More Women Hostages In Embassy Released

By JOE FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer
BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The guerrillas holding the Dominican Republic's embassy freed five more women hostages this morning but continued to hold at least 40 other captives, 18 of them ambassadors, including Diego C. Asencio of the United States.

Reporters watched while four automobiles, one of them riddled with bullet holes, drove the women to safety. One of those released was Costa Rican Ambassador Elena Chassoul Monge.

The guerrillas have now freed all 15 women held in the embassy since it was seized in a blaze of gunfire Wednesday during a Dominican independence day reception. On Thursday they released 10 women, three wounded men, including Paraguayan Ambassador Oscar Gostiaga and a 16-year-old boy.

The 29 armed members of the leftist organization called M-19 say they are ready for a long siege.

Six of the women freed

Thursday were Colombians, four were the wives of foreign diplomats, and the other two wounded men were employees of the embassy. The youth was not identified.

Today's release was believed to have left 41 persons captive. President Julio Cesar Turbay Ayala said in a communique his government would negotiate with the guerrillas after they freed all the women.

The leader of the guerrillas, who called himself Commandante Numero Uno, said in a telephone interview that he and his band were "prepared to stay here one or two months if necessary" to force the government to meet their demands.

These included $50 million, freedom for 311 political prisoners and safe conduct out of the country.

UN Commission Visits Iran's American Hostages

By The Associated Press

A leading Iranian official was quoted as saying the U.N. commission arrived at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran to meet the American hostages, who began their 118th day in captivity today.

work and freedom for the captives, who began their 118th day in captivity today.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Iran's all-powerful leader, has put the fate of the hostages in the hands of the Majlis, or Parliament, which is to be elected in balloting on March 14 and April 3.

Revolutionary Council secretary Ayatollah Mohammed Beheshti said Wednesday it would be several weeks after the elections before the legislature could take up the hostage question, indicating at least 10 more weeks of captivity.

A spokesman for the militants was quoted as saying even a decision by the legislature to free the Americans hinged on the militants' original demand that Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi be returned to Iran from exile in Panama.

The claim that the commission arrived was made by Hojatoleslam Hashemi Rafsanjani, a member of the ruling Revolutionary Council who also said a representative of President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr was with the panel, Tehran Radio said.

But one of the embassy militants reached by telephone by The Associated Press in Nicosia, Cyprus, denied the commission had arrived at the embassy, suggested another telephone call Saturday, then added:

"We don't right now have plans (for the commission) to visit the hostages. If we want them, we will announce it. The commission is here to investigate the shah's crimes and the U.S. crimes."

On Thursday, however, Tehran Radio reported that the embassy militants agreed to let the five-member commission and Bani-Sadr meet with the approximately 50 hostages.

The reason for allowing the commission to meet with the hostages was not immediately known. But Iran's revolutionary government has insisted there is no link between the commission's

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP)

— A state forest resources official says federal regulations may be needed to reduce pollution from wood-burning stoves if the nation moves significantly toward using wood for residential heating.

Larry B. McGee, wood energy project coordinator with the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said Thursday that one approach to the problem of air pollution may be to improve construction of wood-burning stoves.

The federal Environmental Protection Agency in the Research Triangle Park is conducting a $450,000 research program aimed at such problems, according to an EPA spokesman.

Two Men Rob Jamesville Bank

JAMESVILLE — A bank robbery in the small eastern Martin County town of Jamesville was reported to the Martin County Sheriff's office at 10:08 this morning.

The town of Jamesville does not have a police department, and Martin County Sheriff Raymond Rawl and his deputies were on the scene investigating.

First details were that two black males carrying handguns robbed the bank of an undetermined amount of money. Early reports also indicate that no injuries were involved in the robbery.

The two robbers were described as one wearing a blue suit and clean shaven; the other as bearded and wearing a tan suit. The duo reportedly made their escape in a blue Vega car which has been found parked on a Jamesville street.

A spokesman in the Sheriff's Office in Williamston said it was not known this morning whether the robbers made a further getaway in another vehicle, or if they might still be in the Jamesville area. Bloodhounds were taken to the scene for an attempt to pick up the trail of the robbers from the point where the getaway car was abandoned.

Kabul Combed By Execution Team

By BARRY SHLACHTER

Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India (AP)

— A newly-organized militia led by Afghanistan's deputy prime minister arrested and executed members of the minority Shiite Moslem sect following house-to-house searches in their neighborhoods in Kabul, Afghan and foreign sources said today.

The number of Shiites killed by Deputy Prime Minister Assadullah Sarwari's Revolutionary Guard was not known. But reports received in New Delhi from the Afghan capital cited many individual cases of one or two family members shot to death outside their houses.

One well-placed informant quoted a senior police official as saying nearly 2,000 persons have been jailed at Pul-i-Charkhi prison, east of Kabul, since last week's violent protests against the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan and the Marxist regime of President Babrak Karmal.

The Shiites, mainly members of the Hazara and Iranian-descended Qili bash tribes, were suspected of instigating the anti-communist street demonstrations, in which at least 300 persons were reported killed and an estimated 1,000 others injured.

Kabul was tense this morning following a night of sporadic machinegun fire, travelers arriving at Delhi Airport said. Afghan and Soviet troops were placed on alert because of a possible repetition of disturbances which followed Friday's prayers at the capital's mosques last week.

The Shiites may also have been singled out because of potential links with Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, a Shiite, who has voiced support for the Moslem rebels in Afghanistan, observers said.

The rebels Thursday promised new anti-Soviet

PILLOW STUFFING NEEDED

ECU students of the Wesley Foundation are renovating at as minimal a cost as possible the chapel in the Wesley Foundation building located at 501 E. Fifth Street here.

One of the changes, according to Beth Pierce, is the making of large pillows to replace the pews. "This will require lots of stuffing," she said. "So anyone who would like to donate old pillows, stockings, other fabrics or suitable materials will be greatly appreciated."

The materials may be left at the Wesley Foundation. Inquiries may be made by calling 758-2030, Ms. Pierce said.

Revenue Sharing Is Endorsed By City Council

The City Council has endorsed the continuation of general revenue sharing by approving a resolution in support of re-enactment of the general revenue sharing program.

City Manager Ed Wyatt pointed out that revenue sharing funds first began to flow to cities and towns in 1972 when Congress originated the new concept which allowed local flexibility in spending federal funds.

The program is scheduled to terminate on Sept. 30.

He said that at the program's inception, the funds had to be spent on capital expenditures, but after 1976, Congress allowed towns and cities to use those funds for virtually any municipal purpose.

Since 1972, the city manager said, Greenville has received approximately $5.17 million revenue sharing funds which has enabled the city to purchase over $850,000 in equipment, make over $1.8 million in capital improvements, and provide over $2.5 million in subsidy for the Sheppard Memorial Library, public transportation system, and Recreation and Parks Department.

Revenue sharing funds have been used for the municipal swimming pool and bathhouse, the fire-rescue substation on Memorial Drive, the Recreation-Library Center on Cedar Lane, and for resurfacing city streets.

Currently, according to Wyatt, revenue sharing funds represent approximately seven percent of the city budget.

Wyatt said that Congress is deliberating the fate of the program, especially in light of pressures to balance the federal budget, cut spending, and curb inflation.

The city manager said that the Council asks that citizens contact their congressmen and senators in support of revenue sharing.

According to Wyatt, the Council has committed itself to an all-out effort to campaign for the re-enactment of revenue sharing so that the city will have funds to continue these services next year.

"If this program is terminated, it will present a major crisis to our city in providing services," he added.

The North Carolina League of Municipalities, of which Greenville is a member, recently approved a resolution at its 70th annual convention, marking general revenue sharing as the League's top legislative priority for 1980. Wyatt said that Greenville joins 436 other North Carolina towns and cities in the re-enactment effort.

Coincidence

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Wayne County man whose two sons were killed in a car-train accident last week escaped injury Thursday when his borrowed vehicle was hit by a train in Goldsboro.

Raymond Russell, 59, of Dudley was en route to a garage to pick up the license plate off the car his sons were using when his station wagon was struck by a switching engine at a crossing on John Street. The accident occurred within 50 feet of the parking lot where the sons' car was stored.

Russell's station wagon was pushed sideways about 100 feet down the track. Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $1,000.

Russell's sons, Paul Ray, 17, and Wilbert, 18, and two other teen-agers were killed Friday night when their car was hit by a train at an unguarded crossing five miles from Goldsboro.

Their deaths have spurred a drive by Wayne County residents to have signals installed at more railroad crossings in the county.

More Testimony Heard In Drug Law Trial Here

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer

The trial of Douglas H. Ross, charged with drug law violations after about 4 tons of marijuana were confiscated by local, state and federal law enforcement officers at a mobile home located near his house last July, continued today in Pitt County Superior Court.

Testimony yesterday and this morning by federal Drug Enforcement Administration officers and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation, outlined how officers, watching a local motel from parked cars, flying in an airplane, and watching the house trailer on Ross' property from a wooded area, observed traffic moving to and from the mobile home and the motel for three days before the site was raided.

SBI agent Irbin Alcock said that on June 23, he and other officers were watching the trailer and saw five persons, including Ross' sister-in-law, Louise Johnston Whitehurst, unloading bales of marijuana from a truck and move them into the trailer.

He noted that after the truck was unloaded, officers moved in to arrest the suspects. The four men, he said, all from out-of-state, ran into the wooded area where they were taken into custody, while Ms. Whitehurst was taken into custody inside the trailer.

In addition to 7,700 pounds of marijuana found in the mobile home, two notebooks, listing bale numbers and the corresponding weights of the bales, were confiscated.

According to Alcock, several of the bales found in the trailer, were listed in the notebooks. He also said that notations in one of the books indicated that the wholesale price of the marijuana was $250 per pound.

At $250 per pound, the agent said the marijuana in the trailer would be worth approximately $1.9 million, while the retail value of the marijuana would be from $400 to $600 per pound, depending on the amount purchased.

Alcock said that when officers returned to the Ross premises about 6 p.m. that day, to deliver "an inventory of seized property," Ross went to the house trailer with officers and removed some tools, including an electric saw and sander, that had been in the trailer at the time of the raid.

Price Rising

Subscription rates for "The Daily Reflector" will increase from $3.50 to $4 per month beginning March 1.

Single copy prices will increase from 15 cents to 25 cents on weekdays and from 35 cents to 50 cents on Sundays.

The price increases have become necessary because of rapidly rising costs of newsprint, gasoline and other costs involved in producing and delivering a daily newspaper.

The new home delivery rate represents an increase of approximately two cents per issue.

A portion of the increase will go to the independent delivery people who daily deliver the paper.

Subscription rates have not been increased since Oct. 1, 1978. The last single copy weekday price change was in July, 1974 and the last Sunday single copy price change was made in October, 1978.

'Living Will' Asks for Death

By Abigail Van Buren

1980 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I don't get the newspaper regularly, but I heard you had something in your column about THE LIVING WILL. The way it was explained to me, that is exactly what I need to have peace of mind. I am 74 and so many of my friends (and two relatives in the last year) have died lingering deaths because nobody wanted to turn off the machines that kept them alive. There was so much suffering and needless expense for the patient and it was terribly hard on the loved ones.

Exactly what is THE LIVING WILL, and how do I get one? I happen to be Jewish. It is against my religion? Is it euthanasia or mercy killing?

READER

DEAR READER: THE LIVING WILL is a document stating that should you fall victim to a terminal illness from which there is no hope for your recovery, you instruct your physician not to prolong your life by artificial means, such as machines, tubes, pumps, etc.

Copies of this document may be given to your physician, clergyman, lawyer and to as many family members and friends as you desire. To sign such a document, you must be 18 or older and of sound mind. (If at any time you wish to revoke the document, you are free to do so.)

The Jewish view of THE LIVING WILL is as follows: It is not euthanasia or mercy killing! There is a clear distinction between actively killing a person and "allowing him to die."

According to Jewish law, when a person suffers irreversible brain damage and can no longer recite a "bracha"—a blessing to praise God—or perform a "mitzvah"—an act to help his fellowman—he is considered a vegetable and there is nothing to save. It is thus an act of compassion to spare the family the anguish and expense of artificially prolonging the breathing and heartbeat when death is inevitable.

THE LIVING WILL does not give anyone permission to end the life of another in a mercy-killing manner. It is simply a document that one signs, stating that he (or she) does not want to have his (or her) life prolonged artificially after the physician decides that there is no hope for recovery.

I have signed such a document. You may get one by writing to CONCERN FOR DYING, 250 West 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10019. The document is free, but please send a few dollars (it's tax deductible) for the cost of printing and mailing the document to you. I sent $10 for six documents and have given one to my physician, clergyman, lawyer and members of my family.

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: All those folks who write to ask if they should report suspected infidelities among their neighbors remind me of an incident which happened here in Minneapolis.

A husband occasionally jumped the marital fence and strayed into fresh pastures. His wife was tolerant of these actions because otherwise he was a kind, thoughtful and loving husband.

One day Mrs. Blabbermouth phoned the wife and said, "I think you should know that your husband was seen coming out of his secretary's apartment!"

The wife replied, "Don't be jealous, honey, he'll get around to you pretty soon."

Grand Jury Adjourned

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A federal grand jury investigating interstate prostitution and racketeering in Davidson County adjourned Wednesday without handing down indictments.

The grand jury heard a total of 11 witnesses this week. Its next regular meeting is scheduled for March 31.

The witnesses included Kenneth "Yank" Justice and Donald "Duck" Whitt, both of Davidson County.

Informed sources said Whitt is either an employee or former employee of the Trucker's Motel in Davidson County. They said Justice is leasing the facility to show X-rated movies.

FBI agents raided the Interstate 85 motel on Jan. 18 and confiscated evidence and issued subpoenas. Federal authorities say the motel may have served as a place of employment for prostitutes who travel a circuit of truck stops and massage parlors extending from Ohio to South Carolina.

There have been similar investigations during the past three years that have ended with the conviction of at least 13 persons in the Cincinnati-Covington, Ky., area and a Pittsylvania, Va., prosecutor, as well as sheriffs in Caswell and Wilson counties in North Carolina.

The grand jury also failed to return indictments in the probe of alleged payoffs to members of the Rockingham County sheriff's department. One witness was called in the case.

Life As It's Lived

Girls With Short Hair Are Still The Best Bet

By GAIL MICHAELS

The other day while I was rummaging through Meg's baby things in search of her immunization record, I found a lock of her hair. I can still remember how I sobbed when that delicate little curl was snipped unceremoniously from her head. But not for long. Now I look forward to Meg's haircuts almost as much as to her bedtime.

My reasons are as simple as laundry instructions. Short hair can be drip-dried. Peanut Butter and jelly, spaghetti, and Tootsie Roll can all be removed easily without a prewash. And chlorine can be rinsed from the hair of an avid swimmer before she has time to scream, "You're getting my face wet!"

Mothers of long-haired little girls may be at a loss to understand the utility of my approach, but then the mothers of long-haired little girls are incurable romantics. One I know even survived her child's self-applied Crisco permanent without calling a barber shop. Mothers like this are willing to wash, curl, and face a thatched roof every morning all in the interest of sugar 'n spice.

Unfortunately, Meg's got more than enough spice already. She bellows at the sight of a comb, thinks "no more tears" is an anagram for some hideous form of medieval torture, and gets heat prostration from the hair dryer. But she insists that she is ready to join the ranks of the beautiful.

No more will she be mistaken for a boy. No more will she be barred from that fascinating world of barrettes, ribbons, and plastic ponytail clips just because she doesn't have enough hair to hold them in. She is going to have curls.

I told her she was about as much chance for curls as Mister Rogers. She said there was no way I could tell until her hair was at least as long as his.

I told her that Maria on "Sesame Street" and Julie Andrews had short hair and no one ever mistook them for boys.

She countered with Sleeping Beauty, Snow White, and Miss Piggy and asked who Julie Andrews was.

I am not the only mother waging this battle. Every little girl in Meg's four-year-old class now has straggly hair. And the teacher, a grandmotherly type who seldom raises her voice, sounded the depths of our desperation when she suggested, "Get a steel bristled brush and quit using creme rinse. That's what I did with my daughter."

As quickly as I embraced this advice, I didn't realize just how much this issue bothered me until several weeks ago when Meg and I were discussing the sex of our unborn baby.

"If it's a girl," she said hopefully, "we can put her hair in a ponytail."

I've been praying for a boy ever since.

Offer Home Safety Class

Fifth and sixth grade students at Third Street School are taking part in an after-school program about safety in the home.

The four-week program is designed to give boys and girls, who may be caring for younger brothers and sisters — or just themselves — safety factors to help them react properly if faced with emergencies that call for quick thinking.

Program topics and those presenting them are:

— First aid — Dick Carney, Tar River Blood Center.

— Fire Prevention — Cynthia Conrad, Greenville Fire Department.

— Poison Proofing — Dr. Andrea Hunter, Toxicologist, ECU School of Medicine.

— Babysitting — Evelyn Spangler, Pitt Extension Service, and — Teacher Leader — Bedie Hester.

The program is a joint effort of the Third Street PTA, the Greenville Community Schools Program, and cooperating agencies.

Lead Poisoning Cases Due To Old Batteries

PEACOCKS, N.C. (AP) — Several members of a Columbus County family were being treated Thursday for lead poisoning after county officials found they had been burning old automotive batteries for heat.

State environmental officials inspected the home of Harvey Everett on Thursday after doctors found that a 3-year-old child living there was suffering from lead poisoning.

A total of 21 persons were living in the home. Seven had to be hospitalized while others were being treated at home.

Health officials say the poisonings resulted from the burning of old battery parts which Everett, 69, brought home. Everett works part time at a battery service company.

Members of the family said they had been burning batteries for heat since Christmas and did not know the practice could be dangerous.

Inspectors found traces of lead in walls, rugs, and dust at the house in the north Columbus County community. They advised the family to move out to avoid further exposure.

Several family members were staying at the house Thursday because there are no county facilities to handle them.

A spokesman for the state Division of Environmental Management in Wilmington said plans are being made to clean the house this weekend.

Lakisha Everette, 3, was in New Hanover Memorial Hospital suffering from seizures and possible brain damage. She was identified as Everett's great-granddaughter.

Six of the other children will spend this weekend in hospitals for treatments.

"This is the first case here of lead poisoning by inhalation," said Irene Young, a nurse with the county health department. She said officials are warning other residents of the dangers of burning batteries.

A local community action agency has replaced the Everett's woodstove, which was junked by health officials after the poisonings were found. Aid has been requested from state health officials.

An investigation is continuing.

Homemaker's Haven

By Sue B. May

Pitt Home Agent

When people consider renovating an old house, there are always questions to be answered; such as, "Is this house worth renovating?" Whether a house is worth rehabilitating can be determined only by systematically inspecting the house and comparing the necessary repairs with the value of the finished product. There are a number of key points to consider. The first thing most of us notice about a house is its appearance—outside and inside. As important as appearance is, we need to look beyond it answering the following questions. What kind of condition is it in? Is the foundation good? Is the house frame square and generally free from decay and insect damage? Is the house arranged for good livability? What might have to be done to bring it up to your standards?

Check the entire foundation for general condition. Watch for uneven settling which may distort the house frame or even pull it apart. A small amount of settling is not unusual, even in some newer structures, but the degree is important.

Many old houses have brick foundations. Check the masonry foundation for cracks and crumbling mortar, a common defect that can often be repaired. Extensive deteriorations may indicate the need for major repair or replacement.

Look for decay in any part of the house that is subject to prolonged wetting, such as wood close to the ground. Decay thrives in a mild temperature in wood that is wet.

Check openings for squareness by operating doors and windows to make sure they do not bind, but fit correctly. Windows may present a difficult problem in old wood-frame houses. Check the tightness of fit, and examine the sash and the sill for decay.

Examine the roof for sagging of the ridge, the rafters, and the sheathing. The most obvious defect to look for in chimneys is cracks in the masonry or loose mortar. Such cracks are usually the result of foundation settlement or the attachment of television antennas or other items that put undue stress on the chimney. These cracks are a particular hazard if the flue does not have a fireproof lining. If the house has a fireplace, check to see if it has an operating damper.

The value of the house being considered for reconditioning, and the convenience and pleasure of using it over many years, are strongly affected by the layout and appearance. Consider the adequacy of room size, the relationship of areas to each other, convenience, the pattern of traffic, and individual privacy.

A general rule is to avoid traffic through rooms. If this cannot be prevented, at least keep traffic at one side of a room rather than through the center.

Ideally, houses should have rooms arranged in three areas—the private or bedroom area, the work area of kitchen and utility rooms, and the relaxation area of dining and living rooms.

Most critical is the location of the kitchen in relation to other areas of the house. The kitchen should be directly accessible to the dining area as well as to the garage or driveway for ease in unloading groceries. If possible, traffic should not pass through the range-refrigerator-sink triangle.

Bedrooms should be accessible to a bathroom without going through another room. One of the basic rules of privacy is to avoid traffic through one bedroom to another. If this privacy is not presently provided, some changes in layout may be desirable.

Simplicity and unity are of major importance as far as appearance is concerned.

After you have completely examined the house for renovation, listed any repairs necessary, and considered the intangibles, evaluate your findings.

If the foundation and frame are in reasonable condition, and the repair and replacement items do not appear excessive, base a final decision on the following factors:

1. Cost—If the cost of buying and renovating the house does not exceed the fair market value of houses in the area, it is a sound investment. A general rule-of-thumb for a house presently owned is that the rehabilitation cost should not exceed two-thirds of the cost of a comparable new house.

2. Location—A particularly good location would be justification for spending more; a generally undesirable or deteriorating location would indicate that much less than two-thirds the cost of the new house should be spent.

3. Sentimental value—If there are sentimental attachments, the value of the renovated house must be decided by the individual concerned. Remember however, that neither the finance company nor a prospective buyer will allow anything for sentimental value.

Must Be Competitive

Apparently the Williamston Chamber of Commerce is leaving Operation Overcharge the organization formed to fight for lower electric rates for Northeastern North Carolina — Virginia Electric and Power Co. territory.

Williamston is a district headquarters for Vepco and perhaps it is understandable that its chamber might feel Operation Overcharge is going too far in urging that Vepco get out of the state.

Yet it is recognized everywhere in the northeast that we must fight for lower electric rates if we are to stay in a competitive position for economic growth.

We would not quarrel with the Williamston chamber's position on this matter. At the same time other communities in the northeast will undoubtedly find it necessary to stay active in the fight for lower electric rates.

None of us can expect to see energy costs as low as they were ten years ago. Nevertheless we can expect — and must have — rates that are competitive with other areas of North Carolina.

Open Season On Diplomats

Open season on foreign service continues with the capturing of the U. S. ambassador and other diplomats by fanatics in Colombia this week.

Fortunately the reaction of Colombian authorities was far different from that of Iran, and police swarmed around the building.

This latest incident is proof again that all nations must bring pressure to bear on Iran to free the American hostages. As long as such outrages are condoned, no diplomatic delegation from any nation is safe from the lunatic fringe.

THIS AFTERNOON

Stirred By Title

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Imagine, if you could, the public furor you'd hear in North Carolina if the General Assembly were to suggest that every county government set up an inter-agency coordinating council for the several existing social, health, and mental health programs available to needy citizens.

The veteran local government official chuckled when he posed such a proposition.

That thud you would probably hear would be the total lack of interest on the part of the public. In fact, this particular county commissioner adds, if you asked the average person what all that means, you'd get a snicker and a shake of the head.

But counties are being asked by legislators and by Gov. Jim Hunt to set up such coordinating committees, and several have done so. They call them "New Generation Councils."

That is where the program got into trouble, this savvy politician believes. "It gave people a title to focus on which means far more to them in their imagination than is envisioned in the program itself," the commissioner commented.

Secret

Why would this well-known county commissioner prefer not to be identified saying these things? Because his county has an inter-agency coordinating committee which has been at work for quite some time. But they don't call it a "New Generation Council". There has been no public outcry against the coordinating committee such as there has been in those counties in which local governing boards are considering establishing a "New Generation Council".

What is an inter-agency coordinating committee? Nothing more than a group of specialists — whether agency employees or plain citizens — who try to keep track of what programs are available from the multitude

BILL NOBLITT

Elsewhere, the New Generation feud continues. In at least one county (Moore) there is strong evidence that the issue will dramatically affect the outcome of this year's election of legislators and the governor. A conservative groundswell undergirded by New Generation opposition has already disrupted the Young Democrats Club in Moore County, and some observers expect it to deliver that county to the Republicans in 1980.

Health

Opposition in the New Generation battle also points to a Child Health Care Plan produced by a committee involving the state's medical and pediatric groups, educators, legislators, local health officials and the state Department of Human Resources.

This opposition holds a touch of irony for the authors, because the central theme of the health plan is for local planning groups to find out what the problems and shortfalls are in their own communities, and to take stock of what resources — whether public or private — are available to meet those local needs.

For those who have railed against standards and guidelines imposed from Washington or Raleigh, here was a test whether local communities could handle it: "...needs and feasible solutions to problems vary greatly from county to county. A plan to meet the needs ... can best be met through local efforts— efforts tailored to fit the particular locale and developed with full understanding of the area's unique resources, problems and needs." the preamble to the health plan points out.

Time Of Flu-Dropping

WASHINGTON — This is the time of year for flu dropping. Since nearly everyone has had the flu, the object of the game is to impress on the other person that your flu was worse than theirs.

The opening:
"I had the flu in October. I think I was the first one in Silver Spring to get it."

The parry:
"Was it the Virus B Singapore strain, or last year's Hong Kong variety?"
"My doctor thinks the bug came from Kuala Lumpur via the Khyber Pass."

The thrust:
"Oh, yes my cleaning woman had that. She claims to have been in bed for two days, but it wouldn't surprise me if she just wanted some time off."

The art of flu dropping is becoming very sophisticated. The scoring depends on:

- 1 — How one contracted it.
- 2 — The length of time one had it.
- 3 — The amount of suffering involved (having had intestinal flu as opposed to the chest kind is worth more points).

Let us deal with some concrete illustrations.

"I've had the flu before but this little devil stays on and on. It's been six weeks now." (5 points)

"My brother had it for three months. He used up 33 boxes of Kleenex." (8 points)

"I was so sick I couldn't even go to the Pavarotti recital." (10 points)

ART BUCHWALD

"I had to cancel a trip to Hawaii. (10 points) "Then my wife got it and we gave up our tickets to the Super Bowl." (10 points)

"I've never been sick in my life. (2 points) "But I went to the Jockey Club for dinner. Elizabeth Taylor and John Warner were at the next table, and he was telling her to keep her mouth shut when he was making a political speech, and she was coughing and sneezing, and I swear I must have got the bug from her." (15 points)

"I think I got mine on the Concorde. I was seated next to Bo Derek and she kept talking to me the whole trip. Well, a week later Rona Barrett revealed on the Good Morning, America show that Bo had the flu, and I put two and two together." (12 points)

"What did your doctor say?"

"He said on the phone to stay in bed and drink plenty of fluids and take aspirin." (No points)

"Mine came to the house and stayed for 15 minutes. he even took out his stethoscope and listened to my chest." (20 points)

"What did he tell you to do?"

"Stay in bed, drink plenty of liquids and take aspirin."

"What did you say to him?"

"I said I wanted a second opinion." (Game's over)

40 Years Ago Today

Friday, February 29, 1940
The European war is six months old tomorrow and is tame by comparison with the World War at this stage.

Great Britain, France, and Germany know they are in a serious war, but they have not yet had to go through what they did in the first six months of the World War.

Available statistics give the following picture of the European war to date.

The French say allied casualties on land total 1,500 killed and 7,500 wounded, with German casualties "slightly higher;" the British list army casualties to December 31 as 40 killed and wounded and 720 dead of accidents and disease.

Registration Is Still Low

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — The level of voter registration at this time suggests that voter turnout next November may be as low as it was in the 1976 presidential election, when only 54.4 percent of the electorate went to the polls.

In surveys taken since the beginning of the year, 70 percent of adults interviewed indicate they are registered to vote or that the states in which they live do not require registration. The percentage recorded in surveys in early 1976 was virtually the same, 69 percent.

Thus, despite the attention which has been focused on the low turnout in elections in the U.S., current survey evidence indicates that little progress is being made to induce adults to meet the first requirement for voting — namely, to register in their local election district.

Least likely to have registered to vote are 18- to 24-year-olds, only 44 percent of whom say their names are on the registration books in the communities where they live. On the other hand, 85 percent of those who are 50 years of age or older say they are registered.

Survey findings show that the profile of persons most likely to vote are individuals who have attended college, those 50 or older, those with family incomes of $20,000 or more and those from families in which the chief wage earner works in business or the professions. Those least likely to vote are blacks living in the South, persons 18 to 24 years of age and persons with family incomes of less than $10,000 per year.

Although Democrats now enjoy a two and one-half-to-one numerical superiority over Republicans, it is politically significant that proportionately more Republicans (81 percent) than Democrats (69 percent) say they are registered to vote.

Based on past voting behavior, some 80 percent to 85 percent of those who are registered will actually cast their ballots, which means that if the 1980 presidential election were being held today, about 55 percent of the electorate could be expected to vote — virtually the same as the low turnout recorded in the 1976 presidential election.

Following is the question asked to determine voter registration:

"Is your name now recorded in the registration book of the precinct or election district where you now live?"

And here is a profile of registered voters by key population groups:

Strength For Today

BRICKLAYING

An old man was recently confined to bed by a severe illness. This brought about a profound melancholy on his part and a conviction that his life had been a failure. "How little I have accomplished," he complained. "What have I ever done that can be called worthwhile?"

Actually, this old man had done a good many things, as we all have. We have all done something in life in which we can take a good deal of satisfaction. Human life is a vast enterprise.

Most of us can do nothing but lay a few bricks, and then pass on. Someday a great superstructure will tower into the heavens and our few bricks will be in that resplendent wall of glory. But even the greatest saints and world leaders will have laid but few.

Everyone of us has significance today. Even if we think that we may be doing nothing of importance, unconsciously and invisibly we may be doing a great deal.

Risk In Investments Growing

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — As inflation devours assets, and high interest rates make it impossible to replace them, fewer sound investments can be found. Many people, in fact, say they can find none.

Eliminated from consideration are most savings instruments. Relatively riskless, to be sure, they also are very unprofitable, providing returns ranging downward from under 15 percent to 5.25 percent.

If inflation were 2 percent a year, an investor could eke out a tiny reward before taxes. But the annualized inflation rate in January was 18 percent, a rate that could grow appreciably in the next few months.

Housing prices may have peaked for the time being, frustrating the hopes of thousands of investors. Simultaneously, fuel bills on rental properties have put pressure on operating profits.

Seeking returns greater than the inflation rate, millions of people have returned to the stock market, theorizing that stocks — often selling below book value — have the potential to move up sharply.

Some have. Low-priced over-the-counter stocks — those not listed on major exchanges — have sometimes risen 50 percent in a single day. And some oil stocks have doubled in the past year or so.

In turning to such investments, however, individuals usually incur greater risk than in savings. Some low-priced stocks have fallen almost as spectacularly as they rose, stranding those who rode them.

The same quest has forced people who ordinarily dealt only with banks to buy metals, diamonds and commodities. Again, the risk-reward ratio prevails; what floated like air sometimes falls like lead.

Depending upon the investment, certain expenses must be subtracted from the gains: brokerage fees, storage fees, insurance, and inevitably, taxes. As a result, net profit may barely resemble gross.

In speaking with people you quickly detect that hope is mixed with desperation, and that desperation shades into despair. Helplessness, an unAmerican trait, is conceded by President Carter.

Speaking to editors this week, Carter said, "It would be misleading for me to tell any of you there is a solution to it." We are caught, he said, "in circumstances over which we have very little control."

Many people dispute that view, noting that even with energy prices eliminated from the consumer price index the nation still has double-digit inflation. Inflation, they maintain, is restrainable.

But, with the President confirming their own feelings of inadequacy, investors don't feel so good these days. They search for ways to preserve their assets, but instead of security they find greater risks.

With inflation and interest rates stalking investors like an invading army, there are few places to hide. It is pervasive, relentless and indiscriminate, and it is rushing ahead almost unchecked.

No Suspect In Family Killing

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Investigators had no suspect, few new details and another death to consider in the slaying of a family that once battled the late Rev. Jim Jones and his Peoples Temple.

Daphne Mills, 15, shot twice in the head, was pronounced dead Thursday, two days after her parents, Al and Jeannie Mills, were found dead in the family home.

Berkeley police investigators said they had no suspects in the shootings of the three.

Police Lt. Jim Polk said other defectors from the Peoples Temple have called police to

Prices Race Wage Rates

ATLANTA (AP) — Wages of Southern workers rose in 1979, but the cost of consumer goods rose at a faster rate, the U.S. Department of Labor reported.

The average paycheck of private, nonfarm workers in the South showed an 8.5 percent increase during the year, while consumer prices rose 12.8 percent, said Donald M. Cruse, regional commissioner of the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Prices rose 9.8 percent in 1978 and wages were up 9.3 percent, Cruse said Thursday.

The South's yearly wage increase was slightly behind the national rate of 8.7 percent, but Southern wages grew 2.4 percent in the last quarter of 1979, equal to the nation as a whole, Cruse said.

Statistics from Cruse's office cover Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, the District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and West Virginia.

The average wages of Southern blue collar workers were up 8.9 percent for the year, compared with 8.2 percent for white collar salaries, Cruse said.

Wages in non-manufacturing industries rose 8.6 percent in 1979, while workers in manufacturing jobs saw their wages rise by 8.5 percent, Cruse said.

Find No Motive For Slaying

CINCINNATI (AP) — Police say a man who is charged with commandeering a Greyhound bus and killing one of six passengers during a 90-minute ordeal has revealed no motive for the slaying.

Walter Atkins, 32, of St. Louis was charged Thursday with aggravated murder and kidnapping, one day after the incident in which Joseph Duziak, 69, of suburban Cleveland was killed.

Witnesses told police Atkins boarded the bus at the Cincinnati Greyhound terminal, spied Duziak wearing a suit, called him a member of the establishment, shot him and pushed him into the restroom where he died.

South's Faculty Closing Gap

ATLANTA (AP) — Southern college professors are still paid less than their counterparts in other regions, but the gap has been closing during the past decade, according to an educational agency.

the spirits to return him to health.

Doctors say Petite, of Rosemount, Minn., likely will die within weeks. After twice undergoing chemotherapy at University of Minnesota Hospitals, he has been told he won't survive another treatment.

Petite, a 44-year-old Chippewa Indian, felt his only hope lay in Chipps, 22, the fourth generation medicine man in his family. Chipps says that spirits speak through him, and in this ceremony they invest him with the power to heal.

The holy man is serving the last year of a three-year sentence in a federal prison in Wisconsin for a non-fatal shooting that occurred when he was off duty as a police officer on the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota.

Petite and his lawyer pleaded with prison authorities — and enlisted the help of the vice president's office — to get Chipps freed long enough to administer the religious ceremony.

Mondale's lawyer contacted the U.S. Justice Department, which in turn contacted the Federal Bureau of Prisons, which in turn urged the prison to try to accommodate Petite's request.

Accompanied by a prison guard, Chipps arrived Wednesday afternoon. He was due back at the federal correctional institution at Oxford, Wis., by midnight Thursday and left the rite at about 11 p.m.

Petite had built a sweat lodge outdoors on the reservation for the healing ceremonies. The lodge, used for purification pur-

Leap Year

If you had been born on this date 12 years ago, today would be your third birthday. How is that possible? It's because today's date, February 29, occurs only once every four years. Our calendar years are usually 365 days long. But it actually takes the Earth 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes and 46 seconds to make a complete revolution around the sun. To make up this difference in time, an extra day is added to the calendar every four years. A 366-day year, or leap year, occurs only in years that can be divided evenly by four. 1980 is a leap year. Its extra day is today, February 29.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the name of the calendar used in most of the world today?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — George Bush defeated Ronald Reagan in the Iowa Caucus voting.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected in the forecast period until Saturday morning for most of the Pacific coast. Rain is also due in the central and eastern Gulf, changing to snow over Oklahoma and western Kansas. Snow flurries are expected for the Northeast. Most of the country is expected to be cold. (AP Laserphoto Map)

With several snows already to winter's credit, there is a chance for more over inland areas of North Carolina Saturday.

High pressure over south-central Canada will be the controlling influence over the state's weather for the next few days. This system will produce strong northerly winds, which will add to the discomfort of falling temperatures along with the chance of some more snow.

Today's forecast called for partly cloudy in the mountains, mostly sunny elsewhere and generally windy and colder. High temperatures for the day were expected to get no higher than the 20s in the northwest mountains and range in the 30s and 40s elsewhere.

The prospect is for fair and continued cold tonight with lows dropping mostly to the teens and 20s.

On Saturday, the strong northerly winds and moisture moving into the state from the southwest will bring increasing cloudiness and the chance of snow over inland areas.

After a cold Thursday morning temperatures warmed considerably in the afternoon. Readings ranged up to the 60s in many areas and Charlotte warmed to a day's high of 73 degrees.

Sunday will be fair and cold with precipitation ending in the east.

Bond Market Turmoil Delaying Home Loans

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Turmoil in national bond markets has held up a program that would make $100 million in home loans available to lower-income North Carolina families, a state official said Thursday.

W.C. Currin, director of the N.C. Housing Finance Agency, said the agency had planned to sell $100 million in revenue bonds last Friday. The money would fund mortgage loans to low-and middle-income families in the state.

But, Currin said, soaring interest rates have lowered the demand for the state's bonds, which are tax-free and carry low interest rates. He said the agency temporarily postponed the sale.

Currin would not say how much the state had expected to pay for its issue. Other cities and states prepared bond issues earlier this year expecting to pay about 6 percent to investors. As of last week, they would have had to pay up to 9 percent or more for the funds to compete with corporations that must pay up to 15½ percent on their bonds.

He said he did not know when the state would try to sell the bonds.

The $100-million issue is the largest undertaken by the state agency, and the money would be a substantial portion of the total mortgage lending in the state this year.

Loans backed by the Housing Finance Agency are made at interest rates lower than for conventional loans and with fewer interest percentage points than loans approved by the federal Veterans Administration or Federal Housing Administration.

Currin said mortgages made with the agency's funds usually are made at an interest rate 1 percent above the rate paid on the bonds used to raise the money. He said the difference pays for servicing of the mortgage and part of the operation of the state agency.

The loans would be restricted to families with less than $15,000 in total assets and with an annual income of $15,000 or less in rural areas and $17,400 or less in urban areas.

The agency contracts with savings and loan associations and other mortgage lenders to make the money available for home mortgages to lower-income families.

Denies Plea Rejoin SHP

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge has denied a request by former North Carolina Highway Patrolman Robert P. Williams to rejoin the patrol.

Williams was dismissed after a 1976 incident in which an abducted Virginia trooper was killed.

Judge Maurice Braswell, on Wednesday denied Williams' request, upholding the actions of the patrol and the State Personnel Commission.

The seven-year veteran of the patrol was dismissed in December 1976, but he was reinstated temporarily in 1977 by a court order. He was dismissed in June 1977.

The patrol dismissed Williams, 34, after a Granville County roadblock on Interstate 85 on Nov. 15, 1976. On that morning, a Virginia state police car carrying Trooper Garland Fisher and his kidnapper, Reuben Sonny Conley, was stopped. Conley had abducted Fisher in Virginia and ordered him to drive to Atlanta.

Williams fired a blast of buckshot into the front of the windshield when he confronted the car and later fired three more shots into the car. Some of the pellets struck Fisher, but none were fatal.

Schedule Refueling Of TVA's Nuclear Reactor

of a man's arm, Thursday in Tehran. The commission met with hundreds of alleged victims of the Shah's regime and examined cases of obvious mutilation. (AP Laserphoto)

By JOHN NOLAN
Associated Press Writer
CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Nuclear fuel loading begins Saturday at the Sequoyah Unit 1 reactor, the first in the nation to be licensed since the milestone Three Mile Island accident in 1979.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission set the stage Thursday in Washington, ending an 11-month licensing moratorium after Three Mile Island. The five commissioners voted unanimously to grant the Tennessee Valley Authority a restricted license allowing fuel loading and reactor testing at what is called the zero-power level.

The NRC also authorized its staff to decide when to let operators take the reactor up to five percent of capacity for testing. But the commissioners held back on deciding when to allow full-power operation, saying that TVA must answer other questions first.

Anticipating the license, employees began site preparations at the years-late $1.46 billion plant, nearly 20 miles north of downtown Chattanooga. The work included lifting a steel lid off a dry pool where the atomic fuel rod bundles are stored in an auxiliary building next to the reactor containment structure.

TVA Chairman S. David Freeman, who chafed last week at what he called the NRC's slowness in considering the license, said Thursday the federal utility now has a responsibility to operate the plant safely.

"I am gratified that this matter has been finally cleared up and that TVA's initiative has resulted in restarting the licensing process nationally," he said, speaking from San Francisco before leaving on a three-week tour of China.

In Knoxville, TVA Director Bob Clement said, "We have worked hard to make this plant as safe as it can be. I think the future will show that today was a milestone in our efforts to hold the line on the cost of electricity for our ratepayers."

TVA officials fixed Saturday afternoon as the time when a crane will begin lowering the fuel-rod bundles, containing uranium pellets, into the steel reactor vessel. The utility invited reporters and photographers for Saturday's event and said the loading process will take nearly a week.

TVA said it dispatched an employee today to the NRC's Washington office with a $1,024,000 check to pay for and pick up the license.

At zero-power operation, the atom-splitting reaction within the vessel will be self-sustaining but will not produce enough heat to generate electricity.

The reactor and a second to be completed later this year can generate 1.2 million kilowatts each for TVA's seven-state power network.

Sequoyah has been the site of numerous anti-nuclear demonstrations in recent months. Nuclear energy opponents from around the Southeast plan a rally at its gates March 29, a year and a day after Three Mile Island suffered the worst accident involving a commercial generating reactor in the United States. The accident damaged the reactor and resulted in the release of radiation into the atmosphere.

Sequoyah, nearly $1 billion over its original budget, was to have been ready for operation in 1973. But design changes, delays in receiving equipment and increasingly stringent environmental and safety regulations slowed the construction.

TVA had been prepared to load fuel since last November and asked the NRC on Dec. 3 for permission to test the reactor. But the NRC said it would not consider licensing any new reactors until it finished studying two investigations of the Three Mile Island accident on March 28, 1979.

TVA General Manager William Willis, speaking Thursday in Chattanooga before engineers and power distributors, said he thinks the NRC's stepped-up safety requirements will strengthen the nuclear industry.

"Even though this thing has been an albatross around our necks for a number of years," he said, referring to Sequoyah, "I'm pleased with what's been done and I'm pleased with Sequoyah."

"The production of nuclear energy is an inherently dangerous technology, like many others, and we can make it safer. Sequoyah will be a safer operation as a result of the new regulations and the reviews, Willis said.

Bond For Crew

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A bond of $75,000 was set Thursday for each of the 10 crewmen arrested earlier this week in connection with a drug smuggling operation.

A probable cause hearing in the case was scheduled for March 6.

The American and nine South American crew members are charged with conspiracy to smuggle marijuana into the United States.

The charges are the result of the seizure of the freighter, the Jell II, off the North Carolina coast. U.S. Customs authorities said the ship may have supplied marijuana to at least two fishing boats to be smuggled into the state.

Seven other men were arrested Monday after two small boats were seized near Southport. Six of the seven were released from New Hanover County Jail on Thursday under reduced bonds of $15,000.

Customs agent Gil Payette said just more than nine tons of marijuana were confiscated on the three vessels.

Cite Decline In Flu's Toll

ATLANTA (AP) — Deaths caused by influenza and pneumonia remained at epidemic proportions in the United States for the fifth consecutive week, although a marked decline was noticeable, the national Center for Disease Control reported today.

Widespread Influenza B was reported in nine states, down from the peak of 16 states reported last week.

The number of excess deaths reported from 117 cities was about 120 for the week ending Feb. 23, compared with an expected number of about 515 deaths, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

Widespread influenza outbreaks are described by CDC statisticians as those which occur in counties where more than half of a state's population lives.

States with widespread outbreaks include Connecticut, Iowa, Maine, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, Oregon, Rhode Island and South Dakota.

Lesser outbreaks have been reported in California, Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, New York, Pennsylvania, Texas and Utah.

The CDC said most of the excessive deaths involve persons 65 and older in the New England, East North Central and West North Central regions.

FEAR 'FALSE CHARGES'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, and Gus Speth, chairman of the President's Council on Environmental Quality, warn that environmental protection laws are being threatened by false charges that they regulate too much.

Judge Suspends N.C. Sheriff

PLYMOUTH, N.C. (AP) — he had just "committed a homicide."

Griffin also charged that: —One prisoner was allowed to go to local department and grocery stores while he was supposed to be serving a sentence in the county jail.

—Sawyer refused to serve civil papers.

—Sawyer got wife to serve a civil document on a woman.

—One prisoner was allowed to operate a radio in the sheriff's office.

—Sawyer illegally issued a pistol permit to his son-in-law.

—The sheriff's office refused to investigate a call about a theft in progress.

Walter Peel, chief deputy, automatically assumed the position of interim sheriff. County commissioners would select a replacement if Sawyer is removed after the second hearing.

The alleged breaches included failure by the sheriff's office to respond to a telephone call last week from a man who said

Peking Posthumously Okays Mao's Old Foe

By JOHN RODERICK
AP Special Correspondent
PEKING (AP) — The Chinese Communist Party, in a proof that the era of Mao Tse-tung has ended, today posthumously rehabilitated his arch-enemy, former chief of state Liu Shao-chi, and dismissed four surviving followers of the "Great Helmsman" from their party posts.

In a resounding political victory for Senior Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping, a two-time victim of the Maoist era, the party Central Committee raised two of Deng's disciples to the Standing Committee of the Politburo and revived the party Secretariat with one of them at its head.

It also followed Deng's lead and recommended the abolition of "Democracy Walls" all over China, ending a brief period of free expression that he feared might cripple the country's march toward modernization.

The committee said experience had shown that speaking out freely, airing views fully, holding great debates and putting up posters — all guaranteed by the constitution — "hampered the people in the normal exercise of their democratic rights."

It proposed the deletion of the constitutional article containing these guarantees and its replacement by one that would read: "Citizens enjoy freedom of speech, correspondence, the press, assembly, association, procession, demonstration and the freedom to strike."

The restoration of the good name of Liu, who died in 1969 after having been disgraced and humiliated, was in a sense a vindication of Deng himself.

As Liu's chief lieutenant, Deng, always a critic of the late Mao's grandiose ideology, was purged during the Mao-inspired Cultural Revolution, and was driven from office a second time by Mao's wife, Chiang Ching, in 1976.

The party's central discipline commission concluded, after a year's investigation, that Liu and other veteran Communists were the victims of "the biggest frame-up our party has ever known in its history."

Liu "made indelible contributions to China's new democratic revolution and socialist revolution and construction," the commission said.

Firefighters Staying Out

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago's striking firefighters considered a city amnesty offer designed to end a 16-day walkout — and stayed home.

"I really tried guys. I really tried," Lt. Robert McKay told some 30 pickets Thursday as he became the only striker to report to the Fire Department gymnasium by 8 p.m. to take advantage of the offer union officials labeled a "union-busting tactic."

Fire Commissioner Richard Albrecht had set the deadline on the amnesty terms and warned strikers the city would bring disciplinary charges against those who remained off the job.

McKay arrived at the gymnasium with his wife, a deputy commissioner with the Department of Neighborhoods, signed the offer and left, followed later by 10 cars of officials who had come to sign in strikers.

Other firefighters who went inside to examine the offer said it had two shortcomings: It was signed only by Albrecht, who they say will be fired soon, and it did not guarantee amnesty for striking battalion chiefs.

Earlier, Lt. Tom O'Connell, a spokesman for the department, said those who returned by the deadline would face no disciplinary action, but would lose pay for each day that they did not report. He said Albrecht emphasized it would be the first and only such offer.

William Kugelman, Chicago Fire Fighters Union strike chairman, said, "It's an attempt to bust the union clear and simple. This thing here is just more bunk. I don't think it will be successful."

Mayor Jane Byrne refused to comment on the proposal.

Drowned During Escape Attempt

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Cherry Hospital authorities say a 19-year-old Wilmington woman drowned Wednesday in the Little River during an apparent escape attempt.

A hospital spokesman said Amy Susan Morgan, a patient in the facility's behavioral modification unit, walked off the ward about 3:30 p.m.

The spokesman said Ms. Morgan asked a fisherman to take her to Goldsboro and, when a hospital security car drove up, she jumped into the river. Ms. Morgan was swept over a small dam into turbulent water.

Soil Erosion In Piedmont Is Up

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Soil erosion has intensified in recent years in some parts of North Carolina, especially the Piedmont, said Jesse Hicks, the Soil Conservation Service's conservationist for the state.

Hicks made the statement Thursday at a press briefing. Federal officials conducted a public hearing Thursday on proposed changes in water and soil conservation practices for the coming five years.

The hearing was designed to solicit public comment on the proposals. Under the 1977 Resources Conservation Act, such hearings will be conducted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture every five years.

Beefalo, An Economical Source For Good Meat

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
CLARKSVILLE, N.J. (AP) — They graze in a pasture alongside a shopping center parking lot. Shoppers stop and stare.

A cattle ranch in the nation's most densely populated state is an unlikely sight to begin with, so what are those critters doing here, and, in fact, what on earth are they?

They are beefalo. They are a strange cross between a wild buffalo and a tame cow. They belong to Joe Russo.

Joe Russo is a strange cross between a cattleman and a cheerleader on behalf of the beefalo. To hear him tell it, the shaggy-haired beefalo will revolutionize the meat industry.

"Beefalo don't require much grain. They thrive on grass, hay, roughage. They grow fast, so they're ready for market quicker. The calves are smaller at birth, so live births are more likely. They are hardier, like buffalo, and can endure severe weather.

"What it adds up to is cheaper and better meat, besides freeing tons of grain for human consumption. To me, that makes beefalo a good idea. Good ideas usually win out."

Russo isn't the only one with a big stake in beefalo steak. Six years ago a Canadian consortium paid $2.5 million for a purebred beefalo bull. According to its seller, that was more than five times the highest amount ever paid for a farm animal.

The beefalo is the result of 16 years of breeding experiments by a Californian named D.C. Basalo, who sold that expensive bull.

Cattlemen had tried for a century to combine the best rugged traits of the wild American bison with the best traits of the pampered domestic breeds of cattle.

They met with great unsucccess — scrawny, weird-looking offspring, usually sterile — until, in 1967, Basalo found the right combination in a creature that is only three-eighths bison.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture, recognizing the hybrid as a new breed, gave it a formal name that sounds like something Christopher Robin found at the zoo: a Basalo Beefalo.

Joe Russo knew nothing of those experiments. At the time, he was a young college graduate, a bank teller, a former 4-H Club member, dating a young woman named Phyllis Vaccaro. He took up with Phyllis partly because she lived on a farm and he enjoyed hanging around.

"My grandfather," he said, "learned farming in Italy. He could produce more on one acre than most farmers could on ten. He had chickens, pigs, rabbits, grapes, a big garden, everything except a cow. All my life, I wanted a cow.

"One day, in 1976, Phyllis's mother saw a story in a magazine about a beefalo. She said, 'If a beefalo is all they say it is, maybe that's what you ought to buy.'"

Joe threw in with his wife's father and uncle, Tony and John Vaccaro, and got into the beefalo business. Their herd now numbers about 210 head, and they are constantly selling to new beefalo enthusiasts as the breed expands nationwide.

D-Nite Is For Consolation

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Virginia Tech students who are just getting by in class don't have any trouble passing the bar.

Anyone who gets a D on a test can get a free drink in the Ooh La La Lounge at The Possibility restaurant here.

For three weeks, the bar has sponsored a "D-nite" on Tuesdays so D students can drown their sorrows.

"We wanted the student to use the grade as a consolation and not as a reward," said Garth Larcen, manager of the bar.

"A D student feels like there is nothing for him. This is to let him know that there is something."

One student called the bar and said he failed a test. Could he get a free drink? Nope, said the bartender, you have to study a little more.

Any D grade, even if it's five years old, will merit a free drink, Larcen said.

Average Worker Again Lost Ground To Inflation

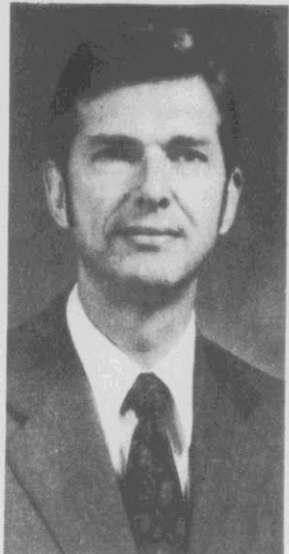

Griffin Named To Bank Board

Robert S. Griffin has been elected to serve on Planters National Bank's Greenville Board of Managers, it was announced jointly by Douglas Starr, senior vice president and city executive, and Eddie Smith Jr., chairman of the board.

Griffin is currently manager of the Procter & Gamble plant in Greenville. A graduate of Rice University, he has been associated with P & G since 1961.

The new board member is executive vice chairman of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, as well as president of the 1979-80 United Way.

Griffin is a commissioner of the Pitt County Industrial Development Commission and the Greenville Redevelopment Commission. He serves on the board of directors of the Rotary Club here, is a member of the East Carolina University Foundation, and serves on various boards and committees for his church, Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church. PNB has 40 branches in 18 North Carolina cities.

By OWEN ULLMANN
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The average working American lost ground to inflation for a second straight year in 1979 despite a record 8.7 percent rise in wages, new government figures show.

The Labor Department reported Thursday that the annual rise in base wage and salary rates of privately employed workers last year was the highest since the government first developed its Employment Cost Index in 1975.

But the 8.7 percent rise in wage rates was more than eaten up by a 13.3 percent rise in consumer prices during 1979, resulting in a net decline in purchasing power.

The average wage-earner's purchasing power also declined in 1978, when consumer prices rose 9 percent while wage and salary rates advanced 7.7 percent.

According to the Employment Cost Index, wage rates rose 7 percent in 1977 and 7.2 percent in 1976. Consumer prices, by comparison, rose 6.8 percent in 1977 and 4.8 percent in 1976.

The index, based on a survey of the estimated 65 million privately employed workers in non-farm industries, measures changes in base wages only and does not count increases from overtime pay or fringe benefits.

The average wage increase for 1979 was well above the voluntary 7 percent ceiling set by President Carter as part of his anti-inflation program.

But administration officials contend the increase in wages was modest relative to the rise in inflation and that wages would have climbed even higher had there been no guidelines.

Carter is expected to replace the 7 percent ceiling this year with a guideline range of 7.5 percent to 9.5 percent proposed by an advisory committee composed of labor, business and public representatives.

The Labor Department said the jump in wage rates in 1979 was spurred by a record 2.4 percent increase for the year's last quarter. Inflation advanced even faster, however, with consumer prices jumping 3.2 percent during the period.

The previous record increase in wage rates for a single quarter was 2.1 percent, set during the second quarter of 1978 and the third quarter of 1979.

For the year, wages rose 8.6 percent for white-collar workers, ranging from a low of 7.4 percent for managers and administrators to 9.4 percent for clerical workers. Wages rose 9 percent for blue-collar workers and 7.2 percent for service employees.

Wages were up 8.6 percent in manufacturing; 7.2 percent in construction; 9.4 percent in transportation and utilities; 7.9 percent in wholesale and retail trade; 13.2 percent in finance, insurance and real estate, and 8.5 percent in service industries.

By region, wages were up 7.3 percent in the Northeast, 8.5 percent in the South and West, and 9.4 percent in the Midwest.

Wages rose 9 percent for unionized workers and 8.5 percent for non-union workers, the government said.

'Energy Checks' Unauthorized

Alton E. Warren, chief building official of the city's Inspections Department, reported the department has been warned that there have been several cases of unauthorized energy inspections in the state, with fines levied on the spot.

degrees. Hot water temperatures may not exceed 105 degrees, he reported.

Warren urged the public to support the energy program and to be alert to possible unauthorized energy inspections.

Warren said that he and Dennis Tripp are the only two authorized energy inspectors for the Pitt County area and both are required to present positive identification prior to making inspections of non-residential structures.

Warren, noting that no unauthorized inspections have been reported in Greenville, explained that he and Tripp levy no fines following their inspections. Violation reports are sent to Raleigh to the State Energy Division of the N.C. Department of Commerce and the determination of fines is ultimately made by federal officials.

According to the building official, all non-residential buildings may be heated no higher than 65 degrees and cooled no lower than 78

Grants Permits For Soliciting

City Manager Ed Wyatt announced the approval of three requests for solicitation permits in Greenville.

Wyatt said the requests were submitted by: Phi Sigma Pi national honor fraternity for permission to conduct a door-to-door solicitation on March 1 in order to raise money for the Richard Todd Scholarship Fund;

The League of Women Voters for permission to conduct a merchant solicitation from March 11-30 in order to raise funds for the League; and by Century 21 Lanco Realty for permission to conduct a door-to-door and sidewalk solicitation from Feb. 22 through March 22 to raise funds for the Easter Seals.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market edged upward today, bidding to recover some of its recent losses.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.36 to 855.80 in the first half hour.

Gainers outnumbered losers by a small margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

In the news, the government reported that the index of leading economic indicators dropped 0.7 percent in January, for its fourth straight monthly decline.

Analysts saw that as a tentative signal that some slowing of the economy was in the offing, although the experts are still widely divided about the chances of a recession and its prospective timing.

Several large banks, meanwhile, raised their prime lending rates to a record 16 1/2 percent. The increase in the basic charge on blue chip loans had been expected in view of recent rises in other interest rates.

Today's early prices included Texaco, up 1/8 at 40 1/2, Asarco, up 1/8 at 54 1/2, and General Motors, down 1/8 at 50.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average slipped .68 to 854.44.

demonstrations today, but some Western diplomats were skeptical the guerrillas could mount another citywide offensive so soon after last week's street battles.

The Afghan government blamed the fighting, which began Friday and continued through Saturday on "imperialist agents and saboteurs" aided by the United States, China and Pakistan.

Military observers said they believed the rebels suffered heavy casualties when they were fired on by Soviet tanks and helicopters but that most survivors went into hiding with their weapons and were undoubtedly planning a new offensive.

In other developments, the Pakistani news agency PPI said Afghan rebels shot down two Soviet helicopters Sunday in the provinces of Ghazni, in the east, and Kandhar, in the southeast. The report said rebels also killed 41 troops, including three Soviet officers, in a night attack Friday in Iwar Province and that demonstrations against the Soviets had occurred in all the provinces in north, central and south Afghanistan.

The news agency also reported widespread desertions in the Afghan army because, it said, the Soviets were forcing the Afghans to fight the rebels while their troops remained in the background.

None of the reports could be independently confirmed. But Golbedin Hekmatyar, head of the Islamic Party of Afghanistan that opposes the Soviet presence, said the Afghan army had become demoralized and had shrunk from 80,000 troops last year to 30,000. In an interview in Tehran, he also said 500 persons were killed in last week's fighting in Kabul.

Shopkeepers in the Afghan capital reopened their stores Thursday following a week-long strike to protest the two-month-old occupation of their country by some 70,000 Soviet troops.

Most road blocks had disappeared from the center of Kabul, and a brief tour showed hardly any tanks or armored cars on city streets. There was still a noticeable amount of tension, however, particularly in districts regarded as sympathetic to the rebels.

In areas where the rebels were particularly active, including the Old City and the nearby district of Maiwand, the military command appeared to be relying on the 2,000-member militia of the ruling Khalq Party to prevent further attacks. Civilians patrolled the streets in pairs with cocked Kalashnikov submachine guns, the symbol of authority for the militia.

Kabul residents have complained privately to Western reporters that the militia has in many cases arbitrarily executed suspected rebels or rebel sympathizers. Militiamen have also arrested private citizens and seized private property, the sources said.

Big Turnout In Rhodesia's Vote

By JOHN EDLIN
Associated Press Writer
SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — With one day of balloting left in the Rhodesian election, the turnout of black voters has already far outpaced the number who voted last year for the nation's first black-majority government.

By mid-afternoon Thursday more than 2 million of the 3 million eligible blacks had stood in line, many for hours, at 670 polling stations across the country.

"It's going very well," said one of the 100 British supervisors monitoring the balloting along with 570 British policemen, members of the Commonwealth peacekeeping force and more than 200 international observers. "Everything seems above board. There aren't any irregularities."

Although 14 violent deaths have been reported since the voting began Wednesday, officials said only one was related to the election. This was in marked contrast to the beatings, bombings, assassinations and intimidation that went on during the campaign.

Nearly 1.9 million blacks voted last April in Rhodesia's first universal-suffrage election that installed Methodist Bishop Abel Muzorewa as the country's first black prime minister. The guerrillas boycotted that vote and Muzorewa surrendered power to a British transitional governor, Lord Soames, under a peace agreement signed in London in December.

The blacks are voting to elect 80 of the 100 members of the new Parliament that will name a black government in preparation for internationally recognized independence. The white minority filled the other 20 seats at an election Feb. 14, and all were won by former Prime Minister Ian Smith's Rhodesian Front.

In addition to civilians who had not voted, today was election day for more than 22,000 armed black guerrillas who have been living in 13 assembly camps since the cease-fire began Jan. 4.

Trying Deputy As Accessory In Death

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — A deputy sheriff being tried as an accessory in a hit-and-run death has told the jury he was so "shook up" by the sight of a dead man's hand protruding from a roadside ditch that he could not recall all the events clearly.

As he testified in his own defense, Claude C. Duvall said he first realized a man had been killed when he drove past the scene with Charles S. Fearing and Malcolm Keith Fearing III the day after the hit-and-run-death of Cloise H. Creel, 87, the night of Feb. 19, 1979.

Duvall, whose case was expected to go to the jury today, is the third person to be tried as the result of the death of the former courthouse caretaker. Both Fearings, politically prominent cousins, have been convicted in the death.

Duvall is charged with conspiring to destroy evidence on the night Creel was hit by a Mercedes sedan driven by Charles Fearing, 32, former Dare County Democratic chairman. The car was owned by Malcolm Fearing, 25, a former member of the Manteo Town Board, who was not in the car at the time of the accident on U.S. 64 just west of Manteo.

The deputy sheriff testified he first realized a man had been killed when he drove past the scene with the two Fearings the day after the accident and saw a "claw-like hand" sticking out of the ditch.

Both Fearings have testified they sought out Duvall after Charles Fearing said he struck a road sign, smashing the windshield and denting the hood of the Mercedes. Duvall said the Fearings rode in his patrol car with him on the night of the accident, looking for evidence relating to car damage but found nothing.

John Rideout Is Out On Parole

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — John Rideout, believed to be the first man in the country tried on charges of raping his wife, was paroled on conditions that he avoid his former spouse and seek counseling.

After being acquitted of the rape charges in 1978, Rideout found himself in trouble again last summer when he pleaded guilty to trying to enter his ex-wife's apartment. Greta Rideout has since retaken her maiden name — Greta Hibbard.

Rideout was placed on probation, but it was revoked Jan. 22 when he failed to obtain counseling and continued contacting his ex-wife.

The Elite Repeat

Linda Tripp hopes the name of her resale shop on Highway 33 east of Greenville conveys the quality and the nature of the merchandise she stocks. She calls the shop, located in a neat beige gray-trimmed farmhouse about two and one-half miles east of Rivergate Shopping Center, "The Elite Repeat."

"Most things here are previously owned and sold on consignment," she said, "but we turn down everything that doesn't meet our standards. And, as we grow, we're going to be more and more selective."

The resale shop is owned by Linda and her husband, Randolph Tripp, and is managed by Randy's mother, Mrs. Ethel Smith Tripp. Hours are from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays.

Linda said she conceived the name for the shop several years ago while browsing in resale shops in other cities. "I'd like to have a place like this," she mused, "but mine would be neater and it wouldn't smell musty. And I'd try to think of a name that would connote quality at low prices." Soon the name appeared in her mind—"The Elite Repeat." She kept it there for several years till her dream became reality.

"We expect everything brought to our shop to be clean and fresh smelling," she said. "We want it to be undamaged. Names brands are nice."

"We want this to be a place where people who have bought quality items can get some profit out of them when they get tired of them or when their circumstances change. When you change your decor or your dress size, we hope it'll be nice to know we're here."

"Everything is sold on consignment. We encourage our consignors to keep their prices low and we take only 25 percent commission. We pay consignors at the end of each month."

"Things that don't sell in a reasonable time are returned to the owners."

"Our customers can come here expecting to pay less than brand-new prices, yet more than they'd pay at a yard sale. Here they have the benefit of a fitting room and are encouraged to return to us anything that doesn't make them happy, regardless of the reason. This, we believe, is something that not even some of the best retail stores offer."

"The Elite Repeat" is located in a house that the Tripps repaired and repainted and renovated themselves. It's divided into areas designated by clever names of Linda's own coining—"The Wee Boutique, the Gift Gallery, Yesterday's World, The Clothes Closet, and The Kitchen Cupboard."

Merchandise varies from new items of brass, pewter, rattan and glassware at reduced rates to used small appliances, toys, furniture, household accessories, and clothing of all types and sizes—men's, women's and children's.

We expect to be constantly improving our shop and upgrading our merchandise. And we hope to add new customers and consignors all the time.

Terps Bend, But Don't Break

By NAOMI KAUFMAN
Associated Press Writer
GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) —

Brook Steppe of Georgia Tech brought his 6-foot-4, 185-pound frame down on Maryland's glass slipper Thursday, but the shoe refused to break.

Seventh-ranked Maryland squeezed out a 51-49 win in overtime to beat the Rambling Wreck in first-round action of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

Coach Lefty Driesell has often called his Terps this year's Cinderella team. And he says that after the Georgia Tech loss, that still holds true. "The good lord has been with us," Driesell said after his win.

For Steppe, the frustration was apparent. He scored 21 points, including all six of Georgia Tech's in overtime, but missed a soft jumper at the buzzer of the extra period.

"I should have hit that shot," said a dejected Steppe. "I hit those all the time."

In other first-round action Thursday, No. 10 North Carolina handily beat Wake Forest, 75-62, with awesome play from Mike O'Koren; Duke beat No. 19 North Carolina State, 68-62, and 17th-ranked Clemson stumbled its way to a 57-49 win over Virginia.

The results set up semifinal matches tonight between Maryland and Clemson at 7 o'clock and Duke versus North Carolina at 9 o'clock.

North Carolina's Al Wood, who scored 19 points, said the Tar Heels expected more of a challenge from the Wake Forest team. "We were on our toes. We were prepared for anything," he said.

O'Koren, with nine of 10 from the floor, sank eight free throws for a game-high 26 points. He was also credited with 11 rebounds and four steals. But, said O'Koren, "To say that Wake Forest didn't give us a fight is misleading. They did get it down to five."

High scorer for Wake Forest was Alvis Rogers with 14. He said the Deacons "just went flat in the second half."

The most wide open game of the night featured Duke and N.C. State. For coach Norm Sloan, it was a foul way to end his Wolfpack coaching career. Sloan has announced he will move to Florida.

The Wolfpack sent the Blue Devils to the free-throw line for 40 shots, and they converted on an incredible 34 of them for a full half of their points. Gene Banks with 24 and Mike Gminski with 22 led the way.

All the teams had some difficulty adjusting to the officials and their calls. The officials came from the Metro Conference, not the ACC.

Said Banks, "The big men at Duke power company had to take control. We had to dominate; it was mandatory."

Of today's game with North Carolina, which will probably determine if the Blue Devils get an NCAA bid for the third year in a row, Banks said, "We're hungry, we're starving."

Hawkeye Whitney led the way with 17 points for the Wolfpack, but he wasn't up to his nickname, as he hit only eight of 24 from the floor. "Tonight was just one of those nights," Whitney said.

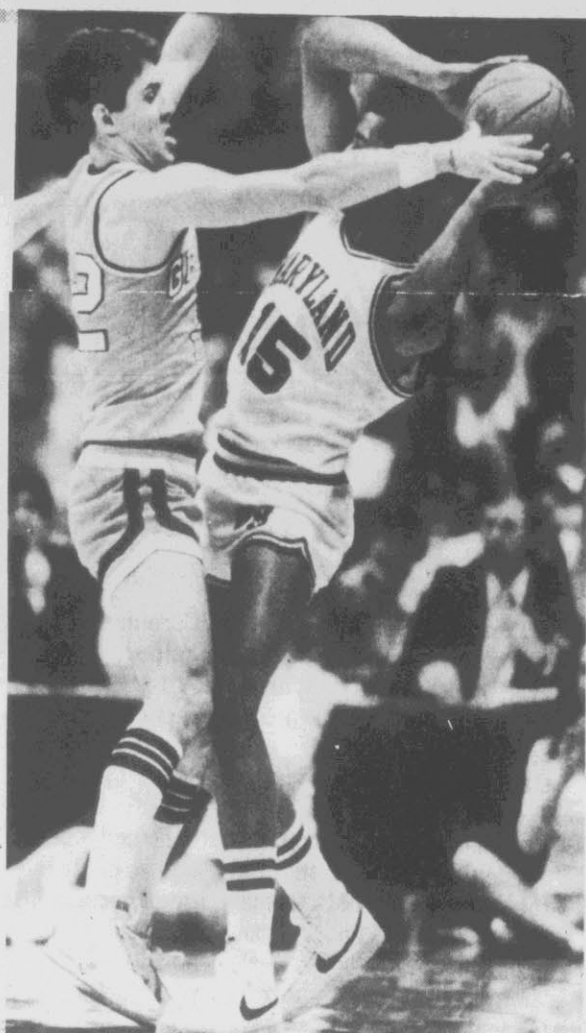

Both teams played strong running games.

The Virginia-Clemson game was a case of the blind leading the blind. Both teams shot poorly — Virginia only 40 percent from the floor for the game. Clemson had 14 turnovers but made up for that with 11 steals.

Pirates Close Out Season; Look For 16th Victory Against UW-M

East Carolina University's men's basketball program will finish up the year on Saturday at 2 p.m. in Minges Coliseum, playing host to the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

The Pirates, 15-11, will be shooting to finish up the year with a pair of victories on their home court and to go out on a winning note. "That will give us something to look back on and remember during the summer," Coach Dave Odom said.

The Pirates are coming off a sluggish 53-52 victory over Campbell University Wednesday night, and Odom is hopeful that the Bucs will put on a more competent performance on Saturday afternoon.

"I think personal pride will be a big factor in the game," he said. "I hope they have enough pride to give the spectators a good show. I hope every one of them will give it all they have."

The contest will be the final appearance for five seniors, three of whom have gone through three coaching changes during their careers. Those three are Kyle Powers, Herb Krusen and Herb Gray. The other two, Frank Hobson and George Maynor, both came in last year as transfer students.

"We want to give all five of them another chance at starting and getting the feel of Minges for one last time," Odom said. The coach said that the seniors will be honored prior to the start of the game, and their road jerseys will be presented to them at that time.

Milwaukee brings a losing record into the game, but no worse than 8-16. Their Monday night score against Jackson State has not been available in this area.

Like East Carolina, the Panthers have three players in double figures, led by Bob Flood at 15.1. Kirk Tatge is hitting 11.0 and Dave Weber, 10.3.

Herb Krusen, barring something unforeseen will wind up his ECU career as the eighth leading scorer of all time. He currently stands ninth with 1,107, trailing number eight Lacy West by only four. He cannot go higher.

Gray, meanwhile, is currently tied with number 12 Jim Fairley, both with 1,031. Gray has a chance to catch number 11 Tom Miller, who scored 1,048 during his career at East Carolina.

A victory, for Odom, would make the year mostly satisfying. "You'd like to say you could have done better, but by-and-large we've done better than the staff expected at the start of the season. I think our real problem was that we won our 14th game (and assured a winning season) earlier than anticipated. It caused us to have to reset our goals and left a void in terms of motivation."

"But it has been a good year, and has given us a firm foundation to build on for bigger and better things in the future," Odom said.

He's also interested as to the reaction to the afternoon time for the game. "I'd like to know what the fans think of this time. If they like it well have more. I hope, too, that they realize the time switch (from a 7:30 p.m. Friday game) was for them, so that they could see us and the ACC tournament."

Duke Has Something To Prove Against UNC

By DICK BRINSTER
Associated Press Writer
GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The once-awesome Duke Blue Devils, who fell from the top rung of the college basketball ladder to the status of the unranked, want to prove they've regained their early-season form.

And they'll get that chance tonight when they play 10th-ranked North Carolina in the semifinal round of the Atlantic Coast Conference Basketball Tournament. The Blue Devils, who beat 19th-ranked North Carolina State on Thursday night in the opening round, meet the Tar Heels at 9 p.m.

Seventh-ranked Maryland, an overtime winner over last-place Georgia Tech, meets 17th-ranked Clemson, who defeated Virginia, at 7 p.m.

"We're hungry, we're starving. People are in our way, people who have beaten us," said Duke forward Gene Banks.

Banks scored 24 points in leading the Blue Devils, now 20-8, to an easy 68-62 victory over the Wolfpack.

The most immediate obstacle to a continuation of Duke's hopes is, of course, North Carolina.

"We have some things to prove," said Mike Gminski, who bagged 22 points for the Blue Devils. Although he didn't say it, the statement itself appeared to be aimed at North Carolina, who last Saturday humiliated Duke, 96-71.

North Carolina's Dean Smith, who saw his team defeat Wake Forest, 75-62, in the tournament opener, said earlier he saw "no psychological advantage to playing either" Duke or N.C. State. "We're just happy to be in the semifinals and hope we can play well."

The Tar Heels, now 21-6, got there on the strength of 26 points by Mike O'Koren and 19 by Al Wood.

N.C. State's Norm Sloan said he expected the North Carolina-

Duke game to be an outstanding contest.

"Duke is now playing the way they were when they were ranked number one in the country earlier this season," he said.

"The mark of a good basketball team is to win the close ones," Maryland's Lefty Driesell said after the Terps outlasted Georgia Tech and the persistence of 21-point scorer Brook Steppe for a 51-49 victory. "I knew it was going to be a dogfight."

Driesell, whose team bettered its mark to 22-5, said earlier he had no preference as to opponents as the tournament progressed.

"You gotta play three games and you gotta win them all," he said. "You never know what can happen because tonight we had everything to lose and nothing to gain, and for them (Georgia Tech) it was just the opposite."

The Terps, who were tied in regulation when Steppe hit a 20-foot corner jumper at the buzzer, won the game during the extra period on the play of Albert King and Buck Williams. Both made several key plays throughout the game with Williams netting 18 points and King 16.

Clemson earned its berth in the semifinals with a 57-49 victory over Virginia. But Tiger coach Bill Foster figures his 17th-ranked team must improve on its 45.5 percent shooting if it is to win.

"You've got to shoot well against Maryland if you hope to stay in the game with them," he said. "We think we can play with them. We'll be ready."

Clemson, which got 14 points apiece from Larry Nance and Billy Williams, also must improve from the free-throw line, where it converted only 17 of 28 chances against Virginia.

"We ain't gonna win no free throw contests," said Foster. "Looks like some times we couldn't put the ball in the ocean standing on the beach."

"But there's no way we can shoot like we did tonight against Maryland and expect to win."

Willie Mays Recalls Love Of Baseball

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

For 22 years, baseball nurtured Willie Mays. And despite the fact that the Hall of Famer has been forced to sever his ties with the sport, he still loves the game — and isn't about to kick it.

Mays was the speaker for a special meeting of the Greenville Sports Club that drew over 500 persons at the Moose Lodge yesterday.

One of ten men ever selected on their first year of eligibility to the Hall of Fame, Mays was forced to sever his baseball ties when he became the public relations director for an Atlantic City, N.J., casino.

"I am not involved in gambling," Mays told the crowd, dotting with many youths. "I felt my family needed security, but I don't go into the casinos. What I do in Atlantic City is what I'm doing here. I go into the schools and hospitals. I enjoy it, I feel I'm doing something for the city."

Mays added that he isn't jealous of the high money salaries the players are getting today compared with the money he made in baseball. "Sure, I'd like to be in their shoes," he added, "and make a million dollars, but that's not what it's all about."

The former Giant great said that kids need to have someone to look up to, but that they also have to realize that the road of life isn't paved with gold.

There were rough times, he pointed out, when he came along—just as the color bars were being lowered in the big leagues.

In the minors, Mays recounted, he was in Ohio and had to wait on the bus while the rest of the team went into a restaurant to eat. But every one of the other players brought him food. At night, he had to stay at one place, while the team slept at another. But soon, the players started joining him, staying with him.

"That showed me that blacks and whites could live together without problems," Mays said.

Once he made the big leagues, he said he had to thank Leo Durocher for staying there. "I went 0-for-12 got a hit and went 0-for-12 again. I went to Leo in tears, and he told me that as long as he was manager, I'd be in center field."

Referring to Gaylord Perry of Williamston, who along with Hall of Famer Buck Leonard of Rocky Mount, and former Giant catcher Dick Dietz, attended the meeting, Mays talked about the "spitter."

"The first time I saw a spitter, I thought someone had thrown up on the ball," Mays said. "Someone hit one on the fly to me and I sure didn't look good. The umpire asked to see the ball and I just threw it up into the stands. The manager said it would cost me five dollars, so I went to Gaylord for it."

Mays said that he was glad to be able to come out of baseball after 22 years and be able to face the kids of the country with nothing to be ashamed of. "I never did anything to hurt baseball and I never will."

During a question and answer period, this became clear. Mays was asked to list the five worst players he's seen in the majors, but he refused. "I don't knock my profession. I wouldn't get involved in knocking a player even if he is a bad player." Asked how a bad player gets into the majors, he credits it to politics. "A manager might promise someone if he ever makes it, he'll bring someone with him, regardless of whether he deserves it."

He did take a good nature jibe at the American League. Asked who the toughest Yankee pitcher he faced was, Mays replied that he played in the "big leagues, not the little league. (American League)." He listed Whitey Ford as the easiest Yankee for him to hit off of.

In the National League, he listed Sandy Koufax as the toughest for him to go against.

Asked what records he was most proudest of, Mays said he didn't play for records. "I played because I enjoyed the sport. I played for my enjoyment and yours. If you pay $5 to see a game, you want to see a good game. If I hit four home runs and we lose, I'm not proud. But if you go home after seeing a good game and you're happy, then I'm happy."

Mays said that some players, and he included himself, have a gift for baseball, but others make it on their hard work.

While he generally enjoyed baseball, his final two years were not happy ones for him. "I got to the point where I didn't enjoy it, and the pressure on me was such that I didn't enjoy it either. But I would rather quit than be pushed out."

As to the kids of today, Mays had good advice. "I'd advise a kid to get his education first and to play baseball second. Go to college, as far as you can. Then, if you make it and break a leg, you'll have something to fall back on. But if you don't get a education and break a leg, what are you going to do? Get an education first."

The Sports Club meets again on Tuesday at the Greenville Golf and Country Club. Zack Valentine, former East Carolina defensive end, now a member of the Pittsburgh Steelers, will be the speaker.

Kentucky, LSU Advance In SEC; Virginia Tech Ousted In Metro

It's been an up-and-down season for the Duke Blue Devils. But Thursday night they were up — way up.

"I thought we played the best we've played in a while," said Coach Bill Foster after a 68-62 victory over 19th-ranked North Carolina State in the Atlantic Coast Conference playoffs. "We got off to a good start and we were very effective offensively."

The Blue Devils, a team that already has lost eight games, thus earned a berth in tonight's ACC semifinals against 10th-ranked North Carolina, a 75-62 victor over Wake Forest behind Mike O'Koren's 26 points.

In Thursday night's other quarterfinal games, seventh-ranked Maryland nipped Georgia Tech 51-49 on Albert King's jump shot with four seconds left in overtime and No. 17 Clemson defeated Virginia 57-49 as Billy Williams and Larry Nance each scored 14 points.

The ACC tournament was one of several postseason league playoffs that continued to blossom in college basketball this week.

In the Southeastern Conference playoffs, second-ranked Kentucky, No. 5 Louisiana State, Alabama and Mississippi all won opening-round games.

Sam Bowie scored 19 points to lead Kentucky to a 69-61 victory over Auburn. LSU registered a 95-82 decision over Florida as Ethan Martin scored 20 points and Howard Carter 19. Eddie Phillips' 27 points triggered Alabama over Mississippi State. Cecil Dowell hit a layup as time expired to provide Mississippi with a mild 76-74 upset over Tennessee.

"Mississippi took us out of everything we wanted to do," said Tennessee Coach Don DeVoe. "They outscraped us, and their defense early in the game set the tempo."

The results set up a semifinal round tonight pairing Kentucky against Mississippi and LSU against Alabama.

Connecticut earned a berth in tonight's semifinals against Syracuse. St. John's will face Georgetown in the other semifinal contest.

Gymnasts Seeking State Title

East Carolina University's Lady Pirates will participate in the North Carolina AIAW gymnastics championships, to be held Saturday at Western Carolina.

The Pirates and the hosting Catamounts will be vying for the Division II championship, while North Carolina and Duke challenge each other for the Division I title.

"I'm looking for around a 116 performance from our team," Coach Jon Rose said. We look for strong performances from Susan McKnight, Annie Loeschke and Elizabeth Jackson in the all-around."

In addition, the Pirates will enter Cindy Rogers in the balance beam and uneven bars; Susan Lawrence in the floor exercises, beam and vaulting; Carol Layton in the bars, beam and floor exercises; Kim Lowe in the vault; and Kim Blevins in the vault.

"I'm very optimistic about the weekend," Rose said.

The Lady Pirates also will automatically qualify for the AIAW Regionals, to be held the next weekend at Radford.

were Larry Nance and Billy Williams with 14 points each.

Even the much heralded 7-foot-4 freshman Ralph Sampson couldn't do everything for Virginia. He had a game-high 17 points and 18 rebounds but was only 7-17 from the floor. Jeff Lamp added 14, also on a dismal scoring-percentage night for him. He was 6-14 from the floor.

Clemson coach Bill Foster sounded enthusiastic about tonight's matchup with Maryland. "It'll be a real challenge to us offensively."

After the first day of play, Maryland maintained the best conference record with 22-5; North Carolina increased to 21-6; Clemson is at 20-7 and Duke got its 20th win against 8 losses. North Carolina State finished at 20-7, Virginia at 19-10, Wake Forest 13-14 and Georgia Tech 8-18.

TV Version Of Attica Conflagration Coming

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC's version of the 1971 Attica state prison conflagration arrives this weekend, with the horror of another prison tragedy, the New Mexico State Penitentiary riots, still fresh in memory. Not that "Attica" needs a boost from current events — haunting, taut, superbly constructed, it may be the best TV movie of the year. But the New Mexico nightmare lends timeliness to "Attica," a reminder of unheeded lessons.

"Attica" is based on New York Times reporter Tom Wicker's eyewitness account of the 1971 Attica uprising and its dark resolution, which left 39 corpses in the prison yards and 88 men in the hospital.

Wicker's perceptive eye saw the futility and waste of Attica, and the special perspective that made his Attica book, "A Time to Die," so devastating serves also to frame this movie.

We are shown a cauldron called Attica, bubbling with the forces of hate, brutality, inhumanity and fear. The explosion is, entirely comprehensible; its lethal end is not, and the capturing of that is this film's merit.

Wicker came to Attica as one of several outside observers, a diverse lot whose purpose was not clear even to them. There were a couple of leftists, most notably "people's lawyer" William Kunstler, Black Panther leader Bobby Seale, a senator, a congressman, a radio host, a Muslim leader — each playing out his own little drama against the backdrop of the prison yard crisis.

The same was true of the prisoners, whose reasonable demands were swept aside by the rush of their own celebratory

NEVER AGAIN — The Andrews sisters, Patty, left, and Maxene, haven't spoken in six years and "will never get back again," says Patty. The sisters had their spats even in their heyday in the '40s and Patty and Maxene kept at it after LaVerne's death in 1967. Patty blames Maxene for causing the trouble that canceled a national tour of "Over Here". (AP Laserphoto)

Calamity Pair Teamed Again

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — George Jones and Tammy Wynette, country music's couple of calamity, have written another chapter in their maze of misfortune that would rival the story line of any soap opera.

At least for now, there's a happy ending.

The duo, divorced in 1975 after six stormy years of marriage, is singing together again on record and in concert.

They sang together for two years after the divorce, then parted professionally, too. They had performed together for 10 years.

Says Miss Wynette: "We're the Sonny and Cher of country music."

Miss Wynette, at age 37 eleven years younger than Jones, is one of country music's rags-to-riches stories. A singer of unmatched intensity, she catapulted from a beautician into a four-time winner of the Country Music Association's female vocalist of the year award.

Along the way, she's had five husbands and nearly as many hospital stays as No. 1 records. And in the most bizarre off-stage development of all, she was abducted at a Nashville shopping center in 1978, driven 80 miles in her yellow Cadillac, beaten and released by a masked assailant. The case, and motive, remain a mystery.

Jones, too, shares in the personal plunges. He spent Christmas in a Birmingham, Ala., hospital where he underwent 30 days of treatment for alcoholism. In December 1978, he filed for bankruptcy, claiming $1.5 million in debts. He listed about 50 concert dates where he failed to appear, attributing his no-shows to drinking.

A few months before that, Miss Wynette took him to court for being $36,000 behind in child support payments for their daughter.

But, true to the entertainment exhortation, the show must go on. The two will do 20 to 40 concerts together this year and record an album. They've already released a single, "Two-Story House."

"George will always be the greatest country music singer in the world," says Miss Wynette, a slender blonde whose

Gospel Singer In Sunday Concert

Mark Evans, an acclaimed gospel singer, will be in concert at the People's Baptist Temple at 6:30 p.m. Sunday, March 2.

Since he first began singing in 1959, Evans has traveled more than one and one-half millions miles in the U.S. and abroad. For ten years, he was heard weekly on The Landmark Hour, a radio broadcast heard nationally from Landmark Baptist Temple in Cincinnati, Ohio, with Dr. John Rawlings.

Currently he appears with Dr. Jerry Falwell on The Old-Time Gospel Hour, a weekly television program. This is world's largest a syndicated series, and reaches over 20 million people.

Rev. J. M. Bragg, pastor of People's Baptist Temple, invites the public to attend. The church is located at 264 bypass west, next to the Red Oak Sub-division.

Jobs Plentiful On Outer Banks

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Employment Security Commission says 500 or more students may get the chance to spend the summer at the North Carolina coast.

Norman Pendleton, manager of the Elizabeth City employment office, said a survey by his office shows that summer jobs at the Outer Banks will be plentiful.

He said most of the jobs will begin around mid-May. Last year, he said, there were not enough applicants for the jobs.

Opening lead: King of ♣

It is difficult to resist discarding a potential loser when the opportunity presents itself. But be sure you know what you want to get rid of before you avail yourself of the chance. Consider this hand.

North-South conducted an intelligent auction to reach a fair grand slam. After he received a spade preference, South refrained from launching into Blackwood because of his void. Instead, he started a cue-bidding sequence. When South later jumped to five spades, North realized that his hand must be pure gold. Not only did he have fillers in the three suits that his partner bid, he also knew from the auction that South couldn't have more than a singleton heart. Therefore, North trusted his partner's bidding and bravely jumped to seven spades.

West led the king of hearts, and a careless declarer would stand a 50 per cent chance of going down at trick one. He would rise with the ace of hearts and then try for divine guidance in making up his mind whether to discard a diamond or a club. If he elected to discard a club, he would end up down one, but if he parted with a diamond, Dame Fortune would nod her head in approval and the grand slam would be made.

The correct way to play the hand is to refuse to commit yourself at trick one. Play a low heart from dummy and ruff, then draw trumps. Now try three rounds of diamonds. If that suit breaks, discard a club on the ace of hearts and claim your grand slam. If that suit does not split evenly, discard your losing diamond on the ace of hearts and hope for a 3-3 club division.

If you follow that line, you would make the hand if either minor suit broke 3-3. That would give you an almost 60 per cent chance of bringing home your grand slam—almost enough to justify your side's optimistic bidding.

A LONG WAIT — Renee and Scott Jorgensen are glad they finally can celebrate their first wedding anniversary, although they've been married four years. They were married Leap Year's Day, Feb. 29, four years ago, and agreed to celebrate only every fourth year.

They will be opening a rare bottle of wine today for their first celebration, for one drink; and then cork it up for four more anniversaries, 16 more years. The Jorgensens live in Pebble Beach, Cal. (AP Laserphoto)

Unchanged

LJUBLJANA, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Josip Broz Tito's grave condition remained unchanged despite the intensive medical treatment he was receiving, his doctors said today.

They gave no further description of the 87-year-old Yugoslav leader's health in a daily medical bulletin released at midday. The reports have been issued since Tito entered a hospital here Jan. 4. On Jan. 20, his left leg was amputated because of a circulation blockage.

The doctors had reported the day before that Tito, suffering from kidney and heart weakness, was still suffering from pneumonia and internal bleeding.

Medical sources without access to the details of Tito's case said it was possible that the absence of any report on Tito's mental status could indicate he had drifted into a coma and that death was not far away.

"If his pneumonia isn't better and the bleeding hasn't stopped, he can't last much longer," said an internal medicine specialist. "And if he is in a coma, he will probably die soon."

Siamese Twins Turned Out Surprising Fun

FOREST CITY, N.C. (AP) — Like most parents, Kim and Arlin Beaver had prepared for just one baby. Now their Siamese twins, Fonda Michelle and Shannon Elaine Beaver, have been home a week and the Beavers say the twins are turning out to be a fun surprise.

"Never done so much work in my life," Mrs. Beaver said in an interview this week. "Never thought it would be this much work. But it's really kinda fun."

They say it's been fun holding the twins, who have gained 11 ounces between them since they came home from Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville.

"But most of all it's fun to just kinda sit back and watch them grow," Arlin said.

Relatives, they said, rushed to buy a second bassinet, a second crib and more infant clothing after doctors told the Beavers to prepare for twins. That was only three days before Fonda Michelle and Shannon Elaine were born on Feb. 9.

"That kinda turned everything upside down and had us worried a lot," Mrs. Beaver said.

The Beavers have noticed that although the twins are joined at the abdomen, they have very individual personalities. The girls' 20-year-old father, Arlin, says Fonda Michelle is more active than her sister.

"She eats more, sleeps less and gets the hiccups first," he said. "Shannon sleeps all day and stays up half the night."

The couple worked with nurses at the Asheville hospital to learn to care for the twins. Now, on a typical day, they sit in a corner of their three-bedroom ranch house in Rutherford County holding the twins, smoothing pink blankets, rearranging terry bibs and checking for wet diapers.

Beaver said twins are no novelty in his family. He has a twin brother, Arnold, and his maternal aunt has two sets of twins.

Doctors are waiting for Fonda Michelle and Shannon Elaine to gain weight before trying to surgically separate them. They say the girls have essentially normal hearts, lungs, brains and arms. They have normal stomachs and small intestines but share a colon, rectum and liver. Each child has one leg.

"These are our babies and we love them," Mrs. Beaver said. "To us, they're just like regular little babies."

Won't Settle For Sub At Kennedy Reception

By PAULINE JELINEK
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Ann Fennessy bought the bubbly and had the $100-per-person invitations printed up, but she simply won't settle for an 18-year-old Teddy Kennedy in her house.

"We're no dumb-dumbs out here," she declared. "If we don't get the senator, they don't get the $100."

So, Mrs. Fennessy says, she called tonight's scheduled reception in her home off "at the last minute" when she learned that Edward M. Kennedy's presidential campaign was planning to have Edward Jr. stand in for his father.

"Either the senator comes and meets his contributors or it will not be in my home," Mrs. Fennessy said Thursday.

"I go ahead and get the champagne and champagne glasses and have nice invitations all printed up...."

she said. "The point is that my husband's and my name are on the invitations and it said come and pay $100, and come to my home to meet the senator."

Mrs. Fennessy said she was checking on security for the event scheduled in her Hyde Park apartment on the South Side when a policeman told her the senator probably would not attend. She said she called a spokesman for Kennedy and was told Kennedy's back was bothering him and he had to be in Washington too early Saturday to attend the reception.

"They said they wanted to send the younger Kennedy," Mrs. Fennessy said. "I gave it to them in A-B-C language. I told them if they went to a movie and paid $4 or $5 to get in and then someone showed an announcement on the screen that they would not have the movie, they would want their money back."

"If the senator doesn't come, it is off. I don't want to let down the constituents I work with and my friends. I would not pay $100 to meet Teddy Junior."

Terry Michael, Kennedy's press secretary in Illinois, said the reception was canceled after Mrs. Fennessy rejected the idea of having the senator talk to her guests by telephone.

Michael said the staff will try to reschedule the visit to the Fennessy home during one of the senator's return campaign trips to Illinois. He said a small group had been expected to attend.

Mrs. Fennessy said she was angry because she thinks "it is very important for a politician to keep his commitments." She said her cancellation of the event "will show them that someone as important as him...can be turned down by a citizen."

It Was Raining, So They Wed

ANTIOCH, Calif. (AP) — They stopped just to buy wedding rings, but it was raining outside and there was a reverend inside, so Tracy Walton and Cindy Correia got hitched then and there in a jewelry store.

Walton, 20, and Miss Correia, 19, were headed for a civil wedding ceremony in Martinez on Wednesday when they stopped at Lee Jewelers to buy rings.

The Rev. Jack Hale of the Church of God in Oakley was doing some plumbing in the back room. His son Randy is a salesman at the store.

"We thought they were kidding," said Walton when the jewelry store wedding was suggested.

But the downpour changed his mind, and the Rev. Hale married the couple as cuckoo clocks sounded out 4 p.m.

Young Hale acted as best man and Diane Jones, the bookkeeper, served as maid of honor after running out to buy a bouquet.

"We could make a movie out of this," Randy Hale said.

$750,000 In Damage Suit

WILLIAMSTON, N.C. (AP) — A 62-year-old Martin County man has been awarded $750,000, the largest civil suit settlement in the history of the county, for damages resulting from an accident in 1976 which left him permanently injured.

The settlement this week ended a trial in which Daisy L. Etheridge and Thomas L. Etheridge were suing Heilig-Myers Co. for $5 million.

Testimony showed that Etheridge was struck by a Heilig-Myers truck that had run through a stop sign.

Witnesses during the trial testified that Etheridge suffered severe brain damage and cannot talk. He was described as being "imprisoned inside himself."

The award was for Etheridge's past and future punitive damages, medical expenses and loss of wages based on his anticipated life expectancy of 16 years.

Etheridge's medical bills, as of Feb. 15, were reported to be $148,000.

Currituck Assured Of Wishes Being Heard

CURRITUCK, N.C. (AP) — A federal official has assured residents of Currituck County that the federal government will consider their wishes in making a decision on whether to purchase 15,880 acres of land along the Outer Banks.

William Ashe, acting director of the Northeast Division of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, made the statement Wednesday night to about 400 citizens during the last of three public hearings on the proposed purchase.

He told residents that their comments would accompany a final impact statement that is expected to be released in July.

Under the proposed purchase, Ashe said full-time residents would be given land-use rights for their lifetimes and seasonal residents could use up to three acres for 25 years.

In each case, rent would be paid to the federal government.

The Fish and Wildlife Service wants to buy seven miles of beach and marshland from the Virginia-North Carolina state line south to Corolla and seven miles of marshland from Corolla south to the Dare County line.

The government would pay $100 million for the area, which is considered of significant ecological importance because it provides sanctuary for migratory waterfowl and other wildlife.

Shirley Austin, a resident of Corolla, asked Ashe, "Can you go on record that there will be no changes in the present duck-hunting blinds and sport-and surf-fishing situation?"

Ashe replied, "There are no absolute guarantees in anything."

Representatives of the Nature Conservancy spoke in favor of the government purchase and offered Monkey Island in Currituck Sound and Swan Island along the banks for sale.

Larry Thompson of the Audubon Society went on record as approving government purchase of the land and warned of the consequences to wildlife of "choosing any of the alternatives," to the proposed acquisition.

Widower Sues Wife's Killer

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A Wilmington man whose wife was slain two years ago has filed a $1 million lawsuit against the man convicted of murdering her.

James Grossnickle filed the suit Tuesday in New Hanover County Superior Court. The suit asks $1 million in damages from John C. Ferdinando, who was convicted in 1978 of murder in the slaying of Barbara Jean Grossnickle.

The suit describes in detail the injuries suffered by Mrs. Grossnickle when Ferdinando took her to a rural road near Wilmington and repeatedly ran over her with the vehicle he was driving.

"Nobody knows the hell I've been through in the past two years," Grossnickle said about the suit. "Part of the reason is that I want to see him pay back in some way for what he did. For too long criminals haven't had to make any repayments to their victims; maybe this case can start something."

Ferdinando is serving a sentence in New York for attempted armed robbery. At the end of that sentence, he will start serving a life term for the slaying of Mrs. Grossnickle.

Grossnickle admitted it may be difficult to collect the money from a man serving a long prison term.

"I may never see a cent of the money, but maybe it will set some kind of example if I win the case," he said.

Grossnickle said another tragedy resulting from his wife's death was having to give up a 9-year-old boy the couple had adopted recently.

"I just couldn't give him a whole family and he was looking for a mother and father too," Grossnickle said.

Destroy Myths Of The Good Old Car

DETROIT (AP) — Remember hearing about the "good old days" before emission controls, when cars got great mileage?

Well, it ain't necessarily so, say three Canadian researchers.

"In spite of the remarkable progress made in fuel economy in the last five model years, the general public persists in the belief that emission controls have a substantial adverse effect on fuel economy and that cars delivered much better fuel economy in the 'good old days,'" according to a paper by three staffers of Environment Canada presented Wednesday at the convention of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

Environment Canada is the counterpart to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. The researchers put 18 cars belonging to members of the Antique Automobile Club of Ottawa through the EPA's fuel economy and emissions tests.

Only five — a 1938 Dodge, a 1941 Oldsmobile, a 1953 Chevrolet, a 1955 Citroen and a 1956 Packard — got better mileage on the city test than the average of today's counterparts in the same weight class.

The average mileage of all 18 was 9 percent worse.

"In short, it is probably the light traffic conditions of the 'good old days' which make the 'good old cars' shine in our memory," the paper says.

FLOOD RELIEF

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Government relief workers aided by civil defense and military units are rushing food and medical supplies to areas affected by floods that have left almost 250,000 persons homeless in 178 towns in northern Brazil.

Answer Not That Simple

By DR. H.G. JONES
For the Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Dot Tankard, the energetic site manager for Historic Bath, has written for a straight answer to the question, "What town served as North Carolina's first capital?"

Well, Dot, there isn't a straight answer. In fact, the response is going to sound like talk from a forked tongue.

It all depends on what is meant by "capital." But first, we have to define the word "capitol" — with an "o."

If a capitol refers to a building in which both houses of the General Assembly met and the governor and key state officials had their offices, then the 1794 "State House" in Raleigh was the first state capitol.

However, if we want to stretch the definition a little, we could say that Tryon Palace in New Bern was almost a capitol. It provided a residence and office for the governor and a chamber for the upper house (called the council). It did not, however, provide a chamber for the lower house or offices for other colonial officers.

Now, back to the word "capital" — with an "a" — meaning the town that served as the seat of government.

The straight answer is Edenton. But it isn't quite that simple.

As early as 1675 the Lords Proprietors instructed the erection of a "Chiefe towne" for the accommodation of the government on Roanoke Island. The town was never established, so officials kept their "offices" in their homes and the assembly met in homes and taverns.

We have no proof of even a courthouse until 1701 (in Perquimans County). About the same time the "Grand Assembly" directed the erection of a courthouse 60 feet long and 20 feet wide in Chowan precinct for the accommodation of the colonial secretary and clerk of the assembly, but there is no proof that the instructions were carried out.

Again in 1712 a bill ordered construction of a courthouse and assembly house on Queen Anne's Creek (i.e., Edenton), but the earliest record of a courthouse there is dated 1718.

Two years later an act referred to a "Gen'l Courthouse in Chowan and at Bath Town," but there is no record of the legislature having met at Bath prior to the 1740s.

Things got no clearer in 1725 when the upper house met in the "Council Chamber" in Edenton, or three years later when a law required that proprietary officials keep their offices in Edenton when "there shall be a Council Room & Gaol built in the said Town."

Christopher Becket, however, in 1733 was allowed 12 pounds sterling per year for "his care in keeping the Doors & Windows of the Council House and Assembly House when those houses are not used." This is sufficient evidence to establish Edenton's claim to the title of North Carolina's first capital — with an "a."

In the next 15 years, a struggle developed between the legislature (controlled by men from the Albemarle) and Governor Gabriel Johnston. The legislature wanted to retain Edenton as the capital; Johnston wanted to move it to New Bern.

Seeking to outsmart his opponents, Johnston in 1746 called for the assembly to meet in far-off Wilmington. Probably as he expected the Albemarle delegates refused to attend.

Undaunted, Johnston assumed that a quorum was unnecessary, and the tiny group set about passing bills that had been defeated repeatedly by the Albemarle majority. One of these acts fixed New Bern as the seat of government; another reduced representation to two per county, thus depriving the Albemarle area of its former majority in the lower house.

The governor soon found out, however, that his adversaries were not so easily outwitted. They sent an agent to London, charging that the acts were illegal because they were "passed by Managment Precipitation and Surprize when very few Members were present."

The argument embroiled the colony for eight years. In the meantime, Governor Johnston died and the Albemarle delegates boycotted the assembly.

Finally, in 1754 the crown disallowed the acts, and North Carolina was again without an official seat of government.

Next week: Establishment of the First Real Capital.

Victims Are Reimbursed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt announced Thursday that 13,800 individuals and businesses have been reimbursed a total of $2.9 million since June 1979 by defendants in criminal cases involving probation, parole or work release.

Hunt said at his weekly news conference that the Division of Probation and Paroles collected more than $2 million, while prisoners on work-release programs repaid about $900,000.

"I believe restitution is one of the most effective weapons in our arsenal against crime," Hunt said. "It recognizes the rights of the victim."

Hunt urged the General Assembly to enact legislation in 1977 that would encourage judges to make restitution a condition of probation, parole or work release. He said he sent letters Thursday to the state's Superior and District court judges recognizing their cooperation.

Hunt also announced Thursday the formation of a new firm in Thomasville, Rex-Rose-nlew International Inc., to create a $6 million manufacturing operation.

The company will make heavy duty plastic bags and shipping sacks and will begin operation late this year with about 60 workers. It is a joint operation of Rex Plastics Inc. of Thomasville and W. Rose-nlew Ltd. of Pori, Finland.

Four GOP Debaters Opt For Chord, Not Discord

Radio Moscow Now Broadcasting Propaganda To Parts Of The U.S.

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time in memory, Radio Moscow's English language broadcasts are being beamed to parts of the United States on a standard AM frequency, federal officials say.

"I don't know of any other instance in which we've picked up Moscow's propaganda, in English, coming into the United States...where any average Joe can pick it up in his car," said a Federal Communications Commission source who asked not to be identified.

The broadcasts, monitored in Florida on Tuesday and Wednesday, were relayed by a Cuban station.

"It was pure propaganda aimed at the United States," said James C. McKinney of the FCC. "By broadcasting primarily at night, they were clearly trying to reach as much of Florida and beyond as possible."

Radio Moscow, heard around the world via short-wave transmissions, recently has presented as news the Kremlin's position on the Russian occupation of Afghanistan. The state-run facility typically presents only the government's view of developments around the world, often railing against "American imperialism."

State Department officials said they could not predict whether the Cuban relays marked the start of a propaganda campaign aimed at masses of American listeners.

McKinney, chief of the FCC's field operations bureau, confirmed Thursday night that his bureau's monitoring stations in Fort Lauderdale and Tampa, Fla., had detected the signal.

"It began at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday and continued through 9 a.m. Wednesday," McKinney said. "Our bearings indicate it was coming from a radio station which we know as CMCA...in Las Vegas, Cuba, using the 600 kilohertz frequency on the AM band."

"We started monitoring when we received a complaint of interference from WSNY-AM in Jacksonville, which broadcasts on the same 600 kilohertz frequency," he added.

McKinney said he could not immediately determine whether the transmissions were in violation of hemispheric agreements that limit the frequencies used by stations close to international borders.

He said the station should have at least given its location and added that "there are many stations operating in Cuba now that aren't observing international agreements."

William T. Shinn Jr., director of the State Department's Soviet affairs office, said Thursday night he was not aware of the FCC's monitoring report, adding that he's "certainly never heard of that happening before."

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Four Republican presidential candidates opted for more chord than discord in their latest campaign debate, this one marked by good-natured gibes and an absence of the acrimony generated by a confrontation in Nashua, N.H., last weekend.

The emphasis was on politics and domestic issues Thursday night, in contrast to the three earlier debates in which foreign policy dominated.

It was the first verbal joust since Ronald Reagan's landslide victory Tuesday night in the New Hampshire primary. Participating with Reagan at the Longstreet Theatre were George Bush, Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. and former Texas Gov. John B. Connally.

Earlier in the day, Reagan noted speculation that the other three "are massing for an attack" on the front-runner, but no such tactic emerged.

After the debate, the candidates mingled on the stage, shaking hands and chatting, and then all attended a reception at the Faculty Club at the University of South Carolina which sponsored the nationally telecast debate along with Columbia Newspapers Inc.

Reagan, grinning and obviously pleased, told reporters, "I think I did very well. It was rather a better forum than I expected."

"South Carolinians got my morale up," said Bush, who whispered to one reporter as he left the theater, "I think I did the best."

The only angry note was struck by Rep. John Anderson, the Illinois congressman running as the only liberal in the GOP presidential race. Campaigning in Massachusetts, Anderson said the debaters should be censured for not insisting that he be included.

Anderson was not invited because he is not on the ballot in the March 8 South Carolina primary and has not campaigned in the state.

It was the fourth debate of the campaign and the third in eight days.

It opened with the candidates asked what they would do about the terrorist takeover of the Dominican Republic embassy in Bogota, Colombia, and the hostage-taking of a number of diplomats including the United States ambassador.

The candidates generally agreed that the Colombian government should be encouraged to deal firmly with the situation.

The Nashua debate was a major topic of discussion with the candidates generally agreeing that it was time to forget the incident and move on with the campaign.

The debaters cited their records on race relations and civil rights when asked why they thought they deserved the support of South Carolina blacks.

On nuclear waste, a major political issue in South Carolina, Reagan advocated turning the problem of how to store radioactive waste over to private industry with strict federal safety guidelines. Bush called for greater cooperation between the federal and state governments, while Baker and Connally said the federal government must take primary responsibility.

All the candidates said they would oppose repeal of the federal statute permitting state right-to-work laws.
