Carter, Reagan Wear Down Their Rivals In Illinois Vote

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
CHICAGO (AP) — Ronald Reagan took a giant stride toward the Republican presidential nomination with a convincing primary victory in Illinois, while President Carter trampled Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's Democratic challenge. Their victories were matched by landslide leads as votes were counted today in competition for national convention delegates.

Reagan's easy win over Rep. John B. Anderson, with former U.N. Ambassador George Bush a distant third, left the former California governor with no formidable challenger in view. "They'll find someone," Reagan smiled. He said he wouldn't claim the nomination just yet for fear he'd jinx himself.

Reagan's victory in the industrial Midwest provided geographical breadth to a string of wins that included two of three New England contests and four triumphs in the South.

Carter was rolling in the same direction as Reagan, defeating Kennedy by a margin of more than 2-to-1. The Massachusetts senator promptly pronounced the New York primary next Tuesday to be the big test — which is what he used to say about Illinois.

The president now has defeated Kennedy in 17 states, losing twice. But Kennedy said "I will continue," even if Carter beats him in New York.

Tuesday's Illinois primary was a two-phase contest, with presidential candidates competing for popular votes while supporters ran separate races for seats at the Republican and Democratic conventions.

In returns from 47 percent of the precincts, Carter led for 152 delegates, Kennedy for 18, and 2 were uncommitted. Seven delegates were undecided because vote returns were not reported.

Actually, 152 delegates were elected Tuesday, with 27 more to be named at the state Democratic convention. Under party rules they are to be apportioned to candidates in line with the outcome of Tuesday's competition.

On the Republican side, 41 percent of the precincts had tallied delegate votes. Reagan led for 43, Anderson for 22, Rep. Philip Crane for 3, and 21 were uncommitted.

On the Republican side, 89 percent of the precincts had tallied delegate votes.

Reagan led for 42, Anderson for 24, Rep. Philip Crane for 4, Bush 2, and 20 were uncommitted.

The Republicans elected 92 delegates, with another 10 to be chosen at their state convention. Reagan entered Illinois with 167 delegates; Bush was second with 45. It takes 998 delegates to win the nomination.

With 97 percent of the Illinois precincts counted for the Democrats and 96 percent for the Republicans, the popular vote read:

Democrats

Carter 754,722 or 65 percent.

Kennedy 347,788 or 30 percent.

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. 39,717 or 3 percent.

Minor candidate Lyndon LaRouche 18,674 or 2 percent.

Republicans
Reagan 523,944 or 48 percent.

Anderson 400,454 or 37 percent.

Bush 120,706 or 11 percent.

Crane of Illinois 23,832 or 2 percent.

The rest was scattered among dropout candidates Sen. Howard Baker, John Connally and Sen. Bob Dole, and a mule driver from Oswego named V. A. Kelly.

Illinois Primary

Democratic	Republican
Carter 65%	Reagan 49%
Kennedy 30%	Anderson 37%
Brown 3%	Bush 11%
Others 2%	Others 3%

CHOICES IN ILLINOIS — With much of the vote counted, Jimmy Carter was a landslide winner in the Illinois primary and Ronald Reagan finished well ahead of Rep. John B. Anderson in his home state. (AP Laserphoto Chart)

No Priority On Hostages

By The Associated Press

An Iranian diplomat who met with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said today the U.S. Embassy hostage issue will not be resolved before May 15. He said he was told the Americans' fate will not be a "priority" item on the agenda of the new Iranian Parliament.

At the International Court of Justice in the Netherlands, the United States charged that the Moslem militants holding the embassy had treated their American captives harshly during the first weeks of the takeover.

In one instance, it was alleged, a militant pointed a pistol at a woman hostage and pulled the trigger repeatedly, Russian roulette-style. It was the second day of a world court hearing in the U.S. case against Iran.

The 50 Americans at the embassy were spending their 137th day in captivity, and Iran's ambassador to Kuwait, Ali Shams Ardakani, said they face at least 67 more days in the hands of their young captors.

Ardakani, just returned from Tehran, told the Kuwait newspaper Al-Siyasseh.

"There will be no solution to the hostage question before May 15.

"I understood during my meetings with Imam Khomeini and President (Abolhassan) Bani-Sadr all issues relating to political questions including the problem of American hostages will not be dealt with until the completion of the Consultative Council (Majlis) election and formation of a new government.

"But the hostage question is not the only one on the council's agenda, so we are not going to give it priority on some domestic problems."

Khomeini says the Majlis, Iran's Parliament, must decide whether and when to free the hostages. Ardakani's report reaffirmed an earlier statement by Ayatollah Mohammed Beheshti, first secretary of the Revolutionary Council, that the debate could not start until May.

The second round of elections for the new, 270-seat Parliament are scheduled for April 4.

The vote count from last Friday's first round was continuing today.

'We Lose Our Country' If Inflation Goes On: Hunt

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

"If we don't stop the inflation rate, we will lose our country," Gov. Jim Hunt stated bluntly at a morning press gathering here today.

The governor, in Greenville for several activities, told media representatives that, "We will have to do with less. We'll have to tighten our belts. All America will have to tighten its belts."

Hunt observed that it would be better to "tighten our belts now than to have inflation destroy us." Commenting on the prospects of losing $57 million in annual federal revenue sharing funds, Hunt said that the particulars are still to be worked out as to what state areas would suffer funding cuts. He said, however, that the cuts would affect a "broad array of programs," including human service efforts.

Hunt, who has made education one of the focal points of his administration, pledged that in spite of the potential loss of federal funds, the state will continue to pay for books and buses for the state's schools.

"I want our state to help the nation bring about a balanced federal budget," he told the press contingent.

Responding to a question regarding increases in the state employment roster, Hunt said that in the four years prior to his taking office, the state had an average increase of 4.8 percent each year in new employees. His first year as governor saw the increase down to 3.3 percent, while the second year the rate dropped to 3.1 percent, he added.

The average increase has been cut to two percent in the current year, his third year in office, the governor said, meeting his target percentage. According to Hunt, next year's budget has cut the increase in state employment to .94 percent, representing a figure that is "approaching no growth in government."

Campaign opponents have charged that some 15,000 new state employees have been hired during Hunt's tenure and that the governor's own staff has seen an increase of 130 percent.

Hunt contended that many of the state employee additions involved teachers aides in his primary-grade reading program, and also new prison guards that were necessary to make "our prison system more secure" and keep the "federal government from taking over the prison system."

Virtually all of the increases in his own staff involved the creation of the governor's Office of Citizen Affairs, he said, where volunteers are encouraged to take part in public service.

Questioned as to a possibility of beefing up the State Bureau of Investigation as a means of helping to control drug traffic, Hunt said that, "We have to do what is needed." He said that he planned to support in future legislative sessions increased expenditures to control drug traffic in the state.

Hunt said that current rates charged by Virginia Electric Power Co. in the state are 40 to 60 percent higher than rates levied by Carolina Power and Light Co. He said that he would like to see a voluntary sale of power services worked out between Vepco and CP&L.

Where Vepco has claimed in the part that its rates will be comparable to other utility charges in the near future, Hunt reported that Vepco's construction plans have now changed and its rates will not become comparable with CP&L charges.

The rates are higher, he said, in the "very area we are trying hardest to get in-

New Appointees Attend Pitt Hospital Board Meet; Plaques To Six

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The four newly appointed members of the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board were in attendance at the annual meeting of the board held last night.

New members are Leo Brody of Kinston, Noel Lee Jr. of Washington, N. C., Joseph Parker of Ahoskie, and Dr. W. Jeffress Senter of Raleigh. It was announced that the Pitt County Commissioners have reappointed Moses Moye of Farmville to another term.

Board Chairman Harry Leslie presented plaques of appreciation to six outgoing members. Of these Leroy James of Greenville and William Francis Tyson of Stokes began their service on the board in 1971. Norfleet Sugg of Pinetops, James Cheatham of Greenville, Dean Rich of Pinehurst and Ruth Boyer of Goldsboro, since March, 1976.

The board unanimously approved the slate of officers recommended by the nominating committee chaired by Robert Monk of Farmville. G. Harry Leslie was elected to a second term as chairman, with Albert C. Martin of Kinston elected vice-chairman. Ephraim Smith of the Chocoma area re-

Call Meeting

The City Council has scheduled a special call meeting for Thursday at 5 p.m. in the first floor conference room at city hall.

Items scheduled for consideration include: an ordinance amending the 1979-80 general fund budget; an ordinance amending the 1979-80 debt service budget; a request by the East Carolina Art Society for a waiver of the privilege license requirements for the annual sidewalk art show on April 26;

Consideration of appointments to the Energy Management Commission; consideration of a resolution endorsing the Tar River Task Force's study of the feasibility of developing the Tar River as a recreational area and requesting the Army Corps of Engineers to conduct a feasibility study;

Scheduling of a public hearing on the Manual of Standard Designs and Detail; scheduling of a public hearing on a request by the Boys' Club of Pitt County to rezone property on the west side of Greenville Boulevard adjacent to University Condominiums from R-20 to R-6; and consideration of an application by Dennis Earl Hardy Jr. for a license to operate a pawnbroker business at Rivergate Shopping Center.

JAMES LONG?

I am attempting to trace the ancestry of my grandfather, Montgomery King, who grew up in Greenville and came to Spartanburg about age 22 in the late 1880's. He had an older brother, James Long, who operated a grocery or general merchandise store in downtown Greenville and late in life married Annie King. The 1880 census showed James living with his grandmother, Frances Lou Brown. James and Montgomery's mother was Elizabeth Brown, who apparently became a widow early and later married a Mr. Lawrence. Their father possibly could have been William Long, listed in the 1850 census. I was told there was an uncle living in Washington, N. C. in the early 1900's named Edward Long, who never married. I'd appreciate any information about the Long or Brown families. Roberta Long Yeager, 112 Floy St., Spartanburg, S.C. 29301.

Hotline talked with a longtime Greenville resident, who said he remembers buying nickel milkshakes from James Long, who operated a grocery first in the 400 block of Evans Street (now Evans Mall) and later on Dickinson Avenue near its Pitt Street intersection. He said Mr. Long married his wife, who survived him by some years late in life, as you said. He said he is pretty certain that neither of them ever had any children. He knows of no living relatives, he said, but perhaps some of our other readers will know about the Brown or Lawrence relations. If so, we ask that they contact you at the address given above.

Winds Wreck Old Homeplace

STOKESTOWN — Tornadoic winds destroyed the Pitt County homeplace of Senator James Edwards Monday morning, causing an estimated damage of $20,000. Edwards represents the thirty-fourth district in the North Carolina House of Representatives, which includes Caldwell County.

According to Edwards, four tobacco barns were demolished, two other barns destroyed, and a house was heavily damaged. "The wind evidently peeled the roof off the house," said the senator. "That was the house I was born in." The structure was unoccupied at the time.

"A big pecan tree fell also," he added. "That tree had been there as long as I remember. My sister said the big barn and the small one were completely turned around."

Edwards estimates the tobacco barns were worth around $1,000 apiece. The value of the large barn he set at $10,000-24,000 and the smaller barn at $1,000.

"I was told the storm spread timber and tin all over everything," Edwards commented.

Two occupied houses near the homeplace escaped injury although, said the senator, "a magnolia tree fell just outside each of them."

Edwards was born in Pitt County. He is owner and manager of Southeastern Adjustment Company in Hickory and lives in Granite Falls. He and his sister, Vivian Mills of Greenville, own the property destroyed.

Seek Re-Establish City K-Thru -Six Pattern

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A number of concerned residents — 702 to be factual — have signed a petition calling for the re-establishment of kindergarten through grade six in each of the six elementary schools in Greenville.

The committee heading the drive to collect signatures has been headed by Mrs. Christa Scharinger. In the work of contacting Greenville residents to secure signatures, Mrs. Scharinger was assisted by Ann Pearce, Darlene Worley, Pearl Tyler, Edith Oliveira, and Ann Castellow.

The structure of Greenville City schools for years has been that of having all seven grade levels — a kindergarten and the first through the sixth grades — at each of the schools.

Earlier this year, after two public hearings and input from the public, the Greenville City School on January 21 voted to structure the schools with kindergarten through grades three in four schools, and fourth through sixth grades in two schools.

Art Scharinger, husband of the chairman of the committee seeking to re-establish the K-6 pattern for the city schools, talked about some of the factors that have motivated the committee to take action to seek public opinion on such a re-establishment.

"There's several reasons we would like to see K-6 in all the schools," Scharinger said. "First of all, it would be great if all the students could walk to school. We know this can't be, but the plan adopted for next year will cause additional busing, and this is one of our primary concerns.

"The safety of students because of additional busing and the qualification of drivers is part of this same concern. I understand there's no adult monitor riding buses," Scharinger added.

Another point Scharinger touched is one he said "is probably an intangible type of thing. But you cannot develop school spirit, loyalty when students have to move from one school to another. And people with large families may have kids in as

Sauce Adds To Chinese Eggplant

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Recently, in a small Chinese restaurant in my neighborhood, I tasted a stuffed eggplant dish I had never before encountered. The eggplant, cut in large slices, was stuffed with a savory meat mixture, then these "sandwiches" were dipped in batter, deep-fried and served with a delightful sauce. I was determined to copycat the recipe. At that point I asked the help of my friend Florence Lin, head of Chinese cooking classes at New York City's China Institute and author of "Florence Lin's Chinese Regional Cookbook" (Hawthorn). When I invited her to the restaurant to taste the dish she agreed with me that it was delicious. It differed from similar Chinese dishes, she said, because the eggplant sandwiches were large and a sauce accompanied them. Best of all, she offered to work out a recipe for the dish I could pass along to you.

No sooner offered than done. Florence is a culinary speed artist! When we tried her copycat version we found it wonderfully good. One of the great things about the dish is that the batter covering the eggplant sandwiches stays crisp even when it's doused with sauce. If you try this recipe and enjoy it, please thank Florence Lin.

FLORENCE LIN'S CHINESE EGG PLANT
6 large or 12 small dried shrimp, if available
1 pound ground lean pork
1 scallion, finely chopped
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon soy sauce
Batter, recipe follows
1 to 1 1/2 pound eggplant
Sauce, recipe follows

2 cups peanut or corn oil
Soak shrimp in 2 tablespoons hot water for 30 minutes; drain well and finely chop. Thoroughly stir together the shrimp, pork, scallion, cornstarch, salt, sugar and soy sauce until the mixture is paste-like and holds together. Makes about 1 cup. Refrigerate and reserve.

Make the batter; reserve at room temperature.

Trim ends from eggplant and pare; slice crosswise 1/2-inch thick. There should be 10 slices. Pair eggplant slices according to size. Put an equal portion of reserved pork mixture on 5 of the eggplant slices, spread almost to edges, top with plain slices, making "sandwiches."

Make Sauce and keep hot.

Heat oil in a wok or large deep skillet to 365 degrees on a trying thermometer. With tongs dip eggplant sandwiches one at a time in the batter and fry without crowding until browned—3 to 4 minutes on each side. Drain on brown paper and keep warm in a single layer in a low oven. The eggplant sandwiches can be kept hot up to 30 minutes or may be reheated in a 450-degree oven until hot, about 5 to 10 minutes. Cut the hot eggplant sandwiches in about 1-inch wide strips and arrange them on a heated platter. Pour the hot Sauce over them. Serve at once.

BATTER: Whisk together 1/2 cup all-purpose flour, 1/2 cup cornstarch, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt and enough cold water, about 1/2 cup, to make a smooth, thick batter; whisk in 2 tablespoons oil.

SAUCE: In a small bowl stir together 2 teaspoons cornstarch and 1/2 teaspoon sugar, gradually whisk in 1 cup clear fat-free chicken broth and 1 tablespoon soy sauce until smooth, reserve. In a small saucepan stir-fry 1 minced clove of garlic and 1 tablespoon minced scallion in 1 tablespoon oil until slightly softened, but not browned. Stir in reserved cornstarch mixture and, stirring constantly, cook until clear, thickened and boiling.

If you need a whole head of garlic, drop it into boiling water, let it stand a minute or two and the garlic cloves will slip easily from their skins. To peel just one clove, smack its

Homemaker's Haven

By Sue B. May

Pitt Home Agent

This is the season when we think of spring cleaning and refurbishing. We might not enjoy all the tasks included, but many of them are necessary to enhance the life of furnishing in our homes.

Many lampshades are washable, particularly those made of fabric that is sewn, not glued. Any trim, in color or pasted on, should be removed if the shade is to be washed by the following method. First, vacuum the shade inside and out to remove surface dirt. Then immerse it in a bathtub or a sink filled with detergent or soap suds. Agitate the shade by moving it from side to side and up and down. Rub with a well-lathered soft bristled brush, for stubborn dirt. Rinse the shade in several changes of clean water. To dry the shade, tie a string to the middle of the frame and hang it over the tub or from a clothesline to drip dry.

Plastic, plastic-coated, laminated or parchment shades can be cleaned with a sponging of thick suds. To rinse, wipe with a damp cloth and dry with a clean cloth.

Fiberglass tubs and showers require proper care if their life is to be prolonged. Keep in mind that use of an abrasive on a fiberglass tub or shower could spell problems for the remaining lifetime of the item.

Instead use a liquid detergent mixed with water and a soft cloth to remove dirt and film build-up. An automatic dishwasher detergent that has been diluted with water is another good choice.

To determine film build-up after a thorough cleaning, wax the sides of the tub or shower with an auto or silicone wax. But for safety's sake—never apply wax to the bottom of the tub or shower.

Your dishwasher may be the easiest-to-care-for appliance in your house. It's in constant contact with detergent and hot these cuts harbor dirt and bits of detergent, so take extra care to keep sharp points away from your dishwasher liners.

Plastic tends to collect doors. Depending on the interior of your dishwasher, you might want to leave the door open occasionally—giving the appliance a chance to air out.

THE CLEAN WAY TO KEEP RUG ODORS AWAY!

Lestoil Deodorizing Rug Shampoo.

To get rid of odors in rugs, you need to get at the source of smells, and clean them away. Carpet fresheners just mask odors, don't clean. But Lestoil Rug Shampoo penetrates fibers with a cleansing foam. And it contains VX-3, a deodorizer so powerful it even works on stubborn pet smells. So Lestoil Shampoo cleans and deodorizes at the same time. No carpet freshener can do all that.

Carpet fresheners just cover up odors, don't clean, don't get at the source of smells.

Lestoil Rug Shampoo penetrates rug fibers, cleans, deodorizes for long-lasting freshness.

Tables Of Four Dinner Held By Junior Women

The GFWC Junior Woman's Club of Greenville held its annual tables of four dinner at the Woman's Club.

Entertainment was provided by violinists, Patricia Bath and her mother, Mrs. Charles Bath. Earlene Lawrence, second vice president, gave a report on the spring dance and tickets were distributed by Lee Masten, ticket chairman.

Laura Shivar, conservation department chairman, presented Vickie Karpick with the yard of the month sign. Kathy Griffin, education chairman, introduced Angela Buck, the club's Sallie Southall contestant and presented her with college shower gifts. Brenda Jarman, home life, sponsored a coupon exchange for members and announced an April shower will be held for the Children's Home Society. Tips on driving in show were given by Ms. Karpick, public affairs.

Certificates were given to winners in the District Arts Festival by Lynne Olmstead, arts chairman. Katherine Gray, NCFWC junior project chairman, announced a Parents' Anonymous meeting Wednesday, Scott Allen, juniorette advisor, said they would be sponsoring a dance. Membership Chairman Anne Pridgen said the club had four new members, Patty Hogan, Emma Wilkinson, Betty Blain Worthington and Kelly Fleming.

Mrs. Lawrence announced the following new officers: President, Mary Shearin; First Vice President, Lee Masten; Second Vice President, Ingrid Civils; Secretary, Brenda Jarman; and Treasurer, Anne Pridgen.

Jane Moore, CIP chairman, told of plans to tour the hospital's neonatal unit April 2. Shelly Basnight, advisory chairman, told of proposed changes in the club's constitution and by-laws. A report on the district arts festival was given by Charlene Holloway.

Members of the June picnic committee are Nancy Buzzelli, Brenda Bunn, Mary Shearin, Deborah Shaw, Mrs. Lawrence and President Maggie Brown. Planning to attend the State Arts Festival are Ms. Brown, Mrs. Olmstead and Ms. Dodson March 22.

The group's board meeting will be held Wednesday at the home of the president. Meeting hostesses were Anne Arrington, chairman, Sherri Tripp, Karen Collier, Ingrid Civils and Charlene Holloway.

'Take-Home' Doesn't Pay

By Abigail Van Buren

1980 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday my children were given "goodies" to play with that were taken from our hostess' place of employment. She has all sorts of little odds and ends at her house that she frankly admits she's taken from where she works. She makes no secret of the fact that she just helps herself.

She inherited this trait from her father, and she's passed it on to her children. Most of these "bonuses" are relatively inexpensive items, but when you keep taking little things every day, over a period of time they add up.

Perhaps a mention in your column about employee pilfering, which is not uncommon, will wake a few people up. Thanks.

WITHHOLD MY NAME

DEAR WITHHOLD: "Employee pilfering" is a high-sounding euphemism for stealing—a billion-dollar international disease—for which we, the consumers, pay. If anyone out there has a solution, short of frisking and X-raying every employee as he leaves his job, please submit it. (P.S. Correction: Character deficiencies are cultivated not inherited.)

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, a junior in college, and her boyfriend (same age) went on a skiing weekend with another couple—also college kids. My daughter told me that All four stayed at a motel in one large room that had two double beds in the room.

FLOWER GIRL—Jennifer Marie Holmes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee B. Holmes of Fairfax Station, Va., has been chosen flower girl for the 1980 North Carolina Cherry Blossom Banquet/Ball. Scheduled for Saturday at the Kenwood Country Club, Bethesda, Md., the event is held in conjunction with the National Cherry Blossom Festival. Jennifer's grandmother is Mrs. Jack Spain of Greenville.

Shower Given Bride-Elect

Mary Ruth Mattheis, bride-elect of Michael Shawn Booth, was honored at a floating bridal shower Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Ernest Stine Sr.

Mrs. J. O. Derrick, Mrs. James Hecker, Mrs. Graham Nahouse, Mrs. Jack Kear and Mrs. Edward Switzer were assisting hostesses.

The bride and her mother, Mrs. Floyd Mattheis, and the mother of the bridegroom-elect, Mrs. Richard C. Booth of Cary, were given corsages of miniature yellow mums.

The bride's table was decorated with a lace cloth and centered with a five branch candelabrum flanked with magnolia leaves and yellow mums. The house was decorated throughout with flowering and green plants.

I was shocked! She said she and the other girl slept in one bed, and the two boys slept in the other bed. Should I believe her?

YOUNG ONCE

DEAR YOUNG: Why not? If it had been her intention to deceive you, she would not have admitted to having been in the same room with the boys.

DEAR ABBY: A very dear man I knew had a stroke while walking down the street. He lay on the sidewalk near a bar for nearly an hour—and nobody helped him. Most people thought he was just drunk, so they passed him by, not wanting to get involved.

He died the following day. That fine man had a young people's group in church. I am one of the young people.

The message I want to convey through your widely-read column, Abby, is this: Please, if you see someone in need, drunk, sick—no matter what—please call the paramedics or get a policeman. Don't just ignore him.

This fine man had a stroke and a cerebral hemorrhage. Maybe he would have died even if he had been taken to a hospital immediately, but at least he wouldn't have died all alone on the cold sidewalk. And he possibly could have been saved if someone had helped him sooner.

A 14-YEAR-OLD WITH A HEART

DEAR 14: If your letter changes the thinking of only one person who would deny help to a stranger because he doesn't want to "get involved," it's well worth the space in my column. Thanks for writing.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "TROUBLES GALORE IN WATERLOO": I just read your 44-page letter and will send you a personal reply when you send me your address. In the meantime, if you want to cry over spilt milk, please condense it next time.

Getting married? If you want a traditional wedding or a do-your-own thing ceremony, for some great ideas write to Abby for her "How to Have a Lovely Wedding" booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

ABWA Bazaar Is Planned

The Pirate Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association will hold its first bazaar March 22, Saturday, at Heilig-Meyers, Greenville Boulevard, beginning at 9:30 a.m.

Items available will include Easter gifts, handmade items, including silk flowers, baked goods, decorated Easter eggs, macrame plant holders, cross stitching, pom pom bunnies, dried flower arrangements and others.

Proceeds from the bazaar will help towards the annual scholarship fund to help students in the east Carolina area provide tuition.

Don't overdry fabrics. Wrinkling and harshness can result in shrinkage, particularly of cotton knits. Overdrying also wastes energy. Some items—corduroy, quilted fabrics and knits—are best removed from the dryer with a trace of moisture still in them.

Developing A New Crop

North Carolina farmers are constantly on the look for new crops to bring in more income.

We are rapidly developing a new one, according to Dr. R. Charles Brooks, poultry marketing economist with the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service.

A rising star among farm products in our state is turkeys. We may soon be the biggest turkey producing state in the nation. Only Minnesota stands between us and the title.

Dr. Brooks reported the state produced 23.1 million turkeys last year — some 1.6 million behind Minnesota. It is expected that our state will produce just under 26 million turkeys this year.

Last year's crop produced $171 million for turkey growers, while ten years ago the value of the North Carolina turkey crop was only $37 million.

Americans are also eating more turkey, it was reported, and thus it could become even more lucrative to the growers.

Taking advantage of the expanding market for turkeys is a shrewd move on the part of North Carolina farmers. The added income supplements farm income from other crops, and the diversification helps protect the farm economy from sudden downward shifts in prices of the more traditional products.

Nobody Held Responsible

Ho hum. Sen. Lawton Chiles, chairman of a Senate Governmental Affairs subcommittee, reveals millions are being spent on new furniture and five federal agencies are not aware of how much they have.

In the meantime other government agencies are buying furniture like mad.

Who's responsible? Probably nobody. No one will have to answer for this waste, nobody will be fired and there will be no reprimands.

No wonder no one in government worries about waste.

THIS AFTERNOON

Nat'l Incinerator

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The biggest bombshell in the complex and politically volatile notion of pushing North Carolina as a leader in technology for disposal of toxic and hazardous wastes is that this state might then become a major incinerator for the rest of the nation.

If top state officials manage to implement a system for burning the wastes as is now being developed by Research Triangle Institute, and if through a fee system, or some other approach, a local community is found in which such a facility can be located, it follows that demand for use would be high. At this point, Dr. Quentin Lindsey, science advisor to Gov. Jim Hunt, and others on the special task force which Lindsey heads, would like to limit use to North Carolina alone. Or at least, use might be limited to this state and others in the vicinity which agree to share the burden; such as South Carolina, which has indicated it would bury the material if North Carolina would burn it.

No Limit
But experts close to the waste disposal dilemma say there is no way use can be limited. The problem is national in scope, and the federal government has so far failed to come up with even the beginnings of a solution. Previous attempts by local or state governments to restrict use of existing disposal facilities have been challenged in the courts and on appeal to federal agencies by those desperate to find a means of getting rid of their poisons, and invariably the decisions have been to the effect that use of disposal facilities cannot be restricted.

Lindsey, at a recent meeting of a legislative committee on waste disposal, was guarded in his comments, and sketchy about details of the developing plan. He told legislators that this state does have in the Research Triangle and the universities the talent and technological know-how to solve the problem, and that because so many North Carolina firms produce toxic wastes it is an important state problem.

"We are not seeking to get into the business just to be in the business...but to help our research facilities continue," Lindsey said. "To plan a workable approach may BILL NOBLITT mean that we will not have a solution imposed upon us.... We must guard against just drifting into being a regional disposal facility by default. We might become a dumping ground by default." Barnwell, where wastes from a number of nuclear power plants are stored, would like to send the bulk here to be incinerated, Lindsey said. Other tradeoffs are possible, he added. "Incineration seems to be the best answer... North Carolina will have to take a leadership position."

New Law
Because of the complexity of the situation, the strong opposition, and the fragmentation of state agencies and state law concerned with waste disposal, it seems likely that steps will be taken slowly and piecemeal rather than in one coordinated package. Such an approach — some legislative proposals in the short session of the General Assembly in June, others in 1981 — would also help ease the program past the political hurdles. Unless legislators and opponents were intimately knowledgeable of what impact specific steps would have as they occur, the total program would be shaped and in place before many people realize it.

Here are some of the potential legislative actions related to the overall scheme: state authority to condemn land for waste disposal, which it now lacks; a state liability fund to pay damages incurred from a disposal facility; a state fund to aid communities accepting a facility; state money to conduct research in burning or disposing of toxic wastes; an amendment to local zoning laws allowing state interests to take precedence.

Other Editors Say Appalling Risks

(Salisbury Post)

Some valid questions about the security of the transportation of radioactive wastes were raised by a recent Rowan County incident.

A Stanley County truck driver, tried in the Rowan district court on a charge of driving while under the influence, was found guilty of careless and reckless driving. He told the arresting officer he was driving a load of radioactive waste from Pennsylvania to South Carolina when he stopped at a Rowan tavern near Rockwell where he had three beers. The officer stopped the truck after he observed it weave slightly.

There are several disturbing aspects of the case, but the foremost of course, is that the driver of any nuclear waste hauler would treat his job so casually that he would drink any alcoholic beverage while on his run. That's about as safe as searching a dark corner of a gunpowder factory with the use of a match.

Radioactive waste is supposed to be hauled on prescribed routes, and Highway 52 is not one of them. And the driver left the truck unattended while he spent the night at his Stanley County home — another apparent violation of federal regulations.

It also appeared curious that reporters were not able to find what type of waste he was hauling. This would seem to be vitally important in the event of an accident.

In the absence of disposal sites near nuclear plants, the hauling of wastes long distances is a necessary practice if the use of radioactive materials is to continue. It has come under attack recently to such an extent that shipments may be almost impossible to continue.

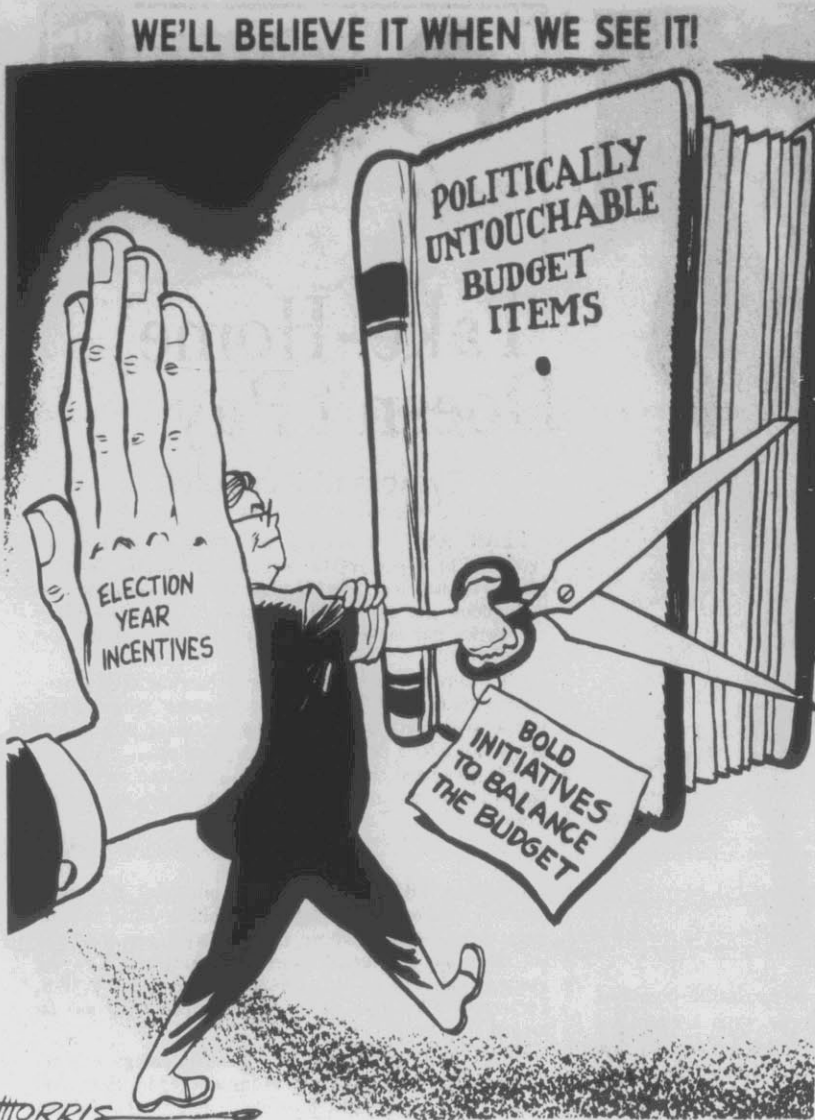

An incident such as this one is a pretty good sign that waste shippers and their haulers are exercising far less than the normal precautions such a move requires.

There is absolutely no reason to increase the implicit risks. Tighter standards are obviously required.

Strength For Today

HAVE FAITH

We have all upon occasion heard a friend complaining bitterly about something unfortunate which happened to him, and then discovering, later on, that it had all been for the best. With all our knowledge, people today are still very unsuccessful in foreseeing the future and deciding what is best for themselves. Our tomorrows have a disconcerting way of producing new experiences and new situations which leave us as changed people with changed desires.

A Communications Gap

WASHINGTON — The reason President Carter has been staying in the White House is to take care of the Rose Garden. The Rose Garden, as everyone knows, is in bad shape, and until he's able to rectify this, Mr. Carter has no plans of campaigning for the Presidency.

The other day, the White House landscaper presented the President with a resolution for the Rose Garden. Mr. Carter looked it over and said, "It looks all right to me, except take out all references to dandelions."

The President thought he had the problem resolved and went off to Camp David for the weekend.

While he was away, the landscaper told the gardener to replace all the roses with dandelions. The gardener argued this might be a mistake, but the landscaper said that was what the President wanted. The gardener was also instructed to say, if anyone asked him, that although they were replacing the roses, this did not mean the White House was changing its rose policy.

Well... when Mr. Carter returned from Camp David and saw all the rosebushes gone and dandelions in their place, he was absolutely furious and demanded to see the landscaper immediately.

"What did you do to the Rose Garden?" he demanded.

ART BUCHWALD
"You told me you wanted dandelions instead," the landscaper said.

"I did not. I told you to take out all the dandelions and, if the gardener would not do it, to leave the Rose Garden as it was."

"I'm sorry, sir. It must have been a foul-up. I thought you said you wanted dandelions."

"Do you realize what this

Other Nations Feel Inflation

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — In announcing his newly conceived attack on rising prices President Carter pointedly referred to severe inflation as a world rather than domestic problem. In some respects he was right.

In Iceland, for example, inflation ranged above 70 percent for the six months to January of this year. In Turkey it topped 100 percent, in Italy more than 21 percent, and in Sweden more than 18 percent.

These figures, from the Paris-based Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, of which the United States and its chief trading partners are members, seem to confirm the president's words.

will do to me politically?" the President said. "The rose growers all over America will be furious. Is it too late to tear the dandelions out?"

"We can't do that, sir. The dandelion lovers will say you bowed to the pressure of the rose lobby."

In the meantime, Teddy Kennedy got word of the Rose Garden fiasco and, in a major address to the Men's Auxiliary of the Garden Clubs of America denounced the Carter backyard bloop.

All the Republican candidates said they were appalled.

Carter met with Vice President Modale and Robert Strauss to discuss the political implications of the disaster.

Both men reported the heat was on, and rose supporters all over the country were angrily calling the White House. Strauss thought the blunder could cost Carter New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois. Mondale said even Minnesota rose growers were up in arms.

The President decided there was only one thing to do, and that was to issue a statement saying that he had made a mistake, and due to a communications problem, between himself and the landscape department, all the rosebushes had been torn up.

The explanation was issued but did not placate anyone. The rose growers couldn't believe that Carter hadn't deliberately changed his policy on the roses, and the dandelion lovers said he had changed his mind for political expediency.

What depressed the President the most was that no one gave him any credit for his candor.

Script Was By Hubert

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
CHICAGO (AP) — Hubert H. Humphrey wrote the script, and Gerald R. Ford followed it four years later. They went to the brink of presidential candidacy, pulled back — and played into the hands of the men they wanted to stop.

Just as Humphrey's last presidential fling turned out to be a favor for Jimmy Carter, so Ford's was a boon to Ronald Reagan.

Ironically, Ford's 15-day flirtation with another bid for the White House began with his declaration that Reagan was too conservative to be elected president in the fall.

With that, and a series of hints that he might just make a run for it himself, Ford succeeded only in confusing and confounding the active opposition to Reagan.

Former United Nations Ambassador George Bush was in deep trouble anyhow, but it got deeper with the prospect that Ford might run.

With Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee and former Gov. John B. Connally forced out of the contest for lack of votes, Bush and Rep. John B. Anderson of Illinois are the only two rivals who can claim any evidence of the support to challenge Reagan's commanding lead.

Bush has been losing ground in the primaries, and few Republicans other than Anderson think a liberal congressman from Illinois can force himself atop the ticket of a conservative party.

In effect, the first signal from Ford's retirement haven in Rancho Mirage, Calif., was that only he had a chance to stop the former California governor and give the GOP an electable ticket in November.

And the second signal was that he wouldn't try because the chance was so slim.

Ford didn't put it that way. He said he wanted to strengthen, not divide his party, and told associates that he will campaign all out for the ticket — even a Reagan ticket — in the fall.

That's more than Reagan did for Ford in 1976, which still rankles the former president.

But a tardy campaign, with name supporters unwilling to sign on unless Ford declared himself first, would almost certainly have been futile.

So Ford declared Saturday: "I am not a candidate. I will not become a candidate. I will support the nominee of our party with all the energy I have."

That didn't entirely preclude the possibility that Ford would come if called by the Republican National Convention, which had been his position all along. In fact, there is virtually no chance of that.

Ms. Lost At Sea

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
PERSONCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — State Police mounted a personhunt today for two gunpersons wanted for personslaughter in the fatal personhandling of a local mailperson and the foreperson of a personolin personfacturing plant in Personhattan.

Relax. Such is not the newspaper prose of the immediate future. We are being rescued at last from what Vladimir Nabokov called "all that personure" which recently has been piled high over the English language in the name of sexual equality.

The new Associated Press Stylebook (one word), which is the arbiter eleganciae of the prose style used in most newspapers and broadcast news programs, as well as our own humble scribbings, has given decent burial in a mass grave to the chairperson, the spokesperson, the gunperson and all those other androgynous hermaphroditic unisex creations who have been robbing the English language of its manhood.

I quote from our new revised style bible: "—PERSONS: Do not use coined words such as chairperson or spokesperson in regular text.

"Instead use chairman or spokeswoman if referring to a man or the office in general. Use chairwoman or spokeswoman if referring to a woman. Or, if applicable, use a neutral word such as leader or representative.

"Use chairperson or similar coinage only in direct quotations or when it is the formal description for an office."

So, there it is. The chairperson is dead. Long live the chairman or the chairwoman or the chairgay, if there is to be a further breakdown of the sexes.

This should come as no surprise to the pipe-smoking, very ladylike Mary Dunhill of the tobacco and pipe dynasty, who when she headed the august British firm of Dunhill Ltd. (purveyors by appointment to Her Majesty the Queen) always insisted on the title of chairman of the board and NOT, as she told me in an interview, chairwoman, chairlady or chairperson. Mary Dunhill had started off as a bookkeeper in the family firm and when she finally made it to the head seat at the board table she wasn't going to have her title diluted by the feminists.

Ms., unfortunately, is still with us in The Associated Press — when a woman prefers that mode — but there is hope. The prestigious Times of London recently buried Ms. as an abomination, banned the ersatz abbreviation forever from its distinguished news columns, when it returned to the newsstands of Britain after a long and regrettable strike.

If the Times had not been out of publication for so many long, sad (for true lovers of the Queen's English) months, Ms. might never have gotten a stiletto heel in the door of our language.

Ms., according to the new AP Stylebook, "is the spelling and the punctuation for all uses of the courtesy title, including direct quotations."

"When this happens, it's difficult for parents to become involved in school events such as PTA and other activities.

"Another angle, and this is something I don't think much attention has been given to, is that many students have after school activities they take part in, such as recreation programs," Scharinger pointed out.

"With the mass busing that will be involved in busing students, these children will be late getting home, and this can very likely cause many of them to have to drop recreational programs by the wayside."

Scharinger said he feels one of the most significant indications of the petition is that it represents a cross section of Greenville, both white and black communities. "We're convinced that these 700 concerned persons who readily signed the petition shows there's a real desire for a return to the traditional K-6 pattern in our elementary schools."

A copy of the petition with accompanying signatures has been provided to each member of the school board and to Supt. of City Schools Glenn Cox.

All Air Force F-15s Grounded For Leak Check-Up

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP) — The Air Force grounded its entire fleet of 420 F-15s to look for accumulations of fuel vapors in the wings that could cause explosions in the late-model, twin-engine jet fighters, a newspaper reports.

About half the planes were inspected and cleared to fly by Tuesday, the Newport News Daily Press said in today's editions.

At Langley Air Force Base in Hampton, 36 of the 59 aircraft inspected were found to have the fuel vapor problem, the newspaper quoted unidentified sources as saying.

Some officials believe the leaking fuel may have played a role earlier this month in a fire at Langley that destroyed a $25 million F-15.

A spokesman for the Tactical Air Command described the grounding as "a precautionary safety inspection." It went into effect Saturday.

"They were restricted from flying," the TAC spokesman said. "But if a war had started, they could have flown."

The problem centers on fuel tanks mounted inside the wings of the fighter. Officials at Eglin AFB, in northwest Florida, recently noticed an accumulation of fuel vapors inside the wings.

The planes can carry nearly six tons of jet fuel in internal tanks. Those tanks are vented to the outside to prohibit the buildup of explosive fuel vapors.

The interior of the wing, however, is nearly airtight.

Military officials fear a minuscule fuel leak could allow a dangerous amount of vapor to build up over several years.

Some officials speculate that is what might have happened March 10 when an F-15 caught fire on a runway at Langley.

The plane was undergoing a preflight maintenance check with a crew chief in the cockpit. When he started the engines, there was an explosion and a wing burst into flames.

The crew chief and three others were injured. That accident now is being investigated by the Air Force.

Fixing the problem is relatively simple and inexpensive. The mechanics remove some of the panels on each F-15 wing and insert a sensor that detects fuel vapor.

If the vapor is found, the fuel tank is resealed with a liquid that covers any holes in the tanks and then hardens.

Langley's 1st Tactical Fighter Wing received the first operational F-15s more than four years ago.

The plane, capable of flying more than twice the speed of sound, is flown from four other from installations in Japan, bases in the United States and Germany and the Netherlands.

Cheerleader Now Banned

DETROIT (AP) — Barry Bremen may never again appear at a Dallas Cowboys football game — as a Dallas Cowboys cheerleader.

Bremen, a Southfield insurance agent who has recently drawn national attention as an impostor, donned the National Football League team's cheerleader attire in December. Posing as one of the women, he tried to join in the cheers, but was apprehended by a security guard.

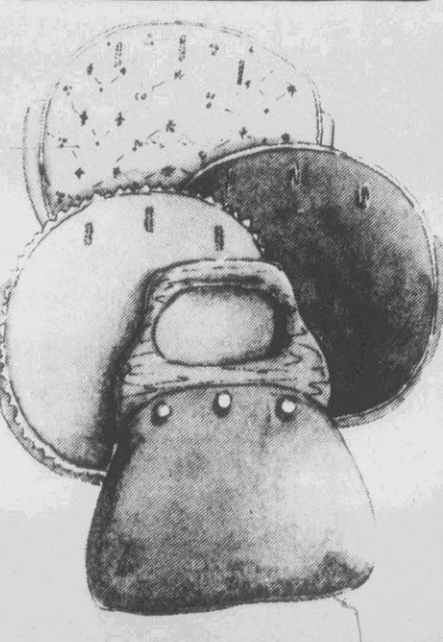

The Cowboys then responded by suing Bremen, who also has masqueraded as professional basketball and baseball players and as a professional golfer. The team's suit demanded that Bremen be banned for life from Texas Stadium, where the Cowboys play, and also sought $10,000 in damages.

But Allan Rein, Bremen's attorney, said his client has settled the suit out of court. Under the compromise, the Cowboys dropped their money request and Bremen was banned from ever appearing on the Texas Stadium field — or anywhere else the Cowboys are playing — in a Dallas cheerleader uniform.

U.S. Consumers Will Be Paying More For Credit

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The government's latest credit-control efforts will make it more difficult and more costly for Americans to get bank and retail credit, according to a nationwide survey of lenders conducted by The Associated Press.

It's too soon to know exactly how the program will be worked out, but officials say President Carter's new plan to hold down consumer debt likely will mean higher credit interest for existing borrowers and an effort to discourage new borrowers. In addition, changes in usury laws may be sought, installment plans dusted off and loan applications more carefully scrutinized, officials say. There are 53 million Americans with $65 billion in buying power in 124 million credit cards, says Spencer Nilson, publisher of a credit card industry newsletter that bears his name. Bank of America, the nation's largest bank, recently decided to charge more on bigger balances in Master Card accounts. Effective April 1, the bank will collect 18 percent interest instead of 12 percent on charge balances greater than $1,500. Citibank, the nation's second-largest bank, and No.3-ranked Chase Manhattan had not decided what action to take, spokesmen for the banks said Tuesday. Retailers also are considering new credit rules. Sears, Roebuck and Co., the world's largest retailer, said it would increase the minimum monthly payments on its charge accounts as soon as possible, although no details were announced.

Montgomery Ward said it may return to the two-year installment accounts it dropped several years ago. Such accounts, with a schedule of fixed payments for big-ticket items, are not included in the government's new credit programs. The Federal Reserve's consumer credit program requires creditors to put 15 percent of new outstanding credit into a Fed account that pays no interest, which discourages banks and big retailers from extending additional unsecured credit. Among the options for credit card issuers are shortening repayment periods, reducing card holders' lines of credit, eliminating credit card "cash advances" and speeding up terminations of card holders who miss payment deadlines.

New Pastor For Church

The Rev. Harry Grubbs assumed duties as the new pastor of First Free Will Baptist Church here on Sunday, March 2.

The new Greenville resident attended Mt. Olive Junior College and Atlantic Christian College before earning his Master's degree in Divinity from Southeastern Seminary at Wake Forest.

REV. HARRY GRUBBS

Grubbs served at Milbournie Free Will Baptist Church in Wilson for seven years and was then pastor at Sherron Acres Free Will Baptist Church in Durham for four and a half years.

The minister, who has resided in North Carolina for most of his life, is married to the former Doris Rackley of Nashville and they have two children, Gina, six, and Jody, three.

"We are excited about being in Greenville and we look forward to our ministry here," he commented.

First Free Will Baptist Church is located at 2600 Charles Boulevard.

Standoff Ended With Serenade

NEWPORT, Vt. (AP) — A 27-year-old man was charged with aggravated assault and reckless endangerment with a firearm after a 30-hour standoff that ended when he began to serenade police, officials say.

Police Chief Curtis Hardy said Robert Picard was arrested Tuesday after a standoff that began when Picard allegedly "flew off the handle" in an argument with his mother. Officers said the woman fled the home and reported her son had threatened to kill her.

Police said no shots were fired and no demands were made. Police said Picard was talkative and was arrested when he put down his gun and picked up a guitar.

"VERY GRAVE"
BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Doctors said today they have been able to alleviate some of President Josip Broz Tito's stomach bleeding, but his condition remained "very grave."

Report On Fraud Cases

The anti-fraud unit of the state Employment Security Commission has reported that $130,506 in unemployment insurance overpayments was recovered during the month of February.

Of that amount, $24,390 came from refunds to the agency by the recipients of overpayments, and $106,116 was recovered by withholding or reducing payments to eligible unemployment insurance claimants.

The anti-fraud unit investigated 274 persons during February and found that 199 of them had been overpaid by a total of $48,061. Of those cases, 59 were classified as fraud by the commission. The non-fraud overpayments totaled $26,752, and the fraud cases totaled $21,309.

Of the 28 persons tried and convicted of fraud in the state's courts during February, three are from Pitt County. Also, nine cases are current pending adjudication in the Pitt County.

The Employment Security Commission of North Carolina has a full-time fraud investigator stationed at the Greenville Employment Office. The fraud investigator serves Pitt County and 19 other counties in eastern North Carolina.

Mexico Proved Oil Capability

By VICENTE MORALES
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — When President Lazaro Cardenas nationalized foreign oil holdings in Mexico 42 years ago today, many predicted that the Mexican oil industry would collapse in chaos.

Today Petroleos Mexicanos, the government monopoly known as Pemex, is one of the world's biggest oil companies, employing more than 100,000 workers, producing 2 million barrels of crude oil daily and with a yearly income of $10 billion.

Pemex's exploration programs have located proven reserves of more than 30 billion barrels of crude oil with potential reserves estimated at more than 130 billion barrels, plus half as much natural gas.

Pemex's chairman, engineer Jorge Diaz Serrano, estimates that more than two-thirds of Mexico and the 200-mile offshore belt it claims off both coasts is potential oil-bearing territory. He says only 10 percent has been explored.

"It took a lot of work and sacrifice but we have demonstrated we can administer and develop the oil industry," said Gabriel Lezama, a retired Pemex worker.

Oil and tar were oozing out of Mexican soil before the Spaniards landed in the 16th century. The Aztecs, the Teotihuacanos and other native tribes used it to fuel their pyres and torches.

The Spaniards collected tar balls from the Gulf of Mexico beaches to caulk their ships and weatherproof their roofs.

Dictator Porfirio Diaz granted the first oil concessions in 1901 to Edward L. Doheny, an American, and Weetman Pearson, a Briton. By the early 1920s, 15 American, British and Dutch oil companies were operating in the country. They included the Sinclair-Pierce Oil Co., the Richmond Petroleum Co., Standard Oil of California and the Penn-Mex Fuel Co.

The oil fields stretched along the upper coast of the Gulf of Mexico. A study by Jose Lopez Portillo y Weber, President Jose Lopez Portillo's father, estimated that by 1921 the companies averaged 4,000 per cent profit on a daily crude production of 500,000 barrels, then the world's second largest.

Portillo estimated the companies left only 7 percent of their net income in Mexico, mostly in the form of a one-cent-a-ton production tax that had outraged the foreign financial world when President Francisco I. Madero decreed it in 1912. Pemex now pays a 12 per-cent income tax, which accounts for 12 per cent of the national government's income.

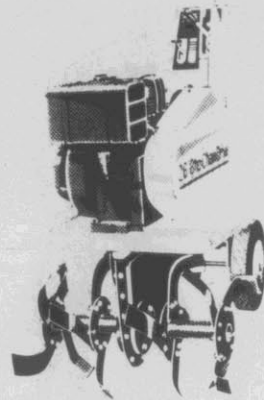

The 1917 Constitution declared petroleum the patrimony of the nation.

BES-PAK TRASH BAGS ARE STRONG, DEGRADABLE AND ECONOMICAL!

At BES-PAK we expect a lot from our trash bags. We expect them to be strong. Economical. And we expect them to help make a better environment. For you and for future generations.

You see, BES-PAK trash bags are specially treated. This treatment does not effect the strength of the plastic, until after the bags are used and placed outdoors.

Here's how it works: Use the bags. Put them outdoors as usual. When the plastic has been exposed to prolonged sunlight of sufficient intensity (in your yard or at the dump), a gradual chemical change will begin.

And a few weeks or months later, the plastic will break down and turn back into harmless natural elements. Even if it's buried in landfill.

Isn't it nice to know you can help save the environment for your children and at the same time, save some money for yourself?

ECU Again Host Model UN Session

For the fourth consecutive year, the Atlantic Coast Model Security Council will be held at East Carolina University. The four day event opens on Thursday afternoon and closes at noon on Sunday, with all activities to be in Mendenhall Student Union.

The Council is open to the public, and there is no admission charge.

Delegates from East Carolina University will be joined by ones from other universities and colleges — the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia; Duquesne University, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Thiel College, Greenville, Pa.; Emory and Henry, Emory, Va.; UNC-Chapel Hill; and Appalachian State University, Boone.

The conference opens with registration from 1 to 4 on Thursday afternoon. Sessions will be held from 4 to 5 and again from 7 to 11 p.m.

Friday sessions begin at 9 a.m. and last until noon, with afternoon sessions from 1 to 6, and evening sessions from 8 to 11 p.m.

The Saturday schedule again features sessions from 9 to noon, and from 1 to 4:30. From 4:30 to 6 p.m., the time will be devoted to the guest speaker, George W. Ashworth, of the Council for U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, Washington, D.C.

Beginning at 9 p.m. Friday, a reception will be held for all the delegates taking part in the conference.

Final sessions will be held from 9 until noon on Sunday, and the closing event is the awards program from noon until 12:30 p.m.

The format of this Model United Nations Conference features two security councils in simultaneous sessions. Countries to be represented include the U.S., U.S.S.R., China, France, the United Kingdom, Norway, Bangladesh, Jamaica, Portugal, Zambia — with other countries to be selected from Africa, Asia, Eastern Europe, Latin America and Western Europe.

The Secretariat will consist of David Cummins of McLeansville, Virginia, legal advisor, and from ECU the following persons: William G. Barbe, advisor to the Secretariat; Stacey Worthington, graduate advisor; Nancy Collins, president ECU-MUN; Jill Vaughn, secretary-general, ACMSC IV; and Paula Taylor, under secretary-general, ACMSC IV. Chairpersons are Ted Prince, Jeff Marcus, Mike Harris, and Wendy Kern.

The Atlantic Coast Model Security Council is partially funded by the East Carolina University Student Government Association, and sponsored by the ECU Model United Nations Club.

Hospital Bd....

elected secretary; Thomas Bennett of Greenville elected treasurer; and Mildred Indorf of Greenville re-elected assistant treasurer.

Named to the Executive Committee, in addition to the chairman, vice-chairman and secretary were Thomas J. White of Kinston, Billy Phillips of Grifton, Glenn Strickland of Winterville and Dr. John L. Wooten of Greenville.

The board approved an amendment to its by-laws which would state that business meetings will be conducted by the parliamentary procedure found in "Roberts Rules of Order." This measure was recommended during a recent visit of the Commission on the Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities.

Finance Committee Chairman Norfleet Sugg reported that the hospital is in sound financial condition. Expenses are going up, he said, but so is income. He said the Hospital Finance Officer Warren McRoy will be contacting all local banks soon asking to open a line of credit to keep cash flow intact in case a deficit should arise. He stressed that there is no problem now, but said this is being done as a way to be sure that long-term investments by the hospital would not have to be touched.

The board approved the purchase of a $125,000 mobile gamma camera and of the trade-in of an old bronchoscope for a new one, with a net investment of $2,350.

Hospital Director Jack Richardson showed board members a copy of a "Snow Job '80 Award" certificate. He said these are being given to every hospital employee who worked during the 20-inch snow at the first of the month, and also to owners of four-wheel drive vehicles and others who helped out during the natural emergency. He said some of the hospital employees worked as many as three shifts in succession. A place to sleep was set up for the men in the physical therapy department and for the women in the ambulatory surgery unit, he said, and many didn't go home for a couple of days or more.

Dr. William Bost, Chief of Staff, reinforced Richardson's praise of the hospital employees, saying, "The willingness of people to work extra was the only thing that made the hospital safe for the patients during that emergency."

Richardson said the initial stages of planning the budget for the next fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1, will be during the last two weeks of April. A $32-$35 million operating budget is expected, he said.

If there is no negative comment from the state agencies reviewing the hospital's plan to provide 20 ambulatory care beds at the Holiday Inn today, then plans can proceed, Richardson said. He said the lease for the bed space at the motel near the hospital begins Apr. 1 and that renovation should take about two weeks. If all is approved, the much-needed beds could be in use by Apr. 15, he indicated.

Nursing Director Jean Owens reported on nurse recruiting being conducted by the hospital at student nurse association meetings and job fairs as far away as Massachusetts. She said senior student nurses are being invited into the hospitals for visits. They are, she said, "impressed with the facility and impressed with its friendly atmosphere." Last year's Nurse Extern Program was successful, she said, giving senior student nurses a chance to work in the hospital. It will be conducted again this summer, beginning in May and last for 10 weeks. Some 46 are enrolled so far. Patient discharge planning and teaching will be emphasized this summer, she said, and work on a patient classification system is underway.

Associate Director Rick Gilstrap reported on a management training program underway. The program is an effort to provide in-service management training to clinicians who have been promoted to management positions, who are, "great in their fields" but in need of training in handling manpower, materials and money, he said.

Dr. William Laupus, ECU Medical School Dean said the medical school will soon be budgeting for the period from July 1, 1981 to June 30, 1983. He said the choosing of the Class of 1984 will soon be complete. He thanked departing board members for their support of the medical school.

Hospital Administration Intern Beth Hutzler thanked the board for their input into her thesis for her master of health administration degree from Virginia Commonwealth University. Her thesis project was the basis for the trustee orientation program that was used yesterday afternoon to acquaint new trustees with the hospital and their duties as board members of the hospital.

The trustees were told about a Health Law Forum which will be held here for a second year soon. This bringing together of international experts in health law is a first for the nation, Dr. Laupus pointed out.

Workshop For Nurses Mar. 22

The Coastal Plains Occupational Health Nurses Association will hold a Crisis Intervention Workshop on March 22 at the Holiday Inn here.

The featured speaker for the session, which runs from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m., will be Louise Haigwood, R.N., associate professor and coordinator of Community Mental Health Nursing at East Carolina University. Her topic will be "Crisis Intervention for Self and Others."

The workshop is open to all nurses and personnel supervisors interested in crisis intervention. Registration is $8 for members and $10 for non-members.

Persons seeking further information regarding the workshop should contact Liz Briley at Burroughs Wellcome or Rena Jones at the Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop.

Candidates Launch Media Campaigns

By WILLIAM M. WELCH Associated Press Writer RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The two Democratic candidates for lieutenant governor are opening media campaigns this week, unleashing a country music radio jingle and slick television commercial on the airwaves.

Carl Stewart, who is challenging Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green's re-election bid, began running a 30-second television commercial in the state's major TV markets Monday night. Green unveiled a 30-second bluegrass jingle and his campaign staff began buying radio airtime in the major metropolitan areas. Stewart, the speaker of the state House from Gastonia, and Green, seeking an unprecedented second term, meet in the May 6 Democratic primary. Stewart's commercial makes the first use of $40,000 in television airtime previously purchased by his campaign. His campaign director, state Rep. Dave Bumgardner, D-Gastonia, said the campaign is hoping to buy more airtime.

The Stewart commercial is a slickly produced spot, not mentioning issues but showing him in the Legislature. It is aimed at making his name familiar to voters and was prepared by Stewart's media consulting firm, Cook, Ruth, Spann and Weiser of Columbia, S.C. "We're doing a little name recognition, an introduction to Carl Stewart, for the first couple weeks," Bumgardner said. "It's just a matter of letting people who don't know who Carl Stewart have an opportunity to know Carl Stewart." Stewart plans to air different commercials, on a heavier schedule and on some stations in adjoining states that reach North Carolina viewers, in mid-April. Green's banjo jingle was written by his media consultant, Mike McClister of Washington, and produced by Arthur Smith, said Green campaign manager Arlene Pulley. Green taped television commercials on Saturday and will begin airing them April 7, she said. In other political developments, Gov. Jim Hunt made an eastern North Carolina farm tour today and issued a campaign mailing that capitalizes on former Gov. Bob Scott's 11-year-old remark that angered tobacco interests. The Hunt campaign newsletter features a quote from Scott's 1969 speech on its front page. "It is time to destroy the myth that tobacco is king in North Carolina," Scott, then governor, said in proposing the estate's first tax on tobacco. The Hunt campaign sent the four-page flyer on tobacco to 23,000 growers and warehouse operators this week. Scott, meanwhile, was in the state's far western counties today, campaigning against Hunt for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. "I think they're playing politics with something that happened 10 years ago," Scott spokesman Bryant Haskins said of the tobacco paper. "You're playing on the emotions of tobacco farmers. "The Hunt people realize tobacco is no longer king in North Carolina when you've got industry developed like it has over the past 10 or 15 years," he added.

Breastfeeding In Public Is Accepted

NEW YORK (AP) — A Long Island woman's three-year battle over the right to breastfeed at a public swimming pool has ended with a $7,500 out-of-court settlement. Although she originally had sued for $500,000 in damages, Barbara Damon, 34, of Minicola, said the suit was more a fight against government intervention and for women's rights.

Mrs. Damon was ejected from the Williston Park town swimming pool in 1977 for publicly breast-feeding her then 2½-month-old son, Michael. Her $85 family pool membership was also revoked. The village board of Williston

$12,000 Grant

Congressman Walter B. Jones today announced the approval by the Department of Energy of a grant of $12,000 to the Pitt County Board of Education. These funds will be used to improve the energy efficiency of public school buildings and will be matched by non-federal funds. The grant will cover the program period ending Sept. 30, 1981.

U.S. Tightens Screws On Soviet Purchases

By EILEEN ALT POWELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union will find it very difficult to buy computers and other high-technology goods from American businesses under the Carter administration's strict new Soviet trade policy.

Officials have estimated that more than $1 billion in goods and services could be involved. The only apparent exception, one official said, would be for products related to health or safety.

In a statement Tuesday,

Commerce Department Secretary Phillip M. Klutznick said the new guidelines "impose tighter controls in such areas as computers and software, manufacturing technology and materials critical to the manufacture of high-technology defense goods."

The restrictions could spell rejection of "a substantial number" of the 700 export license cases held up in January by President Carter while trade with the Soviets was reviewed, government officials said.

Businessmen must obtain licenses from the Commerce Department before they can ship certain goods overseas.

Carter ordered the export policy review Jan. 4, when he blocked the shipment of some 17 million metric tons of grain the Soviets had arranged to purchase.

Last month Carter asked American athletes to boycott the Summer Olympics in Moscow and in recent days asked U.S. manufacturers of Olympic-related products to refrain from shipping them.

The actions have been designed to underscore U.S. displeasure with the Soviet military occupation of Afghanistan in December. The Carter administration sees the action as a threat to the stability of the oil-rich Persian Gulf region and a violation of Afghan sovereignty.

U.S. businesses were not immediately sure of the impact the new policy would have on their contracts.

Information about the new policy was provided at a briefing by officials of the departments of State, Defense and Commerce. Under rules of the briefing, the officials were not to be identified.

The policy will:

—Block the export of most high-technology products to the Soviets.

Many licenses in the past were issued only after exceptions were obtained by the administration from the Coordinating Committee for Multilateral Exports, an international, Paris-based agency that helps regulate Western trade with Communist nations.

"We will be seeking very few COCOM exceptions," said one of the administration officials.

—Bar most exports involving raw materials and products that could be critical to Soviet industry.

—Toughen the government's stance on the sale of so-called "process technology," such as petro-chemical installations.

—Tighten regulations on the transfer of products or data that could give Moscow clues about U.S. technological advances.

Scholarships For Achievers

EVANTSON, ILL. — More than 500 recipients of Achievement Scholarships in the National Achievement Scholarship Program for Outstanding Negro Students have been named.

These black high school seniors are from schools in 39 states, the District of Columbia, U.S. Commonwealths and territories, and overseas schools that enroll U.S. citizens.

Of the total, 335 are winners of one-time $1000 scholarships, and 185 are winners of corporate-sponsored four-year achievement scholarships.

Two of the winners are from schools in Martin County.

Angela D. Randolph, a senior at Williamston High School, is the recipient of the Thomas J. Watson Memorial Achievement Scholarship of International Business Machines Corp.

Euripidea A. Marrow of Oak

City, a senior at Roanoke High School, Robersonville, is the recipient of a $1000 scholarship sponsored by Weyerhaeuser Company Foundation.

Another Weyerhaeuser Foundation winner is Cheryl A. Moore of Aurora High School, Aurora, in Beaufort County.

Dr. Martin Luther King was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1964.

A 'Parliament'

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Shaken by the bloody attack on Mecca's Grand Mosque, the royal palace is forming a committee to draft laws for a government system and a consultative council to act as the first parliament in Saudi Arabia. However, the council probably will be appointed by the regime.

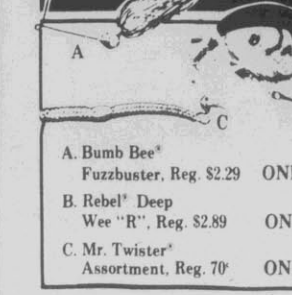

The announcement of the committee's formation, carried by the official Saudi news agency Tuesday, was hailed by the government-inspired Saudi press as a bold step toward democracy in the world's largest oil-exporting nation.

"The basic principle for the future government system will be one of consultation between the ruler and the people," said an editorial in the newspaper Okaz that was broadcast by the Saudi state radio.

March Madness

It's called "March madness," and it happens every year, as high school and college sports fans turn much of their attention and energy to basketball. More than 1,000 colleges and 20,000 high schools in the United States have basketball teams. Their games attract millions of fans each year. The nation's top college teams are now competing in the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) tournament and in the National Invitation Tournament (NIT). Both of these nationwide tournaments began in the late 1930s. The first state high school basketball tournament took place in Wisconsin in 1905. Today, almost every state holds a yearly tournament for its high school teams.

CP&L Nuclear Plant Walkout Is Now Over

SOUTHPORT, N.C. (AP) — A spokesman for Yeargin Construction Co. said all employees had returned to work by mid-morning Tuesday after a three-day strike at Carolina Power & Light Company's Brunswick nuclear plant.

"Everybody's back to work," said Roland McDonald, superintendent for Yeargin. The company, which employs about 830 persons, had contracted with CP&L to refuel and repair one of the plant's nuclear reactors. Danny Williams, a spokesman for the strikers, had estimated earlier that 90 percent of the company's employees were off the job. But a Yeargin spokesman said about 7 percent were striking and other absences were the result of fear, illness or other routine causes.

The workers walked off the job Saturday, complaining of hazardous working conditions, inadequate pay and lack of benefits. Some of the employees, who had no bargaining agent, also called for a $2 per hour cost-of-living pay raise plus $1 an hour extra for all employees working in sections of the plant considered hazardous.

The company had threatened to bring in outside workers to continue construction and maintenance efforts in order to meet their deadline with CP&L. None had been hired during the three-day strike.

McDonald said all employees were allowed to return to work and no one was disciplined for striking.

Superior Court Judge Giles R. Clark of Elizabethtown issued a temporary restraining order Monday limiting the number and positioning of pickets.

At least one striker attributed the end of the walk-out to the restraining order. "It was a scare tactic," said Alan Lane of Southport. "It broke us up."

McDonald said he thought the restraining order may have helped bring the strikers back to work.

Richard Harvey, another spokesman for Yeargin, said Tuesday, the wage scale had not been changed, noting that a "normal annual progression" went into effect March 9.

But he added, "We learned a lesson ... and recognize that some of the grievances were points of interest, and we're paying attention to them."

Split Vote

TABOR CITY, N.C. (AP) — Tabor City voters Tuesday narrowly approved ABC stores and defeated a referendum for the sale of beer and wine.

About 72 percent of this Columbus County town's voters turned out for the special election.

ABC stores passed by four votes, 573 in favor and 569 against.

Voters rejected beer sales, 555 for and 545 against.

The sale of wine was disapproved by a 14-vote margin, 556 against and 542 in favor.

Tabor City was the only dry town in Columbus County.

Summer Olympics Stamp Sales End

Postmaster General William F. Bolger today announced the suspension of sales by the Postal Service of summer olympic postage stamps, postal stationery items and philatelic products.

Items affected by the suspension are: six commemorative postage stamps, two commemorative postage cards, a commemorative aerogramme and a commemorative embossed stamped envelope. They were issued between Sept. 5 and Dec. 10, 1979.

Three other philatelic products are also affected: a hardcover olympic mint set containing all commemorative stamps and stationery items produced in connection with the 1980 Olympic games, a portfolio containing four summer games commemorative stamps and prints based upon their designs, a poster calling attention to the summer games and the stamps designed to honor them and two commemorative panels designed to honor summer olympic events.

Other than the olympic mint set, which features both the summer and winter games, items having to do with the winter games are not affected by the suspension, and remain on sale.

The Postal Service said mail orders for any of the suspended items that have already been received or are in the mails

Computer Backs Comet Crash Theory

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — A giant snowball — really a comet from the far reaches of the solar system — may indeed have crashed into a rugged Soviet forest 72 years ago with the force of 10 million tons of TNT, two geophysicists say.

Thomas J. Ahrens and John D. O'Keefe of the California Institute of Technology were to outline their research on the comet theory today at a Lunar and Planetary Science Conference in Houston.

The snowball theory was proposed previously, but the researchers now have computer evidence to support it.

Their study is part of a continuing scientific effort to explain the great Tunguska, Siberia, blast. In a telephone interview, Ahrens said the puzzling explosion of June 30, 1908, flattened trees over hundreds of square miles and was heard 700 miles away.

"It was a really tremendous explosion," he said. "It acted with the force of approximately 10 megatons...but there's no crater."

The missing crater complicates — some say invalidates — the common explanation that a huge meteorite caused the Tunguska explosion.

The famous Meteor Crater in Arizona is three-quarters of a mile wide and 150 yards deep. Yet, the meteorite that caused it hit with less than half the force of the Tunguska crash.

Ahrens and O'Keefe designed a computer model to consider the crash of a very large snowball-like comet with a half-mile diameter traveling 10,000 to 100,000 mph.

"The interesting thing in our results is that it doesn't make a crater. It just perturbs the ground," Ahrens said. The force of impact would send shock waves through the comet, causing it to vaporize in a flash of steam that could level a forest, he said.

Most comets are believed to be largely solid ice spiked with small, rocky debris. These would cause craters, Ahrens said. Many others, so-called new comets, are probably much less dense, more like a snowball than an ice cube, he said.

Comets' heads range up to a few thousand miles in diameter and some are in elliptical orbits that make them visible as they swing around the sun. There are 130 comets with known orbits, but many more that have not been tracked.

To save the meteorite theory, scientists have speculated atmospheric friction may have caused the great chunk of space rock to explode moments before impact.

"We've looked at this question and we think it's very unlikely," Ahrens said. "It's very hard to conceive of a meteorite converting its kinetic energy (force of motion) into explosive energy. And even if it broke apart, pieces would still hit the ground and would have made a crater."

Others have sought more exotic explanations such as a natural nuclear explosion or a collision with a black hole.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are expected in the forecast period until Thursday morning from the central Gulf to the Midwest. Most areas are expected to be clear, and temperatures mild across the nation. (AP Laserphoto Map)

North Carolina's weather was under the influence of high pressure today in the wake of a cold front which cleared rainy skies as it passed through the state on its way offshore. But rain is on its way back.

PWP Chapter Meets Tonight

The Greenville chapter of Parents Without Partners will get together at Peaches tonight at 9 o'clock. Admission is free for PWP members.

Saturday the members and their children will get together for roller skating at Twin Rinks from 10 a. m. to noon.

A low pressure system moving eastward from the Rockies could spread rains back across North Carolina by late Thursday and on into Friday.

Ahead of new rains, however, were sunny skies over most of the state today. High temperatures were expected to range mostly in the 60s with some 50s in the northwest mountains.

Lows tonight will be in the 40s and highs Thursday again will be in the 60s.

High readings Tuesday ranged from the 40s in the northern mountains to the upper 60s along the south coast.

Increasing cloudiness will begin tonight in the mountains with fair skies east of the mountains. Cloudiness will begin spreading from the mountains across the rest of the state Thursday.

There will be a chance of rain in the mountains Thursday afternoon with a chance of rain in the Piedmont by late in the day.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

A chance of rain over the state on Friday and along the coast on Saturday. Rain is also in the forecast for the entire state on Sunday. Lows will average in the 40s, a bit warmer along the coast. Highs in the 60s, except 70s on the coast.

Carter Budget Delays May See House Set Pattern

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's delay in submitting a revised 1981 budget is shifting the congressional spotlight to a proposal by the chairman of the House Budget Committee for more spending cuts and possibly a lower surplus than the administration is seeking.

Carter plan, the proposals by Rep. Robert N. Giacomini, D-Conn., the committee chairman, will become the framework for the 1981 federal budget.

Giacomini outlined his proposals to Democratic committee members Tuesday and was slated to unveil them publicly today as the committee begins preparing its budget recommendations for the full House.

Normally, the president's proposed budget, submitted in January, establishes the framework for congressional action although Congress retains final control over the budget.

However, this year, Carter repudiated his January proposal, which called for a $15.8 billion deficit, and vowed last Friday to fight inflation by balancing the budget with $13 billion in spending cuts. Administration officials say those proposals will not be ready until the end of the month.

By then, the House Budget Committee expects to have completed work on its own version of the budget for fiscal 1981, which starts Oct. 1. The Senate Budget Committee also will have started work on its version by the end of the month.

Although Giacomini's budget proposals were not officially released, several members of the committee revealed their general contents.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said the package called for $16.4 billion in new spending cuts — about $3.4 billion more than the Carter plan — and approval of $5.5 billion in savings already included in Carter's January budget. Wright said the cuts would produce a $1.8 billion surplus.

Carter's new plan would leave a surplus between $10 billion and $13 billion, but most of that would come from an oil import tax that will raise about $10 billion in government revenues.

Wright said the oil import fee would be treated separately in the House budget, possibly being used for future tax cuts or reduction of the federal debt. It was not included in the $1.8 billion surplus in Giacomini's recommendations.

"We're going to come up with a balanced budget — there's no question about that — and possibly a little surplus," Wright said at a news conference. A balanced federal budget in fiscal 1981 would be the first in 12 years.

Two other committee members, who asked not to be named, said Giacomini's proposed budget called for $611.8 billion in spending and $613.6 billion in federal revenues in fiscal 1981.

They said the new cuts included elimination of the $1.7 billion state share of federal revenue sharing, the $1 billion anti-recession aid program, Saturday mail deliveries and some public works projects.

In addition, they said Giacomini's budget would cut $1 billion from the strategic petroleum reserves, $500 million for the federal highway program and "several hundred million" dollars from the CETA jobs program.

Other major savings include $1.1 billion by postponing proposed welfare changes, $1.1 billion by awarding cost-of-living increases once a year instead of twice to civilian and military retirees and $400 million from the food stamp program, the member said.

In other economic developments Tuesday: —The Carter administration's anti-inflation agency said it was asking special price reports from 250 businesses, including oil companies, "because of disturbing price increases" in recent months.

—Americans' personal income rose in February by only $6.9 billion, or 0.3 percent, the smallest amount in more than four years.

—Consumer spending slowed sharply in February, another sign the economy may be heading into a recession.

—The nation's third largest bank, Chase Manhattan Bank, hiked its prime lending rate — the amount it charges its most credit-worthy corporate customers — to a record 19 percent, from 18 1/4 percent previously. Several other banks followed.

—The Dow Jones industrial average rose 12.97 to 801.62, partially reversing Monday's decline of 23 points that was seen as a lack of confidence in Carter's new anti-inflation program.

—Paul Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, suggested that growth in consumer credit already had begun to drop, even before the president announced new credit controls last week.

—Housing starts declined 6 percent in February to an annual rate of 1,334,000 units, as the industry continued to suffer the impact of the government's high interest rate policies.

—Total business inventories rose $3.9 billion, or 0.9 percent, in January even though inventories of retailers declined $1.2 billion.

Currituck Bd. OKs Purchase

CURRITUCK, N.C. (AP) — The Currituck County Board of Commissioners has endorsed the federal purchase of the Currituck Banks, for development as a wildlife refuge.

Commission chairman Baxter Williams said the board voted 3-1 Monday in favor of a resolution endorsing the purchase. One member abstained from voting.

The U.S. Department of the Interior had requested a response to the proposed refuge by April 1.

rent taxing procedures, the county could lose $230,000 a year if private ownership of the land is lost.

The county board asked that if no reimbursement funds were available, the federal agency ask Congress to make up the difference.

The commissioners also requested: —That permanent residents of the area be allowed to retain ownership of their property for 99 years.

—The Department of Interior go on record as favoring in principle development of a state road to the village of Corolla.

—The Department of Interior study the feasibility of ferry service to the coastal area, development of camping and recreational areas within the refuge.

Under the federal proposal, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service would purchase a 14-mile strip of coastal land for $100 million and develop a refuge there.

The service has offered to reimburse the county with any loss of tax income. Under cur-

Steelwheels Split Twin Bill

The Greenville Steelwheels split a double header with the Raleigh Capitol City Hustlers on Saturday in Tarboro.

The Hustlers won the first game — 52-48. High scorers for the Steelwheels for this game were Tim Harris and Richard Hudson, each with 13 points, and Miller Saunders, with 12 points.

The Steelwheels won the second game 67-50. Steelwheel high scorers were Theron Moye, 26 points, Tim Harris, 16 points, and Richard Hudson, 14 points.

The last games of the season will be played against the Star City Wheelers of Roanoke, Virginia. One game will be played Saturday, March 22, in Rocky Mount at 7 p.m. On Sunday, the second game will be played at Elm Street gym in Greenville beginning at noon.

Admission is free, and the public is invited to attend.

Two Policewomen Fired On 'Cowardice' Decision

DETROIT (AP) — "I'm not a coward. I'm a fighter," said Glenda Rudolph, one of two women police officers dismissed from Detroit's force for allegedly standing by as a male officer was attacked by a naked man.

Ms. Rudolph and Katherine Perkins turned in their badges after a three-man police board heard testimony from five new witnesses and upheld its January decision dismissing the women on the grounds of cowardice.

"I'm not going to get involved in Monday morning quarterbacking," Chief William Hart said after the decision, the first of its kind in department history. "I didn't hear the case so I can't pass judgment."

The charge stemmed from an Aug. 26 incident in which the women's supervisor, Sgt. Paul Janness, was attacked by a man who was being questioned for appearing naked on a city street.

Janness contended the women did nothing to help him. The female officers, who earned about $20,000 a year, said they were calming the man when Janness stepped in and waved them aside. Witnesses gave the trial board conflicting accounts. "I would never let anyone get beat," Ms. Rudolph said. "The sergeant put up his hand and said he was going to beat his (the attacker's) ass" and she took that as an order not to interfere.

Robert Cohn, Ms. Perkins' attorney, said Tuesday he would appeal Monday's ruling to the seven-member Board of Police Commissioners, which includes private citizens and police representatives. He said he believed a community-oriented agency would give the women a more equitable hearing.

"There hasn't been much success by police before the board — they've won one out of the last 21 cases," Cohn said, "but I think it's important that the citizens of the community decide this matter. I think it was decided on a sexist, racist basis and I think that comment expresses my client's feelings." Both women are black. The all-male trial board was chaired by a white officer and included one black and one white officer.

"Our feeling has been that there may have been an element of racism or sexism, but we think the main brunt of the decision is a case of superiors against patrolmen," said Bernard Feldman, attorney for Ms. Rudolph.

Ms. Rudolph said she and Feldman had not decided whether to pursue the case before the Board of Police Commissioners or through a neutral arbitrator.

"I'd like to be back on my job," she said. "Nobody can tell the incident better than us. A majority of the witnesses they used testified on stuff they read in the newspapers."

what is cowardice," Cohn said. "If the police department is a quasi-military organization, then military law requiring evidence of fear should apply...."

There's not a case in the United States defining cowardice that we could find, and we researched up, down and all around."

Pitt Chapter To Honor Mrs. Fannie Jackson

The Pitt County chapter of the A & T Alumni Association will honor Mrs. Fannie P. Jackson in a recognition program to be held Saturday.

Mrs. Jackson, a pioneer in day care services for Blacks in the Pitt County area, will be recognized in a special public assembly at the Bachelor Benedict Club, Wyatt St., Greenville, Dr. Velma R. Anderson Loyalty Issue Aided Reagan

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In the last days before the Illinois primary, Ronald Reagan and George Bush repeatedly questioned John Anderson's loyalty to the Republican Party and its principles.

And in those last days, many of the party faithful moved into Reagan's column for Tuesday's voting, giving Reagan more than enough ballots to offset Anderson's strength among independent and crossover Democratic voters, an Associated Press-NBC News poll says.

In the Democratic primary, Illinois voters agreed with Sen. Edward Kennedy on how to deal with inflation. But their distrust of the Massachusetts senator gave President Carter another big primary victory.

Carter swept every major group of Democratic voters, even Catholics and the Irish — long viewed as groups faithful to the Irish-Catholic Kennedy. Anderson began the month before the primary far behind Reagan. Among those who made up their minds more than a month before the election, Reagan held a 66-20 edge over Anderson.

But in the next three weeks — up to the week before the voting — Anderson turned it around, taking 58 percent of the vote to 29 percent for Reagan. Then came the last week, with Reagan and Bush repeatedly questioning Anderson's reliability as a Republican. Again, the momentum changed.

About a quarter of the voters said they made up their minds in the last week, with Reagan favored among them 46 percent to 39 percent for Anderson.

That pattern was a reversal from earlier primaries in which Reagan started out strong while opponents gained support as primary day approached.

Overall, Reagan took 61 percent of the GOP rank-and-file vote, leaving only 25 percent for Anderson and 11 percent for Bush.

Anderson had counted on support from independents and Democrats who crossed party lines to vote in the GOP primary to overcome Reagan's strength among the party regulars.

He got their support, but the group was not as large as he had hoped. And Reagan did better among independents than expected.

On the Democratic side, the AP-NBC News poll found voters agreed with Kennedy on the need for wage and price controls, which Carter opposes. But doubts about Kennedy's character caused Democrats to overlook their differences with Carter and support his renomination.

Half of the Democratic voters favored wage and price controls, while 33 percent oppose them. Seventeen percent were not sure.

For a poll based on around 2,000 interviews, the variation due solely to chance variations in the sample is 3 percentage points either way. That is, if one could have talked to all Democratic or Republican voters in the state on Tuesday there is only one chance out of 20 that the results would vary from the results of this poll by more than 3 percentage points.

Assure Grain Price Boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wheat and feed grain growers will receive higher guaranteed prices under the new farm law signed by President Carter.

The Agriculture Department announced the new prices after Carter signed the bill Tuesday.

The wheat target, or floor, price will be $3.63 per bushel, the corn price $2.35 a bushel, sorghum $2.50 per bushel and barley $2.29.

The law requires the government to pay farmers at least the target prices if the open market price is lower. To be eligible, however, farmers must limit crop size.

Carter said the new law provides "protection for farmers in event of depressed market prices."

According to Jim Williams, acting agriculture secretary, "Producers who plant their normal crop acreage will be eligible for disaster payments on wheat and feed grains based on the higher target levels. However, combined disaster payments under all programs will be limited to $100,000 per person."

Williams also said the guaranteed prices will be 58.4 cents per pound for upland cotton and $9.49 per hundredweight for rice.

SKY-HIGH PRICES
BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Gasoline prices in Belgium rose 3 percent to $3.14 a gallon of regular, and $3.21 a gallon for super this week.

Invention Is Result Of 'Total Anger' At OPEC

By JOY HOAGLAND
The Daily Courier
FOREST CITY, N.C. (AP) — "It was total anger," Phil Shaner asserted.

The electronics engineer who worked on the Nike-Hercules missile system credits what he calls "OPEC anger" with prompting him to design a wood stove that heats 4,000 square feet and only has to be loaded three times every 24 hours.

"We're trying to meet a national emergency. It's my firm belief that people have not accepted that we are at war and we have two enemies — the oil producing countries and the (U.S.) government. Everyone knows what the oil producers are doing, but nobody knows what the government is doing. "I think we are facing a very serious situation. Our national resources are not meeting the energy demands of this country, and we are depending on other countries that can control us and control our markets."

"But what can we do about this? When the Japs bombed Pearl Harbor, the people of this country came together and became a strong force that helped win that war. Today our people can come together and help win the energy war. But the government is not cooperating with enough programs to give American incentive the clout that it needs."

Shaner said he feels the government should reduce the red tape involved in marketing new inventions and offer tax incentives to people who use wood or other alternative ways of producing energy.

The former engineer moved from Norfolk, Va., where he worked for the government, to Charlotte several years ago to open his own business. He later accepted a job with Fairfield Mountains as a real estate broker and moved to the Lake Lure area with his wife, Ginny.

In the home they wanted, a seven-room brick house with a full basement in a wooded setting commanding a spectacular view of the mountains, the house's oil furnace heated only the upstairs.

They had planned to install a wood stove in an upstairs fire place, but that left them with the problem of finding a way to heat the basement. They decided to try to find a wood stove they could install in the basement and hook into the existing oil furnace duct system of the 4,000-square-foot house. They pretty much had in mind the features they wanted on their wood stove, so they began searching the market.

"We couldn't find a single stove that had all the features we wanted. Then we heard about this guy named Ed Clark who was building stoves on his own. We put together the features we wanted and took them to him. He came up with the specifications and offered to build the stove at a given price. We commissioned him to do it."

During the time Clark, who lives in Old Fort, was working on the Shaner's stove, they began to discuss its marketability and additional features they could add.

Clark completed their stove and installed it last fall. The Shaners say they used it exclusively to heat their home this winter, except for a short period when they were away.

They decided to form a company with Clark to market several variations of the stove. These include models that will fit into a fireplace and models designed to be free-standing. Free-standing models can be used either as furnaces or as space heaters.

One model will be sold with coils for pre-heating water and a timer to be installed on the hot water heater to turn it off during certain hours of the day when the family has no need for water heated above 145 degrees. Shaner says this could reduce the average family of four's power bill by as much as 35 cents a month.

"And the end result goes back to saving the fossil fuels the power companies are using to produce energy," Shaner said.

Features unique to the stove, according to Shaner, include a top section that acts as a heat collector and forces air up through the ducts in the furnace models and a draft designed so that the air is picked up from the top of the doors and circulated down through the fire chamber causing the fire to burn more slowly and evenly.

"It's a fallacy that wood burning fast creates more heat. Most of that heat goes up the chimney. Slow burning wood creates the most effective heat," he commented.

Other features include unusually heavy doors (to prevent warping) that can be removed to create a fireplace effect. The stove's fan blows air into the area around the stove through vents in the front on both the fireplace and the regular models. Also included is a humidifier attached to the back of the stove.

Currently, Shaner said the company, which Mrs. Shaner will run, is still in the formative stages, and they are just beginning to market the stoves. The price ranges from $650 to $995, f.o.b. Old Fort.

"Right now we can produce 10 stoves a week without any problem," he said.

There are advantages to heating with wood besides saving money on fuel, Mrs. Shaner pointed out. For one thing, there are no surges of heat like there are with an oil furnace. The heat is more even and consistent. She also cooks on her wood stove.

"It's fun to me to cook on it. I feel like it is serving a dual purpose. Back in the days when grandmother used to cook on a wood stove, it also kept the kitchen good and warm."

Mrs. Shaner said she cooks stews, soups, roasts, vegetables, anything that requires "good, slow cooking" on the stove. She used it to prepare her Thanksgiving meal for 12 guests.

"I just put everything on the stove in the morning and let it cook. It was nice not to have to spend the day in a hot kitchen."

She plans to experiment with putting jugs of ice in the stove and turning the fan on to cool the house during the summer.

Shaner insists that burning coal and wood is our only way out between now and the time solar energy problems are solved in the next eight to 10 years.

"We can replace trees. We are burning a renewable resource," he said.

"OK, what are we talking about here? Obviously I want to make some money. But I want to do that based on a marketable need. If 220,000,000 Americans would get angry and try to do something, we would win the energy war."

Compile Profile Of Executives

NEW YORK (UPI) — A profile of the "average" chief executive officer of a company has been compiled by Herbert T. Mines, chairman of Business Careers Inc., an executive recruiting firm based in New York and Chicago, based on informal interviews with approximately 2,000 such executives.

The top man (or woman) in a company is likely to show these characteristics, Mines says:

—He or she is a "loner" who prefers not to socialize with supportive staff persons.

—He seldom thinks about being removed from office.

—He is healthier than when he started the job.

—Most feel their predecessors did a good job.

—A sizeable minority feel they are underpaid.

—He finds it easy to deal with boards of directors and banks but difficult to deal with government and unions.

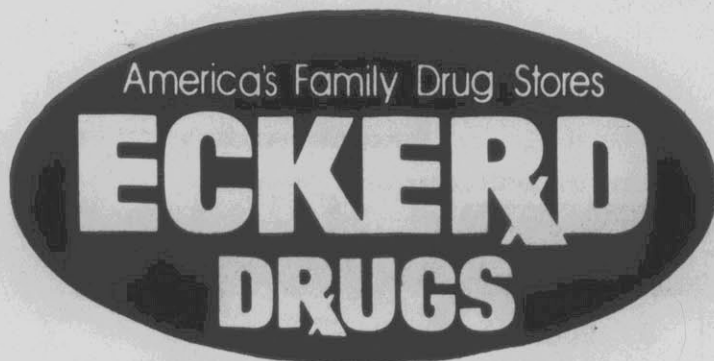

—In order, he worries about inflation, competition, government regulation, and management.

STILL TRYING

WASHINGTON (AP) — Environmental Protection Agency officials say they plan to continue to try to force states to meet federal standards, despite a court order blocking the EPA from halting the flow of federal funds to Colorado.

"...Freeze your prices to us on any item we sell and we will freeze the regular retail price to our customers. Not just for 60-days, but for as long as you hold the price."

How N.C. Representatives And Senators Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area House members were recorded on major roll call votes March 6-March 12. There were no Senate votes.

FEDERAL SPENDING — The House approved, 199 for and 198 against, a $287,852 budget for the Select Committee on Committees. This will fund the special House panel until it goes out of business about April 30, 1980. The committee was formed last year to find ways to thin the House's sprawling committee bureaucracy.

Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., a supporter, said the $287,852 outlay "represents a 40.9 per cent decrease from the committee's 1979 adjusted expenses."

Rep. James Collins, R-Tex., an opponent, said "this committee would be an excellent place where we could achieve a 100 per cent cut ... We can work out adjustments without any type of a select committee. We ... really have no need for this Committee on Committees."

Members voting "yea" want to fund the Select Committee on Committees.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H.

Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Richardson Preyer, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, and W.G. Hefner, D-8, voted "yea."

Reps. James Martin, R-9, and James Broyhill, R-10, voted "nay."

Rep. Lamar Gudger, D-11, did not vote.

HOUSE COMPUTERS — By a vote of 228 for and 174 against, the House approved a $9.9 million 1980 expenditure for the computer system that provides information to members' offices, the committees and other House operations.

Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., a supporter, said the executive branch spends about $5 billion on computers. The House, he added, needs its less-expensive computer system to "adequately oversee the burgeoning executive branch of government."

Rep. William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., an opponent, said that when the House significantly cuts federal outlays such as this it will have "laid the foundation for the stopping of deficit spending which is the principal cause of inflation in this country."

Members voting "yea" want full funding of House computer operations.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner and Broyhill voted "yea."

Martin voted "nay."

Gudger did not vote.

WINDFALL REVENUE — By a vote of 201 for and 215 against, the House refused to endorse spending a larger share of revenue from the new tax on oil company windfall profits for energy development and conservation. The vote came on a non-binding measure (H Res 602) suggesting ways to allocate the $227 billion the windfall tax is expected to raise in the 1980s. It left intact language suggesting that 60 per cent of the $227 billion go for income tax reductions. The vote came during debate on the windfall-tax bill, which was headed for final passage.

Rep. Joseph Fisher, D-Va., a supporter of using more money for energy, said: "This is hardly the time to tell the American people that the highest priority in an energy bill is an inflationary tax cut."

Rep. James Corman, D-

Calif., an opponent, said: "If working men and women are going to have to pay a lot more for energy, they ought to have to pay a little bit less toward the cost of government."

Members voting "yea" wanted to spend more of the windfall tax yield on energy programs and less to make possible an income tax cut.

Jones, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Hefner and Gudger voted "yea."

Fountain, Rose, Martin and Broyhill voted "nay."

ASIAN DEVELOPMENT BANK — The House adopted,

210 for and 189 against, an amendment that cut from $445 million to $180 million the U.S. contribution over the next three years to the Asian Development Bank. The bank provides capital on extremely favorable terms to developing Asian countries. The amendment was attached to HR 3829, later passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. John Rousselot, R-Calif., a supporter, said that while the U.S. government wants to provide 20 per cent of the Asian bank's capital over the next three years, "the OPEC nations, the ones that have all that tremendous cash flow coming their way, are providing zero, absolutely nothing" to the bank.

Rep. John Cavanaugh, D-Neb., said that if the U.S. drastically reduces its support of the Asian Development Bank and similar world banks, the result will be to "isolate our nation in the world, weaken our political and economic position in the world, and fuel the flames of inflation which will further afflict our nation and every nation in the world."

Members voting "yea" favor the 60 per cent cut in the proposed U.S. contribution to the Asian Development Bank.

Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "yea."

Preyer voted "nay."

Jones did not vote.

It Costs 'Jump Gun'

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Jumping the gun on the vegetable season may be useless, if you start seedlings so early that they get spindly before they can be planted outdoors.

"Many people make the mistake of starting their vegetables indoors too early. As a result their sprouts are spindly," says Katie Weiss, an extension garden coordinator at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

She recommends allowing an average of four to six weeks from sowing to transplanting.

Ms. Weiss says the right temperature, lighting and soil consistency are also important.

For the latter, she suggests a mixture of two parts soil (sterilized in a 250-degree F oven for 30 minutes), one part sand and one part peat — unless the soil is high in clay or silt. In that case, a 1-1-1 blend is best. "If a highly textured soil is used, reduce the sand and add more peat."

Most vegetables can be sowed in seed germinating flats and the seedlings later transferred into another flat to reach transplant size.

Germinating seeds need higher temperatures than the seedlings that emerge. The plants grow better and are stockier when their nighttime temperature is about 10 degrees F lower than the daytime temperature.

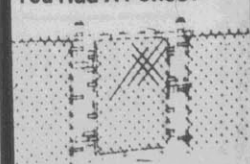

Pre-Registering At Kindergarten

CHICOD — Pre-registration for kindergarten for next school year at Chicod Elementary School will be held in the Media Center of the school Wednesday from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Parents may register their child if he or she will be five on or before Oct. 16, 1980. Birth certificate and child's immunization record should be brought.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — N.C. broilers: market steady. Supply moderate. Demand very good. N.C. dock weighted average price is 39.25 cents per pound this week for small purchases of plant grade broilers picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter Tuesday totaled 1,645,000 head and average live weight 4.04 pounds per bird on March 14.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — N.C. hens: market higher for heavy type hens. Supply adequate. Demand good. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm 15 to 16, mostly 16 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced broadly today, following through on Tuesday's rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 4.35 to 805.97 in the first half hour. Gainers took a 5-2 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said traders were encouraged by the market's showing Tuesday, when the Dow Jones industrial average climbed back above the 800 level after falling below it Monday.

The average has traded in a range between 800 and 900 for most of the past several years. Some traders accordingly have adopted a strategy of buying at the low end of that range and selling near the top.

In addition, some commodity prices that had been falling sharply began to recover Tuesday. Today the price of gold bounced back above the $500 an ounce level, showing a gain of more than $30 in London.

Among precious metals stocks, ASA gained 1½ to 43½; Dome Mines 2½ to 58½; and Engelhard Minerals 1½ to 28½.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 12.97 to 801.62, rebounding from Monday's 23.04 slide.

Advances and declines were about evenly balanced on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 47.34 million shares, against 37.02 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose .87 to 59.09.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 4.07 at 253.27.

dusty into." Hunt said that transportation and high utility rates are two detriments that hurt the chances of industrial growth in the northeast section of North Carolina.

Hunt reiterated his claim that when the container business at the Morehead City port justifies the location of a new crane there, he will support that step. He said the long range plans are to have a strong container business at Morehead City.

The governor mentioned that the crane that was relocated from Morehead City to Wilmington did as much container business in the first 30 days of operations at Wilmington as it did during its entire stay at Morehead.

Hunt said that the state must turn to alternative sources of energy "as soon as we can" and he said he looked forward to the time when farmers of the state would be producing grain for gasohol and running their equipment on fuel they produced.

Saying that agriculture brings over $3 billion to the farmers of the state, Hunt observed that, "Agriculture in North Carolina is alive and growing and we have every reason to be optimistic about it."

In order to keep it growing, Hunt said that continued support and fine-tuning of the tobacco program is needed, greater support must be given for research and education, and the state "should look at our taxing and regulation systems and be sure they are not unfair to farmers and livestock growers."

Sex-Education Discussion Set

Sex education for teenagers will be discussed at a meeting of the Pitt County Board of Health Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the lobby of the Health Department, 1825 E. Sixth Street.

Private citizens are expected to debate before the board on the benefits and propriety of some counseling services and reading materials on pregnancy, contraception and abortion offered by the health department.

Tastebuds Are Teased

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — You say your tastebuds no longer tingle for tuna, run rampant for roast beef, chafe for chicken? A visit to the tenth annual North Carolina Culinary Salon today might just jolt 'em back to life.

While some 50 professional chefs, most from North Carolina restaurants, and the nearly 100 cooking students at the competition waited anxiously Tuesday, other master chefs judged their creations that included baked hippo and loin of lion.

But it was strictly looks that counted in this area tuneup for the Culinary Olympics next year in Germany.

Although there was no sampling, the chefs were quick to point out that the exotic creations on display were real and all very yummy.

"I'd compare hippopotamus to a very good, tasty pot roast," said Ype Hengst, a chef at a Charlotte hotel.

Hengst had the most exotic array of creations at the competition — imported hippo and lion meat and filet of peacock made from two birds that cost $500 each.

"We had five chefs who put in about 150 hours over three days getting this ready," said Slug Claiborne, a Charlotte restaurateur whose chefs won the team competition with a table full of creations ranging from a giant stuffed flounder to a layer cake shaped like a roast turkey.

Five Lions Eat Gamekeeper

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Five lions killed and ate the gamekeeper who fed them in Nigeria's Jos wildlife park, the Nigerian News Agency reported today.

A park official told reporters that the keeper, identified as Ishaya Jarawa, a 30-year-old father of three, regularly brought the lions their meal.

The lions escaped from their enclosure and were later caught and killed by police and gamekeepers who located the animals in a nearby forest reserve.

NIT Finals

Big 10's Gophers
Face ACC's Cavs

NEW YORK (AP) — Tonight's 43rd National Invitation Tournament final will be a matchup of two schools, two conferences and two of the biggest freshmen in the land — Virginia's Ralph Sampson and Minnesota's Randy Brewer.

The 7-foot-4 Sampson is the headline stealer. He broke the hearts of hundreds of college coaches by signing with Virginia of the basketball-mad Atlantic Coast Conference. He made the U.S. Pan-American team before he played college ball. This season he led Virginia in rebounds (11.1), blocked shots (4.7) and his 14.9 points per game was second behind Jeff Lamp.

"Sampson is the type of player who makes other people on the team better," said Lamp, who scored 30 points in Virginia's 90-71 romp over Nevada-Las Vegas in the semifinals Monday night.

Fans at Madison Square Garden saw Sampson's brand of destruction as he scored 26 points, picked off 15 rebounds and blocked four shots.

That effort prompted the typical post-game speculation. Would he or wouldn't he turn pro after the season? A headline in a New York newspaper Tuesday screamed that he might.

"I guess you have to have headlines," Virginia Coach Terry Holland said at a Tuesday press conference, also attended by Lamp and Minnesota Coach Jim Dutcher. "Ralph's very honest and if you ask him that question enough different ways, he's bound to say that he'd have to consider it (the pros). But he's told us that he'll stay with us at least another year before he seriously considers it."

Brewer, on the other hand, is not causing the pro scouts to swallow their whistles. Playing behind top-notch center, senior Kevin McHale — who also played on Bobby Knight's victorious Pan-Am team last summer — Brewer has not gotten that much publicity.

The 7-2 Brewer came out of a small high school in Minnesota, and Dutcher said his main recruiting competition came from Big Ten rivals Wisconsin and Iowa. Brewer declared his intention to go to Minnesota early, so there was no recruiting war and no headlines.

"Minnesota is the only Division I school in Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota," Dutcher said. "There are no pro teams, either, so we're the franchise for the area. If we want a kid from our area, we get him."

Because Brewer played for a small high school and was not severely tested, Dutcher brought his big freshman along slowly this season. He has played 16 minutes a game, gaining confidence while averaging 7.6 points and 3.0 rebounds.

"He's come along faster than we could have hoped," said Dutcher.

In Minnesota's 65-63 victory over Illinois in the semifinals Monday night, Brewer came off the bench to score season-high 24 points and pull down nine rebounds.

New Duke Basketball Coach

Mike Krzyzewski talks to reporters Tuesday night on the Duke University campus after being named new head basketball coach of the Blue

Devils. Krzyzewski replaces Bill Foster who left Duke for the University of South Carolina. (AP Laserphoto)

K-r-z-y-z-e-w-s-k-i Named
New Blue Devil Coach

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke basketball fans who struggled with the name Gminski for the past four years have a new tongue-twister to contend with: Krzyzewski.

It's pronounced Kreh-cheh-skee.

And Duke Athletic Director Tom Butters said Tuesday night the name belongs to the "brightest young coaching talent in America today."

The full name is Mike Krzyzewski, head coach at the U.S. Military Academy for the past five years. His selection as a successor to Bill Foster may have surprised some, but Butters was adamant in his praise of Krzyzewski.

Asked if he considered the 33-year-old Chicago native a gamble for Duke's traditionally strong basketball program, Butters responded:

"I don't think so. I look at people. I look at results. The boy, the young man has established a good track record."

Butters said Krzyzewski was a consensus choice and the only person interviewed to receive an offer for the Blue Devil job. "He's my No. 1 choice, and will be my No. 1 choice," Butters said.

Krzyzewski, who played basketball as a student at West Point, ran up a 73-59 record at Army, including two appearances in the National Invitational Tournament. His teams had three winning seasons, including a 20-8 record in his second year and a 19-9 mark the third year.

His college coaching career includes one year as an assistant at Indiana under head coach Bobby Knight. He also served as an assistant to Knight during the 1979 Pan American Games.

The dark-haired, slenderly built Krzyzewski met briefly with the Duke players Tuesday night, expressing pleasure with his reception. He noted that Army assistant Bobby Dwyer, a 1974 Wake Forest graduate who also will come to Duke, had filled him in on the perils of Atlantic Coast Conference basketball.

"I think Duke basketball is excellent, has been excellent, and I hope to continue that tradition," he said.

Krzyzewski, who said the university made the initial contact about the Duke job, visited the Durham campus three times during the interview period. He said the job was offered to him Monday night.

He conceded some degree of surprise that he was offered the position.

"I was not shocked. I felt this was a position right for me," he said.

His selection was the second surprise in recent weeks for Blue Devil fans, who had seen their team go to the NCAA playoffs three times during Foster's six-year reign as head coach and hold lofty positions in the national poll. The Blue Devils, who slumped in mid-season, came back this season to win the ACC post-season tournament.

Foster shocked some Duke followers with his announcement at season's end that he was leaving to succeed Frank McGuire at South Carolina.

Butters said Foster was still on the Duke campus and had given no indication as to when he would move to Columbia, S.C. Foster has been vague about his reasons for leaving Duke, and Butters said he still did not understand the move, although he wished Foster well in his new job.

"Bill has his reasons, but I've never walked in those shoes (as a coach)," Butters said.

"But by necessity, we needed to start anew, to start fresh."

Butters said there was never a question in the final days about Krzyzewski, although the selection committee kept up its interviews of other prospects. One of the others, Bob Weltlich of Mississippi, was in Durham until Tuesday morning.

"There was one very clear cut first, and the rest tied for second," Butters said of the prospects.

Butters declined to discuss what terms were agreed to with Krzyzewski, or to say what period they covered. But, he said, Krzyzewski "is not interim."

Other coaches known to have been interviewed by Duke included Tom Davis of Boston College, current Duke Assistant Bob Wenzel and Paul Webb of Old Dominion.

Baseball Players
Drop Key Demand

NEW YORK (AP) — With dramatic suddenness, negotiators for major league baseball have dropped one of their key proposals in an attempt to reach contract peace with the players.

But there is some question how much effect Tuesday's withdrawal of the proposed salary scales will really have on the so-far stalled talks.

"It's a little like you've been beating your wife and children for years," noted Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association. "Then you stop and now you want a medal because you stopped."

A medal isn't necessary, but Ray Grebey, chief negotiator for the owners, would like a contract agreement and he believes the movement in talks Tuesday set the stage for that.

Asked if he considered the proposal's withdrawal a breakthrough, Grebey said, "I never use descriptive adjectives."

But it was clear that Grebey felt progress had been made in the 3½-hour meeting in Fort Lauderdale, the final negotiating session in Florida. The two sides will next meet again Wednesday, March 26 in Scottsdale, Ariz.

"We feel it's enough of a development to provide a settlement," Grebey said.

But that may not be the view of the players. From the start they have considered the free agent compensation proposal a more dangerous part of the owners' package than the salary scales.

After the scales proposal was withdrawn, the players indicated willingness to amend or withdraw some of their proposals. But that movement is predicated on the owners dropping their proposal on free agent compensation.

"We don't intend to do that," said Grebey. "We intend to bargain on it."

The owners' plan contains a formula setting compensation based on the number of teams selecting a free agent. A team signing a player selected in the re-entry draft by more than eight teams would protect 15 players and then allow the club losing the free agent to receive an amateur draft pick, plus a major or minor league player unprotected.

Civic Center To Be Studied

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Dr. Tom Brewer, chancellor of East Carolina University, reaffirmed the school's pledge toward quality athletics, pointed toward the future, and revealed that a movement is underway for the construction of a coliseum-civic center in the area, yesterday in a talk to the Greenville Sports Club.

Brewer, who wound up the regular season of the Sports Club, with his talk, said that the university is talking with Pitt County officials about the possibility of the two going in together for the construction of a civic center facility. "Greenville is the only place in the east where such a facility can be supported," Brewer said. "And that's because of East Carolina University."

The chancellor said that plans are now underway to submit a request to federal agencies for a feasibility study on such a project, and said that federal and possibly state funds could also be obtained for it. "We hope to submit a request for a study in the next few weeks," Brewer said.

The revelation came after Brewer was asked about the future of Minges Coliseum. He noted that money for the roof repairs has been available, but that cutting the bureaucratic red tape has been the hold up. "It is now being handled as an emergency measure and we expect contracts for the repairs to be let in a few weeks. But I don't think it will help, really. The roof is such that with any settling of the building, it will crack again. It is an architecturally bad building and may never quit leaking."

Brewer said that if the feasibility study shows that a new complex cannot be built, then Minges will be given another look as to how it can be bettered for athletics.

Brewer told the group that East Carolina has a rich tradition in athletics, one that really took off in the 60's under Clarence Stasovich. "The 70's were a great decade for us in football. East Carolina was the winningest school in the state in football during the decade," Brewer pointed out.

But while the school has a good tradition, its future is even brighter, Brewer believes.

"We have to keep our perspectives in balance. I doubt if any school has done as well with the limited resources East Carolina has had," he said. "Part of that has been due to the great dedication of the people in the program. Our facilities have grown with the program, and we cannot say too much about the student help through fees and the money raised by the Pirate Club."

Brewer said that the athletic program gives visibility and is a rallying point for the alumni. It aids in recruiting students "and this will be especially important during the 80's when student enrollment is expected to drop in universities."

The chancellor said that a long-range planning group is now at work at the university, charting plans for the entire school over the 80's. The task force on athletics is expected to make its report on April 2, which goes to a sub-committee to be written up for the entire plan for the school. "I feel sure the blueprint will be there for continued growth, but managed and orderly growth," Brewer said.

Brewer said that several challenges await athletics in the 80s at East Carolina. Among these are Title IX, which calls for equality in sexes in athletic spending, scheduling, and facilities.

"We are making progress in the Title IX areas, but this is going to cost a lot of money to meet these challenges. We are working toward the goals of meeting the agreements we made under a grievance complaint filed before I came here," he said.

As to scheduling, Brewer said that he believes that East Carolina needs to enter a new phase in this area. "We need to play teams of a national caliber to get exposure and publicity on a nationwide scale. If we beat Duke 38-0, it's not going to get us a half a line in the Los Angeles area or the

Louisville Having Last Laugh

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — University of Louisville basketball fans are having the last laugh this year, so far as intrastate rival the University of Kentucky is concerned.

Louisville's advance to the NCAA Final Four in Indianapolis — a milestone that Kentucky did not reach — has raised anew the debate: Is Louisville denied the respect that automatically is accorded to Kentucky?

Louisville faces Iowa in the semifinals at Indianapolis, Ind.,

Saturday. UCLA goes against Purdue in the other contest. The championship game will be played Monday.

Louisville and Kentucky are not rivals on the basketball floor. They never play each other.

But Louisville scored a 20-point victory Sunday in the NCAA Midwest Regional finals over LSU — a team that beat Kentucky in two out of three games this season — and that has Louisville fans smiling.

Some of them stayed up virtually all night Sunday to welcome their team home from that triumph, which they saw as evidence that Louisville is underrated in its own home state.

Louisville, 31-3, is not underrated outside of Kentucky. It was No. 2 in the final Associated Press poll this season. Kentucky was fourth.

But Charley Jemley, 16, a brother of Louisville basketball student manager Lambert Jemley, said while waiting for the team that he was about the only Louisville fan at Bards-town Bethlehem High School.

"Everybody else cheers for the Big Blue (Kentucky). I have to take it all the time."

Louisville fan Greg Nefouse was also on hand and speculated that if Kentucky's team was returning victorious after winning a NCAA regional, Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. "would send a special plane down to get them...but it's typical of the way some people try to give U of L second-class treatment around here."

Louisville fans were chafed by an incident last month when Kentucky won the regular season Southeastern Conference championship with a narrow victory over LSU.

Lt. Gov. Martha Layne Collins, acting in Brown's absence from the state, declared the following day Kentucky Wildcat Day in Kentucky. Louisville had won the championship in the Metro Conference, going undefeated against league teams, but had been recognized with no such proclamation.

Mrs. Collins' telephone started ringing, and she later proclaimed a "University of Louisville Cardinal Day" in the state.

To some fans, the incident mirrored what they see as the prevailing prejudice throughout much of the state toward Kentucky.

A Louisville television station, WHAS, broadcast an editorial Monday night that said: "Isn't it about time that a state as big as Kentucky can have two major universities? We already have them. It's just a matter of recognizing that we do and giving them equal treatment."

Alternate Olympic Site Still Clouded

By The Associated Press

Progress in mapping plans for a post-Olympic international sports festival has been termed satisfactory by a special envoy for President Carter, while the Soviets say such efforts have ended in failure because of the absence of key European allies.

Lloyd Cutler, a White House counsel, said Tuesday after closed-door talks in Geneva, Switzerland, among representatives of 12 countries that the proposed late-summer festival for "world-class athletes" could be held in several venues throughout the world. Events covering virtually all of the 21 Summer Olympic sports would be open to all countries, regardless of whether they boycotted the Games in Moscow.

The Carter administration is encouraging a boycott of the Olympics because of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, although the International Olympic Committee opposes such a move. But Cutler said, "There will be nothing (in the festival) that would be in any way harmful to the future of the Olympic movement."

The presidential envoy said he was "satisfied" with progress achieved at the Geneva meetings.

However, the Soviet news agency Tass said the United States has failed to draw "even a small number" of states to the meetings, and specifically pointed to the absence of West Germany, France and Italy from the talks. Tass said the meetings "ended in total failure."

Breaking a near-complete silence on the boycott issue by top Soviet leaders, Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko said that Washington's anti-Olympic campaign was an example of American efforts to sow worldwide confusion.

Cutler reiterated that the United States was confident that many sporting nations would participate in the boycott and that it was necessary to offer top athletes of these countries other top-level opportunities to compete.

ECU To Host Round Robin

By WOODY PEELE

Coach Alita Dillon of the East Carolina University women's softball team might be excused if she looks warily on her first round opponent in the North Carolina AIAW championships later this year.

For the past two seasons, the Lady Pirates have been knocked out of the competition early by a dark horse team that has gone on to win the tournament.

This year, however, the Lady Pirates just might make it their year to be the champs. They have an array of experienced talent, and some outstanding freshmen who could take them to the top.

"Things are looking good," Dillon said as the Pirates prepared for what they thought would be their season opener today at North Carolina A&T in Greensboro. The game, however, was cancelled because of field conditions.

"We have a number of starters back from last year, but some of them have been beaten out by newcomers. That gives us extra depth so we will be in a position to make a move if it becomes necessary."

On Saturday, the Pirates played a pair of scrimmage games with N.C. State, taking wins in both. It has helped to build confidence on the team, and while not predicting a title, Dillon definitely feels that the Pirates can be a contender this season.

Senior Janet Veigh returns at the catcher position, while Mary Bryan Carlyle, another senior, is the top pitcher back. A third senior, Cindy Meekins returns at third base as does junior Mary Powell at shortstop.

The only other veteran in the starting lineup is sophomore Shirley Brown, moved from a backup role in the outfield to the starting berth at first base.

Robin Faggart, a junior who started in shortfield last year, has been beaten out by freshman Yvonne Williams. Teresa Whitley was the starter at first last year, and will be adding to the backup duties this season.

Janis Parlon, who started at second, has given way to

Other backup roles will be assumed by Fran Hooks at second and catching, and Maureen Buck at third.

Other pitchers include Judy Ausherman, a junior transfer, and Angie Humphrey, a freshman. Lillian Barnes will provide outfield backup.

"Even though we are relatively a young team, I feel good about the season," Dillon said. "I am confident about our hitting, and while the defense is still getting used to each other, I think it will be solid. This is probably the most balanced team with the most depth we've ever had."

As far as the Division I race in the state is concerned, Dillon isn't sure what to expect. "Carolina has a good hitting team, and Western Carolina has a lot of people back from last year.

"But I think we'll be right in there. We were on the verge of it last year, and I think with the additional help and the depth we have now, we could do it."

"But," Dillon added, "I feel we are a definite contender."

The Lady Pirates now open the season Saturday in the ECU Round Robin. Six state teams will gather in Greenville, each to play four games.

"All of the contests will be played at the two Evans Park fields.

At 10 a.m., East Carolina meets Appalachian State, while Western Carolina takes on UNC-Greensboro.

At 11:15 a.m., Western will play North Carolina and N.C. State will take on UNC-G. The 12:30 p.m. games have State against Appalachian and ECU against Carolina.

At 2:30 p.m., UNC-G takes on Appalachian and ECU faces Western. The 3:45 p.m. games send Western against State and UNC against Appalachian. The day winds up at 5 p.m. with ECU facing UNC-G and State meeting Carolina.

Maravich Paying Dividends

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Pete Maravich, picked up by Boston in midseason for back-court insurance, is already paying dividends.

With guard Chris Ford sidelined by illness, Celtics Coach Bill Fitch has been searching for a stand-in. He tried using swingman M.L. Carr as a starting guard, but that left him shorthanded up front.

So Tuesday night he gave Maravich his first starting assignment since joining the Celtics, and Pistol Pete responded by playing 42 minutes and scoring 31 points as Boston beat Indiana 114-102.

"On a scale of 1-to-10, I'd rate Pete about a 7 overall," said Fitch. "All we want for the playoffs is 15 minutes of the best of Maravich. Anything else we get is a bonus."

"All I want to do is contribute," said Maravich, who sank 12 of 18 shots from the field. "I played a lot of minutes and I felt pretty good. I was very surprised. It's a long season, and that's why there are 11 players on a team. Sometimes you need every one of them."

The victory moved the Celtics closer to the Atlantic Division title, and a first-round playoff bye. Boston has a 56-18 record and a 2½-game lead over second-place Philadelphia in the race for the best overall record.

In the playoff races, the Knicks lead the pack scrambling for the final three berths in the Eastern Conference with a 38-38 record.

In the West, San Diego leads Portland by just two percentage points in their fight for the final spot.

Knicks 111, Hawks 110

Bill Cartwright's stuff shot with 11 seconds to play gave the Knicks the victory over Atlanta. Toby Knight led New York with 33 points on 14-for-19 shooting and Cartwright added 21 points and 16 rebounds.

It was the first time in 10 games that Atlanta has allowed 100 points in regulation play.

Spurs 100, Bullets 94

George Gervin scored 10 of his 33 points in the fourth quarter as San Antonio beat Washington despite 15 points and 25 rebounds by Bullets center Wes Unseld.

It was San Antonio's fourth victory in the last five games, following an eight-game losing streak.

Blazers 123, Bucks 122

Billy Ray Bates scored 12 points in the final 6:41, then blocked a shot by Milwaukee's Brian Winters in the closing seconds to lead Portland to victory. Despite the loss, Milwaukee remains one-half game ahead of Kansas City in the Midwest Division race.

Bulls 115, Clippers 101

Rookie David Greenwood scored 23 points and Reggie Theus added 22 as Chicago stopped San Diego. The Bulls hit on 62.5 percent of their shots in building a 56-52 lead and then outscored the Clippers 30-17 in the third period to break it open.

Bill Walton missed his fourth consecutive game for San Diego with an injured foot and Lloyd Free suffered a rib injury late in the game.

Suns 112, Kings 109

Phoenix rallied from a 12-point fourth-quarter deficit and handed Kansas City its third straight loss behind 25 points by Walter Davis and 20 by Len Robinson.

Lakers 113, Warriors 100

Los Angeles moved three games in front of second-place Seattle (idle Tuesday) in the Pacific Division race by beating the Warriors behind 23 points by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and 22 by Norm Nixon.

Defensive Back Signs With ECU

East Carolina University's football coach Ed Emory has announced the signing of Clint Harris, a 6-1, 185-pound defensive back from Chesapeake, Va.

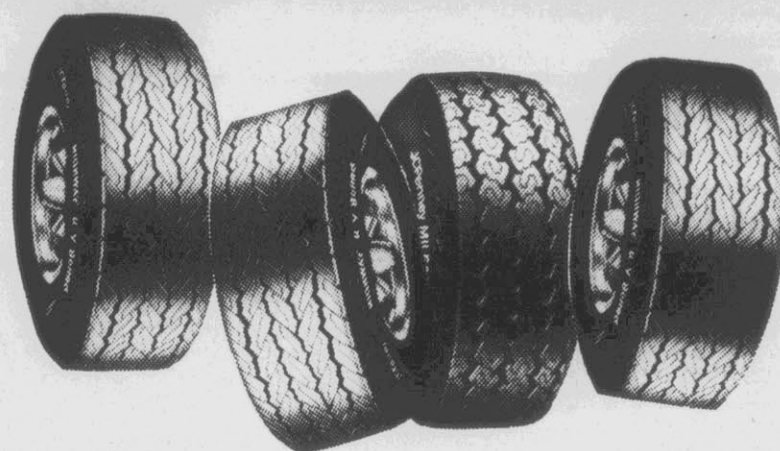

Harris, who attended Great Bridge High School, was named to All-Tidewater, All-Metro, All-Southeastern District and All-Regional teams in Virginia this past season. He had eight interceptions as a defensive back, and also played at running back and receiver positions and returned kicks. The strongest player on the team, he set a new school weight record.

On the Great Bridge track team, he has posted a 9.8 100-yard dash time.

While Harris originally signed a grant-in-aid with North Carolina, he signed a letter of intent—nationally binding—with the Pirates.

Fratianne Turns Pro

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Figure skater Linda Fratianne, who announced Tuesday she was signing a professional contract with the Williams Morris Agency, said turning pro is "going to be a whole new world for me."

Fratianne, a 19-year-old from Northridge, Calif., who won the silver medal in the Lake Placid Olympics, has not yet signed with an ice show. However, Norman Brokaw, vice president of the Morris Agency, said, "All of the ice shows have expressed interest. She has a very bright future ahead of her, including television and movies."

Fratianne admitted she felt somewhat sad about ending her 11-year amateur career.

"It's kind of sad knowing I will never compete again," she said, "...but I have a whole new life ahead of me."

The world champion in 1977 and 1979, Fratianne recently finished third in the 1980 world championships in West Germany.

Fill Schedule

Wet grounds forced most sports activity in the area to be postponed yesterday.

Rescheduled for today are: Williamston at Rose baseball; Conley at C.B. Aycock softball and baseball; Greene Central at Farmville Central baseball and softball; North Pitt at Southern Nash softball and baseball; and Washington at Rose softball.

Reset for Thursday are Ayden-Grifton at Roanoke baseball.

No dates have been set for the replay of Chocowinity at Jamesville baseball and Edenton at Williamston tennis.

Also postponed was a tennis match between East Carolina and UNC-Wilmington, to a date next week, unavailable at press time.

New York Times. It's of more use to us to play Baylor in the late 80s to play Wake Forest."

Brewer also noted that he hoped the N.C. State schedule would continue forever since it is good for both schools. "We might as well write off North Carolina," he added. "We need a big money game, and we're talking with LSU about future dates."

Brewer said that while the university is penciling in dates with a number of schools in the future. "But we don't count anything until we have a contract. This thing with Wake Forest burns me up," he said. The chancellor was referring to several dates in the 80s agreed to in writing by Wake Forest, but cancelled before any contracts were signed.

Brewer also added that the direction facilities will take will depend on the study group's report, and the talks on an outside coliseum.

He also advocated stronger academics for athletics, and increased funding, pointing to an expected increase in student funding and improved Pirate Club support.

It was announced that the annual Sports Club spring banquet will be held on April 26, with former Georgia Tech football coach Pepper Rodgers as the speaker.

Ed Delahanty won batting championships in both big leagues, taking the National League title with a .408 average for the Phillies in 1899 and the American League crown with a .376 performance in 1902 for Washington.

Proposed Move

Lands Raiders, NFL In Court

OAKLAND (AP) — In a move believed to set a precedent in sports, the National Football League is asking a court to put the Oakland Raiders in receivership until the battle over the team's proposed move to Los Angeles is over.

The motion was made late Monday in Alameda County Superior Court as part of a breach of contract suit filed against the team by the league. A tentative hearing is set for March 28 before Judge Robert Kroninger.

The action comes on the heels of a 22-0 vote by the NFL against allowing managing general partner Al Davis to move his team south. The NFL had previously won a temporary restraining order against the Raider move.

"How can they put me into receivership? I am not a mental incompetent," Davis said at last week's NFL meetings in Rancho Mirage, Calif.

In the motion to establish a receivership, the NFL asked Judge Kroninger to allow the temporary operators to sign a lease with the Oakland Coliseum for home games in 1980. The receivership would be allowed to take over all the Raider property, sell tickets for the 1980 season, sign radio and television contracts and discipline any employee who did not follow orders.

"Our concern is to maintain the status quo," said Warren George, an NFL attorney. "We're concerned that if one side wins in court that it actually will have won nothing."

Raiders attorney Joe Alioto was not available for comment.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors Tuesday voted to delay, at least until April 1, any consideration of the proposed county loan of $5 million to help finance the Raiders' move.

The decision apparently spells the end of plans to refurbish the Coliseum until after the 1980 season.

Bears In 19-0 Win

BEAR GRASS — A trio of Bear Grass pitchers just missed on a no-hitter yesterday as the Bears rolled up a 19-0 baseball victory over Pantego.

The Bears put the game away in the second inning, scoring 14 runs.

Mark Taylor led off the frame with a single and moved up on an error and a stolen base. He scored the first run of the frame when Edward Rogers reached on an error. Kevin Washington walked, and Rogers scored when Craig Gardner reached on an error. Jody Peaks singled in Washington, and William Roberson walked. Clay Gardner doubled in two more runs and Taylor singled to load the bases again.

Rogers walked to force in the sixth run and Tony Leggett's single brought in two more. Washington again walked and Craig Gardner singled in a ninth run. Peaks reached on an error, scoring Leggett, and Roberson singled in Gardner. Clay Gardner then cleared the bases with a double, making it a 14-run frame.

Bear Grass got single runs in the first and fourth and added three in the third.

Gardner led the Bear hitting with three doubles, while Taylor had two hits.

The lone Pantego hit came in the fifth with one out.

The Bears, now 3-0, travel to Chocowinity on Friday.

The players fear any compensation would restrict the free agent market and limit movement, creating a situation similar to the National Football League where free agents rarely move from team to team.

Among the players sitting in on the negotiations were Reggie Jackson of the New York Yankees, Doug DeCinces and Mark Belanger of the Baltimore Orioles, Jon Matlack and Jim Kern of the Texas Rangers and Gene Garber of the Atlanta Braves.

The first unassisted triple play in major league history was made in 1909 by Neal Ball of Cleveland in a game against the Boston Red Sox.

Highways Heading For Penn-Central Debacle?

By CRAIG WEBB
 United Press International
 America's battle against spiraling gasoline prices has unwittingly driven the nation toward a new calamity: crumbling highways.

Across the United States, transportation officials are pleading with state lawmakers for money to keep the nation's 3.1 million miles of paved roads from falling apart.

Alabama, Missouri and Ohio already have called temporary halts to needed work. Maine's acting transportation commissioner has warned he might lay off hundreds of workers unless he gets several million dollars worth of help.

And in Iowa, the transportation department reports it has made basic improvements on just 540 miles of roads in the past five years. At that rate it will take two centuries to resurface the entire 10,000-mile system.

"I wouldn't say it's a crisis situation yet, but it sure is building toward one," said Joe Rhodes, executive director of the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials.

"We've got a highway system nationwide that's heading toward a Penn-Central debacle."

America's traditional road-building funds are being gouged two ways. First, the inflation rate for paving is shooting far above the overall rate — up 51 percent in Iowa during a recent 18-month stretch.

At the same time, the nation's burgeoning fleet of fuel-efficient autos is cheating the gasoline tax, the main provider for all road-building funds. People are driving more miles but using less gas, and thus paying less tax.

It's the classic case of an old system that fails when times change.

The obvious answer is to revise the gas tax. Most legislatures are considering that.

State and federal road experts agree the changes must come soon, before the road systems in all 50 states can't afford to fix more than a few potholes. The federal government also must change its traditional approach by becoming more involved in repairing present highways rather than building new ones.

The heart of every roads program is the fuel tax, charged each American every time he buys gasoline. The federal take is 4 cents per gallon, while most states get from 7 to 11 cents. Diesel taxes usually are a little less.

The tax has been around for decades, reaping billions of dollars for the flurry of road-building since World War II. The pot grew bigger each year as more people drove, while the costs of laying concrete stayed pretty much the same because the inflation rate was much lower than it is now.

Then oil prices soared.

Americans responded by purchasing fuel-efficient autos. As they become more common, the Treasury Department predicts, the miles-per-gallon rating of the average auto will rise from 14.54 in 1981 to 16.72 in 1987.

The result? More fuel consumed, but less gas tax paid.

Federal officials estimate gasoline use dropped 2.5 percent last year from the 112.2 billion gallons purchased in 1978, while road use in most states increased.

"There's going to come a point where we can sustain a 3.5 percent to 4 percent growth in vehicle miles traveled every year and still have a drop in fuel consumption," predicted Johnson Page of the Federal Highway Administration.

On the federal level, gas tax revenue fell $120 million last year. The shortfalls between actual and needed revenues differ by state, with Pennsylvania among the worst at $60 million this year and $169 million in 1981. In North Carolina, Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw considers his state lucky it is only $25 million short.

The growing popularity of gasoline and other synthetic fuels is likely to compound the problem, because the federal government and many states don't tax them. President Carter has proposed that grain alcohol provide 10 percent of the nation's unleaded fuel needs by next year. It now supplies about 2 1/2 percent.

If Carter gets his wish, Rhodes says, "We're going to slit our own throats."

Page and many other authorities maintain the shortfalls would exist without the declining gas tax, because paving costs have shot up so fast.

Nationally, expenses jumped 11.5 percent during the third quarter of 1979 alone.

Those ballooning prices come when the federal government is preparing to turn over the interstate highway system to the states.

From the days when the first interstate opened near Topeka, Kan., in the 1950s, the states and federal government have had an agreement. Federal dollars would pay for 90 percent of the cost of constructing the 42,500-mile system, but once the superhighways were finished it would be up to the states to maintain them. Now 93.4 percent of the network is finished and the remaining contracts will be let by late 1986.

Washington has changed that deal slightly in the past few years, offering to spend $175 million this year for resurfacing, restoration and rehabilitation. State officials say that help will have to be jacked up considerably if Washington wants the highways to hold up.

One possible source of money for those repairs is the Federal Highway Trust Fund. At a time when its construction activity is winding down, the fund shows a balance of $12.5 billion.

But until Congress shows the desire to pick up more of the repair bill, money for those projects apparently will have to come from the states.

Six states changed their fuel taxation systems in 1979 and 27 other states are expected to discuss revisions this year. Many will debate suggestions like those introduced in Alabama's legislature, which would combine sales taxes, wholesale taxes, new fees and possibly a higher gas tax to fund the roads budget.

Rhodes said he recently met with about 30 transportation officials and said he thought the legislatures would make the needed changes. Rhodes said the transportation officials — all painfully aware of how rarely taxes go up during election years — told him he was crazy.

Maine's acting commissioner, Richard A. Leutich, says change will have to be made no matter how unpopular it is.

"This problem is only going to increase every year," he said. "This is by no means a one-shot deal."

"We may be going back to dirt roads — that's about what we're going to have to do, at this rate."

Blue Mold Is Nearing N.C.

Blue mold has been discovered close to North Carolina, in Bacon County Ga., just west of Jessup.

The blue mold disease is caused by the fungus "peronospora tabacina," which produces two kinds of spores, or seed-like bodies. Overcast skies and southerly winds provide ideal conditions for movement of the wind-blown spores from areas of the south to those of the north.

All tobacco growers in North Carolina, with plants the size of a dime or larger are encouraged to begin their preventive fungicide program (if they have not already started). Treatments should be applied at least once and perhaps twice a week (if weather continues favorable for causal agent) and continued until transplanting of the field is complete.

Fungicides containing ferbam, zineb, maneb and metiram are suggested for blue mold prevention. Those containing ferbam are not quite as effective but are safer for use on small plants. Growers may want to use those containing ferbam for the first, second and perhaps third application and then switch over to those containing maneb, zineb or metiram for the remainder of the growing season.

Available fungicides are used at different rates, and growers are advised to check the labels carefully before use.

The first two outbreaks of blue mold in Georgia occurred in beds protected with perforated plastic. This suggests that growers should treat beds when plants are the size of a dime regardless of the cover used for protection.

The threat of blue mold is real in unprotected beds. The disease may kill young plants outright and burn leaves of older ones back to the bud and delay growth. Quite often, stem lesions are caused by blue mold but may provide an entrance point for other diseases when transplanting to the field. The fungicide control program also provides protection to anthracnose and reduces losses to damping off.

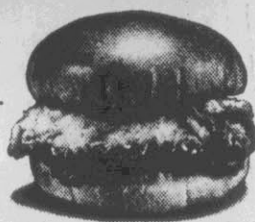

Singing Program Set Thursday

The Gene Warren Singers and the Glorylanders of Missouri will present a program of music at Grindle Creek Church of God Thursday at 7:30 p. m.

Desert Fish Pose Problem In Nevada

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press Writer
RENO, Nev. (AP) — When Nevada officials wanted to build a new state prison in arid desert near tiny Indian Springs, a major worry was a possible lack of water. Another, ironically, was the presence of fish.

Nevada, the nation's driest state, is teeming with unique fish species in small springs and streams. Their presence and vulnerability — has stymied Nevadans' attempts to develop their deserts.

At least eight Nevada fish species are on the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's endangered or threatened lists. Eight more should be on the lists, says Gale Kobetich, field supervisor for the service's endangered species office in Sacramento.

"Most of them, if we didn't mess with the habitat, they would not be endangered," Kobetich says. "But because of the pressures on the habitat, most of them are threatened at least, some of them truly endangered."

Because water is so precious in Nevada, there are sure to be conflicts between efforts to develop the desert and to save the fish, says to state-Water Engineer Bill Newman.

The conflict could touch the state's only two sizable population centers — Las Vegas and Reno — as well as a Pentagon proposal to dot the desert with the massive MX nuclear missile system.

Nevada officials were relieved to learn recently that the proposed Indian Springs prison would not affect the Desert pupfish or Pahump killifish.

Ranchers in the Ash Meadows area of the searing Amargosa Desert weren't as lucky. A federal court order prohibits water pumping that would pull the groundwater level below a point at which the inch-long Devil's Hole pupfish can survive in the warm limestone pothole which is its only home.

More important, the site around Devil's Hole was viewed as an alternative water supply for Las Vegas, Newman says. "This would pretty much preclude that."

To protect another small fish — the 2- to 3-inch-long Moapa Dace — the Fish and Wildlife Service recently purchased a hot springs resort north of Las Vegas. Its proposal to purchase a neighboring — more heavily used — part of Warm Springs produced an outcry from Las Vegas fearful the resort would be shut down.

The Service backed off from the plan. But worried that tampering with the spring could wipe out the fish, it is still considering buying parts of the resort or finding another way to protect it.

Most of the rare fish are relics of the prehistoric era when Nevada's valleys were immersed under lakes, Kobetich says.

"As these lakes dried, the fish were isolated," he says. And so, for thousands of years, the fish evolved along their own paths, many forming entirely unique species.

The rare fish are spread throughout the state — and so are the Air Force's proposed sites for the MX missile.

State fisheries expert Jack Dieringer says Air Force officials are now testing to see how much water they can pump without affecting springs and the fish. If a missile site appeared to endanger a species, Dieringer says the state would ask it to be relocated.

The biggest controversy centers on two of the state's biggest fish, the endangered cui ui sucker 1 which can reach two feet in length — and the threatened Lahontan cutthroat trout — which has been caught at 68 pounds.

Both inhabit Pyramid Lake and the Truckee River, from which Reno draws most of its water. In the midst of a casino building boom, Reno needs more water but federal officials have refused to let the city use water from Wildhorse Reservoir upstream.

Water from that reservoir is used to cool the Truckee during low-water periods so the cui ui can migrate upstream and spawn. Developers say protecting the small fish can cause millions of dollars in delays, or the loss of proposed farms or homes.

"A lot of people argue economics and scientific arguments and possible benefits to man," Kobetich says. "But as far as I'm concerned, there is only one argument. We do not have the right to destroy another species."

HAD WRONG COVERS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eight million copies of the government's 1980 gasoline mileage guide were destroyed and reprinted at cost of $500,000 because the originals had the wrong covers, according to an internal Energy Department audit report.

Early Explorers Led Way To Carolina

By DR. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A three-line filler in a recent daily paper read, "In 1577, Francis Drake began his voyage around the world."
North Carolinians, who are preparing to commemorate the 400th anniversary of the first English colonization of North America, must not overlook the English explorers like Drake who paved the way for Sir Walter Raleigh's colonists.
As early as 1497, John Cabot, a Venetian in the service of England, explored the coast of Newfoundland and established an early English claim to new lands. In 1527 the Mary Guildford, an English ship, skirted the coast from Labrador to Florida.
Others followed, including Martin Frobisher who made three sailings to Baffin Island in the 1570s in search of a northwest passage. At a bay later named for Frobisher, the first Anglican communion service was held in 1578.

It was Drake, however, who first carried the English flag around the world. In 1577 he sailed the Golden Hinde southwesterly, skirting the coast of South America, negotiating the Strait of Magellan in 1578, and then following the west coast to present-day California.
There, in New Albion in June 1579, he beached his ship for cleaning and spent several weeks with the natives, whom he awed into submission.
He nailed up a brass plaque proclaiming possession of the land in the name of Queen Elizabeth. He then continued his circumnavigation of the globe.

There are some unanswered questions concerning the exact spot where Drake careened his ship in California and whether a piece of metal recovered by Beryl W. Shinn in 1936 is the plate of brass erected by the navigator.
First of all, Californians disagree sharply over whether the place called Drake's Bay is in fact the site of his landing. Businessman Robert H. Power has amassed considerable evidence to support his theory that the site was in San Francisco Bay near the present town of Tiburon.
On the other hand, historian V. Aubrey Neasham and his wife have devoted their efforts toward proving that the site was Bolinas Bay between Point Reyes and San Francisco.

The Drake Navigators' Guild, with Raymond Aker as spokesman, has tradition and the mapmakers on the side of the present Drake's Bay.
When the Sir Francis Drake Commission sponsored quadricentennial ceremonies last year, it exercised diplomacy: it chose Point Reyes near but not exactly at Drake's Estero, but it also provided a visit to the other two vicinities.
But there remains the question of the plate of brass. Professor Herbert Bolton pronounced it as authentic; Samuel Eliot Morrison called it "as successful a hoax as the Piltdown Man."
Recent scientific tests of the metal have cast further doubt upon a 14th century origin, but Bob Power points to the inconclusiveness of the tests. No scientist has furnished a convincing explanation of how the plate could have been fabricated in the past couple of centuries. The debate goes on.

North Carolinians, of course, can look upon the California controversy with amusement. They can also point out that Drake stayed around only long enough to repair his ship, and that it was the Spanish, not the English, who actually took possession of the area.
Tar Heels, though, ought to have a great deal of interest in Sir Francis Drake. After all, it was he who picked up Ralph Lane's weary colony in 1585 and returned the men to England.
Of course, one could make the argument that the evacuation of Roanoke Island by Lane's colony was unfortunate, for a relief ship arrived shortly afterward with supplies, the absence of which had led the colonists to despair.

Had Drake been detained southward until the arrival of these supplies, the Lane colony of 1585, might well have survived and become not just the first attempt of the English to colonize America but also the first permanent English colony.
Such a circumstance would have changed the course of history. The story of Roanoke Island might be prominently told in textbooks, and Jamestown and Plymouth Rock might be relegated to footnotes.
Perhaps Sir Francis Drake did not do us a favor after all.

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Osteoporosis: Common Condition After Change of Life

Both my mother and two aunts developed osteoporosis after their change of life. I'm 32 years old and have two children. I know I'm far away from my change of life, yet I wonder if this is a family trait. Is it possible for me, at my age, to do something constructive about preventing the onset of this condition if it is hereditary? — Mrs. J.S.A., Texas.

Dear Mrs. A.:

Osteoporosis is a condition in which the bone tissue loses some of its compactness. Almost all people tend to develop mild osteoporosis as they begin to age.

It is believed that 33 percent of all women show evidence of osteoporosis once the menopause has set in.

Some students of this condition believe that there may be a family tendency; others do not emphasize the familial pattern.

About 30 years ago, a great many studies were made on the relationship between osteoporosis and the diminished output of estrogen hormone (female sex hormone). Estrogen was then given to many women to prevent the progression of this bone condition. Unfortunately, side effects from the use of estrogen have made its use more limited. The controversy about its use still rages. Each individual person must be carefully evaluated before estrogen is used, either to prevent or to control osteoporosis.

At the present time, it is believed that calcium and vitamin D, coupled with estrogen, can reverse the bone absorption that is characteristic of osteoporosis. Yet not all people are candidates for this form of treatment.

You would be wise to remain under the supervision of your doctor, so that any early evidence of osteoporosis can be picked up and evaluated for treatment.

Newer studies indicate that osteoporosis has many facets, all of which are being studied in an effort to keep the condition under control.

I don't add any salt to my diet, but I have a feeling that there's a lot of salt in some of the foods I eat. What foods should I avoid? — Mrs. G.W., Canada.

Dear Mrs. W.:

The following foods are high in salt levels: Frankfurters, liverwurst, sausage, bacon, ham, tuna fish (canned in oil), olives, pretzels, pickles, pizza, cheese, sauerkraut, chili sauce, bouillon cubes, canned soups, salted peanuts, cereals and bread made from baking soda, corned beef, canned salmon, sardines, soy sauce, Worcestershire sauce, luncheon meats, mustard, salted butter, canned beans, canned beets and canned tomatoes.

Remember that all carbonated drinks are a hidden and often overlooked source of salt. And, of course, if you have been advised to avoid salt, learn to substitute other seasonings for salt when you prepare meals.

Detroit Is A Bad City For Robbers

By DAVID FOX
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — He walks quietly across the bank and hands the teller a note: "I have a gun. Give me $500." He gets his money and quickly flees the bank.

In California or New York — indeed, just about anywhere in the country — the bandit has a good chance of getting away. But in Detroit, nine out of 10 times the robber will be caught.

In five years, the number of bank robberies in the metropolitan area has been slashed by 79 percent — 90 percent in the city itself — while the national total has risen 86 percent.

Far cry from 1974, when Detroit helped earn its reputation as crime city by having 237 of Michigan's 294 bank robberies — the third highest total in the country.

In the first six months of 1978 — the latest figures available from the FBI — there were 39 bank robberies in all of Michigan. During the same period, California had 839, New York 357, New Jersey 111, Pennsylvania 103, and Maryland and Florida 91 each.

Much of the credit for Detroit's remarkable flip-flop goes to a bank robbery reward program created in 1974, said FBI agent Jerry Craig. The program pays $1,000 for information resulting in an indictment for bank robbery.

It's operated by the Detroit Clearing House Association's security committee — an organization of 69 banks and savings and loan associations — along with the FBI and local law enforcement agencies.

The group places "wanted poster" advertisements in newspapers and on city buses promoting the rewards. Most of the ads bear actual photographs of bandits taken by security cameras, Craig said, and urge people to call in information about robberies.

William Kalmar, chairman of the security committee, said some callers are eyewitnesses, but in many cases they either recognize the bandit from seeing his photo or offer inside information about the holdup.

"We've had relatives turn in a bank robber. We've had sons and daughters — fathers and mothers turning in sons and daughters," he said.

"In one instance a bank robber, after seeing his picture prominently displayed in the local newspaper, turned himself in. Apparently he was hoping to use the $1,000 for his defense fund."

The bandit was not paid — just arrested.

Other factors contributed to the decline in holdups, said Jack Thistlethwaite, committee vice chairman.

He cited the use of bullet-proof glass at teller windows, tear gas and red dye packets designed to separate the crook and his money the minute they go off.

But rewards are the key, Thistlethwaite said.

Such programs have been around since the 1930s. What makes Detroit's program work while the others fail?

Craig noted that in New York state, in which a program pays $10,000 upon arrest and conviction, bank robberies rose 43 percent between 1974 and 1978.

Seattle's "Rat on a Rat" program pays $10,000 upon arrest, yet holdups have increased by 20 percent in the last year, said Kalmar.

Kalmar said the difference leading to Detroit's success seems to be payment for indictment, not an arrest.

"They're putting a dollar amount on the value of the information in Oregon," he added. "I don't know how you can look at what the citizen gives you and say 'That's only worth 200 bucks.' We don't do that. It's a thousand bucks. That, I think, gives our program integrity."

Thistlethwaite said constant, repeated advertising also has helped. The association has spent $440,000 on the program since its inception, including $94,000 in rewards. Because of that, he said 105 robbers were arrested and 199 holdups were solved.

Kalmar thinks the next two years will test the preventive nature of the Detroit program, with the economy likely worsening and with some 260 bandits sentenced in 1975 being released from jail.

Other cities have expressed an interest in the program, Craig said. And he said it could easily be adapted to fighting other crimes.

"YOU BID WHAT?" — Hundreds of tables and thousands of bridge players are filling the spacious convention center at Fresno, Calif. for the American Contract Bridge League's 1980 spring championships. More than 2,500 players participated during the weekend. Play continues through this week. (AP Laser-photo)

Robots Of Westworld Didn't Fit The Pattern

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — You can't trust a monster story whose monsters have ambiguous vulnerabilities. Part of the appeal of Dracula, I suspect, is the knowledge that no matter what atrocities the blood-sucker commits, he can be had for the price of a stake, or deterred by the most makeshift of crucifixes.

Frankenstein's monster died in fires (or rested in frozen caves, awaiting his next picture). Wolfman went down with a silver bullet. The Blob oozed horror until someone showed up with the ice cubes.

But CBS' new series, "Beyond Westworld," has monsters whose weaknesses are so inconsistent as to render the efforts of the good guys meaningless.

The villainous creatures here are robots left over from the movie, "Westworld." Their purpose is to help a former "Westworld" scientist work his evil, the ultimate end of which is world domination.

The episode plots are so ridiculous I didn't pay much attention, but here's a rough idea: The bad guy is Quaid (James Wainwright), who uses his robots to distract the world's protectors while his does his stuff.

Last week, Quaid wanted to take over a family oil business. He forced one brother to sign over his share of the company and plotted to kill the other brother. Sounds like something from Rent-a-Plot.

As I say, didn't pay much attention to the story itself because I was so bothered by the inconsistency of the robots' weaknesses. At the beginning, a cop tried to shoot one of the creatures, but the robot just smiled as the .38 slugs bounced off of his chest.

The favored method of killing these creatures seems to be electrocution, although one robot (the same one who liked the bullets) was done in by the mere insertion of an ice pick into his circuitry center.

This just won't do. The doing in of an inhuman villain by probing around his belly with a screwdriver just doesn't provide the cathartic release of a wooden stake through the heart.

Apparently, Wednesday night viewers have noticed this flaw, too. Or maybe they've noticed that the stories are pretty weak. Whatever, they're ignoring "Beyond Westworld" in droves, and CBS has put its own screwdriver to the robots by stopping production on the show.

Paint Stairs, Still Use Them

NEW YORK (UPI) — If painting stairs is on your spring fix-up list, there's a way to do the job and use the staircase at the same time. Paint every other step and wait for them to dry before painting the others. Or, alternatively, paint half the entire staircase and wait for it to dry before painting the other half. Begin with the riser, then the side panel and finally the step.

The Soap and Detergent Association, from which this advice comes, also recommends preparing for painting by sweeping or vacuuming loose dirt, then scrubbing with suds with a wire brush. Scrape peeling paint and sand rough areas and prime-bare wood.

$5 MILLION STUDY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The potential danger from pesticides to children who harvest farm crops is the subject of a new five-year $5 million federal study.

TEMPORARY TREATY

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — Malta has signed a temporary agreement with Libya on bilateral defense and economic cooperation, Prime Minister Dom Mintoff says.

Easter Falling On Same Date

NEW YORK (AP) — Although it ordinarily doesn't happen, Easter this year will be celebrated by all Christians — Eastern Orthodox, Protestant and Roman Catholic — on the same date, April 6.

Because of varying systems used in calculating the date, Eastern Orthodox churches and Western churches (Roman Catholic and Protestants) usually observe Easter on different dates.

But this year they coincide. All Christians, says Greek Orthodox Archbishop Iakovos, can "truly experience together ... the glory of the one Lord and of the one undivided church founded by Christ, on the day we celebrate his resurrection."

Contact Paper Lifts The Dirt

TOLEDO, Ohio (UPI) — If the walls of your inside stairway are filled with children's dirty handprints, take a tip from a member of the National Family Opinion panel: Use contact paper to make cutouts of the hands of your children and their friends. Place the cutouts at regular intervals along the wall. They'll help keep the wall clean, the panelist says, because the children will automatically try to match their handprints as they go up and down the stairs.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — PROSPECT OF TAX RETURNS OFTEN EXCITED AUDITOR.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: A equals M

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, MAR. 20, 1980

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day is ideal to organize your thoughts and make plans for the future. A time to avoid confrontations since a series of fixed adversities could follow.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Attend to important duties early in the day so you'll have more time for social activities later. Be more optimistic.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) The time is not right for taking on new responsibilities. Sidestep one who is detrimental to your progress.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Take steps to patch up any differences with an associate. Study your financial position and make plans to improve it.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Contact a wise and older friend for advice you need. You can make an excellent impression on higher-ups now.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Important business matter is best handled early in the day. Analyze your activities and be sure you are as practical as you should be.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Begin the day wisely by keeping any promises you have made. Go to the right sources for the information you need.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Try to economize more so you won't be caught in a financial pinch in the future. Steer clear of a group meeting today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) An associate can help you solve a difficult problem in the morning. Show increased devotion to loved one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Positive thinking will help you gain your aims at this time. You can make a fine impression on others now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Put those creative ideas to work now and get excellent results. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Find out what family members desire of you and then do your best to please them. Show others you have wisdom.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Listen to ideas of a long-time friend and follow through for good benefits. Make as many new contacts as you can.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who can become a great success in life because of the ability to understand the needs of others. One with a retentive mind, so be sure to give the best education you can afford. Don't neglect ethical training.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Pass Pass
Opening lead: Two of ♦.

Life on defense can be relatively easy if you have the ability to visualize the opponents' holdings. Watch Edgar Kaplan, editor of Bridge World, on this hand from the Bermuda Regional.

We are not enamored of South's decision to respond one spade. If we felt it incumbent on us to say anything with this hand, we would pretend we had a spade mixed in with our diamonds and bid one diamond. Nothing bad could happen, for we would be perfectly placed to pass any rebid partner might make that was not forcing.

Kaplan's opening lead was a trump, won in the dummy. Declarer led a diamond and

It seemed obvious that declarer held the ace-queen of diamonds—there could be no other reason to play that suit at trick two. Yet, declarer had passed his partner's jump raise. Ergo, South could have little beside the diamonds, certainly not the ace of clubs. The defense was now an open book.

Kaplan shifted to a club, which his wife, Betty, won with the ace. The club return went to the king. Kaplan continued with the jack of clubs—a suit preference signal for hearts. Betty ruffed the club and duly returned a heart to the ace. Now a fourth club by Kaplan meant that Betty had to score her queen of spades en passant.
