Carter Over The Top In Today's Voting

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
President Carter was guaranteed the delegates he needs for a Democratic majority today in an eight-state presidential primary finale — but even as the numbers were sealed, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy insisted the nomination was not.
Carter expected to easily surpass majority strength, and he predicted he would have an ample supply of delegates to spare when all the Democratic choices are made.

His aim in the final set of primary elections was to roll up a margin so convincing as to force Kennedy from the race, something the challenger said will not happen.
There were nine Republican primaries, too, but those are only exhibition contests, for Ronald Reagan is assured of uncontested nomination.

The Democrats were apportioning 696 nominating votes in Tuesday's primaries, 580 of them in California, New Jersey and Ohio.
Kennedy counted on winning the first two, but Carter expected to capture Ohio. Last week he thanked Ohio voters "in advance" for the delegates he said would clinch his nominating majority.

The Kennedy camp acknowledged that in every delegate count, including their own, Carter will end the primary season with more than the 1,666 votes it takes to win the nomination.

Now, they say, his problem will be to keep them for the 10 weeks until the Democratic National Convention.
Kennedy's last, frail hope is that he can win so convincingly in California and New Jersey as to buttress his argument that Carter is weak in the populous states where a Democratic ticket must be strong to win. The case will be more difficult given Carter's ranking as the favorite in Ohio.

Beyond that, the Kennedy game plan assumes the Carter will go to the convention as a candidate who appears vulnerable to Reagan in the three-way contest now looming, with Rep. John B. Anderson as the added, independent starter. Anderson's supporters said Monday, meanwhile, that they've turned in enough signatures to get the Illinois congressman on the ballot as an independent this fall in West Virginia and Massachusetts.

James Flug, Kennedy's spokesman, said the delegate count is not necessarily binding, and won't be until and unless the Democratic convention adopts rules that would hold delegates to their commitments.

That signaled anew the likelihood of a Kennedy effort to win back in a convention rules fight the delegates Carter has been capturing in primaries and party caucuses. That is more than a long shot, since Kennedy would have to win a convention majority in a rules fight — and the majority clearly is with Carter on the nomination.

Even Flug acknowledged that it is far more likely Carter will command a majority of the delegates all the way to the nomination.
Today's contests matched Carter and Kennedy for 306 delegates in California, 161 in Ohio, 113 in New Jersey, 35 in West Virginia, 23 in Rhode Island, 20 in New Mexico, and 19 apiece in Montana and South Dakota.

There also was a Republican primary in Mississippi.
The Democratic delegates were awarded under a system of proportional representation, so that even the loser wins his share. Carter needs only 12 percent of the delegates chosen today to pass the 1,666 nominating majority.

The Associated Press count of Democratic delegates put Carter just 82 short of a majority entering today's primaries. He has 1,584 delegates, Kennedy has 845.
There are 85 uncommitted delegates, and 123 yet to be chosen.

Kennedy campaigned in the Big Three primary states on election eve, with stops in New Jersey, Ohio and California.

Carter did his open politicking in Ohio last Thursday, and in television interviews broadcast on Sunday. He said in an interview with the Cable News Network that the primaries have produced "a very strong showing of support among Democrats for my candidacy."

"The people have spoken," Carter said. He said the issue is settled even if Kennedy "decides to go all the way to the convention before he formally withdraws."

Off camera, Carter said he plans to contact Kennedy after today's primaries in a party unity move, added that he is willing to compromise on Democratic platform issues. Kennedy promptly said he wasn't interested in compromise. "I expect to be the nominee," he said.

Carter has won 21 Democratic primaries so far, Kennedy 5.

And even if Kennedy won every delegate at stake today — which is impossible under the proportional representation system — he would not catch up with the president's count.

CLARK MAY FACE PROSECUTION — Former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark, right, chats with members of American delegation to a "Crimes of America" conference called by Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr which opened in Tehran Monday. Clark, who arrived in Tehran with nine other Americans in defiance of a Justice Department ban, may face prosecution from the very agency he once headed. (AP Laserphoto)

Clark Asserts He Is Helping U.S. Hostages

By The Associated Press
Former Attorney General Ramsey Clark said today his attendance at the "Crimes of America" conference in Tehran will help the U.S. hostages. Meanwhile, Iran's air force commander was reported to have resigned, apparently because he ordered the bombing of helicopters used in the U.S. rescue attempt.

"I think our presence here is essential to dialogue between the Iranian people and the American people," Clark told reporters. He added his attendance at the conference with nine other U.S. citizens in defiance of a Justice Department ban "will help the American hostages."

He said he had not heard that State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the presence of the American delegation in Tehran was aggravating the hostage crisis, but that if Carter did say that then "I disagree very strongly."

The resignation of Iran's air force commander, Maj. Gen. Amir Bahman Bagheri, was reported by the Tehran newspaper Kayhan. No reason was given but Bagheri was strongly criticized for ordering the destruction of the helicopters the Americans used in the aborted mission to rescue the hostages in late April.

On Monday, Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh ruled out a visit by a U.N. envoy to the hostages, who were taken captive 213 days ago when Islamic militants seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Ghotbzadeh praised Clark as one of the staunchest supporters of the Iranian revolution that ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in January 1979, and said Clark had consistently expressed his opposition "to the crimes of the shah and the U.S. government in Iran."

Power Supply Short

Charles Horne, director of the Greenville Utilities Commission, said this morning that the Virginia Electric and Power Co. has reduced voltage to its customers by five percent because of increased customer demand due to high temperatures and high humidity.

Horne said the voltage reduction began yesterday afternoon. He said he did not know how long the reduction would continue, although VEPCO officials said late this morning that things might stabilize by noon today.

Horne said that in addition to the voltage reduction, large industrial users have been asked to curtail non-essential loads in an effort to help.

Such a voltage reduction reduces high electrical loads without seriously affecting service to any customer, and is an operational procedure.

The voltage reduction applies to all VEPCO customers in Virginia and West Virginia as well as in North Carolina.

If a further load reduction is needed, residential customers would be requested to curtail usage of electricity. The final step would be, "load shedding," which would involve cutting off circuits on an alternating basis, or in the case of Greenville, use of GUC's load management program which involves cutting off water heaters and air conditioning units, using radio-controlled switches mounted on water heaters and air conditioning units.

Three Chinese To Prep School

ANDOVER, Mass. (AP) — Three teen-agers from China will go preppie next fall when they attend 202-year-old Phillips Academy, which claims among its alumnae John F. Kennedy Jr. and George Bush.

Phillips, which ordinarily charges $6,300 a year, will admit the three young men as seniors on scholarships under the first high school-level education program between China and the United States, the academy said Monday.

Selecting Jury For Ross Trial

Jury selection began this morning in Pitt County Superior Court for the third attempt to try suspended Greenville Police Department sergeant Douglas H. Ross on charges of possession of marijuana and maintaining and keeping a structure for the storage of a controlled substance.

Two earlier attempts, one in March and the second in April, resulted in mistrials. A mistrial was ordered in the first trial because of delays caused by the March 1 and 2 snowfall. The second mistrial resulted from testimony by witnesses that indicated

Ross' wife aided State Bureau of Investigation agents in the search of the Ross home last July — testimony that defense attorneys contended placed Mrs. Ross in the position of testifying against her husband.

Ross was arrested after SBI agents, Greenville police, and agents of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration raided a mobile home owned by Ross and located near his home on U.S. 264 just west of the city limits, last July. More than four tons of marijuana, valued at $3.18 million, was found in the house trailer.

Light Vote For Runoff

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — With only one statewide contest at stake, an extremely low voter turnout was expected for today's Democratic runoff.

The Democratic nomination for auditor was the only statewide race to be decided in the second primary.

State Sen. Edward Renfrow of Smithfield and former Maxton Mayor William S. Chestnut are seeking to replace Henry Bridges, who is retiring after 34 years as state auditor. The winner will meet Republican candidate James F. McIntyre of Pitt County in November.

Because the auditor's office is generally a low-visibility race and no higher offices were contested, state elections officials have predicted that voter turnout today would not exceed 20 percent.

Renfrow, however, doubts there will be that many people visiting the polls.

"Last month 500,000 or so voted in the auditor's race," Renfrow said. "This time I'd say 200,000 will be a big figure."

Renfrow led the first primary with 43 percent of the votes cast. Chestnut finished second with 30 percent.

Chestnut, a certified public accountant who serves as financial director at Pembroke State University, last week predicted that only 10 to 12 percent of the state's 1.8 million registered Democrats would vote in the second primary.

The runoff was declared at Chestnut's request by the state Board of Elections after it was learned that J.E.B. Davis, third-place finisher in the first primary with 27 percent of the vote, was actually a registered Republican and ineligible to run in the Democratic primary.

A state attorney general's opinion had said Renfrow should be declared the winner with a majority because Davis' votes should be disqualified.

Because of the confusion that followed the dispute, Renfrow said he expects legislation aimed at preventing similar cases in the future to be introduced in the short session of the General Assembly that convenes Thursday.

He did not say, however, who planned to introduce the bill, but said he understood it would require those seeking statewide office to present sworn statements from their county election board certifying they are registered and qualified in that party.

Housing Unit In Final Stages

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
Contractors are "well into the finishing schedule" on the Housing Authority's new mid-rise housing facility for the elderly here, executive director Joe Laney reported Monday night.

Laney said that the outlook appears favorable for meeting the revised close-out target date of July 7 for the five-story complex off E. Third Street, dubbed unofficially as University Towers.

The director reported that work is moving along in several areas, including the installation of kitchen cabinets in the units, ceiling grids, and fixtures. Painting work is also progressing, he noted.

Curb and gutter is in on the parking areas, he pointed out, noting that parking will be available to serve the facility on both the Third Street and Fourth Street sides of the building. Commissioners discussed the parking situation with particular regard to discouraging the use of the lots by university students.

Laney said that citizens who submitted pre-applications last fall for occupancy in University Towers are being called in now for income verification as part of the final application steps. He mentioned that 94 applications have been received so far for the 60 units that will be available.

Some 40 of the 50 units of housing allocated to Greenville under the Section Eight existing housing program are now under contract, he told commissioners, and several more should be closed this week. Laney said that the Authority has had problems finding three and four-bedroom existing units under the program for rent.

Commissioners approved the execution of a depository agreement with North Carolina National Bank to handle the Authority's Section Eight existing housing account.

Board members also gave their approval to a proposal by an area laundrymat agency to provide laundry services to University Towers. Under the arrangement, three washers and three dryers will be provided and the Authority will receive $75 per month lease payment to cover utility costs. The lease agreement would be changed if more units were added in the future.

Laney said that it was also agreed that a check meter will be installed in the laundry room of the new facility and if electricity usage exceeds the amount of the lease rate, the rate would be negotiated. It was pointed out that the arrangement is viewed as a break-even proposition.

Commissioners adopted a resolution approving a master annual contributions contract with the Department of Housing and Urban Development covering a total of 75 Section Eight existing housing units. The Authority had previously executed an annual contributions contract for 50 units and HUD has approved 25 more for Greenville. The maximum amount of the

Unable To Aid Inquiry

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Martha Coleman, the only person with Vernon E. Jordan Jr. when he was shot, met with federal agents behind closed doors as investigators sought clues in the sniper attack on the National Urban League president.

Earlier, Mrs. Coleman, 36, had told a newspaper columnist, "I don't have anything to hide. I didn't see a thing out there."

Jordan, who was shot in the lower back with a bullet from a .30-06 rifle, was in serious but stable condition Monday. Hospital officials said he continued to show steady progress and walked with the aid of two other people, his first steps since the hotel parking lot shooting early Thursday.

The attack came as the civil rights leader got out of a car driven by Mrs. Coleman. He had joined the Fort Wayne Urban League member for coffee at her home.

Mrs. Coleman, who had been in seclusion since the shooting, met with FBI agents Monday, according to agent Roy Mitchell, who declined to disclose details immediately.

Her lawyer, Charles Leonard, blamed the delay on "an incident that greatly troubled my client and greatly troubled me."

Leonard told reporters that when he arrived at police headquarters last Thursday at 5:45 a.m., less than four hours after the shooting, he was kept waiting until shortly after 7 a.m. when "I was advised she had left the building." He said he got a call about 2 p.m. and went to the station to see Mrs. Coleman then.

Spotted Fever Cases Growing

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state's county health directors say Rocky Mountain spotted fever is off to an early start this year, with three deaths from the disease reported in the state so far.

Three cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever were reported Monday in Guilford County, raising the year's total cases to 13 — the same number reported during 1979.

So far, the tick-borne disease has killed a 60-year-old Greensboro man, a 29-year-old Alamance County man and a 10-year-old Wilkesboro child.

In Randolph County, where two cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever have been found, the disease is believed to have caused the death, pending further diagnosis, officials said.

Brent Hanner, nursing director for the Randolph County Health Department, said Rocky Mountain spotted fever "usually hits us hard a little later in the summer."

The peak season for the disease, which runs from the first warm weather in spring to late September, has not arrived yet, Miss Hanner said.

Health officials said they are unable to explain the cycles in which the disease occurs. Twenty-seven cases were reported in 1978.

Health officials said owners of dogs or cats that go outdoors should put tick collars on their pets. They said it is important to inspect the body for ticks after being outside. Children should be checked after they play outdoors. A tick buried in the skin should be removed carefully with fingers protected by tissue or with tweezers, they warned.

Not all ticks carry Rocky Mountain spotted fever, health officials said, but anyone bitten by a tick should note the date of the bite and be aware symptoms of the disease begin to appear two to 12 days after the bite of an infected tick.

The symptoms of the disease are fever, chills, headache, aches and pains and a rash resembling measles.

Health officials said they now have antibiotics to treat the disease if it is detected in time.

SECURITY DEPOSIT RETURN?

My landlady wouldn't give back my security deposit, even after I did a good job cleaning. She admitted it was good. I only gave a week's notice, but I never had had a lease and she understood that my job demanded that I move quickly. What are my rights? V. S.

According to information from the Consumer Protection Division of the N. C. General Assembly, since your tenancy was month-to-month (with no lease) your landlady cannot legally hold your security till she re-rents the dwelling. This she could have done if there had been a breach of lease. Of course, she can charge for any nonpayment of rent and damage to the premises. Your security deposit for month-to-month occupancy should not have exceeded an amount equal to one and one-half months' rent.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

As I was driving through traffic last week, my eyes caught sight of a stalled washer repair truck with the hood raised. The driver was pacing back and forth looking at his watch and then at the road for some sign of a tow truck.

May God forgive me for the exhilaration I felt. It was like watching Miss America with meat caught in her teeth. I'm not a vindictive woman but as I drove on, all kinds of fantasies flashed through my mind.

I could hear the guy at the service station saying, "What model have you got, Mac? No, I don't mean the year you bought the truck, I'm talking about model numbers. Okay, here's what you do. Go back to the truck and look UNDER THE ENGINE. If you can't get someone to help you to turn the truck over, then you get on your back and use a mirror. And don't forget, the numbers will be reversed."

"Okay, you are going to be there, say, Monday in the afternoon? Hey, look, fella, I know you're blocking traffic, but we're approaching a weekend and a lot of cars are stranded, so give us a break. Walter's out with flu, Stan is getting married, and I'm here alone. Are you under warranty? What's the warranty number? Tell you what, if we don't make it Monday, we'll be there for sure Tuesday. Have a good day!"

Does anyone have any idea how many women's hours have gone into waiting for repairmen of one kind or another?

It's bad enough to live with Bombeck's Laws of the Suburbs:

Anything "borrowed" will break down while it is cradled in your arms.

The box marked "warranties" holds only one . . . and covers parts for a crepe maker which you've used only twice and has no parts.

All appliances are "seasonal." Air conditioners go out in the summer, furnaces in the winter, washers when everyone is throwing up, dryers when it's raining, lawn mowers right after summer vacation, freezers after you've just dug a cow and TV sets during the World Series.

Every appliance in your house will stop on the day after you spent your savings on a boat.

If you brag on an appliance's longevity, it will hear you.

Like repairmen, appliances do not work weekends. I always remember dancing with a fella one night who whispered in my ear, "What are you doing the rest of your life, honey?" and I replied mechanically, "Waiting for my washer repairman."

It's a lonely job . . . but someone has to do it.

Miss Darlene Vick, niece of the bride, was flower girl and was dressed in a long dress of white voile printed with lavender rosebuds. She wore lavender satin ribbons in her hair and scattered rose petals from a wicker basket.

DEAR ABBY: This letter is written in response to the woman whose son was planning to marry a paraplegic. I am a rehabilitation counselor, working solely with spinal cord injured persons. I was distressed, but not surprised, that the woman referred to her future daughter-in-law as an "invalid."

Her ignorance concerning the limitations of persons with spinal cord injuries is all too common. This lack of understanding can be a far greater hardship to a person with such an impairment than the impairment itself.

There is no way to undo generations of misinformation in one letter, but I will try. The easiest way is simply to list some of the things a paraplegic (one with lower body paralysis) can do, with proper equipment and/or assistance: Work, play, marry, divorce, love, be loved, have sex, become a parent, raise children, keep house, drive a vehicle, shop, attend school, church and engage in sports. I could fill your column with more, but I think you get the general idea.

Of course, each situation is different, depending on the extent of injury, motivation, environmental barriers, attitudinal barriers and other factors. But then we're all different, aren't we? Some of us able-bodied people do very little with our lives while others accomplish a great deal. The same applies to persons with physical disabilities.

What we can all do is make sure that we never prevent another human being from living as full and rewarding a life as he is capable of. Let's not be barriers ourselves.

JOE BUTLER, BATESVILLE, ARK.

DEAR JOE: Right on!

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old girl. I know lots of boys as friends but have never had a real boyfriend. To be perfectly truthful about it, I have liked several boys a lot, and one in particular was on my mind night and day. He never paid any attention to me so I just went on dreaming about him, but nothing ever came of it.

Now for my problem. There is a rumor going around school that I got pregnant and had an abortion last summer. Abby, it is a lie. I never even had the chance to get pregnant, so I don't know where this rumor got started. How can I prove this is not true? I need your help.

LIED ABOUT

DEAR LIED ABOUT: Trying to prove that a rumor is not true is like trying to put toothpaste back into the tube. Just behave in a manner that will make those who spread those rumors look like liars.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I attended a wedding reception a month ago. The bride is the daughter of friends. The affair was elegant. They had 200 guests for a sit-down dinner and dance at the finest hotel.

My question: Is a wedding considered a social obligation — or a thing apart?

We entertained the parents of the bride at a dinner party two months before the wedding, but we aren't sure if we now owe them, or if they should make the next move socially. Please advise.

NOT SURE

DEAR NOT: Since the parents of the bride were your guests last at a dinner party, they now owe you a similar invitation. Even though their daughter's wedding was elegant, it cannot be considered repayment for your dinner party.

CONFIDENTIAL TO J.B.: To those who would give advice, the best advice I know is, if you can't be kind — be quiet.

CONFIDENTIAL to those who have sent for Abby's booklets: Please, please be patient. I am literally deluged with orders and am getting them out as quickly as possible.

RAGLAND SWEATER. . . can be knitted from the neck down.

Take the easy way out and knit your sweaters from the neck down — eliminating most tedious finishing details. Best of all, there is no setting in of sleeves when you use this method.

Easy-to-work lace stitch panels add a subtle touch of elegance to this knit-from-the-neck-down raglan, designed to be made in sports-weight yarn with a gauge of 5 1/2 stitches per inch. If you prefer a classic sports cardigan, just eliminate the pattern panels. Directions are for sizes 12, 14, 16 and 18.

To obtain directions for making the lace panel raglan sweater, send your request for Leaflet No. B-7001 with $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope to Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-7001 by sending check or money order for $14.00 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Each kit contains the instruction leaflet and Brunswick Fore 'n Aft Wintuk Sports Yarn sufficient for one sweater. Please specify your choice of camel, blue heather, ecru, white or soft yellow.

DEAR PAT: I have a large collection of knit and crochet patterns which I have successfully used over the years. Most of them call for one, two or four-ounce skeins of yarn and so many of the yarns are now packaged differently. One of favorite yarns is now sold in 100-gram balls. It appears to be about the same size as the four-ounce skeins, but am I safe in using the same number of skeins or balls? — MRS. L. M., CANTON, OHIO.

In most cases, Mrs. M., you will need additional skeins in the 100-gram size than you required in the four-ounce size. A 100-gram ball is equal to approximately 3 1/2 ounces, and a 50-gram ball is equal to about one and three-quarter ounces.

This means that for a pattern calling for one to seven skeins, you should buy one additional of the smaller 100-gram balls. If the pattern requires seven to 14 skeins, it will take two additional skeins or balls.

You can use this same ratio when substituting 50-gram skeins for two-ounce skeins. That is, purchase one additional skein for each seven skeins required.

Metric measurements have come into use in crochet hook sizing, too, with millimeters used in place of the older system of lettering the plastic and aluminum hooks. At the present time, some brands carry both, but you will probably want to clip and save this for the future when the lettering system may be eliminated entirely.

The 2:00 mm hook is the same as the B hook, the 2:50 hook equals the C hook, the 3:00 hook equals the D hook and so on, with each half millimeter stepping up one size or one letter in the alphabet, through the letter I. If a J hook is specified, you will be able to replace it with a 6:00 or 6:50 hook; if a K hook is specified, you have a choice of 7:00 or 8:00 mm hooks and beyond that there are 9:00 and 10:00 mm hooks. You can readily see that this new sizing gives you a wider choice of hooks in the larger size range.

This can be ever so important in helping you to achieve the correct gauge, which is the only way to be sure that the item you are making will be the intended size. Before, if your pattern suggested a K hook and your tension was too tight to achieve that gauge with a K hook, you were stuck — you were unlikely to find a hook just one size larger.

A similar change is being introduced in knitting needles. Rather than list all of the sizes, I will give you just a few in the medium-size range. An American size 6 knitting needle would be the same as a 4:00 mm; a size 7 would be 4:50 and

N.C. Test Passed By A Larger Percentage

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State education officials credit improvements in remedial education for an increase in the percentage of high school students passing the state competency tests.

"I think the main thing is that there has been a great deal of work going on to determine where the students are weak," H.T. Conner, assistant superintendent in the state Department of Education's Public Instruction sector, said Monday.

Conner's comments came on the heels of figures released by the department showing the results of tests taken in April by high school students who had previously failed one or both portions of the two-part competency examination.

Officials said 1,664 seniors in the public schools took the reading test and 683 — or 41 percent — passed. They said 2,367 took the math portion and 1,137 — 48 percent — passed.

The Associated Press erroneously said Monday that 98 percent of the state's high school students examined in April passed the math and reading tests.

A total of 71,795 seniors in public high schools have taken the test since it was first administered to them as juniors in the fall of 1978. The size 8 would be 5:00 mm.

Universal metric sizing would simplify matters for Canadians using U.S. patterns and vice versa. With the old system, American needles start with O through 15 with the smaller numbers denoting smaller needles. The Canadian system is just the opposite with the smaller numbers representing larger needles.

Better Values Needed

Break-ins and thefts from the public schools is not an easy problem.

The sheriff's department reported in a Sunday article that at least 15 break-ins had occurred in county schools this year . . . and for the school year Greenville police report 20 break-ins.

Food seems to be the object of the thievery, and of course the break-ins occur while the school facilities are empty.

There is also the problem of personal items being taken from individual students lockers, or from wherever they may be left. While the petty thievery is not always reported, it goes on.

What is the answer? No one really has one. The cost of full time security guards would be staggering, and might not eliminate the problem. Both the sheriff's department and the police department have, or have ordered, portable burglar alarm systems which hopefully will be a deterrent.

Of course the real answer is a return to old fashion values by our society.

We need to instill into our young people the principle that taking what belongs to someone else is wrong, and destruction of public property is to be deplored.

To some, that is almost corn in these modern times, but until we as individuals have respect for one another such problems will never be solved.

Question Still How Long

If there were any question of recession gripping country it was settled with the April government index which forecasts future economic activity. It dropped by 4.8 percent.

If the indicator is correct it will be a major recession . . . but, of course, nothing is certain in economic forecasting since the public is unpredictable.

The question is still one of how deep the recession will be, and how long it will last.

THIS AFTERNOON Emergency Step

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The tremendous amounts of money to be made smuggling dope are corrupting normally law-abiding individuals and communities.

And that is why, says Gov. Jim Hunt, he is pushing emergency action in the upcoming session of the General Assembly to make dealing in drugs a serious offense indeed.

The rationale is simple economics. Now, the punishment is light. A five-year sentence at the outside, with parole making a year in jail the norm.

Given the opportunity to make a million or so dollars, there are those who figure it would be worth a year in prison to come out a wealthy man — if you are even caught.

"This has become such a profitable business that people are being drawn into it. It is a corrupting influence on good people — and communities," the governor commented.

But if smuggling can lead to at least six years and as much as 20 years, depending on the substance, and with no opportunity for parole, "that is a different matter," says Hunt.

two tons of the controlled substances.

A key provision in the proposal is to give prosecutors the power to reduce or suspend sentences for individuals providing help in identifying and prosecuting those higher up. It is felt that smugglers who now literally laugh in official faces when asked who they work for will react differently when facing up to 20 years in prison.

Another provision of the proposal will make it possible to bring first degree murder charges against drug dealers responsible for the death of a individual either from overdose or from drugs containing poisons. Charges could be brought against the entire chain of suppliers from the street vendor up to the main money backer.

Paradise

Of the package, Hunt says it provides "tough and harsh sentences, and that is exactly what we need today."

North Carolina has long been a smuggler's paradise, with the sounds and estuaries of the coast, and the isolated rural nature of large stretches of the interior. But things have intensified in recent months because Florida and Texas, among others, have enacted severe sentencing laws.

Officials say smugglers are avoiding those states, making North Carolina a prime target. Edmisten says much of the stuff coming in here is destined for major urban centers farther north.

Thomas S. Watts, president of the state District Attorney's Association and a prosecutor in Elizabeth City, thinks the measure will help stop smuggling at the top. "It is important to understand that this proposal is not aimed at those misguided

WASHINGTON — A long time ago John Randolph of Roanoke used to inveigh against the "itch to legislate" that afflicted the Congress. If the great Virginian were around today, he would be inveighing instead against the itch to regulate. It afflicts the whole of our government.

Two current publications provide dismaying evidence of the growth of federal regulatory activity. It is a trend with which everyone is familiar, but when the facts are gathered together in one place the figures pack a wallop.

One report comes from the Center for the Study of American Business at Washington University in St. Louis. The other comes from the American Enterprise Institute in Washington. They make the same point: Contrary to the hopes and promises of the Carter administration, regulatory activity is not declining. The flood roars on.

In its new Directory of Federal Regulatory Agencies, the Center for the Study of American Business takes a dispassionate look at 57 major agencies. They have grown like crabgrass. Twenty-one of them were established between 1970 that is more than twice as many as in any previous decade. The 1970s also stand unsurpassed "in the enactment of major legislative controls over business activities." More than 120 major regulatory laws were passed in that period.

The costs of regulation keep rising. The next fiscal year will see nearly $7 billion spent by the 57 agencies, an increase of 15 percent over current levels. Some of the agencies' staffs have leveled off, but overall the growth has merely slowed, not stopped. In 1970, federal regulators numbered 27,661. In 1981, the budget calls for 90,825 employees.

Agencies come in sizes small, medium and large. The Cost Accounting Standards Board has only 20 employees and the Council on Environmental Quality only 32. But the Food Safety and Quality Service in the Department of Agriculture will have 11,789 workers next year, and the Environmental Protection Agency will have 11,226.

More than 150 years ago, Thomas Jefferson remarked that "we have more machinery of government than is necessary, too many parasites living on the labor of the industrious." Jefferson didn't know the half of it. Since 1970, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has expanded from 780 employees and a budget of $12 million to 3,891 employees and a budget of $135 million. The Food and Drug Administration had roughly 4,150 workers in 1970; it has roughly 7,650 today.

Federal regulation now pervades virtually every phase of human existence. The American Enterprise Institute's compilation of major regulatory initiatives during 1979 begins with rate regulation on international air service and winds up with regulations on rights of ac-

Other Editors Say Crime Victims

(Greensboro Daily News)

Whenever a violent crime is committed, the headlines tend to focus on the act, and not the aftermath. The victims of crime — those who were physically or psychologically abused — become all too often a blur of forgotten footnotes.

Last Sunday the Daily News reminded its readers of one of the most compelling of these cases: a 64-year-old Lexington woman who has been in a coma for four years following a brutal beating and robbery at her family's country store in 1976. It is a story of heartbreak, of family disruption and of economic hardship. It is also a story that should be read by every member of the N.C. General Assembly which has considered, but never approved, a law that would help compensate the victims of violent crime.

In the case of Mrs. Lillian Tysinger, the Lexington woman, such a law would not have solved her family's financial problems — more than $25,000 in doctors' bills and thousands of dollars more for special nurses and other expenses. But it undoubtedly would have helped some.

A victim's compensation bill was introduced in the 1979 legislature by former Guilford Sen. Kathy Sebo. Twenty-nine states, plus the Virgin Islands, have similar laws. All such statutes are based on the valid premise that the state not only has the duty to prosecute the criminal but the responsibility to assist the criminal's victim.

The North Carolina bill would have established a victim's compensation board for reviewing cases and determining restitution. The bill stipulated that maximum compensation could not have exceeded $10,000 per victim and would only be awarded for losses deriving from physical injury (and not for stolen property). The compensation law would cost the state an estimated $500,000-700,000 annually — a drop in the bucket, compared to overall state expenditures. Despite the enthusiastic support of Governor Hunt and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, the bill was voted down in a Senate committee last session.

It is not too late to revitalize the measure, however. While it probably won't rear its head in the legislature's brief budgetary session this month, there is a good chance it will be reintroduced next January. For the sake of Mrs. Tysinger and many other forgotten victims of North Carolina crime, the General Assembly should take the humane step and adopt a compensation bill.

Strength For Today

AWAY FROM EVIL

We read, at times, the harrowing accounts of men and women brought face to face with their own wrongdoing. Perhaps they have been quietly stealing a bit here and there from their employer. Or they may have been embezzling funds left in their safekeeping, or, as public officials they may have been accepting bribes. Then some little circumstance opens the door and all the damaging facts rush out — through the neighborhood, onto the front page of the newspaper, into criminal court. And at the end there may be prison, or at best a ruined reputation.

One of the worst aspects of these calamitous situations is that they are unnecessary. There are turn-offs all along the road of evil; and the turn-off to use is the one right at hand. If we are doing something wrong we are stupid if we don't stop — and do it while there is time. Tomorrow may be too late, and at some time we come to the end of the turn-offs and proceed inexorably to the final disaster.

Empty Chair Ploy Flopped

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — As part of his non-stop debate challenge to President Carter, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy made a serious effort to amass all remaining presidential candidates confronting an empty chair representing the absent Carter. The idea died when Ronald Reagan rejected it.

Top Kennedy aides approached Reagan's political high command just before the June 3 primaries with a proposed debate between Carter, Reagan, Kennedy, Rep. John Anderson and, if he were still running, George Bush. When the president inevitably refused to appear, he would be represented by an empty chair.

Reagan's men said no, contending they would wait until after the nominating conventions. Actually, they were surprised that Kennedy would risk unfavorable comparisons with the more articulate Anderson, who is wooing Kennedy's liberal constituency. But Kennedy would agree to any format in order to dramatize Carter's refusal to debate.

Defense Or Tax Cuts?

When Rep. Jack Kemp urged House Republicans to oppose the final version of the budget resolution despite its high defense spending levels, his telephone rang off the hook with outraged calls from defense experts who, like Kemp, are advisers to Ronald Reagan.

Included were Dr. Paul Inkle, director of the Disarmament Agency during the Ford administration; Dr. John Lehman, who was Inkle's deputy director and retired Lt. Gen. Edward Rowny, a former arms control negotiator. All pleaded with Kemp not to join anti-defense liberal Democrats in an unholy alliance sure to defeat the budget resolution.

Kemp, who will be chairman of the defense policy panel on the Republican national platform committee, wants high defense spending.

But he contends that the high taxation levels in the budget resolution undercut basic Republican economic arguments for the fall campaign. Before taking that position, he conferred with Reagan's national chairman, Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, and won his support. Reagan himself has stayed neutral.

RR Loves Henry

Ronald Reagan stunned a closed-door breakfast session here recently when he praised Henry A. Kissinger as "a great American" who had served "honorably" as secretary of state for Presidents Nixon and Ford.

What surprised the television-radio correspondents at the off-the-record session was the difference between that appraisal of Kissinger and Reagan's dismissal of Kissinger at a Boca Raton, Fla., press conference during the Florida Republican primary campaign last winter. On that occasion, he said that Kissinger would never be secretary of state in his administration.

When one reporter at the breakfast here recalled the earlier remark, Reagan looked startled, then said: "I don't remember saying that." Still, there is no chance Reagan as president would reinstate Kissinger at the State Department.

Recruiting In Nicaragua

Latest intelligence out of revolutionary Nicaragua points to this ominous development: a decision by the Marxist Sandinista government to train young Nicaraguans to fly Soviet MiG fighter aircraft in an Eastern European flight school.

The report, circulated at highest Pentagon levels by the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA), places the flight-training school in a surprising location: Bulgaria.

Military analysts believe the Nicaraguans will be trained to fly MiGs, not in Central America but as part of Moscow's Cuban surrogate.

Big Executive Jet Salesman

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — If you're in the market for a used jet airplane you'd save time by contacting Robey Smith, who maintains a computer list of 4,000 business craft ranging in price from $1 million to $10 million.

That covers all business jets registered in the United States and most of the world. "We know instantly who owns a plane, where it is based, and its condition," says Smith, who knows how to fly most of them.

About the only thing he doesn't know is if and when the owners wish to sell or trade, but discrete inquiries usually provide that information too. Should an owner agree to sell, Smith's staff is ready to proceed.

The plane must be totally checked out. It must be certified airworthy. An extensive title search is conducted. A finely detailed contract is written to avoid any lingering liabilities for the two parties.

The craft might have been deregistered in one country, registered in another and funds transferred simultaneously with title. Each deal is different. "Every transaction has its own obstacles," he says.

For its work, Robey Smith Co. usually earns 5 percent, or half than on multiple listings. Last year the Miami-based company sold about 50 planes for more than $100 million, or 20 percent of the world market.

Relatively little is known about aircraft brokers, mainly because there are so few of them, because their work is so highly specialized, and because it seldom affects the affairs of the ordinary person.

It is an essential business, however, for the world of the very rich and powerful — the Mideast businessman, the corporate chairman, the head of state. It's an expensive world, too rich even for rock stars.

Small aircraft costing perhaps $20,000 generally are bought and sold through dealers at local airports, but jet brokers handle their million dollar deals in downtown business offices. It's all business.

Smith, 60, thoroughly familiar with small piston planes, switched to private jets when they appeared in the mid-1960s. It wasn't difficult. He didn't need to read up. "What book could you study?" he asks. "We were writing the book."

His lifelong love of flying is probably essential to his success because, of the many considerations in buying an aircraft, credibility ranks high. Often knowing little themselves, buyers seek those who do.

"I never knew what it was not to fly," says Smith, who was born in Spirit Lake, Iowa and grew up in Philadelphia, where his father, a World War One pilot, was an aerial photographer and manufacturer.

"When there was an empty cockpit and my father was flying anywhere, I just jumped in," he relates. "I soloed at 14. Never had any real instructions; dad just let me fly. Over the years flying became a natural thing ... like it is with some people and a fishing pole."

After earning a degree from Brown University, Smith flew for National Airlines, joined the Air Force and eventually became the Air Transport Command's chief staff pilot for the China, Burma India Theater. Later, he formed and operated an equivalent of today's charter airlines.

With that type of background, Smith won the friendship and confidence of potential buyers, and in the late 1960s he decided to concentrate exclusively on the sale of business-type jets.

The business, as he tells it, was ripe for development, but research and market analysts didn't think so. "They couldn't believe there was a big market for million dollar planes," he says.

But the market grew as businessmen appreciated the great utility value of jets, and demand continued to outpace availability. Now, as business diversifies into smaller cities, poorly served by scheduled airlines, demand continues to exceed the supply.

It creates opportunities for brokers, but that hardly means the field is ripe for the picking of newcomers. Jet selling is far more technical than selling houses, and the credibility isn't easy to develop.

Smith enhanced his by growing with the industry and flying the planes he sells. "I began in the days of castor oil (used as engine oil), spirit and bamboo, and now we're in the space age," he says.

"What an era to be alive in if you like planes," he said. "My home is really the other end of a telephone or an airplane cockpit going damned near anywhere. And that's the way I like it."

Commissioners Meets Tonight

FARMVILLE — The Farmville Board of Commissioners will meet tonight at 7:30 in the District Courtroom.

Included on the agenda are two public hearings, one on the Community Development block grant application and one on the 1980-1981 annual budget; consideration of roll-out refuse collection, adjustments in industrial refuse hauling rates, and consideration of a revision of water and sewer tap fees.

Also for consideration tonight is an order to repair or demolish a building at 402 West Wilson St., and a discussion of Ryon Drive and Jones Street traffic.

between Norfolk, Va., and Memphis, Tenn., through Greenville, as proposed by the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce.

According to the DOT study, it was predicted that daily service between those cities could require a yearly subsidy of nearly $7 million, plus costs for equipment and track improvements of between $27 million and $43 million.

Although the long distance route was found to be unfeasible, the DOT study concluded that intermediate sections showed potential for significant use.

Accordingly, the Transportation Department developed short-distance alternatives, including Greenville to Charlotte, Raleigh to Charlotte, and Raleigh to Winston-Salem.

The study reports that, on the basis of estimated ridership, operating cost and capital cost, the Raleigh-to-Charlotte route is the most likely candidate for some experimental service. A single daily train in each direction would require $500,000 in public assistance annually. Two trains would require $700,000 assistance yearly.

$60.7 Million In Funds Spent

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt's office reported Monday that $60.7 million in federal revenue sharing funds were spent by the state during fiscal 1978-79.

The funds were used for school buses, textbooks, capital improvements and debt service.

DOT planning division officials said that while additional work is required to measure the benefits of such service, the study does suggest the rail passenger service could provide a cost effective travel alternative through the Piedmont Crescent.

The Department of Transportation has submitted the study to Amtrak, with a request for further analysis. If found to be feasible, the route could become a candidate for joint state/Amtrak funding.

Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw praised former Greenville Mayor Percy Cox and the Chamber of Commerce for their forward thinking in developing the proposal for the analysis of rail service as one method of helping to provide continued passenger service in a time of energy saving difficulties.

Bradshaw said, "This is another good example of a joint local, state and federal partnership effort as we join a number of other states attempting to find ways to expand the existing Amtrak service."

The preliminary feasibility study by DOT was based on the use of new, energy efficient, self-propelled equipment.

Consider Check On Background

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — University of North Carolina President William C. Friday says he is considering ways to check the background of applicants for major positions.

"Whatever's reasonable to determine the competence and character of the individual will be done," Friday said Monday.

His comments came in the wake of the recent resignation of Henry E. Johnson from the post of vice chancellor for fiscal affairs at N.C. A&T State University. Johnson resigned after less than one month on the job when published reports showed he had been sued frequently for failure to pay debts and had been convicted of writing a worthless check.

Friday said one method being considered for a background check is to require candidates to complete a questionnaire about their legal and financial past.

ARC Receives Accreditation

Officials of the Department of Human Resources announced today that the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center here is one of the first hospitals to receive accreditation from the Joint Commission on the Accreditation of Hospitals under its new standards for health care and life safety.

The center was established in 1969 and is one of three regional centers for alcoholic rehabilitation funded by the nickel a bottle alcohol tax.

The Walter B. Jones ARC operates a 28-day residential program for alcoholics and their families. More than 10,000 patients have received treatment here since it was established.

Donald H. Hayes, director of the center said, "Although we have had continuous accreditation since 1973, I am particularly pleased with this last review. It reflects well on our staff dedication and expertise."

cess for the handicapped.

Last year, at random, saw regulations dealing with lawn mowers, hair dryers, cable television and the financing of political nominating conventions. Our government was into natural gas, children's advertising, generic drugs, home appliances and advertising by physicians. Some compulsion was felt to regulate school lunches, food labels and the profit margins of gasoline retailers.

A moment ago I was quoting Randolph and Jefferson. Let me quote an authority closer to our own time, a gentleman who delivered this warning in a radio address on March 2, 1930: "If we do not halt this steady process of building commissions and regulatory bodies and special legislation like huge inverted pyramids over every one of the simple constitutional provisions, we shall soon be spending billions of dollars more."

That was Franklin D. Roosevelt, who came to office in 1933 and set his hand at once to building the colossal bureaucracy known as the New Deal. For the past 50 years, statesmen of high and low degree have voiced identical warnings. Heaven knows Jimmy Carter voiced them. These days we are hearing incessant pledges in Congress that "regulatory reform" is about to be achieved. Such promises ought to be embraced with the pessimism they deserve.

forces in Africa. That prospect adds substance to earlier speculation that Nicaraguan army troops have been recruited to fight in the civil war in Angola and other African hot spots alongside Cuban mercenaries.

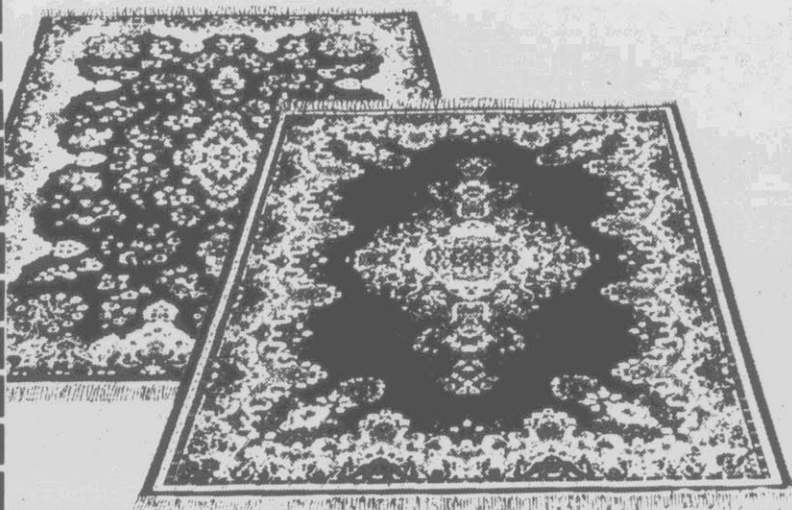

Gov. Tom Bradley?
Fully two years before the 1982 Democratic primary, the highly-popular Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles is favored to be nominated for governor of California and go on to be elected as the nation's first black governor.

Bradley is the winter book choice for the Democratic nomination over state Controller Ken Cory, state Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy and, in the unlikely event he seeks a third term, Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. That's why the old California pro, state Treasurer Jesse Unruh, tells friends he won't try for governor in 1982.

If nominated, Bradley could face a divided Republican Party. Lt. Gov. Mike Curb, the early Republican front-runner, is a controversial figure with enemies galore within the party's moderate wing.

BLUE MOLD IN PITT FIELDS....The quarter-sized spots on this tobacco leaf are blue mold, which was identified in fields in the county last week. The spots are yellow, and on the underside of them is a brownish, sometimes bluish cotton-like growth which is the mold itself. These spots usually turn a darker color, then brown, and often fall out, leaving round holes in the leaf. Farmers who did not apply Ridomil this year should begin application of fungicides containing maneb or streptomycin sulfate twice weekly, according to county agricultural extension agents. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken).

Sunbird Studies Local Service

The possibility of Sunbird Airlines, a commuter airlines service, coming to Greenville was the topic of a discussion at the Greenville noonday Rotary Club and at the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce

Airservice Task Force meetings Monday.

Ralph Quinlan, president of the airlines, said "We are strongly considering coming to Greenville. Our problem right now is getting enough equipment to expand our flights here."

Sunbird Airlines, which began operations in November 1979, has eight aircraft providing commuter flights to Charlotte. Their aircraft are all turbo-charged and have weather radar and radar altimeters. Quinlan said each of the planes have two pilots and that the captains are ATR qualified.

When asked how many flights Greenville would anticipate with Sunbird service Quinlan said he feels that Greenville should have at least four or five round trips per day during the weekdays.

Responding to a question about weekend flights.

Joyner Attends Conference

AYDEN — Stephen L. Joyner of Ayden, was one of 2,500 physician assistants and others interested in the PA profession to attend the eighth annual Physician Assistant Conference in New Orleans, May 25-29.

There are currently 12,000 physician assistants in the U.S. who are skilled health practitioners qualified by academic and clinical experience to give patient service under the supervision and direction of a licensed physician.

The conference was sponsored by the American Academy of Physician Assistants, the Association of Physician Assistant Programs, and the National Commission on Certification of Physician Assistants.

PHYSICS AWARD

Elio Irany Farias, son of Elio Pastor Farias and Alicia Lopez de Farias, has been selected as the Outstanding Physics Student at D.H. Conley High School. Ron Braxton, physics instructor, presented him with a certificate from the American Association of Physics Teachers at an awards ceremony held May 28 at D.H. Conley.

Quinlan said that they are not economical for the airlines. "Sunbird is primarily a business person's airlines. We need an average of four persons per flight and we just don't have the business on the weekends."

Quinlan did say, however, that if the demand was created the flights for the weekend would be extended.

He said the expansion of air service to Greenville will be considered whenever the airplane is delivered.

Nixon Scorns BP's, Trendies

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard Nixon may be living on New York's fashionable Upper East Side, but the former president has no plans to mix with the "beautiful people."

"They have failed the country and their rather simplistic phobias are not adequate to meet the challenges, and they will lose influence," Nixon said in an interview with New York magazine.

"Despite all they say, they respect power, and they don't want to lose, and if they feel the majority is not with them, they will panic and start getting well," he said.

Nixon said he admired such people as British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, New York Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, and conservative editor Norman Podhoretz.

"The people who oppose them, the trendies, don't have their heads screwed on tight," Nixon said, adding that Henry Kissinger, who served as his secretary of state, was attacked by "trendies" because Kissinger didn't "bug out" during the Vietnam war.

"He likes that crowd. It broke his heart when they turned on him."

Sheriff Suit Dismissed

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — A former deputy's claim that he should be appointed sheriff was dismissed Monday.

Superior Court Judge Michael M. Bruce dismissed part of a lawsuit filed by Tony M. Owens after the ex-deputy's attorneys said they had abandoned the claim. Owens' claim for $250,000 in damages from the county still is pending.

Owens, who became chief deputy in January 1976, said he served as sheriff after the March 13, 1979, resignation of former Sheriff W. Roin Pridgen.

Owens claimed the county commissioners wrongfully removed him and appointed Louis G. Taylor as sheriff instead.

The county argued against Owens' claim that he should be sheriff, contending the courts had no authority to bestow the job of sheriff.

Owens said in his suit that he was denied salary and benefits and suffered embarrassment as a result of the commissioners' action.

pay increases for the military still would not be enough to put members of the armed services on an equal footing with industry workers and solve recruiting problems, a congressional report says.

Claim Coverup Over Ingram

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Chris Sovel, budget officer for State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, says The Charlotte Observer is attempting to "cover-up" the real facts about Ingram's travel expenses.

In a letter to Observer publisher Rolfe Neill, Mrs. Sovel Monday accused the newspaper of giving Ingram's office "a run-around" in requests for documentation on the newspaper's report last week that Ingram had made unauthorized trips at state expense.

Observer Editor Rich Appel denied the allegation, saying the information used by the newspaper came from the budget office and was available there.

According to a release issued by Ingram's office Monday night, Mrs. Sovel wrote Neill asking him to supply the places, dates and amounts of Ingram's air travel cited in the newspaper's report. The article said the questionable trips cost $2,771.

The release stated Neill wrote that he was referring the matter to Appel, who wrote but "dodged her request for the accounting."

In a second letter to Neill, Mrs. Sovel said "The Charlotte Observer misrepresented travel authorization in an effort to cover up and to keep her from showing that the funds referred to in The Observer article were properly approved," the release said.

Mrs. Sovel asked Neill to "stop the coverup" and honor her earlier request for information.

"It looks as though the insurance commissioner's office is getting the run-around from Mr. Neill," Mrs. Sovel said in the release.

"The Observer is not involved in a cover-up," Appel said.

"The information Mrs. Sovel needs is public record and can be found in her own files in the budget office that she maintains, which is where we found it. I explained this to Mrs. Sovel in answer to her letter. The documents to which she refers — invoices for travel expenses dating from June 1979 — are in her possession, not ours," Appel said.

A graduation will be held Wednesday in Greenville for 25 male inmates who have completed a four week training program here called the Greenville Pre-release and After-care Center. The program, sponsored by the Adult Probation and Parole Division, has centers through North Carolina with Greenville as one of them.

The inmates eligible to participate are male volunteers who will be released soon, from the 26 counties served by the Greenville Adult Probation and Parole Division. "Men are then housed in Williamston and are bused to Greenville for the training sessions," said Training Coordinator Anne Maxwell. "The sessions are held every day from 8:4:30 p.m. for four weeks in the same building as the Employment Security Division behind the Beef Barn. Such topics studied are Self-Concept, Alcoholism, Drug Education, Family Counseling, and Employment."

Greenville citizens conduct practice job interviews with the inmates on videotape so the inmates can see themselves and how they react during an interview. Also, volunteers from the community come and speak to the inmates often.

"At the end of the four week period we have a graduation program for them where the assistant training coordinator and I present certificates to the inmates. We feel that a graduation is appropriate because they have human needs also."

A luncheon for the inmates is usually sponsored by area churches or organizations. The graduation this Wednesday is sponsored by the Bachelor Benedict Club here. The family members of the inmates, the volunteers,

Retirement Home Vote Held Today

FAYETTEVILLE — The Methodist Conference met at Methodist College in Fayetteville today to discuss the possibility of locating a Methodist Retirement Home in Greenville. A vote was taken this afternoon on the site and the results are not known at noon.

The home would initially provide lodging for 100 retired persons. It would eventually house as many as 400 persons. According to Hoover Taft, Jr., chairman of the committee of Methodists working to locate the home in Greenville, the local community would have to provide 25 acres of land and put up a minimum of $500,000 dollars.

Taft said that the retirement home is dissimilar to a contract for 75 units is $167,388.

Rent averages for May in the six housing developments operated by the Authority, according to Sallye Streeter, director of tenant affairs, included: NC 22-1 (Meadowbrook), $76.90; NC 22-1 (Kearney Park), $83.11; NC 22-3 (Moyewood), $81.19; NC 22-4 (Moyewood), $74; NC 22-5 (Hopkins Park), $57.22; and NC 22-6 (Newtown), $72.76, for an overall average of $75.62.

Mrs. Streeter reported that re-examinations for Hopkins Park and Newtown were completed, effective June 1, and applications for continued occupancy in Meadowbrook, Kearney Park, and Moyewood were taken during the month. She said the applications will be verified and become effective Oct. 1.

The board welcomed newly appointed member, Roscoe L. King, to his first meeting last night. King, senior vice president of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Pitt County, was named by the City Council to a five-year term on the Authority, succeeding Woody Crumpler, who completed the maximum of two five-year tenures.

A Sampson County native, King attended East Carolina University and the University of Georgia. He and his wife, Vertie, have two sons, Vick and David.

"I'm doing whatever my attorneys are advising me to do."

"I'm letting them handle the thing in the way they think is best. I'm not going to talk about it. You know I'm not going to say anything now. Not until the attorneys say so. I'm a little scared, I'm under a doctor's care, but I'm all right."

In a copyright story published in Monday afternoon's editions of the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel, columnist Dan Luzzader said Mrs. Coleman called him Friday afternoon and said,

There are presently two retirement homes of the type being considered for this area in North Carolina, located in Durham and Louisville.

ABE Students Are Honored

Pitt Community College's Adult Basic Education Recognition and Achievement Night, honoring over 100 ABE students, was held last Thursday night at the D.H. Conley High School auditorium.

The welcome was given by Mrs. Isabelle Cates. Speaker for the occasion was evangelist Shirley Daniels. Her message on learning challenged everyone to learn "what you can, when you can, however you can." Responses to this challenge were given by class representatives Willie Hawkins, Mary Moore, Zephia Gatlin, Helen Webb, Mammie Dupree, Ella Little, Eula Daniels and Minnie Floyd.

Dr. Charles Russell, assistant to the president at PCC, and Mrs. Mary Outerbridge, ABE co-ordinator, presented the achievement and attendance certificates to more than 100 ABE students from classes throughout Pitt County.

Special recognition was given to Shirley Gray and Cathy Williams for successfully completing their GED or high school equivalency tests. Mrs. Virginia Moore was also recognized for 100 percent attendance in her ABE class.

Special guests included Mrs. Retha Williams, Mrs. Virginia Carlton and Mrs. Josephine Reeves, members of the ABE Participatory Planning Committee. Music was provided by the Simpson Community Quartet.

A Costly Move

Pittsburgh Pirate third baseman Bill Madlock shown poking his glove in umpire Jerry Crawford's face, must begin an immediate 15-day suspension as his appeal was denied on Monday by the National League President Chub Feeney. The incident which took place in Pittsburgh's Three Rivers Stadium on May 1 cost Madlock time and $5,000. (AP Laserphoto)

Madlock Not Taking His Suspension Lying Down

PITTSBURGH (AP) — National League President Chub Feeney has ruled Bill Madlock's 15-day suspension must stand, but the Pittsburgh Pirates third baseman won't take that lying down.

And it remains to be seen how future developments in the month-old case sit with the major league umpires' union.

Through the players association, Madlock lodged another appeal with baseball Commissioner Bowdoin Kuhn hours after Feeney made his final decision Monday.

So Madlock remains in the lineup while Kuhn considers a matter that began May 1 with a jab of Madlock's glove at the face of umpire Jerry Crawford and escalated to arguments and affidavits from lawyers for the players' and the umpires' unions.

"I find the penalties originally leveled to be appropriate," Feeney said Monday in New York in upholding his penalty, including a $5,000 fine.

"The major league umpires association is gratified that the endless delays in the Madlock appeal have now come to an end," said umpire Paul Runge, vice president of the umpires' union, which had threatened to eject Madlock from every game to speed up Feeney's ruling.

There were other views. "Feeney upholds Feeney. That's no surprise," said Marvin Miller, executive director of the players' association. "This represents a mockery of due process."

"I'm disappointed the suspensions and fine were not reduced based on comparison of this incident with similar past incidents," said Pirate Vice President Pete Peterson.

Madlock, who helped the Pirates beat Philadelphia 9-3 Monday night, said he only wanted to talk baseball.

"Let's stick strictly to the game," he said.

"The suspension? That's the last thing I'm worried about. I'm thinking about pitchers like Steve Carlton."

It was during a game against Montreal that Madlock clashed with Crawford. At issue was Madlock's contention he had checked his swing on a called third strike with the bases loaded.

Feeney's suspension came May 5. Three days later, Feeney heard an appeal in which Madlock said he was only gesturing with his glove.

On Monday, Feeney said,

"Even if contact was not intended, the forceful shoving of his glove in the face of an umpire... was so reckless and unacceptable to merit a severe penalty."

Last Saturday, umpires' attorney Richie Phillips announced the umpires would eject Madlock from every game, beginning June 6, unless Feeney made a decision.

What if Kuhn delays ruling beyond June 6, this Friday, the night the Pirates will be playing the Mets in New York?

Phillips, contacted in San Diego, said more undue delay could result in "serious and grave action."

"I intend to contact the commissioner and apprise him of the situation and request a swift decision on his part," Phillips said. "It doesn't take Justices Frankfurter and Cardozo to decide this case."

Madlock's attorney, Steve Greenberg, said that if the matter remains unsettled through June 6, he would see to it that Madlock's every move on the field is photographed and recorded.

"If Bill Madlock is thrown out of that game for no good reason the individual who took the action, Richie Phillips and the whole organization will have a major problem," Greenberg told the Pittsburgh Press.

The umpiring crew that handled Monday's night game here was headed by John Kibler. He was asked before the game whether umpires might take action Friday night if Madlock remained active.

"That's up to our attorney (Phillips)," he said. "I can't answer that until I talk to him."

It was the first Monday Night television show of the baseball season — and it certainly turned out to be Monday's night.

Rick Monday, out of the Los Angeles Dodgers' starting lineup these days but not completely forgotten, came through with a ninth-inning pinch homer for a 3-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

"Sutcliffe asked me to hit one out," said Monday, referring to pitcher Rick Sutcliffe. "and I told him that if I got a certain pitch, it was either feast or famine. (Doug) Bair threw me a breaking ball that I'm sure he was not trying to get in."

Monday hit the second pitch from the Cincinnati reliever into the right field bleachers at Dodger Stadium, wrapping up a game that boosted the Dodgers' lead over the Reds to two games in the National League West.

It was a satisfying blow for the bench-sitting Monday.

"It's been frustrating," said the 34-year-old Monday, who was injured in spring training and lost the starting job in center to 23-year-old Rudy Law. "After sitting on the bench and it's June and you've started only two games, you must figure your role is different."

Monday, who failed in a pinch-hitting role on Sunday, came on to hit for rookie catcher Mike Scioscia.

"He hit my pitch," said Bair. "It was a low slider in the middle of the plate and breaking into his knees. He just went and got it. John (Bench) told me later it was the kind of pitch he hits."

In other NL games, the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Philadelphia Phillies 9-3; the San Diego Padres whipped the Houston Astros 3-0; the Atlanta Braves stopped the San Francisco Giants 4-2 and the Montreal Expos nipped the Chicago Cubs 8-7 in 13 innings.

The Reds had taken a 1-0 lead over the Dodgers on Dave Concepcion's RBI single in the third. But Los Angeles came back to move in front 2-1 on Dave Lopes' two-run homer in the seventh.

The Reds tied the game in the eighth against Sutcliffe, 1-2, when Concepcion walked, took second on Ken Griffey's groundout and scored on George Foster's single.

Pirates 9, Phillies 3

Vance Law, Dave Parker and pitcher Don Robinson drove in two runs each to lead Pittsburgh over Philadelphia.

The Phillies held a 3-2 lead through four innings. But the Pirates, capitalizing on two errors by Phillies third baseman Mike Schmidt, broke open the game with five runs in the fifth. Robinson improved his record to 2-1.

Padres 3, Astros 0

Pitt Legion Team Set To Open On Wednesday

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Pitt County's American Legion baseball team, the defending Division 1 East champs, will open its season Wednesday night at Harrington Field against Wilson. Game time is 8 p.m.

Pat Smith, who coaches North Pitt during the spring school season, will again be head coach, assisted by Doug Warren and Billy Williamson.

Due to the late finish by Rose High School, which participated in the first round of the state 4-A playoffs, the team has only gotten in only seven days of work so far, but Smith admits it gives the team an advantage over two other teams, Rocky Mount and Snow Hill. Both of the major part of those teams are still involved in the high school playoffs, which wind up this weekend.

"I'm fairly well pleased with the way things are going," Smith said. "We have a good turnout, and we'll probably carry 17 on the squad. We have six back from last year, and that gives us a good base to build on."

However, the team will be at a little disadvantage in not having played a game prior to the start of the regular season. "We were supposed to have played an exhibition game with Snow Hill, but since Greene Central is still in the playoffs, we had to scrub that. So we'll be going in without having played any except in practice. I don't like that, but there is nothing that we can do about it now."

Last year, the Pitt team, which is made up of players from Rose, North Pitt, D.H. Conley and Ayden-Grifton, won the regular season and playoff championships before losing to Smithfield in the area finals. This year, Smith looks for a tough race.

"I think the league will be real balanced this year," he said. "Snow Hill may be the one to beat, since they have a real solid team that will be made up mostly of their eight seniors from Greene Central. Rocky Mount will be strong too, but both are going to be a little slow coming together. By the time the playoffs come around, however, they should be strong.

"As far as we're concerned, we don't have many pitchers back, and our staff is young. We lost our first and third basemen and our left fielder from last year. We also have a lot of guys who are so very close, it's going to be hard to figure out who to play. I just hope we can keep everyone happy."

Smith said that the team lists five pitchers, but could end up with six. "Roger Williams (Rose) will start the opener, and Bob Hemingway (North Pitt) will be on the mound in the second game. But we haven't set our rotation yet, and all of them are going to see early action." Others to pitch in starting roles include Gordon Douglas (Rose) and Doug McRoy (Conley), with Jeff Porter (Rose) and Roy Lassiter (Conley) in reserve.

Smith feels he has a very good situation in the catching duties. Curtis Spencer (Conley) returns from last year's starting unit, and he will be joined by Emmett Walsh (Rose). "Either of them can get the job done, but we'll be starting Spencer at first, since he is the experienced player."

At first, there is only one player currently working, Jeff Wilson (Rose). However, Smith said that he expects to try out Walsh or Williams there, also.

Mike Campbell (Rose) returns to the second base position, and he is backed up by Sammy Hodges.

Mark Douglas (Rose) is at short, returning from last year, but the battle for third is still up in the air. Skip Hill (Rose) and Roy Lassiter (Conley) are fighting for the job, but Smith is still not sure who will get the nod.

Ronnie House (North Pitt) will probably start in left Wednesday, but Carl Arnold (Conley) could also see some action, as could Williams. Mark Shank (Rose) returns in center, as does Will Barrett (Rose) in right.

All home games, except those scheduled for Sunday, June 15 and June 22, will be played at Harrington Field. Those two will be played at North Pitt.

Goldsboro Tops Williamston, 7-3

ROBERSONVILLE — Goldsboro took advantage of eight Williamston errors to whip Post 163, 7-3, Monday night in an American Legion baseball game.

Williamston took its only lead of the game with three runs in the bottom of the second, after Goldsboro had taken the lead with a solo run in the top half of the inning.

With one gone, Eldred McQueen and Greg Harris hit back-to-back singles before Keith Clark reached on an error, which allowed McQueen to score. Randy Ellis then singled, driving home Harris and Clark and Williamston led, 3-1.

It was a lead short-lived. Goldsboro erupted for five runs in the top of the third and added another run in the fourth while holding Post 163 scoreless in winning going away.

Craig Brown led Goldsboro at the plate with three hits in five trips, including a double and triple. Jeff Brodgen was two-for-five for the winners. Williamston was led by Glenn Cargile who was two-for-five.

Williamston travels to Washington tonight. Goldsboro 015 100 000—7 7 3. Williamston 030 000 0—3 6 8. Tatted and Coates, Clark, Harrison, 4; Brablie, 9; and Harris.

Rain Hits American League Contests

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

It took a long time to come to no decision at Detroit, but at least Dan Meyer, Tom Paciorek and Kirk Gibson have something to show for it.

The Seattle Mariners and Detroit Tigers battled for 13 innings Monday night before their American League game was rained out.

In Chicago, the White Sox and Texas Rangers also had their game rained out, but they did it quickly — in only six innings.

Seattle and Detroit were tied

3-3 when the rains made play impossible. The Rangers-White Sox contest was tied 1-1.

Baseball rules state that individual records must stand when a game is stopped after passing the point at which it would have been considered official. The game itself, however, doesn't count and must be played over.

Meyer tied a club record with five hits in six trips to the plate, including a triple. Paciorek had three hits and two runs batted in while Gibson, a rookie, slammed his eighth home run of the season.

In Chicago, Texas center fielder Mickey Rivers went 2-for-3 and scored his team's lone run.

"The ump's deemed the field unplayable, and I agreed," Texas Manager Pat Corrales said. "It was a good game and I would like to have seen it completed. But nobody wants any of the players to get hurt."

White Sox Manager Tony La Russa agreed. "It would have been nice to finish, but the field was in bad shape," he said.

Left-hander Jon Matlack, the Ranger starter, was disappointed the game even started.

"The game should never have started," he said. "The field was unplayable from the beginning. If you ran slowly, you would sink to your knees. If you ran quickly you would only sink to your ankles."

Orlones 9, Brewers 8
Lenn Sakata led off the bottom of the 11th inning with a pinch-hit home run to boost Baltimore over Milwaukee and end the battle of the long ball. Sakata, acquired from Milwaukee over the winter, hit his first home run as an Oriole off loser Bob McClure, 1-2. Tippy Martinez, 1-2, got the victory.

Baltimore scored twice in the bottom of the eighth on Al Bumbry's triple to tie the game 8-8.

Rich Dauer had five singles in the game, giving him eight consecutive hits over his last two games and tying a Baltimore team record held by Brooks Robinson, Bob Johnson and Don Baylor.

Milwaukee built its early lead on a pair of two-run homers by Cecil Cooper and solo shots by Ben Oglivie and Gorman Thomas. Lee May homered for Baltimore.

Angels 6, Blue Jays 3
Rick Miller, Carney Lansford and Joe Rudi had first-inning doubles and Jason

Thompson homered in the fifth to give California its victory over Toronto. Dave Frost, 4-3, held the Blue Jays to five singles over six innings for his first victory in a month.

Toronto starter Luis Leal, 1-1, was in the game for eight minutes as the first five California batters got hits.

Indians 10, A's 5
Wayne Garland registered his first victory since last August and his teammates tormented five Oakland pitchers with 11 hits for Cleveland's victory. The Indians also got 10 walks in the game.

Galland, 1-0, allowed three runs as he scattered eight hits over the first six innings, striking out two and walking two.

Jerry Dybzinski, Dave Rosello, Ron Hassey, Rick Manning and Mike Hargrove each drove in two runs for the Indians.

Rosello's two-run homer was his second of the season and second in two days. Wayne Murphy and Mitchell Page homered for Oakland.

Yankees 5, Royals 3
A two-run homer by Eric Soderholm, his sixth consecutive hit over two games, highlighted New York's five-run first inning as the Yankees toppled Kansas City in a battle of American League division leaders.

Ron Guidry survived the Royals' three-run rally in the bottom of the 11th inning to raise his record to 6-1.

After a rain delay of one hour, 13 minutes, the Yankees batted around and chased Paul Splittorff, 3-3, who was making his first appearance in almost a month.

Soderholm's hitting streak ended in the second inning. Sox 6, Twins 2

Right fielder Jim Dwyer hit his fifth home run of the season, driving in two runs, and threw out a Twins baserunner to spark Boston's victory over Minnesota.

Dwyer's homer in the fourth snapped a 2-2 tie and gave the Red Sox the lead for good.

Bob Stanley, 4-5, went all the way for Boston, allowing six hits. Pete Redfern, 6-3, who suffered the loss, left the game in the fifth after being hit in the shoulder by a line drive off the bat of Tony Perez. The injury later was judged to be not serious.

JACK TRIES HARDER

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus is 40 and has made the discovery that you have to work harder to excel at anything at that age.

"After the Los Angeles Open this winter," Nicklaus said, "I flew home on a Sunday night and was out Monday morning practicing for five hours. After the Jackie Gleason ended, I went home and played nine more holes before having my dinner. I had never done anything like that before."

Don McGlohn (G) defeated Mitch Ferguson, 6-3, 6-0.

Randy Bailey (G) defeated Ray Spell, 6-2, 6-0.

Fred Matney (G) defeated Rox Oxendine, 6-0, 6-0.

John Eatman (G) defeated Jim Moore, 6-1, 6-0.

Jim Akers (G) defeated Charles Bryan, 6-0, 6-3.

Billy Helton (G) defeated Paul Tardif, 6-3, 6-1.

Eatman-Matney (G) defeated Ferguson-Spell, 6-3, 6-3.

Little League

Kiwanis 11, Optimists 1

The Kiwanis romped to an 11-1 victory over the Optimists in the North State Little League yesterday. The win boosted the Kiwanis record to 7-2, best in the league, while the Optimists fell to 1-8, worst in the league.

The Optimists led briefly, scoring a run—their only one—in the top of the first.

But the Kiwanis came back with four in the bottom of the inning to take the lead for good. Scott Davis walked as did William Smith. Van Alston also walked, loading the bases. Robert Erhmann doubled in two runs, and a wild pitch scored Alston. Robert Evans was hit by a pitch, and Erhmann scored when Evans was thrown out stealing.

The Kiwanis added two in the third, three in the fourth, all on an Alston homer, and two more in the fifth.

Erhmann led the Kiwanis hitting with two. No one had more than one for the Optimists, who got only three of Timothy Bland.

Big Value Drugs 8, Exchange 6

Big Value Drugs edged past the Exchange, 8-6, in Tar Heel Little League play yesterday. The win upped BVD to 5-4, while the Exchange is 4-5.

Big Value scored twice in the top of the first, while Exchange came back with one in its half of the inning. Exchange then charged ahead with four in the second.

Big Value rallied for six runs in the fourth, however, putting it away. Travis King reached on an error and Hal Priestly was hit by a pitch. James Lawler walked, loading the bases. Eric Jarman singled in two runs, and Sterling Edwards walked, reloading them. Frankie Atkinson singled in two more, and a passed ball let Edwards in. Atkinson also scored on a passed ball.

The other Exchange run came in the sixth.

Monty Atkinson had two hits to lead the Exchange. No one had more than one for Big Value.

Tempest Erupts Over Unplayed Match

PARIS (AP) — While Harold Solomon, Jimmy Connors and Vitas Gerulaitis tried to end a 25-year American men's drought at the French Open tennis championships, a tempest erupted over a match that didn't happen.

The tempest surrounded a match scheduled Monday afternoon between Argentina's Guillermo Vilas, seeded No. 4 here, and Spain's Manuel Orantes, who was runnerup here at Roland Garros Stadium in 1974.

Vilas, who won last Sunday's Italian Open and looked very sharp here in the opening week, came down with stomach cramps Monday and asked for an hour's delay to start the match. Tournament organizers granted the delay.

But Orantes said later he was not informed of the decision until just before he was set to walk onto the clay courts at the originally scheduled time. He asked that a rule granting delays of only 15 minutes be applied or else Vilas must default.

After a confusing stew that followed, the match was put off until today and the thousands of ticket-holders who had come to see the day's big match were told they could return free of charge today.

But for Orantes, the tournament officials had breached a point of honor, and as late as Monday night he refused to give a clear answer on whether he would play the match that will complete the quarterfinals lineup toward the $53,000 men's crown.

"It has nothing to do with Vilas," Orantes told a press conference. "The point is the rules have to apply equally to everyone."

Christian Duxin, one of the French organizers, acknowledged there had been a "misunderstanding" and that neither Vilas nor Orantes were wrong. But there was no immediate reconciliation in sight.

Orantes claimed the French organizers were "trying to protect" Vilas, who could meet Sweden's Bjorn Borg in the semifinals, recreating their long duel which has seen Borg beat Vilas in two previous finals here. Orantes also said several other players were supporting his position.

Not a word was heard from Vilas. His coach, Ion Tiriac of Romania, handled all the negotiations with French officials and avoided discussing the matter with reporters.

Some of the veteran players praised Orantes's long controversy-free career and predicted he'd play. Most agreed the whole business had to some extent soured the atmosphere here and had raised, again, many long-argued questions about the relationship between the players and the various tour organizers.

In matches played Monday, Borg continued his consistent often brilliant, usually error-free march to his fifth French crown, a feat which would be unprecedented in the modern history of this tournament, the first of the four legs of the Grand Slam of tennis.

Borg quickly dispatched Hungary's Balazs Taroczy 6-2, 6-2, 6-0.

Sixth seed Harold Solomon also advanced to the quarterfinals, with an easy 6-0, 6-1, 6-3 dumping of fellow American Brian Gottfried. Solomon, who lost in the finals here in 1976 to Italy's Adriano Panatta, looked strong and was optimistic about his chances.

"I'm playing a lot better here than when I reached the finals in 1976," Solomon said. "I'm a much more complete player now and I play more aggressively."

Italy's Corrado Barazzutti, always tough on the slow clay here, also advanced to the quarterfinals with a 6-4, 6-2, 7-6 victory over Peter McNamara of Australia.

Barazzutti will meet Borg in the quarterfinals, probably on Wednesday. The Italian has never beaten Borg.

Solomon will meet the winner of the Vilas-Orantes match.

Jimmy Connors meets Chile's Hans Gildemeister and Vitas Gerulaitis meets Poland's Wojtek Fibak in the other quarterfinals matches.

The wind and the rain settled down here Monday, but not the upsets. No. 2 seed Billie Jean King had her hopes of a title match with Chris Evert Lloyd upended by Australia's Dianne Fronholtz 6-1, 6-4.

Romania's high-flying Virginia Ruzici will meet Fromholtz in the semifinals. In pending women's quarterfinal matches, Lloyd will continue her bid for the $42,500 French crown against Kathy Jordan. In the other match, Argentina's Ivana Madruga meets Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia.

O'Brien Worried About Over-Exposure On Tube

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — Larry O'Brien, commissioner of the National Basketball Association, calls "the proliferation of our sport on television one of the major problems we face as we head into the 1980s."

O'Brien and the NBA's Television Committee met Monday with representatives of CBS, which is midway through a four-year, $74 million contract to televise the Sunday Game of the Week.

Ratings for the network game, which had dropped 20 and 26 percent the previous two seasons, were up 13 percent this year. The NBA also began showing selected games on a national cable network, and these combined with local telecasts and the games beamed by satellite to cable systems around the country by so-called "super-stations" like Ted Turner's WTBS in Atlanta, combined to give the NBA possibly its widest exposure ever.

But O'Brien is wary that this might be overexposure, and that was a prime topic of discussion on the opening day of the summer Board of Governors meeting at this resort near San Diego.

The Board itself, comprised of one owner or representative from each team, held its first session this afternoon. Among the items on the agenda were the confirmation vote on Ted Stepien, the new owner of the Cleveland Cavaliers, and approval of the 10 rules changes and other proposals recommended by the league's Competitions and Rules Committee at its meeting in Los Angeles last week.

The CBS Game of the Week achieved an average rating of 6.3 for 36 telecasts this season.

Monday's...

Eric Rasmussen combined for a four-hitter as San Diego defeated Houston.

Wise, 3-3, shut out Houston for the first five innings but left in the sixth with a pulled muscle in his left rib cage. Rasmussen finished up to earn his first save of the year.

"I've been very unlucky this year," said Wise, who has been on the starting end of three Padre shutouts this year. "I didn't want to come out but there was no doubt in my mind that I had to."

Braves 4, Giants 2

Atlanta edged San Francisco behind Phil Niekro, who scattered 11 hits to beat the Giants for the 23rd time in his career.

The Braves broke through with two runs in the fifth inning on Luis Gomez' RBI single and Glenn Hubbard's sacrifice fly. They scored their winning runs in the seventh on RBI hits by Dale Murphy and Chris Chambliss.

Expos 8, Cubs 7

Lynn McGlothen walked pinch-hitter Bob Pate with the bases loaded to force in the winning run in the bottom of the 13th inning, giving Montreal its victory over Chicago.

Rodney Scott led off the inning with a single and Andre Dawson was hit by a pitch. Gary Carter then moved the runners up with a sacrifice before Warren Cromartie drew an intentional walk to fill the bases.

Pate, batting for winning pitcher Woodie Fryman, 1-1, then worked McGlothen, 2-1, to a full count before checking his swing on ball four. Pate was just called up Friday from Denver to replace the injured Ellis Valentine.

up 13 percent from last year's 5.6 rating. For the playoffs the average went from 7.2 to 8.0, up 11 percent. Several games in the championship series did particularly well, with the May 11 Sunday afternoon telecast drawing a 10.0 rating, compared to a 6.4 for the competing Wide World of Sports on ABC.

"We were very gratified that our CBS ratings turned around this season," said O'Brien. "We were pleased with their presentation. We felt it was significantly better than last season, with better introductions and more interesting halftime shows. And the addition of Bill Russell as a commentator was also a plus."

Yet O'Brien remains cautious regarding the overall TV picture.

"I can sit in my apartment and watch 250 NBA games a year without ever leaving my living room," he said. "That may be nice for the fan, but I'm not so sure it's a good thing for our league. When you get that many games, it's really hard to identify any one as a Game of the Week, and of course that is of concern to CBS, which pays us a considerable sum and expects something in return."

The dispute centers on games that are relayed by satellite from local stations to cable systems around the country. The cable companies, as well as the originating stations, feel any such controls would infringe upon their rights, while O'Brien contends the NBA should be able to control the telecasting of its own product.

It's a problem that will not be solved at the meetings here, and may eventually require congressional action.

Easy Winner

Sweden's Bjorn Borg returns a shot during his match with Hungary's Balazs Taroczy Monday at the Roland Garros Stadium. The Swedish tennis star easily qualified for the quarterfinals of the French Open by defeating his opponent, 6-2, 6-2, 6-0. (AP Laserphoto)

Race Hearing Gets Underway

BALTIMORE (AP) — The owners of Genuine Risk continue their efforts today to revive the filly's chances of becoming a belated candidate for racing's Triple Crown.

After becoming the first of her sex in 65 years to win the Kentucky Derby, Genuine Risk was beaten in the Preakness Stakes on May 17 when a foul claim against winner Codex was disallowed by Maryland stewards at Pimlico Race Course.

Diana and Bertram Firestone, the owners of Genuine Risk, appealed the decision and the three stewards were the first witnesses as a hearing on the matter opened Monday before the Thoroughbred Board of the Maryland Racing Commission.

Tapes belonging to ABC, which televised the Preakness nationally, were expected to be offered into evidence today when attorney Henry Lord begins presenting the case for Genuine Risk.

A precedent for viewing network films was established in 1973, when CBS tried to prove that Secretariat had broken the Preakness record. The commissioners did not change the running time recorded by the automatic timer, however.

Board Chairman Robert W. Banning promised to expedite the current hearing in an effort to reach a decision prior to Saturday's running of the Belmont Stakes, the final race in the Triple Crown series.

In his opening statement

Monday, Lord contended Genuine Risk had been impeded, jostled and either struck or intimidated by the whip of Angel Cordero Jr. aboard Codex as the filly made her move near the quarter pole of the 13-16-mile classic.

Lord argued that the action against Genuine Risk and jockey Jacinto Vasquez was premeditated and added: "What we have here is a 104-year-old tradition that has been sullied by jockey Cordero."

The attorney suggested that should the Firestone's position prevail, the board should hold further hearings to consider "possible strong sanctions" against Cordero.

Lord contended carrying Genuine Risk wide was "conscious behavior on the part of the jockey," which caused the filly to break stride and "change her lead when she didn't want to."

The attorney also charged that the filly was intimidated by Cordero's waving whip at close quarters, whether or not she was struck.

Stewards J. Fred Colwill, Clinton Pitts Jr. and Edward Litzenger, who rejected the foul claim by Vasquez, reiterated belief in their decision Monday.

"The more I see these films, the more certain I am that the right decision was made," Pitts said at one point, a feeling supported in almost the same words by his two colleagues during a somewhat tedious session.

When we mention percentages, most players conjure up visions of intricate mathematical problems. Actually, there is no reason at all why the subject should be shrouded in mystery. Speaking plainly, percentages mean that two chances are better than one, three chances better than two, etc.

To determine which of two choices offers the better chance, you don't need a calculator. We will offer you a few fundamental principles to guide you. We ask you to accept these as gospel — they have been worked out over the years by excellent mathematicians.

We are not happy with South's decision to bid three no trump. With a flat hand and a minimum response, he should have passed his partner's non-forcing jump. He compounded his error by underplaying the hand.

West led the king of spades and the defenders quickly took their four space tricks. West then exited with a heart to dummy's king. Declarer could count nine tricks if he could get to his hand to cash the ace of hearts. The only chance was that diamonds would break evenly. Declarer cashed the ace and king, but when East showed out on the second diamond, the contract could not be made.

Here's our first principle: When you are missing an even number of cards in a suit, the odds are that they will not break evenly. Thus, with four cards missing, it is more likely that they will break 3-1 than 2-2.

Therefore, the line that South adopted had less than an even chance of the diamonds providing an entry to the closed hand. The better play was to overtake the king of hearts with the ace and try the club finesse. A finesse is exactly a 50-50 proposition. It is true that this line of play risks going down two tricks instead of one, but 50 points is a small price to pay for the increased chance to make the contract.

Sissy Spacek Day At Park

QUITMAN, Texas (AP) — Turtle racers, egg tossers, tricycle riders and members of the high school class of '68 mobbed a park as this town of 2,000 celebrated Sissy Spacek Day.

Mary Elizabeth Spacek, who recently portrayed country singer Loretta Lynn in "Coal Miner's Daughter," responded with squeals of delight as she was embraced by old classmates and peppered them with questions: "What are you doing now. Who did you marry? Whatever did you do to your hair?"

"It's just wonderful to be home," Miss Spacek said as she signed autographs and handed out prizes to games winners during the weekend festivities. As darkness fell and the people of Quitman began to trickle off to home, Sissy, parents and friends finally settled down to a picnic supper.

FCC Deregulation Of Radio Strongly Opposed

By JOAN HANAUER
UPI Television Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — The FCC proposes to deregulate commercial radio and an imposing group of organizations — including a number of religious groups — strongly opposes any such action.

According to the Rev. Everett C. Parker, head of the Office of Communication of the United Church of Christ and a leader in the fight against deregulation, the FCC has received more than 40,000 comments on the subject, the majority from public groups opposing deregulation as outlined by the FCC.

Of the comments reaching the FCC by the March 31 deadline for comment, the industry's Broadcasting magazine estimates about 8,000 could be considered formal filings. These include filings on both sides of the issue, from broadcast groups, government agencies as well as consumer groups and just plain listeners.

The FCC is scheduled to reply to the comments on June 25.

What the FCC proposes is this:

— Eliminate ascertainment, the annual community-broadcaster exchange by which the broadcaster is supposed to ascertain the needs of his community.

— Eliminate requiring each station to keep detailed logs of its programming.

— Eliminate limits on amounts of commercial time.

— Eliminate requiring radio stations to carry non-entertainment programs — news and public affairs programs, public service announcements and other community service programming.

Proponents of deregulation agree regulation was necessary in the early days of radio when frequencies were scarce. They argue these rules no longer are needed because pressures of the diverse radio marketplace plus possible challenges to license renewals will keep stations alert to public interest.

With the mood of the country favoring deregulation in general, why are groups within the Catholic Church, the Baptists, the American Lutheran Church, the Heart Fund and the National Health Assn., among many others, so stirred up about the proposal to deregulate radio?

One reason, Parker said during an interview, is because they fear that deregulation will mark the end of the public service announcement, or PSA, on which non-profit groups rely.

Parker has a laundry list of reasons for opposing deregulation and he says, "Only Congress can rewrite the Communications law." He accuses FCC chairman Charles Ferris of overreaching his authority by trying to do within the Commission what proponents of deregulation failed to get past the nation's lawmakers. Parker has a dreary prediction of what deregulation would bring.

"The first thing that would happen — and the most depressing as far as I am concerned — is that deregulation would hasten the total automation of radio.

"There would be no requirement to carry any live programming. Stations could be completed automated, programmed by large outside producers. They could insert news and weather tapes if they wanted to — and they probably would because they can sell news.

"But the rest would come from bought tapes and a lot of places would have hardly any live people in the station."

Parker warns this could impair one of the most important areas of public service — radio's ability to

VEC-DAILY REFLECTOR NEWS PROGRAM

Building young minds for the world of tomorrow.

...but when the bells ring again in the fall, the VEC-Daily Reflector Newspaper in Education Program will be there bringing up-to-the-minute news filmstrips to students in 17 local schools.

After a year of showing students what an exciting learning tool their daily newspaper can be, maybe you would like to hear what a couple of their teachers have to say:

"The VEC News Program is a part of the curriculum that my students look forward to each week. It has really done much to create a greater interest in state, national and international news. This has served as a stimulant for creative thinking and self-expression for students who often stay in the background."

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JUNE 4, 1980

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is not a good day or evening to make any drastic or dramatic changes. Maintain as much cool and calmness as you possibly can. Wait until another day to gain your aims.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Give business matters only as much attention as they need and concentrate on the social side of life. Be wise.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Avoid an outsider who could do harm in some way. Put more effort toward improving your position in life.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You need new ideas if you want to advance in career matters at this time. Be sure not to argue with an associate.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't run off on fun tangents and neglect fine benefits that could otherwise come to you. Use more common sense.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't argue at home now or serious trouble could ensue. A public affair can be of great benefit to you, so delve into it now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be more careful about facts and figures and avoid a costly mistake. Good day for expansion in your professional career.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take time from regular duties and make plans that could give you added income in the future. Show more devotion to mate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have to be more careful in financial matters now to gain your aims. Use good judgment in all your dealings.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Take positive steps toward solving a problem instead of worrying and doing nothing about it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Plan how to increase present security and start to save more money for a possible rainy day. Avoid a foe.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Keep busy at your work and stay out of trouble. Consult a financial adviser for the advice you need.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Try to understand another person's point of view where a controversy is concerned. Sidestep a troublemaker.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have many talents which should be put to use early in life so that they can develop with the years. Teach to be honest and above board for best results throughout lifetime. Don't neglect ethical training.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Bloomobile Visit Scheduled

The Bloodmobile will have a visit on Wednesday, June 4 at Union Carbide Corp., according to Ott Alford, Pitt Blood chairman.

Alford said the plant visit is open to the general public and he encouraged area citizens to participate in the Union Carbide drive.

The program chairman noted that the goal for Wednesday's visit, which is the last in the area for the current fiscal year, is 150 pints of whole blood.
