

Greenville Utilities Step Applauded By Gov. Hunt

Gov. Jim Hunt said Wednesday a decision by the City of Greenville to cut its electric power purchases from Virginia Electric and Power Co. "demonstrates the need for Vepco to get out of North Carolina."

Hunt's comments followed notification by Greenville authorities that the city would reduce its purchases from Vepco gradually as it switches over to Carolina Power & Light Co. as its source of electricity.

The city operates a municipal electric system serving 24,000 customers.

Greenville's Utilities Commission and City Council voted Tuesday night to begin buying at least 40 percent of its electricity from CP&L by May 1, 1981, and to discontinue all Vepco purchases by May 1984.

Charles Horne, director of the city system, said rates were expected to drop by about 25 percent in the years after the change-over.

Hunt, in a statement, said the switch to CP&L would save Greenville customers $18 million in the first five years.

Last summer, Hunt invited Vepco to sell its 22-county territory in eastern North Carolina to CP&L.

Gov. Hunt said that the action "will not only mean lower electricity rates for the citizens of Greenville, but it will make it easier to attract new industry to the Greenville area. The Greenville City Council and the Greenville Utilities Commission have acted in a very responsible and forward-looking manner."

"Studies show that, for the past 10 years, Greenville paid VEPCO 25.2 percent more for electricity than it would have paid during the same period to CP&L."

"For the five-year period from 1981 to 1985, the switch is expected to save Greenville about $18 million."

"It is clear that the VEPCO cities in our state have begun their exodus. They are tired of paying unreasonably high rates and they realize that VEPCO is an obstacle to economic development in the Northeast, the poorest and least developed section of our state."

"A study by the public staff of the State Utilities Commission shows that rates paid by a typical VEPCO residential customer are more than 40 percent higher than those paid by a typical CP&L customer. Greenville, along with 15 other cities and towns in the Northeast, is a member of the corporation known as Municipal Power Agency No. 2. The agency is now in formal negotiations with CP&L that could result in joint ownership of generating facilities. A similar corporation, Power Agency No. 3, is also involved in those negotiations. Joint ownership could result in a substantial savings of power costs because of the agency's tax-exempt status and lower capital costs."

Military Gear To N. Carolina Ports

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Several tons of military equipment and weapons were unloaded at the state port in Wilmington Wednesday for loading aboard ships possibly destined for the Indian Ocean.

Similar equipment shipments were being made at a California port. Maj. Paul Chapman of Marine Corps headquarters in Washington said the action was part of a Defense Department plan for rapid deployment of troops. He denied that the activity was related to the crisis in Iran but added, "The president has our telephone number."

A 30-acre compound at the state port was sealed off by Marine military policemen Wednesday as Marines began unloading the equipment, including trucks, jeeps, tanks, amphibious tractors, howitzers and anti-tank weapons.

Marine spokesmen available in Wilmington said they did not know the destination of the equipment. Speculation arose, however, that it would be sent to a point in the Indian Ocean.

Deputy Defense Secretary Graham Claytor announced in March that seven ships would be dispatched to the Indian Ocean island of Deigo Garcia, where they and their equipment would be available in the event of a crisis.

Chapman said the cargo arriving in Wilmington was coming from a logistics base at Albany, Ga. Material being shipped on the West Coast was being moved from the Marine logistics base at Barstow, Calif., he said.

Chapman said the exercise started Saturday and would continue for about two months. He said the loading of ships will be completed in June, with those loaded on the West Coast joining those in Wilmington.

Military spokesmen said no troop movements were involved.

Seven or more train cars were unloaded at Wilmington Wednesday. Chapman said about 70 more cars were to come to Wilmington.

Convention Is Being Held

The biennial convention of the League of Women Voters of the United States is being held in Washington, D. C. today through Monday.

Attending from Greenville are Dr. Patricia Dunn, local league president, and Katherine Adler, board member of the N. C. LWV.

Delegates from the 50 states are assembling to take stock of goals, decide national program for the next two years, elect officers and directors, consider policies and proposals brought before the convention, adopt a budget and bylaws, and celebrate the 60th anniversary of the league.

Says Corner Is 'Turned'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said today the nation has "turned the corner" in its fight against inflation and predicted that inflation rates will "drop significantly during the summer."

The president told executives of accounting firms in a White House meeting that "we're making good progress in interest rates coming down."

Carter praised the nation's accountants for "the good work you have done" and disclosed that another major firm, Holiday Inns, "voluntarily agreed to modify their practices to comply with the price guidelines."

"We do believe we've turned the corner," Carter said. "We have sound indications the inflation rate will drop significantly during the summer."

The president also told the visitors that "I will be moving around the country more in the next few weeks, primarily to rally the American people to support the domestic and foreign policies that are so important to us."

On Wednesday, Alfred

Kahn, Carter's chief inflation adviser, predicted that the unemployment rate could climb to 7.5 percent later this year and 8 percent in early 1981.

The Carter administration has not previously used such high figures. But a spokeswoman for Kahn said he had intended his projections to be consistent with those of the administration.

"He certainly did not mean to deviate from official forecasts," said the spokeswoman, Betty Ross.

However, several high-ranking government officials say privately that they think unemployment will reach 8 percent in the recession now widely thought to be underway.

Unemployment was 6.2 percent in March. Jobless figures for April will be released by the Labor Department Friday, and most economists expect them to show another rise in unemployment.

An 8 percent jobless rate translates into about 8 million Americans out of work. The last time unemployment was at the 8 percent level was in December 1975.

Rumblings In Iran As May Day Is Observed

By The Associated Press — Militants occupying the U.S. Embassy in Tehran said a revolutionary guard was wounded overnight in an attack on the embassy by "U.S. agents," and counter-revolutionary elements placed several bombs in parts of Tehran today during International Labor Day observances, Tehran Radio said.

All the bombs were defused, according to the radio.

Another broadcast said more of the American hostages had been transferred out of Tehran, this time to southern Iran, as part of the militants' continuing effort to foil another U.S. rescue attempt.

Some 40,000 Iranians gathered outside the embassy for a May Day rally. The Islamic Council of Workers said in a statement to the rally that it condemned the recent Q.S. commando effort to rescue the hostages and urged workers everywhere, especially in the United States, to resist what it called the "crazy acts" of President Carter.

One broadcast said pro-American elements carried out an "armed attack" on the embassy, but the nature of the attack was not disclosed. In the past two weeks, the militants have reported several incidents of gunmen in cars shooting at the embassy.

Tehran Radio said some of the 53 hostages, who began their 180th day in captivity today, were transferred to Shiraz, 400 miles south of Tehran, while others were moved to Jahrom, 100 miles southeast of Shiraz.

Other hostages were reported transferred earlier this week to Tabriz, 330 miles northwest of Tehran, Qom, 100 miles south of Tehran, Isfahan, 210 miles south of Tehran, Yazd, 160 miles southeast of Isfahan, and Nasafabad, 50 miles west of Isfahan.

A British member of Parliament said the hostages should be freed in return for ending the siege of the Iranian Embassy in London, which began Wednesday when Iranian-Arab gunmen took over the mission in the British capital.

The gunmen said they would kill their hostages unless Iran freed 91 Arab prisoners held in southern Khuzestan province, but Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said the 91 would be executed if the Iranian hostages were harmed.

Told Ghotbzadeh?

HONG KONG (AP) — A White House official told Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh in advance that the United States was planning a mission to rescue the American hostages in Tehran, the news magazine Asiaweek reported today.

The Hong Kong-based magazine said the message was "strongly suspected" to have come from Hamilton Jordan, President Carter's White House chief of staff "who was at loggerheads with the confrontationist line of National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski."

In Washington, Jordan called the report "absolutely untrue." He said, "Obviously no one in the Iranian government knew in advance of the rescue mission, and only very few people in the U.S. government knew about it."

A Foreign Ministry spokesman in Tehran denied Ghotbzadeh had any advance knowledge of the mission.

Asiaweek said the message was relayed to Ghotbzadeh when the foreign minister flew to Paris on the weekend of April 11, reportedly "to settle personal matters."

It said that although no details were provided about the operation being prepared, the message clearly indicated that it would be carried out before May 17.

The magazine said it learned of the communication six hours before the operation started and from the same source who briefed Ghotbzadeh.

The magazine described the source as someone "who had acted several times as an intermediary between the White House and the Iranian Revolutionary Council."

It said May 17 was the target date because that was the deadline for the Common Market to take sanctions against Iran.

The magazine also said its sources had confirmed that Washington had formally told its European allies that no military action would be mounted before that date.

The mission to rescue the 53 hostages was aborted a week ago, reportedly because of technical problems with the helicopters involved. Eight American commandos were killed during the withdrawal when a chopper collided with a C-130 transport at a desert refueling site 200 miles east of Tehran.

MARRIAGE ENCOUNTER FEEDBACK

Allen and Sheila Drabicki are the regional coordinators for Marriage Encounter. Hotline has learned since we published the phone number of a Raleigh area couple earlier this week.

Mrs. Drabicki said Catholics, Jews and nine Protestant denominations are now holding Marriage Encounter weekends throughout the world. In North Carolina, she said, Catholic, Episcopal, and Jewish weekends have been held and a Baptist one is planned for this spring. The weekends for married couples to improve communication and put romance back into their relationships with each other are carried out in such a way that a person of any faith or denomination can enjoy a weekend sponsored by any other faith or denomination, she said. Religion is not the issue. Communication is. The Drabickis' phone number is 756-5865.

Scholarship For Conley Student

D.H. Conley senior Eleanor Avery has been awarded a college-sponsored four-year National Merit Scholarship to East Carolina University. Avery was chosen from a national field of 14,000 semifinalists who were endorsed and recommended by their principals, scored high on the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test, and by maintaining a superior academic standing.

Avery is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Avery of Rt. 2, Box 305 Greenville. During high school she was involved in the Science Club, the Student Council Association, Mu Alpha Theta, the National Honor Society, and Who's Who Among American High School Students. The scholarship winner holds the office of class president, president of the National Honor Society, and second-year treasurer of the Science Club.

Avery was also a finalist in the Morehead Scholarship competition and attended Governor's School in 1978. In addition she was a graduation marshal. Avery attends St. Peter's Catholic Church. The winner, who is originally from Fayetteville, has lived in Pitt County around six years. At East Carolina, she plans to major in chemistry and seek a career in research and technology.

The average stipend for college sponsored scholarship winners is currently about $2,900 for the four undergraduate years. Winners must maintain the standards of performance and terms of renewal established by the NMS to retain their scholarships.

LAW DAY CEREMONY — Law day ceremonies were held this morning in the Pitt County Superior Courtroom. The theme for Law Day this year is "Law and Lawyers Working for You." Participating in the ceremony were, left to right, Judge Robert Rouse, Jr., Senior Resident Superior Court Judge of the Third Judicial District; Judge

Charles Whedbee, Chief District Court Judge of the Third Judicial District; and Mickey Herrin, incoming president of the Pitt County Bar Association. Judge Rouse also recognized retired members of the local bar association who were present. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

FUN DAY FOR REHAB EMPLOYEES — Horseshoes, live music, kite-flying, frisbee, volleyball and good food were enjoyed by employees of the Regional Rehabilitation Center from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. yesterday as they celebrated their move three years ago to the new facility. The celebration has become an annual tradition. Yesterday's activities featured a barbeque dinner at noon, and guitar music by Mitch Bowen all afternoon. Around 1,000 people attended the barbeque. Employees participated in contests of horseshoes and volleyball during their breaks all throughout the day. (Reflector Photo by Mary Schulken)

Environmental Savings In Recycled Packaging

NEW YORK (AP) — In the nation's supermarkets, shelves stocked with packaged goods are beginning to display signs next to the unit-price sticker announcing "This product packaged in recycled paperboard."

The stickers, which also carry the recycled symbol — three arrows that form a connecting circle — are part of a national "Environmental Shopping" program designed to show consumers how they can expand paper recycling through everyday shopping, and thus help reduce the country's solid waste volume.

"Most consumers think of recycling only in terms of collecting old newspapers," says Cynthia Burke Stein, a founding member of Consumer Action Now. "But that is just part of the recycling chain."

"Unless there is a demand for the old newspapers, in the form of new packaging material, newspapers may eventually wind up being burned, adding to air pollution, or dumped into already overcrowded landfills. Paper recycling really starts in the supermarket, and shoppers must complete the cycle by buying products in recycled paperboard packages."

As the latest development of an overall pro-environment packaging effort initiated by the Recycled Paperboard Division of the American Paper Institute, "Environmental Shopping" recently received first place in the National Business-Industry category of the 1979 Keep America Beautiful awards competition.

The program was launched last year in Stamford, Conn., and is being extended nationally with a consumer "network" of several thousand local women's groups. Participating organizations include the League of Women Voters, the General Federation of Women's Clubs and the National Council of State Garden Clubs.

"We've adopted 'Environmental Shopping' because it demonstrates how every individual can make an important contribution to improving our nation's environment," says Mary Elizabeth Quint, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which has made the program an official project for the organization's 12,000 clubs.

"We believe that supermarkets and manufacturers are supporting this effort because the time has come for consumers to work together with business to improve the communities in which we all work and live," Mrs. Quint said. "We want manufacturers to see that using recycled paper and telling consumers about it is a positive selling point for their products," added Darlene Heide, conservation chairperson and project coordinator of the Stamford Club that pioneered the program.

If manufacturers are getting the message, so are leading supermarkets. At the outset, the Stamford group won the support of nearly a dozen supermarkets, whose store managers began to spotlight packages made from pro-environment recycled paper with special attention-getting signs and shelf tags. The labeling activity also focuses on cardboard egg cartons because they are manufactured from clean waste paper and are biodegradable.

Attesting to the Stamford project's success, Robert Godzono, manager of a participating local supermarket, said, "Products packaged in recycled paperboard that have been highlighted by the stickers are moving very well ... better than usual."

"What's more, where we have two competing products side by side, and only one packaged in recycled paperboard, the one packaged in recycled paperboard and identified as such clearly is outselling the other. In some cases, as with two competing products, their sales level has been reversed." As the program expands, increasing numbers of supermarkets are becoming involved.

PCB Spills Still There Young Engineer Loves Railroad

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — While thousands of gallons of PCB illegally dumped along North Carolina highways in 1978 still have not been removed, the state apparently is doing nothing to monitor the health of residents along those routes, says the Fayetteville Observer.

The Observer reported Thursday that it had made a spot check of residents along N.C. 210 west of Smithfield, the first confirmed PCB spill route. It said that despite state assurances that no well water was contaminated by spills of the suspected cancer-causing chemical along 210 miles of roadways, at least one family, and possibly more, are drinking water with increased levels of PCBs.

The newspaper took issue with claims by state health officials that individual counties were monitoring health factors related to the spills. It said all 14 counties it contacted thought the state was looking after the matter.

No state monitoring of the health of families living near PCB spill sites has been done in more than a year, while decreased fertility rates, a documented symptom of PCB poisoning, have been noted in some cattle and dogs living near a contaminated well in Johnston County, it charged.

The newspaper also said that an apparently secret proposal by state health officials citing their "responsibility" to monitor the health of those living along spill routes was rejected because "of the grave public alarm which would probably be caused."

CENTERVILLE, Utah (AP) — The phone rings. It could be 2 a.m. or 2 p.m., but John Benich's response never varies: He can't wait to get out the door and hit the tracks for Idaho.

"He's just like a kid with a new toy whenever he gets called," says Benich's wife, Debbie. Her husband's view of his work is simple: "I love it."

Kissing his wife and three children goodbye for the next 35 or 40 hours, Benich hustles 15 miles south to the Union Pacific Railroad yard in Salt Lake City. After checking in and collecting a crew, he hops into the cab of a diesel electric engine, hooks up to a line of freight cars — or sometimes an Amtrak passenger train — and heads north.

If Benich's enthusiasm seems boyish, it goes with his looks — and his age. At 28, he shatters the popular image of the crusty engineer, graying at the temples, who offers a grandfatherly wave to gawking children as his train flashes by.

Indeed, Benich was one of Union Pacific's youngest engineers when he moved up from fireman at age 22. Railroading is in his blood. His father was a switchman, his brother is a yardmaster, an uncle was a conductor and his grandfather was a blacksmith for the Denver & Rio Grande.

Welfare Worker's Job Calls For Sensitivity

By VERN ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer
PROVO, Utah (AP) — Dan Knudsen tries to avoid being cynical, fights it all the time. But with a job like his, it isn't easy.

Knudsen works for the state Assistance Payments Administration, interviewing people seeking government food stamps. He also updates welfare cases to make sure nobody's getting more than they should.

"That's the big challenge — remaining sensitive to people's needs," he says, when you know a small percentage of welfare recipients abuse the system. "You let the abuses become overblown in your mind."

But Knudsen, 36, works at reconciling the real with the ideal. "You can't preach morals to anyone. Sometimes you'd like to say things to some people. But we're not a religion, we're a state," he says.

Besides, he knows what it's like to sit across from somebody like himself. Before graduating from college in law enforcement, he had a hernia and couldn't work or afford surgery. Welfare assistance for a summer saw him and his growing family through.

Knudsen, a tenor in the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, and his wife, Pat, are expecting their seventh child.

His political outlook has changed markedly in the four years he's worked for the state.

"I was probably your typical right-wing conservative who thought that if people didn't work they should be allowed to starve," said Knudsen, who now jokingly calls himself "an eyes-opened conservative."

But if you think in those work-or-starve terms, he says, you must ignore all those who truly need welfare to survive — abandoned wives with young mouths to feed and no skills, the physically and emotionally impaired, those lacking the barest social skills needed to hold a job.

Knudsen scoffs at the argument that abolishing the welfare system would force families to help their troubled kin. Or that the prospect of starvation would drive people to work in a hurry.

"In Utah you hear that the family should step in. Well, sure they should, but they don't. And that's why the state has to. You can't allow people to starve. We're not like countries that can do that — let people die in the streets," he says.

And no matter what some may think, he says, there really is a small minority that would starve without welfare.

So what's to be cynical about if it's all so straightforward?

That's the trouble. It isn't. Even with constant effort, Knudsen says, "there's almost no way you can close all the loopholes." And too much depends on the attitude of the recipient.

Take food stamp applicants. "Some of them have really waited until they are down to nothing, but others making $3,000 a month come charging in the minute they get their pink slips," he said, referring to job termination notices.

And that brings Knudsen to the core of his concern about welfare assistance. "Once you get into the system, the temptation is there to let the state do everything for you. It becomes addictive. I know that from when I was on food stamps. I know the feeling and I can sympathize with it," he said.

For all his reservations, Knudsen gets a kick out of seeing people get help and in his better moments believes that he's in the right job for the right reasons.

"Everybody is not out out to work in the welfare office. I wasn't sure I was at first, but I am and I enjoy it. I really don't want to work at anything else."

As for the cynicism, call it an occupational hazard. But it's one he's working on.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

You want to know how to get every mother in the world on her feet and moving?

Just stand in front of her and say, "Don't get up! Just tell me where (whatever she's looking for) is."

I have seen women pull themselves out of bed three hours out of surgery following that line. It's like waving a red flag in front of them.

For some weird reason the entire family seems to feel that the mother is a walking Dewey Decimal System for every item in the entire house.

I figured out once that I spent 23 hours a week looking for things — I knew where they were all the time but in the words of the family "just wanted to feel important."

Why do mothers do it? Why don't they just sit there and give directions? I thought you'd never ask.

Men suffer from a congenital disease called "front-of-the-shelf-paralysis." It's a curious malady where the vision remains at eye level and freezes. The arms remain motionless at their sides and they are incapable of moving anything to see what's stored behind.

Watch them sometimes when they're looking for something in the refrigerator, medicine chest, or shelf in the garage.

They survey the contents in a blink, then yell to wherever you're sitting, "IT'S NOT HERE!"

It's only after you are standing at their right side and pushing aside a single item in the front row that their eyes show recognition. Then they turn to you and ask, "Why do you have to hide things?"

Children, on the other hand, suffer a different set of symptoms. They carry a disease called, "Convenient Blindness." It comes and it goes. They see what they want to see. If they're looking for a laxative, boots, report card, or garbage to take out, their faces go blank, their eyes become set and they see nothing.

It's the same look they reserve for when they're told that the first one who sees the dog's contribution to indoor pollution has to clean it up. On the other hand, if they're looking for your tennis racket, change in the lining of your purse, or Easter candy that is hidden, they are capable of seeing through doors and walls.

I said to the family the other night, "I'd like to run away from home. Where is Cleveland? Don't get up. Just tell me where it is."

They didn't get the joke.

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I can sympathize with the woman whose 46-year-old husband has begun taking clarinet lessons. How about a 56-year-old wife who has taken up tap dancing? Do you think I'm being unreasonable when I insist that she do her tapping out in the garage? She has a long extension cord for the record player.

HAD IT IN LOS ALAMOS

DEAR HAD IT: Better not banish your dancing doll to the garage, or it might be "tape" for your marriage.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for 69 years. I am 93 and she is 90. Before we were married, Myrtis and I "went together" for almost a year. In all that time she never found out whether I was a "poor lover" or a great one. My work took me out of town from Monday through Friday, so we spent our Saturday evenings together in her parents' home (in the "parlor") often with either one or both parents present. Sometimes the two of us would enjoy a meal in a deluxe restaurant. (It cost me 75 cents plus a 10-cent tip.) I was doing well as a traveling salesman. I made $100 a month plus expenses!

Sunday mornings we always went to church together. Myrtis sang in the choir. So did I until they found out what was the matter with the choir — then I didn't sing there anymore.

We fell in love, but not the way they do today. No so much as a good-night kiss before we became engaged. When I asked her to marry me, after much pleading on my part she finally said yes. Then I took her in my arms and planted a big kiss right on her lips. And that was it. No more than a hug and a kiss until we were married some two months later.

Well, I guess I turned out to be a pretty fair lover. We had five children, 17 grandchildren and 28 great-grandchildren.

You may want to put this in your "My, how times have changed" file. Anyway, Myrtis joins me in sending you our love and appreciation for all those wonderful columns through the years.

ELIAS P. TYLER, SHERMAN OAKS, CALIF.

DEAR ELIAS: Thanks for a wonderful column piece. Your letter was a real "upper."

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe that you aren't aware that most married women consider every single attractive female a threat to their marriages.

For your amusement, when I became a widow, a married woman whom I had known only slightly called to tell me that she was beside herself with grief because her husband's doctor had told her that her husband might go "any minute." But, of course, she was not allowed to tell him.

Well, today, seven years later, the husband is still hale, hearty and thriving.

BERT

DEAR BERT: Yes, and also devious.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Auto Industry Hurting

The troubles of Chrysler Corp., and first quarter deficit for Ford Motor Co. makes it clear that the American auto industry is in lean times.

Even General Motors reported quarterly earnings off 85 percent from those of the corresponding period of the preceding year.

One doesn't have to look far for the immediate reason for the auto industry's current recession. The industry, like the housing industry, is having to bear the brunt of the nation's war on inflation. Autos are big ticket items and most families who buy them have to seek financing. With the prime rate recently at 20 percent and all interest correspondingly high it becomes difficult-to-nearly-impossible for most families to afford the financing. The result has been plummeting auto sales.

Not only are profits affected but many workers have been, or face, layoff as the auto makers cut back on production. It has its effects on many other related industries.

Things may look up in the near future, though. Interest rates seem to be dropping rather rapidly and, as the economy slows, there might soon be adequate funds available for financing. Since the slowed sales create some pent-up demand there could develop a rather rapid surge in new car sales.

Longer range, the auto industry is reported to be radically redesigning cars to provide for more fuel economy. This should put them in a good competitive position in relation to the imported models.

The American auto industry is cyclical in nature. It has seen difficult times before and come back strong. We are betting it will do so again.

Carter Turns To Muskie

President Carter has turned to a strong party man and a supporter of his policies in his choice for secretary of state.

The president announced the nomination of Edmund S Muskie of Maine for the position.

Following the resignation of Cyrus Vance as a protest against the Iranian rescue attempt, it was imperative for the president to find a successor who would be well-known to our allies and friends abroad.

He has succeeded in that with the Muskie choice.

The Great Bike Report

WASHINGTON — While it is unlikely that the event has escaped your attention, today Thursday, May 1 is National Bicycling Day. The mail brings a Presidential Proclamation to that effect, accompanied by a report from the Department of Transportation, and once again we are reminded of the marvels of bureaucracy at work.

First to the Proclamation: "Bicycling is finally breaking away in this country," asserts President Carter, "making racers and riders out of a hundred million Americans. Whether they are huffing up mountain roads on vacation or commuting a few miles to work every day, bicycle riders are using their energy to save our energy, while their pumping legs mean pumping hearts and better health."

Our Leader goes on to say that bicycle riding is bound to become even more popular in the energy-conscious, health-conscious future. He declares May 1 to be National Bicycling Day, and he calls upon the people to observe the occasion with appropriate ceremonies and events.

From the Department of Transportation comes a 42-page report, prepared in response to Section 682 of the National Energy Conservation Policy Act of 1978. This was a provision, it must be confessed, that largely escaped notice when the act was adopted. Congress ordered this study; the department contracted with the Mountain Bicyclists' Association of Denver to prepare it, and by damn, somebody had better read it. I have read it.

It appears that in 1975, an estimated 470,000 persons commuted to and from work by bicycle. This was only 0.6 percent of all commuters. They pedaled an average of 1.4 miles each way. No more recent data can be cited. With proper promotion and adequate incentives, it is estimated that 3.8 million persons might today be biking to work. That goal may be unattainable, but a targeted figure of 1.5 million to 2.5 million riders by 1985 is feasible.

Why are so few Americans riding bicycles to work? The consultants say the obstacles are two in number: 1) personal, and 2) institutional. As to obstacle 1), many potential riders are scared to death of traffic; they sense the hostility of motorists; they don't like the pollution of automobile exhausts; and they're afraid their bikes will be stolen. The institutional obstacles range from potholes in the streets to "image" at the office.

Now, the thought will not go

Diverted To Soviet Union

By PHILIP C. CLARKE

Shocking new evidence reveals that a virtual flood of militarily useful American technology has been illegally diverted to the Soviet Union over the past decade or more.

The evidence is in the form of a document which spells out in minute detail sixteen such illegal export transactions, some covering periods of up to six years. According to Congressman John Ashbrook (R-Ohio), "This incredible document, which surfaced from the bowels of the bureaucracy of the Commerce Department, outlines better than any other one document the methods by which American technology flows to the warlords of the Kremlin."

"What is even more incredible about this document," says Ashbrook, "is that it existed in the (federal) bureaucracy as early as 1978 even as Administration officials were testifying... that there was no (such) illegal diversion."

The document discloses a devious practice of deception in which advanced technology from U.S. corporations was exported to the Soviets or their East European satellites.

Involved in this "smuggling" operation were such vital U.S. products as computers, computer parts, semi-conductors, array transform processors, and even highly sophisticated mirrors for use in super-weapon space lasers.

They ended up in the hands of various Soviet state import fronts, including "Mashpriborintorg," "Vnez Technica," and "Technopromimport." They service not only the huge Kama River and Zil truck and automotive plants but also the entire Soviet defense industry.

As an example, a digital field system was exported by a U.S. firm without the required license aboard a Polish vessel under charter to a Norwegian company. The equipment was transported to Poland and installed on a Norwegian vessel and then the entire vessel was sold to the Soviet Union.

In another instance, vital computer parts were illegally shipped to a U.S. company's British subsidiary and delivered, sometimes by hand, to the Bulgarian Embassy in London.

One large U.S. computer shipment went to a British subsidiary where the technology was incorporated into a British model which was subsequently reexported to Hungary. Some of the same company's equipment once showed up at an exhibition in the Soviet Union under the label of still another British firm which then sold it to the U.S.S.R.

As Congressman Ashbrook says, the illegal diversion of U.S. technology "only serves as a tool for the Soviet Union and its satellites to expand their capability to disrupt the free world." He calls "the covering up" of the illegal transactions "an act of great dishonor to our nation's best interests...."

"At a recent hearing of the Senate investigations subcommittee, Senator Henry Jackson (D-Wash.) put the issue in blunt terms: "Evidence has accumulated that our export control system is a shambles. The U.S. and its allies have been 'selling the rope' to the Soviet bloc. What we haven't sold, we have given away in educational, governmental and commercial technical-exchange programs. What we haven't sold or given away, they have stolen."

Jackson and other members of Congress are now calling for tighter overall controls on U.S. technology exchanges to prevent their further use in Russia's massive military buildup. Their concern has deepened with new evidence that Soviet armed forces are now employing in Afghanistan and elsewhere large numbers of military trucks, armored personnel carriers, tanks and even rocket launchers assembled in Russian factories built and equipped largely with U.S. technology — and on credit.

THIS AFTERNOON Race In Education

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — One of the least noticed contests in the Democratic primary which will be decided next week is that for Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Seeking the nomination are incumbent Supt. Craig Phillips and challenger Trospen N. Combs of Laurinburg.

Perhaps because Combs ran in 1968 on the Republican ticket for lieutenant governor, many people have thought this contest would be on the November ballot. Combs changed his registration to Democrat, however, and is putting forth a variety of points directly challenging Phillips' leadership.

Phillips, meanwhile, points to the several major strides taken in education in North Carolina in recent years as demonstrating successful leadership on his part.

Here are some brief comments and proposals from each of the two candidates, first from Combs, then Phillips:

be favored through a per-student split.

Combs proposes a major tax on tobacco, beginning with five cents at the start of 1981, and an additional penny each year for three years to total an eight-cent tax earmarked for education. That would still leave North Carolina's tobacco tax well below that in other states, he notes.

Turning to teachers and students, Combs proposes a student behavior contract which would draw into the Programs Phillips places considerable emphasis on the relationship between the schools and the business and industrial sectors, and praises the programs in free enterprise in the schools which "help people understand and appreciate the free enterprise system."

He points to the need for expanded vocational education and skill instruction for low achievers at the high school level in efforts to keep dropouts from leaving school.

scene parents, the children, and educators in a written agreement on what is expected of the child, and what will happen providing the agreement is broken. The compulsory school age should be raised, he says, and testing and evaluation should be used to group students by ability. Further, a strict time limit on the total hours a child may spend riding a bus and in school would be fixed: 10 hours for high school, eight for fifth through ninth grades, seven for third and fourth and six for kindergarten, one and two.

Combs also thinks teacher salaries can be raised above the national average, and all non-teaching duties taken off classroom teachers.

Other Editors Say Hit The Big Boys

(Washington Daily News)

We need to place more emphasis on catching the real big boys in this illicit drug traffic that is plaguing our nation today.

Just a few nights ago a plane allegedly was about to land at the Oxford-Henderson airport when supposedly the pilot was scared off and headed his plane northward and landed at a small airfield at Clarksville, Va. Clarksville is just 30 miles away from the Oxford-Henderson facility.

Aboard that plane were 28 bales of marijuana with a street value of around $500,000. The pilot dumped those 28 bales at the end of the runway, but he was then arrested before he could take off again.

It was later revealed that a plane had tailed this one carrying the marijuana all the way from Florida. Somehow officers apparently had information that the plane with the illicit cargo would land in Vance County. But with two dozen officers ready and in waiting, it is easy to see how the pilot was scared off.

The pilot was arrested and placed under bond of $50,000. The next day bond was apparently easily arranged for him.

Two big questions arise in our mind. First of all, if officers know that the plane loaded its cargo in Florida, why was not something done down there too, about all that marijuana. Why was no raid made there? If we do not make every effort to destroy the source, it seems to us we are merely hitting the high spots in trying to destroy the destinations. If there were 28 bales loaded on this plane, how many more bales were there somewhere in Florida?

Then we wonder how much marijuana and other illicit drugs are being smuggled in to us and never heard of anymore. Are we merely catching one out of 10 criminals involved or destroying one out of 10 bales brought in?

We have been told many times that this is big business and that those involved, while taking big chances, are paid vast sums to get the jobs done. We can believe that, and from what we read and hear, we are bound to think that the business of hauling such drugs as marijuana, cocaine, heroin and the others is much larger than most of us even begin to realize. But again, it seems we are seldom attacking the source. If a two-engine plane flies from Florida to Clarksville, Va., it would appear to us that somewhere in Florida right now is a big cache of such drugs just waiting shipment to northern markets.

Instead of catching a few of them where the planes land, we should try to catch the real big boys at the point of shipment.

Strength For Today

THE CHURCH ETHERNAL

What is the church?

The Church is the building of God — not a building of stone and mortar, but the building of consecrated lives through the ages, of which Christ himself is the cornerstone.

The Church is the bride of Christ. The Bible so refers to it, setting forth the joys which pervade it, and the submission of mind, purposes, and body to the will of the Lord. True Christians are happy people. They are like members of a bridal party.

Last of all, the Church is the body of Christ. Its members are Christ's hands with which to work, his eyes with which to see, his lips with which to testify, his body with which to endure, his feet with which to go on errands of mercy.

The Church which we see on this earth is the brotherhood of Christian believers who accept Christ as Lord and Master and whose loyalty to Him surpasses all other loyalties.

Setting Contingencies, Goals

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — To declare the recession is coming is something akin to saying the sky is falling, judging from the predictable panic that overcomes a good many members of the corporate ruling class.

Orders are issued for executives to fly tourist class or not at all, telephone calls are timed, advertising budgets are chopped, and staffs are pared. And if those measures don't slow the profits drain, the ultimate order goes out for expenses to be slashed across the board.

"The result is often disillusionment and dismay, and occasionally disaster," says George M. Whitmore, Jr., who, as managing partner of Cresap, McCormick and Paget Inc., has seen the results in person.

In his view, many companies act like turtles in trouble, pulling into their shells until the problems go by. They cut costs, try to remain liquid, and wait for better economic signs. Their strategy is passive.

Whitmore and his partners, who make up one of the larger consulting firms, have just advised clients that that strategy won't do any more, that they must think more strategically — about goals, priorities, contingencies.

The thrust of the message is that too many companies assume recovery automatically follows slump. It might be different this time, they say. Companies must be ready to "dump" or "milk" some activities.

'Kicking' Places

By HUGHA MULLIGAN

AP Special Correspondent

WATERBURY, Conn. (AP) — The old American place kick or municipal put-down is still with us.

People in the public eye — politicians, writers, TV comics — have this compulsion to kick other places, sometimes even the old hometown, to show how urbane they are or how far they've come.

Jackie Gleason was forever deriding the urban charms of Bayonne, N.J.

Burlesque comics could always rouse the balconies from their between-strips slumbers with a belittling reference to Brooklyn, N.Y., Lynn, Mass., or Keokuck, Iowa. And the famous W.C. Field tombstone: "All Things Considered, It's Better Than Philadelphia."

John McNulty once began a New Yorker short story with the totally non-interesting question, "Say, Pal, was you ever in Newark?"

Playwrights worry about bombing in New Haven, Conn., while advance men for presidential candidates and producers for new TV sitcoms wonder if their act will play in Peoria, which is supposed to have inspired the famous Variety headline "HIX NIX STIX PIX."

Now comes that fine novelist Walker Percy putting the knock on Waterbury, Conn.

In the new "Why I Live Where I Live" series just begun in Esquire magazine, Percy says he chose to live in "a nondescript, southern nonplace like Covington, La., just across Lake Ponchartrain from New Orleans because all things considered it beats a nondescript nor-recession scenarios appear possible, ranging from a gradual return to prosperity, to further inflation, to another, still deeper recession, even to major warfare or depression," they say.

Keystone of the strategy is to focus on a company's core business, and to strengthen it if possible, despite the downturn.

"Looking around the corner frequently uncovers new opportunities to reach long-term goals: Cash-strapped competitors become less able to defend their market shares; acquisitions become cheaper...."

But fringe activities must be studied differently. If a company has only a small share in a slow-growing industry, "the name of the game is to get the maximum cash flow," says Whitmore.

That is, milk or dump it. "Why invest dollars of retained earnings in such limited prospects?"

He and his associates believe another area, human resources, provides many opportunities to slim and strengthen. "In prosperity, staff jobs proliferate, the organizational structure mushrooms, tolerance of mediocrity abounds — the enterprise gets fat," they write. Slim down, but selectively, they say. "Keep only the best and work them hard."

Good managers plan for any contingency, says Whitmore. They don't just trim expenses and wait for whatever accident, good or bad, lies ahead. They anticipate. They keep their chief executive informed of options.

University Responsible

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Auditor Henry L. Bridges said Wednesday that officials at the University of North Carolina had sidestepped their responsibility in sorting out the financial troubles at N.C. A&T State University in Greensboro.

"I think the responsibility lies with the administration at A&T and with the UNC general administration," Bridges said.

The auditor challenged a contention by L. Felix Joyner, UNC vice president for finance, that the auditor's office is responsible for seeing that fiscal operations at the state-supported universities run smoothly.

"Our function is an auditing function and not a monitoring function," Bridges said. "We've leaned over backwards for years trying to help them (A&T)."

According to Bridges, oversight responsibility "begins with the Board of Governors, and Felix Joyner is the chief fiscal officer for the Board of Governors ... he is still not accepting any responsibility."

UNC President William C. Friday said: "The responsible office here is my office, not Mr. Joyner or anybody else. I understand what that responsibility requires, and I think that what I have done in the last 48 hours is manifest that I am working to correct the situation."

The auditor's office released a highly critical report on A&T's finances Monday, saying the school's books were in chaos with outstanding debts of nearly $700,000.

but rather to remain and prepare to be self-sufficient, participating members of the community.

Ticking off the items which he sees as major accomplishments in the immediate past, Phillips names competency testing, annual testing, primary reading programs, kindergartens, extending the school year to a full 10 months, and expanded programs in trade and industrial education, industrial arts, vocational agriculture, health occupations, and other fields.

Looking to the coming two years, Phillips says substantial expenditures will be targeted on keeping young people in school and to expand the number of adults in the classrooms; reducing class size in all levels, improved instruction in reading, language arts and mathematics, and by providing classroom aides in the fourth and fifth grades as has already been done in the lower grades.

I don't know if Percy has ever been in Waterbury, whether he has close family ties here or just picked the name out of the air to have a place to pick on, but non-descript is not just for Waterbury.

But even before Percy's put-down, Waterbury had something of an image problem.

Fred Allen said when he and Portland got married, their theatrical bookings only allowed two days for a honeymoon. They decided to go to Waterbury because it would seem longer there.

Land-Use Law Support Seen

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A survey of local officials in western North Carolina indicate most of them favor a state land-use law, according to researchers from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

David J. Brower of UNC's Center for Urban and Regional Studies said 70 percent of the local officials surveyed favored state regulation and permits for development in environmentally sensitive areas.

Such a state law would be similar to the one that created the state's Coastal Area Management Act.

Carter Will Politick, But Rivals Still Complain

JONES FOUND GUILTY — Dr. Johnny Jones, former head of the nation's fifth largest school system in Dade County, Fla. and a native of Pitt County in North Carolina, leaves circuit court in Miami after being found guilty in the "Gold Plumbing Caper". Jones was convicted or attempting to use school funds to buy 24-karat bath fixtures for his vacation hideaway. Jones (left, with attorney) could receive at the least a suspended sentence and a five-year prison term plus $5,000 fine at the most. (AP Laserphoto)

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — After being taunted for months to join his rivals on the campaign trail, President Carter plans to leave the White House for "limited" politicking. But Democratic challenger Edward M. Kennedy and Republican front-runner Ronald Reagan still complain.

In a startling reversal, the president told a group of community leaders in the White House Wednesday that the crises which have kept him near his office since the seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Iran last November have become "manageable enough" to allow him to travel.

But press secretary Jody Powell said the president still would not engage Kennedy in a long-challenged debate, since the chief executive "sees no purpose to be gained" by such a confrontation.

Kennedy told a news conference in Indianapolis that the president's decision was "a victory for the American people," but renewed his demand that the president meet him face to face "anyplace...anytime in this country."

The Massachusetts senator huffed that "I can understand why he might not want to debate, because I think he will find it difficult to defend 18 percent inflation and 18 percent interest rates."

Reagan, in Dallas, scorned

the announcement, saying that Carter now appears to be claiming that "the burdens have been lifted off his back, presumably about the hostages which had been his reason for staying in there. He had said he would stay and not do any politicking until they were safely home."

"If he feels freed," Reagan declared, "I wonder if he feels the hostages now somehow are freed."

Carter told his White House audience that he would keep the plight of the hostages "vividly in our minds and hearts." But he went on to say that "a lot of the responsibilities that have been on my shoulders in the past few months have now been alleviated to some degree."

A presidential aide who requested anonymity said Carter's schedule probably wouldn't involve any travel until the end of next week. Until now, his only forays since the hostage-taking have been to nearby Camp David and a trip Monday to a military hospital in San Antonio to visit the commandos who were injured in the aborted rescue attempt in Iran.

Carter had dropped no hint that he would hit the campaign trail soon during his nationally televised news conference Tuesday night, but aides said that was the day in which he had signaled to them his change of heart. And they admitted that the question which brought about the revelation on Wednesday was "planted" with Charles Manatt, head of the finance council of the Democratic National Committee.

The president expanded at some length on his answer, saying the attempt to free the Americans still held captive was "completed," as were decisions to impose economic sanctions against Iran as well as key domestic moves such as his anti-inflation program.

Carter's decision to campaign came, as Kennedy himself noted, after several defeats by the senator, including the Michigan caucuses last Saturday, the Pennsylvania primary on April 22 and the New York and Connecticut primaries a month ago. Nonetheless, the president still holds a commanding lead in convention delegates, 1,109.3 to 639.1, with 1,666 needed to nominate.

Presidential aides seemed resigned to a storm of criticism. One declared, "We are prepared to be accused of just about everything." But another said the new policy was "something a lot of people wanted to see for a long time. He can't be held hostage here forever." Neither official wished to be identified.

As recently as April 23, Carter declared that he would not campaign until the hostage crisis was resolved. On Feb. 13, he said that "I am not going to resume business as usual as a partisan campaigner out on the campaign trail until our hostages are back here free and at home."

Reagan said on Wednesday that Carter's handling of the Iranian crisis was "a national disgrace." But, in El Paso, Texas, he said that "We support the president in seeking to save the hostages and we deeply regret that this mission failed...specific action to bring the hostages home was long overdue."

In Fort Worth, Texas, Republican George Bush said the Senate should seize upon the confirmation hearings of Secretary of State-designate Edmund S. Muskie for a "thorough review" of Carter's foreign policy.

Kennedy, in Indiana, said that while he wanted to confront Carter on his economic and energy policies, "I think the principal debate will be on foreign policies generally."

In Detroit, Rep. John B. Anderson, fighting to gain 18,000 petition signers by Monday to qualify as an independent for Michigan's ballot in November, took another whirl at telling local voters what they probably don't want to hear.

Anderson was sharply critical of federal loan guarantees for the Chrysler Corp., saying, "I feel the free enterprise system carries with it penalties as well as rewards...I do not favor on a specialized basis a bailout for an individual business corporation."

Major Crime In N.C. Saw Its Highest Jump

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Major crimes increased in North Carolina last year by 9.6 percent, the highest jump in the state's crime rate since 1975, according to the top FBI agent in the state.

North Carolina's rate of crime increase was 1.6 above the national average, according to FBI statistics released Wednesday.

Statistics also showed that the South led the nation in crime increase — up 10 percent in 1979 compared to 7 percent for the rest of the country.

Robert L. Pence, special agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina, said major crimes in the state increased by only 1.9 percent in 1978.

He said crime was up 8 percent in 1979 in the five North Carolina cities with populations of 50,000 or more. These are Greensboro, Winston-Salem, Charlotte, Durham and Raleigh.

Crime was up 9 percent in rural areas. Violent crime increased by 11 percent over the state, Pence said.

Violent crimes include murder, rape, robbery and aggravated assault.

Durham led North Carolina's major cities in the incidence of crime with a 21 percent increase over 1978. Raleigh recorded a crime increase of 13 percent. Winston-Salem had a 10 percent increase, and Greensboro, 5 percent.

Charlotte's crime rate was down 1 percent.

Pence said the FBI has not been able to explain the drastic increase in crime in the state or the nation.

"There's just no way to know what contributes to high crime rates in an average year," he said.

However, Pence speculated that uncertain economic conditions may have contributed to the rise in crime in the past year.

"This is only speculation, but during the last recession — 1973, 1974, 1975 — the crime rate rose by 18 percent," he said.

"But in 1976, when economic conditions improved, that rate dropped to a very low level."

"During a recession, there's more unemployment, unrest, depression, frustration, and based on statistics, the last time crime went up this quickly was during a recession," Pence said.

He said the FBI has launched a program to reduce the number of bank robberies in the state. The number of bank robberies during 1979 was 115, up from 47 in 1978.

Pence said the FBI is depending on cooperation from local police departments and citizens to help in an all-out battle against crime in the state.

"The public must be alert to crime," he said. "Part of the program in the FBI is crime resistance, how to reduce crime in businesses and neighborhoods."

"We really need the cooperation and awareness of the public. Without the people, we can't succeed."

Three Arrested By Police

Greenville Police yesterday arrested three local men on charges of possession of stolen property, Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning.

The three were identified as Leo Smith, 28 of 418 Tyson St., Jimmy Lee Harris, 26 of 401 Darden Dr., and Steven Ray Atkinson, 26 of 301 Dudley St.

Cannon said the four were charged with possessing four suits, valued at between $400 and $500 dollars, which were allegedly taken from a Williamston business.

Bond for the three was set at $1,500 each.

Budget Protest

ATLANTA (AP) — A coalition of more than 40 organizations has announced plans for an 11-day protest throughout the Southeast of proposed federal budget cuts which coalition leaders say will spell disaster for the poor.

The "survival week" protest, to be waged in eight Southeastern states, starts today with news conferences in each state and ends May 11 with a mass rally in Atlanta. It is intended to focus attention on budget cuts under debate in Congress to help balance the federal budget, organizers said in a statement released Wednesday.

"Survival week must send a message to Congress and the president," said spokeswoman Oleta Fitzgerald of The Children's Foundation. "Inflation is already cutting the incomes of poor families by 25 percent and the proposed budget cuts would reduce their incomes by another 10 to 20 percent."

President Carter's economic advisers "say the benefits of a balanced budget are 'symbolic' but the damage to poor families would be much too real," Ms. Fitzgerald said. "Congress is trying to put the burden of inflation on the poor, the people who are already suffering the most."

Included in the protest period — which includes days devoted to letter writing and telegram campaigns — is a rally May 10 in Americus followed by a three-mile march to President Carter's hometown of Plains.

Participating in the protest are organizations from Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Kentucky, Louisiana, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee.

FTC Out Of Money, Faces Shutdown

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission is fresh out of money because Congress, at least temporarily, has failed to enact new legislation to pay the bills.

Similar things have happened in the past, but this time there's a new wrinkle: The attorney general says the agency has no choice but to shut down.

Four Bicycles Are Stolen

Four bicycles were reported stolen from Cozart's Auto Supply Co. at 814 Dickinson Ave. early today by thieves who broke out a large window at the front of the store.

Police Chief Glenn Cannon said the incident was reported at 12:30 a.m.

He noted that one of the bicycles, valued at $123, was recovered about 2 a.m. at a parking lot at the intersection of Dickinson and Grand Avenues.

Investigation of the incident is continuing.

The FTC's 1,700 employees were told to report for work today, but only "for the purpose of closing down the agency." Asked what this meant, one official said: "We can secure our files. Things like that. But we can't do our regular work."

The money stopped flowing despite a House-Senate conference committee's approval Wednesday of a compromise bill funding the agency for three more years.

Before that action can be converted into dollars and cents, however, the conference committee report must be written and submitted to both the House and Senate for final approval before being sent to President Carter for signature into law.

As a stop-gap solution, the House Appropriations Committee was expected to take action today on an emergency bill that would supply $55 million to the FTC until the permanent measure is enacted.

Federal agencies, including the FTC, have been left without funds for short periods on similar occasions in the past. In most cases they continued some activities on the assumption the legislation would be approved quickly.

However, a recent opinion by Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti said that business-as-usual approach in the absence of official funding violates a 110-year-old law. He indicated the law allows no spending beyond what is required to shut down agency operations.

"No statute permits federal agencies to incur obligations to pay employees without an appropriation for that purpose," Civiletti said in an April 25 letter to President Carter.

The measure approved by the conference committee Wednesday contains permanent reductions in authority for the commission, whose pro-consumer regulations have angered many business groups. Business lobbyists flocked to Capitol Hill to urge the FTC be restrained.

The conferees approved a provision that would allow Congress to nullify future FTC regulations by votes in both the House and Senate. The president would be unable to veto such nullification decisions.

The original House version of the bill would have allowed either house, acting alone, to nullify the regulations. The Senate had opposed any congressional veto at all over the FTC except through passage of formal bills, which would be subject to presidential veto.

The compromise bill also would strip the FTC of authority to regulate advertising the agency finds to be "unfair," but would allow it to regulate "deceptive" advertising.

Youth Rate

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The youth unemployment rate in North Carolina last year was more than twice that of the remainder of the state's total civilian labor force, according to a report published this month by the state Employment Security Commission.

Nearly 10 percent of the 641,200 North Carolinians between the ages of 16 and 24 were unemployed in 1979 compared to the 4.8 percent jobless rate for the state's entire labor force.

The 9.8 percent figure among workers in the 16-24 age group accounted for 48.7 percent of the state's unemployment figure. That group as a whole comprises 23.8 percent of the labor force.

The unemployment rate was better for older youths, the report said. While the 16-to-17-year-old group had a 15.3 percent unemployment rate, 20-to-24-year-olds were unemployed at the rate of 7.5 percent.

The jobless rate for male youths was 9.4 percent while it was 10.2 percent for females.

FIRE — Heavy damage resulted to a house at 426 West Third St. last night when a fire erupted in the dwelling. Investigators reported that material taken from a wood stove and placed on the floor of the dwelling apparently started the fire which caused heavy fire, smoke and water damage to the building. The fire was reported at 10:33 p.m. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest).

7,000-Pound Cake Baked

LYNN, Mass. (AP) — What's red, white and blue on the outside, yellow on the inside, weighs 7,000 pounds and has to be carried by a compliment of National Guardsmen and sailors?

A birthday cake for Boston, of course.

The behemoth pastry, completed Wednesday by Lynn baker Arthur Strasnick, celebrates the city's 350th birthday.

Strasnick's creation will be the centerpiece today when Boston kicks off its summer-long celebration with festivities at the city's Government Center.

But before Mayor Kevin White and other notables can cut the cake, a convoy of National Guardsmen and personnel from the Charlestown Navy Yard will have to transport it via a 2½-ton Army truck and a commercial van from Lynn.

Strasnick, who has baked giant cakes for other occasions, started work on his latest creation April 20th. He estimates it took 250 hours to make.

How do you make a 3½-ton cake? The recipe includes 2,000 pounds of flour, 1,000 pounds of sugar, 500 pounds of shortening, 3,000 eggs, 2,000 quarts of milk.

Strasnick said he made the $3,500 cake for free, as a birthday present to the city. He will also be contributing a 16-foot cake later next month to commemorate the second visit of the Tall Ships.

Regional Quake Network Slated

MANILA (AP) — Southeast Asia experiences at least one severe earthquake a year and a blockbuster tremor every decade.

According to seismology experts, the region extending from Thailand to Papua New Guinea is one of the world's most seismically active areas. The lives and property of some 200 million people are liable to sudden destruction.

In view of this, efforts to predict and prepare for earthquakes are increasing. A regional network for earthquake prediction and preparedness has been set up by Hong Kong, Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines and Thailand.

Eagle Award Is Given

AYDEN — Tony Burton Tripp of Ayden received scouting's highest honor, the Eagle Scout Award, during recent ceremonies at Ayden Christian Church.

The Eagle Scout, son of Mr. and Mrs. Burt Tripp of Ayden, is a member of Troop 34, sponsored by the Ayden Rotary Club.

A seventh grade student at Ayden Grammar School, Tripp is a member of Ayden Christian Church and is active in Chi Rho. He was recently inducted into the Order of the Arrow.

TONY TRIPP

For his Eagle project, Tripp worked to earn money to finance a landscaping project at his church. The project was completed last fall.

He has attended summer camp at Herbert C. Bonner Scout Camp for three years where he earned badges and learned skills that he needed for advancement in scouting. Tripp received letters of congratulations on his recent honor from President Jimmy Carter, Gov. Jim Hunt, and Congressman Walter Jones.

The network provides information on the magnitude and location of earthquakes in the region, thus aiding the organization of rescue and relief efforts.

Taiwan Delegation On Shopping Trip

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Taiwanese delegation spent a few hours in North Carolina Wednesday on a $7.5 million shopping trip for Tar Heel products.

The 45-member delegation, sponsored by Taiwan's government, was expected to purchase $4.6 million in leaf tobacco from eight companies and $2.9 million worth of telecommunications equipment from Western Electric Co. in Winston-Salem.

The state Agriculture Department said Taiwan ranks behind Japan, England and German as the largest overseas buyer of North Carolina tobacco.

Overall, the delegation plans to spend $1.9 billion during its tour of the United States — $1.46 million on industrial equipment and supplies and the rest on farm products.

Patrick P.C. Chang, a Taiwanese representative in New York, said earlier this week the delegation's expenditures would nearly eliminate Taiwan's 1979 trade imbalance with the United States. He was in Raleigh to prepare for the delegation's visit during its two-month, 23-state buying tour.

The delegation includes executives of private business and trade associations as well as government monopolies such as the Taiwan Tobacco and Wine Monopoly Bureau.

Commission's Meet Cancelled

The Pitt County Sediment Control Commission's scheduled May 5 meeting has been cancelled.

Craig Smith, sediment control officer said the session was cancelled because there were no erosion and sedimentation control plans to be reviewed.

A-Bomb Kid A Candidate

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
WESTPORT, Conn. (AP)
— Does the name John Aristotle Phillips ring a bell? Conjur up a mild explosion perhaps?

The news that a John Aristotle Phillips has announced to run for a seat in Congress comes as, well, a bombshell — if it turns out he is THE John Aristotle Phillips. Sure enough, he is. Remember the Princeton undergraduate who designed an atomic bomb? That's him. John Aristotle Phillips. The A-Bomb Kid.

"My campaign slogan is 'new energy for the '80s,'" said Phillips, who will be 25 years old just before the election and thus eligible to serve.

"I've reached the conclusion that the nuclear power industry just has to be shut down, and I believe I can do more about it as a congressman than I can otherwise. I have a point to make."

Last time John Aristotle Phillips had a point to make was four years ago, and his point was that if a junior physics student with less than average grades, using information available to the public, could design an atomic bomb, then presumably any terrorist who could get his hands on some plutonium could build one.

It took him five and one half months to compose his 34-page thesis. When word got out what he had done, the government, appalled, took the thesis away from Phillips and stamped it secret.

Phillips immediately became somewhat of a cult hero.

So what has the A-Bomb Kid — a nickname he figures will be with him always — been up to lately?

"I finished school, of course," he said. "I had a thriving pizza business going on the campus, Aristotle's Pizza Delivery Service, so I stayed an extra year at Princeton."

"My pizza partner, David Michaelis, and I wrote a book together titled, 'Mushroom: The True Story of the A-Bomb Kid,' and the book has been doing very well. David has gone on to become a freelance writer."

"After I left Princeton, I started the Fund for Secure Energy, FUSE, a non-profit organization promoting mainly, energy policies resulting from a six-year study by the Harvard Business School."

"I've been doing a lot of lecturing for FUSE, and we have raised $150,000 for advertising."

"I have also started a business with my brother Dean. He's a senior at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. We're interested in such things as calculators and, perhaps later on, solar energy systems. Our first product ought to be ready by Christmas. It ought to make nothing but money."

"I also spent a lot of time in Hollywood negotiating for a two-hour TV movie about the A-Bomb Kid." He canceled the project because of the poor script.

Phillips said he has no misgivings about capitalizing on his A-bomb celebrity if it will help in his crusade against nuclear energy, or in his business, or his congressional campaign.

He said he draws the line, though, when it comes to profiteering on what he considers an unworthy movie without motive. "I designed the bomb to prove a point, not to make a buck."

Thomas Jefferson First Sec. Of State To Resign

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Thomas Jefferson was the first secretary of state to say the hell with it.

William Jennings Bryan was another. Now, Cyrus Vance.

Vance left saying: "I could not support the difficult decision taken by the president on the rescue operation in Iran."
Those words are key: "I could not support."
Beginning with Jefferson in George Washington's administration, American history has had its share of resignations of conscience, even though most of the time the real reason is hidden in honeyed words.

Vance's chosen successor, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, agrees that quitting is the way to handle a disagreement with the boss. Muskie told his first news conference as secretary of state-designate Tuesday that "any man who holds public office who feels he cannot do so without violating his principles does a courageous thing when he resigns the office."

Between 1900 and 1970 alone, say authors Edward Weisband and Thomas M. Franck in their 1975 book, "Resignation in Protest," 389 top American officials resigned of their free will and in their prime. Of that number, 355 left government without trace of public protest and only 34 went public with their disagreement.

Jefferson could not support an administration that ignored his advice. And besides, he was bored. In Bryan's case, it was a note Woodrow Wilson sent the Germans to protest the sinking of the Lusitania.

The first chief justice of the United States, John Jay, resigned because there was not enough work to keep him busy. He became governor of New York, which presumably was more active.

The most famous protest resignation in recent years was that of Attorney General Elliot Richardson and his No. 2 man, William French Smith, in 1973. They resigned rather than follow President Richard Nixon's order to fire Special Watergate Prosecutor Archibald Cox.

The event became known as the Saturday Night Massacre.

Military officers often feel they have no choice but to resign when they oppose the policies of the civilian leadership. Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub resigned in 1977 after publicly disagreeing with President Carter over his plan to withdraw American troops from Korea.

Lt. Gen. Edward Rowley, a SALT negotiator, resigned from the Army in 1979 so he could speak out against the treaty. And Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker wrote a lengthy, blistering complaint that he was barred from speaking out against the dangers of communism before he took off his two stars in 1961.

Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin quit the Army in 1958 because of his disagreement with Dwight Eisenhower's defense policies, quit as John M. Kennedy's ambassador to France because he didn't see eye-to-eye with that administration, and became a loud critic of Johnson administration policies in Vietnam.

Dean Acheson, who later became Harry Truman's secretary of state, quit as Franklin D. Roosevelt's under secretary of the Treasury in 1933 because he disagreed with the president's gold buying plan, a dollar-devaluating maneuver. His letter of resignation concealed any sign of conflict.

When another official resigned with less grace, Roosevelt growled: "Tell that man to go see Dean Acheson to learn how a gentleman resigns."

Years later, a man named John L. Sullivan loudly left the Truman administration, his protest filling the front pages of the morning papers. He was welcomed at a party by Acheson "to the most exclusive club in America — the club of men in public life who have resigned in a cause of conscience."

Harold Ickes, who had made a reputation in the Roosevelt administration as a fearless defender of the public interest, became angered in the Truman years over the nomination of Truman crony Edwin W. Pauley to be under secretary of the Navy. He went public with harsh criticism.

Truman, outraged at such impudence, supported Pauley and Ickes sent a letter of resignation that Truman said was "the sort of resignation a man sent in, knowing it would not be accepted." But Truman did accept it and Ickes made a radio broadcast to the nation.

"Should I have put the country first or the administration first?" he asked. "I have to spend the rest of my life with Harold L. Ickes, and I could no longer, much as I regret it, retain my self respect and stay in the cabinet of President Truman."

Most dissenters leave more quietly: W. Willard Wirtz, George W. Ball and Bill Moyers, all fought President Johnson and the hawks in his administration over Vietnam policy. No trumpets sounded when they left.

Robert S. McNamara began to have serious doubts about the Vietnam war even while he was secretary of defense. He resigned, disenchanted, but made no speeches against his former boss.

Vance wrote Carter that he resigned because he could not offer "the public backing you need on an issue and decision of such extraordinary importance."

Neither in the letter, nor in his brief press conference, did Vance detail what his disagreement was with Carter.

That, to quote Roosevelt, is how a gentleman resigns.

Limited Number Cheap Mortgages Available

By The Associated Press
Mortgage bankers will begin accepting applications today for up to 1,100 low-interest mortgages made available through a state bond issue sold last week. The $50 million in mortgage money will be lent to qualified North Carolina home buyers at 9 1/2 percent over 30 years. That's more the 3 percentage below the current 13 percent rate on government-insured loans.

And it's substantially lower than the 16 to 18 1/2 percent charged on most conventional loans.

The loans are expected to be a shot in the arm for the state's housing industry, which has seen sales fall sharply in the face of rising interest rates. And the state's mortgage bankers expect to be swamped with applications from potential home buyers.

"I'm sure they're going to be beating our doors down," said Vic Mills of NCBN

Mortgage Corp., which has $4.5 million in low-interest money to lend.

The mortgages are available for both new and existing houses although refinancing of loans is not permitted and the money cannot be used to buy a second house if a mortgage is outstanding on the first one.

Sellers of homes financed under the program must pay 3 percent of the mortgage amount in "points," an additional one-time payment to the lender and housing agency.

To be eligible, a family can't earn more than $17,400 in a metropolitan area or $15,000 in a nonmetropolitan area. Large families can earn an additional $500 a year for each family member above four.

Return Laotian Pilot Trainee

NONG KHAI, Thailand (AP) — Thai officials have returned a Laotian air force trainee who asked for asylum but later changed his mind, authorities said today.

The sources said the trainee and his flight instructor flew to Thailand in March in a fighterbomber, but later the trainee said he was homesick and wanted to return.

He was turned over to Laotian officials on Wednesday, but the flight instructor and the plane remain in Thailand, officials said.

Dump Sued For $510 Million

NEW YORK (AP) — A $510 million lawsuit has been filed by a Staten Island family against the owners of a condemned New Jersey chemical dump where explosions and fires sent a cloud of acrid smoke over the metropolitan New York area last week.

The suit, filed Wednesday, accuses the Chemical Control Corp. of Elizabeth, N.J., and six of its current or former officials with recklessness, carelessness and negligence.

Board In Currituck Told No Authority

CURRITUCK, N.C. (AP) - The state attorney general's office has notified Currituck County commissioners they have no authority to hold a referendum on whether the federal government should convert more than 15,000 acres of the Outer Banks into a wildlife refuge.

An opinion presented to the county board Wednesday said no county funds could be spent for any kind of popular ballot unless the vote is authorized by statute or the state constitution.

James Bullock, senior deputy attorney general, said in the opinion that he also questioned whether the federal government could be required to hold such a referendum. He did hold out the possibility, however, that federal money could be used for a popular vote.

The issue of a referendum arose after the commissioners asked the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to conform to a resolution adopted by the General Assembly last year requiring a public ballot whenever any agency acquires more than 30 acres of county land in North Carolina.

In his letter to the county,

Bullock wrote that "Currituck County has no authority to conduct the referendum with public funds ... We do not feel that the federal agency is required hold and conduct the election."

Bullock also questioned whether the legislative resolution was binding on a county.

He said, however, that the county could contract with the county board of elections to hold a vote with the federal agency assuming all costs.

The federal agency has estimated the purchase of the land would cost $101 million.

Lance Savors A Court Victory

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Former U.S. budget director Bert Lance, acquitted on nine bank fraud charges, savored his victory with a call from friend Jimmy Carter and said of the prosecutor who dogged him for years: "We just plain licked 'em."

Despite a hung jury's inability to reach a decision on three other counts, forcing a mistrial on those counts, the president's former adviser said: "I have been totally and completely exonerated."

Lance spoke with Carter after the verdict was handed down Wednesday following a 16-week trial — the longest in Georgia history — and a 2-year federal investigation.

He said Carter reminded him of an occasion nearly three years ago when Carter was taken to task for saying "Bert, I'm proud of you," while Lance was under investigation. Carter told him on Wednesday, "I'm still proud of you," Lance said.

A blue-collar jury of six men and six women deliberated for nine days before handing down its decision. Lance tried to call them individually to thank them for the verdict.

The jurors were unable to reach verdicts on six of the 19 counts against Lance and three associates, all north Georgia businessmen who were friends for years.

U.S. District Judge Charles A. Moyer Jr. declared a mistrial on the remaining counts and said he would consider entering directed verdicts of acquittal after reading briefs from both sides.

In a taped interview today on ABC-TV's Good Morning America, Lance said he was "not making any apologies about my banking style. The bottom line of the Lance case is that my communities have been well served by my activities in the bank.

"I fail the 'perfect test' like everybody. But I don't think I made any mistakes."

Asked if government officials were subject to too much scrutiny, Lance said, "That's a real risk, you've seen that happen. I think we should quit trying to make past actions subject to today's conduct. I think this is a real problem. I think people who been successful in the private sector are not going to take the risks to come into the public sector."

Lance also said that in press coverage of him "overall there was an effort to embarrass the president through me."

Prosecutor Edwin Tomko said he did not know whether the Justice Department would seek a new trial.

"The mistrial on the remaining counts, that doesn't concern me at all," the tall, portly former banker said. "If the government wants to try them again — ring the bell."

All nine counts on which Lance was found innocent charged him with misapplication of funds from the Calhoun First National Bank and the National Bank of Georgia in loans to his family and friends. The jury deadlocked on a 10th misapplication charge and two counts alleging that Lance falsified his financial statements.

Several jurors said the vote was sometimes 10-2 and at other times 8-4 in favor of conviction on the false statement counts.

"I feel and the others feel like financial statements have to be filled out correctly," said Anthony Tigner.

But William M. Savage Jr., a 36-year-old carpenter, said he did not think there was enough evidence for any convictions.

Of the defendants, only Thomas Mitchell was found innocent on all charges. He was accused of making a false statement to a bank in connection with his duties as trustee while all Lance's holdings were in a blind trust.

Richard Carr, a former bank president, was acquitted on three counts and a mistrial was declared on three others, including one in which he and Lance were charged jointly. Jack Mullins, a former druggist, was acquitted on three of four charges. Lance, 48, was named budget director in Carter's first major appointment in 1977.

Radio Station Sued, Picketed

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A minister and members of at least three Charlotte churches picketed WSOC-TV Wednesday for canceling broadcasts by the Rev. Charles Sustar — the same day that Sustar filed a $15 million lawsuit against the station.

WSOC canceled Sustar's "Flames of Revival" program and the Rev. Jerry Falwell's "Old Time Gospel Hour" as of June 1. The two broadcasts will be replaced by children's shows.

Sustar is minister of a Church of God church in Christiansburg, Va.

WSOC also canceled two other Sunday programs, "Day of Discovery" and an evangelist broadcast from Fort Worth, Texas.

The Rev. Garland Faw of Truth Temple in Kannapolis, who announced Sustar's suit Wednesday, said he believes the cancellations are related.

"WSOC has taken an anti-God, anti-preacher, anti-religion stance," Faw said.

WSOC-TV general manager Freeman Jones refused to comment on the picketing.

"I have not been served with any legal papers," he said. "And I have been advised by counsel to make no comments at this time."

Sustar denounced homosexuality in his program that aired last Dec. 30 on WSOC. Citing the Federal Communication Commission's equal time requirements, WSOC preempted Sustar's show on March 2 and allowed the Rev. Nancy Radclyffe of Columbia, S.C., to respond.

On March 16, WSOC refused to broadcast Sustar's show because it contained further discussion of homosexuality. Last Thursday, the station sent Sustar a cancellation notice.

Sustar's suit asks for $5 million in compensatory damages and $10 million in punitive awards. It claims that WSOC was not obligated to provide equal time to Radclyffe. It also contends that the station's actions were "willful, vicious and malicious and violated Sustar's constitutional and civil rights."

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected in the forecast period until Friday morning for the central and southern Plains. Showers are due for the central Gulf. Cool weather is forecast for the Northwest and Northeast. Most of the nation will have mild weather. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Fine weather is on tap through the weekend. High pressure centered over the northern gulf will build north into the state today. This will be the dominating feature over North Carolina for the next several days. Yesterday across the state skies were partly cloudy. This was due to a persistent low pressure area north of the state. This system has now moved northeast out to sea. Afternoon readings on Wednesday were in the 60s with the exception of Wilmington, which recorded 70 degrees. Last night and this morning skies cleared over the state. Lows this morning are in the 40s with 50s along the coast. Sunny skies will dominate the Tar Heel weather picture today and Friday. Fair skies will be on tap tonight. Highs today and Friday will be in the 60s and low 70s. Lows tonight will be mostly in the 40s.

It looks as if the weekend will have fair weather as the low pressure area we had been watching will drift south of the state. There will not be much change in temperature.

32nd Security Council Veto Is Cast By U.S.

By WILLIAM N. OATIS
 Associated Press Writer
 UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States cast its 32nd Security Council veto to kill an Arab resolution calling for Palestinian statehood, contending that it offered "no prospect for making practical progress" toward peace in the Middle East.

The council session Wednesday was delayed by two photographers for an ultra-leftist American newspaper who splashed red paint on Deputy U.S. Delegate William vanden Heuvel's neck and most of Soviet Ambassador Oleg A. Troyanovsky's face, shouting "May Day!" and "Our flag is red — not red, white and blue! Down with Soviet-American war moves!"

"It's just one of those exercises in diplomacy," said vanden Heuvel. But both he and Troyanovsky retired from the council meeting to clean up, leaving others to speak for them.

The two demonstrators, identified as Keith Kojimoto and Stephen Yip, were turned over to the FBI.

The Tunisian resolution got 10 favorable votes, one more than the two-thirds majority required for its adoption. But because the one negative vote was cast by one of the five permanent council members, it counted as a veto and killed the resolution.

The council's four West European members — Britain, France, Norway and Portugal — abstained, while the affirmative votes were cast by the Soviet Union, China, East Germany, Tunisia, Niger, Zambia, Mexico, Jamaica, Bangladesh and the Philippines.

Soviet delegate Mikhail A. Khariamov, condemned the veto, saying: "The anti-Arab essence of American policy in the Middle East is becoming ever clearer with every passing day."

The U.N. observer for the Palestine Liberation Organization, Zehdi Labib Terzi, called the 10 votes for the resolution "a glorious result." He said the United States had chosen to isolate itself and to be singled out as an obstacle to peace and international security.

Before the vote, U.S.

Ambassador Donald F. McHenry told the council the resolution could not "bring the achievement of peace one day closer to practical reality."

He called attention to the new round of Egyptian-Israeli talks on Palestinian autonomy, opening in Israel today, and said they give Israel "a chance to move one step closer to the comprehensive peace it has long sought."

"On an issue of such importance for the world and for the Palestinian and Israeli people themselves, we should not be distracted by approaches that offer no prospect for making practical progress," McHenry said.

The resolution would have added Palestinian statehood to the basic terms for Arab-Israeli peace set out in the council's Resolution 242, adopted after the 1967 Mideast war. That resolution does not specifically mention the Palestinians but speaks of

Vitamin Levels Said A Factor

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — A woman's vitamin B-6 nutritional status during pregnancy appears to affect the baby's condition at birth, says Avanelle Kirksey, a foods and nutrition professor at Purdue University.

The professor in the School of Consumer and Family Sciences says mothers whose infants had unsatisfactory Apgar scores one minute after birth showed vitamin B-6 deficiencies in their diets, blood serum and milk, compared with mothers whose infants had satisfactory scores. An Apgar score is a numerical indicator used by pediatricians to assess newborns' physical status.

CHURCH OF GOD IN CHRIST FINDS

ACCUSATION AGAINST LOCAL ELDER FALSE

An investigation into the matter of an accusation against Rev. C.D. McNeill, local pastor and administrative assistant to the Bishop, L.B. Davenport, has been proven false. The presiding Bishop of the Diocese of Greater North Carolina Church of God in Christ met with a special session of the Elder's Council on Monday, April 21, 1980 and their findings were as follows:

The character of Rev. C.D. McNeill as a Christian gentleman, an upstanding citizen in the Kinston community and in the General Church of God in Christ proves all accusations false.

Such rumors are detrimental to one's reputation and name for the Bible hath said "A GOOD NAME IS RATHER TO BE CHOSEN THAN GREAT RICHES".

We, the Elder's Council conclude therefore that this entire incident be treated as completely false and Rev. C.D. McNeill be cleared of any and all accusations. Respectfully submitted,

Commando Leader Asked Explain

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Army Col. Charles Beckwith, leader of the commando force that staged an aborted attempt to rescue American hostages in Iran, has been asked to explain the failure to the House Armed Services Committee, The Fayetteville Times reported today.

The newspaper quoted Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y., as saying in a telephone interview from Washington Wednesday that the committee has requested an appearance by Beckwith. Stratton is chairman of the committee's investigation subcommittee.

Stratton said Beckwith, who has not made a public appearance since the mission last week, "was supposed to be here today. We haven't gotten any word yet when he'll be available." Stratton said.

briefed in part on what took place at the staging area in Iran called "Desert 1" where eight servicemen lost their lives as a C-130 four-engine aircraft and an RH-53 helicopter collided and burst into flames. The mission had been aborted just prior to the accident after three of the eight helicopters involved developed mechanical problems.

Stratton said the committee wanted to know why more helicopters weren't available for the mission, as it had been decided earlier that a minimum of six was needed.

Stratton said he believed it was the collision of the two aircraft that decided the final fate of the mission.

"My own guess is that there was some argument going on as to whether they should or shouldn't abort," he said.

"According to them (the raiders), ammunition was going off all over the place," Stratton said. "They couldn't wait around for the fire to go out to pick up the bodies. Apparently, they were concerned that if they started running around, they might get hit (by shrapnel)."

Anything could have happened there," Stratton said.

Beckwith has been stationed at Fort Bragg, near Fayetteville. About 50 members of his raiding party returned to Fort Bragg Tuesday.

Security on the base has been tightened since their return.

A network television news team outside Beckwith's home was approached by military police Wednesday afternoon. Tape from their cameras was seized, but later was returned with an apology, a member of the team said.

Runs Up Big Ticket Bill

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — City Traffic Commissioner Jerrold Levitin got caught with his meter expired, so to speak, when it was discovered that he owed $600 in unpaid parking tickets.

Police records showed that two cars owned by Levitin had accumulated 25 unpaid tickets in the last five months. The citations were issued for a wide range of violations, including parking in front of a fire hydrant, in a yellow zone, in a cross walk, in a truck zone and in a bus zone.

Untuned Car Is A Gas-Guzzler

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A key to gas savings is a well-tuned engine.

According to Fram Corp., a manufacturer of auto products, a typical untuned car may travel 12,000 miles a year, get 15 miles per gallon and consume 800 gallons of fuel. If kept in proper tune, however, the same car may average 16.8 mpg and consume 714 gallons of fuel.

This 86-gallon fuel savings could translate into $129 if gas prices reach $1.50, as experts predict — to pay back the cost of a tune-up.

Stratton said Beckwith was in Washington.

"What disturbs me," Stratton said, "is why they didn't continue with five helicopters. I just can't believe these guys who were still gung-ho would opt for washing out."

Stratton said he was under the impression that Beckwith and the helicopter pilots wanted to go on.

Stratton said he had been

"When we asked 'Why not 12 helicopters?' they gave us a twofold answer," Stratton said. "First, if more helicopters were used, there was a greater chance of detection. Second, that the (U.S. aircraft carrier) Nimitz had its own responsibilities. They couldn't just load it with helicopters."

The helicopter flight originated on the aircraft carrier in the Arabian Sea south of Iran. Marine airmen flew the aircraft almost 500 miles inland through sandstorms. The raiding party and fresh fuel for the helicopters were carried to the staging site on C-130s which reportedly embarked from an airfield in Egypt.

Stratton said he also was curious about estimates of anticipated casualties during the planned raid on the embassy where the 50 American hostages were being held.

"The president and the secretary of defense said that was going to be the easiest part of the operation, but that's a little hard to believe."

Ruling Blocks Adoptive Couple

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — An Aiken couple, adopted and raised as brother and sister, want to get married. But a state attorney general's opinion says the law would consider that incestuous.

"They have not gotten married, but they want to," said state Rep. Marshall Cain, who requested the advisory opinion for his two constituents.

"I'm going to tell them under the opinion, they cannot obtain a license from the probate judge," Cain, R-Aiken, said Wednesday. But he added that the opinion reflects a "very literal interpretation" of the state's incest law.

blood brothers and sisters," the Aiken lawyer said.

However, Evans cited a "well-recognized public policy" that seeks to treat adoptive siblings similar to natural brothers and sisters.

"There is no reason to believe that the court would depart therefrom when confronted with the question of the constitutionality of laws prohibiting incestuous marriages," he said.

The law does cover the issue of non-related brothers and sisters, Evans said, because the state considers an adopted child the sibling of the natural child of his adoptive parent. The same rule would apply when neither is a natural child, as in this case, the opinion said.

Aside from other considerations, Evans wrote, "To allow an adoptive child to develop a relationship with and marry any of his siblings, while others in the same household could not, would surely jeopardize that child's psychological wellbeing by creating or promoting peer disapproval, rejection by others, etc."

The law, as he interprets it, does not violate the equal protection clause of the U.S. Constitution, Evans said.

"I'm human like everybody else, and I'm so glad the story has come out," said Levitin, who rules on parking tickets given in the city. "Everybody assumes that me being the traffic commissioner, I can either fix my tickets or I don't have to pay them. It's not true."

Levitin, who is running for a judgeship, told a reporter from KRON-TV that his car had been borrowed by campaign workers and that "I didn't know this was happening."

"When you brought it to my attention, I paid the full amount, like most of the citizens of San Francisco do," he said.

"I'm human, and I also park illegally in a city that's very difficult to park (in)," said Levitin.

BUSTRIP

All persons planning to go on the bus trip to Washington, D.C. that will be leaving Allen Chapel Church at 4 a.m. May 11 are asked to be at the church at 3:30 a.m. Anyone who wants to go can purchase tickets from Mattie Jones at 752-5539; Willie Graham at 752-1567; Leroy Tyson at 752-3531; Dorsey Acklin at 756-3177.

Cain declined to identify the couple, saying to do so would be a breach of confidence.

Assistant Attorney General Edwin S. Evans wrote in the opinion that state law prohibits a man from marrying his sister.

Evans said he believes that law applies to an adopted male and female who, although unrelated by blood, grew up in the same household as brother and sister.

"Additionally," Evans said, "the state possess an important interest in protecting adopted children from the psychological harm which can flow from permitting them to develop romantic relations with each other."

Cain said the state law does not say whether the ban on incestuous marriages applies adoptive siblings.

The law appears aimed at preventing genetic problems "but the same reasoning does not apply where they are not

Month Of May Traditionally Linked To New Life

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — History records many things, but it does not clarify the origin of the name of the month of May.
There are, of course, several theories.
The fifth month in our modern calendar (the third in the old Roman calendar) may have been named for Maia, the mother of Mercury and a diety of growth and increase.
Or it may have been named for Mala Majesta, a local Italian goddess of spring, to whom sacrifices were made in the interest of fruitful crops.

Or, again, the name might have been taken from "maiores," meaning elders, so that the month might honor older people just as June honored the young.

Whatever its origin, May seems to have been recognized in ancient times as the month of new life. In Europe, May is the month in which nature springs forth in new growth and crops are planted for summer harvest.

It is not surprising, therefore, that from time immemorial May has been a time of seeking blessings for a bountiful harvest.

The first day of May — appropriately called May Day — produced agricultural rituals in pre-Christian days. Homage was made to trees and leaf-covered branches, and often a person or doll was substituted as a symbol of vegetation. Elaborate festivals were intended to bring the blessings of the gods upon all living things.

These festivals were continued on into the Middle Ages and were especially popular in medieval and Tudor England where the day began with the people of the villages going into the countryside before dawn to gather flowers and branches of trees.

Hawthorne branches were believed to be especially lucky, and the people marched back into the villages to the accompaniment of horns and drums. The branches were used to decorate the windows and doors of the houses.

A maypole, sometimes 100 feet tall, was planted in a prominent place and decorated with wreaths of flowers, greenery and ribbons. The pole represented a tree, and the crowds gaily danced and sang around it.

A fair maid of the village was selected as the queen of May, placed in a handsome arbor of flowers and branches and paid homage by the crowds. In large cities like London the maypole was left up and redecorated the following year.

For many devout Christians, however, the revelry of May Day too closely resembled pagan rites. In 1583 John Stubbes in his "anatomy of Abuses" called maypoles "stinking idols" about which people "leape and dance, as the heathen did."

Consequently, the Puritan Revolution uprooted the maypoles and banned observance of the day.

The popularity of the old customs was indicted, however, when they were revived with great celebration following the restoration of the monarchy in 1660.

May Day celebrations became popular in many other countries, and their meaning gradually changed from place to place.

Until late in the 18th Century in Scotland and Ireland, the old Celtic practice included great bonfires. People jumped over fires, or cattle were driven between fires, all presumably to increase fertility and promote their propagation.

The festival of "Beltane," originally held in May, was Christianized by the church in Ireland and transferred to June 24 as the feast of St. John, an event still celebrated with bonfires.

In modern America, May Day was popular at public schools and on college campuses, though its original meaning was lost. Election of a May queen and dancing around gaily decorated maypoles became an end in themselves, devoid of the earlier religious meaning of the ceremonies.

In 1889 the International Socialist Congress, seeking to capitalize on a popular holiday, designated May 1 as international labor day. Since then, it has become the rally date for communism and other revolutionary causes, and this politicization of May Day probably accounts for its gradual loss of excitement in western countries.

"May day" — the international distress signal — has no connection with the celebration. This term, in fact, comes from the French "M'aider," meaning "help me."

Internship For Student

Pitt Community College agri-business student Dean Mears has been awarded a summer internship with the North Carolina Department of Administration. The PCC placement office announced that Mears was one of 125 students to be appointed to this program.

Mears has been assigned to the North Carolina Livestock Reporting Service with the Department of Agriculture in Raleigh.

The 1980 internship program will extend for a 10 week period from June 2 through August 8. During the summer, interns will spend some time in specifically designed, Youth Involvement Office sponsored developmental activities such as seminars, discussion groups, and an orientation.

Bill Moore, faculty advisor to Mears said, "He is an exceptional student and is very deserving of the honor to have been selected from a group of 600 for this internship."

Mears is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mears of 407 Carriage Lane, Cary.

Center Receives National Award

The Eastern North Carolina Vocational Center here has received a certificate of achievement from the National Industries for the Severely Handicapped for the year 1979. The NISH award is part of a new program designed to recognize those facilities that have maintained a high standard of performance throughout the calendar year in producing a commodity/service for the federal government under the mandatory provisions of the Javits-Wagner-O'Day Act. Eivind H. Johansen, executive vice-president of NISH said, "We feel that this certificate symbolizes a job well-done, and hope it will communicate to workshop staff, client-employees, and visitors, that handicapped individuals, under professional guidance and given the opportunity, can be productive, contributing members of society, and can earn a substantial wage. "We commend your outstanding efforts and wish you continued success," under the program, Johansen concluded. Included in the criteria for the award are: no delinquent deliveries, overall performance, timely submission of reports, and no adverse comments from procuring agencies.

Prison Population Tops 15,000 Mark

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Correction Secretary Amos E. Reed said Wednesday North Carolina's prison population has passed the 15,000 mark for the first time as a result of a dramatic increase in the last five months. But Reed said the increase was "not unique to North Carolina. Prison population is going up all over the country." Prison officials said there were several possible reasons for the higher population, including more time actively served in prison by inmates, harsher sentencing by judges and inflation. "The number of felons has increased and they tend to have longer sentences because their crimes are more serious. There has definitely been a trend to longer sentences," Reed said. "The tendency on the part of the general public is to want people to go to prison more and more and to stay longer."

The total prison population is about 1,150 over the system's so-called emergency capacity. Central Prison had a population Wednesday of 1,324, well above its emergency capacity of 900. The overall inmate population has increased by nearly 800 since Jan. 1.

Find Student Innocent

David Landin Peterson, 18, an East Carolina University student, from Toms River, N.J., was found not guilty of sale and possession of marijuana charges in Pitt County Superior Court yesterday. Peterson was one of 15 persons arrested by Greenville police and State Bureau of Investigation agents in late March on drug charges as a result of an undercover investigation. All but two of the defendants were ECU students. A jury returned the not guilty verdict after hearing testimony in the case. The trial of Stacy A. Duncan III of Dunn, another student, charged with possession and sale of cocaine, was underway today. Several others have entered guilty pleas in connection with their cases this week. Some are scheduled to be sentenced tomorrow.

Voter Guides Are Available
Voters Guides on primary candidates for North Carolina state offices, compiled and published by the N. C. League of Women Voters, are now available at Shepard Memorial Library, according to local Voters Service chairperson, Carolyn Bowyer. All state-wide candidates who have primary opposition were asked by the league for biographical information and answers to questions pertaining to each specific office. Citizens may drop by the library to obtain a free copy of the questionnaire.

Lakers Take Western Series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There will be no more miracles by the defending National Basketball Association champion Seattle SuperSonics this year. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, with a little help from his friends, made sure of that.

Seattle fought from the brink of elimination in its Western Conference semifinal series with Milwaukee, coming from a 3-2 deficit to beat the Bucks and earn a shot at Los Angeles in the conference finals. The Sonics fell behind again, but the Lakers wouldn't let them off the hook.

With Abdul-Jabbar performing brilliantly, even for him, the Lakers finished strong, as has been their pattern recently, to end Seattle's season 111-105 Wednesday night and earn a berth in the NBA championship series against Eastern Conference titlist Philadelphia.

So the Sonics were eliminated, meaning that for the 11th straight year there won't be an NBA champion successfully defending its title. That hasn't happened since the Boston Celtics won in 1967-68 and again the following season.

There will be a couple of red-hot teams competing in the NBA finals, the Lakers, who are 8-2 in postseason play, and the 76ers, who are 10-2 in playoff action.

Los Angeles lost the opener of its best-of-seven series to Seattle 108-107 at the Forum, where the Lakers were 37-4 during the regular season, and will open the finals against the 76ers Sunday afternoon.

But after that setback, the Lakers blew the Sonics away in four straight. Seattle was bidding to become only the fourth team in NBA history to come back from a 3-1 deficit in a playoff series, but it wasn't to be.

Abdul-Jabbar had game-high totals of 38 points, 11 rebounds and seven blocked shots Wednesday night. He scored 12 points in the fourth quarter, including a skyhook with 3:13 to go that gave the Lakers a lead they would hold the rest of the way.

"Seattle beat us in the playoffs last year, so it was nice to return the favor," said Abdul-Jabbar, who is playing these days with the exuberance of a fuzzy-cheeked rookie and the brilliance of the perennial all-pro that he is. "We wanted to win tonight and not have to go back to Seattle. This was not the time for us to have a bad game."

It looked for a while that there might be a Game Six. Seattle led 59-46 late in the second quarter, 62-54 at halftime and through most of the second half. But the Lakers scored 14 of the game's final 21 points to win going away.

Twenty-year-old rookie Earvin "Magic" Johnson, playing with the coolness of a 10-year veteran, had 20 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists for the Lakers. Norm Nixon and Jamaal Wilkes added 19 and 15 points, respectively, for Los Angeles.

Wilkes received a blow above the right eye early in the second half and missed most of the third quarter. But he returned with 36 seconds left in the period and scored eight points down the stretch.

Dennis Johnson led the Sonics with 29 points, including a 40-foot three-point field goal as the third quarter ended which gave his team an 84-82 advantage heading into the final 12 minutes.

John Johnson and Gus Williams added 19 and 18 points, respectively, for Seattle. Fred Brown, who scored 34 points in Game One, had only 10 this time, just two of them in the second half.

"This was a difficult game for us, the hardest yet so far for us to play," said Los Angeles Coach Paul Westhead.

"Seattle played a great game. We were not looking forward to playing another game against them."

"We have a big job ahead of us. But we will enjoy tonight and begin getting ready for Philadelphia tomorrow."

Seattle Coach Len Wilkens expressed disappointment, but also praise for the both his team and the Lakers.

"Naturally, I'm disappointed," he said. "We played hard and we executed our game plan very well. I was happy with the way we played. If we have to lose, the other team has to beat us. We can't beat ourselves."

"The Lakers have a real fine team now and with a real fine team, Kareem is unbelievable."

The Lakers earned the homecourt advantage over the 76ers by a whisker. Los Angeles was 60-22 during the regular season, Philadelphia 59-23.

Game Two will be played at the Forum next Wednesday night, with Games Three and Four at Philadelphia on May 10-11.

"It's a beautiful feeling and it's been a great season so far," he said. "We know how tough Philadelphia is, and we will be ready. You can go far

Paschal, Brewington, Harrell Are Drafted

Two Greenville football players, teammates in high school, were among those selected by the professionals in the NFL draft completed yesterday.

Doug Paschal, a member of the 1975 State Championship team at Rose, and teammate Mike Brewington, both were selected, along with Sam Harrell, a current teammate of Brewington's at East Carolina.

Paschal, who starred at the University of North Carolina over the past four years as a running back, was a fifth round draft choice of the Minnesota Vikings. While rumors had earlier circulated that Paschal was not interested in playing pro football, his mother, Mrs. Herb Paschal, said that wasn't the case.

"He is very excited about it and is looking forward to it. Our only regret is that it's so far from home and so cold," she said.

Mrs. Paschal said that Doug had contacted the family after being drafted, and said that he was pleased to have been drafted by the Vikings. He is expected to report next week for orientation.

Attempts to contact Paschal in Chapel Hill were unsuccessful.

Brewington, who played linebacker on the Rose team and at East Carolina, was picked up in the final round by the Kansas City Chiefs.

"I feel all right about it," he said. "At least I've got a chance. I'm a little disappointed that I didn't go higher, but that's okay. It was a surprise to be drafted by Kansas City, but I had talked earlier with one of their scouts and he told me that they'd be looking for a good linebacker. The reason they took so long, the coach (Mary Levy) told me, was that they were drafting by position. He said he thought I had an excellent chance to make the team."

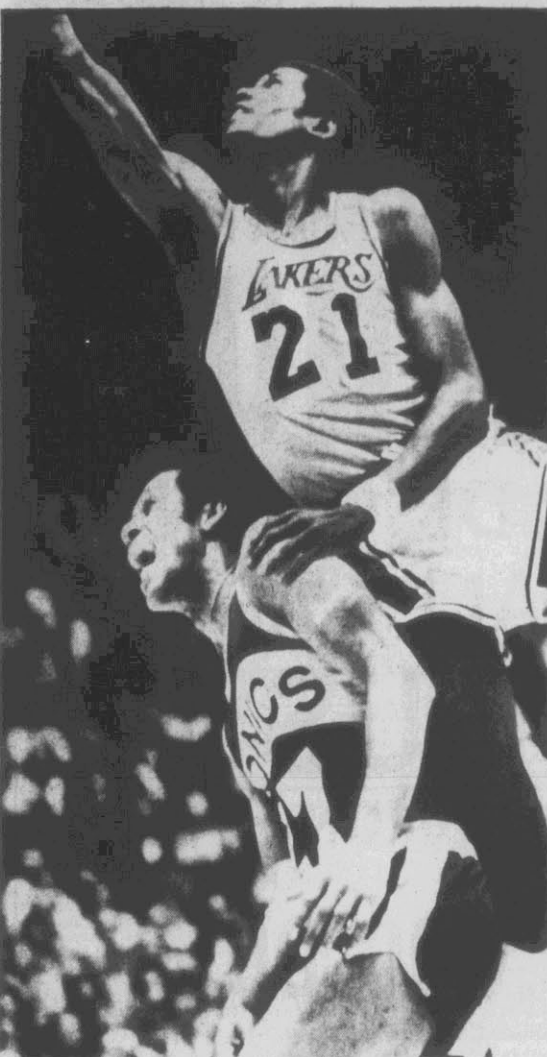

Brewington is to report for his first sessions on May 16.

Harrell, an 11th round choice, also was picked by the Vikings. He said he was quite excited about the prospects of being with the vikes. "I'll still be wearing the Purple," he said. Harrell, a halfback at East Carolina, is not expected to be vying for the same position as Paschal, more of a fullback type.

If both Brewington and Paschal make their respective teams, it would give Greenville three active players in the NFL. Al Hunter, who graduated from Notre Dame, plays with the Seattle Seahawks.

Mitchell Johnston, an offensive guard on the East Carolina team, also has signed a free-agent contract with the Dallas Cowboys. Johnston was a starter for the South in the Blue-Gray post-season all-star contest.

Same Names, But Different Faces

NEW YORK (AP) — Tatum and Bradshaw. The names, linked together before, are entwined again. But one of the faces is different.

It doesn't belong to Terry Bradshaw, the quarterback of the Pittsburgh Steelers, whose 1972 playoff pass became Franco Harris' "immaculate reception" when Oakland's Jack Tatum deflected the ball.

Instead, it is Craig Bradshaw, Terry's kid brother, a reserve quarterback at Utah State in 1979 and, on Wednesday, a seventh-round pick by the Houston Oilers in the National Football League draft.

Tatum, once an All-Pro defensive back, once one of the most feared safeties in the business, was part of the three-for-one deal which enabled the Oilers to pick the younger Bradshaw — which shows just how much Tatum's market value has plummeted.

In exchange for Tatum and Oakland's seventh-round pick this year (Bradshaw) and next, all the Raiders got in return was running back Kenny King. As a rookie last year, King, a third-round pick out of Oklahoma, carried the ball three times for nine yards.

Tatum and Bradshaw were the only real "name" players mentioned during Wednesday's conclusion of the two-day, 12-round, 17-hour, 333-player draft. Among the other veterans changing teams — each in exchange for a low-round pick this year or next — were running back Don Hardeman, from Baltimore to Denver, tight end Paul Seal, from San Francisco to Tampa Bay, and defensive end Willie Fry, from Pittsburgh to San Francisco.

This year as last, the last of the draftees was picked by Pittsburgh. This time it was Tyrone McGriff, a guard from Florida A&M.

In all, the 28 teams drafted 165 offensive players (45 running backs, 39 wide receivers, 19 tackles, 18 guards, 18 quarterbacks, 16 centers and 10 tight ends), 159 defensive players (58 defensive backs, 50 linebackers, 30 ends and 21 tackles) and nine specialists (four kickers, four punters and a kick returner).

Nebraska and Southern California contributed 10 players apiece to share the lead among colleges (Baylor and Oklahoma were next with nine apiece), while the Pacific 10 was the top conference with 41 draftees to the Southwest Conference's 38.

Tatum's fall from grace shows what can happen when a player is enveloped by controversy.

A few years ago he was an integral part of an unsuccessful lawsuit filed by then-teammate George Atkinson, who took umbrage at Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll's pointed suggestions that a "criminal element" existed in pro football.

In a 1978 exhibition game, Tatum and New England's Darryl Stingley collided in midair on a pass play. The Patriots' young wide receiver was paralyzed from the neck down. Although Tatum was absolved of any guilt, it clearly affected him. His intensity and effectiveness seemed to dissolve.

And because he never contacted Stingley during his lengthy hospitalization (Tatum said he was told not to), the Patriots characterized him as callous, a label which further blackened his reputation.

Then, in 1979, he helped to smudge it some more. He wrote "They Call Me Assassin," a provocative book in which he admitted he and Atkinson had conducted their own little game of "knockout" wherein each tried to outdo the other in injuring or kayoing opposing players.

"I haven't read the book, but I think it was written to sell," said Oilers Coach Bum Phillips, insisting it had no bearing on the trade. "I've never seen him do anything I wouldn't want one of my players to do."

Tatum, too, said he thought the book was only incidental. "Al Davis just wants to rebuild the team and give the younger guys a chance to play. I really don't think the book had anything to do with it."

And Oakland Coach Tom Flores noted: "We had no problem with Jack... But we felt we had to make a move to let our younger players play."

What cleared the way for the trade was the Raiders' acquisition on Tuesday of Burgess Owens, a starting safety for the New York Jets. "When they traded for Owens, I knew some kind of deal was up," Tatum said. "It didn't surprise me at all. It's not a bad move for me at this time in my career. I'll be playing for a contender with a shot to get to another Super Bowl."

That presumes he'll stick with Houston. When the Raiders shipped quarterback Ken Stabler to the Oilers he filled the void created by Dan Pastorini's departure to Oakland. But Tatum is joining a defensive unit which already has an All-Pro (Mike Reinfeldt) and a playoff sensation (Vernon Perry, with his five interceptions) in the starting safety positions.

"He is a proven player who can help us attain our goal," Ed Biles, Houston's defensive coordinator, said of Tatum. "All he does is strengthen our roster."

If Bradshaw finds a home in Houston, he'll likely become the No. 3 quarterback behind Stabler and Gifford Nielsen. Guido Merkens, a reserve wide receiver and safety, was listed as the third-string quarterback in '79.

Despite being the backup at Utah State to Eric Hipple (drafted in the third round by Detroit), the 6-5, 215-pound Bradshaw managed to complete 52 of 112 passes for 1,021 yards and nine touchdowns, one of them a school-record 96-yarder, in 1979. "The scouts say he can throw a football through a wall," Phillips said.

Trevino May Be Man To Beat, But Burns Is One To Watch

HOUSTON (AP) — Lee Trevino may be the man to beat, but George Burns is a man to watch in the $350,000 Houston Open golf tournament.

It's an adage on the pro golf tour that the man or men most likely to win this week are the man or men who have been playing well recently.

With the dominating figure of Tom Watson among the missing this week, that adage would seem to point toward Trevino and Burns.

The colorful Trevino, of course, came from six shots back to finish second to Watson last weekend in the New Orleans Open. It was Watson's fourth victory of the season and marked the sixth time in 15 months — and second this year — that Trevino had been a runnerup.

And it stamped him a prime contender for the big, $63,000 first prize that goes to the winner of the 72-hole chase that got underway today on the beautifully-conditioned, 6,981 yard par 71 Woodlands Country Club course.

"I'm playing pretty good right now," said Trevino, winner of the Tournament Players Championship earlier this year.

"I expect to win. I'm not saying I'm gonna win. But I expect to win. You always expect to win. If you don't expect to win, there's no point in being out here. You might as well go home and go fishing."

With Watson taking a break this week, Trevino is the leading money-winner in the 156-man field with almost $150,000 for the year.

Burns also ranks among the top five with $125,000.

He, too, has played well in recent weeks and has a history of success in this event, finishing second in his rookie season.

The big guy who has come so close so often finally broke a psychological barrier early this season and scored his first American tour triumph. And he's finished second, third and seventh in three of his last four starts.

Among the other leading contenders are Ben Crenshaw, U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin, Tom Kite, Andy Bean, Jerry Pate, John Mahaffey and Tom Weiskopf.

Greene Central Nips Vikings

SNOW HILL — Greene Central's Eastern Carolina Conference leaders slipped past D.H. Conley, 6-4, yesterday in baseball.

It took two sixth inning runs by the Rams to pull out the victory, as Conley stuck with them most of the way.

Greene Central scored first, getting two in the first. Jimbo Fulghum led off with a single and Al Murray and Donald Shaw followed with hits, bringing the first runner around. Walt Tyndall reached on interference, and Jeff Scott walked, forcing in Murray.

Conley came back with three in the second, taking a 3-2 lead. Sammy Tucker was hit by a pitch and Curtis Spencer walked. Dennis Page singled and an error on the play let Tucker score. Jeff Cox walked, and Doug McRoy sacrificed Spencer over. Arnell Credle then reached on an error, allowing Page to score with the third run.

Greene Central returned to the lead, 4-3, as Scott hit a two-run homer in the fourth.

Then, after Conley scored another run to tie it up in the top of the sixth, Greene Central added two more in the bottom of the inning to seal the win. Ronnie Tyndall singled and Greg Holmes got a hit. Al Murray was intentionally walked, and Shaw singled in two runs.

Conley scored once in the seventh to pull within one, but got no further.

Greene Central is now 11-0 in the league and 15-2 overall. The Rams entertain Southwest Edgecombe on Tuesday. Conley is idle until next Friday, when the Vikings visit North Lenoir.

Blyleven Is Unhappy Buc

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Winless pitcher Bert Blyleven, displeased with the way Manager Chuck Tanner has used him, has quit the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"Bert has been unhappy pitching for the Pirates the way our manager has used him," team vice president Pete Peterson said Wednesday. "He has asked me to try to trade him, which I will try to do. Until I can trade him, he will not pitch for the Pirates any further."

"I've been thinking about it for more than a year," Blyleven told the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette. "It may seem strange, but for the first time in a long, long time, I feel happy."

"I have nothing personally against Chuck Tanner. I love the guy. But I didn't like the way he handled me. He showed no confidence in me in the late innings of a close ball game."

Blyleven said he'll miss the paychecks, but doesn't regret his decision.

"I like making the big money, but money isn't everything. Baseball is supposed to be fun. The last year and a half hasn't been fun, except for winning the World Series. "Sometimes I took my frustrations home with me last year. I don't want to do that. I'd like to remain in baseball and maybe I'd be better off with an American League club."

Blyleven has an 0-2 record in five starts this season. On Tuesday night, he lost a 4-1 lead against the Montreal Expos and wound up with no decision as Pittsburgh went on to win 5-4 in 10 innings.

After Montreal tied the score in the top of the sixth, Blyleven was replaced by a pinch hitter in the bottom of the inning. Blyleven, who also raised objections at being lifted last season, met behind closed doors with Tanner after the game.

"He wanted to talk to me. His spirits are down," Tanner said after the meeting. "I said, 'Just relax and enjoy yourself, and you'll reel off four or five in a row.'"

But Blyleven, who was 12-5 last season in 37 starts, apparently decided he could tolerate no more.

"He has nothing personal against Chuck at all. It is just that he is so unhappy and frustrated with the way he has been used it's just tearing him up inside."

Peterson said Blyleven probably would return home to California.

Jamesville In 16th Victory

COLUMBIA — Jamesville High School won its 16th game of the season yesterday, downing Columbia High School, 10-2.

Jamesville put the game out of reach with three first inning runs. Alan Frazier singled and Carl and Trent Ange both walked, loading the bases. Keith Modlin reached on an error, scoring Frazier, and Clarence Thomas doubled in both of the Anges.

In the second, the Bullets pushed over four more to up their lead to 7-0. Greg Sullivan walked and Rex Bell reached on an error. Carl Ange walked and Trent Ange reached on an error, scoring Sullivan. Modlin singled in two runs, and Thomas reached on an error, allowing the fourth to score.

Jamesville added three more in the fourth, while Columbia got both of its runs in the bottom of the inning.

Now 16-2, Jamesville plays host to Aurora tonight.

E.B. Aycock Junior High School won another track meet yesterday, downing Bertie Junior High.

The Jaguars took the meet by the lopsided score of 95-23, to remain unbeaten this year and to run their string of wins to close to 55.

Harrell and Anderson were both double winners for Aycock.

Aycock In 7-4 Victory

ROCKY MOUNT — E.B. Aycock Junior High School gained a 7-4 baseball victory over Rocky Mount yesterday.

Randy Warren led the Aycock hitting with three, including a double and a triple, while Horace Barrett added two, one a double, and Kenny Kirkland had two. No one had more than one for Rocky Mount.

Aycock is now 6-2, and entertains Washington on Tuesday.

Wrist Action Helps Gura Win

AP Sports Writer
Larry Gura seems to have American League hitters in the palm of his hand this season. And one of the main reasons is his wrist.

"I'm using a little more wrist and I'm able to throw the ball a little harder that way," says the left-hander of the Kansas City Royals.

Gura gave some wrist action to the Toronto Blue Jays Wednesday night and the result was a sparkling one-hit, 3-0 victory for the Royals.

"I had all my pitches going tonight," said Gura. "When you have that, you have the hitter on the run. (Catcher) John Wathan and I work well together."

Gura's three victories thus far this season have been shutouts. Even his loss was well-pitched, a 2-1 defeat by the Baltimore Orioles.

"He's pitched great every time out except for one outing in Detroit," said Kansas City Manager Jim Frey. "He's been in a groove all year, even in Florida."

In other AL games, California defeated Oakland 2-1; the Chicago White Sox nipped Boston 2-1; Minnesota walloped Seattle 10-3; Baltimore defeated the New York Yankees 7-4, and Detroit trimmed Texas 5-4 in 10 innings. The Milwaukee-Cleveland contest was canceled by a heavy fog.

The only hit allowed by Gura was a leadoff double in the sixth by Damaso Garcia. Toronto's Jesse Jefferson was even more impressive for a while, pitching no-hit ball for 61-3 innings. But the Blue Jays starter later gave up a two-run homer to Clint Hurdle with two out in the eighth inning.

Hal McRae added the third Royals run with his third homer of the year in the ninth, off reliever Joey McLaughlin.

"I love that long ball," said Frey. "There's nothing like those fly balls that go off into the night. Especially if we hit them."

Angels 2, A's 1
Freddie Patek tripled with two out in the seventh, sparking the ejection of Oakland third baseman Wayne Gross and Manager Billy Martin, and then scored on a single by Tom Donohue to lead California over the A's behind Don Aase's four-hitter.

Patek drove a pitch from Matt Keough, 3-2, off the left-center field fence and slid into third base at the same time Dwayne Murphy's throw reached Gross. Gross, who was knocked down when Patek slid into third, came up yelling at umpire Jerry Neudecker and was immediately ejected, prompting Martin's entrance onto the field — and his subsequent exit from it when he was thrown out.

White Sox 2, Red Sox 1
Harold Baines singled home the winning run in the eighth and right-hander Richard Dotson gave up five hits as Chicago edged Boston. With two outs in the eighth, Alan Bannister drew a walk off Dennis Eckersley, 1-3, and stole second. Baines then drilled a fastball into center to score Bannister and give Dotson, who struck out five in eight innings, his third victory against one loss. Ed Farmer pitched the ninth for Chicago and gained his sixth save.

"I didn't really have great stuff, but pretty good control," said Eckersley. "(But) the pitch to Baines was up and I didn't get it inside like I wanted."

Twins 10, Mariners 3
Butch Wynegar and Rick Sofiel each drove in two runs and Roy Smalley slammed his sixth home run of the year to lead Minnesota over Seattle. Smalley also had two walks, two singles and scored two runs in addition to his solo homer in the sixth.

The Twins broke open the game with four runs in the fifth, snapping a 3-3 tie and helping Pete Redfern improve his record to 3-1.

Orioles 7, Yankees 4
Doug DeCinces' two-run homer ignited a six-run rally in the second inning that helped Baltimore defeat New York. Three of the runs charged to Tom Underwood, 1-3, were unearned as the result of throwing errors by first baseman Jim Spencer and second baseman Willie Randolph.

Baltimore starter Steve Stone, 2-2, allowed a run-scoring double in the first by Reggie Jackson, a homer in the third by Dent, and an RBI-single by Rick Cerone in the seventh.

Tigers 5, Rangers 4
Detroit beat Texas as Lance Parrish delivered a run-scoring single with two out in the 10th inning.

Single off heber hit a one-out single off loser Sparky Lyle, 1-1, and Tom Brookens ran for Heber. Then, after Dave Stegman walked, Jason Thompson struck out. Reliever Danny Darwin came into the game at this point and was greeted by Parrish's line drive up the middle.

Reliever Milt Wilcox, 1-2, picked up the victory.

Dave Meyers Hanging Up His Tennis Shoes

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Bucks' carefully structured plans for building a National Basketball Association championship team have received a damaging jolt.

But that was nothing compared with the jolt Bucks' starting forward Dave Meyers handed the club's owner, Jim Fitzgerald, Tuesday night.

That's when Meyers, in the prime of his career at 27, said he is retiring from basketball, effective immediately. Meyers, former UCLA All-American, said he wanted to spend more time with his family and in his activities for his adopted faith, the Jehovah's Witnesses.

Reporters were jolted when Meyers made his decision public at a news conference Wednesday.

"The zeal for basketball that I've had all my life has been redirected toward my faith. I tried to give basketball everything I had, and I don't want to do that anymore," said Meyers, known as "Crash" because of the intensity of his play and his frequent dives to the floor for loose balls.

"I know I'm 27 and what I'm doing goes against the system," he said. "It's not that I'm 38 years old and my body can't take it anymore, and that I'm crying because the Bucks did this and that for me. I know I could still play.

"This runs pretty deep and I don't want to get into a lot of it, but I don't want to play anymore," he said. "I want to pursue other things. I really have no plans as to what I want to do with my life, but my values are a lot different from when I was a rookie."

"I don't want to plot graphs for everybody here, but being a Jehovah's Witness, it's very difficult to split time between service to my religion and service to basketball," he said.

Reporters had thought the Bucks had called the news conference to announce Meyers had agreed to a new contract. His original five-year pact for an estimated $350,000 a year, signed when the Bucks obtained him from the Los Angeles Lakers in the Kareem Abdul-Jabbar trade in 1975, had expired.

He became a free agent when the playoffs end, but said he has no plans to negotiate with another team.

"Larry Fleisher (his agent) called early in the season and I said I wanted to stay in Milwaukee," Meyers said. "Other teams are interested in me, but I'm not sure I would have negotiated. I might have listened. Teams can be very persuasive. But I don't think it would have mattered."

Putt-Putt Winners

Carl White came from three strokes back to beat Danny Harris by one and Eddie Robinson by two in the Big Bucks Tournament at the Greenville Putt-Putt last night.

White, who shot ten under for the three-round tournament, passed Robinson, Jerry Bryant and second round leader Danny Woods to win his first tournament of the year.

Woods finished fourth and Bryant, fifth, in the rain delayed tournament.

Lopez Sets Up Future Goals

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Nancy Lopez-Melton was sitting around talking about her final practice round for today's start of the fifth annual $100,000 Women's International Golf Tournament.

The talk turned to quitting golf.

"I definitely won't be playing 10 years from now," said the 23-year-old New Mexico native. "I want to win 30 tournaments and then retire."

"I don't want to wait until I'm too old to have children," she added. "There are other things in life besides golf."

The reason she set a 30-win goal, she said, was a rule that a golfer must have that many victories — one of them in a major tournament — to qualify for the Ladies Professional Golf Association Hall of Fame.

Lopez-Melton has won 18 tournaments in less than three years on the LPGA tour, and at her current pace she could reach her goal in two years.

The record-setting superstar of women's golf, who won eight tournaments and $197,000 in 1979, said she expects stiff competition as she goes after her 19th career triumph at Moss Creek Plantation.

Astro Homers Move Them Into First

AP Sports Writer

It had been nearly nine years since Joe Morgan had hit one out in a Houston uniform, and the long ball came in a rare home-run bingie for the singles-hitting Astros.

Even lanky right-hander J.R. Richard got into the act as the Astros pounded out three homers and whipped the Cincinnati Reds 5-1 at Riverfront Stadium. The Astros' fifth win in a row moved them into first place in the National League West, a half-game ahead of the Reds.

"I was still trying to find myself early in the season," said Morgan, whose last homer as an Astro came on Sept. 19, 1971, the year before he was traded to Cincinnati. Back in an Astros uniform via the free agent route, Morgan hit a solo homer in the sixth inning and cracked an RBI single in the eighth to give Richard his fourth victory without a loss.

"I definitely think I'm going to hit a lot more home runs this year," said Morgan, who hit only nine out in 127 games last season with Cincinnati.

Richard and Cesar Cedeno homered for Houston in the fifth inning, and Richard allowed three hits and struck out eight before leaving with one out in the eighth inning and a stiff arm.

"My arm stiffened up about the seventh inning," said Richard, who has struck out a major league-leading 48. "It does that this time of the year when it's cool."

The loser was Tom Seaver, 1-1, who yielded all three Houston home runs. Asked about the duel with Richard, Seaver said: "I lost, that's all. It's just one game. You've just got to go back and get them, that's all."

Astros Manager Bill Virdon said the club was the best he'd ever managed at Houston, "and I think they realize it."

"That's the way you hope it stays all season," Virdon said. "I know we'll have some periods where we'll struggle, just like Cincinnati is having right now."

In other NL games, Pittsburgh blanked Montreal 5-0, the New York Mets shut out Philadelphia 2-0, St. Louis whipped the Chicago Cubs 8-2, San Diego edged Atlanta 2-1 and Los Angeles got by San Francisco 4-3. Pirates 5, Expos 0

Jim Bibby picked up his third win without a loss, scattering six hits, and Phil Garner celebrated his 31st birthday with a pair of home runs for the Pirates. Bill Robinson also homered as Pittsburgh won its fourth in five games with the Expos this season.

Expos left-hander Bill Lee lost his third without a win.

Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner learned earlier Wednesday that pitcher Bert Blyleven had quit the team. Tanner was asked if the win had salvaged an otherwise rough day.

"Rough day?" Tanner asked. "When you win 11 out of 16, you're going good. I didn't know we had a rough day."

Garner said: "We forgot about it. We had to face Bill Lee tonight and we couldn't worry about what Bert is doing. Bert's got to get himself together. I'm sure if he changes his mind, we'll accept him back."

Mets 2, Phillies 0

Right-hander Mark Bombardier allowed just two singles and recorded the Mets' first complete game of the season in besting Philadelphia.

Dan Norman accounted for both Mets runs, although the second was unearned.

Norman singled in a run in the fourth, and another scored in the eighth when Phils shortstop Larry Bowa bobbled his ground ball for an error.

Bombardier struck out two and walked six. He had to pitch out of several jams before recording his second straight win over the Phillies.

Cards 8, Cubs 2

Keith Hernandez smacked a three-run homer and Ken Oberkfell drove in three runs with a single and a double as St. Louis pounded out 11 hits to beat the Cubs. Garry Templeton had four hits for the Cards and scored three times.

Pete Vuckovich yielded a seventh-inning homer to Jerry Martin but still earned his fourth victory.

Padres 2, Braves 1

Willie Montanez and Jerry Mumphrey drove in the runs, and Eric Rasmussen pitched San Diego to its first win in eight games.

Dodgers 4, Giants 3

Los Angeles rallied for two runs in the top of the ninth on Giants shortstop Johnnie LeMaster's error and a grounder by Rudy Law as the Dodgers won their 10th in a row.

Pinch-hitters Jay Johnstone and Gary Thomason got the Dodgers ninth going with consecutive singles. A sacrifice advanced the runners and pinch runner Derrell Thomas scored when LeMaster mishandled Dave Lopes' grounder. Thomason scored the winning run on Law's ground ball as Bob Welch picked up his first victory of the season.

Filly Bucking Odds In Derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A lot of horsemen are wondering what a nice filly like Genuine Risk is doing running against colts and geldings in Saturday's Kentucky Derby.

Mrs. Bert Firestone's filly is bucking the odds for the 1 1/4-mile event at Churchill Downs which had only one filly winner in 105 runnings. And that was back in 1915 when Regret led all the way to turn back 15 rivals. The last filly to start in the Derby was Silver Spoon who finished fifth in 1959.

"Yes, I do think we can win it," said Mrs. Firestone Wednesday. "I wouldn't be here if I didn't think so. My husband and I didn't come here for the Derby parties. She's bred for the distance."

Trainer Leroy Jolley, who saddled 1975 Derby winner Foolish Pleasure said immediately after a third-place finish in the April 19 Wood Memorial at Aqueduct the daughter of Exclusive Native-Virtuous wouldn't go in the Derby. She previously had won all six starts against fillies.

Genuine Risk also was nominated for the rich Kentucky Oaks for fillies here Friday and for New York's Triple Crown for fillies.

Sunshine 7,

Grifton Bears 4

WINTERVILLE — Sunshine Garden Center gained a 7-4 Southern Pitt Little League victory over the Grifton Bears yesterday.

Dean Taylor hurled the victory, allowing only two hits. Harley Jackson led the Sunshine hitting with two, both doubles.

Sunshine is now 2-0, while the Bears are 1-1.

Ald. & So'land 5

CHICOD — Chicod gained a 6-5 Southern Pitt Little League victory over Aldridge & Southerland yesterday.

Mike Elks threw a one-hitter at A&S for the victory and led the hitting for Chicod with two. Allen Haddock and Joey Johnson also each had two hits for Chicod.

Chicod is now 1-0 and Aldridge & Southerland is 1-1.

Girls' Softball

Jolley denied that he was overruled on the Derby by the Firestones, but said the change of mind came about when the expected Derby field dropped from more than 20 to about a dozen.

Farmville C. 6,
Ayden-Grifton 5

LITTLEFIELD — Farmville Central upset Ayden-Grifton's league-leading Chargerettes yesterday in Eastern Carolina Conference softball play, 6-5.

The loss was the first in league play for the Ayden-Grifton lassies, knocking them out of sole possession of first place into a tie with Greene Central.

Farmville grabbed the lead in the top of the first with two, then came back with one in the second. Ayden-Grifton tied it up with three in the bottom of the second, then pushed ahead with one in the third.

Farmville scored twice in the fifth and Ayden-Grifton got one run for a 5-5 deadlock. Then, in the seventh, the Lady Jaguars scored to gain the win. Diana Gorham reached on a two-base error, then moved on to third, when another error was committed. She scored on Angie O'Brien's single.

Courtney Lancaster and Gwen Dupree led the Farmville hitting with three each, while Beth Massey, O'Brien, Yvette Anderson and Angela White each had two. A. Strong had two hits to lead the Ayden-Grifton hitting.

The victory upped the Farmville record to 6-10. Ayden-Grifton travels to North Pitt on Friday, while Farmville resumes action by traveling to North Pitt on Tuesday.

Jamesville 7,
Aurora 6

AURORA — Jamesville spotted Aurora a 6-2 lead in the first inning, then came back to claim a 7-6 Beaufort-Hyde-Martin softball victory yesterday.

Jamesville came back to score two in the third, two more in the fourth and then pushed over the winner in the top of the sixth.

Terri Bell led the Jamesville hitting with two, the only one in the game with more than one hit.

Now 13-1 in the league, Jamesville has clinched no worse than a tie for first in the conference, and can wrap it up on Monday, when it entertains Mattamuskeet.

Bear Grass 0

BATH — Bath High School pushed over three runs in the sixth inning, all on home runs, and held Bear Grass scoreless in a Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference softball game yesterday.

Baseman hit a two-run homer to open the scoring in the sixth, and Molly Hopkins followed that up with another homer to provide all the Bath runs.

Waters led the Bath hitting with two, while Linda Whitehurst and Angie Mizelle each had two for Bear Grass.

The Lady Bears, now 7-8, travel to Belhaven on Tuesday.

The annual yield and rate on NCNB Six Month Savings Certificates is available for $10,000 or more. Term: Six months (26 weeks). Interest paid monthly, quarterly or at maturity. Federal regulations prohibit the compounding of interest on these certificates. Rate effective from 5/1/80 through 5/7/80.

Here's how: 1) Purchase an NCNB $10,000 Six Month Savings Certificate. 2) Ask us to automatically deposit your interest every month in an NCNB Regular Savings Account, paying 5-1/4%, compounded daily.

So you're earning interest on your interest. What's more, your money's safe, since we're a member of the FDIC which insures your deposits to $100,000. Which is what you expect when a bank wants to be the best in the neighborhood.

Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal. Each depositor insured to $100,000 by FDIC.

Musical-Hands Talent Wasted

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — For a brief moment in the mid-1930s, fortune smiled on Cecil Dill, Robert Ripley's "Believe It or Not" newspaper column reported that Dill could produce "various songs and imitate all kinds of birds and animals" by rubbing his bare hands together.
He was featured in a newsreel and appeared in a couple of Hollywood night clubs before his career ended in frustration and failure.
"I couldn't get laughs out of the audience," said Dill, 79, who now sweeps the parking lot and picks up trash around a Traverse City restaurant in exchange for his meals. "My beautiful gift of musical hands is a talent that has gone to waste."
Dill said he had discovered his hands were exceptional while walking home from school one cold day in 1914. "I had no mittens and was rubbing and clenching my hands to warm them when they suddenly made music," he recalled.
His hands still squeeze out tunes for tourists and the restaurant's customers.

CAMERA Angles

By SANDY COLTON
AP Newsfeatures
With the ever-increasing cost of camera equipment these days, camera theft has become big business.

The average newspaper photographer may at one time carry as much as $5,000 or $10,000 worth of equipment with him on a job.

There have been reports from around the country of thieves actually following a news photographer home or to an assignment and then, when the photographer has left his car, breaking into the trunk to steal any equipment he carries there.

At least one ring, in Florida, is said to export the stolen equipment to South America where there is not only a bigger profit on any sale but also practically no possibility of the recovery of the stolen items later by police or one of the camera companies which trace stolen equipment through serial numbers.

Nor are amateurs immune.
More and more amateurs are carrying expensive equipment.
In Honolulu recently, I heard of a number of thefts from tourists' cars. The thieves merely watched for someone carrying expensive equipment, waited for them to leave the equipment in their car and then, within seconds, broke into the car and took the equipment.

Tourists, as well as news photographers, seem to be particularly lucrative prospects for camera thieves. Beware during your vacation.

It might be a good idea to try to avoid such thefts by following the lead of several newspapers.

First, let's look at some of the many ways camera equipment is stolen from professionals.

News photographers usually carry over their shoulders a camera bag loaded with extra lenses and accessories and, sometimes, cameras. They must also frequently work in a crowd.

Because it is convenient, they often leave the flaps of the camera bag open so that they can reach in and quickly get another lens, if needed. Well, so can anyone else! The smart photographer now keeps that bag clipped or zippered shut, taking the few extra seconds to open it if he needs the extra lens.

Occasionally, the photographer might leave his bag sitting on the ground or at his seat while he runs a few feet away to get a picture — say at ringside after a fight to get a picture of the winner in the ring, or on the side lines on a football field or basketball court. Trust-soul! He'll be lucky if all he loses is a lens or a camera.
Usually the whole bag disappears. The smart photographer keeps his equipment with him at all times.

Photographers have been robbed at knife or gunpoint. Now some newspapers are taking special steps to protect the photographer going to or from an assignment, especially in high crime areas.

They've made arrangements, for example, for special protected parking areas close to the entrance of some sports

Males Blaze New Trail In Sewing Own Blazer

By ELLEN EMRY HELTZEL

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Lawyer David Maier has developed his own version of Murphy's Law:

"No seam shall be put in that will not be removed thrice," the amateur philosopher stated recently, offering proof in the form of the casually cut, partially lined blazer on which he had been working for two months.

Maier, along with six other Portland men, started making stadiums. They also advise the photographers to go to and leave the assignment with someone else — a reporter or another photographer covering the same event. There is safety in numbers.

Thefts sometimes occur right in the photographer's home newspaper or at off-site dark-
table while the photographer goes in to process his film isn't there when he comes back.
Now, many newspapers provide a secure locker where the equipment is locked out of reach before the photographer processes his film.

tographers once drove cars with either special plates or some other advertising that identified the car as one belonging to a news photographer. This became an open invitation for camera thieves. Today, most news photographers drive in unmarked cars.

Many newspapers have gone to even further extremes to prevent thefts of equipment from autos. They've installed alarms which go off if the trunk is broken into. Others have gone a step further and installed a metal box bolted to the floor of the trunk with a second hasp lock for equipment, or welded a chain inside the trunk so that the trunk can only be opened enough to get your hand in to unlock the chain before a larger camera bag can be removed.

been much of a deterrent since it only takes seconds for a thief to punch out a trunk lock and grab the equipment. The second lock, with the alarm, usually frustrates would-be thieves.

Of course, the biggest deterrent of all, and the one many newspapers are now insisting on, is never to leave equipment in your car. Photographers have been instructed to take with them on assignment only what they need and to carry that equipment with them at all times.

It takes a little more time and effort but common sense will tell you the best way to prevent theft is to keep that equipment with you or securely locked away in a safe place — not in your auto.

Remember, new equipment can cost more than the price of a new car, and it's certainly a lot easier for thieves to sell.

blazer jackets early this year as their project for an unusual evening class at Patricia Green Textiles in downtown Portland:
"Blazers for Men Only."

Those involved agreed that the remarkable aspect of the recently concluded six-week course was not its subject matter, but its student body.

In the opinion of class instructor Cathy de Lorge, the cluster of male students reflects popular sentiment — that one's endeavors shouldn't be limited on the basis of one's sex — plus the same practical motivations which have revitalized interest in sewing among women.

"Men are certainly in the same financial bind as women are, what with the rising cost of clothing," Ms. de Lorge said.

"There's also the do-it-yourself aspect. I get a great deal of satisfaction out of making things myself, and there's no reason men can't experience the same sense of accomplishment."

Class member Tom Jones, a caterer, added another reason to explain why he enrolled in her class.

"I like good clothes but I didn't really know what I was looking at," he observed. So even if he never sews another seam, Jones says he will profit from the class. He now feels he can recognize solid construction and quality workmanship when he buys off the rack.

The sewing class for men evolved after fabric-store owner Patricia Green noticed the increasing number of male customers in her shop. Most were buying thread and fabric for such things as wall hangings and seemed timid about tackling apparel. So Ms. de Lorge, a veteran seamstress who works as manuscript librarian at the Oregon Historical Society, was recruited to increase their confidence — and perhaps their need for material and notions.

among her students was broad starting with two who had never touched a sewing machine.
But Ms. de Lorge contends that the blazer jacket is not difficult to make and "besides, there's nothing like cutting into $65 worth of wool to encourage you to finish the project."

The basic pattern she use featured the unconstructed look in vogue in recent years, but Ms. de Lorge said she had incorporated tailoring techniques into class instruction to show students how to make the blazer more substantial.

Other projects for men which

Ms. de Lorge puts in the beginner class are short-sleeved shirts (she suggests Hawaiian prints for summer) and drawstring pants cut from duck or gauze.

Ms. de Lorge said the task of teaching men to sew had taught her a lesson too: that men are well-suited for an art women have long cornered as their own.

"The men have been very inquisitive, very analytical. All these traits that are thought of as traditionally masculine are part of sewing, so there's no reason men can't do it as well as women," she said.

Handgun: A Small Packaged Instrument Of Death

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — You can tuck one into the palm of your hand or into a shirt pocket like a pen. It can weigh as little as an ounce. It can be smaller than your wallet or the cosmetics case in your purse.

It looks as harmless as a transistor radio or an attachment for your camera. But its harmlessness, or its destructiveness, depends on who is holding, and using, it.

This is the handgun, in its infinite variety a neatly packaged instrument of death that you can buy for, say, $10, — "or cheaper by the dozen," as one New York police official told me.

The federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said there are about 50 million handguns in the United States — "and nobody knows where they are."

Various sources say someone is murdered with a handgun every hour of the day. By this time tomorrow, 26 more Americans will be murdered by handgun fire.

These handguns, the killers, also are weapons other than for murder — for robbery, rape, aggravated assault, burglary, larceny-theft.

The handgun not only is the killer but the subject of one of the major controversies today, reaching right to the White House and even embracing the campaigns of every major candidate for the U.S. presidency.

The Great Debate: Should there be none at all? The arguments are strong. Organized groups and individuals are lobbying with formidable weaponry like money on matters of weaponry.

"What can you do with a handgun?" said Capt. Norman Jacobmeyer, chief of homicide of the St. Louis Police Department.

"For protection? From what? Shoot at a target?"

"Baloney." St. Louis has the highest homicide rate of any major U.S. city, says the Federal Bureau of Investigation in its latest regular uniform crime reports.

"The whole point in the argument is that there are no statistics showing that more stringent legislation will reduce crime," says John Adkins, spokesman for the National Rifle Association, headquartered in Washington.

Says NRA's opposite, Handgun Control, Inc., the lobby group for stricter controls, "During January 1980, over 600 Americans died because of the easy availability of handguns."

This Washington-based group reported a fatality count for 1979 at 8,034, based on its survey of newspaper clippings voluntarily mailed to the organization.

Still another group operating on the national scene is the National Coalition to Ban Handguns, organized in 1974 with some 30 national organizations (religious, professional, educational) to combat "the growing handgun problem."

The Carter administration is deeply involved in the problem. The president's mother, "Miss Lillian," waded in even before Senator Edward M. Kennedy announced he would oppose President Carter for the 1980 nomination.

Mrs. Carter told a campaign kick-off audience last fall that if Senator Kennedy ran, "I hope to goodness nothing happens."

Said Handgun Control, Inc., "Many people were stunned by Mrs. Carter's reference to potential assassination attempts. Her comments inadvertently joined the handgun debate to the 1980 campaign ahead. Nine out of 10 attempted or successful assassinations of Presidents or presidential out during the presidential primary season in Concord, N.H., when the large field of presidential contenders met

"My father really knows how to shoot."

But it took Ronald Reagan to cap the show. "Thank you for your warm welcome, my fellow members of the NRA," he said.

You can start the controversy over gun controls with the second amendment to the constitution. It reads simply, "A well-regulated military, being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of people to keep and bear arms, shall not be infringed." The amendment, part of the Bill of Rights, dates to 1791.

Shall man's right to carry a weapon be abridged? The right to bear arms comes down through English common law, through the American Revolution, settling the "Old West," our frontier society, and on into the mystique today of firearms ownership. This mystique seems difficult to analyze.

But consider our modern folk heroes — the long-running television series "Gunsmoke" with Matt Dillon, the award-winning movies "High Noon" and "Shane."

In 1968, a federal firearms act banned sales of handguns to anyone under 21, rifles and shotguns to anyone under 18. There were to be no mail order sales between individuals. It is illegal to transport a gun interstate. Licenses are forbidden for felons or the dishonorably discharged.

The federal act also requires licensing of weapons and has many restrictions on imports. A way around the import ban, police tell me, is to import the parts and then assemble the guns in this country.

In addition, most states and many cities have their own supplemental laws. Massachusetts has one of the strongest state laws — one year of mandatory prison for anyone convicted of carrying an illegal gun in public.

The New York state legislature is considering a similarly strict code, with New York City's Mayor Edward Koch one of the strongest proponents.

"It's time to take illegal handguns out of the hands of criminals before they kill and rob," Koch told the legislators.

New York City's police commissioner Robert McGuire testified that, "A 10-year-old kid can get a gun on the streets of our city."

Fourteen members of McGuire's department have been killed by guns since Koch became mayor in 1976. Another 51 have been shot and wounded. Six police officers already are this year's death toll.

"It seems every day I am either going to a hospital, to a wake or to a funeral ... gun control now is the over-riding public imperative," McGuire said earlier.

Headlines scream of "open warfare on the cops." And the Federal Bureau of Investigation has just announced the national toll for 1979 — 77 local, county, state and federal law enforcement officers were killed by handguns. Overall, the murder rate of police officers was up 13 percent over 1978.

But a UPI survey of state legislatures reveals little action this year for altering laws already on the books.

In many states showing your driver's license is sufficient to acquire a gun owner's license.

In a just-published "Firearm Use in Violent Crime," the Justice Department's national institute of law enforcement and criminal justice cited some of the arguments for and against stronger controls. They were excerpted from the Congressional Digest.

Advocates argue that the gun homicide rate is extremely high and exceeds that of many other major nations. Most of the American public supports stronger legislation. Accidents from handguns are extremely high, most handgun deaths are crimes of passion. "If you don't have a gun, you're not apt to kill." They say curbing availability of handguns is needed because long prison terms for handgun offenders would have no significant deterrent effect. And they say the right to bear arms under the second amendment applies to states, not individuals.

Those opposing stricter controls argue they will not end crime. They say they would destroy Americans' right to defend themselves and their homes. They say criminals will obtain guns regardless of any law passed and that guns do not cause crime, people do.

"New gun controls would be just a Band-Aid," said Adkins of NRA. "They won't stop crime. What's going on today ties in with our economic situation ... I don't believe in the tenet that if you didn't have a gun you couldn't kill."

"The lower crime rate of the Depression? We didn't have the mentality then we've grown into today."

"We have to take a good hard look at the whole social and criminal justice system."

"The criminal knows the laws, the average citizen does not. The main thrust of NRA is that if a certain given community wants its own severe restrictions, that's up to the people of the area."

"President Carter came to realize that it was pretty much useless to push Congress when Congress wasn't ... in the mood to pass further legislation. It was not politically feasible."

"Further controls just open up too many chances of abuse of the rights of law-abiding citizens." Handgun Control, Inc., in its monthly "body count," reported that "during the third year of the Carter administration 1979, 8,034 persons died in handgun violence. The figure includes 184 children 12 and under and 558 persons 60 and over."

Consider some of the case histories the organization cited:

Chicago — William and Ada Pagan, 48 and 38, were murdered during a robbery on their grocery store. Juan Jimenez, 38, a patron, also was murdered.

Atlanta, Ga. — Faye Garrison, 69, was murdered by a handgun during a robbery of Rich's department store.

Detroit — Clarence Castelow, 13, was murdered during a robbery of a local market. The youth had gone to the market to return some empty bottles.

"Diet Doctor Slain: Headmistress Charged," read one headline on the case of the slaying of Dr. Herman Tarnower, a prominent Purchase, N.Y. physician, and the best selling author of the Scarsdale diet book.

The physician was the victim, in his luxurious home, of a .32 caliber revolver. Accused in the shooting is Jean S. Harris. Police said Mrs. Harris acquired the revolver in Virginia, where she was headmistress of candidates involved handguns."

President Carter based part of his 1976 campaign platform on the need for more stringent handgun controls.

Now, the White House told UPI, matters are up to Congress. "We'd be glad to cooperate with Congress on this," said a spokesman.

"Last year, the Treasury Department issued a routine requirement concerning registration of serial numbers in certain types of handguns. Congress not only rejected that idea but they removed from the treasury budget ... $4.5 million that could have been used to administer the program."

"I think that indicates the attitudes of Congress. So although I do favor increased safety of the American people because of this step, I think to pursue it aggressively in the Congress would be a mistake, but we will cooperate with the Congress."

Democratic presidential hopeful Kennedy, who lost his two older brothers to assassin's bullets, and congressman Peter Rodino of New Jersey in turn have introduced legislation for stronger handgun controls.

Handgun Control, Inc. says this marks the first time that the chairmen of the senate and house judiciary committees have jointly sponsored such legislation and signs are that other lawmakers are adding to their support.

President Carter has faced a lot of criticism from groups demanding stronger handgun controls. One of the most vocal is Nelson T. Shields III, socially prominent, a successful industrialist, and father of a gunned-down son, Nick.

Nick, at 22, was a random target of a .32 caliber pistol (one of the so-called Saturday night specials) in San Francisco in 1974. Shields, a former Navy pilot, now serves as chairman of Handgun Control which estimates its membership at more than 100,000.

The National Rifle Association has 1.6 million members, said Adkins. They include Ronald Reagan, the Republican presidential candidate. This was brought with an organization of firearms buffs.

Each candidate, with the exception of Congressman John B. Anderson of Illinois, tried to outdo the next in telling of his love for hunting and unqualified opposition to gun controls.

Anderson argued that owners of concealable weapons should have to get licenses just as automobile drivers do.

"I cannot understand why a gun owner should not have to prove that he can use the weapon competently," said Anderson.

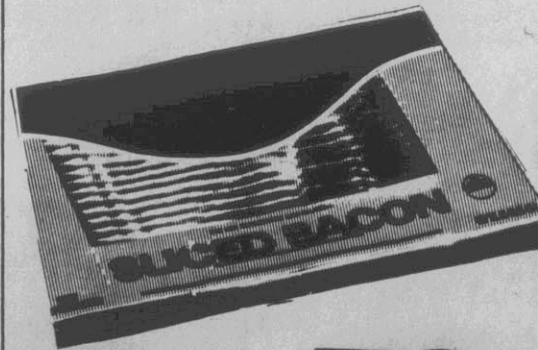

President Carter wasn't there, but son Jack was — to tell down-home tales of how

(Continued from Page 24) exclusive Madeira School for girls. Rob Anderson of the attorney general's office in Virginia said state law on gun controls complies with federal — no convicted felon may possess firearms or transport them out of state. Exceptions: Those carrying out duties as a member of the armed forces or of the national guard of Virginia or other states, or any law enforcement officer in performance of duty.

"We Lose Our First Lady," read another headline. This was the slaying of the mayor of St. Albans, Vt., shot at her home office with a .22 caliber revolver. Janet Smith, 66, the town's first woman mayor, had been in office less than a week. A handyman was charged with first degree murder. Vermont's gun control legislation is that of the federal statute.

Still another: "Former Congressman Allard Lowenstein Killed." Lowenstein was slain the day after he had once again exhorted Congress to pass the Kennedy-Rodino Hand Gun Control Act.

None of these three occurred in cities under the dubious honors listings of 10 areas with the highest homicide rates in the nation.

The New York police department, analyzing the FBI's uniform crime reports, lists the ranks in order of one to 12.

First is St. Louis, followed by New Orleans, Houston, Cleveland, Dallas, Detroit, Baltimore, Washington, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Antonio, New York. In order after that are Philadelphia, Boston, Memphis, San Francisco, San Diego, Columbus, Jacksonville, Indianapolis, Phoenix, Minneapolis, San Jose, and Honolulu.

Handgun Control, analyzing recent FBI statistics, reported that someone is murdered with a handgun every hour of the day.

During the peak seven years of the Vietnam War, more than 40,000 American soldiers were killed in action. During that same period, more than 50,000 American civilians died "right here at home" from handguns. During the next 12 months, there will be over 250,000 more people victimized with handguns. It is as if the entire population were being held at gunpoint in a city the size of Sacramento, Des Moines, or St. Petersburg, Fla.

Handguns were used in 49 percent of the U.S. murders in 1978, another 6 percent by rifle, 8 percent by shotgun, 19 percent by cutting or stabbing.

A new handgun is sold every 13 seconds and there are some 170,000 federally licensed, or commercial, dealers in the United States — as many as there are gas stations.

If you can stand some further statistics...

The U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, which keeps tabs on legal gun production, estimated 2 million more handguns are added to the market each year. It estimates there are about 50 million now. The bureau, part of the U.S. Treasury Department, gets its totals voluntarily from manufacturers, said Les Stanford, a spokesman.

Stanford said that 1979 production of handguns alone was 2.126 million. Additionally, there were 1.877 million rifles and 1.3 million rifle-shotgun combinations, for a total gun production of 5.322 million.

Stanford called "not massive" the additional armament being imported.

"We do know that most guns that show up in crime are less than three years old," he said.

Budgets of major organizations lobbying either for or against more stringent controls sound pretty healthy. Adkins of NRA listed a $4 million annual budget paid by membership and donated funds, but estimated that at least half of that sum goes to "education, training, hunter education, police training courses, competitions..."

Charles J. Orasin, of Handgun Control, Inc., listed an annual budget of $700,000 to $800,000 "all public contributions" for actual lobbying, and another $150,000 to $200,000, also contributed, for advertisements.

"Whatever the solution," said Jacobmeyer of the St. Louis police, "the control has to be at the national level."

Persian Gulf Traders Dodge U.S. Sanctions

By KATHLEEN BISHTAWI
Associated Press Writer

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Dubai's traders across the Persian Gulf from Iran are artfully dodging the U.S. ban on American exports to their northern neighbor and the Iranian government's hostility to things American.

The local merchants will be delighted if America's European allies also order sanctions next month.

"It will be a hell of a good business," said one government official. "The merchants might not agree with Iran's policies, but they won't let that affect their commercial judgment."

On the waterfront, Baluchi workers carefully scratch out "Made in USA" and paint in "Made in Taiwan" or "Made in Yugoslavia."

"That way we please everyone," said one trader with a smirk.

American air conditioners and sacks of rice are stacked alongside Japanese TVs and Italian refrigerators, waiting for the small motorized wooden dhows that will take them on the 90-mile run across the gulf to Iran's south coast.

Some 30 percent of all the city's imports end up outside the country, and the biggest and fastest growing market is Iran. In February 1979, re-exports to the big northern neighbor totaled $14 million; this February, they totaled $27 million. In one month, food shipped from Dubai to Iran more than doubled, from $5.4 million to $14 million.

More than 100 U.S. companies have offices in Dubai, and several hundred more are represented by local traders.

"It is impossible for us to control where our goods go," said a representative of one American company. "We sell to an agent, and he sells to everyone. We can't impose conditions on him. You might as well tell us to stop selling. That is the only way we could be sure that our goods do not end up in Iran."

The U.S. Embassy in Abu Dhabi, the capital of the United Arab Emirates, has issued no advice to the American companies and has had no discussions of sanctions with local chambers of commerce. Embassy officials say they are still trying to get full details of the restrictions from Washington.

whether it is illegal to sell to someone who might resell to Iran. But an embassy trade official said the boycott will probably follow the lines of previous sanctions against Rhodesia and Cuba. It will be illegal for American companies to "knowingly sell" to Iran.

Seif Al Ghurair, president of the Dubai Chamber of Commerce, said if their Western suppliers try to prevent the local merchants from reselling to Iran, the merchants will turn to other suppliers.

"Only force will stop Dubai supplying Iran," he said. "We are a small country, and we don't want to become involved in politics."

April Grocery Bills Went Up Full Percentage Point

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Grocery bills went up by a full percentage point during April, according to an Associated Press survey which shows the increases spread across almost all the shelves in the supermarket.

More than half of the items checked rose last month in at least four of the 13 cities surveyed by the AP. Less than a third of the items declined in four cities or more.

The AP drew up a random list of commonly purchased food and non-food products and checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1979. Prices have been rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

The latest survey showed that the marketbasket total went up during April at the checklist store in eight cities and decreased in five cities. Overall, the marketbasket totals were an average of 1 percent higher at the start of May than they were a month earlier.

In March, in contrast, the marketbasket declined at the checklist store in eight cities and rose in five, leaving the average bill unchanged, according to the AP survey.

Although the April increases were widespread, they hit hardest at non-foods. The non-foods represented 23 percent of the items checked, but accounted for 30 percent of the increases. Fabric softener went up at the checklist store in nine cities — more than any other item. Pork chops, paper towels, butter, eggs, detergent, milk and sugar also increased at the checklist store in at least four cities.

The good news last month came at the meat counter. The price of a pound of chopped chuck went down at the AP checklist store in eight cities. Beef production is still lower than it was a year ago, but output during the rest of 1980 is expected to be close to 1979 levels.

Prices for pork chops and eggs — two alternatives to beef as a source of protein — have gone down over the past year because of abundant supplies, but the April picture was mixed. The AP survey showed pork chops went up in six cities and down in four; eggs went up in six cities and down in six. The only item besides chopped chuck, pork chops and eggs to decline in at least four cities was frankfurters, down last month at the checklist store in five cities.

The AP did not try to weight the survey results according to population density or in terms of what percent of a family's actual grocery outlay each item represents. The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar. A 15th item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped from the list after the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey. The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, R.I., Salt Lake City and Seattle.

Rose Plans Musical

"Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway," the musical about a student director who emulates his idol, George M. Cohan, is this year's production for the Rose High School Drama Club. The musical is an adaptation by June Walker Rogers.

Three performances will be given at Rose — at 8 p.m. on Friday, May 2, Saturday, May 3 and Sunday, May 4, all in the school gymnasium. Tickets are priced at $2.50 in advance and $3.00 at the door prior to curtain time.

Students in the musical's cast are Bill Dawson as George M. Cohan; Eric House as Kid Burns; Stuart Ward in the role of Tom Bennet; Jane Edgerly as Mary Jane; Karen Wheeler as Mrs. Dean; Robin Jones in the role of Flora Dora Dean; and Jim Ensor as Joe Cronin. Jeri Bullock is cast as the principal dancer.

Dances are choreographed by Cheryl Mercer of the N. C. Academy of Dance Arts, and Mrs. Betty Topper, drama teacher at Rose, is directing. Glenn Davis is musical director; Beth Richardson is technical director; and Mark Ward is stage manager. The sets for the production were made by students in the Rose Art Club.

New Fall Lineup Aims At Top

PORTRAYS MARILYN — Constance Forslund stars as the ill-fated actress Marilyn Monroe in "This Year's Blonde" to be broadcast by NBC-TV Sunday May 8. The episode is the first in a three-part adaptation for television of Garson Kanin's best-selling novel "Moviola". (AP Laserphoto)

By PETER J. BOYER
 AP Television Writer
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC, which blew a seemingly insurmountable lead to finish second in the season just concluded, marches boldly forth with a new fall lineup that promises a long run at the top for CBS. It may even help NBC finally climb out of the cellar.

Consider:
 One of the features of ABC's 1980-81 schedule, announced this week, is a spinoff of ABC's popular freak show, "That's Incredible!" It is called, "Those Amazing Animals," and focuses on oddities from "the wondrous, amazing animal kingdom."

They certainly haven't been studying past mistakes, because the colossal blunder that ruined last season for ABC is being repeated in '80-81. You may recall that ABC's biggest hit of '78-79 was "Mork and Mindy," which, in combination with the ABC Tuesday tandem of "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley," gave ABC a firm grip on the top of the weekly ratings tables.

ABC uprooted the successes and tried to plant them in barren soil, "Laverne and Shirley" losing ground in various new slots and "Mork & Mindy" eating Archie Bunker's dust on Sunday.

So, ABC has moved its successful "Benson" series, protected last season with hit lead-ins, to Friday nights, where it will likely wither. ABC has also given the kiss of death to "Charlie's Angels," moving that bouncy fluffcake to Sunday night, where "Archie Bunker's Place" will make all the "Who's gonna be the new Angel?" worries moot. It is possible, of course, that ABC is intentionally doing away with the "Angels," who have fallen from viewer favor of late.

"Taxi," now on Tuesdays, and "Soap," now on Thursdays, will be moved to Wednesdays, where "Charlie's Angels" used to fly.

"Those Amazing Animals" apparently represents ABC's quota of innovation. The other new series are:

— "Too Close for Comfort," a Thursday night sitcom with Ted Knight as the nervous single father of two pretty girls. In no way inspired, of course, by "Hello, Larry." Or "Bachelor Father," for that matter.

— "Bosom Buddies," another Thursday sitcom, about two struggling advertising men who move into an all-women's hotel. Sort of an "Odd Couple" Meets "Three's Company."

— "It's a Living," yet another Thursday sitcom, is about five waitresses in a high-class restaurant. You can wager that this is the last time "high-class" will ever be used in connection with this series. It sounds like a

"Sweet are the uses of adversity." An abundance of honor cards and solid trump suits tend to soften the possessor, and he becomes careless in his handling of card combinations. But when trump suits are shaky, with high honors in the hands of the enemy, and there are barely enough tricks to make both ends meet, economy of management becomes a sine qua non for survival. That is one sure way to develop your playing technique.

South became declarer at a precarious four, spade contract holding a scant majority of trumps. We do not endorse the auction, especially as five clubs cannot be lost and even six clubs will make because declarer can maneuver to squeeze West between the fourth diamond and the queen of spades.

After East's overall, South felt that he did not have the values for a free bid. However, when North reopened with a double,

ABC Captured Week's Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS' "60 Minutes" was the week's highest-rated show, but ABC won the three-way race as the television year entered a new phase.

The 1979-80 prime-time season ended April 20 with CBS in first place by a shade over four-time champion ABC. The two networks divided the Top 10 shows in the week ending April 27, and ABC finished first for the seven-day period by less than half a point.

ABC's rating for the week was 16.8 to CBS' 16.4 and NBC's 14.6. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 16.8 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were tuned to ABC.

The No. 1 finish for "60 Minutes" was not news. The CBS program was the season's top-rated show. The No. 5 finish for ABC's "20-20" was a bit more noteworthy.

ABC, in fact, had three of the week's five most-watched programs, including runner-up "That's Incredible" and "Three's Company" in third place, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

The rating for "60 Minutes" was 24.9. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, just under a quarter saw at least part of the newsmagazine.

typical follow-the-flow "creation," borrowing from "Alice," "Flo," "Last Resort" and almost any other current sitcom you can name. — "But I'm a Big Girl Now," a Friday sitcom, plays a recently divorced young mother (are there any other kind on TV?) who hassles a lot with Danny Thomas, her father. A little "That Girl," a little "One Day at a Time," and you've got a series.

There is a possibility that ABC will keep the fresh, clever edge to "Breaking Away" in its series version. It would give ABC at least one new series that can last past Halloween.

FBI Raided Carnival At Fort Bragg

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — The FBI raided a Fort Bragg carnival Wednesday night, arresting about 30 game operators for conducting gambling on a federal reservation.

Approximately 30 agents from the FBI, military police and Fort Bragg's Criminal Investigation Division participated in the raid, the first of its kind at the Army base.

Those arrested were charged with operating gambling equipment on a federal reservation and face maximum sentences of up to two years in jail and an unspecified fine.

The operation climaxed a two-week investigation by CID officers and FBI agents, according to officials.

The games confiscated by the agents consisted mostly of coin-operated machines in which players try to "dig" for toy prizes or "shoot" quarters through a slot in front of a moving shelf to win tokens.

Other games confiscated include "dice" games in which players put money down on colors, months or numbers and then throw a multisided dice into a table to win a prize; and a roulette-type game in which players place money on numbers and a wheel is spun to determine a winner.

If agents find the equipment was not manufactured in North Carolina, charges of interstate transportation of gambling devices also will be filed, FBI officials said.

Robert Pence, FBI special agent in charge for North Carolina, said he believed "the military can least afford to be victimized. I can't stand a group like this that is really bilking the soldiers out of their money."

Pence said there have been complaints over the past years about gambling operations at the carnival, which continued after the raid. An Army spokesman said after an investigation by CID, the Army filed a complaint with the carnival operator and later called in the FBI to verify whether any federal laws were being violated.

Vance To Make Harvard Speech

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Former Secretary of State Cyrus Vance will deliver the June 5 commencement address at Harvard University that promises to be a major foreign policy speech, school officials announced.

David Aloian, executive director of the Associated Harvard Alumni, said Wednesday Vance accepted the school's invitation in early March. Vance resigned Monday after disagreeing with President Carter's decision to send a rescue team to Iran to try and retrieve the U.S. hostages.

"He has made it known that he intends to make a major foreign policy address," Aloian said.

Endorsed By Coast Guard Pondering Use Of Blimp Patrols

The Pitt-Beaufort Conservative Union's Political Action Committee today announced its endorsements in the May 6 Democratic and Republican primaries.

In statewide races, the PBCU-PAC endorsed Jimmy Green for lieutenant governor and Thad Eure for secretary of state.

In statewide Republican primaries, the conservatives endorsed Ronald Reagan for president, I. Beverly Lake Jr. for governor and Keith Snyder for attorney general.

In state legislative races, the PBCU-PAC endorsed incumbents Melvin Daniels and J. J. "Monk" Harrington in the Democratic State Senate primary for the district including Beaufort County, incumbents Vernon White and Julian Allsbrook in the Democratic State Senate primary for the district including Pitt County, and incumbent Sam Bundy in the Democratic State House primary for the district including Pitt County.

In the Republican State Senate primary for the district including Pitt County, the PBCU-PAC urged a single-shot vote for Herb Lee.

In the only Democratic primary for County Commissioner in Pitt County, in District 2, the union endorsed incumbent R. L. Martin.

The endorsements are based on candidates' support of conservative principles, including lower taxes, traditional family values, individual liberty, limited government and free enterprise.

The union sent questionnaires on key issues to each candidate and studied the voting records of incumbents and the public statements on issues of candidates.

By HOWARD MEDICT Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — The Coast Guard may deploy a fleet of modern blimps if a new research program proves they can be used effectively in coastal patrol operations.

The service signed an agreement Wednesday with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for development of new technology that could lead to an operational lighter-than-air machine by late in this decade or in the early 1990s.

"We're looking for a vehicle that can be used in search and rescue, law enforcement and other patrol functions," explained Lt. Cmdr. Kenneth Williams, chief of the Coast Guard's conservation and technology branch.

"Our goal is a machine that is two to three times larger than the Goodyear blimp," he said. "It could carry 8 to 11 people, would have a cruising speed of 50 to 60 knots and maximum speed of 100 knots, a two-day patrol range of 2,500 miles and an altitude range of between 5,000 and 10,000 feet."

Williams said the craft must be able to take off and land vertically and be able to hover in a small circle for rescue operations.

He said fuel saving is a major consideration, with the airship using about 310 pounds of fuel per hour, compared with 1,272 pounds for the Coast Guard's Sikorsky HH3F helicopter and 1,925 pounds per hour for its HU25 small jet.

During "float and drift" observation missions, the vehicle would use practically no fuel, he said.

The cheap price of fuel was a major reason the Navy abandoned its airship program — used mainly for submarine and other patrol duties — in the early 1960s.

"Fuel costs a heck of a lot more today, and a recent Coast Guard-Navy study concluded that fuel-efficient airships are operationally and technically feasible for maritime patrol work, especially when used in concert with cutters and more conventional aircraft," Williams said. "But before we go ahead we have to determine many things."

The Coast Guard-NASA agreement will reduce development costs by coordinating research programs of the two agencies. Space agency scientists for some time have been studying lighter-than-air vehicles to determine their capabilities for lifting heavy equipment. This research will be broadened to meet Coast Guard needs.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to state your views to associates and to make changes or new arrangements. Put added effort in your line of endeavor to gain your aims. Be on your best behavior.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be more friendly to contacts and get excellent results now. Use your intuitive faculties more and you are rewarded.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study promises you have made and then carry through with them in a positive and efficient manner. Express happiness.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study present conditions well and know how you can profit by them. Don't overlook an important business matter today.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You have to be extremely careful in motion today to avoid a possible accident. Show more thought for loved one.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Make this a productive day in business before you engage in social activities. Use right methods to solve a difficult problem.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Face situations at home squarely and have more harmony there. Don't overlook an important business matter today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Contact those you want to be with more in the future and show a cooperative spirit. Avoid one who is a gossip.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get busy at whatever can add to present income so you have more security. Show increased devotion to family members.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are able to gain goals that mean much to you, so go after them early in the day for best results. Be wise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Concentrate on matters of principle and forget the practical for the time being. Strive for harmony with family members.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Cooperate more with associates and gain added benefits. Don't overlook an important business matter early in the day.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Contact an influential person who can be helpful to you now. Take more interest in public affairs and gain more prestige.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be fascinated by the study of varying philosophies of life and should have as fine an education as possible since there is great intellect here. Teach not to be overly independent and to cooperate more with others. "The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Clean Emmissions. Great Performance. Fuel Efficiency.

All Volvo models for 1980 are equipped with the unique Lambda Sond emission system, a Volvo innovation which revolutionized the industry when first introduced three years ago.

The Lambda Sond system uses an exhaust gas sensor to monitor and control fuel mixture, as well as a 3-way catalytic converter. This combination provides low emission, excellent fuel economy and—best of all—terrific drivability.

Here at Bob Barbour Honda-Volvo, we're fortunate to be able to offer you one of the finest selections of new Volvos you'll find anywhere. And, for a limited time, we'll be able to save you hundreds of dollars on these truly remarkable engineering achievements! Why not come in and take a test drive soon?

Avoid The Price Increase!

The 1980 Honda Accord

Effective April 1, there'll be a price increase on all new shipments of Honda cars. Here at Bob Barbour Honda-Volvo, we have a limited number of Hondas in stock at the old price! We would like to share these savings with you. We have available the following models:

- Green Accord LX, with automatic transmission, 2 to choose from
- Gold Accord LX, with automatic transmission, 2 to choose from
- Red Accord LX, with automatic transmission, 1 in stock

The Honda Accord LX this year offers an all-new, 3-speed fully-automatic transmission, as well as the many other standard features offered in years past: crushed velour interior, quartz digital clock, fully reclining bucket seats, rear window defroster, interior hatch release, tachometer, power steering, Michelin steel-belted radial tires and air conditioning.

In the face of rising gas prices, why not do yourself a favor and stop by for a test drive soon?

More Merit Proof!

Research underscores MERIT as proven taste alternative to high tar smoking.

Results of the newest wave of smoker research are in. The conclusions: undeniable.

MERIT Sweeps Latest Tests.

Once again, extensive testing with thousands of smokers across the country has solidly reaffirmed MERIT as a proven taste alternative to high tar smoking.

Blind Taste Tests: In tests where brand identity was concealed, a significant majority of smokers rated the taste of low tar MERIT as good as—or better than—leading high tar brands. Even cigarettes having twice the tar!

Kings: 8 mg "tar," 0.6 mg nicotine—100's Reg: 10 mg "tar," 0.7 mg nicotine—100's Men: 11 mg "tar," 0.8 mg nicotine av. per cigarette, FTC Report Dec. 79

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Smoker Preference: Among the 95% of smokers stating a preference, the MERIT low tar/good taste combination was favored 3 to 1 over high tar leaders when tar levels were revealed!

Long-Term Satisfaction: In the latest survey of former high tar smokers who have switched to MERIT, 9 out of 10 reported they continue to enjoy smoking, are glad they switched, and reported MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried!

MERIT is the proven alternative to high tar smoking. And you can taste it.

Lowes Pricing Policy

Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. This reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our selling area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which 10 or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retail prices do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling price. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. Prices do not include delivery.

Lowes Raincheck Policy

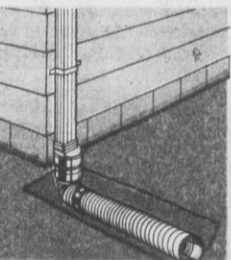

If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you. Stop by today during Lowe's terrific "Value Detective" promotion.
