Draft Registration Fight To The Courts

By JIM ADAMS

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of President Carter's plan to renew draft registration, possibly as early as July 21, are shifting their fight from Congress to the courts.

The American Civil Liberties Union called a news conference today to announce it will file suit seeking to have the registration plan declared unconstitutional because women are exempt.

Opponents contend putting the burden only on men violates the Constitution's Fifth Amendment guarantee of due process under the law.

The ACLU suit also will seek an injunction against starting registration until the court challenge is settled.

The House voted 234-168 Wednesday to give final approval of Carter's request for $13.3 million to register all 19- and 20-year-old men this summer. Both the House and the Senate previously rejected Carter's original proposal to register women as well as men.

Carter is to issue a proclamation next week renewing registration for the first time since 1975, and knowledgeable sources said July 21 is the likely effective date.

All men born in 1960 would be required to fill out registration forms in local post offices that week and all men born in 1961 would be required to register the following week. The maximum penalty for failing to register is five years in prison and a $10,000 fine, but no judge has ever imposed the maximum.

Further congressional action would be needed to actually draft those being registered.

In addition to the ACLU suit, other opponents have announced they will try to tie up post offices late next month with demonstrations against registration.

Leaders of the Committee Against Registration and the Draft announced this week they will distribute gummed labels men can attach to the registration forms saying "I am registering under protest."

Carter told Congress in January that he intended to renew registration to show U.S. resolve against the Soviet military move into Afghanistan. Supporters said registration would allow men to be called into service up to four months faster if a draft were needed.

Eventually all 18- to 26-year-old men are to be registered.

After 19- and 20-year-olds sign up this year, men now 18 would be required to register next January. After that men will be required to register as they become 18.

The procedure this year will be for all men born in January, February and March to register the Monday of their week and those born in the following three quarters of the year to register Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday respectively. Friday will be a makeup day.

NATO United Over Afghanistan Stand

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — The Western alliance united today in demanding an immediate withdrawal of all Soviet troops from Afghanistan, but split over the Palestinian issue.

U.S. Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie hailed the Afghan resolution as a sign of greater solidarity among members of the alliance. He prevented an attempt to refer to self-determination by Palestinians living in Israeli-occupied territory, in a communique on the Middle East.

The demand for Russian withdrawal came at the end of a two-day conference of NATO's 15 foreign ministers, including Muskie.

"The ministers had full agreement as to their demand for complete withdrawal of all Soviet forces from Afghanistan," NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns said at a news conference.

The ministers also called for immediate release of the U.S. hostages in Iran, reaffirmed the need for deployment of new tactical nuclear missiles in Western Europe and signaled a willingness to strengthen NATO's southern flank in Turkey and Greece.

Luns said West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt would convey the allies' views to Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev in their upcoming meeting.

Although there were no new initiatives announced at the meeting, officials said it was important because it showed the Soviet Union that NATO would continue to keep pressuring for withdrawal of all forces from Afghanistan.

The ministers also discussed a French proposal for a worldwide disarmament conference, but no decision on a full NATO position was reached. Luns said: "The proposal by the French is still on the table and will be discussed in Madrid."

He was referring to a 35-nation Madrid security conference in November, shaping up as a confrontation between the Western allies' desire for full implementation of human rights accords and the Soviet bloc's desire to expand détente.

Luns said that ministers at the Ankara meeting pledged to support "full implementation of the Helsinki pact," in which nations agreed to grant freedom of speech, worship and other rights to all their citizens.

The only disagreement reported was in a communique on the Middle East. Muskie blocked a reference to self-determination for the Palestinian people now living under Israeli jurisdiction. Israel and the United States object to such language as too pro-Palestinian.

Muskie told a news conference it was not "appropriate that words which were open to different interpretations be used."

"May I say I was not alone in my position," he added. The nine Common Market countries, most of which are in NATO, called for Palestinian self-determination at their summit meeting in Venice earlier this month.

Muskie hailed the Afghan resolution as a sign of "greater solidarity" within the alliance.

He said of the Soviet Union's intentions in Afghanistan: "They are preparing a long haul, but that doesn't mean they aren't open to persuasion."

Muskie said the allies were trying to convince the Soviet Union that its intervention in Afghanistan would slow down the process of negotia-

Request A Vote By City

By CAROL TYER

The Greenville Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association Board of Directors sent a request to the City of Greenville yesterday for consideration of a special referendum on liquor-by-the-drink.

Tim Rosche, chairman of the State Concerns Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, said his committee's recommendation to the board of directors of the Chamber was for a special referendum request. It is his understanding, he said, that the city council is being asked to make a decision on whether a referendum on mixed drinks is to be held and whether it is to be held in a special referendum or as part of the general election in November. The Chamber prefers a special election, hopefully in September, he said.

City Manager Ed Wyatt confirmed that the request has been received. He said it specifically calls for a referendum 60 days prior to the general election. State law, he said, requires that no election be held any nearer than 60 days prior to the general election.

The request will be considered during the City Council workshop session July 7, he indicated. It will be decided at that time whether to put the matter on the July regular meeting agenda.

A law enacted by the State Legislature in its recently concluded session allows Greenville to hold a mixed drink referendum because two municipalities in the county approved the issue in the county-wide referendum.

Land Rezoning Recommended

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission last night voted to recommend to the city council the rezoning of two parcels of land and approved a number of preliminary and final plats.

Recommended for rezoning was 6.068 acres just east of Arlington Boulevard, next to East Carolina University property, and 14.2 acres on Hooker Road, adjacent to Orchard Hill Subdivision.

As requested by Blount and Ball, the six acres off Arlington Boulevard was recommended to be changed from CS (shopping center) to O&I (office and institutional).

Later in the meeting, the board approved the preliminary plat for the property — the Clifton Street development — which will include the proposed Burning Tree Townhouses on the eastern portion of the property.

In recommending rezoning for the 14.2 acre tract off Hooker Road, the commission okayed a request by Leslie M. Meekins to change the zoning from R-15 (low density residential) to R-9 (medium density residential). It was indicated that the rezoning would provide 55 to 60 lots for single-

Ormond Is Re-Elected As Commission's Chairman

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commission last night re-elected chairman Lyman Ormond to another term, recommended changes in the present city ordinance governing outdoor advertising signs, and approved recommendations for an ordinance governing sand mining operations within the commission's area of jurisdiction.

In addition to re-electing Ormond chairman, commission members named Clarence Tugwell vice-chairman.

After hearing a report by the planning staff on outdoor advertising signs and possible locations throughout the area of jurisdiction, the commission voted to recommend to the city council that the present zoning ordinance be amended to allow such signs in flood plane areas as a special use.

At present, the ordinance provides for outdoor advertising signs in areas zoned highway commercial, unoffensive industrial, and industrial.

In recommending the change, the commission rejected requests from outdoor advertising firms to permit signs in areas zoned CDF (downtown fringe commercial), CS (shopping center), and flood plane without special use permit required.

Skip Browder of the city planning staff noted that a survey indicated that within the highway commercial, unoffensive industrial and industrial zones, there are 167 possible sign sites, with 51 signs located throughout the planning jurisdiction area. "We feel the three classifications we have are ample to conduct outdoor advertising business in Greenville."

He added that if shopping center, downtown fringe and flood plane zones were amended to allow signs, another 107 possible sites would be added.

In recommending to the city council that the zoning ordinance be amended to allow sand mining in flood plane zones as a special use, the commission suggested that six conditions be met.

The conditions would allow mining only in areas designated as floodway by the Army Corps of Engineers; no mining activity within 100 feet of a dwelling; access to and from mining operations be routed to avoid residential streets; hours of operation would be from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday where private roads are used and 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday where public roads are used; land to be restored to condition for existing or amenable uses; and a six-foot high chain link fence be erected around the mining site.

In other action last night, the joint commission approved final plats for: the Lillian Tyson Dail property, located on SR 1447, 150 feet north of the Belvoir Highway; Tarawood Subdivision, located on the East side of the Allen Road, 500 feet South of the Southern Railroad (a multi-family dwelling development); and Professional Center, Section III, located north of the Stantonsburg Road and west of Professional Center, Section II.

Preliminary plats for Heritage Village Subdivision, located east of 14th Street and south of the Southern Railroad, in the area of the Red Banks Road intersection; Quail Ridge subdivision addition, located on the east side of 14th Street extension and south of Quail Ridge Sections I and II; and Westhaven Subdivision, Section IV, located south of Westhaven Subdivision Section III and east of Club Pines Subdivision, were also approved.

In addition, the joint commission re-approved preliminary plats for the following subdivisions, for which approval was scheduled to expire: Willoughby Park Subdivision off Evans Street

State Rep. John Gamble Closes Assembly Career; Hints '84 Role

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Rep. John Gamble, D-Lincolnton, ended his legislative career Wednesday as the General Assembly adjourned, but he fueled speculation he may run for governor in 1984.

"It will depend on the circumstances and the candidates involved, but I have pretty well decided now," Gamble said. "I think the front-runners in the race will cancel themselves out when the public starts scrutinizing them."

The 58-year-old surgeon, who chose not to seek reelection to a fifth term in the state House, said he thinks that by 1984 voters will be ready for a candidate who is not entrenched in state politics.

"In another four years, voters will be searching for someone who is going to speak to the concerns of the people and address the direction of the state in that way," he said.

"I'm just a country doctor, and boy have I heard it,"

Gamble said referring to his constituency. "I believe more than half the voters in this state believe they could have a better choice. In four years I hope to take advantage of that attitude."

Gamble said he will make a final decision about running in 1981. If he does run, Gamble could find himself one of many contenders for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green is expected to run, and other names being mentioned are Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, Sen. Willis Whitchard of Durham and retiring House Speaker Carl Stewart.

Green narrowly defeated Stewart in the May 6 Democratic primary for lieutenant governor.

Gamble, who was named one of the 1979 session's 10 most influential legislators, drew attention during the short session of the Legislature by opposing a controversial system of road construction financing.

Speaking Up Not Only Aid for Hearing

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My older sister has a hearing problem, and she's driving us all crazy because she won't admit it. Several years ago you had a letter in your column from Nanette Fabray, who pointed out the selfishness of such people. If you can find it, please run it again.

FLORIDA FAN

DEAR FAN: I had to go back into my 1971 files, but here it is:

"DEAR ABBY: There are some 20 million people in this country with hearing problems. Most of them could and should wear aids.

Some say, "I'll wait until I need one." But if you have even a slight problem, you need one now! It is important first to have your hearing checked by a doctor to see if your loss is one that can be corrected. Many people wait until it is too late to correct what might have been a simple medical problem in the beginning. If nothing can be done to restore your loss and if the tests show an aid can help you, then by all means get one.

The woman who feels that wearing a hearing aid will attract attention to her hearing loss fools only herself, and she's usually a pain in the neck to everyone she comes in contact with.

There are many ways of letting others know one can't hear: cupping a hand behind the ear, asking people repeatedly to speak up or repeat things, etc. Everyone knows you have a problem, and everyone wonders why you aren't doing something about it.

I have worn hearing aids for years, so I know the problems of vanity, despair, adjustment, irritation . . . the list goes on and on. But I do not try to hide my aids, and interestingly enough, most people do not notice I wear one and sometimes two . . . even on television.

A dear friend opened my eyes about wearing an aid. Many years ago she told me I was being very selfish by making others cope with what was my problem alone. She was right. I had to do something about my hearing and not expect my family and friends to speak louder than was comfortable for them, or repeat things I had missed, turn up the volume on the TV, etc.

If you suspect you have a problem, see an audiologist or a doctor, or even a reputable hearing aid dealer. Take all the necessary tests. No reputable dealer will try to sell you an aid without first making sure there is no way to correct your loss and that an aid will really help you. And if he is honest, he'll put it in writing.

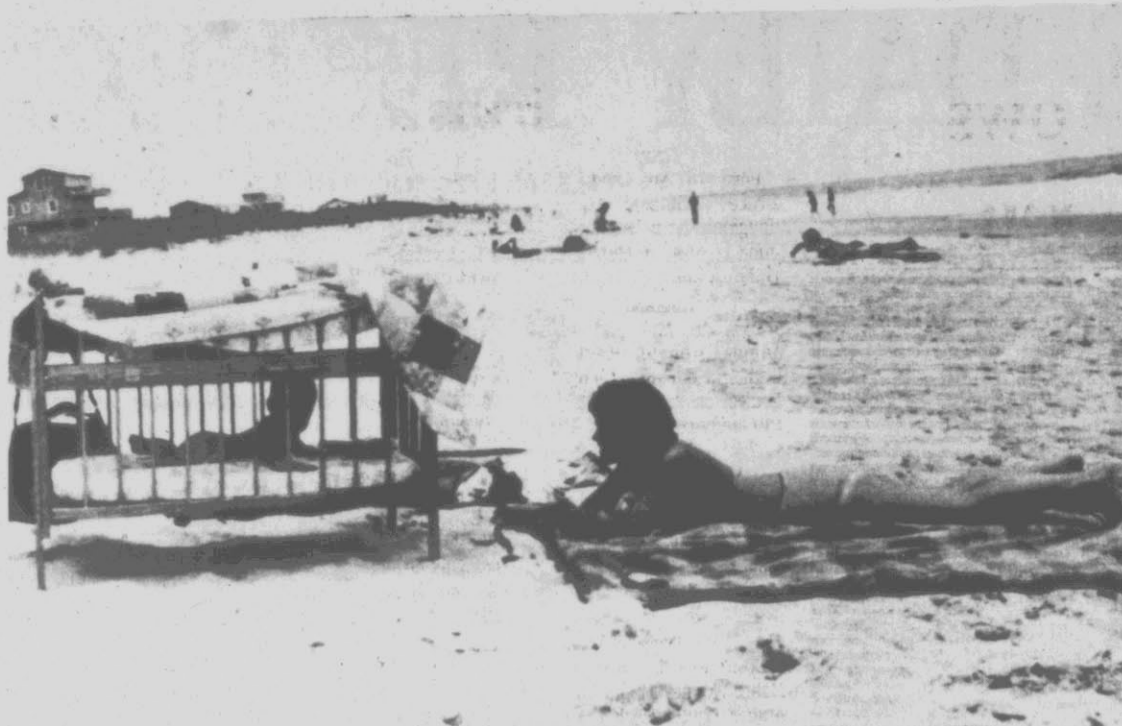

Thank you, Abby. Please print this as a favor to those with a hearing loss as well as those who have to live with them.

DEAR NANETTE: Hear, hear!

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: So yesterday you fell off the wagon? Or maybe you blew your diet? Or lost your temper and shot off your mouth? Well, that was yesterday. Today is a brand-new day with a clean slate, so forget yesterday. Today you can get back on the wagon, resume your diet and take control of your life — just for today. Don't make any long-range promises. Take it one day at a time.

Put A Brake On Benefits Hospitals Rapped Over Refusal Examine Child

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — About 10,000 salaried employees of Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. will no longer receive automatic cost-of-living adjustment benefits, beginning July 1.

Firestone said it is ending the program mainly as an economic move, but also to return to a system of awarding raises for merit.

Since the salaried workers were placed under the program in April 1977, the formula has increased the pay of eligible employees by as much as $350 a month, the Akron-based company said.

The benefits were won by the United Rubber Workers in contract negotiations and extended to salaried employees. Hourly workers covered under the URW's master contract with Firestone will continue to receive the quarterly pay adjustments, which are tied by a formula to the Consumer Price Index.

The No. 2 rubbermaker, which reported a loss of $65.8 million in the first half of the fiscal year ending April 30, earlier had announced it is omitting its regular quarterly dividend to shareholders in July to save $8.6 million.

MONROE, La. (AP) — State investigators have mildly criticized one of three north Louisiana hospitals that refused to examine a 5-year-old rape victim because she didn't live in the neighborhood it served.

A spokesman for the state Department of Health and Human Resources said Wednesday the agency sought no penalties against St. Francis Medical Center though the hospital was determined to have violated federal laws.

Nor were penalties recommended for another Monroe hospital, E.A. Conway, or Glenwood Hospital in West Monroe. Both also refused initially to examine the little girl when she was brought to their emergency rooms after the May 5 attack.

Ouachita Parish deputies reported the girl first was turned away from Conway Hospital because it had no one on duty at the time who was skilled in rape examinations.

Deputies said they then took the child to Glenwood Hospital and St. Francis, then finally returned to Conway where the child was examined and released almost five hours after she was attacked.

Kathleen Burns, public information officer for the state Health Department, said investigators found St. Francis in violation of Hill-Burton laws regulating all hospitals which receive federal aid.

Emergency room personnel had contended that area hospitals and law enforcement officials have an agreement that rape victims must be taken for examination to the nearest hospital. In this case, that hospital was E.A. Conway.

The report said all three hospitals should have "met the health needs of the patient first" — a Hill-Burton requirement — and later work out "problems related to the agreement."

All three get federal money and each was investigated for possibly violating part of its Hill-Burton agreement "to make their services available to all people in their service areas."

Without criticizing Conway or Glenwood hospitals, the report suggested St. Francis get its medical personnel to comply with the law and also file a report outlining its plan for future compliance. It said Conway was right to wait for a competent examiner and Glenwood, just across the Ouachita River, had no responsibility because the child lived in Monroe.

"The decision emanating from the Hill-Burton investigation . . . was based

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Marion Glenn Creath of Parsippany, N. J., and Mr. and Mrs. George Di Martino of Bay Shore, N. Y.

A program of organ music was presented by George Wesner.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her honor attendant was Deborah Creath of Medford, Mass., her sister. Bridesmaids included Carolyn and Cynthia Creath of Parsippany, N. J., sisters of the bride, and sisters of the bridegroom, Deborah Stanick of Bay Shore, N. Y., and Lynn Di Martino of Union City, N. J.

Kevin Lynch of New York City was best man and ushers included Dennis Lynch and Michael Lynch, both of Bay Shore, N. Y., George Di Martino of Clearwater, Fla., and Joseph Di Martino of Jacksonville, Ark., both brothers of the bridegroom.

For the single ring ceremony, the bride was dressed in a traditional gown of white tulle fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline edged with re-embroidered alencon lace enhanced with pearls and iridescent sequins, fitted bodice and long bishop sleeves with alencon lace cuffs. The formal length A-skirt extended into a chapel train. She wore a walking mantilla edged with a double row of pearls and trimmed with motifs of alencon lace attached to a Juliet cap. She carried a bouquet of white roses, baby's breath and ivy.

The honor attendant wore a two-piece gown of apricot color styled with spaghetti straps, gathered bodice and accented pleated skirt with crocheted edges, complemented by a removable caoon jacket. She carried a long-stemmed white rose with baby's breath.

The bridesmaids were dressed like the honor attendant in a two-piece gown of baby blue and each carried an identical rose.

After a wedding trip to The Hamptons, Long Island, N. Y., the couple will live in Greenville, N. C.

The bride is a graduate of J. H. Rose High School, and also of ECU, Greenville, N. C. She is a registered nurse at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom graduated from Bay Shore High School, Bay Shore, N. Y., and from ECU. He plans to enter graduate school in the fall.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Piano selections were rendered by George Wesner.

Everyone is talking about pyramids — the make-money-quick scheme that is a lot like a chain letter only you send $1,000 to everyone on the list and by the time your name is at the top you owe IRS a lot of money.

But how many of you have been involved in the spend-money-by-association chain?

It works like this. Your best friend (?) invites you to a plastic party. Everyone likes you and wants to be your friend — especially the plastic person with the order book who approaches you to host a party. She promises you a plastic cantaloupe keeper that will lock in flavor and lock out offensive odors.

You invite 12 of your friends to your party. The next day you have invitations from six of the 12 who attended your party to attend their plastic party. The other six invite you to attend a plant party, sports clothes party, pots-and-pans party, perfume party, encyclopedia party and silverware party.

At the plastic parties, you meet 72 new faces who also invite you to their plastic parties. Out of the other six parties, three of them are into fabric parties, toy parties and home interior parties.

At the home interior party, you meet another who is into copper parties, one into smoke alarm parties and another who is giving a bra party.

By the end of the second week, you have invitations to 388 parties.

By the end of the month you have made 1,076 new-found party friends and have a supply of bras which you are using as planters, bun warmers and extra pockets to hold snacks as you vacuum.

The spend-money-by-association chain started long before home parties. It was begun innocently enough by a professional volunteer fundraiser who one day pledged to fill a table of eight for a group of mothers who wanted to go to camp. She filled the table with only seven phone calls.

However, the next day, one of the women sold her a ticket to a dogs-born-under-Virgo luncheon, another sold her a raffle ticket on a pony, another a box of peanut brittle for Scouts, and another nailed her for a donation which would benefit women who could not uncross their legs in hot weather.

Unlike the pyramid or the chain letter, you never get off the list, let alone make it to the top. A few women have said "No" to tickets and offers of parties, but I know something awful would happen to me like

President Moseley said the local auxiliary is in competition for the silver cup, to be awarded by Gov. James B. Hunt, for the largest amount given to the Cancer Aid and Research Fund. The group has donated $30 per member to the fund. All state and national requirements have been met.

Meeting hostesses were Mrs. Merle Austin, Marlene Jones and Mary Knapp.

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn L. Spangler

Pitt Home Agent

Give your family a security checkup:

—If the major wage-earner in your family became unemployed, what would you have to live on?

—If a family member, child or adult, developed a severe and prolonged health condition requiring hospitalization and expensive medical treatments, how would your family cope financially?

—If your home should be severely damaged by fire or storm, would you have the money to live elsewhere and funds to repair the home?

—If a family member died, would there be funds to provide for the type of funeral services you might desire?

—If your family expenditures for everyday living and bill-paying take all you earn so you can't start a savings account, how will your children receive training beyond high school?

—Can you plan to go on a vacation next year without wrecking your somewhat precarious spending plan?

—Would an automobile accident which "totaled" your car cause a family financial disaster?

—Will you ever have enough money for a down payment on a home?

—Will you ever be able to retire from gainful employment and have adequate income on which to live?

These are some of the problems with which many families must sometimes cope. How they plan to cope with unexpected financial problems or those large expenditures, like college educations or homebuying, that they desire varies according to the family, its resources and values.

There are no right or wrong answers to these questions; every family would answer them differently. The worst answer is, "I don't know." If you don't know what you would do, now is the time to begin planning.

Good financial planning includes preparation for unexpected emergencies as well as long-range goals. This means that the family needs to think through their hopes and dreams and set priorities about present and future spending.

YOUR SECURITY PLAN
Spend within your income limits

If every large bill that comes to the home causes a re-juggling of family spending or the lack of basic requirements such as food, the family needs to look at their spending system and revise. A new or larger source of income may be needed. Or, the family may need to curtail its wants, especially for non-essentials bought on credit.

Save before spending

Don't let your savings be just what is left over! Pay yourself first. Set aside a planned amount from each paycheck for special long or short range goals. A car, vacation, Christmas gifts, or the children's future education, are possible if you plan and save.

PROTECT YOUR FAMILY AND POSSESSIONS WITH INSURANCE

It would be difficult to cover the costs incurred with all illnesses or accidents with current income or the limited savings many families have. A minimum family insurance plan should include:

—Life insurance on the major wage-earner—enough to care for dependent spouse and children but not necessarily for life. These funds might be needed to pay bills.

—Life insurance on the spouse, especially if a dependent spouse is the one caring for the home. This insurance could provide funds for a housekeeper.

—Minimum life insurance on minor children (enough for simple burial).

—Medical and hospital insurance for all family members; dental insurance if possible.

—Accident and liability insurance on your property and automobiles is required for your safety and that of others.

Plan realistically for a time of retirement from active income

Skepticism Is Needed

The City Council has approved a budget of $9.93 million for the municipal operation and $35.81 million for Greenville Utilities Commission.

Along with it will come higher tax bills for the citizens of Greenville. Council members approved a tax rate of 77 cents per $100 valuation. It increases the tax rate by seven cents over the present fiscal year rate of 70 cents per $100 valuation.

The budget has been described as a tight one and a hold-the-line one. In a sense it is. It contains only $47,500 in capital improvements funds — monies for new equipment and new construction. Much of that goes for a new roof for the municipal building, and some minor street projects.

As can be expected, much of the budget goes for personnel, about 55 percent of the appropriated funds. Some 20 percent is allocated to operating expenses.

We don't want to be too hard on the City Council for the tax increase. We are convinced some increase was necessary, given the effects of inflation and the growth of the city which requires new services.

Nevertheless it is our gut feeling that some non-essentials could have been wrung out of the budget and the tax increase held to less than the seven cents which was approved.

We wonder if the council has yet learned to really dig into the mass of figures which confronts it, and not take at face value that which is requested and recommended.

Given the effects of declining federal funds, inflation and municipal growth, we will accept the budget.

We hope, however, that as this council works with the budget during the coming year it will develop an attitude of real skepticism about every expenditure. If council members do this they will be surprised at how many items they will find are not really necessary to providing adequate municipal services.

Maintain Our Yugoslav Ties

President Carter has extended the hand of United States friendship to Yugoslavia as it enters an era without the presence of its long-time leader Marshall Tito.

The Yugoslavs will need all the help they can get in the years ahead.

It is a break-away country from the Soviet sphere, and that is an almost intolerable situation for the Russian leadership.

Now that Tito is gone there will be constant pressure on Yugoslavia from Moscow, and the threat of military intervention will always be there.

It would not be in our interest for Yugoslavia to be absorbed again by the Soviet Union. We will do well to maintain our friendship.

RALEIGH — Winning, dining and back-slapping no longer carry the day when a community or the state goes wooing industrial prospects.

ing developers."

A demonstration of the change which has taken place can be found at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill where a Basic Industrial Development Course is offered periodically.

More than 500 alumni of that course are now scattered through the South and Mid-Atlantic regions practicing the "art" of industrial development. There are, now, state, regional, and community industrial development organizations which are highly competitive and professional.

Emphasis in this particular course is on locating plant sites, but other aspects are covered as well. Students come from all walks of life, including banks, real estate firms, utilities, construction firms as well as government agencies.

Outstanding
Larry Cochick, chief of North Carolina's development effort says the course at Chapel Hill is "one of the best in the country. It has produced some outstanding in the business of industrial development.

"I discussed the major difficulties of establishing a code of ethics as well as the fact that such a code must be a part of our professional background," Cochick says.

Certain guiding principles must be developed, and agreed to, by any profession if the utmost potential is to

Edna B. Hall of Newport, T.Genn. recently appeared before the House Ways and Means subcommittee on social security with the following complaint. She told the panel that her husband had been sent to prison for hiring another man to blow up her car. She had lost both legs, her right hand was mangled and she suffered burns on her body. "But it is I who must pay the costs, not him," she said. "His benefits from Social Security and Veterans Administration are his to keep. In prison, he has no food to buy, no taxes to pay, no utilities, no medical bills, and no clothing to buy."

The subcommittee findings revealed that millions of dollars are being distributed annually to individuals in prison, and a social security check for a prisoner can at least make him king for a day. Ernest P. Davis Jr., a correction sergeant at the Adult Diagnostic and Treatment Center in Avenel, N.J., believes that most social security money is spent for drug trafficking, numbers running and illicit sex.

Lawrence H. Thompson, associate commissioner for policy of the Social Security Administration, says, "Imprisonment by itself has never been a basis for nonpayment of benefits."

This is exactly as it should be. Social security benefits are a direct result of an individual investing part of his wages in security for his old age. It is really no different from money one might have invested in banks or savings and loans or other forms of insurance. Receiving social security cannot be stopped just because one has committed a crime.

In the case of Edna Hall, though, it would seem that she should have some kind of recourse through the courts. Her life is no longer her own. She must depend on others for help every day. The husband of Edna Hall does not have any legitimate use for the money in prison. His needs will be taken care of for a long time. Any assets that he might own or acquire should be turned over to Edna Hall. In the eyes of the law that might not be the case; but from a practical and sensible point of view there can really be no other way.

Strength For Today

THE GOOD NEWS
"Jesus wept" is the shortest verse in the Bible (John 11:35). Another almost as short is "Rejoice evermore" (1 Thess. 5:16). In the first statement, the full compassion of Jesus is set forth; in the second, the full duty of every Christian.

If the gospel is good news, then indeed we should rejoice. A true Christian is always filled with a wonderful sense of gladness. This does not mean that sorrow

Europe Tour For Votes

MADRID, Spain (AP) — President Carter's eight-day European trip was laden with political overtones and seemed calculated to win votes at home.

Carter, who faces a tough re-election challenge this fall, was to fly home late today after a brief visit to Portugal, the sixth and last stop on the journey that also took him to Italy, Yugoslavia and Spain.

Throughout the trip, Carter emphasized the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan and other issues where tough talk could score points with American voters.

He avoided mentioning the continuing stalemate over the American hostages in Iran, and made a display of harmony when he met with allies during a two-day summit in Venice — even though he is known to be disappointed with several recent allied actions.

The American hostages were not specifically mentioned in a communique issued during the seven-nation summit, although the leaders condemned the taking of diplomatic hostages in general.

Carter told reporters the omission wasn't intentional and said he was satisfied that the summit declaration made clear it was referring to the American hostages.

There was no mention of the allies' refusal to impose all of the sanctions the United States wanted against Iran, but it would have been extremely difficult to get strong enough wording in the communique to satisfy the American public.

In addition, little was said about the Middle East peace negotiations. The United States and its allies have opposite views on the participation of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The president and his advisers contended they had obtained everything they hoped for in the economic and energy communique issued after the summit. But they hadn't hoped for anything they weren't sure they could get.

The United States would have liked specific commitments from individual nations to reduce oil imports and develop non-oil energy sources. Without specific targets, there is no way to measure the contribution of individual nations to the overall summit goal of drastically cutting dependence on imported oil by 1990.

But U.S. summit negotiators said in advance they would have difficulty obtaining agreement on targets, and therefore, in the interest of harmony, they decided not to pursue them.

At the summit and afterward, Carter hit hard at the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan and declared that the summit's condemnation of the Soviets was a major achievement that showed allied solidarity.

Carter later referred to the harmony of the seven leaders and called the summit the best of the four he has attended.

During his visit to the Vatican, the president met with Pope John Paul II and repeatedly portrayed himself as a partner with the pope. Carter said he went to the Vatican to continue work that began when the pope visited the White House in October.

But the pope avoided praising Carter specifically and instead applauded all public officials who strive for peace and who advocate human rights and the eradication of disease and hunger.

Welcoming crowds were sparse or non-existent at every stop except Yugoslavia, but Carter didn't seem to mind. His eye seemed aimed at ethnic voting blocs back home. In Spain, he mentioned the large number of Hispanic (Continued on page 5)

A Gnome By Any Gnome

By Hugh A. Mulligan
AP Special Correspondent
ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — The first thing I did when the schnellzug — the express — pulled into the Zurich station was to look around for a gnome.

Having lived in England for eight years and listened to the lamentations of a succession of Labor Party politicians, I knew the gnomes of Zurich for what they were: mischievous malevolent money manipulators responsible for most of the world's monetary problems.

Lord George Brown couldn't have said it better. For it was he who popularized the term "Gnomes of Zurich," which afterwards fell so easily from the lips of Prime Ministers Harold Wilson and Jim Callaghan.

According to William Safire's "Political Dictionary," George Brown, as British foreign secretary in 1964, accused the "gnomes of Zurich" of making a killing on the revalued pound sterling when currency speculators who downgraded Britain's credit standing forced the Labor Government to adopt another austerity budget.

A gnome, especially a neutral, non-aligned Swiss one, was a handy bogeyman for any politician to have around at election time to beat with the stick of his oratory. Gnome flogging was a standard feature of every paid party political broadcast during my tenure in the British Isles.

"The word gnome," Safire writes, "was coined by Philippus Aureolus Paracelsus, a 16th century Swiss alchemist and physician, while investigating the mechanics of mining and the diseases of miners."

He says the word gnome "is from the Greek genomos, earth dweller, and originally meant a misshapen being who guarded the mines and quarries of the inner earth... The mining derivation made Brown's phrase especially apt: in Zurich, the gnomes deal in gold, a metal that was the quest of the alchemists." Another authority, the Rev. E. Cobham Brewer in his "Dictionary of Phrase and Fable," says gnome is from the Greek word gnomia "meaning the knowing one or wise one." He agrees, however, that they were "elemental sprites of the earth" whose main job is guarding gold and silver mines.

Wil Huygen's best selling "Gnomes" book of a few years back puts the average height (without cap) of a full grown gnome in the prime of life (about 275 years of age) at 15 centimeters, or just under six inches, which would make him knee high to a bank cuspidor. But these were forest gnomes: the wrinkle-faced bearded chaps in the pointy red hats, belted blue tunics, brown green breeches and deer fur boots.

The gnomes of Zurich are much taller — mostly normal human size, having moved to the city and experienced upward elf mobility among the species. There was no trouble finding them. They were hurrying in and out of banks all over town with an attache case in one hand and three newspapers in three different languages tucked under the other arm. There was an ageless quality about them too.

The male of the species invariably wears expensive Italian loafers dangling a gold tassel, a severely cut German suit with lapels sticking out like Japanese fans and shoulders that seem to conceal the coathangers from his last three hotels. He wears gold-framed tinted eyeglasses, chops on a Davidoff cigar and carries his garishly visa-ed passport in a handsomely tooled Florentine leather wallet.

The female gnome favors slit-skirted tailored suits in somber business stripes, medium high heeled shoes of expensive Italian design and a blouse and scarf flaunting the name or monogram of some chic designer.

What can be done about the trains passing through our city containing 100 or more cargo cars? These trains consistently block traffic in heavily congested areas, which greatly endangers the safety of our citizens should an emergency vehicle need to pass. The enormous amount of congestion and problems caused by these trains only adds to the already large number of accidents that occur daily, many of which result in a fatality. Something must be done to change this present situation! This is a vital problem that confronts our growing city.

Business School Grads Prosper

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — The median starting salary for this year's graduates of Stanford University's Graduate School of Business is about $32,000, with a range from $10,000 to $50,000.

The exact figures haven't emerged from the computer yet, because the class graduated just a week-and-a-half ago, but it appears the increase over last year's starting salaries is 12 percent to 15 percent.

Unexplained, figures of that sort sometimes bother schools of business as much as they bother the diligent, reliable, competent 9 to 5 working stiff who still hasn't reached that figure.

"And now a kid right out of school..." No point continuing; you know the rest of the sentence. But did you know: The median age of this year's class is 28. Most have had four or five year's experience, and some had worked themselves into very good positions. Some gave up well-paying jobs to go back to school.

More than half the class declined the highest offers, choosing instead to take positions that suited them better or, in some cases, offered a desirable lifestyle. Money wasn't foremost.

Carol Marchick, who supplied these details, also points out that a 12 percent to 15 percent increase over last year means little increase at all, since consumer price inflation fell into the same category.

The upward move of salaries, in fact, might not be the big news at all in recent years. While more than half the class of 300 men and women will, as usual, go into corporations employing at least 1,000 workers, fully one-third are headed into consulting.

The trend was observed last year too, when the consulting percentage rose to 26.3 percent from 24.4 percent in 1978, and replaced finance as the area of top interest. But a leap to 33 percent demands businesslike analysis.

Mrs. Marchick, 34, assistant dean and placement director, provides it. "The consulting environment," she begins, "is similar to the academic atmosphere." Consultants deal with a variety of challenges, as do students, and, as do students, they sometimes use the case-study approach. "It can be appealing to those who like the environment," she says.

Consulting is attractive also, she believes, because it allows the graduate to remain a generalist, at least until he or she has more experience or, for whatever reason, a better notion of what to do.

Under her analysis several other reasons surface. "To be able to work with top executives holds great appeal for a recent graduate," she believes. And, it seems, consultants pay extremely well for those they want.

She offers still another reason. "Consulting firms spend much effort in recruiting, and they use their senior management in doing so. They give lots of interviews, sometimes as many as 10 or 12."

In fact, she comments, their interviews are so frequent as to be a source of faculty frustration. "Often we find it disruptive to the academic process," she says.

They are choosy too. While they might interview 240 of the 300 in a class such as this year's, said Mrs. Marchick, they quickly pare down the numbers after observing students in business and social situations.

To be a finalist, therefore, has a mystique. So competitive is the process that students seek to enter the battle. Selection might not mean one is among the best.

but it does mean a challenge has been met.

Nevertheless, some students have reservations. They see themselves making decisions and solving problems, says Mrs. Marchick, but then finding themselves removed from the day to day implementation of them.

They also recognize that line experience, such as managing a corporate division, eventually can become critical to a graduate's career, since without it some companies are wary of promoting a person into the top job.

Still, Mrs. Marchick observes, some consultants eventually move into corporate planning jobs, which provide them an overview and thus move up through the corporate hierarchy in that way.

And then there is that Stanford Master of Business Administration degree, which some evaluators consider the best offered by any school of business. Almost always, it places among the top three.

The school's philosophy, she said, is "We strive for balanced excellence."

"We try to give students the quantitative and the qualitative, so that they can operate immediately and be equipped to be managers of the future."

Offer Reward To Get Names

By LAURINDA KEYS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The founder of the Worldwide Church of God hopes to "buy the truth" by offering a $100,000 finder's fee to anyone identifying "false witnesses" whom he blames for the church's legal problems.

In a series of full-page advertisements in California newspapers this week, Herbert W. Armstrong, 87, compares the church's attackers to those who bore false witness "to put Jesus Christ to death."

The ad, due to appear in East Coast papers next week, says the $100,000 offer "is for a limited time only and will terminate on Sept. 20, 1980."

The paid message says the "very word of God — the Holy Bible — commands us to buy the truth, and 'sell it not.' So we have set aside the sum of $100,000 to buy the truth and publicly clear our good name from this evil persecution."

He stressed a confidential relationship with prospects and noted that "any hint of payoffs, kickbacks or other form of reward...should be cause for immediate severance," and special favors should be avoided.

"Reliable and valid information — the data upon which major plant location decisions are made — are the developer's responsibility even if those data lead to an unfavorable decision," Cohick states.

And Cohick noted that developers must serve the people in a community where a location is being developed, even when he is not directly employed by those people.

"He does have a direct responsibility to see that those who will be affected by a location are helped, not harmed — in any manner — by development activity", Cohick said.

He noted that moral, ethical, and spiritual guidelines are essential to daily activities and added, "Developers have such capacity for doing good works that we must always guard against doing anything, by word or deed, that would harm that potential."

Americans; in Italy, he referred to the many Italian Americans.

Carter's visit to the Vatican, his attendance at a Roman Catholic Mass on Sunday and his breakfast with a dozen Benedictine monks were surely done with an awareness of the Catholic vote at home.

And his advisers made sure he got good news coverage back home when they thought he would look good. This sometimes took some doing.

In Yugoslavia, for example, where the welcoming crowds were respectable, White House aides got television camera crews and news photographers aboard a yellow flatbed truck at the start of a 50-car motorcade from Surcin Airport into Belgrade.

The Yugoslavs had agreed to the presence of the truck only reluctantly since they felt it would mar the appearance of a motorcade that otherwise consisted almost entirely of black Mercedes-Benz automobiles.

Had the Yugoslavs not yielded, the White House advance team had a contingency plan that called for Secret Service agents to slow one of the cars at the head of the procession at the last minute, permitting the prepositioned truck to slip into the motorcade.

Runaways In Style

RICHMOND, British Columbia (AP) — Two modern-day Huck Finns took the luxury approach when they ran away from home — in a $23,000, 23-foot mobile home.

Police, who thought they were just stopping a stolen mobile home Tuesday night, found a 12-year-old boy behind the wheel, perched on pillows so he could see over the wheel.

Both the boy and his 10-year-old accomplice had been missing from their suburban Vancouver homes since Friday, police said. They have been returned home, and the case referred to family court.

"They were just little fellows, even a little small for their age," said Royal Canadian Mounted Police Sgt. George Loeppky. "They were just thrill-seeking, I would guess."

Three other boys, ages 9, 10 and 11, and all from Richmond, were in the mobile home. Police said they were just along for the ride.

About $1,000 damage was done to the mobile home when it was driven through a wire fence around Vanguard Trailers Ltd. sales lot last Friday.

umbrella, several financial magazines in several languages, a Swiss chocolate bar (the gnome quick lunch, for they are notoriously parsimonious with their time and money) and a plastic bottle of mineral water (gnomes are suspicious of everything, especially the local water).

Gnomes are secretive: they look at their digital watches by curling a hand over the dial, preventing non-gnomes from sneaking a free look.

Gnome conversation is a gazetteer of pesos, baht, zlotos, drachmas, rubles, krone, rupees, escudos, cruzeiros, yuan, dong, piasters and other global tender. They talk pretty much in numbers.

Ask a gnome, "How's things?" — and he or she will counter-ask if you want the computation in yen, marks or dollars.

Gnomes are easy to identify getting on a train or a street car. They always race for the window seat — or on the Trans-European Express, the seats in the vista dome car — then promptly bury their eyes in a newspaper or stack of reports. Gnomes favor expensive but conservative European cars, a Mercedes, Rover or Citroen, and invariably wear driving gloves and a state trooper-sized sun glasses behind the wheel. In general, they are stolid, almost stumpy in build, like Swiss medieval church architecture.

Gnomes are prompt, meticulous, cautious, aggressive, slow with the quip but quick with the calculator. They jog, determinedly, for relaxation, prefer the stately tea danz to the disco, and in repose like to sit by a stream or riverbank listening to the dollar fall. Gnomes are playful; leaving a plane or train they wish each other "ein gut fahrt".

"Demons of earth who delight in mischief," Alexander Pope called them in his preface to the "Rape of the Lock."

If someone approaches you in the Zurich airport and whispers, "change money?" — this definitely is not a gnome. But if the air reverberates with a chorus of unseen sprites cooing "the rate today is 6171 U.S. dollars to the Swiss franc," you know the gnomes of Zurich are at hand.

Tanning Parlors The Hottest Thing Not Under The Sun

Time was when the only way for most Americans to get a tan in February was to head south for an expensive vacation in the sun. But that's all changing with the nationwide proliferation of a brand-new phenomenon—tanning parlors.

"A tan makes me feel better because I look better—prettier and healthier," says Judy Moody of Bald Knob, Ark., who pioneered the idea for the nation's first tanning salon and franchise business. At tanning parlors, customers have a consultation with a "tanning technician", then remove their clothes in a dressing room and enter a small, metallic reflecting booth equipped with ultraviolet bulbs. The lights go on and the tan begins. Tanning time increases gradually with each visit, from 30 seconds to 10 minutes. A 15-visit series costs $35.00 and a 20-visit series costs $45.00.

Some dermatologists send their patients to tanning parlors to help correct skin problems, but many doctors remain opposed to the newest vanity business contending that the artificial rays are potentially just as dangerous and debilitating as the sun's.

Moody, however, who sports a golden Tantrific hue throughout the year, disagrees. She claims that tanning parlors are "actually offering a service to the public" by giving a base tan that helps to avoid bad burning once the skin is exposed to the hot sun.

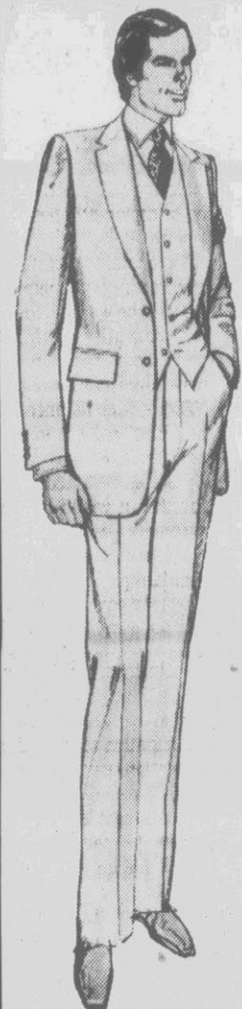

All tanning parlors in the country—Tantrific was the first, but there are 30 other franchises with more than 900 parlors—are regulated by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, which monitors all radiation-emitting devices like ultraviolet bulbs.

Moody says business is booming. Four parlors will open in Canada soon and potential buyers from Australia and England have contacted Tantrific. One of them, Lord Charles Churchill, nephew of Sir Winston, visited Tantrific's training center in Little Rock, Ark., last November and plans to open a parlor in England.

The newest suntanning parlor has just opened in Greenville, North Carolina. It's the HAWAIIAN SUNTANNING CENTER at 3006 East 10th Street and it's open 9 till 9, Monday thru Saturday. Call them at 758-0371 or visit them soon.

Mrs. Cherry New Principal At Stokes

The Pitt County Board of Education Tuesday confirmed the appointment of Mrs. Selma Delores Cherry to the position of chief administrator at Stokes Elementary School. Cherry will fill the position left by the retiring Eugene Morris.

The new principal has seven years teaching experience, three of which have been in Pitt County. She taught in Pinetops the remaining four, instructing a math lab for 4-6 graders the first two years and the next two taught a self-contained classroom in all subject areas. Her Pitt County teaching experience has been at Wellcome Middle School, teaching a sixth grade reading lab for two years and then reading and math for grades 6-7 last year.

SELMA DELORES CHERRY

Cherry received her B.S. degree in intermediate education from East Carolina University. She also holds an A certification in reading for grades K-12. She is currently beginning her work for her masters of education degree in the administrative area at ECU.

Originally from Henderson, Cherry is married to a Stokes native and has one daughter.

New Trail

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Roman Catholic Church today relaxed its stand on euthanasia in a major document which made concessions to "precarious and burdensome prolongation of life."

While reaffirming the traditional Vatican teaching which bans mercy killings and counsels against "intensive use" of painkillers, the document issued by the Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith and approved by Pope John Paul II, blazed new trails in the area of extension of life in the light of modern scientific advances.

"When inevitable death is imminent in spite of the means used, it is permitted in conscience to take the decision to refuse forms of treatment that would only secure a precarious and burdensome prolongation of life, so long as the normal care due to the sick person in similar cases is not interrupted," the document said.

"In such circumstances the doctor has no reason to reproach himself with failing to help the person in danger."

AMC Cuts Job Ranks

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — American Motors Corp. today announced plans to cut 700 white collar jobs, a 10 percent reduction in the work force.

The reductions of salaried employees will take place this summer through attrition, retirements and layoffs.

The automaker also said it will temporarily suspend component production at a factory in Milwaukee, affecting about 250 hourly workers. Operations at the plant will be suspended in October and are expected to resume early in 1982.

The Milwaukee plant has been producing stampings and sub-assemblies for AMC automobiles and Jeeps. AMC said the factory will resume operation when stampings are required for a new series of front-wheel-drive cars to be built at the company's facilities at Kenosha, Wis., facilities in 1982.

General Motors Corp. in April said it would make a 10 percent cut worldwide in the number of its white-collar workers. Ford Motor Co. announced it was laying off 6,100 of its 88,000 salaried employees in the United States and Canada.

Ford recently said it will make additional white-collar cuts, but has not given details.

Chrysler Corp.'s white-collar work force has been reduced by about one-third in the past year and is believed to number about 20,000.

On Wednesday a spokesman for Muskie called the NATO meeting "upbeat" because of the agreement to continue measures aimed at convincing Moscow to withdraw the tens of thousands of troops it sent into Afghanistan six months ago to fight an anti-communist Moslem revolt.

Variance In Rates Cited

MELVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service says it is looking into allegations that the cost of sending packages across the country or the Atlantic Ocean varies, depending on the post office.

Two Long Island legislators and a consumer advocate on Wednesday charged that Americans are being cheated out of millions of dollars due to inaccurate scales or postal clerks who don't know their jobs.

A survey of 26 post office branches in Nassau and Suffolk counties showed a $9 difference in the cost of mailing a single book, they said.

They charged the inconsistency was indicative of conditions at post offices across the county and called on Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti and Postmaster General William Bolger to investigate.

"This is the first we have heard of it," said John Kelly, the Postal Service's district director for customer services. "We will look into it."

The survey, conducted by consumer advocate Richard Kessel of Merrick and county legislators Anthony Noto of North Babylon and Michael Grant of Brentwood, both Republicans, showed the cost of sending a three-pound book by air mail from Long Island to Ireland ranged from $2.93 to $11.94.

Muskie told the ministers Wednesday that the United States had made sacrifices to oppose the Soviets' Afghan policy and that it appreciated efforts the allies were making.

Muskie was quoted as saying the U.S. Olympic boycott, curtailment of grain and technology sales to the Soviet Union and increased funding for new bases in the Middle East were examples of U.S. sacrifices and that he expected the allies to do an equal share.

Immediately after the meeting, Muskie left for talks in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. He declined to discuss the nature of the Vietnamese troop movement into Thailand, but said he feared it was possibly "the first step in aggression against Thailand."

There had been speculation that a proposal to aid Afghan rebels would be floated at the Ankara meeting, perhaps by the British, who have said in recent weeks the possibility should be discussed.

But Canadian Foreign Minister Mark McCuigan said the idea never came up and that it would be outside the limits of NATO's Atlantic responsibilities to take such a direct military role in the Middle East.

The formal session, which consisted mostly of ministers reading prepared speeches, contained no mention of President Carter's renewed proposal for a "neutralized" or "transitional" government in Afghanistan to ease withdrawal of the Soviet troops there, estimated at more than 85,000 before Moscow announced last weekend it was withdrawing one division.

The final communique said: "The recent announcement that some Soviet troops are being withdrawn from Afghanistan would be of interest if it were the beginning of a total withdrawal."

Commission Adopts Energy Goals

The Greenville Energy Commission has adopted the Greenville Energy Program goals and forwarded them to the city council for consideration at the council's July meeting.

The goals, according to David Duftus, energy commission chairman, are: to reduce energy consumption within the local government sector through conservation and increased efficiency; to provide for the reduction of per capita energy consumption in the non-government sector through conservation and increased efficiency; to provide for the development of alternative energy resources in order to increase the level of community energy self-sufficiency; to provide energy education to all sectors of the community; and to develop an energy emergency contingency plan.

Reese Heims, director of the Greenville Energy Program, explained that the goals are part of the development of an Energy Action Plan to improve conservation and management of energy resources in the Greenville area.

The Energy Action Plan is being developed through a grant from the U.S. Department of Energy. Greenville is one of 16 municipalities in the nation — the only municipality in North Carolina — participating in the program.

Left High And Dry As Lake Project Delayed

WILSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Construction delays have left some Chatham County businessmen high and dry with stores that were equipped and planned for the day some three million tourists would come to the B.

Everett Jordan Lake. The tourists haven't come — and neither has the lake. One would-be businessman, Vossie L. Horton, was 17 when the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers first began talking about building a dam and lake near Wilsonville. He's now 40, with an 18-year-old son. The dam is there, but the lake isn't. "At the beginning I was worried that my son was going to be too little and he'd fall out of the boat; now I worry that by the time the lake gets here I'm going to be too old, and I'll fall out of the boat," Horton said. Horton bought part ownership of the Wilsonville Grocery Store last summer, when the corps was saying the lake would soon be filled and predicted the millions of tourists would come. Sometime back Harold L. Gaster set up a bait and tackle shop, bought a large inventory of fishing tackle, live bait and artificial lures

— all in anticipation of the soon-to-come lake. He's let the lease expire on his shop and predicts he'll be out about $8,000. Horton says he doesn't know whether his store will survive until the latest projected opening of the lake — in 1981. Plans to impound the lake by the summer of 1980 were delayed when the corps discovered cracks in the rock base of the dam. County officials say the plight of the store owners is just an indication of the economic harm the entire county is feeling as the 47,000 acres acquired by the corps for the project stand idle. Gus P. Murchison Jr., chairman of Chatham County's board of commissioners, cited the loss to the county's tax base and the loss of anticipated increases in sales tax revenue as an example. He also noted, "When they took the land in 1967, they promised us a lake in 1971." That 1981 target date still

Knows She Is Dying, And Knows It's Not Far Away

By BRYNA BRENNAN
Associated Press Writer
CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Jacqueline Johnson can't predict the day or the hour she will die, but she knows it will be soon. And she is ready.

"It's not that I've given up. I just decided I would use what time I had," said the 65-year-old Martinsburg woman, terminally ill with cancer.

As one of four patients involved in a recently created hospice program at City Hospital in Martinsburg, Mrs. Johnson has been given medical care along with the psychological support to choose how she will live her final few months.

Hospice programs, designed to ease the mental and physical pain accompanying terminal illness, stress home care with support from trained and volunteer medical teams.

The first step is acceptance of death.

For Mrs. Johnson, that acceptance came last fall when a doctor confirmed her suspicions with his diagnosis of cancer.

"I knew what was wrong with me before I went to the doctor," explained Mrs. Johnson, a microbiologist who worked in hospitals for 44 years. "I have a tumor in my esophagus. I'm going to die of starvation eventually."

Her physician, Dr. Timothy Bowers, describes Mrs. Johnson as a "remarkable woman."

"Not every patient can accept this kind of program. Some persons cannot accept the fact that they have a terminal disease and are going to die," he said.

"The essence of the hospice program is to make that remaining time as useful as it possibly can be, to concentrate on living, not dying."

Mrs. Johnson said she is putting her remaining time to good use.

"Some people have heart attacks and strokes and don't get a chance to say goodbye," she said. "I've made a will now and I'm working on a little bit of the family history."

While there is life, she said, neither she nor her son, who lives nearby, will mourn death.

"I think I made as a good a choice as there is," she said. "There's no really good solution, and I've made my turn in the road. It's no use looking back, I'm too far gone."

Mrs. Johnson looks "rather bony, now." She said she's not in pain, but feels "rather blah."

"I was hoping I'd feel really good. I suppose that's expecting too much. But it's not as bleak as it sounds."

The hospice concept is

Seek Dismissal On Brilab Count

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — As Charles Roemer II pleaded innocent in the Louisiana Brilab investigation, his lawyer charged that leaks to the press made the proceedings unfair and asked a federal judge to throw out the indictment against the former No. 2 man in state government.

The motion Wednesday by Roemer's lawyer Michael Fawer said "highly prejudicial and improper disclosures" make "any further criminal proceedings against defendant Roemer fundamentally unfair."

If U.S. District Judge Morey Sear won't dismiss the indictment, Fawer wants a contempt hearing on charges that federal officials leaked "confidential and prejudicial information" to reporters.

Meanwhile, Roemer, 57, appeared before U.S. Magistrate Ingard Johannesen and was placed under $35,000 personal appearance bond and told not to leave the country.

The former Louisiana commissioner of administration and three others, including reputed New Orleans Mafia boss Carlos Marcello, are scheduled to stand trial July 28.

The others named in the conspiracy, racketeering and fraud indictment were arraigned Tuesday and also pleaded innocent. The bonds and trial date were the same for Marcello, 70; Washington lobbyist Issac Irving Davidson, 59, and New Orleans lawyer Vincent Marinello, 43.

Marinello's lawyer, Darleen M. Jacobs, disclosed Wednesday that the FBI secretly tape-recorded more than 30,000 conversations during its eight-month investigation code-named Brilab, for "bribery" and "labor."

The indictment accused Roemer of accepting $25,000 to use his influence to help the conspirators obtain contracts on lucrative state employee insurance policies.

spreading throughout the country, and citizen groups in Charleston, Beckley, Oak Hill and Parkersburg are looking into such programs, according to a West Virginia health agency.

The West Virginia Health Systems Agency is expected to adopt guidelines for hospice programs in the next few months.

Mrs. Johnson said she hopes hospice programs will change people's attitudes toward death.

"It's only natural for people to like a happy ending to the story. Most doctors are trained to fight illness and hope to win. They feel much better if their patients get well. Doctors are a little embarrassed when they don't — they feel as if they're on the losing side."

"And it's interesting how other people treat you. When you get ill they shout at you. Everything must be impaired, they think, including your hearing."

A few months ago, Mrs. Johnson helped train some of the hospice program volunteers. "To give them the patient's view," she explained with a laugh. "I tell them the patients just want to manage to die as comfortably as they can."

Bowers said all patients must be referred to the program by a physician. They are given pain killers when they say they need it, and counseling is available for family members after the death, he said.

Mrs. Johnson plans to stay at her home alone "and be independent for as long as possible."

"In some ways it makes it easier when you know it's almost hopeless," Mrs. Johnson said. "You take what you have and make the most of it."

$25 Billion Voted Mass Transit Use

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate wants to spend $25 billion over the next five years to improve mass transit systems in hopes of nudging Americans out of their automobiles and into buses and trains.

"If we ask people to use transit instead of the private auto, and we cannot deliver on a promise of reliable and efficient service, we will not succeed in getting people out of their cars," said Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J.

The bill passed 79-15 despite some Republican grumbling about the fact that the measure's spending levels for next year are substantially higher than recommended by the Senate Budget Committee. Similar legislation is pending in the House.

The Senate bill would authorize nearly $14 billion for new construction and major improvements in local transit systems and about $9.5 billion to help pay operating expenses for transit systems already in use.

It provides for changing the formula for granting operating-assistance money starting in fiscal 1982 to place more emphasis on the transit services actually offered by a community. The current distribution formula places a heavy emphasis on population.

The bill also would: —Permit the government to buy buses directly from companies and transfer them later to cities or counties. The idea is to reduce delays and provide a steady demand for equipment that should lead to greater production efficiency.

—Give local officials more latitude in meeting federal requirements on service for the handicapped. For example, they might be exempted from having to provide specially equipped buses if they could show that other suitable arrangements are being made to transport the handicapped.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Warm weather is expected in the forecast period until Friday morning for most of the country. A cool band is indicated from the northern Plains to western New England. Showers are forecast for southern Florida and from the Ohio Valley to northern New England. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Weather forecasters said the "rain will depart a soggy but thankful North Carolina today," leaving behind moistened crops and cheered farmers.

The rain, said Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham, was "the salvation of Agriculture 1980 in North Carolina."

It was the first general rainfall since May, and the ground soaked it up rapidly in most cases. There was some flooding reported in western sections of the state, where up to six inches of rain fell over a two-day period.

However, the Weather Service said no significant flooding problems were expected along any of North Carolina's streams. "The dry spell that the state has experienced has caused the rivers to be so low that they have been able to handle the runoff. However, some areas did see small streams running fast and high and places with poor drainage had problems with heavy downpours," the service reported today.

John H. Cyrus, chief of the Agriculture Department's tobacco affairs section, said the rain was made to order for the state's tobacco crop. "This rain comes at a crucial time — at the end of a dry June, which we want. From here on, we'd like to see a good rain a week,"

Cyrus said. The long absence of rain has caused tobacco in some areas to flower prematurely, stunting the overall development of the plants.

The rain ended over the western sections of the state early today. Clearing gradually was expected to spread eastward during the day, with all rain ending by this evening.

Sky conditions were expected to be clear Friday, with temperatures in the low and mid 90s.

Rain and clouds kept temperatures down Wednesday. Highs ranged from the 60s in the western Piedmont and northern mountains to the low and mid 70s in the central and southwest mountains and the mid 80s along the south coast. With a high of only 60, Boone was not only the coolest in North Carolina but was among the coolest in the continental United States. Wilmington had an 87, the highest reading reported in the state.

Overnight temperatures this morning were mostly in the mid 60s in the west and in the low and mid 70s along the coast.

Inmate Says His Rights Violated

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A prison inmate has filed suit in U.S. District Court to become part of a 1977 suit contending the state has violated prisoners' constitutional rights.

Paul Mack Baugh filed the suit Wednesday, contending that he had been forced into taking medication in 1978 and had been committed against his wishes to psychiatric facilities at Central Prison and in Wayne County.

His suit contended that about 10 percent of the 29,000 prisoners who passed through North Carolina's correctional system last year were "subjected to the threat of forcible medication and involuntary commitment."

Carter Visits Portugal, Expresses Appreciation

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
LISBON, Portugal (AP) — President Carter arrived in Lisbon today to offer visible encouragement to Portugal's six-year-old democracy and thank the government for being "among the first of the world's nations to recognize and respond to the threat posed to democratic societies everywhere by aggression in Afghanistan and official terrorism in Iran."

In a toast prepared for a state luncheon given in his honor, Carter said, "People who value freedom cannot stand idly by while others' rights are ruthlessly suppressed and while a system of international order, so dearly won and delicately maintained, is so callously attacked."

Although he referred to terrorism in Iran, Carter did not mention the 53 American hostages being held there. He has seldom talked about them in public on his eight-day European tour. However, before leaving Spain this morning, he told a group of American employees at the U.S. Embassy in Madrid that he has constantly raised the issue in his talks with officials of all nations.

"I urge them to do everything they possibly can," Carter said.

President Antonio Ramalho Eanes, in his banquet toast, did refer to the hostages, saying they "remain victims of an intolerable violation of human rights and of a complete contempt for the most elementary rules of international relations."

"It is urgent for the international community to mobilize all efforts and to adopt efficient measures for the quick solution of this problem," he said.

Carter's plane, Air Force One, landed at 4:25 a.m. EDT at Lisbon's Portela Airport, the last stop on Carter's European tour. Gen. Eanes, who was elected after putting down an attempted coup in 1975, stood in a brisk wind at the foot of the ramp to welcome the first American president to visit the Portuguese mainland in two decades.

In addition to Eanes, Carter met privately with Premier Francisco Sa Carneiro and Mario Soares, leader of the opposition Socialist Party.

Scarcely anyone turned out to watch the presidential motorcade drive through the capital at midmorning on a bright, sunny day, and the president traveled along mostly empty streets. White House aides in the travel party said no attempt was made to draw crowds.

Squeezing a bit of sight-seeing into his six-hour stop-over, Carter toured the 16th century Jeronimos Monastery and laid wreaths at the tombs of explorer Vasco da Gama and the poet Luis de Camoes.

About 500 people, mostly Americans, gathered outside, and when Carter emerged, he walked over to the crowd to shake hands and to chat. A group of teen-age girls from an American school in Lisbon broke into a brief rendition of Dixie, the song of the American South, and there were shouts of "We love you, Jimmy" from the crowd.

Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, and Premier Sa Carneiro found the mood contagious, and they, too, began cheerfully shaking hands with people in the crowd.

From the monastery, Carter drove to Ajuda Palace where he and the prime minister posed for photographs before sitting down for a private discussion.

The luncheon hosted by Eanes and Sa Carneiro was the last item on Carter's agenda before his departure for the United States.

While Portugal's left-wing extremists prepared protest rallies before and after Carter's stop, government leaders were determined to offer a warm welcome for the first visit of an American president here since Dwight D. Eisenhower passed through in 1960.

Gen. Eanes downgraded a summer 1974 meeting between Presidents Richard Nixon and Antonio de Spinoia in the Azores by terming Carter's the first official visit by a U.S. president since an army coup toppled 48 years of right-wing dictatorship on April 25, 1974.

Carter flew to Lisbon from Spain, where he also paid a one-day, democracy-boosting visit.

After his departure from Madrid, the government issued a statement saying Carter declared his satisfaction with Spain's progress toward entering the European Common Market. But the statement made no mention of the government's announced intention to seek membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization of which the United States is a key member.

The statement said Carter and Premier Adolfo Suarez examined in detail the Soviet announcement of a partial military withdrawal from Afghanistan and reaffirmed

"that only total withdrawal of Soviet troops and guarantees of non-alignment" would solve the crisis in southwest Asia.

Arriving in Lisbon, Carter said, "Portugal's successful struggle to build a democracy ... has given hope to believers in democratic liberty all over the world."

In an interview with the Portuguese news agency ANOP before leaving Washington, the president said that during his visit he wanted to "express the profound admiration which I and Americans generally feel for your nation's remarkable transition to democracy."

He was referring to a nearly bloodless coup in 1974 and the holding of free national elections since then.

Noting the transition to democracy in both Spain and Portugal, Carter said, "We have seen new constitutions with significant safeguards for human rights adopted in both countries, enabling public opinion to play its vital political role."

Carter's short visit to Spain on Wednesday was designed primarily to underscore the United States' support for Spain's democratic government five years after the death of Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

He took the opportunity to confer with government and opposition leaders, and to tour the Prado museum.

At a luncheon given by King Juan Carlos I, the president toasted the nation's royalty, political leaders and people in Spanish, saying:

"The growth of Spanish democracy has been a tonic for the entire Western world. Spain refutes the false contention that the sweep of history is invariably toward authoritarianism — so Spain is a source of hope and inspiration to democrats everywhere."

Offer New Accounting Manual For AT&T

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission has proposed a new accounting procedure for the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. which the FCC says would permit closer monitoring of the Bell System's rates.

The proposal, adopted on an interim basis Wednesday pending public comment and final action, requires AT&T to divide its costs among three distinct categories and thus should "assist in preventing cross-subsidization among AT&T services," the FCC said.

The new cost allocation manual was devised to resolve uncertainties about AT&T's accounting procedures that have troubled the FCC for almost two decades.

By establishing specific service categories, the new manual would keep AT&T — the Bell System — from using revenue derived from its domination of the long-distance market to subsidize low charges for other services, the FCC staff explained.

In issuing its Notice of Proposed Rulemaking, the FCC called AT&T's existing procedures "indirect, unverifiable and convoluted. As a consequence, it is virtually impossible to track the costing process with sufficient accuracy to determine the lawfulness of many of AT&T's rate schedules."

As an example, the FCC said it was extremely difficult to determine whether Bell was overcharging regular long-distance customers and then using the money to set charges for private line service — where it faces competition — at an artificially low level.

To resolve the problem, the commission said it was proposing that AT&T break down its revenues, investment and expenses into three categories: Message Telephone Service (MTS); Wide Area Telephone Service (WATS), and private line service.

MTS refers to the conventional long-distance phone service provided individual subscribers. WATS allows a large number of long-distance calls within a specified area for a flat fee. Private line services are typically used by companies and government agencies as a private link between separated offices.

Once established, the FCC said, each of those reporting categories individually would be required to earn the prescribed interstate rate-of-return. The rate-of-return is the maximum profit margin established by the FCC.

The new cost manual is seen as merely an interim step in an on-going effort that could eventually lead to an overhaul of AT&T's entire tariff structure and adoption of a new Uniform System of Accounts for all telephone companies.

City Refuses Grant

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — The Bellevue City Council has said thanks, but no thanks, to a federal grant of $94,000.

The council voted on Monday to turn down the Department of Energy money that would have been used to revise city land-use codes to encourage energy-efficient development.

"In a time when we have high inflation, high unemployment and are in the midst of a recession, one of the contributors to those problems has to be cities going to the federal government and asking for funds," said Mike Evered, a councilman in this city of 65,000.

Evered said the federal government ought to keep the money and use it to help balance the budget.

The vote, however, may be short-lived. The council will reconsider the matter in two weeks.

Arnold B. Parris, president of the Pitt-Greene Production Credit Association, participated in a four-state conference of Federal Land Bank Association and Production Credit Association officials held June 15-17 at the Great Smokies Hilton, Asheville.

Parris said that over 750 farmer-directors, presidents and guests of the 46 Land Bank Associations and 58 Production Credit Associations in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida attended the business sessions.

Farmer-owned Land Bank Associations make and service long-term loans for the Federal Land Bank of Columbia to farmers, growers, ranchers and home owners in rural areas. PCAs provide short and intermediate term credit to this same group, as well as to commercial fishermen. The two banks and associations have agricultural loans outstanding to about 134,000 members in excess of $6.3 billion in the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida, the four states served by the banks and associations.

The Pitt-Greene Production Credit Association has 998 loans outstanding in Pitt and Greene counties, amounting to over $4,900,000.

Also attending the Asheville meetings, in addition to Parris were David Harold Smith, James E. Manning, Wayne K. Stokes, T. Weldon Shingleton, Arthur Roscoe Barnhill, Directors; Alton Gardner, director emeritus and F.L. Little Jr., consultant.

Schedule Hearings On Gasoline Conservation

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State energy officials have scheduled seven public hearings in September on North Carolina's gasoline conservation plan.

The State Energy Policy Council took the action Wednesday after hearing repeated criticism of the gasoline rationing plan recently proposed by the U.S. Department of Energy.

There "might be a dumber plan than that, but I don't see how you could work it out," said state Commerce Secretary Lauch Faircloth of the federal proposal.

Donald McCoy, a Fayetteville attorney and council member, pointed out that gasoline allocations under the proposed rationing plan would be based on most recent consumption figures. He said this would penalize those who have cut back on gasoline consumption voluntarily.

"Our greatest fears have been realized. It means that the more gasoline we conserve the less we get," McCoy said.

Hearings on the state conservation plan were scheduled in Raleigh for Sept. 4, in Asheville Sept. 9, in Charlotte Sept. 10, in Greensboro Sept. 11, in Wilmington Sept. 16 and in New Bern Sept. 17.

The plan is designed to provide steps that could be taken in the event of a mild shortage of gasoline, a moderate shortage and a severe shortage.

Included in the plan are proposals for public information programs, minimum gasoline purchases, gasoline purchases restricted by odd-even license tag numbers, stricter enforcement of the 55 mph speed limit, compressed work-weeks, and vehicle maintenance, parking management and traffic control measures.

All of these steps would be taken before gasoline rationing was ordered.

In other areas the council approved a residential conservation program decreed by the National Energy Conservation Policy Act. The plan, still subject to approval by DOE, requires larger gas and electric utilities to offer customers on-site home energy audits and help in implementing and financing any energy-saving measures recommended by these analyses.

The council also continued state enforcement of emergency temperature restrictions in buildings even though state reports indicated compliance was being made voluntarily.

The council also continued state enforcement of emergency temperature restrictions in buildings even though state reports indicated compliance was being made voluntarily.

The three were ordered to talk after being granted immunity from prosecution, preventing them from claiming the Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination.

Three courts, including the Court of Appeal and the state Supreme Court, already have refused to overturn the contempt citations handed down May 1 by Riverside Superior Court Judge Gerald Schulte.

The writ of habeas corpus in effect began the appeal process anew.

Chartered Plane Rough Landing

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A chartered United Airlines plane with 237 passengers on board made a rough landing in rain and fog Wednesday, shaking up four of the passengers.

The four women were treated and released at a Greensboro hospital.

The flight had originated in Honolulu on a charter flight arranged by Wilcox Travel Agency of Asheville. Carrying passengers from throughout North Carolina, the flight had been intended to end at Greensboro.

NCNB Announce Sale Agreement

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — NCNB Corp. announced Wednesday it has reached agreement in principle with a "privately owned domestic corporation" to buy $14 million of proposed NCNB common stock.

Thomas I. Storrs, chairman of the bank-holding company, said the stock would be issued in 1981. He said the sale was being arranged to maintain an adequate capital base for the corporation's operations.

Changes Mind Over Execution

ATLANTA (AP) — Condemned killer Jack Howard Potts returns to court today to tell a federal judge he's changed his mind again and wants to avoid his July 1 rendezvous with Georgia's electric chair.

U.S. District Judge William C. O'Kelley summoned the 35-year-old man to his courtroom for a hearing on the renewed appeal of Potts' 1976 convictions in the kidnap-murder of Roswell mechanic Michael Priest.

Another federal court hearing was set today in Macon on an attempt by Atlanta attorney Tom West, unauthorized by Potts, to stay Tuesday's execution.

It was O'Kelley who saved Potts from electrocution

June 5 when Potts agreed to an 11th-hour appeal of his convictions. And it was O'Kelley who withdrew the stay of execution when Potts dropped the appeal a day later and said he was ready to die.

Today's hearing was called to determine Potts' current state of mind and decide whether he may reopen the on-again, off-again case.

The new appeal was filed Wednesday afternoon with O'Kelley's clerk in Gainesville by Joe Nursey, an attorney for Team Defense, an anti-death penalty law firm based in Atlanta.

Earlier in the day, O'Kelley rejected a "next friend" petition by the American Civil Liberties Union seeking a stay of execution. But he agreed to help expedite a review of the case by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

ACLU attorneys said they would take the matter all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, if necessary.

In the Macon proceedings, West asked the judge to rule that "intolerable conditions" on death row at the Georgia Diagnostic and Classification Center at Jackson influenced Potts to abandon his appeals and seek death.

Carolyn Potts, mother of the condemned man, said she knew nothing of her son's renewed appeal and would prefer that the execution be carried out Tuesday, as scheduled.

"If they're going to do it, they might as well go ahead and do it," Mrs. Potts said in a telephone interview Wednesday night.

"If it keeps going on this way, I'm not going to be able to take it. I just want it to be over with. No matter what, he's not going to be out."

State prison spokeswoman Sara Engle said Warden Walter Zant spoke with Potts Wednesday night at the Jackson prison and the condemned man would neither confirm nor deny he had filed a new appeal.

Potts has been in the public spotlight since last fall when he fired his attorneys, abandoned his appeal and announced his conversion to Catholicism.

In a series of news conferences, he called for improved treatment of prisoners on death row at the Jackson facility and the state prison at Reidsville, where the last state execution took place in 1964.

James Earl Ray's Brother Questioned

QUINCY, Ill. (AP) — FBI agents investigating the shooting of Vernon E. Jordan Jr. have questioned the brother of the man convicted of assassinating Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., but agents said it was "premature" to consider him a suspect.

The FBI asked John Larry Ray, a recently recaptured fugitive, "where his travels have taken him recently," special agent Wayne R. Davis said Wednesday. "But this does not indicate a new turn in the investigation," he said.

FBI agents also planned to talk again to Jordan, 44, the National Urban League president who is in a New York hospital recovering from a May 29 sniper attack in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Ray, brother of James Earl Ray, was apprehended Monday near Alton. He was wanted for questioning in a bank robbery that occurred May 30 and was ordered held on $200,000 bond in the Adams County jail here. His case was continued to July 3.

Special Agent Robert Davenport of Springfield confirmed Wednesday that FBI agents had questioned Ray, but Davenport declined to discuss details of the interview. Ray said Wednesday he didn't know exactly where he was the night Jordan was shot.

Davis also said the FBI would not release the results of the Ray interview. "I don't anticipate any statement. That's just our policy," he said.

"We can't consider him (Ray) a suspect. That would be too premature," Davis said.

Reject Releasing Of Scientists

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — A lawyer representing three jailed Scientologists says he will appeal to the state Supreme Court after losing another bid to free his clients on grounds their imprisonment is illegal.

Harold De Young, Philip Deland and Donald White, of the Riverside Scientology mission, have been in jail since Friday for refusing to answer questions before the county grand jury.

Attorney Howard Gillingham on Tuesday made an unsuccessful attempt to persuade the Court of Appeal in San Bernardino to free the three on a writ of habeas corpus, claiming their imprisonment is illegal.

All three men have refused to answer questions about an alleged multimillion-dollar loan fraud scheme involving church officers who purportedly coached parishioners to lie on loan

Lays Plans For Boycott

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson says he plans to organize an economic boycott this summer against companies that do not hire and promote blacks.

Jackson, a civil rights activist and national president of Operation PUSH (People United to Save Humanity), said Tuesday he hoped the boycott would target local businesses that have not been receptive to blacks and the poor.

He said it would also be directed against companies that do not "put money into minority banks or use black insurance companies."

He said 9 million unemployed Americans are "being held hostage economically because they can't find work." He estimated the black consumer market at $100 billion a year and said blacks should become aware of the economic clout they have.

Jackson, speaking before attending the local PUSH chapter's annual dinner, said the three major presidential candidates are not addressing black issues. However, he said he felt it would be disastrous for blacks to sit out the November election.

He was critical of Ronald Reagan and John Anderson and predicted President Carter would become more receptive to solving black problems when the party conventions are over because it will become more apparent then that he needs black votes to win re-election.

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) - The North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was trending higher than last week. Supply moderate. Demand good. The North Carolina dock weighted average price this week is 45.04 cents per pound for small purchases of plant-grade broilers picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter today was 1,773,000.

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market gained more ground today, extending Wednesday's sharp advance. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 10.24 Wednesday to a four-month high, picked up another 2.39 to 889.93 by noon-time today. Gainers outnumbered losers by a 4-3 margin in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market's strength in recent days has brought it close to the peaks it reached in February before a sharp selloff set in.

The Dow Jones industrial average's closing high for the year to date was 903.84 on Feb. 13.

One commonly accepted explanation for the recent gains has been demand from investing institutions scrambling to add stocks that have fared well to their portfolios in time for their midyear reports.

Sony led the active list, unchanged at 10 1/4. A 200,000-share block traded at 10 1/4 on the Pacific Stock Exchange.

Electric utility issues, which have benefited from the drop in interest rates this spring, were broadly higher again today.

Public Service Electric & Gas was up 1/4 at 20 1/4; Commonwealth Edison 1/4 at 22 1/4; Northeast Utilities 1/4 at 9 1/4, and Baltimore Gas & Electric 1/4 at 23 1/4, all in active trading.

The NYSE's composite index rose .13 to 66.85. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.54 at 296.96.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 19.82 million shares at noon-time, against 21.58 million at the same point Wednesday.

LCars driven by Moses Douglas Joyner of 405B Rountree Dr. and Coy Hicks of 1012 Fleming St. collided about 1:10 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Sheppard Streets, investigators reported, causing $1,200 damage to the Joyner car and $1,000 damage to the Hicks vehicle.

A 9:28 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Wade Street involved cars driven by Joyce Stocks Jones of 100 Jose La., Johnnie Carroll Phillips of Winterville, and Thad Lester Lilly of Route 1, Grifton.

Investigators reported no damage resulted to the truck.

An estimated $150 damage resulted to each of two vehicles involved in a 10:06 a.m. mishap on Greenville Boulevard, 100 feet east of the Arlington Boulevard intersection, police reported.

personally pleased that from more than 130 candidates the selection committee and Dr. Maier recommended such an outstanding leader from our own faculty to be the new Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. Dr. Volpe has distinguished himself nationally and we look forward to his ideas and leadership.

The College of Arts and Sciences, largest single academic unit of the university, includes 18 departments in the humanities, social sciences and natural sciences, and has more than 330 faculty members.

The College of Arts and Sciences, Volpe said, "is really the heart of the university." He said "it is incumbent upon all components of Arts and Sciences to work together to educate our students - educate in the highest sense - and at the same time make students aware of the problems that face society today."

"I have no doubt but that these complex problems are going to require a synthesis of the social sciences, humanities and natural sciences to be solved," he said. "Our purpose will be to instill intellectual autonomy in our students and, at the same time, give them social responsibility."

Before coming to ECU in 1977, Volpe was professor of chemistry at Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken, N.J., and also served administratively as acting head of the Chemistry and Chemical Engineering Department at Stevens Institute and as chairman of Stevens' Faculty Council.

His research concentration in polymers, polymer synthesis and particularly development of thermally stable (flame and heat resistant) polymers has won national recognition. He is engaged in a program of national short courses on polymer science and technology and plastics product design.

With other educators here and at other institutions, he has been instrumental in setting up a regional program of applied physical sciences now being funded with a $235,000 National Science Foundation grant.

In addition, Volpe said he is especially pleased at the increased amount of research being conducted and increased levels of research support at ECU.

A native of Brooklyn, N.Y., he received his BS degree from Brooklyn College and his MS and PhD degrees from the University of Maryland. He is married to the former Jennette Elizabeth Murray of Takoma Park, Md.

Maier said "We look forward to Dr. Volpe's leadership in the years ahead."

Maier added, "A great measure of appreciation is due Dean Capwell for his years of service as dean. I join his many friends in wishing him success as he resumes a productive career in the classroom."

family dwellings.

Other preliminary plans approved last night included Tree Hill Apartments (a proposed 11 duplex units), located on the west side of Brownlea Drive, between Maplewood subdivision and the Parson's property, and Village East (an 11-lot multi-family development), located on the north side of Cedar Lane, between University Condominiums and the Speight property.

The final plat for Village East, Section I, composed of four lots, was also approved by the commission, as were final plats for Patrick's Plaza, Section II and Section III, located in the northwest quadrant of Arlington Boulevard and Red Banks Road.

Re-approval of preliminary plats for Cambridge Manor Apartments (the southernmost portion of Cambridge subdivision off Hooker Road) and AJHM Subdivision, located on the northeast corner of the N.C. 11 and Club Pines Drive intersection, was also done at the session.

The commission continued action on the preliminary plat of the Eastern Realty Property, located west of West Rocksprings Road and east of Green Mill Run - between 10th and 14th Streets - until next month's meeting.

Action on the plat - proposing condominiums or townhouses - was postponed to give further study to questions of a survey of the property, a possible bicycle path, dedicated right-of-way in the area, and easements near the property.

Army Sergeant To Face Borg

By GEOFFREY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Just over a year ago, Shlomo Glickstein was a sergeant in the Israeli army. Thursday, he faced Bjorn Borg, the world's No. 1 tennis star, at Wimbledon.

"It's a great opportunity for me," said Glickstein after he had upset Raul Ramirez of Mexico in the first round. "I am sure I will learn a lot from the match and gain a lot of experience, and I hope to do my best."

But when he was asked about his chances of winning, Glickstein just rhapsodized about Borg, who is bidding to win Wimbledon for the fifth straight year.

"Borg is just a great player," said this virtually unknown Israeli, who is one of the few men from his country who have played at Wimbledon.

"He's out there on the court to win. His concentration is unbelievable. Psychologically none of the top players can beat him."

John McEnroe, seeded to meet Borg in the final for a prize of $46,600, was paired against Terry Rocavert of Australia.

Jimmy Connors, seeded third, had a more difficult looking assignment against Sherwood Stewart, ranked No. 36 in the United States but with a lot of Wimbledon experience behind him.

Vitas Gerulaitis, seeded fourth, faced Sashi Menon of India. Roscoe Tanner, last year's defeated finalist, was aiming his booming services at Australia's John Fitzgerald.

There was a chance Chris Evert Lloyd and Billie Jean King might get on court Thursday — if the men's schedule is completed. Neither has hit a ball yet.

Glickstein was the star of the third day's play, defeating Ramirez 4-6, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5, 8-6. He saved two match points at 5-3 in the fourth set.

Rain on the first two days has left the tournament seriously behind schedule.

The first seed fell Wednesday. Hank Pfister, a 6-foot-4 power player, edged 6-7 Vic Amaya, the No. 14 seed, 3-6, 6-4, 6-0, 3-6, 6-3.

Winning seeds were No. 15

Stan Smith, who downed Rhodesian-born Andrew Pattison 5-7, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4 in a match that had been dragging on between rain showers since Monday; Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina, who beat Vijay Amritraj of India 1-6, 3-6, 7-5, 7-5, 6-4, and Pat DuPre, ranked ninth and a semifinalist last year, who served and volleyed his way past sometime Hollywood actor Vince Van Patten 6-4, 3-6, 6-1, 6-4 in an all-American duel.

Andrea Jaeger, 15-year-old from Lincolnshire, Ill., the youngest-ever seed at Wimbledon, beat Britain's Anthea Cooper 6-3, 6-3.

Two former Wimbledon champions won their first round matches. No. 4 Evonne Goolagong of Australia (1971) stopped Sharon Walsh of the United States 6-1, 6-2. Virginia Wade of Britain (1977), seeded seventh, defeated Ivanna Madruga of Argentina 6-4, 6-4.

Quick Start Sparks Victory

ROCKY MOUNT — Williamston pushed over eight first inning runs against Rocky Mount last night, and made it pay off for a 9-7 American Legion Division I East victory.

Rocky Mount never recovered from the first inning, although it did rally within two before the end.

Randy Ellis opened the first for Williamston with a walk and Eldred McQueen singled. Steve Wallace reached on an error, scoring Ellis. Glen Cargile was hit by a pitch, and Trent Ange singled, scoring McQueen. Robbie Barber then singled, driving in both Wallace and Cargile.

Wiley Keel reached on a fielder's choice that nailed Barber at second, but Kevin Hardison kept it going with a single that scored Ange. Ellis, back up for the second time in the inning, singled in Keel, and McQueen tripled, driving in both Hardison and Ellis.

Williamston added its insurance run in the fifth. Rocky Mount came back with four in the bottom of the first and added another in the second, then picked up its final two in the seventh.

Ellis and McQueen led the Williamston hitting, each bagging three, including a triple each. Ange and Leslie Beacham each added two. Bill Wilkes, Bruce Ellis, Chuck Davis and Timmy Tucker each had two for Rocky Mount.

Williamston closes out the season on Friday, traveling to Snow Hill.

Williamston 800 010 000-9 13 3 Rocky Mt. 410 000 200-7 9 2 Hardison, Downs (8) and Beacham; Kennedy, Rock (1), Ellis (8) and Reece.

Scoring Mistake Was Honest One By Official

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Bob Lee was ashamed to make such a simple mistake as ransposing a judge's score but the boxing official was not looking to shift the blame for the scorecard error in Friday's Roberto Duran-Sugar Ray Leonard WBC welterweight title fight.

Lee was put in charge of tabulating the cards of the three judges but a careless error led to the fight being initially announced as a majority decision for Duran instead of a unanimous decision.

"I made a mistake," Lee, the ratings chairman of the United States Boxing Association and New Jersey's deputy athletic commissioner, said Wednesday. "It was something that shouldn't have happened."

The scores announced had Duran slightly ahead on the cards of judges Harry Gibbs and Ramon Baldeyrou with Italy's Angelo Poletti scoring the fight 145-145, a draw. That made it a majority decision for Duran.

"After each round the judges handed the referee a tab, and the referee gave it to me," said

Lee. "In the 10th round, two of the judges had it 10-9 but I thought all three had it 10-9. Poletti actually had it 10-10."

"It wasn't that I added wrong but I miscopied from his paper to mine. I had written his down as 10-9 Leonard instead of an even round. The mistake was 100 percent mine."

The extra point, discovered when Lee double-checked about the time the majority decision was being announced, gave Duran a 146-145 edge on Poletti's card and made the decision unanimous.

Lee, who assists former heavyweight champion Jersey Joe Walcott in the state athletic commission, is a highly competent and respected man in boxing. His mistake was an honest one, but one that created total chaos. He realized his error even before Poletti came running over to him after the scores were announced.

"I was double-checking all the scorecards and Poletti's was the last one," Lee said. "I'm not sure if I realized it before the announcement was made or right after. I think it was before. The judge couldn't speak English and I can't speak Italian but I understood enough to know that the score I gave wasn't correct."

Lee immediately began searching for World Boxing Council President Jose Sulaiman to make a corrective announcement. But in the total confusion that follows a championship bout, Sulaiman was nowhere to be found. Lee decided to make the announcement to the media immediately, but the interview room was mobbed as first Duran and then Leonard talked.

"I couldn't get near the microphone," Lee said, explaining why the scoring change wasn't revealed until nearly one hour after the bout.

It was the first time Lee had made such an error. "It's something that shouldn't have happened," Lee added. "I've kept score in a number of fights and that's never happened."

Lee said he's gotten phone calls asking if Poletti made the mistake. "I'll stand on top of the Empire State Building and tell everyone I made the mistake. The mistake was mine and I'm man enough to admit it."

Palmer Is Winner Wednesday—Twice

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Jim Palmer scored a pair of victories Wednesday night. First the 34-year-old Baltimore right-hander scattered eight hits as the Orioles beat the Toronto Blue Jays 6-3 for Palmer's 232nd career triumph. Then, after the game, it was announced that he had agreed to a two-year contract extension with the club.

Contract terms were not disclosed, but Palmer previously had rejected a three-year extension valued at about $1.3 million. He has complained that his $260,000 salary was no longer commensurate with what was being paid other pitchers of his stature.

"I think this indicates the new management is more progressive in paying higher salaries," Palmer said, referring to Edward Bennett Williams, who took control of the Orioles last winter. "It indicates that other players, if they need a job over the long haul, will be paid in line with what other players are paid. The key to having a good ballclub is to keep good players here."

One of those good players, Ken Singleton, continued his hot hitting against the Blue Jays. He had two hits and drove in two runs, giving him 23 hits in 46 times at bat over the last 13 games.

He also has had 10 walks and 12 RBI during that span while raising his batting average from .236 to .286.

In other American League games, the Boston Red Sox edged the New York Yankees 4-3 in 10 innings, the Detroit Tigers clobbered the Cleveland Indians 13-3, the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Oakland A's 5-2, the Kansas City Royals defeated the Minnesota Twins 4-1, the Texas Rangers topped the Seattle Mariners 6-1 and the Chicago White Sox beat the California Angels 5-2.

Singleton singled in the first inning and came around to score on a walk to Eddie Murray and a single by Terry Crowley. Singleton later drove in his runs with a fifth inning single.

The triumph was the eighth for the Orioles in their last 10 games and their 12th in a row over Toronto since July, 1978.

In announcing Palmer's contract extension, which binds him to the club through 1983, plus one option year, General Manager Hank Peters said, "We hope Jim will be pitching with the Orioles for the remainder of his career." Williams said the same thing, but added, "I don't think the rest of his playing career is covered in this contract."

Palmer said he was happy to get the extension settled, but that it would have no effect on his performance.

"This does secure my future," he said, "but it will not change the way I'm going to pitch. I want to pitch as long as I can, and as long as I can do so effectively."

Red Sox 4, Yankees 3
Rookie second baseman Dave Stapleton hit a two-out double in the 10th inning to drive in Gary Allenson with the winning run for Boston.

Allenson had reached second when his one-out grounder went through the legs of third baseman Graig Nettles and hen was bobbled by left fielder Dennis Werth. Allenson advanced to third on Rick Burleson's grounder and scored when Stapleton pulled Tommy John's first pitch into the left field corner.

Boston reliever Tom Burgmeier got the victory, stifling the Yankees on one hit over the final 4-3 innings and striking out eight.

Brewers 5, A's 2
Ninth-inning home runs by Sixto Lezcano, Mark Brouhard and Buck Martinez, plus a run-scoring single by Cecil Cooper, gave Milwaukee a sweep of the three-game series and dealt the A's their 11th loss in the last 13 games.

Tigers 13, Indians 3
Cleveland's pitchers gave up 14 walks, five of them with the bases loaded, to make Detroit's seventh straight victory an easy one. The Tigers got three runs in the first inning on a single by Steve Kemp and five consecutive walks by Cleveland starter Dan Spillner and the Indians never caught up.

Rangers 6, Mariners 1
Ferguson Jenkins scattered nine hits, struck out two and walked one as Texas beat Seattle. The temperature was a sweltering 101 degrees on the field, but it didn't bother Jenkins any.

"If you're comfortable on the mound, it feels like 68 degrees," said Jenkins. "No way I should have given up that many hits, but I felt good."

Richie Zisk drove in three runs with a pair of singles to lead the Rangers' attack.

Royals 4, Twins 1
Paul Splittorff shut out Minnesota until Jose Morales' double with two out in the ninth, when Dan Quisenberry came on to get the last out. The two combined for a six-hitter.

Hal McRae slammed a two-run homer to pace the Kansas City attack, and the Royals supported Splittorff with three double plays.

White Sox 5, Angels 2
Chet Lemon hit a two-run homer, Wayne Nordhagen belted a solo shot and Jim Morrison doubled home two more runs for the White Sox.

Chicago starter Richard Dotson, 7-3, held the Angels hitless for 5-2/3 innings before giving way to Ed Farmer in the seventh. Farmer went on to post his 16th save, tops in the American League.

Comeback Ruled Out

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — It has been four years since Joe Frazier climbed into the ring with a fancy bathrobe sporting "Smokin' Joe" lettering across the back.

And the former heavyweight champion says that's fine with him.

"I accomplished everything I wanted," Frazier said. "I couldn't improve on it. My goals were to be good, to be the champ and to make enough money so I could take care of my people. I did that."

At 37, Frazier says a comeback is not for him. But he thinks his contemporary and former ring combatant, Muhammad Ali, stands a fair chance in his bid to regain the heavyweight boxing crown.

"I can't really visualize what the champ has in mind," Frazier said. "You never know what's going on under a man's roof. Maybe he's got some goal he hasn't reached. I will say — with what's out there today, he maybe could do it if he could get himself together."

"I was in Montreal last week, saw John Tate get knocked out by that guy (Trevor Berbick). From what I see, it shouldn't be any problem for a man who knows how to fight."

Frazier said retirement from boxing lets him enjoy his five children more.

He, his wife, Florence, and two of their daughters were in Atlanta last week when his 19-year-old son, Marvis, was knocked out in the first round of an Olympic trials semifinal bout.

"Boy's momma got a little upset, I guess," Frazier said. "But I didn't feel no pain for him. Marvis wasn't ever unconscious. He got punched on the top of the head and it kind of pushed his head down against his neck and pinched a nerve. Leaves you paralyzed for a time. I knew what it was because I had it happen to me."

He still gives Marvis boxing tips from time to time, Frazier said. But these days "we don't spar any more," he added. "Boy's getting too big."

Wellcome 6, Moose 1
The Tar Heel Little League's regular season came to an end yesterday with Wellcome gaining a 6-1 victory over the Moose. Wellcome ended up with a .99-6 record, while the Moose finished at 1-14.

The Moose scored first, getting its only run in the top of the first. But Wellcome stormed back with five in the second to take the lead for good.

With two away, Chris Brown was hit by a pitch and was safe at second when an error was made on Andrew Perry's grounder. Judd Crumpler reached on an error, loading the bases. Dallas McPherson also reached on an error, this one for two bases, allowing Brown and Perry to score. Another error let Crumpler score. Terry Warren singled in McPherson, and stole second. A wild pitch moved him to third, and an error let him score the fifth run.

The other run came in the fourth inning.

Warren led the Wellcome hitting with two. The Moose got only one hit off Warren's pitching, as he struck out 13 and walked six.

Tournament play for the League will get underway on Friday at Guy Smith field. The Moose and Wellcome meet in the first game, at 4 p.m., with Exchange and Pepsi-Cola colliding at 6 p.m. Top-seeded

First Federal will meet the winner of the second game on Saturday, with number two Big Value Drugs taking on the first game winner. The finals will be held on Monday, with the league champ taking on the North State title winner for the City Championship.

The Jaycees took the initial lead in the third, scoring one. But Coke came back to score all three of its runs in the fourth.

Earl Hines led off the fourth with a walk and he stole second. With one down, Mike Sasser walked and James Matthews singled, loading the bases. Michael Smith walked, forcing in Hines, and a walk to Sean Frelke brought in Sasser. Gil Elvington also walked, pushing Matthews across.

Matthews led the Coke hitting with two, the only two Coke claimed off several Jaycee pitchers. Brian Pierce

It took 11 innings to do it, but Aaction Movers finally gained a 10-6 victory over Coca-Cola in Babe Ruth League action last night. The win closed out Aaction with an 11-4 record, while Coke is 4-10 with one game to go.

Aaction scored first, getting a run in the top of the first. Coke tied it up with one in the fourth, but Aaction went back out, 2-1, with one in the fifth. Coke pushed ahead, 3-2, with two in the sixth, but Aaction regained the lead, 4-3, with two in the seventh. Coke then tied it up with one in the bottom of the seventh, forcing extra innings. Wilkins May Quit; Oerter Looks Ahead

By JIM COUR
AP Sports Writer

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Mac Wilkins, America's discus champion, may be retiring at 29 and 43-year-old Al Oerter incredibly has his sights set on 1984.

At the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials Wednesday night, Wilkins was the best at 225 feet, 4 inches and Oerter was the fourth best at 215-1.

But afterward, it was Oerter who talked optimistically about the Los Angeles Olympics and Wilkins who brought up the subject of retirement.

"I won't be around next year, that's for sure," Wilkins said. "I'm not sure about 1984. I just don't know. But this could be my last year."

"I'm physically and mentally tired. Look, I've been competing intensely for eight straight years and I need a rest. I have a family and I'd like to do something else with my life."

Wilkins, 1976 Olympic gold medalist and former world record holder, and Oerter, a four-time Olympic champion, won't be going to the Moscow Olympics, of course.

The United States is boycotting the Moscow Games, that begin July 19, because of the Soviet invasion and takeover of Afghanistan.

"I have no doubts about Los Angeles right now," smiled Oerter. "The only thing that can stop me now is illness."

On a cold and cloudy night at University of Oregon's Hayward Field, veteran John Powell, on his 33rd birthday, finished second in the discus at 223-1 while Ben Plucknett beat Oerter out for third spot at 218-2.

Larry Myricks, No.2 all-time long jumper who missed the 1976 Olympic competition with a broken ankle suffered in practice after arriving at Montreal, won at 27-2.

Arnie Robinson, gold medalist at Montreal, was sixth at 25-11 while Randy Williams, gold medalist at the 1972 Olympics in Munich, finished third in 26-1 1/4. Runner-up was Carl Lewis, who went 26-3 1/2. Lewis was fourth in the 100-meter dash Sunday.

"There was never any doubt that I would come back," said Myricks. "I was just patient with my rehabilitation. It took about a year and a half but I always knew I would make it."

Myricks won the World Cup at 27-11 1/4 at Montreal last year, second best long jump in history behind Bob Beamon's miracle jump of 29-2 1/2 at high altitude at the 1968 Olympics at Mexico City.

"I had hoped to get a better jump but I guess I'm happy with it," added Myricks. "It was a little chilly and it would have helped to have somebody pushing me."

Other winners on the fifth day of the Trials were James Butler of Oklahoma State in the 200-meter dash in 20.49 seconds, Stephanie Hightower of Ohio State in the women's 100 hurdle in 12.90 and Sherri Howard in the women's 400 in 51.48 seconds.

Wilkins said he would go after East German Wolfgang Schmidt's world record of 233-5, set in 1978, this summer in Europe.

"I'm not sure what's going to happen with my career," he said. "I might be retiring for good. So I want to go out on top this year. My first goal is 250 feet. If not, 233-6..."

Then he said, "I feel I have quite a bit more left inside me. I think I'm ready to do something big in the next three or four weeks."

Wilkins used the occasion of his victory to rip into America's track and field federation, The Athletics Congress.

"Their days are definitely numbered," he said. "As every day passes, they're going to have to do more and more for the athletes. It's inevitable."

Oerter gave strong support to President Carter and the U.S. boycott of the Moscow Games.

"You can't go to an Olympics where the host nation is butchering its neighbor," he said, referring to the Russian attack into Afghanistan. "It might be all right for some people but it's not all right for me."

Wilkins' win came on a day when former professionals Steve Smith and Brian Oldfield gained admittance, through the courts, to the Trials and then qualified for the Friday finals in their events. Smith is a pole vaulter and Oldfield is a shot putter.

Turner's Smile Turns From One Of Loser To One For Victory

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Ted Turner was grinning as he strode up the dock, but it was no longer the smile of the gracious loser.

Turner had just steered Courageous to three victories over Russell Long's Clipper in preliminary trials for the America's Cup defense Wednesday.

It was his first taste of victory since he beat Dennis Conner and Freedom in the opening day of the series last Saturday.

There had been nothing in between except six straight losses to Conner and the 24-year-old Long.

"Can't lose them all, you know," said Turner, who is trying to repeat the Cup defender role he played so well in 1977.

He bested Long by margins of 1:37, 20-and 28 seconds on Rhode Island Sound in winds ranging up to 17 knots.

But the first race was lost by Long more than it was won by Turner.

Long's crew failed to get a spinnaker set at the weather mark and Turner surged from behind and built a comfortable lead that held to the finish.

The other races were closer. The two boats collided lightly in the final match, causing both skippers to lodge protests with the New York Yacht Club, which oversees the event.

"It was tight, it was real tight out there," said Turner, adding that improved tacking by his crew may have made the difference Wednesday.

Andy Rose, tactician aboard Clipper, said the inexperience of Long's youthful crew may have been showing.

"The boat's speed is great. We've just got to learn to sail her," he said. "We're learning but we've got a lot to learn."

"We've only been doing serious sailing for about two months," said Rose. Clipper was launched in Newport last April.

Rose was not surprised by Turner's improved fortunes.

"If you're looking for Ted Turner to die — don't," he said.

Brave Manager Had The Explanation

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

It wasn't the most technical of explanations, but then, Bobby Cox doesn't mince words.

"It was a clear case of getting the hell beat out of us," the Atlanta manager said after his Braves were bombarded for 18 hits in a 15-3 trouncing by Cincinnati Wednesday night.

Just 24 hours earlier the Reds had erupted for 16 hits and an 8-2 victory. "They played dead for a month, then they explode against us," Cox muttered.

Elsewhere in the National League, St. Louis beat Pittsburgh 4-1, Philadelphia edged Montreal 2-1 in 10 innings, Los Angeles battered Houston 9-2, San Diego downed San Francisco 7-3 and, in a doubleheader, New York beat Chicago 9-1, then lost to the Cubs 4-1.

"When we play up to our capability, we can score a lot of runs," understated the Reds' Ray Knight, who drove in five of them with a grand-slam homer and a single. "We just have not been doing that."

"I don't think the Braves pitched that bad. It's just a matter of us having guys on this club who can hit when they get it together, no matter who is out there pitching," Knight added. "In spring training, I thought we had seven or eight potential .300 hitters in our lineup. We're always a late-blooming ballclub. We're about where we were last year at this time, maybe a little worse."

In fact, they're 5 1/2 games behind Houston in the NL West, exactly where they were a year ago today.

Rick Matula lasted just 11-3 innings and was charged with the first seven Reds runs, starting with the four on Knight's third career grand slam and second of the season. Ken Griffey got the first of his four RBI in the three-run second inning. He had a two-run homer in the seventh and pitcher Tom Hume had a two-run double in a four-run eighth.

Tom Seaver lasted seven innings, giving up homers to Dale Murphy and Jeff Burroughs en route to his first victory since May 10.

Cardinals 4, Pirates 1

Keith Hernandez's tie-breaking single in the fifth inning helped St. Louis chalk up its fourth straight victory. "We're playing textbook baseball," he said. "It's a game of momentum. You can almost sense things happening. I see things, that we're starting to play good, sound baseball."

"It's about time something good was happening to us," added Garry Templeton, whose sacrifice fly for the Cardinals' first run against the Pirates preceded Hernandez's key hit. "If we can play like this the rest of the way, we're going to win more than we lose."

Phillies 2, Expos 1

Bake McBride helped give Montreal its run in the fourth inning, committing a two-base error, then got the run back in the sixth when he hit his fifth homer of the season. And in the eighth, McBride nailed Montreal's Rodney Scott at the plate to keep the game tied.

Mike Schmidt untied it in the 10th with a bases-loaded, no-out single, pulling the Phils within 1 1/2 games of the first-place Expos in the East.

Padres 7, Giants 3

Dave Winfield drove in five San Diego runs, three with a first-inning homer. Dave Cash had an RBI double in the four-run first inning against the Giants' Allen Ripley. Winfield had a sacrifice fly in the

Dodgers 9, Astros 2

Steve Yeager hit a three-run homer off Ken Forsch — the same man who gave up his last homer back on Sept. 28 — to break a seventh-inning tie and move the Dodgers within two games of the front-running Astros in the West. Steve Garvey also had three RBI for Los Angeles while Dusty Baker led the Dodgers' 18-hit attack with his second four-hit game of the season.

Mets 9-1, Cubs 1-4

"We needed a strong game from him just as much as the victory," Chicago Manager Preston Gomez said after Lynn McGlothen pitched 7-3 innings second and an RBI triple in the eighth and Cash singled for another run in the fifth.

"We've got another doubleheader coming up Saturday and it was important to the whole pitching staff that he go seven or eight innings," Gomez said. "Besides winning the game, he gave the bullpen the rest it needs."

The same might have been said after the first game by Mets Manager Joe Torre. Pat Zachry, with his first complete game since April of 1979 (not including a six-inning rain-shortened complete game earlier this season) stifled the Cubs on five hits. Elliott Maddox and John Stearns drove in two runs apiece.

of four-hit ball to give the Cubs their twinning split.

College basketball players from 261 major teams made field goals at a record 47.9 percent in the 1979-80 season.

Putt-Putt Winners

The Squirrels gained wins over the Junior Aces and Seals in Junior League Action Wednesday at the Greenville Putt-Putt.

The Squirrels were paced by Dusty Carter with a 74, and Timmy Bland and Owen Cox, each with 79, for 36 holes of play. The Junior Aces, second in the match, were paced by Carl White with a 68 and Doug Martaccia with an 84. The Seals were paced by Paul Williams with a 71 and Jimmy Gillihan with a 79. Both the Aces and Seals were forced to play a man short in the action.

The Aces are now 8-4, while the Seals are 6-6 and the Squirrels are 4-8.

In City League action, the Untouchables downed the Hustlers, and the Hot Shots beat the Aces.

The Untouchables (4-0) were led by Johnny Carrow with a 64 and Mike Brown with a 62. The Hot Shots (3-1) were paced by Danny Harris and John Lowe, with 65 and 67, respectively. Lee Beacham shot a 70 for the Hustlers (0-4), and Mark Langston had a 67 for the Aces (1-3).

NBC Planning Some Coverage

NEW YORK (AP) — Even though Americans will not be participating in the Summer Olympics in Moscow, Americans will be able to see more of the competition than originally planned after the boycott.

According to Thursday's editions of the Daily News, NBC will send a crew of about 50 newsmen and technicians to cover the Games that are scheduled to run July 19-August 4.

The reports on the Olympics will be shown on NBC's news shows throughout the day as well as on its "Sportsworld" weekend series.

The 50-member crew is considerably smaller than the 650 people NBC had planned to send to beam back 152 1/2 hours of coverage. It has been estimated that the network lost more than $50 million in advertising revenue when they decided to observe the boycott.

The other major networks are planning to cover the Games in much the same way only with smaller crews on the scene, showing highlights on the network's news shows.

Tennis Tournaments Are Planned

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department and Greenville's People For Tennis Foundation will sponsor the City of Greenville Tennis Championships this summer. Play will be held in singles, doubles and mixed doubles. All play will be held at the city's new River Birch Tennis Center at Evans Park.

The singles tournament is scheduled for July 10-13, with a July 6th entry deadline.

The mixed doubles will be on July 24-27, and the deadline for entries will be July 18. The doubles will be August 1-3, with a July 27 deadline for entries.

Entry fees will be $4 for the singles and $6 per doubles team. Several adult age group categories, along with open and novice division will be held for each tournament.

Entry blanks may be obtained at the Elm Street Gym or the River Birch Tennis Center. For more information, call Don Ball at the Tennis Center at 756-9343.

Bolivia's Government Changes — Again

Five months ago, the Bolivian Congress scheduled this Sunday, June 29, as the day for voters to elect a new president. Bolivia is a landlocked country in South America. Important Indian civilizations developed there, beginning about the fourth century. In the 16th century, Spaniards conquered the region, and enslaved the Indians. Bolivia became independent from Spain in 1825. Since then, the country has had more than 60 revolutions and at least 70 presidents. Military rulers have often overthrown civilian governments there. Bolivia's president since last November has been Lidia Gueiler Tejada, pictured here. Mrs. Gueiler is the first woman ever to hold that office.

DO YOU KNOW — What is Bolivia's main export product?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Crazy Horse led the Indian army at Little Bighorn.

Reagan Urges Immediate Tax Cut Step

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Calling the nation's economic situation "desperate," Ronald Reagan today urged Congress to enact immediately a $20 billion income tax cut which would go into effect Jan. 1.

Throughout his presidential campaign, Reagan has said that if elected he would propose major cuts in federal taxes.

At a news conference, the Republican candidate said the nation was heading into "what could well become the worst recession in half a century" and added that the nation couldn't wait for a change in administrations.

"Now, the situation is desperate," he said. "Now, I am saying to Congress, don't wait, do it now."

Reagan said that as a result of President Carter's economic policies "production lines are being idled. Factory gates are closing across the land. Housing construction has gone into a tailspin. In just 100 days, the administration's policies have thrown 1.8 million American working men and women out of jobs."

The Reagan plan was the first segment of the three-year cut in income tax rates that has been a keystone of his economic program. That plan would cut rates 10 percent-a-year across the board for three years.

At an outdoor news conference at the Capitol, a group of liberal as well as conservative GOP members of Congress pledged a united front to pass their tax plan as soon as possible. The lawmakers said that starting perhaps as early as next week, they would try to attach their proposal to every appropriations bill to pass through Congress until the tax cut is adopted.

Sen. William Roth, R-Del., said Carter has been floating "trial balloons" about a possible tax cut of his own for next year. "This is the time for action," Roth said. "Either put up or shut up."

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., said "the Republicans are throwing down the gauntlet." House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., denounced the Republican move as "a political thing. I wish they'd start thinking about the country instead of the next election," he said. "There are a lot of small minds over there."

During recent campaign appearances, Reagan has referred to reports the Carter administration is considering a tax cut for 1981 and has criticized it as "a tinker tax cut," more likely to fuel inflation than to strengthen the economy.

Honoree Is Sentenced

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A former "Father of the Year" has been sent to prison for the rape of an 11-year-old foster child placed in his care. A Welfare Department official said, "This can happen in any home."

After sentencing Richard Douglas, 58, of Medford, to six to 10 years at Walpole Prison, Superior Court Judge Robert Barton said, "It would seem that the welfare system should be standing next to Mr. Douglas. The Department of Public Welfare must answer to society for what this girl has gone through."

The court was told that Douglas, a machinist, had previously been convicted of indecent assault on a child under 14 years of age.

In 1978, Douglas was named "Father of the Year" in a contest sponsored by the Medford Daily Mercury. The award was based on an essay written by one of his children.

Assistant District Attorney David Siegel, who prosecuted the case, said, "The Welfare Department was aware of (Douglas') record, but I could not get any reason why they continued to place the children."

Douglas, who is married and has three of his own children and an adopted child, has taken in 50 state wards during the past 10 years, according to the welfare department.

"We never had a complaint before this," said Petra Langer of the Department. "We had to assume it was a good place. Something like this can happen in any home."

Game Warden Ends Suit, Plans Retire

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — A sergeant has accepted the Army's offer to let him retire and agreed to drop a lawsuit that charged top military brass with illegal hunting and fishing at Fort Bragg.

Sgt. 1st Class Bobby Meares, the chief game warden at Fort Bragg, said Wednesday he made the decision after realizing that continuing with the $100,000 suit might not delay his scheduled transfer to West Germany.

The 44-year-old sergeant filed suit in U.S. District Court last Thursday charging that high-ranking Army officials planned to transfer him because he had refused to bend game laws to allow illegal hunting and fishing at the base.

Named as defendants in the suit were Lt. Gen. Thomas H. Tackaberry, commanding general of Fort Bragg and the 18th Airborne Corps; Col. Perry B. Elder, provost marshal of Fort Bragg and the 18th Airborne Corps, and Clifford Alexander, secretary of the Army.

"I feel that we've gone about as far as we can with it," Meares said. "I couldn't leave my family and go to Germany for 20 months."

Meares accepted an agreement offered by the Department of the Army in telephone negotiations Tuesday afternoon.

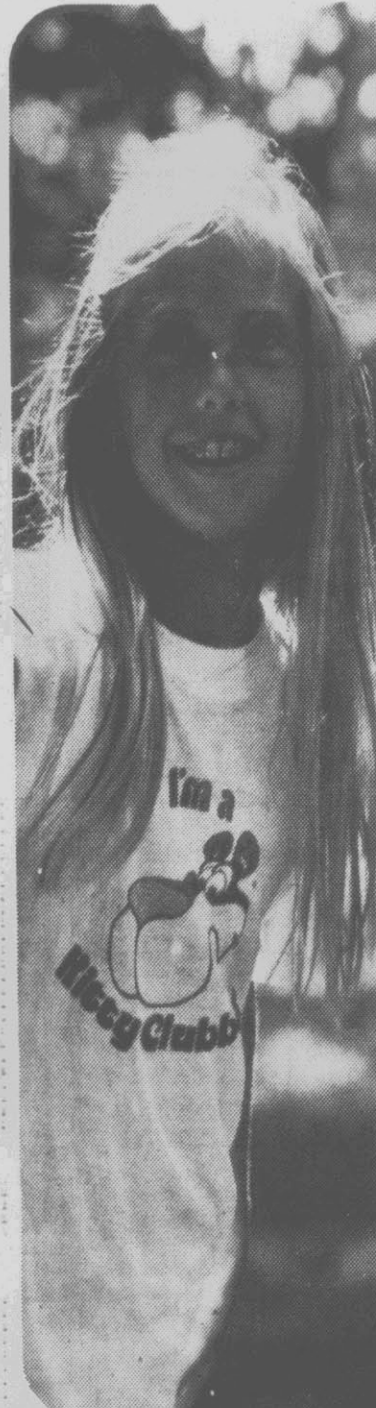

Meares and his attorney were in Raleigh to appear in a hearing on their request to keep Meares at Fort Bragg until the lawsuit was settled.

U.S. District Judge W. Earl Britt canceled the hearing and signed a consent order approving the settlement.

Assail Stand On Smelter Plans

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt and other state officials Wednesday lashed out at conservationists for challenging construction of an aluminum smelter in Columbus County, arguing that opponents had overlooked benefits expected from the plant.

Those praising the plant included Utilities Commission Chairman Robert Koger, who acknowledged that "generally speaking, every new customer will raise costs" for an electric utility.

But, he said, if you prohibited people from moving into the state and prohibited those already here from having children, "then you would not have to build any new (power) plants."

Charged In Child Abuse

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A 21-year-old father was charged Wednesday with child abuse under a new state law after officers accused him of seriously injuring his infant daughter.

Police said Johnny Churn was held in lieu of $20,000 bond. His 2-month-old daughter, Jonesha, was reported in serious condition at a New Bern hospital.

Authorities said the child was being treated for two broken ankles, double fractures of both legs, a fractured jaw and head injuries.

Police said Churn told them he had been unable to cope with the child's crying and had shaken it and pulled its legs in frustration.

Spokesmen for the state Justice Department and the Department of Human Resources said it was believed to be the first time anyone has been charged under the new law, which became effective in January.

Under the law, a person convicted of abusing a child under age 16 could be sentenced to five years in prison. A defendant also could be charged with assault or other offenses in connection with the same case.

The club was given special recognition from among more than 1000 clubs in seven countries for its service to its community, its knowledge of community issues and opportunities, its excellence in club management, fellowship within the club, and its achieving of the highest standards established by Civitan International.

All interested parties are encouraged to attend.

the plant would take huge amounts of electricity and would therefore cause Carolina Power & Light Co. to seek additional revenue to construct new facilities.

Such action would cause sharp increases in rates for customers already living in the area, the council said. Hunt, at his weekly news conference, said "the approach these groups (opponents) are taking totally ignores the matter of jobs ... I get a little bit tired of people who have good jobs, high-paying jobs, sitting in Raleigh saying everything's all right." Koger spoke later at a meeting of the state Energy Policy Council, where Commerce Secretary Lauch Faircloth said the aluminum plant would bring tremendous benefits to an area of the state that is in "dire need." At the urging of its environmentalist members, the council agreed, however, to ask the Utilities Commission's Public Staff to study the economic impact of the plant.

Green Pleased By Legislature's Accomplishments

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — After a three-week summer session, the General Assembly adjourned Wednesday with the enactment of a heavily amended bill raising legal interest rates on some types of loans — the last such bill remaining before legislators.

The Senate voted overwhelming concurrence with the House on the measure, which had gained House approval on Tuesday. The bill was granted final approval as both the House and Senate worked to act on legislation remaining before them. Both chambers earlier approved a resolution setting 1 p.m. Wednesday as the adjournment time, but they stopped their clocks at 1 p.m. when they were not able to clear all pending legislation by the appointed hour.

At 3:52 p.m., House Speaker Carl Stewart and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green jointly rapped their gavels and declared adjournment of the 1979-80 session of the General Assembly.

The adjournment came after a session in which the Legislature enacted a $358 million surplus budget and considered numerous other bills.

The next General Assembly is scheduled to convene Jan. 14, 1981.

Green said after adjournment that he had hoped for an earlier adjournment date but that he was pleased with legislators' accomplishments during the session.

The Senate last week adopted a resolution setting last Friday as the adjournment date, but that had to be changed when it became apparent that too many bills were still before both chambers.

"I think we've done a lot of work here in a very short period of time, and I think we've done a good job," Green said.

Stewart also said a lot was accomplished during the short session, adding, "We considered a lot of bills and gave each one all the consideration we could. I believe the legislators have done some good work during this session."

The interest-rate bill enacted Wednesday was the final interest bill before the lawmakers since the Housing Banking Committee voted last week to kill two other bills that would have raised or removed limits on a broader range of loans.

The measure will allow higher interest rates to be charged on installment loans, such as those by automobile dealers and for consumer goods such as furniture and appliances.

It would also allow banks to charge 18 percent annually, instead of the current 15 percent, on cash advances on credit cards. That is the same rate lenders can now charge on goods and services purchased with the cards.

Under the bill, the rates for auto and other installment loans would be limited to 16 percent for amounts from $2,000 to $25,000 and remain at the current 22 percent limit under $1,500 and the current 20 percent limit from $1,500 to $2,000.

After a lengthy debate, the Senate concurred with the House in approving a bill that would set up a tougher law to deal with motorists who pass stopped school buses.

Sen. James Speed, D-Louisburg, sponsor of the Senate bill, urged the chamber to approve the bill, saying it would help protect children crossing the road after getting off a school bus.

The bill will allow law-enforcement officers to hold the owner of a car that passes a stopped school bus responsible for the action.

Opponents of the bill argued that under the bill, the owner of the car would be guilty until he could prove in court that he was not driving the car.

The Senate concurred on a second school-bus measure, this one concerning driver trainees, without debate. The measure will allow trainees to drive buses under supervision by a trained driver.

Fuel-Alcohol License
The Senate concurred with the House by a vote to 38-0 in approving a bill that would require anyone producing alcohol for fuel to be licensed by the state. The bill also sets a $10 fee for the license.

Water Quality
The House Natural and Economic Resources Committee adjourned without taking final action on a controversial water-quality bill — allowing the bill to die.

The bill dealt with water-quality standards and the wording of the original bill, passed last year by the General Assembly.

The measure being considered by committee was a rewrite of an act passed last year, which sponsor Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Deep Run, said had been tampered with before it was enacted.

The bill passed last year set four water-quality standards, three of them conforming to federal Environmental Protection Agency standards. The fourth dealt with the economics of meeting the standards.

Under the law, an industry must meet one of the three EPA standards "and" the fourth, weaker standard.

Hardison said the word "or" should have been in place of the word "and." He said the word "or" had been stricken from the original bill and the word "and" written in pencil.

Environmentalists argued at the committee meeting the word "or" would have allowed industry to meet lower standards.

The committee took no action when members tied 7-7 on a vote to give the bill an unfavorable report and 7-7 on a motion to give it a favorable report.

Courts
The Senate concurred Tuesday with the House in approving two key court measures delaying the effect of previously enacted measures. One sets uniform sentences for most crimes and the other ensures speedy trials.

The bills were both backed by Gov. Jim Hunt and have the effect of delaying until next year implementation of the uniform-sentencing and speedy-trial measures.

The uniform-sentencing act, proposed and enacted last year, will become effective March 1, 1981, rather than next month.

The speedy-trials act requires that a person charged with a crime be brought to trial within 120 days, and that time limit was scheduled to drop to 90 days this fall. The bill postpones the change until October 1981.

Anti-Birth Control Policy For China Minorities

SIZIWANG, Inner Mongolia (AP) — Batu, a 37-year-old Communist Party comrade and pure Mongol, has four children. His wife's health is poor and they do not want another child. But because of strict Communist Party policy on minorities, they are not allowed to use contraceptives, obtain abortions or become sterilized without permission from county officials.

They asked and permission was denied. So Batu did what many people do in China to get what they want: He went through "the back door" and got contraceptives from a friend in a hospital.

Still, Batu maintains the anti-birth control policy for minorities is "a good one because it is necessary to build up our population."

The birth control question is one example of China's differential treatment of minorities and of the majority Han Chinese throughout the nation of about 1 billion people.

China is enforcing a Draconian birth control policy throughout the country, realizing its burgeoning population is dragging down its economic achievements.

The government demands that the Han Chinese produce only one or at most two children per couple, but minorities are exempt from all birth restrictions because they number only about 40 million.

The minorities live in strategic border areas, resource-rich and people-poor, and China regards development of these areas as vital to economic development and national security.

Furthermore, many minorities have a tradition of large families and concessions to custom are considered one way to win their political allegiance.

Mongolian women can bear all the children they want. Indeed, Batu's case shows they virtually are ordered to make babies.

A herdsman's wife, Saran Chiciga, 29, of the Bai In Hu Shao Brigade on the grasslands, echoed Batu's experience. She has three children and doesn't want any more.

"I am thinking of sterilization," she said, "but I have to get permission from the country first."

For that, she must go to Siziwang, the county seat, about 100 miles from her home. That journey would be as far as some herdsman travel in a lifetime.

Her family likely will increase in number.

For the majority Chinese, marriage is not permitted until couples are in their mid to late 20s. Marriage certificates carry birth control pledges. One child is hailed as best and families with only one child receive financial and material rewards. Women who undergo sterilization after their first child often receive money.

Those who have more than two children often are scorned, criticized and denied work promotions and larger living quarters.

Abortions and sterilization are regarded as routine in many places. Although officially denied, forced sterilizations and abortions reportedly are becoming more frequent.

No limits are imposed on Mongols regarding age for marriage, and inter-marriage between Hans and Mongols is encouraged. When such marriages occur, local wedding customs are observed. In Mongolian tradition, the couple moves to the home of the wife's family.

The Inner Mongolia Autonomous Region today has about 2 million Mongols and 200,000 people of other minority nationalities. It is dominated, however, by about 18.5 million Han Chinese who have been assigned to the region to develop the rugged land.

ANTI-BIRTH CONTROL POLICY — Mongol mothers carry their children recently at Siziwang, Inner Mongolia, where birth control policy is exactly the opposite of most of China. Since

Mongols and other minorities live in sparsely populated areas, the government encourages many children and makes birth control steps almost impossible to obtain. (AP Laserphoto)

Midwest Farmers Reel Under A 'Triple Whammy'

By PAMELA J. HUEY
United Press International
Times are tough down on the farm.

Some say the toughest in nearly a half century — but they may get tougher.

A triple whammy of depressed commodity prices, rapidly increasing production costs and very expensive credit this spring has put many farmers deep in red ink. A shaky rail transportation system in some parts of the Corn Belt has made matters worse.

Midwest agricultural leaders say they have not seen more than a trickle of forced farm sales yet. But they fear next autumn and winter may be the turning point.

"For the ones that have been in debt pretty bad up until now, I expect to see a lot more sales coming this year," said C.W. Ekness, a North Dakota wheat farmer. "The established ones might squeak through a year or two more."

To add to their woes, wheat farmers in the fertile Red River Valley of the North have not received adequate moisture for their new spring crop.

"We have to have a bumper crop this year to come out of this and it doesn't look good so far," said Ekness, who has planted 500 acres of wheat and barley on his farm near Grand Forks, N.D.

On the business side, farm implement dealers report a drastic reduction in sales.

City cousins and wage earners may find it difficult to understand the idea of working for a loss.

But records kept by the University of Illinois show it cost farmers in the Land of Lincoln an average of 2.35 to 2.50 to grow each bushel of corn last year. Sold either at last fall's prices or this spring with storage costs added on, the farmer suffered a loss.

The U of I figures project it will cost about 2.80 a bushel to grow corn this year and 7 to grow soybeans, meaning more losses if prices do not improve.

Net farm income was running at an average annual rate about 27 percent below last year, according to USDA figures. One of the main culprits, economists say, is vastly inflated prices for production items such as fuel, fertilizer and chemicals.

"The mood of the American farmer is very depressed," said Steve Drake, director of public affairs for the American Soybean Association based in St. Louis. "Many farmers are saying this is the worst it's been since the Depression."

Economists with the U.S. Department of Agriculture predict corn and other feed grain prices will move up this summer as more grain is removed from the market

Livestock farmers — especially hog producers — have not fared much better.

University of Illinois records show earnings for a hog farmer in Southern Illinois amounted to only 392 per farm last year. For central Illinois producers, that figure was 2,477 per farm — well below minimum wage or the poverty level.

Some Midwestern hog producers say they have themselves to blame for over-producing. But they also say their woes have been aggravated by high inflation, high interest rates and unpredictable government policies.

There remain some economists and federal officials who insist there are brighter days ahead.

"I think too many people are still crying the blues. We passed the low point in commodity prices in April," said Paul Hasbargen, farm economist at the University of Minnesota.

"I tend to be optimistic unless we have another year as depressed as this year, then I will have some concern about the strength of the farm economy."

Some farmers have started to lease equipment rather than buy it. "People never checked out leasing equipment before, but I think more people will be leasing in the future," said Gregg Wehmeier, a salesman for IH in Union, Mo.

Alan McVicar, branch manager of Farm Equipment Sales — a St. Louis-based wholesale distributorship — said smaller items are selling. But large ones, he said, aren't moving at all.

"We lost orders because a lot of farmers could not borrow the money, McVicar said. "And even those that could didn't want to pay the high interest rates."

"This is the first time I can remember in 23 years I've been in the business when we've had low cattle and hog prices, low grain prices and high interest rates all at the same time."

Recent administration action to buffer the full effect of the Soviet grain embargo and falling interest rates may help Carter's standing in the farm community.

But many farmers are angry about government interference in their market place.

"Everytime we've started to get decent prices," said Ekness, "we wind up getting an embargo."

Republicans — as could be expected — have accused Carter of pushing farmers to the brink of an economic disaster.

"At no time since the early 1930s has there been such frustration, such economic chaos and such disillusionment in agriculture as exists today," Iowa Republican George Strayer told a GOP national platform hearing in Davenport in April.

Support Change in Immigration

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is supporting repeal of a 1952 immigration law provision prohibiting homosexuals from entering the United States.

Assistant Attorney General Allan Parker told Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., in a letter released Tuesday that the department endorses his bill to delete a section of the law excluding aliens "afflicted with ... sexual deviation."

The government's position has been under review since last August, when the Public Health Service stopped conducting medical examinations of aliens to determine if they were homosexual. Homosexuals have been allowed into the country since then, although the Justice Department's Office of Legal Counsel said immigration officials were required to enforce the 1952 prohibition.

SCREAMS AND DREAMS AND A MOUNTAIN OF FUN.

Mike Farrell Can See Universality In MASH

By JOAN HANAUER
UPI Television Writer
NEW YORK (UPI) — In 1975 "M-A-S-H" faced what could have been a fatal blow — two of its stars dropped out and the series opened the fall television season with a new commanding officer and a new sidekick for Alan Alda's "Hawkeye."

Harry Morgan took command as Col. Potter, and Mike Farrell appeared as B.J. Hunnicutt, a clean cut, clean shaven doctor straight from stateside who quickly slid into the sloth-away-from-home surroundings of "the swamp."

Audiences found him a perfect fit and after five seasons of the new "M-A-S-H," the show ranked 10 in the Nielsen ratings for the 1979-80 season.

"M-A-S-H," incidentally, offers proof positive of the advantages of patience in television programming. In its first season, 1972-73, it ranked 45th on the Nielsen list. The following year it ranked fourth, and the only season it slipped below the top 10 was 1975-76 when CBS switched it into the then-new "family viewing time."

"I love it," Farrell said in an interview, stretching long legs out in front of him and looking more handsome — and a lot better barbered — than he usually does in his "M-A-S-H" fatigues and two-day stubble.

"There isn't any comparable meaningful work on series television. In fact, the terms are almost mutually exclusive."

His character, B.J., has changed during the time on television, superficially by growing a mustache but also inwardly.

"Clearly he hasn't aged six years — we're going into our sixth season with Hunnicutt," Farrell said. "It's a problem because the series already has gone on almost three times as long as the Korean war did. We compress the experience."

B.J. and other characters — most notably Margaret Houlihan, seldom if ever referred to any more as "Hotlips" — have developed new facets over the years.

"In the beginning B.J. was clean-cut, fresh from home, naive, but he was rapidly turned around. It's an evolving process. As I see it, the show deals with the dehumanizing process, the incredible spiritual callous that can build up and the efforts of the doctors and nurses to ward that off."

"M-A-S-H" has a universality. People don't see it connected with the Korean war but with war in general, the degeneration of humanitarian attitudes and the value of human life.

"Those are the things we deal with on the show and they relate to B.J. He's separated from his wife, his child. He's someone trying to maintain a commitment of fidelity and to retain some sense of his ideals."

"It's exciting to have people respond to that when most of series television comedy consists of drop your pants and see who laughs."

People all over the world are responding to "M-A-S-H" — Farrell said the show is seen in such faraway places as Hong Kong and Malaysia as well as in Western Europe.

"The Armed Forces Network plays it in Korea and the Korean authorities aren't thrilled at some of the things we have to say," Farrell added. "Particularly when we bring in the practices of the Korean CIA."

Asked whether he thought "M-A-S-H" was putting less emphasis on comedy than in the past, he replied with a wry smile, "I think the comedy is more subtle. I only think so because people keep asking me that question. But maybe it's true. We're part of the process. That's a little like growing up — you don't see yourself the way others do from the outside."

"As we delve more into the characters, the shows get more thoughtful, and the comedy comes more from the human level. Most of the obvious gags were done in the beginning. Now we have to try harder, look deeper, come up with that emotional pull on one side, a laugh on the other. For me that's what comedy's all about. We're not doing Laurel and Hardy or Abbott and Costello — but then, neither is anybody else these days."

Farrell writes and directs some "M-A-S-H" episodes, and also has been involved in a number of other projects.

Next spring, after the year's "M-A-S-H" episodes are in the can, he will travel to Africa to begin "Brutal Mandate," based on a book by his friend, the late Allard Lowenstein. It concerns conditions Lowenstein and two companions found during a 1959 trip to South West Africa, now also called Namibia. Farrell will produce and star in the film he intends as a tribute to Lowenstein.

"Three young Americans, Al and two other guys, decided something needed doing and they did it. It reminds you of what America is supposed to be about," Farrell said. An upbeat person who never developed the "spiritual callous" he mentioned earlier in the interview, Farrell remains optimistic despite having just returned from a trip in behalf of Concern to the refugee camps in Thailand and Cambodia.

"The young Americans — and the Irish and English and Germans and French — working there show terrific courage and commitment to helping people in need. We need to know that not all kids are radicals or jerks mugging people in the streets. There are positive forces in the world — it's not all retreat to your bunker and get your gun.

"This real thesis of this film will be that one single human being who cares can make a difference to a lot of people."

Farrell also is active in a number of causes, involved in a romantic comedy TV series his actress-wife, Judy, has written, and they both help host a PBS show on parenting called "Footsteps." Then there's "M-A-S-H."

"I'm only contracted through this year. Somebody will have to do some fast talking to convince me to continue," Farrell said, then did the job himself by adding, "But I love it and I'd be a fool to throw it away."

OH HEAVENLY DOG — Chevy Chase and his co-star Benji take a pause on the set of the 20th Century Fox summer release of "Oh Heavenly Dog". They both play the role of a private eye sent back to earth to solve his own murder. (AP Laserphoto)

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — When NBC was dealing with Johnny Carson, it was generally believed that the network would do anything to keep its late-night star — even if it meant sending the lucrative "Tonight Show" into the red. Indeed, when terms of Carson's new deal began to surface, it seemed the network had done just that.

Not only is Carson getting paid $12 million to $15 million for a three-year "Tonight" stint, but, in granting Carson's wish for a shorter show, NBC lost two full minutes of commercials, representing 25 percent of the show's revenue base.

Also, NBC gave Johnny Carson Productions Inc. a virtually unheard of guaranteed production deal, worth about $50 million. The whole transaction was irreverently referred to as NBC's "Johnny Larceny" deal.

As it turns out, though, Carson isn't quite the bandit some suggested him to be. In fact, the new "Tonight Show" may become more lucrative than ever before (which is saying something — in 1978, "Tonight" reportedly accounted for nearly one-fifth of NBC's pretax profits).

Although the new shortened "Tonight" will have one-fourth less commercials, NBC plans to balance that by increasing the cost of a 30-second spot by one-fourth (the spots now sell for about $25,000). The network's pitch will be that commercial time in the new "Tonight" will be more valuable — that Carson, on tape or in person, will be on the show more often, and that the first hour of "Tonight" has always brought the highest ratings numbers.

And then, there is the "Tomorrow" show. Tom Snyder's program will be expanded to 90 minutes, taking over what used to be the last half-hour of "Tonight." The show will be totally revamped and intensely hyped, allowing NBC to ask more money for "Tomorrow" commercials, sources say.

Thus, the combined "Tonight"-"Tomorrow" package will earn more money for NBC than ever before.

As to the $50 million production deal with Johnny Carson Productions, it is, in its generous spirit, rare in the industry. NBC has made a firm commitment for at least three series and at least two TV movies from Carson

Film Showing To Be Friday

A film on the works and teachings of Vernon Howard will be shown Friday at 7:30 p. m. at the East Federal Savings and Loan Building at 100 Arlington Boulevard.

The film showing is sponsored by the New Life Foundation of Boulder City, Nev., where Howard, author of inner life and self-knowledge books that have sold more than six million copies, teaches four classes a week for students who come from all over the world. He teaches that the individual can change and uplift the world by changing and uplifting his own inner world.

A $3 donation is requested. Further information may be obtained by calling 756-6598.

Sophia Playing A Double Role

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Sophia Loren stars as both her mother and herself in "Sophia," a three-hour NBC movie based on her rise from poverty to world-renowned movie star.

It is being filmed on location in Italy, based on the book "Sophia: Loving and Living. Her Own Story," by A.E. Hotchner.

Productions. It is the commitment that makes the deal unique. Usually, a network has "buy out" options that allow it to back out of deals. "But NBC is going to have to put something of ours on the air," says John J. McMahon, president of Johnny Carson Productions.

Also, Carson Productions gets the right to sell reruns of the new "Tonight Show" outside of the United States.

"It is a wonderful deal," McMahon says.

On the other hand, the production deal with Carson makes sense for NBC, too. The network has to spend that $50 million production money somewhere; and, as McMahon (a former NBC programming executive) points out, "with this firm a commitment, we should be able to attract top writers and other talent because they know we're going to be on the air."

NBC dealt out a lot of cash and promises to Johnny Carson, but not with eyes closed. Carson will make money for the network, even after he's taken out his rather sizable hunk of the green.

Bette Davis In NBC Movie

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Bette Davis and Howard Hesseman are filming the NBC movie "Skyward" on location near Dallas.

Suzie Gilstrap, a 15-year-old Californian, makes her acting debut as a paraplegic youngster who yearns to become a pilot to escape her troublesome life in a wheelchair. Miss Davis plays an aging movie stunt pilot who now runs the airport cafe, and Hesseman is the airport night watchman and owner of a bi-plane.

Nancy Brackett wrote the screenplay from an original story by Anson Williams, who is co-producer with Ron Howard. Both star on "Happy Days."

New Operation for Myopia

I am severely nearsighted. I have been told that there is a new operation that is being done in Russia that corrects nearsightedness. Is this operation recognized yet in America? Are there any doctors who are doing this kind of surgery here? — Mr. D.M., Calif.

Dear Mr. M.: "Myopia" is the technical term for nearsightedness. People with myopia have difficulty seeing objects at a distance. Without getting involved in the technical aspects of myopia, it is sufficient to say that the curvature of the cornea of the eye determines the degree of myopia. It is a false belief that the progression of myopia is affected by how much one uses the eyes or whether or not one wears glasses all the time. In most instances, myopia can be corrected by glasses or by contact lenses. For those with severe myopia, an operation known as "radial keratotomy" was first performed in Russia about 10 years ago. This surgery is performed under a microscope. The object of the surgery is to flatten the curvature of the cornea and thus modify the severe myopia, or nearsightedness. The surgery is now being performed in selected cases in most eye departments of major hospitals all over the United States. The advantages and disadvantages are evaluated for each person before embarking on the operation. The initial results of keratotomy have stimulated a great deal of enthusiasm. Since its origin, some modifications have been made. The horizons in ophthalmic surgery for myopia — as well as other eye conditions — are being expanded daily, bringing vast hope to those who are afflicted with this and other visual impairments.

My baby was born two weeks after it was due. She is in perfect health. Every once in a while I worry that a "late" child can sometimes have problems later on. — Mrs. E.W., Tenn.

Dear Mrs. W.: The fact that your baby is in good health now should give you the assurance that once and for all eradicates your fear and anxiety. I am certain that your doctor has given you this reassurance. A very elaborate study was performed in more than 12,000 infants who were born after they were due. It was found that there were no more abnormalities in this large group than among those children who were born on schedule. The obvious finding was that the average birth weight of the child is slightly greater than others. Do not allow your fears to deprive you of the joys of motherhood.

We are at present researching the possibility that bridge was played in medieval Spain. Our aim is to prove that Torquemada had to be a bridge player, and that he devised those fiendish tortures as fitting punishment for partners who reached for a trick prematurely when declarer was apparently taking a losing finesse! Observe how an improvident gesture by West snatched defeat from the jaws of victory.

North-South reached a slightly aggressive, though not unreasonable, contract of three no trump. West led the top of his heart sequence, East won the ace and paused to take stock. It was obvious that West could not have a running heart suit, or even an entry should the hearts become established. Therefore, there was no future in continuing hearts.

If the contract was to be defeated, dummy's club suit had to be shut out. To do this, it was essential to remove dummy's entry to the suit and hope that declarer held only two clubs. So at trick two East made the brilliant shift to the king of spades! If declarer held up the ace, East would simply continue with a spade, so South took dummy's ace, came to his hand with the king of diamonds and ran the ten of clubs. East, who had been preparing for this moment, ducked smoothly. Unfortunately, before East's five of clubs hit the table, West stretched out his hand to collect the trick!

Declarer had no reason to doubt West's sincerity. He continued with a club and went up smartly with the ace, felling East's king, and eleven tricks were there for the taking.

It is not the province of this column to take up department at the bridge table. But it does seem to us

nett to be its new chief executive officer, the first of the Quaker service organization to hold the post.

Ms. Bennett, 47, long

under her leadership the AFSC would "continue to struggle to find ways to work with the poor and excluded in communities at home and those living under oppression abroad. Our task is to continue to find real engagement with these difficult issues as
