Exchange Ambassadors

By The Associated Press

Arabs marched, staged protest strikes and clashed with riot police today as Egypt and Israel exchanged ambassadors and completed the establishment of diplomatic relations.

Egyptian Ambassador Saad Murtada presented his credentials at the Jerusalem residence of Israel's president, Yitzhak Navon. An Israeli military honor guard was present and an Israeli band played Egypt's national anthem.

"We can provide a good example of coexistence in peace between the Israeli people and the Arab people in the area, something that will reduce for (the Arabs) the threat to their security and will ensure a just and lasting peace," Murtada said.

Meanwhile, Israeli Ambassador Eliahu Ben-Elissar presented his credentials to President Anwar Sadat at Abnine Palace in Cairo and said: "I am absolutely sure that peace is unavoidable."

Sadat responded by saying "another new chapter" had been opened in the history of the two former Mideast adversaries.

UN Panel Hears Plaints On Shah By Iranian Jurists

By The Associated Press

The U.N. investigating panel heard testimony from Iranian jurists about the shah's alleged misdeeds as President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr appeared atop the U.S. Embassy wall to demonstrate solidarity with the young militants holding the American hostages.

The five-man U.N. commission began hearing testimony Monday. A source close to the panel said examination of the allegations will continue "for the next couple of days." He said the commission's program is open, and the investigations will be planned from day to day. No other details were given.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim's spokesman, Rudolf Stajduhar, told reporters in New York that Waldheim felt the commission "is making progress. The secretary-general is confident all these efforts will lead to final solution of the crisis. Obviously more patience is needed."

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter, speaking to reporters in Washington, refused to comment when asked if he thought Iranian authorities had reneged on an understanding with the United States that the hostages would be released when the commission finishes its work, about March 7.

But he said that in the past Iranian leaders had made "wildly contradictory" statements that had "as much relation to reality as a puff of smoke."

The New York Times quoted Washington officials as saying they would not have agreed to sending the U.N. commission to Iran without clearly expecting the hostages to be freed, and that they were counting on the panel to delay issuing its report if Iran does not agree to release the captives by the time the report is finished.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the leader of the Iranian revolution, said on Saturday that the fate of the hostages would be decided by Iran's new parliament, which will not be elected until April 3. No date has been set for the Parliament to meet.

On Sunday, several spokesman for the regime denied there was any connection between the work of the U.N. commission and the release of the approximately 50 hostages.

Face Sentences

PLYMOUTH, N.C. (AP) — Sentencing is set March 24 for two former employees of the Eastern North Carolina Opportunities Industrialization Center in Roper who entered pleas Monday to charges stemming from a State Bureau of Investigation probe.

Audrey Holloway pleaded guilty to one count of embezzlement and Delinda Riddick pleaded no contest to a charge of forgery.

A state audit of federal job training contracts awarded to the Roper center by the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development questioned a $572,158 expenditure in Comprehensive Employment Training Act funds.

More than $1.2 million in CETA funding has been spent at the Roper center.

3 Boats Seized By Customs

SOUTHPORT, N.C. (AP) — U.S. Customs agents seized an estimated 11 tons of marijuana and three boats Monday as marijuana was being smuggled into North Carolina, authorities said today.

Spokesman Gil Payette of the U.S. Customs Service Patrol Division in Wilmington said 10 tons of marijuana was found aboard two fishing vessels that were being unloaded at a fish house at Southport. He said another ton of the substance was found aboard a 110-foot freighter that was halted in the Atlantic Ocean about 50 miles off Wilmington.

Ten men aboard the freighter, the Jell II, and seven men from the two fishing boats were held for questioning, Payette said. No charges had been filed this morning.

Customs agents said the Jell II, which has a Panamanian registry, was spotted by a Customs Service plane off the South Carolina coast over the weekend and was intercepted early Monday by the Coast Guard cutters Point Martin and Alert. It was being brought to Wilmington and was expected to arrive later today or on Wednesday.

Payette said customs agents believed the freighter was a mother ship making marijuana drops along the coast. He said there was a "strong possibility" that the marijuana seized at Southport came from the Jell II.

"We are going to undergo a conspiracy investigation to try and determine if the Jell II was the mother ship," Payette said. "However it would seem reasonable that there is a relationship."

The two fishing boats, the "Southern Pride" and the "Ox," were being unloaded at the American Fish House in Southport when federal agents and local law-enforcement agents staged a raid late Monday night. The Southern Pride was still loaded with marijuana and several bales of marijuana were found on the Ox, authorities said. They said more marijuana was found inside the fish house.

Those arrested at Southport were North Carolina residents, authorities said, but their hometowns were not immediately known. They were identified as Mike Frederick Lane, Adrian Theodore Lane and Cleveland Adair Lane, all brothers; and Claude David Cook, Steve Talmadge Brock Jr., Paul Pridgen and Joseph Calvin Gioielli.

Names of those aboard the Jell II were not available, but customs officials said they were one American, one Italian, five Colombians and three citizens of the Dominican Republic.

Day Of Judgment In New Hampshire

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — New Hampshire voters rendered their verdict today in a presidential primary that determined whether there really is a Republican frontrunner, and tested the shaken challenge of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy to President Carter's renomination.

Ronald Reagan, the preseason favorite, and George Bush, twice a winner, were the leading contestants in a seven-way Republican contest.

The first polls opened at 6 a.m. EST, before the winter dawn, for a day of balloting that ran as late as 8 p.m.

In tiny Dixville Notch, far to the north, all 23 voters met after midnight to cast their ballots over coffee, close the books and announce the first returns of the day.

Republicans in the hamlet handed Reagan and Bush five votes each, followed by Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. with four. John Connally, Rep. Philip M. Crane and Rep. John B. Anderson got one each. The six Democrats gave Carter three votes, Kennedy two and California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. one.

At stake in New Hampshire: 22 votes for the Republican presidential nomination; 19 for the Democratic nomination, all committed in line with candidate shares of the popular vote.

In Minnesota, precinct caucuses tonight begin the process of selecting 75 Democratic nominating delegates and 34 Republicans. The caucuses there are not binding, but a Democratic straw vote tested the strength of the Carter ticket in Vice President Walter F. Mondale's home state, where the president loomed a heavy favorite.

Kennedy once was the favorite in New Hampshire, next door to his Massachusetts home, but not any more. The last pre-primary public opinion poll, conducted for the Boston Globe, said Carter was preferred by 55 percent of New Hampshire Democrats to Kennedy's 30 percent.

The senator from Massachusetts said his situation was like that of the U.S. Olympic hockey team, the underdog that won a gold medal.

Picking Jury In Pot Case

The selection of a jury began this morning in Pitt County Superior Court in the trial of Douglas H. Ross, charged with possession of marijuana and maintaining and keeping a structure for the storage of a controlled substance.

Ross, a suspended Greenville policeman, was arrested in July after members of the State Bureau of Investigation, Greenville Police and Federal Drug Administration investigators raided a mobile home owned by Ross and recovered more than 8,000 pounds of marijuana.

The mobile home was located near Ross' house just west of the Greenville city limits on the 264 Bypass.

Several out-of-state residents were taken into custody at the mobile home at the time of the raid. They pled guilty and were sentenced in connection with the case.

Ross was arrested later by investigating officers.

Daniel Flood Pleads Guilty To One Count

By GENE GRABOWSKI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Rep. Daniel J. Flood, D-Pa., stood bent and quaking before a federal judge today and pleaded guilty to conspiracy.

If the plea-bargain under which the 76-year-old former congressman is accepted by U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch, federal prosecutors have agreed to drop more serious bribery and perjury charges.

Prosecutors told Gasch they were willing parties in the plea-bargain, forged secretly last Friday in the judge's chambers.

Gasch asked Flood, who was leaning on his two lawyers, if the court was correctly informed that "you wish to enter a plea of guilty."

Flood mumbled in reply: "It is, your honor."

Gasch continued to question Flood to make sure the defendant understood that under terms of the plea-bargain he could not appeal the judge's sentence.

Charges of conspiracy are a misdemeanor under the U.S. Criminal Code.

Flood was declared competent to stand trial three weeks ago and a new trial was scheduled April 8. His first trial ended in a hung jury in February 1979.

He was charged with taking more than $50,000 in bribes in return for his influence as chairman of an important appropriations subcommittee in the early 1970s. He has denied any wrongdoing.

Government spokesmen have said in the past that dismissal of the case would be out of the question. Justice Department sources who asked not to be named have told reporters the decision to press ahead with the case initially was made "high up."

Flood, of Wilkes-Barre, served 16 terms as representative of his district. He resigned his House seat Jan. 31 for health reasons.

Flood suffers from organic brain deterioration, but Gasch had determined earlier this month that the condition was not so severe to prevent him from participating in courtroom proceedings.

Little Concern Over 'Radioactive Water'

ATLANTA (AP) — State warnings that high levels of naturally occurring radioactivity have polluted drinking water prompted only cautious response in two southeast Georgia towns early today.

"I'm 56 years old and I've been drinking this water all my life," said Mount Vernon Mayor J. M. Fountain. "It's the best water in the country, in my opinion.

"We only had one inquiry this morning. A citizen wanted to know if you could just boil the water," said Fountain. "I declare, I don't know. All of them (the citizens) think it's about 95 percent bull, and that's the way I feel about it."

Georgia's Environmental Protection Division warned officials in Mount Vernon and Alamo on Monday that radioactive radium in the well water of both communities is 5 to 33 times above safe levels.

Leonard Ledbetter, director of the division, said the level of radioactive radium in the water at Alamo is 165 picocuries per liter, or 33 times the five picocuries per liter which the goverment considers a "reasonable limit." In Mount Verton, he said, the level is 24 picocuries per liter, or nearly five times the limit.

Mayor Emory Peacock of Alamo commented on the intense media interest. "It appears that radiation won't be the only thing we'll be exposed to," he said.

"We're not panicking by any means," Peacock said. "But we want to take the necessary steps. If we have to drill a new well, we want to start right away seeking state and federal funding."

Mount Vernon's water system serves 595 families and it is interconnected with the neighboring town of Ailey for sharing purposes during dry spells. The system in Alamo, 12 miles away, serves 400 customers, including much of the Wheeler County school system.

State officials encouraged pregnant women and infants in both communities to use bottled water until the situations could be resolved.

Peacock complained about the information being leaked to the news media before he and Fountain had a chance to receive detailed briefings from the state and communicate with their own communities.

"They told us it wouldn't be made public," he said. "I wanted to get all the information and inform our people."

Peacock said he expected to have to drill a new well. Fountain said Mount Vernon could shut its wells temporarily and use water from Ailey's system.

HOTLINE APPEAL

INFO ON HOUSE NEEDED

There is local and state interest in preserving the house at 805 Evans Street (across from the Greenville Art Center) for its historical and architectural value. Anyone having information about the house itself or any of its residents over the years or pictures of it at any time during its many years as a Greenville landmark is asked to call Robbie Tugwell, 758-0601 after 5 p. m. Tugwell asked that these calls be made to him as soon as possible, since facts about the house need to be compiled very soon.

HOTLINE FEEDBACK

BOTH NEEDS MET

Both needs mentioned in a recent Hotline appeal for the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Rehabilitation Center "beauty shop" have been met, thanks to the generosity of Hotline readers. According to Debbie Bennett of the center's Recreation Therapy Department, Pat Williams of Friendly Beauty Shop here gave a hydraulic chair and the Pitt County Medical Auxiliary donated a hood-type portable hairdryer.

Beauty shop services are thus now available to all patients in both the rehab unit and the acute hospital who wish the service and have their doctors' permission to have it.

Williamston C-of-C Quits Operation Overcharge

WILLIAMSTON — The Williamston Chamber of Commerce has pulled out of its role as one of the eastern North Carolina chambers of commerce supporting the "Operation Overcharge" movement that has been active for several months now.

Johnny Rogers, a member of the Williamston Chamber of Commerce who had earlier been appointed as the chamber's representative for the "Operation Overcharge" executive committee, explained some of the thinking behind the chamber's decision to pull out.

"Basically," Rogers commented, "the chamber initially supported this movement when it started. We asked the N. C. Utilities Commission to look into the operations of VEPCO, which they did, and hearings were held in a number of cities.

"The culmination of events of the last few months, however," Rogers said, "led chamber members to feel convinced that getting VEPCO to leave the area would not necessarily solve all the rate problems.

"Another factor," he added, "is that we don't feel that in the event VEPCO was moved out today that it would result in rates automatically dropping. Let's suppose, for example, that CP&L did purchase the equipment and lines owned by VEPCO. With higher costs and high interest rates, foreseeably rates would have to remain as high."

Rogers said that in light of these considerations, the chamber had reached the decision a short time ago that "we didn't want to fund the 'Operation Overcharge' any longer. The chamber is still interested in anything it can do to pressure VEPCO to consider decreasing rates."

Rogers added that because of the circumstances, "I felt chamber's representative on the project."

Larkin Little, Greenville's president of the "Operation Overcharge" project, said "I have received a letter from Johnny Rogers informing us that he has resigned and that Williamston is dropping out of 'Operation Overcharge,' however, we have not yet been officially notified by the Williamston Chamber of Commerce that obligated to resign as the they have dropped out."

Little added that the Williamston drop out "comes as no surprise because of the strong involvement of the town of Williamston and VEPCO." He noted that the president of the Williamston Chamber (James McBrayer) is also the area manager for VEPCO, and said "this is a situation that could possibly cause some concern because of the close relationships involved."

Sponsored A Workshop

The Pitt County Schools Primary Reading Program sponsored a two day workshop for kindergarten through third grade teachers in Pitt County. The topic of the workshop was "Excitement in Reading."

Subjects discussed in the various meetings were storytelling, newspapers in education, and putting fun in skill development. The main emphasis of the session was to develop and explore new and unusual ways of teaching reading. Many different methods of building the students' interest and enhancing their reading skills and ideas were discussed during the two days.

Some of the guests who contributed their skills and ideas were Jackie Forrence, nationally renowned storyteller from North Carolina, Dr. Peggy McGee, independent consultant from Franklin County, Dr. Sandra Cook of "The News and Observer," Ann Sullivan from the Stokes School Medical Center, Virginia Bunting, Director of Elementery Education, Alamance County, and Patt Koppman of San Diego, Cal.

Ten items of business, including six rezoning requests' are scheduled for consideration Wednesday night by the Joint City-County and Greenville Planning and Zoning Commissions.

Business on the joint agenda includes: request of McAllister and Ayers for rezoning 16.7 acres on the east side of the Allen Road south of Southern Railroad from RA-20 to R-6; request of Harry A. Hardee for rezoning 11 acres on the east side of the New Bern Highway north of Bell's Fork from RA-20 to Highway Commercial;

Request of David Evans Sr. for rezoning 5.8 acres in Quail Ridge development across from Windy Ridge on 14th Street Extension from R-6 to Neighborhood Commercial;

Consideration of a request by C. E. Kavanaugh to amend the zoning regulations to permit construction of duplexes in the Downtown Commercial Fringe zone; and the preliminary plat of the property of James Lindsay Savage on the south side of US 264 Business across from Westwood Subdivision.

Greenville board members will consider: a request by Minges and Freeman for rezoning 1.86 acres on the east side of Memorial Drive across from the entrance to Greenville Country Club from R-15 to Office and Institutional;

Request by the Boys' Club for rezoning seven acres on the west side of Greenville Boulevard, adjacent to University Condominiums, from R-20 to R-6; request by D. G. Nichols for rezoning four acres on Greenville Boulevard west of King's-Winn Dixie shopping center from R-9 to Office and Institutional;

Final plat of Town Park, located on the south side of W. Fifth Street between the Carolina Telephone Co. property and the Greenville City Schools property; and the sedimentation and erosion control plan of Town Park.

The meeting is scheduled for 8 p.m. at city hall.

Bondsman Bids For Judgeship

Brian Ipock, a 46-year-old Craven County bail bondsman, is seeking the Third Judicial District judgeship now held by Norris Reid of New Bern.

Ipock, who was in Greenville Monday, is one of four candidates for the District Court post, joining two New Bern attorneys and Bethel attorney Jim Martin in seeking the judgeship. Reid is not seeking re-election.

A Bridgeton resident, Ipock said Monday that although he has no college degree, he feels his ten years of daily courtroom experience as a bondsman has placed him in the center of the judicial system.

"I've been in touch with the average person," the candidate said, adding that he feels attorneys do not have the practical knowledge that comes from grassroots contact and association with day to day problems.

"It's hard to understand a man's problems if they (attorneys) have never had any," Ipock suggested.

Ipock, who who attended Farm Life High School, said that the experience he has gained through his daily courtroom activities is equivalent to a law degree in practical terms.

A lifetime resident of Craven County, Ipock is a former employee at Du Pont. He served a two-year tenure in the Coast Guard.

The counties of Pitt, Craven, Pamlico and Carteret make up the Third Judicial District.

Travel Along with Janet Stoughton

The primary idea in traveling to a foreign country is to experience and become acquainted with another culture. But even the most enthusiastic travelers are prone to occasional bouts of homesickness. When that feeling sets in it is helpful to know where to find the American attractions. If you are visiting Paris and tire of the Latin Quarter and Parisian nightlife, you will find an American style bar called the Parrot on Boulevard St. Germain. Draft beer is rather expensive but the juke box plays American rock and other contemporary recording stars.

Whether you are interested in traveling to a foreign country or in the United States for business or for pleasure, QUIXOTE TRAVELS INC. is happy to assist you. Cold And Snow Follow Pitt's Springlike Days

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

After languishing under warm temperatures and weathering the year's first thunderstorm this past weekend, Greenville and Pitt County returned to winter this morning with the year's fourth blanket of snow.

The area received .25 inches of precipitation this morning by 8 o'clock. "This was melted precipitation," reported Willie Briley, chief operator of Greenville Utilities' Water Plant. "At 8 a.m. there was not enough snow to measure. The way it looks now we might not have enough to measure since its not sticking," he added. The low temperature this morning was 28 degrees, and the Tar River stood at 6.5 feet.

Both the city and county schools were open today and reported no deviations in schedule. "We operated on our normal schedule," said Ott Alford, superintendent of Pitt County Schools. Greenville City Schools reported no changes as of 11 a.m.

Director of Public Works Mayo Allen said the streets were in good condition. "We had no problems with snow. It was a routine day," commented Allen. "I think we're about to make history with all these snows. My employees have worked very hard during all of them. We have a certain plan for every emergency and each time we've activated the snow plan this year it has been a thrill to watch how well it's worked."

Charles Clark of the Department of Transportation reported that the county roads, primary and secondary, were in good shape. "We had a little problem earlier with bridges but that was cleared up quickly. We seemed to have more snow in the northern part of the county. The temperature has risen now and the sun is out so it looks as though the roads will be alright."

County towns reported no problems from the powder. Winterville Town Clerk Elwood Nobles said "We had some snow but it's gone now." His comments were echoed throughout the area. "The snow took the bypass," commented Nobles. "It didn't come through here."

SHP Aided By Truckers

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Saying two passing truckers "did a fantastic job," a Highway Patrol trooper credits them with ending a high-speed auto chase in which the car being chased collided with a pursuing patrol car.

Trooper M. E. Lee credited truckers Jerry Long of Hillsborough and Malcolm Smith of Rocky Mount with helping him during the weekend chase.

"I think the governor ought to give them a medal," Lee said.

Lee said he spotted an erractically driven car while he was on patrol Sunday night. He said the driver ignored his light and siren, and sped off. The two cars reached speeds of more than 85 mph in heavy traffic, Lee said.

Long and Smith, who heard about the chase on their citizens band radios, decided to pitch in and give Lee a hand. One truck pulled into the left-hand lane and slowed down, while the other came up slightly behind it in the right-hand lane. The maneuver formed a gigantic roadblock to the speeding car.

The only place left for the car to go was onto the grassy median separating the highway. When he did, Lee followed and the two cars collided.

Thomas Everett Wright, 18, of Lancaster, S.C., was jailed in lieu of $1,000 under a variety of traffic charges.

"Those two truckers deserve most of the credit," Lee said Monday. "Most of the time people don't want to get involved."

Proposes A U.S. Threat

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — U.S. Sen. Barry Goldwater says it may be time for the United States to threaten to destroy Iran's major oil refinery if the hostages in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran are not released.

"Maybe the time has come when President Carter should tell (Ayatollah) Khomeini he's got X number of days to release them or Abadan would disappear," Goldwater said Monday at a news conference in this north-central Kansas college town.

"That's where they make all their gasoline and diesel fuel, so it wouldn't affect us if it disappeared," said the 70-year-old Arizona senator.

Later Monday Goldwater again mentioned the refinery on the Persian Gulf as he addressed a standing-room-only crowd at the 48th Alf Landon Lecture at Kansas State University:

"I don't know what we can do that the president hasn't already done, but I'll be seeing the president at dinner tonight (Monday) and I might just suggest that the refinery might just disappear," he said.

His statement got a big round of applause, the first of four which interrupted his off-the-cuff remarks at the lecture named in honor of the GOP's 1936 presidential candidate.

Isabel Cleared Of One Charge

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Former President Isabel Peron has been acquitted of illegally accepting $14,000 worth of jewelry as birthday gifts from a government bank.

The 49-year-old Mrs. Peron remained under house arrest Monday at a family estate, facing four other charges, including diverting $1 million in flood relief funds to her personal account.

Mrs. Peron, third wife of President Juan Peron, became president in 1974 when he died. She was deposed by a coup in March 1976.

Sabotage Of 9 Navy Copters

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Nine Navy helicopters, apparently the victims of sabotage, have been repaired and returned to duty, but investigators say they have found no motive for the incident.

Inch-thick cables were cut in the incident, discovered last week by a mechanic, the Navy said Monday. Cmdr. Jim Lois, spokesman for the Atlantic Fleet Naval Air Force, said the damage would have made the aircraft "extremely dangerous" in flight.

The helicopters were assigned to a combat support squadron at the Norfolk Naval Air Station. Repairs, mostly wire splicing, were made over the weekend and damage was believed minimal.

May Wear His College T-Shirt

WILMINGTON, Ohio (AP) — When Gary Sandy shows up on an upcoming episode of the television show "WKRP In Cincinnati" wearing a Wilmington College T-shirt, Hugh Heiland won't be surprised.

Heiland is a drama professor at Wilmington College. And about 12 years ago, Sandy, who plays Travis, the program director of the fictitious radio station, was one of his students.

Heiland has followed Sandy's career and during a recent visit to Hollywood, the student introduced his ex-teacher as "the guy who taught me everything about theater."

CREATED IN REPLICA — M. G. Swaim points out the painstaking detail he used for an 18-inch model of the house in which both he and his mother were born.

Birthplace Replica Made Of Materials From Original House

WINSTON-SALEM — Most persons merely cherish memories, but M. G. Swaim brought his to life by creating a replica of his birthplace with materials used to build the house 200 years ago.

"My mother was also born in the original homeplace. This added to my desire to build the scale model," Swaim said.

The original house, made of hewn oak logs, stood on a walnut-covered hill in the old town of Salem. Salem and the nearby community of Winston later became one city.

"I worked at Reynolds Tobacco for 49 years before I retired in 1967," said 77-year-old Swaim. "But I didn't want to retire and just do nothing."

Swaim visited the ruins of his birthplace and collected some of the logs and other materials that remained. "Almost all of the replica is made from those materials, including the 4,000 tiny wooden shingles I used for its roof," he said.

Using simple hand tools, Swaim put about 250 hours into the 18-inch-long recreation of the house. The hand-tapered shingles were cut from the old logs, as was a chimney section that looks like real bricks.

He said more old materials from the ruins were used to duplicate outbuildings that once stood near the original home.

"I've always felt kind of sentimental about the old house," Swaim commented. "And I feel that staying busy has extended my lifespan."

He also stays busy building real barns, storage buildings and other structures "mostly just for fun."

Friends Need Help With Word Ending

DEAR ABBY: My friends and I had an argument the other day about the word "antidisestablishmentarianism."

We have looked in the dictionaries at school and we can't find it. We've also asked all our English teachers, and we still don't have the answer, so we're asking you.

Is a person who practices antidisestablishmentarianism an antidisestablishmentarian, or an antidisestablishmentarianist?

Also, is there any rule in the English language that says that if a word ends in "ism," the name of one who practices that belief must end in "ist?" Thanks.

CINDY PERKO

DEAR CINDY: Will you accept the word of Dr. Bill Rivers, professor of communications at Stanford University?

He says you can't find "antidisestablishmentarianism" in the dictionary because it's not one word; it's a combination of words. However, you can find "disestablishment" in almost any dictionary.

Adding the prefix "anti" means that the person is against disestablishing the right to deprive the status of being, or becoming established. (The reason some people are so fascinated with the word is because it is so complex. The word establish is understood. Then disestablish is against establishing. Then adding anti will give you another word opposite disestablish. You see how it becomes complex?)

You may use either "antidisestablishmentarian" or "antidisestablishmentarianist." They mean the same thing.

DEAR ABBY: Greetings from another "I-never-thought-I'd-be-writing-to-you" Abby fan.

I am a 35-year-old professional woman, happily married with children, ages 14, 12, and a little one, 3 months old.

I am amazed at the number of people—some I hardly know—who ask me if my last baby was an "accident."

I have given answers that I thought were good-humored, but evasive.

How can I tell people that I consider such a question rude, improper, and insulting without being rude, improper, and insulting, too?

BURNING IN 'BAMA

DEAR BURNING: Respond with a question of your own: "Why do you want to know?" It stops 'em cold every time.

DEAR ABBY: STUMPED IN CHICAGO just might get "Wendy" to see a psychiatrist by using the same strategy I used to get my husband to a marriage counselor.

Through the years he had always blamed me for our marital problems.

After one particularly violent quarrel, I simply said, "OK, our problems are all my fault. How about going with me to a marriage counselor so that I can get some help?

That was six years ago and our marriage has improved 99 and 44/100th percent since then.

No, our problems were not of my making, but if I had tried to put the blame on him, we'd still be battling.

STRATEGIST IN MARYLAND

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I was shuffling through my fourth-class mail the other day when I came upon a letter making a pitch for one of the new magazines geared toward the "woman who works." (Do they come in any other flavors?)

The magazine promised me such provocative articles as, "How to Keep Sex Out of the Office and in the Mail Room Where It Belongs" . . . "What to Do When the Cost of Living Exceeds Your Deductions" . . . "How to Handle a House-Husband Who Dates" . . . "Writing a Long Resume from a Short Life" . . . "How Does a Pigeon Know You're Dressed for Success?"

Then, in bright red letters, was a sentence that took every bit of credibility away from the magazine. It read, "We'd like to send you your first copy, to examine at your leisure..."

Do you know that out of 35 women I personally interviewed who worked outside the home, not one of them knew what the word leisure meant?

Twenty of them thought it was a man's suit.

Eight of them associated it with a retirement community.

Four of them had seen it in the New York Times crossword puzzle, but didn't know what it meant.

Three of them said it sounded dirty.

Although more men are pitching in with domestic chores, there are still 22 million women in America who return home after an eight-hour work day to put in another eight-hour day bringing the house up to health standards.

What has happened to Saturdays and Sundays, I don't like to think about. In one neighborhood where there is a large apartment complex, the ozone of dust being circulated and rearranged on weekends reaches the smog alert level.

Realistically, I would like to see a magazine that really tackles the problem of the employed housewife — and how she could create leisure time for herself. How about:

"Polyester Children — Future Myth or Reality?"

"Protect Your Bathroom Against Intruders with an Alarm System You Can Install in One Weekend."

"Separate Vacations: Theirs and Yours."

"Moving vs. Cleaning."

"Napping Does Not Cause Bad Skin."

"Leisure: What is it? Who Gets It? How Much Does It Cost? Is It Catching? How Do You Get It?"

SUPPER FOR FOUR

Tamale Pie Salad
Grapefruit Plus Beverage

GRAPEFRUIT PLUS

Pretty and nutritious.

4 medium grapefruit
11-ounce can mandarin oranges, well-drained
Orange flavored liqueur

Cut each grapefruit in half horizontally. If necessary, cut a sliver from bottoms to have stand straight. With a serrated grapefruit knife, cut away sections from dividing membranes; drain and chill. With a kitchen scissors cut out membranes from grapefruit shells; with pinking shears, pink edges; cover and chill. Marinate oranges in ¼ cup liqueur and chill. Before serving, drain grapefruit sections again; distribute about half of them in grapefruit shells. Arrange remaining grapefruit sections alternately with oranges over top, adding marinating liqueur. Makes 4 servings.

Good Tobacco Report

Those with an interest in tobacco production can greet with enthusiasim the report that the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. is in the best shape since 1974. General Manager Fred Bond made the assessment last week.

He reported that large quantities of downstalk leaf had been sold during 1979. It was the downstalk tobacco which was causing overstock problems for Stabilization.

Bond expects USDA proposals concerning downstalk tobacco to further help alleviate the situation.

The general manager said little downstalk tobacco was marketed in 1979 and Stabilization was able to sell substantial quantities of that tobacco which it had on hand.

As the year began, Stabilization had about 26.5 percent of its 547 million pounds of tobacco on hand as downstalk grades.

Stabilization Corp. has worked well, but in the last couple of years it has been threatened by the large amounts of unwanted grades it was getting and could not sell.

Fortunately the industry has adjusted and once again Stabilization Corp. has worked its way back to financial soundness. That is of incalculable importance to our tobacco producing region.

Extra Dollars Meaningless

In our topsy turvey world of inflation, the state tax collections can increase 15.2 percent for the first six months of the fiscal year and no one is impressed.

That is the figures released by Mark Lynch, state revenue secretary. However, he pointed out, the increase is due primarily to inflation rather than economic growth.

To some degree the extra dollars received by the state are meaningless in terms of purchasing power. That's a sad state of economic affairs.

To the editor:

As a Greenville native, a fireman's daughter and a former member of the Greenville Volunteer Rescue Squad, I feel compelled to speak. On a recent visit home, I was appalled to learn that the City Council and the Chamber of Commerce have virtually forced the volunteer squad out of existence. How could they believe the rosy picture painted by Chief Allen without even hearing from the men involved? Have the men been threatened with their jobs if they speak out?

Sure, firefighters are newly certified EMT's, but are they willing to put the extra time in practice and training required to develop expert skills needed in emergency rescue? I think not. After all, they were not interested in becoming EMT's until it meant a raise in salary. Where are the savings to the city if these men are paid time-and-a-half when they are called back for extra duty?

Sure, there are approximately 76 men in the department, one third of which are on duty. On any given shift, three are rescue men, maybe less at this writing, as more resignations are forthcoming. Two are assigned permanent rescue duty, one at the main station and one at West End. At the main station, the third rescue man is assigned rescue for two months, fire duty for four months, two months as the third man on the truck and two months as second man on the truck, then four months of fire duty again. The substation rotates firemen as second and third men.

Ask the men what is REALLY going on! Why should the citizens suffer because of the power struggle within the department and jealousy felt toward the Rescue Squad?

Mickie Savage Ezelle

To the editor:

This U. S. Consumer Product Safety Commissio estimates about 581,000 children and adults are treated in the emergency room for injuries involving stairs, ramps and landings. The following factors are frequently associated with accidents on stairs, ramps and landings:

1 — weather factors and obscured vision — Ice and snow are frequent problems on exterior stairs. Obscured vision while carrying packages and laundry often result in falls on inside and outside stairs.

2 — Lighting conditions and obstacles on stairs — Poor lighting often obscures vision. Boxes, toys, and other objects can cause people to trip.

3 — Loose carpeting, polished hardware, slippery footware and runners near stairs — all these may contribute to a fall.

The construction of stairs, ramps and landings is a major factor for safety. The run width of stairs (no less than 10 inches on interior stairs), riser heights (no less than $7\frac{1}{2}$ inches), tread width (no less than $11\frac{1}{4}$) and stairway slope (between 30 and 35 degrees) — all contribute to the sensation of steepness which you encounter on stairs. For exterior stairs, the risers should be lower, the run wider.

Ramps should be long enough to permit comfortable strides (three feet for one stride) and slopes should be between seven and 15 degrees.

Handrails should ideally be placed on both sides of stairs, but at least on the right of each descending flight, as most people are right-handed.

Landings make flights of stairs safer than unbroken flights because they may break a fall before serious injuries are sustained. Self-illuminating light switches should be located at the top and bottom of each flight of stairs.

Some safety tips: 1) Wear shoes on stairs. Socks are slippery on smooth surfaces. 2) Don't carry packages in a way that obscures your vision. 3) Don't use stairs for storage and watch for objects that may cause you to trip. 4) Use railing when descending stairs. 5) Keep stairs, ramps, handrails and landings well-maintained.

Looks At Drivers

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Every time there is a student death involving a school bus in North Carolina, more expensive safety equipment is installed.

After an unprecedented eight deaths last year, a confusing array of convex mirrors are being mounted at the front of the buses, along with plastic "walking arms" which flip out to cause the kids to move in front of the bus far enough away for the driver to see them.

In seven of the eight fatalities, the children were run over by the bus itself.

Have you ever tried watching 12 television sets at the same time? That is about how a bus driver feels with all those mirrors.

Is equipment the answer? "I think the answer is no," a bluntspoken school superintendent from Bertie County has told a legislative committee which is attempting to find some answers to school bus safety problems.

Humans

"I do not believe we can improve North Carolina's safety record by continuing to spend money on mirrors and other so-called safety features, without giving adequate attention to the human needs of the transportation system," Larry T. Ivey said.

Once, using student drivers, North Carolina had the best safety record in the nation. That record has changed.

Is it equipment? No says Ivey, the equipment is better than ever, and wreck reports show the buses withstand severe impacts with little damage or injury to students.

Is it the road conditions? The roads are better than ever, Ivey points out.

Could it be a different student population, different school administration, a different breed of bus drivers? "I think this is the answer," Ivey told legislators.

Buses now carry students all of the same age rather than a predominantly rural population of all ages. The buses operate in cities rather than mostly in rural areas. Principals were once in charge of the buses at their particular schools; now the buses serve several different schools. There used to be older kids to help the driver and to help the younger students. Parents used to know the bus driver, and drivers came from a "tradition" of community service in driving the bus, Ivey recounted.

In sum, caring parents, a responsible principal, and a committed bus driver, along with the older students on the bus, shared in making the transportation system safe.

Changes

Now, city buses, cross-district buses, principals who don't know the drivers, students who don't know one another are the standard.

Ivey believes that these drastic changes in the system have to be taken into consideration before solutions to the safety problem can be worked out.

Intensive training is needed both for principals and drivers, Ivey believes. He would like to keep student drivers, but pay them better so more potential drivers would not take other jobs instead.

And he thinks a system is needed for recommendations and evaluations from teachers, the driver education instructor, reputable adult citizens, and the principal before a bus driver is given his charge.

All student drivers should be over 17, and every school district ought to have a tough bus driving practice area designed for students to experience bus maneuvers.

Also, Ivey thinks, every elementary school bus should have a monitor to help drivers keep order, observe children boarding or leaving the bus, and assist in backing or other difficult maneuvers.

Eager-Beaver Player

NASHUA, N.H. — George Bush of Texas, a fellow who is regularly identified as "the former," may well become "the current" when they count New Hampshire's votes tonight. And if he does in fact defeat Ronald Reagan in this first major primary, Bush will be very hard to stop before the Republicans gather in Detroit in July.

Bush is a former congressman, a former U.N. ambassador, a former envoy to Peking, a former director of the CIA and a former national chairman of his party.

New Hampshire could make him the current front-runner. By every indication, Bush has almost demolished the lead that Reagan once enjoyed. He is riding the momentum of victories in Iowa and Puerto Rico, and by his own description, "the adrenalin is pumping."

He is 6 feet 2, rangy, craggily handsome, physically fit. He is 55, but as he keeps reminding audiences, "I feel like 35." He has managed to pull the pitch of his voice down from a high C to about B-flat, but in moments of excitement he still is given to coloratura squeaks and whinnies. "I'm doing better as a speaker," he says, "but I'm no William Jennings Bryan." That's a fair appraisal.

Bush is the eager-beaver ball player who runs out every hit. He gets marvelously tangled in his own syntax. He talks about shipping "Alaskan oil to Alaska," when he means Japan. On the matter of Taiwan, "we have active exchanges of cultural exchanges." He hopes that when people are old and sick, they won't have to depend "on their parents." He meant to say children. The trouble with President Carter is that "he sees the world the way he wishes it is." Bush at a lectern is Bush on first base; he is always pounding his mitt, scuffing up the infield, getting in a few knee-bends to keep loose. He is supremely confident. "I know I'll be a better president than those other guys," he says. "I am the best qualified," he tells a rally in Nashua. "I was a good ambassador to the U.N.," he says.

On one recent morning, Bush arose at 6 in the home of former governor Hugh Gregg, took his morning drubbing from the Manchester Union Leader, jogged a couple of miles, got into a starched shirt and impeccable suit, had breakfast with a wandering Washington correspondent and set out on the trail.

The first stop was a large Chevrolet dealership in Manchester, where he toured the whole plant — accounting, sales, parts, body shop, lubrication, showing an avid interest in exhaust pipes. He spoke from the back of a nifty new pickup truck in the showroom, making a pitch for the free enterprise system.

Second stop, Alvirne High School in Hudson. He spoke chiefly on foreign affairs, belaboring the president for "vacillation and waffling." He fielded a couple of sharp questions, charging the ball: Yes, he strongly favored registration of both women and men or a possible draft. No, he did not believe his association with Richard Nixon would hurt him: "I'm not one who likes to see everybody picking on Richard Nixon. I think he did some pretty good

Runaway Govm't

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

The public is fed up with governments that get bigger and bigger at every level and government officials are doing something about it — — right?

Wrong.

At the various levels of government, those running for public office speak at election time of efficiency and reducing the bureaucracy. Jimmy Carter did it. Jim Hunt did it.

But there are more people on the federal payroll today than there were when Mr. Carter took office. There are more people on his own staff than there were on the staff of President Gerald Ford.

There are more people on the state payroll today than there were when Jim Hunt became governor.

But, it can be argued, those are huge, cumbersom, virtually unmanageable bureaucracies. To bring them in line will take time (usually another term for the incumbent office holder.)

At the local levels runaway government can be more easily brought together — right? Perhaps. But let's look at some figures.

Last year, through November, the manufacturing sector in Wayne County and its municipalities created 130 new jobs. Other free enterprise businesses — food, lumber, wood; fabricated metals, etc. — added 70 new jobs. Textiles lost 40.

These are all industries and businesses that produce the real wealth of an area — the tangibles that move in the market place.

But look at nonmanufacturing employment. It was up by 270 jobs. Of those 270 more jobs, 210 were the result of additional government employment! The salaries, benefits and working space for these additional government employees must be provided from the taxes of those working in non-government jobs.

Government, even at the local level, continues to be our fastest growing "industry" and increasingly is providing some of the most favored jobs and working conditions available to our people.

As the government work force continues to outstrip growth in the private sector, elected public officials face increasing pressures from within to expand the bureaucracies and create more and better public jobs.

How long can and will the private work force and property owners continue to carry a burden that becomes larger every year?

Strength For Today

THE ONLY GATEWAY

"And they went out and preached that men should repent."

In those few words are summed up the evangelistic campaign carried on by the twelve Apostles after Jesus had sent them out to preach. They were instructed to proceed in the simplest fashion, to make no pretense toward learning, to make no provision for their own comfort. They were to go out and preach, and the burden of their message was that men were to repent.

This injunction may sound strange to modern ears. We might ask whether we are not as good as the next fellow, and we might question whether anyone has the right to pass judgments on the behavior of others.

But we need to repent because this is the only gateway to better living. It is never until we shed the old that we can take on the new and enter into the glorious possibility of being what God has always wanted us to be.

See Inflation Out Of Control

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — It is now all but conceded by realists that inflation is out of control.

Henry Kaufman, enormously influential among investors and securities dealers because of his uncanny record of forecasting monetary and other economic matters, was unusually grim in a talk to bankers last week.

"We are in a quagmire from which it will be hard to extricate ourselves without substantial risks and pain," he said. "Inflation is roaring ahead." National policy, he said, is "muddling along."

"I am aghast at how much our country has faltered," Kaufman told the bankers group in San Francisco, and he asked for the declaration of "a national emergency to limit the drift toward economic disarray."

On the following day, Feb. 22, Washington announced that the consumer price index for January rose 1.4 percent, the worst rate in $6\frac{1}{2}$ years and which, if continued, would equal about 18 percent a year.

Robert Russell, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, told Congress' joint economic committee of an ominous trend and said the "The underlying rate inflation has started to explode."

The Carter administration has "abdicated its responsibilities," said Rep. Henry R. Reuss, D-Wis. And Lane Kirkland, AFL-CIO president, said the voluntary wage-price restraint program may be "withering away."

Almost everyone but the administration is talking inflation. Jody Powell, White House press secretary, said merely that anti-inflation policies "are under review, as they are constantly." He said wage-price controls aren't being considered.

Increasingly, economists and political candidates are saying that the administration has no anti-inflation policy, and that in fact it may be contributing to the problem. Kaufman, hardly a hyperbolic speaker, was distressed.

"Consider the U.S. economic scene today," he began. "The path to sustainable economic growth seems lost to us. Inflation is roaring ahead. No letup is in sight."

The dollar, he continued, is "weighed down by the sharp oil prices increase, our own inflationary problem, and the hesitancy of other industrial nations to assume more responsibility in world finance."

This burden, "as well as our domestic problems," he said, will be "compounded by demands for a tougher U.S. defense posture and all its attendant financial requirements around the world."

These, he said, were major elements of the current economic dilemma, the solutions to which were being sought through policies that "all indicate efforts to muddle along."

"There is nothing in income, fiscal or monetary policies to suggest a way out. To admit that a high rate of inflation is likely over the next two years, as the administration has done in its official reports, is laudable for veracity — but veracity alone cannot cure inflation."

Break-In Charged Pair Following Car Chase

Two 16-year-old youths were arrested early Sunday by area authorities after a car chase and subsequent wreck and charged with the break-in of a Rt. 1, Grimesland grocery store.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson explained that Pitt County deputies on a night patrol in the Hamm's Crossroads area responded to a break-in report at Godley's Grocery and observed a vehicle run through a stop sign. He said that the deputies pursued the car and after a chase of some two miles, the fleeing vehicle wrecked at Galloway's Crossroads.

The sheriff reported that the occupants of the car jumped from the vehicle and fled into the woods. The Department of Corrections unit at Maury was notified and bloodhounds were sent to aid in the search, he said, noting that Hilton Lee Lewis, 200 Fairway Drive, Greenville, and Chester Wayne Suggs, P.O.Box 60, Grimesland, were arrested some 30 minutes later.

The two youths, who were charged with breaking, entering and larceny at Godley's Grocery, were placed under $500 bond each and confined to Pitt County Jail, he added.

Sheriff Tyson said that a front plate glass door at the store was broken in the incident, reported at 3:29 a.m. Sunday, and various merchandise, including some $50 in beer, was reported taken. Total value of the merchandise was estimated at $100, he said, with damage to the facility also set at some $100.

Authorities recovered merchandise allegedly taken in the break-in, the sheriff added, and the automobile was impounded. He mentioned that the vehicle received minor damages in the wreck.

Assisting in the arrests were Department of Correction personnel and Greenville police.

things." A student asked if Bush supported Senator Kennedy's bill "to take our guns away from us." No, said Bush, "but I don't think you've accurately stated Kennedy's position." It was a touch of class.

Third stop, St. Stanislaus Hall in Nashua. Balloons. Crepe paper swags. A cornet band. Middle-aged folks in straw boaters. The adrenalin was pumping. Bush had a thousand adoring fans on hand, and he gave them a first-rate performance. He snagged a liner having to do with a "slush fund" contribution to his Senate bid in 1970. He flawlessly fielded a dribbled bunt about the invidious Trilateral Commission. He had his arms going in every direction, up, down and sideways. "Cut his galluses," said an old bird-handler in the audience, "and let that boy fly."

The evening saw two separate "cattle shows," when Bush showed his conformation in competition with the other candidates. He did fairly well, but these were scoreless innings for him. What might impress an unruly crowd of gun nuts? Not much, when John Connally goes for the grand slam: "Ah grew up in south Texas," said Big Jawn, "with a gun in mah hand."

Bush made it back to bed about midnight. By the standards of the Bush campaign, it had been an easy day. Was he tired? "Gosh, no," said the candidate. "I feel great. I feel like 35."

Deadline Near On Coffee Talk

Wednesday, Feb. 27 is the last day to make reservations for the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce's Coffee Talk with ECU Basketball coaches Dave Odom and Cathy Andruzzi.

According to Maxine Brown, chairperson of the Coffee Talk Task Force, the Coffee Talk will be held Feb. 28 at 7:32 a.m. at the Ramada Inn.

The Coffee Talk is a free service to chamber members and the public. To make reservations, call 752-4101.

To Observe Anniversary

The Rotary Clubs of Greenville, Farmville, Washington, Bethel, Ayden, and Belhaven-Pantego, will hold a joint meeting tomorrow night to celebrate the 75th anniversary of Rotary.

The session will be held at the Brentwood Lodge near Washington.

Speakers for the anniversary meeting will include District Governor Jack Edwards of Greenville, and District Governor nominee Bob Howard of Morehead City.

Rotary had its beginning February 23, 1905 in Chicago. It has grown to include 18,446 clubs and 853,000 members in 152 countries.

The Greenville Rotary Club was the first in the world to own its own building, located at the intersection of Rotary Avenue and Johnston Streets. The building was dedicated March 14, 1921, and cost $20,000. It has recently undergone a $70,000 remodeling program.

Draws Death In Four Murders

MARTINSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — A former mental patient with a long criminal record has been sentenced to die for the rape-strangulation slaying of a woman and the drownings of her three small children.

Steven Judy, who had asked to be executed "if you don't want another death hanging over your head," was sentenced Monday to die in the electric chair on May 15. His attorneys said they would appeal.

Judy said he killed Terry Lee Chasteen, 21, and her small children after he stopped to help the woman fix a flat tire.

Hunt Puts Stress On Juvenile Crime

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt, endorsing the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Act, told congressional leaders and administration officials Monday that state and federal governments must do a better job of working together to prevent juvenile crime.

Hunt said new legislation should consider "the great problem of juvenile offenders who have serious mental and emotional problems. Prisons and other existing programs are not adequate for them. It looks like we may have to develop a whole new type of institution to deal with these young people."

The governor's remarks came at a meeting of the Criminal Justice and Public Protection Committee of the National Governors' Association, of which he is chairman.

"The sad fact is that more than half of the serious crimes against people and property are committed by young people under the age of 18," Hunt told congressional leaders and Carter administration officials in Washington.

"Juvenile justice is where it's at," Hunt said. "This is the only area where we can dramatically reduce crime in the years ahead."

Hunt said the proposed act should provide for greater coordination between the states and the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration's office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention. He said states should have a greater voice in how money is spent in this area.

Another Step Toward Peace

Another stage in the peace agreement between Egypt and Israel becomes reality today, as Eliahu Ben Elisar, left, becomes Israel's first ambassador to Egypt, and Saad Mortada, right, becomes Egypt's first ambassador to Israel. Despite the improved relations between the two countries, serious problems remain. Egypt and Israel have not yet agreed on the future of the West Bank and Gaza, Arab lands Israel conquered during the 1967 Middle East war. President Carter has set May, 1980, as the target date for agreement about those areas, and the future of the Palestinian Arabs who live there. Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin recently rejected a plan for Israel to give up its settlements in the West Bank.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the U.S. negotiator in the Palestinian autonomy talks?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — Concord is the capital of New Hampshire.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed some scattered losses today, struggling to right itself after a two-week slide.

The 10:30 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials stood at 859.81, unchanged from Monday's close.

Losers held a 5-3 lead over gainers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said traders seemed to be waiting cautiously for some word of the government's possible response to the recent acceleration of the inflation rate.

President Carter said Monday that inflation had reached a "crisis stage." The administration was reported to be considering new measures aimed at combatting it.

But no announcements were expected until the completion of today's New Hampshire primary.

Among the early volume leaders, Boeing was unchanged at 62⅜; Monsanto rose ¼ to 48¾, and United Technologies was off ⅛ at 46½.

On Monday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 8.96 to 859.81, bringing its loss since Feb. 13 to 44.03 points.

Declines outnumbered advances by a 4-1 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume slowed to a seven-week low of 39.13 million shares, against 48.21 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index lost 1.01 to 64.79.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 2.77 at 293.82.

Ingram Blames Former Aides

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The personnel problems of the state Department of Insurance have been foremost in news this election year, and Commissioner John Ingram contends he was not responsible for them.

Instead, he points a finger at three former aides who are are challenging him in the May 6 Democratic Primary. They are among the seven former deputies who either quit or were fired by Ingram since 1973.

"The basic problem that has clouded the entire issue was the ambition to run for insurance commissioner," Ingram told reporters on Monday when he was asked about the shuffling of aides in the Insurance Department.

The three former aides trying to take his job are W. Kenneth Brown, Roy Rabon and James Long. Rabon has predicted that the Legislature will dismantle the insurance commissioner's office if Ingram is re-elected.

Opponents of the commissioner say he has lost some of his effectiveness through a hostile attitude toward the insurance industry and the General Assembly.

And critics say Ingram's position was responsible for enactment of a 1977 law allowing the insurance industry to implement rate increases over his veto subject to refund if the courts uphold his position on appeal. Ingram rejects that criticism, saying the law won approval "because of the supreme lobbying for it.

"There was more money spent on that law by the greediest lobbying for industry that had ever registered in the General Assembly at that time," he said. Ingram said the legislative committees that recommended its passage were dominated by pro-insurance legislators.

Brown, a former Methodist minister, left his position as Ingram's top deputy recently and said he had been fired, but Ingram said Brown had quit.

"Those that have left recently have had conflicts among themselves — conflicts that were clouded by their own ambitions to be commissioner themselves," Ingram said. "If you look at the record, you will see that we have led the nation in insurance reform."

Noisy Tactics Solved City's Starling Crisis

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Mecklenburg County Manager Glenn Blaisdell, shivering in his bright blue warm-up suit, looked up at the blustery Myers Park sky and pronounced the starling problem finished if only for the time being.

"I don't see any necessity to shoot," he told a small gathering of county officials and onlookers Monday evening. "The birds are coming in, but they aren't staying in this area.

"If they don't stay, I see no problem."

His proclamation drew the curtain on a two-week drama involving the thousands of starlings roosting in the area. Residents had complained of the noise and smell of the birds and the potential health hazard of their droppings. The droppings left a white film over bushes and the ground.

After the county commissioners decided shooting the birds was the only solution, Charlotte Humane Society members took to the air and ground last week with helicopters, noisemakers and recorded starling distress calls to scare the birds away instead

Their tactics apparently worked.

"Those are mostly robins coming in now," Assistant County Manager Bill Bates said Monday with a glance toward the treetops

Blaisdell said county agriculture extension agent Phil Haas would meet with humane society officials and Myers Park residents over the spring and summer to devise ways of keeping the birds from roosting in the area next winter.

He said some residents also had agreed to prune their shrubbery, making it less attractive for roosting. Blaisdell cautioned, though, that if the birds return to Myers Park in the next few weeks, county police will be asked to shoot them.

Humane society officials were pleased with the interim decision not to shoot.

"We feel we've been successful," said Patti Lewis, humane society president.

The migratory starlings are scheduled to leave the area by the end of March, anyway. They roost in warm, lush areas of inner cities during the winter then spread out across the country in the early spring.

Break-In, Theft

An investigation is underway by the Pitt County Sheriff's Department into a break-in reported Monday morning at Belvoir Primary School.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that some six cases of ground beef, valued at $442.22, were reported stolen from a cooler at the school.

According to the sheriff, entrance to the school, located on Rt. 6, Greenville, was gained after a lock was forced off a back door.

The break-in, reported around 8 a.m. Monday, apparently took place sometime during the weekend, he said.

Big Demand For Silver Dollars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Far more people want to buy the federal government's Carson City silver dollars than there are "cartwheels" to sell.

Although nearly a million of the dollars were offered, Debbie Swann of the General Services Administration said Monday the sale has already been vastly oversubscribed. It started 10 days ago. Original plans were to limit the sale to 500 coins per order, but she said that limit has been reduced so more customers can be served.

Obituaries

Boyd

Mr. Proctor Boyd, 59, died Monday in Beaufort County Hospital.

His funeral service will be held Wednesday at 3:30 p. m. in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Gerald Harrelson. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Mr. Boyd was a lifelong resident of the Clark's Neck community of Pitt County and was a member of Riverview Baptist Church.

Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Pearl Whitley Boyd of the home; his mother, Mrs. Addie B. Boyd of Washington; two brothers, G. Brown and Gentry Boyd, both of Rt. 3, Washington; a sister, Mrs. William Windley of Tarboro; and one granddaughter.

Three Indicted For Comspiracy

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Two present and one former employee in the Mecklenburg County court system are under indictment for obstruction of justice and conspiracy in connection with the destruction of evidence.

Indicted Monday by a Mecklenburg County grand jury were James Ramsey, a magistrate; Sheilah McCullough, an employee of the court clerk's office, and Lawrence C. Johnson, a former employee of the clerk. They are charged in connection with the burning of a court file and altering records on the courthouse computer.

Another employee in the clerk's office was named as an unidicted co-conspirator.

The charges stem from the arrest Sept. 17 of Johnson, 22, who had worked for Blackburn from August 1978 to May 1979.

A charge against Johnson of driving under the influence never got to court. And, the traffic citation and the breathalyzer report showing the amount of alcohol in his blood were burned, according to the indictments.

The indictments also charged that his name was altered to read "Rosa Lee Bernston," on a computer.

Ramsey, 28, has been paid but has not worked since an investigation into the incident began in late November. His status remains the same following the indictments, according to Chief District Judge Chase Saunders, who supervises the magistrates.

After the grand jury handed down the indictments, Clerk of Superior Court Max Blackburn fired Ms. McCullough. He also dismissed Joan Helms, the employee who was not indicted. He had no comment about the charges Monday except to announce the firings.

A magistrate can be suspended or removed from office only after a hearing before a Superior Court judge. Saunders said Monday he will decide about requesting such a hearing after Ramsey's Superior Court trial.

Jaguars, Cougar Girls Gain Finals

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — There was an explosion here Monday night. Fueled by a high-power fast break and a high-pressure full-court press, Farmville Central blasted away to an impressive 83-61 win over Williamston in the District 3-A semi-finals.

The Jaguars, now 22-5, face Plymouth tonight (7:30 p.m.) for the District Championship and the right to advance to the state high school basketball tournament in Durham.

The catalysts in Farmville's liftoff Monday night included Mike Horne, Jeff Tyson and Mike Baker.

The Jaguars hit an even 50 percent from the floor compared to Williamston's 33.5 percent. Horne, who hit 12-of-15 field goals, led the Farmville attack with 25 points while Tyson chipped in 20 points and nine rebounds. Baker, the only starter not in double figures with seven points, paced the Jaguars' board efforts, pulling down 12 rebounds.

Center James Woolard led the Tigers with 22 points and seven rebounds while Edward Williams added 13 and 12 rebounds.

In the end, however, it was Farmville's quickness on both offense and defense that told the story.

After a lackluster first period, the Jaguars kicked their running attack into high gear early in the second quarter, outscoring the Tigers 14-0 and coasting to a 38-24 lead at intermission.

Williamston closed within eight in the first three minutes of the third quarter but a 10-0 spurt by Farmville left the Tigers reeling.

"I thought we played well," Farmville Central coach Mike Terrell said. "It was one of our most complete games this year, the best tournament game we've had.

"We played our game, that was the key. We ran and got the ball inside when we needed to. We like to run and play pressure defense. Our guys are so alive they can't stand still on defense."

Or offense. The Tigers downfall may have been quickened by their attempt to run with the Jaguars, something Terrell had not anticipated.

"We had hoped they'd try to run with us, but we expected them to slow it down," he said. "But we never gave them a chance. Our quickness was so much of a factor."

Williamston managed to stay close in the first eight minutes thanks to some opportunistic play under the boards — the Jaguars out rebounded Williamston 39-36 on the night — and trailed 18-14 at the end of the quarter.

But with the score 20-16 early in the second period, Farmville rattled off 14 straight points, led by Donald Reid, who had four of his 12 points during the spurt, and coasted in at halftime with a 14-point bulge.

"We started a little slow," Farmville's Mike Horne said. "It took us some time getting started, but we did."

Coming out in the second half with starting guard Dennis Pitt who had 11 points, on the bench with four fouls, the Jaguars saw their lead melt to eight, 44-36.

Again, however, Farmville "came alive." The Jaguars forced the Tigers into four turnovers in their next six possessions and outscored Williamston 10-0 to take a 54-36 lead and all but seal the victory.

"Everybody talks about us having only one or two good shooters, but we have five good shooters," Horne said. "We really don't count on one guy. We just had a complete game tonight, as Coach Terrell would say."

"We didn't let up at all tonight," Terrell said. "They had a couple of good periods, but we always came back alive. I don't know if they let up or if we increased our intensity."

Terrell said more of the same can be expected tonight.

"We'll be intense tonight," Terrell said. "Plymouth is a lot like us. They have some good ballplayers, and a pair of really good guards. It should be an interesting game."

In the girls' championship battle tonight (6 p.m.), Southwest Edgecombe, a 71-54 winner over Washington Monday night, meets Roanoke.

Pirates Set To Close Out Year Against Campbell, UW-Milwaukee

East Carolina University's basketball team will wind up its first season under Coach Dave Odom with two games this week, and the young coach is hoping for a pair of victories to bring down the curtain.

The Pirates enter the week with a 14-11 record, having assured themselves of their first winning season since 1975. However, they have bowed in their last three games, all on the road, and Odom wants the team to go out on a winning note.

Wednesday night at 7:30 p.m., the Pirates will be hosting Campbell University in Minges Coliseum. Then on Saturday afternoon at 2 p.m., the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee will be the guest in Minges.

Wednesday night, Cheerleader Night will be observed, with cheerleaders from high schools in the area admitted free in uniform. In addition, a cash prize will be presented to the group that displays the best support for the Pirates.

In the pair of games, five ECU seniors will be playing their final times in the Purple and Gold, Herb Gray, Herb Krusen, George Maynor, Frank Hobson and Kyle Powers. All five will be awarded starting roles in both games, according to Odom.

"We've dedicated this week to our seniors," Odom said. "We have a unique situation in that we can start all five of them at the proper positions. The only change we have to make is moving Krusen out to the big guard position, and he's played there from time to time during the year. It won't be just a token start for them either. We want them to be an integral part of these games. They've been leaders in practice for us."

Two of those seniors, Gray and Krusen, have joined the 1,000-Point Club during the year. Krusen currently stands at 1,097 points, just one behind number nine Billy Brogden. Certain to pass him, Krusen also has a good shot at number eight, Lacy West, who scored 1,111. Gray, with 1,016, currently stands 13th among the 15 players on the list. He has a chance to move past Jim Fairley, 1,031, and Tom Miller, 1,048, in the final two games.

Maynor currently is the leading scorer on the team, hitting a 16.6 mark for the year. Krusen has a 13.4 average, while Gray is hitting at an 11.7 mark.

Campbell carried a 14-10 record into a pair of games surrounding the weekend, while Milwaukee was 7-15 prior to a weekend pair.

Campbell is led by guard Fred Whitfield with a 16.1 average, while fellow backcourter Darrell Maulding has a 14.8 average. Tony Britto, 6-11 center, is hitting 12.0 per game and pulling away 8.4 rebounds.

Milwaukee is paced by 6-4 forward Bob Flood, hitting 15.1 points a game, while 6-9 forward Kirk Tatge has an 11.0 average and guard Dave Weber is hitting 10.3 per outing.

"Campbell represents a big challenge for us," Odom said. "They have as good a record as we have. They've done well, and they've played some respectable teams. As for Milwaukee, we won't really be looking at them until after Campbell. They are experienced on the road, so they will be prepared. This will be a big game for us too, since it's our last one and we'd like to close out with a win."

Odom said the Pirates have worked hard in the week since their last game. "We've probably worked harder than we have since mid-season. We have had some slippage in some areas. We're not is as good of condition as we should be. A lot of that is due to the fact that we've cut back on practice time and the number of practices. But having to play so many games in a short amount of time has hurt in that respect too. You can't practice when you're traveling or playing.

"Conditioning became a factor in our last two games, I'm sure. So we've picked up the pace these last few days."

The coach calls winning these last two important. "People tend to remember what you did last, so if we can win these last two, we'll be remembered as winners. This will help us over the summer in preparing for next year, and in our recruiting.

"We're not thinking about anything else but these two games right now," Odom added. "We just want to win and have our seniors go out winners."

De Paul Again Is Top Choice

By TOM CANAVAN
Associated Press Writer

After 38 years at DePaul, Coach Ray Meyer is just two games away from his first undefeated regular season. But there are some people in South Bend, Ind., who would like to spoil it.

And they will get their chance.

DePaul, the unanimous choice for the top spot in The Associated Press college basketball for the sixth consecutive week Monday, will meet 14th-ranked Notre Dame at South Bend Wednesday night.

The Blue Demons, 25-0, were named on each of the 58 first-place ballots and received a perfect score of 1,160 in the voting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

But its support will be less than unanimous when it plays Notre Dame at the Athletic and Convocation Center — a place where many an unbeaten team has fallen. The Center is where the Irish snapped UCLA's NCAA-record 88-game winning streak and handed an undefeated and top-ranked San Francisco team its first defeat in 1977.

The game may also mean a little more to Notre Dame. The Irish lost only one home game last season — to DePaul — and naturally they would like to avenge that loss.

DePaul closes its regular season Saturday against Illinois State.

Kentucky and Syracuse both moved up a notch and took over the No.2 and 3 positions, respectively, as Louisville, ranked second last week, slipped to No.4 following a loss to Iona.

The Wildcats, who nipped fifth-ranked Louisiana State 76-74 in overtime Sunday, received 1,070 voting points. The Orangemen, who posted triumphs over Niagara and Boston College last week, got 1,019 points, while Louisville picked up 904.

Louisiana State edged Oregon State for the No.5 position by a mere four points, 833-829.

Maryland, which captured the tough Atlantic Coast Conference regular season title last week, picked up two places in this week's poll, jumping to No.7 with 805 points.

St.John's, ranked seventh last week, fell to No.8 with 748 points while Ohio State and North Carolina rounded out the Top 10. The Buckeyes, ranked 11th last week before victories over Northwestern and Iowa, collected 628 points, and the Tar Heels — ranked eighth last week before losing to North Carolina State — received 580.

Missouri advanced two notches in the poll and headed the Second Ten. Brigham Young was 12th followed by preseason favorite Indiana, Notre Dame, Arizona State, Weber State, Clemson, Purdue, North Carolina State and Georgetown, D.C.

Last week's Second 10 was Ohio State, Clemson, Missouri, Brigham Young, Purdue, Weber State, Duke, Arizona State, Indiana and Washington State.

North Carolina State and Georgetown returned to the poll after absences of several weeks.

Austin Cleared Of Car Charges

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State baskeball star Clyde "The Glide" Austin has been given a clean bill to continue playing for the Wolfpack in the Atlantic Coast Tournament.

Austin was cleared by the conference of any wrongdoing after an investigation of his ownership of two cars, N.C. State officials said Monday. Athletic Director Willis Casey said he received a one-paragraph report from ACC Commissioner Robert James that there was no indication of wrongdoing on the part of Austin.

N.C. State officials asked James to initiate an investigation after The News and Observer of Raleigh reported that Austin, a senior, had two cars — a 1980 Cadillac and an MG, worth a total of about $20,000 — registered in his name.

"After careful review of the report of the investigation you requested, it is my interpretation that neither Clyde Austin nor N.C.S.U. are in violation of conference or NCAA rules pertaining to financial assistance rendered to him," James' said in his report to Casey.

The News and Observer report said Austin's girlfriend, an employee of a Raleigh bank, was making payments on the two cars.

VCU Captures Sun Belt, NCAA Berth

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Virginia Commonwealth basketball team proved to be no passing fancy — but actually a bunch of fancy passers.

"I think our players did an excellent job of moving the basketball with some fine passing — the best passing we've had all year," said Ram Coach J.D. Barnett Monday night after a 105-88 upset of Alabama-Birmingham in the championship game of the Sun Belt Conference playoffs.

"Whatever they threw at us," added Barnett, "we were able to handle because of our passing and our intensity."

The title gave the Rams an automatic bid to the NCAA playoffs, the first club to officially gain a position in the 48-team field.

"I thought we'd win, I thought we had enough," said Alabama-Birmingham Coach Gene Bartow. "I thought if we took it to them they would tire. I think the reverse happened."

VCU survived two preliminary games to get to the finals, including a previous 74-72 upset over regular-season champion South Alabama.

Meanwhile, Houston, Texas Tech and SMU won as they started the Southwest Conference playoffs Monday night. Houston defeated Rice 92-80; Texas Tech walloped TCU 71-52 and SMU edged Baylor 86-83.

In the start of the East Coast Conference playoffs, LaSalle beat Drexel 87-76; Hofstra nipped American University 70-69; Delaware routed West Chester State 98-75 and Rider tripped Lehigh 89-77.

Ray Blume and Rob Holbrook scored 12 points apiece for Oregon State, while Walt Gillespie and Doug True each racked up the same for the losing Bears. Dwayne Allen scored was proved to be the winning basket with 4:06 remaining. Neither team scored after that. With one second left, Mike Chavez got off a hurried 30-footer for the Bears, but it was too late and off the mark.

Danny Kottak and Edmund Sherod scored 22 points apiece to lead VCU's triumph. The Rams built a 10-point halftime lead into 22 points shortly before the end of the game.

Rob Williams scored 34 points to pace Houston over Rice.

"Williams is really a superb player," noted Rice Coach Mike Schuler. "He is the most difficult guard in the conference to defense. We also had some crucial turnovers that hurt us. And their quickness hurt us, too."

Thad Sanders came off the bench to score 18 points as Texas Tech beat TCU. The Red Raiders had trouble shaking the Horned Frogs for much of the first half, when they held a 31-27 lead, but took charge after intermission and led by 18 points with 8:29 to play.

Dave Piehler scored 18 points and Brad Branson added 15 to power SMU over Baylor. Terry Teagle, the Bears' sophomore sensation, scored a career-high 34 points.

Michael Brooks scored 33 points and grabbed 17 rebounds as LaSalle beat Drexel; Hofstra edged American on Steve Brawley's field goal with two seconds left; Ken Luck's 24 points paced Delaware over West Chester State and Rider beat Lehigh as Vaughn Coats scored 21.

Ray Blume and Rob Holbrook scored 12 points apiece as Oregon State held off California. The victory boosted Oregon State's mark to 15-2 in Pac-10 play and 25-3 overall.

U.S. Honors Its Hockey Heroes

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

The Olympics are over, but the celebration continues.

From the White House in Washington to hometowns around the country, America's hockey heroes are basking in the afterglow of their stirring gold medal performance at Lake Placid, N.Y.

President Carter was host to some 150 members of the U.S. Olympic Winter Games team at the White House Monday, including the Cinderella hockey squad that stunned the world by winning the gold medal and beating the vaunted Soviet Union team along the way.

"This has been a wonderful week for our country," said Carter, who called the athletes "modern-day American heroes. This is one of the proudest moments I have ever experienced."

The hockey players felt the same way.

Goalie Jim Craig called winning the gold medal "an unbelievable thrill. I don't think it could ever happen again. It was like going to the moon or something."

Team captain Mike Eruzione added, "What we proved is that 20 guys — despite the odds — when they pull together, can win a gold medal."

Following the White House luncheon, members of the hockey team headed their separate ways. Craig went to New York for a television appearance, but most of the other amateurs and collegians who won the hearts of the nation began the happy journey home.

Residents of Davison, Mich., have begun plans for a "Ken Morrow Day" to honor the 23-year-old defenseman, and in nearby St. Clair Shores, Mich., banners proclaiming "Welcome Home, Mark Wells" were strung to greet the 22-year-old forward.

Thousands of flag-waving well-wishers, roaring the "U-S-A, U-S-A" chant that became so familiar during the XIII Winter Olympics, waited more than three hours at the Minneapolis airport Monday night to welcome home the Minnesota contingent — 11 players and Coach Herb Brooks.

Tears streamed down the face of University of Minnesota Athletic Director Paul Giel, who embraced Brooks as the coach stepped off the plane.

"A year ago, when Herbie told me he wanted to take the Olympic job, I said to him, 'I don't know why, because winning the gold medal can't be done,'" said Giel. "But Herbie just keeps amazing me. First he wins national championships at Minnesota and now he takes a group of college kids and turns them into gold medal winners. it's just incredible!"

People at the airport waved American flags and carried dozens of banners. Among the messages were: "Welcome home, heroes," "Pucker up, we love you," and "Ramsey No.1," the latter honoring defenseman Mike Ramsey of Minneapolis.

"This is fantastic," said Ramsey. "This is better than going to Washington, to the White House. This tops everything, because this is home."

Nevertheless, the homecoming was not without a tinge of regret at the conclusion of a once in a lifetime experience.

"I'm going to miss a lot of those guys," reflected Ramsey. "We played the whole Olympics on emotion."

That feeling was echoed by Jack O'Callahan, one of three Massachusetts members of the team who returned to Boston Monday.

"This is all so overwhelming," said O'Callahan, who scored the go-ahead goal in Sunday's 4-2 victory over Finland that clinched the gold medal. "The hardest thing I've ever done is to leave the other team members."

O'Callahan said what he wanted most was to relax quietly in the living room of his home in Charlestown, Mass., savor the experience and then get on with his life.

"The only way to celebrate," he said, "is to get back to basics."

Meanwhile, back in Washington, Rep. Frank Annunzio of Illinois introduced legislation in the House of Representatives calling for the striking of Congressional gold medals to honor the athletes, and Rep. Tom Hagedorn of Minnesota said the team "demonstrated a determination and purpose to get the job done that is rarely seen in sports or in life."

But Rep. Robert Bauman, R.-Md., in a partisan comment, said that if President Carter had coached the U.S. hockey team, it probably would have lost to the Russians and been held hostage by the Finns.

Arbitrator Gives Nod To Sutter's Request

CHICAGO (AP) — Relief ace Bruce Sutter could have $700,000 to save next season, thanks to an arbitrator, but the Chicago Cubs' Cy Young Award winner still isn't happy.

Sutter wanted $700,000 for the 1980 season, and the Cubs offered $350,000. Thomas G. Christenson, a New York city attorney and law professor who heard the case Sunday, called it in favor of Sutter.

It was believed to be the highest single award made by an arbitrator since major league owners agreed in 1972 to arbitration. There is no in-between when a salary dispute reaches arbitration. It has to be one way or the other, and in this case Christenson had to rule on $350,000, which would have been in favor of the Cubs, or the $700,000 in favor of Sutter.

"You gulp twice and say 'Okay, this is what the final result should be,'" said Christenson in explaining his decision.

"I'm very happy about the award," said Sutter, "but it still isn't what I want. What I want is a five-year contract that will give me long-term security."

"I'll admit $700,000 is an awful lot of money," Sutter said, "but if I go out there and get hurt, my family and I can't live the rest of our lives on it."

Sutter, who turned 27 last month, won the Cy Young Award last season as the National League's top pitcher when he compiled a 6-6 record and posted a league record 37 saves. He had a 2.23 earned run average with 110 strikeouts and only 32 walks in 101 innings worked.

Christenson heard arguments from attorneys in behalf of Sutter and from Bob Kennedy, vice president and general manager of the Cubs.

"The arguments on both sides were extremely well done," Christenson said. "It was a hard decision to reach."

Christenson said he pondered the case all night and then went over the material again "when I got up in the morning. I had a batch of statistics — comparisons with other pitchers on other teams, Sutter's record with the Cubs and the various components of his record."

Sutter was scheduled to leave for the Cub training camp in Mesa, Ariz., Monday and said he hoped to resume negotiations with Kennedy during spring training.

Olympic Funds Are Slowing

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The American public definitely is going along with one form of Olympic boycott, much to the concern of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

"Our Olympic program could come to a grinding halt, regardless of the Moscow situation, if funds don't come in," says Bruce Burtch, a fund-raising consultant for the USOC.

And, as Jimmy Carnes, coach of the U.S. Olympic track team, said last week: "The money has stopped coming in."

Don Miller, executive director of the USOC, sent a letter on the subject last week to Burtch, a paid fund-raiser who works out of San Francisco, and to the many volunteer fund-raisers around the country.

"Now is the most important time," said Burtch, adding that normally the USOC would expect donations to be picking up steadily now in the wake of the Lake Placid Olympic Games.

"But, obviously, people are thinking that if we're not going to Moscow, there's no need to send money," said Burtch. "We have to break through that misconception that if we don't go to Moscow the Olympic program doesn't need support.

"The Moscow Games account for less than 10 percent of the USOC's four-year budget."

The four-year budget, exclusive of the costs of running the USOC training centers at Squaw Valley and Colorado Springs, is $25.7 million, he said, and $2.4 million has been budgeted for the Moscow Games, which may very well be held without U.S. athletes under the boycott called for by President Carter.

More than half the $25.7 million is used by 32 governing bodies of individual sports. The USOC grants them money for training and development of athletes.

Donations to the USOC by corporations, said Burtch, "have held up pretty well. But donations from the private sector, the people who send in $5 or $10, have virtually dried up."

'Kramer', 'All That Jazz' Lead Pack In Nominations For Oscars

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The bets are on for the 52nd annual Academy Awards contest, and "Kramer vs. Kramer" and "All That Jazz" lead the pack with nine Oscar nominations apiece.

"Kramer vs. Kramer," a moving tale of a New York couple's divorce and child custody battle, had been expected to figure heavily in the awards, which will be presented on national television April 14.

But "All That Jazz," a musical based on director Bob Fosse's own brush with death, had received mixed reviews and was the dark horse candidate as nominations were announced Monday.

Francis Coppola's "Apocalypse Now," a Vietnam saga based on Joseph Conrad's "Heart of Darkness," followed the leaders closely with eight nominations.

All three films were nominated for best picture, along with "Breaking Away" and "Norma Rae."

All of "Kramer vs. Kramer's" principals won nominations: Dustin Hoffman as best actor, Meryl Streep and Jane Alexander as supporting actress, and Justin Henry, who at age 8 becomes the youngest Oscar candidate in the supporting actor category. "Kramer" also earned directing and screenplay adaptation nominations for Robert Benton.

"All That Jazz" gathered a best actor nomination for Roy Scheider, a directing nomination for Fosse and an original screenplay nomination for Fosse and Robert Alan Aurthur. But the film cleaned up in technical categories, with mentions for art direction, cinematography, costume design, film editing and musical score adaptation.

Coppola joined Fosse and Benton in the best director category, as did Peter Yates for "Breaking Away" and — another surprise — Edouard Molinaro for the French-Italian comedy "La Cage Aux Folles."

Rounding out the best actor nominations with Hoffman and Scheider were Al Pacino for "...And Justice For All," Peter Sellers for "Being There," and Jack Lemmon for "The China Syndrome."

"The China Syndrome" also earned Jane Fonda a best actress nomination. She and Lemmon were the only previous Oscar winners among the top acting nominees.

Other best actress nominees were Jill Clayburgh, "Starting Over;" Sally Field, "Norma Rae;" Marsha Mason, "Chapter Two" and Bette Midler, "The Rose."

Joining Miss Streep and Miss Alexander in the supporting actress category were Barbara Barrie, "Breaking Away"; Candice Bergen, "Starting Over" and Mariel Hemingway, "Manhattan."

Supporting actor nominations aside from young Justin Henry were Melvyn Douglas, "Being There;" Robert Duvall, "Apocalypse Now;" Frederic Forrest, "The Rose;" and Mickey Rooney, "The Black Stallion."

Foreign film hopefuls include "The Maids of Wilco," Poland: "Mama Turns a Hundred," Spain; "A Simple Story," France; "The Tin Drum," West Germany; "To Forget Venice," Italy.

And the best original song nominees are "It Goes Like It Goes," "Norma Rae;" "The Rainbow Connection," "The Muppet Movie;" "It's Easy to Say," "10;" "Through the Eyes of Love," "Ice Castles" and "I'll Never Say Goodbye," "The Promise."

Creativity In TV Olympics

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — I miss the Olympics. I think it was my favorite TV show. Snow and sports and no laugh track.

What I miss most about the Olympics, though, is the ABC broadcast team, for two weeks the most creative force on the tube. Their hype set new standards. Gold medal stuff."

It was a lovely thing to witness, like watching a master bullfighter work a slow bull with feigned dodges and recoveries, hoping to make the fight seem better than it is.

The master huckster, the selfless leader the others must have looked up to for inspiration, was Dick Button. With Button at the mike, we weren't just watching ice skating events, a series of Mohawks and double axles and flying layouts. We were witness to the unfolding of history. Civilization in conflict! Life itself!

Prior to one event (the compulsory figures or The Battle of Hastings ... I can't remember which), Button endeavored to inform us that each skater had to do seven things before he got off of the ice. He said it this way:

"There are seven required elements. Woe to the skater who misses on any of them!"

See, Button didn't mention it, but there were goon squads outside the arena armed with brickbats. Skaters who messed up got their kneecaps broken.

Button won the gold for overall distortion, but the gold medal for single best effort came from host Jim McKay, telling us about speed skater Eric Heiden, or, as McKay called him in his pretty ramble, The Man in the Golden Suit.

"He and his gold suit have come to represent youth and strength and victory and national pride," McKay said, bravely ignoring the implication in his words that our innumerable losers might signify something else.

"This superman in the Golden suit — he seems more an intergalactic messenger than a big farm kid from Wisconsin."

McKay won the gold medal despite a dangerous slip into perspective. A replay of the miscue:

"The Man in the Golden Suit knows who he really is, and so should we remember."

Good efforts were also made by Chris Schekel and Art Devlin on the ski jump beat, making every jump seem a jump for humanity, and by an ABC graphic which appeared on below the name of Ingemar Stenmark just before the Swedish skier took to the hill for the giant slalom.

As straight sportscasters, Al Michaels and Ken Dryden were superb in their coverage of ice hockey. But doggone it, they just weren't in the spirit of things as hypesters. Not once did either suggest that the puck was democracy and the padded thugs batting it about were freedom's enemies, or that the netted goal was a webbed womb bearing the future of the Western World (not even when we beat the Russians).

EXTENSION PROGRAM

A program on residential landscaping and pecan tree maintenance will be presented by the Greene County Agricultural Extension Service on Feb. 28 at 7 p.m. The meeting will be held at the County Complex Building. For further information call 747-5831.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♠	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♡.

The Caransa Philip Morris event was won by a team of Dutch internationalists. They outdistanced a star-studded field, which included four members of the Italian International squad that had recently been nosed out in the world team championships by the United States. Netherland's victory was no fluke, as this sparkling defensive effort illustrates.

The bidding needs a word of explanation. West's cue-bid of two spades was the Michaels Convention, showing at least five cards in the other major and an undisclosed minor suit. In effect, this was a weak takeout double on a two-suited hand. If partner wanted to find out which minor suit the cue-bidder holds, he could have bid two no trump. Since South promised a five-card suit for his opening bid in a major, North felt that his hand was worth a raise to game.

Every card tells a story, and the Dutch defenders put that adage to good use. For his opening lead Carol van Oppen selected the jack of hearts. Even if the ten of hearts had not appeared in dummy, it would not have been difficult for East, Andre Mulder, to work out that his partner had made an unusual lead. What was he trying to do?

Obviously, West's minor suit was clubs—one glance at dummy was enough to convince anyone that it could not be diamonds. West's eccentric lead, therefore, had to be an urgent request that partner shift to some other suit. The king of clubs in dummy made it unlikely that he wanted a club returned.

East could count ten diamonds in his hand and dummy. Since West almost certainly had ten or eleven cards in hearts and clubs, it was quite possible that he was void in diamonds. So Mulder rose with the ace of hearts and shifted to a diamond. West ruffed gratefully, and the defenders still had two trump tricks coming for a one-trick set.

Lake Placid Is Returning To Normalcy

By MARY FIESS
Associated Press Writer

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — The giant Olympic media center will soon be Lake Placid High again, and prices are coming down in restaurants. This tiny Adirondack village, host to the XIII Winter Games, is getting back to its quiet routine after the 13-day gold rush.

"This will be a real estate office again in a couple of hours," Jeff Kahn of Woodstock, Vt., said as he cleared out his temporary business in woolen items.

On Monday, the day after the Olympic flame was extinguished, the 2,500 residents of Lake Placid were dismantling the structures erected to cope with a massive, but short-lived invasion of spectators, reporters and young athletes from 37 nations.

First to come down were the barriers that kept carloads of spectators or casual visitors from the jammed village streets. Most of the 10 temporary post offices were shut down by day's end, ready to be hauled away. Trucks carrying hundreds of portable toilets moved out of town. Main Street stores that had served as corporate hospitality suites stood as empty shells.

"You psyche yourself up. You run on Adrenalin. You work long hours. And then it's all over," said Larry Douglas as he sat almost alone in a once-busy post office.

Restaurant prices, doubled during the Games, came down — at least a little. A sandwich and soup or salad, $5.95 in the Woodshed during the Games, cost $4.95 on Monday. A waitress said she thought the normal price of $3.50 would be back later this week.

A few dozen of the thousands of reporters who had taken over most of the motel space within 15 miles were in town shopping for souvenirs as workers began restoring the media center to Lake Placid High, where students will return March 5.

Village officials hope the Games will produce an economic boom here — despite early bad publicity from an erratic transportation system that left thousands of would-be visitors stranded miles away.

"It's like a toothache. It hurts a lot while you've got it, but when it's gone you tend to forget the pain," said Mayor Robert Peacock.

"People will come here now that the U.S. hockey team has won the gold," agreed businesswoman Maria Botoulas.

The team that defeated a powerful Soviet hockey squad joined speed skater Eric Heidenn winner of five gold medals, and other U.S. Olympians at a reception at the White House on Monday.

In Albany, N.Y., meanwhile, members of the Czechoslovakian Olympic team went on a buying spree, snapping up blue jeans, records and Scrabble games before heading to New York and a flight home.

Shoppers and clerks scurried to get souvenirs from the athletes, and an American made up the difference when a Czech athlete ran out of money.

Lake Placid, said assistant hockey coach Ludea Bukac, was "too many athletes. Too many people."

Students Serve As Hunt Pages

Laura M. Vincent and Loretta Grantham of Greenville served as pages in Governor Jim Hunt's offices in Raleigh during the week of Feb. 18-22.

Vincent is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vincent of 3107 Tucker Drive. She is a freshman at E.B. Aycock Junior High.

Grantham is the daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Carl Grantham of 404 Lee Street. She is a freshman at D.H. Conley High School.

PUBLIC NOTICE
APPLICATION FOR 401 CERTIFICATION
NORTH CAROLINA
PITT COUNTY

TAKE NOTICE that the Greenville Utilities Commission, 200 W. 5th Street, P.O. Box 1847, Greenville, North Carolina 27834 has made application to the North Carolina Division of Environmental Management for certification that the discharge of dredged material into the waters of the Tar River will not violate applicable water quality standards.

The applicant proposes to construct two 30-inch diameter subaqueous raw water intake structures on the north bank of the Tar River approximately one mile up-stream of the US 13 bridge at Greenville. The pipelines are to be entrenched below the elevation of the river bottom with the intake structures situated approximately four feet above the river bottom and 45 feet waterward of the normal water elevation. Installation of the pipelines would involve the proposed excavation of a 170-foot long, 50-foot wide, 25-foot deep trench. This trench would cross an existing 30-foot wide wetland slough. The trench and pipelines would terminate approximately 110-feet landward of the riverbank and landward of the wetland slough at the proposed pump station and wet well. Once the pipelines are in place, the trench will be backfilled with the previously excavated material restoring the disturbed area to original grade. Approximately 5,000 cubic yards of excavated material will be placed below the normal water line. A concrete retaining wall is to be constructed along the riverward side of this wet well and pump station at the base of the existing bank. No fill in wetlands is proposed for the construction of the pump station. The purpose of the proposed work is to provide raw water intake facilities for a proposed filtration plant to supply public water to the City of Greenville.

Additional information concerning this project may be reviewed at the offices of Environmental Operations Section, Division of Environmental Management, 512 North Salisbury Street, Archdale Building, Raleigh, North Carolina. Copies of such materials will be furnished to any person requesting copies upon payment of reproduction costs.

The Division of Environmental Management proposes to take final action in the issuance of the certification on or after the 31st day of March, 1980.

All persons desiring to make comments regarding the application should do so in writing delivered to the Division of Environmental Management, Post Office Box 27687, Raleigh, North Carolina 27611 on or before the 28th day of March, 1980.

This the 20th day of February, 1980.

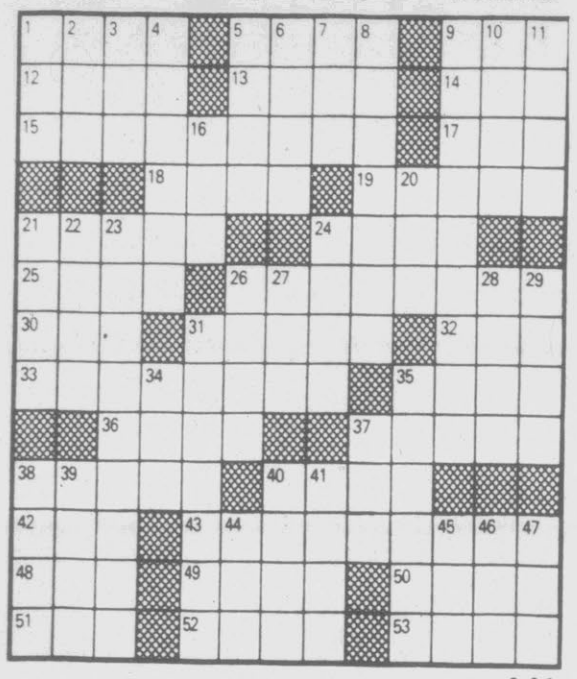
Answer to yesterday's puzzle.



CRYPTOQUIP 2-26

HVMCX QYCCYAM RQVCCYAYU UKM-HJQ, UVMCX JCCKR

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — LOVE AND DEVOTION ARE MAN'S MOST FAMILIAR FRIENDS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: X equals Y

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

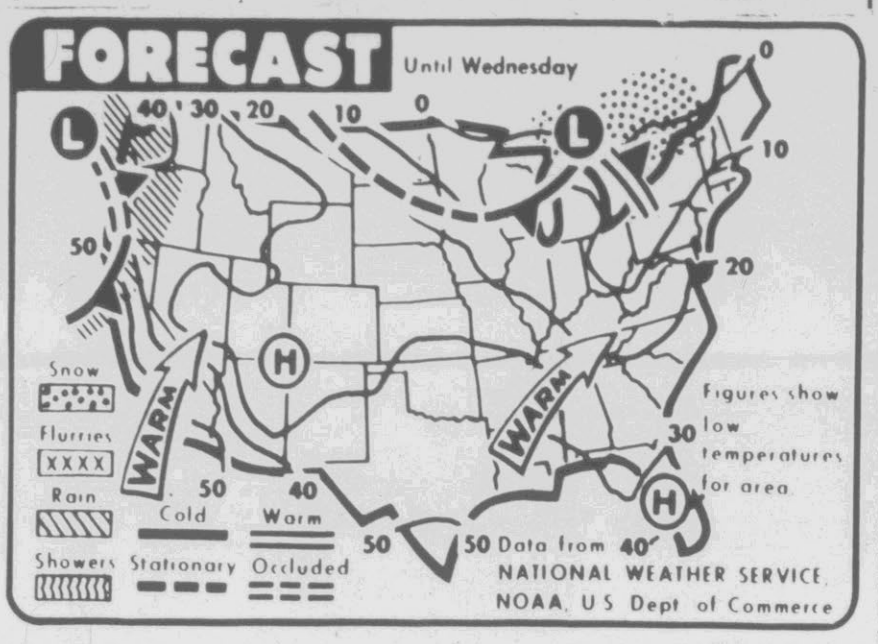
How's The Weather?



WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected in the forecast period until Wednesday morning for the northern Pacific coast. Snow is due from the lower Great Lakes to northern New England. Except for the Atlantic Coast, where temperatures will be cold, warmer weather is indicated. (AP Laserphoto)

Northwesterly winds gusting to 50 mph buffeted eastern North Carolina this morning as snow flurries and chilled temperatures struck the rest of the state.

Temperatures were mostly in the upper 20s and low 30s, but the wind made it feel more like zero.

Travelers advisories were posted early today in the mountains. Up to five inches of snow had been reported by daybreak in some mountain areas and another one to three inches was likely. Considerable blowing and drifting of the snow hampered vehicle traffic in the mountains.

East of the mountains, the turbulent air caused scattered areas of light snow or flurries in northern sections during the day. Up to one inch accumulation was possible near the Virginia line, but elsewhere little or no accumulation was expected.

Temperatures will moderate somewhat Wednesday, but another surge of arctic air is moving south and will likely reach North Carolina Wednesday night. Therefore, conditions should stay colder than normal through the end of the week.

North Carolina experienced a variety of weather Monday. Dense fog shrouded some coastal sections during the morning; snow fell in the mountains; scattered showers, thundershowers, and even some small hail occurred in central sections. High temperatures ranged from 41 at Boone to 60 degrees at Wilmington and Cape Hatteras.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have creative ideas that need proper arranging before putting them in operation. Personal goals can be easily attained now.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make necessary chances in the home that will give you added comfort. Be sure business affairs are running smoothly.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You can benefit greatly by concerted action in your line of endeavor at this time. Avoid unnecessary expenditure of money.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You know how best to add to present abundance, so stop wasting valuable time. Express happiness with loved one.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A good time to go after that goal that is so important to you. Listen to complaints of family members instead of airing your own views.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Contact allies who can give you the support you need for an important project you have in mind. Show that you are sincere.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Know what your personal aims are and go after them in a positive manner. Sidestep one who is trying to make trouble for you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be sure not to invest more money than you can afford or you could regret it later. Show others that you have wisdom.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Your intuitive faculties are working well at this time, so make good use of them. You can handle business matters wisely now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Use better and more modern methods in your busin ss dealings and get excellent results. Don't neglect important bills.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Making as many allies as you can is wise at this time. Much care in motion must be exercised now to avoid possible accident.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make any changes necessary to improve the quality of your work and reap the benefits. Show that you have ability.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will one who can solve difficult problems, so be sure to direct education along lines of investigations for best results. Don't neglect ethical training early in life. There is much happiness in this chart.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Manteo To Unveil Its Proposals Wednesday

MANTEO — The first official unveiling of the Town of Manteo's proposals for America's 400th Anniversary Commemoration from 1984-1987 is scheduled to take place at the Manteo Town Hall on Wednesday, February 27, at 2 p.m.

The artist's concepts for the proposal for the Manteo waterfront has been prepared by Peggy Swearingen, Staff Artists of the East Carolina University Regional Development Institute in Greenville.

Among other items contained in the proposals is a discussion of a visitors center to bring together in one place information on historic sites, shipbuilding history and other points of interest throughout Dare County;

A suitable site for the construction of a reproduction of one of the ships that came to Roanoke Island bringing the first English colonists to the New World — the fate of this proposal hinges on whether the feasibility study underway to design and construct the ship gives approval to the project. Under tentative consideration for this purpose is a site of the Creef and Davis family boatworks railway; and

Consideration of acquiring as much waterfront property as possible to establish a public park with emphasis on green space and landscaping, rather than parking.

The presentation to be given Wednesday in Manteo will also be made in Chapel Hill on Saturday, February 29 to the Governor's 400th Anniversary Committee.

Car, Activity Bus Collided

A car driven by Eula Pratt Younger of 103 Wedgewood Dr., and an East Carolina Vocational Center activity bus operated by William Hill Jr. of Red Barn Trailer Pk., collided about 4:50 p.m. yesterday at the intersection of 14th and Chestnut Streets.

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $800 to the car and $100 to the bus.

Investigating policemen said no injuries resulted from the mishap.

Earned School Honors List

Livingstone College in Salisbury announced that Shelia Jenkins of Greenville made the Dean's List for the first semester. To be on the Dean's List, a student must have an average of 3.0 or better.

Jenkins, a freshman biology major, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Jenkins.

ON DEAN'S LIST

Leland Q. Townes of Williamston made the Dean's List at North Carolina Central University in Durham for the fall semester. To be named to the Dean's List, a student must have a grade point average of 3.0 or above.

Area Students Earn Degrees

Two area students received degrees from the University of South Carolina in Columbia at the end of the fall semester.

Wayne Allen Foster of Rt. 1, Box 286R, Greenville, received his Master of Speech Pathology degree. Irene Harriet Gerow of 200 Verdant St. Apt. A3, Greenville, received her Doctor of Philosophy degree.

Another Rate Hike Barred By Ingram

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Insurance Commissioner John Ingram has rejected a proposed $10 million rate hike sought by the insurance industry on workers' compensation coverage.

In taking that action Monday, Ingram said the industry had used unaudited figures to justify the need for the proposed increase. Testimony during a public hearing last month indicated that the industry submitted financial information that had not been audited, Ingram said.

"I was persuaded by this evidence that the financial information upon which this $10-million increase is based was not sufficiently credible to support such a rate revision," Ingram said.

What effect the ruling will have on the request is unknown because the state Court of Appeals has ruled twice on the question of audited data. It upheld Ingram's authority on one occasion and overruled him on another.

The issue of audited data is now on appeal before the state Supreme Court, and is not known if the N.C. Rate Bureau, which has been given 60 days to submit audited figures, will appeal.

The Rate Bureau, an agency that sets rates for the industry, plans to study Ingram's decision before deciding on an appeal, said Paul Mize, its general manager.

The $10-million increase represents a 6-percent boost in costs, said Mize. And he said a larger increase could be justified through testimony, but that a law enacted last year calls for a 6-percent cap.

Area Student On Dean's List

Ms. Lynda Steffensen of Greenville is among students and recent graduates named to the President's List at The Berkley School of Garret Mountain, N.J.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Steffensen and is in the secretarial program at The Berkley School.
