Child Severely Burned In Fire

CHILD BURNED IN MORNING FIRE — A three-year-old child received burns this morning in a fire at his home at 1607B Hopkins Drive. Linda Smith, right, and brother of the burned youngster, Robert Nelson, 5, center, describe to Greenville fireman Jimmy Smith the incidents surrounding the fire. According to Fire Chief Jenness Allen, Leon Nelson was burned and transported to Pitt Memorial Hospital where his condition was listed as critical. Chief Allen said Ms. Smith told him, she was asleep in another bedroom with her daughter, Stacey, 1, when Robert came into her room and said Leon was playing with matches. The investigator said when Ms. Smith went to investigate, she found the mattress on fire. Allen said Ms. Smith then tried to remove the mattress from the bed, and dragged it toward a doorway, where it received more oxygen and flared up. He said apparently the youngster fled toward the end of the bed to escape the heat and was trapped. A jogger, Albert Jones, was running and heard screams for help from Ms. Smith. Jones said he went to the window and tried to reach in and get the boy but could not because of the intense heat. Investigation into the fire is continuing. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Death Sentence For Carter's Gas 'Fee'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress today formally delivered to President Carter its death sentence for his dime-a-gallon gasoline fee and prepared for an expected easy override of his promised veto.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, abandoning hopes that Carter's veto could be sustained in the face of overwhelming votes Wednesday in both the House and the Senate, said an override effort could be completed by late today.

The House sent the repeal legislation to Carter today by a simple voice vote as House leaders capitulated and decided to accept without further delay the Senate's approach of attaching it to a bill extending the national debt ceiling.

Both Carter and the Democratic leadership in Congress were roundly trounced Wednesday when the House voted 376-30 and the Senate 73-16 to repeal the fee.

Both votes were well over the two-thirds margin that must be delivered in both chambers to override a veto.

Today, O'Neill, D-Mass., told reporters that Carter would still veto the bill in the face of a near-certain override "to show to our European allies that the president is doing everything he can with regard to the oil situation."

O'Neill predicted that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would respond to the killing of the oil fee by increasing oil prices by up to 20 percent "in 60 to 90 days."

In agreeing to take the Senate version of the bill, the House resolved the only remaining difference between the chambers on the issues.

Wednesday's votes dealt Carter one of the severest congressional energy defeats of his presidency and drew bitter criticism today from Charles Schultze, chairman of his Council of Economic Advisers.

"It was disturbing, it was serious, it was inexcusable," Schultze said on NBC's "Today" show.

If Carter follows through on his veto threat, he could become the first Democratic president to have a veto overridden since Congress in 1952 forced an immigration bill into law over Harry S. Truman's protest.

Carter has cast 21 vetoes, including two this year, all of which have been sustained.

While the House passed a simple bill to knock down the fee outright, the Senate attached it to a 30-day extension of the federal debt limit.

Thus the House was having to decide today whether to go along with the Senate version or to request a conference with the Senate to iron out the differences.

Regardless of its form, the measure to kill the fee is expected to reach the president before week's end.

Carter told reporters Wednesday he plans to veto the bill in whatever form it reaches him and even if no more than one member of Congress is willing to support him. Carter said imposition of the fee was "not a popular decision ... but in my judgment it is right for our country."

Failure to impose it, the president said, will "send a clear signal to oil-producing nations and oil-consuming nations that we do not mean business, that we will not take a firm stand to conserve oil and we will pay much higher prices for oil in the future."

False Attack Alert

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. military officials increased the alert of strategic nuclear bombers and missiles briefly early Tuesday when a computer problem caused a false alarm indicating a multiple Soviet missile attack, the Pentagon said today.

A quick check of a variety of sensors in the complex warning system, including satellites, confirmed within three minutes that no Soviet missiles had been launched and the alert was relaxed, officials said.

No bombers were launched, although engines were started, the Pentagon said. There was increased communication with missile crews but no weapons were prepared for launch.

Neither President Carter nor Defense Secretary Harold Brown was notified, the Pentagon said, but the White House Situation Room, which deals with international crises, "was aware of the possible threat while it was being evaluated."

It was the second false alert of this type since last November. Both resulted from problems at the North American Air Defense Command headquarters at Colorado Springs, Colo.

However, officials said the "technical problem in a computer" early Tuesday apparently did not occur under the same conditions as the Nov. 9 false alarm. In that incident, a test tape simulating an attack was fed into the NORAD computer and because of an apparent mechanical malfunction was transmitted to other military commands and federal agencies.

The Pentagon said the latest false alarm is being investigated.

The false alarm early Tuesday indicated Soviet launching of both intercontinental ballistic missiles and submarine-launched missiles against the United States, officials said.

Senior officers in the Pentagon's Military Command Center, the Strategic Air Command Headquarters in Omaha, Neb. NORAD conferred swiftly.

"As a precaution, and in accordance with standard procedures, certain Strategic Air Command aircraft and command control aircraft were brought to a higher state of readiness," the Pentagon said in a statement.

The only plane to take off was an unarmed command and control aircraft from Hawaii, officials said.

"There was no change in overall U.S. defense posture and, after an evaluation, all systems were returned to normal," the Pentagon said.

"The computer technical problems are now being assessed to determine corrective action."

A portion of the nation's 510 B-52 and FB-111 strategic bombers are always kept on ground alert.

Not Ready For A EMT-IV Program

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Emergency Medical Technician-Intravenous (EMT-IV) Audit and Review Committee, meeting here Wednesday, considered the status of Greenville's EMT-IV program involvement, according to the committee chairman.

Dr. Gene Hamilton said this morning that the committee determined at the meeting that "the Greenville EMT-IV program is not yet ready to start, but the Winterville program should be starting quite soon."

Hamilton pointed out that the committee, which monitors and directs the service provided by the IV program, determined that the city's Fire-Rescue Department has "inadequate personnel to fully staff" its two rescue vehicles in meeting program requirements.

The committee spokesman noted that the question regarding the Greenville situation is related to the "procurement of sufficient manpower to adequately staff the trucks." Hamilton said that local participation has not been terminated and he indicated that as soon as personnel needs are met to the satisfaction of the committee, the program should be ready to proceed here.

"The key points of the meeting are that Greenville is expecting to initiate the IV program as soon as they have adequate personnel and that Winterville should be starting within the month," the Greenville surgeon observed.

According to Hamilton, the Winterville rescue unit received program certification and "problems obstructing immediate start up" are minimal as far as Winterville is concerned.

The spokesman noted that Greenville Fire-Rescue Chief Jenness Allen spoke to the committee yesterday.

The advanced life support training program is offered through the School of Medicine at East Carolina University, with the support of the administration and medical staff at Pitt Memorial Hospital. Greenville was designated as a pilot participant in the program, which offers rescue personnel in a 29-county area the opportunity to receive EMT-IV training through the medical school here.

Some 11 local members of the Fire-Rescue Department received the EMT-IV training last year and were

Assembly Leaders Look For Early Adjourning

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The 1980 General Assembly convenes at noon today, with legislative leaders already predicting a rapid push toward adjournment.

"I'm predicting two days and three weeks (until adjournment)," said Rep. Liston Ramsey, D-Marshall, who is virtually certain of being chosen House speaker in 1981.

"The budget they could do in a week, but they've got all this other stuff they want in. There's more than 100 bills already in that they can consider," he added.

Senate leaders said they hoped for an even quicker conclusion.

LI. Gov. Jimmy Green predicted a June 20 adjournment — which would leave only 12 working days for the session.

Green said there should be little difficulty in speeding passage of the proposed supplemental budget — a plan for spending the state's $358-million budget surplus, mainly on pay raises for teachers and state workers.

"Any" delays, legislators said, could come in the other measures on the Legislature's agenda.

Those measures include a number of proposals by Gov. Jim Hunt, such as one to strengthen penalties for those convicted of dealing in drugs.

Others sought by some legislators include a proposed $600-million school bond issue, backed by the state Board of Education, and a banking industry proposal to raise the legal limit on interest rates on many types of loans, including credit card charges.

Hunt, in recent days, has leaned away from support for the bond issue in this session, preferring to delay it until the 1981 Legislature can consider it — postponing the thorny question of how to divide the money among the 100 counties and eliminating the required statewide vote as an issue for political opponents in the fall.

But Green, in an interview with The Associated Press, said he would suggest a compromise — considering the bond issue in this session but scheduling a statewide referendum early next year, possibly February.

Green said some school districts need the money or will face tax increases to improve school facilities.

"I'm just saying, (hold the referendum) early in 1981, because the needs are out there," Green said. "I wouldn't wait a year."

Also at issue as the session convened were the bills that would be allowed for consideration. Under the Legislature's rules, only certain bills — mainly those concerning the budget and those that passed one chamber but were left in the other last year, are still alive.

But a resolution listing new bills legislative leaders want introduced was being readied as the session prepared to open. It needs a two-thirds vote in each chamber to allow the listed bills to be introduced, and there was disagreement among legislative leaders about whether to include two interest-rate bills.

If the banking bills are excluded, however, legislators sympathetic to the banking industry can still get the measures before the Legislature by amending an unrelated bill still alive in the Senate Banking Committee.

Tobacco Board Elects Officers

The Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade, at its annual meeting this week, elected W. C. Clark Jr. as president for the coming year.

J. B. Belcher was elected vice president and the board re-elected J. N. Bryan as secretary-treasurer. Bryan serves as supervisor for the local Board of Trade.

A. A. Forbes Jr., retiring president, was commended by the board for his services as president since 1973.

Board members discussed plans for the operation of the 1980 tobacco season in Greenville.

Clark served as an apprentice auctioneer in Moultrie, Ga., Kinston, and Johnson City, Tenn. during the 1938 tobacco season. Beginning in 1939, he became a full time commissioned auctioneer and for the past 40 years has been engaged in tobacco auction activities in Georgia, North Carolina, Tennessee, and Kentucky. Some 35 of these years have been spent on the Greenville Tobacco Market.

In 1969, Clark became auctioneer-partner in the operation of the Raynor-Forbes and Clark Tobacco Warehouse here. He also is at present one of the commissioned auctioneers serving the Lexington, Ky. Burley Tobacco Market.

The new president is married to the former Marjorie Weathers of Wendell and they have five children.

In accepting the new position, Clark commented, "It is a challenge to me, knowing the caliber of fine leadership this office has had over the years. I appreciate the vote of confidence placed in me by fellow members of the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade."

EYES ON THE FUTURE

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House committee has approved a resolution opposing future attempts to tax Social Security benefits, a proposal that's not even pending before Congress.

W. C. CLARK JR.

Clark, a Greenville native, graduated from Greenville High School and attended Wake Forest University and East Carolina University. He has been in the tobacco auction business all of his adult life and was a member of the first graduating class of Otis R. Rucker School of Auctioneering.

Testimony Resumes In Ross Drug Trial Today

Testimony in the drug trial of suspended Greenville police sergeant Douglas H. Ross continued in Pitt County Superior Court today.

Selection of a jury was conducted Tuesday. Yesterday, law enforcement officers described in detail the surveillance and searches of Ross' property, which led to his arrest on charges of possession of marijuana and keeping a structure for the storage of a controlled substance.

Ross, 47, was charged three days after a July 23 raid on a mobile home he owned. Agents of the State Bureau of Investigation, Greenville police, and federal Drug Enforcement Administration agents, who conducted the raid, found 169 bales of marijuana in the house trailer and arrested eight people at the scene, including Ross' sister-in-law.

The mobile home was located 100 feet behind Ross' home on U.S. 264, just West of the Greenville City Limits.

Two earlier attempts this year to dispose of the case ended in mistrials: the first because of delays caused by a heavy snowfall in March, and the second in April because testimony about actions by Ross' wife during a search of their home tended to violate leagle restrictions which prohibit a wife from testifying against her husband.

Testimony yesterday and this morning indicated that officers had been observing the Ross property for at least three days prior to the raid, and had seen a number of out-of-state men pass Ross' home while going to and from the trailer.

Judge James R. Strickland of Jacksonville, is presiding over the trial of the 21-year veteran policeman.

Honesty Is Best If You're Old Enough To Take It

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Some years ago, I was raped and became pregnant. I gave birth to a baby boy, but under the circumstances I couldn't bring myself to raise him. My best friend — I'll call her Minnie — was happily married but wasn't able to bear children, so she and her husband adopted my son. That decision worked out well for all of us. I visited them often and watched the boy grow up in a fine environment.

Here's my problem: In Minnie's eyes, the boy is now old enough to understand the circumstances of his birth, adoption, etc., and they want to tell him the entire story. They think he has the right to know all the facts of his birth, including the fact that I am his mother and his father was a rapist!

I have always felt that honesty is the best policy, but in this instance, I don't think the boy needs to know all the facts. Because of this disagreement, I am no longer speaking to Minnie and her husband.

I would like your opinion.

WAITING IN SARATOGA

DEAR WAITING: Honesty is always the best policy. You don't say how old the boy is, but he should be told only as much as he can comprehend. Very young children can understand "adoption," but the other details of his birth should not be disclosed until he is sufficiently mature to handle them. (P.S. I question the wisdom of telling a child his father was a rapist.)

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a physician. We recently attended a medical convention where there were about 3,000 physicians present.

Maybe it's because lately we have all become so weight-conscious, but I was really shocked by the number of fat physicians I saw there. More than half the doctors were visibly overweight (my formerly svelte husband included).

Have you any statistics dealing with physicians being overweight?

JOHN'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: In a survey of 900 family physicians, sponsored by the American Academy of Family Physicians, 62 percent of the M.D.s who responded said they wanted to lose weight. More than one-third of that group wanted to lose more than 10 pounds, but 89 percent said they had not followed a specific weight-loss diet in the last six months.

(P.S. Two-thirds recognized the necessity of controlling their sugar and cholesterol intake, but only a little more than 50 percent said they themselves followed that advice.)

Physician, heal thyself!

DEAR ABBY: Melvin graduated from high school at the top of his class last June. He was offered a scholarship to a very fine university, but he turned it down to go to a local college. Everybody thought he was crazy. He admitted to me he didn't want to go away to college because he gets "homesick."

We sent Melvin to summer camp when he was 11, and he came back after one week so thin and pale he didn't look like the same boy. He said he got so homesick he couldn't even sleep or eat.

Melvin is not an only child. But he is my youngest and has always stayed very close to me.

He doesn't have many friends and has never asked a girl for a date on his own, but he has dated girls when someone fixes him up. He reads a lot and doesn't mind being by himself all the time.

I want Melvin to go away to college this fall, but every time I bring it up he begs me not to talk about it. I think it would be good for him to go away, but how can a mother push her son out of the house when he begs to stay?

MELVIN'S MOM

DEAR MOM: It's not uncommon for an 11-year-old to be homesick, but when he reaches college age he should have matured sufficiently to overcome it. If Melvin has not been evaluated by an expert, he should be. Don't push him out of the house, but do insist he have a frank talk with a doctor.

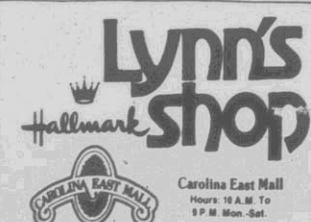

CONFIDENTIAL to those who have sent for Abby's booklets: Please, please be patient. I am literally deluged with orders and am getting them out as quickly as possible.

'Nobody Wants' Abandoned Kids

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The three children, ages 5, 7 and 9, appeared at the Mecklenburg Department of Social Services building Monday with only the clothes on their back and a note from their mother.

It said that someone else would have to care for the children and, although she hated to do it, she knew of nothing else she could do.

Social Worker Jim Teal talked about the case on the condition the family's names not be used.

Teal said the mother went to the DSS office Monday and talked with a social worker "expressing real problems financially and so forth. She said she had a difficult time working at night and sleeping in the daytime and looking after the children, living in motels and a camper which she's purchasing."

A social worker gave the mother a bag of groceries and said he would be in touch about help.

"Then about 3 or 4 minutes to 5 someone came up and said, 'There are three children in the lobby with a note,'" Teal said.

The 9-year-old boy told social workers the mother had taken the groceries and the children outside. Then, the boy said, his mother gave the children a note and told them to go back inside.

The children were placed in an emergency foster home Monday night. Social workers are looking for the mother.

Through Juvenile Court, the department could ask the mother to surrender the children for adoption. If she won't, or if she cannot be found, the court could terminate her rights as parent to the children, which could result in their adoption.

Teal said the family has been in Charlotte for several years and the mother is in her late 30s or early 40s. She has another 17-year-old child, Teal said, "who we assume is still with her."

He said the children seemed to have little emotion about their situation.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I said goodbye to an old foe yesterday.

It was a size 8 pale blue crepe dinner dress that clung so tight it revealed cellulite under your fingernails.

When we first met four years ago, it was resting easily on a mannikin. I had never seen such a heavenly shade of blue in my entire life. When the saleswoman led the way to the fitting room, I said, "There's no need to try it on. It won't fit now. But I'm going to diet into it."

She had the same look on her face as my husband when I told him I used his last razor blade to take chewing gum off the floor, but I cleaned it off good.

For the first three months that dress was like a spiritual leader in my life. It gave me purpose, energy and a reason for getting out of bed in the mornings eating a piece of dry toast and a three-minute egg. It led me to running around the block every morning before the sun and my neighbors came up. Every time I hit a traffic light in the car, I thought of the blue dress and contracted my stomach muscles.

One day I sneaked into the closet and tried it on. Something got caught in the zipper. It was my leg. It would be another few months before I could even try to get the other leg in it.

My evangelism began to wane. Mercifully, winter came and the dress went into the garment bag with the solemn promise that come spring, I would have a new dress to wear that no one had ever seen before. The second summer I had it, I just knew it would fit. Mayva was there when I tried it on.

"What do you think?" I asked.

"What does it feel like?" asked Mayva.

"Like a full body cast, But isn't this the most heavenly shade of blue you've ever seen? It's like a sky on a clear day."

"I hate to tell you, Henny Penny, but the sky is falling... especially around the Texas panhandle."

That was the last time anyone saw me in it. It got shuffled around in the closet until it was finally delegated to the same hanger with the cobbler apron and the paint slacks.

Yesterday, I pulled it out, looked at it, took a deep breath and announced, "You won! My christening dress was a size 12. Wherever you're going I hope you'll be happy."

My husband saw me ripping the dress. "Why would you do that?" he asked.

Men are so naive. Did he actually think I'd throw away a size 8 label without recycling it?

More Choices To Make

It wasn't a race that created much interest among the public, but State Sen. Ed Renfrow of Smithfield has won the Democratic nomination for state auditor.

Renfrow won over William S. Chestnut of Maxton in a run-off election held Tuesday. Turn-out was extremely light across the state.

Locally the second primary was coupled with a race for district court judge in which J. E. Martin of Bethel defeated Moses D. Lasitter of New Bern.

Renfrow got into the second primary after it was revealed that the third candidate in the race was a registered Republican and thus ineligible to run. The State Board of Elections decided to count the votes gained by J.E. B. Davis of Cary and allowed the second primary.

Renfrow still has another race to run in November, however. He will face Republican James F. McIntyre of Greenville. Both will be seeking to succeed retiring state auditor Henry L. Bridges.

At any rate the primaries are over for North Carolina and the party candidates are chosen. Voters will have one more series of choices to make in the general election this fall.

PCMH - East Is Underway

There wasn't much fanfare, but PCMH-East admitted its first patient last month.

PCMH-East is a 20-bed unit of Pitt Memorial Hospital located in the Holiday Inn on Memorial Drive. It is designed for ambulatory patients who don't need hospital rooms, perhaps referred here for outpatient treatment.

Such an arrangement can lower the medical bills of these patients and also reduce the load on hospital rooms and staff at Pitt Memorial proper.

THIS AFTERNOON

Gearing Up Again

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Now, while the attention of the public and news media is on the off-year session of the General Assembly convening this week, is when the massive state bureaucracy starts gearing up for the really big money schemes to be pushed in 1981.

Quickly, out of the public view, state agency people and special interest group leaders are getting ready for the next session of the General Assembly. All admit candidly it is too late to accomplish anything this year. If the needs and wants haven't already been nailed down there's little hope for them in this legislative session.

Such is the nature of the budget process in North Carolina.

Budgets covering a two-year period are presented to the General Assembly by the governor and the Advisory Budget Commission at the opening of the "regular" legislative sessions which occur in odd-numbered years. Since the 1974 recession, the assembly has met in off years only to "fine tune" the budget to account for shifts in the economy.

Limited
In this session, employee salary hikes and benefit improvements account for virtually all of the fine tuning, to the extent of more than $300 million. There is, then, no excess money to be had.

But 1981 is a different matter. The state budget now tops $5 billion a year. About 90 percent of that money goes for continuing programs already underway, and it is well known that once in operation, governmental programs are seldom trimmed back.

But that other 10 percent is the gravy, and over a two-year period will mean a cool billion dollars over which the vested interests (governor, agencies, legislators, special interest groups) can do battle.

That battle begins now. Even as this year's Legislature gets underway, the word is going out through the bureaucracy to prepare new program and building plans and move them up through the chain so that agency heads can pick and choose which to push. Typically, those requests will be for about twice as much as will be eventually requested in the recommended budget. Shortly after this session adjourns, members of the Advisory Budget Commission will make their state tour; much like one of those historic "Progressions" by the British Royal Family. They will be jetted about the state, wine and dined, and shown the deplorably dilapidated buildings and the programs perishing from lack of funds as the agency chiefs seek to win a favorable nod.

Some items will get in the new budget that way. Some will get in because a member of the Advisory Budget Commission has a keen interest, or a constituent who wants it.

On Top

Then, in the fall, the governor will come along with his wishes; some originated in his office, some extra special items of importance to his department heads, and some to reward special interest groups or individuals who have been particularly loyal.

By late fall, the Advisory Budget Commission will get all those new spending requests and stack them up against estimates of how much money is going to be available, and in sessions closed to the public begin to determine what will happen in the 1981 session.

What gets into that document is almost certain to be approved by the General Assembly, and a little slack is always left for pet projects which will be forthcoming from influential legislators. Then, in session, the lawmakers will spend weeks and weeks next winter debating things and studying matters before adopting the budget which they were handed. Once again, those close to the process will be saying: if we don't already have it nailed down, it's too late now.

Veteran's Last Stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five years after the end of the Vietnam War, one man who fought there is trying to go up a down escalator.

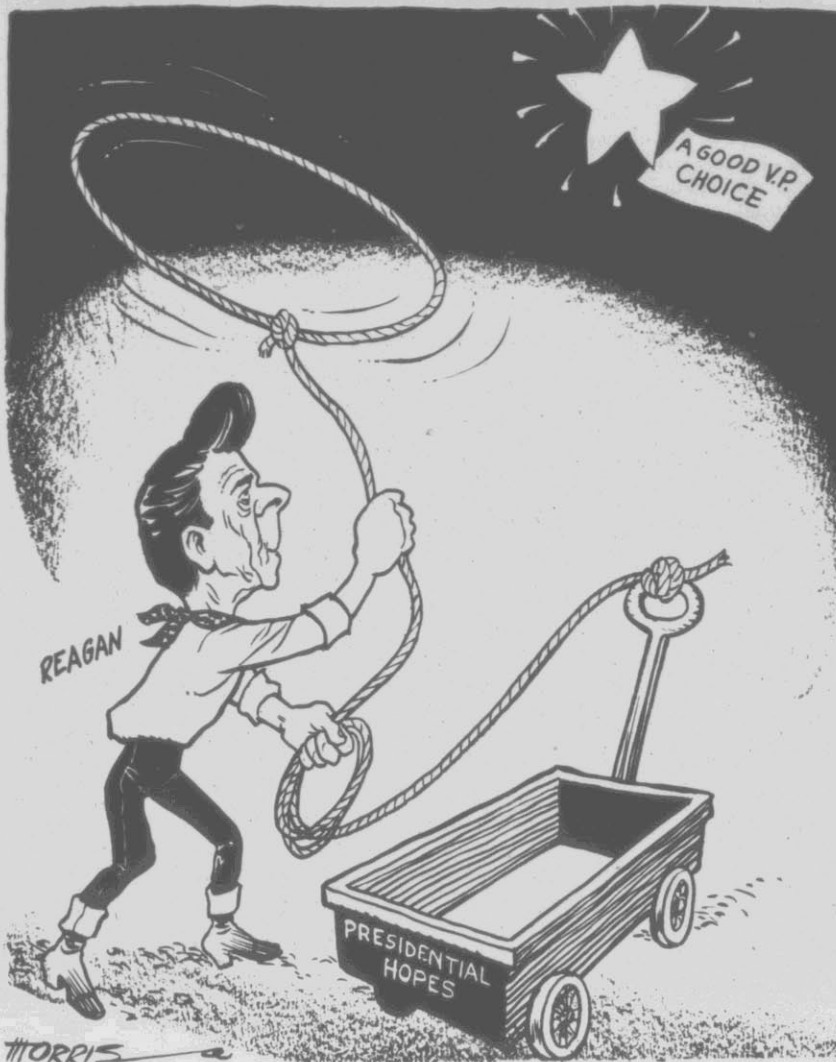

After a decade of fighting an unpopular war, Rusty Lindley is making what likely is his last stand for additional benefits for 2.8 million Vietnam veterans as an unofficial adviser on congressional legislation.

With no official status, no college degree, the road has been rocky since he returned home from the war 10 years ago, a captain at age 21.

One casualty has been his marriage to the girl he met in his history class and courted at Upper Arlington High School in their hometown of Columbus, Ohio.

"The best analogy I can give for the Vietnam veteran," says Lindley, "is like he's on an escalator. He's trying to go up a down escalator."

HIS NEXT BIG STEP!

"He's got a lot of things working against him. He's got attitudes. He's got lack of benefits. He's got time going against him. He's got psychological problems."

Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., a member of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, says Lindley contributed the basic ideas for a comprehensive $1.5 billion five-year package of benefits for Vietnam veterans that he introduced in Congress March 20.

"He's had input in this for a number of years," says Wolff. "He is an unpaid volunteer to help us. He's one of the people that's keeping the Vietnam veterans' issue alive."

Wolff's bill would set up a presidential commission on Vietnam veterans' affairs and an assistant secretary of labor for employment; establish a program of career development training through subsidies to employers; provide compensation and treatment for disabilities caused by Agent Orange; improve counseling services; and increase by 15 percent the cost of living allowance to veterans in school under the GI Bill who can prove a need for the additional funds.

Wolff agrees with Lindley that Vietnam veterans have been shunned because it was an unpopular war and people just want to forget it. Some of the blame he lays on Congress and some on the Veterans Administration.

The plight of the Vietnam veteran, even today, says Wolff, is still very serious.

Wolff says that what he has tried to do, with help from Lindley, "is bring together all of the problems as we see them today. It's a major push in order to try to redress these problems in some fashion. We've been doing it in a piecemeal fashion and we've brought it all together in one piece of legislation."

Lindley, who worked as an adviser to Vietnamese soldiers during the war, says that "everything I've done is directly related and intertwined with fighting in Vietnam."

Lindley is 32 now but looks much younger. He lives in a $200-a-month apartment over an Indian restaurant just four blocks from the White House.

He was hired as a writer for The Stars and Stripes, the national veterans' newspaper, two months ago after working there part-time. He makes $600 a month.

"I can just about make ends meet," he says.

Lindley says he grew up believing he had an obligation to serve his country. He volunteered for the Army, bypassing college, went to Officers' Candidate School and married Marcia Silbaugh six months before he went to Vietnam in August 1968.

"It's not advisable to spend 18 months — the first two years of your marriage — in Vietnam. But, you know, I thought things were going great over there. I was making about $1,000 a month, which was pretty good pay 10 years ago, spending about $10.

"My wife was working, going to school at the time. It looked like I was compiling a pretty impressive resume, or at least that was what I was led to believe."

When he returned to the United States in 1970, he was disillusioned with the way servicemen were being treated.

He went to look for a job in Colorado Springs, Colo., where he was going to college and where he and Marcia planned to live on five acres of land they had purchased for $15,000.

"I walked into the local employment office and spoke to the veteran's representative and gave him a copy of my resume and explained I would want something reasonably commensurate with what I was doing in the service."

"The guy flips through his files and says, 'Well, we have an opening for a counter man at the Colorado Springs Zoo.' I said, 'What's a counter man?' He said, 'Well, you do a little short order cooking, clean the counter and wash the dishes.'"

"I said, 'Wait a second. Is this the kind of job you're offering veterans? It's not exactly what they promised. I don't want to have anything to do with this agency anymore.' I worked for them later on, but that's just sort of the way the system works."

Lindley left Colorado College after a year and moved with his wife and their newly born daughter, Darianna, now 9, to Washington in the summer of 1971.

He worked for a year as a lobbyist for various veterans' groups. In 1972 he joined the unsuccessful presidential campaign of Democratic Sen. George McGovern. For the next four years he was director of the Vietnam Veterans' Center. He worked for the Department of Labor as a consultant for veterans' employment during 1978 and (Continued on page 5)

The Senior class at Rose High School is to graduate at Ficklen Stadium on June 6.

In case of rain, the normal procedure would be to hold the ceremonies at Minges Coliseum. However, this year this will not be possible. We have received word that the cost this year will be $1,800. This is about three times greater than in past years.

Also, we have to let them know a day in advance. Usually we have to let them know the morning before graduation.

We cannot afford this price. Therefore in case of rain, we will have to use our own gymnasium. This will limit each student to only two guests.

To the editor:

A few thoughts came to my mind after reading the May 30, editorial about Israel continuing its hardline attitude.

I really feel the media has given Israel a raw deal. The Israeli people have sacrificed very tangible and vital resources in the hope of peace. These resources include valuable oil fields, huge land masses, new modern communities and air bases. All of these for the promise of peace. Israel has paid in blood for broken promises in the past and yet it is still willing to take these huge steps for the promise of peace. It is even more of a sacrifice when you realize that only one Arab country out of 22 is willing to participate in this peace effort.

King Hussein of Jordan is never called "intransigent" in spite of the fact that he refuses to enter the peace talks. This is especially poignant considering that the majority of his people are Palestinians. Neither is Arafat called "intransigent" even though he and the PLO refuse to accept Israel's right to exist.

The current postponement of the autonomy talks was not made by Begin but Sadat. He said he would not resume negotiations until Israel "reconsiders its stand on Jerusalem and other issues." I understand and appreciate the pressure Sadat is under in Egypt and the Arab world. There has been no uproar however, about Sadat's "intransigence" in spite of the fact that he has taken out two vital weeks in the negotiating calendar.

Perhaps Sadat deserves the understanding he has received. But it would be nice if the next time someone charges that Menachem Begin is "inflexible," the Israeli leader got the same consideration.

To the editor:

A social tradition exists among white junior high and high school students in Greenville schools which fosters racism, bigotry, and bad feelings among the peoples of Greenville.

What is the tradition? Cotillion, or Galactica, for white 7th and 8th graders, and social dances organized by several parents for the white students of the higher grades.

The invitations to the social functions are given to all the white students of a class regardless of their personal qualities. However, certain minorities, be they black or Indian, are blatantly omitted from the guest list despite their individual accomplishments, character, and background.

Arbitrarily inviting all white students to a dance using race as the criteria for the invitation amounts to outright discrimination. The custom of denying involvement from outside the white community is the kind of obvious racism we should be working to eliminate.

The worst thing is that this racism, encouraged by parents of school-age children or the peer pressure to participate in the social affair, ingrains an acceptance of discrimination in the youth who become tomorrow's parents and leaders.

In particular, some white students attending the dances feel they are partaking in an activity designed specifically for their class. Such a dance is presently planned for the white graduates of the Class of '80 for this weekend.

I challenge the students and their parents to consider the moral aspect; are these dances truly representative of each of the school classes per se, or are they suited to a biased class image inherited from tradition and perpetuated by Greenville citizens. Although privately sponsored and legal, the all-white Cotillion makes harmony and understanding between the races very difficult.

Whoever sponsors, attends, or encourages attendance at these exclusive affairs should be made aware of their discriminatory actions and accordingly recognize their contribution to racist feelings.

Strength For Today

CONTINUOUS REVIVAL
"A church that is through with revivals is through."

That makes a lot of sense. Of course, the revivals need not be the sadwist trail, mourners' bench experiences. The best revival any church can have is the one which never stops. Revivals ought to be built-in equipment in the life of any church. An up-and-down, seesaw rhythm of spiritual life is not good for a church.

Jesus declared that the water he would give (that is, the flow of vital, spiritual power) would be a well of water springing up unto eternal life. There would be no season of drought. It would all be refreshment, power, life — and this continuously.

Without revival there can be no sound and living religion. Religion is not a commodity which we can take down from one shelf and put up on another. Something vital, fundamentally important and soul-transforming must be going on all the time. — Elisha Douglass

To the editor:

Your recent news story and your editorial of May 27, on the Blood Program in Pitt County were timely and well received by those of us involved. I take this opportunity to share several significant aspects of the program.

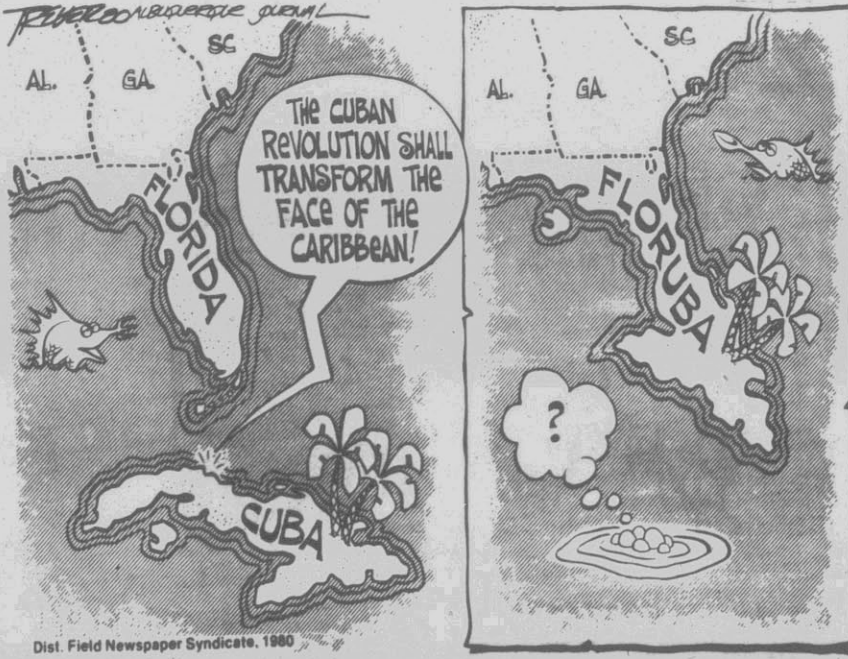

Without the assistance of many volunteers and countless hours donated by the Greenville Service League, all other efforts would be for naught. There are not sufficient adjectives to praise the volunteers and their work. More obvious are the thousands of individual blood donors who have made it a practice for years to give a pint of blood every 56 days, or as soon as possible when the next opportunity is available. It was a real pleasure to recognize at our awards luncheon Kragie Gardiner, Willie Bailey and Charlie Hargett — Union Carbide people — each one an eight gallon donor. Without the cooperation and support of each donor, again, all other work would be meaningless.

Each year productive Blood Mobile visits are made to Union Carbide, Procter & Gamble, Eaton, and Burroughs Wellcome. The employees of these blue chip industries not only contribute at their place of work, but come at a moments notice when there is an emergency to be met with blood drawn at the Tar River Blood Center.

Finally, and with a strong bias, the visits to East Carolina University, Pitt Community College, and Ayden-Grifton, Conley, Farmville Central, Rose, and North Pitt High Schools, netted 65 percent of the blood collected this past year. This speaks well for the students of this county.

As the ECU Medical School continues to develop, and with Pitt Memorial Hospital now recognized as a regional facility, the need for blood on behalf of those urgently requiring the same will increase. As chairman of the Blood Committee, and in behalf of those who assist me, I commend each person and group and request continued support.

"After spending 18 months in Vietnam," he explains, "I could see no real allegiance by the South Vietnamese people to die for something they didn't believe in. It was clear to me it wasn't working."

Lindley and his wife, now 30, were divorced in December 1975. She has since remarried another Vietnam veteran. She was graduated from the University of Maryland with a degree in business management and works for the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington. Dariana lives with her.

Being the wife of an officer who volunteered for Vietnam put her in an uncomfortable position, she recalls, because no one understood why he wanted to be there. After a while, she had trouble understanding herself or explaining to her friends. She was 19 and trying to learn to live in what she described as a "somewhat hostile, frightening and very lonely environment."

"It's very complicated. But I think one thing Rusty and I have kind of figured out more or less has to do with anticipatory grief. My girlfriend's husband was killed over there. At the time that he died is the time when I first started experiencing sort of signs of grief."

In preparing herself for Lindley's death, she suffered loss of appetite, nausea and shortness of breath. She lost all of her feelings and emotion. Nothing could make her cry.

"And at that point, I figured the best thing to do was in essence kill Rusty off, so that I could adjust when he died. And then when he didn't die, which I mean is just wonderful, but I mean I had already in a sense killed him. I know it sounds very cruel."

"Then it was real hard to get any true feelings back for him. It wasn't so much that he had changed, but my feelings for him had changed and I wasn't able to get them back. Rusty and I are still very good friends, which is just great. I really like him. I can't say that I love him and I haven't been able to say that for some time."

She says she "had neither counseling nor anyone to Ironically, as a result of what happened to her, Lindley lobbied for legislation for a psychological readjustment program. It was sponsored by Wolff and passed into law by Congress last year.

Now, Lindley says, he would like to see Wolff's, newest bill enacted and "then get a job implementing it."

Refinery Proposal Raises Oil Spill Fear In N.C.

STORE DAMAGED BY FIRE — Apple Records, of 208 E. Fifth St., received heavy damage to a storage room in the rear of the building from a fire Wednesday evening. According to Greenville Fire Department officials, the fire began in the room and spread to the roof where it was contained. Firemen above prepare to enter the rear of the building, as firemen on the roof check for hot spots. Cause of the fire, according to Chief Jenness Allen is under investigation. Proctor's Ltd Mens Wear and H. L. Hodges & Co., adjacent businesses, received moderate smoke damage during the blaze. There were no injuries reported in the 6:19 p.m. fire. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Charlotte Firm Fined On Bid-Rigging Charge

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge fined Charlotte's Rea Construction Co. $350,000 and handed two of the company's top officers active prison terms Wednesday in connection with a bid-rigging scheme.

The company was to plead guilty today in Richmond, Va., to another bid-rigging charge involving a taxiway at Richmond's Byrd International Airport.

The construction company pleaded guilty Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Charlotte to rigging a construction bid along with other unidentified firms on a runway paving job at Charlotte's Douglas Airport last year and to rigging a bid on paving sections of U.S. 70-401 in Raleigh in 1978.

REA President Norman Wilhelm and Board Chairman Norman Black Jr. pleaded guilty to one count each of bid-rigging in the Douglas Airport project.

Bid-rigging is when companies bidding on a project agree in advance who will be the low bidder and probably get the contract. The practice often raises the price of a project.

For example in the Raleigh highway project, the lowest bid was 12 percent higher than state engineers had predicted.

Black was sentenced to four months in prison and Wilhelm was sentenced to two months in prison. U.S. District Judge Woodrow Jones suspended the remainder of a year's sentence for both men.

The maximum sentence the company faced for each offense was a $1-million fine. Black and Wilhelm could have been fined $100,000 and sentenced to three years in prison.

Rea and its officers said they violated the Sherman Act, a federal law against restraint of trade. Their pleas stemmed from an agreement with the government by which they would assist in future investigations by the federal government into bid-rigging in the paving industry.

Rea officials could not be reached for comment late Wednesday. Both Black and Wilhelm refused comment after the hearing.

In the Douglas Airport project, higher bids were submitted by Blythe Industries Inc., of Charlotte; Crowder Construction Co., of Charlotte; Dickerson Inc., of Monroe, and Propst Construction Co., of Concord.

In the Raleigh highway project, higher bids were made by Dickerson of Monroe and C.C. Mangum of Raleigh.

The charges against Rea do not name the company's alleged co-conspirators. Therefore it could not be determined if all the bidders were involved in the conspiracy.

Officials of the other companies placing bids could not be reached for comment late Wednesday.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Proposed oil refineries in Brunswick and Carteret counties and a resulting increase in tanker traffic would sharply increase the danger of oil spills along the coast, state environmentalists say.

"We need refineries like a hole in the head," said former Chapel Hill Mayor James Wallace, a member of the state Environmental Management Commission.

Meanwhile, state officials said Wednesday that environmental permit applications for the refinery in Brunswick County are expected by mid-July and ground could be broken as early as March 1982.

Brunswick Energy Co., Stuart Petroleum Co. and Federal Paperboard Co. have proposed to build the 150,000-barrel-a-day refinery on the Cape Fear River near Wilmington.

The $400-million refinery would produce such products as gasoline, jet fuel and home heating oil.

In reference to the refineries, Wallace said oil spills are "inevitable." He commented on an incident last week in which the tanker Esso Portland was stranded off the North Carolina coast for several days, saying the incident "is one more example indicating why the state should not go any further with the oil-refinery business."

The tanker, loaded with 12.6 million gallons of crude oil, began taking on water and was stranded 26 miles from the coast. It eventually was towed to Norfolk, Va.,

without a spill.

Page Benton, chief of the state's Environmental Operations section which closely monitored the tanker's near-spill, agreed there would be a risk of spill.

"It's one of those questions society must answer of how much risk we're willing to take," Benton said. "There's a risk every day when I leave here that I won't make it home."

Benton said the state's ability to handle oil spills is limited, and, although he

Illegal CB Sales Bared

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A Lucia, N.C., businessman has pleaded guilty to a charge of selling illegal citizens band radio equipment after an investigation by the Federal Communications Commission's Norfolk district office.

Charles Groner of Groner Sales Co. pleaded guilty here Tuesday to a charge of selling an internal radio frequency power amplifier, a violation of the amended Communications Act of 1934.

In addition to a $300 fine, Groner forfeited all illegal equipment seized by U.S. marshals, valued at more than $20,000, FCC officials said.

Information supplied by Harold Bender, assistant U.S. attorney for the Western District of North Carolina, prompted an undercover probe in the Charlotte, N.C., area by the FCC into the sale of illegal CB radio linear amplifiers and other modified CB radio equipment.

Some of the forfeited CB equipment had been modified to operate on U.S. Government frequencies used by the military and other agencies, an FCC spokesman said.

J.J. Freeman, engineer in charge of the FCC Norfolk district office, said the equipment, if sold, would have caused widespread interference to television reception and other electronic home equipment such as hi-fis, FM tuners, AM broadcast receivers and intercom systems.

does not oppose refineries, he concedes that increased oil-tanker traffic would make him uncomfortable.

Regardless of the refineries, oil will continue to flow into North Carolina ports. An average of 99,000 barrels of petroleum products enter the port of Wilmington each day. Most of it is a finished product used by industries throughout the state.

In addition to the Brunswick County refinery, construction has been proposed for a 30,000-barrel-a-day facility in Carteret County.

In a related citizens' advisory committee meeting in Bolivia on Wednesday, Robert Jamieson announced that a state-federal air quality permit application was received Friday for the refinery near Wilmington.

Jamieson, regional office manager for the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said a number of other permit applications are expected to be submitted by mid-July.

Anne Taylor, NRCD director of regulatory relations, told the committee that an extensive environmental study being prepared by the company is expected to be submitted to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers late this month or early in July.

The corps will review the report and draft its own impact statement.

Once Investigated JC Leader In Sale Of Political Gift List

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — J. Harold Herring, former state Jaycee president and now candidate for national Jaycee president, resigned in 1974 from the staff of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., after being questioned about selling a list of political contributors, a Raleigh newspaper reported today.

An FBI investigation Helms requested at the time failed to show any evidence of a violation of federal law, Helms told The News and Observer on Wednesday.

A source close to Helms told the newspaper the FBI report confirmed the transaction took place.

A computerized mailing list from Helms' 1972 campaign was sold to two direct mail firms for several thousand dollars, the newspaper reported. The two firms were not identified.

Helms confronted Herring about the transaction, but Herring denied selling the lists, the paper reported.

The paper also said Helms demoted Herring in January 1974. Herring resigned in May to return to Mount Olive, where he became director of development at Mount Olive College. He left that position in 1978.

Helms refused to comment on the lists beyond a brief prepared statement.

"In late 1973, a question was raised concerning a transaction involving Mr. Herring's having sold a list of contributors, presumably including contributors to my 1972 campaign in which Mr. Herring served as office manager...I therefore requested the FBI to investigate the matter. I was subsequently advised that no such violation had been found," Helms said.

Herring would neither confirm nor deny the report, saying he was busy taking care of Jaycee matters.

Helms, after his election, appointed Herring as his administrative assistant, the top executive position on the senatorial staff. Herring had served as office manager for Helms' state headquarters during the 1972 political campaign.

In light of recent disclosures that Jaycees diverted more than $142,000 in charity funds to pay national membership dues, the Jaycee state executive committee and local chapter presidents will vote Saturday whether to continue to support Herring's national candidacy.

The FBI, Internal Revenue Service and the State Bureau of Investigation are looking into the Jaycees' use of N.C. Jaycee Foundation funds in an attempt to determine if any criminal violations took place.

Meanwhile, disclosures that state Jaycees created "paper" chapters to pad membership rolls have spread distrust of Jaycee charity fund projects across the nation.

"We've got people calling us from all over the world," said Terry Bechtol, national Jaycee president who lives in Pensacola, Fla. "They're now wondering whether we're all honest or not because of one state's problems."

Bechtol added that North Carolina has slipped to the rank of 20th among the 50 states and the District of Columbia in membership. The drop may cost the state a merit citation it was expected to receive at the group's national convention in Cleveland this month.

The state had been ranked first in membership in 1978 and was among the top 10 last year.

Afghanistan's Soviet Regime Is Running Into Draft Resistance

By BARRY SCHLACTER
Associated Press Writer
ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — A draft launched by the Soviet-backed government in Afghanistan to replenish the ranks of its army is running into increasing resistance, Afghan and Western diplomatic sources say.

In one incident, high school students celebrating the introduction of a new national flag in April were drafted on the spot, leaving their bewildered mothers pleading for their return, a reliable Afghan source said.

Afghan parents have used the disorganization and chaos in the rebellious countryside as a means to help their sons avoid the draft. Others have asked influential family friends to intervene on their behalf.

Western military analysts believe that the normal strength of the army — once put at 80,000 men — has now dwindled to half that number.

In addition, Afghan troops escorting Soviet armored columns have been largely ineffective "because most Afghans are loath to fire on their own people," a foreign military analyst said.

"Much of the Afghan army has just melted away since the Russians arrived last December," said a West European source. "If they had 40,000 men under arms, I would say they're lucky."

Many of the outlying areas of Afghanistan have been under the control of anti-communist Moslem Afghan rebels, complicating the Kabul government's difficulties in conscripting soldiers.

A recent broadcast by the state-run Radio Afghanistan provided an indication of the stern warning the Marxist regime is offering potential draft resisters:

"Those who have been recruited and conscripted for military service shall report with patriotic fervor to appointed centers," it said. "If any person does not comply with this sacred order, he will be subject to severe punishment."

Except for the career officer corps, nearly all of Afghanistan's army is in uniform because of conscription, with a two-year tour of duty.

Casualties and desertions, compounded by problems with induction, have forced the government to lower the draft age to 16 in recent weeks, and to refuse to discharge soldiers completing 24 month's duty, said the sources, who asked not to be identified.

Kabul parents have sent their sons to the countryside to escape induction, and family friends with influential posts in the ruling Marxist party have been asked to get special exemptions, a former Afghan official now living in exile said.

Because the two-year-old guerrilla war has so disrupted government machinery, escaping the draft is an almost riskless undertaking, the official said.

"There certainly is a conscription drive on in Afghanistan," a Western military specialist said. "But outside the towns, the regime has no way to have people report to the colors."

Government goon squads have made nightly sweeps through Kabul looking for able-bodied teen-agers and deserting draftees, informed sources said.

One source, who held a responsible government job before the 1978 Marxist coup, said the conscription drive is aimed at areas where the government fears the local youths are potential rebel recruits.

According to his information, more than one-third of the country's 216 districts were failing to meet their draft quota.

Arrest 11 Persons In 'Circle Of Gold'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Raleigh police arrested 11 persons Wednesday night for allegedly participating in the "Circle of Gold," a pyramid distribution scheme.

Det. Maj. J.V. Haley said he believed the arrests were the first made by law-enforcement officers in the state in connection with a pyramid scheme.

Two other persons in Kinston had been charged in warrants but had not been arrested late Wednesday night, said Raleigh Det. Lt. C.R. Stinson.

Stinson said the scheme is similar to a chain letter except buying into the scheme and the pyramiding of winnings is done at meetings, not through the mail.

He said a person buys two lists of 12 names for $100. That person then sells two legs of the pyramid to two persons and gets his initial investment back.

When the person's name gets to the top of the pyramid he can win up to $200,000, Stinson said.

Haley said promoters at the Circle of Gold meetings claimed there were 35,000 persons in North Carolina who had participated in the scheme, including 10,000 persons in the Kinston area.

State Attorney General Rufus Edmisten warned North Carolinians against the scheme recently, saying it was a pyramid scheme which state laws prohibit.

Hampered In Sunken Sub

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — Accumulated sand and rough seas are hampering a team of Navy divers who are trying to explore a German submarine sunken off the North Carolina coast.

A Navy spokesman in Norfolk, Va., said Wednesday that divers studying potential dangers at the wreckage of the U-352 entered the rusty hulk for the first time Monday.

He said they were unable to determine if explosives or remains of sailors were inside because of silt and sand.

The spokesman said divers were attempting to rig equipment to excavate the interior. They are working from the USS Hoist, a salvage and rescue vessel that arrived at the site 26 miles south of Beaufort Inlet last week for the 17-day project.

The divers are to determine if the wreckage, a popular site for sport divers, can be made safe.

The vessel reportedly had at least six torpedoes and 11 sailors on board when it was sunk in May 1942 by a Coast Guard cutter.

The Navy has confirmed that two torpedoes and other ammunition are accessible to divers. A spokesman for the Navy said Wednesday that a torpedo in a torpedo tube is unarmed but the status of another is unclear.

Reagan Plans Courtesy Call On Gerald Ford

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer
PALM SPRINGS (AP) —
With the Republican presidential nomination in his pocket, Ronald Reagan is paying a courtesy call on an old political rival, former President Gerald Ford.

Earlier this year, Ford declared Reagan too conservative to win the presidency if he captured the GOP nomination, and toyed with entering the race himself.

The former president also encouraged a series of Reagan challengers.

But Ford finally endorsed Reagan last week — after the former California governor had locked up the Republican nomination — and a Ford aide described today's planned meeting as an occasion for party unity.

"Both of them are aware of the situation that Governor Reagan is arriving at the convention with the necessary number of delegates to win the nomination on the first vote," Ford spokesman Bob Barrett said. "Both of them are aware that unseating President Carter is of paramount importance."

A private meeting was scheduled at Ford's desert home at Palm Springs, to be followed by a joint news conference.

Neither side said exactly what they hoped the meeting would accomplish except to promote party unity. Reagan has promised to headline a series of GOP unity dinners, which in part will help pay off campaign debts of his defeated foes. Ford is lending his name to that effort.

Ford and Reagan never have been close and Reagan's campaign against Ford four years ago exacerbated their differences. Many Ford backers claimed the Reagan challenge was responsible for Ford's later defeat by President Carter.

Basking in the glow of his primary successes, Reagan relaxed Wednesday at his hilltop home in the Pacific Palisades area and met with adviser Arthur Burns, former chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

The white-haired Burns, in coat and tie, took an easy chair next to a casually attired Reagan for the meeting. Reagan's press staff said no specific information was available on what the two discussed.

Reagan's campaign manager, William J. Casey, said the former California governor would be busy right up to the July convention — with a vacation tucked in somewhere.

"The most critical choice is on vice president," Casey said. "That will be pursued in a very careful, systematic and orderly manner."

Auto Sales Fall Again And Imports Drop, Too

By ANDREW ANGELO,
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — Monthly auto sales fell again in May as the five U.S. producers tallied sales of less than 500,000 for the first time since 1963.

The domestic industry has not reported such monthly figures since September 1963 when it sold only 403,624 or such a low May figure since 1958 when only 393,700 cars were delivered.

The poor figures Wednesday indicate, according to one industry analyst, that Detroit will continue to report Depression-like sales figures at least through August.

The five producers delivered 498,425 cars, a 37 percent drop from May 1979 and a 7 percent decline from the sluggish 507,964 sold last month.

Meantime, imports captured a 1980 high of the U.S. market with 28 percent, selling approximately 195,586 cars in May. However, that figure was down 22 percent from the record level of 251,103 in May 1979.

Domestic and imported sales combined totaled 694,011 — the lowest since the 739,689 delivered in May 1975.

Chrysler Corp. recorded the biggest drop as it sold 45,594 for a decline of 49 percent. Ford Motor Co. sold 116,548 for a 41 percent drop. General Motors Corp. delivered 310,074 for a 33 percent fall.

American Motors Corp. delivered 11,803 cars, a 29 percent drop, while Volkswagen of America sold 14,406 Rabbits for an 11 percent decline.

In late May, Chrysler sold 19,032 for a 47 percent dive. Ford delivered 46,993 for a 39 percent decrease while GM sold 123,581 for a 36 percent drop.

AMC sold an estimated 3,100 cars in the period for a 51 percent drop while Volkswagen delivered 6,378 for a 14 percent decrease.

However, late-May figures were up 21 percent from the middle of the month. But the late-May report trailed the same 1979 period by 38 percent.

Among the major importers, Nissan sold 45,961 Datsuns, an 11 percent decline from May 1979, while Toyota trailed its year-ago figures by 22 percent with 45,468. Honda reported a 7.9 percent increase with 37,430.

Importers continued to blame reduced sales on tight credit.

If the whole year followed the May pattern, about 7.6 million cars would be sold, including about 5.3 million domestic built passenger cars.

In 1980, U.S. carmakers have sold 2,888,244, a 22 percent dip from 3,692,394 last year. There has been one less selling day this year.

Import sales were up 22 percent for the year, with 1,048,325 compared with 815,436 last year.

GM sales were 1,799,938.

Four Wrecks Here Wed.

An estimated $2,700 property damage resulted from a series of four traffic mishaps investigated yesterday by Greenville Police.

Heaviest damage occurred in a 5 p.m. collision at the intersection of Fifth and Washington Streets involving a truck driven by Ernest Junior Taylor of 1911 McClellan St., and a car operated by Ella Tyson Harris of 409 Greenville Blvd.

Damage was set at $300 to the truck and $600 to the car. Police, who charged Taylor with having improper equipment, said Ms. Harris and a passenger in her car were injured in the mishap.

A 12 p.m. collision on Charles Street, a half-mile South of the Red Banks Road intersection, involved cars driven by Beth Lorraine Hardin of Route 2, Greenville, and Verna Carroway of Route 1, Beaufort.

Damage from the collision was estimated at $200 to the Hardin car and $600 to the Carroway vehicle by investigators who said both drivers and a passenger in the Carroway vehicle were injured.

Alton Ray Kinsey of 705 Church St. was reported injured when the bicycle he was riding collided with a car driven by Johnny Jermon Turner of Quail Hollow Trailer Pk., about 6:50 p.m. at the intersection of Mumford Road and Powell Street.

Damage was estimated at $400 to the car and $100 to the bicycle.

Richard Lee Uhlman of 1905 Fairview Way was charged with failing to reduce speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of a 5:19 p.m. mishap on Greene Street, 60 feet South of the Morgan Street intersection.

Investigators reported the Uhlman car collided with a vehicle operated by James Hinson Phillips of Ayden, resulting in $300 damage to the Phillips car and $200 damage to the Uhlman auto.

Guards Patrol Shattered City

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
GRAND ISLAND, Neb. (AP) — National Guardsmen patrolled past twisted and shattered buildings early today as federal officials pledged to help this Plains city recover from devastating tornadoes that destroyed nearly 600 homes and businesses and killed at least four people.

Nearly 200 people were injured, at least four critically, when as many as seven twisters rumbled through dozens of blocks of the city of 40,000. The body of one teen-age girl was blown nearly a block by the battering winds.

Bill Shreffler, assistant city attorney, said workers continued to search for more possible victims, but "we have no numbers" of the missing.

"Nobody really knows how many deaths there are," said Gov. Charles Thone, who inspected the devastation by helicopter. Estimates of the death toll Wednesday reached as high as 35, but Thone later said the final tally would be lower than expected.

"I've never seen anything like it," said Danford Stout, who huddled with his family in a cellar as the twisters reduced his home to splinters. "You know, I ain't much of a church-goer, but I still believe in the good Lord and I prayed when we were down in that basement."

President Carter declared Hall County, which includes Grand Island, a disaster area, opening the way to low-interest loans to citizens and businesses.

Much of the city remained without power and water pressure today. City Public Works Director Bob Olsen said it would take "three or four days to restore some of the power, but it will be weeks before it can be completely restored."

And federal health officials suggested Grand Island residents boil all drinking water.

The twisters hit late Tuesday, only hours after several others struck Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Virginia and Maryland, leaving at least 120 people injured and one dead.

The Federal Emergency Management Administration said 531 homes and 60 businesses were destroyed in a 150-square-block area of Grand Island. An additional 415 residences and 15 businesses were heavily damaged by the twisters, which rocked the city for about 90 minutes.

R. L. Turcotte, director of Omaha's VA Medical Center, said Grand Island's two public hospitals were undamaged but were thought to be "running at capacity." Forty people were admitted to hospitals for injuries ranging from lacerations to multiple fractures.

The National Guard force was increased from 70 to 150 Wednesday night to help authorities enforce a 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew to prevent looting in the storm-stricken area.

Residents who survived by taking cover emerged from their storm shelters to survey some bizarre wreckage. One family found in their yard a boat they believed the property of neighbors three blocks away. Another family's van was in its usual spot — but was turned upside down. "I'll take an earthquake any day," said Sally Lanka, who arrived a few months ago from California. "It just makes you realize how small you are when you're up against Mother Nature."

NIGHTHAWKS...The 'Hawks had the crowd snapping their fingers, swinging their hips and singing along to a tune called "A Pretty Girl, A Cadillac and Some Money," when they played at the Attic Tuesday night.

Nighthawks Set Pace In Blues-Rock Scene

By SUE FERNALD
Reflector Staff Writer
The Nighthawks, rated as one of the Attic's top ten performing bands, played its own special brand of finger snapping, hip swinging music, or Blues-Rock, at the Attic Tuesday night.

The band is originally from the D.C. area and consists of four musicians: Mark Wenner, harmonica; Jim Thackery, guitarist; Pete Ragusa, drummer; and bassist Jan Zukowski. Both Wenner and Thackery formed the group in 1972 and were later joined by Ragusa and Zukowski.

The term Blues-Rock, which started as a group joke, has become a very real concept to the band and they feel that this style of music will be the new trend. Their reason for this belief is "people are looking for something more basic and are trying to get away from the heavily produced type of music," that seems to be popular recently, said harpist Mark Wenner. Thus, they call it Blue-Wave as opposed to the other current trend in music, New-Wave.

Blues-Rock is influenced by many types of music as most pop main stream songs are. According to Wenner, "American music has always been a continual blend of all types of music." However, the major influences on the Hawks style have been Chicago Blues, Early Soul, but most importantly, Rock-A-Billy. Rock-A-Billy refers to the type of music popular in the '50s and '60s, namely that performed by Elvis Presley and Jerry Lee Lewis. This is not to say the 'Hawks have a Presley sound but have the same type of swing, foot stomping and hip shaking beat common to '50 and '60s music.

Blues-Rock has enjoyed a positive upswing in recent years and the 'Hawks definitely feel that their time has come after eight years. "The most visible evidence of the comeback by blues bands is the Blues Brothers," said Wenner.

The Nighthawks have recently recorded an album, "The Nighthawks", which will be released June 10. Selections on the album include a few original songs, older blues songs which have been completely rearranged and some songs from very obscure sources.

In producing their three previous albums they had a few problems in capturing their true sound. One reason for this, said Wenner, "everything just doesn't sound the same to the listener on his home set-up as it does at midnight, when the energy is high, and when he's got six beers in him." So, atmosphere appears to be the main ingredient that was missing in the albums. In producing their new record they have included some "extra stimulants" to get the same effect and make him feel as good," according to Wenner.

The 'Hawks have been performing together since 1974 and have spent the past six years years on the road. They have played in 34 states and over 300 nights a year. "We have enjoyed success on all levels and the album is not any kind of sudden breakthrough," said Wenner. They really enjoy their work, and that's what it is, work, for this is their career. They like the different situations, bars, concerts and recording that being musicians enables them to participate in. Wenner says, "It's all part of a whole experience for us."

One interesting sight, other than the antics of the band members themselves, are the many tattoos that cover harpist Wenner's arms from the elbow down. He says they have no special significance concerning people or places, "they're just pictures". Jim Thackery, guitarist, also has a few of his own.

Prime Rate Goes Down

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The prime lending rate has fallen from 20 percent to 13 percent in the last seven weeks and analysts say it is likely to drop still further before leveling off later this year.

Chase Manhattan Bank, the nation's third largest, led the latest rate reduction, trimming its prime one full percentage point Wednesday to 13 percent.

The vice chairman of Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., John R. Torelli III, predicted the prime rate would fall to as low as 10 percent by the end of the year.

Torelli, in a meeting with reporters at the bank's New York headquarters, said he expects corporate loan demand to be "flat" for the rest of 1980, which will bring added pressures for further prime rate reductions. Manufacturers Hanover, however, did not reduce its rate Wednesday from the prevailing rate of 14 percent.

Some major banks, however, followed Chase, including No. 5 Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. and No. 13 Marine Midland Bank. Analysts predicted others would soon do likewise.

"The move to 13 (percent) is a trend that the other banks will follow," said Maria Ramirez, an economist at Merrill Lynch Co. in New York. "They really can't justify it being any higher."

Ms. Ramirez said she expects the prime to drop to near 12 percent within a month, but to remain there for several weeks before falling another percentage point or two by the end of the year.

The prime is the interest rate banks charge on short-term loans to their best-risk corporate borrowers, while loans to most other businesses are set one or more percentage points above the prime.

The prime does not apply to consumer loans but is considered a key barometer of trends in all kinds of interest rates. When the prime changes, other rates, including home mortgage rates, usually follow in the same direction.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which oversees the nation's savings and loan associations, reported Wednesday that the average interest rate on loan commitments fell from a record 16.59 percent in April to 15.72 in May.

The last time the prime was 13 percent was Sept. 20, shortly before the Federal Reserve Bank initiated the first in a series of credit-tightening measures that spurred an unprecedented upward spiral in the prime rate.

Since the prime peaked at 20 percent in early April, banks have been lowering their rates as businesses cut back on borrowing in response to a slowdown in the economy and signs of a severe recession emerged.

'Racehorse' Riding To Assailants' Aid

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — TV cowboy Dusty Farlow will get a noted, real-life trial lawyer — Richard "Racehorse" Haynes — if he's indicted for shooting "Dallas" millionaire J.R. Ewing.

Someone — speculation about "whodunit" is driving "Dallas" fans nuts — gunned down ornery J.R. in this season's last episode of the CBS television series. And Farlow, a San Angelo rancher, is a prime suspect.

"The only thing Dusty is guilty of is poor marksmanship," says Haynes, who believes J.R. deserves to die.

"If he doesn't die, then lightning ought to strike him," Haynes told The San Angelo Standard-Times.

"Dusty is a lamb among wolves, while J.R. is outside the bounds of propriety within Christian morals," Haynes said.

The Houston defense attorney says the case is complicated by reports that Farlow died in a plane crash. But grand jurors apparently heard secret testimony that Farlow was not on the plane and they may indict him for attempted murder.

Renews Call For VEPCO Probe

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt renewed his call for a public probe into the management practices of Virginia Electric & Power Co. Wednesday, following a similar recommendation by a federal administrative law judge.

Judge Isaac D. Benkin, a Federal Energy Regulatory Commission judge, Tuesday recommended that a "full, formal and public investigation of the quality and prudence with which Veeco is and has been managed."

Lee was granted a license to engage in the business of plumbing contracting (Class 1).

Licenses to engage in the business of heating contracting (Group 3, Class 1), were issued to Jimmy Alton Hughes of Snow Hill and Annie Ruth Manning of Robersonville. Hughes was also licensed to engage in the business of air conditioning contracting.

Hatfield Talking, Nobody Listening

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Mark O. Hatfield is trying to kill a peacetime draft registration plan by talking it to death in the Senate. Few if any of his colleagues are listening.

The Oregon Republican spoke against registration for almost five hours Wednesday as the Senate began debating whether to spend $13.3 million to register 19- and 20-year-old men this summer.

For most of the time, only one or two of the nation's 100 senators were present.

Occasionally, Hatfield was alone on the floor, his only audience being Senate staff members and people in the visitors' gallery.

Late in the afternoon, Selective Service Director Bernard Rostker joined tourists in the gallery and listened for about half an hour.

Supporters of registration planned to take the floor today to outline their arguments.

The administration says it has enough votes — about 60 at last count — to pass registration. Hatfield disputes that; by his count 35 senators firmly oppose registration, 20 are undecided and 45 support it.

The big question is how long Hatfield and his allies can keep the filibuster going. Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd said today he will file a cloture petition Friday to cut off debate.

That means the Senate would decide early next week — probably Tuesday — whether to let the filibuster continue. Sixty senators must vote for debate-limiting cloture before the discussion can be curtailed.

Byrd said he was confident that registration supporters would win the cloture battle "early on" though not necessarily on the first try. He also predicted registration would be approved.

Hatfield predicted he would win the first cloture test, but said he did not know how he would do thereafter.

In his opening arguments, Hatfield called registration a "fruitless and inconsequential procedure" that would do nothing to improve military readiness but which would create divisiveness throughout the country.

He said that if only 2 per cent of eligible youths failed to register, the government would be faced with the prospect of prosecuting 80,000 people for a felony violation that carries a maximum penalty of five years' imprisonment and a $10,000 fine.

The court system is not equipped to handle all the cases, he argued, and federal prisons, now with a population of 24,000 inmates, would not be able to house them.

On the other side of the argument, Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia said registration would be a signal to the Soviet Union and to U.S. allies "of our determination to place our armed forces in a state of preparedness in the event of a military emergency."

"Reinstitution of military registration will demonstrate our resolve to back up our foreign policy pronouncements with military strength," Byrd said.

Waste Site Undecided

SOUTHPORT, N.C. (AP) — Carolina Power and Light Co. officials say they haven't decided whether to resume use of the Brunswick County landfill for disposal of non-radioactive waste from their nuclear plant near Southport.

The utility plans to pile trash at the plant while continuing to study alternate methods of disposal.

Trash shipments to the county landfill were suspended April 28, when low-level radioactive wastes were discovered there.

"When you stick your toe in the water and get burned pretty good, you're hesitant to do it again," plant manager A.C. Tollison said Tuesday. "It's not that we don't think it would be all right to use the landfill. It's just that there may be better methods."

Although federal and state officials have given their permission to resume use of the landfill, CP&L still needs permission from Brunswick County. The county recently warned the utility that a second violation of its landfill ordinance might lead to a civil or criminal suit.

Monitor's Lantern Is Disintegrating

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A red distress lantern recovered in 1977 from the sunken iron-clad Monitor is disintegrating rapidly, says the director of the North Carolina Division of Archives and History.

"For some reason the deterioration of the lantern just can't be stopped," Larry Tise said. "There is a green mold that will not stop growing, and it keeps on eating away at the brass."

He said the disintegration of the lantern, thought to be the same one hoisted when the Union's iron-clad warship began foundering on New Year's Eve, 1862, illustrates the problem scientists would have in preserving the entire wreck.

The Monitor, the ship that battled the Confederacy's Merrimack during the Civil War, sank off Cape Hatteras 118 years ago.

Tise said salvage of the vessel also is unlikely because of the possibility the wreck was damaged by a World War II depth charge.

"We know that the wreck is in terrible condition, and that it has been severely altered by other than natural causes," Tise explained.

He said researchers have not completely ruled out the idea of raising parts of the wreckage, but they agree "nothing should be moved that would significantly alter the site."

That would mean the twin-gun turret, perhaps the most recognizable part of the ship, will not be disturbed. The Monitor is lying upside-down on the turret.

Tise said researchers now want to concentrate on preserving artifacts recovered since the wreck was discovered by a Duke Marine Labs expedition in 1973.

Pirates To Open Summer Loop Season

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University will open North Carolina Summer Collegiate League play Friday night, but some familiar faces will not be in the lineup for the Pirates.

The Bucs play host to UNC-Wilmington in a 6 p.m. doubleheader at Harrington Field in the opener for the season for both teams.

Missing from the ECU lineup, however, will be six mainstays who made their presence felt over the last few years. They include the entire outfield of Butch Davis (drafted this week by the Kansas City Royals organization), Billy Best and Macon Moye, along with catcher Raymie Styons, first baseman Rick Derechallo, and pitcher Mickey Britt.

With losses like that, Coach Gary Overton is going to be hard pressed to come up with a team that can match the springtime record of the Pirates. But, it does give the Pirates a chance to do a lot of their rebuilding for the coming spring season during this summer.

"I don't think we've lost much of our timing," Overton said yesterday. "I'm pretty pleased with the way things have gone so far. We do have a lot of replacing to do, but in a lot of instances, we have people who did get in some playing time during the spring. I don't think our defense will suffer that much. In fact, our defense should be our strong point for the summer. The infield is back just about intact, and we did have a good infield in the spring season."

The outfield will be manned by people who did see some duty during the spring, but only limited duty. John Hallow, who played a few games in the outfield when Moye was recovering from scarlet fever early in the year, will be in left. Hallow did serve as the designated hitter the rest of the year, and was one of the leading hitters.

Joining him will be Robert Wells in center and Pete Persico in right. Both saw limited bat duty, but both hit well when they had the chance. Wells, in fact, had the best batting average on the team, just under .600.

Todd Hendley returns at third base, backed up by John Krol, while Kelly Robinette is at short, and Mike Sorrell will be at second.

Mike Sage, who has experience, will be at first, along with newcomer Charlie Smith, eligible for the first time after transferring.

The catching duties will be handled by Jay Carraway, backed up by Mark Wakai and John Floyd.

If there is a serious problem for Overton and his Pirates, it is in the pitching ranks, where only two experienced moundsmen are present. Bill Wilder, 10-2 during the spring will head the staff, joined by freshman Mike Williams. Kirk Parsons saw only brief mound duty during the regular season. Ben Wilson and Brian Felton, both walkons with no experience, round out the staff.

"Pitching is definitely our weakness," Overton said. "We lack both depth and experience. We really need about seven or eight pitchers for a season like this, where we play 30 games in six and a half weeks."

Overton feels that hitting will be a plus for the team, but that defense is going to have to lead the way. "I think we've got the best infield in the league. We have a lot of inexperience in our batting lineup, and I don't think we have the power we had during the spring. But we can bunch our hits."

As far as the conference goes, Overton looks for Campbell and Louisburg to both have good entries since they have virtually the same teams on the field as they did in the spring. "Overall, I think the league is going to be pretty well balanced, however," he added. "But I think the team with the best pitching is going to win."

Opening with two games doesn't worry Overton. "We've got to start somewhere, and I guess a doubleheader is as good a place as any."

It took 11 long innings and several misplays by the opponents, but Pitt County's American Legion team finally came away with a 4-3 victory in the opening game of the season last night, 4-3.

Wilson's Post 13 grabbed the lead in the first inning, scoring two quick runs. They added another in the seventh, just before Pitt finally broke the ice with two.

Pitt then tied it up in the bottom of the ninth, and finally pushed over the winning run in the 11th.

All of the Pitt County runs were unearned, but coach Pat Smith didn't care one bit. "I tell you, I'm just tickled to death to win this one," he said. "When you consider that this is our first game of the year, and their 13th, you can see that we did quite a job."

Smith had plenty of praise for Roger Williams, who went the first ten innings for the Pitt nine. "He did a fine job for us out there tonight, and Gordon Douglas came on an got the job done in the final inning."

Actually Douglas did more than that, banging out the hit that drove in the winning run.

Pitt had scoring opportunity after scoring opportunity, but for a while it looked like they would not come up with anything. Sacrifice after sacrifice went by the boards, as the Pitt men left runners in scoring position.

"We have really worked on our bunting and it finally paid off for us," Smith said.

"But I was really worried about the fact that we hadn't had a chance to play a pre-season game, while they've played 12 games already," he added.

The result left Pitt with a 1-0 record both overall and in Area 1 East play. Wilson dropped to 10-3 overall and 2-2 in the conference.

Wilson jumped on Williams for two quick runs in the first before he settled down. Mike Wells led off, hitting the opening pitch up the gap in right center for a double. Charles Simpson followed with a single to left, then stole second. Donald Williams grounded out, scoring Wells, and David Lawhon singled to score Simpson.

After that, however, Pitt held Wilson in check until the seventh, when the third run scored. Wilson did threaten in the third and fourth and sixth innings, leaving men on second each time.

In the seventh, Randy Prince was hit by a pitch, and pitcher Jeff Davis sacrificed him up. Wells reached on an error, allowing Prince to score.

Pitt left men on second in the first and fifth, and on third in the fourth and sixth before finally scoring in the seventh.

Mark Shank reached on a two-out error and moved up on a passed ball. Ron House walked and Curtis Spencer beat out an infield high hopper. Will Barrett followed with a single to center, scoring both Shank and House, closing the gap to 3-2.

Both Pitt and Wilson threatened the rest of the way in regulation, but it was only Pitt that scored, tying it up with one in the ninth.

With one down, House walked and Spencer reached on an error. Barrett reached on a fielder's choice that got Spencer at second, and Williams singled, scoring House. Mark Douglas walked to load the bases, but a fly ball ended the threat.

After Pitt left a man on third in the tenth, Wilson left one there in the 11th.

But Pitt got the winning run in the bottom of the frame. Spencer led off reaching when his grounder to short was misplayed. Barrett singled him to second, and he took third when an attempted pickoff play at first was errored. Gordon Douglas then followed with a sharp single over the head of the left fielder to drive in Spencer with the game-winning run.

Wells, Simpson and Doug Godwin each had two hits to lead Wilson, while Barrett had three and Skip Hill had two for Pitt.

There were several defensive gems in the game. Hill knocked down Lawhon's sharply hit grounder in the fourth, chased it down and threw the runner out just in the nick of time. Then, Spencer chased down a pop fly, caught it, banded into the fence, dropped the ball, only to snatch it bareheaded, out of the air before it touched the ground. The top Wilson play was a diving catch by shortstop Lawhon on a line drive by Mike Campbell with a runner on third in the sixth.

Pitt travels to Washington tonight, seeking win number two.

Hawaii Loses, But Gains CWS Finals

By CHUCK SCHOFFNER

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — His teammates at the University of California call Tom Colburn "Clutch Cargo."

At the College World Series Wednesday night, Colburn showed why he has earned the name.

The senior catcher smacked a two-run homer in the eighth inning to tie the score and California went on to eliminate Miami 4-3.

A throwing error gave California, 44-2, the victory and set up a showdown with Pacific Ten Conference rival Arizona tonight. The loser of that game goes home. The winner will play Hawaii, 60-17, for the NCAA title Friday night.

Arizona, 43-21, stayed alive by handing Hawaii its first loss of the series, 6-4 in 11-innings, in Wednesday night's second game.

"If it was the eighth or ninth inning, in a clutch situation, I'd give my right arm to have either Colburn or (Greg) Zunino up to bat," California Coach Bob Milano said.

"We're lucky. Colburn is good in the clutch."

Team mate Lyle Brackenridge, "We call him (Colburn), Clutch Cargo (after a cartoon character). He really comes through when we need him."

California trailed Miami 3-1

Appeal By Risk Is Denied

By GORDON BEARD
AP Sports Writer
BALTIMORE (AP) — Tartan Farm's Codex, beating off the second challenge from Genuine Risk in 17 days, has been declared the winner of the 1980 Preakness Stakes.

The Thoroughbred Board of the Maryland Racing Commission voted 3-1 Wednesday to uphold state stewards in disallowing a foul claim against Codex when the race was run at Pimlico Race Course on May 17.

Barring further action, the decision wiped out the chances of Genuine Risk becoming the first filly to win the Triple Crown. She won the Kentucky Derby, a race in which Codex was not entered, and the two rivals will meet again in Saturday's Belmont Stakes.

The decision of the panel, minus one member who disqualified himself because of published statements he made in favor of Genuine Risk, came after 2½ days of testimony.

"We have seen no convincing evidence or new information that was brought in to change our minds," Board Chairman Robert W. Banning said.

Jacinto Vasquez, the rider of Genuine Risk, charged his filly had been carried wide on the turn for home, was bumped or jostled, and was either struck or intimidated by the whip of jockey Angel Cordero Jr., the rider of Codex.

Genuine Risk's owners, Diana and Bertram Firestone, after first saying they would abide by the stewards' decision, decided to appeal and the board said they must bear the cost of the proceedings.

Attorney Henry Lord said he would have to confer with the Firestones to determine if they wished to pursue the matter as a civil case in Baltimore City Court.

The commissioners remained unswayed by television tapes, not available to the stewards, or by testimony by witnesses contending a foul had occurred.

Even J. Neil McCardell, who cast the lone vote to upset the stewards, indicated he had made up his mind without benefit of the outside evidence.

"I've seen more races than some of the stewards," McCardell said of his long association with the sport as a fan. "I know what a foul is. I'm not an expert on tapes. I've only seen a few of those."

Cordero, frequently in trouble with racing associations during a stormy career, drew the wrath of McCardell.

"I regret we can't take that number (Codex's) down," the commissioner said, "so I could have the satisfaction of recommending Cordero be fined and suspended for the ride I saw."

Stewards J. Fred Colwill, Clinton Pitts Jr. and Edward Litzenger testified they had made the correct decision, even while admitting there may have been some slight contact and drifting by Codex.

"There was a bearing out, I had no doubt about that," said Kenneth Proctor in presenting the majority opinion for the board after less than 40 minutes of deliberation. "But this was a judgment call. We have no power to upset a judgment call."

McCardell said while the stewards may have acted conscientiously, they should have conferred with patrol judge Coleman Blind before reaching a decision on the foul claim.

Blind, stationed in a stand at the quarter pole, alerted the stewards about the incident during the running of the race and in a written report two days later said it appeared Cordero had forced Genuine Risk wide "on purpose."

Vasquez testified that he thought the filly would have taken the lead had she not been carried wide. "I don't know if I would have won," he said, "but that's not up to Cordero to decide."

"It was a subtle maneuver by Cordero," Lord said after the decision was announced. "It had to be subtle or it would have been too obvious."

Cordero, one of the last witnesses Wednesday, said when he looked back and saw Genuine Risk approaching, "I started driving my horse to make sure he'd be in high gear before she got to me."

He claimed the nose of Genuine Risk never got closer to the lead than his boots, and testified he struck Codex on the shoulder so as not to interfere with the filly.

Attorneys for the Firestones relied heavily on tapes from ABC, which televised the Preakness nationally.

They showed the two horses in close proximity, but attorney Arnold Weiner for Codex's connections contended the TV shots were distorted because of the camera angle and the use of a telephoto lens.

It was a day Jim Fulghum will long remember. It was mid-April of 1961. Fulghum, within a month of graduating from Atlantic Christian College, was waiting on news about three job for which he had lately applied.

Coming home from class, Fulghum found in his mail box not one but three letters he had been expecting. Two were teaching contracts, one of which was from North Edgecombe High School. The other was a contract giving him a shot at playing minor league baseball.

Fulghum huddled with a number of his friends, including Pete Peterson, manager of the Wilson Tobs, to discuss the situation. Peterson, now a front-office executive in the Pittsburgh Pirate organization, may have been the deciding voice.

"Pete told me he thought I could definitely make it to the big leagues with my defense, but my offense wouldn't get me up there," Fulghum said.

A few days later Fulghum took the job at North Edgecombe, forever leaving a professional baseball career behind. Instead, he turned to coaching baseball, first at North Edgecombe and then, three years later — in 1964 — at Greene Central.

He has been coaching baseball at the Snow Hill high school ever since and 1980 Rams may turn out to be one of Fulghum's best teams.

Beginning tonight (8 p.m.), Greene Central plays host to Kings Mountain in the final round of the state 3-A playoffs. The best two-out-of-three championship series, to be played in Snow Hill, continues Friday (8 p.m.). A third game, if necessary, is set Saturday (2 p.m.).

Looking back as his club readied for the state finals, Fulghum says does not regret leaving behind what might have been a major league baseball career for a coaching career.

"No regrets, none at all," Fulghum said. "I knew some players in the minors and I talked to Peterson and they all told me about the bus rides and the long days away from home.

"It was a great period, the 1950s, for minor league clubs in this state. Even though I was coaching, I did play some semi-pro baseball for a while."

Despite saying no to a possible big league career, Fulghum continued to play semi-pro baseball. He finally called it quits in 1972, when the Rams won their first and only state baseball title.

Now he is content to devote full time to coaching his Rams, who have won 45 of 48 Eastern Carolina Conference games the past three seasons. This is Greene Central's third straight trip to the state playoffs.

"This is the last time around for the seniors and they really want it," Fulghum said. "This has been a good group of kids to work with. We constantly stress that the team is more important than any one individual and they've gone along with it."

As with most coaches of successful high school programs, Fulghum is quick to praise the area baseball programs — an assembly line which helps keep Greene Central, the only high school in Greene County, stocked with players.

"We've got a good little league and youth program and a good junior varsity," Fulghum said. "People are always volunteering their time to help with the programs here. You've got to give'em credit."

"I've also got to hand it to the parents. We demand a lot from our kids. We practice a lot on Saturdays and the kids gets there."

It helps if you are winning.

"I guess we've got some tradition here," Fulghum said. "But you're gonna have lean years, too. You just hope you can make it through them."

Bernard King Enters Guilty Plea To Reduced Charges; Gets Year

By VERN ANDERSON
AP Sports Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah Jazz officials decline to discuss the future of suspended forward Bernard King following guilty pleas to reduced charges of attempted forcible sexual abuse.

The 23-year-old King stood before 3rd District Judge Christine Durham Wednesday and was sentenced to two suspended one-year jail terms, a $2,000 fine and two years probation.

"His status with us is unchanged," said Jazz General Manager Frank Layden. Team officials have refused comment except to say King would remain suspended at least until his legal troubles are resolved.

A misdemeanor cocaine possession charge still is pending in circuit court against King, who has had a history of brushes with the law since his spectacular college career at Tennessee.

King's attorney, Robert VanSciver, and prosecutors had worked out a plea-bargaining agreement Tuesday whereby King, facing five felony counts of forcible sexual abuse and forcible sodomy, would plead guilty to two misdemeanor counts of attempted forcible sexual abuse.

The judge told King she was suspending the jail terms so he could be free to play basketball and to continue treatment for alcoholism.

King was suspended by the National Basketball Association club following his arrest New Year's Day at his apartment. A 25-year-old Salt Lake woman had alleged King forced her to perform sexual acts after she went with him to his apartment.

Meanwhile, an arbitration case involving King and the Jazz has been decided in King's favor by the NBA Players Association. Larry Hatfield, Jazz managing partner, said the club will have to pay King his full salary during his suspension. The team had maintained King was suspended without pay.

Assistant Salt Lake County Attorney W.C. Gwynn said he had no idea when the drug possession case against King would be heard. Police who arrested King said they found a quantity of cocaine in his apartment.

Gwynn said "a significant part of the decision" to enter into plea-bargaining was the results of several polygraph tests which showed King unable to remember much of what happened the night of his arrest.

He said the woman who filed the complaint had agreed to the plea bargain and had "no rancor or vengeful attitude toward King." Gwynn said prosecutors continued to have complete confidence in the reliability of her story.

The judge granted a request by King's attorney that he be allowed to go to California to play basketball, presumably in a summer league.

Putt-Putt Cal, Arizona Clash..

The Untouchables beat the Hustlers and the Hot Shots whipped the Aces in City League Putt-Putt action last night.

The Untouchables (1-0) were led by Mike Brown with a 61 and Johnny Carrow with a 63. Eddie Robinson and LaVern Mayo shot 66 and 69, respectively for the 0-1 Hustlers. The Hot Shots, 1-0, won easily behind John Lowe's 63 and Danny Harris with a 60. Scott Morris was low for the Aces, 0-1, with a 72, while Barbara Logsdon followed with a 78.

and the Hurricanes' ace pitcher, Neal Heaton, 18-4, was working on a six-hitter through seven innings.

But Jeff Ronk walked to lead off the eighth and Colburn tagged a 3-1 pitch from Heaton over the 370-foot mark in left-center.

"All I was thinking when I was going up to bat was this might be my last time up in college ball," Colburn said.

The Golden Bears pushed across the winning run in the next inning. Rob Jessen led off with a single and pinchrunner Mike Buggs was sacrificed. Buggs then scored with the help of two errors.

Third baseman Mike Pagliarulo couldn't handle Brackenridge's sharp grounder and Buggs broke for third. Shortstop Ross Jones picked up the loose ball and tried to throw out Buggs, but the ball glanced off the runner's helmet and into the Cal dugout, allowing Buggs to score.

Miami took a 3-1 lead on a run-scoring single by Matt Tyner in the first, an RBI single by Jones in the third and Tony Barguin's run-producing triple in the seventh. Colburn drove in a run with a sacrifice fly in the first.

Mitch Hawley, 6-3, got the victory with 21-3 innings of relief.

"We just didn't hit. It's a heckuva way to end the season," said Miami Coach Ron Fraser.

Brett Sparks Royals Past Yankees

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

George Brett just wants to be remembered as a guy who always hustles, while the New York Yankees must be looking forward to the time when they can remember him as an ex-player.

"I'd like to be remembered as a guy who played hard all the time," Brett said after he drove in four runs in the Royals 9-3 victory over the Yankees Wednesday night. The all-star third baseman had seven hits, including three homers runs in as many days, and eight RBI in the three-game series between American League division leaders.

"I like to think that some day some young kid is going to come up and say, 'Look at that guy Brett. He's 38 years old and he's still playing as hard as he ever did,'" the former batting champion said.

"I would have to say he's the best hitter in the league," said Yankees Manager Dick Howser. "Every so often, one comes along like him, with great ability and great attitude. He's so good, and he keeps trying to improve."

In 13 games, Brett has boosted his average .86 points to .333.

"Everything is going well for me," said Brett. "My weight shift is good, my fundamentals are good. I'm seeing the ball good. When you're seeing the ball like I am now, you can't wait to get up. You can't wait."

"A lot of people say he's the best hitter in the American League and very few people argue with them," says Royals Manager Jim Frey. "The thing you learn from seeing every day is how hard he works and what kind of guy he is. He's a hard worker. He's always striving to get better."

Willie Wilson and Brett both had three hits for Kansas City, while U.L. Washington drove in three runs with a triple and a groundout.

Meanwhile, Rennie Martin settled down after giving up a run in each of the first three innings and cruised to his seventh victory in nine decisions with a five-hitter.

In other AL games, Milwaukee edged Baltimore 3-2, Toronto bombed California and Detroit clubbed Seattle by identical 8-2 scores, Cleveland tripped Oakland 5-3 and Chicago beat Texas 5-1 after losing the first game of the doubleheader 4-3. Boston at Minnesota was rained out.

Indians 5, A's 3

Cliff Johnson, an early season bust, had a sacrifice fly and his fifth homer and 16th RBI in the last 11 games as Cleveland defeated Oakland. Toby Harrah and Mike Hargrove also homered for the Indians and three Cleveland pitchers held the A's to six hits, with starter Dan Spillner getting the victory.

The 32-year old Johnson, who was struggling at a .179 clip on May 5, said, "Baseball is a day by day thing. You get your opportunities. I get lucky every now and then. I have a little ability and I hope to continue."

Tigers 8, Mariners 2

John Wockenfuss hit a hotly disputed three-run homer and Milt Wilcox pitched a five-hitter as Detroit ran away from Seattle. The catcher's line drive into the seats was called fair by umpire Nick Bremigan, who got an immediate argument from Mariners left fielder Dan Meyer and Manager Darrell Johnson, who was ejected from the game.

"Everybody in the ballpark knew it was foul," Johnson said. "Everybody but him. It was never even high enough to clear the screen (over the left field fence in fair territory), so the only way it could get in the seats was to go in on the foul side of the pole."

Blue Jays 8, Angels 2

Bob Davis and Otto Velez both hit two-run homers to support Jim Clancy's five-hitter as Toronto improved its record to 24-23, the latest in any season it has been over .500. Velez now has 11 homers for the Blue Jays, while Davis' blast was only the fourth in his seven-year career.

Rangers 4-1, White Sox 3-5

Richard Dotson pitched a three-hitter, including two in-field singles, and Lamar Johnson and Thad Bosley homered to give Chicago its doubleheader split with Texas. The Rangers won the opener as Richie Zisk collected three hits, including his 10th homer, and Sparky Lyle saved the victory for Doc Medich.

Johnson also homered in the first game off Medich to cut Texas' lead to 4-3 before Lyle came in to get the last four outs.

Brewers 3, Orioles 2

Eddie Murray's bad throw botched up a pickoff play, allowing Paul Molitor to go from first to third and finally score on Robin Yount's suicide squeeze bunt as Milwaukee edged Baltimore. Molitor had drawn a one-out walk in the eighth and apparently was trapped off first by Orioles pitcher Mike Flanagan, but the errant throw by Murray ruined the effort.

Ben Oglivie, the American League home run leader, hit his 14th for Milwaukee's first two runs.

Pepsi-Cola 10, Moose 1

Pepsi-Cola romped to a 10-1 victory over the Moose in the Tar Heel Little League, as Ephriam Grubbs hurled a three-hitter. Pepsi climbed to 4-5 on the year, while the Moose dipped to 1-8.

Pepsi got all it needed in the first inning, scoring twice. Clark Stallings reached on an error, and moved up on a passed ball. Fletcher Phillips singled him in, moved up on a balk and stolen base. He scored on a double by Grubbs.

Pepsi added three more in the third, one in the fourth, and four in the fifth. The lone Moose run came in the fifth.

Phillips and Bobby Sullivan each had two hits to lead Pepsi, while Tripp Andrews had two hits for the Moose.

Jaycees 4, Union Carbide 2

The Jaycees held onto a share of first place in the North

State Little League with a 4-2 victory over Union Carbide yesterday. The Jaycees are tied with the Kiwanis at 7-2, while Union Carbide is now 4-5.

The Jaycees got all four runs in the same inning, the third. Carl Willie walked and Brian Willie singled. Both moved up on a wild pitch and David Lee doubled in both of them. Curtis Perkins singled, scoring Lee, and Tyrone Jones reached on an error. A passed ball moved Perkins to third, and he scored when Michael Garris grounded out.

Union Carbide scored single runs in the fifth and sixth, the former on a homer by Morris Johnson.

Kelly Parrisher and Brian Willie each had two hits for the Jaycees, while no one had more than one for Union Carbide.

S. Pitt Little League

Ald. & S'land 5, Little Sluggers 3
WINTERVILLE — Aldridge

and Southerland rallied in the final inning to gain a 5-3 victory over the Little Sluggers in Southern Pitt Little League action yesterday.

Down 3-2 with two outs in the sixth, Leonard Bryant got the A&S rally going, starting a five-hit attack with a single. Fred Bryant then banged out a two-run double to put Aldridge & Southerland ahead, 4-3.

Jimmy Carmon led the A&S hitting with three, while Leonard Bryant had two. No one had more than one for the Sluggers, who were held to just two hits by Martin Anderson. He struck out seven and walked none.

Aldridge & Southerland is now 9-3 on the year.

Cotton Helps Carlton Concentrate On Win

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Steve Carlton shut out the crowd by stuffing cotton in his ears — then he quieted the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"It gets loud here, and it helps me concentrate," Carlton said after pitching the Philadelphia Phillies to a 4-3 victory over the Pirates Wednesday night at throbbing Three Rivers Stadium. "When the cotton's in, I can barely hear anybody."

Carlton's field expediency seems to have helped him, all right — his latest victory was No. 10 this season, tops in the majors.

Along with the noise control factor, a sizzling fastball doesn't hurt, either.

"This was the best fastball I've had all year," Carlton said after scattering seven hits.

Carlton thus has accounted for nearly half of Philadelphia's victories so far this year. The team has won 24 games overall.

In other National League action, the Montreal Expos defeated the Chicago Cubs 8-1; the St. Louis Cardinals nipped the New York Mets 1-0 in 10 innings; the Houston Astros beat the San Diego Padres 4-3; the Atlanta Braves trimmed the San Francisco Giants 7-2 and the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-4.

Pete Rose's two-run single highlighted a three-run fifth inning that helped the Phillies wipe out a 3-1 Pirate lead. Carlton struck out four and walked two, outdueling John Candelaria, 2-5.

"Carlton's been tough on me for the last two years," said Pirate slugger Dave Parker, who got one single in four trips against the Philadelphia left-hand. "This is probably one of my more successful nights. He's a tough pitcher. I have nothing but good things to say about the man. He's a phenomenal talent."

Expos 8, Cubs 1

Andre Dawson belted a three-run homer to snap a seventh-inning tie and Gary Carter followed with a solo blast to support the nine-hit pitching of Steve Rogers as Montreal defeated Chicago.

Rogers, 6-5, who walked three and struck out six, helped his own cause with a two-run single in the eighth off reliever Dick Tidrow.

"With Larry Parrish and Ellis Valentine out of there (with injuries), I feel Carter and I have to pick up the slack," said Dawson.

"I've been sort of disappointed in the total of RBI I have so far," added Dawson, who had driven in 22 runs before Wednesday night's game. "(But) I have a few goals I'd like to reach — like driving in 100 runs — and I think I still have time to do it."

Cardinals 1, Mets 0

Ken Reitz led off the 10th inning with his fourth home run of the season, leading St. Louis and veteran left-hander Jim Kaat over New York.

Kaat, 1-3, scattered seven hits in pitching his first complete game of the season and gaining his 265th lifetime victory. He walked three and struck out two.

Reitz's blast was the only hit off reliever Neil Allen, 2-4, who pitched the final three innings for New York.

Astros 4, Padres 3

Rafael Landestoy capped a three-run Houston ninth inning with an RBI single as the Astros came from behind to defeat San Diego. Loser Rolie Fingers, 5-6, was touched for singles by Enos Cabell and Dave Bergman to open the inning. Fingers wild-pitched Cabell home and a double by Alan Ashby tied the score at 3-3.

After pinch-runner Julio Gonzales took third on a fly ball by pinch-hitter Joe Morgan off reliever Bob Shirley, Landestoy singled home Gonzalez with the winning run.

Braves 7, Giants 2

Home runs by Chris Chambliss, Brian Asselstine, Bill Nahorodny and Glenn Hubbard led Atlanta past San Francisco. Rick Matula, 4-4, blanked the Giants until errors by Asselstine in left field and the pitcher contributed to a pair of unearned runs.

John Montefusco, 2-5, took the loss.

"It's about time we started hitting a few out," said Braves Manager Bobby Cox, whose club had only 22 homers in their previous 46 games. "Over the last week, we've been playing like we should be playing."

The Braves have won five of their last six games.

Reds 5, Dodgers 4

Ray Knight slugged a three-run homer and doubled and singled to lead Cincinnati over Los Angeles.

Knight slugged his sixth homer of the season to highlight a four-run third inning against loser Charlie Hough, 0-3, a last-minute starter in place of Burt Hooton, who suffered a shoulder injury warming up.

Paul Moskau, 4-0, who relieved Cincinnati starter Charlie Leibrandt in the fourth inning, earned the victory. Tom Hume, the fourth Cincinnati pitcher, recorded his eighth save.

Howard Jarvis Defiant After Defeat In California

By BOB EGELKO
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — For Howard Jarvis, what the voters gave, the voters have taken away. But the 76-year-old tax-cutter remains defiant.

As returns came in Tuesday night, showing that Proposition 9 — his plan to slash state income tax rates in half — was losing badly everywhere, he treated reporters to a strong dose of vintage Jarvis.

Opponents, he said, had run a "totally dishonest" campaign, a "con game." And he vowed to "shove it up the ears" of public employee unions, who led the No-on-9 campaign, with a new initiative cutting their jobs and pensions.

But election returns indicated the public is far less receptive to Jarvis' message than it was in 1978 in overwhelmingly passing Proposition 13, his $7 billion property tax cut.

Final returns showed Proposition 9 with only 39 percent of the vote. It lost in all 58 counties.

And an Associated Press-NBC News poll of more than 2,000 voters at polling places showed that even the homeowners, whose banner Jarvis bore in 1978, were 58 percent against Proposition 9.

Clearly the heralded California tax revolt, which was supposed to sweep the nation, has run into a roadblock.

Ralph Flynn of the California Teachers Association, one of the largest contributors to the No-on-9 campaign, on Wednesday proclaimed "a new era of hope" and called the election "the last hurrah of an aging demagogue."

Instead of letting Jarvis make the election a referendum on government waste, as he had in 1978, Proposition 9 opponents implied that Jarvis himself was turning away from the spirit of Proposition 13.

They said Proposition 9 would give more than half its annual $4 billion-plus in tax benefits to the wealthiest eighth of taxpayers.

They recruited prominent supporters of Proposition 13 as public symbols of the difference between the two measures. They even made a campaign commercial urging voters to "join the supporters of Proposition 13, vote No on 9."

While that ad, and another poking fun at Jarvis as a bogus Santa with a bag of goodies for the rich, filled airwaves in the final weeks of the campaign, Jarvis ran short of funds — and apparently of friends as well.

The colorful, name-calling style of invective that helped change an obscure, aging veteran of conservative political wars into a national symbol of the fed-up taxpayer also made enemies.

This year, when Jarvis labeled an entire county "lousy" and its government "crooked" in a profanity-filled interview with a college newspaper, there was only shocked silence, and an embarrassed appeal for an apology from a supporter — which Jarvis brushed aside.

Another time he suggested, after trading insults with a campus audience, that a female heckler belonged in a brothel.

"One of the key factors was Howard Jarvis' transformation from a folk hero to a foul-mouth in the late stages of the campaign," said Keith Hearn of the California State Employees Association, another major donor to the No-on-9 effort.

In the last week of the campaign, Jarvis confirmed reports that Butcher-Forde, the high-powered Orange County consulting firm that handles his campaigns, had tried to tone him down.

Asked in a telephone interview Wednesday whether there was any truth to opponents' claims that his image had hurt the campaign, Jarvis said, "I don't think there is much validity to it, but I think there is some."

Opponents, he conceded, ran "a very, very well-planned and a very good campaign, despite the fact that for the most part it was totally dishonest."

He said the public apparently believed the allegations that Proposition 9 was for the rich, which he denied, and that most of the elderly would get nothing from it because they pay no income taxes, which he confirmed.

The issue of the elderly was "very effective," he said. Old people, symbolized by the aging widow being forced out of her home by property taxes, were among the strongest allies of Proposition 13.

But Jarvis said he is undaunted.

"I wrote (Proposition) 13 in 1962 and it took us 16 years," he said. "... I'm the last guy in the world to walk away because of one defeat."

After the bitterness of Tuesday night, Jarvis was full of plans Wednesday — to sue one opponent or another, to get on with his next initiative, or possibly two, to regain the momentum of the tax revolt.

"All the people that voted against 9 in this election, they're going to find that they're going to have to pay through the nose for the next two or three years and they're going to be sorry," he predicted.

ONE AREA OF WILD DESTRUCTION — Overturned cars litter the parking lot of a motel complex that was destroyed Tuesday night after Grand Island, Nebraska, was hit by several tornadoes that left a large number of persons dead and injured. Several sections of the small city were struck by twisters, and the damage was extensive. (AP Laserphoto)

Governing Assembly Of Presbyterians Ended

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Officials of the United Presbyterian Church hope peace-making efforts at the denomination's nine-day governing assembly will solve conflicts over women's roles and church property that have driven some disaffected congregations to quit.

Buttressing peace-making efforts among nations also was designated as a special priority of the 2.5-million-member denomination as the assembly ended Wednesday.

"We've provided the tools to work pastorally and to seek reconciliation," said the church's presiding moderator, the Rev. Charles A. Hammond of West Lafayette, Ind.

But some congregations, motivated by "cultural conservatism," may remain disenchanted, he said, and seek to quit as others already have done over women's equality rule.

"Many more congregations may leave," predicted the Rev. Matthew J. Welde of Spring City, Pa., an influential leader among conservatives and executive director of a semi-official group, the Presbyterian Lay Committee.

A "conscientious objectors' status" for congregations not yet complying with a year-old requirement that women be included among church officers "will be helpful to some congregations, but not to others," he said.

The new provision allows regional presbyteries to grant three-year, renewable exemptions from the requirement, as long as congregations are seriously examining it and moving toward adherence.

About 1,300 of the church's 8,700 congregations have not complied. The denomination has allowed women clergy since 1966.

In another controversial matter, the assembly amended the church constitution to specify that local congregations hold property in trust for the whole church, a long-time tradition not before put into church law.

The step was taken because of a 1979 U. S. Supreme Court decision that said it would not regard uncodified church traditions in handling disputes over church property unless links to the denomination were explicit.

Once the amendment is ratified by regional units and goes into effect, it should halt the flight of congregations, said William P. Thompson, the church's chief administrative officer.

Twenty-eight congregations pulled out in the last year, most seeking to take church buildings that had been in the denomination for generations.

Because some congregations may regard the new law linking buildings to the overall church as a "tightening of controls at the administrative center," Welde said, assembly delegates directed regional presbyteries to "exercise extreme pastoral concern and care for congregations who feel alienated and wish to withdraw."

"Every effort," the assembly said, should be made "to seek reconciliation with them."

South Africa's Blacks Train To Fight Guerrillas

CYNTHIA STEVENS
Associated Press Writer
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The South African Defense Force is training black regional battalions along the borders to combat the infiltration of guerrillas determined to overthrow the white-minority government.

"The protection of our borders is the duty of everyone living in South Africa, and the strong points and bases can only contribute to better protection of our national borders against insurgents," Prime Minister P.W. Botha said in announcing the plan recently.

Blacks traditionally were given non-combatant roles. But in the past few years they have been fighting with the South African army against black nationalists in South-West Africa (Namibia), a territory administered by South Africa.

The new strategy, to be implemented first in the northeast and then around the country, is aimed at increasing black enlistments and creating centers of resistance in strategic areas near Mozambique and Zimbabwe, the former British colony of Rhodesia.

The socialist governments of both neighboring countries came to power through guerrilla movements and sympathize with blacks who want majority rule in South Africa.

The Citizen, a pro-government Johannesburg newspaper, welcomed the decision to form black combat units, noting the traditional fear — "foolish as it turned out to be" — that a black man given military training would join South Africa's enemies to overthrow the white regime.

"In the republic itself," the newspaper said in an editorial, "blacks can play a very big counter-insurgency role, just as the blacks did in Rhodesia, where 80 percent of the army and security forces were black."

The Defense Force has not issued statistics on its forces in years. But the London-based International Institute of Strategic Studies reported this year that South Africa's permanent forces consist of 6,000 whites and 2,500 black and mixed-race soldiers.

The report said the country's "total mobilizable force" of 404,500 compared favorably with the 256,820 combined military strength of Mozambique, Angola, Tanzania, Botswana, Zambia, Malawi and Zimbabwe.

Mixed-race soldiers, known here as coloreds, trace their role in the armed forces to 1700 when the Cape of Good Hope was still a small settlement ruled by the Dutch East India Company, and they were subject to the same military duties as whites. The first colored infantry battalion was formed in World War I.

South Africa has experienced a series of urban guerrilla attacks during the past year launched by members of the illegal African National Congress who received military training abroad. It is believed they generally enter the country via Mozambique and Swaziland.

The four regional battalions being trained by the army are drawn from four ethnic groups:

—The Zulus, whose KwaZulu homeland stretches northward to adjoin both Swaziland and Mozambique.

—The Shangaans, some of whom live in Gazankulu, separated from Mozambique by the Kruger National Park, a huge game reserve.

—The Swazi, who live in KaNgwane adjoining the Kingdom of Swaziland.

—The Venda, whose "independent state" is separated from Zimbabwe by a narrow strip of territory excised by the South African Defense Force.

Some observers viewed the units' composition as a logical extension of South Africa's grand racial segregation scheme to reserve urban areas for the 4.4 million whites and assign the 19 million blacks to 10 separate homelands on the basis of language.

The Defense Force has also trained the national armies of Transkei, Bophuthatswana and Venda, the three homelands already granted "independence" from South Africa. None has won international recognition or achieved economic self-sufficiency.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

I'm a mild diabetic. The doctor says I am in control of my problem. I have been forbidden to take any alcohol, even a beer. I miss it. A friend of mine who also has diabetes, worse than mine, is allowed to take a drink. I'd like your independent advice about this. — Mr. N.C., Texas.

Dear Mr. C.:

There was a time when diabetics were arbitrarily told that all liquor was absolutely forbidden. The attitude seems to have shifted somewhat. Some physicians believe that well-controlled diabetics can be permitted alcohol in moderate quantities.

It is imperative, however, that the calories in the alcohol be counted just as they are in food. It must also be recognized that the alcohol may have a tendency to suddenly drop the blood sugar level. This hypoglycemia occurs even among non-diabetic people, especially when alcohol consumption follows a period without eating.

It has definitely been shown that diabetics who are taking insulin cannot tolerate alcohol as well as those diabetics who are not. Also, cases have been reported of strange reactions when diabetics taking "oral insulin" mix it with alcohol.

I believe that each diabetic must be carefully and individually evaluated by his own physician before imbibing any alcohol. The value of good health is too great to be threatened by taking any risk. If, with your doctor's permission, you are allowed an occasional drink, you must note any unusual reactions and report them.

Californians Buy Wine, Beer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Californians are still guzzling more alcohol than other Americans — but more of it is wine and beer these days.

A State Board of Equalization report on 1979 beverage sales says residents of this Western state drank the rest of the nation by almost five gallons per person, with a per capita consumption of 31.7 gallons.

But for the first time in more than 30 years, hard liquor sales dropped while sales of beer and wine soared. The report said Californians drank 2.5 gallons of hard liquor, 24.9 gallons of beer and 4.3 gallons of wine per capita.

 Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

If the line of play you select is not a favorite to succeed, cast around to see if there is a better alternative available.

The bidding is given as it actually occurred. North's optimism cannot be justified, but he was fortunate to find South with a hand that made seven hearts a sound contract.

West led the ten of spades and declarer correctly decided to eschew the finesse. He judged that his best chance to bring home thirteen tricks was to set up the diamonds, so after winning the ace of spades, he cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond. The king of trumps and another to the queen put him in dummy for a second diamond ruff, but when the king failed to appear, the grand slam went up in smoke.

Our first principle of probabilities makes it clear that six missing cards are unlikely to divide 3-3. Even if we add in the chances of dropping a doubleton king of diamonds, we are still not up to an even money bet to establish the diamonds. And if the diamonds divide evenly, the hand would still fail against a 4-1 trump distribution.

Declarer has five tricks outside the trump suit. If he can score all eight of his trumps separately, he will secure the contract. Therefore, after winning the first trick with the ace of spades, declarer should immediately cash his three high clubs, discarding two spades from dummy. Now a spade ruff is followed by ace of diamonds and a diamond ruff. When these two low ruffs stand up, declarer continues with a high crossruff and the grand slam rolls home.

When this line of play was pointed out to the declarer, he said he was afraid of leading three rounds of clubs lest one of the opponents should ruff. For his apprehensions to be justified, the outstanding nine clubs would have to split 7-2. You don't need advanced mathematics to tell you that that possibility is extremely remote.

Something More Than A Turner Folly

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — To the casual viewer, the significance of the event may have been obscured by the flamboyance of its promoter. But, be certain, the beginning of the Cable News Network last weekend was something much more than a crazy, expensive Ted Turner folly.

That hurried inaugural broadcast of the first 24-hour news network was the birth of a touchstone of the new communications age. CNN may well be followed in its mission by three more familiar names — ABC, CBS and NBC.

Turner, the Atlanta yachtsman-sportsman-financier who likes to take chances, figures that his all-news network will be joined by the three major commercial networks in 15 years or less.

In fact, says CNN President Reese Schonfeld, one of CNN's worries is that it didn't start soon enough. "We've got to have a budget of $200 million or so in eight to 12 years, when the networks (become news services)," says Schonfeld. "I believe that there will be four news services — the three networks, and us."

It may be difficult to picture ABC, NBC and CBS without sitcoms and soaps, but as entertainment programming gets more expensive and as alternatives (such as cable, satellite, home video) multiply, networks figure to follow Turner's lead. Consider the words of William Leonard, president of CBS News (as quoted in the recent DuPont-Columbia University survey of broadcasting):

"I suspect that we will be in the 24-hour news business in television. Maybe there'll be four basic broadcasts a day — the morning news, the afternoon news, the evening news and the late-night news, repeated in half-hour or hour cycles — or updated constantly throughout these cycles..."

That the major commercial networks are gearing up for the switch to all-news was suggested by NBC President Fred Silverman a year ago. "At NBC," he told affiliates, "we think the most important long-term changes we can make will be in the area of news... It is the most exciting challenge we face and the one, I believe, that is going to change the face of television."

At times, last Sunday's first CNN broadcast from Atlanta seemed less a milestone in communications than an eccentric's extravagant indulgence. A local preacher offered an invocation that praised Turner as "the epitome of our Saviour in so many ways..."

Later, one of Turner's reporters interviewed Turner's mother: "What's it like being Ted Turner's mom?" "It's wonderful."

Trudeau, Jane Pauley To Wed

NEW YORK (AP) — Garry Trudeau, who turned a cartoon depiction of college life into a comic strip read by presidents, is getting married to a host of the "Today" show.

Trudeau, author of "Doonesbury," and Jane Pauley will tie the knot June 14, according to sources.

The 31-year-old cartoonist won a Pulitzer Prize in 1975 for the daily comic strip, which he began as an undergraduate at Yale University. It is now in its 10th year of syndication.

But then CNN got serious and cut to Fort Wayne, Ind., for a detailed report on wounded civil rights leader Vernon Jordan and a live news conference by President Carter. Later, CNN correspondents Daniel Schorr and George Watson conducted a lengthy interview with the president.

The historic launching was relatively smooth, but the sail will be rough in the early going. Turner had estimated that 8 million cable viewers were necessary to begin operations; on opening day, CNN had 2.5 million.

Turner figures CNN will lose $2 million a month for the first 18 months, and won't make it into the black for three years. Turner has already spent $40 million on the project.

While CNN has lined up 17 national advertisers (including a $25 million, 10-year deal with Bristol-Myers), many of the commercial spots in the early going went unsold. Turner trusts that will change.

He believes that cable systems will not be able to pass on CNN once they've seen the service. And his price is attractive — 15 cents per subscriber, plus two minutes per hour which the cable system can sell locally.

By contrast, the all-sports cable network, ESPN, sells for 50 cents per subscriber.

CNN's primary news program is a two-hour evening show from Atlanta, which is fed reports from the network's seven other bureaus and from commercial stations around the country (in an exchange deal). CNN also offers a wide range of news features and commentary, employing Joyce Brothers, columnists Rowland Evans and Robert Novak, critic Kevin Sanders, Sen. Barry Goldwater, Ralph Nader and others.

And, CNN will provide coverage of this summer's political conventions.

In a sense, CNN is a test of the New Television, which promises to revolutionize the entertainment-and-information monolith created by ABC, NBC and CBS. If it works, you can be sure, imitations will follow.

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Cancer insurance frequently is sold to people who do not realize that the policies don't cover many medical costs caused by the disease, a government study said today.

The study, done for the National Credit Union Administration Board, joins others in criticizing cancer policies and the way they are sold. The board may use it as justification for a crackdown on federal credit unions that encourage their members to buy the policies.

"We estimate, on the basis of 45 case histories, that cancer insurance will pay at most 29 percent of the cost of a cancer for the first three years of the disease," the report said.

Discussing the complicated clauses that limit what cancer policies cover, the report said, "Except for those who are experts on cancer, literacy is probably not enough to understand these limitations."

The report by Abt Associates, Inc., of Cambridge, Mass., said some policies are written to cover only cancer confirmed through microscopic examination of tissue or blood cells. However, it said, "Some 10 percent of cancers are not so diagnosed, even by autopsy, and are thus uncovered."

"In some cases, particularly where obtaining a tissue sample imposes pain and risk to the patient, the doctor is content to rely on clinical evidence. The insurance company, however, expressly rejects diagnoses on clinical evidence," the report said.

The report said the policies also can cover only treatment, thereby excluding costly medical tests and rehabilitation after surgery. Clauses limiting coverage to $50 a day for hospital stays do not come close to meeting the charges at many hospitals, it said.

Jim Barr, vice president of the National Credit Union Administration, said, "We don't endorse cancer insurance, but some of our (state) leagues do. We are looking at the question."

Asked about possible regulation by the administration, he said, "We wouldn't care for that."

The Health Insurance Association of America, which represents companies selling health insurance, said in a statement: "We can damn any and all unethical sales practices. We have spoken out against them in the past and have been working with the National Association of Insurance Commissioners to resolve problems that exist in the selling of dread disease policies, which constitute less than 2 percent of the health insurance market."

The policies and tactics used in selling them have been widely criticized by consumer groups, congressional panels and others. The House Committee on Aging reported in March that some cancer insurance "is close to being a worthless product."

Burroughs Wellcome Co. announced that construction will begin here this month on a 60,000 square foot Engineering Facilities Building. The company said that the three-story building, equipped with energy-efficient features, will be located on the north side of the manufacturing facility and will be connected to the utilities building.

The new structure will house Plant Facilities and Services, shops and offices for the Engineering Division, it was noted.

According to Burroughs Wellcome, construction of the building, designed by Lockwood Greene Engineers Inc., headquartered in New York City, is expected to be completed in one year. Miller Building Corp. of Wilmington has been awarded the construction contract.

The new building, according to Dr. Gabriel Cipau, vice president of production and engineering for the pharmaceutical company, will allow consolidation of several departments in one area, providing more effective use of space.

Would Reduce VEPCO Appeal

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Virginia Electric & Power Co.'s request for a $77.1 million rate increase will be trimmed nearly $5 million if a recommendation by the staff of the State Corporation Commission is followed.

The staff report released Wednesday said Vepco was attempting to recover $3.3 million in higher fuel costs incurred when its Surry nuclear unit No. 2 was out of operation for 9½ days in November 1977.

However, the SCC ruled last year that Vepco's stockholders and not its customers should bear those costs, and the commission ordered the utility to return the $3.3 million to its ratepayers.

Vepco has returned most of the money through lower fuel charges, but it would be recovered again if the company's full rate increase request were granted, the staff report said.

"The purpose of this adjustment is to preclude this from occurring," the report said.

An SCC hearing examiner will consider the request

Monday, but a decision is not expected before the end of June.

Vepco said the increase was needed to cover inflationary costs and provide a fair rate of return for its investors. The utility had asked that the increase take effect June 1.

If the staff recommendations are approved by the SCC, the average monthly bill of a Vepco customer using 1,000 kilowatts of electricity a month will increase at least $3.

If the full $77.1 million is awarded, it would increase the monthly winter bill for an average Vepco customer in Virginia to $66.60 from $63.27 and the summer bill to $72.96 from $69.63.

A number of minor but unspecified adjustments accounted for the remaining $1.5 million which the staff recommended deleting from the overall Vepco request.

Vepco won an $18.1 million rate increase from the SCC in mid-March and a $146 million increase in April 1979.

Fed Fighting On 2 Fronts

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORP.

The Federal Reserve System is once again in the hot seat, trying to fight a high rate of inflation and a deepening recession at the same time.

The Fed, even to the most liberal member, believes that its current policy of gradually slowing the growth of money and credit will prove adequate through a "moderate" recession.

But the recent sharp decline in interest rates and the reduction of the discount rate are read by some as signals that the Fed is easing its policy. Federal Reserve officials claim they are doing what they said they would do — concentrate on the money supply and let interest rates fluctuate as they will. They say that reduced demand for money has caused the decline in interest rates.

Money supply growth targets for this year are 3 1/2-6%, and these targets are not likely to change. Federal funds rates are likely to fall in line with market rates and the Fed will continue to supply reserves to the banking system.

Bolstering confidence at the Fed in its plan is that it seems economic activity dropping sharply for a couple of months and then plateauing. If the recession is about average by post-war standards, the Fed believes there are several factors which would allow them to continue their program of moderation.

First, interest rates should continue to decline and that would relieve Congressional pressure for Fed economic stimulation. Credit restraints imposed in mid-March can be eliminated as the recession deepens and credit demands return to normal.

Finally, the U.S. balance of payments position should improve in the coming year relative to other countries. This would help strengthen the dollar and eliminate the need for the Fed to tighten the money supply as a dollar strengthening tool. If the dollar needed support, it could be accomplished through currency operations rather than money supply tightening in the midst of a recession.

History shows, however, that most Federal Reserve Board mistakes have not been early or in the middle of recession. Rather, they have been early in the recovery phase, in providing too much stimulus which in turn severely aggravates inflation. The chairman of the Federal Reserve is aware of that, and appears bound not to let it happen again.

Nominated By Lowest Turnout

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Sen. Ed Renfrow of Smithfield won the Democratic nomination for state auditor Tuesday with the lowest voter turnout in state election history.

State Elections Board Chairman Alex Brock estimated that about 10 percent of the state's 1.8 million registered Democrats voted in the runoff.

Renfrow received about 62.3 percent of the votes while his opponent, former Maxton Mayor William Chestnut, received 37.7 percent.

But Brock said the election cost between $1.84 and $2.10 per vote, totaling between $350,000 and $400,000.

Brazil's Alcohol Cars Delayed

By PETER EISNER
Associated Press Writer

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Brazil's pioneer program to run millions of cars on home-grown sugar cane alcohol is running into obstacles caused by labor trouble, industry delays and people who would rather drink the stuff than fill their tanks with it.

Government officials acknowledge there will be delays of up to three years in the goal of having two million alcohol-powered cars on the road by 1985. The state-controlled Petrosbras oil monopoly has begun exporting alcohol fuel because of low domestic demand and to take advantage of the high market price of up to $60 a barrel — almost two times the current price of oil.

At the same time, the 474 service stations authorized to sell pure alcohol have a glut of supplies. The Ministry of Industry and Commerce says it has information that some people are filling their gas-run engines with pure alcohol to take advantage of the government-subsidized price — about $1.45 a gallon as opposed to $2.25 for regular gas.

That may seem like a good deal for a while, a ministry spokesman said, "but gas cars aren't designed to run on alcohol. Lots of things will go wrong with the engines."

Other people have been tapping the pumps to make a rum-like beverage called cachaca, Brazil's favorite alcoholic drink. The government says it is solving that problem by adding about 3 percent gas to its alcohol to make the sugar-cane fuel poisonous. "If anybody drinks it that way, they'll explode," said the ministry spokesman.

All gasoline sold in Brazil is mixed with up to 20 percent alcohol. Technicians say mixtures higher than that corrode engine parts in cars designed to run on gas.

The trouble with the alcohol program in this nation of 123 million developed in April, just after the government authorized the sale of alcohol cars to the general public. Before that, only taxi drivers and government fleets could buy alcohol cars.

Brazil's major automakers — Volkswagen, Fiat, Ford, Chrysler and General Motors — were hit by a six-week metalworkers strike that halted production lines.

"The strike came exactly at the time when we were gearing up to start commercial sales," said Marcos de Lima Fernandes, executive secretary of the government's National Executive Commission on Alcohol. "It hit at the most critical point in the program," he said.

Even so, Fernandes says he is optimistic about the alcohol program, although the production goals will be moved up from 1985 to 1988. By then, the government hopes to substitute 20 percent of the country's

1.2-million-barrel daily consumption of oil with alcohol distilled from the nation's vast sugar cane crop, the world's largest, which this year is expected to reach 6.8 million metric tons.

Fernandes says that despite the metalworkers' strike, Brazil will produce 200,000 alcohol-powered cars this year, 80 percent of its goal. Ministry sources, however, say they would be surprised if 100,000 cars are produced. No more than 15,000 alcohol-powered cars are on the road now, according to government and industry sources.

Officials say they will take necessary steps to insure the success of the program, which has attracted international attention. Brazil says alcohol is a key link in its economic program designed to cut a foreign oil bill that may exceed $10 billion this year.

The government has been trying to spur sales of alcohol cars by promising to keep the price low at the pump and by forcing car manufacturers to sell the new vehicles for the same price as cars with conventional engines. Car prices start at a minimum of $3,400.

Some officials claim that industry leaders are using the strike problem as an excuse to avoid the extra expense of making alcohol cars. That, in turn, officials say, creates a lack of confidence among consumer and leads to oversupplies of alcohol at the pumps.

"These are all problems in adjustment during the initial phase of the program," Fernandes said. "Every new program has its problems in the beginning. But our goals will be met."

Bert Parks To MC Pageant

NEW YORK (AP) — This year's beauty contests won't go on without Bert Parks after all.

Parks, who was ditched by the Miss America Pageant after 25 years of "There She Is, Miss America," has signed on as master of ceremonies for the Miss Young International contest.

Parks announced Tuesday he had signed a seven-year contract, at a fee he would not disclose, to host the contest for young women aged 15 to 20.

The 65-year-old Parks said he had refused a number of other offers to emcee beauty contests but was "delighted with the international quality" of Miss Young International.

He said being dropped from Miss America was a blessing in disguise, giving him a chance to do plays and movies.

Outdated Maps Being Recycled

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — Don't be surprised if a map of Long Island, N.Y., or Marblehead, Mass., turns up inside a government letter.

With an eye on paper conservation, the U.S. Geological Survey is making envelopes from its old maps. They are cut, folded and the government address is printed at an envelope company here.

The firm has filled an order for 50,000 envelopes, and is working on a second batch of 30,000. They are used for general correspondence.

"It's kind of a pleasant surprise to see the government conserving paper," said Dalton Miller, the firm's vice president. "As a taxpayer, I'm delighted."
