Carter Preparing Name New Secretary Of State

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Back from a quick trip to express his personal thanks to the servicemen injured in an aborted attempt to rescue American hostages in Iran, President Carter is preparing to name a secretary of state to replace the one who quit in protest to the mission.

The man most commonly mentioned as the likely successor to Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance was his deputy, Warren Christopher.

Carter was expected to reveal his choice to congressional leaders before announcing it at a 9 p.m. EDT nationally televised news conference from the East Room of the White House.

Weeks before Vance resigned in a rare public clash of views on the failed rescue mission, Carter's top national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, said he expected Vance to be replaced by Christopher early next year. Brzezinski, long pictured as a Vance rival, said he did not want the job and reported that Carter was favorably inclined to Christopher.

There have been various reports that other officials would follow Vance and resign because they disagreed with the rescue attempt, but White House press secretary Jody Powell said Monday he would try to talk them out of it.

The Iran rescue mission wasn't the first time Vance had expressed his disagreement with Carter.

Earlier this year, the departing secretary of state made a formal, written dissent to Carter's intention to ban food exports to Iran — a plan that never was implemented.

In Texas after his hospital visit to the injured survivors of the rescue mission — the president's first trip outside the Washington area since the hostage crisis began Nov. 4 — Carter called Vance "a fine and dedicated man who has served this nation well."

But he said Vance's departure — and the circumstances that prompted it — "could not have any adverse effect at all on the efforts to rescue the American hostages...nor will it have any impact on the future."

The White House said Carter was acting as commander-in-chief on his trip to San Antonio, and Powell said he knew of no plans for Carter to take up campaign travels as long as the hostages remain in Iran.

However, Texas holds its Democratic primary Saturday, and the White House obviously was not mindful of the political calendar. The four-person press pool aboard Air Force One for the trip was expanded to include reporters from the two daily newspapers in Dallas.

Ironically, Carter met with Air Force Airman 1st Class William Tootle, the least-hurt of the five survivors, at Wilford Hall Medical Center, the institution where the deposed shah of Iran had last been treated in the United States before taking refuge first in Panama and then in Egypt. The Moslem militants occupying the U.S. Embassy at Tehran have demanded the shah's return to Iran in exchange for releasing the hostages.

"I wanted you to know how proud we all are of you," Carter told the pajama-clad Tootle. "You all did your part. You did it very well...Can I do anything for you?"

"I'd like to go home," said Tootle. "I haven't seen my family in a while."

Tootle sustained an injured knee while four compatriots were badly burned and eight others died in the accidental ground collision of a helicopter and a transport plane after the rescue mission was scrubbed because of mechanical malfunctions. He told Carter, "I just wish we could have gone through all the way."

At the Army's top burn center at Brooke Medical Center, Carter donned a sterile surgical mask and gown to meet the other four military men. He shook hands with two of them but not the others because of their burns.

"Congratulations to you," Carter told Marine Maj. James H. Schaefer Jr., 36, of Los Angeles, who was listed in satisfactory condition. "We are all especially proud of you people."

"Thank you, sir," Schaefer replied. "I'd do it again if needed."

Afterward, Carter told reporters: "I am overwhelmed with emotion when I look at and speak to these men. And I'm filled when a sense of abhorrence and horror at the actions of Iranian officials in recent days who violated all principles of humanity and decency by exhibiting the bodies of the fellow Americans of these brave men in Iran.

Crowds Gather In A Religious Rally

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tens of thousands of people, filled with the spirit of repentance and singing gospel songs joyfully, gathered in sight of the Capitol today, raised their hands to heaven and were told, "We're going back to God."

It was like a giant tent revival, 50,000 to 60,000 people gathered in the dawn freshness on the grassy national Mall for a day of prayer, singing and fasting.

Rally organizers hoped for 200,000 to 500,000 by the end of the day, but rainy weather the last two days and the threat of more today was expected to hold the number below that.

"There are clouds over the Capitol, but beyond is the sunshine," said David Shock, pastor of the Bethany Chapel in Long Beach, Calif.

The day-long rally, called "Washington for Jesus" has been criticized by some organized churches for its conservative political overtones. But planners said it was an attempt at "calling the national leadership back to God."

Not long after dawn, as the sun cast the Capitol's long shadows over the Mall, the crowd sang "Jesus is our Redeemer," a wistful melodic prayer. Thousands lifted their hands skyward, waving their bodies in time with the music, symbolizing an outreach to heaven.

"People ask me what are you protesting," said the Rev. William Wilson, pastor of Faith Temple in Rochester, N.Y. "I said, we are not protesting anything. We are just going down there for Jesus... we are going back to God. We are not going for politics, we are going as a church."

His words were greeted with shouts of "Hallelujah" and "Glory."

Nearly every Christian denomination in the world was represented, with fundamentalists predominating. There were blacks and Hispanics; there were clusters of people holding hands, speaking in tongues.

Iran Claims An Aerial Encounter Over Gulf

By The Associated Press
Iran claimed two carrier-based U.S. fighter jets "started to shoot" at an Iranian patrol plane over the Gulf of Oman today in the first U.S.-Iranian military confrontation since the American hostages were seized nearly six months ago. The Pentagon denied there was any shooting.

In Washington, the Defense Department said: "Two F-14 aircraft from the aircraft carrier Nimitz made a routine intercept of an Iranian C-130 aircraft near the Strait of Hormuz. The U.S. aircraft escorted the Iranian plane back to Iranian air space. It was a routine intercept. There was no firing of weapons."

Washington officials said the Iranian airplane came within approximately 50 miles of the Nimitz and the two F-14s were launched to look it over. The Nimitz is one of about 30 U.S. warships stationed in the Indian Ocean following the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran last Nov. 4 by Iranian militants and the December Soviet thrust into Afghanistan.

The official Iranian news agency Pars quoted the Iranian army joint staff as saying the two American planes started to shoot at the Iranian plane but four Iranian jets were sent up and they "warded off the attack." Pars quoted the army as saying the U.S. planes "changed their direction as the four Iranian jetfighters escorted the patrol plane" back to Iran.

Tehran Radio reported the Iranian army joint staff has warned the armed forces to "expect extensive action by the U.S. Army" in the wake of last week's abortive attempt to rescue the American hostages in Iran.

The Gulf of Oman, 350 miles long and 200 miles wide, lies on the southern shore of Iran and separates the Arabian Sea from Persian Gulf. Iran has two major ports on the Gulf of Oman, Jask and Chah Bahar, and must use this body of water in exporting its oil.

Meanwhile, Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh "escaped unharmed from what appeared to be an assassination attempt in Kuwait, Iran's army mobilized for a major offensive against Kurdish rebels in Sanandaj, and a controversial churchman arrived in Tehran to take charge of the bodies of the U.S. commandos killed in the abortive U.S. hostage rescue.

Kuwait's news agency said a hail of bullets fired from at least two cars hit a motorcade taking Ghotbzadeh to a meeting with Kuwait's ruler at Assaif Palace, slightly wounding a Kuwaiti security guard. The palace is the home of Sheik Jaber Al-Ahmad, Kuwait's ruling emir. The Kuwait Interior Ministry said police located two cars used in the attack, but made no mention of arrests.

The Iranian news agency Pars said one of the cars was found outside the Iraqi Embassy in Kuwait and claimed "the passengers of the car left the vehicle and entered the Iraqi Embassy." Pars also said two suspects had been taken into custody. There was no Kuwaiti confirmation. Iran and Iraq have been having a dispute along their border in recent weeks.

City School Calendar For Next Term Set By Board

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The 1980-81 school calendar was approved at the action meeting of the Greenville Board of Education on Monday night. For the first time, provision has been made for prior indication of make up days for any days of school lost due to snow or other forms of inclement weather.

If any days are lost prior to December 19, these will be made up during the last three of the Christmas holidays — December 29, 30, and 31. If days are lost after the December 19 date, they will be made up during the Easter week vacation days of Tuesday through Friday, April 21-24.

Monday, August 25 will be pupil orientation day, with the first full day of school to be on Tuesday, April 26.

Vacation dates scheduled in the calendar are: Labor Day, Monday, September 1; Thanksgiving, Nov. 27 and 28; Christmas, Monday, December 22 through Friday, January 2, 1981; and Easter, April 20 through April 24.

Teacher work day/student holiday dates — Monday and Tuesday, October 13 and 14; Tuesday, November 11; Wednesday and Thursday, January 21 and 22; Tuesday, March 10; Wednesday, April 23; and Monday, May 25.

Graduation date has been set for Tuesday, June 9. This is a departure from the traditional Friday graduation date. On the direction of the school board, Superintendent Glenn Cox polled this year's juniors — the 1981 graduation class to determine their feelings about the change. The results were 247 in favor of graduation being held the last day of school — 39 wanted it on the Friday after the last day of school, 21 opted for the Friday preceding June 9, and one voted for no graduation until the release of hostages in Iran.

Two men — Raymond Rhodes of the State Dept. of Public Instruction and Simon Terrell, chairman of the N. C. Inter-Scholastic Athletic Program, gave the board a report of the survey they made on the total athletic program at Aycock and Rose schools.

Noting that athletic programs throughout the state are facing serious financial difficulties, the two stated that far too few school boards are financing their athletic programs and are depending on fund raising and gate receipts. They pointed out also that in Greenville, Chapel Hill, Raleigh and other cities with universities, local support for high school athletics was not nearly as strong as in towns where there are only high school sports for people to attend.

One of the basic concepts the two stressed is a greater focus on intra-mural programs at Greenville to provide a greater opportunity to students who do not make the various teams.

Specific recommendations made by the two for the board to consider are:

— That the Greenville

Board of Education, in addition to paying coaches salaries, should finance the cost of transportation.

— Recommended that coaching salaries in the so-called minor sports — swimming, golf, tennis, track, etc. should be adjusted upwards.

— Advised that the athletic director be divested of any coaching duties and that his time be given in full to administrative duties.

AT GOLDEN K MEETING ... here this morning, Marvin Blount, who introduced the speaker, former Gov. Bob Scott, and Golden K president Claude Goodman. Blount served in the North Carolina Senate in 1927 with Scott's grandfather, and knew Scott's father, the late governor and U.S. Senator W. Kerr Scott.

Scott Says Attention Assured Eastern N.C.

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Former Gov. Bob Scott, seeking the Democratic nomination as governor in the May 6, primary against incumbent Jim Hunt, told the Golden K Kiwanis Club here this morning, "I'm here to ask for your vote."

According to Scott, "you don't have to worry about recognition for Eastern North Carolina" if he is nominated. "I'm proud of the part I've had in the progress of Eastern North Carolina," in the past, he said, indicating that he would continue to support progress in the East. "I hope we all vote," Scott continued. "It's one of the privileges we have in this society."

According to the candidate, "growth in government is the fastest growing business in North Carolina today. If you want more prudent management of State government, elect Bob Scott."

"In my campaign...I have collected and spent only a small percentage of the money that my opponent has accounted for," he said. "Yet, we are winning this primary campaign and will win in the fall." Scott said some $1540,000 has been raised for his campaign, while Gov. Hunt has raised $1.2 million.

"My campaign has been run on a shoestring. We have spent money for a small dedicated staff in Raleigh and the other basic necessities. But mostly we have made personal contacts with concerned people all over this state who believe there is a better way to run our government.

"We have received contributions, not from big business, but from people who work hard every day to make a living...people who believe that the average citizen in this state is not represented in Raleigh."

On the other hand, Scott said, "Gov. Hunt is spending his campaign funds in the same extravagant way he has spent our tax money. It doesn't belong to him and the supply seems inexhaustible."

Scott emphasized, "I'm running for governor because I believe our elected leaders should be prudent and consider every tax dollar to be sacred. I believe government should consider the real needs of all people, regardless of their social or economic status, regardless of their race or political influence. I believe many of these real needs are being ignored by the present administration because of their ambition to go on to bigger things.

"The biggest thing in my mind," he emphasized, "is providing the leadership to meet the challenge of the 1980's in North Carolina."

According to Scott, "what we're facing in this campaign is a choice. Do we sacrifice our heritage, or natural resources and our roots for the sake of unrestrained industrial growth and big government? Or do we grow as best we can while maintaining the flavor, character and pride that makes North Carolina and its people something special in this great country of ours?"

"These are important questions that we are all going to have to answer sooner or later."

Concluding, Scott said, "I honestly believe we can't afford more of what we have now. We all need to rethink where we came from and where we want to go."

The Golden K Kiwanis Club here — composed of retired men — was the first Golden K club in the world. There are now more than 60 other such Kiwanis organizations in the United States and other countries.

Original Joseph Smith Document Discovered

By RON BARKER
Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — "Reformed Egyptian" characters Mormon church founder Joseph Smith Jr. says he copied directly from golden tablets given to him by an angel in preparing the church scripture have been discovered in an old family Bible, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints says.

The single page containing about two dozen characters arranged in vertical columns was found this month by a Utah State University student and is believed to be the earliest sample of Smith's handwriting, the church said Monday.

Smith claimed to have translated the Book of Mormon into English directly from the plates with the help of divine inspiration.

The characters on the newly found page, according to a note on the back, were samples made to challenge unbelieving scholars to see if they could translate "reformed Egyptian" without divine help.

Church historian Dean C. Jessee renewed Smith's 150-year-old challenge on Monday, asking linguists to compare the characters with Egyptian. "It adds one more opportunity to test the credibility of his story," he said.

The Book of Mormon, accepted as scripture by the church, unfolds a religious history of the Americas, including a visit to ancestors of the American Indians by Jesus Christ following his resurrection.

Smith said he returned the plates to the angel after the book was translated. Twelve followers said they, too, saw the plates.

Jessee, a senior associate in the church's historical department, said he could not translate the characters or link them with any passage in the Book of Mormon.

However, he said he is convinced a statement on the back of the document was written and signed by Smith, who founded the church 150 years ago this month. With misspellings characteristic of Smith's other writings, it says:

"These caracters were diligently copied by my own hand from the plates of gold and given to Martin Harris who took them to New York City but the learned could not translate it because the Lord would not open it to them in fulfillment of the prophecy of Isaiah written in the 29th chapter and 11th verse." It is signed "Joseph Smith Jr."

Smith, who said he received the golden tablets in September 1827, apparently sent the document to Professor Charles Anthon and Dr. Samuel L. Mitchell of New York in February 1828.

Missions Took Some Looting

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — The headquarters of the Liberian Baptist Convention was sacked during the coup two weeks ago because President William Tolbert headed the organization and funneled government funds to it.

But some 200 American Roman Catholic and Protestant missionaries working in mission stations throughout Liberia came through the coup unharmed.

Excited soldiers harassed or looted some of the missions for several days, but not a single foreign missionary was reported hurt.

Tolbert, a Baptist minister, was assassinated before dawn April 12 by army enlisted men who stormed the presidential mansion and proclaimed themselves the ruling People's Redemption Council.

"When I heard the commotion that morning, I put on my cassock because the people respect us missionaries and I was sure the cassock would get me through," said the Rev. John Thompson of New Orleans. He had come to Monrovia a month before to take charge of the St. Joseph Roman Catholic Mission on Tubman Boulevard, not far from the city's main hospital.

The priest heard there were many dead and injured at the hospital, and the hundreds of excited soldiers around the building let him pass.

"It was a terrible shock to see all those bodies in the refrigeration room," he said. "I said prayers over them, and then the soldiers took me to Tolbert's body."

Suing College In Stabbing Death

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The mother of a 21-year-old St. Augustine's College student who died last fall after being stabbed in a dormitory bathroom has filed a $1.5 million suit against the school.

Daisy L. Payton of Winterville contends the college was negligent in providing adequate protection and security for her daughter, Helena L. Payton.

Mrs. Payton filed the suit last week in Wake Superior Court.

Prezell R. Robinson, president of the private Raleigh college, said Monday he could not comment until he had seen the suit.

Ms. Payton was attacked by an unknown assailant and stabbed Sept. 28. She remained hospitalized in a coma and on life support equipment until Oct. 30 when she died.

Recommended the elimination of the position of one person filling the duties of head football coach and assistant principal.

— Develop a broad seasonal inter-mural program at both Aycock and Rose to meet the physical activity needs of more students.

The two making the report stated that Greenville had a program that compared favorably with those in other schools of its size in the state.

Cox reported to the board that a request has been submitted to the County Commissioners for an additional $100,000 in the current expense budget to balance the 1979-80 budget.

The high cost of heating oil and gas for vehicles has far exceeded budget projections. At the time of making projections for the budget, heating fuel was 47.5 cents a gallon, and was projected to rise to 57 cents — "but, in February, we were paying 86 cents a gallon.

"Also, Cox added, "earlier, utility bills had practically nothing added for the fuel adjustment charge, but now that has risen to two cents per kilowatt hour, and we are using four million kilowatt hours, so that adds a tremendous additional cost to our bills."

The total projection of need for money to cover gas and utility bills for the rest of the school year are $142,430. Of this amount, about $42,000 can be absorbed through projected excess income in interest and use of school property and in the spending of less money than projected in other budget items.

On a request presented by Carolyn Ferebee that the Greenville City School system consider underwriting the utilities costs of the Community Schools Program, the board requested that specific information on projected costs to other systems who have taken this route be made available to the board before any further

Pitt's School Board Confers

The Pitt County Board of Education met Monday night to decide on re-employment of six teachers in the county school system. In an executive session board members discussed the contracts of these teachers, and in an open session they voted not to renew these contracts.

Four of the teachers whose contracts were not renewed have been in the school system only three to four months. The remaining teachers are non-tenured teachers who have been in the schools for a year. The contracts will not be renewed on the basis of performance.

According to law, teachers cannot be dismissed for personal, discriminatory or biased reasons.

consideration be given the request.

In other actions:

— The board approved election of personnel on both career and probationary status for the school year 1980-81;

— Approved two budget amendments — one for an increase of $43,475.76 received in state public school fund; the other for an increase of $2,449.52 in current expense funds due primarily to shift in vocational funds;

— Approved an addendum to the teacher substitute list;

— Approved an audit bid of $4,900 by John C. Proctor for auditing the 1980 school budget; — Heard a request from Mrs. Christa Scharinger for consideration of going back to the K-6 system in the city schools;

— Approved giving up the right of way of about one foot along the street at Sadie Sautler School in order for the city to widen the street;

Gave approval to a plan presented by James Rodgers for the band to go to Daytona Beach, Florida next spring on a three day (weekend) session with no cost to the school.

During the meeting, a number of students were recognized for their achievements in the recent quiz bowl and for math competitions.

Public Found Divided On Anderson's Decision

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans don't know much about John Anderson and his bid to become the first independent candidate to win the White House, but almost a third now say they might vote for the Illinois congressman in November.

An Associated Press-NBC News poll found the public divided over whether Anderson is, as he says, trying to provide a genuine choice to the voters beyond the major party candidates or whether he is just another politician seeking power.

Americans' views of Anderson are not clear, in large part because they know little about him. But those who are familiar with him rate Anderson as somewhat of a liberal — more liberal, for example, than President Carter.

The AP-NBC News poll was taken Friday and Saturday. Telephone interviews with 1,603 adults nationwide are the basis for the results.

Nearly two-thirds of those interviewed — 65 percent — said they do not know enough about Anderson to have an opinion of him. Thirty-five percent said they were familiar with him.

That was the lowest level of public awareness for any major presidential candidate. For comparison, 56 percent said they were unfamiliar with George Bush; 22 percent were unfamiliar with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and 17 percent were unfamiliar with Ronald Reagan.

Asked about the possibility of voting for Anderson in November, 32 percent said it was very likely or somewhat likely they would cast their ballots for the Illinois congressman. Sixty-two percent said it was not likely they would vote for him and 6 percent were not sure.

But the picture was different among those who know about Anderson. Forty-one percent of that group said it was likely they would vote for him.

Anderson's now-

terminated bid for the GOP presidential nomination was aimed in part at convincing voters who say they are neither Democrats nor Republicans to vote for him in the GOP primaries.

Although that strategy did not work and Anderson dropped out of the GOP race, independents are the most fertile ground for his candidacy, according to the AP-NBC News poll. Forty percent of the independents said they might vote for Anderson, while 29 percent percent of the Democrats and 25 percent of the Republicans said that was possible.

Twelve Rose High students have been selected to attend Governor's School June 29 through Aug. 9.

These students were nominated by their school on the basis of academic record. They then had to complete an application for the final elimination process. Those nominated in the performing arts were also required to audition in their respective areas. The Governor's School of North Carolina is the oldest statewide summer residential program for gifted and talented rising junior and senior high school students in the nation.

A team from Rose won first place over all in a regional math contest held at ACC, Wilson, last Thursday. Three members of the team qualified for the state contest to be held May 22, including Mark Grossnickle, who won second place; Kevin Clark, who took third place; and Susan Vick, sixth place. Other members of the school's winning team were Jennifer Davis and Scott Taylor.

Last week the Key Club held election of officers for the upcoming school year. The president will be Tom Brown assisted by Van Warren, vice president, and Chuck Coggins, treasurer.

The Key Club convention for the Carolinas District was held April 18-20 in Fayetteville. Scott Johnson, a junior at Rose, was elected lieutenant governor, Division 11, at the convention. Johnson delivered a speech and answered questions pertaining to the history of Key Club in order to qualify to run for office.

Fred Parham, Susan Vick, Kevin Clark and Mark Grossnickle, members of Rose's Quiz Bowl team, captured first place in the statewide annual Quiz Bowl Championship held last Saturday in Raleigh.

Rose won first place in the county and second place in the regionals before qualifying to be one of the eight high schools participating Saturday. Each member of the team received a $100 bond and a plaque.

The texture and laciness of Irish crochet pillows add an air of understated elegance to your decorating scheme. These timeless designs will complement any type of decor depending upon your choice of colors.

If your theme is modern and upbeat, try a combination of parakeet, royal blue and tangerine. Equally striking is a royal, green and white combination. For a Victorian air, go to quiet shades of ecru or soft peach and in an early American room, ecru, gold and brown are good choices.

To obtain directions for making the Irish crochet pillows, send your request for Leaflet No. FC-6789 with $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope to Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-6789, containing Coats & Clark "Speed-Cro-Sheen" crochet cotton, from Pat Trexler at the same address. Send check or money order for $6.50 for yarn to make one pillow, $11.50 for yarn to make two pillows or $16.50 for yarn to make three pillows. Prices include shipping charges. Specify your choices of any of the colors listed above. Pillow forms are not included.

DEAR READERS: I do a great deal of experimenting with all of the needle arts and in this way, many design ideas are born. My swatches and sample pieces seldom turn into actual items because I am primarily interested in testing stitch combinations, colors and textures.

You, however, can increase your stitchery skills with a little "yarn play" and, at the same time, make a lot of small, useful items for yourself, for gifts or bazaars while you are using up odds and ends of leftover yarns.

Knit and crochet samplers can be made into coasters, place mats, pot holders, trivets, patch pockets, belts and a wide variety of other items. Scraps of needlepoint canvas and yarns can be turned into eyeglass cases, key holders, scissors cases, coasters, checkbook covers and many other accessories. Plastic canvas is great for making all sizes and shapes of boxes.

Just let your imagination go and try out one idea after another. Happily, with this approach to stitchery experimentation, you have little to lose. It is rare to complete a knit, crochet or needlepoint project without having some leftovers, so you can consider these as "free" materials. The time spent can't be considered wasted, either, as you will probably find that it is both relaxing and fascinating.

Make a habit of making notes as you go, recording the type of yarn used, the number of stitches involved and the size hook or needle used. Keep these records in a file box or notebook so that you can easily duplicate the item at a later date if you wish. This can become your personal designer's file.

This is also an excellent way to learn about color harmony and contrast. By combining colors selected at random from your box of leftovers you may come up with a striking color combination which you might not have dared to use. On the other hand, you might pair a couple of colors and find that they do nothing for each other. Keeping such mistakes on file will avoid such selections in the future.

Pattern stitches are generally worked over a specified number of stitches, usually identified as a "multiple of stitches." The multiple is the number of stitches needed to complete one repeat of the pattern.

If you are not given the multiple at the beginning of pattern stitch directions, you can find this out for yourself. A pattern repeat is usually given between a pair of asterisks. Count the number of stitches involved in the steps shown between asterisks. This will tell you how many stitches are needed for each pattern repeat. Then, if there are additional stitches listed before or after the asterisks, these are in addition to the multiple. Thus, your pattern directions could read "worked on a multiple of six plus two" for example. If this is the case, you would be working on any number of stitches equally divisible by six plus two additional stitches.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A friend of ours called the other night and with as much diplomacy as he could muster asked, "What's the matter with your son? I saw him at the garage and he looked like a budget deficiency."

He was not the first to notice our son's shabby clothes, hollowed eyes, and concave billfold hanging out of the hole in his back pocket.

The explanation is quite simple. Our son is the sole support of a "classic" car.

For the uninitiated, a classic car is an automobile that has died, but has been given so many reasons to live, no one has the guts to bury it.

It's hard to pinpoint the exact day when the car went from a "rundown heap" to "classic" status. One day it was propped up on cement blocks in the driveway, the object of a lot of kicking and cursing, and the next day my son was trying to restore it to what it never was. It seems the transition occurred about the time when all the cars that make manufactured during that year were recalled and his was the only one that could be towed without catching fire. To him, this was a sign from God that it had been divinely conceived in Detroit and was destined for a happy death.

One thing is sure . . . when it goes, it will go in style. The wheels are no longer "standard" and have to be specially ordered. The transmission is available only in a small town in Czechoslovakia behind the Iron Curtain. The only mechanic who can remember how to tune it up winters in Barbados and sees it by appointment only. There is a two-year wait for batteries. It gets a half block to the gallon and needs a special weight oil distributed only from Iran.

Anything that doesn't work on it is referred to as "quaint." The heater is quaint. The door that only opens from the outside is quaint. The window that doesn't go up is quaint.

As a mother, I worry about my son's physical, monetary and emotional ties to the car. It has consumed him. It's the Melissa Manchester concert he couldn't afford . . . the tennis racket that is on hold . . . the clothes that he passes by. Heaven help me, that heap is my first grandchild.

He has lost all sense of perspective. The other night I was cheered when he said he met a girl who is like no one I have ever seen. He had known her for years but passed her by and never noticed. For the first

'Unfettered' By Party

Rep. John Anderson, apparently recognizing the futility of continuing his race for the GOP presidential nomination, has now concluded that he will run as an independent.

Anderson called it running "unfettered by party position."

"I have chosen this course of action because it is now clear that I cannot attain a majority of the delegates who will be attending the Republican National Convention in July," he said.

As Anderson sees it, there should be enough voter dissatisfaction with President Carter, presumably the Democratic nominee, and Ronald Reagan, possibly the GOP nominee, to bring about Anderson's election as an independent.

At the same time Anderson said he would remain a Republican and invited those who had supported him to continue to do so.

It is not the first time a disappointed candidate for the presidential nomination has either run or considered running as an independent. It is a tough road, however. An independent has never made it to the White House. While John Anderson might have some effect on the presidential race, we have little doubt that he, too, will fail as an independent candidate for the presidency.

Resignation Hangs Heavily

It has to be a major administrative shake-up when the secretary of state resigns in protest over a presidential decision.

It has happened in Washington with the resignation of Cyrus Vance as secretary of state because he objected to the decision to attempt freeing of U.S. hostages in Iran.

President Carter in a letter of reply made it clear he felt the Vance resignation was "correct."

Still it is something the president could not have wanted in the heat of a political campaign. It is still not clear how much the failed mission will affect this year's presidential politics. Nevertheless the Vance resignation will hang heavily over it.

Auto Tax A Pain

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — If an efficiency expert took a look at local governments in North Carolina trying to collect all the taxes due on motor vehicles, he would panic.

"If you want to talk about the need for efficiency in government and take a look at a system that is the most wasteful of manpower and time you can conceive of ... this is it," says Doug Holbrook, chief of the local tax office of the State Department of Revenue.

A glance at the figures bear this out. It is costing local governments approximately one dollar in overtime, special help, outside auditors and either printed or computerized lists of state motor vehicle registrations for every two dollars collected from would-be tax-cheaters.

And the system used to catch the cheaters varies so much from county to county and city to city — and even from year to year — that some people continue to try and get away with not listing their cars for local tax purposes.

Cheaters
A survey in 1978 shows that between 15 and 20 percent of the motor vehicles in the state are not listed for local property tax purposes. The estimated annual revenue loss for local governments is around $5 million, and the administrative costs associated with trying to recover that loss is running nearly $2 million.

The problem is this: auto owners register with the state for a license plate, but voluntarily list the property for local tax purposes. The only way for local tax officers to see if vehicles are listed at all, or listed properly, is to buy the state registration lists. Each listing must be compared and errors pinpointed, then the value of the vehicles checked; notices sent and followups made. Legislative committees have proposed a variety of alternatives including the state collecting the tax before is-vehicles, he would panic.

suing a license plate; having the local tax office handle auto registration procedures; requiring a local tax office permission slip before registration is allowed; and issuing a tax sticker for the windshield which law officers would check for compliance. All have failed from opposition either from the state bureaucracy, automobile dealers, or the general public.

Meanwhile, local tax officials are looking ahead to next year when the state moves to a staggered registration system rather than having all vehicles registered at one time period. This will obviously result in difficulty in getting registration lists to be checked by those counties which are trying to catch the cheaters.

Not every county goes through the process every year. Four, in fact, don't even try (they are small counties in the mountains).

Hassle
And occasionally a county tax supervisor will decide that the return is hardly worth the effort, especially during a time when local property revaluation is taking up considerable energy and attention from the staff.

Such is the case now in Gaston County where Tax Supervisor Tommy Ballard says he is having to let the effort go because of revaluation pressures. Holbrook says other counties do the same from time to time.

But Gastonia tax officials have decided to use the state lists and run their own cross-checks and collect the city tax anyway, without help from the county tax office.

This decision also brought to light a number of problems between city and county

PRESENTING HIS RESUME!

By JAMES J. KILPARTICK

One Man, Not A Group

WASHINGTON — Narrowly viewed, last week's Supreme Court decision in the matter of Mobile, Ala., may be of interest only to residents of Mobile. In a larger context, the court's several opinions provide a useful insight into those attitudes we define as "conservative" and those we call "liberal."

Last week the conservative view prevailed — and high time.

The facts were not in dispute. As far back as 1911, the city of Mobile created a municipal government headed by a commission of three members elected from the city at large. At the time, such a structure was regarded as a progressive step away from the perceived evils of wards and bosses.

Half a century passed. Congress adopted the Voting Rights Act. That law says in part that no voting "procedure" shall be applied if its effect is "to deny or abridge the right of any citizen...on account of race or color." Five years ago Wiley L. Bolden and other Negro residents filed a class-action suit against the city. They contended that the at-large commission unlawfully and unconstitutionally "dilutes" the voting strength of blacks. District Judge Virgil Pittman ruled in their favor and backed his ruling with a draconian order reconstituting the entire city government into single-member districts. The federal circuit court affirmed.

Last week the Supreme Court reversed. Four justices, led by Potter Stewart, held that "past discrimination cannot, in the manner of original sin, condemn governmental action that is not itself unlawful." Moreover, said Stewart, nothing in the law or the Constitution guarantees political power to political "groups." Justices Blackmun and Stevens concurred separately. Justices Marshall, White and Brennan each dissented.

It was quite an eruption. Stewart snapped at Marshall for propounding "gaudy" theories; Marshall angrily retorted that Stewart had

"mischaracterized" his position. When the dust settled, the court had backed away from previous voting rights cases without actually reversing them. The plurality opinion in part that no voting "procedure" shall be applied if its effect is "to deny or abridge the right of any citizen...on account of race or color." Five years ago Wiley L. Bolden and other Negro residents filed a class-action suit against the city. They contended that the at-large commission unlawfully and unconstitutionally "dilutes" the voting strength of blacks. District Judge Virgil Pittman ruled in their favor and backed his ruling with a draconian order reconstituting the entire city government into single-member districts. The federal circuit court affirmed.

At the heart of the Mobile case was this abiding principle: Rights are individual. The Voting Rights Act does not speak of any "group." It speaks of any "citizen." The 14th Amendment is to the same effect: No state shall deny to "any person" the equal protection of the law. The notion that a discrete political entity, such as "the black vote," has a group right never to have its strength "diluted" is an alien notion if there ever was one.

In his bitter dissent, Thurgood Marshall strongly contended for the group approach. The city of Mobile, he insisted, "may not relegate an electoral minority to political impotence by diminishing the importance of its vote." There is a fundamental right, he thought, to be protected against "inequitable distribution of political influence." Otherwise, said Marshall, the law provides the politically powerless "with nothing more than the right to cast meaningless ballots."

Mistrust In Bonn Grows

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The failure of President Carter's tardy rescue mission in Iran continues the dismal erosion of U.S. alliances and decline of American influence in Western Europe, threatening even to drive West Germany into semineutralism.

The rescue mission's failure multiplied Bonn's unease about close ties with a U.S. government that seems unable to do anything right. It dramatizes the shift in the balance of military power toward the Soviet side.

Beyond incompetence and weakness is a question of deceit. When he was pressing U.S. allies to join anti-Iranian sanctions as a non-military option, had Jimmy Carter already decided on the military rescue? The evidence that he had bulldozed anger in European capitals — especially Bonn.

One week before Carter dispatched the giant helicopters and transport planes deep into the Iranian desert, a senior foreign policy adviser to Chancellor Helmut Schmidt sounded a blunt warning. During our reporting trip through West Germany, he told us that unless the U.S. gives Bonn its head on detente with the East, the North Atlantic alliance cannot survive in its present form.

"If our window to the East (the Soviet Union and East Germany) closes because of American actions taken without our agreement, NATO will never be the same again," this official said in a confidential talk. While not claiming to speak for Schmidt, he often reflects the chancellor's convictions.

Last Friday, West German television pulsed with anger and ridicule at the failed rescue operation. What galled the Germans was the contradiction between the U.S. troops, wearing regulation U.S. Army camouflage uniforms, and Carter's pledge ruling out military action if the allies went along with the U.S. on diplomatic and economic sanctions.

Thus, Carter not only failed to free the hostages but strengthened Western European assumptions about the dangers of being led through international minefields by Uncle Sam. The worst of these dangers, as viewed by the Schmidt government, is to let the U.S. limit West Germany's right to deal with the Soviet-controlled Eastern bloc.

It is not the rescue operation itself but its lateness that so disturbs U.S. allies. Even left-wing members of Schmidt's Social Democratic Party told us Carter should have ordered a clandestine operation to pluck the hostages out of Tehran immediately after the embassy was seized.

Their rationale: The crisis had to be ended, one way or the other, and quickly. To allow it to fester, as Carter did for six months, increased the risk each day of losing access to Iranian oil — and making Soviet intrusions more likely. This last prospect fed European worries about following Washington's lead into what they see as a new cold war.

The U.S. has been putting more pressure each day on its allies to help punish Iran. Because it has been paramount in Carter's presidential campaign, the hostage issue has dictated U.S. policy — whatever the cost in oil to NATO allies or whatever the gain in influence to the Soviet Union.

While understandably keeping the clandestine operation secret from both allies and Congress, the president had been letting out tips that it was on his mind. One came when he relayed to Pennsylvania editors unsubstantiated reports that Ayatollah Khomeini would keep the hostages through election day. Another came when he told Walter Cronkite on CBS that the hostages were now in danger from the Tehran mobs.

But there were no hints to U.S. allies. In this moment of humiliation when intimations of weakness merged with uncharacteristic American incompetence, angry men in Bonn and elsewhere on the continent believed Uncle Sam also had turned deceitful.

While careful politicians greeted the tragic event with sober expressions of grief, the inept will come quickly by members of Congress angered at not being told the secret details of the failed mission at briefings last Friday morning. Was the operation really doable? When was it actually decided upon? Did the helicopter failures stem from haste or shortage of equipment? Most important: Did the president soberly consider what he was doing to the parlous state of the Western alliance?

To the editor:

"We shall overcome" was the theme of Black people in the 60's, to overcome the prejudices of the white men.

Today the prejudices still exist, as the Greensboro incident proved not long ago. But the prejudices aren't the biggest problem for the Black people of this nation.

Their biggest problem is that they take too lightly what many a Black man has fought and died for, the right to vote. I hear people complain every day of the people in office and how bad their leadership is. I don't understand why the complain when they have the power to change it all in their own hands.

There comes a time in everyone's life when they no longer accept being blindly led, when they say, "I'm going to have something to do with what goes on around me. I'm going to make my own decisions."

I don't know about everyone else, but there is no way I'm going to live what few years I have on this earth under so-called leaders I don't agree with, setting stupid unjust laws I don't like. Nope, you can believe that I'll have something to do with what goes down around me.

This is why I urge, not only the Black people, but all people to get out and vote. It isn't that big an inconvenience. Who knows? Your vote might just make the difference.

To the editor:

A letter from Mr. James Jerry Jones concerning Mayor McGlohn's proclamation of Private Property Week here appeared in the Apr. 20 edition of "The Daily Reflector." Mr. Jones questioned whether Americans, in fact, have any private property rights.

The nation's REALTORS share Mr. Jones' concern, but not his point of view. We do have rights in our ownership of private property—to own, to use, to enjoy the benefits of, and to convey property. To celebrate these rights is one of the goals of national Private Property Week each year.

But another purpose is to make Americans aware of the gradual erosion of their rights by governmental action.

Overly restrictive zoning laws, historic preservation laws, landlord-tenant laws, environmental laws and excessive ad valorem taxation all threaten our rights; however, REALTORS are not against the concepts behind such laws, or against well-balanced laws—only excessively restrictive laws which do not balance the public good with individual property rights.

Essential services of government could not be provided without taxation. The public good could not be advanced without the constitutional provision of "eminent domain"—condemnation of private property for public use. But there is a limit, and we must guard against undue and unjust "taking" of private property or oppressive taxation. (We in this area are not oppressively taxed by comparison to the rest of the nation.)

We believe our system of government is a dynamic system with inherent conflicting interests. Just as we constantly must balance citizens' rights to fair trials against the essential need for a free press, so we must balance necessary governmental restrictions to property ownership with the rights of individuals to own and use their property.

We urge Mr. Jones and all other citizens to protect their right to own property with their most fundamental of all rights—the right to vote.

A Post Mortem

By ROBERT C. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Cyrus Vance, vacationing in Florida, was not told the National Security Council was meeting April 11 to consider the ill-fated plan to rescue the 53 American hostages in Iran, sources say.

Vance resigned as secretary of state because of his opposition to the decision, tentatively made at that meeting, to go ahead with the rescue effort.

"Because you could not support my decision regarding the rescue operation in Iran, you have made the correct decision to resign," President Carter said Monday in a handwritten letter accepting Vance's resignation. "I know this is a matter of principle with you, and I respect the reasons you have expressed to me."

Vance's deputy, Warren Christopher, was named acting secretary of state, and led the list of potential successors. There were no immediate resignations from Vance's top aides after he asked them "to stay and support the acting secretary and the president."

Apparently, the key meeting in the chain of events that led to Vance's resignation was the one that took place that April 11.

Vance was taking a brief, long-planned vacation, and Christopher represented him at the meeting. The sources, asking not to be identified, said neither Vance nor the State Department was informed that the rescue plan would be on the agenda.

Strength For Today

THE ONLY SECURITY
Benjamin Franklin once wrote a very moving letter to a bereaved friend about death.

"A man is not completely born until he is dead. Why then should we grieve that a new child is born among the immortals, a new member added to their happy society? We are spirits. That bodies should be lent us, while they can afford us pleasure, assist us in acquiring knowledge, or in doing good to our fellow creatures, is a kind and benevolent act of God.

"When they become unfit for these purposes, and afford us pain instead of pleasure, instead of an aid they become an encumbrance, and answer none of the intentions for which they are given, it is equally kind and benevolent that a way is provided by which we may get rid of them. Death is that way.

"He who quits the body parts with all pain and diseases to which it is liable, and everything that is capable of making him suffer."

Reflects As Well As Affects

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — It may not be totally accurate to say that as General Motors goes so goes the economy, but you can't dismiss the notion either. GM is big, pervasive, powerful, influential.

It does have an effect, and it reflects too. What happens to the country or a section thereof is likely to affect GM. And what GM does is likely to be stamped on an area's and the country's economy.

It has that effect because, for example, in the past three years it has sold 27.5 million vehicles, earned nearly $10 billion, employed an average of about 800,000 workers and paid them $50 billion.

That's the beginning. In these same three years more than half of GM's total revenues of more than $175 billion went to pay suppliers — in so many areas and industries it would take a catalogue to list them.

So how is GM doing? Not so good. Sales have fallen, profits have plunged, and layoffs are increasing. More than 220,000 blue collar workers and 20,000 white collar workers have been cut or laid off.

The problems could continue too, because GM isn't fully attuned to the market. Between now and 1985, it must spend $3 billion to meet fuel-efficiency goals and the public's demand for more miles to the gallon.

GM has problems, and so has the economy of the United States. And the outlook, short-term, isn't very good.

Whatever is likely to be counted an improvement — less inflation, and lower interest rates, for example — is likely to be only the shiny side of the coin, with the dull side showing less activity and fewer jobs.

The number of seers who feel we can escape a recession is dwindling, and some of those who foresaw a brief and mild one have slowly edged over into the group that expects it to be long, deep and destructive.

Like GM, the rest of the economy has a lot of adjusting to do. Bills to be paid, for example, and savings accounts to be rebuilt. And so far in the history of mankind, nobody has found a pleasant way to manage it.

The decline in the current strength of General Motors, the country's and the world's largest manufacturer, gives a reading on the weakness of the 1980 economy and what can be done to make sure it's corrected.

It's big plans to retool, to modernize factories and to understand and adjust to the reality of the marketplace, suggests what everyone else has to do too.

Volunteer Program Ongoing

The Juvenile Court Volunteer Program of the Third Judicial District is in its third year of operation without the availability of local, state or federal funds, according to its director, Mrs. Brenda H. Teel.

"Our volunteers have devoted many hours of their time and resources for the essential growth of the youth in this area by working with them on a one-to-one basis," Mrs. Teel said. "They have proven that our community's greatest resource is its people."

She said special recognition should be given to the following volunteers: Jeffrey Vaughn Ward, ECU student; Jay Yeager, ECU student; Henry Peszko of Voice of America; Tony Gray, counselor in the Agnes Fullilove Community School Program; Bobby Ray Taylor, ECU student; Stephen El'Amin; Abdul Muhammed of the Greenville Dental Laboratory; and Carl People, Holiday Innkeeper. She said Bill McDonald initiated this volunteer program several years ago and continues to provide moral support for it.

A 150-YEAR-OLD STILL... has been donated to the Pitt County Fair permanent farm memorabilia collection, according to Les Turnage, fair chairman, who brought the heavy copper distilling vat to Pitt County yesterday. Turnage said the still is a gift from S. E. Nixon of Sunbury in Gates County to the people of Pitt County. It is given in memory of

Nixon's grandfather, Tim Lassiter (1822-1897) who used the still mainly to make apple brandy for his own use. The cap and worm from the still are missing, Turnage said, adding that he'd like to find these components to make the display item complete. (Reflector Photo By Carol Tyer)

Proposes Lower River To Raise Old Ironclad

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — The next step in salvaging the Confederate ironclad warship CSS Georgia will be to shut off the Savannah River, according to a Texas archaeologist.

"The only option is to turn the river off. That means some sort of impoundment structure has to be built on the site," said Ervan Garrison, who has led a team of divers from Texas A&M University.

An impoundment structure, or cofferdam, would allow divers to work in clear, still water instead of the muddy, swift-flowing river current.

"It's a question of being able to do your job without a blindfold on. We've done the best we can so far, but it isn't enough," said Garrison, who with the Texas A&M divers and divers from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers finished their field work on the wreck site during the weekend.

The divers, who have salvaged 14 shells for the Georgia's big guns during nearly two years of work on the wreck site, are trying to determine whether the wreck can or should be raised.

The wreck is lying adjacent to the Savannah River shipping channel. It has been struck by dredges working on the channel. When the channel is widened, the wreck will have to be moved or destroyed, according to the Corps.

In their two years of work, divers have learned that "no part of the hull that we can see is above the silt line. All that we can see, all that we have mapped in, is all superstructure — great chunks of superstructure," Garrison said in a telephone interview from his College Station, Tex., home.

"The top is pretty well battered, but we're talking about pieces 30 to 40 feet long, three feet thick, still carrying her iron," he said.

Divers can't be sure in what condition the hull is under the silt "because we've got three feet of silt (the collapsed ironclad casement) in our way."

Next Garrison's crew must write reports to the Corps of Engineers, and it must ask Congress for funds to build the cofferdam. The money won't be available until at least fiscal 1982, which begins Oct. 1, 1981, he said.

Until then, divers will continue to do work on the perimeter of the wreck and scour the channel for items — such as the shells — which have fallen out of the wreck.

There definitely are more shells, and perhaps furniture and other items, Garrison said.

Correct Accounting By A&T Univ. Is Ordered

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — William C. Friday, president of the 16-campus University of North Carolina system, has directed that accounting deficiencies at North Carolina A&T State University be corrected.

The state auditor's office reported that financial records at the school are so bad they cannot be audited and it cannot be determined if "there was anything criminal going on."

State Auditor Henry Bridges' office said the situation demanded immediate action. The office found bills unpaid and "vendors were complaining" in some instances, and other cases where "contractors were overpaid."

Friday also asked A&T Chancellor Lewis C. Dowdy to resubmit a request to the state Budge Office for a transfer of funds to allow the school to hire enough temporary employees "to bring the accounts up to date, so that the financial records may be made acceptable for audit."

The state auditor's office report cited past-due bills totaling $690,596.58. The report said, "Adequate sources of funding to retire the above is questionable, and our examination does not reveal an adequate approach to this most pressing problem."

Friday said that since Bridges notified him last fall the A&T records were "in an unacceptable condition for audit," his office had tried to help. He added that Bridges' report "indicates that little was accomplished" to improve matters.

The auditors' report said the lack of proper record keeping could threaten some federal aid. It said financial aid to A&T from the federal government totaled more than $3 million for 1978-79.

"One of the important conditions required (by the government) is that these funds be expended and accounted for in accordance with the established regulations. Failure to adhere to this requirement is sufficient to jeopardize the university's participation in the student aid programs," the report said.

Friday said the UNC Board of Governors has authorized a review and evaluation of several institutions within the UNC system, including A&T.

point, said Monday that the administration had feared calling Vance back to Washington for the meeting would jeopardize the plan's secrecy.

President Carter tentatively approved the rescue attempt at the meeting and Vance did not find out about the decision until he returned to Washington April 14, the sources said. He had several opportunities to dissuade the president during the next few days, including another meeting of the NSC. But Carter's course was set.

Vance, according to spokesman Hodding Carter, "communed with himself" about the situation for several days and sent Carter a handwritten letter of resignation April 21.

"We are seeking more volunteers and attempting to utilize our human resources to the fullest," Mrs. Teel said. She invited interested persons to call her at 752-1811.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected in the forecast period for the St. Lawrence Valley and northern New England. Showers are due in the Southwest and cool weather predicted for

By The Associated Press
Variably cloudy weather will continue while low pressure centered north of the state will remain stationary for the next few days or so. This system, with its moist westerly breezes, will keep cloudy cool conditions over most of the state. This unstable air also may kick off a few showers.
Monday across the state skies were variably cloudy. Afternoon readings were in the 60s except for 70s along the coast and in the southeast. The warmest area was Cape Hatteras with 76 degrees.

Last night and this morning skies cleared in the east. Cloudiness lingered over the mountains. Temperatures this morning were in the 40s with 50s along the coast.
Precipitation for the past 24 hours at regular reporting stations were all under one quarter of an inch with the exception of Cape Hatteras which recorded 2.29 mostly during the early hours Monday.

Variably cloudy skies will dominate the Tarheel weather picture through Wednesday with scattered showers. Highs will be in the 60s with 70s in the southeast. Lows tonight will be in the 40s with 50s along the coast.
Cloudy conditions will continue on Thursday. By Friday, however, fair skies will again prevail. Temperatures should also be on the rise.

Record Ford Motor Co. Loss

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — Citing inflation and the slumping American car market, Ford Motor Co. reported a record $164 million first-quarter loss and said high interest rates, increasing energy costs and the weakening economy could cause more problems later in 1980.
The No. 2 automaker said Monday its second consecutive quarter in the red resulted from a $473 million deficit in domestic operations, its worst loss from North American business ever.

That was about the loss some have predicted for tottering Chrysler Corp., which has yet to announce its first quarter results, and was substantially more than industry analysts had expected from Ford.

In last year's first quarter, Ford earned $595 million, or $4.97 a share worldwide. Profits in that period totaled $220 million in the United States and $375 million from foreign business.
The loss this quarter amounted to $1.36 a share.

Ford's worst previous three-month-period loss came in the fourth quarter of 1979 when the automaker lost $109 million world-wide. The previous record loss from domestic operations was $299 million in the third quarter last year.
Lower volume, increased marketing costs, more small vehicles in the product mix and the impact of inflation were responsible for the record loss, Chairman Phillip Caldwell and President Donald E. Petersen said in a statement.

Revenue for the latest quarter fell 24 percent to $9.61 billion from $12.6 billion in the same period last year.
Ford has closed two assembly plants permanently this year and imposed heavy layoffs, including 6,900 white-collar workers. Ford said the actions, similar to those taken by other U.S. automakers, would result in annual savings of $1.5 billion by the end of 1981.
Ford is the third U.S. automaker to report first-quarter results. General Motors Corp. profits fell 85 percent from the first quarter of 1979, to $155 million. American Motors Corp. earnings declined 96 percent to $1.2 million.
Ford's foreign profit in the latest quarter was given a boost of $91 million from a tax treaty with Great Britain that gave Ford a refund of half the taxes paid on its behalf in Britain since 1975.
Before the new treaty, Britain, to avoid double taxation of profits, gave refunds to British shareholders for taxes paid on their behalf by the companies. Overseas shareholders could not get refunds. Now, overseas shareholders get a refund for half the amount.

The small vehicles that have become popular as gasoline prices rise generally carry smaller profit margins. In addition, domestic auto sales were down 21 percent in the first three months of 1980 as compared to the year before.
Other factors, including the probable recession, are "expected to aggravate Ford's losses at least in the near term," Ford said.
Helping to offset the domestic loss was a $309 million, or $2.58 per share, profit in foreign operations. But this was 17.9 percent below the same period in 1979, a decrease attributed to reduced sales.

Annual Ramp Fete Staged

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The ramp, that odorous mountain vegetable which is related to onions and garlic, drew some 4,500 persons to the mountains during the weekend to relish the ramp's lingering taste and praise the vegetable.
The occasion was the 60th annual Haywood County Ramp Festival and those in attendance included Secretary of State Thad Eure.

Eure, 80, drove nearly 300 miles to attend the festival as he has for the past 47 years. One reason is that he is firmly convinced "that eating ramps every spring of the year is the basis for my good health."
"We eat the ramp to get the impurities out of the body," Eure told the crowd. "It opens the pores of the skin. After you eat a ramp, the next day, under your arms, between your legs, your toes, your breath, the whole odor is terrible. That's because the impurities are oozing out of your body."
A number of other politicians were drawn to the festival although campaign speeches are prohibited.

American legionnaires sponsoring the festival had dug more than 30 bushels of ramps, and the menu included eggs with ramps and meat loaf with ramps. For more timid eaters, 600 pounds of barbecued chicken and 600 pounds of country ham were provided.

Traffic Plan Is Now In Use

City Engineer Ron Sewell announced that in cooperation with the N.C. Department of Transportation's request to flash traffic signals whenever possible, the city is flashing all downtown traffic signals that are on the city's master system from 1:15-6:30 a.m.
Sewell said the implementation of this process should amount to a savings of approximately $1,000 annually.
"We would also like to request that motorists exercise extreme caution during the hours designated for signal flashing," the city engineer said.

Mondale Here?

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Vice President Walter Mondale will visit North Carolina on Friday to campaign for his boss, President Carter.
Carter campaign officials have called a news conference today to announce details of the trip, which will come four days before Carter meets Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., in the state's presidential primary.
Democratic sources say the visit probably will include a stop in Eastern North Carolina, possibly Greenville.
Kennedy is not expected to visit the state, but several family members are expected to campaign for him in North Carolina.
First lady Rosalynn Carter was scheduled to visit the state last Saturday, but Carter officials canceled the trip because of the Iranian crisis.

Many Ask For Baby In Ditch

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — A baby boy found in a drainage ditch "needs to have a family," a police officer says — and adoption offers are pouring in.
The infant was 2½ hours old when found Sunday following an anonymous tip from a woman police believed to be the mother. The boy was in stable condition Monday.
Social services agencies reported a flood of calls from citizens offering to care for the infant. But social workers said placement would be handled through normal foster care and adoptive procedures.

Mount St. Helens Said 'Bulging' On One Side

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — A mile-wide slab on the north face of Mount St. Helens has bulged 15 to 25 feet in a few days, increasing the odds of devastating avalanches from the volcano, scientists say.
And while scientists from the U.S. Geological Survey are cautious about interpreting measurements taken in the last few days, they add that the recent changes also could forecast a violent lava eruption.

resulting from instability because of faults, Johnson said.
Christiansen said it was all but inconceivable that the entire mile-wide slab of mountain, rock and ice would break loose and crash into Spirit Lake, six miles away. "Many small ones are much more likely than one big one," he said.
Johnson said a mile-wide slide "would be a pretty extreme scenario, but it could happen."
"It could be a catastrophic release of a very large volume, in which case I wouldn't want to own a house up there, or it might be a piecemeal bit-by-bit collapse that would be dangerous primarily on the flanks of the volcano," he added.
"Many avalanches are occurring up there right now," Christiansen said. He said none Monday reached below timberline at about the 4,700-foot level.
Dwight Crandell, supervisor of the USGS team, said any avalanche involving the entire mile-wide slab would build rapidly to a speed of 180 miles an hour, wipe out everything between the peak and Spirit Lake and create a huge wave when it hit the water.
The latest earthquakes included three of 4.2 magnitude on the Richter scale within a 10-minute span Monday morning and one of 4.8 Sunday night, said Matthew Stadler at the UW seismology office.

signaling the impending eruption.
Until this weekend, deformities on the north flank appeared to be confined to Forsythe Glacier, which has risen 300 feet since the eruptions began March 27.

Scholarship Is In Nursing

Nancy Peacock, granddaughter of Mrs. Charles A. White of Greenville, is the recipient of the Dean's Honor Scholarship in Nursing to Vanderbilt University.
Miss Peacock is a senior at Girl's Preparatory School in Chattanooga, Tenn., where she is editor of the school annual, member of the National Honor Society, the Spanish Honor Society, and the Glee Club, and president of her church youth group. She is the daughter of Ward and Barbara White Peacock of Chattanooga. Her mother is a Greenville native.

Meanwhile, seismologists at the University of Washington reported the mountain was again shaken by strong quakes and state officials in Olympia considered closing areas near the southwest Washington peak to property owners.
Bob Christiansen, USGS geophysicist, said Monday the mile-wide slab around the Goat Rock area near the 7,500-foot level of the 9,677-foot peak had moved 20 feet to the north-northwest in the past year.
"As much as 15 to 25 feet of displacement has occurred between Thursday and Sunday," he added.
Besides the bulging, Christiansen said instruments had recorded increasing tilt to the north or northwest over the past several days.
Bulging and tilting shows that the rock "is unstable and moving outward," said USGS volcanologist David Johnson.
There is "a great possibility" the bulge is caused by molten rock pushing up the volcano, which could signal a lava eruption in the making but also could indicate merely "ground deformation"

He said only two other quakes of that strength or more had been recorded since tremors in the vicinity of the mountain began increasing March 22,

Scott Short Of Funds But Says Not Discouraged

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former Gov. Bob Scott lamented his campaign's lack of money for television advertising Monday, but said he isn't discouraged by reports that he's been outspent by Gov. Jim Hunt and both candidates for lieutenant governor.

Reports received Monday by the state Board of Elections showed that Hunt has spent about $1 million so far on his re-election campaign while Scott has paid out $144,731.

According to the reports, Hunt's committee has received $1.2 million in contributions while Scott's campaign effort has garnered $151,870.

In addition, the reports showed that Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and House Speaker Carl Stewart, candidates for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor, both spent more and received more in contributions than did Scott.

Green's report showed his campaign has cost $363,769 while he received $205,546 in contributions. The Stewart report showed the Gastonia attorney has raised $415,165 in contributions to offset spending of $419,457.

Scott, campaigning in the New Bern area Monday, told supporters he is not discouraged although spending reports show "what we're up against."

"If money could buy an election, there's no question he'd have it. But I don't believe he can do that," Scott said.

"I'm not discouraged because I thought all along we'd have somewhere around $150,000," Scott said. "I'd like to have something closer to $250,000."

The former governor did say he wished he had another $100,000 for television advertising to combat Hunt's $130,000 blitz of television commercials.

Scott has been able to afford only a small amount of television time.

Stephanie Bass, public relations director for the Hunt campaign, said Hunt's spending total is about the same as at this point in the governor's 1976 campaign. She said "that's not bad" considering inflation.

Joe Grimsley, Hunt campaign director, pointed out that since the first of this year, 14,230 persons had contributed an average of $36.82 to the Hunt cause. He said this indicates "how broad-based the grassroots support is for the progressive programs the governor has put forth."

Some of those contributors included Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth, $3,000; Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch, $1,500; Correction Secretary Amos E. Reed, $1,100, and the wealthy Hanes family of Winston-Salem, $4,500.

The Scott contributions included only two that reached $3,000. One of these was from State Sen. Ralph Scott of Haw River, uncle of the former governor.

Other spending reports included:

—Secretary of State Thad Eure who reported his re-election campaign had cost $9,288.79 while contributions totaled $375.

—Kenn Brown, who is running for the Democratic nomination for insurance commissioner, listed expenditures of $13,271.54 and contributions of $2,596.90.

—Jim Long, another candidate for the nomination for insurance commissioner, reported spending $35,502.49 while contributions totaled $20,150.96.

—Roy Rabon, the third Democrat seeking to unseat Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, listed contributions of $10,548.29 and expenses totaling $8,201.49.

In other campaign developments Monday, Republican gubernatorial candidate I. Beverly Lake Jr. accused Hunt and state AFL-CIO President Wilbur Hobby of "trying to create a smokescreen" by calling a Lake television commercial possibly "libelous."

"I challenge Mr. Hunt and Mr. Hobby to disprove the facts stated in my committee's commercial," said Lake, adding that a threat to sue over the commercial is an attempt "to intimidate the television stations."

Lake said the commercial quotes The News and Observer of Raleigh as saying that more than $1 million in federal job training funds had gone to Hobby enterprises since Hunt has been governor and Howard

Lee has been secretary of Natural Resources and Community Affairs.

CHURCH OF GOD IN CHRIST FINDS ACCUSATION AGAINST LOCAL ELDER FALSE

An investigation into the matter of an accusation against Rev. C.D. McNeill, local pastor and administrative assistant to the Bishop, L.B. Davenport, has been proven false.

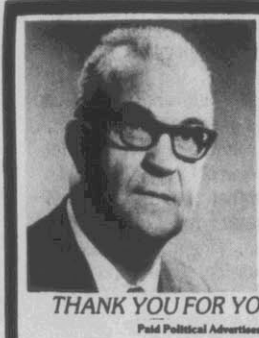

The presiding Bishop of the Diocese of Greater North Carolina Church of God in Christ met with a special session of the Elder's Council on Monday, April 21, 1980 and their findings were as follows:

The character of Rev. C.D. McNeill as a Christian gentleman, an upstanding citizen in the Kinston community and in the General Church of God in Christ proves all accusations false.

Such rumors are detrimental to one's reputation and name for the Bible hath said "A GOOD NAME IS RATHER TO BE CHOSEN THAN GREAT RICHES".

Program Grads Enter At Pitt CC

Coordinator for the Learning Center at Pitt Community College Joy Sasser announced today that 192 graduates of the General Educational Development Test (GED) are now enrolled in Pitt Community College programs during the spring quarter. Three hundred thirty-six diplomas were issued by the State Board of Education last year. Mrs. Sasser's department administers the GED tests.

A few of the areas chosen by the graduates at PCC are industrial maintenance, paralegal, human services technology, career option nursing, data processing, and secretarial science.

"From our follow-up studies of our GED graduates we find they do not choose the easiest programs. Through counseling and self discipline received during their studies in the Learning Center, they begin to ascertain their own potential and ability to succeed," said Sasser. "This important lesson stays with them throughout their course of study, matures them further in their world of work," she added.

"The Learning Center has become a vital part of Pitt Community College. The complete meaning of the open-door policy is furthered through the influence of the Learning Center," continued Sasser. "Our research shows that many adults who are GED graduates have the reputation of being excellent students as they pursue studies for their careers. We at PCC are proud to be a part of the GED program."

Camporee Set This Weekend

The East Carolina Council will hold its annual camporee this weekend at Camp Bonner, located near Washington.

Area scout officials said that this year's event, designated as a "jambo-campo," will be attended for the first time by scouts from the Tuscarora Council as well as East Carolina Council participants.

With the visiting scouts from the Tuscarora Council, which includes the area from Goldsboro southwest to Clinton, overall attendance this year is expected to reach some 5,000, it was noted.

Cubs Scouts will be invited to take part in Saturday activities for the first time this year, the scout officials mentioned. Registration for the Cubs will begin at 10 a.m. and a Marine Corps helicopter demonstration is planned for 1:30 p.m.

Scouts at the 1980 camporee will compete on the patrol level against a "normal" score with the objective of earnings points for ribbons. Some 21 events will be staged and patrols will enter a certain number of events in their qualification efforts.

Scouts will arrive Friday afternoon and depart for home following church services on Sunday morning.

M. H. Pridgen of Rocky Mount is overall camporee chief this year, it was noted, with Joe Goodson of Greenville serving as chief of the Gold Area, which includes Pitt County scouts.

This year's event will be dedicated to Vernon Sechrist of Rocky Mount, who is serving his 50th year as a scoutmaster. Sechrist will serve as camp judge this year.

The news background provided additional evidence of falling interest rates, but a substantial economic slowdown developing at the same time.

A few banks cut their prime lending rates to 13 1/2 percent today, matching a reduction in the basic charge on blue-chip loans posted Monday by Morgan Guaranty Trust of New York.

Analysts meanwhile were predicting that the government's monthly report on the index of leading economic indicators, due out Wednesday, would show a sharp decline.

Today's early prices included Texaco, up 1/4 at 36; Hughes Tool, up 1/4 at 58, and Chrysler, up 1/4 at 7.

On Monday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 1.88 to 805.46.

Gainers outnumbered losers by a 9-5 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 30.6 million shares, against 28.59 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose 28 to 60.01.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .55 at 249.86.

Brother Killed In Arizona Accident

A Baptist missionary who was the brother of a Greenville man was killed Saturday, April 19, in a wreck near Tucson, Ariz.

Dr. Alman T. Jackson, brother of Willard R. Jackson of Greenville, died when he lost control of the flatbed truck he was driving in an effort to avoid a dead steer and other vehicles blocked by the carcass. Both he and his passenger, a 35-year-old native of the Baja California town of Tecate, Mex., where Dr. Alman served as a missionary dentist, were killed. The truck was loaded with pottery and the two men were transporting it to market.

Willard Jackson, a Greenville Utilities employee, said his brother has been living in Mexico for many years, serving the poor residents of that city as dentist and minister. "We were raised in Harnett County," he said. "But when Alman got out of the Navy when World War II ended, he was home only a few months. Then he went back out there. He got his dental education under the G. I. Bill in California and settled in Mexico to serve the Lord. I didn't see him very often, though I did visit his home and his crude church a few times. His whole life was there. That's where he's being buried."

Jackson attended the funeral, which he said a Mexican woman told him was the best attended she'd seen in Tecate in years. "He was well-loved by the people there," he said.

Dr. Jackson, 57, is survived, in addition to his brother here, by his wife, Elva Jackson; a son, Alman Jackson of Tecate; four daughters, Miss Tanya Jackson of Tecate, Mrs. Mary Bender of Humble, Tex., Mrs. Ann Irwin of San Diego, Calif. and Mrs. Eva Mills of Oak Harbor, Wash.; his mother, Mrs. Ethel Jackson of Oceanside, Calif.; a brother, James Jackson of Phoenix, Ariz.; two sisters, Mrs. Virginia Hucks of Oceanside, Calif. and Mrs. Kay Massey of Grimes, Calif.; and five grandchildren.

Favor Rule On Energy

David Duffus, chairman of the Greenville Energy Commission, announced that the board, in a unanimous vote, recommended that local subdivision regulations include statements encouraging energy conservation and alternate energy resources development.

Duffus said that discussion at the recent GEC meeting centered around proposed provisions in local regulations that would allow energy related considerations to be included in the design of residential developments.

The chairman said it was noted by commission members that solar access protection, energy-conscious site planning and design, efficient street systems, alternative transportation facilities, and other options should be encouraged to facilitate energy efficient land use.

Bobby Roberson, city planning director, reported that a public hearing on the complete subdivision regulations has been set by the City Council for its May 8 meeting.

The GEC will meet at 8 p.m. on the third Monday of each month in the board room of the Greenville Utilities Building.

Prime Rate Slowly Dips

NEW YORK (AP) — While interest rates in the nation's money markets are plunging, the prime lending rate charged by major banks is moving down much more slowly.

Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, the nation's fifth-largest commercial bank, cut its rate a full percentage point Monday from the 19 1/2 percent rate it posted just 11 days ago.

Most other major banks did not follow Morgan Guaranty's lead, maintaining their 19 to 19 1/2 percent rates. The prime is the rate charged by banks on loans to their most credit-worthy corporate customers.

"They are using the high prime as a way of pricing themselves out of the loan market," said Mark Biderman, an analyst for Oppenheimer & Co. Inc., a New York investment firm.

Biderman said banks are keeping their rates high in order to discourage business borrowing. Other analysts said banks also are looking for ways to boost profits, which suffered when interest rates rose sharply.

Banks want to hold down the growth in loan volume because the Federal Reserve Board told them on March 14 to limit loan growth to between 6 percent and 9 percent for the year.

Other short-term rates have fallen rapidly in recent weeks, reducing the cost of funds for banks. Large 90-day bank certificates of deposit, for example, were quoted in early April at 18 percent but have fallen below 14 percent in recent days. These deposits, in amounts of $100,000 and up, are an important source of funds for banks.

Try Budgie To Perk Up

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A pet for loneliness is like chicken soup for a cold — "it can't hurt and it may help," a veterinarian says.

Dr. Leo K. Bustad, dean of Washington State University's college of veterinary medicine, says loneliness may be the most deadly disease facing America's elderly and the best prescription is often just to be loved and needed by a pet.

The featured lecturer at the American Animal Hospital Association's annual meeting, which ended here Friday, cited a study in England, where elderly people who lived alone were divided into three groups: each member of one group received an Australian parrot known as a budgie, another group was given begonias and the third received nothing at all.

"After five months, the general attitude and self-image of those who had budgies was much improved," Bustad said. "Begonias were better than nothing, but not nearly as good as budgies."

Thompson Gets Top Women's Honor

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
East Carolina University
star basketball player Rosie Thompson was honored last night as the "Most Dedicated Athlete" as the Student Advisory Council for Intercollegiate Athletics (SACIA) held its annual Women's Sports Banquet in Mendenhall Center.

Thompson, who wound up her career at East Carolina this spring, was an outstanding basketball player for four years, finishing her career with over 2,000 points, scoring more than any other ECU player, male or female, before her. She has received numerous honors over the course of her career, including All-State. She was selected as the Most Valuable Player on the team last year when the award was initiated.

Awards were also presented to seniors on each of the women's athletic teams at the university. These included Thompson in basketball; Kathy Zwigard in field hockey; Mary Bryan Carlyle, Jan McVeigh and Cindy Meekins in softball; Lucy Weckerling in swimming, Cookie McPhatter in track, and LaVonda Duncan and Joy Forbes in volleyball.

Coordinator of Women's Athletics Laurie Arrants served as the chief speaker for the occasion, urging the athletes to let their voices be heard off the field as well as on.

"We must redefine our goals," Arrants said. "We have to move off the court and onto the field of politics and speak our minds. We don't deserve things just because we are women, but because we are athletes who have worked hard to get what is rightfully ours. We have trained hard and are getting the recognition we deserve."

Arrants said, however, that one of the things that saddened her most was the lack of pride in the traditions of the university. "We have been winners in the past, and we continue to be winners."

Arrants said that while support has been growing for women's athletics, it must continue to grow. She also gave her support to a single governing body for athletics for both men and women. A power struggle is now beginning between the NCAA, which controls men's sports and the AIAW, which handles women's sports.

Arrants said that while she favors one group to head both programs, she feels that the AIAW has a number of rules and ideas that should be carried over into whatever comes from a merger—when it finally comes about.

"Right now, we are doing what we have been accusing the men of for years: pushing out the other sex. We have to unite, and not be separate. We don't have a separate athletic department for men and women at East Carolina and we get along fine."

Arrants concluded by urging the women to get involved and help the athletic program move forward.

Various awards were presented by some of the individual sports.

In basketball, Laurie Sykes was named the Most Valuable Player; Mary Denkler was the Outstanding Freshman; Kathy Riley and Lydia Rountree tied for Outstanding Offensive Player; Thompson was the Best Defensive Player; Marcia Girven was the Best All-Around, and Rountree was presented a plaque as the newest member of the 1,000-Point Club.

In gymnastics, Susan McKnight was Most Valuable;

Elizabeth Jackson, MVP runner-up; and Annie Leoschke was Most Improved.

In softball, Carlyle was Most Valuable; Shirley Brown and Ginger Rothermel tied for Best Fielder; Mitzi Davis was Best All-Around; Mary Powell was Best Infielder; Riley won Best Batting Average; Cynthia Sheperd was Top Newcomer; and Yvonne Williams won Outstanding Outfielder.

In tennis, Debbie Christine was named Most Valuable; Hannah Adams, Most Improved; and Laura Redford, winner of the Ruffie Award (for poise on the court).

Six Are All-State

Six members of the East Carolina women's softball team have been selected to the All-State team, it was announced today.

The Lady Pirates captured the Division I State Championship in Graham this past weekend, and will be one of two Division I teams playing the overall State Championship this weekend, also in Graham.

Selected to the team are: Mary Bryan Carlyle, pitcher; Shirley Brown, first base; Ginger Rothermel, second base; Yvonne Williams and Kathy Riley, outfield; and Mary Powell shared shortstop honors, tying with a Campbell player.

The six players from ECU chosen represented over half of the 11-woman team selected.

Dave Kingman didn't hit any home runs Monday night but he was a big man for the Chicago Cubs anyway...and not just because he stands 6-foot-6.

The tall left fielder, known for his towering homers and wild-swinging strikeouts, threw out St. Louis' speedy Garry Templeton trying to score from second base on a single by

Keith Hernandez in the third inning. That preserved a 1-1 tie and it remained that way until the ninth when Kingman slapped a pitch from Bob Sykes into center field for a tie-breaking RBI single that triggered a three-run uprising as the Cubs defeated the Cardinals 4-2.

"He's the complete ballplayer now," Manager Preston Gomez said of Kingman. "He beats you with his bat, he can run, he can throw and he can field." Only three games were played in the majors while four were rained out — Atlanta-San Diego in the National League and New York-Baltimore, Boston-Chicago and Kansas City-Toronto in the American.

In AL action, the Oakland A's made it 5-for-5 over California by blanking the Angels 8-0 while the Seattle Mariners defeated the Minnesota Twins 6-4.

As usual, Kingman wasn't available to the media but other Cubs didn't mind talking about him.

"When the game's on the line and he's up, you better watch him," said relief ace Bruce Sutter, who picked up his sixth save. "When he first came up, he used to swing at everything. He's cut down on his strike zone. He knows what he wants up there now."

Ivan DeJesus opened the Cubs' ninth with a walk and Bill Buckner bunted safely before Kingman singled. Jerry Martin then greeted Donnie Moore with an RBI double and Tim Lincecum added a sacrifice fly.

A's 8, Angels 0
Tony Armas, Dwayne Murphy and Dave Remy homered Monday night to support the Rick Langford's seven-hitter. Langford, 2-0, was making only his second start of the season and struck out four.

Three members of the Rampant team broke par, carding two-under 70's. They were Pat Dye Jr., Jack Mann and Greg House. Steve Woodward was the fourth scorer for the Rampants with a 73. Tom Brewer Jr. at 76 and Scott Wilson at 82, did not count on the team score.

match Monday afternoon.

The Chargers shot a fine 312 to edge the Jaguars' 316. Wayne Country Day was at 331, while Southern Nash was in at 333. D.H. Conley, in its first season of golf, shot a 442.

This year the Eastern Carolina Conference golf champion will be based on total number of strokes in conference meets. With two meets to go Farmville leads by 18 strokes over Ayden-Grifton. Southern Nash is 37 strokes back.

Horner May Be Disqualified

ATLANTA (AP) — All it takes is Bowie Kuhn's signature, and Bob Horner will be barred from professional baseball.

"The commissioner's office indicated they will wire approval" of the Atlanta Braves' request that their slugging third baseman be put on the disqualified list, spokesman Wayne Minshew said Monday night.

That means Horner will forfeit his estimated $2,000 a day salary for refusing to obey a Braves' order to report to their farm team at Richmond, Va., to get his game back together. It also means Horner cannot be offered a contract by another club or be given his outright release by the Braves, Minshew said.

Kuhn said during the week-end he approved of the Braves' sending Horner to Richmond.

Horner was hitting .059 with no homers and no RBI, and the Braves were 1-9 on April 21 when the Braves ordered him to report to Richmond.

There, said owner Ted Turner, Horner was to find the swing that produced 33 home runs and a .314 average last year.

Horner wouldn't do it. "The money just doesn't mean that much," said Horner, who stayed at his suburban north Atlanta home. "It's not like I ever had it to begin with and am losing it. I never had it."

"Anyway, money is not at issue. This thing is a lot bigger than that. It's a matter of what's right and wrong, and there's no way this thing is right."

Horner and Executive Director Ed Miller of the Major League Players Association said the assignment to Richmond violates terms of Horner's contract and that he will ask for arbitration, requesting that he be declared a free agent.

Umpire Shot At Softball Game

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — An umpire was shot to death, a player badly beaten with a bat and a player-coach arrested for murder after a disputed call during a softball game led to a brawl.

The umpire, Raymond L. Dawkins, 52, of Greenville, apparently was not the official who made the questioned call, according to a spokesman for the Greenville County Sheriff's Department.

Willie Lee Spurgeon, 44, was arrested at his Fountain Inn home Monday morning and charged with Dawkins' murder, according to Lt. Earl Barnett. No bond was set.

Investigators were still trying Monday to piece together what happened at Saturday night's game between Fountain Inn and host Laurel Creek.

According to Barnett, the melee started when an umpire made a "bad call" and an unidentified man ran onto the field with a knife.

A shot was fired — investigators didn't know by whom — that struck Spurgeon in the buttocks and split the seam of his pants. Spurgeon, who was batting, began firing a .22-caliber pistol with one hand while holding up his pants with the other.

Between eight and 15 shots were fired by an undetermined number of persons, according to Barnett.

Ballistics tests showed the bullet which killed Dawkins was fired from Spurgeon's pistol.

Meanwhile, someone attacked James E. Thompson, 36, of Greenville, with a baseball bat, beating him in the head and shoulders. He was listed in satisfactory condition at Greenville General Hospital with head, face and shoulder injuries.

Authorities said Thompson was playing second base and had pulled a gun during the melee. His sister, Debbie Carter, said Thompson did not play softball and was standing on the sidelines.

She said Thompson's jaw, nose and shoulder bones were broken and he had not fully regained consciousness.

"He's in and out," she said. "He's hurt very, very bad. ... They're going to do surgery on him in two or three days. He's not stable enough now."

As for pulling the gun, she said, "some say he did and some say he didn't."

Barnett said, "We don't understand what the call was or who it was against. The beginnings of this thing are very hazy."

As Expected, Billy Sims Is First Choice In Pro Football's Draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Sims, the exceptional halfback from Oklahoma, was picked — as expected — by the Detroit Lions today, the No.1 selection in the National Football League's annual college player draft.

The Lions, who shared with San Francisco the worst record in 1979 at 2-14, officially picked the 24-year-old Sims 3½ minutes after NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle called the draft to order.

Sims, the Heisman Trophy winner as a junior and the runner-up to Southern California's Charles White in the balloting for the prestigious award as a senior last year, has 4.5 speed and punishing strength to go with his 5-foot-11, 210-pound frame.

Whether he will, in fact, sign with Detroit still is open to question. His agent, Jerry Argovitz of Houston, and the Lions' management have thus far been far apart in contract talks and Argovitz has talked about taking his client to Canada.

That was the route taken by Ohio State linebacker Tom Cousineau, the NFL's No.1 draft pick a year ago when he and the Buffalo Bills couldn't agree on a contract.

While the San Francisco 49ers were pondering their selection, the second in the draft, Sims was ringed by photographers. Two minutes later, he departed — again to cheers — for a news conference.

The 49ers then swapped their pick to the New York Jets for the Jets' two first-round choices, Nos.13 and 20 in the opening round. The latter was obtained from Denver in the trade that sent quarterback Matt Robinson to the Broncos.

With the No.2 selection in the first round, the Jets selected Johnny "Lam" Jones, the speedy wide receiver from Texas who won a gold medal in the 1976 Olympics as a member of the U.S. 400-meter relay team.

The Cincinnati Bengals, picking third, took 285-pound offensive tackle Anthony Munoz of Southern California, who missed almost all of the 1979 season after undergoing his third knee operation.

The Green Bay Packers used little time in selecting defensive tackle Bruce Clark of Penn State, who, like Munoz, required knee surgery last season. Clark was expected to play nose guard in the Packers' new 3-4 defense.

In quick fashion, the Baltimore Colts grabbed running back Curtis Dickey of Texas A&M, like Jones a world-class sprinter, who could be used as a wide receiver to replace Roger Carr.

The St. Louis Cardinals, who were thought to be seeking a tight end, went instead for Michigan defensive lineman Curtis Greer, who played tackle in college but is expected to be an end in the NFL.

The Atlanta Falcons, picking seventh overall, took Junior Miller, Nebraska's All-America tight end. Miller was considered by far the best tight end in the college ranks last season.

As the noise in the ballroom grew, the New York Giants selected Colorado All-American defensive back Mark Haynes. There was minimal reaction from the gallery, which had booed vociferously a year ago when the Giants made their surprising first-round pick of little-known quarterback Phil Simms.

The draft, which had been proceeding crisply with teams making selections within a minute or two, finally hit a lull when the Minnesota Vikings' turn — No.9 overall — arrived.

It took them 13 of the 15 minutes allotted in each of the first two rounds to choose defensive tackle Doug Martin, who underwent minor knee surgery last spring. Martin's older brother, George, plays for the New York Giants.

The Buffalo Bills also took their time — eight minutes — before trading their No.1 selection to Seattle for the Seahawks' first- and third-round picks. Seattle's first-round pick was No.17 overall.

The Seahawks then took one more minute and selected Jacob Green, a defensive end from Texas A&M.

The Kansas City Chiefs, as expected, grabbed offensive guard Brad Budde of Southern Cal, whose father, Ed, was an all-pro guard with the Chiefs during the late 1960s.

The New Orleans Saints then selected 272-pound offensive tackle Stan Brock of Colorado, whose brother, Pete, plays for New England.

While Lakers Not Counting Foe Out, Comeback Chances Slim

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers aren't counting defending National Basketball Association champion Seattle out of the Western Conference title series, but realistically the SuperSonics don't seem to have much of a chance.

The Sonics are down 3-1 in the best-of-seven series, with Game 5 scheduled at the Forum in suburban Inglewood Wednesday night. A sellout crowd of 17,505 is assured for the nationally televised affair, which begins at 11:30 p.m., EDT.

The Lakers are 4-1 against the Sonics at the Forum this season — the only loss being a 108-107 setback in Game 1 last week. Overall this year, Los Angeles has a 41-5 record on its home court and has won 29 of its last 31 games there.

Even if the Sonics win Wednesday night, they would still have to win at home Friday night and triumph at the Forum again Sunday afternoon to get an opportunity to defend their NBA title.

"You can never count Seattle out," said Los Angeles forward Jamaal Wilkes, who scored 24 points and pulled down 13 rebounds in the Lakers' comeback-from-behind 98-93 victory in Game 4 Sunday. "But right now, I feel great. They're the defending champions and I want very badly to beat them in Los Angeles before our fans." The Lakers overcame a 21-point deficit midway in the third quarter Sunday for a sweep of the two games in Seattle, which were played at Hec Edmundson Pavilion at the University of Washington because the Kingdome and the Seattle Coliseum were booked previously.

"Yeah, I'm joyed," said Los Angeles rookie Earvin "Magic" Johnson, "but not overjoyed. This doesn't crush 'em. We still have one more to go. They're the champs and they're capable of coming back."

That's exactly what the Sonics did against Milwaukee in the Western Conference semifinals. Seattle was down 3-2 to the Bucks but won in Milwaukee and again at home to earn a berth in the conference finals.

"I won't feel good until we win the fourth," said sixth man Mike Cooper, who has been a key factor in the Lakers' success story this season. "That's the world champs we're messing' around with. They can win three straight."

Cooper is a rookie in every way but a literal sense. He is actually in his second NBA season, but played only seven minutes last year because of a knee injury. Los Angeles Coach Paul Westhead agrees with his players. "I fully expect Wednesday's game to be the toughest one in the series for us," said Westhead. "They'll play their best game. They might even relish the challenge."

Home Ice Hasn't Been Help In Sabres Series

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — With the number of teams involved in the National Hockey League's "second season" cut from 16 to four, the celebrated home-ice advantage hasn't seemed to matter much.

The Buffalo Sabres, second in the NHL overall, won the edge of an extra home game during the regular season, and they list four Stanley Cup playoff games among a 22-game Memorial Auditorium unbeaten streak going back to January.

But home ice turned to slush in the quarterfinals for Boston and Montreal as the New York Islanders and Minnesota each won three games in the arena of a team with a better record. The North Stars' surprise 3-2 victory over Montreal Sunday sent the Canadiens into oblivion for this season and forced the Islanders onto a plane for Buffalo after they had spent six days getting ready for the Philadelphia Flyers.

It also left New York and Buffalo miles apart on what they were expecting from each other in their first semifinal game tonight.

"Maybe it won't be as physical, but we can adapt to anybody's game," said Islanders goaltender Billy Smith. "We might have been forced to play a different style against Philadelphia, but it's all the same to me."

Sabres defenseman Jim Schoenfeld said he and his teammates may have been looking forward to playing the Canadiens — mentioned with the Sabres as one of the best-skating teams in the NHL.

However, he said the expert preparations of coaches Scotty Bowman, Roger Neilson and Jim Roberts and a dose of playoff excitement should get the team back on track.

"The emotion of being in the playoffs is stronger than the emotion of any rivalry," he said. "When we get on the ice, there will be butterflies in our stomachs and beating the Islanders will be foremost in our minds. They've had people scouting Long Island; they have everything covered. There won't be any lack of preparation at all."

Neilson was busy Monday putting folders marked "Montreal" into a filing cabinet.

"There's no problem," said the associate coach known as Captain Video because of his love of electronic equipment.

"We had the (New York-Minnesota) series well-scouted, with all our tapes and everything. We just have to switch the files."

Ali's Back And Sounds Same

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
"This is the legend of Muhammad Ali," said the bulbous ex-champion with the unfamiliar mustache, "the prettiest fighter you ever will see."

"He talks a great deal, he does indeed."

"Of a powerful punch and lightning speed."

"The fistic world was dull and weary."

"With a champ like Holmes, it had to be dreary."

The 64th floor of a New York skyscraper shook from the roaring laughter. An imported four-piece Brazilian band struck up a bossa nova tune. Guests drowned out the music with resounding applause.

The man they call "The Greatest" was just getting his second wind.

"This brash fighter is something to see," he spouted,

"Four times champion is his destiny."

"This fighter is great — got speed and endurance."

"If you sign to fight him, increase your insurance."

Play it again, Sam — one more time. The great Ali is back, and the whole world has got him. The fistic sport is jumping and jiving again.

The record is old and squeaky now. The poems with their jerky meter and simple rhymes are unchanged. But, for fight fans, it's a melody to their ears.

They were all there — the Ali worshippers, the hangers-on, the wheelers and dealers, the soul people, the fat cats and the cynical press. And they relished every minute of it.

Here we go again.

Ali, three-time heavyweight champion, dapper in a grey pin-striped suit but looking puffy around the jowls and belly, flew into New York to sign for a comeback fight against the undefeated World Boxing Council champion, Larry Holmes.

Barring complications (there are reports of a court suit by a slighted Madison, Wis., promoter), the 31-year-old Holmes and the 38-year-old Ali will meet July 11 in Rio de Janeiro's 165,000-seat Maracana Arena.

"This is the last hurrah," Don King said. "The song is over, but the melody lingers on."

King is the live-wire entrepreneur who is co-promoting the spectacle with Murad Muhammad and the latter's California-based organization called Prime Sports. A Californian named James Glennie, owner of Brazilian gold and diamond mines, is said to be footing the bill.

Ali and Holmes already have received advance payments of $250,000 and $100,000, respectively. Ali is slated to get $8 million and Holmes $4 million of the $12 million pot.

The two heavyweights, following the script, exchanged insults and made menacing gestures toward each other.

"Don't worry," Holmes said when Murad Muhammad sought to restrain him. "Nobody's going to hurt me."

"I made you," yelled Ali, referring to the years Holmes spent as his sparring partner.

"I'm gonna get out of my rocking chair and whip your tail."

"Ali was a great champion once," Holmes said. "I learned a lot from him. Now he will learn from me."

Banks To Be Back

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Gene Banks has decided to spend his senior year playing basketball at Duke University instead of turning pro, his coach said Monday.

When Banks went home to Philadelphia last week, speculation rose that the 6-foot-8 forward had applied for entry into this year's National Basketball Association draft as a hardship case.

"Gene's going to be here next year," said Blue Devil coach Mike Krzyzewski in a telephone interview Monday.

"There was a lot of speculation about why he had gone to Philadelphia — that he applied for hardship, but he has not. I spoke to him when he got back Sunday," the coach said. "He just went home to visit his family."

Banks was one of the top scorers and rebounders in the Atlantic Coast Conference last season and helped lead Duke to the NCAA regional finals.

Trainer Superstitious, But Stall 13 Isn't Worrying Plugged Nickle

LOUISVILLE, KY. (AP) — Trainer Tom Kelly admits he's superstitious, perhaps because of his Irish heritage, but he isn't worried that Plugged Nickle is staying at stall 13 in barn No. 41 at Churchill Downs.

As the trainer of one of the favorites for Saturday's 106th Kentucky Derby, Kelly has another worry: to keep the 3-year-old colt from drifting out from the rail, as he did in his last two triumphs, the Florida Derby and the Wood Memorial.

"He seemed bewildered on the front end in the Wood," said Kelly before putting John M. Schiff's colt through a workout Monday. "I certainly hope it doesn't happen again."

On a track labeled good, the bay son of Key To The Mint was timed in 1:41.3 for a mile, pulling up in 1:58.4 for 1 1/2 miles. Regular jockey Buck Thornburg, who guided Plugged Nickle in the workout, said he had hoped for a better clocking but added the track was muddy in spots.

"He had no problem with the track," the jockey said. "I thought he handled it."

Kelly, 60 years old and here for his third Derby, had a slight problem. "I think he was going pretty slow early, but I couldn't tell because I borrowed a watch to time him and then I couldn't get it to work."

Plugged Nickle worked in the company of 5-year-old Ramab "in order to keep him interested...I'd say we're just about on our game plan and this move today puts him right where he belongs coming up to the Derby," Kelly said.

Philadelphia Flyers Coach Seeks Low Scoring Series With Stars

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Coach Pat Quinn of the Philadelphia Flyers wants a low scoring series with the Minnesota North Stars in their National Hockey League Stanley Cup semifinal playoffs.

"I don't like wide open hockey," said Quinn, who described the North Stars as very aggressive offensively.

The first game of the best-of-seven series is here tonight with game two on Flyers' ice Thursday night. The scene shifts to Minnesota for the next two games.

The Flyers skated into the semifinal round with a sweep of their best-of-five series with Edmonton and followed by eliminating the New York Rangers 4-1 in a best-of-seven set. Minnesota swept Toronto and scored a startling 4-3 triumph over defending champion Montreal, taking the final game Sunday night at Montreal.

Quinn admitted he was surprised to see Minnesota beat the Canadiens.

"Based on the fact Montreal finished (the regular season) so well...you would think Montreal would have won," said Quinn, who scouted the North Stars in their Sunday series clincher over the Canadiens.

Minnesota has a comparatively young team, but Quinn said the North Stars showed great poise against Montreal.

"One of their assets is that the supposed better team didn't bother them," Quinn said.

"Their kids worked hard, showed determination and withstood the pressure."

"They never quit, just kept plugging away, plugging away," Quinn said.

While Quinn believes his team can hold its own in a wide open skating war, he would rather play a dig-it-out corner game. He'd like to take advantage of the Flyers' physical ability.

Quinn said the North Stars, sixth best team in the league overall during the season, are in an enviable position.

"They're apparently handling the supposed stress of the playoffs with an attitude of 'Who expects us to win, so what do we have to lose?' They've got to be saying: 'Now this thing is up for grabs. We knocked off the defending champions. We can win this thing," Quinn said.

Minnesota Coach Glen Sonmor doesn't buy Quinn's philosophy. He objects to everyone saying that even if the North Stars lose it will have been a great season.

"We think we have a chance to win this series," Sonmor said. "Maybe most people think this has been a great season, but it's not over yet."

Quinn said he hadn't announced his goalie, although he affirmed an "educated guess" that it would be Pete Peeters, 6-1 in seven playoff games. Minnesota is expected to go with Gilles Meloche, 5-3.

Speed Looking For Challenge

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Grand National racing.

When Lake Speed won the 1978 world championship in go-karts, it left him without a challenge in that field.

"I love a challenge, so I looked elsewhere," said Speed, whose bid for NASCAR's Winston Cup Rookie of the Year honors will continue at Alabama International Motorspeedway in the Winston 500 on Sunday.

Speed, a 32-year-old from Jackson, Miss., considered several other forms of racing before deciding on Winston Cup Formula 1 was the natural step for me since I had been so successful in the karts," Speed said, "but there was one problem. Most of the good, young drivers in Formula 1, such as Eddie Cheever, Elio DeAngelis, Alana Prost and Ricardo Patrese were guys that I had already raced against and beaten in the karts. I wanted more of a challenge."

Through a friend, Speed was introduced to Humpy Wheeler, vice president and general manager of Charlotte Motor Speedway, who in turn introduced him to Darel Dieringer. The two soon began talking seriously about forming a grand national team of their own.

"I still had reservations," Speed said. "I wasn't sure that I would like that type of racing where you just go around in circles. It looked too easy."

It is one of the great charms of bridge that all the science in the world is impotent against a certain type of magic wielded by the tyro. We held the West hand in a tournament some time ago and fell victim to two practitioners of the art—a pair of charming ladies who professed to be readers of ours. Believe it or not, the bidding in the diagram above actually took place at our table.

Up to a point, it is a model of accuracy. Modern bidders would have opened the South with one no trump, but barring that, there can be no quibble to the point where North bid three diamonds. South's bid of three hearts would be the choice of every expert because it left open the possibility of playing three no trump if North held a spade stopper. It could hardly denote a suit—South would have introduced a real suit earlier.

By now, however, North had gotten into the habit of raising her partner's suit, so she cheerfully bid four hearts. South, somewhat desperate to end the auction, passed.

Naturally, we led the top of our spade doubleton. Partner won the queen and king and continued with the ace. Declarer ruffed low and we overruffed. However, declarer was in control and that was the last trick for the defense. Note that it would not have helped to refuse to overruff. Declarer would simply cash two high hearts, cross to dummy with a club to draw a third round of trumps and then run winners, starting with clubs. Since East could never regain the lead, the defenders would get no more than a trump trick to go with the two spades.

Note, too, that a five club contract would have been doomed to failure. The lead of a third round of spades would promote West's jack of trumps to the setting trick.

It was no consolation that, at the end of the hand, declarer turned to us with the comment: "I tried to bid the hand the way you do. I remembered that you did not like any conventions but simply showed your aces on good hands. Did I bid it well?"

We could think up no witicism of our own as we surveyed our depressing score, so we borrowed one from Sydney Lenz: "Angels could have done no more!"

Red Skelton Is Laughter-Lover

By RON STATION
Associated Press Writer
HONOLULU (AP) — Red Skelton, the lovable clown who has been making people laugh for more than 50 years, wants to continue his multi-faceted career as long as possible.

"I love to see people smile," said the 67-year-old comedian, painter, writer and composer.

"Why should I stop now?" he asks. "That would be like taking my soul, tacking it on the wall and locking the door."

"I enjoy what I'm doing and I'm not hurting anyone. It's better than being in an old folks' home," he said.

What he's doing is getting up at 5:30 each day, and writing, composing and painting while traveling city-to-city for appearances at theaters, nightclubs, conventions and state fairs. He follows a fairly close schedule, but says it "comes naturally."

Most of Skelton's stories are for children, and he often gets his thoughts together while driving from his home to his office.

He hopes to have a recent story, "Requiem for a Christmas Tree," published in book form and also made into a motion picture.

He has copyrighted more than 8,000 musical works, including 64 symphonies, several of which have been recorded by the London Philharmonic.

"Some of my music is serious, but there's a little bit of whimsy in all of it," he said. Skelton does most of his painting in the late night and early morning hours. He does still life, landscapes and portraits, but the big sellers have been his clowns.

"I'm a clown myself and the clowns are what seemed to catch on with the public," said the comedian, who sells his paintings through a Honolulu art gallery and his own mail-order company.

Some 5,000 people jammed the gallery recently for a showing of Skelton's latest clown paintings. More than $250,000 worth of original oils, canvas transfers and prints were sold.

"I'm not that great a painter, but it keeps me off the streets," he laughed.

"These activities are all fun for me," he said. "They're all related."

Skelton got into show business in 1923 at the age of 10, doing tent shows and burlesque. "I was a clown right from the beginning," he said. "My father, whom I never saw, was a clown and worked in the circus during the summer while going to college."

"Clowns have great depth. Just by their expression, they can look into the souls of their fellow man. They have an understanding of their fellow man that comes through.

"Harold Lloyd and Charlie Chaplin were not just comedians; they were clowns," he added.

Skelton enjoys being with people and is delighted when he sees people recognize him and smile.

"Nice seeing you, thanks for remembering," he says to a man who recalls seeing him in Montreal many years ago.

"I love people," he says. "I don't like to see people get hurt. There's too much of that in the world today."

Author Has Weakness

NEW YORK (AP) — Would you figure that cookbook author James Beard has a weakness for marshmallows? Or that talk show host Dick Cavett lifts things from hotel maids?

New York magazine, assuming that the Big Apple was "a circus of secret vices," went to find out the little sins of assorted celebrities. Their results, reports in the latest issue:

—Beard said he might eat 20 marshmallows at a time when the craving hits.

"I don't like them toasted, and I don't like those nasty little ones. I like the large, puffy ones, and I eat them right out of the bag."

—Said Cavett: "I steal extra shower caps from hotel maids' supply carts."

—Comedian Rodney Dangerfield said he was at the age when food had taken the place of sex. "In fact, I've just had a mirror put over my kitchen table," he said.

Jackpot Winner Does It Again

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A man who recently won the world's largest jackpot at Harold's Casino in Reno has taken a one-armed bandit for at least another $44,000.

Bill Ragland, who won $314,741 April 8 at Harold's, collected $12,000 Monday after earlier wins of $24,000 and $12,000 in 17 days of continuous play at a slot machine at Binion's Horseshoe Casino, said owner Ted Binion.

The Fresno man, his sister and daughter took turns playing the same slot machine "continuously, 24 hours a day," casino publicist Lynn White said.

Couldn't Turn Down Proposal

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — And that's the way it could be, John Anderson.

Walter Cronkite, one of the most popular and highly trusted men in America, is quoted in a magazine as saying he would be honored to team up with Anderson in the 1980 presidential race.

Anderson would be the anchorman; Cronkite No. 2. The Illinois Republican congressman, recently embarked on an independent campaign for the White House, hasn't asked him to be his running mate, Cronkite reportedly told The New Republic.

But if Anderson did invite Cronkite aboard, according to the magazine, CBS would lose television's top newscaster faster than you could say Dan Rather.

"I'd be so honored to be asked, I wouldn't turn it down," Cronkite is quoted as telling executive editor Morton M. Kondracke. "It would be the right party. I've been an independent all my life."

An Anderson aide said that the congressman, who quit the Republican race and announced his independent bid last week, has not talked with anyone about second place on his ticket.

Anderson's press spokesman, Mike Rosenbaum, added that "I don't know if anyone on the campaign has speculated about this. I just joined the staff this morning."

Rosenbaum said that the focus of the campaign at this point is to get Anderson listed on as many state ballots as possible, a difficult chore requiring the collection of thousands of signatures in most cases. Some deadlines already have passed.

"There is no list of people being considered," Rosenbaum said. "It's one for the back burner at this point."

Kondracke tells a different story. "I have it nice and high from the Anderson entourage," he said. "It's not a joke. I know it's been seriously discussed with the candidate. I wouldn't be presumptuous enough to say that Cronkite is Anderson's number one choice, but I do know he is being considered."

Cronkite is quoted as saying that he is wary of politicians and others who try to profit from associating with him, but that he wouldn't suspect Anderson of such a thing.

"I admire Anderson very much," Cronkite is reported saying. "He's brought a fresh breeze to the scene."

Cronkite, 63, who has spent 30 years at CBS, is due to retire as anchorman and managing editor of the network's evening news program, next year.

While Cronkite is very familiar to the American public, Anderson is not. An Associated Press-NBC News poll taken over the weekend said most Americans don't know much about Anderson, but nearly a third now say they might vote for the Illinois congressman in November.

Spread A Rumor Humperdinck Ill

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Engelbert Humperdinck says he may have to hire a detective to find out who spread a rumor that he was ill and would miss appearances at the MGM Grand Hotel.

Humperdinck wasn't ill, but a caller convinced hotel officials he was — and both the singer's Sunday night performances were canceled.

Hotel officials said they received a call Saturday night from a person identifying himself as Humperdinck's manager who said the entertainer was ill and had gone to Los Angeles for treatment.

Humperdinck said the matter was not a publicity stunt.

Burning Ban Is Lifted For N.C.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A ban on outdoor burning in North Carolina was lifted Monday after a weekend of stormy weather. The ban had been in effect since the middle of last week.

The Division of Forest Resources issues burning permits, which are required for all burning in or within 500 feet of a wooded area between midnight and 4 p.m.

Late Night News Program Has Grown Into A Potent Element

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC's late-night news program, born spontaneously of the Iranian crisis, has grown into a potent force in post-prime time. No longer just an ad-hoc programming oddity, "Nightline" has consistently outperformed its entertainment competition on CBS and NBC.

And last Thursday, exactly one month after ABC made it a permanent fixture, "Nightline" came of age on the West Coast.

At about 10:15 p.m. Pacific time, all three networks interrupted their regular programming (NBC was first) to read a bulletin sketchily outlining the aborted American rescue raid in Iran.

At 11, the networks' local affiliated stations read a lean White House statement that said eight Americans had died in a crash after the mission had been scrubbed. There was no engagement with the Iranian military. President Carter accepted full responsibility for the raid.

This was clearly the biggest single development in the Iranian crisis since the American embassy was captured last November. Yet, at 11:30, CBS, as always on Thursday night, broadcast a rerun of the old "Columbo" detective series. NBC went to the "Tonight" show, with Richard Dawson as guest host.

Information-hungry viewers who switched to ABC found the West Coast "Nightline" bureau busy at work, recapping the rescue story and preparing to cut to "Nightline's" main bureau in Washington. "Nightline" anchorman Ted Koppel shortly appeared with another re-reading of the President's statement.

Koppel called on ABC White House correspondent Sam Donaldson, State Department correspondent Barrie Dunsmore and Bob Dyk, ABC's man in Tehran, for reports. Most of the crew had gone home after taping the live East Coast "Nightline" feed, and the spur-of-the-moment report was repetitious and a bit haphazard.

Yet, it was something, Donaldson, noting that success has many fathers and failure is always an orphan, speculated that Carter's "failure is going to result in a very deep, very sharp political orphanage for him."

At the very least, Koppel and Co. had more information than Lt. Columbo or Richard Dawson were likely to dispense on CBS and NBC.

ABC began the nightly news specials last fall for two reasons: ABC wasn't exactly dominating late-night with its entertainment programming, and a late-night Iran special demonstrated that the ABC's News Division, long the least respected of the three networks, was getting serious about the news.

When the program proved to be a ratings winner, "Nightline" was born. It has already paid dividends in the ratings department, and last Thursday, it began to pay off in the image department.

Judge To Rule If Curtain Rises

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge may decide whether the curtains will rise on a new Broadway musical, "A Day in Hollywood, A Day in the Ukraine."

A copyright infringement suit filed by the Marx Brothers' estate seeks to stop the Thursday opening of the new Alexander Cohen production. Susan Marx, widow of Harpo Marx and trustee of the estate that owns and licenses rights for the comedy team's material, also seeks damages in excess of $10,000.

Mrs. Marx contends the show, which has been staged in London and Baltimore, is an "attempt to recreate a Marx Brothers' comedy" replete with jokes and styles that symbolize the great comedy team. But sources close to the production said the show is "loosely based on Chekhov's 'The Bear' as if it were done by the Marx Brothers."

Finds Mother After 20 Yrs.

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) - It has taken 20 years for Dean Richardson, raised as Dean Brothers, to locate his mother and piece together a missing segment of his life.

But as the result of a story April 10 in the Gastonia Gazette, Brothers is making plans to visit his mother this summer. That visit may come just in time because Brothers' mother is being treated for cancer.

The newspaper story about Brothers' search for his natural parents, prompted several telephone calls. One caller turned up the name and address of Brothers' mother who is now living in Georgia.

"We wrote to the woman and sent her a clipping of the news story," Mrs. Brothers said. "I was afraid to say anything about finding his mother until we were sure that was the right one."

A telephone call and subsequent letters with photographs enclosed convinced Brothers that he had found his missing mother.

Mrs. Brothers said that nearly a year ago she began to doubt that Dean really was a Richardson because "something just didn't add up." A check of school records revealed that he was, in fact, Marvin Luther Brothers.

That led to name changes on social security cards and driver's licenses and a legal name change for the couple's two-year-old daughter. Brothers chose to keep Dean as his first name because so many people knew him by that.

But the couple learned they couldn't change the name on their marriage license without an affidavit from someone who knew who Brothers was. Now they believe Brothers' mother can solve that problem.

Mrs. Brothers has pieced together what happened to her husband's family with the help of the letters and phone call.

"The family got separated when his mother was out of work and asked a Richardson man to keep him for her until she could get in a financial position to take him back."

But when the mother returned, Richardson demanded $1,000 payment for room and board. The woman could not pay that much money. "She didn't have any choice but to leave him because the law was on his side."
