U.S. Closes Door On Moscow Olympics

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The United States will not participate in the Moscow Olympics since there is no sign the deadline imposed by President Carter for a Soviet troop withdrawal from Afghanistan will be met, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said today.

The administration's position must be ratified by the U.S. Olympic Committee.

During an interview on NBC's "Today" program, White House counselor Lloyd Cutler noted that the USOC said it will "of course" abide by the president's decision, and he added: "We expect the USOC to proceed to formalize what they said last week."

"We don't think the question of the government's power to force the athletes not to go will ever come up," Cutler said. "We're quite clear in the light of what the US committee said — that they, like the athletes, will abide by this very strong showing of public and congressional opinion that they should not go."

In Bonn, the State Department spokesman told reporters: "The United States set a deadline for its decision on whether to participate, a decision to be contingent on the withdrawal of Soviet troops. Today is the day on which that decision was going to be based. It is clear there is no sign of a Soviet withdrawal.

He continued: "The president has made clear that our decision is therefore irrevocable. We will not participate in the Olympics in Moscow."

Carter made the announcement following talks between Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher on the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

The deadline imposed by President Carter passed without comment in Moscow, and there was no immediate reaction to the State Department spokesman's announcement.

On Tuesday, White House spokesman Jody

Powell told reporters in Washington. "We have made our position very clear. The question now addresses itself to the United States Olympic Committee. We would like for them to reach a decision as soon as they can."

There was no immediate comment from the U.S.

Olympic Committee.

President Carter set the deadline one month ago, insisting then and as recently as Tuesday that if the Russians did not pull their troops out of the Southwest Asian nation by today, he would urge American athletes not to take part in the Summer Olympic Games in Moscow.

Gentlemen's Agreement On Releasing Hostages

By The Associated Press

A member of the U.N. panel preparing to fly to Tehran to investigate charges against the shah said today there is a "gentlemen's agreement" the American hostages will be released. But he denied reports that a deadline for their freedom had been set.

He spoke as the U.N. offices in Geneva announced formal approval for the commission to fly to Tehran had been received from Iranian authorities. The group was scheduled to leave on a chartered flight this afternoon, a U.N. spokesman said.

Commission member Mohammed Bedjaoui, Algeria's U.N. ambassador, spoke with a reporter on the tarmac at the airport in Geneva, where he arrived with three other panel members.

"There is a gentlemen's agreement for the release of the hostages," he said. He added: "It is not true that any deadline has been set" for their release. Reports published in the United States Tuesday quoted U.N. officials as saying the hostages would have to be released by Feb. 27 or the panel would stop its inquiry.

The U.N. spokesman in Geneva, Anthony Curnow, said Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's approval for the mission was received as the commission members were meeting in the Geneva airport lounge.

Curnow said part of a ten-man U.N. support staff would travel with the five commission members in the 12-seat chartered plane with the rest to follow aboard a commercial flight.

U.N. authorities had been waiting for a cable approval of the trip, although Bani-Sadr gave verbal approval Monday in a telephone conversation from Tehran with U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

After a Tuesday night meeting of the Revolutionary Council he heads, Bani-Sadr told reporters that Khomeini, the country's ailing revolutionary leader, had approved final terms for the U.N.-appointed commission and its convening in Tehran.

Bani-Sadr, who took over as commander in chief of Iran's armed forces on Khomeini's order earlier in the day, said U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim would be informed of the decision by cable.

But in New York, a spokesman for Waldheim said late Tuesday night that no cable had arrived and that commission members gathering in Geneva, Switzerland for a chartered flight to Iran could not leave until the cable was received.

"They can't go before they are appointed," the U.N. spokesman said, adding that Waldheim cannot announce their appointment until Iran formally confirms his choices.

Members are said to include French lawyer Edmond Pettiti; Algeria's U.N. ambassador, Mohammed Bedjaoui; former Venezuelan ambassador to Washington, Andres Aguilar; Sri Lanka lawyer Hector W. Jayewardene and Syrian diplomat Adib Daoudy.

It was still unclear exactly when and how the approximately 50 Americans would be released from the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, where they began their 109th day in captivity today.

New Appointees To Hospital Bd.

By CAROL TYER

Reflector Staff Writer

New appointees to the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees were announced during a trustee board meeting last night.

Leo Brody of Kinston and Noel Lee Jr. of Washington, N.C. have been appointed to three-year terms and Thomas Bennett of Greenville has been reappointed to a three-year term. Joseph Parker of Ahoskie has been given a two-year term; Dr. W. Jeffers Senter of Raleigh, a one-year term.

Norfleet Sugg of Pinetops and James Cheatham of Greenville have completed terms and have asked not to be reappointed, it was pointed out.

The board expressed delight at a $20,127 gift from the Duke Endowment, which yearly provides funds to non-profit hospitals throughout North and South Carolina.

Recruitment and development of professional staff have been recognized as a high priority during a long-range planning meeting held recently and in other discussions. As an example, it was pointed out that there are now 270 R. N.'s on staff and that when the new bed tower is opened, some 475 will be needed.

Hospital employees were commended by the board for their "esprit de corps," as Board Chairman Harry Leslie put it, during the recently icy, snowy time. Only two patients postponed entering the hospital and work went on as usual "because," Leslie said, "our people considered the weather a challenge, not an excuse."

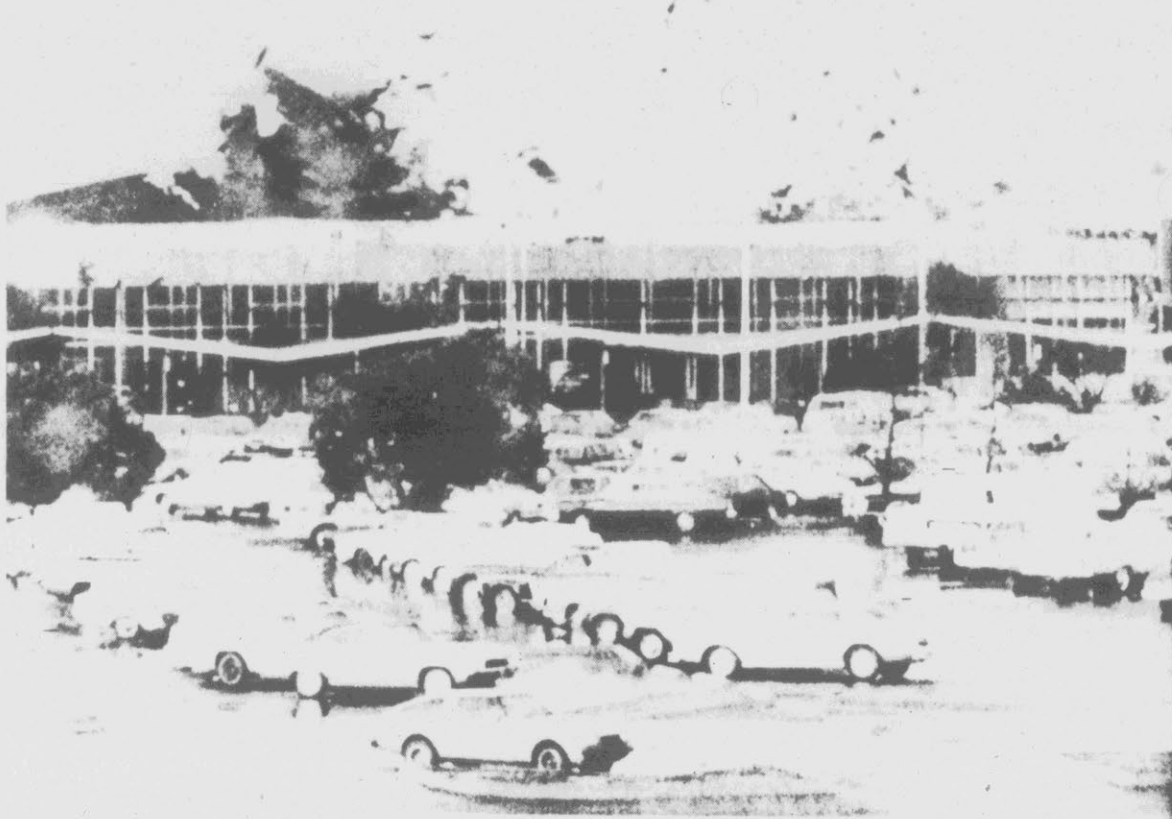

Finance Committee Chairman Norfleet Sugg reported that the hospital financial position continues to be sound, though unforeseen degrees of expense for supplies and energy are being experienced. Fuel is up 33 percent, he said, even though usage is down.

Rehabilitation Committee Chairman Glenn Strickland reported that the rehab center is continuously seeking to improve quality of care and is keeping costs in line. Mrs. Donna Clark, Manager of the Occupational Therapy Department of the Rehab Center, presented the educational program prior to the meeting.

Building Committee Chairman Charles Gaskins invited other trustees to a progress report meeting to be held today concerning the bed tower and other building going on at the hospital. These progress report meetings are to be held the 20th of each month, he indicated.

Nominating Committee Chairman Robert Monk offered the following slate of officers for consideration at the March annual meeting of the board: Harry Leslie, chairman; Albert Martin, vice chairman; Ephraim Smith, secretary; Thomas Bennett, treasurer; Mildred Indorf, assistant treasurer; and Thomas J. White Jr., Glenn Strickland, Billy Phillips and Dr. John

More Storm Devastation Batters The Southwest

By ERIC KRAMER

Associated Press Writer

A Malibu home toppled into the Pacific Ocean and others were overrun by mud or threatened by pounding surf as Southern California braced today for its sixth rainstorm in a week and the toll of property damage from foul weather in the West climbed past $300 million.

More than 4,000 persons were forced to flee as mudslides and walls of water up to 15 feet high destroyed or threatened homes. Nearly 100,000 in Northern California were without power.

At least 27 deaths have been attributed to the storms that began a week ago today.

As water cascaded over the tops of dams in Utah and levees crumbled in Southern California, a tornado struck near an airliner taking on passengers in Fresno, Calif. Two persons received minor injuries.

Pounding surf and rain-softened bluffs threatened more homes along the Malibu beaches, where at least one home was lost to the storm, according to Los Angeles County officials.

Food shortages were reported north of downtown Los Angeles in the Topanga Canyon, where a 15-foot wall of water gushed through the exclusive neighborhood.

Traffic jams stretched for 10 miles in Phoenix, Ariz., after the usually dry Salt River flooded even more, cutting the number of crossings from ten to two.

State Emergency Services Director Alex Cunningham estimated $252 million property damage in Southern California, where the rain forced farmers to leave crops rotting in soaked fields. Crop damage so far in the fertile region that supplies much of the nation's winter lettuce and citrus was estimated at $26 million.

Arizona officials estimated damage at $40 million; and Utah officials, more than $1 million.

Rainfall in Los Angeles since Feb. 13, when the storms began, has measured 11.65 inches, pushing the total for the season to 20 1/2 inches, nearly 11 inches above normal.

A flash flood watch continued over much of Southern California today as bands of rain fell on the area. Storm No. 6 was about 1,000 miles out in the Pacific and expected to hit Thursday.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., whose home in Laurel Canyon was flooded, returned Tuesday from a presidential campaign swing through New Hampshire to sign an emergency proclamation adding four counties to the two where property owners already were eligible for low-interest disaster loans.

President Carter declared central Arizona eligible for federal aid.

Streets approaching the two remaining bridges in Phoenix took on a carnival atmosphere as people began selling coffee, sandwiches and soft drinks to motorists who faced waits of more than six hours.

A United Airlines 727 jet was loading at the Fresno airport for a flight to San Francisco when a tornado touched down, ripping most of the roof off the terminal.

Rebels Control Pakistan Route

By

MICHAEL GOLDSMITH

Associated Press Writer

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP)

— Anti-communist Moslem rebels are virtually in control of Afghanistan's main supply route from Pakistan, attacking civilian traffic at will and outmaneuvering the ill-trained Afghan soldiers sent to "pacify" the area.

An Associated Press reporter and three other Western reporters traveled in a convoy of trucks and buses that was repeatedly ambushed by rebels last week in a gorge on the highway from Jalalabad to Kabul.

Only one bus passenger was injured by gunfire. Many others were robbed of all their cash and valuables. The rebels did not shoot to kill, but to halt the convoy.

After remaining immobilized between two rebel positions for four hours, the convoy abandoned the trip and returned to Jalalabad.

nowhere in sight.

It is estimated that at least 90,000 Soviet troops are in Afghanistan helping President Babrak Karmal's government, installed in a coup Dec. 27, battle the rebels who have been fighting three successive pro-Moscow regimes.

Jalalabad, 100 miles east of Kabul, is near the Pakistani border and the entry point for most of Afghanistan's consumer goods. Drivers in the convoy said the Afghan army has been unable to prevent the almost daily rebel ambushes on the road to Kabul.

At least six vehicles in the reporters' convoy, including one large modern bus, were set on fire and remained as smoldering wrecks on the road. Three government trucks were pushed into the swirling Kabul River.

Huge boulders were dislodged to block the highway. Trees were felled across the road.

Pitt Received $811,151 In Distributal Tax

N. M. Wilson, instructor of the ladies' exercise classes at the South Greenville and West Greenville Recreation centers has asked Hotline to appeal for exercise equipment of any type. Ms. Wilson would like to expand both programs with equipment like jump ropes, bicycles, stationary bicycles, weights, situp board, and dumbbells. Anyone able to donate is asked to call the Recreation Department, 752-4137, Ext. 252 or 253.

LOVELY OUTCOME

Janice Robinson reports that Hotline readers' response to her request for the words and music of "Wayfaring Stranger," to be sung at her aunt's funeral was "lovely." Several called, she said, and a Pitt Community College teacher is supplying her the words and music. An East Carolina University faculty member, she said, has offered to sing the song, which he says is his favorite, at the funeral if the family wishes it. She reported she visited the aunt, Mrs. Patty Winstead, 92, in her hospital room last night and that she was pleased that this final detail for her funeral, which she has already planned herself, has been taken care of. "We've been overwhelmed at the kindness people have shown us as a result of this appeal," Mrs. Robinson said.

Pitt County received $811,151 in net distributal tax proceeds for the quarter ending Dec. 31, according to Mark Lynch, Secretary of the N.C. Department of Revenue.

Lynch said that on a per capita distribution basis figured relative to population, Greenville received $209,097 of the total amount. Population here was listed as 34,550.

Farmville, based on a population of 5,510, received $33,346 of the total distribution, Lynch reported, while Ayden, with a population of 4,220, received $25,539.

Other Pitt towns, their populations and receipts, included: Grifton (Pitt's share), 2,250, $13,617; Winterville, 2,410, $14,585; Bethel, 1,950, $11,801; Simpson, 530, $3,207; Fountain, 450, $2,723; Grimesland, 430, $2,602; and Falkland, 130, $786.

Total population for Pitt County was listed as 81,600 with the county itself receiving $493,844 of the total proceeds and the balance allotted to the ten towns in the county.

Greene County, figured on an ad valorem basis, received $42,106 in net distributions with $39,526 going to the county itself and the balance allotted to Snow Hill, $2,011; Hookerton, $388; and Walstonburg, $180.

Lenoir County, figured on an ad valorem basis, received $566,564 with $438,540 going to the county and the rest distributed to Kinston, $113,677; La Grange, $10,829; Pink Hill, $3,462; and Grifton (Lenoir's share), $54.

Martin County, based on an ad valorem levy, received $181,836 with $148,881 going to the county and the balance allotted to nine towns. Receiving shares were: Williamston, $25,512; Robersonville, $4,610; Jamesville, $1,066; Oak City, $622; Hamilton, $506; Everetts, $335; Parmele, $160; Bear Grass, $77; and Hassell, $62.

Beaufort County totals, figured on a per capita basis, included $321,649 in total distributions with $238,082 of the total allotted to the county itself. Seven towns shared in the balance, including: Washington, $55,413; Belhaven, $14,225; Aurora, $4,225; Chocowinity, $3,690; Washington Park, $3,333; Bath, $1,368; and Pantego, $1,309.

Rose High Wins In Quiz Bowl Contest

The team from J. H. Rose High School took the Pitt County championship in Sheppard Memorial Library's Quiz Bowl '80 on Saturday, February 16, at the Library-Recreation Center.

The team won a trophy and will now compete in a regional contest to be held Saturday, March 8 in Greenville.

The winning team competed with teams from D. H. Conley, Ayden-Gritton, Farmville Central and North Pitt High Schools.

Rose team members are Mark Grossnickle, Fred Parham, Susan Vick and Dorothy Wang. Dean Phillips of WNCT-TV acted as moderator for the competition. Judges were James Ehron, Jr., Margaret Clark, and Gary Davis.

The March 8 regional competition will be at 2 p.m. in the Library-Recreation Complex. Teams competing with Rose at that time will be ones from Edgecombe County, the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Region, and the East Albemarle Region. The two winning teams will advance to the state finals April 19 in Raleigh.

2 Collisions On Tuesday

An estimated $1,800 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 9:15 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Maxwell Street, involving cars driven by Linda Wilson Barrett of 423 Pittman Dr. and John Ashley Caraway of Route 6, Greenville.

Damage from the mishap was set at $800 to the Barrett car and $500 to the Caraway vehicle by investigators, who charged Ms. Barrett with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety.

A 12:25 p.m. collision at the intersection of Chestnut Street and Paris Avenue involved a car driven by Charles Woodrow Reid of 1604 West Fourth St. and a truck operated by Jessie David Godley of Route 4, Greenville.

Police estimated damage from the collision at $200 to the Reid car and $300 to the truck.

Week Observed By Engineers

This week, Feb. 17-23, is National Engineers Week.

The observance is sponsored by the National Society of Professional Engineers, with a membership of 80,000. The purpose of the week is said to be to familiarize the public with the work of engineers and to honor outstanding members of the profession.

In keeping with this purpose, local engineers have volunteered to counsel informally with high school freshmen and sophomores who have not decided about a college curriculum and with high school juniors and seniors who think they'd like to pursue engineering education and careers. Interested students are invited to call Les Meekins of Speight Associates, consulting engineers and surveyors. He will arrange for each one to talk to an engineer in the field in which he or she might be interested, he said.

Died In Blaze

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Three members of a Buncombe County family died early today in a fire that destroyed their home in the Fairview community.

The victims were identified as Herbert Nanny, 32, his wife Doris, and their son, Joel, 4.

The sheriff's department said Nanny discovered the fire and sent his 11-year-old son for help. Nanny apparently was overcome while trying to rescue his wife and younger son, authorities said.

Sheriff's spokesmen said the fire apparently started in a carport. An investigation was under way to determine the cause of the fire.

FOCUS

Exile

The word "exile" is often used to describe a person who has been forced to leave his own country. But some governments exile people by forcing them to live in remote parts of their native land. The Soviet Union last month sent scientist Andrei Sakharov into "internal exile" by moving him from his home in Moscow to the city of Gorky, 260 miles away. Sakharov, who helped develop the Soviet hydrogen bomb, has been speaking out against his country's government for many years. Before his recent exile, he had strongly criticized the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, and urged other countries to boycott the 1980 Moscow Summer Olympics.

Arrested Two Men In Local Break-Ins

Greenville Police arrested two men Monday night at the same time in connection with unrelated break-ins at Southmet Recycling Corp. on North Greene Street.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Kenneth Earl Kornegay, 25 of Route 5, Greenville, was charged with breaking, entering and larceny, while James Ray Brown, 24 of Route 3, Greenville, was charged with breaking and entering.

The chief explained that a MacKenzie Security guard, hired by Southmet found the two inside the company fence, and called police to the scene about 8:45 p.m. Monday.

Kornegay, according to Cannon, had allegedly thrown two bags of scrap copper, weighing 190 pounds and valued at $214, over the fence before the security guard arrived, while Brown allegedly entered the Southmet yard to remove some batteries.

Bond for Brown was set at $1,000, while bond for Kornegay was set at $5,000.

O'Berry Suit Is Dismissed

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) —

A $14 million suit alleging racial and sexual discrimination in employment practices at O'Berry Center has been dismissed by U.S. District Judge F. T. Dupree Jr.

The suit had been filed against O'Berry administrator Jerry H. Lyall by Ruby W. Whitted. She is a former employee of the center and is the wife of Goldsboro alderman Earl Whitted Jr.

She had brought the suit under the 5th and 14th Amendments to the U.S. Constitution, alleging prejudice against females and blacks at the mental institution. Mrs. Whitted also contended that a conspiracy had forced her to resign her position as a unit administrator.

Dupree's decision will be appealed to the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals.

In countering her allegations, the center presented evidence showing that 31 percent of all officials and administrators at O'Berry are black and that 42 percent are female. The professional staff is 40 percent black and 68 percent female, the center said.

Dupree said he found no evidence of an intentional pattern and practice of discrimination against Mrs. Whitted.

DISASTER IN IRAN
UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. statistics show 250 people lost their lives in recent floods in Iran. 150,000 were left homeless and altogether 800,000 were affected by the disaster, a spokesman here says.

'Confidence' In Eyeing Future

ECU Alumni Association

The 1980's will be a time of challenge to all institutions, according to Dr. Thomas B. Brewer.

Dr. Brewer explained the challenge as an erosion of public confidence in institutions, but, he added that education was faring better than some others. He said that East Carolina University had plans to meet the challenge by assessing its strengths and weaknesses by a Taskforce study and that the University would proceed with its plans for future growth with "quiet confidence."

Dr. Brewer spoke at an organizational meeting of the Pitt County Chapter of the East Carolina University Alumni Association this week.

At the dinner meeting, attended by approximately 100 people, a slate of officers was approved: Mike Renn, president; Steve Howell, vice president; Ann Attmore, secretary; and Ray Rogers, treasurer.

Mike Renn reported on the status of the fund raising telethon now in progress in the Pitt County area. The telethon has been hampered by the inclement weather but will be completed next week. The Pitt County Chapter has a fund raising goal of $20,000. Anyone interested in joining the local chapter may contact the ECU Alumni Office (757-6777).

Warnings By Psychiatrists

NEWTON, N.C. (AP) — Although psychiatrists had warned repeatedly that Steve Milam remain confined to mental hospitals and despite repeated acts of violence, he was recently freed.

And on Monday, Catawba County officers charged the 19-year-old with murder in the shotgun slaying of Mary Marie Marlow, 63, his grandmother.

Capt. Bob Jameson said Milam "just got wild" following his arrest late Monday, and he was transferred to Broughton Hospital in Morganton. No bond has been set.

Since he was 11, Milan has spent most of his time in Broughton or other state mental institutions. Court records report he's mentally retarded and given to occasional outbursts of violence.

In March 1976, the youth was charged with choking a Broughton Hospital patient to death, but charges were dropped when he was found mentally incapable of standing trial. Court records also contain a record of other assaults against relatives or fellow patients.

Following an evaluation last November, Dr. James Groce, a Dorothea Dix Hospital psychiatrist, gave this summation.

"The only placement possible for Mr. Milam appears to be long-term institutional care since I do not feel his family can manage his behavior in the community. Unfortunately, during periods of good adjustment and good behavior Mr. Milam is released from involuntary civil commitment—as is required by law."

During one such release in January 1979, Milan was charged with burning a frame shop near his home. But again he was found incompetent to stand trial and was returned to Broughton. He was released last Wednesday.

Officers said he was staying in the home of his parents, the Douglas Milams of Rt. 3 Newton, when Mrs. Marlow was fatally wounded during an argument.

Petition Deadline Is Now March 14

The deadline for return of all Operation Overcharge petitions, which call for removal of VEP-CO from North Carolina, has been extended until March 14, according to Charles Schwidde, chairman of the Utilities Committee of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce.

Schwidde explained that the return of the petitions in the Greenville area is very slow. "We have had a terrific response by many citizens who are anxious to obtain the petitions, but they are very slow in returning the petitions. At this time we have about 6,000 signatures and we need 25,000 from the Pitt County area."

"We appreciate the work that many citizens and chamber members are doing by encouraging persons to sign the petitions, but we need for them to mail the petitions back as soon as they complete the pages. Any person who has completed a page of signatures and would like more petitions can get them by calling the Chamber of Commerce office at 752-4101," Schwidde said.

Schwidde also said that anyone who has questions about the petitions should call the chamber office for further information.

Okays Requests For Soliciting

City Manager Ed Wyatt announced the approval of two requests for solicitation permits in Greenville.

Wyatt said the requests were submitted by: the Third Street School PTA for permission to conduct a merchant solicitation during the weeks of Feb. 18 and 25; and by Roberson Elementary School for permission to conduct a door-to-door and merchant solicitation Feb. 18-25.

A program on Oriental Gardening was given by Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Helms at the meeting of the Greenville Garden Club held Friday at the home of Mrs. Ernest Holt.

Assisting hostesses were Mrs. J. R. Carrington, Mrs. Thelma Harris and Mrs. J. A. Piver.

Mr. and Mrs. Helms showed slides taken while they toured Japan and Hong Kong including various types of gardens — temple, strolling, dry, moss and vegetable gardens. They pointed out all the gardens are carefully manicured.

President Mrs. R. A. Davis presided during the meeting. Mrs. James Keel and Mrs. Gene Sutton were guests. Mrs. Gilbert Peel explained her flower arrangement of acuba. Mrs. Helms gave the horticulture report and said 12 bird houses were built at the recent workshop and six have been put for the bluebird trail.

Mrs. H. G. Williams reminded members of the flea market to be held in April.

Mrs. H. C. Klingenschmitt gave the garden therapy report and told of eight workshops to be held in the spring at Aycock Junior High School with Mrs. Nancy Walter's classes.

Reader Request: Italian Walnut Cake

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: When I was young, an Italian bakery near us used to sell a cake that tasted as if it were made entirely of walnuts. It was not overly sweet and never frosted. But, alas, the bakery is no more. I wish I knew how to duplicate this dessert. — HELP.

2 tablespoons rum
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind

Chop the walnuts very fine in an electric blender or food processor, but do not reduce them to a paste; or use a hand-operated rotary-type nut grater.

Sift together the flour and baking powder.

Grease a 9-inch layer-cake pan with 1 tablespoon of the butter.

Thoroughly beat together the remaining butter and the sugar. Beat in until blended the egg, rum and lemon rind. With a spoon, stir in the walnuts, a little at a time, mixing arms by many cooks." A new well. Gradually stir in the flour, mixing thoroughly. Turn into the prepared pan, leveling top with a small spatula. Bake on the rack below center in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean and the cake is well-browned — about 40 minutes. Place on a wire rack for 10 minutes; loosen edges and turn out; with another rack, turn right side up. Cool completely.

WALNUT CAKE
(Torta di Noci)
8 ounces walnuts
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ cup butter, at room temperature
2-3rds cup sugar
1 large egg

This Virgo Still Gives A Hoot

By Abigail Van Buren

1980 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 31-year-old woman, divorced for four years, and have no children.

The man I've been dating for five months has asked me to marry him. He has already bought the ring. I told him I wanted to wait until I know him better. I think I love him, but I want to be sure my feelings are real.

There are a few things about him that bother me. He is 27, and has had only one semester of college. This certainly isn't going to set well with my family because we are all college graduates and have professions. The age difference isn't going to set too well with them either.

He is mature, responsible, hard-working and earns $35,000 a year, but it's only a job — not a profession.

My parents have met him once, briefly, and they don't know he's only 27, and not a college graduate.

Something else bothers me: I don't like the ring he bought for me.

VIRGO

DEAR VIRGO: Don't say yes until you don't give a hoot what your family thinks about his age, his non-professional job, or anything else. And should you ever reach that point, if the ring still bothers you enough to influence your decision — say no!

DEAR ABBY: Why is so much emphasis placed on sex these days? Like eating and sleeping, sex is just another bodily function. Some people require more than others. And there are a lot of folks who hardly ever think about it.

Today, everywhere you look you see articles and books telling you how to have "good" sex. There are even therapists to teach people how to do something that comes naturally when two people love each other. My sainted mother would turn over in her grave if she knew that people are actually going to specialists to get instructions on how to make love.

Let's be realistic, Abby. The average person falls in love once (maybe twice) in a lifetime. Unfortunately, some people never fall in love, but they find other things in life that are equally fulfilling and rewarding.

Maybe if we stopped talking about sex so much, we'd have fewer hookers, rapists and sex-crazy people. Right?

LEVELHEADED

DEAR LEVELHEADED: Wrong! Hookers have always been with us. (Isn't prostitution known as the oldest profession?)

And it's time that myth about rape is put to rest. The rapist is more interested in degrading and humiliating women than he is in achieving sexual gratification.

Finally, sex between two people who love each other does not always insure mutual satisfaction nor does it come naturally. Our early training has conditioned many of us to regard sex as nasty and sinful. But thanks to therapy ("lessons," if you will), we can be taught to overcome our inhibitions and hangups, and enjoy sex without guilt.

DEAR ABBY: I have some standard answers for nosy people who ask me how old I am. I always say, "Plenty nine."

And when I'm asked how much I weigh, I say, "One hundred and too much."

Bush Draws Attention

Will George Bush be the Jimmy Carter for the Republican Party of 1980?

In 1976 Carter was virtually unknown until he scored some wins in state primaries and caucuses. His campaign gathered steam, and he went on to win the Democratic nomination and eventually the presidency of the United States.

Bush was not unknown when this campaign began, but he certainly was not in the league with Ronald Reagan, John Connally or Sen. Howard Baker.

Yet, here is Bush the victor in the GOP Puerto Rican caucuses. Political observers began looking him over in earnest when he won the Iowa caucuses, beating out the virtually invincible Ronald Reagan.

There is plenty yet to be seen in the campaigning for the Republican presidential nomination. The momentum could shift many times before the convention this summer.

George Bush is clearly in the race however — and he has already made some believers.

A Familiar Face In Canada

A familiar face has returned to Canadian government only months after he "retired."

In a stunning reversal, Elioit Trudeau's Liberal Party has won the elections.

Trudeau will be returned to the office of prime minister replacing Joe Clark of the Conservative Party.

Trudeau, who was prime minister for 11 years, was ready to retire a short while back; instead he finds himself back in power, and facing old and new Canadian problems.

THIS AFTERNOON Top Energy-Saver

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Apparently Tar Heels are becoming greenhouse fanatics.

State Energy Division specialists say the various benefits of a greenhouse attached to the home make that energy-saving system one of the most attractive and least expensive techniques around.

John Manuel with the Department of Commerce said a brief public mention of availability of drawings and plans from his office resulted in a run on the supply recently — more than 3,000 requests flooded in.

Proof of the high level of interest is seen in the list of grant recipients recently approved for state and federal assistance in special projects:

In Charlotte, four solar greenhouses will be built experimentally to help heat low-income homes and prove their efficiency for wider use; a two-story greenhouse to provide heat and to grow vegetables will be built at Campbell Folk School at Brasstown; the Coalition for Safe Energy in Greensboro is building a greenhouse for food and heat; and Four Leaf Farms at Durham plans one for heat and commercial production of vegetables.

At Home
This is a practical thing which people can do at home," Manuel says. "It doesn't cost a lot, and you can do it yourself."

If one wishes only to heat the house using solar energy, then any of dozens of commercial solar heating devices would probably prove more efficient; but considerably more costly.

Besides, says Manuel, the fringe benefits of a greenhouse make it much more attractive.

First, naturally, is the use of a greenhouse for growing vegetables year-round. Using proper growing methods, a reasonably-sized greenhouse can keep a family in fresh vegetables with little investment.

Then there is simply the beauty of a greenhouse. Attached to an existing house or planned as part of the construction of a new one, a greenhouse floods the building with light and fresh air and properly planned can become an "outdoor retreat" even on coldest winter days.

Properly designed and constructed, a greenhouse captures a lot of warmth from the sun which can be circulated throughout the house. From inside or out, the structure adds beauty in composting toilet which would conserve water and be useful where septic tanks present problems all center around the home.

Gibson said there is interest in greenhouses which amounts to a craze among knowledgeable people seeking energy alternatives.

"The general public isn't aware of this just yet, but there is a boom coming," Gibson believes.

contrast to some of the solar heat collectors which use exposed collecting devices and large heat storage and circulating systems.

Jim Gibson, chief of the state's Energy Division, said the grants awarded for projects in North Carolina recently are only the first round. "We are just beginning; but already we can see a chance for the system to really work."

Boom Ahead

The 11 grants went to small groups or individuals for highly personalized projects centered around providing comfort at home, for the most part. One firm is being backed in finding a way to convert oil or gas furnaces into wood-burning heaters, and another to a craft shop at Cherokee to install a wood-burning furnace using wood shavings formerly considered waste.

But the greenhouses, a collector system for water heaters which can be installed in a driveway or rooftop, and an experiment with a

Not Like Any Other

WASHINGTON — There is entirely too much talk about going to war these days. Strangers have been asking me lately, "Do you think there is going to be a war?" in the same tone they used not long ago to inquire if I thought there was going to be a recession.

I don't have any idea if there is going to be a war or not. But if there is one, it's not going to be like any other we've ever seen. The war we keep talking about these days has to do with another nuclear power and, therefore, it probably isn't going to live up to the nostalgia we all seem to have for World War II.

Before everybody gets too excited about us getting into another world war, I believe they should at least know what one could be like.

"Hello. Give me Bob Hope. Bob, how would you like to do a show for our troops in Yemen this Christmas?" "BBBBRR-ROOOOOOOOOOOO MMMMMMMMMMMMM!" "Never mind, Bob — there is no Yemen."

"Frank, I just wrote this great World War III song with Jimmy. Listen, 'Ivan, you SOBvan don't mess with me. You may throw your weight around, but we will get up off the ground. Ivan...' "BBBBRR-ROOOOOOOOOOOO MMMMMMMMMMMMM!"

"Mrs. Miniver, I know this will be tough to take, but your son and husband were lost at sea. It's harder for those of us on the home front." "BBBBRR-ROOOOOOOOOOOO MMMMMMMMMMMMM!"

"Elrod, I want you to know that all of us here at Four Corners are proud that you are going off to serve your country. Four Corners has always been the first to answer the bugle call when the enemy is at the door, and while we are safe and sound, there isn't a man here who wouldn't rather be in your shoes if he had the choice." "BBBBRR-ROOOOOOOOOOOO MMMMMMMMMMMMM!"

"Hi, guys. Welcome to the Stage Door Canteen. Now who is the first sailor who's

To the editor:

Greenville's mayor, Don McGlohon, stated at a meeting Thursday night, Feb. 14, that he feels every citizen of Pitt County deserves the same high level of rescue service afforded Greenville residents.

I feel that I must inform him that there are seven county volunteer rescue squads that feel the same way. That is why we train many hours on our own time, have fund-raising projects to help pay our own way and answer calls at 3 a. m. in 18-degree weather.

The pay that we get is the sincere thank you notes, words of praise and very generous contributions from the people we serve. If he doubts our service, he should consult with the towns of Ayden, Bethel, Falkland, Farmville, Fountain Grifton and Winterville. I think he will find that thousands upon thousands of dollars worth of vehicles, buildings and equipment are available and were furnished primarily by these communities that believe in us.

To the citizens of Greenville, I say consider moving to one of these communities where rescue squads still answer rescue calls and the fire department answers fire calls.

To Mr. McGlohon, I say you are the mayor of Greenville and not Pitt County. The County Commissioners support our rescue efforts throughout the county. You owe the county volunteer rescue squads an apology. We do, in fact, provide the high level of service that our communities deserve.

To the editor:

I read with interest the Hotline item entitled "Poor Service" which appeared Feb. 11, referring to poor window service at the main office of the Greenville Post Office. I could not agree more with the writer of that letter and anyone whose job requires daily visits to the Greenville Post Office has my complete sympathy.

Mr. Mills' reply was so indicative of the "take it or leave it" attitude of the Greenville Post Office that I feel compelled to voice my opinion. In suggesting that customers don't come during "rush hours," Mr. Mills confirms that postal workers have long ago lost touch with the real world and its needs. In that real world, Mr. Mills, people's jobs often require that they report to work long before the Post Office opens and work until long after it closes. It will surprise you to know, also, that in order to provide the quality of goods and services which are demanded in the free enterprise system of business, many people still work on weekends and holidays.

If Mr. Mills really believes that window service at the Greenville Post Office is good, then God help us if it ever gets bad. He has the audacity to state that Greenville P. O. lines are "no longer than the banks." If Mr. Mills will show me a bank in Greenville which routinely has lines extending from the tellers' windows to the main entrance, I'll show him a bank about to change management. Maybe that would solve the "non-existent" problems at the Greenville Post Office.

Strength For Today

THE WORD OF LIFE

It is remarkable how many public figures in the past have noted the importance of the Bible as a moral guide in our national life. The following are just a few of many examples:

Said George Washington, "It is impossible rightly to govern the world without God and the Bible."

President Woodrow Wilson, in a public address said, "I ask every man and woman in this audience that from this day on they will realize that part of the destiny of America lies in their daily perusal of this great book."

General Eisenhower remarked, "To read the Bible is to take a trip to a far land where the spirit is strengthened and faith renewed."

General Douglas MacArthur has written, "Believe me, sir, never a night goes by, be I ever so tired, but I read the Word of God before I go to bed."

Not only the famous, but the humble people in all walks of life have re-echoed the above sentiments.

Chill In New Hampshire

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

NASHUA, N.H. — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, buoyed by a surprisingly strong second in Maine's caucuses, entered New Hampshire three days later for a chilling of hopes to revive his challenge against President Carter in this state's first-in-the-nation primary.

Kennedy began the last two weeks of his New Hampshire campaign in the state's southern tier along the Massachusetts border, once considered inviolable Kennedy country. Armed with new issues and an escalating attack on Carter, the senator and his entourage started the day sky high. But coolness toward Kennedy — from businessmen, students, factory workers, men and women in the streets — chilled the senator. As they day wore on, his exuberance departed and his performance diminished.

This experience buttresses the view of Democratic politicians here that the New Hampshire showdown Feb. 26 will have little to do with either organization or issues. It is a choice of character between Jimmy Carter and Ted Kennedy, and all signs encountered by Kennedy suggest the choice now is in Carter's favor.

Although private polls show Carter well ahead with few voters still undecided, the president's managers here are not ruling out a close outcome or even conceivably a Kennedy upset, for one reason: southern tier towns such as Nashua, with many residents commuting to Massachusetts jobs and not viewed by others in the state as true Hampshiremen. Their erratic voting behavior is credited with the unexpected defeat of statewide incumbents in recent elections.

Kennedy was ready for them, as he was not ready for a similar climactic swing through Iowa two weeks before the caucuses there. In Iowa, he had nothing of substance to say; in New Hampshire, he has reverted to standard liberal dogma. While in Iowa he flinched from sniping at the president in time of international crisis, he has bludgeoned him in New Hampshire for letting the Iranian hostage crisis go beyond its 100th day.

Much to the delight of New Hampshire's original Draft Kennedy backers, he is running a presidential campaign that now not only is run by George McGovern's old staffers but echoes McGovern's ideology. Kennedy's basic campaign speech now proposes government control of the economy unsurpassed in a democratic nation. In foreign policy, he talks of "avoiding needless confrontation" with the Soviet Union.

With this message, it was unfortunate for Kennedy that his first post-Maine appearance was a Southern New Hampshire Association of Commerce breakfast. The atmosphere was frigid, but it is doubtful that the temperature would have risen appreciably had his message been less McGovernesque. As the senator entered the hall, the businessmen's wives stared at him with undisguised contempt.

Nor did Kennedy evoke enthusiasm from a forum that has been a favorite for him and his two brothers: the high school assembly. At three high schools, Kennedy's efforts to play on Carter's draft registration proposal generated no excitement. He told an assembly at Nashua High School: "A Carter Doctrine that will register you for the draft will send another generation of Americans on to the Persian Gulf to protect OPEC pipelines." The reaction from the students: silence.

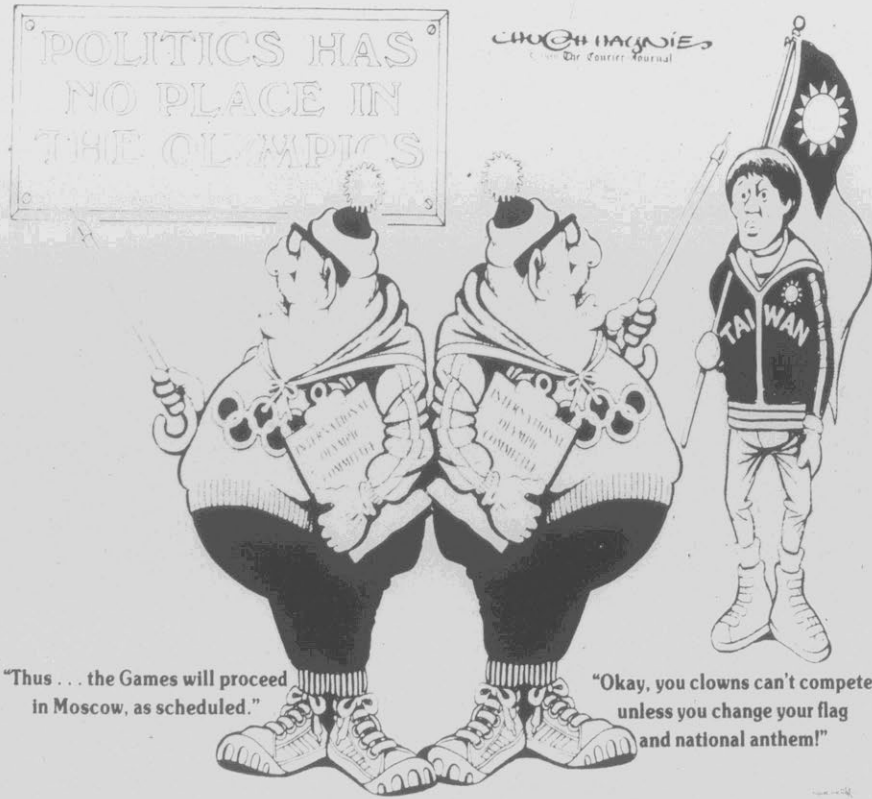

On hand-shaking tours through Sanders Industries here (an electronics defense contractor) and through downtown Nashua, Kennedy often seemed nervous and, again, stirred little excitement.

By late afternoon, Kennedy's buoyancy had gone flat — and not just because the reception had been cool. With Carter obviously on the verge of a breakthrough on the Iranian hostages, Kennedy's attack on the president seemed inappropriate. When the White House accused Kennedy of playing politics with the hostage question, Kennedy and his advisers held an emergency meeting at the Timberlane High School principal's office and decided not to back down. But at his next stop, Salem High School, Kennedy seemed subdued.

Nor is it sure that his tough television commercials and personal speeches prodding Carter to come out of the White House and campaign will not backfire. At Sanders Industries, Kennedy perfunctorily asked for help from one woman worker in her late-50s, who smiled sweetly. But when we asked her choice, she replied: "Carter. Everybody's for Carter." Why? "You shouldn't talk about a president the way Kennedy does."

Yet, it may be his only hope. Another woman worker at Sanders, also close to 60, told us she had been for Carter but was so upset by his refusal to campaign that she would now be for Kennedy — except for one thing: Chappaquiddick.

View Of Investment Clubbers

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — About five years ago some Detroit-area gentlemen met in a friendly contest to see who could choose the most successful list of 10 stocks, the results to be measured on Dec. 31, 1979.

The results weren't bad. While no money was involved in the friendly wager, some of the gentlemen either owned some of the stocks or went out and bought them.

The poorest performance was an overall gain of 141.5 percent, the best a soaring 375.7 percent, one share each of the 10 stocks increasing from $71.47 in 1974 to $266.75 in 1979.

The other three winners showed gains of 267.6 percent, 170.5 percent and 142.6 percent, respectively. In the same span the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks advanced 36 percent.

Of 40 stocks selected, only three — Emery Air Freight, American Home Products and Schering-Plough — declined in value during the period. Of the others, only four failed to double in price.

The big gainers: Amcord, 1033 percent; Trinity Industries, 955 percent; Coastal States Gas, 504; Great Lakes Chemicals, 586; Ryder Systems, 507; and Universal Instruments, 555 percent.

The five contestants were and still are members of the stock review committee of the National Association of Investment Clubs in nearby Royal Oak. Despite their differences on which stocks to choose, they were united in one belief, that the market was at or near its low.

The Dow Jones industrial average was then at 616.24, a depressed level when compared with peaks during the past 15 years of between 900 to 1,000, or slightly higher. The investment mood was sour.

At their luncheon, the men made one limitation: The selections must be from among 300 stocks listed in 23 years of "Stocks to Study," a feature of "Better Investing," the investment club magazine.

George Nicholson, a founder of the investment club movement, won with a portfolio that included these stocks:

Amcord, which rose from $3 to a buyout price of $34 a share last December; Great Lakes Chemical, which rose 586 percent to $37.75 from $5.50; Coastal States Gas, which jumped 504 percent to $35.50 from $5.875; Moog, up 427 percent to $10.875 from $2.15; and American Family, which rose from $2.15 to $10.875, or 406 percent.

The rest of Nicholson's list consisted of Owens-Corning, up 125 percent to $28.50 from $12.69; North American Philips, up 110 percent to $26.75 from $12.75; U.S. Life, up 133 percent to $23.25 from $10; Detrex Chemical, up 271 percent to $32 from $8.625; and Tiger International, which gained 162 percent to $19 from $7.25 in 1974.

And what do these gentlemen think of the current market, which was more than 250 points higher as the market opened this week?

Thomas O'Hara of the National Association of Investment Clubs (1515 E. Eleven Mile Rd., Royal Oak, Mich. 48067), who came in second, believes "most stocks, when prices are related to earnings, aren't overpriced."

HEW Orders Ignoring Of Abortion Restrictions

By LEE GOULD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is moving quickly to carry out a Supreme Court order that it ignore congressional restrictions, at least temporarily, and pay for all medically necessary abortions for poor women.

Within hours of the one-sentence order Tuesday, the government took action to restore payments in a broad range of abortion cases. "Medicaid will pay for all medically necessary abortions," the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said in a notice sent to regional offices and individual states.

The notices, sent in English and Spanish, tell women to ignore previous restrictions based on congressional guidelines. The court plans a full hearing later this year on Congress' authority to set limits on the kinds of abortions that can be financed with federal money.

"The court has held that it is your right to seek a confidential Medicaid abortion and no benefits may be withheld from you for doing so," HEW said.

The court voted 6-3 not to overturn a decision by U.S. District John Dooling in New York City, who had ruled that the congressional restriction on abortion payments was unconstitutional.

The court also voted 6-3 to consolidate the New York case with another abortion case it accepted for review last November. The court ordered that all briefs in the New York case be submitted by April 10, setting the stage for a definitive ruling possibly by the end of June.

The old restriction, called the Hyde amendment, allowed Medicaid abortions only for women whose lives were endangered by their pregnancies or who were the victims of rape or incest.

After Tuesday's ruling, HEW said the determining factors in a Medicaid abortion will include the woman's physical, emotional and psychological condition, as well as age. Teenagers and women over 35 would more likely be considered eligible.

The ruling was praised by the American Civil Liberties Union and the Center for Constitutional Rights as "a great day for liberty. Poor women all over the country can once again get Medicaid-funded abortions."

But Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., who sponsored the amendment, accused the justices of usurping congressional power and restoring "abortion on demand."

Looking ahead to the court's definitive ruling later this year, Hyde said, "I don't see a great cause for optimism when a majority of the justices reversed the status quo before a full hearing was held."

But he predicted the ruling would spur anti-abortion groups seeking a constitutional amendment to limit abortions.

The ruling, however, won't have much impact in 26 states, which already have been providing abortion payments. Another 23 states, however, will now have to make financed abortions available. One state, Arizona, does not participate in the Medicaid program.

Officials at HEW estimate that 470,000 abortions could be financed by Medicaid over the next year, at a cost of $88 million.

In New York, one state official said about 35,000 abortions are performed each year at a cost of about $4.5 million in state, county and city funds. A state official in South Carolina said only 11 Medicaid abortions were performed there last year but estimated that figure would increase to about 120 a month.

Garwood's Court Martial Is Officially Set For March 4

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Marine Corps officials have set March 4 as the opening date of a court-martial for Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, who faces charges of desertion and collaboration with the enemy in Vietnam.

But it may be late March before the first testimony is heard against the 33-year-old Indiana native.

A Marine spokesman said Tuesday that the first session of the court-martial will deal only with administrative matters with a recess of several days probably following.

Garwood returned to the United States last March after nearly 14 years in Vietnam. He claimed he had been held prisoner by the Vietnamese communists, but former American prisoners of war have said he collaborated with the enemy.

Maj. John Schmidt, public affairs officer at Camp Lejeune in eastern North Carolina, said Tuesday that Garwood's court-martial will begin on March 4 with a day or so of administrative matters.

Although testimony could begin immediately after the administrative session, it probably won't start until later in the month, Schmidt said.

"It's part of the general court-martial but it's a session to deal with procedural matters not directly related to testimony — motion preparations and timetables for witnesses," Schmidt said of the opening session.

Brig. Gen. David B. Barker, commanding general at Camp Lejeune, last week ordered a court-martial for Garwood on the basis of evidence from a military hearing.

Garwood, who has denied the allegations, will be tried on these charges:

—That he solicited American forces to throw down their arms.

—That he deserted in time of war.

—That he collaborated with the enemy by acting as a guard, interpreter, informer, interrogator and indoctrinator.

—That he punched an American POW in the ribs.

—That he said to another American prisoner "I spit on you and all people like you disgust me." and "You're in the military only for the retirement, blood money off of the Vietnamese people."

If convicted, the Indiana native could receive a maximum sentence of life in prison.

Garwood, who works as a mail clerk on the base, is under no more restrictions than any other Marine, pending the outcome of his case.

Greenville Missionary Is Terror Victim

Elder Rulon F. Stacey has arrived in Greenville as a missionary for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Attackers shot and bayoneted to death a Swiss priest, the second missionary to be slain in Rhodesia since the cease-fire went into effect Jan. 4.

Authorities said the Rev. Kilian Huesser, 38, a member of the Swiss Mission Society of Bethlehem, was killed Tuesday by 15 armed men who attacked his mission 40 miles south of Fort Victoria and led away several hostages.

Another priest was killed in the area two weeks ago, allegedly by guerrillas loyal to black leader Robert Mugabe, whose party is expected to take most of the 80 seats reserved for blacks in parliamentary elections next week.

The other seats are expected to go to followers of former Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa and Joshua Nkomo, Mugabe's co-leader in the guerrilla alliance that fought Ian Smith's white minority government for seven years.

Smith's party took the 20 parliamentary seats reserved for whites in voting last week.

Britain's interim governor in Rhodesia, Lord Soames, so far has been unsuccessful in his attempts to end political violence as the former colony heads toward black-majority rule and independence from the crown.

In neighboring South Africa, the Rand Daily Mail newspaper quoted South African military experts as saying South African troops would be sent into Rhodesia after the Feb. 27-29 elections if the South African government believes this is warranted.

"In the event of a complete breakdown of government, and chaos in Rhodesia, South Africa will feel duty-bound to intervene militarily," the paper quoted the experts as saying.

"There might be pockets of refugees cut off from South Africa, and if they want to come here, South Africa will be forced to take a hand — we will not wait to be asked," one expert said.

He and the others said two developments in Rhodesia could cause South Africa to send in troops: the "massacre" of fleeing refugees, and incursions into Rhodesia from front-line states sympathetic to Mugabe.

Vote-Change Is Ruled Out

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — All was quiet when the state Senate first used its new electronic voting system. Afterward, there was plenty of sound — mostly protests.

"The bill passes ... and the system works," announced Lt. Gov. James Brickley, the presiding officer. He was a little premature.

It took only a few seconds Tuesday for senators to realize they could not cast a last-second vote — or change their mind — once their desk-top buttons were pushed and the vote locked in.

Senators long have been able to add their vote, or change it — for up to two years after the vote was taken as long as their ballot didn't change the outcome.

Under new rules adopted for electronic voting — rules that obviously few senators read — you get 60 seconds to vote. That's it. But senators kept complaining they often are away from their desks — usually helping constituents, they said — and need more time to vote or a chance to vote late.

"That's an absurd procedure," fumed Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Detroit. "You're going to discover the machine is going to become more important than you."

But Sen. John Mowat, R-Adrian, defended the new rules. "It's going to force us to be a little bit more attentive — to be in our chairs," he said.

Benefit Dinner Sale On Friday

Dinners will be sold for the benefit of Soul Saving Station's Church's building fund beginning on Friday and Saturday mornings at ten, eleven, and twelve o'clock.

The dinners will include fried chicken, chitterlings, and pig's feet with vegetables, breads, salads and dessert. Anyone wishing to make an order may call 756-0437, 752-9830 or 758-8975.

Dr. Rob Will Serve Seminar

Charles G. Rob, M. D. of Greenville will serve on the faculty of a seminar on surgical techniques and problems to be held July 15-18 at Colby College in Waterville, Me.

Rob is a professor of surgery in the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

'New Klan' Chieftain Uses Public Relations Skill

By The Tennessean
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Grand Wizard David Duke says, dispassionately, as if there is no dispute about it, "I am the new Klan." A four-month study of the KKK conducted by The Tennessean leaves no doubt at least that the 29-year-old leader of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan brought the hooded order out of the cow pasture and into the television studio, New York television talk show host Stanley Siegel says. "David Duke was made for the media." And NBC's Tom Snyder calls him intelligent, articulate and charming.

But, The Tennessean, reports in a series of copyrighted stories, Duke's organization is weak, and, in the scramble for Klan supremacy, Duke is hard-ly hit by defections.

"He doesn't have the staying power," Robert Shelton, the older, tougher Wizard of the United Klans of America, says. Shelton claims more members in a single state than Duke does in the nation.

Still it is Duke, a tall, muscular, well groomed and well spoken college graduate, who has managed to fashion a new mask for the Klan.

He has done it by waging a six-year campaign of massaging and manipulating the American media. Beginning before he graduated from Louisiana State University in 1974, he has haunted the radio and TV airwaves and hustled his way into newspaper city rooms, exuding a disarming charm, a lucid wit and an engaging style of conversation. He says he has given 850 interviews - in the process becoming the nation's best known Klansman.

"The reason I've gotten more press than the other Klan leaders is because I've done more and because I know something basic about public relations," he says.

Duke likes to be known not as a racist but a racialist. In his lexicon, racialism means white supremacy and black inferiority and anti-Semitism. His statements are practiced and polished by the years. He looks upon news interviews as intellectual wrestling matches.

Karl Hand, who broke with Duke, refers to his entire Klan operation as the David Duke Show. Though he has star quality, it seems to be a star few follow. Former associates and Klan watchers put his membership at no more than 2,000.

Part of the showmanship is prestidigitation: he turns things inside out.

"Whites," he says, "are the victims of the most massive discrimination in American history." Citing busing, affirmative action and the like, he says white America is about to be consumed by blacks, Hispanics, immigrants and boat people.

"If present birth rates and immigration trends continue," he says, "the white race will be a minority in this country by 2025."

Duke says he doesn't believe in violence but he was convicted last September of inciting to riot followers outside a Klan convention. And in Texas his Grand Dragon heads a Klan paramilitary unit.

Some of Duke's philosophy, especially when it turns to Jews, smacks of Nazism and he once appeared at a Tulane University Chicago Seven rally clad in a Nazi uniform. But he says he has never belonged to the Nazi party and objects to some of Hitler's character traits.

Duke runs his Klan from the Patriot Bookstore in a decaying section of Metairie, La. and from his home four blocks away. The house doubles as the Klan's national headquarters. He drives an old car and spends his spare time lifting weights and doing one-armed pushups.

His bookstore employees, true believers he says, get minimum wage for running the place and a mail-order business in Klan paraphernalia and publications.

With all his looks, talent and ambition, it is difficult to say why the mustachioed Duke, given all the media exposure, has not put together a more effective Klan organization.

It may be that he simply has not enough interest in the nuts and bolts work of following up on initial contacts. It may also be that he wears thin and that his arguments don't wash. Perhaps it is that his solutions are impractical on their face or too complex for his less educated adherents. Or it may simply be that his time has not come.

He is interested in politics. Twice he has lost elections for the state Senate. He announced last summer that he would run for president this year. But deadlines have passed in most of the 12 states where he said he planned to compete in Democratic primaries.

If first impressions meant members, media messiah David Duke's would be legion. But his followers often seem bent on felling him.

One in a long list is Bill Wilkinson, 37, of Denham Springs, La. Among Duke's earliest organizers, Wilkinson split with him in 1975 to found his own Invisible Empire. He took recruits with him and built Duke's most vigorous competitor for attention and support.

Duke's wife, Chole, whom Hand called the backbone of the Klan's office staff, moved to West Palm Beach, Fla. last summer. With her she took their two daughters.

Mrs. Duke met her husband - they are not divorced - as he sold racist literature on the LSU campus. She helped finance his early Klan organizing efforts from the day care center she ran from their home in Baton Rouge.

She was the Klan's Grand Genie but she preferred to stay out of the Klan limelight. She still speaks well of him.

Duke seems to take the defections in stride and blames them on the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. He says the league is conspiring with the defectors to destroy his Klan.

Sometimes in the midst of a Klan crowd, Duke suddenly seems remote and detached. When a reporter asked him about what seemed to be a spell of moodiness, he said: "It's lonely at the top."

CIA Critic 'Shocked' By High Court Ruling

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — "I'm shocked. I'm now facing abject poverty," ex-CIA agent Frank Snapp said after being ordered by the Supreme Court to give the government all the profits from a book he wrote without the spy agency's approval.

Interviewed by telephone hours after the court's decision was announced Tuesday, Snapp said the shock had not worn off.

"I'm stunned that the court acted without even hearing arguments," he said. "I've been waiting for some word in the case but I never expected this."

Snapp wrote "Decent Interval," a book highly critical of U.S. involvement in Vietnam. The book was published in 1977 without first being submitted to the CIA - in violating of contracts Snapp signed when joining the agency. Snapp's father is a federal judge in Charlotte, N.C.

By a 6-3 vote Tuesday, the

justices ruled that because Snapp violated his contractual obligation he's not entitled to any of the profits reaped.

"This remedy is the natural and customary consequence of a breach of trust," the court said.

Snapp said the ruling means he must return about $118,000 to the government - most of which already is spent.

Noting that he is in debt to his publisher for $10,000 - "money to live on" - Snapp said his total debt is about $130,000.

"I don't know how I'll go about paying this off," he said.

Snapp's free-speech arguments - contending that the contracts covering even non-classified information imposed unconstitutional prior restraints - were rejected in a footnote to the court's unsigned opinion.

"This court's cases make clear that ... the CIA could have acted to protect substantial government interests by imposing reasonable restrictions on employee activities that in other contexts might be protected by free-speech rights," the opinion said.

Justice John Paul Stevens, in a dissenting opinion for himself and Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall, called the ruling "unprecedented and drastic."

Some Data Surprises On School Expulsions

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A majority of the students expelled from North Carolina's public schools during the 1977-78 school year were black males, a study released Tuesday showed.

The same held true for students suspended from school, although only 34 percent of the state school population was black that year.

"The kind of behavior rewarded in school is typical of white, middle-class behavior," said Dudley E. Flood, assistant state superintendent for public instruction.

"Any deviation from that behavior is a lot more typical of blacks than whites," he said.

Of the 1.18 million students statewide in 1977-78, 890 were expelled. Of those, 479 were black.

Of the 46,998 students suspended, 23,585 were black. An expulsion means the student cannot return to school for the remainder of the year.

Statewide expulsion and suspension figures were tabulated at the request of the governor's office. Betty Owen, the governor's education advisor, said the figures were requested "because we're interested in knowing what is happening in terms of discipline in the schools."

She declined comment on the figures.

The study also showed that 41 percent of the state's 145 school systems didn't expel any students during the year surveyed. The state's largest school system, Mecklenburg County, was one of the systems that had no expulsions.

Seventeen systems with more than 5,000 students reported no expulsions.

"I'm surprised that any unit with more than 5,000 students didn't have any expulsions," Flood said. He said he didn't know why so many systems had no expulsion rates.

The figures were released by the state Department of Public Instruction.

Flood cautioned that the figure on suspensions may be inaccurate because of possible differences in the way suspensions were computed by the individual school systems.

Werewolves Must Wait

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) —

Werewolves, "moonlight madness" sales and assorted full-moon freaks will have to wait until March, say astronomers at the Morehead Planetarium.

There will be no full moon in the month of February, the first time the phenomenon has occurred since 1961.

"It's not really unusual, just cyclical," said April Whitt, an education assistant at the planetarium. She explained the moon rises every 29.5 days, the last time on Jan. 31, the next on March 1.

Volumes have been written about full-moon superstitions, "but the lack of a moon is a different sort of thing, one that a folklore expert probably wouldn't be concerned with," said Don Patterson, chairman of the folklore study program at the University of North Carolina.

Plan Handicapped Awareness Week

Activities scheduled for the week long observance of Deaf and Handicapped Student Awareness Week at East Carolina University will begin on February 24, with the final events set for March 1.

Highlight events scheduled include: — Wednesday, Feb. 27 — A workshop will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. in the Biology Auditorium. Staff members, instructors and students will comprise the workshop panel. The public is invited to attend the free workshop.

— Thursday, Feb. 28 — At 7:30 p.m., "Fantasy," a dramatic presentation featuring "sign" lyrics of popular songs will be performed at 7:30 p.m. in Mendenhall Student Center. Tickets are available from club members or from the Central Ticket Office.

— Thursday and Friday, Feb. 28 and 29 — Sign language interpreters for public sessions of the annual ECU Speech and Hearing Symposium will be provided in the symposium in the Carol Belk Building on these two days, sponsored by the ECU School of Allied Health and Social Professions.

— Saturday, March 1 — At 8 p.m., a free performance, open to the public, will be presented by the N. C. Theater of Gesture at the ECU Methodist Student Center, Fifth Street. The play to be given is "Woyzeck."

Also, a number of other events are to take place during the week, including a local television interview, and the placement of information booths in at least three campus locations.

MIA Mom Is Fighting Status Board's Ruling That Her Son Is Dead

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer
EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Jean Macdonald always could count on her son George to make her laugh and remember her on special occasions. He was one of the pleasant certainties in her life.

But for the last seven years, uncertainty about George has been tearing the 69-year-old woman apart.

"I just pray everything is OK for George," she said. "I don't think we can dictate in life what can be, but I wish I knew...."

"I am getting on in years, and I know of no greater hurt. When you have a death, it's final. You have proof of it. Life must go on."

It was shortly before Christmas 1972 when Air Force officials came to the Macdonald home to say that their 24-year-old son's plane had been shot down over Laos.

Two of the 16 men in the plane had definitely survived but there was no trace of George and the others, Mrs. Macdonald said. Searchers found open parachutes in the area, but no identification tags or bodies.

On Tuesday, Mrs. Macdonald opened her front door to another Air Force official, a courier bringing an unsigned typewritten note that read:

"The status review board has made the recommendation to terminate your son's missing status since they can no longer reasonably presume him to be alive. The Secretary of the Air Force will make the final determination as to Capt. George D. Macdonald's status."

The Air Force conducts hearings to determine if the status of men who are missing in action should be changed to presumed killed in action. When a panel of three Air Force colonels makes that recommendation it is passed on to the Secretary of the Air Force to be finalized.

Mrs. Macdonald is upset. For seven years, she has pressured the government to find out what happened to her son, and she says too many discrepancies still exist in government reports for a final ruling to be made on George's case. Air Force officials say a change in status does not change the government's intention to obtain a full accounting of Macdonald — or some 20 other Air Force men still listed as missing since the Vietnam war.

Mrs. Macdonald disagreed. "It's an effort to sweep the issue under the rug," she said.

"It's a terrible tragedy to put our men in conflict and then abandon them," she said. "When you don't have any evidence to the contrary, you've got to keep up hope."

For seven years, Mrs. Macdonald wrote hundreds of letters, attended conventions of relatives of MIAs and even flew to Washington to try to see then-Secretary of State William Rogers. She was able to see only an aide, who provided no help, she said.

In recent months, her efforts have gone into resisting the move to have George declared dead. Her declining health prevented her from attending Monday's hearing at Randolph Air Force Base in San Antonio, Texas.

"What really hurts terribly now is that I sent them 30 or more questions to answer," she said Wednesday. "I asked that their answers be backed up by documentary evidence, but there was no back-and-forth here. They presented their findings and that was that."

She also said she will seek a congressional investigation of status review procedures.

Mrs. Macdonald has no proof her son is alive, but she said he is constantly in her thoughts. She remembers the day — now more than 31 years ago — when she gave birth to George and his twin brother, Christopher, the last of nine children.

As a boy, George was tough to put to bed, his mother recalled. "He'd like to know what was going on even as a child," she said.

George learned to play bridge at the age of 5, loved to arm wrestle, hated to do chores and was good with numbers, she recalled.

George also was good at making his mother laugh. "He had a very good sense of humor," she said. "And he was an all-around boy. He stood up for what was right."

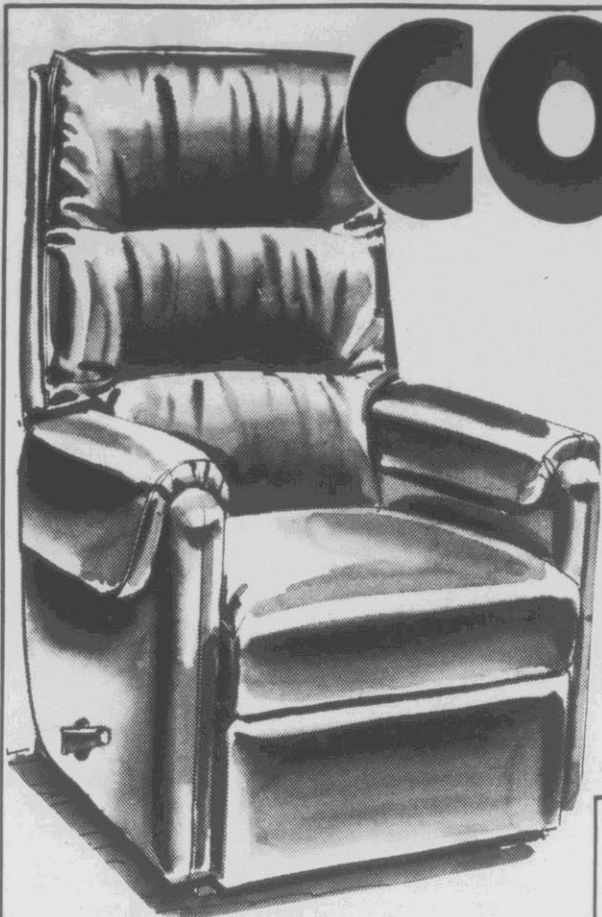

George grew up in Evanston, went to Ohio State University where he joined the track team and ROTC before heading to Thailand in the summer of 1972.

She said that as he packed just before leaving, he expressed reluctance about keeping all his belongings. "He said, 'I just don't think I'm ever going to see you or my family again.' It was a very eerie thing," she said.

On that summer day seven years ago, Mrs. Macdonald had her last conversation with her son. "In a way," she said, "seven years is a long time. But in many ways, it's just like yesterday we were laughing together and doing things together."

Newsprint From Cane Devised

HAVANA (AP) — While some experts predict a shortage of newsprint, particularly in Third World countries, by the early 1980s, an encouraging development has recently taken place in Cuba with the inauguration of a plant to produce newsprint from bagasse, the fibers from processed sugar cane.

Cuba was chosen for the project, financed by the U.N. Development Program, since it is one of the largest sugar producers in the world and accumulates some seven million dry tons of bagasse fiber annually.

At present it is necessary to mix wood fiber with bagasse to produce newsprint of the strength and quality needed for high-speed presses, but experts are looking toward the day when newsprint may be produced solely from bagasse, thus averting the chance of a newsprint shortage.

Birds Prove A Fascinating Pet For Many People

By MIKE CLANCY
United Press International
Animals give Fred Koehler pleasure. But his alligator bit his father-in-law and had to go. His spider monkey couldn't take the cold weather. And his ferret was stolen.

Koehler's Pawtucket, R.I., apartment was kind of quiet after that. He had only a Pekingese dog, a Siamese cat and about 100 tropical fish around for companionship.

So last May, he went looking for a new pet. Since then he has invested more than $1,000 in the nation's second biggest pet industry — birds.

"Oh, I guess I got a little carried away. But as long as my landlord doesn't find out, I'm content," Koehler said as he surveyed the array of cages stuffed into a corner of his bedroom.

Millions of people are cooing over, breeding, showing, selling, loving, training and flaunting birds as common as the chicken and as exotic as $5,000 hyacinth macaws.

It's impossible to precisely count how many people own birds in the United States. The Pet Information Bureau of New York, however, estimates at least 20 million people own 40 million feathered friends. More than 23 million birds were sold in 1978 alone, the bureau says.

A huge black-market is also responsible for imprecise estimates. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service estimates 50,000 parrots with a street value of $10 million were smuggled into Texas from Mexico in 1979.

Some agents believe bird-smuggling is now more lucrative than drug-smuggling. A parrot fetching $20 at the Mexican border will sell for $700 in Houston. And penalties for getting caught are much lighter for bird smugglers than drug pushers.

It's clear there's a market for birds.

Barbra Streisand gave two albino parakeets to a friend at a cost of nearly $600. "Mork from Ork" Robin Williams owns a parrot named "Cora Allen." Comic Jerry Lewis' family owns a parrot, as do Muhammad Ali's wife Veronica and light-footed Fred Astaire.

Movie director Stephen Spielberg's parrot whistles the UFO theme from his "Close Encounters of the Third Kind."

Soon-to-be-released films starring Marion Brando and George C. Scott will feature parrots, as will a new TV movie called "Ebony, Ivory and Jade."

Thousands of people breed their own birds.

John Moore, 32, of Allendale, N.J., breeds and sells more than 1,500 parakeets. He estimates he has spent nearly $15,000 on a private collection of exotic birds. He keeps them in a custom-made solarium "to impress people, you know."

People have a near-crazed fascination with birds.

Jane Brown, 33, of Willits, Calif., doesn't believe she is anything but normal, though she has about 3,000 birds of about 200 different species.

"I was the typical kid who stole baby birds out of nests and hand-fed them."

Mrs. Brown's enthusiasm is shared by her husband, Jim. He found himself in a take-it-or-leave-it situation.

"My husband woke up that first morning and there were birds singing and birdseed all over the place," Mrs. Brown said. "I didn't know if he was going to stay."

He stayed.

Now the Browns operate Mendocino Bird Farms, advertising in national magazines as the fastest growing bird wholesaler in northern California.

"My husband has a program he developed for training wild birds that have never been touched. Usually within 30 minutes he can have a wild cockatoo sitting on someone's hand without biting them," Mrs. Brown said.

David Lee, a psychiatric social worker at Lima State Hospital in Ohio, may be close to answering why people love birds so much.

In 1976 a wounded sparrow staggered into the old hospital. The hard-nosed, anti-social inmates who weren't talking to doctors or social workers secreted the bird in a closet and snuck food to it.

Lee realized he had stumbled onto something. The men were working together as a group for the first time.

Lee began letting the crim-nally insane inmates keep parrots, cockatoos, finches and doves in their rooms. He said there hasn't been a single case of cruelty.

"Men who can't talk to caseworkers or relatives react to the birds," he said.

One patient has taught a giant red parrot to walk down a hall and fetch a broom. The birds respond to the affection the men show them with an intelligence lacking with fish — the nation's hottest selling pet.

Birds don't require the attention, the space or the large amounts of food that other pets, such as dogs, need.

Whatever their reasons, people spend big bucks on birds.

African gray parrots, widely believed to be the best talkers and most easily tamed, can cost $600 each. White Crested Cockatoos, like "Fred" on the old "Baretta" TV cop series, go for $1,500 untrained. A tame and talking Scarlet Macaw can reap $2,000 for the seller.

Birds can be a long-term, though somewhat fragile, investment. Many parrots live to be over 100 years old. They are often included in wills.

Instead of buying birds, you can breed your own — once you've purchased the first pair, of course.

Kenneth and Elizabeth Tefft of Warwick, R.I., specialize in budgies, or as they are commonly known, parakeets.

Mrs. Tefft is national secretary of the 1,300-member American Budgerigar Society. Two rooms of her house are stuffed with mailing lists, requests for information, notices of shows and advertisements for printing in the group's monthly bulletin.

The paneled basement boasts hundreds of medals, plaques, trophies and ribbons for prize birds — and an aviary housing more than 150 budgies.

The aviary is equipped with special lights, automatically timed to mimic the sun. It has an oxygen ionizer to pique the sex drive of the birds, an exhaust fan to get rid of the offensive smell of bird droppings, special show cages and, most important of all, file cabinets stuffed with breeding records.

"That's where the fun of it is — the genetic experimentation," Tefft said.

He leaves a radio playing softly all day "to keep the birds content."

The Teffts made American bird show history by copping five of the top 10 prizes in a national-championship bird show in California, including first, second and third places.

"The novice sells his birds to pet stores," he said. "The expert with a reputation for top birds sells to other breeders."

To the Teffts, the birds are objects for display and pride, not pets.

But that's not the feeling of all large-scale operators.

To Gary Mortimer and John Ingraham, parrots are the most beloved creatures on earth. The two are owners of "Parrotise" in Hollywood, Calif..

They also have a parrot hotel, a "Rent-A-Parrot" service for those who want party decorations that squawk and talk, and the "Yenta Service," which will locate a friend or lover for feathered lonely hearts.

Within their pastel-blue building is cacophony. There are 500 to 600 parrots inside. Some are in cages. But scores are on perches, untethered and uncaged. Conversation is impossible without shouting.

"I usually sleep in the store," Ingraham said. "They require attention and you can't just tell them 'bye-bye dears, we're off for a week.'"

Ingraham and Mortimer sell parrot-feather fans, books, feathered hats, tape-recorded parrot calls, cages, perches, parrot candies and parrot toys, including mirrors, motorcycles, snowmen, chains and bells.

They claim the world's largest collection of parrot feathers, patiently gathered from molting birds.

"We would never pull a feather out of one of our birds," Ingraham said. "We would never — never ever — hurt one of our dears that way."

"The most expensive rent-a-parrot number we've ever done was for a Bar Mitzvah for this kid who wanted something different," Mortimer said. "We got $1,200 for one night."

"We had 30 parrots loose on branch perches around the walls of a ballroom at the Century Plaza Hotel. It was very classy. We were in tuxes."

Last year "Parrotise" grossed more than $200,000.

"But we can't keep help," Ingraham said. "People keep quitting. One day in the store, and especially after you explain to them about cleaning all the parrots, they just quit."

"It's so strange," he said. "But they'll not give up their business because of a lack of parrots and I think that's just help — they love their birds too much."

"We've been accused of being 'eccentrically dedicated' to our birds and I think that's just the nicest thing anyone could say," Ingraham said.

Dancer Defies Her Deafness

By GWEN FLORIO
Associated Press Writer
DOVER, Del. (AP) — Cindy Smith, deaf since birth, plans a career in a field where hearing is of major importance — ballet.

At age 16, she has already danced in New York in a production featuring ballet star Mikhail Baryshnikov, moving to music she could only feel.

"It was my first time to dance solo. I was so scared," she said of her performance in the Lincoln Center benefit last year, which also featured deaf dancers from around the world.

Cindy was the only dancer the show's planners could find in this country who normally performs with hearing dancers, the Delaware Regional Ballet Co.

But the tall, slender Dover High junior has been functioning in a hearing world ever since her parents removed her from a boarding school for the deaf when she was 5.

"Not all deaf children are dumb. She could speak better when she started that school than when she left. She lost 2½ years of her life there," her mother, Marian, recalled.

Ever since then, Cindy has done nearly everything her hearing companions can do — including one thing that was supposed to be impossible.

Deaf persons supposedly cannot dance on their toes — "on point" — since balance is centered in the inner ear.

"We didn't find that out until she'd already done it," Mrs. Smith said.

Cindy's parents enrolled her in the Marion Tracy Dance studio when she was 5 years old, after noticing that she seemed to respond to music.

"She had a lot of musical ability and rhythm, and could feel the music. Also, dancing is not a team activity. She could be on her own and not have to worry about being pushed around by other kids," Mrs. Smith said.

Cindy feels the vibrations of most songs through the air and the floor, although dances to soft music must be memorized after watching a teacher.

She now works six days a week after school teaching ballet to young children, and hopes eventually to make a career teaching dance to the deaf.

She said she also hoped to encourage more deaf people to live as she does, in a hearing world instead of among other deaf people and not relying solely on sign language for communication.

"That can keep children very deaf, very dependent. But Cindy's going to have to paddle her own canoe someday," her mother said.

Cindy says she plans to write a book someday about her experiences, in the hope that it might help others like her.

"After the New York performance, we got letters from as far away as Wyoming. Some were from prisoners, encouraging her. But most were from parents who wanted to know how to help their deaf children cope in a hearing world," Mrs. Smith said.

New from Martha White. Potatoes with a Southern accent!

Now you can get quick, convenient au gratin and scalloped potatoes with that famous smoked-ham flavor that's all the South's own. Martha White created special cheesy sauces with a tangy Southern-smoked taste to surround the thick, tender slices of potato in their new Scalloped and their new Au Gratin Potatoes. The potato has never been so Southern!

We'll give you 25¢ to go Southern the next time you serve potatoes.

The Love Affair Of Billy Prince And Chapel Hill

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The Southern Part of Heaven, he titled his book 30 years ago, and two generations of students still associate that characterization with Chapel Hill.

William Meade Prince, the author of the best-seller, adopted the village, and it adopted him. It was a rare love affair between a famous artist and a university community.

While "The Southern Part of Heaven" for the first time made Prince's name familiar to many Tar Heels, he had already established himself as one of the world's best known magazine illustrators.

Born in Roanoke, Va., in 1893, Billy Prince moved to Chapel Hill at the age of five. He and his mother (his father was a railroad man) lived with his grandfather, the Rev. William Meade, then rector of the Episcopal Church.

For the next 10 years, he was a popular youngster around town. His talent for art became evident, and some of his early drawings were made for a student named Frank Porter Graham, who worked on the staff of the university yearbook.

Prince later called Graham his first "editor."

Prince's book, published in New York in 1950 and illustrated by himself, described those early years in Chapel Hill.

When he was 15 years old, Billy Prince was taken by his parents to Birmingham, Ala. He saved his after-school earnings and went to New York to study at the School of Fine and Applied Art.

In his senior year, the budding artist entered a national drawing contest conducted by Collier's magazine. He won first prize. This brought him to the attention of editors of other magazines and of advertising agents.

During the next quarter of a century his illustrations became familiar in Collier's, McCall's, Saturday Evening Post, Cosmopolitan, Liberty, Ladies Home Journal, Woman's Home Companion and American magazine.

Publishers knew that many readers were attracted to interesting and amusing illustrations, and that these drawings often encouraged the reading of the stories that they accompanied.

Prince was given his commissions directly by the editors. They sent him the stories; he read them and picked out particularly challenging portions, then made drawings to illustrate the passages. The authors had no influence over the illustrator. In fact, they usually did not see the drawings until they were in print.

His illustrations for James Street's "They Know How" led to an enduring friendship, and it was Prince who persuaded Street to move to Chapel Hill.

In the 1920s, Prince became a popular artist for the Dodge automobile. He was smart enough, wrote one advertising executive, to "make something human out of car advertising." He was bold enough even to make drawings for Dodge without picturing a car.

By then, his drawings were selling for a thousand dollars or more — good money in those days.

He married Lillian Hughes and lived comfortably in Westport, Conn.

One of Prince's favorite drawings — a circus parade — was carved in redwood by Carl Boettcher. For many years the massive carvings were displayed in the Monogram Club at the University of North Carolina. Now they are seen by thousands of persons in the Carolina Inn cafeteria.

In 1940, Prince and his wife moved to Chapel Hill, where they joined in the life of the community. He taught in the Department of Art and for a short while was its acting director. He and his wife played roles in Paul Green's "The Lost Colony" at Fort Raleigh for several summers.

Prince toured military hospitals in America and Europe during the war, talking with and drawing pictures of the wounded men and later sending the originals to chosen relatives.

Only a year after reaching the peak of his popularity by publishing "The Southern Part of Heaven," William Meade Prince sat down on a towel in his studio in Chapel Hill and shot himself in the head.

A cryptic message, saying in part, "The end is inevitable," was left to puzzle the stunned community which he had done so much to publicize throughout the world.

Eleven years later his widow died in New York, leaving a handsome bequest to the university to be used toward a new building for the Carolina Playmakers. Billy Prince had not forgotten the university that he never attended but which he came to think of as his alma mater.

Beautification Meeting Set

There will be a meeting for all mayors and representatives from townships and communities in Pitt County to discuss county beautification. This meeting will be held at the Planter's National Bank Civic Room, downstairs at the Third Street bank office. The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 21.

The Keep Pitt County Clean and Beautiful Committee will present ideas for discussion and will help organize projects to beautify towns and communities.

Suggestions and volunteers are welcomed in this year's efforts to make Pitt County a cleaner and more scenic place to live.

Banks Hike Prime Rate

By The Associated Press
North Carolina banks joined others across the United States Tuesday in raising their prime lending rates to 15.75 percent, returning to the record level for business borrowers set last fall. Wachovia Bank and Trust boosted its prime rate from 15.25 percent. First-Citizens Bank and Trust hiked its prime from 15.5 percent.

North Carolina National Bank and First Union National Bank raised their prime rate by one-half of a percentage point.

The increases came as a result of the Federal Reserve's decision last Friday to advance the discount rate — the rate charged on loans to banks — by a full point to 13 percent in a bid to control inflation.

North Carolina law limits consumer loans and the interest rate on such loans is now lower than the banks' prime rate. Some bank executives have suggested that such a situation will jeopardize consumer loans.

May Find Use For Jonestown

WASHINGTON (AP) — The site of the Peoples Temple mass murder-suicide in Jonestown, Guyana, may become a new home for 1,500 refugees from Indochina, a private relief agency reports.

The agency, World Relief, is negotiating with the government of Guyana and the United Nations in hopes of turning Jonestown into a resettlement colony or a staging area for refugees. A 1978 mass murder-suicide at the agricultural commune in the South American country claimed 913 members of the Peoples Temple, including its leader, the Rev. Jim Jones.

Hospital Board..

Wooten, members of the executive committee, in addition to the chairman, vice chairman and secretary.

Associate Director Rick Gilstrap reported on work underway to eliminate deficiencies pointed out by the Joint Committee on Accreditation of Hospitals during its last visit. There were 58 recommendations, he said, and 47 of them should be taken care of by the first of April.

Herb Bailey was introduced to the board as the newly hired resource person for the PCMH Gift Fund.

Associate Nursing Director Betty Trought reported that the hospital is recruiting at nursing schools, job fairs and the student nurse association meeting. It was pointed out that 50 percent of the hospital employees are under 30 and single. More sources of single available men are needed to bring more nurses here, she said, plus excellent professional development opportunities.

A 12-hour day is being tried by some departments, she said, and some of the results seem good, though the effort is still in the trial stages, Trought indicated.

General Director Jack Richardson reported that the Health Systems Agency has given approval to the hospital's plan for providing additional non-acute beds at the Holiday Inn near the hospital. If the plan receives final approval from the state, it's hoped that the program can get underway Apr. 1.

The board gave approval to:

— bylaw changes that had been discussed at the January meeting.

— A contract between the hospital and the Greenville Dialysis Center for professional services.

— The payment of $7,621.80 for the modification of a microscope for the Department of Surgery.

$15,000 Presented Drainage District

A check for $15,298.20 was presented to the Drainage District Commissioners by Ralph Tucker of the State Soil and Conservation Commission at a ceremony near Grimesland Tuesday afternoon.

The check was the first installment of a grant approved for the ongoing Chicod Creek Watershed Project. The Watershed Project is located in Pitt County Drainage District No. 9, which is the first drainage district in North Carolina to receive funding under a new state program for small watershed projects.

A grant of $65,900 was initially approved but has been reduced because the construction costs are substantially less than estimated. The exact amount of the state grant is not known but is expected to be around $20,000.

The grant was authorized by the N.C. Soil and Water Conservation Commission under a new program to provide for state sharing of the construction cost for small watershed projects.

The Chicod Creek Watershed Project is designed for flood control and drainage.

The Department of Natural Resources and Community Development was represented by Carroll Pierce, chief of watershed planning for the Division of Soil and Water Conservation.

Low Profile By Trudeau's Wife

NEW YORK (AP) — Margaret Trudeau, whose appearances at New York discos sent photographers racing for their flash bulbs, reportedly will fly to Tokyo next month to open a disco-restaurant there.

The New York Daily News reported in today's editions that Mrs. Trudeau will be paid $20,000 for three appearances at the Night Story restaurant-disco when she arrives March 3. She only has to dance, the News said, and no interviews.

However, the estranged wife of Canadian Prime Minister-elect Pierre Trudeau would continue to maintain the low profile she established during her husband's comeback campaign.

Meanwhile, the day after Monday's election, Mounties resumed their guard of the Trudeaus' three children as they attended school. The News said school officials and students looked forward to the return of the Mounties, who play with the children during recess and help break up playground fights.

Gas Rationing A Costly Tangle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Secretary Charles W. Duncan says a gasoline rationing plan could turn out to be a $2 billion nightmare requiring as many as 50,000 new federal employees.

Duncan said Tuesday that instead of rationing, he would prefer a big excise tax on gasoline as a way to cut oil consumption.

Sue To Halt Developers

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The state filed suit Tuesday to block construction of a water system at West Onslow Beach, part of a fight over development of the property.

The state Division of Health Services, in a suit filed in Onslow County Superior Court, maintained that developers of New Topsail Shores failed to get state approval of the water system before they began installing it.

The division asked for an injunction barring further construction of the system.

Bob Riley, an assistant in the attorney general's office, said the state was more interested in getting plans for the system approved than it was in seeking fines.

The project is an 100-acre condominium and subdivision being developed near the New River Inlet. It was the center of a controversy last year over parking and public access.

Onslow County commissioners say they are trying to avoid development problems such as those that have plagued other coastal areas.

By monitoring development, they say they hope to maintain access to beaches for the public, while allowing development to continue.

The developers had asked to be released from an agreement on parking places after discovering they would be responsible for maintenance. However, the commissioners refused to release the developers from the agreement.

Slavery Plea

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A Durham minister has pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in California to conspiring to enslave members of his church in North Carolina. U.S. Attorney Mickey Michaux said Tuesday.

Michaux said the plea was entered last week by Bishop Robert A. Carr of the Church of God and True Holiness.

Carr and three other members of the church, including his daughter, were indicted by a federal grand jury in Durham last November on charges of conspiracy to enslave members of the church. They were accused of forcing three marriages among the members.

Carr's attorney, Harry Braverman, confirmed the plea but said only that his client had "worked out a plea bargain" with U.S. Attorney Joyce Babst in California.

Michaux said Carr would be sentenced in April. The minister could receive up to 15 years in prison on the conspiracy charge, Michaux said.

Meanwhile, U.S. Attorney Eric Rushkey said in Florence, S.C., Tuesday that Carr's daughter, Gloria Cain, and her husband, Larry Cain, had signed "a written plea agreement" to the conspiracy charges and would appear in U.S. District Court in Florence this week.

The fourth person indicted, Jimmy Conyers, had not been arrested as of Tuesday, authorities said.

Heiden Wins 3rd Gold, Becoming Olympic Star

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Skating with pure power and awesome ability, Eric Heiden has emerged as the unquestioned individual star of the 1980 Winter Olympics, an ice and snow festival that is becoming a one-man showcase of brilliance for the 21-year-old from Madison, Wisc.

Heiden claimed his third gold medal in as many races and stayed on target for an unprecedented five-event speed skating sweep, shattering another Olympic mark in winning the 1,000-meter test Tuesday.

And while Heiden dominates his events as few athletes ever have, these Olympics also are developing as the Get Even Games — one more chance for champions to claim the gold medals that have eluded them until now.

It was super skier Ingemar Stenmark's turn for vindication Tuesday, and the Swedish star came through, capturing the men's giant slalom with a stirring second run down Whiteface Mountain that propelled him from third place to the gold medal he has been waiting four years to claim.

Stenmark's victory marked the second time this week that Whiteface's frozen slopes have surrendered Olympic gold to a veteran skier. Earlier, Austrian ski queen Annemarie Moser-Pröell ended years of frustration by winning the women's downhill race.

East Germany dominated Tuesday's results, claiming three more golds and moving into a 16-16 tie with the Soviet Union in total medals. The Soviets have won seven gold medals, the East Germans six. The United States has three gold medals, five total. Austria has three gold, six total.

Tuesday's East German golds went to veteran Ulrich Wehling, who captured his third straight Olympic Nordic Combined crown, Frank Ullrich in the 10-kilometer biathlon and Hans Riin and Norbert Hahn, who successfully defended their two-man luge title.

Farmville Now 21-5

Jaguars Rally Past Tarboro

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — Tarboro entered the district playoffs against Farmville Central as the fourth seed from the Northeastern Conference, after having led the league until the final three games of the season.

"If that's true, I'd hate to see the teams that finished ahead of them," said Farmville Central coach Mike Terrell, whose Jaguars won the Eastern Carolina Conference regular season and tournament titles.

The Vikings, however, were not impressed by the Jaguars' top-billing and instead took the fight to Farmville. The Jaguars, after trailing for the better part of three quarters, broke open a close game in the final two minutes, outscoring the Vikings 19-6, en route to a hard-fought 85-70 win over Tarboro Tuesday night.

The win puts the Jaguars, now 21-6, into the district semifinals Monday night against the winner of tonight's Williamston-Charles B. Aycock battle.

Tarboro ends the season at 13-9 and but for the last two minutes of the game might have come away with a stunning upset.

"Tarboro is as good a team as we've played all year long both offensively and defensively," Terrell said. "I think this is a good way to start the tournament. We had to fight hard to win and we did."

"We beat a good team. They came out more aggressive on offense and defense than we did," Terrell said. "But I think the backboards were the key."

Our kids were determined too."

Farmville outrebounded the Vikings 45-30, led by Mike Baker and Donald Reid, both of whom had 15. Jeff Tyson added nine.

Despite being outrebounded, however, Tarboro grabbed the lead early and maintained it until late in the third period. The Vikings regained the lead once more in the fourth quarter, 60-59, before the Jaguars began their last minute barrage.

Leading 66-64 with two minutes to go, the Jaguars reeled off a 19-4 spurt to seal the win. Tyson, who had seven of his 15 points during the spurt, began the barrage innocently enough with a short jumper from the left of the lane.

But it quickly got serious when Reid, who along with Mike Horne led the Jaguars with 23 points, pumped in a short jumper and was fouled. Reid, who tallied seven points in the last two minutes, missed the free throw — Farmville connected on 25-of-37 compared to Tarboro's 12-of-15 — but Mike Baker grabbed the rebound and feed the ball to Horne who ripped the nets with another short jumper.

It was downhill from there for the Vikings as the Jaguars continued to hit and when it was over Farmville had turned a close contest into a 15-point victory.

"We didn't have our spurt this time until near the end of the game," said Terrell, whose Jaguars used 15- and 16-point spurts against D.H. Conley and C.B. Aycock to win the ECC Tournament title. "This was a good win for us. They played hard."

Indeed, Coming out in the first half, Tarboro appeared ready to avenge last year's 64-49 loss to Farmville in the opening round of the district playoffs.

The Vikings, stealing a page from Farmville's playbook, not only ran with the Jaguars but by them, sprinting to a 20-12 lead at the end of the first quarter.

"They came out loose and we were a little tight," Terrell said. "They had nothing to lose and everything to gain. I think we were feeling a little pressure, being the conference champ."

Tarboro, which connected on 50 percent of its shots in the first half and 49 percent for the game, moved to its biggest lead of the game, 32-19, with 4:38 left in the half. But the Vikings, who had been forcing the ball up court throughout the first half even when the fast break was not available, began to grow cold, partly the result of poor shot selection and partly because of Farmville's increased defensive pressure.

The Jaguars, meanwhile, who hit only 10-of-36 shots in the first half, finally began to discover the basket, outscoring the Vikings 15-4 over the last 3½ minutes of the half to trail 36-33 at intermission.

"We felt pretty good at the half going in down by only three," Terrell said. "We were in excellent shape. We had hit a little spurt there and cut their lead back to only three."

"We came out in the second half and continued to change defenses, that gave them some trouble at the end of the first half, and we also began to protect the ball better and play with more poise."

"In the first half, except for that spurt, we didn't play as well as we can. We fumbled the ball a lot and their guards put a lot of pressure on our guards. Usually, our guards do that to the other team's guards."

Which is exactly what occurred in the second half. Confronted by a full-court press on almost every trip downcourt, Tarboro's guards Greg Battle and Gerald Bridges, who had knocked in 12 and 10 points respectively in the first half, could connect for only four points the last 16 minutes.

Meanwhile, Farmville guard Mike Horne hit seven-of-seven from the field, scoring 15 of his 23 points in the second half.

Still, Tarboro clung to its slim lead for the first five minutes of the third quarter until the Jaguars finally grabbed the lead, 51-47, on three buckets by Horne and one each by Reid and Jeff Tyson. Farmville led at the end of the third period, 51-50, 1 of

The Vikings regained the lead two minutes into the final quarter, 60-59, on a tip in by center Greg Steele. It was Tarboro's last lead.

The Jaguars, playing like the team that has lost only five games all season, moved ahead 66-64 with two minutes left and then outpointed the Vikings 19-6 to coast home the victor.

Bulls Rip Seattle, 115-106

Sloan Can't Explain Win

By The Associated Press
Coach Jerry Sloan was at a loss to explain the Chicago Bulls' performance Tuesday night...but this time he wasn't complaining.

"We did some positive things tonight for the first time in many games," Sloan said after the lowly (21-42) Bulls defeated the defending National Basketball Association champion Seattle (45-17) SuperSonics 115-106. "But I am frustrated and at a loss to understand how we can play so well against the best team in the NBA and most of the time can't get any phase of the game together."

Reserve forward Dwight Jones and center Artis Gilmore contributed six points apiece in the final 2:43 as Chicago broke Seattle's eight-game winning streak.

"I have reached the point where my injured leg appears to be completely healed," said Gilmore, who led the Bulls with 23 points. "I did a lot of things tonight, but I have played well in other games."

"The one thing that stands out, however, is that I was doing a lot of passing to (Reggie) Theus, (David) Greenwood and (Ricky) Sobers and letting them shoot while I was crashing the boards."

Cavaliers 128, Suns 109
Dave Robisch scored 28 points for Cleveland and Kenny Carr added 22, including 12 in the fourth quarter. The Cavaliers had to stave off a furious fourth-period rally by the Suns, who were led by Walter Davis 32 points. Cleveland led 100-78 entering the final period but Phoenix ran off 15 straight points and cut the margin to 108-99 with seven minutes to play. Carr then scored four points and Cleveland was never seriously threatened thereafter.

Nets 123, Clippers 113
George Johnson scored a season-high 22 points and pulled down 16 rebounds to lead New Jersey, who got a game-high 25 points from Mike Newlin and 21 from rookie Cliff Robinson. The game was delayed twice for a total of 49 minutes — at the start because of a power outage and at halftime because of a leak in the San Diego Sports Arena roof. Lloyd Free, the NBA's second-leading scorer, was held scoreless in the first half and finished with only seven points, his lowest total since joining the Clippers in the 1978-79 season.

Knicks 113, Trail Blazers 103
Michael Ray Richardson scored 26 points, including two three-point shots. Ray Williams had 21 and Bill Cartwright added 20 as the Knicks won for the eighth time in their last 11 games. The Trail Blazers have lost five of six. Late in the third quarter, the Knicks ran off 12 straight points in 2½ minutes to go from a five-point deficit to an 82-75 lead.

Four Still In ACC Race

By NAOMI KAUFMAN
Associated Press Writer

Get out your pocket calculators — the Atlantic Coast Conference regular season race is coming down to the wire.

Four teams have a statistical shot at tying for the first place in the league, and tonight's games will help decide the pairings for next week's all-important ACC tournament.

No. 9 Maryland, 9-3, plays host to Wake Forest, 4-8. If the Terps win, they can clinch at least a tie for the regular season championship.

But eighth-ranked North Carolina, 8-4, is in second place. And it must travel to North Carolina State, 7-5, tonight. Both teams have a statistical shot at tying Maryland for first place.

And over in Durham, No. 17 Duke, 6-6 and out of top-place ACC contention, will be trying to avenge an earlier loss to No. 12 Clemson. The Tigers, 8-5, could also tie Maryland in the end.

Virginia, 7-6 in the league, plays a non-conference game against William & Mary tonight.

Got all that? Good. Because there's more.

Emotions are running high for tonight's games. It's the last time Hawkeye Whitney and Clyde Austin will play at home for the Wolfpack, and Mike Gminski's and Bob Bender's last home appearance in Durham. It could also be Blue Devil junior Gene Banks last home game, should he decide to go pro this year.

"These two young men have left quite an impression on the athletic department, particularly the basketball program, at this university," Wolfpack coach Norm Sloan said of Whitney and Austin.

Duke's Bill Foster could make the same understatement about Gminski and Bender.

If it can be believed, the situation gets even more complicated.

Six of the eight teams in the league have been ranked in the Top 20 during the season. But only three, at most, will get bids to the NCAA tournament.

The winner of the ACC tournament automatically gets a bid. Although it appears unlikely that Maryland, 19-5 overall, will win the tourney — Tobacco Road and all that — if the Terps win both regular-season games this week, an invitation is almost assured.

That leaves North Carolina, 19-5, Clemson, 18-6, N. Carolina St., 18-6, and Duke, 18-7, to battle it out. Although it's not impossible that Wake Forest or Georgia Tech would win the tournament, it is highly unlikely.

Virginia is 18-8 overall and has been in the Top 20 this season, but unless the Cavaliers win the tournament, a bid is unlikely.

That's because the NCAA only looks at Division I wins, and in that category, the Cavs are only 14-8.

ECU ...

"It's a whole new ball game in the tournament," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said, "so we can't take them for granted. They're a big team inside and they work very well together. They have good depth too."

Andruzzi noted that the Pirates go into the tournament following big wins over Western Carolina, 82-63, and William & Mary, 79-59. "We're looking forward to the tournament now," Andruzzi said. "But we have to beat Appalachian or that's it."

Appalachian is led by three starters in double figures. Center Muriel Higgenbotham leads the way with a 10.8 average, followed by Sharon Weast at 10.5, and Tiana McEntire at 10.3.

The Pirates are paced by Rosie Thompson with an 18.5 average, while Kathy Riley is hitting 17.1, and Lydia Rountree has a 12.9 average.

Point guard Laurie Sikes has run her assist total, a new ECU school record, to 200, making her one of the national leaders in that category.

A victory in the first round game is not only important in getting the Pirates a third shot at N.C. State this year, but in their hopes of gaining a regional AIAW tourney berth. "They take the state championships from five states, plus three at-large berths. How we do in the tournament will determine whether we have a chance to get into the regionals," Andruzzi said.

"The easy way to get in is to win the championship. But if we can't do that, we have to do real well otherwise."

The Friday game, if the Pirates win, will send them against State at 7 p.m. with Duke and Carolina meeting at 9 p.m.

All-Star Team Has 3 Pirates

By The Associated Press

North Carolina State and East Carolina each placed three players on the state AIAW Division I women's all-star basketball team, announced Tuesday.

Senior forwards Genia Beasley of N.C. State and Rosie Thompson of East Carolina, senior center Bernie McGlade of North Carolina and junior forward Trudi Lacey of N.C. State were unanimous selections to the 10-member team.

All four were repeaters from last year on the team, selected by coaches of the five Division I women's teams in the state.

Others on the team were senior center June Doby of N.C. State; forward Kathy Riley and guard Lydia Rountree, both juniors, of East Carolina; junior forward Aprille Shaffer of North Carolina; and guard Tara McCarthy and forward Barb Krause, both juniors, of Duke.

Celtics Cooler On Gminski, Warm Toward Sampson

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics' ardor for college centers Joe Barry Carroll and Mike Gminski has cooled and they now are looking warmly at 7-foot-4 freshman Ralph Sampson as they contemplate the basketball draft, says team vice president Jeff Cohen.

Although they have the best record in the National Basketball Association, the Celtics could end up with the top pick of the college crop in the June draft.

As compensation for Bob McAdoo, Boston got M.L. Carr and Detroit's two first-round draft choices. Since the Pistons have an excellent chance to finish with the worst record in the Eastern Conference, one of those choices could be the first in the entire draft.

Seeking a dominating center who eventually would take over for Dave Cowens, the Celtics at first eyed Purdue's Carroll and Duke's Gminski.

"But they haven't been playing that well recently and we might decide to go for Sampson (of Virginia) if he declares hardship," Cohen said Tuesday. "Sampson is obviously the answer for us. He gives us the future."

GTA Elects Officers

Howard Pearce has been elected president of the Greenville Tennis Association, currently beginning its third year.

Bobby Short was named vice-president; Claudette Wilkins, secretary; Leon Johnson, treasurer; and Yvonne Pearce, assistant secretary.

The association will meet each first and third Monday at the South Greenville Recreation Center at 7 p.m. All members and other interested people are invited to attend.

Dues are $5 for individuals or $10 per family. Last year's membership totaled nearly 100.

Bobsledders A Group Apart From The Rest

LAKE PLACID, N. Y. (AP) — They are a tough, steely-eyed breed whose virtual anonymity has drawn them into a tight, fiercely loyal family that resents outsiders.

Bobsledders look with disdain on skiers swishing down the mountainside, speed skaters cruising monotonously around a flat, glazed track and figure skaters doing their pirouettes to the strains of romantic music.

Now controversy is swirling about the heads of these daredevils who make up the U. S. four-man bobsled teams in the XIII Winter Olympic Games.

The guys on sled No. 2 glare at the guys on sled No. 1. There is an obvious edginess among these leathery, middle-aged competitors who risk life and limb every time they send their half-ton of steel and flesh hurtling down the chute of ice on the Olympic bobsled run.

Is it Willie Davenport's fault? Are there, as some have reported, racial prejudices — stoutly denied by all the principals concerned? Or is it a simple case of jealousy or resentment of intrusion from a new and outside force?

Or is it, as all the principals insist, a case of over-reaction by an aggressive press, an insignificant issue blown all out of proportion? "It's all implied," said an angered Davenport, who had been pictured in some newspapers as the source of dissension on the team. "People are twisting things around. They are fooling with our minds."

The issue surfaced Monday when the team coach, Gary Sheffield, and members of the No. 2 sled appeared at a formal press conference. Davenport and his sled mates failed to attend. Sheffield admitted he wanted to make a last minute change in the No. 1 sled (apparently by replacing Davenport and Jeff Jordan, each with less than a year's experience) but reneged when Bob Hickey, the driver, refused to go along.

Absence of Davenport and the apparent edginess of the sledders triggered festering rumors. Wasn't it true that some of the team resented the fact that Davenport was getting so much newspaper attention? Didn't the sledders get sore because Davenport went home to Louisiana for 10 days prior to opening of the Games? Weren't there racial problems?

Such queries gained credence when Howard Siler, driver of the No. 2 sled, asked, "Are we here to win a medal...or be loyal to our friends?" He added,

"What fried our minds was that Willie said bobsledders are white and rich."

Willie, a gold medal hurdler at Mexico City in 1968, woke up Tuesday to see his name in the headlines as a sore spot on the team. "That made me damned mad," he said. "I still am."

was won by the Soviets' world champions, Natalia Linichuk and Gennadi Karponosov in a narrow and unpopular decision over Kritszina Regoczy and Andras Sallay of Hungary. Irina Moiseeva and Andrei Minenkov of the Soviet Union took the bronze medal.

Heiden and Stenmark were decisive winners in their events, overwhelming the opposition with performances that were tributes to their abilities.

All but flying over the speed skating oval, Heiden blazed to a time of 1 minute, 15.18 seconds for the 1,000, well under the Olympic record of 1:19.32, set by his teammate, Peter Mueller, in 1976. Silver medalist Gaetan Boucher of Canada finished a full 1 1/2 seconds behind Heiden at 1:16.68. Frode Roenning of Norway and Vladimir Lobanov of the Soviet Union shared the bronze medal at 1:16.91. Mueller was fifth in 1:17.11.

It looked easy, but it wasn't, said Heiden.

"It's getting harder and harder to get prepared for each race," the American star said. "Today, I don't think I was as psyched as I should have been."

"You know going into the race that it's going to hurt. You know you have to overcome it and when it comes you really can't think about it. You push to get everything out of every stroke."

So far, Heiden's powerful legs have delivered golds at 500, 1,000 and 5,000 meters. Still ahead are the 1,500-meter race Thursday and the 10,000 meters on Saturday. Then Heiden, a four-time world champion, may turn to other pursuits. Roenning, for one, hopes so.

"That's what we're waiting for," the Norwegian skater said. "There's no excitement to racing now. The medals are delivered before the races are won."

Like Heiden, Stenmark has been pointing to these Games for some time, searching for Olympic revenge.

In 1976 at Innsbruck, Stenmark, then 19, was the gold medal favorite but managed only a disappointing bronze in the giant slalom. That gave him four years to prepare for Lake Placid and the gold he missed the first time around. This time, he got it.

Stenmark, who has won an amazing 14 consecutive World Cup giant slaloms, captured the Olympic race by three-quarters

Wrestlers Host NCSU; Swimmers End Season

East Carolina University's wrestlers and swimmers will be in action starting Thursday on two different fronts.

The Pirate wrestling team will play host to N.C. State in a match scheduled for 4 p.m. Thursday in Minges Coliseum. The match is the final home contest for the Pirates, and will offer a strong challenge for them against the powerful Wolfpack.

The East Carolina swimmers, meanwhile, will be participating in the UNC-Wilmington Invitational, a three-day event that continues through Saturday.

The invitational is the final regular season meet for both the men and the women. Next up for the women is the AIAW Division II meet, set for mid-March, while the men are next up in the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships the first weekend in March.

The wrestlers to Virginia Commonwealth on Friday, closing out their regular season. They next are in the NCAA Eastern Regionals at Virginia Tech next weekend.

A number of East Carolina women continue to be nationally ranked in the AIAW Division II swimming listings.

Tami Putnam is ranked in nine events, including a top ranking in the 100-yard individual medley, where she has posted a time of 1:02.51. She also ranks 12th in the 200-yard freestyle in 2:00.31; 11th in the 50-yard backstroke in 29.84; 10th in the 100-yard backstroke in 1:03.63; fifth in the 200-yard backstroke in 2:17.09; 11th in the 100-yard breaststroke in 1:11.76; third in the 200-yard breaststroke in 2:33.11; third in the 200-yard individual medley in 2:13.64; and second in the 400-yard individual medley in 4:43.06.

Julie Malcolm ranks 12th in the 500-yard freestyle in 5:20.73.

Karen Davidson is second in the 1000-1650 freestyle in 10:47.00; 12th in the 200-yard backstroke in 2:20.12, and third in the 400 IM in 4:46.3.

Carol Shacklett is eighth in 29.63 in the 50 backstroke and fifth in the 100 IM in 1:03.95.

Cindy Sailer is eighth in the 50 butterfly in 28.07, while Beth Reen is sixth in the 200 fly in 2:13.93.

East Carolina's relay teams are ninth in the 200 medley in 1:56.37; second in the 200 freestyle in 1:42.14; eighth in the 400 in 3:46.46; and fifth in the 800 free in 8:16.48.

Football Dinner Set For Early In March

Members of East Carolina's 1979 football team will be honored at the school's annual football banquet, March 5 at the American Legion Hall in Greenville.

The Pirates, 7-3-1 last fall, led the nation's colleges in rushing at 368.5 yards per game and finished second in total offense at 475.3 yards. Also, the 34.5 points scored per game made the Pirates third in the NCAA in that category.

Among the junior honorees are all-America guard Wayne Inman and halfback Anthony Collins, the number 16 rusher in the country last year with 1,130 yards. Linebacker Mike Brewington, the top tackler for the second straight year, and cornerback Charlie Carter will be among the seniors honored.

In addition to the seniors who will receive special recognition, all lettermen will be recognized, and special awards will be made to numerous players.

Jim Woods, sports director of WNCT-TV in Greenville and the play-by-play voice of the Pirates will be the master of ceremonies for the event.

Tickets are available to the public at $7.50 each through the football office. For further information and tickets, contact assistant coach Henry Trevathan, Football Office, Scales Field House, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C. 27834, or call 919-757-6330.

Martin Offered Yankee Post?

NEW YORK (AP) — In a stunning turnaround, Billy Martin reportedly has been offered a front office job by the New York Yankees, the team he has managed twice only to have both terms end in controversy.

Martin's lawyer, New Orleans Judge Eddie Sapir, refused to confirm or deny published reports that Yankees owner George Steinbrenner has offered Martin an executive position with the team.

"I'm not at liberty to discuss that at this point," Sapir told The Associated Press Tuesday night. "I have no comment."

Steinbrenner was unavailable and General Manager Gene Michael said he knew nothing about the report.

Martin, who was fired as manager of the Yankees last October after a fight in a Bloomington, Minn., hotel bar, also was unavailable, but it was known that he would prefer to accept a job as manager of the Oakland A's rather than work in the Yankees' front office.

A's owner Charles O. Finley has said that Martin is one of four candidates he is considering to replace Jim Marshall, who was not rehired after a last-place finish. The A's begin spring training this weekend.

If Martin accepts the Yankees' offer, he reportedly would be paid $125,000 a year for unspecified duties. When he was fired, he was under contract to the Yankees for 1980 and 1981 at $125,000 a year.

The Yankees, however, feel that Martin violated the "personal conduct" clause in his contract in the Minnesota fight and they have stopped paying him pending a March 6 hearing before American League President Lee MacPhail.

However, informed sources feel that Steinbrenner would pay Martin a lump settlement of $200,000 if Finley pays him $125,000 a year to manage the A's. Steinbrenner is known to have hard feelings for Finley for the last six years ever since he prevented the Yankees from hiring Dick Williams, who resigned as Oakland manager while still under contract to the A's.

Pioneers In Loss

MERRY HILL — Martin Academy brought a winless season to a close last night, bowing to Ridgcroft, 69-37, in the first round of the conference tournament.

The Pioneers suffered through an 0-18 season this year.

Ridgcroft opened the first period with a 17-0 blitz of the Pioneers, and that was it. The winners held a 29-13 lead at the half and upped it to 48-25 by the end of the third period. They polished off Martin, 21-12 in the final quarter.

Jay Saunders led Ridgcroft with 13 points while Graham Johnson and Bobby Davis each had 10. Allen Warren led Martin with 19, while Jerry Brannon added 10.

'Good Mudder' Colbert Wins Tucson

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Jim Colbert, having proven he's a "good mudder" and also having ended a six-year victory drought, heads west to the Los Angeles Open hoping to make it two triumphs in a row.

Colbert, 38, overcame delays, chilly rain that made his back act up, and a determined Dan Halldorson to win the $300,000 Tucson Open by four strokes Tuesday.

Rain had delayed completion of the opening round until last Saturday and extended the tournament through Tuesday. Storms have also ravaged Southern California for the past week, and Colbert and the PGA tour could be greeted by more of the same in Los Angeles.

With a closing 3-under-par 70 that put him at 22-under-par 270 for the 72-hole Tucson tournament, Colbert birdied the final two holes to thwart Halldorson, a young Canadian who had cut Colbert's once-substantial to two strokes with three holes remaining.

"For just a fleeting second, as I stood in the bunker at No.15 and looked at him on the green," recalled Colbert, "I had that old sinking feeling.

"Then I said to myself, 'Wait a minute, things are going wrong here. You've hit bunker shots before, Colbert, so do it and let's get going.'"

Colbert hit close enough to the pin to make an easy putt and par the hole as Halldorson sank a birdie putt to cut the difference to two strokes. But Colbert, winning his first tournament since 1974, parred 16, then birdied the final two holes as Halldorson took pars the rest of the way.

Andy Bean, with a final round 69, and defending champion Tom Lietzke, with a 70, finished eight strokes back of the winner.

Although the rains appeared to have little effect on the par73, 7,095-yard Tucson National course, it and the chilly weather did cause Colbert some grief. Troubled by back spasms the past few years, Colbert had to visit a chiropractor a couple of times during the tournament, which drew out to six days.

He collected $54,000 for his fifth PGA victory, while Halldorson, a non-winner, got $32,400 — more than the sum of what he's won in two previous years on the tour.

Colbert, who won $91,000 last year after two injury-plagued campaigns that saw him drop from the top 60 money list, said he didn't really take Halldorson seriously until they began the final nine holes.

"I finally realized that this kid, Dan, wasn't going to make any mistakes, that he was coming at me," said Colbert, who began the round with a seven-stroke cushion over Halldorson and three others. "I said 'okay, come and get me if you can, but I'm not going to make it easy.'"

His play on the final nine holes, in which he only equaled par, was not typical of Colbert's performance in the rest of the tournament. He opened with a 66, had a 68 the second day of play, carded another 66 on the third round, then turned into the final nine holes with a 3-under-par 33 on the front side.

How Tar Heel Senators, Representatives Voted

Roll Call Report Service

HOUSE
LOSS OF FARMLAND — The House defeated, 177 for and 210 against, a bill to get the U.S. Department of Agriculture involved in slowing the rapid conversion of American farmland to other uses. By the time of this vote, the bill (HR 2551) had been stripped of most of its provisions, including a $60 million outlay for state and local "pilot programs" to curb farmland conversion.

Rep. Robert McClory, R-Ill., a supporter, said that "every day, 12 square miles of American farmland are converted to nonagricultural use... a loss of over three million acres per year."

Opponents raised the specter of federal land-use planning. Rep. Charles Grassley, R-Ia., said that Black Hawk County in his district has been able to protect its farmland without federal help.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, Charles Whitley, D-3, and Ike Andrews, D-4, voted "yea."

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2, Stephen Neal, D-5, W.C. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, and James Broyhill, R-10, voted "nay."

Reps. Richardson Preyer, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, did not vote.

SUBPOENA PROBE — By a vote of 194 for and 118 against, the House cut off debate on whether the Democratic leadership had acted wisely in keeping secret a grand jury subpoena of certain House records. The records relate to Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Cal., who has been charged by the Ethics Committee with payroll fraud.

After this vote, which came during action on HRes 578, the Democratic majority decided to begin a Rules Committee probe of the handling of the subpoena. The ending of debate, however, silenced GOP complaints on the floor that in this election year Democrats are trying to shroud the Wilson issue from public view.

Rep. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., a supporter of ending debate, said: "I fear there is some motive other than objective concern for the House" behind the GOP wish to air the issue.

Rep. John Rhodes, R-Ariz., an opponent, said that to regain public trust, the House "must operate in the open and operate honorably."

Members voting "nay" want an immediate public debate of the secret subpoena issue.

Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner and Gudger voted "yea."

Martin and Broyhill voted "nay."

Jones and Fountain did not vote.

NOISE CONTROL — The House voted 253 for and 103 against, to give either house of Congress veto power over noise-abatement rules issued by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

The one-house veto provision, added to a bill (HR 3995) later passed and sent to conference with the Senate, would permit Congress to block any EPA noise regulation by acting within 90 days of its proposal. As in the Senate FTC vote (see below) the "legislative veto" issue becomes increasingly debated as Congress seeks a means of leashing regulatory agencies.

Rep. Elliott Levitas, D-Ga., a supporter of the veto plan, asked: "Who is going to make the laws, unelected bureaucrats or the elected Congress accountable to the people?"

Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Tex., an opponent, said Congress could better keep a check on the regulators through "the closest surveillance, scrutiny and oversight" by congressional subcommittees.

Members voting "yea" favor the veto provision.

Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "yea."

Jones and Hefner did not vote.

ADJOURNMENT — The House voted, 262 for and 49 against, to adjourn at the close of business Feb. 13 until Feb. 19. This "district work period" coincides roughly with the Lincoln and Washington birthdays. There was no debate on the measure (H Con Res 276).

Members voting "yea"

wanted to adjourn. Despite their "nay" votes, virtually all members registering opposition took the time off.

Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Preyer and Broyhill voted "yea."

Neal and Martin voted "nay."

Jones, Rose, Hefner and Gudger did not vote.

SENATE
CHILDREN'S ADS — The Senate failed, 30 for and 67 against, to preserve the Federal Trade Commission's authority to regulate children's advertising on TV. House concurrence would halt the FTC's ongoing "rulemaking" that could prohibit the advertising of sugary cereals and other "kid-vid" advertising. The vote came during debate on an FTC bill (HR 2313), later passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-

Ohio, a supporter, said: "We are confronted today with a choice between the profits of the food processors, advertising agencies and TV broadcasters, and the welfare of the children who are this nation's future."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., an opponent, said the issue "is simply this: who is going to make the laws that govern this country — members of Congress elected by the voters, or the unelected faceless bureaucrats?"

Senators voting "yea" want the FTC to continue working toward likely regulation of children's advertising on TV.

Sen. Robert Morgan, D, voted "nay."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R, did not vote.

PATENT PROTECTION — By a vote of 34 for and 60 against, the Senate refused to include all large businesses in a bill (S 414) allowing patent protection on discoveries made under federally sponsored research. As a result of this vote, the bill's patent protection rights are limited to universities, defense contractors, non-profit organizations and small businesses. The bill was sent to the House.

Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., a supporter, said the amendment "would grant all industries the right to exploit the technologies they developed, while reserving to the government its right to use the inventions."

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kans., an opponent, said the bill "does not segregate against big business... It merely protects small business."

Senators voting "yea" wanted large concerns as well as small businesses to be able to patent inventions made with government money.

Helms voted "yea," Morgan voted "nay."

New Delay In PCB-Removal

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Removal of PCB-laced oil that was dumped along 210 miles of North Carolina roadsides 19 months ago may be delayed another year or more, state officials say.

The reason is a lawsuit against the state and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, in which Warren County residents are trying to permanently block the disposal of PCBs on a 142-acre tract the state has purchased near Afton.

The Warren County commissioners and several landowners contend the Afton site is unsuitable for PCB storage and that EPA disregarded federal regulations when it approved the site. They also said the state plan to store the material there would violate a recently adopted ordinance that forbids burial of PCBs in Warren County.

Bill Rainey, deputy state attorney general, noted that as a result of the suit, pending in federal court, the state is enjoined from beginning construction of the dump site or from removing the contaminated soil for disposal until the suit is settled. "That could be next month or next year," he said.

In response to the suit, the state has filed an environmental impact study outlining plans for disposal of the PCBs. Rainey said. But the Kerr-Tar Regional Council of Governments, representing Warren and four nearby counties, labeled the study a "sham" that failed to answer questions on possible effects if the dump leaked.

Before a federal law forbade its production, PCB was often used as an insulating material in electric transformers. The material, which is known to cause cancer in laboratory animals, has been linked to birth defects and possibly cancer in humans.

Three New York men last year pleaded guilty to charges related to the dumping.

Area Meeting For Infertile

A support group for infertile couples has been formed for this area and will meet at Lakeside Baptist Church, Rocky Mount, Monday, Feb. 25, at 7:30 p.m.

A Raleigh physician who has done extensive research in infertility, Dr. Gary Berger, will be the guest speaker. Anyone who would like more information regarding this group or who is interested in forming a carpool to attend the meeting is asked to call 756-4031 after 5 p.m.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

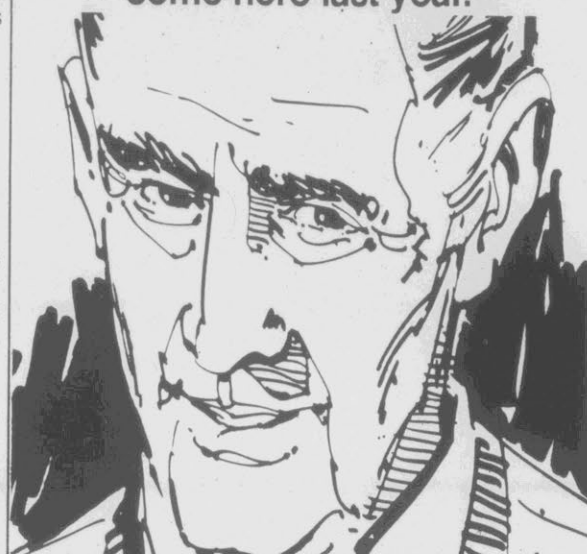

Mild with chance of showers Friday and Saturday with highs in 60s and lows in the 40s and low 50s. Clearing and cooler Sunday with highs in 50s and low 60s; lows in 30s and low 40s.

don, Sara, Amy, Abigail, and Ted. The quints will be ten years old this Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

Family Planners Come Under Heavy Fire In Utah

By RON BARKER
Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Susan Roylance doesn't want her children getting contraceptives behind her back. And if she had a teen-age daughter who became pregnant, she'd want to know about it before the girl could arrange an abortion, Mrs. Roylance says.

Many Utah parents say they feel this way, even if the U.S. Supreme Court says they have no right to interfere with their children's sexual decisions.

They say that is why they are trying to stop federal funding, both in Utah and in other states, for Planned Parenthood, a privately run, but federally subsidized network of family planning clinics.

Mrs. Roylance is helping organize a lobby called United Families of America that plans to work nationwide in opposition to the proposed Equal Rights Amendment, 24-hour day care centers, abortion, pornography and Planned Parenthood.

Opponents of Planned Parenthood won a tactical victory in the Utah Legislature last month. Lawmakers directed the state Department of Health to channel about $300,000 in federal family planning funds to county health departments instead of to private agencies like Planned Parenthood.

To get federal dollars now, Planned Parenthood in Utah will have to apply directly to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, or work out agreements with county health officials.

Concentrated opposition to Planned Parenthood's work among teen-agers has cropped up in only a few other states, says Eve Paul, the association's vice president for legal affairs in New York. "The Mormons don't like us very much," she said. "The opposition hasn't been quite so violent elsewhere."

Seventy-two percent of Utah residents belong to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the Mormon Church.

Planned Parenthood's Laurie Gustafson admits the agency has an image problem in Utah. But she also estimates, based on clinic visits in recent months, that nearly 39,000 people will visit the five Planned Parenthood clinics in Utah this year — a 20 percent increase over last year.

Recent statistics show that Utah has the highest birth rate in the nation and leads the country in teen-age pregnancies.

Dr. Peter van Dyck, director of Family Health Services in Utah, attributes the high birth rate to lack of sex education, which he said is "difficult to teach because of local pressures," and to the Mormon Church's encouragement of large families.

Teen-age pregnancies increased 20 percent in Utah in the last three years, van Dyck said, while declining slightly nationwide, and 70 percent of Utah's teen-age brides are pregnant at the altar.

"Parents are really good at talking about morals, but they're not very good at talking about venereal disease and sex education," van Dyck said.

"I'm not opposed to contraception, although I know some people are," said Mrs. Roylance, who recently moved to Murray, Utah, from Washington state. "I feel that is something parents and churches should handle, not a federally funded, private agency."

Mrs. Roylance claims Planned Parenthood encourages sexual immorality by publishing pamphlets for teens that poke fun at chastity and use street vocabulary for sexual intercourse. "Their thrust is that teen-agers should not listen to their church leaders," she said.

And, she added, the association fosters abortion by downplaying possible complications and by making abortion appear to be the "in" thing.

"I've been in five Planned Parenthood clinics," said Mrs. Roylance. "They say their goal is to make every child a wanted child, but I have never seen anything there that is pro-child. Everything depicts children as a bother and emphasizes population overcrowding."

Ms. Gustafson denied that Planned Parenthood encourages teen-agers to be sexually active.

"It's not a matter of recruiting," she said. "Most of the teens coming to our clinics have been sexually active for over a year."

She said Planned Parenthood emphasizes that "it is all right to say no" to premarital sex. "This is really a big decision," she said. "We have a pamphlet that tells kids it is all right to say, 'I'm not ready for this yet,' that it's OK to say, 'No way.'"

In 1976, the Supreme Court ruled that teen-agers have the right to obtain contraceptives without their parents' consent or knowledge. Planned Parenthood provides confidential services for teens, Ms. Gustafson said, but doesn't do abortion counseling. That is forbidden in clinics receiving federal money. But it does let women know where they can go for an abortion.

Few Utah women chose abortion, said Ms. Gustafson — most unmarried mothers either keep their children or allow them to be adopted.

Planned Parenthood advises unwed mothers how to get help in caring for their children if they keep them, or how to go about placing them for adoption, said Ms. Gustafson.

Winners Named In Shoot-Out Event

Local winners of the 1980 Basketball Shoot-out for Easter Seals have been named.

Thomas Davenport of Jones Junior High School, Washington, N.C. was named the regional winner for the boys' competition and Glenda Furlough, also of Jones Schools, the regional girls' winner. Davenport sat last week as special guest on the bench with the ECU Pirate basketball team in their game against Illinois State University. Furlough will join the ECU Lady Pirates in their game against Western Carolina University Saturday.

All funds raised throughout the region will go to benefit physically handicapped children and adults in North Carolina.

Pitt County winners are Sandra Purvis of Wellcome Middle School, Greenville; Jerry Simpkins of North Pitt High School, Bethel; Bill Johnson of Aycock Junior High School, Greenville; Kathy Messer of Farmville Middle School; Toby Fischer of Hooker Memorial Christian Church, Greenville; and Jason Lilly of H. B. Sugg School, Farmville.

Peking Billboards Advertising Imported Goods

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer
PEKING (AP) — On a billboard towering over one of Peking's bustling shopping streets, an enormous astronaut strides across the surface of the moon. An offshore oil rig shimmers in the sunset.

"China is in the course of a modernization drive," says the billboard in red Chinese characters. "Kodak is proud it can make a contribution."

A planned Coca-Cola billboard will be the newest addition to a surging advertising campaign for foreign goods in China.

Some 30 foreign firms have rented billboard space in Peking, and about 70 Chinese enterprises are touting their wares to foreign buyers in prime locations.

China solicits foreign outdoor advertising through its Peking and Shanghai advertising companies, said Ling Wang Juan, a spokesman for the Peking enterprise.

"Any good businessman working abroad knows advertising is a very important part of his business," Ling said in an interview. "China is not much of an immediate market, but it is potentially a great market and that's why they are advertising here."

Foreign companies request their location and design their billboards. They are painted by Chinese artists.

Kodak's billboard and those for several other companies are at least twice the average size. In full color, it touts the virtues of Kodak photographic equipment, processing, microfilm and industrial and medical photographic equipment.

Foreign advertising was accepted before the cultural revolution, but it was banned during that 10-year period from 1966 to 1976 when China turned inward, emphasizing self-reliance and rejecting foreign influences.

Now billboards are making a comeback, especially in the more cosmopolitan port city of Shanghai.

"This is only our first batch. We are just beginning," said Ling. "Advertising has a great role to play in our nation's future. Advertising is something which enhances trade between our two nations."

"Therefore," he said pragmatically, "it is allowed."

He noted that foreign products can be bought only with foreign currency and most Chinese do not have it.

"Ordinary citizens are not able to buy Kodak film," Ling said. "But through advertising our workers who use film know of Kodak and prefer to use it. My friends know about Kodak."

The billboards for foreign goods are mainly for Japanese products, including Japan Air Lines — "for blossoming friendship in the sky" — Sanyo, Toshiba and Mitsubishi. Other foreign advertisers include Casio calculators, Lykes Lines shipping and the East Asiatic Co.

They are scattered in a half dozen locations, including the Peking zoo, the main sports stadium and the summer palace.

They are side-by-side with billboards advertising numerous Chinese products for export: Red Star white liquor, Golden Cup soccer balls, Peking Royal Jelly, Panda detergent, Jasmine toothpaste and Snow Lotus cashmere sweaters.

Ling said a 5-by-6-meter billboard on main Changan Avenue costs about $1,800 per month for a six-month contract. The actual rate, he said, is $60 per meter per month.

"Industrial products are most welcome because of our modernization drive," said Ling. "Most consumer goods received a lower priority."

Workplace Now College Campus

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Two women not only work, but also attend school, in their office building here.

Linda Durden and Mildred Fogleman, both grandmothers and both employees of RJR Foods, attend High Point College at night at the world headquarters here of R.J. Reynolds Industries. Through an agreement between the company and the college, in High Point, for three nights a week the building becomes a college campus where employees earn credits toward undergraduate degrees.

Stamp Issue Is For The Birds

NEW YORK (AP) — To honor the National Audubon Society's 75th year of protecting and enhancing the bird life of America, the British Post Office has presented Russell W. Peterson, the society's president, with a set of new stamps featuring four of Britain's most popular water birds.

The stamps, designed and painted by British bird-life artist Michael Warren, include the Kingfisher, Dipper, Moorhen and Yellow Wagtail, some of the protected inhabitants of the streams and marshes of the English countryside. The BPO's first stamp issue of 1980 marked the centenary of England's Wild Bird Protection Act of 1880.

Success at bridge often

tries—developing them

shutting them out; protect-

right time. Study South's timing on this hand.

The auction merits some comment. It is becoming increasingly popular these days to open one no trump even with a weak doubleton, especially if the doubleton is

cision to bid three no trump has our endorsement—the hand is much more likely to produce nine tricks in a no trump contract than 11 tricks

in diamonds.

West led his fourth-best club and declarer captured

East's eight with the nine. If

hand would be no problem.

With only one entry,

however, declarer realized that dummy's diamond suit could get shut out. If East held the ace tripleton of diamonds and held up the ace for one round, declarer would have to use his only entry to set up diamonds, and then would be unable to reach dummy to cash the long cards in the suit.

Declarer found an elegant way to husband his entry to the diamonds. Since he would need only four diamond tricks for his contract, he led a low diamond from his hand at trick two and ducked in dummy!

East won the nine and cleverly shifted to a spade. But declarer wasn't about to be deflected from his goal. He won the king and led a diamond to the queen. Whether or not East won the ace, declarer would be able to set up the diamonds while the ace of spades remained in dummy to cash the low cards in the suit.

Note that if, at trick two, declarer carelessly leads a diamond to the queen, the defense can prevail. East holds up the ace of diamonds, and wins the second round of the suit. Declarer is then an entry short to establish and run the suit.

Rumors Denied, Hack Still Angel

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (AP) — Contrary to reports, angel Shelley Hack has not lost her place among television's heavenly host.

The latest addition to the cast of "Charlie's Angels," has not been fired as a member of the TV detective trio, producers say.

Performers to appear in Jacques Ibert's "Angelique" are: Susan Owen as Angelique; John Michael McDonald as Charlot; Jeffrey M. Krantz in the role of Italian; Doug Newell, the Englishman; and Constantine T. Peters, the Turk. The role of Boniface will be sung on Friday night by Loren Watkins (of the School of Art), and on Saturday night by Bill Lear.

Krantz is employed at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, and except for him and Watkins, other singers are School of Music students.

The second opera, Vaughan Williams' "Riders to the Sea," has Sheila Brooks in the role of Maurya. The roles of Cathleen and Nora will have different singers on each of the two

Winter Olympics Aid ABC In Ratings Race

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC set aside two-thirds of its prime-time schedule in the week ending Feb. 17 to Winter Olympics coverage, and the tactic helped push the network into first place in the networks' weekly ratings race, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

The No. 1 finish for ABC in the most recent survey pulled the network even with CBS for the season so far. CBS had challenged last year's winner in recent months, but most industry experts forecast the Olympics coverage would shift the momentum back to ABC.

ABC broadcast six Olympics reports in prime-time during the week, and four of them were among the 20 highest-rated shows. All six were in the week's Top 30.

"Three's Company," one of the few regular programs aired by ABC in the week, was first in the ratings, with the Saturday night sports report from Lake Placid, N.Y., fourth.

"Three's Company" had a rating of 27.6. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 27.6 percent saw at least part of the show.

ABC's rating for the week was 22.3 to 19.8 for CBS and 17.9 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 22.3 percent of the homes in the country were tuned to ABC.

CBS kept the race close with three of the week's 10 highest-rated shows, including No. 3 "M-A-S-H," while NBC had two in the first 10, including "Little House on the Prairie" in fifth place.

"60 Minutes," the season's No. 1 show, finished 11th in the ratings, its lowest position in some time, but was victimized by some very active competition in its Sunday night timeslot, with the Olympics on ABC and a Walt Disney film, "Escape to Witch Mountain," on NBC. "60 Minutes" was first for the period.

NBC was hurt as it has been in recent weeks at the bottom of the ratings, listing three of the week's five least-watched shows.

CBS' "Getting There" was No. 52, followed by "The Best of Saturday Night Live" on NBC, a CBS movie, "Citizen's Band," and two NBC programs, "Prime Time Saturday" and a movie, "Valentine Magic on Love Island."

Here are the week's Top 10 shows:

"Three's Company," with a rating of 27.6 representing 21.1 million homes, and "Happy Days," 27.5 or 21 million, both ABC; "M-A-S-H," 26.6 or 20.3 million, CBS; Winter Olympics, Saturday, 26.1 or 19.9 million, ABC; "Little House on the Prairie," 25.7 or 19.6 million, NBC; "Dallas," 25.4 or 19.4 million, CBS; "Goodtime Girls," 25.2 or 19.2 million, ABC; "Dukes of Hazzard," 24.6 or 18.8 million, CBS; Movie—"The Deep," Part II, 23.9 or 18.3 million, ABC, and "Real People," 23.7 or 18.1 million, NBC.

The next 10:

"60 Minutes," CBS; Winter Olympics, Friday, ABC, and "House Calls," CBS, tie; "CHiPs," NBC; Winter Olympics, Wednesday, ABC; "Disney's Wonderful World," NBC; "Alice," CBS; Winter Olympics, Sunday, ABC; "The Jeffersons," CBS, and "Eight is Enough," ABC.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, FEB. 21, 1980

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You accomplish much in your efforts for a greater amount of material security. You need to work considerable angles and engineer others so they do the things which you are important to your present situations.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study assets and see how they can be made of greater value in some way. Listen to what an affluent expert has to suggest.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Take care of personal matters early in the day, but don't argue with others later. Plan now for a more social life in the future.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't confide future plans in others who could spoil them for you. Get together with closest ties for worthwhile discussions.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Good time to let others know how they can help you, but be willing to help them in some way, too. Be with good friends later.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A good day for expansion where your career is concerned. Go to one of influence for any help you need. Be cautious in travel.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Find out how to benefit from some clever new ideas you just learned about. Don't discuss moot points which could result in an argument.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Your ideas are excellent for improving relations with a close tie. Keep promises you have made to influential friends and show your ability.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be more cooperative with partners and there is more mutual success. Take time for community work and reap fine benefits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Do whatever will improve your position with co-workers. Ask for their ideas and there is more cooperation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Have routine health checkups since you are under much pressure. Don't neglect some important practical matter.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be with kin during spare time and add to happiness, but don't discuss any arguable subjects. Evening best spent at home.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take that short trip to see one who is important to your scheme of things. Take care of reports now and save time later. Be clever.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be very capable at what profession requires practicality. Give spiritual and ethical training early that will help lighten the burden of work and set the life on the right course. There is a tendency to mull things over too much before coming to a decision. Teach to speed up the process or others will take advantage of your talented progeny.

Advertising on the so-called "new video" systems, currently almost negligible, will reach nearly $2 billion annually by 1985, the study projected. This suggests that advertisers will be placing commercials on cable systems and subscription TV, and, to a lesser extent, video discs and video cassettes.

If so, the theory that commercial-free viewing is a prime attraction of so-called "pay TV" will soon be put to test.

Underscoring the continuing boom in cable television is the willingness of financial institutions to loan money to the cable industry. Outstanding loans to cable companies increased last year from $261 billion to $537 billion.

Holding Carter Planning Ahead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — U.S. State Department spokesman Hoddin Carter is planning for life outside the glare of television lights — he has signed on with a talent agency.

"I want to emphasize that Hoddin Carter has no intention of leaving the State Department right now," Norman Brokaw, vice president of the William Morris Agency, said Tuesday. "But when his appointment is completed, William Morris will represent him in the broadcasting and literary fields."

Carter, 44, was the editor of the Pulitzer Prize-winning Delta Democrat-Times in Greenville, Miss., prior to taking his government post in 1977. He has gained national attention for his poise in handling questions on the holding of American hostages in Iran.

The MAC study was commissioned by Petry Television, a New York based firm that sells advertising time for 30 TV stations nationwide. The research drew upon the opinions of broadcasters, advertisers and other industry executives.

Despite the predicted fast rise in cable advertising, the study foresees commercial and network television systems still attracting the lion's share of TV advertising in 1985, about $25 billion.

The study predicted that satellite "superstations," such as Ted Turner's WTBS in Atlanta (which broadcasts its regular programming across the continent via satellite), will give way to specialized satellite systems in the next five years, a trend already developing. Satellite stations specializing in news, sports and religious programs are already operating with more waiting in the wings for satellite space.

Cast Is Named For 2 Operas

Cast members, mostly from the School of Music, East Carolina University, have been announced for the production of two one-act operas to be presented by the ECU Opera Theater under the direction of Dr. Clyde Hiss.

The operas will be performed on two nights — Friday and Saturday, February 22 and 23. Performance time is 8 p.m. both nights, and the place is the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the ECU campus.

Performers to appear in Jacques Ibert's "Angelique" are: Susan Owen as Angelique; John Michael McDonald as Charlot; Jeffrey M. Krantz in the role of Italian; Doug Newell, the Englishman; and Constantine T. Peters, the Turk. The role of Boniface will be sung on Friday night by Loren Watkins (of the School of Art), and on Saturday night by Bill Lear.

Krantz is employed at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, and except for him and Watkins, other singers are School of Music students.

The second opera, Vaughan Williams' "Riders to the Sea," has Sheila Brooks in the role of Maurya. The roles of Cathleen and Nora will have different singers on each of the two nights. On Friday, Anne Gunn will sing the role, and Sandi Thomas will sing on Saturday. The Friday performance of Nora will be sung by Mary Ann Bristow, and by Teresa Guion on Saturday.

Tickets, at $2.50 per person, are available at the door prior to the curtain time. They can also be reserved by calling 757-6331 between 9 and 5. Tickets for groups of ten or more are priced at $1.75 per person.

Belle West's Dream, A Church, Has Become Source Of Despair

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

EAST GRANBY, Conn. (AP) — The West Community Church stands empty and cold on the sabbath, and Rushia Belle West's heart is heavy. Her dream has become despair.

"I have decided not to talk to people about it any longer," she said. "I will talk to the Lord."

Tears appear on her high cheekbones as she recounts her past and ponders: What constitutes a church? What is a congregation?

"It can be 1,000 people or one person," she said. "My mother told my daughter about the Lord, on her lap. We didn't have a church, but they were a church, just the two of them. The Apostle Paul said he knew how to live high and he knew how to live low."

"I have learned that, too. So if I am the only one," she said, the words catching in her throat. "I am a church."

Mrs. West's church — that is to say, the church building — is a small, wooden structure 50 yards down the dirt road from her home in a settlement of about a dozen black families on the edge of town.

The families know Mrs. West as Aunt Belle. She, in effect, founded the settlement years ago and remains its reigning matriarch at 88.

On the doorframe of her parlor a card says, "Peace to all who enter here." She gives of her spiritual counsel freely. Lately, though, Aunt Belle has known more heartache than peace.

It seemed such a logical, simple idea: a church.

Mrs. West came here in 1917 to work the tobacco field after the boll weevil drove her family off its cotton farm in Georgia. She was 26. Her father came first, then her mother, then a tobacco grower, needing labor, mailed one-way railroad tickets to her and her husband and 15 relatives and friends.

"When we got here," she recalled, "I said to my husband, 'I want some land. I want a home.' We bought five acres. He built our house, then my mother's then my daughter's."

Seeds of a settlement, but no church.

Mrs. West attended church regularly even though it cost $4 a week for transportation to a church in Hartford, 30 miles away. Four years ago, a half century after her arrival, she took stock.

"I figure in another 10 years I would spend more than $2,000 to get to church, and I still wouldn't have my own church."

Zealously, she raised money. Others, almost as zealously, helped. In a year's time, the church was built.

"We started out all right. But soon our preacher preached things some people didn't like. He had different beliefs. The people argued and fought. They wanted another preacher."

"The second preacher preached all the time about the Holy Ghost. Some didn't like that, and they fought. The third put crosses all over the place and some didn't like that. I didn't know a church could cause such arguing and fighting."

Singing Program Slated Saturday

A church singing program will be held Saturday at the Grindie Creek Church of God.

The guest singers will be the Kyle Taylor Singers of Asheboro. The program is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. The public is invited.

A wry smile played across her lips; her eyes did not smile.

"Now I have a church," she said, "and it doesn't do me a bit of good because nobody will go there. The church is closed."

Offer Weekend Of Services

The Pitt for Christ Evangelistic Tabernacle invites the public to worship with them this weekend beginning with Friday night services at the home of Evangelist Nina Blount on 103 Lancaster Drive, off Hooker Road in the Cambridge Subdivision. The services will be at 7:30 p.m.

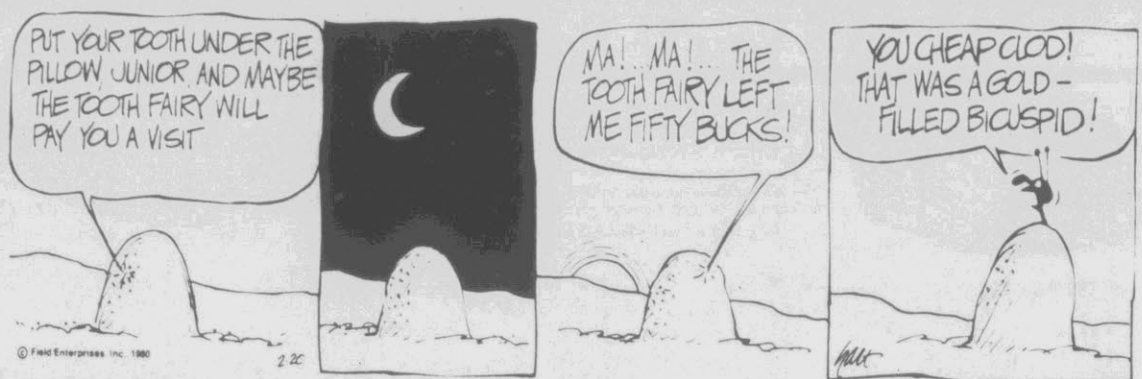

On Saturday at 7 p.m. Apostle Johnnie Washington will be conducting Holy Communion Services at the Wilson Tabernacle where he is pastor. He will be in charge of the 11 a.m. and 8 p.m. worship services on Sunday.

The Wilson Tabernacle is 1601 Lane Street in Wilson. For more information call Evangelist Blount at 756-7435 or Deacon David Carr at 758-0350.

W. Va. 1913 Legislators Felt Sting

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Long before the scandals known as Abscam and Brilab, the long-forgotten West Virginia Sting stung several members of the state Legislature.

The year was 1913. A wealthy West Virginian, Seymour Edwards, agreed to help prosecutors find out whether several members of the Legislature could be bought.

Edwards was a candidate for a U.S. Senate seat, which at the time was chosen by the Legislature, not by popular vote. Six candidates were being considered, and Edwards was one of the top three.

On Feb. 2, after four days of deadlock, five delegates changed their votes in Edwards' favor. The Legislature remained deadlocked after the voting, but the five members were arrested after the lawmakers adjourned for the day.

Delegate S.U.G. Rhodes was charged with having sold his vote and pledged to deliver seven other votes for $50,000. Sen. Ben A. Smith and Delegates Rath Duff, Dr. H. Abury and Davis Hill were arrested as accessories.

As with today's FBI investigations — Abscam, in which members of Congress allegedly took bribes in exchange for political influence; and Brilab, in which Southwest political and labor leader allegedly accepted payments to influence insurance contracts — West Virginia's sting was the product of imaginative undercover police work.

Edwards, cooperating with the county prosecutor, hired the Williams J. Burns detective agency of New York City to set up a plot whereby members of the Legislature would be paid to sell their votes.

On the day of the voting, a Burns detective paid Rhodes $15,000 and the others about $1,700 in marked bills.

After the session, each was asked to come to a Charleston hotel room to meet with Edwards. As each entered, he was met by the Kanawha County Sheriff and by prosecuting attorney Thomas C. Townsend.

Delegates George S. Van Meter and Thomas J. Smith were later implicated and were indicted in April. But they were never tried.

The court cases were moved from Charleston to Webster Springs, and a legislative committee also met to investigate the matter.

Because he was ill, Edwards did not at first appear at the trial. However, he was later brought from his sickbed to the court each day on a cot. He testified he had gone along with the plot devised by Townsend to learn whether wrongdoing existed in state government.

Townsend testified he had planned the entire trap shortly after being elected prosecutor. Money for the bribes was supplied by Edwards, as were the funds to hire the detective agency.

The legislators were expelled, and with the exception of Van Meter and Smith, were given prison sentences.

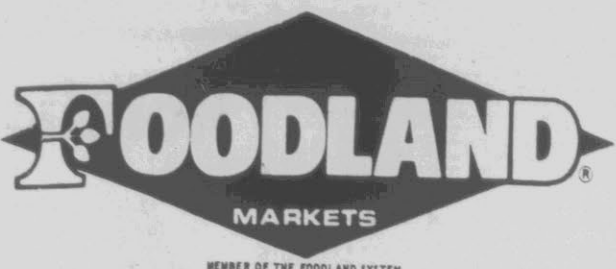

Edwards never got the Senate seat. Judge Nathan Goff, on the last day of the legislative session, was voted in as U.S. Senator.

According to the West Virginia Heritage Encyclopedia, Rhodes was given a job in the kitchen at the state penitentiary in Moundsville.

When visited by a friend, he reportedly said: "Tell my friends at Webster Springs I am still handling the dough."

Hostelries Are Judged By The Berkshire Traveller

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Norman Simpson's office, on Pine Street, is a half block from a two-centuries-old country inn, the Red Lion, on Main, in this quiet Yankee village in the hills.

The small sign on Norman Simpson's door says: "The Berkshire Traveller Stoppeth Here."

You are lucky to catch him there, though, because he rarely stoppeth anywhere for long. He is always on the go, traveling from his beloved Berkshire hills in search of romantic hideaways, similar to the Red Lion, along the backroads of two continents.

It has to be among the more enviable pursuits of anyone with a wanderlust. The irony is that he came to his vagabonding ways because he disliked travel.

"What I disliked," he said, seated on a red plush couch in the parlor of the Red Lion, warmed by a crackling fire, "was stopping at yet another motel as cold and impersonal as the last one."

"I had the choice of staring at the color TV in my room or staring at the bartender. Neither appealed to me."

Any frequent traveler knows that lonely despair, which explains why so many are grateful for the discovery of Norman Simpson's discomfort: a paperback book, "Country Inns and Back Roads."

In the decade that Simpson has been publishing his guidebook, sales have settled to a steady 50,000 copies a year.

"I was as surprised as anyone that it would become so popular," he said. "I never expected it to become a business. The first issue was sort of a lark. I gave it away."

That was in 1969 when Simpson and his late wife Nancy, an artist, ran an advertising agency. His travel was around New England, selling ads.

"Because of my dislike for motels I stayed at as many country inns as I could find," Simpson said.

"I decided to make up a little pamphlet, 16 pages, describing the 12 I had visited. I wrote it in the style of Pepys' Diary. It was a promotional gimmick, really, for our agency."

The current issue is no pamphlet. It has 362 pages and describes 172 inns in 27 states, six provinces of Canada and the Virgin Islands, and Norman Simpson has visited every one of the inns.

Not satisfied with that, he has put out a guidebook of inns in Europe, and has visited all of them, too.

Between trips, he publishes a twice-monthly newsletter for country innkeepers, keeping in touch, and arranges an annual convention for them.

"They have so little in common with the big hotel operators and so much in common with one another that they need their own convention," he said. "We meet, of course, at a country inn."

"Every inn has its own memorable quality. That's what makes them such a pleasure. By their very nature, no two are alike."

"They offer another benefit for the traveler. People who prefer them seem to be of a certain type — at least they have that preference in common," and can share it around a real fire rather than in a bar.

Air Is Less Polluted, But Water Threatened

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The air Americans breathe is getting cleaner, but the water they drink is threatened by a variety of pollution problems, a White House advisory panel reported today.

The Council on Environmental Quality, in its annual report to Congress on the fight against pollution, labeled problems with the quality and quantity of the nation's water supplies as a "paramount issue for the nation as we enter the 1980s."

"From a variety of perspectives, the nation's water and the resources associated with it are in trouble," said Gus Speth, the council chairman. "Just as we can no longer assume that cheap energy will always be available to us at the flip of a switch, we cannot expect an endless supply of cheap, clean water at the twist of a faucet."

While citing "impressive progress" by industry in eliminating much of the raw waste once dumped into the nation's lakes and streams, the report said other pollution sources were proving much more difficult to control. Those sources were listed as chemical waste dumps polluting underground water supplies, sewer overflows and run-off from pesticides and agricultural fertilizers.

The report said underground water supplies — which provide drinking water to half the country — are being endangered by the increasing use of chemical dumps and ponds to store hazardous wastes. The report found that only 10 percent of hazardous chemicals are stored properly, greatly increasing the danger of chemicals seeping into underground water supplies and polluting them for "centuries."

Surface water pollution has forced the closing of 4 million of the 14.6 million acres of commercial shellfish waters in the United States, according to the report. In the Chesapeake Bay alone, 400 miles of shoreline were listed as critically eroding, primarily because of overdevelopment.

Another water problem cited is the growing threat from acid rain. The report said the acidity of rainfall — blamed on sulfur dioxide pollution — had increased 50-fold in the last 25 years in the eastern half of the country, killing fish in thousands of lakes in the north-eastern United States and in Canada.

The report said municipal sewage wastes are "still years away from being totally controlled," and for half of 44 cities surveyed, at least one type of downstream pollution had worsened over a 10-year span.

The report found more encouraging progress in the fight against air pollution, citing a study that showed the number of "very unhealthy" days in 25 cities surveyed was down by 32 percent between 1974 and 1977. It said the main reason for better air quality was a reduction in automobile pollution.

Survey Of Awareness

ECU News Bureau
East Carolina University is one of 185 colleges and universities throughout the United States participating in a national survey on global awareness. On each campus, between Feb. 4 to Feb. 22, a small number of randomly selected freshmen and seniors will meet at appointed times to take the survey.

The survey seeks to determine the understanding of college students of international and global problems and systems. The survey covers the students' knowledge of world affairs, their foreign language abilities, and their attitudes, perceptions, and concerns. The anonymity of each student who participates is assured. Results of the survey will be furnished to each of the participating institutions.

Supported by the National Endowment for the Humanities and the U.S. Office of Education, the survey is being conducted by the Educational Testing Service at Princeton, N.J. The administrator of the survey at East Carolina University is Dr. John D. Ebbs, Professor of English and Campus Representative for National/International Fellowships and Scholarships.

REAL INFLATION
ROME (AP) — Italy's cost-of-living index was up 3.4 percent last month over December, and 21.4 percent over January 1979, the government reported.

Plan Course In Sailing

ECU News Bureau
A five-session course in basic sailing will be offered by East Carolina University's Division of Continuing Education this spring.

Eligible to enroll in the course are novice sailors or persons who would like to learn the rudiments of sailing. Classroom sessions are scheduled for Thursdays, April 10 and 24, 7:30-9:30 p.m.

Three Saturday afternoon sessions on the Pamlico River — Saturdays, April 12, 19 and 26, 1:30-4:30 p.m. — will be used for actual sailing. Participants will have opportunities to apply classroom instruction to the sailing of three 18-23 foot sailboats.

Instructor is Beatrice Chauncey, an experienced sailor and member of the ECU music faculty.

Further information about the sailing course is available from the Office of Non-Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education, East Carolina University, Greenville, telephone 757-6143.

Writing Is Regionalized

By MARK LISAC
Canadian Press Writer
EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Canada's new literary map was compiled by Morris Wolfe and David Macfarlane. It was drawn by Graham Pilsworth in the washed-out green one sometimes finds on faded school walls.

Americans may not like it: the map assigns the Alaska Panhandle to Canada. It does not show the Red Deer River on which the misfit fossil hunters railed through southern Alberta in Robert Kroetsch's novel, "Badlands."

But on this map literary history is more important than geographic detail. Basically, it is a list of authors and titles selected by Wolfe and Macfarlane and superimposed on the appropriate regions.

The result is an easy-to-read guide to Canadian literature and regional culture.

Most Canadian readers are acquainted with the southern Ontario villages created by Robertson Davies in "Fifth Business" and Stephen Leacock in "Sunshine Sketches." The map will lead them elsewhere if they succumb to the mystery of the titles.

What praises did Fred Cogswell sing in "Ode to Fredericton?" What did Marius Barbeau tell about northwestern British Columbia in "The Downfall of Temlaham?"

As with any list, half the fun of the reading may lie in arguing with the decisions.

Crowded Manitoba is missing novels such as "Grain" and "Where Nests the Water Hen," while Toronto and Montreal get a special inset to house part of their outsized production.

There is more poetry than most people read and almost no history. Can we have a literary map of Canada without the Methodist parlors and diplomatic chambers described in Lester Pearson's memoirs, or without the back streets through which Mackenzie King went wandering in C. P. Stacey's "A Very Double Life?"

Fertilizer Supply Is Monitored

RALEIGH — The North Carolina fertilizer supply is the most closely monitored of any state in the nation, according to the Seed and Fertilizer Division of the North Carolina Department of Agriculture. The result is that purchases of 8-8-8 fertilizer are assured of getting eight percent nitrogen, eight percent phosphate and eight percent potash, the three prime plant food ingredients.

Headed by James Stevens, the fertilizer section has twelve inspectors across the state, taking spot samples from all forms of plant food from about ten percent of the tonnage sold. These samples are tested by the department's analytical laboratory under the food and drug division. If they do not meet minimum standards, the manufacturing company is penalized.

According to Stevens, North Carolina consumes two million tons of fertilizer annually. The state is the tenth largest user in the nation. The vast majority is used by farmers, but homeowners, businesses and recreational facilities buy much of this tonnage.

"We wish we never found deficiencies," Stevens said. "We are not out to get anyone, but if the product is short, we want to find it. If a company consistently has a high percentage of deficient product and takes no steps to correct the problem, it is possible we would rescind their registration. Fortunately, most fertilizer firms want to sell good material."

Stevens noted that the Smith-Douglass situation in 1979 was one of the most bizarre of his career. "We still don't know how the fertilizer became contaminated," Stevens explained. "This is the first time there has ever been a major contamination of fertilizer in America."

"Unfortunately, it could happen again and there is no real good way to guard against it," he declared. "Still, we are exploring every method to reduce the possibility."

Samples are pulled in accordance with methods developed by the Association of Official Analytical Chemists. With bag goods, a probe is inserted at a specified point at the corner of the bag. The bag must be lying flat so there is no separation of large and small pellets. The probe is closed and inserted back down, then opened so that it fills uniformly. Then it is closed and removed. Twenty bags in each ton lot are sampled. This yields about a gallon of fertilizer which is placed in a rifle, a device to aid the uniformity of the combined samples. From this a pint is extracted and sent to the lab in Raleigh.

Bulk fertilizer is sampled similarly, but as it is in a pile. The four corners of the pile are probed; four in the center and two more midway from the center — ten in all. The material is then handled in the same way as the bagged material.

Liquid fertilizer is equally scrutinized. The best sampling comes directly from the mixing vats. Two samples are used, an original and a duplicate. This is done primarily as a backup in case the original is damaged. Also, if the analysis is peculiar, the second is tested.

The second best method is to take the sample as the fertilizer is being pumped from one vat to another. If this is impractical, samples may be drawn from storage tanks.

"By and large, fertilizer manufactured and sold in North Carolina is a very good product," Stevens said. "This is evidenced by the excellence of our crops. Yet, errors are made. It is the responsibility of the fertilizer section to keep them to a minimum by doing all that is legally within our power to insure the best quality. Our job is to provide service to the industry and protect the interest of consumers of their product."

Even Fairies Have Exhibition

BRIGHTON, England (UPI) — Exhibitions cover everything these days. Brighton is doing one on the "little people" called fairies.

City fathers announced a show this summer "to explore the changing image of fairies," complete with Victorian paintings, photographs of alleged fairy sites and "a bronze bell stolen by a fairy."

RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR THE SWEEPSTAKES: NO PURCHASE OR CONTRIBUTION NECESSARY TO ENTER AND TO BE ELIGIBLE TO WIN.

To enter, complete the official entry blank by printing your name, address and zip code. Also check whether or not you wish to make a contribution to the United Cerebral Palsy Association and, if so, the value of the contribution you have enclosed. Mail each entry separately to: United Cerebral Palsy Associations Inc., P.O. Box #565, Murray Hill P.O., New York, New York 10016.

All entries must be received by March 30, 1980. Your chances of winning depend upon the total number of entries received. All of the following prizes will be awarded: 1 Grand Prize: AMF Crestliner Crusader 2255 Full Cabin Powerboat, estimated retail value—$20,000; 2 First Prizes: 1980 TOYOTA Celica GT Liftback, estimated retail value—$8,000 each; 15 Second Prizes: MAGNAVIX 6-Hour VHS Video Cassette Recorder, estimated retail value—$1,000 each; 700 Third Prizes: TIME-X Cordless Wall Clock, estimated retail value—$22.98 each; 1,000 Fourth Prizes: CLAIROL® Hot Stuff™ 1200, estimated retail value—$31.00 each.

There will be no substitutions for these prizes. Sweepstakes is open to all residents of the U.S. except employees and their families of Bristol-Myers Company, United Cerebral Palsy Associations, Inc., AMF Corporation, Toyota Motor Co., Time-X and Magnavox Inc. and their affiliates, subsidiaries, advertising agencies and Advertising Distributors of Maryland, Inc. Void in Maryland and wherever prohibited or restricted by law. Limit one winner per household. No purchase or contribution necessary to be eligible to win. Winners will be selected from a random drawing of all entries by Advertising Distributors of Maryland, Inc. Drawing will take place by April 30, 1980. Winners will be notified by registered mail promptly thereafter. For a list of winners, send a separate stamped, self-addressed envelope to: United Cerebral Palsy Sweepstakes, P.O. Box 14234, Baltimore, Maryland 21268. Winners must authorize United Cerebral Palsy Associations, Inc. to release names of winners at United Cerebral Palsy's discretion. All taxes, additional fees, registration, license, insurance and options will be the sole responsibility of each winner.

THERMOSTATS

*In accordance with U.S. Dept. of Energy Test Procedures, the operating cost was calculated on the basis of 64.3 gallons per day of hot water usage (90°F temp. rise) with gas rate of 36.7c per therm and electricity rate of 4.97c per kilowatt hour (U.S. government national average cost figures). Savings were calculated by subtracting the operating cost of our standard 40-gal. gas and 52-gal. electric water heaters from the cost of operating the Power Miser 40-gal. gas and 52-gal. electric models. Savings may be more or less depending on your hot water usage and local utility rates.

Size, type	Energy cost per unit	Savings
		Estimated annual	Accumulated 8 yr.
40-gallon Gas	25c/therm	$21.14	About $169.12
	36.7c/therm	31.03	About 248.27
	45c/therm	38.05	About 304.42
52-gallon Electric	1.5c/kwh	10.37	About 82.98
	4.97c/kwh	34.37	About 274.95
	10.0c/kwh	69.15	About 553.22
