

Ship Breaks Span, Bus In Fatal Plunge

By PAT LEISNER
Associated Press Writer

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — A 609-foot cargo ship crashed into the Sunshine Skyway Bridge in a storm today, knocking out a portion of the 15-mile span and sending a Greyhound bus with 23 persons aboard plunging into Tampa Bay, officials said.

Phillip Biebender, a Coast Guard spokesman in St. Petersburg said 17 bodies were recovered within hours after the freighter Summit Venture hit the bridge in a thundershower. The accident occurred during the morning rush hour.

The bus was resting in 20 feet of water.

About 300 feet of the bridge collapsed where it crosses the main shipping channel.

One car was seen hanging over the edge of the torn bridge but its four occupants crawled to safety.

Richard Hornbuckle, 60, of St. Petersburg, driver of the car, said, "It was raining cats and dogs. It was dark. The wind was blowing like a hurricane."

"I was doing about 25 mph; the Greyhound bus passed me doing about 35. There was a stalled car in front. As I came to the very top of the bridge, I saw the rest of it was out. I applied my brakes immediately and stopped within 2 feet of going in. I bailed out and went back to stop other cars."

"We got all the other cars stopped. I looked down and saw my car with all four doors open. I figured the Lord was real good to the four of us."

Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Paul Scotti said authorities at first believed 90 persons may have drowned because they thought the bus was filled.

But Robert Rodriguez, a local manager for Greyhound, said the bus was carrying 22 passengers and a driver.

Rodriguez said the bus left St. Petersburg for Miami at 7:05 a.m. and did not arrive as scheduled in Bradenton, on the other side of the bay.

Authorities said it appeared the passenger car and the bus had just passed a slower moving vehicle on the bridge when they sped onto the torn section. The bus plunged over the edge and into the bay, but the car was able to stop barely in time.

Divers from the local sheriff's department were dispatched to the area to search for survivors.

ECU Degrees Conferred On 2,857 Grads Today

"Do not seek out happiness," cautioned Dr. William J. Bennett to the 1980 graduating class of East Carolina University this morning during the seventy-first commencement exercises. "Although I wish you happiness and I'm sure you wish it for yourself, happiness is a retreating thing. The more it is pursued, the more it retreats."

East Carolina University conferred degrees upon 2,857 graduates at 10 a.m. in Ficklen Stadium. Dr. William J. Bennett, executive director of the National Center for the Humanities, delivered the 1980 commencement address.

"I have been to many commencements," said Bennett, "But this is the first one I've spoken to. The expectation is that I'll give you advice, or speak of a world torn by despair and wracked by pain, with the responsibility for it resting upon your shoulders."

"Usually the graduation speaker gives to the gradu-

Canvass Changes Totals, Outcomes Still The Same

The official canvass yesterday of votes cast in Tuesday's elections in Pitt County, turned up some different totals from those unofficial returns reported Wednesday. However, the variation in the totals made no difference in the ultimate success or failure of any of the candidates seeking office.

In all, 17,619 people — 54.89 percent — of the county's 32,097 registered voters went to the polls and cast ballots in the primary, that decided which Democratic and Republican candidates would appear on the ballot to represent their respective parties in the November general election.

The official figures in the Democratic presidential race included: incumbent Pres. Jimmy Carter, 9,196, Sen. Edward Kennedy, 1,678, Edmund G. Brown, 457, and no preference, 1,654.

Incumbent Walter Jones took 10,554 ballots in the First Congressional District race, while Joe Hollowell received 2,394 votes.

In the race for the Democratic nomination as governor, incumbent Gov. Jim Hunt received 9,344 votes, former Gov. Bob Scott took 3,404, and hopeful Harry J. Welsh polled 209 ballots.

For lieutenant governor, incumbent Jimmy Greene took 6,881 votes, Carl Stewart received 5,439 votes and Clyde Pulley, 166.

In the race for nomination as Secretary of State, "the oldest rat in the Democratic barn," incumbent Thad Eure, received 8,035 votes, while George Brece took 3,794 votes.

For State Auditor, Edward Renfrow received 4,881 votes, W. S. "Bill" Chestnut, 3,389, and J. E. B. Davis, 1,995.

John Ingram, incumbent Commission of Insurance, received 6,605 votes, James Long 2,706, Ken Brown 1,694, and Roy Rabon 994.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips took 9,093 votes in his bid for the Democratic nomination, while Trosper Combs polled 2,235.

Appointed incumbent Phil Carlton received 8,224 votes in his nomination bid, while Ottway Burton received 2,394 votes.

In the race for the State Senate, incumbent Sen. Vernon White received 7,965 votes and hopeful Mark Tipton won 6,032. Although incumbent Sen. Julian Allsbrook ran third in Pitt, with 5,326 votes, White and Allsbrook won nomination in the district.

In the four-way race for the N.C. House of Representatives, incumbent Sam Bundy polled 7,902 votes, while hopeful Ed Warren, currently chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, received 6,101 votes. Challenger Mark Owens received 5,438 while David Bosley took 1,219 ballots.

In Greene County, the other county in the House District, Bundy took 2,124 votes, Owens 1,146, Warren 910 and Bosley 234, resulting in Bundy and Warren receiving the Democratic nomination.

Incumbent District Court Judge Burt Aycock took 8,058 votes in Pitt, while challenger Lewis Evans received 3,555 ballots. Aycock also ran ahead of Evans in Craven, Carteret and Pamlico Counties to win the district nomination.

In the race for the second District Court Judge nomination, Jim Martin fell 313 votes short of winning without the possibility of a runoff.

In Pitt, Martin took 8,073 votes, Mokey Lasiter 1,416,

City Council Adopts Revision Of Ordinance

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council last night adopted an important ordinance revision that regulates the "orderly subdivision and development of land within the corporate limits...and within the extraterritorial planning and zoning jurisdiction."

In adopting the revised subdivision regulations, as well as the technical Manual of Standard Design and Detail, the Council culminated a "tremendous amount of work" by city staff personnel and others, it was pointed out by Ed Wyatt, city manager.

City planning director Bobby Roberson explained several changes in procedures that the new subdivision regulations incorporate. Roberson said that with the revised ordinance, once a preliminary subdivision plat is approved by the planning and zoning board, the final plat will not have to be brought back to the board for approval if it conforms with the preliminary documents. He said that bikeway plans were also incorporated as part of the regulations and new provisions were included for variances.

City Engineer Ron Sewell mentioned that work on the Manual of Standard Design and Detail began about a year ago and since that time some 3,000 to 4,000 manhours have been logged in getting the document prepared.

Sewell said that the document is technical in nature and offers guidelines for developers to use. Noting that some 11 basic areas are addressed in the manual, the city engineer said that the document was sent to local developers for their comments during preparation.

The Council, in approving the revised regulations and manual, set the effective date for the new ordinance at July 1. Plats considered by the planning board prior to that date will come under provisions of the previous ordinance.

Approval was given by the Council, following a public hearing, on a preliminary assessment resolution for curb and gutter and a five-foot strip of paving on Beaumont Road and a portion of Evergreen Drive from N. Overlook Drive to Evergreen.

The manual will be scheduled on the work order program of the Public Works Department.

The Council also conducted a public hearing and approved a request for rezoning of the C. J. Flanagan property located off Beech Street just north of Third Street. Petitioners requested rezoning from RA-20 (residential-agricultural) to R-6 (residential). It was mentioned that the planning board recommended approval of the request.

Following a fifth public hearing, the board granted a permit to Burroughs Wellcome Co. to allow for the placement of a mobile home on the plant site for use as an office.

In action regarding the Community Development program, resolutions were adopted condemning under the law of eminent domain easements and rights-of-way for the construction of 14th Street on the properties of M. E. Sutton, J. J. Perkins and Mamie R. Perkins, William O. Bilbro, Richard W. Briley and his wife, Peggy, R. B. Murphy, and Richard Higgs Duncan and his wife, Mary Anne Duncan Groome.

City Attorney Louis Singleton explained that the city has been unable to acquire the easements and rights-of-way through voluntary procedures and the Council action will allow the city to take the property by condemnation. The resolutions for the six parcels represents a step toward legally establishing the property values, it was noted.

Council members approved the addition of Blount Street, located in the Southside urban renewal project, to the CD street paving program.

Applications for mobile home permit renewals were granted to: Mrs. Lula Dixon for a unit at 205 E. Dudley Street; Gene and Mary Phillips for the mobile structure at 603 Harris Street; and North State Savings & Loan Corp. for the mobile unit at the corner of First and Washington Streets.

The Council set public hearings on four items, including: rezoning from RA-20 to Neighborhood Commercial of the Baxter A. Richardson property at the corner of NC 33 and Port Terminal Road, involving some .73 acres; request for rezoning from RA-20 to R-6 of 1.2 acres located on Cemetery Road adjacent to the landfill;

Request by Union Carbide Corp. for rezoning 16.5 acres north of the plant from Highway Commercial and R-6 to Unoffensive Industry; and on a request by Ferrell Blount, Jr. for rezoning 4.2 acres on the west side of Verdant Drive from RA-20 to R-6.

Following a recommendation by the city-county planning board, the Council voted

Life As It's Lived

Second Thoughts Rise On Impending Sibling

By GAIL MICHAELS
As hard as the last few months of pregnancy are on the parents, they're hardest on the siblings. During the first months Meg was more excited than anyone about the new baby. But as the big event drew closer, the reality of the situation began to dampen her enthusiasm.

I'm not sure when she started to have second thoughts. Perhaps it was when she rested her head on my stomach and the baby kicked her in the cheek. She looked up with a hurt look. "Why did it do that?" she asked.

Perhaps it was when she realized that she could no longer use Mommy as a trampoline. Or perhaps it was when I got so large that a simple hug required an effort similar to that of scaling Mount Everest.

Whenever it was, sometime around month 7 Meg abandoned her novel suggestions for early delivery, like taking a knife and performing a quick Caesarean in the kitchen, and became increasingly reflective.

Although she still looked forward to our impending change in life style, she was much more apprehensive. For instance, she cried bitterly when she was told that I would have to stay in the hospital a few days. (I cried bitterly when I was told I couldn't stay for a month.)

And when I scolded her for doing something dangerous, she said in all sincerity, "But if I die, you'll have the baby."

I quickly explained to her that we were not manufacturing replacement parents. "Then I'll always be your most special girl," she said, brightening.

"Of course, you'll be my special girl," I answered, carefully avoiding the "most." Every child is special in its own way to its parents.

Evidently, my answer did not thrill her. She suddenly started making statements like, "This baby's going to be a lot of trouble, isn't it?"

And she began to tell with great zest anecdotes about her schoolmate, another victim of sibling proliferation, who liked to beat the baby dolls on the climbing box. At home, interspersed with the ever-popular labor and delivery game was an imaginative play sequence in which she had to imprison her "big sister" doll because it wouldn't quit pinching the baby.

Her mixed feelings also were obvious in her conversations with other adults. Whereas previously she had welcomed questions concerning the baby, she was now just as likely to meet them with a blank stare. And when someone asked her if she wanted a brother or a

Mother, Daughter Graduates

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
Joan Boudreaux took her first college course when her daughter, Susan, was five months old.

Susan is graduating from Rose High School June 6 and Joan is graduating from East Carolina University today.

Mrs. Boudreaux says the support of her husband, Robert M. Boudreaux, and their three children, Mark, Susan, and Jimmy, enabled her to complete her college work.

Her very first course was shorthand, taken at Pitt Technical Institute. All her other courses she took at East Carolina University. Almost all her freshman and sophomore courses she took one at a time, fitting them in with all her duties as wife and mother. There was a five-year period during which both her mother and father were ill when Mrs. Boudreaux took no college work at all.

She did go to school till she was seven-months pregnant with Jimmy, now 13, and says that as a baby he was an appreciative listener to her history lessons, read with great animation and expression so he'd feel included as she studied. "Nursery rhymes wouldn't have been a bit more meaningful to him then," she said laughing.

In 1977, when Mrs. Boudreaux was into her junior-level work, she decided to try a fuller load, to begin taking more than one course at once. She declared

English as her major. A little later, she changed from working toward a B. S. in English, which would have been a teaching degree, to a concentration in writing. "I've never been sorry," she said. "East Carolina has a great writing program. I feel I've had some of the best teachers of writing anywhere."

She says she is considering going to graduate school at ECU, but has not fully decided yet. "I'll be glad when the master's program in writing is underway," she said.

"When I started to school," she said, "I honestly didn't know I'd ever graduate. I was just taking each course for my own edification. I put college graduates on such a high pedestal, I didn't dream of ever being one myself.

"And I certainly never dreamed I'd be graduating with a major in English and concentration in writing. I felt sure I'd fail the first English course I ever took. It was an area I liked, but I had no confidence at all."

"The children and Boudie have made it all possible. Each one has had his chores and done everything they could to encourage and help me. It's a happy day for everyone at our house!"

Mrs. Boudreaux is a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints and is on the Board of Directors of the Eastern Lung Association.

"Don't put all your eggs — in the microwave."
"All's fair in — hockey."
"People who live in glass houses — better not take off their clothes."

Apple Amber Beverage

APPLE AMBER
Light and refreshing, this may be used as a dessert or served with lettuce and a low-calorie dressing.

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- 2 cans (each 5½ fluid ounces) pure apple juice (1 and 1-3rd cups)
- 7-ounce bottle ginger ale (scant ¾ cup minus foam)

Pinch of salt, if desired

In a 1-quart saucepan sprinkle the gelatin over the apple juice from 1 of the cans (2-3rds cup); let stand to soften — about 5 minutes. Over moderate heat, stir constantly with a rubber spatula — especially around sides and over bottom of pan — until the gelatin is dissolved; you should not be able to feel or see any granules. Off heat, stir in the apple juice from the remaining can (2-3rds cup), the ginger ale and, if used, the salt. Makes 2 and 1-3rd cups. Pour into individual molds or custard cups. Chill to set. At serving time, unmold. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Distillery In Exhibits

Quite an exhibit is being developed at the Pitt County Fair Grounds.

The permanent exhibits include a collection of buildings, equipment and other material which would have been found on an old Pitt County farm.

Farms changed little almost from the time the first settlers came here until the last couple of decades. Then the traditional frame farm houses, old tobacco barns and mule drawn devices gave way to modern brick homes, and sophisticated farm machinery.

The exhibit recently gained another donation. An ancient copper distillery has been given by S. E. Nixon. It was used by his grandfather, Tim Lassiter, to make apple brandy for home use.

This particular still came from Gates County but there were plenty of them in Pitt County of years ago, most of them pretty well hidden.

At any rate the rare distillery is an interesting addition to the exhibit.

Our Best To The Graduates

Some 2,857 graduates received degrees at East Carolina's 71st commencement exercises held on campus this morning.

As always it was an impressive sight to see these thousands of young adults, faculty members and other officials and dignitaries form the processional which leads to the ceremonies.

These graduates will now take their places in the working world. Undoubtedly some will accomplish great things in the fields of business, science, education or whatever they choose. All of them will have more opportunity to do so because they came to ECU.

We wish the best for each of them.

THIS AFTERNOON Changes At Work

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Trends are taking place in North Carolina's labor force which will have considerable significance for employers and for those in retail businesses and other activities which serve the people who work.

Developing changes will also spill over into community and home life for many North Carolinians.

According to statisticians with the state's Employment Security Commission, there is a strong downturn in numbers of young people, particularly teenagers, entering the labor force; and an even more pronounced gain in numbers of working women.

During the decade of the 80s, the percentage of young people at work is expected to drop because the lingering effects of the baby boom which followed World War II are ending.

In 1970 there were 17.31 percent of the state's total population in the age group between 16 and 24. Still climbing, but slowly, that percentage is expected to peak at 18 percent shortly, then decline to 14.2 percent by 1990.

Jobs
This particular age group is important to the labor scene, since here is where skills training is concentrated, and where many employers must look for entry-level employees. Further, the state unemployment picture is markedly affected by the young workers.

Of the 641,200 North Carolinians between 16 and 24 who were counted as in the labor force, 9.8 percent were unemployed last year, compared to an overall jobless rate of 4.8 percent.

In short, while the younger people make up less than one fourth of the labor force, they account for nearly half of all unemployment. And the younger the individual, the worse the chance of finding a job. Among 16 and 17-year olds the unemployment rate is 15.3 percent; dropping to 7.5 percent for those between 20 and 24.

Last year nearly half of all job referrals handled by the Employment Security Commission Job Service were for young people.

Women also face employment difficulties surpassing those of the male work force. Last year the unemployment rate was 6.2 percent; representing 74,000 women, compared with a 3.7 percent jobless rate among males.

By the middle of this decade the number of women workers in this state will be at least equal the number of working men; and possibly exceed that.

Just 40 years ago a mere handful of women worked outside the home; about 350,000. Today more than 1.2 million women work; an increase of more than 240 percent.

Kinds of Work
According to Dave Garrison, assistant chief of research for the Employment Security Commission, there has been some major change in the kinds of work which women are doing. In 1940, only 25 percent of the women who worked were in so-called white collar jobs. Now over half hold managerial jobs while the percentage of women in "blue collar" occupations has declined slightly.

The biggest dropoff has been in service and farm occupations for women. Fewer women are in household domestic jobs or working on the farms while more are in professional and technical jobs, in management or administration, and in skilled trades.

What all of this means to various aspects of home and community life — volunteerism, childrearing, school and church involvement by parents, etc. — is a matter of serious concern to governmental officials and social researchers.

Rose Garden Marathon

WASHINGTON — There is a great deal of speculation in Washington, D.C., this week as to why President Carter has decided to leave the Rose Garden and go out on the campaign trail.

While everyone seems to be giving a different reason I can reveal the true one today.

An unusually reliable source at the White House told me, "We decided to switch political strategy because of Rosie Ruiz, the lady marathon runner."

"What has she got to do with the Presidential race?" "Nothing. But as you know she claimed she ran the 26 miles in the Boston Marathon, and after being declared winner of the women's division, the officials took the crown away from her because no one saw her run." "And Carter decided to leave the Rose Garden because of that?"

"We received information that Teddy Kennedy was going to go to the Democratic Convention in August and strategy worked so well. We saw more of Carter running in the White House than we did if he had been out on the road. Suppose Carter falters when he joins the other runners?"

"He only has to beat Kennedy, and he has such a commanding lead, that we don't see any danger of him slipping now."

"You mean he can join the race where it is now and not begin at the starting line?"

"Of course. The President only has a few more miles to go, and even if he jogs, we don't see it as a problem. The important thing for Carter is just to show people he was willing to get into the race. As long as we have film of him running, the Kennedy protest won't mean a thing."

"How does the President feel about it?" "He's looking forward to running somewhere besides the Rose Garden. He's always said that if he got into the race with Teddy he would whip his a—"

"It will be good to see the President on the road again," I admitted. "Particularly since he had nothing but bad news to give us when he was running around the White House. Maybe once he leaves, things will get much better."

"They are much better. That's why Carter said he could afford to get out and run."

"Well," I said, "I think the President is doing the right thing. One more question — if Carter is out on the road, who will be running in the Rose Garden?"

claim Carter had never run for re-election, and therefore was not entitled to be nominated."

"But Carter was running in the Rose Garden," I said.

"It wasn't enough. No one had seen him run in the states that had primaries. They saw Rosalynn running, and Chip running and Miz Lillian running and Vice-President Mondale running for him. But there isn't one piece of film that shows Carter himself. Of course the President planned to cross the finishing line himself, but we were afraid that Teddy's protest might hold up, and Carter could have been disqualified."

"Could the party do that to an incumbent President?"

"Nobody knows. The rules are unclear on how far a candidate has to run to qualify for the nomination. The fact that Carter hasn't done any of the running himself hasn't hurt him so far. But this Rosie Ruiz brouhaha has changed everything. Americans are starting to ask if it's enough to have surrogates do all the running for the candidate and then give him the gold medal. We felt that as long as Carter ran around the White House he would be qualified for the marathon. Obviously they don't feel that way in Boston and it would be just like Kennedy, if he lost, to protest a Carter victory."

Public Forum

To the editor:

Last week when the shad and herring were finishing their annual run up the river, when the dogwoods were ending their season of flowers along the Tar's banks, when the water fishermen were readying their skis, when the canoeists and fishermen were launching their vessels, a strange group of Northerners were visiting the thousand-acre Grimes Plantation and the adjacent McCotter Plantation.

With a cloak and dagger type of gracelessness reminiscent of an old grade B Hollywood movie, these people arrived in Greenville sporting pseudonyms. They were hosted by the local Chamber of Commerce, the local governments and officials of East Carolina University. They were spirited around the county and were allegedly impressed. The day prior to their visit to Greenville, they met with Governor Hunt in Raleigh. (I wonder if they revealed their true names.)

Now, here is the kicker! The same industry that gave Love Canal (remember?) to the State of New York now intends to replicate the project on 2,200 acres of land on the Tar River. The plastics/chemical industry allegedly wishes to use seven million gallons of Tar River water per day. Supposedly, the Raleigh authorities have approved the water use if the water is returned (probably as sludge) to the river.

The whole project was secretive because the public should not know that their land will be ravaged in a manner not to have been conceived by General Sherman. The Tar will be an open sewer in Pitt County, the City of Washington and Beaufort County. The effects on the Pamlico River will reach beyond Belhaven. The access roads are inadequate. The air and noise pollution will be a wonder to behold.

I think the public must know the total impact of this sordid plot. A pristine river and its surrounding land of indescribable beauty must be saved.

Let this company locate in the Greenville Industrial Park. Or, better, let the state, county and city governments urge the company to locate in Alabama or Georgia, where there are alternate sites.

Strength For Today

REASON, RATIONALISM
Rationalism is the enemy of religion. This does not mean that reason is the enemy of religion. There is nothing in the world more reasonable than a sound religious faith. But rationalism is the enemy of religion because it attempts to explain all the mysteries of religion by the processes of the mind.

This cannot be done. There is a certain mystery about religion arising from the fact that it deals with unseen, spiritual values, which cannot be apprehended by any of the five senses. The rationalist, who in his pride starts pruning the Bible and the creeds, slashing off a belief here and casting aside a statement there because these things do not fit into the pattern of his thinking, is a puny little egotist shaking his fist at the stars.

Once we accept the basic contentions of sound religion regarding God and man, we find that the whole religious system of thought welcomes the advance of reason.

Majority Is For Prayers

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — Although the courts over the last two decades have consistently struck down efforts to permit Bible reading and prayers in the nation's public schools, the American people just as consistently have voted in favor of allowing religious observances in the schools.

In the latest nationwide Gallup survey, three persons in four (76 percent) said they favor an amendment to the Constitution that would permit prayers to be said in the public schools.

Interestingly, the public has not budged on this issue, despite the fact that the courts have consistently opposed any effort to breach the constitutional separation of church and state. For example, when the issue was put to voters in a Gallup Poll in 1974, 77 percent said they would favor an amendment to the Constitution that would permit public school prayers.

These findings are consistent with still earlier poll results based on comparable questions. In a survey conducted shortly after the U.S. Supreme Court's 1963 ruling that religious exercises in public schools are illegal, 70 percent of the U.S. public expressed disapproval of the ruling, while 24 percent approved.

Here is the question asked and the national findings: "Do you favor or oppose an amendment to the Constitution that would permit prayers to be said in the public schools?"

LATEST	Amendment Permitting Public School Prayers?
	Favor	Oppose	No opinion
1974	76%	15%	9%
	77	17	6

But Most Say Home Is Key Training Ground
While the public favors prayers in schools, the prevailing opinion among all groups and all faiths in the U.S. is that the home is more important than either the church or schools in the religious training of children.

A 1979 Gallup survey showed 75 percent naming the home, 16 percent the church and only 3 percent naming the schools as most important to the religious and spiritual development of a child.

Various Groups Continue To Challenge '63 Ruling
Although many religious organizations concur with the Supreme Court, including the National Council of Churches and the U.S. Catholic Conference, various groups and individuals continue to challenge the 1963 ruling.

In an effort to circumvent the Supreme Court decision, Massachusetts passed a law permitting students and teachers voluntarily to offer prayer in public schools, allowing those who did not wish to participate to abstain. But last month the Massachusetts Supreme Court ruled this law unconstitutional.

About a dozen states have laws that provide for a period of silent meditation in the public schools and these laws have not been challenged.

On a national level, Congress has turned back legislative proposals for school prayer nearly every year since the Supreme Court's 1963 ruling. Most recently Sen. Jesse Helms (R-N.C.) and Rep. Philip Crane (R-Ill.) sponsored

A constitutional amendment now before the House Judiciary Committee that would deny the Supreme Court jurisdiction over prayer in schools and leave such decisions to the states.

Analysis of the survey results by demographic groups shows that those most in favor include women, non-whites, persons with only a grade school education and older adults.

Interestingly, little difference is found between the views of Protestants (82 percent favor an amendment) and Catholics (77 percent do so).

The views of the 57-year-old wife of a television store owner reflect those of many in the survey: "It's important for everyone to have a faith of some kind, so we should do everything we can to encourage religion."

A 54-year-old homeowner who also favors a new amendment commented: "Let's face it — prayer in school is the only religion some children experience."

A housewife in her 20s commented: "I think it's awful that children aren't allowed to say prayers. Those that don't want to pray — let them be silent."

Typical of the views of those opposed to a constitutional amendment to permit school prayers are those of a middle-aged business executive: "In a democracy, it is vital that a particular religion not be imposed on children. Religious training belongs in the home."

Stretch Drive?

By WALTER R. MEARS

AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) —

The stretch drive for the Democratic and Republican presidential nominations may not stretch very far. Both contests could be over before the last votes of the long primary season are cast in California June 3.

President Carter and Ronald Reagan both are in positions to gain nominating majorities before that last and biggest of the 36 primary elections.

The numbers now indicate that Reagan may pass the 998 votes he needs to gain the Republican nomination May 27. To do it, he will have to win big in presidential primaries that now appear to be leaning his way, and run close to challenger George Bush in Bush's best territory.

The most promising primaries for Bush appear to be Maryland, on May 13; and Oregon and Michigan on May 20. Former President Gerald R. Ford beat Reagan in those states in the 1976 GOP campaign.

Among them, the three states will have 141 votes at the Republican National Convention. Reagan probably could wrap up his majority by winning about 60 delegates even in losing all three states.

There are 90 delegates to be won in the Nebraska, Kentucky, Idaho and Nevada primaries, and he is a good bet to win the overwhelming share of those. In addition, caucuses and conventions will swell the Reagan count in seven more states before the

Do We Want Inflation-Cure?

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) —

Undergoing a recession without correcting the causes is akin to having the surgeon decide, after he had cut you up, that he'd take a chance and not remove the tumor after all.

That, or its equivalent, is the warning now broadcast by economists who fear that if we fail to correct some obvious and serious ailments during the recession we will condemn ourselves to a repeat performance.

Among the first to be listed is the psychology of inflation. If people continue to expect prices to rise, the economists declare, prices will rise.

They'll rise because people's actions will make them rise.

While consumers often are victimized by the poor decisions of those higher up, they do exert tremendous influences themselves. The past few years provide examples of how inflation fears induce more inflation.

—People buy in advance of their needs in order to beat price increases. This puts added pressure on the marketplace and the availability of goods. Prices react upward.

—They borrow more heavily, knowing that the dollars with which they repay will be cheaper dollars. The borrowed money may be channeled into purchases that otherwise might not be made. Again, pressure on prices.

—They cut their rate of saving, reasoning that money left unspent declines in value. This leaves less money available for lending on inflation-reducing, efficiency producing capital spending projects.

—Management and labor demand higher wages in anticipation of higher costs, feeding the upward spiral until it becomes a tornado.

Even if the consumer is afloat with confidence, however, he and she can't do much about prices if productivity doesn't grow. If the efficiency of production falls, inflation ensues.

This lagging productivity is said by some to be the greatest challenge in U.S. history. Many observers also say it is the most ignored challenge. Factories are outdated by technological or environmental change. They must be updated. Where's the money to do it?

Such an economic tumor seems almost too much to handle, but the one bright aspect is that if you improve one part of the problem you begin improving all the others.

The question now is whether the tumor is going to be treated, so long as the patient has been opened up. Or whether we'll just sew him back up as sick as he was before?

3rd Place For Riding Camel

DENVER (AP) — Donna Kehler put on a bikini, climbed aboard a camel and rode around a downtown plaza for an hour singing "Dixie" and throwing chocolate drops to bystanders — all to win third prize in a radio station contest.

Denver radio station KIMN had asked its listeners what they would do for a pound of gold.

The winner is going to cut his car in half. The runner-up must sit in a bathtub full of beer while playing cymbals and a trombone.

Mrs. Kehler's stunt Wednesday was good for a trip to Mexico.

She shrieked when she got a look at Clyde the camel, but the contest promoters made her carry through her stunt. Afterward, she said she'd do it again.

Mrs. Kehler's husband also was a good sport about the whole thing, although his task was somewhat less glamorous. Bob Kehler, an Air Force sergeant, was sent to stand behind Clyde with a shovel.

Views On Influence Of Religion In U.S.

The overwhelming public support found for prayer in the public schools is related to the view of many that religion is losing its influence in American society.

In a recent survey, 46 percent feel that religion is losing its influence on life in the U.S., while 35 percent think that religion is increasing its influence. Another 11 percent see little change.

The question and national results: "At the present time, do you think religion as a whole is increasing its influence on American life or losing its influence?"

So barring a miracle, it's only a question of time. Bush would have to score a succession of startling upsets to keep the race alive into June.

Carter now has 1,306 of the 1,666 Democratic delegates he needs for renomination. There are 1,264 yet to be chosen.

Carter needs 360 delegates, or 28 percent the rest of the way. Under the Democrats' proportional representation rules, he can't miss that share.

But with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy likely to show strength in states like Maryland, for 59 Democratic delegates, and Oregon, for 39, the president probably cannot reach a Democratic majority until the final day of primary elections.

But he, like Reagan, probably can do it without California. California has 306 Democratic delegates, but its Democratic primary is proportional. So even if Kennedy defeated Carter there, the president would share in the delegates.

There are eight Democratic primary elections that day, apportioning a total of 696 nominating votes.

The likelihood is that Carter will reach majority strength with delegates won in New Jersey, which has 113, and Ohio, with 161.

The Democratic rules do bind delegates, meaning a Carter majority could not be shaken — unless the convention itself voted to let delegates change their minds. The Kennedy camp has been talking about such a rules change, but there's not much chance it will happen.

UNUSUAL STERLING PIECES NOW WORTH MORE!

A NEW WAY TO PAY!

It has become apparent to us that lovely, unusual sterling pieces are worth more than broken common pieces. We have adopted a new pricing policy which takes into consideration the type, condition, variety, brand and pattern of the piece as well as its weight. We have several buyers and collectors who are especially interested in highly decorative, ornamental sterling pieces in good condition and we will pay more for such beautiful, unusual pieces than we do for scrap silver.

Do you have a Sterling evening bag, mirror, or brush? These things are worth cash at Coin & Ring Man.

Did you know that many cigarette cases, picture frames, and tie clasp are marked Sterling and are valuable?

Of course, many other things are Sterling too. Identification bracelets, baby's teething rings, pill boxes, money clips, lipstick holders, etc. If they're marked Sterling, we buy them.

TURN YOUR GOLD INTO CASH

Do you have an old fraternity or sorority pin, a service pin or an employment pin you don't wear anymore? Many of these are marked 10 Kt. Gold. Look to see if its marked 10K on the back. If it is, Coin & Ring Man will pay you cash for it.

Bring in your: dental gold, wedding bands, class rings, ring mountings, necklaces, bracelets and anything marked 10K, 14K, 18K, or 22K gold.

Chestnut Will Seek Run-Off

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — William Chestnut, runner-up in the error-plagued Democratic primary for state auditor, said today he would request a runoff against leading vote-getter Ed Renfrow and would "seek every legal remedy" if he is denied that opportunity by the state Board of Elections. Chestnut, in a news conference, said J.E.B. Davis made a "honest mistake" when he ran in the Democratic primary for auditor while actually being a registered Republican. None of the three candidates for auditor won a majority in the primary, but the 157,451 votes Davis received while running third have been thrown into question by the revelation Wednesday that he was actually a registered Republican.

"Maybe J.E.B. Davis got a lot of support I would have gotten without him in the race...there's no way I feel I could be denied a runoff," he said.

Elections will meet May 19 to settle the dispute. Brock said he believed "prevailing legal opinion" favored invalidating the Davis vote, thus making Renfrow the outright winner. But he said he believed the board favored allowing a runoff to be held.

If a runoff is held in the auditor's race, it will be the only runoff primary needed for statewide office. Chestnut said the additional cost to the state of the runoff would be well spent by holding the second vote.

Grant Garwood A Psychiatrist

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, who faces court-martial on charges of desertion in Vietnam and collaboration with the enemy, took the stand at a pre-trial hearing Thursday but his testimony was limited to questions about his mental state.

The defense put the 34-year-old Marine on the stand for the first time in his case as they argued several motions, including a successful motion for delay of the trial.

Garwood's testimony was to support a defense motion that a specific Navy psychiatrist be assigned to the defense team.

Garwood, who spent nearly 14 years in Vietnam, said he needed to talk with psychiatrists about the mental burden of his experiences, but was unable to "open up" to doctors.

"I need an outlet, someone I can be comfortable with," said Garwood, who returned to the United States in March 1979.

"I have talked to military psychiatrists but from past experiences, I can't open up to them," said Garwood, who was on the stand for only a few minutes.

Col. R.E. Switzer, presiding judge, ruled that defense lawyers could work with the Navy psychiatrist they sought, but he said prosecutors could have access to that doctor, also.

Garwood's lawyers obtained a five-week delay in the court-martial after arguing that they needed more time to prepare.

"We want to try this case only one time. We want a smooth trial and Pfc. Garwood wants to get the issue settled and continue with his life," said defense lawyer John Lowe.

Selection of a military panel to judge Garwood had been set for May 22 but Switzer postponed it until June 30.

Switzer declined to rule on two defense motions, deferring judgment on those issues to Brig. Gen. David B. Barker, commanding general at Camp Lejeune.

Those two motions sought government money for private medical and psychiatric treatment, and money to pay legal fees.

Also at the hearing, prosecutors agreed to give the defense a list of prosecution witnesses. Prosecutors said they plan to call about 15 witnesses during the court-martial.

Lowe, a new lawyer on the case, was officially added to Garwood's defense team Thursday and the Charlottesville, Va., attorney argued the defense motions.

Small Advance In Price Index

By GLENN RITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation's iron grip loosened in April, as wholesale prices rose only 0.5 percent, the smallest increase in 11 months, the Labor Department reported today.

The slowdown was due largely to a 2.8 percent decline in wholesale prices of food, the sharpest drop since June 1974 when prices fell 3.3 percent. In March, food prices shot up 1.1 percent.

April's overall 0.5 percent rise in wholesale, or producer, prices compares with a 1.4 percent surge in March and a 1.5 percent increase in both January and February, the Labor Department said.

At last month's pace — the lowest since May 1979 — the composite inflation rate at the producer level would be only 6.2 percent, about one-third the rate of recent months.

The clear slowdown in wholesale prices occurred as the U.S. economy is entering a recession. Unemployment last month shot up from 6.2 percent to 7 percent.

Energy prices went up 3.8 percent last month—a pace far less than the 7 percent-plus figures of February and March—as last year's OPEC oil price increases rippled through the U.S. economy.

Gasoline prices rose 4.3 percent, compared with an 8.5 percent acceleration in March, the Labor Department said. Fuel oil went up 3 percent in April after a 6.3 percent rise the month before.

The sharp drop in finished food products was caused by sharply lower prices for beef and veal — down 8.7 percent; and poultry, 5 percent lower than in March, the department said.

Prices also turned down after advancing in March for eggs, fish, milled rice, sugar, roasted coffee and fresh fruits.

The price of all finished goods, except food and energy products, went up 0.6 percent last month, somewhat more than the 0.4 percent increase in March, the department said.

A 9.8 percent decline in gold jewelry prices and a 27.7 percent drop in household flatware prices were more than offset by increases in passenger cars, cosmetics, pharmacy items, nonalcoholic beverages, household furniture and mobile homes.

Economists watch wholesale prices carefully because they indicate the direction of consumer prices in the next few months.

From April 1979 to last month, wholesale prices have risen 13.5 percent.

Warns Of New Pyramid Scheme

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Attorney General Rufus Edmisten cautioned Thursday that a "Circle of Gold" pyramid scheme was being distributed illegally in North Carolina.

The plan offers compensation to those who introduce others into the program. Each participant pays for the opportunity to join.

Such plans are illegal in the state, Edmisten said.

U.S. Relations With Big Oil Suppliers Strained

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

The deterioration in U.S. relations with Iran, Libya and now Saudi Arabia has put the United States at odds with three of its major oil suppliers, highlighting the nation's sensitivity to foreign pressure on the energy nerve.

dependence on foreign crude increased from 18.7 percent in 1973 to almost 36 percent in 1977.

Since then it has leveled off, and even declined slightly to 34 percent in 1979.

But U.S. diplomatic relations with Iran have been broken off; those with Libya have been strained; those with Saudi Arabia, merely irritated so far.

The range of problems — the seizing of hostages, the rejection of diplomats, the scheduling of a TV film — show how fragile are the relationships on which U.S. oil supplies depend.

The United States has been doing without Iranian oil for the last six months, since militants seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran Nov. 4 and took the Americans there captives. President Carter then ordered a halt to oil imports from Iran, to free U.S. responses to the situation from that complication.

The nation could probably do without oil from Libya — which provided 3.5 percent of the United States' total oil supply last year — if Washington's current efforts to expel four Libyans were to bring on the loss of those imports.

The State Department has alleged that the four men were responsible for a campaign of intimidation and harassment against dissident Libyan students in the United States, a campaign ordered by Libyan dictator Moammar Khadafy.

Currently, there are no U.S. diplomats in Libya.

Prodded by high fuel prices, tight money, a mild winter and a growing recession, American consumers and industries have cut oil consumption substantially, leaving refiners and suppliers with exceptionally large stockpiles that would cushion the impact of a small import cut-off.

The loss of Saudi Arabian oil, however, would hurt more.

Saudi Arabia is the largest single foreign supplier of oil to the United States, providing 7.3 percent of total U.S. oil needs in 1979.

SERVICES PLANNED
Evangelist Jean Marshall of Baltimore, Md. will present the second of two services at Fleming Chapel Church Friday at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Well Runs Dry In Town Of Moncure

MONCURE, N.C. (AP) — Water supplies to many homes and businesses in Moncure have been cut off since Monday, causing one health clinic to close.

The water shortage developed Monday afternoon when Carlise Holder, president of the East Chatham Water Corp., cut off the distribution system because, he said, a long spell of dry weather had depleted the system's chief well.

Some of the subscribers to the nonprofit, member-owned water system claimed its officials were to blame.

Meanwhile, the State Department of Human Resources dispatched engineers to the Chatham County community to help residents avoid health problems.

Holder said the system's chief well dropped 45 percent in production Sunday and Monday. A pump at a smaller well shorted out several days earlier.

Not all residents of the town subscribe to the system. Some, such as the Moncure Health Clinic, have their own wells.

But Wanda E. Gosson, manager of the clinic, said that well went dry when the water system dug a well nearby recently. "They must have hit the same vein that was feeding our well," she said.

The clinic was forced to go on the water system to get enough water for daily use.

An emergency holding tank at the clinic was low when the cutoff came Monday, and the clinic was shut down Tuesday.

"It's kind of bad to turn away patients who are sick, yet you don't want to see any patients if you don't have water to wash up with," Ms. Gosson said.

Pope, Anglican Leader Meet

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer
ACCRA, Ghana (AP) — The paths of Pope John Paul II and the new Archbishop of Canterbury, spiritual leaders of the world's 720 million Roman Catholics and 65 million Anglicans, crossed in West Africa today and they met for the first time.

Archbishop Robert Runcie called on the Roman Catholic pontiff at the residence of the Catholic archbishop of Accra. They met in private for 50 minutes, but details were not immediately announced.

The meeting of the two men whose churches are trying to draw closer together after more than four centuries of division, was arranged when it was found their pastoral visits to Africa coincided. Runcie, who came to Africa to inaugurate a new diocese in Zaire, said before leaving London that it would be "an informal, personal and simple meeting which would not be possible in Europe." The last three archbishops of Canterbury all met with the popes of their time in Rome. But Runcie, who was enthroned as primate of the Church of England and leader of the worldwide Anglican Communion on March 25, said he and the pope wanted to break away from the formalities which meeting on their home ground required. "It is good that the pope and the new archbishop of Canterbury should have their very first meeting not in Rome or London but far from the old rivalries of Europe — in Africa, a continent full of new life and energy," the Anglican leader said. "Old disputes can look much less significant when measured against the need for all the Christian churches in Africa to combine their faith and resources in an undivided effort to let Christ be seen and heard." After the meeting, Runcie was flying on to Zaire while the pope was taking a helicopter upcountry to Kumasi to celebrate Mass and meet with the king of the Ashantis, Ghana's biggest tribe. Zaire was the pope's first stop on his six-nation, 10-day tour of Africa, which began last Friday. He also visited the Congo Republic and Kenya before flying across the continent to Ghana, a former British colony on the under side of the West African bulge. Meeting with a group of non-Catholic Christian leaders after his arrival Thursday, the Roman Catholic pontiff said he feels everything possible should be done to eliminate differences among the various Christian churches. His schedule Thursday also included an open-air Mass attended by 50,000 at which he baptized 10 persons and confirmed 10 others and a meeting at the palm-shaded presidential palace with President Hilla Limann. Almost half of Ghana's 10 million people are Christians but only slightly more than one million are Roman Catholics. The non-Christians include a million Moslems. The pope will also visit Upper Volta and the Ivory Coast before returning to Rome on Monday.

Disaster Loan Deadline

The May 23 deadline for filing a physical disaster loan application with the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) is approaching for victims of the winter storm which struck eastern North Carolina in early March, the SBA noted. Larry Cherry, SBA district director, reported that over 200 applications have been distributed in the disaster area, but only 32 have been returned to the Charlotte office. Cherry urged disaster victims to complete their applications and return them as soon as possible. According to Cherry, virtually anyone who received damage to their home, business or farm located in Duplin, Lenoir, Sampson, Beaufort, Dare, Onslow or adjacent counties is eligible for an application. He pointed out, however, that applicants must be able to demonstrate repayment ability and meet other SBA requirements to qualify for the loan. Cherry said that victims who have questions concerning the program may receive help by calling the SBA's toll-free disaster line, 1-800-532-0368. Week Proclaimed By Mayor

May 11-17 has been proclaimed by Mayor Don McGlohon as Transportation Week and Friday, May 16 as National Defense Transportation Week in Greenville in connection with the national observance.

"The growth and development of America and our great city have depended and will depend greatly on an efficient, comprehensive transportation system," the mayor said.

According to McGlohon, the nation's "transportation system continues to provide the avenues of communication and mass distribution facilities so vital to the social and economic well-being of the people of this city as well as the nation and the world."

He said "it is fitting during...1980 that we should recognize the benefits the transportation system has provided to the development of our society and the progress of all citizens."

McGlohon urged citizens to recognize the role the modern transportation system plays in daily life and in the national defense.

Class Hears About France

Sixth grade students in Mrs. Angelia Phillips' social studies class at Wellcome Middle School have been studying the Republic of France. As part of their studies, they recently were visited by Mrs. Selina Davenport Forbes.

Mrs. Forbes, a retired public schools teacher, is a former chairperson of the Rose High School Foreign Language Department. She has traveled extensively in France.

She told the students about France's history, its cities, its landmarks, and its educational system, and taught them a French song and some French language.

As a token of appreciation, the students presented Mrs. Forbes a gold bracelet.

Biggest Cash Prize To Scientist-Theologian

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Science, which in its erroneous presumptions has downgraded religion, may by more mature, fuller insights reinforce it, says a scientist-theologian whose achievements have won the world's biggest cash prize.

"Science is both the cause of the problem and the answer to it," says Ralph Wendell Burhoe of Chicago, the first American winner of the $200,000 Templeton Foundation Prize for progress in religion. "As is often the case, science makes mistakes in the beginning, and it indeed has been a factor in diminishing religious belief for several centuries," Burhoe says. But religion can be strengthened again, he adds, by a more grown-up science.

"The solution is not in some constructive theology or philosophy cutting religion off from science, but in bringing them back together in a more truthful way, more faithful to the best in both." Burhoe, 68, a long-time leader in academic organizations exploring links between religion and science, is to be presented with the 1980 Templeton Prize in ceremonies Tuesday in London by Britain's Prince Philip.

The annual prize, established in 1972 by American investment counsellor and United Presbyterian layman John M. Templeton for strides in religious understanding, exceeds the Nobel prizes, now about $190,000.

Burhoe, professor emeritus at Chicago's Meadville Theological School and founder-editor of the internationally influential Zygon: Journal of Religion and Science, says each field has long talked mostly to itself.

To bring them into working relationship, he says he has had to use a technique of terminology similar to that of St. Paul, who resorted to Greek philosophy to explain Christian belief to the Greeks of Athens. "Like St. Paul," Burhoe writes, "I am forced to speak two languages: one that is understood by the original tradition in Jerusalem (the theological community), the other that is understood in the secular world of Athens (the scientific community)." Burhoe, of American Baptist background and now of Unitarian affiliation, sees the theory of human evolution, once considered the enemy of religion, as actually demonstrating the inevitable necessity of religion.

"Religion is basic to the evolutionary emergence of civilized humanity," he says. He says that accumulating knowledge from science itself, especially in the fields of physics, biology, anthropology and psychology, are providing new underpinnings for the essential role of religion to civilized humanity.

When Souls Communicate

When souls communicate — it's like prayer. There may never be a word spoken . . . just a sigh, a wish, a hope, a longing. A child trying to express some simple feeling to its Mother. Mother trying to express her devotion to her child.

All prayer is founded on the idea that God loves us and cares about the things that affect us. Jesus taught us to pray "Our Father . . ." He wanted men to see God's love on the parental level.

When you feel the need to pray, reach out with your heart to God. You may not be able to find words. Yet He hears, He understands those deep feelings we find hard to express.

In church our efforts to communicate with Him are strengthened by the fact that many others are praying with us. They need Him just as much as we do. And we need their longings, their hopes and wishes and feelings to help us express our own. Join us in prayer at your local church or synagogue.

Farmville Bd. Questioned On CP&L Refund Action

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
FARMVILLE — Farmville Commissioners were questioned during the regular Town Board meeting held here Tuesday night by several citizens about their earlier action to retain a part of a Carolina Power and Light refund for use in upgrading the town's electrical distribution system at a later time.

Mayor Linwood Mercer said the vote on the matter, taken in a call meeting, was a 3-2 one.

"The money I pay in taxes is yours to do with as you see fit," citizen Al Walker commented to the audience, "but that overcharge money is mine and I don't think it should be used at your discretion, whatever the purpose."
Citizen Ann Vick, also questioned the retaining of a portion of the refund, saying that she is a rural customer of Farmville's electrical system. "I didn't elect you," she said, "and I don't think you should be using my money to improve your system."

Commissioner David Stowe said the action by the Commissioners was taken to hopefully save the retail electricity customers' money in the future as prices continue to rise.
It was pointed out that most of the refund checks have already been written. Finance Officer Margie Tripp said the remainder should be processed within a few days. "Is it too late," citizen Donald Walston asked, "to get up a petition on this situation?"

"It's never too late to voice your opinion," Mayor Mercer answered, adding that as long as the held-back money is unexpended, other action can be taken.

A public hearing held on the town's application for federal Community Development Block Grant funds brought no comment from citizens. It was explained by Town Administrator Patrick Thomas and Assistant Town Administrator Edwin Thorne.

Following public hearings, resolutions were adopted to undertake improvements to Mandarin Drive and East Moore Street.

The town administrator was authorized to sell a 1977 Chevrolet Nova, a 1974 one-and-one-half-ton truck and a 1966 two-ton truck.

A cable television franchise ordinance was passed. No decision was reached concerning conversion of the town's refuse collection system to roll-out. It was indicated that this action may come during a call meeting later in the month as the decision needs to be made so it will not delay budget-making.

A bid was awarded to Duke Buick-Pontiac here for a 1977 Nova to be used as a police patrol vehicle. The cost, including a $1,000 trade-in allowance, is to be $5,983.35.

Adjustments were made in municipal fees — fees relating to utilities services, electric rental lights, recreation food concessions, inspection and development review fees.

The Commissioners approved some ground layout changes that would allow the creation of some additional lots in each of the town's three cemeteries.

The town's agreement with McDavid Associates Inc. engineering firm was revised with most hourly rates going up $5 per hour. The monthly retainage fee will remain at $200 a month.

The finance committee was asked to meet with representatives of the Chamber of Commerce concerning the continuing problem of parking lot leases not being funded by downtown merchants as was pledged.

A preliminary decision was made agreeing for the town to take over the Housing Authority electric system once it is modernized.

It was agreed that two diesel generators at the electric plant may be sold if the small one brings at least $5,000; the large one at least $8,000.

Boaters' Concern

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Nearly three-fourths of some 3,000 persons who responded to state energy questionnaires expressed concern about restrictions on pleasure boating.

However, most of those responding said they were willing to comply with gasoline rationing, give up some business trips and take a shorter work week.

The questionnaires were published in newspapers by the North Carolina Energy Division, which used the answers to make these recommendations to the federal Department of Energy.

—Don't ban pleasure boating on weekends.
—Let state service station operators — not federal government officials — administer any gasoline rationing.

—Encourage but don't force employers to reduce work-related travel, provide vanpools and subsidize employee use of mass transit.
—Outline specifically when the president can put the emergency conservation plan into effect.

—As a last resort, use four-day school weeks and a vehicle sticker plan limiting days on which cars can be driven to cut motor-vehicle use.

Fullilove Program On Multiplication

The first annual "Multiplication Blast-Off" program was held on Wednesday, May 7 at Agnes Fullilove Community School. The program was conducted during the homeroom period every day for a span of six weeks.

Flash and drills, games and other activities were an integral part of the program. A test was given each Friday on the multiplication tables studied during the week. As a student achieved a perfect score of 100, his name was placed on the special bulletin board designed for that purpose. As an additional perfect score was made, a star went up beside their names for recognition.

At the end of the six week period a homeroom multiplication bee was conducted. Two winners were selected from each homeroom by means of elimination.

There were a total of 22 semi-finalists. From the 22, ten finalists were chosen to take part in the "Multiplication Blast-Off" grand bee. The ten finalists were: Vivian Ellis, Charles Taft, Gary Smith, Lona Williams, Mary Gay, Curtis Daniels, Jimmy Johnson, Kenneth Moore, Janice Hollis and Cassandra Hollis.

The 12 who achieved semi-finalists status were: Mary Ward, Sam Paige, David Smith, Lester Johnson, Willie Bridges, Johnny Hardy, Shirley Ellis, Tim Harper, Tyrone Batts, Carl Perkins, Boyd Paige, and Julia Lunsford.

Sorority Chapter Meets

The Alpha Nu Chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa, the professional sorority for women educators met at the Ramada Inn recently.

A special tribute was made to two Alpha Nu sisters, Ann Byrd and Faye Dempsey, who served as state officers this past biennium. Two new members were accepted as pledges for the sorority. They are Vickie H. Dixon and Joanne W. Jones.

A slate of new officers for the 1980-82 biennium was named and approved. They are: President, Barbara Parker; Vice-President, Shirley Moore; Secretary, Martha Averett; Corresponding Secretary, Peggy Congleton; Treasurer, Leila Heath; Historian, Edith Barnhill; Chaplains, Sara Perkins and Carol Brewer; and Sergeants-at-Arms, Linda Whitehurst and Mary Irma Moore.

The next Alpha Nu meeting will be June 5.

In addition to the multiplication event, the art department sponsored a "Blast-Off" poster contest. Top award winner in this category was Charles Taft. Other winners were: Laura Arrington, James Staton, Wazella Ervin, Joyce Trimble, Edna Nobles, Kenneth Moore, Mary Leggett, Carl Perkins, and Curtis Daniels.

Mrs. Brenda Jones was official caller for the competition, assisted by Hap Maxwell as official timekeeper. Diana Pearson presented the awards, and Janet Grimsley was mistress of ceremonies.

Bruins Stall Rose Hopes, 6-1

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
WILSON — Rose High School's Rampants went to Wilson last night with the chance to wrap up second place. All they needed was a victory over Wilson Beddingfield, and it was all over. Northern Nash had been beaten by Rocky Mount, 4-2, earlier in the day, eliminating the Knights from any chance at the spot. That left only Beddingfield as a threat to the Rampants' hopes of claiming the second spot and the one remaining post-season playoff berth. But Beddingfield had another idea. It liked the idea of winning, and threatening the Rampants with being knocked out of the playoffs themselves. So, by the time it was all over, Beddingfield had embarrassed the Rampants, 6-1, handing them their second straight loss and their third in the last four games. Oddly enough, the lone Rose win in that streak came against Rocky Mount, which has now clinched the title. Beddingfield pitcher Doug Godwin, who improved his record to 3-2, blended masterful curve balls with fast balls to set the Rampants down without little noise. He fanned 12 Rampants, walked just two and saw the only run scored against him recorded as unearned. He allowed just six hits, only two of them coming in the same inning.

For Rose, it was another frustrating night as errors continued to plague them, and their bats were uncomfortably silent. "We're really not playing very well right now," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "We're not hitting and it's carrying over into our fielding. We're getting the effort, but things are just not going right for us at this time."

Vincent doesn't believe that his Rampants are washed up, however. "Our guys won't quit. We can come back next week." Vincent also praised the pitching of Godwin. "I thought he pitched better against us than anyone we faced this year."

The Rampants still are in second place, with an 8-4 record, while Beddingfield is next with a 7-5 mark. Rose must win one of their two remaining games to clinch a tie for second, and, depending on Beddingfield's play, may have to win both to clinch the berth. Rose faces Bertie away and Northern Nash at home in the two games. Beddingfield grabbed the lead in the first inning, scoring an unearned run. David Lawhorn led off, reaching on an error. He was sacrificed up, and scored when Mack Smith singled to left. Rose, after leaving a man at second in the second, had to come up with some fine play to get out of another jam in the bottom of the frame. Beddingfield put two men on via a double and an error before the side was retired.

The Rampants finally tied it up with one in the third. With two away, Will Barret beat out an infield hit, and moved all the way to third when the ball was overthrown at first. He scored when Mike Campbell singled. Campbell stole second and was awarded third when he was interfered with on a passed ball. But he died there, and Rose was to leave men standing the rest of the way. Kenny Barnes was thrown out trying to move from second to third on an infield grounder to short, and Todd Galloway was thrown out at the plate, trying to score from first on an error in later action.

Beddingfield went back ahead in the bottom of the third. Smith opened with a walk and Larry Thompson ran for him. Donald Williams singled and Graham Whitley walked, loading the bases. With two away, Tim Parrish hit one into the ground just in front of the plate, but by the time the ball was reclaimed, it was too late to get anyone as Thompson scored for a 2-1 lead.

The Bruins added another in the fourth. Lawhorn reached on a one-out error, and Godwin was safe on an unsuccessful

WILSON — Rose High School's tennis team captured the team title at the Sectional Tennis Tournament held in Wilson the past two days. Rose sent four singles players and one doubles team into the event, and accumulated 45 points to easily edge out Northeastern which was second with 32, mostly on the play of Tom Poston, who won the singles championship. Jeff Quinn led the Rose scoring. Seeded number three, Quinn avenged a regular season loss by upsetting the number two seed, Tony Johnson of Rocky Mount before losing in the finals to Poston, 6-1, 6-1.

Jenkins and Fulgum of Goldsboro. By advancing as far as they did, Quinn, along with Farley and Elmer, qualified for play next week in the Regional tournament in Kinston. Summary: First Round: Quinn (bye); S. Bailey (B); L. Talbert defeated Benji Cahoon (Mattamuskeet), 6-1, 6-1; B. Singleton defeated Scott Elmer (P. Finals: Tom Poston (Northeastern) defeated Quinn, 6-1, 6-1.

Rocky Mount finished third and Goldsboro was fourth. The championship was the first ever for the Rampants, who snapped a seven-year winning streak by Wilson Fike. In singles play, Scott Bailey advanced to the quarters before being turned back by Johnson in three sets. Larry Talbert advanced to the fourth round where number four seed David McGee of Rocky Mount, ousted him. McGee had previously defeated Bert Singleton of Rose in the second round.

Ayden-Grifton Wins ECC Golf

STANHOPE — Southern Nash won the golf match but Ayden-Grifton came away with the roses. The Firebirds Thursday outlasted the Chargers, 308 to 309, while also defeating Farmville Central (322) and D.H. Conley (422), but with its second place finish Ayden-Grifton captured the Eastern Carolina Conference golf crown. The Jaguars, who had led for most of the year, finished second while Southern Nash wound up third. Evan Bass led Southern Nash to Thursday's win with a 74, followed by Greg Jones' 77 and Randy Edwards' 78. Jay Lynn shot a 79 for the Firebirds. Ayden-Grifton was topped by Warren Agee and Alan Daughtry, both of whom shot 74. John McDougald had a 75 while Randy Taylor was at 86. Robby Jones paced Farmville with a 75, followed by Gary Hobgood and Bert Warren, both of whom had 81. Jeff Cutler had an 85. D.H. Conley was led by Eric Sawyer's 96. Leo Van Buren shot a 103 while Robert Adams was at 110 and Troy Baugher was at 111. The All-Conference selections were named following Thursday's play and Farmville's Robby Jones led the way. Jones was the low stroke golfer for the season followed by Southern Nash's Evan Bass and then Gary Hobgood. Others making the team were Ayden-Grifton's Warren Agee, John McDougald and Alan Daughtry. All members of the ECC's all-conference team travel to Jacksonville Monday to play in the sectionals.

Rampants Win Division I Golf

Rose High School's golf team captured another Division I golf championship yesterday, winning the league's post-season tournament by two strokes. The Rampants finished the afternoon with a team score of 313, while Hunt finished in the runner-up spot with 315. It was the closest anyone came during the entire season to handing the Rampants a defeat. Northeastern was a distant third with 344, followed by Beddingfield and Hunt, tied for fourth with 389. Northern Nash was sixth with 398, followed by Rocky Mount with 411. J. Williams of Hunt captured the individual title with a score of 74, two over par. Pat Dye Jr. of Rose finished second with a 76, followed by Davis Lane of Hunt and Glenn Bulliner of Northeastern, both with 78.

Connors, Dibbs Ousted From Tourney

NEW YORK (AP) — It wasn't a fun day for the losers at the Tournament of Champions. It wasn't a barrel of laughs for the winners either.

Heavy rains that soaked the HarTru clay courts at the West Side Tennis Club caused all kinds of problems Thursday at the $500,000 event for winners of pro tournaments in the last 12 months. The poor conditions made for mediocre tennis. They also made for the elimination of second-seed Jimmy Connors and No. 4 Eddie Dibbs.

Connors trailed 4-6, 1-2 to unseeded Vijay Amritraj of India when play was suspended Wednesday night by rain. When they resumed Thursday, Connors rallied to take the second set 6-4. But the combination of Amritraj's steady, patient game and the spongy turf did in the world's No. 3 player, who won the World Championship Tennis finals last Sunday in Dallas.

"I played like a beginner in the second game of the third set," said Connors, whose serve was broken in that game after he'd broken Amritraj to open the final set. They traded games until 3-3, then Amritraj won the last three games for his third victory in eight tries against Connors.

"I hit the ball solid: solid wide or solid into the net," added Connors. "The ball was heavy and the court was a little thick."

Amritraj had few complaints.

"Basically it is difficult to hit winners all day long on a surface like that," he said. "If I kept hitting the ball back, then come in at right time, I'd win the points."

"He would direct the whole point, like a ball machine coming out of center court. But the difference was I got to play a match on this court and he didn't because he had a bye (in the first round). At the crucial stages of the game, it's tough to feel confident unless you've faced the situation on the court."

Amritraj had added incentive for his victory, which moved him into today's quarterfinals against fifth-seed Victor Pecci of Paraguay.

"My parents came all the way from Madras to see me play," he noted. "They came to Dallas and I lost in the first round last week. They walked out after the fifth game. I just wanted to give them something; I just wanted to win for them."

"My father stayed the whole match, which is unbelievable because he gets so nervous," added Amritraj. "The last time my father watched me, he couldn't stand it. They had to take him to the hospital after the match with high blood pressure."

McEnroe may have been suffering from the same malady during his 6-1, 6-2 dismantling of Terry Moor. Their match was the third on the stadium's center court, which resembled a minefield when they began. McEnroe was most upset by the conditions.

In the fifth game of the first set, during which McEnroe feuded with a linesman and umpire Judy Lessing — who later penalized him a point for abusing an official — the grounds crew was summoned to work on the court. While McEnroe and Moor discussed the poor quality of the surface with Lessing, and the crowd booed, the groundskeepers worked. Then Lessing asked them to leave the court but one workman, apparently unable to understand English, kept right on at his task. He finally was escorted off the court by another groundskeeper.

"It wasn't a whole lot of fun," said Moor. "The court was terrible and I said 'Don't call the grounds crew, it won't help. Either the court is fit to play on or we should quit.'"

McEnroe initiated calling them out; the umpire wouldn't have done it if he didn't ask."

Even a perfectly manicured court wouldn't have helped Moor defeat McEnroe, ranked No. 2 in the world and the heavy favorite for the $100,000 first prize here now that Connors and Dibbs are gone. Only Vitas Gerulaitis, seeded third and a 6-4, 7-6 winner over Peter McNamara of Australia, and Pecci, who beat Andrew Pattison of Zimbabwe 6-1, 6-4, seem likely to give him trouble. However Raul Ramirez of Mexico, who rallied from a 0-4 first-set deficit to take Dibbs 6-4, 6-3, is playing well.

"I'm definitely a tougher player to beat again," said Ramirez, once the fourth-rated player in the world but recently as low as 41st. "I have more motivation to win. I've got my spirit back."

Two Qualify From Farmville

WILSON — Farmville Central qualified two girls to continue on into the State Track and Field Championship next week during the Regional Meet held yesterday at Wilson.

Farmville Central's Karen Dunn qualified in two events. She placed second in the 1,600-meter run, with a time of 5:30, then added another second place finish in the 3,200-meters in 12:07.27.

Farmville's Charlene Lang finished third in the shot put with a toss of 36 feet, 4 1/4 inches.

Rose High School had several girls to place in the meet but none of them finished as high as the required third to move into next week's state meet at Raeford.

Karen Hendrix of Rose was fifth in the 400-meter in 63.2, while Sharon Williams was sixth in the triple jump with a leap of 34'1". Laurie Smith finished fourth in the discus with a toss of 103'2", and the 400-meter relay team of Tammy Mayo, Davena Cherry, Angie Atkinson and Judy Daniels were fifth in the school record time of 50.98 seconds.

The death of Clint Prewitt yesterday removed a viable figure from both the educational and athletic scene at East Carolina University.

For the past several years, Prewitt served as the chairman of the school's athletic council. He was one of the leading figures in the hiring of both Dave Odom as basketball coach and Ed Emory as football coach.

During these times, he was also a guiding light in the direction of the policies that helped improve the East Carolina athletic program. He was also a pleasure to work with for the media. He never tried to hide anything, and while he asked us to respect confidences, he was never evasive.

Men like him are hard to find, a blessing to work with and a privilege to know.

Clint Prewitt will be hard to replace at East Carolina. Men like him are few and far between. Godspeed.

We have just returned again from another fine weekend at Myrtle Beach, S.C., where we, along with other writers and sportscasters were guests of the Grand Strand for the annual Carolinas Golf Reporters Convention.

Our host this year was Mack Briggs, pro at Arcadian Shores. Briggs and his fine staff made everyone more than feel at home during the three days of golf and meetings. Along with the staff of the Myrtle Beach Hilton, which is adjacent to the Arcadian course, we were more than welcome.

The Arcadian course is a good one. It features some outstanding holes and has a good deal of character as it winds through woodlands and marshlands. Perhaps the premier hole is the thirteenth.

That hole, which can play long or short, depending on which of the four sets of tees played, gives the average golfer a low iron or high wood shot off the tee. It comes to a crest out on the fairway, then dips down toward a marsh pond. The dip is fairly swift, so one cannot be too aggressive there. The ideal shot is to land near the crest and trickle over to one last landing stage.

Then, it takes a shot of around 160-110 yards, all over the water, to the green, which is bounded in front and at the right by the pond, and at the back by traps.

While the look is difficult, it is just that look that makes it so. As one of our foursome said one day, "Remember, it's only soft fairway."

The overall course can play hard or easy, depending on pin placement and tee choice. It is certainly a course well worth playing when in the area.

Barber Leads Flyers To Win Over Minnesota

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bill Barber has been waiting a year to vent his frustration. The Minnesota North Stars felt his fury.

Barber scored two goals and one assist, set two records and tied two in triggering the Philadelphia Flyers to a 7-3 victory over Minnesota and into the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup finals.

The Flyers now sit back and wait for a winner to emerge from the semifinal between the New York Islanders and the Buffalo Sabres. Then the Flyers can start the final best-of-seven set for the silver cup first awarded in 1893. Buffalo won Thursday night and trails the Isles, 3-2.

Aycock Downs Fike By 8-0

Bill Owens drove in three runs and Rudy Stalls banged out two hits as E.B. Aycock defeated Wilson Fike, 8-0, Thursday in a junior high baseball game.

Stalls was the only player with two hits. Jeff Wilson got the win for Aycock, which plays host to Nash Central Tuesday.

Barber scored nine goals in the series with the North Stars, tying the NHL record established by teammate Reggie Leach in 1976. He also tied the record of three short-handed goals in a playoff year set in 1969 by Derek Sanderson.

The Flyers' veteran winger set a mark of three short-handed goals in one playoff series, and established a new club mark of 12 points (nine goals and three assists) in one series.

"I remember going home frustrated last year," said Barber, recalling the Flyers' elimination by the New York Rangers in the playoff quarterfinals. "I was disappointed. I wished then that I was in the other guys shoes."

"But during the summer I told people, 'you watch, we'll be there (in 1979-1980) if we stay healthy' and we are," Barber said.

Minnesota Coach Glen Sonmor took his team's elimination gracefully.

"Nobody likes to lose, but we lost to the best team in the league. We kept trying and trying. Nobody threw in the towel. They were best over the season and should prevail in the finals," Sonmor said.

"They just force you and force you," said Sonmor of the Flyers, who swept Edmonton in a three-game preliminary playoff series, and then ousted the Rangers 4-1 in a best-of-seven. "Their power play came to life. They continue to score shorthanded. It's not lucky."

The Flyers lost the first game in this series, 6-5, then won four straight, including two in Minnesota for their 4-1 decision. They played like the team which put together a 35-game unbeaten streak and led the league with 117 points.

Minnesota had a 1-0 lead after just 44 seconds Thursday night on a goal by Craig Hartsburg. But it was their last hurrah. Rick MacLeish tied it at 2:33, and Barber sent the Flyers ahead 2-1 at 6:26 with a shorthanded goal eight seconds into a Minnesota power play. They never trailed. It was 4-2 after one, and 7-3 at the end of two.

The North Stars reduced it to 3-2 at 17:11 of the first period, but Bob Dailey turned on the light just 32 seconds before the buzzer. Leach and Barber in the second period each scored their second goals of the game.

Youthful Rookie Gets 1st Win

By HERSCHEL NISSESON AP Sports Writer

Robert Burns composes his poetry on the pitching mound but he uses his middle name anyway and prefers to be called Britt Burns.

Under any name, Burns is proving to be one of baseball's top rookies. He pitches like a 30-year-old with a 20-year-old arm, which is his real age since he won't turn 21 until June 8.

The former Birmingham, Ala., prep star — his high school earned run average was an outrageous 0.12 with 292 strikeouts and only 30 hits in 139 innings — notched his first complete-game victory in the majors Thursday night, scattering nine hits as the Chicago White Sox whipped the Kansas City Royals 8-2. His American League ERA is a pitching 1.60.

Actually, it was Burns' third consecutive route-going effort, but the previous two were 1-0 and 4-1 setbacks.

"A complete game is just sort of a bonus," Burns said. "I feel good any time I'm able to go out and give the club a chance to win. To me, that's doing my job."

Thursday's major league schedule was a slim one. Ironically, both Chicago teams were at home, with the Cubs losing to the San Diego Padres in the only National League contest.

Back in the American League, the Toronto Blue Jays trimmed the California Angels 9-2 for a club record sixth consecutive victory, the Milwaukee Brewers bombed the Baltimore Orioles 9-1 and the Seattle Mariners came from behind with four runs in the bottom of the ninth inning to edge the Detroit Tigers 4-3.

Burns got some offensive support from Claudell Washington, who rapped a pair of RBI singles. The first came in a three-run second inning and the second one highlighted another three-run uprising in the fifth when the White Sox chased loser Paul Splittorff.

Meanwhile, Burns walked one and struck out eight. He allowed a home run to Frank White in the second inning and an RBI single to White in the ninth.

"If you look at Burns out there, you'd think he was 30 years old and a 10-year veteran instead of a 20-year-old rookie," said Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa. "He's got a tremendous amount of poise and he knows how to pitch in certain situations. It's not common to find that much poise in a pitcher as young as he is."

Blue Jays 9, Angels 2
The Blue Jays not only set a club record by winning their sixth game in a row but also gave them undisputed possession of first place in the AL East, one-half game ahead of the idle New York Yankees. Paul Mirabella and Joey McLaughlin combined to pitch a six-hitter while Damaso Garcia drove in Toronto's first two runs, John Mayberry hit a two-run homer and Otto Velez collected three singles and a double.

Brewers 9, Orioles 1
Don Money belted a three-run homer while Gorman Thomas added a two-run shot and Sixto Lezcano homered with the bases empty as Milwaukee ended a three-game losing streak. Money and Lezcano cracked successive homers in a five-run first inning and Moose Haas and Bob McClure combined to pitch a four-hitter.

Money, Thomas and Lezcano had collected just nine hits in their previous 85 times at bat, with Thomas 5-for-48 before his homer.

"You get those three guys hitting again and we'll win our share of games. We'll be in business," said Manager Buck Rodgers.

Mariners 4, Tigers 3
The Mariners, blanked for eight innings by Jack Morris, rallied for four runs in the bottom of the ninth to make unbeaten Rick Honeycutt the first six-game winner in the majors. Rodney Craig started the rally with a one-out single. Bill Stein walked and Ted Cox singled to score Craig. Morris walked Bob Stinson to load the bases before giving way to Aurelio Lopez.

Joe Simpson greeted Lopez with a single to score two runs and tie the score, with pinch runner Tom Paciorek taking third and Simpson moving to second on the throw to the plate. Jim Anderson was walked intentionally to reload the bases and Dan Meyer rapped a grounder to first. Lance Parrish, normally the Tigers' regular catcher, fielded the ball but his throw home was low and catcher Duffy Dyer couldn't handle it as Paciorek scored the winning run.

"There's a lot of luck in this game, believe me," said Honeycutt.

Padres 9, Cubs 6
Kurt Bevacqua's two-run pinch single and Jerry Turner's steal of home featured a four-run eighth-inning San Diego rally. Dave Winfield walked with one out and Willie Montanez doubled. Relief ace Bruce Sutter took over for starter Rick Reuschel and gave up a run-scoring single to Bill Fahey, an intentional walk to Turner and a two-run single to Bevacqua.

Turner and Bevacqua then put on a double steal with Turner scoring. Sutter, the loser, was nicked for another run in the ninth on successive doubles by Gene Tenace and Winfield.

"That proves that Sutter is only human," said Padres Manager Jerry Coleman. "You know, on any given day..."

Babe Didrikson Zaharias competed in the following sports: track and field, golf, baseball, basketball, football, tennis, lacrosse, handball, bowling, fencing and cycling.

Disco Permit Denied After Long Council Hearing

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
A request by a petitioner for a special use permit to operate a discotheque on Dickinson Avenue was denied Thursday night following lengthy discussion by the City Council and a series of split votes.

Council members took the denial action after holding a public hearing on a request by Diamond Gore of Goldsboro for a permit to open the discotheque in a facility at 703-705-707 Dickinson Avenue.

In considering findings of fact related to the proposed business, the six-member Council was divided in voting on whether the discotheque would meet two of the special use provisions of the City Code. Saying that parking requirements were not satisfied by the petitioner based on findings of fact, Mayor Don McGlohon broke the three-three vote in favor of denial.

The provision of the ordinance that the four-three vote determined was not met by the petitioner involved a section that stated that the "proposed use will not constitute a nuisance or hazard because of the number of persons who will attend or use such facility, of the vehicular movement, of noise or fumes or of the types of physical activity." It was indicated by the mayor that unmet parking provisions relating to vehicular activity served as the grounds for denial.

City Engineer Ron Sewell explained earlier in the public hearing that plans for the facility called for the use of some 2,200 square feet of space. He said that the parking space formula figured out to a need for 88 spaces, plus one space for every two employees of the business. Sewell said that on-site parking and additional spaces proposed in a lease arrangement did not, in his opinion, fulfill parking requirements.

Attorney Frank Wooten, representing Gore, said that the petitioner had secured a lease to use a lot behind the old Williams Store property across Eighth Street for parking.

Sewell said that the store property would provide some 30 spaces and with that added to the estimated 35 spaces on the Gore property only 65 total would be available.

Wooten said that Gore would agree to reduce the floor space that would be used down to a figure that would support the 65 parking spaces. He suggested that partitions could be used to designate the required square footage.

In response to a question regarding churches in the area, Sewell reported that the nearest church is located some 50-60 feet from the proposed discotheque property. Councilmen William Hadden, Clarence Gray and Joe Taft expressed concern at the close proximity of the church to the Gore property.

Earl Whitted, Goldsboro attorney who also represented Gore, contended that if the requirements for the permit were met, the Council should grant the request and then if the business became a public nuisance, it could be closed using the provisions of the ordinance.

Joe Goodson, who reported that he owns adjacent property, expressed opposition to the request, saying that he was not against a person going into business, "I just oppose this type of business."

Goodson cited the litter, specifically beer cans, that could result from the operation of a discotheque, and he also noted that "bad language seems to follow these types of businesses."

Gore said that the business would not operate on Sunday, but would be open Wednesday, Friday and Saturday from approximately 9:30 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. He contended that no beer cans would be removed from the building by patrons and he agreed that the business would not be open during church hours.

On a vote to continue the matter until the June meeting, the Council split three to three and McGlohon offered a negative vote to break the tie. Councilman Louis Clark had previously offered a motion to approve the request subject to various conditions but Gray's substitute motion to continue took precedence. It appeared a vote was never taken on the Clark motion.

The Council, in considering whether the proposed use would be detrimental to the use or development of adjacent properties, split again and McGlohon broke the tie by voting that the proposed business would not be detrimental.

The final split vote, with McGlohon again breaking the tie, resulted on denial of the petition.

On both motions regarding findings of fact, Council members Hadden, Clark and Dick McKee voted that the proposed use satisfied ordinance provisions, while Council members Taft, Gray and Judy Greene voted that it did not.

Grain Elevator Blast Kills One

GRAIN ELEVATOR EXPLODES—Firemen and rescue workers are shown taking the body of a man killed in the explosion at a grain elevator in New Bern Thursday. (AP Laserphoto)

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — One man was killed and two others seriously injured Thursday in an explosion at a grain elevator used to store soybeans.

Most of the damage was confined to the concrete elevator, but the blast shattered windows in a nearby warehouse and could be heard more than a mile away.

The cause of the explosion, which occurred about 1 p.m., had not been determined. Fire authorities said it would be several days before the elevator could be cleaned for an interior examination.

Police evacuated residents near the New Bern Oil and Fertilizer Co. soon after the explosion. They were allowed to return home more than three hours later when the fires set off by the explosion were brought under control.

Authorities identified the dead man as William Frank Dudley, 46, of New Bern, a truck driver for the company. Dudley was in the trailer of a tractor-trailer truck parked under a grain chute when the explosion occurred.

Injured were Charles Hill, 27, of Kinston and Jerry Vinson, 35, whose hometown was not available. They were reported in poor condition at Craven County Hospital, where they were undergoing treatment for burns.

Bill Craft, a treasurer of the company, said Vinson was near the elevator and that Hill, a company trainee, was standing nearby.

The company produces food grain, fertilizer and soybean oil. It has been in operation since 1893.

Applications For Aid Rise

ECU News Bureau
Financial aid applications for the 1980-81 school year at East Carolina University have increased about 20 percent over last year, according to Robert Boudreaux, Financial Aid Director.

As of early May, the financial office has already received almost 4,000 applications for aid. During 1979-80, approximately 3,500 ECU students received an average of $1,800 per student through various forms of financial aid.

The most popular form of aid awarded is the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant (BEOG), which, last year, paid 3,065 ECU students a total of about 2.6 million dollars.

Boudreaux believes that the increase in financial aid applications is due largely to a predicted recession.

"Many parents and students," Boudreaux said, "are realizing that they are eligible for some kind of financial aid and are applying early because they imagine a shortage in federal funds."

Another factor in the jump in applications for financial aid is a recent increase in freshman applications to ECU. The university has announced that increased enrollment demand for next fall has forced it to place all freshman applications submitted after May 5 on a waiting list.

Science Day Camps Set

ECU News Bureau
Two summer science day camps for elementary school children will be offered by East Carolina University's Department of Science Education this summer.

The first camp, June 16-20, is for primary grade children, aged six-eight (grades 1-3). Emphasis will be placed on high interest life science activities, including an all-day field trip.

The second camp, June 23-27, is for middle grade children, aged nine-12 (grades 4-6). Activities are designed to increase children's knowledge of animals and their roles in the environment. The third day of this camp will consist of an all-day field trip to observe, study and collect some marine organisms for use in the laboratory during the rest of the camp period.

Each camp will have two sessions, 9 a.m.-noon, and 1-4 p.m., with a maximum enrollment of 25 children per session.

The cost, $50 per child, includes transportation and insurance fees for the field trip.

Application deadlines are May 16 for the primary camp and May 30 for the middle grade camp. Further information and application materials are available from Dr. Carol Hampton, Department of Science Education, ECU (telephone 757-6593 or 757-0478).

Warning By Business Council

By EILEEN ALT POWELL
Associated Press Writer
HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — The United States should be prepared for a recession this year that is "as severe as any in the post-war period except 1974-75," executives from some of the nation's largest corporations were told today.

The gloomy analysis, prepared by private economists for the spring meeting of the prestigious Business Council, was considerably more pessimistic than the Carter administration's forecast.

The business economists predicted that unemployment could rise to nearly 8 percent by early next year. And they suggested that despite the recession and continued declines in interest rates, inflation would remain at double-digit levels until late this year.

The good news, the economists and executives agreed, was that the recession could force federal officials to cut taxes.

"This is an election year," noted Reginald H. Jones, chairman of General Electric and head of the council.

"Let's face it," he continued, "we are going to be in such bad straits when the time comes to the third quarter this year — which is the quarter of (presidential nominating) conventions and the quarter for running like the devil — that we think there is a very good chance that there will be a tax cut, effective probably no earlier than Jan. 1."

Jones said he expects a cut of about $15 billion. Others at the conference predicted a cut in the range of $25 billion.

But all of them declined to speculate on how much of the tax relief would be for business and how much directly for the public.

President Carter and Congress have so far rejected proposals to cut taxes, arguing that such a move would hamper efforts to fight near-record inflation by balancing the budget.

The Business Council, formed nearly 50 years ago to advise the government on corporate issues, is composed of about 100 executives.

Among the speakers scheduled for the two-day meeting were Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker, Commerce Secretary Philip M. Klutznick, AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland and Charles Schultze, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

The government has forecast a mild downturn that would drive unemployment up to a little over 7 percent at year's end. However, some in the administration, including inflation adviser Alfred Kahn, now consider that figure too optimistic. Unemployment jumped from 6.2 percent in March to 7 percent in April.

The business economists believe the nation's output will fall as much as 3 percent over the next nine months. That would make the recession among the worst since World War II, but only about half as severe as the 1974-75 downturn.

Still, the business economists said unemployment could reach "a peak of nearly 8 percent early next year." That would translate to about 7.5 million Americans out of work.

Set Memorial Rites For 8

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Del. (AP) — A memorial service for the eight American commandos who died in an aborted mission to rescue the hostages in Iran was being held today at Arlington National Cemetery.

President Carter was to eulogize the servicemen in the national cemetery's Memorial Amphitheater, across the Potomac River from Washington.

The families of the commandos, relatives of the hostages, Supreme Court justices, cabinet members and other government officials were invited to the service. The amphitheater holds 5,000 people, and additional seating and standing room was available nearby.

The bodies of the servicemen, however, remained here where they are being identified.

"The remains will not be at Arlington," Pentagon spokesman Maj. Sam Flocia said Thursday.

Flocia did not know if there would be posthumous decorations for the commandos.

"They obviously made the ultimate sacrifice for their country. But we've never had a situation like this before, so I don't know what the precedent would be," he said.

Little has been said about the identification process of the remains in nine coffins returned by the Iranian government.

Officials refuse to discuss a ninth victim that sources say may be an Iranian civilian. Pentagon officials say only eight servicemen were killed in the fiery crash of a helicopter and transport plane on the Iranian desert.

"What goes on is very secretive, almost," said Lt. Basil Gray Jr., a base spokesman. "I don't know when they (the bodies) will be leaving."

Police List 3 Accidents

An estimated $1,950 property damage resulted from a series of three traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported an estimated $500 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 3:50 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Fifth Street and Memorial Drive.

Drivers of the vehicles were listed as Manda Jacob Gray of 10-9B Howard Cir., and Charlie Earl Boyd of 1406A North Washington St.

Cars driven by Estelle Hiers Murray of 308 Meade St. and Stephany Dionne Honeycutt of Statesville, collided about 4:48 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Meade Streets, resulting in an estimated $50 damage to the Murray car and $500 damage to the Honeycutt vehicle.

A 9:35 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Third and Cotanche Streets involved vehicles driven by Rose Roach Brown of 103 Rawl Rd. and Lucindy Penland Butler of Highland Trailer Pk., police said.

Damage to the cars was estimated at $200 each.

REPORT TO AMERICA'S NEWSPAPER READERS

Can you imagine a world without The Associated Press?

Soviet troops rolled into Afghanistan. Mountain tribes rose in rebellion. The Associated Press assigned Barry Schlachter and Michel Lipchitz to the story.

They were in Islamabad, Pakistan. Wintry steppes, mountains and gorges lay between them and the action in Kabul. There were no flights, no buses.

A rented car got the AP men as far as Peshawar on the Afghan border. From there they rattled through the Khyber Pass in an ancient pickup truck painted with psychedelic orange flowers. At Jalalabad they hired a decrepit taxi to carry them through Kabul Gorge into the over-run city.

On their perilous journey, Schlachter and Lipchitz worked. From tribesmen, Afghan soldiers, invading Soviet troops, they collected notes. They made pictures.

By the time they reached Kabul they were ready to send their first story.

Meanwhile, S.D. made news, too

Halfway around the world, Eric Newhouse, the AP correspondent in Pierre, S.D., had been hearing rumors about an illegal gambling casino in Winner, a little town near the capital. He decided to see for himself.

About midnight, he walked two men — the attorney general and the treasurer of South Dakota.

Both started gambling.

Newhouse watched the attorney general play blackjack for half an hour, then walked over and said hello. The attorney general looked up in pain. "Are you on duty?" he said.

Yes, said Newhouse. The attorney general closed the place down. He called a local newsman to announce he had raided it.

Newhouse wrote the story just as it happened. A few days later, the two state officials charged themselves with illegal gambling. They were fined $100 each.

Schlachter, Lipchitz, Newhouse — AP staffers separated by half the world but linked by common pursuit of truth, two rushing over ancient trails for a story the world needed to know, one carefully detailing a vignette of law within a state.

How the news got to you

Schlachter and Lipchitz sent their stories and pictures out of Kabul by "pigeons" — travelers to New Delhi. From there, the news traveled by satellite around the world.

Newhouse sat at a cathode ray terminal, composed his story on the screen and, with the touch of a button, transmitted it to newspapers and broadcast stations in South Dakota and beyond.

There are 1,541 Associated Press men and women like Schlachter, Lipchitz and Newhouse — editors, reporters and photographers. There are 396 executives, chiefs of bureau and other administrators, plus 617 technicians and other support personnel backing them up.

Their work requires experience, judgment, integrity, daring, the most sophisticated communications — and ingenuity.

Together, they create the report of the largest news agency in the world, the single greatest source of objective, timely information for the peoples of the world.

This is written as religious, political, military and economic tensions tear once more at civilization. For that reason, the Associated Press Board of Directors emphasizes in this annual report to the membership the character of the news cooperative and of its staff and the work they do.

The news and photo staff is the largest it has ever been — 1,043 in 120 bureaus in the United States, 498 in 63 foreign bureaus.

The Board of Directors of The Associated Press recently made its annual report to the newspapers which are members of the AP. It is appropriate to share that report with the readers of those newspapers.

Thousands of stringers and tens of thousands of reporters and photographers for both domestic members and foreign subscribers contribute to the AP report.

Newspaper membership in the cooperative that began in 1848 as an association of six New York newspapers reached a high point in 1979 with 1,372. Radio and television membership reached 3,646, also a high.

Abroad, more than one billion persons a day in 115 countries are estimated to have access to Associated Press news through more than 10,000 newspapers and broadcast stations.

All of the AP's revenue goes back into producing the news and picture reports. The budget was $121 million in 1979. It is $136 million in 1980.

It must pay for the coverage of war, rebellion, national politics, foreign intrigue, disaster, crime, religion, sports, business, the economy, the arts and all the other myriad events — sad and happy, moving and mysterious, simple and complex and frightening — that make up life.

Another trouble spot: Iran

There are always problems. Before Afghanistan there was Iran.

The Shah fell. Rival factions battled for control. AP staffers were in the thick of it: shot at, threatened, arrested, held, released by opposing sides.

Tom Kent dived into a building to escape machine gun fire. The building turned out to be the next objective. Kent found refuge with a woman who gave him a snack while her neighbors made Molotov cocktails.

A guerrilla set up his machine gun behind photographer Ari Saricostas' camera position, trying to use him for cover. Bob Reid ducked into an alley, found concealment beneath a sign: "Yankee go home by February or be killed."

By September, AP staffers were the only American journalists left in Iran. All others had been expelled.

Nick Tatro arrived on Sept. 1 to take over as chief of bureau. At the Ministry of National Guidance, he and his wife, Earleen, also a reporter, were given working cards.

Three days later the Tatos were called back. The man who had given them their credentials took them away and accused the Tatos of "working unofficially." At the Ministry of National Guidance that is a euphemism for spying.

Staffers were being expelled

All American staffers were being expelled; the bureau was being closed; Iranians could no longer work for the AP.

Why?

"We are not obligated to give a reason," said the press chief, Ali Behzadnia. But he complained about the two previous days' coverage of Kurdistan, where the AP was the only agency to have on-the-scene reports of the Kurdish uprising.

AP continued its coverage with radio listening posts, direct telephone calls to Iranian sources, cooperation from other free-world agencies, interviews with people coming out of Iran. It sifted and sorted and compared reports to winnow rumor and propaganda from legitimate news.

November came. The United States embassy was taken. American newsmen were invited back. The Iranians welcomed coverage of that story — at first.

Under another new bureau chief, Alexander Higgins, the AP again covered all of the story, not only the plight of the American hostages and the militants' demands for return of the Shah.

Anti-Khomeini shouts reported

In December, Alex Efty of the AP reported that anti-Khomeini mobs in Tabriz shouted "Death to Khomeini" during a demonstration. He had tape-recorded the shouts in Farsi — "Mag bar Khomeini" — but officials at the Ministry of National Guidance said they could not understand the words. Efty was thrown out.

Finally, as the year changed and the persistent coverage continued, all American news organizations were expelled for failure, as the ministry of guidance put it, "to understand their humanitarian responsibility and real mission."

The AP resumed coverage through reciprocal agreements with other free-world news organizations, direct telephone calls, radio listening posts.

The Three Mile Island story

War and rebellion and coup — stories as old as the world.

And a story as new as the nuclear age — Three Mile Island, the AP's chance to report swiftly, coolly and accurately a story that no one had ever had to report before.

It was 8:30 a.m. on March 28 when a phone rang in the AP Philadelphia bureau. Day Supervisor Judy Capar answered. The caller was Jess Garber, managing editor of the Waynesboro Record Herald. One of his reporters had been told that state troopers had been put on alert in the Harrisburg area.

Ms. Capar relayed the word to staffer Tim Pettit in Harrisburg. It took him one phone call to find out why: Police were on the alert because of an accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear generating plant.

Other members contributed fragments: the accident was in the reactor's cooling system; some radiation had escaped.

Special AP team is mobilized

The AP mobilized a special team to bolster the Harrisburg staff. At one point, there were 25 staffers in Harrisburg, equipped with protective overalls and masks in case of need. Specialists in Washington kept track of what the Nuclear Regulatory Commission was saying. Others concentrated on the story in Philadelphia and New York.

The AP staff delivered what the members expect of it: A thorough report that was accurate and responsibly first, without being recklessly fast.

The aura of silent menace about the story led to postmortem evaluations of the coverage. In each one, AP performance was rated superior. The Associated Press Managing Editors Association voted a special citation to the AP staff.

New technology speeds the news

Reporters get the news — new technology delivers it ever faster.

The entire AP report soon will be beamed up to a satellite and from it back to a network of earth stations owned by the AP. The receiving dishes will be on member property, ensuring the most direct and trouble-free delivery of the news. The satellite distribution network still is in its formative stage — having started operations in March — but by the end of 1980 the AP expects to have 400 dishes in place.

Technology already had taken the AP and its members from the Nineteenth Century telegraph rate of 12 words per minute to today's standard of 1,200 words per minute and a capability of 9,600 words per minute.

Technology provides the tools for delivery, but the only tool for gathering and understanding and reporting the news remains the reporter.

Often, AP staffers have stepped back from the rush of daily spot news to illuminate situations or problems with deep, penetrating reports.

45,000 miles for one series

For example, two Pulitzer Prize winners, Special Correspondents Peter Arnett, reporter, and Eddie Adams, photographer, traveled 45,000 miles on four continents to find and describe the largest mass of refugees since World War II. They found refugee camps no reporters before had seen. Their vivid stories and pictures — in a series called "The World's Homeless" — won stunning displays. We believe their work provoked much of the news coverage and government interest that followed.

Violence seemed to be the world's constant. The AP staff faced danger in Nicaragua, as well as in Asia.

The fighting that resulted in the flight of President Anastasio Somoza broke out in May. Every correspondent who ventured anywhere in Nicaragua or into outlying areas had close calls.

Many journalists left Nicaragua on a special U.S. Embassy evacuation flight the day after ABC Correspondent Bill Stewart was shot to death at a road block.

The AP crew stayed until the end.

The year had good news, too

Where was the year's good news? It traveled with Pope John Paul II on trips to Poland, Mexico, Ireland and the United States.

His trips involved hundreds of AP reporters and photographers, both overseas and in the United States. Special telephone circuits were run into special papal desks at AP headquarters in New York.

In words and pictures, the staff recorded the Pope in his native land, trying on a peaked sombrero in Mexico, blessing the multitude from the pitcher's mound in Yankee Stadium.

The Presidential election campaign began earlier than it ever had. While staffing the contenders, the AP created a campaign databank. This is an electronic reference library that covers each candidate and what he is doing. If an editor wants to compare what a candidate said in Tacoma with what he said in Tampa, the editor can simply call it up on a CRT. Thus newspapers can give their readers a better opportunity than ever before to judge the campaign on facts and background rather than rhetoric.

The databank was made available to all members as a joint project of AP and the New York Times Information Service.

What AP means to America

AP means many things: staffers in Indianapolis tabulating hundreds of high school basketball scores... Ed Schuyler dictating the end of a heavyweight fight from beneath the ring apron while roaring fans climb over him to get at the winner... Frank Cormier, as senior White House correspondent, booming out "Thank you, Mr. President" to end a news conference... Jules Loh looking for, and finding, the heart of America far from the headlines for his column, "Elsewhere in America."

AP enterprise amused as well as enlightened readers. Brooks Jackson's exclusive account of the attack on Jimmy Carter by a swimming rabbit caught the nation's fancy. The White House confirmed the story but declined to release pictures of Carter beating back the bunny with a canoe paddle.

Malcolm Carter wrote a four-part series on the pros and cons of polling, their influence and exactly how one poll was conducted from start to finish.

In a series called "The Charge-It Society," Louise Cook explained the likelihood of a squeeze on credit and told readers how they might manage credit wisely.

Bob Locke of Los Angeles combined with Peter Arnett for two parts on the United States' awakening neighbor, Mexico, its power and its promise.

Explanatory reporting dealt with soaring gold prices and the threatened recession that baffled economists by failing to come about in 1979.

Abroad, we opened a bureau in Peking, headed by veteran China watcher John Roderick. New domestic bureaus were opened in El Paso, Texas; Roanoke, Va.; Evansville, Ind.; Morgantown, W. Va., and Iowa City, Iowa. A temporary bureau was opened at Lake Placid to prepare for and cover the Olympic Winter Games.

Sunday AP Newsfeatures writers examined in depth such topics as these:

- The controversial snail darter, the endangered fish whose cause ended construction of a Tennessee dam, by Saul Pett.
- Environmentalists on a hazardous mission to save baby seals from slaughter in the far north, by Sid Moody.
- Changing roles of "The American Woman," by John Barbour, with the aid of a special demographic profile drawn for APN by census experts.

Access problems in U.S., UNESCO

The Supreme Court, in Gannett vs. DePasquale, extended constitutional sanction to the closing of pretrial proceedings.

The AP supplied its staff with a written statement for use in court in protesting motions to exclude the press, and this was adopted by many other news organizations.

By the end of 1979, motions to close pre-trial, trial or post-trial proceedings had succeeded 66 times and failed 44 times.

The AP, with its members, continued to fight, case by case, against the encroachment of secret trials.

Internationally, UNESCO was the focus of access problems caused by its effort to form a "new world information order."

Western journalists were alarmed most by the theory espoused by Communist and some Third World countries that journalists have an obligation to advance the objectives of their governments. This position led to proposals for licensing of foreign correspondents and similar restrictions.

A report by UNESCO's MacBride Commission, headed by Sean MacBride, an Irish Nobel and Lenin prize winner, recommends abolition of censorship and free access to the news. At the same time, the MacBride report insists that national communications policies be tied in with economic policy. The Commission does not explain how economic policy and political policy can be separated.

The MacBride report is to be acted on by UNESCO next year.

Bike Safety Week Observed

Bike Safety Week is scheduled for May 10-17. The annual event is being coordinated by the Greenville Citizens Bikeway Committee and the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

Mayor Don McGlohon issued a proclamation recognizing the week which will run from Saturday through next Saturday.

Jim Hix, chairman of the Bikeway Committee, said the major activities of the period will be a Bicycle Rodeo on May 10, and five school assemblies next week. The Bicycle Rodeo will be held at Jaycee Park from 10 am to 11 am and will be co-sponsored by the Optimist Club and the Host Lions Club. Three age groups, third grade and below, fourth grade through sixth and seventh through twelfth graders, will be awarded first, second and third place trophies. Bicycle safety literature will be available, as well as the opportunity to get free permanent bicycle registration, at the Rodeo.

Elementary school assemblies during this week will emphasize bike safety and the film "It's Your Move" will be shown. In addition, a traffic safety officer from the Greenville Police Department will visit the schools to discuss bike rules and regulations.

A special awards presentation will be made to three Greenville youths, who won first place in a statewide bicycle safety poster contest, Friday, May 16, in Raleigh. The students, all sixth graders at South Greenville Elementary, are: Mark Elmore, most original drawing; Catherine Spencer, best drawing and Dottie Parker, best theme interpretation.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ 2 ♥
2 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass
4 ♠ Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Two of ♠.

It should go without saying that if you have to give up a trick, you should do so to the player who is least likely to do damage to you. South, declarer at four spades, seemed unaware of this principle which, to us, is a veritable axiom of successful play.

North was a whit short of a jump raise to three spades, so he temporized with two clubs. East might have doubled rather than overcall, but there was a significant disparity between his two suits. The rest of the auction followed predictable lines.

A diamond lead would have doomed the contract at trick one, but in view of the overall, it is impossible to fault West's choice of a low heart. Declarer captured the king with the ace, drew trumps in two rounds and then tried the club finesse. East won the king of clubs and exited with a low heart to his partner's queen. The diamond shift was inevitable, and the defenders entered 100 points on their side of the ledger.

Declarer played thoughtlessly to the first trick. It should have been obvious that the contract was safe if West never regained the lead. Even if the club finesse lost, the defenders would not be able to take more than one trick in each side suit, since the king of diamonds would be safe from attack. There was no real danger that the two of hearts was a singleton—East would not have bid as he did with an eight-card suit, and his play of the king at trick one strongly suggested that West held the queen.

If declarer allows the king of hearts to hold the first trick, West can never obtain the lead. Declarer wins the heart return, draws trumps and takes the club finesse. Now the best East can do is cash the ace of diamonds to hold declarer to his contract; otherwise declarer will discard both of his diamonds on dummy's clubs and make an overtrick.

Carson Proved Kindly Victor

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Now that a truce has been declared in the war between Johnny Carson and NBC, it might be asked, who won?

Carson did, but he proved a benevolent victor. He could have been merciless, but wasn't, and NBC emerged from the struggle in pretty decent shape.

The definitive history of the war has yet to be written, but it is generally believed that the conflict began when NBC demanded higher tribute from Carson, asking the king of lateness to make more appearances on his show.

Fred Silverman, battling to keep his hold over the troubled NBC realm, had noticed that "Tonight" was losing ground to the other networks, and was being throttled when Carson wasn't there—which was often.

It happened, though, that Carson wasn't in the mood for paying higher tribute. In fact, he wanted to pay less. After 17 years of doing the 90-minute talk show, he felt tired, stifled, perhaps a little bored. He had asked permission a couple of years ago to juice up "Tonight" by going live, but the notion was nixed.

And now, Silverman

Mental Health Topics Talked

Dr. Robert P. Neno, psychiatrist at Pitt County Mental Health Center, will talk about aspects of the history of mental health on "What's On Your Mind" each Monday in May.

Aired at 12:55 p. m. each Monday, the weekly radio segments are offered as a community service. May 11 Dr. Neno will talk about the development of mental health. May 18 he will discuss alternate management strategies, and May 26 he will talk about local mental health. He will speak specifically about the contributions of Mrs. J. B. Spilman, Reginald Gray, Commissioner Bob Martin and the late Dr. Clinton Prewett to the promotion of mental health and the Pitt County Mental Health Center.

wanted him to appear on the 90-minute show four times a week? He bolted. He not only refused to increase his number of appearances, he got his lawyers (Henry "Bombastic" Bushkin & Co.) to find an exit for him.

The war erupted, with armies of lawyers on both sides engaged in a weird battle to determine whether Carson's NBC contract (which yielded $3 million annually) was valid.

In the meantime, as war correspondents tried to surmise the progress of the war, Carson had time to think. What was his objective? There was talk about a prime time show, about specials and TV movies, and there was that reported $5 million offer from ABC to do anything he wanted. He began to realize, almost reluctantly, it seemed, the power he wielded.

NBC, for its part, also had time to think. The network that had made a habit of failing in prime time competition, was faced with losing one of its biggest assets because of a tactical blunder.

By late January, when the Moscow Olympics really began to fall apart, the Silverman corps had reason to be desperate over the Carson matter. Silverman was in the middle of his contract with NBC and had yet to perform magic. NBC had held affiliates with the promises of Olympics-wrought good times. Losing Carson on top of everything else would not have made this month's meeting with the affiliates a fun party.

Fortunately for NBC, Carson had decided what he wanted to win in this contest. After causing the big stir by declaring he wanted out, it occurred to Carson that he didn't really want to leave "Tonight" at all. He just needed some excitement, some change.

'Princess' Film Becomes Hot Potato

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Despite mounting pressure from a major corporate underwriter, several congressmen and the U.S. State Department, the Public Broadcasting Service says it won't change its plans to air a film that has enraged Saudi Arabia's royal family.

In quick succession Thursday, the head of the House Foreign Affairs Committee asked the film "Death of a Princess" be canceled and the State Department urged "appropriate consideration" be given Saudi concerns.

Meanwhile, Mobil Corp. — which has contributed some $30 million to public television programming in the past decade — suggested PBS "review its decision" to broadcast the film Monday night.

The two-hour movie, produced by Antony Thomas and David Fanning, recreates Thomas' effort to learn more about the 1977 public execution of Saudi Princess Mish'al and her commoner lover. They had been accused of adultery.

Mobil, backer of the long-running "Masterpiece Theater" series, said in an advertisement in major newspapers that PBS' airing of the film "raises some very serious issues" in the obligations of a free press and the role of the government in supporting public TV.

Acting Secretary of State Warren Christopher suggested PBS give "appropriate consideration" to the Saudi position, adding the department had no doubt PBS would assure "viewers are given a full and balanced presentation."

In Congress, Reps. Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, urged that the film not be shown, saying it was "regrettable that the decision was made by an organization funded in part by the U.S. government."

The committee's ranking Republican, William Broomfield, R-Mich., said broadcasting it would have "an adverse effect on U.S. interests at home."

But Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., called the criticism a blatant attempt to appease Saudi Arabia and protect U.S. oil sources.

"We are not turning a deaf ear to people's concerns," said Mark Harrod, PBS' director of information, "but we are not in the business of making foreign policy. We are interested in the free flow of information."

At least 10 PBS stations have announced they will not carry the film, which prompted the Saudi Arabian government to order Britain's ambassador to leave the Middle Eastern country after the film was shown in England last month.

Saudi officials contend the film is an inaccurate presentation of that nation's culture and is disparaging to the Moslem religion. Thomas maintains all dialogue was faithfully transcribed from interviews, and all facts were checked. The movie never mentions Saudi Arabia by name.

PBS said it would follow the film with an account of the controversy and would provide 30 minutes for a discussion of such subjects as the role of women in Saudi society.

Harry Truman's Mother Credited Life On A Farm

THE TRUMAN FARM HOME — This is the farm home of the late former President Harry Truman, little changed from 1906-17 when he helped

By WES COOK
Associated Press Writer
GRANDVIEW, Mo. (AP) — Harry Truman's mother used to take exception when people called him "The Man from Independence." "It was on the farm that Harry got his common sense," she insisted. "He didn't get it in town."

That farm in Grandview comprises only 13 acres today, compared with 600 acres in 1906 when 22-year-old Harry Truman swapped the suit and tie of a bank clerk to return to his overalls.

Truman — the man who said, "If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen," and, "The buck stops here" — was born May 8, 1884, and died Dec. 26, 1972, at the age of 88.

A week-long celebration of his birthday is now underway in Independence and Kansas City. Dr. Benedict Zobrist, director of the Truman Library and Museum, says one of the most formative periods of Truman's life was 1906-17 when "he emerged as a farmer, school board member, Mason, soldier and politician."

By 1905, he had decided that "every citizen should know something about military, finance or banking, and agriculture." When he became the 33rd president of the United States, Martha Ellen Truman boasted her son "could plow the straightest row of corn in the county."

Truman's maternal grandfather, Solomon Young, bought the farm for $7 an acre around 1842. Truman said he "plowed, sowed, reaped, milked cows, fed hogs, doctored horses, baled hay and did everything there was to do on a 600-acre farm."

Speaking of plowing, he said, "I've settled all the ills of mankind in one way or another while riding along seeing that each animal pulled his part of the load."

It was the farming community of Grandview that provided Truman his first lessons in practical politics.

Truman's father, John, was appointed an election judge here in 1906. When Harry returned to the farm, his father made him an election clerk. Truman served in every election from then until he left in June of 1917 for World War I.

He got more political experience as road overseer for part of the township, a job his father held from 1910 until his death in 1914.

Truman described his father's work: "He had to fix bridges and culverts, fill up mud holes and try to help everyone in the neighborhood get to and away from his farm in bad weather....

"It was my father's job to collect the poll tax and work it out. A man could work three days on the road or he could pay the road overseer $3 and let his road work be done by proxy. One day's work with a team of horses would also give him a clean bill of health."

Truman said his father "made the poll tax workers work for the county just as they worked for themselves. While they'd be off about it on the job, they'd go home and brag about how old man Truman gave the taxpayers a fair break."

"I was taught that the expenditure of public money is a public trust and I have never changed my opinion on that subject. No one ever received any public money for which I was responsible unless he gave honest service for it."

Truman joined the Farm Bureau in 1913 and was a township officer in 1914. He joined the Masons in nearby Belton and later helped organize the Masonic Lodge in Grandview, serving as its first presiding officer and then as secretary.

He was appointed postmaster in 1915 but waived his annual salary of $530.

"I let a widow woman who was helping to raise and educate her younger sisters and brothers run the office as 'substitute postmaster' and take the pay," Truman said. He rose rapidly in politics — right to the top.

Elevated from vice president to president upon the death of Franklin Roosevelt in 1945, he orchestrated the biggest upset in political history by winning his own four-year term in 1948.

For many, Truman's image has become somewhat that of a folk hero — the so-called common man from a common background with an uncommon touch. Historians describe him as surprisingly bold and decisive.

He was feisty, spirited, confident and almost cocky at times. Loyal to his friends, he inspired loyalty. He loved a good game of poker. He was blunt and, not infrequently, used strong language against opponents.

Most of Truman's farm workers and neighbors described him as a good to excellent farmer, and firm, honest and fair in his dealings with farm hands and suppliers.

Congress Racing Clock To Save Food Stamps

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is moving quickly to insure that 21 million Americans don't go without their food stamps next month.

Faced with warnings that money for the program would dry up by June 1 unless more is provided soon, the full House and two of its committees acted in concert Thursday to fill the void.

The House spent seven hours debating the overall food stamp program and then voted overwhelmingly — 320-56 1 to authorize spending an additional $6 billion on the program over a two-year period.

Of that increase, $2.5 billion would go to cover the current shortage brought on by food prices that have zoomed past levels anticipated when current spending limits were set in 1977 and by rising unemployment making more people eligible.

Earlier Thursday, the House Appropriations Committee had voted to split the $2.5 billion from a $17.5 billion omnibus supplemental appropriation bill aimed at covering shortages in a variety of other federal programs.

Treating the food stamp supplemental appropriation separately lessens the likelihood of it getting bogged down in possible controversies related to other aspects of the omnibus bill.

Soon after the appropriations committee action, the House Rules Committee approved a resolution designed to give the supplemental food stamp appropriation clear sailing once it reaches the House floor next week.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland has said he will have to suspend plans to issue food stamps June 1 unless he has assurance by next Thursday that additional money will be provided.

The Senate has already approved its version of a food stamp bill increasing spending limits for both this year and next year.

House action on its bill Thursday sends the legislation to a conference committee for what is expected to be speedy resolution of differences between the two versions. House leaders planned to convene the conference committee Tuesday and backers of the program are hoping for final Congressional action a day or so after then.

House opponents protested Thursday that the Carter administration was trying to stampede Congress into approval of massive expansion of the program without allowing adequate time to consider reforms that could reduce fraud and abuse.

Refugee Camp

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — The Army said Thursday more than 100 soldiers from Fort Bragg would be sent to Fort Chaffee, Ark., to help establish a camp for Cuban refugees.

The soldiers, including Spanish interpreters, are from the John F. Kennedy Center for Military Assistance at Fort Bragg.

There was no indication how large a camp would be established or how long the soldiers would be at Fort Chaffee. About 25,000 Vietnamese refugees were once housed at the base, which is no longer an active post.

Spoiled Foreigners Are Catered To in China's Have-Not Society

By JOHN RODERICK
AP Special Correspondent
PEKING (AP) — The dreaded Mrs. Wang is the nearest thing to a dictator in Peking. Strong men quail when she appears on their threshold.

A beaming, rosy-cheeked member of the proletariat, Mrs. Wang runs a housing compound for about a thousand foreign diplomats and journalists.

She runs it with glacial indifference to the dismayed cries that greet sky-high estimates on the cost of installing kitchen shelves, painting a room or hooking up air conditioners.

She knows that foreigners, no matter how much they complain, have nowhere else to go. She and her small army of plumbers, carpenters, electricians, painters, garbage collectors and engineers are part of the Diplomatic Services Bureau.

They and they alone are allowed to work for the inmates of this "waiguoren" (foreign) ghetto, one of three in Peking.

The inhabitants of these ghettos are the spoiled elite of a have-not society. Within the snug cocoons of their guarded and walled compounds, they live lives of luxury laced with boredom. If it wasn't for Mrs. Wang, many wouldn't have much to talk about.

The Services Bureau serves, coddles and occasionally rips off the estimated 3,000 diplomats, foreign correspondents and their families now in the Chinese capital.

It supplies not only living quarters but also specialized personnel to smooth life's little wrinkles. These include interpreters, cooks, drivers, maids, office boys and telex operators. A prospective employer must take what he is given, and that varies from excellent to dismal. The ghettos abound with horror stories of cooks who can't cook, drivers who can't drive and interpreters who need interpreters.

Monthly salaries range from 180 yuan ($120) for the most menial tasks to 1,000 yuan ($666) for the most skilled, but the worker takes home only about 60 or 70 yuan. The rest goes to the state.

The apartments provided the bourgeois elite vary in size — one to four bedrooms — and in price, from 400 to 1,200 yuan. Though the rooms are often large, heat is chancy, hot water is available at odd hours and the drains are smelly. Cockroaches command the kitchens.

Yet, life can be beautiful. Many of the cooks are masters of their art — able, with little notice, to whip up sumptuous dinners for a dozen guests. Part-time waiters or waitresses are available for about $15 an evening. They mix the martinis, empty the ashtrays, pass the munchies and serve the dinner. When it's over, they wash up and tidy the apartment.

If one wishes to entertain rather than at home, the ghetto dweller has dozens of splendid restaurants from which to choose. The prices also vary — depending on where patrons sit.

Foreigners almost invariably are taken to a special, screened-off room, where the price is always seven to 10 times more than that paid by the Chinese.

In the leading Mongolian restaurant, for example, one American paid 25 yuan for a dinner behind screens which barely equaled in splendor one eaten later with Chinese friends, at a cost of three yuan apiece.

Despite all the luxuries, foreigners in Peking find existence can be hostile or hazardous.

The hazards come not from violent crime — it is comparatively rare — but from driving along Peking's streets, almost always jammed with bicycle riders. These two-wheeled anarchists ride against traffic and zig-zag between lanes. The adventure acquires particular zest at night because headlights are forbidden.

Another hazard is climate. January begins with penetrating cold and skin-cracking dryness. Wheezes, sniffles, coughs and galloping pneumonia move in, nourished by air laden with soft coal gas.

Spring brings young buds but also Gobi Desert sandstorms. Summer heat prostrates. Only autumn — long, cool and dreamy — is truly pleasant.

Hostility, always subtle, is sensed in the persistent measures to discourage contacts between Chinese and foreigners. Even while reaching out to the West, Chinese newspapers, politicians and bureaucrats remind the citizens of the dangers of revealing state secrets to foreigners.

Yet many foreigners do mix with ordinary Chinese. Language is important but not absolutely essential. Despite official warnings, most Chinese are eager to befriend sympathetic foreigners.

And like their grandparents and great grandparents, they are marvelously inquisitive about a visitor's "dabizit" — big nose.
