Carter Won't Rule Out 1981 Tax Cut

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter refused today to rule out a 1981 tax cut that could be enacted this year, the chairman of Congress' Joint Economic Committee said after meeting with the president.

But, said the chairman, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, Carter will wait until the administration finishes its mid-year budget and economic review later this month before deciding whether to support tax cut legislation before the November election.

Bentsen and other congressional leaders conferred with the president at the White House this morning after Senate Democratic leaders held off Republican demands Monday for a $36 billion tax cut by offering renewed promises of their own plan.

Carter "certainly did not rule it out," Bentsen said of a 1981 tax cut. "It's obvious he wants to look at the July figures."

Bentsen told reporters that no figures for an administration-supported tax cut were discussed, although it has been reported that it wouldlbe worth between $20 billion and $30 billion.

The Washington Star reported today that the economic review that the administration is preparing assumes a tax cut of $25 billion.

Bentsen said the major achievement of the meeting was an agreement to coordinate efforts by the administration and the Democratic majorities in the Senate and House to "explore the possibilities of a tax cut."

He said that Carter told the group that if there is to be a tax cut, it should be "carefully targeted."

"It was a good exchange, quite helpful," Bentsen said.

"I certainly think you're going to have a tax cut this year," he said.

For the second time in five days, the Senate on Monday rejected the GOP tax cut plan that the likely Republican presidential nominee, Ronald Reagan, has proposed as a challenge to Carter's economic policies.

Along almost strict party lines, the Senate voted 52-33 to kill the GOP plan as Democratic leaders vowed again to come forward with their own proposal by Sept. 3. The Senate first defeated the GOP tax cut, 58-38, last Thursday.

Despite the defeats, Senate Republicans say they will to try to attach their proposal — which includes a 10 percent across-the-board income tax cut — to every tax billlthat comes to the Senate floor.

The second Senate vote on the GOP proposal came as the president planned to meet with Democratic congressional leaders today to discuss his response to the growing demand on Capitol Hill for a tax cut.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Monday that Carter is "rather skeptical of the chances for responsible action" on tax cut legislation before the November elections.

"We have no plans to submit a tax cut bill," Powell said. "Simply because this is an election year, to race out with a proposal that may or may not be consistent with long-range goals ... just doesn't make sense."

Powell noted, however, that Carter was on record as favoring a tax cut once inflation and the growth in federal spending are curbed.

Carter, asked Monday whether he had changed his mind on a tax cut this year, replied: "No, I yon't think so."

Meanwhile, in the Senate, Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., said immediate approval of the GOP tax cut was needed to prevent the economic downturn from worsening.

"Everyone seems to be in step (on the need for a tax cut) except the president of the United States," Danforth said. "If there is a vacuum of leadership, let the Senate step in and fill that vacuum."

However, Democratic leaders attacked the Reagan plan as ill-conceived and unfair.

"The Reagan trickle-down, make-the-rich-richer tax cut simply dumps bushels of money into the economy," said Senate Majority Leayer Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va. "It will just explode the fires of inflation."

Martin Countian Shared In 'Takeover' Experience

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State officials are considering additional security arrangements for North Carolina's trade mission in Dusseldorf, West Germany, following its seizure Monday by about a dozen demonstrators.

Victor W. Barfield, deputy commerce secretary, said the security arrangements are being discussed. He indicated, however, that the state does not expect another incident like the one Monday.

"We're seeing this as sort of a once-in-a-lifetime thing, and we're not going to rush in and put up an iron door," Barfield said.

W. Thomas Slade, 28, of Williamston, a commodity marketing manager for the state Agriculture Department, said in a telephone interview from Dusseldorf that he and a German secretary were in the trade mission when the demonstrators took it over.

Slade, who has been in Germany for about one year, said he had difficulty in understanding the young demonstrators when they first appeared at the mission's door.

"I knew something was happening and it wasn't good ... and while I was talking to the (first) three, others came in, right past me.

"They came in so fast I couldn't count them. There were about 12 of them, but it seemed like 20," Slade said.

At that point, Slade said the secretary, Gundrun Nanwani, took over the consversation.

"I managed to get into the outer hall, but they blocked my way," Slade said. "It was then that Frau Nanwani told them she had to go upstairs and check with the director, Mr. Bunn. She just left, and I tried to give her story as much credibility as possible.

"No sooner had she left though, they started saying, 'This is a lie, we know Mr. Davis Bunn is not here.'"

Bunn, a Commerce Department employee, was on vacation in North Carolina.

Slade said the demonstrators became concerned that the secretary would call police.

"I told them I would catch her and tell her not to call authorities," Slade said. "I didn't wait for a response. On that note I exited, and they really didn't try to detain me."

West German police said the demonstrators demanded the release of comrades imprisoned in West Berlin last month during a demonstration at the Amerika Haus, which houses the U.S. Information Service.

Police allowed the demonstrators to leave the trade mission without making any arrests.

Parents May Ask Iranian Clemency

By The Associated Press

Marine Sgt. Michael Moeller's parents say they are considering a trip to Tehran to plead for clemency for their hostage son, threatened with a trial and a possible 10-year sentence on charges of having sexual relations with an Iranian woman who became pregnant and was hanged by her brother for disgracing the family.

Meanwhile, Iranian President Abolhasssan Bani-Sadr warned today that Iran's Islamic revolution was "threatened from inside." In a speech delivered at a religious school in Tehran, he said "In the previous regime life, property and business of people were violated in the name of monarchy and today, they do the same in the nwme of fighting with anti-revolutionaries."

He accused U.S. officials of trying to undermine his government, "sink me in trivial issues so that I fail to manage our vital economic battle against the U.S. pressure." Bani-Sadr said some Iranians he did not identify by name were working with America, trying to "create obstacles to stop me from expanding our vital economic crusade against the United States."

An Iranian Justice Ministry investigator, Ali Akbar Parvaneh, told a reporter Monday that the 28-year-old Moeller, of Loup City, Neb., might escape a trial if the dead woman's parents agree to "forgive" him. Parvaneh suggested Moeller's parents fly to Iran to try to persuade her parents to drop the charges.

Parvaneh said earlier that Moeller definitely would be put on trial even if Iran's Parliament decides to free the other 52 hostages, now in their 241st day of captivity.

In Nebraska, Doris Moeller, the Marine's mother, said she and her husband were considering the trip to Tehran.

New Principal For Elmhurst Is Appointed

By JILL ALLEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Mrs. Leslie E. Washburn has been chosen as prinicipal of Elmhurst Elementary School for the 1980-81 school year. The appointment took place Monday night at a special call meeting of the Greenville Board of Education.

Glenn Cox, Superintendant of Greenville City Schools, noted that there were 43 applicants for the position and among them there were some "good, stong ones for the position."

Mrs. Washburn's qualifications include: five years of experience in education; teaching experience in kindergarten, fourth, fifth, and sixth grades and experience as the assistant principal in an elementary school, junior high school, and high school. In addition, she is certified as a principal and holds Early Childhood and Intermediate Certificates.

Originially from Green Bay, Wisconsin, she is presently serving as assistant principal in Jacksonville.

Stating her philosophy, she says,"I believe the educational environment is especially important to the educational process. The environment should be safe, attractive and most of all humanistic. The student should feel free to develop in an atmosphere that expects his best effort but allows for honest mistakes, provides for the development of a positive self-concept and most of all, enables the student to feel loved."

In discussions held on the capital outlay portion of the budget for the Greenville City Schools, the school board expressed concerns over budget cuts.

Japan Trip By Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will interrupt his summer vacation and travel to Japan next week for a memorial service for the late Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira, officials here and in Tokyo say.

A White House official, who asked not to be identified, said Carter decided Monday to attend the July 9 service for Ohira, a close ally of the United States who died of a heart attack June 12.

The president plans no other stops on the trip and will return after an overnight stay in Tokyo, the official said.

Japanese Foreign Minister Saburo Okita said U.S. Ambassador Mike Mansfield informed acting Prime Minister Masayoshi Ito of Carter's plans.

Carter is scheduled to go to his hometown of Plains, Ga., July 4 and leave directly from there for Japan on July 8. He will return to Sapelo Island off the coast of Georgia, the administration official said. The official said Carter decided to make the trip out of "great respect and affection for Ohira" and to "underscore the great importance which this president and this administration attaches to our relationship with Japan and to Asia in general."

He said it is undecided what discussions and meetings Carter might have with other world leaders invited to the service in Tokyo.

House Committee To Decide Soon On Funds For Vocational Center

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A House-Senate Conefrence Committee this week will decide whether or not the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center here will receive an additional $1.5 million to help fund a $4.1 million dormitory and recreation center addition.

The Senate yesterday approved an amendment to the Supplemental Senate Appropriations Bill offered Saturday by Sen. Robert Morgan to add $1.5 million to $2.19 million Congress appropriated for the project in 1977.

A spokesman for Sen. Morgan said this morning that the money would give 90 percent funding to the project.

The spokesman noted that Congressman Walter Jones has been working on the project in the House for sometime.

Rep. Jones explained that the $2.19 million was appropriated after, "we were led to believe by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare," that the project would fall under the Hill-Burton Act, which would allow only 60 percent federal participation.

"Later we found that we had been misled," and that the project was, "elligible for a 90-10 grant," with the additional $1.5 million needed to provide the 90 percent federal grant.

The congressman said that efforts to include the additional funds in a House bill in November were unsuccessful, so Sen. Morgan was asked to do what he could in the Senate.

Morgan's bill, co-sponsored by Sen. Jesse Helms, passed the appropriations committee and was approved yesterday by the Senate.

"My challenge is to try to get the conferees to vote to leave the Senate language in there," Jones emphasized.

"I've polled 10," of the 13 House Democrats on the committee, "all of which agree. Now I'll start with the (13) Republicans."

The congressman noted, "I'm reasonably confident the money is locked in. It's in sight but not guaranteed."

The $3.69 million federal grant, along with $410,000 in local funds, will provide dormitory space, a gymnasium, an indoor swimming pool and other facilities at the vocational center, formerly the Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop.

Shah Is Out Of Intensive Care

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The deposed Shah of Iran was reported in "very satisfactory" condition today and was removed from intensive care following surgery to drain fluid from his lungs.

An Egypoian doctor treating the cancer-stricken shah said the ex-monarch has a "more than 75 percent" chance of surviving, but a second Egyptian physician familiar with the case said the long-term prognosis may not be so promising.

"His condition is very satisfactory," said Dr. Abdel Kader Osman 24 hours after Monday's operation.

Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, 60, was running a high fever when he was admitted to the Maadi military hospital Friday night. Doctors said the fever was caused by a build-up of fluids in his lungs. The fluids, they said, collected after Pahlavi had developed pneumonia.

"He is a tough guy and will pull through," said Osman, chief of the hospitals's heart and chest department and one of the three physicians who operated on Pahlavi.

Osman told The Associated Press Monday the shah still had a fever and a temperature of 99.5 degrees, but said the ex-monarch's blood pressure and pulse were "functioning very well."

Senate Debates Lower Army Manpower Figure

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — the Senate is debating whether a 25,000-man cut will force the all-volunteer Army to improve its quality, or only add manpower shortages to its woes.

A vote was expected today on the cut, which is contained in a 131.7 billion weapons authorization bill.

The provision would cut the Army's strength as of Sept. 30, 1981, to 750,300 people — from the current 775,300 — unless 72 percent of Army recruits this year are high school graduates. Only about 37 percent of the male recruits who have entered the Army in recent months have been high school graduates.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., asserted in opening debate Monday that the Army has become "a revolving door" for young men who have dropped out of high school and will drop out of the Army without completing their tours because they can't or won't do their jobs.

"Fifty percent of them won't be able to get into combat units," Nunn said. He added later: "Someone is going to have to say enough is enough and we're going for quality rather than quantity."

But Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., leading the opposition against the cut, said it could only hurt the Army and send a dangerous signal to the rest of the world.

"It will, I fear, be seen as evidence that we are not serious about responding to Afghanistan or Iran," Levin told the Senate. "I don't buy the logic suggesting that quality can only be improved by socking the Army in the jaw."

Uniform Changes Due Women Workers

NEW YORK (AP) — For many years the uniform industry provided uniforms almost exclusively for men. But it had to do a major about-face a few years ago when it became clear that more and more women were beginning to wear work clothing, says an industry official.

"It was a difficult adjustment at first," says Howard A. Wolfe, executive director of the National Association of Uniform Manufacturers. "But now most uniform manufacturers offer a wide variety of outfits made specifically for women."

The major challenge, he points out, was to design uniforms that fit the female shape but did not alter the traditional designs that make uniforms distinctive. Women's garments had to blend in and coordinate with the existing men's garments.

The transition is now so complete that there should no longer be any need for women to wear cut-down men's garments.

Many uniform accessories specifically designed for women are also available, such as cross-over ties, uniform caps and special handbags that allow freedom of hand and body movement. There are even bullet-proof vests with built-in bustlines.

Wolfe predicts that in the future women in uniform will have an even more feminine look.

"Whereas it was generally felt at first that women in uniform should look exactly like men in uniform," he says, "now there is a trend in many occupations toward letting women look like women while still wearing outfits that are coordinated with the male design and image."

There is another factor that adds a new aspect to the uniform picture.

There is evidence of an increase in the number of men entering professions that were largely dominated by women in the past. Wolfe says that airline flight attendant is one uniformed occupation where this trend has already emerged. In 1971 there were very few male flight attendants; today there are approximately 8,000.

On the other hand, in 1971 there were only 8,000 female law-enforcement officers, including police officers, detectives, sheriff's deputies and bailiffs. In 1979, that number had increased 31 percent to 34,000.

The number of women fire fighters increased even more dramatically — from zero in 1971 to 1,000 in 1979. The number of female bus drivers doubled, from 81,000 in 1971 to 163,000 in 1979.

A clear indication of the growing number of women in uniform is evidenced by the issuance of maternity uniforms to women in the Armed Forces, says Wolfe, adding that this trend is starting to extend to other uniformed occupations. He notes that a uniform retailer in Rochester, N.Y., was recently called upon to furnish a "maternity uniform" for a police parking monitor.

"This is the first instance I have heard of where a police department has requested such a uniform," he says. "Since no police maternity uniforms are being made at this time, the dealer redesigned a large male police shirt to be worn over dark blue maternity slacks."

Will the further influx of women into jobs previously done by men have a reverse effect on the uniforms being worn?

Wolfe says it is possible.

"I wouldn't go as far as to say that men will someday wear skirts but, as jobs become less stringently categorized as either man's work or woman's work, some design changes will probably evolve," he says. "It is even possible that the day will come when we have unisex uniforms."

Tells Greek Orthodox Youth Need 'Moorings'

By STEELE HOLMAN
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Pollster George Gallup Jr. warned Greek Orthodox leaders Monday not to assume their children would remain within the Church and advised them to provide them "spiritual moorings."

Gallup addressed the Greek Orthodox Clergy-Laity Congress, a biennial, five-day assembly in which Church leaders will devise strategy for the 1980s.

Earlier Monday, Archbishop Iakovos told the assembled priests and laymen that "an intense Orthodox lifestyle" would be required of members if the church is to survive the problems of the new decade.

Scheduled today was a luncheon honoring founders of the Greek Orthodox community and the American Helenic Educational and Progressive Association. A musical presentation on Greek culture in America was planned tonight.

Gallup related the results of a 1979 poll of 437 Greek-Americans commissioned by the Archdiocese of North and South America. He recommended various steps the Greek Orthodox Church can take to keep its youth involved.

Greek-American youths often rebel against the Church, "but it is assumed they will move back into the ranks of the Church," Gallup said. "There is no reason to assume that."

"It is abundantly clear that young Greek Orthodox adherents are searching for spiritual moorings. The Greek Orthodox Church must answer these spiritual needs."

Many of the young people are approached and influenced "by groups other than the Eastern Orthodox Church," and their response "in many cases is positive to these approaches," he said.

Gallup advised that each parish develop ministries expressly for its young and provide them activities affording an outlet for religious zeal and interest in helping other people.

Archbishop Iakovos exhorted the delegates to "save the soul of Orthodoxy" in a decade facing an energy shortage, inflation, war and a "withdrawal from church and God."

"In the decisive confrontation of the decade, with all its unpredictable hopes and fears, we will be able to respond only if we are armed with impenetrable Christian concepts and beliefs, galvanizing at the same time all the power of our being," he said.

"The only way to confront the problems is by living an intense Orthodox life-style," Iakovos said.

"Our ecclesiastical perpetuity in this land will be ensured the moment we cease vain and purposeless discussions and begin living our faith through conscientious and fruitful actions," he said.

The delegates will spend the week formulating resolutions on social issues, reviewing the archdiocese's educational, administrative and and program needs and attending social functions. Their decisions are subject to ratification by the Ecumenical Patriarchate of Constantinople in Istanbul, Turkey.

City Plans Holiday Schedule

Friday will be observed by the Sanitation Division of the city's Public Works department as a regular holiday.

GREAT — Greenville Area Transit — and the Public Works Department's Cemetery Division will also observe the July 4 holiday.

All garbage and trash service will run one day early beginning Wednesday, with regularly scheduled service resuming Monday.

GREAT buses will resume their regular service Saturday.

Although the Cemetery Division will be closed Friday, cemetery gates will be opened early in the morning and locked at sundown. Persons needng information about the cemeteries should contact a local mortician.

The Police Department should be contacted Friday for any emergency street or storm sewer damage or other problem connected with the streets.

Court Clears Way For N.C. Executing Woman

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has cleared the way for what could be the first execution in the Tar Heel state since 1961 by refusing to review the case of the only North Carolina woman facing the death penalty.

The high court on Monday refused to overturn the death sentence of 48-year-old Velma Barfield. She has been on Death Row since 1978 for the fatal poisoning of friend.

The Supreme Court, with justices William J. Brennan and Thurgood Marshall objecting, rejected a charge that Mrs. Barfield was unfairly sentenced.

Although the high court did not rule on the constitutionality of the state capital punishment law, a North Carolina court official said the ruling had the effect of upholding it:

"If they had found fault with the law, I'm sure they would have decided to consider the case."

In rejecting the unfair sentencing argument, the court did not find that the state courts held "impermissibly broad interpretations" of the death-penalty law.

The action returns the case to North Carolina where a Superior Court judge will set a date for Mrs. Barfield's execution. The Robseon County woman is under no immediate threat of death in the gas chamber, however.

Mrs. Barfield said in December 1978 that she was ready to die.

"I am guilty ... Personally, I don't want an appeal. Personally, I'd rather go ahead," she said at that time.

"I know people are saying 'poor old Velma, sitting up on Death Row,' but I wish they wouldn't, because I know when the final breath comes, it will just be goodbye here and hello on the other side. I have joy unspeakable," she said.

But Lumberton attorney Robert D. Jacobson says she has changed her mind and has been "very supportive" of efforts to overturn the death sentence.

Jacobson said he would take the case through a series of state and federal appeals in an attempt to halt imposition of the sentence. State and federal officials say Mrs. Barfield would be in no danger of immediate death because such appeals could take years to complete.

Mrs. Barfield was sentenced to die when a judge ruled that the poisoning of 56-year-old Stewart Taylor fit the death-sentence description of being "especially heionous, atrocious and cruel." She was convicted of poisoning Taylor by putting arsenic in his drinks.

Later in 1978 she said she had slain four persons by slipping arsenic-laden ant and rat poison into their food or drink. Testimony during her trial also showed that her second husband, Jennings L. Barfield, died of arsenic poisoning in 1971. But she denied killing him.

Trade Shots On Border

SAN YSIDRO, Calif. (AP) — A 27-year-old man was arrested after five U.S. Border Patrol agents exchanged shots with a group of masked men near the Mexican border, authorities said.

No injuries were reported Monday from the shootout, which took place Sunday night a half mile east of the San Ysidro port of entry. It was the first such incident in two months, authorities said.

The masked men were either alien smugglers or bandits preying on illegal aliens, said Donald Cameron, chief of the Border Patrol's Chula Vista sector.

A spokeswoman at the Metropolitan Correctional Institute in San Diego said Joe Sanchez Aquirre was arrested after the shooting incident. Aquirre identified himself as a Hollywood resident, agents said.

A .22-caliber pistol was recovered at the scene of Aquirre's arrest 75 yards north of the Mexican border. The three other gunmen escaped into the night, Cameron said.

Aquirre, who was booked for investigation of assaulting a federal officer with a deadly weapon was being held in lieu of $25,000 bail pending a July 10 hearing.

Ministers' Wife At Conference

SECAUCUS, N.J. — Mrs. Nell Williams, wife of the Rev. Elbert B. Williams, attended the 40th Annual Conference of the National Association of Ministers' Wives held here last week.

New Jersey politicians and clergy were on hand to welcome the ministers' wives, who represented more than 40 denominations. Mrs. Williams was appointed by the national president to serve on the educational staff of the organization.

At the state level, Mrs. Williams serves the North Carolina Interdenominational Ministers' Wives Association as executive secretary and chairperson of the awards committee.

FOCUS

Stepping Down

Hodding Carter III was scheduled to resign today from a job that has made him familiar to millions of Americans. As State Department spokesman, Carter's job has been to explain to reporters what our government is doing in its relations with other countries. He has been quoted regularly in newspaper articles and has often appeared on television news programs, talking about the problems in Iran and Afghanistan. Carter, who is not related to the president, was a newspaper editor in Mississippi before he took his State Department job. He has tried to keep a sense of humor about his work, and once threw a rubber chicken at a reporter who got on his nerves.

Heck-Guthrie Vows Solemnized Saturday

ROCKY MOUNT — Debra Sugg Guthrie and Charles Williams Heck Jr. were united in marriage at four o'clock Satarday afternoon in the First United Methodist Church here. The double ring ceremony was officiated by the Rev. Travis Owen of Ayden.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Stuart W. Sugg of Ayden, and the late Mr. Sugg. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Heck Sr. of Rocky Mount.

A program of wedding music was rendered by Ron Taylor, organist, and Mrs. Pat Taylor, soloist.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Michael S. Sugg of Kinston. The bride wore a gown of candlelight qiana nylon and carried a bouquet of apricot roses, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Mrs. Dottie Sugg, sister-in-law of the bride, was honor attendant and Mrs. Carol Lucas, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid. They wore matching gowns of apricot qiana nylon and carried bouquets similar to the bride's.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Steve Bennett of Rocky Mount, Speight Sugg of Tarboro, and Charles Lucas, brother-in-law of the bride of Houston, Tex. Ricky and Stuart Sugg, nephews of the bride, and Weldon Lucas, nephew of the bridegroom, were honorary ushers.

The mother of the bride wore a rose dress and the mother of the bridegroom selected a teal blue dress. Both wore a georgiana orchid corsage.

Mrs. Kathy Viverette of Durham presided at the guest register. Mrs. Brenda Moss of Rocky Mount directed the wedding.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was given by the couple's parents at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Heck Sr. Aunts of the bridal couple assisted in greeting and serving guests.

The bridal couple entertained their wedding party at an after-rehearsal dinner at J. R.'s Steak House Friday evening. Guests were then entertained at the home of Mrs. Gladys Strickland with Mrs. Kathy Viverette and Mrs. Brenda Moss as hostesses.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained the wedding party and out-of-town friends and relatives at a wedding brunch at the Carlton House Saturday morning. Guests were greeted by Mrs. Nathan Thomas and Mrs. Bert Jenkins, aunts of the bride.

The bride teaches home economics at Southern Nash Senior High School, Nash County. The bridegroom is the manager of the Toy Mart, Peddler's Village.

The couple will live in Rocky Mount.

It's summertime and the stitchin' is easy — when you use plastic canvas and big, bold Bargello stitches to create a stunning pocketbook. This simplest form of needlepoint consists of long, straight stitches worked over several holes of the canvas with each stitch.

The construction is easy, too, with two rectangular pieces whipped together at sides and bottom and finished off with ring handles. You have a choice of two different Bargello stitches. The bag shown was made with the intermediate level stitch, but diagrams and directions are given for a beginner-level stitch as well.

To obtain directions for making the Bargello Pocketbook, send your request for Leaflet No. NP-6291 with $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-6921 by sending check or money order for $14.00 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Each kit contains full instructions plus ring handles, plastic canvas, needle and pure wool Persian yarns in luscious colors. Lining fabric is not included. Please specify your choice of salmon and brown tones, blue tones, lavender and pink tones, or soft yellow and turquoise with emerald green accent. Shipping charges are included in kit price.

Sixteen years ago, when I first started writing a needlecraft column, a reader stumped me with the question, "Just what is Persian yarn?"

At that time, I dealt primarily with knit and crochet and my needlepoint experience was limited. Most needlepoint in those days consisted of background stitches around a preworked design using basic tapestry yarns. Futhermore not a single shop in the city where I lived carried Persian yarn or could give me any information about it.

Fortunately, times have changed and these beautiful yarns are readily available at most better needlecraft shops, in a wide range of colors.

In spite of the name, most Persian-type yarns are spun and dyed in this country. While other yarns usually have a fair ly tight twist, Persian yarns consist of three loosely twisted strands. This — along with the wide color range — is the primary reason for their popularity today.

Because you can so easily separate the strands, you can use any thickness you need to achieve the desired effect. On very fine mesh canvas, you can use a single strand or on a very large mesh canvas, you can have six or more strands in the needle.

As a self-taught needlepointer, when I first obtained some Persian yarn, I used it just as it came from the hank and did not really like the appearance of the stitches. Later, when I learned that the strands should be separated even when using the full three strands, I became an ardent booster of this type of yarn.

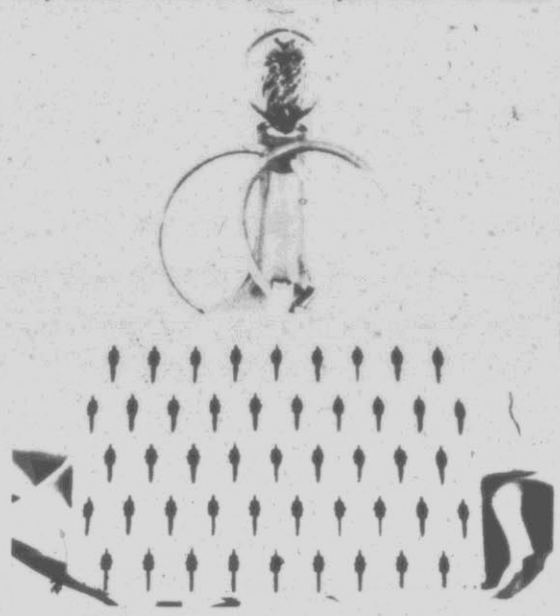

Persian yarn, by the way, is not a brand name, but is the generic term for a specific type of yarn.

It is particularly important in working the straight stitches of Bargello to separate the strands and to keep them laying side by side as your work. If they become twisted as you work, give your needle a little counter-clockwise twist or hold up your work and let the needle spin until the strands are untwisted.

To separate the strands before you thread your needle, hold up the strand by one end and run a finger between two of the strands. Do the same between the second and third strands if you will be using all three strands.

There is also a slight pile or nap to the yarn and this should run in the same direction with each strand. If you will run the strands between your thumb and forefinger, you will feel that it is smoother in one direction. When the smooth part is running down, thread the top of these strands into the needle. If you don't have enough sensitivity in your fingers, try running the yarn across one cheek.

There may be times, when you get into decorative pattern stitchery, when you may use different thicknesses of yarn for various stitches on the same piece to achieve the desired effect. A build-up stitch where the yarn crosses the same point several times, for example, may show off to better advantage with two rather than three strands. Other stitches on the same piece may look best with three or four strands in the needle.

BARGELLO STITCHES. . .are used to decorate needlepoint pocketbook.

Encourage Her Payment

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I have worked for a store for five years and I like my job. There is another lady who has worked there about the same length of time, and we have become pretty good friends.

Yesterday I saw her slip a $15 item into her pocket. She doesn't know I saw her do this. I am very troubled and don't know what to do.

Should I talk to her about it? Should I tell the boss? What would you do?

If you use this, don't use my name or the name of my town.

TROUBLED

DEAR TROUBLED: I would tell the woman that I saw her pocket the item, then encourage her to either return it or pay for it — if she has not already paid for it, that is.

DEAR ABBY: We recently had a tragic automobile accident in our town in which a high school girl was killed instantly. Three friends in the same car were seriously injured. One died this morning.

A week ago, when the funeral of this girl who was instantly killed took place, I took it upon myself to take movies of the funeral.

It was my intent to write to the girl's parents (I do not know them) and offer them the film footage as a gesture of interest in their loss so that those of their family who were unable to attend could review the happenings that took place at the funeral. Also, in later years the parents might appreciate having the movies as a remembrance.

Do you think my offer of this film would rekindle heartache, or do you think it would be regarded as a token of sharing a loss — as it was meant to be?

Someone at the funeral commented as I was taking these movies that it was "tacky." This, of course, was only one man's opinion. If it was tacky, what about all the funeral footage we view on the television news?

MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR MASS.: Everyone deals with his grief in his own way, so I don't know how the family of the dead girl would feel about seeing movies of their daughter's funeral.

Personally, I think filming grief-stricken mourners at a funeral is an invasion of their privacy, and I would not offer the film to the family of the deceased.

CONFIDENTIAL TO CURIOUS ABOUT CONSCRIPTION: Conscription varies from country to country, and the laws change with time, too. For example, the following order was issued in Ethiopia in 1935 by the then-emperor, Haile Selassie:

1) All men and boys able to carry a spear go to Addis Ababa.
2) Every married man will bring his wife to cook and wash for him.
3) Every unmarried man will bring any unmarried woman he can find to cook and wash for him.
4) Women with babies, the blind and those too aged and infirm to carry a spear are excused.
5) Anyone who qualifies for battle and is found at home after receiving this order will be hanged(!)

Council Has Planning Meet

planning meeting was held by the Pitt County Council on the Status of Women Wednesday afternoon.

Vice Chairman Willie Mae Carney presided. Plans for fall were discussed with a possible meeting being set up including key women throughout the county.

Mrs. Helen Simpson of Robersonville, regional coordinator for the Status of Women, displayed a copy of "Network of North Carolina Women," which is a newspaper published in Fayetteville.

Mrs. Clarence Moore of Simpson is a new council member.

It was noted Jeff McAllister, director of the Council on Aging in Pitt County, was speaker at the May meeting. He told of the council's purposes and assistance provided.

Mrs. Sylvia Wheless, Mrs. Polly Dail, Mrs. Jane Little, Mrs. Jean Darden and Mrs. Sue May were named members of a special committee.

Mrs. Wheless presented an appreciation gift to Mrs. Simpson.

THE "ORIGINAL" COIN & RING MAN

THOUSANDS OF SENIOR CITIZENS, WIDOWS AND COIN COLLECTORS ARE DELIGHTED WITH THE CASH THEY RECEIVE FOR THEIR GOLD AND SILVER VALUABLES.

COIN & RING MAN has had a significant influence on gold and silver trading in North Carolina. Gold and silver dealers all over the state are copying us. Almost every day we pick up a newspaper which is running one of Coin & Ring Man's ORIGINAL ADS under some OTHER dealer's name and logo. We're proud to be a leader and we're flattered that our competitors admire us so much, but unfortunately, we're not always so pleased with their ethics — because although other dealers may copy our ads (instead of being creative enough to design their own) they can't imitate the service and prices Coin & Ring Man offers you. So, if you see an ad for a gold and silver buyer, be sure you're dealing with THE ORIGINAL COIN & RING MAN.

Draft Goes To Courts

Congress has voted to institute registration for the draft and approved the $13.3 million in funds to carry out the program.

Immediately the American Civil Liberties Union announced it would take the draft registration to court hoping to have it declared unconstitutional since it exempts women.

It will, of course, be an interesting case in view of our current emphasis on equal rights, which we suppose also includes equal responsibilities to our society.

The ACLU will ask for an injunction holding up the draft registration pending a resolution of the case, something that could take years. Hopefully the courts will act quickly to deny that. Given the lack of readiness of our armed forces at present we should not hold up draft registration in order that we might be able to move quickly to mobilize in the event of a threat.

The courts will have some far reaching issues to decide as this case is heard. They will, of course, have to make a determination on whether or not women have an equal duty of service to their country in time of war.

Perhaps more important, the courts will be deciding if all of us have a duty in a democracy to provide for our own defense. Presently the burden, in large proportion, is falling on those of our society who are too poor, too ill trained or lack the abilities to find employment in the civilian sector. Somehow that doesn't strike us as equal rights or equal responsibility.

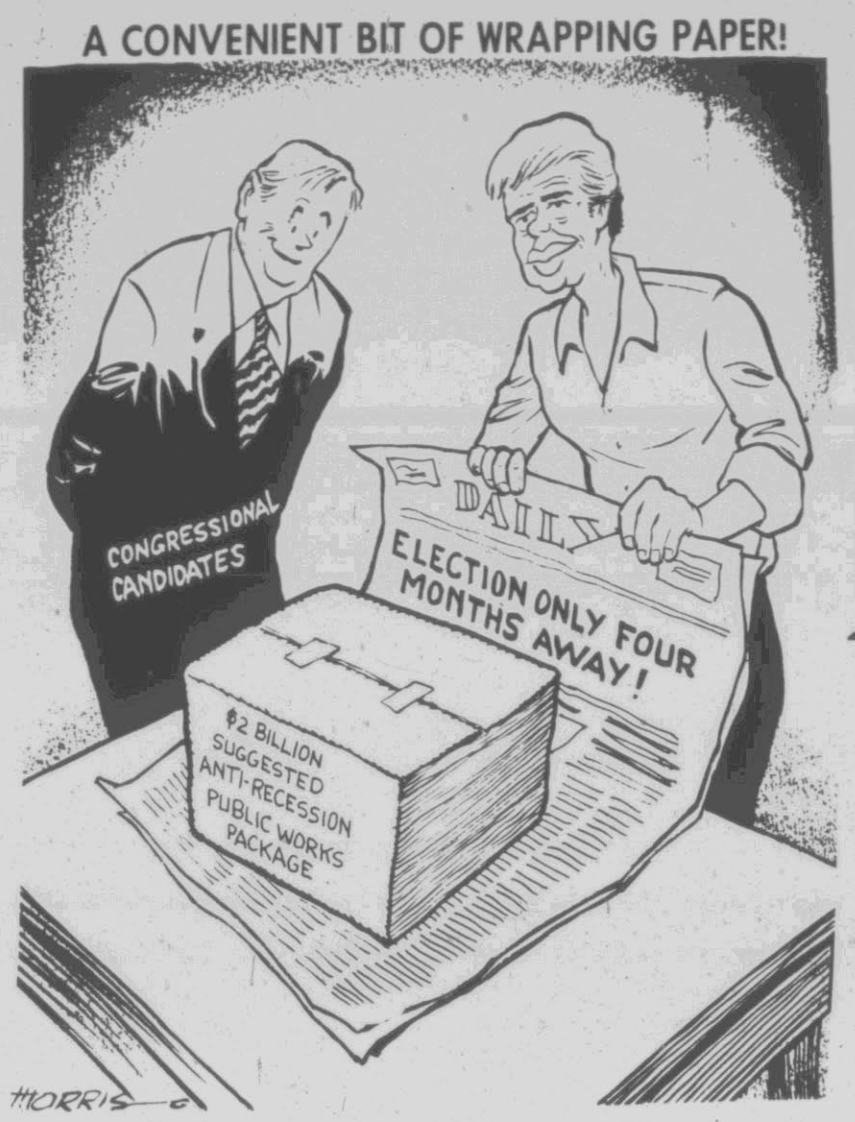

Election Year Tax Cut Ahead

The Carter-Reagan campaign is rapidly coming down to who can cut our taxes in the most efficient manner.

Ronald Reagan has already proposed a ten percent general cut.

The Carter folks are not to be outdone. They are letting it be known that a tax cut is coming. Senate Democrats rejected the ten percent cut idea, but directed the finance committee to come up with a version by Sept. 3. Notice the date is well before the election.

Tax relief might not be a reality prior to the election, but you can bet that some tax cut legislation will at least be on paper.

THIS AFTERNOON

Growing Dismay

By BILL NOBLITT
(First of Two Articles)

RALEIGH — State Senator Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, doesn't really care what he says about how out of balance the new North Carolina state budget is as a result of action by the 1980 General Assembly.

There are very few state employees in Rauch's district.

Rauch is a member of the Advisory Budget Commission which rubber-stamped Gov. Jim Hunt's budget proposals; and is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

His office is next door in a legislative Building corridor to State Rep. John Gamble, a Democrat from Lincoln County which is next door to Rauch's home county. Gamble is chairman of the House Finance Committee, and a member of the Advisory Budget Commission.

Both men share the conviction that the budget action had put this state in the position of deficit financing to provide astronomically high salary and fringe benefit improvements for state employees at a cost as yet unknown for a lot of years to come.

Growing

Gamble is a physician, and travelling in those circles privately he finds that there is growing concern and alarm about the direction the state's finances are taking. He is certain that discontent is increasing strongly in the business community against both the state and federal approach to spending and taxing; increasing so strongly that the time is near when businessmen are going to have to fight or die.

Rauch puts it bluntly: "I have discussed this with many businessmen. We must stop, or we are going to kill the goose."

One of the world's largest manufacturers of Christmas ornaments and decorations, Rauch heads a multi-million-dollar operation, and is intimately familiar with all the effects of taxation, regulation, supervision, forms, etc.

"I'll tell you this. I'm more than just concerned. I am scared," says Rauch as he recites from memory the statistics: 82 million Americans receive government checks; 79 million work in the private sector. Tax Freedom Day came May 11, three days later than last year and it took us 131 days to satisfy our local, state and federal combined tax obligations; state employee salaries and fringes are higher than in the private sector, and in these recessionary times when Rauch and his colleagues are cutting production, trimming equipment, pushing for more work for the same or less pay . . . government goes on spending and spending.

In North Carolina at this time there are 174,533 state government employees; 86,500 local government employees; and 35,300 federal government employees, not counting military.

That is a total of 296,333 fulltime government employees with an annual payroll of more than $3.6 billion.

Workers

The entire private sector employment in North Carolina including all farm workers and self-employed people is 2.2 million with a payroll of $23.6 billion (estimated).

Why, at a time when the private sector is worrying about tomorrow, cutting production, laying off people, and generally tightening the belt, is government expanding and the state budget pushing salaries and fringe benefits to alltime highs, Rauch wonders.

One thing bothers him a great deal: many people are

Washington Doldrums

WASHINGTON — When we talk about doldrums, it says right here in Webster's, we are talking about a part of the ocean near the equator "abounding in calms, squalls, and light shifting winds." Speaking politically and metaphorically, that's where political writers have been tacking lately. As evidence thereof, consider the Democrats' "platform fight."

As fights and platforms go, this platform fight was feeble stuff, but it was all the ink-stained wretches of the Washington press corps have had to write about. The Democrats' platform committee, after a two-hour taffy pull, came up with a plank calling for an end to new nuclear plants and an orderly phase-out of old ones. This earth-shaking pronouncement was at once perceived as a smashing victory for Sen. Edward Kennedy and a crushing defeat for President Carter. The papers seized upon the bloody affray as if platforms mattered.

Well, ho-hum and hoo-hah. Of the writing of party platforms there shall be no end — and not much meaning, either. These are tribal rituals. No Democratic office seeker, including Mr. Carter, considers himself bound by a single commitment. Indeed, at the very hour the committee was demanding nuclear restraint, the president was in Venice advocating nuclear expansion. So it goes.

The idea of a national party platform appears to have originated with the Democrats in 1840. They put forth a ringing declaration of support for "the liberal principles embodied by Jefferson in the Declaration of Independence."

The Whigs in 1852 provided a dime's worth of difference. They affirmed their faith in "the great conservative principles by which the United States are controlled and governed." It was a great platform, that Whig platform: "The government of the United States is of a limited character, and it is confined to the exercise of powers expressly granted by the Constitution. All powers not granted or necessarily implied are expressly reserved to the States or to the people." Now, there was a plank a man could stand on.

The Republicans came on the scene in 1856, with a demand that seems out of character today. They called for federal aid to build a railroad to the Pacific, and further called for extensive public works on rivers and harbors. By 1860, however, the Republican platform had developed a more familiar ring: "We view with alarm the reckless extravagance which pervades every department of the Federal government."

A century or so ago, the drafters of party platforms attacked the opposition with shillelaghs, baseball bats and bung-starters. In 1868, by way of example, the Democrats charged the Republicans with "unparalleled oppression and tyranny," and with establishing "a system of spies and official espionage to which no constitutional monarch of Europe would now dare to resort." The Republicans, no pikers they, in 1876 charged the Democrats with condoning treason, being "false and imbecile" on financial matters, and demonstrating their "utter incompetence" to run a government.

In 1880, the Democrats were still furious about Tilden-Hayes. They demanded reforms "which shall make it forever impossible for a defeated candidate to bribe his way to the seat of the usurper by billeting villains upon the people." In this same platform, the Democrats declared themselves "the friend of labor and the laboring man, and pledged to protect him alike against the cormorant and the commune." That was how they wrote platforms in the old days.

My own favorite is the Fear Fever Is Catching

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Carter's political advisers, though publicly nonchalant, are worried privately that Democratic members of Congress will catch tax cut fever during the forthcoming congressional recess and return to Capitol Hill susceptible to Ronald Reagan's tax schemes.

These advisers confide that Reagan's call for immediate tax action is a political masterstroke. Democratic ranks are sure to hold firm for now. But Carterites fear what a few weeks back home while tax cut rhetoric blares out of the Republican convention in Detroit does to that resolve.

Consequently, drafting a tax-cutting alternative ready for action when Congress comes back is a first order of priority at the White House. The impediments are less Carter's caution than anti-tax cut stubbornness by economic adviser Charles Schultze and slower-than-slow staff work by the Economic Policy Group. The EPG staffers have had tax cut policy under consideration for some six weeks with no discernible progress.

Hostage Probing

Behind the public posture of the Carter administration that the hostage issue should be quieted down for a while, intense negotiations are going on behind the scenes to free the 53 Americans by early October.

Highly secret negotiations conducted several weeks ago by then White House chief of staff Hamilton Jordan are continuing in Paris, Tehran and other world capitals. U.S. negotiators are mainly private citizens — in effect, unpaid, undercover workers for President Carter. They include lawyers from the U.S., France and other countries.

Carter's fondest hope is to bring the hostages home before he faces American voters on Nov. 4, the first anniversary of captivity for the hostages. Skeptics in the administration believe the odds are heavily against success.

Pro-Life Zealotry

Ronald Reagan's operatives finally gave up in disgust when New York state's Right-To-Life Party kept raising the ante for giving its presidential nomination this year to Reagan instead of pro-life activist Ellen McCormack.

The New York Lifers first demanded only that Reagan, who is anti-abortion, name a like-minded vice president. But the asking price kept going up. Reagan would have to endorse conservative Alphonse D'Amato against liberal Sen. Jacob Javits in the New York Republican primary. Finally, they insisted that Reagan endorse for election throughout the country only Republicans who support an anti-abortion constitutional amendment.

Those last impossible conditions convinced Reagan's agents that Mrs. McCormack wanted to run so badly that she never would give way for Reagan. As a result, he will have to win New York without the 130,000 or more voters likely to vote for Mrs. McCormack.

Nuke Compromise

At the height of controversy over the nuclear power issue in the Platform Committee, Democratic National Chairman John White quietly telephoned Robert Strauss, President Carter's campaign chairman, with this word: We can compromise the nuke plank and avoid a bloody, perhaps losing fight on the floor at Madison Square Garden.

Strauss at once saw the value of this. Even though aides from Carter's White House believed they had 79 sure votes (out of 117) to carry Carter's preferred language on the hot issue, it was decided to compromise.

The ambiguous language of the compromise failed to satisfy far-out anti-nuclear hotheads. But it did bring in enough new supporters to protect Carter's position from further erosion at the August convention.

Arrogance In Defeat

Repeated defeats in primaries have not taught humility to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's presidential campaign, as shown by the treatment of insurance magnate Bernard Rapoport of Waco, Texas, a longtime liberal activist and early Kennedy backer.

Rapoport had endorsed Kennedy for president as soon as he announced last year. He raised some $60,000 for him in Texas, no easy task in a state where the state's Democratic money is solidly for President Carter. Hence, Rapoport was stunned to learn the Kennedy campaign had rejected him as a delegate to the national convention in New York. The Letters submitted for Public Forum should be limited to 300 words. The editor reserves the right to edit longer letters.

To the editor:

Like Will Rogers said, "About all I know is what I read in the papers." I read with interest in the June 24 "Daily Reflector" the newly approved city budget for 1980-81. What particularly caught my attention was the seven cents per $100 valuation increase in the present tax rate of 70 cents per $100 valuation. This seven cents does not sound as impressive as a 10 percent raise. Since the last budget was approved, there has been at least an eight percent increase in the tax base, with the opening of Carolina East Mall, annexations and other construction. This, within itself would give an eight percent increase of taxes available to the city. Adding onto that the 10 percent increase of that unlisted tax of last year would add another .8 percent. Adding that to the 10 percent increase of last year's tax base would make a total of 18.8 percent more taxes available to the city. Not one of us is immune from the economic inflationary turbulence that persists today any more so than the city of Greenville. My greatest sympathy is to those on fixed incomes in this spiraling inflation, increased taxes and now the additional cost of a cemetery plot.

My basic reason for writing this letter is to have people encourage the administration of the city to insist that hard business practices be instigated, to institute all the economy moves possible, and to increase productivity. I don't really feel anyone in Greenville wants a Proposition 13 or similar measure. I read much in the "Daily Reflector" concerning long range planning by the City Council and hope that includes plans to eventually replace the presently outdated buildings: City Hall, Police Department, downtown Fire Department, and establish a reserve fund for capital improvements and equipment replacements as the needs arise.

Strength For Today

DOWN TO REALITY

When Henry M. Stanley set out on his great African exploration during the late nineteenth century, he had with him a rather large library. But little by little as his native servants deserted him, he was compelled to throw some of his baggage away, and always among the rejected items were some books. At last, after all his baggage except the bare essentials was gone, he was down to a single book — the Bible.

There has never been a time in world history when people read so many books as now. To be sure, the Bible is a best seller, but compared with its ancient prestige it occupies a place in the reading of today which is of minor importance in the thinking of most people. More often than not, even the large personal libraries of today will not have a copy of the Bible.

Stanley's intuition was good. He kept the Bible so that he might raise his eyes above the steaming jungle and think about life in the purposes of God. — Elisha Douglass

Coal Production Said Rising

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Coal Association says coal production in the United States is rising this year to meet increased demand for electricity generation, exports and stockpiling.

At its annual convention Monday, the trade association issued revised forecasts for 19800 increasing slightly the production and demand estimates it made last February.

The NCA said electric utilities probably would use about 5 million more tons of coal in 1980 that previously forecast and estimates of coal exports also have been increased by about 5 million tons. It said coal stockpiles are e pected to grow by some 29 million tons.

The report says domestic use coal use may reach 712 million tons, about 5.2 percent more than in 1979; exports may total 74 million tons, up 14.4 percent.

To meet those higher demands for use and stockpiling, U.S. coal production would reach 815 million tons, an increase of 6 percent.

The revised production forecast was about 15 million tons, or nearly 2 percent, higher than the NCA's February forecast of 800 million tons in 1980.

President Carter has urged increasing U.S. coal use to about 1.2 billion tons a year early in the 1980s, and the coal industry wants to meet that goal.

But convention speakers told the audience of coal executives that major expansion of production capacity would require relief from excessive federal taxation and regulation.

Reginald H. Jones, chairman and chief executive officer of General Electric Co., said government and industry have been misled by basing decisions on an illusion of high corporate profits.

If the corporate profit increases of some 228 percent between 1969 and 1979 are readjusted to take account of inflation and other factors, Jones said, they shrimk into an actual 12 percent decline.

"We have the government collecting taxes on phantom profits, and we have corporations decapitalizing themselves with their dividends, without even knowing it," he said.

Jones said the federal government's revenues are due to increase by some $90 billion, and he urged that this be reduced with $35 billion tax cut starting next Jan. 1.

Ulf Lantzke, executive director of the International Energy Agency, said the United States should make a major commitment to increasing its coal exports, to giv5 other industrial nations the confidence to switch more heavily from from oil and natural gas to coal.

Lantzke said this would take U.S. efforts to open up federal lands for coal leasing, to step up rail transport and coal slugry pipelines, and to expand its deep water ports for large coal freighters.

LAST DAY ON DUTY — Greenville Police Department Capt. L. J. Russell was honored yesterday as he completed his last day on duty as chief of the department's detective division. Russell joined the department in 1957, after serving in the U.S. Navy and several years as a deputy with the Pitt County Sheriff's Department. He left the police force in 1958, but returned in 30 days and rose through the ranks to become captain in charge of the detective division in October 1972. The Pitt County native, with a total of 35 years in law enforcement, will be on vacation until his Sept. 8 retirement date. Chief Glenn Cannon presented Russell with his service revolver and a plaque containing his captain's badge at a surprise reception yesterday afternoon.

Co-Sponsoring Pottery Course

Pitt Community College and Greenville City Community Schools will co-sponsor a five-week pottery course July 2 at 7 p.m.

Students will learn the fundamentals of hand forming clay on a potter's wheel or hand building. They will also learn the use of the various glazes and firing procedures and complete a variety of projects.

The class will meet on Mondays and Wednesdays from 7-10 p.m. in the self-contained art room at Rose High School. The building is located behind Rose High's main building, the end building. The class will end July 30.

For further information concerning this course, contact the Continuing Education Division at PCC at 756-3130, ext. 238 or 266. The registration fee is $5 but is free to senior citizens 65 or older. Students are responsible for their own supplies. High school students 16 or older are permitted to enroll with approval from the appropriate public school official.

Jack Potts Back In Death Row

JACKSON, Ga. (AP) — Condemned killer Jack Potts was back to a relatively normal prison routine on death row today after two days in a "death watch" cell only 20 feet from Georgia's electric chair.

The U.S. Supreme Court voted 8-0 on Monday to affirm a lower court's stay of Potts execution, scheduled for today.

Word of the decision was relayed to the 35-year-old inmate at 1:45 p.m. by his brother, John William "Billy" Potts of Marietta. Within the hour, Potts was back among 44 other death row inmates at the facility 50 miles south of Atlanta.

"We're just trying to get back to normal," said prison spokeswoman Sara Englade. She said there would be no further statement.

The Supreme Court ruling cleared the way for the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to hear arguments on a habeas corpus petition in the on-again, off-again appeal by Potts. A habeas corpus action requires those holding a prisoner in custody to justify the detention.

No date has been set for that hearing, which could be weeks away.

U.S. District Judge William O'Kelley of Atlanta rejected the habeas corpus petition last Friday, ruling that Potts waived his right to further federal court review when he withdrew an appeal he initiated June 4.

If the appeals court disagrees, the lengthy process of deciding the merits of Potts' habeas corpus action would begin before O'Kelley.

Attorney Millard Farmer, after meeting with Potts Monday afternoon, said the inmate was committed this time to pursue his appeals to the end. He has dropped his appeals twice.

"This is it, it's solid this time," Farmer said. "He's committed to living."

Potts was sentenced to die for the 1975 kidnap-murder of Roswell mechanic Michael Priest.

Defense attorney Joe Nursey said Potts has 10 days to file briefs and the government has 10 days after that to file its briefs. Defense lawyers then will have five more days to file answering briefs.

"We don't feel Georgia state courts care anything about federal constitutional law," Nursey said. "You haven't been in court until you're in the federal courts."

Potts was moved from the regular cellblock to the newly constructed death house last Saturday morning to begin the final 72-hour "death watch" before the execution.

Village Public Tours Planned

The Village of Yesteryear, a replica village of the pre-1900's, will be open for public tours July 13 from 2-5 p.m. The village, built by members of the American Legion, is located at the new Pitt County Fairgrounds.

According to Les Turnage, president of the Pitt County Fair, the village was constructed in an effort to "make the fair something besides a carnival.

"We are trying to preserve farm implements and household goods so that we can show people how our forefathers lived before the turn of the century," Turnage said.

Turnage, Connor Eagles and many members of the American Legion have collected, preserved and displayed thousands of farm implements which were used in Pitt County.

"When we bought the land for the fairgrounds, some of the land included trees which were at one time around the old Jones home. We decided it would be a perfect place to display our farm tools," Turnage commented.

"We were given a mule and cow barn which was built in 1852 from the Tucker farm and then we received a log cabin and corn bin. We now have a chicken house, smoke house log cabins, church and a log cabin farm implement display center," Turnage said.

The Historic Preservation Task Force of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce will be working with the American Legion to promote the Village of Yesteryear. The two groups will host the "Afternoon at the Village of Yesteryear" July 13 and will provide tour guides dressed in pre-1900's costumes.

The public is invited to attend the afternon open house either as groups or individuals. For further information contact Lynne Olmsted at the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce at 752-4101 or Les Turnage at 752-2715.

Democratic platform of 1932: "We advocate an immediate and drastic reduction of governmental expenditures by abolishing useless commissions and offices, consolidating departments and bureaus, and eliminating extravagance to accomplish a savings of not less than 25 percent in the cost of the federal government." Thus encouraged, Franklin Roosevelt set about building the New Deal. By 1936 federal spending had doubled.

What I am saying is, you have to be desperate to write seriously about party platforms — but in Washington last week, the press faced desperate times. We may be in these doldrums till fall.

Anderson Sees Green Light For Election Campaign

DEAD CHICKENS — Raymond Wootton, of near Lewisville, Ark. spends 15 hours per day walking his chickens to keep them cool and picking up those that the hot and humid weather have killed. He has lost nearly 3,000 this week. Arkansas chicken farmers are expected to lose about 5 million chickens before the weather breaks. (AP Laserphoto)

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) John B. Anderson has concluded that his nine-week-old independent presidential campaign has attracted enough money, interest and potential voters to permit him to stay in the race all the way.

After campaigning in every region of the country and opening ballot access drives in all 50 states, Anderson planned to announce today that he believes he can mount a credible challenge to President Carter and Ronald Reagan, the prospective major party nominees.

The 58-year-old Republican congressman from Illinois was to outline the second phase of his independent campaign in a news conference on Capitol Hill.

Publicly, an Anderson spokesman would say only that the candidate plans to discuss ohe progress of the campaign to date.

But other sources said Anderson will now devote much of his effort to overcominghbroad skepticism that he represents little more than a spoiler in the contest between Carter and Reagan.

Anderson supporters have gathered enough signatures to get on the November general election ballot in 14 states — New Jersey, Michigan, Massachusetts, Utah, North Carolina, Ohio, Kentucky, Kansas, West Virginia, New Mexico, Maine, Idaho, Wisconsin and Rhode Island.

In four of the states, Ohio, Kentucky, New Mexico and Maine, officials have ruled that Anderson failed to meet requirements other than the number of signatures and campaign lawyers have filed court suits challenging the constitutionality of state election laws.

In an additional 22 states, campaign officials say enough signatures on petitions have been gathered so far to make it a near certainty that Anderson will be on the ballot.

In Massachusetts, the campaign won a victory last Friday when state officials rejected an effort paid for by the Democratic National Committee to keep Anderson off the ballot in November.

There are a few states, including Georgia and Oklahoma, where enlisting enough support has been difficult and signature drives have stalled. They include Georgia and Oklahoma.

"They have been tough," said one campaign official, "but in the end we will meet their deaylines."

Anderson has also demonstrated enough strength in public opinion polls to make him believe that he has a serious chance of not only exploiting voter disaffection with Carter and Reagan, but being viewed as a positive alternative to both the major party nominees, wccording to campaign officials.

Campaign manager Michael MacLeod said Monday that since Anderson began his independent quest for the presidency April 24,he has attracted more than $3 million in private contibutions toward an ultimate goal of at least $15 million.

Most of those funds came from a current list of direct mail contributors now totalling 120,000 names, he said.

MacLeod said also that Anderson will concede most of the South, since that "will be a Carter-Reagan battlegroun," with the possible exceptions of North Carolina, Tennessee, Florida and Texas.

To offset the loss of visibility for Anderson while the networks are televising the two national political conventions, the congressman leaves Sunday for the Middle East and Europe where he is to meet with heads of state in Israel, Egypt, West Germany, Great Britain, and possibly France.

Alert Signal From Weed

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — Scientists for the Environmental Protection Agency say a common weed may help identify health dangers in polluted air.

The weed, a strain of the common spiderwort called tradescantia, apparently monitors airborne chemicals for potential cancer or genetic damage.

The plant's cells change color when exposed to a variety of compounds that have been linked with cancer or cell mutations in animals. EPA bilogist Shahbeg S. Sandhu said it may be possible to use the plant as a device for measuring potential danger in an area.

"It raises a red flag that something is there," Sandhu said.

If a large number of the plant's cells change color at the site of a factory or waste dump, other tests can be made to determine what chemicals are in the air and how they might affect man, Sandhu said.

The technique is useful for alerting researchers to combinations of chemicals that may not be harmful alone but become hazardous when mixed together, he said.

Former Inmate Asserts He Was Paid For False Jaycee Chapters

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A former president for a prison Jaycee chapter said Monday he was paid to establish false Jaycee units for inmates.

Ronnie Hutchins, 25, a parolee from Winston-Salem, said the FBI contacted him recently to talk about his allegations. The FBI refused to say whether it had contacted Hutchins.

Hutchins refused to say who had paid him or how much money he was given. He did say that he was asked by former state Jaycee presidents J. Harold Herring and Maurice Wilson to set up phony chapters for inmates.

Hutchins was an inmate of the Forsyth Advancement Center near Winston-Salem.

Wilson, now chairman of the state Jaycee executive board, denied that he or anyone else at the state Jaycee level asked Hutchins to establish bogus chapters. He also said he had never given Hutchins money.

Herring could not be contacted Monday.

The FBI and state authorities are investigating reports that an estimated $190,000 was diverted from a Jaycee charity fund to help pay other Jaycee expenses, including national membership dues. Herring, who had been running unopposed, recently withdrew as a candidate for the national Jaycee presidency because of the money controversy.

Hutchins, who was paroled May 10 after serving less than two years of an eight-year active term for writing worthless checks, was president of the "Cherry Tree" Jaycee chapter at Forsyth Advancement Center. The chapter, according to state and Winston-Salem Jaycees, was successful and very active. Hutchins won awards for his program.

Hutchins said he was asked by Herring in January to establish additional chapters, although it would be unusual for a prison unit to have more than one chapter. For example, Central Prison in Raleigh has 1,400 inmates, but only one Jaycee chapter.

Hutchins said during the next three months — February, March and April — he established three additional Jaycee prison unit chapters at Forsyth Advancement Center. One, which he called "Cherry Tree 2," was legitimate. The other two were fake, he said. Hutchins said both Herring and Wilson knew they were fake chapters and that Wilson had supplied him with some names he used on fake chapter membership rolls.

Hutchins said he "didn't know where" the money he indicated that he received "came from." He also said he didn't know how the national dues for his new chapters were paid.

Jack Turlington, superintendent of the Forsyth center, said Monday the state Jaycees recently billed him for about $900 for membership dues for three new Jaycee chapters.

Turlington said he knew of only one chapter at his prison unit. "That's the Cherry Tree chapter," he said. The bill sought dues for Cherry Tree 2, 3 and 4, Turlington said.

Turlington said the bill would not be paid.

Seek Study Of 16 Dams

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Rep. John M. Jordan, D-Alamance, and his family-owned company have applied for federal permits to study 16 dams in North Carolina as possible sites for hydroelectric projects.

Jordan headed a study commission that recommended higher power rates for such hydroelectric projects. The recommendation was accepted by the General Assembly, which passed a law last month guaranteeing higher rates for developers of small dams.

Jordan is vice president of Sellers Manufacturing Co..

He said Monday Sellers has applied to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission for permission to study the dams, which are owned by the Army Corps of Engineers. They include the B. Everett Jordan Dam, which was named for the legislator's father, in Chatham County.

The other dams are in Wake, Chatham, Lee, Randolph, Alamance, Bladen and Rockingham counties, including three locks and dams on the Cape Fear River.

Jordan said his company may not develop all the sites. He said the application for studies allows the company to be "first in line" for a federal permit to develop a dam and also allows it to obtain low-interest loans from the Department of Energy for studying the development.

The development of small dam sites has been stimulated by a 1978 change in federal law requiring power companies to buy power generated by small dams.

The law passed by the 1980 Legislature reqwires the state Utilities Commission to set rates for hydroelectric power by taking the average of existing electric rates and the anticipated rate in 10 years. The result presumably would be advantageous to the hydroelectric company.

MAFIA BOSS INDICTED — One of the Mafia's top men, Frank "Funzi" Tieri, right, is led by the arm by an undentified federal agent, left, after being indicted in New York, Monday on charges of conspiracy, racketeering, bankruptcy fraud and income tax evasion charges. Tieri, also known as "Funzuola" is known as the boss of one of five New York City families of La Cosa Nostra. (AP Laserphoto)

Police Fear Violence At NAACP Convention City

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — While NAACP leader Benjamin Hooks told Miami's blacks, "You're not alone," police braced for the possibilitytof renewed violence on July Fourth — the day President Carter will be in town to the address the civil rights organization.

Eighteen people died in May when racial rioting, sparked by the acquittal of four white former police officers charged in the death of a black businessman, struck Miami's Liberty City.

On Monday, Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Margaret Bush Wilson, chairwoman of the organization, defended the decision to proceed with a convention in this area.

"Many people view the convention as dignifying a community where there are proven problems," said Mrs. Wilson, adding it would have been impossible to move the gathering because of its size. Up to 20,000 people, including 3,000 delegates, are expected.

Hooks said Miami Beach was an appropriate place to meet because of the NAACP's history of wading into troubled water.

"If we stopped going to cities because of that, we'd just have to fold up our tents," Hooks said. "Black folks are catching hell in every city in this country."

To blacks who call the NAACP irrelevant, he said, "there's not a black delegate at this convention who's not suffering in some way.

"You're not alone, Liberty City. We understand how it is."

During the week-long gathering, delegates are to hear from independent and Democratic presidential candidates.

Carter, whose motorcade was pelted with bottles during his visit to Miami after the rioting, will address delegates on July 4.

Citizen action groups have announced plans for a rally the evening of his address. MEANWHILE, POLICE FEAR VIOLENCE IN Liberty City could jump as holiday revelers take to the streets.

"Our intelligence element tells us the hoodlum element is preparing for another war. All the signs are there," said Dade County Sheriff's Capt. Doug Hughes.

He said more than 1,000 guns were missing in looting during the riots, and said police would be at full force for the weekend.

"I would not want to predict thatlthere would be any violence on Friday the fourth," said Lonnie Lawrence, supervisor of community programs for the Dade County Public Safety Department. "As far as I know, there is no hard evidence that there will be."

But Lawrence said police in the area are on alert, a precaution that would have been taken even if the civil rights group had held its convention elsewhere.

Security measures for the convention itself are tighter than usual. Part of that may be attributed to the May 29 sniper shooting of National Urban League President Vernon Jordan in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Law enforcement officers who are attending the convention because of their association with the NACCP are supplementing the paid bodyguardy and local authorities at work on convention security.

Carter will not be the first candidate to address the convention. Independent candidate John Anderson is to speak tonight and Sen. Edward Kennedy will appear on Wednesday.

Ronald Reagan, the expected Republican presidential nominee, declined an invitation to address the delegates. His snub angered Hooks, who warned Reagan not to write off the black vote in the fall.

Reagan said he would be out of the country during the convention.

Four Killed In Accident

WINNSBORO, S.C. (AP) — Four men were killed when a tractor-trailer burst into flames after striking a pickup truck that pulled into its path near Winnsboro, the state Highway Patrol said.

"We had a mess," said investigating Patrolman B.S. McDonald. "You couldn't even tell it was a pickup truck."

McDonald said a tractor-trailer registered to Bendix Trucking Service of South Bend, Ind., was traveling about 50 mph on U.S. 321 when a pickup driven by Wallace Foster, 40, of Winnsboro, pulled out from a store and service station Monday night.

The rig struck the pickup, throwing the four occupants clear, before running off the left side of the highway and overturning, the patrolman said.

The driver of the tractor-trailer, Homer Bass, 49, of Union Pier, Mich., was thrown partly out of the cab and escaped while the rig was burning, McDonald said. Bass's co-driver, 38-year-old William Owens of Niles, Mich., was trapped in the wreckage and burned to death, the office said.

Killed from the pickup were Foster, Willie White, 48, and Pearly Rabb, 40, all of Winnsboro, the patrolman said. A fourth occupant of the pickup, Charles Bell, 26, of Winnsboro, and Bass were reported in good condition at Fairfield Memorial Hospital.

McDonald said Foster's 1959 Dodge pickup and the 1979 Kenworth tractor-trailer were totally destroyed. He said the accident occurred in clear, sunny weather at 6:30 p.m., about 2.8 miles north of Winnsboro.

It took three hours for units from the Winnsboro, Fairfield Volunteer and Lebanon Community fire departments to extinguish the tractor-trailer fire and clear the scene, McDonald said.

Phil Donahue Is Back 'Home'

CLEVELAND (AP) — Television host Phil Donahue blushes regularly when he appears before a hometown audience, but not when he's on camera.

The Cleveland native returned home this week, bringing his popular, Chicago-based talk show with him. The first of five tapings scheduled for Cleveland was Sunday and drew a capacity crowd of 3,000. More than 100,000 people had requested tickets for the five tapings this week.

The silver-haired father of five talked freely, but somewhat sheepishly, about his days as "Little Philly" on Cleveland's West Side.

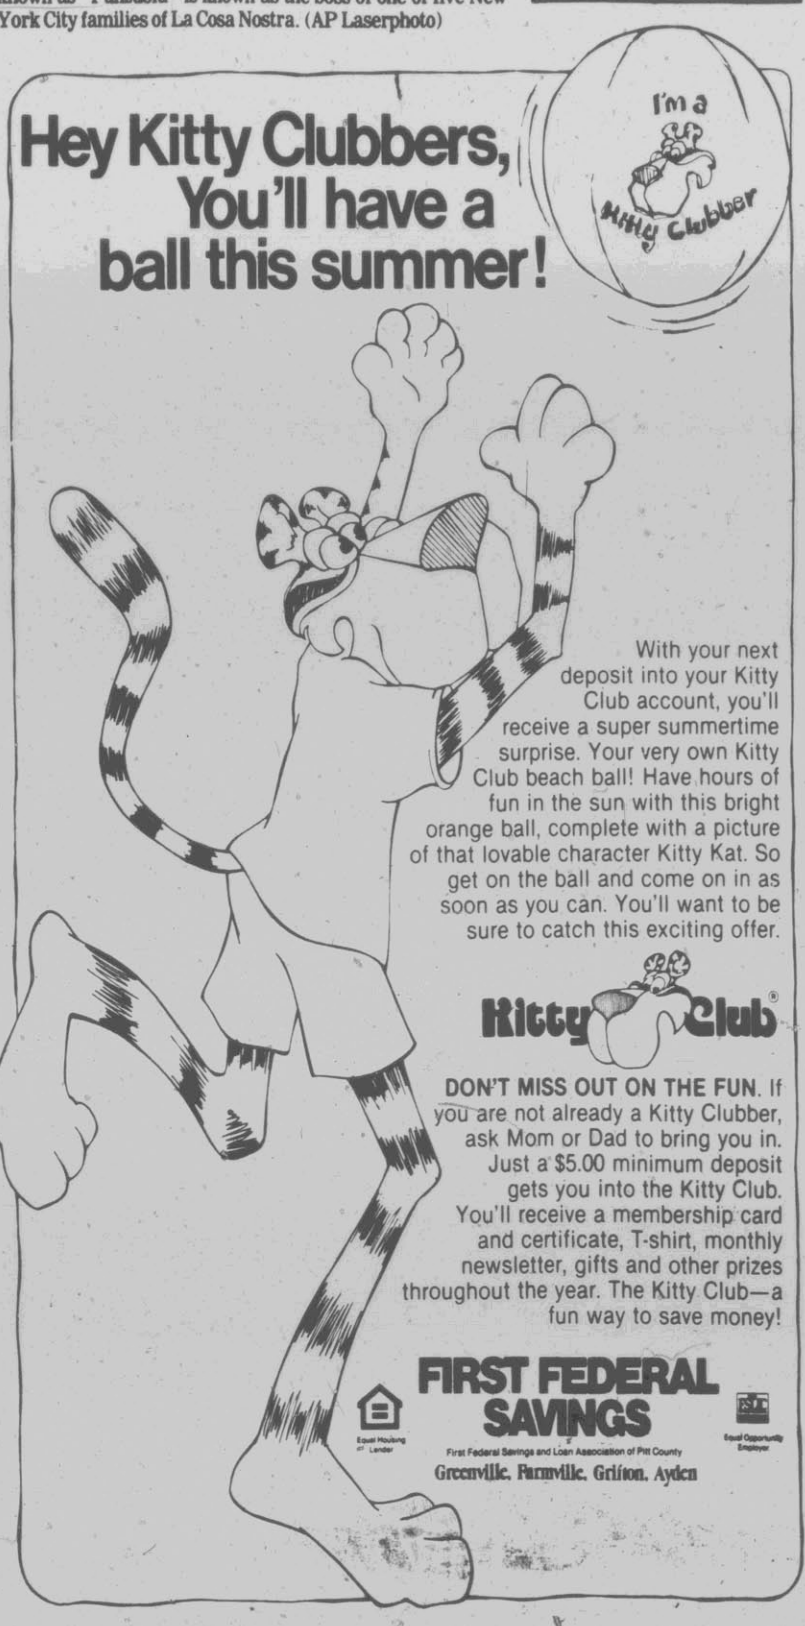

Though humble offstage, when the lights went up on the show, Donahue wasted no time in aggressively questioning former Attorney General Ramsey Clark, who recently went to Iran against President Carter's travel ban.

Questions And Answers About Abortion Decision

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The moral and political war over abortion rages on, but anti-abortion forces have won a momentous victory.

The Supreme Court says the federal government and the states are under no legal obligation to pay for most abortions for woven on welfare.

By the most slender of margins, a 5-4 vote, the nation's highest court ruled Monday that a congressional restriction on Medicaid spending for abortions is constitutional.

The measure — known as the Hyde amendment because it was sponsored by Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill. — bars Medicaid spending for abortions except when a woman's life would be endangered by childbirth or in cases of promptly reported rape or incest.

Here are some questions and answers about major points of Monday's decision, and what it could mean.

Q. Will this end legalized abortion in the United States?

A. No. The Supreme Court's landmark 1973 decision stating all women enjoy a constitutional right to control their bodies, at least for the first six months of their pregnancies, is still the law of the land. In writing for the court's majority Monday, Justice Potter Stewart said just because poor women have such a right doesn't mean the government has to foot the bill.

Q. If abortions are still legal, then isn't the victory merely ideological, carrying no real practical meaning?

A. Wrong. About one-third of the 1 million legal abortions performed each year in the United States since 1973 have been for women on welfare. The Hyde amendment is expected to lower the number of Medicaid abortions from more than 300,000 to fewer than 2,000.

Q. When will the cutoff of federal abortion funds occur?

A. Lawyers for the Department of Health and Human Services who studied the decision all day think all federal money for Medicaid abortions will dry up when the Supreme Court's mandate officially reaches two lower courts whose decisions it reversed — probably July 25 or July 26.

Q. Will that save the federal government and the states substantial amounts of money?

A. No. Those women who will not be able to have the government pay for their abortions still will get the costs of childbirth paid for. And welfare payments for child care are expected to rise.

Q. Can an individual state decide to make Medicaid funds available even though no matching federal funds will be available?

A. Yes. Nine states and the District of Columbia have such policies now, but political pressure surely will mount to follow the federal government's lead. Those states are Alaska, Colorado, Hawaii, Michigan, New York, Washington, Maryland, North Carolina and Oregon.

Q. Will this end all the talk about a constitutional amendment to outlaw abortion?

A. No. Hyde predicted Monday's victory will fuel efforts to change the Constitution and overcome the Supreme Court's 1973 ruling. Dr. John Willke, president of the National Right to Life Committee, said his organization would "redouble our efforts to restore legal protection to all human beings from the time of fertilization."

Q. How did the controversy get all the way to the Supreme Court?

A. Monday's decision actually was sparked by two separate cases, from New York City and Chicago. The court chose the New York case as its main forum because it presented the broadest legal questions.

The day after the Hyde amendment first took effect, Oct. 1, 1976, Cora McRae of Brooklyn, N. Y. challenged its constitutionality. A 24-year-old Medicaid recipient who suffered from varicose veins and blood clots, Mrs. McRae sued after being told no government funds were available to pay for the abortion her doctors advised her to have.

As an initial court victory was won, Mrs. McRae had her Medicaid abortion but her lawsuit had become a national "class action" with the rights of all women on welfare at stake.

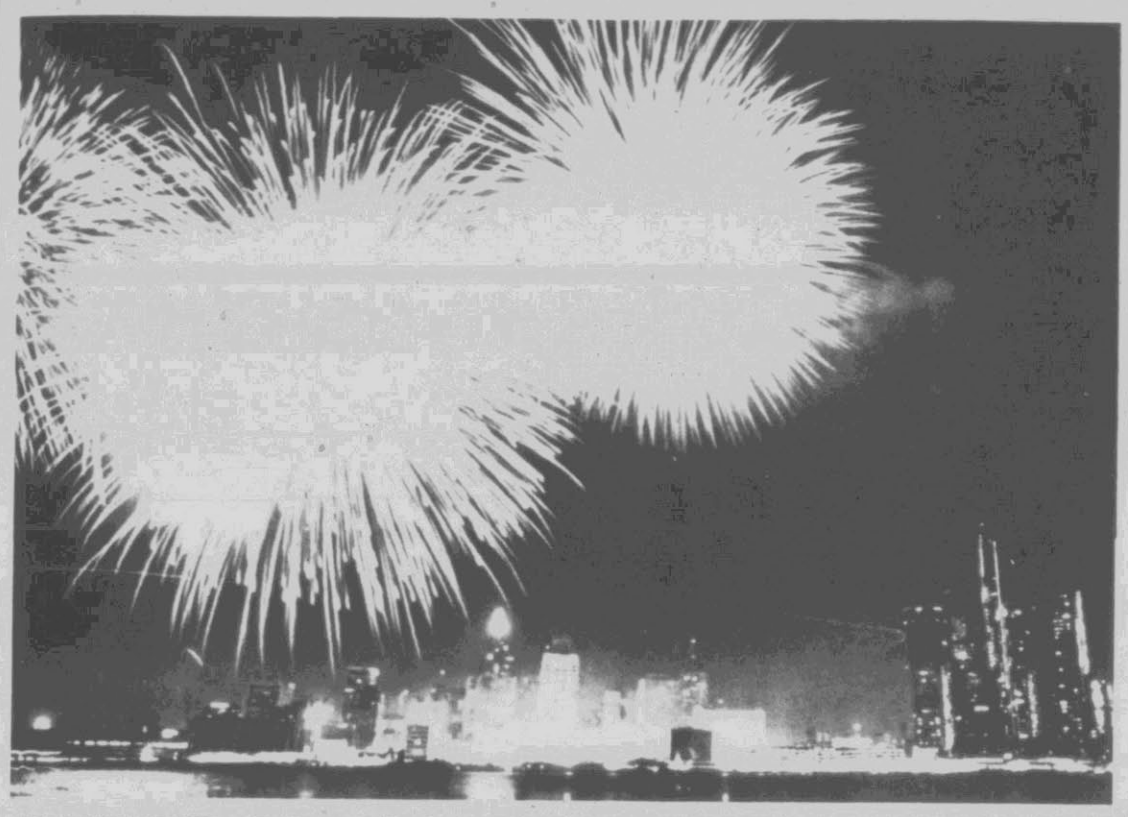

Q. What legal rationale was used by the court?

A. The majority said the Hyde amendment does not violate a woman's constitutionally protected "liberty" and does not violate the equal protection rights of poor women. The majority also ruled that the spending restriction does not set up a state religion just because the Roman Catholic Church happens to disapprove of abortion.

Q. How did that sit with the dissenters?

A. Justice Paul Stevens called the ruling "tantamount to severe punishment." Justice William J. Brennan Jr. called it "brutal" and Justice Harry A. Blackmun said it means "the cancer of poverty will continue to grow."

Justice Thurgood Marshall said poor women now "must resort to back-alley butchers, attempt to induce an abortion themselves by crude and dangerous methods or suffer the serious medical consequences of attempting to carry the fetus to term."

Soul City's Costs Go On

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal official said Monday the government has spent $517,000 to keep Soul City operating since it decided a year ago to abandon the North Carolina community as a new-town project.

Roy A. Gast, project manager overseeing Soul City for the Deparent of Housing and Urban Development, said the money covered the cost of maintenance, utilities, salaires, completion of a fire station, roads and other expenses.

HUD announced early this week that it and Soul City developer Floyd B. McKissick had reached agreement that would let the government take over ownership of Soul City in January.

Gast said HUD intends to sell the property and felt it needed to maintain until the sale can be completed. Some construction contracts also were under way when HUD decided to close the project, he said.

Since the town started in 1974, Soul City has received $29 million in federal grants and loan guarantees. HUD also has paid off $11.1 million in debts and interest charges.

Garwood Case Bogged Down In Semantics, Defense Motions

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Caught up in legal semantics and defense motions, the case of Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood has bogged down and the court-martial itself has been pushed further away.

Garwood, 34, faces trial on charges of desertion and collaboration with the enemy during nearly 14 years that he spent in Vietnam.

Garwood returned to the United States in March 1979 and, pending the outcome of his case, he has remained in the Marine Corps for more than a year, working as a mail sorter.

Selection of the military panel that will judge him had been set for next Monday, but a final series of some 30 defense motions plus psychiatric testing ordered for Garwood have pushed jury selection back to mid-July at the earliest.

On Monday, lawyers for the Indiana native began arguing defense motions in hopes of getting charges dropped or altered.

But the defense lost all four motions decided Monday, including one where the issue was whether the Vietnam conflict constituted a war.

The defense planned to continue its arguments today when the hearing session resumed at 9 a.m.

One motion to be argued this week is a defense contention that Garwood was singled out for prosecution while other former POWs who came home during the mass release of 1973 came home under a military policy of no prosecutions for POWs who signed propaganda statements.

Arguments on that motion may include testimony and statements from former Department of Defense officials.

"We have been informed that this policy was never written down," prosecutor Capt. Werner Hellmer said Monday.

During a hearing earlier this year to determine whether Garwood would face trial, his lawyers at the time unsuccessfully tried to use the same selective prosecution argument before a different judge.

In motions argued Monday, the defense challenged the contention that Vietnam was a war, and the defense questioned whether one of the charges against Garwood constituted maltreatment of other POWs, as the charge alleges.

"Congress could have declared the Vietnam conflict a war ... they did not do so," defense attorney Vaughan Taylor said in his unsuccessful argument.

The reason for arguing that point was that penalties for crimes such as desertion are more severe when the crimes occur during a war.

Prosecutors later tried to use the argument against the defense in a word battle.

"The obvious question is whether you can be a prisoner of war if there is no time of war," Hellmer said.

Switzer granted a request from prosecutors for pretrial information from the defense, including a list of potential witnesses and notification of whether the defense plans to base its case on Garwood's mental state.

Taylor said Garwood is still undergoing psychiatric examinations for the defense and, "The defense simply doesn't know at this point the answer to that question."

Revival Is Extended

Revival services have been extended through Saturday of this week at Tabernacle of Victory Evangelistic Church on the Bethel Highway, according to Pastor Paul Thomas.

Visiting speaker for the revival activities is Evangelist Brian Mosley of New Haven, Conn. The evangelist is representing the Mosley Revival Crusade of Connecticut.

Services begin at 7:30 p.m. each evening, and persons of all faiths and races are invited to attend, it was announced.

Thomas said that the revival began last week and was originally scheduled to end on June 28 but the response to the services prompted the church to extend the revival program.

Police Chase Touched Off Missile-Throwing

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Several people were injured and at least 25 autos damaged by thrown bottles and rocks in northeast Greensboro Monday night after police tried to arrest two youths suspected of theft.

Riot-equipped police staged a show of force and the crowd of about 200 persons broke up two hours after the missile-throwing began.

None of the injuries was believed to be serious.

Police said there was no indication the disturbance was racially motivated. It broke out after two officers went to an apartment complex on Phillips Avenue seeking two youths suspected in a beer theft.

"It was just a hot summer night. It was just some kids out having fun," said Police Sgt. J. W. Wilson, street coordinator for the officers.

At the height of the disturbance, the crowd threw rocks, bricks, bottles and other objects at any cars passing through the neighborhood. Police later sealed off the street.

The crowd broke up after two dozen policemen equipped with riot helmets and bullet-proof vests and armed with tear gas marched into the street and moved on the apartment complex.

Police Lt. R.L. Talbott, who commanded the officers at the scene, said the crowd dispersed in an orderly manner once the officers appeared.

"We simply made a show of force, and they dispersed," Talbott said shortly before midnight. "We'll be keeping a couple of units here for awhile just to make sure nothing else happens."

There was no immediate count of those injured in the disturbance. One person was treated and released at Moses Cone Hospital.

Jimmy Henley, one of the motorists caught in the disturbance, said his car was damaged by a thrown object.

"Whatever it was, it smashed into the hood about a foot from me, scaring my girlfriend to death, and it scared me pretty badly, too," he said. "We weren't hurt, but we got out of there in a hurry."

Police said one of the two youths sought in the beer theft was captured. The other escaped.

The area surrounding the apartment complex was the scene of a similar disturbance in June 1979 when two emn were arrested after a rash of rock-throwing incidents injured three policemen and damaged four police cars.

Only one arrest had been reported today.

Legion Holds Convention

WINSTON-SALEM — The American Legion Dept. of N.C. held its Annual 62nd Convention at the Hyatt House in Winston-Salem.

Local members who attended the convention were Mrs. Sarah J. Ashton and Dr. Betty Al Leney from Unit 39.

Unit 160 was awarded an honorable mention certificate for its unit history.

New officers for 1980-81 were installed. New officers are: Mrs. Sarah Ashton, first division president; Mrs. Florence Mohler-Washington Unit 15, third district president; Mrs. Beatrice, Washington Unit 263, third district vice president.

It was announced that the first division meeting will be held in Rocky Mount in October.

Mrs. Mary Warren, outgoing president, was presented approximately $3000 for her scholarship fund for junior members.

Mrs. Virginia Dalmus, the 1980-91 dept. president, announced homecoming activities to be held August 2-3 at Valdese Post Building.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was little changed today, steadying after Monday's selloff.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 13.91 Monday for its largest loss since May 29, recovered .42 to 868.34 by noontime today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about an 8-7 margin in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts described the selling that set in on Monday as the kind of "correction" that often follows a sustained advance like the rally that lasted most of the spring.

They noted that an end-of-quarter rush of buying by investing institutions had come to a close with the arrival of July, removing one prop from under the market.

But after some further selling at the opening today, prices leveled off.

Oil stocks, under pressure in Monday's session, managed some gains today. Mobil was up 1 at 72¼; Standard Oil of Indiana rose ¼ to 76¾, and Exxon gained 1 to 67¼.

The NYSE's composite index added .08 to 65.42. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was unchanged at 293.61.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 14.55 million shares at noontime, against 13.68 million at the same point Monday.

Kennedy Joins Carter In The Rose Garden For Bill-Signing

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who for months sought to lure President Carter out of the Rose Garden, joined him there today in a rare moment of accord — the signing of a mutually espoused bill to deregulate the trucking industry.

"It's particularly gratifying for me to welcome Senator Kennedy to the Rose Garden today," Carter said with a smile when citing the Massachusetts senator's efforts along with those of other members of Congress in winning passage of the bill.

"There's no debate on trucking deregulation," Kennedy quipped when Carter asked him to say a few words during the signing ceremony. The closest the president's challenger came to turning the event into a political platform was to recite his campaign theme that "the No. 1 concern of the American people is the state of the economy."

"No other piece of legislation will have as great an impact on dampening the fires of inflation" as the bill Carter signed today, Kennedy said.

Kennedy, in a row of a dozen congressional champions of the legislation, stood with his arms folded directly behind the chair provided for the president's use in signing the bill. At one point, he spotted some of the reporters who have been covering his presidential campaign for months and caressed the back of the chair with a subtle grin.

Carter paid tribute to Kennedy, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, as having begun working for increased competition in the trucking industry at least two years before the issue began to gather momentum. "Sometimes alone, sometimes facing discouragement but never giving up on the concept," Kennedy pursued the cause, Cartey said.

It was only the second meeting between the two adversaries since the presidential campaign began in earnest. Kennedy came to the White House for a private meeting with Carter on June 5 after the final round of primaries that appeared to give the president more than enough delegates to assure him of renomination by the Democratic Party this summer.

But Kennedy has refused to concede, and relations between the two men have been practically non-existent.

At the last meeting, one of Kennedy's key aides and Vice President Walter F. Mondale's top assistant were named to act as liaisons for the two camps. But White House press secretary Jody Powell said Monday he didn't know whether there had been any recent communication between the two aides.

The bill Carter decided to sign in the White House Rose Garden represents a victory for the administration and another step toward fulfillment of Carter's promise to remove anti-competitive government regwlations wherever possible.

The Congressional Budget Office has estimated that truck freight prices will fall as much as $8 billion a year when the legislation is fully implemented in 3½ to 4 years. But some of the most sweeping changes in the tightly regulated industry are expected to come about much sooner.

For instance, the law bars the Interstate Commerce Commission from requiring truckers to take round-about routes to deliver their cargoes, a common occurrence today. And the ICC, which supported the bill, is expected to launch an immediate review of such avowedly inefficient and fuel-wasting practices as requiring some truckers to deliver their cargoes in one place and return empty, whether or not they could locate a home-bound shipment.

And, as things stand now, other truckers effectively are required to carry only partial loads and pass up opportunities to compete for new customers because some other firm has been given an exclusive government license to carry those shipments without threat of competition.

One administration official, who discussed the bill with the agreement he would not be named, said one of the first effects of the bill is expected to be an announcement by United Parcel Service of plans to expand its package-delivery service into areas never before reached.

"The concept is very much the same as airline deregulation," the official said. "Regulatory restrictions that were created years ago have prevented competition and contributed to higher prices."

The administration's view of developments in the airline industry, where deregulation has spurred cut-throat price wars on the most popular routes, is that the increase in competition has brought such tremendous boosts in productivity that the airlines have been able to absorb practically all of the cost of soaring fuel prices.

"By one CAB (Civil Aeronautics Board) estimate, airline deregulation has saved consumers $5 billion," the official said.

Indians Ask Pope Help In Brazil Land Dispute

By PETER EISNER
Associated Press Writer

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Pope John Paul II, who opened his visit to Brazil with an appeal for respect for the fundamental rights of all persons, pondered a plea from Indian chiefs today for help in a struggle with the government over their native lands.

The pontiff arrived in Brazil's inland capital Monday for a 12-day tour of 13 cities in the world's largest Roman Catholic nation. After a meeting early this morning with prisoners at a Brasilia penitentiary, he was flying 450 miles to the southeast for a brief stop in the industrial city of Belo Horizonte, then on to scenic Rio de Janeiro, on the Atlantic coast.

The chiefs sent a letter to the pontiff through the Rev. Tomas Balduino, a leading supporter of Indian rights groups. Balduino handed the letter to the pope Monday night.

"We are suffering, both as proud Indians and as people, at the unworthy hands of a government agency which says it supports the Indian but which in reality does nothing but steal Indian land," the letter said.

Church sources said said a meeting between the Indian chiefs and the pope may be arranged when John Paul visits the Amazon jungle city of Manaus.

Brazilian anthropologists say there are about 210,000 Indians in Brazil and many of them have had little contact with modern civilization.

Indian leaders charge the government's national Indian foundation, Funai, has taken systematic steps to turn over Indian land to business interests to exploit the nation's vast mineral and potential agricultural wealth.

The pope on Monday warned Brazilian priests not to let "socio-political" concerns get in the way of their spiritual mission.

The pope's visit put him in the center of a conflict between politically active Brazilian bishops and priests and the military-backed government and its conservative supporters. The pontiff gave strong support to the Brazilian clergy's concern for human rights and improvement in the economic condition of the impoverished masses. And his insistence on the primacy of the clergy's spiritual mission stopped short of the condemnation of clerical political action that the government and its supporters hoped for.

"I pray to God that every Brazilian ... will respect and may always see respected the fundamental rights of all humanity," the pope declared at an open-air Mass for a throng of 500,000 persons led by President Joao Figueiredo, the fifth armytgeneral to head the government since a right-wing military coup in 1964.

He called on the Brazilians to build a "just society, overcoming imbalances and inequalities." And he paid tribute to Brazil's bishops, who sponsor programs to encourage political and social activism by the masses and have issued a series of statements critical of government policies. But he warned that the church's mission cannnot be reduced "just to socio-political matters."

Scores of people in the vast crowd fainted after standing for hours waiting for the pope's arrival.

In a speech Monday night to Brasilia's diplomatic corps, the pope reiterated his opposition to violence as a vehicle for social and political change, coupling it with a censure of strong-arm governments that use violence against their domestic opponents in the name of national security.

Organization Is Pleased With Ruling

Mildred Murphy, chairperson of the local Right to Life organization, said this morning, "Pro-life people in this area are expressing great relief as a result of yesterday's U. S. Supreme Court decision upholding the constitutionality of the Hyde Language restricting the use of federal funds for abortion to cases involving a threat to the mother's life.

"The Supreme Court has vindicated the taxpayer's right to choose not to fund abortion, the killing of innocent human beings," she said. "This decision preserves the separation of powers fundamental to our system of constitutional government by maintaining the sole power of Congress to appropriate and regulate federal money. It is tragic that the will of the people was frustrated by the federal courts in this area, even temporarily. State and federal funds have been needlessly and wrongly used to take the lives of the unborn. We should never again permit any court to exercise such power.

"As far as danger to the health of women is concerned, the decision is a positive step. The Center for Disease Control in HEW recently reconfirmed its 1979 findings that restriction on the availability of funds for abortion did not result in any increase in complication from illegal or self-induced abortions. Women denied a public subsidy for abortions are carrying their pregnancies to term.

Yesterday's decision has coalesced all Right to Life groups to intensify our efforts to restore legal protection to each human being from the moment of fertilization and without regard to age, health or condition of dependence."

Randolph Scott Still Worries

NEW YORK (AP) — Old cowboy star Randolph Scott is still a straight-shooter when it comes to his opinions.

"I love America. We're a great country. That's why I am for Ronald Reagan. Of all the candidates, I think he's the best," Scott said in an interview in today's New York Daily News.

Scott, now 83, lives in near-seclusion in Beverly Hills, Calif.: "I'm a very private man."

He says he has never counted himself as a friend of Reagan's. "In 14 years at Warner's I saw him a few times. But I like what he stands for."

The hero in numerous western movies for 32 years, Scott is reportedly a millionaire through wise investments. But he still worries about the economy.

"Congress has got to learn to curb its spending" in order to control inflation, he said. "We need welfare, but we must cut down on the abuses."

Adds A Name To Newborn Son

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. says his 2-week-old son, who went for four days without a name, now has an added moniker.

The boy — the first child of Brown by his second wife, former Miss America Phyllis George Brown — was named Lincoln George Brown.

However, Mrs. Brown also liked the name Tyler and it has now been added to the boy's middle name with a hyphen. Thus the governor's new offspring is now Lincoln George-Tyler Brown.

Brown said he is calling his son Linc; his wife is calling him Ty.

N.C. Recruiting Said Increasing

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A sagging economy is boosting U.S. Army recruiting efforts, say North Carolina recruiters.

"We've had a heck of an increase," said Staff Sgt. William W. Niccum in the Army recruiting office in Greensboro. "June was a boom month — we had 32 enlistments, compared to 12 in June of '79. It's our best month this year by far."

Niccum said the increase is directly related to the deepening recession. He said the recruits are "mostly non-high school graduates who have lost their jobs, and high school graduates who can't find jobs."

Although June, July and August traditionally have been slow months for military recruiting, Niccum said signs indicate the current level of enlistment may continue through the summer.

"The number of prospects and leads that we're checking right now is up, and the number of walk-ins are keeping up," Niccum said.

Innocent Plea In Boobytrap Death

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Gary Ratcliff has pleaded innocent to a reckless homicide charge in the death of a teen-ager killed by a booby trap that Ratcliff erected at his mobile home to foil burglars.

After repeated burglaries in his Romney home, Ratcliff loaded a mixture of shot and rock salt into a shotgun and rigged it so it would fire if an intruder opened the front door, authorities said.

Robert Sullivan, 16, of Stockwell was killed June 10 when he apparently tried to jimmy the door to Ratcliff's home, police said. Ratcliff, who is also charged with battery with a deadly weapon, goes on trial Sept. 15.

Marijuana On Abandoned Boat

BALTIMORE (AP) — An abandoned 41-foot sailboat has yielded 5,260 pounds of marijuana, but no suspects, authorities say.

Coast Guard crewmen found the two-masted boat adrift off the Eastern Shore Saturday without anyone on board. Customs Service spokesman James Mahan estimated the drug's street value at $3.3 million.

"It was loaded to the rafters. The cabin was full. They couldn't have had many people aboard," he said of the boat, which displayed the name Green Sea and the homeport of Georgetown, Cayman Islands, with stick-on letters. Painted on the vessel but covered up was the name Free Spirit.

Believe Florida Fish Kill Ended

MIAMI (AP) — Authorities believe the fish kill that began June 19 and spread from the upper Florida Keys to West Palm Beach is over.

There have been no reports of dead or dying fish since last Wednesday, although some fish who died earlier have washed ashore since then. But officials said the cause of the kill is still unknown. The first dead fish were reported four days after fishermen discovered several barrels containing the highly toxic pesticide toxaphene floating in the ocean off Key Largo.

Reese Hart Is Elected Ass'n Prexy

Reese Hart, executive director of the Pitt County Development Commission, was elected president of the North Carolina Industrial Developers Association during the annual meeting held at Boone recently.

His term is for one year.

The 325-member organization is the professional association in the state for industrial developers, industrial realtors, economic development representatives and members of the staff of the industrial development division of the N. C. Department of Commerce.

See Gold Theft As Inside Job

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The theft of more than $1.5 million in Krugerrands from Brinks Inc. apparently was an inside job, company officials say.

Spokesman Edward Leneman said Monday the security firm is questioning a number of workers but is especially interested in talking to one who left work Friday and has not been hzard from since.

N.C. Job Freeze Is Extended

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt extended his partial freeze on state hiring for another year.

Hunt ordered most jobs frozen last September. That order was to have expired Monday, with the close of the fiscal year.

"With the economic situation as it is today, I have decided that we must keep the restriction on the number of government employees," Hunt said.

State budget officials said Monday there are 3,200 state jobs vacant as a result of the freeze on non-essential employment.

CARS COLLIDE

Cars driven by Samuel Robert Brooks of 1609 Longwood Dr. and Eric Marvin Wade of Glendale Court, collided about 10:20 a.m. yesterday on Tenth Street, 50 feet from the Dickinson Avenue intersection.

Police Department investigators estimated damage from the collision at $400 to the Brooks cr and $200 to the Wade vehicle.

A memorial service was held at the Methodist Home today at 10 a.m. by the Rev. Harold D. Flood, staff chaplain. A graveside service will be held in the Grifton Cemetery Wednesday at 2 p.m. by the Rev. C.H. Overman.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. John J. McDonnell of Rosemont, Pa.; a son, Herbert L. Garris of Arlington, Va.; a sister, Mrs. John C. Dawson of Ayden; and two brothers, Dr. Quincy Mumford of Washington, D.C. and Dr. Bruton Mumford of Norcross, Ga.

In lieu of flowers, memorials may be sent to the United Methodist Home, Belmont and Monument Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa. 19131. Local arrangements are by Farmer Funeral Home.

Porter

Mrs. Ada Hardee Porter, 77, died Sunday. The funeral service was conducted at 4 p.m. Tuesday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Sam L. Whichard of Whiteville and the Rev. J. Doner Lee of Falcon. Burial was in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Mrs. Porter spent all her life in Pitt County and was a member of the Winterville Pentecostal Holiness Church.

She is survived by her husband, Ola Porter; two sons: Ola Linwood Porter of Greenville and Franklin Sam Porter of Rt. 2, Greenville; two daughters: Mrs. Troy Lee Jones of Rt. 2, Greenville and Mrs. Edith Forbes of Merritt Island, Fla.; four brothers: Charlie Hardee, Larry Hardee, Walter Hardee and Linwood Hardee, all of Greenville; a sister, Mrs. Walter Williams of Greenville; nine grandchildren; and nine great grandchildren.

Shelly

FARMVILLE — Mr. Herbert Shelly died Monday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. He was the husband of Mrs. Ada Shelly of the home and the brother of Mrs. Lena Joyner of Farmville. Funeral arrangements are incomplete at Hemby Funeral Home in Fountain.

Initially, the board requested from the county commisioners a total of $318,281.00 in capital outlay funds. The amount recommended by Reginald Gray, City Manager, was $237,811.02. County commisioners have tentatively approved an amount of $156,962.71 for the 1980-81 captial outlay budget, about $6,000 less than last year's budget. Cox said that it's about the same budget dollar wise. He commented that $100,000 will be going into capital expenses for the school system next year.

The roofing of Rose High School and heating of Aycock Junior High School were main concerns of board members.

$3,000 has been tentatively approved for roofing repairs at Rose when $15,000 was requested by the Board of Education. Terry Shank was concerned with not keeping up with repair needs and revisions so that buildings can't be maintained adequately. Cox agreed and commented that "If this continues, at some point and time it will catch up with us."

As for Aycock, $25,000 was requested by the board of education for the school's heating, including air conditioning, while $10,000 was tentatively approved by county commisioners. This amount includes two units for the building.

Cox said a detailed allowance on current expense will be started today. He also noted, "We're working on a changing level rather than cutting out services."

The next meeting, the monthly informational meeting, will be held July 21.

Pitt Sweeps Series From Washington

WASHINGTON — Mark Shank, Roger Williams and Jeff Wilson all drove in two runs and pitcher Doug McRoy scattered seven hits as Pitt County blasted Washington, 12-3, Monday night to advance to the second round of the Area I East American Legion playoffs.

Pitt County will face the winner of the Rocky Mount-Snow Hill series, which is tied at 1-1, beginning this Friday night. The best two-of-three series will open Friday in Greenville, with the second game set for Saturday at either Rocky Mount or Snow Hill. A third game, if necessary, would be held in Greenville Sunday.

After a scoreless first inning, Pitt County got rolling Monday night with three runs in the second and third. Will Barrett walked to lead off the second and then stole second. Williams walked and Mark Douglas singled to load the bases. Skip Hill then grounded out, scoring Barrett. Williams scored when Doug McRoy reached on an error. Douglas then came home on Shank's single and Pitt County led, 3-0.

With one gone in the third Barrett walked, stole second and scored on Williams' single. Williams was forced at second on Douglas' fielder's choice. Hill then reached on an error to give the Pitt runners on first and third. Wilson singled home Douglas and a wild pitch allowed Hill to score, giving Pitt County a 6-0 lead.

Washington narrowed the gap to 6-3 with three runs in the third but Pitt County put it away with four runs in the fifth. Barrett doubled to lead off the inning and then scored on Williams' triple.

Douglas' single scored Williams moments later. After two ground outs, which moved Douglas to third, McRoy singled his teammate home. Shank subsequently doubled home McRoy, putting Pitt County up 10-3.

Post 39 added single runs in the eighth and ninth for its final total. In the eighth, Shank led off by reaching on an error and then stealing second. He scored with two outs on Barrett's single.

In the ninth, Douglas singled to lead off, moved to second on Bob Hemingway's single and went to third on a Washington double play. He scored on an error by the centerfielder.

Shank and Douglas had three hits for Pitt County while Barrett and Williams had two. Washington was led by pitcher Vic Walls, who was two-for-four.

Defeats Curren, 7-5, 7-6, 7-6

McEnroe Wins, In Quarterfinals

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — John McEnroe won a tiebreaker in cold and damp conditions Tuesday to complete a 7-5, 7-6, 7-6 victory over Kevin Curren of South Africa and moved into the quarterfinals of the Wimbledon tennis championships.

The first two sets were played Monday before heavy rain set in.

The rain continued through the night and morning and play started more than two hours behind schedule. Only two of the 18 courts at the All-England Club were fit for play.

The weather still was miserable. Spectators sat huddled in raincoats and with blankets over their knees. Rain stll was falling lightly when McEnroe and Curren resumed their match.

It continued as on Monday, a serve-and-volley duel with few rallies going to more than two or three strokes.

●

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Youth and experience locked horns at Wimbledon Monday. Honors ended up about even.

Andrea Jaeger, just 26 days beyond her 15th birthday, carried the flag for youth, trouncing Virginia Wade, the experienced 1977 champion, 6-2, 7-6.

Tracy Austin, something of a veteran at 17-years-old, joined Jaeger in the last eight of the women's singles by defeating 24-year-old Terry Holladay 6-2, 6-3.

But you can't keep a good oldie down — as Billie Jean King and Evonne Goolagong proved just before Jaeger started to frustrate Wade and the partisan center court crowd.

King, 36, winner of a record 20 Wimbledon titles, clawed her way back from the brink of defeat to oust 17-year-old Pam Shriver 5-7, 7-6, 10-8 in a 2 hours 40 minutes thriller on the bumpy court number two.

Goolagong, the 1971 champion, lost the first set to the impressive 18-year-old Hana Mandlikova but recovered to win 6-7, 6-3, 6-1.

Jaeger, the youngest Wimbledon seed ever, displayed a maturity far beyond her years in matching Wade, then overpowering her.

"She was probably more nervous than me," the chirpy schoolgirl said afterward.

Wade, however, felt that it is too early to talk of Jaeger as a possible Wimbledon champion.

"Not this year, I don't think she is ready yet," said the British player.

"Andrea is fast, hits the ball early, has good timing and changes pace well. But she plays quite a few "nothing balls" and if I had played well I would have beaten her," Wade added.

"I don't think Andrea could possibly beat Chris Evert Lloyd."

Jaeger meets the two-time Wimbledon champion in the quarterfinals.

King, as gutsy as ever, saw Shriver throw away five points for a 5-2 lead in the final of their taut, sometimes ill-tempered match.

"Pam was serving so well that for a time she was dominating me," King said. "She is resilient and kept control of her emotions."

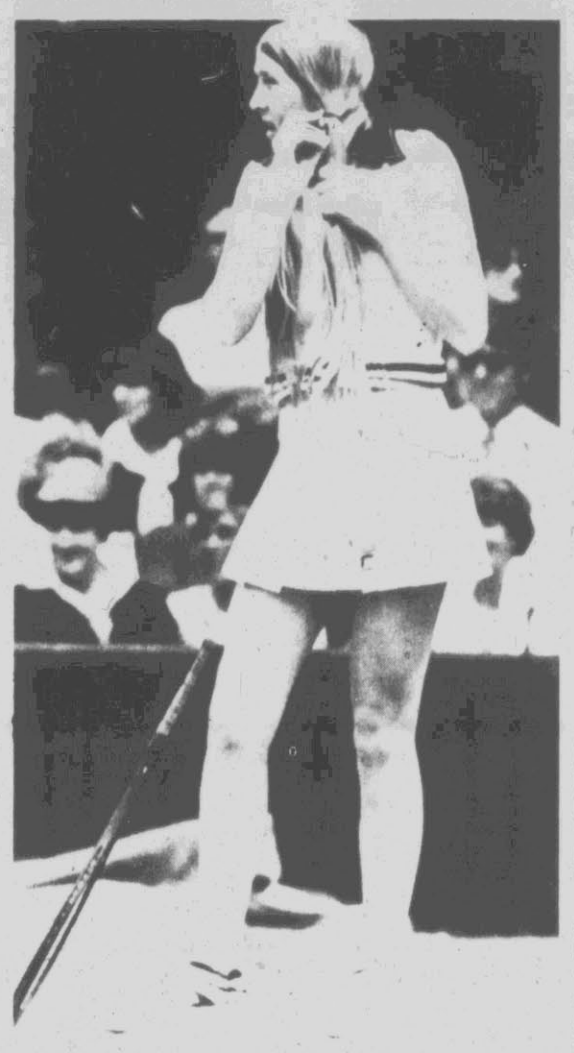

The women's quarterfinal lineup (seeding positions in brackets):

Martina Navratilova (1) vs. Billie Jean King (5)

Tracy Austin (2) vs. Greer Stevens (11)

Chris Evert Lloyd (3) vs. Andrea Jaeger (14)

Evonne Goolagong (4) vs. Wendy Turnbull (6).

Making An Adjustment

Andrea Jaeger rests her racquet on her leg as she takes time out to adjust her hair Monday during her fourth round singles match against Britain's Virginia Wade at Wimbledon, England. The 15-year-old Jaeger defeated the former champion, 6-2, 7-6, on Centre Court. (AP Laserphoto)

Rocky Mount, Snow Hill Even

SNOW HILL — Snow Hill banged out 15 hits, nine more than did Rocky Mount, but came out on the short end of a 5-4 score last night. The Rocky Mount win evened up the best-of-three Area I East playoff series at one game each.

The deciding game will be played tonight at Tarboro, with the winner advancing into the next round against regular season winner Pitt County. That series starts in Greenville on Friday.

Snow Hill scored first, getting a run in the opening inning. Walt Tyndall singled and Al Murray got a hit. Kevin Battle then singled Tyndall over.

Rocky Mount came back with two in the second, moving ahead. Timmy Tucker doubled, and David Downes slammed a two-run homer.

Snow Hill returned to the lead with a pair of runs in the third. Billy McLawhorn singled and Murray got a hit, driving in McLawhorn. Battle singled and Jeff Scott walked. A base hit by Allen Corbett brought Murray in for a 3-2 lead.

Both teams pushed over single runs in the fourth to make it 4-3.

Then, in the fifth, Rocky Mount pushed in two more, taking the lead for good. John Kennedy walked and Bill Wilkes singled. Kevin Bunn singled, and an error on the play let Kennedy score. Bill Merrifield walked and Bruce Ellis reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Wilkes.

In the ninth inning, Snow Hill put runners on second and third with only one out, but an infield out and a line-drive ended the game. The liner was caught in left field at shoe-top level to end the Snow Hill hopes of a sweep.

Tucker led the Rocky Mount hitting with three, while Murray led Snow Hill with four. Tyndall added three, while McLawhorn, Battle and Jabo Fulghum each had two.

Goldsboro Wins To Even Series

WILLIAMSTON — Goldsboro's American Legion baseball team evened its best-of-three series with Williamston at a game each last night, gaining a 7-2 victory.

The two meet tonight in the final game of the series, at Southern Wayne High School, with the winner meeting the survivor of the Wilson-Edenton series staring Friday. The next round will also be a best-of-three series.

Goldsboro scored first, getting a run in the third. Greg Grantham reached on an error and Dave Frederick walked. Dave Thomas reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Grantham.

Williamston tied it up with one in the fourth. Steve Wallace got a double and Trent Ange singled him in.

Goldsboro went back ahead with one in the fifth, then sewed it up with three in the sixth. With two away in the sixth, Mike Winbush walked. Grantham singled and Frederick doubled, scoring Winbush. Thomas then singled, driving in both Grantham and Frederick.

Goldsboro added two more in the eighth, while Williamston also got a run in the eighth.

Thomas, Craig Brown and Grantham each had two hits to lead Goldsboro. Wallace had three to pace Williamston.

Little For British To Cheer About Right Now

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — John Bull is a tough old codger. He's survived bombings and wars. He drinks his whiskey straight and gulps down his stout by the pints. He will bet his week's pay on the landing of a fly.

His veins pump with red sporting blood and he wears his fierce national pride on his sleeve.

When Virginia Wade — "Our Ginny" — loses at Wimbledon, for instance, the final British remnant in these hoary tennis championships, as she did Monday, you can hear the groans and moans from the Channel to the raging North Sea.

On the other hand, when a pug-nosed British fighter named Alan Minter turns an American challenger's features into mincemeat while defending the undisputed world middleweight crown, as he did Saturday night, the exultation lasts for days.

If it hadn't been for Minter, a popular restaurant owner from nearby Crawley, old John Bull might just have raced out to the nearest pub and got himself stinkingly loaded.

It's been that kind of a summer for the proud but famished British.

Their national soccer team, qualifying for the first time in 12 years, has failed to make the final four in the European championship. The British rugby team has lost three straight tests to South Africa. In cricket, the natives are getting clobbered by the West Indies.

It's been another embarrassing Wimbledon. No British male got past the second round in mens' singles. In ladies' singles, only Wade, the 1977 champion, won more than a single match.

Seek Room For Players

Greenville will be playing host to the State Senior Babe Ruth League tournament this month, and accomodations are being sought for the young men who will be participating in the event.

The tournament is scheduled for July 18-22, and five outside teams, including about 90 youths will be traveling to Greenville and needing housing.

Host families will be responsible for room, meals and transportation to and from the tournament games or practice. Teams will leave as soon as they have been eliminated fro the double-elimination field. They will be arriving on Thursday, July 17.

Anyone wishing to be a host family should contact Robert L. Dough, at 756-5128.

American League All-Stars

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn announced Monday that the starting lineup for the American League All-Star team will be Milwaukee Brewers Paul Molitor, Boston Red Sox Fred Lynn, Carlton Fisk and Jim Rice; California Angels Rod Carew, Kansas City Royals George Brett and New York Yankees Reggie Jackson and Bucky Dent. (AP Laserphoto)

Rod Carew Leads Selections For American League All-Star Team

NEW YORK (AP) — Rod Carew of the California Angels heads the injury-plagued American League All-Star starting lineup announced Monday by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Carew, California's first baseman, was named to the starting team for the 11th consecutive year and received 3,674,247 votes, tops for any AL player.

Three of the players who won starting berths in the AL voting currently are on the disabled list and may miss the game against the National League scheduled for July 8 in Los Angeles. They are Milwaukee second baseman Paul Molitor, Kansas City third baseman George Brett and Boston outfielder Jim Rice.

A fourth starter, New York Yankee shortstop Bucky Dent, was removed from the disabled list Monday.

Besides Rice, outfielders named were Reggie Jackson of the Yankees and Boston's Fred Lynn.

In the closest race on the ballot, Boston's Carlton Fisk won the catching job over Darrell Porter of Kansas City.

Carew, 34, never has missed a starting berth in his career, a remarkable achievement. The seven-time batting champion whose .342 average is second in the AL right now, was named as the starting second baseman for six years and has been elected as the starting first baseman for five consecutive years.

He led runner-up Cecil Cooper of Milwaukee by more than 2 million votes, 3,674,247-1,637,173 in the final accounting of the computer card vote sponsored by Gillette.

Molitor, sidelined with a pulled muscle in his rib cage, received 2,454,941 votes to 1,600,750 for runner-up Bobby Grich of California. Dent (2,086,177) outpolled Robin Yount of Milwaukee (1,642,330) to win the shortstop job. The Yankee infielder has been out of action with a badly cut hand.

Both Molitor and Dent were elected as starters for the first time in their careers.

Brett was the second most popular player in the AL vote, winning the third base post with 3,335,095 votes to 1,789,519 for Graig Nettles of the Yankees. It was his fifth consecutive selection but he is doubtful because of a bad wrist.

Jackson, third throughout the voting, came on in the final week to lead all AL outfielders with 2,829,119. It is his seventh All-Star selection. Lynn (2,648,788) and Rice (2,142,549) both started last year's game. Rice has a wrist injury and may not play.

Fisk has had a bad elbow which has restricted his catching this season. The veteran Boston receiver, who received 2,642,846 votes, was named a starter for the fifth time, edging Porter (2,215,885).

The National League starters will be announced Tuesday with the pitchers and remaining members of the 28-man squads to be named by Managers Chuck Tanner of the National League and Earl Weaver of the American League later this week.

Sr. Babe Ruth League

Farmville 13-9, Ayden-Grifton 2-4

LITTLEFIELD — Farmville gained a sweep of a doubleheader against Ayden-Grifton last night, winning the opener, 13-2 and taking the nightcap, 9-4, in Senior Babe Ruth League action.

In the opener, Lewis Yelverton hurled the victory. Greg Hardison and Billy Bunting led the Farmville hitting with three each. Hardison's included a triple and a double, while Bunting had a pair of doubles. No one else for either team had more than one hit.

In the second game, Bill McCracken got the victory on the mound. Mike Tugwell led the Farmville hitting with two, and was the game's lone hitter with more than one.

Winterville 12, Williamston 3

WILLIAMSTON — Winterville rolled up a 12-3 victory over Williamston in a cross-divisional Senior Babe Ruth League game last night.

Miccah Dixon was the winning pitcher, and added two hits, including a triple. Jeff Cox also had two, with a double, while Pony Credle and Sammy Tucker had two singles. No one had more than one hit for Williamston.

S. Pitt Little League

Hornets 5, Chicod 2

GRIFTON — The Chicod Hornets downed Chicod to gain the Southern Pitt Little Leauge's post-season tournament championship last night. The Hornets had won Division II, while Chicod had captured the Division I series.

Rusty Dixon got the victory for the Hornets, who were led in htting by Shane Adams and Bryan Evans, both with two hits. No one had more than one for Chicod.

The game wound up the season for the league.

Babe Ruth League

Planters Bank 2, Aaction Movers 1

Planters Bank, the regular season champion, moved into the finals of the Babe Ruth Post-Season Tournament with a 2-1 victory over Aaction Movers last night. Planters is the lone unbeaten in the field.

The game took two extra innings to decide as Kenny Kirkland and Jeff Wilson kept a pitching duel going strong.

Finally, in the ninth, Planters pushed over two runs. Kirkland walked to open the inning, and was sacrificed up. Calvin Bradley reached on a two-base error, and Jon Langley sacrificed, scoring Kirkland. Chip Cayton then singled, scoring Bradley with what proved to be the winning run.

Aaction then came back to score once in the bottom of the inning, but was unable to tie it up.

No one had more than one hit for either team.

Aaction Movers 10, Wachovia Bank 0

Aaction Movers kept its title hopes alive in the Babe Ruth League tournament with a 10-0 victory over Wachovia Bank last night. The win moved Aaction in to the finals of the double-elimination tournament against regular season champ Planters Bank. Wachovia is now eliminated.

Aaction got all it needed in the first, scoring five times. Jeff Wilson led off with a single and stole second, moving to third on a wild pitch. Billy Godley walked and Bill Owens singled, scoring Wilson. Owens stole second and Rudy Stalls singled in both runners. Stalls moved up on an out and scored on an error. Daryl Pettis tripled and scored when Mike Walsh reached on an error.

Aaction added one in the fourth and four more in the sixth.

Owens and Stalls each had two hits to lead Aaction. Wachovia got only three hits off Owens' hurling.

Prep League

Auto Specialty 4, G. Hardware 3

Auto Specialty gained the finals of the Prep League tournament with a 4-3 win over Greenville Hardware last night. Auto Specialty will now play regular season champ First State Bank for the title. First State Bank is the lone unbeaten in the double elimination field.

The Hardwaremen scored first, with a run in the second. Auto Specialty tied it up with one in the fifth, but the Hardwaremen added two in the sixth for a 3-1 lead. Auto Specialty again knotted it up with two in its half of the frame.

Then, in the seventh, Auto Specialty pushed over the winning run. With two away, Pat Rand walked and stole second. Randy Stevenson singled, scoring Rand with the game-ending run.

No one had more than one hit for either team, as loser Tony Taylor and winner Rand each limited the other team to three hits.

Big Value Drugs 11, First Federal 5

Big Value Drugs pulled off an 11-5 upset of First Federal in the finals of the Tar Heel Little League tournament last night, earning a berth in the City Championships.

Big Value will now meet the Jaycees for the City title, in a best-of-three series starting Wednesday.

Big Value pushed over one in the first, but First Federal came up with two in the bottom of the inning. Big Value again moved ahead with two in the third.

In the fifth, however, the regular season runner-up charged ahead for good, scoring four times for a 7-2 lead. Eric Jarman reached on an error and moved up on a wild pitch. Sterling Edwards walked and Mitch Phillips doubled, scoring Jarman. Frankie Atkinson got a hit, scoring Edwards, and an error moved both runners up. Travis King grounded out, scoring Phillips, and a passed ball let Atkinson come around.

Big Value added four more in the sixth, while First Federal picked up two in the fifth and one in the sixth.

Phillips led the Big Value hitting with two, while Ervin Best and Brian Joyner each had two for First Federal.

Jaycees 7, Coca-Cola 2

The Jaycees, regular-season champions of the North State Little League, added the post-season tournament title to their collection yesterday, downing Coca-Cola, 7-2.

The Jaycees will now meet Big Value Drugs in the City Championship starting Wednesday.

The Jaycees pushed over two in the first inning. Coca-Cola picked up its first run in the top of the third, then saw the Jacyees put the game on ice in the bottom of the third.

Curtis Perkins opened the Jaycee third reaching on an error. Tyrone Jones doubled and Michael Garris singled, scoring both runners. Garris advanced on an out and scored on an error.

The Jaycees added two more in the fourth, as David Lee cracked a two-run homer. The other Coke run came in the fifth.

Lee led the Jaycee hitting with two, while James Matthews had three to pace Coke.

Ailing Tom Seaver Again Rocked As Giants Pound Him, The Reds

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Tom Seaver's problems continue to mount.

The seven-time all-star was rocked for seven hits and five runs in four innings Monday night and tagged with the loss as the San Francisco Giants beat the Cincinnati Reds 8-4. Seaver's record is now 3-5, his earned run average a dismal 4.76.

"I can't keep pitching this way," Seaver said. "I have a sore shoulder and it's not getting any better and it's not going to if I keep pitching.

"It's not frustrating. It's depressing. I love what I do."

In other National League games, the Atlanta Braves beat the Houston Astros 5-4 in 11 innings, the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Montreal Expos 7-5, the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the St. Louis Cardinals 5-4 and the San Diego Padres trimmed the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3.

Milt May hit a three-run homer off Seaver in the first inning and Jack Clark tagged him for a two-run shot in the third as the Giants staked rookie Bill Bordley to an early 5-0 lead. Bordley was making his first appearance since being called up from Phoenix.

Bordley, like Seaver a former college pitching star at Southern Cal, went on to post his first major league victory with relief help from Gary Lavelle, who worked the last three innings to post his third save.

"I didn't know what we'd get out of Bill," Giants Manger Dave Bristol said of Bordley. "He hadn't pitched since June 17. I have to be very pleased with getting six innings out of him tonight."

Braves 5, Astros 4

Jose Cruz tied the game for Houston with a ninth-inning home run and put the Astros ahead with another homer in the 11th, but Glenn Hubbard's two-run homer in the bottom of the 11th gave the victory to Atlanta.

Hubbard credited his homer to a tip from a teammate about the way Astros reliever Joe Sambito was pitching.

"Bob Horner told me before I went to the plate that Sambito's fastball runs away and to look up the middle," Hubbard said. "I looked up the middle and there it was."

And there it went, landing well up in the blue seats behind the left field fence.

Houston Manager Bill Virdon took the loss in stride, as befits the manager of a first-place team. Despite the loss, the Astros still lead second-place Los Angeles by 2½ games in the National League West.

"There's always the chance you'll lose one that way in this stadium," Virdon said of Hubbard's home run. "But there's always the chance you can win one here that way, too."

Phillies 7, Expos 5

Philadelphia scored all its runs in the fourth inning, which was highlighted by a grand slam by Keith Moreland and a two-run homer by Pete Rose. Both came against Montreal starter Bill Gullickson, 0-2, who had difficulty keeping the ball low.

"He was coming up high with everything," said Expos Manager Dick Williams.

Moreland deposited it in the left-field bleachers, and then got a surprise.

"I didn't even know it was a grand slam until I rounded third base and saw everybody standing at home plate," said Moreland of his first career grand slam. "I guess this would be about the biggest thrill of my career."

Pirates 5, Cardinals 4

Tim Foli singled home the winning run in the ninth inning for Pittsburgh, playing its first home game following a 3-9 road trip.

"It sure is good to be home," said Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner. "It seems like we've been away for three months."

Despite the losing road trip, Monday's victory put the Pirates just 2½ games behind first-place Montreal in the N.L. East.

Padres 4, Dodgers 3

Juan Eichelberger and Bob Shirley combined to scatter seven Los Angeles hits and Aurelio Rodriguez singled home Dave Winfield with the winning run for San Diego in the seventh inning. For the Dodgers, Dusty Baker hit his 18th home run and Steve Garvey his 17th.

Dodgers Pace National Stars

NEW YORK (AP) — "Dodger Blue" was the primary color in the National League All-Star starting lineup announced by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn Tuesday as four Los Angeles Dodgers were selected to the mid-season classic.

Second baseman Davey Lopes, the leading vote-getter in the majors, headed the Dodger contingent which includes first baseman Steve Garvey, shortstop Bill Russell and outfielder Reggie Smith.

Joining the four Dodgers on the NL squad for the July 8 game at Los Angeles are catcher Johnny Bench of the Cincinnati Reds; third baseman Mike Schmidt of the Philadelphia Phillies and outfielders Dave Parker of the Pittsburgh Pirates and Dave Kingman of the Chicago Cubs.

"Obviously, we have some outstanding players on this team and the fans have shown it by the way they have backed their club," said Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda.

And did they ever back their club. Twelve players in the senior circuit received over two million votes and seven were Dodgers.

The American League team was announced Monday. It was headed by California first baseman Rod Carew and included Milwaukee second baseman Paul Molitor; Kansas City third baseman George Brett and New York shortstop Bucky Dent and outfielder Reggie Jackson. Boston Red Sox outfielders Fred Lynn and

Field Day Scheduled

The Greenville Moose Lodge will hold its 25th annual field day this Friday, July 4, beginning at 1:30 at the Elm Street Little League Park.

The events will be divided into two groups of Little League ballplayers — 9-10 and 11-12 year olds. The events will include base running, throwing (for accuracy and distance) and hitting. Only one player from each ballclub can be entered in each event in each age group. Trophies will be awarded.

Afterwards, a Pops-Sons All-Star game will be held at 4 p.m. Following that, there will be a picnic at 6 p.m. All the day's activities are free of charge and open to the public.

Brewers Win, But Can't Seem To Gain

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The Milwaukee Brewers keep looking up at the New York Yankees ... both in the American League standings and on the scoreboard.

The Brewers kept winning Monday night, downing the Oakland A's 5-2 for their third victory in a row and ninth in the last 12 games. But the Yankees also kept winning, beating the Boston Red Sox 6-3 for their third in a row and 13th in the last 17. They lead Milwaukee by 5½ games.

"I'll be honest with you, I watch all American League clubs, especially the New York Yankees," said Milwaukee Manager George Bamberger.

The Detroit Tigers are also worth watching these days. They made it 10 of 11 and 15 of 18 by defeating the Cleveland Indians 9-4. Elsewhere, the Minnesota Twins pounded the Kansas City Royals 12-3, the Baltimore Orioles outlasted the Toronto Blue Jays 9-7, the California Angels turned back the Chicago White Sox 10-6 and the Texas Rangers trounced the Seattle Mariners 11-5.

Ben Oglivie knocked in two runs for Milwaukee with his 21st homer and a single and Bill Travers hurled a four-hitter for his seventh victory in 10 decisions. Oglivie tied Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt for the major league home run lead when he connected leading off the second inning.

Oglivie also pleaded guilty to a little scoreboard-watching, but said: "Sometimes I don't think we should be watching the board. I think we should be giving 100 percent in our games."

The Brewers added another run in the second on singles by Mark Brouhard, Jim Gantner and Charlie Moore and scored three times in the third on doubles by Don Money and Cecil Cooper, singles by Gorman Thomas and Oglivie and a sacrifice fly by Sixto Lezcano.

Yankees 6, Red Sox 3

Tommy John struggled to his 11th victory of the season with seventh-inning help from Rich Gossage. The Yankees scored in the first inning on a triple by Willie Randolph and a sacrifice fly by Bobby Murcer. They made it 5-0 in the third when they routed Boston starter Bob Stanley, who had not lost to New York in four previous career decisions. Randolph started it with a walk, Murcer, Graig Nettles, Reggie Jackson and Bob Watson all singled and Bobby Brown delivered a sacrifice fly.

The Red Sox loaded the bases with two out in the bottom of the ninth before Gossage struck out cleanup hitter Tony Perez on three fast balls.

"That's the best I can throw," Gossage said. "Anytime you can get velocity and hit the corners you are going to win."

"That's the fastest I've seen anybody pitch to me this season," said Perez.

Tigers 9, Indians 4

Richie Hebner drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single to key a six-run seventh inning. Trailing 4-1, the Tigers sent 11 men to the plate against three Cleveland pitchers. Hebner delivered his two-run single off Sid Monge to give Detroit a 5-4 lead. The Tigers reloaded the bases on an intentional walk to Al Cowens after Hebner advanced to second on right fielder Jorge Orta's error. Champ Summers then picked up an RBI on an infield hit and Lance Parrish hit a sarifice fly to close out the scoring in the inning.

Twins 12, Royals 3

John Castino drove in five runs with three singles and his fifth homer to back the strong pitching of Darrell Jackson. Jackson allowed all the Kansas City runs on four hits while striking out seven and walking six before he was relieved by Mike Bacsik to start the eighth. The Twins jumped to a 4-0 lead in the first inning and every run was unearned because of three Kansas City Errors, two by shortstop U.L. Washington. Mike Cubbage and Dave Edwards also homered for Minnesota.

Orioles 9, Blue Jays 7

Steve Stone tied New York's John for the most victories in the league at 11 by hurling seven shutout innings. He allowed five hits before the Blue Jays jumped on Tippy Martinez and Tim Stoddard for seven runs in the final two innings. The Orioles backed Stone with a 15-hit attack, including three by Kiko Garcia and Rich Dauer and a solo home run by Doug DeCinces.

"I'd thrown four straight complete games and my arm got a little tired," said Stone, explaining why he asked out after seven innings. "I didn't think I was going to tie any consecutive complete-game records so I thought it was a good time to take a rest."

Angels 10, White Sox 6

Joe Rudi's tie-breaking two-run pinch single in the ninth inning lifted California to a 10-6 victory over the White Sox, who were guilty of five errors. The Angels loaded the bases in the ninth on a pair of walks and a single by Carney Lansford against Chicago relief ace Ed Farmer before Rudi looped a single to center to break a 6-6 tie. Bobby Grich also added a two-run pinch single for a pair of insurance runs.

Rangers 11, Mariners 5

Rusty Staub's bases-loaded triple was the big blow in a six-run third inning and Dave Roberts hit a two-run homer in the ninth. Ferguson Jenkins was the winner, although he came out in the seventh inning after experiencing soreness in his right elbow. The Rangers teed off on Seattle starter Mike Parrott in the third, handing him his ninth consecutive setback after an opening-game victory.

Minor League Players Get Their Chance

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Player directors of National Football League clubs descend at this time of the year to the strewn fields of minor league or semipro football.

There, in a gloom never penetrated by television cameras, they sift through rosters in search of a prospect overlooked by the NFL, but rarely are they successful.

"It's not likely to happen because the scouting for the draft has become so extensive," says Doug Hafner, the Buffalo Bills' director of pro scouting. "Each club has its own scouts and we have four combines that operate for clubs in the league. They just do such a thorough job scouting for talent coming out of the colleges that very few people are overlooked.

"Still, it happens. We get a lot of calls from guys who haven't played for a few years or who don't have a college background. I recommend that they try out for the their local teams. I try to catch them in June — before we get involved in our camp."

The images of semipro football are myriad: the halfback who runs like a man going down a fire escape, the quarterback who throws a spiral reminiscent of modern art, the linemen who build their girth hoisting beer bottles instead of weights.

But it is helpful to remember that players like wide receiver Lou Piccone of the Bills, center Jeff Van Note of the Atlanta Falcons and the retired Baltimore Colts quarterback Johnny Unitas got started in the hardscrabble world of sandlot play.

"You have to remember that in Unitas' day, there was less opportunity to play," Hafner notes. "There were only eight teams and he was a 17th-round pick, which in our day was about sixth round."

Area Athletes Perform Well

RALEIGH — The State Junior Olympic Track meet was held this past weekend and 11 athletes from the area finished among in the top three to advance to the Southeastern Regional meet in two weeks.

Harry Williams finished first in both the 3,000 meters (9:01) and the 1,500 meters (4:10) to move into the regionals. Also qualifying were Jennifer Newton, who was second in the 1,500 meters (5:26) for 11-12 year olds; Skipper Pacasiso, who was third in the 1,500 meters (4:57); Rodrick Harrell, who was third in the triple jump for 15-16 year olds; Karen Barrett, who was second in the javelin for 13-14 year olds; Rose Lang, who was first in the 400 meters (time not available); Angie Atkinson, who was third in the long jump (5.32 meters) for 15-16 year olds; a boys' 400 and 3,200 meter relay teams and a mile relay team and a girls' 400 reay team.

Pair Win Putt-Putt

Lee Beacham and Danny Harris combined to shoot a three-round score of 75 to win the Monday Night Bestball Tournament at the Greenville Putt Golf Course.

Beacham and Harris grabbed the lead in the first round with a 25 and followed that with rounds of 26 and 24 to finish 33 strokes under par for 54 holes.

Second place went to Carl White and Clay Denhardt with a 79. LaVern Mayo and Henry Beacham finished third with an 85.

Netters Win Match

The Greenville men's ECTA team extended its unbeaten streak to five matches Sunday with a 7-2 victory over Wilson.

Greenville, the league's only undefeated team, closes out the season July 6 against Goldsboro at home at the River Birch Tennis Center.

Dodgers . . .

Jim Rice and catcher Carlton Fisk complete the team.

Lopes, the Dodgers captain, drew 3,862,403 votes to end the three-year reign of Carew as the leading vote-getter for the All-Star Game. Lopes had over two million more votes than Pittsburgh's Phil Garner, his nearest rival at second base.

"I'll be there," said Lopes, who earlier this season felt he wasn't performing up to All-Star caliber. "I'm gratified that many people put the time into voting. It's nice to know you're that popular."

Garvey had the toughest battle although the voting wasn't that close. He had to beat out last year's co-MVP's Willie Stargell of the Pirates and Keith Hernandez of the St. Louis Cardinals — currently leading the National League in batting this season.

Garvey collected 3,009,005 votes — the only other NL player besides Lopes to poll 3 million. Stargell finished with 1,872,434 while Hernandez would up with 1,517,081.

Smith, the NL's second leading batter this season, finished second among the outfielders with 2,283,416. The 35-year-old switch-hitter was a member of six previous All-Star teams. This was his first starting assignment.

Parker topped the outfielders with 2,896,643 votes while Kingman just nipped Dusty Baker of the Dodgers, 2,133,252 to 2,108,727 for the final spot in the outfield.

CRYPTOQUIP 7-1

F Q W H D Z P D F J D P W H Z F Q D J J D F U U J D F O O O F U W

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — CALM SALESMEN CAN CATER TO TOP PROSPECTS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: W equals E

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♡.

The fortunes in bridge ebb and flow — it is a battle of wits, and to triumph, you must be completely alert to opportunities as they arise.

The bidding is worth dwelling on for a moment. South opened one no trump despite the fact that he held a good five-card major in order to save himself rebid problems. After the Stayman convention elicited the fact there was a spade fit, North's hand merited a game invitation — no more, no less. Since South had an absolute maximum because of his fifth spade, he had no second thoughts about accepting.

West led the top of his heart sequence, and declarer won in his hand. Declarer drew trumps in two rounds, ending in dummy, and led a low diamond. That was excellent technique, for if East played second hand low, West would be forced to win the trick, making the club suit safe from attack.

But East was an expert defender. He rose with the ace of diamonds and shifted to the jack of clubs. The tide of battle had swung to the defenders, and they were attacking declarer's soft spot. If South had covered the jack with the queen, West would have won the king and returned a club, and the contract would have been doomed.

Fortunately, declarer was able to take immediate counter measures. He rose with the ace of clubs and led another diamond. West won, but the contract was secure. The queen of clubs was safe from attack, and declarer would sluff a club on a long diamond.

All very well, you say. But what if East has both diamond honors? Declarer is no worse off. When East wins the second diamond he will revert to clubs, and now declarer goes in with the queen. If the finesse would have worked the first time clubs were led, the queen will win now and the contract will still be made. By going up with the ace of clubs on the first round of the suit, declarer guaranteed that, at worst, he would come out even, and at best, he would be a trick ahead.

Two Networks Vying For Jayne

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One needn't be especially perceptive to surmise that when CBS put Jayne Kennedy on its "NFL Today" show a couple of years ago, it wasn't because of her illuminating football banter.

No, Jayne Kennedy is easy on the eyes. Like Phyllis George before her, she is offered as a side dish, a nice little freebee CBS throws in to get the boys to feast at the CBS football table.

Her comically inept football reports (she once read the scores backward), her little-girl-lost bewilderment, amused some, irritated others.

But nobody, nobody mistook her purpose. As a result, it's a little difficult to take her seriously.

Which brings us to the matter at hand, an amusing little brouhaha between NBC and CBS that's almost as rich in comic value as one of Miss Kennedy's "NFL Today" segments. The two networks are fighting over the lovely Miss Kennedy's services.

It seems Miss Kennedy's true ambition is to be an actress, not a sportscaster, but CBS has not been forthcoming in the way of opportunity. The network gave her a few beauty contest gigs, in which she'd stand by a computer and read the judges' scoring, but she wasn't given a chance for a prime time series on CBS.

Enter NBC, and Miss Kennedy's old admirer, George Schlatter, father of "Real People." Schlatter is trying a new populist entertainment on NBC, "Speak Up America," and asked Jayne Kennedy if she'd like to be a regular.

"I told them (CBS) I'd been approached by 'Charlie's Angels' and by George," she says. "They said I should feel free to do other things."

If CBS executives did say that, they quickly changed their minds.

"We have an exclusive contract with Jane," said a CBS lawyer. "Our permission is required for her to work on a continuing series on another network."

It's all well and good that Miss Kennedy has an opportunity, he said, but "she is obliged to a pre-existing arrangement made at a time when she wasn't nationally known. When she came to CBS three years ago, nobody had ever heard of her."

Miss Kennedy has already taped some segments for "Speak Up America," but there is talk at CBS of seeking an injunction to stop her. CBS tells her she couldn't possibly do "Speak Up America" here live on Friday nights, then prepare herself for "NFL Today" live from New York on Sunday morning.

An interesting argument, Schlatter points out, in light of the fact that "NFL Today" host Brent Musberger commutes every week between New York and Los Angeles, where he anchors the local news five nights a week.

"It's the worst kind of sexism," charges Schlatter. "Jane is younger and healthier than Brent, and if he can do it, she can handle it, too. Besides, I can't believe CBS would try to rescind an oral agreement.

"This is a business where entire series go on the air and stay on for years on the basis of verbal agreements, where a tremendous amount of business is done on the basis of verbal agreements. A verbal agreement is an agreement."

CBS seems anxious to resolve this momentous matter out of court, which is perfectly understandable. Imagine having to tell this story to a judge.

A Close Call In Realistic Stunt

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A stunt man staging a car wreck in a Tim Conway-Don Knotts movie got just what he bargained for Monday — and almost more than he was prepared to accept.

Tommy Huff barreled down a road on the famed Biltmore Estate where scenes from the movie "The Privates Eyes" are being shot. He hit a dirt ramp on cue and dropped a 1936 Rolls Royce perfectly into the estate's bass pond.

But at that point the best laid plans of the stunt team went awry. Floorboards expected to break away held firm, the $60,000 car flipped over on its roof and partially imbedded itself in mud.

Nearly 75 crew members and about 40 news media representatives watched as the seconds ticked into a minute. The driver did not reappear as anticipated.

"Get that crane," screamed stunt coordinator Charlie Picerni, who later explained that Huff was "lucky to be alive."

Precuations had been taken to assure that Huff could breathe in the event of being trapped. But there remained the possibility that Huff was pinned and unable to use an air tank in the old and stately vehicle.

Crew members dived into the water an attempted to rescue him, but the front of the car was submerged in mud up to the windows. In a matter of minutes the crane had raised the car from the muddy water.

Huff's limp body could be seen floating against the windshield.

What followed was a succesion of gasps and frantically spoken four-letter words from crew members who feared the worst.

"The car went in the the worst possible way," said Picerni as the Buncombe County rescue squad rushed Huff and crew member Eddy Donno to a Mission Memorial Hospital.

Donno was injured in his frantic dive to save Huff. Huff himself suffered from multiple cuts and shock.

But his first request upon his rescue was not unlike that of stuntmen in those old television cigarette commercials.

"Give me a Marlboro," he said.

Will Distribute Carson Shows

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Columbia Pictures Industries Inc. says it will distribute film and television shows from Johnny Carson's own production company.

The agreement between the "Tonight Show" host and and Columbia was announced Monday.

Columbia will have exclusive rights to distribute all Carson-produced television programs "for a significant period of time," including any NBC-TV shows that result from Carson's new contract with the network, it was announced.

In that deal, industry sources say, NBC has made an estimated $50 million commitment for a minimum of three series over a three-year period, as well as an unspecified number of TV movies.

Eileen Fulton Is Hospitalized

NEW YORK (AP) — The soap opera world is still turning despite the absence of actress Eileen Fulton.

Miss Fulton, who has played Lisa Coleman on the CBS soap opera "As the World Turns" for 20 years, is hospitalized with infectious hepatiois.

Miss Fulton's condition has improved and she is expected to remain in a New York hospital for two weeks, a nurse said.

Govm't Abortion Advocates See 'Total Disaster'

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some opponents of abortion welcomed Monday's Supreme Court decision as the first step toward reversing the court's 1973 ruling that made abortions legal in America.

But "pro-choice" forces called the decision a "total disaster" that would bring back to this country the risky phenomena of self-induced abortions.

In its 5-4 decision, the high court said Congress has the constitutional authority to ban abortion as one of the medical procedures the government will pay for under Medicaid, its program of medical aid for poor people who collect welfare.

Anne Higgins, a spokeswoman for the Ad Hoc Commitee in Defense of Life, publisher of the "Lifeletter" newsletter, said the court's ruling gave "some serious indications that nothing was settled on the abortion issue in 1973."

But Dr. John C. Willke, president of the National Right to Life Committee, another anti-abortion group, said it will still require a constitutional amendment outlawing abortion to achieve his group's purpose. He said the decision revolved around the issue of whether Congress can determine how public funds are spent rather than the question of abortion.

Willke said the effect would be to cause opponents of abortion "to redouble our efforts to restore legal protection to all human beings from the time of fertilization without regard to age, health or condition of dependency."

Janet Benshoof, director of the American Civil Liberties Union's Reproductive Freedom Project, said "for the 300,000 to one million women involved" the court's action was "a total disaster."

"Many women in the United States who are poor are not going to be able to afford to obtain an abortion," she said.

"There will be some states like New York, Michigan and California where the legislature might recognize that it has a duty to not differentiate between the pregnant poor and the rest of the poor and they will. This decision does not preclude a state from doing that."

Another supporter of government funding for abortions, Aviva Futorian of the Chicago Legal Assistance Foundation, said that as a result of the decision, "poor women will be very often forced to choose sterilization or self-induced abortions or God knows what.

"Given the fact that the state (Illinois) already reimburses all other medically necessary procedures and a number of elective procedures including voluntary sterilization, I would have thought our chances were awfully good (in the Supreme Court)," Ms. Futorian said.

Willke said he expected that more states would cut off funds for abortions now that the court had ruled that they may.

"We feel very encouraged that the Constitution has been upheld and that this outrage of forcing people to pay for what is so totally morally repugnant to them has been struck down," he said.

Bishop Thomas Kelly, general secretary of the U.S. Catholic Conference said he welcomes the decision because it leaves intact the laws that restrict use of tax funds to pay for abortions.

"As much as anything else, the ruling today underscores the fact that those who believe in the sanctity of life must redouble their efforts to enact a constitutional amendment that will protect life in all stages of its existence."

Cardinal Terence Cooke of New York, chairman of the U.S. Catholic Bishops' Committee for Pro-Life Activities said "we are still faced with the tragedy of the 1973 Supreme Court decisions which deprived unborn children of protection under the law."

Summer Job Money Is 'Targeted'

WASHINGTON (AP) — In its first national response to the worsening economic recession and the Miami racial riots, the Carter administration plans to spend $96 million to create almost 32,000 additional summer jobs in 31 hard-pressed cities.

White House officials said Monday the money will be used to create 20,267 new summer jobs for youths and 11,711 jobs for adults in public work improvement projects, programs to rehabilitate federal housing and new summer head-start positions.

In addition, the administration said it will speed the distribution of $260 million previously committed to the cities, allowing up to 5,000 jobs to be created sooner than originally planned.

Administration officials, who asked not to be identified, said most of the $96 million for new summer jobs comes from funds unspent in other programs. Some money was shifted from lower priority projects, they said.

President Carter first ordered federal departments to search for available money for jobs in early June, following the May riots in Miami and a sharp jump in the national unemployment rate from 6.2 percent in March to 7.8 percent in May.

The new steps fall far short of the multi-billion-dollar anti-recession programs proposed by organized labor, urban groups and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who is challenging Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination. Kennedy has called for spending $12 billion to create more than 800,000 jobs.

Here are the 31 cities chosen by the administration for the additional funds, with the amount of money each city will receive and the number of new summer jobs expected to be created:

Birmingham, Ala., $441,000 for 278 jobs; Mobile, Ala., $164,000 for 174 jobs; San Francisco, $847,000 for 551 jobs; Sacramento, Calif., $719,000 for 392 jobs; Los Angeles, $5,247,000 for 2,188 jobs; Oakland, Calif., $2,115,000 for 791 jobs; Washington, D.C., $4,263,000 for 1,679 jobs; Miami, $2,536,000 for 1,204 jobs.

Atlanta, $10,909,000 for 431 jobs; Chicago, $9,428,000 for 3,939 jobs; Indianapolis, $5,308,000 for 740 jobs; Gary, Ind., $2,008,;00 for 897 jobs; New Orleans, $347,000 for 300 jobs; Baltimore, $859,000 for 911 jobs; Boston, $4,850,000 for 1,148 jobs; Flint, Mich., $984,000 for 332 jobs; Detroit, $12,962,000 for 2,213 jobs.

St. Louis, $1,764,000 for 499 jobs; Jersey City, N.J., $198,000 for 160 jobs; Newark, $4,055,000 for 1,178 jobs; Paterson, N.J., $880,000 for 353 jobs; Buffalo, $887,000 for 363 jobs; New York City, $12,044,000 for 5,258 jobs; Toledo, Ohio, $662,000 for 332 jobs; Cincinnati, $8,518,000 for 1,047 jobs; Cleveland, $3,584,000 for 1,244 jobs; Dayton, Ohio, $528,000 for 258 jobs.

Philadelphia, $3,949,000 for 1,511 jobs; Pittsburgh, $1,415,000 for 515 jobs; El Paso, Texas, $319,000 for 227 jobs; San Antonio, Texas, $1,750,000 for 891 jobs.

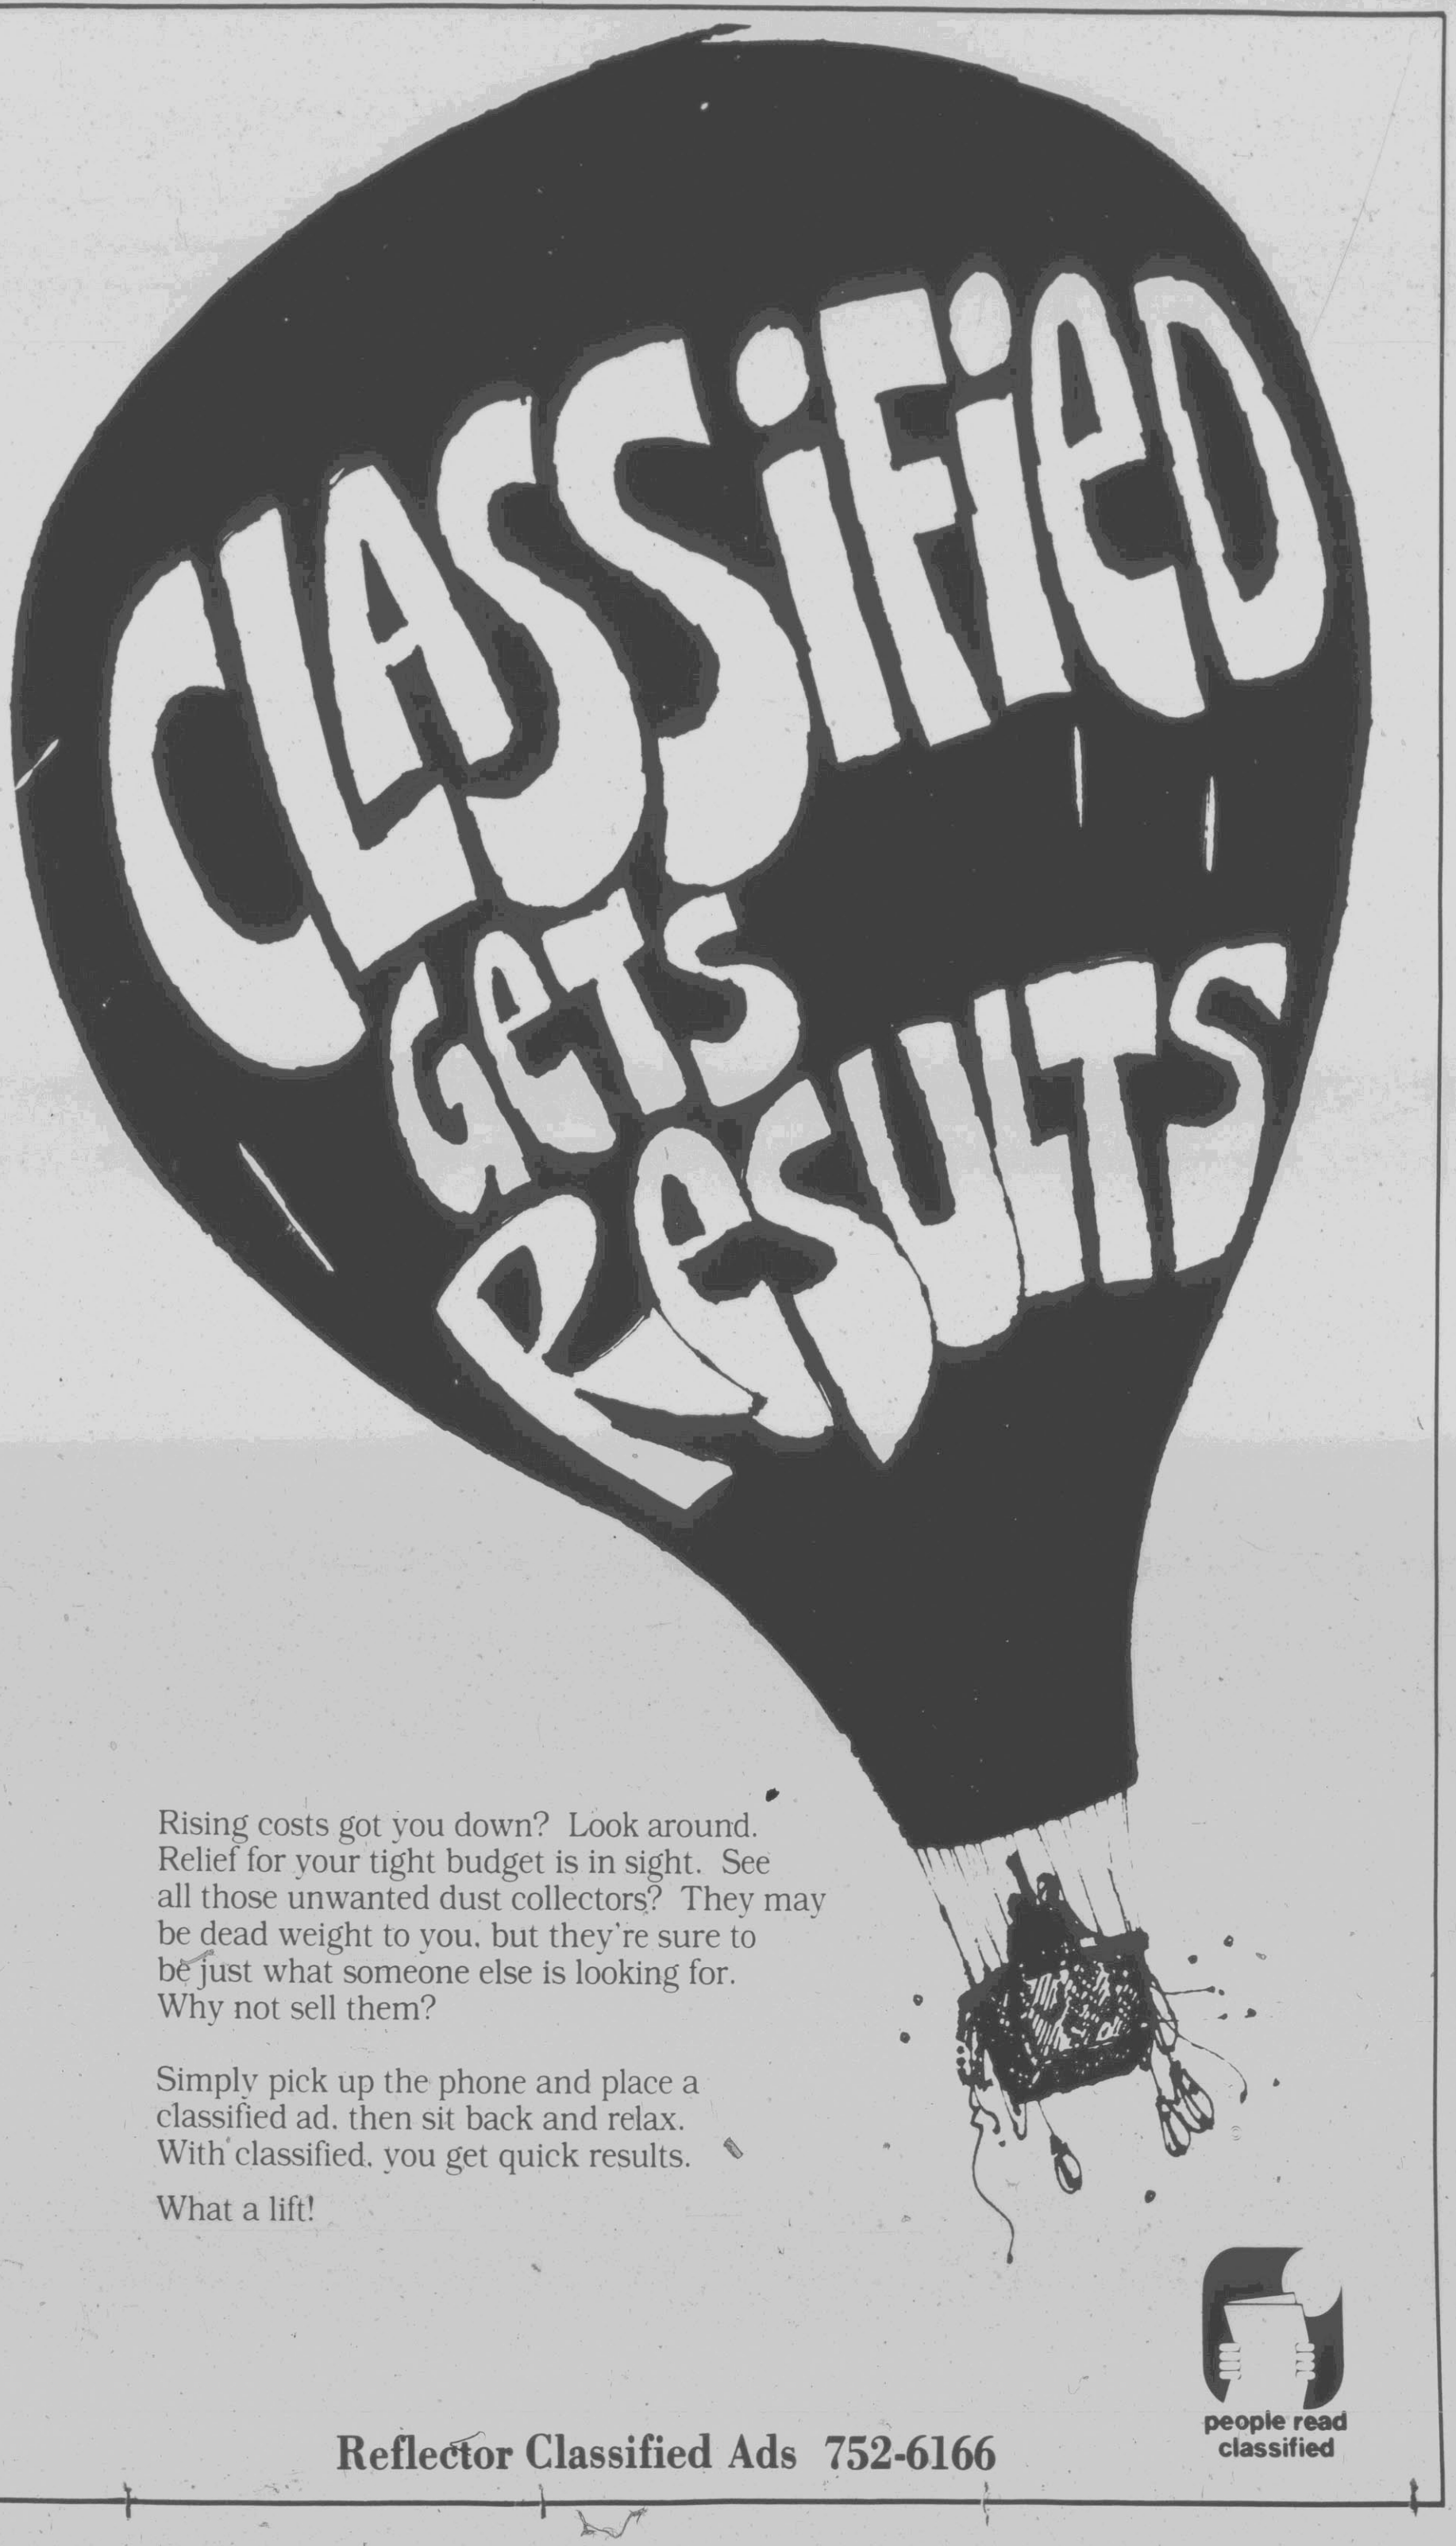

Church Plans Hold Revival

Revival services will be held at the Meadowbrook Pentecostal Holiness Church beginning Wednesday evening and continuing through Sunday, July 6.

The guest evenagelist will be the Rev. Philip Lewis of Lowland.

Services will begin each evening at 7:30. The evangelist and his family will be rendering special singing. Local groups will also be presenting special singing.

The pastor, Rev. Philip Bland, and the congregation invite the public to attend.

Death Chair To Remain Unused

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia's electric chair will remain dormant at least until next spring if Jack Potts is allowed to resume his appeals — and Potts won't be its victim then, says a close observer of Georgia death penalty cases.

The federal appeals of Alpha Otis Stephens, also known as James Daniels, are nearer completion than another death appeal in Georgia, said Patsy Morris, who monitors the status of death cases for the American Civil Liberties Union of Georgia.

"If everything goes wrong for Stephens, if he loses all appeals, it would be the end of May or June next year," said Mrs. Morris.

Stephens was convicted of murder in the August 21, 1974 killing of Macon contractor Roy Asbell, who was slain when he encountered burglars at the home of his son.

Stephens was a fugitive from prison at the time. He had previously been convicted of murder, kidnapping, robbery, burglary and auto theft.

Georgia's electric chair has not been used since 1964, but it had been prepared for the execution of Potts, convicted of the 1975 kidnap-murder of Roswell auto mechanic Michael Priest.

But Potts, who had asked to be put to death, escaped the electrocution, scheduled today, by asking for the second time in a month to renew his appeals.

A federal judge refused, but that decision has been appealed and it will be at least a month before arguments are heard. If Potts is allowed to renew his appeals — which his attorneys say is likely — it would be years before his legal manuevers are exhausted.

Stephens' appeals are almost complete, having been argued before the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Attorneys are awaiting a decision, Mrs. Morris said.

If Stephens loses in the appeals court, he will have one more chance in the U.S. Supreme Court, Mrs. Morris said.

The appeals process can include up to three trips to the U.S. Supreme Court on several motions, she said.

Post Office Closed Fri.

The Greenville Post Office and ECU Station will close in observance of Independence Day, Friday, July 4. The following services will be provided:

No deliveries will be made by rural or city carriers. No window service will be provided. Mail will be delivered to post office boxes. Special delivery mail will be delivered within the city. A special 3 p.m. holiday collection will be made from all collection boxes that have any specified time indicated on side of box. This collection of mail will be dispatched at 5:30 p.m. The self service postal unit located in the lobby of the Main Post Office will supply customers with most postal supplies, and permit them to mail parcels.

Retail Milk Prices Rise

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Retail milk prices went up 10 cents per gallon Monday as supermarkets began passing on to consumers the effects of a new pricing formula for raw milk.

Big Star Foods and A&P, both major supermarkets with stores throughout North Carolina, raised the price for a gallon of whole milk to $2.09. Big Star said the cost of half-gallon containers would increase by 5 cents and quarters would go up 2 cents.

Their action is expected to be followed by other food stores.

In January, Big Star cut its prices 26 cents a gallon in Raleigh stores, reducing the cost from $2.25 to $1.99, where it had remained until Monday.

Giles M. Sheffield, regional grocery merchandising manager for Big Star, said supermarkets have absorbed all price increases since January and did not pass them on to the consumer.

"It's unfortunate that we have to charge more for milk, but we have just absorbed all the price increases that we can," Sheffield said.

The new milk-pricing formula was approved by the North Carolina Milk Commission in May. Based on production and cost of living factors, the change has added 3.4 cents per gallon to the price paid farmers for raw milk.

Heat Waves Among Nature's Cruelest Phenomena

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The heat wave, such as the one that has baked Texas for more than a week, is one of nature's cruelest phenomena. In an average year, 175 Americans die from the heat.

And that government estimate, which hardly reflects the suffering of millions as temperatures reach the ugly levels, notes only "the direct casualties.

"No one can know how many deaths are advanced by heat-wave weather — how many diseased or aging hearts surrender that under better conditions would have continued function," reflects Carl Posey of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Heat is a normal part of summer, as the advancing sun pushes back the polar air and replaces it with warm, moist air spun off the tropical ocean.

As the continent warms, the jet stream, the high-level winds that steer the weather, shifts north. And when it moves too far north, or when a high pressure system becomes stubborn, hot dry air from the Southwest is sucked into an area, creating a heat wave — an interval of unrelieved high temperatures — that can live in human memory the way fierce winters do in the north.

Perhaps the worst U.S. heat waves were during the Depression years. Progressively more severe summers occurred in 1930, 1934 and 1936.

That miserable summer of 1936 saw highs of 121 degrees Farenheit in North Dakota and Kansas, and 120 in South Dakota, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas.

Worse was the death toll. The heat wave of '36 is blamed for nearly 5,000 deaths, and the toll for 1930 through 1936 has been estimated at 15,000 fatalities.

A Great Plains heat wave in 1901 was blamed for 9,508 deaths, and there were heavy toils in the early 1950s (1,401 deaths in 1952, 978 in 1954) and in more distant heat waves, in 1830 and 1860.

Basically, heat kills by taxing the body beyond its abilities to adjust.

The body tries to maintain a relatively constant temperature by varying the rate and depth of blood circulation, by losing water through the skin and sweat glands and, when all else fails, by panting.

Normally these reflex actions are controlled by the brain's hypothalmus, which is sent into action when it senses blood heated above 98.6 degrees. The heart pumps more blood, the blood vessels dilate and blood circulates closer to the skin. At the same time water diffuses through the skin to cool by evaporation.

As the air temperature nears that of the body, the ability of the body to cool itself lessens and discomfort is replaced by danger. Diffusing heat from surface blood vessels no longer works and sweating is the only means of cooling. If there is high humidity, the sweat won't evaporate and the problems get worse.

When the normal limits of cooling are exceeded by very much for very long the human does not doze like a reptile, it dies.

Summer death rates are normally lower than in winter, but a heat wave can change that dramatically. Take 1975 as an example, a year William Hodge of the National Climatic Center has studied carefully.

A severe heat wave hit the Northeast in the first four days of August and 1,500 to 2,000 more people died in that period than would normally have been expected.

Strangely, Hodge commented, such a toll is taken as a matter of course.

"One theory of such catastrophes states that, in a population as large as the United States, there is always a group of seriously ill people. Heat waves, it is surmised, hasten terminal cases. Other victims, however, might survive for appreciable periods except for such weather extremes," Hodge said.

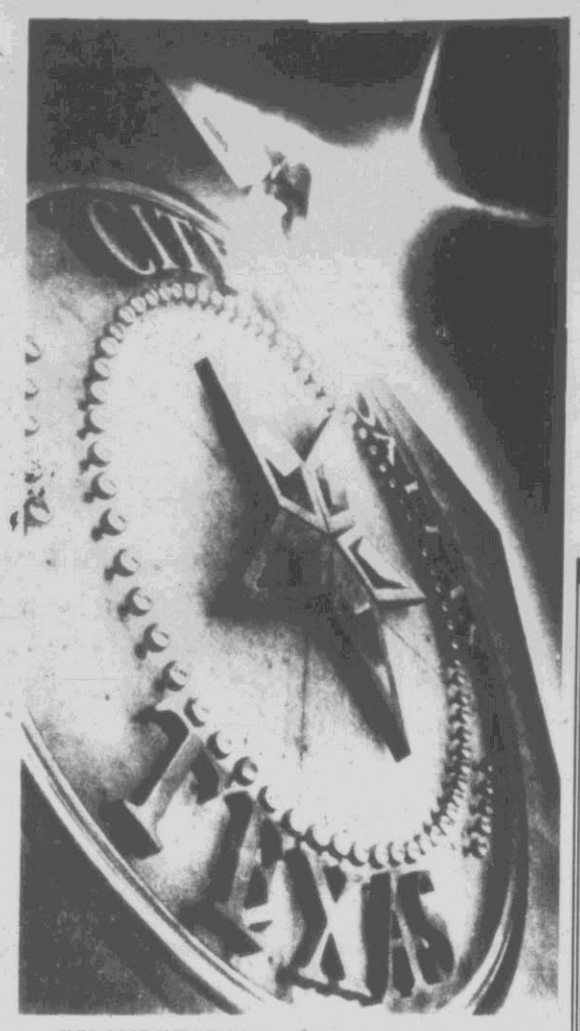

A 1966 study of deaths in New York City showed that the rate doubled a day after the temperature hit 103. There were so many deaths from cancer, stroke and heart disease as well as pneumonia that it almost looked like an epidemic.

Dr. Herbert M. Austin of NOAA sayy heart disease emergencies increase by 20 percent in heat waves, with most people succumbing in the first few days. Abnormally high nighttime temperatures may be even more important, he says, than the searpng daytime highs. During the night the body recuperates and continued excess heat may prevent it from establishing its heat balance.

Those most likely to suffer from heat prostration, heat stroke or death are infants whose heat regulatory system isn't fully developed, and the elderly and people with impaired circulation.

And the rising cost of energy for air conditioning adds a cruel economic side to the problem.

"Preliminary indications from the 1978 Texas heat wave suggest that some elderly people on fixed incomes, many of them in buildings that cannot be ventilated without air conditioning, found the cost too high, turned off their units, and ultimately succumbed to the stress of heat syndrome," Posey reported.

SUN SCORCHES TEXAS — With much of the southwest struggling through a severe heat wave. Texas has endured its share of the scorching sun. Wichita Falls, Texas, suffered with the highest temperature in the nation Sunday with 112 degrees; Dallas-Fort Worth area was close behind with an official 108. There have been a large number of heat-related deaths in the state. This photo shows the sun bearing down on the City of Dallas Emblem at City Hall. (AP Laserphoto)

Still Abortions For N.C. Poor

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Abortions will continue to be available at public expense to poor women in North Carolina, despite a Supreme Court ruling Monday.

The 5-4 ruling said the federal government and the states are not legally required to pay for most abortions for poor women. But North Carolina is one of 10 states that made money available for abortions even before a lower court ruling temporarily required the payments.

"It's never been our understanding that we were under any legal obligation to fund abortions, either elective or therapeutic," said Brent Hackney, deputy press secretary to Gov. Jim Hunt.

"It is done as a service to poor women, who were entitled to Medicaid abortions before the Congress cut off the money," he added.

The Legislature has appropriated $1 million a year to pay for medically necessary and elective abortions of eligible poor women, and another $280,000 was transferred from other welfare uses to finance the procedures last year.

The state financing of the abortions was recommended by Hunt following the 1977 congressional action preventing the use of federal money for the procedures in most cases. North Carolina has been receiving federal money for the abortions since the February ruling by a federal court.

Charlotte S. Ashcraft, fiscal analyst for the state Legislature, said the end of that money will probably mean North Carolina's abortion costs will go over the $1 million included in the state budget that takes effect Tuesday.

"It's going to cost more money. No doubt about that, since it cost more than $1 million last year," she said.

Ms. Ashcraft and other state officials said they were uncertain how much federal money may be lost, however.

In 1978, the last year for which statistics were available, 6,125 of the 27,266 abortions performed in North Carolina were paid for with state money.

June Milby, spokeswoman for the state Department of Human Resources, said 39 percent of those abortions were performed on women under 19. More than 175 were performed on girls 14 years old or younger, and one 9-year-old received an abortion.

Scout Troops Attend Camp

Scout troops throughout East Carolina Council, Boy Scouts of America, will attend Camp Bonner this summer as part of the council's year-round camping program.

A total of 100 troops, involving more than 1200 boys, are expected to participate in week long sessions until August 2.

"The objective of the summer camping experience is to give scouts the opportunity to practice first-hand many of the educational activities that make up the total Boy Scout program," said John Bush, scout executive. Activities include aquatics, scout skills, conservation, and field sports.

Girl Scout Head Named

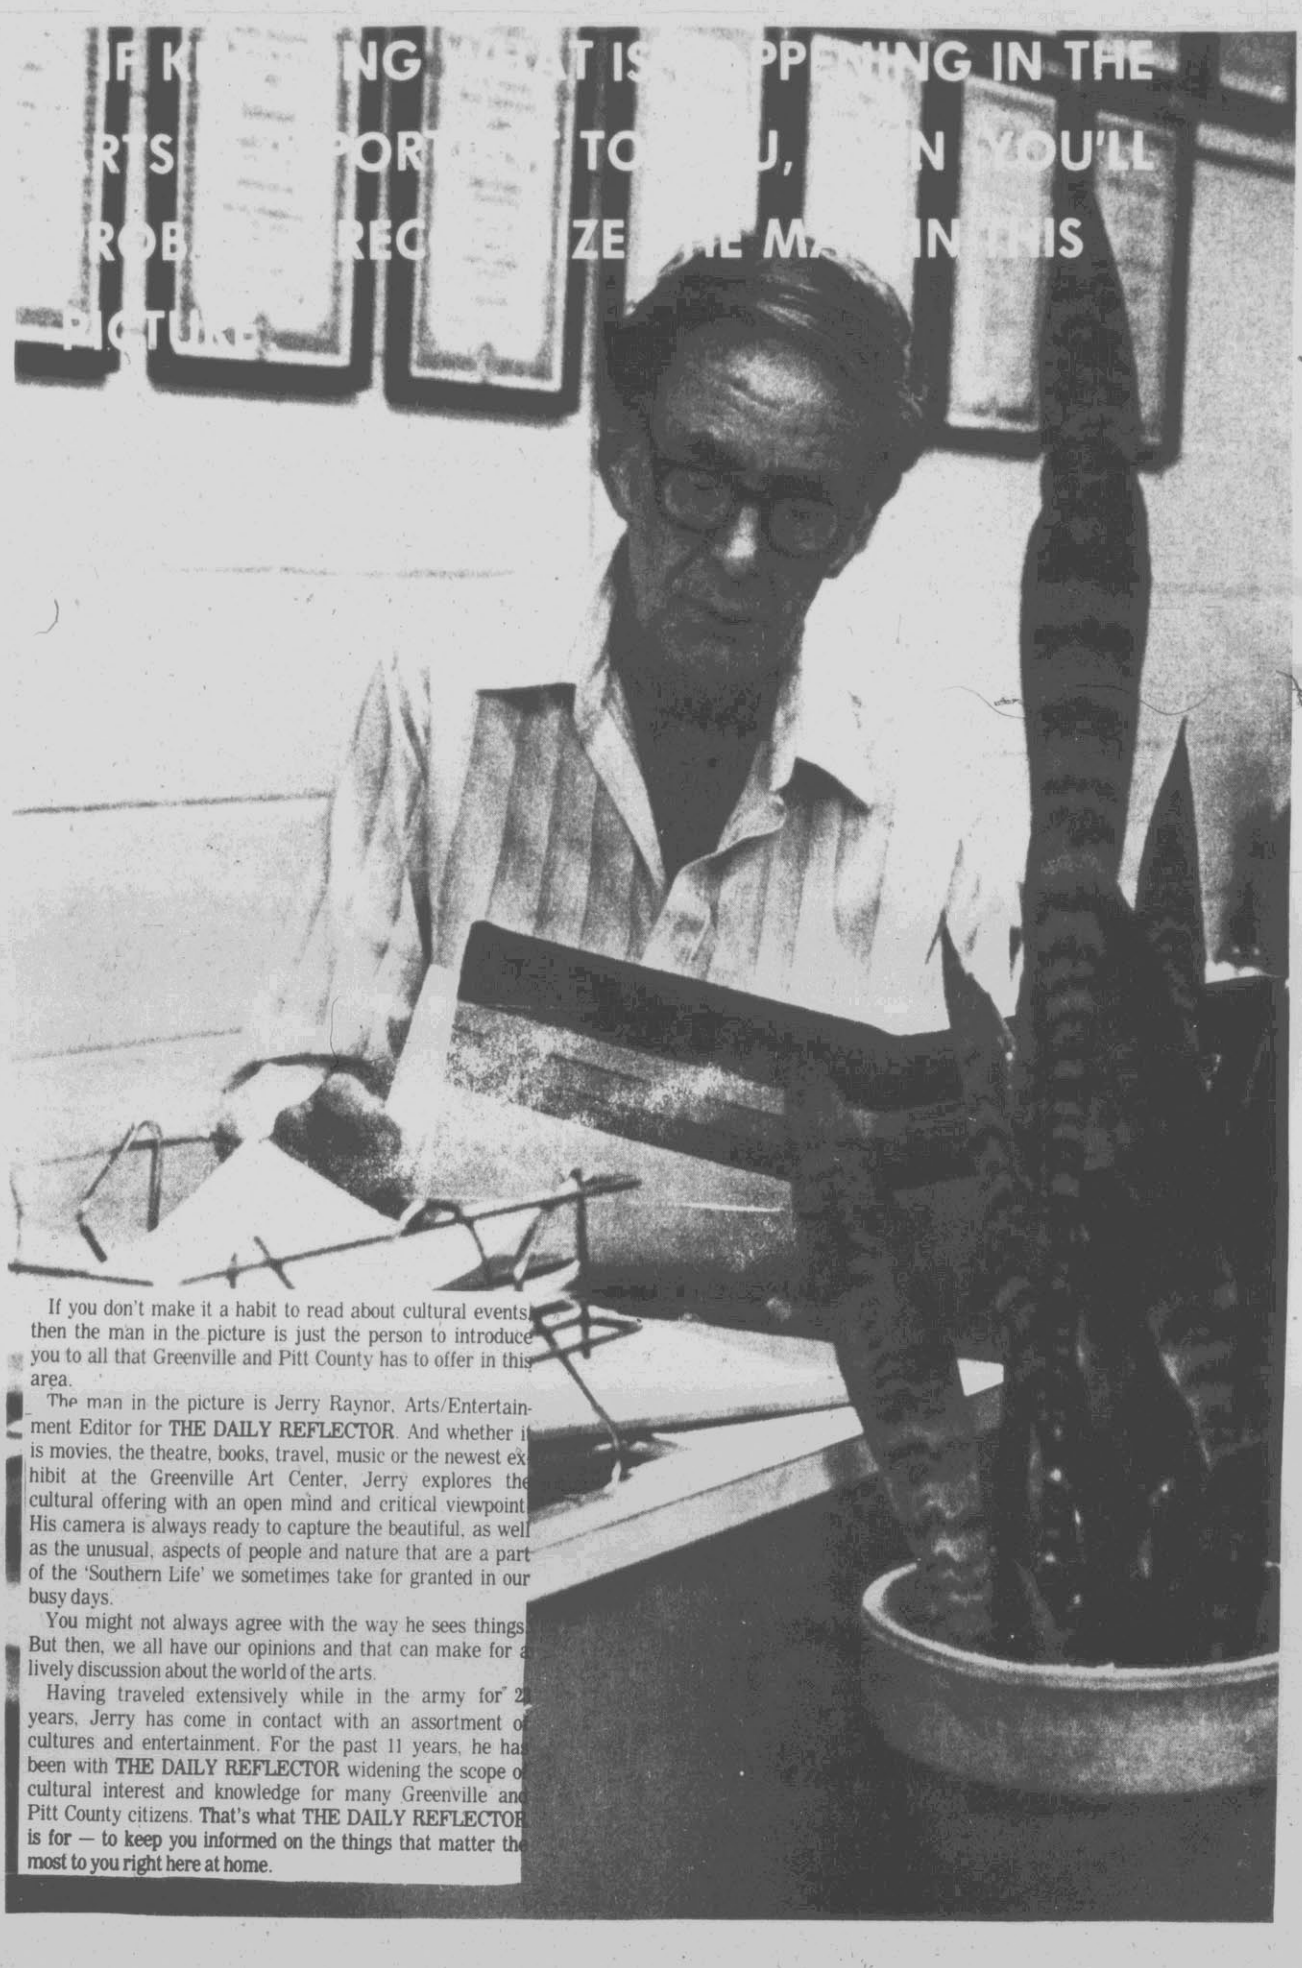

Becky Logan, an eight-year volunteer in Girl Scouting, has been appointed new neighborhood chairman for Greenville Girl Scouting.

Neighborhood chairman is a volunteer position which helps bring different elements (both professional and volunteer) together into a cohesive organization for girls. Girls involved in scouting are exposed to such activities as camping, hiking, boating, swimming, father-daughter square dances, teas, Girl Scout Day on the Mall, and cleanup projects.

Logan said that Girl Scouting is always in need of good leaders — Moms, Dads, college students, or anyone interested in the development of girls. If interested, call Ms. Logan at 756-5877.

PROTESTOR INDICTED

EL FERROL, Spain (AP) — John Castgle, the British skipper of the Greenpeace ship Rainbow Warrior, has been indicted for allegedly interfering in a whale hunt off northern Spain, officials here say.

If you don't make it a habit to read about cultural events, then the man in the picture is just the person to introduce you to all that Greenville and Pitt County has to offer in this area.

The man in the picture is Jerry Raynor, Arts/Entertainment Editor for THE DAILY REFLECTOR. And whether it is movies, the theatre, books, travel, music or the newest exhibit at the Greenville Art Center, Jerry explores the cultural offering with an open mind and critical viewpoint. His camera is always ready to capture the beautiful, as well as the unusual, aspects of people and nature that are a part of the 'Southern Life' we sometimes take for granted in our busy days.

You might not always agree with the way he sees things. But then, we all have our opinions and that can make for a lively discussion about the world of the arts.

Having traveled extensively while in the army for 21 years, Jerry has come in contact with an assortment of cultures and entertainment. For the past 11 years, he has been with THE DAILY REFLECTOR widening the scope of cultural interest and knowledge for many Greenville and Pitt County citizens. That's what THE DAILY REFLECTOR is for — to keep you informed on the things that matter the most to you right here at home.

In addition to Jerry's cultural offerings, THE DAILY REFLECTOR brings you all the news, sports, advertised specials and other features that have been part of your local newspaper for 98 years.

Since 1882, a mirror of the community.
