Praise, Criticism For Proposed Budgets

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
The proposed 1980-81 budget programs for the city and Greenville Utilities, totaling $9,974,478 and $35,811,100, respectively, were aired Tuesday night in a public hearing that prompted a variety of observations by local citizens.

The recommended financial package, particularly the city segment, drew comments of praise and criticism from the gathering and former mayor Percy Cox cautioned that the proposed tax structure would cause potential residents to "look twice before coming to Greenville."

City Manager Ed Wyatt, using charts to explain the new package, emphasized that the recommended budget reflects a "hold-the-line" attitude "with the objective of providing the present level of service in spite of heavy inflationary costs."

Wyatt reported that the primary objective of this year's budget is to maintain present work force levels without reducing city personnel. As in past years, he said that personnel cost reflect the "major budget expenditure."

In his budget message to the mayor and City Council, Wyatt said that "limited revenue sources and the continued increasing cost of inflation have made the budget extremely difficult to balance."

Wyatt recommended the implementation of several measures in order to balance the budget, including: a seven cents increase in the local tax rate, from 70 cents to 77 cents per $100 valuation; an increase in cemetery fees for Greenwood and Brownhill facilities; an increase in bus fares in 1981; and an increase in the cost of city license plates from $1 to $5. He added that Greenville Utilities has indicated that it will increase its turnover to the city by some $120,000.

The city manager explained that the city budget is broken down into three sections: personnel, operating costs, and capital costs. Funding is included in the new budget for a seven percent cost-of-living increase, if the Council desires, he said, reactivation of the merit system is also recommended.

House Upset For Administration Officials

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Hunt administration officials and budget advisers were working today to turn around a surprising decision by the House Tuesday to delete a controversial cash-flow accounting system for highway-construction projects from the state's $338 million surplus budget.

An amendment to block the switch to the cash-flow system was approved by a one-vote margin — 58-57. The proposal was a key part of the surplus recommended by Gov. Jim Hunt and the Advisory Budget Commission. The change would have provided a one-time windfall of $57 million next year.

Administration officials, who admitted they were stunned by the vote, began lobbying legislators to have the vote reversed when the House meets today. Opponents of the amendment called for adjournment Tuesday before amendment supporters could apply a parliamentary procedure known as the "clinch" that would have prevented the amendment from being reconsidered.

The House adjourned without taking final action on the budget package. Some legislators, who said the vote was the first time in recent years that either the House or the Senate voted to make a significant change in the budget after it was approved by the appropriate committees, predicted that the amendment could delay adjournment of the short summer session.

Rep. William McMillan, D-Statesville, introduced the amendment, calling the cash-flow issue "right up there with the Equal Rights Amendment and other important decisions considered by this Legislature."

The cash-flow proposal would allow the state to begin road-construction projects before appropriating the money to complete the projects. Budget analysts said the $57 million windfall would be created by freeing for immediate use cash balances that have been appropriated but not spent for other road projects.

Opponents of the system argued Tuesday that the plan would allow highway projects to be started but left unfinished when money ran out.

"I think this plan is bad business for the state," said Rep. George Hux, D-Halifax. "I can see this Legislature with bridges half finished before any more money can be raised. It's just a bad policy."

Attitude Survey Voted By Hospital Trustees

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County Memorial Hospital trustees voted last night to employ Tony Jackson Associates management development firm to conduct an attitude survey among hospital employees.

Director Jack Richardson reported the resignation from the medical staff of Dr. Sam Pepkowitz, who will pursue further study. He said 29 new medical residents will be welcomed soon, bringing the total here to 77. The driveway from Moye Drive to the emergency room area will be closed July 7 to allow construction of a connecting corridor from the hospital to the medical science building, he announced.

Associate Nursing Director Betty Trought said a supplemental nursing pool program is under way, allowing for the employment and specialized training of nurses who need flexible working schedules. These, she said, can include nurses who have not practiced in some time, nurses who work elsewhere and want additional part-time employment, staff nurses who want to work extra hours, and nurses with home situations that demand that, if they work, that their hours be flexible.

Trought also announced that a nurse-social worker has been hired to work with families of critical care unit patients. Often these people, she said, need help in time of crisis, needed communication with doctors and nurses facilitated, and need help with local accommodations. This person is supposed to assist in all these areas.

Associate Director Rick Gilstrap said reports of Northeastern North Carolina Professional Standards Review Organization seem to indicate that PCMH is doing well in keeping length of patient stays in the hospital to the desirable minimums.

McRea reported that an in-depth survey by the ACCESS?

I understand the mayor and city council offices are located on the second floor of City Hall. I'd like to know how a handicapped person can get up to these offices. I realize there's an elevator, but it doesn't stop at the second floor. G. T.
The mayor's office is located on second floor, Gail Meeks of the City Manager's office said and you're right in saying that the elevator doesn't stop at second. There are no council member offices. City Hall was built in 1939, long before access for the handicapped was dealt with.
Meeks said arrangements can easily be made for the mayor or any of the council members to meet with any constituent in the conference room on the first floor.
Council chambers, where City Council meetings are held, are located on the third floor which is accessible by elevator for the handicapped.

Visiting Russians Here To Proffer Information

By LEIGH COAKLEY
Reflector Staff Writer
"We think it is possible to establish a peaceful relationship with the United States. It is possible to prevent a new war," said Nicolai Mostovets, senior researcher in United States history at the Academy of Sciences in Moscow, Monday on the East Carolina campus.

Mostovets is a representative of the Society for Friendship and Cultural Relations with Peoples of Foreign Lands. Both visitors participated in classroom discussions and in a community forum in Mendenhall Student Center Monday night.

Though Mostovets' broken English was difficult to understand at times, Zarubina managed to help him when he stumbled with words. They both, however, made the purpose of their visit very clear. "Our theme is to save peace. But we need the help of other countries. The only way to save peace is through non-military methods," stressed the Russian-born American historian.

Students, educators and citizens participating in the discussions directed the majority of their questions to Professor Mostovets concerning the Russian invasion of Afghanistan in December.

Mme. Zarubina, a teacher of English in Russia, is a representative of the Soviet Women's Committee. She demobilized from the army in 1942 to continue her education in linguistics. In 1952, she made the Olympic team in track and field as a stand-by. She also escorted Franklin D. Roosevelt during one of his visits to the Soviet Union.

Hospital Board Honors Retiree

Mrs. Gertie Lee Allen and her husband, Edgar Allen Sr., were special guests of the Pitt County Memorial Board of Trustees last night. Mrs. Allen has had many area residents as her special guests over the years. She's seen us at our most vulnerable worsts, as we lay in the Pitt County Memorial Hospital recovery room under anesthesia recuperating from the trauma of surgery.

"NEXT YEAR, WE HOPE, WILL BE THE YEAR OF PEACE"... This comment was made by Nicolai Mostovets, senior researcher of U.S. history in Moscow during his visit to the ECU campus Monday. Mostovets was accompanied by Zoya Zarubina, a linguist educator and representative of the Soviet Women's Committee.

Report Suicide Attempt

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The puppet president of Soviet-occupied Afghanistan, Babrak Karmal, was stopped by his security guards in an unsuccessful attempt to kill himself last Friday, Radio Pakistan was quoted today by Indian news agencies.

The broadcast monitored here quoted reports from Afghanistan as saying Karmal was a virtual prisoner of his Russian advisers and his personal staff including cook and driver were Russians. The report could not be independently confirmed. Several diplomatic sources here said they had not heard the report from their embassies in Kabul, the capital of Afghanistan.

Miss Whaley, Mr. Buck Exchange Marriage Vows

BEULAVILLE — The marriage of Linda Susan Whaley to Alan Page Buck was solemnized Saturday, June 7, at seven o'clock in the Beulaville Presbyterian Church. The Rev. G. Frank Sawyer officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Whaley of Beulaville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. Harriell Buck of Vanceboro, and Mrs. Christine Catapano of Greenville.

The bride, escorted by her father, was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a gown in qiana white silk with a high neckline and capped sleeves. The bodice was covered in silk Venise lace with French netting in the yoke. The wattleau train fell into chapel length trimmed with matching Venise lace. The bodice of the gown was accented with pearl beading. The bridal veil was a Camelot cap covered with silk Venise lace and pearls to accent the two-tier fingertip length mantilla with a double row of silk Venise lace. Her bouquet was a cascade of yellow silk daisies, roses and stephanotis.

The maid of honor was Paula Whaley, sister of the bride.

Eddie Davenport was best man. Ushers were Michael Warren Whaley, brother of the bride, and Ronnie Buck, brother of the bridegroom, all of Greenville.

Mary S. Brown, organist, rendered a prelude of sacred music. Jeff Smith was soloist. Susan Bostic presided at the register.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Guests were greeted by Robert Whaley and Teresa Whaley, uncle and cousin of the bride. A portrait of the bride adorned a lace-draped table and was complemented by two yellow burning candles, the bridal bouquet and basket decorated with yellow daisies filled with rice bags. The guest table was covered with white lace over a yellow cloth with an arrangement of yellow mums, daisies and greenery. Punch was poured by Susan Bostic. The three-tiered wedding cake was served by Mrs. Martha Brown.

The wedding and reception were under the direction of Mrs. Neil Bryan.

Following a wedding trip to the Outer Banks and Williamsburg, the couple plans to reside in Greenville.

Dear Abby

After Parole, Calif. Ex-Cons Can Vote

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Someone wrote in asking if a friend who had served time in prison was eligible to vote.

You said, "Unless your friend receives a full pardon from the governor of his state, he is ineligible to vote. (And for a federal offense, one needs a pardon from the president of the United States.)"

Abby, in California, anyone released from prison is considered as having paid society for his mistake and once again is a citizen with the right to vote.

B.D.K. OF CALIFORNIA

DEAR B.D.K.: I referred your letter to my friend, Justice Stanley Mosk, who serves as a judge on the Supreme Court of California. His reply:

"Release from prison is almost invariably subject to parole conditions. One in prison, or one on parole, may not vote in California. (Article II, sec. 4 of the California Constitution provides, in relevant part, '... for the disqualification of electors while mentally incompetent or imprisoned or on parole for the conviction of a felony.')

"Thus, for example, a person who had been given a life sentence and released on parole for life would never be able to vote unless pardoned by the governor. However, one who completes his parole may vote in California.

"California is somewhat unique in this respect, and more tolerant of ex-felons than most states. Your reply is undoubtedly completely correct for the vast majority of states."

DEAR ABBY: Your mention of "employee pilfering" reminds me of our office problems and a possible solution. Only it's not the employees we worry about, it's our patients (I am a physician).

We cannot always detect the thieves, and we have been robbed repeatedly. Now when a particularly scruffy drug patient shows up, said patient is routinely "weighed" coming and going. We have turned up everything from forceps to house plants.

SAN DIEGO M.D.

DEAR M.D.: You're lucky. I recently noticed that all the furniture in the lobby of a luxury apartment building was bolted to the floor, and the lovely lamps and other accessories were chained to the walls!

Upon inquiring, I was informed that twice the lobby had been cleaned out by burglars, dressed like "movers" with a truck to haul the stuff away! How's that for chutzpah?

DEAR ABBY: An anecdote regarding thumb sucking: I am a piano tuner. One day I was sitting on a piano stool tuning a piano while a 3-year-old child stood watching me with her thumb in her mouth.

I picked her up and placed her on my knee. (Her thumb was still in her mouth.) Then I took out my partial plate with four front teeth in it, and I said, "See what happens when you suck your thumb?"

Her mother told me later, "She has never sucked her thumb since."

This Group Was First

There have been some big graduation ceremonies in recent weeks, involving high schools, community colleges and large universities.

The participants ranged from a hundred or so into the thousands and without doubt there was considerable pride in the events for all graduates and their families.

None, however, was anymore significant than the little ceremony held at Pitt County Memorial Hospital Sunday afternoon. There, the first medical and dental residents who completed postgraduate training at the ECU School of Medicine and other hospital complex facilities were honored at the final ceremonies.

There were only four physicians to complete the program in this first group, and there were two dentists. For all of them it was one of several graduations they have participated in.

The significance of this particular graduation, however, is enormous, for now the ECU School of Medicine is beginning to fulfill its role. Two of the physicians will establish practice in Salisbury, another will join the local Family Practice Center staff and a third has already established a local practice. One of the dentists will establish a practice in Henderson and the other will become clinical staff dentist at ECU.

The ceremony is a tremendous milestone in the making of the ECU medical school, whose history stretches back over two decades. Next year there will be more who will complete the residency program, and the first four year class will graduate from the medical school.

Sunday's small group will always be significant, however. It was the first.

A Target Of 'Punishment'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Over anguished objections from the U.S. Navy, President Carter has blocked anti-communist Chile's participation in the 21st annual inter-American naval exercises this fall — continuing the administration's unique policy of meeting the march of communism in the Western Hemisphere.

Appeals by the Navy and prominent members of Congress have not budged the president. His policy in this instance is inflexible: Official U.S. hostility toward Chile's military regime will continue so long as Chileans accused of complicity in the Washington assassination of former Foreign Minister Orlando Letelier are neither extradited nor prosecuted.

So was the State Department's decision in early May to exclude Chile from the inter-American naval exercises — the first time such a step had ever been taken for political reasons. The U.S. Navy appealed the decision, arguing that increased U.S. activity in the Persian Gulf and Indian Ocean with a depleted fleet made cooperation with allies essential; Chile's navy, patrolling a 2,600-mile coastline, is one of the hemisphere's best. Defense Secretary Harold Brown rejected the appeal.

Soon after, the Pentagon indefinitely postponed the amphibious exercises scheduled off the U.S. Naval base at Guantanamo. The avowed reason was the need of U.S. Naval warships to help the Cuban refugee fleet to Florida. But one well-placed admiral privately says that is nonsense; the Pentagon was bowing to pressure.

But transcending the lingering Letelier affair is Carter's overriding Latin policy, seemingly unaffected by the end of détente. At the same time Carter was punishing Chile, he was bowing to demands by leftist President Aristides Royo of Panama that the U.S. call off its planned amphibious operations at Guantanamo — a demand echoing Fidel Castro's position.

The message for Latin Americans is unmistakable: Anti-communist policy in no way mitigates State Department complaints against right-wing authoritarian regimes. In contrast, whatever their shortcomings in human rights, leftist authoritarian regimes are blessed with U.S. deference (as with Panama) and aid (as with Nicaragua's new Marxist dictatorship).

Pressure by the State Department was applied from the moment the amphibious exercises were scheduled; officials there feared that U.S. Naval activity would provoke Cuba and its Caribbean friends. In a May 3 telegram to Carter made public in Panama City, President Royo called for cancellation of the exercise in words that echoed Havana's position: The Caribbean "has ceased to be the private sea of the United States."

Nothing could be done about the postponed amphibious exercises, but the Navy quietly mobilized an impressive bipartisan corps of senators and House members to protest the Chilean exclusion. Their letters to the president drew a uniform response: silence. The White House has not even bothered to explain the Letelier connection.

Administration foes of Chile's military government, which toppled the country's Marxist regime in 1973, have artfully exploited the Letelier assassination. The Chilean supreme court, citing insufficient evidence supplied by the U.S., has refused to extradite or prosecute three Chilean secret police agents accused by the U.S. of planning the 1976 slaying. Letelier, foreign minister of the Marxist regime, kept close ties to Cuba and East Germany as a Washington-based exile. In retaliation, the U.S. has cut back its diplomatic presence in Chile, drastically reduced military ties and banned economic development loans. Had the same standards been applied to activities of Soviet thugs here and elsewhere, diplomatic intercourse between the West and Moscow would be impossible. On April 15, Treasury Secretary G. William Miller killed a $32 million "basic human needs" loan for Chile from the World Bank. On that same day, the U.S. vetoed a $43.5 million farm credit loan and a $32 million highway loan to Chile. All this was predicated on the

These unanswered letters stress the strategic wartime danger of defending Cape Horn shipping lanes without a cooperative Chilean navy. In a separate personal letter to Secretary of State Edmund G. Muskie, also unanswered, Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana questioned how excluding Chile from the naval exercises can help "the cause of human rights in Chile."

But is the administration's Latin policy really all that concerned with improving human rights in Chile? A recent "confidential" telegram to embassies from the State Department, revealing further U.S. steps against Chile, conceded "improvements in the (Chilean) human rights situation." Only the Letelier case is cited to justify the pro-let, anti-right U.S. tilt in Chile at a moment when the tide of Communism creeps steadily higher in Latin America.

Cycle Will Run Course

It didn't come as a great surprise that the nation's industrial production dropped by 2.1 percent in May.

Government figures reflecting the drop were issued last week. It was well known that the economy was slowing down, much of it due to the incredible interest rates of the first five months of the year. The long predicted recession is finally with us, and the only question is how long will it last?

The figures are undoubtedly accurate, but they should cause no panic. Interest has dropped considerably now which should help improve sales of large ticket items such as autos and housing.

The hope now is that government won't move too quickly with spending programs as it lives with a recession in an election year. The cycle will run its course, but extra government spending could continue the inflation that has proven so disastrous.

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan made a very generous gesture the other day. He promised that if elected President he would have the White House physician examine him periodically, and that he would resign the office if serious evidence of senility or mental deterioration were detected.

This is the first time any presidential candidate has made such an offer, and Mr. Reagan should be commended for it.

The problem, as I see it, is how would any doctor know? I asked a psychiatrist friend about this and he admitted it would certainly be a hard thing to prove.

"First of all," he said, "you can make a case for the fact that anyone who wants to be President of the United States does have mental problems. A person who thinks he can solve the nation's woes and deal with all the other crazy leaders in the world could easily be certified and put away, if he weren't running for the highest office in the land."

"I never thought of that," I admitted. "We do lock up people for a lot less."

"Secondly," he continued, "when a man becomes President he does things that no normal person would do. If Lyndon Johnson hadn't been President there would have been some question as to whether he had all his marbles. I cite his strange behavior of pulling a dog up by its ears, showing everyone his scar, and driving across the ranch in a jeep scaring the hell out of his cattle, not to mention putting 500,000 men in Vietnam, as things a psychiatrist might consider abnormal behavior."

"What you're saying, if I hear you correctly, is that what could be construed as abnormal for someone in your family is accepted as normal behavior once the person becomes President."

"That's correct. The same rules concerning senility and mental deterioration do not apply when someone lives in the White House, as opposed to a nursing home."

"If Nixon had agreed to do what Reagan has promised to do, is it possible that his White House doctors would have asked him to step down?" I asked.

"It's hard to say. We know Nixon talked to the paintings in the White House, and he was terribly paranoid about people who opposed him to the extent of making up an enemies' list. And you might wonder about a person who wanted everything he said put on tapes, and who then decided not to destroy them

ART BUCHWALD

"Frankly, the fact that he even mentioned it bothers me. It puts ideas into people's heads. As soon as he makes his first State of the Union speech and advocates tax cuts and at the same time demands a balanced budget, everyone's going to say 'Okay, Ronnie, it's time for the funny farm.'"

THIS AFTERNOON Impetus In Costs

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The idea of community treatment for a host of human ailments is one which politicians and professionals can agree.

The professionals in mental health, retardation, juvenile justice, alcoholism, rehabilitation and other areas have been pushing hard for alternatives to putting people in state institutions. Their motives have more to do with successful treatment than with money.

Successful solutions to problems have been demonstrated when individuals can learn to cope with them in usual family and community settings rather than in the idyllic, isolated surroundings of an institution. Further, the troubled individual feels more a part of normal life, while others learn to accept contact with those who are "different."

But money may prove to be the impetus needed to enlist the politicians in the professionals' crusade. Legislators are now being given some cold and shocking information which just might convince them that community treatment is much to be desired over institutionalization.

Automatic

In the past, members of the General Assembly have automatically endorsed the base budget in which ongoing programs are funded. Seldom do questions arise about the amount which has been spent. When several million dollars are sought for something new, however, it must stand close scrutiny. Community treatment, in its various forms and applications, has been subjected to such close study, and in numerous cases legislators have balked at the new money required; trimming or eliminating or deferring such proposals.

Relatively small amounts of money for a home for runaways or a half-way house for the mentally ill or emotionally upset can trigger stiff legislative resistance. Millions upon millions to keep state institutions running receive scarcely a glance.

A research report prepared by the legislative staff, however, is causing some legislators to take another look at this approach. Says State Rep. Louise Brennan, D-Mecklenburg, of the revelation: "I'm simply amazed at these figures. We had no idea. This could mean we are going to have to take a closer and different approach to looking at the budget."

Letters submitted for Public Forum should be limited to 300 words. The editor reserves the right to edit longer letters.

To the editor:

As a former councilman, I feel an obligation to the citizens of Greenville and Pitt County to respond to Mr. Les Fuchs' letter in the June 4 edition of this paper and the Alfa Aviation ad in the June 8 edition, as well as its letter to some taxpayers.

Seldom have I seen anything as misleading as was the above-referenced material. Alfa has cleverly tried to lead the public to believe that they could perform all of the functions in operating the Airport at no cost to the taxpayers whatsoever. However, Alfa does not propose to assume any of the duties or responsibilities of operating the Airport.

What has not been made clear is that Alfa wants to have the entire fuel concession and income from it. Such a move would be contrary to the lease executed by Alfa's chief executive officer with the Airport Authority four years ago, a lease which Alfa has been trying to change ever since. Also, not told the public is the fact that Alfa makes a profit on the fuel it sells which is purchased from the Airport Authority.

The Airport Authority has actually reduced the cost to the taxpayers of operating the Airport by the amount of income received from the sale of fuel and related services. Why should the City and Council give this income to Alfa, requiring them to put up many additional dollars to operate and maintain the Airport?

The Airport Authority has an excellent record in improving the Airport to the benefit of all citizens and industries in this area. I would hope the City and County can continue to support the Airport's needs and the expansion of the terminal building. Alfa should either live up to its lease in spirit or get out.

Some might recognize Joe Karbo as the man who runs countless ads in newspapers and magazines about people being "too busy working to make any money." Life for such people, Joe says, is a prison sentence.

"Don't take as long as I did to find out," he admonishes readers. Take charge of your life. Don't let it dictate to you; tell it what you want; make it do your bidding. "You can have anything you want."

Joe doesn't ask you to believe him. Just order his material. "If I'm wrong, all you've lost is a stamp," he reminds you. "But what if I'm right?" The question is provocative. People order.

In return for their $10, respondents receive a copy of "The Lazy Man's Way To Riches," a 159-page book that tells them how to define their goals, visualize them, declare them every day, and achieve them.

The book tells them much about the background of Joe Karbo, of his being $50,000 in debt and without a job in 1962 and how, through the use of Dyna-Psyc, he and Betty soon were on the way to wealth.

Dyna-Psyc's principles are simple. You define and visualize your goals as if they were accomplishments. You declare them, live them,

Strength For Today

TOO OLD?

As they grow old, many people today get the feeling that they are useless and unwanted. But this idea is not only completely wrong, it is also unrealistic. The American poet Longfellow gives us an interesting lesson on this point:

"Ah, nothing is too late, Till the tired heart shall cease to palpitate. Cato learned his Greek at eighty; Sophocles Wrote his grand Oedipus, and Simonides Bore off the prize of verse from his compeers. When each had numbered more than fourscore years. Chaucer, at Woodstock with the nightingales, At sixty wrote the Canterbury Tales; Goethe at Weimar, toiling to the last Completed Faust when eighty years were past."

None of us is a great literary figure like those above, but there is much importance for us to do, even if we have few years in which to do it. —Elisha Douglass become them. No mystery, says Joe Karbo. "The power is within all of us."

Dyna-Psyc is autosuggestive. It seems essentially to be common sense, though often unrecognized. It is suggestive of religion, and Karbo concedes the Bible said it long ago: You are what you think.

But what people think, he says, is negative.

Most people, he contends, are programmed for failure by the time they are six years of age. "We rehearse failure instead of rehearsing success," he says.

The principles of Dyna-Psyc may not be new, but Joe Karbo's presentation is. Sitting in his easy chair, alternating an smoked pipe and an unlit cigar, Joe describes its success.

Since 1973, he says, it has sold 1 million copies in the United States and perhaps 400,000 more in England, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and Germany. It has been translated into Spanish, German and French. A gentleman recently approached him, he says, about a Japanese edition.

In the book Joe doesn't let the reader dangle with big ambitions and no outlet. While Dyna-Psyc may be applied to any goals, he says, he went ahead and showed them how to use it for profit in the direct response business, the same business through which he sold the book.

How and what do you sell through direct response? You do what Joe Karbo did. You ask "what need is there I can fill, what knowledge can I share, what service can I offer, what product can I develop?"

After people read the book, testimonials often follow in short order, he says, some of them from people now fairly well known. Howard Ruff, proponent of the coming monetary collapse, consulted guru Karbo. So did Mark Garoldsen, whose ads stress the real estate way to wealth.

Many people have used Dyna-Psyc to greater advantage than he has, and good luck to them, says Karbo. He reflects, he says, on how satisfying it is to have done something so momentous as changing anyone's life.

Right now, as you might imagine, he is planning more ad campaigns. Fifty percent of his gross goes into one well-known ad, and a $10,000 insertion, he says, might generate 2,000 or 3,000 orders for the book.

Pretty good response for one book, written seven years ago and never changed, and promoted through an ad that has been edited but once in that time.

Lazy indeed.

Local Legion Honors Eagles

James W. Langley, Jr., a veteran of the Korean conflict, was installed on Tuesday night as the 1980-81 commander of the Pitt County American Legion Post No. 39. Langley, who served with the U.S. Army in Korea, was a member of Co. F., 180th Infantry Regiment, 45th Infantry Division. Currently, Langley is owner-operator of The Captain's Table Restaurant in Ayden.

Commander Langley succeeds Dr. Marshall Helms in that position. Other new officers installed for the 1980-81 year at the monthly meeting of the post were: Preston L. Knox, first vice-commander; Reid Tripp, second vice-commander; Earnest L. Avery, adjutant and finance officer; W. Connor Eagles, historian; Phil L. Goodson, Jr., sergeant-at-arms; Seth Jones, chaplain; Walter L. Tucker, service officer; and as executive committeemen — Lester E. Adams, Marshall Helms, and Harold D. (Buck) Weaver.

George Stokes of Edenton, commander of the Legion's First Division in North Carolina, administered the oath of office to the new officers.

A highlight of the meeting was the presentation by outgoing Commander Helms of the Post 39 Legionnaire of the Year Award to Connor Eagles.

Eagles is only the second member of the post to receive this award in recent history. Eagles, who earlier this month celebrated his 81st birthday, was born in Saratoga Township in Wilson County. As a teen-ager, he helped his widowed mother raise four other brothers and one sister.

In 1917, Eagles entered N. C. State College. Following his freshman year, he enlisted in the Army as an infantryman, but because of his study of chemistry, he was transferred to the Chemical Warfare division. He was mustered out of service in late 1918 and resumed his education at N.C. State, where he worked his way through college. He graduated in 1921 with highest honors and was valedictorian of his class. He received the B.S. degree in agriculture.

Following his graduation, Eagles served in public schools in North Carolina — as a teacher, principal and coach.

He is married to the former Louise Elizabeth Holland, and they are the parents of two daughters, Mrs. Rosemary Eagles Toumey and Mrs. Joanne Eagles Honeycutt. The Eagles also have two grandchildren.

JAMES W. LANGLEY, JR.

In the mid 1930's, Eagles left teaching and began a career with the U.S. Soil and Conservation Corps. After 30 years service with that agency, he retired in 1966.

Two of the dreams long entertained by Eagles have been achieved. The first was to build a new facility for the Legion Post home. Eagles spearheaded securing land on a then outlying area that is now St. Andrew Street. He designed the building and served as architect and as supervisor for its construction. It was completed in 1966.

The second dream was the establishment of a reconstructed homestead at the new fairgrounds in Greenville. This would depict how local people lived in the late 1800's and early 1900's. Significant reconstruction has already taken place, and more is being added each year, both in buildings, equipment and artifacts.

This project is now Eagles' chief occupation, one that keeps him active and enthusiastic in his eighth decade of life.

Fox Hunting Bill Requested

Pitt County Commissioners are considering a request from several area sportsmen to have the taking of foxes in the county placed under the control and management of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission.

Under the new game laws — passed by the General Assembly last year which become effective July 1 — the only way foxes may be taken is by dogs. The new regulations provide that foxes may be taken by dogs every day in the year, 24 hours per day.

The only exception provided for under the state law would be in the form of a local bill approved by the Legislature.

Under the exception — which the sportsmen are asking — county commissioners would ask members of the General Assembly to introduce a local bill to place foxes under the complete management of the Wildlife Resources Commission.

If such a move were made, the wildlife commission would study the fox population of the county and set appropriate seasons for hunting and trapping.

Informed sources said they believe the fox population in Pitt is adequate to provide for an open season.

Mounting
For the 600 individuals in mental retardation centers where the level of care is high but less is done in testing and treatment, the cost runs more than $24,000 annually for each person.

Cheapest of all state institutions are the prisons where little more than minimal living quarters, essential medical care, and rock-bottom therapeutic or rehabilitation programming are provided at a cost of $30 per day, per inmate. Still, at a cost of $11,000 per year, and with more than 15,000 inmates, that mounts up to a yearly budget of $162.5 million.

With figures like these in hand, the professionals are pushing members of the General Assembly to increase spending now for treatment alternatives and for programs to locate and seek to correct human problems at an earlier age and perhaps trim the big dollar care in the future.

Warsaw Winner Excellence Title

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Warsaw has won a 1980 Governor's Community of Excellence Award, the governor's office announced Tuesday, giving the Duplin County town the award for two years in a row.

Gov. Jim Hunt will present the award to Warsaw officials at a conference in Raleigh this fall. The award is presented to communities of less than 15,000 residents that meet requirements by the state Department of Commerce to make them more competitive in recruiting industry.

O'Neill Throws His Weight Behind Budget Slash

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. has apparently thrown his weight behind a move to direct House committees to slash $6.4 billion from the 1981 budget in an effort to keep it balanced.

O'Neill's support in the parliamentary dispute came Tuesday during a three-hour meeting with key members of the House Appropriations and Budget committees, sources said.

The fate of the order to mandate the cuts, known as reconciliation, is a yardstick of congressional determination to control spending. It has been attacked by influential committee chairmen who dislike its intrusion into their authority over government programs.

The unprecedented order was approved last week as part of the $613.6 billion 1981 balanced budget. It tells congressional committees to report out $6.4 billion in program cuts by July 2.

But the House Appropriations Committee voted late last week to spend $500 million for continuation of Saturday mail deliveries, which would be eliminated under the reconciliation move.

O'Neill declined comment after Tuesday's meeting, but participants in the session said he supports the Budget Committee's position that a vote to continue money for Saturday mail wouldn't free the Post Office Committee from its obligation to save the $500 million.

"Unless the leadership puts its back behind the reconciliation package, we'll be out of balance already," said Rep. Robert N. Giamo, D-Conn., House Budget Committee chairman.

Although the budget for fiscal 1981, which starts Oct. 1, projects a $200 million surplus, many economists believe the deepening recession will force the budget out of balance by cutting tax revenues and raising welfare costs.

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee began considering ways to raise $4.2 billion in new revenues, another part of the reconcilation order.

In a related action, the House began work Tuesday on a $15 billion bill for current-year programs on the verge of running out of money.

The House approved an amendment to cut $100 million from the government's account for buying furniture and added $42 million for emergency food aid to foreign countries under the Food for Peace program.

Jaycees Will Lose Award

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's Jaycees will not receive the coveted presidential citation as the "outstanding state of the decade" at the Jaycees 60th annual national convention, says a spokesman for the organization.

William Babb, public information director of the U.S. Jaycees, said that no state would be given the award, which North Carolina had expected to receive until disclosures of diverted funds and bogus chapters threw the state organization into a scandal.

The award is based primarily on membership expansion and is usually given to the state organization with the highest membership gains.

A purge of the North Carolina membership rolls began last month following allegations that state Jaycee officials diverted an estimated $191,000 in funds earmarked for the North Carolina Burn Center to pay national membership dues. Some Jaycees have said the money was used to pay the dues of "paper" chapters that were created to boost the standing of state Jaycee leaders.

The disclosures led to the withdrawal of former state president J. Harold Herring as a candidate for national Jaycee president. Herring formally stepped down as a candidate Monday. State Jaycees had withdrawn their support of Herring earlier this month.

The national organization is holding its annual gathering in Cleveland this week. And despite the membership problems, North Carolina Jaycee jelly sales were going well at the convention. One Jaycee said it was going for twice the $1 price a jar costs in North Carolina.

The Brevard chapter took 36 cases of grape jelly to the convention, hoping to use any profits to help repay the money diverted from the charity fund. Money for the fund was raised originally by jelly sales in North Carolina.

He reported that the Pitt-Greenville Airport has requested an increase in operating funds from $18,500 to $36,855. In addition, a request was made by the airport for $60,000 in capital funds, he said. Wyatt said the new budget recommends an increase of ten percent in the city's appropriation for airport operations, based on anticipated county action, and no capital funds.

Sheppard Memorial Library has requested an increase of some 20 percent for operating expenses, from $211,702 to $255,594, it was pointed out. The budget recommends an increase of ten percent or a total appropriation of $232,872.

Wyatt mentioned that general revenue sharing, if it is renewed, is expected to be reduced and the city's fund balance is down. In addition, Community Development funding, which provided some $8 million to the city over a five-year period, has expired.

The city needs to look for ways to economize and achieve maximum efficiency, the city spokesman said, mentioning several measures that are proposed. Among them are: limit use of city vehicles; increase cross-utilization of fire-rescue personnel; off-duty court time compensation reduction; elimination of "executive" uniforms; installation of new photocopiers; development of revised service awards program; and development of new automotive maintenance program.

Wyatt said in his budget summary that Greenville's "financial dilemma will continue to worsen until the present level of services are studied in conjunction with lack of revenues to meet service needs." He said it is "strongly recommended that a task force be appointed by the mayor to study all levels of service for city departments and joint agencies. Also, the study should take into consideration revenues and how they can be enlarged."

Charles Horne, GUC director, said that the commission joined with the Council in its efforts to achieve a "bare bones" budget. A break-down by funds for the new budget includes: Electric, $28,113,000, including a power cost of some $20.5 million; Water, $1,756,500, including $962,300 in operating expenses; Sewer, $1,335,800, including $823,000 for operations; and Gas, $4,605,500, including $3.5 million for direct purchase of natural gas.

Estimated turnover from Greenville Utilities to the city will be $1,126,980 in the 1980-81 fiscal year.

Mayor Don McGlothin told the gathering that the city, in its consideration of the budget, is trying to determine what level of service can be provided its citizens. He noted that the goal is to continue the "high level of service" and continue to provide employment opportunities for people working for the city. The mayor said that the city will continue to ask its employees to do "more and more" and search for more ways to be more efficient and productive.

Former city manager Harry Hagerty advised that Wyatt is not faced with anything new and he recalled his years of working with the budget. He urged the mayor and council to "face these difficult days" and "use both ends of the pencil" in tackling budget considerations.

Cox, who did not seek re-election to mayor in the last municipal election, suggested that city managers have been saying the same things about tight budgets for years. He said that the council over the past 15 years were able to keep tax rates down and make the city an attractive place for people to consider.

The former mayor said that a five percent increase was proposed last year but "we said no and held the line." He said that the current proposal of a seven cents or ten percent increase is something that local citizens are not used to. Cox and the council approved a six cents increase, from 64 cents to 70 cents, for the 1978-79 budget, a figure that was only slightly less than ten percent.

Saying that he is publicly opposed to the projected increase, Cox added that it feels the tax structure will cause people to look twice before coming to Greenville. He said the council will find that it can cut budget figures and avoid the seven cents increase.

Patricia Dunn, speaking as president of the League of Women Voters of Greenville/Pitt County, said the "budget shows restraint and is a conservative one. The city staff did a very creditable job given the limitations of monies and the needs for our city."

She said the League urged the city to look twice at its proposal not to fund a new residential garbage truck, supported the city in its appeal of hospitalization rate increases, urged the city to review its projected freeze on positions, hoped the city would consider a fourth bus route in the near future, and questioned the budget allocation for gasoline.

League representative Rhea Markello commented on the Greenville Utilities segment of the budget and said the package "appears compact and conservative."

Former council member Mildred McGrath termed the financial package a "very austere budget" and said "I'm glad you are sitting there, not me." She suggested that the board might be a "penny wise and a pound foolish" in not recommending additional new cars for the police patrol force.

Les Fuchs, president of Alpha Aviation, contended that the airport should not be in competition with private enterprise in regard to its sale of fuel at the facility. He said that Alpha Aviation should have the gas concessions at the airport and he proposed an amendment in the lease arrangement signed by the firm with the airport stipulating the terms and conditions for fuel sales.

Jim Little Jr., chairman of the Airport Authority, said that the authority would like to see Alpha Aviation make a profit, but not at the expense of the tax payers. He said that Alpha Aviation entered into the lease and he contended the firm should abide by the arrangement. Little asked for council consideration of airport budget requests.

W. H. Tripp, who said that he has been in business here for some 42 years, noted that he and other citizens may be forced to move if the tax situation gets any worse. He asked that consideration be given by the board to prevent any tax increase.

Ed Turcotte also urged support for the airport operations and said that he would like to see the city find the best way to operate the facility. He cited the airport as one of the reasons Greenville has been able to attract industry to the area.

The Council will schedule a meeting to adopt the new budget prior to June 30.

Israeli Will Weigh Defense Budget Cut

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — In a bitter dispute that could spark a new government crisis, the Israeli cabinet scheduled a special meeting today to discuss cutting the nation's defense budget to control soaring inflation.

Finance Minister Yigal Hurvitz is demanding a $300 million cut from Israel's $3.6 billion defense outlay. Defense officials, however, warn that the cuts would endanger Israel's military superiority and readiness to fight another war.

The issue of budget cuts prompted last month's resignation of Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, who defied Hurvitz's order to freeze spending on new defense contracts. Prime Minister Menachem Begin, unable to work out a political compromise to replace Weizman, has been serving as his own defense minister.

Israel spends about 30 percent of its national budget on defense, and economists warn that the government's anti-inflation program will fail without significant cuts in the defense sector. The cost of living leaped 9.5 percent in May, adding to pressure on Hurvitz to slash government spending further to reduce the inflation rate.

Sources close to the finance minister have indicated he may resign if Begin's cabinet refuses to make the cuts. But press reports quote top defense ministry officials as threatening to quit if the cuts go through. Observers predicted a bitter cabinet session.

Agriculture Minister Ariel

Sharon, a former general who unsuccessfully sought the defense ministry post, headed a special cabinet committee that recommended where the cuts could be applied.

Among the proposals were cuts in army manpower, training, acquisition of new warplanes and other equipment, and the research and development budget. Sharon also suggested delaying construction of permanent facilities in the Negev Desert to replace Sinai Desert bases being returned to Egypt.

In the current austerity program, the army already has postponed construction of a third air base in the Negev designed to complement the two bases now being built for Israel by the United States.

According to press reports, defense ministry officials are insisting that no more than $80 million can be cut without damaging Israel's military capability.

Members of the opposition Labor Party, including two former army chiefs of staff, have denounced the proposed cuts. Labor Party Chairman Shimon Peres said he was "disturbed" that defense spending was being cut while millions of dollars were being allocated to settlements in the occupied West Bank.

On N.C. Ballot If Nominated

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Board of Elections agreed Tuesday to place the name of independent presidential candidate John Anderson on North Carolina's ballot this fall, subject to his formal nomination by a state convention.

The board also granted approval for ballot space to the Socialist Workers Party and the Citizens Party, a nationwide group that endorses consumer and environmental issues.

Mark Aprea, an attorney on Anderson's Washington staff, said the Independents for Anderson of North Carolina would hold a state convention in the Research Triangle Park June 18 to nominate Anderson and a running mate.

The group presented petitions Tuesday bearing the signatures of 19,400 registered voters.

The November ballot also will include candidates for the Democratic, Republican and Libertarian parties.

Carter Forces Breeze Through Platform-Drafting

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's supporters are easily outvoting backers of challenger Sen. Edward M. Kennedy in the shaping of a 1980 Democratic platform that appears bound to differ markedly from the party's 1976 issues document.

In fact, many of the positions espoused by that 1976 Carter-backed platform — including continued price controls on energy, a major jobs program to reduce unemployment and the suggestion of wage-price restraints — seem closer to current Kennedy proposals. The 15-member platform drafting subcommittee, on which only five Kennedy supporters sit, met again today behind closed doors to continue its drafting job. Efforts by Kennedy forces to open the sessions to the public have been blocked by the Carter majority on the panel.

On Tuesday, the subcommittee rejected the Massachusetts Democrat's proposed economic program in favor of a staff-prepared outline that generally praises Carter's economic policies and urges their continuation. The vote was 9-3, with two members absent and one — Gov. Richard Riley of South Carolina, the chairman — not voting.

"It's basically a Carter document," said former senator Dick Clark of Iowa. And Riley, a Carter backer, agreed by saying "I know of no major differences" between the outline and a Carter-submitted platform proposal.

However, the staff outline, which is subject to numerous revisions, goes one step further than Carter on the subject of tax cuts.

It seeks to commit the party to backing a tax cut in 1981 "when inflationary pressures will be reduced." Carter has said he is considering proposing a tax reduction in 1981, but has stopped short of committing his administration to such a move.

Kennedy's proposals included wage-price controls and a $12-billion anti-recession program to create 800,000 additional jobs — positions opposed by Carter, whose policies have emphasized spending restraints and concentrated on reducing inflation.

Kennedy supporters vowed to try again when the full platform committee votes on the platform draft this weekend and, if necessary, to take their fight to the floor of the Democratic Convention which meets in New York City Aug. 11-14.

"Obviously, taking some minority planks to the floor of the convention is a very real possibility," said Peter Edelman, Kennedy's chief issues adviser.

But, with Carter forces in full command of both the drafting panel and the full platform committee, and the president holding a lopsided majority of delegates, Kennedy supporters are not overly optimistic of prevailing.

Kennedy has vowed to press his presidential campaign all the way to the convention and to do what he can to try to shape the Democratic platform to reflect his own positions.

While Carter and Kennedy agree on many issues, Carter forces are digging in their heels on some of the areas of major difference.

Democratic party officials first said that the drafting unit would use the 1976 platform as its basic outline.

That prospect delighted some Kennedy strategists. "That would be interesting," said aide Jim Flug. "It would put the Carter people in the position of having to vote against the 1976 platform."

It was a reference to a number of steps taken by the administration — such as decontrol of oil and natural gas — that run contrary to the 1976 platform.

However, the staff outline the finally surfaced did not contain any of holdover issues from 1976 that Carter forces would have to repudiate.

The drafting panel refused to make public the staff outline, which Riley called "a work of drafting which has no official status." However, a copy was obtained independently by the Associated Press.

Anderson Says He Alone Stands In Reagan's Way

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer
John B. Anderson says that he alone stands in the way of the election of Ronald Reagan, "the former leading player for 18th Century Fox," as the nation's next president.

Anderson wrote off President Carter's chances when he declared in Hartford, Conn., Tuesday that "I am not in the race, then...Reagan can be picking his cabinet."

The Illinois congressman based his assessment on a selective interpretation of national polling data released earlier in the day. But the fact remained that both the Gallup and Roper polls showed Carter within narrow striking distance of Reagan while Anderson was still in the preferential cellar.

Anderson chose to point to Gallup's figures showing that the president's approval rating has fallen to 33 percent, compared with 61 percent last December. And that, said Anderson, means that unless he pursues his independent candidacy, Reagan "won't have any opposition, he is so far ahead of Jimmy Carter."

But despite the decline in Carter's approval rating, Gallup showed the president in a virtual dead heat with Reagan, whether or not Anderson is in the race. In a two-way race, Reagan led Carter 45 percent to 42 percent; in a three-way battle, it was Reagan 36, Carter 35 and Anderson 23 percent. Given the poll's margin of error, that makes it too close to call in either case. The Roper survey gave Reagan 40 percent to Carter's 36 in a two-way campaign. Curiously, Roper found that throwing Anderson into the equation would hurt Carter a bit more than Reagan while the Gallup poll found the reverse. Roper's three-way figures were Reagan 34,

Carter 29 and Anderson 20. In other developments: —Reagan, in New York, met with a just-formed business advisory council of 40 top executives, including William M. Batten, chairman of the New York Stock Exchange. The prospective Republican nominee headed to Washington today, but planned no public appearances until an evening fundraiser in behalf of Citizens for the Republic, a conservative issues and lobbying group which he used as a political power base between presidential campaigns. —President Carter's backers easily outvoted Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's camp during the initial drafting session Tuesday for the 1980 Democratic platform. The 15-member drafting subcommittee, on which only five Kennedy supporters sit, met again today behind closed doors, but it was clear the document would differ markedly from the 1976 issues statement by espousing the more conservative economic policies now favored by Carter. —The Carter-Mondale campaign invited all of the President's nearly 2,000 convention delegates to visit Washington next month for pep sessions which almost doubtlessly will include a drop-by at the White House. Two obvious purposes: to keep them in line against Kennedy attempts to raid their ranks and to collect intelligence which might be useful in the fall campaign. —Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee predicted a landslide victory for Reagan which would bring with it GOP control of the House and Senate. "This is going to be the biggest Republican year since 1952," he said.

Anderson, who headed into Ohio today, said in Hartford Tuesday that Reagan threatens to lead the nation into "the biggest arms race we've ever seen." And Anderson dropped by two centuries the name of the Hollywood studio for which he said Reagan was "the former leading player...18th Century Fox."

Companion Fleed A Bizarre Life

NEW YORK (AP) — Elvis Presley's companion for the last four years of his life has broken her silence about their relationship, claiming she fled his "bizarre existence" to save herself.

Actress Linda Thompson, in a copyright interview in the July issue of McCall's, said she tried in vain to get the singer to stop taking drugs.

"He was hooked on the sleeping pills, and it was like fighting city hall, because you've got Elvis who has this insatiable desire for downers and doctors who are willing to give them to him, and yet you argue with these people and get nowhere...I tried everything," she told the women's magazine.

While maintaining that "being loved by this man was unbelievable," Miss Thompson said his pill-dependent lifestyle of being "up all night and sleep all day and be totally removed from the rest of the world" was the reason for her leaving Presley without saying good-bye.

South African Police Warn Will 'Shoot To Kill'

By JAMES R. PEIPERT
Associated Press Writer
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—South Africa's police commissioner warned today his men will shoot to kill anyone found looting, burning or endangering lives, just as they did in racial clashes that reportedly left more than 15 dead and 100 wounded.

"This is what had happened in those cases where people had been killed in police action last night," Gen. Mike Geldenhuys told reporters as he defended the reaction of his forces who used shotguns, clubs and rubber bullets against rioters Tuesday in the mixed-race townships around Cape Town.

Geldenhuys did not give casualty figures for the violence, which erupted the day after police wounded 35 persons demonstrating on the fourth anniversary of the bloody Soweto race riots. One newspaper called the latest outbreak the worst since then.

The looting, arson, stone-throwing and vandalism erupted throughout the Cape Peninsula. One mixed-race area known as the Cape Flats was said to be "reasonably quiet" today after being held virtually under siege. The road to Cape Town's D.F. Malan Airport was strewn with burning tires, makeshift wooden barricades and rocks as bands of youths stoned passing motorists.

"People were killed and wounded in clashes between the police and colored people in Elsies River, Bonteheuwel, Ravensmead and Retreat in the Cape Town area today," Capt. Quentin Papentus of the Police Directorate of Public Relations said. "No further details are immediately available."

The South African Press Association, quoting the Afrikaans-language newspaper Die Burger, said at least eight persons were killed and about 50 wounded in clashes with police in the mixed-race townships. The Cape Argus newspaper reported 14 dead and more than 100 wounded. But SAPA said an official source told the Cape Times "that he believed well over 15 people had died in the shooting in a number of separate incidents."

Sapa, the country's domestic news agency, said all official channels to sources of information about the number of people killed or wounded in the unrest were later closed off to the press on police instructions. The police director issued a ban Monday night on journalists entering "troubled" areas without special police permission, journalists entering "troubled"

The violence was connected with the fourth anniversary Monday of rioting in the black ghetto of Soweto outside Johannesburg which kicked off an eight-month nationwide upheaval in 1976 and 1977. An official report said at least 575 people died in the troubles, but black journalists estimated the death toll at more than 700.

The first death reported as this tense, white-ruled nation marked the Soweto anniversary was a white police constable who was stabbed to death Sunday night as he helped disperse a group of mixed-race rioters in Cape Town.

Monday night police opened fire with shotguns to put down disturbances in the mixed-race township of Noordgesig adjoining Soweto and in black townships around Bloemfontein, wounding at least 35 persons. On Tuesday the violence shifted to the Cape Peninsula, with its large population of mixed-race people, or "coloreds" as the white separatist government calls them. Die Burger, published in Cape Town and one of the country's leading Afrikaans newspapers, called the rioting in the colored townships the worst since 1976. SAPA said the Cape Flats area was under "a virtual state of siege, with crowds of rioters stoning cars, looting shops, burning buildings and blocking roads with barricades of flaming car tires." By sunset, traffic police had sealed off the Cape Flats area in an apparent effort to end the chaos, but pillars of smoke reportedly climbed hundreds of yards into the air from fires. One witness told the Cape Times the blazes "seemed to appear all over the cordoned-off area." Brig. J.F. Roussouw, commissioner of police in the western Cape, said "criminal elements" were "looting and setting fire to property belonging to their own people." Riot police in camouflage uniforms roved from one trouble spot to another, dispersing crowds with volleys of tear gas, SAPA said. A police spokesman said the riot squads also used "rubber bullets and birdshot" and "several baton charges" to quell the disturbances.

Shops in Elsies River, another mixed-race township near Cape Town, were set afire and looted, and the owner of at least one shop was attacked by a mob, SAPA reported. The owner fled with his family to an adjoining house, the agency said. Firemen called out to fight blazes in Elsies River were warned by riot police not to enter the area for their own safety. Passengers arriving at D.F. Malan Airport watched as vehicles smashed by stones drove up to the terminal building, some carrying injured people, SAPA said. The road to the airport, Settlers Way, passes by the mixed-race suburb of Athlone, and SAPA said it was littered with stones, burning tires and makeshift wooden booms laid across the road to block traffic. South African police patrolled the airport area, and police vans covered in protective wire mesh transported passengers to and from the main terminal, the agency said.

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — How does bureaucracy work? George Anger thinks he knows.

Anger, who is retired from the Navy, was laid off for a couple of weeks from his job at a Cleveland County textile plant. He applied at the Employment Security Commission for unemployment benefits.

Anger was told that, because North Carolina treats military retirement benefits as income, his unemployment insurance check would be small. It was — for $1.

That was bad enough, Anger said, but then the state agency said it had made an error and demanded the money be refunded.

Anger did, returning the original check, without endorsing it.

Unborn Child Unprotected, Rules Court Of Appeals

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's Court of Appeals has rejected a legal challenge of state-funded abortions for low-income women, ruling Tuesday that constitutional protections do not necessarily extend to an unborn child.

The unanimous ruling by a three-judge panel, at least temporarily, cleared the way for the state to continue its $1 million-a-year abortion program.

Apex lawyer Paul Stam Jr., who had appealed an adverse lower court ruling to the appellate panel, said he would seek a review by the state Supreme Court.

Stam had sued state officials in 1978 in an effort to have the state abortion program declared unlawful.

contending it deprived the fetus of the right to life and to due process of law.

In an opinion written by Judge Frank M. Parker, the appeals court said historical "precedent persuades us that it was not the intent of those who drafted the Constitution to protect the unborn in the full constitutional sense ...

The general conclusion of legal scholars is that the abortion of an unborn child was not homicide at common law, and that consensual abortion was not a crime at all ...

"Our ruling ... in no way implies that the unborn child is to be accorded no rights at all. The General Assembly may, in the recognition of the potentiality of life, continue to grant the rights and privileges to the unborn which it chooses," the court said.

"We hold only that the protections (of the state Constitution) do not extend to the fetus so as to prohibit the funding here at issue."

In general, the state court's ruling concurs with a 1977 decision by the U.S. Supreme Court that a fetus is not a person in the legal sense.

Abortion rights advocates praised the decision Tuesday.

"If abortion funding was stopped, then poor women would not have the freedom of choice in deciding whether or not to seek an abortion," said Pat Bullard, executive director of the North Carolina Social Services Association.

John Swem of Greensboro, a spokesman for the anti-abortion North Carolina Right to Life organization, said the decision showed the need for an amendment to the U.S. Constitution to protect fetal life.

"This will add to the drive for that constitutional amendment by underscoring at least the courts' interpretation that the documents do not protect the lives of unborn human beings," Swem said.

Small Towns Fight Water Treatment

By T. LEE HUGHES
Associated Press Writer
SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Thomas Micheel, mayor of tiny Germantown, Ill., didn't want to wait for the legislature to act on a bill about water chlorination.

So one day in April he marched into the Germantown water plant, disconnected the chlorination machine and locked it up in the village hall.

"God gave us this good water out of the ground. I've never seen such beautiful water," says the 56-year-old first-term mayor.

But the water contains manganese, and Micheel said the chlorine was reacting with it to turn the water in this town of 1,200 "black and dirty."

"I had everybody on my tail, their clothes were dirty and they couldn't drink the water," Micheel said. So, "I hid the machine."

At the other end of the state, near the Wisconsin border, the village president of Orangeville, population about 550, has refused even to initiate chlorination.

"We never have and never will, under present circumstances," said J. Milton Bostian. "A mandated chlorination rule is just plain nonsense." Since December 1975, all Illinois communities have been required to chlorinate their public water supplies, under a rule adopted by the state Pollution Control Board.

Chlorine, a disinfectant, is used to inactivate bacteria that cause water-borne diseases such as cholera and typhoid.

But Germantown and Orangeville are among hundreds of little towns and subdivisions that get their water from wells. And in some of those communities, local officials believe the purity of well water makes chlorination unnecessary.

At Bostian's request, Democratic state Sen. James Gitz introduced legislation last year to exempt small communities from chlorination requirements. The bill has passed the Senate and House in different forms, but a final version has yet to be ironed out.

In its present form, the measure would exempt communities of fewer than 5,000 people from chlorinating, as long as their water is proven safe, and standby chlorination systems would have to be maintained for emergencies. In Illinois, most towns that size get their water from wells rather than surface water, such as rivers.

The state Environmental Protection Agency, which strongly opposes the proposed exemption, estimates 1,200 communities would be exempted.

Bostian estimates between 90 and 100 water services are already refusing to chlorinate.

Ira Markwood, manager of the state EPA's Public Water Supplies division, said towns refusing to chlorinate can be fined up to $10,000 by the Pollution Control Board, plus $1,000 for each day the violation continues.

He said the board has not yet decided to act against any of the communities, pending results of legislative action.

But Markwood said local officials who refuse to chlorinate are doing a disservice to their townspeople. They may not want to drink chlorinated water themselves, he said, but "I see no reason why they should force that on other people such as children who have no choice in the matter."

Markwood said the practice of chlorinating public water supplies began in the early part of this century. As a result, he said, "There has been no major epidemic of a disease such as typhoid" in Illinois since 1939.

Markwood said local officials opposed to chlorination are using the absence of such diseases as an argument against chlorination.

"It's like saying polio vaccine has stopped polio epidemics, so we can stop vaccinating against polio," Markwood said.

Markwood conceded that if chlorine is improperly used, or combines with certain substances already in the water, it can cause unpleasant odors, taste and color.

He also acknowledged the EPA believes trihalomethanes, substances formed by chlorine reacting with decaying vegetable matter in water, may increase the risk of cancer if drunk over long periods of time.

But Markwood said steps

"can be taken to reduce or eliminate from water the unpleasant side-effects of chlorine. And he said the tiny risk of cancer must be balanced against the greater threat of water-borne diseases."

Markwood agreed that well water may be less likely to cause disease than surface water, but noted that the distribution systems carrying any water into homes are still open to contamination.

"I would like to see every bit of water going from a water supply chlorinated," said Markwood.

But Bostian said: "We have excellent water. To put chlorine in it would downgrade our water. Not one person in our town wants our water monkeyed with, because we have been drinking it throughout our history."

And Micheel said that since he disconnected the chlorine machine the quality of his community's water has improved:

"I took away the machine and I brought the town good water. God is on my side, because it's just cleaned our water up."

Replica Hall Celebrating

CARBON COPY — The front of the Henry Ford Museum is an exact replica of Philadelphia's Independence Hall. When this building went up in Dearborn, Mich., in 1929, workmen were careful to include all the flaws of the original.

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — When the Fife and Drum Music Muster opens on July 4 here with parades and music reminiscent of 1776, celebrating the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, an onlooker might well imagine he was in Philadelphia, where it all began.

The Let Freedom Ring ceremony will take place in front of the Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn, an exact replica of Philadelphia's Independence Hall.

In 1928, when industrialist Henry Ford was planning a home in Dearborn for his large collection of Americana, he met Detroit architect Robert Derrick and asked if he had any ideas on design for the proposed museum, relates museum editor Geoffrey Upward, who recently completed a book on the history of the museum.

Derrick suggested copying Philadelphia's Independence Hall, telling Ford "It is a wonderful building and beautiful architecture and it certainly would be appropriate for a collection of Americana."

Ford was so excited by the idea that he commissioned Derrick to complete the design, Upward says. For the front portion of the museum, Derrick created replicas of Independence Hall and its two adjacent buildings, Congress Hall and Old City Hall.

They are exact, down to the last mistake, Upward points out.

After obtaining plans for the buildings from the city of Philadelphia, Derrick noticed that Independence Hall had numerous structural mistakes. Pilasters, one over the other, were off-center by 1 or 2 inches and windows were off-center and not at the same height. Doors weren't in the center as they should be.

"Derrick called the mistakes to Ford's attention and suggested building it right this time," says Upward. "But Ford wouldn't have any variations. He said, 'Oh, no! Make it exactly the same; put in all the mistakes.'"

Interior details of Independence Hall also are duplicated exactly.

Derrick originally planned the main exhibition area to be two floors with a balcony. He also planned a large basement for storage. Ford didn't like either idea.

"I wouldn't have that," Ford told Derrick, according to Upward. "You have to do the whole thing over again and put it on one floor with no balconies and no basements."

In Philadelphia, the tower is at the back of the building on the square. Ford turned the building around to put the symbolic tower out front on Village Road.

The choice of Independence Hall was quite appropriate for Ford's collection, Upward notes. Today, Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village make up the largest indoor-outdoor museum in the world and the largest private museum of Americana. The museum holds major collections in transportation, agriculture, home arts, power, lighting, communications and decorative arts.

Czechs Seen Still Struggling

By STEPHEN H. MILLER
Associated Press Writer
PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — After more than three decades of communism, Czechoslovakia still struggles with internal dissent and an ailing economy.

Invaded by the Soviet Union and some of its Warsaw Pact neighbors in 1968 to stop a loosening of Communist controls, the country now appears on the verge of locking itself even tighter to Soviet interests.

Czechoslovak planners concede privately that no real economic innovations are in sight, despite public talk of experiment and hints of new approaches to years of economic problems.

"There are none, really. It is too soon," one says in a private meeting in one of the famed 16th century buildings Prague is struggling to protect from poor maintenance and almost uncontrolled pollution.

"After the Spartakiade, I think living standards here are going to do down very sharply," a Czechoslovak dissident says, referring to the mass gymnastic festival held every five years in Prague and due here again the end of June.

"Meat is already hard to get and you can stand in line for two hours to get bread."

Czechoslovakia was one of Europe's most advanced industrial countries before World War II.

Now, Czechoslovak officials are battling to improve an economy they say no longer has enough workers to go around and which last year wasn't able to export enough to meet its cash needs even though exports, mostly to socialist allies, were up 64 percent.

Plagued with shortages of items as common as matches, toothpaste and ink, Czechoslovakia ran at least 36,000 tons short of meat last year by official accounts and no improvement is in sight this year.

"There is a completely developed black market system here," one foreign businessman says. "You can get almost anything, but you can't just go into a store and ask for it."

Meat supplies in Prague, residents report, are improved by passing bottles of whiskey to butchers. Bureaucratic red tape can be cut with gifts of candy. A table in a restaurant can be had for packs or cartons of Western cigarettes.

Prices are low, by Western standards, but popular goods are in short supply. Medical care is free, but often readily available only for patients bearing gifts.

"Our radio announced not long ago that the best Tesla record player is now available on the black market," a Czechoslovak teacher says.

"There are rules against putting things aside for anyone," he adds. "But I can call you and tell you to come right away."

In March, Czechoslovakia signed a new trade agreement with the Soviet Union, hailing it as the biggest one ever and a pact which will set the economic tone for at least a decade.

The pact is expected to bring still more interlocking of the two economies in an effort to produce new efficiencies in Czechoslovakia and the East European trading bloc, Comecon.

Premier Lubomir Strougal later predicted a "marked deepening and specialization and cooperation in all branches of the economy, especially in engineering and chemistry."

He called the March agreement an "expression of the effort of both countries to combine material resources, scientific technology and production potential for the joint solution of large economic tasks."

Some Western diplomatic analysts see the pact and other domestic economic moves as a sign of orthodoxy in a country whose last real reform attempts brought in Soviet tanks.

"They've definitely moved to a more orthodox line in their approach to the economy," one says.

"They're locking themselves further into the Comecon and limiting their prospects of dealing with the West."

Calls for better planning and better management have been accompanied by calls for cost-cutting and sacrifice in a country where the average wage amounts to about $250 a month.

The government wants a 10 percent cut in apartment house maintenance and proposes to put up to 10 percent of the country's office workers into production jobs.

A 10 percent cut has been decreed in business-travel funds and a reduction ordered in capital investments this year.

To keep money at home, officials have also said they want to end construction projects by foreigners.

Yugoslavs built a new Prague headquarters for Czechoslovakia's weapons export enterprise, Swedes built a department store, Hungarians put up a hotel in Bratislava and Poles are currently at work on a new meatpacking complex.

Czechoslovakia cut its gasoline consumption by 8.4 percent last year, largely by boosting the price 50 percent to 7.5 crowns a liter — the equivalent of about $2.65 a gallon — and imposing new speed limits.

Officials want a 20 percent cut in gasoline consumption this year and Prague traffic looks distinctly thinner than it did a year ago. Residents say police have helped by cracking down on traffic offenses and levying fines on the spot.

Prague's relations with Washington, never especially good, are at another low point over the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan and a U.S. congressional plan to sell stockpiled Czechoslovak gold to settle American claims dating back to the postwar Communist takeover.

Relations with Britain appear to have taken a turn downward in feuding linked to the support of British academics for Czechoslovak dissidents.

There have been no major crackdowns on dissidents since last October's subversion trial of playwright Vaclav Havel and five other human rights activists who were sentenced to prison for up to five years.

But detentions continue, dissidents remain closely watched, their gatherings disrupted, their supporters sometimes expelled from the country.

Some dissidents predict that a decline in living standards would upset tacit agreements by which the country has lived since the 1968 invasion.

One argues that it was "a sort of agreement between the lines" that the government would offer economic stability and improvements in return for ideological peace.

Privately, Czechoslovak experts argue that the country still has unused reserves and that it can still produce an annual economic growth rate of five percent a year.

One notes that the gasoline campaign has been successful enough that the country can now sell gasoline abroad, "to anybody who wants it."

But in Prague, one woman reports getting in line before breakfast for a chance to buy velvet material.

Workers replacing downtown trolley-car tracks put new rails on ties made of roughly cut logs, replacing ties made of concrete.

High over the city, on a bluff overlooking the Vltava River, the last red paint is peeling from a star on the site of a now-vanished statue of the late Soviet leader Josef Stalin.

A white cross has been painted atop part of the statue's old base — just like the crosses painted on top of Soviet tank turrets in 1968.

Claim Smallpox Now Eradicated

GENEVA (AP) — The assembly of the United Nations World Health Organization officially declared recently that smallpox has been eradicated.

The last recorded case occurred in October 1977 in Somalia, in the horn of Africa.

WHO began its intensified small pox eradication program in 1967. In that year there were an estimated 10 million cases worldwide with an estimated death toll of 2 million.

During the 12 years of the eradication campaign, some 200,000 local health workers were employed in over 40 countries. They were supervised by 700 international staff. About 2.4 million doses of vaccine were used.

The cost of the campaign was $300 million. The estimated annual saving to the world is $1 billion.

Suddenly, A Door To Hope Was Open

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — The Hernandez family tried in vain for more than 10 years to get their youngest daughter, Teresita, out of Cuba. They finally did after the door to Cuba opened a crack and thousands streamed out.

But Rev. Francisco Acosta came back to his church on Mother's Day without his mother he had prayed would show up in Key West on a boat he had hired.

Ramon Quirantes took a boat to the Cuban port of Mariel to bring back some of his family, waited 18 days, then became frightened and returned empty-handed.

Thousands of families in Miami's teeming Cuban community have gravitated between hope and fear, joy and disappointment, frustration and anger.

Now, Cuban-Americans here are turning to the task of fitting the newcomers into Miami's economic life. The job is huge, but optimism prevails among the refugees of the 1960s who themselves fled Cuba with only the clothes on their backs and helped build Miami into a $1 billion-a-year economy.

Tony Ojeda, assistant to the Dade County manager, says about 45,000 new refugees — almost half of the more than 100,000 who have entered the United States aboard the "Freedom Flotilla" during the past two months — are in the Miami area. Many have relatives here.

"They are doubling up," says Ojeda. "Their families are providing shelter, clothing and transportation. The only things they are eligible for are work permits and food stamps."

The Latin Chamber of Commerce has established a job bank and for a start has found employment for about 1,000 refugees. The largest Hispanic radio station in Miami is trying to match refugees with jobs.

Ojeda says there are no federal aid programs but that the Cuban economy is large and self-sufficient, with major interests in construction, retailing and banking. The Cuban and South American interests account for perhaps 25 percent to 30 percent of Miami's economy. About a half million Cubans live in Dade County, making up one-third of its population of 1.5 million.

Children were being enrolled in schools, 1,600 in May alone, the equivalent of two elementary schools.

Ojeda and Reginald Walters, director of the Dade County Planning Department, say housing, training, educational, health and social services are being strained. At some point the strain will become critical unless federal aid is forthcoming, says Ojeda.

Walters feels the impact of the new refugees will be less severe than most people assume, "mainly because Cubans do a fine job of taking care of their own families." But in the short-term, Walters believes, the refugees will aggravate the housing situation, already tight because of high mortgage rates and the recession.

Construction is lagging, which in turn cuts down job opportunities.

The unemployment rate in the county is 6 percent, higher among blacks. Walters forecasts tough competition for jobs at the unskilled and semi-skilled levels between blacks and Cubans.

The atmosphere wasn't eased by black rioting in Miami last month. The violence was triggered by the acquittal of four white policemen accused of beating a black insurance executive to death. But black leaders said tensions ran high because of sizable black unemployment.

Nevertheless, for those Cuban families who brought out their relatives, this has been a time of joy.

Matilde Hernandez, a Miami real estate agent, hadn't seen her sister Teresita for 10 years until the day Matilde and her husband Juan met her aboard a shrimp boat in the Cuban port of Mariel, from where the latest exodus had departed.

The sisters' father, Julian, died five years ago, without seeing Teresita since he and other members of the family fled from Cuba in 1969.

Matilde, now sharing her home with Teresita and Teresita's husband and two daughters, says the suffering her family went through to get out of Cuba was worth it.

"I remember that when I was in Cuba myself, I used to go to bed and dream I was eating a baked potato or canned peaches or something like that," she says.

"And they don't let you believe in God. The youth there, they don't have any dreams. You have to live it to realize it."

She says things may be difficult here "with so many people coming in, especially in this area and especially with American people, but they have been so wonderful. I think any place you go, if you want to work hard, you'll make it."

Matilde and her husband waited 24 days at Mariel for her sister, while the Castro government was allocating about 30 percent of the boat space to relatives of Cubans in America and the rest to persons the government chose.

"I remember seeing one lady crying ... I won't forget her face. She was crying because she was leaving her children in Cuba and the government put her on the boat and she didn't want to leave the country."

"I remember a lot of young faces. They were all hungry faces, because the country is much worse off than when I left."

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — N.C. Hens: market steady to lower. Supply moderate. Demand light. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at 9 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly today, retreating from its highest level in almost four months.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which closed Tuesday at its highest point since last Feb. 20, dropped back 2.22 to 877.05 in the first half hour today.

Losers took a slight lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

In the economic news, the government issued a revised report that the gross national product grew at a 1.2 percent annual rate in the first quarter of the year, after subtracting for inflation.

That was slightly better than the 0.6 percent growth rate reported for the quarter last month.

But it is generally agreed that GNP data for the current quarter will show a sharp decline. And most debate among analysts now focuses on how deep the recession will be and how long it will continue.

Today's early prices included International Business Machines, up 1/4 at 59 1/2; Union Carbide, down 1/4 at 44, and Valero Energy, up 3/4 at 19 1/4.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average gained 1.54 to 879.27.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 5-4 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 41.99 million shares, against 36.19 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index eased .01 to 66.25.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.69 at 288.90.

ered. She sometimes had to tell a newcomer to the recovery room staff, "No, he's not having a reaction. Dear. He's just cold. Let's wrap him up."

She observed us to make sure our color was good. She watched us like babies to make sure we didn't spit up and choke. She saw Jo our needs when we were unable to see to them ourselves.

She's retired now and looking forward to more time for travel and other pursuits of pleasure with her family. She and her husband of 48 and a half years, Edgar Allen Sr., a retired carpenter, live on Main Street in Winterville. They have four grown children, all living in the Greenville area — E. T., Bobby and Billy Allen and Mrs. Patricia Johnson — and seven grandchildren.

"Mrs. Allen is missed at the hospital." Hospital Director Jack Richardson said. The coffee shop people don't know what to think since they can't set their watches by her 10 a. m. visit for a hotdog."

Richardson presented Mrs. Allen a plaque of appreciation for her 28 years of service to the hospital. Medical Staff Chief Dr. William Bost and Hospital Board Chairman Harry Leslie also praised her loyal and dedicated service to the sick and injured of Pitt and surrounding counties.

Hospital.....

Commission on the Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities will be conducted here July 28 and 29. This is the local rehab unit's first such survey.

ECU Medical School Associate Dean for Administration Ben Weaver reported on the medical school's reimbursement of the hospital for costs incurred because teaching is going on. He presented a check for $500,000-plus and said the medical school has this fiscal year paid the hospital more than $850,000.

Trustee Dr. John Wooten asked that he go on record as asking for "more detailed analysis" of the medical school payments to the hospital.

Trustee J. B. Kittrell asked why the hospital's contract with the pathologists practicing there is being reviewed so soon. Richardson said it has to do with billing procedures as approved by the federal government and to be sure cost reimbursements stay in effect.

Trustee Noah Lee Jr. complimented the hospital publications office on the consistent quality of its medical center reports. He also asked about political action by hospital trustees and was told that trustees can individually work for hospital association-promoted causes, but that the board cannot as a whole.

The education program prior to the meeting was given by Ed Hackett, Patient Accounts Manager.

 East Carolina University banged out 16 hits against three Campbell pitchers last night and romped to a 13-3 victory over the Camels in the N.C. Collegiate Summer League.

Bill Wilder scattered seven hits in getting his third win against no losses in the contest. Unfortunately, two of the hits were homers, and they accounted for all three of the Camel runs.

But the Pirate hitting more than made up for the difference, as the Bucs picked up two homers of their own, one a grand-slam by Mike Sage, and the other a two-run shot by Todd Hendley. The Pirates also added three doubles, one each by Robert Wells, Charlie Smith and Jay Carraway to go along with 11 singles.

For Coach Gary Overton, the victory, the fourth in a row, was sweet. And he lauded both the pitching effort of Wilder and hitting of the rest of the team.

"Bill pitched an outstanding ball game," Overton said.

"But we have to give a lot of credit to our offense. We hit the ball well. We've seemed to hit the ball well all year, and these last four, we've played real good defense too.

"Having a well-rounded team will be an asset. Now if our young pitchers can come through we'll have a successful season."

Overton feels that all four of the wins, one over Louisburg and three in a row over Campbell, are building momentum for the Pirates. "We've progressed in every game, building momentum."

Campbell started the scoring in the top of the first inning, pushing over two unearned runs against Wilder and the Pirates. After John Baldwin reached on an error, Herbie Williams hit into a fielder's choice. Then, with two away, Tom Montgomery slashed a homer over the fence in left for a 2-0 lead.

East Carolina pushed over three in the bottom of the second to grab the lead. Charlie Smith led off with a double and with one down, Carraway singled to center, scoring Smith. Wells followed with a double off the left field fence. A wild pitch brought in courtesy runner Jeffrey Warren, and Sage's hit to center scored Wells for a 3-2 lead.

Campbell tied it up on another home run ball in the fourth inning. This was one dished up to Ron Brooks, who sent it out in left center for a 3-3 deadlock.

The tie was quickly broken by the Pirates, who pushed over two unearned runs in the bottom of the inning, regaining the lead, 5-3. With one down, Wells singled and Sorrell reached on an error. After a popup, both Hendley and John Hallow delivered run-scoring singles, bringing over Wells and Sorrell.

The Pirates picked up two more insurance runs in the sixth on a two-run homer. Sorrell led off the frame, reaching on a hit to deep short. Then, after one out, Hendley blasted the ball out of the park in left, running the score to 6-3.

East Carolina put it away in the seventh, scoring six times. Carraway doubled off the third baseman's glove and Sorrell was hit by a pitch. Kelly Robinette reached on an infield hit, loading the bases. Courtesy runner Warren scored on a wild pitch, and Hendley walked. That set it up for Sage to hit a grand-slam homer down the right field line, running it to 12-3.

John Floyd kept it going, with a single, and Bobby Hill came on as a runner for him. Pete Persico singled and Hill stole third, scoring when Carraway reached on an error.

Hendley led the Pirate hitting with three, while Sorrell, Hallow, Carraway and Wells each had two. Brooks led Campbell with three.

East Carolina is now 5-3, while the Camels drop to 2-6.

The Pirates return to action on Thursday, hosting N.C. Wesleyan at 7:30 p.m. at Harrison Field.

THE Fight Rumors, Speculation Abound

MONTREAL (AP) — A strenuous, two-hour heart checkup undergone by Roberto Duran and Sugar Ray Leonard's announcement that he had had a virus on and off for a week have fired the speculation and rumors that are a part of any major fight.

And their scheduled 15-round bout Friday night at Olympic Stadium, for Leonard's World Boxing Council welterweight championship, is a major fight on the key levels of money, fan anticipation and skill of the fighters.

"There will be a press conference to explain why he will not be with us this afternoon," was the announcement over the public address system Tuesday at the Paul Sauve Centre where Duran was to train.

Reporters and cameramen started to hustle and push their way to the site of the news conference when Duran made a dramatic entrance, quickly turning the boos of disappointed fans into cheers.

Dressed in snow white togs, the Panamanian shadow-boxed for several minutes while bantering with the crowd, then put in several strenuous minutes of rope-skipping. He left the arena, his arms raised in a sign of triumph, a picture of health.

examination Tuesday morning at the Institute of Cardiology here. That information was quickly followed by the announcement that Duran was in perfect health.

About 1 1/2 hours earlier, Leonard said at a press conference following a light workout that "I had a slight virus, nothing serious. I had it on and off for about a week, but it's no problem now. I had no fever at all, just a little sore throat. That's all. It's no problem now."

Leonard said his weight was fine, about 148, just one pound over the welterweight limit, but that he had been down to 143 last week and felt weak. He took a brief break from working out.

As for Duran, Bob Arum, co-promoting the closed circuit telecast, said, "Duran's EKG proved to be inconclusive. Some of the squiggly lines weren't right."

Noone seems to be sure why, but Dr. Guillermo Gonzalez, a leading cardiologist from Panama, said after Tuesday's intense examination, "There was no sickness, just a doubt. And that doubt was cleared to our satisfaction."

Gonzalez was called to Montreal by Carlos Eleta,

Beard Advances To To Boxing Semis

ATLANTA (AP) — It didn't take Jackie Beard long to advance to the semifinals of the bantamweight division of the U.S. Olympic Boxing Trials.

"The fight went faster than I expected," Beard said Tuesday night after landing only two left hooks in disposing of Sammy Fuentes of Galena Park, Texas, at 1:31 of the opening round. "I didn't even work up a sweat."

Beard, a classy fighter who would have ranked among the favorites for a gold medal at the Olympics in Moscow, sent Fuentes to the canvas in the first 30 seconds. The referee stopped the bout when he had Fuentes draped over the ropes with the left hook that ended the bout after only 91 seconds.

Beard of Jackson, Tenn., won AAU titles in each of the last three years. The 18-year-old fighter won the gold medal at the Pan American Games last year and also won the World Cup championship in 1979.

His semifinal test Thursday night will be against Kelvin Seabrook of Charlotte, N.C., who lost to Beard in the AAU semifinals.

"This is one thing I want to accomplish," Beard said. "Winning the trials to me will be just like going over to Russia and bringing back the Back Together: Steinbrenner And 'The Kid'

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
Who would have thought it would take a bottle of stomach upset medicine to heal the breach between Yankee boss George Steinbrenner and his pugnacious ex-manager, Billy "The Kid" Martin?

Scene: a posh restaurant, white table cloths, tall glasses, palms in the background.

At one table sits "The Kid," now the lionized field general of the Oakland A's.

Billy is in multi. His face reflects a somber mood.

"What a day!" he growls. "First, I have rubber pancakes for breakfast..."

(A pause)
"Then they lose my luggage..."

(A pause)
"Then we lose the game..."

(Another pause)
"Then I come here to eat, and the chef's on vacation..."

A waiter strolls behind him.

"It tastes like the bus boy cooked the dinner..."

Billy puts both hands over his belt line.

"It's enough to give a guy an upset stomach."

Billy's stomach begins to swell while in the background a low voice is heard, saying, "Upset stomach. Upset stomach. Pepto-Bismol coats, soothes and relieves."

A waiter comes up and gives the suffering manager a bottle of the pink remedy.

"Think I'll take a swig of this," says Billy, raising the bottle to his lips.

Suddenly another figure heaves into the background.

Why, it's none other than George Steinbrenner, owner of the Yankees who last Oct. 29 gave Martin the boot for slugging a marshmallow salesman.

"Billy," chides Steinbrenner sternly, "use a spoon."

A look of exasperation crosses Billy's face. He shrugs his shoulders and raises his arms as if say, "Oh, no, he's still bossing me around."

Cut. Fadeout.

This is not an imaginary scene. It's real live drama. But it's only make believe — taping of a commercial next Friday in a New York studio.

The event presents a bizarre twist. It is the first reunion of the two volatile personalities

Together Again

New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, left, gestures to former Yankees' manager Billy Martin during filming of beer commercial in New York in July 1978. Martin, fired from his managerial position with the Yankees by Steinbrenner and now manager of the Oakland A's, has just filmed another tv commercial with Steinbrenner — this one an aid to upset stomachs. (AP Laserphoto) whose relations were shattered eight months ago in a wave of acrimony that galvanized into sensational newspaper headlines.

Steinbrenner compared Martin to an Old West gunslinger who constantly had to prove his was the fastest gun.

Martin countered that Steinbrenner was "born rich and thinks everybody could be bought," vowing: "I'll never put on Yankee uniform as long as he (Steinbrenner) is there."

After such a bitter exchange, how was it possible to bring the two together again? Don't underestimate Madison Avenue.

"Billy Martin had done an athlete's foot commercial for us back in 1977," said Don Howard of Norwich-Eaton Pharmaceuticals. "It was very successful. We found Billy related to the public."

"So we picked him for our stomach upset commercial. Benton and Bowles (advertising) was brought into it. We have been working on the script. Someone suggested using Steinbrenner. He accepted."

"Billy approved of the idea."

During a lull in their tempestuous association, Steinbrenner and Billy did a beer commercial in which they argued: "It tastes good." "No, it's less filling." "It tastes good." "No, it's less filling." It ended with George saying, "Billy, you're fired!" And Martin sighing, "Not again."

With the A's invading Yankee Stadium Friday for a three-game series including with the annual Yankee Old-Timers game, Howard said Friday was the first opportunity to get the two together.

Meanwhile, time has healed old wounds. Steinbrenner has insisted throughout that he has only Martin's best interests at heart. He has praised Billy's job as manager of the A's. Friends say Billy is delighted with the A's job. It's his kind of team — young, daring, aggressive, no super stars, no prima donnas.

Steinbrenner wants Martin to don his old Yankee uniform with "No. 1" on the back for the Old Timers game on Saturday. Billy has quipped, "If he want me to wear a Yankee uniform, why did he fire me?"

What will Billy do? Watch for the next episode: Saturday, June 21.

The Fight...

Duran's manager. One source said Eleta called on Gonzalez because "Carlos thought maybe somebody was trying to pull a fast one." The statement was not explained.

"The doctor claimed Duran was so strong he broke some of the instruments," Arum said. And during his brief workout, Duran certainly showed no signs of physical or mental stress.

Duran has worked regularly since the faulty EKG last Thursday and Monday, on his 29th birthday, the former lightweight champion went through a hard workout that included four rounds of sparring before 5,000 people at the Place des Jardins.

Arum, who is co-promoting the closed circuit telecast with Don King, said closed circuit ticket sales were doing so well that he wished there were more locations. There are 1.6 million seats at 310 locations in the United States and Canada, according to Arum, who also said the live gate ticket sale passed 30,000 Tuesday.

The Olympic Stadium seats 77,263 for boxing. It is calculated that 41,000 tickets must be sold for the Olympic Installations Board, operator of the stadium, to break even. A sellout would bring a game of $7.5 million.

Snow Hill Wins, 6-1

SNOW HILL — Ken Johnson pitched five innings of no-hit ball and struck out 11 before being relieved in the eighth as Snow Hill whipped Goldsboro, 6-1, Tuesday night in an American Legion contest.

Goldsboro's only hit of the night came in the sixth on an infield single. Johnson then kept the visitors at bay until the eighth when he was relieved by Kevin Korpi. Korpi struck out five to go with Johnson's 11 SOs.

Snow Hill, now 2-2, got going early. After Jabo Fulghum walked and Al Murray was hit by a pitc to lead off the first, Walt Tyndall singled with two outs to score Fulghum.

In the second, Allan Corbitt was hit by a pitch and before Robin Bowen sacrificed him to second. Then with two gone Billy McLawhorn tripled to score Corbitt. Fulghum then singled home McLawhorn.

After Goldsboro, now 7-3, scored in the top of the eight to cut the deficit to 3-1, Snow Hill countered with three runs in the bottom of the inning to put the game away.

With two out, Tyndall doubled and scored on Jeff Scott's single. Corbitt then singled home Scott before Corbitt scored on an error, giving Snow Hill a 6-1 lead.

Corbitt and Tyndall led Snow Hill at the plate with two hits each. Both had an RBI also.

Snow Hill was to have traveled to Washington tonight.

gold medal." Golden Gloves champion Myron Taylor of Philadelphia and Harold Petty of St. Louis also advanced in the 119-pound division and will meet in the other bantamweight semifinal.

Taylor stopped armed forces champion Aaron Smith of the Navy and Washington at 2:14 of the third round after recording standing eight counts in each of the first two rounds. Petty rallied from a slow start to upset Steve Cruz of Ft. Worth, Texas.

Johnny Bumpus, a deputy sheriff from Nashville, Tenn., advanced as expected in the light welterweight division with an easy victory over Darryl Anthony of Florissant, Mo.

Bumpus will face Golden Gloves champion Terry Silver of Louisville, Ky., in the semifinals. Silver opened the third round with a flurry of punches that produced a standing eight count as he outpointed Harry Arroyo of Youngstown, Ohio.

In other 139-pound quarterfinals, George Haynes of Camp Lejeune, N.C., outpointed Darryl Robinson of Houston and Ronnie Shields of Houston eliminated the Army's James Mitchell of Louisville, Ky.

The middleweight competition produced an upset when Andre Schott of New Plaz, N.Y., outpointed AAU champion Martin Pierce of Flint, Mich.

Barnes Patrick hurled the victory, allowing just four hits, and also added two home runs.

Other top hitters for Harris included Curtis Hardee with three (including one home run); Jody Vines with three (two homers), Todd Miller with two (including a homer) and Arthur Anderson with two. Timothy Ruffin had two hits for Simpson.

Harris is now 9-6 while Simpson is 4-12.

Prep League

G. Hardware 10, Auto Specialty 3

Greenville Hardware gained a 10-3 victory over Auto Specialty to tie for second place in the Prep League last night. Both teams are now 5-6 with but one game left to play.

Auto Specialty pushed over its first run in the first, while Greenville Hardware matched it in the second. The Hardwaremen added two more in the fourth, one on a homer by Jason Boyd. Auto Specialty picked up one in the fourth and another in the seventh to tie it at 3-3.

Then, in the ninth, the Hardwaremen broke the tie and won with a seven run rally. Mike Gavigan opened with a walk and moved up on a wild pitch and a passed ball. Boyd also walked and Tony Taylor singled in both of them. Jay Wynne walked and Lane Odom reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Taylor. Cedrick Hines walked and an error on a pickoff try let Wynne score. Odom scored on a passed ball, as did Hines.

Taylor led the Hardware hitting with three, while Pat Rand had two to pace Auto Specialty.

Babe Ruth League

Planters Bank 3, Aaction Movers 2

Planters Bank jumped out to a two-game lead in the Babe Ruth League with a 3-2 victory over nearest rival Aaction Movers last night. The win left Planters with a 10-2 record and Aaction at 8-4.

Aaction scored first, getting a run in the first. Planters tied it up with one in the second, but Aaction went back up with one in the third. Planters again tied it with one in the bottom of the third.

Then, in the fifth, Planters got the winning run. Mont Carter singled and stole second. He was sacrificed to third and scored when Marty Radford singled.

Carter, Radford and Jamie Jones each had two hits for Planters, while Billy Godley had three and Rudy Stalls had two for Aaction.

Morris Breaks Sweat, Leads Tigers

By BRUCE LOWITT
 AP Sports Writer

For a while, it was "no sweat" for Detroit Tigers pitcher Jack Morris. Then things got better.

"When I was warming up in the bullpen, I felt like I had nothing," the right-hander said Tuesday night. "But after I broke a sweat, I felt I was going to pitch a good game."

He did — a five-hit beauty for his second major league shutout and second consecutive complete game, helping the Tigers to defeat the Milwaukee Brewers 3-0.

The only run the Tigers needed to halt the personal three-game winning streak of Milwaukee left-hander Mike Caldwell came in the first inning — and it was unearned. Third baseman Don Money booted Jim Lentine's leadoff grounder. Lentine then took third on Alan Trammell's single and scored on Steve Kemp's sacrifice fly.

Trammell drove the final two nails in the Brewers' coffin with a homer in the eighth inning after Lentine had walked.

"I think the homer hurt the Brewers a lot because it gave Jack a little bit of a cushion going into the ninth," Trammell said of Morris.

The game drew 24,942 paying customers to Tigers Stadium. None of them sat in the cheap seats, the center field bleachers, which the Tigers shut down after the Brewers complained about fans throwing debris on the field and fighting among themselves on Monday.

Yanks 8, Mariners 2
 Dennis Werth, a sometime player with the Yankees, drove in three runs to help New York Tom Underwood post his sixth straight win.

"I'm used to the role of coming off the bench," said Werth, a right-hander who plays only against left-handers. "I even did it down in the minors."

Werth is batting .412 in 22 games with eight RBIs on 14 hits. "It's my job to produce," he said. "I'm glad for the opportunity. There are a lot of everyday players around here."

Royals 3, Rangers 2
 Kansas City's Jamie Quirk was stuck with a bat he didn't like — until Texas pitcher Jim Kern broke it for him.

After getting a new bat and applying more pine tar to the handle, Quirk lifted a fly ball to center field, the bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth that beat the Rangers.

"I was glad he broke the bat because it didn't have enough pine tar on it," said Quirk, "and in the American League you can't go back for more...I was just trying to hit a fly ball to the outfield. I don't get many chances like that, and I didn't want to blow it."

Twins 8, Blue Jays 6
 John Castino drove in three Minnesota runs with a single, a double and a squeeze but and Doug Corbett pitched 41-3 innings of scoreless relief to drop the Blue Jays into last place in the AL East.

Corbett, a 28-year-old rookie right-hander, is 4-2, has six of the Twins' eight saves and a 1.96 earned run average.

He replaced Pete Redfern with a one-run lead and held Toronto to just two hits. "I love the pressure," Corbett said. "I think I perform best under pressure. It's more exciting."

Orioles 5, Angels 3
 Baltimore's Al Bumbry hit a two-run homer — barely — in the seventh inning which saddled the Angels with their seventh straight loss.

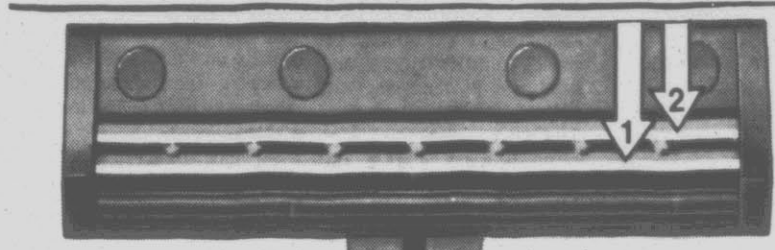

"I thought he caught the ball," Bumbry said after watching center fielder Bob Clark come within a whisker of a spectacular, leaping catch. "But when I saw him get up and not throw the ball back in, I knew it was a homer."

"I hit the fence about the same time the ball hit my glove," said Clark, who ran into the barrier in an attempt to get the line drive. After I looked into the glove, I knew where it was."

Reds Sox 6, A's 2
 Carlton Fisk capped a four-run fifth inning with a two-run double and Mike Torrez scattered seven hits to help Boston beat the A's and give the Red Sox their seventh victory in eight games.

After Rickey Henderson's leadoff single in the first inning, Torrez retired 13 successive batters before Jeff Newman homered in the fifth inning.

White Sox 5, Indians 3
 Two Cleveland errors, two walks and a passed ball gave Chicago the tying run in the eighth inning, then Todd Cruz's two-out, bases-loaded single in the same inning gave the White Sox their winning margin.

Feminists Of Brazil Fighting 'Machismo'

By VERONICA M. BROWN

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) — The girl from Ip-anema is starting to rebel. Many Brazilian women now vocally reject the image of the shapely samba dancer or bikini-clad beach girl.

The Brazilian activists started later than their counterparts in other countries and appear to have a longer way to go. But a feminist movement is winning supporters.

"There will be a permanent battle to destroy machismo," says psychologist Susana Tonin, referring to the exaggerated masculinity commonly adopted by Brazilian men.

"You find women with law degrees working as secretaries," Mrs. Tonin said.

The first goal is equal job opportunities and equal pay. Feminists hope education programs will change the public mind in this South American giant of 120 million people.

The feminist movement gained publicity with the case of a police department secretary who wants to take her demands for equality to the Supreme Court.

Marilia Brandao, 28, passed an exam for police clerk. But a state law bars women from holding the position.

"The law is absurd," Miss Brandao.

Miss Brandao, a secretary for seven years, earns $140 per month. To make ends meet she works nights as a teacher's assistant. The starting pay for police clerks is $400 a month.

At a recent meeting of the Inter-American Development Bank, United States Deputy Secretary of the Treasury Robert Carswell stressed "the importance of integrating women more fully in the development process" of Latin America.

"The success of countries' efforts to curb population growth will depend in part on improving the economic opportunities for women," Carswell said.

Feminist groups began appearing in Brazil during International Women's Year in 1975. Today there are at least seven large groups, many smaller ones and even a lesbian feminist organization.

Activists say the complaint common to all is sexual discrimination on the job. At work, the lower class woman performs the same chores she performs at home. She is a cook, maid or a nanny. Upper-class women with college degrees find employers want to hire only men. Only last year Brazil got its first woman senator.

Maria da Silva Bito, 18 and a law student, noted that lawyers are men but law professors are women.

Said Luiza Novaes, "Employers have told me they would not hire me because I am not a man. Some of my friends who had a hard time finding work quit after they were asked for sexual favors."

Another feminist who uses only her first name to save her family embarrassment said the Brazilian woman has only two rights. "She has the right to be a sex object and a mother. It is so hard to change people's minds because machismo is ingrained in them by Brazilian culture."

Sees 'Promise' For Housing

CLEVELAND, Ohio (UPI) — The early 1980s hold great promise for a recovery of United States housing activity, despite its collapse in 1979-80, says a Cleveland-based business information and market research firm.

In a recently released industry study, "U.S. Regional Housing to 1985", Predictions Research Group projects housing starts to peak at 2.28 million annually in the first half of the decade, then level off to 2.25 million through 1985.

The study indicates the movements away from the Northeast and the Great Lakes region to the Sunbelt, and from urban to non-metropolitan areas, to continue to influence housing activity.

As inflation continues to push single-family, detached houses beyond the reach of many middle-income families, such housing will fall from 56 percent of all housing starts in the first half of the '80s to 49 percent by the early 1990s, the study shows. Multiple-family housing is expected to make up more than 30 percent of the market by the latter period.

Crackdown On 'Harmful Books'

PEKING (AP) — As China revives from a book famine, authorities now are cracking down on "corrupting" publications on everything from fortune-telling to lyrics of "decadent" songs. "The situation was serious," said a provincial broadcast in Hubei, central China. It said a small number of people had distorted freedom of the press, printed harmful books and sold them illegally.

In the capital, the Peking Daily said market supervisors were sent out even at night to halt the selling of song lyrics, books on palmistry, fortune-telling, and pictures of childbearing. Many of these books, it said, were mimeographed publications put out by unemployed residents of Peking and its suburbs. A national conference on publishing in Peking recently urged against considering only how well a book will sell. This followed criticisms in the press of some science publishing houses putting out translations of Western detective novels to boost their profits. But the conference called for taking a reasonable, helpful attitude toward publishers of books with shortcomings, warning that the books absolutely could not be arbitrarily labeled "poisonous weeds" or accused of political crimes. The conference said the book famine had resulted from 10 years of chaos when the Communist Party's radicals held power. Many of the books that were turned out then, it said, were linked to current political movements and were unpopular. Last year, China's publishers put out more than 4 billion books of 17,212 different kinds, said a report on the conference. It said the publication of novelty-seeking books of little value was only a minor aspect that could easily be overcome. While books with little artistic or educational value should be passed over amid the current paper shortage, the conference said, some — needed to help in scientific and industrial work — should be published even at a loss. Wang Renzhong, head of the party's propaganda department, told the conference that publishing should be aimed at raising the people's scientific and academic level, nurturing communist morals among young people and encouraging the people to advance toward China's modernization full of confidence. NO WRONGDOING PEKING (AP) — At least 71 persons punished for links with the policies of disgraced Chinese President Liu Shao-chi have been declared innocent of any wrongdoing, the Peking Daily has reported.

"When I went into business for myself, I already knew about Lowe's friendly salesmen, quality materials, and competitive prices. So, when I'm building a house, I find just about all the materials I need here. I buy probably 85% to 90% of my building materials at Lowe's. And prices are always competitive. Recently, I checked prices on a particular appliance and the lowest price was at Lowe's—by a hundred dollars!" Don Williams, Spartanburg, SC

Jobless Claims Rise; Jobs Go Unfilled

By OWEN ULLMANN
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of Americans out of work has swelled by more than 1.5 million this spring, yet 69,000 government-financed CETA public service jobs remain unfilled, the Labor Department reports.

The department's problems in filling the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act job slots while unemployment is soaring underscores the debate within the Carter administration over what, if anything, to do to counter a recession that threatens to send unemployment even higher.

Labor Department officials and leaders of organized labor have been urging President Carter to loosen his hold on the federal purse strings and propose expanded job-creating programs.

So far, Carter's top economic advisers have rejected those pleas. Instead, the administration is sticking to its current policy of fighting inflation through spending restraints rather than fighting a recession with increased government spending.

Carter has promised to reconsider anti-recessionary measures if the economy continues to deteriorate, and the administration has been reviewing steps it might take to lower unemployment, which has jumped from 6.2 percent in March to 7.8 percent in May — the steepest two-month rise in more than three decades.

But advocates of job-creating programs say the president's advisers have not tipped their hand as to what they may do or when they may do it.

"There's no clear indication one way or the other, whether to do something dramatic or to tough it out," said one Labor Department official, who declined to be named.

Another department official, also requesting anonymity, commented: "We're all pretty cynical about the chances of them (the White House) doing anything. If they do propose something, it would probably be a tax cut of some kind."

The AFL-CIO wants Carter to move immediately against the recession with a variety of spending programs to stimulate employment, but the federation's leaders have doubts about whether a president who has been criticized for changing economic directions too often would risk another change of course.

"I suspect they would love it if unemployment didn't get any worse, inflation comes down and interest rates come down so they won't have to do anything," said an AFL-CIO official.

But if the jobless rate keeps climbing to 9 percent or higher, as some economists now predict, the pressure will be building on Carter to propose public works projects and similar counter-recessionary programs.

One source of debate is over what measures the government should use and whether they would work as intended.

The Labor Department wants the CETA program expanded, yet it has been able to fill only 381,000 of the 450,000 job slots for which it has money this fiscal year.

As of the end of May, local CETA programs had filled 192,000 of the 250,000 positions available for the so-called "structurally unemployed" — poor, ill-educated youth chronically out of work. Of the 200,000 positions reserved for those who lose their jobs during recessions, 189,000 were filled.

A budget-conscious Congress, meanwhile, has voted to eliminate 100,000 CETA jobs by the end of fiscal 1981. Ironically, all the cuts would affect those left jobless by recession — the section of the program that the government has been most successful in keeping nearly filled.

Assistant Labor Secretary Ernest Green said some of the job-creating money has not been used because of constant uncertainty over how much Congress would give CETA from year to year. He said local governments also have had trouble creating jobs that meet the average annual salary limit of $7,800 set by Congress without violating union contracts or civil service rules.

Green said the department is taking "aggressive steps" to redistribute CETA money so that a maximum number of jobs can be created.

There is another paradox about the government's use of CETA to counter rising unemployment. Under a formula in an existing law, the number of CETA job slots rises as does the jobless rate, providing Congress agrees to spend the money. But most of those who lose their jobs in a recession may not be eligible for a CETA job, anyway.

Airy, Sunny - And Partly Underground

By MARY A. DEMPSEY
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (UPI) — The home where Jill and Tom Newhouse live is bright, sunny and airy. It also is three-quarters underground.

Newhouse, an industrial designer, quit his job and spent five months building the earth-sheltered home west of Grand Rapids.

The solar house has three sides nestled into the side of a hill. It is covered with a thin layer of sod. It won a federal Housing and Urban Development design award.

"Underground homes — so many of them are miserable looking," Newhouse said. "People don't live well in caves."

"Natural light is required by people. Truly underground homes are not pleasant but earth-sheltered homes make sense.

"This type of structure is very site-oriented and site-conscious because you need hills," said Newhouse, 30. "We've done minimal environmental change and our energy comes from all free, renewable sources."

The poured concrete home has a wall of large windows and is solar heated. Newhouse said he uses a wood-burning stove on cold winter days and on occasion turns on his electric heat backup system.

Newhouse said it cost him $35 to heat the entire home during the coldest month of the winter. His stove consumed a cord and a half of wood all winter.

"The electric backup heat comes on when the temperature goes down to 60 degrees," Newhouse said. "Usually we don't need it with the cast iron stove, though."

"This house uses wood, solar and electric energy but we use electricity discriminately," Newhouse said. "It's appropriate in Michigan to burn wood because it's a resource we have a lot of."

The home has a large room with areas used as a kitchen and dining room, a living room and a bedroom for the couple's infant daughter.

At night the window wall is covered with styrofoam-type boards that prevent heat from escaping after sunset.

Newhouse said the large windows also provide natural illumination so electric lights need not burn constantly.

Off the large main room is the master bedroom, a bathroom with a compost toilet and an area the couple wants to turn into a sauna.

The lower level of the house has been divided into a large area Newhouse uses for finishing work on the home. The family occupied the house in October 1978, but Newhouse said it will be some time before he has finished all the work on it.

The lower level also contains a carpeted, artsy room Newhouse uses as a studio for his industrial design work.

The family's other conservation activities include rolling their newspapers into logs for fire. They recycle foil, tin and plastic products. "This is more than just a house. This is a lifestyle, an avocation, a commitment," Newhouse said.

The young father said said running an energy-efficient house in Michigan is not as easy as in other states because of the cold winters and frequent overcast days.

"There's not that much energy to store. There's no way in Michigan you get three or four days of sunshine in a row during the winter," he said. "You just use the solar energy when it's there."

"But we've taken into consideration the other side of the picture, too," he said. "This house never overheats in the summer."

"Our greatest challenge was to make sure we did not overheat in late summer. The hottest the house ever got was just over 78 degrees."

Outside the home, which is hidden from the roadway, the couple has a summer porch. They plan to build a catwalk connecting the porch to the hillside.

"The neighbors weren't too thrilled about the whole thing at the beginning and they still haven't gotten used to it," Newhouse said. "But now they seem curious and even impressed that it costs us so little to run the home."

Visiting Russians...

very serious now and relationships are very complicated. The American people know very little about us. We have to discover a new way to find peace."

Zarubina and Mostovets emphasized that the Russians do not want another war nor do they understand our thinking along those lines. Recalling some of the hardships of World War II, Mostovets left the audience with the following statements. "We know peace because we know war. We lost 20 million men, women, and children. I lost a brother, and Zoya lost eight members of her family. Do you think we want another war?" One participant said that the Americans are physically weak and do not understand war because we have not experienced the hardships that Russia has nor experienced bloodshed on our own turf.

A major purpose of the Russians' visit here was to discuss the possibility of establishing an American-Soviet conference beginning in 1981. The conference would enable 100 Americans chosen from all walks of life to travel to the Soviet Union and 100 Soviets would come to the United States for an exchange of ideas and to enrich understanding of each other. "We hope that next year will be The Year of Peace," Mostovets said.

Reactions of the Soviet people concerning the Olympic Boycott were also discussed.

"On January 4, the boycott was heard," said Zarubina. The reactions of our people were those of shock, disbelief, sadness, and laissez-faire. We are too much of a sporting nation to call it off. The tickets have been sold out in advance, and the Olympics will take place."

At the present time, both countries lack the kind of information to allow for an understanding of each other whether it is cultural, political or economic. As a result, communication is difficult and will continue to be until steps are taken to try to overcome these barriers.

The Russian's visit here

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Resolve a problem with an associate and then this can be a most productive day. Be sure to keep your temper in check.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You could be confused about a monetary matter, but give it a little more time and it works itself out.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) An adviser of some time past can now come up with a solution to a personal problem you have. Be more self-assured.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't be too forceful with others now, or you could regret it later. A new contact can bring many benefits your way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Do something nice for good friends and help them with their ambitions once you learn what they are. Use tact.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Conditions change today from bad to good and to bad again, so use wise philosophy and keep poised.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You may want to run off to new sites, but delays arise, so be patient. Rise above limitations. Take no risks in motion.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Find a better way to solve a personal problem you have. Attend the social tonight and seek company of congenials.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make needed changes at work that could give you added abundance in the future. The evening can be a most happy one.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have much ability in scientific subjects, so send to the right schools where your progeny can learn modern methods that could lead to a most successful life. Give ethical training early in life.

FOCUS

News Word: Autonomy

"Autonomy" is a word that often appears in newspaper stories about peace talks in the Middle East. "Autonomy" means "self-government," or "self-determination." In this case, it refers to the right of a people to decide how they will be governed. For more than a year, Egypt, Israel and the United States have tried to reach an agreement on an autonomy plan for Palestinian Arabs living in Gaza and the West Bank. Most Palestinians want complete autonomy, that is, the right to set up an independent Palestinian state. But Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin has rejected that idea, and wants a more limited form of Palestinian autonomy.

ABC Drops To Third In Weekly Nielsen Race

NEW YORK (AP) — With the 1980-81 prime-time season still three months off, CBS appears to be strengthening its grip on the No. 1 position in the three-way race.

CBS had eight of the 10 highest-rated programs in the week ending June 15, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed, and beat the competition for the sixth time in a row.

CBS' margin was well over a point, but the real story there was in NBC's ascent to the runner-up spot in the weekly competition after 15 consecutive weeks in third place.

ABC fell to third with the lowest weekly rating recorded by any network in nearly a year.

CBS, with the week's seven top-rated shows, including "The Jeffersons" in first place, had a rating of 14.9 to NBC's 13.6 and ABC's 12.4.

The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 14.9 percent of the country's homes with TV were tuned to CBS.

CBS won four nights of the week, Monday, Thursday, Friday and Sunday, while ABC won Tuesday and Saturday and NBC Wednesday.

The rating for "The Jeffersons" was 21.8. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with TV, 21.8 percent saw at least part of the show.

Of the week's 10 highest-rated shows, nine were reruns. The exception was a new episode of "Phyl and Mikhy," a new CBS sitcom, which finished ninth.

A repeat of the theatrical motion picture, "The Bridge at Remagen" on NBC, was the highest-rated non-CBS show, in eighth place.

Of the first-run specials, a CBS movie, "M Station Hawaii," had the biggest audience and placed 32nd, followed by ABC's revival of the old "Omnibus" program in 40th place and ABC movie, "King Crab," tied for 41st.

Two news specials broadcast during the week escaped the bottom of the ratings list. An "ABC News Closeup" called "To Die for Ireland" was No. 57 for the week, with a "CBS Reports" production, "Return of the CIA," 60th.

Both ABC and NBC had two shows among the week's five lowest-rated, with "240-Robert" on ABC No. 65, followed by "Joe's World" on NBC, "The Stockard Channing Show" on CBS, NBC's "A Man Called Sloane" and an ABC special starring John Denver called "The Higher We Fly."

The week's Top 10 programs:

"The Jeffersons," with a rating of 21.8 representing 16.6 million homes, "Dallas," 21.6 or 16.5 million, "Alice," 21.1 or 16.1 million, "Trapper John, M.D.," 20.1 or 15.3 million, "M-A-S-H," 20 or 15.2 million, "60 Minutes," 19.5 or 14.9 million, and "Dukes of Hazzard," 19.5 or 14.8 million, all CBS; Movie—"The Bridge at Remagen," 18.9 or 14.4 million, NBC; "Phyl and Mikhy," 18.8 or 14.3 million, CBS, and "Three's Company," 18.6 or 14.2 million, ABC.

The next 10 shows: "CHiPs," NBC; "Taxi," ABC; "WKRP in Cincinnati," CBS; "Diff'rent Strokes," NBC; "Knot's Landing," CBS; "Facts of Life," NBC; "When the Whistle Blows," ABC; "House Calls," CBS, and "Real People," NBC, three-way tie, and "Quincy, M.E.," NBC.

Still Another News Network On The Scene; A Common Mission

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eight days after Ted Turner's costly, ambitious Cable News Network commenced operations, still another TV news network was delivered into this world. Independent News Network, it is called.

The two newcomers share little more than a common mission — to undermine ABC, NBC and CBS.

Turner's CNN cost $40 million or so to launch; INN cost less than a million. CNN offers 24-hour-a-day programming; INN offers 24 minutes. CNN is on cable; INN is over-the-air.

Because of that last, though, INN reached more viewers in its inaugural week (June 9-13) than CNN could reach if fully one-half of its potential audience tuned in (an unlikely possibility).

Independent News Network is a fully produced, prime time news program that is transmitted by satellite to 27 stations across the country. The program originates at the parent station, WPIX in New York.

The hope behind INN is that independent television stations will be able to exploit the new popularity of news to snare some of the prime time audience from the major networks. Heretofore, most of the stations had tried to battle the networks' glossy entertainment schedules with a mixed batch of syndicated reruns and old movies.

INN also gives the locals a chance to offer national news, and thereby concentrate more on local coverage in their own news programs.

Although INN advertises itself as a "network news" program, the product is not exactly of Cronkite caliber. It uses WPIX's anchors — Pat Harper, Bill Jorgensen and Steve Bosh — and the "look" of the show is more like a big-city independent's production (which, essentially, it is) than a national news program.

While due emphasis is placed on top national stories — Mount St. Helen's, a presidential confrontation with Miami blacks, etc. — there is also some "soft" stuff, people features eschewed by major networks because of time limitations.

Sports and weather are also squeezed in. The problem is, INN doesn't have any more time than CBS, NBC or ABC. You get the feeling you're missing real news when you're watching an INN report that jogging can hurt your love life.

Worse, INN has fallen prey to the "happy talk" disease, which instantly jeopardizes its quest to be considered a serious news operation.

For example, after a field report from New Orleans about a few police squad cars that mysteriously burst into flames, one of the anchorman-jesters yucked:

"Maybe the next step is for cops to put fire extinguishers in their cars; that way, they can play fireman and policeman at the same time."

Such, says INN executive producer John Corporon, "tells viewers that after the wars and rumors of wars and bombings, after all the heavy news, the world didn't end today. We think viewers are ready for a change of pace."

Perhaps. Station directors, anyway, aren't complaining. INN gives them a fairly cheap programming tool and the prestige of having a national news program.

INN offers its program on a barter system — giving the local stations three minutes of commercial time, keeping three minutes for itself.

Rubin: Don't Trust Under-30s

CLEVELAND (AP) — Jerry Rubin popularized the phrase "Never trust anyone over 30."

But at age 41, the co-founder of the Youth International Party, more commonly known as the Yippies, has changed his approach.

"I was 31 when I said it, but no one ever asked me my age," Rubin told a crowd of Jaycees at their national convention here on Monday. "Now I say don't trust anyone under 30. You know how conservative young people are today."

Now earning most of his living by writing books and giving about 50 speeches a year, Rubin believes he is still true to the principles he preached so loudly a decade ago.

James Garner Testifies Today

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actor James Garner was to testify today in the trial of a man he says beat and robbed him after an automobile mishap in January.

A jury was selected and the first witnesses took the stand Tuesday in the Superior Court trial of Aubrey Lee Williams Jr. of Tarzana. He is accused of assault and robbery and misdemeanor hit-and-run.

Garner told officers he was pulled from his car, beaten and kicked and that gold chains were yanked from his neck in the Jan. 16 incident.

Police said Williams claimed Garner had started the altercation by refusing to let them pass his car on a steep, winding road. Williams alleged that when his car scraped Garner's as he attempted to pass on the left, the actor stopped and got out in a belligerent manner.

Yesterday's Cryptquip — LATE TICKER TAPE RECORDED ODDIOUS STOCK MARKET SLUMP.

Today's Cryptquip clue: Z equals Y

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Recently, there has been something of a brouhaha about who invented point count bidding for contract bridge. To the best of our knowledge, the first publication of a complete point count system of evaluation is in a British book that appeared in 1933. The "Goren" count is based on the Milton Work structure from the days of auction bridge, with the distributional count adapted by a Toronto actuary, William Anderson. We have never claimed to be the originator or the first to publish a point count method, but we do like to think that the simplicity and accuracy of our methods have had something to do with the popularity of the game today.

Besides being a superb mathematician, Anderson was a solid, practical player. He sat West on this hand, and after opening one spade, he heard the opponents climb into game. By today's standards North's decision to make a takeout double was a trifle eccentric—an overall of two hearts would be adequate.

Anderson seemed to view the enemy auction as a personal affront, because he doubled and led the queen of spades. Declarer won in dummy and immediately led a club, ducked to West's ten.

Now there was only one specific card to play to defeat the contract. If West continued with a spade, declarer would ruff two hearts as entries to his hand for two club ruffs, felling West's ace. The defenders would then get only a trump trick to go with the club.

Anderson realized that it was imperative to prevent dummy from ruffing clubs, so he decided to shift to a trump. But the jack would not have been good enough. Declarer would win in dummy and, while he would still have to lose another club, he would not now lose a trump.

The winning defense was spectacular—West shifted to the king of trumps! Declarer was faced with a Hobson's choice: If he drew a second trump, he wouldn't lose a trump trick but he would have to surrender a total of three clubs. If he ruffed a club in dummy, he would set up West's jack of diamonds and now he would have to lose two clubs and a trump.

Seafood Supply Much Improved

CHICAGO (UPI) — It looks like a good summer for fish fanciers.

Earl Swicord, a seafood company executive and president of the National Fisheries Institute, says seafood supplies are greater now than they have been in years. Swicord expects almost all varieties of fish and seafood to be attractive buys for consumers in retail stores and restaurants as the 1980 fishing season opens.

He says government figures show wholesale prices for larger size shrimp are more than 20 percent below this time last year, and halibut, salmon and king crab also at wholesale levels appreciably below a year ago.

Wholesale prices for cod, whiting and rockfish area about the same as last year, Swicord says, adding that this has the effect of a price reduction, because of inflation.

He expects the fish harvest to be good throughout the summer.

SCREAMS AND DREAMS AND A MOUNTAIN OF FUN.

Lindsay Sounding Like A Comback Effort

By PETER COSTA
UPI Senior Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) —
Former New York Mayor John Lindsay was hot. "I'm dehydrated. Get me something cold. Anything. And follow the cold drink with a large cup of black coffee," he said like Captain Bligh to Mr. Christian. He had just completed a tough crossing in the campaign sea of upstate New York.

"I drove 496 miles yesterday, 496 miles in 9 hours," he said and arched his head to the horizon. One looked at his hands for a sextant or — at the very least — a telescope. They held neither, just his discarded dark blue suit jacket.

When the two orange juice containers ("something cold") had arrived, he opened them and drank them quickly. He moved on to the black coffee as he talked about his campaign for the U.S. Senate, city riots, inflation, the quality of life, his wife Mary and the trouble in Iran.

He spoke quickly and self-assuredly. He was used to command.

"I'm running again because I want to," he said in an interview in New York recently.

"I've spent seven years in private life as a business manager and lawyer specializing in international affairs and I want to use that experience again in office," he said.

Asked to comment about critics who say his spending policies were too liberal and left New York in perilous financial condition, he said that one month before he had left office Standard & Poor's had raised the credit rating of New York.

"But more importantly let's talk about the quality of life in the city. It was better then than it is now. You could ride the subways safely then — you can't now," he said.

Lindsay decided not to run for a third term as mayor of New York in December 1973 after eight years as mayor. After seven years out of the limelight, he is seeking the U.S. Senate seat held by Sen. Jacob Javits and facing a tough battle for the Democratic nomination.

He stretched out his long legs and adjusted his blue and grey tie. He wore the uniform of command: a dark blue suit, a light blue shirt, a black belt with a gold snapping clipped horizontally in an interesting mix of city and sea.

Each time he talked about New York he would squint out the window and look at the neighboring buildings.

"Inflation affects us, too. Mary and the kids, we're a family affected by rising costs just like anyone else," the 59-year-old Lindsay said.

He listed the following as measures to curb inflation: —Carter ought to declare an economic emergency in this country and place selective controls on multinational corporations;

—Set up a federal development corporation modeled after the TVA;

—Provide massive tax credits, 15 to 20 percent for reinvestment in capital plants;

—Forbid autos to be sold in the United States that do not get 40 miles per gallon;

—Control foreign oil imports;

—Create more job training and retraining groups to augment CETA programs for disadvantaged youth.

He said he supported abortion, the Equal Rights Amendment, a modified national health insurance plan for catastrophic illness, draft registration for males and females and tax credits for families who have to pay college tuition. He moved on to international affairs.

"Our problem is that we do not have a clear or consistent or believable foreign policy and this hurts us," he said. How many helicopters would he have used in the Iran rescue?

"Well, you know my experience with talking with the New York Helicopter Pilots Association people tells me that if you have six helicopters, three will be on the ground needing maintenance. What is that old astronaut joke just before blastoff? 'Don't worry — this rocket has 400,000 moveable parts all made by the lowest bidder,'" he said and smiled.

HONOR COSMONAUTS
MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet cosmonauts Vladimir Aksynov and Yuri Malyshev have been decorated with the Soviet Union's highest honors in recognition of their recent mission to test the new Soyuz T2 space ship, Tass reports.

Happiness Is 'Warm Hog'

HAMILTON, Mich. (AP) — Happiness is a warm pig — at least to a hog producer. That's Ronald Harmsen's reasoning for putting his porkers in a modern technical setting.

Harmsen has cleaned up his hogs' act, putting them in their own $36,000 solar-heated home on his 130-acre farm in Ottawa County.

A constant temperature — 70 degrees — is the key for a hog producer. The animals won't eat if it's hot, and if it's cold, the hogs use too many precious calories to stay warm, the farmer explained.

Harmsen's building can sleep 400 full-grown hogs. The animals are brought in at weights of 80 to 120 pounds and are slaughtered when they reach 220.

The idea behind Harmsen's building has been around for about five years, according to Marvin Hall, an agricultural engineer for the University of Illinois.

"It's a good working building for finishing hogs," Hall said. "It'll make a drier building and make the hogs more comfortable."

Diane and Reg Cridler, hog farmers in the nearby Kent County town of Rockford, built a similar building three years ago. They added a second last year.

"We love them," Mrs. Cridler said. "From my husband's point of view, they are energy-efficient. And from my point of view, they hold a happy hog."

Claims Talk Aids Skills In Reading

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A national reading specialist says parents can help their children learn to read by constantly talking and reading to them.

"Reading is all around us," said Carole Riggs, a consultant from Dekalb County in Georgia and author of a new textbook series on the subject.

"You can read the labels in the grocery store or stop signs on the ride home.

"You should spend a lot of time talking to children and listening. Sometimes we just talk to the child rather than listening to him."

Mrs. Riggs said parents should start educating their children from infancy, surrounding them with things that challenge the mind and cause them to think.

"In the beginning it may just be things that make the child's eyes move or a game for the child to find a hidden toy," she said in an interview.

Mrs. Riggs said the ability to read is essential because "if you are unable to read, you are unable to function in today's society."

"Reading means getting meaning from a page, not just getting words," she said. "Children can decode words but often cannot comprehend. We need to recognize our ultimate goal is to get meaning."

Mrs. Riggs, who did her doctoral thesis at the University of Georgia on parental involvement in reading, has developed a five-part program called CHILD.

"C" stands for communicate," she said. "You should communicate acceptance and positive things like: 'I like you. You may not be all I want you to be, but I like you.'"

Mrs. Riggs said "H" means the parent should help his child understand word relationships such as on-off and oral language development.

"I" stands for interest. "You should interest your child in reading by reading to him," she said. "Help him to learn what language is and that what is said can be read."

"L" is for library. Mrs. Riggs said children should be surrounded by books. She recommends letting children have their own personal libraries.

"D" is for developing a sense of responsibility. Mrs. Riggs said parents should "help the child recognize he is responsible for himself and his actions."

She stresses the importance of parents as role models. Parents' attitudes toward reading — especially if parents dislike reading — will be picked up by the child, she added.

Timing is also important, she said.

"There is a teachable moment, when the child shows inquisitiveness and wants to learn. Rather than stopping children in the middle of play to teach them something, you should answer questions and respond to their interests."

She said involvement also helps parents recognize the child as a person.

Urged Take Up A Collection

WASHINGTON (AP) — Catholic bishops in the U.S. have been urged to take up special collections to help in resettlement of Cuban and Haitian refugees.

The president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, Archbishop John R. Quinn of San Francisco, said such funds are urgently needed to aid the continuing large-scale influx of Cubans and Haitians.

Ant Colony To Be Put In Space

NEW YORK (UPI) — An ant colony may be the first family in space.

The insects are scheduled to be aboard a NASA space shuttle when it blasts off some time before 1983 as part of the space agency's Getaway Special. This program allows anyone to rent space for research projects aboard a shuttle. The RCA Corp. has rented space for a joint project of two Camden, N.J., high schools whose students will be studying the effects of weightlessness on the ant colony.

An article in the June issue of Seventeen Magazine says ants were chosen for the experiment because their hard outer shell will help them survive the crushing gravitational forces of the rocket's lift-off. Also, ants can live in small spaces and cling to rough surfaces, so they won't float around in the canister they are scheduled to travel in.

Doyenne Of The Popular Sleuth Tales

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—She is the doyenne of the sleuth tale with the cryptic handle P.D. James.

That's Phyllis Dorothy, whose seven detective stories have intrigued millions of mystery fans in the past two decades.

The British author's latest novel, "Innocent Blood," made about $1 million in the United States — before sales from publication.

But even fame and money can't compare to that special joy she felt 20 years ago when P.D. James wrote her first book, "Cover Her Face."

"When I got the telephone call from my agent saying she had placed it, I finally understood what jumping for joy meant," the author recalls.

"It was a better feeling than the $1 million picked up in the United States," she says. "None of that produced that absolute surge of joy. Because I knew I was going to be a writer."

"It was a better moment than when the book was published. Ah, gracious. It was wonderful."

It's not easy to arrive late on a literary scene already dominated by the late Agatha Christie. At 39, P.D. James was the proverbial new kid on the block, who had to prove herself almost immediately. She did. "Cover Her Face" was an enormous success.

The delay in starting to write was frustrating for the then Mrs. White, who had to care for a terminally ill husband and who became a career civil servant to support her family.

"I do in a way regret the late start," she says. "I began to wonder if I ever would be able to write, and I came to understand that there would never be a convenient time."

It took her three years to write "Cover Her Face," during spare time away from her hospital administration work. She dropped her husband's name, White, and assumed her maiden name, James. And to avoid a pre-occupation with gender, she shortened Phyllis Dorothy to P.D.

By the time the novel appeared in 1962, she had completed her second, "A Mind to Murder." That was published the following year.

Her thrillers are dominated by an intellectual Scotland Yard detective, who also writes poetry, named Adam Dalgliesh. He sometimes expresses Ms. James's own feelings about her former work in criminal law policy at the Home Secretary's office.

Ms. James retired from her post last year. And Dalgliesh does not figure in "Innocent Blood."

In fact, the novel is a departure from the detective-thriller genre. It is, as she puts it, a "straight novel."

"I think it was more of a challenge," Ms. James says. "I don't think I found it more difficult. It was rather stressful because my father had a heart attack while I was writing it, and he died."

"It was a different book," she says. "And I put more of myself into it. I still told the story from different viewpoints, entering the minds and thoughts of the characters — that was the same. The problem was preventing me from being too self-indulgent."

"Innocent Blood" explores the British Children Act of 1975 — a law which gives adoptees the right to their birth records. Philippa Palfrey exercises that right, only to discover that her dead father was the convicted rapist of a 12-year-old girl and her mother is about to be released from prison for murdering the child a decade ago.

"I wanted to write about the search for identity and the search for love," Ms. James says. "I felt I really needed to write this. The plot came to me and demanded a different story."

Paperback rights to the novel were sold for $813,000, movie rights netted about $350,000 and the Book-of-the-Month Club paid $100,000.

How Tar Heel Congressmen And Senators Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes June 5 through June 12.

HOUSE
FAIR HOUSING — The House voted 205 for and 204 against to put additional enforcement teeth into the 1968 civil rights act that bans discrimination in housing sales and rentals. The vote endorsed the establishment of Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) administrative law courts to speedily judge complaints of housing discrimination and, where warranted, levy fines. Presently, persons alleging discrimination have to seek redress in the federal courts, a route that critics say is too lengthy and costly. The overall bill (HR 5200) later was passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., a supporter, said "I need not remind the members of the house of how cumbersome and burdensome the federal court system is at the present time."

Rep. Clarence Miller, R-

Ohio, an opponent, said the HUD courts could produce "bureaucratic zealotry," and urged the House to "stick to constitutionally prescribed avenues of redress through the federal court system..."

Members voting "yea" wanted housing discrimination complaints to be handled by special HUD judges rather than by the federal courts.

Rep. Charles Rose, D-7, voted "yea."

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.M. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Richardson Preyer, D-6, W.C. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "nay."

HOUSING APPRAISALS — The House adopted, 257 for and 156 against, an amendment to keep real estate appraisers from listing information on race, sex, national origin, schools, churches and synagogues in the property reports. The amendment was attached to HR 5200 (see preceding vote).

Rep. Hamilton Fish, R-N.Y., a supporter, said that "to permit appraisers to mention racial and ethnic factors automatically inserts race into deliberations of the lender as to the amount or the actual granting of a loan."

Rep. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, an opponent, said appraisers need freedom to list all information about a neighborhood in order to "do their important work honestly thus benefiting all members of our society."

Members voting "yea" wanted to exclude racial, ethnic, religious and certain other information from real estate appraisals.

Whitley, Preyer, Rose, Hefner and Martin voted "yea."

Jones, Fountain, Andrews, Neal, Broyhill and Gudger voted "nay."

CENSURE — The House refused, 97 for and 308 against, to soften from censure to reprimand the penalty imposed on Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Calif., for alleged violations of House rules. The House by non-record vote then censured Wilson for converting campaign funds to personal use and accepting money from a man with a direct interest in pending legislation. Expulsion is the severest penalty a congressman can receive from his colleagues. Censure and reprimand are the other penalties.

Defending himself against the House ethics committee charges, Wilson said: "I have never acted in a criminal matter. I have not violated the rules of the House... No one can buy a piece of me. The facts do not support these allegations."

Rep. Wyche Fowler, D-Ga., a member of the ethics committee and an opponent of softening the penalty, said that "after hearing the evidence" the committee "regretfully" recommends censure of Wilson.

Members voting "nay" wanted Wilson to be censured rather than merely reprimanded.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "nay."

SENATE

DRAFTING WOMEN — By a vote of 40 for and 51 against, the Senate refused to require that women as well as men be registered for the military draft. The vote came during debate on a measure (HJ Res 521) appropriating the money necessary to begin registration for the draft. President Carter asked for the money in the wake of Afghanistan.

Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kans., the supporter, said: "Given the growing role of women in the military, I do not feel we can continue to deny the contributions of women by excluding them from registration."

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., an opponent, said: "As to women serving in the services, I have no argument. I do not think they should be drafted; it should be a voluntary thing."

Senators voting "yea" wanted women to be registered for the draft.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

Sen. Robert Morgan, D, did not vote.

DRAFT REGISTRATION — The Senate passed, 58 for and 34 against, and sent back to the House a bill clearing the way for President Carter to register young men for possible draft into the military. The measure (HJ Res 521; see preceding vote) appropriates $13.3 million for registering the nation's four million 19- and 20-year-olds.

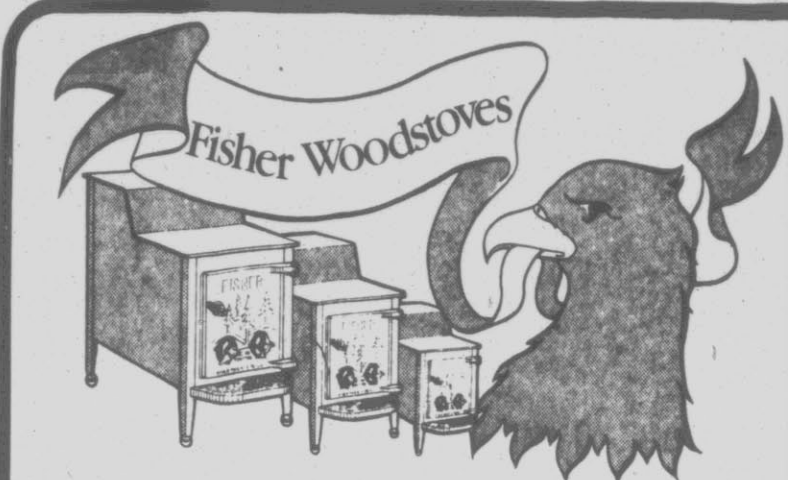

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., a supporter, said the U.S. "simply could not fulfill mobilization plans in a timely and orderly way without registration."

Sen. William Proxmire, D-

Wisc., an opponent, said that among other shortcomings draft registration "does not address the military manpower compensation problem, nor (upgrade) our existing military personnel." Senators voting "yea" supported the president's call for draft registration. Helms and Morgan voted "yea."

Chief Worries Of Middle-aged

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — You're most susceptible to recession blues if you're middle-aged, says Emily Hardy, a staff psychologist in the University of Iowa Counseling Service.

Studies conducted following earlier recessions found that the increase in admissions to mental hospitals that accompanied a falling economy was most noticeable among people in their middle years, she says.

"This may occur for several reasons," Ms. Hardy explains. "If you're middle-aged, you're probably the breadwinner for a family, and your job may be threatened by rising unemployment. You're near the peak of your career and afraid that if you don't make it to the top now, you never will."

"You're still responsible for maintaining a roof over your children's heads, but you may also need to supply both economic and emotional support for aging parents," she adds.

How can you keep worries about making ends meet from overwhelming you?

First, reassess what is really important in your life, advises Ms. Hardy. This should put an end to the notion that having to repair the old car instead of buying a new one would be a disaster; that having to encourage teen-agers to get part-time jobs would blight their "carefree youth"; that having to give up the second (or third) TV set in the family would crumble family harmony.

Ms. Hardy believes people may have turned to "things" to fill major gaps in their lives. "You may buy more gadgets for the house or clothes you don't need because you feel bored or frustrated," she points out.

"But once you set your priorities straight," she continues, "you can give up a vacation trip to remodel part of the house into a small apartment for Granddad — who shouldn't live alone any more — or to pay tuition for night classes that could lead to a better position."

Your job worries shouldn't loom so large once you're able to tighten your belt when you need to, Ms. Hardy explains.

Americans' "work ethic" has led most of them to tie their identity almost entirely to their jobs, says Ms. Hardy, who believes this is a mistake.

"It really doesn't make sense to feel that you've become a nobody the minute you lose a job," she says. "You have exactly the same skills you had before the boss told you he had to let you go."

One remedy which Ms. Hardy suggests for this vulnerable "eggs in one basket" philosophy is to develop twin or triple identities off the job. "Cultivate a caring atmosphere in your block by showing genuine concern for your neighbors' problems and by getting them together for summer picnics," she urges. "Or volunteer to lead your child's Scout troop or other church or youth groups. You'll relax as they help you get reacquainted with the child in yourself."

Extra Return On Food Stamps

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — Home gardeners can more than double their money's worth in food stamps by using the stamps to buy vegetable seeds or plants. Prof. Muriel Brink of Cornell University says grocery stores and markets are considered better sources of vegetable seeds and plants for food stamp patrons because most garden centers and nurseries do not accept the stamps.

Common Market Eyes Growing World Affairs Role

By BARRY JAMES
BRUSSELS, Belgium. (UPI) — It's the world's largest trading bloc, importing and exporting more than the United States and the Soviet Union combined.

Yet the European Economic Community, the nine-nation Common Market, remains a political mouse, whose collective influence on world affairs is insignificant in relation to its commercial muscle.

What is widely perceived here as a leadership vacuum in Washington, however, is leading the community to reappraise its international responsibilities.

Events in Iran, Afghanistan and the Middle East are beginning to force the community to think together on foreign affairs, even if, from Washington's viewpoint, the progress is slow, erratic and minimal.

British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington said in a recent interview that the community is starting to cooperate more on foreign policy "in the belief that perhaps the nine of us together will carry more weight than each of us would do alone."

The community has agreed on a British proposal for the neutralization of Afghanistan, although it failed to come up with a common position on an Olympic boycott. Nor do the EEC partners agree on what to do if the Soviet Union insists on annexing Afghanistan indefinitely.

Both France and West Germany are reluctant to impose trade sanctions on the Soviet Union that might further jeopardize detente and deprive them of a profitable market. There is some fear that the Soviet Union will use this sentiment to try to drive a wedge between Europe and the United States and between the European partners themselves.

EEC cooperation did not prevent French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing from taking off on his lone-wolf mission to Warsaw to meet Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, although West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt said he consulted his allies before accepting a Soviet invitation to go to Moscow for talks. The Soviet Union does not recognize the EEC.

Together, the EEC nations imposed trade sanctions on Iran in solidarity with the United States. But their agreement to backdate the penalties to Nov. 4, when the U.S. hostages were seized, was quickly repudiated by Britain because Parliament wouldn't support the measure.

The community partners plan soon to resume a "Euro-Arab dialogue" that could involve the Palestine Liberation Organization. President Carter, however, warned the United States would veto any European resolution at the United Nations that he considered might destroy or subvert the Camp David peace process. The Europeans have raised the possibility of sponsoring a United Nations resolution specifically affirming the rights of the Palestinians to self-determination.

Leaders of the four biggest EEC nations will meet President Carter in Venice at the end of June for an economic summit conference expected to deal with differences over South-West Asia and the Middle East.

The external challenges facing the EEC coincide with a period of crisis and tension within the community that threatens to weaken its ability to play a more active role in international affairs. The community is beset by inflation, unemployment, energy scarcity and regional decline. It is soured by a dispute between Britain and its partners over contributions to the community budget. It is fast approaching the point where it will run out of money to pay for its lavish farm support structure, which in turn menaces the Common Agricultural Policy that is one of the pillars of the EEC. Instead of giving their full attention to the international crisis, EEC leaders are in open disarray over such topics as mutton and fish.

"Looking ahead, we face no less than the breakup of the established economic and social order on which post-war Europe was built," said Roy Jenkins, the president of the EEC's executive commission, in a policy speech earlier this year.

Unless the community can get a grip on such problems as inflation and unemployment, he warned, "our society will risk dislocation and eventual collapse."

On top of this disarray is the challenge of the pending enlargement of the community from 9 to 12 members. Greece will join the Common Market in January 1981. Spain and Portugal also will join the bloc, which now comprises Belgium, Britain, Denmark, France, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and West Germany.

The need to accommodate hundreds of new "Eurocrats" in Brussels and the search for simultaneous translators from Danish to Greek is only a small part of the enlargement problem.

The enlargement will extend the territory of the EEC by half. Agricultural output will increase by a quarter, adding to already chronic surpluses of wine, olive oil, fruit and vegetables. Industries in the prospective members will compete with crisis-hit sectors in existing member countries like steel, shipbuilding and textiles.

Even worse, the new countries will add their own crop of unemployed to the EEC's existing bitter harvest. By the time enlargement is completed, there could be between 13 and 14 million unemployed in the community, equivalent to the population of The Netherlands, one of its medium-ranked members.

Despite these economic and social problems, admission of the new members is a political commitment. The Common Market is open to any European democracy that can meet the costs of free trade competition. The enlargement is "a gathering in of European civilization," says Jenkins.

Faced by so many economic strains, can the community continue to pursue its goal of political and monetary union? In headier days, 1980 was set as the target date for union. But this event now appears to be receding ever further. The EEC's current problems tend to obscure its real achievements, both philosophical and practical. West Europeans may squabble vehemently about hog prices, but largely because of the spirit of cooperation fostered by the Common Market, war among them no longer is thinkable.

The Common Market's 260 million citizens can move freely throughout the community and settle where they wish with a minimum of formalities. They can seek work where they like and enjoy all the social benefits of their chosen country. Barriers to trade have come down. Most restrictions on movement of capital have been removed.

The Common Agricultural Policy, a regional development fund, a social fund and the European Investment Bank have helped cushion farm and industrial workers against some of the effects of fresh competition and rapid technological change.

A directly elected European parliament, approaching its first anniversary, provides democratic underpinning for the community.

In Luxembourg, the European court of justice, meeting in red-robed splendor, passes judgment on governments and companies alike in the cause of free trade and fair competition.

Because of their European Monetary System (EMS) the EEC countries have enjoyed unexpected currency stability during a period when the Japanese yen declined 40 percent against the dollar, the dollar declined 10 percent against an average of European funds and gold took off on a giddy flight. The eight countries in the EMS are continuing with plans for monetary union backed by a European reserve fund. Britain is not yet a member of the EMS, but keeps the pound closely pegged to other European currencies.

As the world's largest trader, with a gross domestic product almost as big as that of the United States, the EEC has negotiated commercial or association agreements with more than 90 countries. It has a special trade and aid relationship with more than 50 former colonies in Africa, the Caribbean and the Pacific, and is a major importer of goods from the Third World.

The EEC is run by a commission that proposes, a council of ministers that disposes and a 410-member parliament that acts as the "people's voice."

In recent years, the leadership of the EEC has fallen increasingly into the hands of the council, which means into the hands of national governments.

The commission, the EEC's civil service, has correspondingly declined in influence, effectiveness and reputation.

A British parliamentary committee said recently the commission failed to exercise effective control over the public money it handled. An internal audit cited lavish expense account spending by some of the 13 commissioners who head the organization.

1981 and Spain and Belgium which are expected to become members of the EEC soon. (UPI Map)

Fayetteville Shares Life With Army

By RICHARD H. GROWALD
UPI National Reporter
FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — It's not quite 5 p.m. on a Monday afternoon but the girls are already walking Hay Street.

They are white, black and Asian and not shy. They stop on the sidewalk, their feet apart and try to fix the eyes of passing male motorists.

Behind them are such bars as the Suzy Wong and the Kim Chi. It looks familiar to anyone who ever walked what used to be called Tu Do Street in what used to be called Saigon in what used to be called South Vietnam.

The sin strip stops abruptly at the steps of the Hay Street Methodist Church, a red brick bastion guarding the rest of the main street of a city married for 62 years to an army post, Ft. Bragg, "Home of the Airborne."

Hay Street is easy to see. The heavier relationship between Bragg and Fayetteville is deeper. It is a kinship not unknown in America wherever the armed forces and towns coexist. It is a fact of American life, especially in the sunbelt where weather and the seniority of southern and western Congressmen have made homes for the nation's forts, camps, airfields and bases.

"Ft. Bragg is part of our town," said Richard Farmer, 57, hospital employe. "Fayetteville depends on the fort for our living and our business."

Citizens may prefer to look away from Hay Street's catering to the men of Ft. Bragg. But they honor the fort.

"Fayetteville regards Bragg as part of itself," Jack Lovick, 61, custodian of the federal building in the green riverside park-like section of downtown, a part of town more traditionally magnolia and moss than up the hill and into Hay Street.

"We all know that the airborne troops who took part in the attempt to free the American hostages in Iran came from Bragg. It makes us proud."

"More or less, that raid was like Fayetteville doing something for America," he said.

Earlier in their lives, as so many Fayetteville males, both Farmer and Lovick served in uniform in Bragg. Fayetteville has a population of some 60,000. Ft. Bragg now has about 39,000 troops.

A few figures tell of the Bragg-Fayetteville marriage: according to U.S. Army figures, 52,000 military dependents live in and around Fayetteville.

In a Ft. Bragg office, under a sign advertising the Army's XVIII Airborne Corps as "Skilled, Tough, Ready Around The Clock," post spokesman Mike Shutak spoke of the fort-city kinship.

Shutak wiped a hand over his balding head and said the feeling shows. After the Iranian abortive raid, townsfolk sent in good wishes by telephone, letter and in person. He said the relationship is so good that when Congress recently held up money for army pay, Fayetteville's bank gave the married troops the extra credit they needed.

Mrs. V.J. "Vi" Atkinson, an office colleague of Shutak, said the special depth of patriotism of Fayetteville is a factor. "You've seen the highway signs between Fayetteville and Bragg. You know, the billboards saying 'Hang In, America' and 'Let Our People Go'."

She smiled. "Folks here are so patriotic that they may even whip out a Confederate flag on you now and then," she said and smiled.

Beyond the forested fort, past the highway links lined with stores selling autos, groceries, pawned goods, fast foods and some faster pleasures, back into Fayetteville, John West, 60, truck mechanic, sat on a rooming house front porch. He kept his can of beer under the rocker between sips; this is still a southern town and the porch is not facing Hay Street.

"Grew up all my life with Ft. Bragg," he said. "If it wasn't for Ft. Bragg, Fayetteville wouldn't hardly exist. Oh, hell, the city is getting other business, other employment. But Bragg is special."
