Hostage Transfer Again Appears Bogged Down

By The Associated Press
Iranian militants announced today they will allow American clergymen to give Easter services for hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. The issue of the captives' transfer to government control appeared bogged down.

A spokesman for the militants would not disclose the names of the clergymen, but the Rev. Darrell Rupiper, a Roman Catholic priest in Omaha, Neb., said he would perform the Tehran services this Sunday along with the Rev. Jack Bremer and the Rev. Nelson Thompson.

Rupiper said all three are affiliated with the Committee for the American-Iran Crisis Revolution, based in Lawrence, Kan., and would leave for Iran today. Rupiper said he traveled in Iran for two weeks in February.

Iranian state radio and television may record the Easter services, but no foreign reporters will be permitted to watch, the militant spokesman said.

Government television filmed Christmas services given by three American clergymen, who said they saw 43 hostages inside the embassy, as well as three U.S. diplomats held at the Foreign Ministry since the Nov. 4 embassy takeover.

Tehran Radio, meanwhile, reported that Carter apparently has turned down the Revolutionary Council's request to clarify his response to Iran's demands for transferring the American hostages to government control.

"It seems that the U.S. president has rejected the Iranian Revolutionary Council's call to clarify his stand candidly," the broadcast said in reporting Washington's position on the issue.

The Foreign Ministry said the Carter administration seems to be engaging in a war of nerves, and a spokesman for the militants who seized the 50 hostages in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran 153 days ago said, "We didn't expect the great Satan of America to do anything but make empty threats."

About 200 demonstrators gathered outside the embassy, meanwhile, declaring support for the militants and protesting what they said was U.S. pressure to release the hostages before the issue is decided by Iran's new Parliament.

The Revolutionary Council

delayed taking control of the hostages Thursday and demanded clarification from Washington of the U.S. response to Iran's conditions.

In response, White House press secretary Jody Powell said, "The American position has been clearly stated. We hope the authorities in Iran will carefully consider that position and the full implications of the situation before making a final decision."

Asked if this indicated President Carter might order new sanctions against Iran, Powell said it "generally was not productive to fix deadlines." But he conceded that his reference to the "clearly stated" U.S. position included past official pronouncements on possible retaliation.

The strong implication was that Carter has gone as far as he is willing to in meeting President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's demand Tuesday that Carter promise to refrain from hostilities, propaganda or provocation against Iran until its new Parliament now being elected decides whether the hostages should be freed.

ABC-News reported that Bani-Sadr asked Carter in a telex to say he understood it was the Iranian Parliament's "right" to decide the fate of the hostages. The report said Carter responded in a telex that he understood that was the Iranian position and made no mention of Parliament's "right."

Publicly, however, Carter said Bani-Sadr's speech was a positive development and he would defer further sanctions for the time being.

Bani-Sadr said Wednesday that as far as he was concerned the United States had met the conditions for the council to take control of the hostages. But the council in a four-hour meeting Thursday refused to agree with him.

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh told reporters in Tehran that what Carter said "wasn't precisely what the council had in mind." He said the ruling body "must have some more information on the precise position of the United States concerning the statements which were made by Mr. Bani-Sadr."

He said the Iranian government will make up its mind on the hostage transfer immediately after Carter clarifies his position. Asked when he expects Carter's answer, he said, "I hope within a couple of days." He also said he thought the council probably will make its final decision Sunday.

One of the militants holding the hostages in the U.S. Embassy since Nov. 4 said before the council met, "We have not received any requests. We don't want to deliver the spy nest. When they make a decision, we will act."

Another militant said, "We will accept any decision that the Revolutionary Council takes."

The militants demand that Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and his fortune be returned to Iran as the price of the hostages' freedom. But Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the leader of the Iranian revolutionary regime, says the captives' fate will be decided by the 270-member Majlis, or Parliament, which is expected to meet in June.

The militants took over the embassy while the shah was undergoing cancer treatment in New York. The deposed monarch flew to Panama Dec. 15 and to Egypt March 23, a day before extradition papers were filed by Iran's representatives in Panama City. His cancerous spleen was removed in a Cairo hospital last week, but the disease has spread to his liver and he is to undergo chemotherapy.

Advises Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rejecting Iranian demands for new statements from President Carter, the U.S. government is urging Iranian officials to weigh "the full implications of the situation" before deciding who will control the American hostages in Tehran.

Days of efforts to win agreement on removing the 50 hostages from the control of their militant captors collapsed, at least for the present, when some Iranian officials called Thursday for fresh pronouncements by Carter before agreeing to place the prisoners under government control.

After an official silence here that lasted several hours, White House press secretary Jody Powell finally told reporters late in the day:

"Let me say that the American position has been clearly stated. We hope the authorities in Iran will carefully consider that position and the full implications of the situation before making a final decision."

Powell refused to elaborate on his prepared script, saying, "I'm not in a position to interpret what I have said."

Left unspoken was a strong implication that Carter feels he has gone as far as he can in meeting Iranian demands.

After Iran's ruling Revolutionary Council delayed a decision Thursday on taking control of the hostages, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said the Iranian leadership wants "more information on the precise position of the United States."

The Iranians have asked for assurances that the United States will take no retaliatory action against Iran because of the hostage crisis, which began last Nov. 4, when the militants overran the U.S. Embassy.

Wholesale Prices Continue To Rise

By GLENN RITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices soared by 1.4 percent in March, an 18.2 percent compounded annual rate, while unemployment edged up to 6.2 percent, the government reported today.

March's increase in wholesale, or producer, prices was only slightly less than the huge jumps recorded in January and February.

Food prices at the wholesale level turned up in March following two months of decline while energy costs continued to soar at an annual rate of nearly 110 percent, said Janet Norwood, commissioner of the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Wholesale prices are watched carefully by economists because they tend to preview similar increases at the consumer level in later months.

Consumer prices rose at an 18 percent-plus annual rate through February, far beyond last year's 13.3 percent pace.

The disturbing boosts in prices since January set in motion President Carter's budget-balancing efforts as well as new credit control steps by the Federal Reserve Board.

The Labor Department's report on unemployment showed joblessness rising from a 6.0 percent level in February. March's 6.2 percent figure matched the January level.

Despite the 1.4 percent increase in the Producer Price Index, Ms. Norwood pointed to some favorable signs on the inflation front.

Excluding food and energy, all other finished goods — those ready for retailer's shelves — rose only 0.5 percent in March, less than half the increases in January and February.

"In addition, the sharp diminution of price increases at both the crude and intermediate stages of processing is encouraging," she said in testimony prepared for Congress.

The Producer Price Index measures three stages of processing: finished goods, ready for sale to retailers; intermediate goods, which are partially processed; and crude materials, such as grain and livestock which have yet to be processed.

Among finished goods, the Labor Department reported a 7.2 percent increase in energy costs, nearly as much as in February and considerably more than in any other month in the last six years.

Gasoline prices shot up 8.5 percent, and prices for home heating oil were up 6.3 percent.

Consumer foods advanced 1.1 percent after declining .8 percent and 0.5 percent in January and February, FARMVILLE — The Town of Farmville has received approval of its preapplication for $2,980,215 in Community Development Block Grant Funds, Congressman Walter B. Jones has announced.

About one third of the funds, $984,310, will be made available in the first of a three-year project if the town's full application is approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The town's Community Development proposal includes an effort to redevelop and conserve predominately low-income housing areas and projects to bolster commercial-service areas in the southern portion of the central business district. The full three-year program calls for rehabilitation of 189 residential housing units, demolition of 17 dilapidated structures, paving of 1725 linear feet of streets, storm drainage improvements, a minipark primarily designed for the elderly, a community center, a southern CBD off-street parking area and rehabilitation of 10 commercial structures.

The project impact area is generally bordered by Pine Street on the north and Perry Street on the south. The first year's work would be concentrated between Moore and Hines streets.

Mayor Linwood Mercer expressed delight at the news. "I feel that the impact of this grant will improve the liveability of our town as nothing has ever done in the past. Judging by the work just completed in our smaller single-purpose grant, this project will do miracles in the rejuvenation of decaying neighborhoods. I think all Farmville people can look forward to the day when it can be said to a visitor or industrial prospect that our town has absolutely no blighted areas."

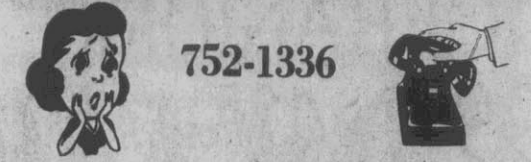

The town's application was prepared as a followup to the recently completed LIFE-1 Community Development Project, the town's first CD block grant. That effort resulted in the rehabilitation of 33 dwellings in a predominately low-income neighborhood. The new application was authorized by the Town Board Dec. 4 after a public hearing on proposed alternatives was held Nov. 6. The application was prepared by Town Administrator Patrick Thomas and Consultant John Schofield, with the assistance of the Community Development Application Advisory Committee and Assis-

Pointed Words

By The Associated Press
Iran's revolutionary leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, today asked Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev "to prevent any kind of interference by force" in other nations, especially Moslem countries.

The message, broadcast by Tehran Radio, was an apparent reference to Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan, which neighbors both Iran and the Soviet Union.

Thanking Brezhnev for congratulations he offered on the first anniversary of the Iranian revolution, Khomeini said:

"We hope that in the same way you have expressed wishes for the sovereignty and independence of our nation, you will always give attention to the independence of all nations, especially Moslem nations, and that you will prevent any kind of interference by force in other people's affairs, so that all people can regain their lost rights from the colonialists in independence and freedom."

A Rock Is Rocknapped

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The words were simple, the message clear. "Hickory, dickory dock, We've got your rock. We will contact you later."

Fashioned from letters cut out of newspapers and magazines, the ransom note for a kid-napped rock was received about 9:30 p.m. Thursday by the management of radio station WHSI in Wilmington.

"No, this isn't a joke," sputtered operations manager Rick Todd. "Someone stole our rock."

The rock, too large for one person to move alone, had been in front of the radio station since late March as part of a promotional contest, Todd said. The person who came closest to guessing the correct weight of the rock would win a $700 diamond ring, he said.

The contest was to run through April 12, Todd said.

An hour after the anonymous note was received, Todd said the station received a telephone call from an unidentified man who said he was a member of the Mineral Liberation Army.

"He said the MLA was responsible for the theft and that we should wait for another message to know how to go about getting our rock back," Todd said.

Todd said he had reported the theft to the New Hanover County Sheriff's Department.

A spokesman at the sheriff's department confirmed that the rock had been taken and that an investigation was under way.

"Of course, we'll investigate it," the spokesman said. "When something is stolen, we always look for it. It may be just a rock, but it's important to them (the station)."

ECU School Of Music Dean Resigns Position

Dr. Everett Pittman has submitted his resignation as Dean of the School of Music, East Carolina University. The letter of resignation, submitted on Monday, March 31, asks that he be relieved of the duties of dean effective at the end of the second summer semester.

In a telephone conversation this morning, Dr. Pittman said that "I want to return to teaching on a full time basis. Teaching has been my first love all along, and my own preference is to be back in the classroom. That is my reason for offering my resignation as dean."

Dr. Pittman came to East Carolina University in June 1971 as Dean of the School of Music. He came here from Florida State University, Tallahassee, Florida.

"I have been teaching all along in addition to my duties as dean," Dr. Pittman added, "in music theory and piano."

A pianist, Dr. Pittman has appeared in numerous concerts at ECU, often in conjunction with other faculty members of the School of Music.

Dr. Robert Maier, Vice-Chancellor for Academic Affairs' is out of town and could not be reached for comments on Dr. Pittman's resignation.

Sprinkler System Disrupts Phones

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — All telephone communications in Morganton and a large portion of the surrounding Burke County area were disrupted early Thursday night when a fire protection sprinkler system broke in the Southern Bell central office, sending gallons of water over vital telephone equipment.

Officials predicted that the telephone service would remain out for most of today.

Telephone service was knocked out about 8:30 p.m. when the sprinkler system, located on the top floor of the telephone company building in downtown Morganton, broke.

The telephone system breakdown forced law enforcement, rescue and fire protection personnel into an alert status. Additional shifts of city policemen and county deputies were immediately called on duty in an effort to prevent potential looting and robberies.

Firemen were dispatched to several volunteer fire stations in the county to set up emergency radio bases. Rural residents were told by commercial radio and television announcements to go to the fire stations in case of fire or if they needed police or ambulance service.

The fire stations normally are not manned.

Firemen and Southern Bell employees spent more than four hours sweeping and pumping water from the three-story telephone office.

Sue Jane Sides, maintenance manager for the Morganton Southern Bell office, said the equipment would have to be dried before an accurate assessment of damages could be made.

The entire 433-and 437-telephone exchanges were put out of action. Telephone service in the eastern and extreme western portions of Burke County were not damaged. However, the breakdown prevented residents in those areas from calling numbers in the affected area, where most of the emergency bases are located.

Dr. Kushnick To Address Group

Dr. Theodore Kushnick, Director of the East Carolina University Developmental Evaluation Clinic, will speak at the April meeting of the Association for Retarded Citizens of Pitt County to be held Wednesday, Apr. 9, at 8 p.m.

Dr. Kushnick is also associated with the ECU School of Medicine. He is widely published as a geneticist and was, before he came here, active in promoting legislation for the mentally retarded as it pertains to genetics. He will present a slide presentation on genetics. Parents, professionals and the general public are urged to attend.

Eggs and Easter

The annual Easter egg roll in the back yard of the White House is one of many traditional customs involving eggs at Eastertime. The ancient Egyptians and Persians often died eggs in the spring and exchanged them as gifts. The legend about a rabbit who brings children Easter eggs began in Germany. The people of the Ukraine are famous for decorating their Easter eggs with elaborate designs and colors. President Rutherford B. Hayes started the custom of rolling Easter eggs on the White House lawn in 1878. The tradition has continued every year since then, except for a 10-year period during the 1940s and 1950s.

Student Fees Study Slated

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In the wake of a new Supreme Court ruling, the executive director of a legal aid program says he will conduct a statewide study of student-fee policies to ensure that all schools are complying with the court's decision.

Denison Ray, executive director of the Legal Services of North Carolina, promised Thursday to look at the fee policies at each of the state's 145 school districts.

Ray said his efforts will be on behalf of low-income clients.

"We shall acquaint ourselves with the school fees policy in each school district in the event that a client wants to exercise his or her rights in any school district not in compliance with the Supreme Court's decision," Ray said.

The Supreme Court Tuesday upheld the Greensboro school system's right to charge modest, reasonable instructional and course fees by the Greensboro school system.

The decision affected all schools in the state that impose fees on students.

The court also ruled the Greensboro city system must set up and publicize an established, confidential system for waiving fees for those unable to afford them.

"In view of the court's decision," Ray said, "it's important that waiver policies adopted by school districts be affirmative, simple and confidential, with no stigma or embarrassment attached to them."

Ray said he would prefer to deal informally with school boards to seek compliance rather than seek compliance in court.

He said the court's decision gives real meaning to the equal right of North Carolinians to a free public school education.

Life As It's Lived

Advice Columns Miss Communications Gap

By GAIL MICHAELS

Nothing gives a better sense of perspective about marriage than advice columns. Without them, I might worry about the arguments Phillip and I are always having. But as it is, every time I read one I am amazed that we have managed to avoid the really serious marital conflicts, like the great toilet tissue debate.

There's no telling how many marriages have been wiped out by this issue, but judging from the flood of letters to one columnist, thousands of couples are struggling over which way the toilet tissue rolls. If the wife likes it to roll off the front, the husband changes it so that it rolls from the back, or vice-versa.

Luckily, although I found this debate totally absorbing, I couldn't identify with it. The last time Phillip changed a roll of toilet tissue, I had to double check his identification to make sure he had the right house. Neither can I identify with the letters from husbands who complain that their wives let themselves go after the first baby. One man's wife had deteriorated so far that she didn't even change out of her nightgown to serve him breakfast.

Phillip never has to worry about anything like this. If I ever do serve him breakfast, I'll be sure to dress for the occasion.

Thank goodness the only persistent problem we have is a minor one. We just can't seem to communicate. I complain that he never finishes a sentence. He complains that I never let him.

I contend that if he could train himself to say a sentence with less than three 60-second pauses, I wouldn't react like a contestant on "Name that Tune." He contends that I've held up both ends of our conversation for so long that he's out of practice.

"You don't give me a chance," he says, "because you always think you know what I'm going to—"

"That's not true, and you know it."

"Oh, yeah? What about this morning? You just assumed, and quite incorrectly I might add, that—"

"Well, we'd been through it all a hundred times before."

"You were rude. If you weren't so—"

"I am not all that impatient. But if you come home, and after three words I know that you're going to tell me that in 30 seconds the house is going to explode, I'm not going to wait five minutes for you to spit it out."

"I repeat, if you weren't so impatient, you might have learned that I had a new—"

"I'm sorry. It's just that you haven't had a new approach in eight years, and I wasn't prepared. I apologize."

"You don't—"

"Yes, I do. I really mean it this time."

"If you did, you'd let me—"

"So tell me. I'm waiting. What is it you were going to say this morning?"

"I forgot."

Triplets At Chapel Hill

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Full-term triplets were born Thursday to a Godwin woman at North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill.

Doctors at the hospital say it is extremely rare for a mother to carry triplets a full nine months, extremely rare in multiple births.

Dr. Robert Cefalo, who delivered the babies, said it was the second time he had heard of such a birth in 20 years of practice.

The two boys and a girl were born to Cynthia and Henry Bre-wington of Godwin. They were the couple's first children.

The babies were delivered by Caesarian section, which Cefalo said is safer and less traumatic. Cefalo said that, because the babies were carried to term, they were unusually large for triplets.

Their weights at birth were 7 pounds, 3 ounces; 6 pounds, and 5 pounds, 11 ounces.

All three babies, as well as the mother, were reported doing well Thursday.

Mrs. Bre-wington was admitted to the hospital eight weeks ago, after her local doctor determined she was carrying more than one baby and needed special pre-natal care to prevent premature delivery.

Calligrapher Says: 'R Is His Favorite Letter'

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Woman's Editor
"R is my favorite initial — it's a pleasant combination of straight line and curves," said Gerald Finn, a calligrapher from Virginia.

Employed by Colonial Williamsburg, Finn demonstrates writing in the 18th century style using a quill pen. The quills are hand carved by him from goose or turkey flight feathers and he uses an 18th century pen knife. "The term 'pen knife' originated from the fact that in early times people carried a small knife to sharpen their writing pens. In that period a pen knife would be kept in a scabbard to prevent accidental injury.

"Other paraphernalia relating to the art of writing in the colonial period would have been a sand box containing sand used instead of a blotter, a container of pounce powder (a substance used to fill up the pores of paper that had been scraped in the process of correcting mistakes) and a burnisher. A step in correcting mistakes would have been rubbing the roughened surface with a burnisher (used to create a smooth surface)," Finn said.

"Envelopes were seldom used — the letter was folded carefully forming a packet which was then sealed with hot wax, almost always stamped with a brass seal. The seal might have been printed with the sender's initials or coat of arms of the logo of his firm. When the letter was received, the recipient might have looked at the seal and would have known if his letter had been opened and if the seal was black rather than red, he would know that the letter contained news of the passing of a loved one. He might have recognized the design of the seal, that it was from someone he didn't want to hear from and thusly refused to accept it because in that early period, it was the receiver who paid the postage.

"It was not unusual for letters to be refused. We read that Thomas Jefferson was rather notorious for not accepting mail from people he didn't want to hear from," he continued.

A good 18th century education included instruction in penmanship. It wasn't unusual for an individual to know several styles of writing, including ornamental writing purposely imitative of copperplate engraving. Calligraphy in the 18th century was done on high quality rag paper, Finn said. He mostly demonstrates English Roundhand, while working four hours daily in Colonial Williamsburg.

"My first interest in handwriting was created through finding an old textbook on Spencerian handwriting belonging to my grandfather, who was a schoolteacher," he continued.

Finn is retired from the architecture department at Colonial Williamsburg. "I enjoyed calligraphy and decided to see if I could do it myself." His most ambitious work to date is the production of a 200-page book at Tryon Palace in North Carolina's colonial capital at New Bern. In addition to his demonstrations for Colonial Williamsburg visitors, Finn teaches classes in calligraphy at the Williamsburg Regional Library.

He is an elder in the Williamsburg Presbyterian Church and was a national officer in The Sons of the American Revolution. Painting water colors is his hobby.

Finn is demonstrating his handwriting art in the Williamsburg section of Belk Tyler, Carolina East Mall, yesterday and today.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

In 1949, I married my husband for better or for worse — but not for movies. He said they put him to sleep and the seats were too small for him to stretch out. For over 30 years, I never understood a single joke at the Academy Awards.

That is why I couldn't wait until we got subscription television beamed into our home so I could watch all the films everyone talked about.

In watching them I realized that movies had changed considerably since Bambi almost died in the fire.

Profanity has become a second language. Not only that, it has not added a single creative new cuss word since I was a kid.

Have you any idea how boring a vocabulary consisting of five four-letter words, one three-letter word, one five-letter word, one seven-letter word, and one 11-letter word can be?

We're talking about nine words that often have to carry a two-hour movie. After the shock of hearing the same words over and over wore off, I began to listen to them in the context in which they were used and made another discovery. The profanity was not grammatically correct. Sometimes, the subject never went with the verb and more often, the noun was used as an adjective and most of the sentences were incomplete. There is nothing more unsettling than an incomplete profane sentence that is just strung together. The language definitely needs work if profanity is to continue on television.

You just cannot have John Travolta being edited for commercial television in "Saturday Night Fever" with his lips forming an S and hearing him say, "For corn's sake."

American's second language either needs help or should be discontinued altogether. It is becoming tawdry and predictable. If those who use the language are serious about keeping it alive, then why not appoint a Creative Cussing Committee that would introduce new words from time to time? We've fallen behind the entire world in profanity.

When was the last time you saw the words, "Deleted Expletive"? How often are "bleeps" being used on regular TV? When did you last see a new word on the restroom wall in lipstick? Dirty words are being used up at an astronomical rate.

If someone doesn't do something soon, one of these mornings you'll hit your finger with a hammer and do you know what you'll say? Nothing. You won't have a word for it.

Dear Abby

Try To Have Dress Repaired

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I recently attended a house party in a very crowded apartment. I had a cigarette in my hand when a friend walked by and brushed her sleeve up against my cigarette and burned a hole in her dress. She was very upset, and so was I. I told her to get the hole mended and I would be glad to pay for it.

She called me a week later to say that she had taken the dress back to the store where she purchased it and they said the hole could not be repaired. Then she said she called her insurance company and was advised that my insurance company would pay for the dress.

I then called my insurance company and was advised that since I had a $100 deductible policy, they could not pay for the dress. When I told my friend this, she said I had a lousy insurance company. By the way, this friend smokes at parties, too.

Abby, just what is my responsibility in this situation? I want to be fair.

SAD SMOKER

DEAR SMOKER: Tell your friend to look in the Yellow Pages for a weaver who is expert at repairing cigarette burns. (Or you look, and tell her where to go.)

DEAR ABBY: I struck up a conversation with a very good-looking guy at a bar and he bought me a drink (two actually). Well, before I was halfway finished with the second one, he was giving me this "your-place-or-mine" routine.

Abby, what gives a man the idea that all he has to do is buy a drink for a girl and he can make it with her? I realize that women have come a long way. A few years ago a woman without an escort wasn't even allowed to sit at a bar! Fortunately, times have changed, but the attitude of most men hasn't. They still don't consider women their equals. Men continue to do the picking and choosing, and treat women like they were put here on earth to satisfy men.

FED UP IN CONN.

DEAR FED UP: One swallow doesn't make a summer, nor need one drink make a strange bed-fellow. But if you really want to promote equality between the sexes, the next time you strike up a conversation with a guy at the bar, you buy the drinks, and you won't owe him anything.

Expansion Is Welcome

Union Carbide has announced plans for doubling its plant facilities here on Greenville Boulevard.

The plant expansion will mean additional employment and it could not come at a better time for Pitt County.

We are particularly pleased that Union Carbide is making this additional investment in our area because the corporation has been a part of the local economy since 1944.

For some years, Union Carbide was one of the few major corporations of the nation which was willing to take a chance on the basically rural background workers of our area.

The firm operated in a plant on 14th

Street, until plans were approved for a modern new facility on what was then a two lane U.S. 264 highway south of Greenville.

The success of the Union Carbide operations here is attested to by its willingness to expand its operations here.

Since the 1940s many other major corporations have established operations in Pitt County, and we are proud of all of them. But Union Carbide was at the forefront in beginning Pitt County's industrial development. Now the firm is expanding and that is most pleasing to the people of Pitt County.

The Opportunity Is Offered

Margaret Register, elections supervisor, has announced extended hours for the Pitt County Board of Elections office, 201 E. Second Street.

The office will be open from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Friday and 9 until 2 on Saturday. The office will be closed Easter Monday, but open April 8 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

There is time to register to be eligible for the May 6 primary. The way to change things in a democracy is to vote.

Schools The Key?

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — In the midst of social chaos there is one potentially stabilizing influence which could help return sanity and order: the schools.

That is the conviction of psychologist Jack McCall, recently retired from a career in counseling, criminology, and service as the chief psychologist with the North Carolina Department of Correction.

"We can now tell by the fourth grade which youngsters will serve time in the training schools and in the prisons.

"They are at risk, and we are not doing enough to intervene. We are not going upriver and teaching the little ones how to swim. Instead, we are spending most of our resources on trying to rescue them once they get into trouble, or in attempting to recover the bodies," says the New York native who grew up in Boston but adopted North Carolina as home.

McCall, who continues to work as a counseling psychologist and as a university lecturer, literally explodes with words tumbling over one another as he describes the decline and fall of the American neighborhood, and what he thinks ought to be done.

A Chance

"I have seen it in the urban areas of the North. We still have a chance to do something about it here," he argues. The demands of money and social pressures have torn the family asunder; the old folks are off in retirement or rest homes; churches have declined in influence and importance; communities are filled with people who don't know or care about one another; job changes and transfers leave people rootless.... he ticks off social change after social change.

In the midst of all this, the schools were represented as capable of helping children to deal with all of those pressures. They might have been able to, but at the same time the courts and the federal government ripped the schools out of the very neighborhoods which needed their stability and sent youngsters shuttling all over town, even further away from whatever responsible influences remained.

McCall points out that in small town and rural settings where neighborhood schools have been anchors amidst chaos, crime rates are lower and people have a sense of community.

"Schools are where the

children are. We need to concentrate our community resources, our other social agencies, our individual concerns on those schools and help the educators," McCall says.

The psychologist sees the need for major change in other elements of the criminal justice system. Juvenile court needs "complete re-thinking. By then it is too late to save them. Besides, we are sending to training schools and prisons children who are psychotic."

Police

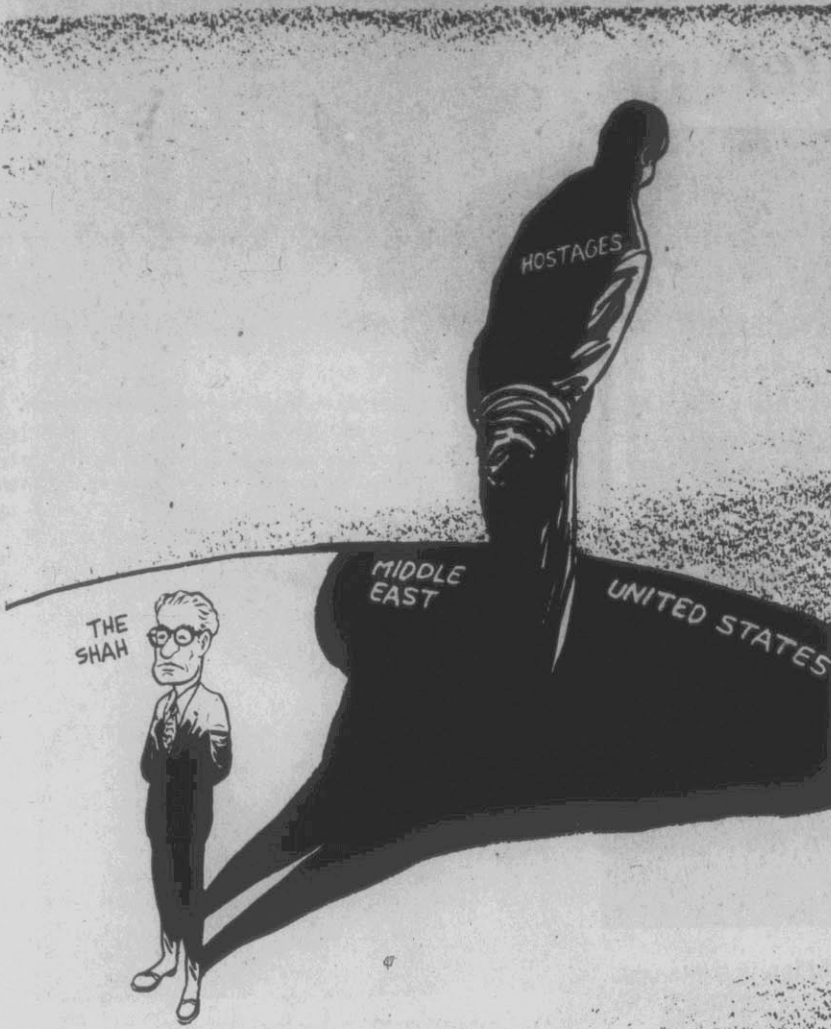

Policemen, whom McCall considers "the only professionals who make housecalls without appointments," need stricter screening before entry, training, and pay-to-boost professionalism. Officers especially need help in dealing with the human tragedies they routinely face. "Law enforcement is the most dangerous job in the world — not physically, but emotionally. For every police officer killed in the line of duty.... two commit suicide." McCall says. Within the ranks, marital difficulties and alcohol problems are widespread.

The prisons, which McCall describes as "the daughter who is not pretty; whom we would like to keep in the closet," are overcrowded in North Carolina because this state sentences more people to prison and keeps them there longer than do most other states. "Fair sentencing? What North Carolina does is we are liable to be equitable by giving

Reagan Might Succeed

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
MILWAUKEE (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy isn't having much success converting President Carter's economic and foreign policy problems into votes — but there is evidence Ronald Reagan might be able to do it.

For the pattern of the Wisconsin presidential primary election shows that Reagan, given the right set of circumstances, can gain the votes of independents and some Democrats to go with his own Republican following.

Whether the right combination of issues and rivals would prevail if Reagan gained the Republican presidential nomination, as now seems likely, is another question.

But he did Tuesday in Wisconsin. Reagan got more votes in winning the Republican primary, with two challengers relatively close behind him, than Carter gained in winning the Democratic contest by a landslide.

Among those Reagan ballots were the votes of substantial numbers of independents and Democrats. Since Wisconsin's is a wide-open primary, with no party registration and no declaration of party preference required to take a primary ballot, there are no firm numbers to make the case.

However, in an AP-NBC News poll, Republican primary voters who identified themselves as independents or Democrats split 39 percent for Rep. John B. Anderson, 29 percent for former U.N. Ambassador George Bush.

Reagan said the liberal Democrats Anderson was wooing wouldn't be caught dead voting Republican in the general election. He said his Wisconsin supporters would, because they agree with the policies of the GOP.

The former California governor led the Republican primary in five of the nine most heavily Democratic counties in Wisconsin.

In the most open of the presidential primaries, 59 percent of the voters decided to cast Republican ballots. The 41 percent who voted in the Democratic primary gave that party its lowest share of the turnout since 1956. Back then, Wisconsin was a solid Republican state. It isn't any more.

Patrick J. Caddell, Carter's pollster, said he doesn't think the primary election numbers bear on general election prospects. "My guess is that if you did a poll, we would probably enjoy a comfortable margin over Ronald Reagan," he said.

Reshaped To Suit Needs

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Carter's disavowal last week of his three-month-old confession that the invasion of Afghanistan changed his view of "ultimate" Soviet goals followed a familiar pattern of reshaping positions to his political needs, a syndrome newly apparent in his treatment of germ warfare charges against Moscow.

In an interview with the Washington Post's Meg Greenfield, Carter denied he had ever admitted changing his own mind about the Soviets' "ultimate goals" as a result of Afghanistan. In fact, on Dec. 31, following the Soviet invasion, Carter declared over ABC television that Afghanistan "made a more dramatic change in my opinion of what the Soviets' ultimate goals are than anything they have done" during his administration.

Thus, Carter's syndrome: What he says for immediate political impact one day, he denies the next under the stress of changed political needs. The result is that U.S. policy becomes hostage to instant political requirements. That has infuriated U.S. allies, confounded U.S. enemies and consigned Carter's real policy to the murky world of make-believe.

The Carter syndrome has been tripping him and his country in foreign policy for three years, but never so consistently as in these days of the Soviet global offensive and the Carter re-election drive.

On Jan. 23, one month after Afghanistan, the president sounded a call to arms in his State of the Union message. It is "imperative," he said, that Congress approve a 1981 defense bill equal to "a 5 percent real growth in authorizations, without any reduction."

When Carter's budget revisions reached the House Armed Services Committee March 31, he called for a 2 percent real growth. In just three months, the president's perception of political reality had caused him to downgrade drastically what he had told Congress was an "imperative" of military preparedness.

The case of alleged Soviet violations of the 1972 treaty banning biological (germ) warfare also has triggered the syndrome. When the allegations about violations were first heard by Carter last spring, he turned a deaf ear. He did so not because the suspicions had been disproved, but because he did not want to harm his cherished strategic arms limitation agreement (SALT II).

Any proof that Moscow has violated the insistent and specific terms of the germ warfare treaty would have made SALT II its first casualty. So, the wraps were on; the explosion in a suspected biological warfare plant in the closed city of Sverdlovsk, nearly 1,000 miles east of Moscow, was given the quick brush.

Afghanistan changed everything. Suddenly, the same circumstances deemed inadmissible for U.S. scrutiny only months earlier were perceived, said a State Department spokesman, as having caused "substantial numbers of fatalities perhaps running into the hundreds."

But will Carter insist tomorrow, as he does today, on uncovering the truth about the alleged Sverdlovsk treaty violation? The State Department spokesman, as having caused "substantial numbers of fatalities perhaps running into the hundreds." That is particularly true in this case because a U.S. finding that the Russians blatantly cheated on the unverifiable germ warfare treaty would revolutionize the political climate here against the strategic arms agreement. The top-secret guideline drafted by the National Security Council's Special Coordination Committee (SCC) last month, informing Carter the administration was "raising this matter" with Moscow, specifically noted "potentially serious implications for the future of arms control."

Those implications center not on germ warfare but on the broader question of nuclear arms control. In the words of one top arms control expert, a finding of Soviet guilt at Sverdlovsk "would terrify the arms controllers, not just because of the verification problem but because it would prove Soviet intent to cheat at a time many arms controllers claim that there is no such intent."

Some day, perhaps soon, Jimmy Carter may decide to resume all-out pursuit of detente, despite Afghanistan. When that day comes the Carter syndrome makes change easier: The Sverdlovsk incident, along with the 5 percent increase in the defense budget and many other now-forgotten Carter policies pegged to the passing fancy, will simply be denied and hidden in some musty file.

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum should be limited to 300 words. The editor reserves the right to edit longer letters.

To the editor:
March 27 I attended a public hearing for Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency. Criteria for a new manual was to be considered and two proposed criteria had been offered. Their total content was that our tax money through this organization should not be used, nor should a certificate of need be issued by this organization unless it met these two criteria.

The first required that implementation of the proposed project would not violate or conflict with basic family principles, the sanctity of marriage and reverence of individual human life. The other would require that no monies or certificate of need be issued which would violate the Hippocratic Oath involved in services provided by the project.

I was surprised to find myself in a position wherein I must speak favorably for something which was so right it needed no promotion. Upon requesting of the committee information why it may not be viewed favorably, I was told by the chairman they were prohibited by law from having any conversational interchange. Here we are, trying to promote something which does not need promoting... having no knowledge whatever regarding what phase or phases of the criteria may be misunderstood or objectionable to the committee, and having no line of communication with them to determine these possibilities for discussion. How frustrating! How unfair!

One hour after this "public hearing," the committee met, refused both criteria with no valid reason having been given. One member who was not at the hearing did state he did not wish to vote for something which would control the doctors' private practice. Of course, neither of the criteria implied this fact, but both were apparently refuted on this single irrelevant statement.

Without communication, a public hearing is not a public hearing! Without communication, there is rarely proper understanding of any issue! Without communication, our governmental agencies continue to serve differently from the wishes of the majority.

Will you write letter to your legislators? Or to this paper? Or don't you care that proper communication lines between citizen and government are seriously reduced?

Thriller Cruise

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
FLYING INTO ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — Perusing the travel ads in a fashion magazine, I note that this month the Norwegian-America liner Sagafjord will be embarking from Port Everglades, Fla., on what is being billed as the "First Floating Whodunit Cruise."

Aboard to whet the bloodthirsty appetites and chill the spines of the thriller enthusiasts will be mystery writer P.D. James, widely regarded in homicidal circles as the successor to Dame Agatha Christie; British bobby Donald Rumblelew, a Jack the Ripper expert; former FBI agent Thomas McDade, a noted crime historian, and author Dily's Winn, the founder of Murder Ink, the New York book store devoted to the literary art of mayhem and treatises on terror.

It is hoped that these ghoulish scholars will address themselves to some of the great unsolved mysteries of the deep.

Like, for instance, the eternal problem which often leads to violence and bodies disappearing overboard: how much should one tip?

The Sagafjord is a sleek, clean, happy ship, upon which after the happy-go-lucky Norwegian fashion the bars never close because the midnight sun is always over the yardarm. Yet, inevitably, (Continued on Page 6)

40 Years Ago Today

April 4, 1940
WASHINGTON — Probably the biggest surprise when the 1940 census figures are in will be the increase in the number of women in the labor force.

Estimates are running around 3,000,000.

The reasons are numerous. The depression years had a six-play effect: (1) Dwindling family incomes drove the ladies to pounding the pavements and reading the "Help Wanted" ads. (2) When the men of the family were thrown out of work completely, the women had to find employment for the family to survive. (3) Thousands of marriages were postponed indefinitely and many of the brides-never-to-be sought solace and sustenance in their work. (4) The spread of birth control was evidenced by rapidly declining birth rates. (5) Many jobs filled by women were eminently cheaper and better equipped than those jobs filled by men. (6) It was evidenced that more men are married than women.

Strength For Today

THE UNHOLY TRINITY
The doctrine of the Holy Trinity is an important one in Christian faith. But there is a religion which continually opposes Christianity, namely, the worship of worldliness. This religion also has a trinity — the world, flesh, and the devil.

The world is that variety of activity organized and pursued apart from the purposes of God. The flesh is that bundle of impulses within all of us which leads us to use God-given powers for personal indulgence instead of using them to God's glory. The devil is the name the Bible gives to that personalized spirit of evil which assails the hearts of men and turns them away from high purpose.

The religion of vast multitudes is the religion of worldliness. We continually hope that the world is getting better, and in some ways it does; but in other ways it appears to become worse. The world, the flesh, and the devil are always with us.

Elisha Douglass

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — In seeking both full employment and energy conservation, the United States has set contradictory goals, says Robert Theobald, economist, futurist, author and consultant.

"The unperceived reality," he says, "is that our present commitment to full employment causes the largest single drain on energy use." He feels the full employment concept is outdated and a threat to society. He believes we are so busy making jobs that nobody has time to work, enjoy it, and contribute to and achieve fulfillment from it.

He asserts correctly that in 1980 you will find not a single political candidate who advocates less than full employment, even though, to him, such a candidate would have shown statesmanlike qualities.

His perception is not to force people into idleness but to gradually evolve a new structure based on recognition that we can't fit every job-seeker into that structure without destroying the economy.

Theobald, India-born, Cambridge-educated, long-time Wickenburg, Ariz. resident, might be considered "far out" by some. To others he is a seminal thinker, author of "Free Men and Free Markets" and other scholarly books, a consultant to government, business and education.

He doesn't contest the nobility of a full employment goal, and he has no notion of forcing people into idleness. But he asks that we be aware of the futility of achieving the goal while also seeking to save energy and raise productive efficiency.

"We know that we could produce the same quantity of goods and services using far less people," he states. He says estimates of the savings range from 15 percent to 30 percent.

"Even more energy could be saved through changed job structure: flexible hours, shared jobs, working at home using teleconferencing, and the use of buildings and equipment for six or seven days a week."

He sees full employment goals as inflationary too. In pursuit of high employment,

"we are increasingly unwilling to apply market-place disciplines," he states. Result: Higher prices are passed on to consumers, government bails out overextended firms, and more and more credit is extended to individuals, groups and nations.

"So long as we are committed to full employment, the long-run inflation rate will stay high and may even rise, for we can put no effective breaks on price and cost increases," Theobald declares.

The dilemma can only be resolved, he insists, by giving up the goal of full employment and providing basic economic security for all, even if they cannot work.

(Next: Theobald's vision of the new system.)

there comes that moment of terror when the passports are handed out for landing and the crew gathers ominously in the corridors grinning the greedy grin of great expectations.

At times like this, my timbers shiver, my soul trembles and I can't get out of my mind an accusing paragraph from a 1972 Time magazine story on the France's first round-the-world cruise:

"The Alexis Nihon family of Nassau, living in the highest priced suite, stashed away 25 cases each of Crown Royal Whisky, Seagram's V.O. and sugar cane brandy to hand out as gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Harmon Chamberlin of Maine filled a cigarette box in their $73,000 suite with 500 crisp dollar bills for small tips."

It is hoped that the supersleuths versed in pathology aboard the Sagafjord will probe the lingering medical mystery of epigastric awareness or overstimulation of the vestibular system, which in layman's language is seasickness.

Lord Nelson, a lifelong sufferer, never found a solution, although he ordered apprentice seamen similarly afflicted to climb the rigging. Poppa Hemingway in queasy moments between blue marlin strikes tried mustard pickles as a cure. The purser on the Michaelangelo swore by an old Italian sailors' remedy: "anchovy sandwiches in a thick layer of olive oil." The surgeon on a Russian ship prescribed "warm 90 proof Russian vodka straight with pickled cucumbers." British ships push tea and bouillon. The Americans go in for pills. Now the trendy cruise ships in the Caribbean offer hypnotism and biofeedback.

But mal de mer remains the deepest mystery of the deep.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The attitude of voters toward the current state political campaign is strictly ho-hum, a situation that likely will benefit the incumbents, say some political observers.

A number of candidates and political workers report that turnout at campaign events, the number of volunteer workers willing to work and the enthusiasm of the average voter in the campaign which will wind up May 6 are all low.

"They come, but they're subdued," said former Gov. Bob Scott, who's challenging Gov. Jim Hunt in the Democratic primary for governor.

"This is one of the most unexciting primary years I've ever seen," said one experienced political aide. "Nobody's worked up."

The apparent apathy of the voters is a change from the usual high interest in North Carolina primaries, in which the winner of the Democratic primary for governor usually wins the November general election.

In looking for reasons for the lack of interest this year, some observers place the blame on inflation which is steaming along at nearly 20 percent.

"The folks out there really aren't that excited about the election," said George Breece, who's trying to wrest the Democratic nomination for secretary of state away from veteran incumbent Thad Eure. "People are more interested in their pocketbooks than in being backslapped by a politician."

Some observers say one reason is that in the most important race — between Hunt and Scott — Hunt is so far ahead it's not generating much excitement.

A third theory is that interest in the state campaign has lagged because of the excitement stirred up by the presidential campaign outside North Carolina.

One political observer who does not agree that interest in the state campaign is abnormally low is Joe Grimsley, Hunt's campaign director. He says he's had no trouble rounding up campaign workers and getting donations. Besides, he says voters never pay attention to state races until the last minute.

But, veteran political wheel-dealer Bert Bennett, who's also in the Hunt corner, disagrees with Grimsley. "I detect less enthusiasm," said Bennett, a Winston-Salem oil distributor. "I think all (the candidates) are suffering."

turnouts and vote shares don't equate with general election prospects.

This year's Wisconsin primary was intensely contested in both parties. Yet by almost 3-to-2, the voters decided to make their choices among the Republican contestants.

The heavy Republican vote this time, with a president and a Kennedy competing on the Democratic ballot, could be a symptom of dissatisfaction with all the Democrats running.

Bert Lance Case Is Narrowed

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Prosecutors failed to prove former federal budget director Bert Lance and three associates conspired to obtain illegal loans, a judge has ruled in a decision that dramatically narrows the scope of the bank fraud case against the businessmen.

U.S. District Judge Charles A. Moyer Jr. announced Thursday that he will order a directed verdict of acquittal on the conspiracy charge, which took up 47 pages of the 71-page indictment.

The charge, the only one in which all four were named, was the centerpiece of the government's 33-count indictment because it provided a context for the 32 other specific allegations of fraud. Those allegations remain for the jury to consider as the prosecution nears the end of its case.

Under Moyer's ruling, the government now may present testimony only on the specific transactions in the substantive counts, rather than ranging through all of Lance's business dealings for the past decade.

Lance greeted the ruling, which came after a four-hour hearing that jurors did not attend, with a broad smile. He said the decision vindicated his position.

"I think it's in keeping with what we said all the time," Lance said. "The government had no conspiracy to prove because there wasn't one."

Chief prosecutor Edwin Tomko said he did not believe the ruling would have any effect on the rest of his case.

Argued chief defense attorney Nicholas Chilivis: "Nobody has been convicted in this country for overdrafts or failure to have collateral. How can people conspire to do something that is perfectly legal?"

The former bank president and his co-defendants were accused of scheming to arrange $20 million in loans from 40 banks beginning in 1970 and continuing through Lance's eight-month tenure as U.S. budget director in 1977.

As budget chief, Lance was a close adviser to President Carter, his close friend. But controversy over Lance's personal finances and practices as head of the National Bank of Georgia and the Calhoun National Bank began to build during the summer of 1977. He resigned a few months later, saying the affair left him unable to continue his duties.

A Justice Department investigation culminated in May 1979 when a grand jury indicted Lance, former bank president Richard Carr, contractor Thomas Mitchell and former pharmacist Jack Mullins.

Of the remaining counts, Lance is charged in 21. Fifteen allege misapplication of bank funds, five charge false statements to banks and one involves an allegedly false entry in bank records. If he is convicted on all counts, the maximum sentence would be 90 years in prison and a $105,000 fine. The conspiracy charge carried a five-year sentence and $10,000 fine.

The only remaining government witnesses in the 12-week trial are FBI agents who analyzed bank records admitted as evidence. Much of their summary testimony would have related to the conspiracy count.

Funds Plea By Education Bd.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The State Board of Education Thursday called for major increases in the state's education budget, including funds to reduce the student-teacher ratio in grades 4, 5 and 6.

The board asked the Legislature to hike the state's annual public school budget from its present $1.1 billion to $1.4 billion by 1982-83.

It also asked that the community college budget be increased from $136 million to $184.5 million for the same period as part of a push to improve training equipment in the colleges.

As its top priority, the board recommended that the teacher-student ratio in grades 4 through 6 be reduced from 1-33 to 1-26.

The proposal has been endorsed by Gov. Jim Hunt, who made it part of his re-election campaign.

It would cost the state $22.8 million in 1981-82 and $22.3 million in 1982-83.

There has been debate among board members over whether such an expenditure would lead to better student achievement.

Commissioners Meet Tuesday

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet Tuesday at 10 a.m. at the Pitt County Court House.

Included on the agenda is the consideration of appointments to the library study committee, a joint venture with the Greenville City Council to study Sheppard Memorial Library operations; the consideration of a request for funds by the Farmville Community Arts Council; consideration of a resolution to widen N.C. 903 from Stokes to the Martin County line; and the consideration of a resolution concerning the proposed U.S. 264 western loop of Greenville, to request the project be programmed into the Transportation Improvement Plan and the study area be extended to U.S. 13-N.C. 11 near Pitt Community College.

Found Hanging

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — A 20-year-old Cabarrus County man was found dead Thursday about an hour after he was arrested and placed in a cell at the Cabarrus County Jail.

Ricky L. Curlee, 20, was found hanging from the cell bars by a jailer at 5:45 p.m., authorities said.

Curlee, along with Jack Howell, 20, was arrested by Concord City Police Officers E. L. Clay and Maxie Lancaster at 4:30 p.m. in a downtown area of the city on charges of being drunk and disruptive.

Safety Council Hears Ingram Describe His Role

Disciplined In Paddling Case

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A veteran school teacher who paddled a first-grader for failing to do classwork has been suspended for 60 days without pay.

The Charlotte-Mecklenburg school board voted Thursday to discipline, but not fire, Ida Peeler, a teacher at Devonshire Elementary School.

The board also voided Mrs. Peeler's tenure but agreed to reconsider her for tenure in two years.

In rejecting school superintendent Jay Robinson's recommendation that the 20-year veteran teacher be fired, the board agreed to allow Robinson to reassign Mrs. Peeler, possibly to another school.

Robinson said Thursday he will make a decision on the reassignment closer to the end of the 60-day suspension.

In its decision, the board said he teacher's actions constituted insubordination and adequate grounds for firing.

But, the board said it chose to discipline Mrs. Peeler "for reason of the teacher's 20 years of good service and substantially favorable performance evaluation reports..."

The decision listed publicly for the first time procedures Mrs. Peeler ignored Jan. 30 when she physically punished three students, including 7-year-old Jennifer Simpson. Specifically, the board said, she didn't give adequate notice to the principal, had no adult witness present, and used an "unauthorized instrument."

Jennifer's mother complained that night to police and school officials after she found bruises on her daughter's legs and the tip of a finger that apparently resulted from the meter stick Mrs. Peeler used to discipline the children.

Mrs. Peeler, who also was reprimanded in May 1978 for breaking the board's corporal punishment rules, was suspended in early February and charged with assaulting Jennifer.

Black Church Study Funded

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Eric Lincoln, noted authority on the religious experience of black Americans and a black professor of religion at Duke University, has received a $170,000 grant from the Lilly Endowment, Inc., for a two-year research project into social and other aspects of black churches.

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
North Carolina Insurance Commissioner John Ingram was guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Pitt County Safety Council here yesterday.

"I have worked, through my engineering and building codes division, for the past seven years with people like you, and with our local inspectors...to make life safe for our people," Ingram explained.

"It is at this local level that government was first formed and put to the test," Ingram said. "People still feel today that the best government is that government closest to the people. People prefer to be governed by people they know...people they can see...people they can talk to. These are the people they feel will do the best job for them. That is why my job and yours is so important."

"Our job is to protect the people who put their trust in us," Ingram explained.

"Ever since I was first elected as your Insurance Commissioner in 1972, I have strived to be your neighbor. One of the ways I have been able to do this is through my Engineering and Building Codes Division."

People, according to Ingram, "want government that is responsive to their needs. We have accomplished this task in many ways," he said, "...some of these accomplishments were first in the nation."

"We were first in the nation to require smoke detectors in all new homes and mobile homes, saving lives and property."

"Another good example of government serving as a helpful neighbor," Ingram said, "is our Fire and Rescue Division. We have trained many of our volunteer fire personnel so they can be certified to provide improved safety and protection for the people of their own communities. This training also results in not only a greater feeling of security for the homeowner, business and industry, and the farmer, but it results in lower insurance rates as well."

"Our work with municipal fire departments," Ingram explained, "has helped in the same areas."

"The increase in fire and rescue squads' line-of-duty death benefits from $5,000 to $25,000 has provided a greater incentive to these people who risk their lives to save others."

"I was proud to recommend this legislation."

According to the speaker, "we established the first special office for the handicapped in the nation. This special office, working with our State Engineering and Building Codes Division, works to make buildings and private dwellings not only totally accessible to our handicapped citizens, but provides greater employment opportunities for citizens who are just as capable of making major contributions to the improvement of our State as you and I. This effort also provides for greater safety for these citizens as well."

Ingram explained, "we just recently added an excellent tool for the protection and safety of the people of North Carolina. The State Qualifications Board...to help maintain well qualified people to do the job in the building inspections program across North Carolina. This," Ingram emphasized, "will help improve the quality of life in North Carolina and save lives."

"We worked long and hard to get this qualifications bill passed in your General Assembly."

Ingram explained, "in 1973, shortly after I was elected Insurance Commissioner, a building collapsed, killing two people in an area...where there was no code enforcement."

"After I found that the law was then optional to have local inspectors, I had a bill introduced that would make it mandatory for all cities and counties to designate some person or persons as a building inspector."

"We were not successful then," Ingram said, "but in 1975, we got a study commission to find a solid way to provide for building codes to be enforced, and upgrade qualifications of building code inspectors.

The resulting Qualifications Board, "adopted rules and regulations to certify inspectors for probationary certificates. Finally, in the 1979 session of the General Assembly, a board request, made through my office, was approved to hire two professionally qualified persons to work with the board in carrying out mandates of the legislation."

Ingram concluded by saying, "we have tried to be your neighbor, by doing all of this and more. I have worked hard to make North Carolina safe, accessible...to make our state a model for the other 49 states in these areas, as well as automobile changes for our consumers."

"But there is so much more that must be done. Together, we can continue to bring about these changes needed here in North Carolina and in your own area to put government back in the hands of the people who truly own it...the people of North Carolina."

Fills Post In Local Office

IMPORT CARS. NOT OIL.

If you have heard that it's Un-American to buy an imported car, please think about this:

A factual study prepared by a leading research organization proves that imported cars save the United States almost 5,000,000,000 dollars a year that we don't have to spend to import foreign oil from the oil producing nations.

This means if all the cars on the American road today were U.S. domestic makes, we'd have to import an extra 311,000,000 barrels of oil a year. That would practically double the shortage in our oil supply caused by the political upheavals in the Middle East.

Even if there were no shortage, imported oil is what is causing our double digit inflation, creating the huge imbalance in our balance of payments and continuing to erode the strength of the American dollar. President Carter has stated time and time again that imported oil is the #1 cause of inflation.

However, if all the cars in the United States were imports, like Toyotas, we would not have to import any oil from OPEC whatsoever.

Imports make jobs.

Imports are "Un-American"? Ask any of the over 138,000 Americans who sell and service imported cars. They work for over 4,500 American business firms that had a total payroll of $2,008,000,000. And these firms paid $607,000,000 in taxes according to a two year old study. The figures for this year will be much higher. But this is money that stayed here in the U.S.A., instead of going to OPEC.

Right here in the Southeast, we employ more than 6,100 Americans in our Toyota organization. Not just in our port, plant, warehouse and massive parts depot in Jacksonville, but at our 156 dealers in five states.

And we don't try to hide the fact that a Toyota is an imported car. Unlike the Dodge Colt and Plymouth Champ from Mitsubishi. Or the Chevy Luv pickup from Isuzu or the Ford Courier from Toyo Kogyo in Japan. Or the Ford Fiesta from Germany. We're proud of our Toyotas and the fuel they save our country.

Right now, Americans are exercising their freedom of choice by buying more and more fuel-efficient, imported cars. This freedom must be preserved. We can continue to import cars. Or we can import more OPEC oil.

The 156 American Toyota Dealers and their employees in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Florida.

Christian Pilgrims In Jerusalem Procession

JERUSALEM (AP) - Thousands of Christians of both Eastern and Western faiths labored under the weight of wooden crosses this Good Friday in a pilgrimage up the Via Dolorosa, the Street of Sorrows, to commemorate the crucifixion of Jesus.

In a rare concurrence of calendars, Western and Eastern Orthodox churches celebrated Holy Week together this year, and the holy sites of Jerusalem's Old City were jammed with pilgrims saying devotions in a babel of languages.

Israeli security forces kept a discreet watch over the procession from Praetorium, where Christ was sentenced to the cross, to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre - the route of His walk to the crucifixion.

Led by Franciscan friars preceded by Moslem guides in medieval dress, the Roman Catholic procession stopped for prayers at the nine Stations of the Cross along the Via Dolorosa before filing into the Crusader church encompassing the last five stations.

Long lines of the devout moved slowly up the steep stairs inside the church to the site revered as Calvary - site of the crucifixion - and formed outside the mausoleum over the cave where tradition says Christ was entombed.

In a carefully arranged schedule, Greek Orthodox pilgrims, including a large group from the two million-strong U.S. community, held a solemn procession to Calvary which ended as the Catholic procession began. An overlap of pilgrims near the church caused a pedestrian traffic jam in the narrow Old City streets.

The Syrian, Coptic and Abyssinian churches also held separate devotions at the shrines in the church.

Showing Film At Church Sunday

The motion picture, "Pilgrim's Progress," will be shown at Grace F.W.B. Church, 400 Watauga Avenue, Sunday at 7 p.m.

Church pastor, the Rev. Roger Tripp, said this three-century-old story is as meaningful for today's generation as it was to those living in the time of the writer, John Bunyan. He invites the public to view the film.

Chorale Group Organized

The music department of Arlington Street Baptist Church is starting a Christian contemporary instrumental and chorale group of high school and college age. The church welcomes voices and musicians.

Rehearsal time will be 5 p.m. each Sunday. Membership in the church is not required to participate. Anyone interested should contact the music director of the church at 756-2122 or 756-4047.

Offer Easter Program Sunday

There will be an Easter program at Popular Hill F.W.B. Church Sunday at 7 p.m.

Featured will be music by three gospel groups. The program is sponsored by the Senior Ushers.

Revival will start Monday at 7 p.m. and be held each evening through Friday. There will be a different chorus each night. The Rev. Matthew Best is conducting the revival. The public is invited says the pastor, the Rev. J. L. Tyson.

Plan Quarterly Service Series

Quarterly meeting services will be held at Friendship F.W.B. Church, Snow Hill, this weekend.

The services will begin tonight at 7:30 with a business meeting. Communion will be held Saturday at 7:30 p.m. After the Sunday morning service, dinner will be served at 2 p.m. A guest pastor and choir will lead the afternoon service.

Quarterly Meet Slated Sunday

Quarterly meeting for St. Luke F.W.B. Church will be held at St. Matthew F.W.B. Church, corner of Perkins and Norris streets Sunday.

Pastor Hattie M. Cobb will preach the Easter 11 a.m. sermon. At 3 p.m. the Rev. James Woolard of Washington and the Mount Ebron Gospel Chorus will lead the service.

Don't tell a soul

Thank God Easter is no secret!

The very word "Gospel" means good news.

We use that word to summarize the belief of millions that Jesus Christ is God's Son and our Savior - that He suffered, died and rose again for us.

The reason so many today share our Faith is that the followers of Jesus have always tried to tell every soul the good news.

That is why we want to tell you and share with you our Easter joy.

Torrential Rain Adds To Transit Strike Misery

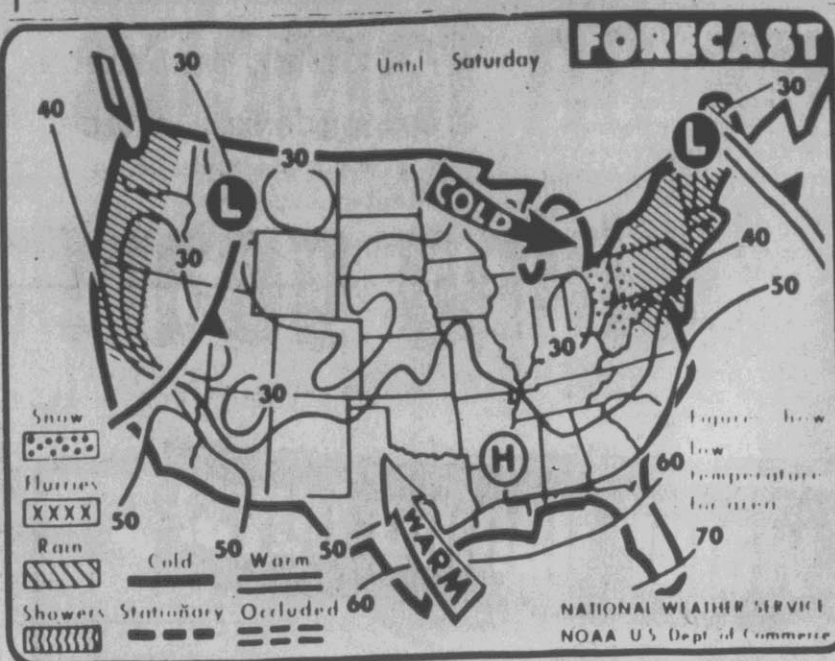

By RICHARD T. PIENCIAK
Associated Press-Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Thousands of New Yorkers trudged to work in a heavy downpour early today — the fourth day of the city's bus and subway strike — as a mediator warned that no settlement is in sight.
Early rush-hour reports put traffic at its lightest since the strike began early Tuesday.
The 5.5 million people who usually use mass transit were blessed the first three days of the strike with warm weather. But a National Weather Service forecaster abandoned meteorological jargon to predict today as "lousy...the whole day."

Traffic Commissioner Thomas Guthrie said the rains created "a tremendous visibility problem for motorists. Pedestrians are walking and you can hardly see them. There are a few bicyclists out and (they) are almost unseen to the average motorist."
"With this rain the problem is compounded. What normally is a half-hour trip and was taking two hours during the strike might take three hours today." At the same time, Mayor Edward Koch urged businesses in the nation's largest city to consider four-day work weeks.
And some officials began to worry that a prolonged shutdown of bus and subway lines could hurt New York's fragile economy — especially in the garment center.

"A strike settlement is not imminent," said Walter Gelhorn, head of the mediation panel that brought the striking union together with the Metropolitan Transportation Authority on Thursday. "I'd say the parties' positions have hardened by reason of this stoppage."
John Lawe, head of the Transport Worker's Union, said the MTA had "taken a hard-nosed position at the moment." He said the authority was holding to its 12 percent wage offer and had repudiated a mediator's suggested 16 percent boost.
Bus and subway workers, who earn an average $18,000 annually, are seeking a 25 percent raise over two years.
Lawyers for union leaders were due in court today to hear MTA arguments that the union should be cited for contempt because it ignored a preliminary injunction against a strike. On Thursday, Lawe and other key union officials waived their rights to be present at the court proceeding.
The MTA contends the 35,000-member union should be fined $1 million a day to offset overtime and other city expenses. The city claims it is losing $2 million a day in lost tax revenues and another $925,000 in extra personnel and overtime expenses.
TWU attorney Asher Schwartz contended during a hearing Thursday the union was forced to strike by MTA failure to conduct "bona fide negotiations."

Court agreement with his assessment could remove the threat of sanctions under the state Taylor Law that prohibits strikes by public employees and provides for strict fines and punishment for violators.
The MTA sent a letter to workers Thursday telling them that under the law, they are being docked two days pay for each day off the job.
Union leaders said they would seek waiver of the provision and demanded amnesty from penalties for violating the law. Lawe, who now travels with several burly bodyguards, said he planned to take the matter up with the state Public Employment Relations Board.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected in the forecast period until Saturday morning for the Northeast. Snow is due for western Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio and northern West Virginia. Rain is also expected for the northern half of the Pacific coast. Warm weather is expected in the southern half of the nation. Cold weather is forecast from the northern Plains into the upper Great Lakes. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
A cold front pushing brisk southwest winds ahead of it moved into the North Carolina mountains this morning and its speed was expected to carry it to the coast by tonight.

Sunshine and the southwest winds were expected to push temperatures up in the afternoon with a range in the middle and upper 70s over the east and a possible 80 or warmer in coastal areas.
The warm, humid air is expected to help generate thunderstorms during the day, and a few may become heavy during the afternoon and evening hours over eastern sections.

Once the front has passed, winds will shift to the northwest. It should turn sharply cooler in the mountains this afternoon. Northwest winds will increase east of the mountains tonight, and that will make Saturday feel much cooler.

The forecast for Saturday calls for mostly sunny and breezy with highs in the 50s and 60s and Sunday will be fair with highs in the 60s and 70s.

Small craft advisories were in effect along the coast today for winds that could exceed 30 mph with the passage of the cold front.

Sunshine prevailed over much of the northern area of the state Thursday while the southern portion had mostly cloudy skies and a few showers. Raleigh was one of the warmer places in the state as the temperature hit 80 degrees.

Arrest Two Gun-Sellers

NEW YORK (AP) — Two New York men sought by North Carolina authorities have been arrested by federal agents in connection with an alleged conspiracy to ship large quantities of arms to the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

The arrests Thursday of Robert Ferraro, 31, of Manhattan, and George DeMeo, 46, of Yonkers, stemmed from a federal indictment in Wilmington, N.C. The indictment charged that since 1972 the two maintenance workers at the Co-op City housing complex in The Bronx had conspired with a Wilmington gun merchant to illegally buy arms and ship them to Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland.

Ferraro and DeMeo were also accused of buying about 1 million rounds of ammunition which had been stolen from the U.S. Marine Corps base at Lejeune, N.C.

The defendants were arraigned Thursday in Manhattan before U.S. Magistrate Kent Sinclair who set bond at $15,000 each pending proceedings to have them sent to North Carolina for trial.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Lesley Oelsner told the magistrate that rifles purchased by the defendants in North Carolina were recovered in Northern Ireland after they were used to injure persons.

CETA Defended By Howard Lee

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Natural Resources Secretary Howard Lee Thursday defended the CETA program in North Carolina as "one of the cleanest, best-operated and most effective programs in the nation."

Lee, who said he was "personally depressed" over press coverage given North Carolina's handling of CETA job-training programs, admitted that a few cases had brought "disgrace to many of us."

He said that "154,000 North Carolinians who saw little hope for themselves in life are now permanently employed with new skills and have been given a new lease because of CETA."

"These are the stories the press should be writing about. These are the people who are the real fabric of our system. These are the people who will not be on welfare and who for the most part will not receive food stamps and will never be dependent on society again," Lee said.

Lee called on the news media to "kick us when we are wrong and confront us with our sins, but temper that with praise

AWARD WINNER — Associated Press photographer Eddie Adams won the 1979 Sigma Delta Chi Distinguished Service Award for news photography, it was announced Thursday. Adams' photographs of the world's refugees and boat people were cited by the professional journalists' society. (AP Laserphoto)

Fallout Shelter Stocks No Longer Any Good

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Remember the fallout shelter? Ever wonder what happened to all those goodies the government stocked them with to keep you warm, dry and well-fed during an emergency?

Well, in Mecklenburg County's 338 shelters, the plastic bags that were intended for toilets have long since been used for trash bags, the crackers have almost petrified, and the first-aid equipment was junked years ago.

The other day, it took Leroy Crains 20 minutes, a coal shovel, two iron bars and a hammer to beat open a 12½-pound tin of "Civil Defense All-Purpose Survival Crackers."

"I don't believe they ever meant for anybody to get in 'em," said the 71-year-old custodian of the Johnston building in downtown Charlotte, where crackers, water and other supplies have been stacked in the building's dusty boiler room since 1963.

"I wouldn't want to eat any of it," Crains said after sniffing a broken cracker. "And I wouldn't want to be stuck down here either."
The federal government stocked shelters from 1962 to 1964, distributing 165,000 tons of crackers and hard-candy-like carbohydrate supplements.

Buildings were also stocked with drums of water, first-aid and sanitation kits, all of it costing $122.4 million.

Those were the days of the Cuban missile crisis, when the unthinkable was being thought about.

But, based on the present state of dust and decay in the shelters, the thinking public has its mind elsewhere. As a matter of fact, state emergency officials say if you must move into a shelter, you'd best take your own supplies.

"I seriously doubt there's a shelter in the state that is still fully stocked," says Daniel Spurling, operations officer for the N.C. Department of Emergency Management.

"Word is," he says, "when you move into a shelter, bring your own goodies." It still won't be a picnic. "You'd be cramped, hungry and little things would get on your nerves," he says.

Above all, he reminded, don't forget to bring your own plastic bags.

Bush Campaign Office Opened

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina campaign headquarters for Republican presidential candidate George Bush was opened Thursday by his son, Neil Bush, who promised a strong effort in the Tar Heel state.

Bush, 25, reassured about 30 assembled supporters that George Bush is "not only alive, but we're going all the way."

In an interview, Bush conceded, "This is Reagan country, there's no doubt about it. But we can cut into it. Any place it's a proportional vote, we can get our fair share."

Larry Cobb, Bush's state campaign coordinator, said he expects Bush to appear in North Carolina at least twice before the state's May 6 presidential primary.

Not Planning To Suspend Sheriff

WILLIAMSTON, N.C. (AP) — State and county officials say there are no plans to suspend Martin County Sheriff W. Raymond Rawls while he awaits trial on a charge of fraudulently obtaining prescription drugs.

Rawls, sheriff for 25 years, was indicted Monday for allegedly obtaining pain-relieving drugs from two doctors while failing to tell them he was receiving the substances from other sources at the time.

County Commissioner Russell Griffin said county attorney R.E. Peel has been asked to study the matter but the commissioners have not scheduled a meeting to discuss the sheriff's status.

William C. Griffin Jr., district attorney for the 2nd Judicial District, said Wednesday he had no plans to initiate a petition for Rawls' removal.

N.C. Teacher Of Year Is Named

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Burlington high school teacher has been named North Carolina's teacher of the year.

Her selection was announced Thursday by state Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips at the April meeting of the state Board of Education.

Finalists with the 37-year-old Mrs. Lee, who teaches English, were Jane Bell Sommers of Winston-Salem, a teacher at Southwest Junior High School in Clemmons; and Susan S. Brooke, who teaches at Crossnore Elementary School.

Approve Deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The proposed federal purchase of Currituck County's Outer Banks for use as a wildlife refuge won the acceptance Thursday of Sen. Robert Morgan and Rep. Walter B. Jones, provided the measure meets with state acceptance.

The two officials said they would accept the wishes of local officials and citizens in North Carolina on the proposal.

Both said, however, they would prefer a vote of the people on the proposal.

Currituck County commissioners voted 3-1, with one absentee, last month to support the proposed purchase if citizen access to the refuge was guaranteed.

Gov. Jim Hunt also gave the state's endorsement to the project.

Congress will have to approve the proposed $100 million purchase before it can be completed.

Regulators Approve A New Type Mortgage

By GLENN RITT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators have approved a new kind of mortgage they hope will protect homebuyers from being locked in at record high interest rates for as long as 30 years.

But some consumer groups warn that the negotiable rate mortgage, or RRM, could spell bad news for homebuyers if interest rates continue to climb.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board voted unanimously Thursday to authorize RRM's, effective immediately. They can be offered by thrift institutions — savings and loans — regulated by the board.

The negotiable rate mortgages let interest rates be adjusted up or down every three to five years. Rates cannot rise more than 5 percentage points or fall more than 5 percentage points during the life of the loan.

Last year, the board approved another innovation called the variable rate mortgage, which is similar to an RRM but allows interest rates to rise or fall only 2.5 percentage points during the life of a loan.

Variable rate mortgages have not proved particularly popular among lenders because of the smaller range allowed and various other restrictions.

RRMs are the latest in a series of moves by the board to make more mortgage money available and to help shore up the battered savings and loan industry.

The earnings of many thrift institutions are eroding because they must pay constantly higher interest rates to attract deposits, while obtaining a much lower fixed rate on their long-term mortgages, particularly older ones. With RRM's, mortgage rates can keep pace with other interest rates, it is hoped.

The board has reported that 266 of the 4,100 S&Ls it regulates reported a net loss for the six months ending Dec. 31. The average income of all S&Ls also is declining.

"It is not likely that the first half of 1980 will be any better than the last half of 1979," said board chairman Jay Janis.

The bank board is so concerned about S&L earnings that it is making available up to $4 billion in below-market loans to ailing institutions. The subsidy will cost the home loan bank system about $100 million.

The subsidized loans, at 2.5 percentage points below market rates, will be available to S&Ls that suffer operating losses for 3 consecutive months, and meet other requirements.

Spring Church Campaign Set

The People's Baptist Temple, 264 Bypass West, will begin a spring church campaign titled "Three to Grow" on April 20. The purpose of the campaign, according to Pastor J.M. Bragg, is to get people involved in the church and in the community.

The campaign will last until May 18. There will be a special emphasis each Sunday, such as Bride and Groom Day, Old Fashioned Day, Baby Day, Mother's Day and Anniversary Day.

Pastor Bragg invites the public to participate in each of these special Sundays.

Music Program Slated Sunday

The Southern Jubilees will present a musical program at Sweet Hope Free Will Baptist Church April 6, 7:30 p.m.

The Majestic Ebony Civic Club will present its annual Easter Parade Sunday at 4:30 p.m. at Sadie Sautler School Auditorium.

Participating will be children from Greenville and surrounding communities. Highlights of the parade will be the crownings of Mr. and Miss Easter Bunny by the club president, Mrs. W. J. Harris. The Voices of Calvary of Mount Calvary F.W.B. Church will present a program of Easter music. Parents and guardians are asked to bring all participating children to the school by 3:30 p.m. with the child's name, age, full description of costume and full names of parents or guardians. Mrs. F. M. Moore Jr. will serve as mistress of ceremonies. The public is invited. Admission is free.

Plan Quarterly Service Series

Quarterly services for Cherry Lane F.W.B. Church have been announced. Communion services will be held at 7 p.m. Saturday with Eldress Evon Best conducting the service.

Air Force Base Open House Slated April 12

THE THUNDERBIRDS, An Air Force aerial demonstration team, will perform at the annual Armed Forces Open House at Seymour Johnson AFB April 12. A number of other attractions, including the Army's free-fall parachute team, the Golden Knights, and the Tactical Air Force Band, will be featured on the program.

SEYMOUR JOHNSON AIR FORCE BASE, Goldsboro — Wing tips only a few feet apart — the United States Air Force aerial demonstration team, the Thunderbirds, will be coming to Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, in Goldsboro, to perform at its annual Armed Forces Open House, April 12.

The Open House is a special day at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base. It's the only time during the year when the public is invited to view the base, see military aircraft close-up and watch aerial demonstrations.

The Open House will include many attractions. The Thunderbirds, who are the Air Force's ambassadors in blue, are the featured attraction.

The Thunderbird performance features the solo flying of Captains R.D. Evans of Osceola, Arkansas, and Sonny Childers of Hartselle, Alabama, plus many exciting maneuvers in the colorful T-38 "Talons" which the Thunderbirds fly.

Highlighting the Open House, besides the Thunderbirds, is the Army's precision free-fall parachute team, the Golden Knights, and the Tactical Air Command Band.

The Golden Knights plunge earthward at speeds in excess of 160 mph after jumping from a YC-7A aircraft. They free-fall leaving red patterns in the sky through smoke emitted from canisters attached to their boots.

Musicians from the Tactical Air Command Band will be performing for Open House visitors twice during the day.

A large number of aircraft will be on static display for the public to view at their leisure. Among these aircraft are some of the Air Force's newer models, the F-15 and the A-10, as well as the B-52 and F-4.

There will also be demonstrations by the Security Police Military Working Dog Section, base fire fighters and Army self defense personnel.

The Open House begins at 10 a.m., when the gates open, and ends at 4 p.m., when they close. The Golden Knights are slated to perform at 11:45 a.m., the Thunderbirds at 2 p.m. and the Tactical Air Command Band at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Refreshments can be purchased from booths at the flight line area. The Open House is free and parking is available.

Food Price Freeze Extended By Chain

ELMWOOD PARK, N.J. (AP) — Prices on private-label and generic dry grocery items will be frozen for an extra 30 days at the 867 stores that comprise the Grand Union Co. supermarket chain, the company says.

The price freeze will remain in effect until May 5, said James Wood, Grand Union chairman and chief executive officer.

Wood announced the extension of the price freeze after he and other supermarket chain executives met Thursday with President Carter.

Grand Union, which operates in 18 states, on March 7 froze prices for 30 days on 1,200 private-label and generic staple goods, produce and meats, Wood said.

The price freeze is in effect at all Grand Union supermarkets, as well as at the chain's affiliated stores trading under the Colonial and Big Star name in the Southeast and J.

Weingarten name in Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas.

At the end of the new 30-day period, Wood said, the company will re-evaluate its decision based on prevailing market condition.

"This freeze provides Grand Union, Colonial and Weingarten customers with an excellent opportunity to stock their shelves with quality products at prices guaranteed not to rise for the next 30 days," Wood said.

The company operates stores in Alabama, Arkansas, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Texas, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia and in Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

The company, with annual sales of more than $3.7 billion, ranks eighth among the food chains, said spokesman Don Vaillancourt.

Amtrak Engineer Is Suspended

LAKEVIEW, N.C. (AP) — The engineer of an Amtrak train that slammed head-on into a Seaboard Coast Line freight train has been suspended without pay, pending completion of a federal investigation of the collision.

Engineer J.E. Butts, 64, and his assistant, G. W. Edens, 36, both of Hamlet, were suspended Thursday. No reason was given for the suspension.

"It will come out in the investigation," said Seaboard spokesman Owen Pride. "From what has happened, the company considers it necessary to remove these men from service pending completion of the investigation."

Although Butts and Edens were crew members aboard the Amtrak train, they are employees of Seaboard, which has a contract to operate some Amtrak trains.

An official with the National Transportation Safety Board said they have virtually ruled out a malfunction in the signal system as the cause of the collision, Wednesday between Amtrak's Silver Star passenger train and a freight train.

Ray Bullard, assistant vice president of Seaboard Coast Line Railroad in Jacksonville, Fla., said, "The initial field check of the signal system governing the movement of the passenger train and the freight train indicated that the signal system was functioning properly."

The NLRB investigating team is expected to make a report on the possible cause of the collision within six to eight weeks.

The northbound passenger train, carrying about 300 persons, collided with the freight train shortly after 7:30 a.m. Wednesday near Lakeview, about 60 miles south of Raleigh. Authorities said 123 persons were treated at Moore Memorial Hospital in Pinehurst.

Eight persons were admitted to the hospital. One was released Thursday and the other seven were reported in stable condition. The eight were admitted for broken bones, fractures, lacerations and spinal injuries, none thought to be serious. One of those admitted included the engineer of the freight train, C.W. McGee.

Bullard said the stretch of track where the accident happened was reopened to traffic at 6 a.m. Thursday following removal of damaged cars and repair of the rails.

The accident occurred after the 18-car Amtrak Silver Star failed to stop at a stop signal. The engineer of the Silver Star applied emergency brakes but was unable to stop before colliding with the freight train.

Bullard said SCL officials had checked the signal system and found that it was working. He said they did not know why the passenger train's crew failed to heed the signal warning them of the freight train ahead. Butts, who has worked for SCL for the past 42 years, said his train was barely moving at the time of the collision. He refused to comment further, saying, "Anything else I say could jeopardize my job."

SCL officials said earlier that the Silver Star was going about 20 mph at the time of the accident.

Radio Club To Conduct Classes

A class designed to help the beginner in obtaining an amateur radio license will be given by the Brightleaf Amateur Radio Club sometime in April. The time and date will be determined by the number of interested persons appearing at the BARC meeting on April 8 (Tuesday).

The meeting will be held at the Planters Bank basement conference room, Third and Washington Streets, Greenville at 7:45 p.m.

If enough interest is shown there will be two classes; one for the novice and another for those now holding FCC licenses and wishing to go to the next higher step in amateur radio.

The program for the evening will be a slide and film show of a tour in China by one of the club members, John Menths from Washington, N.C.

OK's Requests For Soliciting

City Manager Ed Wyatt announced the approval of two requests for solicitation permits in Greenville.

Wyatt said the requests were submitted by: Boy Scout Troop 826 for permission to conduct a merchant solicitation from April 10 through May 10 in order to raise funds for the troop's annual breakfast; and by Red Oak Christian Church C.Y.F. for permission to conduct a sidewalk sale at Clark's Department Store on April 5 to raise funds for the needy.

Peace Of Easter For Union Grove Residents

UNION GROVE, N.C. (AP) — Residents of Union Grove will slow to a holiday pace this Easter weekend for the first time in 56 years.

The reason is a court order that has been issued to permanently block the Union Grove Old Time Fiddlers Convention from being held on Easter as it has been since 1924.

Superior Court Judge Julius Rousseau issued the order last Friday after District Attorney H.W. "Butch" Zimmerman filed a complaint saying the festival should be halted.

Despite the court order, the Iredell County Sheriff's Department reported that several hundred persons came to the farm of J. Pierce VanHoy in hopes of attending the festival. Some of them came from as far away as Connecticut and Florida and had not heard about the court order.

The late J.P. VanHoy started a bluegrass fiddlers convention in 1924 to raise money for the Union Grove school. His son, J. Pierce VanHoy, took over several years ago.

Since its start, the festival has grown so much in size that residents and area law enforcement officials say it has gotten out of hand. Last year, more than 175,000 persons from across the nation attended.

What started as an impromptu gathering in a cow pasture has grown to an organized competition among some of the best bluegrass musicians at an arena built on VanHoy's farm.

But an investigation by the State Bureau of Investigation also revealed the festival was the site of drug sales, open sexual activity and violence. The probe prompted the court injunction.

After last year's festival, 40 persons were arrested for drug violations.

VanHoy said he isn't sure if he will hold the festival at a later date. The court order rules that if he decides to hold it, VanHoy must post a $10,000 bond and cooperate with law enforcement officers to control activities and conduct.

Planning Sell Large Firm

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The owners of Nello Teer Co., a Durham-based construction firm that does business along the eastern seaboard and in several foreign countries, are negotiating to sell the company.

But Billy R. Carter, a vice president for the firm, said the negotiations are far from an agreement.

He said company officials are talking to several prospective buyers who would continue to operate Teer from Durham.

The company, one of Durham's oldest and largest companies, was founded in 1909 by the late Nello Teer. The company employs more than 2,000 persons.

In 1978, Teer's sales were $95 million. It now is starting work along with three other companies on a $400 million air base in the Israeli desert.

Nello Teer Jr. is the company's president, and his brother, R. Dillard Teer, retired Jan. 1 as senior vice president.

Carter said there have been discussions in the past about selling the company, but none of the potential buyers had offered enough money.

Last fall the Vulcan Materials Co. of Birmingham, Ala., expressed interest in buying Teer's quarries. A Teer official said Thursday that Vulcan's offer was too low.

Teer operates quarries in Durham, Goldsboro, Wilson, Rocky Mount and Erwin.

Carter said current negotiations are for the entire company, not just a portion.

Giving Up A Long Strike

PINE HALL, N.C. (AP) — Members of Teamsters Local 391 say they are giving up their strike at Halstead Metal Products after eight months off the job.

Strikers, who met Thursday with a union official, said they will concede officially Monday.

Bruce Blevins, the union official, dodged questions about why the strike is being called off and said he would not comment about the strike until he met with the rest of the strikers today.

After the meeting, one striker said the union is withholding its announcement until Monday so strikers will be eligible for strike benefits through this week.

John Terlinden, Pine Hall plant manager, has contended that ending the strike will make no difference because the plant has continued to operate throughout the strike.

The plant is the world's largest copper tubing manufacturer.

Meanwhile, the National Labor Relations Board approved the union's request Thursday to withdraw a pending unfair labor practice charge against Halstead. The NLRB also dismissed another charge.

An NLRB spokesman said removing the charges could affect whether the strikers will be re-employed.

The strike started Aug. 2 after more than 25 negotiating sessions left the union unsatisfied that its demands for higher wages, a seniority system, an end to s$ing shifts and safer plant conditions would be granted.

Strikers ended picketing at the Stokes County plant earlier this week.

Utilities Meet Set Tuesday

The Greenville Utilities Commission will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the board room of the Greenville Utilities building.

Included on the agenda is the consideration of a resolution recommending that the city council apply for membership in North Carolina Municipal Power Agency number three, consideration of minor changes in the commission's load management policy to include installation of switches on "permanent" mobile homes; consideration of bids for a number of items, including the purchase of a sludge spreader; and consideration of a request by C. H. Powell for bulk water rate for a mobile home park.

Hint Plant In Winston-Salem

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A major metal fabrications firm has optioned at least 100 acres between Winston-Salem and Rural Hall, and is interested in building a large plant that would eventually employ several hundred people.

Dr. James N. Ziglar Jr., a Rural Hall dentist and a Forsyth County Commissioner, confirmed Thursday that the firm had obtained an option on the land in the Ziglar Road, N.C. 65 and U.S. 52 area. J.R. Yarborough, a partner in the nearby Forum, 52 Industrial Park, said a company had optioned a large tract in the industrial park.

Both said they were not told the name of the firm, but Ziglar said that according to the option agreement the firm is involved in metal fabrication and may eventually employ several hundred people.

But sources said the options do not necessarily mean the company will decide to locate here. They noted it also has optioned land elsewhere, including South Carolina.

Pirates Pass North Carolina, 10-3

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Heels of the University of North Carolina.
The victory was the 14th in 17 games for the Pirates, while North Carolina saw an 11-game winning streak go down the drain. The Heels are now 24-11. East Carolina jumped on starter Bill Musser for three first inning runs, then added four more in the second off reliever James Parks. Bill Wilder went all the way for the Pirates, claiming his fifth victory in as many decisions. He scattered ten hits, got into trouble on several occasions, but had good backing in getting the Heels retired with no more damage than was done.

East Carolina, meanwhile, banged out 14 hits, including three each by Billy Best and Macon Moyer. Best had a double and a homer, while Moyer had a double, his career 20th, tying him with former Pirate Ron Stags for the school record.

"We played a very good game," a delighted coach Hal Baird said afterwards. "This was a good win for us. We beat a strong team, one of the best in the Atlantic Coast Conference, and we did it in style. If we can keep this up, we'll have a real good shot at something in the post-season."

Baird was pleased with the way the Pirates attacked the ball, and noted the outstanding fielding most of the way. The Pirates had only a couple of mistakes in the field, and committed just one error.

Oddly enough, the only starter not to get a hit was Butch Davis, who saw a 14-game hitting streak snapped in the process.

With one down in the first, Kelly Robinette got things started with a single off the pitcher's glove. Best followed with a solid double to left center, and a wild pitch scored Robinette. Raymie Styons walked, and another wild pitch moved him to second and scored Best. Styons moved on to third on a fly out, and scored on a single to center by Moyer.

In the second, Mike Sorrell led off with a walk, and Davis followed with another free trip. Both were sacrificed up, and Best grounded out to second, scoring Sorrell. Styons walked again and Rick Derechallo singled in Davis. Moyer followed with his double, driving in both Styons and Derechallo.

The Pirates added single runs in the fifth, sixth and eighth. In the fifth, Moyer led off with a single, moved up on a high-hop bunt single by John Hallow and a sacrifice, scoring on Sorrell's single.

In the eighth, Robinette reached on a two-base error, and moved on to third when the ball was thrown to second with no one there to cover. He scored on Best's third hit of the night.

Carolina lost a chance in the second after getting two hits when Craig Shumock's fly was caught at the fence by Davis.

The Heels scored the first run in the third. Chris Pittaro singled and moved up when Best bobbled the ball. He took third on an out and scored when Lloyd Brewer flew out.

In the fourth, the Heels got their second run. Dwight Lowery led off with a double

Sets Course Record

Golfer Tom Purtzer reacts as he makes a birdie putt on the 18th green during Thursday's first round of the Greater Greensboro Open being played at the Forest Oaks Country Club near Greensboro. Purtzer shot an 8-under-par 64 to set a course record and take the first round lead. (AP Laserphoto)

Tom Purtzer Fires 66, Takes Greensboro Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Tom Purtzer figured he was a lucky man on at least three counts.
"I just feel fortunate I was able to play today," he said after firing a course-record, 8-under-par 64 for the first-round lead Thursday in the $250,000 Greater Greensboro Open.
He explained he's had some chronic eye trouble, which flared up Wednesday and forced him to withdraw from the pro-am event that preceded the tournament.
"I really don't know what it is," he said. "I have some trouble making my eyes focus. It just lasts a short time."
It didn't bother him during the first round. He got maximum mileage from his short game — once dropping a 30-foot, downhill putt for a birdie and chipping in from the rough for another.

"I feel like I turned a 67 into a 64," he said.
And that's lucky.
And the final point was the weather. It was near ideal when Purtzer played in the early morning. The mild temperatures, gentle breezes and partly sunny skies were in sharp contrast to the wind, rain and cold that often afflict this old event.
"With the weather they usually have here, when you get a good day and shoot a good score, you kind of feel like you snuck something by," Purtzer said.
Purtzer clipped two shots off the listed record for the 6,984 yard Forest Oaks Country Club course with his no-bogey round and led by two over his former Arizona State teammate Bob Gilder, who tied the old record at 66.
Danny Edwards, a former Greensboro champion who spent most of last season as a race car driver, and Craig Stadler, who won the Bob Hope tournament that opened the 1980 season, were tied at 67 in the exceptionally low scoring.
The group at 68 included Al Geiberger, George Burns, Larry Nelson, Larry Ziegler, Pat McGowan, Ed Dougherty and Ron Streck.
Defending champion Ray Floyd shot a 70 despite a double bogey on the 18th hole. South African Gary Player matched par 72. Fuzzy Zoeller, who will defend his Masters title next week, shot a 73. Doug Tewell, a winner early this week in the Heritage Classic, also was one over par at 73.

Purtzer, who scored his only PGA tour victory in the 1977 Los Angeles Open, was surprised to learn he'd set a course record.
"I had no idea I was even close," he said. "I just went out with the idea of trying to concentrate; just make sure I do the things I'm supposed to do instead of taking them for granted."
It paid off.
"I probably got as much out of the round as I could hope to," Purtzer said.
The short game was the key. He missed two greens and played those holes one under par.
In addition to the long, big-breaking birdie putt, he dropped three others in the 15-18 foot range and holed three in a row from the testing 3-4 foot area.

Lady Pirates Take Two From N.C. State

East Carolina University's softball team made it three in a row over N.C. State yesterday, sweeping a doubleheader from the Lady Wolfpack in softball.
The Pirates took the opener on a 1-0 score, then rallied in the seventh inning of the nightcap to win, 4-3.
The lone run in the opening game came in the third inning. Shirley Brown singled and moved up on a pair of hits, scoring when Yvonne Williams grounded into a fielder's choice.
That proved enough as the Pirates held State scoreless.
In the second game, State took the lead with two first inning runs. Stander and Miller both reached on errors and came around on singles by Moseley and Snook.

The third saw State score once more. Miller reached on a fielder's choice and later was sacrificed in by Keith.
In the seventh, the Pirates rallied for all four of their runs. Brown singled and Angie Humphrey ran for her. Janice Parlon reached on an error, moving Humphrey to third, and Cindy Meekins brought her home with a sacrifice fly. Maureen Buck doubled in Parlon and Williams reached on an error. Mitzi Davis singled in Buck and Cynthia Sheppard walked. Kathy Riley then singled in Williams with the game-winning run.

Davis and Brown each had two hits to lead the Lady Pirates in the second game, while Moseley had three and Snook, two, for State. No one had more than one hit for either team in the first game.
The twin wins boosted the ECU record to 11-2 on the year.

Rampants Squeeze Past Eagles, 5-4

By LARRY SULLIVAN
Reflector Sports Writer
ELIZABETH CITY—When it gets too hot in the kitchen, send in another cook.

That's basically what Rose Rampant baseball Coach Ronald Vincent did here yesterday in his squad's Division I diamond game against Northeastern.

When Rose starter Kenny Barnes became overwhelmed by heat from surrendering a pair of seventh inning home runs, and his team's three-run lead cut to one, Vincent summoned southpaw Scott Galloway to serve new dishes to the Eagle batters.

The determined lefthander came through for the Rampants, fanning the last two Northeastern swingers and preserving a 5-4 victory.

"He has a lot of heart," Vincent said of Galloway after the game. "This is the second time he has come through for us. Their pitcher was real good today, also," Vincent remarked. "We just aren't hitting good right now, but I sure am glad to win a game like this."

Rose started the game off in fine fashion, tallying a run on a single hit off of Northeastern ace hurler Kenny Meekins. Mark Shank led off with a walk and stole second before designated hitter Roger Williams delivered a two-out single, bringing Shank home with the first score of the game.

The home team retaliated with some power of its own in the bottom of the frame. Jerry McGee greeted Barnes with a sharp single. After one out, junior catcher Hunter Williams smashed a Barnes fastball well over the left-center field fence, giving the Eagles a quick 2-1 advantage.

The visiting Rampants went down in order in the second inning before knotting the score, with the help of a couple of Northeastern errors, in the third. Shank reached first when third baseman John Haynes failed to field his grounder. However, Shank was shot down at second on Mark Douglas' fielder's choice. Douglas stole second and moved to third when catcher Williams' throw scooted past the second baseman. Will Barrett brought Douglas home with a sacrifice fly.

The score remained deadlocked until the sixth inning, despite a fourth inning rally by Northeastern. The host unit loaded the bases with no outs in the fourth, but poor base running and hitting spoiled the threat.

The Rampants struck for a pair of scores in the top of the sixth after two were gone. Emmett Walsh reached on an error and stole second. He took third on the throw to second and scored when Mike Campbell's grounder was booted by shortstop Dwayne Crank. Rose's J.R. Neal then cracked a run-producing double down the left field line to drive home Campbell.

Vincent's troops protected the two run spread in the bottom of the sixth and added what was then thought to be an insurance run in the top of the seventh. Centerfielder Shank led off the last inning with a solo shot over the left-field fence to give Rose a comfortable 5-2 lead.

The first man to face Barnes in the pressure-packed seventh was light-hitting third baseman Haynes. He sent a fastball lofting over the fence. Barnes then got pinch-hitter Mark Sanders on a grounder before ninth-place batter Danny Brite connected for the second homer of the inning for the Eagles and third overall. Immediately, Vincent signaled for his lefthander to relieve Barnes. Galloway walked the first man he faced to put the tying run on first before striking out Northeastern's second and third batters to save the game.

Barnes handled the mound duties for six and a third innings, surrendering the four runs on seven hits while fanning six and walking two. Loser Meekins went the distance for the Eagles, giving up the five tallies on seven hits and walking and striking out a pair.

DH Williams paced the Rampants at the plate, picking up a couple of bingles while driving home a run. Brite of Northeastern pair hits to lead the losing effort.

'Fruitful' Meetings Held With Mediator

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Outside, on a busy midtown Manhattan street, two models dressed as Easter bunnies handed out chocolate eggs and jelly beans while a Dixieland band serenaded New Yorkers stranded by the city's mass transit strike.

Inside, negotiators for management and the players attacked the baseball strike without benefit of those springtime goodies.

They did have federal mediator Kenneth Moffett, however, and he presided over two hours of meetings that he called "fruitful."

Moffett and the two sides set up a schedule of seven meetings over the next three weeks in an effort to settle the dispute that wiped out the final 92 games of the spring training exhibition season and threatens to interrupt the regular season just before Memorial Day.

The first meeting is scheduled for next Tuesday — one day before the start of the regular season. The players, who halted exhibition play starting Wednesday, have agreed to return for the opening but vowed to walk out again if an agreement is not reached by midnight, May 22.

"The mere fact that the parties have agreed to a schedule of meetings is a good sign," Moffett said. "I'd say we made progress and that it was a fruitful meeting."

But the two sides did not discuss issues on Thursday, only dates and logistics for future talks.

"This was an agenda-setting day and we look forward to the bargaining," said Ray Grebey, chief negotiator for management. "You know we said we'd get back before this all started that we felt baseball could be played and negotiations could take place in parallel and we'll go ahead from there."

Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association, seemed

"We reviewed where we are and gave formal notification of the action the board took," the union leader said. "There was some small discussion of what is going on in spring training now."

That seems to vary from camp to camp.

Some teams have continued informal workouts with players who remained on hand while others are biding their time, waiting for Opening Day.

Farmville Tops Southern Nash

STANHOPE — Farmville Central gained a 6-3 baseball victory over Southern Nash yesterday in Eastern Carolina Conference play.

The Jaguars jumped into the lead with two runs in the first and got the rest they needed in the third.

Alan Corbett got things started in the first with a single and Tony Eason reached on a fielder's choice. Lewis Yelverton then doubled in both runners.

Southern Nash came back with one in the bottom of the frame. Williams singled, stole second and scored on Grady's single.

In the third, Farmville added three more for a 5-1 margin. Eason and Mike James both singled and Yelverton brought his RBI total to five with a three-run homer.

Farmville added one more in the fourth, while Southern got one each in the third and sixth.

James and Yelverton each had two hits for Farmville, while Grady had two, including a solo homer in the third.

Farmville is now 4-3 overall and 3-2 in league play.

Angels Picked To Win American's West Flag

By HERSHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer
Gene Autry, the Cowboy, the good guy in the white hat, owner of the California Angels, finally triumphed over the bad guys in the American League West last season. A half-pennant won't be enough satisfaction this time.

"I think we have the best team in our division and we should win again — providing we play well," says Manager Jim Fregosi. "We gained a lot of experience by going through a pennant race and a championship series. It's part of maturing, part of growing up. I feel the team is ready to go all the way now."

The Angels were plagued by injuries last year but still scored 866 runs, most in the majors in 15 years. The ringleader was Don Baylor, who hit 36 homers, drove in 139 runs, scored 120 and won the Most Valuable Player Award.

Fregosi's major worries concern outfielders Dan Ford (knee surgery) and Joe Rudi (Achilles tendon) and the pitching staff — free agent Nolan Ryan has gone home to Texas and the Houston Astros, while Frank Tanana and Chris Knapp missed much of 1979. Hopefully, Tanana and Knapp will join Dave Frost and Bruce Kison, who jumped the world champion Pittsburgh Pirates, in the starting rotation.

In the bullpen, rookie stand-out Mark Clear slumped badly after a superb start and only the late-season acquisition of John Montague from Seattle enabled the Angels to fend off Kansas City.

California made a major off-season trade, sending first baseman Willie Aikens to Kansas City for outfielder Al Cowens. The presence of seven-time AL batting champion Rod Carew at first and Baylor for DH made Aikens expendable. Other key Angels are catcher Brian Downing (at 326 the top right-handed hitter in the league), second baseman Bob Byrd and third baseman Carney Lansford. At shortstop, Fred Patek and Todd Cruz came from Kansas City to battle with veteran Bert Campaneris and young Dickie Thon.

Kansas City stuck with Whitey Herzog through three division championships — and no pennants — then fired him for finishing three games out. The new boss is long-time Baltimore coach Jim Frey.

Frey was hit with an immediate problem when All-Star catcher Darrell Porter left the team to be treated for alcoholism. Porter is not expected to be released until late April. Until he returns, the catching burden will fall on John Wathan and Jamie Quirk.

Aikens has been handed the first base job while U.L. Washington taking over for Patek at shortstop. The other infielders are standouts, third baseman George Brett and second baseman Frank White. Speedy Willie Wilson (83 steals), Amos Otis and Clint Hurdle, the heralded phenom fof of 1978, form the outfield. Veteran Hal McRae is the DH.

Dennis Leonard, Paul Splittorff and Larry Gura are capable starters but the key to the Royals' season probably will be how well Renie Martin and Dan Quisenberry man the bullpen with Al Hrabosky gone.

The Texas Rangers have a new owner and a new starting pitcher. The former, septuagenarian Eddie Chiles, may be only slightly older than Gaylord Perry, who admits to 41.

The Rangers finished five games out last year despite one horrible stretch in which they lost 30 of 40 games. A healthy Jon Matlack, who missed most of last season with elbow miseries and won only five games, is a must. Ferguson Jenkins, Steve Comer and Doc Medich are the other starters, but one of them could lose out to fireballing Danny Darwin. Jim Kern and Sparky Lyle form a top-flight relief corps.

Texas will have center fielder Mickey Rivers from the start, but the New York Yankees gave up on him because he didn't put out all the time. When he comes to play he can spark any offense, especially one that also boasts outfielder Al Oliver, third baseman Buddy Bell, first baseman Pat Putnam, DH Richie Zisk, catcher Jim Sundberg and second baseman Bump Wills.

To guard against deep slumps in the Texas summer heat, Manager Pat Corrales will try not to use anyone in more than 130 games.

The Minnesota Twins keep losing free agents. Nevertheless, they finished only six games out last year but now must find a replacement for Dave Goltz in the rotation. There are serious questions behind starters Jerry Koozman and Geoff Zahn and bullpen ace Mike Marshall.

The Twins have a fine young catcher in Butch Wynegar, a solid infield of Ron Jackson, Rob Wilfong, Roy Smalley and John Castino, and a budding star in outfielder Ken Landreaux.

Like Minnesota, maverick Bill Veeck's Chicago White Sox have stayed away from the millionare free agent market. Nevertheless, they have managed to develop an outstanding young pitching rotation — all left-handed — of Ken Kravec, Richard Wortham, Ross Braun-garten and Steve Trout — plus Ed Farmer in the bullpen.

Elsewhere, however, there are too many questions, except for Lamar Johnson at first base or DHing, Alan Bannister and Jim Morrison somewhere in the infield, Chet Lemon in center field and Claudell Washington in left. Veeck is counting on a heralded young right fielder named Harold Baines whose nickname is "Cooperstown."

Both Teams Like Seattle's Press

By ALEX SACHARE
Associated Press Writer
How effective is Seattle's pressure defense?
Coach Lenny Wilkens feels it helped the Sonics win the National Basketball Association championship last year, and also helped them beat Portland in the opening game of the playoffs in defense of that title Wednesday night.
But Jack Ramsay, coach of the Portland Trail Blazers, remains confident his team can cope with Seattle's pressure tonight when the teams meet in Portland in the second game of the best-of-three miniseries.
"Against their press, we should score every time," said Ramsay. "It comes down to very basic things, like passing before we were ready to receive the pass or passing to where a person was maybe a half-count before."
Not doing those basics has brought the Blazers to the brink of elimination from the playoffs, whose field would be cut from 12 teams to eight if all the visiting teams win. In tonight's other first-round game, it's Phoenix at Kansas City, Houston at San Antonio and Philadelphia at Washington.

"Portland never has been a good ball-handling club," said Wilkens. "We will utilize the press again tonight, possibly a little more."
"Defense — that's how we really built the lead," said guard Gus Williams, who scored 35 points as Seattle raced to a 19-point third-quarter margin and then held off the Blazers 120-110 in the series opener. "The full-court press got us some points. It got them out of their game a little."
The Sonics' pressure defense helped their guards account for 75 points against Portland, but Ramsay was more concerned by Seattle's 59-42 edge off the boards and ability to get inside.
"The primary thing we must improve is our rebounding," Ramsay said. "We didn't stop their penetration well, either. We let people get to the basket area."
Portland put on a late comeback, trimming a 19-point deficit to four before bowing to the Sonics. "It was kind of frightening when they came back and got the momentum," said Seattle forward Paul Silas.
Phoenix Coach John MacLeod felt the same way as he watched the Kansas City Kings put on a 17-3 spurt in the final four minutes before bowing 96-93. Kings guard Otis Birdsong felt his team was going to pull out the victory.

"We didn't think we were out of it," said Birdsong, who finished with 23 points after shooting just 2-for-12 in the first half. "I knew we could hang in there because of our defense. We were shooting so lousy, you knew we were going to start getting them to fall in."
MacLeod said both teams were tight early in the game. "That's typical of first games of miniseries. You don't have time for error because of the shortness of the series, so the teams try to get everything done. In Kansas City, I think you'll see two better teams because they'll be more relaxed."
Injuries could be a factor in the two Eastern Conference series.
Houston center Moses Malone has been hampered by a sprained ankle, and there's no telling how effective he will be against San Antonio. But he did manage to play 36 minutes and contribute 10 points and 13 rebounds to the Rockets' 95-85 opening victory over the Spurs.
"That was really disappointing — a game that Moses didn't dominate, but we didn't win," said Spurs Coach Bob Bass. "We have just got to break their defense down."

The Spurs, who led the NBA with a 119.4 scoring average in the regular season, got only 11 points in the third quarter and 24 in the fourth quarter of the low-scoring opener, a game that left Houston's Rudy Tomjanovich shaking his head.
"If people weren't familiar with the colors of the uniforms, they wouldn't have believed it was Houston and San Antonio," he said. "But the game was decided on defense, and that's what is going to decide the winner of the series. Both teams have such explosive offenses. The team that wins will be the one which can slow the other down just a little," he added.
Another injured player is Caldwell Jones, who had 18 points and 26 rebounds in Philadelphia's 111-96 victory over Washington. He sprained his left foot late in the game. X-rays were negative, but the Sixers said they would not know till game time if Jones would play tonight.
Philadelphia is already sub-par physically, with Jones wearing a plastic mask to protect a broken nose, forward Julius Erving at about 75 percent because of a strained right knee and guard Maurice Cheeks battling recurring headaches and dizziness following a collision with New York's Bill Cartwright a week ago.

The Bullets were unable to play their power game in the opener, when Jones and Darryl Dawkins effectively neutralized Elvin Hayes and Wes Unseld.

Washington Coach Dick Motta knows this must change if his team is to win.
"We've got to attack inside," he said. "We didn't do that enough. Caldwell Jones had a lot to do with it, but again, they just wore us down. They beat us five of six during the regular season, and this is typical of the way they did it."

Palmer Says She Must Be Improved

ACC-Big Ten Is 'Verbiage'

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — The sparring between the Atlantic Coast Conference and the Big 10 over which league is the toughest is just so much verbiage, according to Dave Colescott.

Colescott played basketball at North Carolina despite the fact he comes from Marion, Ind., the heart of Big 10 country.

"I'm about an hour from Purdue's campus and maybe two or three hours from Indiana University," Colescott said. "My dad tells me a lot of what's being said up there about the two leagues."

Colescott, the Tar Heels' starting point guard for the past two seasons, says the arguments are mostly for the fans and the media.

"Players don't think much about that," he said. "We have conference loyalty, sure. But we don't worry about the rivalry between leagues."

North Carolina did better in the ACC this year than it did in competition against Big 10 opponents. The Tar Heels tied for second place in the ACC while the team failed to move past the first-round of NCAA tournament play.

The last ACC team to win the national title was North Carolina State in 1974. Big 10 teams have won two national crowns in the past five seasons.

"I really don't think ACC teams are as sharp for the NCAA tournament after coming out of our own tournament," Colescott said. But he said it is extremely difficult to compare the teams.

"I take it for granted that I've been playing in the best basketball conference," he said.

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Sandra Palmer won the Winners Circle tournament five years ago, but she doesn't want to duplicate that performance in the 1980 edition of the ladies' richest golf tournament.

"I can't win this tournament now playing like I did in 1975; I've got to play better," said the 39-year-old Palmer after her opening round of 6-under-par 66 Thursday gave her a 2-stroke lead in the $305,000 tournament.

"There are just more people out here shooting better scores than there were back then," said Palmer, who won here with a 5-under-par 283 and is looking for her first victory since 1977.

Peggy Conley, Beth Solomon and Vicki Fergon were two shots off the lead with opening-round 68s over the 6,242-yard, par 36-36-72 Mission Hills Country Club course.

Sally Little, Debbie Massey and Jane Blalock were another stroke back at 69 entering today's second round, with Kathy Ahern, Pat Bradley and Kathy Whitworth carding opening 70s.

Nancy Lopez-Melton and JoAnne Carner, among the favorites for the $37,500 winner's prize, both carded opening 72s, and that settled me down. I birdied No. 9 and was okay after that."

Palmer's round was not a model of consistency — she had a 30 on the front nine and a 36 on the back — but it was good enough to equal the lowest round she's had in her 16 years on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

"When I realized I was 5-under-par, which I was on the eighth hole, I got rattled," she said. "I was kind of in a fog. I hit my approach shot five feet from the pin and I couldn't even see the ball."

"I left the birdie putt short ered recently by a stomach disorder she got four months ago by drinking contaminated water while in Manila.

"I feel sort of queasy at times," she said. "But I still feel like I'm playing very well now, hitting the ball good."

"Playing the first round like

I did gives me confidence and, since I haven't won for a while, I can use it."

The final two rounds of the 72-hole tournament, officially named the Colgate-Dinah Shore Winners Circle, will be nationally televised on Saturday and Sunday.

Carter Says Security Hurt By Participation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration has made America's security the underlying reason for the United States to boycott the Olympic Games in Moscow this summer.

President Carter was said to have told some 60 representatives of U.S. sports federations Thursday that the sending of a team to Moscow would damage American security.

Carter was said to have made the comment by telephone during a 2½-hour meeting at the State Department between administration officials and officials of the national governing bodies of 31 Olympic sports.

The meeting was held because of growing concern that the U.S. Olympic Committee, which must make the final decision, may vote April 12 to defy the president and send a team to the Summer Games.

The sentiment grew during a session last weekend that was held to present options to the national governing bodies, groups that govern amateur athletics and act as a liaison between the athletes and the Olympic Committee.

The meeting quickly became an emotional exchange of opinions by officials of the governing bodies who vented their frustration over the proposed Olympic boycott.

At Thursday's meeting, the sports officials heard from Defense Secretary Harold Brown, Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher and White House counsel Lloyd Cutler.

Christopher told newsmen after the closed meeting the administration officials made three points: They emphasized the brutal war being waged by the Soviets in Afghanistan, that deterrents to the Soviet aggression mean that Americans must make sacrifices and "if the United States were to decide to go to the Games, it would be an approval of the Soviet actions."

Brown said U.S. athletes will damage American security if they insist on going to the Moscow Games.

"By going along with the Soviets, they will be putting the stamp of approval on the Soviet actions in Afghanistan," he said. "The Soviets will take such attendance as approval of their actions."

Harman Hawkins, president of the U.S. Yacht Racing Union who attended the meeting last weekend as well as the one Thursday, said, "Cutler made it clear that the bottom line is, 'If you vote not to support the president, you are doing the worse thing you can possibly do.'"

The USOC's House of Delegates meets April 11-13 to decide what action it will take, with three options available — to defy the president and send a team to Moscow, support the boycott or delay a decision until the May 24 entry deadline.

The administration wants the USOC to vote immediately to support the boycott so that stepped up efforts can be made to get other nations to join the United States in a boycott.

North Lenoir Nips Conley

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley High School saw North Lenoir rally in the seventh inning to gain a 6-5 victory yesterday in Eastern Carolina Conference baseball play.

The Vikings scored three first inning runs, only to see the game tied in the third. Both scored twice in the fifth, but North Lenoir got the winner in the seventh.

In the first, Arndel Credle reached on an error and stole second. Micah Dixon walked and Carl Arnold brought in both with a triple. Curtis Spencer then singled in Arnold.

The Hawks rallied for three in the third. Price singled and Alton got a hit. Sanderson singled in one, and a passed ball allowed both Alton and Sanderson to score.

After both teams scored twice in the fifth to make it 5-5, North Lenoir got the winner in the seventh.

Sanderson walked and stole second, scoring when Radford doubled.

Alton and Battle each had two hits for North Lenoir, while Arnold and Spencer each had a pair for Conley.

Peace Comes To End Auto Racing's War

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Peace has come to championship auto racing after a turbulent 17-month struggle that threatened to strangle Indianapolis-style racing.

Representatives of the U.S. Auto Club and Championship Auto Racing Teams have reached agreement, after months of bickering, threats and cajoling, on the formation of a Championship Racing League.

Members of both groups will take part in CART's Twin 200 race at Ontario, Calif., on April 13, as well as the USAC race at Texas International Raceway on April 27.

The original dual schedule of 27 races will be pared to a single slate of "about 15," with each race run this year under the rules set by its original sanctioning body.

The agreement, announced jointly Thursday by Dick King, USAC president, and Pat Patrick, chairman of CART's board of directors, was finalized Wednesday at a marathon meeting in Hot Springs, Ark.

The release said the CRL expects by July 1 to develop a single set of rules on such things as allowable manifold pressure and the use of articulated skirts on the recently developed ground effects cars.

"USAC did what we asked for 17 months ago, and that was to give us a voice in what's going on," Patrick said. "I just want to get the details worked out and go racing."

King said he isn't happy about using two sets of rules this year, but added: "It's a way to get together. It will create difficulties, but if it brings peace in the family, it's the right thing to do."

The CRL will be administered and sanctioned by USAC, with two CART directors — Patrick and car owner Roger Penske — added immediately to the USAC Board of Governors.

The CRL's six-man Board of Governors will be comprised of King, Patrick, Penske, veteran driver A.J. Foyt and car owners Rolla Vollstedt and Jim Hall. Car owners Sherman

Armstrong and Bob Fletcher were named as alternates.

The members of CART, most of the top teams and drivers in champ car racing, broke away from USAC in October of 1978 in an effort to gain a stronger voice over the rules and regulations of the exotic sport. Both groups ran their own races in 1979, with each encountering serious problems putting together strong fields and drawing fans.

Sponsors and accessory companies heavily involved in champ car racing were particularly happy about the end of the feud.

Leo Mehl, director of racing for Goodyear, which supplies all the tires for champ car racing, was the most outspoken.

"Both CART and USAC are to be highly commended for putting aside their differences and forging an agreement in the best interests of the entire sport," he said.

Hialeah, as in Hialeah race track, is an Indian word meaning "beautiful prairie."

Fay Wray Still Loves 'Kong'

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — She forever will be remembered as the screaming blonde in the hairy clutches of an amorous 50-foot gorilla, although she starred in more than 70 other movies without so much as a gibbon in the cast.

She is, of course, Fay Wray and the enormous monkey was her lovelorn suitor in the first great monster film, "King Kong."

Fay, now on the sunset side of 70, is resigned to the fact that among her many famous leading men, none is better remembered than Kong swatting away airplanes atop the Empire State Building.

And Fay worked with some well-known leading men — Ronald Colman, Warner Baxter, William Powell, Jack Holt, Clive Brooks, Wallace Beery, Nils Asther, Spencer Tracy, Claude Rains and Gary Cooper.

Her first leading man in features was Erich Von Stroheim in "The Wedding March" (a 1928 silent) which he also wrote and directed. Emil Jannings, the first winner of an Oscar for best actor, played her love interest in "The Street of Sin" not long after.

Most of Fay's leading men have long since gone to that big soundstage in the sky, including Stan Laurel with whom she costarred in silent Hal Roach two-reelers in the mid-'20s before Laurel teamed up with Oliver Hardy.

Fay's newest leading man is Henry Fonda, with whom she will be seen April 30 in the two-hour CBS-TV movie "Gideon's Trumpet" for the Hallmark Hall of Fame. The drama marks Fay's TV movie debut and her first role in some 15 years.

"It's also the first time I've ever seen myself on screen as a tacky, dowdy old lady. It takes some getting used to."

Fay, the wife of neurosurgeon Sanford Rothenberg, is anything but dowdy. She is a bright, handsome woman with enormous zest for life, a keen sense of humor and not driven to make a career comeback.

She decided to appear in "Gideon's Trumpet" because she advocates the film's message. It is taken from a true story of a man who overturned a Supreme Court ruling involving an accused's right to legal counsel.

Her son-in-law, David Rintels, wrote and produced the film and talked her into playing the role of Fonda's landlady.

"I didn't feel a bit rusty after all these years," Fay said. "The atmosphere on the set was good and everyone made me feel at ease. The prop man gave me a fresh rose every morning and Fonda was a delight to work with."

"My only problem was having to look tacky. I'd always played beautiful women on film, mostly romantic leads. And this role is a far cry from glamour."

"I wore a hat with a broad brim so my hair wouldn't look short and chic. It's the first time I've ever played an unattractive character."

Fay blossomed at a time of legendary leading ladies. There were scores of beautiful actresses who could act as well.

Most of Fay's feminine contemporaries have either passed away or are long since retired — Miriam Hopkins, Constance and Joan Bennett, Loretta Young, Irene Dunne, Claudette Colbert, Merle Oberon, Madge Evans, Madeleine Carroll and Carole Lombard to name a few.

During her lengthy career Fay was under contract to Universal, Paramount, Columbia and RKO studios, in addition to Roach.

Fay abandoned her acting career for a decade after her marriage to famed screenwriter Robert Riskin, her second husband, in 1942. She was widowed in 1955 and turned to writing herself.

Today she and Dr. Rothenberg live in a fashionable Century City apartment with a sweeping view of Los Angeles and the Pacific Ocean.

"I retired the second time because I didn't think TV offered much except a physical presence," Fay said. "There's no time to do anything but rush from one set to another. I always looked for some honest concept in my roles even though they mainly required me to look beautiful."

"I had several favorite movies, including 'The Wedding March,' 'Affairs of Cellini,' 'Viva Villa' and playing a bad girl in 'One Sunday Afternoon.' And sometimes I'd get crushes on my handsome leading men."

"Those were more innocent times. When I say I had a 'crush' on some of my costars, it just meant my heart beat a little faster."

"I rarely see my old pictures on television. I don't imagine many of them are shown. I did see 'The Unholy Garden' one day. It was made before 'King Kong' and my leading man was Ronald Colman. I looked too pretty and too nice."

"But 'King Kong' will always be best remembered. It does keep me current. It has legendary value. I really don't get tired of talking about it."

"I must say the picture became a favorite of mine. I respect it because it had an exceptional character and quality about it."

"I never saw the second 'King Kong' picture that Dino De Laurentiis made a couple of years ago. They sent me the script and were hoping I might become associated with it but I refused."

"It seemed to me it was nicer to preserve the image of 'King Kong' as it was originally presented. I guess the public feels the same way."

REHEARSALS OPEN — Michael Learned, left, who won an Emmy three times for her role in the TV series "The Waltons", and actor Kevin McCarthy chat prior to opening rehearsal of "After the Season" in New York City.

The two will star in the play by Corinne Jacker, which is to premiere on Broadway in early May. The four-character play is set on Fishers Island in Long Island Sound. (AP Laserphoto)

Network Seen Close To Solving Carson Terms

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — A "Tonight Show" contract dispute — this one involving Ed McMahon, bandleader Doc Severinson and the show's producers — has apparently been avoided by NBC, an indication that the network is close to resolving its problems with Johnny Carson.

Ed McMahon, Carson's "Tonight Show" partner of 17 years, recently said that this evening's (April 4) show would be the last episode of "Tonight" unless Carson had come to an agreement with NBC. Most of the show's principals other than Carson — McMahon, associate producer Peter Lasally and Severinson — are working under contracts that expired today.

They and producer Fred DeCordova told NBC they would not work the "Tonight Show" if Carson leaves. Since their old contracts expire tonight, they were faced with the choice of working without contracts until Carson settles things with NBC or signing new contracts and hoping they will be released if Carson leaves the show.

NBC made things easier — grudgingly, according to one source involved — by offering the four men contracts containing an escape clause in the event of Carson's departure. Thus far, only DeCordova has signed his new contract.

McMahon recently said, "I'm waiting to see what he (Carson) does."

NBC's only official comment on the matter was:

"NBC and representatives of McMahon and Severinson have agreed to basic terms and their contracts are in the finalization stages."

Carson and NBC have not reached any final agreement on the future of the "Tonight Show," which has been in doubt since nearly a year ago, when Carson abruptly announced that he wanted out. A court battle testing the validity of Carson's contract with the network is still unresolved.

If McMahon and the others do sign new contracts, it is probably because Carson and NBC are close enough to an agreement to allow NBC to offer assurances that Carson will remain with the show.

McMahon and others have speculated that Carson will indeed remain, but only on an abbreviated version of the "Tonight Show." Carson reportedly feels the current 90-minute nightly schedule is too taxing, but sources say that an hour-long, four-nights-a-week schedule would convince him to stay.

Apparently, that will be the compromise.

NBC was at first reluctant to lose half an hour of the lucrative "Tonight Show" (with its $25,000 commercials), but is now apparently willing to pare the show to keep the star.

So, the "Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson" will apparently emerge nearly intact from this year-long storm — losing 30 minutes but keeping its star, its second-banana, its bandleader and its producers. But then again, it may not.

Will Auto Industry Seek Curb Japanese Imports?

By IRA R. ALLEN
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Walk across the parking lot at the Capitol or through the garages beneath the congressional office buildings. You'll see a fair share of Toyotas, Datsuns and Hondas.

The small, fuel-efficient and often cheaper Japanese cars that are sweeping the country are just as popular in Washington as elsewhere. They account for most of the 27 percent import share of the U.S. auto market and almost all of the country's $9 billion trade deficit with Japan. In fact, Japan now sells more cars in the United States than in Japan.

What is also sweeping the country, however, is talk of protectionism — keeping the Japanese cars out unless the ones sold to Americans are made in America.

The recent mission to Japan by United Auto Workers president Douglas Fraser to persuade Nissan (Datsun) and Toyota to put assembly plants in America was not outwardly successful. Now the UAW and its many friends in the House are pursuing a legislative solution — clamping quotas on Japanese cars unless a substantial portion are made in America with American components.

Such a move is contrary to both the union's and the nation's free trade posture. Critics warn legislation restricting imports could touch off a damaging international trade war.

The legislation provides politicians, particularly those representing 200,000 jobless auto workers, with a chance to assault Japan in language that cannot help but remind listeners of 40-year old animosities.

"There is clearly a calculated Japanese invasion of our shores during a time of vulnerability and transition" from Detroit's big car production mode to the smaller models that get higher gasoline mileage, says Rep. Bob Traxler, D-Mich.

Aided by Japanese banks and government agencies, "Our friends from across the ocean have moved in, at a most vulnerable time, and literally assaulted our beaches with waves of their cars," he said at hearings on the subject. To "repel this invasion of our economy," Traxler introduced a bill to cut Japanese imports 35 percent immediately.

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., points out that the auto industry provides one out of every 12 manufacturing jobs and generates 24 percent of domestic steel demand, 15 percent of aluminum demand and 56 percent of rubber demand.

"One can quickly see," he says, "that the invasion of Japanese imports is a principal cause of the recession now affecting auto-producing states — and about to overtake the entire nation."

But despite the hot rhetoric from Michigan's members of Congress, there is little chance that punitive legislation will pass.

The hearings and the various threats of action are believed by congressional experts to be enough to encourage the Japanese to voluntarily keep their imports to 1977 levels while Detroit recovers from its past mistakes and then to put some assembly plants in America.

Chairman Charles Vanik of the House Ways and Means trade subcommittee is blunt about the cause of the problem: "Detroit has failed America by failing to make the kind of auto we need in a world of rising petroleum prices and shrinking supplies."

Traxler says the only quick way to restore the U.S. auto industry to health is legislation.

But Vanik responds that the hearings he held at the UAW's request were not aimed at producing a bill to punish Japan.

"I hope we don't have legislation but that we at least send some signals. Legislation is a last resort and it may not be necessary if those who hear us comprehend our message."

"If they want to avoid legislation they can do it with a certain pattern of conduct," Vanik warns. "It still leaves them with an awful lot of business in America."

Honda, which already produces motorcycles in America, has announced plans to build an auto plant in the United States. But Fraser told the subcommittee that Nissan and Toyota are not going to cooperate "unless you put the pressure on them."

Fraser warns, "There's a protectionist tide growing in the United States and it would be a mistake for those sentiments to succeed. But unless they (the Japanese) put their money where the market is, they're in for some difficulty."

Vanik, who has treated auto industry claims with skepticism in the past, counters, "The Japanese do not have a responsibility to relieve our unemployment problem." But he adds, "They do have a responsibility to deal with us fairly."

What if a Japanese firm decides to come to America but put a plant in Georgia or Texas, where there are few unemployed auto workers?

"I'd much rather have them in Georgia than in Tokyo," replied industry defender Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich.

While Traxler expressed his outrage at Japanese imports, Rep. Thomas Downey, D-N.Y., noted that his Michigan colleague was orating into a Japanese-made microphone and being photographed for home-state consumption by Japanese-made cameras.

There are two reasons that legislation to restrict auto imports probably will not succeed.

One is that congressional leaders, the administration and even the UAW recognize that once legislation comes to the floor, it will be open to all kinds of amendments containing special trade protections for various American industries.

The other is that all three groups know that a trade war will hurt American consumers, and there are more of them than there are auto workers.

A UAW source points out that the union has more political clout, at least in the House, than it needs.

"There's all kinds of protectionist sentiment out there we don't necessarily want," he says, fearful that if Japan calls the union's bluff the result might be a trade war with Japan that could seriously damage the economies of both countries, not to mention the strategic alliance.

"We'd be just as happy if we never have to pass a bill," the UAW man admits.

One House staffer does not put much stock in Toyota's and Nissan's apparent rejection of the overtures Fraser made. He says the fact that Japan's trade ministry is pressuring the companies to invest in America "makes it an absolute certainty there will be involvement here."

"I continue to believe the Japanese are good enough politicians and there is enough economic merit (in building cars in the United States) that the problem will be solved without legislation," he says. In the meantime, "Jap-bashing is good politics and it's sometimes hard to turn it off."

To the dismay of the UAW, the chief U.S. trade negotiator Reubin Askew delivered a strong statement to the House subcommittee declaring the administration's opposition to import restraints — either mandatory or voluntary. "We do not feel it would be in the interest of the American consumers to limit the availability of a product they want," he said, especially when that product helps fight inflation and reliance on foreign oil.

Fraser said he wasn't surprised at the administration's position, but that it should have been talking up restraints to the Japanese privately. "They're not the best bargainers in the world."

Askew is going to Japan in May, but officials say cars are not now at the top of the agenda. The big problem is getting Japan to drop protective barriers against U.S. telecommunications equipment, semiconductors and computers.

The car import situation "is a serious political problem. It is not a crisis," says an administration trade official. "It could become one, though, because it's an emotional issue for Americans. You see them (Japanese cars) everywhere."

The UAW executive says, "One of the things the Japanese want to know is how to get along with the UAW. The Volkswagen experience (in producing cars in Pennsylvania) worked very well. It is a hospitable environment. We want to encourage them that the UAW is somebody management can deal with."

Ask Chrysler. The UAW's strong lobbying pressure was credited with winning the congressional bailout of the failing U.S. automaker.

There are strong reasons for and against Japanese production in the United States.

The main reason in favor is to avoid trade restrictions, followed by helping out an important ally. Also, head-to-head competition should produce better cars. Finally, it is argued, an expected upward revaluation of the yen would result in higher profits for a Japanese company making and selling cars in the United States for dollars.

But there are also arguments against such a move.

Billy Graham Told Slow Down

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham says Mayo Clinic physicians have told him he must slow down or face possible medical consequences.

Graham, at the clinic for two days of medical tests this week, said doctors told him to cut out virtually all activities for the next six months, making it quite clear that "my ministry would be cut short" otherwise.

The 61-year-old world evangelist from Montreat, N.C., said the doctors found "three potentially serious medical problems," but he declined to reveal them. Graham, who broke three ribs when he fell in a London hotel bathtub in January, did rule out two of his known medical problems, high blood pressure and phlebitis.

Discouraged Carriage Races

NEW YORK (UPI) — The roads which wander through New York City's famed Central Park were originally designed with tricky twists and curves by a man named Frederick Olmstead in order to discourage people like Cornelius Vanderbilt and his friends from using them for carriage races.

Although the UAW promises it will go easy on them, the Japanese can expect to be hit with Detroit-scale wage demands in a couple of years.

They also fear going up against the technology and marketing prowess of General Motors and Ford, and, despite assurances to the contrary from the UAW, they may feel that American workmanship is not as good as Japanese.

Finally, the Japanese fear getting entangled in U.S. politics. Thirty-eight states have bid for a Japanese auto plant. Satisfying one will make Japan 37 enemies. Furthermore, trade-conscious governors — Edmund G. Brown Jr., of California, and former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia — often become president. Slighting one governor could be devastating later.

So far, most of the talk has been in the House.

Senate trade experts doubt much will happen if current conditions persist. "But if the share of the U.S. market should increase (from about 22 percent now) to 30, 35, 40 percent, things could change pretty quickly," says one staffer.

"If there's any move to limit foreign imports without comparable automobiles being available from the U.S. industry," he says, "the public outcry would be dramatic. The fact is, Detroit is not offering the product. And does the government have the responsibility to protect the industry until it can offer the product? It's difficult to make that argument."

Sludge-Based Fertilizer And Landfill Ban Is Being Urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Home lawn and garden fertilizer and landfill made from municipal sewage sludge may present a health hazard and should be banned, an environmental group has told the government.

The problem, says the Chicago-based "Citizens for a Better Environment," involves high levels of two metals, cadmium and lead, in the widely available fertilizer products. They enter the waste stream from industry and are combined with municipal waste in publicly owned sewage treatment plants.

Because such metals can build up in the body, the environmentalists want to prevent additional exposure to them from vegetables and other food grown in sludge-fertilized garden soil.

They have asked the Consumer Product Safety Commission to ban such fertilizers as "hazardous products" under the terms of one law the agency enforces. The group says cadmium can cause kidney problems and lead can bring on anemia and brain damage, especially in children.

Bill Forcade, a lawyer for the organization, said one widely sold sludge product, Milorganite, now carries a label warning against its use on soil for food crops. He contends the warning is inadequate.

Mike McCabe, speaking for the Milwaukee Metropolitan Sewage District, which distributes the product nationally, said the "minute amount of cadmium" in Milorganite "simply does not constitute a health hazard if used in accordance with the instructions."

Even if the instructions are disregarded, McCabe said, it would take a vegetarian 50 years of eating only food grown on Milorganite-enriched soil before any theoretical harm could result.

McCabe also said Milwaukee has already begun voluntary pre-treatment of waste, and the city will continue to upgrade the process so Milorganite will contain less heavy metal each year.

He added that the amount of lead and cadmium in the product is considerably less than that of sludge sometimes sold for landfill use.

Forcade insists the only safe way of dealing with the problem of consumer misuse is a ban of commercial and landfill products.

"Because children habitually place their hands and foreign objects on the ground and then in their mouths, they can be exposed to dangerous levels of lead from ingesting sludge-contaminated soils," the petition to the CPSC said.

It also claims that "warnings and recommendations restricting the use of these products to non-garden areas such as lawns and ornamentals are insufficient because cadmium persists in soil for thousands of years, posing a threat to subsequent purchasers who may later wish to convert such land to garden uses."

A 1977 General Accounting Office study found sludge products for sale nationwide that contained three to seven times more lead or cadmium than the Food and Drug Administration and the Agriculture Department recommend. At that time the GAO recommended action by the Environmental Protection Agency.

Eventually, Forcade said, his group's aim is to reduce or eliminate the metals at the processing plant. But, he said, the combination of local laws and federal action to bring that about is still years away.

"It will be at least 1986 or '87 before you see any meaningful enforcement of (waste) pre-treatment standards," he told UPI. "There could be as much as another 10-year lag before the effect of these regulations are felt."

Forcade said sludge fertilizer is generally available to consumers through package sales, organized distribution from trucks operated by treatment plants and self-service at the treatment plants.

While some controls have been instituted for farm use, he said, the government has done little at the consumer end.

Forcade's group tried to get the EPA to move but lost a court battle on the grounds the issue was premature.

Forcade said he is unaware of any commercially available sludge product labeled so a consumer can tell how much cadmium or lead it contains.

His correct action would have been a bid of five spades. Since South did not launch a cue-bidding sequence, that bid could not be asking about heart control. It could only say that declarer was looking at eleven tricks and that he needed a filler in one of his suits for slam. Since North had no help, he would have passed five spades and this hand would never have been reported.

Against the spade slam, West led the ace of hearts. It was obvious that declarer's queen of hearts was a singleton—he would not have leaped to slam off two quick tricks in hearts. It was equally obvious that declarer had no entry to dummy. It did not take a vivid imagination on West's part to realize that if declarer could not get to dummy, he would have to make the slam. Declarer would be forced to lay down the ace of trumps from hand, with highly gratifying results.

So West elected to give declarer a helping hand. He continued with the jack of hearts. To his pleasant sur-

Residue Goes In Building Blocks

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — A civil engineering professor and several graduate students have developed a process to turn incinerator residue into building blocks that resemble concrete blocks in looks and strength.

Prof. Michael Cassaro hit upon the process while trying to find a substitute for the lightweight aggregate used for concrete blocks. The aggregate was not available locally and shipping it in was very costly.

Cassaro says the average cost of making a residue block is 17 cents, compared with 30 cents for the concrete kind. The new type may get rust marks from such things as nails left in the residue.

If rust marks don't matter, he says, the residue blocks not only are inexpensive to make, but they also provide an alternative for industrial waste removal.

What common denominator do most great pictures have that set them apart from others? They're what is known in picture-editing circles as "eye-stoppers."

It's photos with this quality that picture editors like to use on the cover of a magazine or front page of a newspaper — so strong in eye-appeal that anyone glancing at a magazine or newspaper rack will stop and pick out the magazine or newspaper displaying it.

Advertisers have been using this type of picture for years and with a great deal more success than their journalistic counterparts, perhaps because they have more opportunity and time to create a photo that fits their needs.

The best way to see eye-stopping at work is to watch the judging of a major photo contest — one that includes hundreds, if not thousands, of entries. Because time is limited, the first run-through is fast. Pictures are flashed for the judges who then give a yes-or-no vote for a second look. Only those photos with eye-stopping appeal get past that first round.

The best judges of whether or not a photo is an eye-stopper are those without knowledge of the picture. The worst are those who took the picture.

Their judgment is invariably swayed by either some emotional involvement with the subject or the technical difficulties of obtaining the picture — something the average non-involved viewer would have no way of knowing unless it were somehow shown in the picture itself.

Some years ago, I was called by a person I knew by reputation to be one of the greatest picture editors of that time. I was flattered when he asked me to drop by and help with an editing job.

It was then I learned about editing by committee.

He gathered six or seven people around a table on which the photos to be edited were spread — himself, myself, maybe a secretary, researcher, a photographer and sometimes the janitor or whoever else happened to drop by.

Each would select what he thought were the best photos and say why. The final editing frequently came from the non-photographic person who injected the purely emotional response to the photos that the picture editor felt would be

SAY CHEESE: It might be cheating, but this picture is certainly an eye-stopper for another photographer or picture editor. It isn't posed either! response in the market he was aiming for — the average newspaper reader with no knowledge of photography.

Pictures like this are not restricted in photojournalism to the news-associated picture, the one that illustrates the story of the day. There is also a need for — and far greater opportunity for the aspiring photojournalist to shoot — feature photos that are eye-stoppers.

There are many days when there just aren't any good pictures to illustrate the major story of the day. When I was picture editor of the Washington (D.C.) Star, I used to dread the days when I would go into a news conference with nothing worthy of the front page. So I began to save those timeless feature photos that came in on the wire or were produced by the staff, for use on such days.

I set up a schedule book and got the staff working on ideas for upcoming holidays weeks in advance. We went after weather shots and seasonal shots and some of these, like autumn leaves, I would save for use the following year.

For display inside the paper, where space was frequently restricted, I would save feature pictures that would take unusual trimming — the long, thin picture, either vertical or horizontal. One of the best examples was a picture of a clown on stilts that ran one column the entire length of the page.

Humorous photos seem to be the hardest to come by. LIFE magazine tried to have one every week on their Miscellany page but couldn't come up with enough pictures.

It sometimes seems to me that all photographers aspiring to be photojournalists chase firetrucks when, with less effort, they would be far more successful chasing feature pictures.

The list of possibilities seems almost endless. Holidays, weather, seasons, children, animals, sunrises and sunsets, and topical shots like wheat fields and oil fields. Geese flying against the moon, long and short lens shots and distorted subjects taken with unusual lenses or filters, but be sure to explain in your caption what it is and how it was taken.

It's a little-explored gold mine but, remember, to be a successful picture it must be an eye-stopper. Don't you be the judge. Edit by committee. A disinterested committee, not the family.

When you think you have a few good shots, call your local newspaper picture editor and ask if you can drop by to show them to him. Maybe you'll make a sale — and a friend too!

KILLED IN CROSSFIRE

PARIS (AP) — The Sudanese consul general was killed by crossfire between warring factions in N'Djamena, Chad, according to reports reaching Paris.

DAKAR, Senegal (UPI) — A crowd of several thousand Africans gathered to hear a group of American jazz musicians play the music which is said to have its roots in their land.

There was no place to sit. They stood, tightly packed, children in front, in Obiesik Square here. There was no pushing. If they were tired of standing or waiting, it didn't show.

When the Stan Getz group — Andy Laverne, piano; Chuck Loeb, guitar; Victor Jones, drums and Brian Bromberg, bass — arrived, the crowd were being entertained by local musicians playing African music.

A group of youngsters standing near Victor Jones, the only black in the Getz band, grinned delightedly as the percussionist tuned up with a few test rolls and cymbal crashes.

The audience erupted into applause and cheering when Getz was introduced although many in the crowd had little or no exposure to jazz. Probably none had attended a live jazz concert before the series of free concerts in which the Getz group appeared.

After each solo, the applause was thunderous. The musicians seemed driven to greater effort.

In addition to Getz, jazz greats appearing in Senegal over a six-month period include Dizzy Gillespie, Lee Konitz, Buddy Rich, Frank Foster, Phil Woods, Clifford Jordan, Tommy Flanagan and Dexter Gordon.

The appearances are part of an arrangement under which each group stays an average of two weeks and plays at a resort (Club Mediteranee's Les Almadies village) outside of Dakar. Under the agreement, supported by Senegal's president, Leopold Senghor, an enthusiastic jazz buff, they also give free concerts in the city.

Guitarist Chuck Loeb, on his first trip to Africa, called it, "an incredible experience."

EXPOSURE SAID LOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — Radiation exposure to thousands of military and civilian personnel who witnessed atomic tests in the Nevada desert and the Pacific between 1942 and 1963 "were quite low," the Defense Nuclear Agency says.
