Lake Forces Democrats To Record Budget Votes

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Republican candidate for governor Sen. I. Beverly Lake Jr., D-Raleigh, failed in seven tries to amend the proposed surplus state budget Monday as the Senate approved and sent to the House the $358 million spending measure. Although he failed by lopsided numbers, Lake forced the Democratic majority to record votes on several controversial items, including an increase in pay and expense allowances for state legislators. Lake, obviously preparing for his fall campaign against Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt, blasted the budget proposal of Hunt and the Advisory Budget Commission as "fiscally unsound," and criticized the Legislature for going along with it. "I've heard I don't know how many of you say we're no more than a rubber stamp," Lake said.

The Senate approved the budget bill on a 42-4 vote. Four GOP senators including Lake opposed it. But the Senate minority leader, Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Lenoir, voted for the budget after supporting Lake's amendments and blasting the budget as "one of the most irresponsible pieces of legislation I have seen in many years."

The budget had not been scheduled for debate during the normally brief Monday evening session.

But the Democratic majority voted on several parliamentary moves to suspend Senate rules to consider and approve the budget immediately, as it was reported out of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Among Lake's amendments were moves to delete a 10 percent pay raise for legislators and strike an increase of $6 to $50 in legislators' daily expense allowance.

Other Lake amendments that failed would have cut $135 million through 5 percent and 10 percent slashes in the budgets of nearly all state agencies, and would have provided full funding for the state employee retirement system, which Lake and others have charged is $79 million short.

He also lost on amendments to finance the Highway Patrol from general tax revenues instead of highway taxes, and to delete the change to a "cash flow" accounting system in the state's highway department, a move he said was in "direct violation of the Constitution" because of the view by some that it would amount to deficit spending.

Lake generally had the support of the five Republican members present, but got no more than eight votes for any one amendment out of the 50-member chamber.

GOP legislators pleaded for the Senate to allow the budget to follow the normal timing of bills and be scheduled for debate on Tuesday but were voted down.

Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Hickory, called the budget "irresponsible" and begged the Senate out of "sheer courtesy" to delay final action until Tuesday.

Five City School Board Members Are Sworn In

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Five members of the Greenville Board of Education were sworn in at the June action meeting of the board on Monday night, three who were elected in the May elections, and two appointed by the Greenville City Council.

Mrs. Lena Brown, Jack Wall, and Mrs. Sue Zadeits, all returned to the board after successful bids for reelection. The two appointees sworn in were Jerry Smith, re-appointed, and Ernest Brown, a new appointed member. All are serving four-year terms of office.

Sandra Gaskins, clerk of Superior Court, performed the swearing in ceremony.

Following the ceremony, members elected Mrs. Nancy Middleton as the new chairman of the board, and Dr. Jon Tingelstad as the new vice-chairman. Outgoing board member and chairman Carter was presented a plaque in recognition of his tenure on the board.

In a report on the Summer School, which began Monday, Superintendent Glenn Cox indicated that total enrollment figures, unofficial at this point, show well over 400 students taking summer work. Of that total, 220 signed up at Rose High School, 23 at Aycock, 18 at Agnes Fullilove Community School and 34 at Wahl-Coates. Another 117 are enrolled in various programs, with 77 signed up for special programs in the Community Schools project being held in three schools.

In policy matters, two policy papers were adopted. One is the Title IX Grievance Procedure governing the steps involved in having an employee grievance heard. The policy was approved following a change in policy text that changes the previous wording relative to a third person — "a staff member mutually agreeable" to both the person with a grievance and the superintendent — "a staff member of his/her (the person with a grievance) own choosing." The second policy paper adopted was for the format governing the make-up of agendas for the board meetings.

A budget amendment of the School Food Service, increasing the budget by $4,500 was adopted. The increase represents receipt of an additional $2,000 in USDA grants and $2,500 increase in interest on savings of school food service money invested. This brings the School Food Service budget total for the current fiscal year to $750,737.00.

Approval was given to the election of Helen H. Logan as the school psychologist to replace Steve Flora, who has resigned to move to Winston-Salem. Ms. Logan has had previous experience in psychology work in Arizona and Colorado, although this will be her first teaching position. Also accepted was resignation of seven other staff members in addition to Flora.

The board approved a recommendation by Cox that a rising senior not be exempted from taking the required physical education course. The request for the exemption was being sought by the parents of a student who has transferred to Rose from Ayden-Grifton.

The annual Vocational Education Plan, part of a general five-year plan formulated a couple of years ago, was approved by the board. With this approval, the proposed plan will now be submitted to state officials for review for funding processes along with any recommended revisions state officials may make.

Cox made the yearly nota-

Tight Budget For Schools Expected

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The coming school year will be one of a tight budget, Superintendent Glenn Cox told members of the Greenville Board of Education at its action meeting

Monday night. Speaking about the general development of the school budget request, Cox stressed that "the county commissioners are sympathetic to our needs, but they are taking a close look at all budget requests."

Cox reported that in his meetings with County Manager Reginald Gray, it has been determined that tentative cuts "show our current expense budget has been cut by $456,000. This represents a serious situation as it allows only about an eight percent increase in county funding. "We are running 50 to 100 percent in energy costs over a year ago, plus we have already received a special allocation of $45,000 from the county for energy bills."

At this point, Cox noted "it seems that it will be necessary to shift funds around unless we receive funds from state sources that have not been anticipated."

Some of the possible results of the projected $456,000 current expense budget cut mentioned by Cox is "the possible loss of ten classroom teachers, two and one-half vocational teachers, and two teacher aides, the shortening of terms for guidance counselors and assistant principals."

"We may also be faced with a cutback from 15 to 12 percent in salary raises for classified personnel," Cox pointed out that "about 85 percent of our local budget is tied up in personnel salaries."

Part of the budget pressure, Cox explained, comes from the fact that the special supplement for the Greenville School District that for years traditionally formed a separate, substantial budget item is no longer a source of income. "This concept was in effect ruled out several years ago when federal law ruled that a child could not be penalized from the standpoint of revenue for schools based on where he lived. In reality, this was the situation in Greenville for a number of years," he added, "but now supplemental taxes apply county wide and are divided between city and county schools on a pro-rata basis."

The law still exists that permits county commissioners to approve, without a public referendum, the levying of a local Greenville City School district tax of up to 25 cents. "In past years," Cox stated, "this district supplemental tax funded 34 local positions for the city schools at first. But this has changed over the years, and slowly but surely costs have outstripped funds available."

Questioned by board members about the minimum amount to be restored to the current expense budget that he considered essential, Cox said "we have been looking at $100,000 (of the $450,000) as being an essential minimum." He added, however, that it will be difficult to determine the

Consider Strengthening Famed Fresco's Wall

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Art experts said today they are considering testing and strengthening the brick wall where a six-foot crack has opened on the border of Leonardo da Vinci's famous fresco, "The Last Supper."

The break means that the stability of the fresco wall, which is not load bearing, is weakening," said Gisberto Martelli, the man in charge of preserving the masterpiece. He said that tests through the 36-foot high, 28-foot wide and 28-inch thick wall were planned to better determine its state.

Carlo Bertelli, superintendent of fine arts for the city of Milan, said there were "several other, although hardly noticeable, smaller cracks" on the wall.

"There is no immediate danger to the fresco however," Bertelli added.

He said the major threats for the fresco are "dust and smog, as well as a mold eating colors of the masterpiece."

In the rear part of the wall, where one of the 12 glass panels covering the fresco broke over the weekend signaling the fissure, the crack is much wider and visible.

The crack, which is half an inch wide, was an additional point of interest for hundreds of visitors who flocked into the refectory of Milan's Santa Maria delle Grazie church today.

The fissure opened on the far right side of the fresco and runs about an inch from the figure of the Apostle Simon.

Hookerton Plant Idled By Costly Fire In Night

HOOKEKERTON — Fire did damage estimated at between $500,000 and $1 million to Togs Inc. apparel manufacturing plant here last night.

Assistant Plant Manager Don Ham said area firefighters fought valiantly to save the building, which is the old Hookerton school. He said they did manage to protect a good portion of the building to the extent that it probably can be rebuilt. All goods and machinery throughout the building were destroyed or seriously damaged, however, he said. "What didn't burn or melt was smoke- or water-damaged," he commented.

Greene County Fire Marshal Dickie Hill quoted Hookerton Fire Chief Douglas McLawhorn as saying the building was ablaze when the Hookerton fire truck arrived about 9 p. m. Hookerton, Snow Hill, Arbor, Maury, Shine and Castoria Fire Departments worked until 4:30 a. m.

Hill said the origin of the fire is thought to be a malfunctioning electric motor.

Togs Inc., a division of U. S. Industries, with the regional office located in Mount Olive, makes boys' dress suits and women's blazers in Hookerton. About 250 persons have been employed there.

Ham said an adjacent building, the old gymnasium, was not affected by the fire and that possibly 75 employees can return to work there before the end of the week.

Recession Signals Are Gathering More Steam

By The Associated Press
There was fresh evidence of the recession and its impact today, along with warnings about the future.

Among the developments: —A College Placement Council poll of 550 employers indicated that the companies plan to be more conservative in hiring this year. The employers who were surveyed said they had hired or expected to hire 8 percent more college graduates this year than they did last year. In 1979, they projected a 13 percent increase in the hiring of college graduates. The poll, released today, found that prospects are best for students with engineering and technical degrees.

—Wharton Econometric Forecast Associates Inc. said in its quarterly forecast that the nation has entered a serious recession which will last through the first quarter of next year. The forecast, issued in Philadelphia on Monday, predicted that Congress would abandon its efforts to achieve a balanced budget for fiscal 1981 and estimated there would be a $20 billion tax cut next year. The group is made up of professors from Wharton, the business school at the University of Pennsylvania.

—Continental Airlines said Monday that because of the "realities of the current recession" it will cut its passenger capacity by 20 percent this fall and will lay off about 1,200 workers. The Los Angeles-based carrier said the layoffs — representing about 10 percent of the company's staff — are the largest in the firm's history.

—A study prepared by the University of Michigan said that the Michigan's economic troubles will contribute to almost 20,000 deaths in the state. About half the extra deaths will come from heart failure, the study said. "In the current Michigan crisis ... we have a large number of unemployed individuals ... some of whom may have already embarked on unemployment careers and who are at risk for both physical and mental health outcomes," said the study.

—In Flint, Mich., an auto-dependent city which has a 17.4 percent unemployment rate — highest in the nation — plans were unveiled Monday for a $38.5 million theme park. William S. White, president of the Charles S. Mott Foundation, said the park — AutoWorld — would help diversify the city's economy. Flint Mayor James Rutherford said the park, due to open in about two years, would provide jobs for 500 people.

PARAPHERNALIA PROHIBITION?

On last Tuesday night's news, I heard that the City of High Point has passed an ordinance prohibiting the sale of drug paraphernalia like rolling papers, bongs and the like. Much of this kind of thing is sold freely throughout Greenville. I think it encourages the use of such drugs as marijuana and cocaine and makes them look attractive. It's hypocritical to collect taxes on paraphernalia sold and then enforce laws concerning the use and sale of the very drugs the paraphernalia is used for. I think an ordinance similar to High Point's should be passed in Greenville. V. T.

According to Gail Meeks of the Greenville City Manager's office, no proposal for such an ordinance has been presented to the city council or city manager's office.

Greenville Police Chief Cannon said he has heard little discussion of the matter. He said he will contact the High Point police chief for further details.

WITNESS SOUGHT

Mrs. Dorothy Wilson Sutton has asked Hotline to appeal for a witness to a May 16 9:50 a. m. accident in which she was involved at the Arlington Boulevard entrance to Greenville Square Shopping Center adjacent to Stereo Village. She said a blond man driving a truck with an aluminum body stopped and inquired if she and her passenger were all right. She may be reached at 758-5998 or 752-1464.

Dear Abby

"I Don't Care" Sometimes Means "Yes"

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Was I ever glad to see that letter in your column about the girl who would never say yes or no — she always said, "I don't care."

I had a very good friend who did the same thing. No matter what I asked her, she'd say, "I don't care." It used to just drive me up a wall.

Once I asked her if she wanted a cup of coffee, and she gave me the same old, wishy-washy "I don't care," so I said, "Well, I don't care either. Do you want a cup of coffee, or don't you?"

It was as though a light had turned on in her head. She said, very positively, "Yes, I would like a cup." I gave her a big hug and congratulated her.

Then she said she realized how stupid she must have sounded all those years saying "I don't care." She admitted that she was just shy and afraid she'd come across as too bold or eager.

Abby, print this for all those people who need to know that it's important to be positive and assertive. I have another friend who, when I ask how he is, always says, "All right — I guess." Next time he "guesses" how he is, I'm going to tell him to find out for sure and let me know.

DEBBIE

DEAR DEBBIE: Much to my surprise, many readers wrote to inform me that in certain parts of the country, "I don't care" means "Yes." Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I can tell by your answer to that man whose girlfriend answered every question with "I don't care" that you have never been to southern Indiana.

The country children in Hoosier territory are taught to say, "I don't care," — meaning, "I don't mind if I do." In other words, "Yes."

When we retired down here, a farm boy did some lawn work for me, and when I asked him if he'd like a cold drink, he replied, "I don't care." I was puzzled and looked at my husband. He said, "Go ahead and give it to him — he means 'Yes.'"

DEAR ABBY: I am at the end of my rope! I have a 7-year-old daughter who talks constantly! She's a good student, but at least two or three times a week I get a call from her teacher telling me that my child talked all day and disrupted the class.

If the teacher isn't calling, she's writing me notes. Abby, I hate to punish my daughter for talking because I truly believe she can't help herself. This child talks from the minute she opens her eyes in the morning until she closes them at night. What's a mother to do?

MOTOR MOUTH'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Your daughter could be a compulsive talker. Have her evaluated by a child psychiatrist or psychologist. If she's compulsive she can be helped by therapy. Compulsive behavior of any kind should not be ignored.

DEAR ABBY: Shame on you for using that old joke about the nun who had a sex change operation. It represents a shocking departure from your use of original material. I thought you had more resistance.

Let me tell you another one: Question: "Why does electricity shock people?" Answer: "Because it doesn't know how to conduct itself."

Recapture One Of 2 Escapees

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A posse of state correctional officers captured one of two inmates Monday night who had escaped earlier in the day from the Polk Youth Center after crashing through two gates with a state-owned car.

Terry A. Sullivan, 19, was captured near the center late Monday night. Authorities identified the escapee still at large as William C. Kellan, 21.

A Department of Correction spokesman said guards opened fire with a shotgun and a .22 caliber rifle during the escape, but it was not

Construction has begun on Parkview Commons, a 14,000 square foot shopping complex that will front on Stantonsburg Road across from the entrance to Doctor's Park.

Michael F. Moyer, developer, said that the owners of the new complex are Hollowell's Inc. and construction should be completed in approximately five months.

Designed by Daniel Cochran of Washington, the facility will house Hollowell's Drug Store, Clear View Opticians, and a major restaurant, according to Moyer, and provide space for medically related services and offices.

fall completion planned. The proposed L-shaped structure is shown in this artist's sketch.

The developer added that the property is zoned Medical Arts (MA).

Moyer pointed out that the development is a two-phase project, with the second segment running concurrent with the first phase. Wimco of Washington is building the complex. The shopping facility will involve an L-shaped configuration, it was explained, and be under one roof. Some 90 spaces are planned for the landscaped parking area.

Moyer noted that the design for the complex was inspired by the low country architecture of Hilton Head, S.C. Exterior accents feature stucco and cypress, he said.

Ancient Solar Energy

Newspaper articles often describe solar technology as an energy source for the future. But solar energy, or energy from the sun, was also a valuable energy source in ancient times. More than 2,000 years ago, the Greeks and Romans were using solar energy to heat their homes, because their main fuel source — wood — was getting scarce. Houses were designed with windows facing south, to receive as much heat as possible from the sun. The adobe walls of the houses would absorb heat during the day and radiate it at night, keeping the houses warm. In ancient Rome, it was illegal to build a structure that blocked a neighbor's sunlight.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A Snow Hill girl joined 27 other young North Carolinians for the 1980 Rural Electric Youth Tour June 8-13. Vickie Sue Baker won the expense-paid trip by competing in a contest sponsored by Pitt and Greene Electric Membership Corporation, headquartered in Farmville.

Approximately 1,000 young people from 21 states toured the nation's capital city. During their stay, the youths had individual appointments with their congressmen and attended a performance at Kennedy Center. They also visited Arlington National Cemetery, the Embassy of Japan, the Smithsonian Institute, the National Zoo, the Library of Congress, the J. Mixed Opinions Over Patenting Life-Forms

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina scientists expressed mixed opinions Monday over a U.S. Supreme Court ruling allowing new forms of life created by "genetic engineering" to be patented.

While some scientists said the ruling might help industrial research, others were fearful it could hinder academic research.

"I don't think (the court) ... should have done it," said Darrell W. Stafford, a zoology professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Stafford said the decision could allow commercial companies to tie up research in genetics because they have the funding.

"I think it's going to place everything in the control of larger corporations. They have the money and the patent lawyers," Stafford said.

John G. Scandalios, head of the N.C. State University genetics department, said he had mixed feelings about the decision. His department is using "gene-splicing" methods in studies now going on.

"I think one needs to take stock and evaluate the long-term implications. One thing it is going to do is to allow work at industrial firms to proceed more rapidly," Scandalios said.

"It definitely is an added incentive to do this kind of work," said Ronald M. Cresswell, vice president of development for the Burroughs Wellcome Co. The pharmaceutical company has pending plans to file soon for several patents that might be affected.

Cresswell said his company is attempting to produce several potentially marketable products resulting from work with micro-organisms, including the possible anticancer material known as interferon.

Wolfgang K. Joklik, chairman of Duke Medical Center's department of microbiology, is also studying improved ways of producing interferon in bacteria. He expressed the fear that the court's decision might apply only to commercial use of organisms.

If it bars universities from using the organisms in further research, "then that will be very bad," Joklik said.

"I want to be able to build on the work of other scientists," he said.

Despite Joklik's reservations, patent office director Carl B. Wooten of Duke University said he was pleased with the court's decision.

"It will allow us to get protection on our intellectual property," Wooten said.

Wooten said Duke researchers have filed two proposals with his office to seek patents on gene-manipulating programs.

Under Fire In Real Incident

HONOLULU (AP) — An actor who portrayed Sheriff Buford Pusser in the "Walking Tall" movies found himself in a position similar to those faced by the character he played — under fire.

Actor Bo Svenson and his wife, Lise, were sitting on their first-floor patio at the Waikikian Hotel Sunday when they heard what sounded like shots hitting the patio roof, police said. Svenson sent his wife into the hotel room and peered up to see a young man on the 12th floor of an adjacent building reload a gun.

Police arrested John M. Abio, 18, of Dallas, Texas, and charged him with second-degree reckless endangering. They said he probably was unaware of the actor's presence on the patio at which he was firing.

Special Forces Candidate Travels Lonely Road

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Army Capt. Kathleen Wilder marches on a path no other woman has trod.

At 28, she is on her lonely way to becoming the first woman to earn the Green Beret of the U.S. Special Forces, a crack outfit specializing in guerrilla tactics and unconventional warfare.

It has taken Ms. Wilder more than a year to get accepted as a candidate for the prestigious Green Berets. Her fight led from the John F. Kennedy Center for Military Assistance at Fort Bragg straight to the Pentagon.

"My reason for being here is simple," she said. "My last three assignments have been jobs requiring detailed knowledge of Special Forces techniques. Had I been a male, there would have been no question about it."

Ms. Wilder is now involved in a grueling, 13-week Special Forces Officer's Course that she must pass in order to become Special Forces-qualified and entitled to wear the famed Green Beret.

If all goes on schedule, Ms. Wilder should complete the course in mid-August.

Her efforts have not been well received by most men in the Green Berets.

"A lot of us don't think she'll make it. There are also a lot of people who think there will be a lowering of standards," said one sergeant in the 5th Special Forces Group who asked not to be identified.

Her first application to the qualifying school was turned down by Fort Bragg officials about a year ago. But in January, the Department of the Army told Fort Bragg officials that Ms. Wilder could be assigned to a Green Beret unit as long as she was placed in a non-combat role.

Pentagon spokesman Maj. Lee Delorme said Ms. Wilder would be assigned as a military intelligence specialist at a Special Forces group headquarters, not an operational combat detachment. Delorme said it is likely other women will assume similar non-combat roles.

Raised in an military family, Ms. Wilder joined the army in 1975 out of a sense of obligation to serve her country.

She has been at Fort Bragg since 1976, working first in the U.S. Army Institute for Military Assistance and then as an intelligence officer for the 5th Special Forces group. While there are other women assigned to the 5th and 7th Special Forces groups at Fort Bragg, none are Special Forces-qualified.

Ms. Wilder, an advocate of women in combat roles, has already proved herself equal to male candidates for the Green Beret in at least one area. When many men were falling out of a physically-demanding two-mile obstacle course run recently in 103-degree heat, Ms. Wilder said she completed all but three of the 30 hurdles.

Bridal Couple Entertained

A cookout was given Saturday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Manning and family honoring Cindy Smith of Greenville and Sean Kane of Petersburg, Va., who will be married June 28.

The cookout was held at the Rena J. Retreat on Blount's Creek.

Assisting Mr. and Mrs. Manning as host and hostess were Faye and Diane Manning.

The couple was remembered with a gift of china.

Jaycette Projects Outlined

New board members of the Greenville Jaycettes outlined upcoming projects at the meeting held Wednesday evening at Tar River Estates party house.

Continued assistance with volunteers' time and/or money was planned for the Mental Health Association, Alcoholic Rehabilitative Center, Operation Sunshine, Parents Anonymous, Remedial Education Activity Program and Flynn Home. Plans were also made for the neo-natal unit at Pitt Memorial Hospital and for the pediatrics ward. Needy Pitt County families will be assisted throughout the year and at Christmastime.

A main thrust in the near future will be given to the Jaycee Boys Home Game July 19. External Vice President B. J. Cutrell announced 40 cheerleaders from high schools across the state have been chosen to participate at the game and girls from local high schools will represent Pitt County. Members will assist Jaycees with game preparations.

Plans were made to assist Jaycees at the July 4 celebration. Work has started on a ways and means bazaar to be held Oct. 11 at Carolina East Mall.

Julie Jones was welcomed as a guest. President Susie Clark presided.

Duplicate Winners

Mrs. C. F. Galloway and Mrs. B. T. Eastwood were first place winners Wednesday morning at the game played at Planters Bank. They had a .595 percent game.

Others winning were: Mrs. Blanche Kittrell and Mrs. Bertha Jones, second; Mrs. Jean Cox Jones and Mrs. Ralph Sullivan, third; Mrs. Walter Harbin and Mrs. J. N. LeConte, fourth.

Wednesday afternoon winners included: Mrs. Robert Exum and Mrs. M. L. Eason, first with a .633 percent game; Mrs. Edith Gintis and Mrs. Karel Bruce, second; Mrs. J. M. Horton and Mrs. William Parvin, third; Mrs. Clifton Toler and Mrs. Thelma Whitehead, fourth; Mrs. Mavis Smith and Lewis Newsome, fifth.

North-South winners in the Saturday afternoon game, also played at Planters Bank, were: Mrs. J. M. Horton and Mrs. W. R. Harris, first with a .592 percent game; Mrs. Marilyn Bongard and Mrs. Linday Gunderson, second; Mrs. J. W. H. Roberts and Mrs. Walter Thompson, second; Mrs. David Stevens and Mrs. Mavis Smith, fourth.

Lori Deal Is Group Speaker

The Greenville Welcome Wagon Club held its meeting and luncheon Wednesday at the Rotary Club. Lori Deal, a local department store display manager, presented the program.

She discussed the career of visual merchandising, fashion colors and future fashion trends.

President Arlene Kraus announced meetings will continue to be held at the Rotary Club, catered by Pipeline.

Theresa Jepson reported donations have been made with funds remaining from the previous board's term including Greenville Social Services, Greenville Boys Choir and the ECU Hearing Impairment and Sign Language Club.

Mrs. Joyce Sullivan, Mrs. Ginny Cooper, Lula Sauls and Mrs. Irene Carter were introduced as new members.

The next meeting will be held July 9. Fashion Fabrics will sponsor a program including a group of 4-H members from Kinston.

Miss Murray Entertained

Mrs. Pat Conway and Mrs. Judith Garris honored Miss Brenda Murray, bride-elect of the month, at a bridal luncheon at the home of Mrs. M. E. Cavendish Saturday.

Guests were greeted by Mrs. Garris and daughter, Michele. Mrs. Conway invited guests into the dining room. The hostesses presented Miss Murray a corsage of pink carnations.

An antique buffet was decorated with silver candelabra holding burning white tapers entwined with lily of the valley tied with white satin.

The dining table was covered with an imported Irish embroidered linen cloth and decorated with a silver epergne filled with mixed summer flowers and white candles. Miniature wedding bells tied with green ribbon were used as place cards. Bridesmaids proposed a toast to the honoree.

Mrs. Cavendish remembered the honoree with a wedding gift.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

This is probably going to blow my image, but I'm a real recipe freak. I read cookbooks like other women read erotic novels, English mysteries, or humor.

Because I am a student of cookbooks, I have developed some insights over the years... especially with a section that has become a staple called "CELEBRITY RECIPES."

I don't mean to put them down. I've contributed to them myself. Some of you may have even tried my recipe, "Erma's Annual Hot Meal." ("Sedated chicken breasts drowning in a sea of canned mushroom soup and broccoli. Serves three if guests love broccoli, 26 if they hate broccoli.")

But mostly, I'm suspicious of them. Like Angie Dickinson's Date and Nut Bread. The picture above it shows Angie with her long, blonde hair falling over her shoulders, wearing a see-through net dress that hugs her bones. I'm sorry, but I somehow get the feeling if someone offered Angie a measuring cup, she'd laugh and say, "I haven't worn that size since I was seven."

Barbara Walters' Cabbage Rolls seem out of character somehow... nor did I figure Menachem Begin sitting around in Israel one afternoon announcing, "We got any cinnamon? My mouth's just watering for some of my apple pancakes." (Fidel Castro's Bite the Bullet Chicken, maybe.)

Some of the celebrity recipes are predictable. First ladies, I've discovered, rarely send in recipes for anything under budget. There's Bess Truman's Coconut Balls; Mamie Eisenhower's Million-Dollar Fudge; and Rosalynn Carter's Peanut Brittle.

Every time I see one of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis' recipes, I know it's going to require Bechamel sauce and it's just as well you don't make it because you wouldn't be able to pronounce it if someone asked you what you served.

Some thing with Princess Grace who always shows off and gives her recipes in metric. (How soon they forget Philadelphia.)

Some of the most unlikely men contribute some of the most unlikely recipes you've ever heard of. Would you try Joel Grey's Pepper Duck? Bob Hope's Lemon Pie? Or Ronald Reagan's Truckadero Beef Stew? (The latter contains 16 ingredients, which is the kind of thoroughness you'd expect from a man who declared his candidacy last December.)

On Mother's Day, however, my faith in celebrity recipes was restored. My husband and the kids decided to get dinner for me. He rummaged through my cookbooks and two hours later set before me the most beautiful roast I had ever seen from the grill. It was called Charcoal Roast a la Bert Lance.

I'll never doubt Bert again. Copyright 1980 Field Enterprises, Inc.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Looking for a quick and easy, light-hearted summertime project? Then try your hand at fascinating "Broomstick Lace," a surprisingly easy form of crochet, worked with a large crochet hook and one size 50 knit pin.

Any one of the three pieces — cap, scarf or popover vest — makes a great gift item or make all three for a very special someone. Three skeins of knitting worsted weight yarn will make the complete set.

To obtain directions for making the Broomstick Lace Set, send your request for Leaflet No. S-30 with $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope to Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-30 by sending check or money order for $10.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Each kit contains knit pin, crochet hook, acrylic yarn and the instruction leaflet. Please specify your choice of Fisherman White, Light Gold, Mint Green, Light Blue, Baby Pink, Scarlet or Royal Blue. Price includes shipping charges.

DEAR PAT: I am making an afghan in four shades of pink and when I first started, using the four skeins simultaneously, I had a real mess with the yarns constantly tangling.

I came up with the idea of using bobbins. Much to my dismay, I could only find one among my needlework supplies and, when I get the urge to start something, I want to do it right away and not have to wait until I can get to a store.

So, I found an empty plastic half-gallon milk bottle and cut about eight bobbins from one bottle. They are working out beautifully and, of course, cost nothing. I do have to wind the bobbins quite often but it is worth the effort and they are certainly a lot easier to use. — JOYCE S., ST. LOUIS, MO.

DEAR PAT: Have you ever wondered how to duplicate those nice uniform balls of yarn that the winding machines in yarn shops make? I have finally discovered the answer.

All you need is one cardboard roll from paper toweling. Make a small slit in one end to anchor your yarn. Hold the roll in your left hand, at a 45-degree angle, and turn it toward you. Then, using your right hand, hold the yarn loosely and wind in a vertical circle away from you.

That's all there is to it! When you are finished, just push the ball up off the roll. No stretching of the yarn, no tangling and — best of all — you can use the inside end, the outside end or both if you need doubled yarn. — MRS. A.K., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

DEAR PAT: Please suggest to your readers that when they are knitting two like objects, such as mittens, sleeves, cardigan fronts or socks, to knit both pieces at the same time. This insures that they will be exactly alike.

Just use two separate balls of yarn. Cast on the correct number of stitches for one piece from one ball of yarn, then, on the same needle, cast on the same number from the second ball. Then follow through, doing each row on both pieces as the instructions state.

Besides the obvious advantage of being certain each piece is the same without having to count rows as you go, there is another advantage. If you should run short of yarn — perish the thought — you do so at the same spot on each piece and can decide then and there to add a stripe of another color. — MRS. VAN DYKE, ENGLEWOOD, CALIF.

Because of the large volume of mail she receives, Pat is unable to answer your letters personally. However, she welcomes all questions and hints and will use those of general interest in the column whenever possible.

Utilities Is A Business

Greenville Utilities Commission has approved a mind boggling $35.8 million budget for the 1980-81 fiscal year and sent it on for city council adoption.

The budget is huge although tempered considerably by the fact that $20.5 million will be paid directly to VEPCO for purchased power. Another large part of the funds - $3.5 million - goes for the purchase of natural gas which is distributed through the local system. Some $1.2 million will go to the city government as turn-over to be used in funding municipal operations.

After those large expenditures, however, the Utilities will still have over $10 million to spend on its own operations. That includes many things, the day-to-day operations of the Utilities Commission, construction of new electric, water, sewer and gas lines to serve new customers and maintenance and replacement of all the equipment which the commission must have.

Needless to say there is as much burden on the administration of the Utilities Commission to conduct its operations as efficiently as possible as there is on the various governmental agencies.

The Utilities is, in fact, a city-owned business which sells a product and furnishes a service. It should be run as efficiently as any private business, and we hope, better than some.

Volcano Does It Again

Mount St. Helens did it again last week. It put on one of nature's spectaculars by erupting another time.

The awesome explosion sent great clouds of volcanic ash out, blanketing cities for many miles around.

And the problem with volcanos is that no one can accurately predict what they will do. Mount St. Helens could erupt again, or many more times.

For the residents of the northwest the volcano has become quite a problem.

THIS AFTERNOON

Inflation Fighters

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — When this short budget session of the North Carolina General Assembly convened, the membership warmly applauded and embraced Gov. Jim Hunt's characterization of it as "an inflation fighting session."

At a committee meeting in which the notion of giving citizens a break on their income taxes to encourage deposits in savings accounts was under consideration, it became clear just how serious political leaders are about fighting inflation.

The housing industry and the savings and loans are pushing for a tax break on interest income from savings. That would both help the ailing real estate business, the homebuilders, and the bankers; and encourage people to save instead of spend, goes the rationale.

Gov. Hunt endorsed and legislative leaders are pushing an exemption on the first $200 of interest income. That amounts to about $14 annually for the average taxpayer.

Big Cut
Why not, wondered some committee members, make that proposal worth something to the taxpayers, while actually helping to fight inflation? Why not make the amount exempted $1,000?

The answer from the legislative leadership was prompt and blunt: No Way! That would take about $11 million out of the state budget, and there is no way to get this General Assembly to pass up $11 million.

Instead, lawmakers are busy doing out more than $358 million in state income above and beyond the more than $5 billion already budgeted. Closely following Gov. Hunt's proposed supplemental budget outline, more than $300 million is already earmarked for salary increases to state employees and teachers (10 percent raise), for changes in teacher salary schedules (another four to 10 percent raise), for improved retirement benefits, and other employee fringes.

The leftovers have been designated to help counties facing mounting welfare costs ($5 million) and other routine public programs.

We asked Gov. Hunt how he could term this budget session "an inflation-fighting session" when so much money was being spent on recurring governmental expenses which will not only have to be paid again next year, and the next, and the next, but will become a part of the base budget while future sessions approve added fringes and raises. The result will certainly be that the state budget will increase by nearly $2 billion before another four years go by. This means that inflation must continue to produce added governmental income, else taxes must be raised. Either way, the citizen pays the bill through outright tax hikes, or through the hidden tax of inflation.

Very Hard
The budget, said Hunt, is inflation-fighting in that it is designed to help state employees fight the burdens which inflation is putting upon them. "It is making their lives very hard," he observed.

BILL NOBLITT

But isn't that fueling inflation? No, says Hunt, because

Musings On Anderson

WASHINGTON — John Anderson, the wayward congressman, is on the road these days, gathering presidential petitions as he goes. The White House is putting potholes in his path. Politically speaking, not much else is going on. Let us kick the gentleman around.

My brother pundits, Germond & Witcover, pooh-pooh the notion that Anderson's candidacy constitutes a threat to the two-party system. After all, they observe, Anderson is not forming a new and permanent third party; he is running as an independent, preaching the gospel of unity and promising the voters only a kind of fusion ticket. He remains, in their view, a Republican in good standing.

I am not so sure of all this. Unless the heavens fall, Ronald Reagan next month will become officially and formally the presidential nominee of the Republican Party. It is hard to understand how a Republican could run against him in November and remain a Republican. It is hard to understand how Anderson could qualify as a card-carrying Republican now. Maybe he is on leave, or taking a sabbatical, or undergoing the pangs of a political change of life.

A party system depends for its very existence upon two imperatives. One is discipline; the other is reward. Granted, in the present disarray of our own two-party system, not much remains of discipline and still less remains of reward. But the principle is sound, Anderson set out to seek the presidency as a Republican; he qualified for federal funds as a Republican. It was not until his primary campaign flopped that he emerged, born again, John Anderson the Independent.

This is all very well, and heaven knows the gentleman has every right to seek the Oval Office by any avenue that might get him there. But it seems to me that in willfully and deliberately opposing the candidate of his own party, he has left his party as effectively as if he had crossed the aisle of the House and called himself a Democrat. The Republican caucus would be entirely justified if members followed baseball's rule for the recalcitrant player: Throw the bum out.

Questions of party discipline to one side, it may not be amiss to set the record straight on one curious incident in the Anderson record. This is the matter of the "Jesus Amendment." Anderson has grown irritable at its very mention; his staff brushes the matter aside as ancient history of a youthful misjudgment.

These are the facts, for whatever they may be worth. Anderson was elected to the House from the 16th District of Illinois in November, 1960. On June, 1961, he introduced House Joint Resolution 454, proposing an amendment to the Constitution. He was then 39 years old, a graduate of Harvard Law, a former member of the faculty at Northeastern University School of Law.

This was his amendment: "Section 1: This Nation devoutly recognizes the authority and law of Jesus Christ, Saviour and Ruler of nations, through whom are bestowed the blessings of Almighty God. Section 2: This amendment shall not be interpreted so as to result in the establishment of any particular ecclesiastical organization, or in the abridgment of the rights of religious freedom, or freedom of speech and press, or of peaceful assemblage. Section 3: Congress shall have power, in such cases as it may deem proper, to provide a suitable oath or affirmation for citizens whose religious scruples prevent them from giving unqualified allegiance to the Constitution as herein amended."

This bizarre proposition died in committee in the 87th Congress. Anderson tried again in the 88th Congress: On March 11, 1963, he introduced the identical measure as H.J. Res. 314. It also died in committee. Anderson tried again in the 89th Congress: On Jan. 29, 1965, he introduced this same proposal as H.J. Res. 245. It met the same fate.

Well, many of us in the pundit game are embarrassed by things we wrote 15 to 19 years ago. In charity, bygone ordinarily ought to be dismissed as bygone. All the same, the breathtaking impropriety of Anderson's resolution, and his persistence through three Congresses in sponsoring it, merit reflection. The implied cast of mind raises a fair question of Anderson's thinking on fundamental matters. What goes on upstairs?

A Rebuilder Of Mid-America

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP)

The weary retail areas of smaller cities often can be rehabilitated with shopping malls, says the man who has built more of them in downtown areas than anyone else.

He gets results. Some of his big-city centers have outdrawn Disneyland by up to 80 percent. Fox Hills Mall, a large center opened several years ago in Los Angeles County, has drawn 19 million people a year.

On a lesser scale, says Ernest W. Hahn, an entrepreneur whose name is associated with some of the largest, most innovative, and successful malls, smaller cities have relatively equal possibilities.

Hahn, the intense, 60-year-old founder and chairman of Ernest W. Hahn Inc., which owns and operates 25 retail centers, is building 11 others and has 21 in the planning stage. He says three things are essential.

First, a city must be accessible to the entire market, including the surrounding towns, by means of superior streets or freeways or both. And then it must provide plenty of free parking.

The third requirement is where dreamers are separated from realists. The developer must, he said, have a subsidy, perhaps in the form of a city agency buying up properties and "recycling" them for retail.

There is a good reason for the subsidy, says Hahn, and it becomes evident once the shopping center begins to do its work, drawing people into town, catering to them, and involving them in the community.

The most anyone can pay for shopping center ground is $2.50 to $3 a square foot, explained Hahn, a man with a calculator mind. But he has seen land for office space sell recently in San Diego for $50 a foot.

The explanation is simple. An office building might rise 25 stories. For retailing, however, a building cannot be a high rise, and it needs 5 parking spaces per square foot of building compared with 1.5 for offices.

Hahn believes that much of "Middle America" cities with populations of as little as 35,000 but with trade areas of at least 100,000, can be improved by retail malls, aesthetically, culturally and financially.

He does throw in two caveats, however.

1. The older the city the denser the population is likely to be, and therefore the harder to build a mall that requires acres of space.

2. In some larger cities, their retail markets devastated by poverty, it might be impossible to construct and operate a mall profitably.

Aides Hold Real Power

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The power of the liberal network of congressional and bureaucratic staff aides has been demonstrated again in their apparently successful campaign to bar Leo Cherne, an internationally beloved figure working with refugees, from the Board for International Broadcasting (BIB), which governs vital broadcasts to communist Eastern Europe.

Cherne is inclined to reject appointment to the board despite urgings from the White House. This confirms the staff network's hidden power to override top-level government officials behind their backs. It also reflects the policy split over whether detente still ought to be enshrined. Cherne is among those who believe that era has passed, and that U.S. broadcasts must toughen up.

The campaign against Cherne, at 67 a world leader in international rescue and refugee work, was plotted by the BIB's chief of staff, Walter Roberts, working covertly with staff aides of several liberal senators.

Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty, controlled by the BIB, broadcast to Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union. Both had heavy CIA financing until 1973. The campaign put on by Roberts and the Senate staffers implied, falsely, that if appointed chairman of the five-member board, Cherne would fall under CIA influence.

What really was at stake, however, was whether Roberts, a 63-year-old retired foreign service officer, would stay in power. How he and anonymous Senate aides were able to override President Carter's national security advisers in derailing Cherne is testimony to how Washington really works.

Word leaked that national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski had asked Cherne to consider appointment as BIB chairman when the term of former Ambassador John Gronowski expired in April. Roberts then triggered his blocking operation.

The reason is found in a confidential March 28 memorandum from Cherne to the White House which goes to the heart of what ails Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty: the BIB. Criticism of the BIB's inability to step up American propaganda to match post-detente requirements runs from a failure to increase broadcasting to Soviet Moslems areas near Afghanistan to strain between the BIB and the two radios.

No member of the board, Cherne writes, "can more than casually assess operations of the magnitude to be performed" by the two radios. Consequently, the BIB staff's authority is "more than normal or desirable." Cherne's prescription: "The next chairman of BIB must, whatever the resistance from his colleagues who may cherish their distinction and tasks, move to bring the existence of the BIB to an end."

Whether or not Roberts ever read Cherne's memo, he and the rest of the BIB staff surely knew their life-and-death powers over the radios would end under Chairman Cherne.

Roberts was present at a meeting with staff aides of Sen. Claiborne Pell, chairman of the foreign relations subcommittee overseeing the radios, at a long, unannounced meeting in Pell's office the last week of April. That week Gronowski's three-year term came to an end (though he continues as chairman in the absence of a replacement).

At the meeting in Pell's office, a letter was drafted to President Carter that took dead aim at Cherne's appointment: "We believe the work of a decade in assuring the professional integrity of RFEL would be undone if any of the present members of the BIB were to be replaced by persons who could even remotely be identified as presently or formerly associated with the CIA or intelligence activities in any capacity."

The network was energized. Aides secured the signatures of Pell and three other detentist members of the foreign relations committee: Chairman Frank Church, Jacob Javits and Charles H. Percy.

The letter blackballed Leo Cherne, a longtime member of the president's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board (now abolished). Roberts had the letter leaked to the New York Times two weeks later. The Times story falsely charged that the International Rescue Committee (then, as now, headed by Cherne) "reportedly received $15,000 in CIA money in the mid-1960s." That raised suspicions that Roberts was the source of the false information.

The strategy of Roberts and his BIB staff was clear: With the support of four prominent senators and the redherring warning about a return to evil CIA influence, Cherne was a goner.

But at least one senator signed the letter without spotting the booby trap. After the letter leaked last month, a sorrowful Javits said publicly nobody had told him "of any name" being considered for appointment. "I had not the foggiest notion of any individual, and certainly not Leo Cherne," he said.

Such is the artful way of the staff network, overriding policies of the highest of (Continued on page 5)

To the editor:
The government cannot solve small businesses' problems because the government is the problem. Consider the following statistical shockers I found recently in a small business publication:

Over 14 million small businesses in the U. S. provide a livelihood for 100 million Americans.

Small business is 97 percent of all business, accounting for 58 percent of the labor force.

Twenty years ago small businesses' share of the GNP pie was over half. In 1979 it had dropped to 39 percent and is today declining at a rate close to one percent per year.

Bankruptcy figures are up by 152 percent since March, 1979. Ninety percent of this spiral has been since October, 1979.

The federal government has become the biggest business in the country by engaging in 21,000 commercial and industrial activities.

These "in house" operations, which cost us more and take the business out of our pockets, are financed by OUR taxes to the tune of $10 BILLION annually.

In addition, we are paying over $100 million a year for the government paperwork burden.

The price tag on regulatory agencies has increased from $745 million in 1970 to $5 billion in 1979.

National productivity over the same span has decreased by 25 percent.

$10 billion dollars per year is being handed out for the Food Stamp program, $620 million of which is pure duplication in free lunches for the economically disadvantaged.

Total costs on welfare programs since 1964 have increased by 19,000 percent.

In the past 27 years only four pieces of legislation have benefited small business. The rest was a result of special interest lobbying which directly or indirectly has been putting us out of business.

Preserve the free enterprise system.

Strength For Today

A STITCH IN TIME
During a period of very cold weather last winter the oil burner of a friend of mine broke down, and before he could get it fixed some of his water pipes froze and burst. Then, belatedly, he put in an auxiliary wood-burning stove to prevent a repetition of the costly accident.

This is the usual pattern of neglect, catastrophe, and caution with which so many of us deal with important issues of life. Likewise, in the things of the spirit there is a lot more regret after evil is done than there is planning to avoid evil in the first place. The Bible's word of warning is, "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, before the evil days come." And again, "Today if you would hear his voice, harden not your hearts." And a third warning, "Now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation."

While there is yet time we should all take steps to avoid moral disaster in the future by cultivating wholesome habits and religious faith now. —Elisba Douglass

Leroy James To Head Association

Pitt County Chairman of the Agricultural Extension Service Leroy James was voted president-elect of the North Carolina Association of County Agricultural Agents at the state meeting in Asheville recently.

The organization encourages a high standard of professional performance among extension field workers, promotes a high degree of cooperation between extension people, and assists in improving effectiveness of cooperative extension work. NCACAA also advances the basic importance of American agriculture and carries out policies and programs of the grant university in North Carolina.

James will take office following the national meeting August 10-15 in Norman, Okla.

Three Wrecks Investigated

More than $2,200 property damage resulted from a series of three traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville police here yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 12:35 p.m. mishap on Evans Street, between Tenth and 11th Streets.

According to investigators, a car driven by Lora Ann Manning of Grifton left the roadway and collided with a utility pole and U.S. Postal Service mail box.

Damage was estimated at $850 to the car, $250 to the pole, $132 to the mail box and $50 to electrical service at Boyd's Barber Shop.

Both Ms. Manning and a passenger in her car reportedly received minor injuries in the crash.

Vehicles driven by Aubrey Wilson Morris Jr. of Route 2, Colerain and Patricia Pratt Perkins of Bethel, collided about 11:10 a.m. on Dickson Avenue, 350 feet west of the Maxwell Street intersection, causing an estimated $500 damage to the truck driven by Morris, and $175 damage to the Perkins car.

Lizzie Lucille Edwards of Route 1, Ayden, was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 12:40 p.m. collision on Evans Street, 20 feet south of the Reade Circle intersection.

Police said the Edwards car collided with an auto driven by James Jones of 1107 Clark St., causing $100 damage to the Jones car and $150 damage to the Edwards vehicle.

Morning Theft Is Investigated

Greenville police are investigating a break-in at Youth Togs at 212 Arlington Blvd., reported at 2:55 a.m. today.

Chief Glenn Cannon said entrance to the building was gained by prying open a rear door.

An estimated $100 in cash and checks was reported taken from a cash register, he said.

CHARGES MADE

Larry C. Whitlow of 1008 West Wright Rd. was charged last night with assault and trespassing after he allegedly beat Paul Harper Raspberry at Raspberry's 1409 North Overlook Dr. home.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers were told the 11:55 p.m. incident yesterday was the result of a domestic dispute.

Pitt Court House Has Minor Fire Yesterday

COURTHOUSE FIRE...A member of the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department takes up a water hose following Monday's minor fire in the third floor annex of the Pitt County Courthouse. Firemen were able to put out the fire, which sent smoke throughout the building and caused evacuation of courthouse occupants, with little resulting damage. (Reflector Staff Photo)

County and State employees working in offices at the Pitt County Court House received an unexpected afternoon off yesterday after a minor fire erupted on the third floor of the building.

The small blaze, which started when a workman's acetylene torch set fire to some insulation, was reported at 1:32 p.m., and sent acrid smoke throughout the building.

Center Visited By Area Clients

Clients of the Career Development Center for Displaced Homemakers, 223 W. Tenth Street here, recently visited the Pitt County Mental Health Center to learn about services offered there.

Besides offering job training and placement, the center seeks to make participants aware of other community agencies that can help them improve their lives. Center personnel, Nancy M. Middleton and Robert S. Spence, conducted a get-acquainted session for the group at the Mental Health Center.

Form MS Club At Center

A Multiple Sclerosis Club is being formed at the Regional Rehabilitation Center of Pitt County Memorial Hospital here Sunday from 3 to 4 p.m. The meeting is being held in the Occupational Therapy Department of the Center.

The group is planned to meet the needs of persons who have multiple sclerosis and their families from throughout Eastern North Carolina. Barbara Riddle, the Triangle Chapter Multiple Sclerosis chairperson, will be present to assist in the organization effort.

A stress reduction session will be held during the first meeting.

For more information, call 757-4442.

CLUB TO MEET

The Town and Country Senior Citizens Club will have a Dutch Luncheon June 19 at 11:30 a.m. at the Western Steer Restaurant.

Reservations for the June 27 trip to Bath to attend the Blackbeard drama and for the Pembroke trip July 10 to see "Strike At The Wind" must be made no later than June 19.

RATE DECLINES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities have fallen to 6.662 percent, the lowest mark since April 17, 1978 when it was 6.563 percent. Last week, the 6-month bills carried a 6.935 percent rate.

Disavows Union Brown Seated Ruled By Mob On City Board

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the Laborers International Union has denied a charge that his organization is controlled by organized crime.

There is "no truth whatever" to a published report based on a Justice Department memo which says union decisions are made by mob members, said Angelo Fosco.

"This is a rehash of stuff which has been going on for years, dished out by opponents of organized labor seeking to embarrass members," Fosco said in response to the article in Mother Jones, a San Francisco-based magazine.

"There is no truth whatever that the Laborers International Union of North America is being run by anybody except the general officers who were elected in open convention by delegates representing the more than 650,000 members," said Fosco's prepared statement.

In its August issue, the magazine published a story based on a Justice Department memo which alleges that Fosco "is a tool of the crime syndicate."

"Major decisions regarding Laborers Union contracts are made by organized crime leaders, not Fosco," the magazine quoted the memo as saying.

Government sources confirmed that Justice Department lawyers had drafted such a memo.

The AFL-CIO lists the union's U.S. membership at 475,000, making it the 9th largest union in the labor federation.

The Laborers Union represents people whose jobs require great physical toil, such as construction workers, street cleaners, garbage collectors, ditch diggers and mail-sack handlers, and a variety of other workers, including racetrack clerks and school teachers.

The union has been headed by the Fosco family since 1968, when Angelo's father, Peter, became president in 1968 and Angelo headed the Chicago region. When Peter died in 1975, Angelo succeeded him as president, and put his son, Peter J., into the Chicago job.

Allegations of ties between the Laborers and organized crime date back to 1948, when Angelo's father was questioned at a congressional hearing about his relationship with a Chicago mob boss, Paul "The Waiter" Rica.

Parents Upset By Elopement

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress-singer Stephanie Mills has eloped in Los Angeles with singer Jeffrey Daniels, and her parents are upset.

A spokesman said Monday that the couple eloped Friday.

Miss Mills, 23, who starred as Dorothy in "The Wiz" on Broadway, and her 24-year-old husband will reside in Los Angeles when not on tour, he said.

Daniels is with the rhythm and blues band "Shalamar."

The bride's parents, Joseph and Christine Mills of Mount Vernon, N.Y., said they were deliberately excluded by Daniels. "He's always told Stephanie that her family are her worst enemies," said Mrs. Mills.

Refuses Dismiss Flag Charges

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge refused on Monday to dismiss charges against two members of the Revolutionary Communist Party on trial for allegedly desecrating an American flag.

The defendants, Teresa Kime and Don Bonwell, are accused of setting fire to a flag on March 27 during a demonstration in front of the U.S. Courthouse in Greensboro.

Grain Dealers' License Revoked

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Agriculture Department on Monday suspended the grain dealers license of Blizzard and Holmes Mill Inc. of Seven Springs.

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said the revocation was based on testimony at a hearing May 22 when several farmers said they had not been paid for grain delivered to the mill.

The company has filed a bankruptcy petition showing debts of more than $1 million.

Ernest Brown, Project Review Director for the 29-county Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency, Inc., was sworn in Monday night as the new member of the Greenville Board of Education. Four others sworn in at the same time were all returning to the board following re-election or re-appointment. Brown was appointed to the board for a four-year term by the Greenville City Council.

A native of Kannapolis, Brown has lived in Greenville for three years. After graduating from Kannapolis city schools, Brown earned the bachelor degree from N. C. Central University, Durham, then received a master's degree in public health from UNC-Chapel Hill. He also served a four-year hitch in the Navy.

Brown is Commander of American Legion Post No. 160, is treasurer of the Pitt County Black Assembly, and dean of pledges for the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity.

Brown is also a member of the Pitt County Heart Association, and is a Baptist. He is married to the former Peggy Marrow of Shelby, and they are the parents of two sons, Ernest Jr. and Elgin.

"I am elated about being appointed to the school board. I am going to try to be a people's representative, and to get out into the community and let people know who I am.

"I feel that Greenville has one of the best school boards in the state, and I'm grateful to the City Council for the confidence they have shown in appointing me as a member of the board."

Brown is an avid basketball and tennis fan, and in his school years was an active participant in sports.

N.C. Senate Okays Higher Rate On 2nd Mortgage

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Senate accepted a consumer-oriented compromise Monday night and then approved a bill raising interest rates on second mortgages and allowing larger amounts to be loaned.

The bill now goes back to the House, where it was passed last year in a vastly different form. Meanwhile, a host of other bills relating to interest rates on other types of loans continued to be hotly debated by legislators. Both the House and Senate banking committees scheduled meetings today to consider the measures.

Rep. Charles Holt, D-Fayetteville, chairman of the House Banking Committee, said there appeared to be as many proposed compromises as there were proposed banking bills, but that he expected his panel to vote soon.

Because of the confusion over the varying effects of interest-rate bills, some legislators suggested privately they would attempt to send the bills to a subcommittee — dooming them for this year. Others worked on compromises that would peg legal limits on interest rates to the rising and falling Federal Reserve Board discount loan rate.

The Senate bill would have raised second mortgage interest rate limits from 12 percent to 18 percent annually. But on a 34-11 vote, the Senate agreed to substitute a new limit of 15 percent a year or 4 percent over the discount loan rate, whichever is higher.

That amendment was authored by the Legal Services of North Carolina, a consumer-oriented group, and introduced by Sen. Joe Palmer, D-Clyde. The 4 percent floating rate is smaller than that suggested as a compromise on some other bills, in which the banking industry wants higher limits or no interest rate ceilings at all.

The Senate bill also allows the second mortgages to be as large as $25,000, rather than the current $7,500, and the Senate defeated on a 37-7 vote another amendment to reduce that limit to $10,000.

"We're dealing with a sophisticated lender and an unsophisticated borrower," said Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gastonia, in urging the amendment.

After a third, gutting amendment was defeated, the Senate voted 33-12 to send the measure to the House. The bill applies mainly to second-mortgage companies, many of which are subidiaries of small loan companies.

When the bill was originally passed in the House it did not address the second mortgages, and its House sponsor has since died. Sen. James Edwards, D-Hickory, amended the bill in the Senate Banking Committee.

The Senate voted unanimously to approve and send to the House a bill that sets tougher and mandatory sentences for large-scale drug dealers. The bill, proposed by Gov. Jim Hunt, was approved on a 46-0 vote.

The bill covers drugs ranging from marijuana to heroin, establishing mandatory sentences of as much as 16 years for possessing five tons of marijuana and 20 years for 28 or more grams of heroin.

"I'm going to vote for this bill, but I think it's about one-tenth as strong as it ought to be," said Sen. George Marion, D-Dobson.

Spending While the $358 million surplus budget cleared the Senate and steamed toward House approval, the House and Senate budget committees turned to a $53 million wish-list of numerous projects backed by legislators.

The bills, many for projects within the districts of their sponsors, are traditionally considered after the main budget is out of the way.

State Budget Officer John A. Williams said his office would have projections today or later this week on how much extra money is available for some of the bills from unspent state funds.

He said it would be "right much less" than $10 million.

Taxes The House approved on a 111-2 vote and sent to the Senate a bill that would provide an income tax exclusion on the first $200 in interest on a savings account. A Senate committee has approved a bill granting an exclusion on the first $1,000.

Courts

A Senate judiciary committee approved a complicated bill that delays and makes technical changes in the presumptive sentencing law proposed by Gov. Jim Hunt and passed by the General Assembly last year. The bill, backed by Hunt, would delay the effect of the new law until Jan. 1, 1981, and the committee voted to extend that delay further, to March 1, 1981.

Formally Ends His Candidacy

CLEVELAND (AP) — Former North Carolina Jaycee president J. Harold Herring formally withdrew Monday night as a candidate for president of the U.S. Jaycees in what was described as an attempt to head off a budding movement to draft him for the national job.

"The draft movement was there, and there is no doubt that he could have walked away with the election," said John Lowery, the current president of the North Carolina Jaycees.

Herring, unopposed for the national post until recently, lost the support of North Carolina Jaycees earlier this month after widespread criticism over the diversion of funds and fake membership recruiting under his and other state administrations.

Lowery said there was intense pressure from other state delegations for Herring to stay in the race although he had announced last week that he would not continue as a candidate.

"The sentiments are very strong to elect Harold without North Carolina support, and we felt like we had to go one step further," Lowery said.

"Harold and I met this (Monday) afternoon, and we reached a mutual decision that it was in the best interest of the North Carolina Jaycees that he should not be a candidate."

Lowery also said that the North Carolina delegation to the convention was not certified to prevent its members from voting in the national election.

Still to be decided by the national Jaycees is what action, if any, will be taken as a result of the membership falsifications by the North Carolina organization. The state chapter had been scheduled to receive national recognition for its rapid increase in members.

Jaycee spokesmen have blamed the membership push for the diversion of an estimated $191,000 from a fund intended for the North Carolina Burn Center at Chapel Hill. The money reportedly was used to pay national membership fees.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE — Michael Elder, 25, thought a little advertising of his personal cleanliness wouldn't hurt a thing as he hitchhiked through Dallas, Texas. It worked, because just moments after this photo was taken some kind soul gave him a much-needed ride. (AP Laserphoto)

Reunion Held By Class Of 1930

The 1930 graduating class of Greenville High School held its 50th reunion Saturday at the Ramada Inn. Approximately 75 members and guests attended.

Following a social hour, dinner was served. Tyson Bilbro welcomed the classmates and guests after the invocation by Raymond Smith. George Wilkerson introduced each class member while Hazel Fleming Jackson presented gifts to Mary Lee Bland and Joe Dixon for having traveled the farthest distance, and to Julia Frances Porter Branch for having the most grandchildren.

Mary Effie Patrick Swindell and Frances Harvey Carwyle read the Last Will and Testament and the Class Superlatives. Doris Garris May read the names of the deceased classmates.

The program ended with the classmates singing the class song and Louise Clarke Brewer giving the benediction.

Members of the Greenville High School Class of 1930 present were: John B. Thomas, Margaret Hassell Griffin, Hazel Fleming Jackson, Hubert Register, Clara Louise Forbes Clark, A. Defend Change In Road Cost

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State transportation officials Monday defended changes made in an official cost estimate of a Wake County paving project on which Rea Construction Co. has admitted it submitted a rigged bid.

"In looking at the information and the background and hearing the logic discussed I'm even more confident than I was in the validity of that estimate," said Harry C. Clegg Jr., assistant highway administrator for reconstruction.

The News and Observer of Raleigh reported Sunday that the project estimate was raised by 25.6 percent after Rea's bid had been submitted to the state Board of Transportation. If the estimated cost had not been raised, Rea's bid of $681,405 would have been 40.8 percent over the state's estimate, high enough to prompt rejection.

The changes were made in May 1978 by J. Preston Allen, head of the Division of Highway's proposal and contract section. Allen changed 14 items in the estimate, adding $123,975 to the original estimate.

Allen said Monday he based some of his changes on prices contained in the low bid on a project on Raleigh's Downtown Boulevard. Rea also won that project in 1973. Allen said the Downtown Boulevard project was more similar to the U.S. 70-401 project than two base projects used in the original estimate.

The state board uses the staff-produced estimate to decide whether bids by commercial contractors represent a fair price.

Rea and two of its top executives pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in Charlotte on June 4 to rigging its bid on the U.S. 70-401 project and a Charlotte airport contract. The company was fined $350,000 and the executives were sentenced to short prison terms. The company also has admitted rigging a bid on an airport project in Richmond, Va.

Both states have suspended Rea's qualifications to bid on state projects.

OKs Army Teacher Bargaining Rights

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Federal Labor Relations Authority has upheld an administrative law judge's ruling that Fort Bragg teachers are federal employees and as such have the right to collective bargaining.

The ruling came on an appeal by the Army of an order by Judge Randolph D. Mason, who also found that school superintendent Haywood Davis and four principals were guilty of unfair labor practices against the Fort Bragg Federation of Teachers. That ruling also was upheld.

The FBFT is affiliated with the North Carolina Federation of Teachers, American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO.

Davis said Monday he had not been notified of the ruling. "If that's the ruling, I'm disappointed and somewhat surprised. As to what our next step will be, I can't say," Davis said.

The Army was ordered to: — Not allow any school principals or any other supervisors to attend any authorized meetings designed to solicit FBFT membership.

— Not allow the superintendent or any other management representatives to make statements that might discourage employees from engaging in collective bargaining.

— Not interfere, restrain or coerce any employees in exercising their rights.

Wake County Approves Bonds

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Wake County's Commissioners approved the issuance Monday of $3.5 million in industrial revenue bonds to finance an operations and research center for Black & Decker Manufacturing Co.

Black & Decker declined to release information about the center other than to tell the county board the center would employ 106 workers, mostly professionals in engineering.

The company is starting operations at a $5.4 million distribution center in Raleigh. That center handles power tools made by Black & Decker plants in Tarboro and Fayetteville.

Offer ECU Students Internship Assistance

By MARGARET BUNCH
ECU News Bureau

"WANTED" student to work for one semester, pay based on starting salary for full time employee, possible to receive compensation for travel, and future educational expenses, possible offer of full time employment after graduation, cultural advantages, located in Washington, D.C.

You would think that an ad written like this would have students lining up outside the door like a game between ECU and Carolina. Not true.

Dr. Betsy Harper, Director of Cooperative Education has jobs just like this that she can offer students who are attending East Carolina University and cannot give them away.

Some people do not know about the jobs, or Cooperative Education or about Betsy Harper. Some know about all three but just cannot be persuaded to leave the hometown or Greenville or North Carolina. Some students get very enthusiastic about the program and go home to talk to Mom and Dad about the situation and get too much flack about stepping out of the educational track for one semester. Taking advantage of this program does offer some definite pluses, however.

Chad Buffkin, an English major at ECU, is one of the students who spent spring semester in Washington, D.C. co-oping with HUD. After finishing out various government forms and writing resumes and letters of application, Buffkin received a call from the Recruitment Branch of the U.S. Department of Housing and Development.

"I was interviewed over the telephone and offered a position in the Headquarters' Administrative Training Branch in Washington," he said. "My status was soon changed from a full-time to a part-time student and with help from the co-op office I found a place to live in Washington.

Others there in the spring semester were Janet Helvig, Rep. Walter Jones' staff; Terry Myers with the House Majority leader; Cynthia Fox with the National Archives and Mike Simco with the U.S. Navy.

Jobs are also available with the Center for Disease Control, The Smithsonian, NASA Headquarters, USDA, HHS (formerly HEW), the Navy and the Dept. of Justice. There are internships in offices of senators and congressmen.

The Cooperative Education Office also has openings in local Greenville firms and other companies across the state of North Carolina.

Rain Over Area Help To Crops

By MARY SCHULKEN
 Reflector Staff Writer

Showers and cooler temperatures moved into Pitt County Monday night and Tuesday morning, bringing much-needed relief from several 90 degree days and critically dry soil conditions.
 "The rain certainly was a nice thing for farmers," commented Sam Uzzell, Pitt County agricultural extension agent. "There is still a need for more, but this rainfall generally brought relief to growers. Cucumbers growers are especially pleased, because cukes are the type of crop that need more moisture." Uzzell explained that cucumbers are shallow-rooted, and cannot get as much moisture from the soil as more deep-rooted crops such as peanuts. "Some of the cucumbers are being harvested and the ones that weren't under irrigation were hurting," he added.
 The area received .69 inches of rain according to Greenville Utilities Water Plant. The high and low temperatures for the day ranged from 97 to 68 degrees Fahrenheit. The Tar River stood at 2.6 feet on the National Weather Service Gauge.

 Ornamentals such as dogwoods still need rain, according to Uzzell, especially those in direct sunlight. "Vegetable gardens should experience some growth due to the rain," the agent explained. "Some fertilizers that have been on the soil should be activated and we should see a great deal of growth. Hopefully, the rain will help our blossom end root problems with tomatoes," Uzzell added.

Pitt County Agricultural Extension Chairman Leroy James said the rain benefited corn more than any other crop. "Corn was suffering more than tobacco and beans at this point. Everything needed rain, but the corn was hurting the most," he commented. James agreed that the area still needs more showers. "About one inch per week until we start harvesting tobacco would do just fine," he emphasized.

No Millions In Live-In Charge

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Pinky Henderson said her wealthy live-in lover — an Avon cosmetics heir — promised to take care of her forever. But a judge, ruling "hyperbole is the language of lovers," awarded her less than 3 percent of what she demanded.

"Such language alone cannot be said to form the basis of any contractual obligation," said Broward County Circuit Judge Miette K. Burnstein. "What pallor the courts would cast on courtship if they were to hold otherwise."

The decision Monday awarded $167,000 to Rosemary "Pinky" Henderson, who had sued A. Douglas Henderson for nearly $6 million. Ms. Henderson, 40, had contended the 34-year-old cosmetics heir should be held to an alleged promise he made during their five-year romance to take care of her forever.

The judge ruled Ms. Henderson had not met the burden of proof to reap the financial rewards of a "life-pooling arrangement." Ms. Henderson, the former Rosemary Lepera, adopted Henderson's name after they began their relationship in 1971. According to court testimony, the couple presented themselves as husband and wife.

"Hyperbole is the language of lovers," the judge ruled. "Adults have learned to view such language as being simply momentarily expressive of intense and immediate emotion and desire."
 The judge's award included $58,947 for breach of an escrow agreement. Henderson had placed 1,000 shares of Avon stock in escrow for Ms. Henderson with the understanding it would go to her if their relationship ended and she was not to blame, the judge said.

Another $50,000 was awarded for Ms. Henderson's personal property disposed of after she filed suit in 1978, according to the ruling.

The remainder of the award, the judge said, represented half the net equity in Marabule Farms, a thoroughbred breeding farm the couple developed together.
 "It was implied that this was a joint effort and that the parties were to share the profits from this enterprise," she said.

"I'm thrilled that we won but disappointed in the amount," Ms. Henderson said in a telephone interview from San Mareno, Calif., where she lives with two children from a previous marriage. "I think it might be a first step for women when promises are broken."

ITS OWN SYSTEM
WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government has finally developed its own independent system to gather data about the nation's petroleum supply, ending years of depending on the oil industry for such information.

Henderson's attorney, Paul Antinori of Tampa, said his client was "elated" by the outcome. Henderson was not available for comment.
 The couple met in October 1971 when Ms. Henderson was working as a hostess at a restaurant Henderson owned. In June 1972, they and Ms. Henderson's children moved into a home in Parkland, a small community near Fort Lauderdale. She received an allowance of as much as $6,000 a month, according to testimony.
 A year and a half later, at Ms. Henderson's instigation, the couple went into thoroughbred horse breeding. By the time their relationship ended in August 1976, court documents indicate, Ms. Henderson was being paid $50,000 per year and 10 percent of the track winnings for her role in running the horse farm.
 The ruling came in the latest of a series of "palimony" suits that began last year when Michelle Triola Marvin was awarded $104,000 after her relationship with actor Lee Marvin ended.

Test Engine Of Shuttle

BAY ST. LOUIS, Miss. (AP) — All three engines required to power the space shuttle Columbia into orbit have passed their flight-readiness tests, officials at the National Space Technology Laboratories say.

The last of the space shuttle's three main engines successfully completed its second flight-acceptance test Monday at the NSTL complex near the Mississippi Gulf Coast.

The eight minute, 40-second test run exceeded the time required to put a shuttle into orbit, a spokesman said. All three shuttle engines will be sent to the Kennedy Space Center in Florida. The engines will then be mounted on the shuttle for its maiden flight into space.

During the firing Monday, the third engine underwent exercises to test its ability to change speed and direction after liftoff. The other two flight engines successfully completed their testing earlier this month.

The three engines had previously passed flight readiness test firings last year, but since several modifications were made to the engines, NASA felt it advisable to retest the engines.

While the Columbia's engines have completed their checks, testing of the shuttle engines and other propulsion equipment will continue through the summer at NSTL. NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center at Huntsville, Ala., is responsible for engine and propulsion system tests.

Con Man Given Prison Sentence

NEW YORK (AP) — A 63-year-old "flim-flam" artist, who twice impersonated psychiatrists and illegally sold prescription drugs, including barbiturates and tranquilizers, has been sentenced to 15 years in prison.

In meting out the harsh sentence, U.S. District Court Justice Kevin Thomas Duffy said Terry Ardrey's sale of dangerous prescription drugs could have resulted in death for the buyers.
 Ardrey was sentenced Friday but details were disclosed on Monday.

"You are such a great con man, Mr. Ardrey, that you even had some lawyers hire you to go and see if a defendant in jail had a viable psychiatric defense," said Duffy.

The judge was referring to a probation report that showed that Ardrey was such a convincing psychiatrist that lawyers defending a man facing a murder trial hired him to examine their jailed client.

Ardrey was arrested last summer, along with four legitimate staff psychiatrists and the owner of Unity Medical Center in a federal raid on the Bronx clinic.

He and the others had been charged with illegally selling prescriptions for barbiturates and tranquilizers to clinic patients.
 The judge said Ardrey had jumped his $25,000 bail to avoid facing trial on the charges. He was recaptured last May 8 while posing as a second psychiatrist. Both of the doctors he had impersonated had left the country to live abroad.

 After being recaptured, Ardrey pleaded guilty to drug charges, filing false statements, and bail jumping.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Peter M. Bloch said while Ardrey was posing as a psychiatrist in the Bronx clinic he wrote more than 2,000 prescriptions for $30 each over a 2 1/2-month period.
 Ardrey, a native of Charlotte, N.C., was first arrested in Boston in 1936 and has already spent about 20 years of his life in prison, said Bloch.

Subversion Charged 34

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A former woman senator and 33 other persons, mostly retired military officers and men, have been charged with subversion for allegedly plotting a violent overthrow of President Ferdinand E. Marcos' martial law regime, the defense ministry announced today.

The ministry said all but eight of the accused had been arrested.
 Aside from former senator Eva Estrada Kalaw, also named by the ministry among those involved in the alleged plot was Raul S. Manglapus, also a former senator now in self-exile in the United States, and Ernesto Rondon, former constitutional convention delegate and opposition radio commentator.

Kalaw and Rondon were among those still at large.
 The ministry's announcement was the first official confirmation of months' rumors that retired armed forces personnel, including three colonels, a major and two captains, had been arrested for allegedly planning a coup.

According to the alleged plan, the ministry went on, retired Col. Jose T. Reyes was to "recruit disgruntled, dismissed, demoted and retired military personnel to join the organization in carrying out the projected violent takeover, which was fixed at 7 p.m. of Dec. 31, 1979."

The ministry said the plan failed because the military got wind of it days before it supposedly was to be executed, and intelligence agents were sent to infiltrate the so-called "democratic forces of the Philippines."

Douglas Pitches Pitt County Past Post 163

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

The wind and rain ended the game but not before Pitt County pitcher Gordon Douglas washed away any thoughts Williamston had of winning. The Greenville Rose sophomore, employing a variety of pitches and deliveries, completely baffled Williamston, striking out four and walking none to lead Pitt County past Post 163, 7-1, Monday night in an American Legion game. The win — Pitt County's fourth in as many days — brought Post 39 to 7-2 overall and 7-2 in the league. Williamston is now 3-6 and 4-6 with the loss, a loss in a game called in the eighth because of bad weather. "That's the first time he's gone, what, eight innings and he looked pretty good," Coach Pat Smith said. "(Assistant) Coach (Billy) Williamston has been working with him pitching sidearm and he's been improving." Before the season began, pitching was a question mark for Smith. He seems to be getting the answers he wants — and needs if Pitt County is to challenge Rocky Mount, which so far has lost only once in league play. "We knew we had the numbers. We knew we wouldn't have to stay with any one pitcher too long. But all of them are young and we didn't know what to expect. "Our pitching's been adequate so far. The two games we lost we got only 10 hits and in those 14 of the 18 innings we didn't get a hit." Pitt County's hitters gave Douglas all the backing he needed Monday night, ripping out 12 hits while building a 7-0 lead before Williamston scored.

Douglas, after allowing one-out singles in the first two innings, retired 10 straight batters before Wiley Keel doubled in the fifth. It was the hardest hit all night off Douglas. From there, Douglas, now 2-0, set down six of the next seven batters before Williamston finally broke through to score in the eighth. "My curve was working all right tonight and my change up was doing pretty well," Douglas said. "Early in the game my curve ball was a little slow and (catcher) Curtis (Spencer) just talked to me and told me to put a little more speed on it. "Before the game I didn't feel I was throwing the ball real well, but once we started hitting the ball I felt real good. I relaxed." Why not? The umpire had barely finished saying "Play ball" and Pitt County was taking batting practice — or so it seemed — on the offerings of Williamston pitcher Cecil Downes, the first of three Williamston pitchers. Mark Shank walked to lead off the first, moved to second on Mike Campbell's sacrifice and to third on an infield out. He scored his first of three runs — a fourth run scored in the eighth was disallowed — on Will Barrett's single up the middle. After a quiet second, Pitt was banging away for more. Shank laid down a bunt single and Cambell followed with an infield single. Curtis Spencer ripped a sharp grounder down the third baseline to score both runners. Spencer later scored on a wild pitch and Pitt County led, 4-0. Pitt's final run — an eighth run came across in the eighth but did not count due to the rain — came in the sixth against pitcher Greg Hardison, who relieved Robbie Barber, who had come in for Downes in the fifth. Shank led off with a triple over the right fielder's head and was quickly brought home on Campbell's single. Williamston, its bats silent for most of the night, finally pushed across a run in the eighth. With two gone and Leslie Beacham on second after a fielder's choice and an error, Randy Ellis singled to bring home Williamston's only run of the game.

One Of Few Ordained For The Golden Moment

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

There are a few competitors — precious few — who seem to have been born under a special star. They were ordained for the golden moment. Jack Nicklaus. Reggie Jackson. Al Oerter.

They are blessed with that intangible quality that allows them to rise to greater heights when the pressure is the weightiest, the challenge the severest and the prize the most coveted.

Nicklaus wins his fourth U.S. Open golf title at age 40, boosting his collection of major crowns to 18 (twice as many as any golfer who ever lived) while historians are preparing his tournament obituary. Reggie, who has never hit 300 in his career, continues to blast ninth-inning home runs for the Yankees to pull baseball games out of the fire.

Meanwhile, Al Oerter, winner of gold medals in the discus in four consecutive Olympic Games — an unprecedented feat — but thwarted this year by the U.S. boycott of Moscow, is preparing to seek a fifth gold medal at Los Angeles in 1984.

He will be 47 then. Should he succeed — and don't be quick to doubt the possibility — it would be one of the sports miracles of the age.

To Oerter, as with Nicklaus, Reggie and sport's "Golden Few," the difficult can be done immediately, as the saying goes, but the impossible takes a little longer.

"Competition is very interesting," says Oerter. "Every time you go into the arena with thousands watching, you put yourself on the line. It affects people different ways. I've seen big, strong athletes undergo radical personality changes. They become like a child. They tense up. They fill themselves with self-doubts. They start worrying about letting down their country, friends and themselves. They wonder what the people back home are thinking.

"Me? I don't particularly enjoy the years of discipline and preparation but, once the event starts, I am fascinated by it. I put myself in a sort of isolation booth, shutting out everything around me. Then I try to muster every ounce of strength, knowledge and skill at my command to produce that one mighty effort.

"I thrive on it."

The "Al Oerter Story" is one of the most fascinating in big time sports — the raw, 20-year-old collegian who barely made the U.S. Olympic team in 1956 yet went on to beat world record holder Fortune Gordien in the discus at Melbourne.

Always the underdog, he competed against men with superior records at Rome in 1960, Tokyo in 1964 and Mexico City in 1968, each time winding up on the top tier of the awards ceremony with a beribboned gold medal draped around his neck.

"I don't know why, but something special always happens to me in the Olympics," he says modestly.

"He's all heart and guts," said Walter Payton, the U. S. Olympic coach, after Oerter heaved the discus 212 feet, 6 1/2 inches — five feet farther than he had ever thrown in his life — to beat out world record holder Jay Silvester in Mexico City in 1968.

His "Iron Man" exploits have made him an Olympic immortal, to be spoken of in the same breath with Paavo Nurmi, Emil Zatopek and the late Jesse Owens. He is being profiled by Cappy Productions Sunday June 29 over the NBC network.

A communications engineer living in West Islip, N.Y., father of two grown daughters, he went into temporary retirement after the Mexico City Games, skipping both Munich and Montreal, but had his interest revived in 1972.

"I hadn't picked up a discus in eight years," he said. "The wood was flaking and I had to order new ones."

Six feet, four inches tall and 278 pounds, Oerter felt he was ready for the 1980 Games but then came the boycott. He was disappointed — as were most U. S. Olympians — but not bitter.

Recently in Wichita, Kans., he threw the discus 227 feet, 11 inches, third farthest ever. He goes in the meaningless Olympic Trials this weekend in Eugene, Ore. But it takes the flair and fervor of the real Olympics to bring out the best in him.

"The Olympics — there's nothing like them," he says. "They get in your blood. Every time you see the American flag go up, it makes your hair stand on end."

Ellenberger Trial Continues

ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) — Robert Weaver, dean of admissions and records at the University of New Mexico, was to return to the witness stand today to be cross-examined in the federal court trial of former UNM basketball Coach Norm Ellenberger.

Ellenberger's trial on five counts of mail fraud, one count of wire fraud and one count of interstate travel in aid of racketeering began here Monday.

The indictments are related to a scandal involving phony academic transcripts for Lobo athletes and center on the handling of transcripts for two former UNM basketball players — Andre Logan and Craig Gilbert.

Weaver was one of two witnesses who testified Monday after a six-man, six-woman jury had been seated and attorneys gave their opening statements.

Weaver and Donald A. Beach, registrar at Mercer County Community College in Trenton, N.J., testified about alleged transcript doctored to make Logan eligible.

Weaver said that Logan was admitted to NM by the College of Arts and Sciences on academic probation on the basis of a junior college transcript allegedly from Mercer that showed Logan with 51 credit hours.

Beach testified prior to Weaver. Under questioning by assistant U.S. Attorney Rick Smith, Beach told the jury that records at Mercer showed that when Logan transferred to New Mexico in the fall of 1978, he had earned 48 credit hours.

However, Beach said that in late December 1979 he received a letter from Weaver and a copy of the Mercer transcript on file at UNM that showed Logan credited with 51 hours of college work.

Beach also testified about attempts made by former UNM assistant basketball coach Manny Goldstein to have seven professors at Mercer change grades they had given Logan.

He said Goldstein was "able to convince all seven to change to improve the grades."

But Beach said that seemed like "an unusually large number" to him and he refused to process the grade changes. He said he turned the matter over to another Mercer official and an investigation was conducted.

It was determined that two of the grade changes were legitimate and five were not, he said.

Beach also said he was disturbed about Goldstein's conduct at Mercer and complained to UNM officials about it in a letter.

He said UNM officials, including Ellenberger, wrote to him and advised him that Goldstein was being reprimanded and a similar incident would not occur again.

In his opening statement, defense attorney Leon Taylor said that evidence would show that determining eligibility was not Ellenberger's responsibility. He said Goldstein was responsible for coordinating recruiting efforts and assuring that recruits were eligible.

U.S. Attorney R.E. Thompson had referred to the alleged doctored transcript as a scheme put together at Ellenberger's instruction.

Tate In Shadow Of Ray Again

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

"I don't want to lose because I've been there before," said John Tate several days before his first heavyweight championship defense.

But he did lose the World Boxing Association title to Mike Weaver last March 30, and now he is somewhere he's been before — in Montreal.

Tate fought in Montreal four years ago in the Olympic Games, and he had a chance at lasting fame when he fought double gold medalist Teofilo Stevenson of Cuba.

But Tate was knocked out in the first round and was cast in the shadows of such U.S. teammates as Sugar Ray Leonard, Howard Davis and the Brothers Spinks.

Friday night in Olympic Stadium, Tate will again fight in the shadow of Leonard, who will defend the World Boxing Council welterweight chamption against Roberto Duran in what is one of the most anticipated matches in years.

Tate, just a little less than three months ago a heavyweight champion with multi-million-dollar fight with Muhammad Ali in the making, will fight Trevor Berbick in a scheduled 10-rounder.

Berbick is the heavyweight champion of Canada and has shown a knockout punch against other Canadians. But once in discussing the abilities of other Canadian heavyweights, George Chuvalo, who fought Ali, Joe Frazier and other top fighters, said something to the effect that he could be Canadian heavyweight champion after he died.

Tate should win. He must win. At his age, 25, and with his ability, another heavyweight title shot is not far away. A couple of wins would wipe out his loss to Weaver when he went into the last round needing only to stay on his feet to keep the title. He was counted out with 45 seconds left in the fight.

The Berbick fight will show how much the loss to Weaver affected Tate's confidence. It is a pressure fight for Big John.

Tate, whose record is 20-1, reacted well under extreme out-of-ring pressure when he beat South African Kallie Knoetze in Bophuthatswana and when he won the vacant title by beating South African Gerrie Coetzee in Pretoria before 80,000-plus, mostly white South Africans.

But there are some people who think the pressure of making his first defense in his hometown of Knoxville, Tenn.,

Mahre: Leadership Change Hurt Ski Team

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. Olympic ski team was demoralized, disorganized and suffering the results of a change in leadership before the 1980 Winter Games at Lake Placid, N.Y., says its star, silver medalist Phil Mahre.

As early as last January, when the men's team was in Kitzbuehel, Austria, for the famed Hahnenkamm downhill, the problems came to the surface.

"Things didn't go at all smoothly last year," the 23-year-old Mahre said. "A lot of stuff went down that had no right to happen."

Bill Marolt, who had replaced Hank Tauber as the U.S. Ski Team Alpine director in the spring of 1979, called a team meeting after the Hahnenkamm.

"I think Petie Patterson was 10th, and everyone else was quite a ways out," Mahre said. "Marolt came out and said he was displeased, that nobody had tried. What he doesn't understand is that at Kitzbuehel, you put your life on the line everytime you run the downhill. If you don't try, you don't get down the mountain.

"It was that kind of thing, and there were a lot of organizational problems," Mahre said. "It was a real rat race."

Mahre also said Doug Powell, a 22-year-old skier from Stowe, Vt., and Dave Stapleton, 20, of Aspen, Colo., had wanted to change equipment at about the same time.

After clearing it through the manufacturers in the team's equipment pool, Powell had tried a different brand of boot, and he had skied better on them at Kitzbuehel.

After the race, Marolt and Jim "Moose" Barrows, the downhill coach, told Powell he had to continue on his previous boots. Stapleton also was told he could not change, Mahre said.

"They tried to force it on you to perform, yet they weren't giving you the chance to use the equipment you perform best on," said Mahre, who finished second to Sweden's Ingemar Stenmark in the Olympic slalom. "It was a total mess. I don't know why that was happening."

Mahre has not been alone in his criticism of Marolt. Last winter, two coaches, who asked not to be named, said at Mont Ste. Anne in Quebec they were quitting the team because of the new Alpine director.

Marolt came to the U.S. Ski Team from the University of Colorado, where he led the Buffaloes to seven consecutive NCAA team titles. He was a racer in the mid-60s when the ski team was under the directorship of Bob Beattie, now a commentator for ABC, and he won three national titles.

Mahre said he met with Marolt and with Warren Hellman, executive committee president of the U.S. Ski Education Foundation, about these problems.

"Marolt is still back in the Beattie days and the Colorado days," Mahre said. "There's no comparison between college and World Cup racing. He's kind of like a dictator. He pushes you to do this and that. It's demoralizing, and the young kids nowadays won't take that. Young kids see this, and they say, 'This is a free country, this is a democracy, and this is baloney.'

"They'll go pro, and we won't have anybody," Mahre said.

"I'm afraid to say this, but when I'm gone, and when Steve (Phil's twin brother) is gone, there's going to be absolutely nobody left. Maybe Petie Patterson, but he's limited to downhill because of injuries."

Mahre said there were problems with team selection for the Olympics, and the problems continued through the rest of the season.

"Olympic team selection was messed up," Mahre said, "only we didn't know about it until afterward...the women's team coaches had no say about who was on the team. Marolt just said who was racing."

"The coaches have been with the girls all season, they've watched them ski, and here's the team director, who sits behind a desk half of the season, making the team selection. That's just garbage."

After the Olympics, the World Cup circuit moved to Waterville Valley, N.H., Mont Ste. Anne and finally to Lake Louise in Alberta for a men's downhill.

"When we went to the downhill, everything was supposed to have been brought there for us, all the bags and stuff," Mahre said. "When we got there, there was nothing. There weren't even enough people there to time us in training, let alone get the equipment ready."

"It's ridiculous. There was no organization whatsoever. The racers weren't thinking about racing, they had so many other things on their minds," Mahre said in a telephone interview from his home in Yakima, Wash.

Phil has spent the early summer resting, building a dune buggy with his brother and digging out from under the volcanic ash of Mount St. Helens. He has made no announcement about his skiing future, but there's a better than even chance he'll be back.

"We talked to Marolt during the spring series, not only about last season but about the coaching situation this season," Mahre said. "He wanted all American coaches, and I said, 'Billy, we're not capable of doing this.'"

Mahre said he saw Marolt about a half a month later in Lake Tahoe, where Dr. Richard Steadman was removing some screws from a patched-up ankle. Hellman also was there to get an Achilles tendon repaired and to talk to Marolt.

"Marolt brings up the all American coaches again," Mahre said. "What we said earlier was all forgotten, not even heard, so I really laid into him. A lot of things were said, in the open, and I think it's going to help. He's just stubborn, and he has his own way of doing things."

A Tale Of Two Comebacks

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

This is about two comebacks. The one by Wayne Garland of the Cleveland Indians is in its second year. The one by the Texas Rangers took only a couple of outs.

Garland, who underwent rotator cuff surgery on his right shoulder in May 1978, pitched his first complete game in more than a year Monday night, scattering nine hits as the Cleveland Indians made it five victories in a row by defeating the Chicago White Sox 5-3.

"There's no doubt things are looking up. They're looking better than they did in the past," said Garland.

The Rangers, like Garland and the Indians, trailed 3-0 at one point. But they rallied for six runs in the ninth inning on eight singles and cooled off the Kansas City Royals 6-3.

"That was nice, real nice," said Bump Wills, who singled and scored in the rally. "It was just one of those nights that was bound to happen. We were due."

Meanwhile, the Detroit Tigers pulled a mini-comeback with two runs in the bottom of the ninth inning to nip Milwaukee 6-5 in the opener of a doubleheader. The Brewers took the nightcap 5-3.

Garland said he used a fast ball, curve, slider, screwball and knuckleball in pitching his first complete game since June 13, 1979. He said he didn't feel comfortable over the first few innings but a conference with catcher Bo Diaz cleared up the problem.

"We talked during the bottom of the third inning," Garland said. "After that inning I went out a little more relaxed and I started mixing my fast ball in more. My off-speed pitches were setting up my fast ball."

The adjustment worked and Garland retired 15 batters in a row before Thad Bosley singled in the ninth.

"When I gave up the three runs (in the third) I was rushing myself," he said. "I was trying to muscle some pitches and wasn't relaxed. The screwball is still my main pitch. When I'm in trouble I still use it. I've added a curve and knuckleball. The curve I threw against Kansas City last Tuesday was the first I've thrown since 1974."

Cliff Johnson's infield hit with the bases loaded tied the score in the seventh inning and Rick Manning followed with a two-run single.

Rangers 6, Royals 3

The Rangers, held scoreless on four hits through eight innings, launched their ninth-inning rally on a leadoff single by Pat Putnam. One out later, Wills singled and, with two out, Richie Zisk singled Putnam home with the first run.

Rusty Staub's RBI single chased loser Dan Quisenberry. Jim Norris and Sundberg tagged Gary Christenson for run-scoring hits and Tucker Ashford and Putnam connected off Rawly Eastwick.

Tigers 6-3, Brewers 5-5

Al Cowens' RBI single with two out in the ninth inning capped a two-run rally as Detroit won the opener. Cecil Cooper hit a two-run homer and Gorman Thomas had a solo shot for the Brewers in the nightcap.

Detroit trailed 5-4 in the opener but tied the score when Champ Summers doubled home Kirk Gibson, who led off the ninth with a bunt single and was sacrificed to second. Cowens then singled home the winning run.

Yankees 6, Mariners 3

Graig Nettles drove in three runs with two doubles and a home run and Tommy John scattered 10 hits in eight innings to become the AL's first nine-game winner. Nettles rapped RBI doubles in the first and fifth innings and homered in the seventh. Jim Spencer drove in two runs with a single in the first and a sacrifice fly in the fifth.

A's 11, Red Sox 8

Oakland used a 16-hit attack to end Boston's six-game winning streak despite two home runs by Jim Rice and a three-run shot by Fred Lynn in the ninth.

The A's scored three runs in the first inning, starting with consecutive triples by Rickey Henderson and Dwayne Murphy, who scored on a wild pitch. Dave Revering and Wayne Gross walked and Revering scored on a single by Mitchell Page. The A's made it 5-0 in the fourth on singles by Murphy, Revering, Gross and Tony Armas. Mickey Klutts doubled a run across and Revering added a two-run single in the fifth while Klutts rapped another RBI double in the eighth.

Orioles 5, Angels 2

Terry Crowley's two-run single capped a three-run Baltimore first inning. Kiko Garcia singled two runs across in the eighth and Jim Palmer and Tim Stoddard combined for a six-hitter as Baltimore defeated California for the seventh consecutive time in a regular-season game. The Orioles are 10-1 against the Angels counting last year's playoffs.

"They basically have solid pitching and we're basically a hitting club. Good pitching shuts down good hitting," said Angels Manager Jim Fregosi.

Twins 4, Blue Jays 0

Geoff Zahn scattered nine hits and pitched his third shutout of the season in ending Minnesota's four-game losing streak. The Twins scored in the second inning on Pete Mackanin's single. Glenn Adams doubled a run home in the third and Minnesota scored its final two runs in the seventh on singles by John Castino and Butch Wynegar, a double steal and Rick Sofield's RBI double.

Players Of Week

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Easler of the Pittsburgh Pirates was named National League Player of the Week and Toby Harrah of the Cleveland Indians and Reggie Jackson of the New York Yankees shared the American League honor.

Easler batted .619 with 13 hits in 21 at bats for the week and hit for the cycle on June 12.

Harrah hit .524 with 11 hits in 21 times at bat, including four doubles, a triple and a home run. Jackson batted .419 on 13-for-31 with three doubles, five home runs, and 13 RBIs.

Olympians Beat Pros

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Members of the U.S. Olympic basketball team would rather be playing the Soviet Union or Yugoslavia, but they agree it's more profitable to be going against National Basketball Association All-Stars.

"It is out of my control whether we go to Moscow or not," said Coach Dave Gavitt after his young, college-oriented Olympians beat the NBA stars 97-84 Monday night before 2,611 fans at the Forum. The game was the first of five exhibitions being staged in various sites around the nation.

"We are proud to wear 'USA' on our shirts," Gavitt said. "This is a nice chance to prove we are a good team."

The United States is boycotting the Olympics in Moscow, protesting Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan. There will be no chance to defend the gold medal won in 1976 by the American basketball team at Montreal.

Danny Vranes, who will be a senior at Utah next fall, said:

"Our dream is to be in the pros. The feeling is different than the Olympic goal. The spirit of the Olympics can't compare to playing with these NBA guys. It means more to us. Our goal is to show we can play in the NBA."

Mark Aguirre of DePaul, whose 15 points for the Olympians were second only to the 18 by LaSalle's Michael Brooks, said: "I like this type of basketball, but I would love to play the Russians anyplace, anywhere, anytime...in a playground, in Red Square. I'd even let them call the shots!"

The Olympians built a 46-36 halftime lead, increased it to a 15-point margin and were tied at 65-65 and 67-67 before pulling out to win.

San Antonio's George Gervin led the pros with 16 points. Kermit Washington of Portland scored 15 and John Lucas of Golden State 14.

Phil Smith, also of Golden State, said of the Olympians, "They're talented, enthusiastic and a team to be reckoned with. But you know some of us were playing out of position."

Next outing will be Wednesday in Phoenix against a different group of All-Stars.

On Friday the game will be in Seattle.

Burrough Anxious To Unveil New '80 Airshow

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — When the Houston Oilers traded quarterback Dan Pastorini to Oakland for Ken Stabler last winter, Houston wide receiver Ken Burrough reacted in disbelief.

"I was shocked. It was like a divorce. He and I had fed each other for 10 years," said Burrough, who teamed up with Pastorini to break most of Houston's aerial records.

Now that the shock has worn off, Burrough can't wait to unveil the Oilers' newly formed airshow of the 1980s.

In Burrough's mind, the deal was more than a player-for-player swap.

"Having Stabler means we've got a coach and a player on the field. He knows how to beat Pittsburgh and he's the best player in the National Football League under pressure," said Burrough, in Las Vegas this week for a celebrity tennis tournament.

Before reporting for his 11th NFL season, Burrough — the blazing deep threat in Houston's devastating offense — has a get-acquainted visit planned with Stabler.

"I'm taking a week off and flying down to Alabama to get together with Kenny. It's sort of like starting a new marriage," said Burrough, a two-time All-Pro who needs 33 catches to tie Charley Hennigan as the Oilers' all-time pass catcher.

With 6,344 reception yards, he is less than 500 yards and nine touchdowns shy of two other club records held by Hennigan.

Houston, for the second year in a row, advanced to the American Conference championship, losing both years to the eventual Super Bowl champion Steelers.

"Last year we got 15 minutes closer. The first year they beat us real good. Last year, we came within one quarter of them," said Burrough, who turns 32 in July. He's convinced the talent gap has closed considerably between the two rivals.

"We think we can match them man-for-man at every position," said Burrough. "We've finally got the depth. The key is if we can stay together without injury."

But, he said, "we can't look straight ahead to Pittsburgh, not with a division like we have. Cleveland has superb coaching and (Heisman Trophy winner) Charles White will help them immediately. And Cincinnati's been getting the best draft picks for the last five years. They're ready to break loose."

Falcons Ink NC's Curry

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Falcons announced Monday that they have signed a contract with their No. 2 draft pick — 6-foot-3, 220-pound linebacker Buddy Curry of North Carolina.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

The National Football League club has now signed all but two of its 1980 draft choices — No. 1 pick Junior Miller, a tight end from Nebraska, and fifth-round selection Brad Vassar, a linebacker from Pacific.

Blyleven Ignores Boos, Hurls Pirates Past Reds

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

They booed Bert Blyleven in Pittsburgh Monday night.

But if it hurt anyone, it might have been the Cincinnati Reds.

Seemingly oblivious to a generally negative hometown crowd, the beleaguered Pirate right-hander pitched one of his strongest games of the season to help Pittsburgh beat the Reds 5-3.

"If the boing was an indication of the kind of game Bert pitched, I hope they boo him every night he's out there," said Pirate catcher Ed Ott.

Pitching through jeers and occasional cheers, Blyleven scattered nine hits before needing relief help with one out in the eighth.

The dramatic reaction, of course, was pointed at Blyleven's row with Manager Chuck Tanner which led to the pitcher leaving the club on April 28. Blyleven was upset because he felt that Tanner didn't show any faith in him.

The pitcher rejoined the Pirates on May 9.

"Bert picked up and left the ballclub, and I think that's going to stick a little longer with the fans," said Ott. "But I think he's handling it very well right now. He's not letting it bother him."

In other National League action, the Philadelphia Phillies edged the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2 in 12 innings; the San Francisco Giants stopped the Montreal Expos 5-1; the Atlanta Braves took a 6-3 decision over the St. Louis Cardinals; the San Diego Padres nipped the New York Mets 3-2 and the Houston Astros defeated the Chicago Cubs 2-1.

Tim Lincecum drove in three runs in support of Blyleven's pitching. His sacrifice fly capped a three-run rally in the second inning and then his two-run double in the fourth delivered the Pirates' eventual winning runs.

Blyleven left the game after giving up three straight singles in the eighth, including an RBI hit by Dan Driessen. Kent Tekulve allowed another RBI single, by Johnny Bench, before Grant Jackson came on to gain his second save.

Phillies 3, Dodgers 2
Manny Trillo doubled home Larry Bowa from second base with one out in the 12th inning to break a tie and send Philadelphia past Los Angeles. After Bowa's single, he was awarded second base on a balk by loser Rick Sutcliffe, 14. Trillo followed with his two-base hit to right center.

Reliever Ron Reed, 4-1, earned the victory, pitching only the 11th inning. Tug McGraw pitched the 12th to pick up his sixth save of the season.

The Dodgers scored twice in the third inning as Reggie Smith hit an RBI single and then came home on Steve Garvey's double. Philadelphia tied the score an inning later when Pete Rose scored on a balk by Jerry Reuss and Greg Luzinski hit a sacrifice fly.

Giants 5, Expos 1
Right-hander Ed Whitson pitched a six-hitter to lead San Francisco over injury-riddled Montreal. The Expos played without four injured regulars. Whitson yielded a leadoff homer to Gary Carter, his 13th of the season, in the second inning before blanking the Expos the rest of the way.

The Giants tied the game in the bottom of the second off rookie Charlie Lea on Johnnie LeMaster's RBI grounder. The Giants went ahead to stay with two runs in the third. Larry Herndon doubled and eventually scored on an error and Milt May later singled home another run.

Braves 6, Cardinals 2
Chris Chambliss drove in five runs with a three-run homer and two singles and Dale Murphy scored three times, leading Atlanta over St. Louis.

Both of Chambliss' singles and his seventh homer of the year came off Bob Forsch, 5-5. In addition, Chambliss contributed a double to a 11-hit attack, enabling Atlanta right-hander Tommy Boggs to gain his third victory in five decisions.

"He's one of the best," Manager Bobby Cox said of Chambliss. "He's hit at least three balls hard every night. With any kind of breaks, he'd be hitting .350."

Chambliss is currently hitting .309.

Padres 3, Mets 2
Ozzie Smith smashed three hits and singled in the winning run in the eighth inning as San Diego ended a seven-game losing streak by beating New York.

Pinch-hitter Tim Flannery started the game-winning rally off reliever Jeff Reardon, 4-3, with a single. Jim Richards then sacrificed pinch-runner Paul Dade to second to set the stage for Smith's game-winning hit.

Rollie Fingers, 6-6, worked two innings in relief to pick up the victory, and Bob Shirley pitched the final inning to earn his fifth save of the season.

Astros 2, Cubs 1
Terry Puhl drew a bases-loaded walk to force in one run in the seventh inning and pinch-runner Jeff Leonard scored on a wild pitch to lead Houston over Chicago.

Willie Hernandez had retired 13 batters in a row and had two out in the seventh when Alab Ashby singled and pinch-hitter Bruce Bochy walked. Bill Caudill relieved and walked both pinch-hitter Rafael Landestoy and Puhl to force in the tying run before reliever Doug Capilla uncorked the wild pitch that allowed Leonard to score from third.

Overton Keeps Water Ski Title

CYRUS GARDENS, Fla. — Kristi Overton successfully retained her Junior All-American Water Ski title by placing first in trick skiing and second in another event this weekend.

Overton, 10 years old, won the trick jumping with a score of 2,920 points and also finished second in jumping and third in slalom skiing.

Tate In Shadows...

was too much for Tate. They feel he tried too hard to knock out Weaver to please the hometown fans, and that is why he was exhausted in the later rounds.

"The crowd had nothing to do with the fight," says Tate. "What I had to do was live by my reputation as a boxer and go out there and fight and do what my people told me to do. I don't think the crowd had anything to do with the fight."

But there is a phrase in Tate's statement that points out what his major problem as a fighter might be — "do what my people told me to do."

A fighter must listen to his trainer and manager... to a point. He must also adapt to situations in the ring. Tate seems to follow his corner's plans even when they're not working.

As Tate tired in the late rounds against Weaver, he was instructed to stay away.

Manager Ace Miller, who said Tate's training had been hampered by a sinus infection, says he changed the fighter's strategy because he believed Weaver was butting Tate who was cut over the right eye.

"I pulled John back and moved him from side to side and things like that," says Miller. "Every time we got Weaver in trouble, the blood started getting bad in the eye."

But the 232-pound Tate was too slow and to tired to stay away from Weaver. All he did was given Weaver punching room, especially for his big left hook.

This is hindsight, but it seems Tate should have crowded Weaver, mauled him, leaned on him, used his weight to advantage. Te point is Tate would have tried to do that if he had been told to.

Winterville 10, Greene Co. 2

WINTREVILLE — Winterville gained a 10-2 victory over Greene County in the Senior Babe Ruth League last night. The win boosted the Winterville record to 2-3, while Greene County is now 1-1.

Pony Credle led the Winterville hitting with a double and a home run. Micah Dixon, Dixon Page, Joel Brown and Greg Tolar also each added two hits. David Shirley had two hits to pace Greene County.

Mike Edens tossed the victory, striking out 11 and allowing five hits.

Little League

Coca-Cola 8, Optimists 6

Coca-Cola stayed in the race for the North State Little League title with an 8-6 victory over the Optimists yesterday. Coke is now 9-4 on the year while the Optimists tumble to 1-12.

The Optimists scored first, however, pushing over two runs in the first inning on a Steve Jaboni home run. They added another in the second for a 3-0 lead. Coke came back with two in the third, while the Optimists added a fourth run.

In the fourth, however, Coke scored five times to push ahead for good, taking a 7-4 lead. George Saad walked and moved up on a wild pitch. Jay Surles walked and Mark Coburn reached on a two-base error, scoring Saad. A passed ball let Surles score and Michael Sasser singled in Coburn. Sasser scored on a triple by James Matthew, who scored what proved to be the winning run on a passed ball.

Coke added another run in the sixth, while the Optimists got two more in the bottom of the fourth.

Matthew led the Coke hitting with two, while no one had more than one for the Optimists, which got only two hits off Matthew.

Exchange 7, Wellcome 6

The Exchange gained a 7-6 victory over Wellcome in the Tar Heel Little League yesterday. The Exchange is now 7-6 on the year, while Wellcome is 7-6, also. The result also allowed First Federal to wrap up the league championship with its 10-2 record, now untappable.

Wellcome scored first, getting a pair in the top of the first. They added two more in the second as Lark Wetherington banged a two-run homer. Exchange got its act going with three in the second, then added two more in the fourth for a 5-4 lead.

But it was two in the fifth that won it for the Exchange. Doug Bray reached on an error and Mike Hathaway cracked a home run to up the lead to 7-4.

Wellcome rallied with two in the sixth, including a solo homer by Terry Warren, but fell a run short.

Wetherington and Vicki Parrott led the Wellcome hitting with three each, while Warren had two. Exchange was led by Josh Hickman with two.

Chicod 6, Rogers 1

GRIFTON — Chicod defeated Rogers, 6-1, Monday in a Southern Pitt Little League game.

Steve Mills got the win while also getting two hits for Chicod. Jerome Carter led the winners at the plate with three hits in four at bats. Allen Haddock also had two hits for Chicod.

Suggs and Adams had two hits for Rogers.

Babe Ruth League

Wachovia Bank 4, Aaction Movers 1

Wachovia Bank handed Aaction Movers its third loss of the season last night in Babe Ruth League play, a 4-1 decision. The loss knocked Aaction out of a chance to tie Planters Bank for first place in the league. Aaction is now 8-3 while Wachovia climbs to 7-5.

Wachovia got all four of its runs in the first inning. Bill Johnson reached on a two-out error and stole second. He scored on Troy Hudson's triple. Mike Kinley walked and stole second. Both of them then scored when Jody Forbes tripled. Forbes came in with the fourth run when Barry Nichols reached on an error.

The lone Aaction run came in the fourth.

Hudson and Marvin Barrett each had two hits for Wachovia, while Jeff Wilson and Rudy Stalls each had two for Aaction.

Pepsi-Cola 6, Home Builders 4

Pepsi-Cola took a 6-4 victory over Home Builders in Babe Ruth League action last night. Pepsi is now 5-6 in the league, while the Builders are 1-10.

The Builders picked up their first run in the first, taking an early lead. Pepsi came back with two in the second to move ahead, then added three in the fourth to wrap it up.

With one down in the fourth, Scott Stallings walked and David Priestly doubled him in. Tim Norris doubled, scoring Priestly, and Norris took third on an out after Ted Stanley walked. Cyrus Blackwell reached on an infield hit, scoring Norris.

Pepsi addone more in the fifth, while the Builders rallied for three in the sixth, but never caught up again.

No one on either team had more than one hit.

Pair Win Putt-Putt

Mike Brown and Robert Beacham came from fourth place to win the Monday Night Bestball Tournament with a 54-hole total of 26-under-par 82 at the Greenville Putt-Putt course last night.

Brown and Beacham sank 13 aces in the second round for a 23 to take the lead from Don Edmonson and John Cadwell, who had combined for a 25 in the first round. The 23 moved Brown and Beacham from four strokes behind to four strokes ahead.

Carl White and Snody Carrow finished with an 84 for second place. Clay Deanhardt and LaVern Mayo took third after a sudden-death playoff against Johnny Carrow and Henry Beacham. Both teams tied at 85 to force the playoff.

Travolta Rides Crest Of Wave

TIME TO STOP—Singer and actress Lena Horne belts out a song during Monday afternoon rehearsal for her gala farewell performance in Los Angeles. Miss Horne, 63, is retiring from the nightclub circuit to spend more time among the beautiful flame trees at her Santa Barbara, Calif. Ranch. (AP Laserphoto)

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Sometimes you can determine the growth rate of an actor's hat size by the size of his entourage.

Young John Travolta's retinue is large and well employed.

In his new movie, "Urban Cowboy," Travolta takes full advantage of the perquisites of movie stardom, most important of which is his name above the title in letters equally large as the title of the movie itself.

Stardom gives him the freedom to put his friends, employees and family in positions in his films, including their names listed in the credits.

For instance, "Urban Cowboy," which should be one of the giant hits of 1980, includes in the credits the names of makeup and hair stylists. Par for the course. But it also credits:

"Mr. Travolta's make-up ... Wes Dawn.

"Hair Dresser to Mr. Travolta ... Silvia Abascal."

The credits further list:

"Personal Assistant to John Travolta ... Joan Edwards.

"Executive Assistants to John Travolta ... Jerry Wurms and Kate Edwards." One is not quite sure of the duties of a personal assistant or two executive assistants to an actor engaged in making a film. Secretaries? Gofers? What?

A unit publicist is given credit in "Urban Cowboy," which is a common enough practice. But credited for this film, too, is:

"Special publicist ... Michele Cohen."

Ms. Cohen happens to be Travolta's private press agent as well.

There is another credit, "Production Consultant," followed by the names of Bob LeMond and Lois Zetter, who, coincidentally, are Travolta's personal managers.

A girl named Anne Travolta is seen in the credits as a member of the "Wedding Party." The name Travolta is sufficiently uncommon to lead one to suspect Anne may be related to the star of the picture. A sister perhaps?

Would Clint Eastwood list a hairdresser in the credits for his tousled mane? How about Burt Reynolds crediting his make-up man? Paul Newman? Dustin Hoffman?

Certainly, Travolta isn't the first star to put friends, relatives, and business associates on the payroll.

It's a Hollywood tradition and not just with stars. Movie and television producers, directors and others in the business are dedicated to nepotism on the grand scale.

John Wayne, for example, did what he could for his family and cronies, many of whom worked in almost all his pictures. But such beneficences were not generally listed in the credits.

Early this month Travolta abandoned his customary seclusion long enough to imprint his "Urban Cowboy" bootmarks in wet cement beside the feet and hand prints of Wayne in the forecourt of the Chinese Theater on Hollywood Boulevard.

Wayne was an extrovert and open-handed. Travolta appears insecure with superstardom which might account for his inordinate reclusiveness.

It was only three years ago that he was one of the grungy sweatshops of the defunct "Welcome Back, Kotter" series. He might have followed the other members of that scuzzy menage into relative obscurity once the series folded.

"Kotter's" popularity evidently rested with the sad-eyed macho figure of Vinnie Barbarino, Travolta's role in the series.

Travolta had something special about him. He became a sort of teenybopper sex symbol. He projected a youthful Italian Stallion style popularized by Sylvester Stallone in his "Rocky" films.

He capitalized on his growing following of fans, mostly teen-age girls, by cutting a hit single, "Let Her In," and his first album, "John Travolta."

His first movie performance in "Carrie," with Sissy Spacek and Piper Laurie, went almost unnoticed except by his fans.

Young Travolta went on to prove his acting skills in his only TV movie, "The Boy in the Plastic Bubble."

Then producer Alan Carr signed the promising newcomer to play a street-smart punk who lived to dance in "Saturday Night Fever" and Travolta vaulted immediately to international superstardom.

He followed his triumph in "Saturday Night Fever" with "Grease" — purportedly the most successful box-office movie musical ever made — once again playing an egomaniacal young high school buck fighting off the ladies.

For the second time Travolta sparked with diamond-in-the-rough charm. Then disaster. He co-starred with Lily Tomlin in "Moment by Moment," miscast as Lily's underage lover. The picture was panned by the critics and failed at the box office. Some thought Lily and John looked like brother and sister.

From the beginning, Travolta had been shy and reclusive when it came to public appearances and the media.

The death of Diana Hyland, 18 years older than Travolta and the principal woman in his life, drove him into greater seclusion. He now lives on a ranch near Santa Barbara and rarely makes public appearances.

With or without his retinue, which wraps Travolta in a protective cocoon, the young star shines in "Urban Cowboy." He's made a full recovery from the disastrous "Moment by Moment." He's going to be around a while.

New Producer

NEW YORK (AP) — Jean Doumanian will be the producer of "Saturday Night Live" when NBC's late night comedy-variety show starts its sixth season with a new troupe in October, the network says.

Ms. Doumanian, who has been associate producer in charge of booking hosts and talent acts since the show's premiere, succeeds Lorne Michaels.

Michaels' departure from the show — along with regulars Bill Murray, Jane Curtin, Laraine Newman and Gilda Radner — was announced last week by NBC. A new repertory company will be formed.

Rubenstein OK

NEW YORK (AP) — Pianist Artur Rubenstein is recuperating from urological surgery, his secretary has disclosed.

The 93-year-old Rubenstein was "doing very well" after the surgery three weeks ago at New York University Hospital, said Annabelle Whitestone on Monday. She said he was able to be "up and about" each day in his Waldorf-Astoria Hotel room.

Aver James Brown Owes Big Tax Bill

AIKEN, S.C. (AP) — Soul singer James Brown has a problem on his hands that he probably never expected to encounter when he was shining shoes in Augusta, Ga.

The Internal Revenue Service says Brown owes it $2.3 million in back taxes, and has filed liens for that amount in Aiken County against 20 acres Brown and his wife own.

Brown who now lives on a large estate in Augusta, could not be reached for comment.

The singer, in his mid-40s, is considered to be one of the top soul artists.

His most recent appearances in South Carolina were last year, when he entertained inmates at Kirkland Correctional Institute in Columbia and at a benefit concert for Friendship College, a predominantly black Baptist college in Rock Hill.

The IRS documents on file with the Aiken register of mesne conveyance, or register of deeds, include a lien filed March 2 for $2,231,817. A spokesman for the IRS in Columbia said that represents income tax Brown owes for 1974.

Other liens, covering federal employment tax, were filed in February and August 1978 and in August 1979. But the register's office said the latter, for about $2,000, had been settled.

A $88,935 lien was filed in May and a $16,312 lien was filed June 2.

Records in the county courthouse show Brown and his wife, Dierdre, bought the land in mid-1974 for $11,000.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: P equals I

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Usually, the hands that appear in this column have an educational point to make in either the bidding or the play. Today's hand is a departure from this practice and might best be described by that Broadway tune: "Let me entertain you!"

The hand occurred some years ago in the Michigan State Championships, and our senior writer sat in the East seat, partnered with Percy Sheardown of Toronto. Our opponents were two gentlemen who appeared to have wine and dined well, but not too wisely, during the session break. The auction is part of our tale, and no explanation is necessary.

West led the queen of diamonds, and the play took a strange course. Declarer won the king of diamonds, cashed the ace and ruffed a diamond in dummy. Next he led a spade to his queen and cashed the ace of clubs, playing dummy's last spade. When it was pointed out to South that he must follow suit, declarer gasped and muttered: "Damn, I had the ace of clubs in with my spades."

Dosage Determines Antibiotic's Strength

Are there some antibiotics that are stronger than others? I notice that my sister's doctor always prescribes a particular antibiotic and my own doctor a completely different one. — Mrs. V.M., Iowa.

Dear Mrs. M.: There is no such thing as strong, stronger, strongest in antibiotics. It is the amount and frequency with which an antibiotic is taken that determines its effectiveness in killing bacteria.

Antibiotics are not chosen at random by the doctor. By past experience, the doctor can suspect the bacteria that may be responsible for an infection. When there is any confusion or doubt about this, cultures are made from the site of the infection. Then the bacteria are "matched" against antibiotics that are known to specifically control their activity. By this method, the vulnerability of bacteria is determined and the chances of controlling the infection are greatly increased.

Antibiotics are manufactured under their generic names. They are also produced under trade names. With so many excellent ones on the market, it is pointless for you to compare the ones that are prescribed for you with the ones that are prescribed for your sister. Even though your symptoms may be similar to those of your sister, the conditions for which each doctor prescribes may be totally different.

My eyes get very dry. Is there any help for this annoying problem? — Mr. S.S., Fla.

Dear Mr. S.: An examination by an eye specialist is essential to rule out any underlying eye disease that may account for the dry eye. There are also some general systemic conditions which may reflect themselves in dry eyes.

Drugs, allergies or low-grade infection may also be responsible for your problem. If no one specific factor is found, there are "artificial tears" which you may find helpful. These new preparations were created to closely resemble normal tears in their fluid and mineral content.

Normally, tears act as a protection. Dry eyes must not be overlooked because they can be more susceptible to infection and to foreign bodies.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... There seems to be a tendency to be careless about simple ankle sprains. Many times these sprains are shown to have an undisclosed fracture. Every ankle sprain should be investigated by the doctor — by X-ray if necessary — in order to be certain that a fracture is not overlooked.

split. Naturally, his slam rolled home.

Percy Sheardown, at the conclusion of play, assumed an apologetic air. "Sorry, partner, I could have beaten the hand," he said. The other three players were quite perplexed by this statement and inquired how.

"By leading the king of clubs," he answered. Still reeling from the impact of the blow inflicted by the enemy, it took a little time to realize what he meant. Since declarer had not yet, at trick one, discovered that he had missorted his hand, he would have followed to the king of clubs with his "singleton" queen, so the trump ace would have been the setting trick!

Halifax Again Out Of Water

HALIFAX, N.C. (AP) — The well ran dry for Halifax again Monday — the second time within a week.

Fire trucks from Littleton, Roanoke Rapids and Weldon made repeated trips to and from Halifax during the day, pumping water into the town's 75,000-gallon storage tank while town and state officials tried to find out why the tank keeps running dry.

County offices closed early both days because of the dwindling water supply.

GOP Could Win If Election Is Delayed

Ronald Reagan John Anderson Pres. Carter

ANTICIPATE A POSSIBILITY — The next President could be a Republican elected not by the voters Nov. 4 but by a Democratic House of Representatives next January. This is not likely, but entirely possible because of the Independent candidacy of John Anderson and the volatile political climate. (UPI Photo)

By PETER A. BROWN WASHINGTON (UPI) — The next president of the United States could be a Republican elected not by the voters Nov. 4 but by a Democratic House of Representatives next January.

This is not likely, but it is entirely possible because of the independent presidential candidacy of John Anderson, the Constitution and the volatile political climate.

Both major parties are looking into the possible scenarios that might unfold if no candidate gets the 270-vote majority of the 538 electoral votes needed to win the presidency.

Should that occur, the Constitution requires the president be elected by the House and the vice president by the Senate. The Congress elected in November, 1980 would do the voting in January, 1981.

Under rules laid down in the 12th Amendment to the Constitution, House election of a president would require a majority of 2 states each casting one vote. The last time this happened, 1825, each state's vote was decided by a majority vote of its House delegation.

(The House elected John Quincy Adams even though Andrew Jackson got more popular votes and more electoral votes the previous fall. The intense bitterness caused by that process is one of the reasons most professional politicians shudder at the idea of a House-elected president.)

By holding a majority of seats in a number of small states, it would be possible for a political party to control the presidential election without holding overall majority membership in the House. That is the situation the Republicans could find themselves in next winter.

It also would be possible for a deadlock to develop in the House if no candidate can get the votes of 26 states by Jan. 20, inauguration day. Such an impasse could develop two ways — if none of the three top candidates can get the votes of 26 states or if the seats in a number of delegations are evenly split and no vote can be cast for that state in the presidential election.

There would be ways to break deadlocks, of course. Henry Clay, finishing fourth in the deadlocked 1824 election, became Adams' secretary of state after all the states that had voted for Clay switched to Adams in the House.

Also, House members would not have to vote for their party's candidate. A member might vote to reflect the popular vote in his district or state, or his own ideology, which might conflict with that of his party's candidate.

In the event of a House deadlock, the Constitution makes it clear that the vice president (elected by majority of the 100 senators) would become "acting president" until a president is selected. That has never happened.

Current public opinion polls show President Carter — the likely Democratic nominee — and Republican Ronald Reagan both in the 30 to 40 percent range and Anderson in the low 20s. The rest are undecided.

In a close three-way race, a candidate could win all of a state's electoral votes with only 34 percent of the popular vote. So under present conditions, Anderson is within realistic striking distance of carrying some states.

If he did, and the major party candidates closely divided the other states, it would be possible that no candidate would get 270 electoral votes.

The last time this was a realistic possibility was 1968, when George Wallace carried six states and got 46 electoral votes. Richard Nixon won the election with 301 to 191 for Hubert Humphrey, but the election would have gone to the House had either Wallace and/or Humphrey won another 32 electoral votes.

In the current Congress, the Democrats dominate the overall membership of the House, 276 to 159. The GOP would need to win 59 seats in November to take overall control of the House. But the switch of a relatively small number of seats — theoretically 14, but in reality more like 24 — could give the Republicans control of 26 state delegations.

Currently, the Democrats control 29 delegations, while the Republicans control 12 and nine are split evenly.

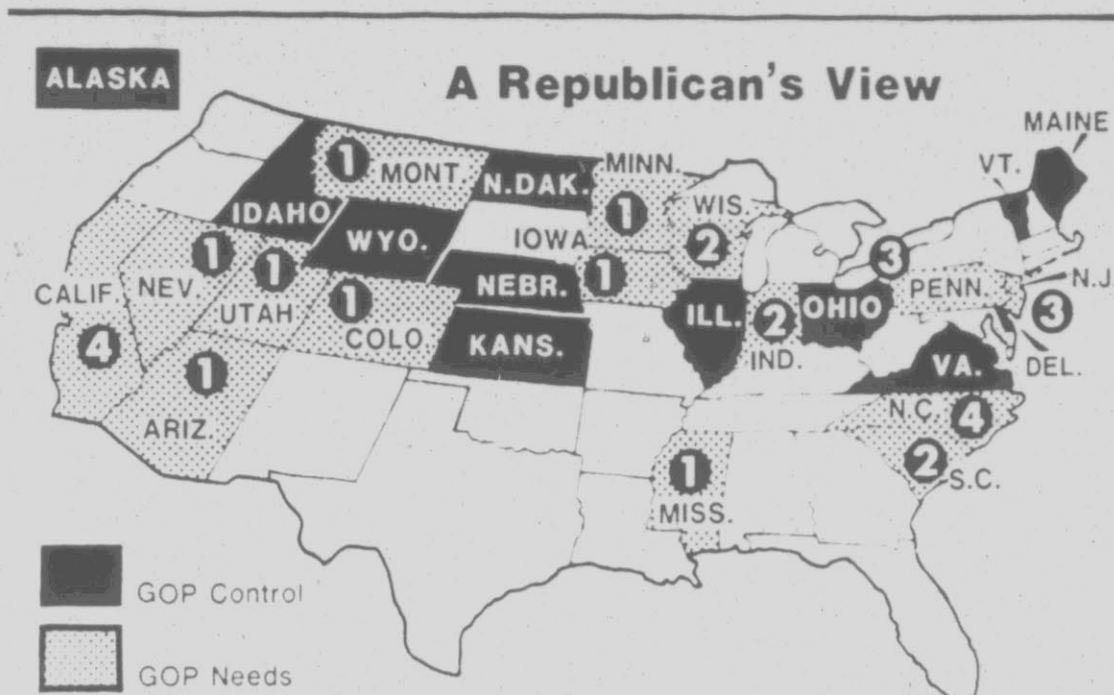

But there is only one seat difference in five of those Democratic-controlled states, so if the GOP picked up one seat in each of them and in each of the split states, the House would become Republican controlled for purposes of a presidential election.

That is how a 14-seat change could produce GOP control of the delegations. But that also is regarded as more theoretical than practical because the list includes states where even GOP optimists see little chance for gains.

However, Republican strategists believe control of 26 delegations could be gained with as few as 24 additional seats, which would include some states where the GOP would have to win as many as four seats this year.

In the Senate, the Democrats hold control 58-41 and one independent. The Republicans have targeted more than a half-dozen Senate Democratic seats this year but they concede it is unlikely — although possible — they will win the 10 seats needed for sure control of the Senate.

All of this is getting increasing attention at both the Democratic and Republican national committees. While the presidential and congressional elections are the main concern of the national committee strategists, they are spending part of their time studying the alternate scenarios.

Both major parties are concerned about the impact of a strong Anderson run. The Democrats worry first that the Illinois congressman's candidacy would tip the balance in some states to Reagan, especially in the industrial Midwest, the Northeast and California.

There also is the possibility that Anderson could carry some states: New York and Massachusetts are two that especially worry Carter's strategists.

In a close race, and three of the last five presidential elections have been won by a candidate with no more than 303 electoral votes, Anderson might be able to throw the election into the House by carrying one large state or one large and one small state.

There are also some states — mostly in the West — thought likely to vote for Reagan but where some observers say Anderson might do well. Oregon and Washington head that group.

No matter who Anderson helps, Republican national chairman Bill Brock says he doesn't like it: "It's an assault on the system." Anderson denies that is the case and claims the Republicans and Democrats are just trying to scare voters away from him.

Partisans of both parties, including former President Gerald R. Ford — a backer of likely GOP nominee Ronald Reagan — repeatedly warn Anderson's candidacy poses a real threat of forcing the election into the House.

But the major party politicians also don't trust each other in the potentially volatile situation. Despite Brock's harsh comments, there have been charges from the Carter people that the Republicans are helping Anderson get on the ballot in some states.

Both the Democrats and Republicans have committed that concentrate on the congressional elections — targeting those races where outside help might do the most good.

This year extra attention is being paid to the House races because of the possibility it might wind up electing the president.

"We've been looking at it. It's on everyone's mind. We're all thinking about it," says Steve Stockmeyer, the executive director of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee.

"It's another factor we've got to grind down into our priorities. This is the kind of thing that might make us decide to get involved in a particular race."

Brock says, "We might add a few more seats for particular emphasis" to the list where the GOP is pouring in money. He says the final decisions whether or where to do it will not be made until September.

Jim Nathan, assistant political director of the Democratic National Committee, acknowledges he is also looking at the scenarios. Not surprisingly he sees little chance the Republicans could win the seats required to elect a president in the House.

There is little disagreement from the Democrats with the GOP analysis that they are likely to retain control of the 12 state delegations now controlled by Republicans. Those states are Alaska, Delaware, Idaho, Illinois, Kansas, Maine, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, Vermont, Virginia and Wyoming.

Stockmeyer lists six states now in the Democratic column where it is "probable" the Republicans will win control in November. He sees the GOP picking up at least one seat in Arizona, Colorado, Iowa, Minnesota and Utah. In Indiana he sees a gain of two.

The Democrats also see each of those states as being vulnerable.

If the Republicans win those seats, they would have control of 18 delegations. There are nine others where the GOP thinks it can win control and in order to elect a president it must take eight of them.

It is these states the Democrats see little chance of losing. The GOP is optimistic, even though Stockmeyer concedes some are long shots.

On that list, the GOP must win one more seat in each of Mississippi, Montana and Nevada. Two seats each would be required in South Carolina and Wisconsin, and three each needed in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. California and North Carolina are also on the list, but the GOP would have to take over four seats in each of those states.

All those figures assume that a member will vote for his party's candidate in an election in the House. There is no guarantee that will be the case.

The Anderson people claim many members would be inclined to vote for the presidential candidate who carried their district. If that were the case, it would help Anderson and Reagan. Should the election go to the House, Carter presumably would be fighting a holding action, while the other two would be seeking converts.

Brock also talks about switches, although he is focusing on Democratic members representing conservative states where Reagan is expected to run well.

"I think some people on the Hill would be very reluctant to upset the popular vote. Congress prides itself on following the will of the American people," Brock said.

But one congressional staffer who has watched arms twisted over much more trivial matters, emphasizes that with the White House at stake both parties would pull out all stops to keep their troops in line.

"Never underestimate what the parties can do to keep their people in line," she said.

Meanwhile, history books about the elections of 1800 and 1824 are becoming popular on Capitol Hill.

It was in the first of those elections that Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr ran as the Democratic ticket and tied with exactly the same number of electoral votes. The election went to the House, Jefferson went on to the presidency and Burr to tragedy.

Four years later, the Constitution was amended to mandate separate balloting for president and vice president. That amendment, the 12th, sets the basic method for election of the president in the case of electoral deadlock.

It controlled the 1825 election of Adams and set the stage for the charges of "corrupt bargain" that blighted his term in office. Democratic Chairman John White and his GOP counterpart Brock — who agree on very little else — are quick to use such arguments in trying to discourage their party members from backing Anderson.

But Anderson campaign manager Mike MacLeod, as expected, disagrees. "I don't think that's a valid assessment. The fact of the matter is that the Constitution provides for this very eventuality and I would hardly call it a crisis," he said.

"I think the chairman of the two major parties are clearly worried about the viability of Anderson's candidacy and they are flailing around in search of any rationale that pops into mind," MacLeod said.

Since the two-party system took hold more than 100 years ago, only Democrats and Republicans have won the presidency. The best showing ever made by a third-party or independent candidate was in 1912, when former President Theodore Roosevelt — who bolted the GOP to run as a "Bull Moose" Progressive — ran second with 88 electoral votes. Democrat Woodrow Wilson won and incumbent Republican president William Howard Taft finished third. Taft carried only Utah and Vermont and got eight electoral votes.

Child Warriors In Horn Of Africa Not Unique

By RICHARD TOMKINS
Associated Press Writer

GONA GEDO, Ethiopia (AP) — Mohamed Farah killed his first man last year — when he was 11.

His best friend, Mohamed Sheikh Abdulahi, was only 13 when he aimed his Kalashnikov assault rifle and cut down four fleeing soldiers.

Farah and Abdulahi are not unique in the Horn of Africa. They are children of the Ogaden — a new breed of pre-teen and adolescent warrior caught in the maelstrom of guerrilla war between the Ogaden's independence-minded ethnic Somali tribesmen and Ethiopia's Soviet- and Cuban-backed army.

The Ogaden is a region of scrub and cracked earth located in southeastern Ethiopia and bordering Somalia. The area ceased to be a conventional battlefield 27 months ago when government forces, backed by sophisticated Soviet weaponry and Cuban shock troops, blunted the drive by guerrillas of the Western Somali Liberation Front and the regular Somali army to free the region from nearly 100 years of Ethiopian military rule.

Intense fighting, however, continues unabated in the Ogaden. Thousands of poorly equipped but determined rebels roam the countryside, battering isolated army outposts and ambushing supply convoys from their makeshift base camps.

Boys like Farah and Abdulahi play a key role in the conflict. Unlike youngsters elsewhere in Africa, who dress in over-sized uniforms and wield toy guns in government-organized youth groups, the children of the Ogaden are frontline combatants. They wait in ambush, set mines, join in attacks and patrol along with their older compatriots.

Their lives have been totally shaped by the war, which has sputtered on since the early 1960s. Their chief motivation for fighting is revenge, a point of honor among the Ogaden's nomadic peoples.

"The Ethiopians killed my father in 1976," Farah said in an off-hand manner. "They also killed my mother last year when they bombed our village."

"I want my revenge. It is my duty and my right."

WSLF commander Abdulrahman Mohamed, in charge of the central region around the towns of Degahabur, Aware and Segag, says between 300 and 400 youths bear arms under his command. Thousands more are believed fighting elsewhere.

"We lost many young men in 1977 and 1978," he said in his command tent beneath the branches of a thorn tree. "The younger ones have taken their place."

"You must remember that we Somalis have an extended family system. All of us have lost loved ones to the Abyssinians (Ethiopians). The only ones who do not fight are those too old or those who are the only ones left to care for the youngest children."

At Gona Gedo, 12 miles from Degahabur, a major Ethiopian tank base, this reporter saw about 15 children of Farah's and Abdulahi's age. All carried East-bloc Kalashnikovs — the favorite automatic rifle of revolutionaries. Most were combat veterans. Many had killed. Many had been wounded.

"Yes, I have killed," said Farah, his angular cheek resting against the stock of his loaded rifle. "I killed some wounded. They were left behind on the battlefield when the others ran away."

"It was right to kill them. I was very angry. They killed my mother and my father."

Farah was shot through the fleshy part of his left forearm last year when guerrillas attacked soldiers at Degahabur who were vacating their trenches in a rain storm.

"I was attacking with my people when I was hit," he said, pointing to a large round scar. "I knew I was wounded. My hand just went senseless."

"I didn't fall down or anything, but some others carried me back to our urse."

Abdulahi, a round-faced youngster with inquisitive eyes and an easy grin, added in assent. "It is wrong to kill innocent people," he said. "But not the Ethiopians, not the Amharas (the dominant Ethiopian tribe)."

"This is our country, not theirs. They don't belong here."

The Ogaden was ceded to Ethiopia at the turn of the century by European colonial powers. Its Hamitic peoples share a common culture, language and religion — Islam. Culturally distinct from Ethiopians, they consider Ethiopians as colonizers who have ruled their land through military force.

Gona Gedo is near Aware, a small town with half a dozen wells, where several hundred Ethiopian troops man trenches to deny guerrillas the only water for miles around.

Neither Farah or Abdulahi can read or write. Neither has ever attended a school. Under Ethiopian administration, schooling and medical services were available only in the larger towns of the region.

"I don't know what schools are," commander Mohamed said. "What are schools to our people? All we ever got from the Ethiopians were their soldiers and tax collectors."

"We'll have our own schools and hospitals some day — when our land is returned to us. Until then we fight."

As night began to fall,

'No Contest' By Martin Sheriff

WILLIAMSTON, N.C. (AP) — Saying he would "like to get out of here and unwind," Sheriff W. Raymond Rawls pleaded no contest Monday to a misdemeanor drug charge and agreed under plea bargaining to resign the Martin County post he has filed for 25 years.

Rawls, who was elected sheriff of the eastern North Carolina county seven times, was indicted in April on a felony charge of receiving controlled substances from two doctors. Under an agreement approved by the court, Rawls entered his plea to a lesser charge of illegally receiving prescription drugs. Specifically he was accused of obtaining two pain-relieving drugs from doctors between 1978 and 1980 without telling each source that he was obtaining the medication from another physician.

Defense lawyers said Monday that Rawls suffered chronic intestinal pain as a result of a beating 15 years ago when he tried to break up an unruly crowd in Oak City. He was knocked unconscious during a fight in which he also was kicked and wounded with his own revolver.

"He comes to a point in his career where he is just tired," said defense attorney Wade Smith of Raleigh. "He tells us he is weary."

His attorneys told the court Rawls did not admit any guilt, but did not want to fight the charge.

Judge Napoleon Barefoot delayed sentencing until Sept. 1 on condition that Rawls submit his resignation by that date. Rawls joined the sheriff's office as a deputy in August 1949, and had worked as a Williamston police officer for two years before that.

No testimony or evidence was presented in the brief court appearance Monday. Later Rawls said in an interview that he decided not to challenge the charge because of the cost of a court battle and the effect it might have on his health.

"I don't want to let my people down, but I feel like my health will get better now. I would like to get out of here and unwind," Rawls said.

New Director Of Wildlife Bd.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The newly appointed director of North Carolina's Wildlife Commission says he has no immediate solution to the agency's financial problems in the wake of declining licenses sales and increasing operating expenses.

"I've got a lot of listening to do with a lot of people" before making suggestions to change the commission's operation, W. Vernon Bevell Jr. said after his appointment as executive director Monday.

The Aiken, S.C., biologist has worked with the South Carolina Wildlife and Marine Resources Department for the past 10 years. He handled that state's wild turkey restoration project.

He succeeds Robert Hazel, who resigned in January.

The North Carolina commission has asked the Legislature for $700,800 in additional appropriations to help it through the next fiscal year although fees for hunting and fishing licenses were increased last year.

'SLANDERED STATE'

MOSCOW (AP) — Alexander Podrabinek, a medical aide sent to internal exile in 1978 in northeastern Ust-Nara, for his articles against the use of psychiatry for political purposes, has been arrested on charges of slandering the Soviet state, dissident sources said Sunday.

BATH FIT FOR A PRINCESS — Princess, a female infant orangutan, shares a bath with Binti, one-year-old son of researchers Dr. Birute Galdikas and her husband Rod Brindamour who are studying orangutan behavior in the rain jungles of Indonesia. Dr. Galdikas said that Binti, Princess's best playmate, began imitating her sounds, expressions and posture. Two years later he could do a perfect orangutan imitation. It would not have been reason for concern, except that with no other children in camp, orangutans became his rolemodels, but as Binti made more contact with other children he completely gave up orangutan ways. The researchers since 1971 have logged more than 11,000 hours of orangutan observation. (AP Laserphoto)
