Contradictory Votes

Defense 'Tangles' Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, sending contradictory signals on higher military spending, has rejected a $613.3 billion, defense-oriented 1981 budget while endorsing a record peacetime increase for the Pentagon.

The House action Thursday night instructs House-Senate negotiators to prepare a second budget compromise, but tells them to keep the controversial defense figure that President Carter and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. opposed.

"I've got two mandates and one headache," complained Rep. Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., House Budget Committee chairman, as he prepared to take the proposed balanced budget back to conference with the Senate next week.

Earlier Thursday, Carter and O'Neill appeared to have prevailed in their opposition to the budget's $153.7 billion defense figure as the compromise spending plan was voted down, 242-141.

But as the night wore on and many Democrats headed for home, Republicans succeeded in forcing approval of instructions to the negotiators to stick by the $153.7 billion defense amount for fiscal 1981, which starts Oct. 1.

The non-binding instructions were approved on voice vote after the Democratic leadership failed, 165-123, to table — or kill — the GOP motion and then lost, 145-141, on an effort to adjourn the House before a final vote.

The Republican instructions denied Carter and O'Neill a clear-cut victory in the defeat of the budget package they opposed because of its proposed cuts in domestic spending to pay for higher defense.

The instructions, proposed by Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, also should strengthen the hand of Senate negotiators who have vowed to fight to keep the $153.7 billion defense figure, which is $3.2 billion more than Carter requested.

Giaimo said rejection of the budget raised doubt about the future of the 6-year-old congressional budget process and its attempt to bring federal spending under control.

"If the liberals are upset with the budget for one reason and the conservatives for another, then God help the American people," he declared.

After rejection of the budget, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., Senate Budget Committee chairman, blamed Carter for its defeat and said a revised compromise could "short-change our critical defense needs."

The House vote on the budget sharply divided the Democratic leadership, with O'Neill and Carter at odds with nearly every other top House Democrat, including Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, and Giaimo.

A total of 146 Democrats and 96 Republicans joined with O'Neill and Carter in opposing the budget, while 97 Democrats and 44 Republicans favored it.

The issue of higher defense spending also sparked a rare public disagreement between Carter and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who told Congress they needed more defense money, not less, than was included in the compromise.

Rare Complaint By Pentagon Leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown suffered no "heartburn" because the Joint Chiefs of Staff openly differed with him and President Carter on the adequacy of the military budget, according to Pentagon sources.

The sources, who declined to be identified, said there was no tension between Brown, the Pentagon's top civilian, and the chiefs of the armed services.

"Brown feels the chiefs gave their straightforward views when asked by Congress, and that's according to the rules," said one source familiar with the defense secretary's views.

Gen. David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs, and each of the uniformed leaders of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines testified under congressional questioning Thursday that they regard the defense allotments as inadequate. Carter has proposed spending $150.5 billion for defense in fiscal 1981, which begins Oct. 1.

The service chiefs were summoned before the House Armed Services investigation subcommittee at the insistence of the panel's chairman, Rep. Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., who had suggested, in effect, that the military leaders were being muzzled.

"Right now, we have a hollow Army," said Gen. E.C. Meyer, Army chief of staff, in response to a question. "I don't believe the current budget responds to the Army's needs for the 1980s."

Asked if the Carter proposals were adequate, Gen. Robert Barrow, commandant of the Marines, said, "In a word, no."

Gen. Lew Allen Jr., the Air Force chief of staff, said,

"Increased defense spending is required to meet the increased danger."

Adm. James D. Watkins, deputy to Adm. Thomas B. Hayward, chief of naval operations, called Carter's proposed 1981 budget "short of Navy requirements."

Under rules long in force, the heads of the armed services are expected to argue their cases on budget allocations, weapons systems and other issues only within the decision-making machinery of each administration. They are required to refrain from any public advocacy of their views and speeches or other forums — except when asked by Congress.

Senior officers know they cannot realistically expect to get all that their services request. "You win some, you lose some," is the way some service chiefs have summed up their attitudes when talking privately.

But when the process of internal debate is completed and the president makes his decisions, the military chiefs are expected to support those decisions even if they retain personal reservations.

Their only alternative is to resign.

Some defense secretaries in the past have tended to be less receptive than Brown is known to be when generals and admirals make their arguments. Brown, who has served in the Pentagon under previous administrations, is known to feel that the present panel of chiefs has been highly effective in articulating their positions.

Pentagon spokesman Thomas Ross, discussing the situation with reporters Thursday, said, "I can't recall a time... when the joint chiefs have not proposed considerably larger budgets than have been finally approved."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I can take just so many Dinah Shores, Walter Cronkites, and Mary Tyler Moores, and I go in to diabetic shock.

I love all three of those people. They're wonderful, warm, friendly and true, but Lord, this country needs a villain every once in a while to get rid of our frustration.

"J.R. Ewing" of the "Dallas" TV series has given this country what it has needed for a long time — an honest-to-goodness low-down, vile, disgusting, loathsome, insufferable, offensive, unprincipled, vulgar, ill-mannered, conniving, black-hearted cad!

(He's kind to his mother, Miss Ellie, but no one is perfect.)

J.R. embodies a little bit of all we deplore. He's the girl who promised to go to the prom with you, but when she got a better offer, lied and said she had to babysit. He's the creep who eavesdrops on your personal conversation and then repeats it at the dinner table. He's the sadist who puts chili powder on the cat's feet to make it dance. He's the blackguard who scrapes your car door in the parking lot and never stops to leave a note. He's the jerk who borrows your best sweater, drops mustard on it, and then says it was there when he borrowed it. He's the driver who lays on his horn one second after the traffic light turns green.

You can heap all the hate on

J.R. you want and he'll help you do it. It's easy to hate a tall, good-looking, rich, powerful Texan who looks great wearing a Stetson hat with a business suit and who shows $3,000 worth of capped teeth when he's having you escorted out of town.

J.R. has added a new dimension to profanity. Every Friday night thousands of viewers sit in front of their TV sets waiting for J.R. to "get his." Next to hot tubs, it has become the No. 1 pastime.

Let the hostility roll. Economy bad? "Old J.R. isn't suffering any setback sitting down there on his oil wells." Energy crunch? "Oh, sure, and guess who's still tooling around in his gas hog!" Politics getting to you? "Well, if we were J.R. we'd just buy the kind of politics we want." Husband inattentive? "Who do you think you are, J.R.? Fooling around with Bing's daughter. You men are all alike!" Having problems with the children? "Next thing you know you'll tell me they aren't yours... like J.R."

Oh, yes, I see a real need for J.R. in this world. After all, how can you have people who triumph over evil when you have to hunt for the evil?

Followers of "Dallas" who know that J.R. has been shot by an unknown assailant will be interested to know that CBS is not going to reveal the culprit until the show returns next fall.

I say, "Who cares? Just as long as J.R. got his!"

United Fund Workshop Is Held

A one-day legislative workshop for the United Fund was held on the campus of Pitt Community College Tuesday with Dr. Charles Petty, director of the Governor's Office of Citizen Affairs, as the key speaker.

The workshop was sponsored by the United Way of Greenville and Pitt County, Craven United Way, Cape Fear Area United Way, Lenoir County United Way, United Community Services of Rocky Mount, Wayne County United Way and the United Way of Wilson County.

Goals for the workshop included the process of translating human service concerns into results-successes. The group was divided into think sessions where participants discussed their particular areas of interest, problems they see locally and at the state level, and ideas concerning legislation.

The sessions were unstructured and through a leader or recorder participants listed questions which developed. Overriding issues resulting from the group sessions were compiled in a closing statement.

Chairperson of the meeting was Russell Thompson of Wilson, a member of the board of directors of North Carolina United Way. This workshop was one of five held throughout the state. This process will incorporate into consideration the priorities developed in the discussion groups and from all five workshops. Lou Folger of the Pitt County office was hostess for the meeting.

Held Ineligible For Primary

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Democrats have ruled that white supremacist J.B. Stoner is ineligible to run in the party's U.S. Senate primary because he was convicted in connection with a 1958 bombing in Alabama.

A Birmingham jury convicted Stoner on May 14 of setting off dynamite dangerously close to a Baptist church that was the focal point of civil rights activity. He was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Stoner is head of the anti-Jew, anti-black National States Rights Party who has run for several offices in Georgia and had said he would enter the Aug. 5 primary as a Democrat.

Jobless Benefit Funds Fading

By OWEN ULLMANN AP Labor Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal unemployment benefit payments to 600,000 jobless Americans, from auto workers to ex-servicemen, will come to an abrupt halt next week unless Congress rushes to the aid of a nearly depleted Labor Department fund.

The Carter administration is asking Congress for an additional $1.1 billion to keep the unemployment checks flowing, but government officials have virtually ruled out the possibility of congressional action before next Wednesday, when the fund is expected to run dry.

The money problem has developed because the Labor Department grossly underestimated the number of benefit recipients from the slumping auto industry when the department submitted its budget request to Congress last year. Now, action on the request for additional money for this fiscal year has been tied up by Congress' wrangling over the next fiscal year's budget.

Congress is expected to approve the money request without a fight, mainly because the increased spending is required under laws passed by Congress. But the nation's complex legislative process can be slow in handling even routine matters, and Labor Department officials believe benefit payments will be interrupted for at least two to three weeks.

"Theoretically, if Congress wants to work as hard as possible, it could get the job done next week or very early the following week," said one department official, who asked not to be identified. "Chances are, however, that it will take somewhat longer, maybe another week. And, even after the bill is signed, it will take another 5 to 12 days to resume the checks."

Those receiving the unemployment benefits include 334,000 workers — mostly in the auto industry — who have lost their jobs because of foreign competition, 190,000 former federal and postal employees and ex-servicemen who are ineligible for regular state unemployment insurance, 73,000 former CETA public service job holders, and 3,000 loggers in California who lost their jobs when the Redwoods National Park was expanded in 1978.

Payments average nearly $100 a week and are distributed either weekly or every other week by state unemployment offices out of a special Federal Employment Benefit Account known bureaucratically as "FUBA."

The payments may be the only source of income for the unemployed federal workers, ex-servicemen and former CETA workers.

For the auto workers, however, the payments supplement regular unemployment benefits. In addition, as members of the United Auto Workers union, the workers are protected by company-paid jobless benefits that guarantee 95 percent of their take-home pay for up to a year, providing company funds do not go broke because of heavy industry layoffs. The benefits to the auto workers are paid under the Trade Adjustment Assistance Act of 1974, which aids people who lose their jobs because of increased sales of imports in this country. Under the law, workers are entitled to payments that, together with regular unemployment checks, provide up to 70 percent of their regular weekly pay for as long as 52 weeks.

The Labor Department initially sought, and received from Congress, $450 million in FUBA funds for 1980. However, a worse-than-anticipated slump in the auto industry has raised the estimated bill to over $1.5 billion, with about 300,000 auto workers having been ruled eligible for benefits since last December.

The Carter administration also has underestimated the money it will need for the program in 1981, and has asked Congress to increase next year's appropriation from $450 million to $850 million.

Labor Department officials said payments in Michigan, where 193,000 auto workers are receiving benefits, would have halted today, but officials transferred funds there from other states with larger surpluses so every state would run out at the same time.

The department's money request is part of a $1.4 billion supplemental spending bill pending before Congress. The package includes more money for defense programs, black lung benefits to coal miners, disaster relief, refugee aid and a variety of other government services.

Two Setbacks In Coping With Iran

By The Associated Press The United States suffered dual setbacks in the Iranian crisis. The new Parliament put off debate on the fate of the 53 hostages until late July, and the sanctions Britain imposed today left wide gaps for continuation of lucrative trade.

Iranian radio said, meanwhile, that about 20 Iraqi soldiers were killed in a border clash Thursday in western Iran.

Yadolah Sahabi, interim head of the Parliament, or Majlis, told Tehran Radio Thursday that debate on the government's policies "will take a long time. The Majlis must also pass a vote of confidence in the government, and when this has been done, then other issues will be proposed by the government and discussed by the Majlis. One of these issues is the hostage issue. So I think we should expect to wait until the end of the month of Tir before this issue is reviewed."

The Iranian month of Tir ends July 22. Iranian officials said prior to the convening of the new Parliament Wednesday that debate on the hostage situation might begin by late June. Revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has said the Parliament must decide what to do with the Americans.

Many members of the Ma-

jlis, dominated by hardline Moslem clergy, have backed statements by the student militants holding the Americans since Nov. 4 that the hostages should be tried and punished if Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and his wealth are not returned to Iran.

The British sanctions honor contracts reached before midnight Thursday, and embargo all goods except "specified foodstuffs, medical products and other specified products if sold or supplied for medical or surgical purposes."

However, the sanctions, announced by the British Department of Trade, contain waivers allowing businesses now dealing with Iran to modify, increase, or extend current contracts, and enter into new ones as long as they continue "business dealing between the same parties relating to goods of the same or similar class."

Trade department officials said this means that British businesses could continue dealings with Iran as long as the trading partners remain the same and the products they trade are similar.

Banking officials estimated that Britain's current $1.6 billion in annual exports to Iran would be reduced by 10 percent at the most as a result of the sanctions.

The sanctions were viewed by some British sources as a symbolic move, aimed more at preserving the Western alliance than pressuring Iran to free the hostages.

The sources said the sanctions provide the United States and the European Common Market nations with a gesture of solidarity, while allowing British companies to continue their business dealings under slightly altered ground rules.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government for weeks was Europe's strongest advocate of sanctions aimed against Iran. Britain originally planned to join other Common Market nations in their sanction announcement, but the Thatcher government significantly reduced the scope of the British sanctions after parliamentary protests in London.

The British sanction order will lapse June 27 unless it is renewed by a resolution in both Houses of Parliament. The eight other European Common Market countries — Belgium, Denmark, France, West Germany, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg and the Netherlands — put their sanctions into effect May 22.

The Iranian-Iraqi fighting was reported in the Iranian border province of Ilam.

Nice Inciter Of Delinquency

BY GAIL MICHAELS I never see that commercial with Florence Henderson smiling on the morning after her daughter's slumber party that I don't wonder what a nice woman like her is doing actively fostering juvenile delinquency.

Certainly, no other kind of party provides as many opportunities for petty crime. In the course of just one evening 5 to 15 girls can engage in activities as varied as making crank phone calls, memorizing the pages at which the minister's daughter's copy of Peyton Place falls open, finding out that one of the girl's uncles invented the word "sex," and staging a tricycle race around the basement which leaves the host mother with a permanent nervous tic.

The highlight of the evening always comes when the first person falls asleep and the rest of the girls freeze her underwear.

Of course, the mental health of parents prevents these parties from being held too frequently. A much more palatable alternative is one overnight guest. It may not have the pizzazz of a slumber party, but it does provide close friends with a special sharing time.

Such evenings make up some of my most pleasant childhood memories, so when I felt that perhaps Meg was being slighted in the uproar surrounding the baby's arrival, the first remedy I thought of was overnight company.

The idea was an instant hit. Glowing with self-importance, Meg cleaned her room and checked the dinner menu. At 3:30 she parked herself in the driveway and waited there for her friend's 6:00 arrival — except for every five minutes when she came in to check on how much time she had left.

She also made several spot checks to make sure that the bathtub was clean. I was soon to find that for the preschooler the shared bath merits as much excitement as purple prose does for the fifth grader.

She and her friend soaped and splashed and giggled until they were as wrinkled as Oxford cloth shirts. In an half an hour they managed to transform the bathroom into a potential wildlife habitat. The floor was barely visible under the pools of sludge-colored water.

Then they wrapped themselves in towels and raced shrieking toward Meg's room, her guest warning, "Be careful! We can't let Phillips see our bottoms!"

"Okay!" Meg giggled and rushed halfway down the hall before she added, "But why?"

By the time I gave the bedtime ultimatum, they were exhausted, which is perhaps the most delightful quality I found in preschool overnights. Thinking only of what a wonderful experience this had been for Meg, I tucked them into bed and listened to their prayers. Meg's was the usual "Now I lay me," but her friend's was more to the point.

"I love Meg, and Meg's mommy and Meg's daddy," she said. Then she opened one eye to look at me and added, "And I hope they let me come again real soon."

CONSERVATION REFUGE WASHINGTON (AP) — A conservation group, the Nature Conservancy, has bought 54,000 acres of prairies and forest in north central Nebraska for $10.8 million to create a conservation refuge.

A BREASTFEEDING SEMINAR was held here Wednesday. Among the program participants were (left to right) Judy Beckert (holding son, Andy), Martha Ogburn, and Helen Brinson.

Mother's Milk Preferred According To Dr. Phalen

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The American Academy of Pediatrics has this year issued a strong statement saying that mother's milk is the superior food for infants, William Phalen, M. D. told nurses attending a seminar on breastfeeding held here Wednesday.

Dr. Phalen, who practices in Wilson, said he believes it is time for the medical profession to do some "constructive arm-bending" to urge that all babies be breastfed.

Judy Beckert told her mother's view of breastfeeding, an "art" she has been promoting for several years as the local leader of the La Leche League.

Helen Brinson, nurse educator with the Eastern Area Health Education Center, which sponsored the seminar, helped the nurses with clarification of their values concerning breastfeeding and its encouragement.

Martha Ogburn, teaching nurse in the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, said that 50 percent of all American mothers who try nursing their babies fail. She said this figure will improve as mothers become more self-assured and receive more support from relatives, friends and employers. She herself works full-time and continues to nurse her daughter.

Irene Malesic, M. D. of the PCMH Neonatal Intensive Care Unit said there is virtually no situation in which a hospitalized baby cannot be fed breastmilk and in which a hospitalized mother cannot nurse her baby — if extra effort is made by the hospital staff. She said few health situations prohibit nursing either, if the factors are dealt with and the extra effort is made.

President Ruth Crawford conducted the meeting. Members voted to plant geraniums at ADAP Center and to change the meeting date.

A Princess Who Knows How To Cook

You don't usually picture a princess puttering about the kitchen whipping up tasty morsels. But Marie Blanche de Broglie, a French princess, has been doing just that since she was a child.

She began by watching her father, also a cooking buff, prepare lavish dishes in the family chateau in Normandy while the cook took a rest.

"Father loved to cook, especially sauces," she recalled, "but he was only allowed in the kitchen on Sundays and we children loved to help him."

Today the Princess de Broglie, who holds a Grande Diplome de Cordon Bleu, is making a career out of teaching non-professionals in the gourmet arts.

"It has some good things about it," she said, "such as not overcooking vegetables and also preparing dishes with expensive and cheap foods side by side. Like foie gras and potatoes, or lobster and green beans."

The princess opened her cooking classes after hearing friends complain that there was no school for amateur cooks who didn't want to spend too much time or money learning how to entertain.

"The aim of my classes is to teach one how to prepare dishes that are good but not too complicated," she said. "But I do strive toward elegance, as in this recipe for Coquilles Saint Jacques."

George and Debbie Goldbeck of Rocky Mount, Sue Aldridge of Greenville, and Pat McDaniel of Pollocksville shared their experiences while their babies were hospitalized and continuing to be breastfed. Dr. Malesic and Mrs. Ogburn moderated the discussion and the Goldbeck and McDaniel babies were on hand.

Public health, pediatric, ob-gyn, and neonatal nurses attended the day-long seminar, held at the Willis Building here.

The vivacious noblewoman opened a cooking school with the unique name Princess Ere 2001 in Paris in 1975 for amateurs who wanted to improve their culinary skills but not devote too much time to the process.

At present she is conducting a series of cooking programs at the family chateau in Normandy. The accent is on simple dishes that are at the same time elegant.

"The era of those rich French classic dishes is passing," she said. "This is partly due to the rise in food costs and also because people don't want to get too fat."

1 medium onion, chopped
4 shallots, chopped
½ stick butter
20 raw scallops, cleaned well
½ cup dry white wine
½ cup bread crumbs
1 bouquet garni (celery, parsley, thyme, bay leaf)
2 tablespoons parsley
1 clove minced garlic
Simmer onion and shallots 5 minutes in butter. Add scallops, wine, bread crumbs, bouquet garni, parsley and garlic. Simmer 10 minutes till scallops are done. Place under broiler 4 minutes. Serves 4. Good with dry white wine, chilled.

Asked what she thought of the nouvelle cuisine which is causing so much comment in France today, the princess said it was not really new at all but was going through a popular phase.

Over 20,000 Write To American GI's

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A great big thank-you from all the soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines in the U.S. Forces in Korea. You have helped to relieve the loneliness of over 20,000 military personnel stationed in Korea by providing them with a glimpse of home through a stranger's eyes.

It all began when a soldier named Allen wrote to you about the depression many GIs feel as they walk away from mail call empty-handed.

You ran his letter asking your readers to write to those forgotten kids half a world away, and you gave the address: Commanding General, Eighth Army, Seoul, Korea; APO, San Francisco, Calif. 96301.

Letters came in by the thousands, cutting a broad swath through America's heartland. Envelopes bearing postmarks from Canada, Puerto Rico and each of the 50 states came in by the bundles!

There were letters from children. One boy sent his week's allowance ($1) so that a serviceman would be able to buy stamps.

Another youngster sent a letter and enclosed five rare and valuable 3-cent stamps. Obviously someone in his household was a stamp collector. (We returned the stamps.)

There were letters from mothers and grandmothers, opening with "Hello, Son!" They told of their experiences in wars of a different era; some told of their relief when their sons came back from Vietnam — or of their emptiness when no one returned to them.

Many letters carried news from home. They wanted to make sure we knew that the U.S. hockey team had beaten the Russians. They were proud of their country, and proud of us for serving in the military.

School children wrote to express their feelings of loneliness, fear, doubt and hurt — feelings they couldn't share with their parents or friends. But somehow they felt a serviceman would understand.

What a morale-booster those letters were! What happy excitement you created here.

So, Dear Abby, we send our thanks to you and all those generous American people who wrote. Thanks, on behalf of every serviceman who has ever been lonely. Sincerely,
THE U.S. FORCES IN KOREA

DEAR U.S. FORCES: God bless each and every one of you in every corner of the world, working to defend our great country.

DEAR ABBY: I have a job I really like. It pays well, and my boss (whom I'll call Mr. R.) is the greatest.

During the daytime he never makes a move toward me, but when I work evenings he gets a little too friendly. Mr. R. is married and I'm not, but I do have a boyfriend. And even if I didn't have one, I wouldn't be interested in Mr. R. because he's old enough to be my father.

Last night while working late, he turned on the stereo and asked me to teach him how to disco. I told him I had a sore toe (not true). Then he said I didn't have to worry about his wife walking in on us because she lives in the suburbs and doesn't drive.

Can you give me a few suggestions on how to keep Mr. R. in his place? I don't want to hurt him — just discourage him.

WORKING GIRL

DEAR GIRL: Tell him you like your job and don't mind working nights, but your boyfriend holds a black belt in karate, doesn't live in the suburbs — and he does drive.

DEAR ABBY: Every year I make a donation to the American Cancer Society in honor of my father. No, he did not die of cancer. He had cancer, but recovered after undergoing surgery and treatment.

If more people would celebrate their loved ones' recoveries in this manner, even more lives might be saved in the future.

China Now Needs U.S.

Things have changed mightily from the 1950s in the United States-China relations.

Then, as every "MASH" television show watcher knows, "Red" China was the enemy, fighting at the side of the North Koreans who had brought American troops into combat in a nation thousands of miles from home.

Those who know their military history are aware the U.N. troops, heavily American, and South Korean forces had the war virtually won when the Red Chinese armies stormed across the Yalu River. The war eventually stalemated near the 38th parallel and was ended with a negotiated truce. The negotiations still go on today at Panmunjom.

North Korea would still like to take on South Korea which is now rocked with internal strife. Apparently it won't be with the blessings of today's China.

Chinese Premier Hua Guofeng told the Japanese recently that communist North Korea would not use the South Korean troubles as an excuse to invade.

"North Korea will not move into the South by taking advantage of the current turmoil," Hua said. He was concerned, though, that "an unstable Korean peninsula will lead to an unstable Asia."

•The Chinese are well aware that the United States still has alliances with South Korea. An outbreak of hostilities between North and South Korea could quickly damage the good relations that have bloomed between China and the U. S. With an ominous Russia at its back door, China badly needs the U. S. friendship.

Hard Line Prevails In Israel

The United States can take no pleasure for Israel Prime Minister Menachem Begin's choice for a new defense minister.

Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir will take the post. He is considered a hard liner. He abstained when the Israeli Parliament voted on the Egyptian peace treaty.

Shamir favors Jewish settlements on the West bank and the Gaza strip. It is doubtful that his positions will do anything to increase the likelihood of a settlement of issues which divide Israel from the Arab world. And until these issues are settled there can be no peace in the Middle East.

Hopefully more moderate voices will prevail in the Israeli government.

Budget 'On Track'

By BILL NOBLITT
RALIEGH — The North Carolina General Assembly is building steam and ready to roll.

"You're either on it...or you're gonna get run over by it," say experienced legislators now getting ready for the second session (1980) of the 1979 General Assembly.

John Williams, budget officer for Gov. Jim Hunt, tells the story in few words: "We're ready. If we haven't got it done by now, it won't get done."

What has been done is known, in legislative slang, as "greasing the rails." And that means the train is moving and there is no way to stop it.

Legislators acknowledge they'll play the game to the hilt. That has already started as chief decision makers gather in committee rooms to yawn their way through reams of paper and hours of bureaucratic jibber-jabber about programs and economic outlooks.

Few are listening. They don't have to. The express is rolling, and Gov. Jim Hunt is at the throttle. And he has a lot of powerful help.

Together

Just as a recent study by the independent N.C. Center for Public Policy Research pointed out — and other legislative observers have said time and time again — the budget process is so big and so complicated and so controlled that once the book is printed there's little chance of changing it.

The Advisory Budget Commission consists largely of the powerful members of the General Assembly who put their names on the proposed "Governor's Budget," and then go to work as chairmen of the legislative committees which consider the budget. The details, in reality, are handled by fulltime state agency people with large staffs who can pretty well pack into the budget which they wish. Along the way, key political leaders including the governor and chief legislators manage to get special items of importance: an armory or two; a special park or museum fund; some library money, etc.

This year there is only one really important item for consideration — salaries and benefits for state employees and teachers. Of the $358 million in increased state spending which result from income exceeding expectations last year and predictions of extra money next year, more than $304 million is earmarked for salary hikes ($24.5 million), a new salary schedule to boost teacher pay even more ($20.6 million), an added salary step for employees ($8.2 million), increased employee longevity pay ($2.7 million) and retirement changes ($23.3 million).

Extra

The fun will start about one week into the legislative session which opens June 5 when some lawmaker — already primed by the bureaucrats — will begin questioning whether the $358 million to be spent is all there is. Figures will be turned and twisted until — viola — the experts determine there is indeed another $5 million or $10 million to be had.

Scrambling after that windfall will take the minds of legislators away from the budget book as all those with special spending projects will begin trying to nail down some of the extra money.

THE NECESSARY SOLID BASE!

The Brain-Drain Lives

WASHINGTON — One of President Eisenhower's most famous speeches concerned a warning that the military-industrial complex should be watched at all times, or it would take the country for a ride. What Ike failed to foresee was a time when the military and industrial complexes would be competing with each other for the same personnel. As more and more contracts are handed out for the latest hardware, the industrial chaps are draining all the brains from the military establishment.

Here is how the military brain-drain works. Rudolph Heffenberg, an engineer with Armageddon Electronics, supplier of all digital dials on the new "Jaws" class nuclear submarine, goes out on a shakedown cruise with the crew of the USS Snail Darter. He is in charge of instructing Chief Petty Officer Rankowski on how to repair the dials at sea.

Rankowski, who has been trained at a cost to the taxpayers of $100,000, is a digital whiz, and can take one apart and put it back together with his eyes closed.

"So does the Navy," Rankowski says. "But we need you more," Heffenberg says quietly. "The only way we can catch up with the Russians is to build super submarines. And without digital instruments, they are worthless."

"Yeh, but who is going to repair the digital ones you people turn them over to the Navy?"

"That's not your problem, Rankowski. If you love the Navy as much as you seem to, then it's your duty to see that our fighting men get the best equipment that money can buy. You can't do that when you're at sea."

"I don't know. I have 15 years in the service and I sort of like what I'm doing."

"What about your family, Rankowski? How do they feel about you being on a sub all the time? Wouldn't they prefer to have you home every night eating steak and drinking good scotch, and watching Monday night football?"

"My wife has mentioned it at times, but I still think I owe something to the Navy."

"We all owe something to the Navy. It isn't as if you're leaving it. All you're doing is making it possible for those who are actively serving in it to have the equipment they need to keep this country No. 1. Forget the $50,000 a year you'll probably be making in no time. If it was just money, I would say stay where you are. But I'm appealing to your patriotism. We can't do the job the Navy wants us to do unless we have the manpower to make their digitals."

Rankowski says, "Fifteen hundred a month, if you don't include food stamps. How much do you make?"

Heffenberg says, "Fifteen hundred a week, and free membership in the country club of my choice. Rankowski, Armageddon Electronics needs men like you."

Victims Of A Con Game

By George Keegan Jr.
Because of the massive Soviet invasion into Afghanistan, "detente" is in a state of remission. Like cancer in remission, detente is both deceptive and dangerous. In my opinion we should take this opportunity to re-examine detente diplomacy.

Diplomacy is the skill of conducting negotiations. How do the Soviets use diplomacy? How skillful are they? Go back to the peace negotiations in 1918, at Brest-Litovsk, when the Germans had the Soviets on the cross and were about to skewer them... Lenin directed Trotsky: "Promise the Germans anything. Grovel. Get on your knees. Crawl in the mud." Those are direct quotes. And that is precisely what Trotsky did. Was this diplomacy successful? Yes. The Soviets agreed to all the German demands in order to survive another day and to reap advantage from a position of tactical disadvantage.

Come forward 60 years and examine how the Soviets have used detente diplomacy. Several years ago, as director of the Air Force Intelligence Agency, I was asked to prepare a judgment on what the Soviets were trying to achieve with detente. I knew from my own massive reading of Soviet documents that they had, from the very beginning, made no secret of their true intention regarding detente. They have published these intentions in several hundred speeches, in official papers and in Izvestia, in Pravda, etc. My staff and I consulted some real Russian experts in graduate schools to verify the accuracy of our translations.

What the Soviets had said in all these documents, with consistency, with never an attempt to keep their intentions from view was that there were four purposes that they were trying to achieve in detente.

One purpose was to get the liberal democracies and the United States to reduce their investment in defense expenditures. Number two, the Soviets wanted to acquire most-favored-nation trading privileges with the United States. They also wanted to acquire loans and credits on a very large scale to help them through their difficult economic problems. And lastly the purpose of detente was to acquire high technology.

Were they successful? President Kennedy was advised that if he meant to achieve the broadening of social welfare programs the only place great economies could be gained was in defense spending. The Department of Defense, under the leadership of Robert MacNamara, then embarked on a massive unilateral disarmament program. The rationale used to justify reductions of our defense spending was that the way to achieve peace with the Soviets is through restraint, to allow the Soviets to become as strong as the U.S. or a little bit stronger. In the meantime, the USSR was out-spending the U.S. by three-to-four-to-one on defense.

The most-favored-nation trading privileges were extended in the 1972 grain deal and continued through many other areas of commerce.

The Soviets have acquired an estimated one hundred billion dollars of credits from the West European nations and the United States. The British government found, when it tried to limit some of the credits to the USSR that the debt was so huge the only way to bail out was to extend the Soviets more credits and hope the entire stake wouldn't be lost. The same is true of the West German position. Even our own NBC-TV was a hostage to the USSR for one hundred million dollars for the now cancelled coverage of the summer Olympics.

The list of acquisition of American technology goes on and on. The Soviets now have, from the United States, the entire production means for the manufacturing of the most advanced semi-conductors. At the direct order of our State Department they now have all of our wide-body jet production know how. What they couldn't gain directly, they stole. The British deny, but it is a fact, that the Soviets while visiting a Rolls Royce plant surreptitiously lifted a set of the entire production plans for high thrust turbofan engines.

Thus the Soviets have achieved their four goals, not through direct aggression, but through a revolution that was wrought in the U.S. Departments of Defense, State and Commerce.

I believe that SALT and Detente, whatever else can be said about them, must be appreciated in the premise that they have been part of one of the greatest diplomatic "con" games in modern history.

(Maj. Gen. George Keegan, Jr., is the retired chief of the United States Air Force Intelligence.)

Other Editors Say No Facilities

(Washington Daily News)

In the time of Joseph and Mary there was an inn but there was no room to spare in it. They had to go to a manger.

In our own time all too often we do not have the inn. We have just read a most unusual story from Gaston county. A 17-year-old homeless boy, mentally retarded, is being cared for by members of the Social Services department there. And the care for a 17-year-old boy with the mind of a three-year-old is difficult at best.

This boy's mother gave him birth for adoption. But in short order it was found that he had great problems and he was mentally and emotionally disturbed. No one came forward to adopt such a boy.

And apparently he has been beating around from pillar to post most of his life. Gaston County officials say the state has no place to send this boy. We think otherwise; but the fact remains that he is still a ward of Gaston County and Social Service workers are taking turns in caring for him, according to the story.

Every so often we look at the matter of youthful crimes, and a 10-year-old boy will engage in shoplifting or of stealing money or other valuables. That very boy might even laugh at the officers and say "you can't do anything with me... I'm only ten years old." And what a truth that boy speaks!

We read that our prisons and prison camps are very much overloaded, and yet we continue to send convicted persons to prison.

All too often we hear loud cries that "the state is not accepting its full responsibility" when it comes to special groups. The mentally retarded cannot speak for themselves. They must have us to speak for them. While those in prison can, the fact remains that it is our responsibility to provide adequate prison space for violators.

We do not know why that 17-year-old boy in Gaston County cannot be sent to a mental institution. Somebody in authority ought to take the bull by the horns and see why he is unable to enter. Others are getting in, and for a severely handicapped youngster of 17 to be pushed around is not our idea of human justice.

And here in North Carolina we must provide the necessary space so that youngsters who engage in crimes regularly can be sent away and be removed at least for awhile from others.

It is a sad story all around. And it appears to us, from what we read and hear, that our state is just not doing enough for people who cannot do for themselves.

Strength For Today

THE REAL VICTORY

We often point an accusing finger at others and blame them for our troubles when the one person above all others who is making us unhappy is ourself. There is nothing which makes one so poignantly miserable as to dwell upon himself and his interests. There is no one so despairing as the person who establishes the center of his life within the narrow radius of his own brooding desires.

Someone has said that if you would be miserable, look to yourself; if you would be perplexed, look to others; if you would be happy, look to God. Happiness comes when we resolutely put the center of our life outside the circle of our personal desires. Supreme happiness and contentment come when we establish the center of our life and thought in God.

It takes faith to make this heroic venture, but faith is the victory which overcomes the world. And in Jesus Christ we have the shining example of that victory.

Oil Recycling Audit Critical

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state has spent undue money and time on an oil recycling project, says an audit released Thursday by the office of state Auditor Henry Bridges.

The state Oil Recycling Project is considered an experiment aimed at recycling motor oils recovered from the engines of state government vehicles and equipment.

The audit report noted the site for the project has been moved three times and that $42,500 spent at the second site cannot be recovered by the state. The report also discovered the project is two years behind schedule.

Public pressure from neighbors led to decisions to move the location twice, and the state finally settled on a site in Garner, where production is scheduled to begin later this year.

The report also raises questions about government cost analysis and feasibility studies that led to the Department of Administration's decision to begin the project.

"We are concerned that the state entered into a purchase agreement committing substantial amounts of state funds before the site was officially approved," the report said. "In our opinion a policy should be established to ensure that all necessary approvals have been obtained to utilize the property before funds are spent."

The audit also said cost analysis of the project failed to be updated adequately and the state has no guarantee enough oil will be available from outside sources to make the project worthwhile.

Acting Administration Secretary Jane Patterson, in a response printed with the report, said the administration is "still confident that this project will prove that the state of North Carolina was wise to make this venture into recycling waste oil, and that the benefits to the state and to the taxpayer public will exceed all expectations."

The audit also found that building materials worth $22,314 were stored outdoors and unsecured for more than a year.

"We are concerned that the state's implementation of this project has been unnecessarily costly and unduly delayed," the report said.

"Because as soon as he finishes his tour, he's coming with us as a vice president."

"He is?"

"Yes. And so is the executive officer, the engineering officer and the helmsman."

FBI Is Directed To Probe Hobby CETA Contracts

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — U.S. Attorney James L. Blackburn ordered an FBI investigation Thursday into four contracts between two state agencies and companies headed by state AFL-CIO President Wilbur Hobby.

Blackburn said he requested the probe to see "whether or not any federal money was misused in any way and whether any federal laws were violated."

A pair of reports released Wednesday by State Auditor Henry Bridges' office said a printing company and another company, both headed and largely owned by Hobby, misused funds obtained through the federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act.

The report said the companies should repay $260,948 in federal job-training funds obtained from the state and it asked Attorney General Rufus Edmisten to determine if a criminal investigation is needed.

A spokesman for Edmisten said two agents from the Justice Department's special prosecutions section would review the reports, and if evidence of state criminal violations were found, the matter would be turned over to Wake County District Attorney J. Randolph Riley.

But the spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said he believed the possibility of prosecution was greater under federal laws because the contracts used federal money.

Hobby could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Meanwhile Thursday, Gov. Jim Hunt promised to recommend tighter controls be placed on the state-awarded CETA contracts. The governor also said he stands behind Natural Resources and Community Development Secretary Howard Lee, whose department was criticized in the audits.

"I want to assure everybody that if any money has been mispent, we in North Carolina will make every possible effort to recover it," Hunt said.

Hunt commented on the audits at his weekly news conference.

He declined to say what new controls he would suggest until he has talked with Lee and considered an administration study of another case of CETA irregularities in eastern North Carolina. Hunt had scheduled a meeting with Lee for Thursday.

Lee, through a spokesman, declined comment.

The reports are the latest in a series of disclosures about possible abuses of federal job-training contracts during the Hunt administration.

Hunt's Republican gubernatorial opponent, I. Beverly Lake Jr., has run television ads criticizing Hunt and Lee for the problems.

But Hunt praised Lee's handling of the CETA contracts Thursday. "Once he's become aware of problems I think he's moved quickly and strongly to correct them," Hunt said.

He said Lee created an executive director to handle CETA contracts and established an independent monitoring team to report on the contracts.

Hunt blamed some of the problems on "sloppy book-keeping," and some people within Lee's department who failed to receive or consider recommendations of lower-ranking staff members.

"Some people at the top, when these programs were being run, were not fully aware of what these concerns were and were not acting strongly enough to see these concerns were resolved," Hunt said.

Labor Commissioner John Brooks declined to comment Thursday on specific charges leveled in the auditor's report.

Brooks did say his department had "followed the federal regulations that locally have been directed to us." He added that "the auditor has the right to (question costs)."

The audit reports contend Hobby's companies charged unreasonable amounts for transporting job-training students to work, for use of computers and the companies charged for some costs that were not actually incurred. The reports also said the companies enrolled ineligible applicants.

The reports questioned the awarding of job-training contracts to Hobby's firms, Precision Graphics Inc. and Precision Data Institute Inc., for the following reasons:

— The project was designed to train hard-core unemployed youths in Durham, Orange and Franklin counties, while Hobby's firms were located in Wake County.

— Warnings were ignored from Natural Resources and Community Development

Department staff members who said there was already a labor surplus of persons with the skills in word processing and other computer services.

— The same staffers said the job skills could be taught in existing technical schools "at lower costs per student."

— Contracts were awarded without determining if computer facilities or a trained staff existed to conduct the training.

City Summit In Charlotte Today

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Mayors and officials of North Carolina's five largest cities will meet Friday to discuss common problems, but they stress the meeting is not designed to undermine the North Carolina League of Municipalities.

The unprecedented conference Friday was proposed by Charlotte leaders. Called the North Carolina Large City Workshop, it will be open to officials of Charlotte, Greensboro, Raleigh, Winston-Salem and Durham.

The meeting is not sponsored by the League of Municipalities, which represents 449 municipalities in the state, and it will be closed to other cities.

The league's executive director, Leigh Wilson, was invited to participate in the conference. Wilson said he didn't participate in the planning of the conference and was unsure what role he would have.

"We're kind of hoping to identify how the five largest cities can take some kind of joint action on some issues," said Duncan Ballantyne, an aide to Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox.

Mayors Jim Melvin of Greensboro and G. Smedes York of Raleigh have announced plans to block any effort to have the larger cities embark on a course independent from the league.

Melvin, a former president of the league, also said he would oppose "any legislative focus" by the conference.

"A city of 2,000 still has a lot in common with a city that has 300,000 people ... We'd better stick together now, or we'll die separately," he said.

Wilson agreed, saying it would be politically foolish for larger cities to form a separate legislative program since their delegations make up less than 20 percent of the General Assembly.

He speculated the conference may be an effort by Charlotte leaders to boost the city's political clout.

"Over the years there has been a tendency for officials in Charlotte and Mecklenburg (County) to believe it is bigger and better than anything in the state — and, at the same time, Charlotte and Mecklenburg have had a tough time in the Legislature," Wilson said.

Pope John Paul Begins Historic Visit To France

By JEFFREY ULBRICH
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — Pope John Paul II begins a historic visit to France today, a pastoral journey he sees as the opening phase of a global campaign to attract young people back to the Roman Catholic Church.

The visit will be the first by a pope to France since 1804 when Pius VII went against his will for Napoleon's coronation in Notre Dame Cathedral. It will be in the same cathedral that John Paul celebrates Mass today.

Tens of thousands of security personnel have been mobilized to handle the crowds not only at the cathedral, but in the Champs-de-Mars at the foot of the Eiffel Tower where the Polish pope will meet 15,000 members of France's Polish community Saturday, and at Le Bourget Airport where the pope will celebrate Mass before some 1 million French of all backgrounds Sunday.

"The Holy Father wants to convey a message, that the Roman Catholic Church is an exciting and rewarding place to be for today's youths," said a Vatican-based U.S. prelate who asked anonymity.

"He believes the church must redouble its effort to attract the young people, and France is a good place to start the campaign."

Vatican figures show more than 80 percent of France's 53 million people are Catholics, but only 35 percent of the children from Catholic families go to Mass regularly — a typical phenomenon the church faces in industrialized Western nations.

Despite a slight increase in recent years, only 100 priests are ordained in France every year, compared with 1,000 in 1951. The archbishop of Paris, Cardinal Francois Marty, is over the Vatican retirement age of 75 and nearly 10 other key bishops are over 70.

In 22 speeches and homilies in three days, the pope is expected to appeal directly to French youth, "to try the church for problem-solving and peace of mind," while calling on bishops and priests to make themselves more responsive to the needs of the young.

"Today's clergy must be prepared to deal with the people troubled by such problems as abortion, drugs, pornography, juvenile delinquency and permissiveness in all its forms," the pope told a Vatican gathering Thursday.

John Paul has made clear that during his visit he will also try to deal with the "special situation" the church and French Catholics find themselves in.

He said the French church was undergoing "growing pains" — an apparent reference to problems related to the progressive and traditionalist groups that have sprung up since the reforms of the Second Vatican Council of 1962-65. But he quickly added that he did not "dare to make any judgment."

Influential French prelates have been pressing the Vatican for an early papal ruling on the case of maverick French Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre, leader of a traditionalist movement with a global following.

Lefebvre was suspended from his priestly duties by Pope Paul VI in 1976 but continues to defy the Vatican by ordaining priests at his seminary in Switzerland.

John Paul summoned the archbishop for a Vatican meeting shortly after his election to the papacy in 1978 but has yet to speak out on his case.

Another thorny issue is likely to be France's abortion law, which has been a sore point between the Vatican and the French government since it was enacted in 1975.

John Paul's trip to France is his sixth outside Italy since he became pope. He has traveled to the Dominican Republic and Mexico, Poland, Ireland and the United States, Turkey and six African nations.

The Vatican also has announced a 10-day papal trip to Brazil beginning June 30. He is also expected to visit the Philippines in November.

Robeson Voting Probe Is Asked

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union has asked the U.S. Justice Department to investigate whether any Robeson County boards of education have acted to maintain racially segregated schools.

The ACLU district office in Atlanta made the request as part of its own investigation into the matter and on behalf of a group of Robeson County parents.

The parents are among a group of county residents who filed a class-action suit Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Fayetteville. The suit charges that school districts were altered during the past two decades along racial lines.

Such alterations could have affected the outcome of local school board elections to exclude participation by minorities.

Under the 1965 Voting Rights Act, Robeson County must report any change in polling places, boundary lines or other changes to the Justice Department.

The law originally applied to eight Southern states, including Robeson and 39 other counties in North Carolina. Its purpose was to guarantee voting rights to minorities.

ACLU officials said they have not determined how many of Robeson County's school districts have been rezoned.

Laughlan McDonald, ACLU's regional director, said Thursday that any clear violation of the voting rights act would place the burden of proof on the boards of education.

"As I understand the suit now filed, the parents will have to prove invidious intent by the boards of education," McDonald said.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

I am a mild diabetic. With diet, and without insulin or drugs, the doctor has been able to keep it under good control. I am 46-years-old and my concern now is about a complication that my mother, also a diabetic, had developed when she was only a few years older than I am. It was called "diabetic retinopathy." If possible, I would like to avoid that myself. — Mrs. E.L.L., N.J.

Dear Mrs. L.: Diseases of the retina and retinal detachment are frequently associated with advanced, untreated and uncontrolled diabetes. The retina is the fine layer of cells that line the inner surface of the back of the eye and is responsible for vision.

Vast studies are in progress in many institutions all over the country in the hope that this desperate problem can be controlled. One such study is under way at the Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital in New York City. Dr. David B. Karlin, working there and at the New York Hospital Cornell University Medical College, has developed a miniaturized laser probe for the surgical treatment of diabetic retinopathy and advanced retinal detachment. Dr. Karlin and his co-workers are part of an extensive study which involves 13 medical centers all over the country. I have several times made reference to "uncontrolled and untreated" diabetes. But when diabetes is recognized early and treated intensively and without interruption, the chances are great that eye complications and other complications can be markedly diminished.

You can inquire from the National Eye Institute, one of the federal government's National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md., how you can become part of a program for the prevention of blindness due to diabetic retinopathy.

Two of my friends use vaginal suppositories for contraception. I am married and have two children. I'd rather not use birth control pills. — Mrs. A.W., Calif.

Dear Mrs. W.: Vaginal suppositories have been touted as an ideal method of contraception. Extensive advertising campaigns have promoted them and exaggerated their value. Very recently, the Federal Trade Commission has attacked these manufacturers and compelled them to stop advertising their product as being as effective as oral contraceptives and intra-uterine devices.

The efforts of the FTC were initiated because of the large number of unwanted pregnancies that were reported among women who were using these vaginal suppositories.

A good safety measure is for all women to consult their own doctors before becoming ensnared by tempting advertisements. There is no perfect contraceptive that can be used by everyone. The choice should be individually made.

Greenville Lost.... Pitt Community College Graduates Announced

 approached at first for help," the spokesman explained.
 "It was an unfortunate thing. There's a better understanding today. The county has agreed to supplement any requirements placed on the system (providing it is economically feasible)," by an industrial prospect, the spokesman said, by supplying a "package system" — a portable waste water treatment plant — for use by an industry until the city's new treatment facility, now in the planning stage, is opened in about four years.

However, it was, "apparently not satisfactory to them. That kind of load...we could barely handle. It would have been very marginal...and limited community growth for a few years."

Death Angel Ruling Due

Concerned over what may have seemed to him like foot-dragging, the source said Gov. Jim Hunt called local officials at least once, urging them to, "get their act together," so the industrial prospect would not be lost.

A decision was expected today on the motion, which lawyer Gary Logan made last week. He claimed that the indictment was returned by "medically ignorant" grand jurors who had not been given evidence he claimed might not have supported the charge.

Glass Damage Brings Charge

Clifton Gregory Deans, 21 of Tarboro, was arrested by Greenville police on charges of damage to personal property after he allegedly kicked out a glass door at Rick's Guitar Shop at 207A East Fifth St. about 1:10 a.m. Chief Glenn Cannon said a second incident of vandalism occurred about the same time at The Gazebo at 201 East Fifth St. when a window was broken out. Investigation is continuing in that case.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The defense has asked a judge to throw out the grand jury murder indictment of Jani Adams, a 32-year-old nurse, in the so-called "Death Angel" case at Sunrise Hospital.

District Court Judge Michael J. Wendell also heard arguments from the district attorney's office. Ms. Adams is charged with one count of open murder in the death of Vincent Fraser, who died March 4 in an intensive care unit at the hospital.

The indictment accused Ms. Adams, the nurse in charge of the unit at the time of Fraser's death, of reducing the flow of oxygen to the respirator aiding the breathing of the terminally ill patient.

Jim is well qualified to be a Judge. He will be capable and fair in Court cases. He will be especially understanding of everyone's problems.

Say Refinery Hearing Sham

CHESAPEAKE, Va. (AP) — Opponents of a proposed $30-million oil refinery have denounced as a sham a two-day public hearing by the Federal Environmental Protection Agency which ends today.

EPA representatives disagreed as the hearing began Thursday on the proposed 26,000-barrel-per-day refinery on the Southern Branch of the Elizabeth River.

Opponents were angered by a preliminary EPA report last month indicating it will grant a permit to Swann Oil Co. to operate the refinery because emissions from the project would not significantly deteriorate air quality in Tidewater.

The preliminary report prevents the EPA from holding unbiased public hearings, said Mrs. Beverly Mann of the Citizens Against Refinery Effects (CARE).

"We're afraid that...any evidence we present to you for denial of a permit will be overlooked because your decision has already been made," she said.

EPA regional director John Sydnor replied his agency will not make a final decision until this summer, after it has analyzed the hearings Thursday and today.

"I think that the reasoning behind the preliminary report is that we can be more useful to the public at hearings like this if we get some feedback to our thoughts on a project,"

Sydnor said. "We're in no way committed until we give a final decision."

One more permit is the last major obstacle Swann must clear to begin constructing the plant.

Twenty-five persons attended Thursday's hearing. Swann Vice President John Tyrrell said he had expected a larger turnout.

Ten of 12 speakers opposed the refinery, and 12 other refinery foes picketed quietly before the hearings began. Several Swann executives attended the hearing but made no speeches.

Mrs. Mann, who also is fighting Hampton Roads Energy Co.'s proposed 175,000-barrel-per-day refinery in Portsmouth, said the turnout was disappointing. But she insisted it did not indicate a lack of opposition to the refinery.

MOSES D. "MOKEY" LASITTER
For District Court Judge

I want to thank the voters of Pitt County for their support on May 6, 1980.

The Third Judicial District consists of four counties, Pitt, Craven, Pamlico and Carteret. There are currently six District Court Judges in the Third Judicial District with Pitt County having three, Craven one, Pamlico one and Carteret one. Norris C. Reed, Jr., is the District Court Judge in Craven County and he, because of retirement, is not seeking re-election. I am a candidate for his seat.

Because of the size of the counties, it has been recognized that each county needs at least one District Court Judge in order to better serve the judicial needs of the citizens within the District. I chose not to run for a judicial position which I recognized as Pitt County's. I felt it was necessary for Pitt County to maintain its three District Court Judges, just as I feel that it is necessary for Craven County to maintain its one District Court Judge.

Because of the importance of maintaining this judicial balance, I have called for a second primary June 3rd. I urge each of you to vote Moses D. "Mokey" Lasitter June 3rd, so that Craven County can keep its one District Court Judge.

Rare Congregation's Service Is Under Fire For Not Doing More

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - Not many Christian congregations make special efforts to include mentally retarded people in their worship services. But one of the rare congregations that does so is under fire for not doing more.

"What we can't understand is why we're getting all the heat for trying to keep the program manageable," says the Rev. Donald J. Koehn, pastor of St. Luke United Methodist Church in Wichita, Kan.

Ironically, the success of the program is what produced the problem. The congregation had developed an extensive and outstanding program for integrating the mentally retarded into its activities, something national and international church bodies have increasingly urged.

However, such programs have not been the going pattern for most congregations, despite the emphasis of Jesus on caring for the rejected and outcasts.

But it had become a big operation for the St. Luke congregation, so much so that the work was considered too big, getting out of hand, and some limits were put on it. That's what caused the furore.

"We've got a good thing going, and the congregation is solidly behind it, with no intention of abandoning the program," Koehn said in an interview. "But we seem to be taking the heat from all those that aren't doing anything."

What happened, he said, is that the number of mentally retarded at services grew and their unpredictable behavior increased to the point that "the situation became unmanageable. The acceptance base was eroding."

After a committee study, the congregation's board acted in mid-March to restrict the number of unattended retarded persons to 20 to 25, not counting those accompanied by an "advocate" (supervising adult).

This brought charges of "discrimination and rejection" by teachers of a Sunday school class of mentally retarded. The couple, Chet and Virginia Jackson, resigned from the church in protest.

"We cannot support a church which takes an official policy such as this," Mrs. Jackson says. "I understand some people are uncomfortable around mentally retarded persons, but the mentally retarded can't help who they are. The uncomfortable people can do something to change their attitude."

Publicity about the case drew a barrage of criticism, Koehn said, adding, "I challenge any congregation our size to take more than 25 unpredictable MR's (mentally retarded) and maintain an effective, inclusive ministry. We're saying we can handle that many but not any more."

The 585-member church has average attendance of 176. The 25-limit on MR's does not apply to those with parents or supervisors.

"Our people are exceptionally tolerant and I take my hat off to them," Koehn says, but adds that those who violate private space, some people get uptight. We don't have enough substitute parents to help these people. We've been smothered by them. What we're saying is 'Hey, we're willing to do some of this work but we can't do it all.'"

The church's "Sunshine" Sunday school class for MR's has about 50 members, with average class attendance of about 30, some accompanied by "advocate" supervisors at worship services. The program drew steadily increasing numbers, transported to the church from homes for the retarded.

Koehn said volunteers have taken over the class previously taught by the Jacksons. He said such programs are needed and that all people including the retarded are "God's children," but that limits had to be set or "we would become a strictly handicapped congregation."

"We didn't figure that was the way we wanted to go."

New Legislation On Day Care Prepared

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Supporters of less state regulation of church-operated day-care centers say they are planning to propose new legislation during the short session of the General Assembly.

Thomas E. Strickland, a former state senator and general counsel for the N.C. Association of Christian Schools, said an amendment would be offered to a House-passed bill.

He said the amendment would exempt church-run centers from regulation by the state Day-Care Licensing Commission.

The bill that passed the House would exempt some Headstart programs from regulation.

Both church-run centers and Headstart programs would continue to be subject to state health, fire and sanitation laws.

"I was searching for something (similar) that had passed one house to tack it on to," Strickland said of the amendment.

He said he had not yet asked a legislator to sponsor the amendment on the floor or before the Senate Education Committee, which will initially review the bill.

He said the amendment would be unlike a 1979 bill that also sought to remove church-run centers from state regulation.

Grace Church Plans Revival

Grace F.W.B. Church will hold revival services, Sunday June 1 through Wednesday June 4, with Dr. Joe Ange of Nashville, Tenn.

Dr. Ange has ministered to F.W.B. churches for over 30 years. In 1950 he graduated from F.W.B. Bible College in Nashville and has pastored churches in Michigan and North Carolina from 1952-1972. All five of his children are in Christian service, as preachers or preachers' wives.

Thanks Dad, Thanks Mom

As a freshman I was too scared of flunking to think about what my parents had done to make college possible. As a sophomore trying to decide my major. I was too busy for gratitude. As a junior cramming for mid-years - there wasn't time for sentimental thoughts.

But with my senior year coming to its thrilling climax - there's nothing I want to say more than THANKS DAD, THANKS MOM.

Then during our baccalaureate service an awesome thought gripped me. Not only have my parents given me my education... they have given me my faith as well.

My quest for a college degree began in nursery school and kindergarten. It was just about that time when these same wonderful parents brought me to what would soon become OUR CHURCH.

My quest for a strong, sure faith began where it does so often - in the BEGINNER'S Department.

Husband Joins Wife In New Astronaut Appointees

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Bill and Anna Fisher, who have shared emergency room duties as physicians, want to fly into orbit together as the first husband-wife astronaut team — and the space agency has given them a chance to do it.

Two years ago both applied to be astronauts, but only Dr.

Anna Fisher was picked by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Dr.
William Fisher applied again, and on Thursday, he was one of 19 new astronaut candidates picked by NASA.

"Bill never gave up," Anna said in a telephone interview from the Johnson Space Center in Houston where she is training. "We knew the selections were going to be announced by the end of the month, and we've been nervous about it for a couple weeks. I was so thrilled when the phone call came this morning."

"It's something we've both wanted," Bill added. "I'm extremely happy."

Asked about the chance they may fly together, Anna replied: "There's always a possibility. It's really hard to say. There are a lot of flights to go before that could happen. But it's something we can hopefully look forward to sometime in the future."

"We'd like to someday," Bill said. "Right now we're looking forward to working together on the shuttle program."

Previously, both worked as emergency physicians with a medical group in Marina Del

Rey, Calif.

Anna, 30, will probably make a flight aboard the space shuttle before Bill, who is 34. She completed a year of training that qualified her as an astronaut last July and now is in advanced training and planning for shuttle missions, which are to start next March.

She said Thursday that members of her astronaut class probably will start flying in about three years, but she had no idea when she'd finally get into orbit. Bill will start training July 7.

Of the 19 new names selected Thursday, eight are shuttle pilot candidates and 11, including Bill Fisher, are mission specialist candidates.
One of the mission specialist candidates is the first Hispanic picked for the program. He is Dr. Franklin R. Chang, a native of San Jose, Costa Rica, who is a physicist at the Charles Stark Draper Laboratory in Cambridge, Mass.

NASA said the 19 were picked from 2,880 mission specialist applicants and 585 pilot applicants. Pilots will fly the shuttle, while mission specialists will conduct experiments and deploy, retrieve or service satellites.

They will join 62 other American astronauts waiting for assignments on the re-flyable shuttle. Thirty or 40 shuttle flights a year are planned by the mid-1980s, with as many as seven astronauts on a mission.

The two new women candidates, who will join six women previously selected, are Dr. Mary L. Cleave, a graduate research engineer at the Utah Water Research Laboratory, Utah State University in Logan, and Bonnie J. Dunbar, a flight controller and spacecraft payload officer at the Johnson Center.

One black, Marine Maj.
Charles F. Bolden, Jr., was picked, joining three blacks already in the program.

The new pilot candidates are:

Air Force Lt. Col. John E.
Blaha, 37, Springfield, Va., director, air combat effectiveness, Air Force
Headquarters, Washington,
D.C., born in San Antonio, Texas.

N.C. Technical School Enrollments Swelling

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —
State education officials say enrollment at North Carolina's technical schools is climbing steadily, fueled by an uncertain economy.

They say students have enrolled to learn skills to help them find employment.

In North Carolina, most technical-school enrollments have been climbing slightly for the past two years, said Julian Wingfield, director of management information services in the state's Community Colleges Division.

Wingfield said Thursday that enrollments for the fall quarter of 1979 were 95,670, up 4.4 percent over the same quarter in 1978. He predicted the schools will see a greater increase in enrollment this year.

Technical schools across the nation have recorded higher enrollments for the spring quarter of 1980.
Enrollment in the 560 private schools belonging to the National Association of Trade and Technical Schools has grown more than 25 percent in the past six months.

An Associated Press telephone survey of several state technical schools showed slight enrollment increases this year, with officials predicting substantially higher enrollments this fall.

— At Blue Ridge Technical

Institute in Hendersonville, enrollments for fall 1979 were 1,623, up slightly when compared to 1,439 for the previous fall quarter.

— At Durham Technical Institute in Durham, enrollment figures for last fall were slightly below those of 1978, but enrollment for this year's spring quarter was up slightly over last year.

— At Guilford Technical Institute in Jamestown, enrollment for the spring quarter of 1980 jumped to 3,279 from 2,824 in spring
1979.

Jim Morton, public information officer at Blue Ridge Technical Institute, said he expects an enrollment jump next fall.

"The students who go to technical schools are going because they want to be sure they can get jobs when they get out of school. That's especially important with the job market like it is now," he said.

Jerry McDaniel of Durham
Tech's public-information office, said there is more interest now in programs technical schools are offering.

"There's definitely more interest in our vocational programs — and especially in business and health fields," McDaniel said.

McDaniel added that more people are attending technical schools part time than ever before.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices posted a broad loss today on word of a record drop in the government's index of leading economic indicators.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off more than 7 points in early trading, was down 2.82 at 843.43 by noon-time.

The average fell more than 14 points on Thursday.

Losers outnumbered gainers by close to a 2-1 margin in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The government reported today that its leading indicators index, which is designed to detect future economic trends, took an unprecedented 4.8 percent drop in April.

Wall Street had been looking for a sharp decline, but advance estimates had been in the 3-4 percent range.

Analysts said the slump in the indicators, which came on the heels of a 2.6 percent drop in March, raised new concern among investors over the potential severity of the recession.

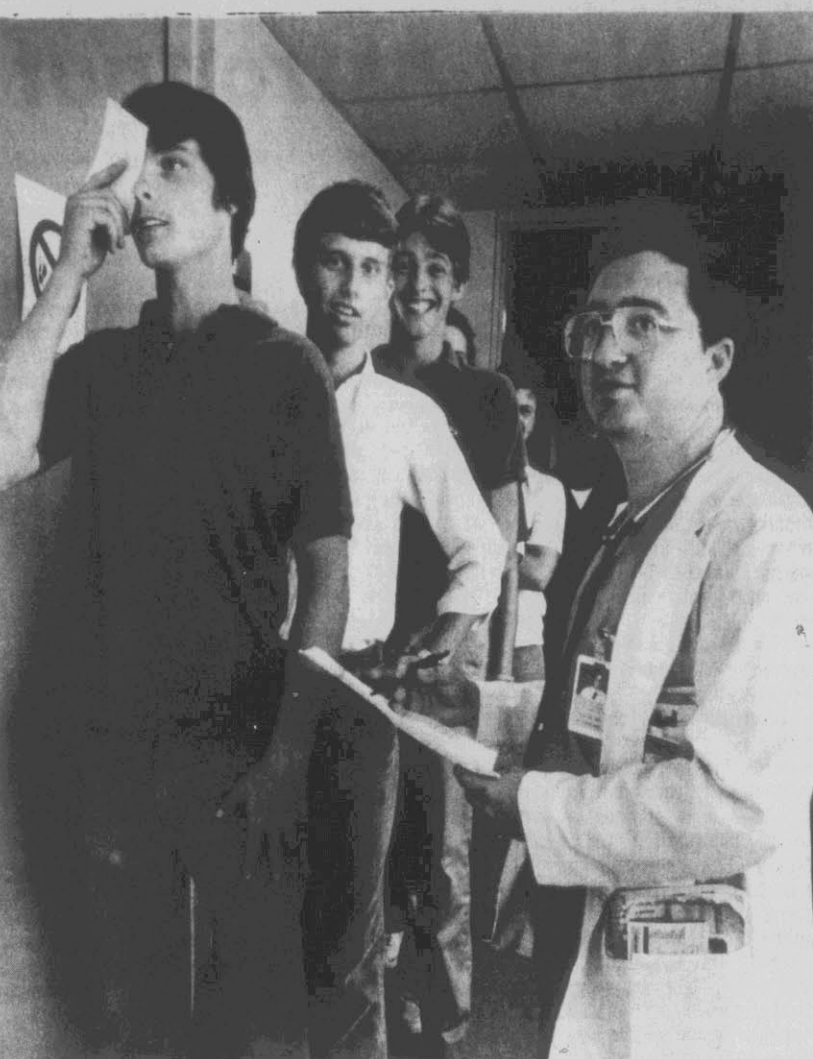

Gold mining stocks, which often benefit from economic uncertainty, showed some fractional gains. ASA rose 1/4 to 42 1/2 and Homestake Mining gained 1 to 52.

The NYSE's composite index lost .16 to 62.81. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.97 at 270.04.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 15.83 million shares at noontime, down from 17.42 million at the same point Thursday.

Fire Erupts At Hospital

MONTREAL (AP) — Firemen evacuated more than 200 patients from two wings of Notre Dame hospital today after a fire that broke out in a ground-floor storage area sent smoke pouring through the institution.

Authorities said they had no reports of injuries to any patients.

Reg Campeau, assistant fire director, said firemen managed to bring the flames under control within two hours of the outbreak at about 6 a.m.

Within an hour of the time the fire was reported, the fire department had sounded five alarms and ambulances and police cars from all over the city had converged on the area.

Twenty-five city buses were called to the scene to help evacuate patients. Traffic was tied up for blocks around.

Huddled in nightgowns and hospital sleeping garb outside the front door, the patients said the atmosphere was calm during the evacuation despite dense smoke.

Welch Tosses One-Hitter At Braves

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Bob Welch climaxed a classic duel on Oct. 11, 1978, when, as a rookie, he struck out New York Yankees slugger Reggie Jackson to end Game Two of the World Series and give the Los Angeles Dodgers a 4-3 victory.

Thursday night, Welch faced the minimum 27 batters, tossing a one-hitter as the Dodgers stopped the Atlanta Braves 3-0. Between the two high points, however, were some low ones.

Welch strained his arm last year, missing a good part of the season and ending up with a 5-6 record and 4.00 earned run average.

This past January, the young pitcher admitted he was an alcoholic and spent much of the next two months at a clinic in Arizona. He said he came away a new man and, apparently, a new pitcher. Or, perhaps, the old Bob Welch.

The 23-year-old right-hander whizzed through the first 10 Braves in order before Larvell Blanks singled cleanly to left center in the fourth. But he got Chris Chambliss to ground into a double play and Welch set down the rest of the Braves in order to complete his gem.

"I really didn't mix my pitches that well but I mixed the position on my fastball," said Welch. "This was the best control I ever had. There were only a few situations that I changed speeds and the hit came on one of those. I hung the pitch up high."

Atlanta's Phil Niekro, the loser, said: "That was a no-hit game. I've seen no-hitters pitched that weren't half as good as that. He was in control all night."

Asked about Welch's almost-exclusive use of the fastball, the 41-year-old Niekro said: "It's still the No. 1 pitch in the game. When you got it, you got to go with it."

Welch, 5-1 and a winner of his last five decisions, walked none and struck out seven, including the final two batters in the game.

"I got a few chills when it was over," he said, referring to the standing ovation he received from a small — for Dodger Stadium — crowd of 24,630. Asked if he was more thrilled with his one-hitter than with his World Series strikeout of Jackson, Welch smiled and said: "No. You don't repeat that in lifetime."

In Thursday's other National League games, Cincinnati downed San Diego 5-3 and Pittsburgh edged Philadelphia 5-4. In the American League, Cleveland blanked Milwaukee 5-0 and Minnesota defeated the Chicago White Sox 5-2.

Los Angeles Manager Tom LaSorda said Welch's victory was one of the better pitched games he has ever seen. "He was just that far from perfection," said LaSorda, holding his thumb and forefinger apart.

Reggie Smith gave Welch all the offense he needed with his ninth home run of the season in the bottom of the first. It was the first of three hits for Smith.

Reds 5, Padres 3

Three home runs by Johnny Bench powered Cincinnati's victory over San Diego.

"I've had my month, now let the other guys do something," Bench joked later.

It was the third time in his career that Bench has hit three homers in a game. And all three came off Padres starter Randy Jones, 4-4.

Bench now has 338 career home runs, leaving him just seven behind Yogi Berra, the top home run-hitting catcher in major league history.

Jerry Turner homered for the Padres.

Pirates 5, Phillies 4

Ed Ott doubled in the go-ahead run, then scored the eventual winning run on Dale Berra's hit to lead Pittsburgh over Philadelphia and send the Pirates back into first place in the NL East.

Pittsburgh took a 3-0 lead in the first inning on run-scoring singles by Dave Parker and Mike Mike Easler, and a bases-loaded walk to Berra.

All four Philadelphia runs were unearned.

Indians 5, Brewers 0

John Denny and Victor Cruz combined for a four-hitter as Cleveland blanked Milwaukee.

"Denny got his breaking ball over all night and then Cruz came in and threw heat," said Milwaukee acting Manager

Bob Rogers.

Denny, 5-4, yielded four hits, struck out four and walked four, including the first two batters in the eighth, before Cruz came in to shut down the Brewers, who had a six-game winning streak ended.

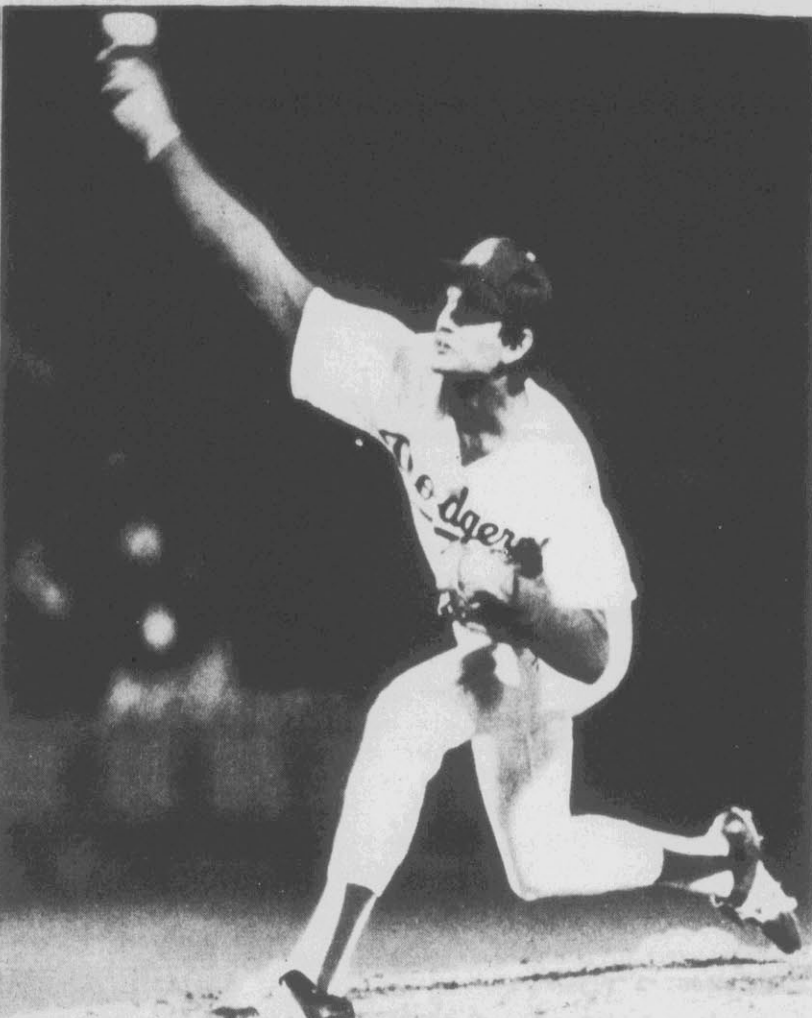

Home runs by Cliff Johnson and Jorge Orta powered the Cleveland victory.

Twins 5, White Sox 2

Ken Landreaux extended his hitting streak to 30 games with two singles as Minnesota took a rain-delayed victory over Chicago.

Landreaux's single in the fourth inning sent Roy Smalley, who had walked, to third. Smalley then scored on a sacrifice fly.

Jerry Koosman, 4-5, got the victory, giving up five hits and striking out five.

Near Perfect

Los Angeles Dodger pitcher Bob Welch delivers to one of the 27 Atlanta Braves batters he faced in Los Angeles Thursday. Welch fired a one-hitter blanking the Braves, 3-0. The only runner to reach base was erased on a double play. (AP Laserphoto)

Landreaux Extends Hit Streak To 30 Games

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — When the Minnesota Twins dealt Rod Carew to California two years ago, they hoped they were trading one bonafide superstar for a potential one — Ken Landreaux.

Landreaux hit .305 last season with 15 home runs and 83 runs batted in, but the fruits of the trade are now becoming more satisfying to the Twins as Landreaux continues his assault on American League pitchers.

Landreaux singled twice Thursday in the Twins' 5-2 victory over Chicago, extending his hitting streak to 30 game and becoming one of only 27 players in major league history to hit safely in 30 or more consecutive games.

"I've always known how to hit; I've been doing it all my life," said the confident Landreaux, who started the streak April 23 when he broke up Bruce Kison's no-hit bid in the bottom of the ninth inning.

The last player with such a streak was Pete Rose, who tied the National League record by hitting in 44 straight in 1978. But the 25-year-old Landreaux, in just his second year as a full-time player, says he isn't concerned about catching Rose or record-holder Joe DiMaggio, whose 56-game string in 1941 seems all but unreachable in modern baseball.

"I won't even start thinking about those guys until I'm one game away from them," said Landreaux, who leads the A.L. with a .360 batting average. "I just go out there and play baseball because that's what I'm paid to do. I want to satisfy myself. If I do that, I'm sure everyone else will be satisfied."

St. John's Is Underdog In NCAA Series Opener

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Arizona Coach Jerry Kindall described his team as "a scrappy bunch" and Joe Russo, Kindall's opponent tonight, acknowledged his St. John's team goes into the College World Series as an underdog.

St. John's, 29-9, and the Wildcats, 40-20, open the NCAA double-elimination tournament at Omaha's Rosenblatt Stadium. Arizona has been pegged as a favorite, along with Miami (57-10) and California (41-21).

Florida State (49-9) meets Hawaii (57-16) in the 8:10 p.m. nightcap.

After an elimination game Saturday between the losers of the Friday contests, Clemson (38-19) is matched against Miami and Michigan (35-16) plays California to complete the first round.

Seven of the College World Series teams are ranked in the national top 10. Miami is No. 1, Arizona No. 2, California No. 3, Clemson No. 4, Hawaii No. 5, Florida State No. 6 and Michigan No. 7.

"It's more scrappiness than talent that got us here," Kindall told a news conference Thursday. "Our 1974 team had exceptional talent but didn't make it to Omaha. I would prefer to have a team that's scrappy."

"For us to win the national championship, we would need to play perfect baseball," said Russo.

Frank Viola (9-1) was named to start for St. John's against Craig Lefferts or Jeff Morris, both 5-2.

Florida State Coach Mike Martin announced Rick Hatcher (10-2) would start for the Seminoles. Chuck Krim (16-9) was the mound choice for Hawaii.

Martin said Jim Weaver, Florida State's No. 2 home runner with 17, would be 95 percent recovered from an ankle sprain. The Seminole homer leader is Mike Fuentes with 20.

California Coach Bob Milano told the news conference he could not "relate to" the Bears' 9-0 record in previous national championship tournaments. They won the first NCAA tourney in 1947.

"I can only relate to the tournament this year and hope we can do well," said the third-year coach.

Michigan Coach Bud Middaugh said his team played its best baseball while winning the Midwest regional tourney. Middaugh coached Miami of Ohio to the Mid-American Conference title last year.

Williamston Loses Opener

WILSON — Williamston's American Legion baseball team opened play last night, and found themselves on the short end of a one-hit shutout, as Wilson gained a 5-0 victory.

Wilson's Davis held Williamston to just the lone hit, that coming in the fifth inning when Wiley Keel singled.

Williamston was able to keep Wilson at bay until the bottom of the sixth inning, when the host team came up with three runs. Mike Wells started it out, getting a single and Charles Simpson followed that up with a hit. Donald Williams added a third hit, scoring Wells. Mark

Smith grounded out, and that brought in Simpson. David Lawhorn added another hit, scoring Williams.

Wilson picked up its other two runs in the eighth inning. Wells led the Wilson hitting with three in four trips, while Simpson and Williams were both 2-4 and Lawhorn was 2-3.

Williamston returns to action tonight, playing host to Edenton. All Williamston home games will be played at Roanoke High School's field. Game time is 8 p.m.

Greens Humble Pros

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer

BETHSDA, Md. (AP)—Tom Watson, the odds-on favorite to win the Kemper Open golf tournament, said it most simply: "The greens were treacherous."

The Congressional Country Club, site of the Kemper for the first time after 12 years at Quail Hollow in Charlotte, N.C., proved to be as difficult during Thursday's opening round as most of the field of 156 had predicted.

Only seven players shot sub-par rounds over the 7,054-yard par 70 course, site of the 1964 U.S. Open and the 1976 PGA Championship in suburban Washington — and none of them was Watson but he was close with a 71.

John Mahaffey, J.C. Snead, Jay Haas and Dave Hill all came in with two-under-par 68s while Lee Trevino, Barry Jaeckel and Lindy Miller shot 69s.

"It was like putting on concrete," said Watson, the most outstanding player on the tour. "It was difficult to make a putt."

Trevino, another favorite to take home the $72,000 first prize, said: "They're gonna have to put some water on the greens. They were exceptionally fast, solid slick. You'll see a lot of short putts missed this week."

Snead said he started off so badly that "it looked like I wasn't going to break 80. I pull-hooked it on the first three holes. I started to come back before I hurt somebody."

However, after bogeys on the first two holes, Snead made six birdies — in addition to two other bogeys — to put him in a tie for a portion of the lead of the $400,000 tournament, one most players like because it is a gruelling test coming just two weeks before the U.S. Open at Baltustrol.

Hill, who did not play a practice round before teeing off Thursday, said the thought the "greens putted better than they looked. They may be the worst looking greens we putted on in six or eight weeks but the ball is rolling well."

However, he admitted he switched from putting conventionally to cross-handed on the 14th hole and went on to make three straight birdies because "on fast greens I have a better touch cross-handed at 14 to 15 feet."

Five players shot par 70 — Ron Terry, Fred Marti, Mike Morley, Beau Baugh and Bob Gilder.

Watson, who said he was pleased with his round, headed a group of 15 that was able to get over the hilly, dry Congressional, with its lightning fast, undulating greens, in one over par.

Among the others were Dr. Gil Morgan, Mike Reid, Mark Hayes, Jerry Pate, George Burns and Larry Nelson. Tom Weiskopf and Chi Chi Rodriguez were among nine who had 72s while defending champion Jerry McGee was in a group of 17 at 73. Arnold Palmer, a favorite of the gallery here, Miller Barber and Hale Irwin had 74s along with 18 others.

The top 70 players, plus ties, will make the cut after today's second round.

Glad She Switched

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — Two weeks ago, a couple of golf club manufacturers invited Cathy Morse — now in her third year on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour — to try a new driver.

The two-time New York State Amateur champion was reluctant to make a switch, and told the men to contact her later. When the 24-year-old Morse arrived for the $125,000, 72-hole tournament that started Thursday at the Wykagyl Country Club, the men greeted her again.

"I tried the driver in the pro-am (Wednesday) and really liked it," said Morse. "Then they asked me to take two new woods, a three and a four, and use them, too."

"Again, I was reluctant. But since I liked the driver so much, I said to myself, 'What the heck? Try them too.'"

Morse is not the least bit unhappy about the switch. The native of Albany, N.Y. shot a one-under-par 71 in Thursday's opening round over the 6,410-yard course to share the lead with Amelia Rorer and Alice Miller.

"These clubs have a special shaft," continued the University of Miami, Fla., graduate. "They are designed to help you hit the ball a lot straighter."

"After the way I played today, I'm going to keep these clubs. I'm really disappointed in my scores the last few weeks. In the last tournament (in Corning, N.Y.) I hit the ball well, yet all I had to show for it was a couple of 77s."

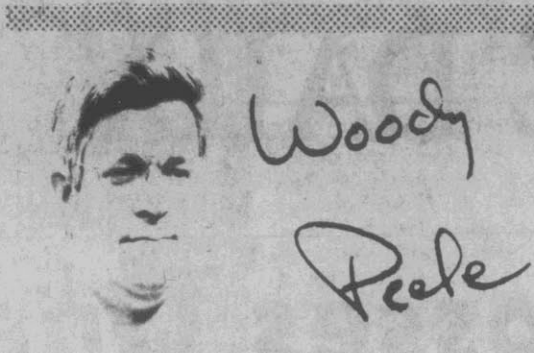

Morse, captain of the Miami golf team that won a national championship in 1977, praised Wykagyl course, saying: "It's tough, and this tournament is not going to be a putting contest. I don't like that kind of a game."

"I prefer to hit long and I really feel I'm due for a good tourney. However, you never know. There are still three days to go."

Morse, the 27-year-old Rorer — from Abington, Pa. — and Miller, a third-year pro from Marysville, Calif., have never captured an LPGA tournament and find themselves in better shape than the big winners.

Nancy Lopez-Melton, winner of this event the last two years, opened with a double-bogey 7 and closed with a birdie 3 to finish with a 75 along with 10 others.

JoAnne Carner, the 40-year-old veteran of the tour who has four victories this year, was among six who finished with a 73.

Both the East Carolina University summer league team, and the American Legion baseball programs will begin play this week.

The Pirates open their season on Friday night, playing host to UNC-Wilmington in a doubleheader, set for 6 p.m. at Harrington Field. The Legion gets the jump on the older players, starting Wednesday with a game at Harrington against Wilson. That contest is set to start at 8 p.m.

The Legion team will draw its players from four of the five Pitt County schools. Farmville Central sends its players to Snow Hill for participation, and that team will get off to a late start due to Greene Central's being in the finals of the state 3-A playoffs, which end next weekend. That could be a regular season handicap for the Snow Hill club, but the playoffs give them a second chance.

The Pitt County team could have some good players, inheriting the top players from Rose, a state playoff team, along with those from North Pitt, Conley and Ayden-Grifton. With a little luck to go with their skill, the team could go a long way.

East Carolina, however, will be in a rebuilding situation as they return to the league after a year or so's absence. The Pirates have lost seven seniors off the regular season team that was an NCAA regional entrant. Gone will be pitchers Mickey Britt and Billy Davis, along with the entire starting outfield of Butch Davis, Billy Best and Macon Moye, first baseman Rick De-rechallo, and reserve player Clarence Hardison. Overcoming their losses may give the Pirates some problems.

However, the summer season should help the Pirates when they return to regular season play next spring. With the experience gained by the younger players, plus the addition of some recruits that Coach Hal Baird considers top-rate, the Buc could have another good year, and possibly return to the playoffs.

The immediate thought, after the Pirates quickly bowed out of the regionals, was that the showing might hurt East Carolina if it has a chance for a bid next spring. However, Baird says that the NCAA realizes that the Pirates had a long layoff, and knows what it can mean in the loss of timing.

In fact, Baird noted, the NCAA officials at the tournament urged East Carolina to submit a bid to host the regionals in the future, something Baird would love to do. That would not be a bad recruiting tool, either.

For the fan, however, this summer promises to have a lot of action on the diamond—from Little League on up through the collegiate age group.

Interviews will be starting shortly in the quest for a new athletic director at East Carolina. The most surprising thing is that a lot of names haven't popped up as yet. Usually by now, dozens are floating around.

Maybe it's because such a position doesn't carry a lot of "name" to it. The men who work in the assistant jobs, or at smaller schools don't get the publicity that others do.

The only name we've really heard, again, is that of Charlie Justice, who does or does not want the job, depending on which letter you've read, or to whom you've talked.

Wellcome 6, Exchange 3

Wellcome and Exchange battled for eight innings before Wellcome finally pulled out a 6-3 victory in a Tar Heel Little League game yesterday. Wellcome is now 5-3 in the league, while the Exchange is 4-4.

Neither team could score over the first six regulation innings of the game, sending it into extra frames. Through those first six, Exchange got only two hits off Terry Warren, while Wellcome picked up just four off Mike Hathaway.

But finally, in the eighth, Exchange broke the ice as both starters gave way to relievers. Exchange came up with three in their half of the inning, taking the lead.

But they were unable to hold it. Wellcome came back with six in the bottom of the inning to win. Andrew Perry walked and John Whichard reached on a fielder's choice. Dallas McPherson walked, loading the bases. Greg Vanscoy walked, forcing in Perry, and a walk to Scott Carawan brought in Whichard. That cut it to 3-2.

Warren then ended it, hitting a grand-slam home run for the game-ending 6-3 score.

Warren led the Wellcome hitting with three, while Monty Atkinson had two to pace Exchange.

Optimists 11, Coca-Cola 3

The Optimists finally won their first game of the year, downing Coca-Cola, 11-3, in North State Little League play yesterday. The Optimists are now 1-7, while Coke is 5-3.

The Optimists pushed over two runs in the first inning, and added a third in the second. The game-winner, however, came in the third.

In the third, Anthony Coward led off getting hit by a pitch. He moved to second on a wild pitch, and two passed balls allowed him to score making it 4-0.

The Optimists added four more in the fifth and three in the sixth, with Kelly Barnhill hitting a two-run homer. All three of the Coke runs came in the fifth on a homer by James Matthews.

Barnhill and Coward led the Optimist hitting with two each, while no one had more than one for Coke.

Jabbar Not Getting Older, Just Better

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar feels that at the age of 33, he's not getting older, he's getting better.

"I think I've changed as a person and as a player the last couple of years, and I'm proud of the change," said Abdul-Jabbar, who was named the National Basketball Association's Most Valuable Player for a record sixth time in his brilliant 11-year career.

"I've matured as an adult," he said. "My roots may be in the 1960s, but this is 1980 and I hope I've matured since then."

"I know I've improved as a basketball player. I'm more aware of all facets of the game now than I ever was. And as long as I can maintain the standards I've set for myself, stay in shape and stay healthy, I'm going to keep on playing."

That's good news for the Los Angeles Lakers, who rode the 7-foot-2 Abdul-Jabbar's brilliant pivot play to the championship.

"Kareem means everything to us," said Lakers Coach Paul Westhead. "He is the Man on this team."

But Abdul-Jabbar says the team is more important than the man.

"As an individual award, it's wonderful to feel that your contributions were more important than those of any other player," said Abdul-Jabbar. "But this is a team game, and what the Lakers accomplished as a unit overshadows this. We proved we were the best. We got to hang the banner in the Forum that says, 'World Champs,' and that's the big thing."

"We were like the Three Musketeers — one for all and all for one. I wouldn't be here without the help I got from my teammates."

The NBA presented three other awards Thursday at a special luncheon during the annual summer meetings of coaches and general managers, and all three went to members of the Boston Celtics.

Forward Larry Bird was named Rookie of the Year, Bill Fitch was named Coach of the Year and Red Auerbach was named Executive of the Year following the Celtics' turnaround from a 29-53 record in 1979 to a 61-21 mark last season.

The 7-foot-2 Abdul-Jabbar received 147 votes from the 221 cast in the balloting of NBA players, easily outdistancing forward Julius Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers, who was second with 31½. George Gervin of San Antonio was third with 19 and Bird was fourth with 15.

In winning the Maurice Podoloff trophy, Abdul-Jabbar surpassed the five MVP awards won by Bill Russell of the Boston Celtics.

"That's nice, that's beautiful, but that's really hard to appreciate right now," said Abdul-Jabbar. "That's something I will really appreciate when I retire from the game and look back on my career."

Abdul-Jabbar is the 16th consecutive center to win the MVP award. The last non-center to win was guard Oscar Robertson of Cincinnati in 1964. Moses Malone of Houston won the award last season.

"Few people have the ability to dominate a game, offensively and defensively, as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar has throughout his career," said NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien in presenting the award. "And this year he demonstrated the leadership qualities that the Lakers needed to win the championship."

Bird was a lopsided winner of the rookie trophy, which was named this year after Eddie Gottlieb, the league pioneer who died in December at the age of 81. Bird received 63 votes from the panel of three writers from each league city.

The voting for Rookie of the Year, as for the other awards, was conducted at the end of the regular season. Thus the brilliant playoff performance of the Lakers in general, and Johnson in particular, did not weigh in the balloting.

Sayetta Is Loop Prexy

Tom Sayetta has been elected president of the Roanoke Tennis League for the 1980 season.

Teams participating in the league are from Bethel, Washington, Rocky Mount, Roxobel, Enfield, Roanoke Rapids, Tarboro, Greenville, and Robersonville-Williamston (as combined team). League matches consist of five singles and two doubles matches. Play begins Sunday, June 8 and continues through August 10.

The league tournament will be held in Greenville on August 15-17.

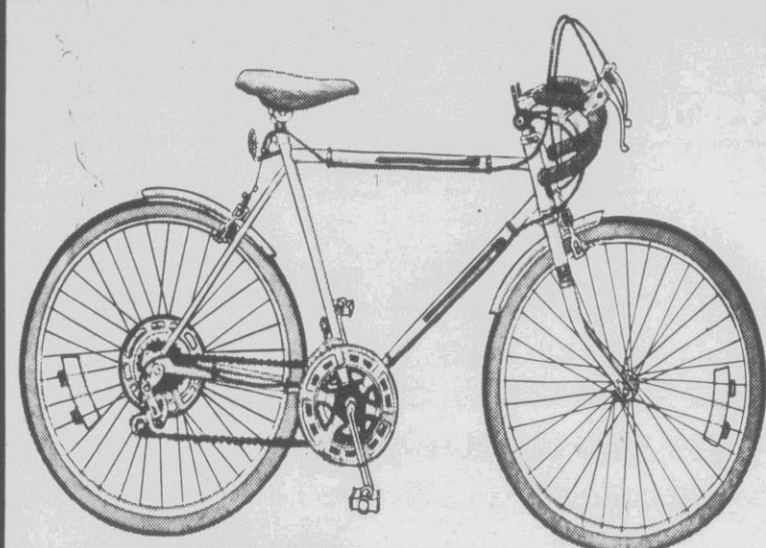

Information about the league and the Greenville team can be obtained from Sayetta and from Bob Turnage, president of the Greenville Tennis Club.

Hurricanes Are Coming

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The hurricanes are coming! And if you're not careful, they'll kill you.

"I appeal to all Americans who live or visit in vulnerable areas to take this matter seriously," Richard A. Frank, head of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, said Thursday.

The hurricane season begins Sunday and Frank pointed out the potential for disaster is enormous.

He said there were no major hurricanes during the 1970s and as a result millions of Americans who have moved into fast-growing areas on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts have never experienced a really bad storm of this type.

the nation's worst hurricane disaster. That year, a hurricane roared out of the Gulf of Mexico and swept over Galveston, Texas, taking 6,000 lives.

Last year, Hurricane Frederic did $2.3 billion in damage, making it the most expensive in history, he noted. But by comparison with many storms of the past it was weak and struck a relatively sparsely populated area.

The second most damaging storm was Agnes in 1972. It killed 122 people and caused $2.1 billion in damage, although not officially classified as a hurricane.

A really big storm hasn't hit the United States since Camille in 1969, which had winds over 155 miles an hour and a storm surge over 18 feet.

Army Plans 'Reassign' Rigger In Chute Death

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Army officials announced Thursday they would reassign a parachute rigger acquitted this week of murder in the death of a captain whose parachute failed to open.

But Maj. Tom Woods, a Fort Bragg spokesman, said Pfc. Alvin Williams probably would remain a rigger. He would not reveal Williams' new assignment.

Williams, 20, is on leave until next week and he could not be reached for comment.

Woods said the reassignment will be made after Williams returns. "I know the assignment has been discussed with him," Woods said. "I don't know whether he was given any choices."

Williams, a rigger with the 407th Service and Supply Battalion of the 82nd Airborne Division, had said that he wanted stay in the Army and he hoped to return to his unit.

He was accused of severing a static line on a parachute used by Capt. Lawrence Hill, 26, on March 26. Hill fell to his death after the main parachute failed to open and his reserve chute opened too late to break the fall.

A military jury acquitted Williams of a first-degree murder charge on Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Woods confirmed that the Criminal Investigation Division at Fort Bragg is continuing its investigation into the sabotage of several parachutes that were found to have been tampered with.

Woods also announced several procedural changes had been made to strengthen security in the handling of parachutes at the base.

He said the number of quality control inspectors in the rigging process has been doubled so that two persons will make a physical inspection of each chute's static line.

New regulations require that each parachute be put in a kit bag and sealed with a plastic seal. If the seal is found to be broken when the chute is issued, it will be rejected. No seals were placed on the parachutes before the accident.

Chain link fences also have been erected at the parachute-issue point at Pope Air Force Base, which is adjacent to Fort Bragg, and at the parachute-packing shed at Fort Bragg in an effort to restrict access to the parachutes.

The Army also officially announced Thursday that Hill's reserve parachute did not malfunction. There had been some question as to what condition the parachute was in because it was not deployed in time to break Hill's fall.

A graduation ceremony was held for Weblo Scout, Ted Lively, who also received the Arrow of Light Award. This badge is the only one that a former Cub Scout may wear as a Boy Scout. It represents outstanding achievement in cubbing.

Jay Tripp, Al Andrews, Jason Benton, Jacob Benton, Kris Banks, James Baltzgar, and Franklin Huggins also were recognized for individual achievements. Sandy Hofner and Rosalind Lively received gifts for their service to scouting.

That leads to apathy, Frank warned, so that when a serious hurricane does come people may not be prepared or may be unwilling to evacuate if necessary.

Historically, the United States has experienced an average of two serious hurricanes every three years. Although there is loss of life and property damage almost every year because of hurricanes, there has not been a major storm since 1969.

However, the normal pattern can be expected to resume at any time, Frank warned. "The lack of major hurricanes was fortunate for the 1970s, but it will not be fortunate for the 1980s, when the hurricanes come and we are not prepared," he said.

Most endangered are heavily developed coastal areas, many of which have limited access, which would cause problems if an evacuation were needed.

Thanks to improved methods of prediction in recent years, forecasters can now give about 12 hours warning of a hurricane and as a result death tolls have been declining.

But at the same time property damage from the storms has been growing, largely because of increased development in vulnerable areas. He projected losses of $15 billion or more in the 1980s if it is merely a normal decade for these storms. "If the storms are frequent and severe, that figure could go higher," he said.

The storm surge, the wall of water pushed up ahead of a hurricane, can tower up to 25 feet high when it comes ashore and winds may be 150 miles per hour or more, Frank said.

He pointed out that more than 60 million Americans now live in hazardous coastal areas, a total nearly equal to the population of the whole country in 1900, the year of

Recession For N.C. 'Easier'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The state's chief economist says harder economic times are coming, but North Carolina may see a shorter, milder recession than the rest of the nation.

"Our data at this point does not indicate that the state is in a recession," said Ken Flynt, economic adviser to Gov. Jim Hunt and a former economist for North Carolina National Bank.

Flynt cited the state's lower unemployment rate, higher car sales and stable construction industry as indicators the state may not be as hard hit as the rest of the country.

But he predicted the state's industrial output will begin to fall behind soon.

"We do expect some months, perhaps a couple of quarters, of declining activity," Flynt said. "We're going to see declining figures coming in very soon."

The tobacco industry has been the hardest hit so far, with 13 percent, or 3,490 workers, unemployed.

Following tobacco, is the furniture industry, in which 6.5 percent are unemployed. The construction industry has laid off 6.1 percent, and textiles have laid off 4.4 percent.

Flynt predicted the state's unemployment rate — now 5.2 percent — will go no higher than 7 percent. Nationally, 7.2 percent of the work force is now unemployed.

Flynt said another sign that North Carolina's recession may not be too severe is that the number of people filing for unemployment claims hasn't been growing rapidly. During the week ending May 17, 7,501 people filed initial claims, up from 7,417 the week before, an increase of just over 1 percent.

The record for applications this year was set during the second week of January when 29,616 people filed.

At the height of the 1974-75 recession, 54,000 persons filed during the highest week.

Boston Plans Five-Month Celebration Of Birthday

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — The spot where John Winthrop and four boatloads of Puritans set up shop in 1630 celebrates 350 years of Tea Party, Paul Revere, Baked Beans, Red Sox and Pops this year with a summer-long birthday party.

"It's five months of constant celebration," said Sylvia Weisenfeld, coordinator of all the hoopla. "It's a celebration of cities, a celebration of what an urban environment is."

"We're taking all of the individual pieces and putting it all together and saying, 'If you live in the city, this is what you get, all kinds of swell stuff.'"

The special swell stuff for "Jubilee '80" will include a gathering of tall ships this Friday, a display of city architecture, a reunion of Puritan descendants, a grand ball and a 6-hour parade.

The hype would likely offend and probably shock the folks who started it all. Winthrop told his straight-laced English followers he wanted the settlement to be a model of piety for other colonies.

"A city upon a hill," he called his clearing in the woods. "The eyes of all the people are upon us."

Sleeping in church, making naughty speeches and kissing your spouse on the Sabbath were all crimes in those days.

The Puritans' legalities faded, but their principles lived on.

Winthrop's legacy was a uniquely Yankee combination of hard work and innovation that matured into a moral and commercial bulwark. During the 19th century, Boston railed against slavery, nourished great architecture and built fortunes on shipping, textiles and bankrolling the settlement of the West.

After World War I, however, the city stagnated. New York had long since become the pre-eminent port. The textile mills drifted South. Boston's aristocratic families moved to the suburbs.

But in the past two decades, something has happened. Boston is in the midst of a resurgence of prosperity and renewal. The shabby dowager of a city that made "Banned in Boston" the butt of innumerable vaudeville jokes has staged a dazzling about-face. It is the story of an urban comeback.

The city's rim of high-technology industries, its colleges, museums and hospitals have contributed to its rebirth. So, too, has an influx of ambitious young professionals who have moved into rundown neighborhoods and swept away decades of grime and neglect.

In the 1970s emerged what Mayor Kevin White calls a liveable city, a place of theaters, parks, outdoor cafes and luxury apartments carved out of decrepit factories.

The once-ramshackle maze of abandoned warehouses along the waterfront has been scrubbed up and weeded out. The stately wharves now carry fancy condominiums.

Nearby, the shops and restaurants of Faneuil Hall Market Place, three side-by-side granite buildings, alone attract 1 million visitors a month.

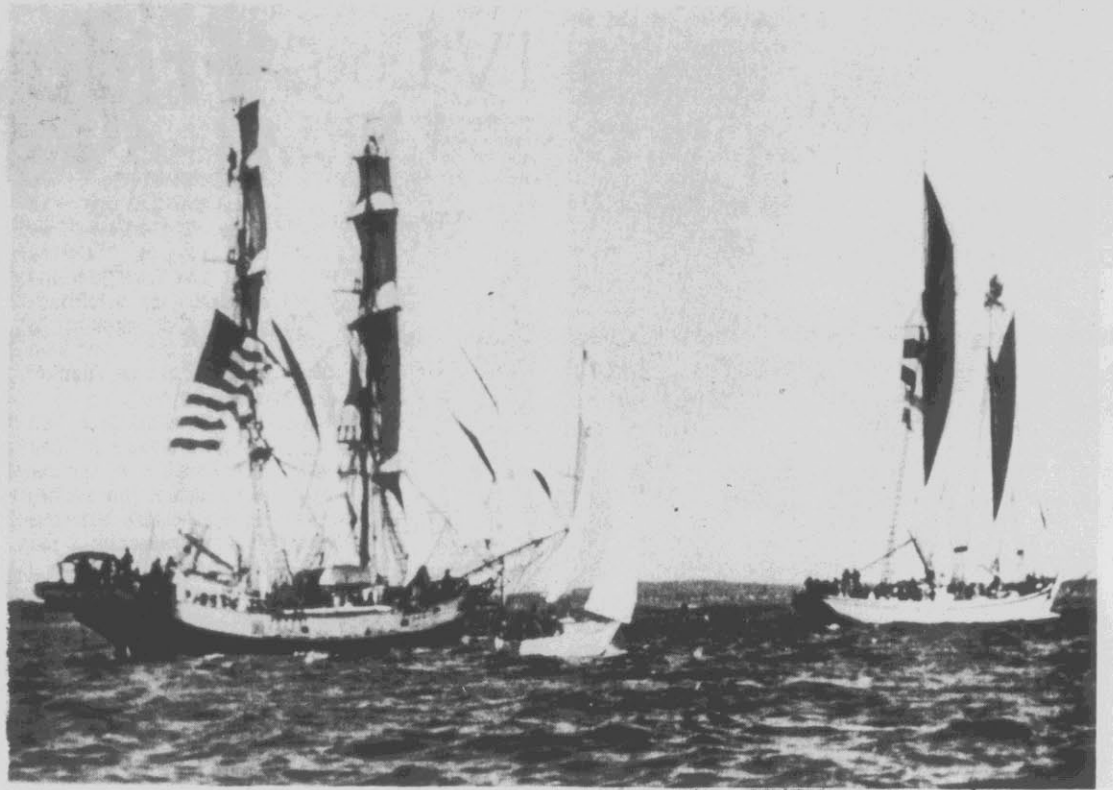

The city has become so popular with tourists that hotel rooms are almost impossible to find. At least eight new hotels are scheduled to be built in the 1980s. In all, about $20 billion worth of construction is planned in the city over the next 10 years.

So many companies want to build high-rise office buildings in Boston that some people worry the city's cozy character will be forever lost.

Boston's escape from decay is being loudly touted for its birthday festival. The lead-off event is a parade of tall ships, the first major gathering of these vessels in the United States since the Bicentennial. About 65 tall ships, dozens of smaller sailboats and seven Navy ships will gather Friday for a weekend-long display of sailpower.

Through the summer, there will be, among other things, a stage revue about the Boston Red Sox, an exhibit of architects' schemes for Boston's next 20 years, a 17th century house built on Boston Common, a reception for descendants of the original Puritans, a display of art by Boston blacks and the appearance of a 100-foot-high water spout on Boston Harbor.

The actual anniversary of the city's founding is Sept. 21, and that weekend, Boston will look back on it all with a 6-hour parade and a grand ball.

RACE INTO BOSTON HARBOR — Two of the tall ships arriving for Boston's 350th birthday celebration race each other into Boston harbor Thursday. California's Tax Revolt Apparently Subsiding

By BOB EGELKO
Associated Press Writer
SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Two years after its eruption shook local governments throughout the country, the California tax rebellion seems to have subsided.

There are indications that the same voters who embraced Howard Jarvis and overwhelmingly approved his Proposition 13 property tax cut in 1978 will reject his Proposition 9 state income tax reduction Tuesday.

Public opinion polls show that Proposition 10, a plan to restrict rent control ordinances, also seems headed for defeat.

And Proposition 11, which would place a 10 percent tax on major oil companies to finance mass transit, apparently has at least an even chance for passage, despite opposition from oil companies.

All three results from Mervyn Field's California Poll would defy the near unanimous forecast by political experts a few months ago that the conservative, anti-government, anti-tax tide of the late 1970s would continue rising through the early 1980s.

But it appears that some of Jarvis' biggest benefactors in 1978 — the economy, novelty, luck, and blunders by his opponents — have changed.

The floundering economy has made voters uneasy about another tax cut. Also, Jarvis seems to have lost his magic touch. His profanity-laced insults against politicians and government are no longer bringing laughter and cheers. Instead, there have been demands for apologies.

And in contrast to 1978, the opposition campaign has shunned doomsday forecasts, despite estimates of more than a $4 billion annual revenue loss from the measure.

Rather, they have recruited prominent supporters of Proposition 13 to emphasize the difference between it and Proposition 9. They have stressed the theme that Proposition 9 favors the rich, because most of its benefits would go to fewer than 10 percent of the taxpayers.

Echoes of Proposition 13 can also be heard in the campaign for Proposition 10, which would repeal current local rent control laws and severely restrict new ones.

Jarvis predicted in his 1978 campaign that landlords would use their tax savings to lower rents. But that prediction, largely unfulfilled, sparked a series of rent control laws in several cities, which Proposition 10 would undo.

Seeks Older Bus Drivers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Sen. Robert W. Wynne, D-Wake, said Thursday he will introduce legislation that would require North Carolina school bus drivers be at least 18 years old.

Wynne expressed concern for the 10 school bus fatalities this year and promised to attempt to submit the measure at the legislative session which begins next week.

Such a move would require two-thirds approval from each house to be considered during the short session.

"What I say is when you have as many accidents as we have, if there's any possibility that a driver 18 or older is safer than a 16- or 17-year-old driver, then we ought to pursue that," Wynne said Thursday.

Recent state statistics show that during the 1978-79 school year, a disproportionate amount of accidents involved 16-year-old bus drivers.

The 16-year-olds made up 12.8 percent of the state's school bus drivers, but they were involved in 20.4 percent of all bus accidents. Drivers 17 years old made up 39.5 percent of all drivers and were involved in 41.3 percent of the accidents.

Wynne, a member of the Senate Education Committee, said he has asked the legislative research staff to draft his proposal. He said he wanted the bill, if passed, to become effective in September, but he acknowledged the school systems might need more time to find older bus drivers.

He said the bill would not include any pay increase for bus drivers.

Wynne said that if the bill does not pass, he will offer a resolution urging all school boards to avoid hiring bus drivers under the age of 18.

"The fact that students 18 and over would not be driving a group of their peers would help," Wynne said. "It would be easier for them to discipline the children on the buses, and they would not be diverted as easily by children talking."

Power Corp. To Pay NRC Fine

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — The Vermont Yankee Nuclear Power Corp. has decided to pay a $4,000 fine levied by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission for not adequately inspecting a truck carrying hazardous waste, company officials said.

Steve Stoll said Vermont Yankee officials made the decision to pay the money during the 25-day grace period allowed after the NRC proposed the fine on May 9.

The NRC cited Vermont Yankee when one of its trucks exceeded radiation standards by 100 millirems when it arrived at a dumping facility in Richland, Wash., in February.

Opening lead: Two of ♠.

Most commuter games are "ghoulish," where the cards are not shuffled and are dealt in packets rather than one at a time. However, some diehards insist on playing rubber bridge on the trains, and every once in a while an interesting hand comes along. This one from the 7:54 a.m. Stamford-Grand Central train is a virtuoso example of declarer play.

We are not enamored of the bidding, but that's exactly what took place. South's bid of three no trump was based on the expectation that his partner's diamond suit would be at least semi-solid.

West led the two of hearts and the declarer, Andy Gabrilovitch of Stamford, realized that his ten of hearts was a key card. The lead made it look as if the heart honors were split, so he played low from dummy and captured East's jack with the king. He led the eight of diamonds, and West refused to help to play ♠ 9.

The importance of winning the first trick now became evident. If West continued with the queen of hearts declarer's ten would become a third-round stopper, and West led a low heart to force the ace.

Reading the position perfectly, declarer cashed the ace-king of clubs, then continued with a club to West's queen! West was end played. If he led a spade, he would be presenting declarer with a trick in the king of spades and the entry to take another diamond finesse. Instead, West tried exiting with a low diamond, but this proved to be no better. Declarer ran it to his nine, then repeated the diamond finesse. So declarer scored four diamond tricks, three clubs and two hearts to make his doubled contract.

The whole thing was West's fault. If he had led the queen of spades (doesn't everyone!) at trick one, then shifted to a heart if declarer holds up, he would have defeated the contract!

Shooter Of JR Is Identified

NEW YORK (AP) — The guessing game over who shot that ornery oilman J.R. Ewing, villain-hero of the "Dallas" television series, probably will continue until the first show of the fall series is broadcast. Meanwhile, the New York Post is saying the triggerman was Dusty, boyfriend of J.R.'s wife Sue Ellen.

Well, as faithful viewers will recall, Dusty is dead, or at least he appeared to die in a plane crash. But the Post reported Thursday that the cowboy, played by Jared Martin, only appeared to die, that the crash was faked and he will be resurrected next season and blamed for shooting the character played by Larry Hagman.

The Post quoted a source at Lorimer Productions in Hollywood as saying, "as of now the killer is definitely Dusty, but nobody around here will admit to it."

A CBS spokesman, asked to comment on the report, said the fall segment of the series won't begin production until late June.

By the way, the Post also said J.R. will recover to swagger through life as nasty as ever.

'Friday' Can't Match Original

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — To anyone who witnessed the early days of "Saturday Night Live," so fresh and obnoxious and wonderfully absurd, ABC's ripoff of the show, "Fridays," must seem an affront to a special memory.

Of course, the same could be said of "Saturday Night Live" itself, which for the past couple of seasons has degenerated into a lifeless ritual, a mockery of its own past glory.

A major element in "Saturday Night Live's" early success was the show's mere existence on network television. Every gag packed a one-two punch: the explicit, "Laugh at us, we're picking our noses," and the implicit "Laugh at us, we're picking our noses ON NATIONAL TELEVISION!"

Now that the "new" has worn off, all we're left with is the nose-picking. We've already seen that.

If "Saturday Night Live" can no longer live up to "Saturday Night Live," how can "Fridays" possibly do it?

It can't. As if to guarantee its own failure in that line, "Fridays" is obvious in its imitation. The pace, the look, even some of the skits are lifted from "Saturday Night Live."

The "Fridays" troupe unwittingly obscures whatever talent it may possess by relentlessly trying to conjure up the image of "Saturday Night." While watching Melanie Chartoff do her mock-news "Friday Edition" bit, it is impossible not to think of Jane Curtin doing her mock-news "Weekend Update" bit.

The comparison isn't only inevitable, it is invited — a sure-lose situation.

On last Friday's show, for example, the "Fridays" crew did what might have been a very funny bit — a meeting of the "Brotherhood of Men Who Hum Between Words." Now, hmmm, a hmm bunch hmm of hmm people hmm talking hmm like hmm this hmm is indeed absurd, but the whole "Fridays" atmosphere, reeking as it does of practiced absurdity, smother the skit.

Sadly, the "Fridays" troupe seems talented enough. Mark Blankfield, Melanie Chartoff, Maryedith Burrell, Larry David, Darrol Igu, Brandis Kemp, Bruce Mahler, Michael Richards and John Roarke might have, given less obvious direction, yielded a show ABC could pride in.

The warm-up comic, Marty Cohen, is funnier than any comedian "The Tonight Show" has featured in two years.

He was funny, that is, until the show was ready to begin, and he had to tell the studio audience:

"You people are going to have to scream and yell and have a good time for us ... you're going to have a good time. If something is said that's funny, laugh. If it's not funny, laugh anyway."

A prudent directive, that last, but vain. You can't laugh at "Fridays," except in the impolite sense. Sorry, Marty.

Big Broadcast Merger 'Dead'

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The largest broadcast merger ever proposed, that of the Cox Broadcasting Corp. into General Electric, now appears officially dead.

Four citizen groups, a Virginia Beach, Va., company and Cox itself filed various types of appeals Thursday of the Federal Communications Commission's decision approving the merger. The court action automatically prevents the FCC decision from becoming final, pending a court ruling.

Since the merger contract between the two firms states that either may terminate the deal if a "final" FCC order is not in hand by May 31, the appeals will allow Cox to back out.

Cox had announced late last month it wanted to call off the merger, reportedly because GE had rebuffed a Cox demand for more money. GE officials then promised they would go to court to enforce the contract if the FCC's approval of the deal became final before May 31.

"Although I am pleased that the merger may now not be consummated, I regret that the reasons for its failure are related to corporate greed and avarice, and do not relate to sound public policy and effective enforcement of commission law," said Bill Hanks of the Committee for Open Media in Pittsburgh, one of the citizen groups that opposed the merger on the grounds it would allow a single firm to control too many media outlets.

The merger of the two companies, which together own 28 radio and TV stations and 57 cable TV systems, would have been the largest ever. The company would have been valued last year at between $460 million and $508 million and more recently at $560 million.

If the merger had gone through, GE would have been left with five TV stations and 12 radio stations, plus the cable properties. The remaining 11 stations would have been sold to other companies to satisfy the FCC's ownership rules.

Foundations 'Secretive'

By LAURA RICHARDSON
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — More than half of the nation's charitable foundations are so secretive about their operations that they refuse to provide "minimally acceptable" information about themselves, says a committee which spent four years trying to get the data.

Nearly one-third of the 208 foundations surveyed refused to give any information at all, and 13 have unlisted numbers, according to a report released Wednesday by the National Committee for Responsive Philanthropy, a Washington-based coalition of public interest and community groups.

All the foundations covered in the report have assets of $25 million or more, the study said.

"We think the findings of this study are a little astounding even for those of us who have experienced how difficult it is to get information about many foundations," said Robert Bothwell, the committee's executive director.

The NCRP study involved requests for information about the foundations' grants, finances and governing policies.

"We believe this study illustrates an attitude that is pervasive within the foundation world; that foundations do not need to reach out to the public... that foundations do not have to reach out to organizations that are seeking grants," he said.

Bothwell said foundations are "cut off" from charities run by "the poor, minorities, the young and most workers," and that "the large majority of foundation funds go to long-established, relatively well-known charities with very traditional approaches to social problems."

The public has a right to information, Bothwell said, because of tax exemptions granted foundations and donors, the trust agreement which is the legal basis of foundations, and because foundations' activities have a direct impact on the public.

"We made extraordinary efforts to gather those materials," Bothwell said. The foundations were then rated according to their responses to the requests. A "minimally acceptable" score was 54.

The report was released in Dallas as the 31st annual meeting of the Council on Foundations began. The NCRP is not part of the council, which is the official association of private, corporate and community foundations.

"We have no quarrel with public accountability," said Granville Austin, council spokesman. "And some parts of the NCRP report are excellent."

"You do have some council members with a 'the public be damned' attitude, and some are shy about publicity for their good works," he said. "But most others believe strongly in accountability."

Austin said council members were given a preview of the NCRP findings in a two-hour meeting Tuesday.

He said the report will "make something of a flap here because many foundations are given a zero rating and they don't think they deserve it."

Bike Theft Arrest Made

Greenville Police early this morning, arrested Veltan Peterson Northern, 17 of 308 Darden Dr. on charges of possession of burglary tools and possession of stolen property.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers stopped Northern at the intersection of Ninth and Clark Streets, about 12:30 a.m., when they saw him pushing two bicycles.

Northern, who said on bicycle was his and the of his cousin's, had bolt cutters, pliers, a pry bar and wrench attached to the seat of his bicycle.

Further investigation revealed that the second bicycle had been taken from 208 South Elm St. around 11 p.m. yesterday, Cannon reported, after the chain securing the bicycle had been cut.

Property Rights Battle Waged In United Presbyterian Assembly

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

DETROIT (AP) — The fear that local congregations could lose control of their property to groups like Zen Buddhists under current law has created a furor at the United Presbyterian Church's national assembly.

Three Wrecks Investigated

An estimated $2,350 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated here by Greenville police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 5:05 p.m. collision on Cedar Lane, 10 feet North of the Maryland Drive intersection, involving cars driven by Nancy Baker Hathaway of 106 John Lane., and Gennie Kornegay Scott of 2117 Montclair Dr.

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $1,000 to the Hathaway vehicle and $100 to the Scott vehicle.

Cars driven by Charles Madison Lee Jr. of 201B Brighton Hills Apts. and Rita Darlene Glisson of Stokes, collided about 4:40 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, just West of the Arlington Boulevard intersection, causing $300 damage to the Lee car and $600 damage to the Glisson auto.

A 5:30 p.m. collision on Greene Street, 64 feet South of the Fifth Street intersection involved vehicles operated by Debora Delores Babb of Oakmont Sq., and John Junior Mayo of Route 4, Tarboro.

Damage was set by officers at $3,200 to the Babb car and $50 to the Mayo vehicle.

Anniversary

The Community Gospel Chorus of the St. Paul Discipline Church, Ayden, will celebrate its second anniversary Sunday at 5:30 p.m. Various groups and choirs will be participating in the celebration.

President of the chorus is Mabel C. Williams; vice-president, Melvin Murphy; and pastor, Elder A.L. Matthew.

The public is invited to attend.

Presbyterian leaders said Thursday that groups could pack a congregation and transfer church property into other hands without fear of a legal fight because of a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision.

As a result, the national leaders have proposed making the denomination's historic tradition that local congregations hold property "in trust" for the entire church more explicit.

But some critics called the proposal a "power grab" Thursday, claiming it is meant to deter more congregations from breaking away from the denomination in theological disputes.

Quarterly Meet

The Homecoming Quarterly Meeting will be observed at St. Paul F.W.B. Church in Greene County. The services are as follows:

Friday night, board meeting.

Saturday night, The Rev. W.H. Joyner and Patrice Chapel will render the service.

Sunday, 11 a.m., Pastor Bishop W.L. Phillip, the senior choir and usher will be in charge of services.

The homecoming address will be by Mother M. Johnson of Arthur Chapel F.W.B.

Sunday, 3 p.m. Rev. C.R. Parker and Cherry Lane will be guests of the church.

The public is invited to attend.

"Local churches would still own their property," said William P. Thompson, chief administrator of the 2½ million-member denomination.

"We're simply saying it can't be taken over by some group to teach Zen Buddhism or any other different religion."

He said this is possible in the present legal tangle, noting that 28 congregations last year voted to quit the denomination, most seeking to take property with them.

Thompson and other church leaders charged that "false rumors" and "misinformation" were being circulated by dissident groups about the assembly proposal.

A target of the charges apparently was the Presbyterian Lay Committee, a quasi-official group that has sharply opposed the assembly proposal as endangering congregational liberties.

The Rev. August J. Kling of Mountain Brook, Ala., an editorial adviser to the group's newspaper, said he "was not aware of any specific misstatements of fact."

"There are a lot of uncertainties of interpretations and long-range implications," he added.

Zimbabwe Is Preparing Open Doors

By JOHN EDLIN
Associated Press Writer

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) — In its second month of independence under black rule, Zimbabwe is busy building bridges for trade, transport and tourism with a world once hostile to its rule by whites in the name of Rhodesia.

Diplomats, businessmen and technical experts are re forging links severed after the white-dominated government of Ian D. Smith in 1965 unilaterally declared Rhodesia independent from Britain to entrench its rule.

Now, the black-governed republic is being wooed by both East and West. Some 20 diplomatic missions have been re-established. Trade — outlawed by United Nations sanctions — is again flowing.

Tourists, frightened away by seven years of guerrilla war, are beginning to return to Victoria Falls, the Wankie Wild Animal Park and ancient Zimbabwe ruins.

And borders with neighboring black-ruled states that supported the black nationalist guerrillas now in control of the Zimbabwe government have opened for the first time in years.

"We're almost back to normal," an economist in Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's socialist-based government said. "And we're all but back as a respectable member of the world community."

Mugabe, 56, won a landslide victory in British-supervised elections in February after signing a peace treaty and constitutional accord with his predecessor, the moderate and white-backed prime minister, Abel Muzorewa.

A priority of Mugabe's is to normalize relations with the rest of the world, particularly neighboring countries.

The aim is to loosen the almost total dependence on South Africa that the country inherited from previous governments, strengthen ties with fellow black states and move toward ultimate economic self-reliance, aides of Mugabe said.

The fledgling nation has already passed some milestones on this road: —Road, rail and air links have been reopened with Mozambique and Zambia, countries that were springboards for guerrillas loyal to Mugabe and rival chieftain Joshua Nkomo throughout the war.

—Some of Zimbabwe's agriculture and mineral exports — previously sent by rail only through South Africa to world markets — are being hauled by train through Mozambique, which handled three-quarters of the country's trade before the war.

—Telex, telephone and mail services have been reopened.

Mozambique's information minister, Jose Cabaco, who signed a cooperation accord with Zimbabwe this month, called the new-found peace a time "to open up a whole new frontier."

An economic boom in Zimbabwe is certain to shower benefits on Zambia and Mozambique — countries needing its cheap consumer goods and fast, efficient transport routes.

With this in mind, Mozambique and Zimbabwe are jointly electrifying their railroad systems, and Zambia is spending $24 million streamlining its rail network.

Mozambique is rebuilding rail and road bridges destroyed by Rhodesian raiders in the war as well as gearing its two main Indian Ocean ports of Maputo and Beira to handle most of the Zimbabwe trade.

At the same time, the British-based multinational Lonrho group is seeking to open its 150-mile pipeline from Beira to Zimbabwe's eastern town of Umtali — before 1965 the sole artery for Rhodesia's oil which has since been brought in at high cost from South Africa.

Zimbabwe, the richest and most industrialized of the black-ruled southern African states, sees itself as the new hub of the region.

Visitors to Zimbabwe from Mozambique and Zambia are astonished to find that — despite what propagandists had told them in the war — the cities and towns are not in ruins and the countryside has not been razed.

Citizen Report Critical Of Police In Klan Rally

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are forecast for much of the nation through early Saturday, according to the National Weather Service. The showers will extend from New England across the Great Lakes and as far south as Texas. Showers are also predicted in the Southwest and rain is expected for the northern Plains and Rockies. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Hot, hazy and humid weather will be the rule in North Carolina into Saturday, but forecasters say more cloudiness will be developing during the weekend. In line with those conditions, dense fog covered surface areas around the Asheville airport this morning, reducing visibility to near zero. Weekend forecasts call for excellent weather for outdoor activities although some scattered afternoon thunderstorms are possible, especially over and near the mountains. Thursday produced a bright, sunny day with temperatures in the 80s and low 90s. A reading of 91 at the Raleigh-Durham Airport tied the record high, set in 1945, for the date.

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A citizens committee released its report Thursday, criticizing the judgment and performance of city police during the Nov. 3 shootings at an anti-Ku Klux Klan rally. But the committee appointed by the Greensboro Human Relations Commission exonerated the police of any collusion or willful neglect in the shootings which left five Communist Workers Party members dead. In its report to the Human Relations Commission, the citizens committee also criticized the actions of city government and the City Council in the aftermath of the shootings. The report said city officials twice "attempted to discourage the exercise of First Amendment rights" when the City Council considered passing a restrictive parade permit ordinance and in the city's handling of a parade permit application by the February 2 Mobilization Committee. City Council members and Police Chief Ed Swing declined comment Thursday on the report saying they had not yet seen copies of the report and they wished to allow the Human Relations Commission to make its own report to the City Council first. Among the report's recommendations was that the Human Relations Commission be given more power to investigate and deal with racial discrimination. The 11-member Citizens Review Committee was appointed by the commission in January, with six black and five white members, and charged to study the shootings, their aftermath and their effect on race relations in Greensboro. The 15-page report was based on interviews with police officers, city officials, local residents and participants in the rally; written testimony from Klan members and others; and other written reports concerning the incident, including news accounts. In addition to the shootings themselves, the report touches on numerous aspects of life in Greensboro. It says blacks still feel alienated and underrepresented in city government, adding that the city's handling of the aftermath of the shootings "has created a negative, even distrustful attitude toward city officials," which extends beyond the black and poor in the community. The evaluation of the police department's performance focuses on planning prior to the event and communication between officers on the morning of Nov. 3 prior to the planned parade. Mark Schott, a white and chairman of the citizens committee, said the department underestimated the potential for deadly violence at the parade partly because it did not pay enough attention to previous confrontations between the Klan and the CWP — at China Grove in July 1979 and in Winston-Salem in April 1979. "Police testimony to our committee said over and over again that if they had known of the seriousness of the China Grove incident, they would have taken more precautions," Schott told the Human Relations Commission Thursday. The report cites several breakdowns in communication and problems in the chain of command which prevented police from acting quickly when a caravan of armed Klansmen was discovered approaching the rally point. The result was that no police were on the scene when the caravan arrived. Earlier communications breakdowns meant officers in the field did not know where the rally and parade were to start, Schott said. The police department knew the information, but field officers were not told. Reporters were given correct information by CWP members but did not realize police were being purposely deceived, Schott added, so reporters were present when the shooting started although police weren't. But Schott and the report made other remarks in favor of the police. Both said the decision to adopt a "low profile" was made in good faith, although it was incorrect. They said that quick police action after the shootings resulted in immediate arrests. And finally, the report said, the police themselves freely made available the information that has been used to criticize them. Police and other city officials hid nothing and fully cooperated with the committee, Schott said. The report also criticizes the CWP for its "irresponsible and provocative" behavior leading up to the rally.

A 'Tight Budget' Until Those Closing Days

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Rank still has its privileges and the state Advisory Budget Commission is no exception, says state Rep. Ben Tison, D-Charlotte. The 12-member commission, along with the governor, puts together a proposed state budget for review by the full General Assembly. The ABC's suggested budget seldom is modified to any great degree. Commission members are appointed directly or indirectly by the governor, the lieutenant governor and the speaker of the House. The privilege comes, Tison said, when a commission member wants something for his area. So it went with Tison, who said that in the closing days of deliberation over the latest state budget proposal, a budget billed as austere with virtually no new programs, several commission members began carving out money for pet projects. Not to be outdone, Tison put in his bid for $50,000 for Charlotte's Spirit Square, a downtown arts complex. "I put that in there just to get my two bits," Tison explained. "A lot of members of the Advisory Budget Commission already had their hands in the cookie jar." Tison identified some of the others as fellow commission members Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, who Tison said was behind a $50,000 appropriation for the Schiele Museum of Natural History in Gastonia; Rep. Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, who promoted $30,000 for a handicrafts museum in his district; and Rep. Horton Rountree, D-Pitt, who backed a $40,000 item for an eastern North Carolina museum. The three legislators couldn't be reached for comment Thursday. As for Spirit Square, Tison said he knew it could always use money for its continuing renovation. "When you see everybody in there grabbing, you're better off to play the game than to go off without any marbles at all," Tison said. According to another commission member, Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, Tison was aided by Charlotte

Mayor Eddie Knox, who happens to be the commission chairman. Tison said Hardison didn't make out too badly either. Some $1 million was included for building new libraries in the state and as it turns out, the folks in Hardison's district want to build a regional library. But Hardison denies the money is meant only for them. "It's not for my area any more than for any other area of the state," Hardison said. "I wouldn't say that it's anybody's particular project."

 KENNEDY HALVES 1965-1970

If you're in the process of Spring Cleaning, you may find you have all kinds of things that are gold or silver that have been laying around collecting dust. Instead of throwing them away, check to see if they're marked sterling or 10K, 14K or 18K Gold. If they are, you can trade them in for CASH at Coin & Ring Man.
