No Response Inside Capsized Oil Rig

By JOHN GALE
Associated Press Writer
STAVANGER, Norway (AP) — Divers hammered on the hull of an upside-down North Sea oil rig containing a floating hotel for workers today looking for survivors of the worst disaster in the North Sea oilfields. With 81 men reported dead or missing, the biggest rescue operation since World War II was underway with more than 2,000 people manning scores of ships, planes and helicopters.

Divers dropped 90 feet to check for signs of life in the platform's submerged living quarters. They were using underwater television cameras to check the hull. "They are hammering on the hull, but so far there has been no response from inside," said Per Erik Bjorklund, spokesman for the Phillips Petroleum Co. which leased the 10,000-ton Alexander I. Kielland. "We are giving every priority to the search for survivors." Tugboats were standing by to latch onto the rig. Norwegian helicopters ferried dozens of survivors to hospitals here. Most escaped serious injury and were treated for exposure. It was estimated there were 230 workers on board the rig when one of the five legs collapsed Thursday night during a storm that produced winds up to 60 mph and 20-foot waves. The rig listed briefly before overturning in 240-foot deep icy water 100 miles west of Norway.

The latest figures from the Norwegian rescue center at this coastal port was 53 men missing, 28 bodies recovered and a total 149 workers rescued. "We have never had accidents like this to my knowledge in any part of the world," said Bill Boys, Phillips' Norway manager. At least 46 ships were deployed in the search over 4,000 square miles in the Edda oilfield on Norway's Continental Shelf. Planes and helicopters from Britain,

West Germany, Denmark and Norway joined the rescue. Most of the estimated 230 rig workers aboard were working, sleeping in the hotel or watching a movie when the rig capsized Thursday night in a storm. "There was an almighty crack ... then chaos," said Tony Sylvester, a British rig worker briefly trapped in the hotel's movie theater. "It suddenly toppled right over and everybody was in the sea," said Sylvester, 35, a father of three from Grimsby, England. "Everybody was climbing up to the top that could make it and clinging on. Nobody knew what to do."

Many of the missing were feared trapped in the overturned rig, particularly inside the movie theater. Only those who managed to reach air pockets might still be alive.

In London, the British Foreign Office said among those aboard the platform were 170 Norwegians, 35 Britons, three Finns, 1 Spaniard and 1 Portuguese.

Eleven-Month Wait

Ready To Sign 'Windfall Tax'

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — After 11 months of pleading with Congress, President Carter is eager to sign a compromise $227.7 billion "windfall" tax on the oil industry. "You can leave the ribbons off this one in order to get it down here," the president said Thursday in a telephone call to Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia and Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., manager of the bill. "This is good news for the country and, I think, good news for the whole world."

Carter said after the Senate completed congressional action on the tax by passing it 66-31. Elsewhere on Capitol Hill, the news was not so good for Carter. A House Commerce subcommittee voted 17-3 to restrict funds for the Energy Department to carry out his plan to impose a $10.3 million import fee on imported oil and have all of it reflected in a 10-cent per gallon increase in gasoline prices. But the amendment proposed by the subcommittee has a long way to go before becoming law. Moreover, Carter's press secretary said the president has vowed to veto the Energy Department authorization bill if it has the import fee restriction in it by the time the measure reaches his desk. The windfall tax bill, however, could reach Carter's desk as early as today — after technicians put it in proper form. The tax, a major part of Carter's energy program, will take for the government $227.7 billion of the estimated $1 trillion in additional charges consumers will pay the oil industry in the 1980s because of the president's decision to end price controls on U.S. crude oil. After other federal and state taxes are subtracted, the industry will be left with an estimated $221 billion it would not have had under continued controls. In addition to imposing the new tax on oil producers and owners of oil lands, the bill allocates 60 percent — $137 billion — of the money for income tax reductions that could come later this year. But this does not ensure there will be a tax cut. That would require subsequent legislation. Similarly, an additional 25 percent, or $57 billion, is set aside for helping the poor cope with rising energy costs in the years after 1981. The measure separately spends $3.1 billion for such assistance in 1981. The remaining 15 percent of the tax is earmarked for energy and transportation development.

White Paper

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee is likely to vote next week to produce an official "white paper" setting out the factual record of relations between the United States and Iran during the reign of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said such a factual record is not likely to result in harm to the American hostages at the U.S. embassy in Tehran. "I have seen demands (from Iran) for an acknowledgement that the United States did this or that" while the shah was in power, Vance said. "A factual setting out of these relations would be appropriate and possibly helpful." A ranking committee aide who asked not to be identified by name said that while the report is "definitely, absolutely not a report on the sins and transgressions of the shah," it might nonetheless have a "beneficial effect" on the hostage situation. In the first place, he said, setting out the complete record of U.S.-Iranian relations likely will show that the United States was "not all bad." In the second place, he said, the report might be the sort of thing Iranian moderates could seize on to show that the United States was getting out front in an effort to set the record straight.

Never Intended Rescue Men On Fire Trucks, Says Former Mayor Cox

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Former Greenville Mayor Percy Cox last night told a group of some 150 to 200 persons, gathered to support the Greenville Rescue Squad, that troubles with the squad began with petty problems, but emphasized that action taken by the former council to cure the problems and to cross-train fire and rescue personnel, "never...intended for rescue men to be put on fire trucks." It was that action by the present city administration, former paid and volunteer rescue men indicated last night — assigning trained and experienced rescue officers to fire units and replacing them with firemen with little or no experience — that led to the disbanding of the volunteer rescue squad and the resignation of some of the most experienced and well trained paid rescue officers. John Conway, a former paid member of the rescue squad presided at last night's session, designed to rally support for more efficient rescue service in Greenville. Brent Stocks, former head of the rescue volunteers, reviewed the history of rescue service in Greenville.

from 1948, when the first rescue truck was purchased and the organization of the volunteer group in 1955, to the present. He noted that the local squad was the first unit in the state to have paid men on duty 24 hours a day to respond to calls, the first United States squad ever to win an International Rescue Championship, and the first squads in the State to have female members on competition teams. He noted that since 1961, teams from Greenville have won more than 35 state and international trophies for first aid and rescue competition. Stocks noted too, that the North Carolina Rescue College had its birth in Greenville in 1962, and that the Greenville squad helped organize rescue units in Bethel, Grifton, Ayden, Washington, New Bern and Goldsboro. He added that last year, ef-

Arrest No. 15
Greenville Police yesterday arrested Andrew Christopher Smith, 20 of Route 1, McLeansville, on charges of possession of cocaine with the intent to sell. Chief Glenn Cannon said Smith was charged in connection with an undercover operation by Greenville officers and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation which has resulted in the arrest of 14 other persons this week. Smith, just as 12 of the others, is an East Carolina University student. His bond was set at $10,000 pending a hearing in District Court.

Industrial Waste Spill In Collision Of Trucks

WINDSOR, N.C. (AP) — State environmental officials were trying today to identify industrial wastes spilled Thursday when several barrels broke open in a truck collision. Jerry Clayton of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development's Environmental Management Division said state officials were at the scene of the accident compiling a list of chemicals that spilled. He said none of the wastes spilled onto the road. The accident happened when a tractor-trailer and a smaller truck collided on U.S. 17, two miles north of Windsor. No one was injured in the accident. A Highway Patrol spokesman said "some of the wastes" are corrosive, some are toxic. "He said no radioactive wastes were involved. "The materials spilled within the trailer itself. None have been expelled to the exterior of the truck," the patrol spokesman said. "There has been a rupture to several containers, how many we don't know. There were 80 self-contained containers in the trailer," the spokesman said. The patrol identified the tractor-trailer driver as Steve Bostic of Eastover, S.C. He reportedly was traveling from Connecticut to a waste dump in Alabama. The wreckage of the truck blocked a section of U.S. 17 Thursday afternoon, but was pulled off the highway and on to a rural road.

Prime Rate Inching Up Near 20 Percent Level

NEW YORK (AP) — Citibank, the nation's second-largest bank, today raised its prime lending rate to a record 19 1/4 percent. The increase in the rate charged on loans to the most credit-worthy corporate customers was the sixth during March. Rates have shot upward as the government has moved to tighten credit as a means of fighting inflation and slowing the economy. The rate had been 19 percent, a rate first charged 10 days ago. In mid February the rate was 15 1/4 percent, but it began moving up sharply after the Federal Reserve Board again tightened credit. It stood at 16 1/4 percent at the beginning of March. The new increase makes it even more expensive for businesses to raise cash. Many commercial and industrial firms must pay rates higher than the prime rate, with some now paying effective rates of more than 25 percent. The prime rate does not directly affect the rates on consumer loans, and in many states those rates are now far below the prime rate as a result of state usury laws. President Carter has called for limitations of consumer credit and he and the Federal Reserve Board have acted to make it more expensive to extend such credit. As a result, many banks and other lenders have imposed new restrictions on such credit, making it more difficult to obtain. Before last August, the prime rate had never risen above 12 percent, the peak set during the 1974 credit crunch. But since August the rate has moved up frequently and many analysts think it will top 20 percent within a few weeks.

Director Of Greenville Art Center Steps Down

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
The resignation of Mrs. Edith Walker as Director of the Greenville Art Center was accepted at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the East Carolina Art Society, the Center's governing board, at its monthly meeting for March held Thursday night. Mrs. Blanche Monroe, president of the Board of Directors, read Mrs. Walker's letter of resignation, in which Mrs. Walker asked that her resignation be accepted at the earliest possible date. She did not indicate reasons for offering her resignation. A first motion, not to accept the resignation, but to ask Mrs. Walker to reconsider her decision, was defeated, and the second motion to accept the resignation passed. Mrs. Monroe will shortly appoint a Search Committee to seek applicants for the director's position. This committee will also have the responsibility to evaluate applications and to choose a new director from the applicants. Mrs. Walker has been the Center's director for more than 14 years. She accepted the directorship on November 1, 1960. In another action, the board approved a motion to invite the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council to consider use of space at the Greenville Art Center building as the Council's office.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a straight "A" high school student (girl) who has always wanted to be a nurse. When I told my high school counselor that I had chosen nursing, he seemed disappointed, and asked, "Why?"

I told him I wanted to help people, and he said, "With your brains, you should consider medicine, all a nurse does is carry bedpans and follow the doctor's orders."

Now I'm confused. What is your opinion?

PLANNING MY FUTURE

DEAR PLANNING: Nursing is one of the most interesting and rewarding professions a caring person could choose. As a nurse, you may indeed carry a bedpan; but you will also comfort a frightened child, calm and reassure an anxious patient, alert a physician to a change in a patient's condition, teach people how to care for themselves, and much, much more. And you can do these in a variety of settings—hospitals, clinics, physicians' offices, schools, public health agencies and in private practice.

Talk with your school nurse or contact a school of nursing in your community for information about professional nursing. Then share that information with your high school counselor. He has a lot to learn!

DEAR ABBY: I am a 45-year-old woman who has always had a very deep voice. I think it is getting deeper with age, because I am being called "sir" more frequently when I talk on the telephone.

Can you think of something snappy I can say to correct these people who call me "sir" without embarrassing them too much?

GETTING IN DEEPER

DEAR GETTING: Skip the correction unless it's important for the gender-bender to know whether you're a "sir" or a "madame."

DEAR ABBY: I went out to dinner recently with friends and asked for a doggie bag for the leftover rolls, as I heard that according to the laws, once a basket of rolls is placed on your table, they are not to be served to anyone else.

My friend said I was mistaken—that bread and dinner rolls should not be taken home. I left the crackers because they were individually wrapped in cellophane and could be used again.

Who is right?

MARGARET H.

DEAR MARGARET: You are.

Court Refuses Bar Surcharge Action

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge Thursday denied the state's request for an injunction blocking automobile insurance surcharges scheduled to take effect in July, saying any further action is up to the legislature.

Judge E. Maurice Braswell denied the request Thursday, saying any changes in the law authorizing the North Carolina Reinsurance Facility and its ability to recover losses should be handled by the legislature.

By law, the facility must insure any motorist who cannot obtain required insurance through normal channels. A 1977 law says the facility may make neither a profit nor a loss.

"The facility is not private, but created for the public by the legislature. It seems appropriate to say this act of the legislature ... is a fit subject to be considered by another session of the legislature," Braswell said.

"If the public perceives that the act is causing them an unreasonable or unbearable sum of money, then it is up to the legislature to consider changing it."

Braswell denied similar requests on three other surcharges in February. The attorney general's office has appealed those cases to the North Carolina Court of Appeals.

The judge noted Thursday that the facility has lost money and suggested that some people may not be able to get insurance in the future if the losses continue.

"People may be forced to stop driving not because of gas or insurance prices, but because insurance companies can no longer do business in North Carolina," the judge said.

Solution: Basic Remedial Programs

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Black students' scores on school achievement tests can be raised if school officials and teachers are willing to use basic remedial programs, a University of North Carolina researcher says.

Dr. Ron Haskins, investigator at UNC's Frank Porter Graham Child Development Center, says several school systems in the country have shown substantial improvements among low-income black students after five to 10 years of continuous remedial programs.

In 1979, 97 percent of North

Carolina's white junior high school students passed the reading portion of the competency test, while only 79 percent of black juniors passed, Haskins said. The difference between blacks and whites was even greater on the mathematics section of the test.

"It's hard to tell whether differences in test scores are associated with race or income," he said, adding that white students from poor families show the same basic school problems as low-income blacks.

"But the fact is inescapable that low-income blacks and whites score lower on achievement tests beginning in kindergarten. And the longer they stay in the school system, the larger the gap becomes between them and middle-income whites," Haskins said.

He said his studies on regrouping in the primary grades show it can help students. He said low-scoring students who were placed in work groups within their own classrooms received more teacher attention.

"But they also get exposed to less new material," he said, "because the teacher uses more drill with these students while the rest of the students go on to other things. As a result, the low achievers fall even further behind."

Haskins said junior high remedial programs can bring many students up to grade level.

cause money goes to things other than direct instruction."

He said research and experience show that remedial programs can work throughout a child's school years.

"Dramatic and sudden changes in school programs are not going to bring dramatic and sudden changes in student performance," he said. "But if schools are willing to implement changes gradually and stick with them for a good five to 10 years, these differences (in grades) can be reduced."

"It appears to me that the key to successful remediation lies in good teachers working intensively with small groups," he said. "A lot of federally funded remedial programs fail be-

Three In El Salvador Govm't Flee Country

By GORDON D. MOTT Associated Press Writer

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Three senior members of El Salvador's government, including an architect of its sweeping land reform plan, have quit and fled the country to protest the regime's inability to halt the political violence that has taken at least 27 lives in the past two days.

Economics Minister Oscar Menjivar, Education Minister Eduardo Colindre and Deputy Agriculture Minister Jorge Villacorta left Thursday after submitting their resignations to the military-civilian junta because it was "unable to stop the repression."

There was no comment from the junta as it struggled with the rising tide of violence from both the left and right.

Menjivar, a Christian Democrat, and Villacorta, an independent, went to Costa Rica.

while Colindre, a Christian Democrat, went to Mexico. The Christian Democrats are the chief political supporters of the junta and two of the three civilian members are leaders of the party.

Villacorta was one of the drafters of the land redistribution program initiated by the government nearly three weeks ago to divide large farms among the peasants. A U.S. land reform expert said the government has expropriated 50 to 60 percent of this Central American nation's largest estates. But he said it was not yet clear whether the authorities would move quickly enough in taking over smaller farms to defuse mounting tensions.

Meanwhile, thousands continued to file past the coffin of Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero, the most prominent victim of the political warfare. His body lay in state in the Metropolitan Cathedral where he will be buried after a funeral Mass on Sunday.

The archbishop, an outspoken critic of the military and defender of the nation's poor, was killed Monday by a sharpshooter's bullet fired through the open doors of a hospital chapel where he was preparing to say Mass.

Judge To Speak At Luncheon

Karen Galloway, Judge for the 14th Judicial District of North Carolina, is to be guest speaker at the anniversary luncheon of the Eastern North Carolina Regional Association of Black Social Workers on Saturday, March 29. The luncheon will be at Abrams Barbecue on North Greene Street and will begin at 1 p.m. Registration and payment for the meal can be made at that time. The event is being held in conjunction with observing March as Social Work Month.

Human Services Workshop Held

A workshop entitled "Working with groups" was held recently at the Willis Building in Greenville. Margaret J. French, chairperson of the human services technology program at Pitt Community College conducted the workshop.

The program was co-sponsored by the personal and family training program of UNC-Chapel Hill. Topics discussed included the leader as a person, leadership styles, types of groups, phases of group development, roles assumed in groups, and principles of design.

Participants were case workers for the Department of Social Services from several eastern North Carolina counties.

Teacher Pay Sights Set

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Spokesmen for teachers and some other state employees said Thursday they will seek pay raises of about 13 percent to 15 percent.

That amount exceeds the 10 percent expected to be recommended by Gov. Jim Hunt this year.

"We have a mandate from our annual convention to seek a 15 percent pay raise," said Edward B. Ellis Jr., spokesman for the North Carolina State Government Employees Association.

Lloyd Isaacs, executive director of the North Carolina Association of Educators, said the group would consider anything less than a full cost-of-living increase, or about 13 percent, a salary decrease.

But W.H. Lyon of the 24,000-member North Carolina State Employees Association expressed a different view. Lyon said he believes "generally the 10 percent would be acceptable to our people."

Meanwhile, Hunt promised retired schoolteachers in Greensboro that he would seek the same pay raise for them as he would seek for regular schoolteachers.

He said the increase would be at least 10 percent but he would not specify an amount.

"I have called for a double digit salary increase for state employees and teachers," Hunt said. "I strongly believe our retired state employees and teachers deserve equal treatment. I am committed to providing the same adjustment for retired educators as those received by regular state employees and teachers."

The governor also promised the retirees their health care benefits would not lag because of inflation.

Perform A 2nd Time

Sunday at 7:30 p.m. the Young Adult Choir of Memorial Baptist Church, directed by Hal Melton, will give its final performance of a new musical drama titled, "The Witness."

Since the choir's initial performance of the program in October, they have been invited to perform it in Cary, Kinston, Tarboro and Goldsboro. The demand for a second performance in Greenville brought about this Sunday's presentations.

"The Witness" focuses on the apostle Peter and his account of the three-year journey he made with Jesus, from the shores of the Sea of Galilee to the ascension. During this period, Peter's relationship with Jesus grew from companion to disciple to apostle.

The presentation will be held in the sanctuary of Memorial Baptist Church, 1510 Greenville Blvd. The public is invited to attend this free performance.

One Year Later

A year ago today, a serious accident occurred at a nuclear power plant in Pennsylvania. Radioactive steam leaking into the air forced many people living in the area to leave their homes. One year later, the plant is still closed down, and the problem of cleaning up after the accident remains. As part of the process, power company officials want to release more radioactive gas into the air. They also must decide what to do with a million gallons of radioactive water still trapped in the plant's containment building, before they can get to the damaged reactor. The clean-up is expected to take several years.

DO YOU KNOW — At what nuclear power plant did this accident occur?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — The Bureau of Standards is an agency of the Commerce Department.

FORMER COMMANDANT... of West Point General William Westmoreland checks the insignia-filled battle jacket of Anita Bryant, while taping the Anita Bryant family television special at West Point. Jacket items were obtained during her seven trips with Bob Hope entertaining troops overseas.

Anita Bryant TV Special To Air Saturday Night

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — "This is something I am really excited about — two hours of God and country, a musical celebration of America. It shows not only my faith in the Lord, but to encourage from a historical point of view, the things that are right in America and to encourage Americanism," said Anita Bryant.

Ms. Bryant was describing her special television show to be aired in Greenville, N. C., tomorrow evening from nine to 11 o'clock on WNCT-TV, Channel 9. The show is being presented by Anita Bryant Ministries.

"It's not only entertaining, we are able to present, for instance, Lu Lu Roman of 'Hee Haw,' who will tell what the Lord has done in her life through singing and sharing, in Sun Valley, Idaho. I show my family skiing and sledding in the snow. A nostalgia segment shows Tex Beneke and Chapter Five. Bob Hope also shares in the special and shows footage of our seven trips overseas with his Christmas shows entertaining servicemen," Ms. Bryant continued.

In Ohio on a river boat called "Lorene," Pat Boone sings and shares about his family. The Imperials sing their Grammy winning song "Sail On." "At West Point, we show the cadets and the Glee Club sings. My special guest is General William Westmoreland, who makes some profound statements about America and where she is headed.

"At the close of the program, I am at Freedoms Foundation, Valley Forge, Pa., singing "Battle Hymn of the Republic" in the rain. Throughout the special, I sing pop, patriotic and sacred songs along with my testimonies," she added.

Efrem Zimbalist Jr. will, be serving as the show host.

Ms. Bryant has been conducting telephone interviews on a daily basis whenever the show will be aired and has been making some personal appearances. "Our goal is getting it shown on 211 stations across the country during the next two months. It's time to have a positive program — it's better to be on the offense instead of the defensive.

"Through the entertainment vehicle, we are showing a positive approach to what's wrong in America. I believe we need to get back to God's principle — live it and share it in government, entertainment, churches and homes throughout all of life; it's not enough to stand and stop evil, but then you must move in a positive approach to share the hope. The answer is to change hearts and lives in a nation to come back to God, because that's what the

A Humanitarian Move

Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, the deposed Shah of Iran, has moved on again, this time from Panama to Egypt.

Clearly an ill man, the shah apparently was not happy with his life in exile in Panama and he wanted to be in a Moslem country once again. Thus he took up President Anwar Sadat's offer to fly to Egypt for medical treatment.

The move represents some risks for Sadat since it further alienates him from his Arabic neighbors, and no doubt made Iran's Khomeini furious.

It is too bad if Ayatollah Khomeini is unhappy about the move, but all the people he can herd to the front of the United States embassy won't wipe out the gravity of the international crime he has committed.

The movement of the shah to Egypt creates a new factor in the current stand-off over the illegal holding of U. S. hostages in Iran. There is always the possibility that it could create new problems for Sadat and Egypt, but the president is known as a risk-taker and he has won many times on such gambles.

We think history will judge the willingness of Egypt to take the shah in for treatment as a humanitarian move. It will be seen as one which showed the unpredictable government in Iran that the world was virtually solid in its condemnation of Iran's crime.

MAY BE HIS ONLY DEBATE OF THE CAMPAIGN!

Family Of 4 Needs $250

By George Gallup
PRINCETON, N.J. — President Carter's March 14 announcement of his anti-inflation package came none too soon in view of the American public's perceptions of the cost of living.

Across the country people now believe it takes $250 a week for a family of four to make ends meet. This median estimate — a record high — is based on the Gallup Poll's 1980 cost-of-living audit.

People seem to have an uncanny feeling for the realities of double-digit inflation. The difference between the public's perception of living costs in 1979 and in 1980 closely parallels the 13 percent inflation rate for 1979 as measured by the government's Consumer Price Index.

The trend since the inception of the cost-of-living audit in 1937 is presented below.

Year	Minimum Amount Needed For A Family Of Four (non-farm families) Median estimate
1980	$250
1979	223
1978	201
1977	199
1976	177
1975	161
1974	152
1973	149
1971	127
1969	120
1967	101
1964	81
1959	79
1957	72
1954	60
1951	50
1947	43
1937	30

But Regional Differences Muted

The current results indicate that inflation has hit home equally hard in all sections of the country. In the Midwest and South the median estimates are both $249, whereas Easterners and Westerners feel it takes almost the same amount of money — $252 — to subsist from week to week. In the past, region has often made a difference, with the South being cheaper and the West more expensive.

The size of the community in which Americans live makes a big difference as it has in past years. Residents of the nation's largest cities (1 million people or more) say it would take $300 a week to keep a family of four going. People living in rural areas and small towns (under 2,500 inhabitants) report that a family could get by on but $223 weekly in their communities.

The 1980 median estimates according to region and city size are presented here.

Region/City Size	Minimum Amount Needed For A Family Of Four (non-farm families)
NATIONAL	$250
East	252
Midwest	249
South	249
West	252
1 million and over	300
500,000-999,999	298
50,000-499,999	250
2,500-49,999	248
Under 2,500, rural	223

The second question asked in the audit series is as follows:

"What is the smallest amount of money YOUR family needs each week to get along in this community?"

The results here were — for four-person households — no different from those based on

It Takes An Election Year

When you think about it, it apparently takes an election year and inflationary times to get Official Washington moving on balancing the budget.

But it is happening this year with President Carter talking about budget cuts of some $15.5 billion to bring about a balanced budget.

Usually when budget cuts are made the politicians start with direct services so the public will feel them.

Maybe, if the campaigning gets heavy enough this year the cuts will be made in the "soft" areas of government. We might start an entirely new concept.

THIS AFTERNOON

Taking New Shape

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The off-again, on-again momentum for North Carolina law to implement citizen initiative of new or amended law, and for recall elections aimed at derelict public officials now seems to be gaining strength.

It has been obvious for some time that the tax rebellion in several North Carolina counties battling soaring property taxes and values as a result of governmental revaluations were beginning to move into additional areas of concern.

As the splintered local groups began to join forces from the mountains to the Piedmont to the Sandhills, talking together and exchanging ideas, the notion emerged that the true mission was to become more citizen involvement, control, and interest in local and state government.

Protesting taxes is one thing. Slashing spending, programs and out-of-control growth, it became obvious, is the most effective long-range method of bringing an increasingly headstrong government to heel.

Burke
In Burke County, where the revaluation protests first captured public notice, the beginnings of a group called the North Carolina Property Owners and Taxpayers Association has been announced by Keith Brown, one of the original protest leaders.

Petitions are now being circulated statewide for both the initiative and recall measures; two significant changes in the way governmental business is done in North Carolina at both the state and local levels, and wtops which, if implemented, would return into the hands of citizens considerably more clout than ever before to launch change and chape direction.

And while those who support initiative and recall do so because of that element of increased control, the opposition stems from that same element.

Twenty-three states already have provisions for citizens to draw up legislative proposals for action by the voters. California's procedure is best known, and elections invariably produce a laundry list of "propositions" which, if endorsed, take effect as law. Proposition 13 is the most famous of those.

What is the outlook for action in this state? Low-key efforts at initiative and recall measures have been pushed in the General Assembly before, with a notable absence of support from governmental agencies or elected officials. The upcoming legislative session in June is limited to budget matters, so the first round must wait until 1981. Meanwhile, candidates now running for the General Assembly to serve in that session are being grilled on the question.

Gov. Jim Hunt was asked the other day if he would support, oppose, or stand neuter, did not come down strongly in favor of such mechanisms, but conceded that they could be effective in giving valuable citizen input into government.

The New Army Perils

WASHINGTON — You would think with the new emphasis on catching up with the Soviets, everyone at the Pentagon would be overjoyed. This is not so. The generals and admirals in charge of developing new sophisticated weapons are thrilled. But the officers who must train military personnel to use them are worried sick.

A recent Defense Department study revealed that 25 percent of all recruits in the three major services, after testing, had to be classified in the "low intelligence category." This means they could hardly read the instruction manuals that accompany the complicated weapons, much less understand how to fire them.

It has become painfully clear that even if we get all the new hardware that President Carter wants, the chances of a large number of our troops being able to understand how to use them will be minimal.

"Good news, Colonel. The XM-1 tank has just arrived."

"Very well, Sergeant. Instruct your crews on how to use it."

ARTBUCHWALD

"Yessir All right now, you chowderheads, hear this. This is the new XM-1 tank. It weighs 40 tons and can fire Laser-guided missiles as well as artillery shells. Are there any questions?"

"Sarge, what's a tank?"
"A tank is an armored vehicle, capable of traversing any kind of terrain, and having the ability to destroy buildings, bunkers and people. It can go either forward or backward. It is the most feared weapon in ground warfare."

"Does it have an engine in it?"

"Yes, Klaus. That's what makes it go. I think the best thing to do is have you get into the tank and work it yourself. Here's the manual and the key to the ignition. I'll talk to you by radio. The range is over there where those large targets are. In order to aim the target, you push the red button on the control panel, then sight the gun with the green button above the temp gauge and, finally, fire the gun by moving the safety lock to 9 o'clock and the trigger mechanism to 12 o'clock, without taking your foot off the accelerator. Okay, you four over there, get into the tank and let's try it.

"Are you set? Start up Okay, move out. No, Slocum, drive toward the range Slocum, you're headed for the PX. Turn it around, TURN IT AROUND Slocum, you just knocked down the PX building."

"Hey, Sarge, this is fun."

"Slocum, aim your turret toward the targets. What button are you pressing?"

"This one, Sarge."

"SLOCUM, DON'T FIRE. YOU'RE AIMING AT THE OFFICERS' MESS. OH NO. YOU JUST KNOCKED OUT THE SECOND FLOOR."

"Wow, Sarge — I wasn't even aiming at it. These laser guns are terrific."

"Come back, Slocum. No, Slocum, don't back into the ammunition shack. Put the stick in drive, not reverse. Never mind — it's too late. Come back and we'll go over it once again."

"How's it going, Sergeant?"

"Just fine, Colonel. The men really like the new tank."

"Good. You better move your men out right away. Eye Company just got its new electronic-firing helicopter and wiped out F Company. We have no idea where they'll hit next. The whole base is on the alert."

"Yes, sir. Maybe this would be a good time to hold the remedial reading class."

"You better cancel it. The Navy just destroyed the base school with the new M-20 Cruise missile they got yesterday."

To the editor:
This may sound like an IRS handout, but it is an important political appeal.

Most of us face the preparation of our tax forms with trepidation. We should not, however, overlook checking the box directly below the name and address slot. It is by checking this box that we can designate $1 of the taxes we are paying to the Presidential Campaign Fund. It is the citizens who should be financing campaigns, not the well-heeled special interest groups.

1980 is the second presidential campaign to be conducted under a public financing system. Public financing has taken the election process away from the fat cats and given it back to the citizens to whom it belongs. It wasn't too long ago that just a few individuals contributed millions to the Nixon campaign and bought themselves a piece of the White House. In 1976 the first presidential election was publicly financed by 30 million Americans who each voluntarily contributed by checking this box.

The check-off is voluntary and does not add a single dollar to the taxes we already owe, nor does it take a single penny away from a refund that may be due us.

This system eliminates the possibility that any one person can buy influence. But this system won't work unless you check off on your tax form. Remember, check the small box below your name and address on the tax form and be one of the millions of people who help make sure that the 1980 presidential election is a clean election.

For Common Cause

To the editor:
Are there no City of Greenville officials that care about the City? Apparently the only thing they care about are their titles. Not only are our present Mayor, City Manager and City Council ignoring very serious problems within our city government, but our past Mayor, City Council and City Manager also ignored some very serious problems.

Under our past administration, the department heads were permitted to drive gas-guzzling Chevrolet Caprices and Impalas, not to mention a Mercury Marquis for the City Manager. The majority of these cars were fully equipped and some of the department heads even drove them for their personal use. How were the specifications written to purchase such cars?

Now the city has purchased a Pontiac Catalina for the Fire Chief. The price that was bid on these cars is irrelevant in relation to the total cost to the city due to the cost of operating them. The Public Works Director drives a Chevrolet Caprice fully equipped. Other officials drive the same class of car when an economy car would serve the very same purpose and save the city money. Why did these cars go without the City of Greenville emblem on them for so long?

As for the personnel problems that the Fire and Rescue Department are now having, this is just another incident that our city officials do not care to really get involved in and listen to reasoning from the citizens. In 1977 a very serious problem arose with a personnel matter in the Public Works area. As now, the Mayor, City Manager and City Council supported the actions of the department head. A thorough investigation was not made and it was not publicized like the Fire and Rescue situation has been.

Please support the Rescue Department. Don't let the city officials get by with another decision that is incorrect.

Strength For Today

NEED OF A RETURN

Anyone familiar with the history of the Christian Church knows that there was a vitality and power among Christian believers in the early centuries of the church's life which has probab probably not been duplicated since, and certainly not surpassed.

Why was this? One reason is that only the choice souls chose the pain and sacrifice of embracing a creed hated in the beginning. Another reason is that Christians 2000 years ago were a little minority, and they huddled together like sheep in a storm. Another reason is that they were persecuted.

Moreover, primitive Christians made religion their chief business in life. The rich and poor, the educated and uneducated mingled together in an inspiring brotherhood, filled with a sense of the presence of Christ.

We need a return in the Christian church to an apostolic vision, commitment, insight, inspiration and power. We can have this if we will.

Opportunities Still Remain

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The weakening economy is not without opportunities for those with cash, wits and willingness to assume risk.

In housing, for example, buyers can find perhaps more bargains than a month or two ago, despite the almost prohibitive cost and shortage of conventional mortgage money, by using the seller's financing.

Some buyers are surprised by the willingness of sellers to cooperate, until they learn that the sellers stand to gain too, especially if they have big capital gains on which they wish to avoid taxes.

The seller can sidestep a good deal of the potential tax liability by agreeing to accept a down payment of less than 30 percent, with the remainder to be paid in installments over a period of years.

To close the sale, the seller is likely to offer a lower interest rate than a commercial lender, although he is likely to seek quicker repayment, perhaps in 10 or 15 years.

To help lower monthly charges, sellers often permit the buyer to repay on the basis of a longer (and lower) amortization table, making up the difference with a final "balloon" payment.

Real estate agents and their organizations maintain that this and similar financing techniques have kept the resale market from dipping below 3 million sales a year, despite the credit squeeze.

In the stock market, some investors view the low price-earnings ratios of blue chip stocks as a rare opportunity.

Those ratios generally have been in double digits — from 10 to 50, for example — until the past few years. Last week a Dow Jones average of 65 stocks fell to just 6.3.

Scores of reasons for the decline can be offered, but they add up to the same conclusion: Investors are unwilling to pay for future earnings when they can see so little of the future.

But, say some stock investors, with the industrial might of America available for less than book value, and at one-half or less the traditional price-earnings ratios, the gain potential is good.

Corporate bonds also present possibilities for the financially endowed risk-taker. As interest rates soared, bond prices plunged, and some brokers now view the scene as a disaster area.

Still, for those with nerve, and faith that economic stability will return, the possibilities for sizeable capital gains are there. Some highly rated bonds can be picked up for 75 percent of face value.

Meanwhile, the bond buyer can enjoy historically high yields, just as can those with cash to invest in money market funds. The latter now can earn close to 16 percent, a rate that at least helps to retain capital.

Whatever techniques are used to create or exploit such opportunities, the investor still has to have wits, courage and some werewithal, and at least two of those qualities are difficult to rouse these days.

Rescue....

forts were being made to offer Greenville area residents a higher level of service (the Emergency Medical Technician-IV program) and squad members hoped to move into paramedic training in the near future.

"These possibilities seem very vague," at this time, Stocks emphasized.

On June 5, 1979, "the squad went to the City Council and tried to explain what would happen," Conway said, if cross-training and integration of the fire and rescue service was done, as the League of Municipalities had recommended and has since become city policy.

The League of Municipalities and the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, Conway said, "both chose to go to an integrated system," and the city manager (Ed Wyatt) estimated the cost of a new building to house the rescue operation, if it was separated from the fire department, at $445,000.

"This is not what we were after," Conway said of separate facilities. All the rescue squad wanted, he explained, was "an autonomous administration."

He explained that under the former system, where rescue operations were directed by experienced rescue men, there was, "good supervision." Now, he emphasized, rescue operations are directed by Fire Department officers that, with the exception of one assistant chief, have no rescue experience. "I can't see how that is more effective or more efficient."

With an autonomous administration, Conway suggested, advanced life support programs, "could be recaptured and capitalized upon," even now.

He added that more than 1,000 persons have signed petitions asking the city council for action and noted the petitions will be taken to the next council meeting.

Stocks, suggesting that city officials are now discounting the role volunteers have played in the rescue squad, said in 1978, volunteers spend 8,674 man-hours on standby, calls and training, while in 1979, 6,241 man-hours were spent in rescue service to the city by volunteers.

Fifty percent of the competition teams were made up of volunteers, Stocks said, adding that a number of volunteers became paid rescue men.

"I asked the mayor (Don McGlohon) for a meeting," to discuss the problems, Stocks explained. "What he told me was to go through the proper channels."

"There are some bad rungs in that ladder," Stocks said, noting that past efforts to solve the problems by going through the chain of command had been unsuccessful.

Keith Harris of Goldsboro, vice-commander of the North Carolina Association of Rescue Squads told the group that the Greenville Rescue Squad, "has played a very important part in this association," and said the disbanding of the squad will hurt the association, which includes 264 squads and 7,000 men state-wide.

"The prestige this group (Greenville Rescue) has brought," by winning in international competition, "has made the State Association look very good. They were a real part of the North Carolina Association."

According to Harris, the Greenville squad was, "something to look up to."

Saying competition in first aid and heavy duty rescue is a large part of the association's annual meetings, Harris noted that, "when you competed against Greenville, then you competed against the best. When you beat them, you beat the best."

Robert Beddard, another former paid Greenville rescue officer said the present policy of integrated fire and rescue service is not only causing rescue service to suffer. "The Fire Department is suffering too."

Before he resigned from the department earlier this year, Beddard said at the Memorial Drive fire station, where he was assigned, there was one fire department officer, one man to operate each of the two fire trucks assigned there, and one man to fight fire.

He said there were three men assigned rescue duty at the station.

Had he not resigned, Beddard said he would have been assigned to a fire unit for 10 months, suggesting that he could not maintain his efficiency as a rescue man under such conditions.

"The quality of service is pathetic today," Beddard said.

"Let's have government by the people and for the people," said Beddard.

Former volunteer Bill Bond said volunteers, "don't care to work in a system where highly qualified personnel are replaced by less experienced, less interested personnel."

"Us (volunteers) working in the program is secondary," Bond emphasized. "We want high quality service." The present system, he suggested, "is obviously less efficient."

The present Fire Department administration, Bond charged, has a, "lack of administrative qualities," to effectively manage a rescue operation. "It reacts to a situation rather than digest the situation," and then take corrective action.

"The city would not discuss this with us," Bond said. "The city allowed very little input from rescue personnel."

"The city has tried to downplay the volunteers contribution," and since the squad disbanded, has, "had to ask others for assistance."

The volunteers want nothing more than to work with the city," Bond emphasized.

Bond noted, "it's an administrative problem...a city and fire department (administration) problem. Don't blame the firemen. They're doing the best job they can."

Conway then read the motion by former councilman John Howard (made at the June 5, 1979 City Council meeting) which has led to the present integrated fire-rescue service.

"The motion from Howard," Conway said, "was that, 'the Fire and Rescue Squad be under one Department head and that the City Manager is directed to work with this department head and the department head, in turn, with his subordinates, to select the most highly qualified personnel for basic assignments and duly train each of them as firefighters and rescue people.'"

Conway suggested that the motion intended for members of the department to be cross-trained, but that rescue men were to be assigned to the rescue units and firemen assigned firefighting duties, not to integrate the department.

It was then that Cox asked to speak, and said, "the motion (made by Howard)...set it up so firemen could transfer over to the rescue squad," which had not been allowed in the past.

"What the motion said, and what is happening today is two entirely different things."

Cox explained, "firemen and rescue boys couldn't get along," when problems within the department first began. "We worked out a deal," he continued, that created an assistant chief for rescue, answerable to the Fire Chief, to direct squad operations.

"This was working out real good," Cox suggested, "but there was still...little problems."

Cox then said, "I feel like, to a certain extent, the volunteers have been used by some of the paid (rescue) men to get a separate building."

However, the former mayor emphasized, "never was it intended (by Howard's motion) for rescue men to be put on fire trucks."

Dr. Herbert Hadley, a long-time supporter of the Greenville Rescue Squad, told the gathering, "I differ with the mayor," who Hadley said, seems to believe that fire and rescue operations can be administered under one department head.

"Fire and rescue job descriptions are entirely different," Hadley emphasized. "Trying to administer the two under the same department can't be done," he charged.

Hadley added, "a lot is being read into this (the city council action last June). It says nothing about an integrated department."

There are 21 firemen EMT's Hadley said, "with no field experience. They're being forced to do it (rescue work), whether they like it or not," just as former rescue men are being assigned to fire units.

"I admire the firemen for doing it," Hadley said. However, "It's not fair to them...they're being forced to do it."

Greenville Banks suggested that one possible way to solve the problem of integrating fire and rescue service is to "determine the intent of the motion," adopted by the previous council. "I wonder if we should not carry with us," to the present city council, "what their intent was."

If the previous council intended to cross-train fire and rescue personnel, but to assign rescue men to the rescue units and firefighters to fire trucks, "somebody has misinterpreted the intent of the motion," and that should be corrected, he suggested.

Jeep Streeper, commented that "I want to support you. But I don't feel the people in town understand," suggesting more information is needed.

"We, the citizens of Greenville, are suffering for what you've done," he said, referring to the fact that the volunteer squad disbanded and a number of paid rescuemen have quit.

"Somebody's got to be boss," and be able to administer both fire and rescue services efficiently, he noted.

Conway concluded the session by asking those present to attend the April 10 council meeting and asking the council to reconsider the rescue matter and change the direction in which the program is headed.

Helms' Goal: A Conservative

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., says the priority of the Jesse for Vice President campaign is landing a conservative, even if it's not Helms, in the No. 2 spot on the GOP ticket.

Helms has remained vague about whether he really wants the vice-presidential nomination.

"It depends on what the need is," he said in an interview this week. "I enjoy the Senate. I think it's essential to have a good, strong man with him (the presidential nominee)."

He said the real goal of the Jesse for Vice President campaign, started by North Carolina supporters, is to make sure "the Republicans offer a clear-cut choice" to the voters by nominating a clearly conservative ticket.

"I don't buy the pundits' line that you've got to have a broad-based ticket," Helms said. "I think we're beyond the point where people demand, or even respect, that."

Helms said Republicans he would support include Reps. Philip M. Crane of Illinois and Jack Kemp of New York and

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch of Utah.

Helms said he still advocates selection of the vice-presidential candidate by the convention and not the presidential nominee.

The North Carolina senator is supporting former California Gov. Ronald Reagan for president through the Congressional Club, a Raleigh-based conservative political group.

Helms admits that one benefit of the Jesse for Vice President campaign is that it can get delegates committed to him before the convention in July.

Helms was on the New Hampshire primary ballot and received 28,000 votes, but New Hampshire delegates won't be bound to vote for him at the convention.

There is a place for the initiative procedure "if the proposals are reasonable and well prepared," Hunt said. He thinks that requirements on numbers of signatures or other techniques, would be essential to keep the elections free from a proliferation of fringe ideas. The goal would be "to make sure a suggestion is the strong will of the people and not just something from a small group wanting to get an issue on the ballot," Hunt said.

Evacuate People From Area Near Volcanic Action

VOLCANIC ACTION — The rock niple in the saddle of Mount St. Helens peak was formed Wednesday afternoon as rock particles spewed out of

By LES BLUMENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — An "eruptive plume" of gas and black ash spewed 16,000 feet into the sky from the summit of Mount St. Helens early today, while an avalanche of ash cascaded down the north-west flank of the volcano, a U.S. Forest Service spokesman said.

"We have an eruptive plume," said Kurt Austermann, Forest Service spokesman in Vancouver, about 40 miles southwest of the volcano. "(It) was not incandescent. The top of the column spread more than five miles across and ash was falling on the base of the mountain."

"What appeared to be a flowing avalanche of ash was observed moving down the north-west flank of the mountain," he said.

In another report, Nolan Lewis, director of emergency services for Cowlitz County, said, "There appears to be an eruption on the southeast side of the mountain and an even more violent one on the northeast side."

On Thursday night, officials evacuated loggers and the few nearby residents as the long-dormant volcano twisted in the grip of powerful internal forces and erupted with an explosion heard 45 miles away, belching volcanic ash over acres of pristine snow.

Undulating cracks pushed out from the summit, a new crater heaved and expanded and scientists who flew over the peak Thursday night said the mountaintop appeared to be swelling on its south side while slumping to the north.

"This is like standing next to a dynamite keg and the fuse is lit, but you don't know how long the fuse is," said volcanologist David Johnston as he stood above the peak's timberline.

"I'm genuinely afraid of it," he said.

In Port Ludlow, Gov. Dixy Lee Ray expressed excitement at the news of the eruption.

"I've always said I wanted to live long enough to see one of our volcanoes erupt," she said with a grin.

Scientists were fanning out over the mountain today and hoped to plant more instruments around it to seek clues to the activity that has rumbled underneath it for a week. Earthquakes of up to 4.6 on the Richter scale of ground movement have been recorded in the sparsely populated area of southwestern Washington, 40 miles northeast of Vancouver.

The snow-covered, 9,677-foot volcano had been dormant since 1857.

Besides the crater, the Oregon Air National Guard found 20 steam vents, including 14 at the peak, after the eruption Thursday. Don Mullineaux of the U.S. Geologic Survey said an arc of fractured ice 1,000 yards long appeared to be moving slowly down the mountain.

"The considerable seismic activity is an indication that things are moving like fury," said Kurt Austermann, a U.S. Forest Service spokesman.

He said the crater, which measured 200 feet by 250 feet late Thursday, apparently was expanding. Scientists flying over the crater reported ice and rock were falling into the crater.

"There is no estimate on how big (it) is now," said Austermann of the crater. "Our observers reported cracks on the top of the mountain itself. Parts of the crater itself were heaving and falling in. The north side of the thing was heaving upward."

"Our folks reported that they were observing a large crack running east to west from the top and it was opening and closing."

Bankruptcy Pleas Soar

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Bankruptcy petitions filed in the state's three federal court districts have increased as much as 90 percent during the first five months of this federal fiscal year as compared to the same period a year ago.

W. Kent Presson of the bankruptcy division of the administrative office of the U.S. courts said nationwide, bankruptcy filings in the last half of 1979 were up nearly 15 percent from their levels a year ago.

He attributed the increase to the economic climate and a new law that went into effect Oct. 1, making it easier to file for bankruptcy.

The law allows a husband and wife to file jointly for bankruptcy. Previously they were required to file separately.

In North Carolina's Eastern District, which covers 44 counties, there was an 89 percent increase from one year ago. The court reported 1,286 petitions filed between Oct. 1, 1979 and Feb. 29, 1980, as compared to 681 petitions the year before.

In the 28-county Middle District, there have been 1,608 separate filings this year as compared to 848 filings a year ago, an increase of about 90 percent.

Set Holy Week Service Plans

Holy Week services will be held at the Riddick Chapel Baptist Church, Bethel, beginning Monday, March 31 and continuing through Thursday, April 3. The services will begin each evening at 7:30 with a visiting minister, accompanied by his choir, in charge.

The schedule for the week is as follows: Monday, Rev. R. T. Vines and the Conetoe Baptist Church Choir; Tuesday, Rev. Clifton Gardner and the Selvia Chapel Choir; Wednesday, Rev. J.N. Williams and the Olive Branch Choir of Parmele and Thursday, Dr. G.E. Brown and the Willow Chapel Choir of Martin County.

Pastor J.L. Farmer of Riddick Chapel invites the public to attend these services. Holy Communion will be served on Thursday evening.

Youth Group To Present Concert

The Young People Christian League of Mount Calvary FWB Church will present "The Echoes of Calvary" in concert Sunday at 4 p.m.

The group is under the direction of Michael Johnson and Montro Streeter, and John Moore is adult adviser of the youth group.

The public is invited to attend.

Human Relation Workshop Held

"Human Relations through Transactional Analysis" was the topic of a workshop recently held on the campus of Pitt Community College. Carolyn Means and Margaret J. French, instructors in the human services technology program were the leaders.

strengthening effective transaction with others as well as identifying factors which impede communication and describing alternatives to enhance communication.

The program was attended by a large number of Pitt County School Teachers.

Will Preach Sunday Evening

Eldress Romona Knox will preach at St. Matthew FWB Church Sunday at 7:30 p.m., and the church will sponsor the Gospel Chorus.

The program will be on behalf of the building fund. Pastor Eldress Hattie Maye Cobb invites the public to attend.

Good communication skills, non-verbal communication, and key concepts of TA such as ego status, ways to structure time, stroking, basic life positions and transactions and games were topics discussed.

The workshop was aimed at increasing self-awareness and

U.S. Trade With Iran Is Almost Negligible

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Trade between the United States and Iran dropped to almost negligible levels in February, indicating any American move to impose unilateral trade sanctions would have little real effect.

"As the Carter administration has intensified its efforts in recent days to find a way to end the hostage crisis, several senior officials, speaking privately, have mentioned a near-total boycott as a possible sanction."

Trade sanctions "are the most readily available option," one official said Thursday.

But other officials, also speaking anonymously, pointed to the newly compiled February data, which show U.S. exports to Iran dropped to $1.8 million, while imports fell to $37.6 million.

Of those imports, $29.6 million was for oil. While no breakdown was available of the remainder, officials speculated it probably consisted of rugs, nuts and hides.

The officials said the oil, exported before President Carter imposed the American embargo, was stored in Caribbean terminals before entering the United States last month.

This month, the officials said, the oil import figure should dwindle to nothing.

Appreciation Service Planned

"An Evening with Roger," a program of appreciation for Minister of Music Roger Ingram, will be held Saturday at 7:30 p. m. at Mount Calvary F.W.B. Church here.

Musical talent of Greenville will be featured in the program sponsored by the Gospelaire of Greenville and the W. L. Jones Traveling Choir of Mount Calvary F.W.B. Church. The public is invited.

A comparison with past figures shows how much American trade with Iran has fallen off. In December 1979, the last month before Carter's oil embargo took effect, imports totaled $530 million. In January, they fell to $266 million and then to the $37.6 million figure in February.

Exports, which stood at $6.6 million in January, had amounted to $83.8 million a year earlier. That falloff was due largely to Carter's freeze on Iranian assets in U.S. banks.

The formal trade sanctions the administration is considering were written in January but put in mothballs to give the United Nations' mediating effort a chance.

The formal sanctions would expand on and codify the trade actions Carter ordered in November. They would legally prohibit all trade with Iran, except for food and medicine.

More sweeping trade sanctions would require international cooperation, which the administration has found difficult to secure.

Waste Disposal Bills Proposed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Legislation requiring the state to study the waste products generated by any new or expanding industry locating in North Carolina is one of several proposals before a committee searching for ways to deal with hazardous substances.

The proposal was presented to the legislative study commission on hazardous and toxic wastes on Thursday, and its sponsor, Rep. Charles Holt, D-Fayetteville, says he hopes to bring it before the General Assembly when it convenes June 5.

Choir Marking Its Anniversary

The E. B. Williams Traveling Choir of Philippi Church of Christ will observe its sixth anniversary with a Choir Festival Sunday at 3 p. m.

All area choirs and musical groups are invited to participate. Registration begins at 2:30 p. m.

The public is invited to attend, and refreshments will be served.

"I just want this set as a criteria when the Department of Commerce is talking to new industry — what wastes are going to be produced and does North Carolina have the facilities to handle it," Holt said.

"I don't know how far we can get with this, but we're going to try it," he added.

The panel is studying legislative solutions for handling and disposing of wastes, such as low-level radioactive materials and toxic chemical wastes.

The proposed bill would require the Commerce Department to conduct the waste disposal study for each industry, along with the Department of Human Resources and Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

Current state law requires an environmental impact study by Commerce and Natural Resources for any new or expanding industry. But Holt said he wasn't sure that is now being done.

"I don't have the information to prove that," he said. "I simply want them to be aware of the waste situation and that that should be a consideration."

Commerce spokesman Steve Meehan said the department now consults with new industries on their potential environmental impact.

"We probably are doing that, even though it's not required," he said. "I don't know if we're doing it to the degree this committee is shooting for."

Jim Newlin of the Legislature's fiscal research staff said the measure would require the departments to consider the amount of wastes produced, whether it is toxic and whether the company and the state is capable of handling the substances.

Gospel Groups Perform Sunday

Little Willie Daniels will celebrate his sixth anniversary Sunday at South Greenville School.

Doors open at 1 p. m. for registration. Tickets are $1.50 in advance and $2 at the door. Some 20 gospel groups will perform. All gospel groups and choirs are invited.

BABY CONTEST
The Community Gospel Chorus of Greenville will hold its annual baby contest at Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church at 4 p. m. Sunday. Contestants and their parents are asked to be at the church prior to 4 p. m. The public is invited.

EVENING SERVICES
The English Chapel No. 2 Choir will have a service at English Chapel Free Will Baptist Church March 30, at 7:30 p. m. The speaker will be Rev. Jimmy Whitehurst of Greenville. The public is invited.

Markets Reel As Bid To Corner Silver Collapsed

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A financial edifice of silver that one of America's wealthiest families had been building for months lay in apparent collapse today.

And the aftershocks were still being felt in the nation's stock and commodity markets.

For the Hunt family of Dallas, it was a bitter climax to one of the most ambitious investment plans in the country's history.

They had reputedly accumulated $3 billion worth of silver, maybe much more. Some said the Hunts were close to cornering the market for one of the world's most valued commodities.

But on Thursday, falling silver prices and debts on their investment forced them to sell out much of what they owned, setting off wide swings in the markets and a storm of controversy.

that as evidence that he wanted, or needed, to raise some cash.

The same day, Bache Halsey Stuart Shields, a large investment firm that has long had business dealings with the family, sent off a "margin call" to the Hunts for more collateral.

The call — a notice to put up more collateral against loans — was for more than $100 million. Elliot J. Smith, a Bache executive vice president, confirmed late Thursday.

The Hunts did not respond immediately. Bache officials said. So the firm sold out most of the family's silver holdings to liquidate some of the debt.

Afterwards, Bache said the Hunts still owed it an unspecified amount of money. But it added that there was adequate collateral on that debt in the form of stocks and bonds.

From mid-afternoon on, trading in Bache's stock was suspended at the order of the Securities and Exchange Commission. It last traded at $8, down $1.25 from Wednesday.

Harry Jacobs Jr., chairman of Bache Group, the brokerage firm's parent holding company, said the silver sell-off had only a "negligible" financial impact on the company.

Still, the Securities Investor Protection Corp., an agency set up in the early 1970s to protect brokerage house customers in the event of trouble, said it was prepared to act if necessary.

Hugh Owens, chairman of SIPC — roughly similar to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. in banking — said, "If worse comes to worse we'll be ready."

The stock market's afternoon sell-off appeared to stem from fears about the possible impact on Bache, and the subsequent recovery in stock prices evidently signaled an easing of those fears.

But it was plain that government regulators and others would still be asking a lot of questions in the days and weeks ahead.

"It was a scary thing," one broker said. "And I'm sure the reverberations will be felt for some time to come."

The price of silver for April delivery tumbled to $10.80 an ounce in New York, down $5 from Wednesday's comparable price.

The stock market plummeted to its lowest level in five years, then just as quickly rallied again. The Dow Jones industrial average, down more than 25 points a half hour before the close of trading, wound up with only a 2.14 loss at 759.98.

There was no way of knowing how much financial damage had been suffered by the Hunt family, which has enormous holdings in oil and gas, real estate and other businesses ranging from pizza restaurants to the Kansas City Chiefs football team.

Nelson Bunker Hunt, one of the children of the late, legendary oilman H.L. Hunt, has steadfastly declined to comment all along on his investments in silver or what he planned to do with them.

Hunt wasn't available for comment Thursday.

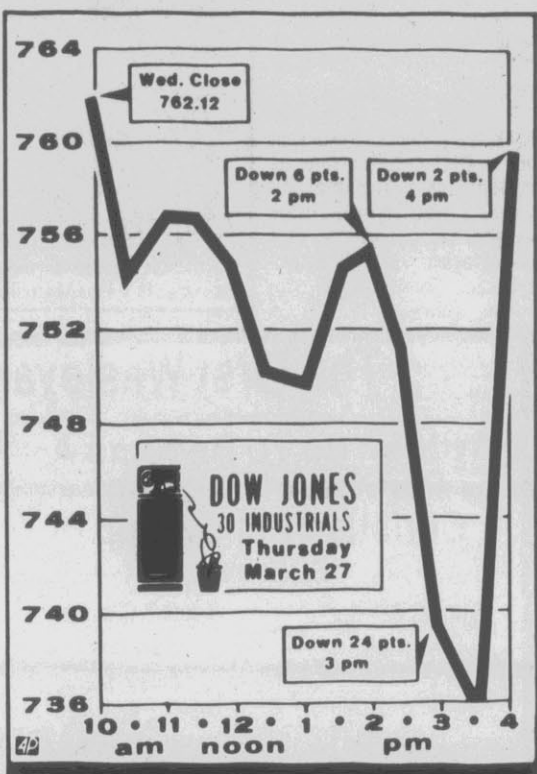

Whatever his plan, it looked like a big success until very recently. Silver began last year at $6 an ounce. This past winter it reached $50, an increase that dwarfed even the spectacular rise of gold over the same period.

But in January, silver, along with many other commodities, began to decline. By this week, it was below $20.

That meant that a lot of the Hunts' paper profit had vanished. Because they had used borrowed money to finance part of their investment, it also meant that the collateral on the loans was worth much less than it had been.

On Wednesday, Nelson Bunker Hunt announced in Paris that he and several wealthy investors planned to issue bonds backed by 200 million ounces of silver bullion. Observers saw that as evidence that he wanted, or needed, to raise some cash.

See Place In Schools

NEWARK, N. J. (AP) — The American Jewish Congress, frequently involved in lawsuits to keep religion out of public institutions, says in a New Jersey case that they should accommodate religion.

The AJC has filed a brief backing a policy of a Teaneck, N. J. high school in attempts to accommodate religious practices of its students by discouraging extra-curricular activities at weekly worship times of Jews and Christians — Friday night and Saturday and Sunday mornings.

When the school barred a Friday night performance of a student play, students filed a case charging the ban "constitutes an establishment of religion," a claim upheld in New Jersey Superior Court.

But the school appealed to New Jersey's Appellate Division and the AJC filed a friend-of-court brief on the school's behalf, arguing the government may act affirmatively to protect religious rights.

The constitutional provision against establishing a religion "does not mandate that the government be hostile to religion," the brief argues. "Indeed, such hostility may violate the establishment clause by preferring non-religion over religion."

Women As Priests In The Ancient Frescoes

By GEORGE W. CORNELL, AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman archaeologist who teaches at a Roman Catholic college says a collection of photographs she has taken of ancient mosaics, frescoes and inscriptions show there were female priests and bishops in the early Christian church.

Dorothy Irvin of the College of St. Catherine in St. Paul, Minn., says the evidence could undercut what she calls the "respectable" Vatican argument against women's ordination — that it goes against age-old church tradition.

"Although it is not perfectly clear what constituted ordination at different times and places in the early centuries of the church, the archaeological evidence shows women as receiving ordination and exercising ministry on a par with men," she says.

A 1977 Vatican declaration says women cannot be ordained priests because they lack a physical resemblance to Jesus, a man, and also because it would be against the continuous tradition of the church.

In articles in the National Catholic Reporter, an independent Catholic weekly published in Kansas City, and in the Witness, an independent Episcopal monthly published in Ambler, Pa., she says the authenticity of the materials has never been questioned.

However, she adds that the reason few have heard of the old tombstone and votive inscriptions "is that they are published in scholarly books and journals, hidden in seldom visited basements and libraries," often previously unphotographed.

Among the photographs she reports in her collection:

—A first-century fresco in a Roman catacomb depicting a group of seven women celebrating an Eucharist. Several similar scenes from a later date depict groups of seven men, she says.

—A fourth-century catacomb fresco, also in Rome, showing a woman receiving ordination from a bishop.

—Numerous frescoes of women, as well as men, dressed in liturgical vestments and standing in attitudes of liturgical leadership.

—Tombstone inscriptions of women bishops, for example (hono) rabilis femina episcopa, "an honorable woman bishop."

—Inscriptions from the Roman period on tombstones and for legal-financial purposes in which women bore the title of "archisynagogos" (ruler of the synagogue) and presbitera (feminine of presbyter or pastor) — titles used by Jewish, Jewish-Christian and Christian communities.

—A mosaic, dating probably to the ninth century, showing a female head with the superscription, also in mosaic, "Episcopa Theodora" or "Bishop (feminine form) Theodora."

Professor Irvin, who received her doctorate in Old Testament and ancient Near Eastern archaeology from Tubingen University in West Germany, made many of her photographs as a photographer for Tubingen's Biblical Archaeological Institute.

Speakers for the service will be Rev. J. Donner Lee, conference supervisor and Rev. L. B. Collins, evangelism director.

Feature Church In Telecasts

The First Pentecostal Holiness Church of Greenville will be featured on a television special to be broadcast by two North Carolina television stations.

Channel 11 in Durham will air the program March 30 at 8:30 a.m. and Channel 7, Washington, will broadcast it April 6 at 1 p.m.

The program is sponsored each year by the North Carolina Conference in conjunction with "Simultaneous Revival" Month, when all the Pentecostal Holiness churches have revival services.

CROWN OF THORNS

Barbed wire on battlefield. Civilization tangled in blood, suffering, death. Christ sees it from Heaven. And remembers. The crown of thorns! A Roman soldier's idea of a joke — Jesus wore it dying for our sins, such as barbed wire on battlefield.

Something to go to Church about: It was God's Son they crowned with barbed wire. Thorns, that is: Crowned Him Prince of Peace — Someone to pray to, believe in, live for. In a world eager for happiness and hope, Famished for love and deploring at last His Crown of thorns on battlefield.

The End Of Your Search For A Friendly Church

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, MAR. 29, 1980

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: An excellent day to engage in outside activities with congenials. Let those of whom you are fond know of your devotion to them. Secrets come to light by delving into them.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study your surroundings and make plans for improvement. Try to be less critical of others. Use tact in dealing with others.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You can accomplish a great deal today if you apply yourself in the right manner. Take no chances with your reputation now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You may think you are bogged down with family woes, but thank your lucky stars instead. Be wise in dealing with others.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make sure you keep promises to others and gain their respect. Redouble your efforts in going after a cherished aim.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Handle those duties that are important to your future. An adviser suggests something that is nerve-racking but brings good results.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Ideal day to be in the company of persons you like. Be aware of one who is jealous of you. Show others you have wisdom.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Use common sense in handling a business problem and get good results. Accepting an invitation in the evening is wise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A good time to improve relations with family members. Make sure you are not too extravagant with money today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Employ tact and diplomacy in dealing with others today and establish good rapport. Take needed health treatments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Show a more wide-awake attitude toward others and gain their respect. Show increased devotion to the one you love.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Listen more closely to what family members have to say so that you know better what is expected of you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study your personal faults and take steps to improve them. Keep an eye peeled for opportunities coming your way.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who can easily rise above any misfortune provided you give encouragement early in life. One who likes to work hard and long but should be taught to take care of health. Don't neglect spiritual training. "The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

The holdup play is as valuable to the defenders as it is to the declarer. Usually its purpose is to prevent declarer from running a long suit, and its most common application is in defense of a no trump contract. On occasion, refusal to win a trick prematurely can also be devastating in suit play.

In today's hand the defense was offered the chance to make a holdup of an unusual kind for a purpose other than those usually discussed in bridge texts. Unfortunately, West was not up to the task and declarer romped off with his contract.

The bidding was normal, and against South's contract of four spades, West made his natural lead of the king of diamonds. East encouraged with a high diamond, and West continued with queen and another diamond, forcing declarer to ruff. A low spade was led to the queen in dummy and a spade was returned to the king.

"Well, I guess I'll never get anything bigger," West remarked as he won the ace. But now there was nothing he could do to prevent declarer from making the rest of the tricks.

West was wrong—he could have landed a bigger fish. By holding up the ace of trumps for one more round, he could have defeated the contract, and it was a marked play for him to do so.

Once East has followed to a trump and declarer has ruffed a diamond, West knows that he and declarer have equal length in trumps. If West can force declarer to ruff once more before West has relinquished trump control, West will end up with a long trump. To do this, West must force declarer to ruff another diamond, but he cannot do so while dummy still has a trump to take care of the fourth round of diamonds.

If West holds up the ace of trumps until the third round, he can then force declarer to ruff another diamond. The six of spades now becomes established for the setting trick.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Lawyer Doubts Garwood Be Freed

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood sat mutely during his court-martial this week as his lawyers painted a dismal picture of Garwood's chance of staying out of jail.

The 33-year-old Indiana native is being tried on charges of desertion and collaboration with the enemy in Vietnam. If convicted, he could get a maximum sentence of life in prison. With testimony still some time away, Garwood's lawyers argued several motions this week in hopes of getting the charges dropped or at least getting some rulings to help the defense.

Col. R.E. Switzer, the presiding judge, listened to arguments but made no immediate rulings. Garwood heard his civilian attorney, Dermot Foley of New York City, plead for nearly $147,000 in back pay the military is withholding from Garwood pending the outcome of his case.

Foley sought dismissal of charges on grounds that withholding the money has severely damaged Garwood's ability to spend money on preparing his defense.

"The defense in this case has been damaged, and I believe irreparably damaged, by this business of funds," Foley told Switzer.

While the prosecution had the resources and manpower of military investigators to compile a 2,700-page collection of interviews with former prisoners of war, Foley said he and Garwood's two Marine lawyers have struggled financially.

"We needed to prepare just as thoroughly as the government did," Foley said.

Earlier, on Wednesday, Foley asked for government transportation and time out from the trial for an evidence-hunting expedition to Vietnam.

Without evidence and testimony from Vietnam, Garwood's testimony alone may not be enough to win him acquittal, Foley said.

Foley also argued Thursday that Garwood is a victim of selective prosecution because no other former POW was tried, although several admitted after they returned in 1973 that they cooperated with the communists.

Foley argued that a policy was formulated during the Nixon administration saying none of the POWs who returned from Vietnam in 1973 would be tried.

"After the POWs came home in '73, it was common knowledge that nobody was prosecuted, no matter what he did, until this defendant was singled out. He was the only one," Foley said.

To prove his contention, Foley asked that several witnesses be brought to Camp Lejeune, including former Secretaries of Defense Melvin Laird and Elliot Richardson, former Secretary of the Navy John Warner and former Marine Corps Commandant Louis Wilson.

Foley also sought testimony from U.S. Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, who was quoted last year as telling a House committee on missing servicemen that Garwood should be put in jail.

Prosecutors countered that there was no such official policy. Foley's argument was "sheer speculation" and an attempt to launch a "fishing expedition," they said.

Switzer made no ruling on the request for witnesses.

Garwood's lawyers also painted a dreary picture of the Marine when he returned to the United States last March, after nearly 14 years in Vietnam.

He had been in the jungle so long that he had forgotten how to tie his shoelaces, Foley said. Saddled with impending charges against him, Garwood was confused and disoriented, Foley said.

On his flight to the U.S., he "lost control of himself," Foley said.

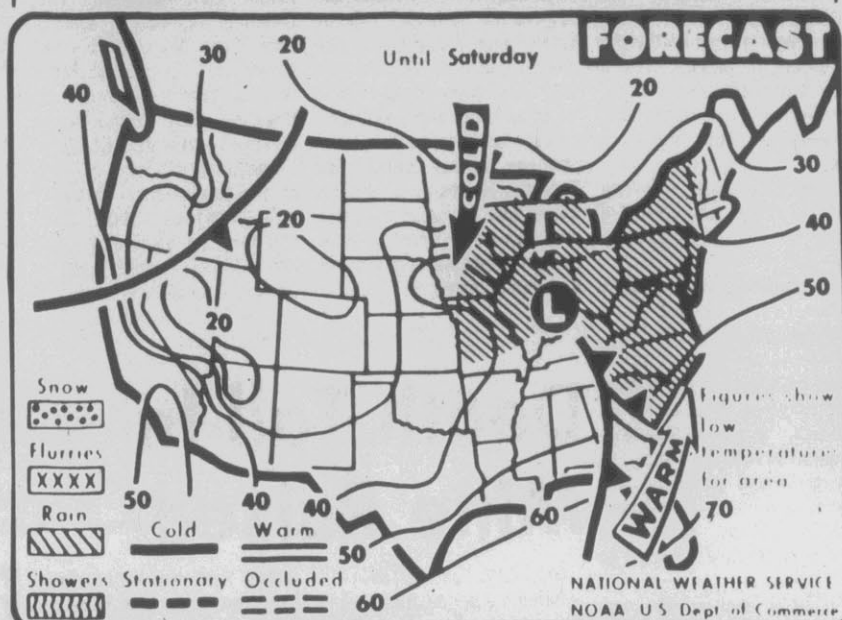

"Other Marines on that plane surrounded him and spent a considerable amount of time calming him by reading portions of the Bible to him," Foley added.

Garwood's lawyers told him not to talk to doctors because of the possibility that doctors might be subpoenaed to testify against him.

Foley said a military doctor who examined Garwood after he arrived in the U.S. described the encounter as being like "the practice of veterinary medicine."

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected in the forecast period Friday until Saturday morning for most of the East and the Midwest.

Coastal areas will be warm, but inland regions will continue cold. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
A flash flood watch was in effect today for North Carolina's mountains, foothills and Piedmont as the state faced the prospect of another soaking.

Widespread rainfall was predicted for the entire state but showers and thunderstorms were expected to be heavy over the state's western half, especially this afternoon and tonight.

With the soil already saturated, any concentration of rains posed the threat of flash flooding.

The National Weather Service said the rains could continue through Saturday and Sunday, so a wet weekend also is in prospect. Temperatures also will be warmer over the weekend, climbing into the 60s and low 70s. Temperatures today were expected to range in the 50s and low 60s.

Skies were partly cloudy around the state Thursday and temperatures ranged in the 40s in the mountains and in the 50s and 60s elsewhere.

Passion Week Services Set

Passion Week Services will be held at Mt. Calvary F.W.B. Church beginning Monday at 7:30 p.m., and the Rev. Willie Joyner, pastor of Patricks Chapel F.W.B. will be the speaker for the week.

Area choirs will present a program of music each night — Monday: Rock Spring No. 2 Choir, Tuesday: W. L. Phillips Traveling Choir, Wednesday: English Chapel No. 2 Choir, Thursday: Fountain of Life Christian Fellowship Choir of East Carolina University, Friday: Walston Traveling Choir.

The Lilies of Calvary, the officers and members, and the pastor, Bishop W. L. Jones, invite the public to attend.

Union Services Over Weekend

Weekend services for District Union No. 4 will be held at Allen Chapel F.W.B. Church as follows:

— Friday, 7:30 p.m., Women's department, sermon by Eldress Hattie Cobb, music by St. Matthew Choir and ushers.

— Saturday, 5 p.m., business session and 7:30 p.m., sermon by Elder Dorsey Acklin, music by Choir No. 5 of Mt. Calvary.

— Sunday, 11 a.m., sermon by Bishop Stephen Jones, music by Allen Chapel Senior choir; 2 p.m., dinner; and 3 p.m., sermon by Eldress Shirley Daniels, music by Hattie's Chapel Choir.

Commission To Meet Monday

The Pitt County Sediment control Commission will meet Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Commissioner's Room at the Pitt County Court House.

Included on the agenda is the discussion of the erosion and sedimentation control plan for Bedford Subdivision south of Greenville off Evans Street Extension, and a review of a draft of a revised Erosion and Sedimentation Control ordinance for the county.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pushed higher in heavy trading today as Thursday's wild, late-afternoon buying wave continued.

The gains came despite Citibank's announcement it had increased its prime rate by one-quarter point to 19½ percent.

The plunging price of silver, which sparked rumors that the wealthy Hunt family would be unable to meet their borrowing commitments to the brokerage house of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc., sent the market into a steep decline Thursday.

But the market recouped much of its losses in the last minutes of trading after reports circulated that the Hunts could meet their commitments and Bache said the family had put up adequate collateral for their loans.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off by more than 25 points late Thursday and down by just 2.14 at the close, was ahead by 6.66 at 766.64 at 10:30 a.m. Advances led declines by better than 4-1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Silver prices recovered as well, rising $2.20 to $13 an ounce in early New York trading. Silver sold for a record $52.50 an ounce in late January.

In early NYSE trading, AT&T was off ¼ at 47½, but International Telephone & Telegraph was ahead by ¼ at 23½. Transportation issues were higher, with American Airlines up ¼ at 8¼.

Thursday's Big Board volume totaled 63.68 million shares, against 37.37 million in the previous session. It was the seventh-largest volume in exchange history.

The NYSE's composite index fell 0.68 to 55.30; at the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 16.23 at 215.69.

Public Doubts Rising Over Economic Cures

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — With each passing day, more doubts surface whether President Carter's new anti-inflation program is the right medicine for the ailing economy, or whether the administration's latest attempt is already being swept away by events.

One problem that seemingly distresses everyone who observes Carter's program is that, weeks after he announced a revision in his proposed 1981 budget, the centerpiece of his anti-inflation strategy has still not been completed.

On March 14, after two weeks of intensive negotiations with Congress, he announced that the budget would be balanced — indeed, would show a sizeable surplus. Now, the details are scheduled to be announced Monday.

One official close to the trimming exercise admits he is "frustrated" at the lengthy debate every contemplated change produces. Congressmen who support the program say the lack of a quick follow-up has left them disappointed as well.

And House Budget Committee Chairman Robert N. Giacomini, directing his criticism at Congress as well as the administration, said Thursday: "Our economy is in precarious shape. We have to move quickly. ... If we can't move expeditiously and courageously in Congress, let's say so."

Nowhere are doubts about the president's latest program more obvious than in the nation's financial markets.

Along Wall Street there is a lack of confidence that the program has the punch needed to correct the economy's ills.

In the two weeks since Carter unveiled his plan's broad outline — The Dow Jones industrial stock average has fallen 48 points to Thursday's close of 760.

—Bond prices have dropped further while interest rates have continued to climb.

—The plunge in silver prices from a January high of more than $50 an ounce to under $11 Thursday is producing deep concern at the Treasury Department, said an official who asked to remain anonymous. There is concern, as well, he said, over the latest decline in bond prices.

Financial analysts are concerned that Carter's program will bring on a recession, because of high interest rates and tight credit, while doing little to restrain inflation, running about 18 percent so far this year.

Criticism that Carter has been unable to act promptly on economic problems, or do what he says he will do, has arisen almost from the time he took office and reversed himself on the $50 tax rebate he had once promised every American.

That was followed by his since-forgotten plan to provide wage insurance to workers who cooperated with his anti-inflation plan. Announced with much fanfare in 1978, the program was never thought out in detail and was soon abandoned.

Carter's latest anti-inflation program is his fourth. And Treasury Secretary G. William Miller said Thursday the president can be expected to come up with more measures as the problem requires.

—The Treasury Department, said an official who asked to remain anonymous. There is concern, as well, he said, over the latest decline in bond prices.

ORNEY, South Africa (AP) — Standing beside a mine shaft more than a mile deep in the world's largest gold mine, Aaron Masiza suddenly heard screams. He looked up and saw a "mary ann," an elevator loaded with fellow miners, hurtling down.

"Before I knew what was happening I saw strange particles fly through the air... and later noticed it was human flesh. I also saw limbs," Masiza said.

This morning, the day after the accident in the Vaal Reefs mine, John Eplett, the mine manager, said the original reported death toll had been revised from 23 to 31. Originally it had been reported that 20 blacks and 3 whites died when the mine hoist plummeted to the bottom of the shaft at an estimated 160 miles an hour.

But Eplett said, "Looks as if there were more blacks dead than we feared. Twenty-eight, we think. The top deck must have been almost full."

The two-deck elevator cage has a capacity of 40 miners. Eplett said the hoist apparently jammed against the shaft wall as it began its descent. It GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Carl T. Lippard of Matthews was given a suspended prison sentence and fined $5,000 after he pleaded guilty of failing to file federal income tax returns.

In addition, U.S. Magistrate Barbara Delaney placed Lippard on probation for three years and ordered him to pay $34,541 in back taxes, and a 50 percent fraud penalty plus interest on the taxes assessed.

The Internal Revenue Service said Lippard, 50, derived his income from a lottery operation in Mecklenburg County.

Diagnosis Was 'Dead Wrong'

SOMERVILLE, Mass. (AP) — Police say they have no reason to believe the man with the black bag was not a doctor. But his diagnosis was almost dead wrong.

Officers John Conway and Joe Fahey were administering cardiopulmonary resuscitation Wednesday to a heart attack victim when an unidentified man stopped his car, checked the victim's pulse and pronounced 65-year-old Leonard Mallett dead. The officers continued their efforts as the man drove away, and soon Mallett coughed and began breathing. He was in critical condition Thursday.

Pirates Sweep Pair From Wolfpack

RALEIGH — Macon Moyer batted off five hits and drove in four runs, while Butch Davis stroked his eighth home run of the year and stretched his hitting streak to 12 games as the Pirates of East Carolina swept a doubleheader from N.C. State yesterday.

The Pirates slipped past the Wolfpack, 6-5, in the opener, and came back with a 10-4 victory in the nightcap.

Moyer, who missed the first seven games of the season after a bout with scarlet fever, returned to his team-leading batting form against the Pack, and two of his five hits were doubles.

Davis, who is now threatening the season homer mark of ten, batted off a three-run homer in the first game, and added two singles in the second. He has gotten at least one hit in every game this spring except for the second of the season.

Rick Ramey came on to take the victory in relief in the first game, his third in four decisions. Bill Wilder won his fourth against no losses in the second, going the distance.

The Pirates scored first in the opener, getting a run in the top of the third. Mike Sorrell singled to right and was sacrificed up. He scored when Billy Best got a

N.C. State came back with four in the bottom of the third to chase starter Mickey Britt and take the lead. Louie Meadows opened with an infield hit and stole second. John Isley drew a one-out walk and Ray Tanner doubled to left, scoring Meadows. Ricky Hester's single to left brought in Isley, and Dave Conway reached on an error, scoring Tanner. Pat Sheehy reached on a fielder's choice and Danny Bass walked to load the bases. Ken Sears reached on an error, allowing Hester to score with the fourth run.

The Pirates came right back with four of their own in the fourth to regain the lead, 5-4. Rick Derechailo opened with a single up the middle and Moyer cracked the first of his doubles to right. John Hallow followed with a double to center, scoring both runners. With two away, Davis hit his homer, making it 5-4.

State then tied it once more with a run in the bottom of the frame. Chuckie Canady led off with a single to right and Isley followed with a hit to left. Both were sacrificed up, and Hester was intentionally walked. Dave Conway reached on an error, allowing Canady to score, but a double play got the Pirates out of further trouble. It was the second twin-killing of the game.

State went on to twice put men on second, but they got no further.

The Pirates scored the winning run in the fifth. Best led off with a single to right and was sacrificed up. He scored when Moyer got a single, his second hit of the game.

Both Best and Moyer had two hits in the opener for the Pirates, while Isley and Tanner led State with two each.

East Carolina ripped the Pack early in the second game, scoring four runs in the first. Davis led off with a single and after a sacrifice, Best reached on an infield hit. Moyer then doubled to drive in both runners. Hallow singled, scoring Moyer, and took third when Todd Hendley singled. The two pulled a double steal, with Hallow scoring the fourth run.

East Carolina added five more in the second, running its lead to 9-0. With one down, Kelly Robinette reached on an error. He was safe at second on another misplay when Best arrived safely at first. Derechailo singled, loading the bases and Moyer got a hit, scoring Robinette. Hallow grounded to second, getting Moyer, but Best scored on the play. Hendley walked and Jay Carraway singled, scoring Derechailo. Mike Sorrell then finished up things with a hit to center, scoring both Hallow and Hendley. Carraway, trying to score when the ball was overthrown at third, was cut down at the plate.

The other Pirate run came in the fifth. Carraway walked and Sorrell singled him to third. He scored on Robinette's sacrifice fly.

State, which had twice threatened, finally scored in the fifth, getting four tallies. Mo Barbour reached on an infield hit and advanced on a double by Mark Brinkley. Sears singled to drive in both runners. Louie Meadows doubled and a hit by Canady brought in Sears. Meadows scored on a sacrifice fly by Isley.

Moyer had three hits to lead the Pirates in the second game, while Davis, Carraway and Sorrell each had a pair. Sears, Meadows and Canady each had two for the Wolfpack.

The victories raised the Pirates' record to 12-2, and gave them their seventh straight win. State fell to 10-6 on the season.

Valvano Is Named As New State Cage Coach

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Jim Valvano grinned and laughed Thursday when introduced as the new head basketball coach at North Carolina State.

"This for me is a dream come true," said the 34-year-old coach, who led Iona to a No. 19 national ranking this past season and a 29-5 record.

He tried to keep a straight face, but his delight was unmistakable.

"I played hard to get. I said I would take a multi-week contract," he cracked.

With a glance at Athletic Director Willis Casey, he added the punchline. "And that's what they gave me," he said, a grin on his boyish face.

But Valvano may find the Atlantic Coast Conference coaching job will add a few lines to his face and will subtract a few witty remarks from his patter. He inherits a team that won the NCAA championship in 1974 and a 268-128 record legacy by Norm Sloan, who left the Wolfpack after 14 seasons to return as head coach at Florida.

Although by no means a rebuilding job as such, the new coach probably will have a few problems next season. The Wolfpack finished at 22-9, its final game a lackluster performance against Iowa in the first

Football Clinic Starts Today

The East Carolina University Football Clinic gets underway this evening at 6 p.m. at Mendenhall Student Center.

Along with the new staff of East Carolina, headed by coach Ed Emory, special guest speakers will include Galen Hall of Oklahoma, Rex Norris of Oklahoma and Boyd Epley of Nebraska.

Tonight, ECU assistants will offer position by position breakdowns offensively and defensively, followed by a dinner and social hour.

Saturday morning's session will include a session on Oklahoma's offense, with Hall, the offensive coordinator of the Sooners as the speaker. That will be followed by Norris, the Sooner defensive coordinator, speaking on that phase of the game. The morning session winds up with Epley, the strength and conditioning coach, talking about Nebraska's work in that area.

The afternoon session will include drill sessions on quarterbacks, along with offense and defense in general, followed by on-field activities with the ECU team.

Sunday's session will wind up at noon, following more on the Nebraska and Oklahoma programs.

Pre-registered coaches may attend for $15, with registration at the door $17.50. Fees include all sessions, meals on Friday and Saturday night and two socials. Special motel rates are also available.

Jaguars Stop Saints, 9-7

DUDLEY — Farmville Central saw a five-run lead evaporate only to come back and score two runs in the seventh and defeat Southern Wayne 9-7, Thursday in a high school baseball game.

With the score tied at 7-7, the Jaguars got the lead run on with one out when Bobby Avery reached on an error. Wade Corbett singled, moving Avery to second, but Greg Hardison grounded out, moving both runners up a base with two outs.

Alan Corbett then stepped up and ripped a single to knock in Avery and put the Jaguars on top. Eason added an insurance run moments later with a double, which knocked in Wade Corbett.

Bears Top Game, 9-3

CHOCOWINITY — Clay Gardner drove in four runs and Bear Grass erupted for five runs in the second inning to defeat Chocowinity, 9-3, in a high school baseball game Thursday afternoon.

Four straight walks in the second produced the Bears' first run before William Roberson, who was two for four on the day, sacrificed a run in. Gardner then tripled, knocking in two more runs. To cap the inning off, Gardner stole home.

From there, the Bears coasted home behind the three-hit pitching of Roberson.

Bear Grass, now 4-1 overall and 3-1 in the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference, was led in hitting by Gardner, who was three for four and David Price, who was one of one.

The Bears are scheduled to play host to Aurora today.

round of the NCAA tournament.

And the season also saw the end of forward Hawkeye Whitney's and guard Clyde Austin's collegiate careers. The two were the mainstay of the Wolf-pack team this season. His best returning players will be sophomores, Thurl Bailey and Sidney Lowe.

"I met with the team (Thursday)," Valvano told reporters. "We're going to be enthusiastic, we're going to dream, we're going to work awfully hard."

Like all coaches, Valvano said his goal is a national championship.

He may have a player to replace Whitney. Gary Springer, a 6-foot-7 prep all-star from Benjamin Franklin High in New York is verbally committed to Iona.

Although Valvano said he wouldn't try to change Springer's mind, he said he'd be more than happy to talk with the power forward should he decide to change his.

Valvano said he enjoyed his six seasons at Iona, where he took a team that had a 4-19 record and built steadily to this season's mark. During the past two seasons, with 6-foot-11 Jeff Ruland at center, the team compiled a 52-11 mark.

"Part of the challenge of it was gone," he said of his job as Gaels coach.

"I think I'm ready, I'm ready for the challenge (of the ACC)," he said.

He said his offensive strategy would be dictated by the players' abilities. "I do believe in motion defense and I always have," he said of defensive philosophy. "We'll press, we'll do a lot of everything."

Valvano started his coaching career as an assistant to Bill Foster at Rutgers, where Val-

For a while it looked like the Jaguars would run away with the game. Farmville opened up a 5-0 lead after its first at bat only to see Southern Wayne rally to cut the margin to 5-4 after three.

The Jaguars regained command, moving ahead 7-4 with two runs in the fourth. Southern Wayne rallied again, however, and tied the score at seven with a run in the fifth and two in the sixth before the Jaguars seventh-inning rally gave them the win.

Farmville, now 2-3, was led by Hardison, Corbett and Eason, all of whom were two for four. Michael James was two for five. Hardison, Eason and James all had doubles for the Jaguars, who travel to Charles B. Aycock Saturday.

Bullets Gain Win

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville High School's girls' softball team remained unbeaten yesterday, gaining a 4-2 victory over Chocowinity.

Jamesville scored single runs in the first, fourth, fifth and sixth inning, while holding Chocowinity to single runs in the fourth and sixth.

Bobbie Craft led the Chocowinity hitting with three, while Ginger Jefferson added two.

Tammy Williams had three for Jamesville, including a triple, while Deanne Spencer also had a triple for the Lady Bullets.

Now 5-0, Jamesville plays host to Aurora on Monday.

vano graduated in 1967. Foster will be at South Carolina next season after leaving Duke.

Valvano was head coach at Johns Hopkins for a year, then spent three years at Bucknell before taking the helm at Iona.

"It's not a rebuilding job," he said of the post at N.C. State. "This is a great basketball school. I just want to continue it."

When asked what his salary would be, Valvano joked that he was so enthusiastic about being offered the job that he forgot to ask. "I wanted to come to State that badly," he said.

Casey said Valvano had a five-year contract at $40,000 to $45,000 a year, exclusive of any television or basketball camp contracts he might negotiate.

Casey also tried to put to rest numerous reports that the job had been offered to others. "This job was offered to one man and one man only," he said.

Pate Feels Overdue For A Victory

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Steady overnight rains forced a one-day postponement today of second-round play in the $300,000 Heritage Golf Classic.

The steady rains flooded the Harbour Town Golf Links and made play impossible. The tournament schedule now has second-round play set for Saturday with a double round of 36 holes for Sunday.

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — By his own account, Jerry Pate is overdue for a victory. "I'm at the stage of my career where I should be winning and winning consistently," said the young man who won the 1976 United States Open as a pro rookie.

Pate failed to win at all last year, the first time he's gone through a full season without a title on the PGA tour. "I didn't like that, I didn't like it at all. I just haven't been very consistent. A couple of times last year I played well, but somebody just played better. I've had trouble with my concentration. I don't know what it is. If I did I'd correct it."

"I've just eased up too much at times. I've got to just stick in there and fight until they run up the flag and somebody says it's over."

But Pate had no trouble at all, not with concentration, not with his game, not with the howling winds, in the first round Thursday of the $300,000 Heritage Classic.

He fired a 5-under-par 66 that gave him a two-shot lead.

"Under the conditions, it may be the best round of the year," said John Mahaffey, who was tied for second.

The conditions were dreadful. Rain that threatened from the gloomy clouds over the Harbour Town course never materialized, but the temperatures were chilly and made more biting by gusty, 30 mile per hour winds.

"It was a nasty day, a day when it was very difficult to score, very difficult to get the ball close," said Tom Watson, the defending champion and outstanding player in golf for the past three seasons. "That 66 is an excellent round of golf."

Pate missed only three greens in the difficult conditions and saved par on all but the 18th, where he made his lone bogey.

Mahaffey, who beat Pate in a playoff for the 1978 PGA national championship, birdied that hole with a 35-40 foot putt to gain his share of second.

Leonard Thompson also shot a 68 despite a double bogey on the 12th hole, where his second shot was deflected out of bounds by a pine cone.

At 69, two under par, were Doug Tewell and George Burns, who birdied three of his last four holes when the cold and the winds were at their worst.

Watson was tied at 70 with South African Gary Player, Ben Crenshaw, Ray Floyd, Ed Sneed, Terry Diehl, Steve Melnyk, Bobby Walzel, Mark McCumber and veteran Bob

Goalby. Lee Trevino, a winner last Sunday and a notorious warm-weather player, was out of his element in the bone-chilling breezes and struggled to a fat 77. He is in danger of missing the cut when the invitational field of 120 is trimmed to the low 70 scorers after Friday's second round. Pate made his round with a domination of the toughest holes on the course, the eighth, 10th, 11th and 12th. A 3-iron shot set up a 6-foot birdie putt on the eighth. He dropped 10-12 foot putts for birdies on the 11th and 12th and missed a 5-foot birdie putt on the 10th.

Sherk Finds A Little Luck

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — Cathy Sherk, needing a little luck to revitalize her ailing golf game, got it when she opened her mail Thursday.

Inside the envelope from a friend was a four-leaf clover decal that she promptly pasted on her sun visor.

The lucky shamrock worked its magic. Sherk birdied four straight holes on her way to a 3-under par 68 that gave her a share of the first round lead in the $150,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament at Mesa Verde Country Club.

Sherk and Pat Meyers took a one-stroke lead into today's second round.

During Sherk's blazing streak, she missed a hole in one by an inch and added another birdie when her bunker shot from 45 feet out rolled into the cup.

That, she said, "is when I figured it was my day."

And, because she's the superstitious type: "I'll probably be wearing the same clothes and the same sun visor tomorrow (today)," said the two-time Canadian amateur champion whose best finish this year was a tie for 18th.

Lady luck wasn't as kind to co-favorites Nancy Lopez Melton and JoAnne Carner. Both suffered the indignity of triple bogey sevens on the 17th hole.

Melton, in quest of her first victory of the year, fired a 1-over par 72 while Carner, the defending champion, struggled to a 78, 10 strokes off the pace.

Hollis Stacy and Jo Ann Washam trailed the co-leaders by a stroke entering today's second round of the 72-hole tournament. Two strokes back in a four-way tie were Julie Stanger, Penny Pulz, Murlie Breer and Elaine Hand.

Sherk's near-ace occurred on the par three, 165-yard 18th hole. Hitting a six iron, she struck the pin, just missing the $1,000 prize for a hole in one.

"I could have used that," said Sherk, who currently ranks 67th on the money list with $3,216.

Meyers, 25, grabbed the early lead with her first sub-70 round of the year, one shot shy of her career low. Meyers and Sherk started the day with four-under par 32s during their first nines.

Meyers, with just one victory in 84 tour appearances, had four birdies on her first nine and finished with two bogies.

Heggins Is Named

East Carolina football coach Ed Emory closed out his staff yesterday with the naming of Jimmy Heggins as a part-time coach in charge of tight ends.

A native of Salisbury, Heggins is a graduate of Florida State University, where he was a three year starter—at three different positions. He started his sophomore year as a running back, then was switched to nose guard during Bobby Bowden's first year at FSU. He then played linebacker on the Tangerine Bowl team the next year.

For the past two seasons, he has been an assistant coach at a Miami, Fla., high school.

He replaces Ron West on the staff, who resigned to take a full-time position with North Texas State.

Roanoke Gets Forfeit Win

AHOSKIE — Roanoke High School nipped Williamston in a track meet after the Tigerettes had apparently won the event.

The meet finished with Williamston ahead, 65-54, but it was discovered that Williamston's Michelle Price had participated in more events than allowed, and the Tigerettes were forced to forfeit all her points.

That allowed Roanoke to take the victory, 54-40.

Sonya Wiggins and Venita Ore were double winners for Williamston. The former won the mile and 880, while the latter took the long jump and the 100. Anna Moore won the triple jump and 440 for Roanoke.

Rampettes Seek Track Championship

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

With several strong veterans returning and a good crew of younger girls, Rose High School coach Dennis Gibson sees a bright year ahead for the Rampettes of the track.

"It's very promising. The conference is tough," Gibson said, "but I think we have more depth than anyone else. We beat Fike the other day, and they are the defending champions. We got a few breaks, but we hope to get those all along."

Among the top returnees is Laurie Smith, who leads the Rampettes in the hurdles, shot and discus. "She's been our team leader so far."

Another bright spot has been the work of Karen Hendrix in the 220, 440, mile relay and long jump.

"We have a good high jumper in freshman Leanne Wiseman, and are relays, composed mostly of younger girls, have been getting good times," Gibson pointed out.

The top sprinter is Judy Daniels, who has the best 100 in the division so far with an 11.86 timing. Angie Atkinson adds sprint depth, while Devenia Cherry has been a leader in the triple jump.

The Haselrig sisters, Bernestine and Belinda, have been handling the shot and discus and 440 and mile relay, respectively.

Other people include Hope Streeter in the 220 and mile relay; Melody Joyner in the 100 and 220; Beth Bailey in the 440 relay; Marie Howard in the two-mile; Katherine York, Ruth Taft, Kathy Ridenhour and Katherine Elmer, all in the 880, Bobbie Holloway in the mile; Laurie Dickens in the high jump; Sheila Murphy in the 220 and 880 relay; Theresa Johnson in the 880 relay; Tammy Mayo in the 440 and mile relay; Angela Crandall in the triple and long jumps and the mile relay; Donna Cullipher in the 880 and mile; Sharon Williams in the long jump and 880 relay; Marie Gray in the shot and discus; Theresa Johnson in the mile relay and the 440; and Lillie Wilson in the long jump and mile relay.

"We feel we have an excellent shot at the Division I championship," Gibson said.

Greene Central
Greene Central's young girls track program is only in its second year, and the girls are still handicapped by not having a track to work out on.

"Right now," Coach Spence Grantham said, "we do most of our practicing in the parking lot. We do have a pit for the long and triple jumpers, and we use mats inside the gym for the high jumpers. We're measured off about a 250-yard stretch in the parking lot, but that doesn't help our distance runners at all."

"Right now, when these girls get to a real track, it kind of blows their mind. We've shown them how long it is, but they don't comprehend it until they get to a real track."

Hopefully, work is not long off in repairing this situation. An area has already been cleared for a track at the school, and Grantham said he hopes that by next spring, Greene Central will have a facility.

"We have only one senior on the team, Sheila Swinson, a shot putter. Most of the girls are freshmen and sophomores and only a couple of juniors. "I think we'll be improved over last year, but we won't be a contender (for the Eastern Carolina Conference title) this year," the coach added.

"With no program at the junior high, these girls have never seen a track meet until they run one, and that's a tough way to see your first one. Once we have a track and people get to see what it's all about we'll do better, I'm sure."

Top people include hurdler Debra Hooker, freshman sprinter Toni Warren; junior Minnie Lanier, who handles the discus and the hurdles; freshman two-miler Katie Harrison; freshman Debra Jones in the 400 and freshman Ophelia Williams in the 800, Dawn Smith and Vickie Dupree in the discus; and Linda Artis and Demetriss Suggs in the shot.

"We have a good attitude, and good leadership, we just need the facility to really train the girls on," Grantham said.

Roanoke
For the Roanoke girls, the likelihood of a championship is not too bright.

"We are young," Coach Henry Land said. "After a couple of meets, we should be able to show some improvement, but we have quite a few new people and that will probably keep us from being a true contender."

While Land feels that the conference race is a question mark, he feels that the Redskins will have to make a tremendous improvement to take the title themselves.

Top people returning for the Squaws include Anna Moore, who was the conference 440 champ last year. "But she's not in top shape yet," Land pointed out.

Cassie Marrow is a top sprinter back from last year, while Rippie Marrow, her sister, is a contender in the hurdles.

Top newcomers include

Evelyn Purvis in the sprints and Wanda Roberson in the 880. Shirley Baker leads a strong shot put group.

"We're still learning basically. It's a good group to work with. They have a good attitude. They're just learning what it's all about," Land said.

Tennis Roundup

Southern Nash 6, Greene C. 3

STANHOPE — Southern Nash won five of the six singles events to assure itself of victory in an Eastern Carolina Conference match against Greene Central yesterday. The Firebirds eventually gained a 6-3 victory.

The loss was the seventh straight against no wins for the Rams, who forced the Firebirds into three sets in two of the singles matches, winning one of those. They also extended the number three doubles team to an extra pair of sets after winning the first two doubles.

Summary:

Steve Leppla (SN) defeated Jeff Seymour, 6-3, 6-1.
Curtis Armstrong (SN) defeated Jesse Murphy, 6-0, 6-2.
Brian Raynor (SN) defeated David Harrison, 6-1, 3-6, 6-1.

COMPARE
THE QUALITY, HIGH PERFORMANCE, VERSATILITY AND PRICE OF A SNAPPER MOWER.

You'll find a SNAPPER is worth more because it does more. And its price is competitive with other quality mowers. Look at all the outstanding SNAPPER quality and performance features:

- 1 Vacuum power for a smooth professional cut and the ability to bag cuttings under tough conditions
- 2 With an optional Mulcherizer, your SNAPPER is converted to a mulching mower which chews up cuttings so fine they become lawn food.
- 3 Another option, the Snapperizer converts your SNAPPER to a leaf shredder and lawn vacuum so you can go over four times as far without emptying the bag.
- 4 Self-propelled models have rear wheel drive and six forward speeds for mowing slowly in tough grasses or quickly in normal situations. A fingertip control disengages the drive for trimming in tight places.

Made-For-TV Movie Sunday Provides Relief

By PETER J. BOYER
 AP Television Writer
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — As far as I'm concerned, the made-for-television movie has arrived. Its grand moment is at hand, with the airing Sunday night of the ABC film, "City in Fear."

At last, television has discovered that bedrock motion picture scene — the one in which a newspaperman rushes to the phone, calls the city room and says: "Get me rewrite!"

I suppose nitpickers will protest the imprecision of the scene — the fact that the legendary line from the "B" movies is "Get me rewrite, sweet-heart"; or they might point out that in "City in Fear," it is not a real reporter but a publisher who utters the magic command.

Inconsequential details. What we have here is a newspaper movie — Murder! Cops! Boogie! Headlines!

And since it's 1980 (instead of "The Front Page's" 1930), we get an extra attraction — Salon Discussions of Journalistic Integrity!

It goes something like this: Robert Vaughn plays "news-paper doctor" Harrison Crawford III, a hotshot publisher who comes to L.A. to save the anemic Los Angeles Sun against all odds (and protests from his ethics-conscious staff). He arrives, looks at the pitiful circulation figures and declares, "I need a star." There just happens to be one around, languishing in a small L.A. apartment cluttered with unsold novels. "The Godfather," he is called, a celebrated East Coast columnist who gave up the newspaper game to write books.

The late David Janssen plays the role (one of his last), imparting all the besotted charm peculiar to the breed. He takes the job, and the Sun's delivery trucks carry the message to the streets: "The Godfather's back, and L.A.'s got him."

Perry King plays the cop, a rich-kid detective who likes to psychoanalyze criminals (his sister is a shrink), and Mickey Rourke plays the crazed "Dream Girl Killer."

Janssen creates the "Dream Girl Killer" story at first, turned-TV reporters who have heroes in countless movies late-been offered up as substitute ly.

working the first victim's grieving parents for quotes such as, "She was such a dream girl!" and "if the police don't catch that maniac, I will."

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Who was that masked man on horseback in front of Mann's Chinese Theater?

Yes, it was a Lone Ranger with a faithful Indian sidekick Tonto.

The masked man was actor Klinton Spilsbury, and his companion in buckskin was Michael Horse.

The stars of a new feature movie, "The Legend of the Lone Ranger," pranced on their horses in front of the theatre as a publicity stunt.

The movie will be the acting debut for both Horse, a silversmith by trade, and Spilsbury, a native of Tucson, Ariz.

The Lone Ranger of the television series is Clayton Moore, 72, and his sidekick was Jay Silverheels, who died March 5.

But Moore is under court order not to appear as the Lone Ranger, and could not be

Maine Farmers Dump Spuds On Canadian Border

By MAUREEN DEA
Associated Press Writer
HOULTON, Maine (AP) — Scores of Maine potato growers, saying they were tired of "giving our potatoes away," dumped thousands of spuds across Canadian border highways and pledged to remain until the federal government came to their financial rescue.

State police took no action to remove growers after breaking up a blockade at Houlton, the busiest of the eight border crossing checkpoints where farmers protested Canadian potato imports.

Almost all traffic except emergency vehicles and pedestrians was halted by parked trucks and tractors and piles of dumped potatoes.

Some farmers pledged to return to Houlton, where state police dispersed at least 70 protesters Thursday after a confrontation in which two demonstrators were arrested and one slightly injured.

"We tried to do it without arresting anybody, without anybody getting hurt," said Lt. John Keyte. "This is a game of no winners... We lose and they lose."

About 250 farmers began the protest Thursday by blocking the checkpoints along 100 miles of the New Brunswick border from Fort Kent to Houlton. They said they now receive only a penny for a pound of potatoes while Canadian growers benefit from government subsidies and a favorable money exchange.

Besides a halt to imports, they asked for establishment of a program using surplus spuds for cattle feed or gasohol.

"If we don't receive word... on a diversion program, we'll have to keep this blocked for three or four days," said Fort Kent grower Clifford Audibert.

It was the second farmer protest in two weeks.

Gov. Joseph E. Brennan expressed sympathy but said a solution "cannot be achieved by disobeying the law."

Joyce Brown, who has run a farm in Monticello for 30 years, said the farmers "are upset and frustrated."

"We've been sold down the river for so long, lied to for so long," she said, adding Maine farmers can't survive on what they now receive for their crops.

"We are crying for help," said one protester. "We are tired of giving our potatoes away."

Another farmers said growers had "no hard feelings against the Canadian people.

It's our government we're upset with."

In Washington, Sen. Edmund Muskie discussed with Vice President Walter Mondale and another officials ways of helping growers. He said farmers stand to lose an estimated $84 million this year.

The Democrat warned last week that Maine's potato industry was threatened with extinction after a 70 percent increase in cheaper imports and said two-thirds of last year's Maine crop remains unsold. However, the board chairman of Northern National Bank in Presque Isle, a major lender to the potato industry, said imports, "while they have had some effect, aren't the chief reason behind the potato price slump."

The basic reason for low prices "is that too many potatoes have been produced in this country for the market. It's supply and demand," J. Roger Erskine said.

Silent Bird Got A Home

DEDHAM, Mass. (AP) — The jury decided Sheba must be the strong silent type. The judge hinted she was not very bright. Either way, she's still got a home with Jane Messina in Braintree.

"I've grown attached to the bird," said Mrs. Messina, who had asked triple damages in court from a Brockton pet shop for the $1,200 white cockatoo, complaining the bird hadn't uttered a word for two years despite daily attempts to train it.

A Boston veterinarian declared Thursday "there are some birds that, no matter how much time you can spend with them, won't talk."

After deliberating an hour, a Norfolk County Superior Court jury agreed with Dr. Margaret Petrak and decided that Mrs. Messina had no grounds to collect damages from Debby's Pet Land.

"They're like humans," Judge Vincent Brogna said of birds after the testimony of Dr. Petrak. "Some are smarter than others, some are retards." Sheba couldn't — or wouldn't — comment on the verdict.

OK's Requests For Soliciting

City Manager Ed Wyatt announced the approval of two requests for solicitation permits in Greenville.

Wyatt said the requests were submitted by: the American Cancer Society for permission to conduct a door-to-door, sidewalk, and merchant solicitation in order to distribute educational material and solicit funds for goals for the American Cancer Society during April, May, June and July; and by

The Seventh-Day Adventist Church for permission to conduct a door-to-door, sidewalk and merchant solicitation and to solicit pledges for a skate-a-thon in order to raise funds for the church from April 1-30.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Why a Certain Cough Medicine?

When there are so many different kinds of over-the-counter medicines that are inexpensive, it seems ridiculous to buy a prescription cough remedy. How can a layman make that decision? — Mr. F.F., Nev. Dear Mr. F.:

A cough is part of a wonderful mechanism that clears the airway and the bronchial tubes of any irritation. This reflex action protects the entire respiratory tree from foreign substances, polluted air, the accumulation of mucus, and offending allergic inhalants.

If there is the slightest irritant in the windpipe, or an infection or inflammation, a signal is sent immediately to the cough center in the brain. This message is then relayed to the muscles of the chest and to the diaphragm and an explosive cough tends to clear the passageway of the irritant.

There are two basic kinds of cough. The first is a dry one — which is hacking and may be the result of irritation by tobacco, smoke or other pollutants in the inhaled air. The second is a productive cough — which brings up the accumulated mucus or pus that results from infection.

The treatment of a cough, therefore, depends on establishing the underlying cause. Once this is done, the decision is made as to whether suppressing a cough or encouraging it is the ideal form of treatment. Doctors sometimes change within a very few days the nature of the medicines they prescribe. Each medicine serves a very specific function.

There are many excellent over-the-counter cough medicines which doctors suggest without writing a prescription, for the old method of compounding cough medicines with many ingredients is time-consuming and expensive. Many of the over-the-counter drugs now have many of the ingredients that once were included in the "specially compounded" medicines.

I have two impacted wisdom teeth. There seems to be a difference of opinion as to whether they should be removed. Is it always necessary to have this done? — Miss F.W., La. Dear Miss W.:

If impacted wisdom teeth are a source of infection, if they impinge on nerves that cause pain, if they affect the bite, if they crowd the bite, then serious consideration should be given to their removal.

Dentists and dental surgeons no longer recommend the removal of wisdom teeth "because they are there." They carefully evaluate each case individually. Only then can they come to the decision as to whether or not such surgery should be performed. Indiscriminate removal of impacted teeth should never be done.

W. Taylor, the above named defendant, Take notice that a pleading seeking relief against you has been filed in the above entitled action. The nature of the relief being sought is as follows: An action on an account. You are required to make defense to such pleading not later than the 7th day of May, 1980, said date being forty days from the first publication of this notice, and upon your failure to do so, the party seeking service against you will apply to the Court for the relief sought. Only Your Paper Carrier Loses When You Do Not Pay Promptly.

"Hi. My name is Cary and I represent your Daily Reflector newspaper carrier. And if you have a few minutes I'd like to explain something about my job.

"All paper carriers for The Daily Reflector are independent contractors. What this means is that I pay the newspaper a wholesale rate for the papers on my route. What I charge you is the retail rate. The difference in the two rates is my profit.

"The Daily Reflector doesn't lose any money when you don't pay me on time. I lose some of my profit."

A tip from Cary to help you pay your Daily Reflector newspaper carrier on time:

Put the money, or check, for your carrier in the same convenient place each collection period. Make sure household members know where the payment is so that anyone can pay the carrier at collection time.

Sees Exchange Of Bondage

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi says women's liberation in the West is "merely an exchange of one kind of bondage for another."

Speaking at the inauguration of the new All-India Women's Center on Wednesday, Mrs. Gandhi said Western women often equate freedom with "imitation of men."

True liberation for women, she said, involves feeling free to be women — not competitors or imitators of men.
