Cuba Wants Negotiate Evacuation

By GORDON MOTT
Associated Press Writer
SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Cuba wants to negotiate directly with Costa Rica over evacuation of the 10,000 Cubans still trying to leave Havana via the Peruvian Embassy, a Foreign Ministry official here said today.

The Costa Rican government sent an official request to Cuba on Sunday offering permanent residence to all the would-be exiles who wanted to stay in Costa Rica, and appealing for resumption of the evacuation flights Castro had cancelled. Costa Rica is expected to decide today whether to send a negotiator to Havana.

Costa Rica made its offer after Castro insisted the refugees go directly to the countries taking them in instead of to the Costa Rican staging point. In its offer, Costa Rica did not rule out the possibility the exiles could leave for other countries if they chose to do so.

Foreign Ministry official Carlos Aguilar said Cuba had not said resumption of the flights would be allowed. "At least they didn't say no," he said.

A Cuban communique said "Costa Rica cannot utilize the flights programmed in its statement to us April 20 (Sunday) because it has no agreement with the Cuban government," Aguilar said. Castro did not lift the ban he imposed Friday, but he did allow 32 of the would-be exiles to fill empty seats on an Iberia Airlines flight from Havana to Madrid.

Since most of the Cubans who crowded into the Peruvian Embassy's grounds two weeks ago want to go to the United States and flights between Havana and Miami would be difficult to arrange, Costa Rica offered to give the refugees temporary haven until asylum could be arranged for them.

After about 700 had been flown to San Jose and half of those had been flown on to Peru, the Cuban government barred the use of Costa Rica as an intermediate stop and said that henceforth the Cubans must be flown directly to those countries accepting them as refugees.

Costa Rica responded Sunday by offering to accept all of those fleeing from communist rule.

"The doors of Costa Rica remain open for all those who seek a corner in the world wherein to fulfill their aspirations of liberty and peace, without taking into account their origin, ideology or color of their skin," the Foreign Ministry said in a statement.

"We will allow them to stay here but they can also go to other countries if they want to," said one Costa Rican official.

In addition to Peru, which has agreed to accept 1,000, and the United States, which has said it will take up to 3,000, Argentina, Belgium, Brazil, Ecuador, Spain and Sweden have offered to accept some of the Cubans.

Carlos Aguilar of the Costa Rican Foreign Ministry said there were indications Castro would allow flights from Havana to Miami. But he said he thought that would pose legal problems for the United States.

Costa Rica had said it could afford to resettle only 300 of the Cubans on its territory, but Aguilar said contributions from foreign governments and private sources would allow the nation to accommodate up to 10,000.

As an indication of Castro's embarrassment over the rush to leave his rule, his government lifted a freeze on visas for non-communist journalists and allowed reporters, photographers and film crews into Havana just in time for a massive pro-Castro demonstration Saturday. However, they were kept two blocks from the Peruvian embassy and denied all contact with the officials and Cubans inside.

"Fidel! Fidel! Fidel!" an estimated 1 million Cubans chanted as they marched past the Peruvian Embassy to mark the 19th anniversary of the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion.

Commissioners Asked Pay Schools' Fuel Bill

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County Commissioners this morning were asked to provide some $100,000 to the Greenville city school system to fund a deficit created by increased costs of fuel oil, electric service and gasoline over what was budgeted for the 1979-1980 fiscal year.

School officials told commissioners that the Board of Education budgeted for a 20 percent increase in fuel costs for the present year while the actual increase over the past fiscal year was about 100 percent.

The board voted to refer the request to the finance committee in an effort to resolve the matter.

The board this morning also voted to hire a consulting firm to study the needs of the county as far as computer operations are concerned. The project will be funded jointly by the county and Pitt Memorial Hospital, and possibly by the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Reese Hart, director of the Pitt County Development Commission told the board that eight manufacturing plants in the county plan to add between 650 and 740 new jobs by the end of the year. Things "couldn't be better" Hart noted, as far as manufacturing employment in the county is concerned.

In other business, the board approved the sale of lots in the Rosewood Subdivision after county engineer C. A. Holiday said drainage problems in the subdivision have been corrected.

The board, several months ago, withdrew the approval to sell lots in the subdivision because of problems with drainage in the area.

Commissioners also voted to rent an excavator for use at the landfill from R. W. Moore Equipment Co. for $3,600 per month after they were told that present equipment at the landfill could not be repaired.

Commissioners indicated that the equipment would be replaced in the future after it is determined what will best serve the needs at the landfill.

Court Martial Ordered

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — An Army parachute rigger accused of killing an officer by sabotaging a parachute has been ordered to face a general court-martial, authorities said today.

No date for the court-martial to hear the charge against Pfc. Alvin P. Williams, an 82nd Airborne Division parachute rigger, has been set. He is charged with murder in the March 26 death of Capt. Lawrence Hill.

Maj. Roger Smith of the division Public Information Office said Maj. Gen. G.S. Meloy ordered the court-martial after reviewing the findings of an Article 32 hearing held last Monday. The closed-door hearing was the equivalent of a civilian grand jury investigation.

Hill, 26, fell more than 1,000 feet to his death during a routine proficiency jump in which his main parachute never opened. Authorities said Hill tried to open his reserve but was unable to get it open in time.

Williams, 20, is accused of deliberately cutting the parachute's static line.

Smith said that an investigation of the division's 40,000 chutes, which was ordered after Hill's death, is continuing. Army authorities have refused to say whether it revealed any other deliberately flawed chutes.

The Army also has refused to release any details of its investigation leading to the arrest of Williams, a rigger whose job was to pack parachutes for use by the airborne soldiers. The static line of a military parachute is hooked to a cable inside the airplane and automatically opens the chute when the soldier jumps from the plane.

Williams has been in the Army a little over a year. His associates described him as a bright, motivated soldier who took his job seriously and attended night college classes at this Army post.

Scott Presses His Attack On 'Credibility'

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
Former governor Robert W. Scott continued his attack this morning on the credibility of Gov. Jim Hunt, saying that the "people of North Carolina want a governor in whom they can believe and trust."

Scott, who is seeking to return to the chief executive post that he held in the 1970s, told news representatives at the airport that he has found that credibility is a major issue in the campaign and he is proposing a restoration of credibility to the governor's office.

The candidate charged that Hunt "has mismanaged our state's assets, covered up his glaring mistakes and spent our money on the wrong things." Scott said that Hunt's "philosophy, his policies and his spending priorities are wrong. They are not appropriate for North Carolina during the 1980s."

The Haw River Democrat charged that the present governor "has denied the truth about his political spying activities and the whole episode involving sheriffs, Mather Slaughter, and the Department of Crime Control."

Scott, in a news release, said that Hunt has "allowed paroles to be granted to those who have political influence and who contribute to his campaign."

The former governor told the news gathering that the state "can no longer conduct business as usual in the 1980s," adding that a "change in spending priorities" is needed.

Scott said that the "basics in education" must be looked at and the state can not address every program that comes up. He said that money will not be available for major four-laning highway programs as in the past and he suggested that the state will have to "maintain what we've got."

Mentioning the continuing controversy over Virginia Electric & Power Co. service in the state, Scott said that Hunt is "doing a lot of talking" about a situation that "little can be done about" immediately. He said that "you have two power companies (Veeco and Carolina Power & Light Co.) that may or may not" wish to alter their service areas. Scott said that it will "take a long time" before federal and state agencies can do anything about the problem.

"When you tell Veeco to get out, it is something he (Hunt) simply can not do," Scott contended. He questioned why Hunt allowed legislation to be passed that lets utility companies build new facilities and charge taxpayers for the new work as the structures are being built.

Scott said that North Carolina ranks only behind Florida in the importation of illegal drugs by sea and air. To help remedy that unenviable ranking, the candidate suggested a beefing up of the State Bureau of Investigation so that manpower can be provided to help local law enforcement agencies attack the problem. He also proposed the creation of a task force of federal, state and local law enforcement personnel that would spend "full time" on the drug problem.

Scott said that while economic problems are nationwide, there are things that the governor can do to help the situation. "First, he can manage our state government efficiently and effectively," he said. "Second, he can make sure that government is setting an example by cutting the frills - and getting the most out of every tax dollar that is spent."

He said that the governor "can be an outspoken advocate for those who are suffering most: the economically disadvantaged, the elderly, the mentally and physically handicapped, and the hard working wage earners trying to provide for their families."

The candidate charged that Hunt "turns his back on friends" and he said that the positions of the governor are (Continued on page 8)

Hostage Talks To Mother

By The Associated Press
The youngest American hostage met alone for an hour with his mother in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran today, militants holding the embassy said by telephone. It was the first visit by a relative allowed by the militants since the mission was seized 170 days ago.

Meanwhile, witnesses reported at least one dead and many injured at Tehran University in fresh battles between pro-government and leftist students opposed to the regime's decision to purge the schools of anti-Islamic ideology.

Contacted by telephone, a militant spokesman said no Iranian officials were present when Barbara Timm of Oak Creek, Wis., met privately with her son, 20-year-old Marine Sgt. Kevin Hermining. The spokesman said Mrs. Timm also talked with Iranian officials while inside the embassy.

A spokesman for the militants said Sunday they decided against allowing families of the hostages to visit the captives but might reconsider if asked by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the leader of the Iranian revolution.

Later Sunday, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh told a news conference Khomeini was in favor of letting the hostages' immediate families visit them. And Radio Tehran said President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr and Ghotbzadeh had sent a written request to the militants to let Mrs. Timm visit her son.

Mrs. Timm arrived in Tehran Saturday in defiance of President Carter's ban on travel to Iran by all Americans except journalists. Relatives of three other hostages also were planning to go to Tehran this week, according to a group in Lawrence, Kan., that arranged Easter services for the captives by three U.S. clergymen.

Another American who defied Carter's travel ban was Dick Gregory, who arrived in the Iranian capital Saturday. Rock Newman, a member of the Howard University staff who also is in Tehran, said Gregory hoped to meet with Khomeini and the hostages and was fasting while he waited.

Meanwhile, Khomeini's revolutionary regime was beset with more fighting in rebellious Kurdistan, continuing unrest on the university campuses and the threatened loss of much of its vital oil revenue.

The 28th army division in Sanandaj, the Kurdish rebels' capital in northwest Iran, said its troops were being fired on at the officers' club, the radio and TV station and the airport. It warned people in those areas to flee, Radio Tehran said.

Kurdish rebel sources reported 60 government troops and rebels were killed in fighting Friday and Saturday in the town of Saghez, 90 miles northwest of Sanandaj, and 10 civilians were killed there Sunday.

The Tehran newspaper Kayhan said a spokesman for the Kurdish Democratic Party, which is spearheading the Kurds' drive for autonomy, told it, "Kurdistan is exploding," and that hundreds of Kurds were fleeing across the border into Turkey to escape government air attacks.

On the university campuses, one student was reported killed and hundreds injured over the weekend in battles between Moslem fundamentalists and leftists fighting over the ruling Revolutionary Council's order Friday to shut down the leftists' university offices in a purge of anti-Islamic ideology.

The council closed most universities in an effort to halt the violence, and Radio Tehran reported that Islamic societies and associations of Moslem students asked the council to dissolve the present university system.

Allies Discuss Unified Action

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
Associated Press Writer
LUXEMBOURG (AP) — Common Market foreign ministers meet here today to discuss President Carter's call for strong unified action by the U.S. allies to help win the release of the American hostages in Iran.

Carter hopes the meeting will result in a European Economic Community decision to impose economic sanctions on Iran and a break in EEC diplomatic relations with the Tehran government.

Britain has been urging its Common Market partners to give strong backing to Carter's request for tough measures. There has been resistance from some governments, notably France.

But there were reports over the weekend that French leaders pressured by Britain, West Germany and Belgium had agreed to go further than a mere verbal condemnation of Iranian actions.

The possibility of EEC backing for Washington was enhanced after Japanese Foreign Minister Saburo Okita decided to come to Luxembourg and work with the EEC on a common strategy.

Japan has refused to accept Iran's announced increase in the price of its oil from $32.50 to $35 a barrel and faced a cutoff by the Tehran government today.

However, 200,000 of the 530,000 barrels of Iranian oil Japan imports daily will be supplied by Qatar and Mexico under new deals. Japan also has a three-month stockpile and will ask the United States for help.

Iranian oil shipments to Portugal were cut off last week when the Lisbon government stopped trading with Iran in support of Carter's moves.

Other Europeans have been reluctant to impose trade sanctions on Iran because they don't want a cutoff in the 650,000 barrels of Iranian oil they get a day.

Plunges From A Ferris Wheel

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — While his brother hung on to a cross-bar, a 24-year-old man plunged 60 feet to his death from a Ferris wheel seat, police say.

Sheriff's Deputy Robert Burns said Shawn O'Brien, 24, of Onondaga, and his brother, Patrick O'Brien, 28, of Baldwinsville, were "rocking the seat back and forth" when "the chair slipped right over, ejecting both."

Burns said Shawn was thrown 60 feet to the ground and landed head-first. He was pronounced dead on arrival at the Upstate Medical Center.

UAW Prexy Is Not Optimistic

DETROIT (AP) — United Auto Workers President Douglas A. Fraser doubts whether the slumping auto industry will ever completely recover from the deepening depression it is in.

Fraser said Sunday he expects more layoffs later this year and predicts that employment won't return to last year's level until the fall of 1981.

Fraser said he believes the forthcoming slump will be worse than 1974-75, when 300,000 workers were idled. Nearly 200,000 workers are already jobless, he said. Total employment by U.S. automakers is 780,000.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Thirty years and six great kids ago, my wife, like MAGGIE, was a "never-before-mass-gal." She also believed that sex was dirty and sinful.

An old priest put a stop to all that nonsense. He pulled a book from the top shelf of his library and handed it to my wife with instructions for her to call him after every chapter. He also instructed me never to let two weeks go by without bringing my wife a rose.

When the kids were little, our family doctor wrote on a prescription pad, "One weekend, every six weeks, get a sitter for the kids, buy a bottle of wine, check into a motel with your wife, and treat her like a hooker. And don't say you can't afford to. You can't afford not to."

Today our children are educated, well-adjusted and independent, and I am left with a lovable, exciting wife. Thank you, Father Joe and Doctor Bob!

CHRISTIANS SHOULD BE LOVERS

DEAR CHRISTIAN: Right on. And so should Jews, Buddhists, Moslems, Hindus, etc.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to referring to bullfighting as "the brutal, bloody business of torturing animals for sport and entertainment." This is your own personal opinion, and you have no right to tear down something you don't understand. And you obviously didn't research the subject or you wouldn't have told the young woman that since bullfighting is illegal in the U.S., she would have to go to a country where it is legal to be trained as a bullfighter.

I am an ex-lady-bullfighter who received two years' training in the U.S. There actually was a bullfighting school in Los Angeles. It was not taught as a "sport" because it is an art.

After I retired from bullfighting, I became very much involved in humane work, and believe me, I should have stuck to bullfighting. I am the president of Feline and Canine Friends, Inc. — dedicated to the humane treatment of animals, and this is the most heartbreaking work in the world.

The cruelty that man imposes on animals is unforgivable. Laboratory animals are tortured and caged until the only peace they know is death. Do you think about what animals must endure so you can walk in leather shoes? Or when you eat baby veal? Or wear a fur coat? Check it out, if you have the nerve.

ROSE H. IN ANAHEIM

DEAR ROSE: What you say may be true, but does man's inhumane treatment of other animals justify man's inhumane treatment of the bull for sport, entertainment or art?

DEAR ABBY: My father was 72 when he died last month. He had an operation, and after being in surgery for over four hours he died on the table, so I would say the operation was a failure, wouldn't you?

Well, his doctor had the nerve to send us a bill for the surgery! Abby, do you think a doctor should be paid for an operation that failed?

HIS DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Yes. The doctor put forth as much skill, effort and time on an operation that failed as he would have for an operation that succeeded.

Price Of Dowry Soars In The Arab Emirates

EDITOR'S NOTE — The oil boom in the United Arab Emirates has had at least one unusual effect. It has raised the price of dowry payments. As a result, many more Arab men are marrying foreign women.

By KATHLEEN BISTHAWI
ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Inflation has hit the bridal market in Abu Dhabi and the oil-rich sheikhdom's young men increasingly are marrying foreign women who do not require expensive dowry payments.

The result is that a growing number of Abu Dhabi girls are faced with the prospect of spinsterhood unless the government plays Cupid with financial or other incentives.

Dowries — or mahr in Arabic — are a traditional part of the Islamic marital system. They are paid to the bride's family in equal shares at marriage and in the event of divorce.

The dowry system, mentioned in the Koran, is a way of protecting women from the whims of husbands, who can easily di-voice wives under Islamic laws.

But dowry prices have been rising sharply since the oil boom began six years ago, raising per capita income to the equivalent of $14,000 a year. Even the daughter of, say, a police sergeant, may command a dowry of up to $27,000. Other women command hundreds of thousands of dollars in dowries.

Finding dowries beyond their reach, the less affluent Abu Dhabi men are taking the cheaper way out and marrying Egyptians, Indian or Pakistani or other foreign women. A recent survey of 100 families by the Social Affairs Ministry showed that 10 percent contained foreign wives.

Marriage agencies in Cairo, Pakistan and a number of Indian cities can easily arrange brides for visiting Abu Dhabi males. The fee for an Egyptian girl is only about $3,000 and Indian brides can be had for as little as $80.

But the idea of a ban on marriages between nationals and foreigners finds little favor. An Indian official in Abu Dhabi says that "such a move would be against human rights because it could prevent genuine love matches." An Abu Dhabi official says it would be against the beliefs of Islam to restrict marriage partners in any way.

Last year, a local women's association considered a petition to U.A.E. President Sheik Zayed, asking for a fund so young men could borrow money to help pay dowry prices.

Kuwait already has such a fund.

Previous attempts to limit the dowry prices have all failed. Many fathers regard their daughters' bridal price as an indicator of their social and family status.

Now government sociologists have proposed that Abu Dhabi males marrying local girls (for the first marriage only) be given a loan of $13,500, either in cash or furniture. Abu Dhabi nationals already are entitled to a free house from the state. This loan would turn into a straight grant once the first child is born. If there were a divorce, the money would be refunded. The housing and justice ministries now are considering the proposals.

If, however, an Abu Dhabi national still opts for a foreign wife, then under the new proposals he would have to place a sum equivalent to $27,000 in a bank. In the event of a divorce, the money would be used to fly the girl back home and the remainder would constitute a lump-sum alimony payment.

"It is perhaps a tragic and complicated problem that we have about marriage," an official in the Social Affairs Ministry comments. "You could say it is one of the unfortunate side effects of the oil wealth."

Police Checking Church Theft

Greenville Police today are continuing their investigation of the theft of $1,450 from Grace Free Will Baptist Church Sunday, Chief Glenn Cannon said.

According to Cannon, the $1,100 in checks and $350 in cash was taken from a safe in the church office between 11:25 a.m. and 6 p.m.

There was no sign of forced entry to the office or safe, the chief noted.

Two Collisions Are Reported

An estimated $1,500 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated here yesterday by Greenville Police.

Heaviest damage resulted from a 2:20 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Paris Avenue and Chestnut Street involving cars driven by Sutton Austin of Greenville, and Chiller Jean August of Amityville, N.Y.

Investigators, who charged August with driving without a license and failing to yield the right of way, estimated damage at $500 to the Austin car and $300 to the August vehicle.

The second mishap occurred about 5:15 p.m. at Beef 'N Shakes at 213 East Fifth St.

Officers reported a car driven by Ricky Dale Giles of 505 East Fifth St. jumped the curb and struck the front door of the business, causing an estimated $200 damage to the car and about $500 damage to the building.

The pupil of an eye appears to be a solid black spot because the eye's dark interior is directly behind it. The size of the pupil is automatically adjusted by nerve signals to the muscles of the iris letting in the correct amount of light for seeing. The eye's focusing mechanism will also control the pupil's size, much as a photographer will close his camera's aperture for a sharper focus. Size reduction in the pupil will sharpen near vision. As a result, a far sighted person will squint when doing close work. Corrective glasses will greatly relieve this situation. Emotional response can also determine pupil size.

Corrective lenses serve to adjust a variety of optical malfunctions. At CLEAR VUE OPTICIANS, 1705 6th, Physicians Quadrangle Building A, we provide these corrective lenses in addition to providing the personal service that assures you of a comfortable fit of your eyewear as well as a selection of the frames that are fashionable. Bringing To Light The Ladies' Achievements

By JO-ANNE BYRNE
MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Composer Lillian Hardin "Lil" Armstrong led her own all-woman band in the 1930s. Some people claim she taught her husband, Louis Armstrong, music theory, says Andrea Hinding.

"On one level," Ms. Hinding said, "we can feel deprived that it's only Louis Armstrong who is known to us in our collective national consciousness — that Lillian Armstrong didn't get to perform center stage."

"That's true, and it's unfortunate. But we can still be proud of her. We found thousands and thousands of women who weren't quite center stage."

Ms. Hinding made those discoveries in editing "Women's History Sources: A Guide to Archives and Manuscript Collections in the United States" (Bowker $175).

This new, two-volume reference set, four years in the works, brings into public view for the first time thousands of women from colonial times to the present.

In an interview, Ms. Hinding said the books mostly record the achievements of women whose lives fell somewhere between fame and failure.

"One can deduce from the books that women led circumscribed lives, but one of the things that kept us going through 10,000 manuscript pages was our own sense of all these magnificent women who survived and achieved in spite of the obstacles."

Material was obtained through a nationwide survey conducted at the University of Minnesota. The books list 18,026 collections available as references for researchers.

The famous and the little known, the college presidents, and nuns who served are included and such as Abigail Adams and Muriel Humphrey, Nancy Luce and "Old Mother Featherlegs," among them.

Nancy Luce was an Edgartown, Mass., poet who lived by herself on a farm and kept chickens as pets. She wrote a book of poetry about her chickens called "Poor Little Hearts." When her favorites died, she erected gravestones for them and inscribed them with her own poems.

"Old Mother Featherlegs" operated a hangout for outlaws along the Cheyenne-Black Hill Trail in Wyoming and was murdered by the outlaw "Dangerous Dick." She got her name from the red, ruffled pantalettes she wore, which fluttered in the breeze "like a feather-legged chicken" when she rode horseback.

Typical materials include a history of 25 women educators who taught in China, papers of a Lutheran organization serving young professional and business women, the Sister Elisabeth Kenny archives at Abbott-Northwestern Hospital and a Catholic college's collection of material on the psychological liberation of women.

Through the years people adopted male values, Ms. Hinding said, and tended to snicker at traditional contributions women have made through such organizations as literary societies or garden clubs — "mother's little club."

But when women are looked at through their organizational work, Ms. Hinding said, "we can see the cumulative impact."

The total number of women for whom there are entries is itself impressive: 305 journalists, 412 physicians, 352 attorneys, 449 college teachers, 338 poets, 250 housewives, 118 novelists, 1,500 authors and 134 Native Americans.

History professor Clarke Chambers said even individuals with no interest in women's history will benefit from the work.

"It opens up for all scholars a universe of places to go look for materials. Scholars may have known about them locally," he said, "but here for the first time they are in a centralized source."

The reference set was funded with a $500,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities and $100,000 from the University of Minnesota. It has been selected as an outstanding reference source of 1979 by the Outstanding Reference Sources Committee of the American Library Association.

Bryant-Smith Vows Said Couple Exchanges Vows Friday On Sunday Afternoon

Deborah Ann Smith and Mitchell Dwight Bryant were united in a double ring ceremony at 3 p.m. Sunday in the Hollywood Presbyterian Church by the Rev. Gerald M. Anders.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Margaret B. Smith and the late Mr. Charles W. Smith of Rt. 2, Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carey Bryant Jr. of Parmele.

Wedding music was provided by Mrs. Sandy Matthews, organist, and Mrs. Hazel Evans and Burney W. Baker, uncle of the bride, soloists.

Given in marriage by her brother, Charles Woody Smith, the bride wore a formal gown of white organza over white peau de soie designed with a high collar of scalloped antique lace beaded in clusters and scallops of bridal pearls and outlined in ruffled cluny lace. The long fitted sleeves of antique lace with the beaded scrolls featured cuffs of ruffled cluny lace. The A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were accentuated with a flounce of the antique lace. The Art of Carpeting & Decor

by Larry C. Whitlow

Concerned with efficient and attractive placement of a new or remodeled kitchen? In today's energy conscious times, many homes are built with windowless north sides. This may not make a good place for the kitchen unless much natural lighting comes through windows on the east or south. Plan the kitchen with the cooking and dining habits of your family in mind. Make sure there is good access for serving. No more than two doors are recommended, with one wide enough to move in appliances. Place the doors so that kitchen traffic moves around the meal preparation area.

Place your confidence in us at LARRY'S CARPETLAND INC., 3010 E. 10th St., 758-2300 when decorating. Armstrong, Congoleum and Mannington vinyl and a wide choice of quality brands of carpeting can be seen when you visit us. Master Charge and Bank Americard/Visa credit cards are honored. Open: Mon. thru Fri. 9 a.m.-5:30 p.m., Sat. 9 a.m.-1 p.m.

HANDY HINT: Many decorators recommend that the kitchen be out of view of the main living areas.

Gold Medal For Infiltration?

If we can believe the Soviets the United States will participate in the Olympic games after all. Now we know that President Carter has made it clear he does not expect our athletes to attend the Moscow games. In fact, he is willing to take whatever action necessary to keep the athletes from going. Likely, too, that presidential action won't be necessary. In face of the presidential opposition it is unlikely that any of the athletes will try to go to Moscow.

Then what will be the American participation? Soviet newspaper "Moskovskaya" says that the CIA is preparing to undermine the games. This will be done by specialists in subversion infiltrating the event. According to the Soviets the teams will have ammunition — all kinds of anti-Soviet literature, placards and leaflets. Worse the infiltrators will have T-shirts, jackets, shoulder bags, raincoats, umbrellas on which there are pictures of renegades and traitors. There might also be slogans in defense of human rights.

The volunteers will be under 30, speak Russian or another Soviet language and come primarily from Harvard and the University of Pennsylvania.

Wonder if there is a gold medal for Olympics infiltration?

GOP Race Narrows Down To Reagan

Gradually the Republican race for the presidential nomination is narrowing down.

Rep. Philip M. Crane, who has conducted a lengthy campaign, announced last week that he was withdrawing from the race. A conservative, Rep. Crane offered his support to Ronald Reagan, whose political philosophy is similar to that of Crane's.

The GOP race seems to be rapidly closing down with Reagan close to having a clear shot at the nomination. There might not be much to fight about by the time the GOP convention rolls around this summer.

THIS AFTERNOON Envy In The Tax Offices

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Retail sales in North Carolina continue to enjoy boom times, and the sales tax collections are reaching new records.

Little wonder that local government officials continue to cast longing looks at the prospects of more income from that source.

BILL NOBLITT

When the statewide Association of County Commissioners recently held district meetings at various locations to talk about problems and proposals, county officials at seven of the 10 meetings raised — without prompting — the idea of adding another penny to the sales tax.

The state currently collects three cents tax on every dollar spent, including food. Only big-ticket cars and trucks, airplanes and boats are exempted from the tax. Those purchases are taxed at the rate of one and one-half percent, with a total tax limit of $120 per item.

Local governments now have the option of sharing in the sales tax bonanza by tacking on a fourth penny which the state collects from the merchants, then rebates to county and municipal governments.

Wide Use
Of the state's 100 counties, only one (Burke) does not participate in this taxation plan.

Why are local officials so enamored of this approach? Two key reasons exist:

—The local penny tax is obscured by state collection, so local officials don't get any flak about that as they invariably do over increased property taxes.

—Even in inflationary times when money is getting tight, sales taxes continue to go up and up.

Each penny of the tax is now producing approximately $175 million per year. It is widely accepted that the local penny has helped county commissioners keep the lid on rapidly escalating local property taxes which otherwise would have gone up even more.

For the past 10 years the average annual growth in the sales tax has been 10.4 percent, and that rapid increase holds even in the face of exceptionally low sales tax collections in the recession of 1974-75.

Estimated growth this year and next by state experts is about eight or nine percent — and those estimates are always low. The sales tax is the second-largest tax source in the state, after income taxes.

Strangely, tight money, tight credit, and the threat of a recession have not as yet put the damper on retail spending by consumers who, fearing even higher prices next month or next year, continue to spend.

At the district meetings of the Association of County Commissioners, the talk centered around adding

THE INSIDE REPORT Exploits The Hard Times

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WILKES-BARRE, Pa. — In the crowded lobby of Genetti's Best Western Hotel an hour before Sen. Edward M. Kennedy addressed a rally in Wilkes-Barre's Public Square a half block away, the growing political danger to Jimmy Carter was laid bare.

Sam Bianco, head of the local Central Labor Council, was complaining to fellow Democratic politicians about President Carter's budget cuts in the midst of an economic downturn. No matter that Carter political operatives have assured Bianco that Luzerne County's 4,000 government (CETA) jobs will not be lost. He does not believe them.

Bianco is, at least institutionally, a Carter man (because his union, the International Ladies Garment Workers (ILGWU), have endorsed the president for reelection). This adds significance to Bianco's comment after hearing Kennedy's rally speech which thrashed Carter on economic ground as more Republican than Democratic. "Man, was I surprised," the union official told us. "I didn't think he (Kennedy) could give that good a speech."

Kennedy, a self-confident platform performer bearing little resemblance to the bewildered candidate of three months ago, now is able to exploit economic bad news. That is the essence of why he may well defeat Carter in Pennsylvania's April 22 primary and why the president's men are growing uneasy about what lies ahead.

Kennedy is no oratorical stylist. Nor does the substance of his speeches offer new ideas or insights. But whereas he stumbled across lows in January seemingly with nothing to say, he now roars across Pennsylvania preaching the old-time Democratic religion of economic salvation through governmental intervention.

The political impact is seen here in the Wilkes-Barre and Scranton region, supposedly "Kennedy country" because of John F. Kennedy's 1960 victory margin. In fact, Kennedy pollster Peter Hart two months ago found a Carter lead of better than 20 percentage points in this congressional district.

The Kennedy turnaround came only after times became bad enough (11.5 percent unemployment here). Then voters could concentrate hard enough on what he is saying to put aside, at least temporarily, thoughts of Chappaquiddick — perhaps more difficult here because the Kopechne family lives nearby. Thus, in Public Square, Kennedy evoked cheers when he compared Carter's economic policy ("high interest rates and unemployment") to McKinley, Hoover and Nixon, and declared "It's time to say enough."

Kennedy's basic line in Pennsylvania makes not the slightest concession to any doubts about the old liberal verity of economic health achieved through government spending. In a day when fealty to the goal of a "balanced budget" is nearly universal among politicians, those words do not escape Kennedy's lips in Pennsylvania.

Campaigning in Philadelphia, Kennedy has pounded relentlessly on the theme that Carter "has turned his back on the cities of this country." The Carter balanced budget with its spending cuts is reviled by Kennedy, particularly in pressing for black votes. Interviewed by influential black journalist Chuck Stone over television in Philadelphia, Kennedy said the president "instead of cutting back aid to the cities, should cut back" on oil drilling tax deductions.

Such hammering on New Deal economics does not generate the emotion evoked by his two brothers. He could not fully rouse the big crowd at Public Square here. The night before in Philadelphia, he could not win either applause or complete silence from party regulars, gabbing and drinking red wine at their annual Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner.

Some of Kennedy's most

I believe the only way he can fight this is by holding a weekly radio and TV show, along the lines of "The Answer Man," where people could call in and ask him questions so that his answers would not be filtered through the people who are covering him.

It would go something like this.

"Governor, could you tell us how you would resolve the energy crisis?"

To the editor

I was interested in Senator Morgan's comments here recently condemning fundamentalist ministers who speak out on current issues. Mr. Morgan would have us believe he is defending the historic interpretation of separation of church and state.

Fundamentalists have historically been known to speak out on moral issues. They have that right. If Congress decides that a moral issue is a political issue, that doesn't change it from being a moral issue. The Bible, a book fundamentalists use from which to preach, is authoritative on moral issues. God had something to say on abortion, ERA, New Generation, homosexuality, sex education, and a host of other MORAL issues, thousands of years before Morgan ever sought reelection.

Morgan says preachers should leave these moral issues, which have recently become political issues, alone. Perhaps he has a point. Maybe we should let Congress decide the subject on which a preacher may preach. If Congress decides the Bible is taboo in the pulpit, then maybe the President could appoint a National Committee to determine proper sermon topics. Morgan may want to introduce legislation which forbids preaching on any subject not approved by this committee. He, our zealous defender of church and state, may even want to set up a telephone hotline so we could quickly report any minister having an anti-American spirit and preaching on Biblical morality and principles. We ought to do this. We simple must preserve Morgan's interpretation of separation of church and state. These religious "demagogues," as Morgan called them, must be silenced.

Cooke Impact Stays

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP)

— Television, particularly the public sector, is suffering from the Alistair Cooke syndrome.

Like Murvie's lesser plague, the disease used to be rather rare, but now it is reaching epidemic proportions. Highly communicable, it is spread from mouth to ear by a carrier known as the host.

Cooke's syndrome was first isolated when British commentator Alistair Cooke began serving as host for "Upstairs, Downstairs," the British import that showed U.S. audiences there was more to public broadcasting than harpsichord players and nuclear physicists.

Without his insights, we Americans would never have guessed that Hudson was a butler, Rose the upstairs maid and Mrs. Bridges the cook. Cooke's mission was to inject the social significance that separates a maxi-series from an ordinary soap.

The idea is to make the already palatable preposterous enough for the pseudo-intellectuals to enjoy without guilt and without sending postcards asking whatever became of the Dnepropetrovsky Wind Ensemble or Dr. Wolfgang Ludendorff's lectures on the incidence of Murvie's lesser plague among the hashish harvesters of the Hindu Kush.

When Hudson hung up his silver salver and went off to run a boarding house with Mrs. Bridges, Cooke stayed to elevate the highly perfumed soap, "The Duchess of Duke Street," which had the gall to come in two parts but remained a rather soggy Edwardian trifle.

By now hosts were rampant and couchant on couches or behind carved oak desks all over the tube.

Along came Henry Fonda, telling us as host on "The American Short Story" that Willa Cather's great short story, "Paul's Case," is a great short story because she was a great short story writer. Or words to that effect. Since they don't teach English in schools anymore, what with everyone watching TV, if Henry wasn't there to intone the hallowed hype, you wouldn't know that what you were about to watch was literature, would you?

Hosting reached its most hokey when Gene Shalit was stationed in the foreground of Edward Gorey's graceful graphics to hold forth on public broadcasting's "Mystery!" series. Normally a witty critic, Shalit bogged down while trying at too great a length to tell his audience why "Rumpole of the Bailey" was classy comic mystery and not an ordinary whodunit. Since Rumpole was played by the marvelously Falstaffian Leo McKern and written by classy John Mortimer, Shalit's presence in a too cute Victorian haunted-house setting only delayed the proceedings with pseudo-cultural claptrap.

Unless Cooke's syndrome is brought under control, we shall be in danger of having Archie Bunker introduced by Sir John Gielgud and Muhammad Ali's comeback heavyweight preceded by a

Strength For Today

DIVINE SOLICITUDE
The love of God indeed passes human understanding. In the past some theologians taught that Christ was offered up on the cross to placate the anger of God, which had been aroused by men's sin. Presumably no one believes this today, and we wonder how anyone reading the New Testament could ever have believed it. Paul expressed the core of the gospels in one sentence: "But God commended His own love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us."

The love of God is such that He never ceases to seek after us. But if we persistently say No to Him, we believe that He will, with sadness, reject those who have rejected Him. This is consistent with His loving purpose, for those who continually refuse to acknowledge His love and act upon it show themselves at life's end to be unworthy of fellowship with Him whom they have spurned.

Statistical Evidence Ignored

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter stood apart from many other Americans when, in defiance of overwhelming statistical evidence, he expressed faith and confidence in America's immediate economic future.

Despite conceding that a recession might have begun, the president declared "I have a very good feeling about the future this year — about controlling inflation and reduced interest rates."

If the polls are good guides, and they might not be, relatively few Americans feel very good about what lies ahead. Some in fact foresee a nightmare, a serious recession rather than one "mild and short."

That latter description is also the president's, and it provoked immediate comment from economists about how all this could be brought about: control of inflation, lower interest rates, and minimum pain.

If the president had conceded what many economists foresee, which is temporarily lower — but now low — interest rates, his expectations might have had more believability. But most economists who have gone public with their views believe inflation control is years away, and that prices until then will remain volatile.

In fact, it is likely that economists would agree that control of inflation this year — it is now between 16 percent and 20 percent, depending upon the measurement — couldn't happen without an economic collapse.

As it is, many economists, including those on the president's staff, don't expect much improvement this year over last. What improvement might come is seen by many as temporary, or as they say, cyclical.

Just before the president's news conference Thursday, the National Association of Business Economists reminded people that inflation control is a long-term matter, and that they shouldn't be fooled by short-term evidence.

In the business community, there remains much fear about politics. Should the economy slip to its knees, as expected, interest rates and prices would begin to fall. And that, business people fear, would be seen by Washington as an excuse to dump the anti-spending program.

Many business people dislike the program to begin with, claiming it relies too heavily on credit restrictions, and too little on fiscal restraint. Already doubts have arisen about the latest promises to cut spending. Interviews suggest many believe the budget won't be balanced.

From the viewpoint of some in the business community the president doesn't have many followers when he declares himself to be pleased with the prospects for inflation control and lower interest.

And if those consumer polls mean a thing, the ordinary American hardly views the future with optimism. That would perhaps be too much to expect from people who, already at their limits, face a recession.

Harbor, this country was unprepared to go to war. I believe we are in the same position now as we were then. This nation has to say to the Kaiser of Germany, if you go one step further in trying to dominate the world, we will blockade Cuba."

"Mr. Reagan, you've taken a strong stand against the government getting involved in the lives of its citizens. Can you give us a specific example of how it is doing this?"

"Yes. When this country was founded, if someone was sick, that person could go to any barber, and he would bleed you with leeches. But now, HEW has ruled that barbers have to be licensed before they can do it. Most barbers refuse to fill out the paperwork required of them, and instead of the American people getting better medical care, it is costing them $5 billion more a year."

"Governor, what would you do about farm parity?"

"I would let the farmers raise their own parity, rather than have Washington tell them what crops they can, or cannot, grow. Nancy and I both like parity, particularly as a dip with potato chips. Some people hate parity with anything. But in a free economic society, I don't want some pencil-pusher in the Department of Agriculture telling me what I am allowed to eat."

"Mr. Reagan, I'd like to ask you a question about the MX missile. Do you think the United States should build it?"

"Yes, I do. There are 6,000,512 people who would rather take their welfare checks from the government than figure out how to make the MX missile work. I say we should tell them, either get a job in research and development on the MX program, or forfeit their welfare payments."

"Governor, are you for the boycott of the Moscow Olympics?"

"Yes, I am, providing our American athletes are permitted to participate in them. We must let Khrushchev know that we mean business."

important supporters in Pennsylvania privately criticize the exaggerated tremulous tone he sometimes affects and other recurrent fits of playfulness. His more sophisticated backers here only shrug shoulders at his simplistic big-spending prescription for the economy.

But such critics did not hear Kennedy in the early weeks of the campaign, whispering in Iowa and shouting in New Hampshire without a coherent theme in either state. Whatever his economic philosophy lacks in rationality, it has created a buoyantly self-confident Kennedy who sees not only successive victories, but an epidemic of defections by Carter delegates.

Kennedy's rising optimism is buttressed by testimony from politicians such as Sam Bianco, the nominal pro-Carter labor leader who perceives a strong Kennedy trend — but only if the president does not emerge again as national leader in time of crisis. "The people around here," Bianco told us, "are very patriotic." Bad news internationally has helped the president so far. But bad news economically threatens to ruin him in Pennsylvania and could do the same elsewhere.

another penny sales tax under the political banner of needing more money to cover "state mandated" programs.

Mandates
Local officials have been outspoken of late in complaining of state actions which place upon local governments sharply higher costs; things such as salary increases which also affect locally employed persons, the rapidly climbing Medicaid and other social services programs.

At one meeting in Macon County earlier this year, a resolution was adopted calling for the added penny tax.

There have been talks of two different ways of imposing the tax and spreading the boosted income. Some local officials would like for the General Assembly to permit the counties to levy the additional penny. Others, however, want the state to add the penny, but earmark the money produced to pay for state-mandated programs affecting local government costs.

It is certain that no action will come on such a proposal in this election year, but it is equally clear that local officials are even now laying the groundwork for a concerted push in the regular session of the General Assembly in 1981.

Three Arrested By Local Police

Three Virginia Beach, Va. residents were arrested by Greenville police yesterday on armed robbery charges following investigation of a 4:35 a.m. incident at the Stop-N-Go at 2801 South Memorial Dr.

Chief Glenn Cannon identified the three as Jessie Lee Bogs, 30, Pernell Snowden, 17, and Barbara Michelle Davis, 22.

According to Cannon, Ms. Bogs and Snowden allegedly entered the business, produced a revolver, and took $67 worth of cash and merchandise from the store, then left the scene on a car, allegedly driven by Ms. Davis.

The three were arrested after officers stopped their car a short time after the incident at the intersection of N.C. 11 and U.S. 264. Some of the merchandise was recovered, Cannon noted.

Eight persons were killed in traffic accidents in North Carolina during the weekend, pushing the toll for this year to 362 deaths, the Highway Patrol reported. In the comparable period last year the toll had climbed to 431 deaths.

The patrol said a 20-year-old Pikeville man died late Sunday night when the car he was a passenger in ran off a rural paved road north of Goldsboro and overturned. Authorities identified the victim as Patrick James Teachey.

A Lincolnton man was killed Saturday when his motorcycle collided head-on with a car on a road in Rowan County. The patrol identified the victim as William Franklin Ferguson, 27.

Paul Ricky Grimsley, 20, of Lexington, died early Sunday morning when his car ran off a rural road 10½ miles east of Lexington. The patrol reported that Grimsley's car struck a fence, throwing Grimsley from the car.

A Winston-Salem man died Saturday night when his car ran off a rural road west of Kernersville. The patrol identified the victim as Lonnie Curtis Mabe, 32.

The patrol reported that a Richmond County accident resulted in the death of Willie Van Locklear, 19, of Maxton. A spokesman for the patrol said Locklear was fatally injured

Saturday when his car ran off N.C. 177, about five miles north of Hamlet.

The patrol reported earlier that Danny Lee Mayse, 25, of Forest City, died when his car ran off a Rutherford County road Saturday; Eddie Joe Hager, 24, of Mooresville, died when his car ran off a rural road in Iredell County Saturday; and Artis Mae Emanuel, day when her car ran off Interstate 63, of Lumberton, died Saturday.

Candidates Concentrate On Pennsylvania's Voters

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ronald Reagan campaigned with a Republican rival turned ally, George Bush said he has the makings of a GOP comeback, and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy insisted that his Democratic challenge is neither divisive nor done, as candidates and proxies hunted votes on the eve of the Pennsylvania presidential primary.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale campaigned for the absent President Carter, asking Pennsylvanians to "get everyone out there voting and give this president a chance to continue serving our nation." Kennedy has spent 12 days campaigning for the pivotal Pennsylvania election, drawing sizable crowds but shying away from any forecast of the outcome on Tuesday. The pollsters rate Carter the favorite. Ken-dy vowed that defeat would "absolutely not" lead him to quit the race. The competition is for 185 Democratic nominating delegates, apportioned in line with popular vote showings by congressional district. In the Republican race, 83 delegates are at stake, and while they will be legally uncommitted, the Reagan camp claims at least 50 of them will be supporters of the former California governor, already the faraway leader in delegate strength. Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., who withdrew his own presidential candidacy after the first three primaries, endorsed Reagan on Sunday night. "On paper, the numbers simply say that the time has come to rally around the almost certain nominee of the party," Baker said.

The Republican numbers will win in the popular vote. It read Reagan 411 delegates, is not binding, delegates are elected separately, and Reagan is confident of gaining a majority. "I'm vain," Reagan said. "I'd like to win the beauty contest."

In that cause, he added an election-eve campaign swing. Baker endorsed Reagan at a rally in suburban Springfield, then joined him for election-eve campaigning that will take them across the state to Pittsburgh. Baker said the endorsement had nothing to do with the possibility that Reagan might choose him for the vice presidential nomination.

It will take 998 delegate votes to win the Republican nomination. Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes also endorsed Reagan on Sunday. Reagan said that would be a big asset in a June 3 primary, with 77 delegates at stake.

"This has been a magnificent week for us," Reagan said in Columbus. He gained a half-dozen delegates in Minnesota on Saturday, and picked up 19 delegates by sweeping Alaska's state GOP convention Sunday. Nevada Republicans decided in convention to run a slate of Reagan supporters in their May 27 primary. But Bush won 17 delegates in Maine, where Reagan didn't get any. Four uncommitted delegates were chosen there. Those were skirmishes; the big test is Pennsylvania, where Bush insists that he can and

Immigrants Revisit Gateway To Starting A Life In New World

By RICHARD SISK
NEW YORK (UPI) — They came, 12 million boat people of Europe, in flight from the terror of the pogrom, the jackboot of the oppressor, to the low-slung chunk of landfill in the harbor of the greatest city in the new homeland. They were Russian and Irish, Poles and Italians, Lithuanians, Greeks, Germans, Czechs — possessed of the genes and the tongues that were to make America a nation of nations.

Aid Society, which kept an office on the island. "Some of them refused to eat non-kosher food and were quite literally starving when they got here. We set up a kosher kitchen on the island and we believe it saved several thousand people from deportation." Women traveling alone went through a special ordeal. How much money did you have? Where do you want to go? Who told you to come here? If she were meeting her husband or a relative, the woman was detained until he arrived.

Those who passed the screening were issued landing cards. They boarded a ferry, which now lies half submerged at the mooring, for the brief ride to Manhattan where their notions that "the streets were paved with gold" and "the poor lived in the lap of luxury" would be dispelled. In five years, they would be eligible to take the oath and become citizens.

The island originally was used as a picnic grounds for the Dutch. After the Revolution, its owner was Samuel Ellis who sold it to New York State which ceded it to the federal government in 1808. It was used as a powder magazine and arsenal until 1892 when it became an immigrant station. The island was built up with landfill from three acres to 30 and 35 buildings were constructed.

During its years of disuse, vandals invaded the island repeatedly, stripping its buildings of artifacts, carrying off its brass and copper fixtures. Politicians have called for restoration of the island but Ms. Shebanie said "Restoration is nil. It's just stabilization." Now, starlings flutter down the silent, crumbling corridors. Vines clutch at shattered windows. Brambles clog entryways. There is no running water. The only sounds are the mournful cries of gulls who nest among the ghosts of the poor immigrants denied entry, whose "yearning to be free" was dashed on a dot of land a half-mile offshore from the promised land.

WARMING IN THE SUN — These turtles take advantage of a recent warm, sunny afternoon by relaxing on a log and soaking up the sun's warming rays. The group of turtles was seen in a swamp near Charleston, S.C. Now, if a slow insect were to happen by, the day would be complete. (AP Laserphoto)

In all of their villages and cities in the old country, they had heard of this place in the gray water between New York City and New Jersey, in the shadow of the Statue of Liberty. Ellis Island — they called it the "Isle of Tears."

The case of Mrs. Herschlag, of Verona, N.J., who is celebrating her 55th wedding anniversary with her husband, Sam, was typical. "My father came here first," she said. "He was looking for a better life. You know there were people in Europe who did not like us because we were Jews."

Between 1892 and 1921, when the first quota law went into effect restricting immigration, at least 12 million people and perhaps 16 million were processed on the island. About 2 per cent were rejected and deported, upwards of 250,000 people. On one day alone — April 14, 1907 — 12,000 people were processed and issued landing cards. It is estimated that better than 25 per cent of the current population of the United States can trace their roots to Ellis Island.

Short Hairstyle Comeback Seen
NEW YORK (UPI) — Hairstylist Ed McFarland says rigid, precision-cut, short hairstyles are due for a comeback this summer. "Hair you can wash, shake dry and forget about will be worn by women of all ages this summer," McFarland says, because easy-care cuts go with an active, outdoor, summer lifestyle. To keep such a cut looking good, he recommends baby shampoo because it makes the hair more manageable and frequent shampooing makes short hair look fuller.

Relax With A Real Brawl

NEW YORK (AP) — The brutal fight scene was over, so what did the actors do? They went into the neighborhood bar to watch a real brawl on television. Sweat still running off their faces, actors Paul Newman and Danny Aiello dropped into the Valencia Bar in the South Bronx after filming a scene for "Fort Apache: The Bronx." The front of the tavern has been changed to read the "Emerald Bar," which, in the script, is where police hang out after hours.

Oh, it was so beautiful. Oh, it was so wonderful. The big buildings and all the lights and the bridges," she said. "And the beautiful, beautiful statue. Never had I dreamed of such things, never. Oh my goodness, I was so happy."

After World War I, the island served as a detention center for aliens about to be deported. It shut down completely in 1954. The National Park Service began running tours of the

But for many there was rejection and despair. In the years that it served as an immigrant station, it is estimated there were 3,000 suicides on Ellis Island. Many of the sick died in quarantine. For them there was the huge crematorium in the basement. Next to the oven is a bone crusher.

The first and second-class passengers, on the presumption that their ability to pay more made them more eligible, were given their landing cards aboard ship. Only the passengers in steerage — some paid as little as $10 for the passage — were put on the barges to be taken to the island.

They were herded into the baggage room of a red and white brick building where they could check their luggage while the process of becoming an American was begun.

But Michelle Shebanie of the National Park Service, which now has custody of the island, said, "Most people held on to their luggage, what little they had. They were terribly afraid of anybody in a uniform."

The men in the uniforms hung numbered tags around their necks. Then it was up two flights of stairs to the 200-by-100-foot "Great Hall" with its 56-foot arched ceiling where the medical inspectors waited at the end of as many as 20 lines. "It was like a cattle-run," Ms. Shebanie said. "They checked for anything that might prohibit your getting a job. They wanted to see if the little kids could walk. Things like that."

All too often a child would be found mentally or physically unfit and ordered deported, posing a heartrending dilemma for the parents. Would they choose to stay in America and see the child sent back alone, or would they return to the old world with the youngster, their dreams for a new life shattered?

The 38 questions followed — age, place of birth, destination, as well as "Are you a Communist" — all fired at the immigrants in their native tongues in about two minutes. Ms. Shebanie said "The inspectors had pieces of chalk and if they thought anything was wrong they'd make a mark on your back. The letter 'E' meant eye problem. 'X' meant you were mentally deficient."

Those marked were taken to an adjoining hospital or before a board of inquiry for further inspection. If they failed to pass again, they were deported. "Many of the people who failed the medical examination were simply weak from the trip, which sometimes lasted six weeks," said Gaynor Jacobson, executive vice president of the Hebrew Immigrant

TOBACCO GROWERS TALK ABOUT VIKING SHIP CALCIUM NITRATE

"In three years of growing under stress conditions, Calcium Nitrate has made the difference between crop failure and a successful year."

Ennis and Jerry Byrd
Orrum, North Carolina

The Byrd family farms 40 acres of tobacco and 260 acres of corn and beans. They started with Calcium Nitrate in 1970 and have stayed with it ever since. Mr. Byrd tells why, "We liked Calcium Nitrate's fast action right from the start. You could see the crop feeding right away, and could also tell that Calcium Nitrate does its job and then is through. It won't hold tobacco green in the field over an extended period of time which was a problem with our former fertilizer. The last three years we've used Calcium Nitrate in liquid solution when the crop was too big to cultivate; it really works out well. I figure that during 3 years of growing under bad, stress conditions, Calcium Nitrate increased my profit 50 percent!"

Stories Behind Week's Surprise Coup In Liberia

Editor's note: UPI's Robert Kaylor was the only American correspondent to cover the Monrovia Coup first-hand. In the following story he writes of the revolt and its aftermath. Liberia's future up in the air after sergeant's surprise coup.

By ROBERT KAYLOR
MONROVIA, Liberia (UPI) — One version of the coup that killed the president of Liberia and replaced him with an army non-con is that it was born in an afternoon beer drinking session a couple of days earlier.

Master Sgt. Samuel K. Doe and a dozen friends were trading complaints about low army pay and corruption in high places, and decided to do something about it.

The April 12 coup was the first in this Kentucky-sized African nation of 1.7 million, founded by former American slaves as the continent's first republic before the U.S. Civil War. It seems to have been a spur-of-the-moment decision, carried out by no more than 30 persons.

The 28-year-old Doe belonged to a special guard battalion, part of a group trained in Liberia by U.S. Army Green Berets a year ago and assigned to the executive mansion of President William Tolbert Jr.

According to some accounts, the articulate and intelligent Doe had complained he saw little future in Liberia's 4,500-man armed forces and wanted to enlist in the U.S. Army. The U.S. does not recruit overseas.

Tolbert, president since 1971 and vice president to William Tubman for 20 years before that, almost never slept in the five-story executive mansion, preferring to drive each night to his home in Bentol, 25 miles away.

But on the night of April 11, the 66-year-old Tolbert, a practicing Baptist minister, stayed in town for an international Baptist conference and slept at the mansion.

Doe was on duty that night. The enlisted men broke into the mansion — some reports say with the cooperation of Tolbert's personal security forces.

Tolbert was shot in the head, probably in his living quarters. The trigger reportedly was pulled by a corporal in Doe's council who has since been promoted to deputy commanding general of the Liberian armed forces.

The coup's 17 central figures called themselves the "People's Redemption Council."

The exact number killed in the takeover is not clear. Most of the victims apparently were Tolbert's personal security guards plus the commandant of Monrovia's military stockade.

Once Tolbert's death had been announced over the radio, all military and government authority collapsed. Rank-and-file army forces pledged support for the council, but a rabble of soldiers terrorized the local and foreign populations for more than two days.

A total of 28 bodies, including Tolbert's, were dumped into a common grave three days later — some of them possibly of looters killed during the lawlessness that followed the coup.

Underlying Doe's coup was the split between "Americo-Liberians" and those who originate from native tribes.

Americo-Liberians are descendants of freed slaves who came from America starting in the 1820s to found the country and declared it a republic in 1847.

The Americo-Liberians make up only 5 per cent of the population. But they traditionally hold most political power and wealth.

Although modeled along American lines, Liberia for 25 years has had only one political party, the True Whigs.

After becoming president when Tubman died nine years ago, Tolbert made an effort to bring more tribal Liberians into the government. He increased their representation in his cabinet and civil service to about half.

Ironically, that may have increased the tribal Liberians' awareness of their growing plight and contributed to the country's political ferment.

Trouble starting with demonstrations last April that led to the killing of scores of protesters by troops and two days of riots. It flared again in the months before the coup.

One early notion, apparently unfounded, was that the coup was timed for the first anniversary of anti-government rioting.

Doe and at least 12 of his 17 council members are tribals. So are most of the lower-ranking members of Liberia's armed forces.

Most arrests following the coup have been of Americo-Liberians. Some, like Tolbert's wife, held no official post with the government but belonged to the families of the elite.

Gabriel Bacchus Matthews, who inspired the 1979 demonstration, was in jail with some 100 of his supporters when the coup occurred.

His Progressive People's Party, allowed to register as Liberia's only opposition party in January, was soon banned by Tolbert's rubber-stamp congress. Its members were arrested early in March when they demanded the president's resignation and a national union government.

Liberian sources believe there was likely some contact between Doe and the Matthews group before the political leader was jailed. But although Matthews and his party followers have been named ministers in the new government, it is thought unlikely Matthews helped plan the coup.

Soldiers generally rallied to Doe and began rounding up the old leaders, though many turned into a leaderless, armed mob more interested in drinking and looting than in building the "New Society" Doe said he envisions.

They held up Libarians and foreign residents for money, stole cars at gunpoint and fired their weapons at random.

Roving bands went from room to room in hotels. Soldiers forced their way into the home of a Lebanese businessman, stuck a rifle into the stomach of his young son and threatened to kill him unless given money. The ransom was quickly paid.

Jim Adams, a black American who heads a garbage disposal operation for Dayton, Ohio, was in Monrovia with an advisory program the city has sponsored for the past three years. He was visiting a former mayor when the coup struck. He and others stood defenseless as soldiers fired 10 shots of automatic weapon fire through the front door and the group fled.

Eventually nabbed and brought to the military stockade, Adams convinced his captors he was an American and made his way to the U.S. Embassy, narrowly avoiding being shot when troops fired on some civilian looters.

On Monday, after further incidents, Doe asked U.S. military officials to help work out a plan to get soldiers back into their barracks.

Since then, security has improved and government offices have reopened with civil servants supporting Doa's hastily assembled cabinet.

Matthews, who had shown skill as a political organizer, became foreign minister. One of his top aides was named Doe's minister for presidential affairs.

The new information minister is a radio announcer who stayed on the job to broadcast Joe's announcements the night of the coup.

The civil servants have restored services and, according to one foreign diplomat, "ara giving the government a chance."

Government ministry and foreign diplomats persuaded the army to stop stripping those arrested down to their shorts in front of large crowds and to stop promises of widespread executions that kept emotions at a frenzy.

After taking power last Saturday, Doa said officials would be tried for high treason with death the maximum penalty.

But Libaria's official newspaper appealed Thursday to Doe's People's Redemption Council "to exercise restraint with regard to capital punishment for political offenders."

An editorial in the official newspaper Naw Liberian also said it would be three years or more before elections could be held.

"There is a lot of work to be done," it said. "This is the first time a coup has been successful in Liberia and so the government needs to be in firm control of things."

The next presidential election had been scheduled for the end of Tolbert's eight-year term in 1983.

Meanwhile, the new president has suspended the constitution but doubled minimum pay for soldiers and civil servants. And he has promised to do something about the rising cost of living and improve food and housing programs, although he will be hard put to find funds.

Doe still wears his army cap with sergeant stripes and has appeared on television with a hand grenade dangling from his breast pocket. But he has adapted quickly to some of the trappings of power.

He has moved into the executive mansion and rides in an air-conditioned Mercedes-Benz limousine, accompanied by carloads of armed escorts and screaming sirens.

Reporters Friday got their first glimpse of President Doe since he moved into the mansion. They found him in camouflage fatigues and army cap, seated behind a leather-topped desk in a red carpeted office with red damask walls. Surrounding him were other fatigue-clad members of his Peoples Redemption Council.

Doe posed with serious expression for pictures. But after a few moments of clicking cameras, he whipped off his sunglasses and broke into wide grin.

No questions were allowed.

Proposed Boon For Alaskans In Sharing Earning Assets

By ROXINNE ERVASTI
Associated Press Writer
JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Alaskans savoring the state's commitment to give them cash from its oil wealth and all but wipe out state income taxes now have an encore to consider — shares in state-owned assets.

It's called PACE — Portfolio of Alaska Citizens Enterprises.

The proposal introduced as legislation Thursday by Gov. Jay Hammond and House Speaker Terry Gardiner would sell stock in some state-owned assets to Alaskans at market value. Fifteen percent of the stock in the assets would be distributed free to all Alaskans.

Chief among the assets are oil, coal and natural gas. But the legislation provides that anything built with state money, be it offices, airports or pipelines, could be turned over to citizens.

The state could even buy shares in private companies, such as airlines, manufacturers or businessmen to sell and give away.

The money for PACE would divert funds from Alaska's burgeoning state treasury — now swelling so quickly from oil revenues that analysts last week upped their three-month-old estimate of its value in mid-1981 by $319 million — to $4.5 billion.

"Distributing a portion of Alaska's energy wealth to the people of Alaska in the form of income-producing assets would increase their involvement and awareness of the management of the state's natural resources, the development of its local industries and in the capitalist system overall," Hammond said. "All Alaskans, including the little guy, would have a piece of the action."

This proposal follows a "shared-the-state-wealth" plan Hammond signed into law Tuesday that will put $405 million into the pockets of 400,000 Alaskans this year alone.

Under that law, people who have filed a state income tax return for any three years since statehood in 1959 will be exempt from future taxes and get refunds on 1979 taxes. The state this year will pay residents $50 in oil wealth "dividends" for each year they have lived in Alaska since 1959.

The "dividends" are to be an annual payment tied to a kind of oil revenues "state savings account" which is building and will give thousands annually to longtime Alaskans in the 1990s.

Under PACE, residents wouldn't get cash. They would get stock.

"Right now, if you want to invest in Alaska's oil, you have to buy shares in Exxon," said Gardiner, 29, a college-educated fisherman born in Ketchikan.

"This would give people a chance to invest directly in Alaska."

Alaskans have a longstanding dislike for "outsiders" — people who came here years ago and nearly depleted the salmon, those who are absentee owners of fish processing and other facilities and those who came for oil pipeline construction money and left.

"This proposal will enable Alaskans to invest in Alaskan enterprises," says Hammond.

The state also shares its wealth through low-interest business and home loans. But Hammond has sought ways to benefit a broader base of residents, saying the programs give money that belongs to all the people to only a few.

The low-interest loan program in Alaska makes even federal aid pale by contrast.

For example, the Carter administration announced last week it would make $160 million available to builders for unsold houses and to help low-income buyers. Since January, Alaska has appropriated $140 million for home mortgage and consumer loans, $75 million for business loans and $15 million for fishing and farming loans. Legislators expect to allocate $300 million more loans this year.

Rep. Russ Meekins, a 30-year-old Democrat and chairman of the House Finance Committee, shrugs his shoulders about the state's wealth and the envy it may bring, saying: "People hate the Rockefeller, too."

About 80 percent of state revenues come from oil through taxes, royalties and other payments from the oil companies to the state.

The oil won't last forever, and backers of the wealth-sharing plans say it makes no sense for the state to spend all the money on public works or other government programs, especially since they expect a mass exodus from Alaska once the oil runs out.

When that will happen is uncertain. But federal estimates indicate the amount of oil available from the state's primary known source — Prudhoe Bay — will decline significantly by the year 2000.

Dr. Arlon Tussing, an economist who worked on the PACE proposal, told legislators that after the oil industry winds down Alaska will be back to a fishing, tourism and timber economy.

"After that, how are the people going to be supported?" he asks.

Tussing estimates Alaska would have to produce 5½ times the United States' total coal production to replace Prudhoe Bay oil revenues, or equal the entire world catch of fish.

"There's little chance the state can fill the gap," he says. "A lot of people are going to have to leave, so you might as well give them a nest egg."

Cleanup After Train Derails

MADISON, Ga. (AP) — Crews are cleaning up the debris left by a freight train derailment and explosion that forced the evacuation of about 200 persons from their homes.

The derailment, followed by the explosion of a liquid petroleum gas tank car, occurred at about 8 p.m. Saturday in the community of Buckhead, about 50 miles east of Atlanta.

Georgia Railroad crews began clearing the wreckage Sunday after fears of leaking sulfuric acid proved groundless. Authorities estimated it would take until Thursday to complete the cleanup.

Slim Savings Via Microwave

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — Energy savings from using a microwave oven may add up to no more than $10-$12 a year, says Mary Purchase of Cornell University. A professor in the Department of Design and Environmental Analysis, she says microwave ovens are especially good for thawing food and heating it to serving temperature quickly. The professor says a microwave oven is most useful in home kitchens when used in coordination with a standard range.

SCULPTURE REMOVED - Bank of Tokyo in New York removed Isamu Noguchi's 1,600-pound rhomboid-shaped aluminum sculpture after customers paying loans said the piece hung overhead "like a guillotine". In order to take the work down, the bank cut it into pieces. The 75-year-old artist called the action vandalism, and "very reactionary". (AP Laserphoto)

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mixed in early trading today, as Wall Street worried about how severe the economic downturn will be.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which fell 28.45 points last week, edged up .25 to 763.65 in the first half hour of trading.

But declining stocks outnumbered gainers by a 6-5 margin in New York Stock Exchange trading.

Among actively traded issues, Texas Utilities was up 1/8 to 18 1/2, Public Service Electric & Gas climbed 1/8 to 19 1/8 and American Telephone & Telegraph moved up 1/8 to 50 1/4. Utilities would benefit from lower interest rates.

Recession fears have grown in recent weeks, with some economists suggesting the downturn may be considerably worse than the mild recession forecast by President Carter.

Auto stocks were lower in early trading. Ford fell 1/8 to 23 1/4 and General Motors was down 1/4 to 40 1/8.

McDonald Douglas, which reported lower earnings for the first quarter, slipped 3/8 to 32 1/2.

On Friday, the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 5.46 to 763.40. Advances slightly outnumbered declines on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 26.88 million shares, against 32.77 million in the previous session.

Camera Before Planning News Via Satellite

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed today to decide whether television and still-photography coverage of courtroom proceedings is constitutional.

In their first venture into the cameras-in-the-courtroom controversy in 15 years, the justices will review Florida court rulings that such news coverage does not automatically ruin a fair trial.

To date, 23 states have allowed television and still-camera coverage of court proceedings even though the American Bar Association has refused to back down from its longtime opposition to it.

ABA ethical standards imposing an absolute ban on electronic media and photographic coverage of courts still serves as a model for most states and the federal judiciary.

Of those states permitting some form of camera coverage, only Florida and New Hampshire have adopted permanent policies not requiring consent from persons directly involved.

The two states leave the coverage decision up to the presiding judge.

Florida's policy was challenged by two Miami Beach policemen convicted in the 1977 burglary of a restaurant.

Noel Chandler and Robert Granger each were sentenced to seven years in prison. The Florida Supreme Court last Sept. 29 rejected arguments that their televised trial violated their constitutional rights.

In seeking Supreme Court review, Miami lawyer Joel Hirschhorn attacked Florida's use of courtroom cameras as a "novel fascination with public relations." He said the state Supreme Court "has cavalierly flirted with the possibility of irreparable damage to the most fundamental underpinnings of our criminal justice system — the accused's rights to a fair trial and to due process of law."

But the appeal never specifically stated how the televising of the trial actually damaged Chandler and Granger. Instead, it launched a broad attack against the cameras-in-the-courtroom concept, calling it a "constitutionally blind rush to electronic justice."

States that permit television and photographic news coverage of trials or appeals court hearings — either permanently or on an experimental basis — are Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Iowa, Louisiana, Minnesota, Montana, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

In addition, New York and New Mexico have had one-day experiments.

Chief Glenn Cannon reported Charlie Ervin Daniels, 22 of 427B West Third St.

was jailed on charges of attempted rape following the incident, reported at 6 a.m.

Two Jailed On Sunday

One Greenville man was jailed and a second being hunted in connection with an incident involving the alleged assault of one woman and the alleged rape of another early Sunday morning.

Chief Glenn Cannon reported Charlie Ervin Daniels, 22 of 427B West Third St.

was jailed on charges of attempted rape following the incident, reported at 6 a.m.

The chief said Donald Ray Streeter, 22 of Route 1, Greenville, was charged with rape and was still being sought today.

The incident began between 3 a.m. and 4 a.m., Cannon said, when two women went to a store on Deck Street to purchase some beer. Unable to get the beer, the two offered Daniels and Streeter a ride to purchase gas for a car.

After driving to a house near the intersection of Wyatt and McClellan Streets, Daniels and one of the women got out of the car and Daniels allegedly attempted to rape her.

Cannon said the woman talked Daniels into walking her home where they could be "more comfortable".

After arriving at her residence, the woman got her roommate to call the police and Daniels was taken into custody.

The chief said that after the first woman left the car, Streeter allegedly pulled a knife on the second woman, forced her into the rear seat of the car and assaulted her.

Following the alleged rape, Streeter left the vehicle on foot and the woman returned home and reported the incident.

Sterilization Ruling Pending

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Laws require the head of a county social services department to determine if sterilizations are in the best interest of those persons involved. But the decisions are now resting in the hands of the district courts.

North Carolina ended eugenic sterilizations six years ago, but questions linger about sterilizations of the mentally ill and the retarded.

According to Rutherford Turnbull of the Institute of Government, sterilization can only be used when "less drastic modes of contraception fail."

Although the laws leave the initial decision in the hands of the county health director, other factors left to the court's consideration are whether a mental patient might bear a child susceptible to a serious mental, physical or nervous disease and whether the condition of the parent would permit him or her to care for the child.

The individual is also supposed to give his or her "consent" before the procedure or a judge can order the procedure done.

But a Winston-Salem doctor who said he performed sterilizations expressed doubts that consent had ever been secured for the procedures.

"I'm absolutely positive that somewhere along the line I've done a sterilization on someone who had been coerced into it," said Dr. John Tinga, now practicing in New Bern.

"By the time a patient comes to me, everything is signed, sealed and delivered," he said. Tinga said he doesn't think the law provides adequate weight to medical opinion. He added that he no longer performs such operations.

William O'Connell of the attorney general's staff defended the law, citing a state Supreme Court ruling that upheld involuntary sterilizations. But George Gardner of the state Civil Liberties Union calls the situation "tragic."

"We've tried several times to stop the damn state from doing any sterilizations," Gardner said. "It's shocking."

Camera Before Planning News Via Satellite

HONOLULU (AP) — The Associated Press today announced an "historic endeavor" in which it will transmit its news report to members via satellite, providing better service at lower costs.

Plans call for a 900-city satellite distribution system, and the number of cities involved could go much higher, said David L. Bowen, vice president for communications of The AP.

The AP Board of Directors has instructed management to "proceed with deliberate speed" toward a 900-city system, Bowen told members at the news service's annual meeting here.

Sixteen cities already have satellite receiver terminals, and a 50-city network is expected by May 15, he said. Nearly 400 cities are expected to be included in the network by the end of the year, and 900 by the end of next year.

"We don't pretend to know exactly where we will stop — whether 900 or 1,500 or 2,500," Bowen said. "This will be determined by the economics, which are primarily affected by AT&T tariffs."

The AP will use Western Union's Westar III, the newest American satellite, as its primary transmitter from space.

The news service has reserved 12 channels, but will use only two to deliver its newspaper and broadcast services.

"The balance are for use by organizations sharing the satellite distribution system; organizations which will share both the benefits and the costs," Bowen said.

RKO Radio and Alternative Radio have already signed on to share the system, and negotiations are in progress with United Press International, Dow Jones

Audio, Dow Jones Data, Reuters, and Commodity News Service, he said.

Satellite communications works in much the same way as microwave radio communication on land, and even uses many of the same frequencies.

But the big difference, Bowen said, is that the "lower" in the satellite system is the satellite, which is 22,300 miles high.

The satellite is in view of any city in the United States, making possible line-of-sight microwave transmission, he said.

The average cost of ground installation for dish antennas has been $3,400, and the average cost of roof installation has been $8,400, he said. The news service will provide the antennas, and members will furnish the site preparation.

The satellite system will save The AP $3.5 million in costs of leased AT&T lines by the end of 1982, Bowen said. These savings will pay for costs of the dish antennas and the rental of the Westar channels.

Nurses Attend Convention

Three nurses from Pitt County Memorial Hospital attended the third annual Journal of Nursing Administration convention in New York City recently.

Representing PCMH were Jane Bond, assistant nursing administrator for medicine; Shirley Johnson, assistant nursing administrator for OB/GYN; and Debra Kensington, assistant nursing administrator for rehabilitation and psychiatry.

Pirates Whip Seahawks, 11-6

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

UNC-Wilmington's Mike Williams was rolling along with a three hitter Sunday afternoon, maybe taking a little satisfaction since just a week earlier, he had been rocked by East Carolina's Pirates. But right now, he was holding a 6-1 lead, and things looked mighty good.

But—Williams had not reckoned with the Pirates' comeback ability. Just five batters into the eighth inning, Williams found himself headed for the showers, and the Pirates had pulled off a ten-run inning to gain an 11-6 win.

The victory was the 20th of the year for the Pirates, who are setting their sights on a post-season NCAA playoff berth.

For the first seven innings of the game, however, they didn't look like winners at the plate. They did provide good backup to starting pitcher Mickey Britt and eventual winner Bob Patterson, committing only one error.

It led to one of the right things, all the gracious things.

"The best player in the game won this tournament," Colbert said. "There is no question about that."

But unknown to Colbert there was a very considerable question about the margin of victory in Tom Watson's front-running defense of his title in the Tournament of Champions.

While Colbert was speaking, that margin was being trimmed from five shots to three. Watson was assessed a 2-shot penalty after he had completed his final round Sunday. It merely changed his score from 71 to 73, his total from 274 to 276, his winning margin from five shots to three.

It was only an exercise in arithmetic.

It didn't change the outcome of the tournament, but it could have.

"If I'd been leading by one, it would have changed things," Watson said. "I wouldn't have won."

The penalty arose from some television-relayed advice Watson passed on to Lee Trevino during their final-round play. Trevino was struggling. Watson told him, on the 13th hole, that he was playing the ball too far forward in his stance.

Herman Mitchell, Trevino's caddy, was wearing a live television mike. NBC announcers heard the comment and rather casually passed it along to the viewing audience as a sidelight, an illustration of how players aid each other.

But it's illegal.

A viewer in Ojai, Calif., telephoned to question the legality. Jack Tuthill, Tournament Director of the PGA Tour, questioned Watson about it. Watson readily admitted he'd done it. And he was penalized two shots.

"I was wrong. I wasn't thinking," Watson said. "I violated the rules. It's a violation of the rules. I accept the penalty. The rules are there to be followed. I violated them. If I'd been leading by one, if it had changed the outcome of the tournament, I still would have accepted the penalty."

Even with the penalty, Watson won easily. He started the day in front, stayed in front and finished in front.

The veteran Colbert was second in the elite event that brings together only the winners of pro golf tour titles from the last 12 months. He had a closing 70, 2-under-par on the La Costa Country Club course, and a 279 total.

Tied for third at 281 were George Burns and Curtis Strange. Burns had a closing 66 in the warm, breezy weather. Strange shot a 67.

Seve Ballesteros, the brilliant young Spaniard who won the Masters last week, completed his brief swing around the American tour with a 73-290.

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Everybody was wooing the Germans as Olympic leaders began three days of vital talks Monday on the growing threat to the Olympic Games in Moscow.

If West Germany follows President Carter's lead and boycotts the Games because of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan, most other Western European countries are expected to do likewise.

Ignaty Novikov, a deputy Soviet premier and president of the Moscow Olympic Organizing Committee, had an appointment in Lausanne with Willi Daume, president of the German National Olympic Committee and a senior member of the International Olympic Committee (IOC).

Lord Killanin, IOC President, had talks with Berthold Beitz, the other IOC member in West Germany, before coming to Lausanne for meetings of his executive board and the international sports federations.

Observers could only guess at the subjects under discussion in these conversations. But these are some of the basic facts of the Olympic drama now unfolding:

—The Soviets, through their two IOC members, are seeking to get the U.S. Olympic Committee suspended because it has bowed to Carter and is boycotting the Moscow Games. Under the Olympic charter, national Olympic committees are forbidden to yield to any kind of political pressure.

—If USOC were suspended, the 1984 Games in Los Angeles would be in danger, because the committee has signed a contract with the IOC for staging the Games.

—The Russians are reported strongly opposed to any changes in the format of the opening ceremony, scheduled for July 19 in Moscow.

—Some IOC members favor changing the rules to allow athletes to compete as individuals, even though their national Olympic committees are boycotting the Games. To facilitate this, the IOC might decide to do away with national flags in the opening parade.

The IOC executive board was meeting on its own Monday and with the international federations Tuesday. But some of the vital discussions have already taken place in private.

On his way to Lausanne, Killanin stopped in Geneva and talked for seven hours with Peter Ueberroth, President of the UNC-Wilmington's Mike Williams was rolling along with a three hitter Sunday afternoon, maybe taking a little satisfaction since just a week earlier, he had been rocked by East Carolina's Pirates. But right now, he was holding a 6-1 lead, and things looked mighty good.

But—Williams had not reckoned with the Pirates' comeback ability. Just five batters into the eighth inning, Williams found himself headed for the showers, and the Pirates had pulled off a ten-run inning to gain an 11-6 win.

The victory was the 20th of the year for the Pirates, who are setting their sights on a post-season NCAA playoff berth.

For the first seven innings of the game, however, they didn't look like winners at the plate. They did provide good backup to starting pitcher Mickey Britt and eventual winner Bob Patterson, committing only one error.

It led to one of the right things, all the gracious things.

"The best player in the game won this tournament," Colbert said. "There is no question about that."

But unknown to Colbert there was a very considerable question about the margin of victory in Tom Watson's front-running defense of his title in the Tournament of Champions.

While Colbert was speaking, that margin was being trimmed from five shots to three. Watson was assessed a 2-shot penalty after he had completed his final round Sunday. It merely changed his score from 71 to 73, his total from 274 to 276, his winning margin from five shots to three.

It was only an exercise in arithmetic.

It didn't change the outcome of the tournament, but it could have.

"If I'd been leading by one, it would have changed things," Watson said. "I wouldn't have won."

The penalty arose from some television-relayed advice Watson passed on to Lee Trevino during their final-round play. Trevino was struggling. Watson told him, on the 13th hole, that he was playing the ball too far forward in his stance.

Herman Mitchell, Trevino's caddy, was wearing a live television mike. NBC announcers heard the comment and rather casually passed it along to the viewing audience as a sidelight, an illustration of how players aid each other.

But it's illegal.

A viewer in Ojai, Calif., telephoned to question the legality. Jack Tuthill, Tournament Director of the PGA Tour, questioned Watson about it. Watson readily admitted he'd done it. And he was penalized two shots.

"I was wrong. I wasn't thinking," Watson said. "I violated the rules. It's a violation of the rules. I accept the penalty. The rules are there to be followed. I violated them. If I'd been leading by one, if it had changed the outcome of the tournament, I still would have accepted the penalty."

Even with the penalty, Watson won easily. He started the day in front, stayed in front and finished in front.

The veteran Colbert was second in the elite event that brings together only the winners of pro golf tour titles from the last 12 months. He had a closing 70, 2-under-par on the La Costa Country Club course, and a 279 total.

Tied for third at 281 were George Burns and Curtis Strange. Burns had a closing 66 in the warm, breezy weather. Strange shot a 67.

Seve Ballesteros, the brilliant young Spaniard who won the Masters last week, completed his brief swing around the American tour with a 73-290.

Celtics Ground Sixers Behind Bird's Flight

BOSTON (AP) — Billy Cunningham sat and frowned as he studied the statistics sheet, a piece of paper the Philadelphia coach hardly needed to identify the flying object that had done such damage to his team.

"It was Larry Bird, plain and simple," said Cunningham. "He hit shots that were just incredible. He was out at the three-point line, coming off screens and burying everything he shot."

Bird, Boston's brilliant rookie, connected on 15 of 30 field goal attempts, scored 31 points and grabbed 12 rebounds to lead the Celtics to a 96-90 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers Sunday, tying their National Basketball Association playoff series at one victory apiece. The next two games of the best-of-seven Eastern Conference finals will be played in Philadelphia Wednesday and Friday nights.

"We had to win today," said Bird, who was still besieged by newsmen in the Boston locker-room an hour after the final buzzer sounded. "Our backs were to the wall. If we had lost and gone to Philadelphia two down, it would have been very tough to come back."

So, faced with what at least approached a must-win situation, Celtics Coach Bill Fitch changed his strategy a bit. He kept his reserves anchored to the bench and went with his starters for as long as possible. Bird and center Dave Cowens played 46 minutes apiece, Nate Archibald 42, Chris Ford 40, Cedric Maxwell 38.

"It's the playoffs," Fitch explained. "There's going to be a time for our bench — when I'm behind. I don't like to throw subs in when everything is cooking. If I'm ahead and things are going good, I don't like to break momentum."

The Celtics didn't build much momentum Sunday, but they did do enough to win. They dominated the first half, taking a 53-38 lead with 2:37 left in the second period behind 21 points by Bird. A 12-1 Philadelphia spurt made the halftime score 54-50, and three baskets by Sixers center Darryl Dawkins tied it at 62-62 with 6:21 to go in the third period.

But Philadelphia couldn't get a basket for the rest of the quarter, was outscored by Boston 12-2 and could come no closer than the final six-point margin. Julius Erving led the Sixers with 24 points, while Maxwell contributed 17 points and 15 rebounds for the Celtics.

"Getting even was important," said Fitch. "We played a lot better defensively than in the first game (won by Philadelphia 96-93). And offensively we went to Larry, as long as it was working for him. They put everyone on him except Billy (Cunningham) himself."

Cunningham started with Erving against Bird, then tried Bobby Jones, then 7-foot-1 Caldwell Jones.

3 ECU Women Win In Consolations

CULLOWHEE — East Carolina's Laura Redford, Karen Jeffreys and Claire Baker all won their consolation flights in the NCAAIAA Tennis Tournament Saturday.

Redford, playing in the second flight of the consolations, defeated Mary Jane Welch of Pfeiffer, 3-6, 7-5, 6-0, in the semifinals and then whipped Yolanda Rodrigues of Atlantic Christian, 6-3, 6-2, in the finals.

Jeffreys, playing in the fourth flight of the consolations, defeated Susan Pereira of UNC-W, 6-3, 6-4, and then beat Pattie Weiss, 7-5, 6-3, to win the bracket.

Baker, competing in the fifth flight, defeated Margaret Petree of UNC-Charlotte, 6-4, 6-2, and followed that with a 6-0, 6-1 triumph over Katevas of UNC-W in the finals.

The 1980 baseball and softball seasons at East Carolina University are winding down now. The baseball Pirates close out their season a week from Tuesday, playing host to Campbell.

Some sort of recognition will be made in that game of the seniors who will be playing their final home game for the Pirates. A glance at the record book will show that they have been the most prolific of any team ever fielded by East Carolina.

East Carolina's Lady Pirates wind up their season this afternoon against St. Augustine's, and will be entering divisional and state tournament play over the next two weekend.

The women will be the top-seeded team in the tournament, having clinched a regular season title. Sunday's sweep of UNC-Wilmington gave the ECU lassies a 23-4 record for the season.

They will stand a good chance of moving on into further regional AIAW play.

At the same time, the men will be hoping that their record is good enough to interest the NCAA for a regional bid, hopefully one that will be somewhere in the area, although the NCAA could assign them anywhere.

It again points out the need for the Pirates to be in a conference. Getting into a league—getting a new league started—appears to be one of the prime objectives of the administration at East Carolina. Hopefully it is a little closer to reality now than they were some months ago.

Regardless of what happens from here on in, however, the Pirates can be proud of their two teams, and the job done by coaches Alita Dillon and Hal Baird.

East Carolina's football team will get its first official public showing this Saturday in the annual Purple-Gold game.

This will give the fans a chance to see what Ed Emory's first ECU squad is going to look like this fall.

The coach admits that the team is thin. "I've never been associated with a team as thin as this one," he said. But, hard work and a good recruiting class can make up for that, he feels. It will be up to the players to do a good job in getting ready for the fall, and he is hopeful that he and his staff have done a good job in bringing in new people who will be able to help during the coming year.

The game has the added significance of being a benefit for the first time in my knowledge. Proceeds from the game will go into the "Ginger Parker Fund" designed to help the wife and family of Norm Parker, defensive coordinator of the new staff. As most know now, Parker's wife was critically injured in an automobile accident several weeks ago, and remains in serious condition. She is supposed to be transported by air ambulance to Greenville's Pitt Memorial Hospital sometime today.

Emory and his staff are hopeful that a large crowd will attend to make it a success for Coach Parker and his family.

We urge your attendance.

New NFL Players' Union Challenging Old Guard

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Trope has been negotiating million-dollar contracts for pro football players for the past few years, but he thinks they're still getting the short end of the stick when it comes to basics.

Now he's done something about it. The Associated Press has learned a new National Football League Players Union (NFLPU) and will try to wrest the player association control from Ed Garvey.

Trope, a 28-year-old player agent, accuses Garvey, founder in 1963 of the National Football League Players Association (NFLPA), of serious irregularities in the voting on the basic player agreement signed with the league in 1977 and of using the association for the purpose of expanding his own power.

By law, an attempt to replace the NFLPA as the sole bargaining agent of the league's 1,400 players could not be made within three years of the signing of the basic agreement. That deadline passed in March.

Now, Trope says, he and a number of other agents — he declined to name them — will try to sign the 420 players (30 percent of the NFLPA membership) required to force an election, conducted by the National Labor Relations Board, to determine which union will represent the players.

Petty Wins 1st Race Of Season

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — After struggling through seven races and getting nothing better than a second place, Richard Petty breezed to his first NASCAR Grand National win of the season Sunday, when everything went right for Petty while nothing seemed to go right for his challengers.

Petty's nearest competitor was a lap back when the checkered flag fell at the end of a 250-mile race on the 58th-mile North Wilkesboro Speedway. For 327 of the 400 laps on a tightly banked track, Petty set the pace.

The 400-lap race was sponsored by the Northwestern Bank.

Petty, who grabbed the winner's share of $18,925 from the $117,115 purse, feared a challenge from Benny Parsons in the final lap but that challenge evaporated when a disappointed Parsons took his Chevrolet off the track with a blown engine, less than 10 miles from the finish.

Parson's problems became obvious when he stayed on the track instead of pitting for gas and tires during a late caution period.

"I was surprised when I came back on the track after pitting and saw Benny still out there," Petty said.

"Undoubtedly, he already knew he had trouble. That's the reason he didn't come in. But I didn't know that and I thought it might get tough before it was over," Petty said.

Parsons, who mounted the only real challenge to Petty during the race, was ready to make a run at Petty when his engine let go.

"The caution light came on and the motor blew at the same time" said Parsons, who finished in sixth place.

"It looked like before we broke, we had aspirations of winning. We were the only one who could run with Richard," he said.

Harry Gant, who fought tenaciously and managed to come up to Petty's shadow a couple of times, finished second, a lap behind Petty.

Bobby Allison, who started the race from the pole, was third with Cale Yarborough, fourth.

Allison found himself a couple of laps down late in the race but he gave Petty some door-to-door competition anyway.

"When the track started tearing up, we couldn't keep up with the Chevys," Allison, a Ford driver, said, referring to slick spots.

"They had the jump on us coming off the turns...we had the horsepower down the straights but it wasn't handling in the turns," he added.

For handling, Petty and his team gave the other drivers a lesson Sunday. Early in the race, when most drivers were trying to settle on the right handling combination of tires and chassis adjustment, Petty grabbed the lead, settling to a comfortable groove and opened up a five-second cushion.

Only after his first pit stop for tires did Petty have handling problems, almost smacking the concrete wall at one point.

"It was the tires and the track, because nobody worked real good right after they just started. It just seemed to take longer for us after a tire change — eight or ten laps before we could get going again," Petty said.

Sunday's Race again featured the racing duo of Petty vs. Petty — Richard against his son, Kyle, who drove a Petty team car.

The younger Petty finished a respectable eighth in the 31-car field, but he had his problems, including involvement in two minor wrecks.

"He looked like to me he was doing pretty good," father said of son, "except the times I seen him when he was running the other way."

Sunday's win was Petty's first at North Wilkesboro since 1975.

"The car worked today like what I thought it used to, five years or so ago," Petty said of his Chevrolet.

Millionaire Wants Forest Hills Tennis

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Millionaire Lamar Hunt is in the process of restoring one of the United States' most cherished sports traditions — big-time tennis at Forest Hills.

"People may say I am a dope," said the mild-mannered heir to a Texas oil fortune, "but when I see a challenge I want to do something about it. I think it would be a shame to abandon Forest Hills where the great legends of the past played."

Hunt's answer is the Tournament of Champions, scheduled for the historic West Side Tennis Club May 5-11. It is an event with an unusual format — a knockout elimination restricted to players who have won a tournament of $50,000 and over in the past 12 months. It will have a select field of some 28 men. The prize money is the biggest in history — $500,000.

Tennis buffs can come out and watch present day stars — Jimmy Connors, John McEnroe, Vitas Gerulaitis — display their skills in the same old concrete horseshoe where Big Bill Tilden, Little Bill Johnston, Jack Kramer, Pancho Gonzales, Helen Wills and Maureen "Little Mo" Connolly thrilled earlier generations.

Virtually the only big name missing will be that of Bjorn Borg, the four-time Wimbledon king who is shunning U.S. tournaments because of Uncle Sam's heavy income tax bite.

"Bjorn is giving up a chance to take more than $150,000 — the $100,000 first prize and at

Sabres Want Canadiens

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

Buffalo Coach Scotty Bowman can't be sure which team his Sabres will face in the National Hockey League playoff semifinals. But he couldn't be surer about which team he'd rather play.

After his Sabres had eliminated the Chicago Black Hawks with a comeback 3-2 triumph Sunday night, Bowman said: "It would mean a lot to me personally if we play Montreal — not because I used to be their coach, but because of the great talent and history they have."

"It would really be something for us to shoot for."

Right now, it's something the Canadiens are shooting for as well. Montreal, which lost the first two games of its quarter-final against the Minnesota North Stars at home, have rallied to tie that series with consecutive victories — the latest a 5-1 decision in Bloomington, Minn., Sunday night.

Having regained their scoring touch, the Canadiens seem just as eager to join Bowman's Sabres in a semifinal shootout.

"We're a team with a lot of pride," said Montreal goalie Michel Larocque, who backstopped the Canadiens' victory Sunday night. "It's a new series now. We are the champions. It is not over until the final game for us."

It is over, however, for the Black Hawks, who took a 2-0 lead in their game against Buffalo but lost out when Rick Martin and Gil Perreault scored third-period goals to complete a four-game sweep of the best-of-seven series.

In the other series, the New York Rangers stayed alive in their series with Philadelphia, winning 4-2 Sunday night to cut the Flyers' lead in victories to 3-1.

The other quarterfinal set resumes tonight, when the New York Islanders hope to complete a sweep of the Boston Bruins.

Canadiens 5, North Stars 1
Rejean Houle scored twice and Yvon Lambert added his eighth goal of the playoffs as Montreal downed Minnesota to square the series.

"It's back to brass tacks now," said Canadiens defenseman Larry Robinson.

Rangers 4, Flyers 1
Right wing Ron Duguay scored three goals for the first time in his playoff career, center Phil Esposito added a goal and two assists and left wing Don Maloney had three assists as the Rangers stayed alive against the Flyers.

ACC Golf Crown Belongs To Deacs

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — This year was supposed to mark the end of Wake Forest's rein as Atlantic Coast Conference golf champions. Apparently, word of the Demon Deacons' demise never arrived in Rocky Mount last weekend.

Charging ahead from the opening day, Coach Jesse Haddock's squad coasted to its 13th team title in the last 14 years by posting a 54-hole total of 838, a whopping 33 shots better than runner-up Clemson.

Under a new scoring system installed for the tournament, the four lowest scores turned in at the Northgreen Country Club course in Rocky Mount would count toward the team title. But that didn't deter the Deacons from putting distance between themselves and their competitors.

"That's as good as any Wake Forest team I've coached has played in this tournament," said Haddock. "We were unranked at the beginning of the spring, but I could see us progressing from week-to-week and I think you could say we jelled this week."

As for individual honors, NCAA champion Gary Hallberg shot a four-under-par 68 for a three-day total of 204, two strokes better than teammate Tom Knox who closed his tournament out with a round of 67.

Sonics Win, Face L.A.

SEATTLE (AP) — After escaping burial over the weekend, the defending National Basketball Association champion Seattle SuperSonics don't have much time to pat themselves on the back. The Sonics, who won the Western Conference semifinals Sunday with a 98-94 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks, face the Pacific Division champion Los Angeles Lakers in a best-of-seven playoff series which opens Tuesday night in Los Angeles. "Every sportswriter in the country and CBS-TV was in Milwaukee Friday night to bury us," said veteran Seattle forward John Johnson, "but we had a few tricks for the Bucks. "Don't be surprised if we have a few more for the 'Big Fella.' Johnson was talking about the Lakers' 7-foot-2 center, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who led Los Angeles to four triumphs in six regular-season meetings with the Sonics. Down 3-2 in a best-of-seven series, Seattle came back to beat the Bucks 86-85 at Milwaukee Friday night to set up Sunday's meeting. "I have an idea who will win the Los Angeles-Seattle series," volunteered Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson, "but I'm keeping it to myself." Gus Williams, who becomes a free agent at the end of the season, sank four free throws in the final 16 seconds to sink Milwaukee's playoff hopes Sunday. He gave the Sonics a 96-92 lead with two free throws with 16 seconds remaining and made another pair with four seconds to go for the game's final points. Williams finished with 33 points, sinking 13 of 20 shots from the floor.

Yankees Whip Milwaukee, 9-5

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Bill Castro was determined to go to third base, at all costs. All it cost was the ballgame. With New York Yankees on first and second and no outs in a 5-5 game Sunday Castro relieved Jerry Augustine for the Milwaukee Brewers. When Bob Watson bunted, Castro pounced on the ball, whirled and fired to third. The throw was perfect and in time to retire Willie Randolph, but there was a hitch — no one was near third base to take the throw. The ball rolled into left field, resulting in two runs for the Yankees, and when Reggie Jackson followed with a home run, they were on their way to a 9-5 victory. "I made up my mind to try for the man at third no matter what. I think I got the ball there in time," said Castro. In other American League games, the Kansas City Royals outscored the Detroit Tigers 9-6, the Boston Red Sox edged the Texas Rangers 6-5 in 11 innings, the Toronto Blue Jays stopped the Cleveland Indians 5-3, the Chicago White Sox tripped the Baltimore Orioles 9-6, the Minnesota Twins nipped the Seattle Mariners 4-3 and the Oakland A's took a doubleheader from the California Angels 6-1 and 8-2. White Sox 9, Orioles 6

Harold Baines, who broke a 1-for-25 slump with two hits Saturday, got four more Sunday. His third double of the game with one out in the ninth preceded singles by Marv Foley, Mike Squires and Harry Chappas as Chicago scored three times. Doug DeCinces of the Orioles was thrown out of the game in the sixth inning for charging the mound after being hit by a pitch from Mike Proly.

A's 6-8, Angels 1-2 Matt Keough's five-hitter helped Oakland beat California in the first game of their doubleheader, while Rickey Henderson's three hits and steal of home paced the A's second-game triumph. With a 3-0 record, Keough has already surpassed his victory total of last season when his record was 2-17. The A's took a 6-0 lead in the first three innings against Chris Knapp and coasted home. In the nightcap, Henderson stole home in the first inning and broke a 1-1 tie with a two-run triple in the third.

Red Sox 6, Rangers 5 Carl Yastrzemski's third single of the game drove in the winning run in the bottom of the 11th inning for Boston, breaking Texas' five-game winning streak. Royals 9, Tigers 6 George Brett and U.L. Wash. Cubs 6, Mets 3 Ivan deJesus' tie-breaking single keyed a three-run seventh inning. Mike Tyson started it by reaching on third baseman Elliott Maddox's error and Mick Kelleher sacrificed before deJesus singled. Steve Ontiveros, who tied the game in the fifth with a solo homer, drew a walk and Bill Buckner singled to score deJesus. When the ball got past center fielder Joel Youngblood for another error, Ontiveros also scored.

Reds Beat Braves Again

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

It may be time to break up the Cincinnati Reds and shake up the Atlanta Braves. Even another so-so pitching performance by Cincinnati ace Tom Seaver and the benching of Atlanta slugger Bob Horner and Gary Matthews couldn't derail the Big Red Machine or get the Bumbling Brave Brigade untracked Sunday. The result, thanks to George Foster's tie-breaking two-run homer in the eighth inning, was a 5-3 Cincinnati triumph, the 10th in 11 games for the fast-starting Reds — including seven of eight from Atlanta — and the ninth setback in 10 games for the slump-ridden Braves. "I thought we could have won the game easily today," said Atlanta Manager Bobby Cox. "Seaver really didn't have his real good stuff."

In other National League action, the Los Angeles Dodgers shaded the Houston Astros 4-2, the Pittsburgh Pirates downed the St. Louis Cardinals 6-3, the Montreal Expos edged the Philadelphia Phillies 7-6, the San Francisco Giants beat the San Diego Padres 5-1 and the Chicago Cubs turned back the New York Mets 6-3. Dodgers 4, Astros 2 Rookie Rudy Law singled to score relief pitcher Jerry Reuss in the bottom of the eighth inning, breaking a 2-2 tie. Reuss reached when Jose Cruz dropped his fly to short left to open the inning. After Davey Lopes' sacrifice, Law followed with his game-winning hit. Law eventually scored on Ron Cey's sacrifice fly after stealing both second and third. Pirates 6, Cardinals 3 Dave Parker rapped a three-run homer off Pete Vuckovich to cap a five-run second inning. Bill Madlock opened the inning with a single and Ed Ott walked. Phil Garner singled Madlock home and, after a pair of forceouts, Tim Foli delivered an RBI single and Parker followed with his second homer of the season. Expos 7, Phillies 6 Andre Dawson led off the ninth inning with a walk off Tug McGraw, raced to third on a bloop single by Larry Parrish and scored the winning run on Gary Carter's sacrifice fly. The Expos had tied the game in the eighth when Warren Cromartie scored on a single by Ron LeFlore. Dawson and Ellis Valentine hit consecutive home runs in the first inning.

Giants 5, Padres John Montefusco scattered eight hits in posting his first victory since last July and Larry Herndon supplied the punch with a double and triple. Montefusco registered his first complete game since Aug. 2, 1978. Cubs 6, Mets 3 Ivan deJesus' tie-breaking single keyed a three-run seventh inning. Mike Tyson started it by reaching on third baseman Elliott Maddox's error and Mick Kelleher sacrificed before deJesus singled. Steve Ontiveros, who tied the game in the fifth with a solo homer, drew a walk and Bill Buckner singled to score deJesus. When the ball got past center fielder Joel Youngblood for another error, Ontiveros also scored.

Upsets The Norm In Heart Fund Play

Upsets were the order of the day in the finals of the Greenville Heart Fund Tennis Tournament held Sunday on the Evans Parks courts. Henry Hostetter, ECU's number one player, recorded a mid upset in stopping Don Ball, last year's finalist, 6-2. In the Men's 35s, second-seeded Norm Hignite rolled to a 6-2, 6-0 upset over John Eatman, while in the Men's 45s Al King staved off a second set comeback to defeat Bill Still, 6-4, 7-6 (503). In the Women's Open Singles Rose High's Lou Taft downed Kay Crawford, 3-6, 6-4, 7-6 (5-4). The draw for next weekend's Heart Fund Doubles Tournaments will be posted Tuesday at the Elm Street courts. Play begins Friday in some events.

Tigers Win Tennis Title

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Clemson's first Atlantic Coast Conference tennis championship in 11 years was provided in part Sunday by a player who once might have been a pretty fair left-handed pitcher. Mike Gandolfo grew up in Florida as a baseballer, but after getting struck in the face with a baseball, he reluctantly put down the glove and picked up a tennis racket at the age of 15. He advanced through his high school and early college years to establish himself as the No. 1 singles player on the Tiger team. Against Wake Forest's Armand Molino, Gandolfo used a tremendous serve to earn a 7-5, 6-7, 6-3 triumph over Molino on his own campus courts. Gandolfo was one of five victories that led Clemson to the title with a total of 73 points.

North Pitt KO's Conley

BETHEL — Roger Bell pitched a three-hitter and North Pitt banged out 13 hits to whip D.H. Conley, 9-0, Saturday night in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game. The Panthers, now 5-3 in the ECC and 7-7 overall, wasted no time in taking the lead. North Pitt went ahead with three in the first and added a single run in the second before a five-run fifth put the game away. North Pitt was led in hitting by Bob Hemingway, who was three for four, and Robert Bunn, who was two for three. Ronnie House and Gregory Briley were both two of four. D.H. Conley did not have anyone with more than one hit. The Panthers play host to North Lenoir Tuesday. D.H. How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST—Rain is expected in the forecast period until Tuesday morning from the southern and central Rockies into the northern Plains. Weather will be cooler in the West and northern Plains. Warm weather is forecast for most of the country. The Northwest will be cool. (AP laserphoto Map)

A weak cold front passed through North Carolina today but its only effect was a possible shower or two. Temperatures were expected to continue on the warm side much as they were Sunday.

high temperatures ranging mostly in the 70s. Similar readings are expected Tuesday. Some scattered showers developed over the mountains and southern coastal area Sunday afternoon but otherwise, fine spring weather prevailed across the state.

Fair skies continued through the night with low readings in the 40s and 50s.

Labor Dept. Cutback Regarded A 'Menace'

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—Starting today, the Greensboro area office of the U.S. Labor Department will be downgraded to a field office, just one in a series of moves connected with a cutback initiated at the top.

But some farm workers' rights groups see the cutback as dangerous to the well being of migrant farm workers.

The cutback is already seen as a problem in the enforcement of federal labor laws because of a loss of available compliance officers. One officer said the cutback in the budget is so tight that "we won't have travel money to get 20 miles." In all, the positions of seven compliance officers in North Carolina are being eliminated, meaning difficulties in ensuring decent housing, sanitation, and transportation facilities for the thousands of migrants who work in North Carolina, according to one official.

But despite the cutbacks at the enforcement level, one Labor Department spokesman was cautiously optimistic about attempts to guard the rights of migrants and other low-paid workers.

"There will be absolutely no cut in the (migrant) program. It is the No. 1 priority in the wage and hour division," said Henry T. White Jr.

However, department officials and spokesmen for farm worker advocacy groups feel there is need to triple the number of compliance officers in North Carolina.

"The problem is so overwhelming and the abuses are so great that it doesn't make any difference whether we have 25 or 35 compliance officers," said Bill Geimer, an attorney with Farmworkers Legal Services of North Carolina.

He said that even with the federal government's efforts, they are now doing a terrible job. "Now what are they going to do with seven less compliance officers in the state?" he asked.

Job Listings Being Expanded

Farm Scene

Despite efforts by the USDA and the Carter Administration to support grain prices and prevent them from falling below pre-embargo levels, corn prices are currently 15-20 cents below early February highs and very close to the crop year's lows set in late October. On April 1, the Commodity Credit Corporation announced that it had purchased 33 million bushels of corn and will continue bi-weekly purchases into the summer. These purchases have reversed the downturn and could have some upward impact on prices that could last into the summer. However, the market is burdened by the largest corn inventory in 15 years and with a near normal 1980 crop, prices can be expected to trend downward later in the year. Corn plantings in the south are behind last year due to rainy weather. Lower expected prices combined with higher production costs may result in farmers cutting acreage planted to corn by as much as five percent nationwide from last year.

Since early January, soybean prices have dropped nearly 75 cents a bushel. Several factors, including the embargo on grain sales to Russia, the South American soybean crop, the projected U.S. record soybean carry-over, and the worldwide buildup in oilseed crops, have been responsible. Additional pressure was placed on prices when the Commodity Credit Corporation began selling the 710,300 tons of embargoed soybeans it had acquired. Sales will be made bi-weekly until the entire amount has been channeled back into the market. The Brazilian government has removed the export tax on soybeans and soybean products. The export tax was designed to assure sufficient domestic supplies and stabilize domestic prices. The placement and subsequent removal has only served to delay exports from Brazil. Now that the tax has been lifted, we should see further pressure on soybeans and soybean meal when these Brazilian exports come into the market and in larger quantities than usual. If there is a normal weather pattern for new U.S. beans, the pressure of the Brazilian crop and the projected carry-over stock will tend to minimize any seasonal summer strength in U.S. soybean prices.

Top hog prices have declined from the $35-36 per hundredweight range of mid-March to below $30 in early April. This decline was sharper than expected and was due to continued large supplies of pork and a weaker consumer demand. Increased concern about recession, increased unemployment, and tighter credit policies have all tended to weaken consumer demand. Top hog prices are now expected to remain in the $28-30 per hundredweight range until early May and then gradually increase to the $40 per hundredweight range in June or July. The March Hog and Pig Report indicated seven percent more sows than a year ago and nine percent more market hogs. Continued large supplies mean that $40 per hundredweight is probably as high as hog prices will be over the next six months. A large liquidation of the sow herd could result in prices as low as $25 in the next 60 days. Feeder pig prices are expected to average near $40 per hundredweight for the 40-50 pound no. one and two's for the next month.

The North Carolina Employment Security Commission is expanding its job listing service to include all state agency vacancies which the agency wishes filled. Effective today, the statewide listing of state agency jobs will be available at any Job Service office, according to ESC Chairman J. B. Archer. The federal government already lists all of its jobs in the state with ESC.

"This is one of the greatest steps we've made in state personnel," Archer said. "It will provide our agency with a great opportunity to better serve the state. I think that this is the challenge that is really going to move us into a posture of realizing that we can, in fact, make the difference in matching worker's skills, potential skills, with the employer's needs."

Each job opening will be listed on a computerized Job Bank. The ESC has 89 Job Service offices located throughout the state staffed with qualified interviewers. Anyone interested in state government employment can find out what is available by visiting one of these offices, Archer said.

The Governor has directed the ESC and the Office of State Personnel to coordinate the program so there will be a microfiche listing of state job openings available in each of the Job Service offices. He said this will allow any individual from Manteo to Murphy to know when and where state jobs are available. The Job Bank in each Job Service office will be kept up to date and operational to prevent delay in filling job openings.

It is hoped this system will eliminate the necessity for an applicant to go from agency to agency seeking employment and will reduce lag time as much as a week for an individual to go from one job to another.

The applicant will be interviewed and, if he meets the qualifications for the job he is interested in, his application will be forwarded to the state agency where the vacancy exists.

Veterans, widows of veterans and wives of disabled veterans will continue to be given preference in state jobs and Equal Employment Opportunity guidelines, as always, will be followed in filling state vacancies, Archer said.

"I think the addition of government job listings with our agency will mean a whole new ballgame in that it will not only give us a new area to work with, but it will help us move into the high-skill professional jobs because many of the state openings are openings that require professional type work," Archersaid.

Also, I think it will motivate people at the local level to realize that here is an opportunity to serve all the people in the state in referring applicants to the largest employer in the state. It will help us improve our professional competence and capabilities in providing a total employment service to an employer. And, if we do this, it is going to make it possible for us to do the same thing with private employers."

Anyone interested in state employment is encouraged to visit the Greenville ESC Office, 3101 Bismarck Street.

Pre-College Studies Set

ECU News Bureau
High school juniors with superior scholastic records and PSAT scores are eligible to participate in East Carolina University's annual Pre-College Program this summer.

The program, set for June 25 - August 1, enables participating students to enroll in college courses for credit, to be applied toward later credit at ECU or other institutions.

Each student may select two courses from the following areas: anthropology, art, biology, chemistry, correctional services, drama, economics, foreign languages and literatures, geography, history, health, home economics, industrial technology, mathematics, music, philosophy, physics, political science, psychology, sociology and speech.

Since only 30 students can be accepted into the pre-College Program, early registration is advised.

Further information about the program is available from Renee Moore, assistant dean of admissions at ECU (919-757-6640) or from Judy West or Joan Taylor of the Admissions Office staff.

Stockard Fills The Time Slot

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — While watching the new "Stockard Channing Show" for the third consecutive week, it occurred to me that the show was a lot like my bedroom wallpaper. I didn't particularly like it, but I didn't dislike it enough to change it.

Much of prime time television is that way, and for reason: ABC, NBC and CBS don't want you to like their programs as much as they want you to endure them, to allow a program to just be there in the room with you, like relatively inoffensive wallpaper.

The LOP (Least Objectionable Program) theory, former NBC programming executive Paul Klein called it. Television has become part of the passive environment in most American homes, so the aim is to come up with the least objectionable television, programs people won't be moved to change.

Program ratings, upon which the entire commercial TV industry turns, don't measure viewers in a literal sense, but numbers of sets that happen to be tuned to various stations. Which leads to a sort of programming double-negative. It's not what is watched so much as what is not watched that matters.

If people aren't watching your flocked pink paisley of a sitcom, your repaper that part of your schedule with a nice, unobtrusive floral pattern of a sitcom, like the one people aren't watching on the other network. The result is a great drive to the middle.

Thus, for every "M-A-S-H" or "All in the Family" or "Barney Miller," shows with genuine wit and punch and occasional daring, there are a dozen "Benson's" or "Angies" or "Stockard Channing Shows," programs whose chief asset is that they won't drive you away.

"The Stockard Channing Show" has going for it its star, an accomplished actress whose face delivers more comedy than the script. There is also an inoffensive co-star, Ron Silver, who makes the best of what he is given.

Going against it is a style that is not really a style at all, but a formula. Stockard plays a single lady; Silver is a single man. He is a TV consumer rip-off reporter. She is his assistant, Susan. He puts her down a lot. She rebounds a lot.

What CBS has here is yet another show that's not outrageous or particularly clever or in any substantive way individual. On the other hand, watching it won't give you a headache.

'3rd Front' In Roberta's Life

BALTIMORE (AP) — Singer Roberta Flack says black women in America must not only fight sexism and racism but also "the black man who has made it. He will say anything, do anything, if he feels his position is threatened."

Miss Flack, who spoke at Saturday's conference of the Black Women's Consciousness Raising Association, Inc., told her audience, made up mostly of black women, that they would find the going particularly tough in show business.

"Most black women in show business are given the business," said the popular recording artist who is also a former music teacher.

Became Sorry For Marilyn

NEW YORK (AP) — Susan Strasberg offers a view of the magic and sadness of Marilyn Monroe in the second installment of her autobiography in "People" magazine this week.

Strasberg writes that Miss Monroe often stayed with her parents, drama coach Lee Strasberg and his wife, in New York.

Miss Strasberg said that while she "was instantly jealous of her ... body, her blondness, the ease with which she commanded attention," she grew to feel sorry for Miss Monroe.

"One day I awakened to see Marilyn standing nude by the window, bathed in the morning sun, ... I was mesmerized ... She turned as if sensing my gaze. Caught off guard, I blushed and blurted out, "Marilyn, I wish I were like you."

The late actress's response, according to Miss Strasberg, was "Oh, no, Susie. I wish I were like you. I'd love to have your family. People respect you."

Chicken Franks Are Moving Up

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — Chicken franks now account for eight percent of the total hot dog market, and other processed chicken products make up more than 10 percent of the 48.8 pounds of chicken per capita that Americans eat each year. These products range from breaded, precooked, frozen, cut-up fried chicken to pot pies, the hot dogs and breast fillet sandwiches, says the National Broiler Council.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF © 1980 by Chicago Tribune

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A2 ♥10872 ♦J95 ♣AK83

The bidding has proceeded: East South West North 1 ♠ Dble. Pass 3 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Don't make the mistake of thinking that North's jump to three hearts is forcing—it is only invitational. North is saying that if you have a better than minimum double, you should go on to game. Since you have as little as the law allows for a takeout double at this vulnerability, pass.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A83 ♥J952 ♦KJ652 ♣8

Partner opens the bidding with two hearts. What do you bid now?
A.—There is little doubt that you are going to slam, but you want to leave yourself room to investigate grand slam possibilities. If you bid diamonds now, the rest of the auction could get out of control. The first thing you should do is fix the trump suit, so we recommend a bid of three hearts now. You will have plenty of time later to show the other features of your hand.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K7 ♥8652 ♦A93 ♣KQ76

Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—An awkward hand. If you held an honor in hearts, there would be no problem. But now if you respond one heart and partner raises, you might get to the wrong spot. We suggest a one diamond response. If partner has four hearts, he can still bid them. If he does not, then you have missed nothing. Two no trump is also a possibility, but you are a point shy for that action.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A—This is the case of the lesser of evils. You are too strong for a simple raise to two spades, yet a white too weak for a jump to three spades—you have a lot of losers. However, a waiting bid of two of a minor does not appeal. All in all, the vulnerability favors the slight stretch to three spades—the rewards for making game are great.

♠AQJ5 ♥J1076 ♦6 ♣AKQ7

The bidding has proceeded: North East South 1 ♥ 4 ♦ ?

What do you bid now?
A.—East's preempt has accomplished its purpose—an orderly investigation of the possibilities is out of the question. The alternatives left to you are a jump to six hearts or a cue-bid of five diamonds. The cue-bid runs a slight risk that, after you bid six hearts, partner might go on to seven thinking that you should go on to game.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠107 ♥AK954 ♦AJ3 ♣982

The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1 ♥ Pass 2 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Despite your five-card major suit, you have a balanced hand. Therefore, you should raise to three no trump. A bid of three hearts by you would tend to show a six-card suit in an unbalanced hand. With your holding, you shouldn't even think that a suit contract might be superior to no trump.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠QJ762 ♥92 ♦AJ5 ♣E83

Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—This is the case of the lesser of evils. You are too strong for a simple raise to two spades, yet a white too weak for a jump to three spades—you have a lot of losers. However, a waiting bid of two of a minor does not appeal. All in all, the vulnerability favors the slight stretch to three spades—the rewards for making game are great.

REALTORS ANNOUNCE HOME ENERGY CONSERVATION PROJECT The GREENVILLE-PITT COUNTY BOARD OF REALTORS announces a pilot project to demonstrate how homeowners may make their homes more energy efficient, and qualify for the Greenville Utilities Commission Energy Check and Awards Program. THE MAKE AMERICA BETTER COMMITTEE will soon select a home which local REALTORS will "weatherize" with insulation, weatherstripping and caulking. The home will be selected because of its suitability for the project and the owner's need. REALTORS ask that anyone interested in further information about the project, or anyone wishing to donate materials for the project, call Janet Hignite at 756-1306 or 756-5569.
