Inspector Explains Provisions Of Greenville's Building Codes

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

"We have very few problems," according to Greenville building inspector Alton Warren. "But if they (contractors) cover it up...if we can't see it, they have to dig it out and show it to us," he explained, while talking about the city's building inspection program last week.

The problem at Bryton Hills apartments was the exception, rather than the rule, Warren said.

He explained that the problem at that complex of multi-family dwellings was discovered, "back in December," when they had, "some smoke down there." Investigators, he said, found that the hoods — the ventilating systems — installed over cook stoves in the 40 apartments in the complex, were not ducted to the outside as required under the state building code. Instead, the exhaust systems were left open in the attics of the 10 buildings.

Although the chances of such an occurrance "getting by" the inspectors, "should be very slim," Warren said, it did happen.

"The inspectors should have caught it when they build according to the state building code and should have vented the hoods to the outside without having to be told," Warren noted.

When building codes are not followed, corrective measures can be and are ordered.

Warren noted that work is now underway to correct the defects found at the Bryton Hills complex.

If you build within the city — whether a contractor does the work or you do the work yourself — a building permit is required.

Permits range from $5, for a $100 project, to $100 for a $100,000 building ($1.50 per $1,000 over $100,000), and a $10 penalty is assessed if construction begins without first securing a proper permit.

So you get your permit and begin building. City inspectors must check the footing before it is poured with concrete. Subsequent inspections check the sub-floor or slab, framing, roof, plumbing rough-in, wall insulation, wiring (done by the county electrical inspector), heat duct insulation, bath and kitchen vents, heating unit, smoke detector, and more.

Some of the inspections are not "free", either. A plumbing permit fee will cost $2 per fixture, with a minimum charge of $5; new and replacement building sewer fee is $5; heating permit fee is also $5, while a $10 penalty is assessed for plumbing and heating permits if work begins before the permit is issued.

It also costs to have the insulation checked. For up to 1,000 square feet, the fee is $5, while the cost for more than 3,000 square feet is $25.

Plumbing and wiring located inside walls must be inspected before the walls are covered. Plumbing buried in the ground also has to be checked. "If they cover it up...if we can't see it, they have to dig it out and show it to us," Warren said. "If it is in the wall, they have to take it (the wall) out."

The "final" inspection gives inspectors a look at the completed building, and the property owner the assurance that the building is suitable for occupancy.

"We have very few problems," Warren said. "We very seldom have to tear out or dig up. Most of the contractors will call you. Ninety-nine percent of them do what they are supposed to do."

The Bryton Hills problem was, "just an oversight. It was not intended, and I don't think it will happen again," Warren emphasized.

The inspections program, Warren suggested, is basically to insure that property owners get what they are supposed to get, and that the buildings meet state building code standards.

Carter Leads Kennedy In Virginia Caucuses

By DON HARRISON

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — President Carter crushed Sen. Edward Kennedy in Virginia's Democratic precinct caucuses Saturday and only waited for the final numbers to see if he would win all 64 of the state's national convention delegates.

With about one-third of the counties and cities reporting, Carter had about 88 percent to Kennedy's 4 percent and 8 percent uncommitted.

But Kennedy campaign chief Ernest Kessler said the Massachusetts lawmaker's expected strongholds in Northern Virginia had not yet reported.

Entering Saturday's contest, UPI's delegate count gave Carter 568.5 to Kennedy's 201.5. A total of 1,666 delegates are needed for the nomination.

The percentage of delegates backing each candidate that were elected Saturday to congressional districts and to the state convention will translate into the same percentages that those candidates will get from Virginia to the national Democratic convention if Kennedy met the 20 percent threshhold.

State Democratic party rules say a candidate must have at least 20 percent of the 2,999 delegates to the district and state conventions before he can get any delegates to the national convention.

They were held to choose all but a few of the 2,999 Democrats who will assemble in congressional district meetings and at the state convention, where the national convention delegates will be picked.

"A good comfortable majority will end up with President Carter," George Gilliam of Charlottesville, his state campaign chairman, predicted beforehand.

Ernest Kessler, Kennedy's Virginia campaign chief, said prior to the caucuses that he hoped to emerge with between 6 percent and 20 percent of the delegates.

"We hope to do better in Virginia than he's done in other Southern states," Kessler said at that time. Kennedy's percentages ranged between 5 percent and 13 percent in southern primaries earlier this month.

Saturday's mass meetings in 134 localities were the first step towards picking representatives to the August convention in New York.

Morgan Stresses Need To Preserve Separation Of Church, Government

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

U.S. Senator Robert Morgan, warning of demagoguery in the pulpit, and the dangers of mixing church and state, took television evangelists and other churchmen who use religion to spread political dogma to task in a talk here Friday night.

Morgan was one of two principal speakers at a special called session of the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina, held to celebrate the founding of the convention in Greenville, 150 years ago.

The Rev. E.T. Vinson, pastor of the Memorial Baptist Church here welcomed the estimated 500 Baptists from across the state who attended the session.

He explained that on March 26, 1830, 14 men — seven ministers and seven laymen — met to form the convention, which joined North Carolina's Baptists together into a society that could support missions and education.

The Rev. Thomas D. Mason, pastor of the Baptist Meeting House in Greenville, and two other local men, George Stokes and Reading S. Blount, attended that 1830 session. Blount was elected the first recording secretary of the new state convention.

One-hundred years later, in 1930, Baptists gathered at the Memorial Baptist Church here, then located on Greene Street, to celebrate the convention's centennial.

The Memorial Baptist Church — which replaced the old Baptist Meeting House — was named to, "memorialize the organization of the convention," Vinson explained.

Following Vinson's welcome, Cecil A. Ray, general secretary-treasurer of the state convention presented Dr. Cecil Sherman, convention president, a gavel to use while presiding over the celebration session. The gavel, according to Ray, was made of, "timber grown on the site where the convention was organized in 1830."

Other speakers, outlining the history of the convention, pointed out that the convention realized that a newspaper, a college, and Sunday schools were indispensable to the successful pursuit of all operations.

In 1832, the convention took the first step toward the formation of an educational institution by naming a committee to secure a site.

That site, in a forest in Wake County, became the home, in February 1834, for Wake Forest Manual Labor Institute, with a first class of 72 students.

The town of Wake Forest later grew around the school, which became Wake Forest Institute and later Wake Forest College. Moved to Winston-Salem in 1956, the school is now known as Wake Forest University. The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, however, still occupies the campus at Wake Forest.

The "Biblical Recorder", regularly referred to as the organ of North Carolina Baptists, was first published in the early 1830's, although ownership of the paper was maintained by private individuals and companies until bought by the convention in 1934.

The North Carolina Convention was a leader in the formation of the Southern Baptist Convention in 1845, formed the Board of Missions and Sunday Schools in 1887, established the Thomasville Baptist Orphanage in 1884, and in May 1923, opened Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem.

A Baptist layman, Morgan, in his message to the special session of the convention, outlined how Baptists have been persecuted by various governments since the early 1600's and questioned the church's involvement in politics.

"Religion and church should not be used as justification for dogmatic political positions, propounded from the pulpit, or for condemnation of those who disagree," the senator emphasized.

"Demagoguery from the pulpit...is no different from demagoguery on the campaign trail. If anything, it is worse, because it clothes itself in self-righteousness, invokes the name of Christ or His church in an appeal to passion, prejudices and irrationality."

Thousands Protest Draft

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An estimated 30,000 people opposed to draft registration massed in Washington Saturday with bright yellow banners saying "No draft, no war, no way," and listened to 1960s leaders who fought the battle once before.

It was the largest anti-war protest since the days of Vietnam. District of Columbia police estimated the rally drew 29,800 young people.

Enthusiastic crowds — mostly white and college age — were bundled in blankets, sleeping bags and Army fatigue jackets to ward off a chilling March wind.

They marched from the White House to the West Front of the Capitol building with their message: "No draft, no way, let the people have their say," and "No draft, no war, no way."

Banners identified contingents from schools such as Oberlin, Columbia and Kent State, where four students were killed during an anti-war demonstration 10 years ago.

Men and women who became symbols of the 1960s protests against the Vietnam War were on hand to bring their message alive for a new crowd of young people.

Among those at the march and rally were David Dellinger, one of the Chicago 7 defendants; Stokely Carmichael, a black activist; cast members from the 1960s musical "Hair,"; feminist Bella Abzug and socialist Michael Harrington.

At issue is President Carter's proposal to register men and women 19 and 20 for the draft as a show of strength designed to make the Russians think twice about any new aggressive moves.

The plan to register women was killed by a House subcommittee and is not expected to be revived. Carter already has power to register young men, but administration officials say he will not use it until Congress rallies behind him on the issue by agreeing to finance the process.

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd, who favors registration, was inside the Capitol Saturday while the rally was going on outside. "No demonstration is going to change my mind," he said.

In contrast to the hostile tone 1960s demonstrations often had, when the numbers of protesters swelled to hundreds of thousands, Saturday's gathering had many friendly moments. Mounted police allowed demonstrators to pet their horses. One young woman gave an officer a yellow flower, which he wrapped around his horses bridle.

Burton Day, 23, of Enid, Okla., said he flew to Washington just to attend the rally.

But Chris Freeman, 20, a sophomore at Colgate University, said, "I am here basically to make up my mind. I am really in a quandry over this thing."

Among those who spoke at the Capitol Hill rally was the Rev. Barry Lynn, chairman of the Committee Against Registration and the Draft.

"We are told that registration is a sign of national resolve to the Soviets," Lynn said. "I can't imagine any Soviet official losing any sleep over the collection of millions of names .. the only people who are losing sleep with grim justification are millions of 18,19-and 20-year-old Americans."

That Cigarette Aroma? Only The Blenders Know

WASHINGTON (AP) — At one time, blending tobacco for cigarettes depended on sensitive noses and just the right touch.

But blending tobacco now depends more on the sciences of chemistry, pharmacy and physics than on the artistry of sensitive noses.

Cigarette tobacco is now pulverized to a paste, homogenized, sterilized, reconstituted, freeze-dried, chemically altered and finally sprayed with flavors that could come from a confectionery.

As the market for cigarettes changed away from high tar and nicotine brands — those comprise just over half the market today — cigarette makers turned to a variety of tricks to make the lighter cigarettes taste "full-flavored."

Today's cigarette tobacco has been showered with flavor combinatons that may include cardamom, pepper, clove, nutmeg, cascarilla, vanilla, rum, honey, raisin, prune and date, as well as old standbys such as cocoa and licorice.

And those are just the natural flavors.

Now, according to firms that sell flavors to tobacco companies, the trend is toward more highly concentrated synthetics such as the cocoa-like valeraldehyde, vanillin and a nut-like flavor called pyrazine.

Just what brands contain which additives is a closely guarded trade secret.

And no one in the federal government, which has spent millions of dollars studying smoking and health, knows for sure what chemicals go into cigarettes or whether they may be harmful.

Student Bus Monitor Injured In Attack

A Farmville Central High School bus monitor received multiple stab wounds and reportedly received a punctured lung and sac around the heart as a result of a fight occuring several weeks ago between the high school senior and an 8th grade student from Farmmille Middle School.

Richard Cutler, principal of Farmville Middle, indicated that the bus monitor had had no previous problems with the assailant and that the junior high school student will appear in court Tuesday.

The injured student has undergone corrective surgery and, according to the boy's mother, has returned to school.

The names of the two students involved are being withheld by sources due to ages of the students.

Seven Die In Virginia Fire

By CRAIG SCHWED

COVINGTON, Va. (UPI) — A 100-foot fiberglass storage tower erupted into flames at a paper mill Saturday, killing seven persons, including three women, working on scafolds inside. Seven other persons were injured.

Andy Dreszer, spokesman for the Westvaco Co., owners of the mill, said the dead were employees of the International Reinforce Plastic Co., a South Carolina contractor. They were relining the inside of the storage tower in the plant's bleaching division.

"We don't know the cause," Dreszer said "The contractors were working with fiberglass and the chemicals involved are very hazardous."

Dreszer said it was up to the contractor "to make sure the proper safety procedures were followed. "We reviewed these procedures with them before they started the job a week ago."

The contractor could not be reached for comment.

The eight-foot wide tower is normally used to store wood pulp before it is bleached with chlorine dioxide to make paper.

Officials withheld the victims' identities until relatives could be notified.

Seven persons received minor injuries trying to put out the flames, but were released after treatment at Alleghany Regional Hospital in Covington.

Dreszer said the fire did not spread to the rest of the plant, where about one-third of the paper company's 1,800 employees were working the overnight shift. He said only those employees in the immediate area were evacuated and operations continued.

Two Drown

LAKE LANDING, N.C. (UPI) — Coast Guard rescuers Saturday found the body of a Hyde County man who drowned with his wife the day before, apparently while trying to fish in storm-chopped Wyesocking Bay.

The Coast Guard identified the couple as David and Brenda Boyd of the Lake Landing community. Both were in their early 30s.

Quartermaster Dennis Purcell of the Coast Guard station at Cape Hatteras said the two apparently died during a heavy storm that wracked the area while they were fishing. By the time rescuers arrived Friday afternoon, the winds had reached 35 knots and the normally placid bay had one-to-two-foot waves.

"They just went out when they shouldn't have," Purcell said.

Using three cutters and a helicopter, the Coast Guard found Mrs. Boyd's body in the water Friday evening near the 14-foot skiff the couple used. Her husband's body was found Saturday morning in a marsh within a half mile of Mrs. Boyd's body, Purcell said.

No Plans To Admit Shah Back To U.S.

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration has no plans to admit the deposed shah of Iran into the United States for further medical treatment, an administration official said Saturday.

The United States prefers that Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, suffering from cancer, receive any medical care he needs at places other than the United States or U.S. military hospitals, it was learned.

"There are no plans on the part of the United States or on the part of the shah for him to come to the United States," said the official, who asked not to be identified. He declined under repeated questioning to elaborate.

President Carter summoned his National Security Council to Camp David atop the wind-swept Catoctin Mountains in Maryland for "a thorough review of the entire international agenda, including the shah, Iran, Afghanistan and the Mideast peace process.

Deputy Press Secretary Rex Granum told reporters in Washington the entire membership of the NSC and its top staff were present — Vice President Walter Mondale, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, Defense Secretary Harold Brown, Gen. David Jones, who chairs the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Intelligence Director Stansfield Turner, National Security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski and White House news secretary Jody Powell.

The meeting, which took place in Aspen Lodge at Camp David, lasted from 10:30 a.m. EST until 4 p.m. and included a working lunch of soup and sandwiches.

Granum refused to discuss the activities of White House chief of staff Hamilton Jordan, who flew to Panama Friday to help work out the details on medical care for the shah.

As Jordan went to Panama, Carter said Friday the United States would help provide medical care for the shah and left the door open to treating the shah in an American military hospital in Panama.

"We have a great deal of interest in the shah's having available to him adequate medical care," Carter told New York television interviewers Friday. "We have provided it in the past when he needed it. If the shah needs any help from us in helping provide good medical care in either Panama or other places, we'll try to do it."

Carter was asked whether this might include an American military hospital.

"There are many options available to the shah. I think the first option would be adequate medical care in Panama," Carter said. "The decision will be made in the best interest of the shah and his operation, which may very well be necessary to save his life."

It was the shah's admission to a New York hospital in October that led to the Iranian militants' seizure of the U.S. embassy in Tehran on Nov. 4. The shah went to Panama in December.

Three Honored

Members of American Legion Post 39 met recently to commemorate the American Legion 61st anniversary and to honor the past commanders of Post 39. Commander Marshall Helms presided.

The post cited three of its past commanders for outstanding records of fidelity and service. D.J. Whichard Jr. was presented as a legionnaire whose activity included attendance at the caucuses in Paris, France, and later in St. Louis, Missouri, where the idea of a veterans organization took shape. He also attended the Minneapolis meeting where the constitution and by-laws for the American Legion were adopted. He later served as post commander and was the first president of the Pitt County Fair.

Sam A. Whitehurst was recognized for his long service to Post 39 and was commended for his zeal in the decoration of graves on Memorial Day for many years.

W. Connor Eagles, a past commander, was recognized for his role in the establishment and construction of the present post home. He was also applauded for his outstanding record of construction of buildings at the fairground, which house many antique tools and equipment. Several antique buildings were moved to this site and restored.

Following the recognition of past commanders, the audience was entertained with a program of organ and accordion music given by Otto Dykstra. About 75 legionnaires, wives and auxiliary members attended.

Czech Newspaper Accuses Carter

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — The Czechoslovak Communist Party newspaper Rude Pravo charged Saturday that President Carter is using federal funds to win votes in his reelection campaign.

The newspaper said "Washington has at its disposal $29 billion for assistance to individual states and cities," and "the way (this money) has been distributed in recent months and weeks clearly shows Carter's message: he who will support me will be rewarded, he who will not will regret it.

No Guarantee On Iran's Freeing U.S. Hostages

By United Press International

An aide to Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said Saturday that Iran's new parliament would decide the fate of the 50 Americans held hostage in the U.S. Embassy in "four to five weeks."

But the official, presidential aide Sadegh Tabatabai, also said Iran could offer no guarantee that parliament would agree to free the Americans, now ending their 20th week as hostages of the militants occupying the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

"A decision can be expected in some four to five weeks," Tabatabai said in an interview with the West German newspaper Ruhr Zeitung.

"We will have a functioning parliament in about three weeks, I am sure that this will be its first task," he said.

Tabatabai's remarks were also the first indication by an Iranian official that Iran's new parliament, which has been charged by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini with deciding the fate of the hostages, would be able to convene more or less on schedule.

The first of two rounds of parliamentary elections were held last week but the results, clouded in a controversy over allegations of voting fraud, have not yet been announced.

Tabatabai said it was still impossible to predict what the parliament would decide concerning the hostages.

"I cannot predict that. That hinges on the domestic situation and on the policy of the American government," he said.

American policy, for the moment at least, appeared to be to take a low-keyed approach to the 140-day-old crisis and wait for two developments — the formation of the Iranian parliament and the verdict of the World Court, before which the United States took its case against Iran last week.

The court is considering a U.S. request to order Iran to free the hostages and its deliberations in The Hague, Netherlands, are expected to take several weeks.

Another problem for the United States — a problem because it could anger Iranian authorities into taking an evener tougher line on the hostage crisis — concerned the failing health of the exiled shah.

Rains, Snow, Floods Lash Scattered Areas

By JACK LESAR
United Press International

Floodwaters spawned by spring rains surged through roads and lapped at the doorsteps of homes in New York and across much of the South Saturday, forcing families to flee and stranding motorists.

As much as 9 inches of snow fell on parts of southeastern New York while up to 8 inches of rain swamped other areas of the state. Two to 5 inches of rain doused southern New England and strong winds raged from Virginia to New England.

Roanoke, Va., and Johstown, Pa., reported 55 mph winds.

Snow stretched from the lower Great Lakes to the northern Appalachians. Snow also spread across the Dakotas, with Mobridge, S.D., reporting 4 inches and Aberdeen, S.D., and Bismarck, N.D., each reporting 3 inches.

The spring's first storm dumped more than 8 inches of rain in the Catskills in less than 24 hours, causing widespread flooding in eastern New York state, closing many roads and raising creeks to record levels.

A state policeman in Hunter, N.Y., reported severe flooding. Five people were forced from their homes and others were rescued from the roofs of swamped cars.

"Just the main roads are passable," the officer said.

Rivers and streams pushed over their banks across much of the South.

The swollen Tombigbee River has forced 75 to 100 families from their homes in the Columbus, Miss., area — not far from the Alabama border.

Lowndes County Civil Defense Director Ray Gildea said the river was 6.5 feet above flood stage and had flooded about 40,000 acres — including several streets along the river in Columbus.

He said some 150 to 200 homes in low-lying areas were cutoff because of flooded roads. About 75 to 100 families left their homes and moved in with friends and relatives, he said.

"Since this is an event that happens every four or five years most of them stay with friends or families," he said. "A few cases need outside assistance, but in most cases they take care of themselves," Gildea said.

7 Dead In Crash

HOUSTON (UPI) — Seven people died, six outright, and three survived in the flaming crash of a twin-engine commuter plane whose right engine failed as it lifted off the runway at Hobby Airport.

The survivors had to rip through the wreckage of the plane, crawling and running through the flames, Friday night after it careered into two planes and a helicopter on the ground, finally smashing into a hangar and three cars.

"We had just taken off, we hadn't even cleared the runway yet and we just lost power," said Dan McGee, a Baylor University student who survived with minor injuries.

"I could hear the pilot saying keep the nose up. He was telling the co-pilot to keep the nose up."

McGee said there was a sudden power surge and then the twin-prop Eagle Commuter Airline Inc. craft went down. He said he was unconscious for a moment.

Officals said the plane experienced a failure in its right engine as it lifted off the runaway and dropped out of the air. There was no indication that anyone on the ground was injured.

One of the four who broke out of the airplane's flaming shell, then crawled and ran to safety, died of burns about an hour later at a local hospital.

Attempts to rescue the survivors were hampered by high flames fed by the aviation fuel.

Gerald Johnson, N.C. Author, Dies

He had been in failing health for several months, according to relatives.

Over a period of 50 years, Johnson published more than 30 books in which he noted his observations of the American people, their attitudes and backgrounds, delved into American history, and produced biographies of several presidents.

His articles appeared in publications such as The New Republic. In 1954 he became a contributing editor of that liberal weekly and produced a column for each issue.

Johnson, a native of Riverton, N.C., graduated from Wake Forest College in 1912 and joined the news staff of The Lexington Dispatch. Two years later he went to the Greensboro Daily News, where he stayed until 1924 when he became one of the first professors of journalism at the University of North Carolina.

Johnson, who had made his home in Baltimore since 1926, was a former editorial writer for the Baltimore Sunpapers.

He also served as a speechwriter for the presidential campaigns of the late Adlai E. Stevenson.

Stevenson, who traveled to Baltimore to attend Johnson's 70th birthday party, said of Johnson, "He is the critic and conscience of our time. Every friend and reader of Gerald Johnson is in his debt for a thousand rescues from boredom in an age when humor is suspect and conformity a virtue."

Former Maryland Governor Marvin Mandel proclaimed the author's 80th birthday "Gerald White Johnson Day" in the state, and the mayor of Baltimore at that time, Thomas D'Alesandro III, made a similar proclamation on behalf of the city.

Claims Funding Disparities

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A University of North Carolina faculty group has called for an investigation into alleged disparities in funding for men and women.

The group, the Faculty Council of UNC also adopted Friday a resolution asking for more equality in tenure review.

Both steps were among 10 recommendations made by the university faculty's Committee on the Status of Women, which produced a 28-page report criticizing UNC's policies toward the hiring, promotion, tenure and salaries of women faculty members.

The 100-member council approved eight of the resolutions, some with minor alterations, and referred to committees proposals calling for stronger grievance procedures and record-keeping by the faculty.

The group asked that all university programs, including the Morehead Scholarships, be made a part of the investigation into funding practices.

School of Deaf May Appeal Ruling

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina School for the Deaf will probably appeal a judge's ruling Friday ordering it to reopen one of its facilities, the school's superintendent said.

Rance Henderson, the superintendent of the organization school, said, "We do have the right to appeal, and we will probably appeal."

The appeal of the ruling would go to the state Appeals Court.

Judge James H. Pou Bailey of Wake County Superior Court ruled in favor of parents of deaf children at the school, who have battled for months to get the early childhood education facility at the school reopened.

Drug Approved For Tito

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The U.S. government has slashed red tape so ailing Yugolavian President Josip Broz Tito can be treated with an experimental drug, says the Indianapolis company that makes moxalactan.

Moxalactan is an anti-biotic not yet licensed by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, said Ron Culp, a spokesman for Eli Lilly and Co.

"It's a potent, new life saving anti-biotic that combats a wide range of severe infections," said Culp said.

He said that the drug appeared in early clinical trials to save many patients with serious infections whose bodies rejected other antibiotics.

Yugoslavian medical teams treating the world leader called Lilly on Friday to ask if they might try the drug, Culp said.

Awarded $7.1 Million In Suit

RIVERHEAD, N.Y. (AP) — A 10-year-old girl who was left with brain damage after a tonsillectomy seven years ago has been awarded $7.1 million, by a state Supreme Court jury.

According to testimony during the six-week trial, Anita Street of West Babylon has no control over body movements and needs to be diapered and hand-fed as a result of the operation. She fails to respond to intellectual stimuli and cannot walk, talk, sit or stand on her own.

The suit contended the youngster was administered an excessive dose of the anesthesia Halothane during the surgery, causing her heart to stop and deprived her brain of oxygen.

Present System Is Working

Installation of a 911 emergency phone system ran into quick objections from county law enforcement agencies which would be involved in it.

The system would mean that any emergency call could be made to the 911 number. Then the proper police, fire or rescue department would be dispatched.

The number is a universal one which is being encouraged for use nationwide. Presently there is a county-wide fire and rescue number which can be called for dispatch of those units. Municipal police departments are called by individual numbers.

General representatives of municipal police departments objected to the system at a hearing held Monday night. Cost was cited as a major factor. Installation of the system and maintainance is not cheap, and the cost must be borne by the government agencies.

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson saw the system working well as it is now, and Greenville Chief Glenn Cox felt that we should save the money the new system would cost.

Bethel Chief Walter Gray and Ayden Chief Tommy Burney felt their departments could better serve their communities with the present set-up.

The advantage to the 911 system is that everyone will know the emergency number to call. It is also maintained that in the long run it will save money in dispatching emergency service, even though the initial cost is much more.

It is a fact that the present system seems to be working efficiently and probably there is no need for any quick change to the 911 system. Down the road, the universal number probably will be required, and we had just as well be looking at it and planning for it.

Plans-Change Caught Postal Service

Oh, the stamps may have value — perhaps considerable, if you can get one, but the stamps, cards, and airmail envelopes are being withdrawn from sale because the United States will not be participating in the Moscow based Olympics.

Like many other American businesses the Postal Service got caught in the sudden change of plans.

Watauga Seeks Bar Salt

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Another winter's snow and ice have come and gone, leaving behind a lingering damage which will cost Tar Heels heavily.

Only in recent years have the state and local governments taken to spreading salt on the highways whenever it snows. A campaign against the practice has been launched in mountainous Watauga County where steep terrain and a weather pattern apart from the rest of the state make winter driving particularly hazardous.

Petitions signed by more than 2,000 Wataugans protesting salt to de-ice the highways have been presented to Gov. Jim Hunt and Secretary of Transportation Tom Bradshaw.

The cost of salting the roads far exceeds the $50 per ton it costs to spread the stuff on the roads. Rusted-out vehicles from more northern climes bear moot witness to the damage done chrome and metal. Salt also can crack concrete, erode pavement, and affect roadside guardrails, bridge railings, and signposts.

According to reports published in the Watauga Democrat, the campaign against salt began with Kent Adams, co-owner of a building supply business in Vilas. Adams insists that the people of Watauga should have the right to decide what goes on their roads and what doesn't.

Solar Support

The sun and conservation hold the greatest promise for solving America's energy problems, according to a survey conducted by the Union Carbide Corporation.

Pollsters asked 1,000 individuals a host of questions about energy. Improving the energy situation for the least money should involve saving energy and use of solar energy, said most participants, while expansion of nuclear and development of synthetics fell way down the list.

For advancement with the least damage to the environment, half the people favor solar; while 30 percent mention conservation. Asked what the nation "should depend on most," respondents put solar first (38 percent), coal next (29 percent) and conservation third (21 percent).

Improved Schools

To help them prepare a new budget, the State Board of Education and staff involved more than 1,000 parents, teachers, principals, superintendents, local school board members, and others in an exercise.

Participants were asked how they would spend $100 million to improve education in North Carolina. Reducing class size won as the most important priority.

Other main points agreed upon by participants were increased money for instructional supplies; additional librarians, guidance counselors, assistant principals, etc.; more money for fuel; and improved teacher quality, among others.

One particular program

now being put in place in North Carolina would seek to assure better teachers through a Quality Assurance system involving college training, counseling, testing and certification procedures.

Local school board members and parents were alone in supporting the effort to boost quality of new teachers and upgrade that of those now in the classrooms.

Sunday Morning Notes

Somewhere back in the days when the philosophy that the "mail must go through" developed, a newspaper tradition of publishing at all costs came about.

Thus it is not difficult to understand why newspapers fear a fire or any other disaster which disables their equipment.

All newspaper employees could empathize with the folks at the Raleigh "News and Observer" and "Raleigh Times" last week when a major fire swept through their press room.

It was a crippling blow but the people from all departments of the newspapers rushed to work. The N&O came out with an eight-page adless edition on Monday morning, and "The Raleigh Times" published an abbreviated edition Monday afternoon.

Other papers are quick to offer assistance at such times, even competitors, and the N&O was printed at Durham and Fayetteville.

Newspapers, like all businesses, face disastrous situations at times, although not all of them are of the magnitude of that which the Raleigh papers faced last weekend.

Back in the days when type was set in lines cast on Line-o-types, the danger was frequently dropping the type, sending the lines scattering and necessitating re-setting or re-assembling.

One old printer told us once that while he was working in Sanford 40 galleys of type (over 800 inches) were assembled for a special edition. That amount of type was a great output for the Line-o-type operators. It was stored on shelves in a wooden rack.

The type was put in "chases" which were lifted and carried to a press where they were lowered on the "beds" for printing. Ocassionally as the front page was being positioned to be put in place, the entire thing would drop out on the floor. A major unscrambling job and hours of delay were the result.

Prior to Line-o-types each letter was picked up by hand, assembled in a "stick" to make the various lines which were later assembled in a form.

There is a story about the early days of "The Daily Reflector."

The newspaper was moving from one side of Evans Street to the other. One of the printers was to carry the front page, assembled letter-by-letter, across the street where it was to be printed on the newly installed press.

The page got heavy as he crossed the street, so he balanced the page flat on his head. Unfortunately his head went through and all the in-

(The Wilson Times)

President Carter now intends to present a balanced 1981 budget as the centerpiece of his new anti-inflation strategy. This will mean some $15 billion in cuts from his original budget requests which contained a deficit of $15.8 billion.

Almost no one thinks this will do much to reduce the nation's inflation rate. One good question, then, is why the president is doing this? For one reason, he has to do something; and another, is that most citizens believe governmental deficit spending is inflationary.

And those who think the federal government is the big culprit will be reassured that the president has at least done something.

Carter's anti-inflation program will probably include some selective credit controls and a new initiative to conserve energy. But since a major share of the nation's inflation is coming from the high cost of energy and high energy rates — neither of which would be directly affected — a balanced budget would not be expected to help much in the short term.

There are many critics of the balanced budget approach, and they maintain that by balancing the budget the administration will be trading little gain against inflation for reduced economic output and increased unemployment.

They also feel that the emphasis on a balanced budget may mislead inflation-weary citizens into expecting too much, resulting in an even more disillusioned public. The administration is concerned about the possibility of inflation worsening. Financial markets have been in turmoil since the latest reports and the release of the Carter red-ink budget for 1981.

Charles Schultze, Carter's chief economic adviser, says it is vital to keep higher energy prices from being locked into the nation's underlying inflation rate.

Dissidence is evident at high levels of the administration also. Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, who is reluctant to speak out publicly, is among those who oppose budget cutting, saying it will not significantly reduce inflation but will cause hardship for many Americans.

In spite of all the talk, price increases in practically all categories appear to be spreading like wildfire with no means in sight to bring the situation under control.

Teddy Ignores 'Rules'

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

CHICAGO (AP) — In defeat, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy keeps changing the ground rules, always saying the election he hasn't lost yet is the one that really will count in his challenge to President Carter's renomination.

But there's one rule he can't change, and that is the proportional representation system under which most of the remaining Democratic primaries and caucuses will be conducted.

Under that system, Democratic nominating votes are doled out to the candidates in line with their shares of the popular vote, statewide in some contests, by congressional district in others.

That's the way it will work in New York Tuesday in the presidential primary election Kennedy now calls essential, with 282 delegates at stake. That also is the rule in Connecticut, for 54 delegates.

That was not the process in Illinois, where delegates were elected separately in last Tuesday's primary, and were not bound by the popular vote for presidential candidates. That's the old-fashioned way, a holdover from the days before Democratic reform commissions started changing the system.

In theory, it should have worked to Kennedy's advantage, because he had the support of what's left of the Chicago political organization, which used to deliver delegates on demand. But the organization is a shambles, and Kennedy's chief ally, Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne, may have been more a liability than a help.

Kennedy not only lost the election, he was wiped out in the delegate competition, 165 to 14. Those 14 came from the Chicago area, where Carter got 35.

Defeated in New Hampshire, where once he had seemed unbeatable, Kennedy said the economic issues he was stressing "are going to be shown to be the forceful, powerful, domi-

THE INSIDE REPORT

Carter Back In A Corner

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Carter was so aggrieved by tough questioning during a picture-taking session with 30 Jewish leaders in the East Room of the White House March 4 that he stalked out before any pictures could be taken — bringing into sharp focus his Israel dilemma.

The dilemma: Jimmy Carter has driven himself into a corner by attempting to reconcile his honest convictions over the future of the West Bank with his contortions to satisfy the important Jewish constituency he needs for re-election. The two are unreconcilable.

Until his retraction of the anti-Israel vote by the U.S. March 1 in the United Nations Security Council, Carter had seemed to be handling the Arab-Israeli time bomb discreetly enough to avoid an explosion. The U.N. vote ended that impression.

On March 4, Commerce Secretary Philip Klutznick arranged to have the president go to the East Room where 30 erican Jewish leaders from the World Jewish Congress had been invited to have their pictures taken with Jimmy Carter. Carter was still steaming over the violent criticism he had been taking from Israeli and American Jewish leaders in the U.S. over the Security Council vote.

When he entered, he apologized for what he called the "glitch" in his failure to have understood full implications of the U.N. vote. Then, "warm and friendly," according to one Jewish leader who was there, he smiled and said that, "If you can stand to have your picture taken with me, now is the time."

Instead, Arthur Schneier, a prominent New York rabbi, rose to ask this question: How could Israel be certain that there wouldn't be another "glitch" in the future? That angered Jimmy Carter; he gave a chilly reply, cancelled the picture session, turned on his heel and walked away.

The president's reaction and the question that provoked it were made inevitable by Carter. He has been stretching credibility to convince the Jewish community and Israel that there is not all that much difference between him and them on Jerusalem and the West Bank.

Rosalynn Carter, the president's alter ego on the campaign trail, has been telling Jewish audiences exactly what they want to hear. Even Egypt agrees, she told the international biennial convention of B'nai B'rith here March 12, "that Jerusalem never be divided" — a "commitment" that, she said, has not changed.

Those words make it sound as though Carter is nearly in step with Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin on his pledge that Jerusalem never again will be politically partitioned. Actually, the official U.S. position is unchanged from 1969, as Carter pointedly told Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in a letter written during the Camp David Mideast summit. The policy is that East Jerusalem "is occupied territory," as are Palestinian lands held by Israel on the conquered West Bank.

Rosalynn Carter's formulation is explained by politicians running Carter's reelection campaign as meaning the U.S. will never allow a "physical" division of Jerusalem — division by barbed wire as it was until Israel seized East Jerusalem in the 1967 war. An Arab diplomat friendly to Carter told us: "Technically, Mrs. Carter was perhaps correct. But the undivided city, pledge carries much stronger implications to American Jews, who see it as justification of Israel's claim to eternal possession of all Jerusalem."

The dilemma Carter has imposed on himself by pretending to be more in tune with Israel than he is cannot be resolved by flimflam-

Strength For Today

ON WHICH WE CAN STAND

Change, change, change — nothing is the same as it was yesterday, or even an hour ago. The mutability of all things on earth can become very discouraging, and even alarming to us.

Yet, the eternal God is unchangeable. The stars may change in a million years, but beyond the stars there is an area of the immutable. From the shifting of everything here on earth, from the ebb and flow of events, from the change of landscape and the milling about of earth's crowds and the kaleidoscopic change of events arises our sense of insecurity.

But to men and women of faith the stabilizing fact of life is that amid all this change there is something that never changes. The eternal God is our refuge, and underneath are his everlasting arms. Jesus Christ came to give us a complete and perfect sense of that security — the security of omnipotent power, true justice, divine love.

The Risks In More Inflation

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — If current inflation were to continue for the next 20 years, it would take courage, a calculator and a big wheelbarrow just to go shopping, because what costs $1 now would be $27.39 then.

If housing prices rose at the overall inflation rate your $60,000 residence would have a value of $1,643,580, which wouldn't be so bad if your $20,000 income rose at the same rate. It would be $547,860.

But if experience is a guide, incomes won't rise at the same rate as inflation. A likely possibility would be half that rate, which still produces a good looking income until it is matched against prices.

By today's standards, 20 years is too distant a projection — maybe 20 times too far if you judge from the experience of "experts," who've been unable to establish credibility for even a few months ahead.

Try five years. In that time a roast that now costs $3.25 would be up to $7.41, a $1 hamburger, if such exists, would cost $2.28, a $6,000 car would go for $13,680, and a $60,000 house would sell at $136,800.

To indulge in such numerical projections isn't to fantasize. Too many fantasies have come true, as J. Peter Grace showed this week in another of his documentations of where we've been and where we're going.

Grace, chairman of W.R. Grace & Co., a company whose sales total more than $4 billion by today's reckoning, is to put it simply, ticked off by what is going on in. So is his esteemed economics department.

The result has been a series of detailed examinations that seeks to portray in statistics how taxing policy, inflation and other public actions have almost ruined incentives to produce.

Since projected numbers, such as those already referred to, are shocking to the point of unbelievability, Grace and his men have delved into the past, using numbers to detail exactly where we have been.

Real gross national product, for example, was growing at a rate of 4.7 percent a year in the six years ending with 1968. In the next six years it fell to just 3.4 percent. And in the most recent six only 2.5. That's a deterioration of 46 8 percent over th 1968-1979 period.

At the same time, unemployment averaged 4.4 percent of the labor force in the six years through 1968, 4.7 from there through 1973, and 6.8 percentofor the most recent six years. Deterioration: 54.5 percent.

Did anything go up? Yes, inflation. It averaged just 2.4 percent in the six years through 1968, more than doubled to 4.9 in the six years through 1973, and leaped to 8.5 percent in the latest six years. The total worsening in the 1968-1979 period amounted to 254.2 percent.

To the editor:

I thought you might like to know of my resignation from WNCT-TV, where I have been employed as Staff Meteorologist serving Eastern North Carolina.

Due to the imminent acquisition of my home and life's investment on the Currituck County Outer Banks by the federal government, I no longer have any desire nor reason to remain in that area. Neither the state nor local government gave realistic support to the drastic position a small handful of residents of this remote area were put into due to federal land grabbing in the guise of environmental protection.

To see one's life's work and dreams disappear before one's eyes after suffering years of duress and hardship in a losing battle to protect what is rightfully yours is too great a lump to swallow.

In good conscience, I can no longer support the state with my professional efforts and tax dollars.

I leave many friends in Eastern North Carolina — friends for whom I have great affection and esteem. I must now vigorously pursue my career in the twilight of my years and rebuild my family's security elsewhere.

Congressman Walter Jones and his staff were the only ones who stood beside our efforts to protect our properties from federal incursion. To the Congressman, my personal appreciation and continued respect and admiration.

I leave Greenville with many regrets and fond memories. My wife, Lucille, and I bid a fond farewell to all of Eastern North Carolina as we look to a brighter future elsewhere.

To the editor:

In ten short months our legislators will no doubt again consider the Equal Rights Amendment. We can only hope and pray they will once more dismiss this pernicious proposal. From the Amendment's inception, conservative thinkers from Sam Ervin to George Gilder have repeatedly decried it — charging that, if passed, the ERA would lead in revolutionary and UN-Christian directions. These men have convincingly proven their case. The ERA is unreasonable and unscriptural.

Notwithstanding this evidence, many fine and godly Christians either refuse to oppose or actually endorse the proposed Amendment. That Christians have innocently allowed themselves to be so swept into this popular tide of radicalism greatly saddens us. We pray for a change of heart among the people of God. We hope Christians everywhere will denounce the ERA — that they will stand in defense of the family against the onslaught of secular humanism.

To the editor:

Folks, wake up! Something funny (or disastrous) is taking place in our city — Greenville, "Hub of the East." A new city manager came to our city about a year and a half ago. Now, this man is completely new to our city, a stranger among us, a person hired with our tax money, a person of authority. He should be concerned about the wishes of the people here. In a short year and a half, our rescue squad has been disbanded, done away with, destroyed. Our fire department has been forced to take on the added responsibility of rescue services. The fire department has always operated with a shortage of manpower and have their hands full fighting fires. The firefighters and rescue personnel are very upset over this situation and they have every right to be. I might add that doing two jobs for the price of one doesn't please anyone these days.

How about the latest move by city officials? It is now Greenville Police/Animal Control Department and no longer the Greenville Police Deaprtment. We have the Fire/Rescue Department and the Police/Animal Control Department — why not the Recreation/Public Works Department? Or maybe the Greenville Transit/Cemetery Division?

I, for one, cannot understand how one hired person, a stranger to Greenville, can completely destroy our vital services. What is even stranger to me is why our newly elected mayor and City Council and the Greenville Chamber of Commerce could allow this to happen. Is it possible that the cities of Washington, N.C. and Morganton, N.C. had similar problems? As a concerned citizen, I insist this situation should be investigated. Would the citizens of Greenville be asking too much of the Chamber of Commerce to investigate the rescue squad situation? We need the Greenville Rescue Squad and they deserve our best.

mery. He is justly praised for high courage in fighting Begin's "illegal" land acquisitions in East Jerusalem and the West Bank. But Carter's backtracking on the U.N. resolution, to persuade Jewish voters he is really on their side, only intensifies his problem.

Observing the president's conduct, America's European allies are losing hope about U.S. policy and instead are moving to force Israel out of the West Bank as soon ae the May deadline for West Bank autonomy passes. That will compel Carter, partly to offset Israel's nearly total isolation, to defend Israeli policies that Carter believes are against the U.S. national interest and to which he himself can never subscribe.

The Israeli issue in American politics has bedeviled many presidents, but none so much as Jimmy Carter. Trapped by his public repudiation of the U.N. vote, the ensuing campaign to convince his Jewish constituency he is truly sorry has made it certain that he will be bedeviled even more in the future, as shown by that unused camera in the East Room.

nant issues of our party in the state of Illinois, in the state of New York, in the state of Pennsylvania."

Kennedy got 30 percent of the vote in Illinois. Carter 65 percent.

The referendum, he said, will be in New York. Kennedy didn't explain why that primary will be a measurement of the issues if Illinois was not.

Carter has lost only one primary so far, in Kennedy's Massachusetts home. But even in that landslide defeat, he came away with 34 delegates. Kennedy got 77.

What that means is that while Kennedy can continue citing contests ahead as the ones that will really count, the arithmetic is working the president's way. And every week it becomes more difficult for the challenger to turn it around.

True, Sometimes Best Stories Not In Print

By NOEL YANCEY

Newspapermen have a saying that the best stories they encounter on their rounds never get into the newspapers, but they treasure these anecdotes to tell each other during what used to be called "bull sessions," which sometimes lasted all night.

One of the yarns I enjoyed was about the time the late R. E. "Fleet" Williams of the "News and Observer" covered the big fire at Dorothea Dix Hospital.

Many years later I came to know Fleet well, to respect him highly as a newspaperman and to value greatly his friendship. During those years Fleet and I often lunched together, and sometimes we would drive him home in the afternoon after a day's work.

"It's one of those things you didn't talk to Fleet about," said Herb O'Keef, who retired a few years ago as editor of the "Raleigh Times" after a long career there, and on the "News and Observer" his tenure included a stint as a reporter when Williams was city editor.

The story as I heard it from other "News and Observer" staffers was that Fleet was sent to cover the fire on April 10, 1926 that destroyed the west wing of the big hospital's Main Building. News accounts of the fire said it "was regarded as nothing short of a miracle" that no one was killed or seriously injured in the evacuation of 400 male patients from the west wing.

But these patients and several hundred others who were evacuated from their quarters created a problem. Authorities were afraid they might be injured. So, it was decided to transfer them temporarily to Central Prison, half a mile away, until the fire was brought under control. A group of N. C. State ROTC students, who were assisting National Guardsmen at the fire scene, clasped hands and formed a human wall around the mental patients and began a tortuous walk to the prison. The story was that somehow or other Williams got inside the human chain and could not get out despite his frantic protestations that he was a newspaperman.

"I heard they locked him up with the crazy folks," said Frank Daniels, now News and Observer board chairman. But Daniels said he did not know what actually had happened because he was away at college at the time.

"I remember the story they told," said Bob Brooks, now News and Observer managing editor who did not join the paper's staff until many years after the fire. "He went out there to cover a fire, and they mistook him for an inmate. As I understood it, they would not let him out."

I went to the microfilm copies of the News and Observer in the State Library in my effort to get the details of what had happened. The microfilms contain only a hint. A story on page 2 of the News and Observer for April 11, 1926 tells of the N. C. State students being formed into a human chain to march the patients to Central Prison.

The account said that none escaped because "so well were the State College students that such escape efforts would have met with little success as was speedily found out by one

Granny Midwife Gives More Than A Service

EUTAW, Al. – "I have a good many things to go against," Margaret Charles Smith acknowledges as she goes about her daily rounds in Greene County. During her thirty years of experience as granny midwife for this rural blackbelt area, she has grown familiar with its problems; problems which include poverty, disease, and lack of preventive health care.

Many of the hundreds of babies Miss Margaret has successfully delivered have grown up to leave their birthplace and its problems behind. "So many that I delivered have scattered," she says. "Some have gone to Tuscaloosa. Some have gone North." But there are those like herself who have chosen to remain where they were born. It is among these families that Miss Margaret, now widowed, carries on a tradition. She has lived to see one generation of children mature and she now turns her time and energies to the second generation. "That's my baby," she will remark as she passes by a house and sees a child playing in the yard.

While Margaret Charles Smith's reputation is based on her obvious skills as a midwife, women who know her stress another, less tangible, quality. "The pain don't be quite as bad," one mother explained, "when she can be there. She holds your hand and talks to you. I don't know what all she be saying, but it helps." Apparently other women agree because Miss Margaret has received requests for her services from both black and white women of all income levels.

Like many granny midwives, Miss Margaret's formal education is limited. "I worked the fields," she says. "Plowed just like a man." Her education as a midwife has been an informal one, based on years of first hand observation and actual experience. "I learned a lot under Ella Anderson (a midwife). I was also with my husband's first cousin's wife and her thirteen babies." It was during one of those births that she was observed by a local physician, Dr. Don Smith, who encouraged her to practice midwifery. She remembers, "He said, 'Margaret, why don't you be a midwife? You'd make a good one.' I said, 'No sir, no way, I don't want to be no midwife.' But he just kept on worrying me 'til he got me to say yes."

For women who cannot afford private health insurance or who do not qualify for public health insurance, Miss Margaret (whose fee is $50) provides a safe and acceptable alternative. However, the passage of time has brought changes to the role of the midwife, and as a result, in Greene County as throughout the state their numbers steadily decrease. Medicaid, introduced in the 1960s, was a major change that made private physicians more accessible and dramatically reduced the midwife's patient load. At the same time physician support of granny midwives began to decrease. Thus when Miss Margaret and the other ninety-five midwives currently practicing in Alabama retire, no new lay midwives will be allowed to practice.

In the meantime Miss Margaret continues to work, often under less than ideal conditions. She has delivered babies in the back seats of cars and on fireplace hearths with only a kerosene lamp for light. At one delivery she recalls, "You could look up through the house top and see the stars."

Some people might not consider the rural communities surrounding Eutaw – places like Forkland, Mt. Hebron, and Boligee – to be ideal work sites. But it's where Margaret Charles Smith works best. She continues to live in the house where she was born 73 years ago. "I ain't never left," she says of the house where she grew up with her grandmother, a former slave.

Among the people who have come to know and trust her, she is a strong advocate of health education and works one day a week at the family planning clinic of the local health department. Wearing a white turban and white uniform she is a familiar sight in the community, oftentimes accompanied by student nurses from the nearby University of Alabama, in Tuscaloosa. Although the public health department provides no formal training programs for lay midwives, Miss Margaret takes advantage of training programs offered through other sources. Education and experience – she believes in both.

When asked about retirement she says with characteristic reserve, "I may work on a year or two longer if my health holds out. It's been pretty good so far." Devoted to place and family, Margaret Charles Smith continues a lifelong work of making basic health care available to all women. "I'm here to stay," she says in her deep and measured voice.

Behavior Modification Theory Still Doubtful

By GAIL MICHAELS

I am always wary of any theory which asserts that behavior modification will work on a normal, disturbing, undisturbed child. In the first place, such theories assume that the parent can control the child's environment. In the second place, they assume that the parent can outwit the child.

Now any parent who has ever tried arguing with a child knows that this isn't true. A child's mind may not work like an adult's, but that doesn't mean it's inferior. It certainly has nothing in common with behavior mod's rats and pigeons. Meg's mind works more like a mule's.

Or perhaps a goat's. Because she automatically responds to any statement with a but. If I tell her that she needs to clean up her room, she says, "But if I clean it up now, it will be dirty again by tonight."

If I tell her that candy isn't good for her, she says, "It may not be good for you, but it sure is good for me."

And if I tell her she needs a bath, she says, "But I don't stink yet."

I don't even need to be present for Meg to argue. I once sent her to her room because she refused to accept the answer "no" when she asked me to read "Go Dog Go" for the seventh time in a row.

"I'm not arguing," she sobbed to her teddy bear. "I'm trying to tell her something important, and I can't get her to listen. That's not arguing. I am trying to tell her that if she doesn't cooperate with me, I won't learn anything. And if she makes me stay in here all by myself, I'll get stupid and I won't have anyone to talk to and I'll get shy. And I won't love her anymore!"

I can handle these monologues. I merely insert earplugs. It's the prolonged discussions that are so dangerous. She always gets the best of me, especially when I'm trying to explain the difference between right and wrong.

In about half of these discussions she points out how illogical I am in the first place for disciplining her when it was her playmate who made her so mad and forced her to retaliate. And when I undeniably have logic on my side, she will argue convincingly that it doesn't apply to her.

"You punished me too much," she told me one day. "I'm just a little girl, and I don't know better."

"Meg, that's not true. You knew better than to practice drawing your alphabet on the kitchen floor."

"I forgot. Little girls often forget."

"No, they don't. I'll bet that before you ever picked up that magic marker, your conscience told you that Mommy wouldn't like it."

"My good conscience told me that Mommy wouldn't like it. My bad conscience said to do it anyway."

"But you knew that you would get punished so why didn't you listen to your good conscience?"

She shrugged her shoulders. "My bad conscience is louder."

How Do They Kick The Habit Of Federal Aid?

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — In the current issue of State Government News, the lead article begins with a cheerful announcement: "The good news for states in President Carter's fiscal 1981 budget is his support for renewal of the $6.9 billion general revenue sharing program, including $2.3 billion for states over the next five years."

Well, many a slip, and don't count your chickens before they hatch, and the best laid plans go oft awry. Thirteen days ago Mr. Carter went through an inspiring experience. He was born again as a budget cutter, filled with the zeal of frugality. The $2.3 billion that had been earmarked for, the states in fiscal '81 has fallen on the cutting room floor. And high time.

Federal aid to the states and localities goes back a hundred years or more, at least to the time of the land grant colleges. The flow increased from a trickle to a stream with federal aid for highways. The stream became a river: federal aid for hospitals, federal aid for sewage disposal plants, federal aid for education. Then the river became a torrent: federal aid for law enforcement, for this, for that, for everything under the sun.

And in 1972, came GRS — general revenue sharing with no strings attached, or at least with very few strings attached. It was a bad idea then, and it remains a bad idea to this day. The best that ever could be said of GRS was that it demanded less bureaucracy than the categorical plans demanded. GRS permitted the states to make independent decisions without the specific approval of federal planners.

But federal aid is narcotic. Fifty states and 39,000 local governments now are hooked on it. Mr. Carter's modest proposal to eliminate the state share of GRS, while continuing the local handouts, is certain to set off an uproar among governors, state boards of education and other high-octane lobbyists. At hearings before a Senate subcommittee last summer, Abe Beame, former mayor of New York City, strongly urged that GRS be fully funded for the next four years — with an increase added to reflect inflation. Richard Fulton, mayor of Nashville, characterized GRS as "vital" and "indispensable" to local governments. Tennessee's Governor Lamar Alexander said it would be a "grave mistake" to reduce the states' share of GRS. Within the family of American government, we have raised a generation of addicts.

When Congress launched the first four-year program of general revenue sharing in 1972, proponents argued that the states and localities were broke while the U. S. Treasury was flush. A more absurd argument seldom has been heard in the halls of Congress. The Treasury was in fact running its printing presses night and day. Some localities were in trouble, largely for want of revenue sources in addition to their local property taxes, but state governments were mostly in clover.

That condition continues today. The federal treasury has no money to spare. This year's deficit will run to $40 billion or more. Mr. Carter has pledged a balanced budget for fiscal '81, and has announced a series of draconian measures to achieve it. Will Congress resist the mounting pressures and stop the fiscal hemorrhage? Don't bet on it.

The fiscal contentions are the least significant. The constitutional issues are vastly more important. When federal aid to state highways began to loom large, a tenuous constitutional justification was advanced. These were "post roads," and Congress had been delegated power to provide for them. Grants for sewage disposal were explained in terms of interstate commerce. How the Hill-Burton grants for hospital construction were rationalized, I cannot remember.

But after a while, most members of Congress abandoned the Constitution altogether. Who could justify a federal grant for a local choral group? For a county sheriff? For some gimcrack experiment in education? Who cared? The categorical programs were wonderfully popular, and GRS was more so. And for GRS there was no constitutional basis whatever.

Nothing much can be done about federal aid in the current fiscal year. A moral commitment, if not a legal commitment, compels congressional support of GRS through next September. Beginning in 1981, one program after another should be phased out. The vice in all these handouts is that they give state and local governments the pleasure of spending the taxpayers' money without the pain of raising it, and they create a weakening condition of dependency on Washington. Withdrawal will be hard; continued addiction, I submit, would be worse.

or two who got inside the lines by mistake and wanted to get out." Whether Fleet wrote that particular story, which was one of several the paper carried on the fire, I could not determine. In those days, newspapers did not give their reporters bylines to show who wrote an important story.

Fleet, whose career with the News and Observer included sports editor, city editor, Washington correspondent and associate editor, was a crack newspaperman, and he went on to cover many top stories for the paper. These included textile strikes and the attendant disorders that convulsed the state in 1929. He covered the trials at Charlotte of Fred Erwin Beal and six co-defendants who were sentenced to long prison terms in the slaying of Gastonia Police Chief O. F. Aderholt.

O'Keef recalled that Beal, a professed Communist, and his fellow defendants fled to Russia. And after Beal, who became thoroughly disenchanted with Communism, had returned to the United States, he invited Williams to interview him before he surrendered to North Carolina authorities to serve his sentence.

In Washington, O'Keef recalled, Williams was highly regarded. He and William B. Umstead, then a congressman and later a governor, were close friends. Other close friends included O. Max Gardner, a former governor who was to become ambassador to Great Britain and Fred Morrison, Gardner's law partner in Washington. Congressman Harold Cooley and other members of the state's congressional delegation. Williams was a member of the Gridiron Club, a fairly exclusive group of newspapermen who stage an annual dinner at which the political mighty are roasted.

"I think a lot of politicians used to come to Fleet for advice," O'Keef recalled. "North Carolina was a lot smaller then, and Fleet knew them all, and all of them knew him.

O'Keef said that at one time World War I veterans were agitating for the government to pay each man a bonus which the "News and Observer" opposed. When the Raleigh American Legion post began discussing the issue it voted to exclude "News and Observer" reporters. So Fleet, who had served in World War I, "proceeded to join the Legion and covered their meetings."

During one local political campaign, O'Keef recalled that the "News and Observer" opposed a candidate for sheriff, lambasting him on the contention that he was a stooge of the Wake County political boss and that if the candidate was elected he would take his orders from the boss.

Despite the paper's opposition, the candidate was elected and Williams covered the swearing-in ceremonies. At the conclusion, "Fleet went up and asked the new sheriff for a list of his deputies. The man replied that, 'I don't have it yet. Mr. So-and-so (the political boss) hasn't given it to me yet.'

" 'Thank you. That's all I need to know,' Fleet replied, and then he went back to the paper and wrote his story," O'Keef related.

"He was a good city editor. He taught me a lot," O'Keef added.

Refuge Nearer Approval

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A federal plan to purchase part of the Currituck Outer Banks for use as a wildlife refuge moved another step closer to becoming a reality Friday.

Natural Resources Secretary Howard Lee said he will recommend to Gov. Jim Hunt that the state back the proposal. And, a spokesman for Hunt said the governor is expected to go along with the recommendation.

The latest support for the federal proposal follows action earlier this week by the Currituck County commissioners and by the state Currituck Banks Advisory Committee that the purchase be allowed.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service wants to buy all or part of the land north of Corolla to the Virginia line, or about 13 miles of beach and wetlands, plus some wetlands south of Corolla. The estimated cost is about $100 million, depending on how much land the federal government buys.

The service said endangered and threatened wildlife species would be harmed by continuing commercial and residential development on the banks.

Although the service has offered to reimburse the county for any loss of tax money, estimated at $230,000 a year, Currituck commissioners say they want written assurance that the money would remain available.

The commissioners, and the state committee, also said they wanted clarification of how permanent residents would fare under the plan and more details on proposed recreation areas.

Police Charged

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three Los Angeles police officers have been charged with assault in the shooting of a gas station attendant who was left paralyzed, the district attorney's office says.

The officers each pleaded innocent Friday to a single charge of assault with a deadly weapon in the January 1979 incident. Officials said attendant Cornelius Tatum apparently was mistaken for a robber.

Police Chief Daryl Gates accused District Attorney John Van de Kamp of acting "incorrectly and in an irresponsible manner" in bringing the charges.

Date: March 27, 1980

Place: American Legion Bldg. St. Andrews Drive

Time: 8:00 P.M.

Topic: Greenville Rescue Squad

To All Concerned Citizens of Greenville and Pitt County Served by the Greenville Rescue Squad: This is your meeting citizens, (This type meeting has been denied to you by your elected officials), to express your thoughts and feelings concerning the deliberate and calculated destruction of the Greenville Rescue Squad. Washington's Watergate coverup is nothing compared to the obvious coverup that has occurred in your city by the elected officials who are pledged to represent you and not themselves. The support for the Greenville Rescue Squad has been overwhelming in favor of a Rescue Squad separate from the Fire Department. Your Mayor and City Council cannot deny this because of the mail, telephone calls, and news coverage given in support of the Greenville Rescue Squad. The citizens of this city formed and have supported the Greenville Rescue Squad for 25 years. We have not had a voice in the deliberate destruction of this organization. This is totally against our wishes according to the democratic process which our country was founded on. The Mayor, City Council, Greenville area Chamber of Commerce, the City Manager, the Fire Chief, and past Mayor Percy Cox have made a terrible mistake. Do these responsible people have the backbone to face up to the public they represent and say "Yes, We have made a mistake, but we want what is best for our citizens and will correct the situation and pray no life has been lost yet!" It takes a big person to admit a mistake. We as citizens are looking at you and we wonder have we made the right choices for the leaders of this city. At this public forum meeting, citizens will have the opportunity to hear the side of the story from concerned citizens, doctors, nurses, former volunteer rescue squad members, former paid rescue squad members, and any other person who has vital interest in the top quality of rescue service once practiced in this city. We also invite any public official of Greenville, and Greenville Chamber of Commerce member to attend and listen to the voice of the people. The news media will be in attendance at this meeting and the will of the people will prevail. The Greenville Volunteer Rescue Squad can be reorganized and the paid rescue squad members who have left or been fired can be brought back to us. We, as citizens, have the obligation to see that this happens and it will happen!

Model Security Council Held On ECU Campus

By ROBERT ALBANESE

Students from colleges and universities in Pennsylvania, Virginia and North Carolina met on East Carolina University Campus Thursday to open ECU's fourth Model Security Council deliberations, a four-day event ending early this afternoon.

Participating in the program were students from Duquesne University, Pittsburgh, Pa.; the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia; UNC-Chapel Hill; Emory and Henry College, Emory, Va.; Thiel College, Greenville, Pa., and ECU.

"This is a direct simulation of what you would see in a real session of the Security Council of the United Nations," said Wendy Kern of Duquesne University, Chairman of the Security Council. "In our proceedings, for example, we expect that the Soviet Union will veto any declaration for withdrawal of troops from Afghanistan."

"This is an educational experience," added Jill Vaughn, ECU senior and Secretary General of the model U.N. session. "Students have studied up on the countries they've been chosen to represent, and they try to participate in the same way as the real nations would."

Issues considered by the Mock Security Council included the Afghanistan crisis, the hostage situation in Iran, and the formation of a new government in Zimbabwe, Rodesia.

Keynote speaker of the session was George Ashworth, Counselor to the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Committee, Washington, D.C.

"Mankind has dreams of peace and nightmares of war," said Ashworth in his speech Friday. "Our only defense is to insure as best we can against the threat of nuclear warfare."

"Arms control is a viable and necessary exercise," continued Ashworth. "The result of arms races can never be the enhancement of security.

"The most significant arms control treaty of the past decade is SALT I. It limited intercontinental ballistic missiles, thus insuring that neither side would create a large arsenal of these weapons.

"Prudent and effective arms control, combined with a strong national defense, will help insure that the United States remains strong and an example for other countries around the world," Ashworth concluded.

The students will continue their sessions until early this afternoon, when they will have closing sessions and awards presentations. Awards will include Best Delegate and Best Delegation.

Dr. John R. Larkins, Black Leader , Dies

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Dr. John R. Larkins, special assistant for minority affairs to Gov. Jim Hunt, died Friday following a lengthy illness. He was 65.

Larkins had worked in state government since 1942 as a social worker, Correction Department official and assistant to the governor.

"North Carolina has lost its greatest pioneer in the quest for equal opportunities for all its citizens," Hunt said. "I have lost a personal friend.

"From the difficult early days, he worked tirelessly to bring minorities into state government and into the mainstream of society," Hunt added.

Larkins died at Duke Hospital in Durham, where he had been a patient since Feb. 9.

He was a graduate of Shaw University and held several degrees, including a doctorate from the Columbia University School of Social Work.

He was the author of several books on blacks in North Carolina and the South.

He worked for 26 years in the state Department of Social Services, and later was associate director of the state Probation Commission and director of youth development for the Correction Department.

Claims Equal Pay Will Endanger Women

By DREW VON BERGEN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An economics professor from UCLA predicted Saturday that giving females equal pay for comparable work performed by men would be costly and result in many women losing jobs.

In a report published by the University of Miami Law and Economics Center, Dr. Cotton Mather Lindsay predicted: "Wage increases in occupations now filled by women will raise the cost of labor above its marginal revenue product.

As employers respond, "some women will lose their jobs," warned Lindsay, an associate professor of economics at UCLA and visiting professor at Emory University in Atlanta.

The AFL-CIO, at its November convention, adopted a resolution supporting the "comparable pay" concept and encouraging re-evaluation of jobs held mainly by women according to their real worth.

Lindsay said, however, that an "equal pay for comparable work" rule would cause considerable unemployment of women in occupations now predominantly filled by females.

"The fundamental problem of the comparable work doctrine is that it rests on a will-o'-the-wisp," he said. "It assumes that occupations similar in the demands for knowledge and responsibility will pay equal wages in the absence of discrimination."

Lindsay said two jobs may require identical backgrounds and involve identical levels of responsibility, yet pay different wages because of the varying attractiveness of the work or work location, because of scarce special talents required for one job or the other, or because of transitory market conditions.

He was supported by Peter Aranson, research professor at Miami, who said the comparable pay doctrine "would be enormously costly and disruptive."

Lindsay said all market conditions must be completely comparable to justify equalizing earnings in two occupations, and the effect of ability on wages is not as obvious as it may seem.

"Few would question the probable outcome of a 15-round match between Muhammed Ali and Sylvester Stallone," he said. Although Ali made more money as a boxer, Stallone was undoubtedly the better scriptwriter and actor.

Lindsay said it seems even more unfair when the list of talents for which financial rewards are greatest are compared with those the market overlooks.

"For example, the earnings of Nobel Prize-winning economists and our most distinguished jurists are paltry compared to the salary of Barbara Walters or the royalties and concert fees of the Rolling Stones," he said.

Chad Scene Of Fighting

PARIS (UPI) — Heavy fighting has broken out between rival political factions in Ndjamena, the capital of Chad, and all comunications with the African nation have been cut, a French Foreign Ministry official said Saturday.

The official said a battle erupted near the presidential palace in Ndjamena early Friday and that two soldiers from the 1,000-man French force in Chad were shot — one of them killed and the other wounded in a crossfire.

The official the fighting continued Saturday and that telex and other communications with the former French colony, wracked by 16 years of civil war, had been cut. Air France said the airport at Ndjamena was also closed.

The Foreign Ministry spokesman said fighting erupted last week in the countryside, which had been relatively peaceful since a cease-fire accord was reached last August.

"There were several incidents in the countryside during the week. Then fighting broke out in the capital early Friday morning between rival political groups. A number of European residents are now sheltering in our embassy," the spokesman said.

The French government radio later reported a cease-fire had been declared and said that the French ambassador in Ndjamena was mediating peace talks between the rival factions in Chad's coalition government, patched together as part of last August's settlement.

But with communications suddenly cut, it was not clear whether the truce was still being respected.

French officials confirmed two French casualties in the fighting Friday night but said he had no information on how many other persons may have been killed or wounded.

He said a corporal was killed and another French soldier wounded when the truck they were driving got caught in crossfire during a battle near the presidential palace.

About 1,000 French troops remain in the capital although the Chad cabinet directed President Goukoni Weddeye to negotiate their withdrawal last January.

With a population of 4 million and an area about three times the size of Alaska, Chad officially became independent of France in 1960. But French forces stayed on in the country to help keep the peace and fought Libyan-aided rebels in 1978 and again last year.

Despite being neighbors with oil-rich Libya, Chad is also one of the poorest nations in northern Africa.

Woman Searches For Indian Village

By CRAIG WEBB

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — A young archaeologist is searching along part of the Pamlico River for Secotan, one of the first Indian villages visited by English settlers nearly four centuries ago.

Cheryl Claassen-MacClelland is limiting her search to land around the mouth of Durham Creek, near Bonnerton in Beaufort County. By examining plowed fields and digging test holes, she hopes to find traces of the visits to the village made in 1585 by a group of English explorers.

"Since it was visited by the English, we're expecting to find a mix of English and Indian objects: English pipes, English ceramics in the same area with Indian ceramics," she said. "We're also looking for iron, any kind of metal."

Secotan is known today mostly because of the work of John White, an artist who was among the explorers. Many of his drawings of Indian life — the first many Europeans had seen — were done in Secotan. For that reason, the village has been sought by archaeologists for decades.

Besides the English clues in the rubble, Ms. Claassen-MacClelland said Secotan will be recognizable from other Indian sites because it was larger than the usual tribal village.

So far she and her crews have found one Indian site that probably existed before the 17th century, but otherwise nothing.

Her work began March 10 and will continue through April 4. It is funded by a $10,000 grant from the state and a $3,300 grant from the National Park Service.

Previous expeditions in search of Secotan have concentrated on the north side of the Pamlico near Bath and on the south side near Durham Creek.

Ms. Claassen-MacClelland, 26, picked her site largely because of a study done by David Quinn, an Englishman who specializes on the British voyages of the 1580s to Roanoke Island. By examining reports from White and others, he placed Secotan near Durham Creek.

"Since the 400th anniversary (of the visits) is coming up, I thought something useful might be to check the usefulness of Quinn's map," she said.

White's visit occurred on the second of three visits to Roanoke Island under the sponsorship of Sir Walter Raleigh. The first occurred in 1584, when Capts. Philip Amadas and Arthur Barlowe sailed to Roanoke, picked up samples of vegetation and food and also brought back the Indians Manteo and Wanchese.

In 1585 Lt. Ralph Lane commanded a vessel that sailed for the island. This time White went along, joining the explorers as they traveled to Secotan and other places as far as 100 miles inland.

Lane's group left for England in 1586. The next year about 120 settlers, including 17 women and nine children, arrived. This was the famed "Lost Colony" which disappeared without a trace several years later.

Two Dolphins Starve

MONTREAL (AP) — Brigitte and Fanny starved to death. The two dolphins — star performers at the Montreal city aquarium — were victims of a strike by city employees.

When their regular trainers took to the picket lines on Feb. 12, Brigitte and Fanny went on a hunger strike, refusing to take food from the management personnel who tried to feed them.

After 38 days of starvation they died Friday. Brigitte succumbed on a stretcher following a blood test, while Fanny was found lying at the bottom of the pool.

Each had shed more than 65 pounds from pre-strike weights of around 300 pounds.

Their deaths came despite a last minute effort by their trainers to save them. City officials called on the handlers to return to work and on Thursday they got a special dispensation from their striking union that allowed them to return to their ailing charges — but time had run out.

The strike by municipal blue collar workers has closed the city aquarium and the zoo and has left mounds of garbage piling up on Montreal streets. The strikers are demanding better pay and improved working conditions.

Intimidation Used

WASHINGTON (AP) — Severe pressure and intimidation are still used by a number of debt collectors even after a 1977 law proscribed such tactics, the Federal Trade Commission says.

Despite the law and industry attempts at self regulation, "many problems remain," the FTC said Friday in an annual report required under the law.

Collectors still call employers and neighbors in an effort to get the debtors to pay up, the report said. These calls, banned by the three-year-old law, "disrupt consumers' employment and invade their privacy," the FTC said.

"Debt collectors continue to employ deceptive forms and deceptive collection techniques. In certain cases, collectors compel consumers to pay improper charges in addition to the amounts actually owed.

"In others, the mandatory disclosures of consumer rights which are required by the act are ignored by collection firms. Finally, harassment and abusive practices continue to exist in this industry," the report said.

Morgan Stresses...

"By doctrine," Morgan emphasized, "we do not believe that church and state should be mixed. No country has ever had an established Baptist Church."

Historically, according to Morgan, "every group that gained state power harassed those who differed and persecuted dissenters..."

Interestingly, according to Morgan, "North Carolina never took to established religion. North Carolinians distrusted the established church (the Church of England). Non-Anglicans resented the taxes, control of education, and special privileges," the established church represented.

"North Carolina, because of the weakness of the established church, became a haven for the oppressed. Quakers, Baptists, Presbyterians, Lutherans, Moravians, German Reformed, and Methodists all found room in the colony. These groups demanded separation of church and state."

Morgan continued, "I hope we are still obstinate in demanding complete seperation of church and state.

"The Christian beliefs of our founding fathers was obvious. That they separated religion from the state only proves that they were students of history...that they had learned from the heritage of the people who fled to America that once a religion gained power over the people it was likely to force itself on the remainder of the people.

In reviewing history, whenever church and state were united, 'according to Morgan, "invariably, the dissenting minority were persecuted. Invariably, those in power concluded they were devinely inspired to the exclusion of all others and that to dissent was to commit heresay."

Expressing concern about problems in our society, Morgan said, "as a politician and a Christian, I often turn to my religious beliefs in seeking solutions. But I would not contend for one moment that because I have sought religious guidance and searched my heart, that others in good conscience should not disagree with me...that those who disagree with me, therefore...(are) immoral or irreligious. We should all have the right to follow the dictates of our consciences without being branded heretics..."

Suppose a Christian party did win power in this country, Morgan asked. "If a state morality should come to power... what would happen to the decenters?"

In Iran, according to Morgan, "the state and religion are hopelessly mingled and confused. There is chaos throughout the land."

In the United States, "I understand there is a crusade by a group that uses the word 'moral' as part of its name. This implies that anyone who disagrees with any of their beliefs is not moral. Is this a fair assumption?

The miracle of our form of government, according to the senator, "is that our Revolution evolved to a certain point, and after a great debate over the merits of our Constitution," which seperated church and state, "we adopted it. We still live with it after almost two centuries. In a large measure, we have learned from history.

"I am asking you, has the fertile ground that nourished tolerance and diversity and separation of church and state turned barren? Have we run the cycle that other governments have run? Are we getting closer to forsaking the wisdom of our founding fathers by mixing matters of conscience and matters of politics?

"With the Church of England, it was, the prayer book or prison. With the Puritans it was, the meeting-house worship or the custody of the jailor. With the Catholics it was, the mass or the musket.

"Are we in danger of creating a new set of choices? I hope and pray not.

"I urge you to cling to the simple faith of our fathers. Keep church and state seperate. Our strength lies in our diversity ...and in our tolerance. In matters on which reasonable people might disagree, a state dogma would be a violation of our basic religious and political beliefs.

"And we Baptists should never forget it."

Dr. James L. Sullivan, past president of the Baptist Sunday School Board, Nashville, Tennessee, said, "tonight, history is in focus," and questioned, "do we appreciate our decendants as we should."

Our people, he said, "had a program...hope...dream," and determination and partiotism.

"As a denomiation, we're at a crossroads. Great things have happened," he said. But Sullivan emphasized, "the greatest history is yet to be written."

Anti-Arson Units On Duty In Kansas City

By GORDON L. HEFT

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Anti-arson jeep patrols took to the streets Saturday as part of the stepped-up efforts by Gov. Joseph Teasdale to keep the city's half million residents from "living in fear" because of the lingering firefighter's strike.

The Missouri National Guard, which dispatched another 250 troops to the city at the orders of Teasdale, operated 14 jeeps during the day and 30 at night in an attempt to smother the wave of arson and suspicious fires that has plagued the city during the walkout.

The strike, which has left the city's 31 fire stations to be manned by a makeshift force of police and battalion chiefs, entered it sixth day Saturday.

So far, the city has been the victim of 30 confirmed arson cases, and scores of suspicious grass, trash and abandoned structural fires. Nearly 1,000 acres of grassland have burned in the northern section of the city, police said.

Police have charged four adults — including two firefighters and one former firefighter — with arson in connection with a series of grass fires. In addition, four juveniles have been apprehended in connection with minor arson cases.

In an ironic turnaround of event, city officials — instead of firefighters — were served with court papers Saturday ordering them to appear in court Monday to show cause why they should not rehire 42 firefighters fired during the December work slowdown.

The refusal by the city to rehire the 42 union members is at the heart of the strike.

City Manager Robert Kipp last Monday refused to overturn a city personnel board's recommendation, which said the 42 firefighters should not be rehired.

But Kipp's contention that he does not have the power to rehire the 42 men was dismissed late Friday by Jackson County Circuit Judge Gene Martin, who ruled Kipp could at least temporarily legally rehire the firefighters.

Kipp and Mayor Richard Berkley Saturday were served appear at a "show cause" with papers ordering them to hearing.

Mafia Chief Slain

By CHRISTOPHER WINANS

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Mafia chieftain Angelo Bruno died in a feud between East Coast crime families over control of the rackets allied with the growing Atlantic City casino industry, a top-ranked underworld federal informant said Saturday.

The source told UPI the order to execute Bruno, 69, came from a "top New York crime boss" not from Bruno's Pennsylvania or New Jersey territory.

The source said Bruno was shot and killed in an automobile outside his home Friday night by the same hit team that murdered Anthony "Little Pussy" Russo, reputed mob boss in northern New Jersey, in April, 1979.

The crime families in New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore are squabbling over an estimated $500 million worth of recent growth in service industries since the casinos arrived in Alantic City in 1978, the source said.

Philadelphia police sources said Bruno's recent testimony before a state commission investigating organized crime in Atlantic city casinos might have caused his execution after a quarter-century of mob rule.

"Cruising," A Film Of Ambiguities And Unrelieved Grimness

A prefatory statement at the opening of "Cruising" notes that is not intended as an indictment of the homosexual world, nor is it representative of any particular segment of that part of society.

This pointless half-apology is the first of several ambiguities that seriously mar William Friedkin's controversial film about police efforts to track down a killer of homosexuals in New York. Unresolved loose ends in the film's plot eventually destroy the credibility of Weintraub's intention in making a film of this nature.

Was he interested primarily in filming a sensitive subject for commercial exploitation?; or was his an honest effort to project the complexities of a minority society and the dilemmas faced by law enforcement officers in any effort to track down a cunning, systematic murderer?

If the latter was his intent, "Cruising" is a failed product. Friedkin is dealing here not with a fantasy world of moods or mixed dream-reality. It is contemporary drama, an acknowledged life-style chosen by a sizeable minority that he is dealing with. As such, clarity is an essential element. And this important element is seriously obscured in several critical instances.

The most baffling development comes at the end of the film, when a gentle, non-cruising homosexual writer is discovered brutally murdered in his apartment. This is after the capture of the youth we have been led to believe is the person responsible for the earlier string of knife murders. The implication is that the undercover police agent, played by Al Pacino, is the murderer. He was a neighbor of the writer, and the police captain in charge of the undercover assignment, makes a point of saying that the victim obviously knew his murderer, as there were no signs of struggle.

Another scene that confuses is earlier in the film, when the detective, for no apparent reason, tries to pick an argument with the dead youth's roommate. The question also arises about the validity of depicting police employing a huge black male who towers, nearly nude, over suspects being questioned and strikes them with powerful blows from his open hand.

Perhaps it is true that in the teeming, sweltering gathering places of homosexuals in New York little exists of the comradeship and moments of joy to be found in more conventional societies. Nonetheless, it does not seen credible that life would be the unrelieved parade of grimness depicted in "Cruising."

Scenes of love-making, most often involving men in clubs, bars, or discos, portray an atmosphere of non-smiling determination that seems more appropriate to a battlefield than to palaces of pleasure, no matter how sordid. Men cruising men in parks and streets are like zombies in the night, stalking, threatening each other with menacing stares.

As the principle in this movie, Al Pacino maintains an attitude of stoniness in keeping with the pervading gloom of the film.

On balance, it seems the real indictment must rest with Friedkin's failure to come to grips with the fact that he is dealing with a segment of society which surely must be capable of at least some small measure of humanness aside from violence and lust.

Vestment With Gems, Washers

CANTERBURY, England (AP) — When the Most Rev. Robert Runcie is enthroned Tuesday as the new Archbishop of Canterbury, he will be wear silk vestments, an heirloom clasp studded with gems and gold — and a faucet washer and a piece of car antenna.

Jenny Boyd Carpenter, a housewife and needlework expert, says she sewed those objects into the tassel of his hood to keep it in place.

"There's a piece of car aerial as a stiffener and a tap (faucet) washer on the end to help weigh it down. One has to invent these things."

Runcie will become the 102nd Archbishop and Primate of All England in a ceremony in the 11th century cathedral southeast of London.

He will wear a richly embroidered cope, a cape-like vestment, and mitre worked by Mrs. Carpenter.

The clasp on the cope is a precious heirloom of the See of Canterbury contwining amethysts set in gold.

Films To Be Shown

RALEIGH — Beginning at 3 p.m. today, the independent film work of five filmmakers will be shown on the first floor of the N. C. Museum of Art.

UNC-Chapel Hill film instructor Gordon Ball will discuss the films, which include his own "Sitting." Others to be shown are David Rimmer's "Canadian Pacific;" "Schwechater" and "Unsere Afrikareise" by Peter Kubelka; and Stan Brakhage's "Window Water Baby Moving."

There is no admission charge for viewing the films and the public is invited. The museum is located at 107 E. Morgan Street.

Brett Shows

Greenville artist George Brett, current visiting artist at Pitt Community College, has work in two North Carolina shows.

At the "Upstairs Gallery" in Tryon, Brett has a one-man show of collages, rubber stamp art and knitted pieces, to be on view to April 4.

One of Brett's large knitted installations is on view in the courtyard of SECCA in Winston-Salem. This will be up through May 1.

Simple Solution

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — H.R. Johnson believes he has a down-to-earth solution to the nation's energy problems.

The Union County commissioner has installed a geothermal heating system under 10 feet of dirt in his backyard.

"The process is so simple, it's stupid," Johnson said recently.

The system involves circulating air through a pipe system, heating the air by running it over copper coils filled with hot water and circulating it into the house.

Under Johnson's house is what he calls the "mole lab," a quarter-horsepower engine to pump the air, a 40-gallon hot water heater and a manual damper system.

Because ground temperature in the Piedmont has a constant range of 53 degrees to 73 degrees, Johnson says the dirt does a lot of the heating and insulating.

"It's a lot cheaper to heat air to a comfortable range when it is 53 degrees than when it's 30 degrees or lower," he said.

Johnson said he developed the idea while daydreaming one day last summer. A building contractor, Johnson estimated that his system cost $2,000 to $3,[illegible] to build.

To Share Portraits

BOSTON (AP) — Massachusetts Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti says he has agreed to a plan in which Boston and Washington, D.C., will share the Gilbert Stuart portraits of George and Martha Washington.

Under the agreement, the Boston Athenaeum, owner of the famous portraits, would sell them to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the Smithsonian Institution for $4.9 million. Each museum would display the paintings for three years, then pass them to the other.

Bellotti said Friday his approval was required because he was named a defendant in a suit filed by the Athenaeum seeking probate court approval of the sale. He said the sale still requires court approval.

News Briefs

N & O Was Cited For Violations

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The News and Observer Publishing Co. has been cited twice in recent years for fire and safety violations, city and state officials said Friday.

A city fire inspector cited the company for 12 fire code violations in 19 areas of building in February 1979. And, the state Occupatioinal Safety and Health Administration found 13 "non-serious" safety violations, some of which related to fire hazards, in July 1973.

The OHSA inspection resulted in a $120 fine being levied against the company.

The company, which publishes The News and Observer and The Raleigh Times, was hit Sunday by a fire that heavily damaged eight of the papers' 12 presses and caused smoke damage throughout the building.

TVA Officers Charged

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Alleging misuse of government property, the Tennessee Valley Authority demoted and transferred two top officials and disciplined 16 other employees associated with its Columbia Dam project.

TVA officials said Friday the project manager, Roy C. Edwards, and the general construction superintendent, Buel H. Hill, for the $153 million dam on the Duck River south of Nashville, were demoted and transferred.

Sources close to an internal investigation said the abuses included managers ordering workers to cut firewood for them, use of a TVA garage to work on private cars and the private use of TVA scaffolding, tools and vehicles.

Tight Rein On Rock Concert

CINCINNATI (AP) — More than 140 persons were arrested before the main act even began — most of them on drug charges — as Cincinnati police kept a tight rein on the first rock concert since 11 fans died in a stampede for seats last December.

Some 10,000 fans turned out to hear the rock group ZZ Top at Riverfront Coliseum on Friday — and when they struck matches or flicked cigarette lighters, officials trained spotlights on them as a reminder of tough new concert rules.

The crowd was mostly orderly and the city's rules governing rock concerts passed their first test, officials said. When the evening was over, 150 persons had been arrested, compared to 40 on Dec. 3, the night 11 young people were crushed as fans rushed to get the best unreserved seats for a performance by the British group, The Who.

Monitoring Earthen Dam

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Officials in Boone continue to monitor an earthen dam on the city's water supply lake where a 20-foot-long sink hole was discovered Thursday.

Authorities said Friday they will monitor the hole on a 24-hour basis for any changes in appearance. If the hole becomes larger, the about 15 households near the dam will be evacuated, they said.

The hole — measuring about six feet wide, 20 feet long and four feet deep — was discovered Thursday during a routine inspection by a state official.

Mike Thompson, visiting artist in residence at Wilson Technical Institute, will perform on the banjo and two different guitars.

Easter enters the show with a look at the Easter outdoor drama being given March 29 and 30 and April 4-5 at Piney Grove Baptist Church north of Washington. The director, E. T. Taylor and Jimmy Griffin, who portrays Christ, will both be guests on Kay's show today.

Chosen To Visit Vienna Choir Boys

Nine-year-old Roy Lee Tripp III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lee Tripp, Jr. and a fourth grade student at Elmhurst Elementary School, has been selected as a special delegate for the State of North Carolina to an official visitation by boy singers from the United States to the Vienna Choir Boys group in Austria.

Officials of the International Federation of Children's Choirs, who were on hand when Roy took part in the International Boys Singers Festival in Saltillo, Mexico, last December, recommended the youth as a special delegate based on his "fine singing combined with extraordinary ambassadorial qualities."

Roy will join other boys from various parts of the U.S. on April 3 for the flight to Austria to be guests of the visit the Vienna Choir Boys at Augarten Palace.

The boys from the U.S. will first fly to Belgium, where they will visit and perform with the "Hit Parade des Enfants," a group of boy singers from Lessine, Belgium, who perform popular music at disco dances and for clubs and service organizations.

After the Belgium appearance, the group of U.S. boys will then go to Cologne, Germany for a musical exchange with the German boy singers of the famed Cologne Cathedral — a cathedral boy choir directed by the Rev. Richard March, an American musician and theologian.

In Regensburg, Germany they will visit with the Regensburg Domspatzen (Cathedral Sparrows) whose recordings are widely known in the U.S.

In Vienna, they will remain for several days with the Vienna Choir boys at Augarten Palace, then return by way of Salzburg, Austria and then vist the Dinkelsbuhl Boys Band in Dinkelsbuhl, Germany. Their final stop will be a visit to the principality of Luxembourg on April 19. After that visit they will return to the U.S. via Brussels.

ROY TRIPP, III . . . a nine-year-old fourth grade student at Elmhurst Elementary School, has been named the North Carolina delegate to visit the Vienna Choir Boys and other youth choirs in Europe during April.

A Review

Book On N.C. Gardens Is A Spring Delight

Beautiful North Carolina and the World of Flowers. By Mary Lee McMillan and Ruth Dorval Jones. Durham, N. C., Moore Publishing Co. 109 pages, illustrated, $7.95.

Lovingly assembled is the best phrase to describe what Mary Lee McMillan and Ruth Dorval Jones have done in fashioning this totally fascinating small volume. From the Bible, from the world's treasury of poetry, and most especially from the nature writings of North Carolinians — people such as Dr. C. C. Crittenden, Gerald Johnson, Nell Battle Lewis, Clarence Steppe, and Dr. B. W. Wells — the authors have compiled a selection that pinpoints many facets of nature and man's efforts to beautify the world he lives in.

Browsing through these pages is a rewarding (and highly informative) experience, an experience of discovery and rediscovery of familiar and new thoughts on nature.

There's for example, Gerald Johnson's "The Ballad of Wisteria" which opens with these lines . . . "Yesterday the wisteria was almost in full bloom. Today it is in its glory. Tomorrow it will already have begun to fade."

Mrs. Robert Leroy McMillan, a former president of the Garden Club of North Carolina in a speech touched on the aim of the club — "to have this North Carolina that we love so much (to) become the marvel that labor and love might make it."

The duality of "labor and love" is a consistent viewpoint that emerges from the varied sampler of material in this volume. Time after time reference is made to the labor that produces beauty, and labor as a necessary ingredient in bringing forth the fruits of order and added enchantment to the natural beauty of our surrounding.

History figures prominently in these pages. Dates and founders of garden clubs, both those fostered by women and by men are given. In the recent bygone decades, evidence is that men and women were not then overpowered by the concept of togetherness. From the record, they each did their own thing and suffered no major traumas. However, it is also evident that women had the edge (and perhaps still do) in efforts to perpetuate programs of beautification in North Carolina.

The description of several notable North Carolina gardens whets the appetite for an opportunity to visit them — Balentine's sunken garden outside his Cameron Village restaurant; the WRAL-TV gardens in Raleigh; the Marvin Johnson Gourd Museum and gardens at Kennebec, near Angiers, with its collection of common and exotic gourds; and the Walled Garden of novelist Betty Smith in Chapel Hill (made possible from profits realized from her best-seller "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn").

Myths connected with flowers add a touch of romance, such as the traditional belief held by the Cherokee Indians for the Cherokee Rose, which symbolizes a promise that "Indians should remain together under the pine fringers of the forest and that no foreigner can inflict on them a sorrow which they cannot bear."

A chapter listing North Carolina parks, large and small; another on North Carolina trees in history and in legend; a brief survey of rare gardening books; and individual entries on favorite flowers, shrubs and trees like the Cigarette Tree, crape myrtles, dogwood, gardenias, lilacs, rhododendron, and immense beds of violets at Pity's Sake, all enrich the scope of information provided the reader of this volume.

"Beautiful North Carolina and the World of Flowers" is a delightful book to delve into with spring here, and it's a fine choice to give a friend on any pretext.

N.C.M.A. Issues Art-Religion Brochure

By MICHAEL MATROS
N.C. Museum of Art

RALEIGH — In most cultures of the world, the religion of the people has provided an extremely important theme for their art. And many of the greatest works of art from Western Europe — in painting, architecture, music and other forms — have as their basis the traditions and beliefs of Christianity.

Now the N. C. Museum of Art is distributing an introduction to some paintings in its collection which show the influence of Christianity on 15th through 17th century European painting.

In a new museum brochure, "Art and the Christian Faith," John Durham, a professor of Hebrew and Old Testament at the Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary in Wake Forest, examines 12 paintings to discover some of the ways that religion has been interpreted through art. Accompanying a reproduction of each work is a short essay which places the work against an historical background, provides information about the artist and explains the significance of various aspects of the painting.

The brochure is a project of the Governor's Committee on Art and Religion of the N. C. Cultural Advisory Council. Committee chairman Dr. Abram Kanof of Raleigh says that the purpose of the brochure is to introduce North Carolinians to a body of art created in the period "when the church was a great inspirer and patron of the arts."

Each painting is presented under a particular theme. For example, "The Virgin and Child with St. John" by Andrea del Sarto and "Christ on the Cross" by Hans Memling both represent "the image of the way of the cross." In the del Sarto painting, the child Jesus reaches playfully for a crude wooden cross held out by the haloed boy John the Baptist. According to Dr. Durham, "the way of the cross was Jesus' destiny from the start."

The Memling painting portrays "the dead Christ on the cross in so universal a setting that the presentation takes on abstract qualities," according to the brouchure. In this work, Jesus has fulfilled the destiny foreshadowed by del Sarto with the image of the cross serving as a bridge to link the two paintings.

Other paintings discussed in the brochure are also noteworthy for their symbolic content. Bernardino Landino's "Madonna Enthroned with Saints and Donors," for example, depicts various saints with their individual symbols: "The Flight into Egypt," by the so-called master of the half-lengths, has among its symbols a flock of sheep to indicate Christ's future role as shepherd of men.

As Dr. Durham points out, he did not choose the works in the brochure simply because of their Christian message; they were also selected as great works of art that can be appreciated on a number of levels.

In "The Worship of the Golden Calf," which depicts "a scene of abandoned lechery," Dr. Durham discloses that the "leering man seducing a drunken woman" is the artist, Jan Steen, himself, placed there perhaps "as a means of confession, of perpetuating his own likeness and of signing the painting."

"Art and the Christian Faith" is being made available free to church groups; interested ministers should contact Dr. Abram Kanof in care of the N. C. Musuem of Art, Department of Cultural Resources, 107 E. Morgan Street, Raleigh, N. C., 27611.

Individual copies may be purchased for $1 in the musuem store.

Writers To Meet

The second meeting for the month of March of the Greenville Writers Club will be at 8 p.m. Tuesday, March 25 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Raynor, 2106 Pendleton Street.

Community Chorus To Give Spring Concert

Franz Joseph Haydn's oratorio, "The Seasons," is the work chosen for the spring concert of the Greenville Community Chorus.

The concert will be at 3 p.m. Sunday, March 30 at Memorial Baptist Church on the 264 bypass. This is a free concert and the public is invited to attend. This event has been made possible by a grant from the North Carolina Arts Council.

Dr. Clyde Hiss, director of the East Carolina University Opera Theater and a faculty member of the School of Music is guest director.

The oratorio performance includes the use of an orchestra, a chorus and soloists. Soloists are Crystal Barnes, Patricia Hiss, Susan Owen, Jeffrey Krantz, Ed Glenn, and Michael McDonald.

This work represents the first from the Classical period to be presented by the chorus since 1977, when it featured Mozart's "Coronation Mass." This is also the first performance by the group of a Haydn composition.

"The Seasons" is a work rich in musical descriptions of love, nature, and mankind.

Art Show Details

Details of the annual Greenville Art Center Sidewalk Art Show have been announced. The 1980 show will be held Saturday, April 26, at the art center on Evans Street, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

In each media, judging will be in three divisions — professional, amateur, and high school. In addition, a juvenile division will be held for watercolor and drawing.

A total of $2,150 will be given in awards. First State Bank this yeear is contributing $400 for the best in show award.

Juror will be Michale Brantley of the N.C. Museum of Art.

A special Children's Studio and Gallery is a new event this year. Throughout the day, children will have a chance to take part in various media — with George Brett, Grian Salomon and Emmy Whitehead providing instruction.

The event is sponsored by the East Carolina Art Society. Overall co-chairmen for the show are Mrs. Sam C. Williams and Ms. Jo Betts Barringer. Committee chairmen are: Mrs. John Howard, Mrs. Fred Webb, Mrs. Thomas Edwards and Mrs. F. L. Blount, Jr., finance; Mrs. Jim Moye, publicity; Mrs. F. L. Blount, Jr., sales and registration; Mrs. D. Fulbright Scholar

ECU News Bureau

Among this year's recipients of Fulbright-Hays awards for study abroad is Horace Page, Jr. of Portsmouth, Virginia, an alumnus (MFA 1978) of the School of Art, East Carolina University.

After a month of intensive language study in Rome, last fall, Page began his year of formal studies with the noted Italian sculptor Arnaldo Pomodoro in Milan.

Like Pomodoro, Page prefers to work in the bronze medium and believes the artist's own involvement in all phases of casting, as well as molding, is an important part of the creation of bronze sculpture.

Before coming to ECU, Page studied at the Instituto National de Bellas Artes in Mexico, at Norfolk State College and at Old Dominion University, where he received the BFA degree in 1973.

Upon completion of his apprenticeship with Pomodoro, Page plans to return to the U.S. and to establish a permanent studio in the Tidewater area.

Page is the second ECU student to receive sponsorship for study in Italy under the Fulbright-Hays Awards.

Rediscovering A Dream

Violet Clay. By Gail Godwin. New York, Alfred A. Knopf. 342 324 pages, $8.95.

Long before we meet her in Gail Godwin's latest novel, "Violet Clay," a 23-year old divorced painter moves to New York, planning to rediscover her dream of "The Young Woman as Artist." When the book begins, Violet has to her credit a series of lovers and nine years of illustrating the covers of gothic romances for Harrow House publishing company. The Era of Compromise, she calls it.

Violet admits illustrating gothic covers is hack work, but she hasn't actually "sold out" yet. She prides herself in being "a cover artist who always read the books, who had never once given a heroine black hair when her author had given her blond, never given an edifice Romanesque proportions when its author had specified Norman."

Later, looking back, she has what seems to be a wise view of the time she spent illustrating.

Seeing a show in a New York gallery by a woman her own age brings her to a moment of truth. She can tell the painter has been working on her own personal vision, "following the gloom as well as the gleam," (as Violet describes it) while Violet, for too long now, has been "sitting stock still in the idling taxi, running up the bill." It's a recurring dream she has had in the past, a metaphor for her compromised self.

Fate rescues Violet from the idling taxi the day the book begins. That first day is a long one, about 100 pages, packed with flashbacks to fill us in on her past. She loses her job at Harrow House and her Uncle Ambrose (holed up in an Adirondack cabin trying to finish a long awaited second novel) kills himself. When Violet, the only living relation, arrives in Plommet Falls to arrange the funeral, she feels a strange connection with the place where Ambrose spent his last days. She decides to use her small savings and confront the myth of "The Young Woman as Artist" once more, not quite so greeen and with a little more conscience.

Alone in the cabin, working and thinking, Violet begins to understand how experience can work for an artist. She remembers when she first came to New York, when, frustrated with the limits of her undeveloped talent, she couldn't lift a brush, fearing she wouldn't do justice to the realities she saw. "There I had crouched in the shadows of my own potential. I had my feelings, and I had my materials, but I didn't know how to make one work for the other. There I sat, waiting for something to happen, for the phone to ring, for help to come from outside. That something was happening inside, I never considered. That certain equations were being made, certain colors and tonal values being locked away in my visual memory which could later be opened by the right combination of accumulated experience, I never dreamed."

And as Violet realizes how all the years and colors come together, she also begins to understand Ambrose's choice. "Weren't we all involved in the same contest between living and dying, between being what we wanted and needed to do and not doing it?"

The idea of being dangled between choices, struggling to make something of this life, is what Violet captures in "Suspended Woman," the painting that opens the door to what she calls her "belated emergence." Her model is Sam, a young woman who lives near Violet and does construction and outside work for the people in Plommet Falls.

"Suspended Woman" gets a place in a traveling exhibition of women painters and the honor of being the show poster.

Godwin's novel is not without flaws by any means, but it has some important things to say about art and life. If you don't mind her gothic version of Violet's marriage and a few other Harlequin overtones here and there, you may enjoy this one whether you're an artist or just struggling to do well in the "contest between living and dying."

Award To Bridgers

Winterville native Sue Ellen Bridgers has been honored with a Christopher Award for her novel, "All Together Now," published by Alfred A. Knopf in 1979.

Christopher Awards, established in 1949, are given annually to writer, producers and directors whose works are representative of the best achievements in their fields. Works are judged on the basis of their affirmation of the highest value of the human spirit, their artistic and technical proficiency, and a significant degree of public acceptance.

The awards ceremony was held in the Time-Life Building in New York City Feb. 28 with Father John Cartoir, Director of the Christophers, presenting the bronze Christopher medallions.

Other books receiving Christopher Awards were "The Habit of Being: Letters of Flannery O' Connor" and "The Medusa and the Snail." Among the films honored were "Breaking Away," "The China Syndrome" and "Norma Rae." Television productions included "Friendly Fire," "Aunt Mary," and "Orphan Train."

In addition to receiving the Christopher Award, "All Together Now" is the Boston Globe-Horn Honor Book for 1979 and was voted a Notable Book of the Year by the American Library Association, as was Ms. Bridgers' first novel, "Home Before Dark," published in 1976.

Ms. Bridgers attended East Carolina University and is a graduate of Western Carolina University. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayland L. Hunsucker of Winterville, she lives in Sylva with her husband and three children.

Kiki & The Kids Top Purdue, 67-62

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Kiki and the kids are going to the finals. "We've got some very talented youngsters on this team," said Kiki Vandeweghe, UCLA's senior co-captain.

Vandeweghe scored 24 points and combined with an agressive corps of freshmen and sophomores as the Bruins throttled All-American center Joe Barry Carroll and beat Purdue 67-62 Saturday to earn a berth in the NCAA basketball finals against Lousiville.

While Vandeweghe was UCLA's leading scorer, freshmen Rod Foster, Darren Daye, Michael Holton, and Chris Pruitt and sophomore Mike Sanders all made key contributions.

"I'm the happiest man in the world right now," said UCLA Coach Larry Brown, who at the age of 39 and in his first year as coach of the Bruins is something of a kid himself.

"Kiki played like a star, and the kids really played well," Brown said. "They all hit the free throws when they had to down the stretch. I believed in the kids and they believed in me."

Vandeweghe clinched the victory by making four free throws in the final 41 seconds after Purdue had closed a 10-point deficit and pulled within one.

The 7-foot-1 Carroll was limited to 17 points and never was a dominant factor in the game. Purdue Coach Lee Rose gave UCLA credit for that.

"It was difficult to get the ball inside because of the outstnding defense of UCLA," Rose said. "We ran through all our offenses but came up empty."

UCLA, unranked in the final Associated Press poll, will take on the No. 2 Louisville Cardinals Monday night for the national championship.

Louisville, getting 34 from guard Darrell Griffith, moved into the final with an 80-72 victory over Purdue in the opener of the doubleheader before a screaming, sellout crowd of 16,637 at Market Square Arena.

It's the first trip to the finals in five years for UCLA, which won 10 national titles in a span 12 years under Coach John Wooden. The last was in 1975, when the Bruins beat Louisville 75-74 in overtime in the semifinals before defeating Kentucky for the championship.

The victory over Purdue was yet another chapter in the amazing Cinderella story of the Bruins, who started the season with a mediocre 8-6 record but blossomed when first-year Coach Larry Brown gave his lineup an infusion of youth.

The Bruins, with no starter taller than 6-foot-8, used a platoon system to contain the 7-foot-1 Carroll. James Wilkes, a 6-7 senior, started against Carroll in UCLA's man-to-man defense, but saw only limited action because of foul trouble. Sanders, Pruitt and seniors Darrell Allums and Gig Sims all took turns playing Purdue's towering center, and all did the job well.

UCLA led 47-37 midway through the second half, but sophomore guard Keith Edmonson helped the Boilermakers close to within one at 57-56 with 3:40 to play. Four free throws by Sanders offset a pair of baskets by Carroll, the last with 1:31 to go. And although Foster, the Bruins' playmaker, had fouled out with 4:49 to go, UCLA was able to keep control of the ball and force Purdue to commit costly fouls.

These proved to be all UCLA needed as Holton connected twice from the line in the final minute and Vandeweghe sank four free throws.

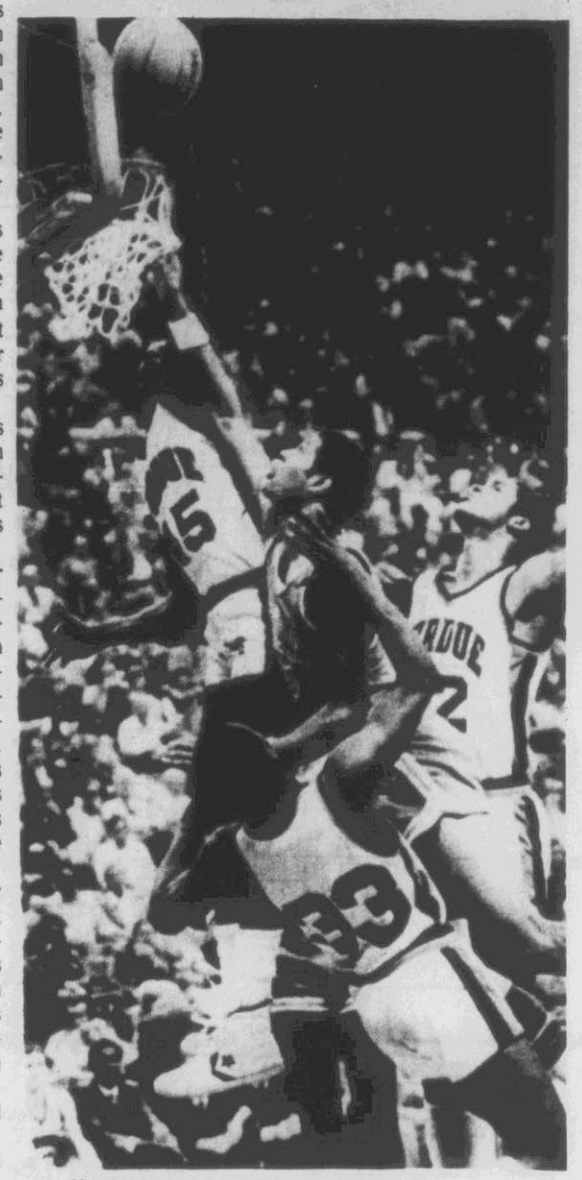

The victory was the 14th in the last 17 games for the unranked Bruins, 22-9, who posted victories over Old Dominion, top-ranked DePaul, Ohio State, and Clemson in earlier NCAA tournament games. Purdue, ranked 20th, takes a 22-10 record into Monday night consolation game against Iowa.

Pruitt was the only other player to score in double figures for UCLA with 12 points. Three players accouned for all but eight of Purdue's points—Edmonson with 23, Carroll with 17 and Drake Morris with 12.

UCLA hit 50 percent of its shots from the field, 23 of 46, but Purdue could manage just 43.1 percent on 25 of 58. For several stretches of the game.

Griffith Stuns Iowa

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Things went just about the way the Louisville Cardinals wanted Saturday.

All-America Darrell Griffith had a banner day, and the rest of the team played up to its defensive potential. The result was a 80-72 victory over Iowa in the national semifinals of the NCAA basketball playoffs.

"We took good shots and got the ball where we wanted it," said Louisville Coach Denny Crum. "We even ran our delay game well at the end.

"And the thing that carried us was the thing that had been carrying us all season — our defense. You don't beat good teams unless you play good defense."

But it was Louisville's offense that caught everyone's eye at the Market Square Arena, particulary the offense of Griffith who scored a near-record 34 points.

"I took what was given to me," said Griffith. "I didn't force anything. The tempo had to be set at the start and the game started out with a fast tempo. That was to our advantage."

While Griffith was shooting it up for the Cardinals, Iowa's star, Ronnie Lester, was being shut down by an injury early in the game."

"Once he went out, it hurt us in a number of way," said Iowa Coach Lute Olson. "It hurt us in leadership and the fact that we had one less player to use."

Regarding Griffith, the Iowa coach noted: "We wanted to make him earn his points and keep his percentage down. We didn't care if he got 50 — as long as his percentage was low."

It turned out that the Hawkeyes failed in their goal. Griffith made 67 percent of his shots from the floor.

Olson said that his team was tight at the start of the game.

"We were concerned about Louisville's shot-blocking abillity and we weren't taking the shots that we normally take," Olson said.

While applauding Griffith as outstanding, Crum also praised freshman Rodney McCray for his defense.

"Rodney is an overlooked player on this team," Crum said. "He may not get the notice but he certainly has done a super job for us at both ends of the court."

The high-flying Griffith was practically the whole show for the nation's second-ranked team in Saturday's opening game, dominating both halves with every conceivable type of shot except his patented slam dunk.

The 6-foot-4 guard, with a vertical jump of four feet, scored 18 of Louisville's first 22 points and finished with the half with that figure as the Cardinals built a 34-29 lead at intermission.

Griffith scored 16 more points in the second half as the Metro Conference champion ran up its lead to as much as 11 points with seven minutes left and coasted home.

Griffith's performance was four points shy of the national semifinal record of 38 set by West Virginia's Jerry West against Louisville in 1959.

The Hawkeyes were greatly hampered by early loss of team leader Ronnie Lester, who reinjured his right knee while driving for the basket with 7:47 remaining in the first half. At that point Lester had scored 10 of Iowa's 17 points.

Louisville now is 32-3. Iowa, which tied for fourth in the Big Ten, dropped to 23-9. Louisville entered the semifinals as the Midwest Regional champion. Iowa won the East Regional.

Saturday's opener began as virtual shooting contest between Griffith and Lester.

Many of Griffith's shots were soft outside jumpers, and his 18 points helped the Cardinals mount a 22-17 lead with 8:10 remaining in the opening half.

Lester scored Iowa's first 10 points and kept the Hawkeyes within distance of the Cardinals in the early going.

When he was injured, he was fouled on the play and backcourt mate Kenny Arnold sank both free throw attempts to trim Louisville's lead to 22-19.

The knee that Lester hurt had been operated on in midseason, but Lester made a season-ending comeback to help drive the Hawkeyes into the national semifinals.

A few minutes after Iowa had trimmed Louisville's lead to 22-21 on a basket by Steve Wa[illegible] the Cardinals took charge of the game's flow late in the first half. They outscored the Hawkeyes 12-6 to take a five-point lead into the dressing room.

The second half belonged to Louisville as the Metro Conference champions moved out to a 48-40 lead and later boosted it to 66-65.

The closest that Iowa came after that was 67-63 with 3:48 remaining.

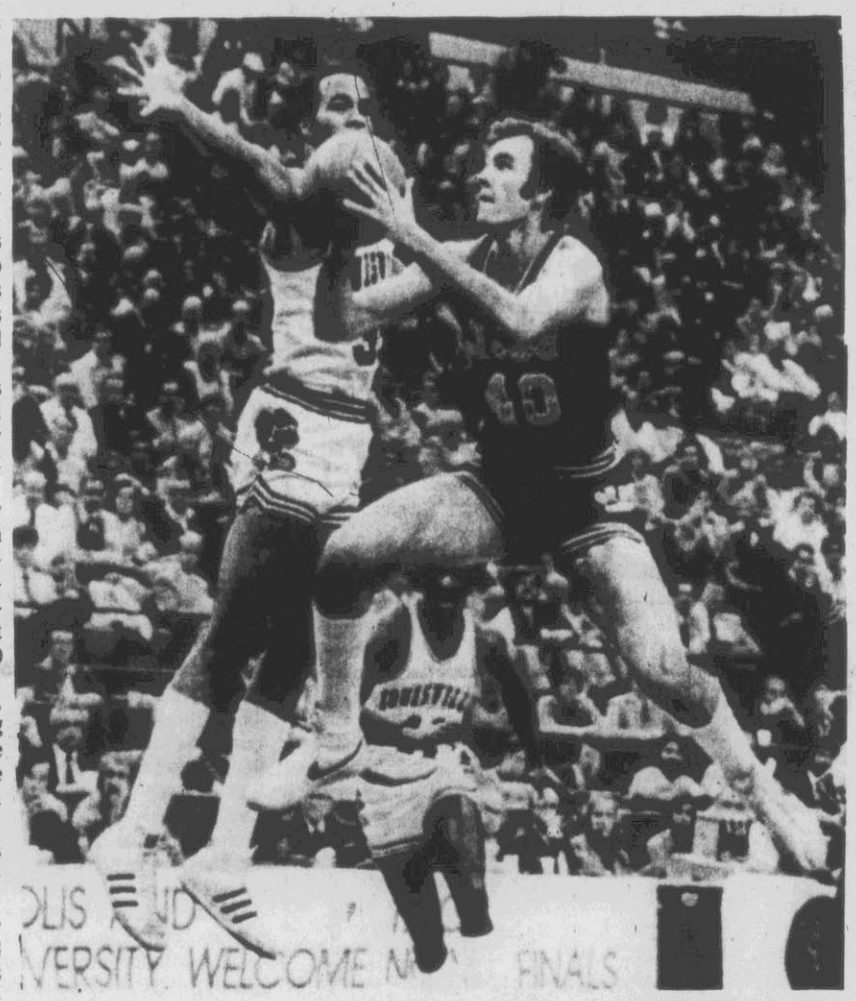

After Iowa got to within four points, Louisville nailed down the victory by outscoring the Hawkeyes 13-9, with eight of the Cardinals' points coming in the last minute.

Rodney McCray added 14 points to Louisville's attack while Derek Smith added 13. Along with Griffith they were the only players in double figures for Louisville.

Lester was one of four Hawkeyes in double figures. Arnold wound up with a team-leading 20 points while Vince Brookins scored 14 and Steve Krafcisin contributed 12.

The game was witnessed by a

East Carolina Rolls Past Spiders, 10-3

RICHMOND, Va. — East Carolina University struggled to gain a 4-1 victory over the Richmond Spiders in Greenville a week ago, but had little trouble in a return match, rolling to a 10-3 win Saturday afternoon.

The win boosted the Pirate record to 8-2 on the year, and was their third straight victory since recording both of the losses.

Mickey Britt picked up his third victory of the season during the game, going the distance. He had some shakey moments, giving up 13 hits along the way, but he was able to pitch out of the jam most of the time.

It wasn't until long after the Pirates had taken command of the game that the Spiders got to him for a run.

East Carolina banged out 11 hits during the afternoon, including two doubles, a triple and a home run, the latter by Billy Best, his second of the season.

East Carolina started the scoring parade in the top of the first, getting a single run. Butch Davis opened the game with a triple, scoring when Kelly Robinette bounced out to the infield.

Two singles gave Richmond an early threat in its half of the frame, but neither team could do anything else until the fourth.

Then, the Pirates broke it open.

Best opened the inning with his home run, a solo blast. Raymie Styons was then dusted off, getting hit by a pitch. Rick Derechailo followed with a single and Macon Moye reached on an error, allowing Styons to score.

John Hallow followed with another hit, driving in Derechailo, and Todd Hendley's grounder to third was thrown away at the plate, letting Moye reach safely.

Mike Sorrell finished up the scoring, grounding out to the infield, but scoring Hallow with the fifth run of the inning.

That made it 6-0.

East Carolina added three more in the fifth. Best opened with a single and that sent starter pitcher Tim Cecil to the showers. Styons drew a walk off reliever Paul Bernsdorf and with one away, Moye reached on another error, scoring Best. Hallow singled in Styons, and Hendley singled, scoring Moye. That made it 9-0.

Richmond finally broke onto the scoreboard in the bottom of the inning. Rick Bishop reached on a fielder's choice, erasing an earlier runner. An error on the attempt to double up Bishop allowed him to go on to second. Meade Langhorne reached on another error, and Manard Warren's single brought in Bishop.

The Spiders got their other two in the eighth. Randy Milligan got a one-out singled and moved to third on Tommy Dozier's double. Ken Harvey grounded out, scoring Milligan. Ron Delduca singled in Dozier with the final Spider run.

The Spiders left men in scoring position in the fourth, sixth and seventh, and saw a double play end the game with the bases loaded.

East Carolina's other run was in the top of the ninth. Derechailo led off with a double and moved up on an infield out. He scored when Hendley singled.

The Pirates return home today to open a two-game series against Ohio University. The game today starts at 2 p.m., and the one Monday at 3 p.m.

Narrow Miss: Pirate Runners Almost Lost Out, Then Almost Won

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

For a brief moment during the trial heats of the NCAA Championships last Friday, East Carolina track coach Bill Carson was not believing what he was seeing.

There was Stan Curry, the lead runner on ECU's mile relay team, being bumped, not once but twice. Memories of last year's championship flooded Carson's brain.

It was a year ago that Carson watched his team's chances of gaining All-America honors vanish when during the finals an Indiana runner collided with Terry Perry, knocking him unconscious.

Now, a year later, it all seemed to be happening again. As Curry stumbled, ECU's chances of making it into the finals Saturday looked bleak.

Then, suddenly, Curry regained his balance. Despite being last among the four teams in the heat, the Hagerstown Junior College transfer forged ahead.

"We got to the second turn and the inside guy couldn't get around me," Curry said. "So he knocked me out of my lane. Then the guy behind me pushed me to the outside.

"I didn't want to give up, though. At first I didn't know what to do. Then I heard the guys yelling at me to go on. So I kept going. I knew what had happened last year."

When the Pirates crossed the finish line in third — only the top two finishers from each trial heat qualify for the finals— ECU's indoor track season seemed at an end. But when the second place team was disqualified the Pirates were in the finals.

There, after leading until the last 18 yards, the Pirates wound up third, the highest finish ever achieved at ECU in NCAA Division I competition.

That third place finish earned Curry, Carlton Bell, Otis Melvin and Shawn Laney All-America honors. For Melvin and Laney, the awards had added significance.

Laney became the first ECU freshman to ever to be an All-America while Melvin is the first two-sport All-America the school has ever had. Melvin won All-American honors in the 200-meter dash outdoors last year.

Being a senior and, along with Bell, returning from last year's relay team, Melvin may have been the catalyst this season for the Pirates, especially at the championships in Detriot.

"I got the fellows together and told them we could win it," Melvin said. "At first I think they thought I was just talking, but after a while I think they knew I was serious.

"We knew what we had to do and after last year we wanted to show all the teams up there that we were just as good as they were," he said. "I told the guys if they wanted it bad enough we could do it."

Curry, for one, was skeptical.

"To tell the truth when we were sitting around and listening to Otis talk we thought he was just trying to psyche us up," Curry said. "But then while he was talking I noticed some seriousness in his eyes and it was then that I thought he was being serious and really thought we could win."

Seemingly buoyed by Melvin's show of confidence, Curry, a junior college all-american six times in two seasons, worked his way through traffic and staked ECU to an early lead in the finals Saturday.

Eight teams were in the finals, in heats of four, with the best time of the eight winning the title. Going into Saturday's relay, ECU's qualifying time of 3:19.78 was faster than that of only one team.

"Leading off, I wanted to get us an early lead. I wanted us to get out ahead," said Curry, whose split was 49.3. "I didn't want to happen to us what happened Friday."

Curry avoided the bumping by taking the lead and maintaining it.

"Stan had pulled ahead of the pack by five to eight yards and when I saw him coming to me I said, 'Hey, Stan's got the lead, now I've got to do it.'" Bell said.

And do it he did, turning in the fastest of the team's four splits, 48.9. Not only that, but he had increased ECU's lead to eight yards as Melvin took the baton.

"When I got the stick I had a pretty good lead," Melvin said. "I knew I needed to keep that and maybe make it bigger if I could. I run better when I'm ahead and so I was glad when I saw Carlton was in front. When I got the stick I just took it and went."

Break Two Meet Marks

RICHMOND — East Carolina University claimed two winners in the Richmond Invitational track meet here Saturday, one each for the men's and women's teams.

Cookie McPhatter won the 800-meter dash in a meet record time of 2:14.5, a full-second faster than the old mark. She had to chase down Richmond's Patty Thurman in the final 40 meters to gain the victory in a race called by some observers as the best of the day.

Then, in the triple-jump, Herman McIntyre set a new meet record, soaring 49 feet, 2 inches. That easily surpassed the old mark of 45 feet, 7½ inches.

Performance Pleased Card Star Griffith

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Iowa's game plan was to deny guard Darrell Griffith the ball and the Louisville senior answered it with what he called "the most satisfying performance" of his career.

"It means so much at this time to do well," Griffith said after hitting 14-of-21 shots and scoring 34 points Saturday in Louisville's NCAA semifinal victory over Iowa.

Griffith scored 16 of his team's first 18 points and the Hawkeyes played catch-up from then on.

"I took what was given to me," said Griffith. "I didn't force anything. The tempo had to be set at the start and the game started out with a fast tempo. That was to our advantage."

"We wanted to make him earn his points and keep his percentage down," said Iowa Coach Lute Olson. "I didn't care if he got 50 points as long as his percentage wasn't high."

Olson had no complaint with his club's defense.

"He played as well against us as any player has ever played against us that I can remember," said Olson.

Kenny Arnold had the early assignment of guarding Griffith. Guard Ronnie Lester took him briefly and Olson also moved the 6-foot-6 Kevin Boyle out from forward in an effort to stop 6-4 Griffith.

"I was just trying to deny him the ball and play him tight, but he was getting his shots off and they were dropping. There's just not much you can do about that," said Arnold.

"We played very well and had good discipline on offense," said Louisville Coach Denny Crum, who is in the championship game for the first time in his third trip to the Final Four.

"Our defense and rebounding was very good. You don't beat good teams if you don't play good defense," Crum said. "I get tired of hearing we're a run-and-gun team."

"He's a superior jumper on the boards and did a great job defensively. Without Rodney, we wouldn't here. He stepped in when his brother Scooter got hurt and held us together," he said.

Iowa's hopes were hurt when guard Ronnie Lester, who scored the first 10 Hawkeye points left the game with his club trailing 22-17 after receiving what Olson said was a bruise.

"It wasn't a reinjury," explained Olson. "The doctor was concerned that if we didn't keep it iced, he'd have swelling. We expect him to play Monday."

Lester, Iowa's all-time leading scorer, who missed about half his team's games this season due to two operations on his right knee, never returned.

"It hurt us in terms of leadership," said Olson about the loss. "We were suddenly forced to go with six players, instead of seven."

crowd 16,147 and was seen nationally on NBC-TV.

Besides Griffith's offense, Louisville was helped by the non-offense of Kevin Boyle. A 12.5-average scorer, Boyle did not get a point, missing all eight shots from the floor. He did not go to the foul line.

Griffith connected of 14 of 21 shots from the field and six of eight from the foul line. In addition to his game-high point total, he also handed out six assists was credited with three steals, five rebounds and two blocked shots.

The Cardinals shot 54 percent from the field to only 37 percent for Iowa and they outrebound the Big Ten team to 31-15.

the Boilermakers inexplicably neglected to work the ball inside to Carroll, even though they were unable to hit consistently from the outside. As a result, Purdue's offense never really got untracked.

The 6-foot-8 Vandeweghe, UCLA's leading scorer with a 19.5 average, worked effectively inside during the early minutes and scored 12 of his team's first 19 points. The Bruins outscored Purdue 10-3 in the final minutes of the half to lead 33-25 at intermission. Vandeweghe had 16 points in the half and Daye, a 6-7 guard, scored six points in the last two minutes.

After Carroll converted an offensive rebound to bring Purdue within for at 39-35, UCLA got its running game going. Sanders scored from the left baseline, Vandeweghe hit a fast break layup off a feed from Daye, and Foster sank a 12-footer over Carroll for a 10-point lead with 13:37 to play.

The Bruins slowed the pace down after that and Purdue took advantage to close the gap. Foster fouled out with UCLA leading 57-50, but Purdue quickly scored six points from the foul line to pull within one. The Boilermakers, however, never were able to even the score and Vandeweghe's clutch shooting from the line clinched the victory.

Rounding the final curve of the 167-meter track, Melvin handed the baton and a 14-yard lead to Laney.

Only 440 yards stood between ECU and its first NCAA Division I national title. The Pirates, with Laney, their most experienced board runner at anchor leg, appeared in firm control.

That is until Florida State's Walter McCoy got the baton. McCoy, one of the three best quarter milers in the nation this year, caught Laney with 18 yards to go. When Laney stumbled soon after Maryland's anchor man also pulled ahead, leaving ECU to finish third at 3:17.1, behind the Seminoles' 3:16.64 and Maryland's 3:16.75.

"I knew Florida State and Morgan State had 45 second quarter milers," Laney said. "And I knew I needed to get out fast and sustain our lead. There at the end I heard the Florida State guy on my back and I knew he was coming so I gave it my all."

Ironically, on Friday the Seminoles appeared twice to be out of the championships.

During the trial heats, the Seminoles lost their leadoff runner when he pulled a hamstring as he handed off. Later, Florida State was disqualified after McCoy was caught throwing an elbow.

"The Florida State coach protested," Carson said. "He said that since both teams involved were going to the finals anyway that the judges shouldn't disqualify them."

The judges agreed and Florida State was back in the finals — if they could find a new leadoff runner. A quick phone call to Tallahassee brought Milton Boddie on the next plane.

"He actually was better than their first runner," Carson said. "Had he not run like he did I don't know if they would have been close enough to make that run at us.

"McCoy was probably the only guy who could have caught Shawn and he did. You'll notice I haven't said much about Maryland. Well, they would never have caught us had Shawn not broken stride. That allowed the Maryland kid to pass him."

It was no accident that ECU's mile relay team was in the finals and did as well as it did. Carson had laid the groundwork during the regular season, taking his runners on the road to some of the best meets in the nation.

"We based our entire indoor schedule on meets in which we could run against the best mile relay teams in the nation," Carson said. "We went to the Vitalis Olympic Invitational, the Milrose Games, the AAU meet, all of them in New York, because we wanted that board experience and we wanted to run the best.

"The athletes sacrificed some, because we were up and down the roads," Carson added. "For example, one weekend we drove to New York, which is a 10-hour drive, and then the next morning we went to Cleveland, a nine-hour drive. The next day we got up and drove home, another nine-hours. So we were on the road for 36 hours in three days.

"They ran two hard races up there and did well, everything considered. There was a method to this madness, though, and that was that I knew we had a good relay team and that it needed the kind of competition we were getting."

It did not take Carson long to discover that this year's mile relay team had the makings of a champion. He knew it as early as December 4, when he took them to Lehigh University.

"I just wanted to see where we stood and when they came in with a 3:16.5 I knew that we were going to have a good team," Carson said. "But I guess this year it was in the cards for Florida State to win it. But we'll be back."

Brown Finds It Hard To Celebrate Victory

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Larry Brown has brought UCLA to the threshhold of another NCAA championship, but the first-year Bruins coach, heir to one of college basketball's greatest traditions, finds it difficult to be overly jubilant.

"I looked at Lee Rose as he left. I would have hated to be in the position he is," Brown said Saturday after the Bruins beat Rose's Purdue Boilermakers 67-62 in the NCAA semifinals.

The victory put UCLA, bidding for its 11th national championship, into Monday night's title game against Louisville, an 80-72 winner over Iowa.

"I'm so proud of our kids, and I'm really pleased to be able to play for the national championship, but it's a tough feeling for me to be ecstatic right now," Brown said.

The UCLA victory capped an improbable turnaround after a dismal start in which the Bruins lost six of their first 14 games. They finished fourth in the Pac-10 Conference and wouldn't have even been in the tournament had the NCAA not expanded the field to 48 teams.

Now, with a 22-9 record — UCLA's worst in 17 years — the Bruins have victories over top-ranked DePaul, Ohio State and the Boilermakers under their belts and feel ready to play for the championship.

"It's going to be a helluva tough job," Brown said. "Louisville plays a lot bigger than they are. But that really doesn't concern me. I'm just glad our kids get a chance to play against a great player like (Darrell) Griffith."

Griffith, the Cardinals' All-American guard, scored 34 points in the victory over Iowa. But the Bruins showed they can stop a big scorer by holding Purdue's All-American Joe Barry Carroll to 17 points, denying him the ball consistently.

"It was difficult for him to get the ball because of the outstanding defense by UCLA," said Rose, who also lost in the NCAA semifinals three years ago when he coached North Carolina-Charlotte. "We ran through all the offenses we have, and we still couldn't get the ball to him."

The Boilermakers, third-place finishers in the Big Ten, beat conference champion Indiana and then Duke en route to the showdown with UCLA. The last time the Boilermakers played the Bruins in the NCAA tournament was in 1969, when Lew Alcindor led UCLA to a 20-point victory in the title game.

Greene Central Rally Tops Rose, 8-7

By LARRY SULLIVAN
Reflector Sports Writer

SNOW HILL— Rose High baseball Coach Ronald Vincent called his squad's game here Saturday a "real good warm-up" for next week's conference action, but he would have liked to walk away a winner.

Instead, his unit powered its way to a 6-2 lead after five and a half innings of play before watching as the Greene Central Rams strike for five runs in the sixth inning and take a tense, 8-7 victory in the cold unbaseball-like weather Saturday afternoon.

"This was a real good warm-up game in preparation for next Tuesday's conference opener," the coach explained. "It's good to let the guys play in pressure situations. We were trying to give all of our pitchers some playing time," he said.

The homestanding Rams welcomed Rampant starter Kenny Barnes with a quick first-inning run as lead off batter Greg Holmes singled and scored on Al Murray's double. But the Rose right-hander buckled down after that, allowing only one more run through the next five innings.

Greene Central protected its one-run cushion for two innings before Rose jumped on Ram starter Ronnie Tyndall for four third inning runs. Jeff Wilson started the inning by gathering a walk and was tripled home by Rose shortstop Mark Douglas. Will Barrett was hit by a pitch before Roger Williams hit into a fielder's choice, bringing home Wilson. Barnes then followed with a booming home run over the left field fence for the third and fourth runs of the stanza.

"I think Barnes pitched and hit well," Vincent said after the game. The homer was Barnes' second in two games.

Rose added a fifth run in the fifth inning when Barnes walked and scored on Emmett Walsh's double. Rose had a chance to score a couple of more runs, but Walsh was caught trying to stretch his double into a triple and Mike Campbell, who singled after Walsh, was left stranded on third base.

With his team holding the comfortable four run lead, Vincent replaced Barnes with young southpaw Chris Jones in the bottom of the sixth. Jones was greeted by a five-run outburst by the home team, giving them a short-lived one run advantage. The first two Rams walked and Walt Tyndall singled, leaving the bases loaded. After a strikeout, Jeff Scott walked and Chip Hardy singled, both bringing home a run, and David Shirley followed with a two-run shot. With two gone, and men at the corners, Jones balked Hardy home for the fifth run.

Rose responded with a run of its own in the top of the seventh to knot the score. Todd Galloway, who came on in relief of Jones, walked to lead off the inning. Galloway scored on Ram catcher Jebo Fulghum's throwing error. Rose loaded the bases with two outs before a groundout ended the threat.

Greene Central, needing only a run in the bottom of the seventh to avenge a earlier loss to the Rampants, got just what it needed. Jeff Porter took over the mound duties for Greenville in the seventh and proceeded to fan the first man he faced. But catcher Walsh mis-handled the third strike, allowing Robin Bowen to advance to first base. Al Murray followed with a single and Tyndall sacrified the runners to second and third with a bunt. After intentionally walking Fulghum, Hardy connected on his third hit of the game to drive home the winning run.

Mark Shank, Walsh and Campbell each collected a pair of Rose hits in the game. Hardy and Murray rapped out three hits apiece for Greene Central while Tyndall and Shirley both slapped out two Ram hits.

Al Speight picked up the win for the Rams, working four innings and giving up three runs on six hits while walking three. Ronnie Tyndall worked the first three innings for GC, allowing four runs on three hits while walking four and striking out one.

Porter suffered the loss, his first, and the team's first, of the season. He allowed a run on two hits in his one inning of work. Galloway gave up a hit during his stint. Jones surrendered five runs on a pair of hits while walking three and fanning one. Barnes gave up a couple of runs on six hits. He walked a pair and struck out one.

Austin Defeats King

Tracy Austin returns to Bille Jean King Saturday at New York's Madison Square Garden during the $300,000 women's tennis championships. Austin's 6-3, 6-1 victory placed her in the finals against Martina Navratilova. Navratilova defeated Evonne Goolagong. (AP Laserphoto)

Navratilova, Austin Move Past King, Goolagong In Tourney

NEW YORK (AP) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova, confident and powerful, downed Evonne Goolagong of Australia 6-2, 3-6, 6-0 and second-seeded Tracy Austin was nearly perfect in her shotmaking to defeat a frustrated Billie Jean King 6-3, 6-1, in the semifinals of the women's tennis championships Saturday.

This tourney is known as the Avon women's championships.

Last year Navratilova beat Austin for this title, the only one of their 13 matches since 1979 that went three sets. Navratilova holds a 13-7 career edge, including easy victories in both matches this year.

Despite the vocal support of the Madison Square Garden crowd, the 36-year-old King could find no answer to Austin's precise strokes.

"The crowd's fantastic," said King. "But it disappoints me when I can't follow through."

King, now 0-5 against Austin, knew she could not trade baseline power,so she resorted to lobs and spins, all to no avail.

She knew she had to be letter perfect to keep Austin off balance, but the third-seeded King just missed too many of her shots, including a whopping 16 errors off her forehand.

And when King was able to rush the net, Austin repeatedly scored with accurate backhand passing shots. Not once in the 57-minute match was King able to break Austin's soft but well-placed serves.

"I missed too many easy shots," said King. "There was no conviction behind my forehand returns."

"I felt Billie Jean tried to change her game against me," said Austin. "She was trying a lot of spins and funny shots instead of just playing straight. I didn't think it was one of Billie Jean's best matches."

When the players switched courts following the first game of the second set, King slammed her racket down in frustration. "Get into it Billie," shouted one fan. But Tracy stopped any potential King momentum by immediately breaking serve for a 2-0 lead.

Austin also broke King's serve in the sixth for a 5-1 edge. Again the crowd exhorted the veteran.

After rushing the net and having Tracy pass her with a sizzling forehand, King again tossed her racket to the ground. Austin then wrapped up the match when King netted a forehand.

"She was down 5-1 in the second set and everybody started cheering,"Austin said. "You have to expect that."

Did it bother her?

"Not as long as I'm up 5-1 in the second set," said the youngster.

Navratilova, winner of five of six tournaments she entered on this year's tour, rolled to her 37th victory in 38 matches. The aggressive left-hander was devastating at the net in the first set. But the fourth-seeded Goolagong gained control of the net and her serve-and-volley game soared in the second set.

But it was all Navratilova in the deciding set as she steamrolled with blazing passing shots and accurate volleys.

"In the third set I concentrated better," said Navratilova, the world's top-ranked female player. "I was upset that I lost the second set. She played better, but I lost that second set. She didn't beat me."

Navratilova lost only five games in two matches to Tracy on the winter tour.

"I'm going to have to jump on her serve a lot," Navratilova said. "I know that I'll have to hit a good approach shot and see if I can put more pressure on her. My serve is pretty much my game."

Austin, who has won three of five tour events in building a 23-2 match record in 1980, felt she had a built-in advtantage over Navratilova.

"I think she has all the pressure because she's number one," Austin said. "She's a lot more overpowering than Billie Jean. I'll have to play a lot more consistently."

Blue To Talk Again

Blue, who feuded with reporters during a dismal year in 1979 and said at the start of spring training this season he would not talk to them again about baseball, said Friday he was ending his no-interview policy.

"I gave it some thought and decided I would start talking to all the writers except one," the San Francisco Giants' left-hander said. "I will discuss my pitching performance, but I'm not going to talk about what the manager or other players are doing.

"The only writers I'm not talking to are those who are afraid I might pull a gun," he said referring to Glen Schwarz of the San Francisco Examiner, who said last season that Blue threatened to "blow him away," a threat the pitcher denied making.

Teammate John Montefusco had also pledged not to talk to reporters and so far the formerly publicity-hungry pitcher has kept quiet as he said he would.

Ty Cobb was the youngest major leaguer to make 3,000 hits, accomplishing that notable feat at the age of 34.

Lady Pirates Post Three Wins

East Carolina University's women's softball team opened the 1980 season yesterday, winning three games in their own Round Robin held at Evans Park. The Lady Pirates were on their way to a fourth win when darkness halted the proceedings.

N.C. State's Lady Wolfpack also won three games, having its final game halted by darkness also. The trio of wins boosted the Wolfpack record to 7-0 on the year.

East Carolina jumped on Appalachian State by a 16-1 score in the opening game, while Western Carolina was beating UNC-Greensboro, 10-7.

Following those games, North Carolina delivered a 19-6 pasting to Western Carolina and State gained an 11-1 win over Greensobor.

The third round of games saw State dump Appalachian, 12-7, and East Carolina whitewash the Tar Heels, 9-0.

East Carolina downed Western, 10-6, in the fourth round, with Greensboro nipping Appalachian, 8-7.

State slipped past Western Carolina, 8-6, and Carolina shutout Appalachian, 7-0, in the next round.

With the final round underway, darkness halted the games, with Carolina and State knotted at 2-2 and East Carolina leading Greensboro, 5-3.

East Carolina is now 3-0, State, 7-0; Appalachian 0-4; Western 1-3; Carolina 8-1; and UNC-G, 1-4.

Trevino's Birdie Gives Him TPC Lead

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Lee Trevino birdied the final hole to take the lead over one of golf's most impressive fields and set up a spectacular pairing for the last group in today's final round of the Tournament Players Championship.

Out Of A Trap

Tom Watson comes out of a sand trap on the 6th green during second round action at the Sawgrass Country Club Friday. Watson finished the day at 71, one-under-par, for a total of 140 in the $440,000 Tournament Players Championship. (AP Laserphoto)

The last group in the final round will consist of Trevino, Gary Player and Jack Nicklaus, a group which has won a combined total of 28 major professional titles.

"It doesn't matter to me," Trevino shrugged after his six-foot putt on the 18th hole had lifted him clear of the field. "I'm not playing them. I'm playing the golf course. It doesn't matter to me who I'm playing with."

Nicklaus had virtually the same reaction.

"It doesn't make any difference to me who's up there," he said. "I can't do anything about them. I can't control them. I can only control what I do. If I play well, I'm going to be up there somewhere. If I don't play well, one of them is going to win it."

But they weren't alone at the top of this prestigious event that is billed as the annual championship of golf's touring pros. The list-almost a who's who of the game's greats-included Tom Watson, Hale Irwin and British Open champion Seve Ballesteros, along with Hubert Green.

"It is very impressive," said Player. "It means that whoever wins will have to play a brilliant round of golf. With that amount of talent, you can't play an ordinary round and expect to win. The winner will have to be brilliant, shooting maybe 67 to win."

All three of the men in the final group obviously anticipate victory.

"I'd dearly love to win this one," said Player.

"That's what it's all about," said Nicklaus.

"I have my mind set on winning," said Trevino, then grinned. "But I have my mind set on winning every time I tee it up. Sometimes it doesn't happen, but that's what I'm thinking about every time.

"You look at that field and it's pretty strong. Anybody within two or three shots can win. I just happen to be ahead right now, that's all."

Of the eight men now fully active on the tour who have won two or more major titles, five were on the leaderboard.

Green, the deeply talented man with the unorthodox swing, matched the course record with a 6-under-par 66 and held second alone at 209.

Next, at 210, were Player, the little globe-trotter from South Africa who came into this one with a string of five wins in seven foreign events over the winter, and young Curtis Strange. Player shot a 69 and Strange, a 25-year-old who scored his lone pro victory last fall in Pensacola, had a 71.

The group at 211 included Ballesteros, the British Open champion from Spain, Don Pooley, Peter Jacobsen and Nicklaus, seeking to end a 20-month non-winning string. All shot 69s in the cool, sunny weather that featured relatively light winds, light when compared with the howling gales that traditionally rake this links-type course.

Irwin, Watson, Brad Bryant and Jay Haas were at 212. Irwin, who led or shared the lead through the first two rounds, slipped to a 73. Watson matched par 72 despite a double bogey from the water on the 16th hole. Haas shot a 67 and Bryant had a 69.

The pairings for Sunday's final round will have Trevino, Player and Nicklaus in the last group off the tee.

It was an incredible shootout. No one was able to pull away from the field. No more than two shots ever separated the leader from the pack.

There was Trevino with birdies on the first two holes moving into position.

There was the mighty Nicklaus, so grimly pursuing the title he needs to confirm his comeback, taking another double-bogey 7 on the eighth hole, then bounding back into the middle of it with birdies on four of five holes coming home.

There was the doughty little Player, grinding away with the concentration that has gained him more than 110 world wide titles, stringing together three birdies in five holes.

There was Watson, currently the game's dominant force, a single shot out of the lead and then falling back with the shot that found the water on the 16th.

There was Irwin, twice a U.S. Open champion and the current holder of the American national title, bouncing one off a cartpath to the water on the 17th.

And, at the end, there was Nicklaus, holing a 15-footer to save par on the 18th hole, and Trevino dropping a six-footer on the same hole to take the lead alone.

Trevino shrugged off any implications to be found in his pairing for Sunday.

"Makes no different to me," he said. "I'm playing the golf course."

But Trevino, who has won at least one title in every season since 1968, found time to give credit to close friend J.C. Snead.

"I'd been hitting it awful," Trevino said. "I'd didn't know what it was. I'd go to bed hoping I'd wake up with a swing the next day. Or course, I didn't.

"Early this week," he said. "I was out beating balls and J.C. came by, riding a bicycle with his little boy behind him. He watched me a minute and said I had it too open. I moved my right foot just a little bit and there it was. I had it back. I knew it the first ball I hit. And I've been hitting it good ever since.

"If I win this golf tournament, I'm gonna have to do something for J.C., 'cause he sure has something to do with it."

SOME SMALL BALM

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Would you believe $230,500 in earnings for a pro golfer who did not win a tournament all last year? Bill Rogers did that well in 1979 and set a record doing it.

"I would have liked to have won," Rogers said. "But $230,500 isn't a bad record to have.

Conley Dumps Panthers, 12-1

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley scored seven times in the first two innings and rolled to a 12-1 baseball victory over North Pitt Saturday in an Eastern Carolina Conference game.

The Vikings got all they were to need in the first inning scoring three times. Arnell Credle singled and Micah Dixon reached on an eror. Curtis Spencer then doubled in both runners, scoring himself when Roy Lassiter singled.

The second saw four more Vikings cross the plate. Doug McRoy singled and courtesy runner Terrance Rountree stole second, scoring when Sammy Tucker doubled. Credle walked and both stole up a base. Dixon then reached on an infield hit. Spencer doubled in two runs, and a double by Lassiter scored the fourth of the inning, making it 7-0.

Conley added two in the fourth, one in the fifth and two more in the sixth.

The lone Panther run came in the fourth. Robert Bunn singled and scored when Melvin Howard reached on an error.

Lassiter led the Conley hitting with four, while Dixon and Spencer each had three, and Tucker and McRoy had two each. Greg Briley led the North Pitt hitting with three.

The Vikes are now 2-1, and travel to Ayden-Grifton on Tuesday. North Pitt entertains C.B. Aycock on Tuesday.

After being tied in the top of the fifth, the Lady Jaguars rallied for three in their half of the frame for the final 9-6 margin.

Hope Strickland led the Farmville hitting with three, including a double, while Sheila Fullerton, Debbie Gowen, Diana Gordon and Angie O'Brien each had two. One of O'Brien's was a triple.

Birth had three, while Jackson, Demery, and Edmundson each had two for Tarboro.

Roanoke Rolls Past Cougars

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke High School rebounded from a four-run deficit at the top of the inning to come back with 11 in its own half of the frame and went on to record an 18-8 win over Southwest Edgecombe Saturday.

Southwest jumped ahead with four in the top of the first. Boyd singled and Taylor reached on a fielder's choice. Harrell was safe on an error, loading the bases. Norwood then singled in one run and Proctor's hit brought in two more. Bell reached on an error, scoring Norwood with the fourth run.

Roanoke then exploded for 11 in the bottom of the frame.

Ricky Simpson started it with a solo home run. Steve Wallace singled and Glenn Cargile walked. Wiley Keel singled to score Wallace. Joey Ross walked and Angelo Spruill's double brought in two runs. Wesley Johnson walked and another double, by Jesse Matthews brought in two more runs, putting Roanoke ahead, 6-4.

Simpson provided three more with his second home run of the inning. Edwards Grimes kept it going with a single, and Cargile walked. Keel reached on an error, allowing both runners to come around.

Roanoke added two in the third, one each in the fourth and fifth and three in the sixth. Southwest scored twice each in the third and fifth.

Simpson, Cargile (solo homer in the fifth), Spruill, Matthews and Keel each had two hits for Roanoke, the latter three all adding doubles.

Boyd had three to pace the Cougars.

Plucky Iowa Lived And Died With Pain

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The plucky Iowa Hawkeyes lived with pain all year and they died with it Saturday in the semifinals of the NCAA basketball championship.

When Ronnie Lester, the team's all-time leading scorer went hurtling into a backstop with Louisville's Roger Burkman, reinjuring his right knee at 7:47 of the first half, the number was up for the Hawks, the surprise of the tournament.

"It definitely hurt us when Ron went out," said Iowa coach Lute Olson. "We had to play with six men instead of seven. Bad things have happened to us all year, but this team never quit, and it never will."

Lester, the 6-foot-2, 175-pound senior guard from Chicago, had missed 15 games with a knee injury during the season and had returned to action in the final game of the regular season.

During the period he was on the sidelines, Iowa had an 8-7 record. When he was in the lineup the team was 15-1, attesting to his value to the Big Ten team.

"His leadership has been invaluable," Olson said.

The coach said the standout guard had suffered only a bruise on the side of the knee and had not reactivated the old injury, which had required an operation.

"We could have used him but doctors said it would result in hemorrhaging," the coach added. "We didn't want to subject him to any further damage. He will be ready for the consolation game Monday night."

Lester had scored 10 points before he and Burkman collided and went scooting into the barrier.

Iowa, which had an unspectacular 23-8 record for the season and finished in a tie for third in the Big Ten Conference, was a team besieged with ailments and bad luck throughout the year.

They were christened "The Fabulous Few" because their squad was diminished to such small proportions that five and six players often carried the entire load. They were an "iron man" team but one prone to injury.

Vince Brookins, a junior forward, had a medical history that looked a hospital scorecard. At age 10, he had both legs broken above the knees when hit by a car. In high school, while waiting on the curb for a bus, he was stabbed by a man with a nine-inch knife during a racial riot. He underwent open heart surgery.

As an Iowa freshman, he tripped and injured his ankle. In his first Big Ten conference game, he broke a bone in his hand in collision with teammate Kevin Boyle and was out most of the year. Boyle, a junior guard, suffered a sprained ankle in a game against Indiana in late season and had 12 stitches taken in his head after a collision with Isaiah Thomas.

Mark Gannon, a 6-6 freshman who filled in for the injured Lester, suffered a knee injury in the second game against Michigan and didn't see action until he made a token appearance in Saturday's game against Louisville.

Kenny Arnold, the team's point guard and chief playmaker, broke a bone in his shooting hand and had to practice all week with the hand heavily bandaged.

Bob Hansen, a freshman who saw some action when Lester was on the sidelines, also broke a bone in his left hand and was severely handicapped.

Compounding the team's bad luck, assistant coach Tony McAndrews was injured in a private plane crash a month ago in Moline, Ill., while on a recruiting trip. He rejoined the squad only this week.

Athletes Still Favor Competition

American Athletes

Olympic athletes who had hoped to attend and participate in the Summer Olympic Games in Moscow meet with the press Friday in Washington. The group had just come from the White House where they heard President Carter say that the United States would not participate in the Moscow games. At left is Jane Frederick, a track competitor from Santa Barbara, Calif., who came to Washington with the hope that the President would change his mind. Seated are Flo Hyman, a volleyball player, and John Satterwhite, a shooting competitor. (AP Laserphoto)

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter didn't change many minds but American athletes now know emphatically that the United States will not compete in the Olympic Games this summer in Moscow.

Carter, who has pressed for two months for a international boycott of the Games as punishment to the Soviets for their occupation of Afghanistan, summoned 100 athletes to the White House Friday to tell them, face-to-face, that no U.S. team will go to Russia.

"I can't say at this moment what other nations will not go to the Summer Olympics in Moscow," Carter told the athletes during a 20 minute speech in the East Room. "Ours will not go.

"I say that not with any equivocation. The decision has been made."

Carter said it was necessary for the United States and other nations to "let our voices be heard in an absolutely clear way, and not add the imprimatur of approval to the Soviet Union and its government."

He said participation in the Olympic Games in Moscow would give the Soviets that approval.

Tass Hits Carter

MOSCOW (AP) — The Tass news agency said Saturday U.S. President Jimmy Carter had met with American athletes to stage "another provocative spectacle designed to galvanize anti-Soviet hysteria."

The bitter Tass dispatch from Washington attacked Carter"s Friday session with 100 American athletes at which he said:

"I can 't say at this moment what other nations will not go to the Summer Olympics in Moscow. Ours will not go."

Tass said the "meeting was organized for a single purpose — to brainwash sportsmen, to exert an unprecedented pressure on them and to fan up the campaign of chauvinism and anti-Sovietism."

Tass said that Carter has engaged in a "deliberate juggling with facts, distortion of the policies of other countries and malicious slander on the Soviet Union."

After the White House meeting, the athletes gave varying opinions on the Carter message but all agreed it was plain that he meant: "We aren't going to Moscow."

In a formal vote, 44 athletes voted against the Carter position, 29 supported a boycott and 24 abstained.

Fred Newhouse of Shreveport, La., a gold medal winner in track in 1976, said he supported the president two months ago because he thought it might save lives. Now, with no movement by the Soviet Union, he has changed his mind.

"I feel we are being used as small pawns in a big game," he said. "I just don't agree that the tactics he is taking is going to do much to Russia. Carter admits the Russians are not going to get out of Afghanistan. Well, if you are not playing to win, why play at all?"

Jane Frederick of Santa Barbara, Calif., a pentathlete, said she changed her mind after listening to Carter and other White House aides.

"After what I heard today, instead of voting anti-boycott, I abstained. I need to reassess my thinking. There are things that are greater than an individual and sports.

"I am not in sport for belligerent reasons," she said. "I grudgingly accept the boycott. I say grudgingly because the government has never supported us but now they need us."

Dick Tillman of Melbourne, Fla., a yachtsman, said the 360 sailors who have competed in the Olympic trials were polled and "support the president in any action he deems necessary."

He said the sailors "have decided to go on with the trials" and have made alternate plans to compete in Melbourne, Australia, this fall.

On the other hand, Jay Kearney of Lexington, Ky., said he opposed the boycott and would go to Moscow on his own if there were some feasible way for him to do so, if the U.S. Olympic Committee honors Carter's plea and votes not to send a team to Russia.

Contests Postponed

Wet grounds forced a number of athletic events by area teams to be cancelled or postponed over the weekend.

Rose's baseball game at Williamston was also cancelled because of the weather conditions.

Three Friday contests were reset for Saturday. They included Farmville Central at Ayden-Grifton and North Pitt at Conley in baseball and North Pitt at Conley softball.

Other postponments included Jamesville at Bath baseball, to April 16, Jamesville at Columbia (from Saturday), to April 30; Bear Grass at Chocowinity baseball, to Thursday; Tarboro at Farmville Central (from Saturday) baseball to April 19; Rose at Washington softball, to Monday; while no dates were set for Farmville at Ayden-Grifton softball and East Carolina at N.C. All sessions will meet in the Carol Belk Allied Health Building. Participants may attend skills labs on topics of their choice, designed for beginner, intermediate and advanced levels.

Investigation Under Way Into Mullins Case At Southern Cal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The University of Southern California is known for its excellence in athletics, but presently the Trojans are in the spotlight for other reasons, academic ones which they're not pleased about.

The Billy Mullins case is being investigated by the NCAA as well as the Los Angeles County district attorney's office. Mullins, a sprinter on the track team, in return reportedly plans to file a $5 million lawsuit.

Meanwhile, the Pacific-10 Conference and USC itself are looking into details of a controversial debate course last fall in which student-athletes reportedly were to get credit for a class they weren't attending.

Dr. E. John Larsen, the faculty athletic representative at USC, acknowledges that forfeits of victories by Trojan teams aren't out of the question.

"There's always that possibility, but I don't think it's probable because at issue is the Pacific-10 Conference 24-unit progress rule," said Larsen. "This requires student-athletes who compete this current academic year to pass 24 semester units of course work during the 1978-79 academic year.

"Therefore, the speech communications problem will be at issue when I measure the progress rule for eligibility beginning in the fall of 1980."

Mullins was one of the 34 student-athletes enrolled in last fall's debate class in which athletes allegedly were to receive credit although they were not attending the class. Most of the 34 students involved were members of the Southern Cal football team, which won the Rose Bowl game.

When the USC administration learned of the situation, a "crash course" was designed to allow the athletes to catch up on the work over the Christmas Holidays.

Mullins also reportedly received credits from four Los Angeles area community colleges in the fall of 1977, the semester before he entered USC. The two-year schools were Pasadena City College, Rio Hondo Community College, Los Angeles City College and West Los Angeles College.

Larsen said that Mullins, a senior, met the progress rule last year at USC, but "...if it is found that his Associate of Arts degree was awarded improperly and is subsequently withdrawn, that that could possibly cause some problems with respect to track and field.

Conley Girls Rip Pant-HERS

HOLLYWOOD — The D.H. Conley girls' softball team pushed in nine second inning runs on the way to a 23-6 victory over North Pitt yesterday.

It was the third straight win against no losses for the Valkyries.

Conley scored once in the first, on a home run by Tammy Streeter, then added nine in the second inning to take a 10-1 lead.

They added five in the third, including a three-run homer by Darlene Cannon, then picked up four in the fourth and four more in the sixth.

North Pitt got four in the fourth and two in the sixth, the latter on a homer by Cynthia Dupree.

Conley's hitting was led by Cannon, Pam Manning and Lori Kandrotas, each with three, while Cynthia Barnes, Lori Garrish and Joanne Franke each had two.

North Pitt was paced by J. Brown, Lisa Harrell and Tammy Jo Purvis, each with two.

'Say Hey Kid' Talking, Not Playing, Baseball

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — For the first time in 30 seasons, baseball great Willie Mays is not running and catching and throwing and hitting in the warm sun of spring training.

"I really like talking to kids because I have something to tell them," Mays says. "My message is, 'Hey, I come from a poor family. I didn't have the right education. It wasn't easy, but I made it to the top the hard way.'

"Then I tell them, 'Don't do it the way I did it.'"

The message is important to Mays, now pushing 49. But when a child asks whether he'd rather be talking to the Knights of Pythias or shagging flies in centerfield, the answer is quiet and wistful.

"If I could still play, I'd be playing baseball right now."

For 10 days a month, for the next 10 years, baseball Hall of Famer Willie Howard Mays Jr. will be a goodwill ambassador for Bally's Park Place casino hotel.

The pay is very good and well known by now — $100,000 a year to talk at elementary schools, play golf here and there, say hello to civic groups, greet high-rollers and pose for pictures with bused-in tourists.

"They don't push me to do anything. Whatever I do I want to do. It's good for the hotel and it's good for me," Mays says.

Mays loves to talk and talk baseball — that great over-the-shoulder catch in the '54 World Series, Sandy Koufax and Don Newcombe and Robin Roberts, artifical turf versus natural grass, his patented basket catch, his New York Giants, his San Francisco Giants and his New York Mets.

Before children who barely remember him, and older fans who recall every great play, Mays goes on and on like he's bantering with a buddy in a neighborhood tavern.

"Well, wouldn't YOU shake with Koufax on the mound?" he asks a child. "You say the Pirates, I say maybe the Phillies. Let's put a hundred on it and we'll see," he kids an old-timer.

Unless he is asked, Mays offers little about gambling or the casino hotel or the way Commissioner Bowie Kuhn threw him out of baseball when he took the job last October.

"I'll tell you just what I told the commissioner," he says. "I cannot gamble. I don't want to gamble. I'm in the community more than I'm in the hotel. I want to serve the people. I don't really see a conflict.

"And I told this to the commissioner," Mays adds. "I said, 'I don't feel I deserve this kind of handling after 22 years in baseball with never a scratch of trouble.

Three Overtimes Only Delayed The Inevitable As Bulls Lose

By The Associated Press

It was, Chicago Bulls Coach Jerry Sloan seemed to be saying, a matter of postponing the inevitable.

"The only disappointing fact came near the end of the first overtime when the score was tied and we had 10 seconds to win the game. But we had a complete breakdown and the ball was shot with reckless abandon and we were lucky we didn't lose it then," he said after Friday night's heartbreaker.

It took two more extra periods before the Bulls lost it. Bobby Wilkerson's eight points in the third overtime finally carried the Denver Nuggets to a 134-128 victory over Chicago.

Elsewhere it was Philadelphia 108, New Jersey 99; Atlanta 108, Detroit 95; San Antonio 116, Indiana 109; Milwaukee 121, Golden State 93; Kansas City 102, Utah 98; Seattle 107, San Diego 104, and Phoenix 111, Portland 100.

Wilkerson forced the first overtime with a last-second jump shot, Ricky Sobers put it into the third overtime with a three-point basket, then Wilkerson got a three-pointer of his own in the final session, when the Bulls missed five straight field goals attempts as Denver pulled away.

Dan Issel topped the Nuggets with 30 points, and Wilkerson added 23. David Greenwood led Chicago with 27 points while Reggie Theus and Dwight Jones had 24 apiece.

76ers 108, Nets 99

New Jersey Coach Kevin Loughery wasn't happy watching his starters kick the game away in the first half, so he did something about it. He put in his reserves for a while against Philadelphia and let them kick it away.

By halftime, the 76ers' lead was 64-52 and the margin widened to 21 points late in the third period. The Nets never got closer than 11 after that. Lionel Hollins had a season-high 26 points for the 76ers. Winfred Boynes paced the Nets with 21 and Cliff Robinson had 20.

Hawks 108, Pistons 95

John Drew's 29 points and Eddie Johnson's 28 helped Atlanta rally to beat the Piston's for the sixth time in six games this year and saddle them with their 10th consecutive defeat.

"In all six games against them they have beaten us in the first quarter," Johnson said of the Pistons, who led 31-24 after one period and 52-49 after two. "We overtake them in the second half. They are a young and aggressive team."

Spurs 116, Pacers 109

George Gervin pumped in nine of his game-high 41 points and Paul Griffin scored four straight field goals as the Spurs turned a 76-75 deficit into a 94-82 lead over Indiana and went on to their fourth straight victory. George McGinnis led the Pacers with 31.

Bucks 121, Warriors 93

Milwaukee remained one-half game ahead of Kansas City in the Midwest Division by riding Marques Johnson's 19 points and Brian Winters' 15 past the Warriors. The Bucks took the lead barely one minute into the game and by halftime led by 14 points, then cruised to their sixth victory in seven games. Raymond Townsend had 17 points for Golden State.

Kings 102, Jazz 98

With Kansas City leading 94-93, Kings guard Otis Birdsong scored a pair of field goals, was fouled while shooting each one and got the two free throws as well. Suddenly the lead was 100-93 and Utah was finished.

Sonics 107, Clippers 104

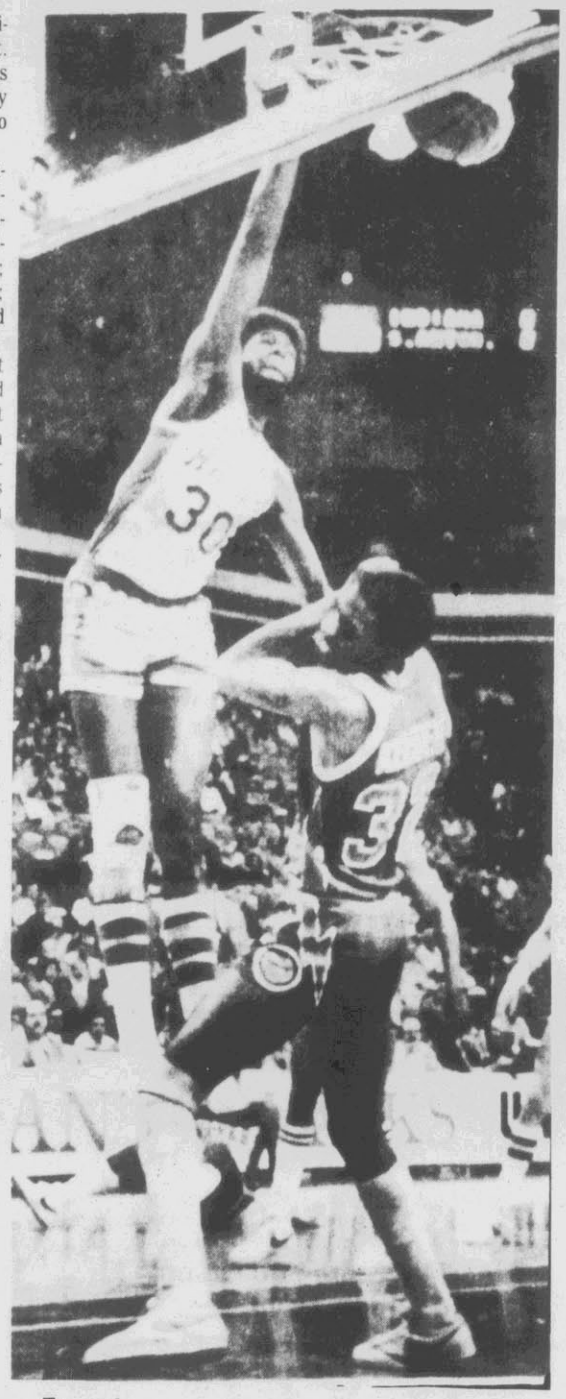

When Swen Nater went to the San Diego locker room, the SuperSonics went to town. The Clippers' center absorbed his second technical foul midway in the third quarter and Seattle immediately reeled off 10 successive points for a 80-70 margin, a lead they never relinquished.

Lonnie Shelton had 21 points for Seattle and Freeman Williams had 21 for the Clippers.

Suns 111, Blazers 100

Truck Williams' 23 points and Paul Westphal's 20 — six of them in a key fourth-quarter burst — carried Phoenix past the Trail Blazers.

Portland, down by 19 points in the third quarter, cut the margin to 94-92 with 4:27 to play before Westphal put it out of reach.

Greene Central Defeats Hawks

WHEAT SWAMP — Aided by a strong wind blowing straight out, Greene Central pounded out three home runs, one of them a grand slam, and rolled to a 10-3 baseball victory over North Lenoir Friday.

The victory was the second in as many starts in Eastern Carolina Conference play for the Rams, who are 3-2 overall.

The Rams got things going in the first inning scoring twice. Robin Bowen walked, and Al Murray got the home run parade underway with a two-run blast.

North Lenoir came back in the bottom of the frame to score once. Guy Sanderson walked and Kevin Battle cracked out a triple to score Sanderson—at least it appeared to be a triple. However, an appeal play at first on a missed base canceled the hit when he was called out, leaving it at 2-1.

In the third, the Rams added two more. Greg Holmes led off with a single and moved to second when a pickoff play failed. He stole third and scored when the thrown-down was errored. Murray then cracked his second homer of the day.

The Rams added two in the sixth, then got four more in the seventh on a grand slam homer by Donald Shaw. North Lenoir picked up single runs in the fourth and fifth, including a solo blast by Battle in the fourth.

In addition to Murray's two homers, Jabo Fulghum had a pair of hits for Greene Central.

The Rams, following a Saturday game against Greenville Rose, were to play Southern Nash on Tuesday.

But you can simply give Planters written permission to transfer your earned interest to your savings account. This, of course, gives you a greater yield. Aguirre, Meyer Top Player And Coach

Player And Coach

Mark Aguirre, the sophomore sensation for DePaul University and his coach, Ray Meyer, surround the Adolph Rupp Trophy naming Aguirre the Associated Press Player of the Year. Meyer was also named Coach of the Year in the award ceremony held Friday in Indianapolis. (AP Laserphoto)

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Will Mark Aguirre turn pro?

"I don't know right now," replied the brilliant sophomore forward from DePaul whose scoring and rebounding led the Blue Demons to the top of the college ranks for most of the 1979-80 season. "I'm certainly open to professional ball, but I haven't reached any decision."

Aguirre spoke Friday after receiving the Adolph F. Rupp Trophy as The Associated Press' college basketball Player of the Year, which is presented annually by the Commonwealth Athletic Club of Kentucky in honor of the legendary late coach of The University of Kentucky. DePaul's coach, Ray Meyer, also was on hand to receive The AP's Coach of the Year award.

"Our relationship has always been like father and son," Meyer said. "The money would have to be pretty substantial for me to advise him to go pro. But if he gets a really great offer, I would not selfishly stand in his way.

"I'd hate to lose Mark, naturally, but life goes on. Basketball is only a game. I cannot hinder his progress. Whatever we decide will be in Mark's best interest."

Aguirre has until April 25 to make his decision. That's the final date for undergraduates to notify the National Basketball Association they want to become eligible for this year's draft, to be held June 10 in New York. Once a player formally tells the NBA office he's turning pro there's no turning back, because under rules adopted last summer he is not permitted to withdraw his name and retain his college eligibility.

The stocky, 6-foot-7 Aguire is regarded by pro scouts as a sure-fire first-round draft choice because of his outstanding scoring ability. But how high he'd go is another matter, because some scouts have doubts about his defense and whether he's better suited to play the small forward or power forward position.

The money difference between being one of the top two or three picks and being drafted in the middle of the first round is a big one, and this will weigh heavily in Aguirre's thinking.

"I've spoken with Magic about it," said Aguirre, referring to Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who led Michigan State to the NCAA championship as a sophomore last year, then turned pro with the Los Angeles Lakers as the first pick overall in the NBA draft. "We've talked about the plusses and minuses, and he's opened my eyes to a lot of things."

"In my two years I've gotten a lot from DePaul and Coach Meyer," said Aguirre. "They've given me everything I could possibly seek, but I haven't been able to get them the big one — the national championship."

After being rated No. 1 for most of the season, the Blue Demons were knocked off by UCLA 77-71 in the West Regional.

"If things are right, fine, I'll turn pro," added Aguirre. "If not, hey, I love college ball. Either way I'm a winner."

Foster Says He'll Be At Clemson Next Year

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson basketball Coach Bill Foster denied reports Saturday that he will move to North Carolina State in 1980-81, saying he will stay at Clemson next season.

"N.C. State did contact me about their coaching vacancy and we had a short discussion about the situation. But I never had an interview," said Foster in a statement issued by Clemson Sunday afternoon.

Foster, who guided his Tigers to the finals of this year's NCAA West Regional tournament, was in Indianapolis for the National Coaches Convention Saturday.

"I have had many universities approach me about moving to their schools over the last few years," he said.

"My name seems to come up as a candidate for coaching vacancies all the time. I guess that is a compliment and testimony to our recent success. But I will remain at Clemson," he said.

"We are building a basketball tradition at Clemson," he said, citing the record 23 victories his team had this season and the return of several outstanding players in 1980-81.

Rutgers Coach Tom Young, also in Indianapolis, said Friday that he had withdrawn his name from consideration for the position left vacant by Norm Sloan's departure for Florida.

Young, who was interviewed for the opening last Monday, said his family and the potential of Rutgers' team next year infuenced his decision to stay.

Athletic Council Mulls Protest Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the Athletes Advisory Council to the U.S. Olympic Committee mulled over a plan Saturday which would permit them to participate in the Summer Games in Moscow but also protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

The 47-member Council continued its regular weekend meeting after spending Friday afternoon at the White House where President Carter told them and other athletes and coaches that the United States would not participate in the Summer Games

"I can't say at this moment what other nations will not go to the Summer Olympics in Moscow," Carter said somberly but emphatically. "Ours will not go. I say that not with any equivocation. The decision has been made."

Some athletes believe, however, that perhaps a plan can be devised to allow them to compete but still protest the Soviets' military presence in Afghanistan.

Andy I. Toro of El Cerrito, Calif., a canoeing coach who participated in two Olympics for Hungary and two for the United States, made the proposal to the council but declined to give details until the panel took some action on it.

It was learned, however, that the plan calls for the athletes to compete but boycott the opening and closing ceremonies, not stay in Russia but fly in only for their events and refuse to accept any medals.

Although he refused to discuss specifics, Toro said he believes his plan would be more effective than not sending an American team to the Summer Games as called for by President Carter.

"A boycott is an effective tool," he said during a break in the council meeting, "but what we are proposing would be more effective. Demonstrating in the home land is more effective than doing it elsewhere."

He said if the U.S. Olympic Committee should refuse to enter a team by May 24, the entry deadline, "that would be it. The Soviet media will cover it as just another U.S. protest against the free Olympics movement. Just another propaganda tool."

But, said Toro, his proposal would be a two-week protest right in Moscow.

"Every time a Russian gets a bronze medal, there would be two other empty places because the other two didn't show up," he said. "How are they (the Russians) going to explain it. We would be able to hit them every day, 24 hours a day, for two weeks. Even the poor peasants will be able to see that and ask what's happening."

Toro said he believes it would be effective because, he said, the United States has athletes who are among the top three in all sports, but he cited specifically track and field, swimming and gymnastics.

"We would have had 36 opportunities the last time," said Toro, who was 16 when the Russians invaded his native Hungary in 1956. "That's how many gold medals we won. And just add in the number of silver and bronze medals that we could win. I just want to be tougher on their home ground.

"Unfortunately, the State Department does not see this," he said.

The Council met briefly Saturday morning before hearing from Joseph Onek, the President's deputy counsel, who gave a White House briefing Friday along with Zbigniew Brzensinski, Carter's national security adviser.

Toro, Anita DeFrantz of Princeton, N.J., a rower, and Bruce Parkinson of Kokomo, Ind., a former basketball player from Purdue, said Onek answered more questions during the two-hour closed meeting "but we got the same answers."

They said the Toro proposal was not discussed with Onek because the Council had not considered it before they met with the White House counsel.

Parkinson said Onek told them, as he had Friday, that $4 million in the budget earmarked for amateur athletics may be cut as an administration economy move.

DeFrantz said the administration still believes alternative competitions can be held in late August or early September with the money to stage them coming from television revenues "but they don't have any concrete answers."

Old Dominion, Tennessee Gain Finals

By RON DZWONKOWSKI
Associated Press Writer

MOUNT PLEASANT, Mich. (AP) — One gasping and the other breathing easy, Tennessee and Old Dominion have reached the title game of the national collegiate women's basketball tournament.

To reach Sunday's televised final, Tennessee fought off a furious rally by South Carolina and posted a 75-72 victory over the Lady Gamecocks in Friday's semifinals.

Old Dominion, the defending Association of Intercollegiate Athlteics for Women basketball champion, cruised past Louisiana Tech 73-59 in the other semifinal at Central Michigan University's Rose Arena.

"It was the worst game that Tennessee has played all year," Coach Pat Head of the second-ranked Lady Volunteers said after her team's victory over smaller, slower South Carolina.

"I'm shocked," Coach Marianne Stanely of No.1 Old Dominion said after the Lady Monarchs' lopsided triumph over the only team that has beaten them this season.

"I didn't expect such a wide margin ... we just stood around on offense last time (against Louisiana Tech). We talked a lot of being active out there on the court and they did a super job," she said.

Jill Rankin, a 6-foot-3 senior who leads Tennessee scorers with a 19.7 average, got in foul trouble early and managed four points.

Nancy Lieberman, Old Dominion's senior guard and three-time All-American, scored only eight points although her flashy passes produced five baskets.

For both winners, the heavy work was done in the middle.

"They were keying on Rankin and I told Noble this was her night, and it was," said Head.

Old Dominion's front-court duo of 6-foot-7 senior Inge Nissen and 6-foot-8 freshman Anne Donovan burned Louisiana Tech for 34 points. Nissen had a game-high 19 points and 11 rebounds, and Donovan scored 15 and eight rebounds.

Among the most disappointed losers Friday was Evelyn Johnson, the South Carolina freshman playing just an hour north of her Lansing, Mich., home.

Evelyn, the 5-foot-10 sister of Los Angeles Lakers rookie star Earvin "Magic" Johnson, scored just nine points before fouling out against Tennessee.

"I wanted to have a good showing for everyone in my home state," Evelyn said. "Earvin told me to do good, and if I had, we probably would have won."

Tenessee, 33-4 — including two losses to Old Dominion, takes on the Lady Monarchs at 4 p.m. EST Sunday. South Carolina, 29-6, and Louisiana Tech, 40-4, meet in a consolation game at 1:30 p.m.

Cappelletti Acquired For Blocking Ability

SAN DIEGO (AP) — John Cappelletti, acquired by the San Diego Chargers in exchange for an undisclosed future draft choice, is not the big-play running back they wanted but the big blocker they need as fullback.

"We want that quick-cat runner," acknowledged Charger Coach Don Coryell, "but he has too be tough enough to block. Our whole season could go down the drain with one missed block."

Cappelletti, who won the Heisman Trophy at Penn State in 1974 but was replaced in the Los Angeles Rams' backfield four years later, became a Charger Friday.

The 6-foot-1, 220-pound Cappelleti was the Rams' best ground gainer in 1978 but hasn't played since. He spent last season on injured reserve with a groin pull.

In the five seasons he played for Los Angeles, Cappelletti never averaged more than 3.9 yards per rush and did that only in 1976. His last two years of play his figures were 3.4 and 3.5.

Coming to San Diego was Cappelletti's choice, the hefty fullback said during a Friday press conference at San Diego Stadium. He said he had given the Rams a list of teams he was willing to join and San Diego placed highly on the list.

"There were other offers and there were better offers," Cappelletti said, "but if they had come to me with another proposal, I could have retired."

"John is a very outstanding player and a very outstanding person," Coryell said, " and he has the ability to play both halfback and fullback. With him and Clarence Williams, we have two really complete backs."

Cappelletti has been testing his injury by running in the presence of the Charger coaching staff.

The Rams' first-round draft choice in 1974, Cappelletti became a starter for the team in 1976. In 1978, he rushed for 604 yards in 174 carries and caught a career-high 41 passes for 382 yards.

Design Is Given OK

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The design for a new $21-million sports arena was approved Friday by the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill trustees.

The 18,000-to 22,000-seat coliseum will be shapel like a bowl with an octagonal dome on top.

Although the building will be as tall as an 11-story building, architect Joe Hakan said part of it will be underground. He added that it will be built in a natural ravine so that it will not rise above the tree line.

Some residents have objected to placing the arena so close to their homes.

The university plans to raise money for the project itself, using no state money.

The new coliseum will be located between Manning Drive and the U.S. 15-501 Bypass.

GET IT RIGHT

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Al Angelos and Tom Catagnus of the Philadelphia Textile basketball team, two crack guards, are often mistaken for each other. At a home game this winter, the public address announcer succeeded in mixing up the two.

An impulsive fan, who apparently couldn't stand that, rushed out of the stands, pushed the announcer aside and took over the microphone. He received a standing ovation from the people in the stands.

Hartford Thinking About The Playoffs

By The Associated Press

The Hartford Whalers are starting to think seriously about the playoffs — and they think they may have the rest of the National Hockey League doing a little thinking, too.

"Teams have to be thinking something now like, 'How did we get a point against both Montreal and Philadelphia?'" Gordie Howe of Hartford said Friday night after a 5-5 tie against the Flyers, a scored they posted earlier in the week against the Canadiens. "We played a great game against the first-place team."

In other NHL games, it was Detroit 5, Vancouver 2; Winnipeg 4, the New York Rangers 2; Edmonton 9, Pittsburgh 2 and Minnesota 4, Washington 3.

"Teams behind us are still chasing and time is running out," said Whalers Coach Don Blackburn, looking to the playoffs. "Unless we fall flat on our faces...but I don't think that is going to happen."

Last Wednesday night, the Whalers scored with 12 seconds to play to tie Montreal. This time, it took a goal by Philadelphia's Rick MacLeish with three minutes to play to prevent Hartford from beating the NHL's runaway leader.

"Hartford could have easily have won," said Mel Bridgman of the Flyers. "They are playing very well right now and they are not the same team they were before."

The Flyers aren't, either. The team that earlier this year set the NHL unbeaten streak record of 35 games has won just four of its last 13. "When you're going good, things have tendency to snowball," said Coach Pat Quinn. "Things can also snowball the other way. When it does, it is a very tough thing to stop."

Blaine Stoughton of Hartford and Philadelphia rookie Brian Propp each scored twice. The goals by Stoughton gave him 49 in the season. "I'd sure like to get 50," he said.

Red Wings 5, Canucks 2

Marcel Pronovost, named Detroit's head coach earlier in the day when Bobby Kromm was fired, was behind the bench for the Red Wings' victory over Vancouver. Vaclav Nedomansky had two goals for Detroit.

"All I did was change the lines. They did all the work," said Pronovost. "The secret of any success is still hard work."

Jets 4, Rangers 2

Peter Sullivan scored and assisted on goals by Morris Lukowich and Scott Campbell as the Jets broke a six-game home winless streak.

Phil Esposito had a goal and an assist for the Rangers, who surpassed the club record of 1,214 penalty minutes for a season.

Oilers 9, Penguins 2

Pittsburgh got power-play goals from Randy Carlyle and Pat Hughes — but between them the Oilers scored eight straight, three in a row by Wayne Gretzky in the third period (he has 45) and two by Don Ashby.

North Stars 4, Capitals 3

Third-period goals by Tom McCarthy and Curt Giles gave Minnesota a three-game winning streak and snapped Washington's seven-game unbeaten string. The North Stars also got goals from Tim Young and Kent-Erik Andersson to wipe out a 2-0 Capitals lead.

Blocks Power Play

Five Former Winners Apply For Indy 500

By STEVE HERMAN
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Indianapolis Motor Speedway has received entries for five former Indianapolis 500 winners, all members of the dissident Championship Auto Racing Teams group that had to go to court last year to gain entry to the annual race.

After last year's court suit, in which the Speedway was ordered to accept the CART entries, the 500 was changed to an invitational race, conditional upon participation in at least one U.S. Auto Club-sanctioned event during 1979.

Since the CART members were allowed to race at Indianapolis, which is a USAC event, they received automatic invitations. Entry deadline is April 15.

The latest entries were received Thursday for former winners Al Unser and Johnny Rutherford, who have accounted for five of the past 10 Indy victories. Earlier entries were received for defending champion Rick Mears and former winners Mario Andretti and Bobby Unser, all driving for Penske Racing.

The only former winners still racing who were not entered as of Thursday were four-time champion A.J. Foyt and 1973 winner Gordon Johncock.

Al Unser, younger of the two racing brothers from Albuquerque, N.M., has won the Indy 500 three times. He will drive one of three new Cosworth-powered racers entered by Longhorn Racing of Midland, Texas.

Rutherford, a two-time Indy winner from Fort Worth, Texas, will drive one of two Chaparral-Cosworths entered by Jim Hall of Midland.

Other entries by Thursday for the May 25 race were from Bill Alsup, Woodstock, Vt., who listed himself as driver of a Penske-Cosworth. Alsup also entered a McLaren-Offenhauser with no driver listed.

Unser, the last man to win back-to-back Indy races, won here in 1970-71 and notched his third championship in 1978. Only Foyt has won more.

Rutherford, who has driven in 16 Indianapolis races, won in 1974 and 1976. He was battling for the lead last year until transmission problems on the 97th lap caused a half-hour pit stop and knocked him from contention.

Thursday's entries brought to 18 the number submitted to the Speedway. Qualifications are scheduled for May 10-11 and May 17-18, with the fastest 33 qualifiers starting the 64th running of the annual classic on May 25.

Another car owner, George Walther, said Thursday he is resigning from CART and rejoining USAC. Walther, father of driver Salt Walther, was an original member of CART, but he said the feud over control of the sport has harmed racing.

Chargers Nip Jaguars, 3-2

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton rallied for three runs in the fourth inning to take a 3-2 baseball victory over Farmville Central Saturday.

Farmville scored first, getting a run in the second inning. Lewis Yelverton walked and moved up when a pickoff attempt was errored. He scored on M. Tugwell's double.

In the third, the Jaguars added another run for a 2-0 margin. G. Hardison walked, stole both second and third and scored on a wild pitch.

But the Chargers were able to mount a successful rally in the third. Bernard Ricciarelli started it off with a double and Clayton McLawhorn reached on a fielder's choice. Tyrone Gay singled in Riciarelli, and an error on the play allowed McLawhorn to score. Brant Allen then doubled in Gay with what proved to be the winning run.

Allen was the game's only hitter with two.

Ayden-Grifton is now 2-2 overall and 2-0 in Eastern Carolina Conference play. The Chargers host Conley on Tuesday, while Farmville Central travels to Southwest Edgecombe.

Walton Is Suing Doc

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Center Bill Walton of the San Diego Clippers Friday sued the team doctor of the Portland Trail Blazers of the National Basketball Association, alleging that Dr. Robert Cook treated Walton's broken foot inappropriately.

Walton, who signed with the Clippers as a free agent last summer, accused Cook of failing to diagnose the fracture, prescribing medications and injections that were inappropriate and failing to provide proper therapy.

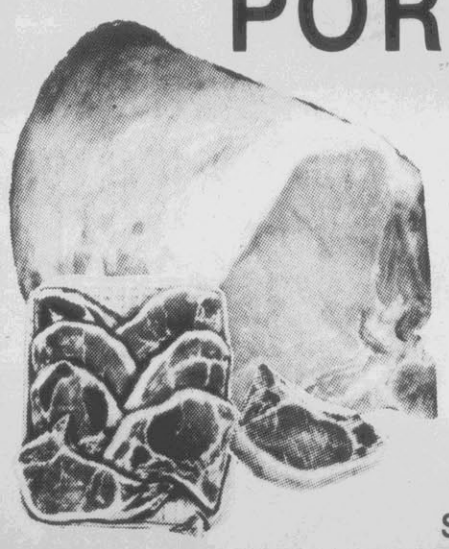

The 6-foot-11 Walton injured his foot while playing for the Blazers in 1978 and has played only briefly since then as a result of complications from the injury.

A secretary in Cook's office said the doctor was out of town and would not be available until Monday.

The Blazers had no immediate comment.

Three Seeking League Track Titles

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Without a track to call home, D.H. Conley's girls' track team has grown accustomed to running on the road. Last year they ran and jumped well enough to finish second in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

This year the Valkyries will once again take their act on the road in search of a conference title, which coach Shelley Marsh feels is well within his squad's grasp.

"I figure we'll be a little stronger this year," Marsh said. "I have the majority of my girls back, which should give us some depth.

"Last year we actually won more first places in the conference meet but didn't have enough second, thirds and fourth places. This year we have that kind of depth and I expect us to do a better job of challenging Farmville for the title."

Last season the Valkyries won five championships at the league meet. All but two girls return to defend their titles.

Leading the way is Tilda Garris, the conference's top shot putter a year ago; Vernal Person, the hurdles champ last season, and Valarie Gatlin, the two-mile title winner.

The Valkyries' other two titles came in the 880 relay and the mile relay. In the 880 relay Cheryl Tyson, Rose Greene and Cassandra Chapman return, while Kim Swank is expected to fill the fourth slot.

Returning in the mile relay are Tyson, Chapman and Sherry Small, while filling the fourth position will be Kim Lainhart.

Garris will also run the 100 and long jump, while Chapman will also triple jump. In the high jump will be Helena Barnhill while in the shot and discus Jackie Hansely returns. Debbie Scott and Irish Barnill will run in the 440.

"We won't come around this year until we get close to the conference championship," Marsh said. "Not having a track the girls aren't accustomed to running on it and that makes for a lot of errors, especially early in the season."

Williamston

After finishing third a year ago in the Northeastern Conference, Williamston's girls' track team has won its first four meets of the season and coach William Matthews sees no reason his club's early success should stop.

"We have a pretty good chance of winning the title this year," Matthews said. "We've already beaten Tarboro, Roanoke and Roanoke Rapids, and all we have left in the conference is Edenton and Washington.

"I think we have a good chance. We've got a lot of girls back off last year's team and I had four girls in the sectionals last year," Matthews said. "We plan to give it a good run."

Back from the sectionals this year for the Tigers are Michelle Price, Bernadette Steller, Vernita Ore and Twyla Price.

Michelle will long jump and triple jump for Matthews as well as run the 100, where she has reportedly been clocked at 10.8.

Twyla, Michelle's cousin, will run the 440, 880 and a leg of the mile relay.

Ore will long jump, triple jump, and run the 100 and 220, while Steller will run in the hurdles.

Others returning for the Tigers are Sonia Wiggins, who run the mile, two-mile, 880 and one leg of the mile relay, and Beverly Woolard, who will throw the discus and shot put and will a also high jump, where she has hit 5'2".

"Washington's still the team to beat," Matthews said. "They have a strong team. But I think we'll be up there. We haven't had any trouble with the other teams in the conference we've played.

Farmville Central

With eight starters returning from last year's conference winning team, Farmville Central's girls' track team appears set to defend its title.

"I think we'll be up there," Farmville Central coach Hilda Worthington said. "It just depends on how good Southwest (Edgecombe) is this year. And Conley always has some good sprinters."

Leading the list of returnees is Brenda Reid, who last year was in the regionals in the 880. Reid will also high jump this season.

Also back are Charlene Lange, Anita Tutton and Cheryl Edwards, all of whom will throw the shot put discus. Tutton will also run in the 100 and 220, as will Gail Lang.

Sharon Dupree and Rose Lang are back in the hurdles while Rose will join freshman Karen Dunn in the triple jump. Dunn will also run the mile and two-mile.

"I think we're going to be a little weak in the long jump and in the sprints," Worthington said. "But we'll be all right."

Good Drivers To Help Pay Insurance Tab For Bad Drivers

COUNTING HIS ENLISTMENT BONUS...Navy Petty Officer Daniel Casperson thumbs through some of the $9,600 left after taxes from his $12,000 bonus for re-enlisting for a second five-year hitch. He cashed the check in Jacksonville, Fla. in small bills then posed for a picture which he'll use to impress potential recruits. "I'm going to need all the help I can get," he said. (AP Laserphoto)

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Beginning April 1, some North Carolina motorists with good driving records will start picking up the insurance tab for poor drivers.

The move is part of a state law that allows insurance companies to charge safe drivers for the cost of insuring poor drivers who are covered by the N.C. Reinsurance Facility.

The reinsurance facility is an insurance pool for high-risk drivers in which premiums already are 10 percent higher than normal rates.

It is not the first time drivers outside the facility have been assessed to help pay the costs of insuring drivers with poor records. And, insurance company officials say it probably won't be the last.

The new increase, which goes into effect April 1, is one of several the state's 293 insurance companies hope will bring in $40 million in added revenues that the industry says it needs to recoup losses incurred through operations of the reinsurance facility.

State law says the facility may not operate at either a profit or a loss and that drivers outside the facility may be assessed if necessary to recoup losses.

The surcharge beginning in April will be levied on all policies renewed from April 1 to July 1. The hike will mean a 5.3 percent increase for individual drivers, or about $5 a year in minimum-coverage areas.

Those policyholders also will be assessed a 1.1 percent increase that went into effect in March, meaning that the total increase will be more than 6 percent.

A lawsuit has been filed by the state, seeking restraining orders against the 5.3 percent surcharge and all subsequent surcharges that might be levied to recoup facility losses. But, an earlier restraining order request to block the 1.1 percent increase was rejected by a Wake County Superior Court judge.

As of June 30, 1978, there were 783,582 vehicles in the facility, according to Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, who said only 92,875 had actually caused losses.

Battle Over Steel Imports Possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — The troubled American steel industry and the Carter administration have traded opening salvos of what could lead to a major battle over the impact of imported steel on the American economy.

The U.S. Steel Corp., the nation's biggest steelmaker, filed trade complaints Friday against steel producers in seven European countries, claiming their steel is being imported into this country at unfairly low prices.

In response, the Carter administration reacted by suspending its "trigger price," a two-year-old mechanism which acted as a minimum price for imported steel and which was created to stop foreign steel from undercutting American-produced steel.

Analysts said the action is expected to have little immediate impact on the market.

But one industry source, who declined to be named, said steelmakers were unhappy with the Carter administration's handling of the trigger price. He said he wouldn't be surprised "if other companies file their own cases, not only against Europe, but against other countries."

Carter administration officials had hoped that such complaints would not be filed because they might lead to an international trade war.

Rep. John Heinz, R-Pa. said Friday, "No matter which way the industry moves, the jobs of thousands of American steelworkers will be in severe jeopardy."

U.S. Steel claims that unfairly cheap foreign steel has hurt the domestic industry and has caused the loss of 200,000 jobs.

The trigger price is now $358 a ton, based on production costs in Japan, one of the world's most efficient steelmakers. Imported steel sold below that figure is subject to investigation and possible duties, so importers keep their prices above that level.

In Europe, the European Economic Community Commission had no official reaction. But an unidentified spokesman said, "The commission is quite dissatisfied with the suspension of the trigger mechanism."

Cites Need For More Efficient Justice System

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A psychologist who works with inmates in North Carolina's prisons says the state needs to coordinate its efforts to reduce crime and make the criminal justice system more efficient.

"We just don't have an integrated justice system in this state," said Dr. Jack McCall of Raleigh. "No state does that I know of, but it is something that is desperately needed."

McCall was one of three panelists to address the Governor's Crime Commission Friday.

Other panelists were Steve Hicks, deputy director of alcohol and drug abuse, and Robert Philbeck, deputy director of the Department of Human Resources' Vocational Rehabilitation Services.

McCall told the commission that better communication between agencies involved in criminal justice could help prevent crime and reduce the number of repeat offenders in the state's prisons.

McCall also said more funds were needed to get and keep good corrections officers who are instrumental in the prison's rehabilitation programs.

"Corrections officers are underpaid. We can't compete with local police departments because they continue to raise the salaries of their officers," he said.

"The Corrections Department loses a great number of its officers after going to the expense of training them. We must find a way to reward these people for their work."

McCall also recommended that the more violent prisoners in the system be segregated for the protection of other inmates.

"We must learn to segregate the most violent inmates," he said. "We take crime off the streets and put it in the prisons. It's difficult to keep the crime rate down in prison ... but we have a duty to protect these people."

Both Hicks and Philbeck urged communities to take more responsibility for crime prevention.

May Be Using Poison Gas

TOKYO (AP) — A surgeon of the International Red Cross says Vietnamese troops may be using poison gas against the Khmer Rouge forces of former Cambodian Premier Pol Pot, the Japanese newspaper Asahi Shimbun reported today.

The newspaper, in a dispatch from Bangkok, Thailand, alleged that poison gas had been used not only against the Pol Pot troops near the Thai-Cambodian border but also against civilian residents of the area.

In mid-February, the independent mass-circulation paper said the Red Cross conducted an autopsy on the bodies of six Pol Pot soldiers believed to have been killed by poison gas released by the Vietnamese. One IRC surgeon was quoted as saying, "Although I did not believe that the Vietnamese were using poison gas before conducting the autopsy, I believe now that such gas had been used."

After the Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia, the Pol Pot forces, ousted from Phnom Penh in January 1979, frequently accused the Vietnamese of using poison gas. Hanoi has denied the charges.

Mrs. Brame Makes 10th Pheresis Donation

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Nancy Brame made her 10th pheresis donation at the Tar River Blood Center here Friday. She is the record-holder in number of pheresis donations made at the local blood center.

Wife of Dr. Robert G. Brame, chairman of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology of the ECU School of Medicine, Mrs. Brame has become a favorite of the blood center staff. They presented her a long-stemmed red rose Friday at the completion of her 10th donation.

"They're so sweet," Mrs. Brame said of the staff. "You get to be good friends when you sit around with someone for two and a half to three hours."

This is how long the donation of blood components (white cells or plasma, depending on the need at the time) by pheresis takes.

"We have lots of time to chat." Mrs. Brame, who began giving blood when she was a Durham resident a number of years ago, said. She declared that the pheresis is not uncomfortable. "You have to be stuck twice," she said, "but then it's nothing. I hop up, get my coffee and cookie and go about my business when it's over."

What she's done during the hours spent at the center is provide either white cells or platelets for a patient whose life and health may depend on her donation. "We only pherese when we have a specific order," Blood Center Director Dick Carney said. "The shelf life of platelets and white cells is less than 24 hours. We draw now mostly for patients of local hemotologists, though we do have a patient in Craven County and one in Halifax County we're drawing for now, too. Pheresis recipients are usually persons with leukemia or other blood disorders."

The Tar River Center is now averaging about 30 pheresis collections a month. It has done as many as six a day.

Asked why she became a pheresis donor, Mrs. Brame said, "I'm a gallon donor (which means she's given at least eight pints of whole blood in the past, perhaps many more), so I when got a letter asking if I would like to be a pheresis donor, I thought 'why not?'"

"She's fantastic," Carney said. "We can call her at a minute's notice and she always comes to our aid. She's made 10 donations in the past 15 months, some as close together as two weeks. Nancy Brame is a very special person."

Anyone interested in becoming a pheresis donor is invited to contact the Tar River Blood Center, 758-1141 for more information, Carney said.

Oratorical Contest Winners Announced

Charles Ross, contest chairman for the Optimist, said that Claire Bullock of Farmville Central High School won first place in the division for girls, while Clay Deanhardt of Greenville Middle School was the boys' first place winner.

Second place finishers, Ross said, were Hih Song Kim of E.B. Aycock Junior High High School (girls), and Christopher Murphy of D.H. Conley High School, (boys).

Winning third place in the local contest were Colette Resnik of Aycock in the division for girls and Albert Tien of Conley in the boys' division.

According to Ross, the first place winners will have the opportunity to participate in the upcoming zone contest sponsored by Optimist Clubs in this zone. He noted that the contest will be held on Friday, March 28 at 6:30 p.m. in the banquet room of the Western Sizzlin Steak House here.

First place winners from Washington, Wilson, Tarboro and Rocky Mount will join the Greenville participants in competing for first place in the zone activity.

Ross pointed out that first place winners in the zone competition will go on to compete in the regional contest and winners on the regional level will move on to district or state oratorical competition.

The club spokesman explained that the oratorical contest, first sponsored by Optimist International in 1928, is not designed to merely recognize and honor the best speaker in a school or community. He said the purpose of the program is to offer training, encouragement and experience that will aid the participants as they become contributing citizens in society.

ATTENDED SYMPOSIUM

Mrs. Edna Cox, Ron Dennis and Miss Vivian Strickland, interior decorators of Belk-Tyler Co. here, attended the 12th annual Tryon Palace Symposium on "Colonial Living and the Decorative Arts" this past week in New Bern.

Also attending were Greenville Banks Jr., local Belks manager, and his wife, Martha; L. A. Bailey, executive vice president of Belk-Tyler stores; and Miss Harriet Daughtridge of Rocky Mount.

EMPLOYEES CITED

Three local Plant Department employees of Carolina Telephone received emblems this month in recognition of service anniversaries with the company.

Carolina Telephone said the employees were: Genet E. Lilly, a service center clerk, 30 years; Bobby Leneave, a cable foreman, 15 years; and Logan Whitehurst, a key equipment installer repairman, ten years.

The emblems are designed for man and women, with varying arrangements of rubies, emeralds and diamonds signifying the length of service, the company said.

JOINED WITN-TV

W. R. Roberson Jr., chairman of North Carolina Television Inc. (WITN-TV), announced that Lou Harned has joined the station's news staff with duties including general reporting and on-the-air work.

BUILDERS IN WASHINGTON

A contingent of North Carolina home builders will be among thousands of builders from throughout the nation expected to take part in a two-day grassroots effort, "Emergency Action Days," scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday in Washington, D.C.

The builders will meet Tuesday to plan strategy and adopt policies and then spend Wednesday meeting with all members of the state's congressional delegation.

Mark Tipton of Greenville, president of the North Carolina Home Builders Association, said the meetings come at a time when high interest rates and soaring inflation have sharply curtailed new home construction in the state, threatening many builders with bankruptcy.

Deaf Girl Released

NUORO, Sardinia (AP) — Annabel Schild, a 15-year-old deaf mute British girl kidnapped seven months ago, was released early today in the countryside of northern Sardinia and headed for a reunion with her parents, police sources said.

First reports indicated Annabel was in good health despite her ordeal.

The girl was abducted along with her parents near the family's vacation home on Sardinia last Aug. 22, but Annabel spent the last two months in captivity alone. Her father Rolf, a German-born electronics engineer, was freed after a month to raise a ransom and her mother, Daphne, was freed two months ago.

The kidnappers had originally demanded a $4 million payoff.

Schild, 55, reportedly paid them 500 million lire, the equivalent of $654,000, to secure his wife's release. Asked whether he paid an additional ransom for his daughter, Schild told a reporter: "I cannot comment on that yet. It is far too early."

What To Serve The Crowd

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Having a morning coffee to plan a neighborhood or community activity? Guests coming for coffee in the evening? Then you may be interested to serve Prune Apple Bars as the accompaniment. They're appealing these days because they are made with little sugar. As the cook who dreamed up the original recipe said, "They're a cross between a cookie and a pie."

PRUNE APPLE BARS

1 package dry yeast
¼ cup warm water (about 115 degrees)
2¼ cups all-purpose flour
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup butter
1 large egg, slightly beaten
Prune Apple Filling, recipe follows
Confectioners' sugar, if desired

In a liquid measuring cup, dissolve the yeast in the water. In a large bowl, stir together the flour, sugar and salt; add butter and with a pastry blender cut in until particles are the size of small peas. Add yeast mixture and the egg; with a fork, stir until dough forms a ball. Cover tightly and chill from 2 to 4 hours.

Prepare Filling and reserve.

Divide the dough in half. On a prepared pastry cloth, with a prepared stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll out one half to a 12½ by 8½-inch rectangle; fold in half crosswise and transfer to a buttered 13 by 9 by 2-inch baking pan; unfold to cover other half of pan. Spread the reserved Filling over the dough.

Roll out the remaining half of the dough to about the same size as before; transfer as before, gently placing it to cover Filling. With fork tines lightly mark top into 24 bars or squares.

Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until golden brown — 25 to 30 minutes. Cool on a wire rack. Cut, following fork marks. Before serving, sprinkle with confectioners' sugar, or pass a shaker of the sugar.

Makes 24.

Prune Apple Filling: Mix together well one 12-ounce package pitted prunes (finely chopped), one 15-ounce jar sweetened applesauce and ¾ cup chopped (medium-fine) walnuts.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

This past week, I got my teeth cleaned, took my driver's test and went to confession at church.

I knew that no one had ever been this wonderful before. In fact, I could barely stand to fall asleep and be gone from me for seven whole hours.

As I told my friend, Mayva, "I am cleansed. Just one of these pious acts would put me in a state of grace for a month . . . but all three of them in the same week should get me space on a medallion."

Mayva looked unimpressed and said, "As long as you've got three good deeds going for you, why don't you try for the Sanctimonious Decathlon?"

She had to be kidding. I had never heard of the Sanctimonious Decathlon and doubted if there was one. Mayva insisted I was wrong. She said there was a series of 10 holier-than-thou events that had never been completed by anyone during a seven-day period.

They included: The hand-washable tournament. Every piece of wash-by-hand laundry that had been put back to do when there was time is laundered. A place where navel bands meet a football jersey and they belong to the same kid.

The write-your-mother-on-no-occasion event. It must not include Christmas greetings, birthday wishes, a request for money or a pitch to baby-sit.

Servicing your lawn mower during the winter playoffs. A real test of responsibility over cheapness . . . character over who cares?

The tidy games. This includes gathering up five years of newspapers and two years of redeemable bottles out of the garage and returning them to where they belong, and matching trading stamps from all over the house to an empty stamp book. The latter is a game of strength, endurance, and bad breath.

Getting-the-salt-washed-off-your-car-when-the-weather report-predicts-more-bad-weather playoffs. This really separates the devout good people from the pretenders.

Replacing-the-screw-in-your-eye-glasses-that-have-been kept-together-with-a-paper-clip-for-six-months competition.

"Do you think you could pull all of them off?" asked Mayva.

"That's only nine," I said.

"What's the other one?"

"Cleaning your oven."

I didn't continue the discussion. Somehow Mayva always ends talking dirty.

Family Photo Doesn't Need Girlfriend

By Abigail Van Buren

1980 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: We are planning to have a family portrait taken to give to our parents for Christmas, 1980.

We are all related by blood or marriage. Our youngest brother (age 19) is going steady with a girl he plans to marry sometime in 1981, but it's not definite as yet.

Should this girl be included in the family portrait? If you say she shouldn't, how can we avoid hurting her feelings?

SANTA'S HELPERS

DEAR HELPERS: If, as you say, "It's not definite," your brother's "steady" should not be included in the picture. Since the portrait will include family members only, there is no reason why this girl should be hurt. She's still a "miss," and a miss is as good as a mile.

DEAR ABBY: I am the president of an organization, and we have a problem with one of our members who is very religious. She is always trying to "sell" her religion to others. Some of our members resent it; they have their own religion, and are satisfied with it.

Our biggest problem is that she thinks it's her Christian duty to visit sick people in the hospitals. She and a group of eight ladies from her church go up and down the halls, visiting patients whether they know them or not. They just walk in, "bless" the patient, stand around the bed, holds hands and pray. Then this lady reads from the scriptures and gives a sermon.

A friend of mine was recently sick in the hospital with a "NO VISITORS" sign on her door. She said that she was dozing off when in comes this self-appointed saver of souls with her missionaries. They stood around her bed, chanting and praying until a nurse came in and told them they had to leave.

We are ashamed that this woman belongs to our organization. She tells these hospital patients that they are "sinners" who must seek God's forgiveness in order to enter the kingdom of heaven, which can be very depressing for folks who hope to get well.

How can we get her to quit visiting strangers in hospitals?

MRS. H. IN ARKANSAS

DEAR MRS. H.: First, your organization should advise her that there have been complaints about her hospital visitations and she must stop. After that, it's the responsibility of the hospital administration to protect their patients from unwelcome visitors.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were at the home of friends recently for dinner. These friends have two dogs who are considered "members of the family."

We were served a lovely dinner on the hostess's finest china. After dinner, the dishes were removed from the table. A few minutes later our hostess returned with two of the lovely plates with some leftover food on them. She set the plates on the floor in a corner for the dogs to lick. Noticing the expression of disgust on my face, she said, "Well, it's perfectly sanitary. All the dishes go into the dishwasher to be sterilized anyway!

Any comment?

YICH IN DETROIT

DEAR YICH: Even though the dishes are sterilized after the dog-licking, the thought of eating in the home where pets and people are served off the same dishes is understandably unsettling to some. However, I'm told that there is a greater danger of dogs catching something from humans than vice versa.

Spectators Striding In Spring Fashions

NEW YORK (AP) — It is no coincidence that the spectator shoe is back in style for spring if shoes are, in fact, an indicator of things to come, says Harold B. Gessner, executive director of the Footwear Council.

"The sensible but style-conscious mood of the country demands a revival of the spectator," says Gessner. "The spectator is a classic bicolor shoe with clean crisp lines. It is pretty and feminine — but, at the same time, geometric and futuristic."

The 1980s version of the spectator is a fresh interpretation of the bicolor shoe which includes the traditional white and black or navy, as well as the new brights or pastels, Gessner reports.

The styles of hair and shoes are the first indication of things to come — things like overall sociological trends as well as fashion, according to Gladys Toulis, as expert on the social significance of dressing and head of the fashion department at Pratt Institute in New York City.

"We are seeing a return to good proportions and the principles of good design. This spring shows beautiful styling that is not faddish and will never be dated," said Ms. Toulis.

"Hair styles are getting away from the looseness of the permanent toward a more precise, geometric, blunt cut," she adds. "Likewise, the spectator is a classic, sensible but feminine shoe — somewhere in between the heavy, chunky platform shoe of the '60s and the spiked heel and the strippy sandal of the '70s."

Gessner points out that the spectator has its parallels in history: in the '40s when women were going out to work and in the recent '70s when they have had to work to fight inflation.

The new spectator has been revived with a great deal of flair, the Footwear Council notes. Spring spectators can be choke-front or open-toe, d'Orsay-style with peep toes, with piping, asymmetrical vamps and whip stitching. Heels can be high or low, stiletto, underslung or cone-shaped.

The new spring brights make the spectator a very important accessory that complements the simplicity of a soft spring suit, the Council says. In addition, higher spring hemlines demand a more important shoe like the spectator.

The new softened spring suit with its fluid, full-skirted lines, soft pleating and lightly extended shoulders asks for an updated spectator shoe, as do the new bicolor asymmetrical or geometric tank dresses, explains Andrea Rosen, fashion director of the Footwear Council.

Other classic two-tone shoes have been back on the fashion scene lately with the reappearance of the golfer's shoe, topsiders, saddle shoes, two-tone sneakers and cowboy boots.

"We've been borrowing from the attic, groping for a historical sequence involving the classics. Annie Hall really started this recent wave of classic dress," notes Ms. Rosen. "The emphasis on the leg with the shorter skirt, textured and seamed stockings, culminates in the shoe. The spectator look of the Chanel suit with its boxy, shorter jacket is coming back."

Ms. Rosen sees the classic revival as grass roots, not Seventh Avenue, inspired. "Classics like the spectator aren't faddish. They are a choice by popular demand and not by fashion dictation," she said.

Ms. Toulis claims the spring spectator shoe is more than just a revival of an old style.

"We're coming out of an economy based on products with built-in obsolescence, where we wasted a lot. Now that we realize that old things have value, we are developing a collector mentality. We realize the value of things that are classic and classically built," she said.

NEW LOOK—The spectator shoe is back in newly interpreted colors and stylings for spring, according to The Footwear Council, which says the classic style's resurgence is a reflection of the investment-conscious women of the '80s. Clockwise from top: Mauve and white spectator with high, slim cone heel and ankle strap; blue and white sling-back; beige and white open-toed sling-back; tan wing-tip shoe with new welt stitching around the toe; futuristic red patent leather and white patent leather spectator. Christian Unity Still A Priority

ATLANTA (AP) — Lutheran members of a Lutheran-Roman Catholic dialogue team have received assurances from the Vatican that the quest for Christian unity remains an official priority of Roman Catholicism.

The Lutherans had written to the Vatican, voicing concern that Vatican procedures used in investigating two Catholic theologians, the Rev. Hans Kung and Edward Schillebeeckx, could put a damper on ecumenical efforts.

Cardinal Franjo Seper, head of the Vatican's congregation on doctrine, replied in a letter disclosed at a Lutheran meeting. He gave "every assurance" of Roman Catholic "concern for the progress of our mutual efforts toward the goal of Christian unity."

Cat Lovers Up In Arms

He's been getting hate mail since Monday when he was talking about a bill to require motorists who injure or kill a domestic animal to "make a reasonable effort to determine the owner of the animal."

"I can see stopping (a car) for a dog. But a cat? I don't know. You squish a cat and go on. I think we're over complicating life," said Gallagher.

But indignant cat owners may have the last word. Some of their comments:

—"We have a darling Persian cat. She is more to us than some people's kids are to them."

—"Animals don't do unto people like people do to animals."

—"I'm writing this letter to tell you how furious I am over your lack of respect for my cat."

—"Your statement about stopping for a dog and not a cat — just squish — is total, stupid irresponsibility."

—"Why don't you introduce a bill to uncomplicate life even more? This bill would allow the squishing of wasteful state senators without any liability."

Likes Elderly Carry-Out Boys

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — It was winter in Minnesota. Harold Bjurbeck was at work, despite wind chills in the 40-below-zero range, making his way across the snow-slicked parking lot with bags of groceries.

Bjurbeck, 80, was celebrating his 10th year as a "carry-out boy" for Lunds grocery stores.

Lunds has some of the oldest carry-outs in the nation. Sixteen of them are over 65. They were hired more from need than out of social conscience. It's hard to find carry-out help during school hours.

Managers of Lunds stores say almost all of the older men have had superior work records. They are punctual, cheerful, well-groomed, good with customers, happy to have a job and eager to do well.

Bjurbeck, for example.

"He gets here early and waits until his time to punch the clock," said Earl Mitchell, manager of the Lunds store in suburban Richfield. "He takes on special duties, like planting and caring for the flowers outside the store."

Russell Lund came up with the idea of hiring old people as carry-outs in the early 1960s.

"They were skeptical at first that the right people could be found," said David Gerdes, Lunds' personnel director. "It's a physically demanding job. It's hard on the back and legs, packing those bags, and you can imagine going in and out and in and out of the store on a cold day.

"It worked out better than anyone imagined. You have to tell kids to thank everyone and to be pleasant and to look clean. You don't have to say that to the older guys. They love having work and a place to go each day and a paycheck, and so they're a joy to have around."

Lunds pays the men $3.35 an hour. They work 16 to 20 hours a week and are there year after year, Gerdes said.

Donald Houle, 70, is eager to tell how much he enjoys his job.

"I love it," he said. "I've got to keep working or I'd go crazy. I know all the help, all the customers."

One morning, with the temperature 5 below zero, he was telling customers, "Oh, it's not that cold for me. I have my long johns."

Leonard Torgeson, 71, tells of a woman who advised him snootily that she would carry her own eggs because "you guys bust 'em up."

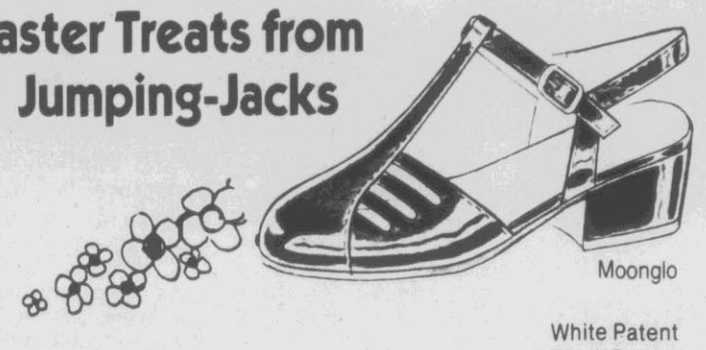

"It kind of tickled me when she dropped all three dozen just outside her car," he confided.

Ex-Gravedigger Tends Grounds

CHASE, Md. (AP) — Alice May Holdorf doesn't do the gravedigging any more, but she says she's a long way from cashing in her chips.

Her talk is still tough. She still tends the graveyard at Ebenezer United Methodist Church here, as she has done for about 50 years, but she hasn't dug a grave for two years.

"I got double pneumonia and spent four weeks in the hospital in February 1978," Mrs. Holdorf said, adding that she hadn't dug any graves since then.

"It got to the point where I would break off four picks on some of those graves," she said. "It was that purple clay. You just couldn't dig through it."

Now the graves are dug with a backhoe, but Mrs. Holdorf says she is still responsible for marking the graves and making sure they are dug properly.

She is well known in her community for her work and her language. She sprinkles her conversation with adjectives that would make a sailor blush.

She still dresses in men's blue workpants, heavy oxford shoes, a red shirt and green sweater. Her thick gray hair is brushed back, giving her a windswept look. The years of gravedigging show in the muscles in her shoulders and lower arms.

The graveyard is a special place for Mrs. Holdorf because her mother, father, grandfather, grandmother, aunt and nephew are buried there.

Two new granite markers stand near the center of the cemetery. The larger marker has two spaces. It reads: Holdorf. In smaller letters to the left: J. Raymond (her husband) Dec. 21, 1901-. To the right, the marker reads: Alice M. June 9, 1905-.

The smallest marker contains just one name: Charles M. Holdorf. June 1, 1929-Sept. 30, 1977.

Her son's grave was the only one in the last 25 years that Mrs. Holdorf didn't dig.

"I had a friend dig my son's grave," she said. "I didn't want to do it. I dug Father's and Mother's.

Mrs. Holdorf used to help her father, George Sawyer, with his gravedigging. She started digging by herself in 1961 when he died.

New Pioneers Building Their Own Houses

By JACK KNEECE

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — Charles Edenfield wiped the sweat off his dirty face and dropped his hammer on the rough sub-flooring of his dream house, a squat, simple brick structure with a front porch the length of the place.

He had a look of happy exhaustion as he lit a cigarette with grimy fingers. It was almost midnight and he was working by floodlight in the cold. He had to get up at dawn the next day and work hard at his own business.

"I'm building it a little at a time ... whenever I can get a few dollars together," said Edenfield, a small heating and air-conditioning contractor in White Rock, S.C.

Edenfield and thousands of other Americans across the country are saving billions of dollars by building their own homes, like their pioneering forefathers.

Edenfield is good with his hands. He has a knack for putting things together the right way. Because he works with his hands all day in his business, he would have preferred having a contractor build his home.

"But when I checked out building costs, I decided I would build as much of it as I could myself," he said. "I'd spend twice as much having it built, so I thought go to hell — I'll build it myself."

"I'm lucky I live here on property," said Edenfield, who lives in a double house trailer with his wife and four children, "because it's easier to work on it when I get a spare hour or so."

"In a way I'm glad I did it this way," said Edenfield, "because I know it's being done right even if it is slow." He said he has no idea how much it will cost, "but I have about $10,000 in it now." The 2,400-square-foot home has been inching toward completion for the past year.

Unusual?

Two blocks away from Edenfield, on the same road, another couple is spending every spare moment building a home. The children are helping nail and carry materials.

From the time the first American immigrants built rude shelters on the shores of the wild new land, a strong streak of "go to hell — I'll build it myself" has been part of the national heritage.

This stubborn mixture of craftsmanship and self-reliance — submerged when housing costs were reasonable — has mushroomed into a billion-dollar Do-It-Yourself market.

Do-it-yourselfers are expected to spend more than $48 billion annually on home and auto products by 1990, according to a study by Predicasts Inc., a market research firm. That's ... than at present, according to the Wall Street Journal. A Better Homes and Gardens survey shows that do-it-yourself has grown from the fad of the fifties to the necessity of the 1980s.

Spiraling home loan interest rates — nudging 13 percent in some areas of the nation — and rising building costs have sent housing costs soaring. A prime topic of discussion at every regional meeting of the National Association of Home Builders is what this will do to the ... g industry.

Some speakers at NAHB meetings wonder aloud if the time is not rapidly approaching when young couples will no longer be able to afford a new home — even a small "starter home" of two bedrooms, no garage.

But Americans in increasing numbers are building their own homes. Some are doing all of the work, but most are doing what they can and subcontracting out the rest. Still others are subcontracting all of it, acting as the prime contractor.

The average new home now costs $75,000, one of the major reasons many people are discovering the satisfaction of building their own homes.

Time Magazine printed a story last September on the Shelter Institute in Bath, Maine, where home-building techniques are taught in an intensive, three-week course. Within a week, the institute received 2,000 inquiries.

Lee Mahony, 31, a leather-worker and his wife, Susan, a 30-year-old school teacher, are building their own two-bedroom home on a south-facing hill in Monkton Boro, Vt.

It has a passive solar design and is heated by a wood stove. They began work on the 52 acres of wooded land in May, 1979. They estimate that the house will cost from $15,000 to $20,000, including $2,000 to build a quarter-mile road to the building site.

"We didn't know what we were doing most of the time," said Mahony. "We had to learn as we went along."

"It looks easy on paper," said Mrs. Mahony. "We didn't have the faintest idea how much things would cost or how long anything would take.

"It's wonderful to find that concrete work isn't this mystical, unfathomable thing," she said.

"And besides, we couldn't possibly have afforded to hire somebody to build for us."

They spent all summer on the foundation. Mahony started to dig the foundation by himself, but decided to hire a backhoe when he found it took him days to dig one corner. Once the foundation was dug, they considered hiring someone to pour the footings, walls and slab on which the house was constructed.

At first, they hand-mixed the concrete.

"Everyone said we were crazy. It was absolutely brutal work, all the heavy lifting. I felt like a mule," said Mrs. Mahony.

They then found they could get pre-mixed concrete delivered for only $10 a yard more than the raw materials.

Then came more troubles. When the concrete truck began pouring concrete into the four to eight foot high plywood forms, the forms began giving way. The result can still be seen in the foundation wall of one bedroom, which bulges in a smooth curve.

The Mahonys put the post and beam construction together on the ground. Finding it too hard to move, "we hired a crane," said Mahony.

Mahoney, who used less expensive green lumber for the board and batten siding, is now putting in the plumbing and finishing the interior walls.

Many young couples have found that one way of building their own home is to do it in stages. The first stage often consists of a kitchen, bedroom and bath, with the rest added gradually.

While home-building costs range from $35 to $50 per square foot, according to region, Pat and Patsy Hennin, who operate the shelter institute, said this figure can be cut to $10 to $15 by designing and building your own.

Another rapidly growing area for the do-it-yourselfer is the kit home. Many chain lumber supply firms supply pre-cut kits, with costs ranging up to $40 per square foot.

David and Donna Butler of Antrim, N.H., constructed a post-and-beam house last summer for an average cost of $27 per foot after planning it for five years.

"We'd never done any carpentry ... and were told we were crazy. But it was one of the smoothest experiences I've ever had," said Butler of his 26 by 28-foot home.

The frame was raised on July 4 "by everybody in Antrim" and the Butlers moved in two months later.

He said one problem was financing. "Local banks weren't exactly used to this sort of thing." He said he managed to get an FHA loan.

Although post and beam construction is rugged looking, engineers say it is not as strong as "stick-built" or stud-wall construction.

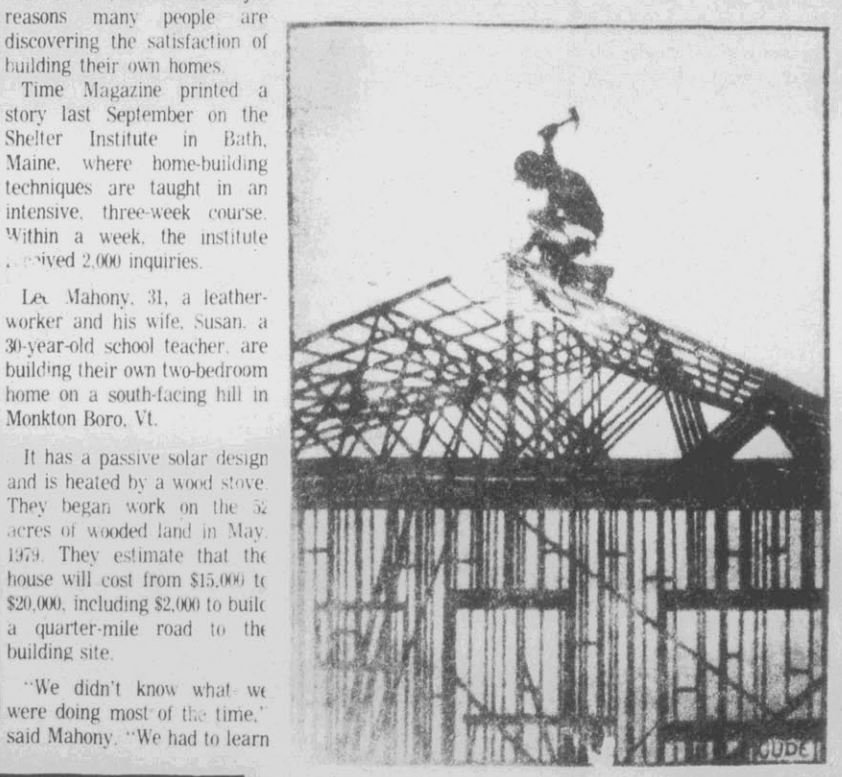

But engineers also say that the traditional practice of constructing studs 16 inches on center is not significantly stronger than 24 inches on center, which is far cheaper for do-it-yourselfers, with studs costing almost $2 in some parts of the nation.

SOLAR DESIGN, TOO — Lee Mahony and wife, Susan, built their own home like their pioneering forefathers. The two-bedroom home on a south-facing hill has a passive solar design and is heated by a wood stove. The estimate, aside from the land, is that the house will cost between $15,000 and $20,000. Percy Foreman At 77 Is Still A Formidable Rival

By GARY TAYLOR

HOUSTON (UPI) — Percy Foreman has forgotten why hired guns Eddie Morse and Jeff Cothron decided not to shoot after jumping him at noon in the Schlitz Bar 48 years ago.

He gave them every chance, showing up despite knowing they had a contract on his life. He even invited friend Ace Jacobs along to "watch a lawyer get shot."

What has survived in Foreman's memory about that 1933 incident, typical in the front-page life of the millionaire Texas lawyer, was the business generated that day.

"One of those men who tried to kill me I had in the pen by noon the next day. Both of them eventually became clients of mine. More than that, the men who hired them to kill me eventually became clients."

Thugs hired Foreman to defend them because he was above being bought while twice serving as an assistant district attorney in the 1920s and '30s, he claims.

"That was a pure business principle," he says. "I wanted the courts to decide the cases. Who was going to hire a criminal lawyer if he could hire the district attorney or the judge?"

Foreman, 77, has slowed down little since busting and then defending gamblers, since keeping an active file of "an average of 2,200 divorce cases" during the 1940s and since taking on the highly publicized murder cases of James Earl Ray, Jack Ruby and Melvin Lane Powers in his career.

"I don't get involved in a 12 to 14 week case anymore," he said, preferring to leave them to two law partners.

"Ever since I was 40 I looked forward to retiring," Foreman said. "Up to about 65 I still thought I would retire in the next five years. But I know now I won't because I would go to seed."

The 6-4, 250-pound barrister remains a formidable courtroom foe. He has lost only one defendant to a death sentence in probably 2,000 murder cases. He never kept score, but in 1957 a reporter counted 700 murder cases he had handled in Harris County alone.

During a recent lunch (in which he declined the waitress' suggestion of crabmeat in favor of Tomatoes Priscilla), Foreman looked back at a career which formed the basis for at least one television series.

"I'd rather try a murder case than any other type criminal case," he said. "There's one less witness. Plus, the defendant in a murder case is a superior type person to the average thief or dope peddler.

"Murder is a crime of passion. It is not usually a deliberate crime like systematic hot check writing or swindling. Most people charged with murder are charged but once. And most of them have more redeeming qualities than other criminals."

One of eight children, Foreman first felt the excitement of a courtroom in the Polk County Courthouse in Livingston, Texas, 8 miles from his Bold Springs home.

"I was always on the front seat (of that courtroom). My father was sheriff," he said. "Big trials of train robbers and murderers were the primary form of drama then. That and revival meetings.

"When there wasn't anything in town, why, all the kids would play revival. I remember one time preaching to an old cat and five or six or seven kittens. I converted all of them. They all joined the church. And I didn't have any trouble baptizing the kittens, either. But that old cat, she scratched and clawed and spit. I finally told her, 'Well, we'll just sprinkle you and let you go to hell.'"

Foreman has a compassion gained partly from a time he served county prisoners their meals for his father. He said he remembered them as ordinary individuals caught in a tragic web of emotion and circumstance.

"The death penalty," he said, "benefits nobody but lawyers."

But he also developed a toughness, even with clients, which drove some like Jack Ruby away.

Foreman dropped the appeal of the convicted murderer of Lee Harvey Oswald one week after taking it because Ruby's family started dictating to him.

A Florida woman accused of murdering her husband became the abused woman in the eyes of those in the courtroom after Foreman littered the counselors' table with whips similar to the ones the woman's husband had owned. She was acquitted in the 1964 trial.

Melvin Powers, the lover of socialite Candace Mossler, was acquitted in a 1966 trial of a charge he killed Mrs. Mossler's millionaire husband, Jacque, after Foreman described the victim as a debased pervert.

He did not attend Powers' victory party, saying, "I may represent these people but I don't have to associate with them."

Handling divorce cases for women made Foreman rich. He is credited with obtaining the largest settlement in history for Mrs. Cecil Blafer Hudson of Houston when she divorced her engineering executive husband. She got $6.5 million in cash, $3 million in oil wells, stocks, real estate and art objects, plus $1,200 a month child support.

He said today's juries are not as receptive as they once were to a slashing oratorical style he developed while speaking on an old time Chautauqua circuit to make money for college.

"A lot of lawyers depended on their oratory and their final arguments to win their case. A jury would laugh at you now if you resorted to that," he said.

Most people in American backwoods towns in the 1920s had never heard a radio. One form of entertainment was the carnival-like Chautauquas, one of which Foreman managed.

"The longer you spoke in the '20s and the teens — and even in the '30s — the more they thought they were getting for their money. A politician who could not speak for four or five hours, he wasn't smart enough to be in office," he said.

On one Chautauqua tour, Foreman was a principle speaker.

"I used to have as one of my lectures, 'He can who thinks he can,'" Foreman said. "I never was convinced of that. But I was convinced that 'He cannot who thinks he can't.' And this was way before anyone ever heard of Dale Carnegie."

Air conditioning made it tougher for him to figure a jury.

"One of the most valuable experiences I ever had," he said, "was in '27 and '28 when I was prosecuting misdemeanor criminal cases in county court. I had a jury case every day for 24 months.

"That was before air conditioning. There wasn't any jury room. The jury had to use the judge's office to deliberate. Those first two years of my law practice, I was able — as was everybody, the judge, the defense lawyer, the court reporters, the newswriters — to hear every word that every juror said. You learned then that jurors didn't pay much attention to the evidence. They were apt to talk more about Roy Hofheinz' buttons all the way up to his elbow."

Foreman said that early courtroom experience helped him formulate his defense in a criminal case.

"I've never looked at a fact situation from the standpoint of my client or the state. But I try to look at it from the standpoint of the jury, which is a third-dimensional standpoint."

Foreman, whose looks are somewhat reminiscent of W.C. Fields, remains a natty dresser three years after being named to one magazine's list of best-dressed men in America. He lives alone less than one year after the death of his second wife, Marguerite. His adopted son, William, 34, is a deputy sheriff in Galveston. His daughter, Marguerite, 22, is attending college.

Rivals often accused Foreman of working both sides of the law, but a drunken driving charge was the only offense for which he was convicted.

He was acquitted on charges of operating a policy racket and of adultery. The latter charge was brought by an irate husband whose wife Foreman was representing in a divorce suit.

He has paid fines for letting the weeds grow too high on his property, much of which he received in lieu of cash payment for legal work.

"I have things stored all over this city. At least I think I do," he said.

"People who get in serious trouble have a tendency to want to sacrifice in order to have money to pay a lawyer. Everything that I have taken in kind instead of money has been to keep people from sacrificing and living with less."

Almost anyone who calls or comes by his office gets a word with Foreman.

"I try and help, in some way, most of the people. Even if it's a matter of referring them to another lawyer who can do a better job for less money than I can."

To suggestions that he has kept many criminals out of jail, Foreman contends that 80 percent of his criminal clients were technically guilty but morally justified.

Unchanged is the length of his workday, from about 5:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. He said he has never had a vacation.

"Not to do something, not to be active, not to be engaged, not to be busy, would be a whole lot more problem for me than to have time to do something."

Pyramids Predated By The Temples Of Malta

By EDWARD MAGRI

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — The stone temples of Malta are older than the pyramids in Egypt, according to new scientific evidence, and the islanders who built them 5,000 years ago are now regarded as the world's first real architects.

The temples on Malta and the nearby island of Gozo have been impressing visitors since excavations were completed early this century, with the honey-colored stones forming high walls, gates and apses in a unique cloverleaf structure.

But they were believed to have been the fruit of some kind of "colonial" culture, possibly early Greek, and their location on the small Mediterranean islands contributed to making them little known around the world.

Calling them "the world's most impressive prehistoric monuments" in his book, "Before Civilization," British archeologist Colin Renfrew states that "according to the radiocarbon chronology, the temples are the earliest free-standing monuments of stone in the world."

Renfrew said the temples were being built before 3,000 B.C., and perhaps several centuries earlier. The great pyramid in Egypt dates to 2,680 B.C.

Malta, a crossing point for seamen and conquerors over the centuries, has borrowed almost everything in its culture from outside. Its language is a mixture of Arabic and Sicilian dialect. Its churches and palaces reflect Italian style.

"But now we know we did not 'borrow' the temples, they are our own," Francis S. Mallia, director of Valletta's Museum of Archeology, said in an interview.

He said the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization would include them on a world heritage list now in preparation.

The biggest of the 16 variously preserved temples is the Ggantija or "tower of the giants" on the island of Gozo. It has an imposing facade with large slabs of coralline limestone reaching a height of 24 feet. The original facade may have been twice as high.

The most splendidly decorated with relief carvings of spiral lines and animals are at Tarxien, where the most surprising find was the lower part of a statue of a seated woman, believed to have originally been 6 feet high.

This "fat lady," probably a goddess of fertility, "must be the earliest colossal statue in the world," Renfrew says.

Malta's temple builders could not write and knew only stone tools. Yet the finding of well-detailed small models show they were "transforming an intellectual idea into a material structure both in plan and elevation," Mallia said.

Scholars assume the temple builders were descendants of people who came here by sea from Sicily.

A mystery surrounds the temples. They were suddenly abandoned. Archeological evidence points to a gap of 100 to 200 years between the temples' people and the Bronze Age population which settled Malta about 4,000 years ago.

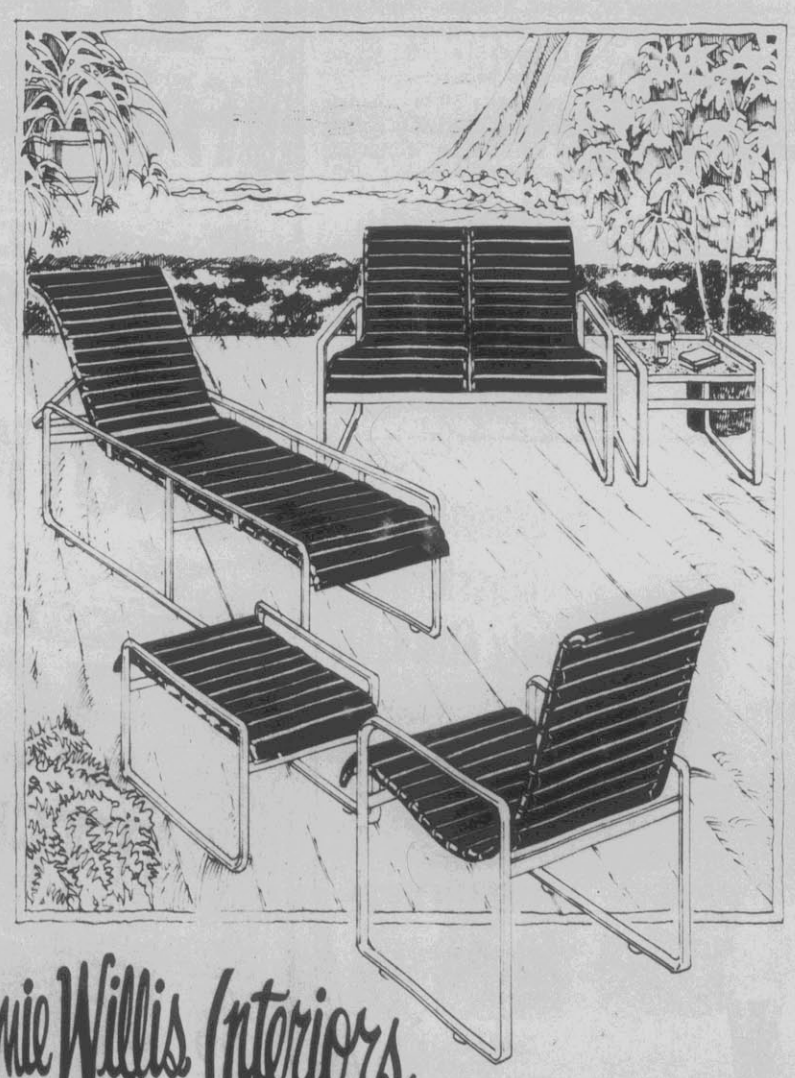

"It's a mystery," Mallia said. "I think the temples' people vanished because of a sudden change of climate or some plague."

Anger Of Consumer Resulted In A Federal Case

ANGRY CONSUMER — Maj. Arthur J. Doherty got so angry over a manufacturer's response when a $2,500 heat pump broke down that he literally made a federal case of it. (AP Laserphoto)

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $2,500 heat pump broke down at the Woodbridge, Va., home of Arthur Doherty. That mechanical failure, and the manufacturer's response to it, so angered a single consumer that he literally made a federal case of it.

Since Doherty began his campaign two years ago against Fedders Corp., a major producer of heat pumps and air conditioners, the company has been the subject of one costly Federal Trade Commission order, another FTC investigation, numerous consumer complaints and various lawsuits.

The beleaguered Edison, N.J.-based company has reported financial losses in four of the last five years and largely blames the consumer outcry that Doherty continues to lead.

Doherty, an Air Force major who now lives at Vandenburg AFB, Calif., was an unlikely candidate to provide a textbook example of how one consumer can take on a large company.

"I had never been a complainer. I just got mad at Fedders and the way their people would stonewall my complaints," he said.

Heat pumps, a new energy-saving way to heat and cool homes, pump hot air outside during summer, and pump cold air out in the winter. When his Fedders Model CKH heat pump stopped working two years ago, Doherty at first assumed the problem was only in his unit.

"Then I noticed that the same repair truck that came to my house was showing up at other houses in the neighborhood. I asked some of my neighbors about it and a lot of them were having the same problem," Doherty said.

He polled owners of homes in the subdivision. "There was a failure rate of 80 percent in the Fedders units. I don't think General Electric had any and Carrier had one failure," Doherty said.

Fedders officials said then that the installation had been improper in his subdivision, Doherty recalled. To disprove this, Doherty had to show it was a national problem.

He wrote letters to state attorneys general. He wrote consumer protection departments. He wrote the dealers who had to deal with unhappy homeowners. He wrote consumers who had reported problems. He compiled a stack of letters saying the product was unreliable.

Eventually, Fedders reimbursed Doherty for his $285 repair bill. But by then the angry consumer was in no mood to give up. "I had evidence that the situation was the same nationally," he said.

He gave his findings to the Federal Trade Commission, which further investigated and finally negotiated a settlement with Fedders.

The company, without acknowledging any legal violations, agreed last year to send letters to up to 40,000 owners saying, "Fedders will fix your heat pump. Free."

Under FTC pressure, Fedders agreed to replace the part it says is the cause of the problem or to reimburse consumers for repairs already paid for. It also agreed to longer warranties.

FTC Chairman Michael Pertschuk listed the case in recent appearances before House and Senate appropriations committees as among the commission's major accomplishments in the last year to protect consumers.

But Doherty still wasn't satisfied. He complained to the FTC that the consent order was not strong enough. He said it should have included Fedders air conditioners, which he said have the same compressor failures that afflict the heat pumps.

These developments have occurred since the consent order:

—The FTC opened an investigation of Fedders' air conditioner performance and warranty service. Doherty had orchestrated the air conditioner complaints, locating consumers with problems and prodding them to write the FTC or file lawsuits.

—Doherty, in an effort to check FTC enforcement of the consent order, sued the FTC and Fedders to get the list of 40,000 heat pump owners who are supposed to receive notices. Doherty said he doesn't believe the company will contact all the people and wants the list to run spot checks. "I have evidence that even consumers whose names were supplied to Fedders by dealers are not getting the notification," he said.

—Company statements revealed that Fedders has spent at least $500,000 to comply with the consent order and that it has lost money in four out of the last five years.

Neither John Adams, Fedders director of public relations, nor Joel Gold, consumer affairs director, returned a reporter's calls, so it could not be determined how much the FTC order cost Fedders, although one published report said it could be $2 million.

Doherty said he would not be upset even if his campaign were to drive Fedders out of business. "Potential purchasers of Fedders heat pumps would benefit by not being able to buy a heat pump that has an 80 to 100 percent probability of failing within the first two or three years of operation," he said.

Collection Guards Old Musical Instruments

By DAN HALL
Associated Press Writer

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Every so often, a man from London visits the Yale Collection of Musical Instruments to examine the same violin for hours.

He is Charles Beare, an instrument dealer and one of the leading violin experts. The violin is a Stradivarius.

"He takes it out and studies it in natural light for the better part of a day," said Richard Rephann, collection director.

Beare finds beauty in Antonio Stradivari's masterpiece, but his dedication extends beyond that. He is also training his eye continually to recognize the nuances of a "Strad" so he won't be fooled by something disguised as one.

The threat he fears is symbolized by another piece in the Yale collection: a pocket-sized dancemaster's violin called a kit that bears a false Stradivari label.

The collection of about 800 unusual, and usually very expensive, musical instruments from the past serves several roles. It is open to the general public as well as to musical specialists such as Beare. But its primary function is to supplement musical instruction at Yale.

In addition, a half-dozen or more concerts are held each year with musicians of international acclaim such as Ralph Kirkpatrick and the Philidor Trio bringing showpiece instruments to life.

The home of the collection since 1959 has been a blocky brownstone building that was once a fraternity house. Only a narrow sign on the tree-shrouded doorway announces the new use. But inside, in a carefully controlled atmosphere, resides a growing collection that is considered one of the finest smaller musical collections in the world.

It grew from a group of mostly keyboard instruments donated to Yale in 1900 by Morris Steinert of New Haven, a poor Swiss immigrant who made a fortune selling sheet music and instrument strings to temperance bands.

For years the instruments were tucked away under the Woolsey Hall dome, where an annual report might boast that "51 people visited," Rephann said. Last year an estimated 6,500 to 7,000 persons made individual visits or took advantage of tour arrangements.

The Bell Skinner collection broadened the display in 1959 and prompted the move to newer quarters, Rephann said.

Later gifts included 70 stringed instruments from Emil Herrmann, an Easton collector and dealer, and the Robyna Neilson Ketchum collection of bells, which includes a 1500 B.C. Persian bell that is by far the oldest piece.

Rephann said the ongoing task of repairing and protecting old and delicate instruments raised some interesting problems.

In an attempt to put some of them back in service, collectors have modified stringed instruments to withstand the generally higher tuning in vogue today, he said.

"Much of what survived 200 years of benign neglect probably has been destroyed in the past 30 years in the name of scholarship," he said.

Rephann authorizes repairs, but only if they don't alter the essential musical structure of an instrument. While no one can duplicate the sound that Bach or Stradivari heard, the instruments of their time at least should exist as they did then, he said.

Standing among the display of graceful pianos, harpsichords and other large stringed instruments, Rephann — a professional harpsichordist — noted that instrument makers so far had found modern technology a poor substitute for the uncanny knowhow that created the mellow tones in centuries past.

"The very best people haven't been very successful in reproducing the sound of these instruments. Yet when they are taken apart, they look so simple," he said.

AGED FIRE VICTIMS

NEW YORK (UPI) — The highest death rate by fire is among persons 65 years of age and older, according to the Insurance Information Institute, which also points out that the death rate among children under five years of age is the second highest.

Another Side Of Vikings Is Shown

AUTHENTIC VIKING longship replica had to take to the air when it arrived in London from the Isle of Man for the Viking exhibition at the British Museum. Because of the vessel's dimensions, it had to be hoisted by crane over the museum walls into the forecourt lawn. It was built in Norway to commemorate the millenium of the Isle of Man in 1979.

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — A wooden boat with oars and a sail, a replica of the craft used in Viking raids 1,000 years ago and more frightening looking than a jet-age warplane, stands dramatically on the lawn outside the British Museum.

It is there in connection with an exhibition on the Vikings, who for more than two centuries terrified Europe. Their plundering raids along the coasts and up the great rivers, their feats of navigation over thousands of miles of open sea, left a folk-memory of fear that has survived to our times.

Now historians and archeologists hope that the exhibition will make people think better of the wild Norsemen.

"The Vikings have had a bad press and have a fearsome image. We are hoping to redress the balance," said David Wilson, director of the British Museum, which is staging the exhibition. It will run for five months and then go to the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

There are weapons in the display of more than 500 relics from 40 institutions in eight countries, but the emphasis is on the Vikings' skills as sailors, navigators and explorers, traders, craftsmen, artists, lawgivers, settlers and farmers.

There are wood, iron, bronze and ivory relics, stone carvings, treasure, jewels, ornaments, household goods, a gaming board, farming, hunting and fishing implements, and the tool chest of an itinerant craftsman, found in a bog on the Swedish island of Gotland.

"Such an exhibition is unlikely to be repeated in this generation anywhere in the world," says the British Museum. It has been helped to put on the show by Times Newspapers Ltd. of London and Scandinavian Airline Systems, and by a grant from the five-nation Nordic Council (Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden).

"In a brutal age the Vikings were brutal, but their brutality was no worse than that of their contemporaries," writes Wilson in his preface to the museum's lavishly illustrated catalogue of the exhibition.

The Vikings emerged in the late eighth century, 400 years after the Roman Empire in the West had collapsed under the onslaught of Germanic migrations.

Until then, progress had been slow for the people of present-day Norway, Sweden and Denmark. Then, by one of those curious and not yet adequately explained historical leaps, they burst out to dominate northern Europe and beyond, for more than 250 years.

They colonized Iceland and Greenland and made the first European contact with North America by settling briefly in Newfoundland. They founded Dublin and other Irish towns, established a powerful kingdom based on York in northern England, and settled across eastern England and in the Scottish islands.

The Vikings extorted treasure from the kingdoms of Western Europe. In the East, they colonized the Baltic coast and regularly navigated the Volga and Dnepr river systems of Russia.

They reached the Black Sea, the Caspian and the Arab lands, trading for luxury goods and silver.

Scandinavia is dominated by water and the exploits of the Vikings are bound up in their ships. They developed a vessel with a sail and lines of oarsmen that could ride the ocean at 10 knots and be rowed up rivers deep into enemy territory. The ship could glide through the surf up on to a beach to unleash its armed horde.

The ship — not strictly in the show — on the lawn outside the museum, is a two-thirds scale replica of a Viking longship and is named Odin's Raven. It comes from the Isle of Man, which hopes by showing it in London to attract tourists to the island between Britain and Ireland.

The wooden ship was built in Norway and sailed and rowed by 11 Manxmen and five Norwegians 1,500 miles from Trondheim to the Isle of Man last year, for the 1,000-year celebrations of the Tynwald, the island's parliament, founded by Vikings.

Complaint From Postal Service

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — It's rare when the U.S. Postal Service has a complaint about the mail, but:

An official of the San Diego office of the Postal Service recently wrote to Fireman's Fund Insurance Cos.: "I recently requested 50 copies of your pamphlet 'First Aid for Choking'. You obviously sent the pamplets, but the envelope apparently came open in the mail and all I received was the empty envelope. Would you please send me another 50 pamphlets?"

Old Questions About Familiar Sun Are Re-Raised

EDITOR'S NOTE — No star is more important to us than the sun, and earthlings have studied it for centuries. Yet we know surprisingly little about its workings. It's possible, for example, that the sun is shrinking — or even going out. Here's a survey of recent research that raises fascinating questions.

By KEVIN McKEAN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Why does the sun shine?

That question, once asked in earnest by children and scientists alike, was left to the children 40 years ago when physicists deduced that the sun shines by fusing hydrogen atoms to form helium.

But now scientists are asking the question again, since new evidence has thrown part of that explanation into doubt.

They are asking other surprising questions about the sun too — for example, why does the sun seem to go to sleep every few centuries, a halt that nearly threw the world into a new ice age 300 years ago?

And why does the sun appear to be shrinking?

Most astronomers considered the mystery of sunshine solved when physicist Hans Bethe wrote the equations for its nuclear fusion in 1939.

"They thought it was so well understood there was no point in going further. More exotic things like red giants, neutron stars and supernovae were thought to be the important things," says John Bahcallof the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton.

But now a detector has failed to find the predicted number of particles called neutrinos from the sun, casting doubt on the current version of the fusion theory. An international team of scientists hopes to run a $25 million experiment to resolve the dilemma.

Solar specialist Jack Eddy of the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics and the National Center for Atmospheric Research is studying whether the sun is shrinking.

He and co-worker Aram Boornazian had been analyzing old records from the British Royal Observatory at Greenwich. On every clear day since 1750, astronomers there have noted the sun's location by measuring how long it takes the sun to cross a hairline in a fixed observing instrument.

From those "solar transit" measurements, Eddy and Boornazian found that the sun's diameter appears to have been decreasing by about one-tenth of a percent per century at least since 1853, when the astronomers began marking the transit with an accurate electric timer.

This seems slow, but it would be enough for the sun to have shrunk out of existence since the time of the cave men.

Some physicists have been skeptical of the data, but others think it could mean the sun has a cycle of expanding and contracting, with the present contraction phase helping to generate heat.

The importance of this observation is that it could mean the sun shines more brightly at some periods than at others. And a decline of just 3 percent in the sun's output would eventually freeze the oceans, some scientists think.

But the evidence of a sun-weather connection is elusive.

People had been making records of sunspots for nearly 150 years before German pharmacist Heinrich Schwabe pointed out in 1843 that they waxed and waned with an approximately 11-year cycle.

Later that century, British astronomer E.W. Maunder noted that from 1645 to 1710, there were almost no sunspot reports. He suggested the sun may have gone into a quiet stage.

In 1976, Eddy added evidence from naked eye sightings and auroral displays to show that the sun had indeed taken a 65-year nap.

This quiescence, now called the Maunder Minimum, happens to coincide with the coldest days of the Little Ice Age, a period when average temperatures fell several degrees in Europe, crops failed and the glaciers advanced in the north. Nobody knows why.

Another intriguing sunspot-weather connection was uncovered by Princeton's Robert H. Dicke who noticed that cycles with many sunspots seemed to arrive a little early, on average, while cycles with fewer spots came a little late.

"We know sunspots are induced by magnetic fields. If they were generated by some regular process deep in the sun and floated up to the surface, a strong field would be more 'bouyant' and would float up faster," he says.

Using data on three centuries of sunspots, Dicke calculated that the period of this suspected internal clock should be 22.4 years.

There are echoes of this 22-year rhythm on Earth. Scientists have noted 22-year undulations in the average width of tree rings, in barometric pressure at high latitudes and in temperatures at some locations.

Severe droughts on the North American plains come roughly every 22 years — in 1975-76, 1954, 1934, 1913 and 1890.

Dicke says there may be an internal magnetic clock that somehow "throttles" the sun's output, so that the solar luminosity itself goes up and down with a 22-year cycle.

Until recently, scientists have not been able to measure these changes in the "solar constant," because the Earth's atmosphere gets in the way.

The first sustained measurement of the solar constant is due this year from the Solar Maximum Mission, a National Aeronautics and Space Administration satellite launched in February. This satellite, whose main job is to study solar flares, can detect changes in the solar constant of as little as 0.3 percent over many months.

Another research issue is the case of the missing neutrinos.

The neutrino is a particle emitted during certain nuclear reactions, including several of those believed to power the sun, and scientists think it might be a good way of checking if the reactions believed to power the sun are really happening.

Chemist Ray Davis Jr. of Brookhaven National Laboratory on Long Island, N.Y., led a team that set up a neutrino detector nearly a mile underground at the Homestake Gold Mine in Lead, S.D.

But in nearly a decade, the detector has found only one-third the expected number of neutrinos.

Scientists have proposed many theories to explain the missing neutrinos — including the one about the sun having gone out.

Now scientists from several institutes want to build a new neutrino detector, consisting of 50 tons of a mercury-like liquid metal called gallium that would generate radioactivity when hit by a neutrino. By counting the radioactivity, scientists could estimate the number of neutrinos.

A prototype of the gallium detector is being built at Brookhaven. But the experimenters are still looking for money.

Gallium costs $500,000 a ton and the current world production is only 20 tons a year.

"It seems to me that we're not even at first base," Bahcall says. "We have just realized we have a ball game and all we know is somebody is out there throwing fastballs at us and we can't even see them."

Tensions Change Furniture Taste

HIGH POINT, N.C. (UPI) — World tensions are changing consumers' tastes in furniture and furnishings, says Harley F. Shuford, Jr., a furniture manufacturer.

In a speech before other furniture company executives, Shuford predicted the 1980s would see "a significant resurgence of consumer interest not only in quality but in traditional design." He expects trendy merchandise to decline in popularity because traditional designs symbolize stability, security and proven value in an uneasy world.

Shuford also expects a significant trend toward formality and continued popularity of Early American, country French and country English style furniture.

Woven jacquards are due for a comeback on upholstered furniture, he said, because "jacquards are generally perceived to have greater wearing qualities."

EPA Ruling To Cost Mileage

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Lead Industries Association complains that a ruling by the Environmental Protection Agency calling for a further reduction in the amount of lead in gasoline will cost Americans as much as 15.75 million gallons of gasoline daily. Currently the EPA allows only 0.8 gram of lead anti-knock per gallon of gasoline and the new ruling calls for reducing that to 0.5 gram in October.

The Lead Association says that, becausee adding lead during refining boosts the octane level, the more lead used the less crude oil is needed to produce the same quantity of gasoline.

Rising Gasoline Prices Spell End Of The Guzzler

By JAMES V. HIGGINS
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — Noreen Gottschalk has a husband, four kids and a dinosaur.

The last is voracious, and of a species rapidly becoming extinct — a big, gas-guzzling, family-size car. In her case it is an Oldsmobile Toronado, several years old.

"I use it just as little as possible," Mrs. Gottschalk said.

She and her husband, Robert, are considering a step already taken by many Americans confronted by rising gasoline prices — buying a smaller, more economical car.

Yet there are times when they must pack Laura, 9, Bobby, 7, Katy, 2, and 1-year-old Billy into the car outside their suburban Detroit home for a trip. They wonder what would happen if the current small car revolution forced them into cramped quarters.

"I would manage," Mrs. Gottschalk said. "They might be a little uncomfortable, but we could do it. Basically what I'm saying is you have to be economical and sacrifice a little bit for the general good.

"I'm not a conservationist," she said, "but I believe the mood of the country is focused on wanting to take something. But you have to give something in return. If you have to squeeze into a little Chevette ... that's what you have to do."

She hopes, however, that Detroit will produce an economical but roomy front-wheel drive station wagon that will accommodate her family and get good gas mileage.

U.S. automakers were caught off guard in 1979 by a sudden buyer swing to small cars. In 1981, they will counter with a number of compact and subcompact models that, together with General Motors Corp.'s 1980 X-cars, represent some of the most significant new automotive offerings in history.

It was the suddenness of the small car shift, precipitated by last spring's gasoline crisis, that startled the domestic industry. It accelerated a long-standing trend that automakers had planned to meet in a more leisurely way.

Americans bought 10.6 million passenger cars last year, including 8.3 million from domestic manufacturers and 2.3 million imports. Smaller cars in the compact, subcompact and small-sporty segment accounted for a record 53 percent of those sales.

Those smaller cars began the decade of the 1970s with one-third of the market and moved up to 46 percent in 1974 and 1975 after the Arab oil embargo gave the nation its first drastic taste of fuel shortages since World War II.

The small car segment fell back to 42 percent in 1976 as the gasoline lines of 1974 were forgotten, but was edging upwards again when the lines reappeared early in 1979.

With a fertile market appearing overnight, auto industry executives stopped complaining about government rules requiring them to achieve a fleet average of 27.5 miles per gallon by 1985. The regulations had been the main force behind efforts to trim the size of their fleets.

There had been doubts that Americans really wanted small cars.

A top Ford Motor Co. executive recently reported a widespread belief in the auto industry that a sustained period of stable gas prices would reawaken Americans' love for the bigger car.

Researchers at the University of Michigan have gathered consumer information which they say confirms both that Americans are partial to bigger cars and that rising gasoline prices are the only thing likely to make them change that attitude.

Daniel H. and Martha S. Hill of the U.M. Institute for Social Research sought to determine how people's attitudes would affect the success of the 1974 law imposing fuel economy standards on the auto industry.

Their findings led them to believe Americans won't necessarily give up larger vehicles simply because they are concerned about dwindling oil supplies. Among those who changed their driving habits, the cost of gasoline was the most frequently cited motivation.

"Since the price at the pumps is what alters the driving behavior of Americans," the Hills concluded, "(the fuel economy standard) will work if, and only if, it is accompanied by increased gasoline prices."

Daniel Hill said gasoline prices "are going to go up. Most studies have them going up quite a bit."

"The industry grew in the 1970s, as did the small-car share of industry," said a Big Three analyst. "That pattern will repeat in the 1980s."

Although some auto industry and labor executives have complained loudly about the fact imported cars captured a record 22 percent share of the American car market in 1979, four of the five best-selling nameplates in the small-car class were domestically built.

The leaders last year were the Chevrolet Chevette with sales of 375,700, followed by Ford Fairmont with 338,800, Chevrolet Citation (and the Nova it replaced in April) with 308,400, Ford Mustang at 304,100 and Toyota Corolla with 257,100.

Typically, small cars sold better throughout the last half of 1979 than in the previous year while sales of intermediate and full-sized cars were lagging.

That was especially true for GM's X-cars, which combined front wheel drive, a transverse-mounted engine, small outer appearance and improved fuel economy with substantial interior space. It also was true for Chrysler Corp.'s Omni and Horizon subcompacts as well as the various Japanese imports.

"A major objective of our 1979 marketing plan was to keep our small cars in the top ranks of the small car market, and that has been accomplished," MacKenzie said.

Buyers in the current subcompact market might find themselves trying to choose between a Mazda GLC that starts at $3,695 and gets an estimated 24-30 miles per gallon in city driving; a Toyota Tercel, $3,698 and 29-33 mpg; a Honda Civic, $3,699 and 25-36 mpg; a Datsun 210, $3,749 and 26-31 mpg; a Ford Pinto, $3,781 and 21-24 mpg; a Chevette, $3,782 and 25-26 mpg; an American Motors Corp. Spirit, $4,062 and 18-23 mpg; Renault Le Car, $4,269 and 30 mpg; Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon, $4,925 and 23-24 mpg; and Volkswagen Rabbit, $4,995 and 23-42 mpg.

There also would be a choice of imported cars sold by U.S. manufacturers, including the Dodge Colt and Plymouth Champ, $4,450 and 30-37 mpg, and Ford Fiesta, $4,622 and 26-28 mpg.

Profit margins on smaller cars are notoriously lower than on full-size and luxury models, leading some observers to wonder whether the U.S. auto industry could remain profitable by selling a larger proportion of small cars.

A Big Three executive recently reminded reporters that small doesn't necessarily mean cheap — a fact well known by sports car buffs.

The American consumer's penchant for expensive options and for sporty packages also is being counted on to bring up the profits on sales of small cars.

In any case, the U.S. industry is forging ahead with plans to place more small cars on the market. The 1981 model year already is being dubbed the year of the small car.

Ford next year will bring out its Ford Escort and Mercury Lynx series for the U.S. market to replace Pinto and Bobcat, among the first American subcompacts.

Although the car is being kept under wraps, Ford has made it known that the vehicle will feature front-wheel drive and improved fuel economy in a small "World Car" format. It also will have various body types, including a sporty model.

Chrysler already has shown its line of K-cars — one version expected to be called the Aries — that will replace the Volare and Aspen subcompacts.

The K-cars will compete directly with GM's hugely successful X-cars and will have front-wheel drive, a gas-stingy Chrysler-built four-cylinder engine, lighter weight and interior space conservation — and the station wagon format Mrs. Gottschalk wants.

GM will field a "J-body" front-wheel-drive subcompact to replace the aging Monza and Sunbird and add a sporty dash to its new small lineup of Chevette and the Citation, Phoenix, Skylark, Omega X-car group.

AMC also will try to repeat a 1980 success story by introducing a subcompact derivative of its Eagle, the only U.S.-built, four-wheel-drive passenger car.

The Hills at U.M. found safety in crashes was the reason most often cited by consumers who opposed downsizing of the U.S. car fleet.

Automakers have long acknowledged that, in a crash between a small and big car, the small car occupant runs a bigger risk of injury. But they also say that overall risk is diminished with a greater number of small cars on the road.

And many of the experimental "safe cars" designed to protect occupants in high-speed crashes are being presented in the small car format.

Adopt-A- Building To Save The Past

By PHILLIP RAWLS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A fried-chicken franchise is going up where the governor's mansion once stood. Adopt-A-Building doesn't want that to happen again.

Adopt-A-Building is a new arm of Historic Nashville Inc., a volunteer group dedicated to saving the city's historic structures. Its purpose is to get a volunteer to develop an interest in one building and its future, co-chairmen Mr. and Mrs. William G. Coke said.

Just as Historic Nashville Inc., was born in 1975 out of the debate over plans to tear down the Ryman Auditorium when the Grand Ole Opry left, Adopt-A-Building began in October in reaction to a developer's razing the old governor's mansion near Centennial Park.

While National Life and Accident Insurance Co. saved the Ryman and made it a tourist attraction, just a few architectural antiques were salvaged from the governor's mansion, Mrs. Coke said.

Under Adopt-A-Building, Mrs. Coke said, a volunteer adopts a building and agrees to contact its owners, report on its condition within a month, make follow-up reports quarterly, and visit it monthly so that it doesn't get sold or get torn down before historic preservationists realize it.

So far, 60 buildings are under volunteers' watchful eyes, the co-chairmen said.

But there is more to the program than watching buildings — unless the volunteers want to watch them get torn down. Owners must be convinced of the value of the buildings, Coke said.

"So many people are used to seeing a building that they forget its significance," he said.

"If you've owned an old building for a long time, all you see is old," his wife said.

To persuade owners to save buildings, the group has its spiel about "a legacy we leave to our grandchildren," but it also gets down to the economic factors that building owners must consider.

Cherrie Hall, executive director of Historic Nashville, said a building owner could qualify for a 10 percent tax credit if a building was more than 20 years old and hadn't been rehabilitated in 20 years.

If a building is on the National Register of Historic Places — and Adopt-A-Building is working toward that with some buildings — an owner can get more tax incentives and low-interest federal loans, the executive director said.

Also, special federal funds are available for historic buildings, depending on locations and income levels of the owners.

Finally, building owners are shown some old Nashville buildings that are fetching fancy rents from music companies, lawyers, architects, etc.

"We are asking owners to take another look," Mrs. Coke said. "If they take another look, they are going to see the value."

Nazi Creed Kept Alive In America

EDITOR'S NOTE — George Dietz has persuaded himself that the holocaust never happened. His hero remains Adolf Hitler and to him the Nazi ideology — abhorred almost everywhere in the world — remains the wave of the future. From the unlikely setting of a tiny West Virginia community, Dietz tries to contribute by pouring out a steady stream of Nazi propaganda.

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

REEDY, W.Va. (AP) — George Dietz, mild-mannered and polite, deals in real estate and also runs a printing shop in this tiny crossroads hamlet of the West Virginia hill country.

From his little press, he runs "the largest anti-Semitic propaganda mill in the United States," according to a spokesman for the Anti-Defamation League in New York, Irwin Suall.

To Dietz, that's a compliment.

He prints pamphlets, books, pictures, leaflets and other material intended to keep Adolf Hitler's shattered legacy alive among scattered and obscure Nazi groups around the world.

A West German parliamentary commission investigating Nazi propaganda material in that country found that 95 percent of it comes from the United States.

And Simon Wiesenthal, the indefatigable hunter of Nazi war criminals, told an audience in Bonn last year that Dietz and Gerald Lauck of Lincoln, Neb., were the main sources.

Derek von Haeften, an official at the West German Embassy in Washington, says he's been told by American officials that nothing can be done to curb Dietz's propaganda mill, since he is not violating U.S. laws. In West Germany, possession of Nazi propaganda material is illegal.

"All we can do is to try to stop it at our borders and that's difficult," Von Haeften says.

Through "The Liberty Bell," a monthly magazine he publishes, and hundreds of books and pamphlets he prints in several languages, Dietz feeds a network of sympathizers in the United States, Western Europe, South America, the Middle East and South Africa.

A recent article in the magazine hailed the Ayatollah Khomeini and said the Iranian revolution and the Nazi rise to power in Germany were the only genuine "people's revolutions in the 20th century," both coming about as "a reaction against the Jews."

Dietz, a native of Germany, came to the United States in 1957. Not much is known about his life in Germany and he discourages questions about it. He first settled in New Jersey, went into real estate, and became a naturalized citizen.

Until he came to the United States, Dietz says he had never heard about the slaughter of 6 million Jews at the hands of the Nazis.

His explanation of the gas chambers and the piles of bodies is that they were delousing chambers and the dead were victims of typhus epidemics.

Behind a front office, a large showroom houses crates packed with copies of Hitler's Mein Kampf and other Nazi books. Walls are lined with shelves of books from Dietz's press: hundreds of titles ranging from the writings of Hitler to the anti-Semitic classics of Tsarist Russia, the works of tiny American Nazi groups and the spiritual testament of the founder of Rumanian fascism.

A whole section is devoted to pamphlets on incendiaries, field fortifications, boobytraps, improvised munitions and explosives.

The Liberty Bell Press catalogue lists 353 titles of books and pamphlets in English, German, Spanish and French. The catalogue also lists records of Nazi war songs, recordings of fascist speeches, posters and bumper stickers.

He won't be silenced, he says. "In Germany, they had concentration camps for homosexuals, insane, degenerates, Jews and Communists," he calmly tells a visitor, "and they should have them here."

On Feb. 14, 1977, a warehouse worker named Frederick Cowan, who had been suspended from his job, killed six persons, including a policeman, at his workplace in New Rochelle, N.Y. He wounded four more police officers before taking his own life.

An investigation showed Cowan was a Nazi with an arsenal of weapons. Among Cowan's belongings were many of Dietz's publications, according to New York attorney Harry H. Lipsig, who field the suit on behalf of one of the wounded New Rochelle policeman.

Lipsig says Dietz and his publications were partly responsible for Cowan's murderous explosion.

"I sued these hate publications on the theory that they inspired the hate in the man who went on the shooting spree," Lipsig says.

The Martinique

Circular Stairs, Sun Deck Enrich Design

By Jerry Bishop

In the tradition of French country homes of the past, the Martinique, a two story mansard roof design, offers exterior elegance. A contemporary floor plan adds a luxurious master suite, sun deck, and circular stairway from family room to deck.

The attention to detail begins with the facade, and engaging union of dormered mansard roof, softly curved arched lintels, and rich brick trim.

Guests enter a gracious foyer, flanked by coat closet at left and living room at right. With the connecting formal dining room, the living room excells in entertaining space, large enough for parties but comfortable for small groups of friends.

Another closet lines the hallway leading to the kitchen. Rounded by dining room and laundry, the kitchen shows efficient work areas plus a family dining area. A broom closet is featured.

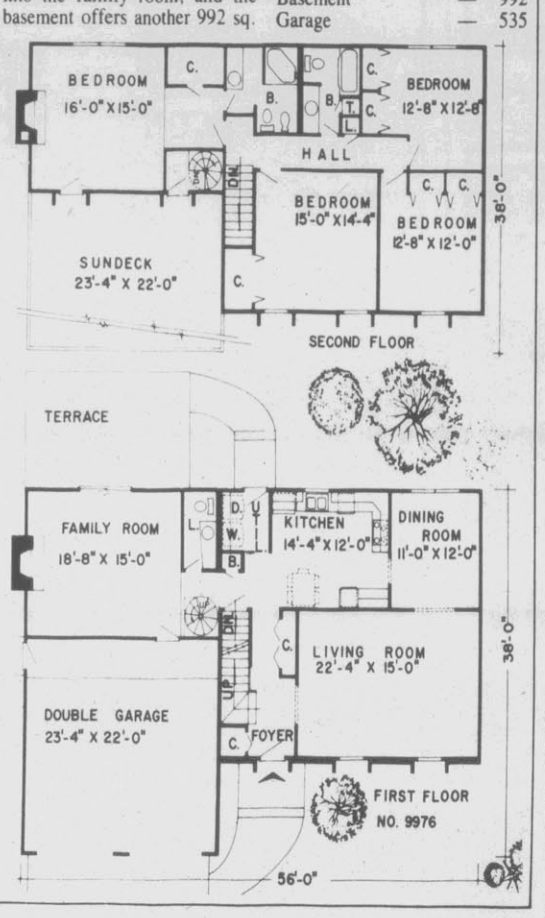

Next to the kitchen, the laundry room specifies an outside entry, to double its use as a mud room. A half bath is included for convenience.

Completing the first level is the family room. A wood-burning fireplace and sliding glass doors to the terrace will encourage use and enjoyment of the room. The family room also displays an attractive circular stairway that leads up the sun deck.

Bedrooms, baths, and closets fill the second floor. An exercise in luxury, the master bedroom exhibits wood-burning fireplace as well as private bath and dressing area. Bordered by the 23-ft. sun deck, the master bedroom is furnished with a door that shows direct access. Another full bath with towel closet and three sizable bedrooms complete the level.

Double garage features entry into the family room, and the basement offers another 992 sq. ft. of space.

Old-Style Housing For New Stereos Is In Reach

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

High-fidelity components are a popular choice among music lovers. But while the latest in up-to-date styling is highly desirable in components, streamlined modernism is not necessarily the choice of everyone when it comes to a shelving system for storing the high-fidelity components.

Lovers of traditional decor may be delighted to learn that an armoire, an old-fashioned dry sink, a sideboard or a large, old-style television cabinet can be converted into a stereo cabinet by a moderately experienced home woodworker.

However, don't use a piece that has value as an antique, says one woodworking teacher, since conversion will destroy its antique value.

Before dismembering a cabinet that may not be suitable, measure both the cabinet and the components to be sure there is enough room for all the pieces. Using these measurements, you can determine how much shelving is necessary.

If the old finish is to be removed, it should be done before any reconstruction is attempted, either at home or by one of the many stripping services found in most parts of the country.

The next step is to remove the back of the cabinet — if possible. This will make it considerably easier to install shelves on which the various components will rest. If the back cannot be removed, it is more difficult, but still possible to use the piece, according to a woodworking expert.

Next, install three-quarter-inch, square cleats at the sides of the cabinet. The shelves will rest on the cleats. If you want to cover the receiver-amplifier so that only the dial is visible for a custom-made look, a made-to-measure facing must be carefully cut out, using a jig saw. Cut the facing a trifle oversize and then trim it to fit. Then, apply round quarter-inch or square half-inch moulding around the opening, making sure to mitre the corners of the moulding for a neat appearance.

A slide-out shelf to hold the turntable can be constructed by mounting the shelf on heavy-duty, ballbearing drawer slides which support from 50 to 75 pounds of weight.

When measuring components, be sure to include in the measurement the depth of the protruding component knobs. It is also important to allow room in the back for ventilation, especially if any of the components contain tubes.

Transistorized equipment does not need as much air room at the back since the heat build-up is not so great. It is always a good idea not to nail the furniture piece's back on. That way, the components can be reached easily for repairs.

Among advantages of placing components in a traditional piece of furniture made over to accommodate them is that the recycled furniture can provide a decorative lift, particularly in a room decorated in traditional or eclectic style.

In a modern interior, too, the traditional piece can provide a decorative plus as a conversation piece. Furthermore, converting an unused piece can be less expensive than buying a comparable built-to-order cabinet.

The non-woodworking individual who employs a cabinetmaker to do the conversion may find that redoing an old piece is less expensive than if the cabinetmaker had to start from scratch.

Besides the family attic, good places to find suitable cabinets include garage and tag sales, second-hand furniture outlets and junk stores and thrift shops.

Here's the Answer

Q. — My next project is to convert a regular clothes closet into a cedar closet. I have a pretty good idea of how to go about the conversion, but I am somewhat fuzzy about how to handle the corners. Can you help me?

A. — Cedar molding is available for corner treatments. It can be omitted, however, if extra care is taken to measure pieces to assure snug-fitting corners. Protruding pieces at outside corners can be sawed off evenly after nailing. Outside joints do not require mitering. Cedar works easily enough to permit you to form smooth, neat corners by sanding the edges. Remember that cedar should be left in its natural state so that its fragrance can ward off moths. Application of varnish, shellac, lacquer or other finishing materials would seal in that fragrance. Wipe the cedar occasionally to remove dust. Sand the wood lightly every few years to reopen any closed wood pores. Incidentally, leftover pieces of cedar can be used to line dresser drawers or storage boxes so that these units, too, will be moth-repellent.

(For more information on finishing, including bleaching, staining, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishig in the Home," available by sending 50 cents PLUS a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, N. Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

GARDEN CLINIC

N.C. State Univ. Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. Is it true that ashes from a woodstove or fireplace can be used as a liming material? (H.W., Kinston)

A. Yes. Ashes will help to reduce soil acidity as well as provide potash. Scatter evenly over your lawn or garden at the rate of 4 to 8 pounds per 1,000 square feet. You can apply the same amount again next year. (Jack Baird, extension soil specialist)

Q. I have some English boxwoods that are about 40 years old and about five feet high and five feet wide. Can I prune them back drastically — to about one and one-half feet? If so, when is the best time to do it? (J.Y., Newton)

A. Yes, but prune now before the new growth begins this spring. It will be several years before your boxwoods have dense foliage again. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. Will lawn clippings provide grass with any nutrients if they are left in place rather than removed from the lawn? (B.G., Rockingham)

A. Yes, according to new research at the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station. Researchers found that homeowners may reduce the use of fertilizer if they leave grass clippings on their lawn instead of raking them. The clippings returned more than 50 percent of the nitrogen that was added as fertilizer. Also nitrogen from the clippings began to appear in new growth within a week of cutting. Research workers at Texas A&M University have obtained the same results with the exception of zoysiagrass, which decays very slowly. (Carl Blake, extension agronomist)

Q. Someone told me egg shells are good for the garden. I put some around my tomatoes last year and I had large tomatoes, but they did not bear long. (Mrs. M.R., Hickory)

A. Egg shells contain mostly calcium and in time the shells will decay and release the calcium to the soil. Calcium is a necessary plant nutrient, which is one reason lime is applied to the soil. However, I doubt if the shells had a significant effect on your tomatoes last year. Weather was probably the greatest influence on the size of your tomatoes and the length of the harvest. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. — Within a few weeks I will be cutting wooden discs from a hardwood tree that fell on our property during a storm. I know how to do the cutting, but I am not sure how to place the discs in the soil to make a patio floor. What is your advice?

A. — First coat the discs with a wood preservative. While the preservative can be brushed in, it is better to soak the discs in it. Wherever you are placing the discs, prepare a gravel pit or grit bed at least 4 inches deep for drainage. The discs won't slip or ride if you cover the entire patio floor surface with sand, then hose it down gently. The sand will settle in the gravel or grit in the spaces between the discs. Sprinkle some dry portland cement powder over the sand and dampen it. When it hardens, the discs will be snugly in place.

Q. — I read in your column some time ago about bleaching wood after taking off the old finish. It is a procedure I expect to undertake soon, but now I have heard that wood can be made lighter without bleaching. Can you tell me how this is done?

A. — It is done with products that sometimes are referred to as blond sealers. They work best on naturally-light woods, such as birch and maple. While pigmented the same as paint, they allow the natural grain of the wood to show through. The trick in using these items is not to apply too much, otherwise you will get a painted effect. While some good results can be obtained if the directions on the container are followed carefully, the finishing material is not a true bleach.

Begin Now On Firewood

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — Spring is the time to begin building a supply of firewood for next winter, according to engineer Don Newton of the Reynolds Tobacco energy conservation task force who offers the following tips for wood-gathering:

—Start collecting in the spring. Even if the tree is green when cut, it will be fully seasoned by next winter. And also accessible are trees which fell during the winter.

—Gather primarily hardwoods. Oak, hickory, beech, birch and maple all have more BTUs than similar quantities of softwood such as pine. For example, a cord of pine yields only two-thirds the energy of a cord of mixed hardwoods.

—Seek free sources of raw wood, like homebuilders who are clearing land, national and state forest services and homeowners with storm-damaged trees.

—A tree which falls after blossoming should be left on the ground with its leaves for two weeks. The leaves help draw off moisture.

—Remember: a cord of hardwood burned in an airtight stove can replace up to 115 gallons of fuel oil under optimum conditions.

If I were young and newly married, I would find it as difficult to decide whether to buy a house these days as do all couples.

Interest rates and housing costs are astronomical. A good reason, it would appear, to hold off on what is likely to be the biggest purchase of your life. But it isn't that simple. Read what I wrote in this column on Feb. 18, 1960:

"Should you buy a house now during a period when housing construction costs are going up, interest rates on mortgage loans are rising, and money generally is hard to get?

"The answer is yes, if you can afford it.

"Costs are not going to get any lower in the foreseeable future and neither are interest rates. Meanwhile, the prices of houses are likely to go even higher. Interest rates are not likely to come down.

"Barring a recession (and it would have to be a deep one) house prices will appreciate. As things stand now, a house is an inflation hedge."

That advice, given 20 years ago, is as good today as it was then. Anybody who bought a house in 1960 and still owns it has seen its value increase greatly, with a figurative handful of exceptions due to deteriorating neighborhoods. This, despite the aging of the structure and the use of the house all these years.

What the analysis, then and now, boils down to is that the time to buy a house is when you can afford it without waiting until conditions supposedly are ideal. The trouble is that a better housing market always seems a bit out of reach, allowing for different interpretations of what a better housing market really is.

A prospective buying family that plays the waiting game watches in dismay as that house they had their eyes on increases in value 10 percent or more every year. As it rises in cost, along with others once in their price range, they continue to hope that next month, maybe next year, the housing market will get "better" from their standpoint. Meanwhile, their rent or other form of housing costs also goes up.

We are in an age when some lending institutions cannot afford to lend — which makes mortgage loans more difficult to obtain — and when homeowners often cannot afford to borrow. It is true that, occasionally, waiting may pay off one way or another. Perhaps this is one of those occasions. But if the odds are 20-to-1 that waiting will cost you money, it is good sense to be on the side of action now. But it all comes back to that 1960 advice. The time to buy a house is when you can afford it — without trying to outguess the future. Assuming, of course, that you are able to obtain a mortgage, which you can do if you can afford it.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Renewed Public Interest In Planetarium Shows

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The sun always shines at the Morehead Planetarium on the University of North Carolina campus. So do the moon, stars and planets.

The $3 million planetarium, the only one of its kind on a university campus, keeps the heavenly bodies glowing seven days a week on its artificial starscape. It attracts thousands of visitors each year, many of them school children who come in groups to learn more about the solar system.

American astronauts from the Mercury through Skylab programs spent hundreds of hours at the planetarium learnig to navigate to the moon.

The planetarium, which celebrated its 30th birthday last year, offers programs from "The Star of Bethlehem" during the Christmas season to rock concerts accompanied by laser-light shows. From the beginning, the planetarium has depended on showmanship to get its message across, according to Anthony Jenzano, director of the planetarium for the past 31 years.

"First you must get the people in, then present science education material in a palatable way," Jenzano said. "We try to present interesting, educational material in an entertaining fashion."

Jenzano said a new public fascination with astronomy and star-gazing has led to renewed interest in the planetarium's programs.

"Sometimes I'll be eating supper and somebody who saw something in the sky will call, wanting to know if it's anything unusual," said Jenzano, who has headed the planetarium for 31 years. "Newspapers call a lot, too, asking about coming astronomical events. Most of the time when somebody sees something, it's a perfectly normal event.

"Like this past Tuesday night, the moon was very bright just before dark," he said during an interview last week. "Someone called and said there was a bright spot at one of the moon. Well, I told her it was nothing unusual, it was just caused by earth shine."

The planetarium was the project of millionaire industrialist John Motley Morehead, grandson of a North Carolina governor, who wanted to give his alma mater a unique gift.

Jenzano said when the planetarium was built, a lot of faculty at the university felt the money should have gone for something else.

"Nobody knew what a planetarium was in those days," he said.

Jenzano said he was hired as head of the planetarium in 1949 because he was the only American who knew how to put together the German-made Zeiss projector.

In 1968, the original Zeiss was replaced by an improved model, 14 feet long and weighing two tons. The $1.5 million, dumbbell-shaped instrument can project moving light patterns on the darkened 43-foot domed ceiling that duplicate star patd terns.

Separate projectors add the motions of planets, the sun and the moon and any number of realistic special effects that include eclipses, sunsets, Martian horizons and animated charts.

Jenzano said the planetarium is required to support itself through ticket receipts, a feat he said has been become more difficult with the rising inflation rate.

"Over the past five years, we have suffered a setback," he said. "But it's not unique here. It has happened to institutions of this type everywhere.

"For the first 23 years, we managed to support ourselves on ticket sales," he said. "But during 1972 and 1973, it really put an economic strain on us. Two years ago, we had to take austerity measures. We've turned it around and last year, we broke even. But it's a constant struggle since we don't get any other funds."

The Morehead Building houses what Jenzano says is the only working Copernican orrery — a walk-through room that displays a moving black-lighted model of the solar system on the ceiling. By punching a button, visitors can activate the system, which is accompanied by a tape recording explaining the solar system and describing each planet.

But the planetarium is more than a scientific theme park. Much of the astronauts' training was done at the planetarium, with many of the programs devised by Jenzano and his staff.

It was at the planetarium that engineers learned the minimum number of stars an astronaut would need to see to nagivate in space. Another session taught astronauts how to use stars to judge distances for docking.

"Neil Armstrong had 125 hours of training in the planetarium when he landed on the moon," Jenzano said.

Jenzano said the university's astronomy classes are taught in the planetarium, where students use the observatory and telescopes. The planetarium also offers a public star-gazing session every Friday night to anyone who wants to join it.

"There just seems to be a burst of interest in this kind of thing," Jenzano said. "Of course, interest in the zodiac and astrology keeps us busy, and even though it's not the same as astronomy, they do go together. Both involve the stars, and that involves us."

Besides the planetarium, the four-story building houses the Morehead Foundation headquarters; the North Gallery, where a different art exhibit is displayed each month; the Genevieve B. Morehead Memorial Rotunda, where masterpieces donated by Morehead are displayed; the State Dining Room, where presidents and kings have dined and where most formal university functions are held; and the faculty lounge.

Jenzano said after the planetarium was built, Morehead tried to think of one final touch he could give the structure. At Jenzano's suggestion, Morehead added a formal rose garden that blooms in the shadow of the planetarium's giant sundial.

The planetarium schedules programs throughout the year, with the Christmas and Easter shows bringing in the largest crowds.

"About 25 percent of our money comes in during March, April and May," he said. "But our other programs are just as good. We strive to keep all of our shows the best we can make them.

"As far as the planetarium goes, our program here is the best in the country. And we plan to keep it that way."

Pavement Serves As Artist's Canvas

By LILLIAN SWANSON
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Robert Guillemin smudged the orange chalk on the sidewalk until it blended smoothly with the blues and greens. "It's like rubbing talcum powder on a baby," the artist said. "This is a wonderful surface, one of the best I've seen."

Guillemin, better known as Sidewalk Sam, was chalking a copy of Edgar Degas' painting, "Henri Rouart," on Stanwix Street here. The original oil hangs in the Scaife Gallery of Pittsburgh's Museum of Art.

"It'll rain," warned a nurse, bundled up against freezing temperatures and hurrying past the half-finished portrait.

The artist laughed and agreed with the sidewalk superintendent. But he said he wasn't concerned that a hard day's work would dissolve into streams of color with the next rain or snow.

"The fact that it doesn't last doesn't bother me," he said. "I have fond memories of the experience of working on it."

Guillemin is a serious artist striving to attract more people to art and to holding comfortable conversations with artists. One way to get them to drop their guard, he says, is to take art out of museums and into the streets.

"I'm doing art that is intended only to be friendly. So much art is done in solitude. There is no communication. Out here it communicates," he said.

Guillemin began his outdoor art work in Europe and transplanted the experiment to Boston, where he now lives, and to other American cities. He says he usually draws big summertime crowds to see his work and listen to off-the-cuff remarks about his craft.

Is it time for you to graduate from the photo album and display your pictures? Do you need some way to show your photos to friends other than bringing out the picture albums to pore through?

Your better photos should be displayed for all to enjoy, reserving the album for family browsing. And it needn't be expensive.

Why not use your entrance foyer, a wall in the den or game room as your gallery? For maximum impact, pick a wall that's white or neutral color that will not distract from your pictures.

You may want to use 8x10 or larger prints but they don't have to be large. Any size will do. Polaroid prints or postcard prints can also be effective.

If you go the frame route, a dozen clear plastic frames from the local dime store should set you back no more than $25. If all your pictures are the same size and format, either vertical or horizontal, line them up side by side like the buttons on a push button phone — three across and four deep. Or, make a horizontal arrangement of four across and three deep.

If they are of varying sizes and formats, both horizontal and vertical, try to form some sort of shape pleasing to the eye, again with the pictures as close together as possible. A word of warning: try not to hang your pictures opposite a window or light source where reflection from the glass or plastic will interfere. If you must, use non-reflective glass — but it will be more expensive and will also cut down on the overall brightness of the picture.

Either black and white or color photos can easily be inserted into these frames. Change them periodically.

If you're handy, you don't need frames. Cut or have particle board cut to size to take a borderless print. Mount the print to the board, sand the edges and paint the edges black. For a more startling effect, glue half-or one-inch blocks to the back of the board so that it projects out from the wall.

FOR TIGHT SPOTS—One way to display a lot of photos in a small amount of space is the display board, the type used to show wallpaper and posters in stores.

A friend of mine sends out his Christmas cards each year in the form of a wooden block three inches wide by six inches long by two inches deep with the edges and back painted black, one of his photos mounted to the front and a small hole drilled in the back with which to hang it. His name is also embossed on the back. Over the years he's developed his own little display of photos at my apartment and I look forward to each year's addition.

Another friend is building what I think will someday be a magnificent collection of photos of his baby. He's circled the first Sunday of each month on his kitchen calendar and somehow manages to take a new picture of his baby on each of those days.

He uses a Polaroid One Step. The prints are slipped between two 42-inch-wide plastic brackets mounted to the wall which will hold 12 pictures covering the first year. He plans to add another bracket under this for the second year, another for the third and so on. It will make an excellent visual display to which any visitor could not help but be attracted.

For larger photos there are similar brackets made of plastic, wood and metal in varying lengths so that you can hang either one or many photos simply by sliding them into the slots provided top and bottom. For larger photos be sure to mount the photo on heavy cardboard or particle board so that they don't bend and fall out, but make sure the groove is large enough so the picture can be easily inserted and removed.

If you have access to duplicate transparencies (I wouldn't destroy the original) you can create a beautiful effect by making what appears to be a stained glass window from slides. Use a piece of diffusing plastic (it's frosted) as a backing. Mount the slides so that they are butted together.

By using various-sized transparencies and taking advantage of the various colors in them you can create a visual effect of a window. Use cut-up strips of black film to represent the lead. Imagine seeing what appears to be one thing at a distance and then discovering it is made up of photographs on close inspection! Use a piece of clear acetate to cover your project and mount it in a window.

Wall-size murals can also be effective and cost little more than expensive wallpaper. One of the most dramatic uses of a mural I've ever seen took some tedious work but was really dramatic. The mural was cut into strips and glued to the slats of a venetian blind. It was only visible when the blinds were closed.

If you are really limited for space, you might consider the pivoting display boards used to merchandise wall coverings and posters in most stores. They come in both free-standing and wall-mounted forms, in various sizes containing anywhere from seven to 25 panels which would give you 14 to 50 display boards. You'll find these by checking under display in your telephone-book yellow pages.

Inventors Dream Of Producing A Gas-Saving Vehicle Or Gadgets

By DAN LOHWASSER
United Press International

Louisiana businessman Willie Klump dreams of the day when America's motorists will drive hundreds of thousands of miles without changing their motor oil because they bought Klump-manufactured oil filters stuffed with toilet paper.

In San Jose, Calif., Bill Posey envisions freeways jammed with people riding his motorized skateboards at speeds up to 35 miles an hour, while in Southern Pines, N.C., Peter Greenspan sees compressed air powered cars on the horizon.

In a more conventional vein in New York City, scores of Stuart Pivar's gasoline-powered Microcars are already in use as he begins production of an electric-powered model.

They are among thousands of inventors across the country who have answered the call in the battle against rising gasoline prices and dwindling oil supplies. Annually they submit tens of thousands of ideas to government and private industry officials, and occasionally, as in Pivar's case, some of their inventions find their way to the production line.

"The private inventor is probably the best source of ideas available," said Dave Mello, a project engineer in the Department of Energy's energy-related inventions program, headquartered in Washington.

In the six years the program has been in existence, Mello said, the Energy Department has received 60,000 proposals from small inventors that range from the totally incompetent to the technically feasible.

"About half of them are good enough to warrant further evaluation," Mello said. The Energy Department then submits the ideas to the U.S. Bureau of Standards for evaluation.

Mello said "the winners" are then sent back to the Department of Energy to be considered for a federal grant. So far, the bureau of standards has recommended 128 ideas to the Energy Department for grant consideration.

Among those in the field of transportation that have been pursued are advanced carburetors, a new spark ignition system, and what Mello called an "optimizer" to keep all of an automobile's systems running as efficiently as possible.

"Our goal is to give this little guy a chance at least to compete effectively," said enterprise alone. What are needed are specialists in marketing, specialists in finance, and other areas. All of those go into making a successful product."

The U.S. Patent Office in Arlington, Va., also speeds up action on energy and environmentally related inventions.

Don Stocking, of the patent office's Heat and Power Engineering Examining Group, said there has been a boom in recent years in solar-related patent requests, while patent requests in other energy-related fields have remained stable.

Private corporations also offer another avenue for the private inventor to get his idea into production.

At the General Motors Technical Center at Warren, Mich., the new devices section receives about 4,000 proposals each year from private individuals.

"Most of them are from your next door neighbor or mine, saying why don't you do something rather than saying how," said Jerry Rumbold, assistant director of the new devices section. "Very, very few of these are way off the deep end, just enough to keep us light hearted."

John Dobb, director of the new devices section, said that in 1978, General Motors received 3,800 proposals from inventors.

"We purchased the rights to only two of them to investigate further and pursue, and in both cases they related to engine design features or power train features relating to fuel economy," said Dobb.

"We're seeing an awful lot of suggestions on fuel economy, emission control, that type of thing," said Rumbold. "The suggestions seem to follow the media, what the media is concerned about."

Dobb said there are a few basic reasons why suggestions are turned down, ranging from being technically infeasible to costing too much.

"For example, something might solve one problem while creating others," said Dobb. "An idea might improve fuel economy, but increase emissions or result in poor drivability."

Among the more successful of the new breed of inventors is Pivar. He says his American Microcar Corp. of Farmingdale, N.Y., has already sold about 1,000 Microcars powered by a moped engine. They are enter with single cylinder, 1½ horsepower engines. They get up to 75 miles per gallon.

A Manhattan resident, Pivar said he designed his Microcar to meet his own needs in the city. His electric model, which sells for under $2,000 has a 35-mile range, weighs about 300 pounds, seats two, operates up to 20 miles per hour, is licensed in New York under moped regulations and operates on two batteries similar to automobile batteries.

"You just plug it in any outlet when you roll in the driveway and it recharges overnight."

As an energy saver, Pivar says, "It costs a quarter of a cent a mile to run."

Pivar believes the electric model, to be used solely for short suburban and city trips, will become known as "the first practical, low-priced electric car." He cites a Department of Transportation study indicating 62 percent of gasoline used is for trips of under five miles.

A new company known as the Transportation Research Center of East Liberty, Ohio recently developed a fuel injection system the firm said could significantly improve gas mileage for existing cars for about $100. But the device did not fare well with the Environmental Protection Agency's emissions standards.

In similar vein, an attempt at developing a high-mileage car ran into problems with the EPA. Ralph Moody of Charlotte, N.C., and Mike Shetley of Gastonia, N.C., drove their diesel-powered car to Washington, where they told congressmen the car got 84 miles per gallon. A prototype built by Shetley failed EPA emissions tests and was rated at 54 miles per gallon on the highway, 32 in the city.

Both Dobb and Rumbold said they believe the role of the private inventor in the automotive industry may be declining.

"It is becoming increasingly difficult for the unattached inventor to make a meaningful contribution because the state of the art is moving so fast," said Rumbold. "Take electronics for instance. It isn't something that can be tinkered with in the basement."

But, Rumbold also noted the private inventor developed the automatic transmission and the diesel engine.

There are others who attempt to market their inventions on

George Russell of Raleigh, N.C., recently began marketing a booklet entitled "The Gas Guzzler to Gas Sipper Manual," a step-by-step guide to converting a V-8 engine to run on four cylinders.

In California, Posey has formed Motoboard International to sell his motorized skateboards, while Klump sells his toilet-paper-stuffed oil filters for $92.50.

In Rockville Centre, N.Y., Aquabug International has converted it's little outboard motor for boats into an 11-pound, bolt-on engine for bicycles which it sells for $175 and says gets 300 miles to the gallon.

College Eyed By Most Girls

NEW YORK (UPI) — Nearly 75 percent of the teen-aged girls questioned in a recent survey said they planned to attend college to prepare for a high paying job.

The overwhelming majority said they intended to go for a specific major, not a more general liberal arts degrees.

The study, which was made before the crisis in Afghanistan, also found over half of America's teen girls would probably or definitely not be willing to serve in the armed forces if the United States went to war. If the nation became involved in a war in which the girls did not believe, 42 percent said they would become conscientious objectors and 16 percent said they would consider renouncing their citizenship and moving.

Only one-third said they would serve the U.S. in any capacity if they did not believe in such a war.

'Understanding' Said Dangerous

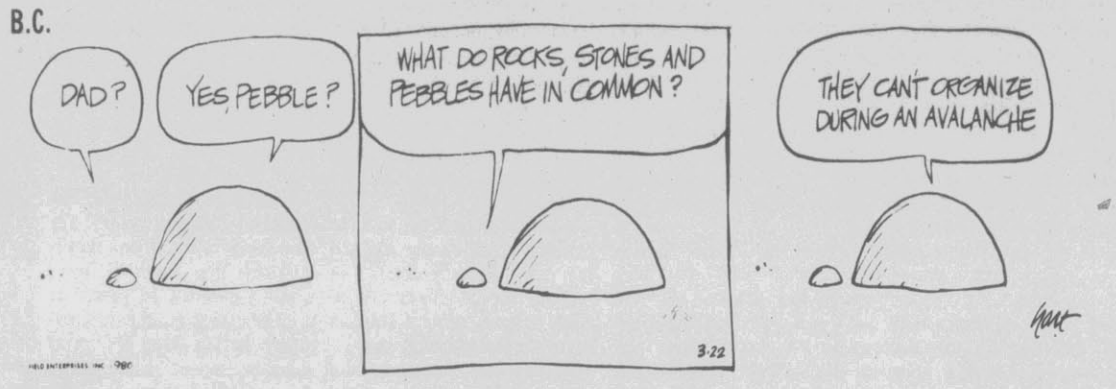

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — A top officer of the World Council of Churches says that one of the most dangerous of sins is belief by humans that they understand God.

Anglican Archbishop Edward W. Scott of Tornto, Canada, moderator of the council's central committee, told a national workshop on Christian unity that the churches are divided mostly because Christians try to make God into their own

Big Changes In America

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Newsfeatures Writer

SUITLAND, Md. (AP) — A psychiatrist in the Midwest sent the Census Bureau five single-spaced pages of questions on snoring. A medical scientist thought the bureau should ask whether people dream, and if so, what.

Civil defense officials wanted to know how many houses have basements,a gay rights group was interested in sexual preferences, and pet food manufacturers wanted the dogs and cats counted.

When it had winnowed out these and 800 other suggestions for the 1980 census, the bureau ended up with 19 questions for everyone to answer and another 46 for one-fifth of the population.

Even before the expected 3.3 billion answers collected on census day April 1 begin flowing through the bureau's computers here, the questions themselves suggest the myriad changes that swept over American life in the '70s.

Foremost, perhaps, is that the census questionnaire no longer asks for the "head of the household."

Over the decade, the number of women leaving the home for the workplace rose steadily. In March 1979, when the bureau conducted a regular survey, it found that the proportion of women at work had reached 50 percent. For married women, it was just under 49 percent.

So in nearly half of American families, the once predetermined decisions on who brings home the bacon and who cooks it were up for grabs.

To Vincent Barabba, the director of the Census Bureau, the most interesting trend the census will delineate is this new role of women. "That is so fundamental a change," he says. "The ripple effect is tremendous."

During the '70s, for example, the rate at which women were bearing children fell below the level needed to replace the population and reached a low of 1,768 children per woman, the lowest it has ever been, even in war or depression.

Thirty-three million babies were born in the '70s, compared with more than 40 million in the '60s. But because of the sheer number of women at child-bearing age, Barabba says a 21 percent increase in preschoolers by 1990 isn't unlikely.

"I don't know of a city that's not facing the dilemma of what are we going to do with all thse school buildings," Barabba says. "Some of them haven't taken a look at what's coming up. The census is going to be an eye-opener to some of those people about whether it was a good idea to tear those buildings down. In some communities that's going to look like a pretty bad decision."

Another change: close to two million unrelated men and women are living together, twice the number in 1970. So the census questionnaire has created a new relationship designation for the second person in a household: "partner, roommate."

The growing number of people living alone means more households to count. The census will cost $4 for each person counted this year, four times the 1970 cost, 25 cents of that due to the increase in households.

The census is expected to show that one of every four households is made up of a person living alone or with non-relatives.

On the 1980 questionnaire, the possible responses on race have been increased from nine to 15, although the word "race" itself doesn't appear.

A specific response of "Vietnamese" has been added this year. And everyone will be asked whether he or she is of Spanish origin, a question that appeared on only 15 percent of the forms in 1970.

Other changes suggested by the questions:

— A person can mark up to eight years of college this time. In 1970, the most that could be indicated were six or more.

— The question on the value of the house has 24 possible answers with the highest being $200,000 or more. In 1970, only 11 responses, up to $50,000 or more, were available.

— To the possible types of structures a person lives in were added: boat, van or tent.

— New questions ask how long it takes to get to work and whether the worker uses a car pool. Gone are questions on whether the home has a TV set or washing machine. "Virtually everyone has one," a census official says.

The census will provide another chapter in the continuing saga of the postwar baby boom, people who are now crowding the housing and job markets.

"This group is now going into the corporate world, and there are too many of them relative to the needs of the corporate world," Barabba said. "You've got to ask yourself: how are they going to take it?

"And you've got women coming into the labor force in ever increasing numbers. They're going to be demanding equality, and corporate managers aren't used to that either."

The Census Bureau expects to count 222 million people this year, up about 9 percent from the 204 million in 1970. The only smaller increase in the 19 censuses since 1790 was registered in the Depression decade, the 1930s.

In the '70s, for the first time in history, the metropolitan areas grew less rapidly than non-metropolitan areas.

A loss of population leads to a lower tax base, which contributes to general financial crises of the type that afflicted New York, then Cleveland, then Chicago.

So politicians in metropolitan areas have a keen interest in the census this year. Some have complained that the swelling numbers of Hispanics won't be fully counted because Spanish questionnaires are not more readily available.

And they wonder if the questionnaires are not so complicated that they will dissuade people from answering and if the questions themselves won't provoke people's natural impulse for privacy.

That's an old complaint. The first census in 1790 asked only six questions, but by the mid-19th century there were more census questions seeking more information.

It prompted a Saturday Evening Post cartoonist in 1860 to portray a census taker standing before a startled family and declaring:

"I jist want to know how many of yez is deaf, dumb, blind, insane, and idiotic — likewise how many convicts there is in the family — what all your ages are, especially the old woman and the young ladies — and how many dollars the old gentleman is worth."

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Bugged by Buzzing in the Ears

I know that my problem doesn't compare with cancer, tuberculosis or heart disease. But anybody who has ringing in the ears and noise in the head will understand how desperate I am for some relief. I would go anywhere in the world if any new kind of treatment is in progress. I would even subject myself as a human guinea pig, with the hope of finding some relief. — Mr. E.O., Mass.

Dear Mr. O.:

Tinnitus, or noise in the ears and head, is a common complaint. Doctors, particularly specialists in ear conditions, realize the intensity of a patient's distress. Although they are often baffled by it, they arduously try to establish a cause and institute some form of treatment.

A study at the National Institutes of Health estimated that millions of adults experience some form of tinnitus or noise in the head. This varies from mild, annoying tinnitus to severe, debilitating tinnitus. In some instances it is possible to localize the reason for tinnitus.

An acute infection of the ears, a blocked Eustachian tube, or an allergy may cause temporary tinnitus. Treatment is often effective in these instances where the actual cause is apparent. In cases of vascular conditions, arteriosclerosis, or high blood pressure, treatment is often more difficult. Smoking is known to produce spasm of the blood vessels and, of course, should be eliminated.

There are now a few methods of treatment which may bring some relief to those burdened by these incessant noises. A new masking device is worn like a hearing aid. It generates a sound at the same frequency as the tinnitus and tends to drown out the ringing in the ears.

Biofeedback is being tried, with only moderate results.

Psychological support does not eradicate the tinnitus, but at least helps some people to learn to live with this disability.

An anesthetic drug, similar to lidocaine, seems to have some effect on the intensity of the tinnitus. Dr. John R. Emmett and his co-workers at the Shea Clinic in Memphis, Tenn., have been studying the use of this drug for the eradication of some forms of tinnitus. This may be the beginning of a whole new chemical and pharmacological approach to the problem of tinnitus.

FASHION EDITION

SUNDAY, APRIL 6, 1980

A kaleidoscope of spring fashions for 1980

A variation on a theme

A SUIT OF CLASSIC APPEAL . . . a quadri-pocketed jacket in cotton herringbone with softly pleated wool skirt and Georgette shirt. Dominic Rompollo has created a unique look, sure to be a hit for spring, 1980.

Spring styles welcome a new decade of fashion

This spring marks the beginning of a new decade in fashion. In the 1980s, as the American designers see it, women will dress knowing that success no longer means sublimating femininity.

The spring, 1980, wardrobe combines, and contrasts, strength and gentility, practicality and fantasy. Styles are demure but dashing, easy as well as flirtatious.

The 1980 woman can now have the most glamorous time in years, full of energy, fun and wit, feeling prettier than ever wearing the new fashions.

For the first time in many years, major changes in the general silhouette of styles have come in the spring.

The new '80s outline is wide-shouldered, but rounded rather than wedge shaped. The width is most often in the sleeves and all fabrics fall softly.

In contrast to this free-flowing softness, designers have used blocks of color to divide the body in new places, often resulting in asymmetrical designs.

Combinations of stripes and dots, dashes and splashes of color are incorporated into tilted hemlines, off-center prints and side-buttoned jackets. Bias cuts and Grecian draping add feminine slants.

A new leg emphasis via shorter skirts, slits and short pants is seen in varying degrees in most collections, with the shorter, fuller skirt the favorite.

Pants come in an array of looks from the shortest rolled-up shorts to the new daytime "Bermudas."

Tight as toreadors, casual as clamdiggers, and baggy and comfy, draped as pantaloons—the new short lengths offer exciting looks.

The strongest new dress trend is the 1980 version of the wide-shouldered, slightly tapered loose chemise.

The long torso dress, with a short full-tiered or flounced skirt, is also a featured attraction. The use of taffeta for short party dresses increases their bouncy charm.

Glamorous yet workable dresses in knits, cottons and linens are featured for day.

Jackets also serve as partners to dresses, skirts and pants, with the newest look being the short cropped bolero.

Sugar-coated coolers, great in sheers, laces, velours and terries, are icy pale colors such as frosted aqua and lilac.

Pastels are strong and deep in fruit or garden flower tones, great mixers with neutrals and brights.

Spring fabrics further support the fabulously feminine look of the season: pure silk, tissue faille, sheer wool crepe, nubby knits and, for evening, lace silk taffeta and voile.

Evening is the time for fantasy and, with the '80s fashions, women can become Grecian princesses, flirty flamenco dancers and Sci-Fi heroines in spaced out jumpsuits.

New spring jewelry . . .

Designs add zest to age-old art

Jewelry—karat gold, sterling silver, gemstones—or fashion jewelry that borrows the look of real jewelry, is the big news for spring, reports Kae E. McCulloch, Fashion Director for the Jewelry Industry Council.

"Jewelry isn't understated or overstated, it's elegantly stated," McCulloch reports, pointing out that the world spotlight on the rising value of precious metals has mushroomed demand for karat gold and sterling silver jewelry.

Gold chains, in every imaginable link design, are still strong in the new season ahead, and the chains are paired with gemstones and pearls, or have stations of gemstones or beads to give them eye appeal.

Pearls are enjoying a rebirth of popularity in new designs. Not like the perfectly matched single strand chokers of the '40s, today's pearls are odd-shaped fresh water pearls in pink or soft silver.

The tiny poppyseed size keshi pearls, the baby seed pearls, and the small rice-size pearls are used in multi-strands for handsome neckline fill-in on new spring apparel.

"The larger baroque pearls lend themselves to artful inspiration, as designers use the basic form of the stone to create a pendant, pin or ring that is uniquely different," McCulloch declares.

Pearls and white coral are paired with onyx and black serpentine for a striking black and white fashion accent to the new season's handsome geometric fabric patterns.

Diamonds, of course, are classic, and are invading the men's jewelry market even more in 1980, as they appear in rings, bracelets and pendants, often to accent a geometric pattern.

The jewelled bracelet look of today's new watches is additionally emphasized as watch cases grow slimmer than ever, and the watchbands take on a bracelet look in rich metal mesh or handsome gold links.

Fashion jewelry mimics precious jewelry, with fake diamonds and rhinestones used so sparingly that they give the appearance of real diamonds in rings and pins.

Look for gobs of bangle bracelets to accent the wrist as rigid bracelets appear in square and oval shapes as well as round in gold, ceramic and agate and jade stone.

BANGLES BIG NEWS—It's all done with a twist of the wrist this spring, says the Jewelry Industry Council. A twist—and an assortment of bangle bracelets in square, oval and round shapes, in shiny gold, burnished gold, enamel and gold, and faceted gold.

Spring fever prescription. . .

Choose easy-to-care-for wardrobe

Spring fever—that rare and uplifting "disease"—is all too easily eliminated from your system if your wardrobe maintenance takes up more time and money than you had planned.

Rather than wasting your play time on personal clothing chores, here are some suggestions that can keep your spring enthusiasm at a high pitch:

- Check the care labels on all items you select for your everyday warm weather wardrobe. Look for machine washable, colorfast, shrink-resistant items that require no ironing.

Asking all this from the majority of your clothing before you purchase will ensure that little will be asked of you after you wear it.

- Compare fiber content labels on similar fashion items and choose the sturdier synthetic blends over natural fibers.

Clothing that wears better looks better in the long run. Besides, the wash-and-wearability of synthetic blends is a boon to busy summer schedules.

- Attend to soil and stains on your washable items quickly and easily, eliminating costly permanent stain damage to your spring garments. Simply pretreat grass, food and cosmetic stains with Spray-'n Wash® laundry soil and stain remover. Just spray the pretreat directly on the stains, wait 60 seconds and launder items normally along with your other clothes.

- For sportswear, choose clothing that is easy to wear for the activity you need it for. Designers are often "creative" at the expense of your comfort and seams—and you know your lifestyle best.

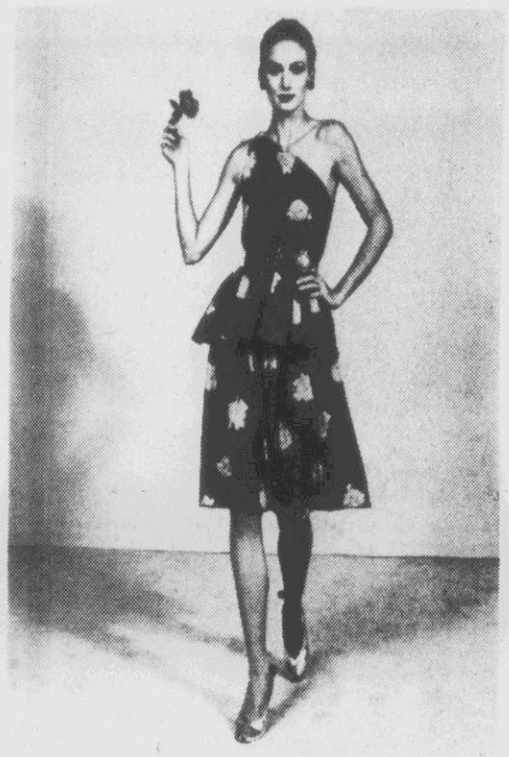

Fashion is fun, however. Assign your fashion flings to those special occasions when you truly want to make a big splash.

Then choose an outfit from one of the newest spring fabrics, be it organza, charmeuse (gently crinkled satin), lightweight leather and suede or banana-colored chamois. Knowing full well that the special attention it will require will be worth all the compliments it will attract.

RUFFLES ADD QUAINT SPRING CHARM

Scarves make way for detachable collars, dickies, ruffles, giant shoulder-to-shoulder bows—some great suit looks.

The crisp lace pocket hanky adds a refined touch. The glittery roller-disco scarf shines at night.

UPDATING A CLASSSIC—Kasper for J.L. Sport takes the one-shouldered dress and gives it the look of today with a peplum and a new tonality—lipstick red and topaz. Of pure silk crepe de chine, it goes from day to evening with ease.

Fabulous American fashion is what Kasper for J.L. Sport is all about. The clothes are designed for the fast American pace—current, comfortable, carefree and crisp.

Fabrics are woven cottons, piques, madras, poplins, pin stripes, seersuckers, silk, linen and hopsacking with sweaters interspersed.

Silhouettes emphasize the new circular skirt and the "baggies," but short pants and dirndls are a part of the overall look as well.

Each group is intended to serve the needs of a different segment of a woman's life.

The "desert romantics"—a wonderful Moroccan-inspired group—will take a woman through a busy spring day at the office. Interspersed with piques and touches of lace, it will also satisfy her weekend needs.

Soft shirred sleeves are frequently used as pin-tucking. It is here Kasper introduces a look he believes in very strongly: the new city suit which emphasizes short pants.

Throughout the J.L. Sport collection certain silhouettes reappear in different fabrications. Jackets are shaped and shorter or bolero in style.

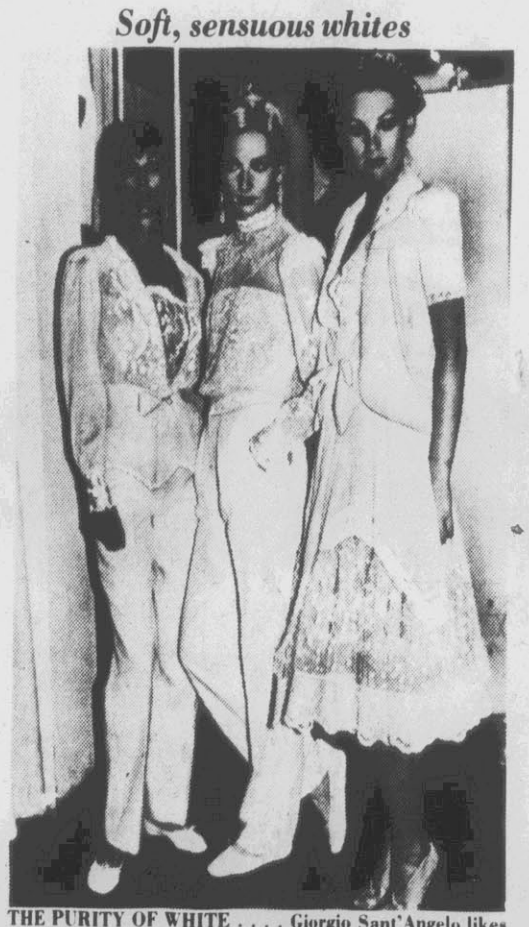

The softened blazer takes on an important role. Skirts are circular or straight and slightly eased. The bias dirndl is also introduced as a major shape.

Blouses are frequently bicolored and cut on the diagonal, and the classic shirt and blouse are given a naive effect with shirring and lace detail.

J.L. Sport for spring—plenty of variety for that 80s customer, her many moods and her increasingly frenetic lifestyle.

Soft, sensuous whites

Soft styling

SOFT, CURLY, LIGHT AND AIRY is how John Dellaria, Fashion Director of Intercoiffure America, sees short hair for spring/summer, 1980. A linear shape is created in the back using a scalloped cutting technique, and a permanent adds body and support.

Individuality tops off the list of new fashion looks for 1980 spring season

The fashion changes seen this spring aren't found just in the length of the hemline or the shape of the silhouette. The changes are big—the whole visual impact is different.

The use of colors and fabrics is bolder and brighter than ever, details are making lots of difference, and geometric patterns are dominating the scene.

But, most importantly, the looks are totally individual—this is perhaps the biggest change of all, and there are seven new designers who are instrumental in bringing it about.

JOAN VASS, winner of the 1979 Prix de Cachet Award sponsored by Prince Matchabelli, is noted for her highly original knitted and crocheted designs, made exclusively by hand. The award was conceived as the first national program to honor designers of one-of-a-kind fashions and is as unique as the Cachet fragrance for which it was named. Pictured here, from left to right, are three masterpieces from her spring collection: a streamlined cotton knit dress with cable stitching, a short linen trouser paired with a handknitted sweater with contrasting stitching, and a paneled paisley cotton skirt coupled with a crocheted sweater with self-tie.

Honored with awards

They are also the winners of the first annual Prix de Cachet award, sponsored by Prince Matchabelli to honor designers of one-of-a-kind fashions.

The award is as unique as the fragrance for which it was named—Cachet, a scent so individual, it's the perfume "no two women can share."

"The Prix de Cachet was conceived as the first national program to recognize the innovation and creativity of many of today's American designers," said David H. Cullen, President of the Prince Matchabelli Division.

"In addition to providing a public showcase for their work, they are also receiving the credit they so well deserve."

Unique approaches

Each award-winning designer has a distinctly different fashion philosophy and an exciting new styling approach.

Their fashions reflect their unique ideas and an extraordinary sense of creativity. And for spring, 1980, all the latest looks are there.

Chicago fashion designer Becky Bisoulis is noted for her fantasy-oriented clothing and unusual combinations of fabrics and textures, to which she often adds a touch of lace.

A baby-suede suit with fitted jacket and skirt, paired with a floral chiffon blouse and matching ascot, highlights her romantic-looking collection for spring.

Innovation in handbags

Fun and colorful

Stewart Richer's somewhat offbeat and often humorous fashion philosophy is usually reflected in his fun, different and colorful clothing designs. A military "flight" suit in a variety of vivid colors and plaid taffeta "baggies" top the "best bet" list for spring.

Marv Graff puts his design talent to work creating unusual collections of hand-woven shawls, jewelry, crocheted bags draped with fur, ostrich plumed fans, vests of gold and hand-loomed sweaters with fur trim.

One of the most outstanding pieces in his spring jewelry collection is a vibrantly colorful body ornament of coiled satin ribbons with matching drop earrings.

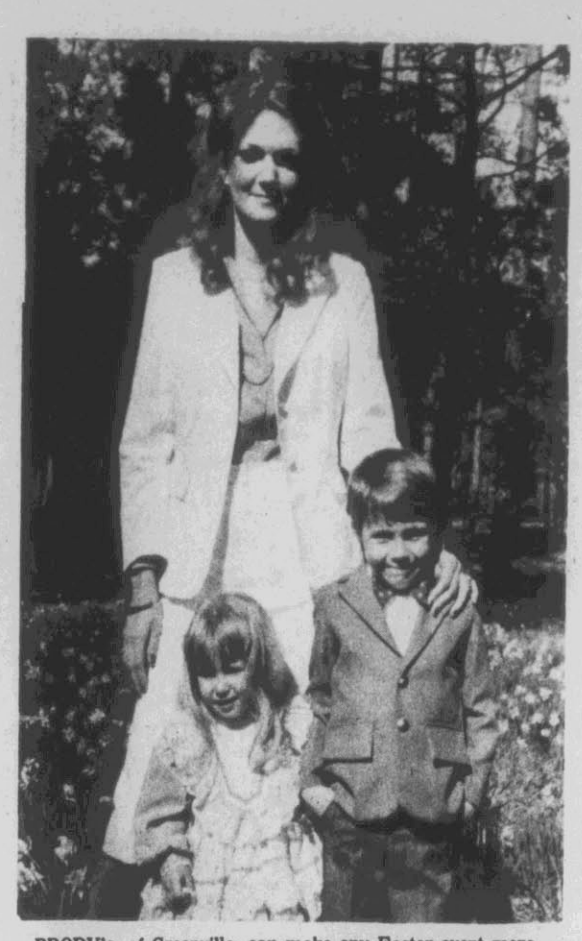

Partners Jenne Maag and Lisa Gaffney are known for the very personal quality of their carefully color-coordinated collection of suits, sportswear and dresses, complete with matching hats and hose.

A favorite feature from their line for spring is a crisp, nautical-looking linen dress with a classic sailor collar and bow.

Fresh new spirit

The exciting changes taking place this spring fashion season are as exciting as the first fresh breath of spring air.

And it's so nice to know there's a fragrance that's in perfect keeping with the new fresh fashion spirit—Cachet. It's the one scent that perfectly expresses your individuality!

BRODY's, of Greenville, can make any Easter event more special. for the Junior Miss, a two-piece linen-look suit from Charles Towne Classics. Our young man wears a three-piece suit from Peter Piper; and the little miss is picture-perfect in her ruffles and lace from Martha's Miniatures.

This spring season, the fashion eye is on the leg

Hemlines are inching up above the knee this spring, as skirt lengths begin to rise above the long lines of past seasons.

Leggy warm-weather looks will also show dressed-up shorts on the avenues and at the disco.

Since limber legs are a fashion asset in 1980, the fitness experts at Scholl recommend that fashion-conscious women get off on the right foot with a spring shape-up routine.

Walking is an easy, healthful way to stride into spring's leg-baring season. To walk your way to fitness, begin with twenty minutes each day of brisk walking.

Walk anywhere—to work, to the tennis courts, to the grocery store. When you feel comfortable with the pace and distance, work gradually to stretch the walking time.

At a brisk pace, the average woman can cover about three miles in an hour and burn off almost 300 calories.

The results? Supple, well-toned legs, improved posture and, quite possibly, weight loss. A fit, well-conditioned body will look better, especially in spring's new leggy looks.

Exercise benefits also accrue to feet and legs that walk in Scholl's Exercise Sandals. The raised toe grip encourages feet to flex and bend, helping to stretch and strengthen muscles in feet, ankles and calves.

The beechwood soles and leather strap in neutral browns, blue or red, make the sandal a fashion classic to pair with knee-skimming skirts, short shorts or jeans.

Fitness is a fashion accessory this spring. And walking—to exercise and to show off casual fashions—will help any woman look and feel her best, from head to toe.

CINCH THE FASHION SCENE

Western belts in spring colors, the cummerbund, fabrics to wrap and twist, and the clean classic suit belt are still with us.

So are the wide "Sci-Fi's" and novelty studded belts.

LONG, LOVELY, AND LEGGY

Hosiery goes open and glamorous with net stockings in new colors. The full-fashioned seamed stocking, the decorated sheer and open-work ribs are dressy looks.

Shiny pastel knee-highs, crocheted knee socks, lacy looks and sporty terries go casual.

Dazzling diamonds delight, decorate—they are forever

Maurice Nichols, regional Vice-President for Bailey Banks & Biddle's Washington D.C. store at Tyson's Corner, believes in elegant diamonds for 1980.

"Jewelry is getting dressier along with clothes and, if one can describe diamonds as getting dressier, then they are this year," says the head of one of America's best-known fine jewelers.

Mr. Nicholas also believes that fine jewelry should be worn anywhere it makes one feel beautiful—in the hair, at the throat, around the wrists, or delicately perched in the hollow of a pretty collarbone.

According to Maurice Nichols, there is also a trend toward colored gemstones in early 1980 partly due to what's happening in fashion and partly due to their price.

Such semi-precious stones as opals, amethysts, garnets and lapis lazuli are being seen more and more as important pieces of jewelry—and pearls, of course, whether freshwater or cultured, are always right and can be worn with anything.

A NIGHTTIME DAZZLER—backswept hair decorated by a delicate diamond butterfly pin with emerald eyes. A double strand of cultured pearls with a diamond clasp is the exquisite accent to a beautiful neckline. Adding to this elegant look are pearl earrings delicately surrounded by diamonds. All of this head-turning jewelry is available at all Bailey Banks & Biddle stores throughout the United States.

YOU'LL MAKE AN UNFORGETTABLE entrance wearing this stunning 18 karat gold and diamond scalloped necklace with a pear-shaped diamond drop pendant. Hair worn off the face adds to the drama of a duet of diamonds worn in the ear—two diamond stud earrings set in 14 karat gold. The dazzling diamond cluster ring set in 18 karat gold beautifully completes this picture. All of the glamourous jewelry shown above is available at all Bailey Banks & Biddle stores throughout the country.

Entering a new arena . . .

McFadden now designs loungewear

Mary McFadden has entered the intimate apparel market for the first time. Mary McFadden–Collection I reflects the McFadden fashion in a new medium—the auras of ancient civilization are recreated in modern day at-home and sleepwear, designed for Boutique Industries.

Within Collection I, Mary boldly blends texture with texture. Her print and color treatments are totally refreshing.

The at-home wear features styles in plum, vanilla, teal and coral.

Backless pajamas, one-shoulder tunics over long skirts, side-wrap hostess pajamas, and long dresses with rope straps all boast unusual pleating designed for Collection I.

The McFadden belt, seemingly endless feet of multi-braided satin ending in knotted satin strands, adds an ancient Byzantine touch to long tunic dresses and hostess gowns.

Color is mixed with color and texture with texture in the sleepwear division.

Three exclusive McFadden colors are echoed throughout the entire collection—lilac, peach and mint worked in satin de lys, a luxurious silk blend, cotton batiste and pleated polyester and rayon.

Mary McFadden–Collection I brings the art of Mary McFadden to the consumer who, before, could only dream of a McFadden in her wardrobe.

Fragrance is a key element in spring's new mood of romance

Romance is definitely in the air. Refreshing and feminine, it's the delightful new spirit that Parfums Rochas, creators of the provocative fragrance, Mystere de Rochas, sees running through fashion for spring, 1980.

With a decided crush on Scarlett O'Hara type heroines, designers have created a plethora of beautiful, totally pretty clothes, tempting us with delicious confections such as starched organdy "portrait" blouses, ruffled voile skirts and real dresses done in fragile, floaty fabrics rife with dressmaker touches, tucks and pleating.

Chain reaction

With such a teasing blend of innocence and sexiness in the offing, the Mystere de Rochas fragrance experts tell us to expect a chain reaction of marvelously feminine gestures.

They predict flutterings of papier mache fans stirring night breezes and conversations punctuated with lace-trimmed handkerchiefs.

Future in fragrance

It seems romance will be a very real influence, even extending to the way we think about fragrance. Parfums Rochas sees every delicious form of one's favorite coming into play.

Even before donning ruffles and laces, Perfumed Soap, Bath Oil and Body Cream set a romantic mood by forming the first, most intimate veil of scent.

Perfume comes next. But one application is never enough to keep your intriguing aura intact. As you move through your day, you'll want to replenish it periodically.

One small delight, a parfum purse flacon, turns this simple gesture into an exercise in flirtation.

When you use it, you'll find there's something incredibly feminine about dabbing a haunting scent at pulse spots, nape and ear lobes with a slender applicator wand that's secreted beneath the golden cap of a rectangular sliver of crystal.

One of those exquisite purse accessories you love to take everywhere, such an elegant little object inspires all sorts of imaginative ways to underline your romantic image.

Enticing touches

Spurred on by fashion's ruffles and flourishes, you'll use the flacon's little wand to draw a tracery of fragrance along the edge of a lace-trimmed camisole . . . the hem of scarf . . . a sash. At night, dab scent on the ornament you'll wear in your hair.

And, as a special touch, have someone use the parfum flacon's little wand to draw a path of fragrance all the way down your spine, to let an aura of romance follow your footsteps.

Making ends meet. . .

Change hairstyle, makeup to acquire that 1980 fashion look

With the spring economy looking bleak, it might be wise to plan on making an appointment to see a financial adviser—your cosmetologist.

If cash is tight this season, a trip to your local salon can help you save money. After all, a new hairstyle and a shortened hemline can make last spring's wardrobe look new.

Try something new

It's much less expensive and can create a more dazzling change in your appearance than a trip to your favorite boutique.

Consult your cosmetologist for ways that will update and fit the new 1980 fashion "look." For example, a different cut or style may be all you want and all that your hairdresser recommends.

However, if you wish to add some excitement without being too daring, don't be afraid to let your cosmetologist experiment with color. A touch of color will accentuate your entire wardrobe.

Another idea your cosmetologist may suggest is getting a perm—one that adds fullness and body. And if your hair is a little difficult to handle, seek the advice of a professional for ways to give your hair the extra control and manageability it needs.

A versatile look

When talking to your "financial adviser," be sure to tell him or her about your lifestyle.

If you're an active mother or career woman—or both—ask for a style which can help speed you through those morning rush hours or be versatile enough for a more glamorous after-five look.

Suit yourself!

Though many cosmetologists are predicting short cuts styled close to the face to balance the knee-length fashions designed for the coming season, remember that your style needs to fit your individual personality. Work with him or her to come up with the right solution.

The end result will be a happier, wealthier and more attractive you.

THIS WOMAN NEEDED A HAIRSTYLE to help make her face appear less square. After consulting with her hairdresser, her hair was cut and styled close to her face. She also learned a couple of makeup tips to accentuate her eyes and cheekbones.

A NEW WAY to wear diamonds to decorate a classic hairstyle is shown by this beautiful necklace with a graduated pendant falling dramatically on the forehead. Matching drop earrings of diamonds and 18 karat gold offer a stunning new look for 1980. An attractive accent for a little black dress is a diamond and gold violin pin. All of this exquisite jewelry is available at Bailey Banks & Biddle stores throughout the country.

UTTERLY FEMININE—the diamond and gold bee pin, perched in the hollow of a pretty collarbone, perfectly complemented by pearl earrings delicately surrounded by diamonds. All of this beautiful jewelry is available at all Bailey Banks & Biddle stores throughout the U.S.

Knees are back for spring as Paris hikes hemlines

By
AMBER BROOKMAN

As in a fine Beef Bourguignon, the French have a knack for adding flavor to their fashion. Color, texture and presentation are all important.

The newly designed Forum Des Halles built by French architects to showcase the work of the fashion elite—Valentino, Givenchy, Chanel, St. Laurent, Chloe and others—provides a dramatic circus tent atmosphere.

Legs a la mode

As always, the French are considered first in creative spotlighting of innovative fashion design.

In years past, economic uncertainties have always had a downward effect on hemlines.

This season, however, the French chose to ignore recessionary rumbles—and everything is coming up legs.

What started as a twinkle in the eyes of a few European designers last spring, became a definite trend this year. Even the most conservative houses showed skirts, knee pants and bloomers above the knee.

Creative styling

The young, trendy Thierry Mugler was one who touted the abbreviated skirt a la 1960s, exhibiting some of the most unusual and creative styling seen in Paris.

At Yves Saint Laurent, Hubert Givenchy and Chanel, the byword, as always, was understated elegance and a disregard for the extreme.

Classic chic

From silk to leather

One of his best offerings was a group of silk dresses with split flared skirts in soft prints in gray and white or taupe colorations.

Claude Montana was one of the few designers still placing a strong emphasis on the widened shoulder which requires longer skirt lengths than most to balance off an otherwise top heavy look. Even so, his styling is still viewed as courageous and innovative.

Fabrications ran the gamut from silk to leather with some emphasis on cottons and shiny synthetics.

It is important to note that this season was a refinement of seasons past and color will play a key role in fashion for spring '80.

Colors for spring

Important colors are soft grays, taupe, lavender, yellow and, of course, the all time favorites—black and white.

Cesarani combines a classic look with a modern flair for spring 1980

SWING INTO SPRING, 1980, with this lilac sand cable sweater set and tangerine seersucker bias swing skirt. Perfect for a leisurely stroll on a cool spring day, this ensemble is crisp, neat and always a classic. From Cesarani.

His fashions complement the women of the '80s—her desire for good health and natural beauty, her life's work, her relationships, her many styles.

For leisure time, classic rugby stripes are fun and comfortable. An example of the All-American sportswear we will always love—sport skirts teamed with rugby sweater sets.

For another casual look, cotton seersuckers, herringbones and knits are incorporated into styles that are livable, easy and feminine.

Earthtone shades of clay, pewter and moss, mix with lilac, marigold and sand color sun tops, sun blazers, the new swing skirt and the jewel neck blazer.

Cesarani has something for every woman in his spring summer showcase for 1980.

Pearls add glamour to day and evening fashion

This year's spring fashions are designed to make the 1980 woman look and feel prettier than ever.

A definite division between day and evening wear has given rise to "occasion dressing."

No matter what time of day, today's woman can put together a look combining color, shape, accessories and jewelry, that perfectly suits the event.

Daytime means selecting glamourous yet workable clothing, whereas evening calls for all-out glamour.

In jewelry, cultured pearls have become a symbol of elegance and sophistication, a glamourous thread that ties together the best in both day and evening wear.

Pearls have become an integral part of every well-planned wardrobe, always conveying a look of regal beauty.

This spring, they work especially well with the varied fashion moods, and have been featured in designer showings by the top names in fashion.

Short pearl chokers, long ropes and multistrand bibs are all equally fashionable and popular.

The new "trendy" look this spring is the short, heavy-ribbed knit dress with wide shoulders and an undefined waist. A strand of pearls adds the perfect touch.

The only requirement when selecting pearls is that they be real, either natural or cultured, to reflect the rich look of the fashions they complement, and to emphasize the cultivated tastes of the women who wear them.

Cultured pearls, real pearls grown in oysters with the aid of man, are available in many types and sizes.

And, their prices are just as variable, enabling anyone who wants to be fashionable the opportunity to choose from silky rice-shaped fresh water cultured pearls, at the low end of the price scale, to large, perfectly round South Sea cultured pearls, valued at over $10,000 each.

The most valuable cultured pearls are those which have good symmetry and deep lustre.

Small-sized cultured pearls can be purchased at moderate prices, and with small-sized pearls just as fashionable as the larger ones, only the size of your budget need determine which ones you will choose.

Spirited styles, Rompollo excitement

For the woman who wants to begin the new decade in splendid beauty, Dominic Rompollo's spring, 1980, line features clothes that are bright, feminine and exciting.

His is a spirited collection, decidedly modern with new proportions and interesting treatments, revealing Rompollo's own conception for spring '80—an awareness of the body.

Asymmetrical treatments such as loose pleats on one side of a skirt, one-sided draping and a one-shouldered dress for evening reveal the lines of the body.

Rompollo's shoulder treatment is unique. The shoulders are slightly padded, to lift the garment rather than emphasize the shoulder.

An entirely new dimension is achieved with contoured shawls that drape beautifully for both day and evening.

One of his most dazzling evening dresses is a free flowing tent shape dress in a gold knitted chiffon material with an all-over display of explosive bursts of glitter and silver passementerie braid circumscribing the neckline and shoulder straps.

Skirt lengths fall to just below the knee, but even here, interest is created with a tulip-shaped slit on layered handkerchief points . . . all created to move and flow.

Wide awake and vibrant describes Rompollo's colors for spring, 1980. Daffodil yellow, turquoise, fuchsia, jade green, lipstick red, beige, black and navy are used.

Darker colors are incorporated into wearable looks that can carry over into another season.

Exciting graphic designs on deluxe fabrics such as silk jacquard, cotton lace and cotton chenille are part of easy-to-wear and high quality Rompollo clothing.

The feminine, non-strict shirtwaist will be a continuing classic. Cleaner, crisper and prettier will be 1980s watch words.

—Pearl Nipon

How to dress for success: some spring fashion secrets

"Dressing to kill" may be the right formula for a glamourous night on the town, but when a woman "dresses to kill" in the office, she may wind up killing her own chances for a successful career.

Image is important

Today, no matter how talented or diligent a woman is, her success depends a great deal on the image she creates, and one of the strongest personal statements she can make is through her clothes.

Clothing conveys silent clues about a person's character, education, background, even financial position, that can break down barriers and catapult careers.

If a woman really wants to get ahead, it's important for her to know where she's going and to dress with career goals in mind.

Building a good, basic wardrobe is the secret to successful dressing. And, with today's fashion freedom, it needn't be difficult to accomplish. With a little planning a woman can dress both fashionably and professionally.

Seasonless fabrics

And, fortunately, more and more designers are discovering the advantages of creating fashions in luxurious, lightweight fabrics such as Qiana, which is elegant yet superbly practical.

Stylish female executives are getting the most for their money by investing in light, seasonless fabrics which can be worn throughout the entire year.

Seasonless fabrics such as silky Qiana also solve the "what to wear" problems a woman faces during transitional months of the year.

In dressing for spring, many women are often tempted to forego certain rules and traditions for the sake of coolness and comfort.

Atmosphere counts

In the business world, however, the "less is more" fashion philosophy is fine when it refers to make-up, jewelry or accessories, but it doesn't translate well to overall dress.

Unless circumstances are extremely unusual (air conditioning breaking down on a 102° F. day) baring too much skin will not look very professional.

If a woman wants to get ahead, she should dress in the clean, uncluttered and understated manner of an executive.

Michael Albert's stylized bi-color chemise dress in honan of Qiana is a look that's highly suitable for most professions and meets all the dressing criteria for today's working woman.

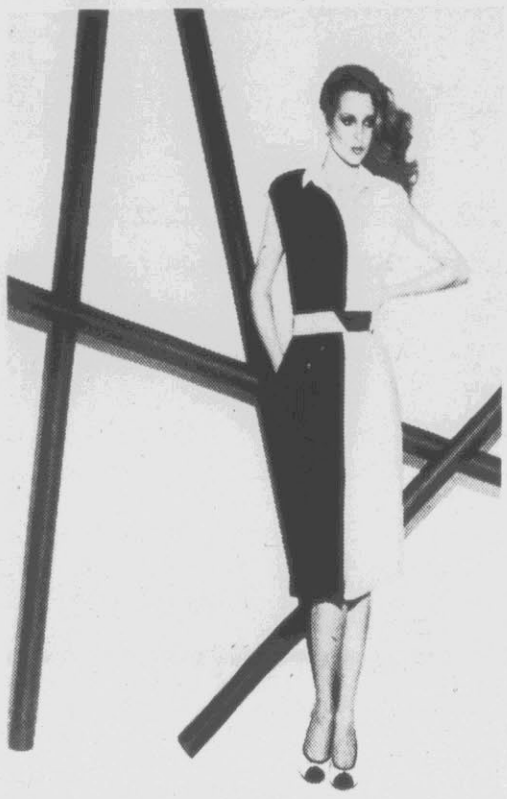

Versatile style

It can be dressed up or toned down to suit a woman's individual needs, and makes an effortless transition from business-like days to romantic evenings on the town.

This highly fashionable look for spring (summer, winter and fall) speaks with unmistakable authority.

No matter what sort of work a woman does, and no matter what the season, the look that's proven to be the most effective nowadays is one that's chic, casual and elegant.

If a woman dresses with this basic style in mind, she's sure to scale the heights to success!

MICHAEL ALBERT'S STYLIZED bi-color chemise dress in honan of Qiana epitomizes the look that's perfect for today's professional woman—chic, casual and elegant, yet it speaks with unmistakable authority.

Subtle drama

THE DRAMA OF SIMPLICITY. Pink silk crepe subtly drapes the body on the bias. The center front seam is gently gathered at the bodice and the elongated sleeves are draped at the wrist. An elegant addition to your spring wardrobe, from Bill Blass.

Charming ensemble

PRETTY AS A PICTURE—"Cotton sheeting washed, dried in the sun and embroidered like the pillow slips at my grandmother's house," gave birth to this charming three piece suit, jacket, camisole and pants, by Bill Atkinson for spring, 1980, which softly combines the old-fashioned and the modern.

Corinne Pulitzer says classics are the "way to go this spring"

There's a new name in town, one that's destined for a long run. It's Lynnwood Classics, from the designer Corinne Pulitzer, whose reputation for contemporary sportswear coupled with superb detailing precedes her.

The first collection of shirts and dresses is geared to the woman of the new decade who wants clean cut good looks combined with both ease and elegance.

"We want our customers to enjoy wearing our clothes and to say this shirt feels good," states Corinne, "so there's just enough construction to achieve that feeling."

Translated, that means a straight collar, French front (a pared-down placket that won't pull if you're a bit busty and offers less bulk under a sweater), stitching on collar and cuffs, extra buttons if you lose one or the cleaner gets careless, and a split back yoke for a better fit on the shoulders.

Shirt scene

Unique to the women's wear field is a group of shirts that will constantly be in stock in stores.

It includes a cotton oxford with either button-down or straight collar and flap and patch pocket with pencil slit in a choice of white, blue, ecru, pink, yellow and an especially appealing shade of helio; a 2-ply broadcloth in a range of five colors and a pair of silk shirts, one with self bow, the other a workshirt with double pleated pocket.

Among the styles that specifically spell spring are a round button-down collar design with double patch and flap pockets in a daisy print or oxford stripe with contrasting white oxford collar, available too in a solid blue denim and a silky cotton batiste with double pockets and short collar in a range of bright tones, such as royal, deep navy, emerald green, red, cognac and purple.

Fabulous features

There's also a white on white diamond dobby, a range of cotton stripes with a single pocket, and an elegantly simple silk in nine colors, including khaki, olive drab and mulberry.

A cotton oxford shirt features soft shirring both front and back in blue, cream, ecru and maize with contrasting white collar and cuffs plus eyelet collar pin; a round-collar style in a choice of floral prints, olive drab or khaki silk with a contrasting cream color cuff that's convertible, and a navy polka dot cotton also with contrasting collar and cuffs.

For warmer weather there's a short sleeve shirt with dropped yoke, double patch and flap pockets in cotton poplin in gumdrop shades of bright red, green and yellow or, if you prefer, the same style is available in a cotton chambray denim.

When the thermometer climbs even higher there's another sleeveless shirt with button down collar in bright oxford stripes with a white oxford collar, plus linen in five colors including royal, red and natural, and a group of madras plaids, stripes and solids in deep tones.

Completed looks

Corinne shows a modified A-line skirt with front slit, top watch and two back pockets (one flap, one welt) in a variety of fabrics, linen in shades to match the sleeveless shirt, oxford solids or stripes, plus poplin and chambray denim.

A full-length shirt turns into a dress with self collar and a belt, double flap and patch pockets and looks particularly snappy in khaki poplin as well as pastel oxford solids, denim, oxford stripes with white collar and a group of bright poplins.

Another design is a schoolgirl dress with shirred front and back, two pockets and side slit skirt in a linen and cotton blend that has a flat tweed effect plus a duo of floral prints.

News in knits

With knits suddenly very much in fashion, the collection includes a short sleeve placket pullover shirt in either bright colors or classic stripes, both with khaki poplin collar.

An avid outdoor person, Corinne shows a poplin zip front velcro closing jacket with hood and round pocket that's perfect for any activity from sailing to camping.

THE GREAT OUTDOORS CAN BE YOURS, rain or shine, in this perky 100 percent cotton reversible jacket, which comes in your choice of bright red, yellow or khaki. It's teamed up with poplin pants and a striped knit shirt with poplin collar. For spring, 1980, by Corinne Pulitzer for Lynnwood Classics.

I believe that clothes will emphasize architectural, structured simplicity. Proportion and comfort best express my approach to design.
—Ronaldus Shamask

A new mood of individuality will develop rather than one particular look. Variety and choice will expand through the eighties, giving women a freer and more fun-loving approach to dressing.
—Don Sayres

Sweater dressing will be the wave of the future. Innovative knits will be engineered to reflect the bold abstractions and modern designs that we will find increasingly during the 1980s.
—Mary McFadden

Hairstyles top off 1980 looks

With every new season of fashions comes a change in hairstyles to accentuate the up-to-date fashion statements.

This year, hair will be shorter with a new soft fullness, according to Zotos, a leading manufacturer of salon permanent waves.

Although some of the styles are super curly, many of the new looks will sweep hair back smoothly, revealing ears and neckline and the latest in beautiful accessories.

Smoother styles for long hair will be shaped into interesting designs at the back of the head, complementing the new back-slit skirts, and shoulder and neck detailing of today's styles.

French twists ending in a froth of curls at the top of the head offers a new look for longer hair.

Many of the new hair fashions are the end result of modern professional perm products coupled with advanced techniques, which provide long-lasting styles and easy daily care for today's hectic lifestyle.

THE SLEEK LOOK OF THE EIGHTIES . . . A gentle turned-under look that's easy to care for, especially when it's styled with a long-lasting support perm that helps the style keep its graceful shape. A classic hairstyle for today's classic fashions. Perm Style by Zotos International, Inc.

FOR WOMEN WHO HAVE LONG HAIR and are tired of struggling every day to get it to look its best, Hector, of the Pierre Michel Salon in New York, has an easy solution. By pulling the hair upwards into a loose top knot and twisting and pinning the ends, the hair falls loosely around the head for a soft look adaptable for either day or evening. An added plus, Hector says, is that "this style gives the hair a chance to relax and recover from blow drying and curling that can damage hair."

Pearls, a versatile accessory

With fashions tempered by softness for spring, pearls have potential as the season's most go-everywhere accessory.

No longer necessarily pearly-white or round, pearls have emerged in a variety of irregular shapes and lustrous colors.

Freshwater cultured pearls, for example, look more like vari-shaped nuggets than little round beads. No two are exactly alike.

"Freshwater pearls, which are predominantly found in China's rivers and lakes, have inspired jewelry designs that are as one-of-a-kind as the pearls themselves," says Larry Tanner, senior vice president for Zales Jewelers.

One design features a single freshwater pearl embraced by 14-karat gold in a free-form ring setting.

Silky nuggets of pearl also are showing up as finishing touches on the tips of 14-karat chain drop-earrings and lariat-style necklaces.

"The days of limiting pearls to basic black are gone," says Tanner.

"Styles that polish daytime looks and add nighttime pizzazz give pearls more fashion versatility than they've ever had."

Even the traditional cultured pearl is freshly appealing. Zales' own Design-A-Pearl, for example, makes it possible to collect cultured pearls one at a time to string on gold chains.

Tanner predicts a growing temptation to mix pearls with gold and diamonds.

"The three jewelry classics complement each other beautifully, whether as elements in a single design or when worn in combinations," he says.

Gemologists from the Dallas-based firm, which operates more than 750 jewelry stores nationwide, offer these tips for keeping pearls looking their best:

- Wipe pearls with a damp cloth to remove perfume, body oils and hair spray, which can damage the finish.
- Never soak pearls. This will waterlog and weaken the string that holds them together.
- Store pearls away from other jewelry to avoid chipping the finish.

PEARL APPEAL—Irregularly shaped freshwater cultured pearls have inspired one-of-a-kind jewelry designs that give the classic pearl new go-everywhere appeal. Even the traditional choker has more fashion versatility when shaped by the unique nugget-like gems. Among freshwater pearl jewelry introduced by Zales for spring: a choker and matching bracelet that will go casual as well as dressed up and a free-form ring set in 14-karat gold.

DRESSY CASUALNESS is unmistakeable in this D-W-3 dress modeled by Linda Eaton. The cool comfort of the cotton-polly blend will take you from spring into summer. This fashionable dress and an array of lovely spring and summer fashions are available at Virginia Crabtree, in the Carolina East Mall.

Stretch fabrics add comfort and fit to women's sportswear

"Can you bend down and touch your toes, stoop, squat and twist your torso with ease?"

The questioner is not an instructor in a health spa. He's John Johnson, buyer of misses pants at JCPenney, and what he's talking about is the whole new revolution in stretch that is adding comfort to fashion.

"For years all of our surveys told us that women wanted clothes that were comfortable, that fit well and that wouldn't lose their 'just new' shape.

Innovative uses

"Lots of fabrics have some of these characteristics," Johnson pointed out "It's why double-knits were so popular for so long. But the best of knits bagged at the knees and sagged in the seat.

"It's only within the past year or so that fabric houses have put together the technology that gives a garment all of the desired attributes."

The secret of what Johnson calls "the comfort factor" is 'memory'—the ability of a yarn to return to its original form after being stretched. Many of the fabrics that have this memory contain DuPont's Lycra which has been around for 20 years.

A magical fiber

While it was used for pants during the 'skinny pants' era and for body suits and some skiwear, for the most part Lycra's magic was confined to swimsuits and intimate apparel.

Just a little bit of Lycra added to any other fiber—natural or man-made—imparts the necessary stretch that makes for comfort.

It also allows a close-to-the-body fit and neat appearance that make stretch the most important trend in active sportswear today.

There are a number of other ways to achieve stretch in fabric however. Through chemical or mechanical means, fabrics can be given as much as 20 percent stretch. Johnson uses the analogy of the spiraled telephone cord that springs back to its original size after being stretched to explain how it's done.

The luxury of Lycra

"The fiber is crimped and treated to have that all important memory and then woven into fabric, or the fabric can be woven wider and then shrunk and given the finish that enables it to return to its original shape.

"In either case the fashions made from the fabric have both more comfort and fit than anything we've used before. This is especially important in pants.

"Here at Penney's" he pointed out, "we're particularly pleased with our own line of stretch made for us by a division of Bobbie Brooks. We call it 'Stretchini.' It has complete two-way stretch and gives a close-to-the-body fit with a comfort that has to be worn to be believed.

Fabric for the 80's

"Right now, we have it in two styles of jeans—a front coin-pocket style and a 5-pocket western style—plus a skirt and a jacket that go with all of them. We're thrilled by the fact that Stretchini has had almost instant acceptance by our customers.

"Stretchini is made of 100 percent polyester. But, Penney's also carries stretch cotton denim and corduroy, and a number of stretch blends. We think Stretch is going to be the way fashion goes in the 80's."

STEP IN STYLE AND IN COMFORT WITH SPRING SHOE FASHIONS

Shoes step out in front with the new short skirts and pants.

Look for more comfortable, walkable, yet still glamorous shoes.

The slanted lower-heeled pump, the pump with contrast piping and the "Spectator" in new color combinations are the basics.

There are lots of new flat ideas, lots of shiny sexy sandals and new versions of the "slide."

Short boots still work with pants. Roller skates may well replace jogging shoes in many closets!

Super-casual sweaters for day and evening will make cherished wardrobe additions. For the 80s, I am focusing on separates that create a total look, not garments haphazardly thrown together. American designers must be creative, but they need to understand the boundaries of wearability. The world is not a runway. —Adri

The moods of Nipon fashions

Frilly, flirty, fresh, factual—these attributes express the mood that spring and summer, 1980, clothes will communicate to and from the women who count on Nipon fashions.

"Women have earned the right to look feminine again and they glory in it," says Pearl Nipon. "They'll wear a lace collar to work, and look fragile and innocent every chance they get.

"What they won't do is be a slave to their wardrobes. They won't fuss with clothes ever again; the designer must see to that."

This collection moves into 1980 with a thoroughly modern form of easy shaping. Widened shoulders are managed without padding, and smooth, nipped waistlines without interlining.

The "little" suit of light but firm tissue faille or in linen-and-Fibranne and the printed crepe dress with a solid Fibranne jacket are important spring looks.

The suits are completely understated, collarless, slim, and most often boast hidden closings under a placket front.

Although the collection glows with lush, non-neon but non-watery color, particularly leaf greens and lilacs, Nipon's message also comes in black and white.

Pleats and tucks are as always superbly minted each season into Nipon clothes. The characteristic Nipon chemisier falls in narrow box pleats, straight or with a narrow tie belt beneath a quilted yoke.

Festive clothes have very festive touches: multicolored ribbons as appliques or decorative loops around necklines, double ruffles forming necklines and hem frills, faggoting, hemstitching, picot edgings in a contrast color, lace collars, satin sashes and, of course, the inimitable Nipon tucks and clustered pleats.

Fabrics that speak summer in a totally new way include feather-light diagonal two-tone picque that is actually not a weave but a surface treatment, wide threaded stripes on a lineny sheer cotton and a jet black cotton voile with a day-to-night fashion potential.

While the feeling is demurely covered, there is quite a lot of skin—short sleeves, sleevelessness, camisole tops, halter backs, subtle see-throughs.

The prints are notably Nipon—pretty but contemporary, in stylized fruit and flowers, geometrics, and geometrics combined with flowers.

Skirts are definitely flyaway in feeling but actually carefully contained by pleats, tiers or circular fullness.

The virginal white dress with thoroughly adult innocence forms a large thematic group in the collection. It comes in white jacquard crepe, in dotted Swiss, georgette and voile.

Make an elegant splash

DEMURE ELEGANCE IN SWIMWEAR RETURNS for 1980. In this swimsuit, by Monika Tilley for Elon, Madeira-embroidered cutouts soften a raspberry-colored, lycra-stretch maillot that encases the body beautifully. Skinny straps outline the scoop-front and criss-cross to create an X-back.

Kids' fashions from Nannette that add big style to little sizes

This season, color, texture and shape work together in clothes that are clean, precise and in harmony with the way American children live.

Three collections

Nannette's fashion focus for spring '80 takes off in three equally important directions:

- Little Sophisticates—bright, crisp, and bold. For example, shaped suits in ripe raspberry 'linen.' Lots of vibrant hothouse hues, a bouquetful of exotic floral prints, make this line come alive with color.
- Sweet Innocents—freshly feminine styles in naive colors and soft fabrics, epitomized by a dainty rosebud voile sundress, topped with an elegant bolero jacket.
- Active Playmates—just for fun, colorful, comfortable clothes with a touch of whimsy—from status jeans (embroidered with N's, of course!) to playsuits or jacketed jumpsuits.

'Together' dressing

Whatever the look, Nannette favors ensemble dressing for spring, whether it's a well-mannered suit with a trimmed-to-match straw brimmer or a playful romper with a coordinating wrap skirt.

Silhouettes are controlled for spring '80—jackets are contoured; tops are wrapped or elasticized; skirts are softly eased or full and swirly; the waist is accented with a belt, bow or Obi sash.

Active fabrics

Shaped styling calls for fabrics with body—linen types, polished cottons, puckered effects such as seersucker or plisse. Knits take on active wear, from jersey to terry, and look newest combined with woven accents.

Important details include extravagant embroideries and lace collars, touches of scalloping or piping.

Suitable motifs that flatter the form

The modern swimsuit is today's body paint. Even the professional can take its functionality for granted, thanks to new fiber and fabric technology.

The designer's job is to imbue a swimsuit, however minimal, with elements of contemporary fashion and flattery.

In Monika Tilley's collection for Elon, women will find the exuberant colors, perfectionist cut, and the incredible amount of handwork and fastidious quality they want.

The closeup, couture details include stripes mitred into Op effects, color bands stitched to spiral around the body, cutwork embroidered midriffs, picoted edges.

Tilley has taken a most sophisticated approach to color in a kaleidoscope of vivid contrasts that avoid paintbox banality.

She uses spirals, Op stripes or blazing solids in architectural cuts contriving very definitely to enhance femaleness. There is only one floral in the collection.

Bikinis are tinier than ever and the sides are often cut up to the waist. It seems a long time since Tilley's mini maillot set the world aghast.

The entire collection is, as always, in unparalleled Antron/Lycra, with cotton terry and velour dyed to match exactly for coverups.

Polly Holliday Is A Lot Like Florence

"Flo lives a life of trial and error," says Polly Holliday. "She never looks before she leaps and then she has to pay the consequences. I feel as though I have to look after her."

The soft-spoken actress portrayal of the flamboyant waitress helped make "Alice" a hit. Now she moves on to her own show as the star of "Flo," premiering Monday, March 24 (9:30 to 10 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

"There's a lot of me in Flo, even though offstage I'm seldom recognized as her – until I speak," Polly says. "I use my Alabama accent virtually without change, except that Flo talks with more energy."

Holliday, a native of Jasper, Ala., grew up in Childersburg, Ala. She drew on that background for such touches as Flo's full name – Florence Jean Castleberry – and the catchphrase, "Kiss my grits." "I've also used bits and pieces from people I've known for Flo's three husbands," says Polly, who isn't married. "The first was a dirt track racer, the second she won't talk about, and the last was a Bible salesman."

The freewheeling Flo, as her fans know, has a special soft spot for truck drivers, a feeling that is reciprocated. Her trucker buddies bought her a car when she needed one to haul her house trailer en route to the new job that lured her away from Mel's Diner.

"That's also something from my own life," Polly continues. "My father was a coal miner who became a trucker. I've used traits for Flo that I heard from his stories of truck stops."

Polly Holliday was a music major studying classical piano at Alabama State College for Women when she started to act. She taught school for a time, then spent eight years in repertory and community theater before going to New York to work for producer Joseph Papp.

She won a role in "All the President's Men" and after that came the "Alice" series. Of her new show, she remarks:

"I know Flo better than anyone, and it's been marvelous fun deciding what her new life will be. I love to hear from people who say they know women like Flo – and from women who ARE Flo. Then I know what a real person she is."

POLLY HOLLIDAY stars as Flo, the swinging waitress who leaves Mel's Diner to become the owner of a cafe in her hometown of Cowtown, Texas, in "Flo," a new comedy series premiering Monday, March 24 (9:30-10 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

CELEBRITIES JOIN with top professional skiers in teams of four to race against each other in "John Denver's Celebrity Pro-Am Ski Tournament." The popular recording, concert and TV star hosts the event, airing Sunday, March 23 (3:30-4:30 p.m.). on ABC-TV.

Professional Skiers Compete

"John Denver's Celebrity Pro-Am Ski Tournament" will be telecast on ABC Sunday, March 23 (3:30 to 4:30 p.m.). The event, matching celebrities with professional skiers, was taped in Heavenly Valley, South Lake Tahoe, Calif.

"The Pro Am competition really comes down to the wire," says Denver. "Oddly enough, to be the winning team depends largely on the celebrities who are racing more than it does the pros. The celebrities represent every conceivable skiing technique, where the pros are predictably consistent and, for the most part, more equal in ability."

Bob Beattie, a former U.S Olympic Alpine Ski Team coach and a commentator during the recent Winter Olympics, coordinated the annual event. According to him, celebrity attendance this year topped that of previous tournaments.

Participating were Clint Eastwood, disco queen Donna Summer, actor Martin Sheen, Olympic decathlon champion Bruce Jenner, World Rodeo Champion Larry Mahan, football star-turned-sportscaster Don Meredith and Bronco quarterback Craig Morton. Former Kansas City Chief running back Ed Podolak was also on hand, as well as singer Mac Davis, country music stars Barbara Mandrell and Tanya Tucker and singers Andy Gibb, Steve Miller, John Davidson and Sonny Bono.

Others competing were TV actors Richard Roundtree, Kristy McNichol and her brother Jimmy, David Soul, model Susie Coehlo, Chevy Chase, George Hamilton, Cathy Lee Crosby and Steve and Jack Ford, sons of former President Gerald Ford.

The event includes downhill and duel slalom competition featuring more than 60 of the world's best professional ski racers. PROFESSIONAL HELP — Omar Shariff, as the physician, Yuri Zhivago, and Julie Christie as Lara, his lover, aid the wounded after an epic battle in "Dr. Zhivago," airing as a two-part presentation on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," March 23 and "ABC Monday Night Movie," March 24 (9-11 p.m. both nights).

Sharif Stars In Epic Film

Omar Sharif and Julie Christie star in "Doctor Zhivago," to be rebroadcast in two parts March 23 and 24 on ABC-TV (9 to 11 p.m. both nights).

Sharif and Christie portray lovers whose lives are brutally thrown into turmoil during the social and political upheaval that persisted in Russia for years.

Sharif portrays Yuri Zhivago, an idealistic young doctor and poet whose promising career is disrupted when he becomes one of the many victims of a revolution for which he had initially expressed sympathy. Christie is cast as Lara, the estranged wife of a Communist with whom Zhivago falls in love. Their destinies become intertwined through years of war and hardship after they are banished to a remote area in the Ural mountains.

Based on the Novel Prize-winning novel by Boris Pasternak, the 1965 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release was honored with Academy Awards for Best Screenplay; Best Art Direction; Best Set Decoration; Best Cinematography; Best Costume Design and Best Musical Score. In addition, the David Lean production was nominated for Oscars in five other categories.

Critics hailed the drama, which evokes some 50 years of turmoil and change in Russia, as one of the most important films ever made.

Bosley Crowther of The New York Times, reflecting on one aspect of the film, wrote: "Successful...beyond question is the physical production of this film — the brilliant visual realization...The decor and color photography are as brilliant, tasteful and exquisite as any ever put on screen.

Crime Does Pay

"Uglies are in," says Claude Akins, and he should know! The veteran of 49 movies and 315 television shows has 'died' 103 times throughout his career. Commenting on his numerous roles as a villain, Claude delcares, "I'm living proof that crime does pay."

Cast Goes On Location

Four cast members from NBC-TV's daytime drama, "Another World," along with a crew of over 25 people, recently returned to New York after taping the conclusion of a major story line on location on St. Croix, one of the U.S. Virgin Islands.

It was a memorable occasion for those involved and also for many persons visiting or living on the lush island. For five days, tourists and residents alike watched the taping from the 'wings.' Sometimes vacations even work schedules were interrupted to catch a glimpse of television production — and some of their daytime favorites — Victoria Wyndham, Christine Jones, Douglass Watson and William Gray Espy.

Make-up artist Edward Jackson Jr. went to St. Croix laden with brushes, blushers and an assortment of beauty equipment. His job was particularly difficult due to the high temperature (90-degrees and up) and humidity.

His expertise came into play when he was asked to transform a deeply-tanned Victoria Wyndham, who had been in the sun for several days, back into the pale girl who first arrived on the island. He masterfully applied a solution of "Mellow Yellow," as it's known in the trade, and then proceeded to apply a make-up base. "Yellow or green tints under make-up reduces redness," explained Jackson, who enjoyed concocting the 'blood' needed in several scenes. "I combined Karo syrup, peanut butter, corn starch and food color. It doesn't stain and it smells good."

Douglass Watson, whose character, Mac Cory, was gravely ill, was made to look like a dying man with several tricks. "First, I applied a fine line of red to the lids of his eyes and then tinted several days growth of beard with mascara," he explained.

VICTORIA WYNDHAM plays Rachel Cory in "Another World," which airs Monday-Friday (2:30-4 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

When Jackson wanted his characters to perspire "on cue," he simply used a solution of glycerine and water and applied it to their faces. "The glycerine beads up the water and helps keep it from evaporating," Jackson continued.

"My main objective was to make the characters look natural in an outdoor setting."

The plantation beach house used in the taping was leasing by the series' producer Paul Rauch. The stately home, complete with four bedrooms and several master bathrooms, was literally turned into a television communication center. One bedroom served as a master control room that housed almost a million dollars worth of video equipment. Another bedroom became a make-up wardrobe center where the actors could relax for a few moments.

Changes On Sinking Soap

No less than twelve major characters on NBC-TV's daytime serial, "Days of Our Lives," will be absent from the show within the next month.

In what may be one of the biggest wholesale house-cleanings in daytime television history, the deletions of the dozen key characters is a blatant indicator that an effort is underway to regain the large audience the serial once enjoyed.

Indeed, 'Days' was proverbial number one-rated daytime show for most of its first decade. But as it nears its 15th anniversary it has slipped as low as sixth in the all-important ratings.

Eileen Barnett has already gone, and Ed Mallory, who's played Bill Horton since the show came on the air, will be leaving in the near future. In fact, he may have departed by the time you read this.

Beyond those, however, is a list of actors who are truly household faces to the regular viewers of the show.

Behind The Scenes

In her role of Jenny on "The Ropers," actress Louise Vallance is portraying someone younger than she really is. And it's not the first time she's done this.

"I'm pretty used to playing someone younger than I am," the 22-year-old Canadian says. "First, of course, I look younger that I am and I always have. I'm petite, and when I was 18 I was playing 13-year-olds.

"Second, I realize that some day I'll be grateful for looking younger than I really am, although it does have its problems.

"I was amazed when I was cast in a role on the first episode of 'Knot's Landing,' playing someone who was supposed to be 24 and sexy. I'd never had a chance to do that and it was fun!" she exclaimed. "It was a challenge, just as Jenny is a challenge, and I love going out there to fight, so to speak.

"I've certainly had my share of challenges and I love them because I learn from them" she says. "But, most of all, I get to do what I've wanted to do since the day I was born."

Specifically, Louise grew up in Toronto and began taking dancing lessons at the age of four.

"It really was tough at moments with my friends when we were growing up," she continued. "I always knew what I was going to do with my life, but many of the other kids didn't. I did, though, and I never made a secret of the fact that I wanted to be an actress. And by the time I was 11, I was working professionally."

As an adult, her dedication hasn't waivered. Louise even restricts her social life to weekends and is always asleep by 10 o'clock.

"I don't have the ambition to be a glamorous movie star," she offers. "I don't think that's important, but I want to work as an actress all my life and be respected for my work."

Q: Can you give me some info about Neil Diamond? I. RAYIAS, WILMINGTON, N.C.

A: Neil made one of the most spectacular comebacks of the 1970s in 1976, when he ended a self-imposed four-year retirement. His first three recordings, cut back in the '60s, turned into his first hits — "Solitary Man," "Cherry, Cherry" and "I Got a Feeling." Neil, who's 36, grew up in New York City, and started out in college as a pre-med major, but soon switched to music. He and his wife Marsha live in California.

Q: What's happened to Jack Lord and "Hawaii Five-O"? It's not the same without seeing him on Tuesday nights. THE GALS FROM THE M.V. CLUB, DREXEL, N.C.

A: Would you settle for Saturday evening? That's where the program is now. In spite of Lord's insistence that this is the show's last season, rumors are now emanating from Hollywood about the possibility of 'Five-O' continuing. Keep your fingers crossed!

Q: I watched Linda Fratianne in the Winter Olympics and thought she was beautiful. Where do I write to her? A. READ, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: Letters to Linda, as well as to all the others who participated in the Winter Olympics, should be sent to: The United States Olympic Committee, Olympic House, 57 Park Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10016.

Q: Is the actor who plays Laverne's father on "Laverne & Shirley" really from Italy? M. MILLER, LENOIR, N.C.

A: No. Phil Foster was born and raised in Brooklyn where, as a youngster, he and his cronies used to dance and sing in front of movie theaters. Looking back on the intervening years, Phil says he's performed in "every nightclub in the United States and participated in every variety show imaginable." One of his strongest interests these days is working with young performers. "Young people have new, fresh ideas, and I love helping them get started," he explains.

Q: A friend of mine says that Frances Bavier, who played Aunt Bea in the old "Andy Griffith Show," is living in Siler City, N.C. I say she's not. Who's right? F. MARTINEZ, FT. BRAGG, N.C.

A: Your friend is! Mrs. Bavier is now residing in Siler City. One of the films she starred in, "Benji" — made in 1975 — aired on television a couple of weeks ago.

'Shakespeare Plays' Continue

"Henry IV," Part One, perhaps the best known and most popular of William Shakespeare's ten English chronicle plays, will air on PBS Wednesday, March 26 (8 to 10:30 p.m.). This is the third presentation in this season's edition of "The Shakespeare Plays."

Jon Finch stars as the tormented King Henry IV, whose tenuous grasp on the kingdom he has seized is threatened by a series of rebellions. The King is further frustrated by the conduct of his eldest son, Prince Hal (David Gwillim). He is leading a life of 'riot and dishonor' in the company of the enormously fat and disreputable Sir John Falstaff (Anthony Quayle).

"Henry IV," Part One was one of Shakespeare's most popular plays during his own lifetime. It is referred to in several chronicles of the day and was printed six times (probably without the writer's premission) before it appeared in the First Folio in 1623.

The character of Falstaff was a great hit with Elizabethan audiences ranging from the lowly 'groundlings' to Queen Elizabeth herself. Shakespeare gave Falstaff even more to do in "Henry IV," Part Two, and promised in the Epiloque of that play to involve him in the actions of "Henry V" as well. He failed to keep that promise. But he did bring the fat knight onstage again in "The Merry Wives of Windsor," written (according to tradition) at the specific request of the Queen herself.

Falstaff was originally named Sir John Oldcastle, a name Shakespeare took from an earlier play. The historical Sir John Oldcastle was a model of probity. In fact, he was burned at the stake for his religious beliefs. His descendants were understandably incensed at Shakespeare's presentation of their venerated ancestor as a drunkard, a liar, a thief and a glutton. And they made their displeasure felt. Shakespeare rummaged through the text of his earlier historical plays dealing with King Henry VI, and came up with a cowardly character named Sir John Fastolfe. Then he did a bit of juggling and produced the name Falstaff. Thus, out of necessity, was born one of the great characters of dramatic literature.

Music Featured

When one says Rodgers, the name Hammerstein automatically comes to mind. The partnership of these two great men was a major influence on the history of the American musical theatre. Long before he teamed up with Richard Rodgers, however, Oscar Hammerstein was writing lyrics for the music of Jerome Kern, Sigmund Romberg, Rudolph Friml, Vincent Youmans and George Bizet. Some of the results of these collaborations were "The Desert Song," "Rose Marie," "New Moon," "Carmen Jones" and "Showboat" — the most significant musical before Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Oklahoma."

This week's segment of "Song by Song" (Monday, March 24, 8 p.m., on PBS) opens with a medley of three songs by Rodgers and Hammerstein — "Oh, What a Beautiful Morning," "Some Enchanted Evening" and "It Might as Well be Spring." But the rest of the program is devoted to songs which Hammerstein wrote with his earlier partners.

Other songs performed include "It Still Suits Me," "Life on the Wicked Stage" and "Can't Help Lovin' Dat Man" from "Showboat." Also to be heard are "The Last Time I Saw Paris," "I Won't Dance," "The Folks Who Live on the Hill," "Stouthearted Men," "I've Told Every Little Star" and "The Song Is You."

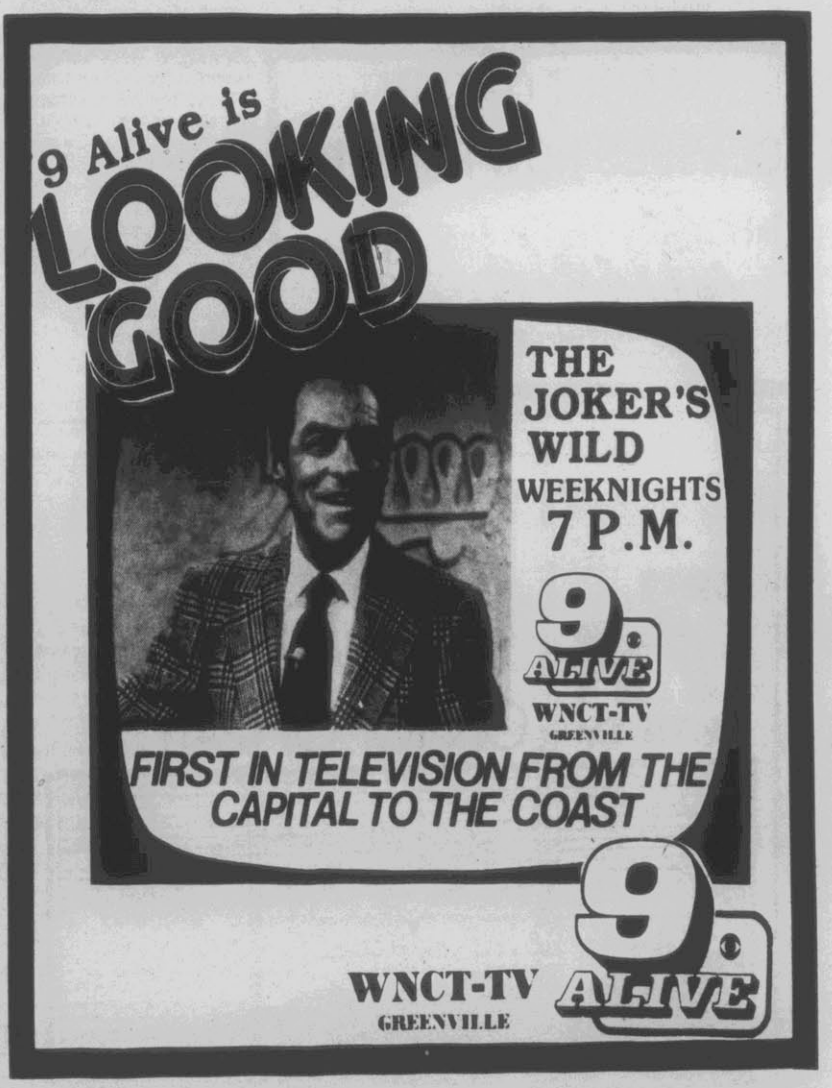

Michigan-born Elaine Stritch sings "All the Fun," which Hammerstein wrote with Jerome Kern for a show called "Warm for May."

Johnson Directing

Lamont Johnson will direct "Minnesota Strip," a two-hour television movie for ABC.

The drama is about a runaway teenaged girl who returns to her home in Minnesota after going to New York.

THE SWEETNESS in Peppermint Patty is hard to find as the little Peanut outfielder pitches bitter remarks at a battered Charlie Brown, in "It's Arbor Day, Charlie Brown," an animated Peanuts special to be rebroadcast Monday, March 24 (8-8:30 p.m.) on CBS.

Trees Can Spring From Salty Peanuts

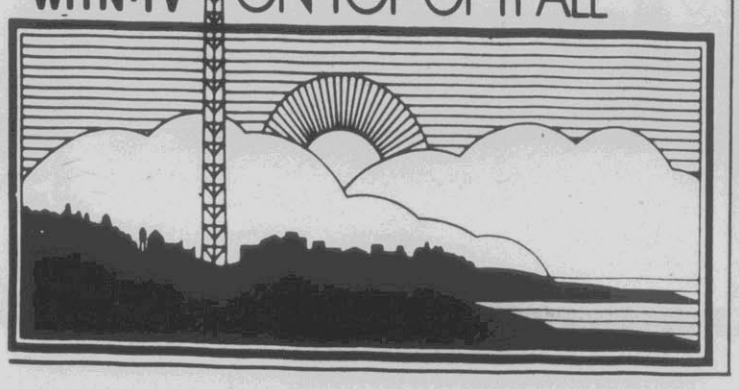

The world's most famous brand of Peanuts, those salty little morsels who deal so tastefully with major holidays, have found that another important date, Arbor Day, is starting to grow on them.

The clan throws itself into a tree-growing project in "It's Arbor Day, Charlie Brown," an animated special to be rebroadcast Monday, March 24 (8 to 8:30 p.m.)

As he prepared the special, Peanuts creator Charles M. Schulz uncovered some thoughts about Arbor Day, which he says "have been lost in the shuffle over the years."

Since its origination in Nebraska in 1872, Arbor Day has been variously observed as a legal holiday, a school festival, and a spring date for the public planting of trees. The time of celebration varies in different states, sometimes even in different localities of the same state.

A WAY WITH WORDS — Larry Gelbart, award-winning writer-producer who brought "M*A*S*H" to television, brings a new series to the home screens with "United States" on Tuesdays (10:30-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV. Gelbart (r) is shown with Beau Bridges and Helen Shaver, stars of the unique new comedy.

Gelbart Writes New Series

Larry Gelbart, the man who brought M*A*S*H to TV, has brought something new to the homescreens with NBC-TV's comedy series "United States" (Tuesdays, 10:30 to 11 p.m.). And his brilliant way with words already has TV critics quoting lines from the new show.

Beau Bridges and Helen Shaver star as Richard and Libby Chapin, a Los Angeles couple with two young sons. They often have chats about thoughtful, and funny subjects:

Here's Richard, talking about fantasy romances — "I'll pull up to a stoplight, look in the mirror at the girl driving the car behind me, and it's love at first peek. There she is, the perfect stranger, tapping the wheel in time with the music on her radio, unaware of what's going on in the back of the head that's ahead of her. Little does she know that she and I have met, made love, learned that our bodies were made for each other, trembled at each other's touch, and walked hand-in-hand along the beach. Then the light changes to green. I pull away and it's all over. An entire affair in thirty seconds flat."

Libby confesses that she sometimes thinks Richard is "just a little bit crazy." Why? "Oh...getting into bed wearing a raincoat. Watching me in the shower through binoculars. Lipstick fights — once, in the middle of the night, he drew a line down the center of my body."

Libby can also kid Richard about the 'friendly' kiss a neighbor woman gave him at a New Year's party. "It was a peck," insists Richard. "Just a peck."

Special Effects Used

High on the list of Hollywood's unsung hereos are those talented craftsmen known as "special effects men." Many of the most exciting moments in films are the result of their inventiveness and know-how.

One such sequence climaxes "Night Cries," airing as "The Tuesday Movie of the Week," March 25 at 12 a.m., with Susan Saint James, Michael Parks and William Conrad in the starring roles.

The scene, as written by Brian Taggert and directed by Richard Lang, called for a car to roar off a ferry and splash into the water.

The sequence was filmed at San Pedro, Calif., and staged under the aegis of specialist Robbie Knott who says, "Without careful planning, it could have been a very dangerous one to do."

"Ordinarily," says Knott, "a car would crash into the water and sink — but for our purposes it had to stay afloat. We built the car like a submarine with flotation devices hidden inside."

Forrest Stars In Film

"This is one of the strongest scripts I've ever read," says Dennis Weaver, about his starring role in "The Ordeal of Dr. Mudd," airing Tuesday, March 25 (8 to 11 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

Weaver portrays the Maryland physician who unwittingly aided in the escape of Abraham Lincoln's assassin, John Wilkes Booth, by setting his broken leg. He then became the subject of one of the country's most infamous trials.

Susan Sullivan co-stars as the doctor's young, devoted wife, Francis (cq.). Others cast in key roles are Arthur Hill, Richard Dysart, Michael McGuire and Nigel Davenport.

The film focuses on just over four years in the life of the man who became the prototype for the derogatory expression "your name is mud." The ordeal began in the early morning hours of April 15, 1865, when Booth shattered the peace of the Mudd farm in Maryland. It ended the day the doctor, almost broken in body and spirit, left a steaming island prison after having been pardoned by President Andrew Johnson.

News of Lincoln's assassination had not reached the Maryland countryside when Dr. Mudd treated Booth with a splint and a few hours of rest.

'Faye' Co-Stars

Faye Dunaway will co-star with Frank Sinatra in the motion picture version of Lawrence Sanders' novel, "The First Deadly Sin."

Wilcox Is Riding

Executives at MGM-TV have given the nod to "CHiPs" star Larry Wilcox's request to return to the rodeo circuit during the series' hiatus. Wilcox, a champion horseman and member of the Professional Rodeo Assn., stayed active during the season by roping and riding during several segments of "CHiPs."

"The Deerslayer," a drama based on James Fenimore Cooper's classic novel, will be presented as the NBC Late Night Movie, Sunday, March 23 (11:30 p.m.).

'Deerslayer,' set against the backdrop of the French and Indian War, is one of the most popular novels in American Literature.

Their mission is to rescue the beautiful Wa-tah-wa, the Indian chief's kidnapped cousin. The role of Hurry Harry is played by Charles Dierkop, who co-starred as Officer Peter Royster in the "Police Woman" series.

Chingachgook is mourning the death of his son, Uncas, when he receives word that his uncle's daughter, Wa-tah-wa, has been kidnapped by the same Huron tribe that killed his son. Chingachgook and Hawkeye then begin the long trek to rescue Wa-tah-wa from the Hurons, who are fighting the British.

Ned Romero co-stars as Chingachgook and Betty Ann Carr is cast as Wa-tah-wa.

'Deerslayer' was filmed on location in the Park City, Utah, area.

Drama Airs

"The Day Christ Died," a dramatization of the arrest, trial and crucifixion of Jesus in the politically troubled Roman-occupied city of Jerusalem, will be broadcast Wednesday, March 26 (8 to 11 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

Heading the international cast are Chris Sarandon, Colin Blakely, Keith Michell, Jonathan Pryce, Barrie Houghton, Jay O. Sanders, Eleanor Born, Tim Pigott-Smith, Delia Boccardo and Hope Lange.

The drama, based on Biblical record and historical interpretation, is a reconstruction of the troubled world of ancient Jerusalem at the fateful time when Jesus (Sarandon) enters the city to face the events which changed the course of the world.

The story opens as Jesus and his disciples prepare for their return to Jerusalem to celebrate the Passover seder, which was to be the Last Supper. The disciples are aware of the need for secrecy. Many eyes are watching their activities because of Jesus' triumphal entry into the city the preceding Sunday. His confrontation with the money changers at the Temple had also caused a considerable amount of controversy.

Among the watchful are the Romans under Pontius Pilate (Michell), the Procurator of Judea, ever wary of any new potential for rebellion in this politically volatile provincial outpost. Also concerned are the Temple Sanhedrin authorities under the high priest, Caiaphas (Blakely). They believe that Jesus' teaching offend Hebrew teachings and that his activities are a divisive threat to the security of the Jewish people in an occupied state.

Pilate's aide (Pigott-Smith) sees Jesus' presence in the city as an opportunity for his leader to avoid a potentially dangerous situation. The Romans are set to execute Barabbas, a dissident whose death could well provoke a fresh uprising. If the crowd were offered a choice between Barabbas and the relatively unknown Galilean, Pilate's Roman authority would not be challenged. Pilate's aristocratic wife, Claudia (Lange), is dubious about such a plan, but her husband is intrigued.

KATE JACKSON, Jaclyn Smith and Cheryl Ladd pose while on location shooting in Hawaii in "Angels In Paradise," episode of "Charlie's Angels" which has an encore showing Wednesday, March 26 (9-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Remember Her?

Cheryl Ladd has become one of Hollywood's brightest stars since joining the cast of ABC-TV's "Charlie's Angels" two years ago. Now the segment in which she was introduced, "Angels in Paradise," will be rebroadcast Wednesday, March 26 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Cheryl replaced the nation's glamour symbol, Farrah Fawcett, on the series, and viewers across the country anxiously awaited a debut of Charlie's newest gal. And they weren't disappointed. She's held her own against the likes of Jaclyn Smith, Kate Jackson, Shelley Hack as well as Farrah and has emerged as a multi-talented performer.

Cheryl Ladd landed in Los Angeles from her home in South Dakota about nine years ago. And her first job was as the singing voice in a cartoon series, "Josie and the Pussycats." Next came television commercials — she's now filmed over 100 — and guest stints in TV series. Among those she appeared in were "Code R," "The Rookies," "Switch," "Ironside," "The Partridge Family," "Happy Days," "Police Woman," and a movie-of-the-week, "Satan's School for Girls." She also had small parts in two feature films — "Jamaica Reef" and "Marriage of a Young Stockbroker."

Then came the part of delightfully feisty Kris Munroe in "Charlie's Angels," and it's been clear sailing ever since. Last year Cheryl showcased her talents as a singer/dancer in her first special, and then co-starred in "When She Was Bad," a television drama that aired last November.

Most of Cheryl's family still live in Huron, S.D., where her father is an engineer. There are two brothers, Brian, 20 and Seth, who's 10. An older sister, Mary Anne, is married and the mother of two sons.

Rogers Is In Orbit

Imagine taking a space flight in the year 1987 and returning to Earth after a deep space probe to discover 500 years have passed. That's the strange fate of Buck Rogers, 20th century astronaut who, through a freak accident, is frozen in suspended animation while exploring deep space. When he returns to Earth and is revived, it's the 25th century.

Gil Gerard stars as this astronaut in "Buck Rogers in the 25th Century," seen Thursdays (8 to 9 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

The science-fiction series is filmed in a warehouse-sized studio owned by Universal. Inside the building is a world of black space, swirling stars, barren landscapes and craggy chasms. They're all very small, of course, and it's up to the 45 artists, cameramen, technicians and designers to create it in the vastness of outer space.

"It's all magic," says Wayne Smith, special effects coordinator.

"Many of the space ships you see on 'Buck Rogers' have cutaway cockpits, into which Buck's life-size cockpit is inserted on film," says Smith. "Model builders create cities and landscapes onto which we graft live action."

Artists paint other landscapes, along with mountains and valleys. These are photographed and their colors match with live action. Then, through a matting process, the two are united.

And that vast, revolving star field is actually a table-sized drum, acrylic painted on masonite. It's then filmed as it turns and projected on a screen behind Buck and Wilma.

'Associates' Returns

"The Associates," one of ABC-TV's most prestigious and highly-praised programs that debuted last fall, was pulled from the network's schedule in November. Viewers screamed in dismay and TV critics complained loudly.

"We do not intend to let it perish," ABC's President, Thomopoulos, said at the time. "We are committed to finding a new place on the schedule where it can grow and flourish and find the kind of audience a program of its adult appeal deserves."

Thomopoulos was sincere and now 'Associates' is returning, Thursday, March 27 (9:30 to 10 p.m.).

The program centers around enthusiastic young law school graduates who are recruited by Bass and Marshall, the most staid and stodgy of all the tradition-bound law firms on Wall Street.

"THE ASSOCIATES" returns to ABC-TV, Thursday, March 27 (9:30-10 p.m.). Starring are: (clockwise from bottom left) Alley Mills, Martin Short, Tim Thomerson, Joe Regalbuto, Shelley Smith and Wilfrid Hyde-White.

Bass and Marshall's roots go back some 50 years, as do the current attitudes of surviving partner Emerson Marshall, played by Wilfrid Hyde-White.

Junior partner Eliot Streeter (Joe Regalbuto) didn't accidentally join the firm. No indeed. While still in law school, he computer-programmed every important law firm — to find out who was going to die first. At Bass and Marshall, Eliot moved up very quickly.

Leslie Dunn (Alley Mills) is the daughter of a poor New York family. She just graduated from Columbia and has a strong feeling for the oppressed. But the firm doesn't usually represent the oppressed.

Tucker Kerwin (Martin Short) is a University of Iowa graduate who's slightly out of step with his Harvard-Yale-Columbia colleagues, and Sara James (Shelley Smith), the product of a long line of Boston blueblood attorneys, is bright, attractive and sexy.

SPOTLIGHT

Makes People Laugh

SKIP STEPHENSON

Thirty-two-year-old Skip Stephenson has been making people laugh for a long time, and his comedic abilities makes him a mainstay for NBC-TV's hit show, "Real People."

"When I'm performing in clubs, I have a lot of time to gauge an audience, he says. "But on TV, you almost have to sense it immediately. And that's why the beginnings of my routines are lose enough for me to go whichever way the audience is going."

Skip grew up in Omaha, Neb., and attended Omaha University, where he performed in school productions. Then he was on the staff of KRDO in Colorado Springs, Colo., for two years, before heading for California in 1973.

He has appeared on all of the major television talk shows, and is a frequent guest on "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson."

In addition to his heavy schedule of TV appearances, he's also active in night club work and has been on bills with Shirley MacLaine, Mac Davis, Pat and Debby Boone and Perry Como.

"In clubs, I go a lot by volume and how responsive people are immediately," Skip says. "If I'm doing a banquet or an appearance other than a club one, it might take longer than a minute. When I first went on the road with Como and MacLaine, it was difficult for me because I was virtually unknown. And the audiences had come to see the headliners. But since 'Real People' and all of my guest spots on 'The Tonight Show,' it's much easier for me."

Skip says he seldom ever uses a definite format when he's on stage.

"I've found that for me, it's better not to have any kind of set routine. That way I'm flexible. And if something isn't working, it doesn't foul me up, and I don't have to junk any chunk of material.

"When I first started doing TV, I tried working from a plan. That was no good for me. Now I come out, fool around, just start talking and more or less wing it. I just did a syndicated show and I actually ad-libbed the entire thing.

"I never know what's happening, and that's the way I want it."

Skip's a single and has an apartment in North Hollywood. He's an avid sports fan and, when time permits, enjoys writing songs.

Panther Strikes

The legions of fans who delighted in watching Inspector Clouseau match his bumbling wits and fractured malapropisms against the international underworld in three earlier 'Pink Panther' outings will be tickled pink to know that "The Pink Panther Strikes Again"; this time in your own home via the ABC Friday Night Movie, March 28 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Producer, director and co-writer Blake Edwards, working in tandem with Peter Sellers as Clouseau has again proved singularly adept at tapping funnybones with looniness and unabashed slapstick, polished and played with all stops out.

The storyline picks up a few years after "The Return of the Pink Panther" as former chief inspector Dreyfus (Herbert Lom), who was driven into the funny farm by his successor Clouseau, is about to be released.

As fate would have it, Clouseau shows up to lend a hand and ends up sending Dreyfus into a relapse so complete that he escapes from the asylum. Dreyfus then sets himself up as a Mabuse-like criminal genius and harnesses a doomsday machine with which he threatens to slowly turn the world invisible unless he gets Clouseau's head on a tray. Enter no less than a dozen international assassins who converge on Clouseau at the Munich Oktoberfest.

In Production

"A Rumor of War," based on Pulitzer Prize-winner Phillip Caputo's best-selling book, is now in production as a four-hour miniseries for CBS-TV.

Brad Davis and Keith Carradine star in the thought-provoking drama of combat in the Vietnam War. Stacy Keach will also appear.

Davis, who will portray Caputo, starred in the hit theatrical feature "Midnight Express," the miniseries "Sybil," and the recent PBS drama "The Greatest Man in the World."

Carradine has appeared in such motion pictures as "McCabe and Mrs. Miller," "Thieves Like Us," "Pretty Baby" and "The Duellist." He won an Academy Award for Best Song for "I'm Easy," from the movie "Nashville," in which he had a key role.

Keach's movie credits inlcude "The life of Judge Roy Bean," "The New Centurions," "Fat City" and "Gray Lady Down."

Television Drama

"KOPs," based on a television drama written by Arthur Marks, is being developed as a pilot for a possible series for CBS-TV.

"KOPs" (which stands for Kavanaugh's Ocean Patrol) centers around neighborhood marshals who ride shotgun on the beach from Marina Del Rey to Venice, Calif.

There is a special unit of the Los Angeles Police Department that patrols such an area. But in the pilot, the cast will wear shorts and T-shirts instead of the traditional police uniforms. Plans also call for them to drive four-wheel jeeps or 10-speed bikes instead of patrol cars.

Mary's A Success

Mary Tyler Moore's last two ventures into episodic television ended as dismal failures. But her Broadway show, "Whose Life Is It Anyway?" is a resounding success.

One of Mary's friends who's cheering the loudest is Carol Burnett, who said, "She's paved the way for all of us in TV who've been the victims of typecasting. I admire Mary so much," she continued, "and if someone asked me to do that, I'd say, 'Sure — in Hungary, where nobody could see me!'"

Stars Recall Incidents

Popular TV stars will reveal incidents from their adolescent years during interviews with Tom Cottle on "Hot Hero Sandwich," Saturday, March 29 (noon to 1 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Levar Burton's happiness over his success in "Roots" was tempered by bitterness triggered by a congratulatory wire from his father. Burton first became aware that his father had permanently left the family in sixth-grade. "I read the telegram and said, 'Ha, ha, ha,'...and then threw it away. If there was no reason for him to ever want to contact me before, why now?...I realize he does have a side to the story, too," Levar said.

Mclean Stevenson admits that he was the one who loved to make people laugh as a child. "I would put the lampshade on at the party; would do the bad Jimmy Cagney imitations."

In other confessions Stockard Channing adds: "I was a bit of a smart aleck...I had a mouth on me." Michael Learned recalls her first kiss, "I was terrified I didn't know how to do it."

Other highlights of the show will be Rex Smith singing the title tune from "Sooner or Later," the movie in which he co-starred, and sketches by the series' acting company. "Ebony Eyes," a film study of black women and black girls, is also scheduled.

Sweepstakes

In an unprecedented tie-in for television, the Montgomery Auto Club is spending more than $10 million on a national sweepstakes which offers a guest-starring role on "The Love Boat" series.

Close to two million people have already entered the national contest, which ends March 31.

Ten finalists will be selected at random by computer and flown to Hollywood for an all-expense paid-week and screen tests. Zsa Zsa Gabor, the Ward Auto Club's Good Will Ambassador, will join other celebrities and entertainment industry executives to judge the finalists, and one winner will be selected for the 'Love Boat' role.

The contest, called the "200,000 Stairway to Stardom Sweepstakes," also offers a grand prize of $50,000. Other prizes include a Porsche 911, three Audi Fox's, five Ward TV Pleasure Combos and more than 3,400 other prizes.

More than 150 million printed pieces, including newspaper and magazine ads, point of purchase displays and direct mail, have been distributed since the sweepstakes began last Spring.

Battle For Ballot

"Battle for the Ballot," a series of short-form programs highlighting the history of America's elections, will be offered to stations on a syndicated basis, beginning Sept. 1.

The 34 segments, each 60 seconds long, will feature informational programming,a commercial and a public service announcement urging Americans to vote.

Pike's Peek

CHARLIE PIKE

HOLLYWOOD — No one offered an explanation, but singer DONNA SUMMER was escorted everywhere by two husky bodyguards during and following the Grammy Awards. When she left the stage after her lone Grammy, she was taken back to her seat by the guards and didn't go backstage, much to the disappointment of the waiting news media. Then, at the post-Grammy party, Donna was never left alone by the two expressionless guards.

There was also disappointment backstage at the Grammy when BOB DYLAN, BARBRA STREISAND and NEIL DIAMOND made quick exits through a side door and hurried to waiting cars to leave the ceremonies.

Don't be surprised if there are some subtle but meaningful changes in the "EIGHT IS ENOUGH" format come next fall. Dick Van Patten is very aware that the show's following has slackened slightly this season and that more than just a few critics have suggested the show is becoming predictably boring.

ANTHONY GEARY, who portrays Luke on daytime's "GENERAL HOSPITAL," and his TV sister, JACKIE ZEMAN (Bobbi), are taking French lessons from a UCLA graduate student during their spare time on the ABC soundstage. Both are avid travelers and language buffs. But, as Tony offers, a bit teasingly, "This way we can give our own set-side critiques and no one else will know what we're saying!"

Five-time Olympic gold medalist ERIC HEIDEN obviously meant it when he said he wouldn't allow himself to become a commercial product as MARK SPITZ tried and failed to do. Insiders say that even some of the most influential agents in New York and Hollywood have been unable to get Eric, or his representatives, to return their phone calls.

Is ABC discreetly planning to make some wholesale changes in its schedule next fall? Is seems that a worker at Paramount Studios, where a long-list of the network's comedy shows are filmed — "LAVERNE & SHIRLEY," "HAPPY DAYS," "TAXI" AND "ANGIE," to name a few — was told not to repaint the names of the stars on their reserved parking stalls until further notice.

On a related subject, now it's ANSON WILLIAMS who's told a handful of close friends that his interest in returning for another season of 'Days' is dwindling. Anson's production company continues to take up as much of his time as does his own career.

IN CHAMPIONSHIP FORM-NBC Sports' popular college basketball broadcasting trio, (l-r) Billy Packer, Dick Enberg and Al McGuire, will be courtside at Market Square Arena in Indianapolis, Ind. to describe the action of the 1980 National Collegiate Basketball Championship game, which will be telecast live Monday, Mar. 24 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Three's Good Company

Three men broadcasting a basketball game? Unworkable. some said. Too much action. too few natural breaks and precious little time for three voices to smoothly describe the game.

So when Al McGuire joined NBC Sports' college basketball coverage team prior to the start of the 1977-78 season. their were no plans for him to join Dick Enberg and Billy Packer for courtside commentary during the games. Instead. the plan called for Al to be the principal figure during half time reports and a long-distance commentator throughout the games. A long-distance commentator? Well. almost.

During the game. while Enberg and Packer broadcast from courtside. McGuire would be in his own private studio where he watched the game on a monitor. Of course. this 'private studio' was usually an isolated washroom or coatroom somewhere within the arena. Whenever he wanted to make a comment he would press a button to alert Enberg who would then call on him. As McGuire spoke. his face was usually shown in the corner of the TV screen.

Maybe it stemmed from the fact that a suitable washroom couldn't be found. Or maybe broadcast partners Enberg and Packer sensed McGuire's frustration. For whatever reason — without the permission of network executives — McGuire quietly slid in alongside Enberg and Packer at courtside and the team was born.

The concept of three men broadcasting basketball was considered unworkable. however. The prospects of three men as different as Enberg. the glib former college professor. Packer. the certified basketball junkie. and McGuire. a street-smart New Yorker. successfully combining were unlikely. But what emerged was instant chemistry like H2 combining with O.

New Record Set

Don McAllister. a 6 foot 7 inch center for Hartwick College in Oneonta. N.Y.. set a new basketball record for the NCAA recently when he hit 28 straight shots over a six-game stretch. During this span. he made three hook shots. 12 layups and 12 jumpers. some as far as 18 feet from the basket.

Watson's PGA's 'Huck Finn'

They call Tom Watson a 'Huck Finn in cleats' and say he was created "by the pen of Mark Twain. with his freckles and tousled hair."

But don't let the look deceive you. This is one of the fiercest competitors on the PGA Tour. and his amazing four-year record is one of the greatest ever forged on the toughest golf courses in the nation.

Already. Watson is being hailed as the new Jack Nicklaus. and he may very well surpass the legendary Golden Bear as the greatest golfer of all time. And he's only 31 years old.

Watson will join defending champion Lanny Watkins and some of the finest golfers on the PGA tour for the prestigious Tournament Players Championship CBS will televise final round play Sunday. March 23 (3:30 p.m.).

On hand to provide commentary and swing-by-swing action will be Vin Scully. Pat Summerall. Jack Whitaker. Frank Glieber. Ben Wright and Ken Venturi.

Total prize money will top $440.000. with the winner pocketing $72.000.

Watson's abilities as a player become more amazing each year. Last season. all he did was win $462.636. good for the topline on the money list for the third consecutive year.

Tom also won the Vardon Trophy for the lowest stroke average for the season and was named PGA Player of the Year. And he captured five more victories and four second-place finishes. topping his own record for the most money won in one year by better than $100.000. In 21 starts. the amazing Watson had 15 top ten finishes.

How Did He Do It

Somewhere in Patterson, New Jersey, there lives a youngster who fashions himself after Walter Middy. How else do you explain a phonomenon like Franklin Jacobs?

This is the guy who suddenly decided to take up high jumping about three years ago. All he's done in the meantime is break the indoor high jump mark. Now he has his sights set on the world outdoor record of 7-7 and three-quarters held by Russia's Vladimir Yashchenko.

This is the guy who only stands 5-8. Everyone knows, however that all high jumpers are at least 6-4, with over half of that all legs.

But don't tell Franklin Jacobs that. He thinks tall and his record-high jumps back him up.

"I guess I just have natural ability but I wonder how I got it," the 21-year-old exclaims.

In any case, Jacobs and other of the the nations's top jumpers — Dwight Stones, included — will be competing in the 1980 NCAA Track and Field Championships. The event will be featured on the next edition of NBC-TV's "Olympic Diary" Sunday, March 23 (3 p.m.).

The finest collegiate track and field champions in the United States and several foreign standouts currently enrolled at NCAA institutions will gather at the Joe Louis Arena in Detroit for the two-day competition.

With the explosive Jacobs, who attends Fairleigh Dickinson University, will be Southern Methodist University's freshman strongboy Michael Carter, who's already put the 16-pound shot further than any other man his age — 967 feet, 9 inches.

Also on hand will be Don Paige of Villanova. He was the 1979 NCAA outdoor champion at 800 and 1500 meters, who won the 1000 yeards event in last year's NCAA competition.

Like Paige, a most important factor in the race for the team title will be Tanzanian Suleiman Nyambui of the University of Texas-El Paso. Nyambui is a 26-year-old who took both the mile and two-mile events in Detroit last year, thus becoming the first man to win both events since Marty Liquori did it in 1971.

"Olympic Diary" will also feature a look at the achievements of James Cleveland "Jesse" Owens in the 1936 Berlin Olympics. With Hitler in attendance for what he hoped would be a showcase for his master race, Owens, an Alabam-born black man, shattered the myth of Aryan speriority by winning four gold medals.

NO ONE KNOWS how this 5-8 individual did it, but in a matter of three years, Franklin Jacobs became one of the top high jumpers in the world after smashing the indoor record. He's entered in the NCAA Track & Field Championships, to be telecast Sunday, March 23 (3 p.m.) on NBC-TV, for the Joe Louis Arena in Detroit.

His Name Is Different

From an illustrious four-year stint on the UCLA basketball team five years ago, Keith 'Smooth as Silk' Wilkes has changed a great deal. He doesn't even have the same first name anymore.

Now Jamaal Wilkes of the Los Angeles Lakers, the five-year veteran has carried along one trait from his college days — he still goes along virtually unnoticed.

But he isn't very worried about the lack of publicity because the Lakers are riding along with an excellent season, and Wilkes is one of the players reaping the benefits.

The Lakers, battling Seattle for first place in the tight NBA Pacific Division host the San Diego Conquistadors on a special edition "NBA on CBS." The game will be televised live from the Forum in Los Angeles Friday, March 28 (11:30 p.m.).

When Wilkes was at UCLA, a tall, red-headed center named Bill Walton grabbed most of the headlines, and the situation didn't change when the small forward entered the professional ranks.

Wilkes joined superstar Rick Barry at Golden State for four seasons, which included an NBA championship. He then moved to Los Angeles which is Kareem Abdul Jabaar country. Now, freshman sensation Ervin "Magic" Johnson is making sure his teammate continues to struggle along with a minimum of press and fan notice.

Carner Overcame Injuries

It took a lot to get JoAnne Carner down, but when something this serious happened, people began wondering if she would ever come back. Some even thought her career had ended.

Early in the spring of 1979, the veteran LPGA golfer seriously injured both wrists in a motorcycle accident and was forced to drop off the tour for the remainder of the season.

But through lots of painful exercise and a strong determination to make a comeback, Carner forged a highly successful season by finishing in the top three in her last trio of tournaments of the year.

Caner and a bevy of talented ladies will tackle the tough Mesa Verde Country Club Course in Costa Mesa.

Is There a Cure For Hypochondria?

Smallpox: bottling up the evil genie.

FOR DEAN D.A. HENDERSON, M.D., M.P.H., The John Hopkins University School of Hygiene and Public Health

Since the last-known smallpox on earth is frozen in glass vials in a few labs around the world, what precautions have been taken to ensure safety? — S.P. Lima, Ohio

● The only known smallpox virus is now contained in glass vials in eight research laboratories. The laboratory directors of each country have agreed on the rigid safety precautions which each will take to make certain that no virus will escape. Each laboratory is inspected at least every two years by experts and World Health Organization (WHO) staff. As a further safeguard, WHO has stored 300 million doses of smallpox vaccine prepared from a virus that is different from smallpox virus. This vaccine, if stored at very cold temperatures, remains effective indefinitely.

For Suzy, there is no rainy day.

Harry Langdon Photography

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Fact or fiction that Suzanne Somers and her husband, Alan Hamel, have tiffs because she's a saver and he's a spender? — L.A., Minot, N.D.

● First of all, he's the saver and she's the spender. Second of all, they don't have tiffs. Suzanne (her current film is Nothing Personal) gave us a rundown: "Luckily, Alan believes in preparing for a rainy day. I believe in perpetual sunshine. He invests. If I had the chance, I'd give everything away. I love buying expensive gifts, throwing big parties no matter the cost. Alan keeps the lid on me. Sometimes I feel I should be able to handle my money in my own way; Alan says one day I'll thank him for all the investing he does." Suzanne says when she reads in the press about the huge sums she's earning, she can't believe it's she they're referring to. "Whatever I'm making is amortized over the next 10 years. I'm not as rich as I'm cracked up to be."

FOR MICHELLE PHILLIPS, star of The Man With Bogart's Face

Is it true that the bad reviews you got for Valentino put you on the brink of a nervous breakdown? — B.G., Tupelo, Miss.

● Not quite, but I kept an eye out for a cave in which I could hibernate for a year. Although I'm not blaming anyone, because you're only as good as the part you're given, I do wish my role could have been better and stronger. But that's ancient history now.

FOR MARK ROTH, professional bowler

● But it's not on the decline. The popularity of bowling is certainly on the incline. The Pro Bowlers Tour is now in its 19th consecutive year on prime-time network TV, and the sport has gained not only national popularity but worldwide as well. There is talk of making bowling an Olympic event. I have been informed that some 70 million people bowled in the U.S. last year, an increase from the prior 12 months.

FOR WILLIAM MARTIN, author of Back Bay

Do you go along with all the reports that under the basements of Back Bay in Boston there is evidence of a civilization before the coming of white settlers? — C.M. Great Falls, Mont.

● I am sorry to disappoint you, but the now-stolid Back Bay section of Boston was actually muck until the late 19th century. In 1939 a 3,600-year-old fish trap was uncovered during excavations for the New England Mutual Life building. That's about it.

FOR SHIRLEY JONES, actress and narrator of TV series, Women of Russia

Were you exaggerating when you said you've changed your phone number half-a-dozen times in the past year? — W.P., Wilmington, Del.

● No. It's because all the fans of my boys think that they live with me. The kids manage to get hold of my number and call at all hours asking for David Cassidy and Shaun Cassidy. I'd like to make it public that my sons have their own homes and do not live in my house.

FOR LYDIA BRUCE, star of NBC-TV's The Doctors

Have you ever encountered a situation on the show that parallels a real-life experience; and do you think that writers of soaps sometimes overdo it? — I.H., Lake Charles, La.

● Almost every situation on the show parallels something I have lived through away from the cameras. We're dealing with relationships and human emotions. Due to the fact that our central theme is based on a hospital, The Doctors is bound to have emergencies and all kinds of extremes.

FOR JEREMY BRETT, star of Rebecca, on PBS-TV

Did Sir Laurence Olivier try to put you off from playing Maxim de Winter, the part he played in Rebecca 40 years ago? — D.R., White Plains, N.Y.

● Only in jest. He told me, "You might have waited until I was dead to do a better job than me." I said, "Larry, if I did, there'd be precious little to do in the meantime. You've done all the classics." I tried not to emulate him. I wanted to be an original, not a carbon copy. In fact, I wanted to do it without the moustache, but I gave in to the director's whim.

PRO AND CON

Should Homemakers Receive Social Security Benefits in Their Own Right?

PRO Representative Margaret M. Heckler (R.-Mass.)

"The times they are a changin'." And have — in ways the drafters of the Social Security Act of 1935 never contemplated. But working women suffer discrimination, and there is still no monetary recognition of the homemaker's value. My legislation (H.R. 1039) cures the latter by giving women who elect the homemaker role their rightful independent place under Social Security, their own retirement record, plus entitlement to disability benefits. Women between 18 and 65 who run a household and don't otherwise work would be treated as self-employed persons and could elect to come under the Social Security umbrella by regularly making payments into the fund.

CON Senator Robert Morgan (D.-N.C.)

Homemakers deserve recognition for keeping families together and strong, and they already receive substantial protection under Social Security. A retired worker's basic benefits are increased by 50 percent for the homemaker who is living. If widowed, she gets her husband's full benefit. Giving homemakers more benefits is impossible unless we reduce benefits to others, increase taxes or add to the Federal deficit. Allowing homemakers to receive benefits in their own right is based on the assumption that marriage is an economical partnership, a too narrow view of marriage. Expanding Social Security beyond its sole purpose of protecting against loss of income would be a radical, suspect change.

Is There a Cure For Hypochondria?

For some people, every ache signals a coronary, every pain points to paralysis. But the hypochondriac's imaginary illnesses may really be a cry for help.

"I was on vacation in San Francisco, having a great time with friends," says Kirk Samuels, 29. "Then, one night, I was looking in the bathroom mirror in my hotel room when I discovered a white dot, about an eighth-of-an-inch across, on the inside of my upper lip. I was terrified. I was certain I had cancer of the mouth and that it would kill me soon.

"I had to get home to see my doctor in Chicago right away. When I did — after cutting short my trip and confusing my friends — the doctor said I had precisely what I could see — a white dot. Nothing more, not even a canker."

At times, when his attention is fully absorbed elsewhere — on a family emergency or his work — Samuels experiences a short period of relief from his continuing series of diseases. Sometimes when this happens, he thinks he is cured. But the odds are against it.

Hypochondria is an obsessive preoccupation with one's body and one's health. The word is derived from the Greek word chondros (cartilage), which refers to a portion of the upper abdomen once thought to be the source of illness. There appears to be no single definition of hypochondria that is accepted by the medical and psychiatric professions — the term describes a wide range of behavior.

The most common and least obvious hypochondriac is the person who simply gives a disproportionate amount of concern and time to his health. Other, more severe, hypochondriacs actually believe they are suffering the symptoms of some serious, possibly fatal, sickness. A small number become so convinced that they are plagued by grave illnesses that they run to a doctor or therapist repeatedly, seeking reassurance or a cure for nonexistent diseases.

Perhaps surprising is how prevalent hypochondria may be. Some health practitioners estimate that as many as 75 percent of patients visiting doctors have nothing physically wrong. A Mayo Clinic division study conducted 10 years ago concluded that 50 to 55 percent of symptoms reported were not based on specific diseases.

What causes hypochondria? One of the most interesting and widely agreed upon characteristics of hypochondria is that the patient's "illness" is often being used as a physical expression of a sense of disintegration, a feeling of worthlessness. Says Dr. Brenda Solomon, attending psychiatrist at Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago, "As people begin to fall apart, to regress, one of the heralding things is their use of bodily dysfunction as a representation of an underlying emotion."

The hypochondriac may be compensating for social ineptitude or failures at work. His pain, constipation or dizziness is a pragmatic means of solving problems, socially accepted excuses for not doing his best, for not coming to grips with deficiencies in personal relationships.

Some theorize that fear of death is the foundation of all hypochondriacal anxiety. The hypochondriac may also be seeking the secondary gain that comes with illness. "Anyone learns that by being sick you get some degree of attention and caring," says Benjamin Belden, executive director of the Chicago Center for Behavior Modification. Some, out of loneliness perhaps, are expressing a need to be mothered, according to Dr. Maria Piers, distinguished-service professor at Erickson Institute. "This person takes overly good care of himself because he feels nobody else does." And Dr. Israel Goldiamond, professor of psychology at the University of Chicago, adds, "A person figures out which pays off for him — sickness or health."

Early family experiences definitely contribute to hypochondria. Robert Meister, author of the soon-to-be released Hypochondria: Toward A Better Understanding (Taplinger), notes that, "...for hypochondria to occur, there is likely to have been exposure in early life to numerous complaints and evidence of illness, invalidism or death of close family members, actual experience of frequent illness, contact with physicians or a strong identification with an ill person or one who exaggerates body sensation...." In his book he points out a common denominator of the hypochondriacal personality that has been noted by observers almost without exception: "Hypochondriacs... live in a striking dependency relationship to a parent or parent substitute."

Kirk Samuels bears out a number of these theories: At the age of 5, Kirk remembers being "left" by his parents in the hospital for the extensive surgery necessary to correct a congenital heart defect. At 13, his father died suddenly of heart failure, and his mother came to depend heavily upon him, the only son living at home.

Hypochondria can occur at any age and in both sexes. According to a study made of 512 hypochondriacal patients attending the Bethlehem Royal and Maudsley Hospitals in London over the 10-year period of 1951 to 1960, the peak age for men was 30 to 39, for women 40 to 49. Sixty-six percent of the hypochondriacs were married and only 34 percent were single, divorced or widowed.

The London study refutes the belief that hypochondria is primarily a characteristic of old age. "If you talk to an elderly person who is hypochondriacal," says Dr. Robert Galatzer-Levy, a Chicago psychiatrist who recently concluded research on the problems of hypochondria, "chances are good he's been a hypochondriac for 50 years." Galatzer-Levy does believe, however, that hypochondria can be intensified with the depression that may accompany old age.

The hypochondriac's vulnerability to his condition varies. Stress is a key factor, says Dr. Solomon: "Any overloading of the patient's capacity to handle stress may bring about an increase in the severity or frequency of his hypochondria." Interestingly, however, in times of true crisis, hypochondria is greatly diminished. "I guess people are then so challenged they really have to get down to business," says Belden. "In Russia, hypochondria is virtually unknown. Its society will not indulge this symptom, and so people simply do not exhibit it."

Though the majority of hypochondriacs keep their worries to themselves or simply confide them to friends and coworkers, others actually consult doctors. What hypochondriacs are really searching for, most experts agree, is an opportunity to speak, to be understood.

Facing up to a possible psychological problem is the first, perhaps the most important step, doctors say, in helping rid oneself of hypochondria. But it is not simply a case of mind over matter. Most psychiatrists advocate that doctors patiently and empathetically listen to symptoms, focus on feelings, not rush into unnecessary tests, yet not minimize problems. Most of all, they advocate being tactful and establishing trust.

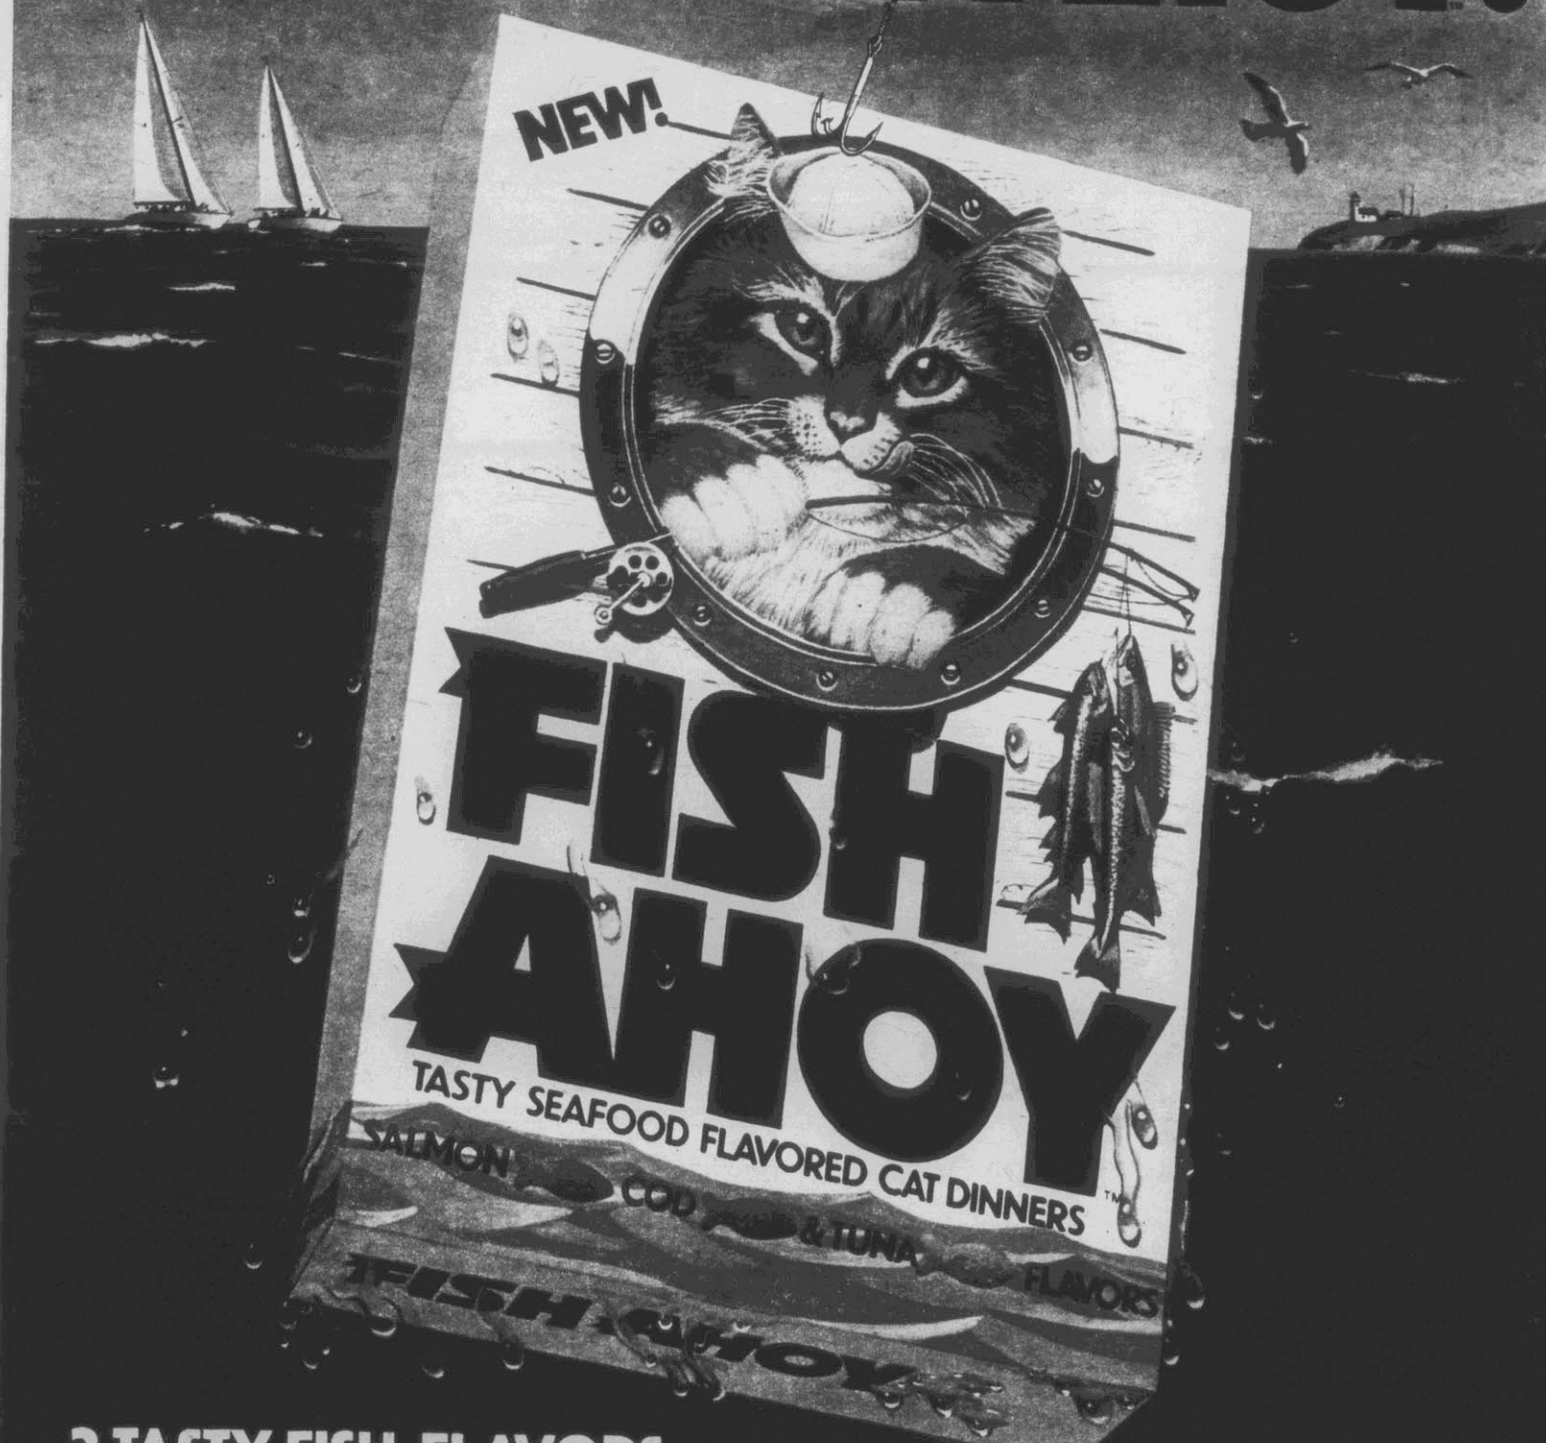

"You must be understanding, reassuring and patient," says Dr. Harold Visotsky, chairman of the department of psychiatry at Northwestern University. "And you had better be careful you don't stop listening, because the patient could have developed a real disease and you could miss the forest for the trees."

By exploring family, marital life and personal relationships, the therapist is likely to find the source of the patient's deeper problems. Dr. Goldiamond advocates bringing in whatever family is crucial to the patient's condition and saying, "See what's going on here." In treating a hypochondriacal child, Dr. Solomon advises that parents treat the physical complaint with seriousness but try to get to the underlying feeling. A death in the family, abuse of one parent by another, illness in a parent, unsatisfied emotional needs all may be translated into sore throats, laryngitis, stomachaches, headaches or nausea.

Though for many patients, hypochondria is an identity lived with too long or too intensely to be discarded easily, Dr. Galatzer-Levy believes that if trust is established between psychiatrist and patient, and if the patient also has a sympathetic and competent general practitioner to deal with his physical complaints, then — with hard work and patience — hypochondria is eminently treatable. Holy Moses! Charlton Heston Returns To the Mountain

A family affair: Mountain man Heston's latest film was written by son Fraser (left).

By Isobel Silden

If Charlton Heston resembles any character he has portrayed in films, it would not be Moses, Ben Hur or Michelangelo. Rather, it would be the character he plays in his newest film, Mountain Men, set to open in July.

Written by his son, Fraser Clarke Heston, it is the factual story of a trapper in the Rockies during the 1830's. It's a subject close to Heston's heart: He and his wife, Lydia (whom he married in 1944), own property in the Michigan woods where Heston, 55, grew up, property that was purchased with the first money he earned in Hollywood. Mountain Men has really been a family affair: Lydia, who is a professional freelance photographer, was the still photographer on the production.

This is Heston's 52nd film. In choosing roles, he has always, throughout his career, kept his criteria constant. "I look for a viable film that I can work with, directors that will attract me, a part that speaks to me," he says. "I look for a gut response. It needn't be a part that is like me. I like to play a man who is not like me. At least one-fourth of my films have been men of other countries."

What did he find particularly appealing about his role in his new movie? "In Mountain Men, I've got a fantastic part with humor," Heston states. "I don't see a lot of that in my parts — I'm either performing my duties as the President of the United States or painting the Sistine Chapel. I have to be quite sober. This itinerate trapper is an empathetic character for me. I was raised in the woods. Trappers at that time were totally free. They had to give up their personal security, their health, their family life. They were alone most of the time."

This is the second screen play Heston's son, Fraser, 25, has sold, the first to be filmed. His daughter, Holly Ann, 18, is a college student who her father hopes will not follow him into show business.

Heston is, at times, inclined to be pontifical. But it has come with his own growth. He is regarded as a pillar of the community and "being a pillar weighs heavily," he laughs. He actually works very hard at being a conscientious citizen, taking an active part in community affairs. He served six terms as president of the Screen Actors Guild and has served on several government agencies.

His career began in the late 1940's, with his Broadway debut in Antony and Cleopatra, co-starring Katharine Cornell. He participated in the "Golden Age" of live TV and was brought to Hollywood by Hal Wallis to star in Dark City. Immediately afterwards, Cecil B. DeMille signed him for The Greatest Show on Earth, and Heston's career moved into center ring. He won an Oscar for the title role in the 1959 film, Ben Hur.

One of the most difficult aspects of his career has been "selling" the movies he's made: "I wasn't any good at it. I was embarrassed and insecure but I learned to do it. When my films won awards, they wanted me to accept them, rather than the producers or directors. I learned on the job, learning while I was earning."

Although he is almost typecast in many people's minds as a Biblical character actor, he has played only Moses in The Ten Commandments and John the Baptist in The Greatest Story Ever Told. "Producers seem to feel that I have a medieval face. I've gradually worked my way into the 20th century," he jokes. In 1968 he starred in Planet of the Apes, and he has most recently appeared in numerous disaster flicks, including Earthquake, Airport 1975 and Two Minute Warning.

Heston still has some unrealized desires. "There are roles I've played that I have to play again. One more Macbeth would make it six in all, although the combat scene is very tiring. The great parts are physically demanding. I'd like to do another Antony in Antony and Cleopatra. And a couple more Long Day's Journey into Night. I did empathize with Eugene O'Neill when I played James Tyrone, although my relationship with my son is totally different. But my kids rolled with laughter at the line where Tyrone says, 'Lights burning all over the house just make the electric company rich.' I say the same thing at home." It seems as if Heston was not a permissive parent, but still one who ruled with humor.

Heston is exactly what he appears to be, a happy, satisfied and contented man. "I have no plans for retirement, as long as someone will hire me," he claims.

Of course there are emotional highs and lows in his life. "I am happy when I do good work and please the people who love me. It's sad when I fall short of the best I might be in a given situation."

YOUR DOCTOR DOESN'T ALWAYS TELL YOU!

People take prescription drugs to make them feel better. To end discomfort. To stop pain. To induce sleep. To increase energy. To fight infection. According to a helpful consumer oriented book, these drugs often bring about an assortment of unwanted side effects in susceptible individuals. This new and revised edition of the 250,000 copy bestseller reveals the possible side effects of the 220 most frequently prescribed drugs. Written in layman's language in an easy to use A to Z format, consumers can now learn about the possible side effects of the drugs they take before filling the prescription.

Actifed®	Darvon®	Librium®	Reserpine
Aldomet®	Diuril®	Orthonovum®	Ritalin®
Benadryl®	Doriden®	Ovral®	Seconal® Sodium
Benemid®	Hygroton®	Penicillin	Terramycin®
Chlor-trimeton®	Inderal®	Phenobarbital	Tetracyn®
Dalmane®	Librax®	Regroton®	Valium®

What an important book! It's estimated that more than 1 billion drug prescriptions are written by doctors in the U. S. each year. Often these drugs cause such unwanted side effects and adverse reactions as:

dizziness, dry mouth, stomach cramps, loss of balance, bleeding, fluid retention, headaches, vomiting, fever, rash, nausea, loss of appetite, itching, diarrhea, blurred vision, pains in the joints, impotence, insomnia, jitters, fluttering, constipation, shortness of breath, drowsiness, depression.

To prepare this volume, the author researched the various pharmaceutical reference manuals plus the literature drug companies send to doctors and pharmacists. Then, he edited this material into layman's language explaining the conditions under which each drug is prescribed.

And the book includes a very special bonus—the generic name of each of the 220 drugs right alongside the brand name. If your doctor will prescribe by the generic name whenever possible, you'll save money on most prescriptions.

We think there should be a copy of this valuable consumer guide in every home. Order today!

WRAPSODY

For birthday, shower, whatsoever,
To wrap a gift you must be clever.
Take fancy paper, ribbon too,
And flowers, maybe, fixed with glue.

Make it so beautiful they'll hate
To open it, while others wait.
They wrestle with it, pry and pant
And for a moment think they can't . . .

There's just one danger. When the present
Is seen at last, it's quite unpleasant
If you should note, amidst the clapping,
What's really liked is just the wrapping.

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

My little sister, Belinda, found a picture of Mom and Dad and me. "Where am I?" she asked. Mom explained that she was in heaven when the picture was taken. "Was I dead?" Belinda asked. Mom said no, that she wasn't born yet. Belinda pondered this great mystery and asked, "Did you worry about me?"

Breakfast for A Leisurely Weekend

Maurice Moore-Betty has been teaching the fine art of cooking in "The Carriage House" in New York City for the past 17 years. He also has the reputation of being a very accomplished host, as his family and friends will testify. This past fall, The Maurice Moore-Betty Cookbook, published by Bobbs-Merrill, came out and has been well received by both newcomers and old hands in the kitchen.

It is with pleasure that we present a few of Maurice's favorite breakfast recipes for you to try.

Country Breakfast

Tomato Juice — Lemon Wedges Navel Oranges — "Water-Lily"
Corned Beef Hash — Poached Eggs Scrambled Eggs — Bacon
Whole Roast Chicken Toast/English Muffins
Butter/Marmalades Tea Coffee

CORNED BEEF HASH THE WAY I LIKE IT

3 cups cooked corned beef, sliced and cubed
1 cup diced onions, about 3 medium
2 ribs celery, diced
2 cups potatoes, boiled in their jackets, peeled and rubbed through a wire sieve
1 cup parsley sprigs, finely chopped
4 tablespoons unsalted butter
Salt and pepper to taste
6 poached eggs
1 head broccoli, steamed
Lemon wedges

1. Sauté the onions in a tablespoon of butter till lightly browned.
2. Mix the corned beef, celery, onions, potatoes and a spoonful of chopped parsley in a bowl. Taste and season with salt and pepper. More than likely, additional salt will not be needed; there will be enough in the corned beef.
3. Melt the rest of the butter in a shallow heatproof casserole with a lid (the lid will be used as a serving dish). Pile the corned beef mixture into the casserole-half with the butter and press lightly to hold shape. Cook over medium heat till a healthy-looking crust forms on the bottom, about 30 minutes.

Makes 6 servings

POACHED EGGS

1 egg per person
Skillet full of gently simmering water to which a few drops of vinegar have been added

1. Puncture the broad end of the egg with a needle. Roll each egg back and forth in the simmering water, 10 times in all. This helps to set the egg white.
2. Swirl the water and carefully break the egg and lower it into the skillet. Poach for 3 or 4 minutes, depending on how you like it, well set or soft.
3. Lift and drain. Serve on a slice of hot buttered toast.

SCRAMBLED EGGS
(In bygone days "Buttered eggs")

6 large eggs
3 tablespoons unsalted butter
Handful parsley sprigs, finely chopped
Salt and pepper to taste

1. Break the eggs into a bowl and mix thoroughly with a fork. Do not beat to a froth. Stir in chopped parsley.
2. Melt butter in a heavy pan over medium heat. Pour in eggs and parsley. Stir continuously till thick and heavy.

Makes 2 or 3 servings

Editor's note: The end result should be soft and creamy grains. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Also, Maurice suggests, "If Scrambled Eggs have to wait," just before serving break a raw egg into mixture to moisten and cook, stirring until done.

ROAST CHICKEN

1 2½-3-lb. roasting chicken
Juice of 1 lemon
Coarse salt
Freshly ground pepper
1 clove garlic

1. Heat the oven to 400°F. Wipe inside of chicken with a damp cloth or paper towel. Sprinkle very generously with coarse salt.
2. Peel garlic clove. Rub salted inside of chicken with cut garlic. Dust with freshly ground pepper. Rub a generous tablespoon of coarse salt into chicken skin, followed up with the cut clove of garlic.
3. Truss or tie up the chicken for the oven and stand it on a rack in a roasting pan. Pour half the lemon juice inside the chicken and the remainder over it.
4. Dust with a little more coarse salt and freshly ground black pepper. Cook for one hour without basting and do not open the oven door. Makes 2 to 4 servings

ORANGES À LA CURAÇAO

5 navel oranges
Boiling water
⅓ cup water
⅓ cup sugar
¼ cup curaçao or other orange-flavored liqueur
⅓ cup toasted slivered almonds

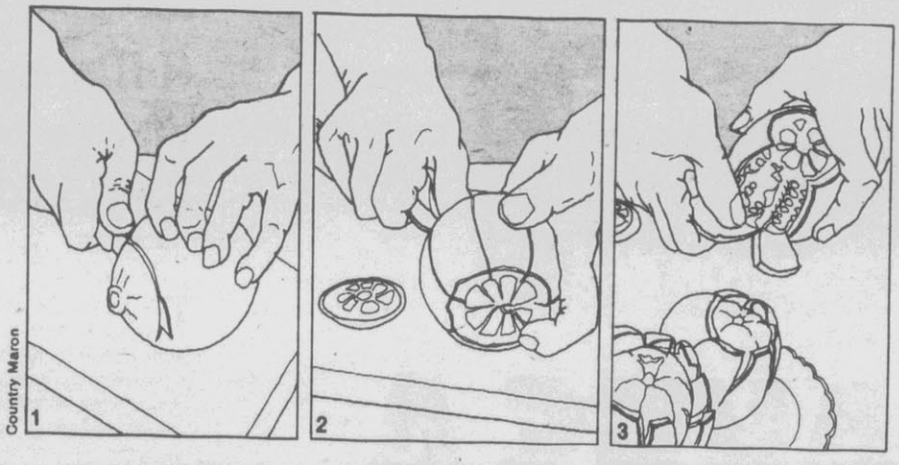

1. Peel 4 oranges; cut in cartwheel slices. Arrange in shallow dish.
2. With vegetable parer, peel remaining orange, removing outer colored peel only. Cut into thin slivers. Juice orange; reserve.
3. In saucepan, cover slivered peel with boiling water. Boil for 5 minutes; drain.
4. Combine drained peel, ⅓ cup water, reserved orange juice and sugar; heat, stirring to dissolve sugar. Add curaçao. Pour over cartwheel slices.
5. Chill 4 hours or overnight. To serve, sprinkle with almonds.

Makes 6 servings (about 4 cups)

ORANGE-LEMON MARMALADE

3 oranges, unpeeled, thinly sliced in ¼ cartwheels*, seeded (3 to 3½ cups)
2 lemons, unpeeled, thinly sliced in ½ cartwheels, seeded (about 1 cup)
Cold water
5½ cups sugar

1. In large bowl, combine oranges, lemons and 7 cups water; cover. Let stand 24 hours; drain.

1. To make orange "Water-Lily," start with a large, thick-skinned navel orange. Cut off a shallow slice from the stem end. 2. Hold orange in one hand and then make petal-shaped cuts, about 1 inch wide across at cut end and 2 to 3 inches long lengthwise down orange, making about 6 "petals" in all. 3. Now, starting at cut end, gently peel "petal" away from orange, leaving it attached by 1 inch of uncut skin at navel end. Proceed to open all "petals."

2. In large saucepan, combine drained oranges and lemons and 7 cups fresh water. Bring to boil. Boil rapidly 25 minutes.
3. Add sugar. Return to boil, stirring until sugar dissolves and mixture reaches 220°F. on candy-jelly thermometer, about 30 minutes.
4. Remove from heat; stir and skim. Pour into hot jars; seal. Process in boiling-water bath 10 minutes. Makes seven ½-pint jars

To make orange quarter-cartwheels, cut orange in half lengthwise. Place cut-side-down; cut again in half lengthwise. Cut crosswise into thin slices.*

To make lemon half-cartwheels, cut lemon in half lengthwise. Place cut-side-down; cut into thin slices.*

SCOTCH EGGS

12 hard-cooked eggs*
1 egg, beaten
⅓ cup fine dry bread crumbs
Fat for deep-frying

1. Divide sausage into 12 equal portions (1 oz. each). Shape each portion into patty and wrap completely around 1 hard-cooked egg, pressing edges together to seal.
2. Dip sausage-wrapped eggs in beaten egg, then roll in bread crumbs until completely coated.
3. Cook eggs in preheated 375°F. deep fat until golden brown and heated through, 7 to 9 minutes. Drain on absorbent paper. Serve hot or cold.

Makes 12

*To hard cook eggs: put eggs in single layer in saucepan. Add tap water at least 1 inch above eggs. Cover and quickly bring just to boiling. Turn off heat. If necessary, remove pan from burner to prevent further boiling. Let eggs stand, covered, in the hot water 15 to 17 minutes for large eggs. (Adjust time up or down by about 3 minutes for each size larger or smaller.) Immediately run cold water over eggs or put them in ice water until completely cooled. To remove shell, crackle it by tapping gently all over. Roll egg between hands to loosen shell, then peel, starting at large end. Hold egg under running cold water or dip in bowl of water to help ease off shell.

Editor's note: This is the method recommended by the American Egg Board.

A Monthly Review of What's New in the World Of Cookbooks

This month we meet Perla Meyers's new cookbook, From Market to Kitchen (Harper and Row). The book begins with a great selection — The Essential Kitchen: The Kitchen Pantry. In it, Perla talks about marketing and how to buy food. Even if you thought that you knew how to buy, you'll find that you can learn a lot more by reading this section.

SPAGHETTINI IN TOMATO, ANCHOVY, AND MOZZARELLA SAUCE

- 6 tablespoons olive oil
- ½ cup finely minced onions
- 4 large cloves garlic, minced
- ½ cup finely minced fresh parsley
- 6 to 8 ripe tomatoes, peeled, seeded and chopped, or 1 can (35 ozs.) Italian plum tomatoes, drained and chopped
- ½ cup finely minced fresh basil or 2 teaspoons dried
- 2 tablespoons finely minced fresh oregano or 1 teaspoon dried
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper
- 1 can (2 ozs.) flat anchovy fillets, drained and minced
- 2 tablespoons well-drained tiny capers
- 1 lb. spaghettini (thin spaghetti)
- 6 ozs. mozzarella cheese, finely cubed

1. In a large, heavy skillet, heat the oil, add the onion, 2 cloves garlic and ¼ cup parsley. Cook the mixture over low heat for 2 or 3 minutes.

2. Add the tomatoes, basil, oregano, salt and pepper and cook the mixture, partially covered, until the sauce is slightly reduced and most of the tomato water has evaporated.

3. Add the anchovies and capers and keep warm.

4. In a large casserole, bring 3 to 4 quarts salted water to a boil. Add the spaghettini and cook over high heat for 7 or 8 minutes or until barely tender.

5. Drain the spaghettini and add to the skillet. Toss in the sauce and add the mozzarella (the cheese should be barely melted and still retain its texture). Add the remaining parsley and garlic, then taste and correct the seasoning, adding a large grinding of black pepper. Makes 4 to 6 servings

COUNTRY BROCCOLI SOUP

- 1½ to 2 lbs. fresh broccoli
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 3 large leeks, well rinsed and sliced (2 inches of the greens removed)
- 2 all-purpose potatoes, peeled and cubed
- 6 to 8 cups chicken stock
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper
- 1 cup heavy cream or Crème Fraiche
- 3 or 4 slices stale white bread, crusts removed
- 2 cloves garlic, peeled and cut in half
- 3 tablespoons olive oil
- Freshly grated Parmesan cheese

1. Peel broccoli stalks with a vegetable peeler. Remove leaves and cut stalks into ¾-inch cubes. Reserve 2 cups of the cubed broccoli and coarsely chop the remaining broccoli. Set both aside.

2. In a large flameproof casserole, heat 2 tablespoons butter. Add leeks and cook, covered, over low heat for 2 or 3 minutes without browning.

3. Add potatoes and chopped broccoli, then add stock and bring to a boil. Reduce the heat and season with salt and pepper. Simmer for 30 minutes or until the vegetables are very tender.

4. Cool the soup and purée in a blender or food processor.

5. Return the soup to the casserole. Add the reserved cubed broccoli and cook over low heat for 15 minutes or until the broccoli is tender.

6. Add the cream, then taste and correct the seasoning. Keep the soup covered.

7. Rub the bread slices with the cut side of the garlic cloves. Cut into ½-inch cubes and reserve.

8. Heat the oil and remaining butter in a heavy skillet. Add the bread cubes and sauté over medium heat until nicely browned on all sides, tossing the cubes in the pan to brown them evenly. Set the bread cubes aside until completely cool; the croutons will get crisp as they cool.

9. Serve the soup in individual bowls, topped with a few croutons and freshly grated Parmesan cheese.

Makes 6 servings

Editor's Note: Soup can be made several days ahead and refrigerated.

FAMILY WEEKLY COOKBOOK

EGGS SAN FRANCISCO

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped green pepper
8 eggs
¼ cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon basil leaves, crushed
Dash ground black pepper
1 pkg. (3 ozs.) cream cheese, cubed
1 medium tomato, peeled and chopped
1 pkg. (6 ozs.) frozen crab meat, thawed and drained

1. In large skillet over medium heat, cook onion and green pepper in butter until tender but not brown.
2. Meanwhile, mix eggs, milk and seasonings with a fork or rotary beater. Pour egg mixture over onion and green pepper. Add cheese, tomato and crab meat.
3. Cook over medium heat. As eggs begin to set, gently draw pancake turner completely across bottom and sides of skillet, forming soft curds. Continue until eggs are thickened. Avoid constant stirring.
4. Cook until eggs are thickened throughout but still moist. Remove scrambled eggs from pan when they are slightly underdone. Heat retained in the eggs completes cooking.
5. Serve with slices of toasted sour dough bread, Italian bread or English muffins.

Makes 4 servings

BROCCOLI SOUFFLÉ

Butter or margarine
Freshly grated Parmesan cheese
2 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons flour
1 tablespoon finely chopped onion or instant minced onion
½ teaspoon salt
Few twists freshly ground black pepper
1 cup milk
1 package (10 ozs.) frozen chopped broccoli, cooked and well drained
½ cup shredded Swiss cheese
4 slices bacon, chopped, crisp-cooked and drained, optional
6 eggs, separated
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar

1. Butter a 2½-quart soufflé dish or casserole and dust with Parmesan cheese. Arrange egg slices around side of dish.
2. In saucepan, melt 2 tablespoons butter; blend in flour, onion, salt and pepper. Cook and stir over medium-high heat just until mixture is smooth and bubbly.
3. Stir in milk all at once; cook and stir until mixture boils and is smooth and thickened. Remove from heat and add broccoli, Swiss cheese and bacon, stirring until cheese is melted.
4. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon-colored, about 5 minutes.
5. Into yolks, blend a little of hot mixture; return yolk mixture to saucepan and blend. Wash beaters.
6. Beat egg whites and cream of tartar until stiff but not dry or just until whites no longer slip when bowl is tilted. Fold yolk mixture into egg whites. Pour into prepared soufflé dish.
7. Holding a spoon straight up and down, circle mixture to make ring about 1 inch from side of dish and about 1 inch deep.
8. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven 30 to 40 minutes or until puffy, delicately browned, and soufflé shakes very slightly when oven rack is gently moved back and forth. Serve immediately or let soufflé "wait" for 5 minutes in oven with the oven door open before serving.

Makes 6 servings

Editor's note: Step 7 makes the "top hat" effect on the soufflé.

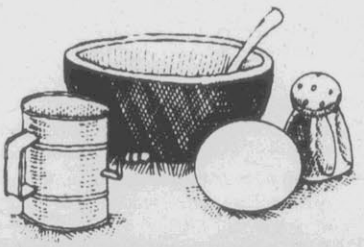

MUSTARD SAUCE

1 egg
¼ cup water
¼ cup vinegar
2 tablespoons sugar
1½ tablespoons dry mustard
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash nutmeg

1. Measure all ingredients into blender container or small mixing bowl.
2. Blend or mix at medium speed until well combined. Pour into small saucepan.
3. Cook over medium-high heat, stirring constantly, just until mixture comes to a boil. Remove from heat.

Makes about ¾ cup

Editor's note: great for poached egg and hash dishes and soufflés.

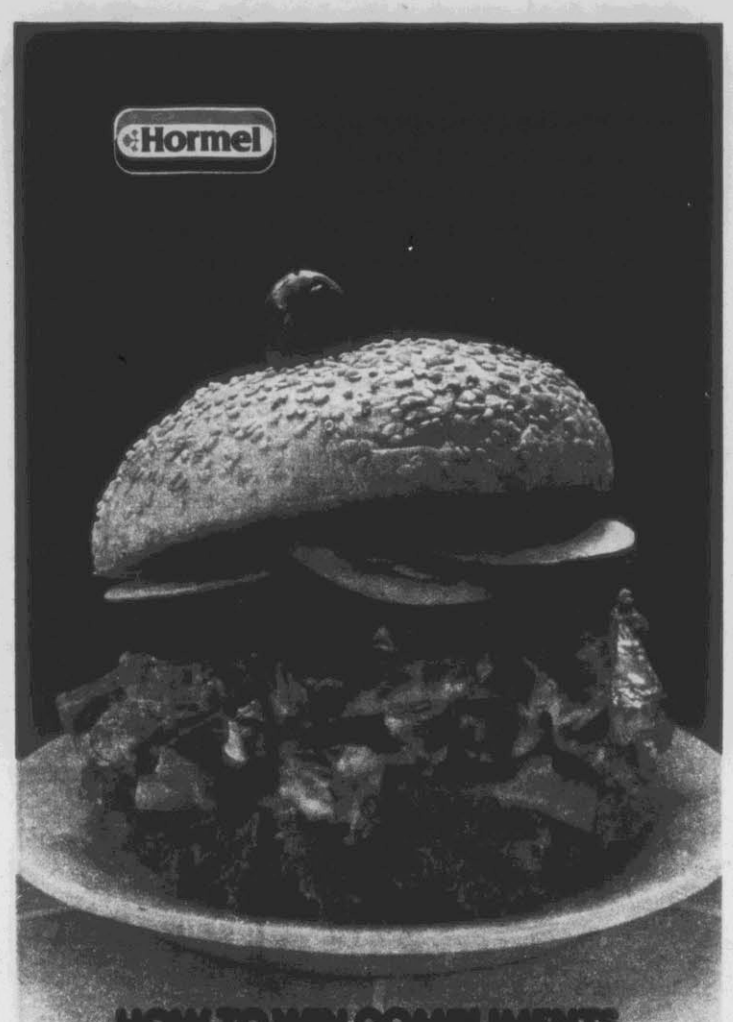

FREEZER CHEESE SOUFFLÉ

⅓ cup butter or margarine
⅓ cup all-purpose flour
1½ cups milk
2 cups (8 ozs.) shredded American cheese
6 eggs, separated
½ teaspoon cream of tartar

1. In large saucepan, melt butter. Blend in flour. Cook, stirring constantly over medium-high heat until mixture is smooth and bubbly.
2. Stir in milk all at once. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture boils and thickens. Remove from heat. Stir in cheese until melted.
3. In small mixing bowl, beat egg yolks at high speed until thick and lemon-colored, about 5 minutes.
4. Blend small amount of hot cheese mixture into yolks. Stir yolk mixture into cheese mixture.
5. Wash and dry beaters. In large mixing bowl, beat egg whites and cream of tartar at high speed until stiff but not dry, just until whites no longer slip when bowl is tilted.
6. Gently but thoroughly fold yolk mixture into whites. Carefully pour mixture into six ungreased 9-ounce custard cups or soufflé dishes. Cover each with foil and freeze.
7. To cook, uncover dishes and place, still frozen, in shallow baking pan on oven rack. Fill pan with hot water to depth of ½ inch. Bake in preheated 300°F. oven 50 to 55 minutes. Serve immediately.

Too Busy Earning a Living To Make Any Money?

You think you've got problems?

Well, I remember when a bank turned me down for a $200 loan. Now I lend money to the bank — Certificates of Deposit at $100,000 a crack.

I remember the day a car dealer got a little nervous because I was a couple of months behind in my payments — and repossessed my car. Now I own a Rolls Royce. I paid $43,000 for it — cash.

I remember the day my wife phoned me, crying, because the landlord had shown up at the house, demanding his rent — and we didn't have the money to pay it.

Now we own five homes. Two are on the oceanfront in California (I use one as my office). One is a lakefront "cabin" in Washington, (that's where we spend the whole summer — loafing, fishing, swimming, and sailing.) One is a condominium on a sunny beach in Mexico. And one is snuggled right on the best beach of the best island in Hawaii — Maui.

Right now I could sell all this property, pay off the mortgages, — and — without touching any of my other investments — walk away with over $750,000 in cash. But I don't want to sell, because I don't think of my homes as "investments." I've got other real estate — and stocks, bonds, and cash in the bank — for that.

I remember when I lost my job. Because I was head over heels in debt, my lawyer told me the only thing I could do was declare bankruptcy. He was wrong. I paid off every dime.

Now, I have a million dollar line of credit; but I still don't have a job. Instead, I get up every weekday morning and decide whether I want to go to work or not. Sometimes I do — for 5 or 6 hours. But about half the time, I decide to read, go for a walk, sail my boat, swim, or ride my bike.

I know what it's like to be broke. And I know what it's like to have everything you want. And I know that you — like me — can decide which one it's going to be. It's really as easy as that. That's why I call it "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches."

So I'm going to ask you to send me something I don't need: money. Ten dollars to be exact. Why? Because I want you to pay attention. And I figure that if you've got $10 invested, you'll look over what I send you and decide whether to send it back...or keep it. And I don't want you to keep it unless you agree that it's worth at least a hundred times what you invested.

Is the material "worth" $10? No — if you think of it as paper and ink. But that's not what I'm selling. What I am selling is information. More information than I give when I'm paid $1000 as a guest speaker. More information than I give in a one-hour consultation for $300.

But you're really not risking anything. Because I won't cash your check or money order for 31 days after I've sent you my material. That's the deal. Return it in 31 days — and I'll send back your check or money order — uncashed.

How do you know I'll do it? Well, if you really want to be on the safe side, post-date your check for a month from today — plus 2 additional weeks. That'll give you plenty of time to receive it, look it over, try it out.

I know what you're thinking: "He got rich telling people how to get rich." The truth is — and this is very important — the year before I shared "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches," my net income was $216,646. And what I'll send you tells just how I made that kind of money...working a few hours a day...about 8 months out of the year.

It doesn't require "education." I'm a high school graduate.

It doesn't require "capital." Remember I was up to my neck in debt when I started.

It doesn't require "luck." I've had more than my share. But I'm not promising you that you'll make as much money as I have. And you may do better. I personally know one man who used these principles, worked hard, and made 11 million dollars in 8 years. But money isn't everything.

It doesn't require "talent." Just enough brains to know what to look for. And I'll tell you that.

It doesn't require "youth." One woman I worked with is over 70. She's travelled the world over, making all the money she needs, doing only what I taught her.

It doesn't require "experience." A widow in Chicago has been averaging $25,000 a year for the past 5 years, using my methods.

What does it require? Belief. Enough to take a chance. Enough to absorb what I'll send you. Enough to put the principles into action. If you do just that — nothing more, nothing less — the results will be hard to believe. Remember — I guarantee it.

You don't have to give up your job. But you may soon be making so much money that you'll be able to. Once again — I guarantee it.

I know you're skeptical. Well, here are some comments from other people. (Initials have been used to protect the writer's privacy. The originals are in my files.) I'm sure that, like you, these people didn't believe me either when they clipped the coupon. Guess they figured that, since I wasn't going to deposit their check for at least 31 days, they had nothing to lose.

They were right.

And here's what they gained:

From $50 to $565 per week

"...when I sent for your (Lazy Man's Way to Riches), I was delivering the L.A. Times for $50 per week...Now...I earn an average of $565 per week, have $7,000 in the bank and a condominium worth $85,000..."

J.N. Culver City, CA

Takes in $587,000 in 2 years

"Everything you say is true. I'm a lawyer. I ordered your material two years ago. I received it within a few days and put your method to work immediately. Since then I have taken in $587,000 by following your system. Needless to say, I have given up my law practice — it just wasn't worth working anymore."

C.F.A. Provo, UT

'Wow, it does work!'

"Oddly enough, I purchased Lazy Man's Way to Riches some six months ago, or so, read it..and really did nothing about it. Then, about three weeks ago, when I was really getting desperate about my financial situation, I remembered it, re-read it, studied it, and this time, put it to work and WOW, it does work! Doesn't take much time, either...I guess some of us just have to be at a severe point of desperation before we overcome the ultimate laziness, procrastination."

Mr. J.K., Anaheim, CA

'Made $50,000 just fooling around'

"In February 1974 you sent me (for ten bucks) your Lazy Man's Way to Riches. Since then I have made approximately 50 grand ($50,000) just fooling around on the basis of your advice. You see, I really am lazy — otherwise I could have made 50 million! Thank you!"

Mr. R. McK., Atlanta, GA

'$24,000 in 45 days'

"...received $24,000.00 in the mail the last 45 days.

"Thanks again."

Mr. E.G.N., Matewan, W.VA

Made $70,000

"A $70,000 thanks to you for writing The Lazy Man's Way to Riches. That's how much I've made...

"I use this extra income for all of the good things in life, exotic vacations, classic automobiles, etc. Soon I hope to make enough to quit my regular job and devote full time to making money the easy way..."

Mr. D.R., Newport Beach, CA

Made enough to retire at 41

"Now, thanks to you and the 'Lazy Man's' program, I have made enough money (at age 41) to retire in style. Let me assure you that I have not 'come into' any money by inheritance or marriage or by any other means except through the practicing of your program..."

R.A., Huntington Beach, Calif.

$260,000 in eleven months

"Two years ago, I mailed you ten dollars in sheer desperation for a better life...One year ago, just out of the blue sky, a man called and offered me a partnership...I grossed over $260,000 cash business in eleven months. You are a God sent miracle to me."

B.F., Pascagoula, Miss.

'There's no stopping me'

"Since I've got your (Lazy Man's Way to Riches) in July, I've started 4 companies...there's no stopping me and I'm so high I need chains to keep me on the ground."

M.T. Portland, OR

$7,000 in five days

"Last Monday I used what I learned on page 83 to make $7,000. It took me all week to do it, but that's not bad for five day's work."

M.D., Topeka, Kansas

What I'm saying is probably contrary to what you've heard from your friends, your family, your teachers, and maybe everyone else you know.

I can only ask you one question.

How many of them are millionaires?

So it's up to you.

A month from today, you can be nothing more than 30 days older — or you can be on your way to getting rich. You decide.

The wisest man I ever knew told me something I never forgot: "Most people are too busy earning a living to make any money."

Don't take as long as I did to find out he was right.

I'll prove it to you, if you'll send in the coupon now. I'm not asking you to "believe" me. Just try it. If I'm wrong, all you've lost is a couple of minutes and a postage stamp. But what if I'm right?

PROOF!

Don't take my word for it. These are excerpts from articles in newspapers and magazines:

Is it all honest? A man who has done business with him says Karbo's reputation is excellent, and that he has managed to conduct mutually beneficial deals with him with nothing but a handshake and an oral agreement.
Want to be rich? Take my advice and follow his.

Boston Herald-American:
The book has drawn hundreds of letters from persons who have profited by it...

Los Angeles Herald-Examiner:
An unpretentious millionaire, Joe Karbo of Huntington Harbor is a vibrant, living testimonial to his intellectual, pragmatic conviction.

Forbes:
After bouncing around show biz, advertising, and real estate, he made his fortune...Last year (1972) he made $250,000.

Maybe Joe Karbo has the secret. Don't you think you owe it to yourself to find out what it is all about?...I just finished it — and I'm off on a vacation myself. Get the idea?

Singles Register:
Many people have tried to duplicate Joe...but they aren't even carbon copies. There's only one "JOE"!

Long Beach Independent:
He's programmed the path to riches for the lazy man.

Sworn Statement:
"On the basis of my professional relationship as his accountant, I certify that Mr. Karbo's net worth is more than one million dollars."

Joe, you may be full of beans, but what have I got to lose? Send me the Lazy Man's Way to Riches. But don't deposit my check or money order for at least 31 days after it's in the mail.

If I return your material — for any reason — within that time, return my uncashed check or money order to me. On that basis, here's my ten dollars.

In addition, we have re-created the famous Kennedy Eternal Flame Postage Stamp as originally issued by the United States Post Office in 1964 in its actual, original size complete with every pictorial detail faithfully reproduced by skilled craftsmen. Then, as a final touch to this unique commemorative collection, we have commissioned a memorial scroll excerpting President Kennedy's most quoted and stirring speech, "... ask not what your country can do for you; ask what you can do for your country..."

Each of these four magnificent pieces will then be electroplated with genuine 24-KARAT GOLD (.999 fine), and mounted in our attractive presentation case, accompanied by a serially numbered Certificate of Authenticity... guaranteeing that each coin has been mint-struck, uncirculated and designed and released by the U.S. Mint.

Unique Golden-Quad Commemorative The First of its Kind in Collectible History

Although other great men have been honored in coins and medals, we believe that this Golden-Quad brings a new dimension to "Collectibles" and we expect a previously unsurpassed demand to this strictly LIMITED EDITION offering. The fact that this set contains the uncirculated U.S. Minted Half-Dollar Coin, the exclusive Wellington Mint Presidential Medal, the re-created Eternal Flame Postage Stamp and the Famous Speech Scroll all of which are covered by PURE GOLD, almost certainly guarantees it becoming a most cherished collectible. One that every American family will take pride in owning, displaying and most certainly in passing along to their heirs and especially to the youth of our great country... those inheritors of the future America, to which John F. Kennedy dedicated his life.

Each Golden-Quad Set Includes Serially Numbered Certificate of Authenticity

You may be certain that each set will contain its own serially numbered Certificate of Authenticity attesting that each coin is in fact the actual, uncirculated, mint-struck edition designed and issued by the U.S. Treasury. We know that many people like yourselves and most collectors may desire lower serial numbers. Therefore the serial number you receive will be determined by the date we receive your order. Naturally, lowest assigned serial numbers are always shipped first. This may be especially important if you are ordering several sets to give to friends or loved ones as gifts or to pass on as treasured family heirlooms.

Strictly Limited Edition — First Time Available but Order Quickly to Avoid Disappointment

Although this is a BRAND NEW ISSUE, because of the World Wide popularity of JOHN F. KENNEDY we fully expect the demand to exceed our Limited Edition. Therefore, we urge you to order quickly... to insure that you will be able to own this unique collectible. Considering that this is the first time in history that a Golden-Quad commemorative of one of our nation's most inspiring and beloved leaders has ever been issued, we feel it is destined to become one of the most treasured collectibles you've ever acquired. Certainly one of the most impressive, richest looking commemoratives you will ever own and proudly display.

OFFERING LIMITED BY AMOUNT AND DATE TO INSURE ITS UNIQUE VALUE

Because of the magnificent beauty of this Golden-Quad Commemorative Collection and the enduring interest in the late President we expect a tremendous demand. In order to insure that this treasured memorial remains a unique and distinctive collectible, we have purposely established a severe double-limitation on the number of sets ever to be produced and offered for sale by our mint.

1. Under no circumstances will we produce more sets than matches one percent of the entire population of the United States. This means that only one out of every 100 people in this country will ever be able to acquire the Golden-Quad.
2. By Midnight, November 4, 1980, the 20th anniversary of John F. Kennedy's election to the Presidency, the dies for the Golden-Quad will be destroyed meaning that once the Limited Edition has been exhausted the set will only be available through dealers, collectors, auctions or private sale (... at whatever price the market will bear). To be sure you do not miss out, send the Priority Reservation form immediately.

IMPORTANT NOTE: 3 YEAR RE-PURCHASE POLICY

So certain are we that this extraordinary memorial set will be treasured for generations to come that we offer this iron-clad, double protection policy to help insure that your original investment in the GOLDEN-QUAD J.F.K. Commemorative Collection retains its original value.

1. You may return your J.F.K. Commemorative Collection within 30 days of purchase for a full refund.
2. If you hold your Commemorative Set for at least one year from date of purchase, The Wellington Mint will agree to buy it back for your original price PLUS A TEN PERCENT PROFIT at any time up to November 4, 1983.

All refunds are conditional on receiving sets in original condition and are exclusive of postage and handling.

Job vs. College

Q.: My husband and I are worried about our son. He graduates high school this year and has no idea what he wants to do with his life. He gets very good grades, and there's no problem about him getting into the state university. There's no money problem, either. But now he tells us that he's not going to college at all next fall. He's going to get his own apartment and drive a cab. What do we do?

A.: Get off his back. From what you say, your son sounds like a young man of great promise who just needs a little time to figure out what to do with all that promise. It's understandable that you want only the best for him, but what parents often forget is that young people need to learn and grow on their own.

Your son senses this. He knows he could do well in college, but he's not sure what's right for him. How many people are at 18? His only experience has been school, and he wants a taste of being on his own before making up his mind.

The Over-Mothered Plant

Q.: My beautiful jade plant is dying. It is getting all skinny and scrawny, and the leaves are dropping off. I water it every day, keep it in a sunny window and give it doses of plant food. What can I do?

A.: Leave it alone for a while. The jade is designed by nature to retain water in its fleshy leaves. It does not really need a great deal of sunlight. Try moving your ailing jade out of the direct sunlight and watering it only when the soil in the pot really feels dry and crumbly.

Family Jewels

Q.: A great-aunt died recently and left me her jewelry. It's mostly very old-fashioned stuff — a bar pin set with small diamonds, a lavaliere and several other pins and rings. I want to have the stones from these re-set into some jewelry for myself that I can wear today. Any ideas?

A.: Yes. Take the entire collection to a reputable jeweler whom you trust and ask for his expert opinion. It sounds as if these pieces may be very valuable and you may want to keep them in a safe-deposit box for investment reasons. Also, keep in mind that though these pieces are "old-fashioned," antique-looking clothes and jewelry are very popular these days, and your pieces may look great worn just as they are.

Party for New Neighbors

Q.: We've just moved into a new neighborhood, and I'd like to give a party for my new neighbors. They seem to be very friendly people, but, so far, none of them has invited us over, so I'd like to start the ball rolling. However, my husband thinks it would be "pushy." What do you think?

A.: Chances are your neighbors want to be friends as much as you do, but, as you say, somebody has to get the ball rolling. If you were to have a casual open house, people would probably be delighted. Make it a very simple party (A fancy dinner party would be a bit too pushy.) Plan it for a Saturday or Sunday afternoon, say 5:00 to 7:00, and serve a few refreshments with jug wine and soft drinks. Lay out a very simple buffet — whatever you do best. Your invitations might read: "Open house. Come in for a drink and a snack Saturday, March 29th, 5:00 to 7:00."

This kind of invitation puts no obligation on your neighbors, not even the responsibility of RSVP-ing. But be sure you send an invitation to everyone on the block or in your neighborhood.

Can a Landlord Raise the Rent?

Q.: We moved into this apartment a year ago and signed a three-year lease. Now the building has been sold, and the new landlord wants to raise our rent. Can he do that?

A.: He may be able to. Read your lease carefully. If it has a clause that says that the lease is valid even if the building changes hands, you're safe. If it doesn't, you may be in trouble. Your next move should be to consult a state or local consumer-protection agency to see whether there is some sort of rent-control law that applies in your case.

Gordie Howe Bids Hockey Fans Adieu

Wide World

The way he was: Howe, as a Red Wing, muscles toward a score.

By Mark Goodman

Once he reached his 50th birthday, Gordie Howe, the scourge of professional hockey for more than three decades, became very tired of answering longevity questions. "I'm nothing special," he would tell reporters. "I'll just retire at 65 like everybody else.

Of course, everybody else doesn't make a living by conducting civilized man's most uncivilized form of organized brutality on a pair of silver blades. When he was 21 and an emerging star with the National Hockey League's Detroit Red Wings, Howe was slammed into the boards and suffered a brain injury from which surgery barely saved him. Doctors told him he would never play hockey again — but he was back on the ice the following season.

Thirty years later, all of his teeth are gone, and some 500 stitches have been sewn into his face. He has broken three ribs, several toes, a wrist and a collarbone. His knees have been operated on three times, his elbow once. One collision alone left him with a fractured skull, cheekbone and nose. Another season he played 73 games with his wrist in a cast and still led the league in scoring. And yet, when he turned 50, he was still playing — this time for the World Hockey Association's (W.H.A.) New England Whalers — with a fractured thumb on one hand and a strapping son beside him.

Finally, gracefully, Gordie Howe, who will be 52 next week, has volunteered for early retirement. Like George Blanda, the fierce old gridiron warrior who survived 26 savage seasons of professional football, Howe has set records — official and unofficial — that will never be rivaled until the Bionic Age finally arrives. Beginning in 1946 — a year, for comparison, in which Ted Williams was busy hitting .342 — Howe has played more games than anyone in N.H.L. history (1,700-plus, and over 2,100, including his six seasons in the W.H.A.); he holds the records for most goals scored (roughly 800), most assists (over 1,000), total points (over 1,800), most times named the league's Most Valuable Player (6), most times leading the league in scoring (6) and, most All-Star games played in (23).

Also, like Blanda, Howe tried retirement, but it didn't wash. In 1971, at the vernal age of 43, he bowed out and moved up to the Detroit Red Wings' front office, which he found about as comfortable as skating in ski boots. "So many guys told me they'd quit too soon," he said. "I couldn't say that, eh? But I missed the game something terrible."

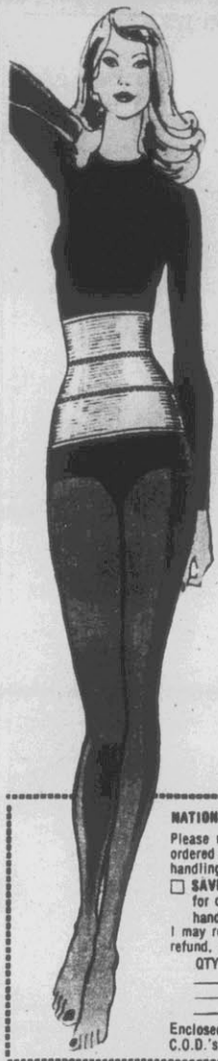

The game missed him, too, although not a few opponents who had felt the crack of his flailing stick and flying elbows, did not mourn his passing. For Howe was the embodiment of the dreaded hockey term, "enforcer." He was the man whose job it usually was to keep feisty rivals honest, to remind them — in hasty stitches and absent molars — of the heavy price they would have to pay for roughing up his teammates. This was an unusual role for a high-scorer; later, enforcer assignments would fall to rugged but marginal players who didn't have much beyond mayhem to offer on the ice.

Yet Howe was often accused of being too unselfish. Indeed, he just missed scoring 50 goals one year (when 50 was considered benchmark akin to baseball's 60 home runs) because he passed off to a teammate in a late-season game rather than take a clear shot himself. And unlike so many stars of today, who may want to save themselves a bit for the run of their long-term, staggeringly lucrative contracts, Howe played the game with the same driving intensity at 51 that he displayed at 21.

Gordie Howe

that the reason lay in Howe's own deep-seated uncertainties. "He was always worried he couldn't make the team," Lindsay remembers. "Every year he was tough on the other left-wings in training camp because of it. He lived to play the game, and nobody was going to get the job away from him. He would say, 'That guy isn't going to get my job. He'll do it over my body.'"

This from the man who once had a letter delivered to him that was simply addressed: "Mr. Hockey, Detroit, Mich." But Howe's beginnings were rocky enough to imbue him with a lifelong determination to rededicate himself totally each new season. One of nine children born to a Saskatchewan wheat-farming family, Gordie was a shy, awkward kid who seemingly did not have much promise. Like most hockey stars, Howe now has a certain fondness for telling glum tales of his icebound youth. "As a kid," he recalls, "all I owned were skates and a stick. I stuck magazines in my socks for shin pads. We played with tennis balls instead of a puck. We had to warm them in the oven, it got so cold in Saskatchewan." But young Gordie spent every spare moment he could find skating up and down the icy sloughs in the wheat fields — and practicing his autograph signature for the day when he would become a star.

When he got his first chance, however, with the New York Rangers, Gordie became so discouraged he walked out of camp. But he got another shot with the Red Wings — and nearly brawled his way out of the N.H.L. in one season. As his father, Ab Howe, now 87, still remembers it, "That first night he played for Detroit, I put my feet up by the radio and listened to the game, and pretty soon Gordie was in a fight, all right." In fact, he got into fights his first 10 games, until Detroit general manager Jack Adams finally called him in and asked, "Howe, you think you've got to beat up the entire league, player by player?"

But slowly, Howe began to establish himself — as a nonpareil stick-handler whose flickering wrist shot helped change the philosophy of shooting, and as an indefatigable skater. Says another famous colleague, Jean Beliveau. "His stamina, maybe that's what you remember best when you've played against him. He just kept going and going and going."

And going. For two full decades he finished among the top five scorers in the N.H.L. He also showed the last generation how to play for the pure joy of the game. Though Howe is wealthy now, he played for years for relative peanuts, by his own admission one of the worst negotiators in professional sports.

When Howe temporarily hung up his skates at 43, he was hailed as the greatest player in the history of the game and given a cushy job in the bargain. What brought him back onto the ice in 1973 at the age of 45? The irresistible lure to a proud father of getting the opportunity — unprecedented in the chronicle of team sport — to play beside his sons. The Houston Aeros of the maverick World Hockey Association had selected his boys, Marty and Mark, in the amateur draft, and Gordie beat coach Bill Dineen to the punch by asking for a chance to play.

Wide World

For anyone who thought it was just a publicity gimmick, Howe went on to score 100 points and lead the Aeros to a W.H.A championship. He was named the league's Most Valuable Player, while son Mark was named Rookie of the Year. Both boys proved to be fine hockey players in their own right, but they lived on the ice in a welcome shadow. When a rival enforcer decked Mark, Gordie calmly requested that he desist. "When he didn't," Marty recalls, "Gordie reached down, stuck his fingers into his nostrils and pulled him up off the ice."

The Howe family marauders later moved to Hartford and the N.H.L. Whalers. Gordie bought 16 acres of wood and field near Glastonbury, Conn., from which vantage point his wife, Colleen, an astute businesswoman, runs Howe Enterprises, a multimillion-dollar conglomerate that includes everything from endorsements to real estate to cattle-raising. Howe now lives there year-round (as does son Mark, who built his own house on the grounds).

In the past couple of years, playing alongside Mark (Marty was sent to the minors), Gordie has continued to shine as hockey's grand old man. And if he wasn't quite as flashy as the youngster who had bedeviled N.H.L. opponents in past years with his speed and stick-handling, young players found there's still some good hockey left in those creaking old bones. Indeed, in last month's N.H.L. All-Star game in Detroit, Howe received a standing ovation from 21,000 of his former hometown fans and then went on to notch an assist, lead his team to a 6-3 victory and finish second in the balloting for the game's Most Valuable Player.

Last year, when asked for the billionth time about retirement, Howe really thought about it for a moment, then quoted an old friend from Detroit days, Tiger slugger Al Kaline: "When you're walking to the ballpark and hoping to hear the game's been postponed, even if the sun is shining, you know you're near the end of your career."

That point has finally, sadly, come, but Gordie Howe wouldn't have people make too much of it. After all, at 52, he's retiring 13 years early. FW

PEOPLE QUIZ/By John E. Gibson

Could You Get More Fun From Life?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. You're only young once — and if you don't get your share of good times, you are likely to be shortchanged, since, at middle-age, fun and enjoyment are more elusive and less-often experienced.

2. Pleasure and enjoyment have a direct effect on your health and well-being.

3. There are six things that have a direct bearing on how much enjoyment you are getting out of life.

4. People who are so sure of their opinions that they seldom change their minds have the greatest capacity for much pleasure and enjoyment.

5. Some people lack the capacity to enjoy the good things in life and experience no pleasure, regardless of how much fortune favors them.

ANSWERS

1. False. A University of Louisville survey of hundreds of adults equally distributed among three generations — young, middle-aged and old, revealed that the generations did not differ either in self-reported happiness or opportunities for fun and enjoyment.

2. True. In research conducted by the National Institute of Mental Health, a study was made of the effects of pleasure and enjoyment — or the lack of them — on mental, physical and emotional well-being. More than 2,000 adults were asked: "How often do you feel that you are really enjoying life? Would you say very often, fairly often, occasionally, rarely or never?" Findings: Those who enjoyed life often were only one-third as likely to have problems with energy, appetite or sleep due to tensions as those who rarely enjoyed life.

3. True. The same study showed that satisfaction with housing, neighborhood, friends, occupation, marriage and children were each found to have a positive relationship with the enjoyment of life. It was noted that "those who are unhappy with one or more of these six life areas were four-times as likely to feel depressed on most days of a given week as those who are happy with all of the six life areas." There are three other enjoyment factors: being with happy people, being relaxed, having leisure time.

4. False. Studies at the California School of Professional Psychology indicated that people who make good scores on tests designed to measure open-mindedness — appreciation and tolerance for people's beliefs and concepts that differ from one's own — have significantly greater capacity for deriving pleasure and enjoyment from the good things in life. The opposite was found to hold true for persons who lacked these characteristics and were dogmatic in their attitudes and beliefs.

5. True. Psychologists term this inability to experience the feeling of pleasure and enjoyment anhedonia. Findings from a study conducted by behavioral scientists at the University of Chicago and the Illinois State Psychiatric Institute emphasized the lack of pleasure in interpersonal situations pertaining to anhedonia — which often results in a withdrawal from social situations and a stand-offish attitude toward people in general. Anhedonia is viewed as a "a long-term, or trait-life feature, often present since childhood." And its presence may explain why some persons are difficult to get close to and take little or no pleasure from the company of others. FW

Plastic Coat Your Car In Less Than 1 Hour FOR ONLY $9.95

NEW CAR DEALERS CHARGE UP TO $200

POLYMER ACRYLIC ACTUALLY RESURFACES AND RESEALS IN ONE SIMPLE STEP. GIVES YOUR CAR "SHOWROOM" BRILLIANCE THAT LASTS THREE YEARS—GUARANTEED!

Now at last you can put an end to corrosion, chalking, rusting, dulling, and pitting of your car's finish. GLO-SHIELD can protect your car's finish and restore it, too! You can bring back that new car look in less than 1 hour with hardly any effort at all! Too good to be true? Not with GLO-SHIELD, the miracle polymer plastic sealant that's guaranteed to protect and/or restore your car's finish for three years. Yes! you can revitalize and restore dull oxidized finishes...just wipe on — wipe off. Do away with compounding... dead paint is chemically removed. Just wipe on—wipe off. GLO-SHIELD removes old waxes, tar, stains, tree sap, road film, dirt, bird deposits, grime, grease, gasoline streaks, rusting, even tarnish. GLO-SHIELD deposits a plastic film that fuses to the surface and fills the pores to give your car a hard, high lustre, mirror-like finish. Just wipe on—wipe off.

NOTHING LIKE ANYTHING YOU'VE EVER USED BEFORE

Don't confuse this product with any wax or polish. GLO-SHIELD is a clear, transparent liquid, when, after it strips old wax and grime away, actually deposits a film that's very similar to the acrylic lacquer your car was originally painted with. And it works even if your car was painted with enamel. Acrylic sticks to anything... but nothing sticks to acrylic! Not tree sap, not road salt, not grime or dirt, not even bird droppings, grease, gasoline —, not even paint.

- THIS IS AN ACRYLIC PRODUCT DO NOT CONFUSE WITH IMITATIONS!
- NO RUBBING! NO BUFFING!
- CLEANS, COMPOUNDS, POLISHES, SEALS!
- USE ON ANY PAINT FINISH!
- FAST, ONE STEP WIPE-ON, WIPE- OFF!

And, GLO-SHIELD's protective coating that you apply in under one hour lasts three years. All you have to do to keep the finish beautiful is a light hosing...even a light rain, and road dirt, salt and grime roll right off, and dries streak free. GLO-SHIELD is detergent proof, contains no abrasives, invisible, non-yellowing, peelproof and crystal clear.

Here's an added plus. GLO-SHIELD works its magic on all painted and plated surfaces...chrome bumpers, mag wheels, appliances, motorcycles, fiberglass boats formica, marine hardware, brass, plexiglass, stainless steel, aluminum, etc.

So put an end to laborious waxing and polishing...get GLO-SHIELD the one step, wipe on—wipe off refinisher that gives your car a three year finish...free from dirt, grime, smudges. Order yours today!

ACCEPTED AND PROVEN FOR AIRPLANES AND BOATS

After extensive testing GLO-SHIELD has been accepted and used by America's leading aircraft manufacturers and leading boat builders. Desert sunshine labs report amazing results from testing (reports available on request). GLO-SHIELD has been shown to be especially effective while operating in a salt water environment and highly recommended by boat centers for use on all boats, including fiberglass.

Enough for 2 average cars. $9.95 (less than $5 per car). Fleet owners write on letterhead for quantity prices.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

The Two-Career Family

As more women join the working world, the problems and joys of the dual-career marriage are providing new ground for study. "Dual-career couples face a unique set of problems," remarks Louise Sandmeyer, a counselor at Pennsylvania State University. "Each partner has to feel confidence and trust in the other when it comes to making decisions that affect both their marriage and their careers."

Compromise and communication are the most necessary skills for a dual-career couple. "It's important for them to explore how they feel about such areas as career advancement, child care and division of labor in the home," says Sandmeyer. "Waiting for stress points to occur is not the best time for discussing values. It's better to plan ahead."

Although she feels that dual-career marriages suffer special stresses, Sandmeyer also believes that the rewards are great. "There's often a real sense of sharing," she says, "without one person feeling dependent on the other for all the joys and satisfactions in life."

Out In The Wilds

Summer camp is an experience usually reserved exclusively for kids, but the National Wildlife Federation has dreamed up a unique series of summer-camp vacations for the entire family. Each year, the nonprofit organization sponsors Conservation Summits, week-long programs that include wildlife and environmental courses in areas such as nature photography, outdoor cooking, backpacking basics and astronomy.

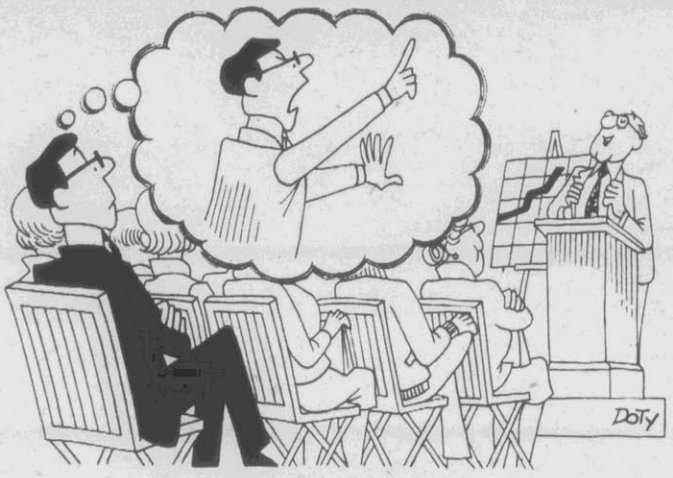

The Summits are held in conference centers in the Blue Ridge Mountains, the Rocky Mountains, the Adirondacks and on Wisconsin's Green Lake, and families have the option of staying at the site's accommodations or camping in nearby campgrounds. Children, teen-agers and adults each take part in special programs, and baby-sitting is provided at each site.

Silent America

Maybe the so-called "silent majority" wouldn't be quite so quiet if they'd been expected to speak up in school. "People feel powerless about government partly because they've had no training and no experience changing anybody's mind through reasoned argument," says Dr. Tony Clark, a University of Florida speech professor. "We need to add rhetoric to the three R's of learning."

Clark feels that "it's not just speaking, but the whole presentation of ourselves, that often inhibits us. So, instead of teaching specific skills, we teach people to try and go beyond their own, self-imposed boundaries. We do this by encouraging a person to visualize a threat-producing situation in detail ahead of time. Then we ask him to break it down into elements and figure out at what point he gets apprehensive. Then we get him to relax in any way that allows him to purge his body of stress. Gradually, he conditions himself to relax during those stressful situations."

Clark says that results don't happen overnight, but that with time, most people can overcome their apprehensions. All it takes is a little practice.

What Are The Rules?

We all live by rules, but sometimes it's hard to remember all the ones we're supposed to follow. And occasionally rules are disputed. Now there's The Rule Book (Doubleday), created especially for all those vexing times when you can't remember how to seat foreign dignitaries in their limousines or how to survive during an earthquake or how to respond when someone challenges your formula for converting miles to kilometers.

"The book started as a serious project," explains Stephen Kirschner, one of its three authors. "But the more research we did, the more humor we saw in a lot of the rules we all follow. The book is really a commentary on society, past and present. And we also see it as a service. After all, we all forget the rules at times."

Lifestyles

Alcohol. Two-thirds of the people in this country are aware of reports that alcohol consumption by expectant mothers can cause fetal damage, notes a survey commissioned by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. More than 80 percent of those surveyed felt that pregnant women should not have more than one drink a day, and one-third of the people polled favored putting a warning label on alcoholic beverage containers as a means of informing the public about fetal alcohol syndrome.

Census. Cardboard desks are what many Census Bureau employees will be working at as they process the 1980 census. The desks, which cost eight dollars each and can be assembled in 10 minutes, hold up to 150 pounds and have a lifespan of four to six months.

Doctors. Since 1960, the number of physicians practicing in this country has been increasing at a considerably faster rate than the general population. In 1960 there were approximately 14 doctors for every 10,000 people; today there are 20. However, doctors aren't distributed evenly throughout the country. In 1976 the Northeast had 20.6 physicians per 10,000 people, while the South had only 13.8. Metropolitan areas were served by 19.3 doctors per 10,000 population, while rural areas had 8.
