Opposes Sanctions Action Clark Urges 'Apology' To Iran

By JEFFREY ULBRICH
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — Former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark urged the United States to apologize for past actions in Iran and said he is not bothered by criticism or possible prosecution for traveling to Iran in defiance of a presidential ban.

"I love my country too much not to confess" alleged American crimes in Iran, Clark said Sunday in a television interview. "We owe the Iranian people a lot. We owe them an apology. We have supported the (deposed) shah and he has brutalized them and he has caused the deaths of many of them."

Clark recommended the United States "let things cool off" instead of pushing economic sanctions aimed at pressuring Iran into releasing the 53 American hostages, now in their 219th day of captivity. He predicted sanctions would drive

Iran closer to the Soviet Union.

Clark arrived in Paris Sunday by Clark to Hanoi during the Vietnam war. He and nine other Americans attended a "Crimes of America" conference last week. All 10 face possible 10-year prison terms and fines of $50,000 each for violating President Carter's ban on travel to Iran.

Asked about the possible prosecution, Clark said, "The fine doesn't bother me, I don't have it, and I hope a jail term wouldn't bother either."

"My defense will be that America is founded on freedoms," Clark told interviewers on the ABC-News program "Issues and Answers."

Asked how he felt about being called a "traitor" in the United States, Clark said he was just trying "to make my country just."

Republican Sen. John Tower said in a television interview Sunday that Clark's trip to Tehran was

"seditious" and fell into the same category as an earlier trip by Clark to Hanoi during the Vietnam war.

But Secretary of State Edmund Muskie told television interviewers he would be willing to meet with the 10 Americans "if any of them think they have useful information to impart."

Clark acknowledged that the presence of the Americans at the anti-American conference in Tehran did not produce any concrete moves toward the immediate release of the hostages.

"I wasn't expecting any miracles," he said. "We went there believing it was impossible to do anything immediately on the hostages."

However, another member of the delegation said the Americans went to Tehran "seeking a quick solution to a crisis that threatens world peace."

John Tudor Walsh, the Baptist chaplain at Princeton University, spoke at a news conference after he arrived in New York along with Kay Camp, president of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

Three other delegates flew to Boston and said acknowledgment by U.S. officials of past intervention in Iranian affairs is a necessary step toward the release of the hostages.

The three were Mary Anderson, an economics lecturer at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a representative of the American Society of Friends; George Wald, Harvard professor emeritus and winner of the 1967 Nobel Prize in physiology and the Rev. Charles Kimball, a minister studying at Harvard.

Three other members of the delegation returned to New York Friday, and the 10th American, John Gerassi of New York, remained in London after becoming ill. Clark, who was President Lyndon Johnson's attorney general from 1967-69, said he planned to stay in Paris for "a couple of days" before returning to the United States. In Iran, meanwhile, Tehran Radio broadcast a

Foreign Ministry denial of a report in a Pakistani newspaper that the three Americans held at the ministry would be released in the next few days.

Israel Looks For New Palestinian Infiltration Bids

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel's chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan, warned today that Palestinian guerrillas are likely to step up infiltration attempts from Jordanian territory.

Israeli explosives experts, meanwhile, exploded a parcel-bomb left in the bus station in Ramle, 10 miles southeast of Tel Aviv. No injuries or damage were reported, and no other details were immediately available.

"The terrorists have continuously tried to turn Jordan into a passage to Israel," Eytan told the Yediot Aharonot newspaper. "Now it's definitely possible they will make more attempts."

Eytan said that there had been five attempted infiltrations from Jordan since January 1979, including one Saturday in which an Israeli patrol chased a three-man squad back into Jordanian territory and killed two guerrillas.

"The fact is that it's possible to cross from Jordan into Israel with or without the permission of Jordanian authorities," he was quoted as saying.

Eytan also said that Jordan, Syria, Iraq and Saudi Arabia were rapidly extending their military arsenals.

"In Saudi Arabia they're building this monstrous thing in Tabuk, whose size we didn't imagine," he said, speaking of a new Saudi air base only 150 miles from Eilat in southern Israel.

On Sunday, Israel's Cabinet rejected a U.N. Security Council call to withdraw from the West Bank of the Jordan and other occupied territories, and President Carter sent a letter to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat offering a plan for resuming the stalled Palestinian talks.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Interior Minister Yosef Burg, who has led the Israeli autonomy talks delegation, may go to Washington this week to discuss a date for resuming the negotiations. But Begin refused to say if Burg had an invitation from Carter.

Following the Israeli Cabinet meeting that rejected the U.N. resolution to vacate occupied Arab land, Begin told reporters, "It is our duty to make clear that Wsrail will simply never do this."

The U.N. measure, approved Friday, condemned Israel for failing to provide enough security to ward off assassination attempts against three Arab mayors on the West Bank of the Jordan River June 2.

It also called for Israeli withdrawal from territories seized during the 1967 Mideast war "including Jerusalem," the West Bank, Golan Heights, and Gaza Strip.

Six Israeli extremist groups have claimed responsibility for the West Bank attacks, fueling speculation that militant Jewish settlers have set up an underground army to retaliate for past Arab attacks against Israel.

Carter's message to Sadat was announced by State Department spokesman David Passage, who said it "represents the current views from President Carter on what is needed in order to get the autonomy talks moving again."

"We're hopeful that perhaps within the next week or so it will be possible to have a session which would involve the three countries."

The Egyptian-Israeli talks were supposed to produce an autonomy plan by May 26. Shortly before the autonomy deadline, Sadat suspended the talks because of what he called a "dismal political atmosphere" created by Israel in its refusal to discuss the status of Arab East Jerusalem.

Sadat also criticized what he called Israeli determination to maintain control of security matters in the West Bank, home to 1.2 million Palestinians. Since then, Sadat has repeatedly called on the United States to find a formula for their renewal.

Carter is known to want the talks to make progress, partly to head off a European initiative on the Mideast which is expected to be made public later this week at a Common Market foreign ministers meeting in Venice.

Sources in various European capitals have said the ministers will publicly declare recognition of Palestinian rights to self-determination, which Carter feels will complicate the U.S.-sponsored peace process. "Self-determination" is a euphemism for Palestinian statehood.

OPEC Price Compromise Chances Believed Remote

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries appeared deeply divided as formal talks began today on a price compromise that would substantially raise the world's oil bill and increase U.S. gasoline and heating oil costs more than 7 cents a gallon.

Key ministers said they thought the plan would fail. Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani told reporters he was "very pessimistic" about chances of reaching an agreement at the conference. Conference sources said the Saudis were opposing the deal in hopes that supply and demand forces on the world oil markets would force the "hawks" to accept lower prices later this year.

Iranian Oil Minister Ali Akbar Moinefar also said he was "sure" no agreement would be reached.

Sources said world oil prices likely would remain about the same if the meeting failed to produce a new accord among the 13-member nations. If the compromise price is accepted, it would boost the average OPEC price by nearly 5 percent.

Iraqi Oil Minister Tayeb Abdel-Karim said Sunday he would propose that all OPEC nations charge $32 a barrel. Agreement on that price would mean hawks would have to drop their prices $3, middle-of-the-roaders raise theirs $2 and the Saudis increase theirs $4.

Industry analysts said the deal would add about 7.5 cents a gallon to U.S. gasoline and heating oil prices and boost OPEC's oil income by about $15 billion a year from $315 billion.

The compromise's overall effect would be an average price increase because countries raising prices produce a larger volume of oil than countries lowering them. Prices range now from $28 charged by Saudi Arabia to $38.21 charged by Algeria. The Saudis produce 9.5 million barrels a day, or about a-third of OPEC's total.

Some OPEC militants, including Algeria, Libya and Nigeria, declined to say whether they would lower prices to reach a compromise, and Moinefar, the Iranian minister, said "there was no way" Iran would cut its price by $3-a-barrel, from $35, to achieve unity.

Yamani recently predicted that oil prices will "collapse" by the fall because of reduced demand caused in part by the U.S. recession, which has cut into economic activity and therefore the need for oil.

"We should avoid a flooding of the market with oil," Algerian President Chadli Benjedid said in an opening speech to delegates.

Said Moinefar: "The glut is in the hands of the producing countries."

Iran has already had trouble selling its oil, which is priced $7 a barrel higher than Saudi crude even though the quality is virtually identical.

The proposed compromise would reunify OPEC oil prices because similar crudes would have similar prices.

Some OPEC militants added surcharges on top of previously fixed prices to create the current disarray inside OPEC.

Arguments To Jury Begun In Trial Of Ross

Lawyers' arguments to the jury began this morning in the case of suspended Greenville Police sergeant Douglas Ross, on trial in Pitt County Superior Court on drug law violation charges.

Judge James Strickland was expected to charge the jury this afternoon and the jury to begin deliberations.

Ross denied knowledge of any illegal activity on his property before State Bureau of Investigation agents, Greenville Police, and agents of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration raided a mobile home he owned on July 23, 1979, and confiscated four tons of marijuana.

Ross testified Friday that, "I did not see anybody come driving up to my house...I did not see anybody leaving my house at no time."

Earlier, law enforcement officers had testified that they had been watching the mobile home for several days prior to the raid, and had seen a number of out-of-state men pass Ross' home while going to and from the trailer, located 100 feet behind his house.

Officers arrested six persons, including Ross' sister-in-law, Ms. Louise Whitehurst, at the time of the raid. Ross was charged two days later.

Ms. Whitehurst, told the court that neither Ross, nor Marga Ross, her sister, knew that marijuana was being housed in the trailer. She said she told them that the mobile home would be used as storage for "machines," when she arranged to rent the trailer, and that she found out that marijuana was going to be placed there only four days before the raid.

"I thought it was book-keeping machines," Ross said, adding later that, "I thought she had met her sugar-daddy. I'm telling you the truth."

"I believe in working hard and living for the Lord."

Louis Jones of Greenville testified that he worked at Ross' home on Friday and Saturday, prior to the Monday raid. He added that he saw the windows of the trailer taped up and that he saw Ms. Whitehurst and a man at the trailer.

"I thought they were together," he noted.

Ms. Whitehurst, during her testimony, said she did not see Ross or his wife during the weekend before the raid. However, Ross said Ms. Whitehurst came to the house on Saturday and said, "that the machines hadn't come in."

Two previous attempts to dispose of the case ended in

Gasoline Costing More, Dealers Getting Less

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The men who have to post the rising prices on the nation's gasoline pumps are getting a smaller and smaller piece of the profits, an analyst of oil industry trends reports.

Dealers are selling less gas overall as consumer demand drops, and the gasoline retailers take a double loss because they have reduced their own profit margins in an attempt to stay competitive, says Dan Lundberg, publisher of the Los Angeles-based Lundberg Letter.

Lundberg said Sunday that the price of the average gallon of all grades of gasoline rose from $1.23½ May 1 to $1.23¾ June 1. But in the same month the average dealer's profit margin dropped from 11.77 cents to 11.57 cents.

It is the fifth month in succession that the average dealer has sliced his profit in order to keep pump prices lower than they would be, Lundberg said. Dealers are allowed up to 16.1 cents profit margin and that is scheduled to increase to 16.8 cents June 15.

"We have the greatest glut of gasoline in any month in our history," Lundberg said of gasoline supplies available during June. The soaring stocks of gasoline result in part from the fact that "the gasoline industry doesn't know how to cope with price sensitivity," he added.

President Carter's unsuccessful attempt, blocked by Congress, to impose an additional 10 cents per gallon tax on imported gasoline, was designed in part to increase prices to the point it would discourage gasoline buying, Lundberg noted.

But Lundberg said: "We already have such a price sensitivity that we have an enormous glut."

Why are oil companies continuing high production of gasoline in a time of sharply reduced demand? It's because each refinery produces a set amount of gasoline and a set amount of heating fuel and other oil distillates from a barrel of crude oil, the Lundberg Letter said.

In order to reflect the drop in consumer demand for gasoline, the refineries also would be forced to reduce oil distillate production. And no drop in heating fuels use is anticipated. Next winter follows several winters of increased prices, conservation warnings and mandatory temperature settings.

Dear Abby

Children Are Bored Viewing Childbirth

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: As the director of Emergency Nursing Services at St. Joseph Hospital in Orange, Calif., I have seen it all, so if you aren't already sick to death of the controversy over whether children should be present in the delivery room when Mama gives birth, I submit the results of such an experiment:

"A team of doctors observed the behavior of 28 girls and 12 boys who witnessed delivery in an alternative birth center. The children ranged in age from 3 to 14; 18 children were aged 4 to 6 years, and 10 were aged 7 to 9. All youngsters were prepared in advance through books, films and childbirth education classes. Children were accompanied by a support person (other than the parents) who answered questions and provided comfort if needed.

"Two children slept through the entire process, and two others slept during their mother's labor but awakened for the delivery. During the early labor, three children played with the support person, eight watched from a distance and 25 interacted with the mother, asking questions and timing contractions.

"In the late stages of labor, eight children wandered in and out of the delivery room and three were asked to leave because they were distracting the mother, who appeared to be overly upset by their behavior.

"Of the 33 children who were in the room during delivery of the infant, 29 watched, whereas the other four showed no interest whatsoever.

"Only five children watched the delivery of the placenta. The other youngsters were preoccupied with the infant, who usually was near the mother's breast.

"Children were more conscious of the sounds and sights of labor and delivery, although most were not upset by the mother's cries. Despite curiosity about the birth process, youngsters appeared bored during labor.

"Their excitement after birth was short, and they usually resumed their normal routine as soon as the baby was born.

"The observers concluded that childbirth is an adult event and the presence of children meets the parents' rather than the siblings' needs and wishes."

KATE REEVES, R.N.

DEAR ABBY: I see so many letters in your column from women who are in love with married men and are waiting for them to get a divorce. Take it from a woman who wasted nine years on a married man. No matter how much he loves you and how little feeling he has for his wife, one thing will always hold them together: money!

My married lover begged me to be patient until he could work it out so we could marry. Of course, he was never able to work it out.

Married men will stall because their children "need" them, or because their wives are "emotionally unstable" or "physically ill." But if they told the truth, they would admit that they stay married because divorce is too expensive.

Abby, why do these men lie through their teeth?

NINE YEARS WASTED

DEAR WASTED: Not all men lie through their teeth. Some pay through the nose.

DEAR ABBY: We may be moving into another home soon. It's a lovely home, but one thing bothers me — a lot. The former owner had lung cancer and spent the last six years of his life in that house before he died.

I know that cancer isn't supposed to be "catching," but I can't help wondering if there isn't a possibility of contracting the disease from whatever conditions caused the cancer — perhaps within the house itself?

We must make a decision soon, so please hurry your answer.

MARYLAND READER

DEAR READER: Cancer is not contagious and your fears are groundless. However, unless you are absolutely convinced that there is no risk of pre-existing conditions, you'd be wise to find another house.

(Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Being Safe Can Add To Fun

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Here's a safety refresher course to help you avoid the friendly neighborhood hospital — or mortuary — while seeking summer fun.

Or while cutting grass, chasing butterflies in unfamiliar places, slaving over the cookout grill, sawing trees, and pursuing other potentially dangerous chores and pleasures.

Things to avoid:
—Being beamed by a ball or frisbee, burned by the sun or cookout, pricked or tuckered by the heat, poisoned by the ivy or potato salad.

—Or smashed in the skull when jettisoned by a bike (wear a head protector), cracked up by falls when on rollerskates, skateboards or pogo stick (don helmets, arm, shin and knee pads), or drowned — as some 8,000 were last year, half in June, July, August.

The first rule of personal drowning prevention: know how to swim. The second rule: Keep Coast Guard-approved life vests on little kids and other non-swimmers on boats and when they're around deep water — even the backyard pool.

Also: easy on the horseplay around water.

A general all-round good rule: don't mix booze of any great quantity — enough to make you tipsy — with swimming, driving, operating motorized equipment such as chainsaws, powermowers, or even while carrying on as a cookout chef.

You know that driving a car under the influence kills thousands a year. Drivers total themselves as well as their cars. They total innocents, too — pedestrians and other drivers hit by out-of-control cars.

But did you know: about 40 percent of adults who drowned last year were drunk before they slipped away in the sea, lake, river, public or backyard pool?

After too much booze, carelessness rates right up there on the accident-cause list. People forget about safety. They do dumb things and get hurt or killed.

Accident prevention experts from the American Medical Association, National Safety Council, the National Society to Prevent Blindness and other sources say so.

Carelessness means not thinking. Here's an example:

Joe Goodtime at the grill on the patio notices the charcoal needs a boost. He picks up the can of fire starter, never missing a beat in the joke he is telling the cookout crowd.

He presses the can in at the sides and out squirts the fire starting liquid. At once heat from the charcoal gets on the stream and rides it back into the can held by Joe, igniting contents.

Joe jumps when the flames sear his skin. He screams, of course. And writhes in pain. But there's no relief until the ambulance gets him to the hospital — where he's admitted.

Consider powermower accidents. An estimated 70,000 digits — fingers and toes — are lost each year when dumb things happen: A mower is pulled over the bare feet of an operator. A toe or two is lost because the operator didn't have on sturdy shoes — as advised by safety experts. Or the operator broke some other safety rule.

Eye injuries from stray tennis, squash and racquet balls are soaring, doubling since 1973. Safety experts say the main thing to keep in mind if you want to prevent injuries — 4,000 and up a year — is remembering to wear special protective eyewear.

Players may not like the way they look in such glasses. But here's something to think about; the smaller the ball, the greater the potential to injure the eye.

A seemingly benign tennis ball, large compared to a racquet ball, speeds across the court at 100-miles-an-hour or more! If your eye socket stops that, you'll think you're at a planetarium.

The Art of Carpeting & Decor

by Larry C. Whitlow

A rug can be the center of your decorating efforts or a subdued backdrop. Area rugs are gaining in popularity and can be used to fill odd spaces. They are often placed on top of unpattered wall to wall carpeting or used to emphasize a special area or motif. If the rug is truly extraordinary, consider arranging furniture around it rather than on it. Give added emphasis to a piece of furniture by placing it squarely on an area rug that suits its size. Coordinate furnishings to bring out the best in the rug.

There is a wide selection of area carpets, as well as to wall, on display at our place, LARRY'S CARPETLAND INC., 3010 E. 10th St., 758-2300. Couristan and Calloway area rugs are handled, and we have a Shop At Home Service. There is also a fantastic selection of Oriental rugs available. Hours: Mon. thru Fri. 9 a.m.-5:30 p.m.; Closed Sat. thru August. Have a nice Father's Day.

DECORATING TIP: A brightly colored or highly decorative rug calls for subdued patterns and colors in the rest of the room.

The sheer lace bishop sleeves were cuffed in scalloped chantilly lace.

The waistline was encircled with miniature Venise lace with a white satin bow with streamers at center back. The modified full A-line skirt and attached chapel-length train of lace bordered in scalloped chantilly lace were accentuated by an underskirt of sheer organza, also edged in the scalloped lace.

She wore a fingertip-length veil of illusion bordered in chantilly lace, held in place by a Camelot cap overlaid in the matching lace beaded with pearls. Motifs of lace were scattered over the veil.

Tommy Johnson of Raleigh served as best man. Groomsmen included Christopher Brown of Goldsboro; John Corey of Greenville; and Melvin Barnes and Ronnie Staton both of Farmville.

Children assisting in the wedding were Tara Lyndette Tripp, flower girl, and Jeff Christopher Isler, nephew of the bride, ring bearer.

The maid of honor wore a formal-length gown of yellow floral bridal crepe. The waistline was accentuated with a wide double wrapped sash that tied into a bow at center back and flowed down the modified full A-line skirt. The round neckline was enhanced by a full circle cape that covered the sleeveless bodice. The bridesmaids wore identical solid yellow gowns. They carried white mums accentuated with yellow streamers.

The flower girl wore a yellow gown accented by lace and ruffles. The gathered full skirt was tied at waistline with a back sash. She carried a basket of mixed yellow and white flower petals.

A reception was held in the church following the ceremony. Mrs. Mary Newton cut the cake and Mrs. Betty Jean Joyner poured the punch. Willie Pearl Isler, sister of the bride, presided at the guest register.

After a wedding trip to the North Carolina mountains, the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of Farmville Central High School and Pitt Community College and is now employed at Mack's Variety Store in Farmville.

The groom is a graduate of Greene Central High School and is now employed by the Greene County Board of Education.

Dodge-Moore Wedding Held

NEW MARKET, Va. — Dorenda Kaye Moore of Rt. 1, New Market, Va., and William Baldwin Dodge III of Waynesboro, Va., exchanged wedding vows Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Seventh-day Adventist Church here. Elder Vel Kotter officiated at the ceremony.

A program of wedding music was performed by Jerry Taylor, organist, and Albion L. Moore, father of the bride, and Sarah Jane Liers, soloists, who sang "Eternal Life."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albion L. Moore of Rt. 1, Greenville, N. C. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Baldwin Dodge Jr. of Waynesboro.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a traditional floor length gown of white peau de soie designed with an empire bodice. The dress featured a jewel neckline, straight skirt and long sheer sleeves gathered at the cuffs. A circular train was fastened at the waistline with a peau bow trimmed by bridal pearls. Scattered appliques of re-embroidered alencon lace with brilliants accented the train. Her flowers were white tatted flowers and apricot silk flowers. The veil of white illusion on a white lace and seed pearl cap was designed by the bridegroom's mother.

Patricia Foster of Eatonton, Ga., was matron of honor and bridesmaids included Charlotte Moore of Greenville, N. C., sister-in-law of the bride, and Mary Dodge of Waynesboro, Va., sister of the bridegroom. They wore apricot voile gowns printed with apricot, brown and green flowers with a gathered waistline. a ruffled hem and ruffled collar and sleeve combinations. The flowers were combination of tatted white flowers and apricot silk flowers.

Tonya Williams of New Market, Va., was flower girl. She wore a gown similar to the bridal attendants' gowns. She carried a basket with apricot colored carnation petals.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Ray Moore of Greenville, brother of the bride, and Jim Smith of Ft. Myers, Fla., cousin of the bridegroom.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. Hostesses were Clarice White, Mrs. Kathleen Riley and Mrs. Beverly Williams. Greeting guests and presiding at the register was Amos Tyson, cousin of the bride.

Miss Jane Geray, cousin of the bride, directed the wedding.

After a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will live in Waynesboro, Va.

The bride graduated from Andrews University and has done graduate work at ECU. She taught as Shenandoah Valley Academy, New Market, Va. The bridegroom graduated with a Ph.D. in chemistry from the University of Virginia and is a chemist with the Dupont Co., Waynesboro.

How much good are sunglasses? In grandma's day they were unheard of. Today, however, they are regarded as a normal and even a necessary part of every day life. In addition to being a fashion accessory and complementing a facial shape, sunglasses provide comfort. They keep squinting and tired eyelids at a minimum. They protect the eye against excessive glare, especially in winter snows and on sunny beaches. Sunglasses also protect the eyes from flying particles, dust and windburn. There is no need to apologize to Grandma after all.

Sunglasses, whether prescription or regular, have become quite popular. Likewise, their style is of maximum importance. At CLEAR VUE OPTICIANS, 1706 6th, Physicians Quadrangle Building A, in addition to providing the professional attention you expect to your prescription requirements, we also cater to the fashion of the moment. Stop in today and view our excellent selection of eyewear featuring the styles that are "in" for the fashions this year. Tel. 752-1446. OPTICAL TIP: Don't be satisfied with traditional shapes. Time For Leadership Virtually all experts agree now that President Carter has the delegate strength to win the Democratic nomination this summer.

The president won the needed delegates last week although his opponent, Sen. Ted Kennedy won California, New Jersey, Rhode Island, New Mexico and South Dakota.

Incredibly, Kennedy still says he is hanging in the race, which tends to re-inforce the serious reservations many people have had about his judgement.

Of course, the nomination for Carter is still not certain... nothing is until the final vote is taken. But the president's job is much easier now in that he only has to hold on to the delegate strength rather than trying to win delegate support.

But now the really difficult campaigning begins. Ronald Reagan also has the Republican nomination locked up... and Reagan represents a true alternative to a lot of disgruntled Americans.

In the eyes of many, President Carter still has not proven himself the leader the country needs. The Iranian situation has not been well handled. We have been buffeted by inflation and now, just as election approaches we face serious recession. Carter is not getting his way with Congress on a number of issues.

The president must show real leadership between now and November if he hopes to remain in office. Considering the difficult times there will be ample opportunity for President Carter to demonstrate he deserves another term.

The Home-Grown Industry

Ground was broken for a home grown industry at Williamston last week.

The firm will package goods for major pharmaceutical, toiletry and cosmetic companies.

It is unique in that it was started by two former pharmaceutical employees Wilbert Horne of Rocky Mount and Mark Rinehart of Greenville.

It is anticipated that some 200-300 people will be employed by the end of the first year of operation. This can be an excellent small industry for Martin County and we wish them the best.

Watch Cable TV

RALEIGH — Few local governmental officials, and even fewer citizens, are aware that they can have control over what they see on their television sets, and what they will get out of those hookups in future years.

areas of the community which cable firms might otherwise pass up because housing is scattered, or because of a concentration

BILL NOBLITT

Cable TV is obviously the wave of the future in home entertainment. The industry is now in a volatile period, expanding rapidly in technology, service and offerings. And the federal government has largely washed its hands of the matter, ruling that since the cable doesn't use tghre airwaves, they're free to do their own thing.

of low-income individuals, and the local laws can set firm deadlines for construction which will speed the process along the way.

But the cables have to be strung or buried on local property, and that gives city governments — and down the road, county governments, too — a strong voice in what the cable firms do.

All of these matters and more will become increasingly important to citizens as developing use of laser transmission through glass lines, satellite hookups, computer technology, and two-way communication systems become realities.

Says Grainger R. Barrett, a faculty member at the Institute of Government in Chapel Hill, cable TV can be exciting and rewarding for a community "if its leaders do their homework thoroughly, if local officials and the unit's attorney prepare an ordinance that protects the community... and if a fair agreement is reached with the cable operator. North Carolina communities should keep up with the fast-paced changes... How Cable TV develops... and how it affects them will depend in large part on decisions that local officials are now making."

Advice

To help local officials and citizens in an area where knowledge of what needs to be done is woefully lacking, the Institute of Government and the League of Municipalities are offering a wealth of technical and legal information, and Barrett adds that, "Local officials should also conduct a formal or informal survey to find out what people want and expect from cable TV."

To illustrate the problems which can arise, Barrett writes in an article in "Popular Government" magazine that one Tar Heel town recently adopted a cable ordinance as presented to it by the cable firm itself. The firm will pay no franchise fee for five years; will pay fees on only a limited portion of its income; exempted itself from local property taxes; used the franchise for a bank loan; got guaranteed renewal of an overly-long franchise term; made no promises on how soon service would be installed, or which areas of town would be

Where Are They Now?

WASHINGTON — Where are they now?

Col. Buzz Grapling, one of the planners of the Iranian rescue attempt and the one responsible for seeing that no secret U.S. documents fell into enemy hands, has been promoted to brigadier general, and put in charge of all intelligence operations in the Middle East.

Cmdr. Harold Winniger, Pentagon Intelligence specialist for Iran, who wrote a paper warning that a 48-hour rescue operation could not succeed with the number of helicopters allotted to the operation, has been reassigned to a submarine tender until his retirement papers are processed.

William Pettibone, analyst for the Treasury Department, who predicted that the recession would be mild, and plant lay-offs could be held to a minimum, has now become one of President Carter's chief economic advisors, replacing Thomas Keesler who told the White House that, once you put the brakes on the economy, there is no way to control the width and depth of the recession. The President was so angered that Keesler's figures turned out to be accurate, he failed to write him a "Dear Tom" letter.

White House aide Arlie Fromkin is now in line for a National Security Council job. Arlie was the Administration official who scoffed at CIA predictions that Castro was going to dump over 100,000 Cuban refugees in Miami. He told Mr. Carter that "boatwise" it was impossible. While Arlie may have been wrong on rejecting the information, the President said he still has total confidence in him, which is more than can be said for Jaime X., our man in Havana, who smuggled out the complete Castro refugee plan three months ago.

Roger Chaffee, the President's special envoy assigned to persuade our allies not to go to Moscow for the Olympics, has been given the Medal of Merit for his success in preventing Bermuda from sending a team. Roy Eagleberry, who told the President he was risking a major diplomatic defeat by asking the West to stay away, has been taken off the President's personal Christmas card list.

At the same time Chaffee was receiving his medal, Frances Donner was made a deputy secretary of state for successfully persuading the European Common Market to implement stringent sanctions against Iran. When President Carter proudly announced the sanctions on Frederick Cymbalist, chairman of the Magna Nuclear Construction Co., has just announced that Magna has received a $600 million government contract to repair the damage caused by one of its plants breaking down as a result of faulty design and building errors. Cymbalist said the new contract would assure another profitable year for his company.

Marty Templeton, the government lawyer who advocated that Magna do the repair work free as part of its warranty, has been transferred out of Washington and assigned to the Department of Energy's legal office in Nome, Alaska.

Dr. Fletcher Blume, who did a study for the National Academy of Science recommending that the average person double his intake of butter, cream, milk and cheese, has just been given another $750,000 grant by the Amalgamated Dairy Farmers Assn. to further his research.

Dr. Evan Taylor, who dissented with Dr. Blume's study, was refused additional funding for his work on cholesterol in the blood. The Dairy people said, "The Blume grant is not a conflict of interest as no scientist would sell his soul for a lousy $750,000. Our decision not to fund Dr. Taylor had nothing to do with the work he wanted to pursue. We turned him down for only one reason: We didn't like his wife."

Teddy Torn By Ambition

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The year's most brutal demonstration of Jimmy Carter's unpopularity has transformed Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's simple desire to salvage personal and family honor into a difficult personal choice that divides his loyal supporters into passionate camps.

Before the June 3 primaries in a heart-to-heart conversation with a close family friend, Kennedy laid bare his deepest hope: to emerge from his often humiliating pursuit of Carter with restored honor. But having humiliated President Carter with five out of eight primary victories, merely withdrawing from active battle with the family banner honorably flying is not enough.

Many of his staunchest backers want him to carry that banner right into Madison Square Garden to test the miracle machine. The senator's refusal to accept telephone calls from the president Tuesday, the sharpest snub to a president since Gen. George B. McClellan turned Abraham Lincoln away from his door in 1861, signaled his own frame of mind. Kennedy finally returned Carter's call Wednesday and agreed to an Oval Office meeting on Thursday.

Cool-headed professionals within the Kennedy camp feel the time for fighting is finished, with fratricide, not a Kennedy victory, the likely yield in Madison Square Garden. That is the view of the highly respected Rep. Paul Simon of Illinois, one of Kennedy's former Maine Democratic state chairman now running for Congress. An important party leader in Congress says privately that if Kennedy becomes vulnerable to charges of contributing to Reagan's election, "He will write himself out of his party."

Such emotions were pallid compared to the concealed fury within Jimmy Carter's White House. When word got around early Wednesday that Kennedy had declined the presidential olive branch in the form of not one but two rejected Carter telephone calls, one presidential adviser blurted out: "Teddy is a spoiled little rich kid who can't get what he wants."

Carter's aides do not intend to let Kennedy's cold shoulder edge them into public scolding — not yet, anyway. Carter has confided to congressional leaders that the senator needs time for "decompression" and "calm thought," after which he will surely see that both his own and his party's interests argue for accepting the olive branch.

But Kennedy clearly surpassed his expectations on super Tuesday, enlarging his earlier, limited ambition to rehabilitate the Kennedy name by a gallant race after his self-destructive start. If he now really believes in the impossible dream of deposing Carter, the Democratic Party may be headed for a convention rivaling 1968 and 1972 in divisive turbulence.

ALWAYS A REMEDY?

The little girl squeezed the toothpaste out of the tube and then became very frustrated when she was not able to push it back in. Adults know, of course, that there are some things which can be put back into the receptacles which originally held them, but toothpaste is not one of these. Likewise, there are many things in life which once done cannot be undone. Certain actions are irrevocable; certain mistakes can never be remedied. Mistakes made in youth sometimes haunt people throughout their lives. Decisions which have meant the breaking of a friendship or a marriage, or the loss of financial security are also in this category.

But there are remedies. The forgiveness of God lifts the burden of guilt from every wrongdoer who is constrained to sue for mercy before the throne of grace? Also, if we are fortunate, those whom we have wronged may be considerate and tolerant of weakness in others. — Elisha Douglass

Verdict Seems Already Made

By EVANS WITT
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said the other day the voters will decide whether Ronald Reagan is too old to be president.

Perhaps ominously for Carter's re-election hopes, many Americans seem to have made the decision already. Their verdict — as of now — is that Reagan's 69 years do not make him too old to be president.

Thus, the "age issue" many thought would be the biggest stumbling block to the former California governor's campaign for the White House just isn't important to the electorate.

Only about one out of four Americans — 23 percent — said they thought Reagan's age makes him less able to handle the duties of the presidency, a recent Associated Press-NBC News poll found.

But an overwhelming 70 percent said that his age makes no difference in how he would perform as the nation's chief executive.

Five percent said Reagan's age would make him a better president and 2 percent were not sure in the poll conducted May 28-30.

Reagan campaigned hard during the primaries to help push aside any concerns about his age and his ability to work hard in the Oval Office. Obviously, that effort succeeded to some degree.

Of course, in a presidential campaign that has already seen major swings in public opinion, these attitudes can change. The five months remaining until the general election might be marked by an incident that raises the "age issue" once again and makes it important in the voters' minds.

As of now, Reagan can take some comfort — and Carter face some more concern — from a deeper analysis of the poll results as well. The concern about his age is higher among Democrats than among either independents or Republicans.

Twenty-seven percent of Carter's party rank and file say Reagan is too old, while 67 percent say it makes no difference.

That compares to only 21 percent of the independents and 17 percent of the GOP who are worried about his age. Seventy-two percent of the independents and 75 percent of the Republicans said it makes no difference.

Therefore, the two groups Reagan hopes to do best among in November — his own party and the independents — are the least negative about "the age issue."

Carter might take some comfort in that a quarter of the public is worried about Reagan's age. He probably shouldn't.

As George Bush found out the hard way, that group isn't quite the foundation for success one might have thought.

And Carter may face a general election problem much like Bush did in the GOP primaries — the people who are worried about Reagan's age can split their votes between Reagan's opponents.

Carter cannot count on getting the ballots of all those voters. John Anderson's independent candidacy might draw well among that group, particularly among the 17 percent of the GOP rank and file who are worried about Reagan's age.

If the "age issue" won't work for Carter in the general election, the president's campaign staff might be thinking about the theme that worked so well for him in 1976 — trust.

In 1976, Carter the candidate said "Trust me." But he must now bid for re-election against a Republican opponent who is trusted more than he.

Only 40 percent of those questioned in the latest AP-NBC News poll said they trusted Carter a lot, while 57 percent trusted him only some.

By contrast, 48 percent of those who know about Reagan said they trust him to do what is right most of the time, versus 42 percent who expressed low trust.

Novelist Henry Miller Dies At Calif. Home

PACIFIC PALISADES, Calif. (AP) — Author Henry Miller, who admitted his novels, including "Tropic of Cancer," were obscene but stoutly denied they were pornographic, has died at his home here. He was 88.

Miller, whose popularity was partly tied to the fact that some of his novels were banned in this country for three decades, died peacefully at his home Saturday afternoon, according to his publisher, Noel Young. The author had been suffering from circulatory problems for some time, Young said.

Funeral arrangements are pending.

The author of several sexually explicit novels didn't object to being called an obscene writer.

"Obscenity, like sex, has its rightful place in literature," Miller maintained. But he was strongly opposed to pornography, which he defined as presenting sex for purely prurient purposes.

"I have no connection with slop turned out in the name of freedom," he declared a decade ago.

Born in New York City on Dec. 26, 1891, Miller attended City College of New York briefly. After an odyssey across the country working at various jobs, Miller moved to Paris in 1930 where he became part of the Bohemian colony.

"Tropic of Cancer," his best-known novel, dealt with Parisian lowlife in the '30s and was largely autobiographical. Although it was finished in 1934, it was nearly four years before a French publisher printed it and the book remained unpublished in this country until 1961.

Nevertheless, it sold millions of copies worldwide and thousands of Americans returning from Europe smuggled copies of the novel and other Miller works through customs until the U.S. ban was lifted.

"Tropic of Cancer" was called both pornography and art, depending on the critic. Poet Ezra Pound said of it: "At last, an unprintable book that's readable."

But it wasn't until 1964 that the U.S. Supreme Court ruled the book could not be constitutionally suppressed.

In the interim, an impoverished Miller returned to the United States when World War II erupted in Europe and lived a primitive existence in the Big Sur area near Monterey on the central California coast. He sold watercolors to pay his bills.

False Attack Alarms 'Traced'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon computer that sent a false alarm indicating Soviet missiles were headed for the United States was intentionally left on to see if it would happen again, officials say.

Changing moral standards finally helped bring Miller success and honors in the latter years of his life when American publishers began handling his books. Even then, the explicit sex in "Tropic of Cancer" and "Tropic of Capricorn" shocked readers across the country.

Other Miller works include "Black Spring," "Sexus," "Nexus," "Plexus," "The Cosmological Eye," and "The Colossus of Maroussi." The last volume, which is a travel book about Greece, is generally considered one of the best of its kind.

His current publisher said a book about D.H. Lawrence, which had languished since the 1930s, was reissued last month.

His writings have been credited with influencing the Beat generation and allowing more freedom in American writing.

In 1975, he was decorated with the French Legion of Honor and was a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters.

In 1972, at the age of 80, Miller summed up his feelings:

"As you come near the end, your wonder increases and maybe you get a little more sense, too, a little more wisdom. When I die, if you were to say, 'What is your last word?' I'd say, 'Mystery.'"

Miller also said: "We're all creative, we all have the urge to sing, to dance, to paint, to write — but most of us have squelched it."

It did. Now, after two false alerts in four days last week, officials say they think they know what caused the problem. The computer has been taken out of use until it is fixed.

The incidents, however, triggered warnings from the Soviet Union and some members of Britain's Parliament over the weekend that such errors, if undetected promptly, could push the world to the brink of nuclear confrontation.

But the chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, Air Force Gen. David C. Jones, said in an interview with the unofficial military newspaper Star and Stripes that the false alarms do not mean "we are trigger happy." Rather, he said, the Soviets should view them as proof "that we are ready and that we can respond in a very few minutes" to military threats.

Pentagon spokesman Thomas B. Ross said the latest malfunction happened Friday, when a computer readout indicated Soviet intercontinental ballistic missiles and submarine-launched ballistic missiles were headed for the United States — similar to a larger attack erroneously signaled by the same computer Tuesday.

The engines of some Strategic Air Command planes were started in automatic response to Friday's warning, Ross said, but the error was discovered and the alert canceled within three minutes and no planes took off.

Experts have said it would take about nine minutes for submarine-launched Soviet missiles and a half hour for ground-launched missiles fired from inside the Soviet Union to strike U.S. targets.

Another Defense Department spokesman, John Becher, said the computer had been "deliberately left on line with special equipment applied to it" after the first malfunction to try to detect the cause. One official, who asked not to be identified, described it as a technical problem.

The official Soviet news agency Tass, in a report from Washington, warned that "such 'electronic faults'...may result in too heavy a toll for the peoples of the world. If the alarm hadn't been called off, strategic nuclear missiles aimed at the Soviet Union could have been activated."

Actually, a direct order from the president is required before missiles may be fired at the Soviet Union or bombers may fly beyond a "fail-safe" point in the far north.

In London, Tam Dalyell, chairman of the opposition Labor Party's influential foreign affairs group, called the error "spine-chilling" and said, "The appalling fact that for the second time in four days computer error has caused the American war engines to be revved up should be the Number one item on the agenda of every government and every political party in the world tomorrow morning."

Ross said last week's incidents were not believed to be connected to another malfunction by the same computer last Nov. 9. That false alarm was triggered when a test tape simulating an attack was fed into the North American Air Defense Command computer and transmitted inadvertently to other military commands and federal agencies.

Saturday's Cryptoquip — VACATION TOUR IN CONVERTIBLE DEVELOPED SUPERB SUN TAN.
 Today's Cryptoquip clue: F equals T
 The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Farm Scene

 Market hogs are very susceptible to hot weather. Feed conversion generally goes up and rate of gain goes down as temperature rises.

The most rapid and economical gains are made when the temperature is between 60 degrees to 70 degrees Fahrenheit for market hogs. When the temperature goes from 80 degrees to 90 degrees F or higher, it will take approximately twice the amount of feed to put on a pound of gain, unless some method of cooling is used.

Here are some suggestions that will help keep your pigs cool and growing.
 — Wetting by any means will help lower body temperature and breathing rates.
 — Sprays or sprinklers are generally better than wallows to keep the pig cool.
 — Sprinkler systems should have one nozzle for each 15 to 20 hogs and should be approximately five to six feet from the floor.
 — Each nozzle should deliver between one to three gallons of water per hour at 35 to 40 pounds of pressure.
 — Sprinklers should be turned on when the temperature goes over 80 degrees F. A thermostat and time clock may be used to control the water, if desired. The control may be set so that the sprinklers will run three minutes out of ten or five out of fifteen and continuously when the temperature is over 95 degrees F.

Moving To Market
 Marketing hogs during the hot summer months will require extra care to prevent greater losses because of excessive shrinkage or death. "Top" hogs will shrink an additional one, two, or three percent over normal when moved in hot weather without extra attention. A three percent shrinkage on a "top" hog will amount to approximately three dollars of loss at present prices and $75 loss on a truck load of 25.

Feeder pigs will also be affected by the hot weather with higher shrinkage and death losses and should not be trucked without extra attention.

Minimum Losses
 Following are some points that will help keep losses to a minimum when moving hogs or feeder pigs in the summer months:
 — Provide suitable bedding such as sand or sawdust and keep it wet.
 — Do not overload or crowd hogs or pigs on your truck and use an open-bodied truck for summer hauling. A truck that would hold 30 market hogs for winter hauling should be cut to 20 to 25 hogs for summer months. The same would be true for feeder pigs. The money saved could more than pay for another trip.
 — Load during cooler parts of the day to help avoid overheating the hogs and try to get to market before the hottest part of the day.

— Do not leave hogs on the truck sitting in the hot sun for prolonged periods of time.
 — Avoid running or over-exercising hogs while loading and unloading.

Henry K. Later Had A Checkup

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger fell backward from his chair off a platform at St. Louis speaking engagement, then said he did it to top the previous speaker.

He picked himself up, had a glass of water and gave his talk unflustered Saturday night.

Back home in New York afterward, he went to New York Hospital for X-rays and an examination. He was released following treatment for head trauma, hospital officials said.

Hospital authorities did not discuss details of his condition or the incident, and Kissinger was not immediately available for comment.

He had been in St. Louis to address the Illinois Bankers' Association.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠KQJ95 ♠AK1072 ♠AJ10
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass

What do you bid now?
 A.—Despite the possibility of a misfit, your intermediate cards (those tens and nines) add such strength to your hand that we would not consider anything other than a jump shift to three diamonds. You cannot afford to run the risk of partner passing a simple rebid of two diamonds with a hand that could easily produce a game, or slam!

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠A982 ♠AK1073 ♠AK5 ♠5
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ 2 ♠ 2 ♠ 3 ♠

What do you bid now?
 A.—It looks as if the opponents are taking advantage of the vulnerability to be busy little bees. Small slam should be certain, but the possibilities of a grand slam must not be overlooked. We would start with a cue-bid of four diamonds. If partner shows us the ace of clubs, we would use the grand slam force. If not, we would settle for six spades.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠KJ76 ♠853 ♠KQJ6 ♠52
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 3 ♠ Dble. Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Partner almost surely has at least four spades for his takeout double of three hearts. If you bid only three spades, you are likely to play it right there. As a rule of thumb, presume that partner has about 6 points from when he makes a takeout double of a preemptive bid. If you have substantially more than that, you cannot afford a simple response—you must jump. Bid four spades.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K10982 ♠K10954 ♠A82
 The bidding has proceeded:
 East South West North
 1 ♠ 1 ♠ 2 ♠ 2 ♠
 Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Partner's two spade bid might be competitive, but he could also have the values you need to make a game. Although you have a minimum in terms of high card strength, hands with two five-card suits play very well when you have uncovered a fit in at least one, so we wouldn't blame you if you took the plunge and bid four spades. A more prudent approach, however, is to advise partner of your distribution by bidding three diamonds. Let him make the final judgment.

 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ 2 NT
 Dble. Pass Pass 3 ♠
 Pass Pass 4 ♠ Pass
 Pass 5 ♠ ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—You have already made a slight overbid when you jumped to four spades instead of simply bidding three spades. Now, paradoxically, a pass by you would be a further overbid because it would be forcing. Since your heart holding suggests two possible losers in that suit and probably one on the side, you don't want your partner to bid five spades. Warn him against further action by doubling.

 3 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass
 4 ♠ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Partner's four spade bid is a cue-bid, showing second-round spade control—it cannot be a suit, for hearts is the agreed trump suit. The only question now is the solidity of the trump suit. If partner has the ace-queen of hearts, seven hearts should be nearly laydown. That information can be gleaned by using the grand slam force—bid five no trump. If partner has two of the top three trump honors, he must jump to seven hearts.

Cutting corners on sucker control is no way to grow quality tobacco. That's why more and more growers are using Off-Shoot-T in their sucker control program. It's dependable, it's consistent and it's "top of the stalk" in quality. Because our quality control team makes sure that everything on the label is in the container.

And we don't just test it once, but all the way from raw material stages to shipping. We'd rather stop a whole shipment than risk a single tobacco plant. And that's a fact.

So, this season get America's favorite contact sucker control agent. Get Off-Shoot-T. You'll get the quality you pay for, and you'll never have to worry about chemical inconsistency. Because every shipment of Off-Shoot-T has to pass our tests, before it passes yours.

HOSPITAL BED AIRPLANE — Gregory Schwartz, 23, studies plans in his Greenwich, Conn. hospital bed for a 13-foot, 275-pound airplane he is constructing in his room. (AP Laserphoto)

Cancer Patient Turns Hospital Room Into Manufacturing Area

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — The pediatrics wing at Greenwich Hospital reverberates with the noise of riveting, hammering and drilling. Cancer patient Gregory Schwartz is building an airplane in his room.

And he plans to pilot the 13-foot-long, 275-pound airplane — if he lives long enough to finish it.

The plane is the latest in a series of projects the 23-year-old Greenwich man has taken up since he learned in 1977 that he was suffering from acute lymphocytic leukemia.

He has learned to ski so well he worked in Colorado as a ski instructor. This year he began writing free-lance science articles, getting bylines in newspapers.

Now there's the airplane, named "Cloud Cap." It is a modified version of a $4,000 kit for an aluminum craft that will be powered by a modified Volkswagen automobile engine and is supposed to have a cruising speed of 135 mph.

Because of his medical condition, Schwartz was stripped of the pilot's license he earned as a teen-ager.

"No matter what, though, I'm flying this plane when I finish it. In my stage of the game, you don't worry about rules," Schwartz said. But then he points to a bag over his bed and says, "I don't know if I'll live long enough to finish the plane. Without this blood, I'd be dead."

Schwartz does not approach his projects casually. He doesn't just intend to fly the plane, he plans to attempt a non-stop, cross-country flight with in-air refueling.

The sometimes noisy construction work that began about one month ago in Schwartz's private room has not caused any complaints.

"It may seem kind of weird, building a plane, but it's the same as any other kind of occupational therapy. You've got old ladies down the hall knitting. This is just another form of knitting. No one minds at all."

treatment soon with an experimental drug called AMSA.

"Only a few people have taken it," he said. "This is a last hope."

When the AMSA treatment is completed, Schwartz plans to leave the hospital and go flying.

"It's important that I have something to look forward to, something to keep my mind occupied."

Weekend Road Toll Is Costly

By The Associated Press

Safety statistics show that highway fatalities have decreased about 12 percent in North Carolina this year, but still 14 persons were killed in traffic accidents in the state during the weekend.

For the year, North Carolina now has recorded 553 deaths — against 617 at the same time in 1979.

Eight of the weekend deaths involved teen-agers, including four who were killed in the collision of their car and a train engine in Johnston County.

Nevertheless, the death rate has slowed, perhaps due to the cost of gasoline, to more emphasis on safety and enforcement of speed laws and perhaps more general awareness of the public to the dangers of driving.

Regardless of the reason, B.J. Campbell of the Highway Safety Research Center in Chapel Hill says continued vigilance is needed.

"As we continue the present trend to smaller cars, we've got to shift our habits to include the use of seat belts," Campbell said.

"In smaller cars there's a greater risk of injury and death, and if we don't buckle up, the declining fatality rate will go back up to where it was several years ago."

Campbell noted that, by the mid-1980s, federal standards will require automatic protection devices in all cars.

"But the bad thing is it will be almost a full decade until all cars are properly equipped with these devices. Meanwhile, one-hundred thousand people across the nation will die," Campbell said.

The car-train collision Saturday occurred near the community of Micro. The four victims — all in the car — were identified as Michael Tallent, 18, and his sister, Missy Tallent, both of Route 2, Pine Level; David Harris, 17, of Salem, Va., and Audrey Hawley, 15, of Route 1, Kenly.

A two-car collision Saturday morning near Carrboro took the lives of Otha James Pratt, 18, of Route 4, Chapel Hill; Jackie Willis, 19, of Route 2, Mebane, and Cathy Jo Dew, 22, of Carrboro.

Bobby Tilman Coleman, 24, of Route 3, Chapel Hill, was killed Sunday when his vehicle ran off a rural Chatham County road and overturned.

Rebel Chief Is Executed

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — One of the most daring leaders of Afghanistan's Moslem rebellion has been executed along with 10 aides of the late President Hafizullah Amin.

The announcement of the executions of Abdul Majid Kalakhani and the others was made Sunday by Afghanistan's Kabul Radio.

Kalakhani was responsible for organizing attacks, ambushes and defections from government forces in Bannian and Parman provinces and urban guerrilla activity in the capital of Kabul, Afghan exile sources said.

His anti-government raids began after the communists seized power in Kabul in April 1978. Tens of thousands of Soviet troops were sent into Afghanistan nearly six months ago to help fight the Moslem rebellion.

They also installed Babrak Karmal, a puppet more to Moscow's liking, to replace Amin, who was executed in a coup Dec. 27.

The 10 aides who were executed included a brother and nephew of Amin. Kabul Radio said they were convicted of murder, torture, plotting against the state and abusing Islam.

Chapters Told Pay State Jaycee Dues

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Jaycee president John Lowery said Sunday the service organization will begin this week calling in past due membership payments from local chapters to help repay an estimated $191,000 diverted from a charitable fund-raising project.

"We're going to start writing letters to local chapters this week, giving them 30 days to pay their outstanding dues. If they don't, I have the authority to yank their charters," Lowery said.

He estimated that local chapters throughout North Carolina owe at least $50,000 in past-due membership fees. The $191,000 is the amount estimated by private auditors to have been diverted in recent years from funds raised for charity, primarily the North Carolina Burn Center at Chapel Hill. Jaycee spokesman contend the money was used to pay national membership dues for fake chapters and fake members that artificially inflated the group's national ranking within the Jaycees.

Chapters office and the Herring has not commented publicly since the weekend meeting, but he had indicated earlier he would not run for the national post without the backing of North Carolina Jaycees. Herring's term as state president in 1978-79 was marked by creation of several fake chapters and the diversion of some of the charity money, according to Jaycee spokesmen.

Lowery said his estimate of $50,000 in overdue fees was for "good, solid chapters" with firm standing in the organization.

Intriguing Draft To Unfold Tuesday

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the most intriguing drafts in recent years will unfold Tuesday when the 23 National Basketball Association teams dip into the college ranks for reinforcements.

"There are questions about all these guys — not whether they'll make it, but how big," says Marty Blake, the former general manager who now runs a scouting service for the NBA and is as familiar as anyone with the college crop.

"There is one superstar, Darrell Griffith," said Blake, referring to the 6-foot-4 guard who led Louisville to the NCAA title. "You can't go wrong picking him. But after that there are questions."

Those questions are what make this draft so interesting. Last year it was clear to all that players like Earvin "Magic" Johnson, David Greenwood, Bill Cartwright and Calvin Natt would make it big in the pros, but there's far more uncertainty this time around. So many players are rated so evenly, it's tough to choose between them.

Teams can swing deals to try and improve their position in the draft up until today's 8 p.m., EDT trading deadline. But Blake says the parity among the players available makes a difference of a couple of turns in the selection process relatively unimportant.

"Except for Griffith, there are no sure things, but there is a lot of depth," said Blake. "Last year there was a clear dropoff after the eighth or ninth player, but this year it's more even. You could conceivably get the same player with the 28th pick as with the 17th, for example."

While Griffith may be the cream of the crop, he may not be the first player picked. Boston owns the No. 1 choice, having obtained it from Detroit as part of the M.L. Carr-Bob McAdoo deal, and the Celtics' top priority is a center to break in behind Dave Cowens, who will be 32 in October. The Celtics figure they may not get another chance like this to draft a center and are leery of using the top pick on a smaller player.

They tried to persuade Ralph Sampson, Virginia's 7-foot-4 freshman, to turn pro but he decided to stay in school. So now they are considering Joe Barry Carroll, Purdue's 7-footer who is rated the top pivotman eligible for the draft. Another possibility is Kevin McHale, Minnesota's 6-11 center who is considered better suited to power forward by most pro scouts.

The Celtics were expected to try and reach a decision today. Griffith, in Boston visiting with his agent, Bob Woolf, would like them to pick him, although he won't say so as many words.

"I don't have the luxury of making that choice," he said. "I'm going into the NBA with the attitude of being a winner, for any team that selects me. That's my goal. If it doesn't come this year, it will come eventually."

If Boston, whose 61-21 record was the best in the league last season, does not pick Griffith, chances are Utah will take him with the second choice. Since the Jazz struggled to a 24-58 mark, Griffith's chances of winning in the NBA would appear to be a lot better if he gets picked by Boston.

"Anybody would like to come out of college and win the NBA championship," he said, referring to the double Johnson accomplished with Michigan State in 1979 and the Los Angeles Lakers last season. "But if I get drafted by Utah, it will be a challenge to try to contribute as much as I can to make that team more competitive."

Griffith is the best of the guards available. Other top backcourt prospects include Ronnie Lester of Iowa (despite a knee injury), Kelvin Ransey of Ohio State, Andrew Toney of Southwestern Louisiana, John Duren of Georgetown, Sam Worthen of Marquette and Larry Drew of Missouri.

Carroll is the best of a weak group of centers that also includes Mike Gminski of Duke, Roosevelt Bouie of Syracuse and Jawann Oldham of Seattle. The top forwards available include McHale, James Ray of Jacksonville, Mike O'Koren of North Carolina, Michael Brooks of LaSalle, Kiki Vandeweghe of UCLA, Reggie Johnson of Tennessee, Larry Smith of Alcorn State and Rickey Brown of Mississippi State.

Three swingmen who figure to go in the first round are 6-6 Mike Woodson of Indiana, 6-4 Hawkeye Whitney of North Carolina State and 6-6 Don Collins of Washington State. All played forward in college but may be shifted to the backcourt in the NBA.

Seven undergraduates applied for draft eligibility, the best being guard Wes Matthews of Wisconsin, forward DeWayne Scales of Louisiana State and center Jeff Ruland of Iowa.

After Boston and Utah, the order of selection in the first round will be Golden State, Chicago, Denver, New Jersey, New York again, Philadelphia, San Diego, Portland, Dallas, New York, Boston, Washington, San Antonio, Kansas City, Detroit, Atlanta, Utah, Seattle, Philadelphia, Cleveland and Denver.

Because of trades, Boston, Denver, New Jersey, Philadelphia and Utah have two picks apiece on the first round while Houston, Indiana, Los Angeles, Milwaukee and Phoenix have none.

The draft, which lasts 10 rounds and starts at noon, EDT, will be open to the public and will be televised by the USA cable network.

New Hat For Whitey

Dorrel "Whitey" Herzog, named Sunday to take over as manager of the faltering St. Louis Cardinals, wears a Cardinals baseball cap after being introduced by Cardinals chairman and president August A. Busch, Jr. (over Herzog's shoulder). Ken Boyer was fired as manager between games of a doubleheader in Montreal. The Cardinals lost both games to bring their season record to 18-34.

Herzog Named As Card Coach

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ken Boyer became the first managerial casualty of the 1980 season Sunday as the St. Louis Cardinals fired the former All-Star third baseman and named Whitey Herzog as their new manager.

Cardinals President August A. Busch Jr. held a Sunday afternoon news conference at his St. Louis home to announce the selection of Herzog.

General Manager John Claiborne had traveled to Montreal to give Boyer the news between games of a doubleheader with the Expos.

"We were ready to make a change, and Whitey Herzog was our first choice," Busch said. "We think his aggressive style of play is exactly what is needed to help turn the Cardinals into a winning ball team."

The new Cardinals skipper will take over the team tonight in Atlanta.

The Kansas City Royals fired Herzog last October after he guided the team to three straight American League Western Division championships. The Royals finished second in the AL.

For The Fifth Time
Sweden's Bjorn Borg shows spectators the cup he won for the fifth time in the French Open

Tennis Tournament in Paris Sunday. Vitas Gerulaitis, left, Borg's American opponent, stands next to him. (AP Laserphoto)

Swed Sweeps To French Title Borg Does It Again

PARIS (AP) — In the manner of a sly old junkball pitcher, Vitas Gerulaitis served up lobs, drop shots, top-spin volleys, sliders, fastballs, even watermelon balls, anything to "ruin the rhythm" of the clay court king, Bjorn Borg. It worked for all of about 20 minutes.

"It was kind of working — in the beginning, I was moving him around a little in the first set," Gerulaitis said after Sunday's French Open final. "He was really unsure of what was happening out there. He missed a few shots."

Only a few, though. By the end of the first set, the 24-year-old Swede had neatly mastered the Gerulaitis strategy. And by the time he put away the match 6-4, 6-1, 6-2, to win his record fifth French crown, Borg looked as though he probably could even hit winners off the best knuckleballs and spitters baseball has ever known.

First, though, there were more pertinent historical comparisons. Paul Cohen, coach of U.S. clay court specialist Harold Solomon, this week called Borg "the greatest clay court player in history."

One man considered among the greatest is Henri Cochet, one of France's famous Four Musketeers and until Sunday the co-holder with Borg of the record of winning four French championships.

Cochet was at Roland Garros Stadium on Sunday for the one hour, 45-minute match that stripped him of the record he had held for 48 years.

"He didn't look too happy," Borg said afterward. "All he said was 'well played.'"

Cochet, now 78, did contribute to the historic occasion by presenting Borg with the French trophy, which Borg has now held for the past three years.

Chris Evert Lloyd also claimed a chunk of French tennis history in the two-week tournament on the slow European clay. On Saturday she defeated Romania's Virginia Ruzici to win a record fourth women's crown, this year worth $42,500.

Though Gerulaitis was rebuffed in his bid to bring the U.S. its first French men's title since Tony Trabert did it in 1955, Americans swept four of the titles here this year, for the first time since 1950.

In addition to Lloyd's crown, Victor Amaya and Hank Pfister won the men's doubles, Kathy Jordan and Anne Smith won the women's doubles and Billy Martin and Anne Smith took the mixed doubles.

The tennis world now fixes its eyes on Wimbledon, and inevitably Borg was asked if this will be the year when he will win the French, Wimbledon, the U.S. Open and the Australian, making him the first player to win the "Grand Slam" since Rod Laver did it in 1962 and 1969.

"I think I'm still in it, that's for sure," Borg laughed.

He will go to Sweden this week to play Davis Cup matches for his country against West Germany and then will go to England to practice on the grass for Wimbledon with Gerulaitis, as he has for the last three years.

Pitt Co. Whips Snow Hill

SNOW HILL — Pitt County pushed across three runs in the top of the ninth to whip Snow Hill, 13-10, Sunday afternoon in an American Legion contest.

After Snow Hill had tied it up on Guy Sanderson's home run in the bottom of the eighth, Pitt County rallied, thanks to five ninth-inning errors.

The ninth inning uprising started innocently enough when Curtis Spencer walked, but then quickly got serious — thanks to five of Snow Hill's 11 errors.

Will Barrett and Mike Campbell reached on errors by third baseman Kevin Battle and pitcher Sanderson.

Spencer scored on Sanderson's error and then Barrett followed Spencer home on an error by first baseman Walt Tyndall. A passed ball moments later brought home Campbell and Pitt County led, 13-10.

Pitt County wasted little time in getting started Sunday, scoring eight runs in the first and adding solo runs in the fifth and sixth. Snow Hill, meanwhile, got on the scoreboard with three runs in the second, one in the third, two in the fifth and three in the seventh.

Mark Shank led off the first with a triple and scored on an error by Battle, which allowed Ronnie House to reach. Spencer walked and when centerfielder Al Murray misplayed Will Barrett's single all three scored.

Campbell followed with a single and moved to second on Mark Douglas's sacrifice. Jeff Wilson and Gordon Douglas walked to load the bases. Shank singled to score Campbell. An error brought home Wilson before Spencer singled, scoring Douglas and

Shank
Snow Hill got three runs back in the second. Battle walked. Tyndall singled and Jeff Scott walked to load the bases. After Battle was thrown out at home on Alan Corbett's fielder's choice, Robin Bowen grounded

Golf Winners

Pete Beaman (center) captured his second Pitt County Golf Championship Sunday with a two-day total of 148. Emmet Koonce (right) was second while Kinny Powell (left) was third.

Beaman Wins Tourney

By LARRY SULLIVAN
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE—Never, never count out a defending champ. Sunday afternoon, at the Farmville Country Club, defending Pitt County Golf Championship winner Pete Beaman was in the clubhouse when he heard the news that he had won his second title in as many years.

"I was playing for second place," the surprised winner said after he received his two trophies, one for him to keep and the other to be presented to his golf club in Ayden until next year's 36-hole tourney. "I didn't think I could catch Emmet (Koonce, the first round co-leader), but he shot that double-bogey, and I just lucked up and won."

Beaman used a little skill to go with his luck Sunday as he fired a one-over-par 72 over the final 18 holes which gave him a two-day total of 148 and the winner's trophy. Koonce, who shot a 77 to go with his 72 Saturday, finished a shot behind the leader at 149 after he watched his birdie putt on the 18th green just slip by the cup.

Brook Valley member Kinny

Powell, who thought he was out of the running for one of the top three spots, wound up in third place with a 36-hole total of 150 as first round co-leader Billy Clark shot himself out of contention on the last three holes and finished the final round with an 81.

In the first flight, Farmville's Lowell Liles, the leader on Saturday, held on to the top spot and finished with a 153. Kenny Paterson defeated Bennie Langston in a playoff to take second place with a two-day total of 157 and Langston took third place.

In the second flight, Ayden's Bobby Jones fired a final-round 72 to finish one stroke ahead of first day leader Milton Barnette, who shot an 80 to go with his 73 to finish with 153. Farmville's Floyd Messer took third with a 157.

Oren Babcock, of Ayden, was not in the top three in the third flight Saturday, but he carded a 79 Sunday to beat John Mosley by one stroke. Mosley, representing Grifton and Farmville's David Goins decided second and third in a playoff hole. Both golfers finished with identical 164s.

In the fourth flight, Ayden's

Jack Newborn worked his way up from a second place position Saturday to take the fourth flight with a 176 total. James Blalock finished two strokes back at 178 for second place while Jimmy Cannon remained in third with a 181.

Little Wins Championship

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Sally Little has quit two old losing habits, scoreboard watching and self-pressure.

As a result, the tall, slender South African was toasting her first major title Sunday night. Her new loose style produced a victory in the Ladies Professional Golf Association Championship.

"I didn't look at the scoreboard the last few holes. I've had problems with that in the past and gave it one of these," said Little.

Nelson Wins At Atlanta, Ready For U.S. Open

ATLANTA (AP) — Larry Nelson, helped by a confidence-boosting seven-shot victory before a hometown crowd, figures he's ready for golf's biggest challenge — the U.S. Open.

"I feel like I play well in stretches, so I think my chances are pretty good," Nelson said of the Open after nailing down the third tournament conquest of his career Sunday with a closing 5-under par 67 for an easy victory in the $300,000 Atlanta Golf Classic.

"They are two different kinds of golf courses, though, and it'll be a different kind of game," Nelson said.

His $54,000 victory Sunday came on the hilly, 6,945-yard Atlanta Golf Club course and his 270 total was a whopping 18 shots under par, but well off the record 23-below-par total posted by Andy Bean a year ago.

"They say something around par might win the Open," Nelson said of the event beginning Thursday on the tough Baltusrol Golf Club course in Springfield, N.J.

Nelson, who lives in nearby Acworth, started the final round Sunday with a 2-shot edge over Bean, the big Florida blaster who never got his game untracked.

It became a cakewalk for Nelson after he put together three straight birdies. At No. 6 he chipped in from 25 feet, then followed with an eight-foot putt on the seventh and a wedge to within a foot on No. 8.

No one came close the rest of the day.

Bean, saying he "just couldn't put it together," finished with a 72-277 total that left him in a second place deadlock with Don Pooley, who turned in the day's best effort, a sizzling 65.

Calvin Peete was alone in fourth place at 70-278 and Australian Bob Shearer, the pacesetter in the first two rounds, had a 73 to tie Mike Reid at 279. Reid closed with a 70.

"It was easier than what I thought it would be," Nelson said. "It really wasn't a struggle. It never was taxing or draining. There was never anything crucial."

He played the four rounds with only three bogeys, one of which came on the ninth Sunday when he pitched short and two-putted.

He knew it was over after his approach on 17 and said, "I was trying to figure out what I could shoot and still win if Andy made a two on 18."

Nelson, 32, had his wife, parents and two brothers in the huge gallery that cheered his every move.

"The crowd didn't bother me," said Bean, "but I had trouble figuring it out. I'd hit one in four feet from the pin and get polite applause and Larry's would land 20 feet away and there would be a big roar."

Pirates Win, 7-3

TARBORO — Bill Wilder struck out 10 and scattered 10 hits as East Carolina defeated N.C. Wesleyan, 7-3, Saturday night.

The Pirates got their third home run when Todd Hendley blasted a solo shot to right. ECU added two more runs to its lead in the sixth and a scored its final run in the eighth.

Wakai and Smith walked to lead off the sixth and scored on Mike Sorrell's double. In the eighth, Sorrell singled, moved to second when Kelly Robinette walked and went to third on an error. He scored on Pete Persico's sacrifice fly.

Wesleyan got its final run in the seventh.

Herzog Named...

West in 1979 and Herzog was fired after compiling a 410-304 record with the team.

"My job is to take the ball players and put them in the right place," Herzog said. "I'm going to take this team over and I'm going to run this team the way it should be run."

"We're not out of it yet," he added. "We win 10 games in a row and we're right back in this thing."

Herzog signed a contract to manage the team through 1982. He said he would retain the current Cardinals' coaches at least through the end of the season.

Boyer, who took control of the team two years ago, was fired after St. Louis dropped a 6-4 decision to the Montreal Expos in the opener of a doubleheader. The Cards lost the second game, 9-4, their 22nd loss in 27 games.

"I worked hard to get here, and I don't think I did bad," Boyer said in Montreal before boarding a plane back to St. Louis, where he makes his home. "Sure I'd like to continue managing. I have no emotion about it. I don't think there was anything I could do."

Only the third St. Louis manager in 16 seasons, Boyer took over for Vern Rapp in April 1978. Boyer's record as Cards manager was 166-191.

Under Boyer, St. Louis had a 13-12 record on May 10. After dropping both ends of Sunday's twinbill, St. Louis had skidded to an 18-34 mark, 12½ games behind the front-running Expos.

"I had no inkling. I thought he (Claiborne) was here to discuss a deal," Boyer said. "Why should I be shocked? It's the logical thing to do, isn't it?"

Herzog made it clear he would be boss. "There's only one team leader and that's me," Herzog said. "I'm opinionated and hard-headed. Once that game starts, I'm the boss."

Although known as a strict disciplinarian, Herzog said the only things he'd ask of his new players were to show up at the ball park on time and to give 100 percent on the field.

"I've got a speech all prepared," Herzog said. "But what it boils down to is that I'm easy to get along with if they work hard. I'll tell them, 'If you're good enough, you'll win.'"

Most Cardinals players were not surprised by the firing. "I loved the man," said pitcher Pete Vukovich. "I'm hurt more than shocked. Boyer became the victim of our lack of production. We stunk, we lose, and he's gone."

First baseman Keith Hernandez also was not surprised by Boyer's dismissal.

"You could just put two and two together," Hernandez said. "When things go badly, the manager always gets the blame."

But John Fulgham, who reinjured a shoulder in the first game of the doubleheader, said he was shocked.

"So you fire the manager," Fulgham said. "It's our fault. We should be disappointed in ourselves."

Throughbred racing's 3-year-old champion Sweepstakes, not too unlike Caesar's Gaul, is divided into three parts:

1. Genuine Risk.
2. Codex.
3. Temperance Hill and Co.

So how do you unravel such a knot? Easy. With a playoff — or, in this case, a runoff.

Playoffs are the in thing in bigtime sports. The regular pro basketball and hockey seasons are mere round-robins to set up involved postseason eliminations that absorb the spring and most of the early summer.

Baseball has its World Series, pro football its Super Bowl with roman numerals, the colleges their less decisive bowl extravaganzas.

They're popular. They prick the interest of the TV networks. They make money. And they put an end, most times, to barroom debates.

So let's take Genuine Risk, Codex, Temperance Hill and another top colt or two, if you insist — Rumbo, maybe a healthy Plugged Nickle or Rockhill Native — toss them onto a 1 1/2-mile track under the most favorable conditions, and let them go at it.

That's the only way, in this year of a superstar drought, that you can get a line on the best 3-year-old. It appears almost compulsory in the absence of colts the likes of Secretariat, Seattle Slew, Affirmed and Spectacular Bid, who dominated their 3-year old classes in the 1970s.

The thought was raised by the jockey Angel Cordero Jr. after his favorite mount, Codex, finished a badly beaten seventh in Saturday's 112th Belmont Stakes — won by the 53-1 shot, Temperance Hill.

"My horse, he can not run in the mud," the heady Puerto Rican lamented. "He tried. He just not like the track. I think he is normally the best 3-year-old around."

"I would like to see him go against the filly and Temperance Hill on a decent track."

"Would you favor a match race?" he was asked.

"I would love it," Cordero replied. "It would be a different story on a different surface."

Codex, a brawny Tartan Stable speedster trained by Wayne Lukas, was the pride of the Pacific Coast this season, winning both the Hollywood and Santa Anita Derbies before beating Genuine Risk in the controversial Preakness.

Through an oversight of his owners, he wasn't nominated for the Kentucky Derby. But in winning by 4 1/2 lengths at Baltimore, he looked like a horse that might win at any distance against any competition.

But he detests mud — losing one race in California on a sloppy track by 22 lengths. The sun usually shines in California.

Genuine Risk is a saucy chestnut filly who has become the darling of the nation, horse lovers and the uninitiated alike.

She became the first of her sex in 65 years and the second ever to win the 106-year-old Derby. Then, to prove it wasn't an accident, she finished second both in the Preakness and the Belmont, losing the former after a hotly contested brushing incident with Codex on the final turn.

If horse races were judged by the old, unofficial Olympic scoring system, five points for first, three for second and one for third, the filly would have a laurel wreath placed around her neck from the top tier.

Here's how the Triple Crown winners would rank:

- Genuine Risk 11 (one first, two seconds).
- Codex 5.
- Temperance Hill 5.
- Jacinto Vasquez, Genuine Risk's rider, insists his filly has established herself as the best of her age in 1980. But he would not veto a return match with any foe.
- "I think if I'm not bumped in Baltimore, we win two of the three Triple Crown races," he says. "And if the Belmont track is not so bad, why not maybe three?"

"I would stack her against any of them."

And what of Temperance Hill, the forgotten colt named, though misspelling, for a Methodist church in Arkansas? He won the longest and toughest of the Triple Crown races and deserves a chance to prove it was not a mud-spattered fluke — in a runoff, naturally.

Broadway's Brightest Stars Receive Tony Awards

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Phyllis Frelich acknowledged the honor but couldn't hear the cheers as she accepted the best actress prize for her performance in "Children of a Lesser God" in Broadway's 34th annual Tony awards.

Miss Frelich has been deaf since birth. The drama, along with the musical "Evita," was a big winner. Miss Frelich celebrated with co-star John Rubenstein, who was named best actor, and "Children" author Mark Medoff, who took home the award for best play. She captured the hearts of the audience by giving a glowing acceptance speech in the sign language of the deaf.

Miss Frelich seemed to gasp with glee and joy as she signed her thanks to the theater community and to Medoff "for writing me such a beautiful story," that of a stubborn deaf student falling in love with her determined teacher.

Her speech was translated by her husband, Robert Steinberg. It was the story of their love — between a deaf woman and a man who can hear — that inspired New Mexico State University drama professor Medoff to write "Children."

"Evita," snared seven awards, including best musical and best director for Harold Prince, running his Tony record to 14. No one else comes close.

The sentimental loser was Mickey Rooney, 59, wildly cheered when his nomination for best actor in a musical,

"Sugar Babies," was announced. Rooney, who lost out on an Academy Award in April, when he was nominated for best supporting actor in "The Black Stallion," lost again Sunday to Briton Jim Dale, whose effervescent portrayal of P.T. Barnum in the musical "Barnum," earned him best acting honors.

"It's not exactly our biography," Steinberg and Miss Frelich, a founding member of the National Theater of the Deaf, said at the supper ball following the awards presentation. "But it's our information. We're his (Medoff's) resource, his collaborators, for what he wrote. And he sure wrote."

"Everything has been too good," added Miss Frelich in sign language. "It's been so wonderful up until now that this didn't matter...but to win was wonderful. And all three of us...That was too wonderful."

"Evita," an English import written by "Jesus Christ Superstar" authors Tim Rice and Andrew Lloyd Webber, was heavily favored to win after getting the most Tony nominations — 11 — last month.

And win it did, with its star, Patti LuPone, honored as best actress, and the show getting Tonys for best book, best score and best lighting, in addition to best musical and best direction.

But in something of a surprise, the most-nominated drama, Lanford Wilson's Pulitzer-winning drama, "Talley's Folly," managed to share a Tony only for scenic design with "Barnum" in a tie vote.

The play, starring Judd Hirsch as a Jewish accountant who woos a spinster in rural Missouri, was nominated for five Tonys by a 12-member panel chosen by the League of New York Theaters and Producers.

In musicals, Mandy Patinkin, Che Guevara in "Evita," and Priscilla Lopez, who plays Harpo Marx in the second act of "A Day in Hollywood, A Night in the Ukraine," won their first Tonys as featured players.

In drama, David Rounds won for his featured-player work in "Morning's at Seven," with 22-year-old Dinah Manoff picked as best featured actress in Neil Simon's new comedy, "I Ought To Be In Pictures," her first Broadway role.

A best-director Tony went to Vivian Matalon for "Morning's at Seven," which also won as Broadway's best revival. A comedy about four sisters in a small town, it flopped its first time out on Broadway in 1939 but reopened this season to critics' cheers.

During Sunday's ceremonies at the Mark Hellinger Theater, Helen Hayes, the first lady of New York theater, was given the Lawrence Langer award for a lifetime of achievement in theater.

Miss Hayes, 79, got a standing ovation from the black-tie audience when introduced by actor James MacArthur. She began her stage career 75 years ago in Washington, D.C.

Special Tony awards also went to the Actors Theater of Louisville, Ky., and the Goodspeed Opera House, East Haddam, Conn., with a surprise award given Mary Tyler Moore, star of the long-running CBS comedy bearing her name.

Miss Moore, who co-hosted Sunday's Tony show with actor Jason Robards, made her Broadway debut this season as the crippled sculptress in "Whose Life Is It Anyway?"

The Tonys, named after the late Antoinette Perry, executive director of the American Theater Wing, were voted on by more than 500 New York theater professionals and journalists in secret balloting.

Couldn't Have Written Better Script For TV Baseball Debut

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Had ABC written the script, a better game could not have been devised than last week's Monday Night Baseball debut featuring the Dodgers and Reds.

After trailing through most of the game, the Dodgers passed Cincinnati on a home run, only to be caught again by the Reds. Los Angeles won the game on a pinch-hit homer in the bottom of the ninth, which is the way things should be.

By a bit of good luck — namely, the rain delay of the New York-Kansas City game — the Dodgers-Reds contest was made the nationally televised game for the launching of ABC's Monday night run. A dramatic ending, a spectacular fielding play by L.A. rookie centerfielder Rudy Law...

Still, the game only averaged a rating of about 12.5, which will put it toward the bottom third in Nielsen's ratings chart for the week. For that reason, there will be only three more Monday night games after tonight's contest.

In the past few years NBC, and especially CBS, have used baseball's low ratings to launch new programs and to beef up faltering series. "White Shadow" and "Lou Grant" were thus saved in summers past.

So, ABC worked out a deal with baseball that promises to be advantageous to the network. While the Monday Night Baseball run has been cut from 12 to five games, ABC will return in mid-August with Sunday afternoon baseball.

The network will cover two "regional" games every Sunday from Aug. 17 to the end of the season, the idea being that the pennant races will have sufficiently heated up to command larger audiences.

If it works, ABC may find itself in a position to exploit baseball runovers, carrying the baseball audience into Sunday night prime time programming. CBS used football runovers last season to full advantage, guaranteeing itself Sunday night dominance, a cornerstone for the entire week.

From ABC's standpoint, the new arrangement with baseball makes imminent good sense. Fans, faced with the television alternative of summer reruns, may disagree.

For Uecker, the former catcher, national TV is a comfortable forum. When his moderate playing talents were no longer wanted, he discovered that people didn't mind his jokes nearly as much as they minded his playing skills.

A few gigs on "The Tonight Show" led to the ABC job (he also broadcasts the Milwaukee Brewers' games), and now he's writing a book.

"There ain't gonna be no broads or dope in it," he says, "none of that crap. It's going to be funny."

A story about Uecker's career might be funny. Seven years in the minors before making it to the bigs, and a major league batting average as low as his humor.

"It'll be called 'Catcher in the Wry,'" Uecker says, "or maybe, 'A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to Cooperstown.'"

Seek Clues To A Ghostwriter

NEW YORK (AP) — Wandering "whodunit" isn't unusual when it comes to a mystery thriller.

But when the book is "Murder in the White House," the question "whodunit" means "who wrote it?"

The listed author is Margaret Truman Daniel, but literary skeptics are scrutinizing the best seller for telltale signs of a ghostwriter. People magazine says.

"Murder" is her fifth book, with a first printing of 55,000 copies, a TV movie in the works and a six-figure payoff.

The daughter of President Harry S. Truman has acknowledged getting help seven years ago for a biography of her father. But her agent, Scott Meredith, insists she wrote the story about a corrupt secretary of state who is strangled to death in the Lincoln Sitting Room entirely by herself.

"I love mysteries," she said. "I have read them most of my life, starting with Nancy Drew. My mother and father loved them. We used to trade them off."

$25 Million To Film 'Tai-Pan'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Tai-Pan," James Clavell's best-selling epic novel of the founding of Hong Kong, will finally become a feature motion picture with Sean Connery playing the title role.

The 25 million production, scheduled to begin filming next year, will focus on the years from 1839-1842 after England's victory in the first Opium War.

Filmways Pictures will distribute the movie in the United States and Canada for producer George-Alain Vuille with John Guillermin directing.

Boone Bash Set For June 23

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Debby Boone will headline her first television variety special June 23 with the help of an all-star trio of guests — Bob Hope, Gene Kelly and Greg Evigan of TV's "BJ and the Bear."

Titled "Debby Boone...The Same Old Brand New Me," the show will also feature the voice, but not the face, of her father-in-law, Jose Ferrer. Debby will dance with Kelly, clown with Hope in a comedy sketch and sing with Evigan in two production numbers. One may rest assured Debby will sing her Emmy-winning song, "You Light Up My Life."

A 'Co-Author'

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Fredric Harwin, a medical illustrator, achieves a first in his field with the publication of the first of a two-volume manual of cardiac surgery by Springer-Verlag.

Harwin is one of the manual's three authors along with Dr. Bradley Harlan, assistant professor of surgery, and Dr. Albert Starr, professor of surgery and chief of cardiopulmonary surgery, both at the University of Oregon Health Sciences Center.

"It is the first time a major international publishing house has granted full co-authorship of a major surgical text to a medical artist," Harwin said.

Harwin, assistant professor at the Health Sciences Center, has a master's degree in medical and biological illustration from the University of Michigan.

Grant For Med School

The East Carolina University School of Medicine has received an $8,000 grant to study the prescribing behavior of physicians when they treat patients with hypertension.

Dr. L.E. Masters, professor of family practice, says the project represents a trend in family practice that emphasizes research in the delivery of health care.

Funded by Ayerst Laboratories, the study examines the way physicians prescribe medication and recommend life style changes for patients with high blood pressure.

"We have recognized the problem of patient compliance for a long time. Getting the patient to comply with the doctor's orders is frequently difficult," says Masters.

"This project takes a different approach to the problem because it looks at the degree to which a doctor sticks to an established, proven treatment plan on follow-up visits with a patient."

Family practice is not the only department at the School of Medicine involved in research relating to hypertension. In the Department of Pharmacology, Dr. John P. Davanzo and a team of three investigators are studying the development of a new drug to reduce high blood pressure.

Artificial Ocean Home To Sharks

CHICAGO (AP) - More than 1 1/2 million kilowatt hours of electricity are expected to be saved each year by a centralized, computerized energy management system in five Chicago-area retail chain stores, says an energy-industry journal.

According to Energy User News, the automation system, which controls heating, ventilation and air conditioning equipment, will eventually control energy in all 33 stores of the Lord & Taylor chain.

In addition to the Chicago-area stores, the chain is initially placing its Westchester, N.Y., store under the computer's control, then will add one store each month to the system.

Newest Newspaper Technology Unveiled

ATLANTA (UPI) - The latest newspaper technology - from lasers to satellites - was unveiled Saturday at the 52nd American Newspaper Publisher Association's Production Management Conference.

About 10,000 newspaper executives were expected to attend the conference, where many key decisions will be made on the estimated $200 million in new equipment which the nation's publishers are expected to purchase this year.

Although no purchases are actually made at the convention, an ANPA official said at least 30 percent of the industry's capital expenditures will be generated from the exhibits on display in Atlanta's massive World Congress Center.

"This is where newspapers spend the big money," one exhibitor offered.

ANPA estimates 659 million will be spent in capital outlays during 1980 - at least $200 million on equipment displayed at the convention.

The exhibit floor is the maze of whirring printing presses, flashing lights, and electronic images designed to give headline and quality-conscious publishers a taste of what's available and what's to come in advanced technology to serve a 14.5 billion business in the United States.

"We're going to be telling them (publishers) how to take best advantage of that new technology," said Walter E. Mattson, president and chief operating officer of the New York Times Company and chairman of the ANPA Production Management Committee. A series of workshops begin Monday to explain the technology and how to use it. Among the speakers are some of the nation's largest publishers, Katherine Graham of The Washington Post Company, Stanton R. Cook of the Chicago Tribune and the Times' Mattson.

While the emphasis of the convention is on technology, the back room talk will center on the nation's troubled economy, its negative effect on housing construction and the resulting decline in real estate advertising in newspapers, Mattson said.

"The high interest rate reduced the number of new housing starts," Mattson said. "Real estate ads are off and help wanted ads are off. Some publicly held newspapers are off a little bit in profitability."

But Mattson said he expects the industry to recover later this year.

The Times is among those in the forefront of new technology, introducing satellite transmissions to enable publication of its midwest and western editions at press facilities in Chicago, reducing reliance on commercial air flights to deliver the paper. The two major national wire services, United Press International and the Associated Press, are offering satellite technology to give newspapers direct access to satellite transmissions and cut back reliance on land-line transmissions. Officials for both organizations say the move will reduce costs while increasing speed and reliability.

The application of laser technology is designed to dramatically cut time and costs in the production of press-ready plates from the typeset page. Instead of bulky cameras photographing a typeset page and generating a negative to be used in the production of plates for mounting on printing presses, the laser process replaces the camera with a compact unit which creates a plate directly from the page.

According to M. Mehta, director of projects for Eocom Corp., the use of lasers to "shoot" the page, coupled with the elimination of negative handling, reduces the amount of time to move a newspaper page from the typeset page to press-ready plates from 12 minutes to 61 seconds.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

I am involved in transcendental meditation. I am a constant reader of your columns and do not remember your writing anything about this. I believe it is so important for relaxation that it deserves a column by you. - Mr. D.G.B., Wis.

Although I have written about transcendental meditation, I will be glad to again impart some of my thoughts about it. I believe that TM is an excellent approach to relaxation and tranquility.

It is sometimes mistakenly believed that this is a newly discovered concept. As a matter of fact, TM is one of a wide variety of methods that have been tried for centuries, in an effort find inner peace and freedom from tension.

Some students of TM believe that this is a religious experience. Others, by biofeedback studies, have scientifically shown that many body responses can be affected by composure, relaxation and meditation. I acknowledge that altered states of consciousness can be acquired with any one of the meditational and relaxing techniques that are now captivating the attention of thousands of people.

Many highly trained technical observers at universities and medical schools have, through their studies, found a definite relationship between meditation and body functions. The heart rate, the rate of breathing, blood pressure, skin responses to heat, cold and allergy, and a wide variety of physiological reactions can all be affected by transcendental meditation.

In addition, it has been well established that emotional stress and anxiety levels can be modified by TM.

In this frenetic, complex world any method that can offer a sense of inner peace and tranquility should be welcomed. Under trained supervision, TM can be extremely rewarding. I must add a word of caution, however, to those who go overboard and become convinced that transcendental meditation is the total answer to all physical and emotional problems.

Your sometimes refer to "elective surgery." I don't quite understand what you mean by this. - Miss P.W., Conn.

Dear Miss W.: Elective surgery refers to surgery performed for conditions that are not urgent and are not classified as "emergency." This surgery is performed at a time most convenient for the patient and the surgeon.

A patient with a hernia may, for example, want to put off the operation until a vacation period. However, should such a hernia become complicated, then it is no longer "elective."
