RESCUE MISSION FAILS — The U.S. government reported this morning that a military attempt to free the American hostages in Tehran, Iran, had failed.

Congress Leaders Express 'Dismay'

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders, expressing a mixture of disbelief and dismay over the ill-fated Iranian rescue effort, rebuked President Carter today for not informing them of the mission in advance.

Chairmen Clement Zablocki of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and Frank Church of the counterpart Senate Foreign Relations Committee called Carter's failure to consult with congress a violation of the 1973 War Powers Act.

Zablocki, D-Wis., voiced grief over the death of the eight military crewman during the rescue effort but, he said, "it was stupid on the part of the president not to consult with us."

After watching Carter's nationally broadcast address this morning, Zablocki said: "I don't think he's satisfactorily explained the use of military force in Iran."

Church, D-Idaho, said he, too, was not persuaded by the president's defense of the mission. "The president said it had an excellent chance of success. I'd have to hear the particulars before I can pass judgment on that."

Church said as far as he knew, no one in Congress was consulted by the administration about the failed mission which Carter said had been in the planning stages since last November.

The War Powers Act, designed to prevent another Vietnam-type war, directs the president to "in every possible instance consult with Congress" before committing U.S. forces to military action abroad.

Top congressional leaders found out about the mission only minutes before it was publicly acknowledged by the White House, with top administration officials — including Vice President Walter F. Mondale — making the early-morning phone calls.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd both declined to comment at all until they were more fully briefed by administration officials.

"Had the operation succeeded, the president would have been a hero," said Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D. "But when it failed,

Eight Americans Dead In Aborted Rescue Mission

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, declaring that he followed the mandates of "necessity and duty" in ordering a military attempt to rescue the American hostages in Tehran, said today he aborted the mission when a rescue helicopter failed.

Eight Americans died in the collision of two U.S. aircraft during the attempt to withdraw the failed mission from a remote desert site about 360 miles southeast from Tehran, Carter praised the men and said he felt sorrow for their sacrifice.

In a solemn, 7 a.m. EST, report to the nation, the president said he still holds the Iranian government "responsible for the safety and for the early release" of the hostages.

Emphasizing that there were no Iranian casualties, Carter described the mission as a humanitarian one. He said all involved understood it "to be difficult and ... dangerous."

The initial Iranian response was a televised message of restraint; there was no word from the militants actually holding the hostages.

Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh called the rescue mission "an invasion," and said, "I hope we do not react as nervously as the American authorities have done."

"We have been disappointed before," Carter said. He said the United States would continue through diplomatic means to seek the "peaceful release" of the hostages. He gave no hint of further military steps.

Carter said the decision to attempt the rescue operation was his, and so was the decision to cancel it "when problems developed in the placement of our rescue team for a future rescue operation."

That seemed to indicate that the American team, which Carter said was composed of volunteers, got only as far as an initial staging area, and that an actual attempt on the embassy would have come later.

"In the aftermath of the attempt, we continue to hold the government of Iran responsible for the safety and for the early release of the American hostages who have been held for so long," Carter said. "The United States remains determined to bring about their safe release at the earliest date possible."

In his initial report, Carter simply repeated the sketchy account given earlier at about 1:15 a.m. EST by administration officials. Carter promised more details of the rescue attempt, and the reasons for failure, later.

Carter said that in undertaking the "dangerous" mission, he felt it would have "an excellent chance for success."

He said he ordered the mission to protect American lives, and to reduce the danger of conflict in the world. "It was my decision to attempt this rescue mission," he said in a nationally televised report to the nation. "In the aftermath of this attempt, we continue to hold the Iranian government responsible" for the safety of the hostages, he said. At the time Carter spoke, there had been no reaction from the militants holding the embassy.

Carter said the United States would continue through diplomatic means to seek the "peaceful release" of the hostages. He gave no hint of any further military steps.

Flotilla Busy Evacuating Many Cubans

By STEVE WILSON
Associated Press Writer

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Some 10,000 exiles eager to liberate loved ones from Cuba are turning this resort into a boom town — and one exile spokesman says President Fidel Castro has decided to permit thousands to leave the Caribbean island.

Store shelves in this town of 29,000 are bare and boat captains are flush with cash as Cuban-Americans crowd in hoping to bring relatives to Florida.

Napoleon Vilaboa, organizer of the "freedom flotilla" that has ferried more than 1,000 Cubans to South Florida since Sunday, says the Castro government has flung open the doors to potential refugees.

Authorities said 536 Cubans arrived Thursday and Radio Havana reported that at least 300 boats were jammed in the harbor at Mariel.

A steady stream of boats chugged out to sea from the city marina Thursday, their skippers ignoring warnings of fines of up to $1,000 for each refugee brought back from Cuba.

Boat operators were charging up to $1,000 per refugee to make the journey across the choppy Florida Straits. There were reports that boats were changing hands for double their value.

"These people are bloodsuckers, man," one boat owner said. "People are turning down $10,000 to $12,000 because they think they'll get a better deal tomorrow."

Other marine operators defended their prices, saying they were risking valuable equipment on uncertain seas.

A Florida Marine Patrolman who asked not to be identified estimated 10,000 of Florida's Cubans have streamed into Key West this week, straining resources to the limit.

"You can't buy a life jacket, fire extinguisher or safety equipment," he said. "Everything's sold out. You go to a grocery store and there's no beer or soda on the shelves."

Meanwhile, Vilaboa told The Associated Press today that a top aide to Castro had assured him no restrictions would be placed on the number or destination of refugees.

Vilaboa said Rene Rodriguez, president of the Cuban Institute of Friendship with the People, told him "the Cuban government won't put any obstacle (in the way of) the people who want to leave."

He said Rodriguez assured him "the people who want to go to the United States, they won't be pushed to other countries."

An airlift of 10,000 Cubans who sought refuge at the Peruvian Embassy in Havana three weeks ago was suspended last Friday after Castro insisted that refugees flown to Costa Rica not be allowed to emigrate to other countries.

Costa Rican officials had no explanation late Thursday when a plane load of 107 exiles landed unexpectedly in San Jose.

Strike Force Said From Fort Bragg

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. military unit that tried to rescue the American hostages in Iran is a highly secret antiterrorist force based at a North Carolina Army post, an informed source said today.

The source, who declined to be identified, said planning for the operation was well underway in January and that the special unit had a virtually unlimited budget and access to the most sophisticated weapons and debilitating gases.

The source said the all-volunteer unit was known as the Delta team and was based at Fort Bragg, N.C. Pentagon sources confirmed there was a Delta team, also known under the code name of Blue Light, but they could not confirm that this was the team involved in the abortive action, which left eight servicemen dead in the collision of two aircraft.

Sources said only a handful of top officials knew what units and how many men were involved in the actual operation.

Pentagon officials would not comment on the report, saying the Pentagon had nothing to add beyond what President Carter had announced.

The source, who said he personally was aware of the planning, said the Delta team operations were directed by a special direct action group of planners in the Pentagon.

He said the team was a specially designed counter-terrorist unit that was trained in rescuing hostages and in the use of nausea-producing gases.

Two Rose High Merit Scholars

Two seniors at Rose High School have been named as National Merit Scholarship Winners of National Merit $1000 Scholarships.

The two are Fred M. Parham, Jr. and Susan Vick. Each will receive a single payment of $1,000 next fall after enrolling in an accredited college or university of their choice.

The scholarship received by Parham is sponsored by Burroughs Wellcome Company and the one awarded to Vick is sponsored by Kaman Corporation.

Both students have mathematics as their major field of study. Also, both are among the top five students in this year's senior class and as such will be speakers at the graduation exercise in June.

USED CLOTHING SOURCE

My budget gets tighter and tighter as gas gets higher and higher and other expenses of raising a family grow, too. I've been thinking of looking into where I can buy good used clothing for my children, besides yard sales. M. M.

There probably are many others, but Hotline has in its file the following sellers of used clothing: Pandora's Box run by Presbyterian women; Rethreads run by Gail Ayres for the benefit of Carolina Country Day School; the Clothesline run by Jarvis Methodist Church women; and the Elite Repeat, the privately owned business of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Tripp. The Elite Repeat is the only one of these that takes clothes on consignment. The others accept tax-deductible donations, as does the Salvation Army, which also operates a thrift shop that includes some clothes in its wares.

'Darvon' Going Under New Federal Scrutiny

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Darvon, the nation's most widely prescribed painkiller, is coming under renewed scrutiny by the federal government in a move that could sharply limit its availability at doctors' offices and drugstores.

The Drug Enforcement Administration said Thursday it already has tightened federal regulations on Darvon in pure, bulk form.

The Food and Drug Administration is considering the same restrictions, including prohibiting telephone prescriptions and banning refills, for other, more common forms of Darvon. This would include the pills and capsules, plain or combined with other drugs, used by millions of Americans each year for pain ranging from headaches to toothaches.

All types of Darvon had been on the government's list of low-risk drugs — those having little potential for abuse and leading to only limited physical or psychological dependence. Pure, bulk Darvon now is being reclassified as a drug with only limited medically approved uses and with a greater danger of being abused.

Government figures show Darvon second only to barbiturates among prescription medications used to commit suicide. About 1,000 to 2,000 deaths a year are associated with Darvon.

The drug, which is marketed under the names Darvocet-N, Darvon-N and Darvon Compound, can be addictive and can cause serious injury or death when taken with alcohol or other drugs or in large doses.

Sidney Wolfe, who heads the Public Citizen Health Research Group, said about 22 million prescriptions for Darvon were written in the United States in 1979. The public spent $130 million on the drug.

The latest government study comes less than a year after the FDA and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare refused to order Darvon off the market. It stems from the United Nations Commission on Narcotics' decision to seek production quotas on Darvon.

The commission, including U.S. representatives from the FDA and the DEA, voted unanimously Feb. 14 at Vienna to support the restrictions on dextropropoxyphene, the active ingredient in Darvon. The generic name for Darvon is propoxyphene.

Life As It's Lived

Poverty, Not Wealth, Breeds Materialism

BY GAIL MICHAELS
One of the most important things I've learned as a student's wife is that it's almost impossible to be high-minded when you're poor.

Poverty, not wealth, breeds materialism. When you can leave the kids with a sitter and go out to a nice restaurant to celebrate the end of the week, you can afford to discuss a charitable contribution to the Macrame Society of America. But when you celebrate your husband's birthday by taking him and your daughter to see "Lady and the Tramp," you begin to long for personal luxury.

You then begin to make out a mental list of what you're going to buy if you ever have more than $3 cash in your wallet. Sociologists call this "deferred demand." I call it an exercise in futility.

Still, Phillip and I both have such lists. Mine begins with a coat that doesn't come from the Salvation Army Thrift Shop and a frying pan with a handle.

Other items include a Christmas holiday during which I don't have to make any gifts, three bedrooms, and a typewriter that prints all 26 letters of the alphabet and moves its carriage without undue human intervention.

Phillip's list concentrates more on creature comforts like meat, dessert, a thermostat set above 58 in the winter and below 65 in the summer, and a job.

We've even thought about such extravaganzas as two bathrooms, a stereo, outfit somewhat more elaborate than a Close and Play, and a remote control lawnmower.

Of course, we have tried to shelter our child from this character deficiency, but materialism strikes all ages. The minute Meg was told that she could not have a kitten until we could afford to feed it and to provide it with medical care, she started making her own list. It now includes a gym set, a bunk bed, a bicycle, a cottage at the beach, an elephant, a trip to Japan, a space ship, and magic powers.

Her longing to have money is so overwhelming that it even colors her imaginative play. Just recently, she was reduced to tears when her teacher told her that she must share some of the housekeeping toys that she had squirreled away under a card table which was serving as her playhouse. "But if I do that," Meg sobbed, "how will anybody know I'm rich?"

I have given her several pep talks with a "there are more things in life than money" theme, but I don't seem to be getting through. For instance, I viewed as a golden opportunity her question, "Are we poor?"

"Not really. There are plenty of people who don't have enough food to eat or clothes to wear. They're the ones who are poor."

"Then are we rich?"

I donned my most pious Sunday School smile. "Well, we're not rich in money, but we sure are rich in love. And that's more important." She looked skeptical.

"It is?"

"Certainly. There are people who have enough money to buy anything they want and they still aren't happy because they don't have enough love. Now wouldn't you rather have love than money?"

"I'd rather have both."

Regional Speech Traits Beginning To Disappear

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — News commentator Paul Harvey expressed concern the other day that a piece of Americana — the way we speak — is beginning to disappear.

And he'll get no argument on that score from a North Carolina sociologist who has noticed that today's middle-class southerner is pronouncing his "r's." That means he is now saying "here" instead of "heah."

That could make Harvey's suggestion to tape for posterity some of the more prevalent sounds of regionalism, such as the "thangs" of Texas, a reasonably good idea.

The problem, according to John S. Reed, an associate professor of sociology at the University of North Carolina, is that the new breed of southerner doesn't have a proper stereotype.

What then are the distinguishing characteristics of the new southerner?

According to Reed, magazines devoted to instruction in the proper way of southern living advise northern migrants and socially uplifted natives of the South that every southern garden has azaleas and that ham and southern hospitality go hand in hand.

"This is useful information, both for recent migrants who want to fit in and for southerners whose childhood gardens featured more tomatoes, okra and snap beans than azaleas, and who were not eating high enough on the hog to be anywhere near ham," said Reed.

And the differences that make up the stereotype gap at times can be credited to some of the nation's most famous southerners. Reed uses President Carter as an example.

He says many people are not comfortable with Carter because they can't pinpoint his style. Yet Billy Carter and the president's mother Lillian pose no threat because they fit into traditional molds. Reed classifies the Carters as being typical of a social stratum that is growing at a phenomenal rate.

Only 15 percent of the South's labor force worked at white-collar jobs in 1930, he said. By 1970 the figure had tripled, and Reed believes the 1980 census will show a majority of all Southern workers in white-collar jobs.

Reed's impression of a southerner is a bourbon-and-water drinker, a faithful church-goer, more prone to violence, more liberal on social issues and more conservative on politics.

And as far as he's concerned today's southerner fits more comfortably into the mold of the American mainstream.

Poster Project Results Shown

A poster project involving students in the Pitt County and Greenville City Schools resulted in about 40 entries being submitted by student artists.

These posters are currently on display at the Carolina East Mall, where they will remain on view through Saturday, April 26.

The poster program was sponsored by the Keep Pitt County Clean and Beautiful Committee as part of its program during April, which has been designated as "Beautification Month."

Student Winners are:

— Grades K-1 — First place, Quincy Hawkins, G. R. Whitfield; second, Latasha Williams, Third Street; and third, Sherres Ann Bush, Stokes Elementary.

— Grades 2-3 — First, Lamarr Mayo, Third Street; second, Stephen Higdon, Wahl-Coates; tie for third, Jimmy Daniels, Eastern Elementary and Vinny Mikkelsen, Wahl-Coates.

— Grades 4-5 — First, James Nalbone, Wahl-Coates; second, David Russ, Wahl-Coates; third, Kim Redmond, Third Street.

— Grades 6-8 — First, Johnny May, Farmville

Middle; second, Gregory Daniels, Wellcome Middle; third, Peter Kallweit, Third Street.

— Grades 9-12 — Tie for first, Allen Corbett, Farmville Central and Samantha Nanne, Farmville Central.

— EMH — First, William Everett, Bethel Elementary.

First through third place winners will receive a tree or shrub to be planted at their schools, with the awards donated by the realtors of Greenville and Pitt County. Winners will also receive ribbons and certificates.

An Alternative Being Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cosmetic industry says it is searching for alternatives to using animals to test the safety of their products.

Until another accurate method is found, however, the Cosmetic, Toiletry and Fragrance Association said it will continue to conduct some initial animal testing to assure that products are safe for humans. A coalition of animal protection groups picketed the trade association's offices here Wednesday, urging the industry to stop using animals in tests. The group said animals are being made to suffer "just so women can make themselves beautiful."

Fastest Growing Minority
Although the Census is not tabulated yet, officials expect it will confirm that Hispanic-Americans are the nation's fastest growing minority. Between 12 and 19 million Spanish-speaking people live in the United States. No one is sure of the exact number because it is difficult to gather accurate information about how many immigrate to the United States each year. Most Hispanics have come from Mexico, Puerto Rico, and Cuba. Most Mexican-Americans live in California and the Southwest. About one million Puerto Ricans live in New York City—more than live in San Juan, the capital of Puerto Rico. The largest number of Cubans, the wealthiest group of Hispanic-Americans, live in southern Florida.

Miss Ellis Is Bride

Miss Brenda B. Ellis became the bride of James Donald Octigan Saturday at 3 p.m. in a candlelight ceremony at St. Gabriels Catholic Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Charles Mulholland.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Brock of Farmville. The bridegroom is the Mr. and Mrs. Donald F. Octigan of Greenville.

Wedding music was presented by Richard Knopp, organist.

The church altar was arranged with spiral candelabra and vases of poms, snapdragons, mums and baby's breath. At the entrance to the altar was a prie-dieu where the couple knelt for prayer. Pews were marked with white satin bows.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of ivory giana styed with a scooped neckline. The dress, made by her sister, featured a fitted bodice of Venise lace with matching full length tapered sleeves adorned with pearls. The A-line skirt was accented with Venise lace appliques. Her fingertip mantilla of ivory illusion was bordered with Venise lace and pearls. She carried a bouquet of white and yellow roses, lily of the valley, white daisies and baby's breath accented with ivory lace and satin ribbons.

Miss Adrienne Ellis was maid of honor and wore a mint green formal gown of dotted swiss and carried a miniature bouquet like the bride's.

The bride's mother wore a pink dress and the bridegroom's mother selected a powder blue dress. Both wore corsages of cymbidium orchids.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Billy Octigan, brother of the bridegroom, and Andy Williams. Cora Ann Octigan served as altar attendant.

The bride is a graduate of

Cooking Is Fun

SNACKTIME FARE
Oatmeal Cookies Milk
OATMEAL COOKIES
Especially good — and nutritious.

- ¼ cups whole wheat flour
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¾ teaspoon cinnamon
- ¾ cups quick-cooking oats
- ½ cup wheat germ
- 1 cup butter, at room temperature
- 1 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 large egg
- 1 cup raisins

On wax paper stir together flour, soda, salt, cinnamon, oats and wheat germ. In a large bowl cream butter, sugar and vanilla; beat in egg until blended. Stir in well the flour mixture and raisins. Drop by level tablespoons, a few inches apart, onto ungreased cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until browned, 10 to 12 minutes. Makes about 4 dozen cookies.

Farmville Central High School and is employed by Procter and Gamble. The bridegroom is a graduate of Rose High School and works for Carolina Dairies.

After a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S. C., the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Raymond Gray, entertained at a cake-cutting Friday night at St. Peter's Hall. The bride's table was covered with an ivory linen cloth and centered with candelabra. Wedding bells and yellow and white spring flowers decorated the table. A three-tiered wedding was served by Mrs. John Brock, mother of the bride. Punch was poured by the mother of the bridegroom. Assisting in serving were Miss Betty Octigan and Mrs. Billy Octigan.

Credit Women Have Meeting

Greenville Credit Women International met at the Pipeline Tuesday evening. Lillie Darden, program chairman, led the group in a discussion of "Motivation."

Members shared experiences in being a part of Credit Women International.

An initiation ceremony was led by Carol Hardee for new members including Joyce Barnes, Marian Hardee, Debra Johnston and Sue Venters. New members not present included Ginger Hackett and Jean McLawhorn.

President Linda Westbrook presided. Mary Roberson, chairperson of the state president's reception at state convention, finalized plans for the reception honoring Angelene Venters. President Westbrook reported on the Dixie Council meeting in Columbia, S. C., two weeks ago.

The state convention will be held in Winston-Salem June 1-2. Ed Hackett will give the program for the May meeting.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Cooper of Winterville announce the engagement of their daughter, Barbara Jean Clay, to the Rev. Wilbur Hue Walston, son of the late Rev. and Mrs. James Walston. The wedding will take place May 3.

Marriage Announced

Mrs. Shirley Jones Winslow and Col. John Franklin Mallard, USMC (Ret.) announce their wedding on Saturday, April 12, in Chapel Hill. The bride was a former resident of Greenville and a teacher at Rose High School.

Dear Abby

Weaker Signal For Fantasy

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been happily married for 16 years. My problem is that since before we were married I've had a crush on my husband's older brother, whom I'll call Arnold. It seems ridiculous at my age (39) to admit this, but it's true. Arnold is 42 and seems happily married.

Arnold and I have the same interests, share the same opinions, and we seem to have much more in common than he has with his wife or I with his brother.

Not that it's important, but even members of the family have commented on how much alike Arnold and I are. I'm ashamed to say that I've often wondered what it would be like to go to bed with him.

How do I put this man out of my mind? And why do I still fantasize about him after so many years?

I love my husband, and at times feel that my feelings about his brother could be considered infidelity. It would be a great relief to have an answer soon.

OLD-TIME CRUSH

DEAR CRUSH: Fantasizing is a far cry from acting out, so don't feel guilty. Unless you're looking for trouble, avoid fantasizing in Arnold's presence. He could be operating on the same wavelength and pick up your signal.

DEAR ABBY: I have just graduated from college and am thinking about getting married. I have a girlfriend whom I love very much, but I am afraid if I marry her I will also be marrying her mother.

My girlfriend is 24, and she still tells her mother everything! When she's not at home with her mother, she calls her on the phone just to "talk" or "ask her advice." She has never made an important decision without consulting her mother first. She freely admits she doesn't have any self-confidence, and she needs her mother for support.

Abby, I can give her all the support she needs, and if she wants to talk things over, she has me to talk with. I think at 24, it's time she cut the cord between her and her mother. What do you think?

ME IN NYC

DEAR ME: I think you're right. If you marry this woman now you will be competing with her mother. So unless she changes her priorities, don't rush out to buy a ring — it might end up through your nose.

Shower Given Bridal Couple

Miss Betty Hines and Gary Harris, bridal couple-elect, were honored at a floating miscellaneous shower Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Greg Smith of Winterville.

Hostesses were Mrs. Clyde Hines, Mrs. Edward Lee Hardee, Mrs. Melvin Hines, Mrs. Guy Corbett, Mrs. Charlie McLawhorn, Mrs. Harold Hinnant, Mrs. Alton Hines, Mrs. E. C. Hines, all aunts of the bride-elect, Mrs. Greg Smith, Mrs. Bruce Gray and Mrs. Wayne Evans, cousins of the bride-elect.

Mrs. Dean Hines, mother of the bride-elect, introduced guests to the bridegroom-elect and his mother, Mrs. Ernest Harris. Mrs. Charlie McLawhorn assisted in recording gifts. Miss Leslie Gray and Miss Elaine Smith assisted the couple in opening gifts, which were displayed by Mrs. Alton Hines and Mrs. Bruce Gray on tables covered with white cloths and accented with yellow bows.

The refreshment table was covered with a white lace cloth over yellow and centered with spring flowers.

DEAR ABBY: You recently asked how the children should be named if both parents retained their own names.

Both my wife and I kept our own names, and we agreed that our children will be named in this way: Girls will take their mother's last name, and boys will take my last name. This seems both fair and sensible.

We rejected using both our names, hyphenated, because it would be too cumbersome. And we didn't want to give our children a new name unrelated to ours.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are professional people, each with a separate identity, so we decided that I should keep my maiden name after we married. What to name our children was no problem. My last name was used as our children's middle name; their last name is the same as their father's.

Exorbitant Increase

If you are wondering what's happening in the Postal Service, you won't have a long wait.

The cost of mailing a letter is sure to go up again. It won't be a five percent or a ten percent increase; rather the increase will be a full five cents for mailing a first class letter, or 25 percent.

The increase is included in plans filed by the Postal Rate Commission, which will now hold hearings, probably lasting until after the elections, before making a final decision.

The increase was blamed on inflation by Postmaster General William F. Bolger. He said cost-of-living increases added $110 million to the payroll. In addition every ten cent increase in the cost of gasoline adds $30 million to the Postal Service annual fuel costs.

That may well be, but the Postal Service is talking about increases averaging 28 percent, a huge amount of new costs to pass on to the public. Mailing cost are a large part of every business's overall operating expense. Every family spends considerable each year in mail cost to pay bills and communicate with acquaintances. Increases such as have been proposed by the Postal Rate Commission are inflationary in themselves. We would hope through the long hearing process the increases would be pared down considerably. In the meantime the Postal Service should be looking for more efficient ways to carry out its duties so that exorbitant increases won't be necessary.

Blockheads We Can Love

A couple of America's famous characters were block heads.

Everybody understood that they were and nobody minded. They were Charley McCarthy and Mortimer Snerd, the creations of the late Edgar Bergen. With his death their voices were silenced.

Now, however, the saucy Charley and the dumb Mortimer are going to become national treasures. Bergen's widow has shipped them to the Smithsonian Institute. What is more a part of America than Charley McCarthy and Mortimer Snerd?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A good measure of the lack of excitement in this year's North Carolina election so far could be had at a pair of press conferences the other day.

One featured former Gov. Bob Scott, seeking the Democratic Party nomination in the May 6 primary, opposing incumbent Gov. Jim Hunt seeking a second term. One followed the other by only 30 minutes.

Scott read with little interest and no animation through several pages of verbiage about salaries being paid corporate officers in public utilities companies and his obscure charge that Hunt had traded off authority for utilities to figure into their rate structures construction work in progress for creation of a public staff to work with the State Utilities Commission.

He finished, asked for questions and got none. The session was over.

A few minutes later, Hunt read casually through a statement on support for some tax breaks for people who install personal solar systems in their homes while newsmen shuffled about and tried to figure out some question to ask which might produce something of interest or news value.

Economics

Before very long, the press conference had developed into a low-key philosophical discussion between some of the reporters and the governor on whether federal officials were taking the right steps in fighting inflation — hardly a burning issue in the North Carolina gubernatorial campaign.

Asked how things are going on the campaign trail across the state, Hunt said he had good crowds recently in Alamance and Stokes County.

How — given the absence of interest and excitement in this election — did he manage to draw a crowd? He wondered.

"Well", drawled Hunt, only half jokingly, "we gave away door prizes. I wasn't eligible. I didn't have a ticket. But I did get a nice pair of bookends," he went on, describing the gift and the fellow who made it for him, and others who had from time to time also gotten similar gifts from the craftsman.

And that is how this campaign is going. There were high hopes early on that the son of a former governor with high populist ratings, and himself a former governor, would bring a measure of challenge to the race. At first Scott went on the offensive, but not with issues. Instead, he attacked Hunt personally.

Later, he said that was part of his strategy: to get the public's attention, and then develop issues.

Hunt, meanwhile, has maintained a posture above it all; refusing to respond, or even admit awareness, of his opponent's assaults. Neither has he put forth any new proposals of a significant sort, following instead the theory that to propose anything major would as likely draw fire and opposition as support.

BILL NOBLITT

No Choice

The apathy in this top race filters down to the other campaigns, as well, with little of interest happening, and the public duly unimpressed with it all.

Knowledgeable politicians on all sides lay the blame on Iran, inflation, gasoline prices, the deepening recession. People are just hanging on from day to day without getting excited about the elections.

That may be, a few dissenters say, but it may also be that enough people

To the editor:

If 36 young people had been arrested for drugs or some wild party, the news would be on the front pages of our newspapers. On Sunday, Apr. 20, I and many more witnessed an outstanding presentation by 36 young people. Their accomplishments, although unparalleled by anything I have seen recently, will get very little notice from the news media. Because our society dictates that our media focus on the bad news that society generates, I felt compelled to write this letter expressing my congratulations to these young people who have had to overcome such adversities as peer pressure, raising the funds for the presentation, and all the many strains that come to bear with just being a teenager.

Their musical presentation of "Alleluia" was a most moving experience for everyone who saw it. Not only did their presentation display a first class professional musical program, but demonstrated a sincerity, a love for each other, and an expression of their Christian faith as I have never witnessed. I am confident that everyone in attendance will react as I have, since there were very few dry eyes when the program was completed.

I also bring this to your attention so that you, too, can see this fine presentation. On Sunday, Apr. 27, at 7 p. m., this program will be presented at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church in Greenville. If you are tired of hearing all the bad things about our young people and would like to have the reassurance that our world will be left in capable hands, then please attend this program. I feel sure you will leave with the same wonderful feeling that I experienced by listening to "Alleluia" as presented by the Chapel Choir of Oakmont Baptist Church. To see young people work as they have is most gratifying, and our hats are off to them for a beautiful and well done experience that will touch many as they take it on tour. As I watched others, I'm sure they feel as I do about these young people—MIGHTY PROUD!

Strength For Today

ROCK OR SAND?

Jesus ended the Sermon on the Mount with what is known as a peroration — that is, a summing up and reemphasis of all he had said previously. This peroration reveals the fateful alternative which confronts every Christian:

"Whoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, who built his house upon the rock; and the rains descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and the house fell not: because it was founded upon the rock."

How are we building? This is the most important question any of us will ever confront. We are given what the Bible calls the day of grace in which to build. It is our privilege to build upon the rock. If we do, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him."

MY, MY... HOW NICE!

By ART BUCHWALD On Raising The Prime

WASHINGTON — Almost every evening on the news the anchorman announces that one of the major banks has raised its prime interest rate. But if you watch carefully, it's never the same bank two nights in a row. One evening Cronkite will say, "Chase Manhattan Bank today raised its prime rate to 18 percent." The next evening he'll announce, "The First National Bank of Chicago has increased the prime to 18 1/2," followed by a further bulletin the next day that, "Citibank said today it will now charge 19 percent to its favored customers." You can assume that if one major bank raises the interest rates all the others will follow suit.

Has it ever occurred to anyone that it's always a different bank that takes the lead in raising interest rates every night? It has to me.

I have no proof of this, but I wouldn't be surprised if the major banks have a deal with each other so one bank won't take all the flack for upping the prime rate every night. I suspect there are conversations going on like this every day.

"Hello, George? Ed here at the major banks doesn't announce the first increase, the public might not take us seriously."

"On the other hand, if we don't stick to the schedule we could have two major banks announcing a rate increase at the same time — or worse, no one will announce a price rate increase that day, and we'll all be in the soup."

"I agree with you. I think we should tell Citibank they have to raise the prime when it's their turn, or get out of the banking business."

"While I've got you on the phone, the Continental Bank of Chicago failed to raise its prime yesterday after Morgan Guaranty announced they were raising theirs."

"Those dirty rats. They're trying to make us all look bad. I think we should report them to the American Bankers Association."

"My thoughts exactly. Their excuse is they missed the evening news last night and didn't know Morgan Guaranty had raised it."

"That's malarkey. They know we raise it every day. I suspect they're just trying to steal customers from the rest of us."

"I wouldn't put it past them. Continental never was a team player. Well, it's been good talking to you. If Citibank gives me a hard time about raising the prime tomorrow, I'll call Gerry at Wells Fargo. He's been screaming that his bank hasn't been the first to raise interest rates since last summer, and his customers are starting to think that Fargo has lost its clout."

Manufacturers' Hanover. I believe it's the Bank of America's turn to raise the prime tomorrow.

"Let me check the schedule. No, it says here it's Citibank's turn. If you recall, we raised it last Thursday."

"Citibank said the man who raises the prime at their main office has the flu and was wondering if your guy would announce the raise tomorrow and they'll raise it when your turn comes around again."

"I'd like to help them out but I think it would look bad if we were the first to raise it two weeks in a row. Did you call Irving at Irving Trust?"

"Yes. He said he was playing golf tomorrow and couldn't do it. David Rockefeller's out of the country so Chase Manhattan can't do it. Do you have any ideas?"

"What about one of the Rigg's Banks in Washington. They're small, but they might like the publicity."

"We thought about Rigg's, but the problem is if one of

Questions Facing The 1980s

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Americans long for the good old days when they thought they understood what was going on. But what they get serves mainly to confuse or make them uncertain, or simply raises their prices.

The good old days probably never existed, of course, and you may be sure that 30 years from now some people will long for the good old days of 1980. But for those living in it, 1980 is a puzzle.

Why, for instance, should Washington, D.C. have suffered an inflation rate of "only" 12.2 percent in March, lowest in the nation except for New York's 12 percent, and far, far below Seattle's 17.8?

How could the U.S. automobile industry, once the most market-smart of any, have failed so badly to understand public tastes — so badly that foreign cars now take more than 25 percent of the domestic market?

What causes inflation? Too much money chasing too few goods? Continued government deficits? Corporate greed? Worker greed? Over-regulation of industry? Social Security and pension demands? Spending on matters that are, in the short-term, "non-productive," such as pollution control?

What cures it? Recession? Layoffs? Less government spending? Balanced budgets? Higher interest rates? Tax incentives to save? Tax penalties on borrowing and spending? Deregulation of industry? Worker incentives to promote productivity? Redeveloping somehow the spirit of innovation?

Big Family Ideal Fades

By GEORGE GALLUP
PRINCETON, N.J. — A sharp decline has occurred during the last 12 years in the proportion of Americans who favor large families, with the trend far more pronounced among Catholics than Protestants.

In 1968, 50 percent of Catholics believed the ideal family included four or more children. Only 19 percent today hold this view.

Among Protestants the trend since 1968 has been from 37 to 17 percent in the 1980 survey, closely paralleling the current figure for Catholics.

Among all American adults, the percentage favoring larger families is 16, virtually the same as the 17 percent recorded in 1978. About half the public (51 percent) in the latest survey favors having two children.

Trend Since '36

The proportion of the public favoring large families, after having declined dramatically, from 41 percent in 1968 to 13 percent in 1977, increased slightly in 1978 and stayed at this level in 1980. The 1977 figure was the lowest since the Gallup Poll began asking this question in 1936.

In that year, 34 percent said that four or more children represented the ideal family size. The figure rose sharply, from 41 to a high of 49 percent in 1945, anticipating the post-war "baby boom." As late as 1968, as noted above, 41 percent of the public felt the model family would include four or more children. By 1971, however, the figure had dropped to 23 percent and continued to decline to 13 percent in 1977. It then rose to 17 percent in 1978 and remains at this level (16 percent) in the latest survey.

Here is the question asked to determine what people believe to be the ideal family size:

"What do you think is the ideal number of children for a family to have?" And here are the national results from the current survey:

Ideal Number Of Children — 1980
None.....	1%
One.....	3
Two.....	51
Three.....	21
Four.....	12
Five.....	2
Six or more.....	2
No opinion.....	8

Following is the trend since 1936 in the proportion saying four or more is the ideal number of children:

Ideal Number Of Children — 1980
1936.....	34%
1941.....	41

Perceptions of Canadians on the subject closely parallel the U.S. trend. The highest percentage of Canadians in favor of large families was 60 percent, recorded in 1945, in the final year of World War II. That year also marked the high point in the U.S. trend.

The percentage in Canada favoring larger families steadily declined over the next 35 years — to 17 percent in 1979, or about the same as the U.S. figures in recent years.

Following is the Canadian trend of those favoring four-child or larger families, based on responses to the same question asked in the U.S.:

Ideal Number Of Children Four Or More (Canada)
1945.....	60%
1957.....	55
1970.....	33
1974.....	24
1977.....	15
1979.....	17

The U.S. results reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,583 adults, 18 and older, interviewed in more than 300 scientifically-selected localities across the nation during the period March 7-10.

Applying Brakes

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — For all the Carter administration's talk about taking a tough stand against inflation, the tough stand is at the Federal Reserve Board, not the White House.

It's the board's high interest rates that are slowing the economy and bringing on a recession.

The president has recently given his wholehearted support to the high interest rate policy and has taken steps of his own to tighten credit.

But the president has criticized high interest rates in the past and could decide to do so again. It's a matter for worry in the marble halls of the Fed at the moment.

There is worry that if the White House backs away from supporting the policy, there could be a loud public outcry against the Fed that would reverberate in

Brown To Speak To Black Caucus

Ben Brown, Deputy Director of the Carter/Mondale Presidential Committee, will be guest speaker Saturday, May 3, at the First Congressional District Democratic Black Leadership Caucus banquet.

The annual event will be held at Southeast Elementary School in Kinston, beginning at 2:30 p. m. Mayor E. V. Wilkins of Roper, chairman of the Board of Directors of the caucus, will preside. Other participants will include Clarence Lightner, Chairman of the North Carolina Black Leadership Caucus; H. Mickey Michaux Jr., U. S. Attorney; Willie D. Riddick, District Representative for Congressman Walter B. Jones; Joseph George, President-elect of the First Congressional District Democratic Black Caucus; and Don Ensley, Joseph Hill and Eddie Kornegay, Area Presidents of the Caucus.

Brown's career in public service began when he was elected to the Georgia House of Representatives in 1965 at the age of 25. In 1976 he was instrumental in organizing the Black vote in many of the key primary victories such as Florida and North Carolina, where Carter won with strong Black support, and Massachusetts, where Carter placed second, but captured over 75 percent of the Black votes in a field of seven candidates.

In Pitt County, tickets are available from Dr. Donald Ensley, Mrs. Willie Mae Carney and Willie Riddick. Riddick, who is coordinator for the event, may be called at 753-3082 or 794-3239.

Twenty-one counties are represented in the caucus. The is the third annual banquet of the caucus.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A reported shortage of air-to-air missiles on two U.S. carriers stationed near the Persian Gulf is likely to bolster congressional arguments for higher defense spending in the 1981 budget.

Pentagon sources said Thursday the Navy has had to scrounge for air-to-air missiles to arm warplanes aboard the carriers sent to the Persian Gulf region. "We've had to draw from other areas and put most of our eggs in the Indian Ocean basket," said one source who asked to remain anonymous.

One of the Pentagon's leading allies on Capitol Hill, Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y., said the shortage is evidence that the warships "don't really have what they need if they get into a confrontation with Soviet ships."

"This is one of the manifold shortages that we face in all of our services," said Stratton, a member of the House Armed Services Committee.

Russell Hale, a committee staff aide, said the Navy did not have enough Phoenix air-to-air missiles for "more than one or two sorties" on either carrier. Two battle groups, formed around the carriers Coral Sea and Nimitz, were deployed to the area after militants took 50 Americans hostage in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran Nov. 4. Three others were being held elsewhere in Iran.

Discussion of the reported missile shortage came Thursday prior to word of the aborted U.S. attempt to rescue the hostages by military force — an operation that claimed the lives of eight U.S. servicemen.

Cites Dwindling Of Independent Papers

Independent newspapers are disappearing at the rate of 50 per year, according to David J. Whichard II, editor and publisher of "The Daily Reflector," who was the guest speaker for several East Carolina University journalism classes Tuesday.

He said there has been a growing decrease in the number of independently owned newspapers over the past decade and a half. These newspapers are being bought out by large corporations and conglomerates, with prices ranging as high as $50 million. "The inflated value is not realistic at all," he said.

The reasons behind this trend are a lack of continuity of management, inheritance taxes and the outstanding prices the newspapers can bring, he indicated.

Less than one half of North Carolina's dailies now in operation are independently owned; the rest are run by out-of-state interests, he said. For example, newspapers in Kinston, New Bern and Jacksonville are owned by a California company. He commented, "I'm biased. I don't like it, but that is not to say they don't turn out good newspapers."

One of the changes in the media, he said, is the introduction of electronics. This will make some backshop employees unnecessary in time; however, it will also increase the media's ability to reach new readers.

Falkland Squad Visits School

Falkland Rescue Squad members visited Falkland Elementary School this afternoon and demonstrated rescue technique and the rescue truck to the students.

Tomorrow from 10 a. m. to noon squad members will conduct a free blood pressure check in downtown Falkland and will demonstrate the rescue truck and technique. They will do the same thing in downtown Belvoir from 1 to 3 p. m. tomorrow.

These activities are being carried out in recognition of State EMS Week.

Job Placement Rate Is Noted By Local Office

There has been an increase in the number of individuals placed in jobs during the first half of this fiscal year (October-March), as compared to the same six months last year, according to James E. Hannan, Manager of the Greenville Job Service Office.

During the current 1980 fiscal year, there were 1207 individuals placed in jobs by their local Job Service office," Hannan stated. "This reflects an increase of 52 individuals placed over that of the same six months of last year."

Many of the Pitt County employers have chosen to use our placement services. We provide job matching, and screening of applicants to assure they meet the qualifications required by the employer," Hannan added.

There were 1775 job openings listed with the Greenville Job Service Office between October and March. A total of 5,921 applicants have filed new applications or renewed existing applications for work.

In addition, the local office staff administered 843 employment related tests and 579 individuals received employment counseling during this period.

In the field of service to veterans, the Greenville office has placed 244 veterans in employment during the past six months. Kendrick Taylor, local office Veterans Employment representative, indicated that about 11 percent of the new and renewal applications during this period were veterans.

"Our staff has placed 38 percent of the 634 veterans applying for working during the past six months," Taylor commented.

Employers who need assistance in filling current job openings or desiring to make use of the pre-referral screening of applicants offered by Job Service should contact the office at 3101 Bismarck Street, or call 756-2686.

Many Pitt Pupils Chosen For Governor's School

A larger than usual contingent of students in Pitt County high schools have been selected to attend the prestigious Governor's School of North Carolina, now located at two campuses — Salem College in Winston-Salem and St. Andrews Presbyterian College, Laurinburg.

Of the 18 students chosen for this honor, 12 are from Rose High School and six are from high schools in Pitt County.

Those selected are:

ROSE HIGH SCHOOL — St Andrews College — Dominic Dirisio, Jr., natural science — The son of

Mr. and Mrs. Dominic Dirisio, Sr., Dominic is president of the Rose High Photography Club and is a member of the Rose High Swim Team. In addition to photography, he is interested in archery and amateur astronomy. He is active in the Catholic Youth Organization.

—Elizabeth Ito, English — Elizabeth, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Takeru Ito, is a columnist who writes "On The Young Side" appearing in "The Daily Reflector." She is a member of the Quill and Scroll and the Spanish Club. Elizabeth works part-time at Sheppard Library and is a member of Oakmont Baptist Church.

—Sanya Maria Morris, choral music — Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Lee Morris, Jr. An active student, Sanya is a member of the Marching Band, the Rampant Club, a representative of S.G.A., and is secretary/treasurer of the Advanced Ensemble. She is junior choir president of Sycamore Baptist Church and is a Teen Dems member.

— Holly Susan Rodgers, instrumental music — Holly is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Rodgers and in music is a flute player. School activities in which she is active include Juniors, Keyettes, marching and concert bands and the orchestra for school musicals. Her hobbies include traveling, water skiing, and meeting new people.

— Sheppard Andrew Vars, social science — Sheppard, who last year was a member of the Junior Varsity football team, is the son of Mrs. Mary W. Koonce. He has been a member of the Art and Spanish clubs, and represented Rose in 1978-79 in the ECU math contest. Sheppard is an acolyte at St. Timothy's Episcopal Church and likes art, coin collecting and snow/water skiing.

— Dorothy Jean Wang, natural science — Dorothy, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Alfred S. Wang, is vice-president of Health Careers Club and a member of the French and Math Clubs. She is Page 1 editor of "Rampant Lines" and was a member of the Quiz Bowl. She is one of two Greenville Community Ambassadors chosen for the summer of 1980. A pianist, Dorothy also likes reading and traveling. She is a member of First Presbyterian Church and of the Teen Dems.

— AnRita Weber, art — An active member of St. Peter's Catholic Youth Organization, AnRita is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Robert Weber. She belongs to several clubs — the Juniors, Art Club, Math Club and Spanish Club. In addition to art, she is interested in math and in sewing.

— Salem College — Bradley Page Griffin, art — The son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Griffin, Brad is an Eagle Scout and a model train enthusiast. He is a member of The Spanish, Key and Art Clubs and represented Rose High at invitational math contests — he is a nominee for the Society of Distinguished American High School Students - 1980, and is active in church activities at Jarvis United Methodist Church. Brad likes water and snow skiing and designing homes, airplanes and model machinery. He was a recent first place winner in the Sidewalk Art Show.

— Sarah Liane Houston, mathematics — Sarah is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Houston, Jr. She is president of the junior class, and holds membership in the Keyettes, the Juniors and the Anchor Club. Also, she is a member of the SGA and the ICC. In church work, she is a member of Church Youth Group and St. Paul's Episcopal Church. She is interested in ballet, piano, and guitar.

— Alison Dixon Keel, drama — An enthusiast of the theater, Alison is the daughter of Ms. Susan Danin. In New Bern she has appeared in "And Jack Fell Down" and "The Diary of Anne Frank" and at Rose performed in "The Interview Job" and "45 Minutes from Broadway." Alison is a member of the French and Drama Clubs. Her hobbies are dancing, piano, macrame, and reading.

— Heather Diane O'Neal, instrumental music — A cello player, Heather is the daughter of Mrs. Willene E. O'Neal. Among activities in which she is active are the Keyettes, the French Club, the swim team, and as a S.G.A. representative. She is vice-president of a church youth group. Heather holds second chair in the All-State Workshop Orchestra, and is a member of the E.C.U. Gymnastics Team. Her hobbies are baking, sewing, reading, tennis, horseback riding and traveling.

— Jeri Lynn Walter, instrumental music — A violinist, Heather is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Stanley M. Walter. She is a member of the school orchestra, the

All-State Orchestra, and played with the pit orchestra for "45 Minutes From Broadway." Jeri enjoys needlework and Oriental cooking.

Judges Decry 'Rating' List In Lawyers' Poll

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — One Superior Court judge said the rating of jurists in the state "smells," another called it "embarrassing as hell," and the Chief Justice Joseph Branch of the state Supreme Court said he saw no purpose in it.

In question were the ratings released this week by the North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research. They are based on the opinions of 1,382 of the state's 6,491 lawyers.

They rated 19 of 95 current and former appellate and trial judges as outstanding in overall performance, 58 as good and 11 as average.

Supreme Court Justice J. Phil Carlton, who received the lowest objectivity rating among those on the high court, said Thursday the rating "smells," adding that he would have to reassess his position on the center.

"I have contributed to the center and supported its work, but this is a highly questionable report," said Carlton.

He also charged that the timing of the report's release, two weeks prior to a primary election in which he is only judge facing opposition, was politically motivated.

"The center has an unusual sense of timing. This whole thing reeks of a terrible flaw in its approach and timing," said Carlton, whose overall performance was listed as average.

Fred A. Harwell, director of the center, denied the charge.

"I will not respond to Judge Carlton's charges about the survey except to utterly deny any political motivation," he said.

Branch defended Carlton, saying he could see no reason why Carlton's rating would be low.

"I can honestly say he has considered every case fairly and done an excellent job as a judge,"

The chief justice said he also disagreed with ratings of "good" for jurists he thought were outstanding.

"It doesn't do any good anyone any good to be rated like a five-gaited horse show," he added.

A Superior Court judge who received a rating of good, called the ratings "embarrassing as hell. I think people are going to look at those gradings and think they are getting different gradings of justice."

Gave Presentation At Annual Meeting

Chairperson of the Nursing Education Department at Pitt Community College Judith Kuykendall recently returned from the twenty-eighth annual meeting of the North Carolina League for Nursing held in Raleigh.

The convention theme was "Opening Doors to Moving Up: Models for Facilitating Educational Mobility" with Kuykendall speaking on North Carolina's career option program.

Kuykendall's presentation dealt with identifying the beginnings of career mobility for the LPN in N.C. and the mechanics of operation of the career option program. She isolated factors affecting students' choice of the career option program and explained how the concept of career mobility has influenced the philosophy and conceptual framework of the program. Kuykendall also discussed methods of evaluation in the program and problems that result from the curriculum design.

"I believe that the Practical Nurse Education Program is a sound basis upon which an associate degree in nursing can be built," commented the department chairman.

The convention theme was derived from one of the current National League of Nursing goals advocating support for new and innovative nursing education programs at all levels of preparation. Margaret Walsh of New York City, executive director for the National League for Nursing, was the keynote speaker.

Leadership...

President Carter, like former President Kennedy after the Bay of Pigs incident (a failed invasion of Cuba), must accept full responsibility."

"Without consultation with the Congress, as required under the War Powers Act, without consultation with our allies, who apparently had been assured that the thrust of our effort would be diplomatic and economic, the president committed U.S. military forces into an operation that was, at best, a risky and dangerous enterprise."

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., second-ranking Democrat on the Senate Armed Services Committee, agreed that the president should have informed Congress.

"Consultation with the Congress would have been wise," Jackson said. "But this is a time to keep the lid on ... to cool it and avoid moves that can lead to action against the hostages."

— Susan is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Bernard Vick. She attended Governor's School in 1979 and is president of the Baptist Youth Fellowship at her church, where she is also active in the choir. Susan is a member of the National Honor Society and is president of the French Club. Her interests include ballet, history and poetry, and she does volunteer hospital work.

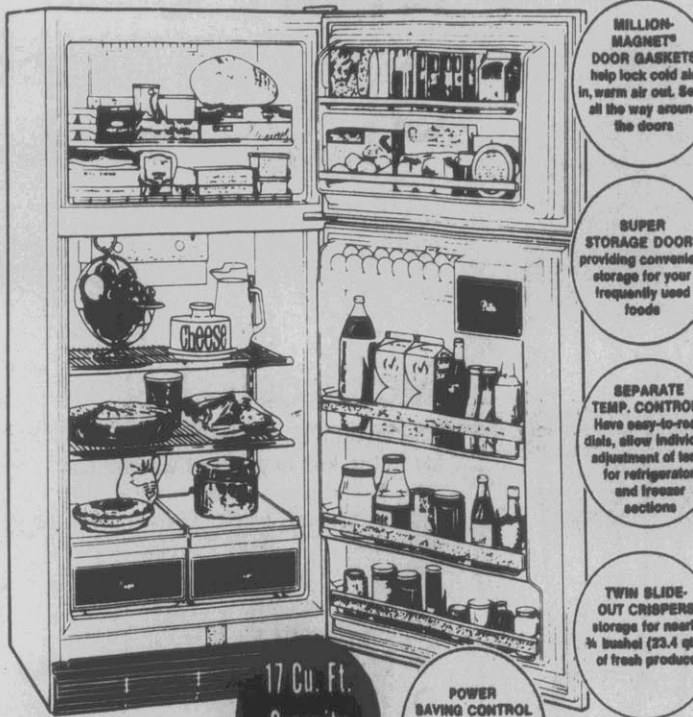

CONTROL YOUR DEBTS

If your present bills, because of economic pressures, cannot be met by your income, legal relief may be available to you under the provisions of Chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, which permits individuals to petition the Court for an arrangement allowing a thirty-six month period to discharge indebtednesses, without property repossession or creditor harassment. Attorney's fees, which may be paid in monthly installments, are determined by the Court. There is no fee for an initial conference to discuss your eligibility for a "Wage Earner Plan".

Strong Reaction To Church Activity In Politics

WEATHER FORECAST — Saturday's forecast calls for showers in parts of the Pacific Northwest, rain in northern Michigan, and showers in a band from Arkansas to southwestern Pennsylvania. Today, showers were due over broad parts of the South and Southwest, Northeast and scattered parts of the west. (AP Laser-photo Map)

Local Program Has Graduation

Another in the series of graduations of inmates who have completed the Pre-Release and Aftercare program offered by the Pre-Release and Aftercare Center in Greenville took place at noon Wednesday, April 23 at Sycamore Hill Baptist Church.

Dr. Charles Petty, State Director of the Governor's Office of Citizen's Affairs presented Special Volunteer Awards certificates to a number of Pitt County residents for their work with the Pre-Release and Aftercare Center.

Pat Higgins, director of the Center, was recognized in a letter of commendation from Governor Hunt for his outstanding efforts in promoting volunteerism in his agency.

Dr. Petty also delivered the graduation speech, in which he stressed the need for each graduating inmate to maximize his potential and further added that this means reaching out for support. He noted that volunteers and friends can help provide that support.

The speaker quoted Governor Hunt by pointing out that: "The Greenville Center is especially fortunate to have the services of 543 community volunteers who have contributed unselfishly of their time and energies so that these men and women (inmates) can try again (to fit into society.)"

Director Higgins reported that community volunteers from all walks of life have collectively contributed more than 1,718 days to the Pre-Release program in Greenville during the past year.

The luncheon was hosted by Rev. B. B. Felder, and the meal was provided by the Greenville and Pitt County Pastors and Ministers Conference, Inc.

Ann Maxwell of the Center noted that "this is Volunteer Week in North Carolina, and this graduation is an appropriate time to recognize our community volunteers.

Jailing Upsets Firemen's Union

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Members of the city firefighters union are upset about the jailing of their local's president, vice president and secretary-treasurer, but union officials say they are opposed to any retaliatory job action.

The three officers were given six-month sentences for violating a judge's no-strike order during a bitter six-day walkout last month. Another fireman was given a 15-day sentence for his role.

Political activity by religious groups drew strong reaction from two candidates Thursday, with Gov. Jim Hunt referring his critics to the 10 Commandments and Republican Senate hopeful John East accusing his opponent of having a "double standard" on religious groups.

Hunt, who was given a low "Biblical rating" by a group of fundamentalist church leaders, responded to the rating Thursday and to a canvass by the same leaders, which urges support for Hunt's Democratic and Republican opponents.

"I think I'll just have to recall some of the Bible verses I learned as a boy," Hunt said, "one of which was, 'Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.'"

Handbooks Are Sent By DOT

RALEIGH — Copies of North Carolina's driver's handbook have been sent to over 1100 libraries across the state, the Department of Transportation has announced.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Elbert Peters said six copies of the handbook were mailed last week to public, technical college, specialized, senior high school, state government, university, and college libraries, to help motorists preparing for driver's license tests.

The Motor Vehicles Division, Peters said, has suggested that the libraries hold one copy in the reference section, retain one copy in the documents section, and circulate the remainder.

The handbooks will still be available at the 110 driver's license examining stations throughout the state. They are loaned to applicants prior to the test and are to be returned at the time of testing to the examining station.

The handbooks borrowed from the libraries are to be returned to the libraries.

MEETS SUNDAY

The Unitarian-Universalist Fellowship will meet Sunday morning at Planters National Bank.

Dr. Carroll Webber will lead a Model UN session which will explore resolutions concerning food and world hunger, nuclear power, World Bank loans, and other topics suggested by the group.

"I would commend that to them," he added.

The fundamentalist group, calling itself "Friends of Life and Liberty," has conducted a statewide telephone canvass urging support for Hunt's Democratic opponent, former Gov. Bob Scott, in the primary, and for Republican candidate I. Beverly Lake Jr. in the general election.

Hunt has called the rating "scurrilous" and said it misrepresented his position by reporting that he supports abortion and liquor-by-the-drink and opposes the death penalty.

He said the canvass shows that the fundamentalist group has "become totally political."

In Greenville, East said said Democratic Sen. Robert Morgan was using a double standard by seeking and gaining an endorsement from the General Baptist Convention, a group of Black Baptists, when last month he criticized political activity by fundamentalists such as television evangelist Jerry Falwell.

"For Mr. Morgan, we can only ask why the support the General Baptist Convention has given him from the pulpit is not an example of the demagoguery he claims to oppose when it comes from other Christian groups," East said.

East and Morgan are both unopposed for their party's Senate nominations.

In other political developments, Hunt said a television commercial aired by Republican gubernatorial candidate I. Beverly Lake Jr. "may well be libelous" and said legal action against the advertisement was possible.

Meanwhile, former Gov. Bob Scott, Hunt's opponent in the primary, unveiled his own television commercials and said in Charlotte that the commutation of a prison sentence granted by Hunt to a Washington businessman was "very questionable."

Scott's television commercials are being run only on a Raleigh television station this week. Campaign spokesmen refused to say how much money was being spent on the airtime, but only one commercial a day was being aired this week.

Hunt is currently running

$130,000 worth of television advertising.

Scott's commercials show him with supporters at his announcement speech on his Haw River farm, and show supporters talking about Scott. One of the commercials, which shows supporters making negative comments about Hunt, will not be used, campaign spokesman Bryant Haskins said.

Scott's criticisms of Hunt were aimed at the commutation he granted to Robert Lee Davis, whose eight-to-10-year sentence was reduced to 110 days after appeals by politically prominent friends.

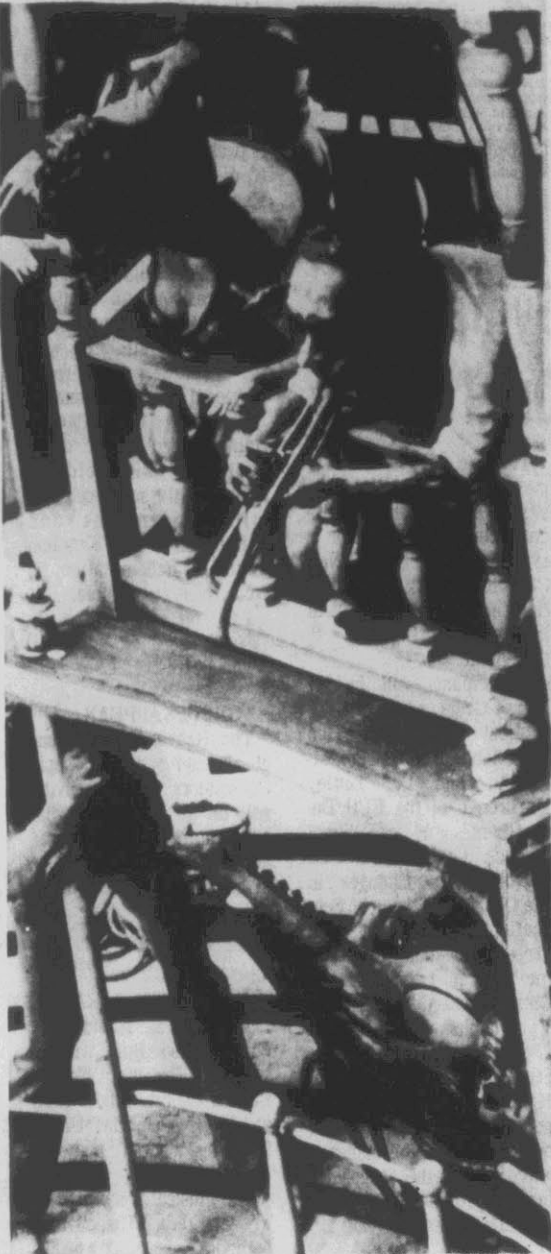

"It implies that if you've got the money to hire lawyers that have the right political connections to get into the governor's office, you get special treatment," Scott said.

The Lake television commercial attacks the Hunt administration for allegedly mishandling federal job training grants, and is virtually the same commercial most TV stations refused to air last year when sponsored by the Helms organization because of their inflammatory nature.

Now the commercials carry Lake's voice and have been run on a Durham station.

Carter Wrenn, treasurer of the Congressional Club, Helms' organization, said nothing in the commercials was inaccurate. Wrenn said the organization was trying to purchase more air time in all the state television markets.

"I think they wanted to intimidate the TV stations," he said of Hunt's comment.

Church Prepared For Long, Costly Lawsuits

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The United Methodist Church says it is willing to spend $4 million over the next four years fighting collective church liability lawsuits that it says imperil its existence and operations and "threaten all other religious denominations."

The church's governing conference appropriated the money Thursday to fight lawsuits that want the entire church held liable for losses from the 1978 bankruptcy of Pacific Homes, a chain of retirement and health care facilities.

The 14 facilities, serving 1,900 residents in Southern California, Arizona and Hawaii, are affiliated with the Southwest Conference (regional unit) of the church.

Charging that Pacific Homes failed to live up to contracts with elderly residents, the suits seek $600 million damages and maintain that the 9.6 million member denomination is collectively responsible.

In preliminary proceedings, the California Court of Appeal has held the denomination as a whole answerable.

The class-action suits, the largest of which goes on trial in San Diego on June 16, claim the Methodist-affiliated operation had been warned as early as 1954 that its resources were improperly handled. Pacific Homes sold life-care contracts to old people, many wealthy Methodists retirees, but failed to set aside adequate long term reserves, the suits charge.

Claim Record In Bible-Reading

CLINT, Texas (AP) — A new world record for a non-stop oral reading of the entire Bible is claimed by some teen-agers in this little west Texas town of 825 people.

An ecumenical group of 28 Methodist, Roman Catholic, Baptist and other youths read the book in relays in a total of 64 hours, 29 minutes and 34 seconds at Clint United Methodist Church, asserting they beat by more than six hours a record set just last January by 30 teenagers at the United Methodist Church in Abilene, Texas.

The Clint group is sending the report of their timing to the Guinness Book of World Records to try to make it official.

MUSICAL PROGRAM
The musical "Alleluia" by Gaither and Huff will be presented by the Oakmont Baptist Church Chapel Choir at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church Sunday at 7 p.m.

The musical is directed by Treva Fidler. The choir is composed of 36 young people between the ages of 13 and 21. The public is invited to attend and participate in joint singing with the choir.

On Thursday, the church governing conference said, "The fundamental threat ... is unprecedented in the 200-year history of Methodism."

This is "the first known instance in which any civil court has imposed" on a denomination an interpretation contrary to its own, said a report of the church's administrative council. It added that the suit portends a "devastating" impact on religious, benevolent and charitable services.

It would mean that "all major religious groups automatically" could be sued as a whole for actions by any related local units, the report said, adding this would force the church into a "monolithic, unitary entity" contrary to its own system and policies.

"The basic question is whether the United Methodist Church will continue to exist as a structure of its own choosing," the report said. It was approved by 1,000 church representatives from across the country, who pledged the challenge would be "resolutely resisted" and rights of the church defended up to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The church has already spent more than $1 million in its defense.

SERVICES ANNOUNCED
Eldress Shirley Daniels will preach at St. Matthew FWB Church Sunday at 11 a.m. Music will be provided by choir no. two. At 6 p.m. there will be a musical program sponsored by Lucy M. Atkinson, and at 7:30 Elder T.R. Knight will preach. Eldress Hattie May Cobb, pastor invites the public to attend.

A BIGGER WORLD

There comes a time, even in a chick's life, when the way must open to a greatly expanded world. When his confining shell no longer allows proper growth, he makes a point of throwing off his shackles and steps out into a big, strange world.

This comparatively simple phenomenon is paralleled in human existence as each child grows toward adulthood, and reaches out for the wider horizon. What he finds there will depend in great part on what he has been taught.

For this reason the early and continued guidance of Christian home and church are all-important. From these things the foundation of faith is built. Through faith and understanding the shackles of fear and bondage are dispelled, and your child grows spiritually strong to meet the ever-widening horizons and challenges of a modern world.

Pueblos Steamed Up By Geothermal Power Plant

By BETSY BROWN
Associated Press Writer
LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (AP) — To government and energy officials, the 746-acre valley in northern New Mexico's Jemez Mountains is just wilderness, a perfect site for a 50-megawatt geothermal power plant.

To the Pueblo Indians, however, the birds, trees and streams in that mountain valley are sacred. The Indians are hoping the land is protected by the American Indian Religious Freedom Act of 1978.

"This is the beginning of new energy development and the destruction of the Indian tribe," said Paul Tafoya, governor of the Santa Clara Pueblo.

In the power plant's favor is a government exploring alternative sources of energy and desperately looking for a way to cut its dependence on foreign oil. The pioneer plant would be part of the federal Geothermal Demonstration Program.

Union Oil Co. and Public Service Co. of New Mexico have contracted to build the $125 million demonstration geothermal plant in the Baca region on land Union leases from a private owner. The firms say the plant could provide enough electricity for the residential, commercial and industrial needs of 3,500 people.

The U.S. Department of Energy is considering chipping in $50 million to the project, but must first decide whether such energy research takes precedence over what the Indians consider the centerpiece of their religion.

Bennie DiBona, head of the DOE's geothermal division in Washington, predicted the decision whether to proceed would come this week.

"This has not been an easy problem," he said. "We have been looking at this from all angles."

Tafoya said the pueblo may go to court to stop the plant, regardless of the DOE's decision.

"We want an interpretation of the American Indian Religious Freedom Act," he said. "We want to know how strong it is."

The act says the United States must protect and preserve Indians' "access to sites, use and possession of sacred objects, and the freedom to worship through ceremonies and traditional rites."

The DOE has had a hard time pinpointing just where it is infringing on religion, as the Indians claim.

"When you don't know and can't be told what the religion is, it makes it difficult," said DOE Project Manager Art Wilbur.

Secrecy is essential to Indian religion, countered Tafoya, contending that to identify specific sites or shrines would destroy the religion.

"The whole mountain range is sacred," he said. "That's why so many people talk about the Jemez Mountains as our church."

All 19 Pueblo groups, but primarily those called the Santa Clara, Jemez, Santa Ana, Cochiti, Zia and San Ildefonso, use the area "to practice sacred Indian religious life," he said. But Tafoya declined to give details.

In hearings on the environmental impact statement last August, more than a dozen Indian leaders testified the power plant would infringe on their religious practices, but did not say how.

and vegetation and found the only significant environmental issue to be an odor from hydrogen sulfide that would be released at the cooling tower.

"Although it is not considered a health hazard, it does pose a nuisance problem and so hydrogen sulfide abatement measures will be required," she said.

The plant is to use a hydrothermal, or water-dominated geothermal, reservoir in the Valles Caldera. Wells would be drilled to bring a mixture of steam and water to the earth's surface. The steam and water would be separated in tanks and the steam used to operate a turbine generator.

Union Oil and Public Service studies indicate the hydrothermal reservoir is large enough to supply steam for eight 50-megawatt plants.

The DOE wants to push geothermal energy "as an economic, reliable and environmentally acceptable energy source," Wilbur said, but development has been slow because no one knows if geothermal energy is commercially profitable.

Congress mandated the demonstration program to encourage private companies to find out.

PNM and Union say peak employment during construction would be 140 persons and the operating work force would be about 25.

Tafoya said that although the plant could bring the Indians "some sort of economic development in terms of employment, we're not interested in money to the point we'd destroy ourselves."

Peter Pino, a Zia tribal administrator, testified in a DOE public hearing that "our religious beliefs are dependent on the water which flows down from the mountains."

"It is the same water which inspired our forefathers to be farmers," Pino said.

Wilbur said the plant will not hurt the Indians' water supply, but he does not expect the Indians to believe him.

"Why should they trust what we tell them, given their history?" he said.

Turns Down Prize Sum

LONDON (AP) — British historian Hugh Thomas, a critic of excessive government, is a man who lives up to his principles.

Thomas was named winner Thursday of a $17,000 Arts Council literary award for his latest book, "An Unfinished History of the World," in which he attributed the decay of present-day civilization to too much government intervention.

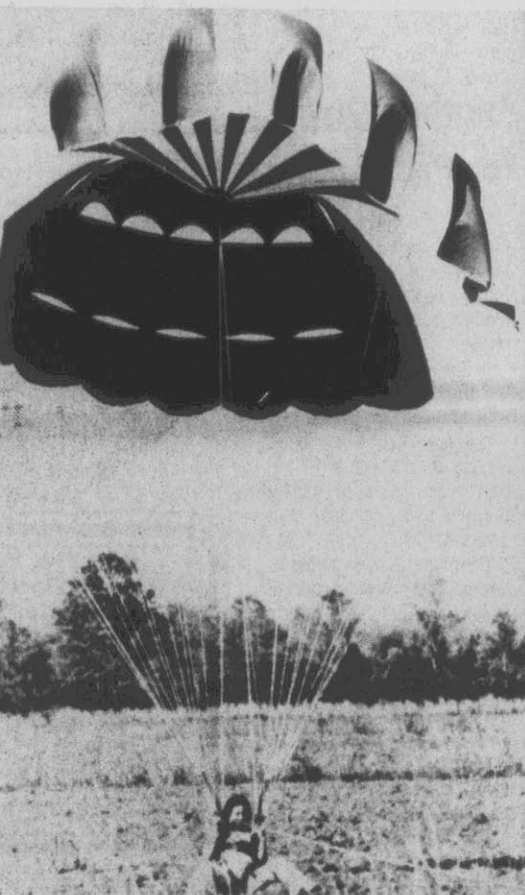

He refused to take the money.

The 48-year-old former professor astonished the presentation gathering in London by politely accepting the prize, but then giving back the check.

He explained that the national book award, first to be given by the government-financed Arts Council, was the kind of state involvement in the arts that he opposed.

"After a great deal of thought I decided I could not take this check," he said. "I am very flattered to be presented with it — my bank manager will be aghast."

Arts Council Chairman Kenneth Robinson saluted the historian for sticking to his guns. The council will now meet to decide how to apportion the prize money.

BACK TO EARTH — Marcia Skipper tried her hand at parasailing just off S.C. 317 By-pass at Myrtle Beach. She found coming down was a little scarier than going up, but had a soft landing in a plowed field and was ready to go again. (AP Laserphoto)

Duck Planning Flood Defense

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Bald Eagle Township has a new civil defense director — Donald Duck.

Duck, appointed Thursday by Gov. Dick Thornburgh, says his main concern in the unpaid position will be to make plans for any flooding of the Susquehanna River.

State officials were sobersided about the appointment, but Duck said he doesn't mind people having fun over his name.

"It's worse now than it was in school. These guys at work, it's always 'quack, quack'...Every day and every day and every day," laughed the 42-year-old construction mechanic.

Craig Williamson, the deputy director of the state Civil Defense system, seemed annoyed that anyone would ask if Duck's appointment was on the level.

"Why are you asking about him?" he grumbled.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market and the dollar declined, and gold prices rose today as financial markets reacted to news of the abortive attempt to rescue the U.S. hostages in Iran.

On Wall Street, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 5.63 to 791.47 in the first half hour of trading.

Declines outnumbered advances by a 4-1 ratio in the early rally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The dollar, meanwhile, declined moderately against major overseas currencies in foreign-exchange trading.

Gold climbed to about $550 an ounce in European markets, up about $35 from Thursday.

Analysts described the atmosphere of the markets as cautious while traders waited for more information on the aborted mission and indications of how the Iranians might respond.

Early volume leaders among NYSE issues included Boeing, down 1/4 at 36 1/2; American Telephone & Telegraph, down 3/4 at 51 1/2; and Gulf Oil, down 1/4 at 39 1/2.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 7.85 to 797.10.

Advances outnumbered declines by a more than a 2-1 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 35.97 million shares, against 42.62 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose .43 to 59.38.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.33 at 247.91.

Attended Conference

The Pitt Community College Chapter of the North Carolina Postsecondary Agricultural Student Organization recently attended a leadership conference held in Raleigh on the campus of N.C. State University.

The agenda included a number of speakers who dealt with topics such as the role of postsecondary agriculture natural resources education and its outlook for the eighties; the importance of student participation in organizations and community activities; and the partnership between industry and NCPASO. N.C. Commissioner of Agriculture James A. Graham also spoke on the importance of agricultural natural resources and the future potential for technically educated individuals.

The purposes of the North Carolina Postsecondary Agricultural Student Organization are to develop student skills and abilities and provide activities that aid the student in finding employment and building character, citizenship, and patriotism.

Those attending the Raleigh meeting included Bill Moore, head of the agribusiness and chemicals department and faculty advisor; students Mark Grimsley, Charles Watson, Dean Mears, Clay Carson, William Tetterton, Tim Grimesley, Tony Evans. Evans is state reporter for the North Carolina organization. He is also editor of the newsletter.

Ex-Sheriff Plans Appeal

PLYMOUTH, N.C. (AP) — Robert S. Sawyer says he expects to appeal to the state Court of Appeals the order of a Superior Court Judge removing him as sheriff of Washington County for failing to perform the duties of his office.

Sources said the order of Judge John R. Jolly Jr. removing Sawyer, 63, a veteran of 32 years as a law enforcement officer and sheriff for six years, was the first in state history.

In his order, Jolly indicated complete agreement with District Attorney William C. Griffin Jr., who instituted the removal action with a petition Feb. 28.

Jolly said he concluded from evidence presented at a week-long hearing here last month that Sawyer had "failed to discharge his responsibilities to the degree that the residents of the county had a right to expect."

Walter Peel, formerly chief deputy under Sawyer, has been serving as acting sheriff since the removal action was instituted. He will continue in the post until the Washington County Commissioners name a replacement.

Sawyer and his attorney, Perry Martin of Rich Square, says they likely will ask the Appeals Court to overturn Jolly's decision.

"I'm not mad at anyone, but I'm hurt," Sawyer said after the ruling. "There is no need for a sheriff running for office. If they get tired of him, they can just throw him out."

Although he found there was "no evil motive or corrupt intent" in Sawyer's performance in office, Jolly said the evidence showed the sheriff had:

Kendrick Named To Commission

Dr. L. Lionel Kendrick, a professor of health education at East Carolina University, is one of ten members named by Gov. Jim Hunt to the N.C. Drug Commission, the governor's office announced.

Hunt's office said that Kendrick, who is a member of the N.C. Professional Drug Certification Board, is a re-appointee to the 25-member commission. Members serve two-year terms.

The commission advises the Department of Human Resources on the coordination of all state efforts related to drug abuse, working to administer all state programs in that area and to eliminate duplication.

Teenager Hit By Car Today

A Route 1, Greenville teenager was hit by a car on N. C. 43 two miles west of Greenville this morning at 7:30.

Trooper C. R. Taylor said Coleman Randolph Jr., 13, apparently ran into the path of a vehicle driven by David Lee Hill, 23, of Village Green Apartments, Greenville. The boy had been running west along the right shoulder of the roadway and the Hill's vehicle was traveling west, also, he said.

Randolph was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment. According to a hospital spokesman, he was soon to be released at press time today.

Obituary Column

Brown

Funeral services for Mrs. Hannah Hilton Brown will be conducted Sunday at 1 p.m. at Sycamore Hill Baptist Church by the Rev. B.B. Felder. Burial will follow in Brown Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Brown was born in Farmville, Va. and made her home in Greenville. She served the Pitt County Health Department as a public health nurse for over thirty years and later worked with the Pitt County Board of Education, retiring in 1970.

She is survived by one foster daughter, Mrs. Goldie Day of New York; and one sister, Mrs. Martha Davis of Elizabeth, N.J.

The family will receive friends Saturday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. at Phillips Brothers Mortuary.

Flynn

Mrs. Studie P. Flynn, 90, died Thursday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Carolyn Anderson, near Greenville.

Her funeral service will be held Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by Elder A.P. Mewborn and Elder Oliver Allen. Burial will be in Oakdale Cemetery, Washington, N.C.

Mrs. Flynn was born and reared in Pamlico County and was married to Charles S. Flynn until his death in 1954. She was a member of Shiloh Primitive Baptist Church.

Surviving her are two sons, Charlie J. and George T. Flynn, both of New Bern; three daughters, Mrs. Clyde Hylemon of Ayden, Mrs. Ruth Nealy of New Bern and Mrs. James Anderson of Greenville; 30 grandchildren; 47 great grandchildren and eight great great grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home tonight from 7 to 9 o'clock. At other times they will be at the home of Mrs. Clyde Hylemon, 506 W. Sixth Street, Ayden.

Nixon Supports Rescue Effort

BERLIN (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon said today he fully supported President Carter's decision to attempt a rescue of the American hostages in Iran, adding "there are always risks" in such actions.

Nixon said Carter was justified in ordering a rescue mission because "the United States has suffered humiliation. The hostages have suffered imprisonment and mental and emotional abuse and this has brought to an end."

In West Berlin to promote his new book on U.S. foreign policy, Nixon said the president must reserve the option to use force in such a situation.

Nixon said he was confident Carter would continue "to explore other measures if necessary, including military measures" to win the freedom of the 53 Americans held by Iranian militants in Tehran since Nov. 4.

Heritage Is Studied

Children at Third Street School have been involved this week in learning about their own heritage during the week, which has been designated as "North Carolina Heritage Week" by Governor James B. Hunt, Jr. Faculty and staff have been costumed in clothes of the past, and displays on history have been on bulletin boards and in halls.

On Monday Mrs. Kay Clemens demonstrated lap quilting and showed samples of patterns used in quilt making. Mrs. Leota Tyson and Mrs. Lucy Allen entertained students with piano and accordion music, and Mrs. Dot Stewart demonstrated knitting.

Activities Tuesday centered around a flag raising and presentation of a quilt to the school to be used as a wall hanging. Each class made a square and these were assembled by Mrs. Mary Ann Brannan, a parent. Also, demonstrations of carding, spinning, and weaving were given by Mrs. Ruth Patterson, Mrs. Myra Sexauer, and Mrs. Phoebe Caldwell.

On Thursday Mrs. Marguerite Cook entertained with playing cow bells, and Sheppard Library Children's Librarian Joe Stines conducted a storytelling session.

Purple-Gold Contest Set Saturday

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Spring football practice finally comes to an end Saturday afternoon at East Carolina University, when the Pirates of Ed Emory are given their first public exposure.

Game time for the annual Purple-Gold contest is set for 3 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium. All proceeds, following expenses, will go to the Ginger Parker Fund. Mrs. Parker, the wife of defensive coordinator Norm Parker, was injured in an automobile accident near Toledo, Ohio, several weeks ago. She has since been transferred to Pitt Memorial Hospital here, but remains in critical condition. A number of the expenses of her hospital stay and transportation here will not be covered by insurance.

Emory said that he looks for an offensive battle in the game.

"Our defense is pretty well beaten up right now, and the offense has more depth on it, so I would think that the offense will have the edge," Emory said. "I wouldn't be surprised to see it up around 37-35 or something like that."

Emory said that the defense might be trying extra hard to put on a good show in Parker's benefit, but he felt the injury and depth situation might be more critical to the outcome of the game.

"This is a good climax to the spring season. It gives the quarterbacks and cornerbacks some real good game-type experience, and some players too, get a chance to impress the coaches one more time.

We're doing all we can too, to make it appear that two different teams are playing instead of just an inter-squad game."

Emory said that he was satisfied with the effort that the players have put into practice, but that the lack of overall depth is the biggest disappointment he's had so far.

"I had hoped that some players would come around and do the job for us. We've had some, but not as many as I would have hoped for. The tight end situation is still shaky, and our quarterbacks are untested. The offensive line is young and without a lot of depth.

"The nose guard situation on defense is perhaps the worst there. We've had seven or eight people to get hurt there, so we really haven't had a real chance to evaluate anyone. The linebacker situation is not real good, either."

But, according to the coach, the biggest satisfaction for the spring has been the team's "willingness to lay it on the line, to practice long and hard without complaint, and to have a get-after-it attitude.

Southern Nash Nips Panthers

BETHEL — Southern Nash held off a rally by North Pitt

High School and gained a 9-8 Eastern Carolina Conference baseball victory over the Panthers yesterday.

Southern Nash scored eight of its runs in the first two innings, then had to halt the Panthers when they came up with six in the bottom of the fourth.

Griffin got things started for the Firebirds in the first when he reached on an error. Grady singled, driving in Griffin. Hardy walked and Dunn reached on an error that allowed two runs to score. Bryant also reached on an error, scoring Dunn for a 4-0 lead.

After Southern scored four more times in the second, North Pitt rallied for two in the third. William Beacham singled and scored on a double by Robert Bunn. Ronnie House singled in Bunn.

Southern then scored what proved to be the winning run in the fourth. Griffin singled and Perry reached on an error, scoring Griffin.

North Pitt came up with six in the bottom of the frame, but fell a run short of catching up.

Now 6-4 in the conference and 8-8 overall, the Panthers travel to C.B. Aycock on Tuesday.

Jamesville In 27-3 Win Romp

BELHAVEN — Clarence Thomas and Jeff Rogers blasted grand slams to lead Jamesville to an easy 27-3 win over Belhaven Thursday afternoon in a high school baseball game.

The grand slams by Thomas, who had six RBIs, and Rogers, who had four RBIs, led a 15-hit attack that brought the Bullets their 13th win over the season against only two losses. Jamesville is 8-1 in the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference.

Jamesville pulled ahead with four runs in the second and after Belhaven narrowed the gap to 4-2 in the bottom of the inning the Bullets poured it on. Jamesville scored five in the third, six in the fourth, two in the fifth and nine in the sixth as they continued to add to the rout.

Freshman Rex Bell was two for three at the plate for Jamesville while Greg Sullivan was two for five. Trent Ange had a two-run homer and had three RBIs.

Jamesville plays host to Plymouth Saturday at 8 p.m. Jamesville 045 629 1-27 15 3

Oaktree Edwards Sets Sights On Light Heavyweight Title

By LARRY SULLIVAN
Reflector Sports Writer

Introducing the new light heavyweight champion of the world, Demetrius "Oaktree" Edwards.

In a year and a half, that's where the Ayden born-and-raised Edwards hopes to be. This week, however, he's hard at work at the second-floor karate school of Bill McDonald, preparing for his Saturday night 10-round bout with a more experienced Rocky Stevens. Edwards, a professional boxer since last November, carries his 4-0-1 record against the 22-9-0 Stevens in Minges Coliseum in what may be the first professional boxing exhibition held in this area.

Also on tap for Saturday is a pair of eight rounders featuring Tom "Atom Bomb" Prater, a cruiserweight who lost a decision to Larry Holmes three years ago, going against Jerry McIntyre, and Luis Acosta, an undefeated heavyweight at 7-0-0, battling Clayman Parker.

And Edwards is ready. "I believe in myself," Edwards said Thursday afternoon. "I feel good about being in boxing, and I know I'm going to go somewhere. I believe I can go all the way to the top."

Edwards is not the only one who feels that way. "We don't work with losers," manager-trainer Mike Dundee said Thursday. "We want winners." And winners the Dundees have had. Dundee Enterprises of Miami Beach, Florida, are known for their success with such ring masters as Muhammad Ali and Sugar Ray Leonard. Now they have pointed their talents in the direction of Edwards.

"I think he can be the next light heavyweight champion," promoter Chris Dundee said earlier this week. "He has the ability and the desire. Saturday night is very important."

Five years ago, Edwards began his climb over the ropes. He came to McDonald and told him he wanted to train to be a karate kick-boxer. McDonald had little hope for the inexperienced Edwards, who literally walked in off the streets. But McDonald became convinced one afternoon when he asked Edwards to be a sparring partner for one of his regular trainees.

"When he took off his shirt and revealed his muscular arms, I knew I could train him," McDonald remembered Thursday. "I asked him if he had ever lifted weights and he said no. I couldn't believe it."

From that point on, Edwards worked. He trained harder than any of the other fighters, a practice that he continues today. "His condition is his biggest asset," McDonald pointed out. He trained for a year at kick-boxing before taking the ring for the first time.

His first opponent was an experienced fighter, but he turned out to be no match for the much more powerful Edwards. It was the first of 27 fights for the local man, who ended his kick-boxing career with a 26-1 slate. He still remains the number one contender in the world in kick-boxing.

It was in Tulsa, Oklahoma, where Demetrius acquired the nickname "Oaktree." Prior to the fight, McDonald had remarked how Edwards' arms and legs were as powerful and as huge as an oak. The crowd picked this up and yelled "timber, timber" when Edwards was knocked down during the fight. But Edwards came back and knocked out his opponent and thus kept the name "Oaktree."

Throughout his 27 fights as a kick-boxer, Edwards threw 80 to 85 percent of his punches with his hands. Usually, a kick-boxer will use his feet 50 percent of the time. Realizing this, McDonald thought that maybe Edwards should try boxing.

"I carried him to Charlotte and he knocked out a heavyweight in the second round. He's been a boxer ever since," McDonald said.

Edwards starts his day by running eight to ten miles. Then he returns to the training room where he works out for two solid hours, shadow boxing, punching a 100-pound swinging bag and jumping rope. Sweat beads off his body from his eyebrows to his ankles. He seemingly never gets tired.

"I'm in good shape. I probably train more than any other fighter in my weight class," Edwards said Thursday during a workout break. "I feel great. With the home crowd boosting me on, it makes me feel real good."

Edwards fought his first professional boxing bout 30 days after joining the Dundees. This was partly due to the terrific condition he was in while kick-boxing. "Plus, you've got to build up a boxer's confidence," Mike Dundee added.

"Kick-boxing gave him the ring experience he needed," McDonald explained. "Plus, he used to have to block two hands and two feet. Now all he has to worry about are the two hands. It's much easier. If he hadn't ever kick-boxed, he would not have been able to box that soon."

Coming back home again to perform in front of his home folk, Demetrius "Oaktree" Edwards knows he can't lose, but then losing has never been a part of his life.

Awards Presented

East Carolina University's men's tennis and women's gymnastics teams, both coached by Jon Rose, held their awards banquet last night at the Western Sizzlin' Steak House.

Ted Lepper, a Fayetteville freshman, was named the tennis team's Most Valuable Player. He compiled a 9-6 record during the season, best on the team.

Other tennis awards included Sportsmanship Award to Henry Hostetter, Most Dedicated to Barry Parker, and Most Improved to Norman Bryant.

Susan McKnight, a Greenville junior, was named the Most Valuable on the gymnastics team. Elizabeth Jackson was named runner-up MVP, and Annie Leoschke was named Most Improved.

Kinston Rips Ayden-Grifton

LITTLEFIELD — Kinston ripped three Ayden-Grifton pitchers for 16 hits as the Vikings routed the Chargers, 12-3, Thursday afternoon in a high school baseball game.

The Chargers, now 6-9 overall, took a short-lived 1-0 lead after the first inning. The 4-A Vikings quickly countered with two runs in the second and five in third and after the Chargers tallied once in the bottom of the third Kinston led, 7-2. From there, the Vikings coasted home the winner.

Ayden-Grifton was paced at the plate by Benard Ricciciarelli, who was three for four with one RBI. Mike McLawhorn was two for two.

Kinston was led by Greg Orgen, who was five for five with four RBIs. Micky Wade was three for three and had three RBIs while Bill Pittman was three for five.

Ayden-Grifton travels to Farmville Central Saturday afternoon.

Farmville Captures Girls Track Title

PINETOPS — Farmville Central's Karen Dunn and Sharon Dupree each won two events and the Jaguars won six in all to win the Eastern Carolina Conference girls' track title Thursday afternoon.

The Jaguars outpointed second-place D.H. Conley, which also won six events, 157 to 103 to win the crown. Southwest Edgecombe wound up third with 91 points followed by Charles B. Aycock's 67. Greene Central tallied 50 points while Southern Nash had 26 and Ayden-Grifton had one.

For Farmville, Dunn won both the triple jump, with a leap of 32'1½", and the 3,200 meter run, with a time of 12:39. Dupree won both the 100 meter hurdles (15.6) and the 200 meter hurdles (31.6). Farmville's Brenda Reid won the high jump at 4'10" after her two closest competitors ended with more misses. Charlene Lang won the shot put with a throw of 32'6½".

For the Valkyries, Sherry Small won the long jump (15'5½") and the 200 meter dash (26.4) while Cheryl Tyson won the 400 meter run with a time of 59.95, just edging Farmville's Rose Lang, who finished with a time of 1:00.4.

It was in the relays, however, that D.H. Conley dominated. The Valkyries won all three relays.

In the 800 relay Tilda Garris, Debbie Scott, Cassandra

Chapman and Small turned in a 1:49 to win. In the 400 meter relay Garris, Scott, Mary Hardy and Rose Green came in first with a clocking of 53.06, less than a half of a second ahead of Charles B. Aycock.

In the 1,600 meter relay Jackie Hansley along with Tyson, Chapman and Small triumphed with a time of 4:35. Farmville Central, D.H. Conley, Greene Central and Greenville Rose all travel to Camp Lejeune next Friday for the sectionals.

Hole-In-One Contest Set

The fourth annual Hole-In-One golf contest, sponsored by the Greenville Civitan Club, will be held Saturday at the Rose High School athletic field.

The competition is designed to give participants a chance to test their skill at driving a golf ball across a 90 to 125-yard range towards a regulation size cup. Those coming closest to the cup will receive prizes, and the first golfer to make a hole-in-one will be awarded a grand prize.

Doug Caldwell, chairman for this year's event, said that no one has ever scored the hole-in-one, although several participants have come within inches of making it.

"We're still looking for the perfect shot," he said.

Last year's winners were Doug Rodman and Harriette White of Greenville. Rodman came within 1 foot, 3 inches of the hole, while White's best shot landed 2 feet, 6½ inches away.

The competition begins at 9 a.m. and will continue until dark.

Entry fees are $1 for three balls and $2.50 for 10. Clubs and balls will be available at the site. Proceeds are used to support programs for retarded children.

THE QUALITY, FUNCTIONAL DESIGN AND SENSIBLE PRICE OF A SNAPPER RIDER.

The rear engine SNAPPER rider gives you a smooth, even cut. Plus, immediate response steering for cutting in tight places, on-the-go adjustment of cutting height and speed, and a floating cutting unit which minimizes scalping and damage.

SNAPPER Hi-Vac™ models can vacuum cuttings, leaves and litter into an optional 6 or 30 bu. catcher, even during high moisture conditions.

Before you buy a rider, compare the quality and performance features of a SNAPPER. You'll find SNAPPER is worth more because it does more. And its price is competitive with other quality mowers.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — GIDDY GOLFER DIDN'T FARE WELL ON TILTED FAIRWAY.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals U

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

'Never Told' Basis For His Dismissal

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former North Carolina Symphony conductor John A. Gosling said Thursday he was never told the reason for his dismissal after seven years on the job.

And he cited that stance by the symphony's board of directors as the reason he walked off the stage at the conclusion of his final concert Wednesday night, snubbing state Cultural Resources Secretary Sara W. Hodgkins, who was there to give him the Governor's Award and a bouquet of roses.

"All I was ever told was that they wanted to make a change, but that I had done a 'wonderful job,'" Gosling said. "I have asked why I was fired if I was doing such a 'wonderful job,' and I've never received any answer."

Gosling's farewell appearance came on the day R. Max Abbott of Fayetteville was appointed as the first paid president of the symphony. Lawrence Smith has been named guest conductor for the year.

Gosling, upon revealing last May that he was leaving, said he was unhappy with the symphony's financial growth and wanted to pursue new career opportunities.

"I have avoided this all year long," Gosling said. "When I was told a year ago that my contract would not be renewed, I was told that I could handle it in any way I wanted ... I chose not to discuss it. But now I think the time has come to talk about it."

"Two years ago, the board of directors of the symphony wanted to curtail some of my responsibilities," Gosling said. "Then a year ago, I was informed by an ad hoc committee of the board that my contract would not be renewed."

Two Dates For Musical Comedy

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central High School will present the musical "Bye Bye Birdie" on two dates, Friday and Saturday, May 2 and 3. Showtime will be at 8 p.m. each performance, and these will be presented at the school's auditorium.

Tickets are priced at $2 for adults and $1.25 for children and high school students.

Cast members include David Cherry in the role of Conrad Birdie. Steve Morgan will portray the press agent, Albert Peterson. Mary Beth Joyner will play Rosie, and Mary Stoddard and Bert Warren will be in the roles of the young steadies, Kim MacAfee and Hugo jkPeabody.

Others in the cast are Claire Bullock and Brent Hathaway as Mr. and Mrs. MacAfee, and Stacy Warren as the young son, Randolph.

Lewis Lawrence directs, and Kathryn Sauls is musical director.

Asserts Poetry In All People

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Robert Penn Warren, a two-time Pulitzer Prize winner for poetry, says every American is a poet.

"Any person brighter than a half-wit who can fall in love is writing poetry, although he doesn't know it," Warren said Thursday. He gave a reading here Wednesday.

A mother's love is poetry, Warren said. Being honorable is poetry. "Poetry is man's search for values and experience," he said.

Warren, 75, said the nation needs poets, but "our nation is spoiling our sense of poetry."

Athletes Created By Ohlmeyer

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Big Al, wherever you are, you've been redeemed ... by the grace of Don Ohlmeyer, president of NBC Sports.

When I last saw Big Al, he was leaving school in a borrowed car, his legendary (albeit academically marginal) college career ended after 5½ spectacular years. Big Al didn't earn a degree, but he did earn the enmity of the community's guardians of right and order.

Big Al wasn't much at Social Theory or Botany 101, but he once organized a party raid that made the Normandy invasion seem like a lawn party. Eighty-three arrests.

Big Al's school days were spent at Mr. Brown's pool hall, where he'd hustle nine-ball and dream up outrageous schemes.

Well, Al, it turns out that you're not a sociopath after all. You're a sportsman. You're not a delinquent, you're an athlete.

Don Ohlmeyer has made things right for you.

Alan Jay Lerner Possibly Lining Up No. 8 In His String Of Wives

NEW YORK (AP) — Alan Jay Lerner, the lyricist of "My Fair Lady," "Camelot," and "Gigi" fame, is being sued for divorce by his seventh fair lady.

And reports from London say the 25-year-old leading lady in a revival of "My Fair Lady" may be auditioning for the part of Mrs. Lerner No. 8.

Nina Bushkin is suing the 61-year-old Lerner for divorce, the New York Post reported Thursday.

"I loved him when I married him three years ago," said the 29-year-old daughter of jazz pianist Joey Bushkin. But she says the age difference was a problem.

"I didn't notice it at all when we were alone together. Alan is very young at heart. But when we were with friends it became very obvious — some of his friends are 80 years old."

In London, Lerner said he was "very happy" with Liz Robertson, who is Eliza in the revival. "Liz is a wonderful girl, and I'm lucky to have her."

Clown Alley At Sidewalk Show

In addition to the entertainers listed previously in the schedule for the Sidewalk Art Show on Saturday, April 26, there will be another group performing periodically during the 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. show hours.

The members of Greenville's Clown Alley will be on hand to entertain young and old visitors to the annual show.

Square Dance Planned Tonight

The Association for Retarded Citizens/Pitt County, in conjunction with the Greenville Parks and Recreation Department, will hold its bi-monthly Celebration event April 25 at J.C. Park on Cedar Lane from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

This month's Celebration will be a square dance for the adult mentally retarded in Pitt County. The Tar River Twirlers will provide instruction along with Nelson Jarvis, who is the caller for the group. All mentally retarded adults and volunteers are invited to attend and help with the square dance.

Mr. Ohlmeyer has created something called "The Sunday Games," an NBC "sports" series that promises to finally obliterate that fine line separating sports and mayhem.

The network calls its new show "an international celebration of sports for the average man..." It is the Olympics of trash sports.

The featured contest in this weekend's two-hour premiere of "Sunday Games" is a lovely little competition to determine "America's Toughest Bouncer." Let me elaborate:

Bryant Gumbel and Dick Butkus call the action as six buries from watering holes across the country compete in a sort of barroom decathlon. In the first event, they lift a stuntman and hurl him across the tavern, competing for distance.

Then they run "The Blast," which involves leaping over the bar, dashing through a maze of chairs and tables, jumping a rail and crashing through a closed bathroom door.

Other segments include a belly-flop contest (one guy sets himself ablaze during his descent) and a beer-chugging match between USC and University of Alabama frat rats.

Big Al, you didn't change your name to Ohlmeyer, did you?

Seeming out of place in all of this is a very touching segment on the Special Olympics, the games held for retarded children, and an interesting bit on the running of the bulls at Pamplona. It quickly moves back to the rowdy stuff, however.

Ohlmeyer bristles at the suggestion that he's taking television sports to a new low with his "Sunday Games." This is as valid as NFL football, he says.

After all, the Emmy-winning president of NBC Sports points out, "There's nothing sacrosanct about 22 guys beating the hell out of each other on a Sunday afternoon."

ECU Playhouse Again Has Top Performance

The East Carolina Playhouse ends the season with the Broadway Show "Equus" by Peter Shaffer and again presents a successful production.

"Equus" is a poignant and spellbinding drama in which a psychiatrist struggles to solve the mystery of why 17 year old Allen Strang commits a vicious crime — blinding five horses with a metal spike.

Martin Dysart pieces together the puzzle and soon reveals that it's not only Allen that he's worried about. Dysart discovers and admits truths about himself — that he is a man without passion. Yet, he continues his objective of solving the mystery and curing Allen.

In the words of Dysart, "A psychiatrist can destroy passion, but he cannot create it." Will he "restore him (Allen)"? If so, "To what?", said Dysart.

The play has many levels of meanings and one of them is the individuals' pain, and his right to it. The play probes deep into the psychological aspects of life.

"Equus" is a God that lives in all horses and he sees everything, or so Allen thought. Allen, the product of an atheist father and religious mother, worshipped that God.

The play's style, theatricalism, forces the burden of proof on the actor. With minimal scenery and properties, the actor must bring the playwright's words to life or the drama fails. Travis Lockhart, playing Dysart, presented a splendid performance. He pulls one into the scenes like a vacuum and holds him endlessly. Polished performances were by Denny Wright who played Allen, Bob Myers, his father, and Hazel Stapleton, his mother. The horses — Bobby Sharpe, Lund Sox, Cliff Pyron, and Michael Whetzel should be highly commended. The horses' heads were simply brilliant and a delightful attraction. Nugget, played by Barry Ambrose, gets the golden egg.

Other strong performances were by Renee Dulaney as Jill Mason who was the girl that Allen couldn't talk about, Alan Oatley as Harry Dalton who owned the horse stable, Julia Haskett as Hester Salomon, the lawyer who referred Allen to Dysart and Ingrid Wright, nurse.

David Downing's clever lighting design enhanced the performers' work and set the mood for various scenes.

Del Lewis directed the play, and the set was designed by Michael Gall. Susan Johnson was production stage manager.

"Equus" closes on Saturday, and tickets can still be purchased for the Saturday show by calling 757-6390. The play is designed for mature audiences, for sexual related material is included in the play. Although some may not agree with the philosophy, "Equus" is worth seeing.

Slander Suit Is Said 'Settled'

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — A diet doctor's $30 million slander suit against CBS-TV's "60 Minutes" and newsman Mike Wallace has been settled out of court.

Dr. Joseph Greenberg withdrew charges of negligence by CBS on Thursday, and the network said it "regrets any embarrassment that Dr. Greenberg feels he's sustained as a result" of a 1976 "60 Minutes" broadcast.

"I don't care about the money," Greenberg said. "It was just my reputation. I'm happy we settled this amicably. I am vindicated."

He had charged that CBS, Wallace and producer Grace Diekhaus defamed him in a segment in which a woman said she took more than 80 pills a day under his direction in an effort to lose weight.

Greenberg claimed he lost $100,000 a year after the broadcast.

In Brief, Anderson's Positions On Major U.S. Current Issues

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here, at a glance, are Rep. John B. Anderson's positions on major current issues:

IRAN
He favors a trade embargo on Iran "with teeth" and cutting off all communications with Iran. "They have behaved as an outlaw nation," he says. "They ought to be treated as such."

AFGHANISTAN
Anderson called Carter's imposition of a grain embargo on the Soviet Union an appropriate response to "overt aggression." He said the lesson of events in the Middle East is that "we have got to become less dependent on our imports of foreign oil."

OLYMPICS
Anderson favors seeking an alternate site, supports the U.S. boycott.

DEFENSE
Anderson supports the United States pledge at the Bonn Conference in 1978 for a three percent increase in real terms. He calls the MX strategic missile "a waste of money."

DRAFT
Anderson is opposed to resuming draft registration as "a symbol I don't like." He is a strong supporter of a volunteer army.

ECONOMY
Anderson's most controversial proposal is his plan for imposing a 50-cents-a-gallon tax on gasoline to reduce consumption and decrease imports of oil. He would use the revenue to cut social security taxes by as much as one-half.

He has advocated a 10 percent tax on imported oil and a 5 percent surcharge on corporate profits to help balance the federal budget in the next fiscal year.

"Taken as a whole," Anderson says, "the proposals call for national sacrifice, but no segment of our society would be asked to bear a disproportionate share of the burden."

Anderson would attack inflation by reducing federal spending through deferring some grants and making a long-range effort to spur productivity through faster business tax writeoffs.

He would limit federal spending to 20 percent of the estimated gross national product.

He would expand tax credits for business to hire the unemployed but opposes a general income tax cut in 1980.

ENERGY
In addition to his gasoline tax proposal, Anderson supports oil price deregulation. He advocates direct grants for weatherproofing homes, government funding of synthetic fuel development and building more nuclear power plants.

SALT II
Anderson favors the SALT II treaty and says rejecting it would accelerate the arms race.

ABORTION
The Illinois congressman says abortion is a matter between a woman and her physician and a decision that must be made "without the coercive power of the state." He opposes a constitutional amendment to ban abortions and favors government funding to women unable to afford them.

WELFARE
Anderson favors a welfare program with wage subsidies or other employment and training incentives. He supports a national minimum benefit level and more uniform eligibility requirements for financial aid and food stamps.

Scope Of Inquiry Into Silver Transactions Said Widening

By SOLL SUSSMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigations of the silver transactions of the Hunt brothers are widening after reports that the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board helped arrange an $800 million credit line to help the two men.

The chairman of the House Banking Committee accused Federal Reserve chairman Paul A. Volcker of violating the Fed's credit restraint policy by approving of the loan to Texas billionaires Nelson Bunker Hunt and William Herbert Hunt.

Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., said he will hold hearings on Volcker's action. He suggested Thursday that the Federal Reserve Board should consult his committee or the Senate Banking Committee before taking any similar actions.

The Hunts needed the funds to make payments, called margin calls, after the price of silver dropped from about $50 per ounce in January to $10.80 in March. The Hunts have been active in the silver market for years and it was reported that they lost tens of millions of dollars in the silver fall.

Meanwhile, federal subpoenas were served on the Hunts in Dallas, directing them to appear next Tuesday before a House government operations subcommittee investigating the silver market's collapse last month.

There was no word on whether the Hunts will comply with the subpoenas. They have agreed to appear voluntarily next Friday before a Senate agriculture subcommittee.

Although Volcker was out of the country Thursday and unavailable for comment, the Federal Reserve Board issued a statement denying it approved the loan to the Hunts.

"Contrary to published reports, neither the Federal Reserve nor its chairman, Paul A. Volcker, initiated any effort to obtain bank loans in connection with financial transactions of the Hunt brothers," the statement said. "Banking officials have kept the Federal Reserve informed regarding such matters but, contrary to some reports, the Federal Reserve has not approved any such loans," it said. An informed government source, who asked to remain anonymous, said Volcker became involved after the Hunts' regular bank could not meet their urgent request for money to meet debts stemming from their silver purchases.

One source said that brokerage firm and bank representatives asked for Volcker's approval of the loan in late March.

Signals Point To Recession

Current news items increasingly indicate that the long-awaited recession, aided in part by the Administration's inflation-fighting program, has arrived.

Ford and General Motors have announced substantial production cutbacks and job layoffs, and new housing construction fell last month to the lowest level since the last recession. Capacity utilization is down, retail sales are down, and the leading economic indicators are still declining. If further evidence is needed, the prime interest rate has been lowered and Treasury bond yields are down two points from their highs.

The evidence is not yet in, however, on whether a market bottom has been reached. The market decline in the past two months was substantial, but there could be more to come, especially if the recession is more severe than is currently being expected. Historically, the worst period for stocks comes after a downturn in interest rates.

It is not too late to make portfolio revisions to strengthen holdings for the months ahead and for the bull market to follow. The effects of a reduction in interest rates and in inflation, due to recession and government policies, provide some direction for portfolio changes.

A period of negative economic news is not a favorable environment for speculating. Such issues do not fare well in an uncertain market. Stocks which have run up in price because they have been regarded as natural resource inflation hedges are not likely to do well as inflation drops over the coming months.

On the positive side, a lowering of interest rates could be beneficial to many firms. Interest sensitive issues such as utilities, savings and loans and financial institutions would benefit as their borrowing costs are reduced.

Corporate profits overall decline during recessions, and companies which are to achieve earnings gains usually turn in a better relative performance. By the nature of their businesses, food and drug issues are defensive and could become increasingly attractive.

With at best an uncertain stock market ahead, a more defensive portfolio stance is appropriate. Such a posture should provide some protection during a market decline as well as position holdings for the coming bull market.

Police List 4 Accidents

Greenville Police reported an estimated $2,050 property damage resulted from a series of four traffic mishaps investigated here yesterday.

Heaviest damage resulted from a 9:40 a.m. mishap on Meade Street, 10 feet North of the Fifth Street intersection involving cars driven by Beth Ann Hignite of Route 9, Greenville, and Alice Hedt Finger of 120 Reade Cir.

Officers estimated damage at $300 to the Hignite car and $400 to the Finger car.

Cars driven by Richard Todd Landon of Route 2, Ayden, and Lester Devotion Page of 1411 Dickinson Ave. collided about 4 p.m. at the intersection of Myrtle and Paris Avenues, causing $400 damage to the Landon car and $200 to the Page auto.

An estimated $200 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 5:44 p.m. collision at the intersection of Tenth and Charles Streets.

Police identified the drivers involved as Jeffery Scott Hope of 1400 E. Tenth St., and Linda Jo Warren Haislip of Route 1, Oak City.

A 4:20 p.m. mishap on Berkley Road, 50 feet South of the 14th Street intersection involved cars driven by Randall Kent Swift of Oxford, Va., Terri Lynn Rostafinski of Petersburg, Va., and Cynthia D. Moore of Ayden.

Child Given One Chance In 100

By JOAN J. CIRILLO
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Bahadur Khan knew something was wrong the minute he saw his 2½-year-old daughter being wheeled out of the operating room. The bandage was wrapped over the wrong eye.

The surgeon had cut out the good eye, not the one rotting with cancer.

Doctors at the Indian government hospital in Hyderabad had blinded Nasreen Banu for life. Her father, a $100-a-month mechanic from Hyderabad, doesn't blame anyone. He just cannot understand.

"If I make a mistake in my factory, I would say, 'OK, I'm uneducated. I could make such a mistake.' But they are educated and professional people....I am perplexed," he said.

Nine weeks have passed since the tragic mix-up.

In that time, the child and her father have come to New York for surgery, at Indian government expense.

In that time, specialists at the Eye Tumor Center at New York Hospital have learned that cancer has spread to Nasreen's spine. Whether the disease could have been checked had Indian doctors removed the correct eye, doctors cannot say.

Nasreen, a chubby, playful child with jet black hair and clear, dark skin, is going home with her father this weekend, ending their three-week stay. Two artificial eyes will fill the hollows left by surgeons in her country and in New York — Dr. Robert Ellsworth, director of the tumor center, could not restore her sight and had to remove her diseased eye.

If Nasreen's life is to be prolonged, she must submit to a rigid schedule of intensive radiation and chemotherapy. Ellsworth said she has one chance in 100 to be cured. If she is not cured, she probably will die within four years, he said.

"There was a flame in my heart that my daughter might see again. Now I am reconciled to the will of the god," said Khan as he sat, legs crossed, on the floor of Ronald McDonald House here, a home for child cancer victims, where he and Nasreen have been living.

A shy man, Khan spoke through an interpreter as his daughter played beside him.

She sang "Aba, Aba" (Daddy, Daddy) and groped at the toys and gifts sent by Americans who heard of the tragedy. She climbed into her father's lap, crying now and then for attention.

Nasreen has been frightened and confused since she came to New York. "She's still a child. She only says, 'I can't see. It's too dark. Where's Mommy, where are my sisters and brothers?'" said Khan.

The questions — "Why is it so dark? When will the lights go back on?" — have been on her lips since the day after the Indian doctors cut out the wrong eye.

No one knows exactly what caused the mix-up at the Sarojini Eye Hospital on Feb. 22. Indian officials have speculated the chart that accompanied Nasreen into the operating room was mislabeled.

The incident sparked such a furor in India that state legislators called for an investigation. Officials suspended the doctors involved and promised to pay for future medical treatment.

future by referring to his 13-year-old daughter's past. The girl, one of five other children being cared for by his wife in India, had cancer of the eye 10 years ago. The eye was removed, the disease was contained and Khan said she will marry this year.

Ellsworth has been emphatic about Nasreen getting the right drugs and the best treatment. She will undergo cancer therapy under Rao's care at Hyderabad Cancer Hospital in southcentral India.

Khan said he is confident the Indian government will take care of his daughter. If they don't, he said, he'll "make hell and put up a case in court."

He said his biggest worry was what will happen to his daughter when he and his wife are dead and not there to care for her.

Said the father: "Surely, I have faith in God and she will be all right."

ONE CHANCE IN 100 TO LIVE — Bahadur Kahn of India plays with his two-year-old daughter Nasreen Banu. The youngster is a cancer patient and nine weeks ago was tragically blinded when doctors in Hyderabad removed her good eye rather than the one afflicted. Now the cancer has spread. (AP Laserphoto)

See Rate Down On Mortgages

NEW YORK (AP) — Home mortgage rates should dip from present record levels of 15 percent to 17 percent by December to about 12 percent and rescue an ailing savings industry, the industry's top regulator says.

"Rates must drop below 14 percent before mortgage demand recovers and housing starts pick up, and I think we'll see that by the end of the year," Jay Janis, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, said Thursday.

The $550 billion thrift industry, comprising more than 4,000 savings and loan associations and savings banks, is being hurt by the high mortgage rates because many homebuyers are unwilling or unable to qualify for mortgages, Janis said.

"It is inevitable...that 1980 will see a marked decline in industry earnings and profitability with, in some cases at least, a negative return on assets," Janis told a shareholders' meeting of the Federal Home Loan Bank of New York.

Thrift institutions rely heavily on interest income from home mortgages to meet their expenses, but with mortgage rates as high as 17 percent in some regions, many homebuyers have dropped out of the market and home construction has ground to a near standstill.

Janis said mortgage lending in the first three months of the year fell to $13.8 billion, 30 percent below the first-quarter total in 1979. He said the volume of commitments for future mortgage lending fell $800 million.

"This will clearly be the worst year for the housing industry since World War II," Janis told the shareholders' meeting.

Chute Trial Is Delayed

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — An Army private accused of murder by parachute sabotage has won a delay in his case which will enable him to add a civilian attorney to his defense team.

Pfc. Alvin P. Williams was given the additional time Thursday by Judge Peadar C. Wold. Wold continued until May 5 the pre-trial hearing and rescheduled a general court-martial date for Williams from May 5 to the week of May 12.

A parachute rigger with the 407th Supply and Service Battalion at Fort Bragg, Williams is accused of deliberately severing the static line of a parachute worn by Capt. Lawrence D. Hill of the 82nd Airborne Division. Hill was killed when his parachute failed to open during a routine jump.

A post spokesman said Williams, if convicted, could receive a maximum penalty of life imprisonment, reduction in rank to private and in pay grade to E-1, and forfeiture of all pay and allowances.

Williams told Wold Thursday morning that he has hired Fayetteville attorney Edwin Lynn Johnson. Johnson will join two military attorneys who were appointed to represent Williams at no charge.

The defense expects to present at least three pre-trial motions, according to Capt. Michael Wysocki, one of Williams' military attorneys.

He said one would be for a change of venue. Another would be a challenge of the "qualifications" of the convening authority in calling the court-martial.

HANG GLIDING SPECTACULAR — The eighth annual Nags Head Hang Gliding Spectacular will be held at Jockey's Ridge State Park on May 16-18. Duration, distance and target competition for more than 50 gliders will be conducted May 16 and 17, with May 18 (Sunday) as a raindate. Francis M. Rogallo, inventor of the "Rogallo wing" used in hang gliding kite construction today, lives at Kitty Hawk and will take an active part in the annual event. Information on competition and registration may be obtained from coordinator Jim Johns at Kitty Hawk Kites, P.O. Box 386, Nags Head, N.C. 27959.

Business Boom For Selected Industries In Certain Areas

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The "Help Wanted" sign is out at Volume Shoe in Topeka, Kan. The Bath Iron Works in Bath, Maine, has a $600 million backlog of orders for ships. There is still a strong market in the Orient for the wheat grown by Washington farmers.

While unemployment lines in most parts of the country are growing, selected industries in selected areas say business is booming. Firms like the Boeing Co. which have military contracts are expanding. Rhode Island and North Carolina say the textile business is strong. The jobless rate in many parts of the West and South is lower than the national average. And companies which specialize in products or services involving sophisticated technology report continued growth.

Even in Michigan, where auto industry layoffs have hit hardest, "There are still pockets of real strength," according to John Haneski of the state's Economic Development Office. Haneski said Grand Rapids in particular is doing well because it has a diversified economic base and a healthy office furniture industry.

Volume Shoe in Topeka, which already employs 563 people, is building a new distribution center and will be hiring workers to staff it during the next three to six months.

The payroll at the Bath Iron

Works numbers 6,000 — about 1,000 higher than last April. The shipbuilding firm has the largest backlog of orders — military and civilian — in peacetime history. A spokesman for the yard said the prosperity was due to the company's ability to get the ships built ahead of schedule, without cost overruns.

Eighty-five percent of Washington's wheat crop is exported and officials of the state's agriculture department say demand — and profits — are good. Dave Kile, the assistant director of the department, said the export market for apples and other fruit also is strong, although he warned that high costs mean farmers have to be careful. "If you're a sloppy farmer and drop dollars down the cracks, you're gonna be in serious trouble," Kile said.

The brightest spot in Washington — and in several other areas as well — is Boeing. The company has $18 billion worth of back orders for commercial jets. It has just won a contract for the air-launched Cruise missile. And it recently bought and plans to expand Numerical Engineering of Macon, Ga. On a nationwide basis, Boeing has expanded its payroll by 2,500 to 104,000 this year. "We're sort of at a plateau, but drifting higher," said company spokesman Pete Bush.

The unemployment rate for Utah in March was 4.6 percent — slightly higher than it was a year ago, but more than a full percentage point below the national average. "Utah's economy will show positive economic growth in every quarter in 1980," said Dr. Joseph S. Perry of the Truist Bank and Trust Co. in Salt Lake City. Among the bright spots: Hercules Inc. and Thiokol Corp., both involved in aerospace work, and the state's mining industry, which employs about 17,900 people.

Like the Washington farmers, Rhode Island textile workers depend heavily on exports and Samuel Azzinaro, state director for the Amalgamated Clothing & Textile Workers Union, said that not even the recent surge of the dollar has hurt the market. "Our people are getting 40-hour weeks with no problem at all and there's plenty of overtime, too," Azzinaro said.

More than 250,000 people are employed in the textile industry in North Carolina and more than 125,000 others have jobs directly related to it. In the last year, 16 new plants were opened and 67 were expanded, creating 4,500 jobs.

Most Massachusetts firms also are at least holding their own and some are expanding, with capital spending in the region up 18 percent from last year. Digital Equipment Corp. recently opened two new facilities, one in Hudson, the other in Boston; GTE Sylvania and Avco are expanding because of military contracts; and the General Electric jet engine plant in Lynn is expected to benefit from Canada's decision to buy F-18 fighters from McDonnell Douglas.

Some business and government officials were concerned about possible problems at the General Dynamics Corp. shipyard in Quincy, Mass. Massive layoffs were expected when construction of the last of 10 liquefied natural gas tankers was completed in the fall. But the company got new contracts for the renovation of a Navy cable ship and for repair jobs on oil barges and officials say employment should remain stable through at least 1980.

In some areas, the economic picture varies from one part of a state to another.

There have been serious problems in northeast Ohio, for example, but the situation is more encouraging in Columbus. "No one industry dominates the employment scene here," said James Thomas, director of research for the Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce. "The large employers — the state, Ohio State University, and the city and county — are relatively stable," he said.

Nevada traditionally does well during economic downturns, said Walt MacKenzie, director of the state's Economic Development Department.

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

The rewards of good bidding are obvious. You arrive at the right contract and you should make it more often than not. But once in a while you are the victim of circumstances that make you want to go to your bridge library and rip out every chapter ever written on bidding.

When this hand was played in a major tournament, the popular contract was six hearts. That was an eminently sensible slam, but unfortunately it was doomed to fail because of the 4-1 trump split. One pair, however, got very involved. South was a super-scientist, and he initiated a cue-bidding sequence before his side had agreement upon a suit. Then, when North elected to jump to six diamonds, South suddenly became worried that his partner might not have a heart in his hand. So he elected to pass, and the result was this rather fantastic slam.

West led the ten of clubs, and declarer was quite happy when the jack won. He cashed the ace of spades and ruffed a spade. Dummy was reentered with the ace of hearts and another spade was ruffed with the ace of trumps to set up the suit — much against the odds. Declarer led a trump and boldly finessed dummy's ten. When that held, he cashed two more rounds of trumps, and was quite delighted when everyone followed.

Now West held the only trump in the game, but that was soon neutralized. Declarer simply ran spades until West ruffed. No matter what West chose to return, declarer could win and get back to dummy with a club to take the rest of the tricks.

It was suggested that a trump lead would scuttle the slam, but that is not so. After the ten of trumps wins, the ace of spades is cashed and a spade is ruffed. Now declarer can make sure of enough entries to set up and run the spades and draw trumps by finessing the jack of clubs! Ah, well, just another everyday slam!

Honor 11 Dead Of Coast Guard

YORKTOWN, Va. (AP) — Eleven Coast Guard crewmen who lost their lives when the cutter Cuyahoga sank 18 months ago were to be honored today in a memorial service at the Yorktown Training Center.

The Cuyahoga collided with a freighter and sank in the Chesapeake Bay on Oct. 20, 1978. Chief Warrant Officer Donald K. Robinson, the ship's skipper, was found guilty of dereliction of duty and reprimanded by a court-martial jury.

Press Criminal Restitution Plan

By LINDA FRANKLIN
Associated Press Writer
FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — The old woman stood on a Fort Smith sidewalk clutching a broken strap in her hand, watching a purse snatcher flee with "all her worldly possessions."

Her handbag was returned later — minus $20, a $60 pair of eyeglasses and her wallet. The purse snatcher was caught and convicted on a theft charge. As part of his sentence, he repaid the money and bought the woman new eyeglasses.

Criminals in Sebastian County pay for their crimes, literally. They dole out money for abortions, medical care for beating victims, doors smashed in burglaries, even wrongful deaths.

Ron Fields, prosecutor for the 12th Judicial District in Arkansas, initiated the program in the early 1970s. The catalyst was the theft of a small black-and-white television set from an elderly woman in a public housing project.

The set cost less than $100, but the woman was living on $82 a month. "The detective said there was no way the woman could get the money to buy another set," Fields said.

The woman eventually got a new television and "from that point on we kept track of it (restitution)," Fields said.

The program keeps growing. In 1973, the department collected $6,311 in restitution of property and stolen items. Last year, the county collected $190,000 in restitution in 400 cases and another $60,000 in overdraft checks.

The program was expanded to include Crawford County this year.

While most of the restitution is for thefts, Martha Milam, restitution administrator in Sebastian County, says two men have paid for abortions for raped women.

Fields said the restitution program deals with cases in which individuals have received suspended or probated sentences. Often, the restitution is a condition of the suspension.

If restitution isn't made, Fields said, the case may be returned to court and the suspension revoked.

Restitution isn't cut and dried. Sometimes the staff agonizes over cases, such as that of a mailman who was struck and killed by a drunken driver.

"In that case, we suspended about five years of the time he (the driver) was sentenced conditioned on paying restitution," Fields said.

The man began making monthly $100 payments to the widow in September. Fields said the owner of the car, who was not driving, was charged with manslaughter and ordered to pay identical compensation. He had completed his payments.

"We don't try to put a price on life," Fields said. But he added that he knew the widow would need help for her adolescent children and that the men would not receive long prison sentences.

In another case, a man was sentenced to 20 years in prison with two years suspended for the battery of a child. Fields said the child's head was beaten against a wall and "he'll never be normal."

The convicted man will pay $100 a month for the child's medical bills as long as the child lives or until he has paid $10,000, Fields said.

Despite the success of the Fort Smith program, restitution is hit and miss in other parts of the state. There is a state program that pays emergency medical bills for rape victims, but restitution in other cases is strictly voluntary.

"There is really no requirement for prosecutors to handle restitution," Fields said.

Fields blamed the situation on the lack of staff in prosecuting attorney offices across the state. "To handle restitution, you have to have a big enough office and enough staff," he said. In some cases, a prosecutor may have only one secretary.

Mrs. Milam spends 80 percent of her time on restitution. Fields said he expects to have a full-time staff member working on restitution in the future.

He also remarked that programs like this in Sebastian and Crawford counties should be eligible for federal funds from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, as are some in larger cities.

State Prosecuting Coordinator Dail Stiles said the Sebastian County restitution program might become a model for the rest of the state.

"Nobody is opposed to seeing victims get something other than indignity" from their physical and monetary losses, Stiles said.

Legal Service Retainer Liked

By WILLIAM H. ALLEN
CHICAGO (UPI) — You get up to six private consultations with an attorney a year for a $25 retainer.

The set fee legal services retainer has attracted 5,000 customers in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Albany and Schenectady, N.Y., since a law firm began the service last year.

Currently promoted in Chicago and surrounding counties under the name Nationwide Law Firm, the service provides legal advice on problems from accidents and annulment to taxation and wills.

"We think this is the wave of the future in the legal industry, and we're trying to make the future come as fast as we can," said Bob Richiardi, marketing director for the Chicago area.

"We are trying to expand the legal market because most middle class people, when they need a lawyer, are afraid to call one," said Bob Richiardi, marketing director for the service. "They are afraid of getting ripped off, and they shouldn't be."

Richiardi said for a $25 annual retainer, a client is entitled to a private consultation with a lawyer every time he or she has a new legal problem — for up to six new problems a year. Few people have even two problems annually, he said.

"If it's something where advice alone will handle it, it's taken care of," he said. But if additional legal services are needed, the client is advised of what action should be taken and how much it will cost.

The client then decides whether to proceed with the legal action. The additional services are offered "at a reasonable fee," Richiardi said.

"About 80 percent of middle class individuals in this country have never used the services of an attorney, and we think they should," he said. "We're trying to allay their fears."

"We consider it preventive legal services as well, because lots of times people don't even know they have a problem until they talk to an attorney."

The NLF initiated television advertising in the Chicago area in November and more recently began a campaign of combined television and newspaper ads. Richiardi said the firm will be approaching major employers and union locals as well as offering service to the general public.

Richiardi said in the Chicago marketing area, about 30 law firms currently are involved in the operation and more will be added.

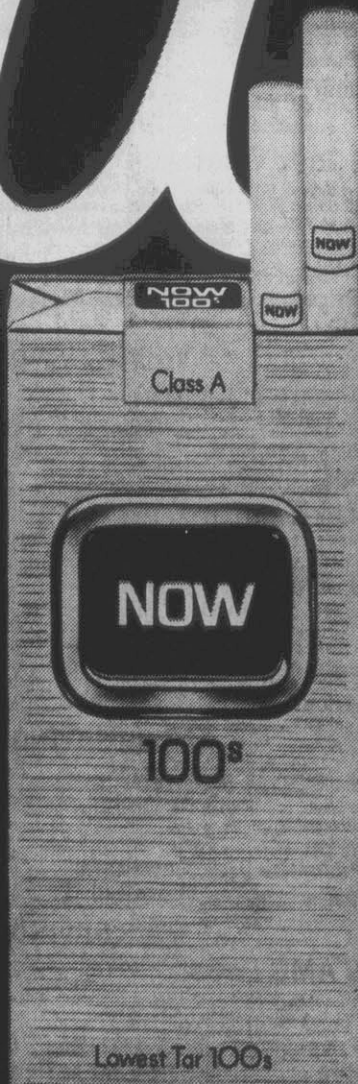

Richiardi said it was difficult to estimate what the response to the new service has been so far in the Chicago area. But Elias C. Hoppenfeld, a managing partner with the New York parent firm, said response in several marketing areas in the East has been "very good." He said the firm may open in the Miami area next.

CHILE'S PRODUCTION
INSPIRATION, Ariz. (AP) — Until 1974, Arizona produced more copper than any country in the free world.

Since then, Chilean copper production has surpassed that in Arizona and is approaching the total production in the United States, which is more than 1.5 million short tons annually, according to Inspiration Consolidated Copper here.
