MOUNTAIN ERUPTS — A large crater can be seen at left as Mount St. Helens erupted Wednesday, spewing black smoke and ash skyward. Scientists say the chance of a lava eruption appears to be gradually increasing. (AP Laserphoto)

Volcano Said Signalling Major Convulsion Is Due

By DAVID AMMONS
Associated Press Writer
COUGAR, Wash. (AP) — After a day of violent eruptions, Mount St. Helens was being rocked by harmonic tremors — a type of quake that has preceded eruptions at other volcanoes — and scientists were debating whether the 9,677-foot peak will spew lava in a major convulsion.

The new seismic activity Wednesday night apparently means magma — molten rock — is moving to the surface of the volcano that came to life last week, said Dave Endicott, a spokesman for the University of Washington geophysics department in Seattle.

"It is the kind of seismic occurrence often seen before an eruption," Endicott said. "It's impossible to say how deep the magma is...let's just say we're watching this one real close."

Wednesday night's seismic readings showed very smooth curves, while previous quake readings have been very erratic, he said.

But Dwight "Rocky" Crandall, a U.S. Geological Survey geologist, was wary of comparing Mount St. Helens to other volcanoes.

"As far as we can tell, it doesn't mean that (an eruption) is more imminent than it was before," he said in Vancouver. "It doesn't warrant special notification of emergency personnel...we haven't reached that level of concern."

Scientists also were studying whether bulging in the ground around the mountain signaled a coming lava eruption. The half-inch bulge has been termed insignificant, but scientists say more tilting could mean the mountain is swelling under the pressure of molten rock moving toward the surface.

The seismic change occurred a few hours after a series of violent steam explosions, the most severe to rock the mountain, ejected 60-foot-wide pieces of ice and blasted down a wall between the volcano's two craters, officials said.

The crater now measures some 1,500 feet across, said Lynn Robertson of the U.S. Forest Service in Vancouver, Wash. Four chunks of ash-coated ice were found at the 7,600-foot level after the smoke cleared, she said.

Scientists were awaiting information from U-2 flights over the volcano Wednesday on locations of hot spots, mudslides and ash. The spy plane, from Moffett Naval Air Station near San Francisco, flew over the volcano at 65,000 feet with elaborate electronic and photographic equipment.

Earlier Wednesday, an eruption sent huge billows of volcanic ash toward Portland, Ore., and slight levels of ash were reported in Vancouver, across the Columbia River from Portland.

The geological survey reported that "the present level of activity presents no danger to the lives or health of people in areas more than 20 miles north, east and south of the volcano, or more than 10 miles west."

'Restraint' On Iran Agreed To By U.S.

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

The Carter administration says it will be "restrained" in its efforts to free the American hostages in Iran and is urging the public to "stay cool, at least for a while," amid reports the same assurances have been made to Tehran.

Administration officials said the United States should know in a matter of days whether the Iranian government will make good its offer to take custody of the 50 U.S. hostages who have been held by militants in the U.S. Embassy at Tehran since Nov. 4.

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr was quoted in Tehran as saying Carter agreed in a message delivered Wednesday not to talk publicly about the hostage situation in hopes the transfer will take place.

The New York Times reported in today's editions that Bani-Sadr said, "We asked Carter to say he will speak no more about this matter until Parliament convenes and has sent us a note saying he accepts that."

The Washington Post, which had a similar report, reported the new U.S. message only repeated past U.S. assertions that the hostages should be freed as soon as possible and noted Iran's intention to have their fate decided by the new parliament.

White House press secretary Jody Powell refused to divulge the contents of the latest U.S. note to Tehran. He confirmed there have been "messages back and forth" but said none was "different from what has been said publicly."

Earlier Wednesday, Powell had read a statement that said: "We intend to continue to be restrained in our words and actions so long as real progress is made to resolve this crisis and bring our people home."

Bani-Sadr has said the government will take custody of the hostages if the United States issues an official statement promising to refrain from hostilities, propaganda or provocation against Iran until the Parliament takes up the matter, probably in mid-summer.

Carter did not mention Iran in two public appearances Wednesday, and a White House official said the president has withheld public comment on the Iranian conditions for the hostage transfer in an attempt to avoid painting Bani-Sadr into a corner.

But the same official, who asked not to be identified, said Carter would not "make a statement that he isn't going to say anything about Iran."

Powell refused to say how long the U.S. restraint will last, and he insisted that it is too early to say that the latest effort to break the hostage impasse has failed.

City Hall Stands By Cross-Training

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Mayor Don McGlohon, in a morning meeting with media representatives, discussed the continuing fire-rescue controversy here, stating, "On behalf of the City Council, we hope to clear up any misunderstanding of recent weeks related to the Fire/Rescue Department."

McGlohon, in addressing the cross-training program implemented for fire and rescue workers, related that, "Our objective by the end of the year is to have all operating personnel in the department trained in both EMT (emergency medical technician) and basic firefighting."

The mayor observed, "At the conclusion of the training program, employees in the Fire/Rescue Department will be placed in job assignments based upon the area of interest, aptitude, and ability of that person and the manpower needs of the department."

McGlohon said that while department personnel might not have a choice in their work assignment, "Scheduling and deployment of employees can be arranged so that skill levels of all employees may not only be maintained but improved through continuing training programs."

He said that, "All personnel in fire/rescue will receive continuing training to maintain and build upon their levels of proficiency."

According to the city spokesman, "Implementation of this program will help to stabilize future manpower needs, provide for more effective utilization of personnel, increase promotional opportunities within the department and allow each skill group to back-up the other in various emergency situations."

Questioned regarding the controversial schedule that was announced for department personnel, McGlohon said that "on paper it worked to get everyone cross-trained," but he acknowledged that the City Council now sees that the long-range implementation of the previous schedule might not be in the best interest of the city.

Personnel in the fire-rescue section, particularly rescue employees, objected to the work schedule, citing the length of time that they would be assigned away from their chosen duties in order to cross-train.

McGlohon said that when the cross-training phase is over, personnel who are most interested in a particular area, whether it be fire or rescue service, would be assigned in that area for their primary duties. He emphasized, however, that because of the increased number of qualified EMT personnel on hand, a rotating system will be possible.

The scheduling process has to be worked out, he contended, saying that no schedule is sacred or immune to change.

McGlohon assured news personnel that "rescue services which the city has provided within the corporate limits and in other designated areas of the county are continuing on an uninterrupted basis — and will continue to provide emergency medical services 24 hours per day, seven days per week."

He continued, "We are proud of the good work being performed by the employees in the Fire/Rescue Department and the cooperative efforts from them as a program of cross-training is being implemented. The City Council is committed to this policy and firmly believes it to be in the long-range, best interest of the entire community."

The mayor said that, "We (Continued On Page 10)

Retirees May Face A Recall

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an unprecedented action in peacetime, the Army plans to notify up to 200,000 retired officers and enlisted soldiers that they could be recalled to active duty in a crisis mobilization so younger troops could be freed for overseas assignment.

The plan, announced Wednesday, would affect men and women up to age 60 who retired without disabilities and who live in the contiguous 48 states. Those living in Alaska and Hawaii would not be affected under present arrangements, although officials said they may be included later.

Retired soldiers recalled to active duty in a war or national emergency would be assigned to bases in the continental United States, enabling the Army to release younger soldiers for transfer overseas, the statement said.

The program is aimed at giving the Army a quick transfusion of manpower for backup missions, along with mobilization of National Guard and Reserve members.

In the absence of a draft, the Army has been searching for ways to mobilize thousands of extra personnel for necessary assignments in the early weeks of a crisis. The first group to be called would be drawn from about 82,000 officers and enlisted personnel who have retired within the past five years. Current plans call for selected retirees to receive peacetime orders telling them when and where to report to active duty in event of a presidential decision to mobilize.

No retirees are being recalled to active duty now, the Army stressed.

Gov. Hunt Supports An Incentive For Savings

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Calling it an important step toward encouraging savings, Gov. Jim Hunt said today he backs a proposed state income tax incentive for small savers.

Hunt endorsed the proposal of the N.C. Savings and Loan League for a state income tax exemption on the first $200 on interest drawn from savings accounts.

The move, if approved by the General Assembly this year, would provide a maximum tax break of only $14 per person for those in the state's highest tax bracket, and less for those with lower incomes. The tax savings would be realized in 1981.

Hunt, in his weekly news conference, acknowledged that the tax break would be largely symbolic. But he said it would also bring state tax law into line with recent federal legislation.

"This is an important step toward encouraging saving instead of spending and borrowing. Congress has this week approved similar legislation on the federal level," Hunt said.

Leaders of savings and loan associations in North Carolina called on Hunt to back such a proposal last week. They complained that the much higher interest rates yielded by federal certificates of deposit and other savings methods were causing people to remove their savings from regular savings and loan accounts.

Hunt also said he would meet next Tuesday with representatives of the savings and loan industry, realtors, the housing industry, mortgage bankers and state Treasurer Harlan Boyles to discuss the drop in home construction and purchasing caused by high interest rates.

"We know this is a national problem that cannot be remedied overnight," Hunt said. "But we want to explore any way that state government and the industry can work together to soften the impact on the family that wants to own a home and on the men and women whose paychecks depend on the health of this industry."

Widespread Probe Into Killing Of Parachutist

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Investigators from several U.S. Army posts have been called in to assist Fort Bragg officials in a probe into the death of an officer who was killed last week when his parachute failed to open.

Capt. Lawrence D. Hill, 26, plunged to his death March 26 and an investigation has revealed that Hill's parachute had been sabotaged.

Pfc. Alvin P. Williams, a 20-year-old parachute rigger who was assigned to Fort Bragg in December, has been charged with murder in connection with Hill's death.

Despite widespread rumors that a number of sabotaged parachutes have been discovered since the fatal accident, Fort Bragg spokesman Maj. Tom Woods said Wednesday that none of the 4,000 parachutes that have been checked so far were faulty.

Woods said about 4,000 more parachutes remained to be checked, a process that could take at least another week.

The investigation is focused on Company E, 407th Supply and Service Battalion, to which Williams was assigned. The battalion is responsible for packing the parachutes used at Fort Bragg.

Army officials said the static line cord on Hill's parachute had been cut. They have declined, however, to disclose the circumstances leading to Williams' arrest.

"Parachuting is our bread and butter, and when our bread and butter is screwed with, we're going to stonewall it until we find out what's going on," said Maj. Roger E. Smith, a spokesman for the 82nd Airborne Division.

Five Cubans Reach U.S. On Inner-Tube Raft

By ERNESTO PINO
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Guided by a copper figure of Our Lady of Charity and using bicycle pedals as a paddle, five Cuban men drifted on a flimsy innertube raft in the Gulf Stream for six days to reach the United States.

A U.S. Navy vessel picked up the men Wednesday about 17 miles east of Miami, and they were taken to a Coast Guard boat for the trip ashore, said Coast Guard spokesman Greg Robinson.

A Russian freighter spotted them shortly after they left Cuba, near Havana, but its crew let them go after the five convinced them they were trying to win a bet.

"We told them we were Puerto Ricans who were staying for at least three days in the open sea for a bet," said Jose Mario Campos, 27.

The sunburned men were reportedly suffering from slight exposure and dehydration, officials said.

They escaped on a vessel consisting of five inner tubes and some planks, propelled by bicycle pedals rigged to a paddle and guided by a rudder and the figurine of Cuba's patron saint.

Coast Guard spokesman Robert Cornelius said relatives and friends of the men learned they had escaped from Cuba and alerted the Coast Guard.

"Sometimes the Coast Guard gets word from relatives in the Miami area that refugees have escaped the island or are near the point of departure, and that helps some in searching for them," Cornelius said. "In this particular case, we knew they reportedly had departed from Cuba and were in pretty bad shape."

Robinson said the USS Maumee was headed from Texas City, Texas, to Norfolk, Va., when it spotted the refugees.

Enrique Serafin Torres, 36, shouted out a message as he left the Coast Guard patrol boat on a stretcher: "I bring to you all this message. Cubans. We have to be united to liberate our brothers there and defeat Castro communism."

Another refugee, Roberto Delgado, said that more than 3,000 Cuban youngsters are trying to escape from Cuba.

"Some have been drowned at sea, others have been captured by Castro's patrol boats and sent to jail," Delgado said. "There is no future for Cuban youngsters, and they try to get away even at the risk of their lives."

More than 100 Cubans have fled the island this year, many crossing the sometimes dangerous Straits of Florida on makeshift rafts, small boats or in hijacked ships.

Spring Tonic Tour Set In New Bern

NEW BERN — Some 25 homes and buildings on the National Register of Historic Places in North Carolina's Colonial capitol will be open to the public for New Bern's biennial Spring Tonic Tour on Friday and Saturday, April 11 and 12.

In addition, eight historic churches and the Gardens of Tryon Palace, are included in the 1980 tour along with the Academy — the first school in the state established by the Colonial legislature.

Most of the homes and buildings include spring gardens that are rarely open to the public.

The Spring Tonic Tour is sponsored by the Historic New Bern Foundation, Inc., and the New Bern Historical Society, Inc., every two years and features a different selection of homes from about 140 structures in New Bern constructed in the 18th and early 19th centuries.

Tickets good for both days are available in advance for $8 by writing: Spring Tonic Tour, P. O. Box 1007, New Bern, N. C., 28560. Tickets purchased on the days of the tour are priced at $10. Proceeds realized are used for restoration projects.

On Sunday, April 13, Tryon Palace gardens will be open from 1 to 5 p.m. to the public.

Personal

Marie Autry, Denise Clark, Venessa Clark and Ronnie Hohnson, students at N. C. Central University, Durham, were weekend guests of Cynthia Denise Tetterton of Ayden, who is also a student there. They attended a AKA Sorority Convention held in Greenville.

If you've ever passed by a fresh pineapple at the supermarket because you didn't know how to choose it or a cut of lean meat because you didn't know how to cook it, you may be omitting some interesting—and healthful—foods from your diet.

According to the dietary guidelines released recently by the federal government, eating a wide variety of foods in moderation can keep people healthy and even improve health. The U. S. Departments of Agriculture and Health, Education and Welfare based their advice on scientific evidence that links the foods we eat to such health problems as heart disease, high blood pressure and dental caries.

The guidelines recommend broadening your food choices to include selections of fruits, vegetables, whole grain and enriched grain products, milk, cheese, yogurt, meats, poultry, fish, eggs and dry beans and peas. Eat foods containing starch and fiber (for example, fruits, whole grain breads and vegetables, especially beans and peas). They're high in nutrients and relatively low in calories. In addition, try to cut down on sugar, fats, cholesterol, sodium (salt and other substances with "sodium" in their names) and alcoholic beverages.

Try the following "how to buy" tips and make some positive changes in your shopping and eating habits:

—Some canned and frozen vegetables have added salt or salty sauces—check the labels. If you buy fresh and plain frozen vegetables you can prepare and serve them with as little salt as you desire.

—Replace sugary desserts with fresh, canned or frozen fruits. Many canned fruits are now picked in light sugar syrup or fruit juice.

—Include lean meats and poultry in your diet.

—Potatoes aren't fattening—it's the sauces and fats usually served with them that pile on the calories. A medium-sized potato provides only about 100 calories.

—Eggs contain cholesterol, but they are also good sources of vitamins, minerals and protein. Include eggs in your meals in moderation, keeping an eye toward your total diet. Cottage cheese, skim milk and yogurt are some low-fat dairy foods you may want to try. For copies of the "How to Buy" series write: FSQS Information, Room 3606-S, USDA, Washington, DC 20250.

Warn Some May Lose Part Of Food Stamps

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State human resources officials have warned local social services departments that 577,000 low-income North Carolinians could lose part of their food stamps unless Congress renounces the program.

John H. Kerr, chief of the food assistance section of the state's Division of Social Services, told a legislative commission that local departments administering the program have been advised to prepare for cutbacks in funding.

Kerr said Congress must act before May 15 to keep the federal funding active. North Carolina received $24 million this year for the food stamp program.

County departments have been advised to begin the cutbacks, if needed, by reducing the number of food stamps authorized for participating families. Cancellation of a family's entire allotment would be the last step in a funding emergency.

"I don't think we're going to cancel anyone's food stamps," said human resources department spokesman June Milby.

Positive Ideas Needed

We have followed the debate over Greenville's rescue system over a period of time with more than usual concern.

From its very inception, "The Daily Reflector" has been unwavering in its support of rescue service as it was developed within the Greenville Fire Department.

In the early days, rescue service was largely volunteer, as indeed was the fire fighting service.

Developed under the late fire chief George Gardner, the rescue operations here set a pattern for similar service in other North Carolina municipalities and counties. Repeatedly local rescue teams won top awards in international and state competition . . . and we shared the pride of all Greenville for the accomplishment.

As the rescue operation grew, a number of paid men were added to the Fire Department staff and their time was devoted exclusively to rescue work. The paid men were supplemented by a continually active squad of volunteers.

As the plan for cross-training rescuemen and firemen was advanced, trouble developed particularly in the rescue department. There were calls for a department separate from the fire department, with promises to build the building with privately raised funds.

It was a plan we could not accept.

We don't believe Greenville has the financial resources to support the number of paid men which would be required to man an entirely separate rescue operation.

On the other hand we were not too pleased with the plan that took trained rescuemen off that duty and put them on regular fire department shifts.

Nevertheless, we didn't feel that the City Council and city administration could accept demands which would bind them to unknown future expenditures. Thus we have been supportive of city officials as they attempted to bring the situation under control, even though difficult as it was to accept it meant the resignations of all the volunteer rescue squad members and several of the paid rescuemen.

Now, however, we feel the point has been made as to who is going to be in charge of setting city policy. It is time for city officials to begin listening to any ideas which might improve both rescue and fire service and at the same time obtain optimum use of manpower and equipment.

Perhaps a mayor-appointed committee, composed of citizens and a council representative, can hear suggestions — not demands — for improvement of service within the existing department. There may be a better way and we can't afford to pass up any positive ideas.

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

The Care Of Gargantua

WASHINGTON — The mail brings a text of one of those dear little well-intentioned acts of the Congress, and I am minded to offer it as a kind of Exhibit A in the case against Big Government. Do you ever wonder how we have drifted into the mess we're in? The Dispute Resolution Act provides a textbook explanation.

We begin with little problems. Somewhere a tenant complains that his hot water heater doesn't work, and the landlord won't repair it. Neighbors quarrel over a barking dog. A woman buys a bathing suit, wears it once and decides she doesn't like it; the merchant refuses to take it back. A mechanic and a car owner fall into a dispute over the bill for a tune-up job.

Such disputes are among the universal conditions of mankind. Sometimes they wind up in the small claims courts. Sometimes the arguments are settled by a store's adjustment window. Sometimes they end with a punch in the nose. Whatever they are, these disputes are quintessentially local affairs. Only under the most strained and tortuous interpretation of the Constitution could they be classified as a legitimate concern of the federal government.

But strained interpretations of the Constitution are nothing new on Capitol Hill. Much of the domestic legislative history of the past 50 years is rooted in the tenuous argument that if the states and localities fail to solve even the pettiest problems, the United States Congress must respond.

So it was in this case. You might suppose that if these trivial disputes were of sufficient magnitude to constitute a truly serious problem, state legislatures and city councils could easily be moved to establish informal tribunals to settle them. But, no. It is too much trouble to solve local problems locally. Let there be a law! A federal law! Thus a curious coalition came into being several years ago, bringing together such disparate pressure groups as the Consumers Union, the Consumer Federation of America, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the American Bar Association. What emerged from their joint effort, after abortive tries in the 94th and 95th Congresses, is the Dispute Resolution Act of 1980.

The act is a perfect specimen of its kind. It is couched in the Styrofoam prose beloved of the bureaucratic mind. Here the Congress solemnly finds that "there is a lack of necessary resources or expertise in many areas of the nation to develop new or improved consumer dispute resolution mechanisms, neighborhood dispute resolution mechanisms and other necessary dispute resolution mechanisms." This inadequacy of dispute resolution mechanisms "is contrary to the general welfare of the people."

How is the inadequacy to be overcome? The act provides for a Dispute Resolution Advisory Board, which the attorney general is even now putting together. There is also to be a Dispute Resolution Resource Center. Beginning in the next fiscal year, $10,000,000 is to be authorized annually in grants-in-aid to applicants who qualify for dispute resolution mechanism programs. We are to have reports, recommendations, studies, research and comprehensive surveys. We are to have a national clearinghouse for the exchange of information. And so on, and so on, and so on.

Sponsored by Sen. Wendell Ford of Kentucky, the bill cleared the Senate on a voice vote last April. It squeaked through the House on Dec. 12 by a vote of 207-195. Mr. Carter signed it into law on Feb. 12. This Spring, the Dispute Resolution Resource Center will raise its pretty head in the weedy garden of bureaucratic flowers, one more, hardly perennial never to be rooted out.

In its preamble, the act acknowledges that petty disputes "may be of relatively small social or economic magnitude," but the preamble continues with a defensive rationalization: "Taken collectively such disputes are of enormous social and economic consequence." The language merits paraphrase. This particular grant-in-aid scheme may be of small magnitude in a $600-billion federal budget, but collectively such programs are of enormous governmental con-

Groceries Take More

By George Gallup
PRINCETON, N.J. — The amount of money American families are paying at the grocer's check-out counter continues to rise steeply.

In this year's Gallup Poll audit of weekly food expenditures, the median amount cited by respondents across the nation is $39, the highest figure recorded since the Gallup Poll began charting food expenditures in 1937. This latest figure represents a whopping $6 increase over the median amount recorded last year ($33), making it the highest annual dollar increase in the survey's history so far.

At the audit's inception in 1937, the median figure was $11 per week. During the 20-year period between 1949 and 1969, the figure grew from $25 per week to $33 per week, an increase of only 32 percent. However, during the decade of the 1970s the increase has been dramatic — from $34 in 1970 to $39 today — a 74 percent increase.

Every year some of the sharpest contrasts in reported weekly food expenditures are those recorded by geographic region and city size.

As has been the case in the past, food costs take a bigger bite — $62 per week — out of the family budget of Easterners than of people living in other regions of the nation.

But this year the West, previously a relatively inexpensive region as far as food goes, caught up with the Eastern median, with Westerners' median food bill skyrocketing from $51 per week last year to $62 per week this year. This compares to $58 a week spent on food in the South and to $55 a week in the nation's breadbasket, the Midwest.

Much as in the past, residents of the largest cities see their food budget consume more of their total income than do persons living in smaller cities, small towns and rural areas. Inhabitants of the largest cities (1 million or more people) report a median expenditure of $73 per week while those living in the smallest towns and in the country spend $56.

Here is the question asked: "On the average, about how much does your family spend on food, including milk, each week?"

Following are highlights of the trend since the question was first asked, in 1937:

Weekly Food Expenditures — Trend

Year	Median Estimates
1980	$59
1979	53
1978	50
1977	48
1976	48
1975	47
1974	42
1973	37
1971	35
1970	34
1969	33
1959	29
1949	25
1937	11

Here are the 1980 figures by key demographic groups:

Group	Median Estimates
NATIONAL	$59
East	62
Midwest	55
South	58
West	62
1 million or more	73
500,000-999,999	61
50,000-499,999	56
2,500-49,999	52
Less than 2,500, rural	56
Single person	32
Two person family	50
Three person family	62
Four person family	71
Five persons or more	90

The figures reported today are based on in-person interviews with 3,181 non-farm residents, 18 years and older, interviewed in more than 300 scientifically-selected localities across the nation in two successive surveys during the periods Jan. 25-28 and Feb. 1-4.

THIS AFTERNOON

$1 Billion Burden

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — A sometimes overlooked element in public bond elections is just how much it will cost to borrow the money.

Figures compiled by State Treasurer Harlan Boyles on the impact of a proposed $600 million bond issue for public school purposes are giving some legislators cause for concern.

If the bonds covered a 25-year period and were sold at an interest rate of six and one-half percent, the total principal and interest would be $1.14 billion. All of the principal from the state's last school bond issue has been committed, but the interest remains to be paid, still totaling over $503 million.

The combined interest payments from the past, and the new bonds if approved by the voters, would push the total debt on public schools to $1.65 billion.

That money must be paid off in yearly installments, and the peak payment would come in 1988 when it would cost $73.4 million.

From The Top
Boyles, who is also a member of the State Board of Education, has made it clear that the financial position of North Carolina is strong enough to permit issuing $600 million in school bonds, and the state's credit rating would not be adversely affected.

But he has also told legislators repeatedly that the millions of dollars needed each year to pay the debt will have to come off the top of the public school budget. Money which might have spent for programs or equipment in the schools must be earmarked first for bond payments.

The new school bonds would push total state debt to $2.41 billion, with annual payments peaking at $118.8 million in 1987.

There are other concerns which make the chances for success of the bond issue shaky in the upcoming June session of the General Assembly. Gov. Jim Hunt has expressed reservations about the amount, and the timing. He says the public must be convinced that the $600 million is essential. And, he feels that with other major political contests taking so much time, energy and money this election year, the promotional campaign for a bond election in November would be seriously hampered.

In addition to outright money questions, some legislators are looking with questions at the laundry list of needs compiled by local school superintendents to substantiate the bond question.

One category, for example, is $9 million for community school facilities. "Many school facilities are needed for educational programs but can also be used by the community," that section notes.

Swimming Pools
"Typical projects in this category include the construction of swimming pools, tennis courts, auditoriums, etc., but also renovations to existing areas to improve their function and to enhance their use after school hours," that section states.

"I didn't know we were approving swimming pools and things like that," one legislator who was a member of the study commission which recommended approval of the bonds grumbled upon reading that section. "That has got to come out," he complained.

Also, figures compiled by the Department of Public Instructions now show a continuation in decline of public

Other Editors Say New And Growing

(Winston-Salem Sentinel)

North Carolina farmers are discovering the sunflower as a cash crop with a bright potential. The native American plant, whose flowers turn to the sun, stores solar energy in seed rich in oil. That makes sunflower seed a commodity with a ready market.

Europeans have a preference for sunflower oil in cooking that helps keep export demand ahead of supply. Sunflower seed also are popular as a nutritious snack, and in mixtures for bird feeders. All indications are favorable for sunflower farming.

The plants thrive on soil where other crops do not grow as well. Cultivation requirements are not complicated, and sunflowers mature in about 100 days, which makes them ideal for a multiple crop plan.

At least 10,000 acres of sunflowers will be grown in the state this year, according to Dr. William T. Fike, a crop scientist at North Carolina State University. That represents a five-fold increase over 1979, dramatic evidence that sunflowers are catching on with Tar Heel farmers. Some enthusiasts estimate the figure may soar as high as 20,000 acres.

Sunflowers produce an average yield of 1,500 pounds of seed per acre, and bring around 12 cents per pound. Thus, a crop of 10,000 acres would gross about $1.8 million for growers.

While a promising start, that does not make sunflowers much competition for a major crop such as soybeans. Last year, North Carolina farmers raised some 1.85 million acres of soybeans, which returned income estimated between $200 and $300 million.

An added incentive to growing sunflowers this year, Fike said, is the fact that three processing plants at Rocky Mount and Maxton will be crushing sunflower seed for the first time. That will mean accessible, established markets for the crop.

North Carolina agriculture needs the vision to develop new commodities in order to strengthen and diversify farm production. The sunflower crop is a good example. It should add a touch of beauty to the landscape, as well as another source of income for farmers.

Strength For Today

THE KING HIGH AND LIFTED UP

"In the year that King Uziah died, I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple."

Thus wrote the young Hebrew prophet, Isaiah. The death of Uziah was viewed as a calamity. Ascending the throne at the age of sixteen, he had humbled every enemy of Israel, promoted agriculture, reinforced the military, and by his policies ushered in a period of prosperity. He died after a reign of 52 years.

In the temple, Isaiah was probably thinking about Uziah's accomplishments. But then suddenly he saw a mightier king, Jehovah; high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple.

Here was the answer to the anxieties of the Jewish nation. A great earthly king had died; but the young prophet suddenly realized that God is above kings, armies, and nations.

And any time we are anxious about the future, we should remember the heavenly king, high and lifted up.

Claims Goals Contradictory

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — If the United States is to achieve the potential for a more humane world, says Robert Theobald, we must eliminate our social, political and economic commitment to full employment.

The view shocks many listeners at Theobald's lectures, until they hear him out. His latest book will bear the title "We're Not Ready For That Yet," a reference to comments he has often heard.

In his view, the persistent quest for more jobs and maximum growth counters the goals of reducing inflation, conserving energy and raising productivity. He says it creates stress and erodes values.

"The commitment to full employment," he says, "is the modern labor of Sisyphus," whose chore was to roll a rock up a hill time after time, always to have it roll back over him to the bottom."

Theobald, a Wickenburg, Ariz., socio-economist, author, lecturer, futurist and consultant to business and government, claims full employment is modern society's rock. He puts it this way:

"Our impossible task is to find jobs for an ever-larger percentage of population when already we need fewer production workers. The consequences can be shown to be increasingly destructive, causing inflation, waste of resources, social breakdown and international tension."

While the effects are known, says Theobald, politicians ignore the evidence and plunge ahead as if future were past, convinced that full employment assures the nation's future as well as their election.

The way to escape the notion, Theobald feels, is through acceptance of some form of basic economic security.

Such a system has never been implemented, probably because society fears it will encourage laziness, he says. But wealthy nations "have already accepted a guaranteed income, for they are not prepared, at least in principle, to permit people to starve or freeze to death."

In the absence of jobs as we know them now, he would seek to revive community patterns of shared work, such as the creation of work-exchange systems, cooperatives, sweat equity patterns "and a range of techniques which encourage exchange, barter and trying to think of a way it could be accomplished. Perhaps, he suggested, Carter could take another trip down the Mississippi River — this time to herald his anti-inflation policies.

Speaking of the president's loss in the New York primary, Powell was asked what Carter had to say about his unaccustomed defeat.

"He said he thought he knew where he could find another $300 million in budget cuts," Powell joked.

Carter said his New York loss to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was a learning experience.

Adopt-A-Street To Clean Up

STREET ADOPTERS. . . members of the Student National Environmental Health Association of ECU, pick up litter on Charles Boulevard.

The Student National Environmental Health Association of East Carolina University has accepted litter cleanup responsibilities for Charles Boulevard between Tenth Street and U. S. 264 Bypass.

The group will conduct periodic litter pickups on this portion of street as part of its commitment to the new Adopt-A-Street program.

Other community organizations are encouraged to adopt a street, too, in an effort to keep Greenville litter-free. When a cleanup takes place, the Greenville Public Works Department staff will provide free collection bags and truck transportation of refuse to the city landfill.

Each month the Public Works Department reports streets with chronic litter problems to the Greenville Beautification, Cleanup and Litter Control Committee. Clubs, neighborhood organizations and other community groups are encouraged to adopt these problem streets by contacting the committee, address — P. O. Three Collisions In City's Traffic

An estimated $4,500 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 1:40 p.m. mishap on Douglas Avenue. Investigators said a car owned by Mary Teel Cooper of Route 4, Greenville backed into a house at 1112A Douglas Ave. causing $800 damage to the car and $3,000 damage to the home.

The driver of the car, police said, has not been identified.

A 6:35 p.m. mishap on Memorial Drive, just South of the Dickinson Avenue intersection, involved a truck driven by Robert Cannon Jr. of Route 4, Greenville, and a car driven by Lee Ernest Dew of Tarboro.

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $100 to the truck and $500 to the car.

Eddie Dean Hawkins of Simpson was reported injured when the motorcycle he was riding struck a brick in the roadway on Fifth Street, 35 feet East of the Meade Street intersection, causing the motorcycle to overturn. Damage to the vehicle was set at $100.

"When I first came to Washington three years ago," Carter said, "a good friend of mine, a man whom I admire very much, came up to see me and said, 'Mr. President, I know that you are new in your office, and I want to give you some advice about foreign affairs.'"

"You've just selected Andy Young to represent you in shaping international policy. And let me tell you from the bottom of my heart that I know from experience, having been in Washington for many years, that nobody pays any attention to what happens at the United Nations."

The good friend who gave him that advice, Carter said, was a senator from Massachusetts. Without quite saying so, Carter suggested it was the same senator from Massachusetts who three years later made the administration's foulup over an anti-Israel vote in the U.N. Security Council the central issue of the New York primary campaign.

Press secretary Powell, who has used his daily White House briefings to take occasional potshots at Kennedy, has shifted his sights somewhat to take in Republican Ronald Reagan, now the odds-on favorite to face the Democratic nominee in the general election campaign.

"As for Mr. Reagan," Powell said last week when asked to comment on some criticism the Republican candidate had made of Carter, "President Truman once said something about it being easier to make speeches than to make decisions. I'm sure he had the prospective candidacy of Ronald Reagan in mind when he made that comment."

"Prospective?" asked a reporter.

"Yep," drawled Powell, "He wasn't a candi — well, I'm not sure, he might have been a candidate then."

April Foal Day Arrives

GRANDVILLE, Mich. (AP) — For most people, April 1 was April Fools Day. For Mike and Jill Shields it was April Foal Day.

Their "neutered" Shetland mare Cocoa, a long-time companion of Areba, a Pinto gelding, presented them with a spindly legged colt.

"We bought him (Areba) for $150 because the guy thought he was a gelding," Shields said. "It's a registered Pinto and if he (the seller) knew it was a stud he never would have sold him."

Mrs. Shields also thought Cocoa had been neutered when she adopted her through HORSE, the Humane Organization Representing Suffering Equines, which places abused or neglected horses with new families.

"The pony (Cocoa) was not neutered; it's a very expensive operation to neuter a female horse," said Karen Silva, president of the organization. "She (Jill) told me at the time she adopted the pony that her other horse was a gelding, and we didn't question it."

Meanwhile, the family is enjoying the newcomer, dubbed April Foal, to the stable.

Eye Plan On Foster Care

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Human Resources Secretary Sarah Morrow says a pilot project designed to return foster children to their natural homes will be implemented statewide this summer.

The project has been successfully tested in eight counties.

"When this project was begun last March ... there were 370 children drifting from one foster home to another" Ms. Morrow said.

A year later, most had been returned to their natural homes, placed with relatives or adopted, she said.

"Because the pilot project has proven successful in returning many children to their natural parents or providing them with a more stable family situation, I want this program to become a statewide effort. We have a moral obligation to reduce the number of children in foster care," she said.

The program is being allocated $750,000, of which $100,000 will go for a statewide tracking system to keep up with individual children and analyze trends in foster care.

The secretary made the remarks to the Social Services Legislative Study Commission.

The eight counties in the pilot program were Cabarrus, Durham, Lenoir, Madison, Onslow, Randolph, Scotland and Surry.

FOCUS

News Word: Hostage

Recent news stories about events in Colombia and Iran have often focused on people being kept as hostages. A hostage is a person who is held as a kind of guarantee that certain demands or promises will be carried out. The ancient Romans often seized the sons of foreign leaders and held them to make sure conquered lands would remain loyal to Rome. The French and British took up the same practice to help protect their empires hundreds of years later. The Germans took thousands of hostages in the nations they conquered during World War II, and often killed them to discourage people from rebelling against German rule.

DO YOU KNOW — In what country's embassy were hostages recently seized in Colombia?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Hans Christian Andersen was born in Denmark.

Many Injured, Few Severely, In Train Collision

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
LAKEVIEW, N.C. (AP) —
Three-hundred passengers on a Florida-to-New York Amtrak train found other ways to reach their destinations Wednesday while railroad officials searched for the reason why the Silver Star passed a warning signal and smashed into an oncoming freight train.

There were no fatalities, despite the severe crash that damaged 21 cars and four engines only seconds after crewmen on both the Amtrak and Seaboard Coast Line trains leaped from their engines to safety.

Only a handful of passengers and crew were injured seriously enough to be hospitalized, and many of the passengers were left to consider how much worse their injuries could have been and to debate whether they would ride the train again. "I was so scared," said Louise Keaster, 68, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. "I'll never take another train again as long as I live."

"It was our first train ride and our last," said Mrs. Lola Broughman of Richmond, Va., who was traveling with her 6- and 13-year-old daughters.

But others had different ideas, such as Mark Pearson, 50, of Boston, who said it was the second time in five months he was aboard a train when it collided with another train. The earlier one was in Texas in December.

"I've been riding trains for years and years," Pearson said. "It makes you think somebody's trying to tell me something. But I'm going to keep on riding them."

Most of the passengers were taken by bus 60 miles north to Raleigh, where they were found seats on trains, buses and airplanes for the rest of their trip.

Officials at Moore Memorial Hospital in nearby Pinehurst said they examined and treated 102 persons, but most were allowed to leave. Eight persons were admitted, and one refused to remain hospitalized.

The trains collided in a remote area along Seaboard's main route in the North Carolina Sandhills after the passenger train rounded a gentle, fog-shrouded turn at 7:30 a.m.

Work crews labored throughout Wednesday and Wednesday night to clear away the wreckage and repair track that had been ripped up. SCL officials said the north-south line was reopened to rail traffic at 6 a.m. today.

Amtrak and Seaboard officials said the Silver Star's crew should have been warned that the other train was approaching, but that either electronic signals failed or the engineer did not see them.

"We don't know what happened," said Owen Pride, public-relations director for the SCL at Jacksonville, Fla. "We know the engineer passed a red signal, but what led up to that we don't know."

The 18-unit Silver Star was operated by a Seaboard Coast Line crew.

Pride said the railroad was interviewing the crews of the trains to determine why the passenger train, operated by engineer J.E. Butts, had not slowed down before reaching the stop signal.

Engineers on both trains saw the collision was inevitable and jumped clear, but had no opportunity to warn passengers, railroad officials said.

The engineer on the freight train, who was not immediately identified, suffered a broken leg in the jump, officials said.

Larry C. Moubry, Moore County administrator, said rescue workers found the emergency brakes on both trains had been engaged before the collision. Railroad officials estimated the trains were traveling at 20 miles an hour when they struck.

Ten cars on the passenger train were derailed and several were badly damaged, while 11 empty coal hoppers toward the middle of the freight train were mangled. The front engines on both trains were smashed and considered a total loss, said

R.L. Wood, diesel supervisor for Seaboard, and two more engines on the freight train were damaged.

Most of the worst injuries were to passengers in the dining car, which was the fourth back from the Amtrak's engine.

"We had no more sat down to see the menu when we heard this terrible crash and scream," said Mrs. Keaster, who was traveling with her husband, Herbert, to Newark. "There was screaming the whole time. There was glass flying and everything was broken. There was blood everywhere."

"A big farmer came in and picked me up and carried me out. They were the nicest people in the world," she said of the dozens of local residents who provided immediate help.

O.T. Flowers of Miami, steward in charge of the dining car, said three cooks suffered burns from the stove. "It was just a jerk and a bam, and I was getting off the floor," said Harry Stephens, 30, of Jacksonville, Fla., a train attendant.

Seaboard crews used a crane on rails and other heavy equipment to begin the long task of removing damaged cars, righting derailed ones and repairing ripped-up track.

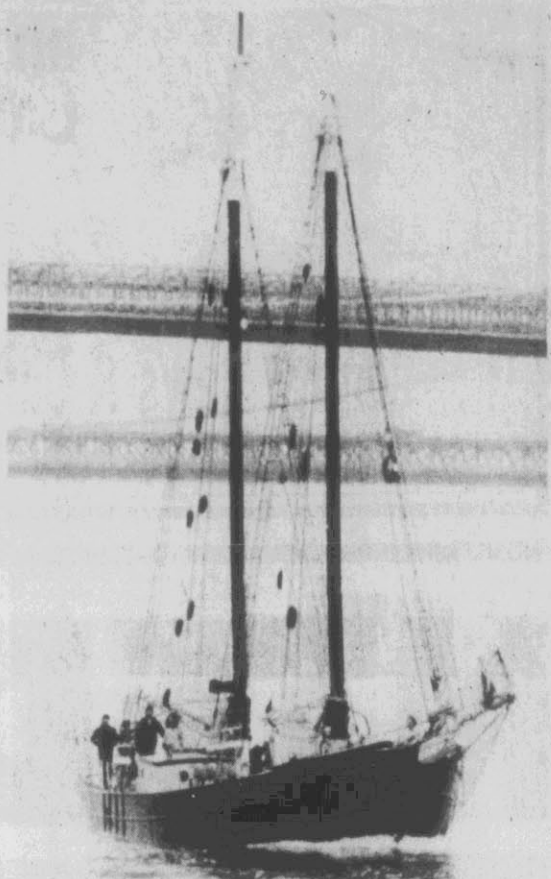

Many of the uninjured passengers were left in the area for more than three hours before they could be removed. Many played cards or read in the cars, and the bar car had about 20 customers in for free drinks.

Welton Coffey, 38, also an attendant from Jacksonville, suffered a neck injury but said he had no qualms about returning to work on the train.

"I've been in these five times before," he said. "But this was the worst one. Somebody made a giant boo-boo."

Teams from the Federal Railroad Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board were expected to investigate the accident.

SAILING TO WORK — The Pioneer, an 1885 coastal schooner, approaches South Street Seaport under motor power with its cargo of two Brooklyn commuters Wednesday, the second day of the New York City transit strike. Only two persons showed up to take advantage of the novel commuting idea, and high winds up the East River forced the crew to keep the sails furled. In the background are the Brooklyn Bridge and the Manhattan Bridge. (AP Laserphoto)

'Third Party' In The House, Too

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — A husband who stabbed a naked man he found hiding behind the door of his wife's bedroom was put on probation for two years.

The Melbourne Criminal Court was told Tuesday that the parties had reached an understanding and were now living in one house — the wife and the other man in the front bedroom and the husband in the rear room — but that divorce proceedings were under way.

The husband, John Farrugia, 41, pleaded guilty to a charge of inflicting grievous bodily harm on Mario Joseph Micallef, 24, last June 24. Before the court hearing Micallef shook Farrugia's hand and wished him luck.

FTC Cutting Back On Food Advertising Project

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission, reeling under congressional criticism of its pro-consumer regulations, is cutting back one of its major projects, a rule designed to end deceptive food advertising.

House and Senate amid many criticisms of FTC "over-regulation" of industry. Among provisions are ones that would end FTC consideration of rules over television advertising aimed at children and funeral homes.

The guidelines, which have not been implemented, were intended to "ensure that when the food industry chooses to use certain claims about the nutritional value of foods in selling its products, it does so in a non-deceptive and fair manner and does not exploit the public's lack of sophistication."

When first proposed in 1974, the rule was said to result in part from a 1969 White House conference on nutrition at which experts told of problems with the American diet.

Because of the scope of the project, it was divided into three phases in 1976. Phase I concerned claims about energy and calories provided by a product, Phase II concerned nutritional value such as vitamins provided and Phase II would have required most food advertisements to include information about nutritional advantages.

Thomas J. Donegan, FTC assistant director for food and drug advertising, said the proposal to end Phase II and Phase III is "an experiment in deregulation."

He noted that the Federal Register notice, which was released to the Associated Press on Wednesday, asks for suggestions from the public about voluntary actions by food manufacturers and retailers to make food advertising more accurate and useful.

"The nature of food advertising has changed and there might be more effective ways of improving the flow of nutritional information than dealing with specific claims," he said.

In addition, he said some companies already are making fewer claims about vitamins and using more ads promoting nutritional and health advantages.

The commission has approved for publication in the Federal Register a proposal to drop a four-year effort to write industry guidelines on nutrition claims for food products, such as a cereal ad that claims to provide the full minimum daily adult requirement of a particular vitamin.

The FTC still could monitor such advertisements and take action against individual companies if a claim were found to be false, but there would be no industry standard.

The commission said it will continue to work on rules for energy and calorie claims in food advertisements, but with less regulation than originally proposed.

The actions come as congressional conferees are trying to reconcile bills passed by the

Generous In Tidewater

ECU News Bureau
East Carolina University alumni in the Tidewater Virginia area have been "very generous" in their support during ECU's recent 1980 Telefund Campaign, says Richard Robins, director of annual support at ECU.

"During our two days of telephoning we received pledges from 254 alumni, totaling $5,520. We exceeded the goals we had set," he said.

A similar "telefund" effort in the Tidewater area last year yielded 149 donors who gave $3,561.25.

Telephone contacts with alumni were made from the offices of Southern Tile Co. in Norfolk, whose president, Marvin Slaughter, is president of ECU's Tidewater Area Alumni Association. Slaughter and Virginia Beach realtor Fred Soles directed a corps of local alumni volunteers who made telephone calls during evening hours.

The success of the Tidewater campaign is typical of the entire ECU Alumni Telefund so far, noted Robins.

"We have completed 10 of 23 regional campaigns, and have seen a 61 percent increase in numbers of donors and a 30 percent increase in dollars pledged."

Greene County Leaders Named

SNOW HILL — Gov. Jim Hunt has named Rand W. Wade of Snow Hill as chairman of his re-election campaign in Greene County, and Seroba A. Aiken of Snow Hill and John T. Mewborn of LaGrange as co-chairmen.

"I'm very pleased to have Rand, Seroba and John help me in my re-election campaign," Hunt said. "They are three of the finest citizens of Greene County and of this state."

Wade is secretary and manager of Randy Wade Oil Co., while Mrs. Aiken is vice-president and branch manager of East Federal Savings and Loan, in Snow Hill, and former chairman of the Greene County Democratic Party. Currently chairman of the Greene County Board of Education, Mrs. Aiken has also been a member of the State Executive Committee of the Democratic Party.

Mewborn manages his farming operation at Route 2, Snow Hill and the Hunt campaign is his first political involvement.

Health Agency's Meeting Set

The project review committee of the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency will meet April 24 at 7 p.m. at the Willis Building, at the intersection of First and Reade Streets.

Included on the agenda will be a discussion of an application by Real Crisis Intervention, Inc. for federal funding of a drug-related program and an application by the Pitt County Mental Health Center for federal funds for a drug program.

Additional information on project reviews may be obtained from Director of Project Review, Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency, P. O. Box Drawer 7306, Greenville, or by calling 758-1372.

Holland's Tulip Show Is Begun

By JAMES F. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
LISSE, Netherlands (AP) — General Eisenhower, the Queen of Sheba, General Patton, Rembrandt and Cordell Hull are among the star attractions as tens of thousands tiptoe through the tulips at Holland's annual spring bulb show.

The namesakes of Ike, Sheba and other notables are among the 4,000 varieties of tulips, hyacinths and narcissi on display at Keukenhof, the 70-acre showcase here for several million of the spring-flowering Dutch bulbs prized by flower lovers everywhere.

Last year, more than 800,000 people visited Keukenhof, in the heart of the bulb country just inland from the North Sea, during its six-week season. The sandy wet earth behind the dunes is perfect for bulb-growing, although recent advances by other flower-producing nations, notably Israel and South Africa, are keeping the Dutch salesmen on their toes.

The 6,000 Dutch bulb growers and 600 exporters put up $4 million for promotion last year.

The industry spent $7.5 million for research at laboratories and experimental field stations.

Many bulbs now get heat treatments, for example, to ensure that they flower on time, and they are shipped overseas in climate-controlled containers.

Each spring, 30,000 acres in the Lisse region bloom in symmetrical lakes of red, blue, pink and yellow. But the bulb growers care little about the flowers themselves, which are snipped off and used for the annual April flower parade. It is the bulbs still in the ground that the growers want. After three or four years of travel between fields and greenhouses, the bulbs are ready for harvest and export.

The bulbs flowering in gardens around the world this spring were harvested, shipped and planted last autumn. Dahlias, gladioli, begonias and summer-flowering varieties were shipped early this year for spring planting.

In 1979, the highly automated industry produced 5.1 billion flower bulbs, 4 billion of which were exported to 88 countries. Export sales totaled $245 million, up 2 per cent from the previous year despite bad weather.

Cross-Training ...

are also continuing to discuss with the Board of County Commissioners the appointment of a blue-ribbon task force to study all aspects of emergency medical service for the residents of Pitt County. This should be a long-range planning project to consider various levels of emergency medical services which should or may be provided.

McGlohon pointed out that a year ago, 13 fire/rescue employees were trained in

EMT and the city was scheduling two persons on each rescue vehicle. He explained, "Today, we have 40 EMT trained employees and three persons riding each vehicle. The leader, or number one person, is a veteran rescue person; the second with a lesser amount of experience; and the third a newly certified EMT."

The city's top elected official pointed out, "Everyone who has served as a rescue person began his career as an untrained, inexperienced person. Each day our employees are gaining new experiences and receiving ongoing training opportunities."

Discussing the volunteer rescue situation, McGlohon reported that, "The Council is disappointed the volunteer members of the Rescue Department decided to disband because of the city's policy to cross-train..."

According to the mayor, "It was not and has not been the intent of the previous or present councils that volunteer rescue personnel be cross-trained. This applied only to full-time employees."

Former Mayor Percy Cox was quoted last week as saying that the previous Council "never...intended for rescue men to be put on fire trucks."

McGlohon observed this morning, "We recognize the talents, interest and energies of those who have served as volunteer rescue members. We would suggest that if a strictly volunteer organization were reorganized, (it) could be effectively used in a meaningful manner within the present organization."

The mayor said that the possibility has been discussed with Chief Jenness Allen and the city administration "and have been assured that details could be worked out to utilize this talent in a positive manner."

McGlohon and Council members Joe Taft Jr.,

William Hadden, Louis Clark and Richard McKee were expected to meet later in the morning with Stuart Savage, Brent Stocks and Bill Bond, who were members of the volunteer unit, to discuss the volunteer rescue matter.

McGlohon, responding to a question regarding the present Council's handling of the fire-rescue problem, said that "things happened so quickly." He acknowledged that he and the new Council might not have been quite ready to handle the situation.

Rap Defense Records Of 8 Senators

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Conservative Union, attacked the national security records of eight Democratic senators today, saying they voted "for appeasement and weakness" on all of 21 selected issues over the past five years.

Several of the eight, including Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, responded personally or through spokesmen that the ACU report was a distortion of their positions and that the votes chosen for checking were not representative.

The eight senators singled out for special criticism by the conservative political organization were Kennedy, Paul Tsongas of Massachusetts, John Culver of Iowa, George McGovern of South Dakota, Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio, Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin, Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island and Donald Riegle of Michigan.

The ACU said 14 senators, all Republicans, voted "for strong defense" on all of the selected issues. It said 21 others usually voted "pro defense."

In a similar analysis of House votes, the ACU concluded that 64 Democrats had zero records and 65 lawmakers, most of them Republicans, had 100 percent records of voting for "peace through strength."

The ACU said the ratings were compiled under the direction of John Tierney, former chairman of the political science department at Catholic University in Washington and now the organization's legislative director.

The issues selected included votes on the B-1 bomber, the Panama Canal treaties, Vietnam reparations, arms sales to nations judged to have violated human rights, nuclear-powered aircraft carriers and the Minuteman missile.

"In light of the current emergency in U.S. national security as demonstrated by events in Iran and Afghanistan, these ratings have a unique urgency," said Rep. John Bauman, R-Md., chairman of the ACU.

Jan Kalicke, a national security aide to Kennedy, said "a real cross-section, instead of a selective cross-section" would show that Kennedy often supported military assistance abroad and supported weapons, such as air launched missiles, which he believed to be in the nation's security interests.

Riegle called the ACU report "a fictitious, misleading analysis" and said that only Wednesday he voted for selective increases in defense spending as a member of the Budget Committee.

McGovern described the report as "phony" and said, "I have always supported a tough and lean American defense posture adequate to defend our country, deter aggression and protect our allies."

Other senators named either could not be reached or declined comment until they had seen the report.

The 14 senators named as having 100 percent records were Thad Cochran of Mississippi, William Cohen of Maine, Jake Garn of Utah, Orrin Hatch of Utah, Jesse Helms of North Carolina, Gordon Humphrey of New Hampshire, Roger Jepsen of Iowa, Paul Laxalt of Nevada, James McClure of Idaho, Harrison Schmitt of New Mexico, Alan Simpson of Wyoming, Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, John Warner of Virginia and Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming.

Conley Wins Parliamentary Event

Five D.H. Conley business students took first place in the parliamentary procedure event in Winston-Salem at the twenty-sixth annual North Carolina Future Business Leaders of America State Leadership Conference. The students will represent North Carolina at the National Leadership Conference in Washington, D.C. July 1-4.

Chosen 'Mr. FBLA' At Annual N. C. Meeting

Farmville Central High School senior Eddie Wooten was named Mr. Future Business Leader of America at the twenty-sixth annual North Carolina State Leadership Conference March 27-30 in Winston-Salem. Wooten first won in the first and second district competition, which consisted of a written test and an interview. After winning these, he continued to the state leadership conference where, according to Wooten, "There were more questions and the test was harder." He was one of six finalists called for a second interview and was chosen as the winner from these six.

Wooten is the son of the chapter advisor of Future Business Leaders of America at Farmville Central, Mrs. Barbara Wooten, and says this is what prompted him to join the club. "I wanted to see what it was like," he explained. "So I joined and got involved in a lot of activities."

Wooten's plans for the future include college at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where he plans to major in accounting. He is reporter for the National Honor Society, state reporter and chapter president for the Future Business Leaders of America, and was secretary for the Key Club his junior and senior years.

He is also interested in sports, and serves as statistician for the football and basketball teams. Wooten is on the Farmville Central tennis team. He also writes all Farmville Central sports news for the Farmville Enterprise. Wooten said he intends to make business his career. "Right now I think that's where my best interests are," he commented.

Another Farmville Central student, Tom Wainwright, was elected state historian for the 1980-81 school year at the state leadership conference.

A Candlelight Service Tonight

Our Redeemer Lutheran Church, 1800 S. Elm St., will celebrate holy communion in a candlelight service at 7:30 p.m., April 3.

Maundy Thursday is the day on which the Lord's Supper was instituted and the apostles received their "new commandment" to love one another. It is from the Latin word for commandment, "mandatum," that this day takes its name.

Our Redeemer Church will observe Good Friday with the traditional "Tenebrae" service, sometimes called the service of shadows. As this service progresses, lights and candles are gradually extinguished until the church is left in almost total darkness, in anticipation of Easter sunrise.

Drop Four Of 11 Charges

PLYMOUTH, N. C. (AP) — Four of 11 charges involving misuse of funds at a government job training center have been dismissed in the case of the center's former comptroller.

The charges dismissed Wednesday involved the alleged forgery of four checks by Michael L. Ervin of Edenton. He still faces charges of embezzlement, forgery and obtaining property by false pretense while working in 1978 at Eastern North Opportunities Industrialization Center Inc. based in Washington County.

Testifying as to his involvement in the center's financial affairs, Ervin acknowledged that he was sentenced in 1978 in Pitt County to two years probation for a number of petty larceny and check writing incidents.

He said he was ordered to repay about $6,000 to a Greenville vending firm where he had worked as comptroller before going with the opportunities center.

Ervin still faces a forgery charge involving a $750 check, as well as the embezzlement charges, and two other employees are awaiting sentence on related charges of misuse of funds at the center.

The center receives federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds administered by the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

Marriage Breaks Up, Couple Don't; Tax-Savings

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
Twice, Angela and David Boyter divorced each other and twice they remarried. Finally, they ended their marriage altogether — finding it literally too taxing — and simply lived together.

The reason had nothing to do with romance, the Maryland couple told the House Ways and Means Committee. They were just saving money come tax time.

The Boyters are among a growing number of Americans who are disdaining marriage to avoid a provision in federal tax law that taxes working husbands and wives at a higher rate.

The House committee, which opened hearings on the "marriage penalty" Wednesday, was told that one woman and her fiancé decided against marriage because of the higher taxes. Another couple married only to give their child a legitimate birth certificate and others, like the Boyters, divorced to lower their tax bill.

The issue was brought to attention of the public last October when the Internal Revenue Service took the Boyters to U.S. Tax Court to argue that their divorces and remarriages were a "sham transaction." The case is pending.

The Boyters, from Elliott City, Md., earn about $30,000 each as federal employees. They told the committee they have saved almost $15,000 in taxes over the past five years by divorcing to take advantage of lower tax rates for single persons.

"I ask you, is this the kind of behavior you want to promote?" the Boyters asked rhetorically.

The Carter administration says no, but officials told the committee they haven't decided what to do about the dilemma.

Emil Sunley, deputy assistant secretary of the Treasury for tax policy, said the administration wants to make certain that single taxpayers are not hurt by eliminating the marriage penalty and that the tax code remains progressive, with higher income being taxed at a higher rate.

So long as the tax code is progressive and the government taxes combined income, Sunley said, "the marriage penalty cannot be reduced without making the situation for single taxpayers even worse."

He said the administration "believes high priority should be given to reducing" all penalties on married or single taxpayers.

The Treasury Department says the United States is the only industrialized nation with an income tax that does not distinguish between one and two-income families.

The marriage penalty occurs because the tax code treats income earned separately by two members of the same family as one income. Since the tax structure is progressive — that is, the higher the income, the higher the tax rate — each extra dollar brought in by a working spouse pushes the family's total income into a higher tax bracket.

A Lot Of Medication In Elephants' Burn Care

HUGO, Okla. (AP) — Connie and Nellie, a pair of circus elephants, are on the mend after treatment for severe burns. The medicine: 75 gallons of saline solution, 30 gallons of petroleum jelly and a truckload of Texas oranges — fed to them by hand one at a time.

Welding repairs had just been completed on a circus truck last Friday when two of the Carson and Barnes Circus' biggest employees were inadvertently loaded, said assistant manager Linda Lingo. Hay in the truck bed apparently ignited from the hot metal.

"It was real funny but they didn't make any noise and nobody realized what was happening until someone noticed some smoke coming from inside the truck," she said.

A makeshift hospital was set up at the circus' winter quarters here. "If it was a hospital we had them in, I guess you could say they're in intensive care," Mrs. Lingo said.

"Several of the local grocery stores have been just terrific about giving us their throw-away produce," Mrs. Lingo said. "Fruits and vegetables are about all we can get down them."

D.R. Miller, owner of the circus, added, "We brought in a truckload of oranges — about 1,200 pounds — from Texas for them. The elephant men who are staying with them day and night cut up the oranges and feed them."

Probe Killing

ROCKINGHAM, N. C. (AP) — Richmond County sheriff's deputies and SBI agents were investigating today an apparent robbery-slitting at a store located on Highway 74 between Hamlet and Rockingham.

Two stalls are partitioned off by sheets "to keep the other elephants from blowing stuff on them with their trunks...So far they're doing pretty good, but we're still worried about infection."

Nellie and Connie were placed under the care of three local veterinarians, who prescribed pain killers, antiseptic ointment and intravenous injections of 75 gallons of saline solution.

Dr. R.S. Nicholson of Hugo said the hand-feeding is necessary because the elephants' trunks are so badly burned they can't feed themselves. He listed them in "guarded" condition.

So far, Mrs. Lingo said, the elephant handlers have been successful in keeping the animals from lying down and risking infection, "but if they get tired, there's not much anybody can do to stop them."

A woman identified as Judy Lynn Boyle, 21, of Hamlet, who had been working in the store alone, was found shot to death about 3:15 p.m. Wednesday.

Their hides were soothed with 30 pounds of petroleum jelly.

"We were most worried about Nellie," Mrs. Lingo said. "Her legs, her trunk and the inside of her mouth were burned and we couldn't get her to eat or drink."

Meanwhile, the circus leaves on Saturday for its annual tour. Nellie and Connie are expected to join the circus in about six weeks, doctors say.

A spokesman for the sheriff's office said the woman's body was found by the store owner, Wayne Gilmer. The spokesman said a money box containing $162 was missing.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced slightly today, continuing its recent rally in quiet pre-holiday trading. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose .94 to 788.74 in the first half hour. Gainers outnumbered losers by about a 5-4 margin in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. Analysts were looking for a quiet session with a long holiday weekend approaching. The markets will be closed on Good Friday. A 20 percent prime lending rate continued to spread in the banking industry today. The increase to that landmark level was initiated Wednesday by New York's Chemical Bank. The market took the news in stride, however, helped by some apparent hopes that the long climb of interest rates might be nearing an end. Mobil led the active list in early trading, down 1 1/4 at 65 1/2. A 180,000-share block traded at 65 1/2. On Wednesday the Dow Jones

Mormons Plan Atlanta Temple

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — One of seven new, smaller Mormon temples will be erected in Atlanta, the church announced. The Atlanta temple will become the only Mormon temple in Southeast. Currently, the Washington, D.C., temple has been the closest temple to the region. The other six new temples will be built overseas. The new temples, as small as one-sixteenth the size of the church's new Salt Lake Valley temple, are part of a worldwide effort to "preach the gospel to every creature," church President Spencer W. Kimball said Wednesday.

"We expect to go forward with this program and give it great strength throughout the world," Kimball, 85, said, speaking in a Temple Square visitor's center at the base of a 10-foot statue of Jesus Christ surrounded by a painting of the solar system. The church now has 17 temples, 13 in the United States, and four others under construction. In addition to Atlanta, the new temples — used only by faithful Mormons for sacred ordinances — are to be constructed in Buenos Aires, Argentina; Sydney, Australia; Santiago, Chile; Papeete, Tahiti; Nuku'alofa, Tonga, and Apia, Western Samoa. One of three designs will be used for each of the temples, depending on the needs of the location, said church architect Emil Felzer. The designs call for white, towerless structures of 8,500, 12,500 and 26,000 square feet. Ordinances performed in temples include marriage for eternity, baptism by proxy for the dead, and endowments described as "a course of instruction with covenants pertaining to man's eternal salvation." Neither the location of the Atlanta temple nor its scheduled completion date were announced.

Easter Cantata Planned Friday

BETHEL — "Daybreak," a group of young singers, will perform an Easter cantata; "Worthy is the Lamb," at 7:30 p.m. Friday, April 4 in the Bethel Baptist Church. "Daybreak" is comprised of music students from East Carolina University. Among those to be singing in the Friday performance are: Sonny Jacobs, Gay Ivey, Julie Moore, Cheryl Holder, Phyllis White, Greg Dixon, Kyle West, and Donald Green. Green is also director of the Bethel Baptist Church Choir. The group will be accompanied by Deborah Lambeth, piano. The pastor, Norman H. Joyner, invites the public to attend this Easter celebration in music.

Consistory Will Gather Tonight

The Roanoke Consistory No. 248 announces a Maundy Thursday Easter ceremony at Coronation Mason Hall in Williamston at 7:30 tonight. Only Princes and Peers attend this ceremony. Easter sunrise services will be held Sunday at 6 a.m. at Green Memorial Church on Main Street in Williamston. The public is invited, along with Princes, Peers, and Master Masons.

MASONIC NOTICE

All members of Winterville Masonic Lodge No. 232 and Tenth Masonic District Masons are asked to assemble at English Chapel Church Thursday at 6:45 p.m. to form a procession and be on duty in honor of the deceased Lorenzo (Jab) Evans. Funeral services for Evans will be at the church Friday at 2 p.m. All members of Winterville Lodge and other Master Masons should meet at Winterville Masonic Hall at 12:30 Friday. Masonic rites will be given at the cemetery. Masons are to wear their regalia. Calvin Henderson, master; Annias Smith, sec'y

Fairfield Stops Pirate Win Streak

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
East Carolina University's baseball team might have been caught looking ahead yesterday.

At any rate, the Pirates' eight-game winning streak came to a screeching halt yesterday as Fairfield University eeked out a 10-9 win over the Bucs.

It was probably one of the worst performances of the year for the Pirates, according to coach Hal Baird. "They just didn't seem to have their minds on the game before we started," he said. "I kept hoping that they'd put it together, but by the time we finally began to play like we could, we just couldn't get in the runs we needed. Maybe we were looking ahead to (tonight's) game with North Carolina, I don't know."

Fairfield, after losing 7-4 to the Pirates on Saturday night, went on to win one game against Towson State, and lose two one-run games to the Tar Heels, the latter in the 13th inning after blowing a four-run lead gained in the top of that frame.

They nearly did the same against the Pirates, after taking a 10-5 lead in the seventh, as East Carolina closed the gap to one in the bottom of that frame.

Mickey Britt, who started but was ineffective, gave way to Mike Williams on the mound and he eventually got the loss, his first in two decisions. But help was needed from Bob Patterson and Kirk Parsons before it was over.

The four also didn't get a great deal of help behind them, as the Pirates committed four errors to off-set some fine field play.

The four errors resulted in seven of the ten Fairfield runs being unearned. In contrast, only two of the Pirate runs were unearned.

The Stags jumped on the Pirates for four unearned runs in the opening inning. With one down, Cedrick Warner, who had homered his first time up Saturday against the Pirates, cracked a double down the left field line. He moved to third on a wild pitch and Fred Dana walked. With two away, Dana broke for second, and Britt wheeled and fired to Mike Sorrell for what appeared to be an easy tag-out. But Sorrell dropped the ball—his first error of the year—and Warner scampered home.

Al Zappala walked, as did Mike Butcaris, loading the bases. Pete Ciardiello then doubled in all three runners, but was tagged out after he overran second.

East Carolina came back with four in the bottom of the frame. Butch Davis reached on a three-base error when his fly to right was dropped. He scored on a wild pitch. Kelly Robinette then doubled and scored on Billy Best's hit.

The Pirates took the lead with three in the third. Raymie Styons reached on a fielder's choice and courtesy runner Robert Wells scored on a double by Rick Derechallo. Macon Moye singled in Derechallo and John Hallow also got a hit. Todd Hendley singled to bring in Moye for a 5-4 lead.

Fairfield added two in the fifth to regain the lead at 6-5. Sean Brophy singled and Dana got a hit. Ron Carapezzi doubled to score Brophy and tie it at 5-5, and a suicide squeeze bunt by Zappala resulted in Dana scoring and Zappala reaching when no one covered first.

Then, in the seventh, Fairfield added four more. Brophy opened it with a freak triple. His routine fly to right was destined to be only a single, but Moye tried for a diving catch in front of him, missed, and the ball rolled all the way to the fence. He scored on Warner's sacrifice fly.

Dana, Carapezzi and Zappala each singled, loading the bases. Cardello reached on an error, allowing Dana to score, and the other two came over when Joe DeVellis reached on an error.

A further threat was closed off when a double steal was cut down at home, and a bases-loaded ninth was voided.

The Pirates rallied to within one in the bottom of the seventh. Styons led off with his fifth homer of the year, making it 10-6. Derechallo then singled and Moye and Hallow walked. Hendley reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Derechallo and getting Hallow. Mike Sorrell grounded out, with Moye scoring, and an error on Davis' grounder let Hendley score.

The Pirates then left runners stranded at second in the eighth and ninth innings as their record dipped to 13-2.

Fairfield closed out its Southern trip with a 3-4 record, having lost all but one game by one run—that to the Pirates.

The Pirates did bang out 14 hits in the game, with Davis, Robinette, Best, Derechallo, Moye and Hendley each getting two. Davis advanced his hitting streak to 13 straight games.

Fairfield collected 11 hits, including two each by Brophy, Dana, Carapezzi and Zappala. The Pirates play host to North Carolina tonight at 7:30 p.m. at Harrington Field.

Strikers Work Out

Cincinnati Reds' pitcher Tom Seaver, left, talks with coach Bill Fischer Wednesday about the pitchers' working out. Baseball players went on strike, but at the Reds' camp they were out in force working out under the manager and coaches at the Tampa spring training camp. No exhibition games would be played, but spring training would continue, at least at the Cincinnati camp. (AP Laserphoto)

Players Continue Training As Negotiators Return To Talks

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

It's back to Square One for most of the striking members of the Major League Baseball Players' Association — taking batting and fielding practice and possibly playing some intrasquad games just like the pre-exhibition days of spring training.

And it's on to Round Two for negotiators Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players' Association, and Ray Grebey, chief bargainer for the club owners, who were scheduled to hold their second session with federal mediator Kenneth E. Moffett today in New York.

Having decided to cancel the last week of exhibition games but open the season as scheduled next Wednesday and give the two sides until the Memorial Day weekend to reach a settlement, the players branched out from coast to coast, with those not involved in official or informal workouts promising to stay in shape on their own.

Only two teams — the Montreal Expos and San Diego Padres — did not hold some sort of practice Wednesday. The Expos refused to work out under their coaches' supervision while the Padres voted to return to San Diego.

Some players were combining workouts with a chance for a rare April vacation.

After taking batting practice and doing his running, Boston star Carl Yastrzemski said he would work out today and Friday and then spend the Easter weekend at his Florida home.

"I'll be back Monday and be ready to accompany the team to Milwaukee for the season opener," he said.

For others, like Jack Brohamer of the Red Sox, a week without exhibitions won't make much difference.

"I'm going to sit on the bench, as usual," quipped the reserve infielder. "That's how I stay in shape during the season."

With millions of dollars at stake in the ongoing negotiations, some petty differences crept into the picture, with the owners refusing to pay room and board — a contract requires a player to participate in exhibition games — which brought gripes from some players, who will have to shell out several hundred dollars to stay in camp.

"Because we're going to work out, I think we should be reimbursed, but we won't be," said Baltimore's Mark Belanger.

And Minnesota's Mike Marshall, the Twins' player representative, said he would return home "if my expenses aren't paid."

Kickers In 5-0 Victory

East Carolina's varsity soccer team rolled up a 5-0 victory over the Northeast Breeze, a club team from Elizabeth City, in a North Carolina Soccer League match yesterday.

The victory left East Carolina with a 5-0 division record. The Pirates led 1-0 at the half with Brent Hylton scoring unassisted on a rebound off the Northeast goalie.

Then, in the second half, the Pirates scored four times. David Hayes scored on a penalty kick, followed by Andy Roman with an assist by Brad Winchell. Phil Martin rounded out the scoring with two goals, the first on a penalty kick and the second with an assist from Keith Johnston.

The Pirates play host to the regional tournament on April 26-27.

Dodgers Choice To Edge By Cincy

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer
Nolan Ryan and Joe Morgan are Houston Astros. The Los Angeles Dodgers added Dave Goltz and Don Stanhouse. Renne Stennett, Mill May and Jim Wohlford now perform for the San Francisco Giants. The San Diego Padres signed pitchers

Rick Wise and John Curtis and traded for four regulars. Chris Chambliss and Al Hrabosky are Atlanta Braves.
Only the defending champions, the Cincinnati Reds, as is their custom, stood pat in the National League West. Nevertheless, Manager John McNamara says there is "no doubt in my mind that the Reds will be even better in 1980."

The main reasons for that statement, McNamara says, are outfielders George Foster and Ken Griffey, who missed 40 and 66 games, respectively, last year. "Too many people," he says, "judge improvement only by the number of free agents that a team signs. That's a mistake."

The Reds have a lot of familiar faces — pitcher Tom Seaver, catcher Johnny Bench, first baseman Dan Driessen, shortstop Dave Concepcion, third baseman Ray Knight (who hit .318 in 1979 as the replacement for departed Pete Rose) and Foster in left field.

Reserve Junior Kennedy is the likely successor to Joe Morgan at second base, while Griffey, Dave Collins and Cesar Geronimo are contesting for the other two outfield spots. Griffey, however, is coming off knee surgery and is engaged in a bitter salary hassle that led the Reds to put his name on the waiver list to see who might be interested in him in a trade.

Much of the Reds' 1979 success was due to the arrival of young pitchers — starters Mike LaCoss and Frank Pastore and reliever Tom Hume. Much of the 1980 outlook depends on how well Bill Bonham recovers from the tender elbow that has plagued him for several years.

The punchless Astros, who took the Reds to the wire before finishing 1½ games out last year, added the fireballing Ryan (for a $1 million a year) to a staff that already boasted flamethrowing J.R. Richard and 21-game-winning knuckleballer Joe Niekro, with Joe Sambito in the bullpen.

The Astros have a surplus of infielders and outfielders and Manager Bill Virdon has countless lineup possibilities. Cesar Cedeno has moved back from first base to center field. That means one of last year's outfielders — Jose Cruz, Terry Puhl or Jeff Leonard — likely will switch to first base... unless third baseman Enos Cabell

Home Court Advantage Pays Off For Teams As NBA Playoffs Open

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer
The home teams took advantage of their home-court advantage as the National Basketball Association playoffs got under way, and they did it largely with defense.

"We had to win this first one because it's the key in a short series," said forward Caldwell Jones, who had 18 points and 26 rebounds as the Philadelphia 76ers turned off Washington's power game and beat the Bullets 111-96 Wednesday night in the opener of their best-of-three mini-series.

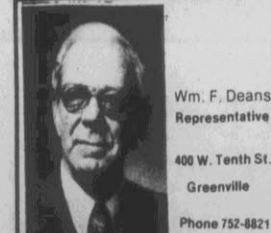

"Tonight was the most important game," added Jones. "Hopefully we'll get one more important one Friday night."
All three other home teams also won Wednesday night and can wrap up their first-round series on Friday.

The best defense of the four opening games was played by the Houston Rockets, who held San Antonio, the league's highest scoring team, 34 points below its average and beat the Spurs 95-85.

"We decided to defend the fort," Houston Coach Del Harris said after his club circled its wagons to stop the run-and-gun Spurs in the third period. San Antonio went 5-41 without a point and was outscored 24-11 in the quarter as Houston overcame a 51-42 halftime deficit.

In the Western Conference, the Phoenix Suns beat the Kansas City Kings 96-93 in what Suns Coach John MacLeod called "typical of every game we play against the Kings, a tough defensive battle all the way." And in the only game where the scoring was higher than normal, the Seattle SuperSonics opened defense of their title with a 120-110 decision over the Portland Trail Blazers.

D.H. Conley's Vikings, off to a 3-2 start, have been a pleasant surprise for Coach Walter Claybrook.

"Despite the fact that we've lost twice, we haven't been beaten badly, and I think we have a shot at having one of the best teams we've ever had at Conley," Claybrook said.

"We're lucky in that we have right many back from last year's team. Our biggest question mark was pitching, but we've had two sophomores who have come through for us," he added.

The two include lefty Doug McRoy and righthander Roy Lassiter. In addition, junior righty Sammy Tucker rounds out the starting staff, while Micah Dixon and Carl Arnold, both seniors, are available for relief work if needed.

"Seven of the eight other positions have veterans returning, although some of them are sophomores. We're still a fairly young team, starting four seniors, two juniors and three sophomores."

Returning at catcher is four-year starter Curtis Spencer, while Lassiter handles second when not pitching. Micah Dixon is back at shortstop with either Dixon Page or Jeff Cox at third.

"First has been somewhat of a problem. We've used several people here experimenting for the right look," Claybrook said. Those who have played there include Page, McRoy, Lassiter and freshman Todd Rouse. "A lot will depend on who is pitching."

When Lassiter is on the mound, Emory Vines moves into the second base slot.

Another player with potential is Terrance Rountree.

"Our defense was pretty good until we played Greene Central, and I think it should be good overall. Our hitting, too should be one of our strong points."

As far as the conference goes, Claybrook looks to Greene Central to win again. "They're far and away above everyone else," he said.

Ayden-Grifton
This year is somewhat of a continuation of the rebuilding program started last year at Ayden-Grifton High School in the baseball program.

And no matter what happens from here on in, the Chargers are ahead of last year.

"Last year, we only won two games," Coach Alan Wilson pointed out. "We've already won three this year."

Wilson said that some phases of the game have pleased him at times this season so far.

"We're still real young. We have only one senior starting on a regular basis, and we just lost another senior for the rest of the year." That was Billy Holland, out with a broken hand. "We have three sophomores and two freshmen starting on a regular basis."

While Wilson feels that the Chargers may suffer because of their youth, they are ahead of the game since they've improved over last year.

"We've been fortunate to come up with a good freshman pitcher in Tyrone Gay (3-1 so far). He's been the best pitcher so far." Best behind him seems to be sophomores Bernard Ricciarelli, Art Rouse and David Taylor, although Wilson notes that all three have had some control problems.

Clayton McLawhorn is the only senior pitching any, while a couple of juniors Brant Allen and Melvin Artis also have seen some experience.

"We seem to be at our best when Gay is out there. We play better defense, too, with him on the mound," the coach said.

The catching duties have been split between senior Mike McLawhorn and junior Larry Edwards and Wilson expects to continue this. At first, Allen plays, switching to third on some occasions depending on the pitching assignments. Ricciarelli is at second, with sophomore Chris Strickland at short. Joey Kennedy is at third, moving at times to second.

Rouse, Clayton McLawhorn and Artis are in the outfield, with Gay playing center when not pitching. Artis has just replaced the injured Holland in right.

"We haven't overpowered anyone with the bat, although Gay (over .500), Clayton McLawhorn and Rouse at all hitting well," Wilson noted.

Wilson picks Greene Central and Conley to fight for the conference title, and feels that the rest of the pack could all battle for the runner-up spots.

Farmville Central
Farmville Central opened the year with three straight losses, but has come back to record three straight wins to even its record.

Coach Linwood Woodard says he isn't sure what to expect the rest of the year, due to the youth and inexperience of the team. "We won our last three by playing a little better defense and hitting better. I hope it will continue, but we're still not out of the woods."

Woodard said he expected his pitching to be strong, but a series of events have hurt that expectation. First, one of his pitchers didn't return and another was not eligible. A third got hurt, and left only one true starter in the pack.

"We finished second last year, and we got better in every game we played. That was our goal this year: to improve in every game; to learn and enjoy."

Only four starters return from last year's team, and only two of them are seniors, pitcher-outfielder Tony Eason and pitcher-outfielder Alan Corbett. "Tony is our starter and Alan comes on in relief. It's his first time pitching and he needs more confidence in himself. With Bobby Avery out hurt, we're trying to get David Cherry, a junior, ready."

Lewis Yelverton has taken over the catcher's spot, playing the position in the past on non-varsity teams. "He's shown some improvement since the first game," Woodard noted.

Michael James, a junior first year player, is at first, and is hitting well. Jamie Futrell and Bobby Carraway have been splitting the time at second. Futrell is a sophomore and Carraway, a freshman.

Greg Hardison, who started at second last year, has been switched to shortstop, and the junior has experienced some problems in making the switch, but is getting the feel of it now.

Jeff Joyner, a senior who was a part-time starter last year, is at third, and has also been hitting well.

David Joyner, a first year player, is in left, splitting time with freshman Wade Corbett, who also plays right field some. Alan Corbett is usually in ceter with Avery in right at times.

Orioles Given Nod To Retain Title

By HERSCHEL NISSESON
AP Sports Writer

As usual, the Baltimore Orioles lost another free agent (relief ace Don Stanhouse) and the New York Yankees signed some (first baseman Bob Watson, pitcher Rudy May). Also as usual, the Yankees fired Manager Billy Martin.

But neither the Orioles, the defending American League champions, nor the Yankees, who won the pennant the previous three years, is a cinch in the competitive East Division, which features four managers starting their first full seasons and another, Milwaukee's George Bamberger, on the sidelines after heart surgery.

Of the other contenders, Milwaukee's runnerup Brewers stood pat, the third-place Boston Red Sox lost Watson to the Yankees but added free agent first baseman Tony Perez from Montreal and reliever Skip Lockwood from the New York Mets, and the Detroit Tigers dealt center fielder Ron LeFlore to Montreal to make room for former Michigan State All-American footballer Kirk Gibson.

"Because we have such a young and strong nucleus," says Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver, "we will have to make very few personnel changes from a year ago."

Weaver's main chore will be grooming a reliever to replace Stanhouse, who took his 21 saves to the Los Angeles Dodgers as a free agent. The top candidate is 6-foot-7 Tim Lincecum, a right-hander, and a former North Carolina State basketball star. The left-handed reliever is Tippy Martinez.

The Orioles' staff led the league in earned run average and boasts five solid starters in Cy Young Award winner Mike Flanagan, Jim Palmer (he has won three Cy Young Awards), Scott McGregor, Dennis Martinez and Steve Stone. But arm miseries limited Palmer to 10 victories last season and have plagued Dennis Martinez this spring.

Rick Dempsey and Dave Skaggs are the catchers, and the infield again consists of Eddie Murray (1B), Rich Dauer (2B), Mark Belanger and Kiko Garcia at short and Doug DeCinces (3B). In the outfield are Gary Roenicke, Al Bumbry and Ken Singleton. Lee May, John Lowenstein and Terry Crowley will be the chief designated hitters.

The second-place Brewers finished eight games behind the Orioles. A healthy DH Larry Hisle, who was limited to 26 games by a shoulder injury, could make up some of the deficit, but the Brewers must get better relief work from a bullpen that has plenty of people but no standout. The starters — Mike Caldwell, Larry Sorensen, Bill Travers, Jim Slaton, Moose Haas — are solid, if unspectacular.

The lineup, even without Hisle, is loaded with power, especially first baseman Cecil Cooper, third baseman Sal Bando, all-purpose Don Money and the outfield of Ben Oglivie, Gorman Thomas (the league leader with 45 home runs) and Sixto Lezcano. Robin Yount (SS) and Paul Molitor (2B) form a young and talented double play combination, and Charlie Moore and Buck Martinez handle the catching.

The key to Milwaukee's season may be how long the popular Bamberger is sidelined.

With Bill Campbell disabled again, the Red Sox have added bullpen help (Lockwood joins Dick Drago and Tom Burgmeier) and power — Perez and 40-year-old Carl Yastrzemski will split the 1B-DH chores and play long-ball with third baseman Butch Hobson and an outfield of Jim Rice, Fred Lynn and Dwight Evans. Rick Burleson (SS) and Jerry Remy (2B) are slick up the middle, but the starting pitching is thin behind Dennis Eckersley, Mike Torrez and Bob Stanley.

And then there is Carlton Fisk. If his ailing elbow doesn't permit him to catch, the Red Sox are in big trouble. Behind him is young Gary Allenson. Says Manager Don Zimmer, "If Fisk can catch and play 125 games I'd swim the ocean."

The Yankees have lots of new faces, starting with Manager Dick Howser, the former third base coach, who was brought in after a year of college coaching when Martin was fired in October.

The Yankees also lost their real leader, catcher Thurman Munson, in a plane crash last year. The new backstop is Rick Cerone, who came in a trade with Toronto, as did pitcher Tom Underwood. Other newcomers include free agent first baseman-DH Watson from Boston, center fielder Ruppert Jones from Seattle, veteran lefty May from Montreal and backup third baseman Eric Soderholm from Texas.

Howser also has Reggie Jackson in right, Jim Spencer at first, Graig Nettles at third, Willie Randolph at second, Bucky Dent at short and a pitching staff led by Ron Guidry and Tommy John, with Goose Gossage in the bullpen.

Sparky Anderson works his managerial magic for Detroit now. The Tigers are even younger than last year, with Gibson and Dave Stegman platooning in center. Another key is new third baseman Richie Hebner.

Lance Parrish is set behind the plate, as are Jason Thompson at first, Lou Whitaker at second, Alan Trammell at short and Steve Kemp in left. The pitching staff, however, has too many holes behind starters Jack Morris and Dan Schatzeder and relief ace Aurelio Lopez.

The Cleveland Indians beefed up their pitching by trading for John Denny from St. Louis — they gave up Bobby Bonds — and Bob Ovwchinko from San Diego. They join Rick Waits in the rotation, with Sid Monge in the bullpen. It won't be enough.

For the Indians to move up, Manager Dave Garcia must get big years from Andre Thornton (1B), Duane Kuiper (2B), Tom Verzyer or rookie Jerry Dydzinski at short and Toby Harrah (3B), along with outfielders Mike Hargrove and Rick Manning.

The Toronto Blue Jays have a new manager, 64-year-old Bobby Mattick. He may be 74 next year. The pitching is mediocre, to put it mildly, although Joey McLaughlin, acquired from Atlanta, should help the bullpen.

In their first three seasons, the Blue Jays never finished closer than 40 games out. This year may be no different, despite the presence of the AL's 1979 co-Rookie of the Year, shortstop Alfredo Griffin. First baseman John Mayberry, third baseman-DH Roy Howell and

GGO: No Effect On The Masters

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Although the Masters, one of golf's most revered events, is only a week away, its proximity has no effect on the players in the $250,000 Greater Greensboro Open, Ray Floyd and Gary Player said.

"I'm here to play in this golf tournament," Floyd said prior to today's opening round at the 6,984-yard, par 72 Forest Oaks Country Club course.

"I'm here to win this golf tournament if I can," Floyd said. "That's all I'm thinking about. I'm not thinking about any other golf tournament."

Player agreed. "A golfer must be able to devote his entire attention, his entire concentration to the task at hand," the little South African said.

"This week it is the Greater Greensboro Open. If you don't give your entire attention to the tournament you're playing in, you're not being fair to yourself, your competitors or the sponsors."

"After this tournament is over, then it's time enough to start thinking about the Masters."

Both have records which indicate they have followed those philosophies. Each is a former winner of the Greensboro Open, and both ranked high among the list of favorites this time.

Floyd is the defending champion and has played well coming previously this year, beating Jack Nicklaus in a dramatic playoff at the Doral Open.

Player, 44, has had one of the best winters of his globe-trotting career. The little man in black won four of six foreign starts and has finished eighth and third in his last two American appearances.

Although this old tournament, traditionally placed in the schedule immediately before the Masters, often is bypassed by some of the game's premier attractions, it has attracted six of the top 10 money-winners this season.

In addition to Floyd, the 144-man field contains four other winners of 1980 PGA Tour events, Dave Eichelberger, George Burns, Andy Bean and Doug Tewell, a playoff winner over Jerry Pate in the Heritage Classic Monday.

Other standouts in the chase for a $45,000 first prize include Lou Graham, Masters champ Fuzzy Zoeller, Larry Nelson, J.C. Snead and Leonard Thompson, a title contender in two of his last three starts.

Make Another Boycott Try

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration makes another attempt today to convince American athletes and sports officials that there should be a boycott of the Olympic Games in Moscow this summer.

Representatives of the U.S. national governing bodies, the hierarchy of each of the Olympic sports, were to meet at the State Department in the aftermath of a session in Colorado Springs, Colo., last weekend. In the Colorado Springs session, little support was shown for any alternative competition, as proposed by President Carter, if the athletes can't participate in the Moscow Games.

It was understood that the secretaries of state and defense, Cyrus R. Vance and Harold Brown, were to attend the meeting.

Before the State Department meeting, representatives of the U.S. Olympic Committee's Athletes Advisory Council were scheduled to be at the White House to discuss their counterproposal to Carter's boycott. The proposal would permit the athletes to participate in the Games while, simultaneously, protesting the Soviet military presence in Afghanistan.

Anita DeFrantz of Princeton, N.J., a rower who is the spokesperson for the 47-member council, said she and three other Olympic athletes were to meet with Joseph Onek, White House deputy counsel, to give details of the plan, which a White House aide already has said is unacceptable.

Under the terms of the counterproposal, the athletes would not participate in opening and closing ceremonies and would not show up to accept any medals they win. They would arrive in Moscow just before they compete and leave immediately after, remaining in the Olympic Village or training facilities during the time they are on Soviet soil. They would not sight-see or engage in any other tourist activities.

Meanwhile administration officials said Monday that plans for an alternative Olympics, which were rejected by the sports governing bodies last weekend, were put on a backburner while broader support for a Games boycott was sought.

Firebirds Win Match

STANHOPE — Hosting Southern Nash nipped Farmville Central for first place in a four-way Eastern Carolina Conference golf match yesterday.

The Firebirds finished the day with a 326 team score, a stroke ahead of Farmville Central, with 327. Ayden-Grifton was third with 333, while D.H. Conley trailed the field with 440. Robbie Jones led Farmville Central with a 72, and captured medalist honors. Gary Hobgood added an 81, while Jeff Cutler had 83 and Alan Wooten had 91.

Southern was led by Evan Bass with 73, Jay Lynn with 77, Randy Edwards, 81, and John May, 89.

John McDougald led Ayden-Grifton with a 79, while Warren Agee had 82, Randy Taylor had 86, and Alan Daughtry, 86. Conley was paced by Lee Van Buren with a 91, while Troy Baugher had 93, Eric Sawyer had 101 and Joe Dravick had 122.

Roanoke In 11-1 Win

AHOSKIE — Roanoke High School got all it needed in the first two innings, but went on anyway to take an 11-1 victory over Ahoskie in Northeastern Conference baseball yesterday.

Roanoke scored single runs in the first two frames, then added two more in the third and seven in the seventh.

In the first, Steve Wallace got a two-out triple and Glenn Cargile walked. Cargile was caught in a rundown while stealing and Wallace made it home before the tag was made.

In the second, the Redskins got what proved to be the winning run. Angelo Spruill walked and Edward Grimes doubled. A passed ball allowed Spruill to score.

Wiley Keel, who went three-for-four to lead the Roanoke hitting, had a two-run homer in the third, raising the lead to 4-0. The seventh was highlighted by a two-run homer by Anthony Latham.

The victory raised the Roanoke record to 5-1 on the year. They play host to Roanoke Rapids Friday at 4 p.m.

How Some Pay Higher Education Bills

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Darrell Williams, a junior at the University of Notre Dame in Indiana, has a $500 scholarship, one part-time job at the campus radio station and a second part-time job at a fast food stand.

Andrea DeStefano, a senior at Slippery Rock State College in Pennsylvania, has a loan and a grant from the state's Higher Education Assistance Authority.

Howard Brownlee, a junior at Michigan State University, has a Veterans Administration loan, a part-time job and a working wife.

As the cost of going to college has risen, students and their families have had to struggle harder to pay the bills.

Joe Paul Case of the College Scholarship Service of the College Board estimated that seven out of 10 of the nation's 12 million college and university students are getting some kind of financial aid. Case said about $14 billion in public and private money was available to help students during the current academic year. He predicted that the total would rise next year, but he had no specific figures.

The money takes the form of scholarships, grants and low-cost loans. About half of it is given out according to financial need, Case said.

Interviews with students, parents and financial aid officials indicate that just about everybody needs help these days. "We've had to raise our scholarship aid program," said Steve Kezerian of Yale University. He estimated that about 40 percent of Yale's students get help from the school itself.

Pam Shingler, a spokeswoman for Slippery Rock, said about 70 percent of the students pay for their education with the aid of grants, loans or scholarships or through work-study programs. "That number seems to rise every year," she said.

"I am by no stretch of the imagination rich," said Williams, the Notre Dame student. "It's a sacrifice on my parents' part ... I don't see how they do it."

Ms. DeStefano worked to supplement her loan and grant. She got help from her parents. "I also started buying used books rather than paying the bookstore top prices," she said.

Bob DiSpirito, the head football coach at Slippery Rock, has a son who is a junior at the school. Two more sons will enter college in the fall. "The crunch is on," he said. "We're asking the kids to help themselves by getting jobs and we're searching into student guaranteed loans..."

Legislation passed by Congress in 1978 extended the interest benefits available under the Guaranteed Student Loan program to all students, regardless of family income. Loans issued under the program have a low interest rate — 7 percent a year — and students are not required to pay any interest at all while they are in school. The government guarantees the loan and pays the lender a bonus to help make up the difference between the 7 percent rate and current market interest rates.

The program does not require lenders to provide money to students, however. And rising interest rates have made money scarce for all types of loans. Ronald Wilson, the director of consumer loans for the Michigan National Bank, said, for example, that the bank discontinued its participation in the student loan program last November. "It's the supply of funds," he said. Fran Pforr, public relations manager for First Bank of New Haven, Conn., said the bank was still issuing student loans, but had curtailed the program because of a decrease in available funds.

Harleigh Howerton, senior vice president of the First National Bank of Fort Collins, site of Colorado State University, said his bank will begin making student loans this fall — but only to people who are permanent residents of the city. First National is the only bank in Fort Collins participating in the Guaranteed Student Loan program.

C. Lee Winder, the provost of Michigan State University, said the school has tried to increase financial aid as tuition has increased. But he added: "I certainly have the impression that, increasingly, students are finding it necessary to seek a part-time job."

Robert H. Strotz, president of Northwestern University, where tuition will go up 10.5 percent next year, said: "Additional aid (has) been set aside so that no student currently enrolled will be forced to leave the university for financial reasons." Strotz said he was not sure what help would be available for new students, but added, "We hope to maintain the same levels (of aid) to attract the same high-quality student we do now."

Case said it was hard to tell whether aid had kept pace with rising costs. He noted that government programs that now provide several billion dollars of aid were not even in existence 10 years ago.

Case stressed that no one should assume he or she is ineligible for aid because of a given income. Eligibility is determined based on a complex formula that takes into account things like the number of youngsters in school, family assets, etc. A student may be eligible for help at one college and not at another. Like many parents, coach DiSpirito figures he will manage somehow. But he adds: "As difficult as things are now, I wonder where it's going to end. I wonder what it's going to be like for the next generation."

Stock Market Is Attractive

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORP. With everyone except the administration predicting a recession for later this year, you might consider the stock market the last place you would want your money to be. Good values are available in the stock market today, however, and if you wait on the sidelines for the market to turn, you might miss that turn.

Given the fact that individual needs and circumstances dictate investment posture, there are some general guidelines to remember in investing for recession.

Stock prices usually decline in advance of recession, and turn upward in advance of recovery. Interest rates normally peak after the onset of recession and usually decline beyond the initial recovery phase.

Many investors are concerned about getting the highest available yield. Since it is virtually impossible to pinpoint the absolute peak in interest rates, bonds with high yields can be purchased when you believe interest rates are approaching a peak, thus locking in high yields for the long term. Then, when interest rates decline, capital appreciation becomes likely.

One investment offering a high yield is a money market fund. This mutual fund invests your money in Treasury bills and other short term investments. Overnight liquidity and high yields are the main features.

All stocks do not necessarily decline in a recession. Some defensive groups generally outperform the market in poor business cycles. These include food, utility, household products and tobacco companies. Some of the best performing groups in the 1974-75 recession included entertainment stocks, broadcasters, food chains and telephone companies.

There are other areas which appear to offer good opportunities for profitable investing in a recessionary environment. Energy related stocks are an obvious choice, and companies involved in increasing productivity (telecommunications, data processing). Cosmetics, drugs and banking are other areas to select from.

Many stocks have been sold off to the point where they appear to have little downside risk, and they operate in areas which should permit sales and earnings to grow in a recession (food, for example). Careful selection as always is necessary, and a cash reserve for future purchases is recommended.

CHANGE OF HEART SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Augusto Pinochet has reversed himself and decided not to break relations with the Philippines over its abrupt cancellation of his planned 5-day visit to Manila. The Chilean government was told the action resulted from discovery of a terrorist plot against Presidents Ferdinand Marcos and Pinochet.

More Bad Weather Is Facing Most Of The Nation

By C.W. MIRANKER
Associated Press Writer
More bad weather was in store for much of the nation today after new rains soaked flood-plagued Louisiana and Mississippi, a woman died freeing a Texas tornado and hail the size of golf balls pounded Oklahoma.

More snow hit the Rockies Wednesday, grounding a haylift to cattle in Colorado. Snow also halted helicopter rescue missions for snow-bound western Nebraska residents.

The National Weather Service said new snow was likely today in the Rockies and on the Plains and additional rain was forecast for the South through the upper Great Lakes.

A drenching 8 inches of rain closed schools and businesses in New Orleans. Roads were inundated and more than 300 homes were flooded in St. Tamany, Washington and East Baton Rouge. National Guardsmen were sandbagging the swollen Pearl River in Slidell.
Most Mississippi rivers were reported at or above flood stage.

Advisor-Teacher Receives Award

D.H. Conley Future Business Leaders of America advisor and business teacher Mary Thompson was awarded the advisor of the year award at the first general session of the twenty-sixth annual North Carolina Future Business Leaders of America State Leadership Conference March 27-30.

MARY THOMPSON

The award was based on participation in the local, state, and national activities of FBLA, planning of activities, and the involvement of students and the business community. Mrs. Thompson was nominated by an advisor in District I. She was chosen by a committee selected by State Department business and office personnel.

Mrs. Thompson has been a vocational youth club advisor for eleven years, and was a state officer for seven. She served on the state Board of Directors representing District I for two years.

She maintains membership in the National Business Education Association and she is active in the North Carolina Business Education Association. She currently serves on the publications committee of NCBEA.

Mrs. Thompson lives in Winterville.

In Wichita Falls, Texas, strong currents suddenly racing through an underground drainage culvert swept away a 41-year-old woman and her 3-month-old grandson after a family abandoned their car and hid there when tornado sirens sounded.
The southwest part of the city was flattened by a tornado last April 10, and residents fearing another disaster ran for shelter.
Near Whitt, Texas, a tornado leveled four mobile homes and three barns, toppled power lines and damaged two homes, injuring one person.
In Colorado, snowmobilers got bales of hay to 1,400 snow-bound cattle that had not been fed since the weekend after snow and fog grounded a National Guard helicopter loaded with feed. Officials estimate cattle losses, mostly calves, at about 10 percent.

In Kansas, where there was snow, thunder, lightning and heavy rains in different areas, most schools were closed for the week in the northwest. National Guardsmen were dispatched to a five-county area and a helicopter was sent to drop feed to stranded livestock.
In Goodland, near the Kansas-Colorado border, there was a record 17 inches of new snow by Wednesday night, and one farmer measured a 20-foot snow drift on a rural road. The community has had 100 inches of snow since October, with 32.7 inches since spring began.

In Oklahoma, hail the size of golf balls, winds and heavy rain uprooted trees, flattened barns and ripped roofs from a vocational school and mobile homes.
In Montana, heavy snow and high winds frustrated rescue workers trying to home in on an emergency signal from a plane with two persons aboard that went down in the Red Mountains near Butte.

In snowbound western Nebraska, where another 4 to 6 inches was predicted by noon today, Gov. Charles Thone has dispatched 36 National Guard ground vehicles for emergency health and safety work and animal veterinary services in 18 western counties. But helicopters ready to head for McCook, North Platte and Sidney were grounded.

DEEP DRILLING
WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — In the United States alone during 1979 the total depth of wells drilled in search of oil and gas was 44,913 miles.
That distance is the equivalent of drilling from the North Pole through to the South Pole more than five times, according to estimates from Aminoil USA.

An Easter Sunrise Service will be held at Sycamore Hill Baptist Church Sunday at 6 a.m. Holy Communion will be observed. The Philippi Church of Christ Traveling Choir and the Evening Star Usher Board will serve. Breakfast will be served immediately after the worship service, which is sponsored by the Black Pastors and Ministers Conference.

INDICTED FOR MURDER — Jani Adams, a night nursing supervisor, was indicted Wednesday by a Clark County (Nev.) grand jury on open murder charges. The indictment found that she tampered with life-supporting equipment, causing the death of a critically-ill intensive care patient. She is being consoled by her attorney after turning herself in to authorities. (AP Laserphoto)

Best Sellers Are A Routine

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor
NEW YORK (AP) — At loose ends — with no job and no savings — Frederick Forsyth decided to sit down and write a novel "to see if I could make some money."

when I was a journalist." Forsyth finished his manuscript in 1970.

"It was turned down by the first four publishers I took it to," Forsyth recalls with a wry smile. "They all felt there couldn't be any tension in a book in which the outcome was already known."

"They didn't seem to realize that that wasn't the point, that it was not the fate of France's de Gaulle but the fate of the assassin after him, the Jackal, that mattered. That was the real tension — what will happen to the Jackal?"

The book was accepted by the next publisher Forsyth approached. It was called "The Day of the Jackal." It became a best seller.

"It wasn't intended to do what it did," Forsyth laughs. "I'd hoped for a few thousand dollars — at most. Instead it took off."

After that, says the 41-year-old Forsyth, there "was enough money to leave journalism. I'd been a journalist for 12 years... spent the last two as a freelance during the fighting in Biafra, a tough but morbidly fascinating time."

"But I realized that I couldn't do journalism and write books at the same time. So I went where the fortune seemed to be."

Besides, he adds, his contract with the publisher called for two more novels.

"I had no ideas beyond 'Jackal,' but the money was there. I was broke, so I said sure. I wrote 'The Odessa File,' then 'The Dogs of War,'" he says.

"When I finished the third one, I had written three novels in 40 months. I was exhausted. I couldn't visualize writing another book."

And he didn't — for a couple of years. But "in 1976 a story began to form in my mind. I began to wonder what would happen if terrorists took over a supertanker and threatened to blow it up. That was the germ, but it began to build up from there.

"I developed it, broadened it and finished it in my head. I told my wife about it and she told me to quit hanging around the house and get to work and write it. She said it would be too good a story to throw into the trash. So I did the research and wrote."

The result was "The Devil's Alternative," Forsyth's newest best seller.

"It has no message," Forsyth says. "I am not a messenger for humanity. What I basically try to do in my books is tell a good story. Sure, a character may on occasion utter a sentiment I agree with but that's self-indulgence. After all, there are other characters who say things that I utterly disagree with, but as long as what they say goes along with what they are it's OK."

Forsyth, a native of Britain, has lived in Ireland the past five years. He, his wife, and their two young sons live in the country, in a manor house, on 25 acres.

"The house was built in 1780, but it's been modernized and remodeled over the years. It has about 20 rooms, but we only live in 9 or 10."

He says he has used much of the time he has lived there working on the house to improve it.

"I also do a lot of work on the grounds, chopping down trees, digging out the roots. I know it doesn't sound like much but the days do fill themselves in the country," he says.

Forsyth hasn't any plans at the moment to sit down at his old typewriter — which he says has used up at least 2,000 ribbons — and turn out the 4,000 words a day he averages when he is working on a book.

"I have nothing in mind," he says. "But even though I don't even have an idea now, I am not saying that I am not going to write another book. We shall see what happens."

("The Devil's Alternative" is published by Viking.)

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Why are some prescribed pills taken before meals while others are taken during or after meals? This has always been confusing to me. — Miss E.M., Maine.

Dear Miss M.:
When drugs are prescribed, the doctor knows their objective and how best to achieve it. When instructions are given, they should be carefully followed. Those instructions are not haphazard.

Some medicines are known to be irritating to the lining of the stomach, especially when it is empty. It is for this reason that such drugs are taken with meals, so that they can mix with the food. Thus they do not lie in contact with the delicate lining of the stomach.

Other drugs may be of a group that are more readily absorbed into the bloodstream from an empty stomach. These, then, are taken before meals for rapid and maximum effectiveness.

Another group of drugs may be destroyed by the stomach juices and acid. Therefore these had best be taken at intervals when the juices and acid are at a minimum.

Problems of drug-taking become even more complicated. Some drugs, when taken with others, may lose their effectiveness. In some instances, two drugs may be enhanced by each other's presence.

This is only a small cross-section of the possibilities that are involved in the prescription and administration of drugs. Consequently it is most important that the original instructions of the doctor be followed without any "personal variation."

Many ongoing studies have tried to explain why some people suddenly decide that they have "had enough" and stop taking drugs that are prescribed for them. This lack of compliance adversely affects people, especially those with high blood pressure, heart disease and diabetes.

Nowhere is the art of being a good patient more readily recognized by doctors than in adherence to the planned regime of medication.

A point of information! Are the X-rays that I had taken of my stomach and intestines mine? I paid for them and don't know why I should have such difficulty getting them to keep in my own files. — Mr. T.G.J., Kan.

Dear Mr. J.:
The fact that you paid for the X-rays does not, necessarily mean that you own them. This problem has come up for legal inspection many times and the decision varies in different states.

Actually, X-rays are part of the chart of a patient. They are released for survey to other doctors who request them. It is now possible to make quick copies of all X-rays. This is a great boon, for now the original X-rays can be kept in the doctor's office — or in the hospital — and copies can be made for your own files.

Far too many excellent relationships between doctors and patients have been destroyed by conflict about such situations.

Quarterly Meet This Weekend

Quarterly meeting will be held at Corey Chapel FWB Church this weekend. The Rev. J. Wilkes will deliver the Communion sermon at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Choir, ushers, and congregation of Burney Chapel FWB Church will accompany Rev. Wilkes.

The pastor, Rev. J. B. Taylor, will conduct the morning service at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Dinner will be served at 1:30 p.m. The Rev. J. Randolph and the congregation of Joseph Branch FWB Church will be in charge of the evening service at 2:30 p.m.

The public is invited to attend.

We can't compound interest on this CD. But you can.

14.804%

The annual yield and rate on Six Month Money Market Certificates is available for $10,000 or more. Term: Six months (26 weeks). Interest paid monthly, quarterly or at maturity. Federal regulations prohibit the compounding of interest on these certificates. Rate effective from 4/3/80 thru 4/9/80.

Here's how: 1) Purchase an NCNB $10,000 Six Month Money Market CD 2) Ask us to automatically deposit your interest every month, in an NCNB Regular Savings Account, Paying 5 1/4%, compounded daily.

So you're earning interest on your interest. Which, of course, is the kind of idea you expect from the bank that wants to be the best in the neighborhood.

NCNB

Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal. Each depositor insured to $40,000 by FDIC.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good time to visit new scenes, meet new personalities in new surroundings and get advanced ideas on how to develop talents not yet in use. Be more prepared for the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Forget a temptation to go after something glittering that could end up in trouble. Be more optimistic about the future.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't make any changes in plans you have made with others or you could regret it. Show that you are truly devoted to loved one.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A good day to handle business affairs which you've had little time for lately. Take no risks with your reputation now.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be patient at your work and rectify any mistakes that may take place. Follow your hunches which are accurate now.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Take care you don't spend unwisely for pleasures this evening or you will surely regret it later. Try to please your mate more.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Know what your greatest aims are and go after them in a positive manner. Avoid one who is detrimental to your progress.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Much care in motion is necessary now since either you or others could make mistakes. Strive for increased happiness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Use good common sense in business matters now and don't delve into any financial deals that are shady. Steer clear of trouble.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You could make a wrong decision in a business matter today, so stall for time and wait for another day.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Friends could cause you to get involved in activities that are not good for you, so keep your distance for the time being.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have a good chance to get ahead in career activities if you get an early start today. Making new contacts is wise now.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Having a more modern approach in personal dealings with others makes you more popular now. Think along optimistic lines.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who easily understands the problems of others, so direct the education along troubleshooting lines for best results. Teach to curb any display of temper. Give good ethical and religious training early in life.

The bidding:
 West North East South
 1♣ Dble. 3♣ 4♥
 4♣ Dble. Pass 5♥
 Dble. Pass Pass Pass
 Opening lead: King of ♣.

Many players have the wrong attitude about a finesse. They look upon it as a means of encircling the missing honor rather than as a maneuver to gain a trick. There are times when a finesse should not be attempted even though it is quite likely to succeed. This hand is a striking example.

The bidding was supercharged. East's jump to three spades over the takeout double is textbook stuff—a hand with five trumps, good distribution and little in the way of high cards. It is a preemptive action designed to try to keep the opponents out of the bidding. We like South's bold decision to enter the bidding despite a weak hand—his partner might not be able to compete again at the three-level, and he had good playing strength. When North doubled four spades, South feared that partner would be counting on him for some defensive values, so he ran to five hearts, doubled by West. West led the king of spades, and his defense at trick two was not very inspired—he continued with the queen of spades. East's jump to three spades and South's refusal to stand for the double should have told him that a spade continuation would be futile. The club shift should then have been a standstill and would have doomed the contract.

Declarer ruffed the second spade and a simple play would have brought home the hand. By cashing the ace of hearts, overtaking the ten and conceding a trump trick to West, declarer could not be denied. He would still be able to ruff a spade in his hand to draw the outstanding trumps and then run the diamonds for the fulfilling tricks.

But the lure of the trump finesse proved irresistible. Declarer led a heart to the ten and thereby tossed away considerable coin of the realm, even though the finesse won. Declarer cashed dummy's ace of trumps and when East showed out, the hand went up in smoke.

The heart finesse was excessively greedy. Sure, it might gain a trick if West started with a doubleton king, but that was unlikely and the cost if it failed was too great.

'Great White Hope' Theme Is Given Possible Knockout Punch

By PETER J. BOYER
 AP Television Writer
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Great White Hope yarn has been made into so many movies it's beginning to sag under the weight of its own scar tissue.

With every new rendition, the story seems a little more punch-drunk than the last time out. It's like a great athlete who tries to hang on too long. The Great White Hope drama should have been retired after "Rocky."

"Rocky II" sent it reeling. "The Contender," a CBS miniseries beginning tonight, may put The Great White Hope down for the count. You know the story — a white fighter, not good enough to be champion but good enough to pretend, stirs hope in the hearts of everyone who's tired of nonwhites ruling the boxing ring. He fights bravely, but is pummeled in the end (and about the face, as well).

It's one of Hollywood's stand-up-fighter-turned-manager, although he does get the primo line of the opening episode: "He's got one thing nobody in your whole stable's got," Gunn says to another fight manager, trying to get his boy a fight. "And that one thing is why this whole turkey town will turn out for him — white skin... Yes, sir, I've got what the white folks is crying for — I've got the Great White Hope."

Later, when he can't arrange a big fight for Johnny, he slams his hand to the wall in anger and cries, "If he had a manager he'd get this fight, instead of a punched-out bum like me."

Well, Johnny Captor gets the big fight with Killer Dinwittie, but he lets Dinwittie take it because he feels sorry for Killer's little sister. I swear. "You could have put him away," says Gunn. "I know that," replies the Great White Hope. "But tonight, there was something more important."

It's hard to tell where the lousy lines end and the lousy acting begins. Lots of other stuff is thrown in (this thing goes on for five episodes), including suicide, lust and the Fresno Mob. But what it boils down to is another prime time soap opera whose hero happens to be wearing boxing gloves.

I have the feeling that "The Contender" will take a dive somewhere after the first episode. If so, perhaps the Great White Hope story can finally hang up its gloves.

April Fool's Day Show Cost His Job

BOSTON (AP) — The executive producer of the 6 p.m. news on station WNAC-TV, Channel 7, has been fired after showing an April Fool's Day report of a fake volcanic eruption in the Boston suburb of Milton.

Homer Cilley, 33, was fired for "his failure to exercise good news judgment" and for violating station and Federal Communications Commission rules about showing library film footage without identifying it as such, the station management said Wednesday.

"The conception and execution of that segment exhibited an enormous lack of news judgment," said Robert Williamson, general manager and vice president of the RKO-owned station.

"I think the firing was fully justified," Cilley said. "I did it. It was my responsibility and it's something I'll have to bear alone."

The news program Tuesday ended with a report allegedly showing an eruption of Blue Hill, a small hill with a ski area south of Boston. The report then showed footage of Mount St. Helens in Washington, and clips of President Carter and Gov. Edward J. King expressing their concern.

Although a reporter displayed an April Fool's sign at the end of the report, scores of people called police and some began fleeing their homes.

WNAC-TV is a CBS affiliate.

Rock Hudson Is Back In Movie

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Rock Hudson returns to the big screen after a long absence to star in "The Mirror Crack'd," a film version of Agatha Christie's whodunit, for EMI films.

Costarring with Hudson on locations in England will be Natalie Wood and Angela Lansbury in the role of Christie's sleuth, Miss Marple. The film is the first of EMI's project series of Miss Marple mystery adventures.

Hudson recently starred in the TV miniseries "The Martian Chronicles."

Katharine Ross In TV Movie

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Katharine Ross will star in "Rodeo Girl," a CBS two-hour TV movie centered around the all-girl rodeo circuit.

Jackie Cooper will direct the action-romance film with Bo Hopkins playing Miss Ross' love interest. The original screenplay for "Rodeo Girl" was written by Kathryn Powers.

Veteran Trio In 'Hallmark' Show

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The veteran trio of Henry Fonda, Jose Ferrer and John Houseman will star in "Gideon's Trumpet," a Hallmark Hall of Fame two-hour movie for CBS April 30.

Three other long-time performers, Fay Wray, Sam Jaffe and Dean Jagger, comprise the supporting cast of the drama.

"Gideon's Trumpet" is based on Anthony Lewis' 1964 non-fiction account of an obscure Florida convict (played by Fonda) who drastically changed the course of American legal history by demanding competent legal representation.

Feature Movie On Sinatra Life

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A feature movie is planned dramatizing Frank Sinatra's personal and professional life from his youth in Hoboken, N.J., to his 1953 Academy Award for best supporting actor in "From Here To Eternity."

Sinatra's press agent announced an international search will be initiated for a look-alike actor with blue eyes to portray the singer as a 25-year-old teenage bobby-sox idol.

Sinatra, who will soon star in and co-produce "The First Deadly Sin," announced his film biography will begin production in 1981 on locations in New Jersey, New York and Los Angeles.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — VIVID HORSE-SHOW RIDER WOVED VIEWERS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: H equals I
The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Duke Project May Stay At Standstill

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP) — Duke Power Co.'s Perkins nuclear project in Davie County is at a standstill and may stay that way, according to spokesmen for both the company and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Continued inaction on Duke Power's application for a construction permit at the site on Yadkin River indicates the project may be dead. Both the company and NRC indicated Wednesday that public hearings would not be scheduled for months.

"It's on the back burner," said NRC staff counsel Charles Barth in Washington Wednesday. "I haven't heard any stirring from anybody on scheduling those hearings."
"They're many, many months away," said Duke Power public relations representa-

Official of the utility, which serves the Piedmont area of North Carolina and South Carolina, say plans still call for building the Perkins plant, but construction could not begin until some time in the 1990s, and the plant could not begin generating electricity until the 21st Century.

Opponents of the project believe the plant will never be built. When Duke Power announced last summer indefinite postponement of its Perkins plans, members of the Yadkin River Committee and the High Rock Lake Association claimed victory.

Could Take Action On Washington's Pandas

By ANN BLACKMAN Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — If the capital's furry fun couple doesn't finally get its act together and produce panda-monium, National Zoo officials say they will take matters into their own hands, so to speak.
Along with cherry blossoms, the ineffectual efforts of the nation's two giant pandas to mate have become a trademark of springtime in Washington.
Mike Morgan, a zoo spokesman, said Wednesday that if the fumbling Hsing-Hsing fails again to impregnate his flirtatious Ling-Ling, zoo specialists will resort to artificial insemination.

Morgan said a team of specialists has already monitored Ling-Ling's behavior to see how much she is eating, sleeping and urinating.
"When they see tell-tale signs that she is in heat — irritability, restlessness, inability to sleep — they will open her cage and let Hsing-Hsing in for a fling," he said.

A female panda's fertility cycle lasts from April to June.
"If the male doesn't get things rolling, we'll artificially inseminate the female with the male panda's sperm," Morgan said.
For five years now, public attention has been focused on the cuddly creatures' inability to reproduce. Their courtship has been analyzed, their behavior scrutinized, their failures televised.
At first Ling-Ling was ready, but Hsing-Hsing, who matures later, was too young.

Hsing-Hsing, now 9, was publicly ridiculed for his naive behavior. "The problem has not been lack of interest," the zoo spokesman said. "It's orientation. The male can't find the right place."
Ling-Ling, six months older, had the right idea, but she couldn't keep her balance and kept tumbling on her side.
A zoo spokesman solemnly assured reporters at a press conference that the pandas are not homosexuals.
Zoo specialists spent two weeks in China where a total of 16 baby pandas have been bred in captivity. Their mission was to see if the Chinese, who gave the pandas to the United States in 1972, were keeping breeding secrets to themselves.

ferti·lome 1980
... in partnership with nature.

Who purchases our products?

The typical purchasers of ferti-lome products are individuals who still possess, even in these busy times, certain old-fashioned virtues. Foremost among these virtues are pride, determination, and self respect.

These individuals are proud, not only of the community as a whole, but of their home in particular. This pride of ownership makes them determined to have the very best that life can offer, even though having the very best sometimes requires more of an effort on their part.

They have respect for the beauty of nature and for the environment as a whole. They also respect the old adage that, if something is worth doing, it's worth doing well.

We, the people of ferti-lome, think that trust is another old fashioned virtue. We are continually trying to uphold our customers' trust by providing the finest products possible at the lowest price possible. After all, we're a little old fashioned, too!

For beautiful roses simply follow this complete rose care program

ROSE FOOD: A balanced rose fertilizer containing primary and secondary plant foods. 5 lb. box $2.98; 25 lb. bag $8.95.

ROSE FOOD CONTAINING SYSTEMIC INSECTICIDE: Feed your roses and control insects in one easy step. This way the insecticide cannot be washed off or blown away.

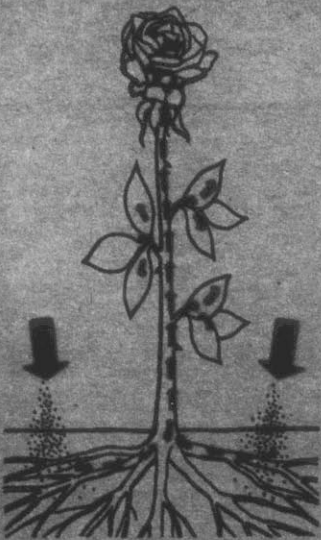

Assure your roses of the best protection from sucking and piercing type insects by applying this product around each bush. Handy measuring cup inside each package. 5 lb. box $3.98; 15 lb. bag $8.95.

Roses probably enjoy more popularity by homeowners than any other single flower. They add color and beauty to your landscaping and a beautiful display in your home.

Usage of these products in a conscientious program, following directions on each label, will provide you with vigorous, healthy, and beautiful plants.

Roses come in many forms and colors. Each of these types can be successfully grown with a specific program of ferti-lome rose products and regular watering. Two thorough waterings per week will do it. In addition to rose foods, ferti-lome provides specific rose products for insect control and disease control.

Planting
Using a sharp hand pruner, cut off any broken or dead roots. Be sure hole in ground is large enough to allow roots to spread comfortably. Pack soil firmly around roots. Fill hole with water, allow to soak in and fill again. Now add remainder of soil to fill hole. Prune tops back to 6 or 8 inches (4 to 6 inches on floribundas).

Systemic Action means that the insect control enters the root system of the plant and therefore protects every part of the plant by traveling the plant's own sap system. This also means that it cannot be washed off the plant's exterior.

FOR SAFETY

- Always read the label before spraying or dusting, taking special notice of all cautions and warnings.
- To avoid spillage always mix sprays on a solid, level surface.
- Do not allow pesticides to come into contact with skin or clothing.
- Do not eat, drink or smoke while spraying.
- Wash exposed skin thoroughly with soap and water immediately after spraying.
- Store all chemicals out of the reach of children.
- Keep a set of mixing tools and measuring spoons for mixing and measuring chemicals only.
- Dispose of left-over spray in a hole 18 inches deep and cover it. Do not store left-over spray.
- Pesticide containers should be drained completely and rinsed thoroughly three times before discarding. Do not burn empty containers.

FOR BEST RESULTS

- Make certain you read and understand the entire label before using any chemical.
- Always follow directions faithfully.
- Never spray any plant or grass that is suffering from lack of moisture.
- Water plants or grass thoroughly a few days before spraying.
- Strong winds deplete the moisture in plants. Always wait a day or two before spraying.
- Never spray plants when leaves are wet, much of the spray's effectiveness will be lost.
