Afghan Govm't Virtually Paralyzed

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH

Associated Press Writer KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Soviet and Afghan troops, and bands of heavily armed civilians patrolled the Afghan capital today, but President Babrak Karmal's Soviet-backed government appeared to have, virtually broken down.

Government ministries were paralyzed for a third day by a strike of civil servants and office workers, who ignored repeated broadcasts ordering them to return to work, and a general strike of shopkeepers continued for a fifth day.

The martial law proclamation issued after the start of last week's general strike placed government authority in the hands of the Soviet military commander, an unidentified army general, and Soviet and Afghan troops apparently were placed under a joint command in the face of the continuing rebellion throughout the country.

That gave the Soviets the last word on all military and civilian matters affecting Afghanistan.

(Reports reaching New Delhi today said gunfire rattled through the streets of Kabul through Sunday night.

A Frenchman in Kabul told a Paris radio station during a telephone interview that shots could still be heard on the outskirts of the city but that the center of the city was calm. The wife of a French official said, "We cannot move about. We are constantly being stopped. There are streets we cannot enter and all the shops are still closed. There is no way of buying provisions or even to communicate with food merchants.")

Reliable medical sources said more than 300 civilians died in six hours of bitter street fighting that began Thursday. An unknown number of Soviet and Afghan soldiers also were killed, but most of the dead were believed to be anti-communist Islamic "Moudjahidine" (holy warriors.)

Radio Kabul called them "mercenaries, saboteurs and imperialist agents."

At the height of the battle, involving Soviet and Afghan tanks, armored cars, helicopter gunships and MiG fighter bombers, the government proclaimed martial law and threatened the death penalty to anyone found in unauthorized possession of firearms.

Following the martial law proclamation, Kabul television announced an important speech by Karmal, but viewers were shown a week-old speech on Afghan farm policy.

Karmal has not been seen in public for three weeks. Unconfirmed reports said he took refuge in the heavily guarded Soviet embassy during the fighting. Official attempts to order the storekeepers to end their strike have been ignored.

FAMILY HISTORY INFO?

I would like to share or exchange information with anyone who is interested in the histories of these families: Conway, Franklin, Fulcher, Hancock, Harrington, Hyman, Ives, Mills and Tripp. These folks lived in Pitt County and the adjoining counties before and after 1800 and all seem to be related. Final Flurry For Voters

By WALTER R. MEARS

AP Special Correspondent CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — George Bush accused fellow Republicans of working in league to cut him down, while Sen. Edward M. Kennedy battled to stay within hailing distance of President Carter on the eve of New Hampshire's presidential primary election.

After one final bid for votes today, Kennedy left the last-minute efforts to his organization, family campaigners and house-to-house canvassers.

A poll published by the Boston Globe said Carter was preferred over Kennedy by New Hampshire Democrats, 55 percent to 30 percent.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale, campaigning for Carter, said the race, nevertheless, would be very close. "We're taking nothing for granted," said Mondale, making a final appearance today in Berlin.

Kennedy has said for days that he trails the president, the better to brace his campaign in case he does lose in the state next door to his Massachusetts home.

Except for a speech in Nashua, Kennedy was doing his election-eve campaigning in Massachusetts, preparing for its March 4 primary.

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. rated a far-back third in the poll, worked his way across New Hampshire in a 12-hour campaign wind-up. He says Carter cannot win re-election, insists that Kennedy has flopped as a challenger, and argues that he should be the choice of Democrats dissatisfied with the president.

Seven Republicans are running in New Hampshire, and Bush said the others were getting together to try to head off his bid for the nomination. The Globe poll rated Bush and Ronald Reagan almost dead even.

Bush, a former U.N. ambassador, won earlier Republican outings in Iowa and Puerto Rico.

The current Republican debate is about debating Bush's rivals fumed that he had barred four of them from his confrontation with Reagan in Nashua Saturday.

They called it raw politics, arrogant and high-handed. Reagan, who invited the other four to join the debate, said the whole thing "was kind of a fiasco."

Bush spent Sunday and Monday at his Houston home, saying he didn't want to distract his organization from get-out-the-vote efforts. He insisted all he had done was play by the rules set by the debate sponsor, the Nashua Telegraph.

Reagan, however, paid the bills — about $3,500 — because of the federal ban on corporate campaign contributions. He said that entitled him to invite the others. Under pressure from them and the Republican National Committee, he did.

"For some political reason, at the very last minute, he shifted the rules," Bush said Sunday.

"I'm inclined to feel as the other candidates see us doing better, they get together to try and pull us down," he said. "I don't believe the people...are going to see it as anything other than politics."

The others, Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee, Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, and Reps. John B. Anderson and Philip M. Crane of Illinois, said it was unfair and a blow to Republican unity.

"It was a lockout, and George Bush did the lockout," said Baker. "He was the heavy."

Bani-Sadr Praises Role Of Young Iran Militants

By The Associated Press

Iranian President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr today lauded the young militants holding the American hostages in Tehran and rejected the label of "moderate" applied to himself in the United States.

Bani-Sadr in an interview with the Tehran correspondent of the Hong Kong Star said the United States "attributed the seizure of the hostages to what they described as 'fanatical' Iranians. They then interpreted my election as a victory for a 'moderate' against the clergy."

"They are wrong on both counts," he continued. "They must understand that the students' action and my election constitute two faces of the same coin, namely the Iranian people's wish for independence and an end to United States' domination."

"I am amazed at the naivete of the American authorities."

Bani-Sadr called the embassy militants "young patriots whose sincerity and revolutionary sentiments are above all suspicion." He reiterated that his government would "never resort to violence" against them but added, "they must respect the lawful authorities in the country. They cannot do things independently."

Bani-Sadr repeated his three demands on the United States for the release of the hostages, "namely an admission of past wrongs, a pledge not to interfere in our internal affairs in the future and agreeing not to block our efforts to get back the shah and the wealth of Iran he embezzled."

The Carter administration already has refused to profess guilt for past actions in Iran.

On Sunday, as the U.N. commission to investigate Iranian charges against Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and the United States prepared to go to work, two more Iranian spokesmen denied any connection between the work of the commission and the release of the hostages. But President Carter said he believed "progress is being made."

"There was no linkage between the formation of the commission and release of the hostages, if by linkage you mean a deal. Ayatollah (Ruhollah) Khomeini, who has the ultimate authority over the crisis, does not make deals," Iran's U.N. ambassador, Mansour Farhang, said on CBS-TV's "Face The Nation."

Khomeini, Iran's revolutionary leader, said Saturday that the fate of the approximately 50 American hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran should be decided by the new Iranian Parliament, which will be elected March 14 and April 3.

This contradicted an understanding in Washington that the hostages, who today began their 114th day in captivity, would be freed simultaneously with the completion of the commission's work in Tehran, or about March 8.

Found Boy Chained

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 9-year-old boy was in protective custody today after his young neighborhood friends cut him loose from a chain that family members sometimes used to tie him to a yardpost "when he was bad," authorities said.

Two members of the boy's family were being held for investigation Sunday night and another was being sought, police said.

No charges were immediately filed pending a full investigation, said police Sgt. William Duffy.

"When he saw one of the suspects here at the station — I've never seen a 9-year-old child cower so," Duffy said. "He apparently was terrified of those people."

The boy's name was not released. He told police that "when he was bad" his parents and an older brother had punished him by chaining him either to his bed or to posts in the yard or garage, Duffy said.

"He would be chained with a padlock to the boy's ankle or wrist and with another padlock to a post in the yard, in the garage or to his bed — like dog on a leash," the officer said.

The boy apparently was also severely beaten, Duffy said. An examination at Morningside Hospital revealed scars on his back, legs, and buttocks, and the child told police he had been beaten with lampcords and ropes with knots tied in them, the sergeant said.

Duffy said the boy was cut free from the chain, which was wrapped around his ankle but not attached to a post at the time, by some neighborhood children. They removed the chain with a hacksaw after taking the boy to the home of a neighbor, who summoned police.

Duffy said the boy would be placed in a foster home pending court action. At the police station Sunday night, Duffy said the child was "rather enjoying himself," after being treated to dinner and ice cream by police officers.

Gold Plumbing Caper

By DAN SEWELL

Associated Press Writer MIAMI (AP) — The "Gold Plumbing Caper," which began with an order for deluxe bathroom fixtures, has led to the suspension of Dr. Johnny L. Jones, superintendent of the nation's fifth-largest school system and one of Miami's most respected black leaders.

Meeting in an unprecedented emergency session on Sunday, the Dade County School Board voted 6-1 to suspend Jones and unanimously to suspend MacArthur High School Principal Solomon Barnes pending resolution of the case.

The board also voted to conduct its own investigation.

Jones and Barnes, who is also black, were indicted Saturday by a grand jury on second-degree grand theft charges. If convicted, each could receive five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Joyce Knox, the only black school board member, cited unrest over a recent series of racially tinged events in voting against Jones' suspension.

"He is a symbol of so many things...when we suspend him, many of these things are suspended also," she said.

Neither Jones nor Barnes attended the meeting. Neither was available for comment. Both have said the $9,000 fixtures — some gold-plated — were for a class they planned to institute at Barnes' school.

After the purchase order came to light earlier this month, a contractor building a $121,000 weekend home for Jones reportedly told investigators he had been told to alter his plans to accommodate such fixtures.

Jones is considered one of the black community's foremost leaders. When he was hired as superintendent in 1977 at age 46, he became Dade County's highest paid official at $52,000 a year — since raised to $61,343.

Board members expressed concern about the reaction to Jones' suspension in the black community. About 200 of his supporters attended the meeting, frequently bursting into applause or boos.

Privacy Complaint Dismissed

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today killed a Des Moines, Iowa, woman's $3 million invasion-of-privacy lawsuit stemming from a newspaper report about her forced sterilization.

The justices, without comment, left intact an Iowa Supreme Court decision dismissing Robbin Howard's suit against the Des Moines Register & Tribune Co., reporter Margaret Engel and Dr. Roy Sloan.

The suit had sought $1 million from each defendant.

Ms. Howard sued after she was named in a Des Moines Register article about poor health care and administration at the Jasper County Home in Newton, Iowa.

The Feb. 15, 1976 article reported that when she was 18, Ms. Howard — then known as Robin Woody — was sterilized against her wishes. The decision was made by her parents and Sloan, the county home's psychiatrist.

The article, based partially on public records and partially on interviews with various officials including Sloan, noted that the involuntary sterilization was performed even though Ms. Howard was not retarded or mentally disabled.

That portion of Ms. Howard's suit against the newspaper and its reporter charged that the article was intended "to injure and aggrieve (her) by thrusting on her unsought, unwarranted and undesired publicity, notoriety and untold humiliation."

The suit conceded that the article was newsworthy, but charged that the disclosure of Ms. Howard's identity was not.

A state trial judge, upheld last Sept. 19 by the Iowa Supreme Court, dismissed Ms. Howard's suit.

In its opinion, the state's highest court said, "We do not believe the disclosure of her identity can be taken out of context."

The eye has several accessories that not only provide protection but make visual operations of the eye that much easier. Among these, the eyebrows are surprisingly important. It provides protection from light, sweat and possible blows. Eyelids aid sleep and protect against excessive light and foreign bodies. The glands in the lids moisten the surfaces of the eye. Tears, too, fulfill an important function, keeping the eye moist and free from foreign bodies.

Bob Scott Gambled In Rough Words For Hunt

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former Gov. Bob Scott, with his remark that the Hunt administration should "go to hell," has presented the picture of a shoot-from-the-hip candidate, frustrated by his aloof opponent and determined to bloody him up.

But Scott's attacks on Gov. Jim Hunt, which grew to new intensity Friday, are a calculated gamble on the former governor's part. He is risking, for now, dismissal as a candidate with only cannon-fire in his arsenal in return for the free attention that roar brings him.

Scott's remark about where the administration should go was no slip of the tongue. Since television reporters missed the comment during his speech to a state employees association, Scott repeated it for their cameras afterwards.

Scott also signaled last week, however, that his campaign is going to try to shift gears. Scott thinks he has at least gained voters' attention with his steady assaults on Hunt — without expensive television commercials his campaign cannot afford — and now will try to present some issues of his own while he has it.

"I had to call the public's attention, and the only way I can do it is to be rather strong," Scott said in a recent interview. "It's starting to have its effect, letting people know his horse isn't pure white."

Scott has been widely accused, editorially and by other politicians, of failing to present any valid reason for his own campaign beyond personal pique with Hunt.

Scott, Hunt's only major opponent in the May 6 Democratic primary for governor, hopes he can present some of those reasons now, 10 weeks before the primary election.

He plans, for instance, to unveil his own answer to the brown-lung dilemma — the long delays in settling claims for workers' compensation by textile employees disabled with lung disease.

And while he will continue to mention what he considers excesses of the current administration, such as the purchase of a $14 million jet helicopter, Scott acknowledges he must also say what he would have done with the money.

Attracting votes while contrasting his own position with Hunt's will be an extremely difficult job for Scott, particularly with Hunt's domination of the middle ground on so many issues, such as insurance regulation and salaries for teachers.

But Scott has felt burned by criticism that only Hunt's campaign has presented any positive positions. "Mine will be too, but I'll be taking a different route," Scott said.

"Mine will be in services to people — programs for the handicapped and elderly and other human services. His is oriented far too much toward economic development and industrial growth. I think that's going to come anyway, simply because we're in the Sunbelt.

"In effect, I'll be taking two parallel approaches," Scott added. "I'll be setting my agenda, and as a challenger I'll be pointing to what I see as the weaknesses of the present administration. As challenger I think that role is proper."

If he succeeds in developing a new approach, however, no one expects Scott to eliminate the verbal attacks on Hunt he seems to enjoy.

"I'm sorry I don't have the lawyer's ability to clothe the knife with a velvet glove," he said. "I come in with a bush axe."

After Tuesday, Hard 'Vacation' Is Ending

An AP News Analysis

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

NASHUA, N.H. (AP) — Hugh Gregg's vacation is ending tomorrow, so there'll be no more 12- and 14-hour campaign days, no more motorcades to run, no more rallies to oversee.

The New Hampshire presidential primary election will be over and, win or lose, George Bush will be on his own.

"I'll go back to work," said Gregg, 62, the former New Hampshire governor who ran the Bush campaign with firm Yankee discipline. "This was my vacation. I enjoy doing it every four years."

He insists on doing it as the boss, with clear authority to call the shots in New Hampshire. That's what he got from Bush.

New Hampshire has an ample supply of former Republican governors. Every four years, they choose up sides for the presidential primary campaign. Generally, it's one governor to a campaign. Doubling up can cause friction.

So Gregg, governor from 1953 to 1955, is the Bush chairman; Lane Dwinell, 1955 to 1959, campaigns with Ronald Reagan; and Walter Peterson, 1969 to 1973, is at work for Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee.

"If we had more governors, we'd probably have more candidates," Gregg said.

Dwinell's role is largely honorary. He travels with Reagan and shakes hands with voters. Peterson is both manager and escort for Baker. And Gregg commands the Bush campaign.

He runs the motorcades, often at the wheel of his own blue station wagon with Bush his passenger. He makes the rallies run on time, passes out campaign literature, arranges advertising.

In New Hampshire, Bush went where Gregg told him to go, and left when Gregg said to leave. When Gregg ran a hand through his brush-cut gray hair, that meant it was about time to move on. Sometimes Bush missed the signal. One day in Portsmouth, Gregg took the candidate by the arm and firmly ushered him away from questioning radio reporters.

There was another crowd waiting, he said. Besides, he didn't like the questions, which were about allegedly questionable contributions to a Bush Senate campaign. So he escorted Bush to the blue station wagon and sped away.

It was Gregg who suggested that Bush forgo Secret Service protection. He said government bodyguards would get in the way of close-up New Hampshire campaigning. Besides, Gregg jokes, "If we had Secret Service, I couldn't drive anymore."

"When it comes to New Hampshire, Hugh Gregg runs George Bush," said Bush. "It boils down to total trust." Bush said his national managers don't mess with Gregg's plans. "Hugh Gregg is a slave-driver, but he knows everybody in every town in this state."

Gregg, a lawyer, businessman and real estate investor, is not much on political ideology, nor does he worry about consistency in his choice of candidates. Four years ago, he did for Ronald Reagan the job he is doing for Bush against Reagan this time. He said Bush asked him first.

FOCUS

Spotlight on New Hampshire

When Republican Senator Howard Baker appeared at the University of New Hampshire last April, he wanted to make sure the state's voters would know he was there! Other Democratic and Republican presidential candidates also have made frequent visits to New Hampshire in recent months. New Hampshire traditionally is the first state in the country to hold its presidential primary. Candidates have campaigned hard there, hoping for a victory, or at least a strong showing tomorrow, to give their campaigns momentum for the primaries that follow. Yet New Hampshire accounts for barely one-half of one percent of the delegates at both the Republican and Democratic National Conventions.

DEAR READERS: I must confess to being an addictive collector of craft books with bookshelves literally overflowing with them. Each new one is a delight to me even if there are only one or two new and different sources of inspiration for me. When I find ones just brimming with ideas; I like to review them for you.

Two of the latest additions to my library are Needlepoint in Miniature by Nancy Noland Kurten and The Scribner Book of Embroidery Designs, edited by Muriel Baker.

Collecting of dolls and dollhouses, perfect in every little detail, has become a major mania in recent years. Nancy Kurten's book is full of projects to delight any collector of miniatures. There are 21 projects in all with each project including directions for several pieces of tiny needlepoint as well as a lesson on some phase of miniature construction or decoration.

Each project is based on a scale of one inch to one foot. A life-sized twelve-inch square pillow, for example, comes out in miniature as a one-inch square.

In addition to the needlepoint instructions, the author tells you how to finish walls and floors, how to create not only windows, but the views beyond them, how to use light effectively and much, much more. In the author's words, "By the end of the book, you not only should have a bundle of needlepoint ideas but should be an expert paper hanger, carpenter, seamstress and bricklayer."

In The Scribner Book of Embroidery Designs, Muriel Baker, herself a renowned author, designer and teacher of embroidery, has compiled a collection of widely varied original designs from 19 of this country's top needlework designers.

One of my favorite designs from this book is a Basket of Fruit worked in silk and gold threads using padding and couching for depth and dimension. Then there is the whimsical Balloon Race, using simple needlepoint stitches but featuring a striking combination of colors. This design is by Elsa T. Cose.

Stitch and color keys are given for each design along with charts, diagrams or sketches of each of the designs. Material lists are also given. Most of the designs use wellknown stitches, so few stitch diagrams are given. In this sense, this cannot be considered a beginner's "how-to" book. Rather, it will be a source of inspiration for the accomplished embroiderer.

Both books are published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York City. If your local book store or needlecraft shop does not have copies, they will probably order them for you. Needlepoint in Miniature sells for $17.50; The Scribner Book of Embroidery Designs is priced at $22.50 until June 30, after which time the price will be $25.00.

(NOTE TO EDITORS:

I am including a list of the designers featured in The Scribner Book of Embroidery Designs in the event that one or more of them is from your circulation area and you would like to include their name(s) in this column. DEAR ABBY: This is a somewhat belated response to BILL IN LONG BEACH who griped because some "little $700-a-month coffee-break secretary" screened her boss's telephone calls. He had a point.

When I call an executive, I don't like being asked, "Who is calling?" This gives me the impression that the boss is "in" to some people, and "out" to others.

Too many secretaries assume an air of self-importance and demand to know, "What is the purpose of your call?" The purpose of my call is none of her d--- business!

I wonder how much business has been lost over the years because of some arrogant little snip who answers her boss's telephone and decides who is important enough to get through to the boss and who isn't.

I'M WITH BILL

DEAR WITH: Now let's hear it from a secretary:

DEAR ABBY: I am a $540-a-month no coffee-breaks, no lunch-hour secretary to a busy executive who does not answer his own phone. I do. If he spent his days fielding calls from cut-rate office supply dealers who just got a dynamite deal on ballpoint pens that they can let us have at a price we wouldn't believe, or people who want to know our mailing address, or loan companies running credit checks on employees, or job-hunters asking if we have any openings, or solicitors selling tickets to the policeman's ball, or printers telling us our stationery is ready, and so on, ad infinitum, my boss wouldn't have time to run a business. I would then be out of a job, and so would all the other people who work for him. Want to support us on welfare?

It's my job to type letters, keep his files in order, keep track of his appointments, screen his mail, and remind him to send his grandmother a card on her birthday and pay his bills. But probably the most valuable service I perform is to handle people like you when he says, "If Bill from Long Beach calls, tell him I'm out of town. I can't stand the guy!"

Savings Should Please

In Farmville the town administration is trying a pilot program involving roll-out garbage collection. Involved is the use of 80-gallon mobile carts, furnished by the town. The carts can be filled and then are rolled to the curb for collection by the residents for collection.

Town officials say a survey of the Clairmont area show 97 percent of the residents want to see the plan continued. The project is also being tried in the Langdale area.

Comments included "Among the best ideas the town has ever had."

and "Please bring back cart ASAP." The object of the plan, of course, is to make the matter of garbage collection as convenient as possible for the citizens, but also to save money.

Farmville has a consultants' report which projects the town may save over $700,000 in operational costs over ten years.

That's a considerable amount, and certainly the taxpayers should be pleased about the program if it will realize that kind of savings.

Fuel Costs Spurring Prices

It was to be expected. Consumer prices rose 1.4 percent in January. It was the largest increase in over 6 1/2 years.

The increase was also the biggest for a single month since August, 1973. The whopping increase was blamed almost entirely on the steeply rising prices for gasoline and heating oil.

There is hardly anyone in the United States who pays household bills who is not aware of this. Jumps in fuel prices occurred almost weekly, biting into individual family budgets.

When we get energy prices under control we will have inflation under control. Energy is at the very heart of the problem.

SHOULD BE THE KEY TO A CELL

2nd Jordan In Treasury

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
 WASHINGTON — The cold satisfaction instead of sympathy with which former business colleagues greeted Treasury Secretary G. William Miller's embarrassment in the Textron affair is a hot clue that economic calamity is crowding an unknowing Jimmy Carter.

Nobody in the corporate or financial communities really cares whether as chairman of Textron, Inc., Miller could have been all that ignorant of the giant conglomerate's overseas bribery. But many corporate magnates are pleased with his discomfiture for the reason stated by one famed Wall Street barracuda: "He's been a turncoat to the things that a businessman believes in." For different reasons, Capitol Hill also enjoys seeing the aloof Miller in trouble.

Yet, no Cabinet member has a higher standing with President Carter and his inner circle. What endears Miller at the White House is precisely what alienates him with Wall Street, Capitol Hill and Treasury Department professionals: At the Treasury now, as earlier at the Federal Reserve Board, Bill Miller is unabashedly the president's man.

More is involved here than academic discussion of the secretary's proper role. Those who feel he should represent a business constituency while also serving the president believe that dual role performs an economic early warning function. As Carter's loyal servant, Miller does not alert him to unpleasant truths. "He is nothing more than an establishment version of Ham Jordan," a financier with impeccable Democratic credentials told us.

Early warning is badly needed, in the opinion of the business world. While Carter, Jordan and Co. bask in the glow of rising political polls, businessmen see an economy wildly out of control and markets frighteningly unstable. Making matters worse is a Treasury secretary too quick on the trigger with his judgments and a Treasury Department in disarray.

Miller's predecessor, W. Michael Blumenthal, was purged in last year's Cabinet shake-up for what Carter aides called "going into business for himself" — that is, publicly offering independent judgments. That sin ultimately made Blumenthal a hero to businessmen who were at first suspicious of him. He not only belittled pet administration schemes like hospital cost containment but made no secret of it.

There would be no such "going into business for himself" by Bill Miller. As Federal Reserve Board chairman (a post independent of the administration), he shocked the financial world by declaring on July 30, 1978, that "we're going to see interest rates peak" before year's end. That might have been good mid-term, election-year politics, but it was deplorable economic forecasting.

Worse was Treasury Secretary Miller's statement to newsmen last Sept. 14 that the nation was "halfway through" a recession. Again, that fit White House happy-talk at the low point of Carter's popularity, but it was hooted at by serious economists. Miller backed away a month later.

At that point, in mid-October, Miller embarked on a course affecting the Chrysler Corp. loan guaranty that has been widely labeled as a "disgrace" in Wall Street. After first declaring he would support a tightly-policed loan of no more than $750 million, Miller ended up backing twice that amount with no visible strings attached.

All this pales, however, by comparison to Miller's Jan. 15 statement that "it doesn't seem to us an appropriate time to sell our gold..." That no-sell statement stunned American financiers and sent gold racing upward $50 an ounce in one dizzying half-hour.

This tendency by an extremely bright man to speak before he thinks, a common failing in Washington, might be forgiven. So might a personality variously described in Congress as "cautious," "aloof" and "arrogant." So might a disposition that enshrines neatness, both personal and for his ever-clean desk, and abhors tobacco smoke to the point that ashtrays are not permitted in his office.

What is not forgiven is the perception that has now spread to the central banks of Europe that Miller is so much the political front man for the electioneering president that he shrugs off economic reality. The problem is compounded at the increasingly demoralized Treasury by the Feb. 28

East Carolina Teacher's College is one of Greenville's greatest assets and since its establishment it has probably been the cause of bringing as many new residents as any other industry or organization. The college is a state institution and it seems that for a long time we have just taken for granted that it didn't belong to us. It is gratifying to know that there is at this time a growing spirit of co-operation between our citizens and the college which should result in greater things for both the college and our city. There is still a need for dormitory space for both men and women. It will not be long before the budget commission will begin to plan for the appropriations to be asked from the general assembly for the state institutions and if Greenville and Pitt County citizens will put their shoulders to the wheel, we believe that some of these needed additions to the college can be secured.

Army Of Planners

By BILL NOBLITT
 RALEIGH — When a number of construction experts complained that governmental red tape pushes the cost of building up as much as 10 or 20 percent in North Carolina, they apparently knew what they were talking about.

The red tape is wielded by a sizable — and expensive — army of bureaucrats. A study committee of the General Assembly looking into building costs asked researchers on the staff to dig into the number of state personnel involved in planning, reviewing plans, designing, or overseeing construction projects.

"The results are interesting," the staff report came back. "As might be expected, the State Construction office has the largest staff of any group with 34 employees and a $736,000 payroll.

"The next largest is the Department of Human Resources which aids local governments and the private sector on specialized construction for hospitals, nursing homes, jails, rural health centers and design to accommodate the handicapped." That unit has 20 employees and a payroll of nearly half a million dollars.

as potential occupants and users (obviously a big chunk of time and effort), the research staff zeroed in on just those state employees involved in "planning, reviewing plans, designing, or overseeing."

Most of the positions are consulting engineers, ar-

Architects, design technicians, and facilities planners of various specialties.

There are 136 employees involved full-time with the annual payroll exceeding $2.7 million.

Builders are telling legislators that goldplating in public buildings: excessively expensive materials, wasted space, unusual design elements, and the constant bureaucratic hassling is costing millions in time of construction and inflated costs.

One contractor asked why it isn't possible to have a qualified building specialist on the job as project supervisor who can authorize changes when money could be saved in materials or techniques, or to resolve inevitable problems which arise.

"Nobody will give us an answer on the job. They act like somebody is looking over their shoulder, and all decisions have to be made by committee in Raleigh," goes the complaint.

No Experience
 A top administrator from the state property office gave lawmakers a straightforward answer to that: too many of the state's planners, designers, and building supervisors have no experience in actual building work. They are either political appointees or bureaucrats who came up through the ranks of state government, and not through the ranks of construction work.

Meanwhile, as building costs soar, quality plummets. The new prison at Salisbury is now opening — months off schedule because of building problems. Insecure doors were used, common household door locks easily jimmied had to be replaced, a major connector between two separate buildings ended up in the wrong location.

The Archdale Building in Raleigh, a 15-story modern structure, can't be heated or cooled properly; plumbing is already rusting out after two years of use; odd-shaped corridors and floor spaces put efficient workspace at a premium. The list could go on and on.

Buy Chrysler, Or Else

WASHINGTON — All right, we've asked you as nice as we could to buy a Chrysler car. First, Joe Garagiola offered you $500 off on any automobile from the Chrysler lot. Then Ricardo Montalban told you what a Chrysler product would do for your image.

Finally, Chrysler's own chairman of the board, Lee Iacocca, decided to go on the air and beg. Well, maybe he didn't exactly beg. He asked you to just compare the major American models, and if you didn't think a Plymouth or a Dodge or a Chrysler was superior, that was your business. But he knew when you tried the competition, you would be fair about it and go for his product.

Well, you didn't. So Lee made you an offer you couldn't refuse. You could buy the car, and if you didn't like it, you could return it within 30 days and get your money back.

You would have thought that the American people knew a good deal when they saw one. I mean, what more do you want Lee to do for you?

Since you didn't take advantage of his offer, I'll tell you what I'll do. I haven't cleared this with Lee yet, but I know he'll go along with it. After all, he dropped one billion big ones last year, and he has no choice.

If you buy a Chrysler automobile or truck within the next 90 days, we will give you a condominium in Florida, a four-year college education at Yale, Harvard, Princeton or MIT for any member of your family, a lifetime airline pass for any person over 21, a seat on the New York Stock Exchange and a quarter interest in the Alaska pipeline.

I know what you're going to say — you already have a car. That's not the point. Once you drive a Chrysler, Lee and I know you'll never drive anything else again. So, here's our last offer. We're not even going to ask you to buy a car. All we want you to do is to go to a Chrysler dealership and LOOK at one. Is that asking too much? Just stand outside the window and show some interest. If you do this, one of our salesmen will come out and present you with an original Rembrandt painting, signed by the artist himself.

If you decide to come into the showroom, and open one of the doors of our models, we'll give you a diamond necklace from Van Cleef & Arpels, valued at $100,000. And if you decide to take a spin in the car, we'll present you with the franchise to any national football team in the league.

We're being as nice about this as we possibly can. But if you still won't go out and buy an Omni, Volare or a Le Baron, then we will have no choice but to get tough.

ART BUCHWALD

We're going to put those automobiles on the road one way or another. If this means getting out there on the highway and smashing them into the car you are now driving and totaling it, so be it. I'm not saying we're going to do this, Lee happens to be dead set against it, but there are a lot of people in the company who want to take a hard line.

You can lose megabucks in this business for just so long and then your patience wears thin. So all I'm saying is you either buy a Chrysler car the easy way or the hard way. It doesn't make any difference to me. I'm not in this business for my health.

To the editor:

I can't believe it! Here I am approaching graduation from a four-year institution of higher learning and look what happens. The Greenville City Council teaches me more in two months than I learned throughout my entire educational experience! I was so naive as to think that elected public officials were responsible human beings, sensitive to the needs and desires of their constituency, and well-informed about the quality of services provided by their administration. I actually thought that those strange little creatures which are known to inhabit the deepest and darkest bowels of city hall, calling all the shots and never uttering intelligible sounds, were competent and resourceful servants of the people! Now, however, I've seen the light!

I was eager to become involved with the most reputable Rescue Squad in the state. What I discovered was a unit which deserved far more credit than it had received, for here was a group of outstanding professionals (paid and volunteer), providing superior emergency care in spite of inadequate equipment and questionable interference from a fire chief and city manager.

I'm very bitter and frustrated. I've been denied the rare privilege of participating in what could be the very finest of EMS systems; moreover, the citizens of Greenville are being denied these essential services, also, under the guise of "progress and long-range planning." The fire-rescue integration plan is based on an invalid study (via League of Municipalities), misinterpreted by administrators who have grossly misled the general public with tenuous statistics and facts. We've got a mess. Too bad they won't even let us talk about it!

Strength For Today

NOW IS THE TIME
 A man nearing retirement age recently remarked that all of his old friends were passing away. He went on to say that for years he had looked forward to the fellowship he would have with these friends when he would be in a position to shed some of the responsibilities of business.

What he failed to realize was that we can't put off until tomorrow the joys of human association. So many people make the great mistake of declaring that at some future time when they are not so busy they will spend more time with their children, visit their relatives, give more time to church work, or start a helpful course of reading and study. For most of them that day never comes. The passing years erect obstacles in the way of such ambitions rather than remove them.

Therefore, we should make friends, enjoy them now, get to know our children now, read and study now. Tomorrow may be too late for all of these things.

Offers Land Investment Tips

By LOUISE COOK
 Associated Press Writer

Thousands of people looking for an investment that won't disappear with inflation have turned to the land. But dreams of valuable property can turn to dust if you're not careful.

"The business remains a mystery to prospective buyers," says Patricia Simko, author of a new guide on land sales, prepared by INFORM, a non-profit research group that studies the impact of U.S. corporations on the environment, employees and consumers.

The INFORM book, "The Insider's Guide to Owning Land in Subdivisions: How to Buy, Appraise and Get Rid of Your Lot," is based on a four-year investigation of the land sales and development business and the federal and state agencies which regulate

it. The guide costs $2.50 and is available from INFORM, 25 Broad St., New York, N.Y., 10004.

Ms. Simko recommends that would-be buyers take several basic steps to protect themselves. Among the suggestions:

—Visit and inspect the lot you are considering. Do not be satisfied by a photograph or by a visit to a lot which the salesman says is "exactly" like the one you will get. Find out exactly how far your lot is from shopping areas, medical facilities, schools, etc.

—Ask for a federal or state property report which includes information on finances, planned services, mortgages, liens, etc. Although there are some exceptions, any subdivision developer who owns more than 100 lots and is selling land across state lines generally must give prospective buyers a federal property report. Requirements for state property reports vary from place to place. Ask the attorney general's office in your state for the details.

The property report by itself is no guarantee you are getting a good deal. "A developer may offer land that has no known water supply or access road, or is even under water, so long as the lot is accurately described as such," Ms. Simko says. "But the property report will supply just about all the information you are going to get from some developers."

—Be sure you know what you are getting before you sign an installment contract to buy land. The contract is not a deed. It does not give you ownership of the land and may not even give you the right to use the land. "Many contracts give only the right to make monthly payments for a very long time...After you complete the payments, the company will turn over the lot to you, plus whatever improvements have been provided," says Ms. Simko.

Check a developer's reputation with the Chamber of Commerce and the local Better Business Bureau. Talk to other people who have bought lots from the same company. Will your money be put in a separate escrow account to pay for the lot or will it be used to pay the developer's operating costs? What will happen to your contract if the developer sells the land or goes out of business?

—Find out what basic services are promised for your lot. At a minimum, they should include a central water supply, paved roads, central sewage disposal, a drainage system, garbage collection and electricity.

Keynoter On At Least 10 Persons Crime Role Lose Lives In Traffic

L. D. Hyde, director of the crime prevention division of the N.C. Department of Crime Control and Public Safety will be the keynote speaker at a Citizens' Conference on Crime Prevention, scheduled for February 28 at the National Guard Armory here.

The 2 p.m. confrence is designed to encourage citizen support for local law enforcement efforts in crime prevention and for the formation of a Pitt County Crime Prevention Committee.

Hyde will speak on the responsibility of the citizen in crime prevention, and explain a special crime prevention awareness program for young people.

All interested citizens, no matter what age, are encouraged to attend and participate.

Preparations for the meeting are being handled by Pitt Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

By The Associated Press
At least 10 persons lost their lives on North Carolina's highways on the weekend, according to the state Highway Patrol.

The fatalities boost the state's highway death toll for the year to 164, compared with 219 at the same time last year.

A 3-year-old girl was killed Saturday night in a Gaston County police chase, the patrol said. The child, Beverly Michelle Dills of Bessemer City, was a passenger in a car being pursued by police. The car went out of control and hit a tree near Gastonia, the patrol said.

The patrol identified the driver of the car as Hoyle Clarence "Stoney" Leadwell Jr. of Gastonia. He was injured in the accident and was listed in satisfactory condition in Gaston Memorial Hospital.

Trooper J.A. Brown said a Gaston County policeman spotted Leadwell's car traveling on N.C. 321 at an excessive speed. Brown said the policeman intended to stop Leadwell and warn him about speeding but Leadwell turned off the highway and sped away when the policeman turned on his blue light.

Brown said charges of reckless and speeding to resist arrest probably will be filed by police against Leadwell, but he said any decision to file charges for the girl's death would be made by District Attorney Joe Brown.

Also injured in the accident were the child's sister, Amy Nicole Dills, 2, who is being held for observation in Gaston Hospital, and her father, Paul Dills, 20, of Gastonia, who was in satisfactory condition at Gaston Hospital.

William H. Hurt of Selma was killed Saturday when he was struck by a car while walking along Interstate 95 in Cumberland County.

Willie James Nelson, 50, of Fair Bluff, died in a hit-and-run accident early Sunday in Columbus County. The patrol said Nelson was walking along a road when he was hit by a car.

Cynthia Ann Williams, 18, of Spencer was killed Saturday night when she lost control of her car near Salisbury.

Four Dudley teen-agers were killed Friday night when their car was struck by a train near Goldsboro. The victims were identified as Wilbert Russell, 18, Paul Russell, 17, Roderick Coley, 18, and Dwight Eason 17.

Dorothy Speller, 60, of Windsor, was killed Friday night when she walked into the path of an oncoming car, the patrol said.

Frecia Dupree, 20, of Opelika, Ala., was killed in a one-car accident near Banner Elk Friday night when the car in which she was a passenger ran off the road and struck a tree.

Mixed Reaction Over Reducing Class Size

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt's proposal to reduce the size of fourth-, fifth- and sixth-grade classes from one teacher per 30 students to one per 26 students has drawn mixed reactions from educators and state officials.

Hunt has said he will ask the 1981 Legislature to spend $22.5 million a year to reduce the size of classes. He says the reduction would improve the teaching of reading.

Not all educators agree with Hunt's conclusion on the issue. "With a reduction in class size from 30 to 26, scores would be expected to increase the achievement of the average pupil from the 50th percentile to the 52nd percentile," said Gene V. Glass, co-director of the Laboratory of Educational Research at the University of Colorado.

Achievement test scores are reported in percentiles, with the 50th percentile being the national median.

"That's not much when compared to the cost of the additional teachers required," Glass said.

Glass has compiled more than 90 studies involving about one million students. His studies, acknowledged by educators to be the most accurate available, showed achievement-test scores geometrically increase as class size gets smaller.

"When you teach six kids reading and three leave, it makes a whale of a difference," he said. "But who, teaching a class of 35, is going to notice when three or four leave?"

Mary Jayne McReynolds, Wake County assistant superintendent of schools, said, "Just reducing the numbers is not enough. You also need to constantly improve classroom-management skills."

Other educators have said they support Hunt's proposal. Any reduction in class size would be beneficial, they say.

"The fewer the better is the principle they are going on."

said J.W. Jenkins, director of operations in the state division of reading. "Even one or two would be helpful."

Jerome H. Melton, deputy superintendent of the state Department of Public Instruction, agreed. "Twenty is the maximum. We don't feel you should go beyond that."

Hunt's education adviser, Betty Owen, said that reducing class size is not the only answer. She said class-management skills must be improved. She said under Hunt's program, there would be a renewed emphasis on all communications skills.

Pneumonia

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Josip Broz Tito's doctors battled pneumonia today as well as the heart and kidney ailments that have brought Yugoslavia's 87-year-old leader near the point of death.

In an advisory today, Tito's medical panel said his condition "is without change."

"Intensive treatment is being continued," the panel said, giving no details of the treatment or saying whether it had helped relieve the pneumonia.

Tito was beset by heart and kidney complications in early February after he had appeared to be recovering from the amputation of his left leg Jan. 20 because the circulation in it was blocked.

Featuring Story Of Butchery

LONDON (UPI) — Eight hundred years of butchery are featured this spring at the London museum, one of the capital's best if little-known museums. "The Butchers of London 1180-1980" includes silver plate and rare documents from the Butcher's Company, one of the City of London's ancient trade guilds.

Urges CIA Oversight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd says "unreasonable restraints" should be lifted from U.S. intelligence gathering agencies, but Congress should still have some oversight responsibilities.

"I don't think this Senate — or the House — is inclined to give (the Central Intelligence Agency)...a blank check," the West Virginia Democrat told reporters during the week-end.

Last week, CIA director Stansfield Turner told a congressional committee he opposes giving Congress notification in advance of major covert activity by the CIA.

Pending legislation would require the agency to give such notification to the Senate and House intelligence committees.

CONTROL YOUR DEBTS

If your present bills, because of economic pressures, cannot be met by your income, legal relief may be available to you under the provisions of Chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, which permits individuals to petition the Court for an arrangement allowing a thirty-six month period to discharge indebtedness, without property repossession or creditor harassment. Attorney's fees, which may be paid in monthly installments, are determined by the Court. There is no fee for an initial conference to discuss your eligibility for a "Wage Earner Plan".

"The one thing that doesn't pay any attention to the political polls are the markets, and they are the only indicator of reality," one worried Wall Street trader told us. But the president pays no attention to the haywire markets, and his secretary of the Treasury does not signal the danger. To apprehensive businessmen, that is a far more serious misdeed than failure to control his conglomerate's bribers.

What do you get for your money at BB&T?

Sure, you get checking and savings here. And all kinds of special services. So what sets Branch Banking and Trust Company apart? Simple. The kind of service we give—and the hard work we put behind that service.

A friendly smile is great. But a commitment has to be something more.

In your day-in-and-day-out dealings with a bank—ours or anybody else's—you rarely get beyond the teller's window. So if our tellers keep smiling, we've made your banking more pleasant. And that's what personal service is all about, right? We don't think so. We think it has to go deeper than that.

For example, you probably don't care if the person in charge of putting together your checking statement has a friendly smile. But you do want that person to do the job right.

You want a loan officer who'll answer your questions. A branch manager who'll listen. And a bank president who'll inspire his people to develop and offer better products and services.

Finally, you want that smiling teller to do his or her job quickly and accurately. So personal service is more than a smile and a handshake.

This is the easy part. But it's only the beginning.

How can you be sure BB&T's commitment to hard work isn't just a lot of talk?

We don't blame you for asking the question. A lot of companies run a lot of advertising promising good service. How can you be sure we mean it? We'd like to point out first that we've been serving the people of North Carolina longer than any other bank in the state. We're not about to forget the formula that's kept us in business for so long.

We'd like to point out, too, that the typical BB&T customer has more than just one or two accounts at our bank. People come back for more because they know we're working hard to make their banking easier. Finally, we'd like to issue an invitation. We invite you to put us to the test. Give us a try. See if we don't work very hard to make your banking easier, more pleasant and, most important, more productive for you. Because when you're talking about personal service, that's the bottom line: does it help you do the things you want to do? That's the kind of service we believe in very strongly at BB&T.

Nobody works harder for your money than BB&T.

Rural Areas Lagged In Quality Of Life Advances

Windmill Power Pride Has Turned To Gibes

A WHITE ELEPHANT? — This is the world's largest electricity-generating windmill, sitting atop Howard's Knob in Boone, N.C. after it was dedicated July, 1979 at a cost of $3.5 million. The twin-bladed wind machine does not work despite the fact it is one of NASA's pet projects. Many residents in Boone have taken to poking fun at the structure, and two residents have made a comedy film about the windmill. (AP Laserphoto)

By Bill Humphries
RALEIGH — Community structure and quality of life improved substantially in North Carolina during the 1950's and 1960's but the improvement was much greater among urban than rural counties, according to Dr. Robert L. Moxley and Dr. Ronald C. Wimberly of North Carolina State University.

Moxley and Wimberly are the authors of an 86-page study entitled "Changing Social Structure and Quality of Life in North Carolina," published by the N.C. Agricultural Research Service as a Department of Sociology and Anthropology progress report. Graduate assistants M.J. Belyea and T.J. Tomazic aided in the project.

About 35 separate indicators of change in social structure and quality of life are used in comparing four types of counties — metropolitan, urban, semirural and rural — on the basis of data for 1950, 1960, and 1970.

Levels of development of community structure were found to have been greatest in metro counties, second highest in urban counties, third in semirural counties and lowest for rural counties. Indicators of quality of life tended to follow the same patterns.

All types of counties experienced some gains during the twenty year period. However, gaps existing in structural development and quality of life found among metro, urban, semirural and rural counties in 1950 tended to widen by 1970.

"A number of indicators show that the more rural counties, like the urban, have been developing, but at a slower rate," Moxley and Wimberly said. "Many inequalities between the types of counties have grown larger and to the disadvantage of the more rural counties."

"As a rule, the more rural the county, the greater its relative disadvantage."

The authors believe the trends reported in their study will be important for future economic, social and political change as well as decision making.

"Balanced growth" is now an official state policy in North Carolina as spelled out by the General Assembly in House Bill 874. Furthermore, some recent state publications suggest that North Carolina is already a "balanced state."

"Our research, however, indicates that population distribution is in fact one of the few indicators which show relative long-term trends in equality across the state. Based on many measures of basic social structure and quality of life, there are wide and increasing imbalances among the four types of counties," Moxley and Wimberly said.

It's unlikely, they add, that the recent upturn in employment rates in some areas of North Carolina is enough in itself to have erased many of the long-term statewide patterns of inequalities.

The authors use some 34 charts to present their findings with respect to community structure and quality of life indicators for the four types of counties in 1950, 1960, and 1970. This information, they say, can serve as a base to which data from the 1980 census and future studies can be added.

Some of the findings from the just-published study: — Rural counties have shown substantial gains in value of agricultural products sold, but in 1970 they still ranked lowest of all county types in average total value of farm product sales.

— The proportion of craftsmen or skilled workers in the labor force has been rising sharply for rural and semirural counties, moderately for urban counties, and only slightly for metro counties. — Professional and managerial types of occupations have tended to dominate metropolitan trends while craftsmen and kindred workers have become prominent in other counties.

— Metro counties were far ahead in number of retail establishments in 1950 and have continually increased their lead in this field.

— The proportion of college educated persons has been increasing across the state, most rapidly in metro counties. However, even the metro counties were still well below twenty percent in 1970. Also, the college education gaps among the county types have been widening and the position of the rural and semirural counties has worsened.

— Since the late 1950's, rural counties have risen from lowest to highest in the ratio of black to white voter registrations while, despite their increases, the metro counties fell from top to bottom rank.

— Rural and semirural counties had the lowest suicide rates in 1950, but by 1970 they had the highest. For most of the study period, the homicide rate was the highest in the more urbanized counties, but not by much.

— In 1970, rural and semirural counties led in percentage of households with food freezers but fell behind the more urban counties in telephone service and air conditioners.

— Since 1950 the percentage of people below the government's poverty line has been highest for the rural counties, followed by semirural, urban, and metro, in that order.

— Although rural counties generally are poorer, they still have to provide the greatest amount of aid to the disabled and aid to dependent children per 1,000 population.

"There are other things besides population distribution that we should think about when we consider a balanced Carolina," Moxley and Wimberly said.

Nab Gunman After Chase

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — An 18-year-old Hickory man fired several shots at family members and police Sunday, then led 15 police officers on a chase for nearly three hours through four counties.

Charles David Holland was stopped finally by police on a dead-end road near Valdeese in Burke County and was charged with 17 offenses.

Holland was being held on $25,000 bond at the Catawba County Jail.

He is charged with eight counts of assault with a deadly weapon, three counts of assault on a police officer with a firearm, driving while under the influence, two counts of driving left of center, discharging a firearm within the city limits, eluding arrest and failure to stop for a blue light and siren.

A spokesman for the Hickory Police Department said that about 2:43 a.m. Sunday officers received a report that a man was shooting at family members at his home.

Police responded and were fired at, but did not return the fire, the spokesman said. He said Holland then jumped into his car and led officers through Catawba, Alexander, Caldwell and Burke counties at speeds of up to 80 mph.

It could not be determined why Holland was shooting at family members. No charges were filed in connection with the shooting at his home.

Holland was taken into custody about 5:05 a.m. after Holland rammed his car into a patrol car.

Police took a .22-caliber pistol from Holland's car.

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Some people think it is, well, adorable. Others snicker and say the $3.5 million windmill atop Howard's Knob has confirmed their skepticism. It still isn't working.

The world's largest wind-driven electrical generator was dedicated last July 11. Balloons floated to the sky in celebration and energy officials declared the giant pinwheel represented "the way to slip the stranglerhold" of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Much to the amusement of non-believers, the twin-bladed wind machine designed to produce power for as many as 500 homes — about 2,000 kilowatts — has been plagued with problems.

"It's like when you buy a new car from a dealer," said John Collins, head of the project for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"You have 18 to 20 complaints about it in the first 6,000 miles." He says the windmill eventually will work.

A faulty computer system was at the heart of the problems, he said, but tracking down each thing that was wrong was like "hunting for ghosts." Engineers found poorly soldered joints, bad cables and other flaws.

The windmill — with its 200-foot blade span — is controlled by computer both at the site on 4,200-foot Howard's Knob and by remote control from Blue Ridge Electric Membership Corp.'s headquarters in Lenoir. A computer is also used to extract data about the performance and power output of the machine.

NASA says remote computer "utility training" for Blue Ridge operators will begin this week, and NASA hopes to turn the operation over to the company in April or May — when power may finally flow.

The rotor is designed to begin turning when the wind reaches 6 mph and stop at 33 mph. At the ideal wind speed of 25 mph, it should produce 2,000 kilowatts of power.

Meanwhile, if the windmill hasn't generated electricity for Boone residents, it has generated one new cult — the Pangalactic Unification Church and Restaurant.

Members of the spoof organization call themselves Wooshies because the windmill goes "woosh, woosh, woosh" when it turns.

Two students, Kenn Hochstetler and John Fairweather, made a comedy film about the windmill, complete with man-on-the-street interviews and footage of Wooshies worshipping the generator.

That gave rise to Wooshie bumper stickers and windmill buttons, all revealing in a light-hearted way how many residents of this town of 12,000 — plus some 10,000 Appalachian State University students — feel about the windmill, the films' producers say.

"Most people in Boone feel that the windmill is a white elephant," they said. "The Wooshies is a way of poking fun at the windmill in the same way that the mountaineer makes fun of the flatlander."

Accepts Role Of All Midshipmen Bottle Drifted To Anchorage

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — England's Prince Andrew has chosen to scrub, scrape and polish like any other midshipman during his 16 days of training on the carrier HMS Hermes. And like many other midshipmen, he chose to spend part of his time in port in a topless bar.

Andrew got started Friday night by slipping with some mates and his Scotland Yard bodyguards into Trader Jon's — a landmark Pensacola bar that's considered the off-base home to the U.S. Navy's aerial acrobatic team, the Blue Angels — after a shipboard reception.

One of Andrew's mates, asking that his name not be used, said the 20-year-old prince has chosen to put in his time like any other midshipman, a non-officer, non-enlisted rank described by one British officer as "not quite the lowest form of animal."

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — Chris Lillibridge heaved a champagne bottle into the Pacific Ocean off Santa Cruz on New Year's Day. It took only a month for it to drift 2,300 miles to Anchorage, Alaska, and into the hands of a state assistant attorney general.

The eighth grader says Alaska Assistant Attorney General Larri Irene Spengler wrote back:

"I suppose we could both call this absolutely incredible. I live in Anchorage right near Cook Inlet and I found your note in the bottle. This has made my day. What a delightful thing to happen."

Lillibridge's sister also got results from a bottle she threw in the ocean the same day, but they were hardly as spectacular. Her offering was found at Seacliff Beach, a few feet from where it was launched.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow is expected in the forecast period, Monday until Tuesday morning, from the mid-Atlantic region to New England. Snow is also due for North Dakota and northern Minnesota. Temperatures are expected to be much colder for northern and eastern states. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
It seems the past few spring-like days were only a breather because winter is on its way back, bringing a 30-degree temperature drop and perhaps snow.

The large mass of cold air is moving toward the Tar Heel state from central Canada. The leading edge of the air mass was expected to pass through the state this afternoon and evening.

Light snow or snow flurries could break out in the cold air over the mountains today through tomorrow, and a few flakes of snow may even fall in the northeastern counties on Tuesday morning.

Temperatures Tuesday are expected to be much colder than those this past weekend. Highs probably will be 30 degrees colder Tuesday than they were Sunday.

Combined with bone chilling northwest winds, temperatures Tuesday will hold to the 20s in the mountains, to the 30s in central and northern sections, and will only reach the low and mid 40s in southeastern sections.

Temperatures today should reach the 50s in most places, but tonight they'll drop through the 30s into the 20s inland, and the mountains will be in the teens by daybreak Tuesday.

Sunny skies prevailed in most areas across the state on Sunday. Temperatures reached the upper 60s and low 70s, with the highest reading of 74 at Fayetteville.

Seek Cut Crop Losses Due To Air Pollution

RALEIGH — Local scientists from two federal agencies, the Environmental Protection Agency and the Department of Agriculture, have teamed up for a research project under the National Crop Assessment Network, aimed at cutting crop losses related to air pollution.

Crop damage from gaseous air pollutants is estimated to cost American farmers several millions of dollars annually. Scientific information on the nature and extent of this problem can be used in the formulation of air pollution regulations that can help prevent future losses and ultimately increase U.S. farm earnings.

One of the primary tools for research in this problem area is an open-topped plant growth chamber, consisting of a frame covered by sheets of clear plastic that can be placed in the field. Special ventilation and filter systems are used to eliminate pollutants from the air surrounding the chambers, as well as to permit the addition of regulated amounts of pollutants in tests.

Although such exposure chambers have been in use for several years, researchers at USDA's Atmospheric / Vegetation Effects Research Facility on the North Carolina State University campus recently found that no in-depth comparisons of types of exposure chambers had ever been made. In particular, they wanted to know how various models are affected by wind speeds, and how wind affects pollutant concentrations in the chambers.

The USDA scientists asked assistance from EPA which, in addition to having its own research program on the effects of air pollution on field crops and forests, operates one of the nation's largest meteorological wind tunnels.

The wind tunnel, part of ESRL's Fluid Modeling Facility is designed for stimulating atmospheric phenomena — such as wind speed, direction and turbulence — and determining their impacts on air pollution emissions and movement.

Key participants in the joint study are Dr. William H. Snyder, chief of EPA's Fluid Modeling Facility; Dr. Jerry M. Davis, a meteorologist in the Geosciences Department at North Carolina State University; and Dr. Hugo H. Rogers, a plant physiologist as well as Robert B. Philbeck, an agricultural engineer, both with USDA.

Tobacco Program Changes Proposed

RALEIGH — Several important changes in the flue-cured tobacco quota and price support program have been proposed or announced for 1980, according to agricultural extension specialists at North Carolina State University.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is proposing to drop price supports this year on eight downstalk grades that received price support in the past.

These grades are in excessive supply and have light demand, according to the USDA. They are P5L, P5F, P5G, N1L, N1X, N1Xo and N1Po.

Large quantities of these priming and nondescript grades were accumulated by the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corporation under price support loan.

As was the case last year, growers who sign an agreement not to harvest the four bottom leaves on each stalk will be permitted to plant up to 110 percent of their acreage allotment and still be eligible for price support. But their marketing quotas will remain unchanged.

April 15 has been set as the cutoff date for the four-leaf signup. It is also the final date for growers to file spring lease and transfer agreements and to make their initial designation of warehouses for the 1980-crop sales.

Under USDA's proposed flue-cured price support program for 1980, grade loan rates will range from $88 to $183 per hundred pounds. Overall they will reflect an average support rate of $141.50, up $12.20 or 9.4 percent from last year's average rate of $129.30.

As in the past, the flue-cured Stabilization Corporation will be authorized to deduct $1 per hundred pounds to apply against overhead costs.

Interested parties have until March 20 to submit written comments on the price support proposals. Comments should be sent to Director, Price Support and Loan Division, USD-ASCS, P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D.C. 20013.

Epilepsy Ass'n Meets Thursday

The Pitt County Epilepsy Association will hold its monthly meeting Thursday at 7:30 p. m. in the Willis Building, corner of First and Cotanche streets.

The public is invited to attend and children are welcome. After a short business meeting, a film titled, "Epilepsy, Pass the Word" will be shown. For further information, one may call Joyce Barnes, 752-3831 (work) or 752-8750 (home).

Blue Mold Damage Is Reported

Unconfirmed reports say that blue mold has caused extensive damage in Cuba, Jamaica, Haiti and was observed last week in Nicaragua. North Carolina flue-cured and Burley growers can expect the disease to occur in the plant bed.

This situation suggests a need for all growers to follow the preventative program of spraying or dusting with fungicides to produce an abundant amount of healthy transplants and to hold down buildup of the causal agent for possible field attack.

The blue mold fungus

(peronospora tabacina) produces tiny spores or seed-like bodies called conidia in tremendous numbers. These spores are wind-blown and can be carried in the wind for as far as 200 miles on a cloudy, wet, cool day.

There are other possible sources of the causal agent that further emphasizes the need to follow the preventative program. The disease was active in sucker growth in November and in greenhouse plantings in late December and early January in North Carolina. The resistant spore (oospore) was found in leaves, stalks, and stems in many Burley and flue-cured fields, and in stalks following stripping in the Burley area. Furthermore, the disease occurred in all tobacco types (except cigar binder in Wisconsin) throughout the U.S. and Canada and this means that the wind-blown spore (conidia) could possibly come from most any direction.

Growers are encouraged to finish the job of burying stalks, roots, and leaves from the previous crop as a means of preventing carryover in the field. In addition, Burley growers should burn stalks and by all means avoid spreading on tobacco fields.

An all-out campaign called Operation Treat Those Beds will be launched by county extension agents all across the state to encourage every grower to follow and correctly use the preventative program. Growers are reminded that one bed left unprotected within a community or county could provide a source of the tiny spores or seed-like bodies for thousands of others and that is why it is so important for every grower to spray or dust beds with fungicides.

The following plan for preventing blue mold is suggested:

- Every grower should assume the responsibility of protecting his plants from blue mold attack.
- Bed should be sprayed with fungicides containing ferbam, zineb, maneb, or metiram. Growers are encouraged to check their application equipment. Locate source of fungicides and develop plans on how they will get this job done.
- Treatment application should begin in beds covered with cheese cloth when plants reach the size of a dime, repeated once or twice each week (depending on weather conditions) and continued until transplanting to the field is complete. Treatment application may be delayed in those covered with perforated plastic, reemay or nylon until removed.

Beds covered with these materials should be checked frequently and if disease appears, remove and treat immediately.

- Full plant coverage is necessary. Growers that are irrigating beds frequently during the transplanting operation should spray at least twice a week, maybe three times to prevent occurrence.
- Destroy beds immediately following establishing field stand. A buildup of the disease is expected when applications of fungicides were stopped, that could provide a source of the causal agent for field outbreaks, depending upon weather conditions. Discing under plants following completion of establishing a stand and seeding a summer covering is an important part of a good plant bed management program.
- Total participation in the TTB Campaign will assure an abundant supply of healthy transplants and prevent buildup of the blue mold disease. Every grower is encouraged to follow the program on his farm and to encourage his neighbor to do so.

Forest-Harvest Machine Ready

A new kind of lumber harvester may soon have a profound impact on the wood products industry.

The machine, called a "swathe-felling mobile chipper," moves through forests turning small or defective trees into wood chips useful for fuel and fiber. Its initial field trials near Seattle have been promising and the machine will shortly arrive in Auburn, Ala. for field evaluation in several southern states.

According to the man who conceived it, Dr. Peter Koch of the U.S. Forest Service's Southern Forest Experiment Station in Pineville, La. "If it fulfills our expectations, the machine will be a boon to forestry. Not only can it save much wood not now usable, but also it can make lumber mills energy self-sufficient and relieve them from ever increasing fuel prices. It can also reduce cost and time of site preparation by making harvesting and site preparation occur simultaneously."

The idea for the machine originated with Koch, but bringing the concept to fruition took the help of the U.S. Department of Energy, five timber companies, and Nicholson Manufacturing Company.

Koch began planning for a machine that would operate on fairly smooth and level terrain and would fell and chip stems up to 12 inches in diameter at 6 inches above ground level. A mobile bin would then take the chips to a roadside pile, where they could be picked up and delivered to a mill. By moving at 1 mile per hour, the harvester could cover an acre of land per hour and average 25 tons of logging residue and standing culs per acre.

Also, the machine had to be light enough to operate on southern sites that are wet for much of the year. To justify its use, the machine had to be able to deliver chips to the mill at a price attractive to mill owners stung by rising fuel oil prices.

According to Koch, "The tests show we have come a long way toward accomplishing our goals. The prototype successfully felled and chipped stands of closely spaced red alder (a western hardwood often used for manufacturing). It worked best when it circled the stand, much as one mows a lawn."

After modifications are made, the 72,000-pound machine will be trucked to Auburn where Forest Service engineers will closely monitor its performance in Southern trials.

"The machine should be ready for wide use across the South by early 1981," says Koch. "We estimate that one swathefelling mobile chipper could harvest 1,500 acres per year and deliver chips at mills at eighteen dollars per green ton."

Advice On Nematodes

Nematodes are a perennial problem in most agricultural areas of the world and on many, if not most crops. Many farmers in Pitt County took nematode samples in October of last year during the Pitt County Nematode Assay Drive to find out what species of nematodes were present, their relative population level, and the recommended control procedure.

The reports and results are now being returned to most growers. To help interpret the results and give further information to the growers, a free lunch and discussion will be held at Abram's Barbeque Restaurant at 12:30 Friday. Abram's is located north of Greenville on Greene St.

The meal will be sponsored by the chemical company that organized the nematode drive. Representatives of the N.C. Department of Agriculture's Nematode Advisory Service and the Agricultural Extension Service will be on hand to answer any questions.

Participants in the Nematode Assay Drive are invited and urged to bring the results of their assays with them. Following lunch, there will be a discussion with a question and answer period.

Diapers Beyond Call Of Duty

VISALIA, Calif. (AP) — The trial had to go on even though an alternate juror couldn't find a baby sitter — but it stopped when a dirty diaper had to be changed.

Judge Robert Bradstreet ordered two court clerks to watch 8-month-old Richie Pimentel while the baby's father, Richard, heard testimony in a Superior Court civil trial Thursday.

Clerks Jan Bardone and Bobby Comer took care of the baby for about an hour in their office next to the court. But then they informed the father and judge that Richie needed changing, a task they considered above and beyond the call of duty for court clerks.

Court was recessed while Pimentel changed his son's diaper. By Friday, Pimentel had secured a baby sitter, allowing the clerks to do their normal work, Mrs. Bardone said.

Chicken Cooking Contest Ahead

The deadline for entering the National Chicken Cooking Contest is drawing near. Entries in the contest should be mailed to the National Broiler Council, Washington, D.C., no later than March 15. The top national prize is $10,000 and North Carolina has its own contest for the best chicken recipes. Winterville Water 'Safe'

WINTERVILLE — The town recently finished distributing letters to all residents explaining the predicament the town found itself in in December with the state and the National Interim Primary Drinking Water Regulations.

The town Clerk-Elwood Nobles. "It was safe the entire time."

The problem arose when the town turned in only one sample to the state instead of the two required by law. This technicality caused the town to be in violation of the National Interim Primary Drinking Water Regulations Monitoring Requirements.

The letter from the state reads: "It has been brought to our attention that the proper number of regular samples from your community was not analyzed during the month of December, 1979. Section 141.32 of the National Interim Primary Drinking Water Regulations requires a water system to notify the public of any failure to meet the monitoring requirements. This notice must be included in the first set of bills issued after the failure, and in any event, by written notice within three months."

Safe Is Stolen

Greenville police today are continuing their investigation of the theft of a safe from The Elbow Room at 417 Cotanche St. sometime early Saturday morning.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the theft was reported about 8:45 a.m. He said the incident occurred after the business closed, about 2 a.m. Saturday.

According to the chief, the thieves entered the building through a vent at the rear of the building, took the safe from the office, and left with it, through the rear door.

Valued at about $440, the safe reportedly contained some $1,858.

Unarmed Police Sent Rhodesia

By ROBERT WELLER Associated Press Writer

CHIMIMBA, Rhodesia (AP) — "I can run real fast if the bullets start flying," said British bobby Colin Johnstone as he got ready to patrol his new beat in a Rhodesian village in guerrilla country.

About 500 British policemen, all volunteers and all unarmed, arrived during the weekend for duty at polling stations during the parliamentary elections that start Wednesday.

Johnstone and two other Scots were headed for Ru-sambo, a small village in an area heavily infiltrated by guerrillas before the cease-fire in the seven-year war. Few whites venture near.

The bobbies were not brought in to serve as policemen.

"They will be an additional force to make sure that voters are not in any way intimidated by people from any party or by polling staff themselves," said the assistant election commissioner, Malcolm Carruthers.

"But they won't have any actual power to stop intimidation.

invitation, too, but was campaigning in the South and missed the hassle.

When Reagan sought the first word to talk about the format argument, Breen ordered his microphone disconnected.

"I am paying for this microphone," snapped Reagan, who then said he had invited the others, that the newspaper wouldn't let them in, and that he would walk out himself but for the 2,400 people on hand.

The Globe poll of 647 likely Democratic voters, conducted between Tuesday and Thursday, showed Carter the preference of 55 percent, Kennedy with 30 percent, Brown with 8 percent, the rest undecided.

The Republican poll gave Bush 35 percent, Reagan 34, Baker 12, Anderson 8, with Connally, Crane and Dole trailing.

The Manchester Union Leader published a Republican poll based on 534 interviews conducted by its staff. The newspaper said that survey showed Reagan preferred, 40 percent to 35 percent for Bush.

The Union Leader supports Reagan. The headline on a commentary in its Saturday edition read: "God Had Chosen Reagan To Lead Us."

New Hampshire will have 22 votes at the Republican National Convention, 19 votes at the Democratic. Those nominating votes will be apportioned among the candidates in line with Tuesday's outcome.

Will Conduct China Exhibit

NEW YORK (UPI) — Three major American department stores will introduce rare consumer products to the public this fall at special Chinese exhibit in San Francisco, Chicago and New York City.

The stores have been signed to stock and manage retail outlets at the Exhibition of the People's Republic of China scheduled for Sept. 13-28 at Fort Mason in San Francisco, Oct. 25-Nov. 9 at Chicago's Navy Pier and Dec. 6-21 at the New York Coliseum.

Gilbert A. Robinson, chairman of the China Exhibition Corp., says each store will manage 20,000 square feet of retail space at their respective sites. The exhibition is an outgrowth of the Sino-U.S. Trade Exhibitions Agreement signed last May by U.S. commerce secretary Juanita Kreps and Chinese foreign trade minister Li Qiang. The U.S. will put on an American exhibit in Peking about the time the Chinese exhibition opens in San Francisco.

Exhibits and performances at the show will include a Peking chef demonstrating Chinese cookery; artisans carving jade and bamboo and the art of papercuts. Antiques 150 years old or more will be for sale, as will a special Chinese commemorative stamp at a branch of the Peking postoffice at the exhibition.

Husband-Hunt Every 4 Years

NEW YORK (AP) — Hill folk have a Sadie Hawkins Day every year, or so the Li'l Abner cartoon strip said, but for New York society, women have the opportunity to select husbands only quadrennially at the Leap Year Assembly.

Dance band leader Lester Lanin will provide the music Friday at the posh Plaza Hotel.

"We just did it to have fun," said Edward Everett Watts of Mattapoisett, Mass., one of the event's originators.

The event has been held on Leap Day since 1924 when it was started by Columbia Law School students, who wanted to reverse the usual situation at those assemblies where each young lady had three escorts.

1980 Olympics

The Story Of Heiden, Hockey

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — They are history now, these 1980 Winter Olympic Games, 13 days that belonged to Heiden and hockey, two weeks in February that America will never forget.

They ended in a sea of red, white and blue with 20 young Americans standing with gold medals around their necks, proudly singing the Star Spangled Banner as their flag was raised saluting their stunning hockey gold medal.

Ask Eric Heiden, who wrote Olympic history with five speed skating gold medals, and he'll tell you the accomplishment of those young hockey players was the most captivating event of these Games. That's because Heiden was expected to claim Olympic gold. The hockey players, a faceless team of college kids and minor leaguers, were not.

"People expected me to do well," said Heiden, "but I don't think many thought the U.S. hockey team would beat the Russians."

That startling, emotional victory Friday night, put the Americans in position to claim the gold. And that's exactly what they did Sunday, rallying for their third period goals by Phil Verchota, Rob McClanahan and Mark Johnson for a 4-2 victory over Finland that touched the heart and soul of the country.

Fans snake-danced their way through the streets of Lake Placid, singing patriotic songs and celebrating America's first hockey gold in 20 years. And the players who earned that medal basked in the delicious joy of the moment.

"I have a feeling I can't describe," said Johnson, the team's leading scorer and son of America's 1976 Olympic coach. "I'm sitting here in awe."

The sudden, startling success of this hockey team which snowballed as the Olympics wound down, erased much of the sour taste of these Games which were often plagued by problems of transportation and politics.

The Games began with Taiwan losing a series of court fights and withdrawing from competition rather than participate under a name, flag and anthem dictated by the International Olympic Committee. Then came the IOC's running battle with the Carter administration over the Moscow Games. America has said it would not participate in the Summer Games because of Russian intervention in Afghanistan, but the IOC insisted the Games must go on, with or without the United States.

While all this was going on, Heiden kept tearing around the speed skating oval, setting record after record. He won the 500, 1,000, 1,500, 5,000 and 10,000-meter tests becoming the first athlete to claim five gold medals in a Winter Games. Leah Mueller added two speed skating silvers but Eric's sister, Beth, who was expected to win some medals of her own, had to settle for a single bronze in the 3,000-meter race.

When the hockey players were resting, the ice rink was turned over to the figure skaters. Americans Charlie Tickner won a bronze and Linda Fratianne took a silver in their events with the golds going to Robin Cousins of Great Britain in the men's event and Annett Potzsch of East Germany in the women's.

But there was heartbreak for America in that competition when an injury to Randy Gardner ended the pairs medal bid by him and Tai Babilonia before they ever took the ice.

With the United States couple out of the competition, defending champions Irina Rodnina and Alexandr Zeitsev skated to the title.

On the ski slopes, Sweden's Ingemar Stenmark claimed two Alpine medals, only the third man in history to win more than one in a single Olympics, and Austria's Annemarie Moser-Proell claimed the gold medal she has been waiting for since 1972. Stenmark came from behind for both his golds. In the slalom, he overtook American Phil Mahre, whose silver was the first Alpine medal won by an American man since 1964. Tiny Liechtenstein, a map-dot European principality, came away with four skiing medals including its first two golds ever, both won by Hanni Wenzel.

The grueling Nordic cross country races were dominated by the Soviet Union and East Germany. Russia's Nikolai Zimyatov won three Nordic gold and countryman Anatoli Aljabiev took home two golds and a silver from biathlon events. Barbara Petzold of East Germany won two golds in Nordic races and teammate Frank Ullrich captured one gold and two silvers.

East Germany and Switzerland swept the bobsledding medals. Manfred Nehmer of East Germany won his third straight Olympic gold in the four-man bob race Sunday, setting a record with the fastest Olympic bob run in history, an amazing 59.73 second drive. His team's combined time of 3:59.92 for four runs beat the unit headed by Erich Schaerer of Switzerland, who had won the two-man race.

East Germany finished with 23 medals, nine of them gold, to 22 medals and 10 golds for the Soviets. The United States was third with 12 medals and six golds, matching its best Winter production ever.

But the medal remembered most was earned by America's team of destiny, the unknowns who represented the United States in the hockey tournament. They started the Games seeded seventh in the eight-team field. Saying they were lightly-regarded might be kind. But they tied Sweden 2-2 in their opening game on a goal with 26 seconds to play after they had pulled their goalie. Then they ripped Czechoslovakia 7-3 and suddenly they started thinking about a medal. Not a gold, of course. Everyone had conceded that to the Soviets, who had won four Olympic golds in a row and had not even lost a game in this competition since 1968.

America finished the preliminary round undefeated and moved into the medal competition with the Soviets, Sweden and Finland. Their first opponents would be the Russians, considered by experts to be the best hockey team in the world — amateur or professional.

Coach Herb Brooks offered some pre-game philosophy for his players. "You are born to be a player," he told them. "You are meant to be here. This moment is yours. You're meant to be here at this time."

And then Team Destiny did the impossible, stunning the Soviets 4-3 and following with the victory over Finland that clinched the first hockey gold medal for this country since 1960. It set off a chain reaction stream of joy that stretched from Main Street in this tiny Olympic town all the way to the White House.

Wolfpack Lose Draw, Sloan

By The Associated Press

North Carolina State lost more than a draw which Sunday gave rival North Carolina the second seed in Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament. The Wolfpack also lost its coach of the last 14 seasons.

What had been rumored for weeks was confirmed Sunday. Norm Sloan has accepted the job of rebuilding the basketball program at the University of Florida, where he coached the Gators to an 85-63 record in six seasons before accepting the N.C. State job in 1966.

After leading the Wolfpack to an impressive 20-6 record, including a 9-5 mark to tie North Carolina for second in the regular ACC campaign, Sloan has decided to return to Gainesville, Bill Carr, Florida's athletic director said Sunday.

During his 14 seasons at N.C. State, his teams compiled a 266-125 mark and his 1974 club won the National Collegiate Athletic Association championship. Sloan and Duke's Bill Foster, who is reported to be leaving to take the South Carolina coaching job, ironically will open the ACC tournament against each other on Thursday.

The reason is that Commissioner Robert James pulled the name of North Carolina from a container Sunday morning to give the eighth-ranked Tar Heels the second seed. They will play seventh-place finisher Wake Forest in the first round.

Ninth-ranked Maryland, the ACC regular-season champ, has the first seed and will play last-place finisher Georgia Tech. The other game matches 12th-ranked Clemson, seeded fourth, and fifth seed Virginia.

Two victories by Virginia over 17th-ranked Duke broke their fifth-place tie (both were 7-7 in the ACC) and in the process guaranteed for a North Carolina team a berth in the championship game. The winners of the N.C. State-Duke and North Carolina-Wake Forest games will play each other in one semifinal while Maryland, Clemson, Virginia and Georgia Tech comprise the other bracket.

"This is the first time ever that we've had all four North Carolina teams in the same bracket," said Marvin "Skeeter" Francis, ACC service bureau director.

Victories by North Carolina and N.C. State Saturday forced the draw. The Tar Heels, who are now 20-6, toyed with Duke for a 96-71 victory, while the Wolfpack beat Wake Forest, 4-10 finishers in the ACC, 44-41.

Maryland beat Virginia, 82-71, to finish 11-3, and Clemson, at 8-6, beat UNC-Asheville in a non-conference game, 38-27.

Macy Leads Wildcats To SEC Championship

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Kyle Macy gave it his best shot — and it couldn't have come at a more appropriate time for the Kentucky Wildcats.

It occurred in the final second of overtime against Louisiana State Sunday and gave them the regular-season Southeastern Conference basketball championship.

"Kyle had trouble with his shooting all day," Kentucky Coach Joe Hall said after the pulsating 76-74 victory. "But you don't lose faith in a player like Macy. We wanted to get the ball to him and we wanted him to have that last shot."

Macy got the ball as the clock wound down. He came off a double screen and unleashed a 20-foot jumper that swished through as the buzzer sounded.

Ironically, Macy's game-winner was the only field goal attempt for both teams in the overtime period. A misfired free throw by Kentucky's Sam Bowie was the only other shot taken in that time.

In other Sunday games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 2 Louisville whipped Florida State 83-75 and Marquette upset No. 10 Notre Dame 77-74.

IOC's Killanin Shuns Protocol As Olympics End

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, cast protocol aside at the closing of the Winter Games Sunday night and urged the world to "avoid the holocaust" by using the Olympics.

A sell-out crowd of 8,500 at Lake Placid's ice arena cheered for 40 seconds after Killanin spoke of the peace and understanding of the Games.

"I feel these games here have proved that we can do something to contribute to mutual understanding in the world what we have in common and not what our differences are," he said.

"If we can all come together, it will be for a better world, and we can perhaps avoid the holocaust which will be upon us if we are not careful."

The 65-year-old official made no reference to President Carter, or to the Summer Games in Moscow, which Carter wants the United States to shun because of the Soviet military action in Afghanistan. But his remarks were an obvious allusion to the threatened boycott.

The crowd, keyed up by the American hockey victory earlier in the day, cheered Killanin wildly.

Amid the applause one man shouted, "Which way to Moscow?"

Killanin went out of his way to make a longer speech than usual. The Olympic Charter strictly lays down the procedure of the closing ceremony and directs that the President simply thank the host country and city and calls upon the youth of all nations to meet again at the next games in four years' time.

But Killanin referred lightly to some of Lake Placid's troubles. The Games have been plagued by transportation foulups and other alleged disorganization.

Killanin thanked the inhabitants of the little ski resort, population 2,800, which has spent six years planning for the Games.

"I would like to thank the people of Lake Placid," he said, "not only those whose names have appeared on the programs but the many who have worked behind the scenes and at times have even been criticized."

Eric Heiden, who made a clean sweep of the five gold medals in speed skating, carried the United States flag. Hanni Wenzel, who won two golds in Alpine skiing, marched with the flag of tiny Liechtenstein.

The flag of Greece, the ancient home of the Olympics, was raised, then the Stars and Stripes, and then the flag of Yugoslavia, which is due to host the next Winter Games at Sarajevo in 1984. The national anthems of all three countries were played.

The Olympic flag was solemnly borne out of the arena. The Olympic flame went out.

Bucks Whip K.C., 96-72

Kings Miss Wakeup Call

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons had a simple explanation for his Kansas City Kings' nightmarish 96-72 loss to the Milwaukee Bucks Sunday.

"I think we missed our wakeup call," said Fitzsimmons. "And the Bucks definitely did not miss theirs."

Before a home crowd of 14,546 at recently reopened Kemper Arena and a national television audience, the Kings could do little right as they suffered their most lopsided defeat of the season. The 72 points were the fewest scored by any National Basketball Association team this season.

"We really played great defensively," said Bucks Coach Don Nelson, whose team trimmed Kansas City's lead in the Midwest Division to 2½ games. "We kept Kansas City from doing what it likes to do."

Milwaukee guard Quinn Buckner shifted the focus a bit. "We played very well, but they had a tough time," he said. "It's not fair for us to get all the credit. These things happen sometimes — one team will be cold and the other hot. It was a combination of those two."

Things got so bad for Kansas City that in the fourth period guard Phil Ford made a steal and headed toward an easy basket — only to run smack into referee Earl Strom and lose the ball.

In fact, the biggest cheer of the afternoon came when news of the United States' 4-2 Olympic hockey victory over Finland was announced during a timeout. The crowd stood and the National Anthem was played.

In other NBA games Sunday, the Portland Trail Blazers beat the Cleveland Cavaliers 115-105, the Washington Bullets defeated the New York Knicks 112-97, the Phoenix Suns stopped the Indiana Pacers 113-105, the Chicago Bulls downed the San Diego Clippers 110-102, the New Jersey Nets trimmed the San Antonio Spurs 129-123, the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Houston Rockets 112-100 and the Philadelphia 76ers edged the Golden State Warriors 103-100.

Marques Johnson led the Bucks with 25 points and 12 rebounds as the Bucks outrebounded the Kings 60-44. Bob Lanier also had 12 rebounds and blocked six shots.

Blazers 115, Cavs 100
Calvin Natt scored 23 points as Portland erased an eight-point halftime deficit and wore down the Cavs in the second half.

"We have never mishandled the basketball like we did in the second half," said Cleveland Coach Stan Albeck.

Bullets 112, Knicks 97
Reserve guard John Williamson scored 18 of his 24 points in the second half as the Bullets moved to within two games of New York and Indiana in the race for the final Eastern Conference playoff berth.

Suns 113, Pacers 105
Alvan Adams sealed Phoenix's victory with six free throws in the final three minutes. Walter Davis led the Suns with 29 points and Adams finished with 27.

Bulls 110, Clippers 102
Rookie forward David Greenwood had 26 points, 16 rebounds and eight assists as Chicago beat San Diego, despite 35 points by the Clippers' Lloyd Free.

Nets 129, Spurs 123
Mike Newlin scored 35 points and Maurice Lucas grabbed a career-high 26 rebounds as the Nets beat the Spurs despite 41 points by San Antonio's George Gervin.

Lakers 112, Rockets 100
Kareem Abdul-Jabbar played just 19 minutes because of a migraine headache but had 15 points and six blocked shots as the Lakers posted their fifth win in a row and 17th straight at home, climbing into a first-place tie with Seattle in the Pacific Division.

76ers 103, Warriors 100
Philadelphia outscored Golden State 9-2 in the final 2:42 to win. Julius Erving, who led all scorers with 29 points, clinched the victory with two free throws with 38 seconds left.

Watson Wins Open, Tops On $ List

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tom Watson figures he must win a United States Open golf championship to be classed with Ben Hogan, Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Sam Snead. "I have won tournaments, but I feel that's what it takes," Watson said Sunday after winning the Los Angeles Open. "Anyone who can win ten percent of his tournaments is doing exceptionally well."

PGA tour events he played this season on the Western swing. As the pros move from California to Florida for Arnold Palmer's Bay Hill Classic at Orlando, Fla., Watson stands in his familiar place at the top of the PGA money winners. With his $45,000 victory in the Los Angeles event, Watson has won $106,525 in less than two months. He won $462,636, a PGA record and has a total of $1-777,958 for his 10-year pro career. Watson bogeyed the 13th hole to fall into a tie with Bob Gilder, and the 50-year-old Don January sank a 40-foot chip shot from the fringe at the 15th to make it a three-way dead-lock. Watson finished one group ahead of January and Gilder and he scored a routine par four on the 454-yard final hole of the 7,029, par 35-36 Riviera course.

Gilder came up to the 18th green and hit a putt he figured would go left, but it went right. So, he missed the 8-footer and had to settle for $22,000. January collected the same because his second shot hit a tree and he missed a 20-foot putt trying for a par. "I really wanted to win this tournament," said Watson. "This is a demanding course that brings out the best in a golfer. My iron play was less than spectacular. I left a lot to the right. After I play Bay Hill next week, I'm going to see Byron Nelson for some instruction. But after all is said and done, I'll take my victories any way I can." Watson offered condolences to January with a "tough luck" and the oldtimer replied: "It's not tough luck when you play bad."

The winter sports season is quickly drawing to a close. Championships in some sports have already been decided, and those in others will be completed in just a few weeks.

And before you know it baseballs will be filling the air.

Before we end the season, however, a few hands should be given.

First, a couple of wrestlers from the area have achieved high stature. D.H. Conley's Gary Harris became a state champion for the third straight year, winning at 112-pounds Saturday night. He was the unanimous choice for the Outstanding Wrestler in the tournament. He had earlier won titles at 98 and 105 pounds his sophomore and junior years, respectively.

Rose High School's Ron Butler gained a second straight heavyweight title, but ran into still competition from a Winston-Salem area wrestler. Last week, in the regionals, Butler had to go into overtime to win, and again this weekend, it took not only an overtime, but an officials' decision to give him the win that advanced him to the title.

While most basketball titles have still to be decided, Rose High School's Rampants wound up their 1979-80 season on Friday night, losing a heart-breaker to Beddingfield, 54-52.

The Rampants had one of their most rewarding seasons in a long time, and although the team didn't draw much support this season, it is an embarrassment to the fans and not to the team that they did not have the support they deserved.

East Carolina's women may still have a few games left, pending the announcement of at-large berths for the regional AIAW tournament. At any rate, a season that brought a school record 21 victories is nothing to be tossed aside lightly.

Hopefully, coach Cathy Andruzzi can come up with some height—about all that may be needed to make the Pirates a contender for national honors.

Finally, East Carolina's men's team will wind up the season on Wednesday and Saturday. Fan attention to the Pirates has picked up recently, and we would hope that good crowds will turn out to the final two games to wish them well.

Certainly having a winning season after the problems that have beset the team in recent years is a major accomplishment. There can be no doubt that the Pirates have a coach now.

All it will take for good things in the future is a fine recruiting season.

It would appear that the trade of former ECU star Oliver Mack from Los Angeles to Chicago may have been good both Mack and the Bulls.

In one of the early games Mack played with the Bulls, he drew praise from coach Jerry Sloan for, of all things, his defensive play, something he didn't get to use much at East Carolina.

"When you get a guy like that who comes and hustles and plays that type of defense, it can be contagious," Sloan was quoted as saying following the Bulls win over the Seattle SuperSonics, snapping an eight-game win streak by the Sonics.

Mack scored 12 points in the game, an NBA career high.

And in a way, there is an irony there. Mack is now with Chicago. A couple of years ago, former ECU coach Larry Gillman, who brought Mack to ECU, reportedly told a Greenville radio broad-

Bowie's field goal with 1:14 left in regulation had sent the Kentucky-LSU game into overtime tied at 74. After Bowie missed his free throw try, Durand Macklin rebounded for LSU and the Tigers stalled for three minutes. But LSU held the ball too long and the officials called a jump ball. Kentucky won the tap and called time out with 21 seconds left to set the stage for Macy's dramatic shot.

Darrell Griffith's 29 points paced Louisville past Florida State. Griffith continuously had key points for Louisville everytime the Seminoles pulled close.

"When a guard can dominate a game like that, you've really got something," said Louisville Coach Denny Crum. "It's hard for a guard to dominate."

Sam Worthen scored a career-high 30 points, including 10 straight during a second-half burst that carried Marquette past Notre Dame. The loss was only the second at home in 15 games for the Fighting Irish this season.

Mark Aguirre scored nine of his career-high 41 points in a two-minute span late in the second half to lead DePaul over Loyola, the 26th straight victory for the Blue Demons. Aguirre's total came within two points of the Alumni Hall mark of 43 set by DePaul's Howie Carl in 1960.

Louis Orr scored 23 points to lead Syracuse past Boston College. The Orangemen finished in a tie with St. John's and Georgetown for first place in the Big East Conference and subsequently won a coin toss for a first-round bye in the league playoffs, which start Thursday.

Mark Radford and Ray Blume scored 23 points apiece in Oregon State's rout of Stanford. Frank Gilroy scored 13 of his 15 points in the second half, leading St. John's past Providence.

North Carolina routed Duke with a balanced attack that included 18 points by Mike O'Koren and 16 by John Virgil. Greg Manning and Ernest Graham scored 12 points apiece in the second half to break open a tight game and lead Maryland past Virginia.

Herb Williams' basket with eight seconds remaining lifted Ohio State over Iowa. Billy Williams scored 12 points as Clemson defeated UNC-Asheville in the Tigers' lowest-scoring point total in 10 seasons. John Sundvold's 13 points paced Missouri over Kansas State.

Waltrip Wins, Congratulates Hockey Team

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip had two thoughts on his mind after winning the Richmond 400 Grand National stock car race — the winning U.S. Olympic hockey team and a brush with Richard Petty.

"I'd like to congratulate the U.S. hockey team. I'd like to dedicate this win to them," was the first thing the Chevrolet driver from Franklin, Tenn., said Sunday after a 1.2-second victory over Thunderbird driver Bobby Allison of Hueytown, Ala.

Later, Waltrip wanted to apologize for a brush with Petty, the Randleman, N.C., veteran who beat him out of the National Association for Stock Auto Racing point championship last year. Petty, a 13-time Richmond winner, was third behind Waltrip and Allison.

"I really always have and do respect Richard 100 percent. It was just an unfortunate thing that happened over there. I really hated it," said Waltrip.

Bob Schieffer Anchors Morning News With A Quiet Style Of Humor

By RICHARD H. GROWALD
UPI National Reporter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bob Schieffer, CBS-TV's other daily anchor man, raised his chin when asked about reports Walter Cronkite will leave his nightly news program.

Schieffer, like most Texans living in New York — including Cronkite, has a partner called humor.

"My personal view is that I believe Walter is immortal," said the anchor man of CBS' daily Morning news program. "I believe Walter will live forever."

Schieffer stuck a fork into his tomato and mozzarella cheese salad. "All this speculation (will Cronkite's successor be Dan Rather? Roger Mudd?) is senseless," he said.

"Don't you?" said Schieffer, still deadpan. He smiled. Perhaps the tomato had made a joke about the cheese.

Cronkite is "Walter" in network chat. Schieffer is still referred to as "Schieffer." He is a generation later than Cronkite, has been doing his show only two years. But, like "Dan" and "Roger," "Bob" is coming into use.

But Bob is not quite like any other. For instance, there was the morning his crew introduced him to a new writer hired for his all-news show.

Schieffer felt he had to say something unique to the newcomer, a fellow even shorter than Bob who is a microphone under six feet.

"Glad to have you aboard," said Schieffer, shaking the newcomer's hand in front of the staff. "You know, of course, it is a rule here on the Morning show that no one is hired if he or she is taller than the anchorman."

There ensued much laughter at the anchorman's little joke. But Schieffer, walking back to his office, realized maybe he should not have said it. Later, into Schieffer's office stepped a CBS senior executive.

"Bob, what is this we hear about there being a rule on the Morning show that no one is hired if he or she is taller than the anchorman?"

Schieffer raised his chin. "That's right, that's right," said Schieffer, deciding he might as well make tomato and mozzarella out of the situation.

To Schieffer's surprise, the executive simply nodded and said, "Oh, Really? Well, just thought I'd ask." The executive smiled and bowed out.

Schieffer is getting used to being a "Bob." For 20 years, in Fort Worth, Texas, and in Washington, where he succeeded Rather as CBS' chief White House reporter, he always had been an on-the-scene reporter.

"Now I'm behind a desk," he said. "And now I get up each morning at 3:30 a.m."

"I go to work just when the discotheques are letting out. I see all the guys in their aluminum suits. And one morning, going to work at 4 a.m., I saw a naked couple wearing only jogging shoes, laughing and running in Park Avenue."

"The cab driver's only comment was, 'That's New York for you.' His wife Pat loyally watches Bob each morning on the tube at 7 a.m. His daughters, Susan, 10, and Sharon, 8, occasionally give Daddy a look."

"But, then, until fairly recently they thought all Daddies were on television." Wife Pat is more reconciled to the real life of an early morning newscaster.

"For years she lived with the fact that, in the Washington years for example, if we showed up at the same party at the same time, people would suspect something was wrong with our marriage."

"Pat says, 'I love you, Bob. I married you for better or worse, not for lunch.'"

Traveling 250,000 miles a year with presidents and such allowed Schieffer few lunches with the wife. His morning schedule now is still anti-lunch. But Schieffer manages to reach home by 3 p.m., sleep until 6 p.m., and then have dinner and four hours with his family.

And one thing more. Schieffer, like Winston Churchill and Adolf Hitler, has become an amateur painter. "Most refreshing thing I've ever done," he said.

He spends two four-hour evenings a week drawing and now painting at New York's Art Students League. "I'm beginning to get a resemblance of my wife on canvas now," he said.

Schieffer had progressed from salad to sea bass. He was wearing no beret at the lunch table. But art seemingly had possessed him.

"Michelangelo said it takes about 6,000 drawings before one becomes an artist. So far, I think I've done 9,000."

The chin was not raised. The laughter came. But he was serious. "I drew as a child but last summer I began classes."

"You pass a house in a street hundreds of times. Finally you go in, and you find something wonderful. That house is art to me. I ask myself why the devil I didn't go into the house sooner."

The man whose voice wakes up so many Americans was silent. "Schieffer" was being "Bob" to himself.

Henry Kleg of the state Department of Transportation agrees that rationing would affect the state's transportation network.

"If it comes to rationing, we would probably see a reduction in revenues from motor fuel taxes," Kleg said. "I don't think (highway) construction would be stopped, but I'm sure there would be a reduction."

He said the transportation department is preparing for the possibility of rationing.

"Highway maintenance money has already been fully allocated because of the need to maintain our highway system in the state," Kleg said.

'Scruples' Tips Theme Early

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When a movie begins with lush background music and the prologue, "She was young and innocent," you don't have to be a master supposer to figure what's ahead.

Our young and innocent "she" is about to embark on a mean squeeze through a tight wringer.

After such a beginning, you can only hope the heroine, is worth the wringing, or at least, that the wringing is a memorable one: hopes unfulfilled by "Scruples," a fatuous six-hour miniseries beginning tonight, Tuesday and Thursday on CBS.

Let me put it this way: "Scruples" is about the New York fashion world, a Beverly Hills boutique, the movie business, and the fascinating characters that people those worlds Zzzzz.

It's a try at the old formula — put glamorous people in trouble and you've got box office. It will probably work, too. The Judith Krantz book was a runaway bestseller.

With that in mind, I'd like to be able to say something fashionably vague about "Scruples," some hedged praise such as, "It's deliciously tacky." Sorry, no delicious here.

But plenty of tacky. It goes something like this: Shortly after the telling prologue, we see our no-longer-innocent heroine Lindsay Wagner in a helicopter over the Pacific, dumping her late husband's ashes out of a Gucci urn she's careful not to drop the urn. A minute later, she's in bed with the chopper pilot, and we're under way.

The telling is done via flashback. Miss Wagner plays Wilhelmina Winthrop, poor relation to a wealthy New England family who goes to Paris instead of college because "French was

OLD LYME, Conn. (AP) — If you liked the Nut Museum, you'll love its eccentric curator's latest venture into sculpture and women's liberation.

Artist Elizabeth Tashjian has been working furiously since last spring on a series of sheet-aluminum sculptures, 12 of which were on exhibit here recently.

Many of the pieces relate to her pet nature, the beauty and basic theme of nuts. (She earlier developed the thesis that humanity sprang from the nut.)

There's "Aaron's Rod" (which according to the Bible blossomed and bore an almond), "Rockabye Pine Cone Baby," "King Solomon's Garden of Nuts" and "Due Drops." The word "due" in the final title, she explains, refers to "giving nuts their due."

"One must see these through the lens of whimsy," the small, bubbly sculptor said while explaining her work during an interview in her 19th-century home-museum.

The exhibit, "Sculptures of the Nut," has another dimension that has been growing in its creator's mind since she painted a series of women's heads based on the shape of nuts in 1975.

Miss Tashjian, 58, who studied art and piano, considers the painting studies a beginning of her contribution to women's lib: an effort to use humor and surprise to shatter the stereotype of woman as a sex object.

What action do you take?
A.—With a better than expected hand opposite a partner who has made a vulnerable takeout double in the immediate seat, you should not permit the opponents to buy the hand at the two-level. Bid three clubs, and allow partner to take the preference to one of your suits.

A.—Partner cannot have much outside the heart suit, so he must have, at least, six good hearts to overcall vulnerable at the two-level. Nutty Show At Museum

OLD LYME, Conn. (AP) — If you liked the Nut Museum, you'll love its eccentric curator's latest venture into sculpture and women's liberation.

Artist Elizabeth Tashjian has been working furiously since last spring on a series of sheet-aluminum sculptures, 12 of which were on exhibit here recently.

Many of the pieces relate to her pet nature, the beauty and basic theme of nuts. (She earlier developed the thesis that humanity sprang from the nut.)

There's "Aaron's Rod" (which according to the Bible blossomed and bore an almond), "Rockabye Pine Cone Baby," "King Solomon's Garden of Nuts" and "Due Drops." The word "due" in the final title, she explains, refers to "giving nuts their due."

"One must see these through the lens of whimsy," the small, bubbly sculptor said while explaining her work during an interview in her 19th-century home-museum.

The exhibit, "Sculptures of the Nut," has another dimension that has been growing in its creator's mind since she painted a series of women's heads based on the shape of nuts in 1975.

Miss Tashjian, 58, who studied art and piano, considers the painting studies a beginning of her contribution to women's lib: an effort to use humor and surprise to shatter the stereotype of woman as a sex object.

With that in mind, I'd like to be able to say something fashionably vague about "Scruples," some hedged praise such as, "It's deliciously tacky." Sorry, no delicious here.

But plenty of tacky. It goes something like this: Shortly after the telling prologue, we see our no-longer-innocent heroine Lindsay Wagner in a helicopter over the Pacific, dumping her late husband's ashes out of a Gucci urn she's careful not to drop the urn. A minute later, she's in bed with the chopper pilot, and we're under way.

The telling is done via flashback. Miss Wagner plays Wilhelmina Winthrop, poor relation to a wealthy New England family who goes to Paris instead of college because "French was Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?

A.—When you have a bid that shows both the strength and the shape of your hand exactly, use it. Jump to three no trump. That describes a hand of 16-18 points in high cards and, specifically, a 4-3-3-3 pattern.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

What do you bid now?
A.—Don't be fooled into making the "cheap" heart rebid "to see what partner will do." You must complete the description of your hand. Bid four clubs. By inference, that promises at least a five-card heart suit—with five clubs and only four hearts, you would have opened one club, not one heart.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

Fiscal Cures Still 'Slow'

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Two years ago, A&T State University hired a new vice chancellor for fiscal affairs and organized a special task force to help solve its financial problems.

But according to Chancellor Lewis C. Dowdy, the school's financial woes are far from over. A backlog in bookkeeping has resulted in late payment of bills, prompting some businesses to refuse to sell equipment and supplies to the school unless the money is paid on delivery. At least one businessman has threatened to take the university to court to get his money.

Last year, University of North Carolina officials approved an extra $25,000 expenditure for hiring temporary employees to help clear up the backlog. But so far, the people haven't been hired.

Dowdy said he is dissatisfied with what he called slow progress under the director of Plummer Alston, vice chancellor for fiscal affairs.

Dowdy picked Alston to help unravel the school's financial problems. But several trustees say Dowdy has discussed with them the possibility of firing Alston.

Alston, who manages a $30 million budget at the school, said he has not received the backing he needs from the university administration to eliminate the problems. But Dowdy denied Alston's claims.

The trustees apparently don't believe Alston, either. "The trustees have been unhappy because the bills have not been paid adequately and on time," said Dr. Lacy Caple, chairman of the board of trustees. "We are very concerned about fiscal affairs ... I am almost certain the board would support a change."

While Dowdy has not acknowledged that he is considering firing Alston, he said, "I am not happy." Alston says he can't measure his progress because the school's financial affairs were in such a tangle when he accepted the job. He also said that when he took the job, he was faced with weaknesses in the staff.

"I've made significant progress in strengthening the staff," he said. "There has been a wholesale turnaround in personnel. There were people who weren't doing their jobs."

Dowdy said the university will take a very serious look at the existing problems and "do whatever it takes to get things in order."

Coughing Can Cause Dizziness

I am 65 years old. My heart and lungs were found to be in good shape during a recent physical checkup. I have one problem that bothers me. Whenever I begin to cough I get a sudden feeling of dizziness. Is it possible that my doctor has overlooked some important problem I have with my heart or lungs? — Mr. E.C.T., Va.

Dear Mr. T.: A very complicated mechanism exists in the body that may explain the sensation you describe. Some people find that when they strain hard during bowel movements a similar sense of light-headedness and dizziness occurs. Rapid overbreathing can also produce a like sense of discomfort.

Scientists who have tried to determine the exact reason have found that coughing can produce an increase of pressure within the chest. This, then, decreases the ready flow of blood to the heart and brain.

Among elderly people, particularly those who have some narrowing of the blood vessels, the simple act of coughing can be responsible for momentary light-headedness.

There is also a condition known as the "carotid sinus reflex." A small network of nerves lies on the carotid, the major artery that goes from the heart to the brain. With coughing, and hyperventilation, the sinus reflex can cause dizziness. (This sinus has no relationship to the nasal sinuses.) Since your heart and lung examination has been proved normal, there should be no concern about these episodes of discomfort. A recheck with your doctor will substantiate that no problem has been overlooked.

I have had two attacks of sciatica in a year. I have not been able to attribute the onset of these attacks to anything I did. What causes sciatica? — Mr. J.J., Texas.

Dear Mr. J.: The sciatic nerve is probably the longest nerve in the body. From the point where it emerges from the spinal cord, it sends branches to the muscles of the legs, the thighs and the buttocks. Consequently the pain associated with sciatica can be distributed over a wide area.

The causes of sciatica are many. Injury, herniated disks, arthritis, alcoholism and lead poisoning are only a few of the causes. Some cases of sciatica have been attributed to the injection of a drug in the buttock.

Since there are so many possible causes, and since sciatica can be confused with other types of low back pain, it takes arduous study to track down the exact cause. Yet, this is absolutely essential if any treatment program is to be instituted.

Neurological examination and muscle studies can be an important contribution to the solution of your problem.

Learn And Fun In Game Of Politics

By JOHN NOLAN
Associated Press Writer
CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — In the game of politics, careers hinge on statements, actions, images, positions and election-day weather.

Bob Swansbrough, an associate professor of political science at the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga and a public-opinion poller for politicians, knows how to play.

Swansbrough, 41, managed two losing congressional races in California and has managed all three of Rep. Marilyn Lloyd Bouquard's campaigns. He was an aide to Mrs. Bouquard, D-Tenn., former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris and former California Rep. John Tunney, all Democrats.

As a Democrat, Swansbrough ran unsuccessfully in the 1978 primary against Hamilton County Executive Dalton Roberts.

It was natural that he take advantage of his knowledge to design "Presidential Fever," a game which went on the market in November. He said in an interview that he got the idea in 1978 while hunting for a Christmas present.

"A Christmas ago, I tried to find a political game for my dad and couldn't," he said. "Then I thought of designing one myself."

He and some friends formed Swan Designs and enlisted the help of marketing firms and public relations consultants to peddle the game around the country. Swansbrough, who is also producing a five-part television series on the impact of television and polls on politics, sees the game as entertaining and educational.

Players have to engage in the same fancy footwork as real candidates, competing for votes, maintaining roles and striving for endorsements from big business, labor, environmentalists, farmers and other groups.

Contestants must also take stands, or dodge them, on hot issues and take the consequences.

Too Few Can Qualify For Med Schools

By BRYNA BRENNAN
Associated Press Writer
CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Thousands of rural West Virginians lack proper health care because of a shortage of doctors, health officials say, but spaces in the state's three medical schools are going begging.

"It's a 'Catch-22,'" said Ben Morton, chancellor of the state Board of Regents, which runs the schools. "There aren't enough qualified West Virginians to fill the medical school classes. Morton says the schools could fill the vacancies with out-of-state students — who are binging down medical school doors elsewhere — but legislators balk at spending money on outsiders.

"Medical education is very expensive, and there is a feeling it should be for our own taxpayers," said Morton. Out of a total state budget of about $1 billion, the state spent $22.7 million on medical education in 1978-79.

In addition, Morton said, many legislators believe West Virginia is too small a state to support three medical schools and an urging that at least part of the curriculum be consolidated at one school, West Virginia University. Much of the problem lies in attracting young doctors to rural West Virginia. "It's for social reasons," said Dr. John Jones, dean of the WVU medical center. "Mental and physical stimulation" is lacking in small-town West Virginia, he said.

The gap in rural care has been filled, to an extent, by foreign physicians. Of 2,231 practicing doctors in the state, 700 are foreign-born, according to state Health Department figures. But the doctor shortage is a serious problem in many areas. Residents of rural Milton in Cabell County were so disturbed that they might lose their doctor that they marched on the state Capitol, even though the physician in question — Dr. Donald Klinefelter — had been convicted on a federal drug charge and was facing disciplinary action before the state Medical Licensing Board.

Medical education boomed here in the past decade. The state took over a private osteopathic school in Lewisburg and created a medical school at Marshall University in Huntington. Marshall enrolled its first class in 1978, the same year the osteopathic school graduated its first class. But while the expansion meant a blossoming of opportunities for pre-medical students, admissions officers were faced with accepting some unqualified applicants to try to fill classes, Morton said.

Some of the accepted students had C academic averages and below-par scores on the standard medical school admission test, he added. "I have a serious question that we have enough qualified students to fill the places," he said. Medical school, Jones said, "is a long hard struggle and many people are not qualified and won't improve." West Virginians scored below the national average last year on all six areas of the national admissions tests administered by the American College Testing Program of Iowa City, Iowa. Nationally, 46 percent of applicants were accepted to medical schools, according to the Association of Medical Colleges, based in Washington, D.C. But West Virginia's medical schools accepted 63 percent of their applicants.

Last year, 295 people applied for 184 openings. Fifteen out-of-state students were admitted. Jones said all students admitted to WVU's medical school last year scored above average on the admission test. But he added, the school has been ordered to expand — it admitted just 88 students last year.

Dr. Robert Coon, dean of the Marshall medical school, said five or six students have been admitted with academic averages below B. "Grades are not the only factors taken into account," Coon said. "The medical tests tend to be for upper middle-class suburban students rather than rural West Virginians. We're interested in personal recommendations and each applicant is interviewed." Solutions to the problems of finances and admissions have been offered. George Pickett, director of the state Department of Health, said the schools should seek students with strong West Virginia ties.

"If you deliberately set out to increase the number of people taken from rural areas then they'll go back there," he said. Legislators have complained that the schools are too costly, and a legislative subcommittee has recommended the three schools consolidate their first two years of training at WVU.

Gov. Jay Rockefeller offered a partial solution to the money problems in his 1980-81 budget proposal. He suggested the osteopathic school eliminate clinical training, thus reducing on-campus work from four years to two. The last two years of osteopathic hospitals under contract with the state.

"There has been this feeling that if you train enough doctors they will spill out and fill up" the state, Morton said. "I doubt if it will work."

Greenville Police, who charged Carman with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $450 to the Braine car and $250 to the Carman auto.
