

Throngs Welcome Expelled Diplomats

By
The Associated Press
Thousands of Iranians shouting "Death to America" provided a heroes' welcome at Tehran airport early today for 34 Iranian diplomats expelled from the United States after President Carter broke diplomatic relations with Iran.

Tehran radio said crowds shouted and threw flowers at the diplomats and their families, led by Ali Agah, charge d'affaires at the Iranian Embassy in Washington. The welcoming committee included Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh and Greek Catholic Archbishop Hilarion Capudji.

Carter announced the break in diplomatic ties and a U.S. economic embargo on Monday after Iran's revolutionary leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, rejected a plan that would have moved the 50 American hostages in Tehran from the hands of the Moslem militants to government control. The hostages today began their 159th day in captivity.

Two of the Americans appeared Wednesday in a broadcast on the government-run Iranian television that billed them as "confessed spies," according to reports from Tehran in today's editions of The Los Angeles Times and The Washington Post.

The Post said the broadcast began saying: "These two are spies and they are going to reveal some shocking things."

The embassy militants identified one of the Americans as Joseph Subic Jr., a 22-year-old Army staff sergeant from Redford Township, Mich. The second man was not identified, but the Times said there was little doubt about the authenticity of the film since English comments were heard clearly from the two men.

In Washington, meanwhile, the Carter administration said it will be the end of the week before it knows if any of America's allies will join the U.S. economic boycott of Iran.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance met Wednesday with ambassadors from two dozen countries to seek support for the embargo.

Hunt Urges VEPCO Go

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt renewed his call today for Virginia Electric and Power Co. to sell its North Carolina power operations and he said a state study has concluded the sale would mean lower rates for electric customers in Virginia as well as North Carolina.

Hunt also released a letter he has written to Charles B. Curtis, chairman of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, protesting a decision by the commission to make its investigation of Veeco a secret probe.

Hunt, in a news conference, said the Public Staff of the North Carolina Utilities Commission found in a three-month study that sale of Veeco's North Carolina facilities "would cause rates for Veeco's remaining customers in Virginia to drop as much as 2 or 3 percent."

Hunt has repeatedly called on Veeco to cease operating in this state and to sell its transmission and distribution facilities in the northeastern corner of North Carolina to Carolina Power & Light Co.

Hunt said the study also showed such a sale "would not result in increased power rates for CP&L's present customers and might even result in slightly lower rates."

Residents of northeastern North Carolina have long complained that their electric rates charged by Veeco far exceed those charged in other parts of the state by CP&L and Duke Power Co.

Hunt said the latest comparison shows Veeco's rates to a typical residential customer using 1,000 kilowatt hours a month are 47 percent higher than CP&L's rates.

Hunt said the study provided "hard, cold economic facts" and constituted "overwhelming evidence" that Veeco should sell its North Carolina operations.

"Every customer in Virginia will benefit if this sale is made," Hunt said.

He acknowledged under questioning that despite his months of attack on Veeco, he had no information that either utility was taking steps to discuss such a sale. But Hunt said he was drawing closer to a decision that legislation ordering such a transfer might be needed.

"As the evidence keeps mounting, I think we get closer and closer to the point where something must be done," Hunt said.

Veeco officials have publicly rejected Hunt's call for the sale of their North Carolina operations.

The federal commission's investigation of Veeco follows a complaint filed by a group of chambers of commerce in the northeast region of the state. The state Utility Commission's Public Staff joined that complaint, which charges that mismanagement of Veeco has led to unusually high electricity rates.

Robert Fischback, director of the Public Staff, said the study's conclusions that the sale would benefit CP&L and Veeco customers was based on a series of complex factors.

For North Carolina customers, Fischback said in an interview, rates could decline because CP&L's operating costs would be spread over a larger number of customers.

Latin American Govm'ts Offer Refuge To Cubans

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Peru's foreign minister said five South American countries agreed today to give refuge to the thousands of Cubans at the Peruvian Embassy in Havana and that his country would accept 1,000 exiles. He said the exodus would begin "as soon possible."

Peruvian Foreign Minister Arturo Garcia y Garcia said the other four members of the Andean Group common market — Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador and Venezuela — would announce their own quotas.

He said countries outside the region also would be invited to participate in the massive exodus of the 10,000 Cubans if the Havana government allows them to leave the Caribbean island.

The decision was taken during an all-night meeting of the Andean Council, a political arm of the common market.

The council said in a joint statement that Cuba was responsible for the massive invasion last week of the Peruvian embassy by Cubans anxious to leave the country, but that "international solidarity" was needed to help the refugees.

Garcia said that other countries had indicated interest in receiving Cuban exiles, but he would not reveal who they are. "Each country will make its own announcement," he said.

Peruvian Foreign Ministry officials said Colombia, Costa Rica and Canada had agreed to take some of the refugees.

They said the embassy staff in Havana had begun collecting the names of the Cubans, and asking them about their backgrounds and why they wanted to leave.

Ministry sources also said a child at the embassy was grazed in the hand by a bullet fired Cuban troops who opened up on a man attempting to drive his car into the 20-acre compound Wednesday.

Cubans flocked to the compound last weekend after the government withdrew its security force because one guard was killed at the embassy on April 1 when six people crashed a bus through the gate.

New Officers For Pitt United Way

The Pitt County United Way honored a retiring official Wednesday and elected new officers to serve the organization during the 1980-81 campaign year.

Joe Tripp, who retired on Dec. 31 after some ten years as executive director, was recognized during the annual United Way luncheon meeting at Greenville Golf and Country Club.

Jerry Powell, campaign chairman for 1977-78, was elected president of the organization for the coming year, succeeding Robert S. Griffin. Powell is executive vice president of First State Bank here.

Griffin and Dr. Thomas Brewer, who served as chairman of the 1979-80 campaign, received gifts, from the United Way in recognition of their work and leadership during the successful campaign. The fund drive exceeded the goal of $351,477 as some $363,000 was contributed.

Powell announced at the meeting that Gene Taylor, vice president and city executive for North Carolina National Bank in Greenville, has agreed to serve as chair-

Head-On Collision

WILLIAMSTON, N.C. (AP) — Five persons were injured this morning when two vehicles collided head-on on N.C. 11 about four miles north of Hamilton, the state Highway Patrol reported.

Trooper Glenn Raby said Bethylee Crouch, 27, of Williamston reported she fell asleep while driving home from her job in Ahsokie. Raby said that when her Volkswagen crossed the center line, it struck a vehicle driven by Alton Brinson Squires, 65, of Hamilton.

In the car with Squires were his wife, Lula Baker Squires, and their two grandchildren, Raby said.

All five persons were treated at Martin General Hospital in Williamston. Raby said all were in satisfactory condition and he did not know if any would be admitted.

Raby said the Squires were driving north to go fishing when the accident occurred.

Math Students Of Rose High Again State Contest Winners

For the third consecutive year, mathematic students at J. H. Rose High School have won first place in the state of North Carolina in the Annual High School Mathematics Examination.

In this, the 31st such annual event, Rose students competed with students from over 200 schools from all over the state to achieve the honor.

Fred Parham led the list of the 62 students at Rose who competed at the local level. He was followed by Mark Grossnickle in second place, Susan Vick in third, Kevin Clark in fourth, and Alayna Keller and Jack Mann tied for fifth place.

Parham also led statewide as top scorer. Other state leaders were Laick Robinson of John T. Hoggard School, Wilmington, second place; Grossnickle of Rose in third place; and John Jaeger of Jordan High, Durham, fourth place. These four will have their names and scores forwarded to the national selection committee to be considered for the United States Olympiads. This committee will select about 100 students nationwide to compete in the national finals in early May.

Schools placing second and third in the state were West Charlotte Senior High and R. J. Reynolds Senior High, Winston-Salem.

The High School Mathematics Examination is given once yearly and is sponsored jointly by the Mathematical Association of America, Society of Actuaries, Mu Alpha Theta, the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, and Casualty Actuarial Society. The State Contest Chairman is Hal B. Phillips, Jr., of Greensboro.

State Governor Visits Newly Chartered WCR

Governor Mary Snow of Charlotte also installed the following officers: President, Mavis Butts; Vice President, Louise Hodge; Secretary, Thelma Whitehurst; and Treasurer, Billie Jean Trevathan.

Mrs. Snow discussed the duties of the governor and said there are seven Womens' Councils of Realtors in the state. Mrs. Snow's husband, Chet, was also a guest.

They were named honorary members of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce by Jack Duffus, regional vice president, North Carolina Association of Realtors.

Mrs. Whitehurst, membership chairman, inducted Ann Bass as a new member and presented a membership pin to her.

Guests present included the Snows, Duffus, Evelyn Bruce, Jimmie Lee, Sara West, Becky McDonald, Gloria Schwidale, Mary Dodson and Rosalie Trotman.

The Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors and the Womens Council will co-sponsor a Home Buyers Seminary April 19, Saturday, 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at Pitt Community College. Its purpose is to educate the public in financing a home, the mechanics of closing and what to look for in an energy efficient home.

A tour of energy efficient homes will be held during the afternoon from one to five o'clock. A report on the seminar was given by Mrs. Lodge.

Mrs. Butts said the next meeting of the council will be held May 14 at the Three Steers.

Dear Abby

One Roommate Too Many In Apartment

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I share a one-bedroom flat with my girlfriend. (She is also a girl. We are both straight.) About a month ago she asked me if her boyfriend could stay over for the weekend since I was leaving town. I said OK.

When I got back, the boyfriend didn't leave. Instead, he started sleeping on the sofa in the living room. Meanwhile my girlfriend was spending about half the night out there with him on the sofa and I had the bedroom (twin beds) to myself.

Now it turns out that the boyfriend lost his job and he is bunking with us — indefinitely. He's a nice enough guy, but it is very crowded with the three of us in this little flat.

He doesn't appear to be looking too hard for a job (he's getting unemployment) and frankly, I am fed up with this arrangement. He has been here exactly 30 days, and he never mentions moving.

How much longer should I let this go on before I say something?

HAD IT IN BUFFALO

DEAR HAD IT: Give him until sundown tonight. Then tell your girlfriend and her boyfriend that there is more of a crowd than you bargained for. The squeaking wheel gets the oil. So squeak!

DEAR ABBY: My brother's only son was killed two years ago. He was only 16, and his parents are still grieving for him. We never mention the boy's name unless they do, because we know how heartbroken they are. Now the problem:

A cousin recently had a baby boy. And what does she do? She goes ahead and names the baby after our brother's dead son. She and her husband thought they were "honoring" the dead boy by naming their son after him. I happen to think it was a cruel and thoughtless thing to do because now every time my brother and his wife hear that name they will think of the son they lost, and their grief will be renewed.

I can understand naming a child for a dead father or grandfather to perpetuate the family name, but a cousin? Please give me your opinion as I, too, am heartbroken.

LOVE STAR STATE

DEAR LONE: You could be mistaken. Perhaps your brother and his wife feel honored that a child has been named for their son. Judge the deed by the intention. I am sure your cousin and her husband wanted to give only pleasure to the grieving parents, but they should have asked first.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I went on a two-week trip last year and hired a woman to stay in our home and look after our children.

After we came home, I couldn't find my favorite pair of earrings. They were only costume jewelry, but I like them and wore them with many outfits.

Last evening my husband and I went to a movie, and as we came out, there was this friend who stayed at our home last year, wearing my earrings! Up until that time I wanted to believe that I had just misplaced them. Needless to say, I was shocked. Shall I ask her to return my earrings? Or should I just wait and hope she reads your column and brings them back?

MRS. A

DEAR MRS. A.: Ask her. But don't expect her to bring them back. Anyone who would steal would probably lie.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I'm always amused by my Dad, who is forever being astounded by what women can do in the field of sports.

He isn't chauvinistic so much as he's a product of his times, when women didn't make double plays and were "swell" to par a hole when the course was miniature and the ball rolled right into the alligator's mouth.

As he is always saying, "Women just can't stand the pressure of sports."

I read him a letter recently from a young girl who read one of my books and was just beginning to appreciate what her mother is all about. She was one of seven children and she said the only thing that kept her mother from going completely whacko was golf. About six years ago, when she was in high school, her mother was playing in a golf tournament. I'll let her tell it.

"Mom teed off and went through six holes before she got a phone call to drive across town, pick me up and take me to the hospital with a broken foot, visit with me, take me home and get me comfortable in front of a TV set. She went back to the seventh tee and finished the first nine.

"She was about to start the back nine, when another phone call led her to the high school to find one of my younger sisters in the principal's office, busted for marijuana in her purse. Mom took her home, reprimanded her, called Dad and a lawyer and went back to the course. Played five holes when another phone call came. Her youngest was a member of a class where eight had just come down with measles and they advised Mom to take her home. She called the doctor, picked up her youngest and a prescription and took her home and put her to bed. She went back to the course where she ached the next two holes and won the tournament . . . just in time to pick up brother from his job where he was just fired."

Sometimes I think it's difficult for men to relate to the pressures of child raising. Watch her concentration as she listens to her son tell her one more time how he lost the money for his music lessons and came up with a "free" ticket to a basketball game. Watch the split decisions as she hands down a decree in favor of capital punishment. Bjorn Borg should have such a backhand!

Ethical Dilemmas Will Be Studied By Nurses

Registered nurses will explore ethical dilemmas in their practice at a conference entitled "The Nurse in the Middle" to be held at the Greenville Moose Lodge on April 15.

Conducted by the North Carolina Nurses Association, the conference is open to all registered nurses and nursing students. Registration begins at 8:30 a.m. and the program concludes at 4:15 p.m. The conference is approved for six continuing education recognition points. There is no fee for conference materials but participants will pay $7 for lunch and coffee breaks.

Typical ethical dilemmas encountered in nursing practice will be analyzed, and support systems for coping with them will be identified. In small groups, participants will bring to the discussions examples of ethical conflicts from their own practice experience.

Conference leadership will be a combination of registered nurses and scholars from the humanities. The scholars will assist participants in viewing ethics as guides for action.

Registered nurse leaders at the conference will include: Ora Strickland, Ph.D., of Greensboro; Nancy Sumner and Cheryl Rachels, both of Rockingham; Janet Campbell, Ph.D. of Raleigh; Mercedes O'Hale and Sally S. Todd, both of Fayetteville; and Ann O'Hale of Chapel Hill.

Scholars in the humanities who will participate are: Clay Stainaker, Ph.D., Erin Malloy-Hanley, Ph.D., both of Raleigh; Loretta Kopelman, Ph.D., John Moskop, Ph.D., both of Greenville; Ellen Ironside of Chapel Hill; Albert Studdard, Ph.D. of Pembroke; and W.D. White, Ph.D. of Laurensburg.

The Greenville conference is the third of three regional meetings. Other conferences have been held in Hickory and Greensboro. The regional conference is partially funded by the North Carolina Humanities Committee.

The North Carolina Nurses Association is the voluntary membership organization for registered nurses in this state. Its purposes are to promote the professional development of registered nurses and improvement in nursing practice, nursing education, and the climate in which nurses practice, in order that citizens receive better health care.

PARK VISITORS

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (AP) — The National Park Service says more persons visited the Great Smoky Mountains National Park during the first quarter of 1980 than in the first three months of 1979. March visits, however, declined.

Blue-Light Bandit Strikes 7 Times

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — After almost a year's absence, a blue-light bandit has returned to strike seven times in the last seven weeks.

Randolph County Sheriff Robert Mason said his department is working closely with the Guilford County Sheriff's Department and has a likely suspect who lives in Guilford County.

But Mason admits law-enforcement officials are not close to making an arrest. They said the matter has been complicated by the possibility there is more than one blue-light bandit.

A blue light-wielding driver, dubbed the blue-light bandit by police, surfaced in August 1978 with a brutal rape near Level Cross. Another woman was threatened with a knife after she stopped for a blue light near Asheboro several months later. A teen-ager was raped in December 1978 after stopping for a blue light in Winston-Salem.

Less violent incidents were reported in Randolph and Montgomery counties, Siler City, Burlington and Salisbury in the winter of 1978-79.

But in March 1979, the incidents stopped and nothing was heard from any illegal blue-light users for 11 months. All recent incidents have been in Randolph County.

Mason said he believes some of the recent incidents were the work of pranksters capitalizing on "a lot of publicity" about the case.

Although Mason said the case is a high priority in his department, a lieutenant assigned to the case said more than a week ago he had not read all the reports of blue-light incidents. The lieutenant also said not all leads had been followed because of a lack of time.

Descriptions of the bandit vary widely and he's been seen long-bed truck to a light blue in crowded residential areas in vehicles varying from a Pinto. He has stopped women and on deserted highways.

Brown Had No Answers

The latest to exit the race for the Democratic presidential nomination is California Gov. Edmund G. Brown, Jr.

Brown made his last stand in Wisconsin, claiming he was the only real alternative to the re-nomination of President Carter.

Alas, it was to be futile. When the votes were counted it was found that Brown was far behind both Carter and Sen. Edward Kennedy. Consequently he withdrew from the race and returned to California.

Through it all Brown pictured himself as a candidate for the future, one who saw the problems we were creating for the environment and for ourselves and one who had new answers.

"We will build for the future, not steal from it," he said on the campaign trail.

He saw himself as "standing on the existential edge," in the Wisconsin primary.

Analysts saw Brown as being done in finally by his switches on such issues as Proposition 13. By waffling he had lost his appeal to both conservatives and liberals.

Brown had another overriding problem. Like most of us he could well outline the problems that face us, exhaustion of our natural resources, pollution and erosion of our natural environment.

He hammered at these things, but like so many who do, he never came up with any real solutions as to how to deal with these problems and still maintain a reasonable quality of life.

Egypt Is Now The Bridge

No major break-throughs are expected to come from the talks, but it appears increasingly likely that settling Middle East problems will more than ever involve the Egyptian president.

Egypt is now the bridge between the Moslem world and the state of Israel, and for that matter, with the United States.

Sadat's efforts will have an enormous effect on the future of the Middle East. If the peace efforts fail, the adverse effects on the world will be incalculable.

THIS AFTERNOON

Priority For N.C.

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — There is "an absolute imperative" for the next governor of North Carolina and members of the General Assembly to get involved in finding solutions to the disposal of toxic and hazardous wastes.

With that strong characterization of the situation, Gov. Jim Hunt has confirmed that this state is moving forward, on several fronts, in seeking solutions to the disposal dilemma.

"I will say that we have to develop in North Carolina, if we are to continue our economic growth, a means of disposing of wastes, including low-level radioactive materials," Hunt said.

He acknowledged that his special task force on waste disposal headed by Science Advisor Quintin Lindsey is currently developing a set of proposals, some of which will require legislative enactment.

"I have not seen those proposals, they are still working on them," Hunt said. But he fully expects them to be ready for action in the 1981 session of the General Assembly.

Essential

A high priority must be placed on resolving the issue, the governor feels. This could become one of the most politically explosive issues for members of that term in office, now being selected in primaries and the November elections.

Hazardous wastes have become an integral part of the operation in a number of high technology industries, and in medical research, both of which are expanding rapidly in North Carolina.

Along with other well-known amenities which industry now looks for in a community (such as transportation, livability, labor force, etc.) firms are now beginning to insist upon a way to dispose of their hazardous waste byproducts, Hunt noted.

A recent series of columns in this space detailed elements of the proposals now in the works for legislative consideration. Among them: changes in state law to allow the state government to purchase by condemnation land for waste disposal purposes, direct involvement of state government and funds in developing incineration methods for waste, and monetary bonuses to reward local communities which agree to permit waste disposal facilities within their confines.

That latter is a major matter since one of the most difficult political stumbling blocks is community resistance to such activities. So far no place in North Carolina has been found willing to embrace a disposal site.

How far will the state go in pushing this matter? "If we are to have continued economic development and the new jobs which that means, and if we are to have the medical research which is so important in our lives, disposal of hazardous wastes is required," says Hunt.

Assistance

Present efforts are directed at determining the ways in which the state can "give assistance" in developing disposal techniques, "but it may go beyond that," Hunt acknowledges.

The Chemical Industry Institute of Toxicology at Research Triangle Institute near Raleigh has been licensed to burn wastes, including radioactive materials, and there are indications that a workable incineration technique is in the offing. The fears of some are that if such a burning technique is put in place in North Carolina, wastes

Other Editors Say 2nd Class Athletes

(Raleigh Times)

From the cradle to the grave, disappointment is one of the bitterest of life. Not one of us escapes its hurt. Is it much a part of living as joy, sorrow, birth and death.

Why then, cannot some of our Olympic athletes, spurred on by the U.S. Olympic Committee's Athletics Advisory Council, accept the fact that not going to the summer Olympics in Moscow is a major disappointment they can and must endure?

After the White House rejected a committee proposal last Thursday that athletes be allowed to participate but not to stay around for the awards ceremonies, members of the committee indicated they may defy President Carter's ban and go to Moscow.

Any athlete going there this summer without Presidential approval goes selfishly and without popular support of the American people. Any gold he might win would surely be second class metal, tarnished by lack of respect for the President as well as by lack of support for the only means at the moment for expressing national indignation at Soviet aggression in Afghanistan.

The government might consider, as a token of its appreciation for athletes' awareness and cooperation, awarding to all U.S. Olympic athletes some type of plaque nothing the unusual circumstances that prevented them from competing.

In the trophy case, such a plaque would, it seems to us, look considerably more honorable than a medal won in selfish disregard for the welfare, pride and prestige of their country when they were called upon to sacrifice, not life or limb, but merely a rare moment of personal pride.

Losing a chance to compete in the international sports arena is indeed a traumatic blow to the young men and women who have trained long, arduously and courageously for their moment in the limelight. But the loss is truly negligible when compared to the millions of lives and limbs lost by other young men and women in defense of their country and the cause of liberty.

VINE AND BRANCH

"I am the vine, ye are the branches."

This was our Lord's statement regarding the relationship between himself and his disciples. From him comes life. The branch must have the vine, or else it has no nourishment. Reagan Needs Talent

WASHINGTON — At some point along the line, whenever the timing seems right, Ronald Reagan will want to shift his emphasis from winning an election in November to forming a government early next year. In this pause before Pennsylvania's primary on April 22, some cracker-barrel speculation may pass the time of day.

Barring sudden illness or major blunder, Reagan has the Republican nomination in his grasp. The former California governor has won 10 primaries, five of them by landslides. George Bush is out of it. John Anderson was never in it.

I happen to believe that Reagan can whip Jimmy Carter in November. If the economic momentum is toward continued gross inflation and high unemployment, Reagan could swamp Carter as badly as Richard Nixon swamped George McGovern in 1972. Contrariwise, if the economic trends are favorable, the election could be as close as Carter-Ford in 1976.

The point has been made before, and will be made a thousand times in the next few months: Reagan's biggest handicap is not his age, but his inexperience in Washington. How is the handicap to be overcome? One approach would be for Reagan to provide a lineup, soon after the summer conventions, of the team he would field in the event of his victory.

His vice presidential choice, of course, must be made at Detroit, and the choice must be made with unusual care. Reagan has said that he would pick a running mate who is philosophically in tune with his conservatism. Political realities suggest that his nominee should be able to help the ticket in the South. Reagan himself has emphasized the necessity of naming a vice president who would be truly qualified to take over the Oval Office in the event of his death or inability to serve. All this spells Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee in my book. Except for the obsessive hostility of right-wingers who still are fighting the battle of the Panama Canal, Baker enjoys a popularity that is wide, deep and deserved.

Assuming, simply for the sake of conversation, that Baker accepts the vice presidential role, what other names come to mind?

My guess is that Reagan would want to find a major position, even if a title had to be specially created, for John Connally of Texas. Restoring a sound economy would be the first and most urgent business of a Reagan administration. Connally is superbly qualified as a take-charge guy in this field, and he has this additional asset: He just might help Reagan to carry the 26 electoral votes of Texas.

William Simon of New Jersey, former secretary of the treasury, is a conservative's conservative. His name in a Reagan lineup would carry weight. And still thinking in terms of fiscal and monetary policy, Milton Friedman of Chicago would be an admirable choice to head Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers. Economist Thomas Sowell of the University of California at Los Angeles would be an appealing figure in a new administration.

Reagan would want to include some top talent from the House of Representatives. Jack Kemp of New York would help the team. So would David Stockman, a 34-year-old ball of fire from St. Joseph, Mich., now serving his second term in the House. Robert Michel of Illinois, Guy Vander Jagt of Michigan, Barry Goldwater Jr. of California — any one of them would adorn a Reagan administration.

Ideally, Reagan's team would include some Democrats for depth and breadth. How about Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia as secretary of defense? Few senators enjoy greater respect than Nunn on both sides of the aisle. John Glenn of Ohio, the former astronaut, could contribute greatly.

The danger in mentioning a dozen names, even in idle conjecture, is that another dozen names get overlooked. Robert Bork of Yale, to mention only one more, would be widely acclaimed for attorney general. My thought is simply that a star-studded Reagan team, ready to form a government, would have political appeal beyond Reagan's own personal appeal. We already know the players in Jimmy Carter's

Iran, Iraq Feud Roots

By ALEXANDER G. HIGGINS
Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The long-standing hostility between Iran and Iraq, smoothed over during the final years of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's reign, has erupted again in border clashes, mass demonstrations and a war of words.

Here is an explanation of why the Middle Eastern neighbors are at it again.

Q. What are the causes of the current dispute?

A. The arguments center on claims to territory, but there are also important differences over religion and ethnic minorities. And the Iranian revolutionary leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, who called Tuesday for the overthrow of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, has a personal grudge. The Iraqi government gave him asylum for 14 years, but expelled him in 1978, after it made peace with the shah, and he went off to Paris.

Q. What are the territorial claims?

A. The hottest issue just now is Iran's occupation of three small islands at the entrance to the Persian Gulf which Iran seized in 1971 from what soon after became the United Arab Emirates. Iran's military bases on the islands could control the shipping lanes through which so much of the world's oil passes. Iraq wants control of the islands returned to the Arab side of the gulf. The Iranian leaders say the islands are Iran's, and it is going to keep them.

Q. Are there any other territorial problems?

A. Iraq wants to renegotiate the 1975 agreement that gave navigation rights in the Shatt al-Arab estuary, the waterway to the gulf on which both Abadan, Iran's oil refinery center, and Basra, Iraq's chief port, are located. Under a 1937 treaty, the border ran along the eastern or Iranian side of the waterway. The 1975 agreement moved the border to the middle of the deepest shipping channel.

Q. What are the religious differences?

A. Both countries are Moslem, and the Shiite sect is in the majority in both. But Khomeini and his forces are Shiites, while Iraq's ruling Baath Socialist Party is based in the Sunni minority. And its leftist secular government is opposed to the theocratic rule that Khomeini has installed in Iran.

Q. What role do the ethnic minorities play?

A. Iran accuses Iraq of supplying arms to the Kurds fighting for autonomy in northwest Iran and of fomenting unrest among the Arab majority in the oil-rich Iranian border province of Khuzestan, which Iraq calls Arabistan. The Iraqis also are Arabs, while Persians are the dominant ethnic group in Iran.

Q. How do the two countries compare militarily?

A. On paper, Iran is much stronger, with 36 million people to Iraq's 12.5 million, 413,000 men in the armed forces compared with Iraq's 212,000, and more and better weapons. But much of the Iranian army may be useless because of lack of maintenance and spare parts. The troops are virtually leaderless. And the regime has generally relied on the militiamen of the revolutionary guard, who have their hands full trying to keep order within the country.

The Rev. Walker

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — The Rev. Robert Walker has come to our house to stay for a month.

At the moment he is out skating on the pond, stroking along with a rather purposeful expression on his face, his arms folded and his right leg cocked behind him as he leans into the wind. The circles in the ice indicate he has just executed a rather fancy caper.

That is how I shall always remember him.

"The Rev. Robert Walker Skating," you see, is a framed print of an art masterpiece that I borrowed free of cost for a month from the fine little public library in our little town of Ridgefield, Conn.

The portrait is by Sir Henry Raeburn of the English school, although he was Scottish, and it came in its own canvas carrying case, bright as a beach umbrella in Duff's "Deauville," which I could have taken home instead. Or a Picasso, a Van Gogh, an Andrew Wyeth — there were dozens to choose from, including some originals by local artists, like the excellent Martha Payne.

But the Rev. Robert Walker intrigued me. There is a pond, frozen still, outside my window and the skating cleric seemed to belong there, although he is installed over the fireplace. Still, he brings the outdoors indoors, which is the way I enjoy skating best anyway, vicariously. The Rev. Robert Walker takes all the exercise I need.

And that look on his face tantalizes me more than the Times crossword puzzle. Is he pondering next Sunday's sermon? Is he skating on thin ice — morally maybe if this is a Sunday spin and such pleasures are forbidden to Protestant divines on the Lord's Day in Presbyterian Scotland? Who is the Rev. Robert Walker anyway?

A three-hour search in the library yielded no clues, although there was much to be learned about Sir Henry Raeburn, who in his day (1756-1823) painted more than 700 portraits.

Raeburn was apprenticed to a kindly goldsmith when he was orphaned 9. The goldsmith recognized the lad's talent for painting in miniature and encouraged him to take up oils.

He was famous by age 22. His subjects emerged full-blooded, pulsing with life and vigor, like the Rev. Walker skating away there so

Bad News Usually With Good

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — It may only be a product of spring or impatience or the human need for hope, but some of the fellows who try to tell us what the future holds seem to be smiling occasionally.

Walter Wriston, Citicorp chairman, sees interest rates tumbling by autumn. Charles Schultz, chairman of the President's council of economic advisers, expects inflation to plunge at the same time.

Even Julian Snyder, bearish publisher of "International Moneyline," declares a peak in interest rates finally is at hand; and that the high rate of inflation will fall sharply by the year's third quarter.

Those who study forecasters, however, always wait for the smile to wear off, and then they listen to the bad news. The bad news is that anything good is accompanied almost always by something bad.

Such as recession and rising unemployment.

Snyder, who feels any drop in prices and interest rates will be temporary, warns that 1979 will happen again. "Become a master mariner of change," he says, "because that is the only certainty."

Schultz told a National Press Club audience this week that signs of a recession were growing, and he conceded that even if interest rates drop sharply the underlying rate will remain around 9 percent.

And Wriston, speaking in Houston, accompanied his forecast of lower interest rates with the reminder that when interest rates fall they generally do so because economic activity also has slowed. What the seers are saying, in effect, is that good news is also bad news; that the United States and a good part of the world are in a mess from which there is no way out except to walk over the hot coals.

Walking over the coals, according to most of the opinions distributed by government, business, financial houses and academe, means doing with less for anywhere from a year to a decade, or even more.

Immediately, it means doing without a new house, turning the thermostat down, using the car less, cutting up the credit cards, trying to pay bills now rather than in the future.

It means a lot more, too, in terms of the family psyche.

It means, for example, that you must adjust to the notion that in a material way things won't get better and better but might get worse and worse, which is something the schools never told you about America.

The notion of less is contrary to an American's view of life. It conflicts with his understanding of self, and the torture is made all the worse by the images of wealth and comfort that are portrayed in almost every publication and on almost every TV channel.

The question is whether Americans can smile in such adversity, especially when almost all the good economic news they're likely to receive, for a while will have a flip side.

When, for example, less inflation and lower interest rates mean fewer jobs, smaller houses, less credit, lower thermostats, and for the time being at least, less content to the American dream of more.

Seek Identity Of A Hijacker

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer
MAMI (AP) — The identity and motives of a quiet, muscular young man who slipped aboard an American Airlines jet in California, pointed a .45-caliber revolver at a stewardess's head and commandeered the plane for a flight to Cuba remain a mystery, the FBI says.

The seven-member crew was safe, back in the United States, Wednesday night after an 11-hour odyssey that took them from California to Dallas to Havana — where the hijacker gave up — and finally to Miami.

"He communicated very little to the crew. We don't know who he is. We don't know why he wanted to go to Cuba, so we can't even speculate. Anything is possible," special FBI agent Arthur F. Nehrass said in Miami.

Even if the FBI identifies the hijacker, described as "a young black man in his early 30s," the chances of extraditing him from Cuba are slim, Nehrass said.

"Traditionally, the Cuban authorities have not returned hijackers, unless they ask to be returned," he said.

The three-man, four-woman crew arrived at Miami International Airport at 9:27 p.m.

"Everybody is safe," said airline spokesman Vincent Modugno. He said the crew members would not be identified until an investigation was complete, and they would not be allowed to talk to reporters.

The hijacker scaled a low wall at Ontario Airport 35 miles from Los Angeles and entered the Boeing 727 at 10:58 a.m. EST, just before 74 passengers were to board the flight to Chicago.

The plane took off 17 minutes later, and after a refueling stop in Dallas, landed in Havana at 5:18 p.m. "When the Cuban authorities boarded the plane, he calmly handed them the gun, butt first," Nehrass said.

First Community Development Project In Farmville Completed

FARMVILLE — Almost simultaneous with the announcement of the approval of a new three-year Community Development preapplication, Farmville town officials have announcing the completion of work done in the town's first Community Development Block Grant project.

Called LIFE 1 (Living Improvements for Everyone — Phase 1), the "single purpose" project employed $273,300 of CDBG grant funds from the Dept. of Housing and Urban Development in the rehabilitation of substandard housing in a three-block area bounded by Walnut, Moore, Wallace and George Streets. As a result of the project, 33 residential structures were brought up to the Minimum Housing Code, improving living conditions in the neighborhood and extending the useful life of the homes. Two dilapidated structures were also removed.

Both owner-occupied and rental dwellings were renovated. Town Administrator Patrick Thomas said that it is important to include rental units in order to have a more complete effect on the neighborhood. He noted that most low-income neighborhoods have a substantial percentage of rental housing and that not rehabilitating these units can leave an uneven effect. Owner-occupied dwellings were, however, given priority consideration. Investor owners were required to agree to several conditions, including a five-year modified rent freeze, in order to qualify for the program.

The home improvements accomplished were made through grants to cover the cost of construction, with a normal maximum of $8,000 per unit. Rehabilitation work was bid by and supervised by the town. Only repairs necessary to bring the dwellings up to Minimum Housing Code and some "basic liveability" improvements were eligible under the program, except that all houses renovated were also weatherized by installation of additional insulation and/or storm windows and doors.

Because of the limited scope of the project, the town was not able to accomplish several desired improvements in the neighborhood, including rehabilitation or removal of several additional houses, street paving and storm drainage improvements. The first phase of the town's recently-approved preapplication for three-year comprehensive Community Development Block Grant funds contains monies to further address these needs.

Thomas noted that, throughout the project, area residents were helpful in providing program feedback to the town by attending and actively participating in public meetings. He recognized the efforts of Project Coordinator John Schofield, Code Enforcement Officer H. P. Norman and Assistant to the Administrator Edwin Thorne. This performance, he said, was important in HUD's review of the town's new application.

Expected To Seek Delay

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A military judge will hold a special hearing Friday at the request of lawyers for Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, who faces charges of desertion and collaboration with the enemy in Vietnam.

Garwood's civilian lawyer, Dermot Foley of New York, is expected to ask at the hearing for a delay in the resumption of the 34-year-old Marine's court-martial.

Garwood's military attorneys, Capt. Dale Miller and Joseph Composto, were removed from the case at their own request recently. Officials did not say why the action was taken.

Brig. Gen. David Barker, commanding general at Camp Lejeune, on Monday appointed Capt. Lewis R. Olshin, 29, to represent Garwood.

Foley is expected to ask that the court-martial, scheduled to resume Tuesday, be delayed long enough to give Olshin time to become more familiar with the Garwood case.

Garwood returned to the United States in March 1979 after spending almost 14 years in Vietnam. He disappeared near Da Nang in September 1965 while serving as a jeep driver.

Missing Plane Safely Landed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Civil Air Patrol called off a search this morning for a plane reported missing. The plane was reported to have landed at Franklin, Va.

The plane reportedly was on a flight from St. Augustine, Fla., to Atlantic City, N. J., with two persons aboard. There was no immediate explanation for the change in the plane's flight plan.

CAP spokesman Bob Farrington said it was last reported at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday when the pilot asked for weather information from the Kinston airport in eastern North Carolina. At the time, stormy weather was reported north of Kinston.

Miami Beach Prepares For 100,000 Britishers

Iranians At VMI Told To Go

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The British are coming! And this resort city is gearing up happily, sprucing and laying in supplies for an expected invasion of 100,000 Britons who could mean $70 million to an economy suffering from a recent tourism decline.

Paul Revere will ride again — this time past the palms of the sunny city — orange juice will flow and a costumed human version of Lolita the performing killer whale will be on hand tonight to welcome the first of the tourists who are to fill hotel rooms during a normally slow season.

"It's manna from heaven," said Ted Griffin, director of Miami Beach's Visitor and Convention Bureau. "This is business that found us, not business that we went looking for."

Intasun, a British travel wholesaler, began promoting Florida vacations after deciding currency exchange rates made the United States a good buy for working-class Britons.

Intasun has contracted with 21 hotels, tying up 6,000 beds every night until mid-December.

In the happy advance shock waves, kosher hotels such as the Crown and Saxony are staying open for the summer, foregoing their customary Passover-to-Thanksgiving shutdown. The Crown has taken out its first-ever liquor license.

The Desert Inn is arranging to serve Watney's, a British beer.

The Sans Souci is building a disco and looking for a British disc jockey. The Versailles reportedly is working up a vaudeville show, the Sea Isles is spending $500,000 on facelift and the Deauville has installed a dart board on its patio.

A good impression is important to Miami Beach, which enjoyed a strong winter season this year but has been declining for a decade.

On March 11, voters approved an ambitious plan to clear 250 acres of run-down property on the island's southern tip for a planned $850 million Venice-like complex of luxury hotels, offices and convention facilities.

Hotel owners are eager to promote new business, particularly during the steamy tropical summer that normally is the off season. Last weekend, Britain's Prince Charles played in a polo match in Palm Beach and was hospitalized briefly for heat exhaustion.

"This is a make it or break it year for the beach," said Marty Rosen, operations director for the visitor authority.

The invasion begins tonight with arrival of the first 330 vacationers. Mayor Murray Meyerson planned to set the scene by dispatching "Paul Revere" on a ride down the seaside hotel row — a week ahead of the 205th anniversary of the real ride, when the British came to the colonies for reasons other than leisure.

When visitors arrive, they are to be guests at a bash that includes free orange juice, rum and tanning lotion served up by bathing suit-clad beauties. They will be greeted by characters costumed like Lolita and Flipper the dolphin.

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP) — The State Department has ordered the seven Iranian cadets at the Virginia Military Institute to leave the country by midnight Friday — slightly more than a month before the cadets, all seniors, were to graduate.

The Iranians, all either ensigns or midshipmen in the National Iranian Navy, were "relieved of duty" at VMI at 2 p.m. Wednesday and immediately began checkout procedures, said Maj. James L. Adams, VMI information officer.

Many of the school's 1,300 cadets were unaware of the Iranians' departure, one cadet said Wednesday night. He said, however, that as the seven were leaving the school after dinner, several cadets gathered and shouted slogans about the Ayatollah Khomeini.

The State Department action resulted from President Carter's order Monday severing diplomatic relations between the U.S. and Iran. School officials said the seven cadets were included in the order because they attend VMI on visas used for Iranian officials, not on visas granted students.

"This step has been taken with extreme reluctance," said a letter that Col. John Gary, professor of naval ROTC, read to the cadets. "However, in light of the fact that our government has broken relations with Iran, for reasons for which you are aware, we can no longer extend to you the opportunity to remain in the United States."

Adams said the students asked questions about the procedure for their departure but made no other comment.

"I'm sure the cadets were upset," he said. "They didn't respond verbally."

"All that I can say is to a man, both Iranian cadets and VMI officials, we're all distressed. They were seniors and would have graduated May 17. The Iranian students are, and will continue to be, members of the VMI family."

"We've been very fortunate at VMI," Gary said. "When (Iranian students) were demonstrating all over the country, our guys didn't say a word. They just continued to march."

"I talked to a lot of guys," said one cadet. "They feel bad (the Iranians) have to leave just before graduation, but still they say something has to be done about the hostage situation."

"Because they spent four years here and were so close to graduation a lot of people feel sorry for them," said junior Mark Hearne, "but there's nothing that can be done about it."

One VMI official who didn't want to be identified called the order "ignorant."

"They can't be tolerant for another 35 days. This strikes me as wasteful and silly. These boys have nothing to do with all that. I recognize the national hard line, but I don't understand it."

"They're just pawns in an intergovernmental contest that has nothing to do with their learning and growth," he said.

The VMI cadets who left Wednesday are among 213 Iranian navy personnel in the United States who have been told to leave. Iranian cadets at

The Citadel in South Carolina they would have to leave the also were informed Wednesday country.

N.C. Is Suing Collection Firm

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state of North Carolina has sued a debt collection agency based in Graham, claiming that it regularly uses illegal service charge practices that undermine franchise collection services.

The suit, filed Wednesday, came in the wake of complaints filed by operators of the state-wide Checkfax collection system, which said it was losing substantial business to Store Securities Co. Both firms are based in Graham.

Filed by the Consumer Protection Division of the attorney general's office, the suit seeks civil penalties against Store Securities and a halt in the alleged illegal practices.

The suit also asks Wake County Superior Court to force Store Securities to refund any improperly collected service charges.

Store Securities and Checkfax specialize in collecting money from customers who have written bad checks to merchants.

Alan Hirsch of the attorney general's office said illegal practices alleged in the suit include adding a service fee to the customer's debt, threatening debtors with criminal prosecution if they don't pay, and swearing out warrants against customers who don't pay.

Hirsch explained that in the case of assessing a service fee violates a federal and state prohibition against third party assessments. Only a store which advises check-writing customers in advance may assess such a service charge, he said.

Hirsch said only the creditor, such as a store, can threaten criminal prosecution and swearing out warrants, in the opinion of the attorney general's office, "is practicing law without a license . . . not in the province of a debt collection agency."

He said only the creditor can take out a warrant.

Local Sorority Meeting Held

The Alpha Nu Chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa, the professional sorority for women educators, held its monthly meeting at the Ramada Inn in Greenville recently. Guests for the evening included Ann Byrd, N.C. ADK president, and Faye Dempsey, N.C. ADK corresponding secretary.

The state officers spoke briefly about their tenure in office. The remainder of the meeting was dedicated to business items. The members voted to send Joline Ivey, the speaker for the February meeting, a $25 check for Girl's Haven.

The upcoming state convention of ADK in Asheville April 25-27 was discussed. The next meeting of the Alpha Nu Chapter was scheduled for May 1.

Business Decline Before Store Fire

NEWTON, N.C. (AP) — A Shelby businessman who is charged with murder in a fire that killed five persons last May was late paying his 1979 sales tax and his business was on the decline, state revenue officials testified Wednesday.

Witnesses from the state Department of Revenue testified that James E. Jefferies, 32, owner of Geoffrey's, a clothing store that was leveled by the blaze, had been asked twice to pay delinquent taxes.

Five people, including four firemen and a city gas employee, died in the fire and explosion.

Jefferies is charged with five counts of first-degree murder, conspiracy to burn and unlawful burning.

Another Shelby man, Samuel Guest, faces the same charges. No date has been set for his trial.

In Wednesday's testimony, Edgar C. Bynum, assistant director of the Sale and Use Tax Division of the Revenue Department, said tax records showed that Geoffrey's sales dropped from $4,654 in December 1978 to $832 in January 1979 and $1,046 in February 1979.

Leon Pollander, a state revenue officer in Shelby, testified that he went to Jefferies twice after the fire to get him to pay delinquent taxes from March, April and May 1979. Pollander said that after Jefferies told him the records had burned in the fire, he filled out a report on those months based on a sales estimate made by Jefferies.

Prosecuting attorneys in the trial are attempting to show that Jefferies deliberately set fire to his store because his sales were down.

Cautious Over Peace Prayers

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Officers of the international Lutheran World Federation, responding to demands of some member churches, have issued a cautious statement on the "deteriorating international situation", calling on Christians to "pray for peace among the nations and for wise, compassionate and just leaders." The resolution does not mention either Afghanistan or Iran by name.

Given Grants To Special Needs

EL PASO, Texas (UPI) — A United Methodist Commission has awarded 11 United Methodist colleges and universities grants totaling $111,995 to develop programs to meet the specific needs of Hispanic, Asian and Native Americans. The grants will be used for faculty and curriculum development and student recruitment.

Carl Stewart Has Problem With Campaign Issues

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Carl J. Stewart Jr. looked a little surprised at the question. Just what, a stranger had asked, are the issues in his campaign?

"Well, that's one of the problems in running for lieutenant governor, identifying the issues," he responded. "They tend to get caught up in presidential politics or gubernatorial politics ... It's hard to get the interest of the voters down to the level of lieutenant governor."

For a candidate in a race in which neither he nor his opponent, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, has shown any interest in a discussion of specifics, it was a pretty frank answer.

Stewart, 43, of Gastonia, the first speaker of the North Carolina House in 100 years to serve a second term in that job, is challenging Green's re-election bid by inviting a comparison of images, personal styles and philosophy of government.

It is a carefully planned strategy that is being played out on television as the showdown — the May 6 Democratic primary — approaches.

While a power after 14 years in the state Legislature, Stewart is being tested for the first time outside his friendly, two-county district.

The image he promotes is that of a young, articulate and progressive candidate, in step with Gov. Jim Hunt and anxious to make the lieutenant governor's office a cooperative part of the executive branch for the first time.

It is to be contrasted, he hopes, with a dour image of Green, an older, rural, conservative legislative veteran who has haggled for years with Hunt and Stewart; who appears less comfortable with modern, television campaigns and the scrutiny of the news media.

Stewart began cultivating the image with hundreds of billboards that went up in March, but mainly with 30-second television commercials that his campaign hopes to run with increasing frequency up to election day.

When he speaks to groups, Stewart recalls an activist's legislative record — introduction of the state's open-meetings law, establishment of a House committee on government ethics, support for establishment of public kindergarten classes and other education issues.

Like Green, he stresses frugality while claiming a share of the credit for last year's pay raise for state employees and tiny income tax cut.

A lawyer who has overcome huge financial reversals, he doesn't mind reminding voters of his humble beginnings in a family of Gastonia mill workers. And to sympathetic groups, he mentions his support for the Equal Rights Amendment.

But the issues Stewart wants voters to remember are those of style and attitude.

"I do believe the lieutenant governor should be a member of the governor's cabinet. He should be one of the policymakers and help fashion the administration's program," he adds. "I believe most people believe the governor and lieutenant governor should work together as a team."

Stewart is quick to point out Green's many battles with Hunt in the Legislature, and says the lieutenant governor has been simply unwilling to cooperate with an administration of his own party. He underscores that point by mentioning Green's discussions last year with Republican leaders who hoped he would bolt the party to challenge Hunt.

"I think he came extremely close to changing parties," Stewart said. "I'm saying that questions his credibility as a Democrat."

Stewart believes the message is beginning to get across to voters. On a recent campaign day in Charlotte, Stewart was enthusiastic about the number of persons he met who said they recognized him from the billboards or commercials.

"This name identification thing is really coming together. You can just feel it," he said.

Stewart says he believes he is about even with Green in support now, and thinks about 50 percent of the voters are still making up their mind.

If Stewart's campaign is fairly sophisticated, however, it is not without its troubles. Some supporters complain that Stewart has refused to trust the political advice of friends, and that he has spent too much time on the details a campaign manager should be concerned with.

The charge, that he has refused to delegate authority, is one he acknowledges. In keeping control over his campaign, Stewart has even arranged much of his own daily schedule of appearances.

As a result, his campaign staff has had difficulty providing reporters with schedules of where Stewart is campaigning — a real liability for a candidate who wants to take advantage of free television news exposure.

Stewart has directed most of his own money-raising efforts too, and while he far outdistanced Green in his initial financial report showing $180,000 in contributions, there are reports he still has had difficulty raising enough money to finance all the television advertising he wants.

There have been troubling reports that leaders of Hunt's campaign have steered their workers away from helping Stewart out of fear of alienating conservatives.

And there are some who believe Stewart began his television too late — that he should have spent more time just letting TV viewers learn his name earlier this year.

Stewart, however, insists that contributions are coming in, that the rough spots in his organization have been ironed out, and that keeping control of details was a principled decision.

"I just refuse to turn my campaign over to others," he said. As a campaigner, Stewart leads a fairly relaxed schedule, often spending time waiting for the next event rather than plunging into unfamiliar crowds to introduce himself.

That is because Stewart believes the battle will be won or lost through television and a loose coalition he is counting on — Equal Rights Amendment supporters, teachers, the elderly, the young.

LOOKING FOR SUPPORT — Speaker of the House Carl Stewart looks for support in the upcoming primary election where he faces Lt.

Gov. Jimmy Green for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor. (AP Laser-photo)

Ex-Soldier Cleared In Killing Of N.C. Woman

LILLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A former Fort Bragg soldier was released from a Montana jail Wednesday after Harnett County authorities dropped a murder charge against him in connection with the 1973 death of a young Harnett woman.

District Attorney John W. Twisdale said he dropped the charge against Richard Wayne "Flea" Fliehler, 27, because of a lack of evidence and because Fliehler passed a lie-detector test clearing him of any part in the murder.

Fliehler had been held in jail in Hamilton, Mont., since March 18 after he was accused of killing Phyllis Ann Bradford of Anderson Creek.

Twisdale said "further investigation revealed that he was not the murderer, and a polygraph test revealed that he was cleared of any planning or participating in the murder."

Fliehler, a former member of the now-defunct Third Reich motorcycle gang, had been held in the Ravalli County jail on a fugitive warrant. He was released after Twisdale notified Montana authorities that no effort would be made to extradite Fliehler.

Eight Injured As Bus Overturned

AHOSKIE, N.C. (AP) — Eight persons were injured Wednesday when a Carolina Trailways bus en route to Norfolk, Va., overturned Wednesday on U.S. 13 four miles north of Ahoskie. None of the injuries were serious.

One passenger, Algie Pierce Jones, 43, of Ansonia, Conn., was hospitalized for tests and was reported in good condition.

According to State Trooper Johnny Lynchworth, the accident occurred when a car in front of the bus signaled for a right turn. Lynchworth said the bus driver, Johnnie Lee Heath, 58, of Chesapeake, Va., told him he drove the bus into a roadside ditch to avoid hitting the car and an oncoming tractor-trailer rig.

Heath was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident.

Patrol Extended By Coast Guard

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — The Coast Guard has resumed its long-range law enforcement and training patrols off the North Carolina coast after receiving word that tight fuel budget restrictions have been eased.

Except for search and rescue missions, all Coast Guard cutter and aircraft operations had been curtailed sharply since April 1 when interim funding for fuel ran out.

Adm. Thomas Wetmore, commandant of the Fifth Coast Guard District, told the North Carolina stations he had been ordered to resume normal operations despite the rapidly rising fuel costs.

GOOD NEWS

Our economy is really very strong, if it wasn't, inflation would not be as high as it is. In fact the reported 18% inflation rate means that there is as much demand for consumer goods as ever. Trying to keep up for this demand and the money to produce these goods has driven the prime lending rate to record highs of 19% or more... THESE FACTS HAVE CONFUSED A LOT OF PEOPLE. But we, at Holt Oldsmobile-Datsun, would like to give you, the consumer, some facts why a new car purchase is a very good and wise investment.

Fact: Federal Exemption. Auto financing is exempt from the U.S. Government's recently announced credit controls.

Fact: No Increase In Interest. Auto financing maximum rates have not increased in 8 years. They, in most cases are far, far BELOW prime lending rates you hear about through the media.

Fact: No Money Shortage. For people with good credit, there is plenty of low rate money available to them through Holt Oldsmobile-Datsun.

Fact: New Car Cost Down. Although inflation is around 18%, None of our cars have increased in proportion with the national RATE OF INFLATION.

Fact: Better Mileage. All of our new car lines have increased gas mileage ratings over past models.

Fact: Now Is The Time. The above conditions about money are true now, but the N.C. Legislature and Federal Government could change interest rates or money availability in the near future. So if you would like to have a new car or truck, get it while the getting is best.

FACT: Best Selection, Best Deals. Right now Holt Oldsmobile-Datsun has a very good selection of cars and trucks along with the honest effort to make you the best deal possible.

Shop The Best, Shop Holt Oldsmobile-Datsun, 101 Hooker Road, Greenville, N.C., 756-3115.

Fliehler's arrest was based in part on a statement by a former motorcycle club member in Fayetteville, who since has disappeared.

Miss Bradford, a Harnett County high school senior, disappeared Dec. 20, 1973, after leaving home to drive a school bus route. Her body was found 11 months later.

The state medical examiner's office ruled that she died of a single gunshot wound to the head.

Harnett County authorities have speculated that Miss Bradford's death may have been linked to initiation rituals by a motorcycle gang.

Twisdale said the investigation had been hampered by publicity. He said the informant, who was "a very material witness for the state," had disappeared soon after newspaper stories appeared.

But, Twisdale said, other leads are now being developed by the Harnett Sheriff's Department.

CAMERA Angles

By SANDY COLTON
AP Newsfeatures

I don't usually like to talk about equipment in this column. The camera magazines have more space and can do a better job. But two new cameras are about to be introduced that I think you should know about and you probably won't read about them in the magazines for another month or two.

Minolta should have on the market some time in April a new 110 camera called the Weathermatic A. In June, the new Nikon F3 will be available.

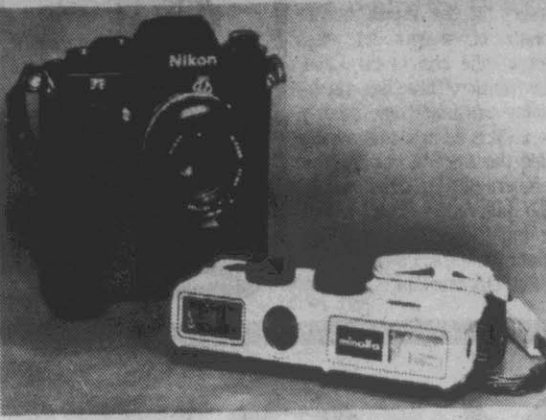

First, Minolta's camera. Usually, you must be extremely careful with a camera on the beach, on the water, in rain or in snow. Not so with the Weathermatic A. The camera, which uses 110 film cartridges, is watertight. You can even shoot pictures under water at depths of up to 15 feet.

It features built-in flash, a 26mm f-3.5 glass lens (not plastic), and focuses from three feet to infinity via a large, continuous control knob with five zone focusing distance symbols. It has a metal shutter and fixed 1-200th of a second shutter speed, enough to stop most action.

Exposure is via a large three-position control knob with click-stops for sun, cloud and flash (match these with the symbols on the instruction sheet you get with your film). The viewfinder is bright, has parallax correction marks, focus settings above the frame, and a low light-use flash warning that also pulsates as a flash-ready indicator.

The built-in electronic flash unit turns on when the exposure-control knob is turned to flash. All of this is powered by one 1.5 volt AA battery. Should the battery go dead, you can still use the camera. You lose only the flash and the low-exposure warning light.

The camera, encased in bright yellow plastic, even floats. It will list for $160 but, with discounting, should sell for somewhere between $99 and $130. Highly recommended as a first camera or a second camera for the active sports person.

NEW CAMERAS: Minolta's Weathermatic A, in foreground, even floats. The Nikon F3, behind it, has a host of new features. Both will be available soon.

For the professional and serious amateur, there's the new Nikon F3.

The first thing I did when I got my hands on this camera was take it to a well-known camera repairman so that we could take it apart and see how well it was constructed. His comments:

"It seems to be engineered with the old tradition in mind. It looks to be heavy-duty with lots of stout gears. With the two-part body castings, the circuitry is well protected. Necessary adjustments should be simple since they seem to have engineered this factor into the camera."

The camera passed these tests with flying colors.

While it does appear to be stronger, the new F3 is smaller and lighter than its predecessors in the F series. One of its prime features is a new behind-the-mirror metering system that gives you exposure automation with any reflex-viewing Nikkor lens made, even during flash photography.

Light that enters the lens passes through thousands of microscopic holes in the reflex mirror, then strikes a secondary mirror and is reflected to an SPD cell for the exposure reading. Much more center-weighted than previous systems, it should result in more accurate readings in more types of lighting situations.

The camera operates in both automatic and manual modes, has four interchangeable viewfinders and a selection of 20 different viewing screens. With any of the optional viewfinders, the following is displayed: (1) liquid crystal display (LCD) of shutter speed with over-and-under-exposure indices for automatic operation; (2) manual exposure indicator; (3) lens-setting apertures, and, (4) LED flash-ready light that also acts as a through-the-lens flash exposure verification signal.

Use of the LCD readout — the device used in many digital watches today — should reduce battery drain considerably. For further conservation of battery power, the camera features an automatic shutoff of the meter after 16 seconds of non-use.

Along with the camera, a new motor drive called the MD-4 is being introduced. There is no need for a separate battery pack with this unit, it's built in.

It has a firing rate of up to six frames per second and when the motor drive is attached to the camera its batteries take over the meter battery functions.

There are a host of other features in both camera and motor drive — too many to go into here.

The camera will cost more than its predecessor — the F2A Photomic. Suggested list price will be $947.50 as compared to $803 for the Photomic. But the motor drive will be considerably less, $380 as compared to $1,028 for the old MD2 with battery pack. Discounted, the price will be cheaper and — good news for the pro who buys both the camera and motor drive — the combination will be cheaper than with the F2.

Open House At Air Base

POPE AFB, N.C. — Pope Air Force Base and Fort Bragg will showcase some of the finest in aerial artistry at this year's open house on the Pope flightline April 12 and 13.

Included in the static aircraft display will be the F-15 "Eagle", one of the top jet fighters in the Air Force inventory.

The air show will feature Pope's own C-130 Hercules airlifters performing aerial maneuvers and airdrops. Aerial performances by the "Blue Angels" Navy Flight Demonstration Team, and precision parachuting by the "Golden Knights" Army Precision Freefall Parachute Team highlight both days' events.

A civilian "fly-in" is scheduled for April 12 with dozens of different types of aircraft participating.

Admission is free. The gates will open at 9 a.m., and all activities run from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. both days.

Focus Course On Business Needs

CHICAGO (AP) — A course designed for the small business owner, manager or future owner concerned with escalating losses due to shoplifting and theft will be offered by Wright College, one of the City Colleges of Chicago, this spring.

The eight-week adult education course, Economics and Problems of Small Business, is co-sponsored by the U.S. Small Business Administration and will emphasize security devices and measures.

Jet Aircraft Designer Is Fourteen Years Old

By KAREN MAGNUSON BETTENDORF, Iowa (UPI) — Fourteen-year-old Scott Braddock spends his free time at his drafting table in his bedroom — researching, poring over blueprints, calculating and refining.

Top design engineers from across the nation advise him on his work through phone calls, letters and tape recordings.

The eighth-grade student knows it will take long hours to reach his goal: To design the fastest and most fuel-efficient business jet airplane in the world.

But if he has his way, his single-engine jet will fly — on paper, at least.

Scott decided last September to design the aircraft for a class assignment in the gifted and talented program of Bettendorf Middle School. Each student was asked to think of an idea for a long-term project.

"At first I didn't know what to do. But then I thought, 'Why not go all the way, so to say,'" Scott said, adding he always has been interested in flying. "I guess it was just a long shot, but I wanted to be different."

He mailed his ideas and a preliminary design to 11 major airplane manufacturing companies and asked for assistance and information. Scott said he was doubtful even one would respond. But five agreed to become advisors for his project.

"At first, some of them were more enthusiastic than me," Scott said. "For a while I was worried I was putting a burden on them. But one guy said it was an educational experience for him! No one has designed anything like this before."

Design engineers advising Scott said they decided to help the boy because they were impressed with his design and his ability to communicate his ideas.

"We thought Scott was a unique young man and we wanted to help him," said

George L. Huggins of Cessna Aircraft Co. "We're proud of him having the courage to undertake such a project... If Cessna Aircraft was doing it, it would take years of design."

"A lot of people his age show an interest in doing something like this, but it's often on a superficial level," said Richard D. Christian of Rockwell International Inc. "He goes way beyond that."

The engineers said Scott's model is unique because it has one engine — a high bypass ratio turbofan, known for fuel efficiency. Similar aircraft of that size have at least two engines.

The 55-foot-long jet — dubbed the Brad 3X-1 — would weigh about 21,200 pounds with fuel, have a range of about 3,400 miles, carry two pilots and 10 passengers and fly 600 mph at an altitude of 55,000 feet.

"It's the highest and fastest jet in the world besides the supersonic," Scott said proudly. Scott subscribes to aviation magazines and makes weekly trips to the library to update his design with the latest technology.

"I don't want to build an airplane that might be obsolete before it ever goes into production," he said.

However, both Scott and his advisors acknowledge the Brad 3X-1 may never get off the ground. They simply want it to fly theoretically.

"We are finding out why it's never been done before. We're running into problems," Scott said.

But the expected snags only make Scott work harder. Scott hopes his efforts may land him a scholarship to a technical college and a future with one of the airplane manufacturers.

He also is thinking about becoming a pilot for the Air Force or a commercial airline and is saving his money so he can take flying lessons when he turns 17.

Church Giving Is Reported Up

NEW YORK (UPI) — Giving to the Lutheran Church in America totaled $27,798,291 in 1979, an increase of 4.1 percent — short of the 5.2 percent increase church officials had hoped for, resulting in budget cuts of $880,000, denomination officials have announced.

Ex-Prisoner Is Model-Builder

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A man with time on his hands while he was in prison, Raymond Roberts is now putting his hands to profitable use — making ships.

Roberts crafts 32-inch miniatures — and smaller ones by request — with matchsticks, glue, nylon cord, match boxes and copper wire.

His parole officer, Linda Merriman, and the congregation at his church, Second Missionary Baptist, helped him launch his model-shipbuilding career. In appreciation, he has given one of his creations to each.

"They, together, supported me and bought me the materials," Roberts, 52, said in a telephone interview. "So I couldn't let them down."

He served 17 months in the state Correctional Rehabilitation Center in Nashville for passing bad checks, and was paroled Sept. 20. He learned the matchstick craft from an inmate.

He hopes to support his wife, who is a substitute teacher, and 12-year-old daughter by selling the ships, and already has some orders. Ms. Merriman said he was paroled partly because of his health problems. He has had a heart attack, is on medication and cannot do demanding physical work, she said.

The parole officer said she learned of Roberts' talent when, during an investigation she did before his release, she went to his home and saw one of the ships. She asked who crafted it, and was told that he had.

"He's a very talented person," she said.

The Rev. Paul McDaniel, pastor at Roberts' church and chairman of the Hamilton County Commission, is another of the boatmaker's backers. McDaniel visited Roberts while he was in jail and talked to him about attending church.

"He had the desire to do it," the pastor said of Roberts' work. "And he's doing it now."

The work is painstaking. Roberts fashions cardboard patterns, shapes them to form and binds them together with masking tape. Then comes the tedious part — gluing about 2,500 matches to the cardboard to form various patterns.

He uses facing — material used in sewing — to make sails, copper wire to create tiny link chains, match boxes for lifeboats and nylon cord for rope ladders and rigging.

His production speed has picked up. He said that at first

Delay Hits HEW Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — It may take as long as a month to get a new judge for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's desegregation case against the University of North Carolina, an HEW official said Wednesday.

Richard I. Slippen, director of the HEW Reviewing Authority, says that based on past experience, it could take anywhere from a day to a month to get the Office of Personnel Management to assign the new judge.

Administrative Law Judge Lewis F. Parker, who had been hearing the case, withdrew at UNC's request after his daughter's application to the university was rejected.

Parker was asked by the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund to reconsider his decision to withdraw, but Parker rejected the request.

Slippen said it was not possible to tell whether Parker's withdrawal would delay the start of hearings, scheduled for May 19, or the rulings on three pending motions filed by UNC.

He said the Reviewing Authority had jurisdiction to rule on the motions, but UNC has asked the authority to stay further proceedings until a new judge is assigned.

HEW has asked that UNC's $89 million in annual federal aid be cut off, charging that UNC has failed to submit an acceptable desegregation plan. The agency also has charged that UNC officials intimidated UNC employees to prevent them from testifying for HEW.

battle and more artillery attacks in the border war with Iraq, while Iraq accused Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini of sponsoring an Iraqi ring of subversives.

Iranian television said an Iranian Phantom jet fighter and three Iranian military helicopters attacked Iraqi helicopters Wednesday over the Iranian border town of Baveisi. It was the first aerial encounter reported in the current hostilities between Iran and Iraq, but the broadcast said no aircraft were shot down.

It reported 15 Iranian revolutionary guards were wounded in Iraqi artillery and rocket attacks across Iran's southwest border.

Radio Tehran said one such attack was made in the Qasr-e-Shirin area of Kermanshah province, and Iranian artillery returned the fire and destroyed an Iraqi border post.

There were no action reports from the Iraqi side.

Tehran Radio also reported that a total of 6,700 Iranians reported from Iraq have crossed the border. The Tehran newspaper reported earlier in the week that 15,000 were being expelled.

Iraq's news agency reported that Iraqi security forces uncovered an Iranian-inspired plan for subversion. The report said members of an Iraqi extremist party confessed they met with Khomeini at the Iranian revolutionary leader's headquarters in Qom and agreed to a plan of "cooperation to carry out broad subversive acts in Iraq."

Khomeini on Wednesday said that the Moslems of Iran and Iraq would remove the "evil Baathist leaders" of the ruling Iraqi socialist party and "consign them to the dustbin of history." And Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said Khomeini's revolutionary regime "has decided to overthrow the Baathist regime of Iraq."

Despite the pro-Soviet Iraqi government's long record of anti-Americanism, Ghotbzadeh accused Iraqi President Saddam Hussein of being "America's agent" and declared: "Any country supporting America in practice must face action similar to that Iran has taken against America."

The two neighboring countries have a history of centuries of enmity, punctuated by periods of truce. The current hostilities began with a dispute over three islands at the mouth of the Persian Gulf which Iran seized in 1971 from the sheikdoms that subsequently became the United Arab Emirates.

The Khomeini regime also accuses Iraq of delivering arms to the rebellious Kurds in northwest Iran and of fomenting unrest among the Arab majority in Khuzestan, Iran's oil province adjoining Iraq. Foreign observers believe that the Iraqis are trying to take advantage of the unrest and confusion which has been prevalent in Iran since the overthrow of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi 14 months ago.

Selecting Jury For Jerry Paul

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Jury selection was under way Wednesday in Wake County Superior Court in the trial of attorney Jerry Paul, who is charged with taking a fee from a client in 1978 without performing legal work.

The trial began Tuesday after Paul, a former Durham lawyer, pleaded innocent to a charge of defrauding prison inmate Fred Mabrey by taking a $1,050 fee.

Paul, 37, was convicted of the charge last year in Wake County District Court and appealed the case to Superior Court.

he needed a month to turn out one ship, but he can now crank out two in a week.

Roberts said that before starting the boatmaking he had been searching for a means of expressing himself and tried his hand at writing poetry.

Of his new vocation, he said, "I love it. It's the best thing I've got going for me right now."

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow is expected in the forecast period until Friday morning, from the northern into the central Plains and changing to rain extending into the Midwest. Showers and rain are due from the central Gulf to the upper Mississippi. Temperatures will range from cool to cold across most of the northern states. Warmer weather is forecast for the southern half. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Sunny weather was predicted for North Carolina today and Friday but the weekend may bring showers and thunderstorms.

The sunny weather is related to high pressure over the Gulf Coast states and abundant sunshine promised pleasantly warm temperatures across the state. High temperatures today were expected to reach the 70s over most of the state with some 60s in the mountains. Similar readings are expected Friday.

There will be a chance of showers or thundershowers Saturday and Sunday but temperatures will continue to be in the 70s except for some 60s in the mountains.

A cold front moved across the state Wednesday with a few showers and thundershowers developing ahead of it. Temperatures climbed to the low 80s in some areas. Raleigh and Goldsboro were among the warmest places with 81 degrees.

Private Property Week Proclaimed

Mayor Don McGlohn proclaimed April 13-19 as Private Property Week in Greenville in conjunction with the national observance.

McGlohn urged local citizens to "join with the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors and the 700,000 members of the National Association of Realtors...in this observance by taking an active part in appropriate and significant programs sponsored by Greenville Realtors and Realtor-Associates."

The mayor observed that "the fundamental freedoms of the residents of Greenville and their fellow Americans are embodied in the concept of 'Private Property Rights-Protect Them.'" According to McGlohn, "this concept is perhaps nowhere more personally meaningful than in the right of each of us to own real property."

He said that, "this cherished legacy, bequeathed to us by our colonial forefathers, carries the concomitant obligation to preserve the land upon which our lives depend."

In his proclamation, the mayor noted that "the fulfillment of this obligation is consistently demonstrated by the commitment and concern of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors in assisting Greenville residents who wish to exercise their rights to own real property."

Since 1956, he added, Realtors have "celebrated an annual observance dedicated to the purpose of promoting deeper public awareness that we not only have the right to own real property, but that we must all assume an individual responsibility to guard this prerogative from any infringement, political or personal."

Would Be Held 'Accountable'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's largest corporations would have to be accountable to the public and would be subject to greater control by small shareholders under legislation introduced in Congress.

The bill was introduced Wednesday in the House by 14 congressmen as part of a nationwide drive to curb corporate power. The legislation would set new restraints on non-financial businesses with more than $250 million in assets or annual sales or more than 5,000 employees — covering the 800 largest U.S. corporations. It would require that a majority of a corporation's directors be independent of the management team or its principal associates in other businesses. It also would require corporate disclosure of information about pollution control, employment policies, worker injuries, principal investors, taxes and political and foreign activities.

Navy Prepares Polaris Pullout

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anticipating the arrival next year of giant new Trident missile submarines, the Navy will start withdrawing the aging Polaris subs from their mid-Pacific base on Guam in July.

The last of the eight Polaris subs will be pulled out of Guam by Sept. 30, 1981, the Navy said. Each Polaris submarine carries 16 missiles with triple warheads and a maximum range of about 2,900 miles.

By DARRELL CHRISTIAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, still waiting for action to go with words of support for its new sanctions against Iran, says it will be the end of the week before it knows how many U.S. allies will join the boycott. So far, none have.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance met with ambassadors from two dozen countries Wednesday, and State Department spokesman David Passage said, "We have been talking with friendly countries and have been consulting with others. We would like to say that all of the replies have been supportive."

But four days after President Carter announced his new sanctions program, the administration has had no more success in eliciting specific promises of allied cooperation than it has had in freeing the 50 American hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Passage said it is too early to expect allied action and predicted responses by the end of the week. But there were indications any decisions in Europe might be weeks away.

The administration is hoping a broad program to punish Iran economically will make tougher action, possibly including a naval blockade or mining of Iran's oil ports, unnecessary.

Moslem militants at the embassy have threatened to kill their captives and burn the compound at the first sign of any U.S. military move against Iran. Passage said the administration still holds the Iranian government responsible for the hostages' safety, but Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said it was doubtful the government could stop the militants from killing the Americans.

The administration is asking its allies to take "parallel steps" to match Carter's four-point program that included cutting diplomatic relations with Iran and an embargo on all trade except food and medicine.

"The suggestion was made that we should try to be as supportive as possible, but no specific proposals were made," said Canadian Ambassador Peter Towe, who was among the group of allied diplomats who met with Vance for 45 minutes. "All of us will be reporting to our governments."

Towe noted that Canada closed its embassy in Tehran after engineering the escape of six Americans in February. "We're no longer importing Iranian oil and our trade is insignificant," he said, adding there was little more the Canadians could do to help.

Britain, West Germany, Italy, the Netherlands and Denmark said they will delay any action until the nine-nation European Common Market reaches a unified position, and Italian Foreign Ministry sources said that might not come before late April.

In Japan, which imports about 10 percent of its oil from Iran, chief cabinet secretary Masayoshi Ito said the U.S. requests are "quite serious and grave."

Passage did not list the countries the U.S. is pressing for support, but in addition to the Common Market members and Japan, the administration is known to have asked Austria, Norway, Sweden, Australia and New Zealand to impose economic sanctions.

Lively Census

So far, 67 families have called the local headquarters to ask for duplicate forms, saying their dogs chewed the originals.

Another dog owner asked that his pet's name be removed from the list of household members on an already-mailed form. However, he said he still considered the dog a true member of the family.

One 7-year-old sent back the family form, filled out in childish scrawl. He listed himself as head of the household. Other forms filled out by children failed to list any parents.

Then there was the panic-stricken lady who wondered if the census form was poisonous. Seems her two-year-old had eaten it.

She was assured it was not poisonous. And, yes, they'd supply a duplicate.

MORE RELIEF FUNDS

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The U.S. Agency for International Development has given $2 million more to Roman Catholic Relief Services for use in East Timor, American Embassy officials say. About half the $12 million thus far given has been in the form of food.

Institute Where Handicapped Kids Discover Hope

By GEOFFREY GEVALT
Associated Press Writer
BALTIMORE (AP) — Gingerly, 16-year-old Christina Sweigert pushes her stiff body out of the wheelchair. Her movements are fragile, delicate, her pain and fear masked by vibrant blue eyes.

Finally standing, she leans on a metal walker in front of her, moving first her left leg and then her right, both locked in cumbersome braces.

An infectious smile sweeps her face as she gains momentum. She looks at one of her therapists. "Don't get me laughing," Christina tells her. "I'll fall."

Christina's eyes are riveted on the chair across the room. Slowly she walks to it, turns and sits down. Her face beams with relief and satisfaction, then crinkles as she allows herself to giggle.

Six months ago, Christina lay in a coma with a serious head injury, the victim of a hit-and-run accident in August. She was unconscious almost four weeks. Doctors held little hope for her recovery.

Last Nov. 7, still in a semi-comatose state, the Hancock, Md., teen-ager was admitted to the John F. Kennedy Institute for Handicapped Children.

She had suffered loss of her motor skills and memory, her learning capacity was impaired and her joints had stiffened and grown arthritic, but within two weeks, her former personality had returned. On Friday, five months after her admission, she is scheduled to be discharged.

Affiliated with Johns Hopkins University, the Kennedy Institute each year treats about 9,700 children, including 430 inpatients. They are among the most severely mentally and physically disabled youngsters in the nation. Some 77 percent of the institute's $9 million annual budget comes from federal grants.

There are 40 such facilities across the country, all affiliated with universities nearby, all offspring of the effort to treat mental retardation sparked by President John F. Kennedy.

What makes the Kennedy facility unique is its "interdisciplinary" philosophy of treatment.

"Contrary to what people think, the developmentally disabled have more than one problem," said Dr. Michael Cataldo, a behavioral psychologist with the institute. "These kids come here with many, many problems which cannot be resolved by any one person."

The Institute uses the skills of professionals in medical and genetic research, therapy, psychology, nutrition, dentistry, special education, orthopedics, neurology, psychiatry and speech and hearing.

For most of the children, Kennedy is their last chance to avoid a life spent in an institution, their last grab at independence.

When they first arrive, they are evaluated for two or three days, then a conference is held to determine what disciplines are needed for treatment.

"Often we have to develop a model for treatment," said Cataldo. "We had a boy here about 8 years old who had cerebral palsy. He had writhing motions all day. He couldn't control them. The way he got around it was he would hook his arms and legs around his wheelchair" to keep them from hitting objects or anyone walking past him.

"When he came in here we didn't have any treatment," Cataldo continued. "It occurred to us to try bio-feedback ... in an effort to get him to learn to relax his muscles."

Using electrodes — to monitor and display his muscle movements — and positive reinforcement, the therapists and psychologists were able to achieve what they had hoped. His writhing diminished.

The Institute involves parents in the treatment, counseling them in medical care and therapy.

"We want the children and the parents to be able to live as independently of us as possible," said Dr. Hugo Moser, a neurologist and director of the Institute.

The adjustment is easier for Christina's family, which includes a retarded 17-year-old son. But Christina worries about her return to the world outside the institute. She worries about school, how she will get around, how she will relate to her old friends.

Her struggle is severe. She is still fighting her self-image. She is battling adolescence. She sometimes is choked by her fear of falling.

Christina remembers nothing of her accident. She remembers leaving her friend's home, walking between the trees to get to her house. She does not remember crossing the street and being knocked 30 feet to an embankment on the other side.

For that, she is grateful. She does not remember her deep sleep, or the confusion and rage that followed her return to consciousness. Nor does she remember her seizures or lying coiled and immobile on the hospital bed, unable to turn over, unable to speak, unable to command her muscles to move.

Of that, too, she is grateful. But she is disturbed at her loss of memory and her problems in relearning.

"My friends will come to see me and start talking and tell me things we did before and say, 'Don't you remember, Christie, don't you remember?' And I don't."

At times, she is calm, displaying a radiant maturity that seems common to many of the handicapped, but at other times she seems lost, fighting her feelings of inadequacy and shame and insecurity.

"You do want to walk," said her therapist. "You do want to walk someday?"

"Yes," Christina answered.

CHAMPION MISSING — Todd Patterson of Taylor, Mich. Poses A.K.C. Ch. Syntifny Piece of the Rock — "Rocky" in an undated photograph. The six-year-old toy poodle, top toy poodle sire in the world, was stolen from its owner's home in Three Rivers, Mich. on March 28 or 29 while the owner was attending a show in Chicago. Snamu, 18-month-old son of Rocky, was also taken at the same time. Both dogs are valued at $30,000; Rocky at $20,000 and Snamu at $10,000. Japanese Agency Eyes On A Dormant Volcano

By MINORU INABA
TOKYO (AP) — Seikichi Miura says he still gets cold chills when he remembers the eruption of Mount Ontake last Oct. 28. If it had happened on any day in summer, he says, thousands of religious pilgrims might have been killed.

As it was, there were no deaths in the sudden explosion of the 9,200-foot volcano that had lain quiet for an estimated 10,000 years since its last eruption. Hot ash showered on the area around Mount Ontake, injuring a few persons and damaging crops.

Ontake is considered sacred by one ancient religious cult, and some 250,000 persons climb the peak each summer, said Miura, an official of nearby Otaki village. "The believers say the gods saved them," he said. Scientists say Mount Ontake's eruption, neither anticipated nor predicted, points up the fact that volcanoes considered dormant or "extinct" can come to life at any time.

"Any volcano that has erupted within the past million years can erupt again," said Shigeo Shimizu, chief volcano expert in Japan's meteorological agency.

Japan, sitting on the unstable "Pacific ring," has more than 200 volcanoes — 8 percent of the world's total — of which 67 are considered active, Shimizu said.

That means his meteorological agency must maintain a staff of some 160 "volcano watchers" with a budget of $599,000 a year to maintain surveillance of the potentially explosive mountains.

The agency keeps a close and constant watch on four — Mount Aso and Mount Sakurajima in southernmost Kyushu island, Mount Asama in Gunma prefecture about 100 miles northwest of Tokyo, and Mount Mihara on offshore Oshima island, south of the capital.

Thirteen other peaks are observed on a continuous basis by agency experts, one to a peak, using binoculars and making at least one climb a year to the top to look for telltale signs of activity.

Fifty other volcanoes, including Mount Ontake, are visited by a team of agency experts once every 10 years.

Shimizu says he has never considered the system of volcano watching to be enough, but "we have to consider the cost. One volcano may not erupt for hundreds or even thousands of years."

The agency says records dating back to A.D. 685 show 60 volcanic eruptions in the islands, with some 19,207 persons killed — more than 1,000 of these in the past 100 years.

The costliest single eruption was Mount Unzen, on Kyushu island in 1792, according to the records. That set off a tidal wave that killed more than 14,000 people.

Volcanologists say science does not have an effective means of predicting eruptions accurately, nor of detecting the underground activities that indicate one is coming.

Professor Daisuke Shimozuru, of Tokyo University's Earthquake Research Institute, says it is thought that Japan's volcanoes are influenced by the shifting of the Pacific seabed toward the Japanese archipelago, creating tremendous subterranean pressure and heat that creates chambers of magma, or molten rock.

Sometimes, but not always, the magma is forced to the surface.

"We don't know how, and we don't know exactly why, either," Shimozuru said. "But anybody who climbs up a volcano should realize that he is doing so at his own risk."

The children's mother, Carolyn Shivers, said she had just dozed off after getting another child, 8-month-old Michael Lee, to sleep when she was awakened by the gunshot in an upstairs bedroom of their yellow, two-story frame home.

Mrs. Shivers said the youngsters were playing in the bedroom when the younger child found the gun in the dresser drawer and took it.

Anshivetta saw what was happening and tried to get the gun away from Yvonne but it went off and shot Anshivetta in the hand and Yvonne in the abdomen," said Mrs. Shivers.

Doctors told the family that Anshivetta's hand slowed the bullet, probably saving the younger girl's life. The toddler is expected to remain at the hospital for another 10 to 14 days. The bullet, which worked its way into her hip area, was not removed.

Shivers, who was at work for a paving company in Sanford when the shooting occurred, said he had kept the .32 caliber pistol in the house for safety. But, he said, "I'm never gonna keep a gun in my house, never again."

stition, their last grab at independence. When they first arrive, they are evaluated for two or three days, then a conference is held to determine what disciplines are needed for treatment. "Often we have to develop a model for treatment," said Cataldo. "We had a boy here about 8 years old who had cerebral palsy. He had writhing motions all day. He couldn't control them. The way he got around it was he would hook his arms and legs around his wheelchair" to keep them from hitting objects or anyone walking past him.

When he came in here we didn't have any treatment," Cataldo continued. "It occurred to us to try bio-feedback ... in an effort to get him to learn to relax his muscles." Using electrodes — to monitor and display his muscle movements — and positive reinforcement, the therapists and psychologists were able to achieve what they had hoped. His writhing diminished. The Institute involves parents in the treatment, counseling them in medical care and therapy. "We want the children and the parents to be able to live as independently of us as possible," said Dr. Hugo Moser, a neurologist and director of the Institute.

The adjustment is easier for Christina's family, which includes a retarded 17-year-old son. But Christina worries about her return to the world outside the institute. She worries about school, how she will get around, how she will relate to her old friends. Her struggle is severe. She is still fighting her self-image. She is battling adolescence. She sometimes is choked by her fear of falling. Christina remembers nothing of her accident. She remembers leaving her friend's home, walking between the trees to get to her house. She does not remember crossing the street and being knocked 30 feet to an embankment on the other side. For that, she is grateful. She does not remember her deep sleep, or the confusion and rage that followed her return to consciousness. Nor does she remember her seizures or lying coiled and immobile on the hospital bed, unable to turn over, unable to speak, unable to command her muscles to move. Of that, too, she is grateful. But she is disturbed at her loss of memory and her problems in relearning.

"My friends will come to see me and start talking and tell me things we did before and say, 'Don't you remember, Christie, don't you remember?' And I don't." At times, she is calm, displaying a radiant maturity that seems common to many of the handicapped, but at other times she seems lost, fighting her feelings of inadequacy and shame and insecurity. "You do want to walk," said her therapist. "You do want to walk someday?" "Yes," Christina answered.

Forester, Now 67, Can't Quit The Work Habit

By MATT BOKOR
Associated Press Writer
OCALA NATIONAL FOREST, Fla. (AP) — When Ike Burgess turned 65, the sawmill where he had worked for 28 years sent him home for good. But Burgess was full of energy, fit and willing to work. He spent months going from odd job to odd job until he heard about a federal program tailored for senior citizens who don't want to retire.

A slight, cheerful man with a graying goatee, Burgess, now 67, works three days a week in the Ocala National Forest.

"I had to do something. When you get to be 65 at the sawmill, they're through with you," Burgess said as he emptied a wheelbarrow load of dirt. "And I like it a lot here. I sure do."

He's one of more than 52,000 older Americans — 55 or over — who work part-time among the trees and streams composing the nation's 173 national forests and grasslands on nearly 190 million acres.

Florida employs about 100 elderly men and women at its three national forests. Seventy of them work in the Ocala National Forest in northern Florida.

"I was going crazy hanging around the house," said Herve "Frenchy" Blanchette, a 67-year-old retiree who moved to Florida from Providence, R.I., in 1959.

Blanchette said he spent most of his career working at various machinist jobs up North. He also briefly managed an ocean-front motel in Florida and worked nine years as a janitor at Cape Canaveral.

There's plenty of work to do around his seven-room home in nearby Ocala, but Blanchette said he found himself too often "sitting around the house thinking what am I going to do. You just don't know what to do when you're just hanging around the house."

So three years ago, he headed into the woods.

"I really don't know what the Forest Service would do without them," said Jack Roberts, engineering department supervisor in the Lake George Ranger District at the forest here. "They do just about everything that needs to be done."

Some of the seniors, Roberts added, work harder than many of their younger counterparts who grew up with eight-hour days and half-hour lunch breaks.

"Some of our young people are just not geared up like these older Americans," Roberts said.

Their jobs include repairing roofs, picking up after sloppy campers, cleaning cabins, fixing broken signs, clearing trails and keeping sewage systems, trucks and tractors in working order.

"I do anything that comes up," said 70-year-old Grover Sallee, a farmer and veteran mechanic from Shelby County, Ky., who retired to Ocala. "Anything from front-end loading, plumbing and ditch digging. It don't make any difference."

Florence Dame, 65, says she'll work as long as she can.

"After my husband died, I thought I was too old to work. Now my job gives me reason to get up in the morning, a reason to get dressed because I have something to do," said Mrs. Dame, who works as a typist in the Tallahassee office. "It is very good therapy. I want to work and make my money. I don't want things handed to me. As long as I can work, I'll be right here."

Florida receives $450,000 a year for the program, which has a national annual budget of some $15 million, Department of Labor officials said from Washington.

The project is included in the Older Americans Act of 1973, which established a variety of work programs to help senior citizens remain active after retirement, said Labor spokesman Gale Gibson.

"Most of the money goes directly for salaries of participants and they work on a whole lot of useful public service jobs. Sometimes they have clerical jobs, one of the sponsors does a lot of work in restoration of homes for old people, and they all do a lot of good work," Gibson said.

He, too, finds that many older people who struggled through the Depression era have a different attitude regarding work than more recent generations.

"A lot of these people enjoy work and even work extra hours. They have a strong work ethic," Gibson said. "They just like to work."

Most of the workers in the Senior Community Service Employment Program receive $3.10 an hour, the minimum wage, while seniors in supervisory roles earn $3.50 an hour. All are limited by law to an average of three work days a week. The money they earn does not affect their Social Security payments, officials said.

As 67-year-old T.J. Costin, who works in the Apalachicola National Forest in the Florida Panhandle, put it:

"Nothin' gets old but your clothes. ... I jog, stay active and swing with the sisters. The old people always said two dead matches together don't strike no fire, so that keeps me kind of young."

"Also, the few quarters I make here are enough to add to my railroad pension so I can go out and have a little fun — enjoy life, you know."

X-Rated Parlors Irk Massage Therapists

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer
AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — This western Massachusetts college town has no massage parlors, but just the thought of one — its neon sign flashing something like "All Girl Massage" — makes Debra Waldron mad.

"If one of them ever comes here, it'll be over my dead body," vows Ms. Waldron, herself a 27-year-old masseuse, or as she prefers, massage therapist.

She says massage is an ancient and vital form of physical therapy, "a way to make people feel good that's legal and has no side effects."

But on television, along highways and in pornographic novels, massage has become a codeword for impersonal, commercial sex.

That bothers other professionals such as Karen Korvitz, founder of a massage salon for women in Boston, who declares that "it's time to bring massage out of the alley" and redeem its tarnished reputation.

The 1,500-member American Massage and Therapy Association has launched a campaign to get states to regulate massage therapists as they do doctors, lawyers or hairdressers. And it is trying to bury massage's X-rated, den-of-sin reputation, a big task, members say.

Sex is not part of the service offered by Ms. Waldron, whose clients have ranged from businesswomen to long-distance runners to the handicapped. For her, "massage is for everyone."

But she and another Amherst massage therapist, Patricia Wachter, complain that in Massachusetts, as in most states, massage is not a licensed physical therapy.

Anyone who satisfies local ordinances, which often require no more than a business license, can hang out a sign advertising massage. The familiar neon sign offers of "Full Body Massage" or "Topless Staff" have made massage synonymous with sex in some minds.

In the 11 states that regulate massage, sex businesses have been forced to use euphemistic descriptions that do not mention massage.

But in the many jurisdictions where massage is either unregulated or covered by weak local laws, massage parlors have hurt legitimate practitioners and discouraged young people from becoming massage therapists, according to Thomas Fink of York, Pa., former massage association president.

"No one wants to go into a profession with that stigma," he says.

The association's own campaign for regulation has been hampered by the sunset legislation movement, which hopes to reduce the number and power of various state boards which regulate occupations such as hairdressing and dance teaching.

Sometimes, massage parlor owners use their political and economic influence to block such reform, AMTA members charge.

The association has accredited 19 massage training schools in the United States. It has also drafted a model ordinance requiring a massage therapist to have at least 1,000 hours of training before beginning practice.

As for the sex merchants, "they'll always call it something. Just as long as they don't call it massage," says Perry Plouffe, who has a massage salon in Pawtucket, R.I. "They're infringing on a beautiful profession."

Sex parlor employees, she insists, "are not qualified; they've got a few hours of instruction. What do they know about releasing an arthritic spur? Would they know a blood clot if they saw one? What do they know about anatomy?"

Co-Sponsor Course In Sign Language

Pitt Community College, Pitt County Community Schools, and the Grifton Elementary School will co-sponsor a beginning sign language course on April 14. The class will meet on Mondays from 7-10 p.m. for eight weeks at the Grifton Elementary School.

This course is designed for parents, relatives, or friends of deaf persons who wish to communicate with them better.

Students will learn a basic knowledge of and facility in manual communication. Instruction will include finger spelling, sign language, and some general information about deaf individuals. The class is open to all students, deaf and hearing.

For further information concerning this course, contact the Continuing Education Division at PCC at 756-3130 ext. 238 or 266. The registration fee is $5 and is free to senior citizens 65 or older. Students are responsible for their own supplies.

Close Vote On Registration

GREENWICH, Conn. (UPI) — The executive council of the Episcopal Church has narrowly voted to, in effect, support President Carter's proposal for draft registration by declaring that peacetime registration without conscription does not violate church policy.

But the resolution added that a peacetime draft — conscription without a congressionally declared national emergency — would violate the church's position.

Hotel Rooms In Reno Swell

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — A total of almost 3,000 new hotel rooms have been added to the Reno area since the spring of 1978 and another 3,200 new rooms are scheduled for completion in the next four years, according to the Greater Reno Chamber of Commerce. The construction will double Reno's hotel room since expansion began in 1978.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose in early trading today, continuing a rally that began on hopes of falling interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up 10.92 on Wednesday, rose another 4.35 to 790.27 in the first half hour of trading. Advancing stocks outnumbered losers by a 4-1 margin.

The rally was fueled by the action of UMB Bank & Trust Co., a small New York subsidiary of an Israeli bank, which cut its prime lending rate to 19 1/2 percent from 20 percent. Major banks did not match the reduction.

Although some rates have fallen, others including mortgage rates are still rising. Security Pacific National Bank, a major California institution, today boosted its prime mortgage rate to 18 percent.

United Way...

man of the upcoming United Way campaign.

Chet Emerson, in paying tribute to Tripp for his years of service, called the outgoing director a "special friend of the United Way." Emerson said that Tripp was "never interested in promoting Joe Tripp" but was always promoting the organization.

Tripp, the spokesman related, "sat back a long time and rewarded the efforts of others" but never received adequate recognition himself. Emerson said the real compliment to Tripp is that the United Way has grown steadily during his association.

The budget, according to Emerson, grew from $130,000 in 1969 when Tripp joined the United Way to some $350,000 in his last year.

Emerson cited Tripp for a "job well done" and added, "thank you from the bottom of our hearts."

Tripp, who received an engraved silver cup and another gift from the United Way, told the gathering that, "you all have been the United Way, not me."

Lou Folger, who assumed duties as the new executive director, was introduced yesterday. The new director, a Greenville native, returns to her home town from Charlotte where she served with the Charlotte-Mecklenburg County United Way.

The various division chairmen who served during the recent campaign were recognized by Brewer. Receiving engraved plaques were: G. Henry Leslie, Industrial Division; Dr. Alfred L. Ferguson, Professional I; Max Ray Joyner, Professional II; Rev. Richard Gammon, Professional III; Vergie Easterling, Retired Citizens; Joe Hallow, Business I; Jeanette Cox, Business II; Douglas Starr, Business III; Tommy Edwards and Emerson, Special Gifts; Ralph Tyson and Ed Wyatt, Governmental; Taylor and Danny Jacobson, Goal Buster; Don Yeager, Pitt Plaza; Joe Dyer, Carolina East Mall; John Bell, C. C. Rowe and Dr. Rodney Schmidt, East Carolina University; Bill McDonald, "200" Plus; and Kenneth Dews, Agribusiness.

Brewer recognized 16 firms, representing some 2,000 individuals, that contributed 66.9 percent of the total amount this year. The firms included Burroughs Wellcome, The Daily Reflector, Eaton Corp., Du Pont, Fieldcrest Mills, Grady-White Boats, Garner-Wynne-Manning Inc., McGraw-Edison, Pepsi-Cola, Planters National Bank, Prepshirt, Procter & Gamble, Spunwind Inc., Trw Inc., Union Carbide, and Wachovia Bank & Trust Co.

In addition to Powell as president, other officers elected include: Jerry Fulford, first vice president; Brewer, second vice president; Lester Brown, secretary; W. B. (Buff) Chalk, treasurer; John C. Williams, assistant treasurer; and James T. Cheatham, legal counsel.

New directors elected were Frank Groom, Richard Hybl, Henry Krauss and Dick Flye.

Builders Plead Lower Interest

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State and national leaders joined officials of the North Carolina Home Builders Association Wednesday in calling for lower interest rates and more mortgage money to boost the nation's sagging housing industry.

Hundreds of people gathered at a rally at the state Capitol Building in Raleigh to observe the state's Save Housing Day, declared by Gov. Jim Hunt earlier this week.

They joined thousands of homebuilders across the country protesting the depressed housing market, soaring interest rates and tight money.

Home-builders statistics show that if current trends continue, the average American home that now costs $60,000 will cost $160,000 by 1990. Only 5 percent of North Carolinians currently can afford to buy a home, home-builder statistics show.

Speakers at the rally included Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., Rep. Ike Andrews, D-N.C., Hunt, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, state House Speaker Carl Stewart, Raleigh Mayor Smedes York and officials of the home-builders association.

Terry Pope, director of the state homebuilders, told the crowd, "We want to get a message to Congress...that we do not expect the housing industry to become the scapegoat of this

No Charges Due Brake-Failure

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — Brake failure caused a car to go out of control and smash into a fast-food restaurant here, says the Ohio Highway Patrol.

Officials said Wednesday that no charges would be filed against 86-year-old Isabelle Bacon, driver of the car. A rusted hole was found in the automobile's brake line and brake fluid had drained from the master cylinder, patrolmen said.

Two persons were killed and six were injured when the car crashed through a Wendy's Old-Fashioned Hamburgers restaurant Tuesday.

Unexpected Heroes In Opening Games

Season's First Plea

Atlanta Braves' first baseman Chris Chambliss, left, makes a plea to umpire Frank Pulli who called Cincinnati Reds' center fielder Dave Collins, right, safe. The action came during the second inning after catcher Biff Pocoroba dropped the called third strike. The low throw to Chambliss at first base arrived late. Cincinnati won the season-opener, 9-0. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
The last thing pitchers Dave Heaverlo and Frank Pastore expected was to be heroes. In fact, neither had any idea he'd be playing baseball Wednesday. But Heaverlo picked up a save in the Seattle Mariners' 8-6 American League victory over the Toronto Blue Jays and Pastore registered a win — on a three-hit shutout, no less — in the Cincinnati Reds' 9-0 National League triumph over the Atlanta Braves.

Wednesday, Heaverlo, a reliever with the Oakland A's, received what he considered terrific news — Charlie Finley put Heaverlo on waivers and the Mariners claimed him. "I told the people who picked me up at the airport to hurry up and get me to the ballpark," said Heaverlo. "I thought I might be able to get into the game."

That he did as Seattle Manager Darrell Johnson, looking to protect a two-run lead, summoned Heaverlo in the eighth inning. The Mariners got their season off with a four-run first inning, capped by Ted Cox's two-run double. Joe Simpson's two-run homer provided the winning runs for starter Mike Parrott while Bruce Bochte and Rodney Craig had three hits each. John Mayberry slammed a pair of home runs for Toronto but that didn't save starter Dave Lemanczyk from being the loser.

The Reds got a boost from Pastore after receiving a jolt from ace hurler Tom Seaver. The star right-hander had to beg off his opening day start due to the flu and the 23-year-old Pastore was handed the ball by Reds Manager John McNamara.

"I really wasn't surprised that I had such a good game," said Pastore. "I expect to do well every time I go out on the mound or else I wouldn't be here."

George Foster and Junior Kennedy helped make Pastore's chore that much simpler. Foster knocked in four runs with a double and homer and Kennedy had a double and triple to drive in three runs as the Reds routed Braves ace Phil Niekro.

Today, in AL day games, Baltimore was set to pitch Jim Palmer at Chicago with the White Sox using Steve Trout, and Boston's Dennis Eckersley was scheduled to face Jim Slaton of Milwaukee. In night games, Ron Guidry was set to start for the New York Yankees against Jon Matlack of Texas, Detroit scheduled Jack Morris to pitch against Dennis Leonard of Kansas City and Minnesota's Jerry Koosman was to face Rick Langford of Oakland.

In the National League day games, the Chicago Cubs had Rick Reuschel ready for the ball by Reds Manager John McNamara. The Pirates scheduled Bert Blyleven against Pete Vuckovich of St. Louis. At night, Los Angeles was set to use Burt Hooton against J.R. Richard in Houston while San Francisco scheduled Bob Knepper against Randy Jones in San Diego.

Cawley Feels She Can Beat Anyone In World

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Evonne Goolagong Cawley says she thinks that on any given day, she can beat any other woman tennis player in the world.

And the Australian-born pro's performance Wednesday in the third round of the $150,000 tournament at the Sea Pines Racquet Club did nothing to dispel confidence in herself. It took Cawley, second seeded in the tournament, just 46 minutes to smash Sharon Walsh of Incline Village, Nev., 6-0, 6-0.

Women In First Loss

KINSTON — Greenville's Eastern Carolina Tennis Association women's team suffered a 6-3 defeat at the hands of Kinston yesterday.

Greenville won the number one and two singles and the number one doubles, but were shut out the rest of the way.

Summary:

Frances Cain (G) defeated Pat Houck, 7-5, 6-3.
Carlie Wille (G) defeated Torey Stood, 6-4, 6-1.
Judy Whitlock (K) defeated Nancy Powell, 6-0, 6-3.
Sara Weeks (K) defeated Mary Angela Lee, 6-0, 6-0.
Penn Flournoy (K) defeated Lib Proctor, 6-3, 5-7, 6-3.
Sue Oettinger (K) defeated Myra Hill, 6-4, 6-2.
Wille-Powell (G) defeated Whitlock-Wooten, 6-2, 6-7, 7-5.
Houck-Stood (K) defeated Cain-Proctor, 6-4, 6-3.
Weeks-Oettinger (K) defeated Lee-Hill, 6-1, 4-6, 6-2.

"I still believe I can beat anyone in the world," Cawley said after the light workout. "Or else, I wouldn't be here."

The upset of the third round came when unseeded Ivanna Madruga of Argentina defeated third-seeded Virginia Wade of Great Britain, 6-2, 5-7, 6-4. Madruga said it was her biggest win, but not necessarily the best match she has played.

Number five seed Virginia Ruzici of Romania defeated Yvona Brzakova of Czechoslovakia, 6-3, 6-3, while sixth seed Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia beat Jeanne DuVal of Dallas, 6-3, 6-4.

In fourth-round action today, defending tournament champion Tracy Austin, just lately ranked as the world's number one women's player, returns to action against Heidi Elsterleiner of West Germany.

Fourteen-year-old Andrea Jaeger of Lincolnshire, Ill., goes against Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova and 18-year-old Bettina Bunge of Coral Gables, Fla., plays Virginia Ruzici of Romania. Ruzici is seeded fifth in the tournament and Mandlikova is seeded sixth.

Sign Four At ECU

East Carolina basketball coach Dave Odom said this morning that the school has signed three recruits to national letters-of-intent, and that a fourth signing was expected this afternoon at 3 p.m.

"We are delighted with things so far," Odom said. "I don't know of anybody who has signed four people so far."

Wednesday was the first day that incoming freshmen were allowed to sign the national letters, recognized as binding on players and schools by most NCAA members.

Odom said that the school would not release the names of any of the recruits until all had been signed. "We expect to sign a fifth player early next week. We've already been given a verbal commitment from him. We're close on a sixth player, and will probably sign no more than seven."

Fund To Aid Wife

East Carolina University's football team will dedicate its spring game to Ginger Parker, wife of defensive co-ordinator Norm Parker.

Mrs. Parker, seriously injured in an automobile accident near Toledo, Ohio, two weeks ago, remains paralyzed and is breathing with the aid of a respirator in the critical care unit of the Toledo Hospital.

All proceeds from the game, following expenses, will go into a fund currently being formed to help the Parkers with their hospital and rehabilitation expenses.

Further plans for a fund will be announced in the coming weeks.

The spring game will be played on Saturday, April 26.

Roanoke Tops Northeastern

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke High School jumped into the finals of its own Easter Tournament yesterday, downing Northeastern High School, 8-4.

Bertie topped Plymouth, 4-3, in the other game and will meet the Redskins for the championship on Friday.

Today at 4 p.m., Northeastern and Plymouth meet for third place, with the title contest at 4 p.m. Friday.

Roanoke got all it needed in the first inning, scoring six times. Edward Grimes walked as did Steve Wallace. Glenn Cargile plated Grimes with a double. Wiley Keel walked, loading the bases. Jerry Ross singled in Wallace and Cargile and Angelo Spruill singled. Ricky Simpson's hit brought in Keel and Wesley Johnson singled to score Ross and Spruill for a 6-0 lead.

The Redskins added two more in the second. Wallace doubled and Keel walked. Spruill singled in the first run, and Keel scored the second when Simpson reached on an error.

Northeastern came up with three in the third and scored another in the fifth, the latter on a solo homer by Kenny Meekins.

Meekins led the Northeastern hitting with two, while Cargile, Ross and Spruill each had two for Roanoke.

The victory boosted the Roanoke record to 6-2 on the season.

ECU Men In Loss

RALEIGH — St. Augustine's College gained a 7-2 tennis victory over East Carolina University yesterday.

The Pirates captured wins in the number four singles where Ted Leper won a three-set match, and in the number two doubles where Kenny Love and Henry Hostetler took a win in three sets.

Three other matches went split sets but were all won by the host team.

East Carolina, now 4-6, plays host to N.C. Wesleyan on Friday at 2:30 p.m.

Summary:

Tony Mmoh (SA) defeated Henry Hostetler, 7-5, 6-4.
Bullus Hassani (SA) defeated Ken Love, 6-1, 6-1.
Arthur Drumwright (SA) defeated Keith Zengel, 6-7, 6-4, 6-2.
Ted Leper (EC) defeated Ron Wilkins, 5-7, 6-4, 6-2.
Ivo Ngosa (SA) defeated Barry Parker, 6-1, 6-7, 6-1.
Dwight King (SA) defeated Mark Byrd, 5-7, 6-1, 6-1.

Ngosa-Wilkins (SA) defeated Parker-Norman Bryant, 6-4, 6-1.
Exhibition: Bryant (EC) defeated Royal Colbert, 6-3, 6-1.

Lady Bucs Defeated

NORFOLK, Va. — Old Dominion University romped to a 7-0 tennis victory over the East Carolina University women's team yesterday.

Two of the three doubles matches were washed out by rain. East Carolina had little success during the day, winning no sets and extending only two sets.

Now 2-7, the Pirates travel to UNC-Charlotte on Friday.

Summary:

Pam Shaulis (OD) defeated Lynn Grosvenor, 6-0, 6-1.
Cindy Clare (OD) defeated Laura Redford, 6-1, 6-1.
Susan Lawless (OD) defeated Debbie Christine, 6-2, 6-2.

No Clearcut Favorite As Masters Opens Play

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — It's a celestial trip for Fuzzy Zoeller, the defending champion who has his own definition for the Masters golf tournament.

"Heaven," Zoeller said Wednesday during a news conference on the eve of today's opening round of the 44th Masters, the season's first major test of golfing greatness.

"I've never been to Heaven, but this is as close as I'll probably ever get to it right here," he added.

Zoeller is among a select international field of 91 players who begin the quest for one of the game's most prestigious titles today over the beautiful 7,040-yard, par 72 Augusta National Golf Club course, a colorful layout with lush green grass and azaleas and dogwoods in full bloom.

There is no clearcut favorite for the first time in years.

Tom Watson, riding a string of three consecutive Player of the Year awards, is winless since the tour left the West Coast seven weeks ago.

Jack Nicklaus, the perennial Masters choice, is in a comeback fight, trying to recapture the magic that made him perhaps the greatest golfer in history. He hasn't won anything in 21 months, and said Wednesday he has prepared more diligently for this Masters than he has in several years.

Watson still ranks as the top money winner on this year's tour, riding a pair of victories to a $140,275 total, about $23,000 ahead of the runnerup, Craig Stadler, only other two-time winner this season.

Zoeller, a 28-year old Indiana native, defied tradition here last year with the victory in his first Masters appearance. It came on the second hole of a sudden death playoff against Watson and Ed Sneed, who had entered the final round six shots ahead of the eventual champion. "What happened last year happened last year," Zoeller said. "I don't want to dwell on that. I felt very good last year when I came in here and I feel very good this year."

Asked to rate his chances of repeating, Zoeller said he would place himself in the Top Ten.

However, if he does manage to claim his second straight green jacket, the symbolic award awaiting the winner, he would become only the second repeat champion in history. Nicklaus put together consecutive titles in 1965 and 1966.

Zoeller says he will use the same plan of attack he used in 1979 — relying entirely on his caddy, Jerry Beard.

"I'm going to let my caddy do the work," he said. "He's like the jockey on the back of a thoroughbred. He controls me all the way."

Nicklaus, 40, has won an unprecedented five Masters titles, the last in 1975.

Much of his pretournament work has been devoted to changing his short game. "It's totally different. I've never chipped anywhere near like I do now."

Nicklaus said he was anxious to get started.

"I like to be nervous," he said. "I'm a little bit more ready. I feel confident I'm going to play well. I think soon I'm going to get some results on the scoreboard."

Zoeller, Watson and Nicklaus all have to be considered among those with a chance to win — but that list this year is probably longer than it's ever been.

South African Gary Player, a two-time Masters champion who is the only foreign player ever to win here, always ranks among the top contenders. He has a special desire to win this year, which would give him a major championship in each of four decades.

Jerry Pate, the 1976 U.S. Open champion, appears on the verge of ending a 1½-year winless string, coming off two consecutive second place finishes.

Andy Bean, a long hitter, and Raymond Floyd, a former champion, also have to be considered, along with Ben Crenshaw, George Burns, Hale Irwin and Seve Ballesteros, the Spaniard who won the British Open last year.

The weather forecast is promising for the start — sunny skies and temperatures in the 70s.

Bears In 6-4 Win

COLUMBIA — Bear Grass jumped out to an early lead, then hung on to gain a 6-4 victory over Columbia yesterday in baseball.

The Bears scored all six of their runs in the first four innings, while Columbia bounced back with its four in the final three frames.

The Bears moved ahead in the first with one run. William Roberson reached on an error and Clay Gardner singled. Jody Peaks reached on an error, scoring Roberson.

In the second, the Bears added two more. Bob Peele walked and Walter Bullock singled. An error on the play let Peele score and Bullock take second. Craig Gardner then singled in Bullock.

What proved to be the difference came in the fourth. Peele walked and so did Greg Harrison. Bullock singled in one run, and Gardner walked, loading the bases. Roberson and Clay Gardner both walked, forcing in two more runs for a 6-0 lead.

Columbia rallied for one in the fifth, two in the sixth and one in the seventh, but never caught up.

Bullock and Craig Gardner led the Bear hitting with two each, while Smith had two for Columbia.

The Bears are now 5-2 and play host to Aurora on Friday.

Greene Central Nips Northern Nash, 7-6

ROCKY MOUNT — Greene Central pushed over three runs after two were out in the seventh inning, then scored once in the eighth to nip Northern Nash, 7-6, to take third place in the Rocky Mount Optimist Tournament yesterday.

Hosting Rocky Mount nipped Southern Nash, 2-1, to take the championship.

Northern Nash grabbed the initial lead in the game in the third, scoring once. Carl Payne singled and was sacrificed up. He scored when Danny Ham-mitt's grounder was errorred.

Trailing 5-0, the Rams came up with three in the bottom of the sixth. Jimbo Fulghum singled as did Al Murray. Donald Shaw then singled in Fulghum. Walt Tyndall singled to score Murray, but Shaw was thrown out at third. Jeff Scott's double brought home Tyndall. Prior to the inning, the Rams had gotten but one hit off Payne.

After Northern scored again in the top of the seventh for a 6-3 lead, the Rams rallied, getting a two-out, two-on homer by Murray to tie it up at 6-6.

Then, in the bottom of the seventh, with two away, Chip Hardy singled. Robin Bowen struck out—seemingly ending the inning. But the Knight catcher dropped the ball and made no play as Bowen raced to first. Kevin Korpi then singled to score Hardy with the game-winning run.

Fulghum and Murray both had two hits to lead the Rams, while David Wells and Payne picked up a pair each for the Knights.

Korpi and Murray were both selected to the all-tournament team.

Greene Central, now 10-3, travels to C.B. Aycock on Tuesday to resume Eastern Carolina Conference play.

Run Is Slated

A cross-campus run is to be held Saturday at 10 a.m. at East Carolina University, jointly sponsored by the East Carolina Office of Intramural-Recreational Sports and American Athletics of Pitt Plaza.

The event, hoped to become an annual one, is being called the "Run-for-the-Sun (Bring On Spring)."

Two races will be held, one of 2.5 miles and the other of 5.0 miles.

Entries are now being taken at the Intramural Office in Memorial Gym, and will continue until 9:30 a.m. on Saturday.

Registration on race day, and the start of the race will be held at the northwest corner of Bunting Field.

All ECU students, faculty, staff and alumni are invited to run in the event.

Further information can be obtained at 757-6387.

Basketball Banquet

Clemson's Bill Foster will be the featured speaker at tonight's East Carolina University Basketball Banquet, to begin at 7 p.m. at the Greenville Country Club.

The banquet is to honor the 1979-80 basketball team, which had a winning record for the first time in five seasons.

Various awards will be presented during the evening to outstanding members of the team.

Putt-Putt

Allen Elder shot a 21-under par 87 to win the Tar River Open at Greenville's Putt-Putt Golf Course last night.

Mark Langston pulled away from the field to take second place with a 91, while Johnny Carrow beat Danny Woods in a sudden death for third place.

GOLF WORLD SERIES
AKRON, OHIO (AP) — First money will be $100,000 for the World Series of Golf, scheduled to be played August 21-24 at the Firestone Country Club here. The total purse will be $400,000 with a minimum of $4,000 for each contestant.

Kathy Riley's three-run inside-the-park home run in the seventh inning boosted East Carolina's Lady Pirate softball team to a twin-bill sweep of Methodist College Wednesday.

After an easy 8-4 win in the opener, it took Riley's second seventh-inning game-winning hit in seven days to turn the tables, 5-3, in the nightcap. Yvonne Williams and Miltz Davis singled with one out in the final frame to set the stage for Riley's long fly ball to right center.

Methodist's Woody Register scored on an error on the catcher in the top of the seventh to give the visitors a 3-2 edge. Carol Richelderfer singled home Liz Childs in the fifth to knot the score at 2-2. Priscilla Richenbacher's RBI single in the first gave Methodist the early lead.

East Carolina bounced back with two runs in the second. Shepherd scored on an error and Teri Andrews drove in Robin Faggart with a single.

In the opener, Cynthia Shepherd went four-for-four at the plate with a home run as the Lady Pirates ran up an 8-0 lead before coasting home. Shepherd's inside-the-park home run brought in Frank Hooks for a 2-0 first inning lead.

Cindy Meekins belted a bases-loaded single in the third, driving in Davis and Shepherd. Riley scored on the same play, courtesy of a Methodist error.

Consecutive singles by Hooks, Davis, Shepherd and Riley pushed across two more runs in the fourth.

The Lady Pirates are now 15-2. Methodist fell to 10-10. East Carolina returns to action Friday in the N.C. State Tournament in Raleigh.

Celtics Open With 119-101 Victory

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer
The Boston Celtics, back in the playoffs after a two-year absence, went back to basics in order to get off on the right foot. "We knew we had 10 days off

(following the regular season), so we went back to training camp," said guard Chris Ford. "We knew we were ready when we came out of the locker room."

The Celtics, who won 11 National Basketball Association titles in 13 years and 13 championships overall, beat the Houston Rockets 119-101 Wednesday night in the opener of their best-of-seven second-round series. The second game will be played in Boston Friday night.

Ford and Dave Cowens teamed for 26 second-half points as Boston raced to a 19-point lead in the second quarter. Houston rallied to within one, then pulled away with 35 points in the fourth quarter.

In other playoff action Wednesday, the Philadelphia 76ers defeated Atlanta 99-92 to take a 2-0 lead over the Hawks, and in a pair of overtime games, the Milwaukee Bucks evened their series with Seattle by beating the Sonics 114-112 and the Los Angeles Lakers moved in front of Phoenix 2-0 by edging the Suns 131-128.

A dunk by Malone cut Boston's lead to 69-68 with 6:16 left in the third quarter before Cowens and Ford took charge. A basket by Cowens gave Boston a three-point lead and Ford followed with another basket and a three-point play to make the score 76-68.

76ers 99, Hawks 92
Fouls played a big part in Philadelphia's win. Sixers star Julius Erving missed most of the second half because of foul trouble, but center Darryl Dawkins picked up the slack, scoring 11 of his 22 points in the final period and dominating play.

Both Atlanta centers, Wayne "Tree" Rollins and Steve Hawes, fouled out trying to stop Dawkins in the fourth quarter, when Philadelphia came back from a 78-71 deficit to win.

Bucks 114, Sonics 112, OT
Rookie guard Sidney Moncrief scored all six of Milwaukee's points in overtime as the Bucks beat the Sonics, avenging their overtime loss to Seattle in the series opener and taking the home-court advantage away from the Sonics.

Guard Brian Winters led Milwaukee with 28 points, including a three-pointer from the left corner in the final minute that tied the score 108-108. Seattle had a chance to win it in regulation, holding the ball for the final 21 seconds, but failed to get a shot off.

Lakers 131, Suns 128, OT
Lakers guard Norm Nixon hit a 17-foot jumper to break a 128-128 tie with 20 seconds left in overtime, and after Phoenix's Paul Westphal missed a jumper, Nixon added one of two free throws with 10 seconds to play. Mike Bratz missed a three-point try for the Suns in the closing seconds and Nixon got the rebound as the buzzer sounded.

Westphal led all scorers with 37 points, including all eight of the Suns' points in overtime. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar led the Lakers with 32 points, Nixon and Jamaal Wilkes had 26

In The Right Direction

Los Angeles Lakers' forward Jamaal Wilkes (52) seems to be pointing the way as Lakers' guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson (32), with the ball, eyes his shot as center Alvan Adams (33) of the Phoenix

Suns watches. The action came during semifinal Western Conference NBA playoff action. The Lakers won, 131-128 in overtime, giving Los Angeles a 2-0 lead in their best of seven series against the Suns. (AP Laserphoto)

Delegates Likely To Support Boycott Call

By S.J. GUFFEY
Associated Press Writer
COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Getting pressure from Carter administration and major financial backers, the U.S. Olympic Committee's House of Delegates appears likely to support the president's call for a boycott of the Summer Games in Moscow.

President Carter asked for the boycott in January, after Soviet troops moved into Afghanistan.

In recent weeks, Carter has met with USOC delegates at the White House and had them briefed at the State Department. The administration also has indicated that it might seek to revoke the committee's tax-exempt status unless it goes along with the boycott.

"They weren't threatening to do it, but the implication was there," USOC Executive Director F. Don Miller told The Washington Post.

Sears, Roebuck & Co. already has said it will withhold the $25,000 installment of a $75,000 pledge to the USOC until the committee endorses a boycott. The Washington Post reported Wednesday that five other companies also have not met pledge payments. Miller told the Post that the USOC was several hundred thousand dollars short of this year's projected revenues.

USOC officials have delayed a decision since January, hoping that what USOC President Robert Kane terms "a miracle" — such as Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan — would make the boycott issue moot.

Kane told The Atlanta Journal this week he still hopes to delay a final boycott decision, in case such a miracle occurs before the May 24 deadline entry deadline.

"Time is our only ally," Kane told the Journal.

A USOC spokesman said Wednesday that between 200 and 500 delegates are expected for Saturday's legislative session, during which about 2,500 votes are at stake.

The Journal and the Colorado Springs Gazette-Telegraph reported in Wednesday editions that polls of the athletes' organizations that are sending delegates indicate there will be a strong vote in favor of boycotting Moscow.

"I would say 95 percent of us would like to see us go, but a majority will ultimately support the president," John Kelly of Philadelphia, first vice president of the USOC, told the Journal.

Meanwhile, the Women's Professional Basketball League citing "the current political atmosphere," on Wednesday cancelled two exhibition games against the U.S. women's Olympic team, scheduled for April 19 in Chicago and April 21 in New York.

In Chicago, an association of Greek businessmen announced it would donate $25,000 to the USOC if it decides to send American athletes to Moscow.

The pledge from the Hellenic Association of Commerce and Industry of Illinois would replace the amount being withheld by Sears, Roebuck & Co.

Gant Hurt In Wreck

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Stock-car driver Harry Gant was in satisfactory condition at Cabarrus Memorial Hospital Wednesday after he was injured in what Charlotte Motor Speedway officials called one of the most violent crashes in the speedway's history.

Gant's Pontiac Firebird was in the 10th lap of a 10-lap tire test over the recently repaved 1.5-mile speedway when he cut a right front tire in the fourth turn at a speed estimated at 165 mph. The Taylorsville driver slammed into the concrete retaining wall and ricocheted off the wall and out of control for more than 1,000 feet.

The $35,000 race car was almost destroyed in the accident, according to a speedway spokesman.

Gant had run a 32.5 second lap and had recorded a speed of 166.154 mph earlier in the day, breaking the 1.5-mile record of 164.304 set by Neil Bonnett at the speedway last October.

Officials at the Cabarrus Hospital were trying late Wednesday to determine the extent of Gant's injuries.

The speedway tests are being conducted in preparation for the May 24 Mello Yello 300-mile open sportsman race.

Carter-Sadat Summit Entering Its Final Hours

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Ending two days of summit talks with President Carter on a note of optimism, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat says he is convinced agreement can be reached with Israel on a self-rule plan for Palestinian Arabs.

"With the help of President Carter and his decisions and his principles, I'm sure we can reach agreement and overcome all the difficulties like the difficulties that we faced before," Sadat said Wednesday as the White House talks ended.

Sadat and Carter made it clear they believe the next move in the peace process is up to Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel, who arrives next week for meetings with Carter.

Sadat was expected to expand on his thoughts today in a speech at the National Press Club. He also planned to meet briefly with labor and Jewish leaders before flying back to Cairo tonight.

Although Sadat gave no specific reason for his evident optimism, diplomatic sources said the talks with Carter went well.

There were indications ways may be found to disengage Israel's security concerns from other issues in the negotiations, said the sources, who asked not to be identified.

After the Carter-Begin meetings, according to the sources, negotiations on Palestinian self-rule will be shifted from the Mideast to Washington. The plan is for teams headed by Egyptian Prime Minister Mustapha Khalil and Israeli Interior Minister Joseph Burg to meet here toward the end of April.

This probably will be followed in May by the return of Sadat and Begin for further summit talks with Carter, the sources said.

Meanwhile, Sol M. Linowitz, Carter's special Mideast mediator, told reporters: "If there is a real commitment, we could in two weeks put together an agreement — less than that, 10 days."

Linowitz said that with Begin's approval, the negotiations would move at "an accelerated pace." Meeting the May 26 target date for an autonomy plan could be "a real possibility," he said.

Carter stressed on Wednesday that an autonomy plan for Palestinians living on Israeli-held lands must include "a recognition of the realization of Palestinian rights, a recognition that the Palestinians must have a voice in the determination of their own future."

So far, Egypt and Israel have been unable to define the "full autonomy" promised in their Camp David accord of September 1978 to the 1.2 million Palestinian Arabs living on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in Gaza. Those territories have been held by Israel since the 1967 Six-Day War.

Failed Over Flag Sarong

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) —
When Shirley Abston strolled into Cabarrus County District Court Wednesday, dressed only in a turban and the American flag, she got more than the attention of the court.

year-old woman jailed on a contempt charge.

Ms. Abston, who said she was from New York, appeared in court for her trial on a shoplifting charge. She was arrested in Kannapolis last month for allegedly taking three rolls of camera film from a department store.

She was wrapped in a large upside-down flag, which she wore like a towel. Witnesses say the flag was stapled down the front, and the outfit was trimmed with a dollar bill stapled near the bottom.

Assistant District Attorney Wayne Nixon said the woman had a turban on her head and was wearing the flag "Dorothy Lamour style."

Grant said Ms. Abston told him she wore the flag because she had nothing else to wear.
Then, he said, she proceeded to talk about her rights as an American.

According to observers,
Judge Adam C. Grant Jr. told
Ms. Abston she could not come to court dressed in a flag and said that if she continued to speak out, he would order her jailed on contempt charges.

Grant sentenced Ms. Abston to 30 days in jail for contempt of court. Ms. Abston appealed the sentence and was released under $1,000, pending the appeal.

While family members went to get her some less patriotic clothing, Ms. Abston told a jail matron she didn't understand why she was being locked up.
And, when the matron explained that she should not have worn the flag to court, Ms. Abston replied: "I love my country."

Poll Shows Opinions Favor Military Action

NEW YORK (AP) — Fifty-one percent of Americans sampled in the latest Harris poll said the United States should take military action against Iran if any of the 50 hostages are put on trial as spies — even if the action might endanger their lives.

The poll, taken April 8, questioned 900 adults across the nation in an effort to sample opinion on Carter's latest sanctions against Iran. The sample had a 3.5 percent margin of error, according to Harris.

The poll was taken before militants holding the Americans at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran said they would kill the hostages if the United States attempted any military action.

Sixty-eight percent of those surveyed agreed with the statement, "What President Carter is doing is too little and too late and not tough enough." Twenty-eight percent disagreed.

Asked their opinions of four Carter proposals, the group sampled gave the following response:

—Seventy-seven percent favored a break in diplomatic relations with Iran; 19 percent were opposed.

—Seventy-eight percent favored an end to all trade with Iran, except for providing some food and drugs; 19 percent were opposed.

—Seventy-seven percent favored halting visas for Iranians; 17 percent were opposed.

—Seventy-four percent favored working out a way for Iranian funds deposited in American banks and frozen last November to be used to pay claims by the families of the hostages and other Americans with claims against Iran; 15 percent were opposed.

—Seventy-seven percent said it was "a big mistake not to give Iran an ultimatum in the first 72 hours after the hostages were seized." Eighteen percent disagreed.

John East Voices His Homebuilding Concern

John East, Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate seat now held by Democrat Robert Morgan, today voiced concern for the homebuilders industry, saying, "our homebuilders are perhaps the hardest hit industry in the economic recession."

According to East, "the young people of our country can no longer afford a new home. Because of inflation, the average house costs $71,000. The problems of the homebuilders and young people wishing to buy a first home are 20 percent inflation and 20 percent interest rates
— a direct result of irresponsible spending policies of the federal government."

East continued, "My opponent, Robert Morgan, recently opposed an amendment to cut federal spending by $26 billion and limit future spending to 21 percent of the gross national product.

"Cutting government expenses and balancing the budget is the only way to end inflation.
Instead of trying to balance the budget, Mr. Morgan has voted to spend $10 billion for the CETA program (and)...voted 'yes' for foreign aid, which totalled $31 billion tax dollars."

East concluded, "We need leaders in the Senate who will vote for less government spending, not men who...put politically expedient boondoggles before the public good."

"When I am elected, I will vote with...those Senators who want to eliminate the waste in federal spending and balance the federal budget."

Discover An Aid In Kidney Transplants

BOSTON (AP) — An obscure blood chemical may be a key to matching kidney donors with recipients to circumvent the body's natural tendency to reject the new organ, researchers say.

If the discovery works as well as initial reports indicate, the scientists say it may dramatically improve the chance of successful transplants.

Doctors have long known that these transplants work best when the immune systems of the donors and recipients are compatible, but they have had trouble measuring this.

Researchers at the Blood Center of Southeastern Wisconsin identified a group of antigens, produced by white blood cells, called the MB system. In a study published today, they showed that kidney recipients did far better if their MB antigens were the same as those of the person who donated the organs.

So far, they have tested the theory only on people who received kidneys from close relatives, but new studies are under way to find out if the tests will help find better matches for people who get kidneys from cadavers.

The work, directed by Rene J. Duquesnoy, appears in the New England Journal of Medicine.

"We are excited," he said in an interview. "When we first observed these results, we didn't believe them, because this was just too good to be true."

Distributive Ed Winners

The Farmville Central Chapter of Distributive Education Clubs of America attended the District Competitive Events Meeting held at Manteo High School recently and returned with several first place winners.

First place winners in the competency based events were as follows: Mary George Davis, apparel and accessories, first place overall; Mary Beth Joyner, food services, first place overall; first place communications, first place overall; and Terry Johnson, food marketing, first place overall.

Kim Cotton, Terri Farrior, Michelle Stepe, Milly Tyson, and Warren Carlton also placed second and received proficiency awards in several areas.

Reagan Opines Vietnam Veterans Mistreated

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer
GRAND ISLAND, Neb. (AP) — Ronald Reagan, in an apparent misstatement, says Vietnam veterans have not been eligible for GI Bill education benefits because there never was a formal declaration of war by the United States.

Campaigning across Texas and Nebraska on Wednesday, Reagan also was unable to offer cost estimates of some of his campaign proposals, such as proposed pay increases for members of the armed services.

At two campaign appearances, the former California governor told audiences the United States has failed to properly recognize Vietnam veterans. He said it was "disgraceful the manner in which we received back those who fought in Vietnam."

"Because it was not a declared war, they're not even eligible for the GI Bill of Rights with regard to education or anything," Reagan said.

But in Washington, Veterans Administration spokesman Frank Hood noted that thousands of Vietnam veterans already have attended college on the GI Bill and said those who

Candidates To Attend Forum

A Candidates' Forum for County Commissioner candidates held by League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County will be televised on WNCN, Channel 9, Sunday at 12:30 p.m.

Candidates Eugene James, R. L. "Bob" Martin, Charles Gaskins and Bruce Strickland will answer questions and give their views on topics of concern to Pitt Countyans.

Carolyn Bowyer, Voters Service chairperson of the League, stressed that this is a time change from the already-printed TV Guide. The League presents this program in keeping with its endeavors to encourage an informed voting public, she said.

He acknowledged that a change in the law requires Vietnam veterans and thousands who served in the military subsequent to that war to claim whatever education benefits are due them by Dec. 31, 1989.

As for GI home loans, the other benefit most often used by veterans, Hood said Vietnam veterans "are eligible, and will be eligible, for the rest of their life."

"I don't know what he's talking about," Hood said of Reagan's remarks.

Campaign press secretary Ed Gray, who just joined the Reagan staff, said he was unable to say where the former governor got his information.

Reagan was to fly to Pittsburgh today for his first campaign stop in Pennsylvania since announcing his candidacy last November. He faces a head-to-head battle there with George Bush since Rep. John B. Anderson is not on the ballot.

Myth Of Spaniards In N.C. Persist

By DR. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — One of the persistent myths in North Carolina literature contends that Spaniards conducted extensive mining operations in the Appalachians in the 16th century.

For instance, F.A. Sondley, author of an early history of Buncombe County, wrote, "...the Spaniards lived and mined in Western North Carolina more than 125 years from 1540 till 1690 and later." Once they get into history books, myths like that die hard. While it is true that Hernando De Soto in 1540 led a party of several hundred persons from Florida through the mountainous southwestern portion of North Carolina, and while other Spaniards such as Hernando Boyano and Juan Parado later passed through the mountains, there is no evidence that any of them remained long enough to conduct more than exploratory digging.

Take, for instance, the Sink Hole Mine at Bandana in Mitchell County. Time and again these old workings were assumed by local historians to have been dug by Spaniards. The North Carolina Guide, for example, says, "Here are indications that Spaniards, possibly under Juan Pardo, may have carried on extensive mining. Local legend has it that some of the mica taken back to Spain by these men is still in existence."

The Sink Hole Mine attracted considerable attention just after the Civil War when the landowner, William Silver, allowed Gen. Thomas L. Clingman to explore the diggings.

Clingman wrote that the manner in which the excavations had been done "resembled that sometimes practiced by the Mexicans," and he thought that the Spaniards might have employed Indians as laborers in digging for silver.

The general dug samples of the ore which an assay revealed contained virtually no trace of silver. His excavations, however, did reveal an interesting pattern of previous diggings.

A series of large sloping holes, up to 80 feet in diameter at the top, occupied several acres. Debris had been thrown back into them.

Later, Charles D. Stewart dug out one of the sink holes to a depth of 42 feet, removing a tree with about 300 rings. Tunnels had been driven into the walls. In the backfill he found flattened stone tools.

There was no silver, but another shiny element was found. The Indians, not the Spanish, had been the original miners; and they were recovering mica, not gold or silver. Archaeologists have traced mica from the North Carolina mountains to the graves of Indians as far away as Illinois. Undoubtedly, mica was both a useful and an ornamental mineral for native Americans.

While Clingman was exploring for silver, a Tennessee tin worker by the name of J.G. Heap happened by and carried off several blocks of mica.

Back in Knoxville he and his partner, E.B. Clapp, recognized the usefulness of mica in making stoves and tinware, so they sold their business in 1869 and began mining mica in Mitchell and Yancey counties.

The success of Heap and Clapp prompted others to begin digging for mica. It is estimated that 400,000 pounds of mica, worth perhaps a million dollars, were mined in the mountains of North Carolina between 1867 and 1882.

By 1955, the number of mica mines in North Carolina reached 530 which produced 553,444 pounds of sheet mica. Most of the activity occurred in a dozen counties in the west.

Thus white Americans finally learned what the Indians knew long ago — that the ground in the mountain counties could yield a mineral of great value to humans. The Spanish, interested in precious metals, deserve no credit for its discovery.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

My father suffered a stroke about six weeks ago. His speech has been affected and he has weakness of his arm and leg. Even though his doctor tells us that it will be a long haul to recovery, we're beginning to wonder if he will ever recover completely. — Miss H.T.E., N.M.

Dear Miss E.:

There was a time, about 25 years ago, when the victim of a stroke was thought to have little or no chance for complete rehabilitation and recovery.

Today, immediate and intensive medical care have greatly enhanced the chances of recovery of victims of stroke. It is no longer accepted that the stroke victim will vegetate and deteriorate.

Remarkable strides have been made in the rehabilitation of people who have had a cerebral vascular accident (C.V.A. or "stroke"). Dr. Howard Rusk, of the New York University Medical Center, is rightfully called the "father" of rehabilitative medicine. Many of his "sons" and "daughters" have been trained by him and dispersed all over the world, replacing despair with hope for stroke victims.

Intensive programs are designed to give physical and emotional support to these courageous patients, encouraging them to once again become happy, productive members of society.

Complete recovery depends entirely on the severity of the stroke and the part of the brain that is involved. The all-inclusive term of "stroke" is used to describe (1) a broken vessel in the brain (hemorrhage); (2) a clot (or "thrombus"); and (3) a spasm of the artery that brings blood to the brain. All three conditions deprive a part of the brain of the normal blood supply that carries vital oxygen to the brain.

It is interesting that the speech area in a right-handed person is situated in the left side of the brain. In a left-handed person, the speech area is located in the right side of the brain. This knowledge, along with dozens of neurological tests, can determine the exact area of the brain that has been affected by the stroke.

As soon as the patient is able to be taken out of bed, rehabilitative programs are started. Besides receiving medical attention, psychological support is added to offer encouragement during the immediate post-stroke period. Undoubtedly, your father is receiving such help.

It demands a tremendous amount of patience on the part of the family, especially when the speech is affected. For, in addition, there may also be some impairment of understanding in the process of communication. This is known as "aphasia," and there are many forms of this distressing aspect of stroke.

The greatest contribution you can make to your father is to show a consistent attitude of hopefulness and encouragement with his progress.

Stereo AM Radio Has Green Light By FCC

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stereophonic radio broadcasts, limited in the past to the FM band, will soon become a reality on AM as well, because of action by the Federal Communications Commission.

For many of the nation's AM broadcasters, whose audiences in recent years have switched increasingly to FM because of its stereo signal, the move could spark a resurgence of listener interest.

John B. Summers of the National Association of Broadcasters hailed the FCC's decision Wednesday as a "milestone."

And the company whose method of stereo AM broadcasting was given a monopoly by the FCC, Magnavox Consumer Electronics Corp., was "delighted."

Magnavox, picked from five firms that submitted proposals, will have to share its system with other manufacturers — but will receive a royalty in return.

A company representative said Magnavox was surprised at the speed with which the FCC made its decision and could not immediately speculate on how much money might come from the royalties.

Commission officials said they expected the real market for AM stereo receivers to be in the automobile industry, since many people might be slow to trade in their home receivers.

Radios capable of receiving stereo signals on both the AM and FM bands could be produced for only $2 to $8 more than radios now on the market that receive monophonic AM and stereo FM signals, those officials said.

Neither FCC nor Magnavox officials would speculate on how soon the first stereo AM units would appear on the market or soon broadcasters would begin to alter transmitting sent.

Dr. Robe'owers of the FCC said stereo AM signals will have slightly less fidelity than stereo FM. And he added that despite the greater range of AM signals, stereo reception will probably not be possible more than 50 to 60 miles from a transmitter.

Existing AM receivers will translate stereo signals into monaural sound, just as FM radios with only one speaker combine stereo FM broadcasts into a single sound.

The FCC said it was selecting the Magnavox system to prevent the chaos that would result from having competing systems on the market.

The companies whose systems were rejected were Kahn Communications Inc., the Harris Corp., Belar Electronics Laboratory Inc., and Motorola Inc.

Rhodes Tavern Faces Razing

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The British officers, the story goes, sat in Rhodes tavern and ate dinner lighted by the flames that were destroying the White House two blocks away.

Now, a developer wants to tear down Rhodes tavern, the oldest commercial building in downtown Washington, and build a multimillion dollar shopping complex.

Time is running out for Joseph Grano, 34, a lawyer who quit a government job to try to save the tavern, and a band of other history lovers.

Rhodes tavern sits at the southwest corner of 15th and F Streets Northwest, just across the street from the Department of Treasury. It was built according to George Washington's guidelines about 1800, originally an L-shaped, red-brick Federal-style townhouse.

It was the tavern from which the British commander directed the burning of the White House and Treasury in 1814.

Mrs. Barbara Suter, who ran it as a boarding house at the time, has left an account of how General Ross and Admiral Cockburn ate dinner by the light of the flames.

Rhodes tavern is not attractive. Cracked stucco covers the red brick. A newsstand, a souvenir shop and a fruit store are on the ground floor. The upper two floors sit collecting debris. The north half was torn down in 1959 to make way for a bank branch.

Developer Oliver Carr has embarked on a $77 million project that would consume most of the square block, including Rhodes Tavern. Carr's project manager, Arthur Hanket, said the firm agreed to save the facade of the National Metropolitan Bank and the Keih's Theater-Albee building, as well as the interior of the Old Ebbitt Grill, a turn of the century taproom.

All of the buildings, including Rhodes tavern and the interior of Old Ebbitt, have been listed in the National Register of Historic Places since 1969.

The Junior League of America agreed two years ago to try to raise $600,000 to restore Rhodes as a working tavern.

But, on Feb. 11, Carol Thompson, the agent of District of Columbia Mayor Marion Barry, said that Carr's project was of "special merit" and Rhodes Tavern could be torn down or moved.

Grano has at least a couple of plans of attack. One is to appeal to the courts. Another is to go to the city council.

The council already has approved Carr's request to add three extra floors to the project. The council also must consider Carr's request to close down an alley at no cost.

World Airways Offers Bargain

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an effort to regain business lost during a lengthy strike that ended in February, World Airways is offering coast-to-coast flights for $69.99.

The airline announced Wednesday that the fares will be in effect from April 15 to May 15, with flights from Newark, N.J., and Baltimore-Washington International Airport in the East and from Los Angeles and Oakland in California. The bargain fares are $69.99 between any of the East and West Coast cities, $139.99 to Honolulu from either Newark or Baltimore-Washington and $69.99 to Honolulu from either of the California cities. Fares are one-way, with the same price on the return trip.

Pope John Paul II Big Traveler

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY (AP) —

Pope John Paul II is on his way to becoming the most traveled pontiff in history, bringing to millions his blend of personal magnetism and forthright affirmation of traditional Roman Catholic values.

Ahead of him in the next three months are visits to six African nations, France and Brazil, the country with the largest number of Roman Catholics in the world. In November, the pope will make his first Asian swing with a visit to the Philippines and possibly stops elsewhere.

Finalists In Scholars Event

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Office of Education and the Commission on Presidential Scholars have announced the selection of two students at Rose High School as finalists in the 1980 Presidential Scholars Program.

The two, both seniors, are Fred Parham and Susan R. Vick. Parham is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred M. Parham, and Ms. Vick is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Bernard Vick.

The two are among 1,000 outstanding young American students in their senior year selected as finalists from more than three million seniors to graduate this year. Each finalist receives a certificate by the President's Commission on Presidential scholars.

Bike-a-thon Chairpersons

ATLANTA, GA. — Mrs. Karen Luckeydoo and Miss Michele Gentile of Grimesland have been appointed chairpersons for the annual "Wheel for Life" Bike-a-thon to be held in Grimesland on April 19.

The "Wheels for Life" event will benefit St. Jude Children's Research Hospital. St. Jude is devoted to medical research and treatment of children stricken with diseases such as leukemia, Hodgkins disease and other forms of cancer.

It is the largest childhood cancer research center in the world, and receives assistance from federal grants and is supported by voluntary contributions raised through such events as the "Wheels for Life" Bike-a-thon.

Last year he visited six countries in addition to appearances around Italy. There is evidence he left some imprints. But the question is how lasting they will be or if they will create a backlash.

The Italian press recently published several articles claiming the pope may be seriously ill with a blood disease. The Vatican brushed aside the reports, saying the hectic schedule of the pope — who will be 60 on May 18 — is evidence of his sound condition.

Pope Paul VI, who died Aug. 6, 1978, was the first jet-age pontiff and became known as the "apostle on the move," giving a sense of the universal mission of the church. He was the first pope to leave Italy since Pius VII, who was taken against his will to France by Napoleon in 1809 and kept a prisoner there until 1814.

Paul made nine overseas trips between 1964 and 1970, a frail figure in white caught up in the swirl of crowds from Bombay to New York City, from Manila to Bogota, straining for their first glimpse ever of a pope.

But in 1970, weary and 72, Paul halted all foreign travel.

Since his election as pontiff in October 1978, John Paul has set a grueling pace for himself. He toured the Dominican Republic and Mexico, returned to his native Poland, visited Ireland and made a six-city swing through the United States, and ended 1979 with a visit to Turkey for talks on reunification with the Eastern Orthodox Church.

With the exception of a restrained reception in predominantly Moslem Turkey, the pope has attracted hundreds of thousands to most of his foreign appearances, capturing his audiences with openness and humor whether at New York's Madison Square Garden, a sunbaked field in Oaxaca, Mexico, or a Dublin park.

In his trip around the secularized United States, the pope gave a message of hope, brotherhood, social justice and admonitions against material pursuits.

"At least he's getting a hearing," says the Rev. Vincent O'Keefe, a top Jesuit official who followed the pope on his tour of the United States.

"Will he really be a factor in the big decisions one makes, will it touch on our consciences, make our society less violent? The jury is still out on that."

Racial Tensions High After Ga. Town Brawl

By STEELE HOLMAN
Associated Press Writer
WRIGHTSVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Black leaders planned their next moves in a bid for economic equality as state troopers maintained a tense peace in this small Georgia town after two days of racial confrontations and the apparent sniper shooting of a young white man.

The 23-year-old man was slightly wounded late Wednesday night when he was struck in the shoulder by what may have been a .22-caliber bullet while driving near a black area of town.

At least 10 persons have been injured since Tuesday, when a group of black demonstrators scuffled with a white mob they said included law officials.

Following the apparent shooting incident, 30 state troopers ordered out by Gov. George Busbee cruised through the black neighborhood, dismantling barricades of steel drums and cinderblocks and confiscating several shotguns and pistols.

County Medical Examiner Bill Dodd said the shoulder wound sustained by Keith Roberts of Wrightsville was not deep, and added that police found evidence of a .22-caliber bullet in Roberts' car.

gathered at the Johnson County courthouse, scene of Tuesday's attack.

The Rev. Fred Taylor, an organizing chairman for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said black leaders were to meet today to plan their next steps in the protest against what they said was planned exclusion of blacks from decent jobs in the area.

Racial tensions in the town of 2,100 snapped Tuesday when about 75 blacks gathered in protest on the courthouse lawn. Black leaders said they were attacked by about 100 whites, including the sheriff and other law officers. At least nine persons received minor injuries.

"The people are just so tense. This town is covered with a real cloud of fear," Taylor said. "We don't know what we're going to be able to do. Folks are just scared."

Yesterday's Cryptquip — OSCULATION IS SOMETIMES A PLEASANT OCCUPATION.

Today's Cryptquip clue: N equals S

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Federal Reserve Manages Money

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORP.

The Federal Reserve Board has been in the spotlight for the past six months as a result of its anti-inflation moves. A closer look at how this independent organization operates could provide an understanding of what is involved in reducing inflation.

The Fed consists of 12 Federal Reserve Banks and approximately 5,500 member banks across the country. It is this nation's central bank, serving as agent for the Treasury and as a clearing house for checks, as well as supplying banks with money. Its principal job is to manage the money supply.

The money supply, that amount of money available for borrowing or spending, is a major determinant of how the economy runs. Too much money can fuel inflation while too little can result in a recession. The Fed's policy is to provide sufficient money for stable economic growth, without inflation or recession.

There are a number of tools the Fed can use to control the money supply. The strongest is the ability to raise or lower reserve requirements for its member banks. Banks must deposit with the Fed a percentage of their total deposits, so a change in reserve requirements will increase or decrease the amount of money a bank has available to lend.

A second measure the Fed can use is the discount rate, the rate charged member banks on funds they borrow from the Fed. Higher rates signal costlier and harder-to-find credit. The Federal Reserve can also change interest rate ceilings member banks pay on savings deposits. Higher rates encourage savings, thus providing more money for banks to lend.

The most useful tool of the Federal Reserve System is direct intervention in the financial markets through open-market operations. This simply consists of buying and selling securities much as other investors do. Open market transactions have an immediate impact on bank reserves and thus on the money supply. When the Fed buys securities, it pays for them with a check deposited in the seller's bank account, thus increasing money available for lending. When securities are sold, the Fed receives payment from the bank, which reduces the funds that bank has available for lending.

The Federal Reserve Board must constantly monitor the state of the economy to determine what actions need to be taken. Particularly in the management of the money supply, problems can occur every step of the way. Misinterpretation of economic trends, changes in people's banking habits and electronic funds transfer systems can all make the management of the money supply very difficult.

Recent changes in Federal Reserve policies all indicate a tightening of the money supply. In the short term, this can lead to a recession. Over the longer term, however, stable, moderate growth in the money supply could lead to lower inflation and steadier economic growth.

Many Nervous People In Quake-Prone Peru

By KERNAN TURNER
Associated Press Writer

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Tidal wave. The dreaded words passed from house to house recently in Callao, the seaport which serves Lima and other West Coast communities.

City officials said later that many residents had been awakened before dawn by telephone calls warning that Callao would soon be flooded by the wave. One Catholic church rang its bells to sound the alarm.

Hundreds of frightened persons ran from their homes in panic, rushing in the dark toward higher ground.

The rumor turned out to be unfounded, but the reaction revealed the apprehension building up in this South American capital over a U.S. scientist's published theory that a major earthquake, perhaps followed by a tidal wave, could strike southwestern Peru next year.

Concern over the theory is being expressed behind closed doors at the highest levels of government.

Civil Defense, the Red Cross and the National Geophysical Institute have proposed new expenditures on measures aimed at reducing the loss of life and property in a major earthquake.

Brian T. Brady, a physicist and consultant to the Denver (Colo.) Mining Research Center of the U.S. Bureau of Mines, published his theory in 1975 in the scientific journal "Pure and Applied Geophysics."

The article said there was evidence to suggest that an earthquake of at least 8.2 degrees on the Richter scale, a "great" earthquake, could occur in Peru in the second half of 1980. He later revised the date to July of 1981.

Brady estimated one epicenter would be some 31 miles offshore from the fishing village of Pucallana, a popular tourist spot only 37 miles south of Lima.

The Peruvian Civil Defense System reported to the Council of Ministers, the military regime's decree-making cabinet, that Brady's theory "is a probability which has its supporters and its detractors, but there is one thing no one is debating: Peru is located in a very active seismological zone, and sooner or later an earthquake of a potentially very destructive magnitude will occur."

Brady's paper bases his theory on laboratory studies of the physical causes of mine-collapse as applied to seismic readings of the aftershocks following the Lima earthquake of 1974. He said there was evidence that tension was building below the ocean floor off Peru toward the release of an immense amount of energy.

"Caretas," a Peruvian news magazine, interviewed Brady

Most other scientists who are familiar with the theory give it probability ratings of from five-tenths of a percent to 20 percent, Giesecke said. He added that what was lacking was field work to support Brady's suppositions. Brady has never been to Peru, Giesecke said.

Giesecke said he had urged the government to invest $1 million to increase the institute's ability to monitor earth-tilting, radiation, magnetism and other precursors of earthquakes.

Earthquakes have nearly destroyed Lima at least 20 times in the last 500 years, Giesecke said. The quake of 1746 killed more than 1,140 persons in Lima. An accompanying tidal wave destroyed Callao and killed 3,800 persons.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
1 NT Pass 3 NT Pass
Pass Pass
Opening lead: Three of ♣.

Before playing to the first trick, declarer should pause and ask himself these questions: 1) From what holding was the opening lead made? 2) Is there any adverse distribution that will ruin my contract? 3) If so, what can I do to counter it?

Failure to follow this ritual could result in South, declarer at three no trump, going down in a contract which is ironclad. The bidding was routine. With a minimum opening and shortness in partner's suit, one no trump was a natural rebid. Holding a full opening bid, a balanced hand and stoppers in every suit, North's jump to three no trump was a foregone conclusion.

West made a normal lead of the fourth-best of his longest suit. To those players who have been drilled in holdup plays, following with a low card from dummy at trick one is so automatic that they don't even stop to think. It is also wrong! East will win and knock out the ace, and when West gets in with the ace of spades, he will take three more club tricks for down one.

Proper technique calls for the play of the ace of clubs at the first trick. That conclusion can be reached by very simple logic. Just answer the questions we posed above. "What holding will defeat my contract?" The answer is five clubs and the ace of spades in one hand. If West has only four clubs, the defenders can get no more than three club tricks and the ace of spades.

"From what is West leading?" One thing is sure—he cannot be leading from the K-Q-J, for with that holding, he would have led the king. So East definitely has one of the honors. If West does have five clubs—the only threat to the contract—then East has a doubleton club honor.

"What can I do to counter that?" Rise with the ace of clubs at trick one! If East holds on to his club honor, he blocks the suit. If he jettisons the king under the ace, declarer's ten-nine of clubs becomes a second stopper. That holds true regardless of whether East's club honor is the king, queen or jack.

CBS Will Keep Robert Daly For Programmer

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Optimism is cheap at the beginning of any endeavor — a baseball season, a marriage, a war. This basic tenet of the human economy extends also to television, where network executives enter each new season with high promises.

But CBS' president of programming, Robert Daly, didn't play the game right this year. His bold prediction was for second place, the same finish his team had last year. He conceded the season to ABC before the thing even started.

He'd never make it as a baseball manager. As a programmer, though, CBS will keep him. Daly's disinclination to daring predictions was a reflection of his programming attitude. He didn't make daring moves in the schedule, either, and it paid off.

With 10 days remaining in the season, CBS is tied for first place with ABC. It's arguable that the ABC-CBS parity is as much the fault of ABC's Tony Thomopoulos (who tinkered with a successful schedule) as of Daly, but that's not the point.

The point is that CBS has a chance of upsetting ABC in a very rich race, where one ratings point is worth an estimated $50 million to a network.

ABC plans to pull out some big guns in the final days and would seem to have the advantage. On Sunday, ABC is repeating "Patton," a sure-fire audience grabber, and on the 14th, the last Monday of the regular season, ABC will broadcast the Academy Awards show, which will sweep the evening for ABC.

Next Friday, ABC will pull a weak show, "When the Whistle Blows," and air a "special" (read "expedient") edition of its popular "That's Incredible!" The network will end the season with a repeat of "The Sting," next Sunday.

CBS will fight back, though, with one of its "Celebrity Battle of the Sexes" pseudo-athletic orgies next Saturday, and a "special" two-hour "Dukes of Hazzard" episode on Sunday.

Unlike baseball and most wars, however, the winner of the TV season isn't undisputed. For one thing, the season itself is a sort of amorphous creature, its beginning and end bearing no discernable relation to reality.

All three networks agree that April 20 is the end of the season, even though all will have some regular series that aren't yet into reruns. The beginning of the "season" last September was worse. ABC started with its new programs a week ahead of CBS and NBC, consequently blowing its rivals out of the water.

And of course, ABC started keeping score of the ratings right then, whereas CBS and NBC started the next week. CBS' ratings tally shows ABC and CBS tied right now while ABC's scoresheet shows ABC ahead by three-tenths of a point.

Consequently, there may be two "winners" at season's end, meaning that both CBS and ABC will be able to charge top dollar for advertisements next season. NBC will finish a distant third, but will not likely go broke.

At Age 15 Robbin Celandor Is Managing Big Pig Operation

FAIRMONT, Minn. (AP) — Robbin Celandor is a fine high-school athlete, which is what you might expect him to be at age 15.

But he's also something you wouldn't expect him to be at his young age — a full-time farmer.

Richard Celandor lost a 13-year battle with Hodgkins disease when Robbin was 13, leaving his son responsible for the farm's hog operation.

Robbin was prepared well for the transition by his father, and two years later finds himself in charge of a very successful pig operation.

He puts in long hours and seven-day weeks sometimes, but complains very little about all the work, says his mother, Marabelle Celandor.

"I've wanted to be a farmer since I was young. I was born on this farm and was always helping Dad. I can remember going out and helping Dad clip teeth and give the little pigs iron when I was a pretty little kid," Robbin said.

"He gets up before 6:30 a.m. and does the chores before going to school," said Mrs. Celandor. "He's busy from morning until night. He tries to stay away from doing anything on Sunday, but things come up from time to time that keep him busy on that day, too.

Between morning and night-time chores, Robbin sandwiches in a full load of classes as a sophomore at East Chain High School near Blue Earth, starts as a guard on his school's undefeated basketball team, plays football in the fall and runs track in the spring. He holds the school record in the 100-yard dash.

He's even busier in the spring and fall when corn and soybeans are planted and harvested on the 240-acre farm seven miles southeast of Fairmont in Martin County.

"We're trying to keep this (the farm) together as a family," said his mother. "We wouldn't have done this if Robbin hadn't wanted to farm. He's got a pretty good head on his shoulders and doesn't complain about getting up in 20-below zero weather to do chores."

His father installed an automatic feeder system in 1973 and stopped farrowing pigs in 1976.

Hard work has paid off for Robbin. He marketed 700 pigs in 1979 and now cares for a thriving 250.

Mrs. Celandor says Robbin gets help from his sister, Kim, a senior at East Chain High School.

"He handles the pork operation almost all by himself," said Mrs. Celandor. "Kim is his right-hand man. She helps him outside as much as she can, helps sort and market pigs and grinds feed."

He also gets help from the farm's long-time mechanic, Ed Langford of Fairmont, and his uncle, Arlo Raatz of Madelia.

Mrs. Celandor is in charge of the farm's bookkeeping and household maintenance. She says she has deliberately stayed away from the hogs in an attempt to make pork production Robbin's sole responsibility.

"I knew if I were in the barn when trouble struck it would have been that much easier for Robbin and his two sisters (Kim and Cynthia) to hand the problem to me, and that would have made it that much more difficult for him in the long run."

Kim's help has made it possible for Robbin to participate in school sports. "She does my evening chores," he said.

"I really enjoy the work. I like the fall field work the best," said Kim, who is thinking of going to vocational school after she graduates from high school. "Eventually, I'd like to live on a farm."

Robbin admits that even with help his busy schedule is tiring — although he does manage to get eight hours of sleep a night — and says he is still learning the operation.

Mrs. Celandor says officials, coaches and teachers at the school have been cooperative in excusing Robbin from classes and activities on days when he has to market and buy hogs, or when emergencies arise on the farm.

Mrs. Celandor is obviously proud of her young son and his accomplishments.

What happens when Robbin graduates from high school?

"I don't know," said Mrs. Celandor. "We're just taking it a day at a time around here. But he wants to farm and will probably end up taking some farm management courses."

Soaps Made Part Of Her Education

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Mitzi Bond started watching television soap operas when she was in the eighth grade.

Now, Ms. Bond has made the soaps a part of her education.

She has just completed her Ph.D. at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro on soap operas, the values of a liberal arts education and college students. Her doctorate was based on a survey of 150 students at North Carolina A&T State University and 150 at UNC-G.

In her survey, she listed six characters from each of the 13 soap operas that run between 12:30 p.m. and 4 p.m. each weekday. She then asked the students to rate the characters by the degree to which they possessed six values theoretically taught by a liberal arts education.

Those values were analytical decisiveness, effective communication, ethics, cultured knowledge, critical judgment and imagination.

Ms. Bond said the survey revealed that the villains exhibited the most initiative and analytical ability, but were low on ethics. The students found redeeming traits in characters and situations they could identify with, she said.

Ms. Bond said she also found that soap opera fans come from all socioeconomic backgrounds and from all academic majors. Her study showed that married students and older students do not watch as many soap operas as the young, single students. But, Ms. Bond said, watching the soaps isn't always fun, even for an avid fan.

"I have to confess I was bored after a couple of hours," she said.
