

Sunbird Airlines To Begin Local Service

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Sunbird Airlines, a commuter airline based at Denver, N.C., 30 miles north of Charlotte, will begin service at the Pitt-Greenville Airport on August 4, company officials said yesterday.

Howard Sabin, assistant to Sunbird president Ralph Quinlan, said Sunbird will start its Greenville service with six round-trips per day to Raleigh-Durham Airport. One of the flights, he noted, will continue on to Charlotte. The airline is also considering a flight from Greenville to Norfolk, and a direct flight to Charlotte from Greenville.

Sabin said one plane and two crews—four pilots—will be based at Pitt-Greenville, as will two agents.

Sunbird began commuter service last year with one airplane, serving four cities in North Carolina. The company now has nine planes, with five more on order, and between 130 and 140 employees, Sabin explained. It currently serves 10 cities in North Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia. Greenville will be the 11th city to be served by the airline.

The "fastest growing commuter airline in the United States," according to Sabin, Sunbird now has 27 flights per day out of Charlotte, and 28 flights a day out of Raleigh-Durham.

"We haven't started to grow yet," Sabin suggested. "We hope to be the number one commuter airline in the nation in five years."

The airline now operates eight-passenger Cessna 402's—costing $300,000 to $340,000 each—with two pilots on each flight.

"We're unique," Sabin said, in that Sunbird is "completely self-contained... we own our own airport—Little Mountain Airport," at Denver, where the company's administrative offices, maintenance operations and computerized reservations center are located.

Pitt-Greenville Airport officials said Sunbird's first departure is scheduled for 6:15 a.m., with the last arrival set for 10:05 p.m. each weekday.

Wheeler Airlines, based at Raleigh-Durham Airport, introduced commuter service at Pitt-Greenville Airport in 1973. That airline now has two departures each weekday from Greenville to Newport News, Va., and two each day to Raleigh-Durham-Charlotte-Ashville.

Jim Turcott, manager of the local airport, said additional terminal space is sorely needed to handle the expanding traffic at the flight facility.

He also said negotiations are underway to provide the needed security at the airport. Federal regulations, Turcott explained, require security screening of passengers boarding airline flights.

The owners of Sunbird Airlines, according to Sabin, also own Mountaineer Cargo, an airline operating 21 cargo planes flying the East Coast from Boston to Florida.

Mountaineer, based at Little Mountain Airport, is associated with the Emory Air Freight small parcel service.

By-Drink Bid On Council Agenda

A lengthy agenda, including among other key items consideration of a request to conduct a referendum on liquor-by-the-drink, has been scheduled for Thursday night's regular City Council meeting.

The Chamber of Commerce has requested that the Council conduct a mixed beverage referendum 60 days prior to the general election in November. The Concerned Citizens of Pitt County has requested to be heard at the meeting in regard to the proposed referendum.

Other business on the agenda includes: appointments to boards and commissions; public hearings on four rezoning requests, submitted by E. R. Lewis Construction Co. for property west of the Eastern Bypass and north of the river (from RA-20 to Highway Commercial), by Ed and Rosemond Tipton for property located between Seaboard Coast Line Railroad and Sara Lane (from RA-20 to R-6), property just west of King's Shopping Center (from Office and Institutional to O&I-2), and by AJHM for property at the intersection of NC 11 and Club Pines Drive (from R-9 to O&I-2).

Consideration of two applications for renewal of mobile home permits; consideration of three items submitted by the Utilities Commission; consideration of a resolution concerning an affirmative action plan to implement the Council's goal of fair and equal employment; and consideration of an ordinance amending the Personnel Policies Ordinance by adding a section relative to affirmative action;

Review of a contract presented by the Chamber of Commerce relative to Operation Over-Charge; scheduling of seven items for public hearings, including two rezoning requests and amendments to the Flood Plain and Medical Arts zoning districts;

Authorization to participate in the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development's Peer-to-Peer Assistance Program; consideration of an ordinance amending the CD budgets for 1975-76, 1976-77, 1977-78, and 1978-79; presentation of the

Stadium Crowd Tramples Seven On Papal Visit

FORTALEZA, Brazil (AP)—Crowds rushing into a stadium to see Pope John Paul II trampled at least six people to death today and another died of a heart attack, officials said. The tragedy, similar to one that marred the papal visit to Zaire in May, occurred two hours before the pope's arrival.

A state government spokesman, Helio de Araujo Passos, said police were trying to determine the exact number of deaths, and injuries were "in the area of 100."

The pope, on the 10th day of his 12-day visit to the world's largest Roman Catholic country, was to inaugurate a Eucharistic conference organized by Brazilian bishops in this northeast seaport of 1.2 million people, built on the edge of silvery sands and emerald green waters.

He had spent the night in the town of Belem, at the mouth of the Amazon River, after visiting a leper colony Tuesday.

The trampling occurred around a door of the Castelao Stadium, where the pope was to drive from the airport to greet the population. Officials said the crowd had pushed down the door or someone had suddenly opened it.

Officials withheld a formal announcement at the scene of the deaths, apparently to avoid panic inside the soccer stadium, which was jammed to capacity with 120,000 persons. Thousands of others still milled outside in 95-degree heat trying to get in.

During the pope's visit to Kinshasa, Zaire, seven women and two children were trampled to death and 72 other people were injured trying to get into an open-air Mass that he celebrated. The crush occurred as the iron gates of the People's Palace were opened at dawn for the service on the concrete steps.

Exactly What Happened In Repossessing Trailer?

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

All Bertha Lee Moore's worldly possessions were put outdoors yesterday.

Mrs. Moore, a 71-year-old widow, stood among her furniture and dishes and other belongings on her lot in the Meadowbrook area of Greenville.

Her trailer home was repossessed yesterday morning.

"I can't tell you exactly how it happened," she said. "I paid the General Electric Credit Corporation $104.90 every month until Willie—he was my husband—died in late 1976. We'd just bought the trailer earlier that year and put it here on this lot my mother left me. Then after he died, I got the payments reduced to $60.90 a month.

"Last September 21 I was in a wreck and stayed in the hospital a long time. During that time some of my relatives were supposed to be getting my Social Security check and making the payments. I don't know what happened."

Mrs. Moore said she is not upset to be rid of the trailer.

"I've tried for several months to get it all straightened out," she said, "and just couldn't make any sense with anybody. I'm better off outdoors."

Neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Ivory Johnson, said they'd put Mrs. Moore up for the night. Greenville Human Relations Officer Jesse Harris was going to contact the finance company and try to find out exactly what happened. Greenville Police said they'd patrol the street often through the night. Codes Enforcement Officer Jesse Ebron, who'd first seen her standing outdoors during his routine rounds, was going to enlist the aid of Greenville Utilities to have electric service cut off temporarily. And, according to Mrs. Moore, Rev. Smith was going to bring her a new trailer within a day or two.

"Before I got up this morning, I told the Lord that whatever came today, I'd accept it," she said. "So far, it ain't been too bad. The Lord's sent these people to take care of my needs. I've lived too long and seen too much to let anything get me down."

Utilities Receiving Bids For New Water Plant On July 22

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission were told last night that bids for the city's new water treatment plant will be received July 22, and contracts for the facility should be awarded at a special meeting in late August.

Funds for the construction of the water plant, to be located on a site north of the Tar River and west of the Pitt-Greenville Airport, will come from the sale of bonds, approved by Greenville voters in a referendum in April, 1979.

The cost of the new plant and associated facilities has been estimated at $12 million.

Planning is still underway on improved sewage treatment facilities for the city. Officials, who said plans for the project are behind schedule because of delays in the Environmental Protection Agency review of preliminary planning, reported the entire facility plan should be submitted to the EPA for review in September, with tentative approval of the final facility plan scheduled for November.

Final approval of the plan, which will permit plant design to begin, should be received in April, 1981.

In other business last night, the commission approved the purchase of a new telephone system, rather than entering into a lease-purchase arrangement which would result in a 15 percent interest charge.

Utilities director Charles Horne said a system could be purchased for $40,462, while under a lease agreement, the commission would pay $62,538 ($744.50 per month for seven years).

The system could be expanded to provide 192 lines and 48 trunks, tending to make the proposed system obsolescence-proof.

At present, the current monthly charge paid for telephone service is $1,405. A lease arrangement, rather than the present rental of equipment, would save $7,285 over a seven-year period.

Horne reminded commission members of a public hearing scheduled for 7:30 p.m. August 4, dealing with the adoption of standards and policies under the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act (PURPA).

The hearing will deal with six rate-making standards and five service standards. Commission employees will present the staff's positions on the 11 standards and citizens may present oral or written statements regarding the standards.

The commission itself will then consider the testimony and adopt standards for the

See Blunder In Aliens' Deaths

AJO, Ariz. (AP)—A grave blunder by four smugglers—not a cruel scheme—may have caused the tragedy in the Arizona desert where 13 people died in searing heat after a group of Salvadorans were spirited across the border.

One of the smugglers is believed to be among the dead.

"They didn't have enough water," said Lt. Jack Garchow of the Pima County sheriff's department.

Interviews with the 14 survivors cast doubt on earlier reports that the smuggler-guides purposely abandoned the Salvadorans, he said. He said the guides suffered along with the aliens they had smuggled into the United States.

One of the four suspected smugglers probably is among the dead, Garchow said. Two of the alleged smugglers survived the ordeal and were in custody, and the fourth was among three or four from the party who remained unaccounted for Tuesday.

Two of the suspects, the victim and one survivor, are Mexican, and the nationalities of the other two were not immediately known, Garchow said.

Meanwhile, federal charges of illegal entry into the United States would be filed against all the survivors, Garchow said.

HYPNOTISTS' LIST

Some time ago Hotline published an item on hypnotism for such purposes as changing habits, and alleviating pain. The American Society of Clinical Hypnosis has since sent us a list of certified clinical hypnotists. There are 68 in North Carolina, all with either M. D., D. D. S., D. O. (Doctor of Osteopathy), or Ph. D. or Ed. D. in psychology degrees. The only Greenville listing is Robert A. Sammons Jr., Ph. D.

The list is available from American Society of Clinical Hypnosis, 2400 E. Devon Avenue, Suite 218, Des Plaines, Ill. 60018.

EPILEPSY FEEDBACK

Hotline, some time ago, published an item about resources available for persons having epilepsy and their families. We have since learned of a toll-free number one may call from anywhere in North Carolina for information about epilepsy. We called the number and learned that the phone service is maintained by the Comprehensive Epilepsy Program of the Department of Neurology of Bowman Gray School of Medicine, Winston-Salem. It's answered by a live operator from 8:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. Monday through Friday and, at other times, one may leave message and have calls returned.

The number is 1-800-642-0500.

Education School Dean For ECU Is Appointed

ECU News Bureau
Dr. Richard W. Warner, Jr., associate dean for academic affairs and professor of counselor education at Auburn University, will become Dean of the School of Education, East Carolina University, next month.

Warner, 41, will succeed Dr. Douglas R. Jones who has served for 17 years as dean. The school is recognized nationally as a leader in training public school teachers and administrators.

"I am pleased that Dr. Warner will be joining East Carolina University as he brings us rich experiences in the field of education," said Dr. Robert H. Maier, vice chancellor-academic affairs. "His administrative and leadership performance at Auburn University and Pennsylvania State University have been recognized nationally and will be a valuable asset to our School of Education as it contemplates the challenging years ahead."

Selected by a university search committee formed after Jones announced his wishes to return to teaching,

Warner indicated he plans to work enthusiastically for "strong innovative programs," to be initiated and implemented "in terms of resources available to the university."

"Obviously I am looking forward to this challenge and opportunity," Warner said. "I want to stress building on the strong foundation already laid, and to the possibilities of expanding with some new and unique programs."

Warner has been at Auburn for eight years and earlier served on the faculties at Penn State and State University of New York (SUNY) at Buffalo, N.Y. He holds graduate degrees including the doctorate in education from SUNY-Buffalo.

At Auburn, he was an Alumni Associate Professor of Counselor Education before being named Associate Dean for Academic

Parleys Slated In Musicians' Strike

CLEVELAND (AP) — A new round of negotiations between striking members of the Cleveland Orchestra and the orchestra's parent group will begin Friday, a federal mediator says.

Both sides were agreeable and anxious to talk, but you don't accomplish any bargaining over the telephone, federal mediator George Buckingham said Tuesday.

Because of picket lines at Blossom Music Center, the orchestra's summer home, several events there have been canceled, including two Doobie Brothers concerts set for next Monday and Tuesday.

The rock group was expected to draw nearly 40,000 people to the two performances.

But despite the five-day-old strike, the orchestra was to perform today at the All Nations Festival in Cleveland.

Musicians began their job action and set up pickets when contract negotiations broke down July 3.

The 105 orchestra members, affiliated with Local 4 of the American Federation of Musicians, rejected an offer from the Musical Arts Association that would have boosted their weekly salaries to $485 retroactive to March 8, when the last contract expired, and up to $655 by the end of a 3 1/2-year contract.

They now earn a minimum of $450 a week, compared with $550 earned by orchestra members in Chicago and New York and $480 in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Detroit, Pittsburgh and Washington.

Richard Weiner, chief of the orchestra's negotiating team, said he wanted the orchestra to compete with the other four of the "Big Five" U.S. symphonies — Boston, New York, Chicago and Philadelphia.

Union secretary Mike Scigliano said the union wants about $25 more by the end of the contract. Other issues in dispute are seniority benefits, pensions and dental benefits, he said.

Drinking Kills N.C. Boaters

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State officials said Tuesday statistics show that more than 20 of the 56 people who died in boating accidents in North Carolina last year had been drinking enough to register at least 10 percent on a breathalyzer test.

A motorist with a reading of at least 10 percent is considered legally drunk.

State law prohibits operating a boat while intoxicated, there is no definition of intoxication

Sunken U-Boat Said Dangerous

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Navy said Tuesday the wreckage of a German submarine sunk off the North Carolina coast during World War II was "armed and dangerous."

Petty Officer 1st Class Jerry Minser, a Navy spokesman, said the most hazardous item found by divers during a five-week study of the wreckage was a fully armed torpedo protruding from a stern firing tube.

"It is still armed and dangerous. That thing is sticking out and could explode if properly activated," Minser said.

The submarine, U-Boat 352, had 11 German sailors aboard when it was sunk by the Coast Guard during World War II. Its wreckage, discovered in 1975, has become a popular spot for sport divers.

Minser said the Navy divers did not enter the rooms that crew members normally would have occupied, and did not find any remains of the German sailors. A search was not made specifically for the sailors, he said.

Minser said information gathered during the underwater study will be examined and a decision made on what to do with the wreckage, which is in the Atlantic Ocean about 26 miles southeast of Beaufort, N.C. The diving team was scheduled to return to Norfolk today.

Minser said explosive specialists were unable to disarm the torpedo because they were not familiar with the detonating device. He warned that the torpedo could be set off by sport divers.

Five artillery shells and nine other torpedoes — three of them armed — were found in the wreckage. The other torpedoes, Minser said, were found inside the forward torpedo room and were difficult to reach.

Salvage specialists removed five 88-mm ammunition rounds from the ship for study later in Norfolk.

Mansion Is Sold By Bert Lance

ATLANTA (AP) — "Butterfly Manna," Bert Lance's white-columned Atlanta mansion, has been sold for $1.4 million to an Atlanta entrepreneur and publisher.

The home, where Clark Gable and Vivien Leigh stayed while in Atlanta for the premiere of "Gone With The Wind," had been on the market for nearly three years, with an asking price of $2 million.

Doug Elam, the real estate broker who negotiated the sale, said Tuesday the price set a record for a single-family home in Atlanta.

LaBelle Lance, wife of the former U.S. budget director, bought the house for about $500,000 in 1975, and renamed it after the Biblical "manna from heaven."

The buyer, 34-year-old Robert L. White, is the head of Platinum International Inc., which operates a charter yacht business and a custom auto building operation.

Lance's principal residence is in Calhoun, Ga., his hometown.

Found Hanging In His Jail Cell

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Sheriff's deputies said Tuesday Anthony Winston, 21, was found hanging in his cell at the Cumberland County jail.

Deputies said Winston used a bed sheet tied to support beams across his cell. He had been awaiting trial on charges of murder, armed robbery and conspiracy to commit armed robbery.

Mondale's Summer Is Season To Read, Relax..

WASHINGTON (AP) — Between Labor Day 1979, when he returned from a diplomatic trip to China, and May 30, the end of the 1980 primary season, Vice President Walter F. Mondale visited 36 states, flew 114,597 miles, spent 102 days on the road, gave 203 speeches and attended 145 political fundraisers and receptions.

Now, he's reading Shakespeare.

With President Carter out of town — spending only three days at the White House during a 29-day stretch — Mondale is minding the store.

But, in the words of one Mondale aide, "some of the store goes with the president," and that means the vice president can relax a bit.

Mondale is catching up on his tennis and reading and getting ready for the upcoming general election campaign against Ronald Reagan, about to be awarded the Republican presidential nomination.

"It's a reasonable pace," said Jim Johnson, Mondale's executive assistant, "a reasonable time for thinking."

The summer is not totally devoid of business, of course.

In the next month, Mondale's schedule includes a week-long trip to Africa, almost a week in New York for the Democratic National Convention and a week of entertaining at his home before the convention. In between, he and his family will vacation on the beaches of New Jersey, leaving behind staff members who could interrupt pleasure with business.

While Carter remained in Washington during the first six months of the Iranian crisis, his vice president took on most of the political chairs outside the nation's capital. That schedule tapered off with the last primary elections, but it will resume with the fall campaign.

Mondale has not been pulled into the party platform and rules fights being waged by Carter's Democratic challenger, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy. And when Mondale visited Philadelphia on July 4, it was at the invitation of Mayor William Green, a Kennedy supporter. Mondale's staff viewed that as a "good signal of good relations."

The vice president spent Monday night in Detroit, paving the way for Carter's stop there Tuesday morning to talk with auto industry and union executives about the administration's efforts to shore up the faltering auto business.

But for the most part, said one aide, "he'll be spending time in the office."

He is escaping on occasion for lunch. He dined at the State Department one day recently, keeping in touch with his old Senate friend, Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie. On Tuesday, an assistant lined up a last-minute luncheon date for Mondale with a newspaper bureau chief at Dominique's, a fashionable French restaurant four blocks from the White House.

Mondale's reading list, said one staff member, tends to include "books about foreign policy, about countries" that give him background information, but he also is brushing up on his Shakespeare. He and his wife, Joan, attended a performance of "Twelfth Night" at the Folger Theatre last week, and Mondale has taken up a multi-volume edition of Shakespeare given to him last Christmas by his father-in-law.

In the summer of 1980, said Johnson, "there is more opportunity to do that."

Follow Hunch, For A Happy Boy Scout

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This summer my son, who is a Boy Scout, wants to go on a "family camping trip" sponsored by the Boy Scouts. He has asked his mother and me and his three sisters to go with him.
His mother and I are divorced, but we get along fairly well. Perhaps I should point out that we are nothing more than "friends" now.
I have been dating a very nice woman, and she doesn't think it's right for me to go on this family camping trip. I really don't know what to do. What do you think?
CONFUSED IN OHIO

DEAR CONFUSED: I think if you felt comfortable turning down your son in favor of accommodating your ladyfriend, you wouldn't have written to me. Follow your hunch and make your Boy Scout happy.

DEAR ABBY: I recently read that an elderly San Francisco widow died, leaving instructions in her will that "Sido," her pet 10-year-old collie, be destroyed as soon as possible. She feared that her beloved pet would not have a good life after her death.
The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals intervened in an effort to save Sido's life, and now there's a big court battle going on. Because of the publicity, hundreds of people have offered to give Sido a good home. However, the law states that animals are "property," and as such, the owner of said property has a right to decide its fate.
Where do you stand, Abby?
SAN MATEO OBSERVER

DEAR OBSERVER: I'm for preserving Sido's life. This is another example clearly showing that what is legal is not always moral. And if the law gives an animal owner the right to destroy a healthy pet, then the law should be changed.
P.S. You'll be glad to hear that Sido's life has been saved.

DEAR ABBY: A buddy of mine from work came by the house to pick me up for a weekend fishing trip. When I introduced him to my wife, his eyes lit up, and he said, "You've got to be crazy to leave a swell-looking dame like that alone for the weekend." Was I?
WEEKEND FISHERMAN

DEAR FISHERMAN: He could be right. The next time you go fishing, be sure to take that buddy with you.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to thank you for your explanation as to why the ERA is a national need. May I add that the 19th Amendment guaranteeing women the vote became part of the Constitution in 1920. Louisiana did not ratify it until 1970, and Mississippi has never ratified it. In Mississippi it is introduced annually and annually voted down.
Louisiana ratified in response to a request from the League of Women Voters asking the state to honor the 50th anniversary of women's suffrage. Thus Louisiana and Mississippi women have been able to take part in the democratic process for the past 50 and 60 years because the rest of the nation saw the inequity and injustice and worked to make it whole.
Passage of the Equal Rights Amendment will drive the last golden spike needed to provide a firm platform of equality in law for all Americans. Sincerely,
CYNTHIA W., NEW ORLEANS

DEAR ABBY: I am a homosexual, happily married, to my lover. To my fellow employees I am a happy bachelor. A woman in our office has recently broken off with the man she's been living with, and she asked me if I'd like to join her. Another woman in our office and her husband for dinner and dancing some night. She caught me completely off guard, so I said, "Yes," before I could think of a valid reason to say no.
Abby, I have no desire to join these people or get involved socially with them.
I can easily say I'm busy when she asks me for a specific date, but how can I handle any subsequent invitations?
I do not discuss my love life at the office, but I want her to know that I am not available for any dates, without telling her why.
SHOOK UP

DEAR SHOOK: Tell her you're not available because you're "involved" with someone. (It's true, you are.)

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How To Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

When those garden vegetables are ready for the table, their quality and nutrient levels are especially high. To keep things that way, go directly from garden to table or cooking pot.
Next best is to store vegetables in the refrigerator right away. After all, many vegetables lose their good eating quality quickly if they aren't refrigerated.
For example, peas lose approximately one third of their sugar when left at room temperature only six hours after picking. Sweet corn, spinach and lima beans also lose their good, sweet flavor quickly when not refrigerated.
As far as nutrient losses, vitamin C is lost fairly quickly. But losses of flavor and nutrients are not that great

Wise Approach Offered

A Pitt County Board of Health committee, appointed to consider complaints about its family planning information program, has reaffirmed the program but also urged emphasis on assisting parents in providing sex education to their children.

The committee affirmed the board of health's "obligation and commitment to deal with the problem of teenage pregnancy in Pitt County with all of the resources at its disposal and within the bounds of its authority." The programs are conducted by competent and highly trained professional people, the committee reported.

At the same time the committee urged increased emphasis on "making available to all parents seeking assistance in teaching their children health education any and all available resources of the Family Planning Program.

It seems that the committee has taken a wise approach to an extremely difficult social problem. Certainly the parents are primary in providing guidance and education to their offspring. At times, however, the parents won't, or are unable, to provide the needed training.

Our society would be foolhardy to ignore all the problems of teen aged pregnancies, venereal disease and emotional upset that go with promiscuity. We have to do whatever it takes to alleviate the problems, recognizing always that parents have the major responsibility for guiding their children.

New Awards Show Idea

WASHINGTON — No one wants to say it out loud but all the award shows on television are getting to be a bore, whether it's the Oscars or the Tonys, the format never seems to change. "May I have the envelope, please — the winner is..."

my father, my third husband, and his two children by a former marriage, Thomas Edison, the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, Burger King, who always let me have it my way..."

searching desperately for a new format to hold the audience's interest. I believe I may have one for them. Instead of announcing the winners at shows such as the Academy and Tony awards, they could announce the losers.

blaming people involved with this picture. There were so many of them I'm sure I'll forget someone's name. "To my lecherous producer, Sam Tolstoy, who pursued this project for 13 years before he found a studio dumb enough to put up the money, I would just like to say it was a lousy script to start with, but you managed to mess it up even worse. To my director, Gary Ack, who doesn't know one end of the camera from the other, I advise you to go back into your father's slipcover business. To the cast, who sabotaged every scene I had, I will see all of you at a Screen Actors Guild hearing where I've preferred charges. And to my astute husband-manager, who persuaded me to play in this turkey, I want the house in Bel Air, custody of the dogs, and a complete accounting of all the money I've made in the past 10 years. If you have anything to say to me after tonight, you can tell it to Marvin Mitchelson, my lawyer."

"Thank you, Lila, and now for the best actor of the year, the nominees are Rock Hammer, for 'Drowning' Jeff Holster for 'Far Too Many Indians,' and Dan Lava for 'The One-Legged Place Kicker.' And the loser is Dan Lava."

Tobacco Harvesting Begins

If you haven't noticed, it is tobacco harvesting time again in Pitt County. The crop represents a livelihood to many people in our area, controversial as it is nationally. Area farms have begun breaking the lower leaves from the stalks and curing them in the modern bulk barns, now used. Only a tobacco farmer can know the relief of getting his crop out of the field and stored for sale when the markets open. All the problems of blue mold, too much or too little rain, which can ruin a crop, are then behind. The harvesting cycle has begun and in a surprisingly short time the fields will be stripped of tobacco leaves.

THIS AFTERNOON Staff Successes

By BILL NOBLITT RALEIGH — Five years ago the North Carolina General Assembly was besieged time and again by angry, sign-waving citizens demanding that "Something" be done about electricity rates. Power company bills month after month soared to new record highs, and utilities firms filed for higher rates even before the state commission had finished with the previous request.

BILL NOBLITT

After months of argument back and forth it became clear that the rate increases could not be halted, only slowed, and power rates would never again be the same. There was some doubt that even the goal of slowing the rate increases could be achieved in the face of inflationary pressures on costs of fuel, labor, and construction. New Direction In 1977 the General Assembly acted on a proposal by Gov. Jim Hunt that a Public Staff of the North Carolina Utilities Commission be set up to guard the public's interest. Results in the three years since have not been perfect, says Public Staff director Robert Fischbach, but "much progress has been made in restoring public confidence in the utility regulatory process in North Carolina. Rates have increased, but at a much-moderated pace certainly slower than the rate of inflation."

Public Staff plan when he was serving as lieutenant governor. He pinpointed two major problem areas for the situation which found power companies and citizens at one another's throats. His chief concern was the Utilities Commission setting policy with the effect of law — including rates — while granted; average prices paid for service; and a comparison of rates in this state to national and South Atlantic averages. Results show that the percent of rate increases asked and approved has dropped from 90.3 percent for the three years prior to 1977 to 70.2 percent in the three years since. The total requested in the first three years was $407.8 million; and (Continued on page 5)

Other Editors Say C.P. Snow

Great Britain may no longer rule the oceans, but she still rules the roost in at least one category: the care and feeding of the "man of letters", in the best sense of that phrase. C.P. Snow, who died last week at 74, was one of them. Like some other famous names in this pantheon — C.S. Lewis and H.G. Wells come to mind — Snow was a gifted writer in many modes. He could spin off popular novels, scholarly treatises and critical essays with equal grace. What made him stand apart was his abiding interest in the literature, philosophy and culture of science and the scientific mind. In this sense he was truly a 20th century man. The role came naturally for Lord Snow. He was initially trained as a physicist at Cambridge University and worked in basic research for several years before turning exclusively to writing. In 1940 he published the first in his long series of novels bearing the title "Strangers and Brothers". Ultimately he wrote 25 books of fiction and non-fiction, the last of them published in 1977. Snow is perhaps best known for his delineation of the "two cultures", science and the humanities. It was Snow's observation that even though the language and methodology of science were becoming more abstruse, little effort to bridge the communications gap was being made on either side of the equation. Yet a scientist who's never read Shakespeare or a humanist who's never studied Einstein is only a truncated intellectual, incapable of lasting insight. From Snow's point of view, the gap only grew during his lifetime, to the detriment of civilization. But Snow was hardly a pessimist. Most of his books, including his novels, tried to explore the relationships between people of different backgrounds and educational training, and how they might be reconciled. This, too, is one of the distinguishing characteristics of a man of letters: the application of art to practical uses. Lord Snow did not live in the rarified atmosphere of art-for-art's sake. He saw his writing as a means to an end: the stimulation of thought, and even action, on one of the most pervasive problems of our time. It is a testament to his tenacity that the "two cultures debate" became a fixture on university campuses and in laboratories and the halls of government during his lifetime. The fact that the debate still goes on today is evidence of Lord Snow's lasting contribution.

Reaganites Avoid Noise

By WALTER R. MEARS AP Special Correspondent DETROIT (AP) — During Ronald Reagan's Republican National Convention, the same managers who promoted public controversy in Kansas City four years ago are determined to settle all disputes as quietly and privately as possible. That may not be logical, but it's politics. The Reagan of 1976, narrowly behind the incumbent president he was challenging for the GOP nomination, wanted every dispute magnified. That is the strategy Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is pursuing now in his struggle to catch up with President Carter.

send it to the convention next week for ratification with no prospect of floor disputes. In Kansas City four years ago, Reagan was battling to overtake then-President Gerald R. Ford, which meant that any fight was better than no fight. The theory is that a contest waged and possibly won might shake the situation enough to pry some delegates away from the leader on the only matter that really counts, the presidential nomination. That is why Kennedy's forces have set up potential challenges to the Democratic platform on 16 different points, and plan to press their case on six or eight when the platform goes to their convention in New York City next month. Tower said from the outset that if a majority of his platform committee wanted to conduct their discussions and drafting sessions in public, they could vote to open their doors. He was against it, as was the Reagan camp. The Texas senator said campaign strategy is best shaped in private. "It is a closed session for the same reason that any political caucus is closed," he said. "This is in the nature of things."

What the Reagan people want now is peace, quiet and harmony. So what little contention there is over the 1980 platform is to be worked out in private. "If we are to have any vitriol or disagreement, why not do it behind closed doors?" said Sen. John G. Tower, chairman of the platform committee. There is little sign of discord anyhow. The most contentious point to surface to date is the Equal Rights Amendment, the question being whether the party should once again endorse it, or echo the campaign stance taken by Reagan, who says he favors statutes, but not a constitutional amendment, to assure equal rights for women. The panel handling that plank has voted to draft its language in public session, although Tower obviously preferred private proceedings. Neither the fate of the stalled ratification process, nor the shape of the Nov. 4 election, is likely to be affected by the decision on the GOP platform. Tower said he hopes the whole platform can be drafted so as to command an 80 percent majority of his committee, which would

To the editor: An increase in the City of Greenville's taxrate has been approved. It was implied that this increased tax rate was necessary to maintain the City at its present level — a "hold-the-line" budget. An article discussing the budget acknowledged that the chief expense in the budget is personnel costs.

I certainly feel that those employees working for the City should receive a good salary and fringe benefits, but I do not think that the City should hire more people than are necessary to get the job done. It is a very common sight around this City to see a group of four or five men repairing a street, sewer line, etc. In this group, one or two men will be working and the remainder will be sitting in a truck or just standing around talking.

As a taxpayer of Greenville, I do not approve of my tax money being needlessly spent to employ excess personnel — the major item in the budget — and would welcome an explanation as to why so many men are always "supervising" the few that are working. Kathy Wheelless

How People Can Sue City Hall

By LEE MITGANG AP Urban Affairs Writer NEW YORK (AP) — What can you do... —You break your leg on an unsafe sidewalk? —You, good citizen that you are, shovel snow off your sidewalk, but a passer-by slips on the ice and breaks a leg? —You get hit by a speeding ambulance or police car? A new book, "You Can Beat City Hall," published in June by Rawson, Wade, Inc., promises to enlighten city dwellers on how to get even — legally — when City Hall is to blame for an accident, injury, loss of life or property. For most of his professional career, author W. Bernard Richland was on the other side of the legal fence, most recently as Corporation Counsel for New York City under former Mayor Abraham Beame from 1974 through 1978. He is currently in private practice in New York.

himself — employ to discourage citizens from suing cities and winning. The unmistakable impression one gets after reading the book is that cities don't fight very fair when confronted by its citizens in court. "But in defense of the morality," said Richland, "municipal lawyers are legally obligated to use any defense or tactic available in defending a suit against their city." Confronted with that kind of legal savagery, Richland's book says, it is wise to know some basic rights and common pitfalls if you have a legal grievance against your city or town. —First, can you sue your city at all? State or local governments don't have to allow themselves to be sued, and some of them don't. Many of them place dollar limits on their liability, ranging as low as $10,000 in Kentucky up to $5 million in Indiana. In Arkansas and Maryland, it still is almost impossible for citizens to sue local government at all. In New York City, there are almost no limits to citizen lawsuits — and such suits cost the Big Apple some $30 million a year. —If you decide to sue, decide quickly. Many people who are injured lose their chance because they are unaware of the tight time limits cities often place on filing lawsuits following an accident. And the city certainly won't remind you if you're running late. —It is usually good advice to hire a lawyer, one who's familiar with the municipal laws of the city you are suing. The biggest question people have, of course, is can a particular kind of suit be won? In most cities and towns, for instance, property owners are responsible for clearing the sidewalk in front of their homes. But if they don't and someone trips and falls, the city may still be liable and can be sued. Usually the worst that happens to the property owner is a small fine. But Richland says the fellow who tries to be a good citizen and shovel snow from his sidewalk has, in effect, relieved the city of its legal liability if someone slips and falls. The shoveller becomes liable because, in the eyes of the law, he created the danger. "Moral," says Richland, "good citizenship is not all it's cracked up to be." Or what if you or your property are injured by a police car in hot pursuit of a criminal? The law, in most cases, protects the police, but they don't have the right to be totally careless. Or even more complicated: do people have a right to certain kinds of police protection? Richland's book tells of cases of children raped near areas notorious for such crimes, or of victims of crime who had earlier pleaded with police for protection. In each instance, the city has won these suits, because courts have held that police protection is owed to the community, not to separate individuals. Richland says in his book that the greatest advantage the city has over the citizen is the citizen's ignorance of his rights when he is injured. "You have to know you have rights before you can assert them. And once you know what your rights are, you have to know how to protect them."

Strength For Today

LOOK OUTWARD An alarming number of people today are suffering from neurotic disturbances. Some psychiatrists, especially in the larger cities, can scarcely find time for all the patients who wish to come to them and pour out their woes. What is wrong with these people? The more seriously ill, of course, have problems that can be reached only by professional care. But many of the others are in a position to help themselves. The problem is that they don't want to. These patients are highly self-centered. People who love and believe in something outside themselves can generally manage to keep going, no matter what their troubles and difficulties. People who worship themselves sooner or later find they are serving a false god, and suffer the consequences. "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever will lose his life for my sake, shall save it." —Elisha Douglass

Human Skin Bank Said Running On Thin Margin

SEATTLE (AP) — Pete Fierro operates his bank on a thin but vital margin.

Every month, Fierro makes rounds in four counties in search of deposits to balance his bank. But it isn't easy — Fierro runs a human skin bank, and takes donations from bodies.

The bank can mean the difference between life and death for burn victims like 5-year-old Kelsey Stellick, whose frilly dress burst into flame from a stove burner.

She needed skin for 30 percent of her body, and Fierro found it. Without those temporary grafts, Kelsey's third-degree burns through every layer of skin could have exposed her to fatal infections and fluid loss.

Fierro, a medical technician at Harborview Medical Center, makes monthly rounds to hospitals in King, Snohomish, Pierce and Kitsap counties to find skin donors. He also makes daily trips to the King County medical examiner's office to check the list of the dead.

Under the law, he must contact the deceased's family before he can take any skin grafts and his request is not always well received. Once, one of the people Fierro called responded to his request by threatening to come after him with a shotgun. And only about one of five families he contacts permits the donation.

Fierro said his bank needs skin from 40 donors to provide temporary skin grafts for the 12 to 16 serious burn accidents — most of them children and the elderly — that come to Harborview each month.

Harborview has one of only 12 skin banks in the nation. Typically, Fierro's bank has just enough deposits to cover the withdrawals. On average, he has only a quarter of the skin he would like for a safe margin.

"We've used it (human skin) up one day and not had any and then needed it the next day," Fierro says. "But we've been lucky so far. We've worked around the clock but we always get some."

breed sheriff set the motion picture business back 20 years. They both deserve to be up here with me tonight. As for 'The One-Legged Place Kicker,' I have nothing to apologize for. I did it for the money, which in this business is the name of the game."

"Let's hear it for a great actor, Dan Lova. And now our final award for the best picture of the year, the nominees are 'Two Tickets to Picasso' produced by Sy Custer, 'The Incredible Tax Shelter,' producer Merrill Linch, and 'Ashes Over Portland,' producer Chauncey Campbell. May I have the envelope, please? The big loser is Merrill Linch.

"Accepting the award for Merrill Linch, who could not be with us tonight, is E.F. Houghton."

"Ladies and gentlemen, Merrill wanted to be here this evening in the worst way. But as you know he's doing one to 10 in the Allenwood Penitentiary for padding the books and writing bum checks to pay the cast. 'The Incredible Tax Shelter' was a labor of love as far as he was concerned, and although it brought in $60 million at the box office, it never made back its negative cost. Why a jury refused to believe this, is something Merrill will never understand.

"To the talented people associated with 'The Incredible Tax Shelter,' who were cheated out of their profits, Merrill has asked me to say you've been great sports, and as soon as his parole comes through he'd be proud to make another film with each and every one of you."

nitpickers. They can stall for an hour over a nuance, or a word in a plank in a platform that will be little read and not long remembered.

The open drafting sessions on the 1976 GOP platform usually were one of the best spots in Kansas City for a snooze.

There were exceptions, but they grew out of the competition between candidates. There will be none of that in Detroit because Reagan doesn't have any competition.

In Kansas City, Reagan picked more fights than the Ford side was willing to wage. His delegates engineered a platform plank on "Morality in Foreign Policy," strongly implying that Ford's — or Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's — was lacking that ingredient.

The criticism was oblique but clear. So was the intent: to force a fight Reagan might well be able to win. Reagan supporters voted the plank into the platform sent to the convention floor. Ford strategists, gauging accurately the significance of such items, decided it would be better to swallow the criticism than to risk a roll call of the delegates.

So the Reagan language stood, and was promptly forgotten.

Most platform passages are.

the commission approved $368 million. In the past three years, $175.5 million has been requested, and the commission granted $123.2 million.

The average annual increase before was from 13 to 15 percent; but has dropped to the five to seven percent range since, for Duke Power and Carolina Power and Light. VEPCO rates in Northeastern counties have not dropped.

Also, both Duke and CP&L rates are running about 10 percent below national and Southeast averages, while VEPCO rates are about 21 percent above.

Carter Wins A Skirmish, But Brawl Shaping Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has won the skirmish over a rule to keep his hard-won delegates in line but his victory appears certain to set up a brawl at the Democratic National Committee in August.

Supporters of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, chafing from their defeats in the Democratic Rules Committee, are poised to bring convention fights on two key rules, including one that would "unbind" Carter's delegates and give Kennedy one last chance to wrest the Democratic nomination from the president.

James O'Hara, a former Michigan congressman who is a Kennedy supporter, said the fight would be continued at the convention level. The only difference, he said, is "we're going to win."

The rules committee continues its deliberations today but none of the proposals still hanging are as important as those disposed of Tuesday.

The prolonged fight between the incumbent president and Kennedy, long considered the crown prince of Democratic politics, has created a rift in a party that never has been exactly monolithic in character.

"You are about to hand the presidency to Ronald Reagan on a silver platter," said San Francisco Mayor Diane Feinstein, a Carter delegate, at one point. "I beg you not to do it."

As the rules committee opened its hearings Tuesday, the debate was almost bitter with each side accusing the other of changing the convention rules to fit their campaign strategy.

At issue was a rule that requires delegates to vote on the first ballot for the candidate on whose slate they ran. That rule also lets the candidate replace delegates who are wavering in their support with others who are sure to back his bid.

Unless changed, the rule would appear to guarantee Carter a first ballot victory. It takes 1,666 votes to win nomination. Carter has over 1,900 delegates while Kennedy has just over 1,200.

Kennedy backers claimed their effort to unbind the delegates was only an attempt to insure that delegates would be free to vote their conscience and to respond to changing circumstances. But Carter delegates contended Kennedy was trying to organize a raiding party on Carter's delegates.

Mayor Feinstein said Kennedy's strategy was "not to throw a convention into deliberations" as Kennedy supporters contended but "a strategy to arm twist 400 delegates and deny the president of the United States his rightful nomination."

And Don Fowler, floor manager of the rules fight for Carter, said "No one raised the question of fairness or equity or appropriateness of these rules until it was clear who was winning and who was losing the race for the Democratic presidential nomination."

But Mark Siegal, a former White House aide who split with the Carter administration over Middle East policy and later joined the Kennedy campaign, said the rule was a "delegate robot rule" that gave delegates no voice in the selection process.

"We must decide whether we have replaced a machine boss with a candidate boss," Siegal said. "Shall we let 148 years of history be swept away by the arrogance, the inexperience, and the paranoia of the insecure?"

The showdown vote came on a motion by O'Hara to replace the rules with those used in the 1972 and 1976 conventions. It lost by a vote of 87 1/2 to 65 1/2.

Carter supporters then defeated a motion to give any delegate removed by a candidate due process rights, including the right to a hearing and appeal, on a voice vote.

But Kennedy backers mustered enough support on both votes to insure a floor fight.

Carter supporters also pushed through rules making it more difficult to place minor candidates in nomination on the convention floor, to make it possible for a minority report to be withdrawn if half its signers withdrew, and to limit debate on minority reports to 20 minutes with no more than two people speaking on each side.

The panel also allowed roll call votes to be conducted by telephone on all questions except the nominations for president and vice president. Carter supporters said this would prevent marathon sessions with repeated state-by-state roll calls.

Season For Heat Stress

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina hasn't suffered the way some other Southern states have during the current heat wave, but health officials say this is the time of year to keep an eye open for the symptoms of heat stress.

Things to look for are cramps, fatigue, exhaustion or stroke — all of which come from overexposure to the sun and to heat.

"From now on through early September is when we see the most cases," says Dr. John Baker, director of emergency medicine at Charlotte Memorial Hospital.

Those most prone to heat stress are outdoor workers and white-collar workers used to air conditioning. Athletes also are susceptible.

The human body is much like a car engine. Heat builds as the body "burns" calories. As exercise continues, the heart pumps more blood which, like water in a radiator, carries heat to the skin, where it escapes through perspiration.

But if outside humidity is high, sweat doesn't evaporate quickly and body temperature rises.

If the victim becomes dehydrated, heat fatigue results, marked by increased perspiration, headaches, nausea, dizziness and childish outbursts.

Heat exhaustion follows, when the body's cooling system collapses. Body temperature shoots to 105 degrees, the skin becomes cool and clammy. The victim passes out as the blood-starved brain finally refuses to function.

Unconsciousness provides an unscheduled stop between heat exhaustion and the more serious stroke, when the skin becomes hot, flushed and dry again. Body temperature soars to 109 or 110 degrees. There is little hope for survival at this stage.

"The brain is fried," said Dr. Ron Rolett, assistant health director in Mecklenburg County.

Treatment for heat stress begins with rest, out of the sun. Elevate the feet. A teaspoon of salt dissolved in a glass of water or fruit juice should be given every 15 minutes for about an hour. Fruit juices are better because they replace potassium that help maintain the body's water balance.

Artificial Blood's Use By Doctors Increasing

By MARJORIE MILLER Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — If Dracula were to rob a blood bank in the year 2000, he might be disappointed to find only jars of chemicals — the "artificial blood" doctors already are using today.

"In the future, if you follow the imagination curve, we will just keep chemicals instead of blood," said Dr. Kenji Honda, a Japanese surgeon who has used artificial blood in 150 emergency operations.

The blood used by Honda — which is also being used experimentally in the United States — is made from "perfluorocarbons," chemicals that can imitate the oxygen-carrying capacity of real blood.

They can substitute for blood in situations where ordinary plasma or salt solution — two blood substitutes that do not carry oxygen — would be insufficient.

However, artificial blood cannot carry nutrients like real blood. Honda said he will begin work this year with Dr. Claude Romieu, a French surgeon, to develop an artificial blood that fulfills both functions as well as carrying vitamins and minerals.

Honda, who works at the Fukushima Medical College in Fukushima, Japan, was in Mexico City attending the 22nd World Congress of the International College of Surgeons.

Several companies are developing artificial bloods, including the Green Cross Corp. of Osaka, Japan, which makes Fluosol, the product used by Honda. But Honda said Fluosol, developed by Dr. Royochi Naito, was the first that did not have short-term side effects.

"Others cause bleeding, shock or clotting. This has no side effects if it is used for only two or three days," Honda said. The product can be used on any person, regardless of blood type, he said.

Honda said the artificial blood has not yet produced any rejection or allergic reaction. No one has died as a result of its use, although some patients who used it died from other causes.

He said the only problem was that after two or three days use, the liver begins to retain the artificial blood. "The chemicals are an emulsion, like milk. They are very small particles and cells in the liver retain them," he said.

"It does not interfere with the function of the liver, but there is retention and we don't know what that means," Honda said.

The current artificial bloods also do not include blood factors that regulate blood clotting, nor do they contain factors that give immunity to certain diseases, as real blood does.

"Hopefully, someday a person could live with artificial blood," Honda said. Then, he said, it could be used to treat leukemia patients and victims of other blood diseases.

Honda said he has only used artificial blood in emergency operations where there was bleeding and little or no real blood available. In the United States, it has been used on patients who were Jehovah's Witnesses, a sect that forbids transfusions on religious grounds.

Report Ill Shah Gains Strength

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The deposed Shah of Iran is reported gaining strength, but his temperature continues to fluctuate above normal and he remains in an intensive care unit at Cairo's Maadi military hospital.

Mark Morse, a spokesman for the exiled monarch, said he found Mohammad Reza Pahlavi "full of energy all of a sudden" when he saw him Tuesday night.

"It's amazing," Morse said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. "He is so much better than he's been in the past few days."

Asked about a report in the semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahran that Pahlavi's temperature continued to swing between 98.8 degrees and 100.4 degrees, Morse replied: "I heard them (the doctors) talk about that but this is nothing to worry about. He is fully alert and is feeling better."

President Anwar Sadat visited the shah Tuesday night for the second time since he returned to the hospital 13 days ago. The shah's doctors told the Egyptian leader his condition is improving gradually, the official Middle East News Agency reported.

The former Iranian ruler underwent surgery on June 30 to drain pus and fluid that accumulated in his abdomen because of an abscess in the pancreas, adjacent to the cancerous spleen that was removed last March. The abscess caused a general poisoning of the system and pushed his temperature as high as 104 degrees.

In Washington, meanwhile, an Iranian emigre in close contact with sources in his homeland said at least 20 Iranian extremists are either in Egypt or on their way there via Libya to try to assassinate relatives and associates of the shah who go there if he dies.

Those to be killed include the shah's twin sister Princess Ashraf, her son Prince Shahram and the former Iranian ambassador to Washington Ardeshtir Zahedi, the emigre said.

'Loitering' Question Put To Board In Williamston

WILLIAMSTON — Discussions on loitering in parking lots at night was one of the topics on the agenda of the Williamston board of commissioners meeting held Monday night.

A large contingent of interested persons attending the meeting wanted to know what action the board has taken or plans to take to help curb the loitering problem in Williamston's parking areas, particularly around on and around the Park Free Drive.

Mayor Robert Cowen noted that since the concerned group had last appeared before the board, the police have been taking action to clear the area at 11 p.m. One of the group, Mrs. Frances Barnes remarked that the congregation began much earlier, that on Sunday nights the noise began reaching high levels at about 8:30 p.m.

Mrs. Barnes also stressed that the loiterers engaged in drinking, littering, use of profanity and other actions that are violations of the public laws.

Another spokesman, Tony Warren, commented that closing the parking lots alone would not be the solution, but that a direct crackdown on violators should be undertaken.

Linwood Boyd suggested a change of curfew hour for the parking areas from 11 to 9 p.m., with an ordinance to be adopted that would provide back up power to police attempting to clear the areas.

A property owner, Ben Daniels, told board members that the situation is getting to be critical, and cited damage to his property as an example of the extent of the problems connected with the consistent loitering.

On another subject, several citizens requested to be provided specific information about sewer charges for the past month — and asked how much of the water charged to customers in the new sewer charge actually went through the sewage treatment plant.

Town Administrator J. B. Godwin explained that the sewer charge was one mandated by federal agencies and that specifics on increased revenue and some inadequacies in charging will not be available until the system had been through several billing periods.

One point of contention discussed deals with services provided by the town to areas outside the city limits. Spokesman Ray Franks said it is his opinion that Williamston taxpayers should not have to subsidize services to persons outside the town limits. He also raised the question of annexation of some areas, and suggested that perhaps the town board is not pushing hard enough for annexation and wondered if that was due to intimidation.

Another discussion centered on whether or not town employees should be allowed to live outside the city limits. Lillian Gurganus said that a stipulation should be placed on such jobs requiring that town employees must live within the city limits.

In matters acted on by the board:

— Approval was given to the proposed third year plan for the Comprehensive N. C. Community Development Program; — Action was tabled on a sewer line extension on U.S. 13-17-64 until a business in the area can be contacted;

— The board agreed to contact Seaboard Coastline Railroad and ask that they keep the track to Tar Heel Recycling Company intact until an agreement can be reached between the town and the company about the tiling of a drainage ditch in the area; and — A report by tax collector King Leggett revealed that 94 percent of the 1979 tax levy had been collected.

Red Cross Funds Are Considered

WILLIAMSTON — The question of whether or not public funds should be used to help provide funding for the Red Cross was one of the major topics of discussions held by the Martin County Board of Commissioners at its Monday meeting.

Several commissioners noted that that a representative of the Martin County Chapter of the American Red Cross had asked that the board consider funding a full time salary and fringe benefits for a Red Cross worker. The chapter now has a full time worker paid through funds obtained through local fund raising drives. It was also noted that the county has not included funds for the Red Cross program in budgets of the past two years, and that such funds were not included in the recently approved county budget.

County Manager Donnie Pittman was asked to contact other area governments to determine how Red Cross programs are operated and if county funds are being used for direct support to the organization. Board members agreed to further consider the Red Cross request for funds at a later date when more information is available.

At the Monday meeting, the board approved a number of line item budget transfers requested by the Martin County Industrial Development Commission. Also, transfers were granted for line items transfers for Martin Community College.

A tax collection report by Tax Collector Judith Critcher indicated that 96.75 percent of the 1979 tax levy has been collected.

Department of Transportation district engineer Earl Moore reported that paving crews were due to begin work soon on county projects including the Cowan, Reason and Modlin roads. Additionally, work on the N.C. 171 bridge near Jamesville is expected to be completed within two weeks.

Board Chairman John House pointed out that a roof problem exists at Martin Community College and that an architect needs to look at the roof and decide what work needs to be done. The board agreed to this action.

Break-In Of Store

A July 4th break-in at a rural farm center, which resulted in the theft of an estimated $4,500 in property, is under investigation by the Pitt County Sheriff's Department.

Included in the items reported stolen from Warren's Farm Supply on the Stokes Highway, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson, were 17 new chain saws, a pistol, a .410 gauge shotgun, a .30 caliber rifle with scope, a .12 gauge shotgun, six knives, and some $50 in silver from the cash register.

Sheriff Tyson said that entrance to the facility was gained after a hole was cut in the side of the building. He added that a hole was also cut inside the facility to gain access to the office.

Damage to the property was estimated at $400, he said.

Robber's Wait For Taxi Costly

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — The man who called a taxi after he allegedly robbed a Wells Fargo Bank here probably wishes he had taken the bus.

Police Lt. Robert Lund said a man walked into the bank Tuesday and handed a teller a note reading, "I have a gun. Give me $3,000, or I'll kill you."

The teller gave him the money and tripped the silent alarm, Lund said.

Then the man called a taxi and sat in the bank lobby to await its arrival — but the police came first.

Officers arrested Allen Roth, 36, who did not have a gun, and booked him for investigation of bank robbery.

Advertising His Rainy Weather

TEIGNMOUTH, England (AP) — "Come and be a drip for a week!" says the slogan adopted of an English hotel keeper advertising vacations for rain lovers at his beach resort on England's southwest coast, where it has been raining all summer.

Tired of complaints about the weather, Derek Oram is trying to use the downpour to his advantage. Guests at his Strathearn Hotel are advised they must wear raincoats and his menu features such fare as "galosh goulash."

Denning Is Named Principal

WILLIAMSTON — A 33-year old graduate of East Carolina University, Frederick Iley (Rick) Denning, was elected as the new principal of Williamston High School for the 1980-81 school year. The election was made at the July meeting of the Martin County Board of Education held Monday.

Denning has been principal of Pender High School near Burgaw since 1975. He will replace E. N. Farnell, who resigned as principal at the end of the past school year after serving in that capacity since 1965.

Denning's election was one of several personnel changes approved by the board Monday.

The only other agenda item at the July meeting was a review and discussion of the results of the 1979 state testing of pupils in grades 1, 2, 3, 6 and 9. A comparison of the results of Martin County students with ones in adjoining area schools was presented.

Reagan's Troops Hold Platform Reins

DETROIT (AP) — Conservative supporters of Ronald Reagan are exercising commanding control over the drafting of a Republican Party platform, easily winning preliminary approval for planks dropping support for the Equal Rights Amendment and advocating a constitutional ban on legalized abortions. Heated floor battles on both issues are possible at the convention next week, but Reagan strategists were hopeful the controversy would subside by then. The decision on the ERA plank reverses a 40-year commitment in Republican platforms for ratification of a women's rights amendment. ERA supporters vowed to go before the full 106-member platform committee today to try to reverse Tuesday's action by the human resources subcommittee.

But they acknowledged they had an uphill fight. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, committee chairman, predicted his panel would uphold the subcommittee's decisions at today's session. And, if ERA supporters are unable to get the 27 signatures needed to bring the issue to the convention floor as a minority report, they will have to abandon the effort.

Mary Louise Smith, a former Republican National Committee chairman who supports the ERA, accused her colleagues of taking "a short-term political view" to accommodate Reagan. She said the vote eventually could backfire on the party and cost Republicans votes in November.

"We will go beyond the platform committee to the floor if we have to," she said. "Whether we could get the support needed to do that, I don't know. We can try."

The plank recommended by the drafting unit squares with Reagan's own position of support for equal rights and opportunities for women but opposition to spelling out those rights in the Constitution.

The subcommittee approved the new language by voice vote after rejecting, 11-4, a proposal that the platform contain the same strong pro-ERA plank it contained in 1976.

Instead, the subcommittee approved a statement that the ERA is now "in the hands of the state legislatures."

"The states have a constitutional right to accept or reject a constitutional amendment without federal interference or pressure," the new platform language adds.

To be ratified, 38 states must approve the ERA. So far, 35 have although some have voted to rescind that support. Congress extended the deadline for ratification through mid-1982.

On a related issue, the panel also voted 11-4 to toughen anti-abortion language in the platform draft.

The subcommittee recommended a constitutional amendment banning abortions "to restore protection of the right to life for unborn children." It also expressed support for "congressional efforts to restrict the use of taxpayer's dollars for abortion."

The initial draft had voiced support only for "the efforts" of those seeking enactment of such a constitutional anti-abortion amendment, without actually declaring direct support for one.

Also adopted Tuesday was a statement urging Reagan, if elected, to fill Supreme Court vacancies only with justices who "respect the traditional family values and the sanctity of all human life."

All major changes in the platform draft made by the drafting subcommittee on Tuesday made the document more politically conservative than it had started out.

For instance, the subcommittee handling the foreign affairs plank added tough language condemning the Panama Canal treaties as an "unfortunate giveaway," blasting U.S. aid to "the Marxist government of Nicaragua," and calling for major new restrictions on foreign aid.

And the panel on energy added some praise for the Three Mile Island nuclear plant, which in March 1979 was the site of the nation's worst nuclear accident. It noted that the accident resulted in no loss of life and said that, while certain reforms such as better operator training might be needed, the ability to contain the accident demonstrated the basic soundness of the plant design.

Overall, the platform draft calls for continued reliance on nuclear energy, immediate decontrol of all domestic energy sources, a much larger defense budget, the Reagan-endorsed 10-percent tax cut for 1981, a smaller federal bureaucracy, less government interference with private business, and an end to the Carter administration's grain embargo against the Soviet Union.

Meanwhile, the GOP committee handling challenges of delegates planned to deliver a decision today on the fate of the GOP delegates pledged to John Anderson.

Before he became an independent presidential candidate April 24, Anderson got 31 percent of the vote in the March 4 Massachusetts primary — and got 13 delegates to next week's convention.

One of those 13 delegates, Paul W. Walter Jr. of Lee, Mass., told the panel on Tuesday that he still thinks Anderson is the best candidate for the job and "I won't give a loyalty oath" to support the party's nominee in November.

Still another GOP panel, the party's Rules Committee, voted Tuesday against giving representation at future conventions to Republicans who live abroad and greater representation to Puerto Rican Republicans.

The action was taken at the urging of a lawyer for the Reagan for President Committee, Roger Allan Moore, who said it would violate the "one man, one vote" concept and invite legal challenges.

Shooting Story Still Uncertain

KINGS MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — Details of a gunbattle at a public housing project that left one woman dead and four men wounded remained sketchy today as police sorted through conflicting statements from witnesses.

Acting Police Chief J.D. Barrett, who had imposed an order barring members of his department from discussing the shooting, said Tuesday he planned to issue a public statement today.

Barrett, in brief comments about the incident, has downplayed any racial overtones although the shooting involved whites and blacks in the racially mixed apartment complex.

A white woman, Beverly Ernestine Mauney, 22, was shot and killed during the disturbance early Monday morning. An autopsy report showed she was killed by a single gunshot to the heart.

A Forest City man, Henry Boone, 33, was charged Monday with second-degree murder. Boone, identified as a friend of the victim's mother — who lives in the complex — remained in jail at nearby Shelby.

One of those wounded, Ernest Mauney, said Tuesday he did not fire a shot although he had a gun. The dead woman was his daughter.

"I don't know what happened. I was high as a kite. But when I saw my daughter lying there on the floor, I got mad. I picked up a gun and went to the door," Mauney said.

He said his back was to the door when he was shot.

Authorities say the shooting apparently followed a simmering dispute that began in a playground Saturday between black children and white children from the apartment complex.

But Thomas Harper, director of the Kings Mountain Housing Authority, which oversees the apartments, said Tuesday the Mauney family had been evicted from another apartment before moving in to the Chesterfield Court complex. After their arrival, Harper said, police had been called several times to quell disturbances in their apartment.

The complex has been virtually empty since Monday morning's shooting. Many of the residents have moved in temporarily with friends or relatives, and some have moved to other lodging.

BURMA ROAD REPAIR
PEKING (AP) — Part of the Burma Road of WWII fame has been rebuilt to eliminate steep grades and sharp turns, and meet growing traffic needs, China's official Xinhua news agency says.

Prince To Quit Country Home

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles will give up his English country home because of travel commitments, a Buckingham Palace spokesman says.

Chevening House, on a 3,500-acre estate in Kent county, was bequeathed to the nation by Earl Stanhope when he died in 1967. But since the heir to the throne agreed to take over the stately 17th century house with 115 rooms, he has officially used it only once.

"In view of his many engagements at home and abroad, his highness does not feel it would be right or realistic to keep the house," the spokesman said.

It was hoped in royal and governmental circles that Prince Charles might have moved to Chevening House permanently if he married. It is only 20 miles from London.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher will have to find a new occupant for the house. If she cannot, the building probably will go to the National Trust, a foundation that preserves historic houses and land of scenic value.

Barry Gibb Is Asking A Fence

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Barry Gibb, lead singer of the Bee Gees, may just be trying to keep "Stayin' Alive" with his request for a 9-foot-high fence around his Miami Beach mansion.

The 33-year-old Gibb, who paid $1,047,500 a year ago for his 10-bedroom, seven-bath beachfront home, apparently thinks his present 6-foot-high fence lets his fans get too close.

He also asked Miami Beach zoning officials for permission to erect a permanent wrought-iron gate across the entrance to his property and thus keep the curious from taking a dip in his pool, using his beach, playing on his tennis courts or climbing into his tree house.

Plan To Extend Powerless Wage-Price Guidelines

By GLENN RITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is planning a third year of anti-inflation wage and price guidelines, despite acknowledging they have been "essentially powerless" against rising interest rates and oil and food costs and may be less useful because of the recession. Robert Russell, director of the president's Council on Wage and Price Stability, pointed to a resurgence in wholesale prices last month and emphasized that "inflation certainly is not over." The Labor Department reported Tuesday that wholesale prices rose 0.8 percent in June, more than in the previous two months — although energy prices fell for the first time since March 1978. The index for finished goods other than food and energy rose 1.1 percent in June. "We must have continued restraint," Russell said. "We've had moderation in food and energy prices recently, but how long we can rely on (that) is worrisome." The second year of the voluntary wage and price standards ends Sept. 30. Russell warned that the underlying rate of inflation — which excludes food, energy and interest rates — will be at least 8 percent when recovery from the recession begins next year and a tax cut is expected to go into effect.

Moreover, the administration's mid-year budget review, due July 21, is expected to predict that consumer prices will rise at an annual rate of 11.9 percent in 1980 and 9.8 percent next year. That same review is expected to predict an unemployment rate peaking at or near 8.5 percent, which means 8.9 million people out of work. The revised forecast is considerably higher than the administration's March prediction of 7.2 percent joblessness by year's end, but it still is somewhat more optimistic than projections of some private economists.

Russell, unveiling a detailed evaluation of the wage and price guidelines, conceded they have had limited effect to date in controlling crude oil price rises — which jumped 110 percent between early 1979 and early 1980 — or increases in mortgage interest rates. These two items were responsible for nearly half the inflation in 1979 and even more than that in the first three months of 1980, when consumer prices were rising at an annual rate exceeding 18 percent, Russell said. But even with these limitations, Russell said, the voluntary guidelines have held down price increases and wage demands. "The council estimates that the underlying (inflation) rate would have been 1 to 1.5 percentage points greater during the first year and a half without the program," a council paper says. That may not seem like much, Russell said, but to lower inflation by 1 percent through fiscal and monetary restraint could mean a 2 percent decline in real growth, or about $47 billion in lost output.

The council also claimed the annual rate of wage inflation would have been almost 2 percent higher without the standards. Russell said it is still uncertain whether current standards will be extended beyond Oct. 1 or new ones developed during this election year. Current wage standards call for increases of no more than 7½ percent to 9½ percent after last year's 7 percent limit. The price standard asks companies to hold increases to the same level as increases in 1976-1977. In other economic news Tuesday, Assistant Treasury Secretary C. Fred Bergsten said that despite recent large trade deficits, the nation's export performance is "considerably stronger" than most observers recognize. He said the nation's inflation-adjusted share of the world export market rose steadily over the last decade from 19.2 percent in 1971 to 20.3 percent in 1979.

SEALED WITH A KISS — When Carol Baker volunteered for the sea lion show at Miami's Seaquarium, she didn't know what was in store for her. Suddenly she was confronted by a face-full of wet whiskers from

Considering Minimum Published Milk Prices

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Milk Commission is considering a plan that would establish minimum, published prices for raw milk in an effort to clamp down on below-cost milk sales by processors. The commission now compiles general information on average milk production costs, but it does not set a minimum cost. By law, processors and supermarkets are prohibited from selling milk for less than the amount it costs them to produce or to purchase. Grady Cooper Jr., executive secretary of the commission, said Tuesday he had proposed the change for efficiency and to speed up handling of complaints about below-cost sales. Cooper said the current system "a time consuming process which often results in a finding of border line cases or a finding that is below cost." He said that, under his proposal, the commission would establish a minimum based on the average production costs incurred by processors. Processors selling milk below that level would be required to file documents with the state board justifying the lower price. Some commission members Tuesday were opposed to the plan, contending efficient processors could increase their profits excessively by selling at the higher price. "I'm dead set against it," said commissioner Oren J. Heffner of Mocksville, owner of an independent chain of food stores. "A real efficient fellow could sit there and take in a windfall." Any action on the proposal has been delayed until Aug. 12. Cooper also recommended establishment of a new accounting procedure to standardize the way processors establish their production costs. Processors now use their own accounting systems, making it difficult for the commission staff to compare costs. The commission also released results of a statewide survey showing that larger supermarkets pay $1.79 a gallon for milk, while smaller markets pay $1.83 and convenience stores $1.97. In-house handling expenses push those costs to $1.93 for larger supermarkets, $2.01 for smaller markets and $2.12 for convenience stores, the commission said.

Telethon Hosts For Burn Study

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Redd Foxx and Sammy Davis Jr. are planning to host a star-studded telethon July 18-19 that they hope will raise $1 million for the Richard Pryor Burn Foundation. The money will be used for medical research into burns and financial aid to burn victims, said a spokeswoman for the foundation, which was started shortly after Pryor was critically burned in a June 9 accident at his Northridge home. Patricia Edwards said Foxx began planning the 12-hour telethon after visiting Pryor in the burn center of Sherman Oaks Community Hospital, where the comedian has undergone two skin graft operations and remains in serious but stable condition. A hospital spokesman said doctors may determine today whether additional skin graft surgery is necessary. The telethon will be broadcast on local stations in Glendale, Los Angeles and Hartford, Conn., Ms. Edwards said.

Hospital Treats George Wallace

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Hospital officials say former Alabama Gov. George Wallace may return home Monday after undergoing treatment with the controversial drug dimethyl sulfoxide. Chuck Williams, spokesman for the University of Oregon Health Sciences Center, said Wallace is resting "as comfortably as can be expected." Wallace began receiving the experimental drug July 1 in an attempt to relieve pain resulting from the paralysis he suffered in a 1972 assassination attempt. DMSO is a wood byproduct that some researchers claim is an extremely effective pain reliever. It is available nationally only as a treatment for a rare liver ailment. But some clinics are being allowed to experiment with wider uses of the drug.

State Boosts Interest Rates

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The interest rate the state charges banks and savings and loan associations for invested state funds was raised to 8½ percent Tuesday. Treasurer Harlan Boyles said the increase, from 8 percent, was based on an increase in interest rates paid for U.S. government and agency securities.

Catholics, Orthodox Launch Talks On Church Union

By STEELE HOLMAN
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Centuries after the Great Schism split the Churches of Rome and Constantinople, 60 Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox churchmen have begun the task of healing the old wounds and spiritually reuniting almost a quarter of the world's population.

Greek Orthodox Archbishop Stylianos, primate of Australia and New Zealand, was chosen president of the Orthodox delegation in the reunification session May 29 through June 5. The primate discussed the talks, held on the Greek islands of Patmos and Rhodes, while he was in Atlanta for the Greek Orthodox Clergy-Laity Congress. The two churches, which separated in the Great Schism of 1054, have slowly begun turning toward one another, first with what the archbishop called a "dialogue of love" in the 1960s and later with a "dialogue of theology" initiated about five years ago.

Technical meetings during the late 1970s decided the sacraments, which both churches have in common, would be the topic of an initial series of talks beginning with the June session.

The reunification of about 200 million Orthodox and more than 600 million Roman Catholics is the "ultimate goal" of the dialogue, but Christians should not expect that within the next few years, he said.

Following discussions of the sacraments, all other matters of church doctrine and practice will be considered over a period of years. Somewhere down the road, the primate said, delegations will tackle the issues of papal primacy and infallibility, which he called the "crucial point" of the discussions.

The June meeting, in fact, almost collapsed when a newspaper reported that Pope John Paul had said papal infallibility would not be negotiable in the dialogue.

The session continued only after a Catholic delegate assured the Orthodox the report was misleading.

After a day of worship and prayer on Patmos, the group repaired to larger Rhodes, which had suitable facilities for the four-day-long discussion portion of the meeting.

Both groups of theologians and clergymen met separately for two days before bilateral talks began, Archbishop Stylianos said. The next two days were devoted to setting procedures for continuing the dialogue.

Three committees were established to study "the mystery of the church and the Holy Eucharist (sacrament) in the light of the mystery of the Holy Trinity,"

he said.

The main body meets again in two years, but a coordinating committee will meet in Venice next May to monitor the work of the committees.

"My general impression is that we started in a very good way, in a mature attitude toward each other. I would say nobody could have expected more from this first meeting. It was not meant to be an extensive discussion of theological items as such," he said.

"The schism did not come in a day — the schism was a process very long and very deep," the primate said. He said differences developed between the East and West beginning in the First Century and became a "progressive alienation" by the Seventh Century.

Centuries of antagonisms culminated in the Great Schism of 1054, which was not caused by "the event of one day," he said.

"The reconciliation and reunification of the East and West will not be within five or 10 years. None of us is so naive as to believe we will be able to bridge in a few years what was broached in hundreds of years," Archbishop Stylianos said.

"Our task is to learn why we came to this point, why it was possible we came to be so alienated," he said, "why it is possible to have a common Lord and not see him as a common Lord, how we can have common sacraments and not share the same cup.

"My opinion is that in this commission we should, with prayer, hard work and mutual respect, clear the air and see the concrete and real dimensions of our common treasures," he said. "But at the same time, see ... our differences."

Send Spent Fuel To S.C. Plant

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) —

A shipment of spent fuel passed through Asheville Tuesday en route to Duke Power Company's Oconee, S.C., plant.

The fuel had been in Lynchburg, Va., for several days of research testing.

A Highway Patrol spokesman said no problems were encountered with the truck shipment. Two inspectors from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission drove over the route before the path was approved for transporting the waste material, the patrol spokesman said.

Biblical Scene Wins National Art Contest

NEW YORK (AP) — Like many creative types — older and much more famous — 10-year-old Stephanie Wittmer of Ponca City, Okla., doesn't like to talk about her work. "I just do it," she says simply.

What the fifth-grader does is glue-crafting and she does it well enough to have recently been named grand prize winner in the 1979-80 Elmer's National Glue-Craft Contest based on the theme, "Famous People ... Famous Things."

Stephanie prevailed over youngsters from across the nation, kindergarten age to grade 8, to win a $1,000 U.S. Savings Bond and other prizes.

As her winning entry, the youngster fashioned a witty sculptured tableau depicting "Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden" using glue dough, an easily molded mixture made with glue, cornstarch and flour. Asked why she chose a biblical theme, Stephanie replied: "Because everyone knows them — I hope!"

Runner-up laurels in the competition, which drew scores of entries from every section of the country, went to 13-year-old Joseph Solt of Mountain Top, Pa. The eighth-grade student created a sculpture of the mythic figures, "Paul Bunyan and Babe."

Some 40,000 contest kits were requested by interested teachers, many of whom used the initial phase of the competition as an "in-class" art project. All of the entries were the sole work of the students, who could use any materials they chose as long as some glue was included.

"We are all amazed and delighted at the imagination and humor that so many of these young craftspeople showed in their entries, and the high quality of so much of the work," said Dr. Paul J. Patane, museum coordinator of the New York City Board of Education and one of the four judges.

Children's crafts-books author Phyllis Fiarotta, another judge, added: "Some of the projects, like Stephanie's, were astonishingly inventive. Give youngsters any material plus the freedom to do whatever they wish and you're going to get some truly original and delightful efforts — as this contest proves."

"I would compare many of these youngsters to so-called primitive artists. Since they haven't been taught any rules yet, their imaginations have free rein to take them wherever they may. The results are often fascinating."

Since the glue-craft competition's inception five years ago, young imaginations, encouraged by enthusiastic teachers, have created thousands of original works using a limitless range of common, everyday materials — food, fabrics, discarded metal, pebbles, stones, chalk, sand, trash, rice, old posters, cardboard, newspapers and magazines, unidentifiable found objects, sawdust and, of course, glue.

In form, the crafts submitted in the contest over the years have included everything from papier-mache dolls, figures, and animals (real and fancied), dioramas, plaques, mobiles, sculptured works and dimensional posters to collages, miniature urban, rural and space landscapes and mosaics.

"Art is an exploration," says Stanley Rose, director of art for the New York City public schools who has judged several previous competitions. "The child combines materials, whatever they are, in a basic act of selection which is the beginning of creativity. The child chooses the tools that will express his or her particular message or, if you will, artistic vision. That's how artists are born."

U.S. Apology To Iran Advocated

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The annual conference of the Church of the Brethren called on the U.S. government to publicly apologize to Iran's people "for its complicity in the repressive policies" of the former shah. Delegates claimed "illegal actions of the United States in establishing the reign of the deposed shah" and also said Iran's holding of U.S. hostages is illegal and called for their release.

The 175,000-member "peace" denomination, with its historic pacifist position, pledged support to conscientious objectors to draft registration and conscription and also said:

"Open, non-evasive withholding of war taxes is a legitimate witness of our conscientious intention to follow the call of discipleship to Jesus Christ."

Refugees In Long Wait

An Early Leak About Abscam

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — By compiling information leaked through the federal government, reporters began closing in on the FBI's undercover Abscam investigation two months before the inquiry became public, a Justice Department official has testified.

Peter Vaira, the U.S. attorney for eastern Pennsylvania, told U.S. District Judge John Fullam on Tuesday that when the story finally broke Feb. 2 much of the information in at least one news account was contained in a confidential department memo circulated Dec. 12.

"I knew it was about to blow, that the top was about to come off," Vaira said.

His testimony came at a hearing on motions by four Abscam defendants who are seeking to have indictments against them dismissed on the grounds that leaks poisoned the government's case.

Vaira said he first was approached by the media about Abscam in November 1979.

"Brian Ross, an organized crime reporter with NBC who I've known for 10 years, called and said he understood there was an investigation of Sen. Harrison Williams of New Jersey," he said. "I replied, facetiously, that I had heard that rumor for a long time and there was nothing to it."

Williams has not been indicted.

Vaira testified he saw Ross the week of Jan. 28 and that Ross mentioned there was a big investigation and there were a number of congressmen. He gave me names — some were wrong, some were right.

"I told him that he couldn't run with the story, that it was very sensitive — that it could blow us out of the water," he said. "He had a great deal of knowledge ... But he agreed not to run it."

Ross could not be reached for comment.

Abscam is the FBI code word for the "sting" operation called Abdul Enterprises, Inc. in which undercover agents masqueraded as fictitious Middle East businessmen seeking political favors for money.

Seeking to have the Abscam indictments dismissed are attorney Howard L. Criden and City Councilmen George Schwartz, Harry Jannotti and Louis Johanson. They were indicted May 22 on charges of conspiracy, racketeering and attempted extortion.

Vaira testified he also learned that at least two other reporters — Tony Marro of Newsday and Howard Blum of The New York Times — had pinned down the story.

"Marro called and said he had the story in the bank — in newspaper language that's the computer. And he could push the button and have it in print in a minute. But he said, 'Don't worry. I don't intend to blow your investigation.'"

Marro acknowledged Tuesday that he knew about the inquiry, but refused further comment. A.M. Rosenthal, executive editor of The New York Times, refused to comment on Vaira's testimony.

Paratroops In Big Jump

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (AP) — Thousands of combat-ready soldiers from the sky fluttered into the piney woods of the Florida Panhandle Tuesday in an airborne exercise aimed at demonstrating the U.S. military's readiness for combat.

The make-believe assault to recover military secrets aboard a downed airplane was a joint Army-Navy training mission by 2,500 paratroopers from Fort Bragg, N.C.

The parachutists were dropped in one swoop by cargo planes after the area had been scouted by F-4 Phantom jet fighter planes as part of the mission.

"It was a show of force, of the mobility of U.S. forces and the ability to project power into any part of the world," said Gen. R.E. Huyser, commander of the Air Force's Military Airlift Command. "It was a significant exercise."

Huyser claimed it was the largest parachute operation since the Normandy invasion in World War II. That invasion led to V-E day May 8, 1945, the day of the German surrender and the official end of the European phase of the war.

Huyser said the exercise demonstrated the military's capability to quickly deploy a large force capable of gaining a foothold in a crisis area and repelling the enemy.

"Everything we do is training toward that kind of thing," Huyser said. "These forces would be used in rapid deployment. We are concentrating on that and plan to increase its use."

"The Joint Chiefs of staff have authorized us to train additional crews for airborne operations," Huyser said.

Changing Wasteful Ways Isn't Easy In America

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Newsfeatures Writer

An American, it has been said, is one who saves resources by driving an eight-cylinder Buick to deliver a bag of aluminum cans to a recycling center.

An American, an electric utility engineer has observed, is one who conserves energy by turning his wintertime thermostat down to 68 at night, then opens the window for fresh air.

An American, a conservationist is one who seeks a more simple, efficient life by canning food at home, on an electric range that delivers in heat only a third of the energy used to generate the electricity.

Changing wasteful ways, it turns out, may be chic, but it isn't easy—even if it is more critical than ever, what with Mideast oil increasingly vulnerable, with prices of energy and materials rising daily, with the hidden costs of a profligate industrial society bared by discoveries of toxic waste dumps.

It was 20 years ago that Vance Packard pronounced us the Waste Makers. It was 11 years ago that we looked back from the moon and decided that the Earth is a fragile spaceship but that technology can solve any problem, even garbage. Ten years ago we celebrated Earth Day, seven years ago the oil embargo struck, six years ago the Club of Rome said our rapacious appetite for resources just couldn't continue.

Still, Americans represent 6 percent of the world's people devouring 30 percent of its annual output of resources. Still, much of them go down the tubes, up the flue or onto the trash heap needlessly.

Tinkering here and there has made us more efficient users of fuel, metals, minerals and fibers than a decade ago. And a consensus seems to be merging that so much inefficiency still prevails in our kitchens, cars and factories that our waste may be the best new source of energy and materials.

But Americans are finding that the effort to conserve often bumps into difficulties and riddles.

For one thing, conservation can be complicated.

A third of America's energy is used to heat buildings. Experts say a third or more of this heat is wasted through inefficiency. Yet only 6 million of the 90 million income taxpayers claimed a deduction for home insulation the first year it was offered. And a Long Island homebuilder recently complained that buyers prefer luxuries to energy-saving design.

"It's not so much that people are unwilling," says Roger Sant, director of the energy productivity center of the Carnegie-Mellon Institute of Research.

Conservation can be costly. An energy-efficient home may cost $2,500 more than a typical one, although the extras will pay for themselves over time. Similarly, air conditioners that draw less electricity and save money in the long run cost more to buy.

Or take the cost of junked autos. Americans retire up to 9 million cars a year containing 10 billion to 15 billion tons of materials. That's roughly the amount of scrap iron and steel we export each year to nations like Japan, leading to the irony that this year's worn-out Oldsmobile may be reincarnated as next year's Toyota.

Thomas Williams of the Environmental Protection Agency's Office of Public Awareness recalls seeing acres of abandoned autos in the mountains of Pennsylvania and laments: "We are going deeper and deeper to mine iron because we haven't figured out a way to recycle them."

His EPA colleague, Frank Smith, an economist, points out that "it's certainly a material waste, but is it economical to spend $100 for a wrecker to pull an abandoned auto out of a ditch for only $25 or $30 worth of scrap materials?"

Finally, conservation restricts convenience, and convenience has become the lubricant of the American way of life.

A national law requiring deposits on soda pop and beer containers would reduce litter and municipal garbage, save energy and materials, make beverages a bit cheaper and create new jobs, a Cabinet-level government committee says. It also notes that people would find returnable bottles an inconvenience. And some beverage industry workers would have to relocate. Thus, efforts to pass state bottle bills have brought mixed results.

Packaging, much of it unessential, eats up material and accounts for a third or more of municipal waste. "Excess packaging is bad, but if you want fresh fruit from California on your table in Manhattan, you'll have to have a lot of packaging," Williams says.

The resources required by the American way of life are enormous. In one year, the economy uses for each person a half ton of iron and steel, nine tons of building materials, 55 pounds of aluminum, 46 pounds of copper, lead and zinc, and 172 pounds of plastic. If you think your life is simple, consider that a telephone is built of 42 of nature's 92 elements in the form of 35 metals and alloys, 14 plastics, 12 adhesives and 20 kinds of semiconductors.

Adding all energy sources, each American uses up the equivalent of about 7.5 gallons of oil a day, twice the rate in England and 55 times the rate in India.

"The richer a society is, the more wasteful it seems to be," says Frank Huddle, a materials specialist at the Library of Congress. "America is by definition a wasteful society. There are few auto scrap yards in England. How many do you think I saw in Pakistan?"

To be sure, attitudes and habits have changed over the 70s, not so much for conscience-raising as price-raising.

At 22 cents a pound for scrap aluminum, collecting beer cans is no longer the exclusive preserve of the Boy Scouts. With gasoline more than a dollar a gallon, car buyers have been well ahead of Detroit in thinking small.

The consumption of energy and materials — plastics excluded — has grown more slowly over the Seventies than Gross National Product. For example, GNP grew by 32 percent between 1968 and 1978, but the consumption of iron grew only 7 percent and aluminum only 28 percent.

In other words, Americans are using less to do more. The Cabinet-level conservation committee called that "a major shift in the long-term economic history of the nation."

Silver in photographic film is now reclaimed. The aluminum industry recycles a third of the 35 billion cans it makes a year. Machine parts are now pressed out of metal powder, reducing scraps. Metal plating is microscopically thin. And milk cartons are more clever than ever, a good example of how a seemingly minor change can make a major difference.

Every school day more than 40 million people drink milk from a half-pint container — a half-billion gallons a year in 9 billion cartons. Placed side by side they would stretch 426,000 miles — to the moon and more than halfway back — and they all get thrown away.

Five years ago, International Paper Co. designed a new carton that holds the same amount of milk but requires 16 percent less paperboard. About half the cartons now in use are of this new design. If all were, the company estimated, 58,000 tons of materials would be saved each year.

That would mean 1,000 fewer rail cars and 4,000 fewer truckloads to deliver the milk. The EPA estimated that air pollution emissions would be reduced by 1,600 tons and water pollutants by 600 tons from the paper savings alone. And an equivalent of 1,100 barrels of oil a day would be conserved.

Huge savings are at least possible in other directions. Several new studies — by the Harvard Business School and the National Academy of Science, for example — suggest that up to half the energy used is wasted through inefficiency; it could be saved by redesigning a broad range of energy-using appliances.

And two-thirds of the non-fuel materials could be re-used without discomfort, says Denis Hayes, a former researcher at Worldwatch

Institute and now director of the Solar Energy Research Institute.

About 70 percent of all metal is used just once, he says. Only one-fifth of the paper is recycled.

People exercised about waste in the economy often point to packaging as a compelling example. Packaging accounts for a fifth of the weight of groceries and a tenth of the price. Packaging costs a family of four about $400 a year.

Half the nation's paper, three-fourths of its glass, a third of its plastics, 40 percent of its aluminum and 8 percent of its steel are used to wrap and decorate consumer products, Purcell says.

"There's excess packaging," the EPA's Williams acknowledges. "But be careful. In many nations there's much more spoilage of farm produce before it gets to the table than here. That's due to packaging."

Computer Age Cancels The Slide Rule Contest

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — As the closed-door competition ended, one of the coaches peered in through a slit in the curtains.

"This time," he said to no one in particular, "there is not a year."

The slide rule has been buried. For 40 years, high-school math wards have gathered here for the University Interscholastic League slide rule competition. This year's meet was the final one.

The slide rule, the hand-cranked dinosaur of mathematics — gives way next year to state competition using the microchip marvels of the hand-held calculator.

Several coaches and officials agreed the slide rule was "doomed" to antique stores.

"Once you go to a calculator, you never go back to a slide rule," said Dr. John Cogdell, a university of Texas professor of electrical engineering who ran the contest.

Cogdell is designing next year's initial state-wide calculator contest.

"It's more fun, it's quicker and it's more accurate," he said.

You can hardly buy them slide rules anymore, except for the cheap little plastic jobs," said Jack Sell, coach of the Port Arthur Jefferson team.

the Ferrari of slide rules. "They quit making them," said Cogdell. "They shipped the dies to Mexico and they were inadvertently destroyed. That's the end of it."

Sixty-one regional winners came here for the last state meet. It's a 30-minute race with 75 problems. Some of the contestants practice up to four hours a day. Many are already preparing for next year's calculator contest.

Slide rule training is rigorous. Sell said some coaches made the students practice with two radios blaring — each tuned to a different station — to teach the value of concentration. Others practice near busy windows on busy streets.

Sell initially resisted the coming of the computer age. He said he feared a calculator contest "would not be anything but a typing contest."

He has changed his mind, but Ford Roberson, 1968 state slide rule champ who now coaches the Andrews team, is still resisting.

"Would you learn anything if you could push a button and have it all handed to you?" he asked. "It's a little toy that's fun to play with," he said, adding, however, it can be a "great and powerful tool."

Steve Justiss, coach at Daingerfield, agreed the contest will be missed.

"There's as much reason to do this as there is to throw the discs," he said.

But Justiss, who learned the wonders of the slide rule after he was named math coach, said he was resigned to the calculator onslaught.

And Sell, now eager to move on to the new technology, admitted to a touch of nostalgia.

"At my meet in Port Arthur we played Taps."

Laicization On Limited Basis

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II reportedly has begun reviewing applications from priests for return to the lay status and approved some of the requests but on a more limited basis than before.

He had halted the process when he became pope in 1978, although until then, the dispensations had been regularly granted by the late Pope Paul VI — about 30,000 in his 15 years in office.

A backlog of about 4,000 unanswered applications had built up under John Paul II, and the National Catholic News Service says it has learned he began acting in mid-June on some of them.

The news service also quoted reliable sources as predicting the early issuance of a Vatican document setting stricter rules for laicizing priests than those in effect under Paul VI.

Arrest Man In Pitt Case

WINSTON-SALEM - A 48-year-old Winston-Salem man was arrested here by Pitt County authorities, working with local police, in connection with an incident of false pretense involving an Ayden minister.

Pitt Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that Deputy Lee Pascasio and a Winston-Salem police officer arrested Phillip N. Williford and charged him with false pretense stemming from the Ayden incident.

The sheriff said that Williford allegedly sold, under false pretense, a hosiery distributorship involving several counties to the Rev. R. T. McCarter of Ayden for $1,500. It is alleged that Williford then went back to McCarter and told him that the first $1,500 check had been damaged and obtained a second $1,500 check. Williford then allegedly cashed both checks, Sheriff Tyson said.

The sheriff, who said that Williford is also wanted in Virginia on similar charges, reported that the defendant is in Pitt County Jail under $100,000 bond.

Measuring The Action

Market breadth is a term used quite frequently by market commentators. Market breadth is simply a measurement of the number of stocks advancing versus the number declining. In most cases this refers to a single day's market activity. The advance-decline ratio is another phrase denoting the same thing.

The ratio of advances to declines has considerable predictive value. By setting up a continuous record of daily breadth, the cumulative differential between daily advances and declines gives a good indication of the strength or weakness of the overall market. Since the complete ratio of advances and declines encompasses a wider universe of stocks, what the advance-decline ratio indicates frequently is more important than what is reflected in the popular averages.

When the number of declines is greater than the number of issues advancing, then a market decline can be expected shortly. The longer this condition exists, the greater the chances for such a decline. Normally one or two days is long enough. When the number of issues advancing outnumbers those declining, the market averages may be close to an advance. The advance-decline ratio is thus a good tool for the short term.

When the advance-decline ratio is constructed to cover a longer period of time, this line is useful in predicting the intermediate term outlook. There are a number of rules used to analyze this. In essence, major tops and bottoms usually are preceded by action in the advance-decline line that forecasts those turning points. Sometimes the signals are very obvious. The advance-decline line frequently indicates the severity of a decline or the quality of an advance and thus answers the question of whether or not it will continue.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a slight loss today, pulling back a bit after Tuesday's unsuccessful assault on the 900 level in the Dow Jones industrial average.

The Dow average of 30 blue chips dropped 51 to 896.84 in the first half hour.

Losers outnumbered gamblers by a narrow margin in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Twice during Tuesday's session the Dow edged up to within a fraction of 900.

The last time it closed above that point was Feb. 13 of this year, when it finished at an 18-month high of 903.84.

But both advances ran into stiff resistance from selling by investors who have come to see it as the upper limit of a trading range in which the market has fluctuated for much of the past few years.

Today's early prices included Boeing, unchanged at 38. Gulf Oil, up 1/4 at 44 1/4, and Holiday Inns, down 1/4 at 21 1/4.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average slipped .86 to 897.35.

Declines outnumbered advances by a narrow margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 45.83 million shares, against 42.54 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index lost 21 to 67.37. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 1.30 at 308.59.

Prison Fight Stirs Melee

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Inmates of a medium security prison were being held in lock-up today after a "personal fight" between a white prisoner and a black prisoner sparked a melee by 20 others, officials said.

Five inmates were hospitalized after the 15-minute disturbance Tuesday, said Carolyn Robinson of the state Department of Corrections.

No weapons were found but staffing was beefed up, she said.

No charges were filed immediately.

About 100 inmates stood by and watched as the fight broke out around in an exercise yard at the prison for 18- to 25-year-old first offenders, said to Ms. Robinson.

The cause of the initial fistfight and the identities of the participants in the melee were not immediately available, although Ms. Robinson said the brawlers were divided mostly along racial lines.

"It started with a fight between two inmates, and it looks like the loser's friends challenged the winner," she said.

An official who spoke with inmates after the lock-up said they had complained about 105-degree heat and high humidity, among other things, Ms. Robinson said.

Five inmates were taken to Kino Community Hospital for treatment of such injuries as a broken finger, a possibly fractured pelvis and cuts, she said.

There had been no serious incidents before at the 328-inmate prison which opened in 1978, she said.

Killed Herself In A Police Car

ORANGE PARK, Fla. (AP) — A 25-year-old woman arrested on prostitution charges killed herself in the back seat of a police car after officers tried for an hour to dissuade her, authorities say.

The woman, whose identity was not released, was dead on arrival at the Greater Orange Park Community Hospital early Tuesday, police said.

Two officers arrested the woman at a hotel in this community near Jacksonville and allegedly found a pistol and marijuana in her room. While officers were out of the cruiser, the woman managed to gain control of the 25-caliber pistol.

SAVING MONEY

DAKAR, Senegal (AP) — Senegal is closing half its diplomatic missions abroad to save money, the government of the West African nation says.

A SON'S EPITAPH — John Bartucci painted this sign on the shoulder of a Chicago expressway at the spot where his father's body was found slumped in the front seat of the family car 15 hours after he allegedly suffered a heart attack on Monday. Not a single passerby, police or highway emergency crew, stopped to check out the vehicle. (AP Laserphoto)

Wholesale Coffee Cut

Declining prices for unprocessed green coffee beans have prompted the nation's three largest coffee roasters to reduce wholesale ground coffee prices 15 cents a pound.

General Foods Corp. of White Plains, N.Y., the industry leader, confirmed Tuesday the wholesale price of its Maxwell House ground coffee was cut to $3.08 a pound from $3.23 July 3.

Second-ranked Procter & Gamble Co. said in Cincinnati it posted a $3.08-a-pound wholesale price on Folger's ground coffee Monday. No. 3 Hills Brothers Inc. of San Francisco said it also cut its wholesale ground coffee price 15 cents to $3.08 the same day.

The wholesale price changes could be reflected in retail prices in about a month. But many supermarkets that use coffee as a "loss-leader" to attract customers or obtain discounts from roasters for large-volume purchases sell coffee below wholesale.

At one New York City market, Folger's ground coffee was selling Tuesday for $2.69 a pound, 39 cents below its wholesale list price.

Among other reductions, Procter & Gamble cut the price of Folger's Flaked coffee to $2.52 per 13-ounce can from $2.65.

General Foods and Procter & Gamble each reduced wholesale prices of some instant coffee brands 2 cents an ounce. Hills Brothers also cut instant coffee prices but did not disclose the amount of the reductions.

Green coffee from Brazil, the world's largest coffee exporter, was selling for $1.70 a pound this week, down from $2 at the beginning of January and $1.80 in mid-June.

annual reports of the city and joint city-county Boards of Adjustments; Consideration of a resolution authorizing the filing of fiscal year 1981 transit assistance applications; consideration of an ordinance regulating storm water detention; recommendation by the Recreation and Parks Commission that the new tennis center at Evans Park be named the River Birch Tennis Center;

Commission members last night also awarded several bids for the purchase of equipment and supplies, including: three compact pickup trucks, Phelps Chevrolet, $16,825; one air compressor, N.C. Equipment Co., $8,894; one 45-foot aerial truck with chipper (bucket truck), Utility Distributors Inc., $47,667; and 75,000 feet of solid aluminum wire, Rigby Electric Supply Co., $42,150.

The commission rejected bids on a one-ton truck with cab and chassis, after deciding the one bid received — from Phelps Chevrolet at $9,382 — was too high.

Distributorship Made In Japan

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) — While Michigan's auto industry struggled in a slump, a Japanese auto parts manufacturer opened a distribution center here.

Nippondenso Co. Ltd. dedicated its new distribution center Monday and company officials said they plan future growth. The distribution facility will use 30 acres of the 100-acre site.

The company manufactures and distributes parts for Japanese and American cars.

Greenville Receives Peer Grants

RALEIGH — Greenville is one of several North Carolina communities receiving one of the peer-to-peer assistance grants awarded by the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

Greenville, along with North Wilkesboro, Rocky Mount, Shelby and Cumberland County each received a grant of $4,000. Other grants were given to Monroe in the amount of $6,000, and Wilmington, $5,000. The seven grants totaled $31,000.

The peer-to-peer assistance program is one in which local governments can share ideas and expertise with other local governments in communities across the state.

All the grant recipients will host representatives of neighboring local governments and answer telephone inquiries concerning community development problems.

In addition, Wilmington and Monroe will conduct workshops for first-time Community Development Block Grant recipients in a 12-county area.

Basnight

Mrs. Emma Wilcox Basnight, 90, widow of Dr. Thomas G. Basnight, died in Beaufort County Hospital, Washington Tuesday morning.

The graveside service will be held at 11:30 a.m. Thursday in Greenwood Cemetery by the Rev. Lawrence P. Houston Jr., rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The body will be at the Wilkerson Funeral Home until the funeral.

Mrs. Basnight was born and reared in Craven County in the Vanceboro Community. After her marriage, she lived in Stokes and in 1948 she came to Greenville to make her home. She was a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Vanceboro.

She is survived by a son, T.G. Basnight Jr. of Greenville; five grandchildren and four great grandchildren. The family will receive friends at the Wilkerson Funeral Home from 7:30-9:00 p.m. Wednesday.

Valuables Are Taken From Home

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department is investigating a Tuesday morning break-in at a Rt. 1, Grimesland residence that resulted in the theft of several thousand dollars worth of gold and silver valuables.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said the break-in at the home of Mrs. Ina T. Venters at Calico was reported at 7:30 p.m. Mrs. Venters, he said, apparently left home around 6:15 a.m. to visit relatives.

The sheriff said that a safe in the house was broken open and a variety of items taken, including 12 gold coins valued at approximately $5,000, a set of sterling silver place settings involving some 40 pieces, a bag of old nickles and dimes, a ladies gold wedding band, a gold watch and chain, a masonic stick pin with diamond, and a gold masonic ring.

An axe was apparently used to chop the bottom out of the safe, he said, while entrance to the house was gained after a storm window on the back of the house was removed, a screen cut and a window broken. Total damage, including the safe, was estimated at $400, Sheriff Tyson reported.

Pharmaceutical Plant Planned

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — A $14 million pharmaceutical plant will be constructed near Sanford, William H. Rorer Inc. announced Tuesday.

The company said the plant will employ 120 persons by 1982. Construction is to start immediately on a 106-acre site.

Rorer is based in Fort Washington, Pa.

NL Wins Ninth Straight, 4-2

LOS ANGELES (AP) — No one, not the managers, the players or even the fans can explain the overwhelming superiority of the National League over the American in baseball's All-Star game.

It happened again, a ninth straight time, even after Steve Stone of Baltimore pitched a perfect first three innings for the Americans on Tuesday night at Dodger Stadium.

Ken Griffey, not even voted to a starting position by the nation's fans, belted Tommy John's first pitch to him in the fifth inning for a home run which gave the National League its first hit and sparked a 4-2 victory.

Griffey's Cincinnati teammate Gary Carter commented after the game, "his home run kind of fired us up and everybody started going about the task."

The NL task was helped by an error on a tough play by New York Yankees second baseman Willie Randolph in a two-run sixth inning.

So the Nationals now have won 17 of the past 18 meetings, the last AL victory coming in 1971.

Manager Earl Weaver of Baltimore, who piloted the American Leaguers in 1971, was at a loss to explain why his charges lost this time and why the string of losses.

"I know they wanted to win and they played to win," said Weaver. "You watched the game. You tell me."

Chuck Tanner of the World Champion Pittsburgh Pirates, said the "difference this time was defense. I knew our squad had too good hitters to be shut down all the way. I can't explain the streak."

The Americans had taken a 2-0 lead on Fred Lynn's homer with Rod Carew on base in the fifth inning. The homer wasn't too hard to take for the pro-

National League crowd of 56,088 in Dodger Stadium because Lynn is a product of the nearby University of Southern California.

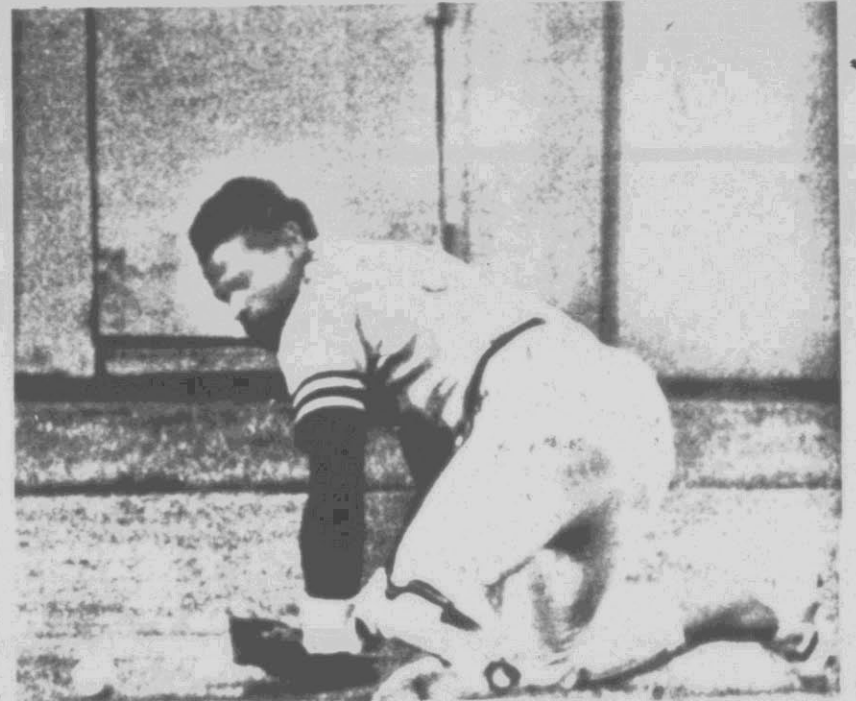

With one out in the sixth, after Griffey's homer the previous inning, Knight singled with one out. Phil Garner grounded another single and George Hendrick singled to score Knight with the tying run. Ed Farmer relieved John and was greeted with the tough grounder by Winfield that got through Randolph.

"I don't see how they can give me an error on that play," the Yankees infielder said. "The ball was hit to my left, it had a knuckleball spin. I'd try to play it the same way if it happened again."

Weaver said, "If he comes up with it, it changes things around, but it was a tough play."

Garner scored on the play and the NL was ahead. They added the fourth run in the seventh when Dave Concepcion scored on a wild pitch by Dave Steib of Toronto who earlier had thrown another wild pitch in an inning that also saw a passed ball by Darrell Porter of Kansas City.

Griffey, who hit the igniting home run and followed later with a single, was voted the game's Most Valuable Player although he knocked in only one run — himself, with his homer. He told newsmen that he had a phone call from Cincinnati's George Foster, a previous MVP, wishing him luck in this game.

Even Griffey couldn't explain the continuing superiority of the National League.

"This was very disappointing," said Weaver. "We went out to do everything possible to win."

The final results showed the NL with four runs on seven hits with no errors and the AL with 2-7-2.

The winning pitcher was the Dodgers' Jerry Reuss who hurled only the sixth but that was the inning when the Nationals went ahead.

Bruce Sutter of the Chicago Cubs finished up and he and Reuss had a friendly verbal exchange in the clubhouse.

Reuss had the game ball and gave it to Sutter, saying, "You saved it for me. You keep it."

Sutter retorted, "You won it, you keep it," and Sutter made Reuss, author of this season's only no-hitter, keep the ball.

The pregame festivities were lively and wound up with fireworks. Unfortunately the fireworks started a brush fire on a hill behind the centerfield parking lot.

Committee Meets; No Announcement

The search committee to find a new athletic director for East Carolina University met yesterday, but did not announce what course of action it took, if any. It is believed that the choices have been narrowed down to three men, Dr. Howard Hohman, former athletic director at the University of Louisville; Dr. Kenneth Karr, director of the department of athletics, and former athletic director at San Diego State University; and Dr. James West, associate athletic director at the University of Virginia.

The three along with Max Urick, associate athletic director of Iowa State University, were interviewed on campus, but Urick has withdrawn from consideration. A spokesman said that at least one, and possibly more meetings were to be held by the committee. He said that there was no guarantee that a new athletic director would be named within the next couple of weeks, or that he would come from the three thought to be the top contenders. There have been unconfirmed reports from the campus that Dr. Karr could be the leading candidate among the three, followed by Dr. Hohman. However, no one believed to have touch with the committee will confirm these rumors. It was also reported that an announcement on the selection could come early next week, but again there was no confirmation. Dr. Ernest Schwarz, a member of the selection committee, has been acting athletic director since the resignation of Bill Cain in May.

'Too Tall' Rejoins Fold

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — Dallas Cowboy Coach Tom Landry smiled — not once but many times — while he waited for the arrival of his prodigal player Ed "Too Tall" Jones, who has returned to the fold.

The defensive end flew into Dallas-Fort Worth Regional airport from New York late Tuesday night and was whisked to a back room where he signed a multi-year contract, ending his brief fling with professional boxing.

Landry said the 6-foot-9, 265-pound Jones — whom the Cowboys made the No. 1 pick in the 1974 NFL draft — will have to earn his way back into the starting lineup.

"Right now, he wouldn't step in as No. 1 left end. John Dutton has that slot," Landry said. "But whether there'll be a challenge or whether Dutton will move to left tackle, we'll just have to see."

"I was sure we'd reached agreement about 10 minutes ago," joked Cowboy player personnel director Gil Brandt at the press conference following Jones' arrival. "But I was optimistic a year ago that he'd come back."

Brandt and Jones' lawyer, Don Cronson, conducted a long series of negotiations before the 28-year-old veteran agreed to sign on with the National Football League team.

Jones said he is excited about the prospect of playing football again.

"I've prepared myself to accept a challenge from one of my teammates and I'm in the best shape I've ever been, strength-wise especially," said Jones, who retired from football in June 1979 to pursue a career in boxing, which he called his first love.

and he hadn't fought since February.

"If I had to do it over again, I'd do it. I learned a lot. It may make me a better football player. My hands and reflexes are a lot quicker now."

Nothing in particular persuaded him to return to football, he said.

"I was at a crossroads after my last fight in early February, and at some time you have to take a stand. And I feel now that football is right for me, not boxing," Jones said.

"I can't say I was dissatisfied with boxing, it just didn't work out. After fighting a year, I experienced a lot of personal problems and some family problems. I took some time off to think, and now football is the No. 1 thing on my mind," he said.

Jones said he felt a sense of relief.

"I'm glad we finally reached an agreement. I can go to camp in the right frame of mind. My last two years in football, I had a lot on my mind, and boxing was one of those things. I think it kept me from getting up for games. But that is all behind me now," Jones said.

Asked if he was happy with the contract, Jones smiled and repeated, "I'm satisfied."

Cronson, of New York, said he worked out the contract with Brandt.

"We had been in contact several times. Our first long meeting was right here in Dallas in April," he said.

The Cowboys acquired Dutton last season from the Baltimore Colts to try to fill the void left by Jones' retirement.

"He is a very talented player. I have a lot of respect for Dutton," Jones said.

Jones was strictly a basketball player until his senior year at Merry High School in Jackson, Tenn. He turned to football "when the officials wouldn't let me play my game. I always had four fouls in the first half."

He went on to become an all-America football selection at Tennessee State, located in Nashville.

A teammate gave him his nickname.

"It got so people we played against wouldn't try to throw to the side of the field he was on," said Tennessee State Coach John Merritt.

Jones also played two years of college basketball.

He made the all-rookie team his first season with the Cowboys.

Rose, Schmidt Deny Reports

LOS ANGELES AP — Philadelphia Phillies stars Pete Rose and Mike Schmidt denied published reports that they illegally obtained amphetamines, with Schmidt labeling the allegations "totally ridiculous."

Rose, in an interview shortly before the start of the All-Star Game Tuesday night, denied a report published by the Trenton N.J. Times that he and several teammates may have received illicit drugs from a Reading, Pa. physician.

"I don't know anybody in Trenton," the first baseman said. "I don't know anybody in Reading. I don't even know any doctors in Pennsylvania, the whole state."

Schmidt, also here for the All-Star Game, said:

"I have no comment whatsoever about that. I have no idea about it."

Dick Weatherbee, Drug Law Enforcement director in Harrisburg, Pa., refused to confirm or deny the report that Rose, Schmidt, Greg Luzinski, and Larry Bowa were among eight professional athletes who state narcotics agents want to question.

Of the players named, all but Rose played for the Phillies' Reading farm team of the Eastern League. The Trenton Times, quoting unnamed sources, did not identify the other four players.

Narcotics officials also plan to question members of the Phillies' minor league franchise in Reading about alleged improper drug receipts, according to a source in Reading.

Dr. Phillip J. Marone, the Phillies team physician, told the Philadelphia Bulletin Tuesday: "To my knowledge, they (the Phillies) do not take this medicine."

"We do not have them (amphetamines) around," he said. "I have never given them to the players, and I have no knowledge of this report at all."

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn told The Philadelphia Inquirer his secretary people had been notified of the allegations. "I have no comment as to what action might be taken. It's a little early," he said.

No criminal charges have been filed against players, or against the doctor and a "runner" who allegedly distributed the medication for him.

The doctor allegedly dispensed prescriptions without the Philadelphia Bulletin oral examinations, the sources said. The names of several Phillies players and their wives appeared on the doctor's records, according to law enforcement sources.

Phillies owner Ruly Carpenter described to the Courier-Post of Cherry Hill, N.J., the ball club's position on drug use.

"Our policy has always been to urge the players to be extremely careful in the use of any kind of drug," he said. "Our team doctor, Dr. Marone, has spoken to the players on numerous occasions cautioning the athletes about (the dangers and effects of) drugs."

"The trainers have been instructed not to dispense any kind of drug without specific instructions and a prescription from the doctor. We take every precaution we can, but we can't control what happens after the players leave the clubhouse."

Carpenter said he regarded the charges to be serious — if they can be supported.

The Pennsylvania Justice Department issued a formal statement Tuesday.

"It is policy of the Pennsylvania Department of Justice not to comment on reports of this kind," the statement said. "Consistent with that policy we have no comment on the article in today's Trenton Times."

Dr. Patrick Mazza, team physician of the Reading Phillies, the Phillies' Class AA farm club, was quoted in the Inquirer as saying:

"I imagine there is an inference in the story as to who the doctor might be, but I have had no contact with anyone on any investigation. That's all I want to say until I speak to my attorney."

Joe Bouzas, General Manager of the Reading club, told The Inquirer he had no knowledge of an investigation.

"There is no inkling that anything like this is going on here as far as the front office is concerned," Bouzas said. "I'm sick. I can't believe this is true. I have to believe that somebody is trying to dig up something to sell papers."

Women's U.S. Open Set

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — With forecasters calling for high humidity and temperatures well into the 90s, the winner of this week's U.S. Women's Open Golf Championship may well be the survivor.

Some of the biggest names on the women's tour said they were worn out, positively wilted, after completing 18-hole practice rounds at the Richland Country Club.

The 28th annual U.S. Open, a 72-hole event worth $140,000, is to be played July 10-13 on the par-71, 6,229-yard course.

"It's going to be a test of stamina because of this heat," said Carol Mann, winner of the 1965 U.S. Women's Open and a member of the Ladies Professional Golf Association Hall of Fame.

Mann, 39, said in an interview after taking her first look at the course that its many trees and the galleries ringing the greens will capture the heat, putting some extra pressure on the 150-player starting field.

"You experience a myriad of high and low emotions while playing this game," she said. "The heat seems to magnify the lows. By the back nine, if you're not playing well, this kind of weather tends to keep you from getting up."

A willowy blonde who lightheartedly lists her height in the LPGA Player's Guide at "5-feet, 15-inches," Mann said she hasn't played an Open in this kind of heat and humidity since 1970, when it was at Muskogee, Okla.

"To maintain our strength, we'll have to show up with some extra vitamins and salt tablets," the winner of 38 official career victories and nearly $500,000 said.

Judy Rankin, 35, second on the LPGA career earnings list with more than $760,000 in winnings, said the heat may be a factor in her play this week.

"I've been sick in the heat a few times, so I have to be careful," the veteran pro and the LPGA's player-of-the-year in 1976 and 1977, said. "We always seem to play the Open in intense heat. I wish it weren't so much a part of the tournament."

Three-time U.S. Open winner Susie Berning said after her initial practice rounds that she was used to the heat but not the humidity.

What to expect when you install a Solar Hot Water System now...and the IRS and Utility Company find out about it.

Expect to get about $2000

$150 SAVINGS A YEAR IN ELECTRIC BILLS.

Solar Energy. It makes sense. And using a Solar Hot Water Heater now makes the most sense. $1820 IN TAX CREDITS.

A typical system for a family of four can cost about $2800. However, you're entitled to a $1120 Federal Tax Credit and a $700 State Tax Credit when you install a $2800 Solar Water Heater Now.

In addition, a typical Solar Water Heater for a family of four can save you 50% of yearly utility bills for hot water. That can amount to more than $150 the first year on your electric bill. Add that to the available tax credits and you could save more than $1970 for the first year. And that's only the beginning. Because you'll continue to save even more year after year on your utility bills as the cost of energy continues to rise.

Consistent Griffey Named All-Star MVP

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cincinnati Reds outfielder Ken Griffey for years has been one of the most consistent hitters in baseball, but he's received little recognition.

After Tuesday night's 51st All-Star Game at Dodger Stadium, however, Griffey was the man of the hour — the MVP in the National League's 4-2 victory.

Griffey was not a starter in the contest, in fact he finished 14th in the fan balloting for an NL outfield spot. National League Manager Chuck Tanner selected him to the squad, however, and Griffey responded with a homer and a single.

His towering solo homer in the fifth inning ended a streak of perfect American League pitching by Steve Stone and Tommy John and started the NL rolling to its ninth consecutive All-Star triumph. Baltimore's Stone had not allowed a baserunner in the opening three innings and the New York Yankees' John was also perfect until Griffey's blast into the right-center pavilion with two away in the fifth.

"I felt really good about it because I thought it would light a fire under us," said Griffey, whose .310 batting average in the 1970s ranked him fifth among all major leaguers.

"Nobody was exactly dozing off in the dugout, but we didn't have a lot to cheer about the first four innings. I think we all knew that with the explosive hitters we had, they couldn't keep us down all the game," continued Griffey, who's hitting .314 with seven homers and 43 runs batted in this season.

"I try not to think about about recognition. But I'm really happy to be the MVP in this game."

The 30-year-old Griffey appears to not even be completely appreciated in Cincinnati, where he was on the trading block this spring before the possibility of a players' strike made a deal for him impossible.

After Tuesday night's game, however, the All-Star MVP had only happy thoughts.

"I'm very excited about it," he said. "I got a call from George Foster last night. He's a former MVP and he wished me luck. It's a wonderful feeling right now."

"I know there's a lot of controversy about who starts and who doesn't, but I'm not worrying about it. I got to come, I got to play, and I'm happy."

"Ken Griffey really sparked us," said Tanner, "especially since his homer came against an outstanding pitcher like John, a guy who doesn't give up too many home runs."

Griffey said he was at a loss to explain why the NL has won the last nine All-Star Games and 17 of the last 18, but knew why his team won the 51st renewal.

"They made a few mistakes this time and we took advantage of it," he said. "I think that's the mark of a better team."

Speedway President Must Decide

Who Will Sanction Indy 500?

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer
John Cooper, the president of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, has a big decision to make.

Cooper, a big, square-shouldered, square-jawed man, sometime before the end of the year will be deciding who will sanction the $1.5 million Indianapolis 500 — the world's richest and most prestigious race.

It was just two weeks ago that Cooper dropped a bombshell by announcing that the usually tradition-bound Speedway was dropping the U.S. Auto Club as the sanctioning body for the Memorial Day weekend classic.

Since then, everybody and his brother has offered a reason for the move.

Some said it was because the peace agreement between USAC and the Championship Auto Racing Teams, culminating in the formation of the Championship Racing League, had left Cooper and the Speedway on the outside looking in at the rules-making process.

Others speculated that it was simply a power play by Cooper, who took over as Speedway president last October.

Still others said it was Cooper's way of bringing the France family of Daytona International Speedway and NASCAR fame into the Speedway operation. Cooper once worked for Bill France.

When asked if any of the above was his reason for dislodging USAC from its traditional stewardship of the world's biggest race, the man in question smiled a quizzical smile and shrugged his shoulders.

"The reason for this is simply that I feel the race should be run by a completely independent governing body, with no allegiance to anybody inside the sport," Cooper said. "When it came about that USAC had become a logo for an owners' group, we had to look at that."

"With the CRL board running the show, it was just a matter of what the car owners wanted, they got. An official should be hired by some independent authority, not by the men who play the game."

"It's important that they have a situation where they are not under the threat of intimidation."

"We went through a relatively well-run race at Indianapolis — at least on the track," Cooper added. "Then, all of a sudden, five guys get together, under a tree or somewhere, and they fire the (USAC) chief steward (Art Meyers)."

"Then they let the (ground effects) skirts drag at the CART race in Milwaukee (directly opposed to the USAC rules banning moveable skirts)."

"Then (car owner and CRL board member) Pat Patrick sends a letter around, on his own personnel letterhead, saying that he alone will sign sanctioning agreements with racetracks."

"Those three things made it quite clear to me that there was no independent governing body in championship racing — just five car owners willy nilly and (USAC President) Dick King."

Exactly one week after Cooper's announcement, the USAC board of governors scrubbed the CRL and booted Patrick and powerful car owner Roger Penske off the board.

That ended the four-month peace agreement and apparently made the split between USAC and CART permanent. It also put USAC back into the running for the Indy sanction.

"USAC had to make a change to get back in the hunt, and they did," Cooper noted. "But it still could be any one of five current sanctioning bodies in this country, or even a new sanctioning body that isn't even formed yet."

The already established groups making at least an initial pitch to Cooper include USAC, NASCAR, the International Motor Sports Association and the National Hot Rod Association. Cooper said the Sports Car Club of America originally expressed interest in the project but later said it still was bound by an agreement to co-sanction certain CART-run races and would have to withdraw its fee.

"It will be strictly my decision," Cooper said. "And I think I will need to make it in the late summer or early fall because of the amount of preparation that goes into putting on a race like the Indianapolis 500. The car owners deserve to know what's going on as soon as possible."

U.S. Track Team Joins Smith In West Germany

STUTTGART, West Germany (AP) — Since Karin Smith, America's best woman javelin thrower, does not live in the United States, the United States is coming to her.

At least, the U.S. Olympic track and field team is.

The Americans will be in Stuttgart Friday night and Saturday for a two-day international meet. And Smith, winner of the recent Olympic Trials at Eugene, Ore., will be an important part of their team.

Having overtaken former world record holder Kate Schmidt as the No. 1 American women's javelin thrower by virtue of victories over her in the national championships at Walnut, Calif., and in the Trials, Smith now will face an even stronger challenger, Tessa Sanderson of Great Britain.

Sanderson is only one of two women in the world whose year to throw over 69 meters (226 feet, 4 1/2 inches). The other is world record holder Ruth Fuchs of East Germany. Fuchs is not entered in the weekend meet, to be held at 80,000-seat Neckar Stadium in the Stuttgart suburb of Cannstatt.

The rapidly improving Smith, 24, has been living in Stuttgart for the past two years and reached her personal best of 208-10 at a meet here earlier this year. She then returned to the United States for the nation's two biggest meets, winning the national title with a toss of 199-1 and the trials at 208-5.

She had her best series ever at the Trials, with five of her six attempts soaring past 200 feet.

"I was pressing too hard at the nationals," said the admittedly hyperactive Smith. "My ex-coach was on one side (of the field) telling me what to do and my present coach was on the other side telling me what to do."

"Also, my parents were there. It was my first time back in the States in nearly two years and I really wanted to do well."

"But I had a hard time concentrating and isolating myself," she added. "Everyone was coming over to talk to me, to welcome me back ... All my friends, people whom I had not seen in a long time."

Her first three throws were not nearly up to her standards.

"I could see a lot of people were worried," she recalled. "But then I went and isolated myself for awhile, and when I came back, I went over to the stands and I said, 'Mom, don't worry. I have three more throws. Then came the 199-1.'"

Despite the victory, the usually bouncy, bubbly Smith was not herself for the week between the nationals and the Trials.

"I had a real disappointing week," she said. "I was still thinking about how I had almost choked. I was still apologizing to everyone because I had made a fool of myself."

Smith was no "fool" at the Trials. After a confidence-building 205-foot throw on her first attempt, she was literally off running and jumping.

After nearly every one of her tosses, in which she raced down the runway with a speed exhibited by no other competitor in the event, she would bounce up in the air with excitement.

Bayi To Get Chance At Olympic Glory

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Filbert Bayi, middle distance star turned steeplechase runner again, will finally get his big chance to win Olympic glory.

Eight years ago in the Munich Olympics, Bayi was eliminated in the 3,000-meter steeplechase trials. He left disappointed and decided to skip the event for the 1,500 meters.

Two years later, in 1974, the slender Tanzanian had the world record of 3:32.2 in this classic distance. He was one of the favorites along with New Zealander John Walker in the Montreal Olympics 1976, but never got his chance.

Tanzania boycotted the Games along with most other black African nations because New Zealand wasn't barred from the Olympics after a sending a rugby team to South Africa.

Bayi never regained his class in the 1,500. But now he's back in the old event, the 3,000-meter steeplechase.

Running his first steeplechase since Munich 1972, the rejuvenated Bayi clocked the world's third fastest time of the year Tuesday night at Stockholm's Olympic Stadium.

The time was 8:17.98, a new Tanzanian record. Only Henry Marsh, who won the U.S. Olympic Trials in a American record time of 8:15.7 recently, and Polish veteran Bronislav Malinowski (8:19.7) have been faster this year.

"The steeplechase will be my chief event in Moscow. I'll try the 1,500 too, but (Sebastian) Coe and (Steve) Ovett are too strong there," Bayi said after chopping seven seconds off his previous best in Tuesday's race.

Marsh, of course, will not run in the Moscow Olympics. So it could be a duel between Bayi and Malinowski at Lenin Stadium.

Malinowski won the silver medal behind Sweden's Anders Garderud in Montreal, capitalizing on leading East German Frank Baumgartl's dramatic tumble on the last hurdle.

Malinowski lost the race here on a similar mishap. Leading Bayi by 10 meters, the tall Pole tripped after the final hurdle. Bayi passed him and Malinowski had to settle for third in 8:20.95.

Simpson Goes For Big $$$

MILWAUKEE (AP) — There's a $100,000 bonus waiting for second-year pro golfer Scott Simpson.

All he has to do is chalk up his second consecutive Professional Golfers Association tournament — and, coincidentally, the second of his career — in the $200,000, four-day Greater Milwaukee Open that gets underway Thursday at the 7,010-yard Tuckaway Country Club course in suburban Franklin.

Sponsors of the GMO, in an attempt to keep big name pros from skipping their tournament and traveling to England early for the prestigious British Open next week, offered an additional $100,000 to any golfer who won the Western Open at Oak Brook, Ill., and went on to take the GMO crown.

Simpson, a former two-time NCAA golf champion from the University of Southern California, said after winning the Western Sunday that he had planned to compete at Milwaukee anyway.

"I was probably one of the first to sign" for the GMO, said Simpson, 24, whose $54,000 earnings in the Western boosted his total for the year to $102,213.

The winner's share of the GMO purse is $36,000. In Simpson's case, there's also that possibility of a $100,000 bonus as a result of the plan worked out by tournament officials and insured by Lloyd's of London.

"Sure, I'll be trying for the $100,000," Simpson said after his victory at the Western, "but I'm so thrilled it won't run my year or anything if I don't get it. It's a nice bonus, but I can't worry about it."

GMO officials, meanwhile, were predicting one of the better fields in the 13-year history of the tournament, especially after Hale Irwin, former two-time U.S. Open champion, and four other golfers decided to enter just before the deadline of 8 p.m. Sunday.

Putt-Putt Roundup

The Squirrels, led by Mike Sturtevant and Dusty Carter, won over the Junior Aces and the Seals in Junior League play at the Putt-Putt Tuesday.

Both Sturtevant and Carter had 75's. Cliff Deanhart also paced the Squirrels, carding an 83.

The Junior Aces, led by Carl White, Aaron Williams and Bobby Hart, with scores of 70, 89, and 95, respectively, defeated the Seals to even its record at 1-1 for the day. The Seals, finishing third in the three-team match, were paced by Paul Williams with a 79 and Greg Murphy with a 94.

The Aces are now 12-5-1, the Squirrels, 8-9-1, and the Seals, 6-12.

In Church League action, Farmville Presbyterian and Salem Methodist tied, and both downed Mt. Pleasant Christian last night.

Jeff Cutler with a 72, Kelly Keizer, 77, and Mel Williams, 77, led Farmville Presbyterian, which now holds a 12-1-1 record. Salem Methodist was led by Ray Taft with a 73 and medalist Jeff Taft with a 66. Salem is now 8-5-1.

Mt. Pleasant was led by Allen Spain and Donna Spain, both with 80's. Mt. Pleasant is now 0-14.

3 Added To Boys' Game

Three additional names have been added to the roster of the Jaycee Boys' Home Game, set for July 19 in Ficklen Stadium on the East Carolina University campus.

Toby Bratcher of Eastern Guilford, John Patterson of Lenoir Hibernian, and Tommy Harris of Southern Durham High School were added to the roster for the North team.

Running backs Bratcher and Harris and linebacker Patterson were earlier nominated as alternates. Each team roster will remain at 33 players. The three will replace three others, listed in the original roster, but who will be unable to participate.

John Jackson, Jaycee game chairman, said that a few changes are made each year in the rosters due to illness or personal reasons. Some players, too, are involved in American Legion baseball playoff action and cannot attend for this reason.

Game time is set for 7 p.m. for the contest that annually benefits the Boys' Homes of North Carolina.

ECU Names Counselor

Robert Tallo, working on a master's degree in the Physical Education Department, has been named as interim athletic academic counselor at East Carolina University.

Brian Mand, who was the first academic counselor at East Carolina, recently resigned to take a similar position at Florida State University.

Tallo, a native of Raleigh, attended Cornell University and graduated from the University of North Carolina. He has served as cross-country and track coach at Chapel Hill High School.

Reuss Wins All-Star Game With Sutter's Help

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's not that the American League gave up late in the 51st All-Star Game, but it might as well have done just that. The game was over after seven innings.

Bruce Sutter, relief ace of the Chicago Cubs, came on the scene at Dodger Stadium with his team leading 4-2 entering the eighth inning Tuesday night. And that was that.

"I threw nothing but split-finger fastballs," said Sutter, who allowed only one baserunner over the final two innings in saving the victory for the NL, which has now won nine straight All-Star Games and 17 of the last 18 midsummer classics. "It probably is an advantage to face players who haven't seen me, or any pitcher with a trick pitch."

Sutter saved the game for Los Angeles left-hander Jerry Reuss, who struck out the side in his only inning of work, the sixth, than watched the NL score twice in the bottom of the inning to go ahead for good.

"I just happened to come in and then we scored some runs."

said Reuss, who fired a no-hitter for the Dodgers last month. Reuss and Sutter did an Alphonse-Gaston routine afterwards with the game ball.

Reuss congratulated Sutter, who handed Reuss the baseball. Reuss said, "You saved it, you kept it." Sutter said, "You won it, you keep it." Sutter won the argument, Reuss kept the ball adorned by the Cub reliever's autograph.

Sutter now has two victories and a save in All-Star competition. But he didn't sound like a man who snuffed out six of the seven hitters he faced.

"I didn't feel real comfortable," he said. "I had trouble throwing strikes. When I had to have a strike it seemed like I couldn't throw it."

He was modest about his success in All-Star contests.

"The last few years when I've come in to the (All-Star) game, we've had the lead so the other team's hitters have been trying to hit home runs, and that makes it even tougher for them," he said. "I've been fortunate to be in the right place at the right time."

"I always get excited in these games, they're lots of fun. With this group, you always know they're going to get some hits for us. We were held without a hit for the first five innings, but I knew they'd get their hits."

Actually, it was 4-3 innings. American League starter Steve Stone of the Baltimore Orioles was perfect for three innings and Tommy John retired five more batters before Most Valuable Player Ken Griffey homered with two outs in the fifth.

"It wasn't a bad pitch, but he's a good hitter," said John, the losing pitcher. "It could have been inside a tad more, but if it had been, he might have hit it farther."

"I thought I was throwing harder than I normally throw," added the veteran New York Yankees' left-hander who relies on a sinkerball. "It straightens my ball out. In a game like this, you get pumped up. I was throwing risers."

"The heroics of Griffey, Reuss and Sutter, among others, perhaps dimmed the exceptional effort of Stone, a right-hander who turns 33 next week."

Stone is a veteran who has played extensively in both leagues and, for the most part, not very well. He was 78-79 with a 4.06 earned run average entering this season, but is 12-3 with a 3.10 ERA in 1980.

"Before the game, I was pretty excited, pretty pumped up," he said. "I was throwing my curve a little too hard, but my fastball was moving."

"I certainly hoped that the team could win but when you face nine batters in three innings you have to be pleased with the outcome. So far, this has been my biggest thrill in baseball."

"A lot of their guys were looking for the curveball. I threw mostly fastballs. Also, I was throwing in the twilight."

Steve Stone

'Pitcher' Perfect In His 3 Innings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Those who note triumphs in losing causes will remember the performance of Steve Stone in baseball's 51st All-Star contest.

For Stone, Baltimore's 32-year-old recycled righty, merely being a starting All-Star pitcher was no minor triumph. But what he did in the opening three innings Tuesday set a standard that the rest of the game, a rather routine match, couldn't live up to.

On a scant 24 pitches, Stone went through a fiercesome National League lineup that you wouldn't wish on Carl Hubbell: Reggie Smith, Dave Parker, Steve Garvey, Dave Kingman, Johnny Bench.

The meat of the lineup averaged .293 and 13 homers. But Stone was immovable.

Oh, the Nationals went on to win the game, of course, 4-2, their ninth consecutive victory, their 17th of the last 18. And Ken Griffey of Cincinnati was named Most Valuable Player, having started things for the Nationals with a solo home run in the fifth and a single later on.

To the five-man panel of writers and league publicists, Griffey's two-hit, one-RBI performance seemed the game's most valuable.

Perhaps. But Stone, Stone was an All-Star.

Too nervous to make his curveball work, Stone showed the Nationals' big guns a fastball that fairly danced by them, a fastball that was good for three strikeouts in three innings.

Stone was perfect for those three, the first time an American League pitcher has held the Nationals hitless through three since Denny McLain did it in 1966. Were this not an exhibition requiring the appearance of the largest possible portion of each roster, Stone might have ended the Americans' drought.

M.D. Panel To Check Walton

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A panel of five doctors, led by Los Angeles physician Dr. Tony Daly, will examine Bill Walton's tender left foot Thursday, a spokesman for the San Diego Clippers said Tuesday night.

"I'm not sure what they're going to say or what they're looking for because I'm not a doctor," said Hal Childs, Clippers' vice president of communications. "But I believe Tony is getting together people whose opinions he respects to make sure everything's been done for Bill that should be done."

Daly is one of two Los Angeles doctors to examine the left foot of the 6-foot-11 Walton, who has been plagued by complications from a tress fracture to the tarsal navicular bone incurred in April 1978.

The other Los Angeles physician is Dr. Harvey Elman. Others on the panel are Drs. William Wagner of Whittier, Calif., Roger Mann of Seattle, and Marcus Stewart of Memphis.

The examination, put together by Daly and Walton's long-time adviser, Dr. Ernie Vandeweghe, will take place at Daniel Freeman Hospital in Inglewood, Calif.

Walton sat out most of last season with the Clippers after being traded by the Portland Trail Blazers in 1979. At Portland, the former UCLA All-American led the Trail Blazers to the 1976-77 National Basketball Association title.

Despite missing the last third of the 1978-79 season with the foot injury, Walton was voted the league's Most Valuable Player.

As it was, he exited after the third with a shout and a gesture of triumph, and left it to his successors to lose.

In the Americans' locker room, the compact (5-foot-9, 175-pound) Stone, strikingly articulate and personable, relished his moment.

"I couldn't have asked for a better three innings or for better results," he said. "But then, I was always very tough in All-Star games."

Oh?

"Yes, in 1965, I pitched in the Ohio High School All-Star game and I won that."

"That he made it to this game, that he started this game, was remarkable. In 1976, Steve Stone was a middling pitcher with the Chicago Cubs, having already done time as a mid-ding pitcher for the Giants and White Sox. He tore the rotator cuff in his pitching arm that season and it seemed that another of baseball's modest stories had concluded.

The end seemed assured by Stone himself, who refused surgery and even shots for the injury. He wanted the shoulder to heal naturally and to the surprise of all, it did.

By the end of the year, White Sox owner Bill Veeck felt inclined to give Stone another chance. Stone made good and repaid Veeck with another good year in '78 before hitting the free-agent market for the second time in his career.

Stone landed with the Orioles where he has blossomed. He won nine of his last 10 decisions last year, and is 12-3 this season.

At 32, the .500 pitcher with the bad arm has arrived.

End Of Steamboats Spelled An End To River Town

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer
BENTONSPORT, Iowa
(AP) — When the last steamboat churned down the

Des Moines River to the Mississippi, the future passed Bentonsport right on by.
Today, except for an occasional pickup truck that wanders in off the gravel roads, the 20th century also bypasses Bentonsport. Its 30 residents live amid history. But that's expensive, and time is catching up.

Cross the stone-and-iron bridge into town and saunter back in time, to the 1850s, to the days of riverboat pilots and railroad men.

Red brick houses stand stately and tall, white trim and green shutters freshly painted. On the tree-covered hill, the Presbyterian Church's solid brass bell peels out a sweet, clear tone.

Down at the riverfront, the Mason House Hotel awaits the next boatload of passengers, its dining room table set with century-old china, guest rooms furnished with century-old beds, a barroom poker table holding century-old chips.

No split-level houses to spoil the scene. No neon signs to scar the buildings. No gas stations or convenience stores. And the highway? That passed Bentonsport right on by, too.

"It looks pretty as a picture, but the town is in danger. We're only 30 people and we've had to sell old books just to keep the lawns mowed," says Burretta Redhead, mistress of Mason House and a moving force in restoration of the tiny village's 20 surviving buildings.

Weeds and junked cars hid much of Bentonsport when Mrs. Redhead and her husband bought Mason House in 1956. Now, the town looks neat and tidy but lacks the funds to finish restoration and preserve its past.

"We need a nice Rockefeller. But I'm pretty sure we won't find one," says Kathy Fisher, another who worries about the town's future. "This is not a wealthy place. We're doing what we can."

Founded in 1836 and named for Missouri Sen. Thomas Hart Benton, the village became a center of commerce.

It was an early stop for riverboats. As steamer traffic grew, so did Bentonsport. Population reached 1,500. The river powered flour mills, a saw mill, Iowa's first paper mill.

The Keokuk, Fort Des Moines and Minnesota Railroad arrived in 1857 and highballing railroad men joined steamer captains at the town's four hotels.

By 1870 the river had silted, locks and dams crumbled and Congress declared the Des Moines River unfit for navigation. The town's decline followed.

Fire, neglect and age ravaged most buildings. But from all outward appearances, Bentonsport remained an 1850s river town. "The location is definitely part of its charm. But it's part of the problem, too," said Ms. Fisher. "Tourists don't know we're here."

Bentonsport is located in the southeast corner of the state, about 10 miles north of the Missouri-Iowa border.

Today, several buildings are private homes, most in good repair. The Redheads converted the Mason House into a museum. They've opened it, a country store and the old Post Office to visitors.

But insurance costs $3,000 a year for a hotel filled with antiques. Mrs. Redhead said the income barely keeps pace with costs.

"There are so few museums that are original and authentic," she said while showing off the copper kitchen sink, 10-foot-tall carved wooden headboards, plush parlor, rugged barroom and elegant dining room with the 1820s pink tea service.

Pointing through the front door toward the Des Moines, Mrs. Redhead said: "Man changed the river like he's changed everything else. "But I bought this hotel because I wanted to preserve something, to keep the past alive. Everyone else wanted to break it up and sell the pieces. Not me."

Some residents bristle at the higher property taxes and intrusions that restoration brings. Yet Mrs. Redhead and the Bentonsport Improvement Association continue seeking funds from government and private sources.

The Van Buren County Conservation Board purchased some buildings. But the county, state and federal governments all lack money for repairs of leaking roofs, rotting wood and costly upkeep.

The town was designated a national historical district in 1972, but that only makes Bentonsport eligible for matching funds. Funds to match those matching funds are hard to come by.

Ms. Fisher wrote 21 applications for grants last year.

"Everything is going for ethnic and urban projects. We're not particularly ethnic and we're anything but urban," she said. "The county has done what it can, but they don't have any money. The state is interested, but they're in the same situation."

Mrs. Redhead hopes a private foundation will take an interest in Bentonsport and purchase it — if the future is kept out.

"I want to see someone keep the whole town. We don't want hamburger stands. We want to save this place," she said.

Production Costs Rising

Leroy James, Pitt County Extension Chairman, reported Tuesday on the county's crop situation and forecast, with emphasis on projected prices for the harvest season.

Speaking at the regular morning session of the Pitt Agri-Business Association, James said that price support for tobacco has been increased some nine percent this year to $1.41 per pound. Some 20,000 acres of tobacco are tilled in the county, he said, making Pitt the largest tobacco county in the world.

Soybean prices this year will be up to $6.50-$7 per bushel, he predicted, with some 35,000 acres grown in the county.

James said that corn will market for $2.75 to $2.85 per bushel this fall, with some 80,000 acres grown in Pitt.

Discussing the county hog situation, the extension official said he expected a 39 to 40 cents per pound situation until the early part of October and then 35 cents per pound or just above for the rest of the market year. Prices tend to go down for hogs around slaughter time, he pointed out. Feeder pigs in the 40-50 pound size will bring approximately 50 cents per pound, he projected.

James, looking at the cattle situation here, suggested that cattle activity will remain about the same level it has maintained for the past 15 months, with prices running about 70-72 cents per pound.

The extension chairman said that costs have gone up in all areas of farm production, with chemicals increasing some 11 percent in price, interest rates up 28 percent, farm wages up 29 percent, and oil costs up over 50 percent.

He said that it cost a Pitt farmer $174.99 to grow 65 bushels of corn per acre, or some $2.69 per bushel. A yield of 21 bushels of soybeans per acre cost $151.78, he said, or $7.23 per bushel. James said that a farmer can not stay in business unless he tops the median figure in his returns.

Looking at a five-year range for tobacco costs, James said that it cost 74.2 cents per pound to grow tobacco in the county in 1975, 88 cents in 1976, 94.1 cents in 1977, $1.03 in 1978, and $1.10 in 1979. He added that farmers are looking at an increase this year of 15 to 20 percent in costs.

Farmers need to take close look at resources and do a better job of record keeping, he suggested, saying that with price levels as they are a good system of keeping records is necessary if farmers are to stay in business.

Gross income for all crops in the county for 1979 totaled $127,838,888, he reported.

C. J. Harris is current president of the agri-business association.

Poll Shows Support For Program

A large majority of the people polled in a nationwide survey supported the Social Security program and favored paying higher Social Security taxes to avoid lowering benefits or raising the retirement age.

Nearly 76 percent of the 1,549 people surveyed opposed ending the program, and only 19 percent favored such a move. Many working Americans under age 55, however, expressed concern about the program's ability to pay future benefits at current levels, according to the study released by the National Commission on Social Security.

"These fears are unwarranted," said Fred Lilley, district manager for the Social Security Office here. "People can always count on receiving their Social Security benefits. The strength of the Social Security system rests on the demonstrated commitment of the federal government and the Congress to take whatever steps are necessary to maintain its financial security."

"We are constantly monitoring the nation's economic situation to assess its impact on Social Security's financial stability," Lilley continued. "In the event of unfavorable economic circumstances, changes in the financing structure would be made to assure that Social Security benefits would be paid on time."

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Our daughter is dating a fine young man, well-educated and a good moral person. We appreciate his fine qualities. But he has a skin disease called "ichthyosis." He goes to a government hospital in Washington, D.C. for treatment once a month. What advice can you give us? Is this disease hereditary or fatal? Will he be able to father children? — Mrs. W.P.C., Ohio.

Dear Mrs. C.: Ichthyosis is a drying of the skin that is sometimes known as "xeroderma." It is a very complicated problem. It is a symptom of one of a number of rare hereditary conditions.

It would do this young man an injustice if a long discussion of ichthyosis in this column would prejudice you in terms of the marriage. I do believe that your daughter should accompany him on one of his visits to the hospital in Washington, D.C. There she would get complete clarification of all the factors involved in the disease and its possible transmission to children. Undoubtedly, geneticists are being called in for consultation by the dermatologists who are treating this patient.

It should be of interest to you that there are now some excellent forms of treatment for ichthyosis. Emollients, soaps, ointments and drugs diminish the scaling, reduce the itching and greatly improve the appearance.

Unless all of you face the problem in a forthright way, with open discussion with the doctors, your distress may reflect itself on the children and interfere with their ultimate happiness.

I'm desperate. I'm a healthy 27-year-old female, constantly plagued by huge, painful canker sores inside my mouth. I've tried painkillers and chicken pox vaccine, but they still keep coming back. As I said, I'm desperate. — Ms. B.L., Calif.

Dear Ms. L.: I really appreciate how miserable you are with these painful recurring sores in the mouth. Although the basic cause is still unknown, some new findings are coming to light.

We know that women are more often affected than men, and that some deficit in immune response makes some people more susceptible than others to these herpetic, or viral, infections.

The application of a mild anesthetic such as "lidocaine" provides some relief and makes it easier to eat. Tetracycline drugs have been used experimentally because a streptococcus was thought to be another cause of canker sores.

Probably the newest approach to this problem is in immunotherapy. In your own area in California there are a number of hospitals that have departments of immunology. They might be an important contribution to you.

Hearing Set In Kidnap Case

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — A probable cause hearing has been scheduled for next Tuesday for three men charged with kidnapping a Chattanooga, Tenn., man.

District Court Judge Oliver L. Noble also reduced bond Tuesday for the three men, Jimmie C. Brunt, 38, of Hickory; Jerry Joe Moscaritolo, 36, of Taylorsville; and Randy Charles Hamby, 21, of Lenoir. Their bonds now range from $10,000 to $50,000.

The three men are accused of kidnapping Lynwood Ridley, 43, from a Hickory motel last week. Ridley was rescued Thursday after police found him at a home in Hickory.

Ridley is now in jail on federal charges of stealing government ty and felonious conspiracy.

Charge Youths With Shooting

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Two Fayetteville teen-agers were charged Tuesday with shooting a third teen-ager in what police said was a dispute over a young woman.

Huel E. May, 17, and Jeffrey L. Walters, 16, were jailed in the shooting of Michael E. Siegler, 16, on Monday night. Siegler was reported in critical condition at North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill.

Police said the shooting occurred after Siegler had carried a friend, Debbie Spell, to her home and was then accosted when he returned to his car. Officers said May and Walters earlier had tried to get Miss Spell to come to their pickup truck.

Refuses Order Reinstatement

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A judge refused Tuesday to order the reinstatement of two psychiatrists to the staff of Highland Hospital.

Judge Robert Lewis, after a three-day hearing, ruled that Drs. Thomas A. Smith and Hal G. Gillespie had not proved their contention that Duke University officials had given them firm commitments to remain on the staff.

The two psychiatrists have been vocal opponents to Duke's plan to sell the mental hospital to the Psychiatric Institutes of America and seven other staff members at Highland.

PIA has stated it intends to turn the non-profit hospital into a profit-making facility.

Smith and Gillespie said they had not decided whether to appeal Lewis' decision. Each has worked at the hospital for about nine years.

The doctors have filed civil suits seeking $2.5 million in alleged damages from the same defendants.

Gillespie and Smith had sought an injunction allowing them to continue their practice at Highland until the sale to PIA is consummated.

Duke and PIA have agreed on a purchase price of about $6 million for Highland, the largest private mental hospital in North Carolina. The transaction still must be approved by regulatory agencies.

The men officially were dismissed from their jobs June 30, but they were reinstated for a week by a temporary restraining order signed by Lewis on July 1.

Duke officials said the men were dismissed because of two changes in the organization of the hospital which were made in preparation for the PIA takeover.

Duke terminated all faculty appointments for staff psychiatrists June 30. Also, Duke contracted May 16 with a new professional association called Highland Clinic PA to treat Highland patients. Gillespie and Smith are not members of Highland Clinic PA.

The entire Highland medical staff was united at one time in opposing the sale to PIA. Last fall, however, the other seven doctors decided to negotiate with PIA for joint ownership of the hospital.

The Garden To Which All Democrats Will Go

NEW YORK (UPI) — The first time the Democrats held a presidential convention in Madison Square Garden they took 103 ballots to nominate a loser, John W. Davis of West Virginia.

Understandably they waited 52 years, from 1924 to 1976, to meet in the Garden again, this time with more success — nominating a winning Jimmy Carter on the first ballot.

So, now, next time around, the Democrats are coming back Aug. 11-15. Of course, New York City reaching into an almost empty treasury and paying $8 million for the honor of being host helped.

The city has rented the Garden for two months, July and August, to put up and tear down the platform, the special banks of seats and decorations. It may not be without note that the last Garden event before the convention will be a concert titled "Genesis."

The first event after the Democrats will be a Puerto Rican dance festival. The Democratic event is likely to be a Standing Room Only deal.

The Garden's seating capacity is some 20,000. But the Democrats are inviting

- 3,331 delegates
- 2,053 alternate delegates
- 7,503 guests
- an expected 8,500 reporters, photographers and broadcast crewmembers.

This totals 21,387. It does not include the 300 security guards the Garden management will provide, or the New York police and Secret Service agents who will patrol the Garden.

Nor does the figure include President Carter and his party and convention army. The delegates will be seated down in the arena where the New York Ranger ice hockey and New York Knickerbocker basketball teams play. They will have to look up to see anything.

What they will see, besides the platform, will be reporters flanking the platform and then guests and then, way up in what Garden officials call the "sky sweeps," 50,000, 10-seat upholstered boxes for Walter Cronkite, Frank Reynolds, John Chancellor and other broadcasters around whom the convention menu is set. For example, the Democrats have arranged for gaudier moments — the convention opening on Aug. 11 and the nominating acceptance speeches — to come in television's prime evening time.

Items the party may not be overly tickled to offer — for example, debate and voting on the platform, during which supporters of Sen. Edward Kennedy, Carter's rival, may make donkey noises — will take place during daylight unprime time.

Guests of the convention should examine their tickets. The pecking order of seats is fed (just above the floor and the highest priced regular seating), then up to orange (slightly lower price but choice) and then to the bleachers of the Garden, the yellow, green and tiptop up-there-and-away blue seats just under the roof.

Of course, the seat price will be right. Zero. Usual Garden events have seats costing in the red from $30 to $150.

First time comers might want to know that Madison Square Garden is not in Madison Avenue.

There have been four Madison Square Gardens. The first two were in Madison Avenue, beginning in 1874 with P. T. Barnum ("A sucker is born every day") and his circus. Buffalo Bill Cody also played there. New quarters were thought needed after the 1885 John L. Sullivan-Paddy Ryan boxing match which the crowd, numbering 11,000 and very New Yorkish, halted after 50 seconds in riot.

The second Garden opened more sedately with a concert and ballet under the baton of Vienna's Eduard Strauss and was the site of that dreadful 103-ballot 1924 convention.

That was the convention at which, after 102, the great H. L. Mencken dispatched to Baltimore a report saying, "If anything is certain at this most uncertain of all Democratic conventions, it is that John W. Davis of West Virginia will not be nominated for president."

Upon returning to his seat and finding the Democrats had done the most uncertain thing by nominating Davis, Mencken puffed on his Little Willie cigar and said he hoped his newspaper desk back in Baltimore had enough sense to strike the negative out of his report.

Garden Number Three, the arena now shifted from the east to the west side of Manhattan, opened with a six-day bicycle race, featured Gene Autry on Champion, Rocky Marciano knocking Joe Louis out of boxing and ended with a dog show.

The current Garden opened in 1968 is a concrete and steel hat box between Seventh and Eight Avenues, astride the Pennsylvania railway station, flanked by clustered streets of the clothing industry and moated by such dining palaces as The Lox, Stock & Bagel, Chock Full O'Nuts, Wendy's, Mc Donald's, Burger King, Gyro II and the Chinatown Express.

Such as Toot Shor's and Gus' Bar are across streets. Nine streets uptown is West 42nd Street, America's prime porno parade, where delegates would go only to gawk or do things they will not write home about.

Rising costs got you down? Look around. Relief for your tight budget is in sight. See all those unwanted dust collectors? They may be dead weight to you, but they're sure to be just what someone else is looking for. Why not sell them?

Simply pick up the phone and place a classified ad, then sit back and relax. With classified, you get quick results.

Public Hearing Set By Schools

The Pitt County Community Schools Advisory Council will be holding an important public hearing concerning the allocation of its local Community Schools Capital Outlay Funds. The hearing will be held on July 15 at 7:30 p.m. in the Third Floor board room of the new Pitt County office building (old hospital).

These funds will be available to assist communities in the development of recreational facilities on school property. The proposed facilities will be developed to serve the total community.

Anyone planning to attend the hearing call the Pitt County Community Schools Office at 752-6106 ext. 248 or 249. In order to make facility arrangements call before July 12.

This meeting will be important to the outcome and development of community schools, and community schools personnel urge the public to attend.

Employment Survey Planned

Local representatives of the Bureau of the Census will conduct a survey of employment in this area July 14-19. Joseph R. Norwood, Director of the Bureau's Regional Office in Charlotte recently announced.

The survey is conducted for the U.S. Department of Labor in a scientifically designed sample of approximately 84,000 households throughout the United States. Employment and unemployment statistics based on results of this survey are used to provide a continuing measure of the economic health of the nation.

Information supplied by individuals participating in the survey is kept strictly confidential by law and the results are used only to compile statistical totals.

The interviewer who will visit households in this area is Mrs. Janet P. Conway of Greenville.

Vote To Quit Church Council

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland decided after five hours debate by a vote of 433-327 to withdraw from membership in the World Council of Churches.

The denomination had suspended its membership in 1978 in protest to the council's $85,000 grant to the Zimbabwe Patriotic Front, the guerrilla group whose leader Robert Mugabe now is Zimbabwe's prime minister.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JULY 10, 1980

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are now in a good position to improve relationships with others by extending some courtesy or kindness. Be sure to carry through with plans you have made.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Situations arise that give you a better picture of your relationships with associates. Show others you have wisdom.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan how to establish more harmony with co-workers and everything will work out better in the future.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make sure that you are handling financial matters wisely. Spare time should be spent at amusements with congenials.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Try to give more thought to home improvements and increase harmony with close ties. Express happiness.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't invest more money than you can afford in a new enterprise or you could regret it later. Don't neglect to pay your bills.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Look into the detailed part of a financial matter and be sure you understand it thoroughly. Sidestep a troublemaker.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study details of all plans you have made and correct possible errors. Be sure business affairs are running smoothly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Gain favors from your friends since they are in a fine mood for such now. Make the evening a happy one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are desirous of gaining aims that are vital to your existence, but first study every angle involved.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Put your talents to work and make a fine impression on higher-ups. Express happiness with loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan to meet talented persons who can help you advance in career matters. Avoid heavy expenditures of money.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Ideal day to keep promises made and clear the slate, be it in business or personal life. Not a good day to take risks.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who likes to please others, so whether it be in the field of entertainment, nursing, or whatever, be sure to give as fine an education as you can. There's a talent for music in this chart. Don't neglect ethical training. "The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

The bidding:
South West North East
1 Pass 1NT Pass
3♣ Pass 4♦ Pass
6♣ Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

Sometimes when declarer is presented with several lines of play, the difference between them is so slight that it boils down to a matter of guesswork. In that case Lady Luck will determine the winner. More often, however, one line will be demonstrably better than the others. Making the best selection is what is known as "playing the percentages."

Today's hand provided an interesting choice. South's bidding has our endorsement. His decision to open only one heart was prudent because his suit was ragged. But when North could raise South's second suit, showing four-card support, it was almost certain that the slam would depend on no more than a finesse.

West led the top of his spade sequence. Declarer won in dummy, led a heart to the ace and ruffed a heart. He returned to his hand with a high spade to ruff another heart. East overruffed and returned a trump, and declarer ended up down one. It is true that declarer ran into an unfortunate break. However, he did not take the best line. Indeed, he was concentrating on the wrong hand!

Note that dummy is solid except for the missing diamond honors. The hand can be managed in such a way that, if East has either of the diamond honors, the contract is safe. Declarer should win the first trick in his hand, cash the ace of trumps to make sure that they break no worse than 3-1, then draw the remaining trumps, ending on the table. Now he leads the king of diamonds.

If East plays the ace, all cards vanish. If he does not, declarer discards a heart. If West wins this trick, declarer gets back to dummy with the queen of spades to lead the jack of diamonds in the hope that East has the queen.

If West has both honors, the hand will be lost, but the odds are about 3-to-1 against that. We will not go into the abstruse mathematics of the situation here. For those who want to know the exact odds, it is 76-to-24 on finding East with one of the honors. Contrast this to the odds of encountering a devastating heart split, which are almost 38 percent.

Cheryl Ladd To Play Actress

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Cheryl Ladd, one of "Charlie's Angels," will portray the late Jean Seberg in the Warner Bros. movie based on the life of the blonde actress who took her own life at the age of 41.

'PAPER CHASE' REVIVED — John Houseman, left, and James Stephens, stars of the short-lived CBS-TV series "Paper Chase" — about a law professor and his students — pose during the 1978-79 season. WTTW, the public television station in Chicago, has announced 13 programs from the show's one season, will be shown by PBS early in 1981. (AP Laserphoto)

NBC Hits Ratings Low

NEW YORK (AP) — Summer viewing habits, competition between CBS and ABC and low ratings for several special programs apparently combined to help send NBC to the lowest point in the ratings for any network in nearly four years.

NBC's rating for the week ending July 6 — based on figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. — was 10.6, compared to 14.6 for ABC and 13.3 for CBS. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, only 10.6 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were tuned to NBC.

ABC's first-place finish ended CBS' eight-week run as the No. 1 network in the weekly ratings competition. The rating of 10.6 was the lowest for any network since the third week in July 1976, when CBS scored a 10. NBC's rating that week was 10.6 and ABC's 14.6.

Prime-time ratings normally are lower in the summer, and the long Fourth of July weekend pulled them down even further. Average ratings for Thursday night, July 3, were 18 percent below ratings for Thursday night of the same week in 1979, while Friday night ratings fell 24 percent.

July 4 was on a Wednesday in 1979. NBC had only one show, "Real People," among the week's 20 highest-rated, and that program finished in a three-way tie for 20th.

In addition, NBC's second "Live from Studio 8H" production, "An Evening with Jerome Robbins," finished in 60th place — the week's lowest-rated program — and a movie on the same network, "Music Man," was 58th.

ABC snatched first place for the week from CBS by spotting four of the week's

TV Viewers Generally Will Do OK On Limited Olympic Fare

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Of the many wrong notions lodged in my head, one seems to have become a special source of irritation to my sports-minded acquaintances lately. That is, I'm not sorry that NBC won't be able to present 152½ hours of Olympics coverage, as it had planned before. President Carter's boycott of the Games.

That's not to say I'm happy to see NBC eat the $20 million or so it stands to lose by not broadcasting the Olympics, or that I worried about Russian propaganda, or that I'm any more outraged by Russia's occupation of Afghanistan than he fits a good citizen. It's the Games themselves I don't like.

Swimming. Who wants to watch swimming? That's something you do, not watch (except in certain circumstances, when the swimmer, not the act of swimming, is a rewarding watch).

Or track and field. Ugh! If there is anything in this life more boring than running, it is watching someone else run. If they would provide angry automobile drivers on the track, having to dodge heedless joggers, that might be some fun; but you can get that in almost any neighborhood on almost any morning.

The equestrian events are purposefully wearisome, I think. The world's titled gentry poking around on horses, in no apparent hurry to get anywhere. As far as I'm concerned, the only time a horse is worth watching (now that Mr. Ed is gone) is when you've got 20 bucks on his nose and he's coming hell for home in the stretch.

And archery, archery speaks for itself. Basketball's okay, but I get sick of hearing about the communist ringers every time America loses. "Yeah," someone always says, "we could have won if we'd let Abdul-Jabbar and Dr. J play."

Gymnastics are fun, I admit, but I won't miss the commentators going on about how old Nadia has become ("Where's the little girl who won our hearts in Montreal?"); and besides, you can count on an endless round of international gymnastics competitions after the Olympics.

No, I think I'll do just fine this summer with the limited coverage that's still planned by the major networks' news departments — six minutes a day, with highlights and re- suits. You can find out who won the 70,000 kilometer-run without having to endure it.

My wife, who loves the equestrian events, roundly disagrees with me on all of this, and has even gone so far as to suggest that our beloved national game, baseball, is more than occasionally boring.

Hmm. Maybe there is something to that talk of Soviet propaganda.

WCTU Crusade Is Very Much Alive In Olive Bryan's Vision

ST. ALBANS, W. Va. (AP) — Olive Bryan has a vision — a vision of hundreds of women kneeling in prayer at the portals of your local tavern.

The souls of the sinners within still weigh heavily on the minds of Mrs. Bryan and her colleagues in the Women's Christian Temperance Union, which claims 250,000 members worldwide. In most places, the organization's century-long crusade to ban the bottle has bombed. But as far as the 80-year-old Mrs. Bryan is concerned, "We need it as much now as ever before."

In West Virginia, where alcohol has long been a controversial political issue, the state WCTU's 1,000 members were in the forefront of this year's fight over legislation allowing sale of beer containing more than 3.2 percent alcohol.

The law took effect in May, but not until the Legislature had overridden a gubernatorial veto applauded by temperance and religious groups.

State WCTU President Dorothy Christy of Rivesville shrugs off the defeat, and gamely predicts the union "will be here as long as the world stands." As long as some people drink, she said, others will want the distinction of being zifferent.

"The WCTU is that distinction," Mrs. Christy said. During a recent meeting of the St. Albans chapter, Mrs. Bryan and four other neatly dressed elderly women traded stories about the evils of alcohol.

"Why, I heard a girl, she looked about 12 — of course you can never tell — and she was saying about all the drinking of beer and how she had to be carried out," Mrs. Bryan said, shaking her head in dismay.

Statewide, WCTU enrollment is up by about 60 members from two years ago, according to treasurer Margaret Crall. But the St. Albans chapter, which has 23 members, hasn't added anyone during that period, she said.

"It's harder now to get the young ones interested," said WCTU stalwart Alma Freeman. "It's just hard to find a teetotaler among them."

Mrs. Bryan joined in. "Even those who wouldn't touch liquor with a 10-foot pole don't want to be identified with the union anymore."

She pondered the changing times for a moment, and then wondered aloud, "Why is it that prayer keeps us from sin and sin keeps us from prayer?"

Today's sinners' souls could still stand saving, according to the WCTU, but the group's political influence has faded in the face of a strong liquor lobby and changing mores.

In recent years, the once-vocal union has become a soft-spoken group that quietly urges legislators to raise the drinking age to 21 and teaches schoolchildren about the evils of alcohol and how to fight intemperance among their parents.

"We believe, because the Bible says it, that Christians should not drink," Mrs. Christy said. "We don't think alcoholism is a disease. You don't willingly go out and take cold germs."

Mrs. Christy said it may be time to take the movement back into the streets, to the saloons where it began in Ohio back in 1874.

West Virginia's first chapter was formed nine years later. The anti-liquor movement began in the cities rather than the country. Mrs. Christy said, as city women banded together to retrieve their menfolk from the bars.

The WCTU boasted the elite of turn-of-the-century womanhood, and mothers passed the tradition to their daughters, she said.

Helen Eddy, who heads the Youth Temperance Council for the state WCTU, said she remembers her aunts telling her about the "great march" down Market Street and into the bars of Parkersburg.

Modern-day members maintain ties to the tradition by reciting the WCTU's century-old abstinence pledge:

"I herby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including wine, beer and hard cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in same."

The St. Albans women said none of their daughters has joined the WCTU. They blamed increasing numbers of working women, competition from other organizations and the widespread acceptance of social drinking.

But all vowed to continue the WCTU's work, down to the last member.

"We will continue to pray, educate, legislate and seek new members," Mrs. Christy said. "I don't know what else to do. Do you?"

Agencies Follow Their Clients

NEW YORK (AP) — Foreign advertising agencies are "invading" the United States by following their own multinational clients to these shores, reports Advertising Age.

The publication notes that during the post-World War II period "advertising might well be considered to have been America's most successful export."

Now, "in Europe particularly, advertising has matured and reached points of excellence equal to and sometimes exceeding that of the U.S.," it says. "And, as in so many other economic spheres, a reverse invasion has begun, with European and other foreign advertising agencies developing American branches designed primarily to garner accounts from their own nationals which have invaded the U.S. market."

Tips On Buying Used Automobile

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — People in the market for a used car need to know more than kicking the tires to spot a good one.

Fram Corp., a manufacturer of auto products, recommends doing the following to avoid buying trouble: —Ask the dealer for the car's history; —Talk to the previous owners to determine how the car has been driven and maintained;

—Be wary of a car with paint on the chrome and hinges. This can suggest extensive repainting, meaning that the car has been in a major accident;

—Examine the tires for cuts, imbedded objects, flat spots and uneven wear;

—Look for worn brake or accelerator pedals which can indicate higher mileage than is on the odometer;

—Avoid cars with sagging front ends. This suggests extensive wear.

TAXI!

You won't be finding any of these cabs on city streets today — but they served the needs of their times. Our times call for specially designed taxis, to cope with urban traffic, use energy economically, to avoid contributing to pollution, and be safe and comfortable. To encourage such desirable aims, New York's Museum of Modern Art organized "The Taxi Project: Realistic Solutions for Today," which produced for an exhibition with that name the gleaming, yellow working prototype of a totally new taxi — two American, three European. Also on display at the exhibition — a classic London cab, slide shows and photographs and drawings of historical cabs, including those on this page. The Museum's project was made possible by grants from Mobil Oil Corp. and the Urban Mass Transportation Administration of the U.S. Department of Transportation.

Announcing: A New Dealer In Greenville. TOYOTA EAST!

Our Commitment: Your Satisfaction.

Toyota East in Greenville is brand new. And we've started in business with some strong commitments. We're the authorized dealer for Toyota and Mercedes-Benz, and we're committed to represent these fine automobiles in a manner worthy of such great products.

We've also committed ourselves to honesty and professionalism in sales and service; to complete customer satisfaction; to maintaining a plentiful selection; and to a pricing and trade-in policy that will make a Toyota East deal the best you'll ever find!

We have the cars you want in stock!

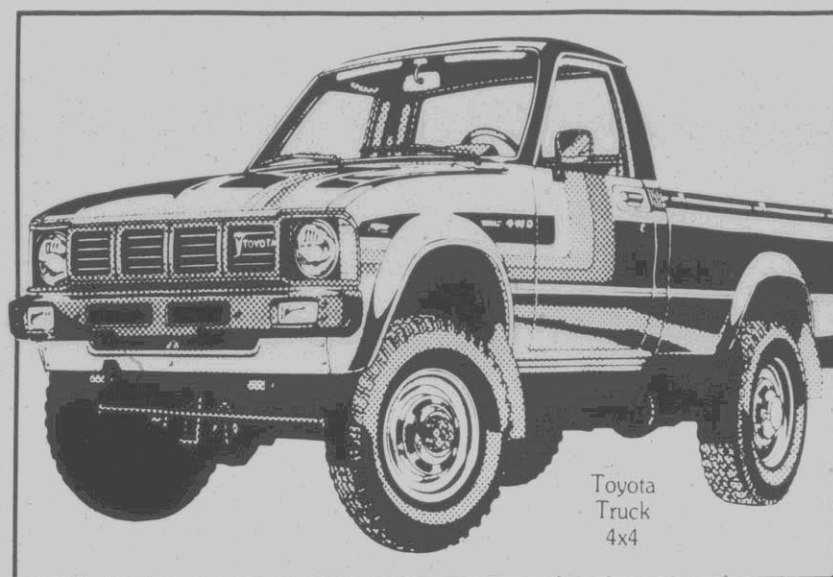

Toyota East is the newest Toyota dealer in North Carolina. Because of this we've received a special allocation of the Toyota models that people want most, including Tercels and 4x4 pick-ups! We have 64 vehicles in stock and 28 more on the way!

While other dealers are making special deals on cars you don't want—Toyota East, as part of the current "Toyota-Thon," is offering you great prices on the dependable, efficient Toyota cars you do want!

A refreshing change in the automobile business.

Along with our other commitments, we at Toyota East promise not to insult your intelligence with advertising and promotions that are meaningless. If we advertise a special price on a given car, it will represent a real value. . . and we'll have those cars in stock and ready to deliver at that price. If we advertise a sale, it will really be a sale. . . with genuine savings. We won't scream at you, and we will never knowingly mislead you in any way.

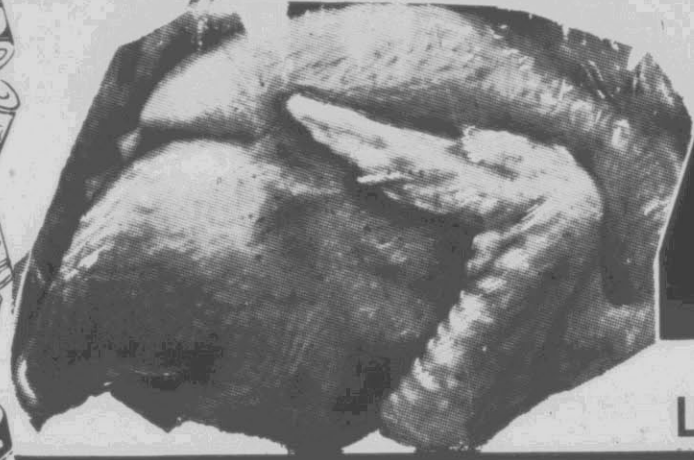

We're convinced that this is the kind of merchandising the public wants and will respond to. And it's the kind of merchandising you can count on from Toyota East—the kind of dealership we know you'll enjoy doing business with!

Americans Beginning To Reveal Recession Strains

By The Associated Press
Americans are beginning to show the strain of the recession — emotionally as well as economically. If past economic downturns are an indicator, mental health experts say, the stress will mean more marital and drinking problems, child abuse and even suicide attempts.

In Michigan, where unemployment is high due to auto industry layoffs and people are beginning to use up financial cushions like unemployment benefits, there already are signs of serious problems: more suicide calls, "more calls from the general public that reflect general anxiety, abuse of family members, alcohol, suicide, et cetera," agencies report.

"We've noticed a considerable increase in 'cry for help' calls," said James Kipfer, executive director of the Mental Health Association in Michigan.

These are hard times for many Americans. The unemployment rate is 7.7 percent and rising. The annual rate of inflation is running at about 11 percent — and that's an improvement.

"Historically, when financial conditions from a national perspective are tighter, we will witness an increased incidence of emotional breakdowns," said David Turkot, a clinical psychologist with Atlanta Psychological Associates.

"We can't actually blame the breakdowns on the economy, but it increases stress on people already predisposed to emotional breakdowns."

Paul Reed, executive director of Family and Children's Service of Greater St. Louis, agreed. "Problems are surfacing..." said the head of the private counseling agency with a caseload of 15,000.

"There is more violence because of this frustration," he said. "You would like to smack the boss or the foreman, but he's not there. Then you've got the crying baby or the wife nagging the breadwinner. The natural tendency is to strike out at them."

Many psychologists and mental health counselors see evidence that the recession has undermined people's sense of well-being, an Associated Press spot survey found.

"Our professional literature and the news media are both saying that the economy is pushing thousands of people over the brink, and I believe it," said Dr. William S. Hall, head of the South Carolina Department of Mental Health.

Some people have asked to be admitted to the state's mental hospitals. "Some patients are telling us now that they have nowhere to go, no money, no jobs, and they are very depressed about the economic situation," said Dr. Karl V. Doskoil, superintendent of the State Hospital in Columbia.

Turkot said patients in therapy sessions speak of more family arguments over credit cards, how vacation money should be spent and whether children should be sent to public or private colleges.

"We've seen that people are becoming obsessed with matters relating to finances," he said.

Other findings of the AP survey:

—In Connecticut, there has been a "marked rise" in admissions to state mental hospitals, in part because people can't afford to care for elderly relatives at home.

—At the Northeast Jackson County Mental Health Center in Kansas City, Mo., admissions are up 20 percent over last year. Executive Director Jim McKee says money problems are "creating some cracks in the family structure."

—Catholic Charities of Chicago says family counseling contacts have risen 33 percent, and while it isn't all due to the economy "there is a financial component."

—United Way funding for the Dade County Consumer Credit Counseling Program in Miami was increased to meet a 39 percent increase in demand, largely from middle- and upper-middle income families, said United Way of America spokesman Steve Delfin.

—The United Way-supported Information and Referral Service of Toledo, Ohio, is getting 1,400 calls a month — up from 400-500 a year ago — and most of the calls are related to economic problems, said Delfin.

—In states where there has been little or no increase in mental problems, experts say problems may show up when people are no longer distracted by vacations and are faced with big fuel bills.

Especially hard hit are the poor and almost-poor.

"These people operate marginally to begin with, not only emotionally, but financially," said Brian Heath, president of the Mental Health Association of Connecticut.

"They're barely keeping their nose above water, and when something else comes along, like a recession, these are the people who feel it first... They don't have the resources to cushion the blow."

To help people deal with the recession, counselors at the Northeast Jackson Center in Kansas City encourage them to look for activities "they can get involved in at no cost..."

United Way agencies nationwide have increased support for family preservation and strengthening services by 27 percent — to $86.2 million. Support for crisis centers and hotlines is also up, according to Delfin.

THREATEN THAIS

Easy Life On Island Paradise

By HAL SPENCER
Associated Press Writer
PRUDENCE ISLAND, R. I.
(AP) — Cars lurching along the bumpy roads on this Narragansett Bay island have no license plates.

"We don't make 'em get plates over here," said 19-year-old Dennis Canario, the island's sole policeman, who uses a can of spray paint to number the cars belonging to the island's 75 or so permanent and mostly retired residents.

The word for Prudence Island is casual.

The whale-shaped strip of land, which is about seven miles long and 1.5 miles across at its widest point, can be reached by ferry from Bristol on the east side of Narragansett Bay.

Although it's only 20 minutes by boat from the mainland, living here is a far cry from life across the water.

"People are more resourceful over here," said 69-year-old Todd Farnham, leaning against his workbench where he makes dulcimers, violins and guitars.

"When you need a part or something, you can't just go out and buy it. You have to get on the ferry and go to the mainland. So a lot of the time we just repair or make what we need."

The island's only mechanic, Bill Bisordi, proudly noted, "I've made my own shock absorbers and even carburetors for the cars hauled over one at a time by the ferry."

Farnham, who passes the time in a rustic workshop smelling of wood and glue, has served in every official capacity on the island, from policeman to highway superintendent.

In fact, almost everybody holds or once held an official title or two.

"I'm not only policeman, but harbor master, animal control officer, assistant to the town administrator, public safety director, conservation officer and volunteer fireman," said Canario.

Bill Bacon, who helps his brother and father run their Prudence Island Vineyard and Winery, is also the island teacher at the 84-year-old one-room schoolhouse, with a current enrollment of three children. Other children attend boarding schools on the mainland.

And Chester Warner, the fire chief, also built a good share of the island's homes, most of which serve as summer cottages for some 2,000 "summer people."

"We could use about six cops here in the summer," said Canario, complaining that the lush island's most serious law enforcement problem is auto accidents.

He said burglary is a problem, too, pointing at the quaint cottages with names like Rainbow's End and Thistle Dew.

Some residents wince at the prospect of growth on the island, which has escaped the development common to many others off New England shores.

The nearest thing to a commercial venture is the Bacon winery, which markets its product at Rhode Island stores.

"There's getting to be too many city people," said

Marcy Dunbar, sitting on the railing outside her tiny store at the ferry landing.

Mrs. Dunbar complained about a state plan to use portions of the island, which it has already acquired, for park and recreational purposes, including camping and hiking. Similar development is occurring on eight other bay islands.

"This plan of the state's to make a park system of the bay islands could really hurt our way of life. They're talking about bringing buses in here for the tourists," sighed Mrs. Dunbar, whose two children attend the one-room school.

A summer resident stepping off the ferry admonished a reporter not to write about the island "and get a lot of people interested in this place."

The island children for years have brought injured birds, deer and even a fox to him to nurse back to health.

His wife runs a store — the only competitor of Marcy Dunbar — and is soon to become postmistress, succeeding a woman who is retiring.

"We love it over here," the elder Canario said in his thick Portuguese accent. "It's paradise."

Some things on the island are just like on the mainland, though.

Asked what the handful of children do here in the winter, the younger Canario said, "They watch TV, just like kids everywhere."

ing commission, and financial expert Yao Yilin will replace him as head of the body that sets targets for China's all-important modernization, informed sources say.

Bulb Value Not Wattage Alone

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Value in light bulbs is not based just on wattage, says Kathleen Parrott, an extension housing specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. Check the package label for average lumens and life rating, she says. The higher the lumen output, the more light you'll get. The life rating estimates the number of hours a bulb will last. Some bulbs advertised as long-life produce fewer lumens, she says.

Blackthorn Survivors 'Haunted'

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Six months after he swam away from a sinking Coast Guard cutter that pulled 23 of his shipmates to their deaths, Lwrry Clutter is troubled by ghosts on sleepless nights.

"It's the thought of a dead friend," he says. "Before the accident, I would have laughed if anyone had talked about a ghost. ... But they just don't seem dead."

Clutter is one of 27 Coast Guardsmen who survived the Jan. 28 collision of the cutter Blackthorn and the tanker S.S. Capricorn. The Blackthorn capsized and sank in Tampa Bay. No one on the tanker was hurt.

Like other survivors, Clutter said he is haunted by the Coast Guard's worst peacetime disaster.

"I see the ships going by, and I know I could never get on one now," he said from Houston. "Shoot, I don't think I'd go on a ship if it was tied to the dock. I'd never know when someone was going to come along and hit it."

Former Blackthorn skipper Lt. Cmdr. George Sepel is now port operations officer at a Coast Guard safety station in Houston and "loving it." He said he has relied on a new-found Christian faith "to take my burden, and that's been a great comfort."

"I do not want to go back to sea," Sepel said. "When you have a 1,200-ton ship roll over on top of you and push you down, you don't forget. ... The night of the 28th is still there."

Sepel spoke to The St. Petersburg Times last week before the Coast Guard announced it was investigating him and Ensign John Ryan, the deck officer, to see if any further action was warranted.

On May 8, a board of inquiry made up of Coast Guard officers and members of the National Transportation Safety Board ended hearings in Tampa. Though it made no recommendations in its report and drew no conclusions on what caused the collision, the board did say that Ryan, who was fresh out of officer candidate school, did not know proper whistle signals and course changes.

The report said Ryan used his "seaman's eye" instead of taking exact bearings to negotiate a crucial turn in the shipping channel just before the collision, for which each side blames the other.

The cutter had been in drydock here for four months and was on its way home to Texas with an eager crew when the accident occurred. Cmdr. Thomas Carlton, a psychiatrist who worked with the survivors after the accident, said he expected "a certain percentage to have troubling thoughts. But you would expect them to become less by now ... for some people it just goes away. For some, it doesn't."

Machinery Technician Chief Ron Litterell, now assistant engineer at the Blackthorn's Galveston base, says he won't go back on the water.

He had testified that the tanker's anchor penetrated the cutter's outer plates to at least four feet inside the ship.

Litterell said he was napping in his bunk when the collision occurred. He said he grabbed his pants and shirt and scurried to the deck where he met naked Machinery Technician Bruce Lafond, who told him, "You better get the anchor out of the shower before you take a shower." Lafond's body was found the next day.

Litterell peeked into the shower. "I said to myself, 'What in the world is this anchor doing here?'"

Yeoman Jim LaNoue, one of two Blackthorn crewmen who was not on the cutter that night, is one of seven who have left the Coast Guard. LaNoue was in Alabama driving a Coast Guard truck when he learned of his shipmates' fate over the radio.

"I felt like I had lost a family," he said. "Once the ship went down, I couldn't stay in."

Clutter, an electrician's mate, was on duty in the steering room below the main deck the night of the collision.

Head Shops Fight Drug Foes' Ban

CLEVELAND (AP) — The people who sell "bongs" and "roach clips" and the people who are worried about easy drug use are moving into what may be a decisive battle in their long war.

For several years, states and communities across the nation have been trying to outlaw so-called "head shops" that specialize in drug paraphernalia. Results have been mixed.

The industry, a formidable foe, is worth an estimated $500 million to $3 billion a year. It sells marijuana cigarette rolling papers, cocaine spoons, hashish pipes, and other devices like "bongs" — large pipes — and "roach clips," which are used to hold the end of dwindling marijuana cigarettes.

But now, a model law drafted by the Drug Enforcement Administration and enacted in several states and many communities nationwide has reached the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati.

The case was brought by a Parma record dealer, who says the law was enacted to put him out of business. A federal district judge upheld the measure almost intact. It's the first test of the DEA model law to reach an appeals court.

The decision of the appeals court, which heard arguments last month, "will be a precedent for all of the remaining courts in the U.S.," said Harry L. Myers, the DEA attorney who drafted the model law.

If the law survives, DEA officials say, more states and communities are likely to enact it. And some states that have already done so will begin enforcement.

Among the states that already have the DEA model law or a similar statute on the books are Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Maryland, New Jersey and North Dakota. New York Gov. Hugh Carey signed a new "head shop" law last week.

Proponents of the laws say distribution of accessories of drug use encourages young people to indulge in illegal activities by glamorizing drug use.

"We've got to turn around the 'do drug' messages children are receiving," said Lee Dogoloff, director for drug policy at the White House, which was involved in drafting the model legislation. "One is the proliferation of paraphernalia, much of which is designed and marketed for that population."

However, opponents say banning the sale of such devices is unconstitutional — and misguided.

"It's like thinking you can remove alcohol by removing swizzle sticks," says Mark Heutlinger, an officer of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws.

One problem, opponents say, is that many of the items sold in "head shops" have legitimate uses — for example, cigarette papers that can be used to roll real cigarettes or marijuana joints.

So at the request of the White House, the DEA looked for precedents involving paraphernalia used in other illegal activities, such as counterfeiting, gambling, moonshining and tobacco bootlegging.

"There is a federal moonshining paraphernalia statute that makes a crime and provides for confiscation of all properties intended for use to violate federal liquor laws," said Myers. "It's been upheld and applied for 60 years."

Under the Parma law, making, selling or possessing drug paraphernalia is a second-degree misdemeanor, carrying a fine of $750 and 90 days in jail. It covers devices like pipes, bongs, roach clips, cocaine spoons and the advertising of such items.

Peter Schlievin, owner of Record Revolution No. 6 in Parma, challenged the law on grounds that it was unconstitutional, vague and denied him due process. He has not been cited as a violator.

In addition to spelling out specific paraphernalia, the law requires that prosecutors establish that the seller intended that the devices be used with drugs.

Feuding On Prestigious British Private Schools

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Leftwing legislator Kevin McNamara has two sons enrolled at Ampleforth, a prestigious private school in northern England.

McNamara, an avowedly ardent Socialist and member of the opposition Labor Party, pays $5,300 a year in school fees, but he may also end up paying with his seat in Parliament.

Labor has a longstanding — and long unfulfilled — commitment to get rid of the private schools, regarded by many Laborites as bastions of privilege and the ongoing class divisions in British society.

The local Labor Party council in McNamara's Hull constituency is so outraged it voted recently to hold a "reselection" conference before choosing its candidate for the next general election, and condemned "public figures with double standards in education."

There's nothing trivial about the row over where McNamara's sons — Julian, 15, and Edwin, 14 — go to school. It reflects an age-old national argument that has education at its starting point, and politics, prestige and power at its center.

Each Conservative Party administration — including the current one — is dominated by the country's 5 percent who wear the old school tie.

"Hooray, the chaps are back," sneered the left-wing Sunday Mirror when state-

Among the 339 Tory legislators, 204 are from private schools, including 50 from Eton.

Even now, Labor — with 21 private school graduates out of 268 legislators — is polishing another of its blueprints to phase out, or at least make life difficult for, the private schools.

This plan aims to integrate the 2,400 schools into the free state system. Penalties for refusal would include steep university fees for students from private schools and an end to the schools' tax-free status.

In contrast, the Conservatives — who have cut public spending in most areas — this fall will start a scheme to place 6,000 bright children from poorer homes into state-assisted places at private schools each year. When fully operational it will cost taxpayers some $121 million a year.

Despite their financial difficulties — which have pushed fees to an average $6,200 a year for boarders and $2,750 for day pupils — the private schools show great survival powers.

The schools range from little known and academically undistinguished establishments to the 200 superior boarding schools for boys, some of them centuries old, which are known as "public schools."

The most famous are Eton and Harrow, and they include the McNamara sons' Ampleforth, a Roman Catholic college.

McNamara, 45, declared he will forfeit his parliamentary seat rather than send Julian and Edwin back to the state schools attended by his daughter and two other sons.

The boys gained places at Ampleforth, which offers music along with a regular academic curriculum, by winning $1,400-a-year scholarships on grounds of musical talent.

McNamara, who foots the rest of the bill, protested that he wants public schools integrated into the state system. But in the meantime, he said, "I am just a parent doing my best for my children.... In my area, there are no state schools that can provide the musical expertise of Ampleforth."

Labor does not actually forbid legislators from sending their children to private schools.

But the pressure is there, and both the party and the Independent Schools Information Service — with which most private schools are affiliated — report "very few" children of Labor legislators at private schools.

A party spokesman said she knew of only one other current Labor legislator, a state-educated Welsh lawyer, Denzil Davies, with children at private schools.

When the argument peaked in the 1960s, leading Labor leftwinger Tony Benn, who renounced a hereditary peerage, withdrew his son from the 420-year-old Westminster school in London and sent him to the local state high school.

More recently, former education secretary Shirley Williams withdrew her daughter from a state school that went independent.

Independent Schools Information Service spokesman Tim Devlin maintains it is dissatisfaction with the state system rather than snobbery which accounts for the private schools' growing enrollment — a current 450,000 pupils or 7 percent of the schoolgoing population, compared with 5 percent two years ago.

"The more Labor persecutes us, the more we thrive," said Devlin. "You can't be poor, but you don't have to be yeally rich to pay the day fees."

Devlin also argues there is a significant, but unspecified, number of children of blue collar workers now enrolling, particularly in the day schools.

To Labor education spokesman Neil McKinnock, private schools represent a system of "segregation, privilege and purchased preference." Said McKinnock: "We want these institutions available to all the children in the country instead of being locked away behind a price tag."

OLD SCHOOL TIES THAT BIND — Students at Eton, one of England's most prestigious private schools, walk about in the tailcoats that are part of the school uniform. The British Labor party has a longstanding commitment to abolish the private schools but one Labor legislator has said he will forfeit his parliamentary seat rather than send his children to a state school. Portable cooler, icy stream or refrigerator shelf, a carton of Pepsi-Cola in cans chills faster and stores easier. Pepsi-Cola's lightweight cans are a natural for picnic hampers, freezer chests or back packs. So whether it's a picnic, a beach party or a quiet meal at home, serve ice-cold Pepsi in cans. Nothing goes better with good food and good times than Pepsi-Cola. And Pepsi goes along better in cans.

Price Weighed By Riot Widow

MIAMI (AP) — Tina Higdon is 20 years old, a widow with three small children and a fourth on the way. Grieving and bitter over her husband Benny's death in the Miami race rioting, she's short of money and uncertain about her future.

"Now there's a big hole in my life," she says. "I'm just figuring it day to day. That's the only way you can take it."

Unable to pay her rent, she moved in with her parents. Roy and Frances Owens, who also were mourning their 15-year-old son Robert, killed along with Higdon and a friend.

While money and attention are focused on rebuilding the riot-scarred black sections of Miami, not a penny of special aid — nor a word of consolation — has come from officials to Mrs. Higdon or the Owens, the family says. Her only income now is widow's benefits from Social Security.

"To us, it makes us feel like our kids were thrown on the garbage heap, that nobody cares," says Owens. "President Carter comes down here and looks at all the damage, but nobody says a word to us."

"We're poor folks, and we went $6,000 in debt to pay for the funerals."

Benny Higdon, Robert Owens and Charles Barreca were heading home from a fishing trip May 17 when a mob dragged them from their car at an intersection in Liberty City and beat them to death with boards and chunks of concrete. The three were the first victims of the rioting that claimed 15 other lives and caused more than $100 million in damages.

"I can see them beating them in the head, that's what tears me up," Owens says. "I don't know how to explain it to you. You want to reach out for them, and they're not there. It's like having your guts torn out."

Benny and Tina were high school sweethearts, married at age 16 in Higdon, Ala., a town named after its first postmaster, Benny's grandfather. The young couple moved to Miami when Higdon lost his job in an Alabama coal mine and Owens found him work in a bakery.

The federal government has promised $71 million in aid to the area that erupted in rioting after an all-white Tampa jury acquitted four white former policemen in the death of black insurance man Arthur McDuffie in Miami.

Florida has a victim compensation program, but officials don't know if Tina Higdon is entitled to assistance because of her Social Security widow benefits.

"We have talked about this, there is no justice in the world," says Mrs. Owens.

"We are bitter," says Tina's sister, Pam Parsons. "We've lost two in the family, and we just want to see that something is done to take care of her. The county was not prepared for the riot. They let the riot go. I think the county is responsible for the deaths."

"We haven't even gotten a phone call about it."

Links Adultery And Paganism

PATTAYA, Thailand (AP) — Adultery and idolatry are basically the same pagan worship, the Rev. Saphir P. Athyal, president of Union Biblical Seminary of Yeojmal, India, told an international Consultation on World Evangelism.

Describing ancient pagan religions in which people engaged in sexual practices as part of worship, he said modern idolatry of sex would "appall even the ancient pagans whose sexual excesses were restricted to worship places."

Thad Stem Held Place In History

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Thad Stem Jr. earned a place in history long before his death a couple of weeks ago.

No contemporary writer so faithfully captured the flavor of small-town North Carolina. He could easily have been one of the characters in his own books. Or the subject of one of his poems.

Still, there was something poetic about the way he was officially inducted into history on that cloudy Tuesday afternoon in Oxford.

The hall overflowed with his kinfolk, friends, neighbors, fellow writers, a former governor — all of them his readers.

Those who knew him best began to feel a bit uncomfortable when the funeral service started off in an orthodox manner — organ music, prayer, Bible reading, hymn, and a solo. All of it, of course, reverently and properly done.

But more than one who came to bid goodbye silently began to muse about how Thad might have written up this rather somber service. He had a way of lightening up sad occasions — even throwing in a bit of sacrilege for laughs.

There was even a sly wish that one of the three officiating ministers might mispronounce his name as Bernice Kelly Harris did when introducing him to the North Carolina Literary and Historical Association many years ago: "Stad Them."

The apprehension was quickly dissipated, however, when Oxford's Episcopal rector, Harrison Simon, began his eulogy. A synonym for eulogy, the reverend said, was "celebration."

Mark one up for the preacher, for that definition had even eluded Stem, whose book, "Ransacking Words and Customs from A to Izzard," was filled with interesting twists of the English language.

From that point on the service was upbeat — really a celebration. Hundreds of facial expressions reflected the new mood. There was a feeling that Thad Stem had squeezed into a seat on the back row and was enjoying his own funeral service.

He would have been pleased to hear himself compared with Mark Twain. The mood followed the crowd to Elmwood Cemetery. The timing was perfect: a train — like the one so vividly described in Stem's writings — passed as if in salute.

When the brief final rites were over, friends gathered in little knots to chat. One commented, "Thad might have made it sound funnier, but he wouldn't have denied a word they said about him."

Under a threatening sky, the people began drifting away, each pausing for a last look. There, on the hill overlooking the town that he immortalized in literature, rested the flag-draped coffin atop an empty grave. Facing Oxford, of course.

Out-of-town visitors drove slowly through the streets, looking for landmarks from Stem's books — Hill's Drug Store, The Emporium, Miss Opal's sporting house, the old privy near the firehouse. Many stopped by the house in which the author was born and died.

Thad Stem's legacy is not just 15 books, ranging from poetry (like "The Jackknife Horse") to his last book of essays ("Thad Stem's Ark"). Nor is it just his many articles or unsigned by unmistakable "rock wall" editorials.

Rather, it is the flavor that permeates and radiates from all of his writings — a flavor instantly recognized by anyone who ever stepped on a cocklebur, chewed rabbit tobacco, squashed a hornworm, sipped a drink at the drug store, attended a Brunswick stew, and sat up with a corpse.

Granville County is without a good, formal history. But Thad Stem has painted thousands of word pictures, more vivid than bare facts, that capture the essence of the 20th Century tobacco country.

He was not just a poet, short story writer and essayist. He was also a historian with a rare talent for telling the rest of the story.

*In accordance with U.S. Dept. of Energy Test Procedures, the operating cost was calculated on the basis of 64.3 gallons per day of hot water usage by a family of 4 with 90° F temp. rise, with gas rate of 36.7¢ per therm and electricity rate of 4.97¢ per kilowatt hour (U.S. government national average cost figures). Savings were calculated by subtracting the operating cost of our Power Miser 40-gal. gas and 52-gal. electric models from the cost of operating our standard 40-gal. gas and 52-gal. electric water heaters. Savings may be more or less depending on your hot water usage and local utility rates.
