

OPEC Faces Countdown To Regain Price Control

By ROBERT MCCARTNEY
Associated Press Writer
ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — The next five months will test whether OPEC can regain control of world oil prices, leaping wildly since Iran's revolution. Chances are slim, however, since Iraq, Kuwait, Qatar and Venezuela just raised prices, and giant Saudi Arabia wants a piece of the action too.

The average price of the oil cartel has risen from roughly $13 a barrel to $32 since early last year, and the price explosion is the largest since the 1973-1974 world oil crisis.

Militants in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries took advantage of a tight world oil market following the Iranian revolution 16 months ago to raise prices sharply and pulled up price doves behind them.

But now OPEC says it wants to end the pricing chaos, which threatens to force American consumers to pay as much as 3 cents more for a gallon of gasoline and home heating fuel.

OPEC heads of state will meet in Baghdad, Iraq on Nov. 4-6 to celebrate OPEC's 20th anniversary. They would like to cap the festivities by introducing a new system to raise oil prices by small amounts every three months.

The proposed mechanism, which would link price hikes to several factors including world inflation rates and currency values, is not designed to push up oil prices sharply.

"We could cut production by 5 million barrels a day and prices would go to $50 or $60 a barrel, but you can readily imagine the effect on the world economy," the Saudi oil minister, Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, said after the two-day OPEC conference ended here Wednesday.

Instead, oil ministers said they favored more gradual and predictable price increases, while protecting themselves against inflation and declines in value of the dollar.

Before the system can be launched, however, OPEC must put existing prices in order. Current prices are said to be "disunified," meaning different countries charge widely varying prices for similar qualities of crude.

For instance, there are three prices for light Persian Gulf crude. Saudi Arabia charges $28 a barrel, Iraq $30 and Iran $35. Iraq will raise its price to $32 on July 1 under the OPEC agreement reached Wednesday. So will Qatar and Kuwait. Venezuela will hike its price between $1 and $2.

This multi-tiered price system causes problems for several reasons.

Yamani complained that oil companies with access to Saudi crude make excess profits because of the relatively low price.

Industry analysts say the disunity tends to encourage leapfrogging, in which a price increase by one country leads immediately to hikes by all others regardless of whether their crude's quality merits higher prices in the market.

The accord here, which sets a $32 benchmark price and a $37 ceiling, will help to limit leapfrogging, but is only a first step toward reuniting OPEC prices.

"Now if a given country raises its price, it does not follow that the others increase immediately," Kuwait Oil Minister Ali Khalifah Al-Sabah said.

His statement was significant because Kuwait stymied two efforts by Saudi Arabia to reunify prices early this year. Kuwait raised its price by $2 a barrel to match Saudi increases and triggered a round of hikes by other producers in January and May.

Yamani's previous predictions that prices could fall have been proved wrong on several occasions. For instance, at the last OPEC conference in Caracas, Venezuela, he said prices could fall because of declining demand, but prices have jumped twice since then.

And OPEC's latest moves, which would permit the Saudis, the world's largest oil exporter, to jump their price $4 — from $28 to $32 a barrel — have been attacked by high government officials in the West.

U.S. Energy Secretary Charles W. Duncan called the OPEC decisions "irresponsible" and "unjustified."

A U.S. oil industry source who asked not to be identified said the Saudis failed at OPEC's meeting in Venezuela last December to restore price unity and "I don't think the Saudis really closed the gap" at the meeting in Algiers.

"They just stopped the upward motion for a while," he said.

Pose Recall Ford Threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government appears on the verge of ordering the largest motor vehicle recall ever. Until it does, it is warning owners of 16 million Fords that the cars and light trucks, all with automatic transmissions, may suddenly lurch into reverse.

More than 98 deaths, 1,700 injuries and 6,000 accidents have been attributed to the transmissions, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said Wednesday in issuing its warning and in notifying Ford of its intention to proceed with steps leading to a recall.

Only a hearing of the agency has scheduled for July 21 seems to stand in the way of the recall. If ordered, a recall could cost the automaker, already suffering from depressed sales, several hundred million dollars.

In Detroit, a Ford spokesman reiterated the company's position that there is nothing wrong with the transmissions.

Subject to the recall would be vehicles sold after August 1972 and made before October 1979 with automatic transmission types C3, C4, C6, FMX and JATCO. The safety agency said most of the accidents reported to it were caused by runaway vehicles that shifted by themselves from park to reverse after they were left unattended with their engines running.

Throughout the agency's 2½-year investigation, Ford has contended that any problems are caused by drivers misusing the transmission and motorists' failure to use the parking brake when the vehicle is in park.

In a statement issued Wednesday in Detroit, Ford reiterated that position.

"There is no design defect in our transmissions. There is no fundamental difference between the Ford automatic transmissions and those installed in millions of other U.S., Japanese and European cars.... We are fully prepared to prove our points scientifically in an objective atmosphere."

Death Rocks Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira, a staunch U.S. ally battling growing political unrest at home, died unexpectedly early today after suffering a heart attack. The death of the 70-year-old Ohira sent stocks plummeting on the Tokyo stock market and set the stage for a fierce political power struggle.

Ohira's death left the Liberal Democratic Party leaderless only 10 days before parliamentary elections. The balloting comes after Ohira's surprise loss of a confidence vote in Parliament on May 16, when 56 members of his own party abstained, giving the Socialist Party opposition the victory.

President Carter, U.S. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and Chinese officials were among the world leaders sending condolences on the death of Ohira, who headed the government since December 1978. Officials in Washington and Tokyo agreed his death was unlikely to affect U.S.-Japanese ties.

Doctors said Ohira succumbed to "complications of a myocardial infarction," or heart blockage, suffered early today.

The prime minister had been hospitalized 12 days ago for fatigue and a mild heart attack suffered at the end of a marathon foreign tour that took him to the United States, Mexico, Canada and finally to Yugoslavia for the funeral last month of Yugoslav President Josip Broz Tito. According to aides, Ohira had spent 70 straight days either working or traveling before he entered the hospital on May 31.

'Buffaloed' By Castro

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top federal refugee aid official says Fidel Castro has "buffaloed" American public opinion into mistakenly believing that the latest waves of Cuban refugees were social misfits.

Roger P. Winter, director of the Office of Refugee Resettlement in the Department of Health and Human Services, said, "One of the biggest tragedies that has occurred is the fact that they have all been painted with the same brush. It's unfair and it's inaccurate."

Winter said in an interview that of the nearly 113,000 Cubans who arrived in the boatlift since April, "700 to 800 are in detention now as security risks or as common criminals. I'm all for developing a way to send them back."

But the head of the government's $500 million refugee aid program said the 700 to 800 are a small minority of all those who fled Cuba.

"That crazy Castro attempted to turn around the world's perception of what was happening by dumping in some low quality social undesirables," said Winter. "He set about to push the big lie — trying to brand these people as scum. He buffaloed the media and the public in general."

Winter said half the Cubans already are living in American communities, primarily in the Miami area. He fears other communities may be reluctant to sponsor the Cubans still in military camps in Florida, Arkansas and Wisconsin.

The first 4,600 arrivals from Cuba were signed up for refugee aid, including welfare and Medicaid. But the Carter administration declared subsequent arrivals "applicants for political asylum" instead of refugees. Their final status is still undecided.

One budget official in Winter's office has estimated that if the Cubans were given refugee status, they might get $1,200 apiece annually in government benefits. For 113,000, that would cost more than $1.3 billion.

TRIBUTE

Brian Clarke of 105 Hilltop Road, Greenville, has told Hotline that Paul Heath and Will Sermons of the Marlboro Service Center, Farmville, rendered assistance far beyond the call of duty to his wife and young daughter when Mrs. Clarke's car developed mechanical trouble near Farmville recently.

"Not only did Heath and Sermons bring the car to their place of business, but remained open an additional hour so that I might retrieve my family, already having correctly diagnosed the problem in the meantime. By 8:30 the next morning, Heath had purchased the required parts, returned to his place of business, installed the materials and test-driven the vehicle." Clarke reported.

The cost of all this service, Clarke said, was $10.80; the value of the kind attention to his family — "without measure!"

Police Department Is Adjusting Needs To Budget

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said his department will fulfill its responsibilities during the upcoming fiscal year, despite budget restrictions which will prevent adding more police officers and purchasing police cars during fiscal period 1980-81.

Cannon and the city's other department heads are in the final stages of putting together the pieces for the city's new fiscal year budget which is now undergoing City Council study.

The chief reported that he has been forced to forego requests for additional police officers and new budget dollars to replace some of the department's 1975 patrol cars, since he is committed to staying within City Manager Ed Wyatt's "hold the line" orders during detailed budget preparations.

"There is no question that our responsibilities have grown and will continue to grow as annexations, the new mall, the university's student population, and the increased expectations of the public for a high level of professionalism in its law enforcement officers change the scope of the department," he observed.

In fiscal year 1978-79, the department's work force was reduced by four officers, it was noted. Three positions were eliminated under the current 1979-80 budget. The department is now staffed with 87 fulltime positions.

"While external factors have increased our duties," the chief observed, "we have made significant internal changes during the past few years which have really helped us do a better job with less manpower."

Among the reorganizational changes which he feels have contributed to improved departmental efficiency are: the development of a fourth shift with each shift rotating intact, including superior officers; the assignment of police cadets to desk positions to enable more experienced officers to work in line functions; more effective and broader training programs and improvements in the overall selection, hiring, and training process; and combining selected administrative functions.

Cannon said that 27 automobiles are assigned to the department and some of the 1975 models with high mileage need to be replaced. He added, "Since the money is obviously not going to be available to do this in fiscal year 1980-81, we will have to make sure equipment maintenance continues to carry a high priority."

According to Cannon, the city spends more than $1.5 million to operate the Police Department's five divisions during each fiscal year. Labor costs, estimated at 65 percent, reflect the majority of this amount, he said.

The Uniform Patrol Division has 63 officers, Cannon reported, while 12 are assigned to the Detective and Narcotics Division, four in the Records and Identification Division, four in Animal Control, and a staff of four in the chief's office.

Budgetmakers Irked By Out-Of-Balance Claim But Pushing Proposals

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Legislative leaders say the protests of influential Rep. John Gamble, D-Lincolnton, will not be enough to derail the proposed $358 million state budget now nearing approval before House and Senate committees.

Gamble, chairman of the House Finance Committee, angered some legislative budgetmakers Wednesday when he circulated a memo challenging millions of dollars in the budget.

Gamble charged that the budget is $185 million out of balance, violates a constitutional ban on deficit spending, and introduces a "flagrantly unconstitutional" new accounting system for the state's highway program.

"It's not going to upset me. We've been working hard on this budget," said Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Deep Run, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

"He's playing right into your hands. He's getting good publicity," Hardison added. "Where was this idea before?"

The House appropriations chairman, Rep. Ed Holmes, D-Pittsboro, also defended the proposed budget, calling Gamble's comments "highly questionable" and his charges "unfounded."

"He's raised some questions we've been debating for several weeks now," he said.

Gamble is a member of the Advisory Budget Commission, which with Gov. Jim Hunt recommended the budget package. Gamble said he raised some of the same objections before the commission, which by state law meets in closed sessions.

In his memo, Gamble charged that the budget would have the state spend $185 million more than it can expect to receive in revenues next year. He also said the state retirement system is under-financed by $79 million.

Gamble's questions about the switch to a "cash flow" system of accounting for highway projects was raised by other legislators in the appropriations committees. A vote on the system is expected later this week.

John A. Williams, state budget officer, defended the new system as financially sound and within the state constitution. He questioned the revenue estimates Gamble used in saying the budget is out of balance.

Gamble recommended $185 million in budget cuts and a provision allowing the state to rescind pay raises to employees if revenues fall short.

In other legislative action: Alcohol The Senate voted tentative approval to a bill that would require a $25 state license to be purchased by persons who distill alcohol for use as fuel.

Jaycees Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch told legislators the state will not require North Carolina Jaycees to pay sales tax on charity jelly sales from which $190,000 was diverted to other uses.

Lynch, appearing before the House Finance Committee, said current law does not give the state authority to seek those back taxes, despite revelations that the money was diverted from charity and used to pay dues for fictitious members.

Last year the General Assembly approved legislation granting the Jaycees and other groups an exemp-

G.E.D. Lets Dropouts Drop Back In

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: May I use your column to help all those kids who have dropped out of high school and wish they hadn't?

If you are a dropout and now regret it, you don't have to settle for the lowest-paying job all your life and be referred to as "uneducated." And you don't have to go back to high school for two or three years to get your diploma, either.

Every state in this country offers a high school diploma by examination. The exam is called the "General Education Development" test. It is offered to everyone and is even accepted for college entrance!

Abby, this may not be news to you, but it was news to me, and I'm sure there are thousands, maybe millions of people who have never heard of it. After kicking myself for five years for having dropped out of high school, I learned about G.E.D. from a friend. Exactly three months later I had my high school diploma. I then passed my college entrance exams and I'm now going to college.

I am very grateful to the person who told me about G.E.D., and I'm sure your readers will be grateful to you if you pass on this information to them.

SACRAMENTO READER

DEAR READER: Thanks for a helpful tip. Anyone interested in obtaining a high school diploma may call any high school in his community for the necessary information. Or write to: General Education Development Testing Service, American Council on Education, 1 Dupont Circle N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

DEAR ABBY: Recently our family stayed in a very nice motel overnight, and we ordered food from room service.

Before checking out, my mom insisted on washing the dishes. I say that we paid for the room and that includes any dishes we dirtied when we ordered from room service. Who is right?

JUDY IN AZUSA

DEAR JUDY: Your mom is a super-neat lady in every sense of the word, but motel guests are not expected to wash their own dishes.

DEAR ABBY: My son who is getting married soon informed me today that my husband and I are not invited to the wedding breakfast to be given by the bride's parents. The reason (we are told) is that costs must be kept to a minimum. My two other children, a boy and a girl, will both be attending, as they are in the wedding party.

My son also informed me that as the groom's parents we are responsible for the rehearsal dinner, and we must include the bride's parents. What is your opinion of this?

Are we wrong to feel slighted? Or should we accept the fact that as the groom's parents we can expect to be left out of the picture?

Please hurry your answer. I need your advice.

HURT IN CLEVELAND

DEAR HURT: The parents of the groom should be included in all the wedding festivities, just as the parents of the bride should be. If the bride's parents are not aware that this is so, they should be so informed.

CONFIDENTIAL to those who have sent for Abby's booklets: Please, please be patient. I am literally deluged with orders and am getting them out as quickly as possible.

Finance Officer Is Resigning

WILLIAMSTON — Donnie Pittman, Martin County's finance officer, has resigned his position. Pittman, who has held the county post for three years, announced he was resigning to accept a job in private business.

At its June meeting, the Martin County Board of Commissioners accepted Pittman's letter of resignation, indicating it was with reluctance that they did do. Termination of his duties will be June 30.

A native of Wayne County, Pittman plans to continue living in Martin County. In addition to his duty as finance officer, Pittman also served as clerk to the Martin County Commissioners.

— Also in Martin County, a new commissioner was named for the town of Williamston. George C. Griffin was unanimously chosen by the town commissioners as the new member to replace David Tripp. Tripp recently resigned due to a change in business interests.

Procedures For Refund Announced

FARMVILLE — The Farmville Town Board has announced the terms of the planned refund of monies from a wholesale electric rate case.

The board directed that amounts due to the town on outstanding obligations (taxes, assessments, delinquent utilities bills, and the like) be deducted from refunds due any individual. The board also decided that former customers would have nearly two months to apply for a refund and that the administrative costs of processing the refund should be deducted from the amount refunded.

In authorizing the deduction of outstanding obligations from any refunds which might otherwise be given, board members have indicated that good business principles would not be followed if money were refunded to persons who owed the town money. Former customers no longer on the town electric system will have until July 18 to apply for a refund at the town office. To be eligible, a customer must have been on the town system between May 1, 1976 and Dec. 28, 1977. Customers still on the system do not need to make an application.

The town administrator indicated that the administration costs to be deducted would be less than $3,000. He said the total refund can be as high as $186,000. He pointed out that the customers eligible for refunds paid out less than $150,000 for the power on which the refund is based and are receiving interest on their payments. The highest refund will go to the Town of Fountain, a Farmville wholesale customer. Fountain has already received nearly $13,000 and will receive approximately $6,000 more.

Wishing an Ancient Wish

About 2,000 B.C., a Babylonian named Elmesu wrote what may have been the first Father's Day card. On a clay tablet, Elmesu inscribed a message, asking the gods to grant his father "good health and long life." Mrs. John Bruce Dodd started the American custom of Father's Day 70 years ago. Father's Day was first observed in the United States on June 19, 1910. Father's Day now is celebrated each year on the third Sunday in June. The wishes of many Americans for their fathers this Sunday will echo the wishes of Elmesu 4,000 years ago: "good health and long life."

ECU News Bureau

BATH — The colorful history of colonial Bath — the 275-year-old town which nurtured North Carolina's oldest church and served as a home for its most notorious pirate — will be presented in the July 26 Historic Bath Symposium.

Tours of the preserved buildings of Bath (including its 18th and 19th century homes and St. Thomas' Episcopal Church), lectures on the history of Bath and coastal North Carolina, a documentary film, and performance of the outdoor drama, BLACKBEARD: KNIGHT OF THE BLACK FLAG will be featured.

Symposium participants will also be served lunch and dinner at Bath's Ruritan Club.

chives and History, whose topic is "Furnishing Historic Interiors: The Bath Experience;" and members of the BLACKBEARD drama's technical staff who will discuss the history and production of the play.

The $35 per person symposium fee covers lectures, two meals, the film, admission to the play and tours of Bath's historic buildings.

Incorporated in 1705, colonial "Bath Towne" is noteworthy for several reasons. Its St. Thomas' Church is the state's oldest church in continuous use; it served as a refuge for survivors of the Indian massacre along the Pamlico; it was the first official port of entry in the colony; it was the site of the first North Carolina Library and the first free Club.

school in North Carolina; and it was an early colonial capital.

Its citizens have included three royal governors under the Lords Proprietors as well as Edward Teach, better known as Blackbeard the pirate.

The $35 per person symposium fee covers lectures, two meals, the film, admission to the play and tours of Bath's historic buildings. Since registration will be limited and must be complete by July 10, early reservation is advised.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Being a housewife has never been able to attract well-adjusted people.

If a woman is stable when she enters the marriage state, she doesn't stay that way long. Socks disappear in the washer, fingerprints appear near the ceiling, a pair of sunglasses are found in the meat keeper and for no apparent reason an old Girl Scout pin appears on the dog's tail.

Whenever I get a letter regarding one of the mysteries of keeping house, I just smile a crooked little smile, put the letter in a drawer and go back to humming and rocking.

The drawer is quite full and maybe I should share them with you to let you know you're not alone.

A poor, unfortunate woman from Connecticut noted a slow-drumming bathroom sink a few weeks ago. When her husband removed the pipe, she discovered: one dime, six pennies, three Bingo chips, two dice, six toothpaste caps, a few lollipop sticks and one toy fire engine ladder.

"I'm no fool," she said. "I am convinced whatever was down my drain was gambling and the ladder had to be used as a means to get in and out of the drain. I posted a sign that said, 'NO GAMBLING.' You understand that, don't you?"

Sure.

Another woman from New York wrote, "I have a monster chair that claims and stores pins, needles, curlers, pencils, pretzels, apple cores, but it never gives back the good stuff. I actually saw it devour a mosaic ring my husband bought me in Israel and a pair of expensive cuticle scissors, but when we turned the chair upside down they weren't there. Tell me you've had that experience!"

Sure.

One woman said she was emptying her son's jeans pocket before she put them in the washer and took out a total of 26 items including rope, rubber handle bars, flashlight, button hooks, ashtray, thimble, badge, watch chain, knife, paper punch and about 100 used stamps. THE POCKET HAD THE CAPACITY OF A QUARTER IF YOU SUCKED IN YOUR STOMACH.

I have been a housewife for 31 years.

I found my Social Security card in the silverware drawer, and a rectal thermometer in the pocket of my ski jacket.

I don't know anything anymore.

Our Best To The Grads

Hundreds of Pitt County school students will be completing their high school work tonight as graduation ceremonies are held at North Pitt, Farmville Central, D. H. Conley and Ayden-Grifton High Schools.

They will be joining Rose High graduates, who had their ceremonies last week, and hundreds of other graduates in counties through eastern North Carolina in completing their secondary school careers.

For many, perhaps most of the graduates there will be further training ahead—college, technical or business schools or on-the-job training, but we can't say too much for all that they have done at this point in life. They have devoted 12 years to formal education and, while some say a high school diploma is not enough training to get along in life, it is even more difficult to get along without one.

What these young people have done is something to be proud of. They have completed a course of study and they will now be leaving the familiar surroundings of their school to go on to new endeavors. We wish for each and every one of them the very best.

Four Cylinders Not So Bad

It wasn't so long ago that most of us dreamed of high powered eight-cylinder gas monsters on which to take our weekend jaunts.

As gas prices have soared, however, we have come to decide that the six-cylinder engines are not so bad. After all, that's what most cars were powered with prior to World War II and immediately thereafter. Now, however, come reports of mass retooling by the major auto manufacturers to build four-cylinder engines and in about three years they will be turning them out by the millions.

As a matter of fact, with gas prices still soaring, the four cylinder engine doesn't sound so bad either. By 1983 we might be begging for them.

THIS AFTERNOON

A Public Scrutiny

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — When North Carolina Supreme Court Justice Joe Branch nods in favor of barring the public from the courtroom he is blinking at the other side of the equation.

There are times when public scrutiny is essential to seeing that justice is done. That is why history and tradition in this nation, and especially in North Carolina, have demanded that court proceedings be open to the public.

There was a time in Colonial days when the King's men did as they pleased, the public be damned. Thus came the fiat in law and Constitution for "open" trials.

Increasingly of late lawyers and the judiciary are twisting that command to mean that the public can be banished in favor of fair treatment of the defendant.

Justice Branch now joins the list of those who favor closing some court proceedings, including pre-trial hearings and trials themselves.

News

"You ought to weigh the danger to the accused against the possible dangers, whatever they are, of not having immediate news to the public," Branch is saying.

It is not a matter of news to the public. The press is only part of the public. It is a matter of public watch over public courts. There are details too numerous to recount in which public scrutiny has meant a fair deliverance of justice rather than impeding justice.

Not all learned jurists adhere to Justice Branch's philosophy. But here in North Carolina, few there are who will speak out publicly.

An Appeals Court Judge, who remains nameless because he like his colleagues answer to Justice Branch, says it is a fact that most public officials prefer to conduct business in private rather than in public.

BILL NOBLITT

That is why the law must demand that the public's business be open to the public. That includes courts.

"It may on occasion prove embarrassing to the defendant to find friends or neighbors sitting there watching. It may even on occasion make it more difficult for the courts to perform their jobs."

"But I'll tell you this. 'If I were on trial, I'd sure want somebody watching,' this judge said bluntly.

Then he adds: "Don't quote me on that. It's not my place to talk about this. That's Joe Branch's job."

The debate continues in the wake of a U.S. Supreme Court decision last year that certain pre-trial proceedings could be closed to the public. The determining factor is whether publicity will hinder the right of a defendant to a fair and impartial trial.

Growing

At first, courts showed a reluctance to go along with closing proceedings, but the initial silence of high government officials in this state and across the nation has obviously encouraged judges to close the doors. It is happening more and more.

Aside from whether an open trial directly affects the rights of the defendant, there is also the matter of efficiency and speediness and fairness.

Gaston County Court Watchers by their intensive study of the courts resulting in a detailed report on problems and recommended solutions demonstrates further the need for citizen involvement in the process of justice. That activity has won national attention and acclaim, and it has been well stated that every county should organize such a volunteer effort.

There are numerous safe-

Other Editors Say But Don't Park

(Carter News-Times)

Anyone paying any attention at all to recent actions and comments by Emerald Isle officials and citizens has to be confused.

In one breath, officials decry what they term "bad publicity", saying that it keeps the tourists away from the resort town. In another breath, these same officials make it as difficult as possible for any tourist to feel welcome.

Emerald Isle residents and officials complain loudly about visitors parking in residential areas. No Parking signs are posted every few feet and countless hours of discussion are undertaken on how to keep these people out of the residential areas. But when it comes to doing just that, town officials turn their backs on the answers.

At a recent meeting, one commissioner noted that private citizens and businessmen were willing to provide some of the needed funds for a lifeguard to be put at the Bogue Inlet Pier. That offer raised the ire of nearly every commissioner and the mayor, and all because the guard would be in the business area.

The best way to keep visitors out of residential areas is to make the commercial areas as attractive as possible. The Bogue Inlet Pier is ideal for a lifeguard. It has the largest parking area in town, enough for 500 cars. A merchant-provided free parking lot is also available there.

By not jumping on the offer and aiding the effort to put a lifeguard there, the commissioners only added to the possibility that a visitor will head away from the commercial area and check out a parking space in front of a residence.

Although Emerald Isle wants to be seen as a family beach and apparently does not want to encourage "day visitors", there is no way town officials can keep tourists out of town. Why not work together to make the tourists' stay as law-abiding, welcome and friendly as possible? After all, tourists are the heart of a resort town.

REAL HEROES

A brave man challenging evil is always an inspiring sight. History gives us an account of Anthony, stalking in the streets of Antioch in order to denounce its prefect, of Athanasius, seizing the bridle of Emperor Constantine's horse and rebuking the emperor for his sins as he rode for the first time into Constantinople; of the monk Telemachus, rushing between two gladiators in the Roman arena, paying for his boldness with his life but

Nero's Artistic Nature

By HUGH MULLIGAN

ROME (AP) — Jet-lag thoughts of an insomniac strolling about the Forum at dawn in the company of a few Roman cats:

The Roman Empire might not have slipped into decay had the Emperor Nero stuck to music, his first love. After himself, of course.

Nero fancied himself a great singer. He even made a professional debut as a Neapolitan tenor, having Mario Lanza's girl if not gifts. The historian Suetonius, who wrote a gossipy "Lives of the Twelve Caesars," carped that his voice was "feeble."

Maybe so, but on at least one occasion he brought the house down. Just after the emperor's performance, the roof of the theater collapsed. Nero scoffed at reports of an earthquake in the area and said it was a mark of divine favor, an ovation from the gods.

The emperor probably invented the opera claque. He hired Roman mobs to applaud his concerts, which became his own unique version of the command performance. The audience was commanded to attend. No one was permitted to leave under pain of becoming the Piatti del Fiorno in the lions' den while Nero was responding to calls from his well-paid claque for yet another encore.

Women gave birth during his performances, history records, and men played dead so they could be carried out of the arena in mid-aria.

The Emperor, as every "Quo Vadis" movie fan knows, had his kinky side as well as his artistic nature, although the Hollywood of Hays Office days did not even come close to portraying his perversions. "There was no family relationship which he did not criminally abuse," wrote Suetonius, my guide on this dawn stroll.

Nero kept in shape for his singing career by racing chariots and testing his skills at the art of the gladiator against opponents who were tied up and sometimes blindfolded.

He was obsessed with fears of plots, poisonings and regicide. Rightly so, as there was a good deal of that going around at the time. Uncle Caligula was murdered by his own bodyguard. The Emperor Claudius, whom his mother went to the trouble of marrying so Nero could inherit the throne, was poisoned. But when Mom got too bossy, Nero had her put to death, along with his wife, Octavia, his foster brother Britannicus, and his old tutor and speech writer, Lucius Annaeus Seneca, who became too boring to have around the palace.

Just when Nero was in danger of running out of enemies to bully and torture by means other than his singing, a new religious movement aroused his fears.

"Punishments were devised against the Christians," Suetonius tells us, "a sect professing a new and mischievous religious

Anderson's Paint-Job

By JOSEPH J. BALDACCHINO JR.

Should John B. Anderson's independent candidacy for the president be taken seriously? Considering that Anderson is a liberal and the country is looking for a conservative after four years of misgovernment by Jimmy Carter's McGovernite dominated administration, the answer at first sight would appear to be, quite simply, No.

There is one caveat, however, which is potentially significant enough to change this assessment drastically and to transform Anderson into, if not a winner, at least a very big factor in the 1980 race. The caveat concerns the news media and whether they will accurately convey the Illinois congressman's record to the voting public.

It may yet be too early to make predictions with any certainty, but already there are disturbing signs that powerful elements of the mass-communications industry will seek to play down Anderson's liberal-left ideology and pass him off as a political "moderate," conveniently situated between Carter and Reagan on the issues.

Item: The Baltimore Sun — which, by means of well-timed endorsements and some exceptionally helpful news "coverage," two years ago plucked from obscurity a little-known has-been who appeared headed nowhere and propelled him into the Maryland governorship — now detects a "chance" for Anderson. But only says the paper, "if he emerges as a centrist third-force candidate" and as a "moderate."

Another item: George Gallup, the 79-year-old dean of American pollsters, is slightly less optimistic about Anderson's capturing the White House this year, but thinks he is in a strong position to start a middle-of-the-road third party, with a base of liberal Republicans and conservative Democrats, and capable of winning elections regularly within a few years.

The trouble with such scenarios, however, is that to be a "centrist," it helps to be somewhere near the center philosophically, and this John Anderson most emphatically is not. Anderson's house voting record and his campaign speeches reveal, on the contrary, that he favors the new federal Department of Education, gun control, the Equal Rights Amendment, SALT II, and federal funding of abortion. He opposes the MX mobile missile, the B-1 bomber, the nuclear carrier, the military draft and virtually any move that would noticeably strengthen this nation's defense posture. He also opposes any general tax cut for the American people.

Despite such extreme positions, many in the press and the intellectual community persist in calling Anderson a moderate. This is a function of their insistence, against all the evidence, that the most liberal Republican is by definition roughly equivalent with the most conservative Democrat. Since Anderson is a Republican (though at this writing many of his House colleagues are preparing to boot him out of the GOP conference), the argument goes, he must be a moderate regardless of his leftist positions. Hence Dr. Gallup's presumably straight-faced suggestion that Anderson could coalesce with conservative Democrats to form a new center party.

Nonsense. If, as Edmund Burke observed two centuries ago, a party is a body of men "joined upon some principle in which they are all agreed," then party

Arizona Weighs Jojoba Crop

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Between 100,000 and 150,000 acres of Arizona farmland, some once used for growing high grade cotton, are idle now because the water table is falling and the cost of pumping water is rising.

Slowly, however, some of the land is being made productive again with a crop that is still experimental, but which some innovative farmers and university officials believe could become the basis of a major new industry.

The crop is jojoba — pronounced hoboba, with the emphasis on the second syllable — a bush that needs so little water that it thrives on the arid, sometimes mountainous lands that are so hostile to most other vegetation.

Jojoba is amazing. It produces oil, a finer grade lubricating oil than that from the endangered sperm whale, an oil so pure it requires little or no refining. It has potential in cosmetics, foods, and polishing waxes.

Nobody knows how many uses there are for jojoba, but enough is known to astound most people: candles, animal feed, ornamental hedges, much, textiles-sizing and even in the production of penicillin.

And yet, after analyzing a sample from the University of Arizona, a major oil company said jojoba's future might even be in production of numerous other products, such as resins, dependent on jojoba's rare alcohol.

Officials of the Office of Arid Land Studies, University of Arizona, are in a mild dilemma: They do not wish to raise unwarranted hopes, and they do not wish to dash hopes either. But they are excited.

R. Leslie Rawls, a former Indiana farmer now with the Arid Lands unit, states, "it is on its way to becoming an established agricultural product."

What is needed, said Rawls, is more acreage than the 6,000 to 10,000 acres expected to be under cultivation in Arizona and California by the end of the year.

"We need an acreage base to supply enough year in and year out," he says, adding "a number of large companies have expressed interest but have not gotten into the business because of the uncertain supply."

That base is building. In this year alone, about 2,000 to 4,000 acres will be planted in Arizona and California, probably doubling the size of existing plantings. The pace is picking up, and for sound financial reasons.

When plants mature in five years they give 2 to 3 pounds of oil each, according to Rawls, who prefers to be conservative. The oil wholesales for $6.50 to $10 a pound, or $45 to $70 a gallon.

Bob Breen and Peter Childs, young Ohioans who founded Sunland Jojoba and operate experimental acreage in nearby Marana, say a smart farmer can obtain $3,000 an acre with jojoba versus $300 or $400 with cotton.

To Sunland and other entrepreneurs, however, there is another and perhaps even greater advantage. Jojoba needs only a fraction of the water absorbed by cotton. Rawls estimates it at about one-fifth.

The crop therefore is more naturally suited to southern Arizona than is cotton, which in a sense was imposed on the dusty land with the aid of irrigation.

There are difficulties too. Mature plants can survive frost, but young plants might not. Jay McKenzie, a recent business graduate of Arizona, now Sunland's manager, says they lost most

There are challenges also involving sex determination. Females produce the seed, but telling males and females apart is difficult for several years. And, in the wild at least, the male contributor to the seed is unknown.

As a result, there are great variations in production, with some plants producing no seed and others enormous amounts, even as high as 15 pounds, it is alleged. As strains are refined, variations might be reduced.

To do so, however, requires a great deal of entrepreneurial risk. Sunland, which claims to be already in the black, now offers limited partnerships to wealthy investors as one way of raising funds.

Its main business, however, continues to be the growing and selling of seed and seedlings, various grower services, cloning, plantation development, and proselytizing.

They are convinced, as is Rawls and his associates at the Arid Lands office, that the future is with jojoba. You have to be convinced when, among all the other things, jojoba helps promote hair growth names are meaningless. What counts are beliefs, and in these, Anderson has far more in common with Sen. George McGovern (D-S.D.) than with any conservative, Democrat or Republican. It was precisely such beliefs, of course, which just eight years ago earned for McGovern the worst pasting ever suffered by a major-party presidential candidate. Assuming the voters are given an accurate reading on Anderson, he is in for the same rough treatment.

belief." Across the Tiber now, the first shafts of sunlight are gilding the magnificent dome Michelangelo devised for St. Peter's Basilica, which dominates the square once known as the Circus of Nero.

From the Janiculum Hill, now occupied by the North American College, Nero used to watch the martyrdom of the early Christians, accomplished with the emperor's imaginative flair.

"Dressed in the skins of wild animals," the historian Tacitus wrote, "they were torn to pieces by dogs, or were crucified, or burned to death."

Nero too was an insomniac. He often strolled at night in the hillside garden that now looks down on the Vatican. Tacitus tells us he used for lamps to light his way on these fear-filled nocturnal walks "the living bodies of Christians, covered with pitch and set afire."

In A.D. 64, the famous fire swept Rome. Nero blamed the Christians and put many to death on charges of arson. But Suetonius claims he set the fire himself and "watched it singing 'The Fall of Ilium' (Troy), while accompanying himself on the lyre."

I wonder how the tune went.

Anyway, Nero didn't fiddle while Rome burned, because the Italians took an awful long time inventing the violin. Nicole Amati and his genius pupil, Antonio Stradivari, were 16 centuries away.

Four years after the great fire, Roman legions in Spain revolted and recognized Galba, their leader, as emperor. Others joined the uprising. In panic, Nero fled Rome but was soon overtaken. He elected suicide, the noble Roman exit, but needed help. The scribe ever at his side to jot down imperial lyrics and bits of melody had to guide the dagger to his throat.

The emperor's last words were not of the grandeur that was Rome but of the glory that was his voice: "Dead, and so great an artist."

Daylight has fully come now to the Forum of the Caesars, the sun pinking these ancient stones with the spectral blood of the foul deeds done here. In Rome, the Eternal City, history is a daily encounter, the past is present in the old aqueduct out the train window, in the shadow of a temple column falling across the bus stop, in the ruins of an old wall that anchor the clothes lines of a modern block of flats, in the enormous sandaled foot of a Roman soldier, the rest of whose statue has been missing for centuries.

Seated amidst the tumbled stones of the Temple of Venus Genetrix, watched by a lean and hungry Roman cat, I cope with the crossword puzzle in the Rome Daily American:

Who first stabbed Julius Caesar? ... Five letters, beginning with "c".

Can't be Cassius or Cimber. Cinna? No. Ecco, it must be Casca.

Mayors Are Generally Kind To Carter

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer
SEATTLE (AP) — The nation's mayors, battling employment and fearing summer violence, complained all week about President Carter's economic stand, but most left their annual convention saying they love him just the same.

That's politics, explained Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., new president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

"While we may not agree with some of the positions he takes and are honest enough to say that publicly, there's nothing inconsistent in that and our support of him," Hatcher said.

Carter was one of three presidential candidates to visit the meeting this week. Although Republican Ronald Reagan and independent John Anderson received cordial welcomes, applause rang louder than "Hail to the Chief" when Carter walked into the hall Tuesday.

When he left the mayors, the Democrats among them endorsed Carter for reelection with extravagant language. And the Republicans, who endorsed Reagan, generally had kind words to say about Carter in public.

It could be that they just know which side their bread is buttered on and see Carter as the likely winner, since the other candidates promised them more. But they say this has nothing to do with their loyalty to the president.

"It is not a simple matter of the lesser of two evils," Hatcher said. "I try to look at all the programs, all the efforts that have been made on behalf of the cities over the last 3½ years."

"I find a great deal there that I can support and can support enthusiastically," Hatcher said. "That does not mean that I agree with everything that this president has done."

"It was not a 'Gosh, he's the only one we have and we might as well support him' kind of thing," said host Mayor Charles Royer of Seattle. "Most of the people among the Democratic mayors had started their support of the president when he was at 23 percent in the polls, when he did not look like a winner."

Mayor Helen Boosalis of Lincoln, Neb., in line to be the first woman president of the conference next year, said she had never endorsed a presidential candidate before but was backing Carter.

"I haven't agreed with everything, perhaps, that the president has done," she said. "But I think it's important to elect people to office, whether or not you agree with every point, who are most competent and most capable of leading our cities, our states, our country."

These same mayors adopted without a dissenting vote a resolution demanding major federal relief from the recession and unemployment that has many of them biting their nails.

The pump priming the mayors want would cost an estimated $10 billion and Carter made it clear he would not do anything nearly that extravagant, although he did hint at some other relief, expected to be a tax cut.

"I don't think that there are great differences between what the mayors of this country want and the president wants," Hatcher insisted. "I think we have to sit down together and work out those areas where there appear to be differences."

But in his acceptance speech, Hatcher told a different story. He spoke of families unable to buy food, desperate young people, and of the prospect of urban violence of the kind that shook the nation in 1967.

"As demonstrated just weeks ago in Miami, today we must seriously question whether we have come as far since 1967 as we are telling ourselves and as our leaders are telling the nation," Hatcher said.

While the cities simmer through double-digit unemployment, Hatcher said, Washington is responding with "a frenzy of budget-cutting fever."

"This current mania in Washington to balance the federal budget at any cost is hardly a courageous answer to our serious national problems," Hatcher said. "Millions of American people are being denied basic necessities in order to obtain an illusory and almost meaningless national goal."

Then, later, Hatcher said, "This administration has been... very sensitive to the concerns of the cities and the mayors."

When they have sat down to bargain in the past, Hatcher said, "we have not always won... but there have been a number of instances where he has changed his position as a result of the arguments submitted to him by the mayors."

Banner Year Seen In Shrimp Harvest

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — It looks like 1980 will produce a banner shrimp harvest for North Carolina's commercial fishermen, according to predictions by the state Division of Marine Fisheries.

If those predictions prove to be accurate, commercial fishermen will net the most shrimp this year since 1976.

"State shrimpers are going to be back in the shrimping business this year," Connell E. Purvis, director of the fisheries division, said Wednesday.

Purvis said studies indicated that the 1980 shrimp harvest would be about 4 million pounds of cleaned shrimp. That figure tops the annual average for the last few years of 3.6 million pounds.

Shrimp is the state's most valuable seafood, representing $10 million to fishermen last year.

The 1979 season produced a below-average shrimp harvest of 3,081,822 pounds. Still, last year's crop was an improvement over 1978 when a record low of 1.8 million pounds was landed.

The 1980 crop could be the largest harvest since 4.2

million pounds were landed in 1976.

Hairy Method To Deter Deer

MONTAGUE, Mich. (AP) — Larry Weesies and his two cousins were pulling their hair over the deer problems at their western Michigan celery farm.

That was before Montague barber Gary Knabb gave them some hair of his own.

Industry observers say the price of shrimp to consumers probably would drop this year because of the increased supply. But, Purvis said, the larger harvest probably will help fishermen offset rising production costs.

The three farmers recently began spreading discarded human hair in their celery fields in hopes that the scent will keep deer from munching on the plants.

"It's too early to say if this will work, but we are giving it a try," Weesies said

ing. Biologists say the size of the harvest is linked water with salinity and temperature.

As recently as six weeks ago, prospects for the 1980 harvest were dim because rain and melting snow dropped salt water levels to zero in some areas. Purvis said recent dry weather and the apparent late migration by shrimp averted a disaster.

But in looking ahead, Purvis warned that North Carolina might not see large shrimp harvests again.

He said changes in water quality, mainly through increased large-scale drainage in the coastal area, might permanently alter the environment.

Navy Family Relying On Food Stamps To Get By

By HAL SPENCER
Associated Press Writer

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Navy Petty Officer Paul Fineberg, his uniform still crisply creased despite the muggy heat, sat at a kitchen table and tried to explain why he is applying for food stamps.

"We can't really live on my salary. We have one child and another on the way. I've got to pay the bills."

Fineberg's wife, Monica, fanned herself and nodded agreement to her husband's lament. "If we're lucky, sometimes we can afford to go out to Burger King," she said with a short laugh.

The new baby will, ironically, ease the Finebergs' money pinch by making the family eligible for food stamps.

Department of Defense and Navy spokesmen in Washington readily concede that a growing number of servicemen and women, probably numbering in the thousands, must rely on food stamps to supplement government-paid incomes battered by inflation.

"It makes me feel like I'm on welfare or something. But we need the extra $50 food stamps will give us," said Mrs. Fineberg, whose child is due any day. Their son, Brad, is 2.

Her husband, home for lunch, added, "There's only so much reimbursement you can accept in the form of pride. It isn't putting food on the table."

Fineberg has applied for officers' training school. Failing that, he will not re-enlist for a third hitch because of the low pay, he said. And many of his fellow "career men" feel the same way, he added.

Navy command has urged sailors to use food stamps, he said, "and more of us are doing it."

Major Erik Opsahl, a Department of Defense spokesman, said of the roughly 2 million men and women in the armed forces, about 62 thousand are "potentially eligible for food stamps."

The Pentagon doesn't know exactly how many are using the federal program now, he said, but they appear to number in the thousands.

Opsahl said it was impossible to say at what income a serviceman qualified for food stamps. "That depends on other factors," such as the number of dependents and other sources of income, he said.

Last year, about $2.2

MUSICAL PROGRAM

BETHEL — A musical program will be held at Mayo Chapel Baptist Church Saturday at 7 p. m.

On the program will be the Junior Consulators of Stokes, the Gospel Five of Oak City, the Gospel Silverettes of Greenville and the Sunlight Gospel Singers of Kinston. The pastor and members invite the public.

MILITARY FAMILY — Chief Petty Officer Paul Fineberg poses at home with his wife Monica and son Brad. Fineberg says it's tough supporting a family on his pay from the Navy and he must supplement his income with food stamps. (AP Laserphoto) million in food stamps were redeemed in Navy commissaries alone. "This figure does not reflect Navy members redeeming food stamps in local supermarkets," said Lieutenant Ken Satterfield, a Navy spokesman in Washington.

Both officers confirmed the Defense Department actively encourages military personnel to use food stamps if they qualify. "We have sent a notice to all Navy ships and stations to increase awareness of the program," Satterfield said.

"The Navy pay is OK. I'm not knocking the Navy," said Fineberg, whose E-5 rank is equivalent to a sergeant in the Army. "The problem is inflation, and the government's refusal to recognize that the raises we get just aren't enough."

Mrs. Fineberg keeps a budget, which "we really stick to," she said.

For food, she sets aside $250 of the $676 net monthly income. Another $144 is earmarked for "gas and extra food items."

Another $195 goes to pay off loans for college.

furniture, a washer and a dryer; $30 is set aside for the telephone, and $20 goes to pay the charge card bill.

The Navy pays utilities and apartment rent.

"Whatever is left over is put in the bank for insurance and as savings," she said.

Mrs. Fineberg said she was counting on the extra $50 in food for the new baby's needs. "Formula is expensive."

The fact that the couple can buy virtually all their food at the less-expensive Navy commissary "doesn't help us all that much. We still don't have enough money," she said.

Mrs. Fineberg said her father, who was a career non-commissioned officer in the National Guard, raised eight children on his military pay.

"There was a time when a career military man could do that," Fineberg said. "That's what I wanted to do ... not to get rich, but just live in the middle."

The couple said they have been forced to give up annual visits to Mrs. Fineberg's parents in Michigan, as well as simpler forms of entertainment such as movies.

"There's so many guys getting out. It is just too hard to live on this pay," said Fineberg.

He acknowledged that times can be equally tough in civilian life.

"But the chance is always there to do better, and that isn't so true in the military," he said.

"You can only move up in rank so fast. You have to wait so long between ranks, and you're locked in when it comes to pay," he said.

Nurse Pool Being Set Up

Helen Abbott, nurse recruiter at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, said that PCMH is adding a new dimension to its nursing service that will enhance the quality of patient care.

She said that a supplemental nursing pool, also known as a "casual labor force," will tap the community's resource of licensed nurses who do not choose to work in full-time employment.

The spokesman said that while the idea is a new approach to nurse recruitment in eastern North Carolina, the guidelines for the pool are modeled after similar programs at hospitals in the state.

She explained that the pool allows nurses to choose the days they want to work, providing they are available to work 16 hours a month. The schedule, she noted, allows nurses to remain up-to-date with their profession, remain a viable resource in the community, and still have time for other duties.

According to the nurse recruiter, when nurses are employed in the pool, they may call the nursing office periodically to check on the availability of work. Nurses who have not worked in the last two years will receive a more extensive orientation than nurses with recent experience, she pointed out.

Europeans Trying Narrow Differences With U.S.

By SAMUEL KOO
Associated Press Writer

VENICE, Italy (AP) — Western Europe's leaders open a two-day conference in the splendor of this lagoon city today, determined to narrow their differences with the United States on major issues that threaten world peace.

The Red Brigades, Italy's most feared urban guerrilla gang, has threatened to mount an offensive to disrupt the conference of the nine Common Market heads of government.

As a result, extraordinary security measures have been mounted, and Venice in the height of the tourist season appeared to be a city under martial law.

Combat-ready troops in armored personnel carriers guarded land approaches to the city and its Marco Polo airport which was closed to commercial traffic.

Machine-gun mounted coast guard launches patrolled the canals while police helicopters hovered overhead. Nearly 10,000 paramilitary police reinforcements brought in from as far as Naples were deployed throughout the city.

Naval frogmen on the look out for hidden explosives repeatedly dived into the waters around the tiny island of San Giorgio Maggiore, the conference site, across from St. Mark's Square.

"We want to give peace to the leaders who are discussing world peace," said Salvatore Pandolfini, the chief security officer of the Venice region.

The leaders of Belgium, Britain, Denmark, France, Italy, The Netherlands, Luxembourg, Ireland and West Germany are meeting in the 16th-century Benedictine monastery, adorned with Renaissance masterpieces.

The same site will be used for the big seven summit of the United States, Canada, Japan, Britain, France, West Germany and Italy on June 22-23.

A major point of contention between the United States and its European allies appeared to have fizzled after the Common Market leaders backed away from a strong Middle East policy initiatives.

President Carter has strongly urged the Europeans not to introduce a new peace formula for fear of undermining the U.S.-Sponsored Camp David talks between Egypt and Israel.

The White House announced on Wednesday that the stalled Egypt-Israel talks on Palestinian autonomy will resume shortly.

"We still have to get our acts together on Afghanistan and Iran, and we just couldn't create more trouble with Washington," an Italian official said.

Diplomatic sources said the first draft of the European proposal would have called for the participation of the Palestine Liberation Organization in a comprehensive Middle East peace conference.

But on the eve of the conference, the sources said the European declaration being drafted would simply reaffirm the right of the Palestinians to self-determination and call for regular consultations between the European Economic Community and the Arab League of which the PLO is a member.

It would also demand that Israel abandon its settlement policy, propose talks on the status of Israeli-occupied Jerusalem and urge all parties in the Middle East to renounce the use of force, the sources said.

The European heads of state are expected to engage in sharp debate over French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's warning that the EEC should not be expanded to include Spain and Portugal until other community problems are solved.

About 70 percent of the community's $23 billion a year budget goes for agricultural programs. These farm costs will increase if Spain and Portugal enter the community.

But some sources here discounted Giscard d'Estaing's warning, saying that it was meant for domestic consumption in preparation for the French election next year.

Also on the agenda are selection of a new president for the Common Market Commission, energy and the EEC's relations with poorer nations.

Japan's Big 9 Post Profits

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's nine major oil companies posted profits of $689.5 million in the fiscal year that ended in March, the largest in the nation's history.

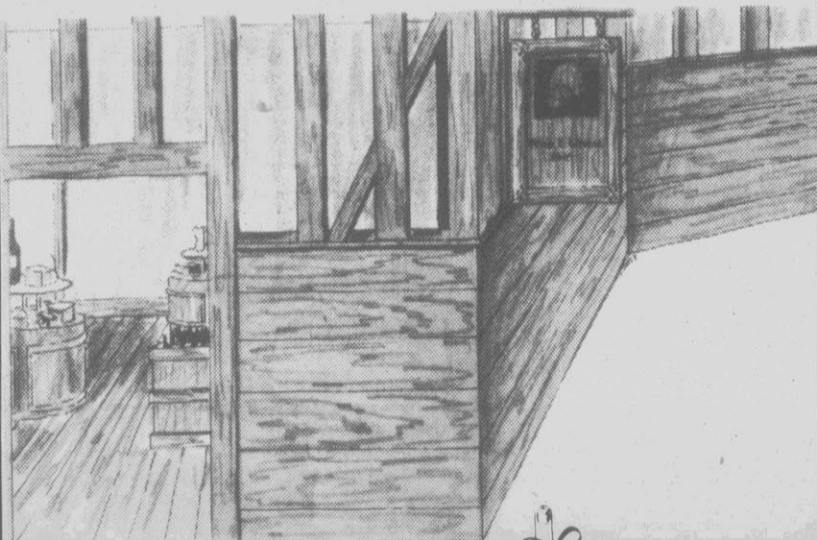

Nippon Oil, Japan's biggest refiner and distributor of oil, had profits of $179.1 million, and a spokesman said the company had no choice but to pass OPEC price increases on to consumers. This happened seven times in 1979.

He said the profit-to-sales margin for the company was only 1.5 percent, less than most Japanese industries.

"Our profits have to go up to counter the effects of inflation and higher purchases for oil," he said. "We have to make record profits each year just to stay in business."

Says Emigration Plan By Armstrong Church

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Evangelist Herbert W. Armstrong has a blueprint for mass emigration to a foreign country by his Worldwide Church of God followers, says a former employee who has written a book about the group.

David Robinson of Tulsa, in an interview published today by the Daily Oklahoman, said the plan parallels the emigration of the Rev. Jim Jones and his Peoples Temple followers to Jonestown, Guyana.

But Robinson, a 57-year-old former Worldwide minister, said it may be some time before full details of what he knows about the plan on Armstrong's operation are revealed. He said he expected a court order soon would bar him from discussing the church or its founder.

Robinson's book about Armstrong and the California-based evangelical group has become the center of a $2 million lawsuit.

Five thousand copies of "Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web" were stored in a Kansas City, Mo., warehouse following a June 2 restraining order signed by District Judge William Means preventing the book's distribution.

Means granted the temporary injunction after two Worldwide Church members filed the lawsuit against Robinson, claiming publication of the book interfered with their freedom of religion. A hearing on whether Means' restraining order should be lifted has been scheduled for Friday.

Robinson said he fears Worldwide Church members are being "led into cultism" by Armstrong.

He alleged the 87-year-old church leader has drawn up plans to evacuate his followers to Petra, a small community in Jordan, to "await the end of the world."

Robinson said Armstrong is looked upon by his followers as a God. He said followers are being taught

TO PREACH
Eldress Rhuarma Knox will preach at the Warren Chapel Church Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Saturday at 8 p.m., the pageant, "The Great White Throne," will be presented. Elder A.L. Miller, pastor, invites the members and friends of the church to attend these services.

Armstrong is infallible — and he said "they have gotten a lot of people ready to leave the country now."

Robinson said he has no quarrel with the membership of the Worldwide Church, but alleges "it is the leadership which has jumped the track into cultism, just like Jim Jones did."

Jones and his followers died in a ritualistic mass murder-suicide in November 1978.

Church officials were not available for comment immediately.

Australians Claim UFO Was Sighted

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Australians in the bush country who witnessed last year's fiery plunge of Skylab are seeing things again. Widespread sightings of an unidentified flying object have been reported over Kalgoorlie, 370 miles east of here. The manager of the Australian Broadcasting Corp. in Kalgoorlie, Stanley Brown, said he received hundreds of calls Wednesday night reporting various descriptions of a fiery object in the sky.

All reports, however, indicated that the object entered the atmosphere to the north-east of Kalgoorlie and travelled in a southern trajectory towards Esperance, 210 miles to the south.

Jack Cashman, a mine worker who made the first report, said the object had a yellow-green-white tail that looked similar to one trailing Skylab when it re-entered the earth's atmosphere on July 12 of last year.

Brown said there have been recent reports of an American spacecraft in trouble and it was conceivable that its re-entry into the earth's atmosphere accounted for Wednesday night's sighting.

However, there had also been unconfirmed reports that a Soviet space vehicle was experiencing problems, he added.

New Agent For County

Pitt County has a new agricultural extension agent. Roger Cobb, a native of Alamance County, began work last week at the Agricultural Extension Office on Third Street.

Cobb began work June 1. He is a graduate of North Carolina State University, where he majored in agronomy. His main concentration will be field crops, with some emphasis on pesticides. Cobb indicated that tobacco is his special interest.

ROGER COBB

The assistant agricultural agent did his intern work last summer in Bladen County, specializing in field crops there also. Cobb grew up on a farm where corn, tobacco and beef cattle were grown, and according to him, this sparked his interest in agronomy.

'Love Feast' Budgetmakers..... Cost Is High

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A traditional "Love Feast" to be held next week has some state legislators wondering about the choice of eateries for the event.

The feast is the traditional event at which legislators profess to forgive and forget each other's transgressions — real or imagined — during the session.

But, some senators wonder why they have been assessed a princely $50 each to dine at Don Murray's barbecue restaurant when their House counterparts are financing a night at the more posh Angus Barn for a modest $35 each.

Sen. Marshall A. Rauch, D-Gaston, co-chairman of the Senate's love feast planning committee, said the cost difference could be attributed to the fact that there are only 50 senators while the House claims 120 members, giving that body more than $4,000 to work with.

But, still, some disgruntled senators say they prefer portershouse to barbecue, particularly in light of this year's barbecue-filled primary campaign.

"I guess they figured we didn't get enough barbecue during the campaign," said one senator.

"You should have seen all the heads shaking when they got their invitations," said another.

tion from the state sales tax when the money from their sales goes to charities. North Carolina Jaycees sold the jelly to raise money for a burn center at N.C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill.

Loans

The Senate sent back to committee a bill that would raise legal limits on interest rates charged on second mortgages. A number of legislators said they wanted time to prepare amendments to the bill, which would raise interest rates from 12 percent to 18 percent. It would also allow larger loans with longer repayment periods.

Savings and Loans

The Senate voted to delay consideration of legislation that would allow state-chartered savings and loan associations to offer checking accounts to customers. The Senate delayed the measure on a 24-18 vote, but the bill may still be considered.

Restitution

The Senate tentatively approved a bill that encourages judges to require criminals to compensate their victims for any losses suffered during the crime. The bill would not require judges to make restitution part of the sentences, but says the General Assembly recommends they consider it in handing out sentences.

Demos Enter Final Round On Platform

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
Stand-ins for President
Carter and Massachusetts
Sen. Edward Kennedy

squared off today on economic issues in the final round of hearings to shape the Democratic party's 1980 platform. The two candidates are backing sharply different solutions for the nation's economic ills of high inflation, rising unemployment and a deepening recession. Kennedy supports a $12 billion spending program to curb the recession and create jobs, while advocating mandatory wage and price controls to cope with inflation.

Carter has admitted surprise that the recession is worse than expected. Administration economists say the downturn will make it impossible for Carter to deliver on his March 14 commitment to balance the budget in 1981.

security adviser. Kennedy's representative was Peter Edelman, his chief issues adviser. Edelman told a reporter Wednesday he hopes there won't be a great deal of argument on the shape of the platform, but added, "There obviously is a lot more we have to see before we're clear just how much room there is for agreement on various of these matters."

tee on June 21-24 for review and tentative approval. Final action will come at the national convention which meets in New York City on Aug. 11-14.

Family Specialist Is Named To Board

Dr. Edward Markowski of the East Carolina University child development and family relations faculty has been appointed to the newly-established N.C. Marital and Family Therapy Certification Board.

sure that the public will be protected against "unprofessional, improper, unauthorized and unqualified use" of professional titles by marital and family therapy practitioners.

Markowski was appointed to the board by Gov. James Hunt at the recommendation of its chairman, Dr. Thomas Clark of Bowman Gray School of Medicine.

Four board members are practicing marital and family therapists who meet specified educational and experience requirements, and the remaining three are representatives of the general public who have no direct affiliation with family therapy.

The seven-member board, created by the Marital and Family Therapy Certification Act of the 1979 General Assembly, will oversee certification of individuals who use the title "Certified Marriage and Family Counselor/Therapist."

In addition to his teaching duties and maintenance of a private family therapy practice, Dr. Markowski is an active researcher whose work has been reported in professional journals and at family-related professional meetings.

UNICEF Song Brings In Funds

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — One of the most performed songs of 1979 may mean $500,000 for the world's children, says the United Nations Children's Fund.

Royalties from the song, "Too Much Heaven" were donated to UNICEF last year by the Bee Gees group. Barry, Robin and Maurice Gibb first performed the hit at a U.N. concert and a souvenir album of the concert by the Bee Gees and other popular performers has raised about $3 million, UNICEF said Wednesday. The song is expected to earn $500,000.

On Tuesday, the song was recognized by Broadcasting Music, Inc., a major American music society, as its most performed pop song of 1979. In accepting a BMI award, UNICEF executive director James P. Grant thanked performing groups and said the funds are used to help improve the situation of the world's children through programs in more than 100 developing countries.

Suit Charges Poor Diagnosis

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — A 52-year-old man who says he was told he would die of colon cancer within months has filed an $18 million lawsuit, alleging that the cancer turned out to be an inflammation.

Nick Lombardo said in the suit, filed over the weekend, that he underwent 16 months of chemotherapy before it was discovered he did not have cancer. He said the treatments affected him physically and said he is sure he eventually will get cancer because chemotherapy reduces the body's defense against disease.

Libya Limits Death Squads

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Col. Moammar Khadafy told his revolutionary committees to stop killing Libyan dissidents abroad but excluded traitors from the reprieve, the Libyan news agency JANA reported.

The Libyan strongman issued the statement Wednesday night hours after gunmen in Italy killed a Libyan businessman and wounded another.

Four other Libyan exiles in Italy and five in London, Bonn, Athens and Beirut have been killed in recent weeks, allegedly by death squads loyal to Khadafy.

JANA said Khadafy issued a statement demanding that revolutionary committees all over the world, some of which have taken over Libyan embassies, "halt the implementation of death sentences against the fugitives of the remnants of the society of exploitation except those who are proved as condemned by a revolutionary court. Those who are proved in any way that they collaborate with the Egyptian regime, Israel and America are excluded."

Khadafy said the revolutionary committees have already demonstrated no enemy is safe anywhere in the world.

"It has become clear to the revolution's enemies that London's hotels, Italy's brothels and Beirut's night clubs cannot protect them from the revolutionary committees," he said.

In the attacks Wednesday, a gunman killed a Libyan businessman in Milan's central train station, pumping six pistol shots into him as he leaped through a telephone book. The killer then escaped into the crowd.

Iran Consulate Bomb Target

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — No one was injured and no one claimed responsibility when a bomb containing nails exploded outside the former Iranian consulate here, police said.

The radio-sized bomb spewed shrapnel over a 75-foot area when it exploded late Tuesday. Lt. Russ Olson said the bomb was "strictly anti-personnel in nature," geared to harm people rather than damage buildings.

The explosion caused no damage. The consulate has been closed since President Carter ordered Iranian diplomats out of the country but continues to house an Iranian gift shop and restaurant.

In Rome, another Libyan was wounded when shot at point-blank range by a fellow Libyan who reportedly shouted "Khadafy, Khadafy." The man was later arrested while having his beard shaved at a barber shop.

Will Simulate Nuke Accident

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — On the morning of June 19, an employee at the Dresden nuclear power plant will call state officials and report a simulated nuclear accident. Within moments, a test of Illinois' nuclear emergency response procedures will be under way.

State officials said Wednesday the test would help make Illinois better able to cope with accidents such as the 1979 accident at Pennsylvania's Three Mile Island plant. During the test, teams will consider evacuation plans and begin radiological monitoring.

Officials said the federal government has required that detailed emergency response plans be prepared and tested for all the sites.

Jack Nicklaus blasts from the trap on the first green for a birdie as the ball went into the hole during

Wednesday's practice round at the U.S. Open in Springfield, N.J. (AP Laserphoto)

Watson Says He's Ready

SPRINGFIELD, N. J. (AP) — Tom Watson says he's ready for the U.S. Open championship, the one golf title he wants to win more than any other in the world.

Watson, the most outstanding golfer in the game the last three years, went into today's opening round of the 80th Open at Baltusrol Golf Club as the favorite among the field of 156. The entries include Jack Nicklaus, who won the Open here in 1967, two-time Open winner Lee Trevino, defending titleholder Hale Irwin and Seve Ballesteros, the Masters champion from Spain.

"I put a lot of pressure on myself," said Watson, winner of five tournaments this year and the leading money-winner at $359,525. "I can't treat the Open as just another golf tournament because I don't see it that way.

"It's the Super Bowl, the NBA championship and the Rose Bowl. It's impossible to say, 'It's just another golf tournament,' because it isn't."

Watson teed off today in the 16th threesome over the historic Lower Course at Baltusrol, a demanding and long par 70 that plays between 7,013 to 7,076 yards, depending on the tee placements.

Most of the players believe that even par 280 would be a good score during the four rounds, with Watson, Trevino and Nicklaus, among others, saying that one or two below par should win the $55,000 first prize in the $350,000 tournament.

The field includes 138 professionals and 18 amateurs. Among them are 10 former Open champions, including three-time winner Nicklaus and two-time winners Trevino and Irwin.

Most players agree that Baltusrol rewards accuracy from the tee, combined with length and pinpoint putting. Many put Trevino among the favorites because of his accurate drives, but he told newsmen he didn't think he had much of a chance because he is putting poorly.

"I'm playing from tee to green as well as I ever have," he said. "But I'm having more trouble with my putter than I ever had. I would have to be most fortunate to win. I played two rounds and didn't make one birdie. You can't win here without birdies."

Nicklaus also said he was having problems with his putting, although he said he had an excellent practice round Wednesday.

"I never know how I'm playing these days," he said.

"I think I'm playing very well but we have to see."

Watson said he believes the course is ideal for Nicklaus, Ballesteros, Hawaiian Open winner Andy Bean, last week's Atlanta champion Larry Nelson, Kemper Open winner John Mahaffey and Dan Pohl, a four-year pro whose best finish was a second in this year's Crosby.

Nicklaus declined to handicap the players. "I don't like to talk about somebody else's game because I don't have any control over it," he said. "If I don't play well, I don't care who is playing well."

Richard Fires Third Straight Zero As Houston Blanks Chicago, 3-0

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

J.R. Richard, the flame-throwing Houston right-hander, has been one great, big zero for the Astros lately.

Richard, 8-3, fired his third consecutive shutout and stretched his scoreless inning string to a club-record 31 Wednesday night, hurling the Astros to a 3-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

It was the eighth straight victory for the Astros, leaders in the National League's West Division, and the fourth in a row for Richard. The next run he gives up will be the first one he gives up in the month of June.

Actually, his shutout string reaches back to May 26 when he blanked San Diego in the final four innings of a 4-1 victory. Since then, he's shut out San Francisco twice and the Cubs Wednesday night.

Early in the season, he also blanked Los Angeles.

Perhaps the best description of what it's like to bat against Richard's aspirin-sized fastballs, came from Lenny Randle of the Cubs.

"He starts out throwing Alka Seltzers and ends up throwing Anacins," said Randle.

It's a nice feeling for Houston to know that Dallas isn't the only Texas town with a J.R. making news.

Elsewhere in the National League Wednesday night, Montreal also stretched its winning streak to eight games, edging San Diego 7-6, the New York Mets surprised Los Angeles 6-2, Cincinnati edged Pittsburgh 3-2, San Francisco downed Philadelphia 7-4, and St. Louis shaded Atlanta 4-3 in 10 innings.

Richard pitched a six-hitter and his eight strikeouts gave him 98 for the season. But he wasn't terribly impressed.

"I was behind a lot of guys," he said, "but sometimes, it's better not to throw strikes."

Both Preston Gomez, manager of the Cubs, and Houston Manager Bill Virdon thought the big right-hander struggled.

"He's learned to cope with his erratic spells," said Virdon.

Expos 7, Padres 6

Ron LeFlore drove in his third run of the game with a two-out, ninth-inning single that delivered Chris Speier as Montreal beat San Diego.

Speier started the winning rally with a two-out walk and moved up when reliever Elias Sosa stroked a single, setting the stage for LeFlore.

"When you win that many, it becomes a habit," Speier said of the Expo streak. "When you lose eight in a row, you start waiting around for things to happen. But this is the positive side of it."

Mets 6, Dodgers 2

Mike Jorgensen, a defensive replacement an inning earlier, ripped a grand slam home run in the bottom of the 10th to lift streaking New York over Los Angeles. It was the Mets first grand slam since Lee Mazzilli hit one July 4, 1978, almost two years ago.

The sixth victory in the last seven games for the Mets reminded Jorgensen of a remark Manager Joe Torre had made to his team.

"He told us that we were over the hump about three weeks ago," Jorgensen said.

Reds 3, Pirates 2

Frank Pastore limited Pittsburgh to seven hits and struck out 10 for his fourth straight victory as Cincinnati edged the Pirates.

"He threw in the ninth inning like he did in the first," said an admiring Chuck Tanner, manager of the Pirates.

In that ninth, Pastore, 8-2, permitted a leadoff single to Dave Parker but retired Willie Stargell, Mike Easler and Phil Garner to nail down the victory.

Giants 7, Phillies 4

Rookie Rich Murray, 22-year-old brother of Baltimore's Eddie Murray, hit his first major league home run and drove in four runs, leading San Francisco past Philadelphia.

Ed Whitson, 3-7, victim of an invisible offense until now, got the win.

"It's my time to be excited for once," said Whitson, who has seen the Giants average 0.83 runs in his last 12 appearances.

Cards 4, Braves 3

Pitcher Bob Forsch ripped a double and home run, helping St. Louis to its second victory in three starts under new Manager Whitey Herzog. Garry Templeton's two-run homer in the eighth inning tied the game for St. Louis. Then George Hendrick's two-out single in the 10th drove in the winning run following a two-base error by left fielder Brian Asselstine and an intentional walk to Ted Simmons.

UNC Assistant Broke The Rules

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — An assistant football coach at the University of North Carolina apparently violated regulations governing athletic scholarships for student athletes when he signed an appearance bond for a player charged with false pretense, a Durham newspaper has reported.

The Durham Morning Herald reported in its Thursday editions that the $500 bond was signed by Dennis Marcin, the Tar Heels' defensive coordinator, for linebacker Darrell Nicholson.

Marcin would not discuss the bond Wednesday. He referred questions to head football Coach Dick Crum.

"Basically, the deal was that there was no one in there to sign the bond for him (Nicholson) and Darrell called Denny," Crum said Wednesday night.

"Denny told me about it and didn't realize he had violated a rule. After that, I immediately called (Atlantic Coast Conference Commissioner) Bob James and informed him of the situation and he said to get someone else's name on it (the bond) and get Denny's name off."

Crum said that James said he was not sure a rule had been broken.

Nicholson, a 20-year-old junior from Winston-Salem, N.C., is accused of obtaining a blank check that had been signed by Kenneth Mauney of Carrboro, N.C., making it out for $80 and cashing it at a food market.

The charge of false pretense is a felony, punishable by up to 10 years in prison.

Nicholson is scheduled to appear in court on Tuesday.

The rules of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, which governs intercollegiate athletics, say that outside of scholarships, colleges cannot provide athletics with "special arrangements ... not made available to members of the student body in general," including "guarantees of bond."

David Berst, a member of the NCAA staff in Shawnee Mission, Kan., said that the NCAA would consider a situation such as that at UNC a violation, according to the Durham paper. Berst said, however, that one could understand a coach's action in such a situation.

If the NCAA considers a violation serious, it can set penalties that include declaring the athlete ineligible to play. The NCAA also has power to place a school on probation, making it ineligible to play on television or appear in post-season games.

Refuses To Throw Out Case

By BILL CRIDER
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal judge has refused to toss out a $20 million slander lawsuit against former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali, saying it must be decided by a jury.

Michael Conway, a Chicago lawyer, argued Wednesday that malice is a requirement in this slander claim and that no malice was shown in Ali's accusations against City Councilman Philip Ciaccio and Jake J. DiMaggio, a New Orleans businessman.

U.S. District Judge Morey Sear told the four women and two men on the jury they must decide "whether the statements made by this defendant were with actual malice."

Sear said the case will be in their hands by Friday.

Ciaccio and DiMaggio, who are white, sued for $10 million each after a New Orleans news conference in which Ali accused them of jealousy trying to ruin two fight promoters, Sherman Copelin and Don Hubbard, because they are black.

Originally, defendants included former heavyweight champion Joe Frazier, since he attended the news conference with Ali. But Frazier took the stand Wednesday to say Ali did not speak for him.

Frazier, of Philadelphia, insisted he had no idea of whether or how he had been dismissed as a defendant. He lets his lawyer worry about such things.

"Whatever he say goes," said Frazier. "I work on that basis. I was told I had to come down and be on the witness stand."

Earlier, Jack Martzell, a lawyer for Ali, established that DiMaggio had filed a total of $32.25 million worth of slander lawsuits, including the $10 million sought in this one.

The lawsuits accused two business competitors of saying DiMaggio was a member of the Mafia, and a credit rating service of issuing an erroneous report on his finances that led a bank to cancel a $250,000 line of credit and recall a $75,000 loan.

Ali leaned back in his chair, caressed his new moustache and smiled as his lawyer pinned DiMaggio in relentless cross-examination.

The former heavyweight champion, now 38 and making plans to come back out of retirement, still packs in the people. The courtroom was crowded for the third day of trial.

They can't promote no more." The jury watched intently as Ali appeared on the TV screen, eyes flashing, gesturing. The real Ali remained slumped in his chair at the defense table, behind the TV set.

"You say we are free," the TV Ali cried. "You say we can integrate. Yeaaaaah! But, nigger, not with the money yet."

DiMaggio, Ciaccio, Copelin and Hubbard were partners in a firm formed to handle local promotion of Ali's Sept. 15, 1978, championship fight against Leon Spinks in the Superdome.

Coach Dumps Cavs For Spurs

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The new president of the Cleveland Cavaliers is crying foul, but Stan Albeck insists he is the new head coach of the San Antonio Spurs.

"The situation in Cleveland has been worked out," said Albeck, who previously had signed a three-year contract to continue as coach of the Cavaliers.

"As far as I am concerned, I am the coach of the San Antonio Spurs," Albeck said Wednesday.

But Ted Stepien, who took over as president of the Cavaliers about a week ago, said he believes Albeck made a deal with the Spurs weeks ago, and that some form of tampering may be involved.

"If he thinks he's going to get out of it (his contract) as simple as that, he's nuts," said Stepien.

Spurs officials said at a news conference Wednesday that Albeck has reached, but not yet signed, a multi-year agreement with the National Basketball Association team. Terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

Armond Arnsen, Albeck's attorney, said that before Nick Mileti stepped down as president of the Cavaliers he released Albeck from his contract.

Spurs President Angelo Drossos said Mileti gave Albeck permission to talk with the Spurs and that Stepien has no authority to object to the deal.

"If Ted had a say, Stan wouldn't be here now," Drossos said.

Steapien, however, disagreed. "We won't release Albeck from his contract unless we are compensated by the other team," said Stepien.

"No employee leaves a company without another job...It's ridiculous for him to sit there and tell me he wants out of a contract and he wants to go shopping. He must take me for an imbecile," said Stepien.

Earlier Wednesday in Cleveland, Albeck broke off talks with Stepien aimed at smoothing over their differences. Stepien had ruffled Albeck's feathers by saying he would have preferred to sign Albeck to a one-year contract.

Albeck will become the fourth head coach of the Spurs in the last seven years. He succeeds Doug Moe, who was fired last March. Spur General Manager Bob Bass served as interim coach for the remainder of last season.

"I've always had a special affection from the ABA (American Basketball Association) days here," said Albeck. "I am very positive and enthusiastic. I'm an emotional guy and I feel my strongest point is consistency with the players. The players are told their role and are expected to carry it out."

The Cavaliers, under Albeck, posted a 37-45 record last season.

Albeck, a native of Chenoa, Ill., began his coaching career in 1957 at Adrian College in Michigan.

He was an assistant coach with the Los Angeles Lakers for three years prior to joining the Cavaliers.

Before joining the Lakers, Albeck coached with the Kentucky Colonels, the San Diego Conquistadors and the Denver Rockets, all of the now defunct ABA.

Cleveland Wins Battle With NBA

CLEVELAND (AP) — The city of Cleveland is patting itself on the back after winning its battle with the National Basketball Association to keep the 1981 NBA all-star game at the Coliseum in suburban Richfield.

"It was a community effort, and the community won," the Cleveland Plain Dealer editorialized in today's editions. "Take a bow."

The NBA board of governors had voted June 3 to move the 1981 event to Los Angeles as part of a plan to hold the annual game in a major media center such as Los Angeles or New York.

But Cleveland-area officials, including Mayor George V. Voinovich and U.S. Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, and Cleveland daily newspapers and hundreds of fans quickly made their displeasure known through letters and telegrams to NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien.

One Cleveland attorney even filed a lawsuit in Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Court, alleging consumer fraud, since the Cleveland Cavaliers' NBA team had marketed season tickets this year. A ticket to the all-star game was included in the tickets' package deal.

O'Brien said, "In addition to assurances from Cavaliers' officials, Ted Stepien (team president) and Ted Bonda (a stockholder), the personal commitments from Mayor George Voinovich, the congressional delegation, the Cleveland news media and the Cleveland Growth Association, among others, convinced me the game belongs in Cleveland."

The commissioner recommended that the league's governors reconsider their decision, which they did Wednesday. The 1981 event will remain in Cleveland, with the plan of alternating the game between major media centers going into effect in 1982, the NBA governors decided.

The board also ruled that all future all-star games will be conducted under the direction of the league office, rather than the host team.

Management upheavals in the Cavaliers' front office were seen as "the real reason for the attempt to take the all-star game out of the coliseum," the Plain Dealer said in today's editorial.

"We are elated," said Cavaliers General Manager Don Delaney. "It's a tribute to the efforts of the mayor of Cleveland and his staff, the people of northeastern Ohio and such Cavalier directors as Ted Bonda that the 1981 all-star game has been returned to the coliseum."

Pintor, Murata Fight To Draw

TOKYO (AP) — Lupe Pintor and Eijiro Murata haven't seen the last of each other.

"I'm willing to give him a rematch," said Pintor after their 15-round World Boxing Council bantamweight championship fight Wednesday that resulted in a draw.

Pintor, of Mexico, was making the second defense of his title since winning it from countryman Carlos Zarate in June, 1979.

Pintor, now 41-5-1, started out well, landing three sharp jabs to the Japanese challengers face, but Murata countered with a combination to the champion's head.

The champion slipped to the canvas in the seventh round and the eighth saw both fighters suffers cuts over their right eyes. In the ninth, Pintor cut Murata over the left eye with a solid left jab.

"I thought I would win by a knockout by the tenth round," said the champ. "But Murata was much stronger than I thought."

Murata's strength seemed to grow in the late rounds. The 13th round was his strongest and he managed to stay on his feet though he seemed groggy in the final two rounds.

"His punches were heavy and effective," said Murata, who complained of blood in his eyes in the 14th round.

In the final round, the two tired fighters flailed away unsuccessfully with wild punches.

Judge Marcial Sosa Villamil of Mexico scored the fight 147-142 for Pintor, while Japanese judge Takeaki Kanaya had it 146-144 for Murata and the referee scored the fight an even 144-144 forcing the draw.

Church-Related Service Community Developing

By ANN WICKER
STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A belief that the church should be taking a more active role in providing human services has led to the creation of the Jubilee House Community, an agency temporarily specializing in sheltering those in need.

In working to make a dream of a church-related, human service community come true, Kathleen Murdock and Sarah and Mike Woodard first explored existing services and consulted churches and other agencies to discover the needs of people in the Statesville area.

The greatest needs, they found, were in the areas of after-school child care and a shelter for people who have no place to stay in time of need.

In January of 1979, Miss Murdock and Mrs. Woodard discovered that the Pressly Memorial Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church, fellowship hall and manse were available. They appealed to the denomination's First Presbytery and then to its area synod.

The governing bodies purchased the property for the ministry and Miss Murdock and the Woodards moved into the facilities in July 1979 to begin trying to make their ministry work.

Miss Murdock said in an interview that most of the improvements needed to bring the fellowship hall up to state standards for child care centers have been impossible due to a lack of funds.

"We need new flooring, extra restrooms, new sinks ... just to name a few of the needs," she said.

The sponsors still hope to implement a child care program as well as a teen referral center. The referrals would pair up teen-agers who wish to do odd jobs with people who need such jobs done, according to Miss Murdock.

The Jubilee House shelter is in the upstairs of the former church building. Twenty-three persons can be accommodated with sleeping quarters in four "guest" rooms. A lounge includes a television and a place to serve the meals provided by the shelter, which opened officially on Oct. 15, 1979. Since that time, it has served 185 guests.

Any guest wishing to stay at the shelter must be referred by a person or another agency.

Each guest is required to sign a "contract," agreeing to abide by a few house rules and providing some information in case of emergency. Guests may stay at the shelter for only seven nights.

Miss Murdock says the reasons people come to the shelter are as varied as the guests themselves.

Runaways may be housed at the shelter, but it will not take those who are under 18. The shelter has housed a number of evicted families, battered spouses, transients and even a traveling Israeli student.

The main problem of Jubilee House Community, according to Miss Murdock, is the "lack of money and more lack of money." Funding for the agency comes strictly from donations. Recently some sources have begun donating on a regular basis, thus allowing for some stability in the budget.

Miss Murdock and Mrs. Woodard serve as co-directors of the community. Both are graduates of Erskine College.

Miss Murdock was one of the first two women to graduate from Erskine Theological Seminary in Due West, S.C. Mrs. Woodard also holds a master's degree in education from Clemson University.

Woodard is associate minister of First ARP Church of Statesville and serves as worship leader for the community. He, too, is a graduate of Erskine College and Erskine Theological Seminary.

"One of the penalties of being a 24-hour service is that time off is difficult to arrange," said Mrs. Woodard. "We feel that we are not just different people on call for the same job. But, as frustrating as the days get, at the end of each day, you feel as if you've accomplished something."

Miss Murdock added, "We've had a lot of people who find jobs and get themselves established again. I personally am pleased when a battered woman decides to try and make it on her own."

They emphasized that Jubilee House is not trying to supplant any existing services in the area. They feel their programs can provide a necessary outreach to people who may not otherwise be reached.

A major project of the community has been the resettlement of a Vietnamese refugee family. The Vu family came to Statesville in January of this year and was sheltered at Jubilee House until a suitable dwelling was found. Miss Murdock and Mrs. Woodard have both been instrumental in helping the family adjust to a very different life in America.

Jubilee House Community can use almost any kind of volunteer help. Several church groups have helped with the clean-ups and painting.

"Individuals can help answer the phone, babysit, help with laundry and other tasks," said Miss Murdock. The community is also interested in people who want to learn about the operation of such a center and who feel "the same kind of calling."

James Williams of Rock Hill, S.C., a senior at Erskine who will be entering seminary in February, arrived at Jubilee House recently to work as a summer intern. After his first 48-hour stint, Williams commented, "You don't realize how much there is to it."

Cooperation Memo Cited

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Natural Resources Secretary Howard Lee wrote an internal memo in 1977 encouraging "full cooperation" with union leader Wilbur Hobby during negotiations for job-training contracts. The News and Observer reported today.

The newspaper said the first of five training contracts given to organizations headed by Hobby was awarded two days after Lee's memo was written.

The newspaper quoted Eva M. Clayton, assistant secretary for community development, as saying items in the memo "were (instructions) given to me by the secretary (Lee) to be discussed" with Harvey Lincoln, then director of the Division of Community Employment in Lee's department. Lincoln now works for the Department of Administration.

"I don't recall my sitting down with Eva Clayton and discussing Wilbur Hobby in relationship to any specific contract or project and directing her to be fully cooperative with Wilbur," Lee said.

Lee said the words "full cooperation" were meant to encourage NRCD employees to be "nice and receptive" to everyone.

"Howard Lee did not at any point take it upon himself to encourage a contract for Wilbur Hobby or anybody else. No contract with Wilbur Hobby has my name on it. I knew nothing about Wilbur Hobby getting a contract," Lee said.

Miss Murdock says the reasons people come to the shelter are as varied as the guests themselves.

Runaways may be housed at the shelter, but it will not take those who are under 18. The shelter has housed a number of evicted families, battered spouses, transients and even a traveling Israeli student.

The main problem of Jubilee House Community, according to Miss Murdock, is the "lack of money and more lack of money." Funding for the agency comes strictly from donations. Recently some sources have begun donating on a regular basis, thus allowing for some stability in the budget.

Will Testify N.C. Highway Contract Bids Rigged

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The attorney general's office said Wednesday that representatives of a Charlotte construction company are willing to testify that "virtually all" paving contractors operating in North Carolina have rigged bids on state contracts.

"Our information is that there isn't one in the state that isn't involved," said H. Al Cole Jr., a special deputy attorney general.

"You're submitting bids and knowing what everyone else's is and that you would get the low bid. I don't care what they call it, that's collusion," Cole said.

Cole's comments came after a conference with representatives of Rea Construction Co. of Charlotte, which has pleaded guilty in federal courts in Virginia and North Carolina to bid-rigging on airport projects and a state highway paving project.

Norman D. Wilhelm, 54, of Charlotte, president of Rea, began a two-month prison term Wednesday at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla. Norman M. Black Jr., the company's chairman, is scheduled to begin a four-month prison term at the base on June 24.

The allegations by Rea officials Wednesday brought sharp retorts from state officials and denials from the paving industry.

Ben B. Ross Jr., executive director of the Carolina

Asphalt Paving Association, said his agency is not involved in the bidding process. Ross said he was not aware of any bid-rigging and declined comment.

Henry J. Pearce, executive vice president of the Carolina chapter of the Associated General Contractors of America, also said he knew nothing about the alleged bid-rigging.

"I don't believe any general practice of stealing from the public of North Carolina has existed," Pearce said. "But if they did all get together and made up one bid, then the whole lot ought to go to jail."

Gov. Jim Hunt issued a statement pledging to have any company involved in bid-rigging suspended from doing business with the state.

"We'll take that action even if there's nobody left to do the paving," Hunt said. "The state is only going to do business with honest people. We're going to take whatever action is necessary to get every penny of the taxpayers' money back, plus interest."

Transportation Secretary Thomas W. Bradshaw Jr. went a step further, saying the state would do its own paving if the allegations are substantiated.

The state awarded $224.2 million worth of construction contracts, including paving jobs, in 1979.

"I have a hard time believing that my people, professionals that they are, would not have detected this if it were that widespread," Bradshaw said. "But perhaps anything is possible."

He said that, "until this information is verified, we will only proceed on the basis of the one company pleading guilty, and we will continue our investigation."

Sidetrack Guilt Or Innocence

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — The guilt or innocence of Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood has temporarily become less of an issue than the legal intricacies of the charges against the 34-year-old Indiana native who spend nearly 14 years in Vietnam.

Lawyers for Garwood, who faces court-martial on charges of desertion and collaboration with the enemy, spent most of the week in a pretrial hearing arguing that the charges were illegally prepared and therefore should be dropped.

The defense wants Brig. Gen. David B. Barker, commander of Camp Lejeune, to testify about the background of the charges, but military judge Col. R.E. Switzer gave no indication Wednesday that he would grant the defense request.

Garwood's lawyers contend that the charges were handled at the highest level of Camp Lejeune's command instead of being funneled up the chain of command in accordance with military law.

But two Marine legal officers who testified Wednesday declared that the rules were followed although they said the importance of the charges against Garwood gave the case added impetus and put it in the hands of the high command.

Taylor replied that he was not.

"I don't understand the question — if that was the question," Roundtree responded.

"Well, I'll move on to another question. Maybe you'll understand this one," Taylor shot back.

During testimony Wednesday, Roundtree and one of his assistants Master Sgt. G.W. Bacon, conceded several defense points including:

— That Bacon swore out the charges against Garwood in Bacon's normal course of duty without Bacon ever seeing any direct evidence of desertion. But Bacon emphasized that he believed the charges were valid because of military investigations.

— That Bacon had read only a fraction of a two-and-one-half-foot-high stack of papers on the Garwood case when he swore out the charges.

— That no defense representative was present at a meeting late last August where Barker asked for and received a briefing on the Garwood case.

LANESBOROUGH, Mass. (AP) — Dick Vinette's quondry was how to show the world his new invention for driving range targets. He needed something readily identifiable, something the public would want to hit.

Vinette settled on the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Now Baker's Driving Range in this small western Massachusetts community is doing a rousing business as duffers try to hit a four-by-four portrait of Khomeini on a target 150 feet from the tees.

When the target is struck, a horn sounds, a big American flag unfurls, blocking out the ayatollah's picture, and the golf ball goes soaring in the air.

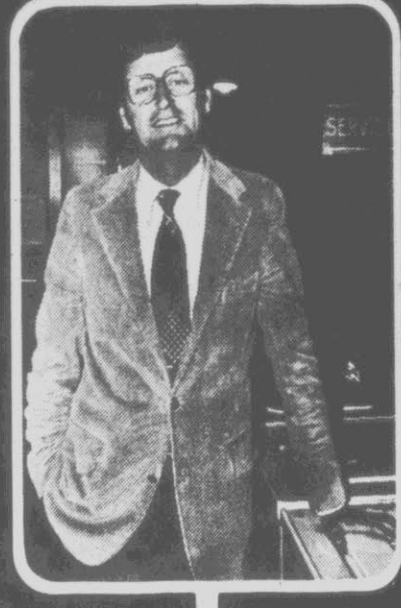

"There has been a lot of reaction from the public. We've had people get frustrated and start throwing the balls at the target," says Vinette, who runs a plumbing and heating business in addition to his tinkering as an inventor.

Wednesday's session was marked by frequent legal bickering between Maj. Neal T. Roundtree, deputy Staff Judge Advocate, who was called to testify, and defense lawyer Vaughan Taylor. During Roundtree's two-hour testimony, the two exchanged more than information.

"Are you trying to put words in my mouth?" Roundtree asked Taylor at one point.

THE WRONG TURN
LONDON (AP) — Britain's Trade Secretary John Nott says the pilot of the British jetliner that crashed last April on Tenerife in the Canary Islands, killing all 146 persons aboard, did not follow instructions and turned the aircraft in the wrong direction.

Many items in this ad carry a reference retail price. This reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our selling area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops, and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retail prices do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this ad are labeled as "regular" selling price. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. # Newspapers Eye New Technology

By BRENT GILROY
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — American newspapers will survive the onslaught of new technology that brings news directly into the home via television and small computers, a communications lawyer predicted.

"The mass appeal of the newspaper — its low cost, its diversity and portability, its ease of reading, all of these features and more — ensure the continued viability of your product," Richard W. Wiley said Wednesday.

Wiley, former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, addressed the Production Management Conference of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Wiley urged newspaper executives to develop their own electronic information-distributing systems.

"It is incumbent on your industry to be involved with, and to take advantage of, a variety of new methods of electronic information transfer and delivery," Wiley said. That would allow newspapers to maintain their status as gatherers and distributors of information, he said.

David Carlisle, head of a Canadian company now setting up a television-oriented information network, told the association that newspaper publishers must move quickly to head off challengers who want to take advantage of the new technology.

"The threat is, any entrepreneur can set up a videotext company and start calling on your advertisers tomorrow," Carlisle said.

Telecommunications experts speaking at the conference said television, along with increasingly inexpensive home computers and communications links to businesses, eventually will provide many educational and recreational services to private homes, as well as news and electronic mail.

The Associated Press announced this week it will take part in an experiment to provide news reports through home computers. Some media experts have predicted that such systems eventually will replace the home-delivered newspaper.

Comparison Ban Upheld

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio Supreme Court has dealt consumers a blow by upholding the authority of stores to prohibit comparison shopping.

The high court Wednesday affirmed a lower court decision permitting business owners to bar customers who come in to look rather than buy.

The ruling stems from a 1976 case in which a Marysville man was arrested by Columbus police for trespassing in the Hudson Food Warehouse Corp. grocery store. The charges against Arthur J. Mosher later were dropped, but he sued the now-defunct company for false arrest and for throwing him out.

Mosher had asked for more than $500,000 in damages.

Mosher drove 40 miles to the store after reading an advertisement about lower prices. He began writing down prices, intending to purchase large quantities for a cooperative he represented.

Store employees asked Mosher to stop, but he refused. An officer was summoned and he was arrested.

"Once the Supreme Court took it (the case) I got scared," said Walter J. Siemer of Columbus, the defendant's lawyer. "What did they want it for? It was, what, a... two-bit case?"

Siemer argued that stores have a right to revoke a shopper's license even after inviting a person in to buy something.

Mosher's attorney, Christopher T. Cline of Columbus, said the decision goes beyond just stopping people from comparing prices.

Presbyterians Meet Monday

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Delegates of the Presbyterian Church in America will tackle such issues as abortion and a proposal to unite with three smaller Presbyterian groups when the PCA General Assembly opens here Monday.

Many of the 650 delegates, called commissioners, will arrive Friday night for preliminary briefings and committee meetings, according to a church spokesman who asked not to be identified.

Commissioners for the seven-year-old, 77,500-member denomination also will choose a moderator during the meeting in this coastal city.

Topping the agenda this year is a proposal to invite three smaller Presbyterian denominations to join the PCA. They are the Orthodox Presbyterian Church, the Reformed Presbyterian Church of North America and the Reformed Presbyterian Church-Evangelical Synod.

Total membership for the three groups, all of which are older than the PCA, is about 35,000.

Abortion is another issue before the General

Assembly. The denomination already is on record against abortion, but some of its presbyteries, or district units, are asking the position be amended to spell out equal concern for mother and child.

Further expansion of the young denomination's missionary program also is being proposed, and the assembly will be asked to approve a plan to send college graduates abroad for two-year terms as missionaries.

The spokesman said the denomination, which originated in the South, has 460 congregations in 27 states and supports 170 missionaries in more than 20 nations abroad.

"The denomination is committed to the preservation and expansion of the Presbyterian and Reformed expression of historic Christianity in America," the spokesman said. "We have taken a generally conservative stance, an evangelical stance."

The PCA's first presbytery was organized in Savannah, and two Savannah PCA churches were among the first to break away from the Presbyterian Church in the United States and affiliate with the new denomination.

Welfare Fraud Due Insanity

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A woman found innocent by reason of insanity of charges stemming from a $11,000 welfare fraud has been sentenced to a state mental hospital.

Donna Wallace, 40, allegedly used 43 bank accounts and 24 identities in bilking the state welfare system over a three-year period. In April, Superior Court Judge Charles Stevens agreed with a county psychiatrist that Miss Wallace was insane at the time.

On Wednesday, Stevens committed her for a maximum term of three years and eight months. Deputy District Attorney Daryl Perlman said he considered the sentence adequate because Miss Wallace had no prior record.

Pryor Lawyer 'Explains' All

By BRIAN R. BLAND
Associated Press Writer
SHERMAN OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Richard Pryor's lawyer says the comedian was critically burned when a glass of rum ignited as he lit a cigarette, and his doctors deny Pryor ever told them he had been using a flammable drug mixture when he was engulfed in flames.

But police were standing by their account that the 39-year-old Emmy and Grammy winner had told Dr. Jack Grossman he had been using a mixture of ether and cocaine known as "free base" Monday night and that the ether had exploded.

Pryor, meanwhile, walked around a little on Wednesday, ate some food and made a few wisecracks. He still was listed in critical condition with third-degree burns from his waist up, including his arms and face. But doctors said he could be off the critical list in two weeks.

When Pryor was first admitted, doctors rated his survival chances as less than even.

Dr. Jack Grossman, one of two physicians treating Pryor, dismissed the police account Wednesday, saying, "When there is as much excitement and chaos as there was when Richard came into the emergency room, some things that are said might be heard inaccurately."

Grossman said because there were "many other" people in the room, someone could have confused something he thought he heard.

Grossman and his brother, Dr. Richard Grossman, who also is treating Pryor, denied they had any conversation with Pryor about cocaine, ether or the cause of the fire.

Richard Grossman also said he was not aware that Pryor was given any toxicological tests to see if there were drugs in his bloodstream.

Atlanta lawyer David Franklin, who is also Pryor's personal manager, said, "Pryor told me he had a glass of rum. He went to light a cigarette and there was an explosion. The police department did not substantiate the ether story."

Franklin said he had asked Pryor if he were lighting "a regular cigarette," and Pryor had replied, "Yes."

Asked if he talked to Pryor about using cocaine the night of the explosion, Franklin replied, "No! The man is critically ill — I didn't ask him what happened. He told me about the rum and that was it."

Clumsy Pretender Trivializing A Perfectly Good Screen Story

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Semi-Tough," which didn't deserve it, has been slandered, mutilated, humiliated and trivialized these last few weeks by a clumsy pretender of a TV series on ABC shamelessly passing itself off as "Semi-Tough."

Worse, the impostor is unfunny. If you haven't seen this slack series, stop reading. I wouldn't want to arouse a curiosity the show doesn't deserve.

Imagine, if you're of hardy enough mind, taking Dan Jenkins' wry novel (or the clever Burt Reynolds-Kris Kristofferson-Jill Clayburgh movie that was made from it) and putting it through a trash compactor. Twice.

Jenkins' story was a sharp-witted parody, hugely comic, of pro football. Its heroes, Shake and Billy Clyde, were raucous caricatures of the mythical macho gridiron warriors of the NFL, hedonists of the first order.

They could not, to state it simply, be transmuted into weekly television sitcom characters.

So, why was it tried? Perhaps for the same reason that ABC is trying to turn "Breaking Away" — a tidy, wholly complete little film — into a series for the fall (starring, if you can believe it, Shaun Cassidy): It's easier to adapt a success than to create a success.

Although TV adaptations have the advantage of familiarity and ancestral popularity, they have the disadvantage of a restrictive medium that requires a broadening and lowering of the material.

"The Odd Couple" and "M-A-S-H" are the only two adaptations in years that were worth watching, the former because of Tony Randall's inspired mania and the latter because of adapter Larry Gelbart's genuine talent (aided by an equally talented cast).

To fit another medium's success into the half-hour TV sitcom form, you must somehow retain the spirit of the original while tossing a bone to network TV's pet, the Lowest Common Denominator. Larry Gelbart, perhaps alone, can do this, and won't anymore.

Anyway, to the creature at hand. Bruce McGill, who was D-Day in "Animal House" (and, ironically, ABC's horrible failure of an adaptation of that film, "Delta House") plays Billy Clyde, second-string quarterback for the New York Bulls.

McGill is a likeable enough actor, and I suppose it's not entirely his fault that Billy Clyde seems a pudgy wimp, but there it is. Billy Clyde as birthed by Dan Jenkins was a charming rake. This one should be wearing double-knits and selling life insurance.

But McGill's Billy Clyde is art itself next to the offense created by David Hasselhoff in trying to conjure the character Shake, the spaced-out receiver. Where did this guy come from? He suggests a hairdresser going to a costume party.

Had there been no "Semi-Tough," book or movie, this sitcom would have seemed just another tepid sitcom meant to offend the fewest and sell some soap.

With a fine, hilarious book and a charming movie to compare it to, though, "Semi-Tough" is semi-embarrassing. And completely bad.

Marriage Talk By Ringo Starr
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — There may be a wedding ring in the future for former Beatle drummer Ringo Starr.
Starr, who currently is working on a film career, plans to marry actress Barbara Bach late this year after she is divorced from her current husband, film sources said Wednesday.
The 39-year-old Starr and the 33-year-old Miss Bach were not available for comment on the report.
The two met this year on the Mexico set of the United Artists movie "Caveman." Last month, both escaped injury when Starr's car flipped over on a London street.
Starr, who got the nickname "Ringo" because of his bejeweled fingers, has been married previously, to hairdresser Maureen Cox. Miss Bach's previous films include "The Spy Who Loved Me."

CRYPTOQUIP 6-12

IGIH: AEGNNF CLHAYUETC CGTMHI
YUTM NLG TUTF

Yesterday's Cryptokuip — LICIT OPINION: INDEPENDENCE DOES NOT CONNOTE LICENSE.

Today's Cryptokuip clue: C equals S

The Cryptokuip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: Six of ♠.

There is nothing unfair about insisting that the Laws of Contract Bridge be observed when you play. And there's nothing unethical about taking advantage of anything that is conferred upon you by invoking those laws. But sometimes the best-laid plans can go astray.

If you think that there is something peculiar about this auction, you are right! Actually, South opened one spade out of turn. As a result, the bidding reverted to North, but North was compelled to pass throughout the auction. East took advantage of the situation to make a crafty pass, and South was on the spot. Since East did not open the bidding, it seemed quite likely to South that his partner, who had been barred by the bid out of turn, could have quite a good hand. Therefore, South elected to gamble on three no trump. East emerged from the bushes with a double.

West led his fourth-best club, and declarer captured East's king with the ace. He could count seven tricks in the black suits. To make his contract, he would have to score both the queen of hearts and the king of diamonds. So at trick two declarer overtook his nine of spades with the queen to lead a low heart from the table.

West grabbed the king of hearts and proceeded to lose any advantage he might have gained in the bidding by returning a club—a diamond would have ensured the game's defeat. Since there was no point to holding up—if West had started with four clubs, East could have only two—declarer won the queen, crossed to dummy by leading the ten of spades to the king, and then led another heart from dummy. East did as well as he could by rising with the king of hearts and returning a heart. But declarer could still get to dummy by leading his carefully preserved six of spades to dummy's seven. A diamond from the table meant that declarer could not be stopped from scoring his game-going trick with the king of diamonds.

Bill Requires Credit Card Collateral

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — To get a credit card in the future, you may have to offer collateral — a car, a boat or even a home — if legislation placed before the General Assembly on Wednesday is approved.

A provision allowing lenders to require collateral as security on credit cards and revolving charge accounts is included in a bill that would revamp the state's laws on consumer credit. The legislation would also raise legal interest rate limits on credit card charges from 18 percent to 21 percent, and would effectively remove any interest rate limits on loans for new cars. That and more is included in the bill introduced by Rep. Glenn Morris, D-Marion, and co-sponsored by Rep. Ralph Edwards, D-Greensboro, and others.

"They're totally onerous," Patric Mullen, lobbyist for Legal Services of North Carolina, said of the bill's effects. "All consumer borrowing is going to be terrifically more expensive."

The legislation is one of a growing and complicated group of interest rate bills in various forms before the House and Senate, which would have the effect of removing or drastically raising the legal interest rates on nearly all types of loans to consumers and small businesses.

One of the other related bills was returned to committee by the Senate Wednesday, and another is scheduled for debate today in a House committee.

Mullen's organization, a consumer-oriented group that offers legal services for the poor, has attacked the consumer credit bill.

"It jacks up everybody's interest," said Robert Gage, lawyer for the group. "Everybody would pay more for money, except of course banks and big corporations."

In the bill is a provision that would allow banks and other lenders that offer credit cards to require collateral while charging the maximum legal interest rate. Under current law, collateral can be required on credit cards only when a lower interest rate is applied.

Mullen and his group charge that the provision allowing collateral to be required has been avoided in explanations of the bill by the banking industry. And, they say, many consumers would be required to jeopardize their homes to obtain consumer credit that now is offered without such security.

"They can take your house, grab your home-stead," said Gage. "I have no doubt if this gets through, you're going to see houses put up on security for credit cards."

John R. Jordan, chief lobbyist for the banking industry, defended the collateral requirement in an interview. He said the collateral would be part of a total family credit package, in which a bank would offer its credit card and an extended line of credit amounting to $5,000 or more. He suggested a car or boat might be preferred as collateral.

And, he said, the collateral is needed because of higher costs of doing business. "As far as we're concerned, the credit card loan is the most expensive we make," he said.

In addition, he said, the legislation would permit banks to repossess items purchased with credit cards if the card balance is not fully paid. That is not permitted under current law, he said.

Other elements of the consumer credit bill would raise interest rates charged on small loans, raising the rate on loans of $300 to $1,500 from 18 percent to 30 percent — a 67 percent increase.

It would also raise limits on retail installment loans — the type often used in buying cars. On loans of $5,000 or more, there would be no legal limit on interest rates, and the rate would vary from 22 percent to 28 percent on smaller amounts — an increase of one-fifth to more than one-third.

"This means that almost all new car purchasers will pay interest bills as high as the traffic will bear," the legal services group said in a prepared analysis of the bill.

Sponsors of the bill say that without the higher rates, some lenders will decline to loan money because their own costs have risen.

Lawmen, Smugglers In Shootout At Airport

FITZGERALD, Ga. (AP) — Smugglers in airplanes and drug agents in cars blasted away at each other with rifles and shotguns in a rolling gunfight up and down a south Georgia airstrip before the two bullet-riddled aircraft took off and got away.

"That smaller plane apparently has a lot of bullet holes in it," Ben Hill County Chief Deputy Thurman Ellis said Wednesday night. None of the state and federal drug agents was wounded trying to stop the aircraft.

"The twin-engine plane took off, and almost collided with a Drug Enforcement Administration airplane in the air," Georgia Bureau of Investigation agent Tom McGreevy said Wednesday night in Atlanta. "The DEA plane turned around and pursued, but lost them in the darkness north of Macon."

"We had agents on the ground and we had one team in a Jeep," McGreevy said. "The single-engine plane tried to run down our agents on foot. The agents in the Jeep were trying to cut off the airplane so it couldn't take off."

"The plane was running around in circles on the field, trying to dodge the Jeep, with one guy hanging out the door shooting at the agents. We had to be careful not to shoot our own agents."

That plane finally took off and headed south.

A man and a woman were arrested, at least one person fled on foot and 1,500 pounds of marijuana was confiscated after the gunfight just before sunset Tuesday, Ellis said.

William Lewis Brock, 19, of Canal Point, Fla., and Barbara Sue Sullivan, 22, of Pahokee, Fla., were arrested Wednesday and charged with conspiracy to distribute marijuana, Ellis said.

In addition, McGreevy said, one man was found on the front lawn of his home in Stuart, Fla., Wednesday with a bullet wound in his back.

"He said he was the victim of an accidental shooting in Florida. We believe he was the victim of an intentional shooting up here in Fitzgerald, Georgia," McGreevy said.

Charges will be filed later, he said.

McGreevy said state and federal agents have identified both planes and most of the people involved in the smuggling operation. "We will get these people sooner or later."

Special Agent Mike Eason, supervisor of the Georgia

Bureau of Investigation's air smuggling unit, said the isolated airstrip has been under surveillance.

"They (the smugglers) were offloading the marijuana onto the ground," and apparently waiting for a truck when officers arrived, he said.

Convict Couple Of Tax Evasion

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A former Wake County couple has been convicted in West Virginia on a charge of evading federal income taxes on gross sales of $1.3 million from a mail-order cigarette business in Garner in 1971.

The Internal Revenue Service charged that Benjamin and Elizabeth Goodyear had failed to report taxable income of nearly $70,000 and to pay more than $23,000 in taxes.

Sentencing of the Goodyears was delayed.

The couple previously had been fined by the states of New York and Pennsylvania for violation of the Jenkins Act, which requires dealers to report the amount of cigarettes shipped into the states so that state taxes can be determined and collected.
