U.N. Panel Departs Iran; Goals Unmet

By The Associated Press
The U.N. commission left Tehran today with a veiled threat to withhold its report on the alleged crimes of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi until it is allowed to see all the American hostages.

after their 17-day visit ended without a visit to the captives.

During a stopover in Zurich, Commission Co-Chairman Mohamed Bedjaoui of Algeria, told reporters the panel's mission "was not a failure, but of course we are disappointed. It was a step on the road. But it was not a failure," an apparent reference to some of the evidence collected in Tehran.

The commission left without seeing the approximately 50 hostages after Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini backed the demands of their militant captors, and Iran's Revolutionary Council rescinded its decision to take custody of the Americans who began their 129th day in captivity in the U.S. Embassy today.

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, who saw the commission off at the airport, said he hoped the panel would return to Iran to finish its work. But he reiterated the regime's position that freedom for the hostages will be decided by Iran's new Parliament, which won't convene for another month.

"The commission's task in investigating the crimes of the ousted shah has not faced a failure. It's departure is just a temporary halt," Ghotbzadeh told the official Iranian news agency Pars. "The commission could carry out its mandate completely and without halt with a bit of patience."

He also said an unidentified member of the Revolutionary Council met with the hostages at the embassy late Monday night and "it was proved again that the hostages are healthy." He did not elaborate.

A spokesman for the Iranian foreign ministry told

Pars that the commission members were headed to New York to consult with U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and would return to Iran to resume their work. Asked about that, commission member Louis-Edmond Pettiti of France shrugged and answered "perhaps." Bedjaoui said: "We haven't reached the end of the road."

Bedjaoui flew to New York today from Zurich. Three other commission members went to Geneva and the Frenchman to Paris. All were supposed to arrive in New York on Wednesday.

In a separate development today, Tehran Radio announced that three members "of the former regime and the dissolved Savak" were executed by firing squad at Evin prison in Tehran after being found guilty of "corruption on earth and waging war against God."

The broadcast was monitored in London.

Before the commission members left Tehran, Ghotbzadeh got into a heated discussion on the runway with one of the militants who arrived unexpectedly to turn over a package of documents from the embassy files. What the argument was about was not immediately known, but the militants have accused Ghotbzadeh of being a liar.

Five Days Lost ...

School Make-Up Days Set

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
The five make up days for the Greenville City Schools for days missed due to snow were approved by the city school board at its Monday night information meeting.

Easter Week holiday — Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, April 9, 10, and 11; May 23, a teacher workday; and May 26, Memorial Day.

Five alternative plans for the make up days were presented by Superintendent Glenn Cox — ranging from taking the entire Easter Week for the make up time to adding five days at the end of the school year.

Cox said that in drawing up the plans, principals and some teachers from each school were asked to indicate their preference. Four of the ten schools opted for a plan that would have used two Easter holidays, Memorial Day and adding two days at the end of school. Staff at three schools opted for adding five days at the end of the school year; and two schools favored the plan that was adopted. Only one school consented on a plan to use one Saturday in conjunction with other days; and none of the schools wanted to use the entire Easter week as make up time.

One of the factors considered in not extending the school year was that invitations for graduation have been ordered with the planned graduation date of June 6. Also, it was felt by school board members that many students, parents and teachers had already made initial plans for further schooling, work or vacation based on the originally scheduled Friday, June 6 graduation date.

Winterville's Mayor Announces 2 Police Cars, Radar Sidelined

By TOMMY FORREST

WINTERVILLE — Mayor Walter Dail disclosed at the town board of aldermen meeting Monday night that two of town's four police cars would be taken out of service, and the use of radar units suspended for period of 90 days.

working radar instead of regular patrol.

"We don't have policemen, we have traffic cops", Dail commented.

"Winterville is known all over eastern North Carolina as the ticket town and the people coming in here are going around Winterville and not coming in Winterville anymore," Dail said.

ed to the town through a federal grant two years ago, along with two of the town's four police officers. The grant has now expired.

Dail said that other towns the size of Winterville are operating police departments cheaper than Winterville with fewer police cars.

Alderman Bobby Crawford explained the reason for the cutback was to prevent an increase in taxes.

was requested by citizens to be placed on the agenda for the next town board meeting.

Other business discussed at the meeting included a budget amendment for the rehabilitation of houses belonging to Ella Waller and Susie Moore. The bids for rehabilitation of these houses total $35,000.

The town also endorsed a resolution concerning revenue sharing. The resolution stated that the town request that Congressman Walter Jones, Senator Jesse Townpeople crowded into the small meeting room with a petition denouncing the town board's actions in removing the police vehicles and radar units.

When the question of the police matter was brought up by citizens, Mayor Dail said, "I'm not going to discuss that. It's not on the agenda."

After questioning by the angry citizens, Dail explained the radar units will be taken out of service for 90 days as a disciplinary measure due to the number of complaints received by his office and policemen

He added that when the town gets the problems worked out, the radar would be gradually put back into service.

Police Chief G. I. Jones, said in response to a citizen's question, 12 radar citations were given for the month of January and seven were issued for the month of February.

The two vehicles ordered by the board parked were, according to Dail, unaffordable by the town due to the rising fuel and insurance costs.

Ayden Board Approves Increasing Town Fees

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer
AYDEN — The Town Board of Commissioners last night in their monthly meeting approved increased fees for building permits, water and sewer hookups, rezoning requests, and cemetery lots.

According to Town Manager Don Russell, the rates for several of these services have not increased in eleven years. "The building permit fee has not increased since 1969, and neither have the fees for water and sewer," said Russell. "The cemetery fee has not gone up since 1976."

The town had a number of studies done to determine the feasibility of both the present rates and the proposed ones.

Concerned citizens noted that some of the increases were steep, nearly double what the old fees were. "Please take into consideration," said Town Clerk Ralph Ford, "the rate of inflation and the fact that it's been a while since they were raised." Charges for water connection in town will go from $85 to $175. Sewer fees will increase from $85 to $225. Both of these figures represent a standard installation with no oversized pipe and no extra labor involved.

Cemetery lots also will double in price after the increase. Grantz Norcott of Norcott / Co. Funeral Homes, expressed concern that these prices were rising and no further service was being given to the cemeteries. "This isn't fair to the people who have to pay the fee," he explained.

Town Manager Don Russell explained that the figures were the result of studies that represented "... where we stand with losing money, breaking even, etc."

REMODELED BY SNOW — Two feeding floors of a hog barn belonging to Ben Gardner collapsed during the snow last week, leaving the owner and the hogs with many problems and inconveniences. Collapsed buildings were a common difficulty encountered by Pitt County farmers after the storm left the area under sixteen inches of snow. (Reflector Staff Photo by Mary Schulken)

The warm weather this weekend may have dimmed the memory of last week's sixteen inches of snow for a few people, but for farmers in Pitt County and surrounding areas, the damages from the storm remain a reality.

For the livestock producers, dairymen and vegetable farmers in this area, removing the snow was only the beginning. Collapsed buildings, decreased production and damaged crops are a few of the problems these individuals face. The task awaiting them now, according to truck farmer Charles Stocks, is to "face the future and go on and hope for the best."

According to Agricultural Extension Chairman Leroy James, the biggest problem was collapsed buildings. "The main thing I saw in the county was hog barns collapsing and a lot of inconvenience," said James.

Two feeding floors of a hog barn belonging to Ben Gardner collapsed the night of March 2 during the snow. According to Gardner, "The floors collapsed Sunday night around 10:30. The weight of the snow just did in the roof and supports. Of course when the building went, the water pipes, which were overhead, broke and the automatic feeding device broke."

Gardner's livestock losses were minimal, but he estimates that the damage to the hog barn is steep. "I only lost one hog," he explained. "His leg was

The recent Hotline appeal and the letter to the editor published in "The Daily Reflector" about the Salvation Army's need for good used clothing provided a "big boost" in donations, according to Linda Whorton, Army secretary.

The snow slowed down the inflow of clothing, however, she said, and increased the need in the community. She said clothing and household goods continue to be needed and reminded that these gifts are tax-deductible.

Ford Has Decided To Seek GOP Nomination

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
PALM BEACH, Fla. — Former President Gerald R. Ford has decided to make a run for the Republican presidential nomination.

He disclosed in an exclusive interview that, barring the unexpected, he'll publicly reveal his plans with a March 20 announcement geared to the primary filing deadlines for Michigan and Ohio, two states he regards as crucial to his candidacy.

Ford flatly ruled out an Illinois write-in effort in the March 18 primary there.

Our talks with Ford followed an unusually harsh attack on President Carter in which Ford charged the president with bringing "catastrophic evils" down on the nation.

Ford showed confidence, determination and unusually good spirits in discussing a late bid for his party's nomination. He also denied having said that front-runner Ronald Reagan could not be elected.

But, in fact, the paramount objective of a Ford race would be to stop Reagan, widely blamed by Ford men as responsible for Ford's defeat in 1976.

Ford told us that he had never said Reagan, the party leader he most dislikes and whom he barely defeated in a bitter contest for the nomination in 1976, was not electable. What he did say, Ford told us, was that Reagan generally was "perceived" as being unelectable — a perception common to many Republican politicians and voters.

Local Cost Of Living Index Below U.S. Average

Greenville's overall cost-of-living index for the fourth quarter of 1979 ranked slightly below the national average, according to statistics included in the Inter-City Cost of Living Index of the American Chamber of Commerce Researchers Association.

The fourth quarter results, included in the March "Action Report" of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, indicated that the overall index here amounted to 97.5 or just below the national average base of 100.

The "Action Report" noted that the ACCRA index

"measures the cost of living of United States cities in relation to the average of all participating cities."

According to the report, "Each participating city submits prices for specified items within the following categories: grocery items, housing, utilities, transportation, health care, and miscellaneous goods and services. The price index is designed to reflect living costs for a middle-management executive family."

The March publication indicated that, "The index is designed to compare living costs only at a specific point in time, and price movements cannot be measured from one quarter to the next." Over 200 cities are included in the survey each quarter.

Individual elements of the Greenville index, still based on the national average figure of 100, included: grocery items, 91.8; housing, 96; utilities, 115.5; transportation, 99.1; health care, 82.5; and goods and services, 100.9.

Six other North Carolina cities participated in the fourth quarter survey, with

Baseball Begins

As the major league baseball exhibition season gets underway in Arizona and Florida this week, players once again are sharpening their skills at running, catching, batting and throwing. The object of all their attention is a small, round, hard ball sometimes called a "horsehide." A major league baseball weighs between 5 and 5 1/4 ounces, and has a circumference between 9 and 9 1/4 inches. Its center is a tiny cork ball surrounded by tight layers of rubber and yarn. Two strips of white cowhide stitched together with strong red thread form the ball's outside cover. Baseballs are sometimes called "horsehides" because the covers were made of horsehide until 1974.

DO YOU KNOW — In which sport is the ball sometimes called a "pigskin"?

Acquisitions Are Reported

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

A variety of Community Development activities took place during February, including six acquisitions, it was reported Monday night by Faye Brewington, Redevelopment Commission real estate officer.

Mrs. Brewington, who also serves as Southside project manager, reported that four total acquisitions, including two in West Meadowbrook and two in South Evans, took place. She noted that the staff also closed out two severance acquisitions in the South Evans section.

Five structures were demolished during the period, Mrs. Brewington said, including one in Southside, two in West Meadowbrook, and two in South Evans.

Three families were relocated during February, she noted, including two from West Meadowbrook and one from South Evans neighborhood. Mrs. Brewington said that one option was obtained on a parcel in South Evans.

The commission's rehabilitation officer, Ed Cobb, said that rehabilitation work was completed in February on three projects, involving structures at 413 Cadillac Street, 1222 Davenport Street, and 108 Paris Avenue. All three projects, which included two grants and one loan, are located in West Greenville.

Cobb told commissioners that contractors are currently working on four properties and bids were taken Monday for four more rehabilitation efforts.

Joe Laney, executive director, reported that the staff has been concentrating on acquisition activity on both segments of the 14th Street thoroughfare project.

The acquisition is broken down into the 14th Street segment from Charles Boulevard to the railroad, Laney said, and from the Broad Street area to Farmville Boulevard. He mentioned that not a lot of changes in acquisition status took place since last month's meeting but negotiations are continuing on four parcels that should be optioned soon.

Laney said that acquisition activity should move faster now that much of the negotiation work has been done in the Charles Street-railroad section.

The city has moved into condemnation proceedings on three parcels in the Broad Street-Farmville Boulevard segment, according to Laney, and the proposed closing of a section of Spruce Street will determine four options. The Spruce Street matter will be considered by the City Council at Thursday night's meeting.

Helms, and Senator Robert Morgan reconsider a Revenue Sharing Act.

A question was raised at the meeting by Mrs. Jack Weatherly concerning installation of curb and gutter on East Main Street. The board told Mrs. Weatherly that Town Advisor Carl Dean would attend a state highway improvement meeting March 21 and request that the state improve the street, since one side is state owned and maintained.

Mayor Dail reported that the town was negotiating with Greenville Utilities in an attempt to get off VEP-CO. Town Clerk Elwood Nobles said that Mayor Dail and the town aldermen will meet Wednesday at 2 p.m. in Wilson with North Carolina Power Agency No. Two.

A question was also raised about the number of alderman Winterville has, and Mayor Dail explained the procedure for changing this number. No action was taken.

Ingram Asserts Much Is Undone

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

North Carolina Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, seeking re-election to the post he has held for the past seven years, campaigned here yesterday in his bid to win the Democratic nomination in the May primary.

Saying North Carolina has led the nation in insurance reform, Ingram emphasized that much work is yet to be done.

"The 1977 insurance law must be changed, hospital insurance at reasonable rates should be available for everyone, and we must pass legislation to require insurance companies to file data which has been audited by a certified public accountant in order to justify rate increases," Ingram said. "These are some of my re-election goals."

Another goal, according to Ingram, is a re-insurance facility for collision insurance.

The commissioner said he has received, "assurances from Gov. (Jim) Hunt (who is seeking re-election), and Gov. (Bob) Scott, (who is opposing Hunt in the May Democratic primary)," that they, "will help get needed changes in the insurance law."

He noted that Gov. Hunt has expressed support for a re-insurance facility for collision

"All the polls show that I am the only one who could beat Carter," Ford told us as his Secret Service limousine took him from the plush Poinciana Club here to the airport at West Palm Beach. "Right now, Carter may be running a little ahead of me, but he is running way ahead of Gov. Reagan and Ambassador (George) Bush. And Carter's chickens are coming home to roost."

The "unexpected" events that might change Ford's mind are three in number:

*He is demanding evidence of wide support among party policymakers and leaders in statehouses, state legislatures and Congress. Several governors already have asked him to run, including Gov. William G. Milliken in his home state of Michigan and, say Ford intimates, Ohio's Gov. James A. Rhodes.

*If evidence of "wide support" fails to develop, Ford would not announce. But, he told us: "At least I would then have made it clear that I was willing to make the effort if called on and I could not be blamed if our party gets beaten in November."

*That Carter, by miraculous transformation, suddenly shows what Ford said he totally lacks: leadership qualities capable of extricating the nation from "disastrous" policies of the past 37 months. Ford clearly, and somewhat sadly, rules this out.

Jerry Ford's attack on Carter before our interview with him was rougher than anything ever said about the president by Reagan, Bush, Rep. John Anderson of Illinois and other 1980 candidates, present and past.

insurance, explaining that, "now, insurance companies can refuse to write, or cancel for no reason," collision insurance, or increase premium rates.

He added that the 1977 law, which, "stripped the Insurance Commissioner of power," hurt the reinsurance facility for auto liability insurance, by permitting surcharges to be made for no reason.

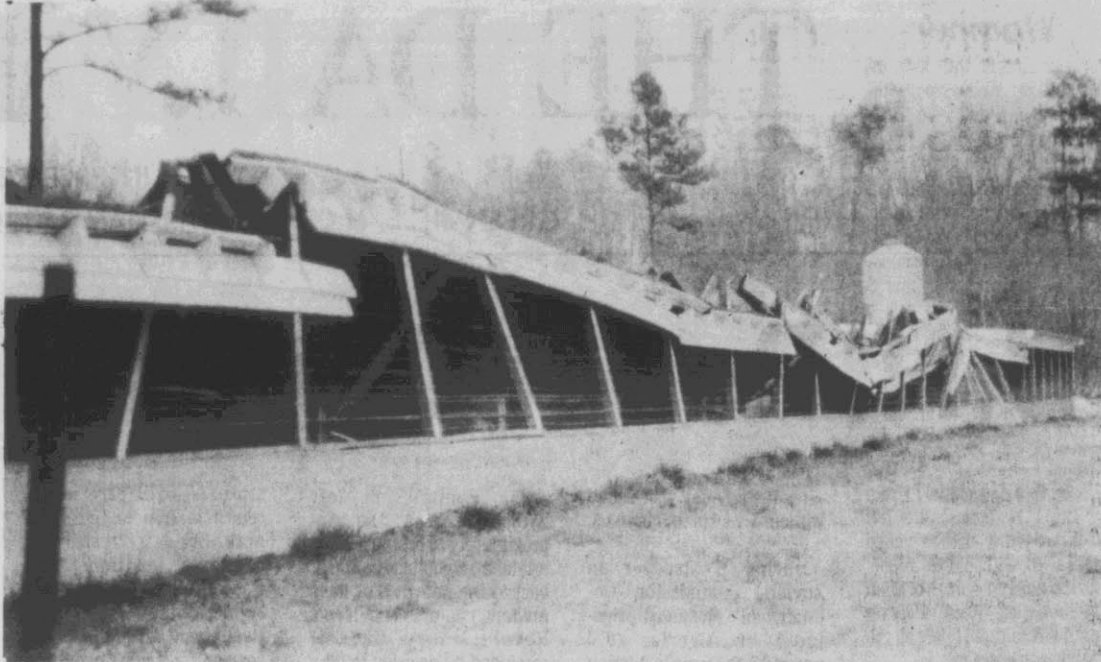

Ingram noted, "I think if people keep some kind of pressure on the gubernatorial race," changes in the reinsurance facility law will occur.

The commissioner noted that in his opinion, the campaign for re-election is, "coming along," although, "we've been working alot in the office, trying to wind up the tobacco contamination case," and other pending matters.

"We've just been doing our job in ruling in the rate cases," by rejecting a $10 million increase in workmen's compensation premiums and $31 million in the latest auto rate filing.

He noted that in both cases, the insurance industry refused to furnish audited financial information.

Ingram noted that he, "received cooperation from the

A COMMON PROBLEM — The hogs in this barn belonging to Ben Gardner have been fed and watered manually since the water pipes and the automatic feeding device broke when snow smashed when the building caved in, so he was no longer any good. Not including the extra labor involved, the loss in production, and the aggravation, I'd say the damage is around $25,000.

"The problem we've had to deal with since the snow has been feeding the hogs by hand. Watering them, has to be done manually also, which is a big inconvenience," said the livestock producer. "I got rid of around fifty hogs today, but we haven't been able to move any more out."

"We're just starting to rebuild," he continued. "I got the pipe today to fix the water back up."

Dairy producers also had their share of difficulties. Pitt County Dairyman Johnny Radford reported that a few of his young animals and dry cows caught colds in the snow, but that none were seriously affected.

"The dry cows had to stay out in the cold and some of the young heifers got colds, but they have been treated with antibiotics," explained Radford. "I haven't lost any animals due to the storm. The milking cows had to sleep on snow for a couple of days because the snow filled the stalls they sleep in."

"Sunday night it was coming down and we had trouble getting the cows in the barn to milk because there was a five foot snow drift coming into the barn," he commented.

"Also, the cows got fed twelve hours late. The feed troughs were full of snow and I had to shovel them out. The tractor wouldn't pull the feed wagon because there was so much snow," said the dairyman.

"The cows dropped off about 2,000 pounds of milk," he explained. "Milk is around $13 per hundred pounds so I figure I lost around $260 worth of milk."

"The important thing is that I didn't lose any animals," added Radford. "It was mostly a whole lot of inconvenience. I also was lucky I didn't have to dump any milk. My tanks were large enough to hold it until the trucks could come pick it up."

According to Joe Wilson, general manager of Sunnyside Eggs, the biggest problem there during the snow was transportation. "We had a lot of problems," he said. "We couldn't get the feed to the farm. We couldn't get the supplies in or the eggs out. Hens quit laying if they don't get fed. They also die quickly."

Although Wilson reported that Sunnyside did not lose any birds, egg production dropped off sharply. "No birds were lost," he said, "but the loss of production hurt us badly. We didn't have any trouble heating the chicken houses. The hens usually generate enough heat for themselves. The temperature in the laying houses got down to around the mid-forties and the lower temperatures kept the hens from laying adequately."

"The baby chick houses are heated so we had no problems with them," he added.

"Our second problem was not being able to get eggs out to the store. The customers couldn't understand why there were no eggs. The secondary roads we had to travel were impassable. If it had not been for the farmers and their farm tractors we would have been hurt much more."

"Finally, the third problem we encountered was with the employees of the plant trying to get to work," Wilson commented. "They couldn't get away from home and couldn't get to the plant to do anything. All in all, we came out very fortunate."

Charles Stocks, a Pitt County vegetable farmer, reported that the snow "burned the new cabbages pretty bad and the collards also, as well as the onions." According to Stocks, the storm also slowed the planting of potatoes and beans. "We have to be first," explained Stocks, "to make anything. A half crop of early cabbage or whatever is better than no crop at all or a late crop."

"After the first snow we refertilized the crops and they were just coming out, then this snow knocked them back down again. Now we have refertilized again and we hope it will grow back. You just can't tell. The weather always stops us."

The truck farmer estimated that the inclement weather cost him around $8,000 to $9,000 dollars in crops, particularly collards that he could have sold. Said Stocks, "I just take it a day at a time and thank the Lord for what I do get."

The tobacco beds in the county perhaps fared better than anything else, according to Leroy James. "The snow didn't really stay on the beds long enough to cause any damage," said the agricultural extension chairman. "The only problem I can see at present is with the air in plant beds if these 60 and 70 degree days persist. I suggest that the farmers open up their beds and let some air in if these warm days continue."

"The snow also put farmers another week or so behind in breaking land and planting," he added.

Total damage to farms and businesses in 30 eastern North Carolina counties from last week's snow is estimated at $21.8 million.

TODAY'S STORY

Sweet Cindy stayed in the Garden every day to be away from her Mean Stepmother who stayed in the House every day.

One day in the Garden a Frog hopped up to Sweet Cindy and said, "Please kiss me, Sweet Cindy." Sweet Cindy said to herself that things were so boring in the Garden that she might as well kiss a Frog. So she kissed the Frog.

Well, the Frog turned instantly into a Magic Prince. In his hands he held a Silken Pillow, in the center of which (beautifully Wrapped) was a Gift from Ariane Clark. He bowed and presented the Gift to Sweet Cindy and asked her to Marry him.

"A gift from Ariane Clark!" cried Sweet Cindy. "O Class! But I cannot Marry you, Prince, because my Mean Stepmother would not let me marry a Frog Prince."

"Alas!" cried the Prince, and Vanished instantly.

Sweet Cindy looked around at the Boring Garden. "Aw Shoot!" said Sweet Cindy.

Membership Goals Reached

Andy Griffith, honorary membership chairman for the North Carolina Museum of History Associates, announced the associates' recent membership campaign increased the membership of the museum support group to 3,300 members.

According to Griffith, who made the announcement from Los Angeles, "This meets the 1979 membership goal set by the associates' 400 campaign workers."

Membership dues are used for two major purposes: to purchase historical artifacts for the museum and the 23 state historic sites; and to provide educational programs to communities throughout the state.

Mrs. William S. Corbitt Jr. of Greenville, associates' state membership chairman, said membership funds are also used to purchase historical items for the museum which might otherwise be lost or sold outside North Carolina because the museum receives only $4,500 annually in state funds for acquisitions.

Recent purchases include an 18th century Halifax corner cupboard, a $5.00 Bechtler gold coin, a rare 17th century document from the Lords Proprietors and two pieces of antique North Carolina silver.

Mrs. William H. Taft Jr. is Pitt County membership chairman.

Solar Homes Tour Planned

RALEIGH — The First Greater Raleigh Solar home tour will be held Saturday and Sunday, March 15-16. Leaving from Cate Center, Meredith College, at 8:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. each day, the four-hour tour will include examples of the most advanced solar home designs.

People will have the opportunity to walk through five solar homes and ask questions of the owners and/or designers of each house. In keeping with energy conservation goals, travel from house to house will be chartered bus.

The tour is a joint project of three non-profit organizations, the League of Women Voters of Wake County, the North Carolina Solar Energy Association and the North Carolina Land Trustees of America.

To accommodate the large turnout expected, there will be two distinct tours running throughout the weekend. Each tour will consist of five homes and will include examples of both passive and active solar systems. Included in the north tour are an owner-built home and an earth-sheltered (underground) home for people with those particular interests.

For further information call Arnie Katz, 286-4411, Durham, or the League of Women Voters in Raleigh, 781-5736.

Planning a trip to Italy? Be careful with the currency. There are two kinds of 5,000 lira notes which look very similar. Both are the same size, light blue on one side and green on the other, but one is no longer legal tender. Though both notes carry a picture of Columbus, the legal note also shows three ships. The illegal tender carries only one. When first exchanging currency, check your bills carefully. Otherwise we suggest a visit to the Bank of Italy (Banco d'Italia) to get the legal lira.

Call QUIXOTE TRAVELS INC. and find out about the currency and customs of Italy and other foreign countries from our well travelled staff. Our professionals will arrange your transportation and hotels as well as other details such as transfers. For an immediate business trip or a well deserved vacation call us at 756-3456 or come see us at 319 Colaniche St., Greenville. Researchers Tell Of New Cancer Test

Duke University News Service
DURHAM — A blood test that can detect recurrent breast cancer up to 15 months before symptoms arise has been developed by a three-state research team.

The test measures a substance in the blood. First isolated from breast cyst fluid, the substance has been named "gross cystic disease fluid protein."

Researchers led by Dr. Darrow E. Haagensen Jr. of the Duke University Compresive Cancer Center found large amounts of the protein only in pregnant women and in women with recurrent breast cancer. Small amounts occur normally in both men and women, they learned.

The team's eight years of work also disclosed that:

— About one-third of the 216 women with recurrent breast cancer studied had elevated levels of protein in their blood.

— The protein is not related to another cancer indicator, carcinoembryonic antigen (CEA).

— Tests for the new protein and CEA, when used together, can detect recurrent breast before any symptoms arise in 28 percent of those patients whose cancer returns after mastectomy.

— The new test has not been useful in detecting primary breast cancer.

— Physicians can use the new test to judge how well their patients with recurrent breast cancer are responding to treatment.

Team members have published details of their work in the "Journal of the National Cancer Institute" and in the journal, "Cancer."

"Our assumption is that if recurrent breast cancer is detected earlier and treated earlier, then the prognosis may be better," Haagensen said in an interview. That assumption remains to be proven, he added. The physician estimated that at least 35,000 American women every year develop recurrent breast cancer.

DEAR ABBY: You rattled my cage with your advice to HURT IN ORLANDO, telling her to keep quiet after helping a well-to-do aunt in so many ways, then learning that this aunt was leaving her nothing in her will.

You should have told her to speak up. Sometimes elderly people need to be reminded of the favors people do for them. It could be nicely put, such as: "I have enjoyed shopping for you, paying your bills, doing your paper-work, taking you to dinner, cashing your checks and looking after your home. Why have you never considered remembering me in your will?"

She surely couldn't take offense at that. I never could bring myself to tell my father of the many injustices I suffered from his thoughtlessness. Now that he is gone, I regret deeply that I never spoke up. It may not have changed the way he left things, but I would have felt better if I had spoken my mind.

MRS. A. IN PALM SPRINGS

DEAR MRS. A.: A reader in Rockville, Md., feels that my advice was on target as far as it went, but that it didn't go far enough. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Hold the phone! You told HURT IN ORLANDO (after she'd written that she took her aunt out to dinner, did her shopping, handled her paper-work, paid her bills, cashed her checks, looked after her home, etc.—and got left out of her will, "Keep quiet. Your disappointment is understandable, but it's her money and she has the right to do whatever she wishes with it.")

Shades of opportunism! Echoes of greed! Don't you think your advice should have included something like the following: "Congratulations, dear. Not all of us get the opportunity to help someone else in such a clearcut way. Your good feelings as a result should far outweigh the loss you now feel. Surely when you did these things for your aunt, you had no motive in mind such as ultimate payment."

Abby, whatever happened to Judeo-Christian ethics? Whatever happened to the lessons taught by the Good Samaritan, by Jesus, by Moses through the Ten Commandments? Whatever happened to plain common decency without money as a goal?

Good God! And I'm not even a church-goer. What must the religious fraternity think?

GEORGE H. LEONARD

DEAR GEORGE: If the "religious fraternity" had any thoughts on the subject, they didn't share them with me. But read on for a worthy suggestion from a reader in Denver.

DEAR ABBY: In your reply to the person who had done many favors for an aunt but was left out of her will, I suspect many of your readers were disappointed that you didn't suggest to those with estates that they should ask their intended heirs to do their errands, take them to doctors, write their letters, care for their pets, water their plants, and rush them to hospitals rather than impose on friends simply because they are available, retired, or, most often, because they are more sympathetic or good-natured than the chosen heirs. At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

When do parents stop worrying about their children? No question has been asked more or answered less.

Is there a magic cut-off period when offspring become accountable for their own actions? Is there a wonderful moment when parents can become detached spectators in the lives of their children and shrug, "It's their life," and feel nothing?

When I was in my 20s, I stood in a hospital corridor waiting for doctors to put a few stitches in my son's head and I asked, "When do you stop worrying?" and a nurse with authority said, "When they get out of the accident-prone stage."

My mother just smiled faintly and said nothing.

When I was in my 30s, I sat on a little chair in a classroom and heard how one of my children talked incessantly, disrupted the class, and was headed for a career making license plates. As if to read my mind, a teacher said, "Don't worry. They all go through this stage and then you can sit back and enjoy them."

My mother listened and said nothing.

When I was in my 40s, I spent a lifetime waiting for the phone to ring, the cars to come home, the front door to open. A friend said, "They're trying to find themselves. In a few years, you can stop worrying. They'll be adults."

By the time I was 50, I was sick and tired of being vulnerable. I was still worrying over my children, but there was a new wrinkle. There was nothing I could do about it. Yet I continued to anguish in their failures, be tormented by their frustrations and absorbed in their disappointments. My friends said when my kids got married I could stop worrying and lead my own life.

I wanted to believe that, but I was haunted by my mother's wan smile and her occasional, "You look pale. Are you all right?" "Call me the minute you get home." "Are you depressed about something?"

Can it be that parents are sentenced to a lifetime of worry? Is concern for one another handed down like a torch to blaze the trail of human frailties and the fears of the unknown? Is concern a curse? Or is it a virtue that elevates us to the highest form of life?

One of my children became quite irritable recently when he said, "Where were you? You've been calling for three days: no one answered. I was worried." I smiled a wan smile. The torch has been passed.

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Dear Cecily — Several months ago, I believe you printed a recipe for making bratwurst from scratch. I mislaid it and wish I had it now. — Mrs. H.Z.

Dear Mrs. Z. — The bratwurst recipe was not mine. I've never prepared that fresh sausage, but I shall try to do so. In the meantime, you may want to look up two specialty cookbooks; each gives a recipe for making and cooking bratwurst. The recipe in "Super-Easy Step-by-Step Sausage-making" by Yvonne Young Tarr (Vintage-Random, $2.95) calls for veal, pork, seasonings and water and yields 3½ pounds. The recipe in "The Complete Sausage Cookbook" by Pamela Riddle and Mary Jane Danley (San Francisco Book Co., $5.95) also calls for veal, pork and seasonings but adds bread crumbs soaked in milk and yields 5 pounds. Perhaps your public library will have these books. — C.B.

Dear Cecily — My wife keeps a couple of bulbs of garlic on hand only for occasional use, so they last a long time. When she stores the garlic at room temperature it dries; in the refrigerator it molds. Do you know a way to keep it in good condition? — P.T.

Dear Mr. T. — I keep bulbs of garlic for months by storing them in a screwtop jar, with holes punched in its lid, in the refrigerator. However, before I store the bulbs, I make sure their skins are intact. When I remove a clove from a bulb, I also make sure that the skins around the remaining cloves are intact. This way there's no garlic odor to affect the other food in the refrigerator. Thus far my garlic bulbs have kept in excellent condition. — C.B.

Dear Cecily — This question may seem stupid, but I'm a new cook. Every once in a while I come on a recipe that calls for one or more fresh tomatoes to be "seeded." Just how do you "seed" a tomato? — Ms. R.

Dear Ms. R. — Cut each tomato in half horizontally. Cup a half in your palm and gently squeeze out and discard the seeds. Treat the other half of the tomato the same way. That's all there is to it. — C.B.

Dear Cecily — Will you please advise me where to get the Chinese five-spice seasoning you called for some time ago in a chicken recipe? — R.R.

Dear R.R. — If you are ever in a city that has a Chinatown, you'll find Chinese five-spice powder sold in many of its Chinese supermarkets and other food shops. It's a combination of five ground spices — anise, fennel, clove, cinnamon and pepper. A little of it goes a long way, so if it is sold in bulk you can buy a small amount in a bag. Store it in a tightly covered screwtop jar at room temperature and it will keep for a long time. — C.B.

Reason To Take Pride

As Pitt County returned to normal following the blizzard of 1980, Pitt County commissioners and Hospital Administrator paid tribute to private citizens who helped out in the emergency.

Vounteers transported employees to and from Pitt County Memorial Hospital and hospital employees worked overtime.

It was also noted that county farmers brought out their equipment to clear roads before Department of Transportation plows arrived. They delivered food and supplies to families stranded in the snow.

Commissioner Bruce Strickland said thanks were due to "farmers in rural areas for what they did."

We have heard report-after-report of citizens pitching in to help their neighbors and strangers during the emergency. It was like old times when people helped each other out rather than depending on government to do things for them.

Many worked long hours to keep essential services going and others volunteered time and equipment to help out. It makes us proud of the people of this area.

Almost Lost In The Snow

It was almost lost in the snow, but last week was Tornado Awareness Week.

North Carolina participated in a tornado drill last Wednesday as best it could as it dug out from the winter storm.

Tornadoes are dangerous weather disturbances, and North Carolina is a vulnerable area.

It is important that our citizens be aware that tornado watches and warnings will be issued when these killer storms threaten, and that they know what actions to take to protect their lives.

To the editor:

On behalf of the Brook Valley Garden Club, we would like to thank you for your role in fostering interest in and appreciation for our natural heritage.

The special features from time to time by Carol Tyer and Jerry Raynor have been beautiful and informative. We hope they serve to alert us to North Carolina's very rich heritage of native plants. They, Tommy Forrest and others, have an enviable ability to capture the delicacy and beauty of our environment which we often overlook or take for granted. Sometimes they have pointed out our gross neglect of it. This, too, we need.

We hope to see more such features.

Frances Tyson, President
Brook Valley Garden Club

To the editor:

The Greenville Fire Department has our most sincere thanks for a job well done during the fire on Third Street last Thursday night.

We saw hard work far beyond the call of duty as the evening progressed. We had no idea that so much was done, even after the fire was extinguished. It is nice to know that the property in Greenville is in such capable hands.

To the editor:

During the recent snowstorm, many people and agencies banded together to help those in need of assistance, to transport those persons needing emergency medical care to our local hospital, and to continue the provision of much-needed public services. I want to take this means to express my appreciation to everyone who went "above and beyond the call of duty" during the snow period.

I especially want to express my appreciation to and admiration for the many officers and employees of my department, the Greenville Police Department, who gave 150 percent during the inclement weather. Many of our officers worked 24 hours, round the clock, without sleeping, without going home to their families — giving whatever it took to get the job done. Their dedication was demonstrated by the fact that they stayed on the job, committed to their purpose — to protect our citizens and our City.

They're my employees, and I'm mighty proud of them and their job performance during the snow.

Chief E. G. Cannon
Greenville Police Department

To the editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to commend all employees of the Greenville Fire/Rescue Department for their outstanding performance and dedication to public service during the recent "snow emergency."

As you know, Public Works, Police and other City, County and State agencies also did a highly commendable job. However, no other agency displayed more professionalism than did the men of this Department.

I know that the long hours, working back-to-back shifts, difficulty in securing food, as well as extremely severe weather conditions, made the job much tougher. This is the type of situation which makes real professionalism stand out. This performance was certainly in keeping with the top-notch emergency organization which this Department has always been.

Jenness S. Allen, Chief
Greenville Fire/Rescue Dept.

To the editor:

I have always believed that elected officials were to represent the wishes of the majority of their constituents. I realize this concept often fails when applied on a large scale, because the elected ones become detached from the voters back home. But here, where members of the City Council are in positions to be in daily contact with the public, it seems they would be in better tune to the thoughts of those who elected them. That is why I am surprised that our City Council seems to be letting the city manager direct its policies.

The city manager seems to have more of a say in what the council decides than the people of Greenville. This is certainly a case of putting the cart before the horse! The city manager should limit himself to administrative matters. I believe the City Council is relying entirely too much on him for guidance and is placing him in far too strong a position of authority. Although he has great influence over the services provided to them by the city, he is not answerable to Greenville citizens. As long as he stays in the good graces of the City Council his job is secure.

What I find most offensive is the council's attitude in its attempts to railroad important decisions over opposition. The current decision about EMS and the Rescue Squad is a prime example. The council is accustomed to making a decision, going through the motions of public discussions, then proceeding as planned, regardless of the public's opinion. The council must realize that it's no longer business as usual. The public expects more answers and consideration from the council. The elected officials would do well to open their ears and listen to the public before they blindly follow those hired to follow them.

Campaigns Change

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — An unanticipated side effect of the amendment to the North Carolina Constitution which allows the governor and lieutenant governor to seek a second term is a sharp difference in the present campaign for those offices.

Any number of political experts in the various camps say they feel that 1980 could be a year in which the battles are fought more aggressively, more stridently, and more personally than in the past.

Considerable evidence of this is already on hand. House Speaker Carl Stewart seeking to unseat Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green has put considerable emphasis on differences in personal style between the two, attacking Green as an old-guard politician surrounded by wealthy, male advisors operating in a closed circle fashion. The language from Stewart has been harsh in criticism of Green.

Former Gov. Bob Scott, seeking to unseat Gov. Jim Hunt, has put forth little in the way of programs or proposals he would push if elected, choosing rather to condemn Hunt as a machine candidate intent on building a personal empire.

Attention

Scott says he must attack Hunt personally to gain public attention because of the head start which the incumbent has in an election.

For their parts, both Hunt and Green maintain an aloofness from the personal assaults, choosing not to respond; appearing instead statesmanlike and above such "gutter" politics.

Still, it's well known that the incumbency does provide clout which a challenger finds hard-pressed to overcome. Raising campaign funds is considerably easier when you are the governor rather than seeking to be the governor. Building local organizations is simplified when you have already on the team hundreds of appointees to state boards and commissions and governmental payrolls who would like to remain in those positions.

There are unseen benefits as well. Both the governor and lieutenant governor can use their offices to advantage, traveling about the state and appearing at dozens of legitimate events such as ribbon-cuttings, building dedications, and meetings at public expense. The line between purely political and official activities is thin, poorly defined, and flexible. In fact, it is, easy to set up a purely political event in the same town or a nearby town when already scheduled to be in the area on official business.

Then, there are the important benefits which come to the person already in office from ability to promise governmental action in coming months. There is a session of the General Assembly in June, after the party primaries in May. Both Hunt and Green have been able to tell various special interest groups they will deliver certain things in that session in exchange for political support.

Budget

Gov. Hunt can even take that powerful weapon one step authority and power to change that proposal, but in reality the budget is so complex and inter-related that major changes are difficult. Hunt is now preparing that budget, and letting it be known that certain projects and proposals will be included, such as a changed pay schedule for educators; funds for a victim's compensation program.

Traditionally, campaigns for North Carolina's two top offices have been run less on the personal level and more on the level of two or more individuals seeking election on the basis of their proposals for future action.

This year, for the first time, challengers are pointing at incumbents; attacking them personally, and attacking their programs. Only time will tell whether this results in better government in future years.

40 Years Ago Today

STOCKHOLM — Scandinavia held high hopes today that a peace agreement would be reached between Finland and Soviet Russia in their three and one-half months conflict.

Newspapers were unanimous in expressing belief that a peace agreement was near at hand, but their was no confirmation that a decision actually has been reached.

GALVESTON, TX. — Mrs. Mae (Masie) Walker Burleson, 51-year-old Galveston, Tex., artist and one-time woman suffrage leader, was detained at Columbia, S.C., by police for the slaying of her second husband's wife. Police say she coolly shot and killed Mrs. Richard C. Burleson, wife of a U.S. army colonel, and later admitted she was the army officer's divorced wife, but answered, "I don't remember," to most of the questions put to her.

Strength For Today

"Who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame . . ."

This verse refers to our Lord's reaction to the experience of crucifixion. He endured the cross because of the joy that was set before him. This is incredible.

Did he really enjoy suffering? No more than you and I enjoy it; but this suffering was the means of a great end, and the achieving of it was for him the consummation of all joy.

Happiness comes not from getting something for one's self but in giving something for someone else. It is the spirit of self-effacing sacrifice — crucifixion if you will — which brings peace and blessedness into one's life. The Bible bids us look "unto Jesus who for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God."

—Elisha Douglass

Other Editors Say Speech Patterns

(Laurinburg Exchange)

In the presidential sweepstakes, "As New Hampshire goes, so goes the nation." In North Carolina gubernatorial politics, "If public employees are for you, then the state is too."

According to the way candidates for governor and for lieutenant governor have been courting public workers, voters from the private sector certainly have reason to hold to this understanding.

Actually, one may wonder how all state workers find time to perform their assigned duties after reading about the number of conferences, association meetings and other get-togethers these people have been conducting during the political season. Jim Hunt, Bob Scott, Jimmy Green and Carl Stewart seem to swarm together, or apart, in order to see who can offer the mostest from the state treasury to these organized servants.

Organizations of teachers and other state workers are pressing for a 15 percent pay raise at the May term of the General Assembly, and for more later on after the new administration is installed. In addition, the push is on for further fringe benefits for this group of North Carolina people who already tower above private workers in fringe benefits.

Ironically, when these four leading candidates move out among those who farm, work in stores, and private offices, and in industrial plants, they speak to these people about conserving, holding the line and may even mention such old under-worked words as thrift and hard work.

This shuffling of speech among candidates for governor and lieutenant governor has usually been excused in the name of "politics." But this excuse may not forever be accepted. Not with the number of producing people being heavily squeezed to pay for booming government and more and more for those who work inside of it.

Plan-Ahead Urged By Customs

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer
The U.S. Customs Service is trying to get people who travel overseas to plan for their return before they ever leave home.

The Customs Service, which is a branch of the Treasury Department, is responsible for checking and collecting duty on the billions of dollars worth of foreign goods brought into the country each year by businesses, overseas visitors and returning U.S. residents.

The agency has started a campaign to get travel agents to distribute customs forms and brochures along with airline documents and hotel reservation slips. If your travel agent doesn't volunteer the information, ask for it.

Individuals can get the same package of information by writing to U.S. Customs, P.O. Box 7118, Washington, D.C., 20044. Among the pamphlets available are "Customs Hints for Returning U.S. Residents — Know Before You Go," "Importing a Car" and "Travelers' Tips," which deals with bringing foods and other plant and animal products into the country.

As a general rule, U.S. residents returning from a foreign country can bring in up to $300 worth of merchandise, duty-free, per person, including infants and children. That works out to $600 per couple or $1,200 for a family of four. If your purchases total less than the maximum, you can make an oral declaration. You do not have to list each item on the customs form. You do, however, have to fill out the identification section of the form, listing name, address, etc. (There is a higher limit — $600 per person, duty-free — for residents returning from the U.S. Virgin Islands, American Samoa or Guam.)

There are several strings attached to the $300, duty-free exemption. You must be returning from a stay of at least 48 hours abroad. You are not entitled to the exemption, for example, if you drive across the border to Mexico or Canada to spend the day. In addition, you can use the exemption only once every 30 days. If you have used any part of the exemption in the preceding 30 days or have stayed out of the country for less than 48 hours, your duty-free limit drops to $25.

If you are bringing in more than a liter of alcoholic beverages, a carton of cigarettes or 100 cigars, you must make a written declaration, no matter what the value. You also must make a written declaration if you have items not for your personal or household use.

If your purchases add up to more than $300 per person, you will have to list them all. The first $300 worth will be exempt from duty. The next $600 worth will be taxed at a flat rate of 10 percent. Suppose a husband, wife and one child are returning from abroad. Their purchases total $1,100. The first $900 — $300 per person — is duty free. The remaining $200 is subject to a duty of 10 percent — $20.

Goods worth more than $900 per person are taxed on a sliding scale. Still cameras, for example, are subject to a duty of 7½ percent. Most jewelry is taxed at 12 percent.

Salvation Army Holds Installations, Awards

Despite the heavy snowfall earlier in the week, the turnout for the Salvation Army Advisory Board's annual civic dinner was good, according to Major Arnold Williford of the Salvation Army.

Held at the Masonic Temple Friday, there were about 125 persons who attended to give and receive honors for the success of the Salvation Army's 1979 achievements in Pitt County.

A buffet dinner was catered by the Ladies of the White Shrine.

Service Awards were presented by Lyndon Ormond Jr. to Joe D. Tripp, retiring executive director of the Pitt County United Fund and to Leslie H. Garner, past chairman of the board and member of the Advisory Board of the Salvation Army for 15 years.

Certificates of appreciation were presented by Garner, who served as chairman of the Christmas Committee, to 16 clubs and organizations who participated in the 1979 Christmas Drive by ringing bells. Three of these clubs were presented Bell Ringer trophies: University City Kiwanis, first; Greenville Kiwanis, second; and Golden K Kiwanis, third.

Secretary Linda Whorton was introduced and pointed out that the program each person received at the meeting contains the financial and statistical reports for 1979.

Mrs. Jesse Laughinghouse, chairperson, reported on the activities of the Women's Auxiliary.

A musical and testimonial program was given by the Psalms Quartet.

Maj. Williford commented on the success of the programs, thanking those present for making it all possible.

The guest speaker for the evening was Lt. Col. Orville Salmon, Divisional Commander of the Salvation Army.

Col. Salmon installed officers for 1980: Lyndon Ormond Jr., chairman; Jerry Powell, vice-chairman; Julian Vainright, secretary; and James Sullivan, treasurer.

Jimmie Brewer, annual meeting chairman, recognized the Advisory Board and the civic leaders and local merchants who sponsor the yearly event.

Plaques of appreciation were presented to Harris and Ormond. Chairman Ormond pledged his full support to the duties of chairman. The benediction was said by the Rev. James Bailey.

Appeal And Raise Rates

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Workers' compensation insurance rates will go up 6 percent, beginning April 1.

The insurance industry said Monday it will implement the rate hike while appealing state Insurance Commissioner John Ingram's rejection of the proposed hike.

Increased premiums will be refunded if the increases are not approved by the courts.

In announcing the decision to appeal the ruling, Paul L. Mize, general manager of the North Carolina Rate Bureau, said "the evidence clearly shows the need for an overall increase of 24.3 percent, substantially higher than the 6 percent average increase allowed by law and requested by the bureau."

"The insurance companies' cost for providing workers' compensation benefits and medical care for injured employees continues to rise. The commissioner's failure to recognize this basic economic condition is extremely disappointing," Mize pointed out that, while rates for most of the 650 workers' compensation classifications will rise, they will actually be reduced for 164 classifications.

Charge Youths With Break-In

FARMVILLE — Farmville Police have arrested two young men in connection breaking and entering, larceny and vandalism at Heath's Grocery and Seafood Market here Mar. 4. Also arrested was an accessory.

Police Chief Ron Cooper said Jeffrey Lynn Barfields, 17, and Michael Lee Barrett, 20, both of 118 Godwin Drive, have been charged with breaking and entering and larceny, uttering a forged check, to wit a money order, damage to property; and larceny of a firearm. Both were placed in Pitt County Jail under $2,500 bond.

Wilbur Ray Gay of the same address, 118 Godwin Drive, was charged with accessory after the fact of a felony and uttering a forged check, to wit a money order. He was not placed in jail because he is handicapped, Chief Cooper said.

Cooper said the store, located near the housing project in which Gay maintains a residence was entered by breaking a window. Merchandise was destroyed by breaking open packages and bottles, he said, and many items were taken — among them 200 money orders, a check-writing machine, a pistol, and a large quantity of cigarettes.

Arrest Man In Shooting Case

Sylvester Dixon, 60 of 702 West Fifth St. was arrested about 11:50 p.m. yesterday on charges of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, following investigation of a shooting incident at his home about 9:55 p.m.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Greenville officers arrested Dixon after he allegedly shot Clarence Earl Whitehurst of 1017 West Fourth St. in the back, after Whitehurst allegedly threatened Dixon with a knife.

Whitehurst was shot with a .38 caliber pistol in the living room of the Dixon home.

Whitehurst was admitted to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment of the wound, and Dixon was placed under a $2,000 bond pending a hearing in District Court.

Doesn't See Self As Woman

PARIS (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher says she does not think of herself as a woman: "I regard myself as a prime minister."

Mrs. Thatcher's comment came during an interview on French television Monday night when asked how her all-male cabinet officers regard her.

"Do not forget that I have had years of training as a lawyer and a scientist," she said. "The thing I notice is that I therefore tend to look at things much more logically than my colleagues."

"Maybe it is that women are much more logical, much more reasonable, much more sensible, and I also tend to make up my mind very quickly."

the states. In an election year, none of these cuts will be easy.

For a third point, it should be said that a balanced budget — if it could be achieved for fiscal '81-would not solve our underlying economic problems. It would help. But the key lies in policies that will stimulate a growth in productivity and ease the impact of high energy costs. It is an admirable idea to abolish cash grants to poets and playwrights, but it's no way to reduce the price on new homes.

Mr. Carter has a formidable task before him. Under his administration, the rate of inflation has soared from 4.8 percent to 18 percent. It is of little political consequence to him that a profligate Congress shares the appalling responsibility. The buck still stops in the Oval Office. But his own political fortunes will not be harmed, but rather will be improved, by biting the budgetary bullet now.

Inflation Hits Local Citizens

By DON F. SCHLIENZ

Despite prime interest rates on loans reaching as high as 17.25 percent last week, the loan industry in Greenville has yet to be seriously affected by the record climb that has brought some areas of the nation to a virtual standstill. And several area bank officers and an East Carolina University economist agree that there is going to be no let up in the near future.

Banks and savings and loans have experienced a slowdown in mortgage loan applications, but with an expected increase of at least another one percent, the banks themselves may have to tighten belts as fewer customers can qualify for the loans.

Dr. Louis Zincone, chairman of the economics department at ECU, said that the current interest rates are neither surprising nor high.

"When you compare the interest rate with the rate of inflation, supposedly at 18 percent right now, the borrower will actually come out ahead," Zincone said. "What is surprising to me is that my brother economists find all of this so surprising."

Zincone stated that he believed people will continue to spend and borrow money as before because they realize that prices will continue to rise, lowering the value of their money.

But Clarence Tugwell, vice president of First Federal Savings and Loan in Greenville, disagreed, saying that people will begin to borrow money only out of necessity.

"People are going to put off buying that new car or new home and try to make do with what the have for as long as they can," Tugwell said. "They are going to wait for the interest rates to come back down, but at this time I have no words of optimism for them."

Sid Warner, senior vice president of North Carolina National Bank in Greenville, said that his bank has experienced a slowdown in the past week but the demand for loans has been regular.

"The public has adopted the attitude that inflation is here to stay and that prices are going to be higher next year," Warner said. "And the Federal Reserve is trying to change that attitude."

The Federal Reserve is behind the rise in interest rates in forming regulations for the banking industry. Tugwell said that the climbing interest rates are to help take money out of the economy and therefore slow down spending. This would in turn, theoretically, would help reduce the rate of inflation.

This being an election year, Zincone said that the Federal Reserve is working hard to reduce inflation and is trying to shock people into the realization that they can no longer spend like they have in the past.

Warner agreed that the government is "dedicated" to slowing inflation, but at this point it is difficult to say whether the increased interest rates have helped.

Inflation has also hit banks from another angle. Savings accounts have dropped to just above three percent of the family's income as the consumer tries to keep up with a certain lifestyle, Tugwell said.

"The United States has the lowest rate of personal savings in the world," Tugwell said. "We lack in incentives as the government taxes the interest made in a savings program which discourages the consumer from saving money."

"In Japan, the average worker saves about 27 percent of his income," Tugwell added.

Warner also said that he has seen the lower interest savings plans, such as passbook savings, decline as inflation rose. But at the same time, other plans with higher interest rates are gaining in popularity.

The high interest rates will not only affect banks and their customers, though. The housing industry and real estate agencies will also feel the brunt of the rise, as will auto dealers and other businesses that depend on their customers ability to acquire loans.

But Pitt County's economy is centered around agriculture and the farmers are going to be hard hit as they apply for loans to begin spring planting, said Wayne Byrd, vice president and credit manager of Pitt-Greene Production Credit Association. The current interest rate for farm loans is about 11.5 percent, but Byrd said they will have to raise that soon.

"Farmers are going to have to borrow more this year because the rate of inflation has increased the price of everything," Byrd said. "Items such as fertilizer, pesticides, herbicides and fuel have all gone up with the price of oil. As a result, the farmer is going to see less profit than ever before."

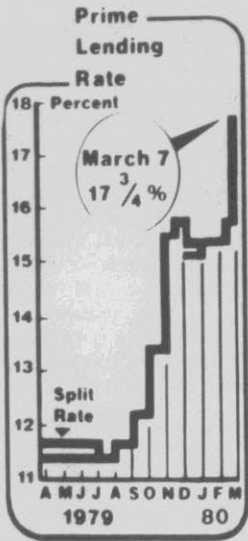

Byrd added that farming is the only business he knows of where you buy retail and sell wholesale.

"Money is not going to be spent on new machinery or more acreage," Byrd said. "The farmer is going to have to make do with what he has."

The adverse weather conditions that hit the North Carolina farmer from 1977 through 1979, combined with the troubles expected this year, Byrd said that some farmers may end up selling out and seeking outside employment.

Zincone said that the current increase in interest rates is only as temporary as inflation itself and he doesn't see a near end to that.

"Though a recession has been predicted, I have not yet observed one," Zincone said. "But we are trying hard to have one."

'Scarsdale Diet' Author Murdered

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Dr. Herman Tarnower, developer of the Scarsdale Diet, was found shot to death in his suburban New York.

Police said they found the 69-year-old physician wounded around 11 p.m. Monday at his home in Purchase, N.Y., near Harrison. He was taken to St. Agnes Hospital in White Plains where he was pronounced dead at 11:58 p.m.

Police said they also found Jean S. Harris, 57, of Greenville, Va., near the house and have charged her with Tarnower's murder. They also said they recovered a handgun believed to be the murder weapon.

Medical Diet: Plus Dr. Tarnower's Lifetime Keep-Slim Program," — is one of the most expensive to follow, calling for high-priced cuts of meat.

The book has been through many printings and paperback editions. It was once offered by book clubs and serialized in national magazines.

The doctor's specialty was cardiology, and he was honorary president and chairman of the Westchester Heart Association.

He also was clinical professor of medicine at New York Medical College and associated with White Plains and St. Agnes Hospitals, both in White Plains.

Arrest Man On Hit-Run Count

Greenville Police yesterday arrested George Thomas Hawley Jr. of Glendale Court on charges of hit and run driving and driving under the influence of drugs following investigation of a March 6 collision at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Skinner Street.

Investigators reported that a car allegedly driven by Hawley collided with a utility pole about 10:30 p.m., causing an estimated $700 damage to his car and $100 damage to the pole.

"Losing Hair? Try This At No Risk"

HOUSTON, Texas—If you don't suffer from male pattern baldness, you can now stop your hair loss...and grow more hair.

For years "they said it couldn't be done." But now a firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment for both men and women, that is not only stopping hair loss...but is really growing hair!

They don't even ask you to take their word for it. They invite you to try the treatment for 32 days, at their risk, and see for yourself!

Naturally, they would not offer this opportunity unless the treatment worked. However, it is impossible to help everyone.

The great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But, if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness may seem to "run in the family," it's certainly not proof of the cause of YOUR hair loss.

Hair loss caused by sebum can also run in your family, and many other conditions can cause hair loss. If you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead, you are beyond help. So, if you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to stop your hair loss and grow more hair...now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc. will supply you with treatment for 32 days—at their risk—if they believe the treatment will help you. Just send them the information listed below. All inquiries are answered confidentially, by mail. ADV.

City Council Schedules Public Hearing On Downtown District School Board...

The City Council will conduct a public hearing Thursday at 8 p.m. to consider the adoption of a resolution defining a downtown municipal service district for downtown revitalization purposes.

The district is bounded on the north by First Street, on the east by Reade Circle, on the south by portions of Seventh, Eighth, and Dickinson Avenue down to the railroad, and on the west by Greene and Pitt Streets, including all abutting properties.

The board of directors of the Downtown Greenville Association Inc., meeting last November, voted to request that the Council consider the establishment of a municipal service district "for the purposes of promotion and development activities."

The DGA suggested that a tax be levied, effective July 1, annually for ten years, which would generate a collectible revenue of some $24,000.

According to a report prepared by the city, the DGA "has also requested that the city contract with them to provide promotional and development services within the district."

The city report mentioned that, "The basis of the DGA's request is the reliability of a stable income which will allow the opportunity to have adequate programs and promotional activities. From past and present experience, relying on voluntary financial support for the association does not appear to be a viable means of financing."

The report added, "If the municipal service district is established, it will eliminate all dues and assessments within the district; and all stores, landlords and businesses within the district will be members."

A tax of not more than 15 cents per $100 valuation is proposed to be levied on property within the district for fiscal year 1980-81, in addition to taxes levied throughout the city.

The tax levy, according to the report, is based on a preliminary estimate of property values of $16.5 million, which would generate a collectible revenue of $24,000 based on a collection rate of 97 percent.

"In subsequent years," the city stated, "it is proposed that a tax be levied at a rate which would generate a collectible revenue of approximately $24,000 annually." The program would be evaluated after ten years and the feasibility of continuing the levy would be examined.

Revenues from the special tax will be used to "provide funds for a downtown revitalization program which includes Christmas decorations, advertising, promotion, publications, administration, and other such projects which would further the public health, safety, welfare, and convenience by promoting the economic health of the downtown area."

Property owners in the district have been notified of the proposed establishment of the municipal service district and were informed of the public hearing, the city reported.

Rose High and $9,890 at South Greenville. To these two figures is added a design fee of $1,500 for the $28,080 total.

Three other bids (including the $1,500 fee) were for $58,232, $29,569, and $37,300.

When questioned why the bids varied so drastically between the two in the 20 thousands and the one for $58,000, Cox said the unrealistic high bid was obviously a courtesy bid by a firm not really interested in getting the work.

This roof work is part of a continuing scheduled program of roof maintenance and constitutes a resaturation process rather than actual repair work. Cox explained that the 26-year old roof at Rose and the original roof at South Greenville are, because of the basic elements used at the time, subject to a need for such treatment every five to eight years to revitalize the materials so that they do not become brittle.

In a proposed guide for positions and pay grades for non-certified (non teacher personnel) in the city schools, Cox presented a classification study that would establish hourly and monthly pay scales for persons in such jobs as teacher and clerical aides, office support personnel, school food service personnel, maintenance and transportation mechanics, finance officer, and attendance counselor.

Cox said that the table was compiled based on review of the local pay situation, suggestions received earlier, and the state pay scales for school positions.

He noted that in one instance, that of the listed pay scale for food service personnel, it could have a profound effect in relation to the total food service budget — amounting to a total raise of about 14 percent.

These guides will be taken into consideration by the board when they get into the preparation of budget figures within the next few weeks.

Preliminary proposals for the 1980-81 capital outlay budget in three separate categories were presented by Cox to the board. These figures and recommendations will be used by the board as a factor in preparing the forthcoming budget.

Cox stressed that these are preliminary figures only, and that the $436,696 total for the three categories is a tentative work figure. At that, he stated, it represents a third trim down — from an original figure of a little more than a million, down to a figure of $826,000 in the first trim down, and on to the $436,696 presented figure.

The capital outlay recommendations are for:

Category I — $230,150 — This covers acquisition of property, construction, reconstruction, enlargement, renovation or replacement of buildings.

Category II — $113,546 — For the acquisition or replacement of furnishings or equipment (such as desks, chairs, library shelves, lab equipment and equipment for vocational courses).

Category III — $93,000 — For the acquisition or replacement of school buses, activity buses, and other motor vehicles.

The School Service preliminary budget proposal totals $852,239. Of this, an estimated $824,846 would be from local sources, and $27,413 from the State Public School Fund. Cox added that this is an expenditure portion only, and does not reflect at this time an income projection.

A subject to be further considered by the board is that of a statewide policy that now permits a high school student 16 years old and older to study concurrently at high school and at community colleges and technical institutes.

Locally, this means that students interested in taking certain courses at Pitt Community College will have the option to do so under certain conditions. Primary among these conditions are:

1. That prior approval is obtained.
2. That the course is not offered at Rose High School.

3. That at least 150 class hours is spent on each unit earned for high school credit.

Already, students who maintain certain standards of excellence are permitted to take some courses at East Carolina University.

The new state law will broaden opportunities for high school students. Cox noted that most students who would take courses at Pitt Community College would apply "not so much to gain high school credits as to get some course they wanted not offered in the city schools."

Another topic to be acted on by the board at a later meeting is that of new course offerings at Rose High. The new offerings suggested at this point include two new courses in math; one in accounting; one in business communications; a fashion merchandising course, and an additional health occupations course.

In curriculum policy, the board will consider a proposed policy to make mandatory completion of English courses consecutively grade by grade — i.e., a student must successfully complete English 10 before being permitted to take English 11. Students would not be permitted to take English 10 and 11, for example, in the same school year.

In other actions, the school board:

Approved the annual field trip visit by students to Washington, D.C.
Received a report on school board safety which lists, among other improvement, the installation of a set of convex mirrors on the front fenders of all yellow buses (regular buses).

Received for study a copy of the document prepared to be submitted to HEW in response to that agency's request for a review on vocational programs in the city schools.

The fees reflect the administrative cost, time cost and other costs involved to the town.

A public hearing was held last night on the paving of Watermelon and Turnage Streets. The board voted that the project be undertaken as soon as the money becomes available. Persons attending the hearing expressed displeasure at the fact that the streets cannot be paved until next year. "It just simply cannot go into the budget until after July 1," Mayor Pro Tem Brown explained.

The board also approved a revised lease including land where Carolina Power and Light Company authorized additional power poles in its right of way. Town Manager Russell commented, "We have to revise the past leases because of the angle of the line coming out of the switching station. This revision refers to a certain survey point."

Director of Utilities Mike Finney reported on the progress of the construction of the lines for the switchover. He characterized the condition of the work as "wet" saying that the transmission lines are approximately 75 percent complete. "About eighteen feet of water is holding us up," he said. "The equipment is designed for use in only up to six feet of water, eight feet at the most."

The board also re-appointed Travis Dixon to a three-year term on the planning board, and approved fire officers. The Fire Department elected Calvin Hardee as chief and Elmer Tripp as assistant chief. Ed Skinner was chosen secretary-treasurer.

The board also discussed improvements to be brought up at a transportation improvement meeting in Beaufort County. "We have three state-maintained roads," said Russell, "and 102 was recently resurfaced but old 11 needs it badly. I was told that it was on the list but I did not see the resurfacing schedule. I do think we should submit property from Lee Street on through town for improvement."

Russell also reported on the progress of the well being repaired on Second Street. "It is an emergency situation," said the Town Manager. "This puts a tremendous strain on our one remaining well on Garage. No matter what the cost the well must be repaired. I get frightened every time I hear the fire whistle go off."

Appreciation was expressed to the Police Department, Mike Finney and Mr. Byrd for their work in the snow last week. Said Russell, "They worked until 1:30 one morning. The blade on our motor grader is worn down completely."

On Saturday, they played a double header with the Roanoke Virginia Star City Four Wheelers, and won the first game by a 65-37 score and the second by 40-27.

On Sunday, the Steelwheels traveled to Martinsville to play the Martinsville Virginia Spoke Benders. The Greenville team won the first game by a score of 55-41. Due to injuries the Spoke Benders did not have enough members to play the second game, so players from Roanoke and Martinsville were formed for an exhibition game, which the Steelwheels lost by a narrow two-point margin — 28 to 26.

The Steelwheels will be playing the Raleigh Capital City Hustlers in a double header on March 15 in Tarboro. Game time is 2 p.m.

Villanova Coach Says Syracuse Good Enough To Win It All

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Syracuse basketball team has been called the "Beast of the East" on many occasions, but Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino thinks the Orangemen can be even more frightening than that.

"Syracuse is a good enough team to win the whole thing," says Massimino, talking of course about the NCAA basketball playoffs.

Massimino has the marks to prove it, after a 97-83 whipping by the Orangemen Sunday in a second-round game of the East Regionals.

The nation's sixth-ranked team displayed the kind of firepower and depth usually associated with a national champion. The Orangemen played for the most part without foul-troubled Roosevelt Bouie and got a sub-par game from high scorer Louis Orr, yet had enough in reserve to win handily.

Among the players with whom Iowa will have to contend in the East Regional semifinals in Philadelphia Friday night will be Erich Santifer, who scored 29 points against Villanova.

"When I came to Syracuse I was hoping to play a lot of forward," says Santifer. "I thought with Bouie and I up front, it would be a good lineup."

It has been good enough to win 26 of 29 games and keep the rich Orangemen in the Top Ten all season.

"We just keep playing better and better," says Coach Jim Boeheim, "and getting the easy shots inside."

Sunday's victory in Providence, R.I., incidentally, was Boeheim's 100th in just four years of coaching at Syracuse.

Along with Syracuse, another of the East's formidable teams will be on display in the Philadelphia doubleheader when Big East champion Georgetown plays Maryland of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Iowa, by the way, is one of four Big Ten teams still left in the field, which was reduced to 16 over the weekend.

The other Big Ten representatives — Purdue, Indiana and Ohio State — all will see action Thursday night.

In the Midwest Regionals at Lexington, Ky., it will be Purdue against Indiana and Duke (Atlantic Coast Conference) vs. Kentucky (Southeastern Conference). In the West Regionals at Tucson, Ariz., Clemson (ACC) will play Lamar (Southland) and UCLA (Pac-10) will meet Ohio State.

In another regional semifinal doubleheader Friday night, Louisville of the Metro Conference will play Texas A&M (Southwest Conference) and Missouri (Big Eight) will take on Louisiana State in the Midwest Regionals at Houston.

NFL Owners Vote No On Moving Raiders From Oakland To L.A.

By JACK STEVENSON
AP Sports Writer

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Managing general partner Al Davis of the Raiders finds himself in an almost untenable position today because he wants to move to Los Angeles and the National Football League demands he stay in Oakland.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said 22 of the league members voted against permitting Davis to move his team into the vacant Los Angeles Coliseum with five abstentions and Oakland not voting.

Rozelle said the "morality of hop-scotching franchises" was one of the main factors in Monday's vote.

Davis said he still plans to play in Los Angeles but Rozelle retorted, "The Oakland Raiders will play their games in the Oakland Coliseum in 1980."

The Commissioner said, "We will schedule them in Oakland," but he admitted that the issue still must be settled in the courts. No fewer than six court actions currently are pending on the matter.

Davis also pointed out other franchise moves which had been made. Jim Hardy, general manager of the Los Angeles Coliseum, said: "We have a seven-year contract with the Raiders and a commitment for $17 million in improvements. There would be a course of action in the courts against any who would seek to negate that contract."

Still, Hardy admitted, "It does look pretty bleak for the Raiders coming here this year." The Rams' move from the Coliseum to Anaheim Stadium in adjacent Orange County is scheduled to start with the 1980 season.

The NFL appeared to be making a power play against Davis when Charles Sullivan of the New England Patriots moved for a vote on the question of the Raiders' move from Oakland to Los Angeles.

The motion was seconded by John Mecom of the New Orleans Saints.

NLRB Gives Okay For Umps To See Ratings

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Now that he has the clout of the National Labor Relations Board behind him, Richie Phillips, attorney for the Major League Umpires Association, expects to see the so-far secret umpire evaluations of the National League.

And, for that matter, the American League's, too.

"I think they'll comply, given the politics of the situation," Phillips said after the NLRB notified the league that it should supply the union with the requested information.

The umpire evaluations were one of five issues over which Phillips filed unfair labor practice charges with the NLRB last September. The other four have either been remedied or found to be without support and will be dismissed by the NLRB if not withdrawn by the union, according to Peter Hirsch, director of the board's Philadelphia office, which handled the complaint.

Hirsch said the National League would have about two weeks to comply with the preliminary administrative determination. If no action is taken in that time, a formal complaint could be issued.

Phillips was elated with the NLRB position. "This is a big, big win for us," he said. "I think it's sensational."

Both leagues routinely evaluate umpires with supervisors and clubs forwarding their assessments. Phillips said American League President Lee MacPhail had agreed to turn the ratings over to the union last year but then changed his mind when the National League balked.

"Now I'll go after the American League evaluations, too," Phillips said.

"I don't know what course we'll take yet," said NL President Chub Feeney. "In cases where umpires have been discharged, we've given the information to the union, but we haven't discharged any since Phillips took over. When he asked for the evaluations, I said, 'I don't see that you have any need for them.'"

Phillips feels that replacement umpires who worked during the 1979 strike were rewarded for that by being retained after the work stoppage ended and that the evaluations will show that other umpires promoted for brief periods and then returned to the minors had higher ratings.

"According to the contract we signed May 18, they were to remain on merit and merit alone," Phillips said. "But those who refused employment as strike-breakers were not to be discriminated against in any way."

Phillips cited the case of Charley Williams, a highly rated Pacific Coast League umpire, who was called up when Nick Colosi suffered a heart attack. When Colosi was able to return to work, Williams was returned to the PCL.

"He was on the top of their list," Phillips said. "But" — he ejected their offer to work during the strike. "I believe the ratings will reflect that after he was called up. Williams rated higher than some of the others. But he was sent down. Our position is if he rated the lowest, OK then send him down. All we want is to have the best umpires in baseball at the big league level."

The bidding:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ 1 ♦
5 ♥ Pass 6 ♥ Pass
Pass Pass
Opening lead: King of ♦.

We have frequently pointed out in the past, and will, no doubt, do so again in the future, that there is more to slam bidding than simply counting up your aces and kings. More often than not, a slam will depend on partner holding a specific king or singleton. Witness today's hand.

It is a principle based upon cool logic that a leap beyond game, to five of a major suit, when nothing has been said about a suit which the opponents have bid, carries with it the message: "Partner, everything seems to be under control except for the fact that we might have two fast losers in the enemy suit. If you can promise that they will not take more than one trick on the go, I would like you to bid a slam. Obviously, I do not expect to lose any other trick, for with two losers in their suit and another ace missing, I would not have proceeded beyond game."

With such a powerful trick-taking hand, North opened his six-card diamond suit in preference to his five-card heart suit since he was quite prepared to reverse the bidding. He was delighted to hear his partner's one heart response, and West's one spade intervention actually made the auction simpler.

North immediately saw slam possibilities, but there were those two losing spades staring him in the face. There was the possibility that his side had a diamond loser as well, but he was prepared to gamble on finding partner with either a singleton or the king; or, at worst, declarer would have to fall back on a finesse. To determine whether his partner has spades under control, North jumped all the way to five hearts.

South certainly had no rock-crusher, but he realized that he had the right cards. Partner obviously was worried about losing two spades, and South's king, with the opening lead coming up to his hand, prevented that. So South accepted the invitation.

The hand was not laydown. Declarer ruffed the opening lead in dummy, cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond high. After drawing trumps in two rounds, he led the queen of diamonds from dummy, and when the king appeared, all was well.

Rules 'No' To Trademark-Use

OTTAWA (AP) — A john might be a portable toilet or a "client of a lady of negotiable virtue," a Federal Court of Canada says, but "Here's Johnny" is just too readily associated with Johnny Carson and "The Tonight Show" to be allowed as a trademark for portable toilets.

Carson had appealed a decision by the registrar of trademarks to allow William Reynolds, of St. Catharines, Ont., to use the trademark for his business of renting portable outhouses.

Before making his decision Monday, Justice Patrick Mahoney accepted as evidence in which 63 percent of those polled in a random survey connected "Here's Johnny" with Carson or his show.

Therefore, the phrase was not registrable as a trademark without Carson's permission, he ruled.

Endowment By James Michener

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — James Michener, whose best-selling novels have made him one of America's favorite authors, has established a $500,000 endowment for young writers at the University of Iowa.

"The single goal of this endowment is the publication of better books," said Michener, 73, in announcing the gift Monday. Grants from the fund will give struggling writers "six more months of (paid) grocery bills or another year of typing."

Something Lovely And Strange For Television

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Something lovely and strange comes to television tonight, a series that simply demands a separate ledger for its reckoning.

It is called "United States" — the allusive title referring to the various states of connubial union probed by this serio-comic innovation; and it is the product of a virtual free hand given to creator Larry Gelbart (who brought "MASH" to TV) by NBC President Fred Silverman.

The first thing you notice about "United States" is that it comes with none of the standard signposts of ordinary prime time television that direct us to the "right" mood. No bouncy theme song, no audience reaction, no laugh track.

Once inside "United States," you'll notice none of the standard elements of ordinary TV comedy. No ham-fisted dilemmas, no easy solutions, no clumsily laid comic setups.

Instead, you'll see two married people talking. Talking in their bathroom, talking in their bedroom, talking in the kitchen. Talking about death and money and about the fact that they talk so much.

It has been suggested that such is the true stuff of marriage, that "United States" is an universal definition of marriage. It is not that, any more than its intellectual cousin, "MASH," is a true definition of war.

What "United States" is, though, is television that tries to be clever, rather than funny. That's more than enough.

Larry Gelbart and Helen Shaver play the lead roles, Richard and Libby Chapin — handsome, upper-middle-class parents with a grip on life as tenuous as any, blessed with an extraordinary capacity to articulate their perplexities.

But the real stars of "United States" are the words themselves.

In one upcoming episode, Richard and Libby are discussing a male neighbor's infidelity. Richard suggests the mid-life straying is understandable, if not forgivable.

"It's too bad about married men," Libby replies, "it's one disappointment after the other. It's easy for the wife, of course; she merely discovers that at least five of her husband's toes are made of clay, that he's filled with doubts and fears, that his armor only shines now and then, that, like her, he's vulnerable and susceptible and that that winning smile often hides the fact that he thinks he's losing..."

"Yes, I can imagine wanting to be free of the one person who knows you so well."

A lovely observation, though unlikely to be found in the midst of a late-night bedroom argument, even if the bedroom belonged to Edna Ferber.

But something is said, and that is the achievement of "United States."

Not So Sure Of Borough Honor

NEW YORK (AP) — Millie Jackson made her reputation in Brooklyn — but she's not sure it's one the New York City borough wants to note.

The soul singer, whose shows and gold albums contain some off-color banter, was stunned when Borough President Howard Golden called to say that Friday would be Millie Jackson Day in the community where she first gained fame.

"They said the borough president would be at the ceremony," said Miss Jackson, who will perform that night at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. "They said it was to set an example about Brooklyn."

"And I said, 'Are you sure it's me you want? I'm the example you want?'"

Warm House And Hot Water From A Wood-Burning Unit

KEEPING WARM — Franklin Allred, a telephone repairman from Asheboro, points out how one switch of his homemade wood furnace automatically opens the stove vent in the middle of the night to produce more heat for his house while he sleeps. The furnace also aids in providing hot water for the home. (AP Laserphoto)

RANDLEMAN, N.C. (AP) — One cold afternoon, Franklin Allred says he sat and stared at the baseboard heating units in his home, wondering what he would do if the house lost electricity for any length of time. After a lot of tinkering, he came up with an idea.

Allred, an employee of Central Telephone Co. in Asheboro, has devised a rather unique system which works in conjunction with his wood stove to provide the hot water his family needs as well as the warmth necessary for cold winter days. He salvaged a sheet metal cabinet from an old gas furnace in a local church. In the basement of his home, he installed the woodstove inside one end of the cabinet, which was insulated with quarter-inch sheets of asbestos.

Next to the stove was a water tank, to which was connected a pipe from his cold water line coming into the house from a well. Allred then attached a copper pipe to the bottom of the water tank, brought it to the top of the stove and made 13 horizontal coils in it before running the pipe back into the top of the tank.

Still another pipe connects the top of the tank to the cold water intake on his electric hot water heater.

Allred's plan was to take advantage of the natural circulation properties of water as it becomes heated. The water in the coils is heated and circulates back into the top of the tank, forcing the colder water down toward the bottom of the tank into the coils where it is also heated. No pump is needed.

Allred completed the homemade wood furnace by installing some sheet metal ductwork and a fan to force the hot air in the cabinet upstairs. Not only is his house kept warm, but the furnace also provides pre-heated hot water to a temperature of 150 degrees Fahrenheit.

For now, Allred estimates that the combination wood furnace-hot water heater is saving him as much as $100 a month which would otherwise go into higher electric bills.

"As it gets colder, we burn more wood to get more heat, and we get more hot water in the process," he said.

Last winter's storms left the Allred home without electricity for three days on consecutive weekends. But the system worked throughout.

"Without our wood stove, we would've had to have left home. As it was, the stove heated our house, cooked our food and heated our hot water," Allred said.

His inventive mind is still working, too. Allred has rigged a device which works with his upstairs thermostat to fire the stove automatically when the house cools down in the early morning hours.

Also, last year he added an "A-coil" for central air conditioning which operates from the same fan and thermostat as his wood furnace. He also added another hot water tank to take advantage of the lost heat from the flue-pipe off the back of the stove.

Uganda Still Suffering From Effects Of Idi Amin's Rule

By RICHARD TOMKINS
Associated Press Writer
NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Idi Amin's brutal rule still casts shadows over the Ugandan land and people he ravaged during eight years of military dictatorship.

Crime is rampant. The economy is in shambles. Remnants of Amin's army raid northern border villages. Bullet holes pockmark walls and ceilings throughout the country.

But where is Idi Amin himself? And what is he up to? He fled last April to Libya, deserted by supporters and shunned by former friends as the invading army of Tanzanian troops and Ugandan exiles marched across Uganda. He is believed hiding in North Africa or the Middle East. But occasional reports that he has been seen cannot be confirmed, and the governments of Libya and Saudi Arabia — named as his sanctuaries — have denied that they have him.

Col. Moammar Khadafi, Libya's ruler and a longtime supporter of Amin, "supports the new regime in Uganda," said his ambassador to the Philippines. "Therefore I doubt if Idi Amin is still in my country."

Filipino businessman Demetrio Gagampan reported last year that he met Amin in a villa outside Tripoli, the Libyan capital, surrounded by bodyguards. He said the onetime sergeant in Britain's African army told him he escaped from Uganda disguised as a Tanzanian army sergeant.

A London newspaper claimed that Khadafi became increasingly unhappy at having Amin on his hands and hustled him out of Libya after his successors in Uganda made overtures for his extradition.

The report said he went to Saudi Arabia and that King Khaled allowed him to live in the Jidda area after warning him to "abandon all hopes of making a comeback" and not to try to rejoin remnants of his army in refugee camps in southern Sudan.

Ugandan President Godfrey Binaisa gave a different reason for Amin's reported departure from Libya. He told a rally last month Amin fled after his bodyguards had a gun battle with Libyan security forces in which seven of Amin's men and two Libyans were killed.

The Ugandan government has shed no light on Amin's whereabouts. Plagued with dissension and the ruined economy, it appears less than eager to expend time, money and effort on tracking him down, extraditing him and bringing him to book.

The Tanzanian government also appears uninterested in chasing down Amin. Instead it is concentrating on rebuilding its war-strained economy.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

A Cheer for the Family Doctor

The family physician must truly be considered the "all-round" specialist in the practice of medicine. There are many areas all over the country where his or her approach to the total human being is a community's sole source of medical support.

In larger cities, with more sophisticated sub-specialties, the family physician is relieved of many of the burdens of highly specialized medical problems.

A survey taken of the contributions of the family doctor to the welfare of the public would show his quick utilization of the tremendous strides in modern medicine during the last decade.

The first and most exciting statistics to emanate from the decade of the '70s was that life expectancy was highest and infant mortality was lowest during this period. Substantial gains were made in all areas of medicine, from obstetrics to the treatment of cardiovascular diseases.

Great concern about the environment and its effect on health was responsible for the attempts to eliminate environmental hazards. Educational campaigns made the public more aware that food should no longer be contaminated by certain harmful dyes and additives. Evidence made clear that the unborn child was adversely affected by the alcoholic intake and cigarette smoking of the mother.

The technique of amniocentesis allowed amniotic fluid to be safely removed from around the unborn child, for the study of potential birth defects. Genetic manipulation and genetic engineering have expanded enormously, and helped in the control of birth defects.

The decade of the '70s was also a period during which the World Health Organization was able to announce that smallpox had finally been eradicated in all parts of the world.

The epidemic of hard drugs seems to be abating. The use of heroin, LSD, and other related drug abuses are, in fact, diminishing somewhat. Unfortunately, the use of cocaine, alcohol and marijuana continues to be a constant threat to the many people caught in their traps. Active educational campaigns may yet play an important role in driving sense into those who have been lured into drug use by the pseudo-sophistication of such drugs as cocaine.

The most profound developments in the past decade are reflected in the decrease in mortality from heart disease and strokes. This decrease is based on earlier, more exact diagnosis and the immediate institution of intensive therapy. The introduction of stress testing has been enormously helpful. The vast strides made in cardiac surgery and "bypass" operations have reached new heights of accomplishment.

Radio-immune studies have extended new frontiers for the early detection and treatment of cancers.

These are only some of the dramatic strides in medicine and surgery of the past decade. America's family physician has been a bulwark of support, utilizing medical advances to prolong the health and life of his patients.

Music Week Is Proclaimed Here

Mayor Don McGlohn proclaimed March 10-16 as "Music in Our Schools Week" in Greenville, pointing out that the period offers "a special opportunity for citizens to understand and support the ongoing processes of music education."

McGlohn said that the focus of the 1980 observance, which has been designated by the Music Educators National Conference, is the theme "Music Counts."

The mayor noted, "Music is the basic influence on millions of Americans who participate in performing and listening experiences developed through music in the schools."

McGlohn asserted, "The joy and harmony of music contribute to the quality of life in America," and he added that "education in music develops sensitivity, aesthetic awareness, and intellectual powers for all young people."
