Local Comments On Liquor-By-The Drink

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

"We haven't discussed it at a workshop yet," Greenville Mayor Don McGlohon said of a possible liquor-by-the drink referendum for the city, but, "I've heard that the restaurant owners will ask for a referendum this fall, although we've had nothing official on it yet."

The North Carolina House of Representatives Friday, acting on a bill approved by the Senate last year, passed legislation allowing municipalities in counties that have rejected mixed-drink sales to conduct their own referendums without the mandatory three-year waiting period.

Pitt County voters in June 1979, defeated a liquor-by-the-drink referendum by 232 votes — 6,567 to 6,335.

An analysis of the votes by precincts showed that eight out of nine Greenville precincts approved the sale of mixed drinks. The city vote totaled 3,992 for and 2,512 against. However, county precincts defeated the measure 4,055 to 2,343, with only one precinct — Grifton, by a vote of 264 to 260 — approving the sale.

Under the law in effect at the time, another referendum in the county could not have been held within three years — until June 1982.

The bill passed Friday, makes municipalities in Dare, Carteret and Catawba Counties, as well as Pitt, immediately eligible for mixed-drink referendums.

Under the legislation, if at least two municipalities voted for mixed drink sales in a countywide referendum in which the proposal was defeated, towns in those counties may hold their own vote without a three year wait.

Prior to last year's vote, Marvin Speight, chairman of the State ABC Board said, "You're not voting liquor in or out. You're voting whether you want liquor-by-the-drink or liquor by the bottle."

Other supporters contended that there would be more control over the use of alcohol in public places if the sale of mixed drinks were approved.

Opponents contended, however, that liquor-by-the-drink would increase the availability and the consumption of alcohol.

"I don't know the process for handling it (a vote)," McGlohon said, but added, "I assume the city council would have to call for a referendum. I just don't know yet."

The mayor continued, "my guess would be," that the council will call for a referendum because of the, "apparent interest of the voters of the city. I would assume they would want us to."

However, he suggested that it might be up to the Board of County Commissioners to call for the referendum, since by-the-drink sales would be controlled by the county ABC system. "No one is sure of the logistics," at the present time, McGlohon noted.

Carter, Schmidt Hold Meeting

VENICE, Italy (AP) — President Carter and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt met privately Saturday on the eve of a seven-nation summit conference, and the president said afterwards there are "no differences between us" on key issues.

"We have absolutely no doubts" that West Germany will support a North Atlantic Treaty Organization plan to deploy new nuclear missiles in Europe, Carter said.

With questions about the missiles, and about the appropriate allied response to the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, dogging the two leaders as they and their summit colleagues gathered here, Carter and Schmidt spent about 90 minutes together, one-half hour more than anticipated.

The two-day summit conference, which begins Sunday, will seek a common approach to some of the most pressing political and economic problems of the post-war era. But differences appear so great that major agreements are considered unlikely on problems ranging from the Afghanistan crisis to the need to reduce oil imports and consumption.

Carter, leading a U.S. delegation that includes Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie and Treasury Secretary G. William Miller, arrived late Saturday afternoon following a two-day visit to Rome and the Vatican, during which he met with Italian leaders and Pope John Paul II.

About one hour after he arrived at 5:54 p.m. (11:54 a.m. EDT), Carter began his meeting with Schmidt at the president's residence here, the Hotel Cipriani.

When the two men emerged, they smiled and the president said "we both agree" that the Soviets must withdraw "all their troops" from Afghanistan.

On one of the key issues reportedly dividing Carter and Schmidt — the chancellor's suggestion that the missile deployment be delayed — Carter said Schmidt was committed to carrying out the NATO decision that was reached last December to put the missiles in place.

The chancellor's planned trip to Moscow on June 30 was also discussed, Carter said.

Schmidt said he wanted to "underline" what Carter said and added: "I never thought that we did not agree in substance" on the question of the missiles.

The Washington Post reported Saturday that Schmidt said in an interview that a letter he received from Carter last week questioning the German position on the missiles was "astonishing."

Asked about the letter after the Schmidt meeting, the president said he sent it because there were "erroneous press reports" about the subject.

Carter has described the summit meetings as "a conference of democracies" that are bound to disagree at times. But he contends their relationship has never been stronger.

In addition to the United States, the participants are West Germany, France, Great Britain, Italy, Canada, and Japan.

Security is extremely tight for the summit, with about 8,000 police and other paramilitary forces assigned to patrol the city and its miles of canals. The seven leaders will meet on the island of San Giorgio Maggiore, across the Grand Canal from St. Mark's Square.

Casualties Reported In Korean Clash

By K.C. HWANG
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea said its naval forces chased for 12 hours and then sank a North Korean "spy boat" off the west coast of South Korea early Saturday. Eight North Koreans were reported killed and a ninth was captured.

During the chase, the communist North Korean regime scrambled a dozen MiG jets and five war ships for a possible strike against the south, South Korea's counter-espionage command said. But the command said the South Korean air force took "appropriate measures" to prevent a major clash. It did not elaborate.

Lt. Gen. Shin Hyun-soo, chief of the counter-espionage command, claimed the North Korean vessel was on a mission to land agents to stir anti-government disturbances like the one last month in Kwangju, where more than 170 people were killed.

South Korea's military-dominated regime claims North Korean agents were behind the Kwangju uprising. The student-led rebels who held the city for nine days denied outside connections and said they were trying to ensure that the government keep its promises of democratic reforms and an end to martial law rule.

The North Korean boat was reportedly first sighted by a South Korean coast guard patrol boat Friday evening about seven miles off the west coast of South Korea.

The South Korean command said the North Korean boat tried to flee but that South Korean navy and coast guard ships and three air force fight-bombers gave chase, following it to a point about 40 miles off the coastal city of Sosan, 60 miles southwest of Seoul.

At that point, the command said, a coast guard ship fired two warning shots across the bow of the North Korean boat, the North Korean vessel returned the fire, prompting the South Koreans to sink the ship.

Israelis Call For Begin's Resignation

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israelis in the "Peace Now" movement rallied Saturday to demand the disbanding of Israeli settlements in occupied Arab territories and the resignation of Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Carrying signs urging "Peace Now" and "Begin — Follow Nixon," an estimated 3,000-5,000 persons gathered near the Tel Aviv Museum plaza to protest Begin's foreign and economic policies.

The talks have been deadlocked since May 8 over the issue of Palestinian autonomy on the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip, captured by Israel in the 1967 war.

Begin faces problems Sunday when his Cabinet meets to try to trim the national budget in line with Finance Minister Yigal Hurvitz' inflation-fighting program. The defense budget was cut Thursday by 4 percent - about $140 million - but that was $160 million less than Hurvitz proposed. Begin has said he will try to persaude other ministries to absorb the difference.

Hurvitz has threatened to resign if the budget reductions are not carried out. Inflation is running at an annual rate of 195 percent.

Begin also has been unable to win agreement from his coalition colleagues to shift Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir to the Defense Ministry and Energy Minister Yitzhak Modai to the Foreign Ministry. Begin has been serving as his own defense minister since the resignation last month of Ezer Weizman.

Iranian Soldiers Arrested, Charged With Plotting

By The Associated Press

At least 27 members of the Iranian armed forces were arrested Saturday on charges of conspiring with 250 other soldiers to overthrow the government, the head of the army's Revolutionary Tribunal was quoted as saying.

According to Hojatoleslam Mohammad Reyshahri, head of the tribunal, 100 men have been convicted or are awaiting trial in connection with the alleged mass plot and 150 others are still being sought.

Among those reported implicated was Admiral Ahmad Madani, who finished second to Abolhassan Bani-Sadr in Iran's presidential election earlier this year. Madani has spoken out against the holding of, or spy trials for, the 53 American hostages who spent their 231st day in captivity Saturday.

His successor as commander of the Iranian navy, Admiral Mahmoud Alavi, was reported to have been arrested in February and to have appeared in court three weeks ago — and Reyshahri was quoted as saying: "Admiral Madani should appear at the trial of Admiral Alavi since Madani's name was often mentioned by the accused (Alavi)."

Reyshahri also was quoted as saying seven Iranians currently on trial have all confessed links to pro-shah generals; to Iraq, Iran's western neighbor with which it has had several border clashes; or to autonomy-seeking Kurds in northwestern Iran but that the overwhelming majority in the armed forces supports the government.

"Just a few days ago the wife of an army officer came and informed us that her husband was a member of the American CIA," he was quoted as saying.

The leader of the Moslem fundamentalist party, which has sought to limit Bani-Sadr's power and is expected to play the key role in determining the fate of the American hostages, was quoted as saying any solution to the hostage standoff should not be aimed at establishing ties with the United States.

Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti, leader of the clergy-dominated Islamic Republican Party and an influential member of Iran's ruling Revolutionary Council, was reported to have said in southern Iran:

"It was after a great struggle that the Iranian nation had succeeded in severing its ties and stopping its dependence on the United States. This policy should be followed and pursued in the future. The economic policy of the country should be directed in such a way that the Iranian nation should not get involved again in depending on the United States and Soviet Union and all other powers," he was quoted as saying.

A Promise Fulfilled

By MARY SCHULKEN

A promise has been fulfilled. Project PROMISE, Pitt County Schools' program bringing photography, 8mm movie and video productions into the classroom, was approved this week as a valid educational experience by a team of educators. The program, its materials and methods, will now be demonstrated in school systems throughout North Carolina.

The technical term for this approval is validation. The sharing of the project that will take place for the next few months is called dissemination. Both words are pseudonyms for success.

Project PROMISE (PROduction and the MIddle School Experience) began in the spring of 1977 under the direction of Janie E. Manning, presently principal at Bethel Elementary. Assistant Superintendent of Instruction Katheryn Lewis also directed the program. During its three years of operation at Farmville Middle School, the program attempted to strengthen skills related to planning, organizing materials and researching information, sharpen communication skills by media materials, and enable students to work independently and in groups.

"Only a few programs have been validated in the state," said Program Director Linda McLawhorn. "Less than ten I think. This is something Pitt County is really proud of."

Project PROMISE is a curriculum related media production program in which students learn through creating instructional materials under the guidance of teachers and media personnel. Involved persons instruct teachers in various aspects of production through a series of workshops followed by classroom experience.

Student production includes the process of topic selection, research, organization writing/storyboarding, producing/communicating, and evaluation. All projects decided on by the youngsters follow these six basic steps.

Six graders were chosen as the target group. During the past three years, they have been gathering materials for instructional units on "Producing Basic Visuals," "Simple Classroom Photography," "8mm Movie Production," "Classroom Video Production," and "Production Planning Model." Vivian Humphrey and Lorraine McNally, production specialists at Farmville Middle, wrote the materials. Each resource unit includes a teacher's manual and an implementation guide.

The program was examined June 16 and 17 by a team of educators which included Dr. Russell Yeany from the University of Georgia, Dr. Furman Penland from Yadkin County Schools, and Dr. Julia Capps of Asheville Schools. The team listened to presentations from Humphrey, McNally, Director of Educa-

American Indian Woman On Road To Sainthood

By DANIELA PETROFF
Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Katherine Tekakwitha, a young woman of the Iroquois confederacy who fled her upstate New York tribe 300 years ago to work in a Roman Catholic mission, will be declared "blessed" by Pope John Paul II on Sunday, becoming the first American Indian to approach sainthood.

The pope will declare her "blessed" in the beatification rite in St. Peter's Basilica. Once beatified, a figure usually is canonized a saint.

The church says it wants to beatify and canonize more Roman Catholics from minority ethnic groups because of injustices they have endured.

Three American cardinals, 11 bishops and hundreds of American Indians are expected to attend the ceremony.

"It's a great honor to us as American Indians," said Francis X. Harry Chin, a Sioux from Yates, N.D., who is here for the rite.

President Carter, on an official visit here before leaving for a seven-nation summit in Venice, met the American delegation during a visit to the Vatican on Saturday.

The church's biography says Tekakwitha was born in 1656 in Auriesville, N.Y., the daughter of a Roman Catholic Algonquin woman and an Iroquois man. Her father was a chief of the Mohawks, one of the Five Nations of the Iroquois confederacy. Tekakwitha's parents died in a smallpox epidemic and the 4-year-old girl, disfigured and partially blinded by the same disease, lived with a Mohawk uncle. She was baptized in 1676 by Jesuit missionaries.

Church historians say she ran away from the Mohawks because they were angry when she refused to marry because of her personal vow of chastity. She is said to have fled 200 miles on foot to the Mission of St. Francis Saverio north of Montreal. Unable to read or write, she served the community by aiding in the daily tasks of the mission and by her example of personal religious fervor, historians said.

The biography says she died at the age of 23 with the names of Jesus and Mary on her lips.

The Rev. Paolo Molinari, postulator for her beatification, said: "The message which the pope wants to transmit is to remind all nations that every ethnic group, including minorities, has its riches which must be singled out and authentically developed. At the same time, it shows that in accordance with the Gospel the injustices often suffered by these peoples through the centuries must be made up for."

Also Sunday the pope will beatify four European missionaries: two who worked in Canada and two who worked in Latin America.

Estimated damage to the Mewborn vehicle was $100 and none to the Hall vehicle.

Blood Collection Set

The American Red Cross Blood Services, Tidewater Region, will be collecting blood on Saturday, July 5 from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. at Pitt Memorial Hospital in the rehabilitation gym.

A Red Cross spokesman said that since the Greenville Sub Center will be closed on Friday, July 4, the Red Cross must collect Saturday to ensure platelet availability.

Platelets, the part of blood that controls bleeding, are often required to treat cancer or leukemia patients undergoing chemotherapy, it was explained. Unlike whole blood which can be stored for 35 days, platelets only have a shelf life of 72 hours. The short life-span and the continuous demand for platelets forces the Red Cross to collect blood over a three-day weekend, the spokesman said.

N.C. Democrats Take Aim Against GOP Club

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Democrats took aim Saturday at the Republican-backed Congressional Club as the state party convention voted to condemn the conservative group, and U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan labled it "the forces of reaction."

Morgan, who has been under intense attack by the Congressional Club for accepting advice from a former aide who now works for a weapons manufacturer, reacted in a strongly worded speech to delegates at the annual party convention and at a later news conference.

"The opposition party has been taken over by a private club and apparently this private club will run the campaign of my opposition candidate," Morgan said. "I hope I'm wrong but I'm afraid I'm not when I say this campaign will be filled with innuendo, smears and accusations that are absurd and sometimes vicious."

Morgan, a freshman senator, faces a re-election challenger by conservative John East of Greenville who has the backing of the Congressional Club and Republican Sen. Jesse Helms.

The club, a political-action committee that has raised millions of dollars for Helms, is also backing I. Beverly Lake Jr., the GOP candidate opposing Gov. Jim Hunt's re-election bid, and other GOP candidates.

Hunt also spoke to the more 2,000 delegates at Dorton Arena and criticized the GOP without mentioning the Congressional Club or Lake by name.

"The fall campaign this year transcends the usual contest between Democrats and Republicans," Hunt said. "The voters of North Carolina have a choice of those who are committed to continuing the steady, humane, progressive course we have pursued these past four years and those who literally want to turn back the clock."

The main order of business for the convention was the election of 22 at-large delegates to the Democratic National Convention. As the result of last month's primary, 18 of those selected were committed to President Carter and four were bound to Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy.

Other delegates were selected at earlier district conventions, giving Carter aa total of 56 North Carolina delegates to 13 for Kennedy.

The convetnion also adopted a lengthy platform and a resolution offered by New Hanover County delegates, which "condemns in no uncertain terms" the bipartisan philosophy and out-of-state contributions of the Congressional Club.

The platform, among other thing, puts the state party on record as supporting:

—Expansion of public financing of campaigns.

—Collective bargaining for workers.

It rejected proposals for gay rights, an investigation of U.S. crimes in Iran, a commendation to Ramsey Clark for his trip to Iran, a ban on nuclear power and others.

Hunt To Head N.C. Delegation

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt was elected Saturday to head the North Carolina delegation to the Democratic National Convention in New York City this August.

"That's the way I like to win 'em," Hunt said after he was elected chairman of the delegation by acclamation in a meeting of delegates and alternates. Sen. Robert Morgan was elected vice-chairman.

Their selection came after the remaining 22 delegates to the national convention were elected by the Democratic state convetnion.

Eighteen delegates on a nominating slate backing President Carter and four on a slate for Massachusetts Edward Kennedy were chosen.

Six of the at-large delegates went to state and party leaders. They were: Hunt; Morgan; Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green; State Sen. Russell Walker, D-Asheboro, the state party chairman; Betty Spier, former state party chairman; and E.V. Wilkins, second vice chairman of the state party.

In a meeting of delegates, Hunt pledged to be fair to the 13 North Carolina delegates who back Kennedy for the presidential nomination.

Council Sets Special Meet

The City Council has scheduled a special call meeting for Monday, June 23 at city hall in order to adopt the city and Greenville Utilities budget ordinances for 1980-81.

In addition to the budget adoption, several other items will be handled, including: consideration of the YCC budget; an amendment to the 1979-80 city budget; consideration of a revised pay and classification plan; acceptance of local streets for maintenance;

Adoption of a resolution ordering the demolition of a structure at 1503 S. Pitt Street; authorization for the submission of an energy conservation technical assistance grant application to the U.S. Department of Energy; appointment to the Board of Adjustments; an ordinance establishing revised cemetery fees; a resolution requesting the Transit Commission to study transit fees; and a resolution commending the Recreation and Parks Commission for studying fees.

Monday's meeting will be held at 5 p.m. in the council chambers.

Afghans Call For An Anti-Soviet Strike

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Most shopkeepers closed their stores and students marched through the streets of the Afghan capital of Kabul Saturday, responding to a call by Moslem rebels for a general strike against the Soviet presence in Afghanistan, a reliable source reported.

The source, quoting contacts in Kabul, said authorities responded by moving tanks and armored vehicles into the city and by sending helicopter gunships overhead. But they also were reported to have used loudspeakers on trucks and distributed handbills in an effort to keep the peace, and there were no reports of violence.

An official of the Kremlin-supported Afghan regime confirmed in New Delhi that many Kabul shops did not open as usual Saturday.

In February, an estimated 300 persons were killed during several days of anti-Soviet rioting in the Afghan capital. A second wave of disturbances, commonly referred to as the "children's revolt," swept Kabul in late April and early May.

Unofficial reports from Afghanistan said thousands of schoolgirls and schoolboys, who taunted Soviet and government soldiers, are still being held in prisons and that more than 300 others were killed by gunshots and beatings.

High school and university students were reported Saturday to have marched toward the British Embassy, but authorities apparently did not immediately move against them.

In Switzerland, anti-Soviet Afghan rebel leaders concluded two days of talks with representatives of the Islamic Conference by calling for all Moslem nations to cut ties with Moscow until the estimated 85,000 Russian soldiers are withdrawn from Afghanistan.

The leaders of the newly-formed Afghanistan Islamic Resistance Movement also proposed the United Nations sponsor a referendum in Afghanistan "to acertain the wishes of the people."

But a rebel spokesman, Abdul Rasul Sayaf, told a news conrerence later the resistance leaders had withdrawn that proposal because of the Soviet veto power in the U.N. Security Council. The rebels suggested instead that a U.N. conference be organized to provide humanitarian aid to the Afghan refugees. They also proposed establishing offices in New York, Geneva and Islamic capitals to further their international efforts.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said the Islamic meeting in Mont Pelerin, Switzerland, contributed "nothing concrete" to the Afghan crisis. In its dispatch from Moscow, Tass characterized the rebel leaders as "ringleaders of armed gangs who are paid agents of Western powers, China and reactionaries of the region."

The three Islamic Conference members at the Swiss meeting issued a separate statement calling for a Soviet withdrawal and for "adequate and timely support from the Moslem world and all other people" for the insurgents "in their just struggle." The statement called for "material help" but did not mention weapons.

Soviet troops moved into Afghanistan in December and joined the Marxist government's attempt to put down the rebellion by Moslem Afghan insurgents.

A European traveler reaching here from Kabul on Saturday said the city was tense. She said Russians there exercise caution moving about the city, usually traveling in groups of 20 or more to buy perfume, jeans and appliances in the bazaars.

However, an Afghan government delegatation led by A.N. Visaee, who identified himself as president of Afghan Civil Aviation, said Kabul was very peaceful and that unrest and school strikes were fomented by the United States, China and Pakistan. The government has repeatedly claimed those countries were behind the rebellion.

Rebel pamphlets circulating in Kabul urged Saturday's strike, according to insurgent groups based in Peshawar, Pakistan.

In Paris, visiting Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua told reporters Saturday "the Soviet Union is not going to withdraw its troops from Afghanistan," and accused Moscow of adopting a policy of "political blackmail."

Earlier, Huang met with French Foreign Minister Jean Francois-Poncet. Huang said Afghanistan was high on their agenda.

the Red Brigades, has threatened to disrupt the meetings, but there were no incidents leading up to the summit.

Nevertheless, power launches were set aside for Carter and the others rather than the slower but colorful gondolas, which authorities feel would be too vulnerable to sniper fire.

As the summit leaders gathered, senior diplomats reported that representatives of four nations — the United States, West Germany, France and Great Britain — have been meeting each week for informal discussions, outside of the North Atlantic Alliance framework, to discuss international crises.

Officially, the conference is an economic summit, the sixth in six years. But political events have eclipsed many of the economic issues and they will occupy most of Sunday's talks.

Carter's insistence on the need for a seven-nation strategy to deal with the Soviet Union, tied to the Afghanistan occupation, is at the top of the political agenda.

tional Media Elsie Brumback and ECU Professor Dr. Charles Coble. They visited the project site and talked with teachers and students involved with the program.

"What this validation means," explained McLawhorn, " is that these educators saw the project as a good, sound educational experience and approved it for dissemination." The director continued, saying "What dissemination means is that we will be sharing information and materials with other school units around the state. We will present programs at regional activities and conferences."

The program, according to McLawhorn, addresses several educational needs. "The addition of more 'hands-on' teaching methods in middle schools is one need," commented the director. "And the development of non-technical units for teachers and media coordinators to use in implementing curriculum related production is another." She also listed establishing a means for curriculum-oriented instruction in production for teachers and students and establishing a production program integrated in the school library/media program as needs.

Superintendent of Pitt County Schools Ott Alford called the project "a tremendous idea. It goes right to the heart of the learning process because you use a scientific discovery method." Alford explained that students involved in the project must use the formula involving the six basic steps. "They must determine their subject and project, then test and follow the steps.

"The whole key to this program has been the tremendous effort and cooperation between the youngsters and personnel," added Alford. "The way I see it, the more experience youngsters have in problem solving and developing the process of discovery, the better off they will be in the future."

Look Again At City Budget

The City Council unveiled its proposed 1980-81 fiscal year budget at a public hearing Tuesday night.

It included $9,974,478 for the municipal operations and $35,811,100 for the operation of Greenville Utilties Commission next year.

It also included a tentative tax increase of seven cents per $100 evaluation.

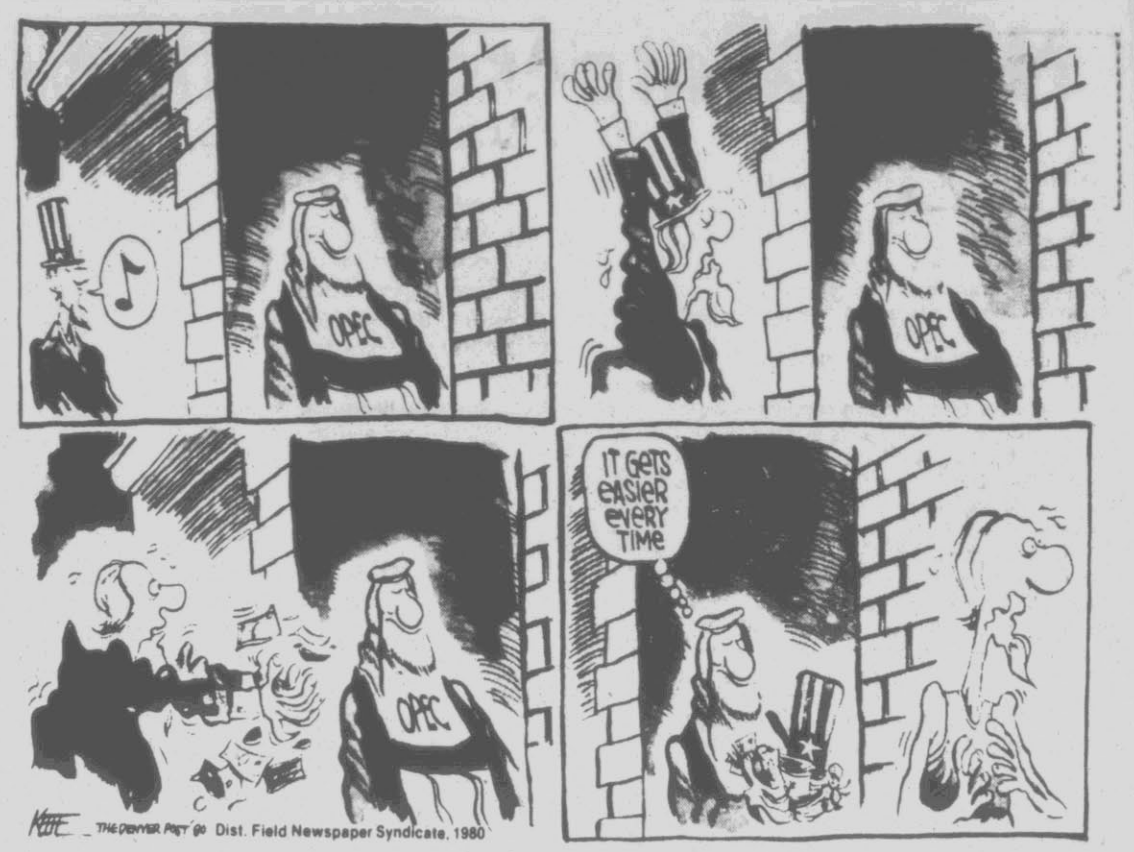
City Manager Ed Wyatt defended the budget as a "hold-the-line" one. The objective, he said, was to provide "the present level of service in spite of heavy inflationary costs."

There were varying other views on the proposed increase. Former Mayor Percy Cox said he was opposed to the increase because the tax rate would cause people to look twice before coming to Greenville.

On the other hand former council member Millie McGrath saw the budget as a austure one.

League of Women Voters Pres. Patricia Dunn said the budget showed restraint and called it a conservative one. "The city staff did a very creditable job given the limitations of monies and the needs of the city."

We think the proposed budget is a responsible one. And we can see the dangers of trimming any budget too close, only to have to come back in future years and provide large appropriations for worn-out equipment. Nevetheless we have never seen a municipal budget that couldn't stand some further trimming in the soft places. We think the council and manager should review this one again. That ten percent increase in the tax rate is going to hit some people hard. We believe it can be reduced somewhat.



Why Not Larger Interest Exemption?

The State Legislature last week enacted into law a bill providing for the exclusion of the first $200 in interest earned on funds deposited in savings acocunts or certificate of deposits.

The law will mean a tax savings of about $14 annually for every person who maintains saving accounts paying at least $200 interest.

Individual saving is a positive thing in that it provides a nest egg for future rainy days. Savings also allow financial institutions to make loans for houses, autos and other things we want and need.

So the new deduction looks like a good thing to us. Our only question is: Why not more?

Cash First In Child Care

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Which is more important; bureaucratic red tape, money, and the law, or the need of a child?

Few state government foulups answer that better than the ongoing argument over "let the money follow the child." Hundreds of hours have been devoted in legislative committee, in the Department of Human Resources, and in the Department of Public Instruction to this simple matter.

State and federal law says an exceptional child — one with special emotional, mental, or physical needs — must be provided an appropriate education in the public schools. That costs a lot of money, and not all schools have appropriate programs.

A child at Murdoch Center, it was determined, would benefit from leaving the institution to take advantage of community treatment programs and a public school experience. The child's legal guardian is a relative who lives in Person County. An appropriate program was found in Chatham County.

Chatham County schools said they didn't want to pay the cost. State officials said the money had to go to the county of residence. The attorney general was summoned.

Must Pay

The lawyers ruled that if a child went to a school outside his or her residency district then either the parents or the Department of Human Resources must pay.

So now, if a child leaves a state institution to live in a community treatment group home where the program is most suitable for his needs, and enrolls in a public school which happens not to be the proper school for that child's legal residence district, then it can cost up to $300 per month which in all too many cases neither the parent nor the local welfare agency can afford to pay.

The schools serve local districts and depend upon local taxes for part of their income. The group homes serve regions which may include several counties.

The argument goes on and on: can the state pay the school district where the child lives and let the money be transferred? Can the school attended claim the child for special funds while the school which the child is supposed to attend at home also claim funds?

Can state government help the child? It is, say the experts, going to take an act of the General Assembly to straighten things out.

Investment

Industrial investment in North Carolina during the first three months this year trailed the record of last year, but contained two bright spots: more jobs were created, and expansion by existing firms outstripped newcomers.

Investment totalled more than three-quarters of a billion dollars compared to just over one billion in the first quarter of 1979.

The 8,000 new jobs is about 1,000 more than during the same period of last year. There were 45 new plant announcements, and 101 expansions.

BILL NOBLITT

Resist

North Carolina is one of few state's which protects the common law right to resist an arrest when the law enforcement officer is behaving unlawfully.

A recent case in the state Appeals Court highlighted this situation. A citizen resisted because the warrant which the police presented was faulty. The court ruled that if there is a warrant the citizen cannot resist. But that leaves standing to the right to resist when the law officer is behaving clearly in an unlawful way, even to the point of using force so long as the force doesn't exceed that used or attempted by the police.

Sunday Morning Notes

They say moving isn't so bad, if you're organized. That's all right for organized people but what about those of us who stay at loose ends.

Your columnist hasn't made too many changes in residences in life, if you discount those mandated by the army.

But the time came to move into my new condomidium at Quail Ridge recently. I remembered all the advice I had ever heard about moving: get organized, pack everything in boxes and label them for the proper areas of the new home, throw away all old and unneeded items, work ahead . . . plan, plan, plan.

Enthusiastically I tackled the job of assembling enough boxes to pack all my junk. About 200 should be enough. I discounted the advice about throwing away everything not needed. I'm about half pack rat.

Anyway in a few days I had everything in the boxes and they were neatly labeled and stacked up around the living room, dining room, kitchen and bedroom.

Pretty good for a disorganized person, huh? Not so good. It seems the new place wasn't finished and it wasn't to be for several weeks.

Crawling over the boxes to get to the bedroom wasn't so bad. What was bad was trying to locate the aspirin, or a hammer or a fresh towel.

Lots of people dread moving day . . . but if you live among the packed boxes for several weeks you positively look forward to it. Nothing could be worse, you reason.

The moving company was my brother's, ABC Moving and Storage, and it was agreed that he would work me in on short notice. So the call came one morning to be ready at 1 p.m. With a crew of skilled workers on hand the actual moving can be a breeze. In a couple of hours I was left alone in my new home surrounded by furniture and boxes, boxes, boxes.

Fuel From Farm?

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

Many people see farm-produced fuels as the best answer to the growing energy problem, and as one bright spot on an otherwise cloudy farm economy horizon.

Each time the price of fuel from conventional sources increases in relation to the value of farm crops, prospects improve for on-farm production of alcohol fuels from grain or wood.

Unfortunately, development of a viable farm-produced fuel industry will take a while — even though we need the fuels now.

At best, several years will pass before enough facilities and technology for farm-produced alcohol can be brought into play to make much of a dent in fuel demand.

First, the best methods to produce a high-quality fuel easily and cheaply on the farm or in cooperative manufacturing centers must be proven and universally applied.

A favorable political climate must assure that gains farmers and ranchers make through on-farm fuel production are not promptly allocated, rationed, regulated or taxed away by government.

The fuel must be safe when used in modern machinery and require little or no engine modification or large capital investment.

Since almost everything that grows on the farm or ranch can be converted to alcohol, enough crop residues and grains are grown in almost every state to allow fuel self-sufficiency for farmers and ranchers. But techniques and economics are two different matters. Each crop presents its own production and cost problems which must be sorted out before the most practical crop "candidates" emerge.

Most promising are crops high in sugar content: sorghum, cane and perhaps beets. Corn is a crop often considered because of its general availability and the existence of planting, harvesting and storage equipment.

Oilseeds offer great potential, and some experimental engines have been run on soybean, peanut and sunflower oil mixtures.

Further success in farm-produced fuels must begin with sound technical advice and direction, backed by adequate financing by participating farmers and agribusiness. Government has a part to play in research, in providing tax incentives and in removing regulatory roadblocks, although the latter is something the government is usually reluctant to do.

But to be truly successful, a farm-produced fuels industry must be developed within the free market system through the initiative, financing and ingenuity of the farmers and ranchers who use it.

Global Pizza Palace

VICO EQUENSE, ITALY (AP) — To find the perfect pizza, the real thing, you must first come in sight of Mount Vesuvius, then look for the silver flash of olive trees in the breeze and herds of water buffalo grazing in pastures bordered by vineyards and tomato fields.

Only in the lush land around Naples, which gave the world Lacrima Christi wine, the treasures of Pompeii and the symmetry of Sophia Loren, can you find the true ingredients for the succulent, soggy, red, round delicacy that has captivated the palates of the world. Pizza is king here.

And the tiny town of Vico Equense, which looks across the bay at Vesuvius, boasts the king's palace, the most renowned pizzeria anywhere on earth: Ristorante da Gigino.

The Pizzaiuolo — the pizza chef — rolls his masterpiece out of the kitchen on a long stainless steel cart resembling an operating table and proudly, with surgical precision, carves it at the table, before your very eyes, without any anesthetic beyond its own hypnotic fragrance.

Pizza here is not sold by the slice or the pie size. It is sold by the meter — 39 inches of mouth-watering melting mozzarella augmented by an anthology of appetising delights from anchovy to zucchini.

Large Neapolitan families, who have been flocking to this landmark pizza establishment since the days when Enrico Caruso was building up a repertoire behind his cummerbund, seem to order them by the kilometer.

Reagan No Marionette

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan's decision to keep William Brock as Republican national chairman after all corrects two widespread misconceptions, showing that Reagan is a better politician than supposed and that his political operation may be worse than its severest critics imagine.

Shortcomings of his political high command were revealed in unanimous advice that he needlessly outrage party moderates by dumping Brock. Besides failing to recognize these consequences, Reagan's senior advisers were guilty of naivete. While dumping Brock, they were trying to hire his closest friend and associate, William Timmons.

In overriding this advice, Reagan is not the marionette liberals take him for but a politician who covets the presidency. "I never appreciated before," one moderate Republican deeply involved in the Brock affair told us, "how much Reagan wants to be president." That lesson has been learned during the past two years by long time associates heaved overboard by Reagan as excess baggage.

These lessons are intrinsically more important than who occupies the office of national chairman, which is mainly intramural politics. Although Brock's ability either to hurt or help Reagan's campaign is minimal, his fate was closely watched by politicians as a test of Reagan and his campaign staff.

Whatever they may say now, all Reagan's senior staffers urged him to renege on his month-old promise to retain Brock. Apart from failing to anticipate the firestorm within the Republican Party, their ineptitude is reflected in the simultaneous effort to enlist Bill Timmons as Reagan's national political director. Timmons was invited to California the same week Brock was to be administered the coup de grace.

That would be asking Butch Cassidy to join the posse before it lynched the Sundance Kid. Timmons, a senior White House aide under Presidents Nixon and Ford and now a Washington lobbyist, was Brock's lieutenant in national Young Republican politics (in the right-wing Syndicate faction) in the early 1960s and later was his congressional aide. The two Tennesseans remain intimate political collaborators.

In Los Angeles last week, two of the Reagan campaign triumvirs — William Casey and Edwin Meese — urgently sought Timmons' expertise and prestige (The third, Dr. Richard Wirthlin, was ill.) Reagan insiders believe the decisive thrust was delivered by Timmons when he made clear to Casey and Meese that whatever slim prospect they had of getting him to walk away from his business would

VIRTUES IN ORDER

There is a statement in the first chapter of II Peter which gives a fine picture of the progress of the Christian life. It reads as follows: "To your faith add virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge self-control; and to self-control patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness love."

One of the most important things about living a good life is to get our virtues in proper sequence. Housewives find in cooking they must not only use certain ingredients, but if they are to get the dish they want, they must mix these ingredients in a certain prescribed order.

In this brief passage of Scripture, the writer of II Peter points out that the Christian life starts at a definite point and comes to its fullness at a certain definite point. It starts with faith and is consumated in love. — Elisha Douglass

Where Optimism Is Strained

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — There are various institutional approaches to solving the problems of health, of financing the arts and humanities, of providing equal opportunity and improving international relations.

You can seek results through governmental action, said Richard W. Lyman, but "our cherished freedoms rest in part upon the fact that we deny government a monopoly on the pursuit of public interest."

Should business, then, be depended upon to solve social problems?

"Business should be able to perform in a socially acceptable way and not operate as a social welfare agency," said Lyman. "Business should not be required to provide all the goodies of society."

Perhaps then the nation's non-profit institutions, its universities and its foundations, should bear the burden? Lyman will tell that of course they do, that all institutions have a role and none a monopoly.

But considering his career direction, it appears Lyman, a former history professor, has a very strong faith in the ability of private, non-profit institutions to improve the human condition.

Lyman, 56, leaves the presidency of Stanford University on August 1 to become president of the Rockefeller Foundation, an organization whose goals he said in an interview will involve him in:

Hunger around the world, population problems, health and the diseases of the world, the arts and humanties, equal opportunity, and international relations.

"Despair?" he repeated when it was suggested he might. So absurd he grinned at the suggestion. "Despair is corrosive," to be avoided, "for your own and everyone's sake."

Too much has been accomplished, he said, too many problems overcome, to feel that challenges cannot be met.

There is, for example, he said, "very little poverty left in America and the statistics don't tell the whole story." Progress has been made, he said, "more than most people realize."

Still, he concedes that confidence in institutions may be waning, but he also feels people may demand too much from them. In an address several years ago, he tossed the ball to critics, telling them:

"Any organization, provided it's large enough to be visible and to be suspected of having disposable assets under its control, is asked to solve any problem, however irrelevant to its mission, experience or capacity ...

"An institution, asked to perform a service it is not equipped to perform, responds ineptly. The ineptitude is not seen as a predictable result of a misdirected request, but of the incompetence or worse of the institution and its leadership."

As he heads east to head one of the larger private, non-profit institutions, he has concerns for many problems but confidence, he says, that something can be done.

He is concerned, he said, that while poverty has been greatly reduced 40 percent of black youngsters still are jobless. It is a wonder, he says, that with such energy idled there has not more more violence.

And then, "everyone is worried about the slump in productivity," he said, observing that Americans might have difficulties lowering expectations of more material comfort if the problem isn't solved.

He doesn't despair, but his optimism seemed tested when he spoke of his No. 1 public worry, the ability of man to destroy himself.

Unless reason prevails in international relations, Lyman fears terrorists will get access to atmoic weapons. "Can you imagine entire communities being held hostage?" he asked.

The United States, he said, has lost its sense of perspective in recent matters. The goals of Salt II are more important than recent events in Afghanistan, he said.

He shook his head. "We have to keep our eye on the ball," he said. The president had a chance to show statesmanship, he said. "He dropped the ball."

To the editor:

We live in a society that has forgotten THE GOLDEN RULE. The Scriptures tell us that we should do unto others as we would have them do unto us, and that we should love our neighbor as ourselves.

I believe many of us have failed to live up to these standards. Can we say Douglas Ross, a former Greenville policeman, has been treated decently? He was accused of participating in a crime relating to drugs, of which he was recently found not guilty. I was overjoyed when I heard the verdict, but was astounded when I read in this paper that Mr. Ross would not be reinstated in the Greenville Police Department.

I do not believe Douglas Ross is guilty of negligence in performing his duties. I believe the negligent person is the Chief of the Greenville Police Department. There are many of us guilty at this very moment of MURDER. That's right, murder, because, through the news media and gossip, we have assassinated the character of Douglas Ross. I don't believe there is a person in Pitt County who would like to go through the humiliation, isolation and intimidation that he and his family have been through this past year.

Psalm 44:21 says that God knoweth the secrets of the heart. That's my heart, your heart and the chief's heart, and one day every one of us will give an account of ourselves to God. Matthew 12:26 says that we will give an account even for every idle word that we have spoken.

Regardless of what is done, Douglas Ross will carry scars for the rest of his life — scars that were inflicted by you and me, who call ourselves Christians and friends. We have showed our loyalty by deserting him when he needed us most.

People of Greenville, city manager, chief of police, I ask you to follow the guidelines for living that God gives us in the Bible and put Douglas Ross back where he belongs, on the Greenville Police Department.

To the editor:

It was with dismay that I read not one, but two, accounts of the fate of the "Bloxton" house on the campus of East Carolina University. Such a paucity of news in a small Southern college town in mid-June that a minor matter of significance only to those involved should land on the front page of a respectable newspaper. Then Thursday, a letter from someone who graduated 30 years ago equating the East Carolina University Board of Trustees with the Ayatollah Khomeini!

Universities, like all public institutions, must continually change, grow and remain responsive to their many missions. That such change seems unusual to those outside this University testifies to its long overdue need in many areas. Those inside the University applaud changes and laud our hard-working chancellor for making it possible, for this is a time of critical need which requires constant intellectual renewal.

Rather working to tear down what presidents Messick and Jenkins have built (through the faculty, lest anyone forget), detracors would better serve this fine public university by supporting it as it strives to rise from local prominence to achieve the excellence necessary for regional, national and international recognition.

It's amazing what a few night's and a weekend's hard work can do, however. Gradually the boxes disappeared. Nothing was thrown away, mind you, but the boxes went into closets, storage shed and that old standby, the attic.

Now the new surroundings are quite homelike, I'm a veteran mover, and, like everyone, I swear it will be a long time before I do it again.

Turns out unpacking the boxes is the easy part. The work starts when you hang drapes in a new home.

Your columnist took on the job of putting up a seven-foot rod for a patio door drape. After an hour or so of hammering and tightening screws I stood back and admired my work. Looked pretty good to me.

Alas, my sister-in-law, Jean Taylor, came by and informed me the rod was too low. Only one thing to do . . . remove it and re-attach itto the wall an inch-and-a-half higher. Makes one wonder if windows are really necessary in a home.

disappear the moment Brock was axed.

Simultaneously, Gerald R. Ford, about to undergo knee surgery, told a friend he would consider it "a personal affront" if his endorsement of Reagan were followed by Brock's purge. Party liberals and moderates, never before known as Brockaphiles but looking for an excuse to desert Reagan, declared solemnly this would alienate them, irrevocably. Early Reagan backers in Congress (Rep. Jack Kemp, Rep. Tom Evans and Sen. Orrin Hatch) pleaded for Brock.

Yet all such advice seemed futile in the face of a contrary position by Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, the Reagan campaign's national chairman in 1980 as in 1976 and a man much beloved by Ron and Nancy Reagan. Backed by such stalwarts as Meese and Lyn Nofziger, Laxalt seemed certainty derived from Reagan's presumed manipulability.

Ideology was not the issue in the Brock affair. But while ideological strife is declining in the Grand Old Party, factions formerly based on ideology endure. Reagan's choice, in spurning Laxalt's advice, was strictly a political one. Although Brock's foes were interested in avenging old grievances and achieving new party control, Reagan followed a different agenda: to get elected.

This has been the pattern for two years during which Reagan fired trusted aides at the insistence of campaign manager John Sears, who branded them liabilities, and then fired Sears when he himself became a liability. Once Reagan perceived the furor inside the Republican Party that would be set off by Brock's purge, he did not hesitate in keeping him.

This clashes with the myth, held by friend and foe, of a Reagan no better than the men who advise him. If few critics would agree publicly that Reagan is, as one respected reporter recently wrote, "an ignoramus," many would agree in private. The benign side of the indictment is the assumption by many pro-Reagan economists that he would dilute and downgrade his 30 percent, three-year tax cut once they intervened — and their disappointment that he has not done so.

In sticking to conservative-populist economic views that helped get him nominated and in retaining Brock, Reagan showed that the problem is not him but his advisers. While he staved of f disaster in the Brock affair, it enlarged the doubts about the campaign's readiness for Jimmy Carter.

Justice Stacy A Perfect Judge To Sam Ervin

By NOEL YANCEY

To Sam Ervin Jr., his friend and co-worker, Chief Justice Walter P. Stacy was "a perfect judge."

"He had the capacity to approach every cause with what Edmund Burke called the cold neutrality of the impartial judge. He could give both Saint Paul and the Devil what they deserved under the law," said Ervin who knew Stacy when both were justices of the state Supreme Court.

Ervin, who went on to become a U.S. Senator and to win nationwide acclaim as chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee, said in a recent telephone interview that although Stacy appeared austere and stern outwardly, "he was as soft-hearted as any man I've ever known" and "he had a great sense of humor."

Stacy had become a Superior Court judge at 32, an associate justice of the Supreme Court at 36, and when Gov. Angus W. McLean appointed him chief justice in 1925, he was, at 41, the youngest man ever to fill that post. He presided over the court for 26 years, the longest span in the history of the court.

After Stacy died in 1951, W.A. Devin, who succeeded Stacy as chief justice, said history would record him as the state's greatest chief justice. Other observers have the same opinion.

Ervin described Stacy as "the greatest American jurist" of his time. Four presidents — Coolidge, Hoover, Roosevelt and Truman — called on him to help settle labor disputes. North Carolina leaders endorsed him for appointment to the U.S. Supreme Court whenever a vacancy occurred.

One reason why Stacy never got that U.S. Supreme Court appointment was that when it came to interpreting the constitution he was a strict constructionist at a time when presidents such as Roosevelt and Truman were looking for more free-wheeling interpretation of the constitution.

"I don't think Stacy was a judicial activist," said Ervin. He was faithful to his oath to support the constitution. He was a faithful interpreter of the law and did not undertake to give play to his personal whims and caprices."

Stacy not only knew the law and applied it with "the cold neutrality of the impartial judge," he was a great writer. Some of his opinions in the State's dry and dusty lawbooks are literary gems.

An opinion he wrote in 1922 in the case of Ves Wingler, who had been convicted in Wilkes County of murder in the death of his first wife 27 years before, is frequently quoted.

"Though justice sometimes treads with leaden feet, if need be she strikes with an iron hand," Stacy wrote.

"There is no error appearing on the record, except the great error of the defendant in murdering his wife; but this is a mistake which is beyond our province or power to correct," he concluded.

On one occasion, the General Assembly was toying with the idea of giving itself a pay raise only a short while after voters of the state had rejected a constitutional amendment which would have boosted the lawmakers' salaries. They decided to ask the state Supreme Court for an advisory opinion. The court said no.

"The voice of the people is the voice of finality," wrote Stacy as he gave the state a phrase that has become a legal byeword.

As the Supreme Court's presiding officer, Stacy often was a tutor or taskmaster for the many attorneys who appeared to argue their cases.

Voices Of Tradition In A Changing N.C. Region

By GAIL MICHAELS

MEAT CAMP, N.C. — Mary Jane Putzel walks in two worlds.

One is the traditional world of a deep-rooted mountain family — eight generations in rural North Carolina, an early marriage and years of struggling for self-sufficiency. The other is that of a graduate student at a nearby university and an advocate of women's freedoms and choices.

For Mary Jane, this curious blend of old and new is the result of a sometimes painful process of growth. Her story is one of change — and resistance to change.

"My family was real, real traditional," she said in a recent afternoon of reminiscing. "The women did the traditional things that women do, having babies, staying home, canning, putting out a garden. They were real strong, mind you, I guess they had to be. But traditional."

Mary Jane left high school to get married when she was 16. Now 33, she says, "It looked like a good set-up, and in a way I guess it was. My husband was good. He didn't drink; he didn't run around with women. But he didn't allow me any freedom. That was the way he had seen women — the way his mother had been. He didn't want me to drive a car, use birth control, work anywhere or go back to finish high school."

Mary Jane had four children by the time she was 22.

"After about eight years, I just decided I didn't want to live that way. It wasn't that we didn't love each other. But I just had to grow and the growth threatened him."

After she left her husband — "it was the scariest thing that I had ever done" — Mary Jane got her high-school equivalency certificate, then started taking classes part-time at Caldwell Community College in Lenoir. She also worked — as a telephone operator, at night in a furniture factory.

After two years at the community college and a year off for a full-time job, Mary Jane transferred to Appalachian State University in Boone. She's working now on a master's degree in Applachian studies — with a minor in anthropology.

Mary Jane is the first woman in her family to go beyond high school. Yet, she remains close to her family, and she's fighting and struggling within herself to keep some of those traditional mountain values.

"First of all, I'm a mountain woman. But the change has come in that I can do all that — the traditional things — but I can come out and go to school too, and make good grades. I can do the intellectual things that a lot of women in my family could have been capable of doing had they had the chance.

"I'm determined, real determined. I was brought up to think that if you've got a job to do, you do it; and the job that I picked out to do was go to school."

Ahead for Mary Jane lies a master's thesis — again a merger of her two worlds. She plans to get a job at a nearby textile plant. Side by side with the women workers there, she hopes to find out why they are working, how they feel about their jobs, how their entry into the economic realm is affecting life at home, and other problems that they might be having.

"I'll probably tell them what I'm doing. But first I want them to know me as a person they can relate to rather than as a student. I want them to know I have four young-uns at home just like some of them."

And after she graduates? "It would be ideal if I could teach in a place like the Center (for Appalachian Studies at the University). Or do research on the mountains. Or maybe implement some type of Appalachian studies program in the high schools and even the elementary school around here. "But my main goal in life — and this may sound funny for somebody who's tried so hard to get through school — is not to be some great professional somebody. But to let my children be able to walk between the traditional world that I grew up in and this world that I'm moving up into.

"I want them to have the best of both worlds. I want them to have a choice."

Magazine Industry Can Offer 10 Easy Lessons

By GAIL MICHAELS

No matter what you want to learn, the magazine industry can teach you in 10 easy steps. I personally have broadened my horizons to include creative hedge-trimming, minor motorcycle repair, and do-it-yourself divorce.

After years of formal education, having such practical knowledge under my belt has given me great comfort. But I've recently become disenchanted with such articles. In those few I've actually tried to put to use, something crucial is always missing.

The biggest disappointment was an article on how to increase your energy level. I didn't read this one for entertainment; I was desperate. Meg was out of school. I had a new baby who refused to understand that his mother was not an automatic milk dispenser. And I had a pile of laundry that would have challenged Sir Edmund Hillary.

The big question was when after responding to these other demands on my time was I going to find the energy to write.

I certainly didn't find the answer in the article on energy. In fact, I stumbled at the very first step. It read: Make time to exercise.

Even discounting my natural aversion to physical fitness, the only free time in my day was from 2 a.m. to 4 a.m., and I had this vague notion that I might sleep then.

But I was determined. The minute I saw a magazine sporting an article entitled, "An Exercise Routine for the Busy Mother," I pounced on it. The first sentence read: Find an hour a day when your kids don't need you.

This was like telling a pauper that he can make money by investing in the stock market. Still, the article did include some helpful hints on how to make provision for the children.

The first was to shut the door and tell them to leave you alone. I just did not think Zachary would go for this.

The second was to hire help. That sounded like a wonderful idea to me, but who was going to pay for it? The only help I could hire that wouldn't make more than I would be an ant farm to clean my kitchen counter.

I didn't have to wait long for a solution to this problem. The next magazine I saw included an article on what to do when you need help and can't afford it. The first suggestion was: Get a job.

Somehow I get the feeling that I'm being led in circles. But I'm still searching for the how-to article that will solve my current dilemma.

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

By Any Yardstick, An Indefensible Situation

WASHINGTON — As every working editor knows, "crisis" is one of those garlic words, to be used with great restraint. Deliberately and soberly, let me invoke it now: Our armed forces, on whom the very survival of this nation depends, are caught in a crisis. Congress must not fail to resolve it.

The problem can be summed up in two words that are locked together — manpower and money. The armed services are losing their most valuable people for one reason that towers above all others: Thousands of soldiers, sailors and airmen cannot afford to stay in. They are quitting at a rate that cannot be termed a drain or a slippage, but amounts to a hemorrhage.

By any yardstick that might be applied, the situation is indefensible.

What do we ask of a sailor or soldier? Only this: That he serve for a fixed term of two or three years, during which time he cannot resign, take another full-time job,join a union, go on strike or picket in support of on-the-job complaints. Only that he be separated from his family for months on end. Only that he be on call far beyond the 40-hour work week of civilian life. Only that he accept the responsibility for maintaining billion-dollar ships and weapons systems. Only that, finally, he may give up his life for his country.

And what is his compensation? The entering recruit would be financially better off if he went to work slinging hash in a fast-food drive-in. The experienced petty officer in the Navy would be better off if he abandoned his career and took his skills into the private sector. The Air Force captain, whose training represents a $4-million investment, can command half again as much income by flying freight for a commercial airline.

Some specific recent examples: After eight years in the Navy, an electronics technician earns $12,117. His skills are absolutely vital to the maintenance of a modern-day warship. His counterpart in civilian life, working 9 to 5, looking after his family, earns $16,515. A boiler technician may earn $11,730 as a petty officer in the Navy; in private industry his skills command almost twice as much. A sailor trained to operate a nuclear reactor earned $7,800 last year; a former shipmate, working for a California nuclear power plant, drew wages of $22,500.

Other reasons, of course, contribute to the appalling rates of attrition after first or second terms. Especially in the Navy, men often must be separated from their families for long tours of duty at sea. Officers and non-coms weary of teaching ill-educated recruits who can read at barely a fifth-grade level. Under today's circumstances, it is fearfully difficult to maintain the old esprit de corps that once bound men together in a fraternity of arms.

But the primary cause for this crisis remains: Money. It is ludicrous — it is grossly unjust — to pay service personnel so miserably that several hundred thousand service families must resort to food stamps and to moonlight jobs. The disparities in income and fringe benefits are not confined to comparisons of public and private employment: A staff sergeant, ordered to move his family 2,800 miles to a new assignment, gets a $950 reimbursement; a GS-9 in the Department of Agriculture, making the identical move, qualifies for reimbursement up to $12,300.

This week the Senate Veterans Committee will hold hearings on a bill sponsored by Sen. Bill Armstrong of Colorado to restore one incentive that used to mean much: G.I. educational benefits. Armstrong also is fighting for a truly significant increase in base pay across the board. Other senators recognize the desperate need. Sam Nunn of Georgia and John Warner of Virginia have co-sponsored a bill to make selective increases in the compensation of men with particular skills. Every one of these measures should be passed.

Yes, the bills would cost several billion dollars over the next few years. It is money we cannot afford not to spend. All the marvelous new weapons systems, all the missiles and new ships and high-powered tanks will avail us nothing without the manpower to maintain them. So long as we adhere to the policy of an all-volunteer service, nothing will attract and hold desirable personnel but adequate pay and benefits. If Congress fails to meet this reasonable demand, but one recourse will remain: The draft.

Note to Editors: In considerable anguish, Mr. Kilpatrick has asked us to explain that it was not he who blundered in his column of June 5. In that column Mr. Kilpatrick referred to Melville Fuller simply as a turn-of-the century chief justice. In what may mildly be termed as excess of helpfulness, one of our editors added "of the Supreme Court." The correct title, as Mr. Kilpatrick of all people knows full well, is chief justice of the United States. We regret the error.

coconut,'' he would admonish slow-moving attorneys.

''Let's get to exception No. 40,'' Stacy pleaded.

''I'm coming to that, your honor,'' replied the lawyer.

''I'm already there,'' said the chief justice.

Stacy a lifelong Democrat, did not hesitate to rebuke a Democratic Superior Court judge he felt had allowed politics color his handling of a suit by a Republican candidate. Stacy said the judge should have removed himself and permitted another judge to hear the case.

''A fair jury in jury cases and an impartial judge in all cases are prime requisites of due process . . .,'' he wrote. ''It is important that the judgements of the court should be respected. To insure this, however, the court must first make sure that they merit respect . . .''

Once in a case dealing with questionable administration of a trust fund, Stacy was not impressed by the defense contention that the action was not properly presented. He ruled that the case should be given full hearing and the plaintiffs allowed to ''pursue the hunt so long as they can track the fox.''

In manner, Stacy was polite, dignified and retiring to the point of shyness. A close friend described him as ''absolutely fearless — yet socially one of the shyest men I have ever known.''

In 1929, Stacy married Maude DeGan Craft of Lake Placid Club, N.Y. However, she died a few years later, and he withdrew further into his shell of shyness. During court recesses when other members of the court were vacationing, he could be found working at his desk. To many Raleigh residents, he was a dignified legend of a man who walked briskly alone with a cane.

But Adrian Newton, who served as court clerk 10 years under Stacy, said the shyness disappeared when you got to know him well, and Ervin said, ''he had a great sense of humor, although he appeared very austere in court.''

Ervin told of the time Marshall Bell, a Murphy attorney, was searching the title of some property owned by a church and found to his consternation that instead of the deed being made to the church it ''was made to God Almighty.'' On meeting Stacy on a street in Raleigh, Bell told the chief justice the deed presented a problem he did not know how to handle.

''Brother Bell,'' replied Stacy, ''you have a very simple remedy under the law. You can bring suit and file an affidavit saying that God Almighty cannot be found in Cherokee County. Then you can serve him by publication.'' Stacy was referring to the common practice of publishing a summons in a newspaper when a defendant cannot be located.

In another case, Ervin recalled that Stacy was writing about a dispute over whether it was proper to cross-examine a witness about his religion — or lack of religion.

''For some reason too deep to fathom, men quarrel more furiously over the road to heaven which they cannot see than over their visible walks on earth, and it would be unbelievable if history did not record the tragic fact that men have gone to war and cut each other's throats because they could not agree as to what was to happen to them after their throats were cut,'' Stacy wrote.

''He was a marvelous person,'' Ervin said of his old friend.

there, an Italian family at an enormous table nearby was celebrating a little girl's First Communion with double lanes of long pizza-laden tables that resembled the Autostrada stretching back to Naples. The restaurant itself was huge, bigger than anything I had seen in Rome or Milan or New York's Little Italy, a coliseum for gourmets in the backyard of Lucullus, that fabled Roman trencherman.

Pizza in these storied surroundings tastes more delicious by a mile (1600 meters) than anywhere else in my experience, because the ingredients and the preparation are truly different.

The oil, from olives on the surrounding slopes, is the purest in Italy. The mozzarella cheese, made from water buffalo milk — la bufala is the cheese trademark of the region — is soft and mild and chewy, not stringly and rubbery like our American substitutes. The tomatoes, the artichokes, the sizzling red peppers — whatever you chose for a filling — are all picked within a donkey cart distance of the kitchen.

The oven, large, glowing red and licking with flames, is a huge brick affair fueled with burning branches of olive wood and tended by burly perspiring chefs who in the firelight suggest stokers in the hold of an ocean liner except that their beet-red faces are powdered with flour instead of coal dust. Wielding massive wooden shovels, they frequently burst into song — a Neapolitan love song, of course — when extricating another steaming coronet of garlic-bejeweled grandeur from the heavenly inferno.

Pizza by the meter requires a liter of Lacrima Christi (literally, ''a tear of Christ''), the robust red wine grapes grown on the southern slopes of Vesuvius.

Aficionados, or the Italian equivalent, of this noblest of all Roman dishes may be shocked to learn that the pizza did not even originate in Italy. According to research done a number of years ago by the Italian-American Historical Society, the pizza's true ancestor is the Jewish matzoh. Roman legionnaires stationed in Palestine in the first century B.C. grew tired of their daily ration of the local unleavened bread and decided to jazz (from the Latin: jazzo, jazzare, jacuzzi) it up with a cab of olive oil and some melted cheese.

When they brought the new concoction home, it caught on fast. From the evidence of the ruins, we know Pompeii had 44 pizza ovens when Vesuvius blew her top on Aug. 24 in 79 A.D.

There is no truth, however, to the recurring rumor that The Discobolus — the discus thrower — is actually an irate customer sending a burnt pizza back to the kitchen.

But Roman epicures were reclining around the pizza plate 1,000 years before globe-galloping gourmet Marco Polo put some Chinese noodles in a pot and called it macaroni. Pasta was a parvenu beside the pizza on history's platter.

Strangely, tourists were slow to tumble to its circinate charms.

Augustus Hare, that stuffy but very observant British travel writer famous for his ''Walks in Rome,'' first encountered the pizza in Naples in 1882 and stood aghast, as if finding a chili dog at Royal Ascot. ''The horrible condiment called Pizza (made of dough baked with garlic, rancid bacon and strong cheese) is esteemed as a feast here,'' he wrote before hurrying onto the boat for Capri and civilization.

Depression America made the pizza an international favorite when tavern owners discovered they could sell a pie for 25 cents, make 90 per cent profit and still outdraw the free lunch counter across the street.

Bliss it must have been to be alive in those well-rounded days.

Waiter! Signor! Roll out another meter will you, old boy.

An Artificial Cork Coming

NEW YORK (AP) — The wine's bouquet may be just as good but ''the cork'' will be artificial.

According to the editor of Food & Drug Packaging, a trade magazine, by the end of next year many imported table wines will come with artificial corks made of expanded polystyrene. Such cork is already gaining popularity in France, said Ben Miyares.

''The artificial cork feels like real cork and will function like natural cork, so that most people will be unable to tell the difference. Natural cork has become expensive and hard to get, prompting the change,'' Miyares said.

WHEN NIBBLE IS HALF A BYTE

BOSTON (AP) — ''Bus,'' ''ram'' and ''nibble'' have special meanings in the computer industry.

For example, a ''bus'' is a group of circuits that carries information from one location to another. ''Ram'' is shorthand for Random Access Memory, a type of information storage. And ''nibble,'' as might be expected, is half a ''byte,'' a basic unit of information, says American Computer Appraisal here.

'Parenthood Game' Helps

ATLANTA (AP) — A player lands his token on a square and draws an instruction card. But instead of going directly to jail or collecting unearned cash, this game's player must decide what formula to buy and how to meet a baby's other needs on a meager budget.

The game was designed to help counselors and doctors make sexually active teenagers understand the implications of their sexual involvement.

Called ''Transformer,'' the game touches on aspects of caring for a 4-month-old baby over a 24-hour period, including feeding, diaper changing and bathing.

As in the popular game Monopoly, a player's progress can be aided or hindered by his luck drawing instruction cards. The game allows the ''parent'' chances for work, education and social activity, but only if a baby sitter can be found and the child's other needs are met first.

''Transformer'' was demonstrated Saturday to a group of health care professionals and social workers at a seminar sponsored by the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

''Adolescents have difficulty understanding things in the abstract,'' said Dr. Ezra Davidson, a Los Angeles gynecologist who is chairman of the ACOG's task force on adolescent pregnancy.

''They don't look at things today in terms of the effect on them in six or nine months.''

Davidson said the game ''forces them to play a game they otherwise would not play.'' Once the role is played, he said, the youngster is more likely to appreciate the possible consequences of his sexual behavior.

Charles Galbraith, a creator of educational games for the medical field, said he has been developing ''Transformer'' — named for its effect on a young parent's life — for about one year.

He said the game allows players to ''compare the freedom of the teen lifestyle with the responsibilities of parenthood.''

VEPCO Board

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Virginia Electric & Power Co., saying it wants to find out what irritates the public it serves, has named 12 of its customers in Tidewater to a consumer advisory board.

From the Tidewater district, which has 396,000 electric and natural gas customers in South Hampton Roads and the Peninsula, Harrison Hubard, vice president for Vepco's eastern division, selected the experimental board in May. The utility made the appointments public Friday.

"If we see the board is able to assist us in making decisions that affect our customers, we'll consider it successful," Hubard said.

The company earlier named 11 persons to an identical board for its southern division in eastern North Carolina, where public officials have threatened to disenfranchise Vepco in favor of utilities based in that state.

Vepco spokesman August Wallmeyer said the utility plans eventually to establish advisory boards in the rest of its service area.

Vepco will judge the performance of the two boards for a year and then decide whether to continue and expand them into its three other divisions.

It is the first time Vepco has tried such a board although other electric utilities already have such groups.

Hubard said the groups would be neither a funnel for intsmouth insurance executive P.no doors closed to us."

Clay Kirkman Says...

Often people complain that they can't have any houseplants because their homes do not receive enough light. It is true that many plants will not do well in low light areas, but there are a number of plants that will do quite well indoors where no other plants would live.

Chinese Evergreen is an excellent choice for a low light area. Their beautiful foliage will brighten any home or office. They need to be watered regularly, at least once a week. Waterings should be thorough enough for the water to come out the bottom of the container. They prefer warm days and cool nights and will do well in an air conditioned area.

Spathiphyllum, or Peace Lily, is another good choice for a low light situation. This plant also needs a good watering once a week. It has a white flower which appears intermittantly during the year and the blooms usually last about a month.

Sansevieria, or Snake Plant, is a plant that is almost impossible to kill. It will tolerate a wide range of climatic conditions. Water the plant well, but allow it to dry out in between the waterings.

Fittonia is another plant well suited to low light areas. It looks great in a hanging basket or terrarium. Keep the soil moist and fertilize them monthly with the fertilizer at half strength.

Most Philodendrons will also tolerate low light. There are many different varieties of these to choose from. One of the more popular ones is the Philodendron Selloum. Heart leaf is another good variety, too.

These are a few of the plants better suited for low light areas and Belk Tyler Garden Shops now have a special section of low light plants for your home.

Bid Rigging Charges Shock The Southeast

By The Associated Press

Shock waves are rolling through statehouses from Richmond, Va., to Montgomery, Ala., this summer as federal grand juries throughout the southeastern U.S. probe corruption in the highway building industry.

The grand juries are checking allegations that contractors rigged bids and conspired to limit competition. Investigators think such conspiracies may have cost taxpayers millions of dollars.

In Tennessee alone, a federal prosecutor has said contractors cost the taxpayers $30 million per year by conspiring to limit competition.

Grand juries are now sitting in Tennessee, North Carolina and Georgia, as well as Virginia. A state investigation is also underway in North Carolina.

Highway construction is one target. Another is the construction of major airports, such as Hartsfield International in Atlanta, Douglas in Charlotte and Byrd in Richmond.

Sources in Alabama and West Virginia say federal grand juries empaneled in those states may soon begin investigating highway corruption. And Kentucky is said to be another possible target, according to sources close to the Tennessee prosecution.

More than 100 indictments are expected in Tennessee alone, where 25 contracting firms and executives already have pleaded guilty to violating federal antitrust statutes.

The Tennessee highway department has disqualified contractors convicted of bid-rigging. But state officials are now afraid that the prosecutions will be a two-edged sword, cutting the state as well as the contractors.

Some Tennessee officials think competition might be severely curtailed if all the convicted contractors are indefinitely barred from doing business with the state. And with limited competition, construction costs would likely rise.

So the Tennessee attorney general's office has begun requalifying convicted contractors for state work. Sanctions against contractors are dropped as they make financial settlements with the Tennessee highway department.

Without the requalification procedures, "we might be cutting off our nose to spite our face," one Tennessee official said.

In North Carolina, all awards of highway paving contracts have temporarily been frozen. The delay will continue until the state learns which firms are being probed by a federal grand jury in Charlotte.

In Virginia, four firms have been disqualified after they were indicted by grand juries in other states.

Virginia Highway Commissioner Harold C. King barred Rea Construction of Charlotte, N.C., from holding state highway contracts. Rea officials in North Carolina pleaded guilty to charges of rigging bids on the Charlotte airport.

Three Tennessee firms also have been barred from doing business with Virginia's highway department. Officials of the three firms — M.C. West, Inter-State Paving, and Tillett Brothers Construction — pleaded guilty in Nashville to bid-rigging charges.

The sudden appearance of grand juries on the Southern scene has never been explained by the U.S. Justice Department. Prosecutors throughout the South have routinely refused to talk to reporters or discuss the cases outside closed courtroom chambers.

Tennessee Department of Transportation spokeswoman Renee Pickett said the grand jury in her state may have stemmed from an investigation of Illinois road paving.

Executed For Rape

By RAYMOND WILKINSON

PEKING (UPI) — Three youths who lured nearly 100 women into an apartment on promises of helping them find jobs and then raped them were executed by firing squad in a government crackdown against crime and corruption in high places, the Quignian Bao (Youth Newspaper) reported Saturday.

The executions, carried out within minutes of sentencing in China's northern Jilin Province, were the latest in a series reported from around the country under China's new get-tough policy.

The policy is aimed especially against corruption in high places and against children of senior officials who used their positions to commit crimes and, according to one Peking newspaper, even leak secrets to the public they previously had learned from their parents.

The Quignian Bao said the three youths — members of a "gang of seven" — were executed earlier in the week after being convicted of rape and other sexual crimes against a total of 92 women. One of the youths was identified as Li Heng, the son of a leading local municipal Communist Party member.

A fourth gang member was sentenced to death but reprieved for two years when the sentence will be reviewed while three others received prison sentences ranging from five years to life imprisonment.

The newspaper said the gang, under the pretext of helping girls find work, lured the women into a flat in the province capital of Changchun and then assaulted them, often violently, over a period of several years. The victims were aged between 15 and 27.

China implemented a new penal code in January, one of its key passages being "equality before the law."

Receiving the award were: 1st. Sgt. Bruce Baker, Sgt. 1.C. George Pleasant, S. Sgt. John Best, S. Sgt. Donnie Haley, Sgt. Milton Haddock, Sgt. Calvin Smith, Sgt. Lesley Spaulding, Sgt. Linwood Stocks, and Spec. 4 Thomas Nevelle.

Small Shrimp

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Small shrimp have been causing a big problem for North Carolina shrimpers.

"They're so small you can see through them," said Bruce Fowler. "People don't want to buy them that small....Some of us tried agreeing not to shrimp for a while, but when everyone else is out there, it doesn't do any good."

But to the shrimpers' dismay, the state is refusing to close coastal waters to fishing for a week or more to allow the shrimp to grow.

"I think we know more about what's good for us than some fellow sitting behind a desk who's mostly worried about keeping his job," Fowler said of the refusal.

Connell Purvis, state fisheries director, said he's been flooded with telephone calls from worried shrimpers. But Purvis said he can't close the waters to trawling.

"Shrimp are highly migratory," Purvis said. "From all the research we've done, if we close the season, they'll go to South Carolina or offshore where our shrimpers can't get them."

Local Work Crews Fill Pitt Manpower Needs

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

"We're using local labor to a greater extent than ever before," Frank Gore remarked, referring to the work crews for farm work he has assembled as Manpower Representative for the local Employment Security Office. "The best part about this whole operation is that money paid workers stays here in Pitt County, and in some cases even saves extra dollars as it gets workers off the welfare rolls."

For the 1980 local farm cultivation and harvest season, which has just gotten underway in full swing in the past week or so, Gore has a steady supply of about 100 workers in four work groups.

"The majority of the work force is made up of young people, from about 14 up to the mid 20's. There's also one or two in their 50's." He noted that the force consists of male and female, black and white.

For younger workers, parents have to sign papers permitting a child to work and certifying that the child has no health problem.

In previous years, Gore commented, "we had to bring in crews from Beaufort County to fill the demands of local farmers for labor. This year, we are sending a crew there to do some work."

The public, Gore explained, generally thinks of farm labor in the term of migrant workers coming in for seasonal cultivation and harvest. "In Pitt County, there's now very few of the migrant type workers being utilized. There's one crew of Mexican laborers, three families with ten adults and three children working on a farm near Black Jack. Then we have ten black workers who will soon be coming in from Mississippi. This group of ten are return workers who have been contracted by a farmer pleased with their work last year."

According to Gore, strict tab is kept on the legal status of any migrant persons coming into the area. "We verify their papers to make sure everything is legal," he said.

At this time most of the laborers are engaged in harvesting the cucumber crop. "There's a number of farmers who will not plant cucumbers unless we can assure them we'll have a work force available to help in the harvest," Gore said.

"And of course some work at the packing sheds as well as in the fields. Also," Gore added, "a few laborers are used at this time of year to do some hoeing. Later they'll work in all phases of the wheat harvest, then in topping and suckering tobacco before going into the tobacco harvest season."

After that, Gore said, "there'll be a demand for workers at grain buying stations and for harvesting the fall cucumber crop. Generally, the demand for farm labor locally continues until about October."

One of the prime benefits in employing local workers is the Targeted Job Tax Credit arrangement. "This applies to farmers who hire workers between the ages of 18 and 24 from low income families," Gore explained. "For farmers who use local workers in this bracket, they get a 50 percent tax deduction. The maximum deduction is $3,000 for anyone who employs a person long enough to pay that person a salary of $6,000." For the second year, the employer gets a 25 percent tax deduction.

This law came into effect in September 1978, and Gore said some farmers were making use of the benefits allowed under the law. One thing farmers like is that the Employment Security Commission takes care of the paperwork involved.

Minimum agricultural wages are paid all farm workers assigned to the work crews. In some cases, wages are determined by a percentage method — for example, a worker receives a certain percent of the sale price of produce which he or she harvests for the farmer.

Work crews are signed up through two basic methods — those coming into the Employment Security Commission office to register, and through the assistance of the Pitt County Dept. of Social Services, which identifies persons needing work that the Commission can contact.

Gore admitted that his is a long schedule at this time of year — from 6 in the morning until about 7:30 at night. "When you're working with harvesting, you can't follow regular office hours," he said. "We're on the road early picking up these people to take them to the farm where they will be working. It's rewarding to see how enthusiastic most of these young people are about the chance to make a little money on their own. They won't get rich, but it's a way they can have their own money and learn to earn it by hard work."

James Hannan, manager of the Greenville office of the Employment Security Commission says "the work crews that Frank Gore have assembled are in my opinion, the finest in all of North Carolina."

TALKING TO A CREW CHIEF . . . Employment Security Commission Manpower Representative Frank Gore, right, talks to group leader Ron Pate. Pate, a business major at ECU, is one of four group leaders in charge of work crews. The two are shown on the M. H. Craft farm near Winterville, with young workers in the background harvesting cucumbers, both by hand and by machine.

Rizvi Told He Must Leave Iran

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Iranian government advised UPI correspondent Sajid Rizvi Saturday that his visa, which expired June 17, would not be renewed and he must leave the country.

Two officials of the Iranian Foreign Ministry said the decision had been taken by the Revolutionary Council in line with a government policy announced last April that the visas of journalists working for American news organizations would not be renewed as they expired.

The officials said Rizvi also had been accused of "biased reporting," but they gave no specific examples of inaccuracies.

Rizvi, who was ordered to cease filing stories Thursday, asked to be allowed to remain in Tehran for a month to clear up bureau affairs.

Rizvi is a Pakistani national who recently won the 1980 Overseas Press Club first prize for International Reporting for his dispatches from Iran. He has been expelled twice before.

On Nov. 10, 1978, he was ordered out by Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's regime, but was permitted to return a week later.

Rizvi left again last Feb. 18 when all correspondents for the American media were expelled by the Islamic regime that overthrew the shah. He returned early April.

Rizvi's departure will leave the Washington Post, the Los Angeles Times and the Christian Science Monitor as the only American news organizations with direct representation in Tehran.

The British news agency, Reuters, and the Italian and French national news agencies also are still operating. The Canadian Press agency is functioning with an Iranian correspondent.

Two British reporters, working for the Daily Mail and the Guardian were recently arrested and deported and an American freelance writer, Cynthia Dwyer, of Buffalo, N.Y., was arrested last May 5 and accused of being a CIA agent.

At last report she was being held in Tehran's Evin prison.

Black Workers' Strike Spread In South Africa

By NAT GIBSON

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Strikes by black workers spread to 16 factories in the Port Elizabeth industrial area Saturday, crippling South Africa's automobile industry on the sixth day of the worst racial strife since 1976.

In Cape Town, arsonists caused heavy damage to a school and a nearby electric sub-station in Elsies River, the mixed-race township where the worst of the week's riots occurred.

Business sources said more than 10,000 workers were involved in the walkouts at Port Elizabeth and her sister town of Uitenhage — about 3,000 more than on Friday.

Riot police supported by armored cars guarded the big foreign-owned car plants in Uitenhage — Ford, General Motors and Volkswagen among them — during the night, but residents said the forces were withdrawn at dawn.

At the same time, police lifted a ban against reporters entering the town, but kept neighboring black townships off-limits to jounalists.

Reporters were ordered out of Uitenhage Friday after police used shotgun blasts and teargas to disperse a crowd of black workers marching to demand salaries equal to those earned by minority whites.

At present black automotive factory workers earn 1.53 per hour. Whites working the same jobs get between 2.60 and 3.90 per hour.

Since rioting broke out in the Cape region at the begining of the week, police said 32 demonstrators have been killed and 175 wounded. However, newspaper surveys of the casualties reported by hospitals indicated that the true figure was twice the official one.

The unrest erupted in connection with the fourth anniversary of the Soweto riots that left more than 600 blacks dead.

Most of the rioting centered on the mixed-race townships bordering Cape Town, but other incidents were reported in black areas in Bloemfontein.

Although Port Elizabeth was reported calm over the weekend, resident said they feared more trouble on Monday, when automobile manufacturers have threatened to lay off workers who refuse to end the strike.

SOUVENIRS FROM GREENVILLE — Greenville's two young Community Ambassadors on Friday received souvenirs from Greenville to take with them to the mayors of the overseas towns they will visit this summer. Dorothy Wang and Robert Bright, both to live with French families for several weeks, hold the letter openers given them by Mayor Don McGlohon for presentation to French officials. Over 700 Species On The Endangered List

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than 700 types of plants and animals, birds, fish and insects around the world are ensnared in the net of extinction, government officials said Saturday.

In the last year and a half, the endangered species list prepared by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has grown to 705. The Caribbean monk seal is among the latest additions.

Another 68 species are listed as "threatened" — likely to become "endangered" soon unless action is taken to protect them and their habitat, officials said.

The total, up 77 from last year, includes 276 species native to the United States. Paul Opler of the Fish and Wildlife Service's Endangered Species Office said the increase "has more to do with improved research than the continuing, general deterioration of the world's wildlife environment.

"We're simply finding more plants and animals that need to be classified," he said.

Recent additions include the first foreign plants ever listed — the Guatemalan fir and the Chilean false larch, a tree that may live for 3,000 years and grow to be 150 feet tall. The Spanish Conquistadores started the decline of the false larch 400 years ago when they learned of the amazing durability of its wood and exports began.

Other species include the West African manatee, North China Sika deer, the Kern (California) primrose sphinx moth, and the monk seals — none have been recorded since the early 1960s.

Also listed is the totoaba, a huge sea trout that grows to 225 pounds and lives only in the Gulf of California.

According to an old Biological Survey Report, "totobaba thronged the east shore of Lower California and choked the mouth of the Colorado River" in 1905. But they have since been fished almost to extinction.

Feels His Execution Will Help Others

Potts, 35, is to die in the electric chair July 1 for the 1975 murder and kidnapping of a Roswell mechanic, Michael Priest.

"He says that some of the inmates there hadn't had a Coca-Cola in two years, but they had one this week," Carolyn Potts said after a returning from a visit with her son Friday at the Georgia Diagnostic and Classification Center at Jackson.

Potts was moved last week from the Georgia State Prison near Reidsville to the Jackson prison, where about half the prisoners awaiting execution in Georgia are kept.

Potts is to be the first to die in a new execution chamber at Jackson. A total of 415 Georgia prisoners were killed in the electric chair at Reidsville between 1924 and 1964.

Mrs. Potts said she thinks public attention drawn to her son's impending execution has forced improvements in the conditions for condemned prisoners at Jackson.

Potts, who dropped his appeals last fall and fired his attorneys, had been scheduled for execution June 5.

SEARS HIGHWAY TIRE WARRANTY

A. Full Warranty During 25% of Usable Treadlife. Tire Failure: During the first 25% of original usable tread if the tire is properly sized for your car, Sears will, upon return, replace the tire, free of charge, or refund the purchase price, if a failure occurs apparently due to a defect in material or workmanship of the tire.
B. Limited Warranty. Tire Failure: After 25% of the tread is worn, and for the remaining 75% of the original usable tread, if tire is properly sized for your car, Sears will, upon return, replace the tire or give you a refund, charging you only the proportion of the current price that represents the portion of the usable tread used, if a failure occurs apparently due to a defect in material or workmanship of the tire.
C. Limited Warranty. Tire Wearout. For the number of miles of usage specified, if the tire is properly sized for your car, Sears will, upon return, replace the tire or give a refund, charging you only the proportion of the current price that represents miles of usage received compared to the miles specified, if wearout (2/32 or less tread remaining) occurs. This does not apply to wearout caused by failure to use and maintain the tire in accordance with recommendations.

New Book On The Folklore Of North Carolina

RALEIGH — North Carolina's rich heritage of yarns, tales of mystery and the supernatural, and stories of the famous and infamous are brought together in a new book by Richard Walser, "North Carolina Legends."

The book is published by the Historical Publications Section of the Dept. of Cultural Resources. Story titles such as "The Witch Bride," "Bladenboro's Vampire Beast," "The Moon-Eyed People," and "Siren of the French Broad River" offer insight on the way folklore has added color to North Carolina life.

The author is a well-known writer of the North Carolina scene. Drawings illustrating the legends are by Bill Ballard.

"North Carolina Legends" is avaialale at $2.50 per copy at selected bookstores in the state or can be ordered from: Historical Publications Section, Division of Archives and History, Dept. of Cultural Resources, 109 E. Jones Street, Raleigh, N. C., 27611. A $6 hardback edition will be availalbe later in the summer.

"IF I WERE A RICH MAN" — from "Fiddler On The Roof" is the music selection used by local metalsmith Betsy Markowski in this pewter music box. The box is one of 104 works selected from 550 pieces submitted by craftspersons from 11 southeastern states for the Southeast '80 Craft Competition sponsored by LeMoyne Art Foundation in Tallahassee, Florida. The competition was juried by Rose Slivka, editor-in-chief of "Craft Horizon" for 20 years. Ms. Slivka is considered the foremost writer and critic of American crafts.

First For Freedom Opening On Thursday

HALIFAX — "First for Freedom," an outdoor drama based on historical events ofthe 18th century in eastern North Carolina, will open in Halifax on Thursday, June 26. Performances thereafter will be given each Wednesday through Sunday evenings until July 27, with curtain time at 8:30 nightly.

"First for Freedom" tells the story of the first valiant effort to obtain liberty and independence from an intolerant and tyrannical British Empire. Characters in the drama are based on historical figures who lived and worked in the Revolutionary era village of Halifax, and others who were prominent in eastern North Carolina life in the 1770's and 1780's.

In addition to the outdoor drama, visitors to the town can also take an afternoon tour of Historic Halifax, visiting restored buildings. There is no charge for the guided tour. Also, picnic grounds are available for those wishing to take advantage of open air eating on their own — or visitors can dine in a nearby restaurant.

Thomas Jefferson never ran in a primary. Unlike today's field of presidential candidates, Jefferson had to convince only a congressional caucus, or group of party leaders. Caucuses nominated Jefferson in 1800 and later Presidents James Madison, James Monroe, and John Quincy Adams.

Outdoor Drama In Exhibit

KENANSVILLE — "The Liberty Cart," one of North Carolina's outdoor dramas, took part in a special North Carolina Travel Exhibit held recently at Wilson's Parkwood Mall. Vacation and travel attractions from across the state were represented at the three day event.

This year, in cooperation with the Dept. of Commerce's Division of Tourism and Travel, "The Liberty Cart" is promoting the theme — "this summer, don't go away . . . stay in North Carolina."

"The Liberty Cart" at Kenansville is in its fifth season of production at this historic Duplin County town.

A mass raid by U.S. Army Air Force bombers wreaked severe damage on Tokyo Nov. 24, 1944. The first land-based attack on the Japanese capital, the raid was launched from Saipan in the Marianas. Despite the great distance to be covered, each plane carried six tons of bombs.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Robert DeNiro will star next in "Weeds," marking the actor's fifth starring film for Chartoff-Winkler productions.

DeNiro's previous movies for the company were "New York, New York," "The Gang That Couldn't Shoot Straight," "The Raging Bull" and "True Confessions," the latter two currently in post-production.

DeNiro won an Academy Award for best supporting actor for his performance in "The Godfather II" in 1974.

Hunter. The Original Olde Tyme Ceiling Fan.

Air movement, as well as temperature, determine your comfort level. So a room with a Hunter ceiling fan at 78° has the cool comfort of a room at 70°. Set your air conditioner thermostat up 8° and save, because a Hunter runs on the power for one lightbulb. In winter, a Hunter recirculates hot air that rises to the ceiling and cuts heating costs. But all ceiling fans aren't alike. Hunter is the original. Since 1886. Cast iron housing. Permanent oil reservoir. Real wood blades. No short cuts. No cheap substitutes. Choice of models and finishes makes Hunter fit any decor.

Several Business Directories Available At Sheppard Library

By JUNE PARKER
Sheppard Memorial Library

(Note: A series of articles will be appearing in the Book News space on Sundays during the summer months. These will explain the business information and services which are available at Sheppard Memorial Library. The series will consist of descriptions of the general business information sources, investment information, sources of information in management, and the business magazines which are available.)

Today's article, the first in the series, describes the directories that may be used at the library. Standard and Poor's Register of Corporation, Directories, and Executives includes more information about fewer companies than some of the directories. Along with the usual data on address, telephone number, and products of the company; it also lists the bank, law firm, accounting firm, and advertising firm used by the company as well as a very complete roster of the company's officers and directors. The annual sales and number of employees are listed. This information is indexed by product and geographical location. A separate volume of the register lists executives with biographical information and current residence.

— Dun and Bradstreet's Million Dollar Directory lists almost twice as many companies as the Standard and Poor's Register but gives less information about each company. This directory is divided into two volumes — one listing companies worth under one million dollars and one listing those worth over a million. For each company, the name, address, telephone number, annual sales, number of employees, and major officers are given. The information is indexed by geographical location and product.

— Dun and Bradstreet also produces Principal International Businesses: World Marketing Directory. Companies are listed by country giving address, sales, number of employees, product, and the head of the company. This information is indexed by company name and product.

— Thomas' Register of American Manufactures is more product oriented than the other directories. This directory is most useful when one is looking for a particular product rather than information about a company. For example, one can find a list of companies which manufacture foam insulation or helical gears and pinions. This register is in 14 volumes — volumes 1-6 are arranged by product, volume 7 by brand name, volume 8 by company name, and volumes 9-14 are company catalogs.

— Directory of the Central Atlantic States Manufacturers lists companies located in Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina. Companies are listed by state, then by city. The address, telephone number, products, and number of employees are given for each company. The companies are indexed by product and by company name.

— Directory of North Carolina Manufacturing Firms, compiled by the North Carolina Dept. of Natural and Economic Resources, lists 7,000 companies, most of which cannot be found in directories which cover a larger geographic area. Companies are listed by county and then by town. Included in the listing are the address, head of the company, telephone number, number of employees, and the products of each company. The information is indexed by company name, products, and materials purchased by the company.

— The Trade Names Directory lists trade names listing the kind of products using the name and the company which makes that particular product. This directory is useful when all one knows is the trade name of the product but not the company which makes it.

— The Franchise Opportunities Handbook is compiled annually by the Dept. of Commerce. The franchises are listed by product or service; therefore, all the real estate or cosmetic franchises are listed together. The number of a kind of franchise in opertion, the capital needed, how long the company has been in business, the training provided, and a general description of the business are given.

— The North Carolina Directory of Trade and Professional Associations by the School of Business and Economics, UNC-Greensboro, includes the head of the association, the address, telephone number, publications and services of the North Carolina associations listed.

New Music For Bath s Blackbeard Drama

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

When "Blackbeard: Knight of The Black Flag" opens Thursday night at 8:45 in the historic coastal town of Bath for the beginning of its third season, something new will be in store for listeners.

Dr. Joseph Distefano of the ECU School of Music, composer who three years ago wrote original music and arranged a number of traditional songs for the drama's premiere season, has composed music for the rousing shipboard battle scene — "which before has been played in silence," Distefano commented.

"It runs about three minutes," he noted, "and I've attempted to write a piece that incorporates variations on fragments of earlier music in the score while at the same time building intensity. This underscores what possibly would have been thoughts from the past flashing through Blackbeard's mind at the time of the battle in which he died."

"The final measures are of an indeterminate nature, so that players in the battle scene can react to the music at random."

In the premiere score, Distefano said "I wrote some original music, such as the Song For Captain Teach and the entre'acte music, as well as brief transitional music for use between scenes. For the score, I also made arrangements of a number old traditional songs." Some of the songs he used include "Hanging Johnny," "In Amsterdam," and "In Praise of Claret."

Distefano, who for the third year is musical director of "Blackbeard: Knight of the Black Flag," is not the only member of his family involved in the Bath drama. A daughter, Lisa, is appearing in the show's cast for the third consecutive season.

Distefano composed the score to another eastern North Carolina outdoor drama, "First For Freedom" at Halifax.

The overture and finale for the Halifax drama are both original compositions. Also, he has composed pieces for performance by the ECU Wind Ensemble and the ECU Jazz Ensemble as well as some original commercial forms of music.

"I feel that having music during the battle scene in 'Blackbeard' will add excitement and round out the musical score," Distefano said. "In the past, we've had music for love, for drinking, for dancing, so I think the play also needed music to fight by."

"Blackbeard: Knight of the Black Flag" opens for the 1980 summer season on Thursday with performances each Thursday, Friday and Saturday night until August 16.

Lead roles in the drama are played by Ervin Ambrose as the famous-infamous sea robber Blackbeard, and Shauna Holmes as the Bath lass who loses her heart to the pirate.

Tickets are priced at $4.50 reserved, $4.00 at the gate, and $2.00 for children under 12. Performances take place at the amphitheater along the river in Bath.

PARTICLES THAT LOOK LIKE BOULDERS — Fine particles of volcanic ash look like boulders when magnified 1500 times by the scanning electron microscope at Burroughs Wellcome Co. The ash was collected about 300 miles from the Mount Saint Helens volcano by a relative of a Burroughs Wellcome Co. student intern, Wayne Stephens. The particles were photographed by Ms. Carol Lunney in the Quality Control Division in Greenville. An X-ray analysis of these particles determined the presence of silicon, aluminum, calcium and iron.

Mountain Sing Today

GRANDFATHER'S MOUNTAIN — Dr. Tom Haggai will be principal speaker for the 56th annual Singing On The Mountain event today at Grandfather Mountain. Others to be featured on the annual entertainment include members of the Arthur Smith Show, Sego Brothers and Naomi, Raymond Fairchild and the Grandfather Mountain Grndsons. Also, the Chuck Miller Family and the Byrd Family Singers will be on hand.

The oldest and largest of the singing conventions in the mountains of the South, Singing On the Mountain was founded by the late Joe L. Hartley of Linville. Two of his sons, Joe Lee Hartley and Robert Hartley have carried on the family tadition as co-chairmen of the all day gospel singing, preaching and family reunion attended by as many as 50,000 spectators.

The event begins in the morning and continues until late afternoon. The public is invited and there is no admission charged.

Belhaven July 4th Plans Made

BELHAVEN — Plans are underway for the annual Fourth of July festival, an annual event in this harbor town that draws thousands of spectators each year. Many of the events will be ones that have been a part of the traditional entertainment for a long number of years — but a couple of new events have been added.

One of the new attractions will be an exhibition dance by the original square dance club of Belhaven under the direction of the Belhaven Recreation Dept.

The group, The Pungo Promenader, will perform at 7 p.m. July 4 on Pamlico Street, with Ralph Hitter caller. Other features of the annual celebration will be announced at an early date.

Dinner Theater At Lakeland

LITTLETON — "Hats Off to Hollywood," a two hour musical revue, will be presented at the dinner theater at Lakeland Arts Center, Littleton at 8:15 p.m. Thursday, June 26. The pre-theater dinner begins at 6 p.m.

Dinner theater entertainment will be presented each weekend at Lakeland through July 12. Thursday performances, including the cost of dinner, are priced at $11. Friday and Saturday performance are $12.50. Attendance is by reservations only and can be made by calling 586-5577 or 586-3214.

One of the performers in "Hats Off to Hollywood" is Bill Vann, a graduate of the School of Drama, East Carolina University. He will have a lead role and will sing and dance in the show.

Seminar Set Here For Barbershop Musicians

The Greenville Chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America (S.P.E.B.S.Q.S.A.) will have as its guest David M. Stevens. He will lead a two-hour seminar of Barber Shop Chorus and Quartet singing.

The event will begin at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, June 26 and will be held in the auditorium of the Recreation Building, 2000 Cedar Lane. The seminar is open to the public without charge.

Stevens is Music Services Assistant for S.P.E.B.S.Q.S.A. In this position, he travels across the U.S. and in Canada conducting seminars for local chapter units, their music directors and quartets.

A long-time Barbershopper, Stevens coached quartets and directed choruses in the San Francisco area for many years. In 1957 his Berkeley chorus won the International Championship of S.P.E.B.S.Q.S.A.

He holds a bachelor degree in music from DePauw University and a master's degree from Northwestern. In past years, he was music instructor for the Chicago Campus Chorale of Northwestern University and for the San Francisco Conservatory of Music and the San Franciso Unified School District (Adult Education Service).

He currently lives in Kenosha, Wisconsin, which is the site of the International Office for the barbershop harmony Society.

Writers Workshops Set

WASHINGTON — Two writer's workshops, one for beginning writers, a second for advanced writers, will be held during the coming week at Brown Library in Washington. The two workshops are sponsored by the Beaufort County Arts Council.

Both workshops are being taught by Ardis Kimzey, well known in North Carolina as teacher/writer/consultant.

— The Beginning Writer's Workshop will run for three days from 7 to 9 p.m. nightly Monday, June 23 through Wednesday, June 25. The fee for this three-day workshop is $10. It is designed for those who want to learn the basics of writing, criticism and manuscript send outs. This workshop is oriented to high school juniors and seniors as well as interested adults who have never written before.

— The Advanced Writer's Workshop is for four days, opening Monday, June 23 and continuing through Thursday, June 26. Hours are 3 to 5 p.m. on each of the four days. The fee is $15, and the course is designed for serious writers who need more than basic information on writing.

Washington native Ms. Kimzey now lives in Raleigh. A graduate of Duke University, she has taught in schools all over the state, and has conducted creative writing workshops for five years at N.C. State University and at numerous other workshops.

In addition to her poetry, which has been published in dozens of literary and other publications, she has also had stories published and has written book reviews for the New York Times and other newspapers.

Two of her recent books include "To Defend A Form," a book about teaching poetry in the schools, and "The Illusion of Water," a book of her own poems.

Persons interested in either workshop are to come by the Arts Council to register or call 946-2504

Writers To Meet Tuesday

The second meeting of the Greenville Writers Club for the month of June will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday, June 24 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Tripp, Route 5, Box 306, Greenville.

To reach the Tripp home, take U.S. 264 east (the Pactolus Highway). It is located four and three-eights miles from the stoplight on the bypass and is located on the left side of the road traveling toward Pactolus.

All persons interested in any form of creative writing are invited to attend. The writers meet twice monthly — on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month — at the home of various writer members. There is no fee or other costs involved.

Crowsnest To Dance In Durham Tuesday

DURHAM — Crowsnest, which has been praised for its fresh and theatrically compelling work, returns for its second engagement at the American Dance Festival at 8 p.m. Tuesday, June 24 in Page Auditorium.

The company, founded by Martha Clarke, formerly of Pilobolus, made its debut at the American Dance Festival in 1979.

In Tuesday's performance, Crowsnest will premierie a new work, The Garden of Villandry, choreographed by Martha Clarke, Felix Blaska and Robert Barnett to music by Franz Schubert. The work features a specially designed set by painter Robert Andrew Parker, and costumes are by Lawrence Casey.

The program will also include the North Carolina premiere of Ms. Clarke's solo dance, Pagliaccio. Other works to be danced are Haiku, to music by George Crumb; Nocture to music by Mendelssohn; Solana, set to traditional Spanish music; Bone; and Fallen Angel, choreographed to traditional Eskimo music.

Crowsnest has just returned from a successful Paris engagment produced by Pierre Cardin. The company has also performed at the Palm Beach Festival and in July will perform at the Spoleto Festival in Italy. In November the company will make a film for Danish television in Copenhagen.

Crowsnest is one of 11 dance companies scheduled to perform at the American Dance Festival in Durham during the 1980 season. Single tickets for this and all other performances may be purchased at the Page Auditorium Box Office between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. daily or by calling 684-6402.

—PBS Specials—

CHAPEL HILL — A drama about an Irish family in America, a comic masterpiece, and a musical tour through rural Mississippi are among programs being aired this week over UNC-TV (PBS). These programs can be viewed locally over Channel 25 Greenville and Channel 4, Columbia. Brief details are:

— Monday, June 23, 8 p.m. — Molders of Troy is a dramatic exploration into the lives of an Irish family torn by the changing tides of the American Industrial Revolution. The 90-minute drama traces the triumphs and failures of Brian Duffy, an iron molder's son, through the years 1859 to 1876. The scene is Troy, New York.

— Wednesday, June 25, 8 p.m. — A comic masterpiece is the phrase that has been used to describe Happy Days, the Samuel Beckett play starring Irene Worth in the role of Winnie. Although Winnie is at first buried up to her waist, then later up to her neck in a mound of "scorched earth," she lives with the hope that her existence will be given meaning.

— Saturday, June 28, 10 p.m. — An hour-long television tour through rural Mississippi, exploring the roots of the blues created by blacks through decades of struggle and difficulties is the subject of a documentary, The Land Where The Blues Began. Music of the Mississippi Delta is compared to the music of Africa, with field 'hollers' floating over solid syncopated dance rhythms.

STAVELOT TRIPTYCH

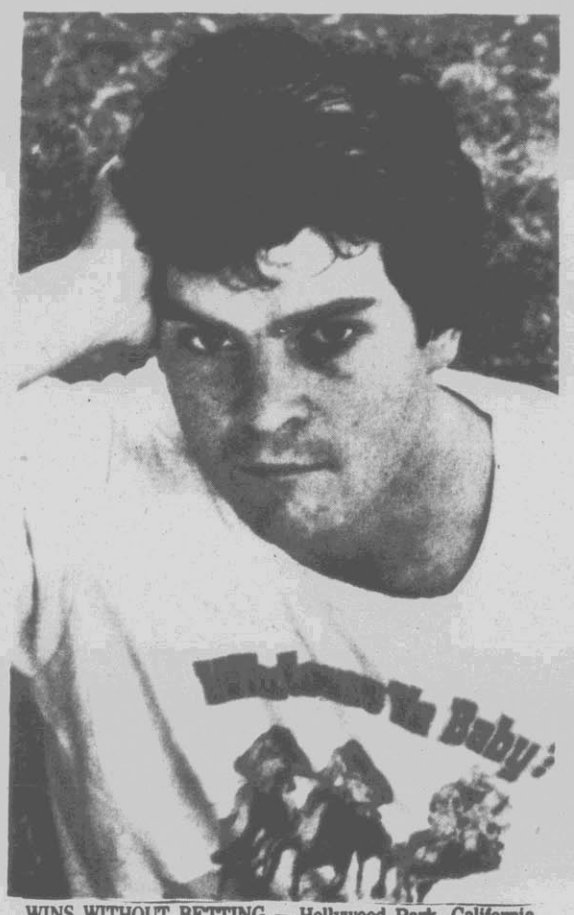
NEW YORK (AP) — An exhibition titled "The Stavelot Triptych, Mosan Art, and the legend of the True Cross," continues at the Pierpont Morgan Library through July 31.

The triptych, made in the 12th century, has been described as one of the greatest Romanesque treasures in the United States.

DUTCH PAINTING

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — The Worcester Art Museum has added a painting by William van Neiuwlandt to its collection of 17th-century Dutch art.

The 1630 painting, titled "Laban Searching for His Idols," is the museum's first Dutch painting representing a subject from the Old Testament.



WINS WITHOUT BETTING — Hollywood Park, California parimutuel clerk Joe Dypwick received $27,447 after an apparent betting window swindle backfired. The track ruled that Dypwick won the money after a bettor asked for about $3,700 worth of parlay tickets and then "suddenly discovered" he was short of money to cover the bet. Dypwick could have been stuck with the loss under parimutuel rules, since the tickets had already been dispensed. Therefore, the gamble and the winnings became his when the bet paid off. Mother's Finest Coming

The East Carolina University Student Union will present Mother's Finest in two shows on Sunday, June 29. The two concerts will be held in Wright Auditorium, with the first show going on at 7:30 p.m. and the second at 10 p.m. The act appearing with Mother's Finest will be Jesse Bolt.

This will be the first major summer concert ever attempted at East Carolina University, said Charles Sune, chairperson of the Major Attractions Committee. Sune said a capacity crowd is expected and advises early purchase of tickets. (Mother's Finest last appeared at ECU in December to a sold out audience of 6,000 in Minges Coliseum).

Tickets are priced at $5, and are available at: Mendenhall Student Center on campus; at Apple Records on E. Fifth Street; and at The Music Shop, Greenville Square Mall. Tickets will also be available at the door for both shows.

Beaufort Park Sunday Scheduled

WASHINGTON — The Greatest Show in Town, Beaufort County Arts Council's Sunday-in-the Park, opens at 1 p.m. today at Stewarts Parkway in downtown Washington.

Acts lined up to entertain the public include clowns, a puppet show, singing, face painting, and mime artist Dominic Fischer performing.

Charles Carawan, known as "the beautiful voice from WEEW," will be master of ceremonies for the show, which lasts until 6 p.m.

The celebration is free, and children are welcome. There is no admission fee charged for any of the events. If it should rain, the festivities will be held in Sermon's Warehouse on Hackney Avenue.

A Gershwin Song And Dance Spectacle For Sunday In The Park

Livestock Players Featured Today

From Greensboro comes the group to be featured in today's Sunday in the Park concert at 7 p.m. The Livestock Players, under the sponsorship of the Greensboro Parks and Recreation Department will present Gershwin, a new musical reue.

Members of the Livestock Players, dressed in many shades of blue, will perform more than 40 of Gershwin's best-loved songs and concert pieces in a musical revue format that runs a little more than an hour. The ensemble has 20 young male and female singers and dancers from the Greensboro area. Carole Lindsey is the show's choreographer, and music direction is by Brian Gray.

Among Gershwin favorites on today's program are tunes such as Strike Up The Band, The Man I Love, Someone To Watch Over Me, Love Is Here To Stay, Swanee, one of Gershwin's longer compositions, Rhapsody In Blue, and for a rousing finale, the infectious melody of I've Got Rhythm

During 1980, the Livestock Players (formerly named The Greensboro Youtheater), will be touring extensively throughout North Carolina.

On July 28, the ensemble departs for a three week performance tour of Greece and Romania as musical goodwill ambassadors from North Carolina (and the U.S.A.). They had a successful overseas tour last year.

Stuart Aronson, Sunday in the Park director, reminds patrons to come prepared with folding chairs, pillows or other aids to sitting comfort on the grassy slope east of Reade Street where the concert will take place. The Sunday in the Park series of summer entertainment is funded by the City of Greenville and is conducted under the auspices of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Dept.

In the event of rain, there is no rain date scheduled. However, Aronson said if the program should be rained out, an attempt will be made to schedule the Livestock Players for a return engagement on a future date.

FEATHER ART

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Museum of Natural History is showing through Sept. 1 an exhibition titled, "Feather Arts: Beauty, Wealth and Spirit from Five Continents."

THE LIVESTOCK PLAYERS . . . of Greensboro, a youthful ensemble of male and female singers and dancers, will be in concert at 7 p.m. today as the attraction in today's Sunday in the Park Series. The ensemble will present "Gershwin," a new musical revue. Later this summer, the Livestock Players will tour Greece and Romania on an invitation Goodwill Ambassadors tour. SCREAMS AND DREAMS AND A MOUNTAIN OF FUN.

A Review

A Valuable Volume On The Natural History Of Our Area

Amphibians and Reptiles of the Carolinas and Virginia. By Bernard S. Martof, William M. Palmer, Joseph R. Bailey, and Julian R. Harrison III. Photographs by Jack Dermid. Chapel Hill. The University of North Carolina Press. 263 pages, illustrated. $14.95.

With summertime at hand, this highly informative and splendidly illustrated volume is a welcome addition to the list of books that can provide local nature lovers with just about everything they need to know about the fascinating array of frogs, lizards, turtles, salamanders, and snakes that populate local woods, fields and water areas.

Many of these species are bountiful, others are rare. The big majority can be searched out and seen first hand by anyone with a little time and perseverance, although secretiveness is one of the characteristics of so many species.

Let's say for example, that a person wants to see a brilliant red, black, yellow and gray Scarlet Kingsnake — chances are it would take hours of careful sleuthing to get a glimpse of one.

Definition of areas of habitation through the use of a shaded map for each species described is helpful. For instance, a Pitt County resident will discover he must go to Wilmington or farther south to look for the long, slender Eastern Coachwhip snake which sometimes measures nearly 100 inches long. Likewise, chances of finding an alligator in water north of the Albemarle Sound ae just about non-existent.

A common misidentification which this volume clarifies is that of how to recognize the differences between snakes and some of the larger lizards that may attain a length of up to nearly four feet. The Eastern Slender Glass Lizard "closely resembles snakes, but have moveable eyelids, external ear openings, and a groove along each side of the body."

Turtles, both land and sea, are intriguing creatures. A few are very much favored for their delicious meat, most are not edible. Most are notoriously ill-tempered and need to be handled with care. The wide variation in shapes, colors and patterns is readily evident in comparing the common small yellow and orange Box Turtle with the strange shape of the Spiny Softshell turtle, which is more common to South than to North Carolina. Incidentally, females of several species grow to nearly double the length of the average male.

Names given to amphibians and reptiles native to our area are often charming. Within the frog kingdom there's the Spring Peeper, the Bird-Voiced, and the Southern Cricket frogs. Salamanders bear names like Shovelnose, Yoanhlossee, and common to eastern North Carolina — the prevalent Slimy and Spotted Salamanders. Turtles have names such as Florida Cooter and Yellowbelly Slider — the latter is a good southern citizen, as he is fond of basking in the sun.

Each speciman is illustrated with a clear color photograph with one-half to three-quarters of a page in descriptive text which includes the common and Latin names, method of reproduction, feeding habits, temperament and other life-style factors. It's remarkable how few of these creatures which all too frequently frighten people, fall into the category of poisonous or dangerous. (This is perhaps fortunate in that man's fear of them affords them greater protection against extinction — yet it would be unfortunate if inquisitive youngsters were denied the pleasure of discovering the habitats of these creatures solely due to fear on the part of oldsters.)

In addition to the extensive information provided on individual species, the volume provides a provocative summation of early explorations and writings on the wildlife of our area. Touched on are the work of Rev. John Bannister in the late 17th century; Robert Beverly at the beginning of the 18th century; John Lawson's accounts in his "A New Voyage to Carolina" published in 1709; and the monumental work of Mark Catesby, who compiled a two volume study of natural history, published 1731-43 in "The Natural History of Carolina, Florida and the Bahama Islands."

For the reader with a propensity for collecting specimens, guidance is given on what is legally allowable and what is not.

Amphibians and Reptiles of the Carolinas and Virginia, is by any measure a nature guide that the average lay reader can understand — and enjoy. Even for those whose preference is limited to reading rather than going out to discover, will be pleased by this beautiful volume. It is an ideal, life-long gift to any young person eager to learn about the natural life of his home area.

'Fame,' An Energy-Filled Musical

People who like to go to movies, and who respond positively to musicals such as "American In Paris," "Cabaret," and in particular to "West Side Story," will discover that "Fame," now playing at the Park Theater downtown, has much in common with these fine films.

"Fame" is a splendid surprise, a movie that like last year's "Breaking Away" comes on the scene largely unheralded.

From the opening chaotic audition scenes to the rousing musical graduation finale, "Fame" projects a dazzling, restless energy that underscores why American creativity in entertainment has taken the lead worldwide in the 20th century.

Filmed in New York City — the story takes place primarily at New York's High School of Performing Arts (which is also the locale of the film story), with some magnificant night footage of Times Square and Broadway included. The film's story focuses on half a dozen or so students from the time of their entry auditions to graduation, which gives the film a framework that borders on quasi-documentary — a strong point that works to advantage in the kaleidoscopic pattern of rapid scene shifts.

The cast of young dancers, actors and musicians — black, Puerto Rican, Jewish, Irish, Italian, etc. — the whole racial representation of New York City's cross-section of ethnic types, — is superb. It is difficult to imagine a more gifted cast than that of "Fame."

Gene Anthony Ray, as Leroy, a muscular young Negro, combines savagry and grace in spectacular solo dancing. He is equally gifted as an actor whose veneer of tough guy is a stance to cover the fact he can't read. The love-hate interplay between him and English teacher Mrs. Sherwood, played by Anne Meara is totally convincing.

Maureen Teefy, a wistful blue-eyed girl, is a joy to watch as she emerges from an insecure Jewish girl dominated by a demanding stagestruck, poverty-resenting mother into a young woman strong enough to make her own decisions.

Others whose inner lives are revealed include Barry Miller as Ralph, a skinny Puerto Rican whose home life is a tragic shambles, and who broods about the suicide of his idol, Freddy Prinz. Yet he is wise in knowing that he can and must survive by his talent. Another who discovers a saving wisdom through suffering (and by the understanding of his friends at school) is Paul McCrane as the lonely homosexual, Montgomery.

There's the promise of genuis coming into flower in the talent of composer student Bruno, in an excellent performance by Lee Curreri. His teachers and his taxi-driving father are mystified by his musical ideas but eventually suspect that he may be on the path to greatness. And his love of music is shared by Irene Cara as Coco, a vivacious Latin type gifted with a fine voice.

It is not alone the youthful members of "Fame" that give the film its tautly honed sense of cinematic possibilities fully realized. Older actresses and actors contribute equally memorable portrayals in faculty member roles.

"Fame" is successful on many levels — including Christopher Gore's musical score that encompasses Mozartian, African and contemporary sounds and rhythms that add up to listening pleasure of the highest order.

The one sour note in "Fame" is the overabundance of obscene language. Granted, the language may accurately reflect part of the life-style of contemporry New York, yet it hardly seems valid and certainly not necessary to stress this distasteful factor in a film otherwise so rich in essential human understanding, hopes and dreams of American youth.

In spite of that basic flaw, "Fame" is a stunning film that in all likelihood will in time become an American classic.

East Carolina Routs North Carolina, 12-6

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's Pirates spotted the University of North Carolina a 2-0 lead in the first inning, then stormed back to gain a 12-6 victory over the Tar Heels last night.

Hurler Bill Wilder picked up his fourth win against no losses in the game, going the distance, striking out 13 and walking six, including four of the latter in one inning. He scattered seven hits.

Jay Carraway paced the hitting, going a perfect four-for-four, while Kelly Robinette added three hits.

"I've got to give a lot of credit to our defense," Coach Gary Overton said afterwards. "We did make a couple of mistakes, but overall our defense has carried us most of the way this summer. It has been the key to our success.

"Wilder threw another good game," he added. "He did have some trouble in the eighth inning, when he walked four, but overall he did well."

Wilder said he had no explanation for the bad inning. "I got hit on the hand by the first batter's hit (in the inning), but I don't think that bothered me. I just couldn't find the plate."

"We were able to get a good lead tonight and protect it," Overton continued. He had praise for Carraway, too, adding that he called a good game behind the plate as well as doing well at the plate.

North Carolina opened the scoring in the top of the first, scoring a pair of unearned runs. After the Pirates retired the first two batters, David Price drew a full-count walk. Joe Reto followed with a single into center, and it looked to be over when J.D. Henderson grounded back to third. But Todd Hendley's throw to first was in the dirt and skipped past the base. Before it was chased down, both Price and Reto had come around to score.

East Carolina threatened in both the first and second, before finally tying it up in the third. In the first, Mike Sorrell and Robinette got on via a double and a walk, respectively, but then died in scoring position. In the second, Carraway and Robert Wells both reached on a hit and a walk, only to die without advancing.

But in the third, it was a different story. Robinette led off with a single to left, and with two away, Mike Sage cracked his fifth homer of the season, knotting it at 2-2. Charlie Smith followed, reaching on an error and gaining second on a passed ball, but got no further.

The Pirates broke it open in the fourth with seven runs, all but one of them unearned as the Tar Heels fumbled the ball three times. Carraway led off with a hard hit to third and Jeff Warren ran for him. With one down, Sorrell grounded to short, but the ball was errored at second, leaving both safe. Robinette beat out a bunt, loading the bases. Hendley then singled to center, scoring Warren and Sorrell.

John Hallow followed with a single to center, but when the relay was brought back to the infield a pickoff try at second was thrown into the outfield and both Robinette and Hendley scored, and Hallow raced on to third. Smith walked, and Pete Persico singled to drive in Hallow. Carraway, back up, walked and Robert Wells reached on an error, scoring Smith. Persico then scored the final run on a wild pitch.

The Tar Heels were junked in the third after a fine threat on a double play after a single and a double opened the inning, and a one-out error loaded the bases. But the twin-killing saved the day for the Pirates.

The Pirates added a tenth run in the seventh. Sorrell reached on a fielder's choice, scoring when Robinette doubled to left-center.

North Carolina rallied for three in the seventh as Wilder seemed to tire, walking four runners. With one away, Lee Sullivan singled off Wilder's hand, and Reto walked. With two away, Greg Muench walked, and Clark Goodall reached on an infield hit, scoring Sullivan. Walks to Mike Beck and Frank Ladson each brought in a run before a fly ball ended the inning.

That cut the Pirates' lea
That cut the Pirate lead to 10-6.

East Carolina closed out the scoring in the bottom of the eight with two more runs. Sage and Smith both led off with walks and Persico singled, driving in Sage. Carraway closed out his perfect night with another run scoring hit, bringing in Smith.

The victory raised the Pirate record to 8-4, while North Carolina fell to 2-4.

The Pirates are idle until Tuesday night when they host N.C. Wesleyan at Harrington Field at 7:30 p.m.

Unser In Front Of Pocono Field

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Bobby Unser, who has had more than his share of frustrations at Pocono Interational Raceway, will be at the front of the field today for the start of the 10th annual Pocono 500 championship auto race.

The 46-year-old Albuquerque driver won the pole position for the 500-mile race — the second leg of champ car racing's triple crown — with a two-lap qualifying average of 185.491 mph.

In fact, the veteran driver never has started lower than 10th in eight previous Pocono races. Yet he's never finished better than fourth.

"There's two things I'd like to accomplish here," the older of the two racing Unser brothers said. "I'd like to finish the race and, second, I'd like to win it. I can just feel in my bones how much I'd like to win here, because this is one of the few races I haven't won."

Unser, who has won two Indianapolis 500s and three California 500s, won't be a shoo-in, though. The 33-car field is loaded with good equipment and big-name drivers.

Three-time Pocono winner A.J. Foyt and former Indy winner and world driving champion Mario Andretti will join Unser at the front of the 11-row grid.

Other former Indy winners Al Unser and Rick Mears, who teams with Bobby Unser and Andretti under the colors of the Penske racing team, are considered top contenders.

Moses Returns With Triumph

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Smooth Edwin Moses showed Saturday he again was physically fit, winning his heat in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles, while Jodi Anderson became the first winner at the U.S. Olympic Track and Field trials.

The moody, articulate Moses, the world record-holder and 1976 Olympic champion, was competing for the first time in nine months. He had been out of action since last September because of an ankle injury and his bitter disappointment at the U.S. boycott of the Summer Olympic Games in Moscow.

After winning his heat in 49.23 seconds, in his usual effortless, flawless fashion, Moses said, "I just want to get out of this meet without an injury."

If he wins the Olympic trials for the second consecutive time, he would close in on the all-time record of 40 consecutive victories in the intermediate hurdles. The mark was set by Gert Potgieter of South Africa during the 1950s. Moses has won 37 in a row.

Anderson, who dropped out of Cal State-Northridge in order to concentrate on the pentathlon, rolled up 4,697 points — the third highest score by an American — in the five-event competition to determine the finest all-around woman track and field athlete in the United States.

Anderson, competing in her first pentathlon of the year, won the long jump at 21 feet, 8¼ inches and the 100-meter high hurdles in 13.85, finished second in the shot put with a career best of 44-0, tied for second in the high jump with a personal record of 5-10½ and ran the final 800-meter race in 2:11.42.

Jane Frederick, the American record-holder in the penthatlon and a two-time Olympian, led after the first three events, but was forced to withdraw because of a strained left hamstring.

"I probably shouldn't have started (competing today), but I didn't have the courage to say 'no' to this meet," said Frederick, who added that she injured the hamstring several weeks ago and reinjured it last Monday.

Meanwhile, Linda Waltman of Fort Worth, Texas set a world record in the 800-meter race in the penthatlon with a time of 2:09.30. The previous was 2:09.4, set last year by Yekaterina Smirnova of the Soviet Union.

Still The Champion

Sanchez Retains Crown

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Mexico's Salvador Sanchez retained his World Boxing Council featherweight championship Saturday by stopping Danny "Little Red" Lopez in the 14th round and apparently sending him into retirement.

Referee Mills Lane, a former fighter, stopped the bout at about the same time the Lopez corner threw in the towel.

Lopez didn't argue with Lane's decision, saying, "I got too slow and tired after the 10th round and he started nailing me."

Lopez said he hadn't definitely decided on quitting the ring, but, "I'm pretty sure I will."

He has earned more than $1.5 million in his professional career, which started in 1971.

Sanchez said of the loser, "He's a very good champion."

The winner put his record at 35-1-1 and stopped his 29th foe. The Lopez record went to 41-5 and it marked the fourth time he had been stopped.

The fight at Caesar's Palace Sports Pavilion was scheduled for 15 in a rematch of the Feb. 2 bout in Tucson, Ariz., when Sanchez took the title from Lopez via a 13th round TKO.

Lopez stayed in the bout this time much better than before but when Sanchez battered him with a succession of rights and lefts to the head, the ex-champ's corner threw in the towel and referee Mills Lane stopped the fight with 1 minute, 42 seconds gone in the 14th.

Both Sanchez and the 28-year-old Lopez, from Alhambra, Calif., weighed exactly the 126-pound featherweight limit and each collected $130,000. A crowd of about 4,000 and a national television audience watched the spirited battle.

Sanchez built up points with counter-punching and managed to avoid the Lopez artillery which was limited to single punches most of the way. Lopez, who win the title in 1976, never was able to put together combinatons against his counter punching foe.

All three judges had Sanchez ahead when the fight was stopped. Two had him leading by three points and the third by seven under the 10-point must system where the winner of each round gets 10 points and the loser nine or less depending on his showing.

"After the last punch Lopez took, he just wilted," referee Lane said. "He was getting hit regularly."

The referee said he stopped the fight on his own because "we don't recognize a towel in Nevada."

The loss could mean the end of the Lopez boxing career. He personally sought the rematch despite some suggestions he retire.

Unlike the first battle between the two, Lopez was not bothered by the cuts.

Lopez started the fight jabbing and trying to go to the body in his following his pre-fight strategy. After a slow first round, the two mounted a sharp exchange in the second with Lopez apparently coming out the better.

By the sixth, Sanchez was scoring solidly and the crowd was chanting "Sanchez, Sanchez, Sanchez."

'Tourist' Gilder Leads Canadian

THE DAILY REFLECTOR
Sports
SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 22, 1980

ILE BIZARD, Quebec (AP) — Journeyman tourist Bob Gilder struggled to a hard-won round of par 70 and retained a 2-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $350,000 Canadian Open Golf Tournament.

But it was a frustrating experience for Gilder, who had to scramble to recover from the trouble he found with a driver that suddenly became erratic.

"It was kind of frustrating," said Gilder, who had opened the day with a 3-stroke lead and played his front side 2-under-par.

"I thought I could really put some distance between myself and the rest of the guys.

"It's frustrating to finish only 6-under. I thought I played better than that today. I had a chance to open things up, particularly over the front side, but I just couldn't put it away.

"But," he said, with a look ahead to Sunday's final round of the chase for a $54,000 first prize and a national championship, "there are only two guys within thee shots of me, so there's not that many really threatening me."

Jerry Pate, a former U.S. and Canadian Open titleholder, came from seven strokes off the pace with a solid, no-bogey 65 — the best round of the tournament — and moved into second at 206.

"I feel like my bad days are over," said Pate, who has been in something of a slump for more than a year. "Hopefully, tomorrow will be another good day."

Ben Crenshaw dropped birdie putts totaling about 65 feet on the last two holes that finished off a 2-under-par 68 and put him three shots back at 207.

"I'd like nothing more than to win this tournament," said Crenshaw. "I haven't won since early in 1979 and I've been second seven times in the last 12 months. I feel like it's time to win. This tournament is very high on my priorities."

Lee Trevino, the defending title-holder and a three-time Canadian national champion, once got to within two strokes of the top spot, had it 3-under-par for the mild, partly-cloudy day and appeared to be on the move.

But his putter suddenly went sour. He bogeyed three holes in a row, 3-putting two of them, and finished with a round of par 70 and was four strokes back at 208.

Also at that figure were Johnny Miller, Jim Dent, Don Pooley and Australian Bob Shearer. Shearer and Pooley moved up with 67's. Miller and Dent had 69's.

Jack Nicklaus, who last weekend won his fourth U.S. Open title, had an erratic 70 that included three birdies, as many bogeys and several missed opportunities. He was at 209, five strokes back going into the last 18 holes of play for this national title.

Dye: Many Problems At First In Wyoming

CASPER, Wyo. (UPI) — Wyoming football coach Pat Dye said Saturday when he took over the Cowboy grid program last December, he encounterd a group of players who were frustrated, did not trust him and did not like anybody.

Dye, addressing the Wyoming Association of Broadcasters convention, also said he was surprised at how physically weak the team was.

"We had the weakest football team physcially I've ever seen," he said. "Not the littlest, but the weakest."

Dye, who replaced Bill Lewis after compiling a 48-18-1 record in six years at East Carolina University, put the Wyoming team on a strength program and rigorous off-season training schedule, and by the end of spring practice this year had lost about 25 players.

However, "I think what we ended up with is a nucleus of kids we can count on," he said.

The 1980 Cowboys should be sound at quarterback, tight end and split end, adequate at runningback, but doubtful on the offensive line, he said. Less progress was made in the offensive line than in other offensive positions during spring practice, he added.

Defensively, he said, the linebacker position will be questionable because of lack of depth and the secondary will be questionable although there are players who can adequately fill the position.

Wyoming needs a rapid increase in the quality of its athletic facilities because of growth in the program, he said. There were better facilities at East Carolina, even though the athletic program received no state money, he added.

"We've got to have the facilities to operate out of," he said. "We just do not have the space to take care of everybody."

Dye said he left East Carolina primarily because of a desire to work with UW President Edward Jennings, who has committed the university to strong athletics.

He said he was excited about the recent hiring of former Missouri associate athletic director Robert Hitch as UW's new athletic director.

He called on the broadcasters to support athletics in Wyoming.

"There's probably no other group in the state that will have more to do with our success than you," he said. "My door will always be open, and if you call, I'll return your calls."

Rudi's Double Gives Angels Win

BOSTON (AP) — Joe Rudi and Carney Lansford didn't hit the ball well in the third inning, but their shots won the game. Jim Rice hit it very well in the seventh, but his towering blast was held back by the wind, which kept Boston from going ahead.

Rudi's hit was a two-run double to left off Rice's glove that capped a three-run third and carried the California Angels to a 4-2 victory over the Red Sox Saturday.

"Fenway is a nice place to play. When I hit the double I really didn't hit the ball well," Rudi said. "I wish baseball had more parks like this. It's a good place to hit. You can see the ball well here."

Boston went into the third inning leading 2-0, and loser Chuck Rainey, 7-3, retired the first two batters. Then Lansford hit the ball off Rainey's glove for a single.

"I thought it was hit harder, plus it had some nasty topspin," Rainey said "It ends up costing me the game, a one-hop like that to the mound. The key to the game."

Trailing 3-2, Boston threatened in the seventh with runners at first and second and two outs. Rice then drilled the ball to deep left-center field.

"I thought we would at least be tied on that. I thought it would at least go off the wall," said Boston Manager Don Zimmer. But Rick Miller caught the ball.

Seattle 0

BALTIMORE (AP) — Steve Stone pitched a five-hitter, and Eddie Murray cracked his 12th homer of the season Saturday night as the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Seattle Mariners 9-0.

Stone, 9-3, the winningest pitcher on the Orioles staff this season, struck out seven and walked two. He was touched for a two-out double in the first inning by Dan Meyer and four singles, one by Meyer.

Stone's only rough inning was the ninth, when Julio Cruz led off with a single, and two outs later, Meyer singled, sending Cruz to third. Stone, however, got out of the jam when Tom Paciorek flew out to left to end the game.

Minnesota 3
Cleveland 2

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Butch Wynegar drove in all three Minnesota runs with two singles and a double Saturday to give the Twins a 3-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Geoff Zahn, 6-9, pitched 81-3 innings to pick up the victory. Zahn now has allowed just one run in his last two starts. Wayne Garland, 2-1, also went the distance and took the loss.

The Twins got a run in the third inning on successive singles by Ron Jackson, Rob Wilfong and Wynegar, but Cleveland tied it in the fifth inning on a single by Bo Diaz, a sacrifice by Rick Manning and a single to center by Tom Veryzer.

Carner Leads Keystone By Six

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — JoAnne Carner fired a 3-under-par 69 Saturday on her way to a commanding six-shot lead in the $100,000 Lady Keystone Open over the 6,388-yard West Course at Hershey Country Club.

No one in the field made a move to catch Carner, who had a 3-shot lead after the first round of the Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Jo Ann Washam shot an even-par 72 Saturday for a 36-hole total of 142, six shots behind Carner's 136.

Two more shots down at even par was Joyce Kazmierski. Sally Little, Vicki Fergon and Shelley Hamlin were at 145.

"You can never get too much of a lead on this course," Carner said. "Anybody can get hot out here."

Carner birdied the second and third holes with putts of three and 30 feet and added birdies at 11, 15 and 16. She bogeyed two holes, seven and 17.

Carner capitalized on outstanding short iron play during the round. Her birdie putts at three, 11, 15 and 16 were all from short range because she knocked the ball so close to the pin.

"I'm playing well, hitting the ball extremely well, but I didn't putt very well today," said Carner. "I had difficulty lag putting."

Washam, who had her second eagle in two days, said she hasn't given up on winning, despite being six shots down.

"I'm going out there tomorrow with everything I've got and keep the same aggressive approach," Washam said.

Washam's eagle came at the 16th hole when she reached the par-5 in two and sank a six-foot eagle putt.

Kazmierski had a 1-under-par 71 to hold third position alone. Fergon shot 72, while Hamlin and Little each shot 74.

Roger In, Hornung Out At CBS

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul Hornung is out and Roger Staubach is in as CBS prepares to announce its broadcasting lineup for the 1980 National Football League season this week.

Hornung, the former Green Bay star and current beer ad stalwart, was not rehired by CBS after five seasons as a color commentator.

Hornung, considered by some TV critics as shallow and ill-prepared, was made expendable when CBS signed Staubach to a contract that calls for him to do eight games this season. Staubach, the record-breaking quarterback, announced his retirement earlier this year after 11 seasons with Dallas. He will be teamed with Frank Glieber.

Another adjustment in the CBS roster is that John Madden, the former Oakland coach, has been elevated to full-time duty. Madden gained a reputation as an incisive, witty analyst in his selected appearances last year. Madden will be paired with Gary Bender, who recently signed a long-term deal with CBS after being wooed by ABC.

Another change will have Irv Cross, who worked on CBS' "NFL Today" pre-game and halftime show for five years, moving out of the studio and teaming with play-by-play announcer Vin Scully. Last year, Scully worked with former NFL Coach George Allen. This season, Allen will replace Hornung as Lindsey Nelson's color commentator.

The No.1 team is still Pat Summerall and Tom Brookshier, which ordinarily will give them CBS' nationally televised game. They will be working together for the sixth season, although Brookshier's gushing, non-analytical commentary drew so much criticism at last January's Super Bowl that his top position may be in jeopardy.

Veteran Curt Gowdy, in his second season at CBS, will again work with Hank Stram, the insightful former NFL coach. In the insecure world of TV sports, their two years together gives them more seniority than any CBS team besides Summerall-Brookshier.

Turner's Courageous Wins First

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Courageous, defender of the America's Cup in 1974 and 1977, defeated Freedom on Saturday in the first full race of the preliminary trials for U.S. yachts.

Sailed by Atlanta Braves' owner Ted Turner, Courageous finished ahead of Dennis Conner's Freedom by 1.15 minutes on a shortened Olympic course.

Both American boats began the 11-mile course on port tack, with Courageous getting underway with better boat speed than Freedom, which had flipped over onto port tack seconds before the start.

Sailing with winds out of the northeast at about 10 knots, Courageous held a slight edge when the two 12-meter boats came together the first time, forcing Freedom to tack away.

At the weather mark, Courageous was ahead by about two boat lengths, but Freedom made up some of the difference at the leeward mark, cutting Turner's advantage to about one-half length.

Courageous, again heading to windward, started rebuilding its lead and was about five boat lengths ahead on the final downwind leg.

On the first practice start, Courageous and Freedom crossed the line on opposite points of sail — Courageous heading off on starboard tack and Freedom on port.

When the two American 12s converged several minutes later, Freedom was about two boat lengths ahead. At that point, the New York Yacht Club race committee signaled a recall for the second start.

Freedom and Courageous each crossed the line on starboard tack for the second practice start with Freedom holding a more favored position closer to the wind.

Wimbledon Tennis

Two-Week Festival Begins Monday; Borg, Navratilova Favored

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Wimbledon, the most conservative sports event in the world, starts its two-weeks tennis festival Monday, still resisting change.

If the bookies have got it right, even the singles champions will be unaltered. They make Bjorn Borg a heavy favorite to win the title for a fifth straight time, and they put defending champion Martina Navratilova at the top of the women's list.

The tournament itself will certainly be in the old groove. The All-England club, which has run Wimbledon since 1877, doesn't believe in change.

It is unruffled by a Government commission of inquiry which suggested Wimbledon should follow the example of every other major tournament and accept commercial sponsorship, and put a half-million pounds ($1.15 million) more into British tennis.

Wimbledon spurns sponsorship because it does not need it. The club knows that, barring disastrous weather, more than 300,000 will squeeze into the grounds to watch the 12 days of tennis. It already gives financial support to the national game.

It remains apart from the rest of the circuit in other ways. It does its own seeding, politely using the computer rankings of the Association of Tennis Professionals (ATP) for guidance only. It does not acknowledge the Grand Prix supervisors, who keep a strict disciplinary eye on every other tournament.

So if a player throws tantrums on the Center Court he will be dealt with by tournament referee Fred Hoyle, with the backing of a committee steeped in a century of tradition.

In prize money Wimbledon keeps pace with the times. Borg will be gunning for a first prize of $46,000 and Navratilova for $41,400.

The bookies had to offer short odds against Borg and Navratilova to protect themselves. In this betting-conscious country every office worker and shop assistant likes to have a flutter on the big events and tends to put his money on the favorite.

If Borg and Navratilova win again, the betting shops may have to pay out millions. So the bettor is discouraged by odds that make betting scarcely worth while. You have to bet 4 pounds on Borg to win 5 pounds.

But the tennis world knows the chances of Borg being upset are bigger than that. The Swedish star himself knows it.

"The most difficult thing at Wimbledon is getting past the first round or two," Borg said.

"Anything can happen. I don't know what my form is going to be like. The grass courts sometimes behave strangely. If the big servers are on a lucky day they can knock out the good players. It always happens at Wimbledon."

It has almost happened to Borg himself during his four-year run of Wimbledon triumphs.

In 1977 he was two sets down to boom-boom Australian Mark Edmondson in the second round. In 1978 he trailed two sets to one against the big-hitting American left-hander Vic Amaya in the first round.

The draw appears to have been kind to Borg. If all goes well he will reach the last 16 before coming up against a big server. Then he could have men like America's John Sadri or Australia's Colin Dibley in his path.

Of the top contenders, third-seeded Jimmy Connors has the toughest-looking draw. He is in the same section as Sherwood Stewart of the United States, Pat McNamara and John Alexander of Australia — all heavy servers who could wreck a few dreams if their serves are on.

Borg and Connors avoided tournament play and spent the last two weeks practicing on grass.

But No.2 John McEnroe was eager to win the warm-up event at London's Queen's Club last week and did it in impressive style, not losing a single set and dropping only a few points on his service.

In the past, more than one Wimbledon champion has tuned up by competing at Queen's Club and taking things gently, losing in an early round. McEnroe took a different view.

"The more matches I won the longer I would stay in the tournament and the more match practice I would get," he said. "So I figured the best thing was to win it."

Vitas Gerulaitis, the No.4 seed, played at Queen's and lost to Australia's Kim Warwick in the semis. But it happened in a freak wind, which upset form.

Of the 16 seeded players in the men's singles, two have pulled out with injuries — Harold Solomon of the United States, No.11, and Yannick Noah of France, No.12.

All the other top stars are playing except Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, who is recuperating from an appendicitis operation.

Youth Baseball League Roundup

Babe Ruth League

Action Movers 7, Pepsi-Cola 3

Action Movers spotted Pepsi-Cola a three-run lead before storming back, sparked by a four-run third, to win, 7-3, Saturday afternoon in a Babe Ruth League baseball game.

Pepsi-Cola scored twice in the second on back-to-back singles by David Priestly, Scott Stallings and Tommy Norris and an error in the outfield. Pepsi then added a solo run in the third when Priestly's sacrifice fly scored Lance Searl, who had singled to open the inning.

But that was all Pepsi got, as Action Movers rallied for four runs in the third to take the lead for good.

Bryan Brannon reached on an error and went to second on Jeff Wilson's sacrifice. Brannon went to third on Bill Godley's single and scored on an error, which allowed Owens to reach and Godley to go to third. Rudy Stalls then doubled home both Godley and Owens before subsequently scoring himself on Jesse Atkinson's single.

Action Movers added a single runs in the fourth, fifth and sixth to seal the victory.

Wachovia 7, Coke 6

Wachovia pushed across four runs in the top of the seventh and then held off a rally in the bottom of the inning to edge Coke, 7-6, Saturday in a Babe Ruth baseball game.

Wachovia led, 2-1, after two innings only to see Coke go ahead, 3-2, after three innings and 5-2 after four. Wachovia scored once in the sixth to narrow the gap before the four-run outburst in the seventh.

Marvin Barrett and Bill Johnson opened the inning with consecutive singles and Barrett then scored on Troy Hudson's single. Barry Nichols then walked to load the bases before Jodie Forbes singled to score Johnson and Hudson. Nichols laters scored on Harrell's single and Wachovia led, 7-5.

Coke tallied once in the bottom of the seventh when, with two gone, Tom Shirley singled home Randy Warren, who had doubled earlier. But it wasn't enough.

Hudson led Wachovia with three hits while Forbes and Barrett had two each for Coke.

Little League

Pepsi-Cola 8, Moose 3

Trailing 2-1 after the first inning, Pepsi-Cola used a three-run third to whip Moose, 8-3, Saturday in Tar Heel Little League game.

Pepsi-Cola rallied to tie the score with a single run in the second and then took the lead for good in the third. With two gone, Chris Fugua walked, Ephraim Grubbs singled and Michael Kelly walked to load the bases. Robert Fornville then tripled to drive home all three runners and Pepsi-Cola led, 5-2.

The winners added two more runs in the fourth and a single run in the fifth while Moose's last run came in the bottom of the sixth.

Grubbs, Fornville and Fletcher Phillips all had two hits for Pepsi. Phillips had a double among his two hits.

Jaycees 7, Union Carbide 0

The Jaycess, behind Curtis Perkins's seven-hit pitching, clinched the North State Little League crown with a 7-0 win over Union Carbide Saturday afternoon.

The Jaycees wasted little time in getting on the scoreboard. David Lee led off the first with a single and after one out Tyronne Jones singled to put runners on the corners. Lee scored on an error and, after stealing second, Jones scored on an infield error.

The Jaycess added three more runs in the third and two more in the fifth for the final total.

The North State champs were led at the plate by Lee, who had two hits. Perkins had a double for the winners.

Elks 27, G. Hardware 5

The Elks road a seven-run fourth and a six-run fifth to wallop Greenville Hardware, 27-5, Saturday afternoon in a Prep League baseball contest.

The Elks led 5-0 after the first inning and 11-2 after three innings before erupting for 13 runs in their next two at bats.

In the second, the Elks pushed two runs, all they needed to win. With two out, Todd Martin reached on an error, stole second and moved to third on a passed ball. Tommy Warren then walked before Derek Dickens tripled home both runners to five the Elks a 7-0 lead.

The Elks were led at the plate by Les Turner and Tommy Warren, both of whom had three hits. Turner and Warren both had a double among their three hits. Dickens and Steve Wall had two hits for the winners.

Tony Taylor had a home run for Greenville Hardware in the second with one aboard.

First St. Bank 8, Auto Specialty 1

First State Bank spotted Auto Specialty a 1-0 first-inning advantage before roaring back to take an 8-1 victory Saturday afternoon in a Prep League baseball game.

First State Bank tied the game, 1-1, in the second and took the lead for good in the third with a single run. With two gone, Doyle Kirkland walked, stole second and moved to third on an error. He scored on Daryl Perkins' single.

First State Bank added two runs in the fifth and four in the seventh for its total.

Pitt Survives Error-Filled Game, 9-8

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Baseball afficionados would have been throwing anything but roses to the two grapplers at Harrington Field Friday night following Pitt County's 9-8 10-inning come-from-behind-after-leading-most-of-the-way victory over Snow Hill.

Most likely the fans would have liked to throw baseballs out onto the finely manicured field to give both teams some needed practice in the fine art of playing defense.

Consider:

•A total of 10 errors were committed, seven by Pitt County, the top team in the American Legion's Area I East Conference.

•Of Snow Hill's eight runs, five were unearned, and three of those came in one inning. Pitt County pitcher Doug McRoy, who pitched well for 8⅓ innings (7 SOs, 3 BBs) before leaving, was on the mound watching helplessly while all five unearned runs scored.

•Yet, Pitt County, after blowing a 6-1 lead, still managed to win, scoring twice in the bottom of the tenth thanks to a run-producing error and a clutch single by Will Barrett after Snow Hill had taken the lead with a single run in the top half of the inning.

"We're mighty fortunate, mighty fortunate to win," Pitt County coach Pat Smith said. "It was kind of a dead ballgame. We made a lot of mistakes, not just errors but mental mistakes."

Snow Hill, which tied the score in the eighth with two runs, took the lead in the tenth, only its second lead of the night. Post 94 led 1-0 through the first three innings.

With one down, Jeff Scott ripped a single to center that just got past the outstretched glove of Mike Campbell at second. Scott promptly stole second and moved to third after catcher Curtis Spencer's throw went into centerfield. He then scored on Alan Corbett's sacrifice fly, giving Snow Hill an 8-7 lead.

It was, however, a lead short-lived — thanks, in part, to two free passes to first in the bottom of the tenth.

Snow Hill's Kevin Battle, pitching for the first time this summer, opened the 10th by walking pitcher Jeff Porter and centerfielder Mark Shank. Campbell's sacrifice bunt moved both runners up a base before an error by third baseman Guy Sanderson allowed Sammy Hodges, running for Porter, to score and Shank to move to third.

Moments later Barrett slashed a solid single through a tightly-drawn in infield to score Shank and Pitt County had its ninth victory in 11 outings.

The win left Pitt County with a one-game lead over Goldsboro, which is 8-3. Snow Hill drops to 3-3. "This puts us in good shape," Smith said. "Everybody else now has three losses and this enables us to control out own destiny."

That chance to control its destiny did not come easily for Post 39, however, mainly because of its own mistakes which kept Pitt County from walking away with an easier victory.

Pitt County, after stranding two runners in the first, tied the score in the third. With one out Shank walked, the second of four walks on the night for the Rose High senior. An error put Campbell on and moved Shank to second before Barrett hit the first pitch he saw to right for a single, driving home Shank.

Pitt County then erupted for five runs in the fourth to take momentary command of the game. Mark Douglas singled and raced all the way to third on Skip Hill's sacrifice bunt before Jeff Wilson walked to give Post 39 runners on the corners. An error by shortstop Billy McLawhorn on what looked to be a sure double play ball allowed Douglas to score and McRoy to reach first.

Back-to-back singles by Shank, Campbell and Curtis Spencer brought home four more runs and Pitt County was in control, 6-1.

But not for long. Snow Hill quickly countered the home squad's outburst with three unearned runs in the fifth.

Alan Corbett singled, Robin Bowen walked and Wayne Stallings reached on an error by McRoy to load the bases with none out. When McLawhorn's ground ball went through the legs of Campbell, Corbett and Bowen scored. Stallings later scored on the first of two sacrifice flies by Murray and Snow Hill trailed 6-4.

It was close the rest of the way.

Pitt County scored once in the sixth but Snow Hill countered that with a solo run in the seventh and then tied the score with two runs in the eighth.

McRoy tripled to lead off the sixth and scored on Campbell's single. But, with one out in the top of the seventh, Snow Hill got that run back. McLawhorn walked, moved to second on a passed ball and went to third when Barrett dropped Fulghum's fly ball to right. McLawhorn subsequently scored on Murray's sacrifice fly.

Post 94 tied the game in the eighth. Jeff Scott doubled with one gone and, following a ground out by Corbett, scored on Bowen's single. Bowen followed Corbett across the plate moments later when Sanderson's single to left got past Roger Williams to tie the score at 7-7.

Pitt County didn't give up, however, even after Snow Hill took the lead in the top of the 10th. "Last night (Williamston) blew a seven-run lead to us and tonight we blew a five-run," Smith said. "But this team hasn't given up all year, I have to say that for them."

Leonard Praises Duran , Decision, Goes Down Like A Champion

(See Fight Story On Page B-5)

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Corresondent

MONTREAL (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard was a champion in defeat.

"I stood my ground," said the 24-year-old, baby-faced ring phenom, facing up to the heartbreaking loss of his World Boxing Council welterweight championship to Robert Duran in a non-stop slugfest Friday night in Olympic Stadium.

"I hit my best shots. He shot back. He gave his best. I gave my best. I never once thought he could take the title from me. They (the judges) think he won. I go along with the judges.

"I have to think the better man won."

It was a bitter experience for the young Olympic gold medalist who at first hesitated about pursuing a professional boxing career and then became an instantaneous national hero.

To those who saw one of the most exciting fights in the game's history, the image was not dulled — if anything, it was enhanced — by the intense battle that ended with the bearded 29-year-old Panamanian winning a close decision.

Young Leonard came to the press interview area afterward with his wife, Juanita, holding onto his arm. He swallowed his medicine like a man. He showed deep emotional hurt, but made no excuses. He expressed pride in the fight he had fought, and it was justified.

"I said I would fight Duran flat-footed and I did," he said. "I had no alternative. I wouldn't change if I had to do it all over again."

Critics questioned why Leonard, the slick, lightning-fast craftsman with Muhammad Ali's ability to move and stick, chose to mix it up with the awesome veteran who is nicknamed "Hands of Stone."

"People questioned whether I could take the big punch," Sugar Ray said softly. "I showed them. I have to give Duran a lot of credit. He is the toughest man I've ever fought."

Angelo Dundee, Leonard's trainer who also led Ali throughout the former heavyweight champion's career, was more bitter.

"It was a wrestling match," Dundee said, referring to Duran's holding and lunging tactics. "Sugar Ray went into the ring a champ and came out a champ."

Leonard said Duran hurt him once, an overhand right which brought blood near his eyes in the second round.

"I took a little time to get myself together again," he said. "I think it showed the perfect condition I was in."

He said he had no immediate plans for a return fight or any other bout.

"I want to take some time off and be with my wife," he said. "I want to put all the pieces together. Juanita comes first. I want to show her a good time. I want her to erase it and forget what happened."

Coach Looks To Clearing Name

By JIM McELROY
Associated Press Writer

ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) — Former University of New Mexico basketball Coach Norm Ellenberger, acquitted Friday on a seven-count federal indictment relating to a grade-transcript scandal, says his next objective is to clear himself of charges filed against him by the state.

"Needless to say, I'm very happy," Ellenberger said after the vedict was returned by a six-man, six-woman jury. "But we're only halfway there. It's a two-fold situation."

The federal jury deliberated about 2¾ hours before delivering its verdict on the seven counts against Ellenberger, dubbed "Stormin' Norman" during his successful seven-year head coaching tenure that ended with his dismissal last December.

When the court clerk concluded her announcement of the findings of the jurors, the courtroom audience began cheering. Ellenberger shook hands with nearly everyone in the courtroom.

"I thought witch-hunts went out with the dark ages. Maybe we got into one here," he said. The verdict came after four days of testimony in the trial.

Ellenberger was indicted by a state grand jury May 23 on one count of fraud in excess of $2,500, 10 counts of fraud in excess of $100 and 11 counts of making false public vouchers. He has pleaded innocent.

All but one of the counts relate to travel vouchers. The other alleges that Ellenberger defrauded the school's booster club of $3,000 by keeping money that was to have been paid as a bonus to a former assistant coach, Charlie Harrison.

Former assistant coach Manny Goldstein, the prosecution's key witness against Ellenberger in the federal trial, also was indicted on state charges. He pleaded innocent to four counts of fraud over $100 and four counts of filing false pay vouchers.

Ellenberger, 47, was indicted by a federal grand jury Feb. 14 on five counts of mail fraud, one count of wire fraud and one count of interstate travel in aid of racketeering. The charges had carried a penalty of up to 35 years in prison and $31,000 in fines.

Four of the counts were in connection with alleged efforts to make former Lobo basketball player Andre Logan eligible in 1978. The other three centered on alleged activities to get former recruit Craig Gilbert eligible prior to last season. Gilbert, a former California junior college standout, never played for New Mexico since he was ruled ineligible at the outbreak of the scandal.

Pirates, 'Hawks Split Victories

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — East Carolina handed North Carolina at Wilmington its fisrt summer league defeat Friday, with a final score of 4-1. But the Seahawks bounced back to take the second game of a doubleheader, 5-2.

Tim Whitehead sparked UNC-W with a single, double and two RBIs in the nightcap.

LOUISBURG, N.C. (AP) — First-baseman Matt Schibner knocked a three-run home run in the bottom of the first inning Friday to help Louisburg drub Campbell 11-4 in collegiate summer league action.

Schibner finished three for four with four RBIs. Chris Cubbage, brother of Minnesota Twins' infielder Mike Cubbage, was three for five with two RBIs. The younger Cubbage has been with the Hurricanes for just three games and has seven hits in 13 times at bat.

Louisburg's Steve Furman added a two-for-four effort with three RBIs, while Hans Herzog, now 2-1, picked up the victory, coming in on relief in the second inning.

Duran Gains Decision Over Leonard

MONTREAL (AP) — Roberto Duran's hands of stone beat a steady tatoo on Sugar Ray Leonard and carried the popular Panamanian to the World Boxing Council welterweight championship with a unanimous 15-round decision Friday night.

It was a marvelous, memorable bout that lived up to all of its expectation. But don't look for a rematch too soon.

Promoter Don King, who controls Duran's boxing fortunes, said that he would prefer to see his man fight Pipino Cuevas, the World Boxing Association champ, to unify the welterweight crown. Cuevas, however, has an Aug. 2 title date with unbeaten Tommy Hearns.

Duran and Leonard gave the record Olympic Stadium boxing crowd of 46,317 a tremendous show, slugging it out for 15 tough rounds. Both men fought brilliantly and they saluted each other after the gruelling, often brutal bout.

"He is the best I have fought," said Duran, who had said before the fight that he had no respect for Leonard. "He hit me hard a couple of times, but I was never in bad shape. He was pretty good, but he had to be because he was fighting me."

Leonard was humble in defeat.

"It was a very tough fight," he said. "I give Duran a lot of credit. It was one of the toughest fights of my career."

Duran set the tone for the fight at the very start, rushing Leonard, crowding the champion and never letting him use his two best weapons — his speed and reach.

"He had to slug with me," said Duran. "But I had to show I could box, too. A lot of people thought I was just a heavy puncher, but tonight, I was the boxer."

Leonard seemed perfectly willing to fight flat-footed and slug it out with Duran.

"I might have surprised some people with my tactics and strategy to take the so-called big punch," he said. "I had no choice. I fought the way I felt I could beat him. I did my best to hold on to my title and I have no regrets."

At first, it was announced as a majority decision with judges Harry Gibbs (145-144) and Raymond Baydelrou (146-144) voting for Duran and judge Angelo Potelli's card announced as a draw at 147-147. But about 30 minutes after the fight ended, it was announced that Potelli's card had been added wrong and that he had voted for Duran 148-147, giving the Panamanian the unanimous nod.

The Associated Press card was 144-141 for Duran.

The decision set off a wild demonstration by some 2,000 of his countrymen who had come here to see Duran become just the third man in boxing history to win both the lightweight and welterweight crowns. The others were Barney Ross and Henry Armstrong.

In the semifinal bout, Canadian heavyweight champion Trevor Berbick knocked out ex-WBA champ John Tate at 22 seconds of the ninth round. Earlier, Leonard's older brother Roger, scored 10-round decision over Clyde Gray. Eddie Melo and Fernand Marcotte fought a 10-round draw and Gaetan Hart knocked out Cleveland Dennis in the 10th round.

Dennis was removed from the ring on a stretcher and taken to a local hospital. Early Saturday morning, a spokesman for Maisonneuve Hospital said Dennis was unconscious and in critical condition. Doctors scheduled several tests this morning, including a brain scan.

Long 15 Rounds
Tired fighters Sugar Ray Leonard, left, and Roberto Duran battle for the WBC welterweight title Friday night in Montreal. Duran captured a unanimous decision in the fight, winning the title from Leonard. (AP Laserphoto)

The Leonard-Duran fight had all the earmarks of greatness, the kind of memorable fight that the lighter weight classes have not seen since the days of Sugar Ray Robinson and Rocky Graziano.

Asked what the difference between him and Leonard had been, Duran grinned and tapped his heart and his head.

"I was too slick for what he was doing," the new champion said.

"I just told the referee to let this guy fight," said Brown.

The Duran camp had been concerned about Padilla's tendency in other bouts to break the fighters quickly. They felt their man could score well inside and hoped te referee would let him do his work there.

Padilla did and and it helped Duran.

"I thought I won easily, convincingly," said Duran.

Leonard wasn't so sure.

"I felt he was ahead early," Sugar Ray said. 'But I came back late. I never felt he won the fight. There was a little wrestling, but there are no excuses. I went in a champion and I thought I came out a champion. But you have to go with the judge's decision."

Would Leonard want a rematch?

"Only time will tell," he said. "My main concern is my wife and her attitude. She comes first. If there is a rematch, I'll come back strong as ever."

In most championship fights, opponents open cautiously, feeling each other out. But Duran came out fast, lunging all over the ring after Leonard, often tying him up on the ropes and scoring effectively with body blows.

Leonard fought back in the middle rounds and frequently, the two fighters slugged it out, throwing caution to the wind.

"I hit Duran some tremendous shots," said Leonard. "body shots, uppercuts, right leads. I though I hurt him."

'Automatic' Victory Gets Away From Mets

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The New York Mets were one strike away from beating the Los Angeles Dodgers — but wound up beating themselves instead.

"When there are two outs in the ninth inning with nobody on base it's supposed to be 'automatic,'" said Mets Manager Joe Torre after watching his pitching staff turn a 3-2 lead into a 4-3 loss in the ninth inning.

There were two out and nobody on base when Jay Johnstone and Steve Garvey singled off Mets starter Pat Zachry. Jeff Reardon replaced Zachry at this point and worked the count to 3-2 on Dusty Baker before he lined a two-run double up the gap in left-center for the winning runs.

"That," said Torre, "was our toughest loss of the year."

"As soon as he hit it I knew it would score both runs," said Reardon. "I wanted to get the pitch to the outside of the plate. Instead, I threw it right over the plate."

Noted Baker, who has driven in 19 runs in June: "I knew I hit the ball well. I was trying to drive it to the big part of the park. You can't make it much closer than that."

In other National League games, San Francisco defeated Philadelphia 5-1; Chicago turned back Atlanta 4-2; St. Louis stopped Cincinnati 7-5; San Diego defeated Montreal 4-2 and Houston trimmed Pittsburgh 6-4.

The Mets scored three run in the first inning, when Lee Mazzilli opened with an infield single and stole second. Frank Taveras grounded to third baseman Ron Cey, who threw wildly to first, enabling Mazzilli to score and Taveras to go to third.

After Bob Welch walked Claudell Washington, John Stearns singled home Taveras, and two outs later, Elliott Maddox singled home Washington.

Giants 5, Phillies 1

Allen Ripley, 2-1, made his second start of the season and held the Phillies scoreless after the first inning. Ripley's only previous National League victory also was against the Phillies, in relief last week.

Cubs 4, Braves 2

Bruce Sutter pitched 22-3 innings of scoreless relief to save the game for Lynn McGlothen, 4-4. Tommy Boggs, 3-3, was the loser.

Cubs Manager Preston Gomez admitted he didn't want to bring Sutter in as early as he did but "He makes my job easier," said Gomez, whose Cubs have now won five of seven games.

Cardinals 7, Reds 5

Terry Kennedy rapped a pair of three-run homers to pace a 13-hit St. Louis attack that carried the Cardinals over Cincinnati.

Kim Seaman, 1-0, the second of three Cardinal relievers, picked up his first major league victory. Tom Hume, 3-7, was the loser.

Padres 4, Exos 2

Jerry Turner stole home and Willie Montanez tripled in a run to highlight a three-run fourth inning and provide Steve Mura with his first victory of the year as San Diego defeated Montreal.

Mura, 1-2, worked the first five innings but left after giving up consecutive singles to Ron LeFlore and Rodney Scott leading off the sixth. Bob Shirley gained his sixth save of the season for the Padres, pitching the last 12-3 innings.

Astros 6, Pirates 4

Ken Forsch and Joe Sambito combined on a seven-hitter and Rafael Landestoy deliverd a bases-loaded triple in the second inning to lead Houston over Pittsburgh.

Forsch, 8-5, helped the Astros win their 13th straight home game and the 14th game of their last 16 overall. Sambito gained his sixth save of the season after giving up a two-run single to Dave Parker in the ninth.

For Patek, Big Night; For Two, A Fight

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Fred Patek waited 13 years for a night like this, but for Al Cowens the year he waited to face Ed Farmer must have seemed like 20.

The result was a seven-game suspension for the Detroit Tigers' outfielder and possible criminal penalties.

In the top of the 11th inning of Friday night's Detroit-Chicago game, Cowens faced Farmer for the first time since May 8, 1979 when a pitch from the White Sox hurler, then with Texas, broke Cowens' jaw. The outfielder, with Kansas City at the time of his injury, saw no close pitches from Farmer Friday night. But when Cowens hit a grounder towards shortstop he headed straight for the mound instead of first base.

Farmer's nose was bloodied in the ensuing brawl — he said he was scratched by Cowens' fingernail — but when play resumed, a walk to Lance Parrish, a double by John Wockenfuss and a single by Champ Summers gave the Tigers a 5-3 victory.

After the game, Farmer lodged a criminal charge against Cowens and police went to the Tigers' clubhouse.

"Police tried to come in, but they'll never get in here," said Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson.

However, White Sox owner Bill Veeck said police were asked not to forcibly arrest Cowens after Veeck was assured by American League President Lee MacPhail that he would make Cowens would appear in court to face charges.

Veeck said: "MacPhail asked me not to drag him out bodily, so I asked him to make sure Cowens will show up on his own recognizance. Did you see the way he snuck off and ran down into the dugout after a couple of swings? He did not, as they say, stay to fight another day."

About two hours after the game ended, MacPhail issued an immediate seven-game suspension to Cowens and an "appropriate" fine.

Cowens refused comment except to say it was the first time he had seen Farmer since his jaw was broken.

Patek, who averaged only three homers for his first 12 years in the majors, hit three in one game Friday night. He also drove in seven runs as the defending American League West champion California Angels took out their season-long frustrations on the Boston Red Sox with a 20-2 victory.

Patek's three homers were among six in California's 26-hit assault of the Red Sox, who had won nine of 10 previous games. Carney Lansford, who had four RBI; Rick Miller and Jason Thompson also homered for the Angels, who broke a nine-game losing streak.

"I just hope it's the start of something good," said Patek. "No way we're the worst team (record wise) in baseball."

Patek, who now has four homers this season for a total of 40 in his career, added, "It's kind of hard to think that something like this can happen to someone like myself."

In other American League games, Seattle beat Baltimore 3-1, the New York Yankees bombed Oakland 15-7, Milwaukee outlasted Kansas City 10-5, Cleveland edged Minnesota 4-3 in 15 innings and Texas beat Toronto 5-2.

Yankees 15, A's 7

Reggie Jackson hit a two-run homer and Jim Spencer and Johnny Oates also homered as New York beat its old manager, Billy Martin, for the fourth time in five games this season. The game was Martin's first appearance in a New York game since he was fired last year.

Jackson, who has four homers and 10 RBI in those games, hit his 17th homer of the season, while Spencer included a three-run shot among his five RBI. Oates' homer was his first since 1977, while Dave Revering connected for the A's.

Mariners 3, Orioles 1

Ted Cox clouted a threee-run homer with one out in the ninth inning to bail out Floyd Bannister, who has been burdened with poor support all season. Bannister allowed only three hits but he appeared to be the loser going into the last inning with Jim Palmer pitching a shutout for Baltimore, which got its only run in the second inning on Benny Ayala's homer.

The victory snapped a five-game losing streak for the Mariners and a five-game winning streak for the Orioles.

Brewers 10, Royals 5

Dick Davis knocked in four runs, three of them with a bases-clearing double in a five-run seventh inning, as Milwaukee bombed error-plagued Kansas City.

Willie Aikens, whose error in the second inning led to a Milwaukee run, botched a sacrifice bunt attempt to help the Brewers load the bases against loser Dennis Leonard, 7-6. After Davis lined his double down the left field line to score three runners, Sixto Lezcano singled home Davis and the final run of the inning came in on Darrell Porter's throwing error.

Rangers 5, Blue Jays 2

Ferguson Jenkins pitched a five-hitter and passed Cy Young on the all-time major league strikeout list, while Dave Roberts hit a two-run homer to carry Texas over Toronto.

Jenkins, 5-5, struck out five Blue Jays to run his to tally to 2,824 and eighth place on the all-time list.

Indians 4, Twins 3

Alexander led off the 15th with a walk against reliever Pete Redfern, 6-4, and Harrah followed with a soft line drive that Morales couldn't reach. The ball trickled down the right field line, allowing Alexander to score.

Victor Cruz, 4-3, pitched five innings of one-hit relief to get the victory.

HANDLES HOT STUFF

HOUSTON (AP) — Catcher Alan Ashby of the Houston Astros has to handle the 100 mph pitches of the two hard-throwing righthanders on his staff, Nolan Ryan and J.R. Richard. Ashby says that while both go with the hard one most of the time, their styles are different.

"Nolan's fast ball has a tendency to rise sharply and move a little more against the hitter than J.R.'s," Ashby said. "In other words you're up and reaching more when you catch Ryan.

Three Base Hit

Little League

Coca-Cola 5, Lions 4

Coca-Cola kept its fading hopes for a North State Little League title alive Friday with a 5-4 victory over the Lions. Coke is now 10-4 with one game left to play, and the Lions are 4-10.

The Lions scored first, getting three runs in the first, as Michael Duncan hit a three-run homer.

But Coke came back to score all five of its runs in the bottom of the second. Timmy Wood opened the frame when he was hit by a pitch, and Eddie White reached on an error, then stole second. George Saad brought both runners home with a double, then moved to third on a passed ball. With one down, Earl Hines singled, scoring Saad, and a passed ball and a wild pitch moved him to third. Mike Sasser reached on an error, bringing in Hines. James Mathews doubled, and an error allowed Sasser to score the final run for Coke.

First Federal 7, Wellcome 0

First Federal, which has already wrapped up the Tar Heel Little League title, gained a 7-0 victory over Wellcome on Friday. First Federal is now 12-2 on the year, while Wellcome is 7-7. Both teams have one game left to play.

First Federal got all it needed in the first inning, scoring once. Ervin Best walked and stole second and third. He scored when Brian Joyner doubled.

First Federal then added two each in the third, fifth and sixth.

Ricky Outlaw hurled the victory, giving up only one hit, a leadoff single to Terry Warren. After that, he struck out 15 of the next 20 he faced, allowing only two more baserunners, one each on a walk and a hit batsman.

Ervin Best was the lone hitter for First Federal with two hits.

Sr. Babe Ruth League

Greene Co. 1, Winterville 0

SNOW HILL — Greene County pushed over a run in the bottom of the seventh inning to nip Winterville, 1-0, Friday night in Senior Babe Ruth League action.

The run came after two were out, breaking up a pitching duel between Greene's Warren and Winterville's Jeff Allen. Warren allowed just three hits, while Allen gave up four.

Jays Seek Some Wins

The Blue Jays, Greenville's entry in the Coastal Plain's Semipro Baseball league, lost twice this past weekend to second place Statonburg but will attempt to rebound this Sunday when they travel to winless Princeton for a doubleheader.

Greenville, now 2-12 in the league and 11 games behind Pinkney, dropped 10-7 and 12-3 games to Stantonburg last weekend. Jim Dobbin got the first loss in relief and also was tagged with the second-game loss.

Lassiter had a home run in both games and had three hits in the second, as did Phillips and Daniels.

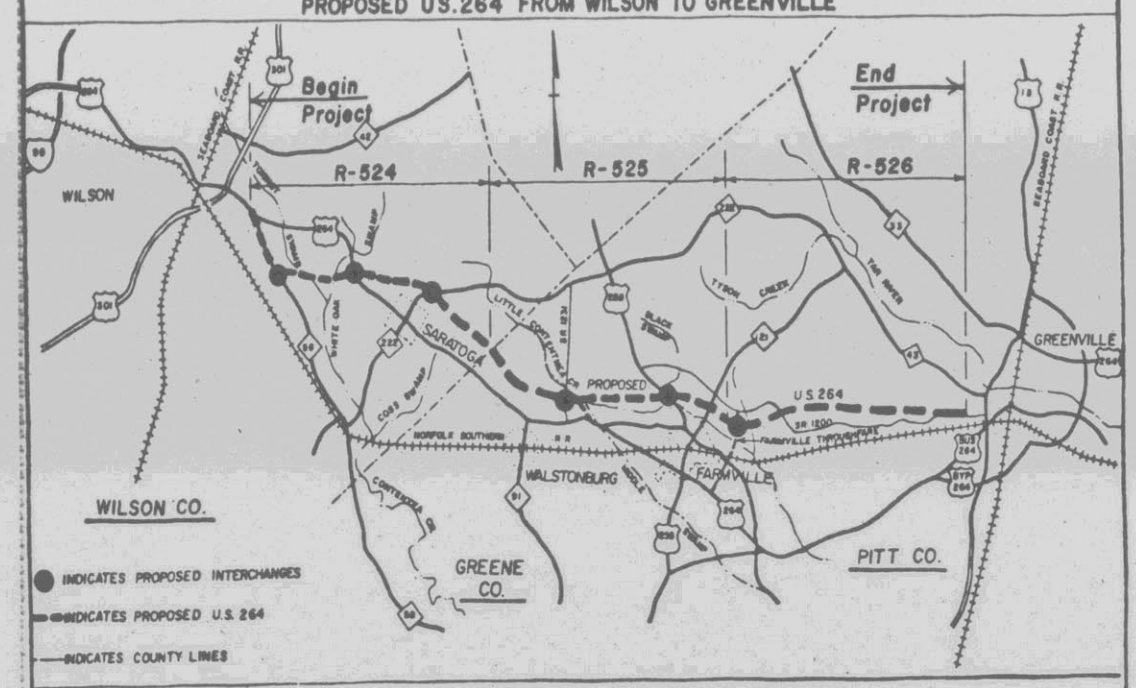
PROPOSED US.264 FROM WILSON TO GREENVILLE



NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARINGS ON THE PROPOSED DESIGN FOR US 264 FROM WISON TO GREENVILLE

Projects R-524, R-525, R-526 Wilson, Greene, Pitt Counties

The NC Department of Transportation will hold a series of three (3) public hearings on the above projects as follows:

(1) July 22, 1980 at 7:30 PM in the Beddingfield High School located on Old Statonsburg Road;
(2) July 23, 1980 at 7:30 PM in the Farmville High School;
(3) July 24, 1980 at 7:30 PM in the Wellcome Middle School located on NC 11 & 13 North of Greenville;

Each hearing will consist of an explanation of the proposed design, right of way requirements and procedures, relocation advisory assistance and State-Federal Relationship. The hearings will be open to those present for statements, questions, comments and/or submittal of material pertaining to the proposed design. Additional material may be submitted for a period of ten days from the date of the hearing to Mr. George E. Wells, P.E., Manager of Highway Design, NC Department of Transportation, P. O. Box 25201, Raleigh, NC 27611.

The proposed design is for a four lane divided roadway with a 46' median from NC 58 near Wilson to SR 1200 near Greenville. Approximately 2.3 miles of NC 58 will be four laned from the existing intersection with US 264 to the beginning of the new location. The right of way will be variable to contain the construction and will be full control of access. Access will be at interchanges only.

Maps setting forth the proposed design and copies of the Final Environmental Impact Statement are available for public review at the NC Department of Transportation Div.Offices in Greenville & Wilson and the Farmville Town Hall. If additional information on the public hearings is desired or if you want to pre-register to speak contact W. A. Garrett, Jr.,Public Hearing Officer, NC Department of Transportation, P. O. Box 25201, Raleigh NC 27611 or telephone 919-733-3244.

Abandoned Cuban Refugees Find Shelter In Football Stadium

MIAMI (AP) — Munching hamburgers and sipping sodas, about 800 Cuban refugees have found shelter in the Orange Bowl, home of the Miami Dolphins football team, after roaming the city without food and sleeping in the streets.

As many as 1,000 of the more than 114,000 "Freedom Flotilla" refugees who arrived at Key West, Fla., in the last two months are homeless, officials estimate.

"I had never met my (American) relatives and I made it clear to them that I would make a life for myself in Miami," said Quinones, who arrived here June 1 from a resettlement center at Fort Chaffee, Ark.

"I slept wherever I was when it was dark," he said. "I've spent two days without food because I don't like to beg and I will not steal. All I want is work."

The Miami City Commission, angry at what it said was federal slowness in caring for the refugees and concerned about the city's reputation, voted to open the stadium Thursday. The commission also voted to match $30,000 raised privately to feed the refugees.

Friday night, the fare was hamburgers donated by area fast-food chains. Merchants from the nearby Little Havana community have also donated traditional Cuban meals of rice, beans, chicken and pork.

Several hundred refugees slept in cots beneath stadium bleachers. Others stayed in Army-style huts erected just outside the main entrance.

"The only deadline we have (to move the refugees out) is the Dolphins' first exhibition game Aug. 15," said Assistant City Manager Cesar Odio.

Although nobody at this point is saying how many Cubans the city is willing to house in the Orange Bowl, the open-door policy has begun to draw some refugees from beyond Miami.

"For one month I had been living with friends in Orlando, (Fla.)," said Inocencio Gordillo, 76. "But then three days ago my friend's mother and sisters arrived from Cuba and now there's 14 persons in a two-bedroom house. I'm very grateful but they have no place for me."

Sonia Rodriquez said she is right back where she started. After she and her family of six arrived at Key West, they were taken to a temporary processing center at the Orange Bowl.

A family friend took them into his Miami home, but when the sponsor's own relatives arrived, Mrs. Rodriquez said she and her family were forced to sleep in the backyard.

"They tell me I won't be able to find a house or a job here, so we are thinking of moving up north," she said. "We came to this free country with nothing, so we can start again anywhere."

In Washington, meanwhile, the Carter administration announced Friday that refugees from Cuba and Haiti will be allowed to remain in the United States under a six-month "parole" while legislation is drafted establishing their legal status. Under the plan, the refugees will be eligible for limited medical and welfare assistance.

The proposal applies only to refugees who arrived by Thursday, U.S. Refugee Coordinator Victor Palmieri said. At Key West, two vessels carrying 79 Cubans docked late Friday, bringing the total to 114,331.

HOMELESS AND BROKE — The faces of a Cuban refugee family reflect their predictament after they lost their sponsors and ended up destitute on the streets of Miami. Hundreds of these unlucky Cuban refugees are being housed on cots in the deserted Orange Bowl as officials try to find them work and housing in Miami. (AP Laserphoto)

Lack Of Desire Complaint

NEW YORK (UPI) — The No. 1 sexual complaint among couples is a lack of desire, according to a survey of 115 cases of patients with sexual problems reported in the June issue of Family Health magazine.

However, Dr. Harold Lief, professor of psychiatry of the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine who monitored the patients, says the results do not make clear whether "lack of desire is increasing or not."

"Doctors are more aware of it than in the past," said Dr. Lief. "Yet we can't be certain whether our awareness is just uncovering more cases that always existed."

Finds Torpedoes In Sunken Submarine

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Navy divers have located at least eight torpedoes, some armed with explosive devices, inside a sunken German submarine off the North Carolina coast.

Navy spokesman Petty Officer 1st Class Jerry Minser said Friday that divers were continuing their search of the U-352 to determine what should be done about potential dangers at the site.

The U-352, which was sunk by a U.S. Coast Guard ship in 1942, lies under about 120 feet of water and is about 26 miles from Beaufort. It is a popular site for sport divers.

The vessel is believed to have fired seven of its 14 torpedoes before it sank with 11 crew members aboard.

The diving project was started May 28, but it has been delayed by rough seas.

So far the divers have not found human remains.

Wanchese Park Completion Forecasted

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — Construction of a $6 million state seafood industrial park at Wanchese — the first of its kind in the South Atlantic coastal states — should be completed by Christmas.

During a tour Friday, the North Carolina Seafood Industrial Park Authority learned that 30 acres of land at the park will be ready for leasing by September, with total construction to be completed by Christmas.

"I'm confident that the leases will be grabbed up right away," said Robert Williams, executive director of the park. "I'm receiving several calls each day. Many callers didn't know we were so far along."

Among the types of actvities expected at the park are seafood processing plants, freezer and cold storage and fishing vessel repair.

Under Investigation For Prostitution

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A motel that has been the object of a federal investigation into interstate prostitution was padlocked Friday by the Davidson County Sheriff's Department.

The Trucker's Motel west of Lexington was shut down as a public nuisance after a temporary restraining order was issued by Superior Court Judge Peter Hairston.

District Attorney H.W. Zimmerman said in a complaint filed with the court that the motel has been used for "unwholesome and demoralizing conduct ..., usage, possession and sale of dangerous narcotic drugs ... assignation and prostitution."

Willie Dean Gibson of Winston-Salem, listed as owner of the motel; his wife, Brenda; and Kenneth R. Justice of Linwood, said to be manager or acting manager of the motel, were named in the complaint.

Zimmerman's complaint cited evidence gathered by the FBI as support for his claim that the motel is a public nuisance.

Exotic Creatures In Outer Space?

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronauts someday may encounter dangerous and exotic creatures in outer space, but U.S. space teams have a more immediate problem: coping with "Fat Albert."

He's a 13-foot, 9-inch alligator discovered Friday basking in a pond near the Kennedy Space Center as frogmen were carrying out a mock space shuttle rescue mission.

The shuttle, which officials hope to launch sometime next year, has airplane-like wings intended to allow it to glide to a landing on its return to Earth. But if it misses its 15,000-foot landing strip or aborts a takeoff, it would end up in a Banana River lagoon or Fat Albert's nearby pond.

Rather than wrestling with the gator, officials delayed the "rescue" operation while Florida Game and Freshwater Commission wardens were called in to capture and temporarily move the gator.

Art Missing From De Young Museum

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — An audit has disclosed the disappearance of 11,050 art objects, valued at more than 2 million, from San Francisco's De Young Museum and Legion of Honor.

Harvey Rose, analyst for the city's Board of Supervisors, said Thursday the value of the pieces — stolen or misplaced — was set by Butterfield & Butterfield, an appraisal and auctioneering firm.

Among the most expensive missing objects was "Entrance to Marseilles Harbor," a painting by William Thoeny. Another missing painting was "Portrait of Lady Hamilton" by Gilbert Stuart.

Rose blamed an inadquate security system for the museums. He added that the Fine Arts museum had never conducted an inventory of its collection.

He said steps have been taken to improve the situation at the two facilities.

"But no matter how comprehensive the security system," he said, "inadequate inventory control over the collections will continue to result in misplaced art objects."

Simple Life Of River Is A Shelter

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

The life of a riverman, romanticized in Mark Twain's famous tales a century ago, is attracting a growing number of workers. For about 85,000 Americans it's a refuge from an accelerated age.

Rivermen lead simple lives, sheltered by nature from the elements of man. Miles of winding river are cut off from the outside world by rows of willow trees or steep, gray bluffs reaching into the sky.

At the same slow pace of their journey on the river, they speak of peace and quiet, of escape from crowds and crime.

"It's just you and the river," said David Blackwell, a first mate on the towboat Joe Pat Eckstein. "It gets in your blood, this life."

The Joe Pat, as it's called by its crew, was pushing a convoy of dry cargo barges down the lower Mississippi River past the historic riverside communities from St. Louis to New Orleans.

There is an unusual sense of isolation, of quiet solitude and peaceful stillness on the river that strikes a romantic chord in many rivermen.

Rivermen lead neatly portioned lives: six hours on duty, six hours off, seven days a week. It's a life of little glamour, yet rivermen say it's a final frontier in American labor.

The Joe Pat's captain, Frank Van Wagner, has been a riverboat pilot for 38 years, all but 34 as a captain. A taciturn Texan, his fascination with rivers began when he was a child in southeast Kansas. "I used to watch the houses float down the Verdigris River in a flood and I would hear there were boats bigger than those houses," he said. "That got me started."

At 52, he has no intention of stopping.

"Out here I don't have to spend two hours driving back and forth to work — it's here with me," he said.

With his cowboy boots, blue jeans, sport shirt, wire-rimmed glasses and gold neck chain, Van Wagner looks as if he were entertaining friends at a backyard barbecue — hardly the folklore image of a riverboat pilot.

"Most people who aren't acquainted with the river think we're a bunch of thugs and pirates," Van Wagner said. "They figure we go up and down the river, go ashore whenever we want and get drunk and spend all our money."

That scenario is a far cry from reality, of course, but there is a reason such myths might exist. River work is far removed from the rest of the laboring world; it's devoid of white collar pressures, ringing telephones, public protests, office politics and production quotas.

Yet there remains in the minds of many a certain mysticism about rivermen, they who are tucked away on the country's 25,000 miles of inland waterways, rarely seen and never heard.

"You don't have the pressures of what's happening in the rest of the world. You're alone out here, away from it all," he said.

Resnick was one of four deckhands on the Joe Pat, a snub-nosed, squat towboat of the Marquette Transportation Co. of Cassville, Wis., as it made its way down the granddaddy of American rivers. Its 5,600-horsepower engines can push a load of barges up to 250 miles a day in the open water of the lower Mississippi.

Deckhands are the lowest ranking workers on a towboat. Their main responsibility is to tie and untie barges during port stops, a laborious and sometimes dangerous task. On the Joe Pat, which runs 24 hours a day, 365 days a year, deckhands are also expected to sweep, mop and scrub the boat's galley, stairs and pilothouse.

The work is strenuous but the pay is attractive. Starting salary for a deckhand averages about $1,500 per month while they are on the river.

Hen Is Gone To The Dogs

MILFORD, Del. (AP) — Mabel Savage's chicken has gone to the dogs. For the last four weeks, the unnamed hen has been roosting atop seven squirming mongrel puppies, leaving only when their canine mother chases her away.

"Something awful funny has been going on in there. It's just not natural," said Mrs. Savage, who has to chase the hen away two or three times a day so that Suzie, the puppies' real mother, can nurse her offspring.

"When the chicken leaves, the pups start crying and it just makes me feel awful. But I've got to do it. I can't let them starve to death."

The hen began sitting under the rickety doghouse shortly after the puppies were born, although she laid no eggs there. When one of the pups fell through a hole in the doghouse, the hen perched on it "and from that point on, they were one big family."

Suzie registered some early protests, but the hen persevered. When the dog returns to feed her pups, the hen raises a ruckus. "When she's in a nasty mood, she'll start pecking. Suzie doesn't like that a whole lot. It's gotten to the point now where she doesn't even want to go in there anymore, and I just can't blame her," Mrs. Savage said.

Ask Churches Help Refugees

NEW YORK (AP) — Church World Service,, the international relief arm of the National Council of Churches, has appealed to its 32 member denominations for emergency funds of $100,000 and also more offers of sponsorships to resettle Cuban and Haitian refugees.

So far, few congregations have offered such sponsorships, the agency said, adding that one reason may be that most of the Cubans are single men rather than families.

Bar Promoting 'Passion Play'

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. armed forces in West Germany have been ordered to "cease immediately" all promotion of the Oberammergau Passion Play because of its "sectarian nature" and "anti-Semetic tone," reports the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

It says the Defense Department directed the order at the Armed Forces Recreation Center in West Germany which previously had been arranging tours to the controversial pageant.

Sees American Strength Waning

By SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the days following the missile crisis of 1962, two men, one American, the other Russian, were negotiating the details of the withdrawal of Soviet weapons from Cuba.

In an informal moment, out of the earshot of others or the reach of hidden microphones, they were sitting on a fence at a Connecticut farm house and talking. It was a moment for candor, and Vasily Kuznetsov of the Soviet Union said to John McCloy of the United States:

"All right, Mr. McCloy, we withdraw the bombers, just as we've withdrawn the missiles, but I want to tell you something. This is the last time the United States is going to be able to act like this towards the Soviet Union."

A few years later, McCloy told the story to President Johnson. The third man in the room was Richard C. Helms, then director of American Central Intelligence and head of the CIA. Now retired from government service, Helms tells the story to illustrate what he regards as the central fact of danger in the world today: the relative decline of American military power.

He questions whether the United States could now force the Russians to turn back their missile-carrying ships as it did in that fearful high noon of 1962. They turned back then, he says, because the United States was first in nuclear missilery and conventional military equipment, and they knew it and we knew it.

"But now that the Russians have a very large strategic force, the shoe may be on the other foot ... President Carter said he's going to see to it that the Russians don't take over the Persian Gulf, where our oil lifeline is attached. But I don't know what he's going to protect the Persian Gulf with."

Helms is quick to point out that he is "not entirely up to date on what the United States has and what the Soviet Union has." He says he has no continuing connection with the CIA (which he left in 1972), that his information these days comes from newspapers and "some friends around town."

One assumes that a man who worked in intelligence 25 years and headed it for six and also served as U.S. ambassador to Iran for five years has well-informed "friends" here and abroad. He says little about his CIA work but he projects the special, tight-lipped area of a man who has been on the inside, who has seen the figures that could mean Armageddon, who has been involved in much of his country's high strategy and many of the moves and countermoves, the plots and counterplots of the Cold War.

Helms does not go public often but in a recent interview he spoke passionately about the American condition at home and abroad, the decline of strong leadership in the White House, a society fragmented by vested interests, about "false prophets" in government and industry, the weakened state of the CIA and the aborted rescue of the hostages in Iran.

The rescue, if tried at all, should have come in the first month of their captivity, he says, when much of the world was outraged, "when most governments would have understood our efforts to get them back, when even the Russians were saying it was terrible to take diplomats as hostages."

In the ensuing weeks and months, he says, we should not have made the hostages the prime preoccupation of our foreign policy every day at the White House and State Department and every night on television.

"We gave the Iranians an opportunity to bargain with us, to denigrate and humiliate and deceive us. We gave them a tool to beat us with."

"It seems to me the better way — it's hard to say but I don't know another way to say it — would have been to seem to turn our backs on the hostages, to regard them as prisoners of war and simply left them with no value to the Iranians. If they had no value, I think the Iranians eventually would've come up with some device for letting them go."

As an example, the former CIA chief recalled the seizure of the Pueblo and its men off North Korea in 1968. "They sort of faded in the background but the government never forgot them. It continued to see what it could do quietly and finally a device was found and they were let loose and that was that. By hyping the hostage situation in Iran, we insured they'd be kept a long time."

Helms thinks the rescue attempt, while risky, might have worked, might have freed "a lot of the hostages," but some people probably were going to get killed. In such matters, said the man who specialized in clandestine operations, "you can't believe in the Immaculate Conception."

Richard McGarrah Helms is now 67, fit, tall, thin, carefully groomed, carefully controlled, a polite man who invites neither small talk nor knowing him. Master spies in fiction are frequently brooding men suffering from bad memories. This one seems content with his past and his principles. Others are not. They see him as a man of shadows and controversy, who lied to Congress.

He runs a one-man consulting firm in which he advises American companies on business prospects in the Persian Gulf area. Casting about for a name, he didn't think "Helms Associates" sounded particularly good. He called it the Safeer Co., using the Arabic and Persian word for ambassador.

On the broader scale of his concerns, Helms sees the 1980s as a time when the Soviet Union will be stronger than the United States in nuclear and conventional weapons.

"And that is a period of danger, at least to those of us who have spent our lives at this and understand that that kind of primacy can be translated into aggression, movement, takeovers of countries."

No diplomacy, he says, "is worth anything unless it's backed up by military power." The United States, he says, must rearm to give the Russians reason to pause and American allies reason to feel protected.

Unless it is backed up by superior power, he says, Carter's threat to protect the Persian Gulf with force is "worthless because in this day and age countries know what other countries have, at least in gross numbers. And they're not about to believe something that doesn't exist.

"This is the time for leadership in the real sense of the word. I don't mean the kind of thing we've had recently of leading by following, finding out what the people want through a poll and giving it to them. ... I mean leadership of concepts, of ideas, of directions, of things we should be doing.

"We're bickering with each other. We are loaded with special pleaders. ... We are dividing into bits and pieces and taking our eye off the main thing, which is our survival as the kind of society the world envies, admires and respects. Instead, we're wallowing. We seem to have no rudder.

"We've had a bunch of false prophets in this country. The people who tell us that if we don't rearm, the Russians won't. The people who tells us that if we're soft and nice and decent the Third World will love us. The people who say we can continue to ride around in big cars because there's going to be plenty of gasoline forever."

Helms thinks President Carter's human rights crusade is "ham-handed," futile and wrong because "we can't run our own affairs so why should we be telling other how to run theirs?"

"I think the best way to influence others is by example. I think you should shine up the Statue of Liberty once in a while. But you don't go around telling people if you don't do such and such we won't do this for you."

But in the days that he ran the CIA, didn't the United States try more of that? Wasn't it trying to be policeman to the world?

"That's different. That is attempting to handle events in the world so they are favorable to us rather than the Soviets. I still think that's a good idea. I think that if we don't fight for our side we're not going to have any side to fight for."

Accordingly, he hopes American intelligence revives covert action abroad. "It's a useful tool. We should have it in our armory. It would help us in the control and shaping of certain events, with a little influence, a little money, a little of this and that."

"A little of this and that" is what has troubled some members of Congress, who have tried, so far futilely, to write a charter that would keep CIA operations within proper legal limits without emasculating the agency. In the great uproar over the CIA in 1975, many of the "abuses" laid at its door were said to have occurred during Richard Helms' tenure.

In 1973, he told a Senate committee that the CIA had made no attempt to influence the Chilean elections of 1970. In 1975, it was disclosed that the CIA had supplied the opponents of Salvador Allende with $8 million. In 1977, Helms pleaded no contest, was fined $2,000 and given a suspended prison sentence for failing to testify fully and accurately. He said he couldn't because of his CIA oath. He has since said he would do the same thing again if the "national security" required.

Helms thinks a detailed charter would hamstring the CIA. He thinks, instead, the skeletal act of 1947 which established it should be amended "as necessary." Beyond that, he thinks we should rely on the president of the United States to keep the agency within bounds. "You've got to trust somebody in your government. If you don't, what kind of government have you got?"

Middle-Aged Susceptibility

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — You're most susceptible to recession blues if you're middle-aged, says Emily Hardy, a staff psychologist in the University of Iowa Counseling Service.

Studies conducted following earlier recessions found that the increase in admissions to mental hospitals that accompanied a falling economy was most noticeable among people in their middle years, she says.

"This may occur for several reasons," Ms. Hardy explains. "If you're middle-aged, you're probably the breadwinner for a family, and your job may be threatened by rising unemployment. You're near the peak of your career and afraid that if you don't make it to the top now, you never will.

"You're still responsible for maintaining a roof over your children's heads, but you may also need to supply both economic and emotional support for aging parents," she adds.

How can you keep worries about making ends meet from overwhelming you?

First, reassess what is really important in your life, advises Ms. Hardy. This should put an end to the notion that having to repair the old car instead of buying a new one would be a disaster; that having to encourage teen-agers to get part-time jobs would blight their "carefree youth"; that having to give up the second (or third) TV set in the family would crumble family harmony.

Ms. Hardy believes people may have turned to "things" to fill major gaps in their lives. "You may buy more gadgets for the house or clothes you don't need because you feel bored or frustrated," she points out.

Your job worries shouldn't loom so large once you're able to tighten your belt when you need to, Ms. Hardy explains.

Pollen Comes To Dry Arizona

COUNTING POLLEN . . . Harry Hayes prepares to remove a sample strip from a pollen-counting device in Tucson. Hayes has conducted the pollen count daily fro 30 years for the Tucson Clinic, and he says Tucson's pollen problem has grown steadily worse. Hayes says it is due to people brining in non-native vegetation to make their surroundings look like back home. (AP Laserphoto)

By MICHAEL A. CHIHAK
Associated Press Writer

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — If you're tired of sneezing and wheezing, and you're thinking of leaving Brooklyn or Milwaukee or Pittsburgh for the much-advertised dry, healthy climate of Tucson, consider this: All those places have lower pollen counts than Tucson.

An allergy specialist says Tucson's annual pollen count is about 7,000 grains per square inch. In Brooklyn, Milwaukee and Pittsburgh, the count is about 4,000 grains.

"Tucson now has as much pollen during the year as many cities in the East and Midwest, cities many allergy sufferers have fled to escape allergy problems," said Dr. Jacob Pinnas, who heads the allergy clinic at the University of Arizona Health Sciences Center.

The irony of the situation is that most of the pollen problem here is caused by vegetation that was brought from other places to make the desert look green.

"The amount of pollen has increased tremendously from when we first started doing pollen counts," said Harry Hayes, who is in charge of the pollen count at the Tucson Clinic, a medical center.

"And it's due to the fact that people moving here from different parts of the country find it expedient to make their yards look like back home," Hayes said.

Tucson, with its low humidity and year-round warmth, has been praised as the place to help clear lungs and dry out sinuses. One 1960s television commercial advertised a nasal spray as the equivalent of "sending your sinuses to Arizona."

In the narrative for a slide-and-tape presentation he recently put together on Tucson's pollen problem, Pinnas said 90 percent of the area's adult population came from elsewhere.

"And up to half moved here for health reasons, primarily for respiratory disorders such as bronchial asthma and hay fever," he said.

But he said many are finding little relief because of an abundance of exotic and imported vegetation, such as mulberry and olive trees and Bermuda grass. Those are three of the largest contributors to Tucson's airborne pollen problem.

"Back 20 to 30 years ago, people who came here for their health found considerable relief," Hayes said. "But now as they grow older, they have found a greater sensibility to pollens."

Pinnas said: "Some people come here for a trial for a few weeks. They are not allergic to our pollen, but they become sensitized.

Many people are helped by Tucson's climate, Pinnas said. Advantages include fewer molds, which can aggravate some allergies, and a lack of mites in common house dust, a major problem in other places.

But he said the pollen problem is not abating. "I think it's probably getting worse," Pinnas said. "There's an increase in Bermuda grass, an increase in weeds, an increase in olive and mulberry trees. And there are new things being used in landscaping to cut water use....It's hard to predict what effect they will have in the future."

Hayes and Pinnas said change could be a long time coming. They said people must be told of the pollen problems that a lot of vegetation causes, and they must be encouraged to use plants that emit little pollen.

The best thing is to use native vegetation, especially cactus and palo verde trees, Hayes and Pinnas said. Citrus trees and other types of vegetation that produce colorful flowers also emit little pollen since they are pollinated by insects, birds and bats instead of the wind.

"There's not an easy answer," Pinnas said. "We can legislate against the planting of mulberry trees....But many people are non-allergic, and they can't see a reason for having to get rid of their pollen-producing trees and vegetation."

PLAN YOUR HOME

The Shanton

Circular Living Area Focus On Plan

By Jerry Bishop

Carefully planned informality that takes in a circular liing area skirted by a wood deck succeeds in the Shanton, a livable three bedroom home. With a natural flow of space from work to play areas, the design allows minimum restriction between dining, living, and kitchen areas and promotes a relaxed style of living.

An entry, only slightly defined, offers a coat closet at right and flows easily to the airy living area, which spans some 33 ft. Central and striking, the wood-burning fireplace warms the entire area, including the 14-ft. dining are at left.

Sliding glass doors on two sides join indoors and outdoors and allow the use of the wood deck for dining, parties, sunbathing, and general relaxation.

Work areas are well-treated in this plan. Instead of completely closing off the kitchen, the design attempts to blend work and play with an angular kitchen/dining area. The food preparation area is compact but adequate, with an entry to the double garage for convenience. The closeted laundry room off the kitchen is another stepsaver.

Nestled in the right wing of the plan, the bedrooms are comfortable and well-closeted. Furnished with a luxurious private bath, the master bedroom shows more than 17 ft. of length and ample wall space for furniture arranging.

Ideal Life Style: A Bit Of Suburbia In The City

By CORINNE DEUTCH

BALTIMORE (AP) — For many working couples, the ability to achieve the benefits of suburbia within the heart of a large urban center creates an ideal life style.

A Chinese couple has refined this way of life to a high degree. Five minutes by car — a bit longer on foot when the weather is good — and they are on the campus of Johns Hopkins University, where both are professors.

Ru-chih and P. C. Huang (he prefers to be called by the initials) live in a striking 12-room white stucco house on a three-quarter-acre lot. The house, shaped like a square "U" and with an inner courtyard dominated by a large mulberry tree, was the intriguing creation of a French architect in 1947 and has the feel of a Mediterranean villa. A flagstone walk is flanked by tall shrubbery. The courtyard is bounded on one side by a loggia that is perfect for entertaining in the summer months, with three beautiful brass lanterns covering the loggia lights.

The impression of tastefulness is carried through to the inside. An arched doorway opens into a spacious marble-floored foyer highlighted by a two-story skylight and balcony. To the immediate right of the foyer is a staircase leading to that balcony and the upstairs bedrooms. Six steps down are the first-floor rooms. The living room, to the left, forms a rough rectangle, with the wall at one end in a bowed effect. A large fireplace, built-in bookcases and French doors provide an appropriate background for the overall appearance of refinement.

In the 26-foot by 20-foot living room, the furniture shows a mixture of discernment and enterprise. Chinese antiques, including a Sung Dynasty finger bowl more than 1,000 years old and furnishings of rare woods and fabrics, are comfortable neighbors with slip-covered couches purchased in thrift shops. Books abound, with many on Oriental art, some on modern art, and a handsomely bound set of antique volumes on herb medicine.

A marble fireplace and a large bay window are focal points in the dining room. To the side is a book-lined card room often used for informal dining. All the requirements for efficient cooking are in the eat-in kitchen, remodeled in 1979, five years after the Huangs purchased the house.

Between the kitchen and the dining room is a vanishing treasure — a pantry large enough to have shelves and drawers on one side and a sink on the other. What used to be a "maid's room" and two bathrooms complete the first floor.

There are six rooms upstairs, three of them bedrooms and three what might be called study-bedrooms. Two of the former are occupied by the couple's teenage children, a boy and a girl, when they are home from their universities. The other second-floor rooms are in almost continuous use by visiting students, relatives and colleagues. Guests, Dr. Huang smilingly pointed out, are expected to make their own beds. A second staircase permits a door in the hallway to close off this area for privacy. Porthole-type windows are on the side of the hall that faces the courtyard.

Dr. Huang has skillfully blended the role of traditional Chinese housewife with her career as head of a biology department. Despite frequent professional trips, both domestic and foreign, she has no outside household help. A gourmet cook of her native dishes, she entertains a constant stream of visitors, many of them dignitaries in the educational and scientific field. Delectables, such as Peking duck, are always in order. And the vegetables are likely to have come from the garden cultivated by this former resident of Nanking, where she lived in equally high style. Her father was a college president.

P. C., on the medical staff of Johns Hopkins, does the yardwork, which he said enabled him to combine exercise with thought. "In the two to three hours it takes me to mow the lawn (he uses a hand mower), I can get in a lot of thinking."

In the heart of a big city, the Huangs have found a way to produce an atmosphere of serenity and graciousness.

Sees Space Structures

NEW YORK (UPI) — Large man-made structures put together in outer space for many purposes will be the "mark of the next century" in space, according to Robert P. Hotz, former publisher of Aviation Week magazine.

In a recent address to the annual meeting of the Wings club of air and space executives, Hotz said in the feature address that "it will take us until the end of the century to get there but...the technology is already developing."

"Grumman has developed a space beam manufacturing machine that can transport concentrated payloads of aluminum aboard the shuttle and extrude them into triangular pre-sized beams in space where they can be welded by either astronauts or automatic welding devices into large space structures," Hotz said.

"Half a dozen aerospace companies are already designing large space structures for various purposes," he said.

Hotz forecast that these structures "will open the way to new capabilities achieveable in weightlessness that will revolutionize such fields as metallurgy, electronics, chemistry and medicine, and others we can't yet imagine."

Among the structures, he predicted, will be "manufacturing facilities, specialized medical facilities, large antenna farms, solar energy power stations, and scientific facilities beyond the possibilities on earth."

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I read recently that many ceiling tiles are made from wood fibers, especially those sold for do-it-yourself installation. Doesn't this make them susceptible to fire?

A. — No more so than any other building material made from wood in one form or another. Many such tiles are treated for fire resistance. Other ceiling tiles are made of fireproof materials.

Q. — Why do we seem to have so much more condensation in our basement than in the upstairs rooms? Everything downstairs gets wet during hot, humid weather.

A. — Condensation forms when warm, moist air hits cool surfaces. Since your basement undoubtedly is cooler than the rooms above it, there is more likelihood of condensation. Cold water pipes are the most likely targets. There are various types of wrap-around insulation that can be used to cover the pipes and prevent the condensation. A dehumidifier can be used if the problem is severe. How do you prevent the trouble in the first place? Remember the principle that it is the combination of warm, moist air and cold surfaces causing the condensation. If you keep out the warm, moist air or warm the cold surfaces, the combination won't be present and neither will the condensation.

Q. — Every time I drill a hole in plywood with an electric drill, the other side of the hole — where the bit comes out — gets splintered. Is there any way to avoid this?

A. — Professional woodworkers know how to ease the bit through carefully and slowly so that there is no splintering. For others, the best way is to clamp a piece of scrap wood on the opposite side of the hole that is to be made. Drill the regular way. As the bit goes through the plywood and the scrap wood, any splintering that occurs will take place on the scrap wood. Another method, used when it isn't practical to clamp scrap wood to the plywood, is to drill until the point of the bit just peeks through on the other side. Remove the drill from the wood and redrill into the little hole made by the bit on the opposite side of the plywood.

Q. — In replacing a faucet washer, can any washer be used whether it is a hot or cold water faucet?

A. — While the same type of washer is often used on both hot and cold water faucets, there are special washers for use with hot water.

(Leaky faucets, clogged drains, noisy pipes and balky toilet tanks are among the subjects discussed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Make Simple Plumbing Repairs," available by sending 50 cents AND a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Hardwoods are harder than softwoods — but not always.

Softwoods are softer than hardwoods — but not always.

Actually, hardwoods come from trees that have broad leaves which generally shed sometime during the year. Softwoods come from evergreens that keep their foliage all year.

Unless the do-it-yourselfer performs special jobs where hardwoods like mahogany and oak are required, he will usually be working with softwoods. These include the popular pines and firs, of which there are many varieties.

One of the first things a novice purchaser should know is that the so-called nominal sizes indicate sizes before the lumber was dried and planed. The actual sizes are a bit smaller. In many cases, this has no effect on a project, but in some it is important to know the real sizes for measuring purposes. A nominal sized 2 by 4 is not 2 inches by 4 inches, but 1½ inches by 3½ inches. A 2 by 6 is 1½ inches by 5½ inches. And so on. In board lumber, such as is used for shelving, a 1 by 6 is really ¾ths by 5½ inches; a 1 by 8 is ¾ths by 7¼ inches, and similarly down the line.

Plywood is technically not called lumber, but is real wood, layers of which are pressed and glued together. Unlike lumber, its stated dimensions are its actual dimensions. A sheet of plywood half-an-inch thick and 4 feet by 8 feet is just that.

It's a waste of money to buy lumber or plywood that is too good for its purpose. Use the less expensive grades whenever possible. Those with defects are suitable where they won't be seen or where appearance isn't important. With plywood, for instance, you can buy a sheet that has one side of excellent quality and one not so good, permitting its use where only one side will be seen.

Outdoors, use lumber that is pressure-treated or one, such as redwood heartwood or Western red cedar, that resists insects and decay. If you have none of these, apply a wood preservative to what you do have, remembering that soaking the wood in the liquid is preferable to brushing it, although brushing it with a preservative is better than doing nothing at all. If you intend to use plywood outside, get the exterior grade, which is formulated to withstand inclement weather and big temperature changes.

If your neighborhood lumberyard has someone there who will take the trouble to help you make the proper selections, you have found a dealer you should patronize regularly. But, if possible, try to do your shopping and ask your questions on a slow day or during hours when he isn't too busy.

GARDEN CLINIC

N.C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. When is the best time to look for North Carolina peaches for my freezer? (W.B., Louisburg)

A. July. Most yellow-fleshed, free-stone varieties of peaches ripen in July and early August, and this is the type of peach generally desired for freezing. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticulturist)

Q. Is there any scientific evidence that marigolds benefit other plants when planted in a garden? (M.T., Charlotte)

A. None of which I am aware. Certain types of marigolds have been shown to reduce certain kinds of nematodes in soil. Most of this research has been done in pots in a greenhouse and usually does not work in the field. Mixed with other plants, marigolds have no beneficial attributes other than attractive flowers. (R.K. Jones, extension plant pathologist)

Q. How does one tell the difference between a ladybug and a Mexican bean beetle? (C.G., Apex)

A. Ladybugs and Mexican bean beetles are in the same family of insects. Hence, they resemble each other, although ladybugs are helpful and Mexican bean beetles are pests. Ladybugs are brightly colored and have red bodies with black spots or vice versa. Mexican bean beetles are light brown with black spots. Ladybugs are more elongated, smaller and faster moving. They are found with aphids, their prey, while Mexican bean beetles are seldom associated with aphids. Mexican bean beetles tend to remain in one place, feeding on plant leaves. Ladybugs move rapidly, stopping only where aphids exist. Learn to tell good insects from bad insects because insecticides will usually kill one as quickly as the other. (Ken Sorensen, extension entomologist)

Q. Is there any way to protect a tree from being struck by lightning and what trees are most likely to be hit? (B.B., Rutherfordton)

A. Trees that stand alone, along a stream, or extend above the surrounding trees are vulnerable. You can protect your favorite shade trees from this danger by installing lightning rods. Usually a copper cable conducter is installed so it is slightly above the tree top. It is then led down the tree and grounded to a rod driven six to eight feet deep — beyond the drip line of the tree. If lightning hits the tree, it is conducted harmlessly into the ground where it dissipates. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Extraterrestial Life-Believer

PARIS (AP) — Does life exist on other planets?

The U. N. Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization recently held a conference of international scientists on this subject at its Paris headquarters.

Drake said, "We believe it exists because we have traced the earliest steps in the origin of life on earth and found it was quite a simple and inevitable thing. All it takes is a planet whose chemistry is similar to that which existed on primitive earth, give it a rather short period of time — by which I mean perhaps a millions years — and you will make life."

Key West Link The 8th Wonder

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — The 128-mile extension of the Florida East Coast Railway from the Florida mainland to Key West, was completed in 1912.

Considered "the eighth wonder of the world," at the time, it spanned 39 islands and included 30 miles of bridge over open water.

In 1935, the line, which was never a money maker, was sold to the state and became a two-lane highway.

Some Swimming Pools Faster

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Why is one swimming pool "faster" than another?

"One reason is that the faster pool will create less turbulence from the water splashed and pushed against the walls," says Ray Essick, administrator for U.S. Swimming, which is supported by Philipps Petroleum.

Fewer Members Giving More

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Presbyterian Church in the United States has reported a membership decline of 1.09 percent but a better than nine percent increase in giving to the denomination.

Church officials said that membership in the Southern-based denomination now stood at 858,142 but that per capita giving had increased from $281.77 to $341.81.

Let's Talk Real Estate
by Connally Branch
The United States is one of the few countries of the world that has a relatively free real estate market. Part of the reason is that we have traditionally had a lot of space and so a lot of room in which to build houses. As a result, the market idea of development, based on supply and demand, can work here. however, since some of the countries in Europe have little land available for housing, there is a different problem. In order to keep rents and property values within reason, the government must often impose housing and land regulations.

Black History Mecca

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — This east Georgia city is a mecca of black culture, a unique place for the study of black history and architecture, an Alabama architect undertaking the study says.

"Augusta is unusual in black history. Blacks somehow managed to be more prosperous here than in other Georgia cities," said Richard Dozier, an architect from Tuskeegee Institute in Alabama.

Dozier is studying churches, lodges and homes built by black contractors from 1880 through 1940, a period he said "represents the high point of black building. Most cities couldn't do this because they don't have that many standing buildings."

The summer-long study undertaken by Dozier is backed by the state's Parks and Historic sites division and Historic Augusta Inc., which obtained a $17,000 federal grant for the project.

"I'm trying to stop the whole myth that nothing of historic value exists in the black community," the architect said. "There's a lot of potential here in Augusta."

Augusta was a center for free blacks before the Civil War and a center for black culture and building, Dozier said.

He speculated the city's three black schools brought unusually strong leadership to the black community.

The city has 25 black churches, including the oldest black Baptist church in the country.

"I've been tracking down buildings, and I've tracked down where blacks have lived," he said. But while looking for structures, he is also finding history.

"The church is the absolute center, the repository of records both written and oral," Dozier said, explaining that his search for the history of buildings led him to information about the people who used them.

Dozier said he's found that black churches tended to be conservative in style, about 10 to 15 years behind contemporary designs.

Blacks also tended to have fraternal organizations and built many lodge buildings, which Dozier is also studying.

Inventors Gather

WELLESLEY, Mass. (AP) — The fellow who cooked up the automatic beansprout grower and the guy who created a sootless chimney sweeper were among 350 frustrated inventors gathered here this weekend to learn how to turn their brainstorms into cash.

The people at this two-day meeting have ideas and devices that just aren't jumping from the drawing board to the store shelf.

So the National Bureau of Standards, the Inventors' Association of New England and seven other private and government organizations sponsored a convention Friday and today called "Making Invention Work."

Thirty-seven patent lawyers, investors, bureaucrats, teachers and successful inventors congregated at Babson College to offer advice on market research, financing and patent law.

One typical inventor was Samuel Smith, 65, a retired engineer from nearby Newton. He has built — but never sold — a gadget that keeps bridge score, a drill that works in narrow spaces and a chimney sweeper complete with a bag to catch the soot.

He summed up the woes by saying: "It's one thing to be an inventor. To get your product on the market is something else."

Muzzarelli Heads SLAP

ECU News Bureau

Robert A. Muzzarelli, director of the East Carolina University Speech and Hearing Clinic since 1970, will become chairman of the Department of Speech, Language and Auditory Pathology (SLAP) in ECUs School of Allied Health effective July 1.

ROBERT A. MUZZARELLI

Muzzarelli, 39, is an associate professor in SLAP as well as director of activities of the outpatient clinic as it relates to the training of all graduate and undergraduate students in SLAP. He is certified and licensed in both speech pathology and audiology.

His appointment as chairman was announced by Dr. Robert H. Maier, Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs.

Muzzarelli succeeds W. Garrett Hume who relinquished the department chair to undertake research activities in the department.

A native of Vineland, N.J., Muzzarelli holds the BA from Trenton, N.J., State College and the MA from Temple University, Philadelphia, Pa. From 1963 to 1970 he was coordinator of the Speech and Hearing Clinic, The Mercer Hospital, Mercer County, N.J.

At ECU he has served as chairman of the Faculty Senate Committee for Teaching Effectiveness and has been chosen as an "outstanding teacher" at ECU, and was recognized by students for dedication and contributions to his field.

He serves as faculty advisor to the ECU chapter of the National Student Speech and Hearing Assn.

He is a member of both state and national speech, language and hearing associations, the Southern Audiological Society and the American Society of Allied Health Professors.

He is married to the former Mary T. Flaim of East Vineland, N.J., and they have three children.

Lifting Of Grain Export Ban Affects Market

By KATHY OSOBA
AP Business Writer

Reports that the Agriculture Department lifted a request that exporters not sell foreign grain to the Soviet Union gave support to wheat and corn fu-tures prices Friday that kept the market higher throughout the session.

A Cargill Grain Co. executive confirmed that the government on Wednesday notified the ex-porters that their foreign affil-iates could sell overseas grain to the Soviets.

But some traders in Chicago say the news gave the market a psychogical lift because ex-porters have been selling for-eign grain all along to com-panies that have resold that grain to the Soviets.

"That's exactly what the for-eign exporters have been doing all along," said one veteran trader. "The Russians have been able to get all the grain they need."

The Agriculture Department has refused to comment on the report.

Other unconfirmed reports that the Commodity Credit Corp. would end its corn pur-chases from farmers and grain elevator operators continued to circulate on the trading floor at the Chicago Board of Trade. One analyst speculated that the govenment may have bought all the grain it needs to meet a 1 billion bushel grain reserve.

Soybean futures rose late in advance of the government's grain stocks report that was re-leased after the close of trade.

The report showed wheat and soybean stocks lower than pro-jections by the trade, but corn stocks were slightly higher than expected.

The report said that as of June 1, soybean stocks were 774 million bushels, corn stocks were 3.586 billion bushels and wheat stocks were 901 million bushels.

Analysts said they did not think the figures would have much impact on prices because stocks have been growing be-cause of the grain embargo against the Soviet Union that began Jan. 4.

The trade had been expect-ing wheat stocks to be about 913 million bushels. Corn stocks at this time last year were 3.2 bil-lion bushels.

At the close, wheat, corn, oats and soybean futures were mostly higher for the day.

Live cattle and pork bellies futures rose sharply in advance of a report on farm hogs and pigs as of June 1. The report, released after the close of trade, said the number of hogs and pigs on farms was 65.93 million head, 1 percent higher than a year ago.

But analysts said the report was favorable to prices because it projected breeding stocks would be 8 percent lower than a year ago. With a glut of pork in the market because of high slaughters recently, the pros-pect of diminishing supplies next year was considered fa-vorable to prices.

The hog and pigs report said ranchers intend to keep 9.528 million head for breeding while they intend to market 56.4 mil-lion head, a 3 percent increase over last year.

"I think it's a bit bullish long-term," said Peter Callan, live-stock analyst for Cargill In-vestor Services Inc. "It was pretty much what the trade ex-pected as far as marketings and placements.

Economic Miracle

By RICARDO URZUA

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — A group of economists called the "Chicago Boys" are credited with "Chile's eco-nomic miracle."

All did their post graduate studies at the University of Chicago under Professor Milton Friedman whose theory on the money supply and its relationship to infla-tion earned him a Nobel Prize for economics in 1976.

Chile's Chicago Boys in-clude the ministers of the treasury and planning, budget director, president and vice president of the central bank and a number of other ranking government officials as well as the ministers of economy and labor, former students re-spectively at Yale and Harvard.

With solid backing of the military government, the Chicago Boys have achieved results readily visible in downtown Santiago — traffic jams of Japanese cars, stores jammed with stereo equipment from Japan, pans from South Africa, wine from France and cheese from Denmark.

More moderate critics credit the group with check-ing Chile's inflation — but at the cost of record un-employment and the con-centration of wealth in the hands of a few powerful cliques.

Business Notes

ATTENDED COURSE

Blanche Forbes, Century 21 Forbes Agency, has completed a residential sales course offered in Chapel Hill by the Realtors National Marketing Institute.

The course, she said, was programmed to successful career planning through organization and time management practices.

GAINED APPROVAL

First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. has received approval from the Commissioner of Banks of the State of North Carolina and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. to redeem up to 12,500 shares of its outstanding common stock, board chairman Lewis R. Holding announced.

Holding, who said the plan was previously approved by the bank's shareholders, reported that purchase price of the stock has been set at $400 per share. Shareholders will not be required to offer their shares for sale, he added.

QUARTERLY DIVIDEND

The board of directors of First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. declared a quarterly dividend of $1.75 per share on common stock at the bank's June meeting in Raleigh.

The dividend is payable Oct. 1 to shareholders of record Sept. 8.

MEMBERSHIP APPROVED

Earl Hardee Co. Inc., homebuilders in Greenville, has been approved for membership in the Home Owners Warranty Corp. of North Carolina, HOW announced.

According to HOW, the local company now provides its homebuyers with a ten-year buyer protection plan like 225 others builders in North Carolina.

PURCHASED CENTER

VP NAMED

Martin L. Vernon, a graduate of East Carolina University, has been promoted to administrative vice president of McMahan, Forbes and Co. of Raleigh, which provides technical support services in the savings and loan industry.

Vernon will be responsible for finance, data processing, personnel administration and general office management, the firm said. He previously served the consulting firm as account manager in eastern North Carolina.

FACILITY OPENED

Alonza Mills, a native of Pitt County, announced the opening of Mills' Barbecue and Cafeteria in Greensboro on Saturday.

SALES INCREASE

Winn-Dixie Stores Inc. reported sales of $435,449,000 during the four weeks ended May 28, compared with $380,296,000 for the comparable period last year, an increase of 14.5 percent.

The Jacksonville, Fla. based company said that for the 48 weeks ended May 28, total sales were $4,945,354,000 compared with $4,535,214,000 a year ago, an increase of nine percent.

The company said that it expects to open 87 new stores and close 66 during the current fiscal year and to have approximately 1,195 stores in operation on June 25.

EXECUTIVES SESSION

Julian White, president of M & W Chevrolet, announced that Jay Mills attended the Society of Sales Executives activities for the second consecutive year recently in Richmond.

White said that Mills was the only sales manager out of the 37 North Carolina Chevrolet dealers in the Richmond zone to qualify for the executives session. Mills' wife, Eleanor, accompanied him to the SSE's banquet and dance.

NAMED TO BOARD

D. Wayne Peterson has been appointed to the Tarboro board of managers for Planters National Bank, according to James B. Powers, PNB chairman and president, and Arthur T. Edmondson, senior vice president and Tarboro city executive.

Peterson is president and chief executive officer of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph. He is a past director of Gulf Stars United Telephone Co. and past officer of United Telecom-munications.

Born in Stroud, Okla., he attended schools in Texas, including Dallas College of Southern Methodist University and Abilene Christian College, as well as Rockhurst College in Kansas City, Mo.

PURCHASE AUTHORIZED

The shareholders of Branch Corp., meeting in Wilson, authorized the purchase of up to 65,000 shares of the corporation's common stock within a period of one year.

The corporation said that the shares may be acquired through open market purchases or privately negotiated transactions and will be held as treasury stock to be used for future mergers and other corporate purposes as the board of directors deems advisable.

Millions Of Dollars In Social Security Lavished On Prison Inmates

SOCIAL SECURITY HEARING — Rep. G. William Whitehurst, R-Va., talks with Mrs. Edna R. Hall of Newport Tenn., prior to their testifying before the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security in Washington Friday. The two testified on the receipt of Social Security benefits by persons incarcerated in penal institutions. (AP Laserphoto).

WASHINGTON (AP) — In prison, where "$200 makes you a king," millions of dollars in Social Security disability payments are spent each year on such regal perquisites as color television sets, drugs and illicit sex.

The House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security, pondering the uncertain financial future of the Social Security system, was told by witnesses Friday that many prisoners use their benefits to buy luxury items such as stereos, TV sets and electronic games — and to finance the prison underground.

"Other guards have told me that drug trafficking, numbers running and illicit sex have flourished because of Social Security funds," said Ernest P. Davis Jr., a correction sergeant at the Adult Diagnostic and Treatment Center for sex offenders in Avenel, N.J. "Remember that in jail, where you're not supposed to have large amounts of money, $200 makes you a king."

Mrs. Edna B. Hall of Newport, Tenn., told the panel her husband was sent to prison for hiring another man to blow up her car. She lost both legs, her right hand was mangled and she suffered burns on her body.

"But it is I who must pay the costs — not him. His benefits from Social Security and Veterans Administration are his to keep. In prison, he has no food to buy, no taxes to pay, no utilities, no medical bills, and no clothing to buy," she said.

Lawrence H. Thompson, associate commissioner for policy for the Social Security Administration, said "imprisonment by itself has never been a basis for nonpayment" of benefits.

Davis said it is "very simple" for inmates to apply for disability payments, adding that more than 10 percent of those at Avenel collect monthly checks.

"An inmate who is doing time will 'act crazy' and get a doctor, preferably a psychiatrist or psychologist, to commit him to a state hospital for observation," Davis said. "Once in the state hospital, the inmate regains his senses enough to ask a social worker to put him in touch with the Social Security field representative."

Such representatives make "regular visits" to jails, he said.

Rep. William Whitehurst, R-Va., who has introduced legislation to eliminate Social Security disability benefits for prisoners, estimated that about 30,000 inmates of federal, state and local prisons collect approximately $60 million a year in disability checks.

A General Accounting Office report indicates 224 federal prisoners are getting payments totaling more than $1 million annually. Using that as a basis, the subcommittee staff said it calculated that about 4,500 of all prisoners are receiving $22 million in Social Security benefits each year — an average of $300 a month.

Lawrence said legislation to eliminate these benefits may raise constitutional questions about due process and equal treatment.

Among those receiving disability payments is convicted "Son of Sam" killer David R. Berkowitz, sentenced to more than 300 years for the slaying of six persons in New York City.

Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, chairman of the subcommittee, said he has been told the Social Security Administration intends to cut off Berkowitz's payments, but he noted the prisoner's attorneys have the right of appeal.

Deyton-Waller Vows Solemnized

Beverly Gwen Waller and Woody Jarrett Deyton, both of Greenville, were married Saturday at 3 p.m. at the Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church here. The double ring ceremony was performed by Dr. James Bailey.

A program of music was presented by Mrs. Frances Cain of Greenville, organist, and Randall Bryant of Fayetteville, soloist.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. Nick Waller of Clinton, and the late Dixie D. Waller. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Deyton of Raleigh.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of silk organza, chantilly lace and Venise lace featuring a wedding band neckline and long-fitted sleeves trimmed in matching lace. The A-line skirt was accented with panels of chantilly and Venise lace with an insert of white satin ribbon. Chantilly lace bordered the full skirt. Her wedding veil was a chapel length mantilla of nylon illusion bordered in chantilly lace and accented by four tiers of matching lace.

Mrs. Nancy Perryman of Kernersville was matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Mrs. Tara Waller of Charlotte, sister-in-law of the bride, and Mrs. Deborah Landes of Clinton, stepsister of the bride. They wore formal gowns of seaside lustreglo designed with an open neckline featuring miniature rolled shoulder straps, gathered empire bodice of crystal pleating and a full flared skirt. The sleeveless gown was co[illegible]mented by a waist leng[illegible] cacoon jacket of sheer seaside chiffon.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and ushers included Kevin Nichols Waller of Charlotte, brother of the bride, and John Deyton of Raleigh, brother of the bridegroom.

Following the ceremony, the reception was held in the ladies parlor. Mrs. Vada Cayton and Mrs. Eve Leggett served punch while Mrs. Paige Nunn and Frances Turner served cake. Mrs. Linda Brown and Mrs. Olgae Dawkins assisted at the guest register.

The rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom at the Ramada Inn. Following the dinner, the couple was honored at a party given by Mr. and Mrs. John Robertson at Windy Ridge clubhouse.

Out-of-town guests and the family of the bridal couple attended a luncheon Saturday at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Deyton Jr. Hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Willis Brittain, Mr. and Mrs. John Deyton, Mr. and Mrs. Ed McCormick, and Mrs. Robert Deyton.

Following a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C., the couple plans to reside in Greenville. The bride graduated from ECU in health and physical education and is currently employed as a teacher at Rose High School. The bridegroom is a graduate of UNC-Wilmington in business and is a loan officer with State Employees' Credit Union.

Couple Exchanges Vows

Jan Carol Pulley and John Donald Carpenter, both of Greenville, were united in marriage Saturday at 8:00 p.m. at the Immanuel Baptist Church here.

The Rev. Gene Adams officiated at the double ring ceremony. Wedding music was provided by Mrs. Annie Belle McCleland, organist, Mrs. Larry Hamrick, soloist, and Scrappy Proctor, guitarist.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jennings Lee Pulley Sr. and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Carpenter, all of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a wedding gown of chantilly lace over taffeta fashioned with a Queen Ann neckline, bishop sleeves and a chapel train. The bodice was accented with bridal pearls and crystals. Crystals were featured on the sleeves and the full skirt. Her veil was fingertip length of nylon illusion bordered with chantilly lace and attached to a lace tiera accented with crystals. She carried her grandmother's prayerbook with white silk daisies and roses accented with baby's breath and foliage.

Betsy Murray of Jacksonville served as maid of honor and bridesmaids included Mary Liles of Garland, Martha Faulkner of Wilmington, Ramona Cannon of Greenville, Cheryl Carpenter of Cary, sister of the bridegroom, and Marty Hunt of Chesapeake, Va. They wore apricot polyester knit formal gowns with a sheered bodice and circular skirt with a floral peplum jacket. They also wore summer hats accented with an apricot ribbon. They carried European clustered bouquets of white silk daisies and coral bell blossoms accented with baby's breath and greenery tied with satin ribbons.

Honorary bridesmaids included Ms. Mary Mac Williamson and Ms. Tricia Cox of Greenville, and Ms. Cindy Moore of Cary. They wore formal gowns of mint green.

Michelle Murray of Jacksonville was flower girl. She wore a formal dress of apricot and carried a white wicker basket of white and apricot silk flowers, baby's breath and greenery.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Mike Carpenter of Anapolis, Md. and Glenn Carpenter of Greenville, brothers of the bridegroom, Tuck Johnson of Cary, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Ronnie Faulkner of Wilmington, and Lee Pulley of Greenville, brother of the bride. Seth Wertheim of Rocky Mount was ring bearer.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents entertained at a reception at the American Legion Building. Music was by Castle. Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Mann presided at the guest book. Mrs. Millie Brown, Mrs. Letha Jones, Mrs. Ron Wertheim, and Mrs. Doris Faulkner served cake and punch. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. M.C. New Sr., aunt and uncle of the bride.

The bride's mother wore a formal gown of mint green. The bridegroom's mother wore a formal gown of light blue. They were remembered with white silk daisy corsages.

Mrs. W.F. Scott of Goldsboro, director of the wedding, and Mrs. Ron Wertheim gave a bridesmaids luncheon at the home of Mrs. Wertheim in Rocky Mount.

Friends of the couple entertained at a party at the home of the bride.

Following a wedding trip to the Bahamas, the couple plans to reside in Greenville. The bride is a student at East Carolina University where she is studying special education. The bridegroom graduated from Pitt Technical Institute and attended ECU. He is currently manager of Krispy Kreme Doughnut Company here.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A committee in Washington is looking into labels that appear on everyday products in the hope they can make them more "meaningful" to consumers.

I already know more than any consumer has a right to know.

Personally, I loved the good old days when they didn't list every calorie on the container of the product. I was a far better person before I knew that 10 potato chips cost me 480 calories . . . a serving of catsup was like pregnant cellulite . . . and that a pint of ice cream was considered four servings.

Then someone decided I should know that my detergent contained complex sodium, phosphate aluminosilicates and dispersed sodium carbonate and it's made me paranoid ever since.

My husband was the one who made me crazy. In treating my cold one night he said, "Are you aware these pills contain scopolamine hydrobromide, belladonna and chlorpheniraminc maleate?"

"That's easy for you to say," I said.

"And you're taking them with a cough syrup that is 25 percent alcohol? Did you know that?"

"I became suspicious when it came with a plastic shot glass for a lid."

"You should start reading the labels on products," he said.

I was soaking in the tub one day when I picked up a soap wrapper and discovered that the soap contained triclocarbon and titanium. Titanium. Wasn't that what leaked out of a truck in Arizona as they were en route to burying it?

Our dog food contained pantothenate, ethylenedramine dihydroiodide and dried beef solubles. Good grief, that's what killed army enlistments in this country.

I was stunned to see that my yogurt contained "active yogurt cultures" which sounded like a Japanese horror film. My hair setting lotion contained hydrolyzed animal protein . . . and you never knew where they have been. Not only that, my deodorant contained propane and heaven knows what would happen if my two pits rubbed together.

After awhile the words all began to run together: surfactants, tallowate, sodium erythorbate, methylparaben, usoprophyl palmitate and chlorpheniramine maleate.

One night when I emerged from the bathroom having lathered, rinsed, brushed, flossed and sprizzed, my husband asked, "Are you all right?"

"I think so," I said. "Just be sure I don't get near a flame, avoid freezing, don't get near eyes and keep me out of the reach of children."

Miss Fulford Is Bride

FARMVILLE — Cynthia Dale Fulford and Robert Wayne Kaylor were united in marriage Saturday at 2 p.m. at the Major Benjamin May DAR Chapter House here. The Rev. Nelson Fulford, cousin of the bride, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Nuptial music was presented by Ms. Lynn Chapplear, organist, and Ms. Claudia Mowrer sang while playing the guitar.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William E. Fulford Jr. of Farmville. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd F. Kaylor of Wilmington.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a waltz length gown of plissed crepe with chantilly lace, handwoven in South America, designed by Sara Mique of New York. The peasant style dress was fashioned with an off the shoulder neckline. The gathered skirt featured two tiers and the scalloped hemline was bordered with chantilly lace. The bride carried a formal bouquet of white and pink roses, lily of the valley and daisies with white and pink streamers. She wore a crown of flowers matching her bouquet.

Mrs. Johnny Starling was honor attendant and wore an empire style pink waltz length dress with accordian pleats and carried white and pink roses.

Ms. Tonya Kaylor of Raleigh was flower girl and wore a knee length dress of pink chiffon ruffled at the neckline and carried a bouquet of roses, daisies, lily of the valley with pink and white streamers.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and Russell Gay of Raleigh was the usher.

The mother of the bride wore a waltz length dress of aqua chiffon over taffeta with pearls on the empire waistline. She wore a yellow orchid. The bridegroom's mother selected a street length rose colored dress and wore a white orchid.

The chapter house was decorated as a summer garden for the private wedding ceremony. The stairway was entwined with a garland of greenery and a standing basket of assorted white flowers and greenery. The focal point for the ceremony was a mantel with magnolia and love birds. A 15 branch candelabra and standing baskets of fern were also used.

A reception was held after the ceremony and was given by the bride's parents. Mrs. W. C. Garner, aunt of the bride, greeted guests and Mrs. Tommy Langston presided at the bridal register which was placed on a table with a single rose in a crystal budvase.

An arrangement of silk pastel summer flowers centered the refreshment table. Mrs. Roy Jones, aunt of the bride, served wedding cake and punch was poured by Mrs. Jack Guy, aunt of the bride. Assisting were Miss Angela Cash, Miss Debbie Lee and Miss Melanie Kue. Good-byes were said by Dr. and Mrs. Charles Russell.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Hilton Head, S. C.

The bride graduated from N. C. State University is is employed as a probation parole officer, Greenville. The bridegroom graduated from UNC School of Law is presently with the firm of Pegram, Hahn and Roberts, Greenville.

Miss Minges, Mr. Greene Marry On Saturday

Miss Laura Loraine Minges and Ronald Byron Greene were united in marriage Saturday at the First Presbyterian Church here. The Rev. Richard Rhea Gammon officiated at the high noon double ring ceremony.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Joseph Goodwin, organist, Miss Mary Jo White, flutist, and Mrs. Julian White sang "The Wedding Song" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Franklin Minges II and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Ivan Greene of Raleigh.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white silkened organza and re-embroidered alencon lace over peau de soie. The Queen Anne neckline was designed with a stand-up collar outlined in re-embroidered alencon lace beaded with pearls. Beaded lace also embellished the shoulders and bodice and extended down over the semi-natural waistline. The full sheer split organza sleeves revealed the fitted inner sleeves of imported English net accentuated with appliques of beaded alencon lace. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel train were enhanced by a border of lace at the hemline with lace motifs scattered over the train. She wore a chapel length mantilla of white silk illusion bordered with alencon lace and attached to a Juliet cap. The bride carried a cascade of white phalaenopsis orchid sprays and English ivy entwined with peach Wilbur-Nathay roses and cattleya orchids tied with white satin.

Mrs. Thomas Donald Taylor, sister of the bride, was honor attendant and wore a formal gown of peach lustreglo designed with a scoop neckline edged in piping and featuring miniature rolled shoulder straps, gathered empire bodice and full flared skirt. The sleeveless gown was complemented by a waist length silesta chiffon blouson cover-up in a marigold, orchid and green print. She carried a classic bouquet of peach roses, baby's breath and miniature peach carnations tied with peach and aqua ribbon with long streamers.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Stover Ray Morris of Garner, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Jennifer Lorraine Rayford, Miss Martha Ann Williams, Miss Donna Sue Goodson, Miss Suzanne Patricia Currin, Miss Bonnie Lynn Lee of Greenville, Miss Carol Lawrence Watts of Williamston, and Miss Elizabeth Allen Griswold of Mount Airy. Their gowns and bouquets were identical to those of the honor attendant in a contrasting shade of aqua.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers were Stover Ray Morris of Garner, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, John Franklin Minges III of Greenville, brother of the bride, David Wayne Loop of Jacksonville, Fla., John Samuel Brinkley of Ahoskie, Kenneth Aaron Rakestraw of Greenville, Ronald Eugene Gunter, Richard Ross Williams and Walter Edward Williford, all of Raleigh.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of apricot chiffon with a matching chiffon jacket. The mother of the bridegroom selected a formal gown of mint green chiffon beaded at the neckline. Both wore white orchid corsages. The bride's grandmother, Mrs. Allie Pipkin Whitehurst, wore a white orchid corsage.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Miami, Nassau and Freeport.

The bride is a graduate of St. Mary's College, Raleigh, and will continue her education at ECU in the fall where she is a senior. The bridegroom graduated from N. C. State University and is assistant manager at Coffman's, Carolina East Mall.

Mrs. Walter Cox directed the wedding.

After the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception at the Greenville Country Club where guests were greeted by Dr. and Mrs. Ray Donald Minges and Mr. and Mrs. Maxel Eugene Minges.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained the wedding party and relatives of the bridal couple at a rehearsal dinner at the Ramada Inn Friday evening followed by a dance given by friends of the bride at the American Legion Building.

Engagements Announced

Jones-Rollins Vows Spoken

Mary Louise Rollins and Seth Jones III were united in marriage Saturday at 11 a.m. at the First Pentecosal Holiness Church here. The Rev. Frank Gentry performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dalton Wayne Rollins of Bethel. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Seth Jones Jr. of Greenville.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Betty leRoux, organist, Ms. Jan Sims, soloist, and H. L. Austin, Glenn Buck, Randy Gentry, Ken Kearney and Mike Pollard, trumpeters. Ms. Sims sang "Gentle Shepherd," "I Just Came Into His Presence" and played the guitar while singing "The Wedding Song."

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore a formal gown of white organza over white peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with scalloped chantilly lace. The fitterd empire bodice overlaid in French chantilly lace was enhanced by a sheer yoke of point d' esprit outlined with beaded chantilly lace that continued over the waistline. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were accentuated by cascading tiers of lace and organza over the southern belle overskirt with the hemline bordered in a gathered flounce. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion attached to a cap featuring silk roses and daisies, designed by Mrs. Shirley Russell and Mrs. Everdene Tetterton. She carried a cascade of white sweetheart roses, pixie carnations and baby's breath with white lace ribbon, centered with white dutch iris.

Mrs. Carrie Lou Rollins of Bethel, sister-in-law of the bride, was honor attendant and wore a formal gown of floral voile in shades of blue, pink, maize and green on an ivory background designed with an open neckline with miniature rolled should straps with bows. The gown was complemented by a sheer print jacket. She carried a mixed colonial nosegay of blue dutch iris, yellow daisies, mauve carnations, white baby's breath and touches of red with matching ribbons.

Miss Leslie Ann House of Greenville was flower girl and wore a light blue eyelet dress fearturing a ruffled neckline and hem. She carried a white basket filled with petals with a spray of mixed flowers and ribbons.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers included Tommy Wayne Rollins of Bethel, brother of the bride, Jack Barrow Jones of Greenville, and Joseph Keith Jones of Jacksonville, Fla., brothers of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride chose a formal gown of green chiffon and a matching sheer overlay. The mother of the bridegroom chose a formal gown of pink with a matching sheer overlay. Both wore a corsage of white roses.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Barbara Morris of Greenville. Mrs. Cheryl Jones, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, presided at the register.

The bride is a graduate of ECU. She is currently employed with Greene Lamp, Inc., Snow Hill. The bridegroom is a graduate of ECU and is currently employed by the Greene County Board of Education.

A reception was given by the bride's parents in the church fellowship hall after the ceremony. Mrs. Lexine R. Gill served wedding cake and Mrs. Ronald H. Riggs poured punch. Mr. and Mrs. Joe Burroughs greeted guests. Mrs. Betty Whitfield and Mrs. Fannie Bell James were assisted in serving by Mrs. Margie Davenport and Mrs. Thelma Griffin. Korey Smith and Jason Tetterton passed out rice bags. Mr. and Mrs. J. Melvin Moore said good-byes.

The couple was entertained at a pig picking given by relatives of the bride at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lester House, Greenville.

Debutante Invitations Are Issued

RALEIGH — A. Gwynn Nowell Jr., president of the Terpsichorean Club of Raleigh, announced invitations have been issued to the 54th annual North Carolina Debutante Ball which will take place here Sept. 4-6.

The Terpsichorean Club, comprised of young men from the Raleigh area, was formed to sponsor an annual statewide Debutante Ball for the presentation of North Carolina's socially prominent young ladies and to honor the first families of the state. It has been given yearly since 1923 except during World War II.

During the ball weekend, there will be eight functions to be attended by the debutantes, their families and escorts. The highlight of the weekend will be the formal presentation at the Raleigh Civic Center Friday night.

J. Lanse Houston has been selected as chairman of the ball and Mrs. H.A. Underwood III is chairman of the Girls' Committee.

Afternoon Ceremony Held

Brenda Kaye Murray and Joseph Carl Burris were united in marriage Saturday at three o'clock at Oakmont Baptist Church here. The Rev. Gordon Conklin performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Murray of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Evelyn C. Brank of Swannanoa, and the late Mr. Robert G. Burris.

A program of nuptial music was rendered by Larry Jones of Greenville, organist, and Mrs. Vicki Murray of Florence, S.C., sister-in-law of the bride, who sang "Longer," "The Wedding Song" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown designed by her mother of white organza over doeskin bridal satin featuring a Victorian neckline and fitted bodice which flowed into a natural gathered waistline in back. The bodice was fashioned with imported alencon lace and accented with seed pearls. The flared A-line skirt extended into a chapel length train appliqued with matching scalloped lace.

Mrs. Pat Cavendish Conway was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Diane Hudson Roberson and Michele Delayne Garris, niece of the bride, all of Greenville. They wore identical gowns of mint green organza over doeskin satin. The sleeveless bodice featured a flared capelet of organza attached to a rounded neckline. The full A-line skirt was edged with a ruffle flounce at the hemline. The waistline was accented by a sheer organza sash which criss-crossed in front. They carried semi-colonial bouquets of white button mums, miniature carnations and baby's breath tied with white satin streamers.

Angela Carol Clark of Belvoir was flower girl and wore a full length dress of mint green dotted swiss sashed with green satin ribbon. She carried a basket of summer flowers.

Lindsay Stuart Savage of Greenville was best man. Ushers included Clarence David Stanley of Swannanoa, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Dewey Benson Preast Jr. of Lincolnton, Anthony Robin Little of Mount Airy, and Gary Clayton Roberson of Greenville. Jason Stanley, nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

The mother of the bride chose a formal gown of aqua crepe. The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal gown of blue polyester. Both mothers wore corsages of white miniature carnations.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Mrs. Jean Savage and Mrs. Laurie Preast greeted guests. Mrs. Bobbie Stanley, sister of the bridegroom, registered guests.

Mrs. Sylvia Connely served cake and Mrs. Judith Garris poured punch. Both are sisters of the bride. Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Lanter.

Noon Ceremony Held

CARY — Tammy Lynn Williamson of Henderson, and Jeffery Rufus Garrett of Kittrell, exchanged wedding vows Saturday at noon at the Cary Baptist Church. The Rev. William Mosny officiated at the double ring ceremony.

A program of wedding music was provided by Mrs. Lucille Williams, organist, R.T. Moss, soloist and uncle of the bridegroom, accompanied by Laurie Williamson, pianist. Songs were "The Hawaiian Wedding Song," "Can't Help Falling in Love," "The Wedding Prayer" and "We"ve Only Just Begun." Mrs. Samuel Peoples directed the wedding.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Williamson of Henderson. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Edward Garrett of Kittrell.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Mrs. Teresa Garrett of Kittrell, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, was honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Fran Chappell and Mrs. Jean Parks, both of Henderson, and Sandra Van Dyke of Kittrell. Renee Williamson of Chapel Hill, cousin of the bride, was flower girl.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and ushers included Eddie and Marty Garrett, brothers of the bridegroom of Kittrell, and Mitchell and Jeffrey Williamson, both brothers of the bride of Henderson.

The bride wore a white formal gown of polyester organza with a stand-up collar and empire waistline. Lace trimmed the long illusion sleeves with lace cuffs. The full skirt flowed into an attached chapel length train. Her headpiece of polyester organza with nylon veiling had lace and seed pearl trim. She carried a colonial bouquet of white silk roses, carnations, stephanotis and baby's breath with white satin streamers.

The bridemaids wore dresses identical to that of the honor attendant. They carried long-stemmed blue tinted mums with a white satin bow and streamers.

The church was decorated with a seven branch candelabra with white tapers and an arrangement in front consisting of white gladioli, white mums and blue carnations with the unity candelabra in front of the flowers. The kneeling bench was flanked by two nine branch candelabra with white tapers.

The couple presented their mothers a long-stemmed red rose at the end of the ceremony.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given at the church fellowship hall by the parents of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. James Boyd greeted guests and Paula Padgett registered them. Mrs. Pat Padgett and Sharon Williamson served punch while Mrs. Geneva Smithwick and Mrs. Gail Barrow served cake. Mr. and Mrs. David Hyde said good-byes. Mrs. Ethel Whilby, Mrs. Pat Ellington, Mrs. Cara Gill and Katie Adcock assisted in serving and receiving.

Following a wedding trip to the N. C. mountains, the couple will live in Kittrell. The bride is a rising senior at Vance Senior HIgh School and the bridegroom is a graduate there.

MRS. JEFFERY RUFUS GARRETT

Mary Ann Salyer Weds

The wedding vows of Mary Ann Salyer of Winterville, and Clifton Stokes of High Point, were solemnized Saturday during a seven o'clock ceremony at the Gum Swamp Free Will Baptist Church here.

Bobby Taylor officiated at the double ring ceremony. A program of wedding music was presented by Myra Hogan, organost, and Jane Picirilli, soloist, both of Kinston.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Salyer of Winterville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Stokes of Rt. 4, Greenville.

The church altar was centered with a 15 branch brass candelabra and two 15 branch spiral candelabra forming a circle of burning candles around a palm of greenery. Two nine branch brass candelabrum held arrangements of white and blue gladioli.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory organza over ivory peau de soie designed with a sweetheart neckline outlined in scalloped re-embroidered lace beaded with pearls and sequins. The empire bodice was enhanced by a wide bertha collar of scalloped lace. Matching lace encircled the waistline and trimmed the cuffs of the sheer bishop sleeves. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were accentuated by five cascading tiers of organza edged in re-embroidered chantilly lace.

She wore a walking length veil of illusion bordered in scalloped chantilly lace held in place by a Camelot cap overlaid in matching lace with pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of blue miniature carnations and white daisies with baby's breath.

Judy Smith of Winterville, sister of the bride, was honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Pam Stokes of Durham, and Sylvia Yarborough of Greenville. They wore formal gowns of cotillion blue organza over taffeta designed with an open off the shoulder neckline with self-fabric shoulder straps and a ruffled organza collar. A cotillion blue satin ribbon sash encircled the waistline from which fell the A-line skirt enhanced by a ruffled flounce at the hemline which extended up the back to form a bustle.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and ushers included Franklin Stokes of Durham, Frank Smith Jr. of Winterville, and Ricky Stokes of Greenville. Timothy Smith of Winterville and Michael Stokes of Durham were ring bearers.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of sky blue nylon. The scoop neckline was enhanced by embroidered lace. The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal gown of lavender knit with chiffon overlay to form elbow length sleeves. Both mothers were remembered with a white hybrid orchid corsage.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the fellowship fall of the church. The table was centered with an arrangement of blue pixie carnations, blue carnations and white daisies interspersed with huckleberry foliage and baby's breath. The table was covered with an overlay of lace.

Cake was served by Mrs. May Lou Clark and punch was served by Mrs. Marlene Goodall, aunts of the bridegroom. Rhonda Jo Williams presided at the guest register and gave out rice bags.

Following a wedding trip, the couple plans to live in High Point. The bride is a graduate of Rose High School and the bridegroom is a graduate of North Pitt High School. He is employed by Food World Inc., High Point.

Double Ring Ceremony Held

Hooker Memorial Christian Church here was the scene of the two o'clock Saturday wedding of Marianna Ridenour of Greenville, and Carl Augustus Briley Jr. of Stokes. The Rev. Ralph Messick officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton E. Ridenour of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Briley of Stokes.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white organza over white peau de soie designed with a high split neckline of chantilly lace beaded with pearls. The empire bodice was enhanced by an overlay of embroidered and beaded appliques of lace that extended to and encircled the waistline. The split in the sheer bishop sleeves, which were bordered in scalloped chantilly lace, revealed motifs of lace down the inner fitted sleeve. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were accentuated with a flounce of imported French chantilly lace with the high rise at center front bordered in ruffled lace and the hemline edged in the scalloped chantilly lace. She wore a chapel length mantilla edged in chantilly lace held in place by a Camelot cap overlaid in the matching lace. She carried a cascade of white roses and carnations accented by greenery and baby's breath.

Marti Tripp of Greenville, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Barbara Hinsley and Kathy Ridenour, sister of the bride, both of Greenville, and Renee and Deborah Briley, sisters of the bridegroom of Stokes. They wore formal gowns of sweetpea silesta designed with an open neckline featuring rolled miniature shoulder straps, blouson bodice and a gathered skirt. The sleeveless gown was complemented by a fingertip length jacket bordered in sweetpea Venise lace. They carried a bouquet of yellow silk roses and baby's breath enhanced by sheer green lace.

Christy Briley of Stokes, cousin of the bridegroom, was flower girl and wore a formal dress of yellow organza lined in taffeta. The flounced neckline and hemline were enhanced by yellow satin trim. She carried a white basket of yellow silk roses.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers included Tim Corey, Gary Mayo and Bill Staton, all of Greenville, and Greg Briley, cousin of the bridegroom, of Stokes. Toby Ridenour of Greenville, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

Mrs. Ed Cook was the organist for the ceremony and Mrs. Hilda Smith was director. James Tripp, nephew of the bride, was candlelighter and Mrs. Karen Briley was register attendant.

The mother of the bride wore a street length dress of Carolina blue with sash ties at the shoulders and a rolled tie sash at the waistline. The mother of the bridegroom wore a street length dress of sky blue enhanced by a full length sleeved blue sheer jacket with a rolled neckline. Both mothers were remembered with corsages of white silk roses enhanced by white and sweetpea green lace. Grandmothers were remembered with corsages of white silk corsages.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given by the parents of the bridegroom. Joyce Cherry, aunt of the bridegroom, coordinated the reception. Punch was served by Connie Briley, aunt of the bridegroom, and cake was served by Karen Cherry, cousin of the bridegroom. Chris Ridenour, sister-in-law of the bride, assisted. Good-byes were said by Robin Briley, cousin of the bridegroom.

Following a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C., the couple will live in Stokes. The bride graduated from J.H. Rose High School and the bridegroom graduated from North Pitt High School. He also attended North Carolina State University. He is a farmer in the Stokes area.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: A equals L

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, JUNE 22, 1980

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day to make long-range plans that could provide greater affluence for you in the days ahead. Try to be more cooperative with associates and be more productive in the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Listening to ideas of close ties and cooperating more with them is wise today. Devote evening to loved one.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Accept your friends as they are instead of trying to change them, and you get along better. Schedule your time well.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You may be in a mood to spend a lot of money for a good time, but stay within your budget and you'll be happier.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Use more kindness and gentleness at home and improve harmony there. Make this a most worthwhile day.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A good day to make detailed plans that could give you added security in the future. Catch up with your reading today.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You may want to add to income but be careful of tricky individuals that could bring you much trouble. Express happiness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Not a good day to be forceful with others. Plan how to have a more ideal social life. Be charming with everyone.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You had better carry through with an important responsibility you have instead of trying to get out of it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have different ideas now than usual but do nothing to upset others. Live by the Golden Rule and be happy.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Your intuition is fine now, so follow it for best results. Make new arrangements for gaining your most cherished aims.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one endowed with many talents and should have fine surroundings and personalities about early in life in order to set the right pattern for a most successful life. One who will lend a helping hand to others.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, JUNE 23, 1980

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are not sure about the truth of information you have received because deceptive conditions are in effect. Try to be more open-minded and objective in all your dealings.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't interfere with your mate's activities today or there could be trouble. Study outlets that could add to your income.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use tact and avoid argument with a stubborn associate. State your views to those who can help you in the future.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan your affairs on a sound basis and gain added security in the future. Listen to what an expert has to suggest.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You may have to postpone plans for a social gathering because of a new situation coming up. Be logical.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Begin the week properly by cooperating more with associates. Study new ways to improve the quality of your life.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You may have difficulty gaining the data you need today, so be more tactful and steer clear of impending danger.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) New thoughts about the money you have may not be right, so be sure to make a careful study before making a decision.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't be forceful with others to gain your aims today. Take more time to formulate a better plan of action.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study your money situation and take steps to improve it. Take time for relieving tensions in the evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Not the right day to see an influential person who can be of help to you. Be more objective in all your dealings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Show that you appreciate the support of higher-ups and gain further goodwill. Many benefits can come your way.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You have fine ideas that should be put in motion without delay. Find a good philosophy of life to follow for the future.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one who can comprehend difficult situations, and would do well in investigative work, so direct the education along such lines for best results. Be sure to give good religious training early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Dear Abby

Young Lovers Need More Than Cooling Off

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Our son who just turned 17 and his girlfriend who is 16 have been going steady for 10 months. They insist that they are "in love," and we know for a fact that they have been sleeping together. (They admitted it.) We feel that they are not mature enough for such a serious relationship.

We have asked that they agree to a six months' "cooling off" period, during which time they will both date other people but not each other. At the end of this period if they still feel the same about each other, they may then go out with each other.

The kids think we are being very unfair to ask this of them. What do you think, Abby?

CONCERNED PARENTS

DEAR CONCERNED: You are not being "unfair," but you are being unrealistic. Most teen-agers who think they are "in love" and are sexually active will find a way to be together no matter what.

As concerned parents you should make sure your children know all the facts in order to prevent unwanted pregnancy and VD. And please don't feel that giving them information is the same as giving them permission. It's not; it's simply being realistic and lovingly protective.

DEAR ABBY: Last year Kenny, my husband of 10 years, walked out on me and our two children, claiming he had found a "new love." For eight months we heard nothing from him. Suddenly two weeks ago he called to say that he had broken up with his girlfriend, and that now he realizes he still loves me and wants to come home.

In the meantime I met another man I care deeply about. Although Kenny wasn't the world's greatest husband, the children love him and miss him.

Should I take him back and sacrifice my own happiness for the sake of the children?

MIXED EMOTIONS

DEAR MIXED: A man who could desert his children for eight months would hardly qualify for Father of the Year. Take him back only if you want him for a husband. Don't "sacrifice" your happiness for the sake of your children. Martyrs make poor wives.

Post-Tito Yugoslavia Is Operating Almost Normal

By STEPHEN H. MILLER
Associated Press Writer

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The first weeks without President Tito have brought Yugoslavia an official campaign against "hostile forces" that are not named and new activity by dissidents.

Diplomats say, however, they don't see anything profoundly serious in all this.

"Hostile forces will try to operate more openly," Communist Party official Dusan Dragosavac said this month at the first meeting of the party Central Committee since Josip Broz Tito's death on May 4.

Dragosavac's comments coincided with the disclosure that 35 prominent Yugoslavs had appealed to both the new State Presidency and the party leadership to release jailed dissidents.

Croatian Communist Party leader Milutin Baltic earlier had made the first post-Tito attack on dissident Milovan Djilas, saying he was trying to gain support from "reactionary" forces.

Baltic accused the West of trying to frighten Yugoslavia about the Soviet bloc, and pro-Moscow agitators of trying to frighten the country about the United States.

The warnings and new dissident activity came after nearly a week of one of Belgrade's most elaborate civil defense drills in years, one complete with mock air raids and bogus enemy forces handing out seditious pamphlets.

Two known trials for anti-state activities have taken place in Yugoslavia since Tito's death, but both involved activities under way before. No specific cases of terrorist anti-government activity have been disclosed by Yugoslav or other sources.

"This is customary with us," a usually well-informed Yugoslav journalist said of the warnings and calls for new vigilance against vaguely described enemies, long a common theme when Tito was alive.

"These are things which need to be said from time to time," the journalist added. "But you can't really say there's anything new now."

The one tangible new development was the appeal to free unnamed jailed dissidents. Signers of the appeal included a painter recently criticized for a political gallery display and one of eight professors fired from Belgrade University in 1973 in a crackdown on dissidents.

Both state and party seem likely to ignore the appeal, which appeared to be a move to test the reaction of the new leadership.

Eight Albanian nationalists were sentenced to prison terms recently for anti-government propaganda in Kosovo, Yugoslavia's poorest province and one populated mostly by ethnic Abanians.

Seven Yugoslavs, age 36 to 62, went on trial in the Croatian capital of Zagreb, accused of trying to run a terrorist group which allegedly received guns, ammunition and explosives from emigre groups in West Germany and France.

They were accused of planning to blow up "economic objects" and kill prominent Yugoslavs. The scheme was said to date back to 1976, but it was not disclosed if Tito's long illness and death had brought new activity.

Croat separatists and Serbian nationalist groups, though still active abroad, are thought to have little real support in Yugoslavia itself after 35 years of Titoism.

Yugoslav security agents are able to keep reasonable close tabs on such groups both inside and outside the country, some Western officials say.

The Zagreb group was the first whose existence had been publicly conceded to exist inside Yugoslavia since 1972, when 19 armed emigres crossed the border in an abortive mission which ended in the death of all but one, who remains in prison.

There are no signs that the federal government had any hand in the timing of the trials.

Yugoslavia's new leaders have instead been moving to attack the country's serious economic problems and putting finishing touches on the collective system Tito designed to take over after his death.

The eight-man State Presidency approved a 30 percent devaluation of the Yugoslav dinar in an attempt to cut the country's chronic trade deficit.

In a temporary move aimed at inflation that hit an official 24 percent last year, prices have been frozen at June 6 levels while Yugoslavia's six republics and two provinces try to agree on what to do next.

Both moves are aimed at problems which built up during the Tito years. Some Western officials in Belgrade believe Tito's four-month illness delayed earlier action, noting that Yugoslav officials had spoken in January of economic moves which then were never made.

Doronjski had been "presiding officer" of the party since last October under Tito. His new position completes a gap in the leadership structure left by Tito's death.

Doronjski will serve only until the end of his regular term this October and must share power with 23 other Presidium members, much as State President Cvejetin Mijatovic shares power with seven other members of the collective State Presidency.

The short terms and limits on personal power are features of the system Tito designed to prevent clashes among personalities and regional interests after his death.

Both state and party leaders are all Tito loyalists who had actually been running Yugoslavia's day-to-day affairs for years.

Western experts say that within the government, the early shift to politics without Tito appears to have gone as smoothly as most predicted.

Devise New Tools For Disaster Aid

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — New methods to move debris and treat broken bones after a tornado or volcano have been developed at Michigan State University for a worldwide disaster-aid project.

MSU researchers developed a device which weighs 20 pounds and can lift 500 pounds and also designed a universal kit for treating broken limbs.

Designers Ron Kemnitzer and Roger Funk say the device cost about $30 to build and requires little physical strength and no instructions to operate.

"It can be easily used by survivors of a disaster, who may be under much stress at the time," Kemnitzer said.

It's made of heavy-duty cardboard impregnated with wax to resist deterioration and contains pictures of first-aid techniques.

Four compartments in the box hold corrugated paperboard splints for arms and legs, basic implements for putting a victim in traction, and a first-aid kit to treat shock and bleeding.

The entire kit is light enough for a child to carry, costs about $6 to assemble and could treat 15 people, said MSU graduate student Nancy Blechman Clark.

The two MSU innovations were among 67 submitted from 21 countries as part of a project sponsored by the United Nations, the Red Cross and the International Council of Societies of Industrial Design.

The designs are part of a report and slide show circulating among international aid agencies which could agree to undertake mass production of them.

LEGAL NOTICE

P.W. Kendrick, M.D., President of K and F Leasing Company, Greenville, N.C., filed notice on June 13, 1980 of intent to incur a capital expenditure for the purpose of acquiring and installing six (6) additional dialysis stations at the Greenville Dialysis Facility. The equipment is estimated to cost $31,000 and minor renovation of the facility to facilitate the equipment is estimated to cost $3,900.

Under provisions of the Social Security Amendments of 1972 and Chapter 131, Article 18, of the General Statutes of North Carolina, the proposal was submitted to the Certificate of Need Section, Division of Facility Services, North Carolina Department of Human Resources, for review by planning agencies, including the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency, Inc., Greenville, N.C.

These agencies, in examining the proposal, will seek to determine whether the project is needed, if it can be adequately staffed and operated, whether it is economically feasible within prevailing rate structures, and if it proposes specific cost containment features.

Sheepskins Not The Real Thing

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Graduating college seniors may have stepped to the stage this year with dreams of finally getting that sheepskin, but they probably returned to their seats with something more prosaic — a paper diploma.

Unless, that is, they were graduating from a bastion of tradition such as Western New England College Law School, where students voted 2-to-1 to give themselves the more expensive, but undeniably real, McCoy.

Elsewhere, the increasingly expensive sheepskin diploma is going the way of goldfish swallowing and the raccoon coat. But Western New England's law students figured authenticity was worth $28 — twice the price of a parchment-paper degree.

"The diploma is something you'll have with you all the rest of your life," reasoned Student Bar Association President Paul Noto. "After the money law students have invested in their education, an additional $14 doesn't seem like that much."

Even so, the sheepskin has been disappearing from America's college commencement exercises in recent years. Some, such as the Boston University Law School, have given it up altogether; others, such as Emerson College, reserve sheepskin for honorary degrees.

Cost is one reason. Sheepskins sold by Samuel Ward Co. of Boston are imported from England, which is where the sheep are, and "the exchange rate is always changing," says Ward's Ruth Shapiro.

Sheepskin also is more difficult to print or write on than paper. "Not many people are willing to hand-letter on it anymore," says Ms. Shapiro. "No two pieces are the same, so it's hard to get a good flow going. And you can't erase on it." Engraving, she adds, is also more difficult.

Ward, which sells diplomas throughout the Northeast, refrigerates its sheepskins before shipment, because they tend to curl, shrivel up and harden if exposed to heat.

"The advantages are more psychological than anything else," Ms. Shapiro admitted. "Most people have trouble telling the difference."

But if graduates examine and compare their sheepskins carefully, they will notice that each is a different size, thickness and texture. Each is hand-cut and, as Ms. Shapiro says, "looks a little fancier than a paper degree."

Accordingly, says Ms. Shapiro, neither cost nor curling have dampened the enthusiasm for sheepskins at New England prep schools, where the traditional and the fashionable are often the same.

But its charms are apparently lost on some, even at Western New England, where two graduating law students received parchment degrees. One spurned the sheepskin for what college spokeswoman Cary Downs Jack described as "religious reasons." The other, she said, is a vegetarian.

'Appreciate' Trip To Iran

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — An Episcopal priest who was among the 10 Americans who defied President Carter's ban on travel to Iran has received appreciation for it from his church.

The Episcopal Church's 44-member executive council approved a resolution expressing to the Rev. Paul Washington of Philadelphia "its appreciation and concern for his sincere efforts in the cause of justice and peace."

Washington was part of a group led by former Attorney General Ramsey Clark in participating in an international conference in Teheran on grievances against the United States.

"Such a mission is undertaken at some personal risk," the council said, but "it is to be recognized that efforts on behalf of justice and world peace often require both individuals and groups to test existing regulations.."

Meanwhile in Reading, Pa., 1,000 delegates to the Eastern Pennsylvania Conference of the United Methodist Church narrowly approved a resolution backing Clark's trip to Iran.

Again Request Laicization

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — For the second successive year, the National Federation of Priests Councils has asked Pope John Paul II to resume laicizing of priests wishing to leave the ministry.

After he took office in 1978, he halted the laicization program instituted by the late Pope Paul VI in 1965 by which thousands of priests have been returnd to the lay state and permitted to marry.

Delegates to the annual meeting of the priests' organization said the process should be resumed, and it should exclude any punitive measures against priests applying for laicization.

Pride In New, Automated Guided Missile Frigate

By JAMES V. HEALION

AT SEA ABOARD THE USS MORISON (UPI) — For years, Larry J. Anders has wanted a Porsche — a fast, maneuverable sports car.

Gazing to the horizon from the wrap-around bridge of the new guided missile frigate Samuel Eliot Morrison, the Navy captain now feels he has something even better: a sleek and powerful frigate, the newest of its kind.

"This is the Porsche of the destroyer fleet," he said. "I can't believe I'm being paid for this ... The Navy ought to charge me for this experience."

Anders, 42, of Pasadena, Calif., is a 20-year Navy veteran. His previous command was the minesweeper Dominant. Now he is the prospective skipper of the 445-foot Morison, seventh of a new class of 54 computerized escort ships designed to clear sea lanes for convoys in wartime.

It is so automated that under wartime steaming it can operate efficiently with just 22 of its 150-man crew on watch. Its two main gas-turbine engines can reach more than 30 knots.

The ship, named for the late Harvard scholar, admiral, and Pulitzer-prize winning naval historian, underwent two days of rugged testing in the Gulf of Maine by men of the Bath Iron Works, shipbuilders for the Navy since 1890.

Anders prowled the vessel, poking into every nook and cranny, asking knowledgable questions in a quiet, crisp way.

"We're going to have to learn to put this ship to its best advantage. We just know what she's designed to do and she meets the design criteria," he said.

He spoke of the Morison's vast technical capability and of the expertise of its basically hand-picked crew. "It gives you a good feeling inside if you to go out there and do your thing," he said.

He was asked if the Morison might be vulnerable to attack.

"If you took a missile the size we think the Russians have, you're going to have problems," he said. "Sure, it's vulnerable. Any ship is vulnerable." But he points out the Morrison is far from helpless.

It has a cluster of missiles in its bow silo, carries torpedoes and packs a 76 mm gun, a rapid fire weapon that can be used against aircraft, incoming missiles, or surface vessels. Two anti-submarine helicopters can whip aloft from its stern.

Proof came in one of the 85 trial events scheduled by program manager Henry Stupenski and trial coordinator Abbot Fletcher. A jet fighter zipped into range and was picked up by the ship's sophisticated combat information center while 65 miles away at 20,000 feet.

"We fire a missile so that it will intercept at the maximum range — the first opportunity, using what you have to the optimum," said William Rich, who is the skipper, as yard captain.

In other words if the first missile misses, the ship has ample time for another chance at the attacker.

Rich took the Morison down the Kennebec River on her way to open water, tooting the ship's horn as it passed a lighthouse. That was for the mother of the Morrison's popular chief operating engineer, William A. Lowell, who lives nearby.

Once through the narrows and into the Gulf of Maine, ship rigger Michael Zubiate, 24, took his turn as helmsman. He sat easily in front of the broad console on the bridge and kept the ship on course by turning a brass dial no bigger than a large doughnut. The days of the 10-spoke wheel are history.

"It steers better than a man can steer," Rich said, "but like everything electronic, better keep the man around."

Down in the engine room, Lowell, the chief engineer, stood in spotless green coveralls, studying a big console. He could tell at a glance if anything was abnormal in the propulsion system.

"It does everything but wind your watch," he said.

One slot registered 41,000 horsepower. "That's a little over the contract requirements," Lowell said, "We are purposely doing this to give confidence to our customers."

Fatigue in a defective cable connection suddenly ruptured a vital temperature monitor and Lowell shut the Morrison down. A failure is not unusual in such trials, which are held to detect them.

A radio message to Bath produced a replacement connection, delivered by helicopter to the Morison's stern. The replacement was installed and the ship eased ahead and took the rest of her testing in stride.

The warships are being done ahead of schedule and under cost by Bath Iron Works, a radical departure for an industry awash in the red ink of budget excesses and long building delays.

Bath built the prototype of the vessel — the Oliver Hazard Perry — in 1977, and followed that with meticulous planning, extensive land-based testing, and tips from other lessons learned on the Perry.

Two years later, the second ship in the class, the Francis X. McInerney, was delivered 11 weeks early and 5 million under cost, which is estimated at $65 million per ship. With additional outfitting and $150 million in Navy supplied armament and equipment, the end cost is over $200 million per ship.

Command of the ship will shift to Anders, a native of Pasadena, Calif., if it survives the inspectional gauntlet of Adm. John Bulkeley and his 40-member survey team.

Bulkeley is the combat sailor's sailor, a World War II Medal of Honor winner whose PT boat exploits were the basis of "They Were Expendable," a book and later a movie.

"That book is required reading for my officers," said Capt. Charles L. Mull, the Navy's local supervisor of shipbuilding, who heads a 200-man force of engineers, architects and technicians.

After trying out the frigate Joseph J. Clark, he was so pleased that instead of authorizing one broom to fly from its mast after his inspection, he ordered two. The broom is a symbol for a job well done.

The insistence of Bath Iron Works people to get things done right was evidenced a number of times during the two-day trials. Sid Dudley, for example, was overheard in a wardroom conversation telling a colleague, "As far as I'm concerned, somebody better square that thing away — and quick, too. The Navy has a job to do."

The arrival of the Morison is a far cry from America's first frigates, sailing ships built in 1795 in a half-hearted response to the taking of American hostages for ransom in Algiers. The Barbary States — the little countries on Africa's northern coast — had been enslaving seafaring Christians for centuries.

More than 40 Americans had died as slaves in captivity. Others languished as long as 10 years before the frigates were finally approved. But a treaty was signed and a ransom package totaling $1 million, including one of the frigates, was handed over to the pirates.

The episode contributed a legend to American history by the construction of the most famous of all frigates — the U.S.S. Constitution, better known as "Old Ironsides."

Measuring 175 feet at the water line, the 52-gun ship slid down her Boston ways in 1797, carrying a jam-packed crew of 388 men. Its now the oldest warship afloat and docked in Boston harbor.

In those days, each sailor was alloted a width of 22 inches to sling his hammock below decks. Wisps of ventilation came from hatches that were closed in heavy weather.

That's a stark contrast to the Morison's compartment bays sleeping 6 to 8 crewmen each. The sleeping bays are grouped forward and amidships. Each adjoins a lounge area where those off duty can relax and watch television.

Another big difference is the food. The crew of the Constitution had a basic daily ration for three meals of a pound of pickled or salted beef or pork and 14 ounces of biscuit.

The Morison has cooks working in a stainless steel galley with all conveniences. They serve hearty Navy chow — with second helpings.

Bath is the lead yard in the development of the frigates. Others are under construction at Todd Shipbuilding Corp. in Los Angeles and Seattle.

The 1979 payroll at the Bath Iron Works, which has about 10 applicants for every opening, exceeded $83 million, up from $26.6 million in 1970. Its 6,000 employees have $650 million in various contracts ahead of them — a peacetime record for the yard.

Bath has broken away from the traditional "bathtub" method of building ships. Its 15 frigates will be built in open, free-standing modules, making for easy working access and tight supervision as well as replacement simplicity.

Swordmaking Art Displayed

By SALLY CARPENTER
Associated Press Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — With a tiny stone on his thumbnail, the "tosho" polishes a small part of a blade as strong as it is sharp. He is one of six Japanese swordsmiths demonstrating their ancient craft for the first time in the United States.

The University of Dallas Celebration of Japanese Arts also includes a "Tea and Steel" exhibition of tea-ceremony ceramics and swords on loan from the Japanese government and U.S. collectors.

Yoshindo Yoshihara of Tokyo became the first swordsmith to practice his art in the Western Hemisphere when he set up his forge in this Dallas suburb April 1.

He was joined by another smith, two polishers, a scabbard maker and a soft-metal worker — a rare gathering even in Japan, where toshos generally work alone.

They are making 15 Samurai swords, once used by the wealthy warrior class to rule Japan's ricelands. All 15 have been sold to collectors for $2,500 to $5,000 apiece.

The Samurais, who rose to power in 600 B.C. and made up less than 10 percent of the population, "with the sword ruled the rest of the nation," said Randolph B. Caldwell, who teaches Japanese history and art at UD.

Caldwell, who organized the demonstration, said the six were prominent swordsmiths in their homeland. Their craft stretches back two centuries, but the purification and carbon-control techniques are "only superseded in modern time," he said.

The swords begin with a mixture of iron and charcoal. A bellows provides air pressure to heat the metal to 1,500 to 1,700 degrees. The smith then hammers out the metal on an anvil. He folds the iron each time, permitting layers to multiply geometrically. Impurities rise to the surface and pop off in the form of skag.

When the metal is drawn out in the shape of a blade, a clay and ash mix is spread over it for insulation and it is heated to 1,700 degrees. At night, the blade is plunged into a water trough for tempering.

Twelve grades of stones, from coarse to fine, are used for polishing the blade — a two-week process.

The "habaki," or collar maker, fashions a double gold collar to hold the blade in its scabbard.

Keith Austin of Yuba, Calif., serves as interpreter and apprentice. He researched and studied the swords in Japan, and has been making them for two and a half years.

Although Samurai swordsmen still demonstrate use of the swords, the "last big surge" of practical use was in World War II, he said.

Swords considered national treasures in Japan and dating to the ninth and tenth centuries also are on display, as is pottery from the 1600s.

Local Elementary Students Receive Early Exposure To Foreign Languages

Text By Jerry Raynor

Photos By Gary Ambert, ECU Dept. Of Foreign Languages

In the school year just finished, a sizeable number of lucky youngsters experienced the pleasure — and the challenge — of getting into the first steps of the process of learning a foreign language.

In city and county elementary schools, and at a language learning laboratory on the East Carolina University campus, students in kindergarten through the seventh grade received basic instruction in three European languages — Spanish, French, and German.

The past school year was not the first one in which cooperative arrangements between the university and public schools made possible the teaching of foreign languages to young students — it was however, the most extensive series of programs to date, with more students given an opportunity to learn the ABC's of a tongue other than English.

Mrs. Marguerite Perry, chairman of ECU's Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures, remarked that "I have long been an advocate of the idea of getting into foreign languages in the elementary schools. Through the years this has proven to be the most worthwhile approach in teaching children another language."

Mrs. Perry praised the efforts of Charles Ross and Mrs. Kay Whitehurst in their role of coordinating their side of the program. She added that county school personnel were equally helpful for the program conducted in two of the county's elementary schools.

Traditionally, the emphasis in American schools on learning a second langauage has been primarily that of the cultural advantages derived from such knowledge. In recent years, however, a note of urgency has been placed on foreign languages, with a more vital concern entering the picture as a motivation for stressing that more young Americans learn a foreign language.

This concern is expressed in the cover letter attached to a document delivered to the president of the United States, a document prepared by the President's Commission on Foreign Language and International Studies. The opening paragraph of the letter reads — "Your Commission on Foreign Language and International Studies has completed its assignment and, with a sense of great urgency, presents the report of the findings. We have discovered and documented weaknesses in the area of our inquiry which, in our view, pose threats to America's security and economic viability."

Traditionally, a significant number of American educators in general have not felt that learning a foreign language was an important part of the educational curriculum. "In fact," Mrs. Perry commented, "many well known educators of the past thought the teaching of foreign languages was dangerous." On the other side of the ledger, sizeable numbers of students in foreign countries have for years received early and continuing instruction in a language other than their own.

Wahl-Coates Program

"The Commission's report was published in November, 1979," Mrs. Perry said, and it "urged the U.S. government to take action to remedy the nation's scandalous lack of language competence and cultural understanding documented by the commission in its year-long study.

"Soon after the release of this program," she added, "the ECU Foreign Language Department undertook a project to introduce the study of French and Spanish to children in the Wahl-Coates Laboratory School."

The program, primarily involving fifth and sixth graders at Wahl-Coates, provided weekly instruction in French and Spanish.

Program At Brewster.

Then, during the last six weeks of the recent school year, through joint sponsorship of the Greenville City Schools and the ECU Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures, a special program was set up. This involved a number of sixth and seventh grade students who attended weekly classes in French in the Brewster Building (where the Foreign Language Dept. is located) during after-school hours.

"School administrators and homeroom teachers involved in these efforts have confirmed the belief that beginning language study at an early age is essential for best results," Mrs. Perry remarked.

Volunteer Project

Another project, made possible by individual faculty members who volunteered their services to Greenville and Pitt County schools, gave several hundred children in kindergarten through the seventh grade an opportunity to receive instruction in French, Spanish and German during the past school year.

These four faculty members, who Mrs. Perry said "gave generously of their time and talent," met with students usually on a once a week basis for periods ranging from six weeks to several months. These were:

— Mrs. Helga Hill, who taught Spanish to fifth graders at A. G. Cox School;

— Mrs. Raquel Manning, who taught Spanish to second and fourth graders at Elmhurst Elementary School; and — Dr. Nancy Mayberry, who taught French to third graders at Wahl-Coates Laboratory School.

Early Start Program

And it was not only school age children who had an opportunity to try their hand at learning a foreign language.

During the fall, Mrs. Manolita Buck arranged for a program in French instruction to be given to children at Lovin' and Learnin' Day Care Center. The center's director is Ms. Meg McCanless, and instruction was carried out by student teachers in French under the supervision of Mrs. Buck.

Future Hopes

Mrs. Perry said she has high hopes of continuing these or similar programs of instruction in foreign languages for students in area elementary schools.

"We are getting in two new foreign scholarship students next year, a young lady from France and a young man from Costa Rica and thus should be able to use their services in language projects.

"Ideally," she added, "learning a new language should be started early and kept going until a person gains a really substantial fluency. The absence of continuity is a problem in language instruction in most schools, and continuity is a vital part of acquiring real understanding in a second language."

The foreign languages chairman also touched on the effect that the discontinuance of foreign language as an entry requirement for many colleges and universities has had in recent years.

"I believe the trend is going toward reinstating a foreign language as an entry requirement," she commented. "Even if this does not happen, I would strongly urge high school students to study foreign languages. It not only adds to a person's cultural awareness, but I am convinced that more and more emphasis will be given to international studies in the future. Also, though a foreign language may not be a college entry requirement, certain degrees require completion of a foreign language before graduation. This is true of all BA degrees and of some of the BS degrees."

A Personal Interest

Perhaps typical of a parent's reaction to having a child or children take a foreign language at an early age was that expressed by Gary Ambert, a faculty member in the ECU Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures.

"As the father of four children, all students in Greenville elementary schools, I have a vital interest in their having these opportunities. It is a fine application of what I would call a micro-process in introducing them to another language and the understanding of other people's language and way of life."

WHAT IS THE FRENCH WORD FOR 11? . . . is the question directed by Ms. Nathalie Baudoin to students who attended after-school French classes at Brewster Building on the ECU campus. Ms. Baudoin is a scholarship student at ECU. She also taught classes at Wahl-Coates Laboratory School.

Folklore Reading For Tar Heel Youngsters

Text By Peggy Howe

N.C. Dept. of Cultural Resources

Folklore! It's fascinating! Remember the unhappy Indian maiden who spurned her lover and pushed him off a mountain top? Quickly, before he fell, she reconsidered and appealed to the friendly winds to return him to her. Since then, legend says, the mountain top, now known as "Blowing Rock," will return whatever is thrown off.

Or how about the unscrupulous brigands who tied a lantern to an old horse's neck and walked her up and down the beach at night to lure in ships to be plundered? That beach of course, is popular Nag's Head.

Remember the legend of the white doe, or the everburning ship, or . . . ?

The stories are endless, and North Carolina's youngsters can sample this rich treasure and at the same time retain their reading skills during the long summer of 1980.

"From Hatteras to Cherokee," North Carolina's first statewide summer reading program, will focus on North Carolina's rich treasure of folklore. From the mountain tales to the legends of the Outer Banks, the full range of Tar Heel folkore will be available for children at the state's public libraries.

Flexible Program

The program is flexible, according to Diana Young, consultant for children's services for the State Library and coordinator of the project. "The State Library has supplied the basic materials," she explained, "but each library will tailor its own program around the folklore theme."

Ninety-four of North Carolina's 100 counties are involved in the project. Local library participation is entirely voluntary, Ms. Young stressed. The program is in keeping with Governor Hunt's emphasis on reading and the effect it can have on lifelong learning.

Ms. Yong mentioned that the summer reading program should be of special interest to fourth graders and their teachers because North Carolina history is currently taught in the fourth grade. She also pointed out that members of the statewide Tar Heel Junior Historians, which are primarily junior high students, are being encouraged to take part.

"We are excited about the program's possibilities," she noted. "Statistics have proven that children who continue reading during the summer retain their reading grade levels in September, while those who do not read show a decline.

Bookmarks And Maps

The map is proving to be interesting to children. Printed on it in the various geographical areas are story titles, so that as a child reads a book, the librarian stamps his map with a pair of tiny Tar Heels. In this manner, a child can literally read his way from Hatteras to Cherokee.

This year, with the help of a grant from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation, materials for the program — booklist, bookmark, map, game sheets and certificate — have been printed and distributed to libraries around the state. Ron Jones of Wake County Libraries is responsible for the artwork.

Worm Race Planned

Among programs planned at libraries is the "Pirate Day." Several libraries have scheduled this event. Children will receive patterns for making tiny piirate finger puppets. The Hyconeechee Regional Library in Hillsborough is also planning a worm race, with kids bringing their own worms which are placed on the outside of a circle, with the worm reaching the center of the circle declared the winner. "Kids love these races," Hyconeechee children's librarian Ellen Cornelius remarked.

In High Point, children's librarian Karen Perry reports that area children will have a couple of workshops they can attend — one on making a "clacker" or "Jacob's ladder," a popular mountain toy; and one on genealogy for children at the third grade level and above.

A couple of traditional magic shows and a special "chemistry magic" show are on tap for Jackson County, according to Jeanette Newsom. She also plans a week-long storytelling festival featuring the well-known "Jack Tales" by Richard Chase, and an attempt to introduce youngsters to each of the stories printed on the "Hatteras to Cherokee" map.

Bountiful Package

Susan Smith, children's librarian at Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Regional Library in Washington plans to "reach just about everybody" with the "Hatteras to Cherokee" summer reading program. "We'll extend the program to our bookmobile service and books-by-mail," she said, "as well as to the school media center which will be open during the summer." She noted the folklore program will also go into Beaufort County's developmental center serving the handicapped.

Throughout the state — fun and activities planned for all the children this summer, and the maintenance of their reading skills plus an introduction to North Carolina's abundant folklore, is a bountiful package that every child in the state can enjoy.

Area libraries taking part in the program include — Sheppard Memorial Library, Greenville; the Farmville Public Library; Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Regional Library; Craven-Pamlico-Carteret Regional Libry; and the Edgecombe County Public Library.

It's An Up Side Down World

Twin Oaks

Mirror, Mirror on the Wall
Which home has the most fantastics of all, THIS ONE! There are exceptional views from its gardens, Florida room, and tree house. Brilliant bursts of flowers, magnolia and dogwood trees with underground sprinkler system. Planter boxes are copper lined. Solid walnut panelling in den that flows into the kitchen. Mother will fall in love with the kitchen which boasts island bar for eating with Jenn-Aire range and numerous outlets for electrical appliances. The den has a wall to wall white stone fireplace. Huge game room with loft that holds several children and lots of toys, plus study and 3 car garage. BBQ patio, 4 bedrooms, 2½ baths. The breakfast room being adjacent to, but not in the kitchen, allows informal "company" meals without use of formal dining room. Fenced area in back yard is very nice for leaving the dog. The children will have the best of schools. 140's.

Private Retreat
A lovely traditional private retreat on a wooded cul-de-sac, this home has special touches not found in ordinary homes. The downstairs features lovely hardwood floors, exposed brick walls, and formal and informal rooms. Three cheerful bedrooms grace the second floor overlooking the surrounding wooded sloping land. A deck and 2 car garage. $97,500.

Ante-Bellum
Right out of "Gone With the Wind", this beautiful home with grandeur galor is in an excellent location. Large parlor, ante-bellum winding staircase, sunporch for sipping mint julips, 5 bedrooms, 3 baths, 2 fireplaces, construction not found today with copper gutters. Extra nice yard with loads of parking areas. $175,000.

Truly Different
Do you want a home that is not like all the others on the street? This Timberpeg home which offers that open feeling and casual living has 3 bedrooms, 2½ baths. Many amenities and in an ideal location, all for $125,000.

Pool-t
- goes tension when you relax in the great room that overlooks nature at its best. Situated on a one and half acre wooded lot that blends in with the natural decor of this truly great home. 3 bedrooms, one with adjoining study, Arianne Clark kitchen and garage. $146,000.

GOLF ANYONE?
Step out your back door onto the 17th green, or if you prefer walk to the swimming pool and tennis courts or if you prefer get your cane pole and fish from the lake. Sounds ideal! All of this is available when you buy this lovely 5 bedroom, 3 bath ranch. Located on a quiet street and has a 7% assumable loan. $105,000.

Country Living
If you like country living, this is a great home for the fantastic price of only $65,000. Very nice floor plan, with double car garage and plenty of storage.

Large Bedrooms
Very nicely decorated with that extra touch that you find in more expensive homes. This home features the very popular great room, large bedrooms with plenty of storage areas. Large sunny lot. $65,000.

The Entertainer
If you like to entertain, this 3 bedroom home is for you. Ideal with its openess. The large den with fireplace and bookshelves open onto a generous patio. Excellent workmanship throughout. A short jog to shopping. Move into today for only $73,900.

Dear Abby
We've got a problem! This large 4 bedroom ranch is at one of our Country Clubs and needs some work and might "scare off" the typical home buyer.

Where can we find an ambitious "do-it-yourselfer" who has the foresight to buy this $75,000 home?

If you hear of anybody who would like to get "a handle on inflation" and invest in the future, please call us.

Tennis Anyone?
Do you like to garden and also play tennis? This lovely two story with a super floor plan offers both - formal rooms, den, 4 bedrooms, 3 baths, complete the picture of a home you will be proud to call your own. Priced in the 90's.

Gourmet Kitchen
Gourmet kitchen will delight the home makers. The very pleasing dinette overlooks a superb back yard that has fruit trees that are bearing fruit now. The adjoining recreational room has a wet bar for the entertainers and a cozy den with fireplace for relaxing. 4 bedrooms, 2½ baths, plus finished basement. Plenty of room for the children and pets

Just Skating Around!
If you dislike steps and are one of those that likes to skate around the house or feel that you must to keep up with your family - then you'll love this new 4 bedroom ranch in Lynndale that has just been finished and ready for occupancy. Den has cathedral beamed ceiling and screened porch adjoining bedrooms and den, exquisitely trimmed out for the most discriminating. Financing available. $115,900.

Paint & Powder
Where can you get a 4 bedroom ranch priced in the $50's? We have it! Needs a little paint and powder, but has a 8¾% assumable loan with monthly payments of only $300.53 for principal and interest. Ready to move into today!

'That' Song Had Different Twist

When plans were being formulated for the attractive performer's first TV special, "Debby Boone...The Same Old Brand New Me" (Monday, June 23, 9 to 10 p.m. on NBC), she knew the public would expect her to sing the song that made her famous — "You Light Up My Life."

Debby had sung it 'straight' so often, that she wanted to do it differently. When she met with the writers, she'd just come from the pound where she had obtained a labrador retriever for a pet.

Out of that came the idea that Debby would sing the song to a puppy. Then, other dogs would come on stage and gather around her in the course of the song.

"Our biggest problem was to get the dogs to stay there and not fight, or do other things," said trainer Sam Jennings. "We used dogs that were well trained, so we had some control."

The dogs represent several breeds and mutts, including Dalmatian, dachshund, St. Bernard, basset hound, Scotch terrier, English sheepdog, and a couple of hounds.

The first time she tried, the puppy ran when some blasting powder went off, as was required in the scene. a second pup worked better and just 'crashed out' in Debby's arms, obviously enjoying being sung to and held.

While the canines were strangers to Debby, they weren't strangers to each other. They'd worked together in a forthcoming movie in which they have a scene where they bark through a window while trapped in a bus.

A couple of them must have had that scene in mind while doing this special, because they started barking and howling while Debby was singing.

The dogs are among 150 dogs, 75 cats and various barnyard animals owned by Frank Inn for work in movies and TV.

"They're used to the routine," said Jennings. "We take them for a walk before they have to go on stage and we don't feed them before they work or they might get sick. They all did a good job and came through like pros on the show."

DEBBY BOONE is all decked out in her new working clothes for her first TV special, "Debby Boone, The Same Old Brand New Me," airing Monday, June 23 (9-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV. Joining Debby will be guest stars Bob Hope, Gene Kelly, Greg Evigan and Jose Ferrer as The Voice.

Sea Captain Molds Boy

A spoiled rich kid grows up fast under the care of a crusty sea captain who has no time for pampering and special privileges in "Captains Courageous." The drama will be telecast Sunday, June 22 (7-9 p.m.).

Based on Kipling's 1897 story, 'Captains' opens with the tense rescue at sea of Harvey Cheyne (Kahn), whose childish indulgences have led him to fall overboard from his father's ocean liner.

His rescuers try to make something of the arrogant boy, but they find his stubbornness and rudeness too much to deal with.

Amidst the dangers and near disasters of life at sea, only the ship's captain refuses to allow the boy to have his own indolent way. Using the wily ways that come with experience to initiate the boy into the rugged necessities of survival at sea, Troop begins to turn Harvey into a sailor as well as a man.

Jonathan, who was 16 when this drama was filmed, was already a seasoned actor when he joined the cast. He won critical acclaim for his portrayal of Sarah Miles' troubled son in "The Sailor who Fell from Grace with the Sea." He also has numerous stage and television credits.

One night during the filming of 'Captains,' Jonathan sat down to dinner with Ricardo Montalban. But there was no idle chatter about batting averages and football scores. Among their topics of discussion: The Shakespearean theatre, international cuisine, filmmaking and British comedy. Montalban, whose own knowledge is extensive, left the table well-fed physically, aesthetically and impressed.

James Brolin Stars

James Brolin, Rip Torn, Jennifer Warren and Strother Martin star in "Steel Cowboy," NBC-TV's Sunday Night Big Event, June 22 (9-11 p.m.).

Brolin and Warren portray Clayton and Jesse Pfanner, who are about to separate because of constant harrassment from bill collectors, and her desire to return to college. Assuring his wife that he'll soon make it financially, Clayton — along with his partner K.W. (Torn) — succumbs to the lure of 'easy money' offered by black market kingpin Pinky (Martin).

But after a couple of hauls, K.W. pulls out, and Clayton returns home, to discover that things have changed for the worse.

Pinky gets revenge for K.W.'s desertion, but his satisfaction is short-lived — Clayton executes his own vendetta in a surprise visit to the black marketeer's spacious home.

Rip Torn, who's played numerous characters, says he found the trucker named K.W. easier than most roles he's had lately. "The further removed you are from a character, the harder it is to play," he explains. "That's where imagination comes in.

TWO INDEPENDENT TRUCKERS, Clayton, right (James Brolin) and his partner, K.W. (Rip Torn), take chances and face harrowing experiences as they try to make ends meet in "The Steel Cowboy," The Sunday Night Big Event, June 22 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

"The trucker reminded me of a man from Arkansas with whom I worked in the oil fields," he continued. "He dipped snuff and that's what I have this character doing. Texas and Southwestern characters are a bit easier for me to do."

Torn has won critical acclaim for his work on stage, including an Obie Award for his direction of McClure's "The Beard." It was later presented by the Royal Court in London and by the Festival of All Nations in Paris.

He's also made his mark as an actor in several productions. Among them are O'Neill's "Desire Under the Elms" and "Night Shift," as well as the 25th anniversary revival of "The Glass Menagerie" at New York's Circle in the Square.

Rarely seen on television, Torn received high praise for his performance in "Song of Myself," a dramatization of the life of American poet Walt Whitman, that aired in 1976.

A Happy Couple

Noted performer Joseph Cotten credits togetherness as the key to the success of his 20-year marriage to actress Patricia Medina.

"We're happiest when we're together," says Cotten, who's now 75, "and we're together a lot. We believe in sharing life and its experiences. From the very beginning we enjoyed being together — laughing and loving together."

'Doc' Takes Bride

Carl 'Doc' Severinsen, musical director of "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson," and Emily Marshall were married recently in Los Angeles, Calif. The bride is a television writer.

Michele Will Tell

Q: What happened to Susan Trustman who played on "Another World" when it first came on the air? B. HAWKS, LOWGAP, N.C.

Q: Is Arnold Schwarzenneger going to star in a film soon? How do I write to him? G. JOYNER, WILSON, N.C.

A: Arnold 'Mr. Everything' Schwarzenneger portrays a fearless comic book hero in "Conan," a feature film that's just been released. Send your letter to the muscle-bound guy c/o Independent Pictures Corp., 6650 Santa Monica Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90046.

Q: My sister and I have a bet about the TV movie "All God's Children." She says the black boy was killed, but I think it was the white boy. Who's right? L. B. IN FAYETTVILLE, N.C.

A: The parents were on one side of the closed door, while the cameras and microphones were on the other. So . . . unless you can distinguish which mother screamed, you're up a creek!

Q: What's happened to Frankie Valli? N. BENTON, NEWTON, N.C.

A: Frankie stays very busy on the nightclub circuit, concentrating primarily on the Las Vegas strip. He does, however, make frequent appearances on various television talk shows.

Q: Someone told me Morris — that cute cat who did all those commercials — is dead. Is this true? P.E., MT. AIRY, N.C.

A: The first Morris died several years ago. But 'Junior' seems to be just as clever and personable as his forerunner.

Q: Is Richard Hatch, who co-starred in "Battlestar Galactica," going to make any movies? I.W., RALEIGH, N.C.

Weaver Hosts

"Country Gold," a special for ABC-TV, will originate from the Grand Ole Opry, and segments will be videotaped on location at various other sites. They include the Longhorn Ballroom in Dallas, Texas, and The Frontier Hotel in Las Vegas, Nevada.

Dennis Weaver has been signed to host the two-hour retrospective of country music. Well-known personalities who'll be performing include Lynn Anderson, Roy Clark, the Carter Family, June Carter Cash, Larry Gatlin and Merle Haggard. Others slated to appear are Waylon Jennings, Barbara Mandrell, Mel Tillis, Ernest Tubb, Don Williams and Tammy Wynette.

Hartman Goes On Reporting

They are the 'shooters,' unique, different from the rest of us. You'll find them among the people they shoot — the powerful, the wealthy, the beautiful and even the tyrants of the world. Part courage, part con, and all artist, they'll do almost anything to get what they want — even to putting their lives on the line. Their pictures of war, disasters, triumphs and tragedies have even changed public opinion.

Now you'll go on assignment with them around the world in "David Hartman...The Shooters," Wednesday, June 25 (10-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Hartman, an accomplished amateur photographer, joins these modern-day soldiers of fortune as they track down their memorable pictures. Locations range from the streets of strife-torn El Salvador to the sidewalks of the Champs Elysees in Paris, from the surf of beaches at Malibu and Mexico to the turf of one of the world's great horse racing tracks in New York. Also revealed are the lifestyles and workstyles of five of the world's most famous photojournalists or 'shooters,' a term applied only to the best in the field.

New Success

"With You I'm Born Again," a recording by Billy Preston and Syretta, has been among the top ten on the national charts for a couple of weeks now.

Carol Connors and David Shire wrote the song, and it's actually an "old-new" hit. "Born Again" was originally part of the soundtrack of a motion picture released over a year ago — "Fast Break." But neither the film nor the soundtrack was successful, and the song seemed destined for obscurity.

Then it was given another opportunity when Preston decided to include it in his new album.

Kristy In Drama

Kristy McNichol has been signed to star in "Ruby Red," a drama about a country girl seeking success as a singer in Los Angeles.

Not Afraid Of Kids!

Joe Santos hasn't slain a dragon in years. Fire-breathing beasts were his forte in children's theater. But he got too busy chasing killers on "The Rockford Files" for seven seasons to go after mythical monsters.

Suddenly last winter the actor — who used to thrill young audiences with knightly deeds — met a fate some of his colleagues consider more formidable than a two-headed dragon: starring opposite a child actress.

So far, it's been a pleasure.

"Melissa Michaelsen and I have a fantastic rapport," says Santos of his winsome 12-year-old co-star on NBC-TV's "Me and Maxx" (Fridays, 8:30 to 9 p.m.). "She's dynamic, unassuming and a real pro who never squawks and works harder than anyone because she must attend school and work each day. And she's a great little golf partner too."

The pair's potential chemistry was first noticed by NBC-TV's President, Fred Silverman. "When he saw my car commercial, which ran during Melissa's movie, 'Goldie and the Boxer,' he decided to pair us in a series," explains Santos.

So, in "Me and Maxx," the Brooklyn actor is cast as a free-spirited New Yorker who's slowly adjusting to the new role of bachelor father to his 11-year-old daughter, Maxx.

"Sure, Melissa's a scene stealer, and she photographs like a dream. But I can't worry about being upstaged. I just have to come up to my end."

The actor with a prizefighter's profile has worked with people like James Garner, Burt Reynolds, Anthony Quinn, Al Pacino, Gene Hackman and William Holden. And he feels he's had considerable practice in keeping up with scene stealers.

Yet when Santos discovered acting at 30 — by accompanying a friend to a drama class — he'd already tended bar, worked in railroad construction gang, loaded ice on freight cars and played semi-pro football.

"With all these experiences, I find facets of myself that lend themselves to whatever script I'm doing," he says.

"Acting is the most fulfilling profession for me there is. I didn't know the incredible odds against me when I went into it. But even knowing them today, I'd risk it all over again."

Starring In Film

O. Henry Classic Airs

A small boy cheerfully proves to two inept kidnappers that crime doesn't pay, but criminals do, in "The Ransom of Red Chief." The O. Henry classic will be rebroadcast on The ABC Weekend Specials, Saturday, June 28 (12-noon to 12:30 p.m.).

Strother Martin and Jack Elam portray the two drifters who meet more than their match when they snatch an energetic boy and demand a ransom that will provide them a stake to get to California.

The kidnapping is simple enough, but the kid makes their hard times a bit harder by showing absolutely no desire to be ransomed. Furthermore, he's eager to assume a new identity as a fearless Indian chief. Then he proves to be just a little bit smarter and a whole lot tougher than his hapless captors.

Billy and Sam (Martin and Elam) quickly learn what any boy's father could easily have told them: when it comes to defying convention and pursuing adventure, two grown men by no means equal one small boy.

'Tiger Beat' Film

"Tiger Beat," a musically-oriented feature film utilizing the teen magazine of the same name, will go into production for Warner Bros. later this year.

Aztecs, Blizzard Clash

While the Los Angeles Aztecs and the Toronto Blizzard are not the hottest names in the North American Soccer League, each team has certain members that are capable of inspiring a strong finish for their respective club.

The Aztecs-Blizzard match-up will be telecast live from Exhibition Stadium in Toronto on Sunday, June 22 (3:30-6 p.m.) by ABC Sports.

The Blizzard, in its second year with the NASL, has been plagued by both injuries and inconsistency so far this season. It lost its first two games, which were away, then won the two subsequent contests in Toronto. A 2-0 decision over Dallas supplied the Blizzard with its first road victory, and Toronto toppled the same team at Exhibition Stadium at a later date.

THE LOS ANGELES AZTECS meet the Toronto Blizzard in North American Soccer League action on Sunday, June 22 (3:30-6 p.m.), with coverage provided by ABC Sports.

Goalie Tony Chursky, picked up from Chicago in the off-season, has been the team's mainstay. Through the first 10 games, he held a goals-allowed average of 1.67, with 84 saves, 17 goals against, and three shutouts recorded.

At this writing, midfielder Drew Busby and forward Jomo Sono are Toronto's leading scorers, with 12 points apiece; both players knocked in four goals with four assists.

Peter Lorimer, the Blizzard's player-of-the-year in 1979, is currently out with a knee injury that's now being rehabilitated from nerve damage. Midfielder Jose Velasquez is also expected to be sitting out the Los Angeles game with a pulled left hamstring.

A big win for Toronto earlier this year was over A.S. Roma, an Italian team. The game was followed by a brief round of fisticuffs, when Blizzard defender Michael Flannigan went to shake hands with his opponent for the game, and the Italian butted him rudely in the head. Flannigan, a one-time boxer, had little trouble quelling the outburst, however.

Other Toronto players to watch are forwards Gordon Sweetzer and Jim Bone. Sweetzer picked up a goal and three assists in one of the triumphs over Dallas.

The team recently signed John Contanas, an 18-year-old from Toronto, which brings the number of Canadians on the team to 10.

The Aztecs had a three-game winning streak going until June 6, when a 5-1 loss to Edmonton snapped the run. Prior to the defeat, goalkeeper Alfredo Anhielo had his goals-allowed average below one, but it shot to 1.38 when Edmonton exploded.

The club has had trouble winning at home recently, although it bested a strong Club America team from Mexico City 3-1 at Pasadena's Rose Bowl. Before the loss, the Mexican squad had an impressive tally of 20-1-4.

"It was a real shot in the arm," said Aztec spokesman Jeff Temkin, who also said a close loss to Seattle could have gone in either direction.

"We should have beaten Seattle when we had them here. Their winning goal came on a foul in the penalty area."

HOLLYWOOD — To ease your mind . . . 'J.R.' lives! And that comes from LARRY HAGMAN, who's planning to spend most of the summer in Texas filming 22 segments of "DALLAS." Larry's still haggling with LORIMAR PRODS. over his salary, but a tentative agreement has been reached.

Meanwhile, Larry's mom, Broadway star MARY MARTIN, is spending several weeks in her son's Malibu beach house. But it won't be all sun and sand for the ageless lady. She's been approached about starring in a TV vehicle that goes into production next month.

One of the town's newest twosome are LINDSAY WAGNER and JACK HALEY JR., and friends are betting the relationship will wind up with a trek down the aisle. The 'Bionic' gal is Jack's first love interest since his split with LIZA MINNELLI.

Another woosome twosome who only have eyes for each other are CINDY WILLIAMS of "LAVERNE & SHIRLEY," and movie producer FRED ROOS.

JOHN FORSYTHE will be pulling double duty on the small screen this fall. In addition to doing the voice-overs on "CHARLIE'S ANGELS," he has a starring role in ABC's new series, "OIL."

Everyone went away smiling after the wrap-up of a segment of REDD FOXX's new show, "SANFORD," that was directed by none other than SAMMY DAVIS JR. Sammy was so thrilled to finally have the opportunity to spread his director's wings, that he gave the entire cast and crew gifts that totalled about $20,000. This amount included the portable video tape recorder Redd was given.

FOR DICK WALSH, author of Treating Your Hyperactive and Learning Disabled Child

I have a learning disabled child and heard that Thomas Edison, Winston Churchill and Nelson Rockefeller had similar problems, yet rose to fame without treatment. Does this mean children can outgrow these symptoms? — M.O. Janson, Westchester, N.Y.

● It's true that some people have compensated for their learning disabilities, but that does not mean that most learning disabled children will do the same. The people you cited were highly gifted, and they had very strong support systems working for them. Another factor, though, is that today we understand more about these problems than we did during their childhood. Should we not try to help the majority of learning disabled children who may not be able to compensate?

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

What gift did Barry Manilow get from a fan that surprised the daylights out of him? — J.E., Brockton, Mass.

● It was 90,000 words — or one sentence, written in longhand, 10,000 times. The sentence? "You are my singer and my song, Barry Manilow." The writer is Lori Scussel, 15, of Vallejo, Calif. For her labor of love, Lori used 313 sheets of paper, which were bound into a book, with the nine words repeated on the cover in gold letters. What prompted her? A burning need to attract Barry's attention and to let him know that she had never been able to buy tickets for his concerts. A local radio station heard of Lori's feat and told Barry, who phoned her. Barry joked about writer's cramp and invited her to be his guest when he next appears in her area.

FOR DICK CLARK, host of $20,000 Pyramid

Why are you in such a rush to get off the set when the show is over? — W. Kenneth Hiatt, Richmond, Ind.

● I live by the axiom that the worst sin is to waste time. I try to make every second count. After each show I rush offstage to my dressing room, either for a business meeting or to make business phone calls. I hate to waste time during my working day — every second is precious. In a reverse sort of way, if I am relaxing at home, I resent talking business at all.

FOR MELISSA MANCHESTER, recording star

What did former New York City Mayor John V. Lindsay do to humiliate you when you were first starting out? — C.M., Yuma, Ariz.

● It was nothing like that. There was a free concert in Central Park. As I was about to go on; Lindsay grabbed the mike and said that a surprise guest, Sly Stone, would be on later. But the crowd wanted Sly that moment. They didn't know me, so they hated me. I died a thousand deaths.

FOR BETH HOWLAND, co-star of CBS-TV's Alice

Since your show is about a diner, do you agree that diners have the best food, and do you like eating in them? — R.P., Eureka, Calif.

● I don't agree that they have the best food, although some of them are quite good. What I enjoy most about diners is to watch the way the cooks crack eggs with one hand. It looks so easy, until I try to do the same thing and get a terrible mess all over the floor. I like eating in old diners. They have atmosphere and color.

FOR JACK MURRAY, research agronomist, U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, Science and Education Administration

What has been the most unusual request you have received concerning lawn care? — B.R., Beachwood, N.J.

● One that came from the recreational director of a cruise ship. He wanted to know how to grow grass on the ship deck used for exercise classes. This is one of the few times that I recommended artificial turf. But typical requests are: "What grass should I seed?" and "My lawn has brown spots. What can I do?"

FOR JUDITH KRANTZ, author of Princess Daisy

Is it true that you need complete silence when you write? — P.N., Panama City, Fla.

● I prefer to work in my workroom with the door closed and the telephone off. However, I'm perfectly capable of writing while under the dryer at the hairdresser, if necessary, and I can write on a pad with a pencil in any kind of public place. Noise doesn't bother me as long as I'm concentrating. The one thing that does disturb me is the sound of a lawn mower outside my workroom.

FOR CATHERINE E. WOTEKI, project director, Food and Renewable Resources Program, Office of Technology Assessment

● Many of the guidelines for a nutritious diet will help you to avoid food contaminants, or at least to reduce your risks. First of all, eat a variety of foods. The greater the variety, the less likely you are to eat too much of a contaminated food item.

PRO AND CON

Should Adult Adoptees Have Legal Access to Their Birth Records Nationwide?

Yes. "Who am I?" and "Where did I come from?" are basic human questions. Yet, only adoptees are denied their geneaology by law. The adoption process discriminates against adoptees. It blocks adoptees' access to knowledge of their biological parentage, nationality, religion, family medical history and the physical, intellectual and emotional characteristics of their forebears. The fact that one comes into a family through adoption ought not to justify denial of this basic information. It belongs to every nonadopted person as a birthright!

CON Richard Blythe, legislative committee chairman, Texas Assn. of Licensed Children's Services

No. Unfortunately, retroactive access to confidential birth records would: 1) Violate existing state laws assuring confidentiality to biological parents. 2) Prove disastrous when the biological parent must expose the realities of a teen-age experience to a present family. 3) Cause many parents to choose abortion rather than relinquish the child for adoption, fearing a traumatic postadoption reunion. 4) Discourage many families from providing adoptive homes, fearing that access for adoptees would lead to the same access for biological parents.

Nolan Ryan Strikes Out for Cooperstown

Despite a mediocre career record, Nolan Ryan is now baseball's richest player. Why? Because every time Ryan and his 100-mile-per-hour fastball take the mound, there's that tantalizing chance of history being made.

Wide World

By Mark Goodman

One sunny afternoon a decade ago, when Nolan Ryan was still a struggling, tender-fingered pitcher with the world champion New York Mets, slugger Bobby Bonds walked up to him and said, "Man, you throw too hard."

That phrase, or such disgruntled, obscene refinements thereof, has flashed around major-league diamonds these past 10 years like a baseball at infield practice. Since his shaky days with the Mets, when his blister-prone fingers seemed to spend more time soaked in pickle brine than wrapped around a baseball, Lynn Nolan Ryan and his unseeable, unhittable, 100.9 mile-per-hour fastball have become an enduring part of baseball folklore. ("He's faster than instant coffee," jokes Reggie Jackson.) At 33, he is surely destined to leave as thorough an impression on the record books as Henry Aaron or Pete Rose. And he will now be compensated accordingly. The age of the supercontract and megadollar has bestowed on Ryan a four-year, $4.5 million contract with the Houston Astros — the richest agreement in baseball history.

All this for a pitcher who has no better than a .500 lifetime record. But as far as the club's new owner, New York shipping magnate John McMullen, is concerned, it is money well spent. His Astros finished but a scant 1½ games behind the Cincinnati Reds in the battle for the top spot in the National League's Western Division last year, and surely, many expect Ryan to make up that difference. McMullen's cash expenditures in rebuilding the Astros may eventually make his friend George Steinbrenner look like Silas Marner. But he points out, accurately, "We may end up spending too much money, but no one can blame us for getting Nolan Ryan."

No one except, perhaps, the California Angels, whose general manager, Buzzy Bavasi, a lavish spender himself of owner Gene Autry's millions, abandoned the battle to keep Ryan before the fray had even begun. Yet, oddly enough, Ryan's quantum free-agent leap to his native Texas inspired less controversy than might have been imagined. After all, Ryan and his flaming strikeouts are clearly the single-most attractive drawing card in the game today. But Nolan's own diffident personality, and his restrained, sensible approach to the bidding game, served to keep matters cool. When he became a free agent last fall, Ryan simply told his attorney, Richard Moss, that he didn't want to get involved in one of those savage bidding wars that have taken so much action out of the ballpark and into the conference room.

"What we did," Ryan says, "was just to visit with everyone that drafted me, then narrow it down to four clubs." Those included Steinbrenner's New York Yankees, the Milwaukee Brewers, the Texas Rangers and the Astros. Houston had the inside track from the beginning, for reasons other than McMullen's profligacy. Nolan and his wife, Ruth, arguably the most beautiful bride in baseball, were born, raised and have maintained a home in Alvin, Texas, a tiny hamlet some 30 miles from Houston, as well as a ranch Nolan runs with his brother only two hours away. And Nolan is nothing if not a homebody — one of the many reasons he was never comfortable in New York. So the first thing Ryan did was have Moss ask Houston to make an offer, and soon he became the gilded property of the Houston Astros as quickly as you can say "four-and-a-half million dollars."

UPI

Says Ryan: "I just wanted to handle it all as low-key as possible. I really didn't want a lot to be made of my salary. I want people to know me for what I do on the mound, not for what I'm paid."

Fortunately for Ryan, there is so much money floating around professional sports these days that contracts are forgotten — in the locker room, as well as in the grandstand — as soon as the umpires cry, "Play ball!" And Nolan spent more time last winter getting his family fully settled at home — permanently this time — than he did concerning himself with money. "We owned a home in California," he says, "and both Ruth and I liked it there. But it's going to be a lot simpler and easier on the children now. It was getting tougher and tougher, moving back and forth. My son's in the fourth grade now, and the other two are old enough to be making friends. It had gotten disruptive, and that played a big part in my decision to sign with Houston."

For a long time, it looked as if nagging injuries — including the sensitive fingertips — and a fearful wildness ("If he hits you with his fastball," Reggie Jackson once said, "you're dead") would keep Ryan from fulfilling the soaring promise of his youth, when he cut them down like sheaves of grain on the playing fields of Alvin. "When I was 8 years old," he remembers, "I knew I could throw the ball past batters. I was the youngest of six kids, and my brother Robert showed me how to pitch. He

Observations

Happy birthday! "Observations" is five years old today, and, my, how we've grown. From the 43 newspapers we first appeared in, we've spread to 503 papers that reach better than half the homes in America. And you're reaching back to us, too, with many thousands of letters and booklet requests a year. Though we get our share of drop-dead notes from the red-crayon crowd, more often you've sent thoughtful comments. Like these:

Reader writes, TV wrongs. "Observations" exists to present a point of view that might not otherwise come to the attention of the American people. But "have you considered using prime time TV to express your ideas?" asks Jim Bruce of Rock Hill, S.C. Yes, but the networks reject commercials on subjects they call "controversial." And that often includes a great many things Americans are discussing, such as national energy policy and oil company profits. Recently, we tried to air a commercial pointing out that over the past five years, we've earned less on every dollar of our shareholders' investment than CBS, ABC, or NBC. Guess who refused to broadcast the message? Right: three strikes and we were left out.

"Four best sellers, three movies, a Pulitzer Prize, but he's never made the 'Observations' column."

Writes of passage. Press coverage given to environmental extremists bothers Mrs. Barbara A. Smith of Clayton, N.J. She and her husband used to have a fishing business in New Jersey and at that time opposed offshore drilling for oil and gas because "people tend to believe what they read in newspapers." But when the Smiths moved to Louisiana, they were surprised at the "positive effects" of the oil industry and at "fishermen and oilmen living harmoniously with one another." Seems truth is stronger than fiction.

Brother, can you spare 19¢? A statistic we printed—that for every $1 we earned from all our U.S. operations from 1974 to 1978 we spent $1.19 on exploration and development of America's oil and gas—seems to have confused several readers. Dwight Simmons of Brooklyn, N.Y., teased us with a check for 19 cents: "If you spend 19 percent more than you earn, you really need it," he wrote. We sent the check back. In addition to profits, our cash flow includes funds from depreciation, which we can and do invest.

Mixed messages. The Rev. Frederick C. Fowler III of Knoxville, Tenn., thinks it's important that we explain that no company should be expected to get out and produce more energy if it's given no profit incentive to do so. And Lisa Grissom, a student at the University of Southern Mississippi, is upset at the "windfall profits" tax. She writes that oil companies shouldn't "be penalized for being successful in the business system on which our country exists.... Your success is our success." Keep writing. And thanks for making our birthday a happy one.

It's a fact (suggested by Mrs. Marjorie Lardy of Carson, Calif.): Government "profits" on every dollar of Mobil's sales last year were 25 cents to various tax collectors; our own profit was just 4.2 cents.

made me catch for him while he pitched, the way older brothers do, and I got the idea from that."

The idea took hold well. He won 20 games as a senior in high school and quickly found himself facing a choice between the University of Texas and the New York Mets. The Met youth movement won out, and Ryan joined the fabulous kiddie pitching corps that included Tom Seaver and Jerry Koosman.

Ryan indeed had brilliant moments with the Mets, notably a game-saving performance against the Baltimore Orioles in the mythic 1969 World Series. No less than Seaver said at the time: "Nolie there, he's going to be the man."

Still, Ryan never remotely realized his potential with the Mets. Some of the coaches thought him too skinny (6 feet 1 inch, 170 pounds) to begin with; there were also the incessant injuries and irritating weekend drills with the Army Reserve, prompting the New York Times's Joseph Durso to write: "He has been on the military list and the disabled list more often than he has been on the Mets' rooming list."

Consequently, in what proved to be the most one-sided swap since Manhattan and the beads, the Mets traded Ryan to the California Angels for aging third baseman Jim Fregosi. (Final Irony Dept: the Mets eventually sold Fregosi for the $100 waiver price; he soon retired and became Ryan's manager at California.)

Wide World

Thus, the legend of Ryan's Express began in Anaheim. During the past eight seasons Ryan has thrown four no-hitters (tied for the record with Sandy Koufax), and over 20 one-or two-hitters. He twice struck out 19 batters in a single game (one time in 9 innings, the other time in 13), and in the 1973 season struck out 383 — a record that could last forever.

He was so overpowering one day in Detroit that, in the eighth inning, Tiger slugger Norm Cash came to the plate brandishing a piano leg. When the plate umpire questioned his choice of weapon, Cash snapped, "Why not? I've got about as much chance with this as I have with a bat."

Last season, though, Ryan enjoyed his finest hours in the sun — or rather, in the twilight. In one week he faced, on national television, the then defending World Champion New York Yankees and the hard-hitting Boston Red Sox. Both games were played at 5:30 P.M. California time — meaning that Ryan was firing out of the sunlight to batters buried in the shade. It was pitiable. Both games looked like one of those Little League noncontests in which a strapping 12-year-old, mature beyond his years, simply strikes out everyone. Ryan embarrassedly lifted his hat as the Angel fans gave him a standing ovation. When reminded of the moment, Ryan says simply, "I was pitching pretty well then."

So well that he led the American League in strikeouts again last year with 223 in 233 innings (that makes seven of the last eight seasons), even though an arm injury kept him well below par in the second half of the season. He moved his career total to 2,902, fourth on the all-time list and well within striking range of Walter Johnson's 3,506 — a record long considered unbreakable.

Still, the Angels' Bavasi thought Ryan ought to take a pay cut (Ryan's record was only 16-14 last year) — no way to deal with last year's most coveted free agent. As a result, Ryan now teams up in Houston with what was already a great pitching staff. The Astros feature the National League's 1979 strikeout leader (and a guy who throws perhaps as hard as Ryan), James Rodney Richard (313 strikeouts in 292 innings), as well as crafty knuckleballer Joe Niekro, who won over 20 games last year. "I've always been fortunate to be part of a great staff," says Ryan, "and this should be the best ever." His arm problems are all cleared up, and he hasn't had to resort to pickle brine in years. "I'm throwing as hard as I ever did," he says confidently. "I just don't throw at full velocity all the time anymore. When that starts to go, I guess it'll be time to hang it up."

Until then, he'll just go on firing strikeouts, securing his niche in baseball's record book — and watching other players battle for the big bucks. "I'm home now," he says, "and I expect this to be my last contract." FW

For Rock's Wilson Sisters, the Heart Beat Goes On

By Bruce Pollock

You can count the number of currently successful all-women rock groups on the fingers of one hand — and still have enough fingers left over for a Boy Scout salute. Once you get past the sisters Sledge and Pointer, the field narrows dramatically. Ever since the days of the Shirelles, females, in order to partake of the rock 'n' roll experience, have had to be surrounded by men, writing the songs, booking the tours, running the show.

But things may be changing. Though there are still few all-women groups, a batch of rock bands has emerged with women in a more prominent role than ever, such as Blondie. And certainly to be considered pioneers in the cause of these liberated groups is the band Heart, spearheaded by Ann and Nancy Wilson.

Until a year ago Heart might have been mentioned in the same breath as such other coed entities as Abba and Fleetwood Mac, in which the women take a subordinate role musically. But now with last year's departure of Heart's lead guitarist, Roger Fisher, the spotlight will fall more directly on Nancy, 26, as Heart's new lead guitarist, and her older sister, Ann, 29, as always, the lead singer.

Though Fisher's departure meant an immediate change in the group's sound, it had additional repercussions. Nancy had been romantically involved with him for four years. And Ann had been with Roger's brother Mike (the group's soundman) for eight years and split with him right after Ann's breakup.

Independence obviously agrees with the Wilson sisters. Together with their mutual friend, songwriter Sue Ennis, the Wilson sisters are responsible for most of the sounds on Heart's highly feminist new album (their fifth), Bébé Le Strange. They collaborated on seven of the 10 songs on the album and participated closely in its production.

"This will be the first time we've really been alone," says Nancy. "We're going to have to try to help each other stay emotionally stable."

Life for the Wilson sisters was never particularly stable. With their father in the Marine Corps, they spent their early childhood on the move, including two years in Taiwan. Eventually they settled in Seattle, where both sisters live today. "Some of the things that made me want to sing come from always changing schools, leaving friends," says Ann. "I suppose I want to be loved as a result of that insecurity."

Ann and Nancy Wilson: Heartthrobs.

Though a life in rock 'n' roll was not exactly what their parents had in mind for their daughters, music was always a constant in their home. Their mother had been a concert pianist, and their father sang in a barber shop quartet. "It frightened them at first," Ann admits, "especially my mother, because she'd read all the horror stories about the rock culture."

The first group Ann and Nancy played in together was an acoustical folk band on the order of Peter, Paul & Mary. Later, when Ann went to Vancouver to form Heart with Steve Fossen and Roger Fisher (bassist Fossen is still with the group, along with original members Howard Leese on keyboards and Mike Derosier on drums), Nancy practiced guitar and performed as a solo after school.

After a year and a half of college in Oregon, Nancy left school to join the band. Several months later their first album, Dreamboat Annie (which featured the popular "Crazy on You" and "Magic Man"), was released, and before long, Heart was playing to massive audiences as an opening act for Rod Stewart. "My life sort of climbed into a sports car and took off," Ann recalls.

By now even their parents have changed their impression of rock 'n' roll. "All of their fears and doubts have been dispelled," says Nancy. "They see we haven't deserted our true selves. We're still close to home." Their mother, in fact, is now their personal secretary. "She's a super organizer," says Nancy. "She makes sure all our bills are paid." FW

3. WINNERS: Winners will be selected from among entries for each Sweepstakes in random drawings supervised by an independent judging organization whose decisions are final. Drawings for each bicycle will take place on or about September 15, 1980 at each participating "Dairy Queen" store by the manager or his representative, whose decision is final.
Winners of bicycles are eligible to win a Sweepstakes Grand Prize. Winners will be notified by mail. Winners may be asked to execute an affidavit of release and eligibility. Only one Sweepstakes Grand Prize to a family or household. All federal, state and local taxes on prizes are the sole responsibility of each winner, as are all fees, registrations, dealer preparation charges, licenses and any similar charge applicable to motorized prizes and all delivery or other applicable charges resulting from winners accepting prizes at destinations outside the continental U.S.A.
4. PRIZES: All prizes will be awarded. The total retail value of all prizes is approximately $300,000 based on the manufacturer's suggested retail price. All prizes must be accepted in 1980. Prizes are not transferable and no substitutions or cash redemptions will be made. If a minor wins a motorized prize requiring a licensed driver, it will be awarded in the name of a parent or legal guardian.
5. The odds of winning depend on the number of entries received for each Sweepstakes and at each participating "Dairy Queen" store.
6. The promotion is open to all individuals who are U.S. residents or U.S. military families residing overseas, except employees or members, and their families, of International Dairy Queen, Inc., its affiliates or subsidiaries, its advertising agencies, and judging organizations and "Dairy Queen" stores. Void where prohibited or restricted by law. These rules do not apply to the state of Washington. The Sweepstakes is subject to all federal, state and local laws.
7. For a list of Sweepstakes winners, send a separate, stamped self-addressed envelope to: "REAL TREAT" Winners List, P.O. Box 761, Young America, MN 55399. (Do not include request for winners' list in Sweepstakes entry.)

6 Tips to Help You Fight Inflation

By Pam Hait

Thanks to inflation, families are finding that their dollars just aren't stretching as they used to. Pinching pennies isn't enough anymore; experts agree that spending, saving and borrowing patterns will need adjusting if a family wants to combat today's prices. What follows are some suggestions to help members of the typical household arrive at a plan to trip up inflation.

● Probably the most important step a family can take toward dealing with inflation is to arrive at a realistic budget and stick to it. Review your basic needs, such as food, rent or mortgage, clothing and medical care and set up a plan that gives those basics priority. Figure out what percentage of your monthly salary must go toward those necessities (it may be as much as 90 or even 100 percent) and then figure your "extra's" budget out of what's left over. This will force you to consider the amount you're spending for recreation; chances are you're doling out more than you realize. Try finding some less expensive leisure activities, like walking instead of driving.

● Take a close look at your credit obligations, particularly those purchases that were made on an installment plan. The interest rates charged for that credit — usually 18 percent or more a year — is money that could be better spent elsewhere.

● Since gift-buying can tip the tightest budget, buy items in quantity when they're on sale. Also, don't flinch at the idea of recycling gifts you receive that don't hit the spot with you. In these inflationary times, it's not tacky to pass gifts around — it's practical.

● Learn to do some of the simpler home repairs and auto-maintenance tasks yourself. Using recycled car parts can cut down on your costs even further. Junk yards are a gold mine for locating these reconditioned parts, and the savings can be sizable, if you know what you need. Since auto-part prices have risen 80 percent since 1973, it pays to poke around.

● Haggling over prices is another trend that seems to be catching on. Don't sneer, for in today's world, the list price isn't always the bottom line. How can you tell if haggling is permitted? Ask quietly. Approach the shop owner privately and ask, "Will you take less?" If he agrees, make a reasonably lower offer. He may counter, and ultimately you'll both arrive at a fair price. Be prepared to trade instant gratification for lower prices, since sellers often want to consider all offers.

● Live just slightly off-season. Travel just before the high-season rates begin or after they end to insure the best weather and dollar conditions. Want to splurge on a fancy meal? Do it at lunch or call to see if the restaurant has an early dinner menu. The ambiance and food are the same — only the prices are reduced. Need some new clothes? Make those expensive purchases at the end of the season when they're on sale and pack them away for next year.

So, while there's no guarantee that these tips can enable you to beat inflation, it's a sure bet any one of them can give you a fighting chance. Most of all, you'll realize that saving money needn't be grim. Sometimes, it can even be fun. FW

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

How Revealing Are Your Sleep Habits?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Your general mood and emotional state — whether it be sad, angry, tense or anxious — is revealed by the way you sleep.

2. The happier you are, the less sleep you need.

3. Simply depriving a person of sleep has been found effective in snapping him out of a depression.

4. If you have trouble sleeping — if you don't look forward to going to bed because recurring thoughts keep you turning and tossing, or nightmares lurk in the shadows of dreamland — you have a lot of company.

5. Your sleeping habits tell interesting things about you.

6. When you're asleep, you're dead to the world — and no longer conscious of what goes on around you.

ANSWERS

1. True. Studies sponsored by Britain's Medical Research Council investigated the sleep characteristics of hundreds of men and women whose emotional states were determined by questionnaires and diagnostic interviews. Findings: "The mood of sadness was characterized by going to bed early and waking early; anxious mood, by delayed sleep but late waking; tension, by going to bed late but then sleeping well; and anger, by the greatest sleep disturbance throughout the night."

2. True. Studies conducted at the Boston University State Hospital Sleep and Dream Laboratory have shown that decreased sleep need is associated with times when everything is going well and when individuals are involved in work or other activities that they find particularly pleasant.

3. True. University of Lausanne's (Switzerland) psychiatric clinic reports important overall improvement in depressed subjects after 36 hours of wakefulness, and a University of Mainz (Germany) study has shown similarly effective results in the treatment of depressed persons. "In some cases the improvement was first seen one or two days after the deprivation." And in further studies at Germany's University of Munster, on men and women affected by forms of depression, it was found that total sleep deprivation of one night and partial sleep deprivation during the latter half of the night have proven effective in the treatment of depression. Length and extent of cure varied considerably from individual to individual. The investigators conclude that sleep deprivation affects depression "by altering the cicadian rhythm in a manner relevant to its physiological and psychological functions."

4. True. A study of the presence of sleep disorders in the general population of the Los Angeles area, conducted by the Hershey Medical Center, showed an overall prevalence of sleep disorders in a majority of adults. Results are reported thusly: specifically, a prevalence of 42.5 percent of insomnia; 11.2 percent of nightmares; 7.1 percent of excessive sleep ("can't seem to get enough"); 5.3 percent of sleep-talking and 2.5 percent sleep-walking (a dangerous way to get exercise). Insomnia was more frequent in older people, particularly older women.

5. True. At the University of Virginia Medical School, a team of investigators administered personality tests to two groups of students: a control group composed of persons who habitually slept from midnight to 8:00 A.M.; and irregular sleepers, defined as "those whose retiring and awakening times continually varied by about 2 to 4 hours." Report of the findings: Students in the control group scored significantly higher than the irregular group on dominance, sociability, self-acceptance, self-control and intellectual efficiency. However, the subjects who reported erratic sleeping habits scored higher than the others on tests that measured the extent of mental flexibility (as opposed to rigid-mindedness) and the ability to adjust to varying and unexpected conditions in the performance of tasks and to adapt their social behavior to situations ranging from the unusual to the bizarre.

6. False. In a National Institute of Mental Health study entitled Current Research on Sleep and Dreams, it is observed that: Research has certainly shown that, far from being dead asleep, the sleeping person is mentally awake, capable of behaviors of many varieties — walking, talking, dreaming, thinking, solving problems — and he is impressively sensitive to significant events around him. It is noted, for example, that a discriminative sensitivity permits a person to sleep through a string of names that are spoken to him but to awaken to the sound of his own name. And that a mother may sleep through a violent thunderstorm; yet awaken instantly if her baby coughs or cries. FW

How to Travel Light— And Look Like a Million

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

"Vacation travel is great," a friend recently confided — "as long as you don't have to pack for the whole family."

If your wardrobe needs tend to take a back seat when you're planning a trip, we've got foolproof travel advice on the easiest way to pack and how to be prepared for any occasion (without taking a closetful of clothes).

First, plan the outfit you'll travel in. If you're going by air or car, chances are you'll be sitting for a number of hours. Ideal for a man or woman is to wear a comfortable suit, preferably in a nonwrinkle polyester-blend fabric and take a coat, light enough to carry over your arm. Women should avoid a skirt with bulky pleats or one that's too narrow. The suit jacket should be cut with an easy fit. Under it, wear a loose overblouse or sweater. A raincoat is one of the best overcoats for traveling. Men will find a trench coat to be the most versatile. A woman can choose one that's a silklike shell, with pockets, that flares slightly, good for evening, too.

Next, women should consider the following basic wardrobe items, guaranteed to cover all your one-to-two-week-long vacation activities: Two jackets (not white, unless they're wash-and-wear); two pairs of pants; two crew- or V-neck cotton sweaters; four easy-care blouses; two skirts; three dresses, at least one with a matching jacket (a halter, thin-strap or strapless-style day dress can also work for after-five, with added accessories); one cardigan (for chilly mornings or evenings); one jersey stole in black or a deep, bright color (yard-goods stores sell tube jersey, if you want to sew your own; finish it with fringe); a body suit (which may double as a bathing suit — in a deep color that won't show through when wet) with matching long stretch wrap skirt that could be worn at night or as a poolside coverup; three pairs of shoes, one low-heeled for day; the others, sandals and evening pumps.

Generally, you'll have a more enjoyable vacation by resisting the tendency to take outfits you should be getting use out of when you'll probably wear only two or three favorites. Check your destination's weather conditions and pack accordingly. Don't bother to pack formal clothes unless they're called for. Don't try to break in new shoes on the trip. Don't overload on accessories. (It's smart to leave expensive jewelry at home.) And finally, take only as much luggage as you can comfortably carry.

Men, whose wardrobes are usually simpler, would do well to pack in a zippered garment carrier and have one separate, double side-pocketed bag to stack shoes, grooming accessories and shirts. To make the best use of luggage space, remember that sweaters can be hung under jackets; socks can be stored in shoes. Most women find it convenient to use a traditional suitcase. It's a good idea to pack heavy things near the hinge, where they will end up falling anyway. Shoes, wrapped in plastic bags or shoe socks, can be stuffed with small items, as should handbags. Fill out the bottom layer with rolled-up lingerie wrapped in plastic dry-cleaning bags. Your clothes should be placed on top with folds at the waist, shoulder and other natural body lines, layered with tissue paper. FW

Something new has happened to softness. A choice. Now Rave,® the original soft perm, comes in Extra Curly, too. A perm with all the gentleness Rave is known for. And the soft, soft curls you have hoped for.

Which Rave will give me the soft look I want?

Regular Rave is for waves, curls, and body. New Extra Curly Rave® is for the curlier kind of curls you see here. Either way, you'll have just the soft look you want. At long last.

Of course. That is the Rave patented formula. And that is what makes regular Rave and new Extra Curly—the gentle soft perms.

Yes. We tested Rave Soft Perm against a traditional home perm on bleached hair. Look at the difference. Rave left the hair softer, silkier, bouncier. (Of course, excessively damaged hair should not be permed.)

Now you can have the soft look you want, because now you have the choice of soft perms you want. Both at special savings. Both from Rave.®

Food and Drink for Summer Receptions

By Marilyn Hansen

Comes June, and there are the parties of celebration: Weddings, anniversaries, birthdays and reunions of all kinds blossom happily across the land. Here are tempting ideas to amply please your guests.

ONE-STEP POUND CAKE

2¼ cups unsifted all-purpose or unbleached flour
2 cups sugar
1 teaspoon grated lemon, lime or orange rind
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 cup dairy sour cream
1 cup butter or margarine, softened
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
3 eggs

1. Preheat oven to 325°F. Generously grease (using 1 tablespoon solid shortening) and lightly flour a 12-cup fluted or plain tube pan.
2. In large bowl, blend all ingredients at low speed until moistened.
3. Beat batter three minutes at medium speed. Pour batter into prepared pan.
4. Bake for 55 to 60 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean.
5. Cook to lukewarm; invert into serving plate. Cool completely. Glaze, if desired, while still warm or cool completely and sprinkle with confectioners' sugar. Makes 10-inch ring cake

GLAZE

1 cup confectioners' sugar
1 or 2 tablespoons lemon juice

1. In small bowl, blend glaze ingredients smoothly. Spoon over warm cake.

TEA FOR A CROWD

1 qt. fresh cold water
½ cup loose tea or 24 tea bags
Fresh boiling water, as needed

1. Bring the quart of cold water to a boil in a saucepan.
2. Add the loose tea or tea bags. Remove from heat and cover, allowing to steep for five or six minutes.
3. Stir and strain mixture into one or two teapots.
4. When guests arrive, pour about two tablespoons concentrate into each cup and fill with freshly boiled hot water.

Makes about 50 cups

RECEPTION PUNCH

3 ripe fresh peaches, unpeeled
6 cup-size ice ring
1 cup brandy
2 bottles (1-qt. each) brut champagne, chilled
Fresh, unhulled strawberries, rinsed

1. Rub peaches well with damp cloth, then pierce deeply and thoroughly with tines of fork; place in bottom of punch bowl.
2. Put ice ring in punch bowl over peaches. Pour brandy over ice in punch bowl. Add champagne.
3. Garnish punch and individual servings of punch with fresh strawberries.

Makes about 20 punch-cup servings

LEMON BARS

1 cup unsifted all-purpose flour
¼ cup confectioners' sugar
½ cup butter or margarine
2 eggs
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
½ teaspoon baking powder
2 tablespoons lemon juice

1. Preheat oven to 350°F. In large bowl, combine flour and powdered sugar. Cut in margarine until crumbly.
2. Press flour mixture into ungreased 8- or 9-inch square pan. Bake for 15 minutes. Remove from oven.
3. In small bowl, beat eggs and sugar until light-colored; stir in remaining ingredients.
4. Pour egg mixture over partially baked crust. Return to oven and bake 18 to 25 minutes or until just golden.
5. Cool completely. Sprinkle lightly with confectioners' sugar. Cut into small squares.

Makes 24 bars

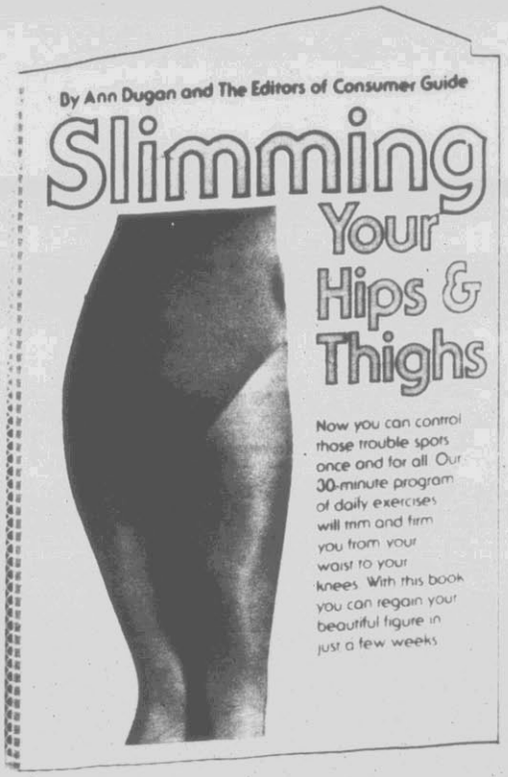
HOW TO TRIM YOUR HIPS AND THIGHS



Americans spend a lot of time sitting down. At work . . . in the car . . . in front of the TV. One result of this sedentary lifestyle has been an increase in the number of people (of all ages) who complain about their "middle-aged spread" —those unattractive and embarrassing bumps and bulges in their hips and thighs. Dieting won't reduce them. And neither will a half-hearted attempt at exercise. But there is something that can help.

SLIMMING YOUR HIPS AND THIGHS, by the Editors of Consumer Guide®, is a book that can show you how to finally control these problem figure areas once and for all.

SLIMMING YOUR HIPS AND THIGHS describes an effective and safe exercise program designed to trim, firm and tone you from your waist to your knees. It consists of seven fully-illustrated exercise routines – one for every day of the week – which take only minutes a day to perform. By following these routines on a regular basis, you should begin to see results in just a few weeks – and so will other people, too.*

You'll be amazed and encouraged as you chart your progress through the specially-designed guide and log included in this book. As you do so, you'll probably begin to notice the side benefits of this easy exercise routine: a trimmer waistline and derrière; improved posture and coordination; better endurance and energy; relief of tension; better circulation; even weight control. Another added bonus is a chapter of special exercises to help in the treatment and prevention of varicose veins – an unsightly and potentially dangerous condition often caused by lack of exercise.

No matter what shape you're in now, you may soon be able to wear with pride those sleek new bathing suits and latest slim fashions. Order your copy of SLIMMING YOUR HIPS AND THIGHS today!

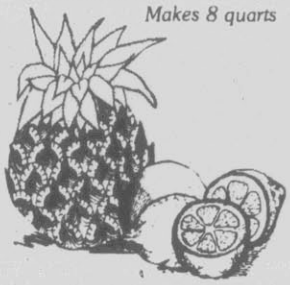
HAWAIIAN LIME COOLER

1 can (46 ozs.) Hawaiian-style red fruit punch
1 can (46 ozs.) pineapple juice, chilled
2 cans (6-oz. size) frozen limeade, thawed
3 cups cold water
4 bottles (12-oz. size) club soda or lemon-lime soda, chilled
2 cans (20-oz. size) pineapple chunks, chilled
4 limes, thinly sliced

1. In large punch bowl, combine punch, pineapple juice, limeade and water. Stir to mix thoroughly.
2. At serving time, place ice float in punch or add ice cubes. Add pineapple chunks and syrup. Slowly stir in soda. Add lime slices.
3. Ladle punch into glasses or punch cups with a few pineapple chunks in each.

Makes 8 quarts



CUCUMBER AND CAVIAR CUPS

2 long (12-inch) cucumbers, washed
1 container (8 ozs.) whipped cream cheese
1 jar (2 ozs.) salmon roe caviar
¼ teaspoon grated lemon rind
Few twists freshly ground black pepper
2 hard-cooked eggs, peeled and sieved
Tiny sprigs parsley

1. Peel cucumbers, leaving lengthwise strips of peel. Cut cucumbers crosswise into 1¼-inch-thick slices.
2. Using a small spoon, scoop out seeds from one side of the cucumber slice, making a little cup. Place cups on paper toweling to drain.
3. In medium bowl, blend cream cheese, caviar, pepper and lemon rind. Refrigerate.
4. Separate egg yolks from whites and put each separately through a coarse sieve.
5. Fill cucumber cups with caviar mixture, mounding high. Sprinkle sieved yolk in the center of filling, sprinkle sieved egg white around edge. Insert a tiny parsley sprig in center. Refrigerate cups until ready to serve. Makes about 20 to 24 cups

GOLDEN FRUIT BARS

1 cup butter (2 sticks), softened
1⅓ cups light brown sugar, packed
2 eggs
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
2 teaspoons grated lemon rind
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
2⅓ cups unsifted all-purpose flour
1 cup chopped golden raisins*
½ cup chopped walnuts
Browned Butter Frosting (recipe below)

1. Preheat oven to 350°F. Grease a 13 × 9 × 2-inch pan.
2. In large bowl, with electric mixer at medium-high speed, cream butter and sugar together until light and fluffy.
3. Beat in eggs thoroughly, then add orange and lemon rind.
4. At low speed, gradually add soda, nutmeg and flour. With large cooking spoon, stir in raisins and walnuts. Spread into prepared pan.
5. Bake for 25 to 30 minutes, or until golden brown. Cool completely, then spread with Browned Butter Frosting. Cut into bars. Makes 27 bars

Browned Butter Frosting

In medium saucepan, slowly heat ½ cup (1 stick) butter over low heat until it has become a golden color; remove from heat. Gradually blend in 3 cups confectioners' sugar, dash salt and 1 teaspoon vanilla extract. Stir in 2 to 4 tablespoons hot water, until frosting is of spreading consistency.

Makes about 2 cups

SHERRY CREAMS

½ lb. (32 ozs.) large marshmallows
1 tablespoon lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon almond extract
2 cups (1 pt.) heavy cream, whipped
½ cup finely chopped, toasted almonds, optional

1. Place sherry and marshmallows in top of double-boiler; cook over simmering water until marshmallows are melted.
2. Stir in lemon juice and almond extract; cool thoroughly.
3. Spoon mixture into fluted paper cupcake cups, mounding in peaks. Sprinkle with almonds.
4. Place cups in shallow pan and freeze several hours or until firm. Makes 12 servings

CRAFTS

Clever Things You Make And Take

Summertime is great for making easy craft objects that can be enjoyed by the entire family.

If extensive car travel is on the agenda, make and take cardboard-carton lap trays for the youngsters. A second carton cut to fit over a child's legs will keep the tray flat, and a cut-off milk container, glued or stapled to a corner, will hold crayons or keep a can of pop from spilling. Board games are cut from felt, so the pieces, also made of felt, adhere to each other instead of rolling around.

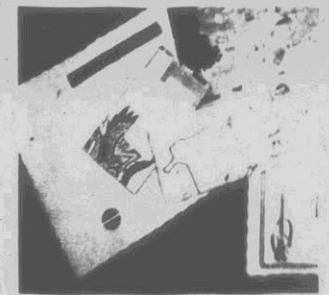
It's also fun to write to friends back home on placemats instead of postcards. The paper mats used in many restaurants are appealing and often give information about the locality. After writing your message on the blank side, the mat is folded into a mailing envelope.

More items to make at home before you leave are luggage tags. Cardboard and iron-on fabric patches or adhesive-backed paper can be put together in minutes to make good-looking tags that will properly identify what's yours.

For family days at the beach, whether at home or away, terry towel cover-ups are pretty and practical. They take very little sewing, and practically no measuring, so that even the nonsewer can turn out several.

For lugging along all the usual paraphernalia, plastic six-pack ring tote bags you create are tops. They'll stretch to hold everything from the youngster's beach toys to towels.

For beach nappers, eye protectors are a must. Egg-carton cups are just the right size, and with a marking pen or some glue-on googly eyes you can make them silly as well as sensible.



Send a note on a placemat you fold into a mailing envelope

Why did Farmer Brown buy the new Kawasaki KLT200 with its exclusive Dual-Mode Differential and bigger engine?

When Farmer Brown went shopping for an all-terrain vehicle that was good for doing chores, and a good time to ride, the choice was as obvious as a Brahma bull in a herd of heifers: the Nebraska-made Kawasaki KLT200.

Why? More exclusive, down-to-earth features. Like the Dual-Mode Differential. All the traction of a solid axle, and the quick-turn ability of two-wheel differential action. For stump-pulling power, the proven four-stroke engine is bigger than anything the competition has. You push a button to fire it up—no old-fashioned pull cords borrowed from a lawnmower. When the going gets real tough, the KLT's manual clutch gets you going easier. Just use a higher rpm for more torque and starting power, and leave the city-boy automatics behind.

Hauling feed or having fun, the Kawasaki KLT200 was everything Farmer Brown expected, and then some. Fact is, he wouldn't trade it for a whole herd of those other critters.

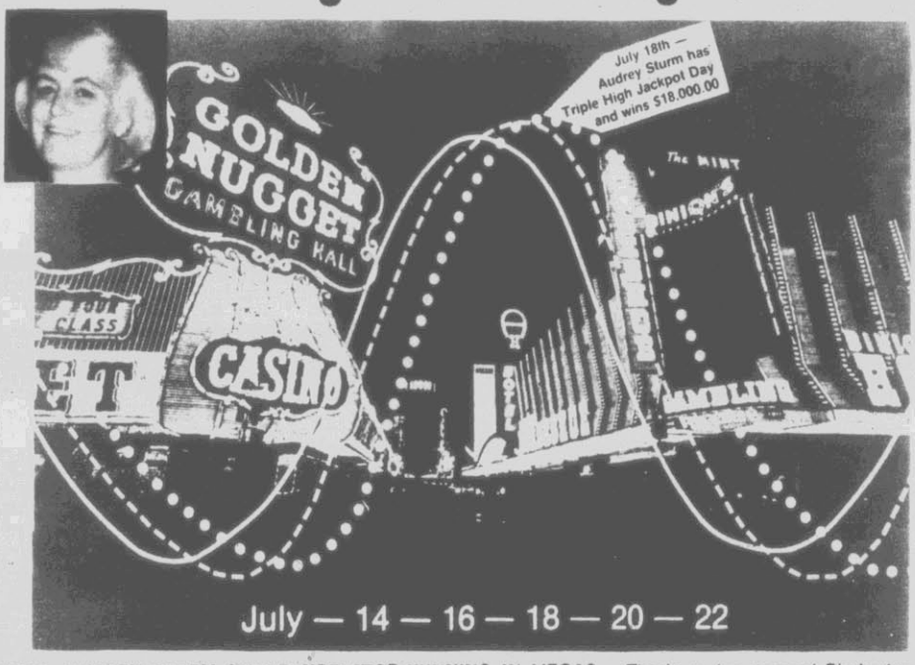
Woman turns $1 into $18,000.00 in Las Vegas by using her Personal Biorhythm Analysis

By PAUL VANDERWIST

It was the best birthday Mrs. Sturm could have ever hoped for. On July 14th, Mrs. Audrey Sturm left her home in La Puenta, California for Las Vegas equipped with only $150 and her personal Biorhythm Analysis. As it turned out, she didn't need the $150.

Mrs. Sturm planned her trip this week because her Biorhythm Analysis said she was having an eight day Biorhythm Hot Streak. After a few days of winning steadily at "21" ($300.00) and Bingo ($250.00) she decided to go for the big money. Buying a $1 Keno ticket with 8 spots, Mrs. Sturm quickly collected $18,000.00.



MRS. AUDREY STURM COULD NOT STOP WINNING IN VEGAS — Thanks to her personal Biorhythm Analysis. Biorhythm is the measurement of the up and down flow of your mental, physical, and emotional life cycles. When the three cycles are high, you experience a Triple High Jackpot Day: Mrs. Sturm's Biorhythm cycles for the week of July 14th are superimposed over the scene of her $18,000.00 triumph, the Golden Nugget. This article explains how you can have your own analysis prepared and learn your Biorhythm Jackpot Days.

Mrs. Sturm described the experience in her own words: "My eyes could not believe the results posted on the Keno board! There is no doubt in my mind that I would have missed all of this, if I had not known when my Biorhythm Triple High Jackpot Days were!"

Mrs. Sturm is not the only person who wagered a little money to win a lot. People nationwide have been dazzled by how easy it is to quickly turn small pocket change into an immense fortune by using Biorhythm.

AUDREY STURM CASHED IN again and again by following the advice of her personal Biorhythm Analysis.

Here are just a few other stories of people who risked very little and cashed in very big by simply letting their Biorhythm Analysis point the way to riches.

"I hardly believe this myself, but I have PROOF. Walking thru a local casino today, I dropped a nickel in a special slot machine and wow! Four sevens lined up for a payoff of $1417.85! The kicker? Today was the first day that my Biorhythm Analysis code reads Triple High Jackpot Day."

Mrs. June Morgan
Reno, Nevada

"On my first Triple High Jackpot Day, I played the Pick-4 numbers game in New Jersey No. 2887. When I called that night and heard the winning number, I couldn't believe it. No. 2887 came up and paid $3,203!"

Joseph Kowalczyk
Newark, New Jersey

Of course, hundreds more people have experienced phenomenal luck using their personal Biorhythm Analysis. But before I tell about some of the other amazing success stories, let me first explain a little about Biorhythm.

WHAT IS BIORHYTHM?

The word Biorhythm is derived from the Greek words 'bio' meaning life and 'rhythmos' meaning regulated beats. There is considerable evidence that we all have three Life Beats (Biorhythm Cycles) 1. A 23 day Physical Cycle, governing energy and sexual stimulation 2. A 28 day Emotional Cycle, governing love and happiness. 3. A 33 day Mental Cycle, governing money and career. These three Biorhythm cycles begin the day we are born and flow throughout our entire lives. They alternate between high and low cycles. When at least two Biorhythm Cycles are on high, you experience a Multi-High Jackpot Day. When at least three cycles hit on exactly the same day, you experience a Triple High Super Jackpot Day. Everyone has these special days. Unfortunately, most people do not take advantage of them.

RESEARCH BREAKTHROUGH

The Biorhythm Research Association was interested in learning if it was really true that good luck was immensely greater on multi-high jackpot days. To help the Association's research, hundreds of people across the country had their personal Biorhythm Analysis prepared and reported what happened when they used their analysis. Because of limited space, we have listed only a few of their remarkable stories.

"This was just unbelievable! On anticipating my first triple high jackpot day, I talked my husband into going to the racetrack much against his wishes. He hit a daily double, and I myself hit not one mind you, but four exactas. All in one day — this never happened before — coming home with a total of $500.00 (in one day)."

Dolores Juliano
Asbury Park, N.J.

"On October 10th while in Reno, Nevada, I experienced a multi-high jackpot day. I marked a keno ticket. I was elated when 7 out of 8 numbers were called for a cash total of $2,391.90."

Elizabeth Leber
Pittsburg, CA

JACKPOT DAYS! When two or more Biorhythm Cycles hit high on exactly the same day, you experience a Biorhythm Multi-High Jackpot Day.

BINGO BONANZA

"After going to the same place to play Bingo for 5 years and only winning small amounts, I found out when my Biorhythm Jackpot Days were and only went then. I finally hit one — the big one for $1200.00. Now I won't go except on Multi-High Jackpot Days. My husband laughed before, but not now."

Mrs. Shirley Jones
Homestead, Florida

WIN BIG AT THE RACES

"Not having ever won anything in my life, I decided I needed help. So I used my Biorhythm Chart. I was very skeptical of the whole thing. But you have made a believer out of me. The trifecta that I played on my jackpot day came in and paid $500.00."

Mrs. Gilbert Lea
Flushing, New York

NEW CAR

"On August 17th, I won a new Camaro car worth over $7,000.00 on a local T.V. show. The contest had been going on for several weeks and I sent my cards on my jackpot days. The chances of being called must have been one in thousands as the drum was loaded. I enter contests and now watch my Biorhythm very close. Thanks for introducing me to the Biorhythm system. I am truly grateful."

Mrs. Ruth Wilson
Fillmore, California

More recently, Mrs. Wilson won a Sunfish sailboat and a 22 foot Crestline stern drive motor boat. Mrs. Wilson has to date won 17 big prizes valued at over $16,000.00, by using her personal Biorhythm Analysis.

Nobody mentioned in this article ventured very much money to win big. When you are equipped with your personal Biorhythm Analysis, you simply don't need to. With Biorhythm, the odds can be greatly in your favor.

Omar Watts was a 59 year old nightwatchman struggling to support a wife and five children. On October 27, his Biorhythm Analysis indicated a Triple High Jackpot Day. It was on this day that Omar chose to quit his job as a nightwatchman. His purchase of a 50¢ ticket had just won him Ohio's first million dollar lottery.

The Biorhythm Research Association has just about completed all their research. But they are still interested in gathering more names of big jackpot winners. If you sent them your birth date, they will individually prepare your one year — 365 day Biorhythm Analysis. Along with your Analysis, you will receive a research blank, which will offer you cash incentives to simply tell the Association all about the unbelievable luck, love, wealth, success and happiness your Biorhythm Analysis has brought you.

HOW IS AN ANALYSIS PREPARED?

A Biorhythm Technician will process your birth information. Your keypunched card will be fed into a giant IBM 370 – 145 computer. The computer will then complete the complicated calculations to determine the positions of your Biorhythm Cycles every day for the coming year. Your Biorhythm Analysis will not be preprinted, as the computer individually prepares each analysis just like a person would. But the computer's tremendous speed enables the Association to prepare reports for the public at low costs.

WHAT CAN BIORHYTHM DO FOR YOU?

- Your luck can instantly improve. Your Analysis will point out your Multi-High Jackpot Days. These lucky days are the best times for you to enter lotteries, drawings, raffles, play bingo, go to the races, play cards, or try any games of chance.
- Your Biorhythm Analysis can make you lucky at love. You'll be told when your Physical (sexual) and Emotional (romantic) high days will occur, so you can take full advantage of them. When you know ahead of time you'll be at your best, your self-confidence will improve. Members of the opposite sex will sense this and be attracted to you.
- Your Analysis will help you perform better on the job and accelerate advancements. Profitable times (intellectual highs) to make career and investment decisions will be pinpointed.
- Your Analysis will notify you when to be on the lookout for hidden talents which may be surfacing. It will then point out the best times to develop these talents.
- By knowing the best times to do things and when to relax and recharge, you'll do everything better than you have before. You can use your Biorhythm Analysis to begin an all around program of self-improvement.
- You will learn your Biorhythm Hot Streaks. These strings of lucky days are the best times to go on vacation, business trips, gambling sprees, or do anything where uncertainty is involved. The odds for success can be greatly in your favor.

Biorhythm has been thoroughly tested. Over 5,000 companies nationwide use Biorhythm. Many American airlines use Biorhythm. Biorhythm has been covered by most major newspapers, magazines and has been featured on "To Tell The Truth" and "Monday Night Football."

HOW CAN YOU ORDER YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHM ANALYSIS?

If you are interested in immediately cashing in on all of the built-in luck, love, wealth, success and happiness you have coming to you, then simply do this: Send the name, current address, date, month, year and place of birth for each person on a piece of paper along with the $3.65 plus 30¢ postage and handling in cash, check or money order, for each one year Biorhythm Analysis (365 days for 1¢ a day). Make checks payable to Biorhythm Research Association. If you have Master Charge or VISA, you may charge your purchase by sending the following information: A. name of your card B. credit card number C. card expiration date.

Mail your orders to BIORHYTHM RESEARCH ASSOCIATION, Dept. D-19, 401 Market Ave. N., Canton, Ohio 44750.

You take absolutely no risk when you order. Your Biorhythm Analysis is covered by a one year – 365 day – full money back guarantee. If your luck does not dramatically improve in all areas of your life, simply return your analysis. You will receive every penny of your purchase price back – no questions asked.

The Association's research project may not last much longer. But right this minute, you can have your personal one year Biorhythm Analysis individually prepared for just 1¢ a day! Please act now!

Facts & Fallacies About Acne

By Paula Dranov

Of all the problems associated with adolescence, acne is one of the most troubling. Even though acne is so common, its causes and cures are frequently misunderstood. What follows are some of the fallacies and facts about this perennial source of teen-age misery.

This statement is only partly true. While sexual activity has no effect on acne, the problem is related to the rising levels of sex hormones that occur during adolescence. The increase in the male hormone testosterone in both boys and girls during the teen-age years influences the size and activity of the sebaceous, or oil, glands deep within the skin. The oil glands secrete a substance called sebum, which then flows to the skin's surface through the tiny hair follicles. When these canals become clogged with sebum, blackheads or whiteheads appear on the surface of the skin.

Fallacy: Diet plays an important part in acne, and chocolate, ice cream, cheese, nuts and other fatty foods, like milk, butter and eggs, should be avoided.

Although doctors once thought diet was an important factor in acne, much less emphasis is placed on it today. The idea that chocolate causes acne has been largely discredited. Some fatty foods are still considered factors in acne flare-ups, and doctors may suggest eliminating them, but diet is no longer regarded as a principal means of controlling acne. However, most dermatologists do recommend that their patients eat well-balanced meals.

Clean skin is important, but repeated scrubbings with soap often make matters worse. Most doctors recommend gently washing with mild soap and water twice a day to remove excess oil from the skin, and then applying a lotion, cream or gel containing sulphur, salicylic acid or benzoyl peroxide. This routine degreases, peels and degerms the skin.

Fallacy: Blackheads are caused by dirt.

Blackheads are little plugs of sebum that get lodged in the tiny follicles leading from the sebaceous glands to the skin. They turn black because of oxidation — exposure to the air — not because of dirt.

Fallacy: There's not much that can be done about acne — it's an inevitable part of growing up that only time can "cure."

It is true that most teenagers eventually outgrow acne. However, acne can be controlled, and recent findings have shown that even the most severe cases can be successfully treated.

Aside from proper cleansing, there are a number of effective treatments available. A dermatologist may prescribe an antibiotic, such as tetracycline, to inhibit the growth of the bacteria that cause the skin follicles to become infected. Another treatment doctors often recommend is a gel or cream containing vitamin A acid; although this medication may make matters worse initially, the vitamin A stimulates the discharge of the contents of blackheads and whiteheads and allows them to heal without scarring.

A new and promising treatment recently tested on patients with severe acne makes use of a synthetic vitamin A derivative. This compound, administered orally, completely cleared up the acne of 13 of 14 patients participating in a study at the National Institutes of Health. Despite its success, the treatment must be tested further before it becomes widely available. And the doctors who conducted the tests warn teenagers with acne not to take regular vitamin A orally — it's not the same as the compound being tested and, taken in large doses, the real vitamin A can cause liver, bone and nerve damage. Get this beautiful casserole dish from Mueller's

Imagine light little elbows of Mueller's macaroni moist with cool mayonnaise, smacking of sweet dill, or melon, or cucumber, or relish. Imagine them in this beautiful server at your picnic, or on your patio or dinner table!

It's called the "Basket Buffet." Made by Anchor Hocking, it's oven-proof, microwave proof, amber glass, 1½ quarts roomy. Great for boiling, baking or refrigerating. And the summery-looking straw basket also works as a serving trivet.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Tear Drops

Tears of laughter and those cried in shame, while both very wet, may have different chemical compositions, reports a biochemist in the department of psychiatry at St. Paul Ramsey Medical Center in Minnesota. While researchers know that emotional tears have a higher concentration of protein than tears produced by irritation, now Dr. William Frey hopes to discern the chemical differences among tears of joy, laughter, anxiety, grief, anger and depression.

"Stress alters the body's chemical balance," says Frey, and he feels crying may be one of our safety valves for ridding the body of chemicals produced in stressful situations. So, the adage, "Go ahead and have a good cry," may be very healthy advice.

The Traveling Dentist

In the hill country of Arkansas lives a dentist who even makes house calls. Dr. Tom Isbell, "Tom" to his patients, feels that if dentistry is going to reach out to the people, dentists must get out of their offices, at least occasionally.

"In many rural communities, people see their dentists only after a real problem has developed," notes Isbell. In fact, according to a study by the Academy of General Dentistry, 47 percent of adult Americans didn't see a dentist last year. "My job is to get the word out that preventive dentistry is more economical and certainly more enjoyable than having your teeth pulled," says Isbell.

Some of the ways Isbell has gotten his message across are with a puppet show featuring Tuffie Tooth and Carrie Cavity and with a booth at the Stone County Fair. "But no matter where I'm giving a presentation, I always make the point that it's the patient who must be responsible for his teeth. I end each talk by telling my audience that good dental habits include proper brushing, proper flossing, good eating habits and regular visits to the dentist so that he can catch any problems when they're still small."

To Tell The Truth

Honesty may be the best policy, but being truthful is not always easy. What segment of our society manages to be the most consistently honest and ethical? The American housewife, say two Brigham Young University researchers.

Drs. J. Owen Cherrington and David Cherrington found that honest people follow a principle when making moral decisions, while somewhat dishonest people weigh each decision according to the situation. After surveying a national sample of accountants, management professionals, advertising/marketing personnel, lawyers, housewives and criminals serving time in a state penitentiary, they concluded that, while housewives were the most honest, "our study doesn't indicate that women, per se, are more honest than men," says David. But they feel their study is a significant indicator of how honesty is learned. The most honest individuals came from homes where moral values were strictly taught, where parents made clear distinctions between right and wrong and where children associated with others of high integrity.

On Running

Running can't be just a passing fad; too many people have become hooked on it. Frank Shorter, who in 1972 became the first American in 64 years to win a gold medal in the Olympic marathon event, has been running for 17 of his 32 years. If anyone qualifies as an expert on the subject, he does.

Shorter says he runs because "it calms me down, yet also gives me energy." He also feels that "there's no age when people shouldn't run, but moderation is the key. If you've been inactive, see your doctor; then begin very slowly."

Connecticut Mutual Life

For those who are already runners but who feel boredom settling in, Shorter suggests varying your route and speed or occasionally going to a track. "In all the years I've been running," he says, "I've never become bored with it. I learned, long ago, to set little goals for myself so that I could feel I'd accomplished something." And look where it got him.

Lifestyles

Science. Thomas Edison's laboratory in New Jersey looks just as it did when he died in 1931, and every year nearly 55,000 visitors pass through this National Historic Site. Now, however, the Environmental Protection Agency has temporarily closed the lab while investigators figure out how to identify and dispose of some of the more dangerous chemicals that Edison left behind. About half of the 10,000 or so vials contain chemicals that are considered potentially hazardous and will have to be removed, reports the Wall Street Journal.

Disease. Syphilis and gonorrhea aren't the only types of venereal disease; at least 18 other infections are now recognized as sexually transmitted, reports Medical World News. Sexually transmitted diseases afflict at least one out of every 20 Americans each year, many of them babies born to mothers with venereal infections. V.D., which has reached epidemic proportions in this country, can cause infertility in adults and blindness and death in infants.

Merit Cuts Through Low Tar Clutter!

"Best-tasting low tar I've tried," say 96% of MERIT smokers in latest survey.

There is a difference between other low tar cigarettes and MERIT.

MERIT Solid Winner.

Test after test with thousands of smokers continues to provide evidence—not mere claims—that low tar MERIT delivers the flavor of high tar brands, and continues to satisfy long term.

Blind Taste Tests: In tests where brand identity was concealed, a significant majority of smokers rated the taste of low tar MERIT as good as—or better than—leading high tar brands. Even cigarettes having twice the tar!

Smoker Preference: Among the 95% of smokers stating a preference, the MERIT low tar/good taste combination was favored 3 to 1 over high tar leaders when tar levels were revealed!

Long-Term Satisfaction: In the latest survey of former high tar smokers who have switched to MERIT, 9 out of 10 reported they continue to enjoy smoking, are glad they switched, and report MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried!

MERIT is the proven alternative to high tar smoking. And you can taste it.

NATURE'S PEPPER UPPER

Do You "Feel Tired And Lack Vim"?

So many adults of all ages feel listless and drag themselves around when they should have better energy and vigor. They can now get a fast pick-up with a simple tablet called, "PEP TABS." The secret of this seeming miracle tablet is magic Fructose, a unique form of sugar that feeds directly into the vital bloodstream—giving one almost instant energy and pep when feeling weary and drowsy due to low blood sugar.

Ordinary sugars must go through the liver—not releasing their energy for a longer time, but Fructose is entirely different. It provides immediate energy when you may want it most. For years, Fructose has been an energy secret of European Olympic athletes. Now, Fructose has been imported and compressed into convenient, palatable "PEP TABS" for you to take when you feel the need for extra energy.

"PEP TABS" are completely natural and safe for normal, tired men and women. They may give you the extra energy and pep you want!
