Carter Team Minimizing 'Differences'

ROME (AP) - President Carter met with Italy's president and prime minister today as he and his aides sought at the start of a week-long European trip to minimize their differences with America's allies over how to deal with Soviet aggression.

North Atlantic Treaty Organization decision to deploy the missiles to counter Soviet nuclear superiority in Europe.

Muskie told reporters aboard Air Force One that Schmidt "insists he still supports" what would be known as the Theater Nuclear Force, or TNF.

"Apparently, there has been some rhetoric that there is a change" in Schmidt's position, Muskie said. "I would expect that when it's talked out, there will continue to be agreement."

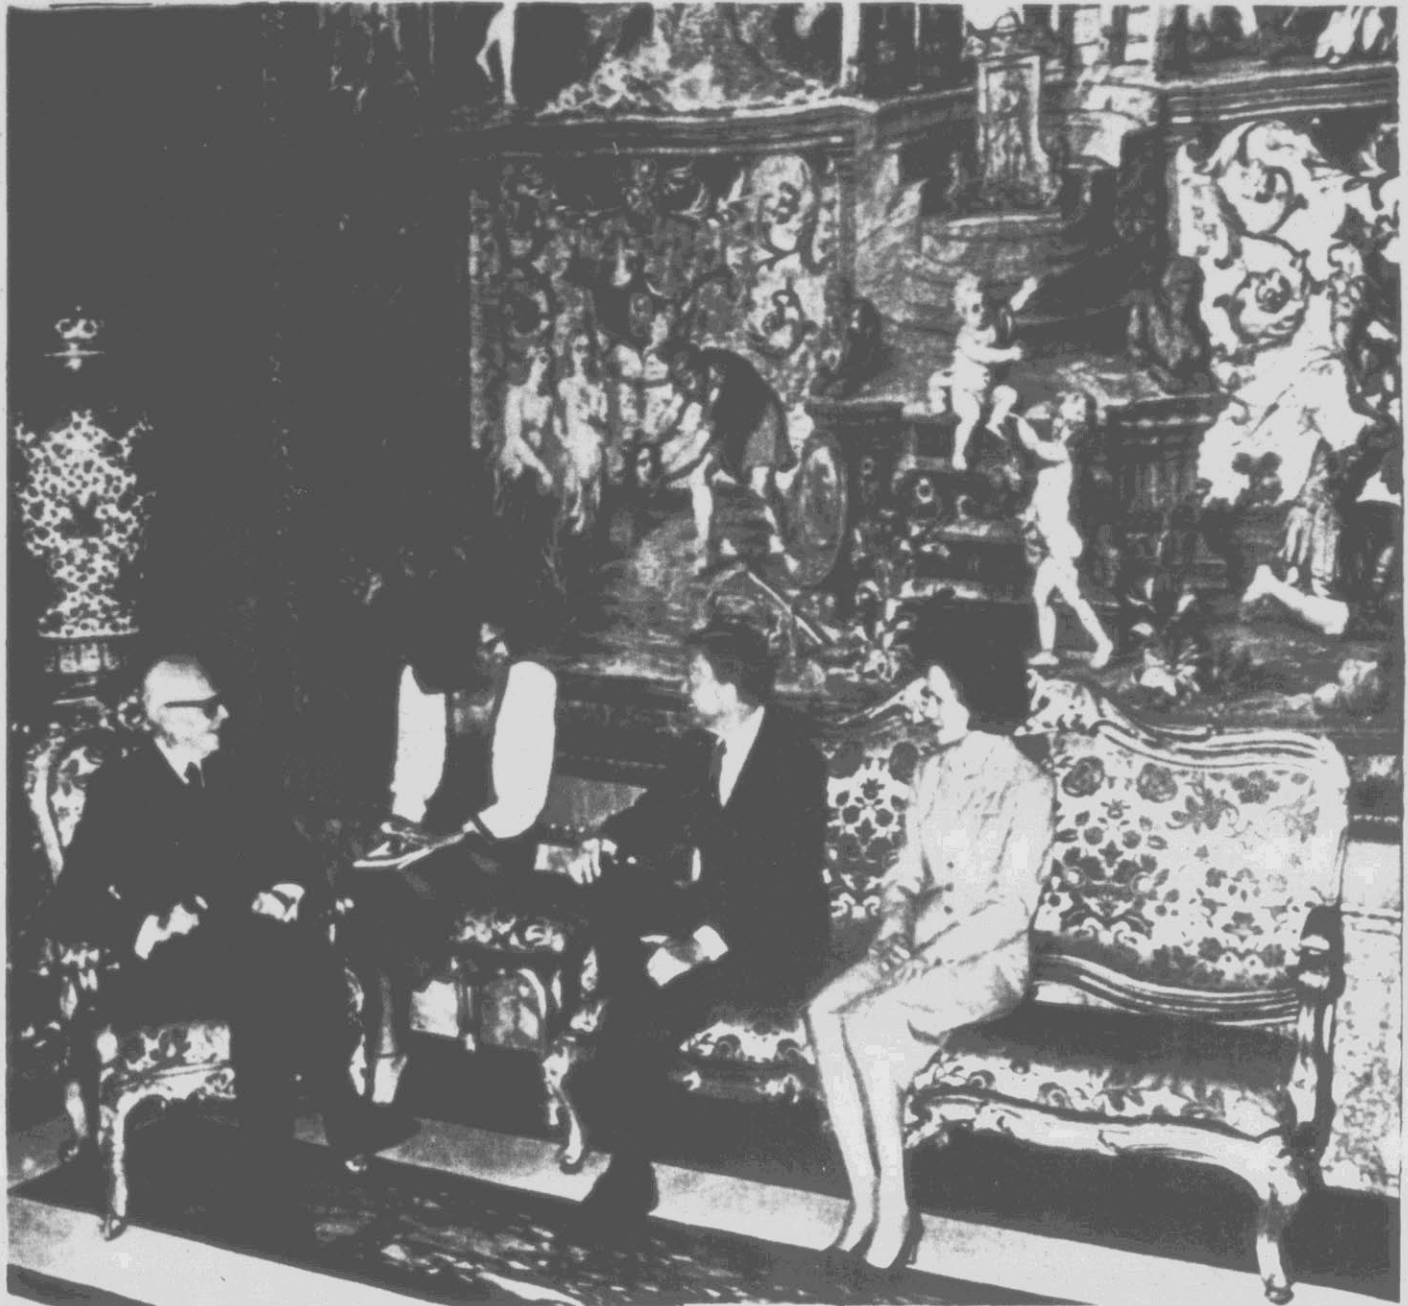

From the start of the trip, the potential for differences has been played down. Carter, in a televised

Washington departure statement, muted the language of a prepared text.

In an advance version of his remarks that was distributed to reporters, the president said: "I will be totally frank with you, as I will be with them (the leaders at the economic meetings in Venice). The industrial democracies are being tested."

Carter's text made plain that he saw the Soviet Union as the source of the testing.

When he actually delivered his remarks, however, Carter's message took on a quite different import. He said: "The industrial democracies are meeting now very severe tests successfully."

Grain-Sale Bar Eased?

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - In a quiet reversal of policy, the Carter administration has told U.S.-based multinational grain shippers they can sell foreign-grown grain to the Soviet Union, the Minneapolis Tribune reported in a copyright story today.

The administration's policy change reportedly was so quiet that confirmation of the switch came first from officials of Cargill Inc., a worldwide grain-handling company based in Minnetonka, Minn.

A spokesman for the U.S. Department of Agriculture confirmed the news later, but only under condition that he not be quoted by name, the newspaper said.

The USDA spokesman told the Tribune that no announcement of the change in grain-trading policy was planned, and there was no official statement of why the administration changed its position.

Cargill had voluntarily stopped selling foreign-grown grain to the Soviet Union shortly after President Carter announced the embargo of U.S. grain sales to the Soviet Union in January.

Carter ordered the embargo Jan. 4 after the Soviet Union's military intervention in Afghanistan. He withheld 17 million metric tons of U.S. grain the Soviets had on order, but allowed 8 million tons, which had been promised in a five-year contract, to be delivered.

At that time, the administration asked U.S.

multinational grain traders to give up doing business with the Soviet Union.

The Tribune said that the embargo on U.S.-grown grain remains in force. The 17 million tons of U.S. grain withheld from the Soviet Union remains mostly in government-sponsored grain programs. Farmers complain the stockpile continues to depress the prices they can get for grain.

Stuart Baird, a Cargill spokesman, said company officials were told by the administration this week that Cargill could resume trading foreign-grown grain with the Soviet Union.

Cargill, which held 22 percent of the grain covered by Soviet contracts at the time the embargo was announced, was hard hit by the embargo.

Baird said Cargill officials believe they know the reason for the policy change.

"The policy of not letting the foreign affiliates of U.S. companies sell to the Russians has not denied grain to the Russians. It seems clear they have been able to find other supplies."

"We're talking about non-U.S. grain ... It was going to get there one way or the other. Our government perhaps said, why deny U.S.-based firms an opportunity to take part in this activity, when the business is going to go to somebody?" Baird said.

Bitter Debate Is Over Senate OKs Budget For State

By ELISSA McCRARY Associated Press Writer RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) -

The bitter debate over the state's $358 million budget is over and the budget package is headed for enactment following Senate approval of the measure Thursday.

With no fanfare, the Senate voted unanimously to approve an amendment to the budget passed by the House on Wednesday.

The amendment reworks part of the cash-flow section, banning deficit spending in the highway program. It allows the Department of Transportation to cancel road-construction contracts if state revenues run short.

The cash-flow system was crucial to the Hunt administration's budget because it would provide a one-time $57 million windfall next year. The plan allows the state to begin road-construction projects before appropriating money to complete the projects.

Gov. Jim Hunt said Thursday he is "grateful" for the Legislature's thorough consideration of the budget.

"This budget provides for progress and is the greatest budget for education since the (Gov. Terry) Sanford administration," Hunt said.

Final approval of the budget was virtually assured Wednesday when the House reversed its vote of the day before and reinstated the cash-flow section to the budget package. House members then approved the budget by a vote of 101-13 after a four-hour debate.

A day earlier, the House had voted 58-57 to take out the cash-flow item.

Several House members acknowledged that they had been pressured by the Hunt administration to change their votes.

House Finance Chairman Rep. John Gamble, D-Lincolnton, had opposed the new system, saying it would violate the state's ban on deficit spending.

Last week, Gamble sent a memo to all legislators calling the budget "flagrantly unconstitutional and totally irresponsible."

Liquor Law Change Advances

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - The state House Thursday gave tentative approval to a bill that would change the state's liquor laws to make it easier for cities and towns to hold referendums on alcohol and mixed-drink sales.

The Senate already has passed the measure, and it only needs final House approval to be enacted.

The House tentatively approved the bill by a vote of 64-36. The bill would change the law that now requires any area that has rejected a liquor proposal in an election to wait three years before holding a second referendum.

Under the measure, cities and towns located in counties where liquor-by-the-drink has been rejected in a county-wide referendum could hold their own city or town vote on the same proposal without the three-year wait.

Rep. Vernon James, D-Elizabeth City, said the bill was needed in Dare County, where some coastal resort towns want to hold their own liquor-by-the-drink votes.

Traditional opponents of liquor legislation said the bill was another step in weakening state controls on alcohol.

"There has not been a year that we've been in session that we have not liberalized our liquor laws and made liquor more available," said Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Kinston.

"Really, what we're doing here is attempting to override the will of a county," said Rep. Ed Nye, D-Elizabethtown.

Problems Said To Abound With U.S. Navy's Jet Fighter Planes

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) - The Navy's most advanced fighter plane and a new jet still being tested have serious problems, according to officials.

Engines for the F-14 Tomcat virtually must be rebuilt at a projected cost of more than a half billion dollars to keep the planes operating safely, according to military sources quoted in the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot today.

Congressional sources said the engine's redesign apparently will be done at the Norfolk Naval Air Rework Facility, the newspaper reported.

Meanwhile, the F-18 is still in the testing stage and is being criticized by the General Accounting Office for ineffectiveness almost before it gets off the ground. The GAO, in a report that has not been made public, found that prototypes do not meet design specifications related to range, acceleration and speed, the newspaper said.

Until these deficiencies are corrected, the plane's "effectiveness to perform its missions is uncertain," the GAO says in the new report. The F-18, made by McDonnell Douglas Corp., is slated to become operational with Navy and Marine Corps squadrons about 1983.

After 18 months of testing, the F-18's range and acceleration are still below what the Navy said it needed when the plane was planned. Even work that led to huge cost overruns so far has failed to correct the deficiencies.

Between September 1979 and March, the estimated cost of 1,377 F-18s that the Navy wants to buy increased from $15.9 million per aircraft to an average of $17.4 million. Navy officials predicted that 1,845 aircraft ultimately will be needed at a total cost of about $30 billion.

Navy officials acknowledge the F-14 engine must be redesigned but still emphasize what they say are successes of the F-18.

Cost of changes to the already operational F-14 will be high.

Military officials say that Pratt & Whitney power plants for the F-14 must have 35 "fixes" to improve safety and durability. An estimated $640 million could be spent on such improvements in the next five to six years, officials said.

Not all of the problem engine components were manufactured by Pratt & Whitney. Some were supplied by subcontractors.

The rotary actuator in the engine's fuel-control system is an example of the engine's problems. It can suddenly shut down an engine or reduce power when a pilot doesn't expect it, or, conversely, increase power at times when such a surge is dangerous.

Such an unexpected power increase reportedly caused an F-14 to roll over the side of a carrier several years ago.

Lt. Cmdr. Jeff Cook, an F-14 pilot involved with Tomcat overhauls already being done at the Norfolk rework facility, said of the rotary actuator:

"We're not to where we want to be at the present time. Ideally, we'd have a perfect actuator. But the fact is that U.S. technology, or any technology, can't put out a perfect product. We continue to strive to get there."

Meanwhile, when rotary actuators perform erratically, one of the most advanced fighter planes in the world will continue to be "very difficult to impossible to control," said Cook.

Engine compressor stalls also have been a problem in the F-14 engine, reportedly causing three Tomcats to be lost at a cost of more than $60 million.

Figures compiled by the Navy show there were 302

Tomcat engine stalls from February 1976 through May 1978. About 174 came at subsonic speed and 94 at supersonic speed.

Sources said that stall pressure on the compressor is approached during critical portions of the Tomcat's mission, often as it winds up to speeds of twice the speed of sound or more.

"They're not dependable at all," said one F-14 engine expert, asking not to be identified. "We're going to have to do something by 1982 or else the F-14 won't be flying at all."

The F-18 is planned as a replacement for both the F-4 Phantom fighter and the A-7 attack jets in Navy squadrons and for Marine Corps F-4 and A-4 close air support squadrons. It has a dual fighter-attack capability that, with a change of weaponry, allows it to attack other aircraft or ground targets.

But technical problems and cost overruns led Rep. Bruce F. Vento, D-Minn., to charge last week that the plane "needs a basic redesign."

The F-18's acceleration from Mach 0.8 (eight-tenths the speed of sound) to Mach 1.6 at 35,000 feet has been 9 percent to 27 percent below Navy specifications.

Reveal Duchess Is Very Ill

NEW YORK (AP) - The woman for whom Edward VIII of England gave up his throne was "very, very, very ill" when she observed her 84th birthday, a friend said.

The Duchess of Windsor marked her birthday very quietly Wednesday in the mansion she rents in Paris from the French government. There were no celebrations.

"She is too sick to enjoy anything like that," a close family friend was reported as saying in today's New York Daily News.

New Car Sales Down In N.C.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) - New car sales in North Carolina were down 35 percent in May from what they were for the same month last year, the state Automobile Dealers Association reports.

New-car registration for the first five months of 1980 is down by 13 percent, the association said.

Quail Ridge Has Ribbon Cutting

Ribbon cutting activities this morning launched the weekend grand opening for the first units in Quail Ridge Townhomes, located off 14th Street Extension.

A model unit within the first section of new condominiums, the first developed in the projected six-year Quail Ridge program, will be open to the public from 1-6 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Multi Family Investment Co., with William H. Clark and Leroy Cherry, is developing the 270-unit project, which will be completed in phases, a spokesman said. The first section, involving some 60 units, is projected for a completion date around January of 1982, it was pointed out.

Six buildings or 36 units are involved in the initial construction activity and several condominiums are completed and occupied.

The new townhomes feature both one and two story construction, the spokesman pointed out. Utilizing a contemporary design, the condominiums offer from 1,440 to 1,990 square feet. Work is also underway on the recreation facilities for the development, and should be available for use later this summer, it was mentioned. Facilities planned are a pool, tennis courts and party house.

The spokesman said the units, which are located within the city limits but in the county school district, were built to exceed the E-300 energy performance standards set by Greenville Utilities Commission.

Total value of the development, including the recreational facilities and land, is some $17 million, it was reported. First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Pitt County handled the construction financing and most of the permanent financing.

Mayor Don McGlohon was scheduled to cut the ribbon this morning and various other city and county officials were invited to take part in the opening activities, including members of the City Council and Pitt County Commissioners.

Tougher Stance By Bani-Sadr

By The Associated Press

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, fresh from reshuffling the Iranian military command, renewed the newspaper war against his Islamic fundamentalist foes. Meanwhile, America's U.N. ambassador expressed guarded optimism about a fresh initiative to free the American hostages.

In the Qotur region of northwestern Iran, fighting between police and armed civilian groups left 35 to 40 rebels dead and two police wounded, according to Tehran Radio, which quoted a Pars news agency in interview with West Azerbaijan's governor general on Friday.

Shortly after he named new military leaders Thursday, Bani-Sadr told reporters from his newspaper Enghlab Eslami, "By objective investigations and reports, you can destroy the opportunist positions of those who try by seeding unrealistic ideas to defeat the march of the revolution."

The newspaper on Wednesday quoted Dr. Hassan Ayat, a leader of the Islamic Republican Party which favors spy trials for some of the hostages seized 230 days ago, as saying Bani-Sadr was a "tool of America" who would be "ousted soon."

But Ayat told reporters that his remarks were "distorted and censored." By Bani-Sadr's reporters. "I had said something similar to those so-called texts but they have censored my statement in their own favor."

Ayat said Bani-Sadr and his "counter-revolutionary aides" would go to any lengths, even murder, to keep him from disclosing the truth about the aborted U.S. mission to rescue the hostages April 25.

He criticized orders he said came from Bani-Sadr to destroy some of the American helicopters used in the mission and said he had "revealing documents... that I will disclose to the nation to identify U.S. imperialist agents in Iran."

Meanwhile, Donald McHenry, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, told reporters in New York he hoped his discussions with U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim will lead to "some kind of positive next step... in the next several days."

He did not elaborate, but U.N. sources speculated McHenry was talking about the possibility that the U.N. commission investigating Iran's charges against the U.S. government might be allowed to return to Iran shortly. The speculation was bolstered by former Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme.

Palme, also in New York, said he thought the U.N. commission might still play a role in ending the hostages' captivity. Palme and two other members of the Socialist International recently visited Tehran and held talks with Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh.

Adib Daoudy, a Syrian envoy who was part of the commission, also left Iran recently after talks with Ghotbzadeh. The commission spent 17 days in Tehran three months ago but was denied permission to visit the hostages because it refused to publish its report before consulting Waldheim.

Tehran Radio's broadcast of a Pars telephone interview with Hamshid Haqgu, West Azerbaijan's governor-general, quoted him as saying the "gendarmier" local police forces inflicted heavy casualties on what he termed illegal armed groups in Qotur, crossed the Khan Valley and cleared three hamlets.

"Armed groups launched an attack on the gendarmier forces in the Qotur region (Thursday) night, but the latter, already alert to the attack, opened heavy fire and killed some 35 to 40 of the assailants and continued to advance. Two gendarmes were wounded," Haqgu was quoted as saying.

"Following this clash, the hamlets of Habashi Bala, Habashi Payin and Zarik were cleared of the outlaws," the radio said Pars quoted him as saying.

Day Care
Sen. Jack Childers, D-Lexington, sponsor of a controversial amendment to exempt church-operated day-care centers from state-licensing requirements, withdrew his proposal.

Childers decided to withdraw the measure when he was told in a Senate Education Committee meeting that the Senate defeated a similar proposal last year.

Childers said in light of that fact, he did not think the committee should consider the amendment.

The proposal would have amended a bill, filed by Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Kinston, to allow Head Start programs to use public-school classrooms without re-inspection of the classrooms by the state. The education committee voted to postpone action on that bill indefinitely.

About 50 fundamentalist Christians supporting Childers' amendment attended the education committee meeting, and several of them urged the panel to approve the proposal before it was withdrawn.

Opponents of the amendment said only 20 of 390 churches in the state that operate day-care centers are seeking the exemption. They said the amendment would affect 15,000 children in all church-run day-care centers.

Special Bills
Rep. Ed Holmes, D-Pittsboro, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, appointed a subcommittee to consider 200 special bills.

Appropriations for the bills will come from $6.5 million in state revenues in excess of the $358 million surplus budget. Legislative staff analysts have said the total amount sought by the special bills comes to about $53 million.

Some of the bills were carried over from last year while others have been filed during the short summer session.

A Senate appropriations subcommittee was named earlier to study the bills.

Utilities Commission
The House and Senate approved two of Gov. Jim Hunt's appointments as utility regulators.

In a joint session, the Legislature voted overwhelmingly to confirm Robert Fischbach as executive director of the public staff of the state Utilities Commission and Douglas Leary as a member of the commission.

Both have been serving in those posts since they were appointed by Hunt last year.

Ski Injuries
The House tentatively approved an amended bill that would require persons injured on ski slopes to notify the resort within one year.

The original bill was passed by the Senate last year but carried over by the House this year.

An amendment, sponsored by Rep. Paul Pulley Jr., D-Durham, would require the resort to post signs stating that injuries must be reported within a one-year period.

The bill was scheduled for a final vote today.

Judgments
The House heard an explanation of a complex judgment bill but adjourned without taking action on the measure.

The sponsor of the measure, Rep. William McMillan, D-Statesville, said

Life As It's Lived

Entering A New Phase On Dining-Out Habits

BY GAIL MICHAELS

Last week Phillip and I went out to eat for the first time with both our kids, and my stomach has been upset ever since.

There is something about a restaurant that triggers a thoroughly obnoxious response in children. It is even apparent in infants. A baby can be fed, burped, changed, and carried in a state of euphoria through a restaurant parking lot, but the minute he crosses the threshold, he'll let loose with a screech that could shatter a pair of bifocals.

But a loud baby is infinitely preferable to a quiet baby. A quiet baby in a restaurant setting means only one thing, that the disposable diaper didn't work.

In other words, if mother and baby aren't wearing a path in the lobby carpet while everyone else eats, Mom is holed up in the restroom trying to restore the original color to the top of her dress.

These treks to the restroom don't stop when the child passes the diaper stage. The typical toilet trainee would rather visit a restroom than Disneyland. Of course, the mother can refuse to go on the chance that the child is interested in the decorative rather than the functional value of the retreat. But only the foolhardy would make this decision over carpet.

Eventually, however, most children outgrow their fascination with porcelain fixtures. They prefer, instead, kicking the bottom of the table, blowing cola through straws, and picking the mustard off cheeseburgers.

In fact, their fetish for cheeseburgers makes all those earlier trips to the restroom seem like weekends at the beach. Meg whines when we eat at a seafood restaurant because it doesn't serve cheeseburgers. She screams at the sight of a Chinese restaurant. In no way can I adequately express what her food preference has done to our dining habits, except to say that the mere mention of cheeseburgers makes Phillip turn green.

He even has a little lecture on trying new things. He gives it by rote when we're eating out.

But in the interest of keeping the peace on Zachary's restaurant debut, not only did we take Meg to a place that served cheeseburgers, but we refrained from bad-mouthing them. And on my trip with Zachary from the lobby to the restroom I could see that Phillip and Meg were getting along great.

Unfortunately, when the two of us got back freshly washed, Meg was staring stubbornly at the waitress and Phillip was a ghastly shade of white.

"What's wrong?" I asked. "She wants steak," Phillip squeaked.

I turned to Meg. "Who taught you such language?" "Daddy always says to try something new, so I'm going to try steak."

I pointed to the menu. "Look at these nice children's selections: fried chicken, hot dogs, fish."

She shook her head. "I want steak."

I looked at the cheapest steak price. It was $6.95.

Meanwhile Phillip was holding Meg's hands and looking deeply into her eyes. "Please, just for Daddy, have a cheeseburger."

"No, I want steak."

We have definitely entered the worst stage yet.

Indict 16 In Drug Activity

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Federal authorities said Thursday 16 persons have been indicted on charges of conspiring to distribute massive amounts of Quaaludes, marijuana and cocaine in a drug operation linking several states and South America.

The indictment was returned by a federal grand jury in Fayetteville two weeks ago but was not made public until Thursday. Authorities said seven of the 16 people indicted had been arrested.

They are accused of engaging in a series of actions between Sept. 1, 1979, and May 22 involving the inspection, delivery and sale of drugs in North Carolina.

The indictment said most of the drugs were brought into North Carolina from Tennessee and Kentucky by airplanes which landed at Grannis Airport in Fayetteville.

Deliveries included 10,000 pounds of marijuana and more than 19,000 dosage units of methaqualone, known commonly as Quaaludes, according to the indictment.

Seven of those indicted were from North Carolina:

Jack Edward Truelove and Athal Elbert Truelove, both of Fayetteville; Howard Franklin Palmer, Howard Wayne Palmer and Susan Palmer, all of Hoke County, and John Each, a serviceman stationed at Fort Bragg.

Also indicted were: Betty Griffith, James Knight, Loran Wischer and Sonny Wischer, all believed to be from Knoxville, Tenn.; Jerry D. Rice and Jeff Frazier, both of Corbin, Ky.; George Manteghi, Norton, Va.; Gary Leer Frazier, of Missouri; Robert W. Comer, formerly of Montgomery County, Va., and Harold Nyman, a former Blacksburg, Va., resident now serving a federal prison term.

The indictment identified Nyman as a pilot of a plane owned by Comer.

Mental Health Board Meets

The Pitt County Area Mental Health Board met Wednesday with the chairman, Dr. James H. Bailey, presenting information about the recent state and federal annual site visits.

Committee reports were given by Ray Rogers, Bill McDonald, Alan Hahn, Thelma Switzer, and Robert Martin. Area Director Dr. Stephen Creech presented his monthly report. Nancy Middleton, Coordinator of Consultation/Education and Prevention, reported on area board training plans and presented a taped interview about transitional home living.

The month mental health board meetings are open to the public.

Miss Riggan Is Installed

Joyce Riggan has been installed as Worthy Advisor, Greenville Assembly No. 67, International Order of Rainbow for Girls. The ceremony took place Sunday afternoon at the Masonic Temple here.

Miss Gigi Mosley, grand representative to Oklahoma and installing officer, welcomed guests and introduced remaining installing officers: Miss Rose Jackson, P.W.A., marshal; Miss Kim Harrell, immediate P.W.A., recorder; Miss Phyllis Jones, grand representative to Indiana, chaplain; and Miss Brenda Foley, P.W.A., musician.

Other officers are: Worthy Associate Advisor, Lisa Topping; Charity, Lori Jo Edwards; Hope, Sarah Houston; Faith, Kathryn Kelley; Recorder, Connie Briley; Treasurer, Karen Kingsbury; Chaplain, Margaret Clark; Drill Leader, Phyllis Jones; Love, Pam Hawkins; Religion, Beverly Tedder; Nature, Miss Moseley; Immortality, Becky Nelms; Fidelity, Kim Paige; Patriotism, Paige Levey; Service, Leigh Andea Summerfield; Confidential Observer, Kim Harrell; and Musician, Myra Clark.

Miss Riggan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Riggan, her brother and sister, David and Jeanine, were introduced. Riggan presented the gavel to his daughter. Tribute was paid Miss Harrell, who also received a P.W.A. pin from the assembly from Mother Advisor Dr. Betty Levey. A poem was dedicated to her by Miss Riggan.

Miss Riggan received her mascot from Miss Harrell. Special guests were recognized by Miss Riggan including the installing officers. Miss Jones was also recognized as Miss Service of the assembly. Other guests included members of the Advisory Board, Mrs. Sarah Ashton, Mrs. Grace Hill and Mrs. Mary Freeland, Mrs. Mildred Prebish, Worthy Matron of the Order of Eastern Star, Ed Ricks, Crown Point Lodge, and Mrs. Jean Sharp, a Past Mother Advisor.

Merit bars presented included: Miss Jones, wreath; Miss Briley and Miss Jackson, pot of gold awards; Miss Moseley, officer's pin, who is also within 50 service points of reaching Rainbow's highest award, the Service Pin. Miss Jones is also working toward her pin.

Prior to the reception, held in the dining room, the benediction was given by Mrs. Sharp and the officers had their retiring march. The dining room was decorated in the colors of the Worthy Advisor, red and white. Assisting Mrs. Riggan were Mrs. Freeland, Mrs. Jackson and Mrs. Hill. Guests were registered by Mrs. Ashton.

Dear Abby

Give Sister-In-Law A Thank-You

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: When I became pregnant four years ago — at age 43 — I was surprised and certainly not prepared for another child. (I had three grown children.) My sister-in-law gave us an old beat-up baby bed she had had in her basement for years. My husband sanded it down and painted it, and it looked like new. We used it until our baby outgrew it, then we sold it along with some other used furniture.

When my sister-in-law heard that we had sold the bed, she demanded that we give her part of the money we got for it. Abby, that baby bed was junk when she gave it to us, and nothing was said about returning it.

Do we owe her anything?

STEAMED IN DAYTONA BEACH

DEAR STEAMED: If she gave it to you, all you owe her is a "thank-you."

DEAR ABBY: I am very upset and hope you can shed some light on a problem concerning our son who is now 19. (I'll call him Mike.)

About five years ago I found several pair of girl's panties hidden under Mike's mattress. I was shocked and told my husband about it. He spoke to Mike, who explained that he and a neighbor boy had "found" them in a trash can behind an apartment building. His father told him to get rid of them, and nothing more was said about it.

All through high school Mike was active in sports, music, clubs, etc. He was very popular with boys and girls. He is now in his sophomore year at college and has been going steady with the same girl for two years. (I'm sure they're doing more than just holding hands.)

Mike is now home for summer vacation. While cleaning his closet, I found a bra, panties and garter belt stuffed into his tennis shoes! I asked him what they were doing there. He got red in the face, said they weren't his and accused me of snooping. Believe me, I was not.

Abby, I am sick. Can our son be a homosexual? He seems so normal. Please help me. I don't know how to handle this.

WORRIED IN ST. PAUL

DEAR WORRIED: Apparently your son has had a fascination for female undergarments since adolescence. Don't be upset. It does not mean he is homosexual: Many males share this kind of behavior and function normally as men.

If your son feels that he has a problem, he should get professional help. (The University of Minnesota has an excellent Human Sexuality Department.)

And it might relieve your mind and your husband's to look into the program, too. The more you understand about a subject, the less worried and upset you will be.

CONFIDENTIAL TO LOVING SISTER IN BREMER-TON, WASH. If you truly want to help your brother get well, let him know that you love him, are confident that he will recover and admire him for finally going into therapy. Offer no suggestions. To tell a person who is undergoing psychoanalysis that all he needs to get well is "common sense," and that permitting his doctor to probe into his early unhappy childhood is causing his depression, is doing him more harm than good.

DINNER PARTY

Fish Steaks Potatoes
Swiss Beans Tomato Salad
Strawberry Shortcake

SWISS BEANS
The sauce gives fine flavor.

1 pound snap beans, trimmed

1 cup boiling water

1/2 teaspoon salt

2 tablespoons butter

2 tablespoons flour

1/4 teaspoon dry mustard

1 cup milk

1 cup grated (medium fine)

Swiss cheese

Slice beans in about

1/2-inch-wide crosswise pieces. Add them to the water and salt in a medium saucepot; with the cover on slightly askew, boil until tender-crisp and still green — about 10 minutes; drain. Meanwhile make a white sauce of the butter, flour, mustard and milk; off heat stir in 1/2 cup of the cheese, then the beans. Reheat quickly but do not boil. Add extra salt to taste. Sprinkle with the remaining cheese. Serve at once, passing a pepper mill. Makes 6 servings.

Is This Survey Needed?

At Pitt County Memorial Hospital it is consultant time again.

The board of trustees voted Tuesday to spend $8,000 to retain a management development firm. The firm's job will be to conduct a survey among the hospital's employees. It was said that the survey is needed to determine how funds can best be spent in order to retain employees. The aim is to determine what benefits are most wanted by employees and what are needed most.

No one can argue that employee retention is important, around a hospital and in any other operation. Particularly is this true in fields where there is a shortage of personnel such as nursing and other medical technical areas.

We have to wonder, though, with all the employees of the hospital under one roof as they are, if their attitudes toward job benefits couldn't be determined without hiring an outside consulting firm.

Isn't there staff enough on hand to prepare forms on which employees can answer questions on job conditions? Couldn't these forms be tabulated and assessed by hospital administrators.

Maybe $8,000 isn't all that much to spend on an outside consulting firm out of the overall hospital budget. It is that much, however, and it could be saved by handling the survey internally.

Looking At The Total Picture

John Anderson sees only himself as standing in the way of the Ronald Reagan presidency.

On the Democratic side, Edward Kennedy sees himself as the only one standing in the way of a Carter re-election.

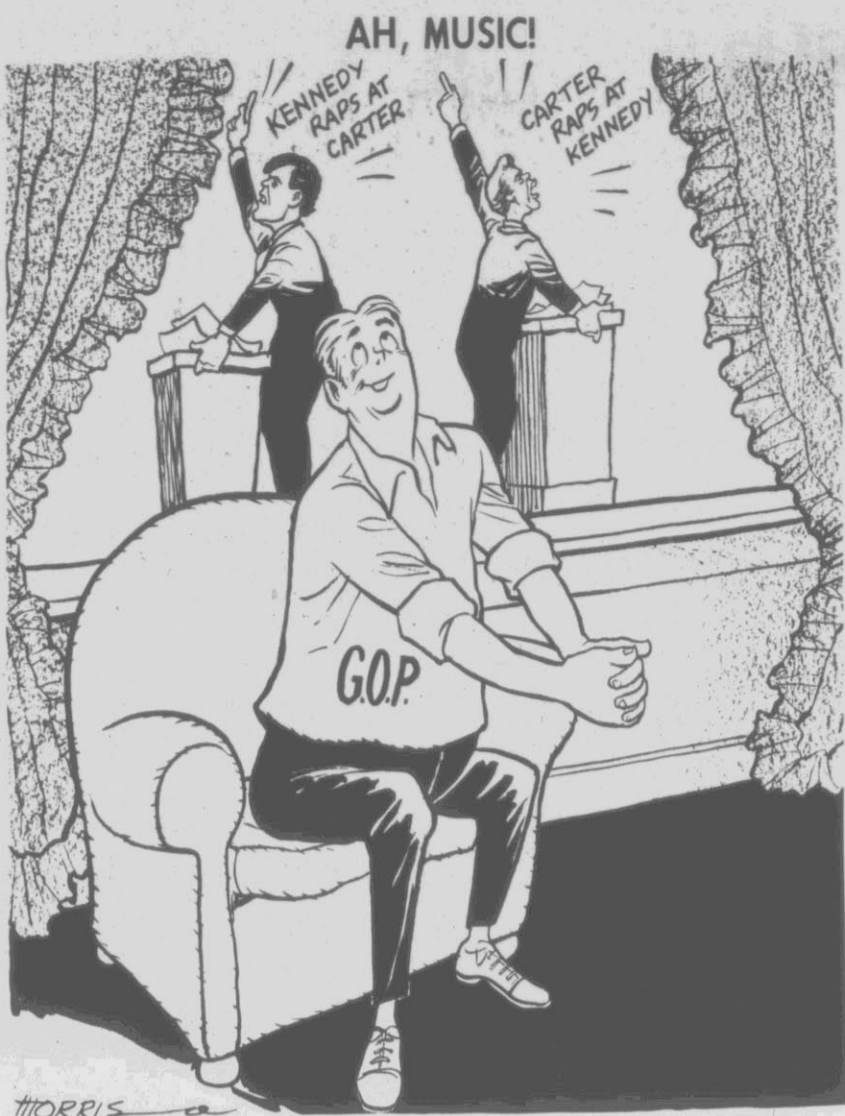

Apparently neither man sees the other possible effects of their continued candidacy.

Anderson's probable run as an independent candidate could drain off votes from President Carter and thus assure the election of Reagan, who apparently Anderson would least like to see in the White House.

On the other hand the continued campaign of Sen. Kennedy could so split the Democratic party that it would assure a Republican victory.

It is their privilege to continue their campaigns, but we are not sure either Anderson or Kennedy is fully assessing all the possibilities.

A Foe Of Harrassment

WASHINGTON — If you want to know where I stand on sexual harassment in the office — I'm against it. When women talk about sexual harassment, they immediately think of men forcing their attentions on innocent young ladies and threatening them with dire consequences if they don't respond favorably to their advances.

But there is another side to every story. There are some women (we won't know the numbers until the latest census figures are released) who are provoking the men in their offices, either to advance their careers, or just because they're bored with their jobs.

The biggest question the white-collar worker faces is to decide who is harassing whom.

The answer is obviously in the eye of the beholder. This is how the women's liberation people see it: "Miss Samuels, after you finish typing these papers would you bring them over to my apartment tonight?"

"I have a date for dinner with my boyfriend, Mr. Schlitz." "Well, break it. After we get the paper work done, I'll cook the dinner. Heh, heh, heh." "No, no — a thousand times no. I'd rather die than say yes."

"I'll remember this, Miss Samuels, when your efficiency report comes up. You Would it be all right if I call you at home when it is done, and then you could come over to my place and pick it up?"

"Miss Samuels, do you mind not leaning against my desk in that slit skirt? It's very distracting."

"I'm sorry, but these skirts are so comfortable in the hot weather. If you wish, I can pick up some wine on the way home so you can relax and study the report."

"I don't think my wife would approve of that idea."

"Oh tush, Mr. Schlitz. You're entitled to a mid-life crisis like everybody else."

"The offer is very attractive, but I don't believe a man should get personally involved with someone in his own office."

know they will be laying off people next month." "Oh please, Mr. Schlitz, don't give me a bad report. I am the sole support of my mother, and if I lose this job we will not be able to pay our mortgage and we will be thrown out of our condominium into the street."

"It's not my decision. It's yours. Shall we say eight o'clock at my place?"

"You don't give me any choice. Oh mother, please forgive me. I'm doing it for you."

Now this is how the men in the office tell it: "Mr. Schlitz, I don't believe I will be able to finish the typing you want by five o'clock.

"WHERE HAVE WE GONE WRONG, SUNSHINE... OUR ONLY SON SAYS HE WANTS TO GO!..."

THIS AFTERNOON Jobs Are Waiting

By BILL NOBLITT RALEIGH — How do you reach the unreachable; train the untrainable? That is the dilemma beneath efforts of private industry and government to produce more and better jobs at higher pay for many North Carolinians.

which would enable them to enter training and benefit from it.

About 30,000 students drop out of North Carolina schools each year. Many of those go to work; a number enter technical training programs. Some — and nobody knows how many at this point — join the crowd in which street wisdom and peer pressure put down working for a living. The dole is the smart way to live in that society.

BILL NOBLITT

Are we, as some experts privately believe, in a period of full employment even as unemployment figures climb? Are there, as the newspaper want ads and talks with employers indicate, a lot of jobs still empty even as millions of state and federal dollars are pumped into various job-training programs?

A statewide computer network is being planned and phased in which will, at the touch of a button, match jobs available with training programs with labor supplies. Involved are the state's Labor Department, Commerce Department, Community Colleges, high school vocational programs, guidance counselors and job placement specialists, the Employment Security Commission, and the various job-training activities now scattered through various agencies.

Dropouts But while this and other actions are aimed at boosting jobs for Tar Heels, there remains the nagging concern that a sizeable segment of the population is out of reach; and may wish to remain that way.

Educational shortcomings, for example, rule some people out of advanced job training. One government study says more than 80 percent of those people with training needs to get and hold a job lack basic reading, writing, and ciphering skills

These are the people which such federal efforts as the Concentrated Employment and Training Act (CETA) are supposed to reach: get them off the street, change attitudes toward work, teach neatness and promptness and good manners, and train for work. Despite the millions spent (some figures show each trainee costing upwards of $25,000) CETA officials still cannot produce figures which show how many trainees have taken a fulltime job in private industry and kept it for any respectable period of time.

The Research Triangle Institute interviewed more than 1,400 young North Carolinians about their school work, job opportunities, and making a living. The cool researchers were shocked: 41 percent of those not in school and who weren't taking advantage of many of the educational or job-training opportunities said the idea "never occurred to me."

Go Away Despite counselors in several agencies, television promotions, newspaper stories, extended day schools, vocational training, 58 community colleges with extension programs, local employment offices, want ads, governmental job-training activities with outreach, and constant public attention to the problem... nearly half said, in effect, I'm not interested.

About half of those who drop out of high school say they do so because they don't

Strength For Today

MORAL VALUES

Moral customs vary from time to time. As recently as the nineteenth century, gentlemen might still risk killing or wounding one another in duels for the sake of what they called their honor. Seventy-five years ago unmarried women of good families did not go out unchaperoned. Today sexual deviations which were universally condemned and severely punished by law, are sanctioned without comment — sometimes in churches.

Is there, then, no fixed set of moral standards upon which we can depend? Are right and wrong temporary classifications, arbitrarily changed from time to time?

No. There is one unshakable code which has lasted for more than three thousand years — the Ten Commandments. Brief as the Ten Commandments are, they deal with life's fundamental issues — man's relationship with God, his parents, his wife, his community. Admittedly they do not contain detailed instructions for meeting all of life's problems, but to follow them is to lay a firm foundation for successful living. — Elisha Douglass

Avers Future In Sailing Ships

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — Surrounded by graphs and desktop models in his busy office-lab just across from Stanford University, Frank Shallenberger pronounces sailing ships the wave of the future.

"I'm absolutely convinced," said the former professor, who has degrees from and has taught at both Harvard and Stanford, and who has a long record of launching successful small companies.

In terms of aerodynamics, cargo capacity, speed, and energy efficiency, says Shallenberger, now retired from teaching, sailing ships make sense. More sense, he says, that most people realize.

The popular image of tall ships is that they are beautiful, romantic and impractical. Shallenberger agrees. In fact he feels the fabled old clipper ships were aerodynamically inefficient.

The models that his company, DynaShip Corp., have helped design and test are another matter altogether, with tiers of solid, squared, automatically furled sails mounted on swivel masts.

"The old ships were great downwind, but not otherwise," said Shallenberger. He maintains that much wind escaped through their triangular sails, and that the sails, rigidly mounted, often left the ships becalmed.

Right now, he says, DynaShips can outperform many oil-powered cargo vessels, hauling wood and pulp from the American Northwest to Japan, and taking pulp from the East Coast to Europe.

The primary reason, of course, is the cost of fuel. If one of his ships were built and operating, he said, it might haul up to 30,000 tons at 12 knots, using 10 percent of the fuel needed by a diesel ship of the same size running at no more than 14 or 15 knots.

The problem, he says with frustration, is that even those who should be knowledgeable can't seem to accept the notion that, in an age of technological complexity, simpler could be better.

After years of plugging away, Shallenberger says "the shipping industry is one of the most reactionary," although he is more forgiving of them than he is of the Agents Amid The Exiles?

By PHILIP C. CLARKE

Intelligence sources are convinced that Fidel Castro has infiltrated scores of trained Communist agents and provocateurs among the wave of more than 100,000 Cuban "boat people" that have poured into the U.S. since April.

Even before the outbreak of rioting at the Fort Chaffee, Arkansas, refugee relocation center on June 1, the FBI had warned local authorities to be prepared for possible violence.

What the Castroite infiltrators are doing is to foment trouble among the refugees in an attempt to provoke U.S. law enforcement officials. Lurid accounts of alleged "police brutality" against the refugees are being played up on Radio Havana, in Castro's wire service, Prensa Latina, and in his daily mouthpiece, Granma.

Photographs of club-wielding Arkansas police chasing Cuban refugees back into the relocation center barracks were splashed all over Cuba and the rest of the Communist world.

According to one informed Cuban-American observer, Castro's agents are conspiring to have at least one of the refugees killed during an outbreak of violence. One of the four refugees injured in the June 1 riot at Fort Chaffee was knifed by another Cuban. (At least a dozen police officers also were injured.)

If despite precautions by U.S. authorities there is a fatality among the refugees, Castro will have the "martyr" he seeks to mount a massive propaganda campaign aimed at reversing the psychological defeat he suffered with the latest Cuban exodus. "What Fidel wants," said the observer, "is a 'muertecito,' a 'little dead one,' so he can start ranting and raving about 'Yankee brutality' and so forth."

Of serious concern to U.S. security officials is the potential for violence by Castro's agents against American lives and institutions. When FBI agents arrested a group of Puerto Rican terrorists in the Chicago area a few weeks ago they uncovered detailed plans for assassinations and bombings at the Republican and Democratic presidential nomination conventions this summer. It is no coincidence that the principal Puerto Rican terrorist organization, the FALN, has its headquarters in Havana.

Concern also is deepening over Soviet activities in Cuba. A recent Cuban refugee, who said he had been employed at a Soviet military installation, told U.S. interrogators that Soviet technicians were busy converting SA-2 surface-to-air anti-aircraft missiles into medium-range surface-to-surface missiles capable of striking targets in the U.S.

There is as yet no official U.S. confirmation of this report, but intelligence sources have revealed an upsurge of Russian military activity in Cuba in recent weeks. These include the construction of a number of large sheds similar to the type used to house Soviet missiles in Eastern Europe, and a series of curious holes in the ground near one Russian base near Havana that could be excavation sites for new buildings — or for missile silos.

Also, Soviet and Cuban warships are engaging in war games in the Caribbean, and Soviet pilots continue to fly regular patrols out of bases in Cuba — one of them, San Antonio de los Banos, built by the U.S. during World War II. Recently intelligence sources reported that a Soviet jet-prop bomber flew under radar and inside U.S. territory as far North as Baltimore before turning around and returning to Cuba. It was said to have been detected only accidentally over North Carolina by a U.S. Coast Guard plane that happened to be in the area.

Promise Congress Will Shore Up Social Security

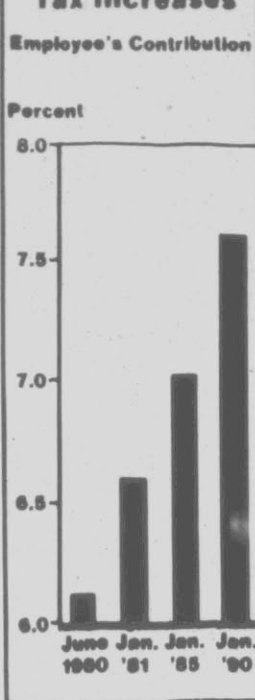

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress will move quickly to shore up the financially fragile Social Security system and make sure that retirement benefits continue to be paid on time, the chairman of a key House subcommittee promises.

However, an analyst for a senior citizens' group said the outlook for Social Security in the next few years may be even bleaker than the system's trustees indicated in their annual report to Congress on Thursday.

The trustees said the Old Age and Survivors trust fund, which paid out almost three-quarters of the $124.9 billion in Social Security benefits in 1979, could run out of money in late 1981 or early 1982 unless it is able to borrow from the Disability Insurance and Hospital Insurance (Medicaid) funds.

And under adverse economic circumstances, the Social Security Tax Increases

TAX INCREASES — This chart illustrates the Social Security payroll tax increases that are scheduled from June 1980 to June 1990. The current 6.13 percent levy will be 6.65 percent in January; 7.05 percent by 1985 and 7.65 percent by 1990. (AP Laserphoto Chart) trustees said, the three funds together might not have enough money to pay benefits on time beginning in 1983.

Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security, said his panel is "concerned about the report, but the word should go out that there is nothing to be alarmed about."

"The Social Security program will continue, as it has for 40 years, to pay benefits on time," he vowed. "The report is the Congress' warning signal and the Congress will act."

Pickle said the subcommittee will meet next Thursday to consider the Carter administration's proposal to allow interfund borrowing and also to shift some of the payroll tax from the burgeoning disability fund to the old-age fund.

Pickle's optimistic outlook wasn't shared by James M. Hacking, assistant legislative counsel for the American Association of Retired Persons.

"The immediate future looks rather pessimistic," he said. "What is worse, after reviewing the assumptions the trustees made, their worst case might turn out to be optimistic."

Hacking said Congress should act this year to allow interfund borrowing, then move next year to pump some general tax dollars into Social Security to repair the damage done by high inflation and unemployment.

Under the worst of three possible economic scenarios, the trustees foresaw inflation rates of 16.6 percent this year, 13.7 percent in 1981 and 11 percent in 1982 before a drop to 9.8 percent in 1985. That outlook also included declines in the real gross national product of 1.7 percent this year and 1 percent in 1981, and unemployment of 7.4 percent this year, 9.1 percent in 1981 and 6.8 percent by 1985.

Larry Smedley, associate director of the AFL-CIO's department of Social Security, said, "I don't think the outlook is that gloomy." Unemployment may be higher this year than the trustees forecast, but that is likely to be offset by lower inflation, he said.

Social Security Commissioner William J. Driver also said the situation is unlikely to be that bad. If it is and the system can't make payments on time in 1983, Driver said he would rather see taxes raised than benefits lowered. A recent survey found 69 percent of the public also felt that way, he said.

The payroll tax, now 6.13 percent, already is due to climb to 6.65 percent next year, 6.7 percent in 1982, 7.05 percent in 1985 and 7.65 percent in 1990. Eventually, those higher taxes are expected to put the Old Age and Disability fund in the black for 50 years.

Carol Jackson, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce's associate director for Social Security, said Congress should bring all federal, state and local employees under Social Security. She said that could bring the system $123 billion in added tax revenues from 1982 to 1987.

Last January, President Carter gave the impression that the Caribbean was of no "significant" importance to U.S. strategic interests. It is encouraging to note that he has since, apparently, changed his mind and that he now calls the Caribbean region of "great importance". Let us hope that Castro's apologists in the State Department don't again persuade the President to turn the other cheek.

like school. It is obvious many also don't like discipline, working for a living, getting up in the mornings and reporting on time.

For those North Carolinians who are anxious for improved job training and opportunities, the system is responding in a variety of ways.

The question remains, is there any way to reach those who don't want to be reached?

See Federal Indictments

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State transportation officials said Thursday night that federal authorities will seek additional indictments in the next two to three months against companies bidding on North Carolina highway projects.

"They know they are going to indict some people now, maybe in the next 60 days," state Transportation Secretary Thomas Bradshaw said.

Bradshaw and other state officials conferred in Washington Thursday with Sanford M. Litvack, an assistant U.S. attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's anti-trust section.

"He didn't say if there were two or 22 companies involved. All he would say is that things are progressing nicely," Bradshaw said.

Bradshaw said Litvack suggested that the state delay its own investigation until the federal review has been completed.

"He didn't say we shouldn't do it. He just was worried about us running into the same people and $0831-b. "He indicated that we should let them play out their hand. 03:46 said that by letting them complete their investigation, we could possibly be in a better position to prosecute and collect damages."

A Justice Department spokesman indicated Thursday that the federal investigation should be completed by the end of the year.

Grand jury investigations reportedly are under way in North Carolina, Virginia, Alabama, Kentucky, Georgia and Mississippi.

Rea Construction Co. of Charlotte has pleaded guilty to bid-rigging charges in North Carolina and Virginia.

The real truth concerning sexual harassment in the office may lie somewhere between the two:

"What a terrible question. Why do you ask?"
"No reason. It just came out."

"Well, the answer is I don't."

Opening Up Of Tax Records For Prosecuting Mobsters Proposed

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration today proposed legislation making it easier for federal prosecutors to get certain tax records for investigations of crime syndicates, narcotics rings and white-collar crimes.

The administration said, however, that the law must preserve strict protection for the privacy of individual income tax returns and the personal financial records that support them.

The administration view, the result of months of negotiations, was outlined today by Irvin Nathan, a deputy assistant attorney general and a key supervisor of the Justice Department's most sensitive investigations of organized crime and corruption.

In testimony to a Senate Finance subcommittee, Nathan said the White House, the Justice Department and the Internal Revenue Service now support some easing of the restrictions imposed by the 1976 Tax Reform Act.

That post-Watergate law was designed to prevent the use of tax records for political purposes. But Nathan noted that it was not federal prosecutors but White House aides to former President Richard M. Nixon who de-lived into tax records to punish political enemies.

"There is no question that such abuses were improper," Nathan said, adding that the law should continue to ban political use of tax records.

But the statute went too far, he asserted. It generally prevents IRS agents from telling the FBI and the Justice Department about evidence of fraud, drug smuggling or other non-tax crimes discovered through tax returns or during the course of investigations of tax crimes.

The Justice Department can gain access to most tax information only by getting a federal court warrant. To get such a warrant, prosecutors must prove that the information is vital to their investigation and cannot be obtained in any other way.

"This standard is a Catch-22 test," Nathan said, contending that it requires prosecutors to know almost exactly what is in the records before they can see them.

Because of that and other time-consuming requirements, he said, "we have found it extremely difficult to investigate and prosecute complex financial crimes," especially drug trafficking, corporate bribery, public corruption and syndicate crimes.

"We believe that many investigations and prosecutions of complex financial crimes have been jeopardized or frustrated for want of information known only to IRS."

As a remedy, the administration proposed amendments that would require the IRS to alert prosecutors to evidence of crimes turned up during its own investigations when that evidence is obtained from a third party and not from the taxpayer's individual return or his personal tax records.

The IRS also would be required to alert other agencies to evidence of non-tax crimes contained in any corporation records except tax records.

The administration took the position that prosecutors still must get a federal court warrant to obtain an individual's tax returns except when the IRS has clear evidence that the individual has submitted a fraudulent return.

The administration proposal would ease the burden of proof on prosecutors applying for court warrants for an individual tax return.

Nathan said the administration cannot support a proposal by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., to give prosecutors access to individual tax returns without court orders.

"We recognize that the Nunn proposal would greatly assist law enforcement," Nathan said. "But we believe that this involves an area where the taxpayer has a legitimate expectation of privacy.

"We believe that the information which should be protected are the tax returns themselves and the financial books and records which an individual keeps and submits to IRS to support the accuracy of his or her return," the Justice Department official added.

But if a taxpayer intentionally files a false return and the IRS is certain of this, he said, "then the confidential protection for his return and underlying books and records is lost."

Daniel Wins Safety Award

The local heavy industrial division of Daniel Construction Co. received three safety awards Thursday night in recognition for achieving three million safe work hours here without a disabling injury.

The awards, presented during a dinner at the Greenville Country Club, recognized the local division for its safety milestone, achieved at the Procter & Gamble Co. project site near Greenville.

John Brooks, N.C. Commissioner of Labor, presented a safety award on behalf of the state Labor Department, and awards were also presented to local Daniel representatives by United States Fidelity and Guaranty Co., the firm's insurance carrier, and by the home office of Daniel Construction Co.

According to T. C. Casper, safety manager here for Daniel, the three million hours of safe work activities were achieved at P&G from Oct. 8, 1974 to June 3 of this year. The safety milestone, he said, represents the second best continuous record for the company.

Harry Sloan is the local project manager for Daniel, while J. C. Britt serves as construction manager.

Daniel Construction Co. has home offices in Greenville, S.C.

Carter Urged Decline Saudi F-15 Request

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six senators who voted for the original sale of advanced warplanes to the Saudi Arabia are asking President Carter to reject requests to modify the planes "for offensive use."

Among the signers of a letter sent Thursday was Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., president pro tem of the Senate and chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The senators told Carter that the Senate approved the sale of F-15 aircraft in the first place only after Defense Secretary Harold O. Brown stated in writing that "Saudi Arabia has not requested nor do we intend to sell any other systems or armaments that would increase the range or enhance the ground attack capability of the F-15."

"Any modification of the planes to enhance offensive capabilities would be a direct violation of that earlier understanding," the senators told the president.

"We hope that you will clarify to the Saudi government the nature of the agreement reached during Senate consideration of this matter, and reject without delay their request for aircraft modifications," the letter said.

The Saudis have indicated an interest in purchasing additional gas tanks and bomb racks for the planes. That would increase their range and offensive capacity, possibly making them capable of attacking Israel.

The administration two years ago assured Israel's friends in Congress that it would not equip the Saudi Arabian F-15s for offensive operations, but would limit the planes to air defense.

Administration officials said a decision on the Saudi demand has not yet been made.

The Pentagon announced Thursday that Brown will meet with Saudi Arabia's defense minister next week to discuss the issue.

Defense Department spokesman Thomas Ross said Brown will confer with Saudi Prince Sultan in Geneva, Switzerland, on June 26 during a trip that will also take the U.S. defense secretary to Paris for talks with top French officials.

The Pentagon also notified Congress it proposes to sell Saudi Arabia two additional F-15 fighters, which would be kept in the United States until needed to replace aircraft lost by the Saudis in the course of normal operations. The two additional F-15s will cost $53 million.

The letter to Carter was signed by Magnuson and Sens. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo.; Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md.; Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii; John C. Culver, D-Iowa; and Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt.

St. Mary's Gives Degrees

RALEIGH — Several area students received associate of arts degrees from St. Mary's College during commencement exercises held there recently.

Those receiving degrees were: Brenning Marie Cheatham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Cheatham; Deanie Marie Freeman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Freeman; Sandra Jackson Bobbitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cletas Jackson; Nathalie Elizabeth Pate Johnson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Milam F. Johnson; Rosetta Ann Mayo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel S. Mayo; and Sandra McGinnis Stott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Duffus, all of Greenville.

Stott was also named to the Dean's List for the spring semester, which requires a student to maintain a 3.25 grade average.

Yale Scholar Works For Degree On Barbie Doll

BARBIE AN ARTIFACT — Ella King Torrey, a Yale University "Scholar of the House" displays a Barbie doll and some of the accessories. Torrey is researching the doll as her senior project at Yale. (AP Laserphoto)

By MARTIN J. WATERS
Associated Press Writer
NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — One of Yale University's "scholars of the house" is studying a doll house.

When she's through, Ella King Torrey will have a bachelor's degree in the Barbie doll, which she views as a cultural artifact showing American society's "incredible consumerism, an obvious obsession with the more beautiful self."

Ms. Torrey is one of about a dozen seniors in Yale's Scholars of the House program, which frees students from formal course requirements so they can pursue approved research projects.

For the past 18 months, Ms. Torrey has been cluttering up her apartment not only with doll houses, but also with examples of the changing models of Barbie — the forever young, shapely and beautiful plastic figurine.

"She certainly is the icon of the 'me generation,'" said

Ms. Torrey, "a denial of any sort of tradition."

No other doll before or since has approached Barbie's popularity.

Ms. Torrey, who admits having a Barbie doll as a child, figures that at least 120 million of the dolls — Barbie and her friends and relatives — have been sold since Mattel Inc. of Hawthorne, Calif., introduced the products in 1959.

Sales of the dolls and accessories have topped $1 billion, Ms. Torrey said, and show no sign of slackening.

Ms. Torrey, a 23-year-old Philadelphia native, jokes about her academic endeavor, which she expects to finish next spring.

"I don't have to go to any classes. I just play with my dolls," she said.

Ms. Torrey's research is due to culminate in an exhibition at Yale or in New York City — and eventually a book — on the history, development and meaning of the Barbie doll and its jumble of related dolls, doll costumes, houses, cars, recreational equipment and spin-off products.

What does this doll scholar think it all means?

"Barbie was designed to meet any little girl's fantasy. She's associated with the American Dream. Children are not immune to this. They inherit notions of the American Dream from their parents and from the society at large.

"The doll changes each year. It's always bigger and better and more deluxe. Barbie is one of our heroes, and maybe that's because there are so few real heroes," Ms. Torrey said.

"A society needs something that personifies its dream of itself, and maybe she's it."

Ms. Torrey originally was majoring in art. Then along came Barbie.

"I was very drunk one night in December 1978 with a bunch of friends," Ms. Torrey said in her blunt style. "Someone just said, 'Wouldn't you love to see a book on the Barbie doll?'"

"I sort of woke up and said, 'That's it. That's it.'"

Ms. Torrey, drawing on her experience as a museum exhibition organizer in London and Boston during a year in which she took a break from college, decided to organize an exhibition on the Barbie doll — she calls it a "socio-cultural examination of art and artifacts."

She began studying the doll's evolution and collecting objects for the exhibition, with Yale paying some of the costs.

Barbie is surrounded by a changing array of several dozen other dolls, including her boyfriend, the Ken doll. Clothes and accessories range from a $1 set of hangers to the latest model of Barbie's "dream house," selling for up to $150.

Barbie's world has evolved along with her appearance, Ms. Torrey said, explaining: "In 1964, she was sort of the big girl from the small town, going to college, really a rather practical dream. By 1977, she became a superstar, that's what they called it, putting her way out of reach of the average little girl, with no indication of how to achieve the dream.

"Why do we want our idols to be so far away? Are our lives, this society, so unstable that we don't want them near? If the dream is beyond reach, then we don't really have to strive for it."

Mattel has been helping Ms. Torrey, although not financially.

"I started off thinking that here these people are exploiting children, the whole capitalist thing," Ms. Torrey said, "but they're not doing anything, they're just meeting demands. If you eradicate Barbie, you don't eradicate the values."

"I'm basically interested in opening people's eyes to what they're surrounded with. The Barbie doll certainly has a statement. People can agree or disagree with that statement, but I'd like to have them see it."

Softball Marathon To Begin Here Tomorrow

From as far east as Fairfield on Lake Matamusket, north to Rich Square, and as far south as Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Base, busloads of softball players will be converging on Greenville tomorrow and Sunday for a festive two-day Softball Marathon.

The 1980 Softball Marathon is a benefit sport play-out with proceeds to go to the Easter Seals campaign, a charity organization devoted to giving assistance to crippled people.

Literally hundreds of players will be displaying their prowess as teams compete with each other at fields in Evans Park and at Guy Smith Stadium.

In addition, added excitement for all ages will take place Sunday afternoon when members of the Lonnie Willer Team make a parachute jump into the Evans Park area.

Another featured attraction will be an appearance by the Clown Alley Circus of Greenville who will ham things up with their own variations of the sport in "Softball Antics." Music will be provided by E. J. & Co.

Teams scheduled to be playing in the tournament are:

- Saturday, June 21
- Evans Park, Field I
- 8:30-11:00 — Wilson Veneer of Wilson, and Lake Ellsworth, Greenville.
- 11:30-2:00 — Gregory Poole of Washington, and Lenoir Hospital, Kinson.

Believes Picture That Of Son Reported Slain

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A Tampa mother believes a photograph she saw in a newspaper is that of her Marine son who supposedly was killed in North Carolina two years ago.

The picture, printed Wednesday, was of a hitchhiker in Dallas holding a sign that read: "I JUST HAD A BATH."

The hitchhiker was identified as Michael Elder.

The name's the same, says Clara Elder. And more than that, the hitchhiker looks like her son.

Greg Elder, 17 and Beth, 18, agreed with their mother.

"How many Michael Elders look like Michael Elder?" a friend of the family asked.

On March 3, 1978, the body of a man identified by the U.S. Marine Corps as Michael Elder was buried in Tampa by the Elder family.

"We never thought it looked like him," said Mrs. Elder. "We were taking the word of authorities."

Greg, who was 15 years old when his brother was reported killed, returned to the funeral home asking about the body at the time. He said he remembers the military uniform was pinching the dead man's neck, distorting facial features. And he said he searched for identifying marks.

"Michael had a scar on his forehead," said Greg. "We couldn't see it at all."

Beth Elyer, 18, says some traits of the man in the photograph remind her of her brother. "He always wore shirts like that. And he always pushed them above his elbows."

The only difference, says Greg, is that the Elder in the picture says he's 25. His brother would be only 21.

Mrs. Elder says she was probably remiss in not taking more action two years ago.

But she was so distraught, she says. And it's only been recently that she has been able to mention her son's name without crying.

Either to confirm or dispel her hopes, she says, she's going to press military and civilian officials for some details.

Layne Murdoch, a photographer for The Dallas Times Herald, snapped the picture of the 25-year-old hitchhiker. He said he could shed little light on the man, other than that he said he was headed to California.

The Elders said in February 1978 they received a telegram from the Marine Corps at Camp LeJeune telling them Michael had been shot to death outside the base in Sneads Ferry, N.C. A Maj. T. R. Delux assured them of an intensive investigation by both military and civil authorities, they said.

After the letter from Delux, the Elders say they heard nothing more.

A letter from a friend of Elder's estranged wife was the only word they said they had received. The friend said Michael was shot by another Marine. He had been accused of participating in thefts near the base and those accusations indirectly led to his death, the letter said.

Seminar Held On Design

A seminar for the architectural drafting students at Pitt Community College was held recently on the campus with Roland Webb, Rocky Mount architect, as the leader.

During his lecture Webb pointed out that architectural design has a social and psychological effect on our society. With the development of more land, architecture plays an important part in producing a workable environment.

"Design involves aesthetics, function, structure, building codes, energy and handicap requirements," stated Webb. He also showed how these aspects are developed with a project. He used color slides to illustrate his topic.

Student design problems involving graphics were reviewed by Webb and Edwin F. Martin, Jr., PCC chairman of the Architectural Advisory Committee at PCC. Martin is also graduate of North Carolina State University and Pitt Community College.

A question and answer period concluded the seminar.

Implant Antenna In Brain To Treat Patient's Lethal Tumor

By GEOFFREY GEVALT
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Using a procedure never tried on a human before, doctors at the University of Maryland Hospital have implanted a tiny microwave antenna in the brain of a 28-year-old cancer victim to try to kill a lethal tumor with blasts of electrical heat.

The patient, a European executive whose identity is being withheld at his request, is now up and about, suffering no apparent ill effects from the first treatment of this type in medical history.

Dr. Michael Salzman, chief of the hospital's neuro-oncology department, has no prognosis on the patient's chances for survival, nor does he yet know how well the treatment retarded the growth of the tumor.

"But we showed that this treatment is feasible, that it is safe," Salzman said Thursday. "It was a first test. We will know more in a case where the tumor is at an earlier stage.

The patient, who is married and the father of two children, suffers from glioblastoma multiforme, a disease in which all but 2 or 3 percent of persons afflicted die after three years, Salzman said. He added about 10,000 people die each year from the tumor.

The man received chemotherapy, radiation and surgery in Europe for two years. The microwave treatment is regarded as his last chance.

In a six-hour operation — which Salzman said "was surprisingly simple" — the antenna, heat sensors and a cranial pressure meter were implanted in the patient's brain. The antenna was left protruding from the right front portion of his skull.

On June 12, several days after the operation, the thermotherapy treatment was administered. Two days later, a second treatment was performed and the antenna and pressure meter were removed.

"His spirits are terrific," Salzman said. "We waited some time for the right patient. I am glad we waited. He is willing to handle a little discomfort, he's cooperative and willing to try things. He is a marvelous person."

Salzman developed the technique with George H. Samaras, an associate research professor at the university with a Ph.D. in neurochemistry and neurophysiology.

"We met 3½ years ago quite by chance," he said. "He was a patient of mine (for a minor ailment)."

In a casual conversation, the two discovered their motivations were entirely compatible. As Salzman put it: "I had an application, but didn't have the technology, and he had the technology but didn't have an application. Salzman had been assigned to research on the glioblastoma multiforme and decided after several months "that I wasn't going to let (the disease) defeat us ... that a treatment had to be found."

The 34-year-old Salzman said the doctors and researchers have learned a tremendous amount from the treatment of this patient.

"For years people have thought of using thermotherapy to combat cancer. Now we have a tool to do that.

"But you must understand that this is just a building block in the total treatment of these patients," he said, adding that he and other researchers are working on just as unique forms of therapy for patients suffering from the disease.

All these therapies together, he added, may soon provide doctors with a chance to fight back against this deadly disease.

Afghan Sports Team Defects

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Seven members of Afghanistan's national basketball team scheduled to play in next month's Moscow Olympics defected to Pakistan to protest the Soviet "reign of terror" in their homeland, the captain of the team said today.

It was the second defection in the past few weeks by members of an Afghan sports team protesting the six-month presence of 80,000 Soviet troops to combat a 26-month-old guerrilla war by anti-communist Moslem rebels opposed to the country's Marxist regime.

The Soviet troops backed the ouster and execution of former President Hafizullah Amin last December and replaced him with the present Afghan leader Babrak Karmal.

Captain Karim Dad Khan told newsmen in Peshawar, 100 miles west of here, that he and the other defectors crossed from Afghanistan into Pakistan's Paktia province, continued on to the town of Parachinar and then moved to Peshawar.

He did not say specifically when the crossover occurred.

"Like other Afghan people, we reject the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan, and disapprove the Babrak Karmal regime's decision to attend the Moscow Olympics. This is why we have crossed over to Pakistan," he said.

"The people of Afghanistan hate the Soviets and are heroically resisting the Soviet troops, despite a reign of terror let loose by them in Afghanistan."

Several weeks ago, members of the Afghan national football team selected to attend the Summer Games defected in West Germany to protest the Soviet intervention.

Quell 'Ruckus' By Agitators

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Apparently irritated by hot weather and lack of second helpings at dinner, Cuban refugees created a disturbance at a detention center here, Immigration and Naturalization Service officials said.

No one was injured in the disturbance Thursday night, but "15 or 16" refugees were tagged as instigators and separated from the other Cubans, said Mike Trominski, senior district INS officer in charge.

He said 11 of the Cubans would be flown to Atlanta today or Saturday, but that he did not know whether they were involved in the uprising.

They were being shipped to Atlanta because of their "moral turpitude," INS officials said.

Trominski said Thursday's

Testifies As To Drug Dealings

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A prosecution witness testified Thursday that seven of 10 defendants in a heroin conspiracy trial in Wayne County Superior Court had dealings with convicted heroin smuggler Leslie "Ike" Atkinson.

Laura Holmes, who admitted her own involvement with the Atkinson organization, testified that she had made several exchanges of drugs and money, packaged drugs and delivered drugs with some of the defendants.

Seven men and three women are on trial now, facing charges of conspiracy to manufacture and deal in heroin. Testimony in the trial began May 22 and the trial is expected to continue several more months.

incident occurred about 6:30 p.m. CDT when the refugees were being returned to their barracks after dinner, and lasted 15 to 30 minutes.

The refugees apparently were upset because they "had no seconds and thirds in the chow line" and because a water fountain did not emit cold water, he said, adding the hot weather probably contributed to their irritation.

After 50 support officers, armed in riot gear, were called in, the Cubans "immediately settled down and became very docile and quiet."

"It was a ruckus, not a riot," he said. "There was no physical violence, no physical contact with officers."

He added a search of the Cubans netted several sharpened metal objects.

Some 60 refugees are being held at the center. They were moved there after being named by authorities as agitators in the June 1 riots at Fort Chaffee, Ark.

Man Drowns In Yadkin River

YADKINVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A 28-year-old Forsyth County man drowned Thursday in the Yadkin River, authorities said.

The body of Dennis Holden Jr. of Winston-Salem was pulled from the river in the Enon community early Thursday night by Yadkin Rescue Squad members.

A spokesman for the Yadkin County Sheriff's Department said Holden and a friend were walking in the river when they stepped in a deep hole. The friend said Holden went under and did not come back up.

Claimed He Is Vampire

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — A 22-year-old man accused of killing his grandmother claimed he was a vampire and needed blood to stay alive, his mother has testified.

Janet Jones of Middlebury, Vt., also told the court that her son told her he tried to draw blood from his grandmother, Carmen Lopes, 74.

According to regional Medical Examiner Dr. John Angley of Pembroke, Mrs. Lopes was shot and an autopsy also revealed a 1½-inch cut in her heart and a round wound.

James P. Riva II is charged with killing Mrs. Lopes on April 10 in Marshfield. He also is accused of burning her home and assaulting a Marshfield police sergeant.

Mrs. Jones testified Wednesday during a probable cause hearing before Plymouth District Court Judge George A. White. The judge later ordered Riva held in $100,000 bail for trial in Superior Court.

Mrs. Jones said that when she visited her son at Bridgewater State Hospital and at the Plymouth House of Correction two weeks after his grandmother was killed, he told her he had been a vampire for years.

She said he also told her he heard voices and his brain felt as if it were on fire.

Fervor Captured In A Musical Drama

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
KANSAS CITY (AP) —

They were a motley crew, ex-thieves, prostitutes, cripples and waiters, led by a white-bearded old "soldier," besieging the gates of heaven.

"Booth came boldly with a big brass drum," Vachel Lindsay's classic poem puts it. "(Are you washed in the Blood of the Lamb?) The saints smiled gravely, and they said he's come. (Are you washed in the Blood of the Lamb?)"

The scene, with a white-robed Jesus standing on the glimmering stairs to paradise, gazing down at the besmirched lot, is the high point of the American premier of a musical drama, "The Blood of the Lamb."

It is based on Lindsay's poem, "Gen. William Booth Enters into Heaven," written at the death in 1912 of the founder of the Salvation Army. The show had its first U.S. production last week at the Army's National Centennial Congress.

"Drabs from the alleyways and drug fiends pale —" the poem portrays that battered company led toward the pearly gates by Booth, "Minds still passion ridden, soul-powers frail."

"Vermin eaten saints with mouldy breath, unwashed legions with the ways of death — (Are you washed in the Blood of the Lamb?)"

The musical, with that old Army song, "Are you washed...," running through it like an echo, was staged four times at the Army gathering and filmed for television, offering a rare combination of vivacious entertainment and moving religious message.

It captures both the jolly buoyance and devoutness of the Salvationists, mirthful, peppy, dancing to their fervent songs, their trumpets blaring, drums pounding.

"Big voiced lassies made their banjos bang," the poem pictures them. "Tranced, fanatical, they shrieked and sang. (Are you washed in the Blood of the Lamb?)"

Lindsay, who before fame struck was a wandering vagabond who often had been fed and bedded at the Army's centers and knew its ways, metered his poem to its tunes and the beat of drums.

"Booth died blind and still by faith he trod, Eyes still dazzled by the ways of God," the lines go. "Booth led boldly and he looked the chief: Eagle countenance in sharp relief, Beard a flying, air of high command, Unabated in that holy land."

The musical starts in total silence with old black-and-white movies of Booth's jammed London funeral, the stillness broken finally by the crescendoing words of the poem read in the background. The gray film dissolves into a bright blue sky of soft, scudding clouds.

Then comes two hours of frolic, fun and love-in-action, of poignant scenes of Salvationists helping the outcasts, jobless, unwashed and af-licted, doing it with zestful dancing and catchy songs.

"I know what it's like to walk the street, and wiggle at every man you meet," sang saved hookers in garish scarlet. Another song: "The hoodlum, the hooker and the hoboe, their sins are gonna be forgiven; the hoodlum, the hooker and the hoboe, they're gonna be at home in heaven."

The bearded, commanding but tender Booth, in tall top hat, also struts and sings amid the comic capers and flag-waving marches.

"Jesus came from out the court-house door, Stretched his hands above the passing poor," the poem goes. As Booth and his prancing, lowly crew circle the heavenly gateway (disappearing behind it in their circling), they suddenly emerge rejuvenated, in luminous white.

"The lame were straightened, withered limbs uncurled, And blind eyes opened on a new sweet world," says the poem. "The hosts were sandalled and their wings were fire — (Are you washed in the Blood of the Lamb?) But their noise played havoc with the angel choir. (Are you washed in the Blood of the Lamb?)"

Jesus steps down the stairs to welcome Booth, also now all in white.

"Christ came gently with a robe and crown, For Booth the soldier, while the throng knelt down. He saw King Jesus. They were face to face. And he knelt weeping in that holy place. Are you washed in the Blood of the Lamb?"

And at the end, the resonant echo, "Are YOU washed...?"

Church Plans Guest Visit

The People's Baptist Temple announces a special meeting with Dr. J.B. Buffington, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church in Lakeland, Fla., Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

Dr. J.B. Buffington

Dr. Buffington has been in Lakeland for 17 years. He is a graduate of Tennessee Temple University in Chattanooga, Tenn., and also holds a doctorate degree in literature.

The public is invited to attend. The church is located on 264-Bypass West, next to Red Oak Subdivision.

Cornerstone Plans Services

Joseph C. High, co-coordinator of the Fountain of Life Christian Fellowship on the campus of East Carolina University, will deliver the message during special Men's Day services to be held Sunday at 3 p. m. at Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church.

High, a Wake Forest native, is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He is employed by Union Carbide Corporation here as employee relations administrator.

Cornerstone pastor, the Rev. Arlee Griffin, will lead the 11 a. m. Men's Day service. Music will be supplied by the Fountain of Life Fellowship Choir of East Carolina University. The Cornerstone Male Choir will render music for the 3 p. m. service. The public is invited to both.

Minister's Wife Attends Meet

Mrs. Nell Williams, wife of the Rev. Elbert B. Williams, attended the state convention of the Interdenominational Ministers' Wives Association held in Henderson Monday and Tuesday.

At the convention, Mrs. Williams was elected executive secretary of the organization. She also serves the state organization as chairperson of the Awards Committee. At local level, she is district president of the Goldsboro-Raleigh Ministers' Wives Alliance.

Services Set At Mills Chapel

BLACK JACK — There will be fellowship services at Mill's Chapel F.W.B. Church this weekend, beginning Saturday at 8 p.m. with the Rev. Blount from the House of Prayer as the speaker.

Sunday morning at 11 the pastor, the Rev. J.L. Swinson will be the speaker. At 3 p.m. Sister Odel King will be the speaker. At 8 p.m. the Golden Keys from Princeton, N.C. will present a musical program, sponsored by Jimmie Swinson, Jr. and Della Roach. The public is invited to attend all services.

Old Fashioned Day Planned

WINTERVILLE — Sunday the Bethany Free Will Baptist Church, Rt. 1, Winterville, will hold an Old Fashioned Fun Day.

Sunday School will begin at 9:45 a.m. followed by the Morning Worship at 11 a.m. Lunch will be served on the church grounds at noon. From 1-2 p.m., the Melody Makers will present a program of gospel music followed by games for all from 2-4 p.m.

Many will be dressed like those did a century or more ago and some may even come to church driving a buggy, cart or an old model car. There will be old fashioned iron pot cooking.

During the Morning Worship, the Bethany Male Chorus will present special music and occupy the "Amen Corner." Also, during the worship hour the men will sit on one side and the women on the other like the old days. Prizes will be awarded to the woman, man, and couple who wear the best costumes. Children may come barefooted and wearing jeans.

YOUTH SERVICES

Youth services will be held at Rock Spring F.W.B. Church Sunday at 11 a.m. Elder James Smith, the no. two choir and no. two ushers will be in charge.

The Deacons will celebrate their anniversary Sunday at 3 p.m. Eldress Martha Tyson, the no. two choir and the James Smith Gospel Chorus, along with the no. two and reserved ushers will be in charge.

The public is invited, according to the pastor, Bishop W.L. Phillips.

The Lord's Prayer

Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For thine is the kingdom and the power, and the glory forever. Amen.

FAMILIARITY

We attended the wedding of a friend recently in a neighboring city. When we first entered the church everything seemed strange, the hymns, the words of the service, until we heard that familiar phrase, "Our Father Which Art in Heaven." Suddenly it was as if a door had been opened to us.

With the others in the congregation, with the beautiful young bride and her new husband, we repeated those words which, over the years, have given hope to men and women in all kinds of churches all over the world; and we realized that despite the surface differences we are, all of us, actually one community.

God's House has many different entrances, but they are all equally available, to be passed through and shared with Him by everyone.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Cool weather is expected in the forecast period, Friday until Saturday morning for the Pacific coast and north Atlantic coasts. Milder weather is expected in the central section of the country. Showers are due in the southern Plains, the Southeast and northern New England. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Cooler and drier Canadian air will begin moving into North Carolina tonight, bringing with it mostly sunny skies this weekend. Temperatures, however, will be a few degrees below normal.

Partly to mostly sunny skies persisted Thursday in most sections. Highs were in the 80s except for some 70s in the higher mountains.

Overnight lows were mostly in the 50s in the west and to the mid 60s in the east.

Drop In Science Study Is Worrying Teachers

By KEVIN MCKEAN
AP Science Writer

EXETER, N.H. (AP) — Science education in U.S. high schools is deteriorating and many graduates lack the basic knowledge needed in today's technical society, educators say.

Teachers and consultants at a week-long meeting on secondary school science here say enrollments in their fields are declining, teachers are scarce and achievement scores are dropping.

"Students are drifting away from taking science unless required to," said Paul DeHart Hurd, professor emeritus at Stanford.

Hurd said the problem was "serious because of the increasing need for citizens to understand science and technology to make informed decisions about their own welfare."

The conference, which runs through Sunday at Phillips Exeter Academy, has brought together 37 leading high school science teachers, many of whom say they are struggling to maintain quality in the face of declining student interest and school system support.

Part of the problem stems from the early 1970s when most schools relaxed course requirements.

Dr. Al Buccino of the National Science Foundation said about 60 percent of students were taking at least one science course in 1972-73, compared to fewer than half today. The loss is primarily in 11th and 12th grade chemistry and physics, the most advanced courses.

Meanwhile, high school students' scores on the standardized national exams have declined about 2 percent to 3 percent a year since 1969.

"A few students seem to be taking more and more science. But the gap is widening between those who are committed and talented and the majority of kids who seem to be ending their study of science and math at an increasingly early age," Buccino said.

A National Science Foundation report due to be submitted to President Carter next month will compare U.S. science education unfavorably with that in Germany, Japan and the Soviet Union. A National Academy of Sciences committee meets next week to discuss the same issue.

The problem is compounded by a scarcity of instructors. A National Science Teachers Association survey found a shortage of physics teachers in 72 percent of the school districts and of chemistry teachers in 68 percent.

"The reason is that a student graduating with a university degree in physics can make $7,000 to $10,000 more in industry than he can in teaching," said Tim Ingoldsbey of the American Association of Physics Teachers.

Some educators, like Hurd, are calling for a sweeping revamp of the science curriculum such as followed the Russian launch of Sputnik in 1957. U.S. science courses have changed little since then, they say.

But teachers at the conference said they could make do with more basic help, such as teaching materials tied to current events, an exchange program with university science teachers, a lighter course load or more lab supplies.

Reject Interest-Raising Bills

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A House committee killed two bills raising the interest-rate limits on most types of loans Thursday, handing the lending industry a major setback. The action came after Gov. Jim Hunt expressed "strong opposition" to proposals hiking interest rates. The House Banking Committee adjourned before taking up several other interest rate bills, including one that would raise rates on automobile loans and other types of consumer credit.

But another interest-rate bill, this one dealing with second mortgages offered by subsidiaries of small finance companies, was enacted.

Hunt used his political influence to oppose the legislation after hesitating for two weeks while lobbyists for banks, savings and loans, small loan companies, merchants and other financial interests pushed their proposals through the Senate and into the House Banking Committee.

"I encourage both the House and Senate to defer consideration of any further interest-rate legislation during this session, as they have done on other important matters," Hunt said in a news conference.

However, Hunt said he saw "some merit" in a fragile compromise bill worked out by consumer-advocate Rep. Al Adams, D-Raleigh.

But the compromise over that bill — setting fluctuating interest-rate limits on most loans under $25,000 — fell apart in the House Banking Committee and was defeated on a 15-6 vote.

The committee also voted more narrowly, 11-8, to kill the original bill sought by the banking industry removing limits on most loans over $3,000.

Adams voted against his own bill after the committee narrowly agreed to an amendment which he said gutted the bill by effectively lifting the lid on certain real estate loans, such as for mobile homes.

While Adams lost that vote, he prevailed in defeating the industry's bill — legislation he said was, "in effect, repealing the usury laws of North Carolina."

The confusing actions were seen as a major setback for the lending institutions, who have argued that while the soaring interest rates of several months ago have declined, they may rise again and choke off capital if limits remain in effect.

At least four interest-rate bills remain in committee. Under discussion by the committee when it abruptly adjourned was a consumer credit bill already passed by the Senate. It would raise rates on automobile and other installment loans from 14 percent to 18 percent on amounts over $5,000, and set rates of up to 24 percent on smaller loans.

It also raises from 15 percent to 18 percent the rate on cash advances on credit cards. An amendment was proposed by Rep. Ruth Cook, D-Raleigh, was proposed but not voted on that would remove a third section, allowing small loan companies to charge 36 percent on the first $500 they loan rather than the first $300, as is now law.

The second-mortgage bill was enacted when the House voted 77-16 to approve a conferees report making changes in the bill, and the Senate voted 41-3 to okay it.

The bill was the subject of another compromise by Adams and other House and Senate conferees. It applies to second mortgages not offered by banks.

SAC Generals' Arrest Aired

By BRUCE DUNFORD
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — The Hickam Air Force Base police report on the arrest of two Strategic Air Command generals in connection with alleged drunk driving and use of profanity was mailed to the SAC headquarters nine days after the incident, according to a military spokesman.

The arrest report was mailed to the SAC command at Offutt Air Force Base in Nebraska Wednesday, the same day the Associated Press requested information after learning of the June 9 incident involving Maj. Gen. Earl Peck and Brig. Gen. Stanford E. Brown.

"Officially, all I can say is that it was mailed on June 18," said Maj. Norman Guenther, the public affairs officer for Hickam, on Thursday.

A copy of the report was obtained here by television station KGMB, although Maj. Lew Lambert, a spokesman at Offutt, said the report should not have been made public.

News leaks about the case involving the generals coincided with an investigation into alleged drug dealing by members of the military police unit at Hickam.

The generals were in civilian clothes and returning to Hickam in a borrowed car driven by Brown when it went past the main gate security check without stopping and continued down the road in an erratic manner, according to the arrest report.

After base police pursued and stopped the car, Brown failed a roadside sobriety test and refused a breath analysis test, according to the report.

He was arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol and when he and Peck began using profanity at the arresting MPs, they were both arrested for conduct unbecoming an officer and were taken to the base police station, the report says.

At the request of the generals, base commander Col. Sharman Stevenson was summoned to the police station and ordered that Peck and Brown be released in his custody, according to the report.

Following normal Air Force procedures, Stevenson forwarded a report on the incident to the home command of the two generals for disposition, Guenther said.

Showdown in Montreal

Boxing writers have called tonight's welterweight title bout between Sugar Ray Leonard and Roberto Duran "the inevitable fight." Leonard and Duran are considered two of the greatest fighters in the world, and their showdown in Montreal could earn more money than any other matchup in boxing history. Leonard, who won an Olympic gold medal in 1976, is undefeated in 27 professional fights. He won the welterweight title last year. Duran, a former lightweight champion, started boxing professionally at 15. He has won 69 of 70 fights, scoring 55 knockouts. He predicts tonight's fight won't go 15 rounds. "I don't talk too much," Duran says. "I just come to fight."

Employment In Being A Demo

LONDON (AP) — British Opposition Leader James Callaghan has advised former U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to become a Democrat, if only for something to do.

Callaghan, who lost his job as prime minister last year in the British general elections, told a dinner gathering Thursday at which Kissinger was the principal speaker:

"I very much regret he is underemployed at the present time." Callaghan then turned to Kissinger and said: "Henry, why don't you become a Democrat. Life would be so much easier." Kissinger laughed but made no comment.

Stock Exchange-listed issues.
 Analysts noted that the market's spring rally had been in progress for almost eight weeks when it began to run out of force several days ago.

When sellers moved in Thursday, brokers said, many traders concluded that prices were overdue for a pullback.

In the economic news, New York's Citibank and Manufacturers Hanover Trust lowered their prime lending rates from 12 1/2 to 12 percent, joining several other large banks already at that level.

Metromedia led the active list, unchanged at 74. A 405,500-share block traded at 74 1/2.

City Investing gained 1 to 28. Tamco Enterprises, a concern headed by former International Telephone & Telegraph executive Lyman C. Hamilton Jr., said it bought about 3 million City Investing shares over the past few days.

City Investing has rejected a $30-a-share takeover bid from Tamco.

The NYSE's composite index lost 31 to 65.22. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 19 at 284.57.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 17.87 million shares at noon, against 16.48 million at the same point Thursday.

Soldier Sues Over Orders

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A temporary restraining order has been issued against the U.S. Army, blocking the transfer of a soldier who says he is being sent to West Germany for refusing to allow high-ranking officers and civilians to hunt, fish and trap illegally at Fort Bragg.

U.S. District Judge W. Earl Britt issued the order after Sgt. 1st Class Bobby Meares filed the suit, contending the transfer was a punitive measure.

Meares, 44, chief game warden at the post, is scheduled to leave Fort Bragg on Monday for a new assignment in Heidelberg, Germany, according to legal documents accompanying the suit.

Named as defendants in the suit were Secretary of the Army Clifford Alexander; Lt. Gen. Thomas A. Tackaberry, commanding general of the 18th Airborne Corps and Fort Bragg; and Col. Perry B. Elder, Fort Bragg provost marshal.

Meares, who became chief game warden in 1978, alleges that "friends or associates" of the defendants threatened him with transfer last year if he did not agree to "certain preferential enforcement of hunting and fishing activities."

The suit also alleges that before Meares took over the job it was common practice for hunting and fishing laws to be enforced in a "preferential and selective manner" at Fort Bragg.

Meares said he turned to the federal court only after exhausting the military appeals system in his effort to oppose the transfer.

He said he tried three times since he was notified of his new assignment in 1979 to have the transfer cancelled because of his wife's medical problems.

Medical Meet To Hear Dr. Rob

Charles G. Rob, M. D. of Greenville will be a featured speaker during the 85th annual session of the Seaboard Medical Association of Virginia and North Carolina at Kill Devil Hills this weekend.

Rob, who is professor and director of the Clinical Vascular Laboratory of the East Carolina University School of Medicine Department of Surgery, will speak both during the scientific session and at the Saturday night banquet.

Pirates Outlast Bishops For 13-10 Win

By LARRY SULLIVAN
Reflector Sports Writer
 The East Carolina Pirates brought the fad of streaking back to the campus last night. The Gary Overton-coached unit, on the strength of a pair of five-run innings, checkmated the visiting Bishops from North Carolina Wesleyan, 13-10, for the Pirates' fifth consecutive win in N.C. Summer League action. It took the home team three and a half hours to dispose of their guests in a game that saw 21 hits and five pitchers toil the mound at Harrington Field. "It wasn't none too pretty," Overton said after the grueling contest, "but we hit good enough to win. We made a few mental mistakes that cost us defensive runs. Tonight, our offense won the game for us. In the previous four games, I'd have to say that our defense made the difference, but our offense was the key to this one."

The Pirates collected 12 hits as a team, with five different players connecting for two hits each. Mike Sorrell, Todd Hendley, Mike Sage, Charlie Smith and Pete Persico each slapped a pair of hits in the contest with John Hallow and Robert Wells knocking a hit apiece to round out the ECU attack. Hendley, the Pirate third baseman, carried the heaviest bat in the contest, bringing home four of his teammates on a pair of two-run singles. Robert Wells, hitting in the number nine spot, drove home three runs with a fielder's choice and a two-run single.

For the Bishops, lead-off hitter Tweetie Thorbs paced the visitor's nine-hit night with three bingles. Mochie Medley was the only other Bishop to gather more than one hit as he reached base safely twice in four trips. Third baseman Tony Voight gathered all three of his RBI's with one swing of the bat as he laced a bases-loaded double in Wesleyan's four-run fifth. Medley, Dale Richter and Jody Tuttle each knocked in two Bishop scores. After a scoreless initial frame, the Pirates jumped on top with a pair of runs in the second. Wakai led off with a walk and Smith followed with a single, advancing courtesy runner Jeff Warren to second. Persico loaded the bases when he legged out a bunt and Wells followed with a fielder's choice, plating Warren. Sorrell then brought in Persico with a sacrifice fly. Wesleyan answered with two scores of its own in the third inning, taking advantage of a two-out, two-run error by Pirate shortstop Kelly Robinette. Kenny Villines singled and stole second, as did Thorbs, and Medley walked to load the bases with two out. Richter then hit a sharp grounder to Robinette, who threw wild to second, allowing both Villines and Thorbs to score. Neither team scratched in the third, but both squads left two men on base, before ECU erupted for five runs in the fourth. Persico singled, Wells walked and Sorrell advanced them both with a sacrifice bunt before Robinette reached on an error, loading the bases. Hendley then followed with his first of two two-run singles, scoring Persico and Wells. Hallow then slashed a double down the rightfield line, bringing home Robinette and moving Hendley to third. Wakai brought home the final two runs with an errored fielder's choice. In the top of the fifth, the Bishops came within one of the lead with a four-run uprising, highlighted by Voight's twobagger with the bases loaded. Pirate starter Mike Williams visibly tired in the fifth, as he walked the first two batters he faced and gave up four base on balls in the inning before being relieved by Ben Wilson. Medley and Richter walked and Roberson followed with a single to load the bases before W.J. Long walked, forcing in Medley. Voight then slammed a Williams fastball in the gap between left and centerfield, clearing the bases. The Pirates pulled away in the fifth with their second consecutive five-run frame, as Wells and Hendley each contributed two-run singles. Smith led off with a walk and moved to third when Bishop hurler Luke Challener threw Persico's bunt past first base. Wells followed with his single. Sorrell gathered a bunt single and Robinette was hit by a pitch prior to Hendley's two-run shot. Robinette scored when Hallow's grounder was booted. The Pirates tallied their final run in the seventh, using a pair of hits. Sorrell singled, took second on Hendley's base on balls and scored on Sage's second hit of the game. Wilson, meanwhile, was keeping the Bishop bats at bay, limiting the guests to just two hits until the ninth inning. In that frame, Wesleyan collected three hits and took advantage of the Pirates' third error to score four runs. Long reached on an error and Villines was hit by a pitch before Tuttle lined a two-run double. Thorbs followed with a single, moving Tuttle to third, before stealing second and both runners scored on Medley's single. Wilson picked up the save for starter Williams' first win of the season, as the lefthander worked the final four innings while surrendering four runs on five hits, walking four and fanning none. Williams yielded six runs on four hits through five innings while striking out four and issuing seven walks. David Perkins started for the Bishops, toiling three innings while giving up two runs on three hits and walking and striking out one. Challener suffered the Bishop loss, going two innings and giving up seven Pirate scores on five hits. He issued four base on balls. Tuttle worked the final three frames, surrendering four runs on three hits while both fanning and walking one. The win gives the Pirates a 6-3 Summer League slate, following a slow, 1-3 start, heading into what Overton termed a "big weekend." The Pirates travel to Wilmington tonight to face the loop-leading and undefeated Seahawks in a twin-bill before returning home Saturday night to battle the Tar Heels in a single game at Harrington Field. Game time for the Saturday night affair is 7:30.

Pitt Comes Back To Top Williamston Nine, 10-7

ROBERSONVILLE—Pitt County spotted Williamston a 7-0 lead, then stormed back to gain a 10-7 victory last night. The win boosted the Pitt record to 8-2, best in the league so far. Williamston held Pitt at bay for the first three innings, building up its 7-0 lead in the meantime. Williamston started the scoring in the first inning, getting a run. Randy Ellis led off with a single and Eldred McQueen doubled. Steve Wallace was hit by a pitch and a sacrifice fly by Glen Cargile brought in Ellis. The third inning saw six runs score. With one down, Wallace doubled and Cargile singled. Robbie Barber singled, scoring Wallace. Trent Ange then cracked out a three-run homer. Wiley Keel kept it going with a walk and Carl Ange singled. He moved up on a wild pitch, and Ellis singled, scoring Keel. Ange came over on an error on the play.

After that, relief pitcher Gordon Douglas shut down the Williamston attack, allowing only four hits in the remaining six innings as he held the host team scoreless. Pitt went to work in the fourth, scoring four runs to get back into the game. With one down, Mark Douglas singled and Skip Hill got a hit. Both moved up on a wild pitch, and when Jeff Wilson's third strike got away from the catcher, Douglas came home on the throw to first. Gordon Douglas singled in Hill, and Mark Shank doubled, scoring Douglas. Mike Campbell followed with a single, scoring Shank. In the seventh, Pitt added three more, tying it up. Shank led off with a hit, and Campbell followed with another. Curtis Spencer reached on an error, allowing Shank to score. Will Barrett walked and Roger Williams singled to score Campbell. Mark Douglas' sacrifice fly brought home Spencer with the tying run. Two more crossed in the eighth, giving Pitt the lead, 9-7. Gordon Douglas singled and was sacrificed up. Campbell walked and so did Barrett. Williams then singled, scoring

Leonard, Duran Squaring Off In Much Ballyhooed Title Fight

MONTREAL (AP)—The countdown is complete and now Sugar Ray Leonard and Roberto Duran climb into the Olympic Stadium ring tonight for one of the richest and most ballyhooed boxing showdowns in history. At stake in this classic confrontation between the boxer and the slugger is Leonard's World Boxing Council welterweight championship. Leonard is the boxer, a stylist with speed in both his hands and feet, undefeated in 27 professional fights since winning the Olympic gold medal for the United States in this city in 1976. Duran is the slugger, a brawler who learned his craft fighting in the streets of Panama City where he grew up from poverty to become lightweight champion of the world. Their long awaited meeting has created the greatest interest in non-heavyweight boxing since the days of the original Sugar Ray, Ray Robinson, and his contemporaries like Rocky Graziano, Tony Zale, Randy Turpin and Carmen Basilio.

The bout has also brought together two other longtime rivals — co-promoters Bob Arum and Don King, who are working in conjunction with the Olympic Installations Board, which operates the stadium. The board purchased the live gate rights for $3.5 million with a crowd of about 45-50,000 anticipated. Leonard will gross $8 million or more with Duran getting $1.5 million. Much of the income is being generated by closed-circuit television with the bout to be beamed to 310 sites in the United States and Canada. Those locations vary from neighborhood movie theaters to the plush Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York, where the $100 tab includes dinner. Leonard, who is making the second defense of the title he won from Wilfred Benitez last November, is ranked the 9-5 favorite by Las Vegas oddsmakers, although you'd never convince Duran's Panamanian countrymen that the man they call "Hands of Stone" should be an underdog. They have been parading all over town wearing buttons which say "Duran Campeon" — claiming the title for their man before the first punch is thrown — and carrying their country's flag. Much of the anticipation over this fight has been in the contrasting styles of the two fighters. Leonard is a master boxer who has the kind of ring showmanship complete with stutter-steps and shuffles that stamped Muhammad Ali. Duran is a fighting machine, a brawler whose furious pace can be frightening in the ring. The matchup has all the qualities needed for a great fight. Leonard has a size and age advantage. He is a natural welterweight and at 5-foot-10, he is 2½ inches taller than Duran and has a three-inch edge in reach. At 24, he is five years younger than Duran, who celebrated his 29th birthday while in training here this week. Duran was lightweight champion from 1972 until last year when he surrendered the 135-pound crown to move up to the 147-pound class. Both fighters seem to have a distinct dislike for one another. Duran shrugged off the size of his purse, saying, "I fight for nothing. I have no respect for Leonard. He talks too much." As for the champion, he jolted the original press conference announcing the fight by saying, "I'll kill him." The remark was made almost in jest. "I did it for a reason," said Leonard. "The press conference was so boring." But Duran didn't seem to appreciate the joke. The bad feelings surfaced again at an unofficial weigh-in Wednesday. Duran taunted the champion, saying, "Leonard, two days more, two days more. Remember." Leonard responded by blowing a kiss in Duran's direction, sending the Panamanian into a rage. The strategists for the two fighters are among the best in the boxing business. Angelo Dundee, who trained Ali, works in Leonard's corner. Freddie Brown and Ray Arcei, who together have a century or so of boxing savvy, are Duran's cornermen. "I have never seen Duran as determined as he is for this fight," said Arcei. "Not even for De Jesus." Duran's lone professional loss came in a non-title fight against Esteban De Jesus, who knocked him down with a left hook and outpointed him in 1972. In 1974, he knocked Duran down again with a left hook, in a title fight. But that time the champion came back to score an 11th round knockout. In a second title fight in 1978, Duran knocked De Jesus out again, this time in the 12th round. Those knockouts of De Jesus are two of the 11 Duran scored in lightweight title defenses. For his career, he has 55 knockouts. Leonard also has KO power as evidenced by 18 knockouts, the most recent a fourth round job on Davey 'Boy' Green, executed with a textbook left hook. The Green fight was Leonard's first defense of the WBC welterweight crown he claimed when he stopped Benitez with six seconds left in their bout last Nov. 30. The Leonard-Duran bout is set for 10:30 p.m. EDT, following four 10-rounders. The most significant fight on the undercard sends former World Boxing Association heavyweight champion John Tate against Canadian champion Trevor Berbick.

Ryan, Feeling Kind Of Ill, Makes Jack, George Surprised St. Louis Batters A Lot Sicker

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Nolan Ryan said he felt "kind of ill," but St. Louis' batters were the ones who ended up looking rather sickly.

Ryan allowed just one hit over seven innings before tiring and giving way to reliever Joe Sambito, who finished up as the Houston Astros beat the St. Louis Cardinals 2-0. It was Houston's 12th straight home victory, a club record, and kept the Astros three games ahead of Los Angeles in the National League West.

"It definitely wasn't my best outing of the year," said Ryan, who struck out seven and evened his record at 5-5. "I started feeling bad when I was warming up. I had the good fastball, but I wasn't getting the curve over."

Garry Templeton had the only hit for the Cards, a third-inning double, and he was very impressed by Ryan.

"He was awesome out there tonight," said Templeton. "He's an awesome pitcher. You just have to battle him all the time. Tonight he was the best I've seen him. He was putting the fastball where he wanted it, and when we were looking for the express, he would come in with a good curveball."

In other National League games, the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Montreal Expos 5-3 in 10 innings, the Atlanta Braves edged the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3, the San Francisco Giants trimmed the New York Mets 4-3 in 10 innings, the San Diego Padres beat the Philadelphia Phillies 4-3, the Chicago Cubs topped the Cincinnati Reds 5-2.

Rafael Landestoy led the Astros' attack with a pair of hits, scoring twice, while Jose Cruz drove him in both times.

Landestoy led off the first inning with a triple and scored on Cruz' sacrifice fly. He led off the sixth with a single, went to second on Terry Puhl's sacrifice and scored on a single by Cruz.

Dodgers 5, Expos 3

Pinch-hitter Joe Ferguson's two-run homer with one out in the 10th inning was the winning blow for the Dodgers. It was the second homer of the year for Ferguson, who had gone into the game hitting .132.

The Dodgers had sent the game into extra innings when three pinch-hitters combined to produce a run in the bottom of the ninth. Reggie Smith doubled, Derrel Thomas laid down a bunt and was safe on a fielder's choice and Dusty Baker delivered a sacrifice fly.

Braves 4, Pirates 3

Jeff Burroughs, who hit 41 home runs in 1977, belted his first of the season as Atlanta beat Pittsburgh. Burroughs had gone 61 games without a homer, dating back to July 19, 1979.

"It had been a long time," said Burroughs. "It's been a matter of trying to find the right swing, the right stance and the right attitude."

Burroughs found them all Thursday, but it was Glenn Hubbard who drove in the winning run with a sixth-inning double. It was Pittsburgh's fourth straight one-run loss.

Giants 4, Mets 3

Jack Clark hit his 12th home run of the season and tripled home the winning run in the 10th inning as the Giants dealt New York its fifth straight loss. Clark has seven hits in his last 10 times at bat.

"I'm maturing, and my overall game seems to be falling into place," said Clark, 24, who is hitting .281 with 41 runs batted in.

"He's done some things the last two days that I think he can do every day," said Giants Manager Dave Bristol said. "I'm not going to analyze him. I'm just going to let him play ball."

Padres 4, Phillies 3

Dave Winfield drove in three runs and Tim Flannery singled home the game-winner in the sixth as the Padres snapped Philadelphia's six-game winning streak.

"I've been hitting all my life - why stop now?" said Flannery, who is batting .415 with five runs batted in since being called up from Hawaii two weeks ago. The statistics back him up - in his last two minor league seasons, Flannery has hit .350 and .345.

Cubs 5, Reds 2

Mike Vail's seventh-inning single scored Jesus Figueroa with the tie-breaking run, then the Cubs added two more in the ninth on Barry Foote's double, Mike Tyson's triple and Figueroa's double. Mike Krukow, 5-7, got the victory and Bruce Sutter worked the last two innings to earn his 15th save, tops in the majors.

Winds blowing at 21 miles per hour played havoc with many fly balls at Wrigley Field, including one hit by Vail in the sixth inning. When it left the bat it looked like it would be a deep fly to center, but Dave Collins finally had to race in and bobbled the ball several times before shortstop Dave Concepcion made the catch.

"I had it all the way," said Concepcion, with a laugh. "I knew he didn't have a chance to catch it."

"Everything that could happen," said Collins, "happened to me on that play. My first instinct was to go back and look up - and that gave me a stiff neck. Then I came running in and finally got to it. It hit my glove twice and then my hand and the next thing I know Dave caught it."

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

ILE BIZARD, Quebec (AP) - George Burns and Jack Nicklaus each got a surprise in the first round of the Canadian Open Golf Tournament.

Burns' was a pleasant surprise. Nicklaus' was not.

"I didn't expect anything today," Burns said. "I'm really surprised. Starting out this morning I didn't know how far I'd be able to go. I was in some pain."

So he shot a 4-under-par 66, despite a painfully ailing shoulder, and set the first round pace Thursday in this national championship.

"It's funny how the pain goes away," Burns said, "when you start making some putts and shooting a good score."

Nicklaus, fresh from his dramatic triumph in last week's U.S. Open and with son Steve tagging along as his caddy, had things nicely in control going to the 18th tee.

"I'd played pretty well for a while and had it one under par and it looked like I was going to get out of it with a 69," Nicklaus said.

He looked at the pond that juts into the dogleg fairway on the left and decided to play his drive down the left.

"I don't know what possessed me," he said.

He hit it in the water and eventually finished with a double-bogey that dropped him back to 71, 1 over par on the 6,628-yard Royal Montreal Golf Club course and five shots off the pace.

"I'm coming off a high," Nicklaus said. "This wasn't a bad round; 71 is a reasonable score. If I can shoot 60-something tomorrow, I'm right back in the golf tournament."

Bob Glider had a share of the lead until he bogeyed the last hole and finished with a 67 that left him one back and tied with Johnny Miller and Tommy Valentine.

"I enjoy playing with Jack," said Miller, who was Nicklaus' partner this mild, sunny day that provided almost ideal playing conditions. I always seem to play better when I'm paired with him. I enjoy playing good when I'm with him, before a big gallery."

But Miller, who turned his career around with a victory in Florida earlier this year, had his problems.

"My putting was lousy," he said. "I turned a 63 into a 67."

He scored five birdies, only one of them from more than four feet, and missed three other putts of about three feet.

The leading Canadians were Jim Nelford and Roger Klatt at 68. They were tied with Hale Irwin, Leonard Thompson, Jim Dent and Australian Bob Shearer.

Tom Watson, golf's leading player since 1977 and a five-time winner this year, had a 69. Defending champion Lee Trevino and South African Gary Player were with Nicklaus at 71.

Burns, who scored his first professional victory in the Bing Crosby early this season, said he has been bothered by a pulled muscle in his shoulder for about eight weeks. He said he has had to cut down on his swing just to be able to compete.

"I tried to swing real easy," he said. "I got some good breaks, and my putting kind of pulled me through."

It did indeed. Burns holed four putts from about 20 feet, one of them to save par. And he made an even longer one, 25 feet or more, to save par again, this time on the final hole.

His lone bogey came on the 16th - and he was delighted to get it.

"I turned a 7' into a 5'," he said, after driving into deep, deep trouble and eventually running a third shot through a bunker on to the green.

Stanford Turns Thumbs Down

STANFORD (AP) - Stanford University officials have rejected proposals that they host a so-called "alternate Olympics" for nations boycotting the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow.

"We feel there simply is not enough time to organize an event of this size and complexity," Stanford Vice President and Provost Donald Kennedy said Thursday.

The mayor of Palo Alto, where the university is located, said he was disappointed that Stanford's decision.

"I personally am in favor of holding the meet at Stanford," Mayor Allan Henderson said. "I have no political hangups, and that seems to have gotten into the picture at Berkeley."

The University of California at Berkeley had planned to host the international track and field events June 17-18. But the plans were canceled Tuesday following a stormy Berkeley City Council meeting. City officials said the event was ill planned and politically sensitive.

Stanford was one of several locations being considered by the Athletics Congress, which governs amateur track and field in the United States, after Cal-Berkeley and the University of Pennsylvania canceled plans for alternate games.

San Francisco Mayor Dianne

Feinstein, criticizing Berkeley city officials for their opposition to the meet, had pledged her city's support for a Stanford meet.

But after Stanfwd's announcement, Ms. Feinstein's press secretary, Mel Wax, said the city would stop urging that the meet be held in the area.

"I think that kills it," Wax said. "I don't know of any other place in the Bay Area where we could hold it. We're disappointed that it can't be held in the Bay Area, and that's it."

Stanford's rejection of the games leaves few possibilities for a West Coast "alternate Olympics" site. The Los Angeles Coliseum, which will host track and field events in the 1984 Olympic games, is booked, as are facilities at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Other West Coast tracks are not equipped to host the event, Athletic Congress officials said.

Ollan Cassell, Athletics Congress director, said three or four areas around the country are being considered for the meet but he refused to be specific.

"We have not withdrawn our invitations to the countries," said Marty Weiss, an assistant to Cassell.

Big Value Drugs 7, Exchange 2

Big Value Drugs moved into sole possession of second place in the Tar Heel Little League yesterday with a 7-2 win over the Exchange. Big Value is now 8-6, while the Exchange is 7-7. Each have one game left to play.

Big Value got all it was to need in the first, scoring three times. Eric Jarman led off with a walk and took second on a passed ball. Sterling Edwards walked and Mitch Phillips reached on an error, scoring Jarman. Edwards scored on a passed ball and after Travis King walked, Mike Herrin reached on another error, letting Phillips score for a 3-0 lead.

Big Value then added two in the fourth and two more in the sixth. Exchange got single runs in the first and third.

Edwards led the Big Value hitting with three, while Phillips added two. They were the only hits collected by the team. Doug Bray, who scored both of the Exchange runs, had the lone hit picked up by Exchange off Edwards, who struck out 16 and walked five.

Kiwanis 4,

Optimists 1

The Kiwanis kept its second place hopes alive in the North State Little League with a 4-1 win over the Optimists yesterday. The Kiwanis are now 9-5, while the Optimists are 1-13. Each have one game left to play.

The Optimists scored first, getting their run in the second frame. The Kiwanis then tied it up with a single run in the fourth.

In the fifth, the Kiwanis pushed over the killing runs, scoring three times. Scott Scharinger singled and Jason Galloway got a hit. Both advanced on a passed ball, and with two away, Robbie Ehrmann walked. Timmy Bland singled in both Scharinger and Galloway, and an error let Ehrmann score for a 4-1 lead that held.

Jim Pressley led the Optimist hitting with two, and was the lone batter in the game with more than one.

Winterville 15,

Ayden-Grifton 5

AYDEN - Winterville rolled up a 15-5 victory over Ayden-Grifton last night in Senior Babe Ruth League play. Winterville is now 3-3, while Ayden-Grifton is 0-6.

Micah Dixon hurled the victory, allowing four hits, and striking out eight.

Mike Edens led the Winterville hitting with three, including a double and a triple.

Dixon Page and Joel Brown each had two. Page's included a double and a three-run homer, while Brown added a double.

No one for Ayden-Grifton had more than one hit.

Clifton Ins. 9,

Kiwanis 5

Bill Clifton Insurance remained unbeaten in Senior Babe Ruth League play with a 9-5 win over the Kiwanis last night. Clifton is 5-0 in divisional play while the Kiwanis are 3-5.

Clifton scored once in the first, as did Kiwanis. In the third, Clifton added two more, then came up with three in the fourth to put it away.

Jimmy Jones reached on a fielder's choice and Keith Phillips singled. Mitch Brann singled, and a hit by Scott Galloway brought in two runs. Brann scored when Crowell Pope grounded out.

Clifton added three more in the sixth. The Kiwanis got all of its remaining runs in the sixth.

Brann led the Clifton hitting with four, while Galloway had two. Barnes and MacMillian each had two for Kiwanis.

Home Builders 9,

Coca-Cola 8

Home Builders, the last place team in the Babe Ruth League, pulled off a 9-8 upset win over Coca-Cola last night. The Builders are now 2-11 on the year, while Coke slips to 4-8.

The Builders scored first with a run in the opening frame, but Coke came back with two in the second. The Builders went back out with two in the second and added two in the third. Coke rallied for five in the fourth to regain the lead, but the Builders picked up one in the fifth. After both scored once in the sixth to leave Coke up, 8-7, the Builders rallied for two in the bottom of the seventh to win it.

With one down, Farley reached on a fielder's choice that made two away. Tim Shank then walked and John Ravaris singled to load the bases. Walks to Jester and James Smith forced in Farley and Shank with the tying and winning runs.

Ravaris led the Builder hitting with two, and was the lone player in the game with more than one.

Ouch! Lowenstein Uses Head

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Baltimore's John Lowenstein used his head and was carried off the field a hero on a stretcher.

As a pinch hitter with the Orioles trailing the Oakland A's 3-2 in the seventh inning Thursday night, Lowenstein first got his bat in the way of a pitch from Rick Langford for a game-tying single. Then, he got his head in the way of a throw, allowing Al Bumbry to race home from third with the run that gave Baltimore a 4-3 victory.

Lowenstein came through after Oakland center fielder Dwayne Murphy fielded a single by Bumbry and nailed Doug DeCinces at the plate for the second out of the inning. Lowenstein's single scored Mark Corey but, as he headed for second on the throw from the outfield, he was struck in the back of the head by a throw from first baseman Jeff Newman, the cutoff man.

Bumbry advanced to third on Lowenstein's hit but stopped there until Newman's throw caromed onto the outfield grass. He then scooted home with the winning run, giving the Orioles their fifth consecutive victory.

"I made a semi-attempt to get in front of the ball," said Lowenstein, who held his head in obvious pain as trainer and teammates rushed to his aid. "I wanted to cause some obstruction, but not total."

Just before the stretcher-bearers reached the dugout, Lowenstein responded to the cheers of the crowd by sitting up and raising his arms above his head in a victory salute en route to precautionary X-rays. In other American League

2-0, the Cleveland Indians edged the Kansas City Royals 5-4, the Milwaukee Brewers pounded the Texas Rangers 10-4 and the Minnesota Twins downed the Detroit Tigers 5-1. The Chicago-Toronto game was rained out.

The A's, who have dropped three in a row and six of their last seven games, took a 3-1 lead on a leadoff homer by Rickey Henderson in the first inning and a two-run shot by Tony Armas in the sixth. The Orioles, who scored in the fourth on Dan Graham's RBI single following a balk, added a run in the sixth when Eddie Murray hit his 11th homer, extending his hitting streak to 16 games.

Yankees 7, Angels 5
Lou Piniella's pinch double drove in the tying and go-ahead runs in the sixth inning after Graig Nettles, Rick Cerone and Reggie Jackson homered in the first three innings. The Yankees' seven-game winning streak is their longest of the year and kept their AL East lead over Boston at seven games. The Angels, defending champs in the West, have dropped nine in a row and 15 of their last 16 games. Rudy May, the third Yankee pitcher, hurled 41-3 scoreless innings to pick up the victory, striking out eight while allowing two hits.

Red Sox 2, Mariners 0
Bob Stanley scattered eight hits in pitching his first shutout of the season as the Red Sox posted their third victory in a row and ninth in the last 10 games. Seattle starter Mike Parrott held Boston hitless through the first four innings and scoreless until the sixth when Fred Lynn singled and scored on a double by Tony Perez. Jim Rice singled Perez home.

"I kept the ball down and had good control," said Stanley. "It seemed like every time I got it up, they got a hit. I got lucky the first couple of innings. They hit the ball hard."

Indians 5, Royals 4
Miguel Dilone collected three hits and Toby Harrah drove in two runs to lead Cleveland. Dilone, who reached base seven straight times in the two-game series, singled leading off the first inning, stole second and scored on Mike Hargrove's double. Harrah delivered a sacrifice fly in the first and singled a run across in the sixth, which proved to be the winning run when Amos Otis and Willie Wilson homered for Kansas City.

Brewers 10, Rangers 4
Sub shortstop Ed Romero, filling in for the injured Robin Yount, lashed three hits and scored three runs and Ben Oglivie blasted his 18th home run of the season. Two Ranger errors, singles by Jim Gantner, Romero and Don Money and a sacrifice fly by Cecil Cooper produced three runs in the third. Romero knocked in two runs with a double and Charlie Moore contributed an RBI single in the fourth. Oglivie hit a two-run homer in the fifth and added an RBI single in the ninth.

Twins 5, Tigers 1
Jose Morales' hit his first career grand slam in the third inning to back the strong pitching of Darrell Jackson. Morales connected off Dan Schatzeder, who was making his first start since going on the disabled list May 27. Jackson allowed six hits and no runs before giving way to Doug Corbett with two out in the eighth.

Ellenberger Claims He Never Intended Any Fraud Or Deceit

ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) — The federal trial of former University of New Mexico basketball coach Norm Ellenberger, implicated in a recruiting scandal which shook the school's athletic program late last year, was expected to go to the jury today.

Defense attorney Leon Taylor rested his case Thursday, shortly after Ellenberger had spent nearly three hours on the witness stand. During his testimony, the once highly successful coach told the jury he never intended to defraud or deceive anyone.

Ellenberger, 47, was indicted Feb. 14 by a federal grand jury on five counts of mail fraud, one count of wire fraud and one count of interstate travel in aid of racketeering.

The charges are related to a scandal involving alleged phony academic transcripts for New Mexico athletes.

Four of the counts are in connection with alleged efforts to make former Lobo basketball player Andre Logan eligible in 1978, and the other three center on alleged activities to get former recruit Craig Gilbert eligible prior to last season. Gilbert, a former California junior college standout, never played for New Mexico since he was ruled ineligible at the outbreak of the scandal.

Taylor went through the indictment count by count in his questioning of the former coach. Ellenberger refuted earlier testimony by his former assistant, Manny Goldstein.

One of the counts stems from a check sent in the mail to pay for an embossing seal of Mercer Community College in Trenton, N.J. The prosecution contends the seal was used to forge transcripts for both Logan and Gilbert.

William H. Blackstad, owner of Gordon Printing Co. in Albuquerque, testified he sent a check for the alleged phony seal to another printing firm.

Ellenberger testified he had no knowledge of how the seal was paid for.

But he said he was told Nov. 4 or possibly Nov. 5, 1978, that a seal was going to be made.

He said one or both of his assistants told him about a method to make Logan eligible. He said that at first he was appalled about having it made and said, "Hey. Whoa. Absolutely not."

He testified that later "I went for it" because he wanted to help Logan and because it would be only a "stopgap" measure.

He said he understood a transcript was coming from Mercer, where Logan had attended school the previous year, which would make the player eligible.

Ellenberger testified he and assistant John Whisenant had a UNM employee remove Logan's official transcript from the admissions office so the transcript being made up could be used as a stopgap until the other one arrived from Mercer.

Ellenberger said he did not have anything to do with putting together the transcript or getting the seal.

Two of the mail fraud counts are in connection with certificates of eligibility for Logan mailed to the WAC and NCAA by UNM.

Ellenberger said he had nothing to do with the WAC certificate of eligibility. He said he signed the NCAA certificate, but that all members of the athletic staff signed it and he did so without reading it.

He said he never mailed either certificate. In response to questions about the alleged activities involving Gilbert's academic records, Ellenberger said he did not know what Goldstein was doing.

Garner Wins Assault Suit

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A free-lance photographer has been found guilty on a felony assault charge stemming from an attack in January on actor James Garner, the star of NBC-TV's "Rockford Files."

Aubrey Lee Williams, 35, of Tarzana, was convicted of the assault by Superior Court Judge Charles Woodmansee on Thursday after a non-jury trial. He was found innocent of felony grand theft and misdemeanor hit-and-run charges.

"I'm sorry the whole thing happened. I certainly take no pleasure in the man's conviction," said Garner, who was not in court for the verdict.

Williams said he thought the verdict was unfair but that "it could have been worse."

Asked his opinion of Garner, Williams said, "I used to like him, but I don't watch him on TV anymore."

Williams faces a sentencing hearing on Aug. 25, when he could receive a prison term or probation.

Garner was hospitalized for nearly a week after the Jan. 16 roadside fight that followed a minor traffic accident.

members of the cast and "SNL" producer Lorne Michaels left the show this week, their contracts having expired, the show ceased to exist.

"I think the network is trying very hard to obscure that fact," says Michaels, who was the heart, soul and mind of the show. "I suppose they have that right. They have affiliates to worry about."

Indeed, an entry called "Saturday Night Live" will be on the NBC fall schedule. And an NBC official became fairly indignant at the suggestion that "SNL" could no more exist sans cast and creator than "Tonight" could live without Johnny Carson, Ed McMahon and producer Fred DeCordova.

"NBC owns the show," the network man said. "If NBC says 'Saturday Night Live' will be on the fall schedule, it will be on the fall schedule... Carson and McMahon were stars before 'Tonight.' Who'd ever heard of John Belushi or Dan Aykroyd before 'Saturday Night Live?'"

NBC, the implication is, MADE "Saturday Night Live," creating it whole by executive decree. Belushi, Aykroyd, Michaels, Gilda Radner, Jane Curtain — they were just interchangeable parts. Yeah, sure.

NBC's pretense is, as Michaels suggests, understandable. "SNL" was once the brightest, funniest show on television, and even though "SNL" had diminished in quality in the last season or two, its audience was expanding.

NBC, which has been doing a lot of losing these past few years, didn't want to lose "Saturday Night Live." Yet, there it was, the reality that the entire cast and producer Michaels were leaving; the cast, to move on to new things, and Michaels, to "withdraw and get to know again life as it is outside of television."

So, the network, like a frightened child clutching the phantom hand of an imaginary friend, just decided to pretend "Saturday Night Live" was still there.

NBC delivered the "SNL" franchise and a new cast to Jean Doumanian (who had been Michaels' assistant) and ordered her to start cooking. NBC will learn, probably too late, that a true original, a comic work of art, is not fried chicken. It can't be franchised.

It would have been wiser, at least from the standpoint of creating something of quality and freshness, to give Ms. Doumanian the "SNL" time slot and tell her to start anew. That way, she'd be at least on even ground with the other networks' pretenders, ABC's "Fridays" and CBS' "No Holds Barred."

"I hope that they'll rethink that over the summer," says Michaels. It would make sense.

As it is, Ms. Doumanian and the new "SNL" will have to wrestle not only the competition but the indomitable ghosts of the show's own past. Even Michaels, Curtain, Radner, Bill Murray & Co. couldn't do that, a sad fact proven by the show's downward slide (in quality, if not ratings) last season.

"Saturday Night" was blunted by time and the pressures of weekly television. The death bells were tolled when Aykroyd and Belushi left the show last year, "a hard loss to overcome," admits Michaels.

Michaels and his talented troupe knew when a good thing had spent its cycle, and got out. NBC knows, but doesn't want to face it. The result, quite probably, will be mediocrity.

Of that, television is already in bountiful supply.

ERA Forces Look To Elections For Needed Help

WASHINGTON (AP) — Backers of the Equal Rights Amendment, with the chance for ratification this year virtually gone, are turning to the fall elections as their best — and possibly last — hope. The Illinois legislature's failure to ratify the amendment Wednesday left the ERA three states shy of the 38 needed to make it part of the Constitution. No other state legislature is scheduled to vote on the measure this year, and 1981 sessions will be the last for many state assemblies before the June 1982 deadline for ratification. Fund-raising already has begun for pro-ERA legislative candidates this fall, and plans are being formulated to take the campaign to the Democratic and Republican national platform committees. "We're going to be very active in the fall elections — the presidential one and all the ones in between," said Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women.

She said her organization will remind both Democrats and Republicans of their long support for the amendment, and hope that a continuing commitment from party leaders will favorably influence state lawmakers.

Some ERA activists are particularly concerned that opposition from Ronald Reagan, the likely GOP presidential nominee, will keep an ERA plank out of this year's Republican platform. "When the Republicans meet, they are going to find out how many Republican feminists they have who are determined that that plank, which has been in the party platform since 1944, not be removed," said Liz Carpenter, former chairwoman of ERAmerica. Although state election strategies still are being worked out for the fall campaign, ERA backers are hopeful of making changes in the North Carolina and Florida legislatures. Both states failed to adopt the amendment by two votes in their last legislative sessions.

There also is some optimism about prospects in South Carolina, where five lawmakers who had pledged to support the ERA two years ago switched their votes at the last minute, said ERAmerica spokeswoman Kathleen Currie. She added that legislative leadership is backing the amendment in Oklahoma, and a strong coalition of business, labor and politicians are pushing it, in Missouri.

ERAmerica and the National Women's Political Caucus held a fund-raiser Wednesday night that grossed $125,000. Spokeswoman Lynce Katz said once expenses are paid, the money will be used to support pro-ERA candidates in the fall. The National Organization for Women has an affiliated political action committee which also will provide some campaign funds.

The ERA failed to pass earlier this year in Virginia and Georgia, but Illinois — the last northern industrial state to withhold ratification — was the major battleground of 1980.

Ms. Currie said. "But we have had setbacks before. It's not going to be a dead issue because there are too many people out there working for it."

Of the 35 states that have voted to ratify the amendment, five since have voted to rescind their approval, but Congress must decide whether such action is valid.

Earliest Life Clues In A Rock From Australia

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The oldest fossil remnants of living things ever found reveal surprisingly complex, microscopic creatures that thrived in a shallow ocean 3½ billion years ago, scientists say.

The fossil organisms — threadlike chains of individual cells — "tell us that life was a whole lot more complex at that time than any of us had really guessed," said paleobiologist J. William Schopf.

That means life on Earth must have begun much earlier in the planet's 4.6 billion-year history, Schopf said Thursday in an interview before today's official announcement.

He said the organisms' primitive organization, still found in some modern bacteria, means "the single-celled, simple little things, must have come much earlier."

UCLA said the microfossils found in northwestern Australia — in an area miners had named the North Pole — are more than a billion years older than any other generally accepted fossil remains.

Schopf heads an international group of scientists gathered at UCLA to search for the origin of life.

Team member Malcolm Walter of the Australian Bureau of Mineral Resources announced a few months ago the discovery of other evidence in North Pole rocks that primitive life must have existed 3.5 billion years ago.

But he had not found actual fossilized cells.

Schopf said the microfossils are "very important because they tell us about the types of organisms that existed, beyond just the fact that they were there."

The fossils were found in two groups of rocks from the same area. One collection was gathered in 1977 by Stanley M. Awramik of the University of California-Santa Barbara, whose separate study found the first indications that they contained fossils. The rest were found last summer by UCLA team members led by Walter, along with geologists Roger Buick and John Dunlop of the University of Western Australia.

Schopf said the age of the rocks, and thus of the fossils they contain, was determined by three separate groups of scientists who measured the ratios of various naturally occurring radioactive elements in the stone.

The fossils reveal cells organized like colonies into threadlike filaments so tiny that hundreds placed end-to-end would hardly reach an inch.

Schopf said he can't think of anything except living organisms that could produce the threadlike patterns — "With this sort of complexity, I don't think there is any question that these are microfossils."

Vance Rejoins N.Y. Times

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Secretary of State Cyrus Vance has rejoined the board of directors of the New York Times Co. after a 3½-year hiatus.

Vance had quit the board in January 1977 to join the Carter administration.

Arthur Ochs Sulzberger, chairman and chief executive officer of the Times company, said Thursday that Vance's re-election came at the regular monthly meeting of the board.

Vance, who resigned as secretary of state in May, first became a Times director in April 1975. He was secretary of the Army from 1962 to 1964 and then was named deputy defense secretary by President Lyndon Johnson, serving until 1967.

In 1968 and 1969, Vance was one of two U.S. negotiators at the Paris peace conference on Vietnam.

Hayden, Fonda Visiting Israel

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jane Fonda and her husband, Tom Hayden, have left sunny California for a few days in the sun — in Israel.

Hayden, a member of the California SolarCal Council, planned to visit a solar pond at the Dead Sea, and talk to government officials about receiving help to turn the Salton Sea in California into a solar pond, to conduct energy.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — CHIC CHICK SOON LEARNED OLD SARTORIAL TRICKS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: U equals O

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The bidding:

1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
3 ♦ Pass 4 ♦ Pass
6 ♦ Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: King of ♠.

Sometimes it is obvious from the auction and dummy's strength that the defenders simply do not have the high cards to defeat the contract. That is when a touch of guile can be most helpful, as this hand proves.

The bidding was not a thing of beauty—it lacks the touch of grace that delicate players so admire. Nevertheless, there is no doubting its efficiency, for the final contract was highly satisfactory. Note, however, that a grand slam in diamonds can be made against any lead other than a spade—declarer can maneuver to ruff two hearts in the South hand.

Against six spades West made his normal lead of the king of clubs. When dummy appeared, East did not think too highly of the defensive prospects, for South surely had the two missing aces and top trump honors for his jump to slam. It seemed likely that declarer would need no more than a club ruff in dummy to come to twelve tricks.

But East also realized that declarer couldn't possibly know that trumps were breaking 4-1. If East could

Free Gaslights In N.Y. Village

By JOHN C. GIVEN

Associated Press Writer
WYOMING, N.Y. (AP) — Softly hissing gas lanterns cast a sleepy glow over the streets of this western New York village, warming the hearts of its 500 citizens, who have basked in the Victorian lamp-light free of charge for nearly 70 years.

Since 1911, 33 stately gas lanterns have burned with a steady, reassuring glow night and day along the shaded streets of Wyoming.

"In the past 10 years, it has gotten to be an embarrassment," said Rhoda Warren, town librarian and a former mayor. "It's an utter waste—but it's free."

The lanterns don't get turned on and off because "the village would have to hire somebody" to do it, she said.

The National Fuel Co. inherited a contract to provide the gas and maintenance when it took over the Republic Light, Heat and Power Co. in the 1950s, said company spokesman Arthur Coon.

Republic was an outgrowth of the Alden-Batavia Gas Co., which signed the agreement in 1911 in exchange for the right to run a gas line through the village.

"People used to think that gas was very dangerous," Mrs. Warren explained. "It was explosive, inflammable, toxic. A lot of farmers didn't want the line on their property. And villagers didn't want it through the village."

"So the gas company offered free gas to light the street lights for 99 years."

"A few years ago it was questioned by our company as to what the hell was going on," Coon said. But after examining the documents, National Fuel officials concluded the utility is bound by the agreement, he added.

For their part, Wyoming's community leaders are all too aware that the free ride is over in the year 2011.

"It's an underlying worry for the village board," said Mrs. Warren. "When they're getting the budget together, someone always says, 'Well, we've got to start thinking ahead here. When it does run out, what are we going to do?'"

It is a troubling question and not just from a financial standpoint. For many Wyomingites, if anything gives this hamlet its soul, it's the gaslights.

"They don't attract bugs. There's no glare. They're very romantic in the winter, with the snow falling," Mrs. Warren said. "Some cities think lights are antidotes to crime. Our lights are dim and soft. And we have no crime."

A few years ago, Mrs. Warren recalled, two candidates were running for village trustee posts. "They typed up a notice, saying the village needed more lighting, and if they got elected, they would put up electric lights. "And you know," she said, "they only got 25 votes."

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JUNE 21, 1980

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when you would be wise to draw up new plans that could give you more security in the future. Devise a course of action whereby you and associates can gain benefits.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Conferring with close ties and associates is important today. Attend a worthwhile group meeting.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan how to be more cooperative with associates in the future and get better results. Relax and express happiness.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study your environment and make plans for improvement. You can easily make a fine impression on others today.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Use this day for improving conditions at home by adding more comfort. Put your talents to work.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Communicate with associates early in the day and plan how to improve production in the future. Think constructively.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A fine day to study how to improve your financial status and in a most ethical fashion. Make repairs to property.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study your appearance well and know how to improve it to your own satisfaction. Take time to engage in favorite hobby.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You can obtain the data you need that was difficult to get during regular workweek. Strive for increased happiness.

SGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A fine day to cultivate new acquaintances. Take steps to make your surroundings more comfortable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Show more interest in civic affairs and gain added prestige. Take health treatments and improve your appearance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Delve into some new outlet that is appealing and could be profitable in the future. Express your talents.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study all the promises you have made and keep them to the best of your ability. Take no risks with money at this time.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those clever young people who can understand the motives of others very well, so be sure to give a fine education that includes social science. One here who will have a great interest in religion.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Survey Indicates Grasshopper Scourge For Texas

"And the locusts came up over all the land of Egypt, and settled on the whole country of Egypt, such a dense swarml never before, nor ever shall be again" — Exodus 10:14

By PAT TEAGUE
LUBBOCK, Texas (UPI) — The Old Testament locusts, loosed on a recalcitrant Pharaoh, may or may not have inspired the Egyptians to carve the insects' images on temple walls.

But as the grasshopper's alter ego, the locust has been a palpable threat to man throughout history, a scourge chronicled in both the Bible and the Koran.

Some desert peoples, awed by the sight of black swarms of hungry grasshoppers devouring their crops and foliage, called the insects the "teeth of the wind."

In rural China and Africa, lines of shouting, stick-waving and drum-beating men sometimes advanced on fields thick with grasshoppers, hoping to frighten the pests away.

In the United States, grasshopper plagues were reported intermittently prior to the Civil War. After 1865, when settlers began farming the subhumid Great Plains, grasshoppers posed calculable threats to farms and ranches.

This year, federal experts predict, 32.3 million acres of farm and ranch land in 17 states will be affected by grasshoppers to an economically significant degree.

Grasshoppers may affect up to 6.5 million acres in Texas, more than any other state, entomologists said.

In numbers above eight per square yard, the grasshoppers on a 10-acre plot of land can consume as much plant material as a hungry, full-grown cow. They can chew rangeland grasses so low the forage will not regenerate, eliminating grazing opportunities and causing soil erosion.

There have been reports of grasshoppers denuding fields of alfalfa and wheat, of defoliated trees and shrubs. In rare instances, grasshoppers have consumed bark and pine needles. And when hungry enough, grasshoppers reportedly have chewed the handles of shovels and other implements, searching for imbedded bait.

In the sweep of rolling fields and brush-dotted rangeland of the Texas Panhandle, there were isolated reports last year of up to 80 grasshoppers per square yard. During a particularly acute infestation in the Northwest in 1978, there were reports of up to 200 grasshoppers per square yard.

About 1.5 million acres of Texas land were affected by significant amounts of grasshoppers two years ago, in what up to then was described as the state's worst infestation ever.

Each year in late spring, Roy Moritz of the U.S. Agriculture Department's Animal Plant and Health Inspection (APHIS) office in Lubbock, heads out to surrounding counties to conduct surveys and, at scheduled nightly meetings, apprise ranchers and farmers of the threat to their land.

Moritz describes his findings, then recommends whether ranchers should participate in a program set up in 1936 to combat grasshoppers.

Under the cooperative program, farmers and ranchers form committees to determine whether to participate. If they elect to join the program, they then contract with the federal government to spray 10,000-acre blocks with insecticides.

This year, the USDA and the Environmental Protection Agency clashed over environmental questions the spraying program raises.

The EPA suggested aerial spraying should not be done in buffer zones around highways, buildings, water or recreation areas.

That, said the USDA, would have eliminated three-fourths of the area that needed spraying.

The APHIS, an arm of the agriculture department, finally satisfied the EPA by putting on paper its policy to warn people to stay indoors when spraying occurs and that water supplies are avoided.

The cost of the spraying program is shared equally by farmers and ranchers, the states' agricultural departments and the USDA.

Last year, Texas participants spent 60 cents an acre, and the state and federal governments chipped in another 60 cents apiece to provide Malathion spraying over contracted acreage.

Moritz said increased costs of aviation fuel and the added expense of electronic guidance systems for the spray has increased the cost to $2.10 per acre. Moritz predicted the spraying of about half of the 6.5 million acres of Texas land which could be affected by grasshoppers.

The current grasshopper population buildup in the U.S. — which has occurred over the last few years — is tied to moderate weather conditions.

Adult grasshoppers, ranging in color from orange and lemon yellow to brown, generally are about an inch long.

The adult females deposit between 100 and 400 egg pods in the soil, grain or grass in late summer. In late spring the next year, the young nymphs hatch. Only a third of them will survive ultimately, but those who do begin an immediate search for food in the forage that surrounds them.

Nymphs molt five or six times in the next 40 to 50 days until they reach adulthood. The hoppers feed until cold weather kills them; long autumns simply extend the season.

Adult hoppers thrive in hot, dry weather, another reason why farmers covet specific weather at a specific time: in this case, cool, rainy conditions in late spring to encourage fungi and disease growth on the hatching nymphs. The right weather can check a potential grasshopper infestation quickly.

Man's method of dealing with the threat is less subtle.

When the wind is calm, air temperatures are cool and the humidity moderately high to prevent evaporation, pilots — at 60 to 100 feet high in single or multi-engine spray planes — lay out a mixture of eight ounces of Malathion or Carbaryl or Sevin-4 oil per acre. The kill rate is 90 to 95 percent, but it must be done before females begin laying eggs.

The USDA, through its Rangeland Insect Laboratory at Bozeman, Mont., also is experimenting with a biological control known as Nosema Locustae. The control, along with four to five grams per acre of Carbaryl, is sprayed on wheat bran and dropped into infested areas.

When the hoppers eat the bran, 40 to 60 percent die immediately from the Carbaryl. Another 15 to 35 percent die later from the disease and most of the surviving hoppers lose their reproductive capacity.

Although the effects are less dramatic, the Nosema method requires only five percent of the insecticide used in the spray program, and the bran can be dropped in hot or windy weather, researchers said.

Jim Duncan, an APHIS representative from Plainview, Texas, toured a field near Channing in the Panhandle recently. He was optimistic that a week of cool, rainy weather had checked the grasshopper infestation, but he was wrong.

"We were hoping we wouldn't find what we found out there today," he said later. "We found a whole lot heavier infestation than we had expected."

A preliminary survey indicated between 13 and 42 nymphs per square yard and the hatch had only begun.

The situation won't vary greatly in neighboring New Mexico where entomologists predicted up to 6.3 million acres of rangeland — mostly in the state's northeastern corner — will be affected this year.

The problem also is expected in Arizona, California, Colorado, Kansas and Oklahoma, and to a lesser extent in 10 other states.

Despite dire predictions for Texas ranchers this year, the state's spray program will be limited by a lack of state funds as well as a USDA directive not to spray where brush and overgrowth is dense.

"This came out of Washington. It was some kind of policy that rolled down the line," said Larry Jordan, a state agriculture department entomologist. "Right now these counties are being told specifically that the USDA would not come in and spray those counties unless political pressure is put on them."

With a third of the funding gone, Jordan said the state of Texas can not hope to make up the difference so that brushy areas can be sprayed.

"There's no way we can go in there and pay either 50 percent or two-thirds of the cost," he said. "We just don't have the money. That's not our ruling. We're just caught in a hard spot. We had no idea that was coming down."

Jordan said ranchers have been told in the past that dense brush and overgrowth will inhibit the effectiveness of the insecticides. Nevertheless, Jordan doesn't like losing the option of trying.

"It's hard to walk into a (county) meeting and flatly state (to ranchers and farmers) that in no way you'll come in here and spray this country unless you're made to."

GRASSHOPPER PLAGUE? Federal experts predict 32.3 million acres of farm and ranch land in 17 states will be affected by grasshoppers to an economically significant degree this year. To help control the problem the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture and other organizations are attacking the problem with chemicals and other methods. (UPI Photo)

Bearden Named To Honor Soc. Board

ECU News Bureau
CHICAGO — Dr. James H. Bearden, Dean of the East Carolina University School of Business, was elected as a member of the Board of Governors of Beta Gamma Sigma, the national scholastic honor society for students of business and administration.

In addition to the Gamma Chapter at East Carolina University, there are chapters of Beta Gamma Sigma at the University of North Carolina—Chapel Hill and at Appalachian State University.

At the annual meeting of the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business also held in Chicago, Bearden was appointed to serve a three-year term on the Standards Committee of that national association. The American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business is an organization of institutions devoted to higher education for business and administration and is recognized by the Council on Post-secondary Accreditation and by the U.S. Office of Education. It is the accrediting agency for all bachelor's and master's degrees in business and administration. The 10-member Standards Committee on which Bearden will serve develops and reviews standards as the basis for accreditation and also assists institutions in program planning and development.

Agency To Hold Monthly Meet

The monthly meeting of the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency will be held July 9 at 7:30 p.m. at the Ramada Inn.

Included on the agenda is the consideration of revisions of the ECHSA's administrative personnel policies and procedures and a number of project reviews.

Among project reviews to be considered is a proposal from Pitt Memorial Hospital for a renal transplantation program.

Additional information on project reviews may be secured by contacting the director of project review at the ECHSA office in Greenville.

Ass'n. Holds Monthly Meet

The Pitt County Epilepsy Association will hold its monthly meeting on Thursday evening, June 26 at 7:30 at the Willis Building on the corner of First and Reid Streets in Greenville.

The officers will report on the annual executive board meeting recently held in Charlotte and the recent epilepsy symposium held in Greenville. The public is invited to attend. Children are welcome. For further information call Scott Luce at 752-7151 (work) or 752-3769 (home).
