Unemployment Rate Hit New High For Two Years

By OWEN ULLMANN
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate shot up from 6.2 percent to 7 percent in April, the highest level in 2½ years and a powerful sign that the inflation-wracked economy is now being squeezed by the vise of recession, the government reported today.

It also was the largest one-month increase in the jobless rate among adult men in more than three decades.

The Labor Department said the number of Americans without jobs grew by 825,000 from March to 7.3 million, with the largest one-month increase coming in the slumping construction and auto industries.

The rise in the jobless rate was the steepest for one month since January 1975, when the nation was in the grip of its last recession.

Even more startling was the leap in unemployment among adult men from 4.9 percent to 5.9 percent, the largest monthly increase since October 1949.

Among the nation's largest states, Michigan, which is reeling from a slump in the auto industry, showed the highest jobless rate — 12.2 percent, up from 10.2 percent in March. Ohio and California also showed large increases. In Texas and New Jersey, the jobless rates actually declined. The Texas rate fell from 5.8 percent to 5.4 percent; New Jersey's dipped from 6.9 percent to 6.6 percent.

The increasing unemployment figures come at the same time that inflation is running at an annual rate of 18 percent. Economic analysts, and President Carter, generally agree that the inflation rate will soon decline. Today's jobless figures parallel other recent economic indicators pointing to a recession and lend new evidence to revised predictions that the downturn will be substantially deeper than Carter is forecasting. The president has predicted a "short and mild" recession with unemployment rising to 7.2 percent by the end of this year and staying at about that level through 1981.

Some government economists, however, say unemployment now may rise to as much as 8 or 9 percent, matching the peak jobless figures during the 1974-75 recession.

The employment figures "show that a labor market recession is clearly under way," Janet Norwood, commissioner of the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics, told Congress today.

Mrs. Norwood, whose bureau prepared the employment report, said in testimony before the Joint Economic Committee that so far this year unemployment has risen by 1.2 million people. Unemployment was at a 21.5 percent rate among auto workers and a 15.1 percent rate for construction workers, she said.

Khomeini Meets A Private Citizen

By The Associated Press
Dick Gregory met with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, and said afterward that President Carter should ask for the release of all American hostages not suspected of spying. He said the others could be dealt with in the Iranian courts.

Although Gregory would not disclose what he discussed with Khomeini during the surprise meeting Thursday, he said Carter should drop economic sanctions against Iran and release the $8 billion in Iranian assets he froze in November in retaliation for the seizure of the 53 hostages.

"I don't think we have passed the talking stage yet," Gregory said, adding that the Carter administration does not understand Khomeini, Iran's revolutionary leader and Shiite Moslem patriarch. "The State Department needs a quick lesson in Islam," he added.

Gregory rejected any U.S. military attempt to end the hostage crisis, saying it could only lead to bloodshed. He said the aborted U.S. mission last Friday, which left eight American commandos dead, "shouldn't be called a rescue attempt. I think there is more to it than we know."

He did not elaborate, but

Iranian officials maintain that the U.S. force intended to kidnap revolutionary leaders and destroy strategic sites, in addition to rescuing the hostages, who at that time were at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Gregory, a comedian-turned-social activist, said he began fasting and praying three weeks ago in hopes of ending the hostage crisis, and that the meeting with Khomeini "caught me by surprise. I didn't come here to do anything but fast and pray."

Meanwhile, the militants who seized the embassy Nov. 4 said they had sent more of the hostages out of Tehran in their continuing effort to foil another U.S. rescue attempt. The latest group went to Mashad, 440 miles northeast of Tehran, the state radio said.

Others have been reported sent to Shiraz, 400 miles south of Tehran, Jahrom, 100 miles southeast of Shiraz, Tabriz, 330 miles northwest of Tehran, Qom, 100 miles south of Tehran, Isfahan, 210 miles south of Tehran, Yazd, 160 miles southeast of Isfahan, and Nasafabad, 50 miles west of Isfahan.

Three Arab gunmen have been holding the Iranian

Embassy in London since Wednesday, demanding freedom for 91 prisoners held in Iran's oil-rich Khuzestan province and threatening to kill their 16 Iranian hostages if the Tehran regime doesn't comply.

However, both Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr and Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh have refused to meet the terrorists' demand, and Ghotbzadeh said for every Iranian harmed at the embassy one of the 91 prisoners in Khuzestan would be executed.

Some 40,000 Iranians held a May Day rally outside the U.S. Embassy in Tehran Thursday, listening to speeches condemning "conspiracies of U.S. imperialism" and accusing Carter and his secret agents of planting bombs and carrying out acts of sabotage in Iran.

A 'Donation'

LOUISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Two Florida men "donated" $150,000 to the Franklin County and Franklin school systems this week as a result of guilty pleas to drug charges.

The contributions were ordered in the sentencing of William E. Cox and Parker H. Priest after the men pleaded guilty to marijuana charges in Franklin County Superior Court, said Sheriff William Dement.

Judge Robert Farmer gave each of the men four-year prison sentences, suspending all but 48 days of each on the condition that they donate their bond money to the schools.

Bond for each had been set at $75,000.

The men were arrested last May after a twin-engine, marijuana-laden airplane tipped over on landing at Ball Field, one mile north of Louisburg.

The plane was sold, and the proceeds, close to $200,000, also went to the school systems.

Cuban Tide Swells

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Hundreds of Cubans shouting "Viva Presidente Carter" arrived in the unstoppable "Freedom Flotilla" as federal officials readied a refugee tent city at an Air Force base and calculated the sealift armada at some 3,000 vessels.

"If the people of Cuba have the opportunity, (President Fidel) Castro will be the only one left there," said refugee Jose Antonio Arse, 77.

The Coast Guard said Thursday the Cuban exile fleet that has carried more than 7,000 refugees across the Florida Straits in the last 12 days now numbers at least 3,000 boats.

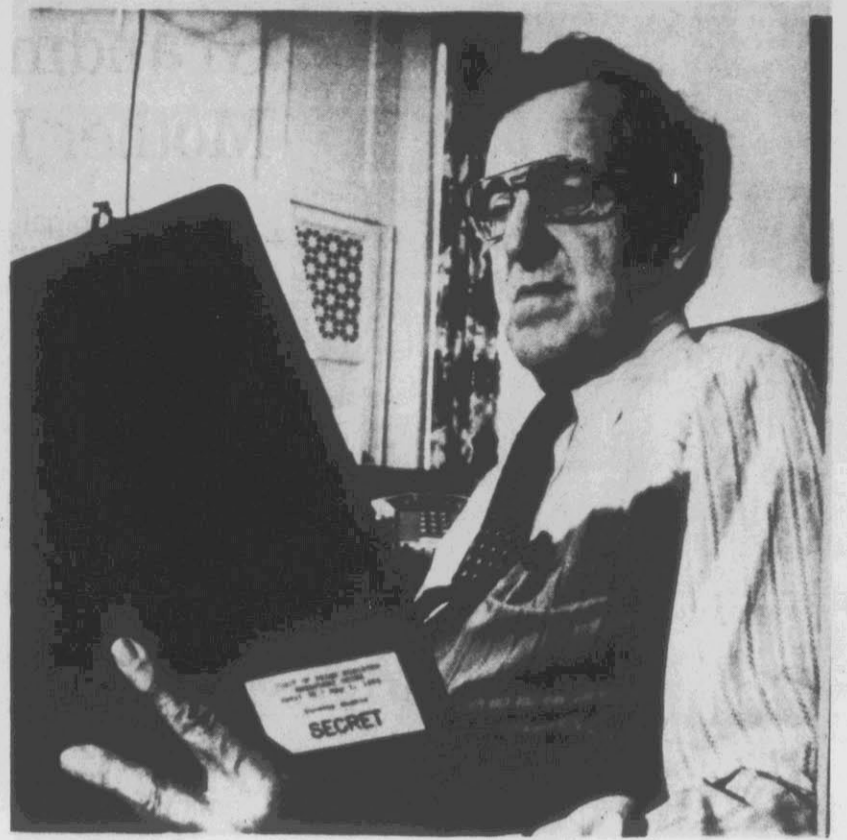

The exodus apparently is the heaviest flow of Cubans ever into the United States. Some 1,000 refugees a week flew into Miami at the height of a Cuban airlift in the late 1960s and 1970s.

Meanwhile, the White House was expected to announce today that new arrivals would be airlifted to Eglin Air Force Base near Pensacola, where crews were setting up tents and laying in supplies. Officials said the $1 million tent city could accommodate 15,000 refugees within three weeks.

In a May Day speech in Havana, Castro called the exodus a "hurricane" that started in the Peruvian Embassy in Cuba's capital city and "follows its natural course to the United States."

In the past two days, nearly all incoming refugees here have been among the 10,800 Cubans who flocked to the embassy a month ago seeking political asylum. Castro denied reports he was forcing undesirables off the communist-controlled island and onto boatlift vessels.

"We never have deported anybody," he said. "But we have the absolute right...to authorize the exit of anti-socials who want to leave."

Snooper Satellite Eyes Task Force

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Soviet spy satellite apparently designed to snoop on American naval forces in the Persian Gulf is in orbit despite U.S. efforts to impose international safeguards on such nuclear-powered spacecraft.

Carter administration sources said the satellite, launched Tuesday, is a twin of one that fell from orbit in January 1978, scattering radioactivity over a wide area of Arctic Canada.

The sources, who requested anonymity, refused to discuss any potential military implications of the new satellite, but one source did say its purpose is intelligence gathering.

Its function was widely believed to include the capability of monitoring U.S. ships operating in the troubled Indian Ocean-Arabian Sea.

The United States has a record 37 ships there. Four are aircraft carriers, the heart of the Navy's striking power.

By mid-May, the force will dwindle as two carriers and their escorting ships start back for home ports in the United States.

The Soviets, it is known, are eager to track closely the American military response to their occupation of Afghanistan, which precipitated President Carter's order to maintain a permanent naval presence in the area of the Indian Ocean and Arabian Sea.

The satellite's launch followed by five days the aborted U.S. commando mission to free the American hostages in Tehran. The administration persistently has denied reports the Soviets eavesdropped on U.S.

communications and were aware of the rescue attempt, in which eight men died in the scramble to evacuate the desert staging area.

The United States will register its objections over the satellite launching to the U.N. outer space committee, which has been considering American efforts to have a treaty drafted governing the use of nuclear reactors in space.

'Evidence' Of Corruption By Some Officials

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An FBI agent said Thursday the agency has evidence of corruption by some government officials in North Carolina.

But, state FBI chief Robert L. Pence said his statements earlier in the week about governmental corruption, in the state were not intended as "suggesting the state of North Carolina is ripe with corruption."

Pence clarified his statements after Gov. Jim Hunt expressed amazement at Pence's comments during an appearance in Raleigh Tuesday indicating that corruption was widespread among governmental officials in the state.

Hunt called the comments "highly questionable."

"That was an awfully comprehensive, broad statement to make about a state and its people. I have never seen a law enforcement officer make a statement like that before without evidence for it," Hunt said.

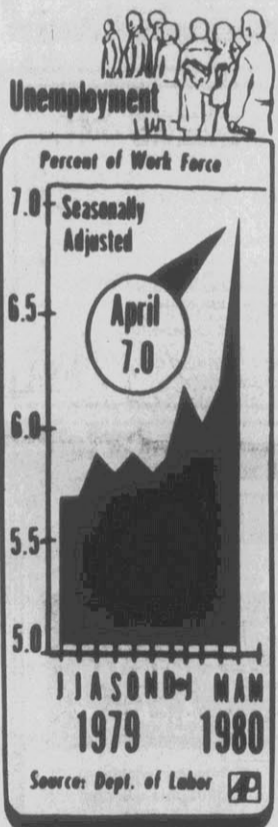

On Tuesday Pence said the FBI would investigate public corruption at all levels during the coming year, adding: "Indications are that there is a quite fertile field for this sort of thing in North Carolina. The feeling I've gotten from people I've talked to across the state is that this corruption is a way of life."

After Hunt's comments, Pence said Thursday his statement "merely indicated that across the country we are involved in some 1,200 corruption investigations, and some information I've gotten indicates that there may be corruption in certain agencies in some levels of government of North Carolina.

"If he (Hunt) interpreted a statement I made as directed against the people of North Carolina or any specific governments in the state, that wasn't intended," Pence said.

Pence, who assumed command of the FBI in North Carolina in March, declined to say how extensive corruption appeared to be in the state or whether it involved state and local officials.

HOTLINE

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used.

TRANSPORTATION TO POLLS

Greenville realtor Anne Duffus said there has been little response to an article published last week offering free transportation to the polls Tuesday to elderly and disabled persons. Local realtors are offering this service in an effort to "Make America Better" by helping people get out and vote. Any interested persons is invited to call his or her realtor, the Board of Realtors (756-4211) or Mrs. Duffus (756-5395) to make an appointment. She asked that appointments be made prior to Tuesday—in other words, today or Monday between 9 a. m. and 4 p. m.

NEEDS HOUSE

Jesse Harris of the Greenville Human Relations Office has asked Hotline to appeal for help in finding a house, apartment or trailer for a young family who cannot pay more than $150-a-month rent. The husband has a good job. The wife has just given birth to their second child and they have been evicted from the house they were living in because the owner needed it for a family member. They have large utility bills that make payment of an initial deposit difficult. Anyone willing to help the family with the utility bill and with finding a reasonably priced place to live is asked to contact Harris, 752-4137, or the family at the home of a friend, 753-4093.

Final Notice On City Tax

City Tax Collector Floyd Little issued a final reminder to all Greenville residents who do not pay 1979 city taxes by Monday, May 5 that advertisement by name and property addresses will be published in "The Daily Reflector" for sale of tax liens.

Little also notified residents of Red Oak, Oakdale and surrounding properties annexed by the city on Jan. 1, 1980 that the advertisement for sale of tax liens will not include their properties.

All 1979-80 taxes in these newly annexed areas, he added, are due by Sept. 1, 1980, with discounts for payment in August.

Those Woodpeckers Are Awakening People Early

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

A number of Pitt County residents are being awakened at 5 a. m. needlessly these days. Loud tapping and knocking alerts owners of houses with wooden siding that they have an unwanted visitor. It's not a noise pollution problem or a burglar after silver and gold but a woodpecker trying to establish residence.

Several reports of woodpecker damage to houses built with wooden siding have been reported in the area, according to Mike Regans, Pitt County associate agricultural extension agent. "A couple of people in the Twin Oaks development of Greenville have reported problems," said Regans. "Apparently the birds are not after food, since none is usually found in wooden siding. The woodpeckers are probably trying to build a nest in the siding or get into the building."

According to Deborah Roebuck, who lives in Twin Oaks and has struggled with a woodpecker problem, the birds always begin their abuse around five in the morning. "When I first heard the woodpecker, I jumped right on the problem," she explained. "First I opened the window and tried to frighten him off. When I realized he'd already made a hole in the side of the house, I got a syringe and shot some pentachlorophenol and water into the holes. I haven't heard any more of the bird."

A single woodpecker is usually the culprit and Regans reports that repelling the bird generally eliminates the problem. Woodpeckers are protected by Federal law and a permit is required to shoot or trap them. There are no poisons which control woodpeckers. Repellents such as pentachlorophenol have been used with some success but are not a guaranteed solution.

"Pentachlorophenol is a wood preservative which has been effective in some cases, but it does stain wood a greenish color," cautioned the agricultural extension agent. "Before using it, try the preservative on a sample of wood siding to determine if the color suits your tastes." Regans suggested that pentachlorophenol should not be used in buildings where livestock might come in contact with the preservative. Compounds such as copper-based chemicals and other wood preservatives have also been used but results are not consistent.

Covering the damaged area with metal sheeting provides permanent protection from the woodpecker, but in many cases is also unsightly. "It's also expensive," added Regans. "Hardware cloth (one-fourth inch mesh) is more satisfactory. You can also frighten them away with things such as pie tins, metal streamers, or anything that flashes or creates noise." These items should be placed as close as possible to where the bird is working.

If repelling techniques do not work, the bird can be removed by trapping or shooting. A permit is required to do either of these, and in this area can be obtained from Special Agent in Charge, Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, Division of Law Enforcement, P.O. Box 506, Washington, N.C. 27889. Once the state permit is secured, persons inside the Greenville city limits must get a local permit. According to Greenville Police Chief Glen Cannon, this permit can be obtained by contacting him. "There's a city ordinance against discharging a firearm within the city limits," explained Cannon. "For this reason a permit is required."

A rat trap nailed directly to the wall under the hole made by the bird is the easiest trapping method.

Dear Abby Grandma Right Mother Is Wrong

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: From the very first time my mother-in-law held my twins, there were hugs and kisses and tickles on the tummy, and she told them that they were the prettiest babies on earth and that Grandma loved them best of all.

Today, at 18 months, they drop everything and run to her shrieking with delight when she comes into the room. It bothers me because I am not as open as she is, and I'm afraid they will really believe that Grandma loves them best, so I asked her to stop it.

She said she understood and would stop it if I thought about it some more and still wanted her to stop. She says in time they will realize that everyone loves them in a different way and that I love them just as much as she does. What do you think?

HAVING DOUBTS

DEAR HAVING: Be honest. What bothers you is that Grandma is more demonstrative in her affection than you, and you're afraid your children will love her more than you, so you're asking her to cool it. You're being unfair. Grandma is right.

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps if less importance were placed on the size of a woman's breasts, women wouldn't have such a horror of mastectomies. As an American Cancer Society volunteer, for 10 years I have driven patients to and from hospitals for chemotherapy treatments, and believe me, I could write a book!

One woman I drove for over a year old me that she had deliberately put off seeing a doctor for three years because she was afraid that the lump she felt in her breast was malignant, and she might have to have her breast removed. (It was and she did, but, unfortunately, it was too late.)

I myself fell victim to cancer and had to have both breasts removed. The day after I came home from the hospital, I helped cook dinner for my family of five. Two days later I was driving in the car pool again, and within two weeks I was back into the full routine of housework, social activity and volunteer work.

The loss is minimal. Sign me, "Better 30 inches in the chest than 60 inches in the ground," or...

ONE OF MANY

DEAR ONE: Thanks for a timely letter. I wonder how many women are aware that simple self-breast-examination instructions are available at every local American Cancer Society office. They're free for the asking.

DEAR ABBY: My compliments on your new picture. But, Abby, I must ask, didn't you have your face lifted?
M.C. IN TUCSON

DEAR M.C.: No, but my photographer lifted a few lines.

DEAR ABBY: I have never needed advice so badly in my life, and you are the only one I can turn to. My married daughter is pregnant with her second child and is planning to have a natural childbirth this time. She and her husband have been going for "lessons." It sounds very far out to me, but if that's their choice, it's all right with me. But, Abby, she plans to have her 3-year-old son watch the delivery! Her husband will be present at the birth, and she also has invited her 19-year-old unmarried sister to witness the whole business. Lord, help me! I had all I could do to keep from getting hysterical when she told me this.

Abby, do you think a 3-year-old child can handle something like this? Even a 19-year-old unmarried girl might not be able to handle it. I get sick at the thought of it. We are conservative people, and I have raised my daughters to be modest, so this is a terrible shock to me.

What do you think of this whole business?
APPALLED IN K.C.

DEAR APPALLED: There is no better way to learn about the miracle of life than to witness childbirth. I see nothing shocking or immodest about it. And a 3-year-old child should find it a fascinating and educational experience.

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How To Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

PEARLY GREATS—Pearls are high on the fashion hit parade this spring, reports the Jewelry Industry Council. They range from single-strand to multi-strand, from chokers to lariats, to be mixed with gemstones and gold chains for new fashion looks. Rings, earrings and pins show their versatility, from poppy-seed-sized pearls to larger ones. Baroque pearls catch the eye in one-of-a-kind designer-fashioned pins and pendants.

Pearls Add New Glow To Fashions

NEW YORK (AP)— Once upon a time, when every young lady wore white gloves and usually a hat, it was an absolute necessity to have a perfectly matched single strand of pearls with matching earrings, recalls Kae McCulloch, fashion director of the Jewelry Industry Council.

"It's only today that the American market has learned what the world has known all along — that pearls needn't be milk-white and perfectly round," she adds. "In many countries, colored pearls are prized much more highly than white pearls, and baroque pearls are coveted for their unique shapes."

Fashion today has concluded, she reports, that there is beauty in odd-shaped pearls and pearls with tints of color, such as the delicate pink of fresh-water Chinese pearls, and the silvery-gray hue of Japanese fresh-water pearls.

In fact, the Council points out, designers now use the color tones and asymmetric shapes of the pearl itself to create unusual one-of-a-kind jewelry.

While today's string of pearls may not be evenly matched, or carefully graduated in size, they are still the "go-with-everything, flatter-every-woman" fashion they were years ago, the Council says. And that goes for wearing them with everything from evening gowns to blue jeans — particularly designer-fashioned jeans.

Pearls appear in many lengths, in single and multiple strands for eye-appealing neckwear, and in handsome pins, rings, and earrings, Ms. McCulloch notes.

Pearls combine with gemstones, either on the same necklace or to wear mixed with gemstone necklaces. This spring, the "black and white" motif is seen in necklaces of pearls with onyx or serpentine stones. Pearls are used on gold station chains, and in delicate lariats. Often one large baroque pearl, set in gold, is worn on a gold chain.

Fresh-water pearls range from the tiny, poppy seed-sized "keshi" to rice and nugget sizes. The mobes — dome-like pearls cut from the shell — are used in rings and pins.

"Pearls are back in the fashion picture, a part of the new generation, and they're here to stay in a prominent way," Ms. McCulloch says.

Traditional Reunion Planned For Saturday

ROCKY MOUNT — Littleton Female College, a private Methodist-related school in the town of Littleton, was considered "the Mount Holyoke of the South" at the beginning of this century. The college was destroyed by fire in January, 1919, and was never rebuilt.

Since the mid-1920s, alumnae and friends of Littleton College have held annual reunions to keep alive the spirit and tradition of the school. The Littleton College Memorial Association has established scholarship funds at Scarrit College in Nashville, Tenn. and at N. C. Wesleyan College in Rocky Mount. The annual meetings have been held at Wesleyan College since 1962.

The 1980 meeting of the association will be held Saturday, beginning with registration at 10 a. m. in the Braswell Administration Building, Dr. Leverett T. Smith Jr., Associate Professor of English at Wesleyan, will address those attending. Tributes will be given to Mrs. Alma Lyth Taylor of Richlands and Mrs. Stella McCall McCokman of Faison, two alumnae who have died in the past year. Both were music teachers.

Mrs. Lillian Bridges of St. Louis, Mo., daughter of Littleton College Pres. and Mrs. James M. Rhodes, will attend. Between 30 and 50 alumnae of the school which closed 61 years ago have registered, including Mrs. Mildred McArthur Nichols of Greenville and Mrs. Esther Miller West of Ayden.

A Handicapped Parking Sign Needs 2 Symbols

By GAIL MICHAELS
For years I've advocated that, instead of one symbol for the handicapped, parking lots use two: a wheelchair and a stroller.

This, at least, would involve some recognition that the mobility of young mothers and pregnant women is severely impaired. Consider, for instance, the plight of two pregnant women trying to pass each other in a typical department store infant section aisle stacked with Pampers boxes. Or the attempt of a young mother carrying an infant, a toddler, a diaper bag, an umbrella stroller, and two shopping bags to obey the escalator warning, "Hold the handrail."

Or, for that matter, the plight of that same mother as she tries to reach a car parked half a mile from the nearest mall exit without dropping anything more fragile than the Waterford crystal vase she just purchased.

As it is, these women get less attention than a wino at a rock concert. But far better that they be ignored than that they be pushed into permanent disability by people like my husband.

He doesn't mean to be sadistic. It's just that he's been brainwashed by the health freaks. He says that if women paid more attention to their physical fitness, the various stages of motherhood wouldn't be so difficult.

Then again, he has never had to push a stroller up three flights of concrete steps to keep an appointment with his thesis adviser so what does he know?

Why I listen to him is a mystery, but it was his nagging that finally pushed me into taking those recommended daily walks. If he had just kept his mouth shut, I would never have had to rewrite that cute little nursery rhyme, March winds and April showers bring on severe sinusitis.

And if the anticipation of holding my breath throughout labor and delivery wasn't debilitating enough, on my last walk I sprained my ankle.

I did not take the diagnosis well. "It's not enough that I can't get into a car without a pulley," I blubbered as the emergency room nurse wrapped my ankle in an Ace Bandage. "Now I've got to haul two people around on crutches!"

Phillip patted my shoulder. "It's not so bad. It's only for a week."

"Only for a week! Do you realize that twice a day during that week I've got to bend over and rewrap this stupid bandage around my foot? That's like changing a tire from the other side of the car!"

"Other women have lived through it, I'm sure. It stands to reason with all that extra weight a pregnant woman is carrying, sprains happen pretty frequently."

I was aghast. "You mean you knew this all along, and you let me walk anyway?"

"I tried to show you some ankle strengthening exercises, but you wouldn't listen. Maybe after this you will."

I turned to the nurse. "He wants to kill me."

"Well, look at it this way," she said. "He's got to do the cooking and cleaning for the next week."

That's what he gets for trying to make me healthy.

Jerry Paul Is Reprimanded

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former Durham attorney Jerry Paul has drawn private reprimands — the least severe type of discipline allowed — from a North Carolina State Bar committee for his conduct with investigators in three cases before the committee.

The committee, however, dismissed two charges of unprofessional conduct against Paul, who now lives in New York, and rescheduled a third charge for hearing on May 14.

Paul drew the reprimands for allegedly refusing to cooperate with investigators.

The committee dismissed one charge after the complainant, John Earl Edmonds Jr., refused to testify. Edmonds had accused Paul of not completing legal work for him.

A second charge was dismissed when the committee decided Paul had not violated professional ethics in his representation of two clients in Pitt County.

The third charge, still to be decided, also involves a former client's contention that legal work was not completed.

The State Bar, North Carolina's licensing and regulatory agency for attorneys, also is expected to hear this month Paul's request that an order suspending him from practice in the state for two years be blocked temporarily from becoming effective.

The bar last year suspended Paul's license after concluding he had violated provisions of the professional code. The order, which was not delivered until this week, could not become effective until it had been served and answered by registered mail.

Bar officials said notification of the order was sent originally to Paul's New York address, but no response was made.

The suspension resulted from a case in which Paul allegedly did not complete a case for a man convicted of murder. The client retained another lawyer and subsequently won an appeal of his conviction.

Paul gained a degree of national attention in 1975 when he successfully defended Joan Little, a black woman accused of murder in the death of her white jailer in Beaufort County.

Churchmen Rap Passport Action

CANTERBURY, England (AP) — The heads of the 24 national provinces of the worldwide Anglican Communion of 65 million Christians have issued a statement deploring the confiscation by the South African government of the passport of Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu.

"Seriously disturbing harassment," the Anglican primates said of the action. They included Presiding Bishop John M. Allin of the Episcopal Church in the United States. He previously had expressed "great sorrow and indignation" at the government's action.

Tutu's passport was lifted in March shortly after he had voiced outrage at the 69-month prison sentence imposed on the Rev. David Russell for violating terms of his banning order. Russell was banned — forbidden to speak publicly — for defying South Africa's apartheid laws.

Tutu currently is secretary of the South Africa Council of Churches.

Pressure Keeps Postal Station

FARMER, N.C. (AP) — The old wooden mail slots at the Postal Station won't be collecting cobwebs after all.

Under pressure from local groups and from Washington, the Greensboro U.S. Postal Service office reversed its position Thursday and decided to keep the tiny Farmer office open.

The decision also means that postmistress Ocia Morgan will be able to keep her $1,200-a-year job.

"We're all so glad they're going to leave it here. We're so happy," Miss Morgan said upon hearing the news.

Postal service officials originally said they were going to close the office, saying the service Miss Morgan provides could be handled less expensively.

CP&L Move Is Proper

Greenville Utilities and the City Council have made a major move in notifying Virginia Electric and Power Co. that Greenville no longer intends to purchase all its power from that firm.

The action was taken Wednesday and the city feels it has a new source of power assured through Carolina Power & Light or the N. C. Power Agencies No. 1 and 2.

More important the power sources would be far less expensive based on all available current figures. Studies show that Greenville paid Vepco some 25.2 percent more for electricity from 1970 to 1979 than would have been paid to CP&L during the same period. A switch to CP&L would save some $32.8 million over the next five years, although there would be some transmission expenses. Even in the worse case

Greenville should save $18.3 million over a five-year period.

Vepco argues that the savings won't be there because it expects its rates to equal CP&L's during the 1980s. That may be, but historically Vepco has run well ahead of CP&L's rates and consultants don't see that changing in the future.

GUC and the City of Greenville owe it to our citizens and rural customers to try for the lowest possible electric rates in these times of soaring costs. We also owe it to ourselves to have the most attractive industrial electric rates possible as we seek to attract blue chip industries and hold on to what we have.

By all means should the city proceed with this effort to develop electric supplies at the lowest possible cost.

The Successful Woman

WASHINGTON — As someone who finds TV commercials far more interesting than the programs wedged between them, I have noticed more and more advertisements aimed at the "successful woman." If you believe the ads, which I do, the successful woman has many more things to do before she can achieve the upward mobility we are all striving for.

In bygone years a woman's success depended on what kind of wax she put on her kitchen floor or brand of detergent she used to wash her husband's shirts. She was

According to the TV commercials, the ultimate in success for a businesswoman is her ability to choose the correct wine to serve for a romantic evening after a grueling day.

How do I know this? My favorite commercial, which is getting a big play on television these days, shows a man and a woman in a luxurious suite at the Waldorf Astoria. He's in a tuxedo, and she's in a very chic black evening gown with long pearls, talking to her London office telling them she will fly over in the morning and straighten out the problem, whatever it is. As she's talking on the phone, the man takes a bottle of wine out of a bucket, and pours her a glass, which she acknowledges with a nod, and continues her business on the phone. The message is that this is the wine all successful women prefer, even if they have to speak to London late at night.

Unfortunately, since TV commercials are so expensive, we never see what occurs after the woman gets off the phone. Since you get the feeling from the setting that the couple isn't married, you wonder what will happen next. I can only believe it ends like this: "You look beautiful in that evening dress," the man says as he kisses her earlobe. "Darling, pour me another glass of wine while I call Tokyo." "Forget about Tokyo. The night is young and we're in this beautiful $300 suite, which only successful women like you can afford." He kisses her on the neck. "Stop that. I have to call Carstairs in Tokyo before the market closes to tell him that Winthrop is going to pull a fast one in Geneva, unless we get to Goldfarb in Hong Kong first."

"But what about us, and the wonderful things we planned to do after dinner? What about the delicious wine you ordered?" "Put it in my briefcase. I'll drink it on the way to the airport tonight."

judged on the soup she served her kids for lunch, and how many cavities her child had when he came home from school.

But as more and more women entered the business world, the people charged with selling products had to switch gears and aim their commercials at the female population, which was trying to reach the top of the ladder in the executive suite.

The new message was that in order to be a successful woman your hair had to be fresh and neat at all times. You had to use the right facial cleanser before you retired to bed at night, and the seams of your stockings always had to be straight.

The successful woman is not only judged on her performance as a businesswoman, but whether she is using the correct pain reliever when the pressure gets too much.

She'll never make it in a man's world unless she buys a certain bath oil or rubs her hands with a reliable hand lotion. And, of course, she must watch her figure at all times. This means taking plenty of vitamins and minerals and wearing the right girdle to keep the bulges from showing up in the wrong places.

THIS AFTERNOON New Age Dawning

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — An electronics research center second to none in the world and located on one of the Research Triangle campuses of the University of North Carolina could propel North Carolina into an early and dominant role in this just-budding New Era.

That, coupled with the location of a General Electric research and manufacturing laboratory in the Research Triangle Park, joining other giants in the computer-electronics field such as IBM and DATA GENERAL already located here, could turn this state into the capitol of a worldwide technological revolution.

"We're going to make them an offer they can't refuse," says Gov. Jim Hunt of the General Electric situation. GE is talking about a facility to turn out silicone chips. One of their needs is a university research capability nearby.

A top-drawer university committee is already at work on the proposal, headed by University President William Friday. The likely location would be N.C. State University in Raleigh.

Why Hunt's excitement over a seemingly routine industrial prospect? Why such intense involvement of the university? Why the prospect of investing millions of state dollars in a new university program?

Historic This development would, says Hunt, be the most significant step forward for North Carolina economic development in history. Then he adds with only a slight nod to modesty: it may be second only to the launching of the Research Triangle Park itself; maybe.

The electronics age is dawning all but unheralded except by those few initiators who are involved and understand the exotic language and symbols ... and promise. More exciting than the age of world exploration; more promising than the age of nuclear power which withered considerably while blooming; more realistic and directly useful than the age of space; at least as important to the future as the Industrial Revolution which took away backbreaking, dirt-grubbing labor from the shoulders of mankind.

Now comes General Electric on the scene. That once-revered leader in electronics technology research has ridden at anchor through the vicious storms which have made fortunes overnight for many unheard of individuals and firms; and just as quickly dashed those fortunes upon the rocks of revolutionary change after change.

Micro (smaller is better), laser transmission, fiber optics, satellite chains are on the horizon. Computers which clunked along with rooms full of wires and switches and transformers and airconditioning and padding, sucking electricity like a siphon, have been reduced, and reduced again and again until a modern hand-held counterpart can be launched into space or tucked away in a telephone base or installed in an airplane, car, or ship control panel to monitor and control and advise ... everything: wise business investments, fuel consumption, wind and wave direction for optimum sailing, inventory, crops, weather, land uses

Military applications are endless. Guidance systems, communications, intelligence, logistics, deployment. Through sunshine or storm, night or day, sensors can "read" and report back from satellite scanning positions what is going on below, even zeroing in on a single individual under ideal conditions.

The silicone chip made all this possible. A single chip the size of a fingernail honeycombed with electronic flow channels replaces a warehouse full of tubes and wires and switches.

The quantum leap has now been made from the beginnings of the Electronics Age into the sophisticated future at a speed which is dazzling. Changes have developed overnight instead of taking years and decades as have past revolutions in transportation or manufacturing technology.

General Electric says now they are ready to move full steam ahead, and if Gov. Hunt has his way, Tar Heel hands and brainpower will be deeply involved.

Other Editors Say Defies Solution

In his book, "Welfare", Martin Anderson of Stanford University's Hoover Institution suggested that the federal dole may be impossible to cut because recipients and the government workers hired to oversee the programs are now so numerous that they constitute a major political force in congressional districts around the nation.

This accumulation of political power can be expected to be brought to bear against any serious attempt to correct this country's current economic difficulties, economist Anderson believes.

Over the last decade the poverty industry has become one of America's largest. About five million people have jobs relating to the welfare system and about 44 million people are, in one form or another, on the receiving end of what has to be considered government welfare.

Just the dispensers of welfare represent a bigger constituency than many other large industries. They outnumber those working in transportation, public utilities, finance, insurance or real estate.

Current moves to balance the federal budget demonstrate the clout of the welfare establishment. President Carter and Congress seem to agree — and it has been a long time coming — that eliminating the deficit is a high priority.

But many congressmen are readying themselves to battle any suggestion that the balanced budget should be paid for, even in part, by cutting back on welfare payments.

What this really means is these politicians recognize what political power there is in the hands of those within the welfare community.

This political power was used in the 1970s to increase the standard of living for those on welfare at the expense of the productive members of the society.

A recent article in the conservative newsletter Human Events pointed out that a Harvard investigator examined all of the benefits that can be obtained legally by a welfare family and concluded that they equal an income that would take a $20,000-a-year job to match.

Is there any doubt why some able people are attracted to living off the taxes of their neighbors?

All this was predicted by opponents of the welfare programs when they were fresh ideas. John Kennedy's New Frontier and Lyndon Johnson's Great Society have resulted in a dead-end life for many of those on the dole and an economic quagmire that defies political solution.

Strength For Today

LET YOUR LIGHT SHINE We need more magnifying glasses.

Hot as the sun sometimes gets, its direct rays never set anything on fire. But let us hold a magnifying glass so that the rays are focused on something inflammable and we will soon have a blaze. The heat was there all the time, but it lacked strength necessary to burn until it was concentrated and focused.

There are always a few leaders who make magnifying glasses of themselves.

They let God's power shine through them and they focus it on the human affairs around them. This is the secret of great Christians who are able to accomplish so much. The magnifying glass lets the light in and sends it out again. Both these functions are essential to the Christian. He not only must let God's spirit shine into him: the light must shine through to others. Christianity is not a faith of solitude but a faith of fellowship. Elisha Douglass

Rescue Try Aftermath

By GEORGE GALLUP
PRINCETON, N.J. — Last week's ill-fated attempt to rescue the American hostages in Iran has had little effect on the relative standing of President Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan, the current front-runners for the presidential contest in November.

In a Gallup Poll trial heat conducted two days after the abortive Iranian mission, Carter was the choice of 47 percent of registered voters nationwide for the presidency to 43 percent for Reagan. These figures are virtually identical to those recorded two weeks earlier, when Carter was preferred by 49 percent of registered voters and Reagan by 43 percent.

Examination of several other aspects of public opinion suggests that President Carter has been the immediate beneficiary of a certain amount of goodwill despite the failure of the Iranian venture.

1) By an overwhelming 71 to 18 percent margin the public feels the president was right in attempting to rescue the hostages using military force according to a Newsweek/Gallup survey conducted Friday evening.

2) By a 2-to-1 ratio, Americans give their backing to the president's decision not to consult with congressional leaders prior to undertaking the military operation. In this decision, Carter has the support of 63 percent of the electorate while 27 percent believe he was at fault.

3) Approval of the president's handling of the Iranian situation has increased somewhat, from 40 percent in a late-March Gallup Poll, before the rescue attempt, to 46 percent in Friday's survey. However, this figure is far below the 76 percent approval rating for Carter's Iranian policies recorded in December, shortly after the takeover of the American Embassy.

4) The president's overall performance rating has changed little within the past two weeks. In a Gallup Poll conducted two weeks ago, 39 percent of the public approved of Carter's handling of his presidential duties while in Friday's survey the president's approval score was 43 percent.

Perhaps more significantly, between the two surveys, the percentage of the public DISAPPROVING of Carter's handling of his job declined by 11 points, from 50 percent in the mid-April poll to 39 percent at present. In the same interim, those who did not express an opinion on the president's overall effectiveness went from 11 to 18 percent, suggesting that many people are withholding judgment until more is known about the Iranian venture.

Here are the questions asked to determine the relative strength of Carter and Reagan for the presidency:

"Suppose the presidential election were being held TODAY. If Jimmy Carter were the Democratic candidate and Ronald Reagan were the Republican candidate, which would you like to see win?"

Those who named another person or who were undecided were asked: "As of today, do you lean more to Carter, the Democrat, or to Reagan, the Republican?"

And here is the recent trend in the Carter-Reagan contest:
Carter vs. Reagan
(Choices of registered voters)

LATEST	Carter	Reagan	Other	Undecided
(April 26-27)	47 pct.	43 pct.	3 pct.	7 pct.
April 11-14	49	43	2	6
March 28-31	50	42	2	6
Feb. 29-Mar. 3	58	33	3	6
Feb. 1-4	60	31	3	6
Jan. 4-7	62	33	1	4
Dec. 7-10	61	35	1	3
Nov. 16-19	53	41	1	5
Oct. 12-15	48	42	3	7
Sept. 7-10	47	46	2	5

This question was asked to determine public opinion of the military action in Iran:

"Do you feel President Carter was right or not to try to rescue the hostages by military force?"

And here are the national findings:

Bizarre Reform

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Strange things have been wrought in the name of reform. Tax reform bills have opened new loopholes. Welfare reform proposals have turned out to be either costly expansions or punitive cutbacks.

But it would be difficult to find a more bizarre product of reform than the process by which a handful of Democrats in Michigan picked 14 national convention delegates.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy got 71, President Carter got 70, and most of the voters got nothing to say about it.

Another big delegation, 152 delegates, will be selected in a caucus-convention system in Texas, beginning Saturday — and there, too, the participants are likely to be but a tiny fraction of the state's Democrats.

Both states have presidential primary elections but, for the Democrats, neither primary counts.

The problem: Democratic reformers have forbidden open primary elections, in which Republicans can cross over at will, on grounds they don't necessarily represent the view of Democratic voters.

Michigan has an open primary, coming up May 20. It will count on the Republican side.

Texas has something like an open system, since there is no party registration to determine who is a Democrat and who is not. So the Texas primary between Carter and Kennedy Saturday will be purely for show, binding no delegates. But voting in the Democratic primary also is the only way to get a ticket to the Saturday-night caucuses that will line up the Texas delegation.

Pursue Larger Withholding

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The Carter administration says the government is being cheated because it doesn't get its share of interest on your savings and dividends on your stocks, and it hopes to do something about it.

And so the administration and Congress and the banks and others are arguing their cases with facts, figures, testimony, opinions, lawyers and money, and they will let you know when they reach their decisions.

But there is another constituency too, the individuals who would have their incomes withheld. It deserves to be considered at least; and if nothing comes of it, the individuals involved deserve an explanation.

But first, the positions of the administration and the institutions:

The administration hopes to create a withholding system for interest and dividend income, using banks, corporations and others to route directly to Washington 15 percent of payments intended for you.

The administration has its reasons. As Secretary G. William Miller explained: "We must ... take positive action to avoid needless loss to the Treasury of billions of dollars due under present tax laws."

The laws, it seems, are being flouted. According to Miller, about 9 percent to 16 percent of interest and dividend income to individuals — more than $2 billion a year — fails to show up on income tax returns.

Congress, however, might not buy the proposal, now before the House Ways and Means Committee, one reason being that those who would do the routing, such as banks, are uniformly and adamantly against it.

Their "anti" arguments are many, but generally relate to the cost of bookkeeping, to be assumed by institutions, and feelings that the plan would discourage savings and divert funds from more productive uses.

Presumably, someone will speak for the millions of individuals who would feel the pinch, but they won't have nearly the same ability to make so professional a presentation. They may have to rely on logic.

First, with the income of corporations already taxed, why should individuals have to pay taxes again on the dividends they receive from those profits? It's an old, old argument, but as relevant as ever.

Secondly, how many people have any real income from interest on savings? Very few. Inflation has consistently deprived individuals of that type of income during the Carter years. It has cost them instead.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are expected in the forecast period until Saturday morning, for the northern Rockies, east Texas and northern Florida and southern Georgia. Cool weather is in store for the Great Lakes. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Fair weather returns to North Carolina.

The low-pressure system that put a kink in the weather Thursday has moved well offshore. The system is continuing to move northeast, keeping a northerly flow of air over the state.

Afternoon readings under partly cloudy skies Thursday were in the 60s and 70s.

Sides this morning were variably cloudy with readings in the 40s and 50s.

Sunny skies dominate the Tar Heel weather picture today. Fair skies are on tap for tonight and Saturday. Afternoon temperatures will be in the 60s and low 70s. Lows tonight will be mostly in the 40s.

The rest of the weekend will also be under fair skies with highs in the 70s and lows in the 40s and 50s.

Along the coast we can expect fair weather with winds out of north at 10 to 15 knots.

Zip-a-dee-doo-dah Zapped By Lawsuit

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Zip-a-dee-doo-dah" has been zapped in a lawsuit that claims zero credit was given to the real authors of one of Walt Disney's best-known movie songs. Judge E. Peterson of Washington said he wrote the lyrics to the song in 1939 and James A. Payton, otherwise unidentified, wrote the words.

Peterson, in a suit filed in U.S. District Court, called the song a "statement of America's yesterdays, a musical child that Samuel Clemens would have been proud to call his own."

Peterson claimed the song "suffered and still suffers from the curse of illegitimacy" because the real authors "were denied the recognition...that was their just due for the authorship of this masterwork."

According to the suit, a "long-forgotten impresario" in Washington was responsible for hiding the real authorship and giving credit to two other men.

The song then was sold to the Disney studios and became the theme song of the movie, "Song of the South."

Peterson sued Walt Disney Productions of Burbank, Calif. He asked for $10 million in damages, an accounting of proceeds from "Song of the South" and all related ventures and a 5 percent ownership in Walt Disney Corp.

"Walt Disney had an absolute legal obligation to ascertain the true ownership of this work but never did so," the suit contended. "The true author of this work received neither material compensation nor the equally important public acclaim."

Hearing Planned On Funds

FARMVILLE — The Town of Farmville's proposed application for $2,980,000 in Community Development Block Grant funds will be the topic of a public hearing to be held during the Town Board's May 6 7:30 p. m. meeting in the Municipal courtroom here.

The town's preapplication has been approved under the Dept. of Housing and Urban Development's Small Cities Discretionary Program. The hearing is being conducted in fulfillment of the town's Citizen Participation Plan and HUD requirements to allow citizens further opportunity to comment on community development and housing needs. Copies of the preapplication are available for public review at the Town Hall.

If funding is granted for all three years of the program, the town expects to rehabilitate 189 substandard dwellings, demolish 17 dilapidated structures, acquire 17 properties for residential development, pave one-third mile of street, make storm drainage improvements, construct an elderly-oriented minipark, construct a community center, and rehabilitate 10 commercial structures.

N.C. Central's Record Rapped

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state auditor's report for 1978-79 sharply criticizes North Carolina Central University's handling of student loans, contending that the school's failure to comply with guidelines could jeopardize $4 million in federal student aid.

The audit, one of three prepared in recent months by the State Auditor's Office critical of University of North Carolina branches, cited NCCU for making awards to ineligible students, overpaying needy students and not following up on loan defaults of more than $2.8 million.

An audit released earlier this week cited North Carolina A&T University for the condition of its financial records, outstanding debts of nearly $700,000 and its handling of a $3 million student aid program.

An earlier audit at Elizabeth City State University turned up a shortage of $4,456 in the bookstore. The shortage is under investigation by Pasquotank County authorities and the SBI.

The NCCU audit said 50 percent of the school's National Direct Student Loans was in default for 1978-79. That compares to a "maximum tolerable default rate" of 10 percent set by the U.S. Office of Education.

W.C. Blackwell, NCCU's financial director, said Thursday he objected to some of the assessments made by the auditor.

"An educational institution just isn't the best manager of loan funds. We're in the business of educating, not lending money. We probably didn't do the job that needed to be done, so we accept some of the responsibility," Blackwell said.

He said the U.S. Office of Education has been asked to conduct a review of the school's aid programs.

NEW YORK (AP) — Helen Hayes says she's glad she's growing old at the right time.

The 79-year-old actress, one of 50 elderly persons gathered to hear Mayor Edward Koch proclaim May as "Senior Citizens Month" said, "I'm very gratified that I have had the good fortune to grow old at a time when old is fashionable."

Miss Hayes, who was recently named an adviser to the 1981 White House Conference on Aging, said she would keep a watchful eye on the conferees and "keep them on their toes about the welfare of older citizens."

A Democrat who wants to take part in the precinct caucuses will first have to vote in the meaningless primary in order to get a card attesting to party membership.

That guarantees confusion and a tiny turnout at the caucuses.

All in the name of reform.

CHURCH OF GOD IN CHRIST FINDS ACCUSATION AGAINST LOCAL ELDER FALSE

An investigation into the matter of an accusation against Rev. C.D. McNeill, local pastor and administrative assistant to the Bishop, L.B. Davenport, has been proven false. The presiding Bishop of the Diocese of Greater North Carolina Church of God in Christ met with a special session of the Elder's Council on Monday, April 21, 1980 and their findings were as follows:

The character of Rev. C.D. McNeill as a Christian gentleman, an upstanding citizen in the Kinston community and in the General Church of God in Christ proves all accusations false.

Such rumors are detrimental to one's reputation and name for the Bible hath said "A GOOD NAME IS RATHER TO BE CHOSEN THAN GREAT RICHES".

We, the Elder's Council conclude therefore that this entire incident be treated as completely false and Rev. C.D. McNeill be cleared of any and all accusations. Respectfully submitted,

Bishop L.B. Davenport, Presiding Bishop

FTC Voted Funds; Disrupted, But Back On Job

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)—The federal government's chief consumer cop is back on the beat today, but officials of the Federal Trade Commission say there was a "substantial disruption" of business during the one day the FTC was officially out of business.

President Carter signed an emergency bill late Thursday supplying $7.6 million to operate the FTC for the next 30 days and providing a new lease on life for the agency created 66 years ago to protect consumers from shady and illegal business practices.

FTC critics say the agency has been too aggressive in regulating business and Congress is now considering a bill, separate from the temporary money measure passed Thursday, to curb the agency.

Despite the fact that the agency could legally do no work Thursday, the various laws it was set up to enforce were still on the books and can be enforced retroactively, said an FTC spokesman.

"Just because the cop was off the beat for a day, doesn't mean it's not illegal," said the FTC's Ira Furman. "It's still illegal. The cop just took a day off."

Most of the agency's 1,750 employees reported to work at the FTC building here and at 10 regional offices around the nation.

They spent the day packing files and preparing status-of-cases reports on hundreds of various actions. But most of the packing was done slowly because, as one FTC employee said, "The slower I pack, the less I'll have to unpack."

The machine that smokes 500 cigarettes a day to test tar and nicotine levels was stopped. No mail was sent out and people calling the FTC heard a recorded message saying the agency was closed "due to lack of congressional funds."

Although there was a lot of confusion, there was a minimum of gallows humor. However, one staffer who noted that repainting of the building had stopped, said, "They're waiting for the new tenant."

The unpacking began today and even though the "closure" was only for a day, "there's been a substantial disruption of business," said Furman.

For example, he said, a team of 10 FTC lawyers investigating oil company practices were ordered to fly back to Washington from Texas. Now, they'll have to turn around and go back to Texas, at the added expense.

In the FTC building near the Capitol, hearings on FTC allegations against three companies charged with illegal treatment of consumers were canceled.

The FTC, one of the government's smallest agencies, was formed in 1914, chiefly to protect consumers in the wake of exposures of various businesses, such as meat-packing, patent medicines, and oil.

With the rise of consumer advocacy in the 1970s, the FTC has become more active. In 1973, it won a federal court case upholding its power to issue broad regulations on unfair trade practices.

But FTC critics have attacked a number of investigations, such as those of the funeral and insurance industries, television programming and dairy cooperatives and hearing aid sales.

The agency has not had a regular appropriation since 1976. Instead, money has come through a series of stop-gap bills. But even that source died up Thursday after the latest appropriation ran out and Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti said it would be illegal for the agency to continue work without appropriated money.

The emergency money bill was rushed through Congress in a single day Thursday and sent to the White House, where Carter signed it about 8 p.m.

Meanwhile, a House-Senate conference committee has approved a compromise measure that would keep the agency running for three years, but would curb its power and let Congress nullify future FTC regulations. For example, the bill would eliminate FTC authority over "unfair" advertising, leaving the agency with authority only to police "false or deceptive" ads.

Judge Refuses Dismiss 40-Count Indictment

By EILEEN PUTMAN
Associated Press Writer
WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — The judge in the Bedford Hills murder case has refused to dismiss the 40-count robbery and murder indictment against the two suspects despite the defense claim that the prosecution has failed to prove the suspects' guilt.

"That's for the jury to decide," acting State Supreme Court Justice Duncan McNab told Hyman Dechter, defendant Junius Gray's lawyer.

Dechter and J. Radley Herold, the lawyer for Gray's co-defendant, Jimmie Lee Allen, have rested their cases in the eight-week long trial.

Gray, 41, of Brooklyn, and Allen, 41, of Plainfield, N.J., are charged with robbing and murdering four Bedford Hills residents last May.

Killed were Charles Frankel, 61, former Columbia University professor and Assistant U.S. Secretary of State; Frankel's wife, Helen, 61; Christopher Sperry, a 21-year old college student and son of a stock broker; and Nellie McCormack, 85, a former Sperry family governess.

On Monday the prosecution is expected to call witnesses to rebut the defense witnesses, many of whom testified that Allen and Gray were home on the night of the murders.

The prosecution claims that the crimes took place sometime between 10:30 p.m. on May and 6 a.m. on May 10. Trial testimony has further narrowed the time frame to between two and four hours, a period the defense says is too brief for the suspects to have committed the homicides.

Items Taken From A Home

An estimated $7,325 worth of property was reported stolen from a home at 2104 Pendleton St. between 9:15 p.m. yesterday and 12:15 a.m. today.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Bobby Pettus told police he returned to his house early today to find a cassette tape deck, stereo receiver, an 8-track tape player, four speakers, a color television, 76 albums, 36 tapes, an electric typewriter, 12 educational films (valued at $1,000), and other items missing.

Thieves gained entrance to the home, the chief said, by prying open a rear door.

Enlarging the size of the release trigger will increase the effectiveness of the trap. Wirescreen or cardboard can be used for this purpose. A .22-gauge rifle loaded with dust or bird shot will generally be effective also, reports Regans, and will cause the least damage to the house.

"Frightening them would be the first alternative, but if that doesn't work you have to shoot them," said Deborah Roebuck. "The pentachlorophenol worked for me. There is a vacant house next to mine, though, that has so many holes the side looks peppered. The woodpeckers have abandoned it and starlings have begun to nest in those holes now."

Ward Robinson, another resident of Twin Oaks, reported that last year woodpecker damage necessitated the replacement of several boards of his house. "We had to have the insulation refilled and then the siding replaced," he explained. "Then a few weeks ago we woke up at 5 o'clock with another woodpecker banging in the same place. Two or three boards have been ruined."

Robinson says he hung two rubber snakes up near the hole to frighten the woodpecker. This device apparently worked, because Robinson reported the bird has not been seen since. "He went away after that. Whether he moved along to better things or whether the snakes actually scared him, I don't know. One way or the other, he's gone."

Robinson said he heard putting a figure of an owl up would also scare the woodpeckers away. "Every house on my side of the street has at least one hole in it," he said. "In several of them, the woodpecker has moved out and starlings have taken over."

The North Carolina Agricultural Extension Teletip service discusses control of woodpeckers in tape number 2716. The toll-free teletip number is 1-800-662-7301. Regans emphasized that anyone having a woodpecker problem should call the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office at 758-1196, or come by the office at 203 W. Third St. in Greenville.

Three groups of birds are commonly called woodpeckers. These include the flicker, the yellow-bellied sapsucker and seven species of woodpeckers. The birds normally nest in dead trees.

"The bird that was drilling in my siding was not a huge woodpecker, but a moderate sized one," said Roebuck. "I think it was a red-headed woodpecker."

Nothing Gone In Break-In

Nothing was reported missing in a break-in at Evans Street Automotive Repair at 1525 South Evans St., reported at 12:38 a.m. today, Police Chief Glenn Cannon said.

According to the Chief, the incident was reported by a man who saw two males running from the business.

Investigators found glass in the front door of the firm had been broken out and a drawer under the cash register open. However, city officials said nothing could be found missing.

Dr. Fitzgerald Honored At Testimonial Dinner

Dr. Charles E. Fitzgerald, for 37 years a member of the Pitt County Board of Health, was honored with a testimonial dinner last night at Three Steers Restaurant by the County Board of Health.

The physician, who has practiced family medicine in Farmville for 43 years, heard his friends and colleagues praise his devotion to family and public health in this county. Ed Warren, chairman of both the Board of County Commissioners and the County Board of Health, presented a resolution of appreciation from the County Commissioners. Dr. O. R. Pierce, vice-chairman of the Board of Health, presented a resolution of honor from the Board of Health. Dr. Robert F. Ehinger, Health Department Medical Director, presented a handmade plaque from the staff of the Health Department.

Milly Ryon and her husband, Rip, of Raleigh.

Dr. Fitzgerald began service on the Board of Health some time around 1942. Health Board minutes of that era are not clear. "I'll never tell," he commented when asked.

His continuous service lasted until Dec. 31, 1979, when a change in N. C. Public Health Law went into effect, limiting service by an individual on a county board of health to three consecutive three-year terms. He has been chairman for two years and vice chairman 16 years.

A Danville, Va. native, Dr. Fitzgerald's family lived in Wilson during most of his childhood. He was educated at Wake Forest and Duke Universities and earned his M. D. degree at Louisiana State University, with internship at Charity Hospital in New Orleans.

He started practice in Walstonburg in 1937, moving his practice to Farmville two years later. In 1952, he built a clinic on Main Street which had five maternity beds and a delivery room. He estimates having delivered more than 3,000 babies.

He tried to retire in May, 1976, but his patients would not let him. So he continued limited practice, first in a bedroom of his home, and now in an office built in the yard.

A member of the courtesy staffs of both Wilson and Pitt County Memorial Hospitals, he is a member and past president of the Pitt County Medical Society and a former member of the N. C. Medical Society.

He is a deacon of the Farmville Presbyterian Church and an organizer and trustee of the Chapel By the Sea at Emerald Isle.

Commando Leader Is Clearly Not A Desk Soldier

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Col. Charles Beckwith clearly is not cut out to be a Pentagon Warrior — a desk soldier. Given to plain and pungent expressions, his responses were frequently laced with emotion Thursday when he answered questions about the luckless effort of his 90-man commando unit to rescue 53 American hostages from Iran a week ago. Strong-jawed and lean,

Beckwith was dressed like a weekend golfer in open-throat blue sportshirt, zippered blue windbreaker and gray slacks as he stood before a small group of reporters at the Pentagon. But he didn't need trappings of rank nor the ribbons from his three years of Vietnam War service to show he is accustomed to command and to making decisions — and that he identifies with the field soldier.

That identification — and the emotion — was nowhere more evident than when he described his feelings about the failed mission in general and the eight dead servicemen left behind in particular.

John Wayne didn't cry in the movies, but real soldiers do and Beckwith cried with frustration and grief in the Iranian desert last week. He wasn't ashamed to acknowledge it Tuesday. "My God, I'm going to fail," Beckwith recalled thinking as the reality soaked in that the mission would have to be aborted.

Moments later the emotion deepened as the rotor of one of the helicopters trying to refuel sliced into a C-130 transport plane and both aircraft burst into flames, creating a funeral pyre for the eight commandos and airmen. "I've got the finest soldiers in the world," Beckwith said. "I sat there and cried. It's a damned shame, but you can't help that."

He then told how the mission had been going smoothly until he learned, at the desert refueling stop, that a third helicopter had been disabled by mechanical trouble and that he could count on only five choppers — one below the minimum deemed safe. The commander on the scene, an Air Force colonel, put the key question to Beckwith: Go or no go? "I said, 'Sir, my recommendation is that we abort,'" Beckwith recalled. There followed "a little discussion and it was a very good dialogue," Beckwith said.

"He (the site commander) said, 'Would you consider taking five (helicopters) and going ahead? And think about it before you answer me.'" "He said, 'Really, you're the guy who's got to shoulder this, Charlie.' I said, 'I know that.'" After taking "a couple of seconds to think it over," Beckwith said, he told the Air Force colonel: "There's just no way." Was there any second-guessing on his recommendation, either there in the desert or back in the safety of the Pentagon and the White House? "I didn't hear any," said Beckwith. A major reason Beckwith was brought out of the shadows was to refute rumors that he wanted to proceed with the mission, but was overruled. His emotions flared when a reporter pressed him as to whether he really didn't feel he could have gone ahead with the mission, regardless of what the "book" said. Leaning close to the reporter, the words came out: "With all due respect, sir, you don't know where you're coming from. I am not about to be a party to half-assed loading of a bunch of aircraft and going up and murdering a bunch of the finest soldiers in the world. I'm not that kind of man."

"I've been in the Army 27 years. I don't have to do that. I get paid to shoulder responsibility."

He said that "under those circumstances it was a no-win situation." Beckwith reacted sharply, almost angrily, at another point — when he was asked about rumors circulating in Congress and elsewhere that he was planning to retire or resign in protest. "That's pure bullshit, sir," Beckwith retorted.

How does he feel, now that the mission for which he and the commandos trained so long and so hard has failed? "We're disappointed," Beckwith said. "I speak for my troops, too."

Toastmasters Host Combined Contest

Greenville Toastmaster Club 2595 was host for the annual combined Area/Division Serious Speech Contest here Saturday.

Contest winners from local clubs all over Eastern N. C. gathered at the Holiday Inn here to compete.

Luis Acevez of Greenville placed second. He will compete at the state level May 31 in Charlotte. A citizen of the United States by choice after having become familiar with the cultures of several other countries, he spoke of our American heritage in a speech titled, "Beauty, Bribes and Politics." He is Professor of Romance Languages at East Carolina University.

Hosts for the banquet were Joe Sherwood, Greenville Toastmasters President, and Tom Houston, Sergeant at Arms. The invocation was given by Elwood Maness of the New Bern Club. Toastmaster of the Evening was Steve Moler of the Washington Club. As Northeastern Division Lieutenant Governor, Charlotte Flanagan of the Greenville Club conducted the contest and made awards presentations.

Visiting dignitaries included Mickey Marshall, Educational Lieutenant Governor of District 37 (the state of North Carolina); Dave Roberts, Administrative Lt. Governor of District 37; Don VonCannon, Central Division Lt. Governor; Bill Mintz, Area 2, Governor of the Northeastern Division; and Steve Moler, member of the District Advisory Board.

For further information about the club, call Pat or Charlotte Flanagan, 756-7192.

Seeking Six For A Trip

The Rotary Club of Greenville, is seeking candidates for an all-expense-paid trip to the Philippine Islands for five weeks, beginning in mid-January 1981.

A team of six — five non-Rotarian business and professional men between the ages of 25 and 35 and one Rotarian team captain of any age — from Eastern North Carolina will represent Rotary District 773 in the group-study cultural exchange program.

The purpose of the program is to exchange young executives from different parts of the world in order to promote international understanding. The groups study the industry, small business, educational systems, religion, and recreational habits of the countries they visit.

Those interested in applying for the trip should contact the District Chairman of Group Study Exchange, Jack Edwards, 208 Windsor Rd., Greenville, or call him at 758-2616 or 756-5024.

New Directions Appearing Here

The New Directions, a group of young people from Alamance County, will be in concert at St. James United Methodist Church on May 3 at 8 p.m. They will also be in charge of the worship service at Holy Trinity United Methodist Church on May 4 beginning at 10:30 a.m.

The New Directions have performed all over the western hemisphere. The group began as a gathering of friends singing hymns and psalms together and developed into a group that has performed in shopping centers, churches, prisons, schools and stadiums. They are an interdenominational group.

The public is invited to attend the concert and the worship service.

Bartending Course Hit

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Christian Action League of North Carolina criticized Wake Forest University and its college union Thursday for a course in bartending co-sponsored by the union.

The league, at its annual meeting in Asheboro, said it understood that the college union, in cooperation with Forsyth Technical Institute, offered the course on the Wake Forest campus during the spring semester.

As a Baptist campus, the league said, Wake Forest should be "promoting an alcohol-free lifestyle."

Russell Brantley, spokesman for the university, said the course did not need administration approval because it was offered through the union's experimental college. The union's program has been going on for more than 10 years, he said, and offers courses outside the usual academic disciplines.

In its resolution, the league expressed "its disappointment in the trustees and administration of Wake Forest University for allowing a course on bartending to be conducted on that campus."

The league also said it was disappointed that the trustees had not taken any disciplinary action "against those who planned, conducted and sponsored" the course.

The resolution was signed by the Rev. Tom Freeman of Dunn, president of the league and a former president of the Baptist State Convention.

Brantley said that as far as he knew, no trustees had expressed any criticisms of the course and that the league's resolution was the first reaction he had heard to the course.

Get Mocap. Before nematodes get your soybeans.

Nematode damage can cost you 15 to 20 bushels of soybeans per acre. But thanks to Mocap® nematicide-insecticide, it's a loss you can easily avoid.

Mocap controls root-knot, sting and lesion nematodes that feed on the root system of soybean plants. By destroying these nematodes, Mocap helps insure the development of healthy roots that can channel important nutrients and soil moisture to your plants. And that can help you get the kind of yields you should be getting.

Mocap comes in two easy-to-apply formulations—Mocap 10G (granular) and Mocap 6 EC (liquid). And it's economical to use. So see us for the Mocap you need this season. And see the difference it makes in your soybeans.

Mocap® is a registered trademark of Mobil Chemical Company, Richmond, Virginia 23261. Use only as directed on the label and observe all use precautions fully. Mocap 6 EC is a restricted use pesticide.

Suggests A Monastic Dedication Is Helpful

By GALE TOLLIN
Associated Press Writer
NORTHFIELD, Minn. (AP) — American families could strengthen themselves by adopting monks' discipline and dedication to each other, says a sociologist-anthropologist who has lived in 27 monasteries in Europe, Asia and the United States.

Russell Langworthy says the brothers and sisters in monasteries "give a lot and get a lot. They make a commitment and stick with it."

The rational, materialistic, scientific impulse can be pushed just so far before people react "and go into the desert to communicate," Langworthy says. As people shun materialism and complexity, he says, monasteries may lead the world back to basics — to a simpler, purer and more structured life.

For the past five years, the Carleton College professor has devoted sabbatical periods and vacation time to researching monasteries and nunneries. He sees himself as an anthropologist interested in small, intentional communities and as a scholar prototypical hippie, Langworthy says. "The dropouts of the '60s who went to California to lead purer, simpler lives were much like the founders of monastic orders who rejected society and its values."

But the balding, bespectacled professor detects one major difference: commune dwellers were "against" much of what existed in the establishment society but were not really "for" anything. By contrast, monks have not just fled the world but have gone into monasteries to find deeper religious purpose, to meditate on the meaning of life.

Faith holds monasteries together and, Langworthy says, it is a stronger glue than the "groupie" feeling in communes.

Missionaries Fleeing Liberia

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Most of the 25 American Methodist missionaries in Liberia and their families were fleeing abroad today because the country's Methodist bishop, ex-Vice President Bennie Warner, announced he had set up a government-in-exile in the neighboring Ivory Coast.

Warner, who was in the United States when Master Sgt. Samuel K. Doe and a group of enlisted men overthrew and killed President William Tolbert, claimed in a broadcast he had all the military force he need to oust the new government.

Doe's officials ridiculed Warner's claims, but Methodist leaders feared a backlash and ordered their missionaries out. The U.S. Embassy said it did not feel the 6,000 Americans in Liberia were in danger and did not plan an evacuation. The Lutheran, Baptist and Roman Catholic missionaries said they had no plans to leave.

Deplores Effort To Inject Christ

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Lutheran theologian has deplored attempts at "Christianizing politics," saying "it is ultimately blasphemy to use 'Christ' as an adjective to describe" partisan agendas.

"There's no such thing as Christian politics," says the Rev. William Lazareth of the church and society section of the Lutheran Church in America. He is to become head of the World Council of Churches doctrinal department later this year.

He particularly criticized burgeoning "Christian lobbies" in Washington, saying the "Protestant right" is guilty of identifying a particular political platform with the will of God.

"Our Lord refuses to identify the kingdom of God with left or right, with conservative or liberal, with male or female," he says. "He refuses to identify the righteousness of the kingdom of God with any partisan form of human justice."

Revival Begins Monday Night

Revival services will be held at Mayo Chapel M.B. Church May 5-9 each night at 7:30 with the Rev. T. R. Vines of Tarboro, speaker.

A different choir and ushers will be in charge of service each night — Monday, Milder Chapel Baptist Church choir and ushers of Greenville with usher board in charge of prayer service; Wednesday, Morning Star Baptist Church choir and ushers with the youths in charge of prayer service; Thursday, Conetoe Chapel choir and ushers with the senior choir in charge of prayer service; Friday, Chapel Hill choir and ushers with the mother in charge of prayer service.

Publishing New Bible In Chinese

NEW YORK (AP) — The complete Bible in "Today's Chinese Version" is to be published in August by the United Bible Societies, the culmination of eight years work by an international team of translators.

Based on the easy-to-understand "Today's English Version" produced by the American Bible Society, the new Bible will be the first major Chinese translation since the traditional Union Version of 1919.

"With the present apparent opening up of China the publication of this Bible is particularly significant," says Euan Campbell, production consultant of the UBS, the 64-member international fellowship of Bible societies. "The timing is inspired."

He says it will make the Bible available in common, easily understood Chinese not only to the 40 million Chinese living outside China but also to the billion living on the mainland.

DRAMA PLANNED

The drama production "Unfeigned Faith" by Nicky Chavers will be presented at the Greenville Christian Academy May 2 at 8 p.m.

The production will be directed by Dr. Nicky Chavers, and cast members are drawn from Greenville Christian Academy students. The production is a biblical drama of Paul, the apostle, and Timothy, his son. The Rev. J.M. Bragg, president, invites the public to attend.

MEETING PLANNED

The City Usher's Union will meet Monday at 7:30 p.m. at Selvia Chapel Free Will Baptist Church.

MOTHERS' SERVICE

AYDEN — A pre-mothers' day service will be held at Zion Chapel F.W.B. Church on the corner of Sixth and Venter streets May 4 at 11 a.m. The junior pastor, Elder Tyrone Furnage will conduct the service and the young adult choir and junior ushers will be in charge. The public is invited to attend this special tribute to mothers, according to Bishop Stephen Jones, pastor.

ANNIVERSARY

AYDEN — The Elm Grove F.W.B. Church will have its church anniversary beginning on May 5 at 7:30 p.m. Different preachers and congregations will be in charge each night. The public is invited to attend all services.

Picture Pretty

Pretty as a picture, isn't she? She looks "downright" angelic. Yet, five minutes from now, she may be a little bundle of fury!

Children change faster than the wind. They haven't learned to hide their feelings. But while grown-ups may present a better camouflage to the world, there are few of us without inner conflicts. And these conflicts can be serious.

It would be a lonely world if we had to keep all our problems to ourselves.

We don't. God never intended that we should have to solve all our difficulties single-handed. Remember, He established His church on earth for US. In that Church we will find understanding fellowship, and the faith to work out our own destinies.

Take your problems to Church. Pray that you will find a solution to them. Talk them over with your minister. And what seems a maze today may become a straight road tomorrow.

'Mostly Political Problems' Delaying Reactor

By LES SEAGO
Associated Press Writer
MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) —
A top-ranking engineer on the

Clinch River Breeder Reactor project says political problems are causing more delay than technical difficulties.

"We have completed about 90 percent of our research and development and 70 percent of the engineering," said William R. Rolf of Knoxville, general manager of Project Management Corp.

and assistant director of the breeder reactor project.
But he said President Carter's administration will not give the go-ahead to start construction.

Rolf, the chief representative of the electric utility on the East Tennessee project, took reporters on a tour of a Memphis warehouse where $16 million worth of completed Clinch River components are stored.

The reporters saw the CBI-Nuclear Corp. plant where other components, including a $14 million reactor vessel closure head, are being built.

The Clinch River plant, planned for a site near Oak Ridge, Tenn., is to demonstrate a breeder reactor's ability to produce more fuel than it uses while generating commercial quantities of electric power.

The breeder reactor is designed to use a liquid metal — sodium — as a coolant and heat transfer agent.
Conventional reactors use special light water.

Engineers say the breeder reactor, in addition to producing fuel, is more efficient. Rolf said the Clinch River project, begun 10 years ago, is to incorporate a new reactor core design that scientists in England and Germany would like to copy.

President Carter has refused to authorize continuation of the Clinch River plant, although Congress has approved more than $300 million for the plant's design and construction of components.

Rolf said the government, Tennessee Valley Authority and utility industry consortium involved in the project cannot build even a warehouse on the plant site without approval of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

"We were two weeks from public hearings in 1977 when the administration put it in suspension," Rolf said.

The delay, he said, has cost almost $1 billion because of inflation.

He said fear of another accident like Three Mile Island in Pennsylvania last year is feeding the administration's decision.

"It has to do with the fact that the first use of nuclear power, unfortunately, was for warfare... The reality is that there is no relationship between the weapon and what we are doing."

Some opponents of the breeder reactor say that weapons-grade plutonium could be produced by the plant.

"If you wanted to develop a weapon, you wouldn't do it with a power plant," Rolf said. "There are better, faster, cheaper ways to do that."

Rolf said the nuclear power industry has learned from Three Mile Island.

"We learn from every experience... We probably won't see another accident like Three Mile Island," he said.

Rolf said the Clinch River plant could begin producing electricity for TVA in 1988 if approval were granted immediately.

"All the administration has to do is tell NRC to license the plant," he said.

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT DEFACED — A slogan is seen spray painted on the wall of the Justice Department near the office of Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti Thursday. The message refers to five persons killed in a shootout with Ku Klux Klansmen in Greensboro, N.C. The portrait is that of Edward Levy, attorney general under President Ford. (AP Laserphoto)

Another Delay

WASHINGTON (AP) —
An administrative hearing was postponed indefinitely Thursday on a desegregation dispute between the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the University of North Carolina.

The hearing before Administrative Law Judge John H. Mathias had been scheduled to start May 19.

UNC attorney Joseph J.
Levin Jr. said the postponement was ordered after Mathias met with lawyers in the case and concluded neither side was ready to begin.

Mathias recently assumed responsibility for hearing the case when Judge Lewis F. Parker withdrew from the case. Parker's daughter had just been denied admission to UNC-Chapel Hill and had been placed on a waiting list.

Levin said it was impossible to predict when the hearings would begin.
"I think we're talking about a matter of months," he said.

Crimeless Kansas Town Has No Explanation For Record

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer
ARLINGTON, Kan. (AP) —

Last year, New York had 1,733 murders. That would be enough to wipe out the entire population of Arlington three times over.
But Arlington hasn't had a murder in its entire history.

Folks who've lived in this town of 503 all their lives say there has never been a recorded homicide.

"And even if it wasn't on the record books, somebody would remember it," says Ralph Al-mquist. "That's the kind of thing nobody would ever forget."

Almquist is Arlington's police chief. Every morning he holds court at the Kozy Kitchen, one of two clean little eateries at the intersection where the flashing light slows down drivers barreling through town on Kansas Highway 61.

Broad-shouldered and burly, Almquist is the symbol of law and order that is the backbone

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Chester Cyrus tried the old tablecloth trick, but he upset more than the tableware. In fact, he was charged with assault and battery.

Cyrus, 28, of Mukwonago, Wis., attempted to pull a tablecloth from a table without disturbing the glasses and candleholders at a downtown hotel where he and other car salesmen and guests were attending a banquet.

Several glasses spilled onto the table and a brawl started.

A police officer called to the scene said that when he arrived bottles and chairs were flying and men in threepiece suits and women in long dresses were involved in the melee.

The city attorney's office, which claimed Cyrus struck five persons in the fight, issued the charges.

Reduce Rate On Mortgages

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) —
First Federal Savings and Loan Association on Thursday lowered its interest rate on home mortgages by one percentage point.

The reduction brings the S&L's rate on a 25-year, 5 percent down-payment mortgage to 17½ percent, said Bob Waugh, president of the association.

The change came on the heels of a similar move by North Carolina Federal Savings and Loan Association two weeks ago.

Citing the cheaper cost of money, officials of other savings and loans said their associations are also considering lowering their mortgage rates.

of this south central community. Almquist doesn't wear a uniform or pack a gun, but everybody knows him. That's the way he wants it.

"I like to keep visible. It might cut down on temptation," says the 44-year-old former Reno County sheriff's deputy.

"We don't have any murders here because I don't allow crime. This is a fine little farm town. It's not like New York City, where you've got to have five padlocks and a bazooka to protect yourself."

Many Arlingtonites do not lock their houses or their cars at night. Their children roam free at play. The two cafe owners casually stroll away from their cash registers to sit and talk with customers.

Banker Stan Trembley sometimes thinks about a robbery, but it is a peripheral worry, not an everyday concern.

"The bank was robbed once — on April 30, 1935. We lost $689.04," says the young banker. "It was never recovered."

Trembley locks the door on his new house but says, "I wouldn't if I didn't have this job. Every place has its problems. It just seems like we've got fewer of them here."

Almquist agrees. "We don't have big problems because the whole town doesn't want any."

In Arlington last year, crime consisted of one burglary, "one stolen car I still haven't gotten figured out, and five vandal-isms, mostly done by kids," says Almquist.

"There's nothing for them to do but drag the main street," he says. "If a youngster gets into trouble the first thing I do is talk to the parents and the business people involved. If it can be handled to the victim's satisfaction without taking a juvenile to court and giving him a police record for life, we do it."

Willa Spence, the only city councilwoman and wife of postmaster Keith Spencer, adds:
"We have ornery kids here, but no bad kids. I would say 'hold my purse' to any kid in town."

But there are drugs in the high school, and there's gossip of a local alcohol bootlegger.
But so far there are no liquor stores or taverns. If you want to drink, you drive 17 miles north to Hutchinson.

That's also where most people go to earn a living, because in Arlington there's only one grocery store, an insurance agency, the bank and two restaurants, a gas station, the farm cooperative and grain elevator, and two general stores.

But the town is building a new sewage treatment plant and a six-unit low income housing development for its elderly.

There's a nine-hole golf course, a small airport and a volunteer fire department.
Thirty citizens are qualified emergency medical technicians, and when someone calls for the ambulance or fire truck, the phone rings in 15 houses at once.

It's a friendly town. Mayor Eddie Ewy once voluntarily painted all 24 buildings on Main Street as a goodwill gesture.

Almquist plays Santa Claus, and each Saturday before Christmas every child gets a wrapped present from the Fire Department's candy fund.

There's civic pride in the successful homegrown products.
"We've turned out a physicist, doctors, an expert who goes all over the world putting out oil well fires, a Chinese scholar at a university back East, the admissions officer at Harvard, and a big shot in the communications industry in New York City," says Mrs. Spence. "They always seem glad to come home again."

But more and more, say some, the young people don't want to live there.

"This is the first time I can remember when we've had more than one house for sale at a time," says Mrs. Spence.
"Now there are six on the market."

But Almquist says "if somebody doesn't like it here and wants to move away to the big city, say, to New York, then they'll find out pretty quick
hind."

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mixed in quiet trading today as the market absorbed the news of a sharp rise in the unemployment rate.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off more than 2 points in early trading, was up 1.28 at 810.07 by noon.

But losers held a slight lead over gainers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Labor Department reported today that the unemployment rate climbed last month from 6.2 to 7 percent of the work force.

The rate has now climbed a full percentage point since February, reaching its highest level in almost three years.

The news was the latest in a rapidly accumulating series of signals that the economy is moving into a recession.

Teledyne jumped 1 1/2 to 114 after a delayed opening. The company said it was offering to exchange $160 worth of debentures apiece for up to 1 million shares of its stock.

Liggett Group climbed 1 1/2 to 46 1/2. The company, which is fighting a $50-a share acquisition bid by a British concern, said Thursday it was discussing a possible friendly takeover with another party which it declined to name.

The NYSE's composite index edged up .01 to 59.95. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .74 to 253.69.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 12.77 million shares at noon, down from 14.37 million at the same point Thursday.

Conviction In Dade Case

MIAMI — A Superior Court jury here Wednesday convicted a Greenville native of his alleged role in an attempt to use $9,000 in Dade County school system funds to purchase plumbing fixtures for personal use.

The six-member jury returned a guilty verdict after some two and a half hours of deliberations in the trial of Dr. Johnny Jones, superintendent of the Dade County school system.

Jones, who went on trial last week on a charge of second degree grand theft, was accused along with MacArthur High School principal Solomon Barnes of devising a scheme to use school system money to purchase fixtures for a non-existent plumbing class at Barnes' school.

Sentencing on the grand theft conviction is expected to take place toward the end of June. The maximum sentence on the second degree grand theft charge is five years.

Jones still faces charges of accepting $70,000 in improper payments from a Baltimore, Md. salesman in connection with a reading program which was purchased by the Dade County school system for use with disadvantaged children.

The 46-year-old Jones, a graduate of Eppe High School in Greenville and Bethune-Cookman College, was indicted with Barnes by a Dade County grand jury in February in what has been referred to by "The Miami Herald" as the "Gold Plumbing Caper."

The school system superintendent joined the Dade County program in 1967 as an assistant principal, was named school principal in 1968, and chief of the system's Northwest District in 1971. Jones was named deputy superintendent of the school system two years later and was elevated to the chief post in 1977.

The Dade County system is the fifth largest school system in the nation, with an annual budget of more than $500 million.

Police List Unique Speeder Excuses

ATLANTA (AP) — One man said he had just received a potent shot at a hospital and doctors urged him to "get home very fast."

Another said he was speeding to test a car he was about to buy.

But Georgia law enforcement officials say those are only a few of the outlandish excuses given by speeding motorists.

Those two entries were among many submitted by law officers to "The Most Creative Excuse for Speeding" contest sponsored by the Georgia Fraternal Order of Police.

"We're not poking fun at speeders," said FOP President Bill Peacock, a sergeant with the DeKalb County Police Department. "We're just hoping folks can become more aware of the nature of the problem."

Peacock said the excuse judged the best was submitted by Lumber City police department patrolman Gary E. Roberson.

As Roberson tells it: "I was on a radio dispatch shift when one of the squad cars called in an ambulance speeding through town with a car following right on the bumper...The officer turned on the blue lights and attempted to stop the auto without success.

"The car continued to chase the ambulance...all the way up to the entrance of the hospital emergency room, where the driver — a middle-aged, white male — darted out of his car.

"The officer collared him and asked why he was chasing the ambulance at such a high rate of speed, and the driver replied, 'Are you kidding? That's my only uncle in that meat wagon. Wouldn't you follow your kin to the hospital?'"

Roberson said a crowd then developed and the embarrassed officer was "offering apologies to the irate driver when the ambulance doors swung open and attendants rolled out a stretcher bearing a 70-year-old black woman."

The driver was arrested for following an emergency vehicle and speeding, Roberson said.

Possibly Dumping Wastes 3 Years

SOUTHPORT, N.C. (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co. may have been dumping radioactive waste from a nuclear plant into the Brunswick County landfill for three years, it was reported today.

The company said earlier this week that a routine Nuclear Regulatory Commission inspection had turned up some contaminated waste in the landfill.

Thursday, the plant's director of nuclear safety, Aaron Padgett, said CP&L won't know for certain how long the dumping has been going on until it digs up the trash and it is inspected.

However, Earlie Gore, a worker at the landfill for five years, said the oldest of the radioactive "hot spots" in the landfill probably dates back 2 1/2 to three years, according to a report in Friday's Charlotte Observer. He told the paper the spot was last used for dumping that long ago.

Meanwhile, digging was expected to begin this morning at the landfill, seven miles west of CP&L's Brunswick Nuclear Plant and 30 miles from Wilmington.

Federal and state officials will supervise the uncovering of the 11 contaminated areas found since Monday at the county-operated dump.

State officials have termed the dumpings highly irregular, and the NRC has said it is investigating whether to bring charges against the company.

The wastes aren't believed to pose any health hazards to the community.

Radioactive waste from the Brunswick plant is routinely shipped for disposal in Barnwell, S.C., company officials have said. They say they do not know how the contaminated material got into the landfill.

Bicycle Week Is Proclaimed

Mayor Don McGlohn has proclaimed May 10-17 as Bicycle Safety Week in Greenville.

In his proclamation, McGlohn pointed out that "citizens of...Greenville have demonstrated a growing interest in the use of bicycles as a means of recreation and transportation."

He mentioned that "accidents involving bicycles which cause serious injury and death are a growing problem in the Greenville area," adding that "an involved and informed citizenry is necessary for the successful implementation of a bicycle safety program."

The mayor urged local residents to take part in the activities scheduled during the week.

Found Guilty Of Bilking A Bank

DENVER (AP) — A district judge here has found a New York businesswoman guilty of bilking a Denver bank of nearly $1.3 million through a scheme involving the transfers of huge sums of money between banks in New York City and Denver.

Denver District Judge Joseph Quinn announced his verdict Wednesday after a week-long trial without a jury.

Sandra M. Brown was convicted of swindling Denver's Cherry Creek National Bank in a complicated transfer of funds through checks and deposits between that bank and Bank of Hapoalim of New York.

The judge set a hearing on defense motions for May 28 and continued $50,000 bond for Ms. Brown.

Horse Film Festival Set

A horse film festival sponsored by the Greenville Saddle Club and the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service will be presented May 5 at the Pitt County Farm Bureau Meeting Hall, 402 Greenville Blvd. beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Films to be shown include "The Horse America Made," which traces the history of the quarter horse breed from beginning to present; "Show Time for Saddlebreds," an analysis in slow motion of the three-gaited, five-gaited, and five harness classes; "The Proud Breed," narrated by Wayne Newton and covering the many uses of the Arabian horse today with action shots and scenery; "Speed A La Cart," which shows the standardbred "aristocrats of the show ring," the hackney.

For further information on this horse film festival, call Mike Regans, agricultural extension agent, at 758-1196. All interested parties are invited to attend.

Greene Central Cops ECC Track Title

By RICK SCOPPE Reflector Sports Writer PINETOPS — It was not an overpowering performance but it got the job done. Favored to win Thursday's Eastern Carolina Conference meet, Greene Central was forced to dig deeply into its travel bag of athletes before pulling out a winner as the Rams outpointed second-place D.H. Conley, 116-96.

"We had not our best or our poorest performances today, but were somewhere in between," Greene Central coach Stewart Smith said. "We second and third-ed them to death today."

The Rams won only two events — the long jump and the 400-meter dash — but their superior depth produced four seconds and seven thirds and also allowed them to capture two places in seven events while being shutout in only one — the 200 meter dash.

"They didn't dominate," said D.H. Conley coach Chuck Dunn, whose Vikings put on a surprisingly strong performance which enabled them to finish second for the second straight season. "Their depth is what won it for them. They were just able to place guys in most of the events."

In winning, Greene Central captured its first ECC track crown since 1976 and ended Southern Nash's string of three straight titles. The Firebirds wound up third with 88 points, followed by North Lenoir and host Southwest Edgecombe, both of which had 68 points. Charles B. Aycock was sixth with 66 points while Farmville Central finished seventh with 12 points. North Pitt ended with eight points while Ayden-Grifton had four.

In third place after the field events, Greene Central quickly rallied after only four running events. The Rams took the lead for good when Dwayne Sanders finished second in the 1,600-meter run, behind D.H. Conley's Stoney Speller, with a time of 4:44.4. It was the Rams' first lead of the day and Smith, who was voted the ECC Coach-of-the-Year at the end of the meet, was anything but comfortable. "I didn't feel we had it until we finished second and third in the two-mile," Smith said. "Up to then I wasn't really sure."

Going into the 3,200-meter run, Greene Central led, 98-88, over D.H. Conley, with

Record Leap

Triple jumper Norman Mitchell of Southern Nash set a new Eastern Carolina Conference record with this leap. Mitchell, the only three-event winner in Thursday's ECC track meet, won by Greene Central, jumped 48-11 3/4 to shatter the old record held by Greene Central's Melvin Bynum by over three feet. (Reflector photo)

Southern Nash closing in with 72 points. But when James Holmes finished second (10:35.65) and teammate Doug Harrell came in third (10:52.45), the Rams were 14 points richer and had all but wrapped up the title.

As expected, the Rams were led in scoring by Melvin Bynum with 23 points. What was not expected was Bynum's sixth-place finish in the triple jump. Before the meet began, the triple jump looked to be one of the most attractive events of the day, with Bynum, eighth in the state a year ago, facing Southern Nash's Norman Mitchell, who finished among the top three in the state last season.

On his first jump Mitchell soared to a conference record of 48'11 3/4". Bynum, meanwhile, scratched on his first two attempts and barely made the final six. When he scratched all three times in the finals — including one leap that was measured at over 50' — Mitchell had won.

"No, I don't think he was psyched out after Mitchell's jump," Smith said. "If he was it didn't stop him from attacking the board. "It was a shock to me that he scratched so much. He had told me he felt good after his first preliminary jump. But you've got to give Mitchell credit, he's a heck of a triple jumper."

"I think watching Melvin have so much trouble made the team actually work harder," Smith continued. "They knew they needed to come up with some points and they did. We got some points where I wasn't expecting to."

All was not lost for Bynum. Earlier, he had won the long jump with a leap of 22'6 1/2", one inch off the conference record. He also finished third in both the 100-meter dash, with a time of 11.19, and the 165-meter low hurdles, with a clocking of 20.92.

The Rams' only other first place finisher was Anthony Gonzales, who won the 400-meters with a time of 54.54 when Southwest Edgecombe's Tim Barlow, who had finished first, was disqualified after running out of his lane.

C. B. Aycock's Barry Uzzell led the individual scoring with 34 points, followed by Mitchell's 32 and D.H. Conley's Curtis Joyner, who had 27.

Uzzell won the high jump with a leap of 6'8", a conference record, and took seconds in the triple and long jump and 165-meter low hurdles. Along with winning the triple jump, Mitchell, the meet's only three-event winner, was first in the high and low hurdles and was fifth in the 100-meter dash. Joyner was first in the 100 (11.09), second in the high jump (6'0") and 200-meter (22.81), and sixth in the long jump (19'9 1/2").

Conley's Speller took firsts in both the 1,600 (4:37.8) and the 800 (2:06.02), while the Vikings' Kevin Ivey set a school record in winning the discus with a throw of 132'6 1/2".

New Cage Aide Named By ECU

East Carolina University today announced the hiring of Sherrie Pickard as assistant basketball coach, replacing Marcia Richards.

Richards, aide for the past two years to head coach Cathy Andruzzi, has announced that she will return to graduate school to complete work on her master's degree.

Pickard, a native of Graham, graduated from Graham High School, and attended Elon College, playing basketball there under Kay Yow. When Yow switched from Elon to N.C. State, Pickard followed, completing her playing career and earning her degree from the Raleigh school.

She served as a tri-captain for the 1977 nationally-ranked Lady Wolfpack team. While at Elon, she was named to the All-State team twice, and was on the Southern Regional All-Star team that played the USSR national team in 1974.

At State, Pickard lettered in basketball, volleyball and softball, and is the last three-letter star for the Wolfpack. In addition, she was picked to the ASA All-American first team in softball in 1974, and to the second team in 1978.

For the past two years, she has been coach at Millbrook High School in Raleigh, and also served as assistant softball coach at State. Pickard is 24 and is single.

Smith, Joyner Lead As Rose Wins Track Title

WILSON — Rose High School's Rampants, led by strong showings by Kenny Smith and Calvin Joyner, romped to an easy victory in the Division I conference track and field championship yesterday.

The Rampants finished the afternoon with 183 points, well ahead of Fike, which finished with 96 5/6. Bertie took third place with 93 1/2 points, followed by Northeastern with 57 1/2, Beddingfield with 36 1/2, Northern Nash with 32, Rocky Mount with 27 and Hunt with 1.

Joyner took two firsts, winning both of the hurdle events. He also ran a leg on the winning 800-meter relay team. Smith captured the 1600 and 800-meter runs.

Other winners for Rose included Rocky Butler in the discus, Ted King in the pole vault and Erskine Evans in the 100-meter dash.

Rose's seven individual victories, coupled with their win in the 800 relay, was by far the best of the day. Fike took three individual events and one relay, while Bertie and Northeastern each won two individual. Bertie added a relay victory.

Competition in track continues next Friday at Wilson when the sectional track meet will be held.

Rose Wins Final Match

Rose High School's golfers closed out the regular season yesterday with a lop-sided victory over Wilson Beddingfield.

The Rampants finished the day with a team round of 298, while Beddingfield was far back with 363.

Jack Mann led the Rampants with 72, while Steve Woodward had 74, Greg House and Tom Brewer each had 76. Non-counting scores for Rose were William Snead, 79, and Pat Dye with 83.

Rocky Brooks led Beddingfield with an 82, while Tim Bedard had 89, Gary Jones had 92, and Bob Brooks had 100.

The Rampants will play host to the Division I championship tournament next Thursday at Brook Valley.

Bear Grass Takes Win

BEAR GRASS — Bear Grass High School gained a 5-1 Beaufort-Hyde-Martin baseball victory over Belhaven yesterday in a make-up game.

Belhaven scored first, getting a run in the top of the second. Spencer walked and stole second. Gibbs also walked and a double by Carrawan scored Spencer.

The Bears came back with two in the second to move (Continued on page 17)

Pinch Runner Pays Off For Pittsburgh

by the Associated Press
 Matt "The Scatt" Alexander will do in a pinch—especially if the occasion demands a pinch-runner.
 Like Thursday.
 Willie Stargell had singled leading off the 10th inning for Pittsburgh and the Pirates' speed specialist was brought in to run for the lumbering first baseman.
 Jitterbugging off first, Alexander distracted everyone, including Bill Robinson at the plate, who admitted: "I'm not used to having a guy in front of me dancing around like that."
 But it made a difference. Relief pitcher Woodie Fryman, afraid of throwing a changeup in that situation, came in with a fastball. Robinson connected for a double and Alexander came spinning home with the winning run in a 2-1 Pirate victory.

 It was a duplicate of the situation Tuesday night when Alexander scored the winning run from first in the 10th on a Bill Madlock double.
 Alexander has made an art form of his specialty.
 "You don't just go in cold," explained Alexander, who keeps a stationary exercise bicycle in the Pirates' clubhouse to warm up. "I come in here in the fifth inning and start working."
 "I've put a lot of hard work and a lot of hours into this. I was one of the original pinch runners, and I'm the only one that's still around. There's a lot of pressure because usually you come in when the game is really tight.

 "If I mess up, I have to wait 24 hours to make up for it. I can't make up for it the next time I bat."

Elsewhere in the National League, the Houston Astros whipped the Cincinnati Reds 9-3, the Philadelphia Phillies stopped the New York Mets 2-1 and the San Diego Padres beat the Atlanta Braves 4-3.
 The Expos had taken a 1-0 lead in the fifth on an RBI single by pitcher David Palmer. The Pirates tied the score in the bottom of the inning on Dave Parker's run-scoring single.

 The victory went to Kent Tekulve, who worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the 10th.
Reds 9, Astros 3
 Joe Morgan drove in three runs with a homer and a single and Houston ganged up on Mike LaCoss for five unearned runs to defeat Cincinnati behind Joe Niekro's six-hitter.
 It was the second straight game in which Morgan homered against his former teammates and the victory completed a Houston sweep of a three-game series in Riverfront Stadium for the first time since September 1972.
 The Astros now have won six straight games and lead the Reds and the Los Angeles Dodgers by 1½ games in the National League West.
Phillies 2, Mets 1 Luis Aguayo hit his first major league homer to account for both Philadelphia runs as the Phillies survived a major league record-equalling strike-out performance by Pete Falcone to beat New York.

 Falcone struck out the first six hitters he faced at the start of the game to become only the second pitcher in modern National League history to accomplish that feat. The other was Andy Messersmith of the Los Angeles Dodgers, in 1973. Three American Leaguers have done it.
 Falcone permitted only three hits in seven innings and finished with eight strikeouts. Two of the hits came in the fifth when Larry Bowa singled ahead of Aguayo's home run.
 New York collected eight hits off Philadelphia left-hander Steve Carlton, 4-1, who became the third four-game winner in the National League this season, and reliever Tug McGraw.
 "It was a bad pitch, down and in," said Falcone of the gopher ball to Aguayo. "A veteran hitter would have taken that pitch. That's what makes this such a great game;

you never know."
Padres 4, Braves 3
 Willie Montanez stroked a ninth-inning single to score Gene Tenace from second and give San Diego its victory over Atlanta. Tenace had reached base on an error by third baseman Manuel Ruiz and Dave Winfield moved him to second with a single off loser Rick Camp.
 Reliever Larry Bradford then surrendered Montanez' single, ending the game.
 Bob Shirley picked up the victory in relief for San Diego. The loss was the eighth straight for the Braves on the road this season.

Roanoke Puts One In Semis

TARBORO — Roanoke High School's tennis team advanced one player in to the semifinals of the Northeastern Conference tournament yesterday, as Grady Smith captured his first three matches.
 Smith opened up with a 6-1, 6-0 victory over Tarboro's Phil Livesay. He followed that up with a 6-1, 6-1 win over Williamston's Cecil Elks. Then, Smith downed John Stainback of Roanoke Rapids, 6-3, 6-4, to gain today's semifinals.
 Durbit Modica of Roanoke won his opening match, downing Tony Hyman of Plymouth, 6-0, 6-1, but was then defeated by Dwight Scott of Washington, 6-0, 6-2.

 John Riggs lost in the first round to Jeff Morgan of Roanoke Rapids, 6-2, 6-0, and Jimmy Long was also a first round loser, bowing to Elvis Watford of Ahoskie, 6-3, 6-3.
 In the doubles, Roanoke's entry of Billy Stevenson and Ricky Fernandez were beaten by Ken Perry and Ben Selby of Williamston, 6-1, 7-6.
 The tournament winds up today.

Jaguars Top Cougars, 7-2

PINETOPS — Farmville Central rolled to a 7-2 Eastern Carolina Conference baseball victory over Southwest Edgecombe yesterday.
 The Jaguars pushed over three runs in the second inning to get all they would need. Allen Corbett singled and stole second. He scored when Bobby Avery doubled. Avery took third on an infield out and scored on a sacrifice fly by David Cherry. Greg Hardison singled, stole second and scored when Tony Eason reached on an error.
 In the third, Farmville added two more. Mike James walked and Jeff Joyner singled him to third. Joyner stole second and both runners scored on Avery's second double of the day.

 The other two Farmville runs came in the seventh.
 Joyner led the Jaguar hitting with three, while Avery had two. No one had more than one hit for the Cougars.
 Farmville, now 10-7 overall and 7-4 against league play, travels to C.B. Aycock today.

Iona Check To Wind Up

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — Iona College's self-imposed audit into alleged restaurant, taxi and telephone improprieties by its basketball players was expected to end Friday, according to Iona President Brother John Driscoll.
 "We have called in all the receipts from the athletic department for the last three years," said Driscoll Thursday, adding that if any misuse of privileges is discovered it will be promptly reported to the NCAA.
 Driscoll said he had consulted with NCAA enforcement division authorities and would report his findings to them, probably on Friday morning. Driscoll asserted that if any player was found guilty of wrongdoing, he would be declared ineligible and would be dropped from the basketball program, and that any coach involved would be fired.

 Last week, when it was learned that center Jeff Ruland had violated NCAA rules by signing a contract with agent Paul Corvino and by accepting money, the 6-foot-10 junior was cut from the squad.

Lady Pirates Are Top Seeded

East Carolina's Lady Pirate softball team stretched its record to 28-4 by sweeping three games in the North Carolina AIAW Division I tournament in Graham last weekend, and will be the top seeded team in this Saturday's statewide tournament, involving the top two teams from each of the three divisions.
 East Carolina, as the Division I champ, will receive a bye in the first round of the double-elimination tournament. They will then face the winner of the Pembroke State-N.C. Wesleyan game in the second round. Pembroke State is the number two Division II team, while Wesleyan is the number one, Division III team.

 In the other bracket, Western Carolina, the number two, Division I team, will meet Methodist, the number two, Division III team, in the first round. The winner will then face Pfeiffer, the Division II winner.
 Losers drop into the losers' bracket. The two top teams in the field will advance to the Regionals, to be held next week in Graham, hosted by the University of North Carolina.

Redskins Roll, 19-5

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke High School romped to a 19-5 baseball victory over Ahoskie in Northeastern Conference play yesterday.
 Roanoke had little trouble in evening its conference record at 5-5, while advancing to 11-6 overall.
 Roanoke got on the board with two in the first. Anthony Latham walked and Glen Cargile doubled him in. Steve Wallace singled to score Cargile.
 After adding two in the second, Roanoke put it away with six in the fourth. Wesley Johnson opened the fourth reaching on a two-base error. Jesse Matthews and Latham both singled, scoring Johnson. Cargile walked and Wallace reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Matthews. Walks to Wiley Keel and Ricky Simpson brought in two more runs, and Johnson reached on error, scoring two more runs.
 Roanoke added nine more in the fifth, while Ahoskie scored three in the sixth and got two on a home run by Curtis Bond in the seventh.
 Maurice Chance led Roanoke's hitting with three, one of which was a solo homer in the fifth. Latham, Cargile and Tony Whitfield each had two hits. Mansfield had two hits to lead Ahoskie.

Zimmer Relieved As Red Sox Escape Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Manager Don Zimmer heaved a sigh of relief and said, "Thank God we don't have to play them again for a while," after his Boston Red Sox edged the Chicago White Sox 4-3 Thursday night in a game which ended in a heavy fog. "They hit, they pitch and they steal bases. What else is there?" asked Zimmer, who also was pleased that his Red Sox came up with good pitching in the series. It marked the first series Chicago has lost this season after winning its first five.

In the only other American League games played Thursday, Cleveland edged Toronto 2-1 and California nipped Seattle 2-1.

"We hadn't been pitching well, but we got some good pitching in this series," said Zimmer. "The kid (Bruce Hurst) pitched good and Dick Drago was outstanding. We needed it all because they also got good pitching."

"In that ninth inning, I kept pulling for ground balls because I could just see someone losing the ball in that fog with all of those runners on base," said Zimmer.

Panthers Whips Falcons Twice

PIKEVILLE — It took North Pitt eight innings, spread out over more than a month, before the Panthers could finally defeat Charles B. Aycock Thursday afternoon. The Panthers then turned around and whipped the Falcons a second time later in the day.

On March 25 the two Eastern Carolina Conference teams battled seven innings to a 6-6 tie before the game was called because of darkness. Thursday the game was resumed and it took the Panthers only one at bat to score the winning run as they triumphed, 7-6.

Later Thursday, in the regular scheduled game, North Pitt, behind the four-hit pitching of Bob Hemingway, defeated the Falcons, 4-2. The wins left the Panthers at 10-8 overall and 8-4 in the ECC.

In the regular scheduled game, North Pitt jumped out to a 1-0 lead after two but the Falcons tied it in the bottom of the fourth. Both clubs scored single runs in the fifth before a two-run fifth by North Pitt proved to be the difference.

Nice To Have The Favorite

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — When you have one horse stable, it's especially nice to have the favorite in the Kentucky Derby.

That's the position of Harry A. Oak, a retired United Parcel executive, whose Rockhill Native has been installed as the early line 8-5 favorite over 12 rivals for Saturday's $200,000-added Derby at Churchill Downs.

Rockhill Native's trainer, Herb Stevens, has never saddled a Derby starter before. In fact, the 63-year-old Stevens, who lives in Versailles, Ky., hasn't been to a Derby since 1948.

"They never gave me a seat," he said, "so I never came back."

Tom Kelly, who trains John M. Schiff's Plugged Nickle, has saddled two Derby starters but without success. Plugged Nickle, who finished seventh to Rockhill Native as a 2-year-old in their only meeting, was made the early second choice at 2-1.

The early odds on the rest of the field goes from 8-1 to

Although Rockhill Native was the 2-year-old champion, his not overly-impressive times and two losses at Hialeah — despite recent victories in the Blue Grass Stakes and Calumet Purse — make him suspect as an Derby champion.

Plugged Nickle has won his last three races, but in both the Florida Derby and Wood Memorial he drifted out from the rail late in the stretch run, an indication of a tiring or sore horse.

Their presence didn't scare away Mrs. Bert Firestone's Genuine Risk, who will be the first filly to run in the Derby in 21 years since Silver Spoon ran fifth. The only filly ever to win the Derby was Regret in 1915.

"Genuine Risk is a good filly," said trainer LeRoy Jolley. "She runs well wherever she goes, and this year it's a moderate competition situation against the colts."

The daughter of Key To

The Mint had won all six starts against fillies before winding up third in the Wood. She is listed at 10-1.

VOTE JIM MARTIN
DISTRICT COURT JUDGE
Carteret-Craven-Pamlico-Pitt

- Lawyer
- District Attorney
- Defense Attorney
- Methodist Church
- Educator/Coach
- Airline Pilot
- Police Attorney
- Pirates Club

I am writing this letter to urge the support of Jim Martin in his candidacy for the Judgeship of Carteret, Craven, Pamlico, and Pitt Counties.

Jim is from Bethel, and I have known him since he played football for Coach Stas and Coach Boone at East Carolina University where he graduated in 1965. Jim was a solid citizen, a fine football player, and a good student. He has continued to work hard and to participate completely in community life.

My main reasons for asking support for Jim Martin are simple and direct. Jim is a graduate of East Carolina University, he is a native of Pitt County, he is well qualified, and he is a capable, caring, and compassionate man. As a Judge, he will understand the problems of everyone, including the burdens often placed on witnesses and victims who must wait through long delays while judicial matters are being decided.

I place great confidence in Jim Martin, and I hope that he will receive an overwhelming endorsement in this election.

P.S. Jim is the only Pitt County candidate for this position.

Pope Sets Off On African Tour

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer
ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II set out today on his fifth foreign trip in 17 months, a "religious and missionary trip" to six African countries in 10 days to stimulate the growth of Christianity.

The 59-year-old Roman Catholic pontiff told a small crowd of diplomats and church and government officials at Rome's Leonardo da Vinci Airport he was "going to the heart of the immense African continent that received the light of the Christian faith from the missionaries."

"I am happy to be able to participate intensely with my personal presence in the joy of those young churches in which the native bishops have now taken on the succession of the missionary bishops," he said.

"Contemporary Africa has a great importance and an original role in the context of today's international life because of its problems of a political, social and economic nature, of its dynamism rooted in the strength of its people, full of freshness and vitality."

A special Alitalia jetliner took the papal party on the six-hour flight to Kinshasa, the capital of Zaire, the former Belgian Congo, which has the largest Roman Catholic population in Africa.

It also has the largest number of bishops — 56 — and the pope will consecrate four of them at an open-air Mass on Sunday.

Awaiting the pope was President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire, a baptized Catholic who was married Thursday night in a ceremony conducted by Cardinal Joseph Malula, head of the church in Zaire. Diplomats viewed the marriage as a gesture of conciliation with the Catholic church on the eve of the pope's visit. Mobutu's first wife died in 1977 after 22 years of marriage.

Mobutu ordered an

Africanization program in the 1970s which tried to sharply curtail the power of the church. But church and state have gone through a reconciliation in recent years, and many of the country's 11.7 million Catholics — about 45 percent of the population — hope relations will improve further as a result of the visit.

On Monday, John Paul takes a boat across the muddy Congo River to Brazzaville, capital of the Marxist-governed People's Republic of the Congo. He then flies to Kisangani, northern Zaire's largest city. He goes to Kenya Tuesday and then on to Ghana, Upper Volta and the Ivory Coast.

Vatican officials said the journey through Africa is the most important evangelical mission by a pontiff in recent times.

It is only the second trip by a Catholic pope to Africa, where the Vatican now counts 53 million Catholics and more than 200 million Christians among the continent's estimated population of 440 million. Pope Paul VI made a three-day visit to Uganda in 1969.

Since his election to the papacy in October 1978, John Paul has visited the Dominican Republic and Mexico; Poland; Ireland and the United States, and Turkey. He is scheduled to visit France in June, Brazil in July and the Philippines in November.

Birth-Control Program In Thai Refugee Camps

By SUMALEE PHITHAYAKORN

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Meechai Viravaidhya is carrying his family planning to the Thailand's ramshackle refugee camps for Cambodians, Laotians and Vietnamese.

Viravaidhya, 39, a lecturer at Columbia University in New York, calls his campaign "life-or-death serious."

The pilot project among the 25,000 Cambodians at the Sa Kao camp has been highly successful during its first weeks. His community-based emergency relief service operates on a $500,000 grant from the West German agency Deutsche Wehingarilfe and a $50,000 revolving fund from the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

"We started the project with a simple orientation approach," he said. "We showed cowboy movies at the Sa Kao camp compound, then films on birth control and contraceptives. After that, we began private talks with the men."

The refugees are offered free three choices if they are interested: pills, injections and intra-uterine devices.

"About 64 percent of the women at Sa Kao came for help," he said.

The injections do not begin to "take" until about 10 days after they are given. In the interim condoms, called "Meechais" in the camp, are needed. The injections are good for three months.

Viravaidhya offers a "pregnancy schedule" to fit the monsoon seasons, to give mother and fetus the best chance of survival in a climate where artificial heating is unknown and shelter is at best a temporary hut on barren ground.

He advises getting pregnant as the air warms up at the end of the dry season, then carry through the rainy months and the early days of the new dry weather so the birth will be in the moderate mid-dry period.

"Pregnancy can be prescribed, like any treatment," he said. "But we make sure husbands and wives agree on whether treatment is needed or wanted. Most newlyweds, meeting the double crisis of being uncertain in matrimony and living the hand-to-mouth existence of a refugee, usually want to wait for more settled conditions to have children."

The project is coordinated with the Thai government's Population and Community Development Association, of which Viravaidhya is the executive officer.

The project emphasizes agreement between husband and wife in deciding how their family should grow. "We point out to the men how lucky they are to have their wives with them in this critical period," he said.

Some international aid workers have objected to Viravaidhya's work on religious grounds.

"My religion tells me it's immoral," said one Red Cross relief volunteer said, "but this is Thai territory and the government of Thailand permits it. I have no right to agitate."

Meechai expects to carry his crusade eventually to all 17 refugee camps in Thailand, most of them on the lengthy frontier bordering Indochina and the three countries the refugees left to seek asylum.

Molester Is Charged

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)

— A 9-year-old Charlotte youth watched a film on child molestation and then told his teacher that his stepfather had forced him and his sister to have sexual relations with the man.

The stepfather, 39, was later arrested and charged with incest, second-degree forcible rape and sexual assault on the stepson and the 15-year-old stepdaughter.

Police withheld the names of the man and the children to protect the children's anonymity.

The man was held under $50,000 bond.

His arrest came after the young boy watched the film with his elementary school class. The film, produced in California, was donated to the police department by the Fraternal Travelers Protection Association.

Max Fleck, vice president of the association, described it as a low-key safety-oriented organization whose members are traveling salesmen.

The film, called "When to Say No," tells young children how to recognize dangerous situations and what to do.

Petition In N.C. Begun

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Supporters of Illinois Rep. John Anderson began a petition drive Thursday in North Carolina to try to get Anderson's name on the state's November presidential ballot.

Anderson, a Republican, announced last week he would run as an independent presidential candidate in the fall.

However, North Carolina elections law ruled out any chance for Anderson to run as an unaffiliated candidate. He is listed as a Republican on next Tuesday's primary ballot.

Supporters are seeking to gather 10,000 signatures of registered voters backing the formation of a new party — Independents for Anderson Party of N.C.

Ed Becker of Durham, coordinator of the drive, said the petition drive would operate throughout the state.

The organizers don't have much time. The petitions must be submitted to county elections boards for signature verifications by May 16. The verified signatures must go to the state Board of Elections by June 2.

To have run unaffiliated, Anderson would have had to have gathered 168,000 verified signatures by April 25. That was impossible because he had announced his intention to run as an independent only the day before.

Math Group Places First

Rose High School was first place winner in the Atlantic Christian College Regional High School Mathematics Contest held recently with 122 students who represented 25 regional schools.

Winners from the state event will travel to Rutgers University and compete on the national level.

Rose High team members were Kelvin Clark, Mark Grossnickle, Jennifer Davis, Scott Taylor and Susan Vick. Team sponsor was Mrs. Christine Gantt.

TV Log 'Family' Drama Didn't Fit; Show Canceled

For complete TV programming information, consult our weekly TV SHOWTIME from Sunday's Daily Reflector.

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) —

"Family" fans, your struggle is finally over, the battle is lost. ABC has won.

"Family," the drama that was too good for prime time, is canceled.

From the beginning, "Family" has had a difficult time of it, grappling to stay alive in the face of network ambivalence that stunted its growth and eventually killed it.

have saved the lives of several marginally successful shows, including CBS' "Lou Grant" and "White Shadow."

last moment, we were told they were not going to go ahead with it.

were unavailable for comment on the matter. Doubtless, weak ratings will be offered as the reason for "Family's" cancellation, although it looks an awful lot like a set-up.

Natalie Wood Plays A Double Role In Movie

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — You'll see twice as much of Natalie Wood in "The Memory of Eva Ryker" — she plays a double role.

She is both a mother and her daughter in the mystery thriller, which spans three decades.

"It's not a question of aging," said Miss Wood. "I'm relatively the same age for both roles. We use flashbacks for the mother. The other characters do the aging."

The three-hour movie, which airs Wednesday on CBS, also stars Robert Foxworth, Ralph Bellamy, Bradford Dillman, Morgan Fairchild, Jean-Pierre Aumont, Peter Graves and Roddy McDowall.

"It's a murder mystery," said the actress. "Something so awful happened to the daughter when she was 5 years old. If only she could remember it it would unlock the mystery."

To find the key, the daughter is put under hypnosis and led back to her childhood. Miss Wood, to get into the right frame of mind for the scene, actually had herself put under hypnosis.

"I was really under when I did the scene," she explained. "I've never done a thing where I had to regress. So I went to Arthur Ellen and he put me under and I regressed so I would have the feeling of it."

"Then he gave me a posthypnotic suggestion — but only for the scene. I couldn't really be hypnotized for the scene — I had to do my lines. It was only the suggestion for what it would feel like."

The mystery they are seeking to solve had its origin on an ocean liner now at the bottom of the Atlantic. The Queen Anne was torpedoed by German U-Boats in 1939 at about the time the incident took place and was witnessed by young Eva Ryker. Her mother died when the ship sank.

The memory drove her into mental institutions. Her wealthy father (Bellamy) also is obsessed with the ship and hires a novelist

Someone wants the investigation stopped before the shipboard mystery is revealed, and soon there is a wave of new murders.

Although Miss Wood still is very active in feature films, she has done a number of things for television. She was in "The Cracker Factory" and the miniseries "From Here to Eternity," though she declined to do "Eternity" when it became a regular series on NBC.

"I can't imagine myself doing a series," Miss Wood said. "It would be too time consuming. Although I did one when I was about 12 — 'Pride of the Family,' with Paul Hartman and Fay Wray."

At least, ABC executives apparently felt that way. Despite critical praise and an audience that promised to grow, ABC seemed bent on undermining "Family." There were pre-emptions, which disrupted the most important factor in commercial television, viewer habit. There were time period changes.

And ABC refused to rerun "Family" during the summer, robbing the series of the chance to attract new viewers. Summer reruns were brought in to make a series of the Mike Nichols-Jay Presson Allen pilot in 1975.

"ABC said they were very unsure about it," McKeand recalls. "We did six episodes and there was a lot of enthusiasm from the network about the scripts. Then, at the last moment, we were told they were not going to go ahead with it.

"And, suddenly, there was a turnaround and they said they were going to do it. Those first six episodes (in spring 1976) did very well. Then the network procrastinated endlessly before finally ordering (a full season's) 22 episodes.

ABC programming executives, who axed "Family" earlier this week,

New AP Bureau Chief Is Named

NEW YORK (AP) — The appointments of Associated Press bureau chiefs for North Carolina and Connecticut were announced Thursday by Keith Fuller, president and general manager of the news cooperative.

Ambrose Dudley transfers from Hartford to Raleigh, succeeding Paul Freeman. Dudley's successor at Hartford is Charles J. Lewis, assistant chief of bureau at Los Angeles since 1978.

Dudley, 40, a native of Lexington, Ky., joined the AP at Raleigh in 1963 and also worked at Charlotte. He was appointed correspondent at Providence, R.I., in 1969. Dudley was named news editor at Hartford in 1971 and became chief of bureau there a year later.

More Music In Daily Press

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Daily newspapers are expanding their coverage of music, says Alfred Eisenpreis, retail marketing vice president of the Newspaper Advertising Bureau, Inc. Speaking at the annual convention of the National Association of Recording Merchandisers, Eisenpreis suggested merchandisers use newspapers as an information medium with a teaching function, to explain and sell complicated new technology of products now coming into stores.

Plan Promote Recordings

WASHINGTON (AP) — A program to provide support for the recordings of American composers by non-profit organizations has been approved by the National Council on the Arts.

Music Program Director Ezra Laderman says the goals of the program are: "To encourage recording and dissemination of music composed by Americans; to promote the distribution of the recorded American music; and to preserve this music for future generations."

T R B B M F Y O E M M F N E L F Q D H O T

Yesterday's Cryptquip — SPECIAL PLACES ARE SET ASIDE FOR FAVORED VISITORS.

Today's Cryptquip clue: D equals O

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, MAY 3, 1980

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime is not good for you to make any changes which you could regret later. The evening is fine for getting together with good friends. Be more optimistic about the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Plan how to complete your chores with increased efficiency. Be firm where matters of importance are concerned. Be happy.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't argue with the one you love in the morning and then the evening finds true understanding between you. Sidestep a foe.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make sure you don't react bitterly to remarks made by a careless person. Don't jeopardize your present security in any way.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Get busy and attend home affairs early in the day. Avoid talks with family members that could lead to arguments.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Better stick to tasks ahead of you instead of going off on worthless tangents. Take treatments to improve your appearance.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A new interest does not seem to be worthwhile during day but by evening you see its true possibilities. Be logical.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't criticize loyal friends or you could lose them. Study personal statements and make sure there are no errors.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Endeavor to build up your savings instead of spending so lavishly at this time. Take the right steps to gain a personal wish.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Know what your personal desires are and go after them later when the planetary positions are more favorable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Take any limiting conditions in your stride and wait for another time to gain your wishes. Sidestep a troublemaker.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take care of personal matters during the day and later you can join congenials and have a most delightful time.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Communicating with outsiders can lead to good things at this time. Don't lose your temper over a situation that displeases you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who can study a situation well and then know how to handle it wisely. Direct education along practical lines for best results. Be sure to give good spiritual training early in life. Sports are a must.

A fascinating hand is reported by Terence Reese in the latest "Precision Newsletter." It is an almost perfect double-dummy problem. See if you can find the solution looking at all four hands.

The auction given is the one that occurred at the table, where the players were using an artificial club system. Although the normal contract of four spades would be virtually unbeatable as the cards lie, even with the 4-0 trump break, three no trump was a much better contract.

West made his normal lead of a low heart against three no trump. Declarer followed low from dummy, East won the queen and returned the ten. West made a good defensive play when he allowed dummy to win the second heart. Declarer entered his hand by leading a low club to the queen, and then led the ten of spades. West covered with the king, and when East showed out, declarer realized that he needed two entries to his hand to pick up the spade suit. He tried a low club, intending to finesse the ten. But East was alert and inserted the jack, so declarer had to go down. Have you spotted declarer's error?

At trick three, declarer must lead the king of clubs and overtake it with the ace! If West started with fewer than four spades to the king, declarer does not need more than two club tricks to make his contract. On the actual lie of the cards, though, declarer needs three entries to his hand to develop the spade suit, and now he cannot be denied them.

When declarer discovers the 4-0 spade split, he can re-enter his hand by finessing the ten of clubs. He leads the eight of spades. West covers, dummy wins and declarer gets back to his hand with the queen of clubs to lead the six of spades, finessing West out of his seven-spot! Thus, technique is rewarded with an overtrick. Declarer must make five spade tricks, one heart, one diamond and three clubs.

Easy, isn't it!

Attorney Paid For 'Iran Trip

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The attorney for Barbara Timm paid for her trip to Iran last week to visit her hostage son with money contributed by a "peace group."

Mrs. Timm, mother of Marine Sgt. Kevin Hermening, had previously declined to explain how the trip was financed. But she said in a radio interview that the money came from her lawyer, Carl McAfee of Norton, Va., and a peace group with which he is associated.

Hopes Tennis Is Hollywood Key

CLEVELAND (AP) — Luciano Pavarotti, whose world-renowned voice made him the star of New York's Metropolitan Opera, hopes his tennis game will get him to Hollywood.

The 44-year-old Italian tenor says he plays an hour of tennis daily and is on a 2,000-calorie-a-day diet. That's helped him lose 30 pounds so far and if he loses 50 more, he'll be ready to appear in a movie. But he won't tell the name of the film — "that's a secret."

Pavarotti talked with reporters Tuesday before two hours of doubles with some Cleveland businessmen. The Met opened here Monday with a gala and dinner party before its production of Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschero."

The opera singer confessed he gets butterflies in his stomach before each performance.

"Find someone who is not nervous before a performance and I'll show you someone who is not speaking the truth," he said.

Rare Lion Cubs Born At Zoo

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Two rare Asiatic lion cubs have been born by Caesarean section at the New Orleans Zoo, raising to 28 the total number of the cats alive in this country, officials say.

The cubs were born last Wednesday in a litter that included two stillborn cubs. Veterinarians revived them by mouth-to-mouth resuscitation. The mother is reported recovering well.

Once plentiful, the animals today exist only in the Gir Forest of India, where the encroachment of people who need grazing space for cattle is steadily reducing the lions' habitat. Only about 500 are believed to exist in the wild, zoo officials said.

Kidney Patient 'Free As A Bird' With Dialysis

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

"I feel free as a bird," Earl Newcomb, 49, of Austin, Texas, said.

"And I feel terrific."

That's saying something. A little over a year ago Newcomb received a medical death sentence. Both kidneys of the aircraft maintenance man stopped working.

His body could not eliminate poisonous wastes and excess fluids. He was throwing up.

How Newcomb got from that point to feeling "free as a bird" and "terrific" is one of science's marvelous feats.

You might guess that Newcomb was saved by joining nearly 50,000 others in America who survive kidney failure by having their blood cleaned four hours a day, every other day — while they are attached to an artificial kidney machine.

Wrong.

It so happens that Dr. Jack Moncrief, Newcomb's physician, is co-inventor of another way to help patients whose kidneys have shut down. It is called — are you ready? — continuous ambulatory peritoneal dialysis. CAPD, for short.

Moncrief gave Newcomb a choice: standard hemodialysis via a stationary artificial kidney or a chance to be one of the first three patients using CAPD — a revolutionary, portable, self-care treatment system for kidney failure.

Newcomb said he didn't need to be talked into CAPD. It sounded that good. Besides, he had confidence in Moncrief, a nephrologist — kidney specialist — who also is co-director of the Hemodialysis and Transplant Unit at Austin Diagnostic Clinic.

First the doctor implanted a flexible tube in Newcomb's abdominal cavity.

A flexible plastic bag of dialysis solution is attached to the catheter sticking out of his abdomen. The bag with about two quarts of the special solution is raised to shoulder level and by gravity the stuff drains into his abdomen.

"It takes about 10 minutes," Newcomb said.

The empty bag, without being detached from the catheter, is rolled up and tucked under his shirt or trousers — or trunks, when he's swimming.

About six hours later, Newcomb unrolls the plastic bag, lowers it to the floor, sits down and, once more, gravity makes the solution drain out.

Now, it's full of toxins washed out of his blood.

He detaches the bag from the catheter and flushes the contents down the john.

Then, he attaches another bag of solution, raised shoulder high, and lets it drain into the abdominal cavity, starting a new link in the continuous process.

"That's all there is to it," he said.

Four times a day he spends 10 minutes repeating the process.

He said supplies are easy to carry and the procedure can be performed almost anywhere there's privacy — whether at home, or in an office or a rest room or locker room.

The big thing to Newcomb, he kept repeating, is being free.

"I can travel anywhere and I don't need to be on a special diet, the way it is when you are on the artificial kidney."

He said those on the kidney machine can only have a pint-and-a-half of fluid a day and must restrict salt and cannot eat bananas and must follow strict rules on protein.

There are now about 600 patients on CAPD and they are doing most anything — as Newcomb claimed. Doctors implant the catheter off-center, by the way, so it won't interfere with sexual activity.

Authorities estimate from 10 to 30 percent of the nearly 50,000 patients using artificial kidney machines — on line since 1956 — will be able to use the CAPD system.

More than freedom is involved. There's a dollar savings. Kidney machine patient expenses come to around $24,500 a year. The CAPD system costs runs about $14,000 — including supplies and fees for service from doctors and others.

Newcomb had to make some adjustments in clothing to allow for the slightly distended abdomen — with its nearly two quarts of extra fluid, the magic stuff that's saving his life as it washes his blood.

"I used to be a 30 inch waist," he said. "Now I wear a size 33 so things aren't crowded."

Continuous ambulatory peritoneal dialysis is based on continuous blood cleansing. The technique keeps pace with the body's metabolic processes, and requires no machinery, blood-thinning drugs or other complex paraphernalia associated with conventional dialysis.

While the CAPD patient goes about his work or play — swimming, golf or what not — toxic wastes and excess water from the blood stream pass through the peritoneal membrane into the solution. Wastes, by a process called osmosis, pass directly from the network of blood vessels in the peritoneum into the dialysis solution.

In traditional hemodialysis, wastes pass from the blood through a semi-permeable membrane of an external dialyzer and into the dialyzing solution. Both blood and dialyzing solution are circulated by a kidney machine.

Newcomb said a person's got to keep a straight head when on CAPD. Doctors say it is not for everyone.

Users must be meticulous, trainable and able to carefully perform the vital procedures. It is not pushbutton anything.

Peritonitis, or inflammation of the peritoneum remains a problem for CAPD users who do not follow prescribed procedures to the letter.

A spokesman for Travenol Laboratories, the only U.S. manufacturer producing the peritoneal dialysis solutions in flexible plastic containers used in CAPD, said it received its first Food & Drug Administration approval for the solution in plastic containers in September 1978.

The firm has worked closely with the researchers responsible for development of CAPD techniques. The pioneers doctors and scientists include:

— Dr. Robert Popovich, a biomedical engineer at the University of Texas. He was co-inventor of CAPD with Dr. Moncrief, Newcomb's doctor.

— Dr. Karl Nolph, director of the Division of Nephrology at the University of Missouri Hospital Medical Center and the V. A. Hospital in Columbia, Mo. He, along with Popovich and Moncrief, obtained funding from the National Institute of Health to investigate CAPD procedures. Studies were conducted with dialysis solution in glass bottles until September of 1978 when the flexible plastic containers were approved.

— Dimitrios G. Oreopoulos, nephrologist at Toronto Western Hospital, Canada. He was the first physician to develop the current technique using plastic containers.

In September, 1979, Medicare Regional Offices received instructions for reimbursement for CAPD, clearing the way for CAPD to become a more widespread procedure in the United States.

The U.S. Congress first approved full reimbursement for chronic dialysis treatment in 1973 under long-term disability coverage of persons under Medicare or Medicaid programs.

At the time there were 13,000 chronic kidney patients undergoing dialysis in the United States. Now there are nearly 50,000. Patients are being added to that at a rate of 12,000 a year.

However, the dialysis patient population is reduced each year by about 2,000 who receive transplants, and by another 5,000 on dialysis who die. The net gain of new dialysis patients comes to 5,000 a year, as a result.

Many kidney specialists call CAPD the closest thing yet to a successful, completely portable artificial kidney.

The kidneys are the body's sanitation system. They're engineered with more than 140 miles of tubes and millions of filters. They process waste products in the body and help it eliminate excess water.

kidneys start to fail, doctors say.

A kidney can shut down and you won't know it until signs of poisoning occur — such as vomiting in Newcomb's case.

Newcomb has retired from his aircraft maintenance job with the U.S. Air Force Reserve.

He now goes around telling patient groups and others how it is to be on the new system.

"I could play golf," he said, "but I never did take it up so why should I now. But I hunt and I swim — things I did before."

"It's wonderful, wouldn't you say?"

Ex-Jailer Is Sentenced

NEWTON, N.C. (AP) — A Catawba County jury found former chief jailer Kenneth W. Elliott guilty Thursday of sexual misconduct with a female inmate under his custody.

Elliott, who was sentenced to two to three years in prison, was the first person to be convicted under a state law that became effective Jan. 1 prohibiting sexual contact between law enforcement personnel and inmates.

Sheriff T. Dale Johnson said Thursday he and District Attorney Donald E. Greene will review a special internal study of the Catawba County jail and its personnel to determine if any other officers will be prosecuted.

Johnson submitted the 455-page investigative report to Greene earlier this week.

Several former female inmates have charged that a regular practice existed at the county jail by which they would exchange sexual favors with jailers for special privileges.

Elliott was found guilty after eight hours of deliberation by the jury on charges filed by a 17-year-old former inmate. The inmate, Marquita Benfield, complained that Elliott forced her to perform oral sex on him shortly after she was jailed in January on a worthless check charge.

Ms. Benfield is now an inmate at Women's Prison in Raleigh.

Elliott had denied her allegations of sexual misconduct. His wife, who had been present throughout the four-day trial, bowed her head and wept when the verdict was announced Thursday.

Sentenced For Drug Rackets

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The FBI said Thursday a North Carolina man has been sentenced to four years in prison and fined $10,000 in a racketeering case tried in federal court at Roanoke, Va.

The FBI said Jimmie Green Hanes of State Road was sentenced Wednesday after pleading guilty to conspiracy to distributing narcotics, use of the telephone and interstate travel in the aid of racketeering and extortion.

Pence said the charges resulted from an investigation of an extortion attempt of a Durham family, which led to the arrests of several persons in Virginia.

Reward Posted In Murder Case

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The governor's office posted a $5,000 reward Thursday for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a person or persons responsible for the murder of Lou Della Jernigan of Johnston County.

Ms. Jernigan was shot when she answered a knock at the back door of her home on Oct. 16, 1979.

Grand Jury To Meet On Rally Deaths

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Guilford County Grand Jury was to meet in special session today to consider additional indictments growing out of a Nov. 3 anti-Klan rally that left five supporters of the Communist Workers Party dead from gunshots.

The district attorney's office declined to say what type of indictments were to be considered but attorney Richard Rosen of Chapel Hill, who represents three CWP members, said he had been told misdemeanor charges against his clients would be dropped and more serious charges would be sought.

Rosen represents CWP members Nelson Johnson, Willena Cannon, and Rand Manzella. Their trials are scheduled for Monday in District Court, but Rosen said the district attorney's office had informed him the prosecution would be dropped.

District Attorney Mike Schlosser said during pretrial hearings last month for 14 Ku Klux Klansmen and Nazis charged in the Nov. 3 slayings that other indictments would be sought in the case.

Eleven of those 14 are charged with first degree murder in connection with the deaths at the rally. All are charged with rioting.

A Superior Court judge on Thursday denied a defense motion asking that a court-appointed investigator be hired for standby assistance during the trial of six of the defendants in June.

The violence at the rally erupted when a motorcade of Nazi and Klan supporters came upon an assembly point for the demonstrators.

Lawyers for the Klan and Nazi defendants contend Schlosser engaged in selective prosecution because he indicted Nazis and Klansmen only and not CWP members. They have argued it was the CWP members who started the violence by attacking the caravan of vehicles carrying the Nazis and Klan.

The charges against Johnson, Manzella and Cannon grow out of their actions after the shooting stopped. One arrest warrant accuses Johnson of resisting arrest by "kicking, grabbing a chain, and trying to evade law officers after being placed under arrest." A second charge charges him with inciting to riot by "yelling to a crowd of about 100 persons to shoot the police, kill the pigs, and by saying the Klan attack was a setup by police."

Manzella is charged on three counts — being armed with a .38 caliber pistol "to the terror of the public," carrying a concealed weapon in the glove compartment of his car and resisting arrest by driving away while a police officer conducted a radio check of previous arrests.

Chowan County On Relief List

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Chowan County was added Thursday to the list of North Carolina counties for which Gov. Jim Hunt has requested federal assistance as a result of a March snowstorm that caused widespread damage in the eastern part of the state.

In a letter to the Small Business Administration, Hunt said the county has "pinpointed 25 fishermen who have lost or had serious damage to their equipment, with estimated damage totaling $90,000. In addition, there were 12 homes and businesses that had damage estimates of $90,000, with less than 25 percent covered by insurance."

Bids Opened On Vet School

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Bids totaling $17,947,000 were opened Thursday for the third phase of construction on a school of veterinary medicine at North Carolina State University.

The bids involve work on completion of the main building for the school. The three-story building is under construction near the State Fairgrounds.

The $32.2 million school is scheduled to be opened in the fall of 1981.

Gem Collection Going On Tour

NEW YORK (AP) — Gemstones mined in North America and mounted in 18-karat gold jewelry valued at more than $1 million will tour the country during the coming year after being on exhibit at the American Museum of Natural History here.

The 31-piece American Gemstone Jewelry Collection was designed by Coty Award-winner Aldo Cipullo and produced by the American Gem Society (AGS). It will be presented by the society to the Smithsonian Institution as part of that museum's permanent collection after it is displayed in a number of cities over the United States.

The centerpiece of the collection is an 18-karat gold ring featuring a 2.31-carat Arkansas diamond, both colorless and flawless, which has a value of more than $100,000. Another major piece is a 216-carat Arizona turquoise forming the body of a gold American eagle, which has a Montana sapphire as an eye.

And one rare gemstone in the collection is benitoite, a stone that has been found only in America. It is named after its source, San Benito County, Calif.

"Ever since our nation's beginnings, Americans have been fascinated with beautiful gems from other lands," says George Kramer of the AGS, an association of retail jewelers in the United States and Canada. "Yet many large, high-quality stones occur naturally within our own borders."

Though America is not regarded as a gem-producing country, it is a major source for three popular gemstones — turquoise, sapphire and tourmaline — Kramer notes.

While Nevada is particularly rich in turquoise, other mines are located in Arizona, Colorado and New Mexico. A sapphire mine in Yogo Gulch, Mont., extends for five miles, making it the largest proven sapphire deposit in the world. The two most productive areas of tourmaline are Maine and California.

"A major factor in the dominance of imported gemstones in the United States is the strong and dependable supply of most of these stones," explains Kramer of the fact that American jewelers have traditionally looked to other countries for the best stones.

"With such a good supply, there is little incentive or reward for Americans to develop their own gem deposits. Mining gems is a risky and unpredictable business at best."

Kramer says that beautiful gems are found in almost every state, including rubies in North Carolina, peridots in Arizona, jade in California, garnets in New York and opals in Nevada.

A relatively new find is the red beryl from Utah, and its quantities may prove large enough to be mined and sold commercially in the United States, Kramer says.

Among the cities in which the collection will be displayed are Tucson, Ariz.; Salt Lake City; Asheville, N.C.; Raleigh, N.C.; Atlanta; San Francisco and Melbourne, Fla.

Sore Throat From Doctor

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Actor Jimmy Stewart, who was in the state capital to receive a new Pennsylvania award, says he may be the only man to go to a doctor to contract a sore throat.

Stewart, a native of Indiana, Pa., was given the first Distinguished Pennsylvania Artist Award by Gov. Dick Thornburgh on Thursday.

But before receiving the award, he told reporters how some authenticity was added to the famous filibuster scene of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington."

Stewart said the director thought the hoarseness he needed for the scene sounded false. "So on the way home from work I stopped at a nose, ears and throat specialist and asked him to give me a sore throat."

"He looked at me and said, 'You Hollywood people, I heard you were crazy, but this is the craziest. I've spent 35 years trying to cure sore throats, and you want me to give you one.'"

Stewart said the doctor gave in, squirted some drops near his vocal chords, "and I had my sore throat."

He said the physician later visited the set equipped with the drops — "I don't know what happened to his practice," Stewart said. "Every once in a while I had to tell him, 'Doctor, my throat's getting better.'"

NEW DIRECTOR — Russell E. Dickenson, a 33-year veteran of the National Park Service, was named to head the agency Thursday by Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus. Dickenson, 57, has been director of the service's Pacific-Northwest Region. (AP Laserphoto)

PUBLIC NOTICES

NOTICE OF SALE OF TAX LIENS ON REAL PROPERTY
Under and by virtue of the authority vested in me by Section 195-349 of the General Statutes of North Carolina and pursuant to an order of the Board of Commissioners of the Town of Falkland, dated February 5, 1980, I will offer for sale and will sell at public auction for cash on the highest bidder at the Town Hall in Falkland, North Carolina, at 12:00 o'clock noon on May 9, 1980, upon the real estate described below for the non-payment of taxes owing for the year 1979-1979. The amount advertised will be increased by interest and costs and the omission of advertisement will not constitute a waiver of the taxing unit's claim for non-payment of taxes unless it is at least equal to the principal amount of the taxes advertised. Interest and costs accrued thereon at the date of sale. The real estate that is subject to the lien, the names of the persons who are the owners of the real estate, and the principal amount of the taxes are set out below. Reference is made to the records in the office of the Register of Deeds of this county and in the office of the tax supervisor of the county for a more particular description of the real estate.

San Diego's Fun Hogs Take Time Out From World

By RICHARD H. GROWALD
UPI National Reporter
SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI)
— Up Mission Hill bicycled the Fun Hogs.

The deputy sheriff, the woman lawyer, the awning installer, the woman pastry chef and the commercial photographer wheeled past

O'Hungry's where less athletic San Diegans called on the Masked Hamsters to play such golden oldies as Bob Dylan's "Pill Box Hat."

In shorts and T-shirts and the unmechanized manner of Heaven's Angels, the bikers circled around and above Father Sierra's two-century Roman Catholic Mission, set up to Christianize heathen Indians and now, like the Balboa Park Zoo and the Belgian Lion restaurant in Old Town, one of the landmarks of the good life in America's southwestern sunshine corner.

A NOBLE PRIZE — Launa Noble, London-based country girl, has been named by theatrical producers as Britain's sex symbol for the 1980s. She was discovered when she was working as a hospital nurse and is currently appearing in the stage version of the successful play "Come Play With Me". (AP Laser-photo)

The Fun Hogs, like some 5,000 other bicyclers, are preparing for the May 18 annual running of a 76.5-mile sort-of-race south of the border, in Mexico, from inland Tecate to Ensenada on the Pacific coast. It is the sort of activity that makes San Diego, now bigger than San Francisco and one of America's 10 largest cities, as different from the rest of the country as its eternal balmy weather dictates.

A winner might get a finger-big trophy atop a beer bottle. Then why take part? "It gives me a philosophy of life — to spend the rest of the year getting ready for the next running of the Tecate-Ensenada horror," lawyer Theresa "Terry" Player, 32, said.

"And I ride my bike to forget the prime interest rate, nasty judges and impoverished defendants," the woman of the law said. "Also, there's that sight at the start, in Tecate, of 5,000 fellow idiots on bicycles pedaling out all at once."

She and her Fun Hogs, one squad in the Tecate-Ensenada army, had reached their practice run to the top of Mission Hill and paused in an Arista Drive hacienda, a red tile-roofed mini-mansion overlooking the bay that tickled Isabella and Ferdinand's Spanish explorers.

"Almost all of the 5,000 are Americans. Not many Mexicans bike in the race. The Mexicans are too intelligent," Miss Player said.

Bostonians marathon. New Yorkers adopt the bicycle when subway workers strike. The ski is mighty in Colorado. Shuffleboard is gaining in Florida. In San Diego, however, what the Fun Hogs and other citizens do in the boom town and county may be special.

Much of the Florida sunshine, for example, may be devoted to retirement. Los Angeles, when the smog is away, is really a business Mecca. But in big and bigger San Diego life seems easier.

Certainly bigness has brought problems. For example, there now exist minority ghettos. Lawyer Player has had to interpret the ghetto black of accused criminals. And air traffic congestion, over Lindbergh Field in the domain where the Lone Eagle's transatlantic solo plane was built, is a fret if not a threat. True, true.

But San Diego takes it easy. In the words of Leonard Slater, editor of a San Diego magazine that fittingly devotes itself mostly to enhancing home and garden and ignoring the socio-economic-political mayhems of regional magazines in the rest of the country, "Here lay back in the thing."

It is more than fun in the sun. The city is something of an escapist haven from a world of ills elsewhere.

San Diego rather contentedly basks in the tradition of the Vienna leader who, with the Austro-Hungarian empire crumbling all around, said cheerfully, "The situation is critical, but not serious."

Down in O'Hungry's, younger San Diegans do the lay back. The drinks for the senior teen-agers and hardly Roaring Twenties crowd is beer, served in 24-, 18- and 12-inch glasses that may be more attractive to the crowd than the liquor they hold.

The young women are all in slacks, mostly jeans and mostly tailored. Their dates have mustaches and beards, all but one trimmed so no long hair is more Bohemian than a Van Dyke beard that would please an archbishop.

The one long beard is worn by a fellow who wears a cowboy hat and, true to San Diego's geist, he, too, is a polite applauder when the female Masked Hamster — she is the only female in the house in a shirt and her appearance is no more punk or even rock than a Wagnerian soprano walloping in Carnegie Hall — announces, "We're now going to have a real oldie, a Rodgers and Hart thing. I think, from way back in the 1930s."

She might be announcing to older ears a Neanderthal stone song. It turns out to be "Blue Moon." In Berkeley and other centers where youth is served the talk might be of candidates' causes, chaos. But this is San Diego and in O'Hungry's they sing along.

Up above, on Mission Hill, drinking coffee and munching sweetcakes, the Fun Hogs live out their part of the lay back spirit. Fun Hog Mike Player, 38, brother to Terry and deputy sheriff to the county, talks of proposing the sheriff start patrolling deputies on bicycles.

This is San Diego and so the sheriff, although not overly excited, decided to think about it. Fun Hog Thomas Arledge, 29, photographer, discusses the uphill and downhill nature of the Tecate-Ensenada run. He looks into his coffee and grins. "At the end there is all that beer."

Pastry chef Sharon Darr, 23, examines the deep meanings of the bicycle race. "Deep hatred," she said. "You hate yourself for doing it. You vow never again."

"All of us swear, half-through that horror, that we'll never do it again. What's the reason for all the agony and the sweat? But we all come back," Miss Player said.

The race has its distractions. "There's that first uphill surge and you huff and you puff and you huff it because 5,000 of us can't be that stupid. And then the first steep downhill when the ground is littered with fallen vizards and water bottles and you don't dare stop because the domino theory holds and you'd bring down a mob with you and make squished raspberries of everyone," lawyer Player said.

And then there was the time Miss Player and Miss Darr noticed three men jogging along, wearing only shoes and shirts, nothing between. And the time awning installer Ted Bramer, 32, did stop to pay due attention to one entrant. She was stripping.

"That's not what the bike race and San Diego are all about, exactly," Bramer said. "But it's better than worrying about inflation."

Recycling Said Up

Despite a troubled national economy, recycling is up about five percent over last year this time in North and South Carolina, according to information released by Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Company.

Total volume for the first quarter of 1979 was 2,536,404 pounds for the Carolinas, while the 1980 figure is 2,641,427. Reynolds recycles at Pitt Plaza Shopping Center here every Friday from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m.

North Carolina ranked fourth of the states in the nation in total volume recycled during 1979.

Reynolds pays recyclers 24 cents a pound for all clean recyclable aluminum, including cans, pie tins, foil, siding, tubing and cast parts. Cans should be kept in clear plastic bags, while larger pieces should be cut in lengths not exceeding three feet and be tightly bound.

The East Carolina Vocational Center here also buys aluminum for recycling.

Data Processor Guest On Show

Pat Branch, data entry processor at Pitt County Mental Health Center, will be guest Sunday at 1:06 p. m. on "Mental Health Matters" on WNCN radio.

She will talk about her work with the Management Information System (MIS), which is designed to give information about public needs and program activities.

Branch said MIS is a management tool that can provide data in a form that can reflect what goes on in an agency and influence decision-making. Portraying how resources are spent and what patterns of service delivery are, MIS can make for evaluation data which can enhance mental health services in the community, she said.

GUEST SPEAKER

CONETOE — Elder Alexander Dixon of Scotland Neck will be the guest speaker at Conetoe Baptist Church Sunday at 7:30 p. m.

The public is invited, according to the sponsor, Rosa Weaver, and the pastor, the Rev. T. R. Vines.

Florida Guards Old Traditions

By SUSAN POSTLEWAITE
Associated Press Writer
TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Swamp cabbage and alligator tail — luncheon fare to Florida crackers — are part of the special folklore and tradition of Florida the state wants to preserve.

About 20 states have folklore preservation programs, but the Florida Folklife Program with a dozen professionals on its staff is probably the nation's biggest, according to Deputy Secretary of State Randall Kelley.

With a $250,000-a-year program, the state is trying to preserve certain "words in our language, food that we eat, traditions that we practice" that set Floridians apart from others, said Kelley.

Take crackers, for example. While a couple of legends explain that longtime Floridians are called crackers, no one knows whether the name came from old ranchers who cracked their whips or the folks who lived in tiny cracker-box houses.

In crafts, what sets Florida apart is its pine-needle baskets, palmetto-leaf hats, white-oak baskets and fish nets, says Peggy Bulger, a professional folklorist. The maritime heritage is very strong because of the state's 1,100-mile coastline.

There are plenty of delicacies traditional to Florida besides swamp cabbage and alligator tail. "If you have catfish, you can't have catfish without your hushpuppies," she says.

Then there's cooter — land turtle; hopping John — a concoction of black-eyed peas and rice; hog hash; and southern grits with cane syrup.

Ms. Bulger said new ethnic influences were changing the traditional heritage of the state. One of the biggest ethnic groups in the Panhandle is now the displaced Vietnamese who have brought new kinds of music with them. Miami has "Little Havana" and the Seminole and Muskogee Indian influences are spread around the state.

For the past 25 years, Florida folklore has been epitomized by the Florida Folk Festival held once a year in White Springs during the Memorial Day holiday. Now Kelley wants to extend that annual affair into a statewide effort.

"Our long-term effort is to have not just one folk festival — maybe have two a year and take them all around the state," he said.

With four federal arts grants, the folklorists are instituting a folk arts experimental program in a Tampa school, making a record, putting together a basket-weaving exhibit, and filming Florida craftsmen at work.

A folk-arts panel also has been established as a forum for experts on music, dance, literature, storytelling, quilting and other forms which spring from Florida's history.

Covered Dish Safety Rules

NEW YORK (UPI) — People trying to save money by sharing expenses through covered-dish parties should follow certain safety rules to avoid food poisoning, says Elaine Rose of Cornell University's cooperative extension service.

Ms. Rose recommends caution in handling such low-acid dishes as potato, fish and poultry salads, casseroles, custards and egg dishes. She says high-acid dishes made with ingredients such as tomatoes, vinegar, citrus fruit and pickles are much safer to serve large crowds. That's because bacteria grow very slowly under acid conditions.

Cold foods should be stored at temperatures below 40 degrees F and hot foods above 140 degrees F, she says, and no perishables should be left at room temperature more than two hours — including preparation time.

WOMEN'S DAY
Women's Day will be held at St. Mary Missionary Baptist Church at 11 a.m. Sunday, May 5. Guest speaker will be Mattie Murrell of Newport. Organist will be L. T. Barret.
