

Strong Congress Support For Stance Toward Iran

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
FBI agents are shadowing Iranian diplomats to make sure they leave the United States, while President Carter's toughened stance against Iran draws cautious reaction from the families of the American hostages and some surprisingly strong support from Congress.

"It's about time we tried to get their attention some way," said Robert Hohman, father of Sgt. Donald R. Hohman of West Sacramento, Calif. "The president is right.

...He has to do it."

And in Congress, Sen.
George McGovern, the anti-war Democratic presidential candidate of 1972 and a frequent critic of the Carter administration, said Carter should be planning for a naval blockade or even selective air strikes if the hostages aren't released.

It was a grim-faced president who went on live national television Monday afternoon to say he was committed both to the release of the hostages and to "the preservation of American honor."

"Other actions may become necessary if these steps do not produce the prompt release of the hostages," Carter said.

Neither the president nor his aides would define

"prompt," but officials said Carter does not feel obliged to await the convening of Iran's new legislature, the group Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has said should decide what to do with the hostages.

The decision to break diplomatic relations and embargo trade was made Monday morning after Khomeini refused to allow the transfer of the 50 Americans from their student captors to government control.

Khomeini defied the new sanctions today, and Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said they will not alter Iran's position on the captives.

Khomeini said breaking relations was "the one thing in all his life Carter has done in the interests of the oppressed" because it marked an end to ties between "a risen country and a world devouring plunderer."

"This is the beginning of the dawn of final victory of a nation against the bloodthirsty superpower which was forced to cut relations," the ayatollah said, and now the United States will be forced to "end its pillaging" in Iran.

White House officials said Carter's action will send a clear message to Iran and the rest of the world that American patience is exhausted. Briefing reporters under ground rules that barred their identification by name, the officials carefully refused to rule out military force when asked about the "other actions" the president warned "may become necessary."

The four steps Carter outlined:

—A formal end to diplomatic relations. The

Pitt Commissioners Ask DOT Expand Its Study

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County Commissioners this morning adopted a resolution asking the Department of Transportation to expand its study of a Western Loop of Greenville to include a connector joining the relocated US 264 with N.C. 11
South of Pitt Community College.

The DOT has begun a study on a proposed roadway which would join the relocated US 264 freeway to the Eastern
By-pass North of Greenville.
The commissioners' action today would include in the study, a roadway to the South, joining the freeway to N.C. 11.

The resolution also requested the project be programmed into the State's Transportation Improvement Plan, which in effect, would establish a time-table for construction of the project.

The board this morning also adopted a resolution asking that NC 903 from Stokes to the Martin County line — presently 18 feet wide — be widened to 20 feet.

Commissioners gave their approval for the purchase of furniture for the Department of Social Services. The estimated $18,000 expenditure would include about $6,700 in county funds, with the remaining portion being funded by State and Federal money.

Commissioners Charles Gaskins, Bruce Strickland and Bob Martin were appointed to the Library Study Committee to serve with Greenville city council members Judy Green, Clarence Gray and Bill Hadden to review future plans for the operation and funding of Sheppard Memorial Library.

Commissioners discussed several items dealing with the new county office building at 1717 West Fifth St. and agreed to give further study to parking facilities and paving needed at the site, as well as operations of a cafeteria at the new facility.

Department of Social Services Director Ed Garrison told the board this morning that unless the Congress appropriates additional funds for the Food Stamp Program, that program faces a reduction in benefits to participants or a "total stop" on June 1, for the remainder of the fiscal year (October 1).

Garrison said if the program continues for the remainder of the Federal fiscal year a 25 percent reduction in the amount of food stamps issued to each family is for-seen.

In March, Garrison said his department issued more than $400,000 worth of food stamps to 4,463 households in the county involving some 13,542 individuals.

Commissioners also presented a resolution of commendation to Superintendent of Pitt County Schools Ott Alford in recognition of his receiving the Distinguished Library Service Award for school administrators in national competition recently.

Alford noted that when he became superintendent in 1965, the school budget was $5 million. This year, he said the budget is $20 million.

"It speaks well of the county...of you," he told the board. "Without your help and funding," the award would not have been possible, Alford indicated. "You have something you can be proud of."

The board also accepted an award from Sylvia Wheel-house, chairman of the Keep Pitt County Clean and Beautiful Committee, which was presented to the committee by the state Keep North Carolina Beautiful group recently.

The award of appreciation was for the county's second place state-wide effort in beautification.

Israeli Retaliation Is Awaited For Terrorist Attack On A Nursery

By DANIEL GREBLER
Associated Press Writer
TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) —

Israeli raids on Palestinian camps in southern Lebanon are expected in retaliation for the terrorist attack on a kibbutz nursery in which three Israelis and the five terrorists died.

Defense Minister Ezer Weizman said the Israeli army would "weigh measures and actions" but gave no hint of plans for retaliation.

However, all such previous Palestinian attacks on Israel have been followed quickly by large-scale Israeli attacks by land, sea or air on Palestinian camps which the Israelis claimed were operational or training bases for the terrorists.

Usually the retaliation results in far greater Palestinian casualties than those suffered by the Israelis in the terrorist attack.

In the attack early Monday, the kibbutz leader, a 2½-year-old boy and an Israeli soldier were killed and four children, an adult civilian and 11 soldiers were wounded after five Palestinians slipped through the frontier fence between Lebanon and Israel and invaded Misgav Am, a collective farm settlement in the northern part of the country that juts up between southern Lebanon and Syria.

The kibbutz leader, Sami Shani, 38, was shot at the door of the children's dormitory as, unarmed, he tried to push the Palestinians back.

The raiders held six small children and a man hostage on the second floor of the nursery building for nine hours while they threw grenades, fired their weapons and by bullhorn demanded the release of 50 imprisoned Palestinians and a plane to fly them out of the country.

One army attempt to rush the building failed, and the angered Palestinians shot their adult hostage, Meir Peretz, in the leg.

"The children started screaming hysterically, and one of the terrorists shouted,
'We'll kill them all,'" Peretz told reporters.

Weizman and Lt. Gen.
Raphael Eytan, the chief of staff, arrived four hours after the initial Palestinian attack, and five hours later the army stormed the building. It took "three or four minutes," Weizman said, and the five Palestinians and an Israeli soldier were killed. It was not clear when the child died.

The Israeli-supported Arab Liberation Front, one of the radical guerrilla groups in the Palestine Liberation Organization, claimed it was responsible for the raid.

The Front's announcement in Beirut, Lebanon, indicated the attack was timed to coincide with President Anwar Sadat's meeting in Washington with President Carter. "The raid proved the will of the Palestinians in rejecting the U.S.-sponsored peace process," the statement said.

It also occurred on the last night of Passover, the eight-day celebration of the liberation of the ancient Israelites from slavery in Egypt.

LIMA, Peru (AP) —

The Peruvian government turned to its Latin American allies in the Andean Pact for help in finding asylum for the estimated 10,000 Cubans jamming its embassy in Havana in a desperate attempt to escape communist rule.

The United States said it would take some of them if the Peruvian government would let the refugees come to Lima. But so far the Peruvians were admitting none of them because they had no definite assurances from other countries that they would take them.

"Peru cannot take charge of 10,000 refugees, no country can do that individually," said Foreign Minister Arturo Garcia said.

Garcia and the foreign ministers of the other four Andean Pact nations — Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador and Venezuela — scheduled an emergency meeting in the Peruvian capital Wednesday to review the situation and discuss what might be done.

In Miami's Little Havana, thousands of Cuban-Americans marched in support of their compatriots.
Leaders called for a revolution to overthrow President Fidel Castro and led chants of "War! War!"

"How can we admit 150,000
Hungarian freedom fighters and 150,000 Vietnamese and Cambodians and not admit the 10,000 Cubans?" asked

HOTLINE APPEAL

HOUSE NEEDED

A Greenville home to give family-living atmosphere for women and girl alcoholics who are reconstructing their lives is needed. The house needs to be approximately five bedrooms and two baths. According to the Rev. Jim Bailey, who asked Hotline to make this appeal, Greenville is one of the few towns without such a ministry. There are many women and girls now, sober and ready to leave the Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center and other rehabilitation institutions who have no home to which to go. Anyone having a house that might fit the need is asked to call Bailey at 752-3101 or Mrs. Lee H. Hannah at 756-2501.

Palestinian Problem Is Sadat's Main Priority

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Vowing to put the Palestinian problem "on the road to a just settlement," Egyptian President Anwar Sadat was opening talks today with President Carter on how much self-rule Arabs are to have in Israeli-held territory.

Guarantees for Israel's security were the likely focus of the White House sessions.
At the same time, the Egyptian leader was expected to push for creation of a Palestinian legislative council and a rollback of Israeli forces on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in Gaza.

As a gesture to Israel, which is concerned that this could lead to a Palestinian state threatening its very existence, Egyptian sources indicated Sadat would suggest demilitarization of the territories for five years and either a neutral peacekeeping unit or a mixed Egyptian-Israeli patrol.

Whatever is worked out by Carter and Sadat over two days will be submitted to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin when he arrives in the White House next week. Then, if there is agreement, the Egyptian and Israeli negotiating teams will try to translate the principles into a settlement by the May 26 target date.

If key issues remain unresolved, however, U.S. and Egyptian officials said Carter might hold a threeway summit meeting with Sadat and Begin along the lines of the Camp David sessions in September 1978.
These produced the framework for a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel and the current negotiations over Palestinian autonomy.

"The peace treaty between Egypt and Israel was the first step on the road to a comprehensive peace, of which all nations benefit," Sadat said Monday as he arrived at Andrews Air Force Base.

Study Examines Lives Of Working Mothers

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Young mothers in Eastern Europe enjoy better employment prospects than their counterparts in the West, but on the whole there is little effort by governments to enable women to carry out dual responsibilities at home and at work, says a report published by the International Labor Organization.

Quoting from recent ILO studies, the report says women can work up to between 70 and 80 hours a week once they have completed their job and finished the so-called "second shift" of looking after the family.

This amount of time, the report says, can bring about "a cumulative fatigue which can adversely affect their health and work performance."

Although the ILO has adopted a series of conventions on women workers, including equal pay, the report says none of these will be of use "if large numbers of women have to give up their jobs or forego promotion because of their family responsibilities."

The report adds that although child-care services have increased in most countries over the past 15 years, supply is still far short of demand.

In some cases, it says, working mothers are forced to quit their jobs at the beginning of the school summer holidays and look for another in the fall. "As yet, few countries have made any systematic attempt to tackle this problem," it adds.

Sometimes problems arise in the case of illness, the report states, with the child's being sent to the hospital when the mother is working, even though its condition might not really warrant hospital treatment.

The report suggests that long-term leave to raise a child might be one way in which "a relaxation in the rigid arrangements of working life" can benefit workers with family responsibilities. This should apply to both sets of parents, says the report.

The solution of part-time work, as practiced by some countries including Sweden, is not so attractive as it first seems, says the report. "Part-time work may fall in the face of losing social security benefits, particularly when weekly hours of work are reduced below the minimum prescribed for social security coverage," it says.

The report notes that women with family responsibilities are particularly vulnerable to unemployment. ILO statistics, it adds, show that in Western industrialized states particularly, unemployment is high among women under 25 seeking their first job and those over 40 wishing to re-enter employment.

In Eastern Europe, however, "women in all age brackets are apparently better off," says the report, adding that in developing states the chances of women to find or return to work are "extremely slim."

Young mothers often have "only a vague notion of job requirements and possibilities," says the report, "not to mention training and their own qualifications."

On the whole, it concludes, vocational training for women starting work is unsatisfactory and there are not enough "refresher courses" for women entering the labor market after short or long layoffs to look after their families.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

All my life I've heard about "Everyone Else's mother."

Every time I told my kids they had to have the car home by 11, I was informed, "Everyone Else's mother said they could stay out until 2."

When I stood firm that they could not have a phone of their own or a separate listing, they grumbled, "Everyone Else's mother lets them have their own phone."

No bathing suit was too revealing for Everyone Else's mother to put her stamp of approval on. No allowance was too generous for her to shell out. She was the Good Queen of children everywhere.

My friends and I used to talk about this mother a lot. Was she a myth created in the minds of children who wanted to be free from parental decrees, or did she really exist?

All I really knew was that she was always with us... following us around from city to city, school to school, year in and year out.

You cannot imagine my surprise recently when I met Everyone Else face to face. She called herself Jan, but I knew from the moment she opened her mouth she was "Everyone Else" with the famous mother.

From the moment she was born she got to do whatever she wanted to do. She went to bed when she felt like it, and got up the same way. If she craved jelly beans and coffee for breakfast, she got it. No one nagged her to shut the door, sit up straight, clear the table, or make her own bed. She could drink out of everyone's glass at parties... if she wanted to.

She drank milk out of the carton and no one yelled at her. She was rude to people and never had to apologize. She made mistakes and never had to be accountable for them.

She picked her own clothes, her own schools, her own friends. She was the envy of all her contemporaries.

Finally, I could stand it no longer. "Jan, for years I've heard about your mother. Somehow, she's the perfection that none of us has been able to touch. I would love to meet her."

"Everyone Else" just looked at me and slowly repeated the word, "love." You'd have thought it was the first time she had ever heard it.

Dear Abby

Grandma's Knitting Needles Family

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Ours is a sticky family problem. Grandma loves to knit, and she gives her handiwork to members of the family for Christmas. She never asks anyone's size — she guesses. And Abby, some of her creations are unreal! She'll start knitting a sweater, and if she runs out of yarn, she finishes it with another color.

She made one nephew who loves to ski a scarf about five yards long. ("Just keep wrapping it around your neck," she told him.)

The colors she puts together are atrocious and the styles are from 30 years ago. But her knitting is flawless; it's a pity nobody can wear what she knits.

We don't want to hurt her feelings, but we don't know what to say when she asks why none of us ever wears one of her presents. Any suggestions? Grandma is already knitting our gifts for next Christmas, and if that orange and purple sweater she's making is for me, I'm in trouble.

LOVES GRANDMA

DEAR LOVES: The solution is so obvious, I'm amazed you didn't think of it yourself. Anyone whose knitting is "flawless" can make things people can wear. The family should provide Grandma with yarn and patterns! (Obviously she can use them.) She will appreciate the guidance, and in return "the family" will receive wearable gifts they can enjoy.

DEAR ABBY: I am a single woman, 29, who has been in love with a married man for seven years. He's 50 and my employer. He has not been happy at home since I've known him, but he is a family man and there are many reasons why he won't leave his wife. He never promised me marriage, but, of course, I always hoped that one day it would happen. I am a very attractive woman, and I have never gone out with another man since I started seeing him.

I know he loves me, but lately he has been telling me that we should call it quits, that I should forget him and find a younger man to love and marry.

Abby, I don't want a younger man. I may be foolish, but I am happy to go on the way we are, and if I never marry, that's not the worst fate in the world.

My best friend and confidante has told me I should quit my job, say goodbye to this man, and try to build a life for myself without him. What do you say?

IN LOVE IN S. CAROLINA

DEAR IN: With a best friend and confidante as wise as yours, you don't need any advice from Dear Abby.

DEAR ABBY: Why do people insist on trying to persuade guests to stay longer after they have spent hours at a party, wedding, etc., and feel that they have had enough of it?

Last Sunday we attended an afternoon party where we knew very few people. After five hours we said goodbye, and the hostess wanted to know why we were leaving "so soon." Frankly, I think we did well to stay as long as we did, amidst all that smoke and noise, but we were made to feel "guilty" for wanting to leave.

Abby, please put this in your own words, and tell people that when guests say goodbye, it is very poor manners for the host and hostess to make them feel they are leaving prematurely. Thank you.

TODAY'S STORY

Meander Sue, while walking through the forest, was stopped by a serpent. "Meander Sue," said the serpent, "You better give me something or I'll sting you to death with my forked tongue."

Meander Sue was frightened. She said, "Will you take an apple?" even though she did not have an apple. (She was stalling for time.)

"Apples already went Out," said the serpent, flicking his forked tongue.

Meander Sue remembered that her sweetheart, Boycott, had this Very morning brought her a Gift from Ariane Clark, and that the Gift was in her bag. She took it out and handed it to the serpent.

"A Gift from Ariane Clark! O Class!" cried the serpent. He took the Gift greedily and slithered away as Fast as he could go.

All of this got Meander Sue turned around, so instead of heading home she headed deeper into the forest. Night was Falling.

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Ronald Reagan, at a point in his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination where he is trying to avoid a stumble, spoke cautiously Monday about the continuing crisis in Iran following President Carter's latest moves, but says he believes they would have no impact.

Reagan, taking his campaign to North Carolina where 40 GOP delegates are at stake in the May 6 primary, also paid homage to tobacco, the state's major agricultural crop.

While telling reporters in the Tar Heel state that he supports the government's warnings that smoking may be a health hazard, Reagan said he opposes a congressional proposal for a 10-cent-a-pack increase in the federal tax on cigarettes and said he approves of the federal tobacco price support system.

Reagan arrived in the state Monday afternoon on a commercial flight from Los Angeles, and was en route when President Carter announced the break in diplomatic relations with Iran, the expelling of Iranian diplomats and the prohibition on further exports to that country.

Reagan said he had not been fully briefed on the president's moves, but dismissed the effect of the cutoff of trade, which excluded food and medicine.

"The drop in trade since this began has been so great that there really will be no impact on Iran at all," Reagan said. "My criticism goes back to the very beginning and the manner in which it was handled from the very beginning. You act immediately in something of this kind."

"It's just more of the same and it's been wrong from the first," he added.

Reagan refused to be specific, however, when asked what steps he would have taken were he now the president, saying he might mention in speculation a step the Iranian leaders have not thought of.

In a later speech to 1,400 supporters at a dinner at the Greensboro Coliseum, Reagan made only brief mention of the Iranian crisis but blamed President Carter for allowing the hostages crisis to develop.

"It's precisely because of this foreign policy, bordering on appeasement, that a student mob can hold hostage with impunity American diplomats and Marines in the American embassy in Iran," he said. "They shouldn't have been there six days, let alone six months," he added.

Reagan is widely considered to be far ahead of the other GOP presidential contenders in North Carolina's GOP race.

Four years ago, Reagan's sagging campaign received a badly needed victory over President Ford in North Carolina's primary.

This time he again enjoys the support of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and he received an enthusiastic endorsement from Helms at the dinner.

"If there had been a Reagan administration these past three years, the world would not today view America as weak, timid, indecisive and susceptible to blackmail, because a Reagan administration would not have given away the Panama Canal; a Reagan administration would not have sold Taiwan down the river," Helms said.

Helms, who has a campaign committee pushing him for the GOP vice presidential nomination, said he did not discuss the vice presidency with Reagan while he was in Greensboro. Helms said that was because his supporters are waging a television campaign on behalf of Reagan, one that is independent under federal law and thus does not count toward Reagan's spending limitation.

"When we decided to go independent in the campaign, that meant from that moment on we could not talk about anything of a substantive nature. Otherwise we'd be in violation of the law," Helms said.

Reagan, asked about Helms as a possible running mate, said he would not think about a vice presidential nominee until he was closer to the nomination. "That's a subject I haven't even let my mind turn to anyway," he said.

Reagan, who was to leave Greensboro at 9:30 a.m. today for Washington, said he considered the tobacco price support system — overwhelmingly supported by the state's tobacco growers — to be based on federal loans rather than government spending.

Reagan said the loans, which are used to buy lower grade tobacco from farmers, have always been repaid. Reagan said he saw no inconsistency in having the government operate the price support system at the same time it discourages smoking, because removing the program might lower cigarette prices and thus encourage smoking.

While he was in the state, Reagan met with a dozen black Republicans in a private session. Several said after the meeting that Reagan was short on specifics when asked about concerns of minorities, but all said they supported him for the presidency.

Segregation Still Seen In Public Cemeteries

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — It may be by design, tradition or just deep cultural forces at work, but for one reason or another most public cemeteries are still segregated.

In Gastonia, five of the city's seven public cemeteries are all white. The two remaining city-run cemeteries, Rose Hill and North Oakland Street, are all black.

"It's just tradition ... black people tend to want to be buried in Rose Hill and North Oakland Street," says David Mitchell, city cemetery superintendent who oversees the sale of city-owned plots. "We do not restrict blacks from buying lots in any cemetery ... but to my knowledge, no one has ever inquired about buying a lot in any (cemeteries other than Rose Hill and North Oakland)."

Under a state law, managers of public and private cemeteries in North Carolina have been bound since 1975 to "... sell to all applicants and bury all deceased human beings on equal terms without regard to race or color."

Money may have a lot to do with the division of cemeteries. "People tend to choose the cheapest setup ... and Rose Hill rates are among the cheapest you'll find," said the Rev. A.C. Hummcutt, manager of Martin's Funeral Home, one of Gastonia's oldest black-owned funeral services.

While all city-owned plots sell for $5 per square foot, the city's public works department, which maintains city cemeteries, is working to make the best use of available cemetery space by selling smaller plots in Rose Hill and the all-white Armstrong cemetery.

In those two cemeteries, according to public works director Sam Wilkins, grave site buyers can find plots measuring 3.5 feet by 8 feet instead of the usual 4 feet by 10 feet. The smaller sites cost $140; the larger, $200.

The cost of a burial site in Gaston Memorial Park runs from $197.50 to $297.50.

But money is not the only force at work when it comes time to select a burial site. Charles Costner Jr., manager of Costner Funeral Home, says strong cultural ties also are evident in the traditionally all-black cemeteries.

"Among black people, family and community ties are strong. When people die, they want to be buried among their kin and their life-long friends," Costner said. "So they buy their plots in the community cemeteries, close to where they grew up ... and right where their family plots were started."

Town Official Under Arrest

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Isaac Joyner, superintendent of the town of Sharpsburg, was arrested Monday and charged with two counts of receiving stolen property, according to Wilson County deputies.

Joyner, 33, was arrested after a search netted several guns that had been reported stolen, said Lt. Wayne Gay. He was released on $500 bond.

Drowned As His Boat Capsized

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Johnston County man drowned in Lake Benson Saturday after his boat capsized in rough water.

The body of Ralph Mazingo, 50, of Princeton, was pulled from the city reservoir about 4 p.m. Saturday, eight hours after the 12-foot boat he and his brother had rented overturned.

The brother, Ray Mazingo, 31, of Raleigh, saved himself by hanging onto a boat cushion after he accident. He was released from Wake Medical Center Sunday, where he had been admitted for treatment of shock.

He was rescued from the lake by William W. Woodall of Fuquay-Varina, who has leased the rental-boat concession from the city for two years.

Air Service Growing

Almost before we were aware of it, we are seeing the development of a major new transportation industry.

Commuter airlines are taking over much of the business left when larger airlines pull out of smaller airports.

Pitt County was in on such service early as Wheeler Airlines began furnishing service to Pitt-Greenville Airport.

Now similar airlines are furnishing service at Rocky Mount and New Bern. Kinston is becoming a regional airport with Piedmont furnishing jet service there.

As jet air service became more and more the way for air travel, it meant that smaller cities were not in a position to participate in service. The jets just couldn't land and take off every 50 miles or so, and there wasn't enough business to justify their stops.

Now most Eastern North Carolina cities can have some service through the commuters. The prop planes can furnish connections to the jet ports. Possibly in the future the shuttle flights can be made frequent enough so there won't be long waits for transfer to the jet flights.

Transplanting Time Is Here

Can it be?

It is time for transplanting of tobacco in Eastern North Carolina as a front page photo attested Sunday.

Work was underway on the Stokes farm and it was anticipated that some 17 acres would be set out by early in the week.

The months ahead will be anxious as farmers hope for the ideal weather conditions which will produce an outstanding crop of tobacco.

THIS AFTERNOON

A Leverage 'Tool'

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — When President Richard Nixon pushed into place a program of federal aid to local police departments, it was largely in response to what he perceived as growing civil unrest bordering on anarchy across the nation.

The horror stories emerging from early spending of that money are legion: armored personnel carriers, riot gear, SWAT teams and equipment moved into many police arsenals.

North Carolina did not escape the hysteria, but public reaction swelled to the rejection point when it became known that exotic submachine guns and Mickey Mouse wrist radios were being bought with the federal dollars.

Congress clamped down on the excesses, threatening to wipe out the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration after details of the spending patterns and the notable absence of successful police experimentation with new approaches became widely known.

Turnaround
But the effort was salvaged through rigorous turnaround restrictions on use of the federal aid which effectively caused local law enforcement agencies to stop using the money for equipment, and instead to use it to implement pilot projects which, after two years, state or local budgets would pick up and keep in operation if the efforts demonstrated their worth.

There followed another period of trauma in North Carolina during which a powerful governing board dominated by state agency people siphoned off a lion's share of the money much to the consternation of local units across the state. That condition was accompanied by the situation in which local applications were subject to review and endorsement by local Regional Councils of Governments which, themselves, were not yet fully staffed by competent professionals nor capable of handling the load.

During that period, observers witnessed the spectacle of high state officials feuding among themselves to gain power over the funds and expand their individual empires through control of the programs while numerous local proposals bit the dust as a result.

So it is that today there is little public outcry at the determination of the White House and the Congress to sharply trim if not eliminate the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration funding which nationally totaled nearly a billion dollars only five years ago; was cut to half-a-billion this year; and would be curtailed even more in coming months.

BILL NOBLITT
The Cut

President Carter's budget proposals would cut North Carolina's share from $14.4 million in 1975 to $7.2 million next fiscal year.

Gov. Jim Hunt, while supporting Carter in his budget balancing efforts even to the extent of accepting the elimination of revenue sharing funds for states, has taken vigorous exception to elimination of the law enforcement funds.

"It is true that in the early days there were some horror stories.... that hasn't happened in years. Now this program is innovative in areas that are productive... trying some new things out, and serving as a leverage tool to convince people that some things ought to be done, and then having local budgets pick them up," Hunt insists.

The laundry list of such successful work is long in North Carolina, ranging from the Justice Academy at Salem to the Police Information Network to numerous local halfway houses, juvenile training and rehab efforts, career criminal prosecutions, etc.

Hunt is convinced that crime shares, with inflation, top priority in concerns of citizens, and has pledged that if the federal money is cut, state funds will be committed to the demonstration projects. Considering that the Assistance Administration represents only one-third of one percentage point in proposed across-the-board salary raises for state employees, finding the money should not prove difficult.

To the editor:

Having been made aware of the need for more adequate facilities for the Arts at Rose High School, several students have set out to make the public aware of the problem. As Drama Club President and an active participant in dramatic productions at Rose High, I am particularly aware of the problems presented by performing in a gymnasium, which is the school's only "Arts" facility.

Musicians, dancers, artists, actors and those interested in the technical aspects of the Arts have no adequate place to practice or display their skills. Acoustics in the gym are horrible and make projection across such a vast area nearly impossible. Also, the monumental task of setting up and dismantling the set, and the sound and lighting equipment must be accomplished the very week of performances.

Furthermore, because there are no means by which to secure the stage or sound and lighting equipment, the sets are dangerous and production costs are increased radically by the purchases that must be made in order to improvise an "auditorium." Incidentally, the bulk of these production costs is borne by the students and teachers participating in the production, and the advertisers and sponsors they are able to get. The Drama Department doesn't even get a token fund in production appropriations.

Obviously, as illustrated by the previous examples and many still unmentioned problems, the Arts facilities at Rose High and many other area schools, including Aycock, are grossly inadequate. Therefore, I would like for the public to be aware of the problems that exist and I hope that any possible actions to relieve the situation will be taken. The need for an auditorium has been recognized and students are willing to work for it. I sincerely hope that public sentiment is with those students who wish to pursue careers in the Arts, and who need the encouragement, education, and experience not currently being provided at Rose High.

Strength For Today

THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD

People often complain today that the Church has become a very imperfect institution because present-day Christians have so many human faults.

One answer to this criticism is that the good old days, when things were presumably so much better, were no more a reality in the Church than anywhere else. The most creative period in the history of the Church was during the first three centuries of its growth. Yet among the original apostles

THEIR ONLY REAL POWER BASE!

Soldiers On Welfare

WASHINGTON — All week long we have been hearing talk of budget cuts. Let me pluck what appears to be one solid fact from the flood of confusing figures: Defense spending, net, will fall short of defense needs in fiscal '81; and more to the immediate point, nothing significant will be done toward meeting the most critical defense need of all.

That need is to preserve the armed forces from further deterioration. I cannot put the matter more simply. I wish I could put it more alarmingly.

Almost unnoticed by the press and by the Congress, the several armed services are suffering in ways that threaten disaster. A part of the decline is intangible and perhaps immeasurable; this is the decline in morale. But there is nothing intangible in the appalling decline in rates of re-enlistment. What was a trickle has become a torrent. With every day that passes the armed services are losing the trained and experienced personnel on whom our national defense depends.

The situation defies understanding. On Capitol Hill, budget makers talk of a new armored troop carrier, a tank-hunting helicopter, a new anti-aircraft missile. There is much discussion of the M-X missile. Last month the Navy launched a prodigious aircraft carrier. In the most casual fashion, billions are added or subtracted for weapons systems, aircraft procurement, fuel and materiel.

But when it comes to the matter of manpower, one hears almost no talk at all. Where are the noncoms to man the new ships? Where are the mechanics to service the aircraft? Where are the highly skilled technicians to service the missiles? They are leaving in droves.

Former Defense Secretary Melvin Laird, writing for the American Enterprise Institute, recently laid out the facts. Approximately 30 percent of males enlisting do not even complete their first term of enlistment. For the past four years, the services have been losing an average of more than 75 percent of those completing their first enlistment. In 1979, the Marine Corps was able to hold fewer than 10 percent of its first-terms.

The picture is even more shocking in terms of second- and third-term personnel. "These individuals," Laird notes, "are irreplaceable." They form the backbone of the non-commissioned officers' cadre and they provide the technological skills to operate and maintain the weapons systems. They are disappearing in record numbers.

"None of the services is currently retaining more than 60 percent of its second-termers. Over the past few years, the second-term retention rate in the Air Force declined from 75 to 59 percent, in the Navy from 64 to 45 percent, and in the Marine Corps from 47 to 45 percent...As a result, the armed forces have a shortage of more than 70,000 non-commissioned officers. The Army alone has a shortfall of more than 46,000, the Navy 20,000, the Marine Corps 5,000 and the Air Force 3,000."

What accounts for this hemorrhage? Money. That is the long and the short of it. The pay scales and allowances of enlisted personnel have lagged so far behind the cost of living that thousands of service families now qualify for food stamps.

Allowances for offbase family housing are wildly unrealistic. The service family that is transferred across the country may be reimbursed for barely one-sixth of its out-of-pocket moving expenses. The quality and coverage of medical care of dependents steadily declines. Is it any wonder that thousands of servicemen are opting out?

The revised budget for fiscal '81 will provide a small measure of relief. A 7.5 percent increase in pay and allowances is in prospect. An additional $122 million is proposed for moving expenses. Single persons overseas may get a cost-of-living allowance, though Congress has rejected such an incentive in the past. Otherwise, the bleak outlook is for more of the same. A $134-billion defense budget may be pound-wise. I doubt it. But in its treatment of men and women in uniform, the budget is terribly, dangerously, penny-foolish.

Additives In Food Products

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

There's more to most food products today than meets the eye — or the taste buds — and increased attention is being focused on the additives that can change the appearance and flavor of what we eat.

In an effort to clear up some of the confusion surrounding the thousands of extras in the U.S. diet, the Food and Drug Administration has issued a leaflet, "More Than You Ever Thought You Would Know About Food Additives." It is available, at no cost, from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 545H, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

Many people think "additive" is synonymous with "artificial" or "chemical." But the FDA notes that the most widely used additives actually are the natural ones

— sugar, salt and corn syrup. "A food additive is any substance that becomes part of a food product when added, either directly or indirectly," the FDA says.

The agency says more than 2,500 substances are deliberately added to foods today. An additional 10,000 substances wind up in various foods unintentionally, through processing, packaging or storage.

Some consumer groups argue that there are too many additives in food. They contend that the additives, even if safe, are unnecessary. Manufacturers, on the other hand, say buyers would not recognize many of their favorite products if it were not for additives.

By law, the names of additives must be included in the list of ingredients on food products, although general terms — "artificially

Looking For Classic Ploy

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — If Sen. Edward M. Kennedy can topple President Carter in the remaining big-state primary elections, his meager prospect for capturing the Democratic presidential nomination depends on a classic ploy in American party politics: a procedural fight on the convention floor.

Carter's political operatives are confident they will have more than enough delegates even if Kennedy wins in Pennsylvania, Michigan, Ohio and California. What worries Carter's men are the tricks that Rick Stearns, Kennedy's canny delegate counter, might have up his sleeve.

He has some Kennedy might seek a floor vote to repeal the present party rule enabling a candidate to elect delegates who abandon their legal commitment to him. If Kennedy enters the New York convention with a string of primary wins, such a procedural vote could break the convention open for him just as the so-called "fair play" amendment did for Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1952.

Ford For VP?

Assuming that the answer will surely be "no," several of Ronald Reagan's political advisers want him to offer the vice presidential nomination to a man he holds in minimum high regard: Gerald R. Ford.

Since Ford did not offer second place on the ticket to Reagan in 1976, turning the tables on the former president would make Reagan seem the more conciliatory Republican. Such a widely-publicized gesture would also make it easier for Reagan to select a conservative he wants for vice president (such as Rep. Jack Kemp) instead of a moderate he does not want (such as Sen. Howard Baker).

But what if Ford does to Reagan what Lyndon B. Johnson did to John F. Kennedy in 1960 and accepts the offer? "That's what worries me," confided one Reagan insider.

Liz Ops Out

A campaign fund-raiser for Rep. Steven D. Symms, who is running against Sen. Frank Church for the Senate from Idaho, was abruptly cancelled when the star attraction — Elizabeth Taylor Warner, wife of Virginia's Republican Sen. John Warner — decided not to help Symms against Church.

Miss Taylor's reason: Church is perhaps the single best friend that Israel has in the U.S. Senate. Miss Taylor, who adopted Judaism as her religion years ago and regularly raises money for Israel, was warned by close friends in the American Jewish community that any help for Church's opponent would be interpreted in Israel as an unfriendly act.

So the fund-raiser, scheduled for the Easter recess, was cancelled with the "official" reason that Miss Taylor was too busy in Hollywood. Symms is now edging into the lead against Church in their classic conservative-liberal confrontation, and Warner will issue a strong endorsement wherever Symms wants it.

Anderson's Third Party
National liberal political operatives with no love for Jimmy Carter are pleading with liberal activists not to promote a third-party bid by Rep. John Anderson on grounds it will surely put Ronald Reagan in the White House.

That is the word being put out by Russell Hemenway of the National Committee for an Effective Congress (NCEC) and Leon Shull of the Americans for Democratic Action (ADA). Both back Sen. Edward M. Kennedy over Carter, but argue Carter is vastly preferable to Reagan. Hemenway has been pleading, with mixed success, for money men to keep their funds out of Anderson's pockets.

A footnote: Kennedy's unexpected wins in New York and Connecticut kept liberal activists in Pennsylvania, site of the critically-important April 22 primary, from abandoning him in favor of an Anderson third-party bid.

Budgetary Politics
President Carter's budget revision was the last straw that persuaded Jerry Wurf to lead his huge government workers union (AFSCME) into Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's corner.

The reason given by AFSCME officials is the revised budget's abandonment of counter-cyclical aid to communities, a pet project of Wurf's. Beyond that, the government employees have an obviously vested interest in keeping government expenditures at a high rate.

Wurf was one of the first prominent labor leaders to endorse Jimmy Carter's 1976 campaign. Wurf hardly knew who Carter was then but, like many United Auto Workers (UAW) chieftains, backed him in the Florida primary to stave off George Wallace.

operating procedure and the sacred honor of the royal and ancient coterie of hostile hostesses for a lone guest to get the table overlooking the bay or the garden, unless it is a freezing cold day and that guest is thinly clad.

Lovers must never be left by themselves. An alert, no-nonsense hostess will always station them in the middle of a circle of chortling conventioners swapping bawdy stories or next to the two purple coltured spinsters with the French poodle in cashmere booties.

On the other hand, business types who come into the dining room with name tags on their lapels and attache cases under their arms, looking suspiciously like they wanted to talk shop, must be given the table next to the banging kitchen door or alongside the silverware tray to test their powers of concentration. A salesman going over his books in a quiet corner must never be left to his own devices if there is a motorcycle gang available for the adjoining table or a 6-year-old's birthday party.

A spit-and-polish hostess can tell at a glance if a patron is in a hurry to get served, so right off she assigns him the same surly waitress handling the bus tour that just came in the door.

I know in advance this will bring the heavens down on my head in a cataclysmic shriek of hellions in hostess garb, but it does seem to me that men are much better — more considerate, more inventive, less Prussian — at the job of seating guests in public eateries.

They're All Running For President

What do Ronald Reagan, Edward Kennedy and John Anderson have in common with Elijah Prophet, Grady O'Cummings and Earl "Black Jack" Stevens? They are all candidates for the White House in 1980. Altogether, more than 150 persons have filed with the Federal Election Commission as candidates for Jimmy Carter's job. To file as a candidate, all a person has to do is write the commission a letter, listing the name of the candidate's party and campaign committee, and the bank where campaign contributions will be kept. Most candidates outside the two major parties have little chance of winning. But they're all eligible to run.

DO YOU KNOW — How old must a person be to take office as president?

Took Strongbox But No Money

Thieves, who went to the trouble to take a small safe from Pantana Bob's at 519 Cotanche St. early Saturday morning went to a lot of trouble for nothing, Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning.

The police official, who said entrance to the building was gained through a side window, reported thieves removed the safe from the office at the rear of the building and exited through the back door with the 60-pound strongbox.

Cannon quoted Pantana Bob's spokesman as saying the safe contained no money.

Whether to hold up or not,

and if so, for how long, are problems that seem to bewilder many bridge players. There are times when you should grab the first trick even though you hold only one stopper in the suit, and others when it's right to hold up with two stoppers. How's a poor fellow to know? Well, here's a simple rule of thumb that can be of great help.

When defending against a no trump contract, and there are two key cards to be driven out before the contract can be fulfilled, you should refuse to win the first lead of a suit even when you hold a double stopper. See how this principle applies to today's hand.

Since he was a passed hand, South's jump to two no trump described his hand exactly — 11-12 points, no good four-card major and a balanced hand. North's raise to game, however, on a minimum balanced hand is highly questionable.

West led the queen of spades. Declarer won the king and, not being blessed with X-ray vision, he chose to knock out the ace of diamonds first. East won and returned a spade. Now declarer elected to hold up, but West overtook the spade and continued the suit to force out the ace. When he gained the lead with the ace of hearts, he cashed two spade tricks to defeat the game.

True, declarer could have made the hand had he chosen to play on hearts first, but that observation is strictly Monday morning quarterbacking. Had he followed our rule, he would have made the contract regardless of which suit he attacked at the outset.

Declarer must drive out two defensive cards — the red aces. Even though he has two stoppers in the spade suit, our rule tells us that he should hold up on the first trick. Spades are continued. Declarer wins and attacks diamonds. When East wins the ace, either he has no spade to continue or, if he does, the suit will break 4-3 and pose no threat. Either way, declarer can then knock out the ace of hearts and make his contract with the aid of a club finesse. The opponents will not be able to get more than two spade tricks and the two aces.

Feminist Is Again Loser

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A Mormon church court has upheld the excommunication of feminist Sonia Johnson, who waged a campaign against the church's opposition to the Equal Rights Amendment.

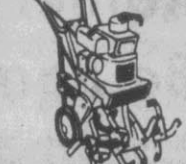

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints maintains that the ERA is a threat to family unity, and a bishop's court in Mrs. Johnson's Sterling, Va., stake (diocese) excommunicated her last December. She appealed the decision to a high council — a local church governing body.

In a telephone interview from her home Monday night, she said the high council convened last month without her knowledge, but waited until after the church's 150th Annual World Conference Sunday to inform her of its decision.

The decision was written March 24 by her stake president, Earl Rouesche, and hand-delivered Monday night by two members of the council.

Katheryn Lewis To Be Board Member

Katheryn C. Lewis, assistant superintendent of the Pitt County Schools, has agreed to serve on the 31-member board that will advise the Center for Women in Educational Leadership. The project is based at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

Established in December 1979, the Center gained initial funding from the Ford Foundation to study obstacles women face when entering educational leadership positions.

Lillian Woo is director of the Center, and Grace Rohrer serves as association director in charge of programs.

One of the aims of the center is to identify, train and place women in administrative positions in North Carolina public school systems — eventually branching out to serve the entire Southeast.

The first session conducted by the Center will be held in Charlotte on April 25 and 26. Sessions later will be held in different areas of the state.

Iran, Iraq Tensions Sharply Rising

By The Associated Press

Tension between Iran and Iraq increased today as Iran's revolutionary regime charged its neighbor with attacks across the border and wholesale expulsion of Iranians. Iran put its army on full alert and ordered its diplomats home from Baghdad.

Tehran Radio said Iraq was amassing 220,000 troops along the 800-mile border between the two nations in a show of strength.

The Iranian army commander, identified only as Gen. Fallahi, was quoted by Tehran Radio as saying his forces were awaiting orders from Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, leader of Iran's revolutionary regime, and Iranian President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr "to move out of their bases and face the aggression."

Khomeini called on "noble Islamic nations" to kill Egyptian president Anwar Sadat and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, whom he called "treacherous parasites," and urged the Iraqi people and army to cut off Hussein's "criminal hands" and overthrow him. The ayatollah said Hussein was "digging his own grave and that of his anti-humanistic and illegal Baathist regime."

Tehran Radio said a full military alert was ordered at Persian Gulf naval and air bases as a result of new sanctions imposed by the United States and the flareup of hostilities with Iraq.

It said Revolutionary Guards were told to report to their stations in Fars, Bushehr and Kharg Island, and that the Iranian people have announced their readiness to fight and sacrifice their lives in the case of attacks by America and Iraq.

Iranian officials also announced that they had ordered shut the Tehran office of the Iraqi news agency (INA) and instructed the staff to leave the country.

Bani-Sadr "to move out of their bases and face the aggression."

Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said Khomeini urged the nation "to stand firm in the face of Iraq."

"If the government of Iraq wants to commit acts of provocation and treason, we will face up to them," the foreign minister added.

Khomeini, Iran's Shiite Muslim patriarch, spent 15 years in exile in the Iraqi city of Najaf, but the Iraqis expelled him in 1978 after a peace agreement with Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi that ended the shah's support of the Kurdish rebels in Iraq.

See Volcano Affected By Percolating Water

By PAT CONNOLLY
Associated Press Writer
VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) —

The water percolating in the crater atop Mount St. Helens may be controlling the volcano's behavior, say two geologists who got the first good look into the mouth of the volcano since it began belching gas and ash nearly two weeks ago.

Water from melting snow and ice runs into two ponds in the 1,700-foot-long crater. James Moore and Peter Lipman of the U.S. Geological Survey said Monday.

They believe the water percolates down under the crater until it encounters magma-heated rock hot enough to flash it into steam, causing an eruption of mud and rock.

It rains back into the ponds, and the cycle starts over again in percolator fashion, the geologists said.

"We think the water, caused by melting of the ice and snow, is controlling the behavior of the volcano," said Moore of Menlo Park, Calif.

"The mountain seems to have settled into a steady state (of behavior)," said Moore, with eruptions caused by steam explosions about every half hour.

"As far as we can see, we expect it will continue to perk along as it has for the past few days," he said.

Scientists flying over the volcano Monday said the massive crater on the summit had enlarged from about 1,500 feet long to about 1,700 feet long and 1,200 feet wide, according to Jim Unterwiesing of the U.S. Forest Service. At a news conference in Vancouver, about 50 miles southwest of the peak, he said the crater appeared to be about 500 feet deep.

Meanwhile, avalanches of ice, snow and rock raked the north side of the mountain Monday, sliding down Ape and Goat canyons from large cracks across the peak.

The 9,677-foot peak that began erupting March 27 continued spewing small amounts of steam and ash and shaking with regular earthquakes, said Don Mullineux, a Survey geologist. But he said there is still no evidence that an eruption of lava or pyroclastic material — a lethal combination of gas and debris — is imminent.

The eruption at Mount St. Helens began after it was dormant for 123 years. It was the first eruption in the contiguous United States in 65 years.

Cuban Exiles Rejoice For Asylum For 10,000

By ANNE S. CROWLEY
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — Chanting "Thanks Peru" and waving flags, thousands of Cuban exiles joined impromptu parades and rallies throughout the city in a day-long outpouring of support for their 10,000 countrymen seeking asylum at the Peruvian Embassy in Havana.

"We're going to keep marching until Cuba is free, until the people at the Peruvian Embassy are free," vowed Pedro Gomez. "What you see here is the beginning of a new revolution."

In hopes of escaping Fidel Castro's communist regime, the huge throng of Cubans mobbed the Peruvian Embassy compound in Havana on Sunday. Havana Radio dubbed them

"common delinquents" and "scum," but Castro said they could leave Cuba if Peru will accept them.

Peru has said it cannot take in all the people; and community leaders in Miami have called on the United States to accept them.

"How can we admit 150,000 Hungarian freedom fighters and 150,000 Vietnamese and Cambodians and not admit the 10,000 Cubans?" asked Miami Mayor Maurice Ferre, a native of Puerto Rico.

"Either we admit them or we take down the Statue of Liberty."

In Tampa, as many as 10,000 flag-waving exiles jammed a city park Monday night to hear Sen. Richard Stone declare in Spanish, "The 10,000 will live. The 10,000 will be able to leave."

Miami's Cuban community formed a parade of flag-draped automobiles flanked by marchers through the Little Havana neighborhood.

Chants of "Thanks, Peru," "Cuba, si; Russia, no!" and "Guerra!" (Spanish for war) echoed above honking car horns.

"Our people are rising up at last," read one sign draped over a car in the procession.

"We had to come," explained one jubilant marcher, 21-year-old Elena MacNamara. She and her sister skipped work to join in a rally. "We had to do something to help bring our brothers over here."

Watching Iranian Diplomats

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI agents kept watch today over Iranian diplomats in the United States to make sure they obey President Carter's order to leave the country by midnight tonight.

The State Department placed precise limits on travel for the 35 diplomats affected by Monday's expulsion order, allowing them to travel no more than two miles from home or work.

The around-the-clock surveillance was aimed at avoiding a repetition of the episode last December when 108 Iranian diplomats disappeared after Carter told Iran to reduce its ranks in the United States.

"We have taken precautions to take care of that problem" this time, said Justice Department spokesman John Russell.

Carter broke diplomatic relations with Iran on Monday and ordered Iran's diplomats to leave the country in retaliation for 53 Americans held hostage in Tehran since Nov. 4.

Officials said 35 diplomats at the Iranian Embassy in Washington and consulates in Chicago, New York, San Francisco and Houston, as well as their families and staffs, were affected by the eviction notice. The embassy and the consulates also remained under guard after being shut down Monday.

the Iranians were reported as the offices were closed, although police sealed off four blocks around the embassy in Washington on Monday to "see how the message (from Carter) was received."

District of Columbia deputy police chief Robert Klotz said police were concerned about how Iranians inside the embassy might react to the eviction order, as well as reaction of demonstrators three blocks away who were protesting Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's visit to discuss the Camp David peace accords.

In Chicago, FBI agents were posted inside and outside the consulate offices on the 79th floor of the downtown Standard Oil Building. All other offices on the floor, including those of Newsweek magazine and Ford Motor Co., were evacuated for precautionary reasons.

At Houston, State Department employee Richard C. Clemmons said he got a "friendly reception" when he accompanied two FBI agents and two federal marshals to the consulate to deliver the expulsion order.

Ali Agah, Iran's charge d'affaires, was visibly angry after being told of Carter's decision to break diplomatic relations.

Radio Pakistan Says Senior Officers Killed

By GENE KRAMER
Associated Press Writer
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Radio Pakistan reported two more Soviet generals and three senior Afghan officers were killed last week when Moslem rebels downed a helicopter gunship in northeast Afghanistan.

The broadcast report said the Afghan officers were a division commander and two brigade commanders. It said the helicopter was shot down in Kumar province about 125 miles north-east of Kabul, and that reports from Afghanistan said the bodies were flown back to the Afghan capital.

The Pakistani government radio reported on Sunday that another Soviet general was killed last week in a rebel attack on the Bagram air base 43 miles north of Kabul.

The report Monday also said an Afghan infantry commander was seriously wounded in a clash with Moslem rebels near Jalalabad, about 85 miles east of Kabul, last Friday. It said 10 Afghan soldiers were killed but did not give rebel casualties.

None of the Pakistani reports could be confirmed.

Radio Pakistan said Sunday that the Afghan guerrillas seized the Soviet air base at Bagram and killed 75 Afghan troops as well as a Soviet general. The Pakistan Press Association said Monday that 25 officers were among the 75 killed.

However, the Soviet news agency Tass denied the base was seized and said there were no "Afghan guerrillas," only "bandit formations that are set up and equipped by American dollars and Chinese yuan on the territory of Pakistan for armed provocations against ... Afghanistan."

"These bandits ... have never seized any Afghan air base in Bagram and could not have seized it," said Tass. "That is something certainly beyond their reach."

The Soviets poured some 80,000 troops into Afghanistan in late December to try to crush the Moslem revolt that broke out after the Afghan communists took over the Afghan government in April 1978. The Carter administration contended that this threatened Pakistan and offered it $400 million in military and economic aid, but President Mohammed Zia ul Haq said that was not enough and turned it down.

Planning Sue Iran Govm't

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The wife of an American hostage in Iran plans to file a $1 billion lawsuit against the Iranian government in federal court this week, her attorney said today.

Angela Belk, wife of hostage William Belk, will sue for damages on behalf of her husband and herself for kidnapping, false imprisonment and mental distress, said her attorney, J. Leeds Barroll.

Mrs. Belk, 24, is staying here with a brother while she awaits the release of her husband, a 43-year-old career diplomat. He and 49 other Americans have been held by Iranian militants at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran since Nov. 4.

"We'll file in the next couple of days," Barroll said. "We just decided to do it...when (President) Carter announced Iranian assets in the United States were being appraised.

No violence or threats from Iranian students and other Iranians holding valid visas are not affected unless they now are outside the country, State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman said.

If they try to return, "their applications will be screened, and they will be refused unless there are extenuating circumstances or they are of benefit to this country," the spokeswoman said.

She said about 150,000 visas now are held by Iranians in the United States and overseas.

Share Millions In Conventions

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The state Council of Convention Bureaus reported Monday that its nine member cities had nearly $66 million in convention business last year.

The nine cities are Asheville, Charlotte, Fayetteville, Greensboro, Hickory, High Point, Raleigh, Wilmington and Winston-Salem.

The council reported that a total of 447,359 delegates attended 1,815 state, regional and national conventions in its member cities. This represented a total of 5,082 convention days and expenditures estimated at $65.9 million, based on a formula used by the International Association of Convention and Visitor Bureaus.

The figures represented a substantial increase over 1978, with total conventions increasing by half, delegates by 9 percent and expenditures by 14 percent.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices moved lower in early trading today, continuing Monday's slide. Heightened recession fears and the worsening situation in Iran were blamed for the drop.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 5.29 to 763.05 in the first 30 minutes of trading. More than twice as many stocks were down as were up on the New York Stock Exchange.

With the Mideast situation helping to raise gold and silver prices, mining stocks were strong again. Benguet class B stock was up ¼ at 9¼ and was the early NYSE volume leader. El Paso Co. fell ¼ to 16 after losing 1½ the day before. Its shipments of Algerian liquefied natural gas have been cut off.

Pan American World Airways, which on Monday was allowed to keep its Miami-London route, rose ¼ to 4¼.

Recent statistics released by the government have made a recession seem more likely and some analysts have reduced their estimates of corporate profits.

Peru Seeks...

Miami Mayor Maurice Ferre, a native of Puerto Rico. "Either we admit them or we take down the Statue of Liberty."

Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla., told several thousand Cuban exiles in Tampa: "The 10,000 will live. The 10,000 will be able to leave."

The State Department said it would consider applications for admission to the United States from those Cubans who could reach the Peruvian capital.

Havana radio described the throng that descended on the Peruvian Embassy last weekend as "vagrants and bums" and said they were welcome to leave the country.

"If the government of Peru wishes to receive in their country all the anti-socials and bums, we will be glad to authorize them to leave our country and also those who are ideologically in disagreement with the revolution and socialism," said the broadcast.

Peru's foreign minister said the five members of the embassy staff were not able to cope with the crowd jamming the suburban estate and asked the International Red Cross to provide food.

The crowd poured into the 20-acre embassy compound after the Cuban police guard was withdrawn because a policeman was killed when six Cubans seeking asylum crashed a bus into the compound gate. Eighteen other Cubans had been inside the embassy since Jan. 1 trying to leave the country, and 16 Cubans have been at the Venezuelan Embassy for months.

He blamed much of Americans' failure to succeed and their consequent unhappiness on childhood training in modesty and humility.

"I'll tell you how you can tell if you've got it — when you're walking in a roomful of friends, do you ever make an apology for yourself? Do you ever lead with your chin? When somebody tosses you a rose or a bone, do you reject it?"

Waitley says he has always felt like a winner, primarily because his father instilled a strong sense of self-esteem in him from an early age.

Waitley was one of eight featured speakers at a positive thinking rally that drew thousands to Dorton Arena in March. Monday's seminar at the Royal Villa was a follow-up to the March rally.

Entrance to the building was gained through a rear door the chief said.

Investigation of the break-in is continuing.

MEETING CANCELED

35 in December, was ordered to leave the country by midnight tonight. To insure that none evaded the order, Carter ordered the FBI to seal off Iran's embassy in Washington and its consulates in Chicago, San Francisco, Houston and New York. Agents were assigned to tail the 35 registered diplomats until they left the country.

—A complete trade embargo, except for food and medicine. However, Carter noted that as a practical matter even food and medical shipments would be skimpy at best. Trade between the two countries, once measured in billions of dollars annually, has diminished to a relative trickle because of the president's previous freeze on Iranian assets and prohibition on oil imports.

—The beginning of a process that could allow the hostages, their families and American businesses to claim some of the $8 billion in frozen Iranian assets in the United States.

—Invalidation of all visas held by Iranians for future travel to the United States. The order will not immediately affect Iranians now in the United States on valid visas, officials said. They did not explain what would happen to those Iranians as their permits to be in the United States expire.

While a large majority of the hostage families contacted expressed support for Carter's action, there was no unanimity.

"Jimmy Carter's out of his mind if he thinks that's going to improve anything," said Alan Graves, son of John E. Graves, 52, the embassy's public affairs officer.

Is Golden Bear Ready For New Life?

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Jack Nicklaus already has experienced two lives as a professional golfer. Is he ready to go for a third? Perhaps.

That certainly is the expectation of many of the more knowledgeable Bear-watchers and the fervent hope of legions of others as the game's international elite prepare to tee it up Thursday in the 44th Masters. Big Jack will be shooting for his sixth Masters title — an incredible thought — at an age when golfers tend to tremble at the sight of a 6-foot downhill putt.

Jack is 40. For 10 years now, he has been bombarded with questions such as "Do you think you have reached your peak?" "When do you think you will hang it up?" "Which of the new young lions on the tour do you pick as your successor?"

Nicklaus has been a patient man. He doesn't jar easily.

But he still is the king, winner of more major championships and more money than any golfer who ever lived, and he insists he isn't ready to abdicate just yet — not by a long shot.

The "Golden Bear," stung by the ignominy of failing to win a tour event last year for the first time since he turned professional 20 years ago, acknowledged that had allowed himself to lapse into some bad swinging habits. He sought out his old teacher, Jack Grout.

"I was like a kid with a new toy," he told his friend, Dick Taylor of Golf World.

He played superbly at the Doral in Miami, like the Nicklaus of old. But a tough, unyielding Ray Floyd beat him on the second playoff hole by chipping in from somewhere north of Duluth, Minn.

A hefty kid of 220 pounds with a crewcut hair style, thick legs, unusually small hands plus heel and back ailments, Jack faced what critics called "six obstacles to greatness."

Big Jack, in his rookie year as a pro, proceeded to beat the revered Arnold Palmer in a playoff for the U.S. Open. Before he was 30, he already was challenging Bob Jones' record of 13 major golf crowns, amateur and pro.

In the late 60s, Jack began questioning his own dedication and incentives. He won no major events in 1968, 1969 and 1970. Flying back from the Ryder Cup matches in England in 1969, he vowed to his wife, Barbara, that he would lose weight. He went on a rigid diet. He took on the image of a Hollywood matinee idol. Then in 1970 his father, Charles, a faithful booster, died.

It was a new Nicklaus that tackled the decade of the 70s — thinner, more relaxed, more resolute. Titles cascaded. He boosted his cache of major crowns to 17, his tour victories to 66, total world conquests to 84, collecting more than $3.4 million in prize money.

Whereas Bob Jones had amassed all his records by the time he was 28 and Ben Hogan did not win his first Open until he was in his mid-30s, Nicklaus has swept through both of those eras, enjoying two lives.

And he's still going strong. Don't count him out.

Past Masters

Jack Nicklaus, now 40, will be shooting for his sixth Masters title when play begins Thursday in Augusta, Ga. Nicklaus, shown in Masters play in 1963, left; 1970, center, and 1978, has not won a tournament since 1978. He won the Masters in 1963, 1965, 1966, 1972 and 1975, but came in fourth in 1979. (AP Laserphoto)

Pitt Tourney Set To Open

The 1980 Pitt County Baseball Tournament will get underway Thursday at 12 noon at Guy Smith Stadium. Four games will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday playing to a full final eight-team placement.

Thursday's contests will send D.H. Conley against New Bern at 12 noon, followed by North Pitt and Washington in the 2:30 p.m. game.

Following that, Farmville Central will play Williamston at 5 p.m. and Rose will wind up the evening against Kinston, starting at 7:30 p.m.

Friday, the 12 noon game will feature the losers of the second and fourth games from Thursday, with the other set of losers playing at 2:30 p.m. The winners of games one and three Thursday, play at 5 p.m., with the other set of winners going at 7:30 p.m.

Saturday, the battle for seventh place will be held at noon, followed by the third place decider at 2:30 p.m. The fifth place contest will be at 5 p.m., with the championship at 7:30 p.m.

All games will be played at Guy Smith Stadium, assuming that the new lights, currently being installed are ready for operation.

Bullets Get No-Hit Victory

JAMESVILLE — After having its 32-game winning streak snapped Saturday night in a 4-2 loss to Currituck, Jamesville rebounded with a Greg Sullivan no-hitter Monday, beating Southwest Edgecombe, 2-0.

The victory moved the Bullets into the consolation championship of the Jamesville Invitational tonight. Jamesville will meet Edenton, a 6-1 loser to Northampton. Currituck, a 4-1 winner over Ahoskie, meets Northampton for the championship.

Sullivan, who went the distance for the no-hitter, struck out six and walked only one. He battled against Cougar William Norwood, who gave up only two hits in a full game. He struck out only one and walked two.

Jamesville got all it needed in the first inning. Clarence Thomas drew a one-out walk and moved to third on Trent Ange's double. Keith Modlin then drove in Thomas with a sacrifice fly.

The Bullets got their other run in the fourth. Modlin reached on an error and took third on Keith Waters' single. Rex Bell was safe on another error, allowing Modlin to score.

Chargers Top Fuquay-Varina

WILSON — Ayden-Grifton's Tyrone Gay pitched a one-hitter — his second of the season — and scored the Chargers lone run as they nipped Fuquay-Varina, 1-0, Monday afternoon in the Wilson Optimist Tournament.

The Chargers, now 4-7, face Reid Ross today for fifth place in the tournament.

After a scoreless first inning against Fuquay-Varina, the Chargers pushed across the only run of the game in the second.

Two errors on the home team's second baseman put Gay on second and then Mike McLawhorn's single scored Gay.

Fuquay-Varina threatened twice after that. In the fifth the home squad got its only hit of the game — a single. A balk and a sacrifice moved the runner to third, but Ayden-Grifton's Chris Strickland caught a pop fly and doubled the runner at third to end the threat.

Fuquay-Varina got a runner to third again in the sixth but the Chargers worked out of that with two quick outs on two fly balls.

Carter Administration Steps Up Efforts To Get Boycott Backing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration has stepped up efforts to win support from the U.S. Olympic Committee for the president's call for a boycott of the Games in Moscow this summer.

Senior administration officials meet today with representatives of the national governing bodies of the Olympic sports, members who were unable to attend a similar meeting last week.

The high-ranking officials met Monday with newsmen to emphasize a point they have been making the last couple of weeks — President Carter considers a boycott of the Summer Games vital to America's national security interests.

Lloyd Cutler, White House counsel, said Carter has sent communications to the 300 USOC officers and members of the House of Delegates who will meet this weekend to vote on whether to send a team to Moscow for the Games.

"As we promised at that meeting (last week), they will be aware that the president considers a boycott is in the national security interest," he said.

Meanwhile, the Soviet news agency Tass said Carter has used sports more "brazenly and cynically" than anyone in Olympic history. His goal, Tass said, is "egoistic political ends."

"J. Carter has used the issue of U.S. athletes' participation in the Moscow Olympics as an instrument for the pursuit of his personal ambition in seeking re-election as U.S. president," Tass said.

Tass commentator Yuri Borisov said in recent weeks Carter's campaign had assumed "an especially crude and vicious character" and that his "exaggerations" about threats to U.S. national security "border on the ludicrous."

Carter called for a boycott in January to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. He has not wavered in his stand as the Soviets have maintained a military presence in that country.

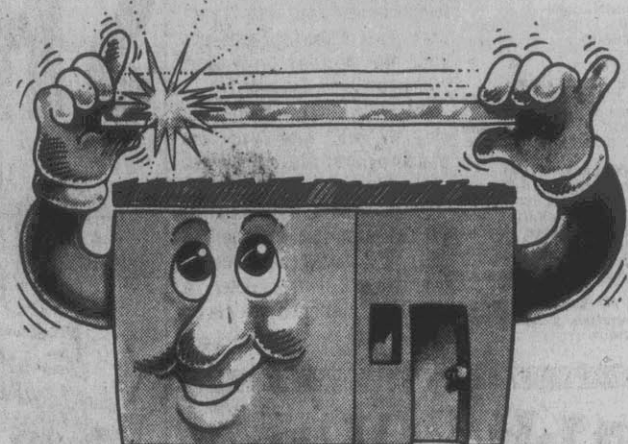

The USOC officers earlier this year had maintained they would support the president's position but have not voted officially, much to the chagrin of the administration, which would have preferred quick action to use as an inducement to other nations to join the United States.

Although the USOC can either vote to send a team or not, there was strong speculation that the House of Delegates may decide to leave it up to the officers to make a decision by the May 24 entry deadline.

"We're calling to their attention their own timetable ended with an action this weekend."

The secret beneath today's finest roofing system is your old roof.

Patching a failing roof is not the answer. It's an ineffective way to buy a very short period of time.

Building a totally new roof is not the answer. It shuts down your operations for literally hundreds of man-hours.

The most cost-efficient solution, by several standards of measurement, is simply to put a new roof right over your existing one. But that new roof had better be a good one. One that has been developed to combat skyrocketing energy and maintenance costs.

We have it. Today's finest roof is the MR-24® system. No matter how thick your present roof may be, the MR-24 roof can cover it quickly, with no interruption of your operation. And at a very realistic price.

The MR-24 standing seam roof system is a continuous, single-skin metal covering consisting of panels that are joined by a unique, patented seaming process for maximum weather-tightness.

As you would expect, the MR-24 roof is installed with up to six inches of fiberglass blanket insulation, with special thermal blocks added to those points where insulation might tend to compress. Add this to your existing roof insulation and the result is a remarkably effective thermal barrier.

The MR-24 roof is recognized as "today's finest roof system." And to put some teeth into what could be taken as just one more advertising superlative, we offer an extended life material warranty for up to 20 years on aluminum and aluminum-zinc coated MR-24 roof panels.

Put both your energy and roof integrity concerns to rest for years to come by reroofing with our MR-24® roof system.

After nine days on the outside looking in, the Los Angeles Lakers are getting a little itchy for their first taste of playoff action.

"We're anxious to play," said Coach Paul Westhead, whose Lakers will host the Phoenix Suns tonight in the opener of their best-of-seven series. "It's been a long wait. I'm excited and ready to get in there and get it going."

While the Suns were beating the Kansas City Kings in a three-game mini-series, the Lakers have been off since March 30. They earned a bye through the first round of the National Basketball Association playoffs by winning the Pacific Division title during the regular season with a 60-22 record. Phoenix came in third, behind Los Angeles and Seattle, at 55-27.

"The rest is advantageous to us," said Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. "It gives us time to heal up and focus. I know we are in good condition emotionally and physically."

According to the form charts, the Lakers are lucky that first game is at home. Los Angeles compiled a 37-4 record at the Forum during the regular season, equalling the best home mark ever posted in the NBA. And in the last six years, Los Angeles holds a 17-2 edge over Phoenix on its home floor.

The Lakers led by Jabbar and guards Norm Nixon and rookie Earvin "Magic" Johnson, finished the regular season with a rush, winning 21 of its final 26 games. Whether that momentum will hold up through the nine days off remains to be seen.

The Milwaukee Bucks find themselves in the same situation as they head into tonight's opening game at Seattle.

Milwaukee was the second hottest team at the close of the regular season, winning 20 of its last 26 games since acquiring center Bob Lanier from Detroit at the All-Star break. But the Bucks have been sitting for nine days, having won the Midwest Division title and earning a first-round bye. Seattle, meanwhile, opened defense of its crown by beating Portland in a three-game series.

"Maybe we won't be favored, but with the big man we can win it," said Milwaukee guard Quinn Buckner, referring to Lanier, who will do battle with Seattle's Jack Sikma in the pivot.

The first two games of the series, tonight and Wednesday night, as well as the seventh game if needed, will be played at the 14,000-capacity Coliseum instead of the mammoth Kingdome, where the Sonics have drawn crowds in excess of 35,000 and where they established an NBA attendance record this season with an average of 21,725. That's because the baseball Mariners have first rights to use of the Kingdome.

The Boston Celtics, another division champion, will come off a 10-day layoff Wednesday night when they host the Houston Rockets in their series opener. Boston beat Houston in all six meetings this season.

The fourth second-round series began Sunday, with the Philadelphia 76ers beating the Atlanta Hawks 107-104. It resumes in Philadelphia Wednesday at 3 p.m.

Strike Cloud Hangs Over Baseball Openers

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

The baseball season opens Wednesday as tradition dictates, in Cincinnati, as more than the usual on-the-field concerns intrude on major league baseball's 112th year.

Hanging over the heads of the 26 major league teams is the worry of a general players' strike called for May 23, a month and a half into the season, unless owners and players can agree to a new basic agreement.

The first game of the season pits Atlanta, which finished last in the National League West with a 66-94 record last season, against the Reds, who won the division with a 90-71 record.

Right-hander Tom Seaver, who wound up with a 16-6 record last season after recovering from a lower back strain, will pitch for the Reds against Atlanta Braves knuckleballer Phil Niekro, 21-20. Starting time is 2:30 p.m. EST, and a capacity crowd of 52,392 is expected at Riverfront Stadium.

The other Wednesday opener has the Toronto Blue Jays, baseball's worst team last season with 109 losses, at Seattle under the Kingdome at 10:35 p.m. A pair of right-handers will do the pitching — Dave Lemanczyk, 8-10, for Toronto and Mike Parrott, 14-12, for Seattle — before an estimated opening-night crowd of 20,000.

Most of the other teams begin the season Thursday. In the National League, Chicago is at New York, Pittsburgh plays in St. Louis, Los Angeles is at Houston and San Francisco is at San Diego. The American League has Baltimore at Chicago, Boston at Milwaukee, New York at Texas, Detroit at Kansas City and Minnesota at Oakland.

Friday, the remaining four teams open their seasons. In the AL, Cleveland is at California, and Philadelphia hosts Montreal in the NL.

Parties to the negotiations resumed talks today with the help of a federal mediator. The Major League Players Association has set midnight, May 22 as a deadline for reaching agreement. If there is no new contract, the players will walk out the next day.

"We don't want to strike, and we don't feel there will be one," said Reds third baseman Ray Knight, the team's player representative. "They set a series of negotiations meetings, and we feel they're going to get together."

Off the field, the hottest issue is compensation for free agents. Owners want a player instead of a draft choice in return for a free agent. Players like things the way they are.

On the field, the main concern could be whether cancellation of 92 exhibition games has allowed players to get fat and lazy.

"If guys can take three or four days off and still perform, that's up to them," said Boston Red Sox Manager Don Zimmer. Zimmer will start right-hander Dennis Eckersley, 17-10 last season, against Milwaukee on opening day. Because of the strike, Eckersley threw only 18 innings in four appearances in spring training.

"My legs are in good shape, my arm is OK, but my mind is not on top of the game," Eckersley said. "One game, though, can take care of the mind."

Army, Marines Dominate Ring

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — The All-Army and All-Marine Corps boxing teams dominated the opening round of interservice boxing action at Camp Lejeune Monday as four boxers from the two teams advanced to Thursday night's finals.

George "Kidd" Killian got the All-Marine team off to a winning start by taking a three-round decision over the Navy's Denbigh Brown.

In the second flyweight bout, the Army's Tyrone Stewart, defending interservice champion, beat the Air Force's Larry Erwin in a three-round decision.

Stewart will meet Killian in the flyweight finals Thursday.

Frank Warren made it two in a row for the Marine Corps when the referee halted the featherweight bout with Irving Rodriguez of the Air Force and gave the decision to Warren 2:37 into the second round.

Warren will meet Army's Irvin Mitchell, who won his match against Alex Fernandes of the Navy.

Other opening night winners were George Haynes of the Marines, who won a close decision over Navy's Jeffrey Geter in the light welterweight class;

James Mitchell of the Army over Air Force's Daniel Morales in the light welterweight class; Ken Styles of the Marines over Guadalupe Rangel of the Air Force in the light middleweight division; James Rayford of the Navy over Kenneth Butler of the Army in the light middleweight division; Larry Lane of the Army over Air Force's Wade Walker in the light heavyweight; and Navy's Elmer Martin over Calvin Jackson of the Marines in the light heavyweight division.

Twelve more finalists will be decided tonight.

Putt-Putt Winners

Second place went to Jimmy Allen and Steve Strickland, who were seven strokes back, but one stroke ahead of Lee Beachem and Danny Harris.

Miller Not Optimistic About Contract Talks

NEW YORK (AP) — Marvin Miller hasn't been optimistic so far over the baseball contract talks.

"We haven't discussed anything substantive since I don't know when," says the executive director of the Major League Players Association.

Miller hoped things would be better today when he met with club owners negotiators and a federal mediator in the talks over a new basic agreement.

They hope to avert a general players' strike set for May 23.

"The mediator is still in the picture," said Miller about Kenneth Moffett, who joined the talks two sessions ago in Palm Springs, Calif. "These meetings are under the auspices of the Federal Mediation Service. Last week, both parties (owners and players) agreed to more meetings — and that's where we stand."

Talks were recessed last Thursday when negotiators agreed to a timetable for seven more meetings over the next three weeks. The first two of the meetings were scheduled for today and Thursday.

The players and owners still present hard-line positions on several issues, including the highly controversial area of free agent compensation.

Management, represented by the Major League Player Relations Committee, wants a player rather than a draft choice as compensation for a team which loses a player as a free agent. Players have resisted the proposal, saying it would restrict their movement from one team to another and reduce the value of the free agent marketplace.

After weeks of bitter disagreements, the players association on April 1 struck the remaining 92 exhibition games. The association decided that the players would begin the season on schedule Wednesday, but set a midnight deadline on May 22 to negotiate a new agreement. If that agreement is not reached, then a strike would begin with games of May 23, the players association said.

Miller and attorney Don Fehr have been representing the players, while the management side has included Ray Grebey of the Player Relations Committee and league presidents Lee MacPhail of the American League and Chub Feeney of the National.

Tornadoes, Winds, Hail Hit Texas To Wisconsin

By ERIC KRAMER
Associated Press Writer
Tornadoes, high winds and 4-inch hail slashed the nation from Round Rock, Texas, to Beaver Dam, Wis., lifting one house trailer 75 feet into the air and destroying more than 100 homes. Two persons were known dead and at least 75 others injured.

Businesses were damaged and a post office, library and drive-in theater were destroyed as the storms hit suburban St. Louis and several small towns in Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas and Wisconsin. The National Weather Service said there were 34 tornadoes in nine states.

A 15-month-old baby in Beaver Dam was found face-down but unhurt in a pile of broken glass after a tornado struck a trailer park. A woman living in the area was pulled from a pile of rubble — what was left of her home — as a tank of liquefied petroleum gas leaked nearby.

In Arkansas, a man said his $500 nest egg was scattered by the wind.

The tornadoes were spawned in a atmospheric battle between temperatures of 101 in Texas and the low 30s in North Dakota, where as much as 6 inches of snow fell Monday.

In the St. Louis suburb of Florissant, 12 persons were hospitalized, one in serious condition, after a tornado struck shortly after 10 p.m., extensively damaging 60 homes.

"We heard the noise. My husband and I each reached for a kid to head for the basement, but the pressure was so strong we just couldn't move," said Janet Eisele. Her house was damaged, but the family was not hurt.

The tornado flattened some houses, leaving only piles of rubble and empty shells. Most houses in northwest Florissant sustained roof damage.

In central Texas, one man was killed, another was injured, 15 houses were destroyed and 12 were damaged as tornadoes struck Round Rock, Lund and Elgin. The man died in his home. "The building collapsed down on him," said Police Lt. Wesley Wolff.

In Oklahoma, a 9-year-old boy drowned when a boat on Foss Lake in the west central part of the state capsized in high winds.

Bernice and Ketchum, both northeast of Tulsa with populations of about 300 each, had property damage estimated at $2 million with four injured and as many as 40 homes demolished.

Damage estimates ranged up to $1 million in the eastern Oklahoma city of Poteau where six persons were injured when a drive-in theater was flattened and a shopping center damaged by high winds and baseball-size hail.

Across the state line in Arkansas, 22 persons were injured as tornadoes hit near Mayflower south of Fort Smith, and nearby Witcherville, Mansfield and Midland.

Reginald Strunk, his daughter Michelle and his niece, Ann, were hospitalized after their mobile home near Witcherville was lifted 75 feet into the air and dumped onto a pickup truck, said Cleo Strunk, Reginald's father, whose home near the trailer was also damaged.

FILES HIS CLAIM — Peter Hartzheim talks with his insurance agent over the telephone after a tornado destroyed his mobile home Monday near Beaver Dam, Wisconsin. The phone line was not affected by the tornado, but the mobile home was destroyed. More than 20 people were injured and a dozen homes were destroyed. (AP Laserphoto)

Accused Puerto Ricans In Tumultuous Hearing

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer
EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Police have transferred 11 suspected Puerto Rican terrorists to the Cook County Jail after a tumultuous hearing on weapons charges in which the suspects had to be pushed or carried into a heavily guarded courtroom.

The six men and five women arrested last week are thought to be associates or members of the FALN, a terrorist group claiming responsibility for more than 100 bombings in major cities in the last six years. One was identified as Carlos Alberto Torres, 27, who topped the FBI's list of most-wanted criminals.

Two men and two women remain unidentified and have been charged under the names of "John Doe" or "Jane Doe."

The suspects, who screamed and shouted Puerto Rican nationalist slogans as they entered the courtroom Monday, demanding to be tried by an international tribunal.

Circuit Judge William A. Kelly presided over the hearing on armed robbery, theft and weapons charges for the 11 suspects. He ordered them transferred to the Chicago Criminal Courts division for a hearing April 15. No pleas were entered.

Later in the day, police loaded the suspects into a bus and, sirens wailing, drove off to the jail in a caravan of squad cars. No incidents were reported in the transfer or at the jail. The suspects were being held in lieu of $2 million bail each.

Torres, who officials believe is a ringleader of the FALN or Fuerzas Armadas de Liberacion Nacional (Armed Forces of National Liberation), scorned the hearing as "hocus-pocus." The FALN seeks independence for Puerto Rico, which now has U.S. commonwealth status.

Besides Torres, the FBI has identified Torres' wife, Marie Haydee Torres, 24; Ida Luz Rodriguez, 29; Dyleia Pagan, 33; Elizam Escobar, 31, and Fred Mendez, age unknown. Authorities on Monday identified a seventh suspect as Luis Rosa, who appears to be in his early 20s.

Torres and eight of the other suspects were arrested Friday by Evanston patrolmen alerted to suspicious activities around a parked van. The other two had been arrested shortly before in connection with a stolen truck.

Police said 19 loaded rifles, pistols and shotguns were confiscated when the arrests were made.

A New Lawyer For Garwood

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A 29-year-old military lawyer has been appointed to represent Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, who is accused of desertion and collaborating with the enemy in Vietnam.

Capt. Lewis R. Olshin was appointed Monday by Brig. Gen. David Barker, commanding general at the Camp Lejeune Marine base. Olshin will replace Capt. Dale Miller and Joseph Composto, who asked to be taken off the case.

Garwood, who has been stationed at the base since his return to the United States last year, was charged after former prisoners of war accused him of collaborating with the enemy by standing guard over fellow Americans at a Viet Cong jungle prison camp and helping the Communists interrogate and indoctrinate them.

His court-martial began recently, and a military board is scheduled to be selected to hear the charges next Tuesday. Last Thursday, at a closed hearing requested by Garwood, Miller and Composto asked to be removed from the case. Neither would comment on their reasons.

Dermot Foley, Garwood's civilian attorney, said for "technical reasons" he didn't want to discuss, "a change became necessary, which was agreeable to all concerned."

Olshin, a graduate of Temple University Law School in Philadelphia, has been a Marine lawyer since 1976.

Garwood disappeared near Da Nang in September 1965 and returned to the United States last March. He was a jeep driver at the time of his disappearance.

'The Gambler' Should Meet Popular Tastes

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "The Gambler," a CBS movie based on Kenny Rogers' hit song, is sort of like a poker hand holding four deuces — the spots aren't big, but together they make a near-sure thing.

The deuces: A simple ballad, "The Gambler," that hit big on the country and pop charts; Kenny Rogers, the fellow who sang it, in his first acting job; a story that's no more complicated than a single-shot derring-do, the romantic myth of the Western hero-gambler.

Together they make a slick, thoroughly enjoyable movie, happily absent of any deep meaning or artistic statement but loaded with good guys, bad guys and a dictionary of Western maxims.

Rogers plays big Brady Hawkes, legendary gambler, large of luck and girth who has, as the song says, "made a life outta readin' people's faces."

Brady Hawkes is everything a hero-gambler should be, except deep-voiced — wounded in body and soul, but willing to play with what he's dealt.

In this case, Hawkes is dealt a couple of genuine black-hats: Clu Gulager, who plays mean Rufe Bennett, who rustled Hawkes' only true love and beats up on the son Hawkes never knew he had; and Harold Gould as rich, evil Arthur Stobridge, bent on compromising a reformed shady lady. Hawkes, valorous soul that he is, sets out from El Paso to rescue his boy from the clutches of bad Rufe in Yuma. On the way, he meets a pair of adventure-creating friends:

Lee Purcell, who plays a Sacramento prostitute on her way back home after learning to be a lady in St. Louis; and Bruce Boxleitner, who plays a bumptious young farm boy looking for glory on the West's card tables.

The movie's not 10 minutes old before Boxleitner has a gun drawn on him and Brady Hawkes gets his first chance to come to the rescue. He tells the gun-toting sharks to find another game and then chastises his young friend for cheating.

"Poker's a trade, son, and an honest one," he says. "It's folks like you give gamblin' a bad name, like drunks drinkin'."

Boxleitner says he wants to be a hot-shot gambler, just like the famous Brady Hawkes.

"You're better off farmin'," says Hawkes.

"That sort of life is short and full of blisters," the lad replies, showing that he, too, can come up with a nifty saying if pressed.

They all get on the train and before the ride is over, you get a couple of tense, big-stakes poker hands, some gunplay and a showdown between Hawkes and Clu Gulager (who has muttered menacingly throughout the movie).

Good fun, this, proof that a commercial and nothing more doesn't have to be uninspired. Deuces can work, if they're put together right.

Television Viewers Enjoy 'Best Seats'

By LAURA RICHARDSON
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — Celebrities, theater patrons and television executives jammed the Bob Hope Theater to see "The Oldest Living Graduate" — the first live dramatic production to be televised nationally in 18 years — but it turned out that television audiences had the best seats.

The theater audience Monday had a good view of National Broadcasting Co. cameramen and their bulky equipment, and they sweltered under the heat of television lights. The best glimpse of the stage was the fuzzy picture on an overhead screen.

Preston Jones' play, part of the late playwright's "Texas Trilogy," was telecast from the theater at Southern Methodist University's Meadows School for the Arts.

Despite the craned necks from the $100 seats, the audience gave an enthusiastic ovation to star Henry Fonda and cast members Cloris Leachman, Penelope Milford, Harry Dean Stanton and David Ogden Stiers.

In the audience were NBC President Fred Silverman, Mary Sue Jones, the playwright's wife, and Hollywood producer Martin Jurov.

Admits Film 'Salty Stuff'

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Paul Newman concedes the language in his new movie "Fort Apache, the Bronx," is pretty salty stuff. But Newman in a picture that is promotes racism? No way, says the actor, despite what two New York newspapers say.

Newman held a news conference Monday to refute charges in stories in the New York Post and the Village Voice that the $13 million epic life in the South Bronx ghetto is anti-black and anti-Puerto Rican.

The movie was "tough on Puerto Ricans, tough on blacks, tough on the neighborhood," he said, but the villains were "two Irish cops who throw an innocent Puerto Rican kid off a building."

Newman accused newspapers of printing portions of the script out of context and said a photograph purporting to show a crew member shoving a protesting citizen was a "phony."

Asked about allegedly racist language in the script, Newman suggested it would sound rather strange to hear "cops in the locker room saying 'Oh, gosh!' and 'Oh, golly!'"

The movie is expected to be released around Christmas time.

Acquires Flying 'Poker Palace'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Country and western star Kenny Rogers, whose hit song "The Gambler" was made into a TV movie, has bought himself a flying poker palace.

"Kenny loves to play cards," said spokesman Guy Thomas. The used BAC-111, about the size of a DC-9, normally seats 80 passengers but has been revamped to hold just 21 passengers, with the extra space going to couches and tables, Thomas said Monday.

Rogers, whose TV acting debut in "The Gambler" is scheduled to air tonight on CBS, will use the plane to fly his band to various concert engagements on upcoming tours, Thomas said.

Army Officer Died Before He Realized The Goals He Had Set

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Like his father before him, Lawrence D. Hill chose an Army career.

But, before he could realize the goals he had set for himself, Hill died in a parachute jump, the victim of sabotaged equipment.

Fort Bragg officials have arrested a parachute rigger on a murder charge in connection with Hill's death. Authorities say the static line on Hill's parachute had been cut.

At 26, Hill had completed Army Ranger school and a tour of duty in Germany. He was an infantry officer in the 3rd Brigade, 82nd Airborne, and was to be named a company commander this month, a Fort Bragg spokesman said.

"He thought it was a good life and he always made it clear to me he wanted to learn everything about it because he intended to survive," Mrs. Hill said.

"He thought it was a good life and he always made it clear to me he wanted to learn everything about it because he intended to survive," his mother Laura Hill said.

"I questioned why he chose to go to Ranger school and he said when you come out of Ranger school you're supposed to be able to survive."

He was born in Frankfurt, West Germany, during one of his father's tours of duty. Before the family settled at Fort Bragg in 1959, Hill also saw Nuremberg, Germany, and parts of California and Massachusetts.

He had made five jumps before he fell 1,200 feet to his death on March 26.

Mrs. Hill said her son had told her the only way he would die was if he didn't see his killer first.

"I knew he was skilled enough to perform (in an emergency), but there was the fear of wondering if my son actually stared death in the face while tumbling to earth and not doing anything about it," said Mrs. Hill.

She said Army officials said Hill knew he was in trouble and that he "worked all the way to the ground. He was trying to find out what was wrong."

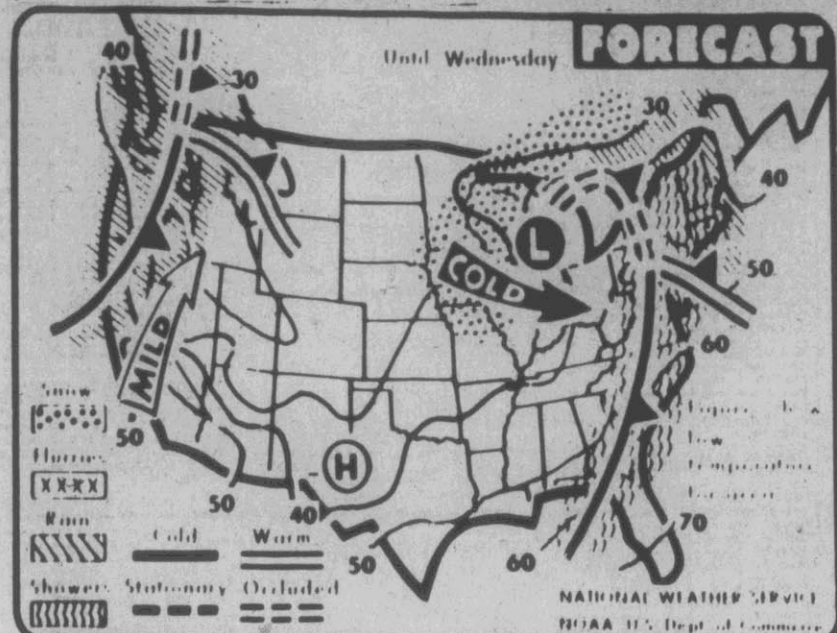

"Having shared a good life with him, I'm going to live with that and let man take care of man," she said. "It's a sad thing he could not blossom into what he wanted to be."

A Winner In Super-Champs

Alton Taylor of Stokes Elementary School was the first place winner for boys 8-9 in the Pitt County Community Schools Second Annual County Wide Super Champ Competition held at D.H. Conley High School recently.

Approximately 125 students representing local programs held across Pitt County were competitors in this test of individual skills in basketball.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain and showers are expected for the forecast period, Tuesday until Wednesday, for Atlantic coast states and parts of the Midwest and Great Lakes. Snow is forecast from the eastern Plains to the upper

Great Lakes. Rain is due for the northern half of the Pacific coast and the northern Rockies. Colder weather is expected for the Midwest, but most areas will be mild. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

Widespread cloudiness and numerous showers occurred over North Carolina this morning in advance of a cold front expected to pass across the state today and tonight.

There was a chance that thunderstorms and heavy showers would accompany the front this afternoon and evening. Skies should be clearing from the west to the east Wednesday but the forecast calls for another chance of showers Thursday.

High temperatures today were expected to range in the 60s and low 70s. They're expected to be mostly in the 70s Wednesday except for the 60s in the mountains.

Occasional showers occurred Monday and during the night over central and western parts of the state and there was a wide range of high temperatures for the day.

Boone had one of the coolest readings, a high of 56, while New Bern was one of the warmest spots with a high of 72 degrees.

Energy-Saving Plan Launched

Announcement of a new energy conservation program by Greenville Utilities officials highlighted the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors Energy Awareness program today, as the board launched its celebration of nationwide Private Property Week and the Make America Better campaign.

The Energy Check and Awards Program will set up priorities for more energy-efficient existing homes and will be a companion program for Greenville Utilities' E-300 Program for new construction, said Energy Projects Coordinator Phil Morin.

"We designed the program for homeowners who want to conserve energy for the future, lower home heating and cooling costs and enhance the resale value of their homes," said Morin. He explained that the voluntary program establishes standards for such energy-related home items as weatherstripping, caulking, hot water heaters and insulation. The program will provide certificates to homeowners as they reach certain levels of energy efficiency.

"These awards," Morin said, are given to the house, so the energy efficiency level can be substantiated even through successive owners." He urged the realtors to cooperate in promoting the program to the public.

Realtors at the meeting also heard C. Leon Neal of the North Carolina Science and Technology Research center talk about theory and mechanics of solar energy in housing. Neal, an energy applications engineer, helped organize the North Carolina Solar Energy Organization.

The Board of Realtors also reviewed the activities they will sponsor during Private Property Week, April 13-19. Activities will include a public information booth at Pitt Plaza, a Home Buyers' Seminar, and a public tour of energy-efficient homes. The tour is co-sponsored by the Greenville Utilities Commission.

Application Due April 15

Pitt County citizens who were 65 years old or permanently disabled on Jan. 1 and who had a 1979 disposable income of under $9,000 are reminded that the deadline for claiming an exemption on their 1980 ad valorem taxes is near.

A change in state law by the General Assembly has moved the deadline for applying for this exemption back to April 15 if an eligible persons failed to claim the exemption during the normal January listing period. Persons meeting the qualifications are eligible for an exemption of up to $7,500 valuation on real and personal property at their principal place of residence.

State law formerly permitted an application any time during the calendar year if the exemption were not claimed at listing time, but no applications can be accepted this year after Apr. 15.

The exemptions apply to persons who were 65 years of age or older on Jan. 1, 1980 or permanently and totally disabled, and who have a household disposable income of less than $9,000. Persons claiming total and permanent disability must furnish a physician's certification.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, APR. 9, 1980

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day and evening to see that your property and possessions are in the best possible condition. Take time to make plans for the days ahead. Maintain a cheerful manner.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) It would be wise to permit a good friend to help you solve a personal problem. Don't spend more money now than you can afford.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study your position in life and know if any changes would be wise to make. Any public duties should be handled cleverly.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Go after personal goals in a positive fashion and you gain them easily now. Sidestep one who wants to slow up your progress.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Confer with an expert who can help you gain a personal aim. Relax at home tonight and keep out of trouble.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Listening and following ideas of associates brings good results now. Take the right steps to improve your health.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Know what your greatest aims are and go after them in a positive manner. Don't waste time on trivial matters.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You have fine ideas that should be put in operation without delay. Come to a better understanding with a close tie.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) The mood at home could be changing rapidly, so be sure that you at least are steadfast. Be careful of strangers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A better understanding about regular routines with associates can be reached now. Steer clear of trouble.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Put more zip into your regular activities and accomplish more. Don't take your mate so much for granted.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Go after your aims in a more sure and up-to-date way and gain them. Planning new activities for the future is wise.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study new systems that will help you advance in your line of endeavor. Take no chances with your reputation now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will possess many talents and the ability to handle projects of large scope, so be sure to send to modern type schools that will help steer your progeny to success. Give good ethical training. Sports are fine here.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union appears to have put a new legal seal on the presence of its troops in Afghanistan with a treaty that could parallel a 1968 accord on the status of Soviet forces in Czechoslovakia.

ANCESTORS
NORTHWOOD, Ohio (AP) — Two children of Danny and Gale Runion — Scott, 11, and Holly, 4 — have 10 living ancestors — four grandparents and six great-grandparents.

The Soviet parliamentary leadership has formally ratified the new treaty, covering "the terms of the temporary stay of a limited contingent of Soviet troops" in Afghanistan. The ratification was announced last Friday, and Radio Kabul said Afghanistan had also approved the document.

Western and Asian diplomats here had speculated that such a treaty was signed in mid-March during a visit to Moscow by the Afghan foreign minister, Shah Mohammad Dost. But there was no confirmation until the two official announcements.

Western analysts here said it was odd that the government-controlled Soviet news media would report the existence of the treaty without an immediate explanation of its meaning.

"They must have a real interest in playing it down because it still might backfire. But at the same time, they obviously wanted to have it on the record," one diplomat said.

Several diplomats said the treaty could further legitimize the presence of Soviet troops in Afghanistan. An Asian diplomat added: "It's clear indication of one fact: they will be staying on there."

They said similarity in descriptions of the Soviet-Afghan and Soviet-Czechoslovak treaties could mean that Afghanistan is being given quasi-membership in the Soviet military alliance. Likewise, they said, it could show that Soviet diplomatic practice has not changed significantly in the past 12 years.

The treaty text was not published here although it could appear in a future issue of the Soviet parliamentary gazette. It presumably covers legal and administrative aspects of the troops' presence.

A brief report on the new treaty by Tass, the Soviet news agency, recalled wording used in describing the treaty signed after the 1968 Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia. In commenting on that treaty, signed in October, 1968, Premier Alexei N. Kosygin said it covered "the terms of the temporary stay of Soviet troops on the territory of Czechoslovakia."

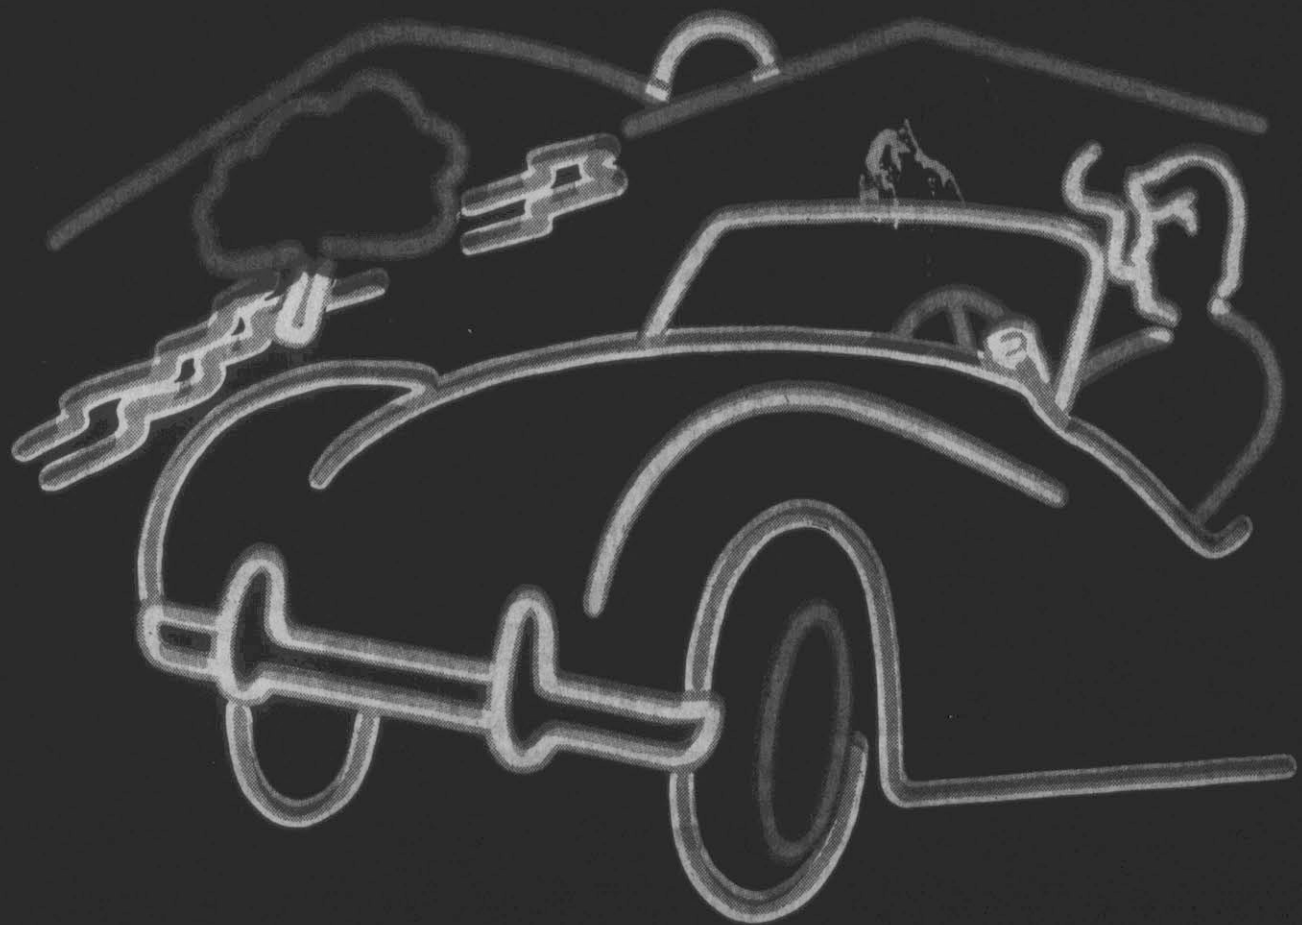

Two days after that, the Soviet army newspaper Red Star said the treaty was designed to prevent "imperialist and reactionary interference" in the affairs of Czechoslovakia.

From the beginning of the Soviet incursion into Afghanistan last December year, the Soviet propaganda apparatus and leadership has maintained the action was made necessary by meddling in Afghanistan by outside "imperialist" forces.

But not all aspects of the two treaties are similar. The Soviet-Czechoslovak treaty was signed as the Russians were preparing to reduce the Warsaw Pact occupation force, estimated at from 275,000 to 600,000 soldiers, to about 70,000 men. The Warsaw Pact forces entered Czechoslovakia to put an end to a liberal communist movement headed by Alexander Dubcek.

An Old Trick By Flim-Flammer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — It was an old trick, but it turned a $20 bill into eighty bucks for a crafty flim-flam artist this weekend.

Raleigh police say a Hardee's Restaurant in downtown Raleigh accepted two of the "$20" bills that had been fashioned by gluing the corners of a $20 bill onto a $1 bill.

A clerk at the restaurant discovered the phony bill in the $20 drawer. A check of cash registers at a McDonald's Restaurant turned up two more of the bills.

Raleigh police have warned other Raleigh businesses to be aware of the bogus bills. They reminded merchants that George Washington's face adorns the $1 billion, while the $20 bill has Andrew Jackson on one side with the White House on the other.
