Hard Decisions Await House Budget-Writers

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — House budget writers appear on track toward recommending the first balanced federal budget in 12 years, but hard decisions over spending cuts are still ahead.

In its first day of work on the 1981 budget Wednesday, the House Budget Committee tentatively approved cutting $2.6 billion from the budget originally proposed by President Carter in January. Little opposition appeared to be emerging to the revised budget proposed by Rep. Robert N. Giaino, D-Conn., the committee chairman.

The committee was to resume work on the budget today with votes possible on some of the more controversial cuts, such as an end to Saturday mail deliveries and elimination of the state share of federal revenue sharing.

Giaino, who declared Wednesday that rising inflation "makes a balanced budget imperative," recommended a total of $15.9 billion in spending cuts to produce a budget surplus of $1.4 billion for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

In other economic news Wednesday:

—New figures showed the profits of U.S. business sagged in the final quarter of 1979, despite a jump in oil company profits. Analysts called the profit figures another sign of an economic slowdown.

—Savings deposits at the nation's savings and loan associations registered the smallest February increase in a decade, rising $1.6 billion last month, another negative economic indication.

In announcing his new anti-inflation plan last week, President Carter called for $13 billion in spending cuts to balance the 1981 budget. However, administration officials said the president has yet to make final decisions on what specific cuts to recommend.

In the absence of Carter's revised budget proposal, Giaino's recommendations — which are generally supported by the congressional leadership and the administration — are emerging as the framework for the 1981 budget.

Giaino also proposed enacting "modest" tax cuts, essentially by rebating the $10.3 billion expected from the president's oil import fee. That fee will boost gasoline prices by 10 cents a gallon.

Giaino said an additional $3.5 billion could be raised for general tax cuts by increasing user fees for airports and waterways and by reducing tax breaks, such as the business lunch deduction.

Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., an influential committee member, said the tax cut likely would reduce Social Security taxes by about $10 billion and allow businesses $3 billion for faster tax write-offs on investments.

The tax cut issue provoked the sharpest debate Wednesday as committee Republicans tried to firmly commit the panel to a tax reduction as well as to deeper spending cuts.

"We're trying to lock in a tax cut," said Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y.

The GOP proposal, defeated on a 17-8 party line vote, sought a $20 billion tax cut — $11 billion in fiscal 1981. By mandating sharper spending cuts, the GOP plan still projected a $1 billion budget surplus.

Overall, Giaino's budget proposal for fiscal 1981 calls for spending $612.4 billion, revenues of $613.8 billion and a surplus of $1.4 billion.

Normally, the president's budget submitted in January serves as the framework for the congressional budget review, although Congress retains final power over spending levels.

This year, however, the process was complicated when Carter repudiated his January budget, which called for a $15.8 billion deficit, and said the budget must be balanced as part of the fight to reduce the nation's 18 percent annual inflation rate.

Since Carter has yet to send Congress a revised budget proposal, the House Budget Committee has turned to Giaino's plan as the key recommendation.

The spending cuts approved Wednesday included $1 billion from the strategic petroleum reserve, $300 million in deferred park acquisition and water projects and $200 million from construction of veterans' hospitals.

Giaino has estimated $836 million could be saved by ending Saturday mail deliveries and reducing the subsidy for bulk mail.

Elimination of the state share of federal revenue sharing would save $1.7 billion, dropping anti-recession aid for cities $1 billion, reducing youth and other jobs programs $1 billion and trimming the federal highway program $500 million.

Other possible major savings being talked about include $1 billion by postponing proposed welfare changes, $1 billion by awarding cost-of-living increases once a year instead of twice to civilian and military retirees and $400 million by cutting back the food stamp program.

Indefinite Hostages?

By The Associated Press

Signals coming from Iran indicate the American hostages may be held indefinitely, the U.S. government said today. Meanwhile, Iranians celebrated the new year with fiery incantations, lucky goldfish and strolling minstrels after 61 prisoners were freed under an amnesty by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The new year holiday, called Now Ruz, closed government offices for the next week and took public attention away from the slow counting of votes in the parliamentary election last week and the 50 hostages, who began their 138th day in captivity in the U.S. Embassy today.

"The signals which are now coming out of Iran suggest that the detention of the hostages may continue indefinitely," State Department legal adviser Roberts B. Owen told the World Court in the Hague, Netherlands.

"No one in this courtroom has any way of knowing whether the Ayatollah Khomeini will continue to hold the hostages in captivity for a month or for a year or for a decade," he declared.

Owen said that U.S. hopes for release of the hostages were shattered early this month when the U.N. investigating commission left Iran without seeing the captives. He called the World Court the most promising hope for the ultimate release of the hostages and called for an urgent final judgment on the U.S. case against Iran.

Owen told the court on Wednesday the hostages were held under "harsh and inhumane conditions" and were "confined like common criminals."

He said 13 black or female hostages who were released Nov. 16 reported that women were tied to straight chairs facing the wall for 16 hours at a time, that at night the hostages' hands were bound or handcuffed and they were kept under lights around the clock to inhibit sleep, that some were made to sleep on the cold bare floor without blankets, that some were denied changes of clothing and that baths or showers were allowed only rarely.

"On one occasion a student who was interrogating a woman hostage showed her his revolver to let her know that one of its chambers was loaded, and then proceeded to intimidate her by pointing the gun at her and repeatedly pulling the trigger," said Owen. "Happily he stopped in time, but the experience must have been terrifying."

AT AGRIBUSINESS DINNER ... J. Harris, following the governor's Gov. Jim Hunt and Pitt County speech.
Agriculture Association president C.

Governor Had Full Day In Greenville

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

It was a busy day in Greenville, yesterday, for Gov. Jim Hunt.

First, the governor appeared at a morning press conference, then met with members of the Governor's Advisory Committee on Agriculture, Forestry and the Seafood Industry, before speaking at a Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce-sponsored "meet the candidate" program.

Later, Hunt spoke at the annual Pitt County Agribusiness Association dinner, then spent some time at his re-election campaign headquarters visiting with friends and political supporters.

At the agribusiness dinner, Hunt announced, "the appointment to the State Ports Authority," of W. C. "Bill" Monk of Farmville, whose firm, "ships a lot of tobacco," through the Morehead City state port facility.

He also announced the location of a new $60 million wet milling plant in Winston-Salem.

The CPC International (of New Jersey) facility, according to Hunt, will go into operation in 1982, providing employment for some 150 employees.

"It's a big addition to the economy of this state," the governor said, one which will provide, "an additional market for our farmers," as well as additional jobs.

The governor explained that the new facility will produce dextrose, starch and corn syrup for use in textile, paper and other industries.

According to Hunt, "R. J. Reynolds (in Winston-Salem) has just signed an agreement with the Government of China to buy our tobacco. Two weeks ago, I helped break ground for a new Japanese plant that makes amino acids, and we've announced that at least two more Japanese plants will locate in North Carolina — a wood products plant and a seafood processing plant."

"We are expanding the horizons for agribusiness in North Carolina, because the world is literally hungry for our grain, our seafood, our tobacco."

Hunt emphasized, "agribusiness is already doing a multi-billion dollar business," in the state. "Tobacco alone means a billion dollars to farmers every year," he said, "and when all our farm products are processed and marketed, they're worth over $10 billion. Hundreds of thousands of North Carolinians make their livelihoods from agribusiness, and thousands more benefit from it."

"We in this state already have a strong history in agribusiness, and a strong record. I've been a farmer longer than I've been anything else in my life, and I learned that farm tradition from my parents. I know what it means to families when there's a good year in tobacco, and I know what it means when there's drought..."

"I think that's one of the reasons I work so hard for agriculture, and why I want to listen to farmers and agribusiness leaders," Hunt explained.

"I am proud to be one governor who is standing up for the tobacco industry. I speak up for it whenever the occasion arises, and I think in North Carolina, tobacco is still 'king'. I don't intend to let anyone dethrone it."

"It is our number one crop," Hunt noted, "and there is nothing that can

HARRASSING ON THE JOB

Isn't it against the law for creditors to call you on your job to ask about debts you owe? Bill collectors are harrassing me and I have bad nerves.

Jean Ann Wolhair of the Consumer Protection Division of the N. C. Attorney General's office said that two laws govern a debtor being called on the job.

Federal law governs third party collection agencies, i. e. credits bureaus and the like. If the employer disapproves of personal calls for you, it is unlawful for the agency to call you at work. But, of course, you must notify the agency about this disapproval.

State law governs original creditors. You must do two things. First, tell them not to call you at work. Secondly, you must give them a phone number at which you can be reached when you are not at work, Wolhair said.

Listed Missing In Kabul

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — An American businessman named Charles Brockunier has been missing in Kabul since the Afghan capital was rocked by anti-Soviet rioting nearly one month ago, Western diplomatic sources said today.

They said the U.S. Embassy has asked the Soviet-backed Afghan regime whether Brockunier was detained along with another American, Robert Lee, but has received no reply.

American diplomats in New Delhi refused to comment officially.

Afghanistan's government radio reported Lee was arrested last month and accused of being a CIA agent.

The U.S. addresses of Brockunier and Lee were not known here.

More than 300 civilians were reported killed in the Kabul riots of Feb. 22-23, when residents of the capital protested the Soviet occupation of their homeland.

Recommend One Agency Oversee The Campuses

WASHINGTON (AP) — A private commission, which included University of North Carolina president William G. Friday, has recommended that one agency be created to enforce civil rights laws at colleges and universities.

The Sloan Commission on Government and Higher Education said Wednesday the government increasingly asks "questions about faculty appointments and promotions through agents who simply do not know enough about higher education."

As a result, the commission said the government is becoming more a policeman than a patrol of the academic world.

The report, issued after a two-year, $2 million study, recommended the single agency be created within the new Department of Education and that it assume the work of investigators and auditors from the departments of Health, Education and Welfare, Justice, Labor and five other agencies enforcing 17 laws and rules.

Friday said he believed such an agency would have affected the current desegregation dispute between the 16-campus system and HEW.

"I think we would have followed an entirely different route in the negotiations," he said.

HEW has moved to end UNC's $89 million in annual federal aid.

The case was not mentioned in the Sloan Commission report, but Friday acknowledged that it was one case studied by the commission.

An act of Congress would be needed to establish the proposed council, the Council for Equal Opportunity in Higher Education.

As recommended, the council would stress mediation of disputes, but could award back pay and cut off funds to offending colleges or programs.

There were two dissenters on the 22-member Sloan panel, publisher Peter B. Clark of the Detroit News and A. Leon Higginbotham Jr., a federal appeals judge.

The commission was funded by the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation of New York, which concentrates on education and research in academia.

Fire Kills 5; Blamed On Defective TV Set

HORSESHOE, N.C. (AP) — The Henderson County medical examiner said today a fire in which a 43-year-old woman and four of her children died Wednesday night was caused by a defective television.

The victims were identified as Betty Davis Mathis, 43; her daughter Jenny Lynn, 7; and her sons, Kevin Frank, 13; Keith Doyle, 11; and Christopher Robin, 5.

Another daughter, Charlene, 16, escaped uninjured shortly after the fire began late Wednesday night.

Fire swept through the Mathis' five-room tenant house on a Henderson County dairy farm shortly after 11:30 p.m.

Dr. Howard B. Norton, who also is a lieutenant in the Mills River Voluntary Fire Department, said there was nothing in the corner of the livingroom where the fire began but a television.

"That corner was where the greatest charring was, where the most damage was," Norton said. "There was nothing else in that corner. It was the television."

"The case is closed. There is nothing suspicious here at all," he said.

Mrs. Mathis' husband, Carmel, said he went to a nearby dairy barn about 11:30 p.m. to begin milking operations and spotted flames from there. He said he called firefighters and returned to the house.

Mathis said he and Charlene tried to get into the house to rescue other members of the family but were driven back by smoke and intense heat.

Fire departments from Horseshoe and Mills River responded to the alarm. Firefighters said the house was engulfed in flames when they arrived.

Mills River Fire Chief Ralph Moore said the victims died of smoke inhalation. He said the mother and three sons were found in a back bedroom and the daughter was in a second bedroom.

Mathis said he was watching television in the livingroom before he went to the barn to begin midnight milking operations. He said he turned the television off before he left.

The wood frame house was located on the John McLean dairy farm, one of the largest in Henderson County.

Touring Mainland China On $5 Possible, But Not For Foreigners

By ALINE MOSBY
PEKING (UPI) — It still is possible to tour China on $5 a day, as hardy tourists used to do in Europe until inflation wiped out budgets.
But you have to be a Chinese citizen to stay in Peking on the cheap.
Foreign tourists at the luxurious Peking Hotel turn on supersonic television sets or radios, marvel at the view from spacious balconies, soak in bathtubs and order whisky from room service before descending to the gigantic, lace-curtained dining room.
A five-minute drive away, off Qian Men shopping street, a half dozen other hotels cluster along a narrow 16th century street in a picturesque neighborhood.
In one hotel a dark corridor leads into a modest lobby with a wooden staircase indicating the upstairs rooms.
"Three yuan ($2) a night and 1.60 yuan ($1) if you share with three other people," the manager, a hefty man with a shaven head, told a foreign visitor.
"But foreigners cannot stay here," he cried in agitation at the foreigner who dared to walk right in. "You must go to the Peking Hotel."
This is the Peking that foreign tourists do not see.
China has a two-tiered, segregated society, one for Chinese and one for foreigners, and bargain rates are not for visitors from abroad.
The small hotels have small signs outside their narrow doors giving their assigned number. Customers line up on the street to register at the central office serving all hotels in the quarter. A man hauled baggage on a little hand cart from the office to one hotel.
Hotel No. 2 had two floors of rooms built around an inner lobby. On this cold day, cots had been set around the potbellied stove in the center of the lobby and people prepared to sleep with their clothes on.
At hotel No. 3, up wooden steps, a woman in a white uniform politely explained that a cot in the hallway cost the equivalent of 66 cents.
A neat room with peeling plaster and quilts folded on the ends of two beds cost $2.13.
These old hotels have no bathrooms and seldom have running water. Most have communal toilets and sinks in the hallways. Otherwise customers use public latrines on the streets.

A large sign in one well-swept hotel said, "No bedbugs, no cockroaches. Sheets changed and washed."
At souvenir stands in these hotels, tourists can buy soap and towels, since the hotels do not furnish them.
A new 308-room hotel only for Chinese opened recently close to the Peking Hotel. It is light years up in comfort from the old hotels, but the price of a single room is only $1.84. Communal toilets and sinks with running water are provided on each floor.
The segregation system is less strict in restaurants. Foreigners who want to see the real Peking, and relieve their budgets, can eat in hundreds of restaurants that cost one-tenth the price of gourmet spots to which guides whisk foreigners from the Peking Hotel.
In one of the cheap restaurants, described as a "masses restaurant" by a Chinese translator, the Chinese appeared surprised to see a foreigner.

The waitresses tried to seat the foreigner in a separate room. With a battle, the visitor managed to share one of the communal round tables covered with white oilcloth. Customers seated on low stools talked to the unexpected visitor.
The food was almost as good as more expensive restaurants where foreigners are closeted in separate rooms. But this restaurant served dog meat, a dish not on the Peking Hotel menu.
In China, poultry is cut into small pieces, bones and all, the easier to eat with chopsticks. In the "masses restaurant" diners dispose of the bones by spitting them on the concrete floor. They pile up as the evening wears on.

The menu is posted on the wall. Diners pay servers before they fetch food from the kitchen.
In other restaurants customers stand in line at the kitchen take-out entrance to pick up dishes such as the meat-filled pastries, like Italian ravioli, cooked in enormous vats of boiling water.
Back at the Peking Hotel an army sentry at the entrance to the driveway turned away Chinese, as usual, including two provincial officials.
"We just want to look," one pleaded.
Only Chinese who work in the hotel or have appointments with foreigners there can enter. Just as foreigners peer in vain into the bargain hotels for Chinese, so the Chinese stare through the bushes lining the driveway at the sealed-off, luxury ghetto for the travelers from abroad.

Wedding Ring Might Not Solve Problem

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a reasonably attractive working woman in my late 20s. In my job I am constantly in contact with the public. My problem is that I am frequently asked out by men and find it very difficult and sometimes embarrassing to say no.

Would it be wrong for me to wear a wedding ring while I work even though I am not married?

UNMARRIED BUT UNAVAILABLE

DEAR DOUBLE UN: A wedding ring (like a sign that says, "WET PAINT") is not always a deterrent. Wear one if you wish, but a more mature solution would be to develop sufficient spunk to say, "No," emphatically, convincingly and without apologies or excuses.

DEAR ABBY: I am a girl with a very touchy problem. I have a friend who is cross-eyed. My mother says this can be corrected by surgery, but I just can't bring myself to mention it to her because I don't want to hurt her feelings.

Many people know she's my best friend, and they ask me why she doesn't get her eyes fixed because she would be so pretty otherwise. I usually say, "I don't know why," and walk away. What else can I say?

Guys notice it right away, and I am sure that's the reason she has very few dates. She is a lovely girl with a nice personality. Is there some way I can help her without hurting her feelings? We are both 15.

WANTS TO HELP

DEAR WANTS: Yes. Only a good friend would care enough to tell her that most cross-eyes can be corrected. Perhaps she doesn't know. Or perhaps she isn't aware of how conspicuous it is. If you tell her in the spirit of friendly loving kindness, she should be grateful, not hurt.

DEAR ABBY: I've been going with this guy for a year. I'm 20 and he's 22. We get along really well and I'm in love with him. I'm the only girl he dates, and he's the only guy for me. We've been intimate, and there's no problem there. The problem is that he's never said, "I love you."

He's not cold or anything like that. He's very affectionate, and he's told me he thinks I'm "the greatest." He's paid me lots of compliments, so I know he really cares for me, but he seems to carefully avoid saying those three little words I want to hear.

I haven't told him I love him yet because I've been waiting for him to say it first.

Abby, how can I get him to say "I love you," and why do you think he's been holding back?

NO I LOVE YOU'S IN VEGAS

DEAR NO: I don't know about your guy, but most guys are reluctant to say "I love you" because they aren't ready to make a commitment.

replace it." He emphasized, however, "this does not mean we should not work for supplementary..." income sources.

"We have provided tax incentives for small woodlot owners," Hunt explained. Few farmers are, "farming this woodland. We need to change that. We have now the most attractive laws in the nation."

"We've made it easier for industry to convert from coal or gas, to wood. We're using wood for energy in state buildings whenever possible, and we're working to expand markets for wood, especially where the local market is not competitive."

"That's the kind of thing we're going to do a lot of."

Hunt added that, "we've worked to increase the price supports for peanuts and helped get the USDA to buy our sweet potatoes for the school lunch program...given the soil and water conservationists more tools to do their jobs, and working to get a national weather research center at N.C. State University."

"We've done many other things together for agriculture. We've got agriculture alive and growing. But we can do even more, if we use our know-how and work together."

"This is North Carolina, and we can do better."

Hunt emphasized, "we must do all we can to help the small family farm, and to make sure those farmers have access to credit and markets."

"The family farm is important because of the kind of people that live on them...the kind of communities they make. We in this state, should look at our taxing and regulation systems and be sure they are not unfair to farmers and livestock growers," he added.

"We do have a rich agricultural heritage in North Carolina. It literally means life and bread for all of us. I am optimistic about the future. I just want to thank you for what you have done."

Jim Graham, North Carolina Commissioner of Agriculture attended the dinner meeting, along with W. W. "Billy" Yeargin, managing director of the Tobacco Growers Information Committee and charter president of the Pitt Agribusiness Association.

Yeargin, saying, "the organization has flourished," pointed out that Graham, and Hunt, then lieutenant governor, were present at the first annual dinner held by the association, five years ago.

C. J. Harris, current president of the association, acted as master of ceremonies yesterday.

Earlier, at the "meet the candidate" session, sponsored by the GACC's State Concerns Committee of the Public and Governmental Affairs Council, the governor responded to several questions previously submitted to him.

"I would not favor highway tolls," Hunt said in response to a question dealing with the continued loss of highway funds due to inflation and alternative methods of financing transportation improvements.

The governor pointed out that a special blue ribbon study commission has been named to, "look into this very question."

"I have confidence in them," he said, and noted that the steps the commission will recommend, will be, "responsible and appropriate."

According to Hunt, "I believe having a strong transportation system," is essential to growth. "I am an economic development governor. That's what the people of this state need the most."

Responding to a question about education in the state, Hunt suggested improvements are needed in vocational programs and in reducing the size of classes in public schools. He also said something needs to be done about school drop-outs.

The governor also said he would support repeal of the sales tax on food, provided such a move would not hamper educational programs, and voiced strong support for the state's "Sunset Law."

Hunt added that, "I would urge business men and women, somehow...to form some kind of...force to push to see that good sunseting is carried through."

The governor also told chamber members that the four-laning of US 264 between

Wilson and Greenville is, "relatively on schedule. We're pushing as hard as we can. I don't want to see anything happen to 264."

Prince Hall Session Set

The 1980 session of the North Carolina Council of Deliberation of Consistories for thirty-second and thirty-third degree masons of Prince Hall Affiliations, will convene March 21-23 at the Bordeaux Motor Inn and Convention Center in Fayetteville.

The session will be opened Friday by the state deputy in charge, Dr. G. Wesley Allen, at 10 a.m. and continue through 5 p.m. At 7 p.m. and 8 p.m. there will be a social courtesy and fashion show and at 9:30 p.m. the Thirty-Third Degree Grand Inspector Generals will meet.

Saturday morning at 9:30 the business will continue until 4 p.m. At 7 o'clock the Awards Banquet will be held, with Dr. I.H. Clayborn, Sovereign Grand Commander of the nation, as the guest speaker.

Sunday at 7:30 a.m. the State Grand Deputy will have a breakfast meeting with the Commanders-in-Chief and consistory officers. The 1980 session will end at a 2 p.m. ceremony.

Lt. Gov. Here On March 31

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green is scheduled to be in Greenville, March 31, for the opening of the local headquarters for his campaign for re-election to the State's second highest post.

The campaign headquarters is located at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Evans Street, in the building formerly occupied by JJ's Pantry — across Greenville Boulevard from Gov. Jim Hunt's re-election campaign headquarters.

Carl Woxman said the festivities will get underway about 4 p.m. — complete with band and refreshments. He explained that Green will attend the rally about 4:30 and cut the ribbon formally opening the local campaign center.

Green, a Virginia native, moved to North Carolina as a young man and has made his home at Clarkton. He has served as a member of both the State House of Representatives and Senate, and was elected lieutenant governor in 1976.

FUNDS PLEDGED

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.S. government, one of eight accused by the U.N. General Assembly last year of "collusion with the racist regime in South Africa", has pledged $1.8 million to U.N. funds for humanitarian and educational aid for blacks in southern Africa.

Bike Safety Contest Set

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department has organized a local contest for the first North Carolina Bicycle Safety Poster Contest.

The contest is open to all fourth, fifth and sixth grade students. Posters must illustrate some aspect of night riding' such as proper lighting for bikes, light-colored clothing, etc.

All posters are to be turned in to the Recreation and Parks office, 2000 Cedar Lane, by 5 p.m. on Tuesday, April 1. Judging will be on the following day.

For a list of requirements for the contest, contact 752-4137, extension 263 or stop by the office.

Local winners will advance to state competition.

Women Plan April Projects

The Pitt County Farm Bureau Women's Committee met recently to make plans for the promotion of good relations between farm and non-farm people.

Chairman of the Pitt County Committee Mrs. Lindsey Briley presided at the meeting. Plans were made to host a dinner meeting of the Pitt County Farm Bureau Board of Directors with the Pitt County Board of Commissioners as special guests. This meeting is designed to give women an opportunity to become well-informed on local affairs.

During the meeting, plans were made to promote a roadside cleanup campaign during the month of April, celebrate Farm Bureau day with a county-wide picnic for all Farm Bureau families on April 18, sponsor a harvest festival in the fall, and use every opportunity to promote good relations between farm and non-farm people.

Registering For Softball

Softball registration for elementary school children will be held Monday, March 24 and Tuesday, March 25 at Elmhurst, Eastern and South Greenville playgrounds and at the West Greenville Recreation Center.

Anyone grades 4-6 (ages 9-12) may register at the playground of their choice. Girls will meet each Monday and Wednesday; boys will meet each Tuesday and Thursday. No equipment is required except shoes.

On The 'Inside Track'

The question of who will be the presidential nominee for the Republican and Democratic parties is rapidly being answered.

Bear in mind that things can change overnight in politics. We have seen it happen too often not to be conscious of it. A sudden adverse reaction in the nation's economy, for instance, could send the Carter prospects plummeting. On the other hand a favorable break in interenational relations could mean sure victory for the president.

Having said that, however, we have to conclude following the Illinois primaries that President Carter seems headed for the Democratic nomination and Ronald Reagan seems to have the inside track for the GOP nomination.

The Republican picture was clouded for several weeks, but the solid Reagan victory over John Anderson in Anderson's home state is a sure indication that the Reagan campaign is rapidly gaining strength.

The strong showing of President Carter in defeating Sen. Ted Kennedy in Illinois could be almost the knock-out blow for Kennedy. He may make a better showing in the northeast, but there are many southern and western states to be heard from, and they are not likely to be Kennedy's.

Presidential politics are rapidly shaping up, and at this point there is a good chance that Ronald Reagan will be opposing President Carter in the November election.

Sentence Still Seems Harsh

The U. S. Supreme Court has ruled that a Texas man committed to life imprisonment for a $229.11 fraud is not subjected to cruel and unusual punishment.

The man got the sentence as a habitual criminal, and the court noted that Texas liberal policy on paroles made it unlikely he would serve the full life sentence.

That may be, but a life sentence for any crime not involving threat or harm to human life seems harsh to us.

Perhaps sentences should be made to fit the crime and liberal parole policies should be reviewed.

Defense In Zoning

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A number of North Carolina communities are already thrashing about for a way to block storage or disposal of toxic and hazardous wastes within their confines.

So far, the problem has been small in this state. But with the prospect of North Carolina becoming a major regional, or even national, center for the incineration of toxic wastes including low-level radioactive materials, public opposition is bound to grow more intense.

Several local governments across the state have adopted ordinances which say, in effect, the only poisonous materials which can be stored or disposed of within those communities are those generated by research or industrial facilities located there.

It is generally felt that such an approach means control can be maintained over the disposal operation, and that companies which provide jobs and revenues within the community have a right to dispose of their wastes in that community. But not outsiders. Especially, not big outsiders such as nuclear power plants.

In Court

Warren County, meanwhile, is trying to stop the State of North Carolina from using a dumping site for PCB-laced soil scooped up from roadways where it was illegally dumped. That battle is going into the courts, and the outcome is far away and uncertain.

But for those communities which have drawn simple ordinances banning waste disposal, the handwriting is clear. In Louisiana, the courts have ruled that such bans are not proper, and other decisions from courts and federal agencies have come together to say, in effect, if you have a disposal site, you can't restrict use to a given community, state or region. To do so is an unconstitutional infringement upon commerce.

What recourse is there?

Milton Heath, a member

of the Institute of Government staff at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, says local zoning ordinances would be the most effective approach to providing local control.

If a county government adopts a serious and comprehensive plan for growth and development, and couples that with strict zoning regulations which apply in a uniform and legal way to all property and land uses, then local control over waste disposal can be secured.

"This, it seems to me, is the best chance local government officials have of responding to their constituents' wishes not to have toxic and hazardous waste in their communities," Heath said.

Use Permit

Special use permits can be made a part of county zoning ordinances, with the provisions made so tough that it would prove difficult to qualify, or at least strict local government supervision can be assured.

Challenges to local land-use plans and zoning ordinances have been heard through state and federal courts on numerous occasions, and those laws have been strongly upheld. Slightly more than half of North Carolina's counties currently have some form of land-use planning or zoning, but several are even now taking a close look at what they have on the books to see if they are sufficient to block a hazardous waste facility.

Other Editors Say Doomed By Few?

(Washington Daily News)

We react with a touch of sadness to news that the Oldtime Fiddlers' Convention held for many years on Easter weekend at Union Grove may not take place this year because the event has been deemed a public nuisance.

Many residents of this small community are opposed to the continuation of the convention and the controversy has found its way into the court system where the arguments for both sides are being heard. The current litigation will likely postpone and possibly destroy the event that has become so much a part of our North Carolina heritage.

The Fiddlers' Convention has been a celebration of the type of music that for many Tar Heels tells the story of the good life, downhome style. The bluegrass notes of the fiddle, banjo and mandolin represent an almost lost art which is preserved by a dedicated group of practitioners, promoters of a style of music whose reward is sheer enjoyment.

It is not classical music. But given our heritage it is certainly classic.

Problems have arisen, and they cannot be ignored. But it would be a shame to sacrifice the Fiddlers' Convention to cure social ills. Maybe there are other answers.

We have been to the Oldtime Fiddlers' Convention, and we enjoyed the event immensely. We were in attendance the first year that the crowd total topped 100,000. But the problem is not necessarily one of quantity; rather it is one of quality. The overwhelming number of people in attendance were there to hear the music above all else. But a very visible minority abused the respect that should be shown a large public gathering. There were, as have been reported, young people openly flaunting the use of drugs and members of the Hell's Angels roving off sections of land and daring anyone to cross their "turf".

This constitutes the "public nuisance" referred to earlier. As happens in many similar situations, it is the disgusting few that can ruin an event for the behaved masses.

We fully understand that the Oldtime Fiddlers' Convention is a money-making enterprise for its promoters, but economics should not play the largest role in wanting to save the convention. What should matter is that we are attempting to preserve an art form born and nurtured in our region.

Strength For Today

INDUSTRY

An old saying lists cleanliness next to godliness among the virtues. But one virtue which might well dispute second place is hard work, or — as our ancestors would have called it — industry.

There are two things to be said about industry. The first is that industry is within the reach of all. We are not all born clever, or talented, or beautiful, or strong — but we can all be industrious. The other thing about industry is that it improves almost any situation. There is virtually no job confronting people which is not better and more quickly done by an industrious person than by a lazy person.

Like intelligence, industry is transferable to any area of activity. It is not the solution to all of life's problems, but it is one of the forces in life which helps us avoid many problems, and greatly aids in facing others.

GETTING A BIT EDGY!

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

The Results Of Excess

WASHINGTON — It was front-page news the other day in The New York Times: "Three Saccharin Studies Find No Cancer Link." The story provided one more reminder of the bureaucratic disease, which like so many ailments is a consequence of excess — too much caution, too much zeal.

The new findings on saccharin have a parallel in recent studies of dioxin. Other case histories abound in the licensing of new drugs by the Food and Drug Administration. In some fashion our copybook maxims have been perverted. There is nothing wrong with "Better be safe than sorry," or "Look before you leap." Indeed, the maxims offer sage advice. But there comes a point at which prudence turns to timidity, and here the maxims do us wrong.

You will recall the saccharin story. Three years ago the FDA reacted to the findings of a Canadian study by proposing to ban the use of saccharin altogether as an artificial sweetener. In fairness, the FDA had no choice; the law requires such drastic decrees whenever evidence is adduced that a substance might conceivably cause cancer.

But the saccharin ban of March 9, 1977, set off an uproar. The Canadian findings, oversimplified, were to this effect — that when laboratory rats were fed massive doses of saccharin, their offspring tended to develop cancer of the bladder. Scientists denounced the studies as flimsy, unrealistic and inconsistent with other findings. The FDA remained adamant — the FDA remains adamant to this day — and it took an act of Congress to suspend the FDA's decree.

Now come the three studies reported in the current issue of the New England Journal of Medicine. Says the Times: "While the new studies do not prove that the artificial sweetener is entirely harmless, they show no evidence that it has played a significant role in cancer of the urinary tract, including the bladder." One of the three studies concluded flatly that "no association" could be proved.

A virtually identical parallel can be found in the matter of the herbicide known as 2,4,5-T. The chemical spray has been used for more than 30 years, here and abroad, as a defoliant in brush control. In February of last year, reacting to reports of nine miscarriages among women in spray areas of the Pacific Northwest, the Environmental Protection Agency imposed a ban on the herbicide's use. It was supposed that residual dioxin had caused the aborted pregnancies.

A study was undertaken, known as Alsea Basin I, that found no evidence to support the hypothesis. The EPA, undeterred, commissioned a second study known as Alsea II. Now it turns out that in this second, comprehensive study, no detectable residues of dioxin could be found among nursing mothers in spray areas of California, Washington and Oregon.

Still more disappointing evidence — disappointing to the zealots of the EPA — continues to turn up. The Oklahoma State Health Department investigated reports of miscarriages among five women in the Broken Bow area, five miles from a forest where 2,4,5-T had been used. No connection could be found. Other studies in Arkansas have found no evidence of dioxin in fish taken from waters recycled from a sprayed rice field. Eighteen independent critiques of Alsea II agree that the EPA's statistics provide no convincing evidence that dioxin should be banned. Meanwhile, other evidence suggests that the EPA's decree will serve to double the cost of clearing brush, from about $60 to about $125 per acre.

Such examples could be endlessly multiplied within the bureaucracy. Congressman James Scheuer, in a major address in January, charged that the FDA's "callous insensitivity and bureaucratic arrogance" have denied Americans the use of many safe and valuable drugs that have long been licensed abroad. The Department of Agriculture continues its unwarranted war on nitrates as a preservative for bacon. The Consumer Product Safety Commission would protect us from hot tubs. The Occupational Safety and Health Administration persists in its pursuit of the risk-free factory.

What is needed is simply the common sense to weigh risks against benefits. Here in Washington, we haven't seen much of that common sense lately.

Why Hospital Costs Are High

Our guest columnist is Dr. Assad Meymandi, President-elect of the Cumberland County Medical Society.

I should like to share with you and explain in a realistic way why hospital costs are so high.

A recent report right out of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare which is now Department of Health and Human Services, because the Department of Education split, states that 88 percent of Americans have a regular source of health care. But this also means that 24 million do not. And it is these 24 million people, many of them children, who help swell hospital costs solely because they have no alternative sources of medical care.

This study points out very

Her Career Is In Safety

By JANE ENNIS

High Point Enterprise
HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Johnnie Hughes is an expert housekeeper. She is so efficient she has won five awards from the state Labor Commission for her work.

Mrs. Hughes is safety officer for Guardsman Chemicals Inc. and the only woman in the manufacturing section of the plant which employs 85 people.

Joining the company in 1971, she advanced from switchboard operator to her present position in four short years.

"I worked at almost every job in the office," said the attractive brunette. "Then, in 1975 when the safety officer was promoted, Ben Preslar, our plant manager, asked me if I was interested in filling that vacancy."

"The company had never had a female safety officer before; they didn't even have a woman working in manufacturing. I was scared because I didn't know anything about the job, but I wasn't too scared to accept the challenge."

Moving from clerical work to manufacturing was a drastic change for Mrs. Hughes. For weeks, Preslar accompanied her around the chemical plant, familiarizing her with features of the building which would influence her work and instructing her on accident prevention and housekeeping.

She spent weekends at home reading Occupational Safety and Health Administration manuals to learn the laws concerning industrial safety.

That study paid off, because, since she accepted the new position, the company has won five safety awards.

A routine work day for Mrs. Hughes includes inspection tours to ensure all safety guidelines are followed. She checks raw materials, tests the quality of manufactured goods, analyzes air quality and checks for hazards. She also serves as the plant nurse, relying on her training as a certified emergency medical technician.

Each week, she writes a report detailing problems which have occurred. When she sees someone violating a safety rule, she is quick to correct him.

"We have never had any problems, but we realize there could be an emergency at any time because we work with so many chemicals," Mrs. Hughes said. "We are very cautious. I try to be fair, but if someone is guilty of carelessness, he will hear about it right away. I'm strict because I know if there is an explosion, I go too."

"As another part of my job I try to make the community aware that our company is careful, too. We owe it to the neighbors to keep them informed so they aren't fearful of being blown up. That is one of the reasons we have safety kick-offs."

March is safety month for the company. For the event, Mrs. Hughes has arranged a special day of activities Tuesday to mark the beginning of the company's drive for their sixth annual safety award from the N.C. Labor commission.

Beginning at 7 a.m., area firemen, joined by Smokey the Bear, will distribute leaflets containing safety hints to visitors of the company. At noon a luncheon will be held for employees, their families and several distinguished guests, including state representatives Mary Seymour and Howard Coble.

Despite a full schedule at Guardsman, Mrs. Hughes still has time for her family and hobbies. Married to a Thomasville fireman, T.J. Hughes, she has five children and two grandchildren. For relaxation she writes religious plays which she produces in churches across the state. Her most famous play is "Sorry I Never Knew You."

Constantly striving to learn more, Mrs. Hughes has set high goals. "I would like to be plant manager some day and Mr. Preslar knows it. If I had any other view, he would be upset. He would think I was dragging my feet."

'Proxy Mother' For 2 Abducted Boys Talks

By PETE JACOBS
Associated Press Writer
MERCED, Calif. (AP) — Barbara Mathias was Steven Stayner's "mother" for two of the seven years the teen-ager lived with an alleged abductor. When she finally met Stayner's real parents, Mrs. Mathias assured them "he was a good boy."

"It's been hell for the last seven years," Kay Stayner told her visitor during a somber moment in the otherwise cheerful meeting. "I know," Mrs. Mathias said quietly. "That's why I wanted to come. I know how I would have felt if it had been my kid."

Mrs. Mathias, first known only as the "Barbara" neighbors recalled seeing at a trailer park with Steven, told The Associated Press on Wednesday she babysat for Stayner for two years.

For about nine months, she says, she lived with him and Kenneth Parnell, the man charged with the 1972 abduction of Stayner, now 14, and the Feb. 14 kidnapping of 5-year-old Timmy White.

Both cases ended March 1 in Ukiah when Stayner took White to police because he "didn't like what was happening."

Mrs. Mathias' 12-year-old son, Lloyd, who played with Stayner during those years, tossed a basketball to the teenager as Mrs. Mathias and Kay and Delbert Stayner talked. Steven had greeted Mrs. Mathias, a dark-haired divorcee, with a broad grin as she entered the house.

"I thought that because I babysat for him you would want to know he was a good boy all that time," Mrs. Mathias said. "He was always a nice boy and he called me 'Mother' like my own kids did."

Mrs. Mathias recalled Steven had told her that his mother had died when he was an infant, prompting Mrs. Stayner to stick her tongue out playfully at her son.

"We're just getting around to getting him used to being called 'Steve,'" Mrs. Stayner said. During seven years of drifting, young Stayner was called Dennis Parnell and was registered at several schools under that name.

"He said Parnell threatened to spank him if he told anyone that he was not Dennis," the elder Stayner said. "It's really remarkable how he remembers

Some local government experts are also investigating the possibility of imposing special use fees locally, and putting the charge so high as to be prohibitive to a potential waste disposal operation.

Meanwhile, state officials hope to come up with an incineration system which can be demonstrably safe and clean so local people can be persuaded to accept a disposal operation.

so much. For three or four years he did nothing but think about us."

As the 20-minute meeting drew to a close, the women exchanged addresses.

In the interview, Mrs. Mathias said Parnell treated Steven like a son, occasionally spanking him for misdeeds, and Stayner called him "Dad."

Mrs. Mathias, 44, also said Parnell had a birth certificate and other papers to show Stayner was his and that she didn't know Stayner was an abduction victim until she saw it on television.

"I couldn't believe it," she said. "I didn't think Dennis was kidnapped or anything."

There were 3.5 million live births, 4 percent more than for 1978, and 1.9 million deaths, about 2.2 per cent fewer than for the previous year.

For the fourth consecutive year, the number of marriages rose to the largest total ever recorded in this country. The 2.3 million marriages in 1979 were nearly double the 1.17 million divorces recorded.

Marriages declined between 1972 and 1976. But in 1979 the number of marriages was up about 3 percent from 1978, exceeding by about 26,000 the previous marriage peak of 2.29 million, recorded in 1946.

The NCHS, an agency in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, compiled the statistics using a U.S. population estimate of 219.9 million for 1979.

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C. — Thursday, March 20, 1980 — 5

For 1979, the birth rate was 15.8 live births per 1,000 population. That translates to a fertility rate of 68 live births per 1,000 women aged 15 to 44 years of age. The overall birth rate was up 3 percent from 1978 and the fertility rate was 2 percent higher.

The number of women of child-bearing age rose 2 percent between 1978 and 1979, and the Census Bureau projected an 8 percent increase in that female age group by 1985. Annual increases of less than 1 percent are anticipated in the number of women of child-bearing age between 1986 and 1990.

The rate of natural population increase — not counting immigration — was 7.1 persons per 1,000 in 1979 compared to 6.5 per 1,000 in 1978.

The marriage rate was 10.5 per 1,000 population, 2 percent higher than 1978. The divorce rate was 5.3 per 1,000 population, also up 2 percent from 1978.

The death rate of 8.7 per 1,000 compared to 8.8 per 1,000 for 1978. There were 45,000 deaths of children under 1 year old, making the infant mortality rate 13 deaths per 1,000 live births. That rate was 4.4 percent lower than the 13.6 infant deaths per 1,000 births in 1978.

Mouse Holds Officer At Bay

BALTIMORE (AP) — The call crackled over the dispatcher's radio at Baltimore police headquarters — officer needs help.

"It's small and brown and looks like a mouse. And it's under the front seat," radioed an officer in the Eastern District on Wednesday as the varmint scampered around his cruiser.

He asked for tools so he could take out the seat and confront the mouse head-on.

Over the laughter of officers in the background, the dispatcher replied that help was on its way.

FOCUS

Go Fly a Kite

Spring begins today, bringing with it images of melting snow, migrating birds, warmer temperatures, new leaves on trees, gusty winds — and kites. Many people fly kites as a hobby, but kites have also served many useful purposes throughout history. The Greeks and Chinese flew kites more than 2,000 years ago. In 1749, two Scottish scientists attached a thermometer to a kite to measure the temperature of clouds. Three years later, an American scientist used a kite to help prove that lightning is electricity. During the last 100 years, kites have served useful functions in weather forecasting, radio communications, aerial photography, bridge building and aircraft design.

DO YOU KNOW — What American scientist used a kite to help prove lightning is electricity?

Official 'Guilty' Of Tax Fraud

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Four-term Attorney General William J. Scott, an environmental crusader and one of the biggest vote-getters in Illinois, was convicted of income tax fraud by a jury that deliberated more than 46 hours to reach a verdict. Scott was convicted in federal court Wednesday of underreporting his income for 1972. He was acquitted of charges of underreporting his income for 1973-1975.

The verdict came one day after Scott's upset defeat by Lt. Gov. Dave O'Neal in the race for a Republican U.S. Senate nomination. The 53-year-old Scott told reporters he would appeal.

"I haven't broken any law, done anything wrong," he said. Gov. James R. Thompson issued a statement expressing his regret. "He was, and he is, my friend," Thompson said.

Conviction carries a maximum penalty of three years in prison and a $5,000 fine. Under the state constitution, Scott must step down from office when judgment is entered. He could be reinstated if he wins on appeal.

Judgment usually is entered at the time of sentencing. U.S. District Judge John Powers Crowley set June 6 for either sentencing or a ruling on post-trial motions by the defense.

Scott sat with his arm around his wife as the verdict was read after six days of deliberation and a 10-week trial.

Ellen Scott burst into tears, then confronted prosecutor Thomas P. Sullivan. "I hope you are satisfied, you hypocrite," she told him before Scott pulled her away, saying, "Don't give him the satisfaction."

Scott had said in the past that his prosecution was politically motivated. "That is absolutely and utterly false," Sullivan insisted after the verdict.

Scott, who won re-election in 1978 by a margin of 940,000 votes, built a reputation as a crusader against giant polluters, launching lawsuits against Milwaukee and U.S. Steel to clean up Lake Michigan.

He also coordinated a nationwide suit against General Motors when Chevrolet engines showed up in Oldsmobiles. The suit resulted in a $34 million settlement.

He was indicted on charges of filing false income tax returns for 1972 through 1975. The year 1972 was the only one for which the prosecution produced a witness who testified he had given Scott campaign money that never turned up in campaign accounts.

Edward J. Barrett, one of 149 witnesses, testified he and another lawyer gave Scott a total of $5,000 in cash in mid-1972.

Defense attorney Vincent Bugliosi, who gained fame in the prosecution of Charles Manson, decried the verdict.

"I would think they should come back guilty or not guilty on all counts," he said. "To reach a compromise verdict like this I don't think is compatible with the traditional notions of fairness and justice."

Acid Rain To Require Steps

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's chief anti-pollution official says if destructive acid rains are to be stopped, tougher air pollution standards are needed for the nation's older coal-burning power plants.

Older plants, not subject to the same standards as new power plants, are spewing tons of nitrogen and sulfur oxides into the air, Environmental Protection Agency administrator Douglas C. Costle said Wednesday.

Those pollutants combine chemically with moisture to form nitric and sulfuric acids that fall in rain and snow.

The worst contributors, Costle told a Senate subcommittee on environmental pollution, are the older coal-burning electric generating plants, which produce two-thirds — some 19.5 million tons — of the sulfur oxides pumped into the atmosphere each year.

"The new plants are clean," Costle said. "Our problem today is essentially caused by the old plants."

Costle said new equipment being developed for coal-burning plants may solve the problem, but he predicted utilities will have to be forced to install the equipment because of its expense.

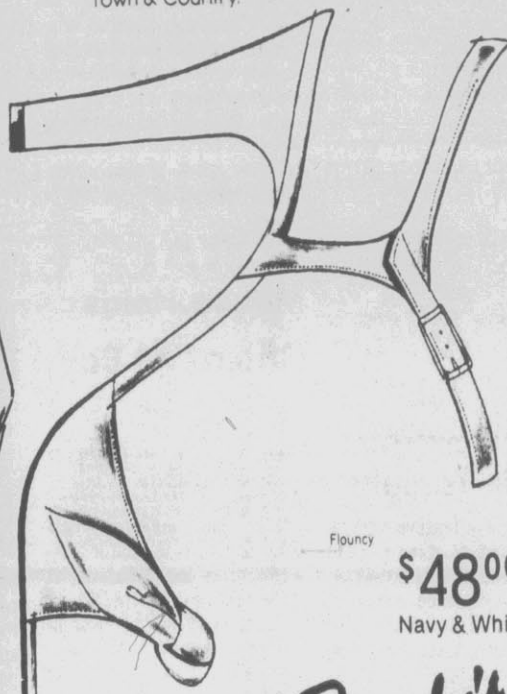

The EPA also is studying the possibility of telling utilities to wash coal before burning it, a technique that could cut emissions by about 10 percent, and is even considering ordering early retirement for some of the oldest, dirtiest plants.

Beverly Hills Mansion Priced At $10 Million

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif.

(AP) — For Sale: one gracious white-walled mansion, 22 rooms with guest house, 100-foot pool and all the silent screen era memories money can buy.

Anna Pavlova danced there. Maurice Chevalier sang there. Charlie Chaplin, Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Rudolph Valentino and Norma Shearer partied there.

And Mary Pickford, the screen's first major star known as "America's Sweetheart," lived there for 59 years with her second and third husbands — Douglas Fairbanks Sr. and Charles "Buddy" Rogers.

The house is Pickfair, and it went on the market this week for $10 million.

"How do you put a price on history?" said Elliott Feinman, executive vice president of the Harleigh Sandler Co., which is handling the sale. "This is really a legend."

But it's a lot of money even in Beverly Hills, where homes more commonly range from $1 million to $5 million.

Before Miss Pickford's death last May at age 86, she and Rogers had tried to offer Pickfair to the city, local universities and charitable organizations. There were no takers — its yearly upkeep was estimated at $300,000 to $400,000 — and the proceeds from its sale will go to charities under the terms of Miss Pickford's will.

Prospective buyers and reporters on Wednesday got a last glimpse of one of Hollywood's original palatial homes — just as it was during Miss Pickford's lifetime.

Miss Pickford and Fairbanks were among the founders of United Artists.

The house commands a magnificent hillside view of the Pacific Ocean. Inside are antiques, including a set of firearms and daggers given to her by silent film heartthrob Rudolph Valentino that will go to the Smithsonian Institution.

Among its special features is an adobe-walled Western bar room complete with a bar from a Gold Rush-era saloon and a concealed projection booth.

Miss Pickford and Fairbanks moved into the one-time hunting lodge after they were married in 1920. In those days, the movie world's "White House" was surrounded by 15 acres of lawns, rose gardens and pools with woodland paths wending down to the beach about eight miles away.

In the last years of her life, Miss Pickford secluded herself in her bedroom, saying she didn't want to disappoint the AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Union leaders are calling it a "bombshell," but Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. says the rising costs and the changing needs of its customers dictated the closing of six plants and the elimination of 8,500 jobs.

New Lighted Facilities

FARMVILLE — Town leaders and Recreation and Parks personnel will dedicate and open Farmville's two new lighted tennis courts and a new softball field in a ceremony to be held Friday at 4 p. m. at the Municipal Athletic Park.

Participating in the ceremony will be Mayor Linwood Mercer, Recreation Advisory Committee Chairman Danny Griffiths, and Recreation and Parks Director Fred Sauls. Weather permitting, some tennis matches on the new courts will follow. The softball field, completed late last spring, is already in use.

The park improvements began with planning in 1977. The Town was awarded a Bureau of Outdoor Recreation grant from the Land and Water Conservation Fund in the fall of 1978. The grant was for $30,000 in matching funds to construct the lighted ballfield and tennis courts and for other related improvements at the park.

The public is invited to attend the dedication and begin using the courts, which will be lighted till midnight during the warm months.

public that remembered her as a light-haired beauty of silent films.

Rogers, married to Miss Pickford for 44 years, will take some furnishings with him when he moves into a new $700,000 home he is building on part of the five-acre estate, and Pickfair's new owner will have 2.7 acres of the walled-off estate.

tended to meet changing market conditions by eliminating unneeded capacity that has been used mainly for producing bias-ply tires," said Firestone Chairman Richard A. Riley.

Bias-ply tires have lost ground to radial tires in recent years. Radial tires, while giving motorists a somewhat rougher ride, are said to offer better gas mileage and improved handling.

Firestone, which reported a $13.8 million first-quarter loss this year, said Wednesday closing the plants will idle 7,000 employees by the end of its fiscal year in October. Another 1,500 workers are on indefinite layoff at five of the six plants. Scheduled for shutdown are tire plants in Los Angeles and Salinas, Calif.; Dayton and Barberton, Ohio, and Pottstown, Pa. A synthetic latex plant in Akron also will be closed.

In California, there are 990 employees at the bias-ply truck tire plant in Los Angeles, with 465 on layoff, and 1,310 at a bias-ply and radial tire plant at Salinas, with 350 on layoff.

The plant at Pottstown, Pa., employs 1,950 people and makes truck and industrial tires. That plant has 480 on layoff.

The Dayton Tire & Rubber Co. division, a bias-ply passenger and truck tire plant, employs 1,740 workers, with 140 on layoff.

The Barberton plant, formerly the Seiberling Tire & Rubber Co., was bought by Firestone in 1965 and was merged into its Dayton Division 13 months ago. It has 965 employees, with 140 on layoff.

The Akron synthetic latex plant is part of the Firestone Synthetic Rubber & Latex Co. It employs 310 workers.

Joe Albanese, president of United Rubber Workers Local 18 in Barberton, an Akron suburb, said the closing announcement was "a terrific bombshell."

"It is a big blow to the people of Barberton. It'll hurt everyone, community and all," he said.

Albanese blamed the cutbacks on "poor management at Firestone," which bought the Barberton plant in 1965.

U.S. Rep. John Seiberling, D-Ohio, whose family founded the Barberton rubber plant, said he was "shocked and depressed" over the closings.

"Something needs to be done to help these people," Seiberling said.

Ribbon-Cutting For New Store

Ribbon cutting ceremonies marked the grand opening this morning of The Namedropper of Greenville Inc. at Greenville Square shopping center.

A spokesman for the firm said that The Namedropper represents a new concept in retail merchandising, offering selected first quality, in-season, nationally advertised labels, at discounted prices.

The spokesman added that the business will offer moderate and better sportswear and dresses, designer jeans and tops, all with labels intact.

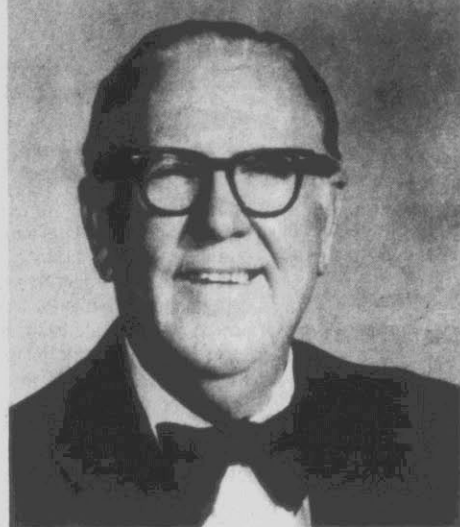

It was pointed out that the new firm will be open at night for the convenience of the working woman who must wear quality clothes.

In utilizing the new retail concept, the spokesman said that many services available in specialty stores have been eliminated. There will be limited personal service and charge accounts, alterations, wrapping and related services have been eliminated. The store will offer short-term lay-a-way, bank cards acceptance, and wardrobe consultants, however.

Hours of operation for The Namedropper will be from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

Della Dayson serves as president and general manager of the firm, while Kim Anders is vice president and merchandise manager.

Ass'n Award Won By Lenoir Dairies

Lenoir County dairies were award winners at the March 13 Eastern Carolina Dairy Herd Improvement Association's Annual Awards Banquet in Chocowinity.

The Baptist Children's Home Dairy of Kinston received awards for high herd in milk production, high herd in butterfat production and high cow in milk production.

The high cow in butterfat production award was presented to William B. Bynum of Maysville, and the Wiggins Dairy of La Grange received the Most Improved Herd Award.

Richard Poteet, dairy supervisor for Baptist Children's Home, was elected president of the Eastern Carolina Dairy Herd Improvement Association for 1980. John DeJong of Pinetown will serve as vice president and Bill Bynum of Maysville as secretary-treasurer. Dennis Bocrema of Pantego, Alex Casey of Goldsboro and Steve McLawhorn of Winterville were elected to the Board of Directors and Pitt County Agricultural Extension agent Mike Regans will serve as ex-officio director.

The Dairy Herd Improvement Association is a demonstration program sponsored at local and state levels by the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service in cooperation with the USDA.

'Red Sweat' Found To Be Paint Specks

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines says its "red sweat" mystery has been solved — and it was no sweat at all.

The puzzling specks that had some flight attendants worried they were sweating blood were flakes of red ink from life preservers.

The case was cracked after an intense airborne detective operation in which Eastern doctors, company supervisors and government experts rode jets up and down the Atlantic Coast to see what was wrong.

The elusive malady seemed to strike only Eastern flight attendants and only on flights from New York to Miami and Fort Lauderdale.

Victims told doctors they broke out in a rash of small, fluid-like red dots. Some said they itched or burned. But the "red sweat" usually vanished before the victim could see a physician.

"A red type of ink that is used on our demonstration life vest matches material which has been removed from the skin of flight attendants who were suffering the so-called 'red sweat' phenomenon," Dr. David P. Millett, Eastern's flight medicine director, said Wednesday.

The mystery was solved last week when Eastern supervisors watched attendants demonstrate the yellow rubber life preservers carried on some flights. Stenciled on the jackets in bright red letters were the words: "Demo Only."

As attendants put the jackets on and removed them, tiny red flakes fell onto their skin, said Edwina Gilbert, Eastern vice president for in-flight services. She tried it herself and caught a mild case of red sweat: a bright crimson flake just below one eye.

Millett said the dye is not toxic, but some people might have a reaction to it. What made it look like red sweat?

"What you're seeing is a thin bead of sweat with a bead of red background," said Andrew R. Jones, manager of Eastern's engineering laboratories. "It gives the appearance of being red."

Millett said "several hundred" suspect preservers have been ordered removed from Eastern planes. He said the preservers carried for passenger use would not be affected. Company officials said the mystery malady had been reported in about 170 cases involving 95 attendants aboard a variety of aircraft, including the Airbus A300, L-1011 and Boeing 727, between New York and Florida. It was not reported on the DC-9 — which carries a different sort of vest.

The "red sweat" dated back several years, but reports intensified this year and Eastern stepped up its investigation. The new findings probably would explain 95 percent to 97 percent of the "red sweat" cases, Millett said. He said the company was checking into another 3 percent that didn't seem to fit.

The company said its findings were confirmed by the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta and the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health of Cincinnati.

Dr. Charles Herron of the CDC said in a preliminary report that the spots on attendants "most probably" came from the vests.

According to Rothrock, ADAP (Adult Developmental Activity Program) and Respite Care are components of the Mental Retardation services area of the Pitt County Mental Health Center.

Located at 1600 E. Greenville Boulevard, the ADAP provides training experiences for mentally retarded adults, while Respite Care offers 24-hour services for both children and adults for up to 30 days.

During March, Mental Retardation Month, "Mental Health Matters" is featuring mental health professionals in the MR services of PCMHC in order to better inform the community about the scope of services available for mentally retarded citizens of all ages in Pitt County, Area Director Dr. Stephen Creech said.

Wednesday Fire Damages Home

WINTERVILLE — Winterville firemen responded to a fire at the home of Barbara Cox, of 440 Grimes St., Wednesday.

According to firemen on the scene, the call was received at 3:06 p.m. and firemen arriving found heavy smoke coming from the small block home.

The fire caused heavy damage to the kitchen and a bedroom. Estimated damage was placed by fire officials at approximately $34,000.

Cause of the fire was believed by firemen to have been the stove left on.

No one was at home at the time of the blaze. There were no injuries reported.

Female Troopers Are 'Shaping Up Nicely'

By R. BRIERLEY THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer
SEA GIRT, N.J. (AP) — The nation's first all-female trooper cadet class is shaping up nicely, with no pun — or offense — intended, says New Jersey state police Superintendent Clinton Pagano.

The remaining 67 women of the original 104 recruits, now beginning the second quarter of their 20-week course, are "the committed ones," say academy staff members, who include the only two women among 1,931 state troopers. Graduation is June 27.

Pagano says the dropout rate is normal for recruit classes. "The people go home over the weekend and reassess things. We get mothers who decide they want to be with their children, we get a variety of reasons. It's too early to say if it's the physical training pressure or the discipline pressure," said Pagano, who would not allow interviews with the recruits. "One said she treated her dog better than we treated her. She wasn't here long enough for a truthful appraisal."

The class began Feb. 13, the result of a federal consent order to add more women to the force.

"It's a one-time thing, an all-female class," said Pagano, who now must concentrate on recruiting minorities because of another court order.

Only two of the remaining female recruits are black. The force now includes only 84 non-white males and one black female.

The "committed" recruits practice in barracks at night with dummy pistols, reread course material and train hard on heavy punching bags to build strength.

They eat quickly because the short time immediately following meals is their own, the only break in a day that begins with exercises at dawn and runs in unbroken military precision through dinner.

Demerits for infractions mean extra duty, so recruits learn to keep their collars neat and not to cut a path across soggy lawns.

Lt. Joseph Kobus said some adaptations had to be made in the training program for women.

"We're finding some differences," Kobus said. "Women need some additional exercises to strengthen their left wrist. They have to qualify firing a pistol with both hands... That's in case you get shot."

Pagano and his staff modified pushup and chinup requirements to compensate for women's inferior upper body strength. "Now we're finding they might have superior lower body strength," he said.

"Our main concern is to get fully qualified state troopers," Pagano added.

The recruits are taught that the chest and head are the "maximum kill area" for gunfire and instructed in the basics of constitutional law, communications, sociology and weaponless self defense.

"I have to impress on them somehow they could get killed," Trooper Walter Jensen said during a break on the pistol range. "Fourteen seconds to get off six shots. The average gunfight is 2.8 seconds at a distance of about six feet. I'm not sure they know what we're into — yet."

In a law class, Trooper Richard Tomasik patiently explained a fine point to recruits: "No, no, you don't get a jury of your friends, you get a jury of your peers. Friends would be a little too beneficial."

Outside, young women lined up in formation. "Dress right, dress! Right face! Forward, march!" The recruits moved out, counting cadence as a drill instructor bellowed orders forever into their memory.

Then the DI started after them, skipping once to get in step as they headed for a mountainous high-carbohydrate lunch.

Recruits who complete the academy course begin work as road patrol troopers earning about $15,000 yearly. They will face resentment from some male state troopers.

"It's dangerous out there at 3 a.m. on the highway and you get some guy looking for trouble. ... It's no place for a broad," Sgt. Steve Cernak said when the class was formed on Feb. 13.

"The weakest guy is going to be better than the best woman," said Cernak.

The 67 remaining recruits were among the 1,631 women who took the state police written examination last fall.

The exam, along with medical and physical ability tests, pared the prospective class to 255. Background investigations and interviews further cut the class to 116.

Twelve decided not to report for the beginning of training.

Popular Singer Of 1930's Radio Dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Jessica Dragonette, one of radio's most popular singers during the 1930s, has died at New York Hospital.

Miss Dragonette, who died Tuesday, apparently suffered a heart attack while hospitalized for asthma.

Because a fire destroyed her birth certificate in an orphanage where the soprano spent time as a child, her exact age was not known. Her age has been recorded as 65 but she was believed to be about 70.

Born in Calcutta, India, where her father worked as a construction engineer, she was later orphaned in Philadelphia. She lived and studied at the Georgian Court Convent and College in Lakewood, N.J.

In 1924 she won a job in the choir of a Broadway show called "The Miracle," staged by impresario Max Reinhardt who later gave her solo parts in "The Student Prince" and "The Grand St. Folies."

She auditioned and was hired by the NBC radio network only months after it was formed and went on to a radio career that spanned 22 years. Her career included regular appearances on "The Philco Hour," "The Ford Summer Hour," and the "Cities Service Concert Hour," which had one of radio's largest audiences from 1930 to 1937.

During World War II she visited servicemen at hospitals and camps and sold war bonds. Her husband, Nicholas Meredith Turner, a New York accountant, and a sister survive.

Funeral services were scheduled for today at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

Police List 2 Accidents

An estimated $1,350 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 3:45 p.m. collision at the intersection of Fifth Street and Memorial Drive, involving cars driven by Bennie Franklin Foreman of 906 Ward St., and Clifton Earl Clark of Robersonville.

Damage was estimated at $500 to the Foreman car and $200 to the Clark auto.

A 6:20 p.m. mishap on Tenth Street, 300 feet East of the Greenville Boulevard intersection, involved cars driven by Susan Rebecca Murray of Route 3, Greenville, and David Elliott Matthews of 1402 Evergreen Dr., investigators reported.

Damage from the collision was set at $300 to the Murray car and $350 to the Matthews vehicle.

Fellowship Union Friday

WINTERVILLE — A Fellowship Union will be held at Jordan Chapel Holiness Church on Highway 1126 near here beginning Friday at 7 p.m.

Saturday night the speaker is Minister Williams; Sunday morning, Bishop C. F. Edwards; and Sunday evening, Bishop H. L. Darden. The public is invited.

Free Events For Children

Parents of young children are reminded that several events are being offered free Friday evening and Saturday. The Pitt-Greenville Arts Council Children's Art Festival has a jazz demonstration and workshop at 7 p.m. at the Recreation Center on Cedar Lane, and a dance theater and cloggers demonstration at Elm Street Gym, also at 7 p.m.

The Saturday, March 22 schedule includes two plays presented by The Theater for Young People-Repertory Company, one at 10 a.m. at Rose High, the second at 2 p.m. at South Greenville School.

In addition, a Clowning Around program will be held at 10 a.m. at Elm Street Gym; and at 3 p.m. kite making will be featured on the Town Commons to be followed by a kite flying competition.

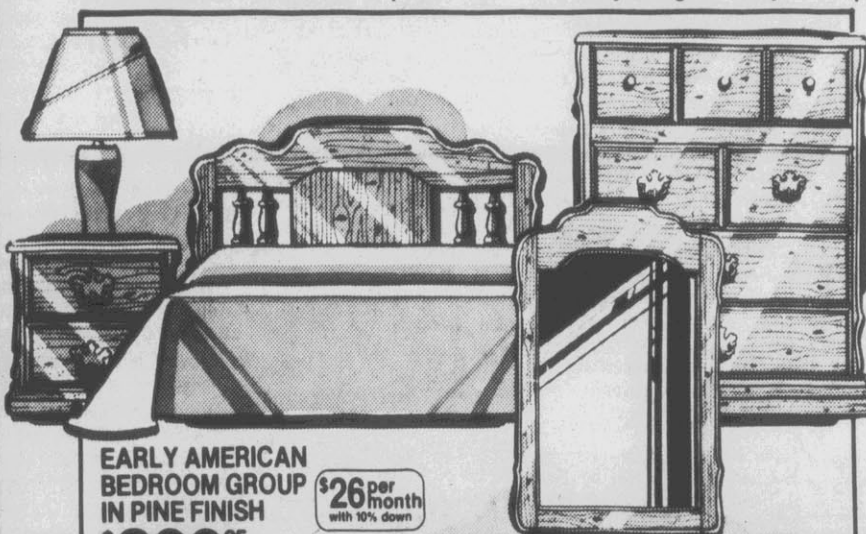

These events are designed primarily for pre-school and elementary school age children.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was steady today, and unsettled for next week's trading. Supply adequate. Demand good. Weights desirable. The North Carolina dock weighted average price this week is 39.25 cents per pound for small purchases of plant-grade broilers picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter today was 1,343,000.

RALEIGH (AP)(NCDA) — New York broiler-fryers: truck lot buying interest is fairly good for Thursday's arrivals with some loads sold at a 41-to 42-cent plant grade basis. However, interest has lessened for weekend delivery with most buyers cautious and reluctant to book product for the weekend at a 41-cent level. Processors or offerings are light for Thursday but have increased and are at least adequate for deliveries later this week. Undertone unsettled.

RALEIGH (AP)(NCDA) — North Carolina eggs: market unchanged. Weighted average price for small sales of consumer Grade A eggs in cartons delivered to retail stores: 67.71 cents per dozen for large white; medium 60.42; small 46.91.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 1.37 to 799.57 in the first half hour.

But gainers took a 5-4 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The price of gold continued its recent rally today, climbing to $561 an ounce at the morning fixing in London, $34 above Wednesday's morning fixing.

This week's upturn in gold and some other commodity prices has brought some new buying into natural-resource stocks.

Virginia Captures NIT Championship

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The Virginia Cavaliers believe their victory in the National Invitation Tournament qualifies them as one of the best college basketball teams in the country — despite their 10 losses and fifth-place finish in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

But with three of the NCAA championship tournament's final four were also-runs in their own conferences, who's to say Coach Terry Holland and his team are wrong?

"I believe we're as good as any team in the country when we play well," said Holland after Virginia defeated Minnesota 58-55 in the championship game of the NIT Wednesday night.

"We didn't get enough time to jell together during the season, but we played well in the tournament," said Jeff Lamp, whose four free throws in the last 19 seconds secured the victory. "We had our ups and downs all season and the adversity pulled us together."

Lamp, who scored 30 points in Monday night's semifinal victory over Nevada-Las Vegas but was held to nine in the championship, was referring to Virginia's season-long struggle to adjust to highly recruited freshman center Ralph Sampson.

The 7-foot-4 Sampson, amazingly mobile and agile for his size, was named the NIT's Most Valuable Player after scoring 15 points and 15 rebounds Wednesday night following his 26 points and 15 rebounds Monday.

"You can't really call him a freshman anymore," said Holland. "This was his 34th game (Virginia finished 24-10) and that's a lot of basketball. He has developed into an exceptional player."

Virginia shot only 38.2 percent for the game to Minnesota's 41.7 percent, leading Lamp to say, "We won the game on defense. Intensity throughout the game and the tournament was the reason we won."

"We had lots of desire and hustle defensively, but didn't have any offensive movement," said Minnesota Coach Jim Dutcher. "We just didn't move to the basket strong enough. Almost all of our turnovers were on intercepted passes."

The game was almost a free-throw shooting contest at the end. Sampson hit two with 1:31 remaining to give Virginia a 54-53 lead before Lee Raker intercepted a pass with 1:08 left.

Then Sampson pulled down a key rebound of a missed Virginia free throw, forcing Minnesota to foul again. But this time it was Lamp, who hit 84 percent of his free throws and once hit 48 foul shots in a row this year, who went to the line.

He hit both with 19 seconds left for a 56-53 lead, then Kevin McHale made it 56-55 with two free throws for the Gophers before Lamp iced it with two more free throws with two seconds remaining.

Dominant Player

Virginia's Ralph Sampson (50) towers over other players as he grabs a first half rebound in the NIT final game at New York's Madison Square Garden Wednesday night. Sampson was the tournament's Most Valuable Player with 15 points and 15 rebounds in the final game. He towers over Minnesota's Gary Holmes (42), Virginia's Lee Raker (25), and Minnesota's Randy Breuer. Virginia won, 58-55. (AP Laserphoto)

East Carolina Pounds Indians On Way To 16-2 Baseball Win

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — East Carolina spotted William & Mary an early 1-0 lead then stormed back to romp to a 16-2 victory over the Indians yesterday.

The victory marked the seventh success for the Pirates in nine starts, while the Indians were going down to their sixth loss in eight games.

East Carolina blasted four Indian pitchers for 19 hits, including a double and a triple, both by Raymie Styons, who led the hitting with three.

Kelly Robinette, Mike Sage, Macon Moyer, John Hallow, Todd Hendley and Mike Sorrell each added two hits to the Pirate total during the afternoon.

Mike Williams, a former Rose High School hurler, got his first collegiate victory yesterday, going the first five innings and giving up both of the Indian runs, one of them unearned. Rick Ramey came on in the sixth and earned a save.

The Indians scratched up the first run as Williams suffered through some early control problems. He walked Jay Gaucher then saw Don Howren single. Curt Angstadt also walked loading the bases. A two-out walk to Pete Beveridge allowed Gaucher to score for the 1-0 lead.

It didn't last long. The Pirates came back with two in the top of the second. Styons led off with a walk and Rick Derechailo was hit by a pitch. Moyer singled to score Styons and Hallow walked. Hendley hit into a double play, with Derechailo scoring on the play.

In the third, the Pirates put the game away, scoring eight times to take a 10-1 lead.

Butch Davis led off with a single and was safe at second on an error on Robinette's grounder back to the mound. Billy Best singled, driving in Davis. Derechailo also got a hit, driving in Robinette. Moyer walked, loading the bases and Hallow reached on an error.

scoring Best. Hendley singled to score Derechailo, and Sorrell's hit brought in both Hallow and Moyer. Davis hit a sacrifice fly to score Hendley and Sorrell scored on a single by Robinette.

In the fourth, the Pirates added two more. Styons tripled and came home on a hit by Moyer. Hallow singled and Sorrell's second hit of the game plated Moyer.

The other four runs came in the seventh. Robert Wells walked and Robinette singled. With one down, Styons doubled in Wells, and Sage singled in two more runs. After advancing on a wild pitch, Sage scored on a hit by Hallow.

The other Indian run came in the fifth. David Blows reached on an error and moved up on a wild pitch. He scored when Bob Manderfield reached on another Pirate misplay.

The Pirates travel to Virginia on Friday, then play in Richmond on Saturday before returning home to face Ohio University on Sunday.

Women Thinclads See Quality, Not Quantity

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The theme for the 1980 spring track season for the East Carolina University women will be "quality not quantity," according to coach Laurie Arrants.

"We don't have a lot of numbers, but we do have some quality people. I don't think that we will be able to make a run at the state championship because of this. We don't have the numbers that people like North Carolina have, but we can win several individual championships."

Arrants is setting her sights on winning four and maybe five individual titles. These include the 800-meter run, the mile, the long jump, the quarter-mile relay and possibly the two-mile relay.

"We are fortunate in that we have Linda Mason back with us again this year. She graduated last year, but because she was an advanced student (finishing ahead of time), she is eligible although in graduate school."

Mason runs the 3,000 and 5,000-meter events, and is a top prospect to win a state title here.

Cookie McPhatter returns for her senior campaign and Arrants feels that she is a much improved runner. "She missed the fall conditioning because of practice teaching and that may hurt her some, but she is a much more mature athlete now and that will make up for it." McPhatter's top events are the 800-meter run and joining in the mile relay. "She can also long jump and high jump if we feel we need points in the state meet," Arrants pointed out.

A new "blue-chipper," according to Arrants, is freshman Eve Brennan, whose specialty is the mile, with the 800 as a secondary event. "She's been looking tremendously strong. Having McPhatter and Mason to work with has helped her come along much faster. We look for her to break five minutes in the mile and 4:50 in the 1500 meters. With a little time, she will be an outstanding athlete."

Irdie Williams, another freshman, shows a great deal of potential in the sprints and the 220. "She will probably work into a good quarter-mile before she's through," Arrants said.

Lydia Rountree, who sat out last year, returns to anchor the quarter-mile relay, while Catherine Suggs and Dawn Henderson add to the relay and the sprint depth. "These last two have run together for three years now and make a really good relay combination. We should be real strong in the relays with these three and Irdie as the fourth member."

For the rest of the field, Arrants is waiting for people to make a move to the front. There are others there, but so far none have jumped into the spotlight.

Vikings Top CBA

PIKEVILLE — D.H. Conley rolled to a 5-1 baseball victory over Charles B. Aycock High School yesterday.

The Vikings got four in the first inning to take the lead for good.

Arnell Credle walked to open the first and so did Micah Dixon. Curtis Spencer and Roy Lassiter both walked, forcing in Credle. Carl Arnold was hit by a pitch, scoring Dixon, and Emory Vines walked to score Spencer. Doug McRoy scored on an error scoring Lassiter.

In the second, Conley added another run. Dixon Page singled and Spencer reached on an error. Lassiter singled to score Page.

The lone Aycock run came in the sixth. Grantham walked and Thomas singled. Walks to Bunn and Turner plated Grantham.

Turner led the Aycock hitting with two, while no one had more than one for Conley.

The Vikings now 1-1, play at North Pitt Friday.

Rampants Romp Past Williamston, 15-2

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Rose High School jumped on Williamston in the first three innings for 13 runs and rolled up a 15-1 decision before the contest finally ended.

Rose pounded out 13 hits in the game, including two homers and four doubles on the way to the victory.
Emmett Walsh led the Rose hitting with three, while Roger Williams and Kenny Barnes each had two. Both Williams and Barnes cracked home runs, with Barnes adding a double.

Williams got the win, going the first four innings, while Galloway stepped in for the final three frames, giving up the lone Williamston run in the top of the seventh.

The Tigers had several scoring opportunities earlier in the game, leaving men stranded at second or third in three other innings. They also had a man cut down at the plate trying to score.

In the seventh, however, Kent Moore drew a one-out walk and Durwood Taylor came on as a pinch runner. Keith Clark singled and Kenneth Casper walked to load them up. Phil Peaks hit into a fielder's choice, scoring Taylor.

Rose, however, had pushed over two in the first to take the lead for good. Mark Shank led off, reaching on an error. Mark Douglas walked and Shank advanced on an outfield fly. A balk scored him and moved Douglas to second. He scored from there on a single by Walsh.

In the second, Rose broke it open with six runs. Shank opened with a single and stole second. He scored when Will Barrett reached on an error. Williams walked and Paul McMillan ran for him. Walsh singled in Barrett and Chris Ross ran for him, stealing second. Mike Campbell doubled in both runners, and scored when Mitch Brann doubled. Brann scored when Jeff Wilson followed with a third straight double.

In the third, five more runs scored for the Rampants. Shank walked and Douglas did too. Barrett singled in Shank and Williams doubled to score both Douglas and Barrett. Walsh singled in another run, and after Campbell and Wilson walked, a sacrifice fly by Skip Hill plated the 13th Rose run.

Single runs scored in the fourth and fifth, both on homers. Williams hit one out in dead center in the fourth, while Barnes did the same to left in the fifth.

Softball Roundup

Washington 25,
Rose 11

Washington High School's girls' softball team rolled to a 25-11 victory over the Rose High School Rampettes yesterday.

It was the second straight loss in as many games for Rose. Washington jumped out to a 10-0 lead in the first inning and never trailed. They added five in the second and two in the third. Seven more scored in the fifth, including a grand slam homer by Carol Jansen. The other Pam Pack run came in the seventh.

Rose got three in the third and four each in the sixth and seventh. Shelley Evans provided three via a home run.

Jane McCall, who hurled the win, led the Washington hitting with three, including a double, while Cindy Alligood had two. No one had more than one for Rose.

The Rampettes travel to Washington for a return game on Friday.

Greene C. 11,
Farmville C. 2

FARMVILLE — Greene Central High School scored nine runs in the final two innings to roll up an 11-2 softball victory over Farmville Central yesterday.

Farmville had scored first, getting a pair of runs in the first inning. Greene Central came back, however, with two of its own in the second to knot it at 2-2.

It remained that way until the sixth, when the Lady Rams exploded for four runs and a 6-2 lead. They added five more in the seventh to put it away.

Melody Ham and Letha Taylor each had two hits to lead Greene Central, while Meadows picked up the victory on the mound.

Conley 2,

C.B. Aycock 1

PIKEVILLE — D. H. Conley's softball team pushed over a run in the eighth inning to gain a 2-1 victory over Charles B. Aycock yesterday.

Aycock had scored a single run in the third inning, and the Valkyries fought back to tie it up in the top of the seventh.

Then, in the eighth, Tammy Streeter reached on an error and moved up when Angie Roberson singled. A pair of errors on the play allowed Streeter to round the bases and score the winning run.

Roberson led the Conley hitting with two, while no one had more than one for Aycock. Lexanne Keeter hurled the victory.

Conley, now 2-0, plays host to North Pitt on Friday.

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville got the 1980 softball season underway yesterday with a 3-0 victory over Bath High School.

All three Lady Bullet runs came in the first inning.

Tammy Williams led the Jamesville hitting with two, including a first inning triple that drove in the first two runs. She scored the third on a hit by Wendy Perry.

Mika Ellis was the winning pitcher.

The Rams went on to add two in the fourth, one in the sixth and four in the seventh.

Bowen, Murray, Jabo Fulghum and Donald Shaw each had two hits to lead the Rams.

Farmville is now 0-2 overall and Greene Central is 2-2. The Jaguars travel to Ayden-Grifton on Friday, while Greene Central goes to North Lenoir.

FARMVILLE — Greene Central got its 1980 defense of its Eastern Carolina Conference baseball title of last year underway yesterday with a 10-0 romp past Farmville Central.

Kevin Korpi went the distance in allowing only four hits in the shutout. Allen Corbett managed two of those four.

The Rams got all they needed in the first, scoring once. Robin Bowen and Al Murray both singled. Jeff Scott then reached on an error, scoring Bowen.

In the third, the Rams added two more. Murray reached second on two errors and scored when Scott reached on another miscue. Scott advanced on an infield out, and scored when Chip Hardy singled.

Which Guard Is Best? Game Will Tell

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Louisville Coach Denny Crum calls Darrell Griffith, the Cardinals' star, "a true All-American, the best all-around guard in the nation."

But Iowa Coach Lute Olson, whose unranked Hawkeyes will go up against the No. 2-rated Cardinals Saturday in the semifinals of the NCAA Basketball Championships, feels just as strongly about his team's back-court ace, Ronnie Lester.

"When he's 100 percent, Ronnie is the best guard in America," Olson declared.

But that's the catch — "when he's healthy."

How well the Hawkeyes do may hinge on just how healthy Lester is. The senior and leading scorer in Iowa history, missed 15 games this season because of a knee injury, and in his absence Iowa was a very ordinary 8-7 team. With Lester in the lineup, the Hawkeyes are 15-1.

Lester showed the after-effects of his injury last weekend, as Iowa beat Syracuse and Georgetown to win the East Regional. At times he limped while on the court, and never did he display the blazing speed that had the pro scouts raving about him a year ago.

"I'm still not 100 percent," concedes the 6-foot-2 Lester. Olson says it's more like 75 percent.

But even that is remarkable when you consider that Lester underwent knee surgery in mid-season.

"I thought when Ronnie had surgery his season was over," said Olson. "But he left the recovery room at 4 a.m. and by 10 a.m. he was lifting weights with the leg. If you don't think he wanted to come back, you're mistaken."

And now?

"He is a little better each day," Olson said. "He's still a great player, but he doesn't have that blazing quickness back yet. He's a little reluctant to turn it on. But by Saturday, you will see the after-burners going."

Iowa figures to need Lester operating at or close to top speed against Louisville, which clobbered a tough Louisiana State team 86-66 in the Midwest Regional final even though Griffith played just 17 minutes because of foul trouble.

"It was very frustrating for me not to be able to play," said Griffith, expressing a feeling that Lester knows all too well.

"But the other guys just took over. I was just another cheerleader. It made me feel good to see them go ahead and play well without me."

The win over LSU had Coach Crum crowing that Louisville is "not a one-man show," and Griffith agrees.

"I get all the nicknames and labels and stuff like 'Dr. Dunkenstein,' and I really do appreciate them," Griffith said. "But basketball is a team sport. It's the University of Louisville, not the University of Darrell Griffith."

That same point was made by Purdue Coach Lee Rose, who contends that there is more to his Boilermakers than 7-foot-1 All-American center Joe Barry Carroll.

But the fact remains, stopping Carroll will be the major task confronting the UCLA Bruins when the teams square off in Saturday's second semifinal. And UCLA's starting center, sophomore Mike Sanders, is only 6-6.

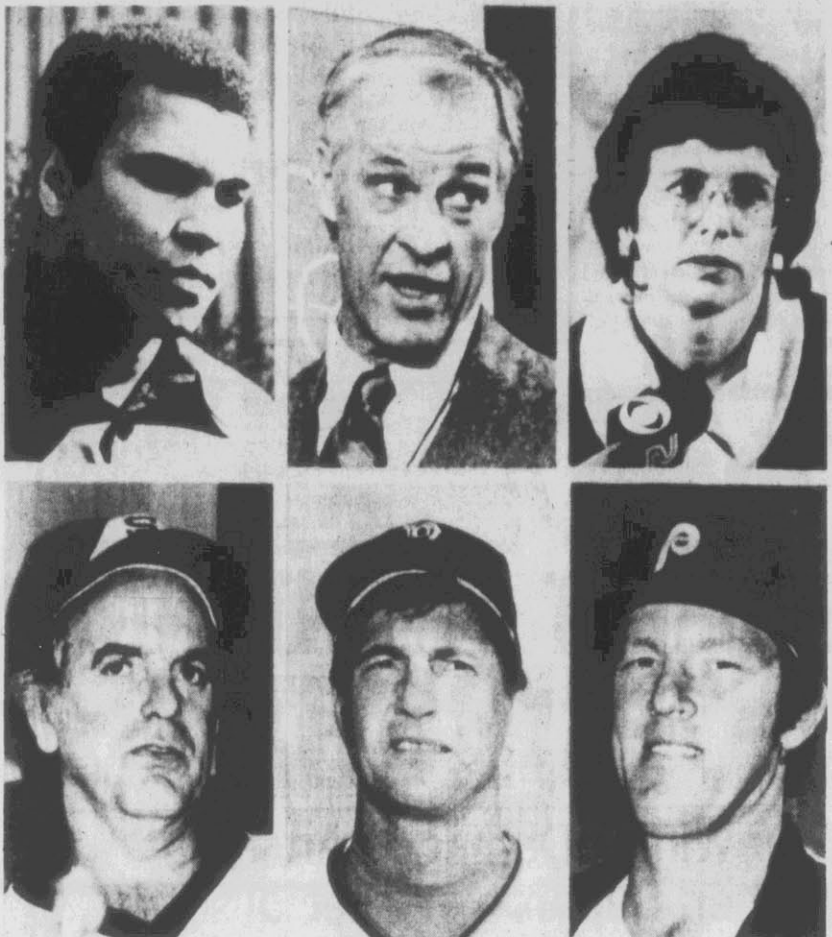

"I don't mind playing against guys 6-10 or more," says Sanders, one of the youngsters inserted into the starting lineup in midseason by first-year coach Larry Brown who helped turn the Bruins' fortunes around. "I was a center in high school, so I had to play against bigger people all the time. I look forward to the challenge."

The Bruins take some of the pressure off Sanders by starting a pair of senior forwards, 6-8 Kiki Vandeweghe and 6-7 James Wilkes. They can also bring 6-9 seniors Darrell Alums and Gig Sims off the bench.

"We don't need a real center," insists Wilkes. "We just put our three best guys on the floor. Then you block out and get position."

How well that formula will work against Carroll, dubbed by ex-coach turned broadcaster Al McGuire an "aircraft carrier," remains to be seen.

Over What Hill?

Watson Wants To Win Tourney Players Event

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Tom Watson stops short of calling the Tournament Players Championship one of golf's major events.

But it's one he wants to win.

"It's our showcase tournament, the showcase tournament on the tour. The championship of the touring players. It's an extremely well-run tournament. I'd very much like to win it," Watson said before teeing off today in the first round of the $440,000 event.

"If we get the conditions we usually do — by that I mean wind — it's a great test of golf."

"I like the golf course. It takes a lot of talent to play here and win. It's the kind of golf I like to play," said the man who had been the game's most proficient performer over the past three years and comes into this one as the only 2-time winner of the season.

But the ambitious tournament, which seeks a stature in golf equal to that enjoyed by the currently recognized Big Four, has not yet advanced to the level of the majors, Watson said.

lengers are Jack Nicklaus and Johnny Miller, each on a continuing comeback crusade. Miller capped his return from a 3-year slump with a victory in his last start, at Inverrary.

Nicklaus, considered by many as the best the game has ever known, came close his last time out. The 40-year-old Nicklaus, who is working on his game as hard or harder than ever before, lost a 2-hole sudden death playoff to Ray Floyd last weekend in Miami.

It was his best American finish in 20 months, but Nicklaus said his comeback won't be complete until he wins.

Among the other standouts are U.S. Open Champion Hale Irwin, Masters titleholder Fuzzy Zoeller, Lee Trevino, Floyd, John Mahaffey, Ben Crenshaw, Hubert Green, Jerry Pate, Andy Bean, Bruce Lietzke, Gary Player of South Africa and Australian David Graham, the current PGA champion.

CBS will provide national television coverage of portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

The Kentucky Derby is now held on the first Saturday in May but it has been run on every other day of the week except Sunday.

Three college football players, Steve Little, Russell Erxleben and Joe Williams, share the NCAA record for the longest field goal, 67 yards.

Over The Hill Gang Not Going To Give Up

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

"I am still physically capable and motivated — I want to beat everybody."

That's Billie Jean King's comeback chant. It comes from her throat with all of the fervor of a challenge from some female Tarzan. Billie Jean thinks she can do it all again, and who among us has nerve enough to doubt her?

She is truly a sports phenomenon.

Now 36 years old, both knees so scarred from operations that you could play tic-tac-toe on them, counted out on numerous occasions, the so-called "Old Lady" of tennis keeps bounding back.

All the young lionesses of the game are looking apprehensively over their shoulders as the top women players vie in New York's Madison Square Garden this week for their richest prize, the $300,000 Avon Championships.

Why not?

Within the past month King put together four victories in Detroit and Houston, beating Evonne Goolagong 6-3, 6-0 and following that with a 6-1, 6-3 rout of Martina Navratilova, rated the world's best.

The tough die hard.

Muhammad Ali, 38, is trying to shed 50 pounds in hopes of winning the boxing's heavyweight championship a fourth time. The 41-year-old Jim Kaat is pitching like a schoolboy in the Yankees' baseball camp in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. The legendary Gordie Howe, 51, and Bobby Hull, 41, are playing ice hockey with the same enthusiasm and daring as when their bodies were 20 years old.

The ranks of the "Over the Hill Gang" keep swelling like an inflated balloon. Nobody wants to hang it up any more. Workhorse Phil Niekro, 40, is just coming off a 21-20 season of pitching for the Atlanta Braves. Gaylord Perry, 41, was a 21-game and Cy Young winner two years ago. Both expect their arms to last forever.

Pittsburgh's Willie Stargell was a World Series and National League MVP last year at age 38. Boston's Carl Yastrzemski, 40, and the Phillies' Pete Rose, 39 in April, are just getting their second wind. Dallas' Roger Staubach, 38, and Denver's Craig Morton, 37, are two of the older wonders of the National Football League.

"People have been asking me why I don't retire ever since I was 24," Billie Jean said during a break at the Garden this week. "I'll never forget a comment by Arthur Ashe a couple of years ago. He said, 'Can you imagine being No. 7 in your profession and people asking why you don't quit? What if you were the seventh best lawyer, doctor or accountant in the world? Nobody would think of asking why you didn't retire.'"

King said for some unexplained reason people pose the "Big 30" as the competitive life of athletes — from that point, they're supposed to start downhill.

"Not so," she adds. "Decay starts in the head. An athlete, physically sound, should be able to last until he is 43 if willing to work hard."

Shad Event Scheduled

GRIFTON — A double elimination, slow pitch, women's invitational softball tournament will be featured this year at the Grifton Shad Festival, and tournament co-chairmen Tom Kornegay, Chris Parisher and James Carr urge all interested persons to fill out the official entry form as soon as possible.

Deadline for entry is April 12, and coaches will be notified of the tournament schedule by April 14. The tournament will be played beginning either April 15 or 16, depending on the number of teams involved. The tournament will run evening hours during the week and afternoon and evening on Saturday.

Rosters will allow 20 players and 1980 United States Slow Pitch Softball Rulebook regulations will apply except for No Infield Fly rule.

Trophies will be awarded for the championship team (individual trophies) and runner-up team (team trophy). Entry fee is $40 per team.

Entry forms are available at the Grifton Town Hall, from the Shad Festival, Box 928, Grifton, or from the softball co-chairmen.

Watson, now the dominant player in the game, has taken to weeks off from competition and says he is "refreshed, which might make up for any loss of touch."

Watson, a runnerup to Lanny Wadkins in howling winds in this event a year ago, faces the strongest field of the year in the 72-hole chase over tough Sawgrass, a 7,000-yard links-type course.

It contains all but one of the top 144 leading money-winners from the last 12 months, plus British open Champion Seve Ballesteros of Spain. The only absentee is Al Geiberger, who is ill.

Bullet Playoff Hopes Are Vanishing

Signs ECU Grant

Lexanne Keeter, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jamie Leck Keeter of Winterville, has become the first D.H. Conley female to sign an athletic grant-in-aid. Here she signs an East Carolina volleyball grant as principal Bob Carraway looks on. The 5-9 senior was a two-year all-conference selection, leading Conley to two Eastern Carolina Conference titles in volleyball. She also was a three-year player in basketball and a four-year player in softball for the Valkyries. (Reflector Photo)

By The Associated Press
Washington Bullets Coach Dick Motta has a message for the rest of the National Basketball Association:

HELP!
More specifically, the injury-riddled Bullets hopes for a playoff berth are slowly vanishing. Their 109-93 loss to Atlanta, coupled with Houston's 139-113 shellacking of New York, dropped Washington 2½ games behind the Rockets in the chase for the final berth in the Eastern Conference. The Bullets have seven games to play and Houston has six.

"Our only chance is to catch Houston," Motta said. "When you have to depend on other people, you're desperate — and we're desperate."

In the rest of the NBA it was Utah 103, Chicago 100; San Antonio 105, Philadelphia 99; Indiana 125, New Jersey 112; Phoenix 112, Los Angeles 108; Portland 115, Golden State 113 in overtime, and Milwaukee 108, Seattle 106.

Rockets 139, Knicks 113
Houston hit 19 of 20 shots in the second period — the first 19 before Rudy Tomjanovich missed a three-pointer in the closing minute — and rode Calvin Murphy's season-high 38 points past the Knicks.

Murphy got 15 of his points as Houston erupted for 47 in the third quarter to take an unbeatable 111-77 lead into the final period.

Tomjanovich added 27 points for the Rockets while Ray Williams had 21 for New York.

Jazz 103, Bulls 100
Utah was even colder than the Hawks before getting things together and turning back the Bulls. The Jazz fell behind 15-0 after half of the first period and didn't take the lead until Don "Duck" Williams stole a pair of inbounds passes in the fourth period scored each time for a 92-88 lead.

Tom Boswell led Utah with 20 points, Ron Boone added 18 and Williams had 12. Artis Gilmore led the Bulls with 23 points.

Spurs 105, 76ers 99
Thirty-three points by San Antonio's George Gervin offset 33 by Philadelphia's Julius Erving and the Spurs, with Larry Kenon adding 24 points, topped the 76ers.

The Spurs remain second in the Central Division, one game ahead of Houston. The 76ers are three behind Boston in the Atlantic Division.

Pacers 125, Nets 112
Twenty-four points by center James Edwards and a career-high 23 by reserve guard Joe Hassett enabled the Pacers to shake off a New Jersey rally and beat the Nets.

Indiana saw a 10-point lead in the second period turn into a two-point deficit starting the fourth quarter. But successive baskets by Hassett, Edwards and George McGinnis put Indiana comfortably ahead with nine minutes to play. Ed Jordan had 24 points for the Nets.

Suns 112, Lakers 108
Paul Westphal's 30 points, two of them crucial free throws with seven seconds to play, enabled the Suns to match a club record with their 50th victory of the season.

Phoenix, at 50-26, is third in the Pacific Division, 4½ games behind the 55-22 Lakers, who got 29 points from Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

The Lakers' center got a field goal and free throw to cut the Suns' lead to 110-108 before Westphal locked things up. Jamaal Wilkes added 19 points for Los Angeles — just two of them in the second half.

Blazers 115, Warriors 113
Billy Ray Bates scored 22 points — eight in the fourth quarter and eight in overtime — in Portland's victory over the Warriors that put the Trail Blazers fourth in the Pacific Division, ahead of San Diego in the battle for the final Western Conference playoff berth.

Clifford Ray's basket with five seconds remaining tied it 102-102 and forced overtime. But Bates got the first basket in the extra period and the Trail Blazers never trailed after that, handing Golden State its eighth loss in eight overtime games. Phil Smith's 28 points led the losers.

Bucks 108, Sonics 106
Bob Lanier, who scored 23 points to match Marques Johnson for team honors, scored a pair of field goals and blocked Paul Silas' shot with 1:20 to play to help the Bucks beat Sonics led all scorers with 39 points. Gus Williams of the points.

Not Happy With Play

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — Top-ranked Northwest Mississippi has yet to be seriously tested in the Women's National Junior College Basketball Tournament, but Coach Harry Adair still isn't completely happy with the play of his Lady Rangers.

"I'm still not satisfied with the way we played defense," said Adair Wednesday night after Northwest Mississippi cruised to a 92-72 second-round win over Illinois Central.

"We did not execute our defense properly, and we made some mistakes off it that allowed them good shots."

Seek To Revoke Bond In Arson

NEWTON, N.C. (AP) — Prosecutors told a Catawba County jury Wednesday that James Jefferies arranged a fatal fire in Shelby last May and offered the job to two men, one of whom turned it down.

Then, in a surprise move to get Jefferies' bond revoked, the prosecution introduced an affidavit from James Walker of Shelby, the man they say turned down the job.

Jefferies, 34, is charged with five counts of first-degree murder, unlawful burning and conspiracy to burn. The charges stem from a fire and explosion that destroyed an entire block in downtown Shelby last May 25 and resulted in the deaths of four city firemen and a city worker.

Jefferies' trial was moved from Cleveland County because of publicity.

In the affidavit, Walker claims Jefferies asked him not to testify at the trial, then told him to go Florida and assume another identity.

Superior Court Judge Forrest Farrell was expected to rule on the prosecution request to revoke Jefferies' bond when court reconvened today.

After five days of jury selection, a jury and two alternates were sworn in Wednesday afternoon. All the jurors are white; Jefferies is black.

In his opening argument, prosecutor Lester Chalmers of the state attorney general's office told the jury the prosecution will call between 30 and 40 witnesses and will show that Jefferies' business, Geoffrey's Men's Store, was in financial trouble.

Chalmers said the witnesses will tell that Jefferies increased the insurance on the store; that he approached a man about burning the store for $1,000; then approached Sammy Guest, who agreed to do the job.

Guest faces the same charges as Jefferies. His trial date has not been set.

Chalmers said the state will seek the death penalty for Jefferies under the felony murder law, which says that a death resulting from a felony is a capital crime. Unlawful burning is a felony.

Defense attorney Mike Randall told the jury the deaths were tragic, but not murder. He said the trial was the result of the need by residents to hold someone responsible for the incident.

ANOTHER FIRE

LONDON (AP) — For the third time in 36 hours, fire has swept a British charity home. Forty handicapped children were led to safety Wednesday night from the Braidwood Home in central Scotland, authorities said.

Opening lead: Four of ♣.

It was Oscar Wilde who first claimed that "life imitates art." If those players sitting East on this hand dealt at the Bermuda Regional had had the opportunity to read one of our recent columns stressing the importance of not always trying for an immediate ruff, they would not have gone wrong on defense.

North's decision to raise to two diamonds was a bit light by rubber bridge standards, but quite normal in duplicate. West, looking at a singleton in his partner's suit, four trumps and the ace-queen of spades, expressed grave doubts about the opponents' ability to make nine tricks. Invariably, West led his singleton club. At those tables where East hastened to cash his two club tricks, South was able to scrape together eight tricks and hold his loss to only 100 points. Whether East continued with a third club or shifted to a spade, one of dummy's spade losers would go off on the jack of clubs while West was ruffing with his trump trick.

As long as East has the ace of hearts as an entry to his hand, there is no hurry to cash the second club. Instead, he should shift to the seven of spades at trick two.

Now it is West's turn to star. He must trust his partner. Obviously, East knew that West's club lead was a singleton. Equally apparent is that East has shifted to a short suit—most likely a doubleton from the fall of the cards. But if West now rises with the ace of spades and continues the suit, declarer will again get out for down one.

To keep open the lines of communication, West should simply insert the jack of spades, forcing the king to win. The defenders will now have separated their tricks. The best declarer can do is take three rounds of trumps and then lead a club to the queen. East wins and leads a spade to West, and the defenders will collect two spades, a heart, a trump and two clubs for down two and an excellent result.

Raps Reporting
On Nuke Plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — A psychiatrist who studied television coverage of nuclear power plants says TV reporters spend too much time telling viewers about what might go wrong, instead of the facts.

Dr. Robert L. duPont received 13½ hours of television coverage of nuclear energy and said, "One of the striking characteristics I saw occur over and over was the reporters continually going down those 'what if' worst case branches... Fear was the motif of the entire series." Spokesmen for the three networks declined comment.

Times Of Boyhood In South Told
By Alex Haley And Norman LearBy PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Of summer swelter, good whiskey and storytelling, the South has an interminable supply. The South also has a lot of front porches, where these natural commodities are respectively endured, sipped and embellished.

Beverly Hills' version of the front porch — the cocktail party — doesn't offer much in the way of a great oral tradition, but it has brought together Alex Haley, Southern author ("Roots"), and Norman Lear, Jewish television sitcom genius ("All in the Family").

Lear and Haley got to talking at this party about their boyhoods, Haley's in the South and Lear's in Connecticut. They spoke of getting together sometime and developing something out of their conversation.

Lo, they have done it. "Palmerston U.S.A." it is called, and it begins this evening on CBS. Which brings us back to the front porch and the South.

Haley's South was chosen for their project, because, if boyhood wasn't invented in the South, it was certainly perfected there.

There is another reason: The small-town South of Haley's youth was a place of delicate balance, where the old ways and new ways lay poised just below the surface of the day-to-day placidity, ready to clash.

Amid the hubbub of "Roots" and its television sequel, Haley often spoke of his wish to return to Henning, Tenn., to return in person and in his writing. One of the stories he wanted to get off of his chest had to do with that delicate racial balance and the profoundly true integration known to Southern communities that could only be guessed at — wrongly, for the most part — by the rest of the country.

Haley remembered from his own youth that in the South, segregation wasn't so simple a matter as it was in the industrial North, where distinctly separate housing and social patterns erected a wall between the races that stood as imposing as any Jim Crow law.

The small-town South that Haley remembered was a place where blacks and whites lived in one place, shopped in one grocery; a place where black boys and white boys swam in one swimming hole and had their misdeeds punished by angry mothers of either race.

Separation was something recognized but not fully acknowledged by kids — until a certain point, Haley remembers the moment when his best friend, a white kid, told him he'd have to start calling him "Sir." They had reached puberty, and the happy truce of boyhood was over.

"Palmerston," a seven-week series beginning tonight, is Haley's chance to recount those times and that peculiarly Southern experience. Ensuring that the series doesn't lose sight of its universal theme, the celebration of unbridled boyhood, are Jermain H. Johnson, who plays the black boy (Booker T.), and Brian G. Wilson, who plays the white boy (David).

It is a gentle and broadening program that transcends the easy racist mentality so often

U.S. Diplomats Held By Nazis 5 Months In '42

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer
WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. (AP) — Fifty Americans are being held prisoner within their own embassy in Tehran, and the United States says the Iranian government is "an active participant" in their 137-day ordeal.

The plight of the American hostages recalls that of a group of U.S. diplomats who were held captive in Germany for five months almost 40 years ago — "guests" of the Nazi SS and Gestapo.

Staffers at the U.S. Embassy in Berlin were arrested and interned in a German hotel, along with American journalists, when Germany declared war on the United States after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

In retaliation, hundreds of German, Japanese, Italian, Hungarian and Bulgarian diplomats and journalists were confined in the United States — amid the sprawling grounds of The Greenbrier, a luxurious hotel set in the hills of southern West Virginia.

The State Department took over the hotel for that purpose. There have been suggestions that the United States might declare a state of belligerency in its dealings with Iran, and intern its diplomatic personnel in much the same manner.

The Carter administration is holding the Iranian government responsible for the hostages' welfare — and told the World Court on Tuesday that Iran's government was "an active participant" in the Nov. 4 embassy takeover — but has so far resisted such steps.

Traditionally, diplomatic immunity allows diplomats to leave the nations with which they suddenly find themselves at war. But the suddenness of America's entry into World War II and the war's ideological bitterness resulted in the representatives of the warring nations being held for the return of their counterparts.

Francis Cunningham, 3rd Consul at the U.S. Embassy in Berlin, remembers a captivity filled with growing boredom, apprehension and isolation — many of the same symptoms that have been exhibited by the hostages in Tehran.

The internees were never interrogated or mistreated, Cunningham said, but many — constantly scrutinized and cut off from home and the outside world — suffered from depression and the fear of indefinite imprisonment.

Some of the prisoners worried that their families and friends would forget them, and they feared returning home, he said.

"We just knew it was going to be a long war, a terrible war," Cunningham, now retired and living in Lincoln, Neb., said in a recent telephone interview.

As the Americans' imprisonment dragged on, the food deteriorated; soon they were living on potatoes plus whatever canned food they had saved, Cunningham said.

"We invented any pastime. We wrote poems about dandelions in the garden and then ate them," he said.

The Americans organized exercise sessions, games and courses where the teachers lectured from memory. A favorite diversion was taunting their Gestapo guards, Cunningham said. From time to time, one of the prisoners would drop a ceramic spittoon down an eight-story stairwell; the shattering explosion terrified the guards.

On the other side of the Atlantic, Roy Sibold was overseeing about 1,600 diplomats, journalists and their families at the Greenbrier.

Under the eye of FBI agents and border guards imported from Texas, the enemies spent seven months in 1942 surrounded by near regal splendor and hundreds of servants who normally tended to the wealthy and the powerful.

Everyday Sibold received a telegram from the State Department describing treatment of the American prisoners abroad and outlining reciprocal treatment, he said.

"Our people were penned up in Germany, so we penned the Germans up here. But the Italians let our people go into town, so we let the Italians here go into the community," he said.

While the prisoners are well, received newspapers and could purchase alcohol and other conveniences, several nonetheless escaped. All were recaptured, Sibold said.

The prisoners eventually were traded for their counterparts abroad. Robert Conte, the Greenbrier's professional historian, said some of the prisoners were traded through neutral nations or taken to an African island and exchanged.

"It was just horse trading business," Sibold said.

Several children were born at The Greenbrier during the imprisonment and some of the prisoners have returned since the war to enjoy its attractions in gentler times.

Sibold said some of his former charges still come to visit him. Of his Japanese "prisoners" he said: "They gave me the key to all the cities in Japan before they left in a show of appreciation."

Workshop Set At Lenoir CC

ECU News Bureau
KINSTON — "Stretching the Media Dollar" is the topic of this year's one-day workshop for librarians sponsored by the East Carolina University Library Science Alumni Association and Lenoir Community College, on the LCC campus.

The June 17 program will feature presentations by Thomas C. King Jr., assistant controller with the N.C. Board of Education's financial services office; Elsie Brumback, director of educational media for the N.C. Department of Public Instruction; and Margaret Cain, Rose High School senior and delegate to the White House Conference on Libraries and Information Services.

Participants on a panel discussion include Sue Scott, educational media consultant for the N.C. Department of Public Instruction; Eunice Drum, head of technical services for the N.C. State Library; Dr. Clyde Erwin, president of Wayne Community College; and Frankie Cubbage, director of the University of South Carolina-Aiken Gregg-Grantville Library.

Registration fee of $3 may be paid with pre-registration forms or on the morning of the workshop. Additional information and pre-registration materials are available from Emily Boyce, alumni advisor, Department of Library Science, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

My husband is a very tense man. Even when things are running along smoothly at home you can sense his distress. It's strange that even though he's so edgy he doesn't get really angry. The doctor has prescribed a tranquilizer, but he refuses to take it. He won't believe that it won't do him harm. Can you help me support his doctor's idea? — Mrs. T.T.A., Pa. Dear Mrs. A.:

Many doctors have had this experience. After completely examining a patient, the doctor will prescribe a drug, only to have the patient say, "I don't believe in taking pills" or, "I'd rather see if I can do without pills."

This often leaves a doctor stymied, especially if there is no other approach to a problem. It sometimes takes arduous pressure to budge those people who react to pill-taking as though it were a religious belief. Somehow, they fallaciously think that it is a sign of weakness to depend on any drug that is prescribed for them.

This frequently happens when tranquilizing drugs are suggested. Some patients think that they are stigmatized by the need to "quiet down" from emotional and physical tensions. Tranquilizing drugs are quite remarkable when used carefully and judiciously at the discretion of the doctor. They can have a profound and important effect in reducing excessive anxiety and undue tensions.

These drugs represent a tremendous advance in the treatment of severe psychoneurotic states. Often they are used for a short while, until the patient can work out tension-producing problems — with psychological support when necessary.

Much has been written about the dangers of tranquilizers. The dangers lie only in the abuse or overuse of these drugs rather than in their proper use. But wouldn't this be true of most drugs? It is also important to know that certain other drugs and alcohol do not mix well with tranquilizers. Because of tragic accidents that have been reported as a result of combining these drugs, some people have the impression that tranquilizers themselves may not be safe.

When it is pointed out to your husband that taking a tranquilizer casts no greater reflection on his ego structure than taking an antibiotic, he may accept his doctor's suggestion. Undoubtedly, he will benefit from it.

I had a mild attack of flu six weeks ago. I still am so exhausted that I can't get back to a full day's work. Do you think I still have the infection inside of me? — Miss W. T., Conn. Dear Miss T.:

I doubt that the bug is "still inside" of you. There are other reasons to account for your inertia. A condition known as "post-infectious asthenia," or weakness, frequently follows a bout of flu. Long after the infection has disappeared, the fatigue and debilitation may persist. With extra rest and a nutritious diet your strength will come back. Pamper yourself a bit!

Goal Exceeded By Legion Post

The American Legion, Department of North Carolina Headquarters in Raleigh has announced that Greenville Post No. 160 has conducted a successful membership drive.

Ernest Brown, Commander of Post 190, has received a letter from Department Headquarters informing him that the post has exceeded its Legion Membership Incentive Goal for 1980.

The theme for this year's drive, "We Dare To Care," was to encourage all citizens to greater service by becoming involved in their local community and in becoming an important part of The American Legions' ongoing motto — "For God and Country."

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Raymond Spetz, who died in 1978 at the age of 78, has remembered the United States in his will — a thought worth more than $145,500.

A check from the estate of the Erie, Pa., tavern owner was issued to the federal government last week, assistant U.S. Attorney Joel B. Strauss said Tuesday. The money will go into the general fund.

"I know of no other incident where this office has become involved with the receipt of a gift of this character," said Strauss. He said the money — the balance of Spetz' estate — was willed to the government along with an small amount of corporate stock.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT COMMISSION RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA PUBLIC NOTICE
Of Receipt of an Application for Funds Under the Clean Water Bond Act
Pursuant to Section 9(c) of the North Carolina Clean Water Bond Act of 1977, notice is given that the City of Greenville has filed an application to the Environmental Management Commission requesting a 25% State grant in the amount of $140,332. These grant funds are requested to assist in the construction of approximately 19,000 linear feet of 18-inch wastewater collection sewers and related appurtenances to serve the Red Oak and Oakdale Subdivision areas of the City of Greenville. The total cost of the project is estimated to be $782,860. Any State grant funds approved for this project will be subtracted from the remaining $140,422 allocated to Pitt County for wastewater collection systems under the Act.
Section 9(d) of the Act provides, in essence, that any citizen who resides in Pitt County may request a public hearing on the application. A request for a hearing and the reasons for the request must be filed with the Commission at P.O. Box 27687, Raleigh, North Carolina 27611, within fifteen (15) days of the date of publication of this notice.

Athletic Attic Easter Rematch:

HARE-1 TORTOISE-0

"It bugs me to lose, so this year I got Nikes from the Athletic Attic," said Peter Cottontail after his spectacular first time win.

This Easter, every bunny's trail leads to us, whether it's for a race or tennis match.

We've got Nike tennis shoes to fit every foot... from Nike Curts for kids in navy or white and Nike Wimbledon for men to Lady Racquettes or Nike All Courts for men and women. As well as a full selection of Nike running shoes.

And you can trade in your fur coats for tennis togs, too! We've got a selected group of current women's tennis wear reduced twenty percent until Easter.

Peter Cottontail got his winning edge with Nikes at our Attic... you will, too. Athletic Attic. The active store for active people. And occasionally, rabbits!
