Supplemental Budget Of $368 Million Proposed

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A 10 percent pay raise for teachers and state employees, increased benefits for retired workers and more money for state legislators make up most of a $368 million supplemental budget for 1980-81 proposed by the governor and legislative leaders.

The budget package, made public today, confirms what had been widely expected — that Gov. Jim Hunt's campaign promise for a "double-digit" pay raise amounts to the minimum possible under that description, 10 percent.

for the purpose of providing for the effects of inflation on our people and our economy," Gov. Jim Hunt said in a briefing for reporters.

The proposal also extends the 10 percent pay raise to members of the General Assembly, although they will not receive it until next year.

Legislators, if they approve the budget when the General Assembly convenes in June, would also see their daily allowance raised above that granted to state employees who travel in their work. And retired state legislators 65 or older would be brought under state-employee hospitalization insurance plans without contributing any money.

The pay raises for employees, teachers and legislators make up 82 percent of the budget supplement, and most of the rest is earmarked for covering inflated costs of gasoline, equipment and supplies to state government.

The supplemental budget is the recommendation of both Hunt and the Advisory Budget Commission, a powerful panel of 11 legislators, the governor and his appointed chairman.

The budget proposal is only a supplement to the $5 billion budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1. It covers money that state budget analysts expect the state to receive from taxes and other sources, above the amount counted on when the two-year budget was passed by the Legislature in 1979.

The budget includes no tax increases, but employs a complicated change in accounting procedures that will produce a one-year windfall of as much as $57 million — covering expected shortages of that much because of declining gasoline tax collections.

Because of its backing by Hunt and the most powerful legislators, the annual budget proposals are usually enacted with only minor changes.

Among the budget proposal's highlights are:

— $235 million for a 10 percent cost-of-living pay raise to teachers, state employees and legislators.

— Another $61 million for several salary and benefit improvements plans for certain workers. Among them is a new salary schedule for school employees and improved retirement benefits for state workers.

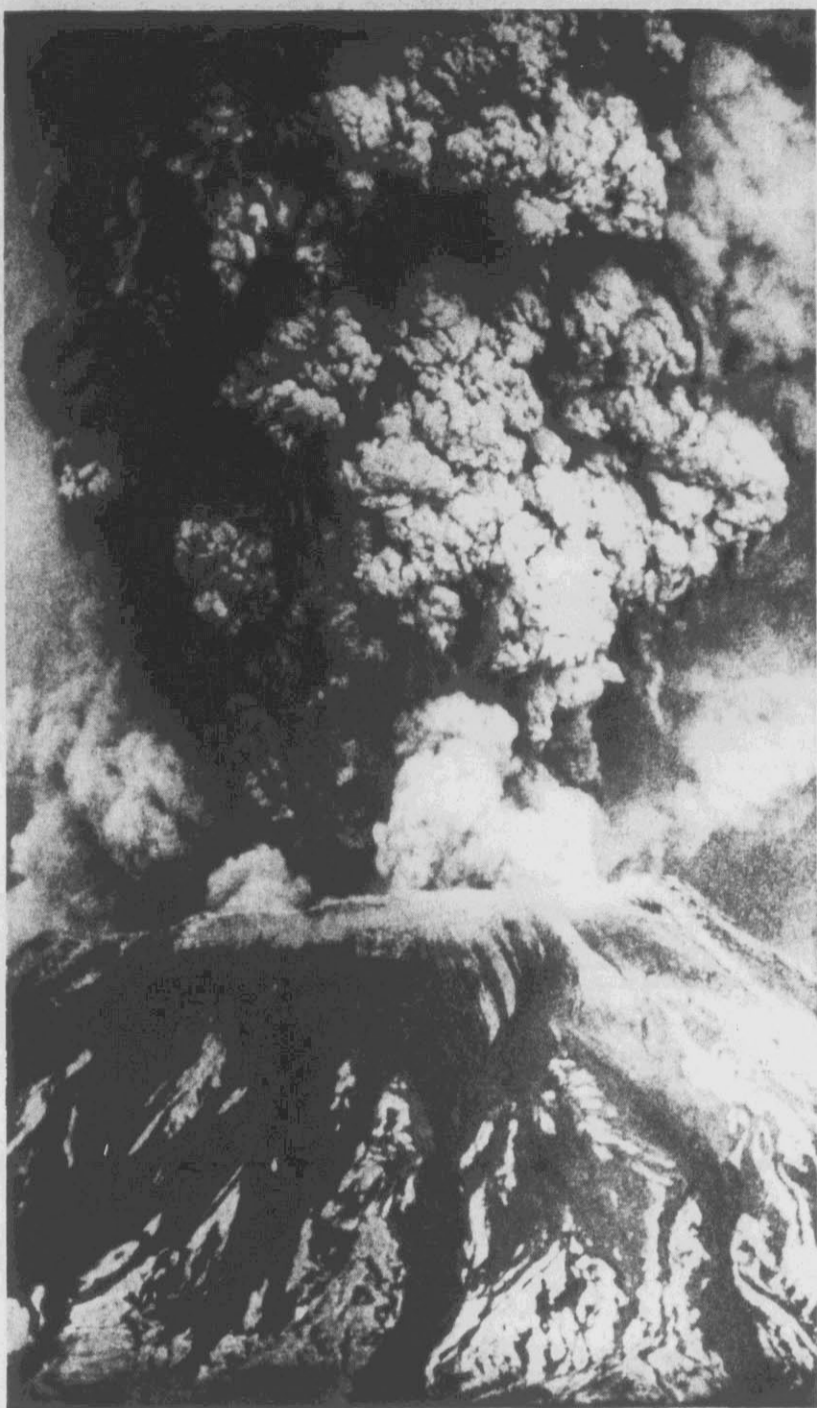

— Money to hire 12 new State Bureau of Investigation agents to work on drug cases.

— A provision, coupled with the new salary scale for teachers, requiring local school boards to conduct annual reviews of job performance by all educators, using standards to be established by the state.

— Less than $10 million for new, minor construction projects.

— No money for a proposed new state library building in Raleigh or to

Miami Counts Losses In Riot Fires And Violence

MIAMI (AP) — Ten persons were killed, more than 120 injured and 70 arrested when violence erupted as angry blacks protested the acquittal of four white policemen in the death of a black man, police said.

A half-dozen buildings were gutted by fire and authorities said at least 10 blazes burned out of control because firefighters couldn't get to them.

Some victims had been mauled and mutilated, police said.

Sporadic incidents of looting, shootings, car fires, building fires and stonings began late Saturday afternoon, as word of the verdict in a Tampa courtroom spread through Miami.

The violence continued through the night, although police said reports of trouble diminished sharply as dawn came. But daylight revealed massive plumes of black smoke rising over the northwestern section of the city.

"We have many buildings on fire," said Stuart Kaufman, a spokesman for the Dade County Fire Department. "We are unable to fight the fires due to the high hazard. Our people are going in platoon from fire to fire." He said policemen were escorting the firefighters.

Kaufman said 10 to 15 fires burned unimpeded because firefighters couldn't get to them. One, believed to be a tire company, sent a black column of smoke several hundred feet into the sky. At its base a pulsating orange fireball could be seen.

The fires and many reports of violence were concentrated in a 76-by-37-block section containing the mostly-black Liberty City suburb.

One fire destroyed a chemical company building believed to contain chlorine and pesticides, Kaufman said. He said firefighters believed no hazardous fumes escaped.

A post office building and a junior high school were reported afire.

No firemen were reported injured, but county police officer Frank Rossi suffered a broken leg when a crowd yanked him from his car and beat him, said police Sgt. Pete Cuccaro.

He said at least 70 persons were arrested throughout the county on charges ranging from burglary to battery on a police officer.

Gov. Bob Graham ordered 500 National Guardsmen into the area Saturday evening as the violence spread from Liberty City to other black sections in Dade County.

"We've got racial problems all over the entire county: rocks and bottles being thrown, cars being set on fire, buildings being broken into and being set on fire, buildings being looted, shots being fired," said Dade police spokesman Douglas Reese.

At least 120 persons were taken to hospitals, victims of shootings, stabbings and beatings. At Jackson Memorial Hospital, the county's major emergency treatment center, spokesman Mike Marquez said at least 70 persons were treated for injuries ranging from burns and stab wounds to multiple fractures.

The injured included blacks, whites and Hispanics, he said.

A Dade County public safety officer said a black man had been shot and killed by police as he tried to kill a security guard.

One body was found in a burned-out car, another in northwest Miami, a third in a drug store. Other included an Oriental male, two white men in their 20s who were beaten and mauled, a Latin male and another shooting victim.

Details on the deaths were not immediately available, but Cuccaro of the Dade sheriff's office said the Oriental male had been mutilated, with one ear and his tongue cut off.

A Miami Herald reporter, Earni Young, said she watched a car repeatedly drive over the body of a young man in a street. "I think I saw it rip the man's arm off," she said. The man was believed to be among the fatalities.

Among the fires was one set at the Metro Justice Building, the county's seat of justice. There, police with batons, shotguns and dogs stormed the five-story building. They found a half-dozen demonstrators near one corner.

"Take me around the corner and whip me too!" one shouted as police dragged him away. "Kill me too!"

The four ex-policemen, cleared Saturday afternoon by an all-white jury in Tampa, all had been sheriff's officers.

Prosecutors had claimed they engaged in a wild chase through city streets that ended with a gang of officers yanking insurance executive Arthur McDuffie off his motorcycle. Prosecutors said police fatally beat the man, then tried to make it look as if his injuries had resulted from a motorcycle wreck.

Dade Circuit Judge Lenore Nesbitt had said the case was a racial "time bomb" in Miami and moved it to Tampa.

Commission Studies Plans For Auditing

Pitt County Commissioners this morning agreed to study proposals from several certified public accountant firms for the audit of county books for this year.

Proposals from four firms were received today, ranging from $9,500 to more than $12,500 for the audit, scheduled for completion by November.

The board also voted to establish a local review committee to review the preliminary results of the 1980 Census, due in June, in an effort to determine the accuracy of the preliminary figures. Members of the committee are to include county and municipal government officials.

Commissioners reappointed Rev. Jim Bailey and Mrs. H. R. Reeves to three year terms on the Pitt County Mental Health Authority, and reappointed Charlie Holliday and Ann Bellis to three year terms on the county's Sediment Control Commission. Carl Worthington was also named a member of the Juvenile Task Force.

In other business today, the board approved a petition to add Blacksmith Lane, a 3 mile road in Horseshoe Acres to the state road system.

The board also reviewed progress on the county office building.

Thousands Flee Mount St. Helens

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Abrasive volcanic ash coughed up by Mount St. Helens drifted over three states today following a volcanic eruption that killed at least five people, left 21 missing, and forced thousands to flee a mile-wide wall of steaming mud.

The ash — which prompted health warnings — fell half an inch deep on the ground up to 500 miles away following Sunday's convulsion that turned day into night in much of eastern Washington, Idaho and western Montana.

A plume of steam and ash was still billowing 14,000 feet high from a crater a half-mile wide today, but there were no sightings of the rivers of mud, rock and gas which roared down the flanks of the peak earlier. There were no sightings of lava flows during the eruption.

Both the Cowlitz and Toulle rivers were dropping after being swollen Sunday by the mudflows.

"It's still perking, but it is not as violent," said Sam Frear, a spokesman for the Forest Service said. "We hope we've seen the worst."

Rescue helicopters planned to take to the air to search for the 21 people still missing. The Red Cross estimates between 2,500 and 3,000 persons have been evacuated.

The explosion early Sunday knocked 1,300 feet off the top of the once pristine and snow-covered 9,677-foot peak, which until March had been quiet since 1857.

"It looks like the aftermath of an atomic explosion," said Dwight E. Reber, a pilot for Columbia Helicopters Inc. of Aurora, Ore.

Ash and flows of gas and newly formed rock poured from the mountain throughout Sunday.

The mudflow — the consistency of wet cement, moving at 50 mph — pushed floodwaters before it, swept up cars and houses and snapped concrete-and-steel bridges like toothpicks.

Besides the five people killed, at least 21 persons were missing on the sides of the mountain — including crusty, 84-year-old resort operator Harry Truman, who had long refused to leave.

Officials late Sunday reported eight killed, but said today that three people had been counted twice.

The victims apparently were caught in the flooding or by the heated mudslides as glaciers on the mountain melted, authorities said.

A helicopter crew saw two of the bodies trapped in a car about 15 miles from the volcano, said Air Force Reserve Capt. Robert J. Wead. "These people were fried with the heat," Wead said. "Trees and all the vegetation were laid out flat — singed, burned, steaming, sizzling — a terrible looking thing."

Bob Christiansen of the U.S. Geological Survey said a shock wave from the eruption devastated a miles-wide swath for 15 miles on the mountain's north side. He said not a tree stump was left.

Spirit Lake, a popular recreation area at the base of the volcano's north side, "doesn't exist," Reber said. It was obliterated by the flows of debris and hot mud flowing down the mountain's sides.

Forest fires, started by lightning from the ash cloud above the peak, burned thousands of acres. Fire officials said conditions were too dangerous for firefighters.

The ash and hot gases spewed from the volcano in a towering plume nearly nine miles high, with westerly winds spreading it across Washington and Idaho and into Montana.

At Missoula, Mont., about 500 miles downwind from Mount St. Helens, falling ash reduced visibility to almost zero and the State Highway Patrol said by that by nightfall all roads west and south of Missoula were closed. There was a half-inch of ash on the ground at Missoula.

Schools were closed in seven Montana communities including Helena, Missoula and Butte and the Montana Standard, Butte's daily newspaper, canceled home delivery this morning to allow carriers to stay home.

"It's just like midnight," Sgt. Larry Gamache of the Yakima County Sheriff's office said Sunday afternoon at Yakima, Wash., about 100 miles downwind. "All the street lights and neon signs have turned on. There is heavy smoke and ash — up to four inches of the sand-like stuff in some places."

The eruption was visible at Vancouver, Wash., more than 50 miles to the southwest, and the air pressure of the initial 8:39 a.m. PDT explosion was felt at Vancouver, B.C., more than 200 miles to the north.

The mountain began rumbling March 27, for the first time since 1857.

Every year one-half million people begin to wear contact lenses. Personal appearance seems to be the main reason. Better vision, freedom in sports and freedom from eyeglasses are other reasons. Lenses of today cover the cornea, floating on a natural tear layer and are only about the size of an aspirin. Nearsighted, farsighted, and people with an astigmatism can all wear lenses successfully. New materials and fitting techniques are making the number of wearers larger each year.

The desire to keep up to fashion trends has expanded most all fields including that of eyewear. At CLEAR VUE OPTICIANS, 1706 6th, Physicians Quadrangle Building A, we are also concerned that you look your best while you see your best. Let our capable staff help you select the eyewear that is fashionable, fitting and appropriate. Our reputation is built on service, reliability and customer satisfaction. Tel. 752-1446. EYE TIP: Be sure hands are clean and free from soap before touching the lens. Clean thoroughly after removing each lens.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I wanted to scream when I read your advice to the 15-year-old who asked how she could help her best friend, who was pretty and had a nice personality but had no dates because she was cross-eyed. You told her a "kind and loving friend" would suggest it might be possible to correct her cross-eyes with surgery.

People who give advice to their friends in that manner assume two things: that such friends are either (a) too stupid to have noticed the defect; or (b) too cowardly or dishonest with themselves to try to correct it. Both assumptions are an insult!

Many physical defects cannot be corrected, and those of us who have them rarely discuss even with our best friends the years of effort and thousands of dollars we've spent before the doctors advise us to resign ourselves to living with the problem and any social rejection it may incur.

A "kind and loving friend" would never mention the defect, but would instead say, "Being your friend has brought so much joy into my life that I consider you a person of beauty whom I love to see." Sign me...

STILL CROSS-EYED AFTER 10 YEARS OF EYE EXERCISES AND THREE OPERATIONS

DEAR STILL: You are right, of course, as I soon realized after seeing the feedback in my mail.

One letter came pouring in to support my naive and unrealistic approach. Mea culpa. Mea maxima culpa.

DEAR ABBY: There is this guy at work who keeps asking me to go out with him. So far I've turned him down because he's really nothing special, is rather loud, dresses carelessly and his language is on the crude side.

Do you think it would be OK if I go out with him until something better comes along?

MANITOBA, CANADA

DEAR MANITOBA: I wouldn't. What if something better comes along and sees you out with him?

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the person who objected to left-handed handshakes:

Boy Scouts always shake with the left hand, the reason being the left hand is closer to the heart. Baden-Powell, the founder of the Scouting movement, adopted this method of greeting people after his experience with the Masai tribe in Africa.

These people would approach with a shield in the left hand protecting the heart. As a sign of trust, they would transfer the shield to the right hand while raising the left in greeting, thereby exposing the heart.

FORMER SCOUT LEADER

DEAR LEADER: Many others wrote to inform me that Boy Scouts shake with the left hand, but you are the only one who told me why.

DEAR ABBY: I've been wanting to write this for years. I am disgusted with all those wives who write to say how disturbed they are because of their husbands' snoring.

I loved to hear my husband snore. I knew he was home, alive and safe with me.

I am a widow now, and I'd give anything to hear him snore again.

MISSING MANNY

DEAR ABBY: My heart goes out to the heartbroken parent of a gay daughter. Thank you for recommending Parents of Gays. They have been a godsend to us and other parents who ask themselves, "Where have we gone wrong?"

My husband and I are very grateful that our gay daughter has found a warm and stable relationship with a person she loves and who loves her.

Her housemate is as welcome and accepted into our family as the man who married our other daughter. Because being gay has caused our daughter so much pain, I will be the first to admit I wish she were not gay, just as I wish my hair wasn't curly and my husband didn't smoke. But these are things I cannot change, so I have learned to live with them.

I hope the parents of that gay daughter will accept her and the girl she loves, and get on with living the rest of their lives.

CONTENT PARENT

DEAR PARENT: Curly hair can be straightened and your husband can quit smoking if he really wants to, but in my opinion, the fundamental cause of homosexuality is biological — either genetic or hormonal. Otherwise, how can one account for the fact that homosexuals have brothers and sisters who are straight though raised in the same environment? However, it is possible for psychological factors to influence one's natural sexual preference after birth.

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How To Write Letters for All Occasions." Workshop Planned At PCC

A workshop involving the General Education Development (GED) testing program will be held on the Pitt Community College campus May 21 from 3-5 p.m. in room 209 of the Humber Building.

The meeting is open to the public and especially to those persons who may have friends who did not complete a formal high school program of instruction.

During this session, information will be disseminated on requirements for testing, testing procedures and description of test content. Dr. Larry Roberson, state GED administrator, will give a brief history of the GED and will be available to answer questions during the question and answer portion of the program.

Representatives from organizations which are directly or indirectly associated with sharing information with their clients have been invited.

Joy Sasser, GED examiner at PCC pointed out that any person who passes the five sections of the GED test will receive a high school diploma from the state board of education.

Though formal reservations for the workshop are not required, persons planning to attend may call Mrs. Sasser at 756-3130, ext. 231.

Serenaded On Birthday

ROME (AP) — Moving about the crowd at St. Peter's Square on his "popemobile," John Paul II was serenaded by choruses and bands and received 50 home-baked cakes as he celebrated his 60th birthday. Greeting 150,000 well-wishers Sunday from atop his flat-top jeep, the Polish-born pontiff said, "You say I am one year older today, but in fact, I am one year younger because I am that much closer to death — a new birth."

He celebrated an outdoor Mass for 50,000 students and later visited a nearby parish where 3,000 persons sang birthday songs to him. Parish residents presented him with a cake, made by 10

Diet facts & fallacies

You know you can be successful losing weight when you want to be slim as much as you would like to go to Hawaii! Have you ever noticed that when you really want to do something, nothing is an effort or a bother. If you were to go to Hawaii you would have to buy your ticket, find someone to take care of the dog, have the postman hold your mail, and pack your bags before you could leave. You would do all these things willingly because doing them would get you there. The same thing is true when you are dieting. When you really have the vision of how wonderful you are going to feel and look when you get the extra weight off, dieting will not seem like a punishment. Each day you stay on your diet, is getting you that much closer to your goal. Whenever you find yourself getting disheartened or bored with dieting, switch your thoughts and remember where all these efforts are going to get you.

Wins Confidence Vote On Transfer Of JC Funds

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Despite a disclosure that the North Carolina Jaycees used funds raised for charity to pay national membership dues, the state organization Sunday gave a vote of confidence to its former president.

J. Harold Herring of Mount Olive, a former state president and currently unopposed in his bid for presidency of the U.S. Jaycees, told the state executive committee that he would drop out of the race if he failed to receive the group's endorsement.

Herring headed the N. C. Jaycees when organization officials borrowed $143,249 from funds designated for a 23-bed burn center at North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill to pay membership fees and dues to the national Jaycees.

The disclosure Saturday rocked the Jaycees' annual convention in Asheville. News of the transfers led some Jaycee members to charge that the money had been used to increase the even though he is long gone as a Republican candidate. He now is running as an independent, and therefore asked that his name be dropped from the late GOP primaries. But the ballots were set before he made the switch, and there's no reason to think Anderson or his allies are unhappy with the situation. It lets him pluck off a share of the GOP vote here and there, just to show that while he's gone from the Republican race, he is not entirely forgotten.

He certainly isn't forgotten by Bush, who claims Anderson votes are getting in the way of his comeback, and aiding the Reagan cause.

Citing the returns from Maryland, James Baker, Bush's campaign manager, said Anderson votes tipped the primary to Reagan. Reagan won by 7 percentage points; Anderson got 10 percent of the vote. "We would get most of that vote," Baker said.

He's probably right. Reagan agrees that Anderson voters wouldn't be likely prospects for him.

Figuring that way, Maryland's popular vote would have been just about even, as its delegate count was. But ties aren't going to do Bush any good now. He needs a succession of startling upsets.

And it really doesn't do much for Bush's basic argument — that he is the most electable Republican — if he can't convince GOP primary voters that they shouldn't be spending their ballots on the vestige of a candidate no longer in the competition.

Anderson is on the ballot again Tuesday in Michigan and Oregon. His name is entered in California, as well. Bush must have those states and more to lend any credibility to his claim that he can shock Republican delegates into wholesale defections from Reagan.

The more likely outcome is that what has been happening will keep happening and that, in the end, that Reagan bandwagon may not look so bad to Bush.

He has insisted all along that he would not accept the vice-presidential nomination. For a presidential candidate to say anything else would be to concede the nomination. But for a losing presidential candidate, being No. 2 can be an inviting prospect.

prestige of state Jaycee officers in the national organization.

The executive committee voted Sunday to borrow enough money to repay all the money still owed to the burn center foundation.

Officials said the Jaycees will need around $56,330 to repay the N.C. Jaycee Charity Foundation the remainder of the $143,249. The remaining $85,922 has already been repaid, they said.

The $143,249 was part of about $300,000 raised by North Carolina Jaycees for the foundation during the past five years, mostly through the sale of jars of grape jelly, to help finance construction of a $2-million burn center at N.C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill.

Such transfers will be prohibited in the future under a bylaw adopted by the committee. The executive group also order an audit of the charity foundation, the first in its five-year history.

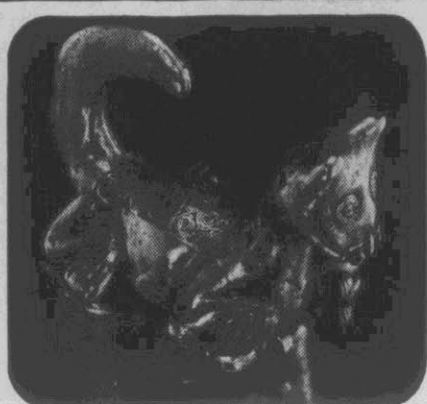

Herring, currently vice president of the national

Jaycees organization, said the money was borrowed in good faith, with every intention of being repaid. "The sad thing about all this is that a lot of positive things we do somehow get overshadowed," Herring said.

FOCUS

Gold of El Dorado

The "Gold of El Dorado" has been the subject of dreams, adventure and tragedy. It is also the name of an exhibit of fabulous gold objects from Colombia now on display at the Field Museum in Chicago. The Spaniards exploring Latin America began to hear stories about El Dorado about 400 years ago. Various legends described El Dorado as a lost city, a temple filled with treasures, a mountain of gold, or an Indian chief, covered with gold dust, who threw gold objects into a certain lake. The Spaniards never found El Dorado, but during the 16th century, they sent more than 200,000 pounds of gold from the New World to Spain. The gold objects in the exhibit came from graves the Spaniards never found.

DO YOU KNOW — What does "El Dorado" mean?

Mormon Crowd Fills Rose Bowl

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — It resembled a Super Bowl crowd with more than 87,000 persons packing the Rose Bowl.

But it was the largest gathering in the history of the Mormon Church Sunday when church president Spencer W. Kimball told his followers that the church's work is not complete.

In a voice sometimes faltering, yet with traces of passion, Kimball encouraged the congregation to bring in more Hispanic members in the southwestern United States. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints membership in southern California is estimated at 250,000.

'Welfare' Disappears From Federal Lexicon, But Goes On

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Welfare" is gone, but not forgotten. The word disappeared from the federal lexicon two weeks ago when the old Department of Health, Education and Welfare shipped its "Education" to the new Department of Education.

What was left of HEW became the Department of Health and Human Services. The name is shorter, but the new department is left with 140,000 employees administering $200 billion worth of programs — welfare and otherwise.

Several editorial writers have grumbled that the change marks a triumph for doublespeak, a not so subtle way of getting unpopular welfare programs out of the public's eye.

"Hell, no," says John Blamphin, a spokesman for the agency. "We didn't develop the nomenclature. Muriel Humphrey did."

As introduced by Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., the bill creating the Department of Education provided that the old Department of Health, Education and Welfare would become simply the Department of Health and Welfare.

However, then-Sen. Muriel Humphrey, widow of Hubert Humphrey, argued that the word welfare had become tarnished since HEW was born in 1953 and offered a successful amendment designating the reshuffled agency the Department of Health and Human Services — HHS.

A history of HEW indicates the controversy over use of the word "welfare" as part of an agency title goes back even further.

HEW replaced what now sounds like the oddly named Federal Security Agency, a creature of the New Deal born in 1939. President Franklin Delano Roosevelt started it in lieu of a Cabinet-level "Department of Social Welfare," which a panel on government reorganization headed by Louis Brownlow had recommended to him.

In his 1973 book, "The Department of Health, Education and Welfare," former HEW official Rufus E. Miles Jr. recounted: "At that time, 'security' meant economic security. It was a clear, strong word, with nothing but good overtones for most of the American people — for all but the die-hard conservatives who inveighed against excessive security as a demoralizing influence."

In his autobiography, Brownlow wrote: "The Federal Security Agency was named 'security' instead of 'welfare' because the vice president, John Nance Garner, told (Roosevelt) there was a great objection to the terms 'welfare,' 'social welfare,' 'public welfare,' etc. in Congress, that its use could only lead to a continuation of the welfare activities of the government, which should be stopped as soon as possible, but there was no objection to the word 'security' because it looked as if the Social Security Board might be a pretty good thing."

In his book, Miles related that when Dwight D. Eisenhower created HEW, the late Sen. Robert A. Taft, R-Ohio, advised against using welfare in the name.

There was some support for a Department of Human Resources, "but that sounded totalitarian," Miles wrote. And a proposal to call it Department of Health, Education and Social Security died when someone "painted out that its initials spelled HESS — Hitler's deputy to whom 'Mein Kampf' was dedicated."

William Safire, the New York Times' pundit and wordsmith, belittled "human services" as "vague, but its distinguishes the activity of that department from, say, canine services. Nor will anyone confuse its employees with apes."

The Washington Star thundered, "Why not a Department of Human Justice or a Department of Human Commerce? ...The Founding Fathers, from whom we become ever distant, pledged to 'promote the general welfare' and wrote not at all of promoting human services."

The Hartford Courant snapped, "'Welfare' may have its weaknesses, but it surely has more to offer than vapid jargon. The world was not made a better place when libraries became media centers or learning resource centers."

Meanwhile, down the street from HHS, the new Department of Education has a simple, straightforward name and an official acronym that fits — ED.

But it was almost not so. One diehard opponent of the new department, Rep. John N. Erlenborn, R-Ill., tried to convince the House to call it the Department of Public Education and Youth, or DOPEY for short.

Russians Seen Moving To Stay In Afghanistan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet troops in Afghanistan are bringing in their wives and computers and seem to be settling down permanently, U.S. government analysts say.

They estimate the number of Soviet troops in the country at 85,000, with more to come if continuing efforts to put down the divided, but effective rebels are not more successful.

The capital of Kabul is strongly held for the time being and the Americans, who asked not to be identified by name, said they foresee the weakened government of communist President Babrak Karmal being able to hold power unless the Soviets decide to back someone else.

But the three main provincial towns are contested, many country areas are in rebel hands, the Afghan army is growing weaker, and some Soviet equipment is turning out to be inadequate, the analysts say.

One new weapon detected by western intelligence is a new computer system designed for battle management.

Other observed signs of long-term Soviet occupation include:

—Soviet officers are reported to be assigned to Afghanistan for a two-year tour of duty.

—Officers' dependents have been brought in, through some were evacuated when there was trouble in Kabul last winter.

—Soviet troops have been digging wells and building water storage for the dry season.

—Facilities for ground and air forces are being built and improved, and large stocks of Soviet supplies have been seen throughout the country.

The American analysts say Karmal is so completely under Soviet domination that, except for a dozen sentries at the main gate, the Soviets control the security of his palace.

His bodyguard, chief, driver, doctor and six chief advisers all are Soviets and Soviet advisers hold the senior jobs in all Afghan government departments except the ministry of foreign affairs, they said.

Soviet control of the country appears to be important because of the internal weakness of the new Afghan Communist government the Soviets brought with them.

When Soviet troops entered Hungary and put down the Hungarian uprising of 1956, they brought in a new Hungarian Communist government headed by Janos Kadar. He is still there, and so are the Soviet troops who installed him.

In Afghanistan, the People's Democratic Party, as the Afghan Communists are called, has two main factions. Karmal heads the Parcham faction, which favors temporary alliances with non-Communists.

The Khalq group is more numerous and, according to the U.S. analysts, takes a harder line that emphasizes "class struggle." It was led by Hafizullah Amin, who was ousted from the leadership and later killed after the Soviets arrived Dec. 27. Karmal replaced him.

Karmal has tried to appeal to Moslem and tribal leaders for support, but one of the analysts call his attempt "a rather total failure."

The Afghan army, 100,000 strong when the Soviets came in, is now said to be down to 30,000 or 35,000 because of desertions and because some units are believed to have been disarmed and disbanded after they clashed with the Soviets. The analysts say virtually all senior Afghan officers are either dead, jailed or in exile.

As a result, the Soviets find the Afghan army untrustworthy for the job of holding down the rebels, which U.S. officials say the Soviets originally intended it to do.

But the rebels themselves are seen as having little if any coordination. They analysts portray them as unhappy with the exile groups who say they represent them in Pakistan. A big assembly from inside Afghanistan met in Peshawar, Pakistan last week and chose a leadership structure. But it is too soon to see how effective that may be.

INDEPENDENCE REFERENDUM TUESDAY — On Tuesday, Quebecers vote "oui" or "non" on whether to give their provincial government the go-ahead to negotiate a form of secession from the rest of English-speaking Canada. Map locates the 80-percent French-speaking province of 6 million people. Latest polls give pro-Canada federalists 49 percent of the vote and the separatists 37 percent, with 14 percent either undecided or refusing to answer. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Much Support For Independent Quebec Seen Among The Young

By CHARLES HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

MONTREAL (AP) — The voters of Quebec have an appointment with history Tuesday as they decide whether to begin the process of secession from Canada. But if the people on Rue Sainte Catherine are any example, Quebecers have their eye as much on their pocketbook as on the history book.

"I know what I get from the federal government, but I don't know what I'll get from Quebec. You get a pension from Ottawa," said Gilles Ferlend, a 54-year-old bank security guard, in a comment typical among those who say they will vote "no"

Tuesday.

Quebecers are being asked in the referendum to authorize the government of their province, headed by separatist Premier Rene Levesque, to negotiate with the rest of Canada for Quebec's political independence, but with continued tariff-free trade and a common currency with Canada.

The separatists of largely French-speaking Quebec say sovereignty is the only answer to English-Canadian domination that they contend has held down their province economically and threatens the survival of its French culture.

St. Catherine Street intersects Montreal's East End, an old bastion of the French working class where factories, warehouses and solid rows of cramped two- and three-family houses crowd each other near the St. Lawrence River.

If sovereignty is to be a costly political experiment, as its opponents say, the people of the East End clearly cannot afford it.

"I'll be voting no," Ferlend's friend, Edouard Trepanier, told an American reporter.

"Levesque says he's going to give you this, he's going to give you that, but I don't believe him," said the 58-year-old shipping clerk.

He, too, mentioned the pension question. Levesque pledges an independent Quebec will maintain current social security pension levels, but older Quebecers are worried about the uncertainties of the province's economic future if it strikes out on its own.

Some in the East End look at their pocketbooks and decide to vote "yes."

Rene Leclair was laid off from his General Motors job some time ago, used up his year's worth of unemployment benefits and now must live on $300 a month in welfare — "and $150 of that goes to my rent."

He said he continues to look for work but "no company will take an old man." He is 57.

"Levesque wants to do something about this. He wants a guaranteed income so a person like me gets more than $300 a month," he said.

"Quebec is richer than people try to make it sound," said postal worker Pierre Cote, 30, sipping from a soft-drink can labeled in both French and English.

He rattled off a litany of reasons for a "yes" vote: "The French people can't develop if they stay within Canada. The Parti Quebecois (Levesque's party) is trying to develop the province....

We want to live in French." Levesque has found his greatest support among younger Quebecers.

"I'm voting 'yes' so we can have our culture and our French language," said denim-clad, mustachioed young Roger Martin as he waited for a bus.

"Only the young ones are unhappy. I don't know why," said Marceline Woods, a 30-year-old East Ender of half-English, half-French ancestry. "Maybe they don't want to speak English. There's a 'yes' upstairs, but he's 19 years old and he knows nothing."

Ambivalent feelings of pride in Quebec and attachment to Canada are tearing at the hearts of many Quebecers.

"I want to try it," housewife Pierrette Rivard, 45, said of sovereignty-association. "I'm tired of always depending on somebody else.... When you buy something it's always made in the United States or somewhere else. We can make the same things."

But an elderly nun, who preferred not to be identified, said she was "very happy" in Canada.

"Why not stay?" she asked. "It's a good country."

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market was mixed today, pausing after last week's strong advance.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which registered gains in each of the past four sessions, dropped back 2.82 to 824.06 in the first half hour today.

Gainers held a slight lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Today's economic news produced several developments, but none that caught Wall Streeters by surprise.

The government reported that personal income rose by a scant 0.1 percent in April.

New York's Morgan Guaranty Trust, meanwhile, lowered its prime lending rate from 16 1/2 to 16 percent.

Sony led the active list in early trading, down 1/4 at 8 1/4. A 250,000-share block changed hands at that price.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 4.01 to 826.54, extending its gain for the week to 20.74 points.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 4-3 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 31.71 million shares, against 41.12 million the day before.

The NYSE's composite index added 19 to 61.23.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 4.37 at 257.81.

N.C. Budget.... Discrepancies In MPG Ratings

WASHINGTON (AP) - The federal government's gas mileage ratings used in auto advertisements are about 21 percent too high on the average, partly because manufacturers exploit loopholes in federal testing, a House study says.

The report, issued Sunday by the House Government Operations Committee Sunday, says many of the prototype cars in the tests get better mileage than production models. And some automakers have supplied inaccurate test information, it says.

The Environmental Protection Agency "has contributed to the increased mileage gap" by not being tough enough on automakers, the report claims.

For example, it says, EPA tests found a 1979 Chevrolet Chevette prototype model got 25.8 miles per gallon but a production model got 22.5 miles per gallon.

The report says EPA tests found these shortfalls in mileage between prototypes and production models of other cars: 1978 Chrysler New Yorker-Newport, 6.5 percent; 1978 Mercedes 300D-300CD, 13.2 percent; 1978 Renault LeCar, 13.7 percent; 1978 Volkswagen Dasher, 12.9 percent; 1979 Chevrolet Camaro, 6 percent; 1979 Fiat X19, 7.1 percent; 1979 Honda Civic, 9.5 percent; 1979 Fuji A26L-A66L, 10.9 percent; 1977 AMC CJ-5 Jeep, 18.3 percent, and 1979 Chevrolet Suburban Pickup, 8.4 percent.

The patrolman reported that Adkins was traveling west on NC 903 when he came around a curve and struck Ellis.

Trooper Taylor, noting that no charges have been filed, said that Ellis was dead at the scene of the accident. He added that fatality took place around 11:15 p.m.

Agnew Had Gun Permit
WASHINGTON (AP) - "After being seven months in a pressure cooker of attempts to get me to resign office," former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew says he feared for his life and got a permit for a handgun when he resigned.

But he never carried the gun, he said Sunday on the NBC program "Meet The Press."

Agnew, who pleaded no contest to a single charge of failing to report in come of $29,500 in 1967 while governor of Maryland, resigned as Richard M. Nixon's vice president in 1973.

In his book, "Go Quietly...Or Else," he said his resignation followed veiled threats on his life, allegedly relayed through Nixon's chief of staff, Alexander Haig.

"I never said it was a probability that my life was in danger," he explained. "I said it was one of the factors that crossed my mind and it was the straw that broke the camel's back after all the pressures that had been put on me."

Haig, through an aide, has labeled Agnew's claim "preposterous."

Man Is Hit Pushing Bicycle
WINTERVILLE - A 75-year-old Winterville man was killed late Sunday night when he was struck by a car as he pushed his bicycle along NC 903.

Highway Patrolman Coy Taylor, who investigated the fatality, said that Tom Ellis of 542 Hillcrest Street, was pushing the bicycle in the west bound lane of the highway some 2.8 miles west of Winterville when he was hit by a car operated by Heber Michael Adkins of 2603 Rouse Road, Kinston.

The system will allow the state to use hundreds of millions of dollars in cash balances that now collect interest in banks, already appropriated for road projects but unspent because of construction timetables.

Hunt said the practice was "financially sound and very practical," and in use in other states.

The practice is analogous, budget analysts say, to buying an item on time but paying no interest charges. Road projects can be initiated under the method when the state has enough money on hand to start construction, but not to pay the full costs when completed years later.

Importantly, however, the accounting switch will create a cash windfall in its first year of use which analysts say will amount to possibly $57.3 million.

Hunt denied that the practice was a form of deficit spending and said an attorney general's opinion confirms that the change will not violate a constitutional requirement for a balanced budget.

"It's a windfall in the first year," Hunt said. "It doesn't bail me out. It balls the people out who need these roads."

REVIVAL SERVICES
 Revival services will begin tonight at Cedar Grove Missionary Baptist Church and continue through May 23. The Rev. W.K. Raynor of Jacksonville will be the evangelist for the week. Services begin nightly at 7:30 o'clock. The Rev. Jasper Suggs invites the public to attend.

Strike!

NEW YORK (AP) — Just four days before a strike deadline, talks have been suspended in the baseball contract dispute with no new negotiations scheduled in the gloomy picture that threatens to interrupt the season Thursday.

"We have recessed negotiations subject to my call," said federal mediator Kenneth Moffett, who returned to Washington, D.C., following Sunday's fruitless talks. "I met privately with both sides and there was no movement as far as either side was concerned. Then I decided to call the recess because there had been no movement in either separate or joint meetings."

Sunday's joint meeting lasted no more than two or three minutes, although the two negotiating teams held morning and afternoon sessions. Moffett, who has been involved in these talks since March 31, seemed depressed.

"The chances for averting a strike are not good," he said. Moffett said he would remain in touch with both sides and expected to summon them back to talks before the midnight Thursday deadline. It was expected the recall would not take place before Wednesday.

"There has been no progress and the climate is highly charged," Moffett said.

The free agent compensation issue continues to block the talks. Management wants relief in the form of replacement players for free agents who sign with other teams and the players association has balked at that idea.

On Friday, each side rejected proposals from the other and the negotiations have been stalemated since. Management turned down a union bid that the rest of the contract be settled while the free agent issue is placed on hold for a two-year study. Then the players rejected the owners' pledge to maintain terms of the expired 1976 agreement until spring training of 1981 while bargaining continues on a new contract.

"A comprehensive proposal was made to the players," said Ray Grebey, chief negotiator for management. "It is still there and the clubs have pledged to maintain the status quo in all respects while bargaining toward a new agreement."

Marvin Miller, executive director of the union, rejected the latest owner proposal, objecting particularly to the criteria that defines premium free agent players for whom compensation would be due.

"Under their criteria, batters who hit .222 and pitchers with an earned run average of more than 6.00 would be classified as 'premium players,'" Miller said.

As for the owners' offer to maintain terms of the agreement that expired Dec. 31, Miller called it "a nothing proposal," and accused management of trying to get "a year free."

"It is clearly an attempt to con the players into accepting no improvements in the contract ... to play under 1976 terms while the owners collect 1980 revenues."

N. Y., Flyers Resume Battle

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — The regular season bore the agonies of frustration for two New York Islanders.

Center Lorne Henning watched 41 of the 80 games, not because of injury but because...well, because Coach Al Arbour and General Manager Bill Torrey said so. For defenseman Denis Potvin, there were 49 games on the sidelines because of an injury to his shoulder and surgery on his right thumb.

Now, though, the Islanders are two victories away from the first National Hockey League title of their eight-year history. And a major factor in that performance has been the play of two men whose regular-season action totaled 80 games played.

Never was their contribution more significant than Saturday night, when New York nailed the Philadelphia Flyers 6-2 and took a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup championship series. Henning scored a record-setting short-handed goal and Potvin paced a five-goal power-play blitz with two goals and two assists as the Islanders roared back from an 8-3 defeat in Game Two.

Blasting Toward A Win

Bruce Lietzke of Afton, Okla., blasts from the sand trap to within a foot of the fifth hole during the final round of the Colonial National

Allison Finds Groove

DOVER, Del. (AP) — When you've been around a race track as long as Bobby Allison has, mysteries sometimes quickly solve themselves.

Allison spent much of the early part of Sunday's Mason-Dixon 500 stock car race searching for the "groove," that mystical perfect circuit, of Dover Down International Speedway.

Then suddenly, in a brush of metal against concrete, he found it and rode that route to an easy victory.

"The groove never did move around, but we just kept hunting for it," said Allison, who kept running high, then low, then in the middle of the track.

On one high-winding ride through turn No. 4 of the high-banked oval, he brushed the outside retaining wall with the right rear fender of his Ford Thunderbird. Damage was negligible but Allison had learned his lesson.

"The best groove was at the bottom," said the veteran driver from Hueytown, Ala. "I figured that about a lap after I hit the wall."

Another accident in the same turn opened the door for Allison to record his first victory of the NASCAR Grand National season and the fourth of his career at Dover Downs.

Kyle Petty, the son of driver Richard Petty, spun in the fourth turn on lap 280. Darrell Waltrip, the leader, hit Petty with his Chevrolet and Benny Parsons, in second place, was rammed from the rear by a fourth car as he tried to elude the crash.

"The fellow that hit me from behind like to have broke my back," said Parsons, who dropped out with a sore shoulder and extensive damage to his Chevy.

Waltrip was able to continue but dropped far back as repairs were made. He later retired with a dropped valve in his race car's engine.

The start of the race was delayed for 1½ hours as workers dried the track from heavy morning rains.

ECU Names Interim AD

Dr. Ernest W. Schwarz, a professor in East Carolina's Department of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Safety, has been named as ECU's interim Director of Athletics, it was announced Monday.

Schwarz, a member of ECU's Athletic Committee, replaces Bill Cain, who resigned last Monday. Cain's resignation was effective June 30 but the former ECU AD will take the month as vacation.

A member of the ECU faculty since 1966, Schwarz received his undergraduate and graduate degrees at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Lietzke Wins By 1

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — At 28, Bruce Lietzke admits he chokes a bit, marvels at Tom Watson and Ben Crenshaw, lacks a killer instinct and is leery of golfing superstardom.

He lies, or at least it seemed so Sunday.

The slender, curly haired Lietzke gunned down Watson and Crenshaw in a glittering televised shootout and swept to a 1-shot, $54,000 verdict in the $300,000 Colonial National Invitational tournament.

He fired pressure-packed closing rounds of 71 and 69 on the treacherous par-70 Colonial course, scuttled a Crenshaw playoff bid with a clutch 25-foot putt and torpedoed Watson's ballyhooed "Texas Bonanza."

"It was an exciting afternoon," he said.

Lietzke secured his fifth tour title with birdies at the 70th and 72nd holes, overtaking Crenshaw with his 25-footer at 18 for a four-round total of 271.

That 9-under-par figure stemmed largely from a record-tying 63 in the rain-delayed first round Friday and a flurry of critical shots in Sunday's two-round wrap-up.

His longtime friendly rival and fishing companion, Crenshaw, matched the closing 69 for a 272 and second place money of $32,400.

"Well, there it goes again," sighed Crenshaw as he watched Lietzke's putt die in the cup at the final green. He said it was his seventh time as a runnerup.

"I'm getting a little tired of it," he grumbled.

Young Jeff Mitchell stripped five shots from par for a 65 and charged into third place, two behind the champion and a stroke ahead of Watson and Doug Tewell at 274.

Watson hit town after four consecutive triumphs and needed a victory here to earn the $200,000 offered to anyone who could win both last week's Byron Nelson and the Colonial.

His double-bogey six on No. 9 crippled his bonanza bid but he miraculously remained a threat until a 50-foot birdie putt lipped the cup at the 71st hole.

Instead of the potential $254,000 jackpot, Watson settled for $13,200. "I hope there's going to be some more bonanzas and that I'm on the opening end," he said.

As the leader here from start-to-finish, Lietzke admitted feeling abnormal pressure, particularly Sunday.

"There was some choking going on out there. I was choking but still performing. I felt the pressure all day," he said. "People complain about golf not being exciting..."

"If they could have been inside me and felt the emotions I felt the last couple of holes...this was as exciting a golf tournament as I've ever been in."

Scrambling pars at the 14th and 15th holes kept Lietzke alive in the final round and he regained a share of the lead when he nearly aced the 16th — where he made a hole-in-one Friday.

Cost Of Lighting Is Hitting City

The cost of street lighting and traffic control lights is approaching an annual expense of over a quarter of a million dollars for the city and local officials are worried about supplying the public's demand for additional street lights, they report.

City Manager Ed Wyatt pointed out that the city is analyzing all line item expenses in preparation for submitting the 1980-81 budget to the City Council. He mentioned that inflation has resulted in costs related to street lighting and traffic control to rapidly accelerate, and they are expected to go even higher.

"Energy costs hit us everywhere," Wyatt said, "and we're hurting in the cost of electric power we consume through our street lights and traffic control lights."

The city manager explained, "The city pays a fixed charge to Greenville Utilities Commission for each light based on wattage, life of the pole and light fixture, and maintenance expense." This cost, he said, is expected to climb above the $247,000 allocated in the city's 1979-80 budget.

Police Chief Glenn Cannon has advised the city manager that recession means more security problems and citizen concern for protection.

According to Gail Meeks, assistant to the city manager, since the city's Citizen Concern Program was implemented in January, requests for additional street lights are averaging more than one a week.

She said a simple request for an additional street light can run up the city's light bill from $150-$200, depending on the type of light installed if the request is approved. Generally, it was pointed out, a 175 watt mercury vapor light costing about $80 annually will be adequate.

In situation where the city feels a higher level of lighting is needed to supplement existing lights, the more expensive sodium vapor light may be the solution. The sodium light, which can cost close to $150 annually when installed, is more energy efficient and costs less to operate during the life of the light fixture.

Wyatt said that despite the increase in city expenses, the city has traditionally set a high standard for municipal street lighting and reasonable requests for new lights will continue to be evaluated properly and an honest effort made to take care of problems with lights.

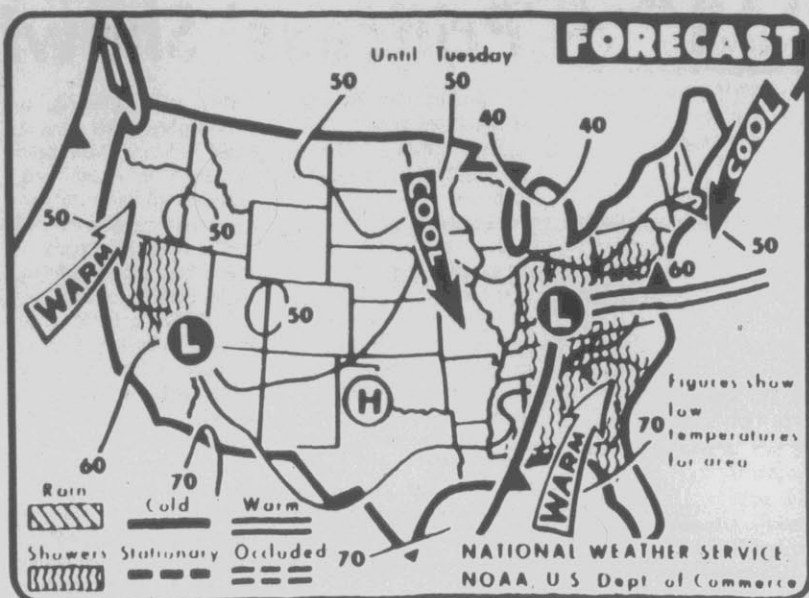

He added that citizens who feel they have a problem with lights on their streets can make their requests known to the city by calling Mrs. Meeks at 752-4137, Ext. 224.

The intruder fled through the kitchen door after the knife was broken, the chief reported.

Prison Department bloodhounds were used to track the intruder, but the trail was lost near the intersection of Norcott Circle and Skinner Street.

CLEAN-UP BENEFITS WASHINGTON (AP) — A study of federal money spent to clean up the nation's lakes shows that the improved water provided benefits worth at least four times the cost of the clean-up, says the Environmental Protection Agency.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are expected through early Tuesday for much of the eastern portion of the nation, ranging from Pennsylvania through the Midwest and south as far as the Gulf Coast, according to the National Weather Service. Showers are also anticipated for parts of California and Nevada. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Warm, humid air and partly cloudy skies with a chance of showers and thunderstorms will be the rule across North Carolina this afternoon and tonight.

Highs today will be in the 70s in the mountains and the 80s elsewhere, according to the National Weather Service. Occasional rain or showers and scattered thunderstorms were expected across the state tonight and Tuesday.

Lows tonight will be in the upper 50s to low 60s in the mountains and the mid and upper 60s elsewhere. Highs Tuesday will be in the low 80s for the southeast portion of the state and the 70s elsewhere.

A cold front stretching from New York to eastern Texas was moving slowly eastward today, and a low pressure center was expected to press into western Tennessee by this evening, advancing eastward across North Carolina tonight and Tuesday.

The low pressure was expected to bring additional rain, which will be especially heavy in mountainous regions, to the Tarheel state.

Rashtchian, who holds the rank of 2nd lieutenant in the Iranian Navy, says he can't go home because he is accused of being an agent for SAVAK, the shah's secret police.

Incident Probe Is Continuing

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning that an investigation into an incident early Friday morning that resulted in the suspension of a uniformed division lieutenant is still underway.

Lt. Edward E. Laughinghouse, who joined the department full-time in April 1964 after serving five months as a reserve officer, was suspended for allegedly reporting for duty after having been drinking — a violation of department policy.

Cannon, who was on vacation last week, said news from WNCN-TV were called shortly after midnight and told that Laughinghouse, a shift supervisor, had reported for work at midnight after having been drinking. After coming to the Police Department to film Laughinghouse, the television station reporters called the city manager, who in turn, called Cannon, between 1:30 and 2 a.m.

The chief said he came to police headquarters, talked with Laughinghouse, and reported that Laughinghouse voluntarily took a Breathalyzer test, administered by the Highway Patrol, which indicated that the officer had, in fact, been drinking.

Although Cannon declined to say what the Breathalyzer reading was, reliable sources said it was less than the 10 percent blood alcohol content level which, under North Carolina law, is a presumption of guilt of driving under the influence.

Departmental policy, according to Cannon, provides that officers may be requested to take a Breathalyzer test.

The chief added that the incident is "an internal affair and will be treated as such."

City Manager Ed Wyatt noted today, "we are seriously concerned about this situation, and we'll make a determination on the matter as far as it relates to Lt. Laughinghouse in the next day or two."

Police Investigate Attack

Greenville police are investigating an incident early today in which a 25-year-old woman was cut by an attacker who entered her home about 12:30 a.m. and attempted to rape her.

Chief Glenn Cannon, who said the incident occurred at an apartment off Hooker Road, said the attacker gained entrance to the dwelling through a kitchen window. He added that the intruder took a knife from the kitchen, got into bed with the woman, who then awakened and began struggling with the man.

During the struggle, the woman received knife wounds to her arms, neck and back. She also received a wound to her right hand when she grabbed the knife blade and broke the weapon.

The intruder fled through the kitchen door after the knife was broken, the chief reported.

Prison Department bloodhounds were used to track the intruder, but the trail was lost near the intersection of Norcott Circle and Skinner Street.

Actor Making Sales Pitches

NEW YORK (AP) — By night, on stage at the St. James Theater, he sells himself to hundreds of people as the famous P.T. Barnum in the new musical, Barnum. But in the afternoons, Jim Dale makes sales pitches at Julie's Artisan Gallery.

"I find it relaxing," Dale said in today's Daily News.

The upper East Side gallery is owned by the actor's girlfriend, Julie Schaffer.

"Selling is as much of a challenge as acting on a stage. Instead of selling yourself to 2,000 people every night, you go one-on-one with a customer in the shop. Making a sale is like receiving ing applause. It makes you feel unbelievable," he said.

Few customers have recognized him, which is the way Dale likes it.

And the other day, he almost sold a "rocking centaur" valued at $3,000.

Reports 'Peace' With Ex-Wife

NEW YORK (AP) — For a while, it seemed like singer-songwriter Mac Davis was living one of his cheatin' and weepin' country ballads. He and his wife Sarah split, and she married Davis' onetime friend and musical ally Glen Campbell.

But the bitterness has passed, and Davis told People magazine he's made his peace with his ex-wife.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠64 ♥854 ♦Q10875 ♠A62
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♠ 2 ♦ ?
What action do you take?
A.—East has already announced a hand of game-going strength to his partner, so your chances of preempting successfully are slight. Any violent action just gives the opponents an added weapon—the penalty double. If you want to convey to your partner that you have diamonds and some values, the cheapest way to accomplish that is to double East's cue-bid.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J72 ♥Q854 ♦963 ♠742
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♥ 2 ♠ Dble. Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—The simplest way to arrive at the answer is to eliminate those possibilities which are unsound. First, don't even contemplate passing—at 100 each, overtricks add up. Next, dismiss all thought of bidding one no trump—you are more than an ace short of the values for that forward-going bid. The only option left open is to bid your longest suit as cheaply as possible. In this case, it's your cheapest three-card suit—bid one spade!

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ65 ♥K105 ♦A98 ♠A72
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?
A.—Don't make a takeout double. You have a balanced hand with stoppers in the enemy suit, and the values for an opening bid of one no trump. The only way to show this type of hand is to overcall one no trump.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A ♦10952 ♥K982 ♠KJ62
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ Dble. 2 ♠ ?

What action do you take?
A.—You are strong enough to drive to game regardless of the vulnerability, but you cannot be sure of the right contract. Partner rates to have four hearts for his takeout double, but he might have only three. Rather than stab in the dark, force partner to select the strain and advise him of your strength by cue-bidding three spades.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q10652 ♥74 ♦84 ♠A965
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ 2 ♦ Pass Pass Dble. Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Since you have not yet bid, partner's double is for takeout, not penalty. Two spades would be a grievous underbid—you would be forced to take that action with five low spades, a doubleton heart and nothing on the side. You have quite a fair hand, and you should bring this to partner's attention by jumping to three spades.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ742 ♥7 ♦KJ54 ♠K92
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Beware of the song of the Lorelei. Opposite a partner who has made a vulnerable opening bid, you have the values for game, but you might not have a source of tricks for three no trump, nor the fit for any suit game. The prudent course is a simple raise to two no trump. If partner has enough to continue, he still can show a three-card spade suit. If the auction ends in two no trump, hope that you make it.

Co-Producer Prepared To Defer 'Princess' Showings For Money

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The case of "The Death of a Princess" has taken an ironic new turn.

After an intense Saudi campaign to stop the television docudrama, waged under the heavy cloud of petro-politics, the Saudis may suddenly find themselves over a barrel on the matter.

A co-producer of "Princess" is working on a deal that would keep "Death of a Princess" from being shown in Japan, Germany, Italy and France for four years, in exchange for $20 million from Saudi representatives.

Michael Solomon, whose Telepictures Inc. partially funded "Princess" and owns worldwide rights to the documentary, says that after the four years, the rights would revert back to him. He could then sell the documentary back to the Saudis for another limited period, and the process could continue until the Saudis weary of it or become less sensitive to the documentary.

Solomon rejects the suggestion that the deal he's seeking is something akin to blackmail.

"It's not blackmail," he says. "I put a price on a particular object according to what I feel is its value to the person I'm selling it to. I think "Princess" has a $20 million value."

"I'm not blackmailing them. I'm putting a price on a film that I co-produced and own."

That price, of course, is considerably higher than it might ordinarily have been because of the Saudis' profound determination to stop it.

"The Death of a Princess" was written and produced by David Fanning, of PBS station WGBH in Boston, and British filmmaker Anthony Thomas as a study of the conflicts facing the Arab world, torn between the demands of the international stage and Islamic traditions. The movie focuses on Saudi Princess Mishal, who was condemned to death and executed by the royal family because of an extramarital affair.

Thomas and Fanning considered their film sympathetic to the Arabs. Saudi Arabia thought wholly otherwise. The Saudis condemned the film as derogatory to Islamic culture and demanded that it not be shown. When "Princess" was aired in England, Saudi Arabia expelled the British ambassador. Three weeks ago, the Saudis expressed their "deep regret" over the film's planned U.S. broadcast.

While American oil companies and the U.S. State Department were eager that Saudi Arabia not be offended — the U.S. gets about one-fifth of its imported oil from the Saudis — the First Amendment prevailed over implicit Saudi threats and full-page Mobil ads, and PBS televised "Princess" May 12.

The next day, May 13, Saudi Arabia raised the price of crude oil by about 8 percent — $2 a barrel. Oil industry insiders disagree as to whether the price hike was related to the showing of "The Death of a Princess" (the show, by the way, earned the highest-ever ratings for PBS, defeating commercial network programming in some cities).

Thomas and Fanning, who are more closely tied to "Princess" than Solomon, strongly objected to his sale of the film two weeks ago to a Swedish group that was fronting for Saudi representatives. As a result of that deal, "Death of a Princess" will not air on Swedish TV, which prompted a threat from Fanning that Solomon's company will have no further dealings with WGBH.

Acknowledging that dispute, Solomon said last week, "I will not sell it to anybody who's going to suppress it." Later in the conversation, however, he gave this account of a meeting with a Saudi representative from Washington.

"He asked me if I'd sell the worldwide rights to it. I told him I couldn't do that. He asked if I could sell him the copyright for a certain number of years, three or four years. He asked how much I'd want. I asked him which countries he wanted. He said, Japan, Germany,

France and Italy.

"I said $15 or $20 million dollars. He took the offer back to his people, and they're considering it."

Solomon said he realized such a deal would result in the suppression of "Princess," but added:

"If we can sell that one film for $15-$20 million... You have to make a business judgment, and the business judgment is, make the deal."

In an interview from Boston, Fanning said of the proposed deal, "We (he and Thomas) would oppose it absolutely," even though, as Solomon's partners, they'd be sharing in the profits.

Fanning said that Solomon would be taking advantage of the Saudis in such a deal because in Italy and France, television is controlled by the government, and those governments have already decided to block the film's airing.

"It's another case of the West ripping the Saudis off," Fanning said, "like building refineries on shifting sand."
