Elder Fred Teel will preach at 7:30 p.m. with music by the Senior Choir.

GUEST SPEAKER
Elder Horace Joyner, youth choir and ushers will present the 11 a.m. service at Warren Chapel F.W.B. Church Sunday. Eldress Shirley Daniels and choir will be in charge at 3 p.m. Eldress Daniels is a member and associate minister of Mt. Calvary F.W.B. Church. The public is invited.

Farmers Push Gasohol Plan

By SOLL SUSSMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Agriculture Movement, which angrily descended on the nation's capital last year to protest farm policy, is returning in a quieter mood to preach the gospel of gasohol.

Marvin Meek, the group's president, says farmers do not plan as raucous an event as last year when tractors snarled traffic for days and several farmers were arrested.

Meek said five "small" motorcades of alcohol-fueled vehicles left their home states Monday for Washington, giving demonstrations along the way of how gasohol distilleries work.

"Don't really have any idea," Meek replied when asked how many farmers were expected in Washington this year.

The motorcades are expected to start arriving Saturday and if permits are obtained, stills to demonstrate alcohol production will be built on the Capitol mall and in Lafayette Park across from the White House. Meek said most of the farmers are not expected until Sunday.

Meek, of Plainview, Texas, said that just because farmers plan to refrain from disruptive demonstrations this year does not mean they are any more satisfied by the Carter administration's farm policy.

"We'll have farmers up here through the month of February, a few of them, to work on the Hill — probably through March, too," Meek said.

He said the major topic will be increasing the government's price support program. Under current policy farmers must harvest a bumper crop to make a profit, he said.

Meek said he opposed President Carter's decision to place a partial embargo on grain shipments to the Soviet Union, but that the administration's overall agricultural policy was the farmers' reason for coming to Washington.

"The embargo didn't really screw up anything worse than it was. You can only go broke once," Meek said. "The embargo will probably help us go broke faster."

person. Most of the troops had been killed. At one point, a soldier looking for wounded saw me but motioned for me to stay down."

The government troops began a house-to-house search at 10 a.m. The troops said they were looking for "troublemakers" who had infiltrated the town. The women were told to go to one of Kerala's two mosques and the men and boys were ordered to assemble for a "jirga"

— a tribal council meeting — near the bank of the Pech River.

"The soldiers who came to my house were good Moslems," said Abdul Rauf, a radio repairman. "They told me to hide or I would be killed."

However, others found hiding were dragged from their homes and shot outside. Between 200 and 350 died this way.

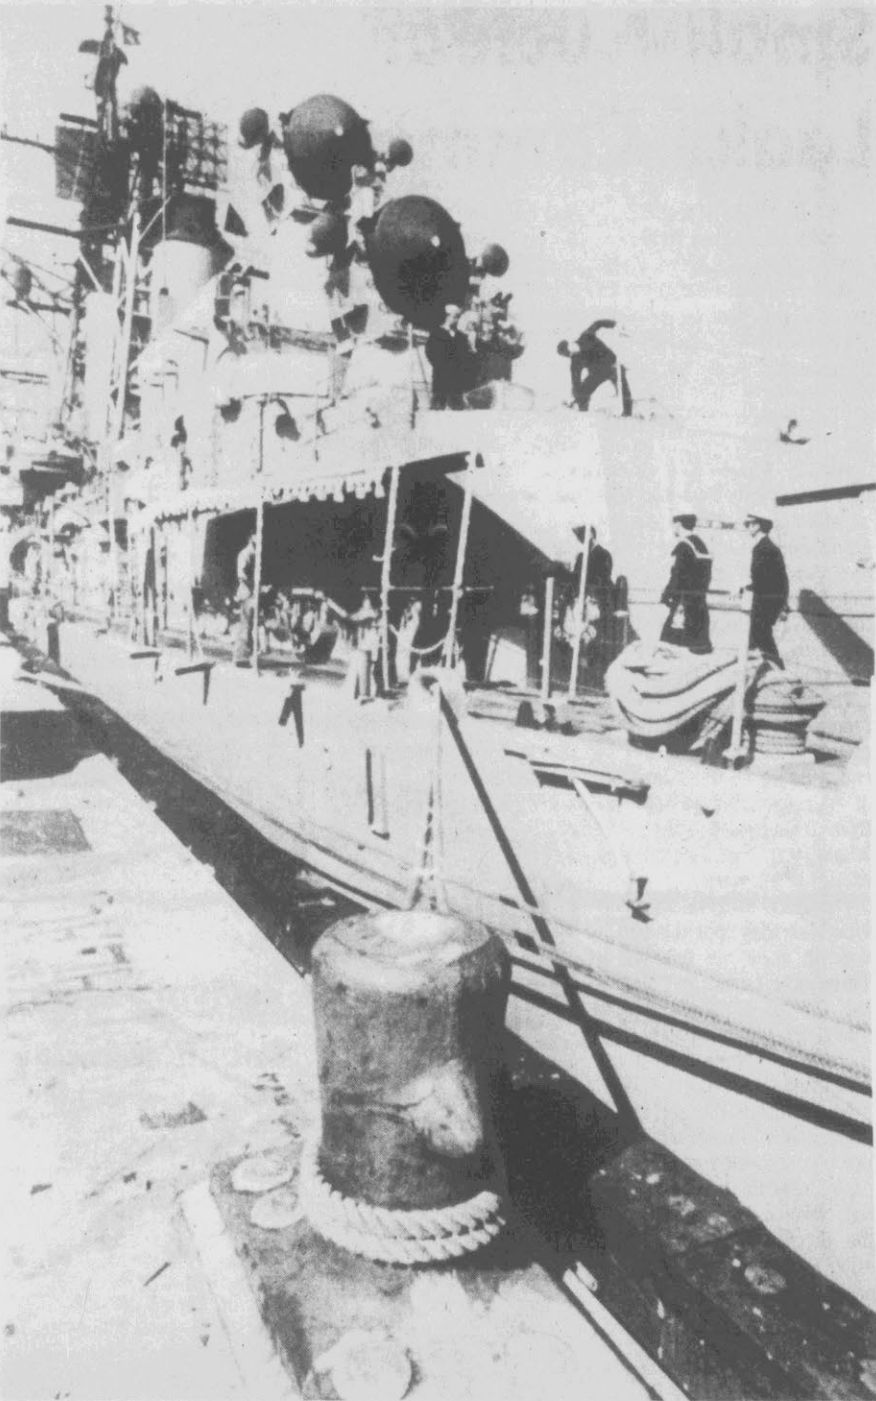

"I watched the shooting from the roof of my house," said

Rauf, one of four Afghans who led this reporter into rebel territory.

"I also saw a number of men slip away from the 'jirga' and escape down the river bank."

By this time, 400-500 government troops were going through the town.

Victims were chosen indiscriminately and even numbers of the pro-Soviet Khalq Party were executed along with the other male residents.

Kennedy Camp Happy Over Heated Exchanges

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
HYANNIS, Mass. (AP) — The campaign accusations between Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and President Carter are getting hotter all the time, and Kennedy and his aides couldn't be happier.

Campaigning in New Hampshire, Kennedy lashed out in harsh terms against the president Thursday, accusing him of misusing his office for political purposes and of pursuing policies that "have disserved the national interest."

The Massachusetts senator, who returns to his New Hampshire campaign today after spending the night at his Cape Cod home, also lectured the president about telling the truth.

"Those who so relentlessly use the word truth should at least respect the truth in their own campaigns," he declared.

Kennedy's attack was a response to criticism Carter leveled the night before. Speaking at a nationally televised news conference Wednesday night, Carter said some of Kennedy's recent comments on the Iranian crisis "have not been true, they have not been accurate, and they have not helped our country."

Early Thursday morning, Kennedy's press secretary, Tom Southwick, denounced Carter for taking a "low-road" approach to the campaign and for being "strident." But at the same time he and other Kennedy aides made it clear they were delighted Carter had attacked his principal challenger for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Kennedy has been trying to goad Carter out of a no-campaign posture, and Southwick said Carter's statements showed he "blew his cover" as a president who said he would remain above the political fray while dealing with crises in Iran and Afghanistan. Southwick added that Kennedy's aides were "ecstatic" when they watched Carter at his news conference, and Kennedy said, "I'm glad we're finally getting him engaged in the course of debate."

Some of Kennedy's aides also seemed to hope Carter would respond to Kennedy's latest attack, something the president left to two administration spokesmen.

White House press secretary Jody Powell told reporters that all of Carter's State Department and National Security Council advisers "share the same sense of disgust and outrage" at Kennedy's campaign statements.

Powell, asked about Kennedy's assertion that Carter's policies are a national disservice, replied, "I think that's an exaggeration."

And Hodding Carter, the chief State Department spokesman, said: "I understand the desperation of a man who is way down in the polls. Let him have his brief moment in the sun. The record will blow him out of the water" once the hostages are released.

Small Nuclear Leaks Common

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Small leaks of radioactive gases from two nuclear plants, including Three Mile Island, caught public notice this week, but federal regulators say such leaks are not unusual and, in themselves, not dangerous.

"Before Three Mile Island they would never have had public attention. ... There was not a public health problem" in either case, said Dudley Thompson, acting deputy director of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's office of inspection and enforcement.

The NRC staff was to make a report later today to the five-member commission about the two releases of small amounts of radioactive Krypton 85 gas from the crippled Three Mile Island plant in Pennsylvania earlier in the week.

Thompson said in an interview Thursday that the NRC's concern about the releases at Three Mile Island and also at the Calvert Cliffs reactor in Maryland stemmed partly from increased public sensitivity about any such reports.

NRC officials did not immediately have available the number of unexpected releases reported over the last 12 months, but Norman Moseley, head of the division of reactor operation and inspection, said they probably number 60 to 80.

In addition to unexpected releases, nuclear plants regularly release radioactive material which has built up in reactor waste treatment facilities.

Thompson said the agency wants to know about even small leaks to help alleviate any public fears, adding: "Since Three Mile Island, utilities are going to be a rather suspect source."

New rules, already approved by the five commissioners and expected to be published in a few weeks, would require reporting of virtually all unplanned releases of radioactive materials, no matter how small.

The Calvert Cliffs incident involved the release of 40 curies, well below federal limits, of radioactive Xenon-133 gas Monday and Tuesday. It was not reported and was only discovered by an NRC inspector reviewing plant logs.

The NRC staff has indicated unhappiness over the way the utilities reported the events, although small radioactive releases normally would not require immediate notification under current rules.

There are an estimated 3,000 to 4,000 incidents, mostly minor, reported to the NRC each year from nuclear power plants. But Moseley said he was not aware of any recent discharges of radioactive material above federal levels.

"Releases (of radioactive material) occur from nuclear plants all the time," said Thompson. He said the agency's concern is to make sure that the concentration of radioactive releases are within federal limits and that any unplanned releases are disclosed as soon as possible.

Given the complexity and size of a nuclear reactor, "there are bound to be some leaks" of radioactive material inside the plant, Thompson said. This material builds up in the waste treatment system and is periodically vented, within the federal limits, into the air or nearby water system.

For example, Robert Arnold, a vice president of General Public Utilities, owner of the Three Mile Island plant, said an average of 1,000 curies of Krypton 85 were released into the air each month during normal.

Chavis Raps Registering

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — President Carter is "trying to whip up a hysteria for war" by reinstating registration for the draft, the Rev. Ben Chavis accused Thursday.

Chavis told a group of about 500 persons at Wake Forest University that despite Carter's actions, "there's no threat to us in Afghanistan or in other foreign countries — the threat to us is not having jobs, not having decent health care."

His remarks came during the school's observance of Black Awareness week.

Chavis was the last of the Wilmington 10 to be paroled from prison. He was released in December after almost four years behind bars.

"We will never be able to solve human rights problems in the world until we solve the human rights problems at home," Chavis said Thursday.

To solve those problems, Chavis called on Americans to rekindle the civil rights movement.

"The truth of the matter is that poor and oppressed people are suffering more in 1980 than in 1960 ... we must have a stronger movement now because our problem are more complex than they were in 1960," he said.

A TALE OF TALL

When Small Was Tall

There was a time when there was nothing really tall around here. There was the old National Bank, a pie-slice of a building on Five Points downtown. A real monument it was. But you didn't monumentalize it so much when you got in the creaky, clattery elevator there. All you got safely to the bottom, or to the top — whichever way you were hoping to go. The building's been torn down now, to make room for a parking lot. But it was tall for its time. It was four stories high.

And Tall ...

The next year we completed erection of a taller tower — the tower that is still here now, right in our back yard. 878 feet. Not much fanfare about it. We had the staff and a few celebrities come into the studio — the mayor of Pinetops, the Pitt Commissioners, and somebody from Clark's Neck; good people all—for slaw, brunswick and ice tea. In studio was no assessment of chest pain. The pastor, Bishop W.L. Health Nurses will hold a program management workshop in Phillips, invites the public to attend.

And down on the coast there was — and still is — the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse.

The tallest lighthouse on the East Coast. That beacon! Flashing out over the Atlantic, quick and warning the dead. 208 feet tall, that lighthouse.

And Real Tall ...

Now we're headed for the Big Time. A 2,000 foot tower. As tall a tower as there is in the USA. The biggest tower, in point of the amount of steel put into it, in the entire world. At least, that's what the people at Kline Steel tell us. They're tower builders, so they ought to know.

Along Comes Tall ...

Here in Eastern North Carolina, there one day went climbing up into the heavens a tower. A tall tower. The tower of WNCT-TV, a-borning. On the day the antenna was set in place, there were thousands of people standing on out front, were lined up from here to Jesse tobacco barn over in Winterville.

People who had never seen a television screen had come out to watch the completion of a miracle — the tall tower of WNCT-TV. That was in 1953. The tower was temporary, but it was tall. 325 feet up.

Chitlin Day Observance In Sanford

By BRENDA FOLLMER
Associated Press Writer
SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — In that peculiar world of chitlin lovers, there is no room for indifference. You either love 'em or you hate 'em, but can't take the middle road.
For the uninitiated, chitterlings are the intestines of hogs — skinned, peeled and cooked to a slow death over hot coals. More properly known as "chitlins," and referred to in the singular, it is a dish once reserved for the Southern good ole boy and his black soul brother.

Nowadays, thanks in part to a revival of soul food, chitlin fame has seeped north across the Mason-Dixon line, where to many it is considered a delicacy.

Chitlin connoisseurs — who say the only thing about the hog you don't eat is his squeal — agree that if you've ever had the dish properly cooked, you will never turn it down again.

Hundreds of chitlin enthusiasts from across North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia are expected to gather in Sanford tonight to pay homage to the pulpy substance they call the finest part of the porker.

The event is called a chitlin strut because, according to one connoisseur, "when you eat chitlins, you naturally just strut around like a turkey gobbler."

The strut, one of hundreds that dot the southeastern United States during cold weather months, is sponsored by the Lee County Chitlin Chompers Association — a group that has dedicated itself to perpetuating soul food in general and chitlins in particular for more than half a century.

Chitlins can be parboiled, chopped or stewed. They can be boiled and fried. Usually, they are mixed with chunks of the hog's stomach, or maw, for body.

And, they are almost always served with platters of cornbread, sweet potatoes, coleslaw and sauerkraut.

For some, however, the shock to the palate is more than the system can bear.

One woman, sampling her first plate of the gray-colored chitlins, said in disgust, "I chewed and chewed, but the more I chewed, the bigger it grew."

American Buyers Favor Aspirin As Pain-Reliever

By KEVIN MCKEAN
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Most of the pain relievers Americans spend nearly $1 billion a year on are mostly aspirin.

But you would never know it by searching the typical drug store display, or confronting the bewildering advertisements on television, radio and in print.

Anacin promises "Fast pain relief." Bufferin says it is "Twice as fast as aspirin."

Alka-Seltzer has "The sound of fast relief." Yet the pain-relieving ingredient in each is aspirin.

"This is a separate species of unfairness to the public. They're essentially creating the confusion they're capitalizing on," says Joel Brewer, a Federal Trade Commission lawyer who is senior attorney for over-the-counter drug advertising.

You can pay more than three cents a tablet for aspirin in the 24-tablet size of Bayer, or less than one-tenth that for the large size of an unknown brand. Yet they may be equally good for your headache.

The makers of non-prescription drugs defend the ads. "Everybody knows that Bufferin is aspirin with buffering agents. I don't think there's anything misleading about that," says Harry Levine, vice president for corporate communications for the maker of Bufferin.

The premium that consumers pay for name-brand products helps support advertising. But, much of the pain reliever advertising is "confusing and misleading to the consumer," a panel of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has concluded.

In 1973, the FTC challenged ad claims of three drug makers — American Home Products (Anacin), Bristol-Myers (Bufferin) and Sterling Drug (Bayer). An administrative law judge has ruled that the first two firms must back up their claims with scientific proof, but both cases are under appeal to the commission. The Sterling case is still pending.

The FDA panel advises these people to consult a doctor before taking aspirin:

—The approximately two in 1,000 people who are allergic to aspirin (this includes from 6 percent to 20 percent of asthmatics).

—People who have a history of ulcers, stomach distress or problems of internal bleeding, since aspirin tends to increase bleeding.

—Women in the last three months of pregnancy, since aspirin can interfere with infant blood clotting or delay or prolong labor.

—Hemophiliacs or persons who are taking drugs to prevent blood clotting (anti-coagulants), because aspirin's anti-clotting action may make them dangerously liable to bleed.

—Diabetics or sufferers of gout, since aspirin can interact or interfere with prescription drugs for these conditions.

—Arthritics, since, despite the sales of "arthritis strength" aspirin products, doctors say it is dangerous to self-medicate arthritis, which can develop into a crippling disease.

When buying aspirin, check to see that it is pure white, does not contain broken tablets and does not have a vinegary smell, all signs of age or poor manufacture.

Be especially careful in giving aspirin to children. Many of the roughly 100 people a year who die of aspirin overdoses are children accidentally poisoned by well-meaning parents. Use children's aspirin and follow carefully the directions on the label.

The first symptom of aspirin overdose is a ringing in the ears. That means you should stop taking aspirin, or, if you think you may already have taken too much, contact a doctor or poison control center.

Here is a rundown on some other pain relievers:

—Anacin: aspirin plus the wake-up ingredient caffeine, about one-quarter the amount in a cup of coffee. Anacin has slightly more aspirin per tablet than regular aspirin (400 milligrams versus 325 milligrams) but you take fewer tablets, so it all evens out.

—Bufferin: aspirin plus two buffering agents which help reduce the acidity of the stomach which causes some of aspirin's irritation. But the amount of buffering may be insufficient to completely overcome aspirin's acidity, and some doctors recommend taking aspirin with food, with a glass of milk or with an antacid like Maalox, Di-Gel or Mylanta.

—Alka-Seltzer: aspirin plus large amounts of buffers, adequate to overcome aspirin's acidity. But it is unwise to mix aspirin with alcohol since both irritate the stomach, diminishing Alka-Seltzer's value as a hangover remedy. Alka-Seltzer also has a high sodium content and so may be inappropriate for persons on a low-salt diet.

—Tylenol, Datril, Bayer Non-Aspirin Pain Reliever, Anacin-3, etc.: these all contain acetaminophen, the leading aspirin substitute. Acetaminophen has the same pain-and-fever-reducing power as aspirin, but has no effect on inflammation and so is of little value in arthritis or pains that are caused by swelling. Acetaminophen provokes less stomach upset than aspirin. But it is not a harmless drug, and overdoses can cause severe liver poisoning. Some doctors believe the danger of overdose is greater in alcoholics, whose liver metabolism is altered by drinking.

—Combination drugs: Excedrin, Vanquish, Empirin Compound, etc.: these contain combinations of aspirin, acetaminophen, and other related pain relievers, plus caffeine and other mild stimulants, buffers or, in some cases, antihistamines to promote drowsiness (Excedrin P.M. for example). These products claim relief superior to plain aspirin or acetaminophen, but there is no good scientific proof for it.

Most players let unexpected distribution upset them, especially if it is in the trump suit. But if you keep your cool, you might be able to find a way to circumvent the tribulations imposed by Lady Luck, as declarer did in today's hand.

We are not enthralled with North's decision to open one no trump. While we do not take strong exception to the modern tendency to open one no trump with a weak doubleton, this is not the hand for it. Its wealth of aces and kings makes it worth more than 18 high-card points and also orients it to a suit contract. South's decision to jump to game is flawless—a seven-card suit headed by an ace is a strong holding opposite a no trump opener. We admire East's decision to pass. With three certain trump tricks, including 100 honors, we would have doubled in the hope that partner could contribute something to the defense. The result certainly justified his pessimism.

West led the queen of diamonds. Declarer won the king, then came to his hand with the ace of trumps. West's club discard was a shock—it seemed that declarer would have to lose three trump tricks and a club.

However, declarer did not panic. He crossed to the ace of diamonds, ruffed a diamond, and then re-entered dummy with the king of hearts to lead dummy's last diamond. If East ruffed, declarer would discard his club loser, so East sluffed a heart. Declarer ruffed, entered dummy with the ace of hearts and led a heart. This time East pitched a club as declarer ruffed. The ace of clubs provided an entry to the table to lead the last heart.

Both East and declarer were down to three trumps and a club, and the contract was safe. If East ruffed, declarer would let go his club and lose only three trump tricks. If East sluffed a club, declarer would ruff for his tenth trick. The defenders' four tricks had been telescoped into three!
