Farmers Market Lures Customers Seeking Fresh Farm Produce

LOOKING IT OVER...Customers at Greenville's Farmers Market take their pick of Bobby Lewis' corn. Some customers, said Lewis, want their produce as early as 7 a.m. in order to get started with freezing or canning. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken.)

"THEY GET ABOUT THIS BIG"...Vegetable farmer Thelma Reaves of Ayden explains about size and price to a customer at the Farmers Market. The market is open every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday morning at Pitt Plaza at 8 o'clock. Closing time is usually around noon, or until everything is gone. This season is the second one the market has been in existence, and according to Agricultural Extension Agent Sam Uzzell, has been a successful one. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken.)

To get the best, some folks come out at 7 or 8 a.m. Fresh corn, cantalopes, squash, peas, tomatoes and string beans abound, and customers of the Farmers Market in Greenville come out Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday mornings to reap the benefits of Pitt County's vegetable and fruit farms.

"There have been Farmers Markets tried several times here before," said Agricultural Extension Agent Sam Uzzell. "This one got organized because it's a good way to accomplish several things, including providing a local market for vegetables and fruits and giving the community a place they can buy high quality locally grown produce."

Uzzell speculated that the Farmers Market might also spur interest in growing things other than traditional field crops. "There's no need for us to buy produce that's grown across the country in California and pay for it being shipped here," he added. "We grow the same quality just as well here and at the same cost without adding the transportation expense. This, to me is the greatest benefit of the market."

This season is the second for the Farmers Market. "Last year was our first year. We operated out at the old Pitt County Fairgrounds but are at Pitt Plaza next to the theatres this year," said the farm agent.

Uzzell noted a large increase in business for the sellers at the new location. "We've seen a substantial increase in the number of customers and producers," he explained. "We hope to have a permanent location and a permanent building soon."

The next week or so should be the peak of the season for the farmers. Corn is plentiful as well as string beans and squash. During the next few days butter beans, okra and fruits will abound.

"There will be plenty of corn, tomatoes, bell peppers and many greens," said Uzzell. "This is in addition to the okra, string beans, cucumbers, squash, spaghetti squash and butter beans. This week will be our prime time."

The market is open on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 8-11 a.m., and on Saturday from 8 a.m. to noon. "Usually this means from 8 a.m. until we're sold out," added Uzzell. "To get the best, you have to come early. Things are going quick."

On an average Saturday, reports the farm agent, the market has around ten farmers selling.

"I come out here every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday," said Thelma Reaves, who has a pick-your-own vegetable farm near Ayden. "Sam asked me to come sell,so I did and its been very good."

Bobby Lewis, another produce grower, said that business is good. "Some people get here first thing in the morning. They are canners and want to get their vegetables early in order to get home and get to work. They are ready to start at 7 o'clock in the morning," he commented.

"One thing this market has going for it," explained Uzzell, "is good quality produce below supermarket prices.

"During this peak of the season things should be even better," concluded the agent.

Tax-Cut Crusade

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Republican and Democratic politicians are scrambling to lead the tax-cut crusade this election year, assuming that inflation-weary voters want nothing more than a slash in their federal tax bill.

The politicians are wrong.

An Associated Press-NBC News poll says the majority of Americans do not look favorably on a tax cut and do not buy the arguments for one that are being pushed by Ronald Reagan and Republican congressional leaders.

The polls shows that the public believes balancing the budget is more important than reducing taxes. There is a wide perception that a tax cut could worsen the nation's inflation problem.

They don't see a tax cut helping their personal financial situation. If there was a cut, most Americans say they would use it to pay day-to-day expenses or pay outstanding bills.

Reagan has made cutting federal government and cutting federal taxes a centerpiece of his challenge to President Carter. In June, congressional Republicans began intensive efforts to enact a 10 percent tax cut effective Jan. 1, 1981, as the first step in what they envision as a multi-year tax cutting program.

But the public isn't entirely enthusiastic about these efforts.

Asked whether Reagan's proposal shows that he understands the needs of the American people, or whether it was an election-year political gimmick, 19 percent of those interviewed said Reagan understands the needs of the people; 71 percent cited election year politics. The remainder of the 1,949 adults interviewed by telephone nationwide were not sure.

Freed Hostage In U.S. Air Force Hospital

By LARRY E. HEINZERLING
Associated Press Writer

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — Richard Queen, reported suffering a neurological disorder after what his mother called "incredibly, unbelievably hard times" during his 250-day captivity in Iran, was admitted Saturday to a U.S. Air Force hospital for extensive medical tests.

One U.S. official, who asked not to be named, said Queen might be kept several days. State Department officials accompanying the freed hostage said they had no immediate statement on his condition.

A State Department spokesman here, Sheldon J. Krys, said only that Queen "needs rest and decompression."

Queen's father, Harold, expressed concern about his son's condition after a 50-minute meeting in Zurich, Switzerland early Saturday morning, their first. But he said later in the day that the 28-year-old diplomat was improving "almost hour by hour. His mind is clear. His spirit is great, the mood is excellent. He is coming back fast to be the same boy we knew."

One of the first things Harold Queen said after his first meeting with his son was: "Richard is not as we have known him when we last saw him a year ago."

The younger Queen is reported to have lost 10-15 pounds in the last few weeks, and to be suffering a neurological disorder that has contributed to dizziness, a lack of coordination and stiffness on his left side.

U.S. State Department officials said he would undergo extensive tests at the three-story complex, regarded as one of the most modern and well-equipped outside the United States. The 13 black and women hostages freed from Iran last November also were taken to the hospital here for checkups and

Conference Poses Threat

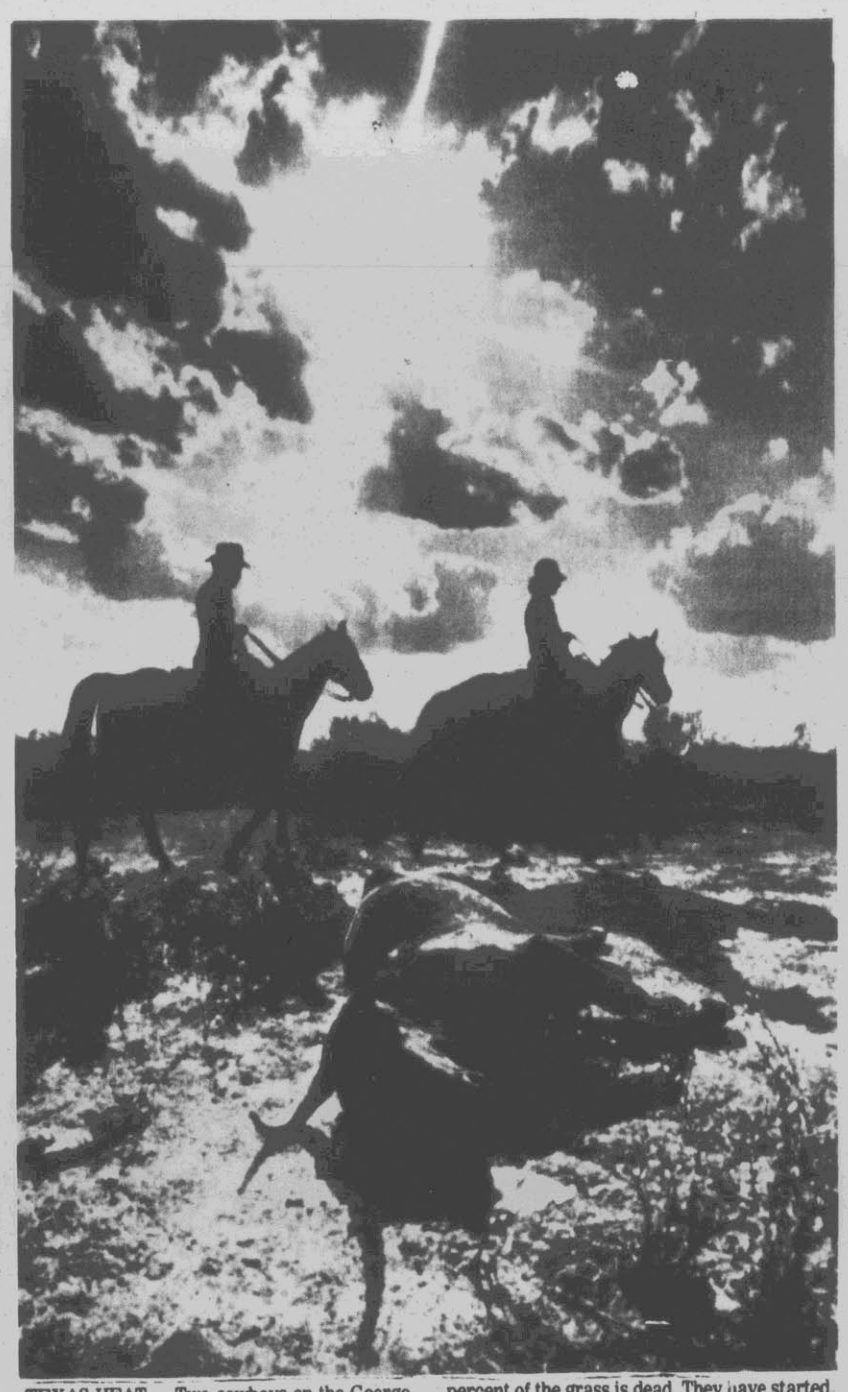
By STEVE K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Moslem nations will take "drastic action" against nations that move their embassies from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem, Habib Shatti, secretary-general of the Islamic Conference, said Saturday.

Israel captured the Arab sector of East Jerusalem in the 1967 Mideast War and a bill is now before the Israeli Parliemant that would legally proclaim Jerusalem as the "indivisible" capital of the Jewish state.

Shatti, speaking at the end of a two-day meeting of the Islamic Conference, said the conference will ask countries with embassies now in Jerusalem to vacate the city. He said their refusal could prompt a break in diplomatic and commercial relations with Moslem nations.

Thirteen countries, most of them in South America, have embassies in Jerusalem, Shatti said. The United States has not accepted Israel's stand that Jerusalem is the Israeli capital and the U.S. Embassy is located in Tel Aviv, as are the embassies of most other major countries.



TEXAS HEAT — Two cowboys on the George Light Ranch ride past the carcass of a Texas Longhorn that died due to the heat wave that has been plaguing the southwest. According to the cowboys, less than 2 inches of rain has fallen in the area in the past year, and 75 percent of the grass is dead. They have started burning the needles off cactus so the cattle will have feed. Temperatures continue to break the 100 degree mark with no relief in sight. (AP Laserphoto)

Anti-Regime Demonstrations Held In Iran

By United Press International

In a reflection of continuing anti-Khomeini sentiment in Iran, young leftist men and women, "brandishing knives and shouting slogans," clashed with police and revolutionary guards, reports from Tehran said Saturday.

"Several people were killed or wounded," the reports said.

The clash, announced by an organization named "Tehran's Purging Staff Headquarters," followed the failure of a coup attempt against Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini Thursday in which 17 military officers and Gen. Mohammed Bagheri, former commander of the Air Force, were arrested.

Khomeini said Saturday, "Many of the criminals were arrested and a great many others are being sought."

Eight people, including a revolutionary guard, were killed and an undisclosed number injured in the western city of Hamedan, site of an air base where the plot was centered, newspapers said.

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said the coup attempt was the sixth since the overthrow of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi in February 1979.

Tehran Radio's account of the leftist demonstration quoted the "purging staff headquarters" as saying, "Precisely at the time when Islam and Iran were threatened by a coup d'etat ... a number of young girls and boys, subservient to renegade leftist groups, launched attacks, brandished knives, and by chanting slogans confirmed that they were hirelingsf Eastern and Western imperialists."

In Alumni Giving Incentive Awards Program

ECU NEWS BUREAU

DETROIT — East Carolina University has been recognized as "First Place Winner" in the 1980 U.S. Steel Foundation's Alumni Giving Incentive Awards Program, according to an announcement and presentation at the Annual Assembly of the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE).

The award is for alumni fund raising improvement during the past year. ECU had a record 1979 annual fund year, according to Donald L. Lemish, ECU Vice Chancellor for Institutional Advancement, with an increase of 132 percent in alumni annual fund donors to 3,837 and a 73.6 percent increase in gift dollars to $95,923.

During the past decade, alumni giving to education has grown from $2.5 to more than $5 million annually. The Alumni Giving Incentive Awards Program has, since 1959, recognized outstanding alumni support programs in over 450 educational institutions and encouraged greater alumni support in thousands more, according to Dr. James Fisher, president of CASE.

This year over 1,500 institutions entered the competition and 279 were evaluated in the final round of judging. As first place winner, ECU was presented a $1,000 grant and a mobius strip at the CASE Annual Assembly.

"The awards program, now in its 22nd year, seeks to recognize those institutions and their alumni that have made a significant commitment to encourage private voluntary support for education, Fischer said. The program is jointly sponsored by the United States Steel foundation which has given more than $789,000 in awards and provided $60,000 for this year's winners.

To qualify as a finalist, an institution had to record at least a 25 percent increase in amount of gifts and a 10 percent increase in number of alumni contributing. "Our entire private support program this past year was outstanding and it is largely due to the confidence, loyalty and pride our alumni have in the university." Chancellor Thomas Brewer said.

"Also, credit should be given to the alumni and development staffs which worked so diligently in developing cultivation and fund raising programs."

"Total private gifts to ECU this past year exceeded $3 million and will rank us among the top three or four institutions in total support among American Association of State Colleges and Universities members," Lemish said. "In addition to the pride we have in the support provided we are doubly excited because of the scholarships, research, and special programs which these gifts help provide."

Alumni and development staff includes Bill Bedsole, Donald Leggett, Robert Adams, Rick Robbins and Mrs. Betty-Blaine Worthington.

"We hope this year's improvement will be just the beginning to many years of steady increases in alumni donor support and will continue to seek major involvement from our alumni in all programs of the university," Lemish said.

Greenville Foundation Establishes A Trust Fund In Honor Of Jerry Mills

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

At a meeting of the Trustees of the Greenville Foundation held on Thursday, the seven-member board unanimously voted to establish the "Lieutenant Jerry Steve Mills Fire Safety Trust," a permanent fund to be administered by the foundation's trustees.

"This is the first trust to be set up under the Greenville Foundation," Richard (Rick) Cox, executive director of the foundation explained. "The foundation was established in 1978, and has been approved by the Internal Revenue Service. Under the provisions of the foundation, donations can be accepted as designated or non-designated funds."

When the foundation was chartered in 1978, seven Greenville residents agreed to serve as trustees — and these seven are still the trustee members.

Dr. Herbert Hadley is chairman, and other members are Marvin K. Blount, Sr., Louis W. Gaylord, Jr., W. W. Speight, Janet Stoughton, H. W. (Bud) Wheless, and Dr. John L. Wooten.

"Before taking action to adopt the resolution establishing the Mills Fire Safety Trust," Cox remarked, "trustee members coordinated the intent of the trust with agencies and persons closely involved."

This coordination included contact with and seeking advice from Fire Chief Jenness Allen of the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department, and City Manager Ed Wyatt. "They each agreed the establishment of a trust to honor the young fireman who died last Sunday was an excellent idea," Cox stated. He added that a number of voluntary contributions received in memory of Mills will be applied to the trust.

"The trustees also contacted Mills' widow," Cox said, "and she readily agreed to the use of her late husband's name for the trust fund.

"Another person contacted was David Evans, Jr., the person whose house burned last Sunday when Mills lost his life. Mr. Evans said he welcomed the opportunity to be identified with the trust, and that he wanted to be allowed to be the first person to make a contribution to the trust."

Cox emphasized that naming the fund a fire safety trust in no way implies an inadequacy or incompleteness of fire safety training or programs. "It is important that the public realize this," he said. "Actually, the intent of the trust is to provide funds to supplement the official program of the Fire-Rescue Department. There are occasions when it would be good to bring in individuals or groups who had something worthwhile to contribute to the Greenville program, or occasions when there's a need to send firemen to attend programs or seminars for which there are no regular funds available.

"This," he added, "is what the trust is designed to do."

Trustees of the Greenville Foundation will administer the Lt. Jerry Steve Mills Fire Safety Trust. Under guidelines adopted, requests for projects will come to the trustees from the fire chief with the approval of the city manager.

Cox, a Greenville native (son of former Mayor and Mrs. Percy Cox), as the foundation's executive director, will be working closely with the Mills Trust. Anyone who wants to make a contribution can mail a check payable to the trust to: The Greenville Foundation, P. O. Box 1607, or can call the Fire-Rescue Department which will make arrangements to receive any contribution. The number to call there is the non-emergency number, 752-2554.

"All contributions are tax-deductible," Cox said, "and receipts will be given to donors." Cox can also be contacted at 756-1077 or at 756-2760.

The Greenville Foundation is patterned closely on the Winston-Salem Foundation. Henry M. Carter, Jr. executive director of the Winston-Salem Foundation in July 1978, at the time Greenville's Foundation was established, came to Greenville and assisted in formulating guidelines for the foundation.

"The Jerry Mills Trust will not be the only one to be established by the foundation," Cox said. "The trustees are considering possibilities of future trusts to be established at a future date. The main purpose of such a foundation is to provide funds for needed projects which will serve all the people of Greenville and the county," he added

Pope Cheered In Rome On Return From Brazil

By JACK R. PAYTON

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II was cheered by thousands of pilgrims Saturday who gathered in St. Peter's Square to welcome the pontiff home from his longest papal journey, a 19,000-mile trek through Brazil.

The pope appeared at his Vatican window overlooking the square to recite the noon angelus prayers about two hours after a Brazilian airliner brought him into Rome airport at 9:37 a.m. (3:37 a.m. EDT) from the Amazon city of Manaus.

"I note that in Manaus now it is only 5 a.m.," the Pope said with a smile to the cheering crowd. "Well then, let us say the morning angelus for Manaus and the noon angelus for Rome."

John Paul's visit to Brazil was his seventh trip out of Italy since he was elected pope in October, 1978. It was also his longest trip, keeping him away from the Vatican for 13 days.

During his tour of the world's largest Catholic nation, the pope visited 13 cities, two leper colonies, two of Brazil's most wretched slum areas and remote regions of the Amazon, where his visit ended Friday with a boat trip down the mighty river.

The pontiff is scheduled to travel Sunday to the papal summer residence at Castelgandolfo in the Alban hills nine miles outside Rome for a two-month rest.

Vatican sources estimated that 10 million Brazilians acclaimed him at his various stops and an estimated 50 million Brazilians heard his words on radio and television.

There was only one major mishap — at Fortaleza where three women were killed and a score of people injured in an early-morning scramble for seats to see the Pope.

In the course of 52 speeches and homilies running to around half a million words, the pope firmly urged Brazilian authorities to improve the lot of the poor, but called on Brazilian priests to steer clear of political activities.

At Rome's Leonardo da Vinci airport, where he was welcomed home by church dignitaries led by 13 cardinals and by Italy's Chistian Democrat Prime Minister Francesco Cossiga, the pope warmly praised the "missionary" church in Brazil and the Brazilian people.

"I went among those people as a missionary of the love of Christ for mankind," said the pope, looking tanned but tired from his long trip.

"Down there, there is a live church, rich with authentic evangelical ferment, which stimulates progress toward an ever greater commitment to God and to man," he said.

The pope earlier hinted to reporters that the Brazil trip might be his last this year, saying "There have been three trips in two months or so. That's sufficient, sufficient for one year even."

Complains Of Ladies Night

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — A University of Missouri graduate student has filed a complaint with the state Human Rights Commission that ladies' nights at four Columbia taverns are discriminatory.

Michael Zarowitz testified at a commission hearing Friday that the ladies' nights, on which women do not have to pay cover charges and can buy drinks at reduced prices, are unfair to male patrons.

Zarowitz said he will continue to fight the case even if the commission, which would have no legal power to penalize the taverns, rules against him. He did not specify what further actions he might take, however.

Michael Imgarten, part-owner of T.W. Chumley's Bar, said taverns have the right to encourage more customers by offering special prices. He said he plans to continue ladies' night, with or without commission sanction.

Hearing examiner Phillip Hoskins said he would make a recommendation to the commission, which will then rule on the question.

Idled By Strikes

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Dissidents said Saturday that several large Polish factories remained idle by a series of strikes to protest the rising cost of living, despite official claims that the labor unrest had ended.

The dissident Committee for Social Self-Defense said hikes in meat prices triggered walkouts in 23 Polish factories since the protests began July 1, but did not specify how many were idled Saturday.

On Friday, workers were still out at automobile, truck and electrical equipment factories in Warsaw, a shoe factory in Lublin and two textile plants in Zyradow, the dissident group reported.

Reagan Has Proposed A 4-Point Economic Recovery Program

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (AP) — Ronald Reagan proposed a four-point economic recovery program Saturday. He keyed his plan to an auto industry rebound and said the U.S. auto industry needs "protection from Washington," not from the Japanese.

His program includes a moratorium on future auto industry regulation, new tax breaks to encourage retooling for production of smaller cars and repeal of federal gasoline allocation rules.

Reagan's statement, coming as Republican delegates arrived in Detroit prepared to nominate him as the GOP presidential candidate, also urged a repeal of the president's authority to impose credit controls.

Reagan said that as president he would seek full employment without inflation through economic growth. And he said he would encourage that economic growth by easing the regulatory burden on industry and creating greater tax incentives for capital investment.

Later, in an interview, Reagan launched a new attack on President Carter, saying the president never intended to keep his 1976 campaign promises. He said too, that he had not yet chosen a vice presidential running mate.

He said he believes that in 1976 Carter "campaigned on a program carefully thought out as to the best position to take on any or all of the issues to win votes.

"They did not take that with them to Washington as any commitment to the people at all," Reagan said. "It's not that they weren't able to fulfill them. I saw little or no attempt to fulfill them. Indeed in many instances they went in the opposite direction."

On the question of choosing a running mate, he said: "This is the biggest problem confroning me right now. I am not sitting here with someone tucked away in the back of my mind, comfortably waiting for the time to reveal it. I have not made a decision, and I am still gathering input."

Calling unemployment in the auto industry — estimated at 30 percent of the normal workforce — "a tragedy of the first magnitude," Reagan again urged more unemployment compensation programs and retraining funds, particularly for auto workers whose jobs may be permanently lost.

Last Tuesday, Carter flew into Detroit to unveil his auto aid package. It proposed some regulatory relief, tax reductions similar in concept to that of Reagan's, loan programs for dealers and speeded up consideration of a complaint against the Japanese.

Carter did not seek import quotas on the foreign cars that are grabbing an ever-larger share of the American market. Such a dramatic move is sought by many in the auto industry, reeling from a prolonged sales downturn.

Reagan said he flatly opposed institution of quotas. He explained:

"By inducing retaliation by our trading partners, quotas could deprive American auto workers of valuable foreign markets, and reduce, rather than increase, demand for American made cars."

Helms Says He'll Be Nominated

DETROIT (AP) — Conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, citing a need for Ronald Reagan to appeal to Southern and Christian voters, said Saturday his name will be placed in nomination for vice president regardless of Reagan's choice for a running mate.

Helms, who helped forge a strongly conservative GOP platform, said he was not personally campaigning for the vice presidential nomination but was allowing supporters to do so for him.

"The present intentions are to allow my name to be placed in nomination," Helms said in an interview.

Aside from winning a spot on the ticket, the Helms effort is designed to apply pressure by conservatives to keep the ticket from moving away from the right.

"If it does nothing else, it will serve as a reminder, 'don't go to far afield,' to Reagan's advisors," Helms said.

Helms name also was placed in nomination for the vice presidency in 1976.

Leaders of the Jesse Helms for Vice President Committee acknowledge there is virtually no chance Reagan would turn to Helms as his choice for vice president or would allow delegates to make any choice without Reagan.

But Helms indicated that he would be the candidate who could most help the Reagan ticket, and he dismissed suggestions Reagan should broaden his appeal by selecting a more moderate candidate such as George Bush.

"I don't happen to view it that way," he said. "My own judgment is that Gov. Reagan and his advisors ought to give some consideration to where Jimmy Carter won the election in 1976 — in the South ... by a strong appeal to Christian people.

"If I was lobbying for my candidacy, which I am not, I would point out I have strong ties to the evangelical movement, and I think it's fair to say that they are strongly supportive of the idea of my being on the ticket."

The Helms vice presidential campaign, headed by North Carolina GOP Chairman Jack Lee and Helms' political strategist Tom Ellis of Raleigh, has spent around $100,000 for advertising — much of it aimed directly at the convention.

Hostage In Hospital ...

Queen was flown on Friday from Tehran to Zurich and, on Saturday, taken by military plane with his parents and three American doctors to a military air base in Frankfurt, West Germany.

There, he was put on a stretcher and placed aboard a military ambulance for the 20-mile drive to the hospital here. He was wrapped in a blanket, but smiling when he was wheeled into the hospital.

Iran's Ministry of Health said Saturday that militants in charge of the American hostages in Iran reported Queen's illness to authorities "a few days ago" and that a neurologist promptly examined Queen at the occupied U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

A short time later, according to the ministry's statement, Queen was taken to one of Iran's most respected hospitals and given a series of tests, including a brain scan. A team of five neurologists, including a surgeon, decided, the statement said, that "the hostage should be treated in a better-equipped center abroad since the patient had symptoms of nervousness six months ago."

It did not elaborate about what is ailing Queen.

Nation's Best Interest Supreme

If the United States has one single most important problem facing it in the near term, it is that of dealing with the high rate of inflation which has threatened the economy and the standard of living of the American people in recent years.

The administration in office has moved forcefully within the past year to deal with the matter. While the rate of inflation has slowed, at the same time the nation has seen record high interest rates, increasing unemployment and the beginning of a recession which many experts assert will be longer and deeper than than of a half decade ago.The theory has been that the most expedient way to deal with inflation is to slow the economy. But that is an economic theory, not a political theory.

Now that the side effects of the program are beginning to make themselves evident, a number of politicians with eyes to November are having second thoughts. Will the voter appeal of a slower rate of inflation be more than offset by the increasing rate of unemployment when weighed in the ballot box?

Where the emphasis in Washington a couple of months ago was on reducing federal spending and balancing the gigantic budget, there are now calls for federal pump-priming, huge tax cuts and other measures to bolster the sagging economy and halting the rising tide of unemployment. Where the respective national party platforms will subsequently come down on these matters remains to be seen.

Hopefully, judgment of the political leaders, both Democrat and Republican, on what course is best for the nation will not necessarily be determined by what they feel may be in their own self-interest at the ballot boxes in November.

The nation can ill afford another rollercoaster ride to the high inflation rates of last year. The economy must not be subjected to the whiplash trying to fight inflation and feeding the fires of inflation at the same time. Such tactics ultimately would invite greater economic chaos than is now being faced.

Each of the national political parties has an obligation to gets its respective candidates elected in November. But each also has a higher obligation: the best interest of the nation and its people in the long run.

Republican Choice Has Been Made

The Republican national convention opens in Detroit this week with its most important decision already made.

Ronald Reagan will be the party's nominee for president. Even most of the arguments about the party's platform have been settled with its philosophy controlled by Reagan. He, after all, will have to run on it.

There can be only one mild surprise in the upcoming convention . . . that will be the choice of a vice presidential running mate made by Reagan.

The convention will be more of a show than its intended purpose — that of choosing a nominee for president. The choice has already been made, and in effect the Reagan campaign against Jimmy Carter begins this week.

SUNDAY MORNING

Strategic Parity Is Lost?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Soon, responsibility for the state's community colleges will be split away from the State Board of Education and vested in a new Community Colleges Board.

That will give North Carolina three different governing boards setting policy and supervising different levels of education: The Board of Education in public schools, the Board of Community Colleges looking after those 58 institutions, and the Board of Governors overseeing the 16-campus-university system.

The splitting of responsibilities, and subsequent establishment of authority in a specialized board, has been slow and painful in the political and legislative process as various interests sought to protect their domains; yet thoughful leaders involved insist the process has been essential to giving each of the three different systems its own identity, leadership, and political clout at the legislative trough at budget time.

The biggest hangup in all this is that central to any analysis of problems in education in North Carolina, and plans for future change to bring about an improved system, is cooperation, coordination, communication, and crossover of students, facilities, and equipment from each of the three entities to the other.

Insiders predict that before many years go by it will become essential that North Carolina establish, in some form or another, a Super School Board to keep the three systems somehow on parallel tracks rather than allowing separation to foster keener competition for budgets and students, widening the gaps rather than closing them.

Right now, according to the specialists, the most likely result will be a group chaired by the governor and including the top-level staff from each of the three units.

As things move along, say those familiar with the bureaucratic process, it will become increasingly clear that only through the direct involvement and leadership of the governor can order be maintained.

BILL NOBLITT

Good or Bad?

A national association which monitors and reports on intergovernmental relations sees a bleak time ahead.

For most governmental people, intergovernmental relations means how much money filters down from the highest to the lowest level. Thus, most concern is normally with how many federal and state programs — therefore, dollars, — city and county governments can look forward to.

The association concludes that the tax payer revolt, splintered and disorganized though it may be, is having some profound impacts across the nation. Last year nearly half the states moved to relieve local property taxpayers in some way; 15 states reduced the sales tax, and several reduced income taxes in various ways. In all, 37 states voted some kind of tax relief.

This means, the group reports, that tradeoffs, cutbacks, and slowdowns in governmental activities have replaced expansion, innovation, and improvements.

"Instead of increased spending and large tax cuts, we can expect slowed spending at all levels and fewer tax reductions, especially at the federal level . . . " the group concludes.

As for the future: "fairly bleak" say those specialists, with increased defense spending, resistance to the continuing increase in Social Security tax; a federal income tax which is hobbled; and a high inflation rate which makes it "increasingly untenable for the federal government to paper over revenue shortfalls with large deficits.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Surpassed By The Soviet

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A defense bill in the Senate just before the Fourth of July recess has brought to light a secret Air Force report that the U.S. has fallen behind the Soviet Union in strategic power, with no prospect of catching up.

The admission that parity with Moscow had been lost, perhaps irretrievably, during the first three years of the Carter administration was made in late February in closed-door testimony to Congress by Gen. Richard H. Ellis, commander of the Strategic Air Command (SAC). "... an adverse imbalance has developed and will continue for several years to come," said Ellis in testimony labeled "secret."

This account of dramatic Soviet arms progress amidst U.S. "cancellations and slippages" constitutes an indictment of Carter defense policy. "If we have learned any lesson," Ellis declared, "it should be that the Soviets have not reciprocated U.S. restraint in any portion of their military power — conventional or nuclear."

Ellis' shocker compares with the revelation in 1935 that Britain had lost air parity with Germany, but his words have had slight distribution outside defense circles. Although a few members of Congress occasionally mention loss of strategic parity, nobody of stature has hammered home the reality as Winston Churchill did from the back bench 45 years ago.

The general's testimony was cited on June 27 by Sen. Gordon Humphrey, a freshman Republican from New Hampshire, in a letter to colleagues pushing his proposal to deploy 1,000 stockpiled Minuteman III intercontinental missiles. Hum-

Strength For Today

LESSONS OF ADVERSITY

Many years ago a young doctor, setting up a practice in a small southern town, felt that his whole life was destined to be a failure when he lost his first patient, apparently because of a mistake in diagnosis. In complete discouragement he left town and resumed his practice in a swampy, unhealthy area some distance away where the people were in desperate need for a resident doctor.

As it turned out, this area brought him into contact with some unusual diseases and symptoms which gave him unparalleled opportunities for research. Over the years he worked out new techniques of treatment for these diseases which made his name known throughout the medical world.

Our best lessons are sometimes taught to us by our failures. The best opportunities frequently come to us not in the sunny days of success but after fate has given us what first appears to be some very heavy chastisement. Apparent punishment can indeed be a blessing in disguise.. — Elisha Douglass

Sunday Morning Notes

Greenville went through an era of tearing down — not in the destructive sense, but to remove some of the worst slums in the nation.

It was a worthwhile effort. Some awful shanties along the river front in the First Street area were cleared away and now a beautiful park and impressive office buildings stand in their place.

Other dwellings were removed elsewhere in the city — not always substandard — to make way for wider streets and more greenery. If that hadn't been done, Reade Circle and the Cotanche-Charles Boulevard thoroughfares would not exist as they are today.

It was certainly proper to remove the hovels which once bordered downtown Greenville and it is justifiable to demolish some standard housing in the interest of overall planning. Nevertheless efforts should be made to preserve some fine old homes in the area.

Thus we are more than pleased that the Humber home at Fifth and Washington Streets is going to be preserved and the Long house at Fourth and Cotanche will continue to stand. The Humber home was given to the city and county. The Long house was purchased by the law firm of Howard, Vincent and Duffus.

Your columnist has fond memories of an early visit to the Humber home. It was to arrange for a speaker for a Methodist Youth Fellowship meeting. We chose Dr. Robert Lee Humber and I was to extend the invitation. I called and he led me into the large living room of the home and he was as gracious as any adult could be to a nervous teenager. He gladly accepted my invitation and we began a friendship that lasted through the years until his death.

I was among the advocates of the removal of the slums in downtown Greenville, but I really hated to see the Humber home destroyed. Now it will be preserved.

The Long home with its stone columns was a landmark to anyone who grew up in Greenville. It was always well kept even as it

Other Editors Say Back To Barter

(Kinston Free Press)

Considerable attention is being given to the subterranean economy that is emerging in the U.S. The subterranean economy is all those goods and services that are exchanged untaxed, unregulated and unseen by tghe government.

A part of this expanding segment of American life is barter. Trading is becoming a way of life for many people who are trying to free themselves from the watchful eyes and the grasping hands of the state.

Trading was an essential part of early America. On the frontier and even in developed areas currency was scarce. Instead of waiting for money to arrive, early Americans traded among themselves. It was clear that any exchange between two people was mutually profitable.

Many people are finding barter essential to maintain their way of life today, only today it is the excess of government and not the lack of it, that makes such trading important.

The higher the tax rate goes, the more the population is going to turn to trading and other forms of tax avoidance.

In the last 10 years swap meets and garage sales have sprung up in every community. At first it appeared they were nothing more than attempts to get some value from throwaway items.

Now it is evident there is much more involved than simply getting rid of items that clutter the garage and basement.

Swap meets and garage sales have become a method people can use to get what they want without being taxed in the process. In order to buy a shovel, for instance, someone must pay taxes. At a swap meet the shovel can be obtained without having to pay the government.

Correspondingly, trade clubs are starting over the country. Joe Kessler, president of Trade Clubs in America, estimates there are as many as 500 barter organizations.

Some of them are little more than institutionalized swap meets; others use computers and issue credits for goods or services an individual is willing to trade.

These latter clubs are, in effect, creating their own money. This is done, although some do not admit it, to avoid paying taxes. Taxation has always ben anathema to Americans. The American Revolution started over taxation. Taxes are viewed as a fundamental threat to freedom.

Circus Town, Indiana

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

PERU, Ind. (AP) — On Friday, this little town on the banks of the Wabash becomes The Greatest Town on Earth. This town becomes a circus.

"That's one way of putting it," Tom Hodgini was saying the other day. "At least it is the day everybody in Peru has been working all year for, and when I say everybody, I mean everybody."

He means everybody. In Peru, anyone not involved in the annual circus is looked upon with either suspicion or pity, either as an outright shirker or a poor soul who doesn't know better.

Peru calls itself Circus City, U.S.A. Other cities with nostalgic links to the glory days of the big top have similar slogans, but, to the 15,000 citizens of this town, the circus is not a memory but a daily focus of civic pride.

"If any town warrants the title, this one does," Hodgini said. "Our circus is as good as any except top professional shows, and ours is put on entirely by volunteers."

Just so. On Friday, Saturday, and for the week beginning July 16, the schoolkids of Peru will juggle and tumble and swing from trapezes and dance on high wires. Their parents will perform as clowns and riggers, their grandparents as wardrobe handlers and ticket-takers.

They will do this in a building that occupies half a city block, its steel roof in the contours of a tent, built by the citizens of Peru as a permanent circus site deserving of their efforts.

Returns To The Fundamentals

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans have decided to battle inflation, said a stock market analyst on reading that consumer installment debt fell a record $3.43 billion in May.

He might as easily have phrased it another way: American buyers were overcome by rising prices. Using that viewpoint, the credit decline is seen not so much as a battle as a defeat.

Whichever viewpoint suits best, the conclusion is the same: There has been a marked change in consumer attitudes, from buying quickly before prices rose to avoiding purchases in hopes that prices will fall.

The Federal Reserve helped foster the change, particularly by making credit harder to obtain but also by promoting the notion that unless buyers restrained themselves the economy was going down the drain.

It might still, and some will blame the Fed's tight money policies, but consumers in the meantime have lessened their personal liabilities, albeit by the revolutionary policy of lowering their living standards.

Yes, some Americans at least are getting back to fundamentals. They are actually commiting the un-American crime of doing with less, which is contrary to all they have been told and taught about America.

But in many instances they are doing so not as an exercise in restraint, not as a battle against enemy inflation, but simply because they have little other choice. They have been priced out of the market.

This elimination from the marketplace has been achieved not simply by high prices, but also because pay increases often push people into tax brackets that take most of the increase.

Unofficial estimates now suggest that the federal take of the nation's total output is close to the highest ever, nearly 23 percent, or more even than during the days of wartime mobilization in the 1940s.

U.S. News & World Report estimates that if tax laws aren't changed, and inflation continues at the 7.8 percent annual rate of the past decade, a family that earned $15,000 in 1970 will need $87,708 in 1990.

For the time-being, prices too seem to be growing by an odd formula. Supply-demand, we've been told, dictates what prices will be. Lately, though, the seller's needs seem to be determining prices.

You have noticed, for example, that domestic automobile pricetags continue to rise despite shrunken demand. And you've seen some jewelry prices remain the same whether gold sold for $800 or $500 an ounce.

Careful shoppers have seen something of the same thing right across the spectrum of items: In the face of lessened demand prices have resisted declines. Maybe they haven't gone up. But down! No way.

The explanation is undoubtedly complex, but there are some aspects that are cyrstal clear and understandable.

First, price and tax inflation has hurt sellers as badly as buyers. Some businesses are heavily in debt and barely profitable, their margins cut to all-time lows. And some, such as Chrysler, are worse off.

Many large companies, in fact, aren't earning enough to cover their dividend payments. Discounted for inflation, their profits are not profits at all. Indeed, if reality were faced, some managements would admit that their companies survive only because they are, in the same manner as people lost in the wildnerness, consuming their own fat.

Second, prices remain high because so many people refuse to believe that we'll lick inflation. Why lower prices — and probably be stuck with those low prices in catalogues — only to increase them later?

Have Americans decided to do battle against recession by withdrawing from the market? Maybe. But the evidence seems to indicate that, instead, and for the time-being, they have been defeated by it.

Demos Set Pace In Poll

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — By the narrow vote of 37-32 percent, U.S. voters say the Democratic Party will do the better job of keeping the country prosperous for the next few years, survey results that represent the best showing for the GOP in eight years.

The previous survey on this subject (conducted in March 1978) showed the Democratic Party with a 41-23 percent advantage on this measurement. The last time the GOP scored as high as it does today was in Sept. 1972 when 38 percent of voters credited the Republican Party as better able to keep the nation prosperous, while 35 percent named the Democrats. That survey represented the first and only time since 1951 (when the measurement was started) that the Republican Party has moved ahead of the Democratic Party on this measurement.

On the other key issue tested — which party is better able to keep the nation out of another world war — voters credit the two parties about equally with 32 percent naming the Democratic Party and 30 percent the Republican Party.

On this issue, as well, gains have been registered by the GOP. The March 1978 survey showed the Democratic Party with a 31-25 percent advantage. The last time the GOP registered as high a vote as it does today was in Sept. 1972.

Prior to the mid-'60s, the Republican Party had consistently held the advantage with voters on this issue since 1951.

Peace and prosperity have been bread-and-butter issues in most election campaigns. This is demonstrated by the fact that the party with the lead on both these issues at election time has seen its candidate elected.

Following is the question on prosperity:

"Which political party — the Republican Party or the Democratic Party — do you think will do the better job of keeping the country prosperous?"

Here are the latest results:

Party Better For Prosperity

Democratic	37%
Republican	32
No difference	19
No opinion	12

By way of comparison, here are the percentages for each party back to Sept. 1972 (with the no difference and no opinion figure omitted):

Party Better For Prosperity

	Democratic	Republican
LATEST (June 27-29)	37%	32%
March 1978	41	23
Aug. 1976	47	23
Sept. 1974	47	17
March 1974	49	19
Sept. 1972	35	38

This is the trend question dealing with war:

"Which political party do you think would be more likely to keep the United States out of World War III — the Republican Party or the Democratic Party?"

And here are the latest results:

Party Better Able To Keep Nation Out Of War

Democratic	32%
Republican	30
No difference	23
No opinion	15

Here are the percentages for each party back to Sept. 1972 (with the no difference and no opinion figures omitted):

Party Better Able To Keep Nation Out Of War

	Democratic	Republican
LATEST (June 27-29)	32%	30%
March 1978	31	25
Aug. 1976	32	29
Sept. 1974	29	21
March 1974	33	24
Sept. 1972	28	32

The findings reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,342 adults, 18 and older, interviewed in more than 300 scientifically-selected localities across the nation during the period June 27-29.

As I Recall It

He Was Literally Carried Into Gas Chamber

BY NOEL YANCEY

Henry Grier was possibly the only man who had to be carried bodily into the execution chamber at Central Prison. His shattered wrists were held together by splints, and his swollen lips were partly covered by adhesive tape.

The 43-year-old Winston-Salem black man had attempted suicide by jumping 30 feet to the concrete floor of the Death Row cellblock. His desperate leap prolonged his life exactly two hours. Prison officials had Grier bundled off to the prison hospital where his injuries were treated. Then five other inmates carried him into the death chamber where he was electrocuted shortly after 12:30 p.m. on July 10, 1936.

Grier jumped from the third tier of the cellblock about two hours before he was scheduled to die for the murder of Annie Giles, his "woman." Guard A.O. Honeycutt had released him from his cell to say good-bye to the other condemned men.

After racing madly up the stairs, Grier poised on the high railing, threw both legs over and jumped. His fall was broken momentarily when trusty Sherman Hartsfield grabbed his wrist. He dangled for an instant and then fell headfirst to the floor.

"Sherman . . . pull my wrist. Sherman . . . it hurts," Grier muttered when they lifted him from the floor to take him to the hospital. Those were his last words.

Grier apparently was deathly afraid of the electric chair and had told a fellow inmate that if the governor did not spare his life, "I can do something." When Warden H.H. Honeycutt told Grier the day before that the governor would not intervene, the man trembled with foreboding. The warden described him as habitually nervous, "always twitching his lips and hands. I never had anything unnerve me like that," Ward Honeycutt told reporters as he related how Grier had been permitted to walk down Death Row, shaking hands with his fellow inmates, the usual practice for a man about to die. When he had completed his round, instead of returning to his cell, Grier asked the guard for a postcard.

"I told him, 'You know where the postcards are, Henry,'" Honeycutt related. "But he asked me to hand him one from the box near the stairs. Just as I turned to put the rest of the cards into the box, he started running up the stairs.

"'Henry! Come back here,' I yelled to him. He said he was just going to get Bill King (a prisoner on the second tier) to write it for him. But he started running and soon was sitting on the third tier railing."

At this point, Hartsfield rushed up and grabbed Grier by the arm. However, the heavy man slipped from his grasp and fell to the pavement, fracturing both wrists and splitting his lips. He fell within 10 feet of Father C.F. Morrissey, who was just entering Death Row to pray with the condemned man.

But prison officials dispensed with spiritual ministrations and rushed Grier to the Death Chamber after he had been treated in the prison hospital. He was carried into the chamber and strapped in the chair about two hours later than scheduled.

He made no attempt to talk, but his eyelids fluttered, perhaps the result of trying to keep them closed to blot out the sight of the chair he had seen so many times in his imagination. Dr. George S. Coleman, prison physician, said he was at least semi-conscious as he awaited death, his swollen lip protruding through the mouth-hole of the mask that covered his face.

Facing South

Real Life's Role Has Been As Social Activist

PIPESTEM, W.Va. — Don West has lived a long life in and around the Appalachian region. Born 75 years ago in the hills of northern Georgia, West has worked in the cotton mills and coal mines and in other manual occupations, and as a teacher and clergyman. In whatever way he has earned his living, however, his real life's work has been that of a social activist, working toward his vision of a better world, particularly for the people of the mountains. To this end, West has worked as a labor organizer and, more recently, as the director of the Appalachian South Folklife Center in Pipestream.

Although an ordained minister in the United Church of Christ, West has not pastored a church since a 1940s dispute with a Georgia congregation over an attempted lynching involving some of the church elders. Since that time he has been a minister at large, preaching in small churches in southern West Virginia, in the mountaintop chapel at the Folklife Center, and in the borrowed pulpits of liberal congregations in New England and elsewhere. Don West preaches a strong social gospel, aimed at improving conditions in the present world.

West has reached his biggest audience through his poetry, in such books as "O Mountaineers!" and "Clods of Southern Earth." He takes a utilitarian view of poetry, as he does of preaching, using both as the tools of his reform work. In a 1951 poem, "Advice to the Would-Be Poets," he advises:

Away with pious references
To patriotism and to prayer,
As the naked child is born
Let the truth lie warm and bare!
If there is a thing to tell
Make it brief and write it plain,
Words were meant to shed a light,
Not to cover up again!

"For practically all my life," says Don West, "I've been particularly conscious of the kind of heritage we have in the Appalachian South. "Our purpose here at the Appalachian South Folklife Center is to work toward helping, particularly mountain young people, to appreciate and know about their own heritage.

"We confine ourselves to the Appalachian South because it has played a peculiar role in the history of our country. It's an area that in the old days was geographically in Confederate territory, but actually much of its sentiment was contrary to Confederate ideology. So many of our people were opposed to slavery before the Civil War. As a matter of fact, the first newspaper started in the United States dedicated wholly to the abolition of slavery was launched in Jonesboro in East Tennessee.

"We bring young mountain people to the Center for the whole summer, or for shorter work camp sessions. We have regular classes in mountain history and culture; we have music teachers that teach the fiddle, all the different folk instruments. We have all the various mountain crafts. But we feel that these are peripheral, really. The heart of our cultural heritage is that we've had a people who from the very early beginnings were dedicated to human rights and freedom and independance.

"The old Celtic people — the Irish, the Scottish, and the Welsh, plus the Huguenot French and some of the German revolutionaries and so on, who came over — had been in the old country contending for human rights and for the kind of freedom that this implies. When they came here, they found themselves pretty well out of harmony with the Tidewater cavalier element and they pushed into the frontier which was Appalachia, sank roots there, and for many, many years they were pretty well cut off.

"There were three declarations of independance written and advocated before Jefferson, all three of them out of the mountain South. Now this is the kind of thing I think is the heart of our Appalachian heritage, not the pretty little doodads. It is this dedication and this willingness on the part of the people to take principled positions on controversial issues. That has happened all down through history."

phrey cited "press reports" that the SAC commander "testified recently that since 1977, the U.S. has lost strategic 'essential equivalence' with the Soviet Union."

The only apparent press report was in the Feb. 22 edition of Defensepace Business Daily, which reported Ellis' disclosure of the sophisticated Air Force computer study. We obtained a full copy of Ellis' testimony from defense sources.

Ellis cited "a clear and unambiguous" goal for U.S. defense policy set in 1978 by Defense Secretary Harold Brown: "The maintenance of an overall military balance with the Soviet Union no less favorable than the one that now exists." Brown said "a rough strategic nuclear equilibrium exists between the two superpowers" and pledged to continue it.

The Air Force computer studies revealed by Ellis did show equivalence in 1977. "In the short two-and-one-half years since then, the balance of strategic nuclear power has shifted," the general declared. The Soviet Union has taken the lead thanks to "changes in the rate of Soviet modernization, compounded with cancellations and slippages of major U.S. programs."

Just to make clear Congress got the message, the SAC commander concluded: "I hope the preceding statement has conveyed an urgent and convincing message — our current and near-term strategic forces, while capable and ready, are unable to achieve the relative balance possessed just two years ago."

The clarity of Ellis' warning contrasts with the usual hedging from Secretary Brown and members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS). Gen. David Jones, the JCS chairman, in his recent reconfirmation hearings, declared the U.S. has "moved from strategic superiority to the verge of strategic inferiority." The computer studies, showing inferiority well beyond the "verge," condemn Jones as Pollyanna.

Ellis' testimony also strayed from the Carter party line on remedies. While asserting the MX mobile missile system is "this nation's top military priority" for the long run, he pleaded for a penetrating bomber in the short run. The B-1, scrapped by President Carter, was called by Ellis "the finest strategic penetrator in the world today."

Ellis and other senior officers at SAC are believed privately to favor deploying 1,000 Minuteman III missiles, which was adopted by the Senate before the recess over administration protests. While defense experts might disagree about its military effectiveness, this move is at least a positive message to the Kremlin.

Demonstrations of resolve are needed now, before the loss of strategic parity wrecks the Western alliance. Gen. Jones, who has so often ruled out a Soviet attack, admitted under prodding in his reconfirmation hearings that Moscow "will try to intimidate us or our allies" under the new balance of power.

The question is not only how to remedy this weakness but to find how it happened. "I am astounded at the indifference with which the press and public seems to view the fact that the government have been utterly wrong about the German air strength ....," said Churchill in 1935, adding: "We can never catch up." Gordon Humphrey is no Churchill, but he posed the parallel June 27. "U.S. intelligence has grossly underestimated" the Soviet threat, he said, adding: "We may never be able to regain parity."

Big Sisters Learn To Ride With The Waves

By GAIL MICHAELS

Phillip and I felt that one of the best ways to insure Zachary's survival was to emphasize Meg's important new role as a big sister.

Naturally, we refrained from mentioning the community property rule that all little brothers adhere to (What's yours is mine and what's mine is mine) or the privacy rule (big sisters have to lock themselves in the bathroom to get any).

We just told Meg that as Zachary grew older, he would look up to her and depend on her for guidance, and he would love her in a very special kind of way.

The idea seemed to appeal to Meg. Aside from routinely gagging him with a pacifier and occasionally trying to quiet him with surreptitiously applied pressure to the eyelids, Meg has been a paragon of sisterly devotion.

And she has studied Zachary diligently for any signs of reciprocation. Fourtunately, she has not gone unrewarded. Zachary smiled his first smile for her. He often stops crying at the sound of her voice.

And I was routed from the shower not long ago on the pretense of an emergency to witness his first attempt at communication. "Zachary is saying 'ah' to me," Meg beamed during his repeat performance. "He's not speaking to you, just to me."

Because Zachary can now communicate with her, she assumes that he also understands her. The other morning I found her standing over his bassinet explaining the special nature of his love for her as we had explained it to her. She, however, went one step further.

"And when you grow up, you're going to marry me."

"That's impossible, sweetheart," I said.

"Why not? He's not like Daddy. He's almost my age."

"It doesn't matter. You can't marry anyone in your family."

"That's not fair! she cried. "I practically don't know anyone else."

"You will."

"Well I don't care. I don't see why I can't marry my brother who I love so special."

I decided to give her an unarguable reason. "The government made a law against brothers and sisters getting married because when they do, their children are often very sick, and no one wants that. Do you?"

She was still indignant. "God sure fixed that, didn't He?"

I considered the subject closed, but several days later she brought it up again.

"Yes, sweet Zachary," She cooed, "I'm going to marry you."

Zachary smiled at her.

Meg poked me in the arm. "Just look how excited he got when I told him about that!"

"But Meg, I already told you that you can't marry Zachary."

" know," she said, lowering her voice, "but we don't have to tell him yet."

Congress Decides How The Money Is Spent

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

The Supreme Court's decision of June 30 in the great abortion case contained some nice ironies, some sound law, and a vast deal of balderdash. Let me contribute, if I may, to the uproar.

The court's most recent ruling, in Harris vs. McRae, is a sequel to its ruling seven years ago in Roe vs. Wade. The earlier case held that a woman has a right to an abortion. The McRae case holds that a woman has no right to an abortion at public expense.

That is the sum and substance of the June 30 decision. It is sound law. It provides an example of the judicial restraint that ought to lie at the very heart of appellate jurisprudence. Despite the impassioned arguments of the four dissenting justices, the majority refused to interfere with a legislative decision that is exclusively the province of Congress. Hooray for restraint.

But there is a delicious irony in all this — for the court's original abortion decision of 1973 went in precisely the opposite direction. Whatever may be said for Roe vs. Wade in terms of public policy, it was a very bad law. In its eagerness to legalize abortions, the court fabricated a constitutional right from whole cloth. Disdaining the Constitution, ignoring history and banishing such inhibitions as federalism, the court in 1973 demonstrated no restraint whatever.

The majority got it right this time. Stripped of irrelevant emotional trappings, the sole issue went to the power of Congress to define how public funds shall be spent. This was the question: In adopting a program of health benefits for poor women, could Congress constitutionally decide to pay for the expenses of childbirth and not to pay for the expenses of abortion? The short and simple answer is, of course. Assuming that Congress has power to provide a Medicaid program at all, of course Congress can fix the rules. Congress may fund, or refuse to fund, X-rays, prescription drugs, eyeglasses, prosthetic devices, kidney dialysis or dental care for children. These are legislative determinations. They are not the business of the court.

The dissenters, drowning in their own bathos, abandoned their judicial function altogether. Once again Mr. Justice Marshall proved himself a very fine advocate and a very poor judge. The majority's decision, he anguished, "studiously avoids recognizing the undeniable fact that for women eligible for Medicaid — poor women — denial of a Medicaid-funded abortion is equivalent to denial of legal abortion altogether."

That is balderdash. It is consummate nonsense. Without Medicaid, said Marshall, poor women "must resort to back-alley butchers..., resort to self-induced abortions, or attempt to obtain illegal abortions." Only in a belated footnote did Marshall finally acknowledge that "of course, some poor women will attempt to raise the funds necessary to obtain a lawful abortion." But Marshall suggested that such funds could be raised only by resort to such desperate means as stealing.

So far as criminal law is concerned, there no longer is any such thing as an "illegal" abortion. In most cities, I am advised, abortions may be legally obtained at fees from $75 to $200; payments may be made in installments. The "undeniable fact," it seems to me, is that few women (and their lovers) could be so absolutely destitute that they could not raise a hundred bucks, over a period of months, to pay for a clinical abortion. Resort to a "back-alley butcher" — a butcher who also charges a fee — is not the sole alternative to carry a fetus to term.

Marshall's eloquent lamentations are the kind of arguments one makes to a congressional committee in opposing a Hyde amendment. As it happens, I too oppose the Hyde amendment; I too believe that a wise and compassionate public policy would provide for Medicaid abortions. But Marshall's views and mine, in this regard, are beside the point. Neither one of us votes on the floor of the House.

the shock, blood spurted from Grier's injured lip, and the surge of his body broke a chest strap. Grier was pronounced dead after a shock of two minutes and fifty-four seconds.

Grier's was not the first attempt at suicide on Death Row. Willie Crockett, another Winston-Salem black man, who killed his wife, tried to butt his brains out against a wall a few hours before his execution in Septmenber 1934. Ell Spencer, also black, took lye before entering Death Row in August of that same year and died a few days later in the prison hospital.

"It all grew out of a few free acts on the courthouse lawn," Hodgini said. "I've seen a lot of circuses come and go, but I never dreamed ours would come to this."

Tom Hodgini was born in Peru in 1926 when scores of circuses traveled America's back roads and railroads and about a dozen of them made Peru their winter home.

Tom, and his brother Joe, were fourth generation circus performers. Their father had a bareback riding act and their mother was an aerialist. Tom did it all — riding, juggling, wirewalking. When Tom married his childhood sweetheart, she joined the act too.

The Hodgini Family, as they were billed, traveled the country. When their performing days were over, Tom and Betty Hodgini settled in Peru.

"In 1958," Tom recalled, "A few of the downtown merchants asked Betty and me if we would train a few of the local kids and put on a little circus, sort of a tribute to Peru's past.

"We strung some rigging from the ash trees in our backyard, and started with about two dozen boys and girls.

"By 1960, we had a rented tent with a two-pole top and held a one-ring circus on the town tennis courts. Before long, kids all over town were practicing on their own, in their backyards. One year, we counted six broken arms.

"Well, now all the practice is supervised and the acts are polished and the equipment is the best.

"It just caught on. Kids practiced all year long for that one big thrill, being in the circus. We have any number of kids in the circus whose parents were performers in their day.

"People come here from miles around to see the circus. It's that good. It's the one thing everybody in town looks forward to."

He means everybody.

became gradually isolated from other dwellings as the business area moved around it. It was one of those sights you saw every day in Greenville and we all took pride that such a fine home was maintained in downtown Greenville. It has become an office building now but it will be preserved, and for that we are glad.

Neighborhoods change in downtown Greenville. Who remembers when the John Flanagan Buggy Co. stood across the street from the Long house at Fourth and Cotanche. The huge building was actually once used to manufacture buggies, although in its latest years it was at one time the nation's largest Ford dealership. The building was finally demolished in the downtown urban renewal project and now is the site of a parking lot.

And who recalls when the Elbow Room was an auto parts store . . . or when Chapter X was a grocery store . . . or for that matter, when The Attic was the site of a stable?

The downtown business area constantly changes over the years to meet new needs of the community.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are able to carry through with some creative work and get excellent results. Make plans for the future.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get rid of some strange condition at home and maintain concord there. Avoid one who may want to harm you in some way.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Go to places where you can express your finest philosophy of life. Be more precise in handling a personal matter.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A good day to seek the company of family members and friends. Follow the advice of an expert.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't be forceful with anyone early in the day. Try to be with persons with whom you have much in common. Be poised.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Morning is fine for meditating on lofty precepts and thinking about the future. Improve your social skills.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Contact influential persons and get their advice for gaining personal aims. Take no risks with your reputation today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be sure to follow all rules and regulations that apply to you. Contact good friends in afternoon and discuss the future.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A new project you have in mind needs more study before you put it in operation. Take needed health treatments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Good day to visit friends and relatives for mutual satisfaction. Make long-range plans for the days ahead.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Do your best to avoid an argument with close ties. Follow advice of a friend who has your best interests at heart.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan how to please one who has done you many favors in the past and then carry through. Strive for happiness.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be able to understand situations from their highest possible potential and should have the best education available to make the most of this fine talent. Be sure to give good spiritual training. Sports are a must here.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, JULY 14, 1980

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You need to take things easy and not make any drastic changes for your best interests at this time. Make definite plans to have more security in the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Wait until the afternoon before handling an important financial matter. You have talent that needs expression.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) An associate may appear disagreeable in the morning but later is most cooperative. Show courtesy to family members.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Despite sluggishness you can accomplish a great deal if you apply yourself seriously to the tasks at hand. Be logical.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Find out what is needed to gain your aims and then go to the right sources for important data.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't make those changes today that could jeopardize the future for you. Spend time with long-time friends in the evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You may feel that you want to break away from annoying situations, but be tactful. Show more generosity.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't argue with friends and use that Libra charm to ingratiate them into your good graces. Express happiness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) It is best to follow every rule and regulation that applies to you, even though some may seem unfair. Be wise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Being with new friends in the evening is fine since they can be helpful to you in present activities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be objective in handling personal affairs and get good results. Delve into more outside activities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't leave present set-up for some foolish reason, or you could regret it later. Be sure to keep promises you've made.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Put new ideas to work that will help improve your environment, but don't get rid of anything that is valuable.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will know how to handle problems that come up and should have a fine education so that life can be successful. Be sure to give praise for any exceptional work done. Ethical training is important.

Joyce Pettis Selected For Doctoral Program

ECU News Bureau

Joyce Owens Pettis, instructor of English at East Carolina University, has been selected to participate in the University of North Carolina's Doctoral Study Assignment Program.

The program, a project of the UNC Board of Governors, is designed to assist full-time faculty members of the UNC System in pursuing terminal degrees in their respective fields.

Selections of participants are made among faculty who teach in their institutions' general baccalaureate level programs, on the basis of recommendation by their respective chancellors.

Each award includes a participant's stipend as well as compensation to his or her university for the cost of securing a teaching replacement. Twenty-seven awards were given in 1979.

Ms. Pettis has been on leave of absence from ECU during the past two academic years while completing her course work toward the PhD degree at UNC-Chapel Hill. She is a specialist in 20th century American and British literature, with a minor concentration in black literature.

An alumna of Winston-Salem State University, Ms. Pettis holds the MA degree from ECU and has done additional study at the University of Iowa and the University of Virginia. She joined the ECU faculty in 1973.

Joyce Owens Pettis

She is the author of "The Black Historical Novel as Best-Seller," an article in "Kentucky Folklore Journal," and contributed a biography of novelist Zora Neale Hurston to a new four-volume reference work, "American Women Writers," now in publication by Ungar Press of New York.

Her memberships include the Modern Language Association and Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority.

"Ms. Pettis has amply demonstrated her academic potential during her graduate work, her professional achievement in the presentation of scholarly papers and her effectiveness as a teacher in several levels of North Carolina public education," said Dr. Robert Maier, Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs at ECU.

"Her field of study, especially in black literature and popular culture, contributes directly to an important need here at ECU."

Ms. Pettis is the daughter of Victoria Owens of Columbia. She and her husband Bobby are the parents of a son, Daryl, aged 14.

Glenn Crowe Is Named To New ECU Position

Glenn Devon Crowe, a specialist in computer science and higher education management, has been named Director of Computing and Information Systems for East Carolina University effective August 1.

Crowe has served as assistant to the Vice President for Health Sciences, West Virginia University Medical Center, for the past two and a half years. Earlier he was Administrative Systems Specialist/Assistant to the President at WVU.

Crowe's responsibilities will include not only direction of the ECU Computing Center but also management, direction and coordination of all university computing and information systems.

"Glenn is not a stranger to ECU," said Donald L. Lemish, Vice Chancellor-Institutional Advancement and Planning. For the past year Crowe has acted as a computing consultant for the ECU School of Medicine. Also, Lemish said, Crowe's wife, Nancy, is a 1969 graduate of ECU.

"Mr. Crowe was the unanimous selection of the search committee which recommended to the Information Systems Advisory Committee (ISAC) his appointment," Lemish said. "I believe this is a very strong indication of Glenn's outstanding knowledge and management skills, since the search committee was originally charged with forwarding to ISAC the recommendation of two candidates.

"We had over 70 candidates for the position through a national search and Glenn's credentials and experience were outstanding," Lemish said.

In coordination with ISAC, Crowe's responsibilities will include management, direction and coordination of all ECU computing and information systems, Lemish said. A vacancy has existed in the directorship of the Computing Center since last spring when the search began.

From 1974 until March, 1976, Crowe was employed as a computer systems programmer/analyst with Eastern Airlines at Charlotte.

A 33 year old native of Philippi, W. Va., Crowe holds degrees from Potomac State College and the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, and has done graduate work at Princeton and West Virginia University. His research activities have centered on Planning for Information Needs in Higher Education and Issues in Higher Education Administration.

Holy Month Begins Today

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — While Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini draws international attention to strict Islamic fundamentalism, the world's 750 million Moslems begin the holy month of Ramadan today, a severe dawn-to-dusk abstinence from food, drink, sex and evil.

Berobed, turbaned sheiks in more than 20 countries from the Persian Gulf east to the Atlantic Ocean scanned the sky Saturday for the crescent of the moon that heralds Ramadan's beginning.

This is the first Ramadan in the 15th Islamic century. According to Islamic belief, the holiday — falling on the ninth month in the Moslem lunar calendar — marks the month during which the angel Gabriel imparted to the prophet Mohammed the wisdom of the Koran in a cave near Mecca 14 centuries ago.

Present-day Moslems often are criticized for turning Ramadan into a month of nighttime feasting that makes up for their all-day fasting.

Moslem doctors have said the fast can be debilitating, and economists complain little work gets done. Government bureaucracy and private business practically stop functioning. Contracts, no matter how important, are delayed.

A recent exception was the October War of 1973 when the Egyptian and Syrian attack on Israeli-occupied lands took place during Ramadan.

Veteran observers of the Islamic world say that traditionally the mind was often willing to be holy but the flesh somewhat weak. They predict, however, that Iran's revolution toward piety and strictness has rekindled Islamic virtues among Moslems who this year may act with more reserve.

The extent of the fast varies from nation to nation. Some governments, such as Egypt's, shorten office hours for fasting workers. More pious Saudi Arabia punishes violators of the fast.

In Lebanon, a mixed Moslem-Christian society, the decision to fast is left to the individual. Turkey and other secularized countries have no official policy.

The month is usually marked by nighttime revelry, especially in Egypt, where the 10-century-old Al-Azhar quarter becomes the favorite haunt of celebrating Moslems.

Gargantuan nighttime meals, resembling Thanksgiving dinners in Western societies, have been criticized by preachers as a deviation from Ramadan's purpose.

Dawn cannon fire sounds the start of the day's fast, when the Mesaharati, "dawn awakener," beats his drum as he roams streets and alleys. When the cannons sound again at sundown, fasting ends.

Smugglers Forcing Refugees Into Thai

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Cutthroat fighting between rival bands of jungle pirates, in which at least 35 people have died and more than 100 seriously wounded, triggered a stampede Saturday of another 100,000 Cambodian refugees into Thailand.

The refugees, many sobbing hysterically, poured more than a mile into Thailand as warring bands of Cambodian smugglers d blackmarketeers devastated the squalid border camps.

Relief workers said they recovered the bodies of 35 Cambodians killed since the fighting erupted Thursday night and expect to find scores more dead and wounded once the fighting stops.

Journalists Reported Killed

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Officials on Saturday discovered the bodies of two Salvadoran journalists who apparently were stabbed to death after being kidnapped the day before, local radio stations reported.

A hundred Salvadoran peasants, meanwhile, kept their vigil in the Costa Rican Embassy, which they occupied Friday to protest alleged government repression.

Authorities could not immediately be reached to confirm the reports, but the journalists' colleagues said they had identified the bodies.

The bodies of Jaime Suarez Quemain, managing editor of the opposition daily The People's Chronicle, and Cesar Najarro, a photographer, were found in a suburb on the northeastern outskirts of the capital, with knife and machete wounds, according to the radio reports.

Spokesmen for the People's Chronicle said they had identified the bodies of Suarez and Najarro in the Antiguo Cuzcatlan Morgue, in southwestern San Salvador.

Suarez, 30, and Najarro were abducted from a cafe in the center of the capital Friday and taken in a taxi to an undisclosed location, authorities said.

Resitance To Russians Growing In Afghanistan

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — In whispered conversations in the dusty bazaars and crowded tea houses of Kabul, middle-class businessmen and students are talking about giving up their jobs and studies and taking up arms against Soviet occupation troops.

Witnesses who visited rebel camps within 15 miles of the mile-high Afghan capital said a smattering of students, businessmen and professionals are already fighting alongside Moslem "holy warriors" — a few even commuting from Kabul to rebel hideouts.

"The Russians must pull out," said Shiragha, a middle-aged office worker. "Otherwise, they will all die. The Afghans are very tough people. We are strong fighters. If we have 16 million people in the country, than they will need 32 million soldiers to fight us."

Westerners in Kabul hear much talk about the killing of Afghan children, and about the destruction by the estimated 75,000-80,000 Soviet troops of ancestral villages and family farms — and after six months, resistance to the Soviet occupation seems to be growing.

A foreign agricultural expert trying last week to visit a village in Logar Province, just south of Kabul, said he was escorted by two government tanks, two helicopters and 300 soldiers.

Afghans, who have repeatedly resisted foreign domination, dismissed as "propaganda" the recent Kremlin announcement of the withdrawal of one division.

They also seem contemptuous of both the Soviet troops in their homeland and of the Kremlin's announced objective to find a political settlement to the fighting that began when the first of three Marxist governments was installed in April 1978.

The few Western European and American visitors to Kabul are almost always taken for Russians. The Afghan greeting is usually a shouted or hissed "Rusia" or "Shurave" (Soviet), sometimes accompanied by a shove, pinch or handful of tossed pebbles.

One little boy playing in a park near the old bazaar yelled "Shurave" and threw himself at a Westerner like a human torpedo and almost knocked her down.

The Russians themselves keep to their own compounds, venturing only in large groups to shops and restaurants in the tourist quarter of Share Naw.

Once Afghans learn a visitor is really a Westerner, their reaction is markedly different. One taxi driver refused to accept a fare, saying: "We love the Americans and we hope they will help us." Others responded with the Persian word for "good" and a smile.

The growing popular resistance here is proving to be a headache and an embarrassment for Kremlin leaders. It also has created some tough choices for them.

Should they maintain their current troop strength, resigning themselves to the status quo: control of the major cities and highways and continued rebel attacks.

Or should they send in massive reinforcements and wipe out the rebels in what one well-informed observer guessed would be a bloodbath that would cost 1 million Afghan lives?

By counting the number of vehicles arriving at the airport when Soviet medical evacuation flights are scheduled to take off, well-informed sources have estimated that more than 25 Soviet troops are being killed daily. Rebel losses are believed to be higher, and thousands of civilians are also believed to have died.

By almost all accounts, the Soviet troops are apparently getting little help from Afghan government forces.

Well-informed sources say the Soviet-backed government of Babrak Karmal recently conducted raids in homes and boarding houses to try to find recruits for the Afghan army, which has a listed strength of 80,000 but has been depleted by mass desertions.

The sources said only two Afghan commando units are at full strength and estimate the current strength of the army at between 20,000 and 40,000.

The rebels are known to exaggerate their strength and their successes, but there is little doubt fighting has disrupted the economy and daily life for many Afghans.

Priests Charged

By M. H. AHN
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The government arrested six Roman Catholic priests and a nun on charges they faked reports that soldiers savagely killed young women during student riots in May, the martial law command announced Saturday.

The charges allege the suspects fabricated and spread "wild, malicious rumors" by smuggling to Japan an incriminating tape recording.

On the tape were recorded voices of people claiming to have seen South Korean soldiers sexually abuse and gore women during student rioting in the Kwangju region south of Seoul.

The rioters were protesting martial law and demanding democratic reforms.

The priests and nun also face charges they encouraged rioting with their preaching. Among the six are the Rev. Kim Sung-yong from Kwangju and the Rev. Chang Duk-pil from Seoul, who served a prison term for opposing the late President Park Chung-hee in 1976.

The command said the Japanese Catholic Council for Justice and Peace held a news conference June 5 making public the allegedly smuggled tape and announced it would ask the Vatican, the United Nations and the International Red Cross to send fact-finding teams to Kwangju.

The command cited portions of the alleged tape, which described atrocitites and claimed some 1,200 South Koreans were shot to death in the riots and 800 died in auto accidents.

The martial law command says 174 people, mostly civilians, died in the nine-day uprising.

President Choi Kyu-hah has pledged a new constitution will be written by October to replace the repressive present law written by Park to guarantee his rule. Choi says South Koreans will have democratic reforms and a new government by next June.

A Lady Mother, A Jackass Papa

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Frieda, a coon-hunting mule from rural Montgomery County, and her owner ran afoul of the law when they refused to comply with an order from a sheriff's deputy directing traffic, the Kansas Court of Appeals ruled.

Ridden animals and pedestrians are classified as "traffic" by Kansas law and thus are subject to police traffic control when using a highway, the court said in an colorful opinion written Friday by Chief Judge J. Richard Foth of Topeka.

The ruling affirmed a decision by a Montgomery County District Court judge who found Frieda's owner, Paul G. Jackson, guilty of disobeying the order.

Jackson, of Coffeyville, had been fined $25.

This, as Foth weaves it, is Frieda's story:

"Frieda's mother apparently had an impeccable equine pedigree. ... Unfortunately, like many ladies of breeding, she made a love match below her station.

"Her mate may have had charm, and clearly had animal magnetism, but he was also indisputably a jackass. Frieda, the product of this unhappy union, was a mule. She was no ordinary mule, however. ...

"Encouraged by her owner and by a coonhound named Buck ... Frieda took up that nocturnal ritual known as coonhunting." Foth continued. "She was an apt pupil. From her father, she had inherited surefootedness which proved advantageous on rough and rocky ground. From her mother she had acquired talents which, with a little practice, enabled her to clear a 4-foot fence with ease.

"It was in April of 1979, while returning from one of her favorite evening outings, that Frieda had her present brush with the law."

Jackson, driving his pickup truck which was carrying Frieda and the hound, "proceeded up the river road to a point less than a half-mile from Frieda's pasture when they encountered a police barricade and Deputy Lee Coltharp of the Montgomery County Sheriff's Office," Foth said.

Coltharp told Jackson traffic was prohibited on the road at that time because authorities were dragging the river for a reported drowning victim. Jackson protested, because he didn't want to take the long way around — eight or 10 miles — to deliver Frieda to her pasture.

So, the court account said, Jackson backed up his truck as if to turn around, but instead parked it and unloaded Frieda.

"Before Coltharp could react, defendant mounted and rode off into the night, up the river road, through the restricted area, to the pasture," Foth wrote.

When Jackson returned by the same route on foot to get his truck, Coltharp was waiting, citation in hand.

"Thus, both Frieda when ridden up the highway and defendant when walking back down the highway, were 'traffic' (and) subject to police traffic control," he said.

Survivors Of Desert Trek Freed

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — For one of the Salvadorans who survived a desert trek into the United States that took 13 lives, leaving federal custody was like a homecoming.

That's because the woman who agreed to keep 17-year-old Jose Franklin Cartegenas-Lopez in her custody is an immigrant from El Salvador.

Zoila Serpas of Tempe, Ariz., who came to this country three years ago, agreed Friday to be responsible for the young man's future court appearances in the alien-smuggling case. A Salvadoran and a Mexican have been charged in the case.

Cartegenas-Lopez and the nine other Salvadorans went home Friday with Hispanic families a week after being rescued in the desert where 13 of their companions died.

"They are glad not to have to be in jail anymore," said Richard J. Gonzales, a Tucson lawyer for them.

There were no comments from the Salvadorans as they were whisked away from the federal courthouse. Court-appointed custodians and U.S. marshals explained they are worried about possible reprisals against relatives remaining in El Salvador.

The 10 range in age from 17 to 40 and include two women and eight men. Two other women who survived the desert walk remained hospitalized, and could be released later under the same conditions.

Those conditions included the posting of bonds of $500 each for the 10 and assignment to the custodian families.

The Salvadorans are not charged in criminal court, but as a condition of their release, must remain available as material witnesses in the alien-smuggling case against two men who are alleged to have led them and those who died across the border.

In addition, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service has a pending administrative case against them because they are in the country without the proper documents. Under that case, they eventually are subject to deportation.

But efforts have been launched by Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., Legal Aid of Southern Arizona Inc. and other groups to keep the aliens in the United States.

86 Cubans Arrive On Houseboat

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — A houseboat carrying 86 Cuban refugees has been escorted into Key West by a Coast Guard cutter.

The Cubans, who represented the largest single group to arrive here in several weeks, were taken into custody by federal immigration officials and transferred to a Miami processing center.

The 36-foot boat was sighted leaving Mariel harbor in Cuba Friday morning and was intercepted by the Cutter Cape York and escorted here, said Coast Guard spokesman Greg Robinson.

More than 115,000 Cubans have fled the Communist island in the "Freedom Flotilla," which began in mid-April when Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro began allowing the exodus.

The arrivals have slowed to a trickle since President Carter moved to halt the rag-tag flotilla in May.

The Coast Guard stopped boats attempting to travel to Cuba and new arrivals have been taken into custody by the Coast Guard. The U.S. Customs Service also has seized the boats that brought the refugees to this country.

Guinea Pigs?

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Residents of Cabarrus and Rowan Counties could become guinea pigs within two to five years to test a vaccine against Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever.

Dr. Catherine Wilfert of the Duke University Medical Center is heading a $300,000 research project investigating the tick-transmitted illness. The study began slightly more than a year ago and will continue until June 1982.

"Walter Reed Hospital is working with a vaccine now," Dr. Wilfert said. She added that the vaccine has been tried in animals and has been found safe and effective.

New Battle For Prayer In School Shaping Up

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The increasingly bitter battle to put prayer back in public schools is shaping up as a key test of the power of a new alliance of theological fundamentalists and political conservatives.

If the movement succeeds, it would signal the strength of the new coalition and could influence legislators on a host of other "moral" issues, including abortion, homosexual rights and the Equal Rights Amendment.

School prayer backers seem closer to victory now than any time since the Supreme Court banned prayer and Bible reading in public schools in 1962-63. And, some opponents say, the conservatives are starting to play political "hardball" to make sure they win.

The prayer struggle is now centered in the House, where Rep. Phil Crane, R-Ill., is leading an effort to bring the issue to the floor. The one-time GOP presidential candidate is being backed by such conservative religious forces as the Moral Majority, Religious Roundtable and Christian Voice.

The Senate already has passed a bill to remove school prayer from the jurisdiction of the federal courts. Crane has filed a discharge petition to take a House version of the bill directly to the floor, thus circumventing the House Judiciary Committee.

Rep. Robert Kastenmeier, D-Wis., a supporter of the prayer ban, has kept the proposal bottled up for 18 months in his judiciary subcommittee.

This spring, conservatives began a push to secure the 218 signatures needed to pry the bill from Kastenmeier's grip. So far, Crane has about 175 backers.

Town Refuses To Ban 'Wholly Moses' Film

SUMTER, S.C. (AP) — The movie "Wholly Moses," approved by a divided Sumter film censorship board, had an "above average" opening night audience Friday.

For only the second time in 10 years the city's film screening board met to consider if "Wholly Moses," starring Dudley Moore, could be shown. With one member absent, the board divided 1-1 and decided not to act.

Mayor W.A. McElveen Jr. said it "corrupted the morals of our youth." He voted to ban it and said, "It ain't worth seeing anyway, and you cana quote me on that."

But acting Police Chief Joseph Brunson said show it. "I didn't particularly like what I saw — I don't like things that make a mockery of the Bible — but the public has a right to go see it if they want to."

The board's other member, city schools Superintendent Harold Patterson, did not attend the morning screening.

The manager of the theater where "Wholly Moses" is playing, Karl Leonhirth, said, "We definitely are doing above average business. I know we would not if it had not been for the publicity.

"I want to thank them for doing a very good job of advertising."

A group called Voice of the Christian Communitty of Sumter opposed the film, calling it sacreligious. The organization said in a statement after the censor board's decision it was disappointed. "The voice of 2,752 petitioners and also the voice of Christian Voice of Sumter was stRcck down by one nay vote," the statement continued.

In "Wholly Moses" Moore portrays a man whose life parallels that of Moses with disastrous and comic results. It has a PG, or parental guidance, rating.

Strange Traffic Signs

LUMBER CITY, Ga. (AP) — The traffic sign says, "Speed Limit 19," and another sign warns motorists, "Thou Shalt Not Park Here."

To make sure everybody gets the idea, still another sign declares: "Don't even THINK of Parking Here."

What gives in this tiny, Southeast Georgia city?

"It's that salesman," he says, not naming the culprit.

"I buy stop signs and posts and things like that from a salesman who comes through here once in a while. And he's always showing me these unusual signs. And then the city council lets me buy them."

In the late 1960s, the first signs imposing a 19 miles-per-hour speed limit suddenly appeared in Lumber City, not long after Harris took office.

Townspeople grinned at the comments from out-of-towners, and it became something of a local joke.

"We don't really expect people to drive 19 miles an hour," the mayor explained, but he added that the signs seem to make motorists drive closer to the town's real speed limit of 25.

Celebrating Christmas To Forget The Heat

By The Associated Press

A Nebraska church was playing Christmas music and attendance was up markedly at caves in a Kentucky national park as the deadly heat wave in the nation's heartland ended its third week Saturday.

An unofficial count by The Associated Press showed that as of Saturday at least 378 people in 15 states have died from heat related causes. The heat wave was in its 21st day in some areas Saturday.

The death count includes 88 victims in Texas, 83 in Arkansas, 68 in Missouri, 33 in Oklahoma, 27 in Tennessee, 19 in Mississippi, 15 each in Kansas and Illinois, 11 in Georgia, seven in Alabama, five in Louisiana, three in Kentucky, two in Indiana and one each in Nebraska and South Carolina.

In Norfolk, Neb., the First United Methodist Church has its carillon playing Christmas carols.

"We thought we'd try to cool the air with winter music," said the Rev. Loyd Bliss on Saturday.

The carillon peals out "Jingle Bells" and other frosty favorites four times daily. The program of Christmas music began Thursday afternoon, when temperatures reached 101, and church officials say the winter holiday favorites will continue as long as the heat wave.

In Kentucky, Robert Deskins, superintendent of Mammoth Cave National Park, said tourist visits to the park's caves — where the air temperature is 54 degrees — have increased by about 30 percent compared with last summer. He said he didn't know if the heat was the reason for the increase.

In Lexington, Ky., the Citizens Union National Bank and Trust Co. found itself with a vault full of "hot money" last week.

The bank's air conditioning was broken until late Thursday, and to make matters worse, the building's windows don't open.

"We've had people call in and ask if we have any hot money around," said bank president Arch Mainous Jr.

In Texas, where the last heat death was reported Thursday, the number of fatalities appears to have stabilized. State officials said they believe the reason is that temperatures, while still above 100, have dropped below the record highs experienced at the start of the heat wave.

They said those most susceptible to heat related problems probably already have died. In addition, the officials said people now take the threat of heat illness and injury seriously and are following advice to keep air conditioning on and to take cool baths.

In St. Louis, where a high of 105 was expected Saturday, Dr. George E. Wettach, director of emergency medical services, said that if the heat continues the city will face heat exhaustion and heat stroke cases "in epidemic proportions."

Daily highs for last week were generally above 100.

Mayor James F. Conway declared a medical emergency at City Hospital, where most wards are not air conditioned because the wiring cannot accommodate it. Nearby Scott Air Force Base loaned the hospital three portable cooling units run by jet fuel. An Army reserve unit loaned another operated by diesel.

Dr. R. Dean Wochner, the city's director of health and hospitals, said about 40 percent of the hospital's 300 patients are now in air conditioned areas.

In Kansas, the National Weather Service said no relief was in sight for the hot spell that is now in its second week there. Gov. John Carlin issued a call Friday for prudent water use and urged churches and other institutions to open their doors to people in distress from the heat.

He also signed an emergency proclamation prohibiting certain kinds of open burning in the state because of the dry weather. The proclamation, issued Friday, will last for 15 days.

In Georgia, the 101 degree reading in Atlanta set a record Friday. Emergency water conservation measures have been put into effect in nearby DeKalb County. Weekend car washing and lawn waterings have been banned.

In Arkansas, officials have banned outdoor burning in Little Rock and several smaller communities throughout the state.

Demands Secession

By PETER MATTIACE
Associated Press Writer

WINSLOW, N.J. (AP) — Comparing themselves to patriots of 200 years ago, a small but spirited band of South Jersey partisans Saturday called for the creation of a 51st state of pinelands, beaches, nuclear power plants and casino gambling.

South Jersey secessionists, in a rebellious mood, held a three-hour "convention" to organize formally the so-far part-serious, part-joking movement to make New Jersey's eight southern counties a separate state.

Although only about 190 of an expected 800 supporters showed up, organizers compared the faithful to the handful of patriots who signed the Declaration of Independence in 1776.

"What we finally have is a sign of South Jersey unity," said John J. Mahoney, a high school teacher from rural Milmay.

"We think the support is there, but we didn't get near as many people as we expected. After all, it is a good beach day," admitted organizer Joel Jacovitz, deputy mayor of Egg Harbor Township and chairman of the new "Committee to Free South Jersey."

Representatives of eight southern counties — Ocean, Atlantic, Cape May, Cumberland, Salem, Gloucester, Camden and Burlington — formed committees to stir up grassroots support and study the legal means to secede from New Jersey.

The meeting featured speeches, bumper stickers, T-shirts, balloons and even an unnamed South Jersey anthem sung to the tune of "Dixie."

Bob LaTorre, Seaside Heights public relations director, read a 12-point "Declaration of Secession" blasting what secessionists see as tyrannical control by a state government dominated by urban North Jersey bureaucrats.

"The Trenton government has continually sent hordes of bureaucrats into our midst to harass us," declared the document.

Jacovitz said that South Jerseyans are "very mad" about insensitivity from the state government in Trenton. The south, he contended, can survive on revenues from Atlantic City casino gambling, five proposed nuclear power plants, tourist dollars and offshore drilling.

Largely seashore and agricultural South Jersey, which has about 1.8 million people oriented toward Philadelphia, has long been suspicious of state government, which it claims is controlled by urban and industrial interests from the New York-oriented north.

Secessionists, riding the newly revived movement, hope to capitalize on the south's new and bitter opposition to state efforts to control development of the Pine Barrens, an environmentally sensitive forest that make up most of South Jersey, and the shore. They also oppose state efforts to tax fresh water and form a "super-agency" to oversee redevelopment of the Atlantic City area.

State officials, including South Jersey senators and assemblymen, stayed away Saturday.

tion's top economic problem in the minds of most Americans. That concern is nowhere more clear than in the reaction to a possible tax cut.

Asked whether a tax cut would help their personal financial situation or would hurt it because such a slash might worsen inflation, Americans said a tax cut might hurt.

Fifty-six percent said they would not be helped by a tax cut, while 31 percent said they would be. Thirteen percent were not sure.

Past AP-NBC News polls have found substantial support for balancing the federal budget, in part because some people believe excessive government spending is a major cause of inflation. But there has also always been support for cutting federal taxes.

In this latest poll, conducted Tuesday and Wednesday, Americans came down solidly in favor of balancing the budget over cutting taxes.

Fifty-seven percent said they would choose balancing the federal budget, while 33 percent picked cutting federal taxes. Ten percent were not sure.

Even if their taxes were cut, most people say they would spend the money, not save it.

Forty percent said they would use the money from a 10 percent tax cut to pay day-to-day expenses. Twenty-eight percent would pay off bills. Seven percent would use the money to buy something they wanted but could not afford in the past.

Another 28 percent said they would save the money from the tax cut, while 9 percent mentioned some other use or were not sure. More than one response was possible on this question, thus the total is 112 percent.

As with all sample surveys, the results of the AP-NBC News polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variations in the sample.

Of Rags And Riches

LONDON (AP) — William Lewis, a shabby recluse who rummaged through garbage cans in his south London Battersea neighborhood, left $433,700, according to his will published Saturday. He gave the money to his brother George with whom he lived.

William died last April at the age of 78.

Eileen Brancaccio, one of his neighbors, said she was stunned by the report of his fortune. "He was more like a tramp you could find under Waterloo Bridge and he would poke into people's rubbish with his stick," she said. "He used to be a farm laborer and there are rumors that he owned at least one sheep farm in Wales.

Morale Low On Missile Ship — Officer Charged

PORT HUENEME, Calif. (AP) — A jury has decided USS Norton Sound petty officer will be stripped of his rank and kicked out of the Navy for sexually harassing and assaulting four female crew members aboard the missile test ship.

Petty Officer 3rd Class Craig Norman, 23, will return to the ship Monday pending review of the sentence by his commanding officer, who can reduce the penalty but not increase it.

The case is one of a number of incidents involving the Norton Sound to receive attention in recent months. There have been reports of homosexuality and allegations that a gang has been selling drugs and loan-sharking aboard the ship. One sailor was stabbed in his bunk in May.

Appeals of the verdict in Norman's case could leave the outcome in question for up to a year, prosecutors said.

Lt. Cmdr. Richard Uris had asked the jury of two female and one male Navy officers appointed by the Norton Sound's captain, Cmdr. James Seebirt, to sentence Norman to confinement and hard labor in addition to the bad conduct discharge and reduction to lowest rank.

"These charges deserve it," Uris said. "If this is the kind of petty officer the Navy needs, then the Navy is in very desperate shape."

Norman had hyperventilated and collapsed upon hearing the guilty verdict Friday, but reacted calmly when the sentence was handed down a few hours later.

"It's OK," he told his wife. "Don't worry about it. I'm a civilian again. That's all."

Norman was acquitted of an additional charge, using obscene language, filed by a fifth woman.

Crew members told reporters that morale is low on the Norton Sound in the wake of news accounts of the stabbing and sexual misconduct.

Two members of the crew who had testified as character witnesses for Norman told reporters, however, that events aboard the ship are not related and are fairly common for a large Navy vessel.

The stabbing victim, Fireman's Apprentice Bill Kenny, told Rep. Robert Dornan's office that a "Dirty Dozen Gang" prowled the ship, avenging offenses to its members, loan-sharking and selling drugs.

All but one of the "Dirty Dozen" have been discharged from the Navy for "victimless crimes like smoking marijuana on board or unauthorized absence," an officer said.

Next week, eight women from the Norton Sound are scheduled for dismissal hearings for alleged homosexuality.

When the ship docked in Long Beach for maintenance in early June, 24 of the 61 women aboard were told they were being investigated for homosexuality. The ship has a crew of 375, including three female officers.

4-H Congress To Meet Here

Some 167 4-H members will check in here Monday for the 33rd Annual State 4-H Electric Congress.

Eighty-three North Carolina counties will be represented by 4-H'ers who have won recognition for their accomplishments in the electric project. The congress, which will be held at East Carolina University, will adjourn following breakfast Wednesday morning.

The highlight of the congress comes Monday evening at an awards banquet with the announcement of a state winner and territorial winners and runners-up in the electric project. North Carolina Commissioner of Agriculture James A. Graham will address the 4-H'ers at the banquet.

There will be electric demonstrations and project reports Tuesday morning and a trip to Nags Head and Kill Devil Hills in the afternoon.

The state 4-H electric project winner receives a trip to National 4-H Congress in Chicago in November. Each territorial winner receives an AM-FM stereo receiver with cassette recorder and record changer. Second-place territorial winners receive portable black and white televisions and third-place winners receive AM-FM radios with cassette recorders.

The 4-H Electric Congress and the awards are sponsored by Carolina Power and Light Co., Duke Power Co., Nantahala Power and Light Co., Virginia Electric and Power Co., and the Westinghouse Educational Foundation, in cooperation with the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service.

Boys Home Game Week

Today through Saturday has been proclaimed by Mayor Don McGlohon as Jaycee Boys Home Game Week in Greenville.

McGlohon said that the 18th annual game will be played here on Saturday, July 19, with net proceeds going to Boys Homes of North Carolina, with the Greenville Jaycees serving as the host chapter for the event.

In his proclamation, the mayor welcomed "the players and coaches who will participate in this game to Greenville as our guests."

According to McGlohon, "Boys Home of North Carolina, with campuses at Lake Waccamaw and Huntersville, provide a Christian environment, educational opportunity, and physical training for homeless boys of . . . North Carolina."

He said the "North Carolina Jaycees assist and support the maintenance of Boys Home" by annually sponsoring the ball game.

The mayor said the "two-fold purpose of the . . . game is . . . to provide financial aid and support for Boys Homes of North Carolina and . . . to recognize 62 outstanding athletes and six coaches from throughout North Carolina whose achievements have been exemplary."

Pecan Grove Games Are Set

Since the United States has boycotted the 1980 Olympics, a special group of Olympic Games will be held next Sunday, July 20, in Pecan Grove just outside Winterville on Highway 11, WRQR-FM radio announcer, John Moore, says.

Any small town or individual group may compete in such events as drink crate jumping, tire running, hub cap throwing, brick bat chunking, fly killing, obstacle course running, basketball rolling, tobacco stick throwing, egg relaying, and tug-of-warring over a mudhole.

Teams must register by Thursday and each must bring a team flag. Medals will be awarded for first, second and third place in each event. To register, call John Moore, 753-4110; Mike Robinson, 758-2452 or Steve Arnold, 756-3896.

The games will start at 1 p.m., with team meetings beginning at noon.

"Bring your lawn chairs and coolers and spend the day at the 1980 Pecan Grove Olympics," Moore said.

Music Workshop At Jarvis

The Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church will conduct a five-day music workshop beginning Monday, July 21 for children ages four to 18 and of every denomination.

The program is designed to interest children in the appreciation of music through rhythms, rhythm instruments, singing, dancing, and listening experiences. Also included are films, instrument demonstrations, beginning theory and sight reading, and introduction to keyboard and opera.

Mrs. Treva Fidler, Youth Choir Director at Oakmont Baptist Church, will be leading the youth session. Other teachers will be Mrs. Emalynn Colardo, Mrs. Kathryn Creech, Mrs. Bunny Powers, Mickey Terry, and Mrs. Millie Tripp.

Registration begins at 8:45 a.m. Monday, July 21. Workshop hours are 9:15-11:15 a.m. The fee is $7.00 per child and with families with more than one child attending an additional fee of only $3.00 is required. Early registration may be obtained by calling the church office, 752-3101.

Robards Playing President Grant

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jason Robards will portray President Ulysses S. Grant in the movie version of "The Legend of the Lone Ranger."

Producer Walter Coblenz announced that Robards will join Klinton Spilsbury as the Lone Ranger and Michael Horse as Tonto in the movie which William Fraker will direct in and around Santa Fe, N.M.

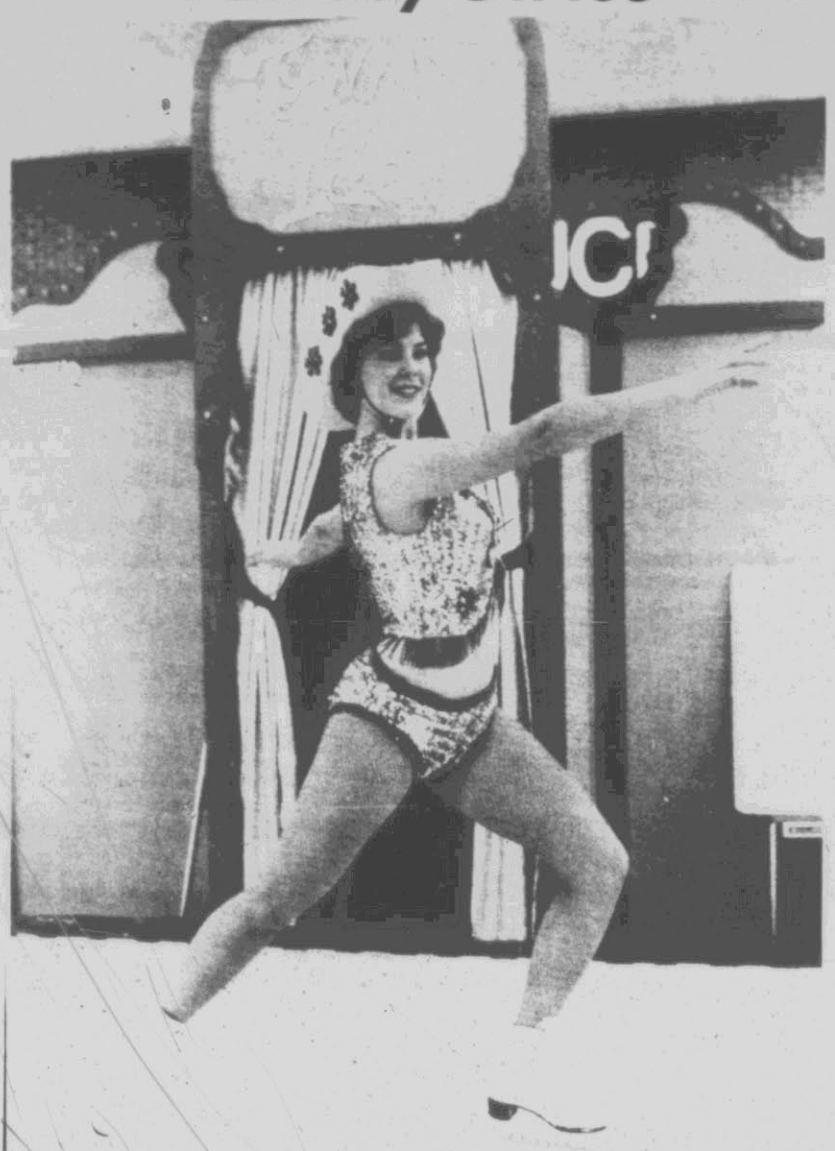
'Fantasy On Ice' Is Sunday In The Park Attraction Today



FANTASY ON ICE . . . with skaters and magicians, is today's Sunday in the Park fare. The performers use a unique thermo-plastic material to skate on. Seven performers are in the traveling group. The program opens at 7 p.m. with the public invited free of charge. In the event of rain, the show will be held at 7 p.m. on Monday, July 14 at the same site.

"Fantasy On Ice" is the cool title of the entertainment coming to Sunday in the Park today. In actuality, an iceless skating show, it features a unique thermoplastic material developed especially for ice skating where there is no natural ice. The artificial surface permits all the maneuvers possible on real ice without the problems of maintenance.

The roster of performers include Tommy Curtin, internationally known skater with appearances worldwide in major ice skating and variety shows. He has twice appeared on the Ed Sullivan Show, and filled a six-weeks engagement at Radio City Music Hall.

Darlene Gilbert, the troupe's choreographer, recently concluded a summer-long engagement at Radio City Music Hall. Another of the skaters, Brian Grant, has appeared in various skating events, as well as in Broadway's "Ice Dancing" and with Peggy Fleming in "Winter Romance on Ice." Grant is also a model.

Michigan's Angela Adney, currently on her second tour with "Fantasy On Ice," is busy preparing for a Gold Medal in Figures, Free Style and Dance skating. Skater Cecily Morrow holds a Gold Medal from the U. S. Figure Skating Association and teaches skating in the Washington, D. C. area.

The elements of magic in the show are handled by two performers — Bill Karlton, magician, juggler, stage director and owner and producer of the show; and Marcia McReynolds, stage manager, vocalist, and magic assistant. She has a wide background of theatrical experience.

There is no admission charge for "Fantasy On Ice," and the public is invited to attend. As usual, the performance will take place at the Sunday in the Park site east of Reade Street between Third and Fourth Street and is to begin at 7 p.m. This and others in this series of Sunday programs are sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, and funded by the City of Greenville.

Stuart Aronson, director of the series, said in the event of rain, "Fantasy On Ice" would be presented at 7 p.m. Monday, July 14 at the same site.

Today's performance will mark the first appearance by this group in the eastern part of the state and one of their rare appearances in North Carolina.

Princess Grace To Open Duke's 1980-81 Season

DURHAM — Princess Grace of Monaco will open the Duke University Union's 1980-81 Broadway at Duke series with a reading of poetry, "Evocations," on September 10 in Page Auditorium.

The Academy Award-winning actress, Grace Kelly, gave up her theatrical career to marry Prince Ranier III of Monaco. She is making a limited American tour this fall and her appearance at Duke will be the only one for her in North Carolina.

Other events scheduled for the forthcoming season are:

— Sept. 25 — "The Gin Game," a Pulitzer Prize-winning comedy set in an old age home, starring Margaret Hamilton. Ms. Hamilton is a veteran actress best known for her role of the Wicked Witch of the West in the 1939 film, "The Wizard of Oz."

— November 14 — "Gertrude Stein, Gertrude Stein, Gertrude Stein," is an off-Broadway hit about the life of Gertrude Stein. Pat Carroll will star as Ms. Stein. She has regularly appeared on television including a long-running, co-starring role on The Danny Thomas Show, and is also a veteran of stage and screen roles.

— December 8 — "The Lion In Winter," presented by the multiple prize-winning repertory company, the Long Wharf Theater. James Goldman's drama relates the story of King Henry II, Queen Eleanor of Aquitaine, and their three sons, all contenders for the throne of England.

— January 30, 1981 — Mummenschanz, a Swiss mime company in a mixture of pantomime and masque theater.

— March 23 — Les Ballets Trockadero de Monte Carlo. This outlandish company combines parody with technical virtuosity to satirize the practices and pretnsions of some classical ballet groups.

— April 10 — "Jacques Brel Is Alive and Well and Living in Paris." Elly Stone, the original star of "Jacques Is" will appear in the performance of a modern musical theater classic based on the music and lyrics of French composer Jacques Brel.

All performances will be at 8 p.m. Season tickets for the seven attractions are priced at $49, $44 and $38 with individual tickets at various prices to also be available. For reservations and more details, write to: Duke University Union, Box KM, Duke Station, Durham, N. C., 27706, or call the Page box office, 684-4059.

Reception Today

A reception is being held from 3 to 5 p.m. today for the opening of a new show at the Greenville Art Center, 802 Evans Street. The exhibition is "An Installation by Stacey Jones."

Jones, a recent graduate of the School of Art, East Carolina University, will be at the reception to meet the public. Refreshments will be served and everyone is invited.

Hospitality House

WASHINGTON — A filmed interview is the principal feature on Kay Currie's "Hospitality House," airing from noon until 1 p.m. today over WITN-TV, Channel 7.

The interview, conducted earlier in San Antonio, Texas, is with Dr. Shirley Simon, a behavioral-ologist and psychologist who seven years ago lost 88 pounds through acquiring new eating habits. Dr. Simon tells the public about this new, determined way to reduce.

History enters the show with appearances by Richard Tripp, retired VOA engineer and Fred Mallison, formerly of Historic Albemarle, who talk about the forumlation of Historic Washington plans.

Another guest is Bill Arnold, special assistant to the N. C. Secretary of Commerce and head of the N. C. Film Commission. Arnold talks about efforts to lure filmmakers to North Carolina, noting that three films have recently been filmed in the state, with 11 others planned.

Ann Frizzle and Harriet Kirk, both of Belhaven, discuss the benefit tennis tournament to raise funds for the cancer campaign.

Hart Comedy Set For Run At NCSU

RALEIGH — Moss Hart's comedy, "Light Up the Sky," will be performed in the Studio Theater on the N.C. State University campus beginning July 25. Dates are July 25, 26 and July 28 through August 2, with curtain time nightly at 8 p.m.

Tickets are available at Thompston Theater box office beginning July 14 from 9 to 4 on weekdays. Seating is limited. Persons wanting reservations are to call 737-2405.

Summer Theater Announces Two Comedies For Its 1980 Season

ECU News Bureau

The East Carolina Summer Theater is back in Greenville — "in time to liven up the summer entertainment diet with its legendary lighthearted laughter," says Scott Parker, general manager.

Parker noted that two comedies, "Same Time Next Year" and "Vanities" are the season's bill-of-fare. Both are plays highly acclaimed by New York critics.

"Same Time ' Year" by Bernard Slad ll open the season on July 28 with performanances nightly at 8:15 p.m. through August 2, with a 2:15 matinee on July 30.

The action of the play covers a 24-year period of annual romantic encounters by Doris and George who are happily married — but not to each other. Each year as they meet for a weekend, they discover new and sometimes hilarious things about themselves and their relationship.

The other play, "Vanities," is a long-running New York hit by Jack Heifner. Its East Carolina production will open August 4 and continue through August 9 with evening performances at 8:15 p.m. and an August 6 matinee at 2:15 p.m.

This bittersweet comedy traces the lives of three girls from their days together as high school cheerleaders to their years as sorority sisters and their coming of age as young women.

Edgar Loessin, Summer Theater producer/director, has cast the season with actors who will be coming from as far away as Los Angeles and New York. "I'm excited about our season this year," Loessin said. "Not only do we have two of the finest comedies ouf of New York in recent years, but we have a superb cast with the talent and timing to make these plays work beautifully."

Actors and actresses scheduled to appear in the plays are:

— Del Lewis, veteran Broadway actor with performances in "The Rothschilds" and "Fiddler on the Roof." He is founder of the Madison, Wisconsin, Civic Repertory Theater, director of the Halifax outdoor drama, "First for Freedom," and currently heads the undergraduate acting program at the University of Wisconsin.

— Amanda Muir, a longtime audience favorite with East Carolina Summer Theater audiences, has had featured roles with all three major television networks and has performed lead roles with Theater East in New York City.

— Beth Grant, a graduate of the ECU drama department, is now at home in Los Angeles. She has performed in numerous television shows and is now working with George Schlatter Productions, the producers of the "Real People" show.

— Judith Townsend was a principal in the Home Box Office TV production of "The Robber Bridegroom" and has performed major roles with the Equity Library Theater, the Broadway Drama Guild and St. Clement's Theater.

— Kathi Diamant, now a Greenville resident, is producer and co-host of WNCT-TV's "Carolina Today" early morning show. In Florida she appeared with the ASOLO State Theater, the Tallahassee Little Theater, the Florida State University Theater and the Second State Theater Company.

All performances will be held in the Fletcher Recital Hall, ECU, since McGinnis Auditorium, permanent home of the Summer Theater, is being renovated.

Because of the limited seating capacity of the Recital Hall — under 300 — early purchase of tickets is advised. Tickets, good for both plays are $10, and single show tickets are $7. These may be reserved by calling 757-6390 between 9 and 5 weekdays, or ordered by mail from: East Carolina Summer Theater, ECU, Greenville, N. C., 27834.

JUDITH TOWNSEND . . . is one of the cast members to perform in the East Carolina Summer Theater season which opens July 28. Two plays will be presented — "Same Time Next Year" and "Vanities." Both will be given in the Fletcher Recital Hall. Tickets at $10 for the two shows or $7 for a single show are now available and can be reserved by calling 757-6390 between 9 and 5 daily.

THE ROLE OF PHENIUS PICKETT . . . in Kenansville's outdoor drama, "The Liberty Cart," is portrayed by Steve Porter. Porter is a former University of Tennessee football player, and is shown here barefoot with his long gun and utensil loaded cart. "The Liberty Cart" opens July 18 and will be performed every Thursday through Sunday night at 8:15 p.m. through August 24. For full details call 296-0721 or write: The Liberty Cart, P. O. Box 470, Kenansville, N. C., 28349.

Rock Band Returns

By BRUCE MEYER

CHICAGO (UPI) — ZZ Top is the band that came back from the dead.

Not literally, of course. But when a rock 'n' roll band abruptly disappears for two years, releasing no records, playing no concerts, giving no interviews, it's not unreasonable for its fans to think the worst.

That's just what ZZ Top, a Houston-based blues-rock trio with a huge following in its home state of Texas and throughout the country, did.

Guitarist Billy Gibbons, bassist Dusty Hill and drummer Frank Beard had been on the road almost non-stop for five years.

"Five years on the road," says Gibbons, "it's a wonder we were able to continue on as humans, much less work as musicians."

They were sick of the whole thing — and, frankly, tired of looking at each other. So after a final New Year's show in Fort Worth at the start of 1977, they took a two-year vacation that stretched out well into last year.

"We just sort of parted company and went our own ways for the first 18 months," says Gibbons, adding that he went to Europe to dabble in the New Wave, Beard took an extended Caribbean cruise and Hill disappeared into the hinterlands of Mexico.

"But there was always the understanding that ... at some point we'd drop the bucket back in the well and see if it splashed.

It splashed — and ZZ's loyal fans kept the faith.

The band's new album, "Deguello" (Spanish for "no quarter," the command given to Santa Ana's forces at the Alamo), is a hit and, what's more, a critical success, a rare event in ZZ's checkered history as a regional blockbuster trying to break out of its mold.

Despite Gibbons' acknowledged virtuosity on the electric guitar, the group's image as a "little ole band from Texas," kept ZZ Top in the minor leagues for years.

But "all of a sudden," says Gibbons, "there's a lot of respect being thrown at us by people in the business."

That's partly because the band has changed. No longer do Gibbons and Hill appear in rhinestone cowboy outfits. They've gone bohemian, dressed in black and both sporting bizarre foot-long beards.

"I guess it started out as a kind of beard-growing contest," says Gibbons. "Unfortunately, somewhere along the line the record company and the management decided it's a great idea because it's different, so here we are — the Smith Brothers."

Gibbons sees ZZ's new musical persona as a blend of the old straight-ahead Texas boogie, the altered three-way personal relationship and the influence of the New Wave, all of which he sums up as "blues-punk."

Melvin Douglas In Another Film

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Two-time Academy Award winner Melvyn Douglas landed a co-starring role in "Art of Deceit," a comedy-drama starring Wayne Rogers, Marie-France Pisier and Samantha Eggar.

Douglas, nearing 80, has spent 60 years in movies, television and on stage. He will play an art forger who passes along the tricks of the trade to Rogers.

Roanoke Island Folks Proud Of Joe Layton's Achievements

JOE LAYTON . . . relaxes on Roanoke Island after the successful opening of "Barnum," which is playing at St. James Theater in New York. For the past 17 years Layton has been director-choreographer of "The Lost Colony" outdoor drama. (Photo by J. Foster Scott, Dare County Tourist Bureau).

MANTEO — Joe Layton, the director and choreographer of "The Lost Colony" for the past 17 years has a new hit to tuck under his belt. "Barnum," the Broadway musical staged by Layton is making it big in New York this season following its New York opening at St. James Theater on April 30. The play has music by Cy Coleman, lyrics by Michael Stewart and a book by Mark Bramble — with overall staging by Layton.

Critics gave "Barnum" enthusiastic reviews, praising it with words like "Joe Layton has stage with a theatrical inventiveness that can't be duplicated. . . " "joyously staged by Joe Layton . . ." and "Eye-popping opulence of Joe Layton's whizz-bang direction . . . "(his) nonstop direction never lets the evening lag."

In an interview with Manteo's veteran journalist Vera Evans over breakfast at a Manteo restaurant, Layton agreed the show's "a hit. It's a good feeling.

"It's interesting," he explained to Ms. Evans. "I started my career dancing in 'Oklahoma!' at the St. James Theater in 1947. Now I'm in the same theater with 'Barnum' and the 'Oklahoma' revival is only a block away. We're all three survivors."

"Barnum" more than survived the worst of ordeals — opening night. "It's a hit or it closes," Layton declared. (The play not only survived that crucial point, but went on to receive several coveted Tony Awards, including the year's best musical).

"Years ago, when tickets were not $30 each, when a star could carry a mediocre play, it wasn't so vital. Now, people can't afford to go to something that isn't tops. And a star doesn't draw that much. It's got to be the whole thing."

"Barnum" is the story about master showman, Phineas T. Barnum, the great circus man and it has a circus setting. "It's a good show for the kids," Layton commented, adding that's unusual in today's shows. The show stars Jim Dale in the title role with Glenn Close as Barnum's wife, a strait laced New England woman who fights the deception she deplores.

The cast, Layton commented, "is highly talented, with exceptional skills — juggling, tight wire, uncycling, high trapeze. We had no casting problems."

One actor with all the requisites who is making it in "Barnum" is Terry Mann, remembered in Manteo as Old Tom in "The Lost Colony" and for his children's thater musical shows. "So talented," Layton said of the young actor who plays a variety of roles and does an assortment of circus act in "Barnum."

Now, Ms. Evans notes, Layton has turned to his next challenge. "It will be a sequel to 'Bye, Bye, Birdie' called 'Bring Back Birdie' and its scheduled to open this fall."

Layton was back in Manteo to make final changes in this summer's production of "The Lost Colony."

"When he's in Manteo, whether at the Waterside Theater or downton in the diner, he brings with him that aura of Broadway to spice life for Roanoke Island," Ms. Evans noted. "Locals feel as if Joe's New York hit were a little bit of their own."

The sale, which will run from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m., is sponsored by Friends of the ECU Library for the benefit of the campus library's programs.

All books to be sold have been donated by members of the Friends organization and other persons in the local community.

Previous booksales have included mysteries, romances, short story collections and all types of fiction; textbooks in fields ranging from accounting to zoology; children's books; set of encyclopedias and other reference works; essays, how-to-guides and other non-fiction; poetry; texts of plays; music books and such oddities as a reprint of a 19th century medical curiosities treatise.

Generally, each hardcover volume is sold for $1.50, with 50 cents charged for paperbacks.

—War Stories Remembered—

By SANDY COLTON
AP Newsfeatures

Recently I spent a marvelous weekend in Washington swapping war stories with old buddies at the 30th anniversary reunion of Korean War correspondents.

It brought back a lot of memories and hammered home the tremendous changes in photojournalism between then and now.

With the exception of some of the magazine photographers who carried Leicas, Contaxes, the then new Nikon or Canon copies, or a Rolleiflex, most of the news photographers covering that war were strapped with a stripped-down Speed Graphic, a carry-over from World War II days.

It was not much more than a wooden box with a bellows, a compur (leaf type) shutter in the lens, linear scale for focusing and ground glass back for fine focusing, plus a focal plane shutter on the back which was used for higher speeds or as a backup when the front shutter went out. It could, and did, take a beating.

"One time," George Sweers, then an Associated Recalls War Stories.....

Press photographer and now director of news illustrations with the St. Petersburg, Fla., Times, recalled, "I got caught in a mortar barrage, dived into a mud hole and came out with the camera covered with mud, completely filling the lens shade. Just cleaned it off and it worked fine."

Both Sweers and Fred Waters, an AP photographer today in St. Louis, recall missing pictures because of the lack of long lenses. The equivalent Graphic lens to today's small 500mm or 1,000 mm lenses for a 35mm camera were three and four feet long — much too cumbersome to carry into combat.

"Once I was on one hilltop watching a bunch of North Koreans getting clobbered in an artillery barrage on another hill," Sweers recalled. "I could see it with my eyes but couldn't photograph it because I didn't have a lens long enough to do the job."

Waters recalled another problem of that day. "There were no small electronic flash units then. We had a choice of a heavy wet-cell unit or bulbs. Most of us carried a bunch of No. 22 flash bulbs in a bag. Sometimes one would get cracked. When you set it off it would explode with a loud bang and scatter glass all over the place.

"I once photographed Chou En-lai about to board a helicopter. The bulb exploded and he almost backed into the tail rotor. The next time I saw him was at a foreign ministers' conference. A bulb exploded again and almost everyone ducked under the tables, except Chou. He just sat back and laughed."

While today's photographers carry 36-exposure rolls of 35mm film, the news photographer then carried two film-pack adaptors and four to six packs of 12-exposure film.

"We had to make every shot count," Waters said. "We worked on the premise that every shot we made was going to wind up in print."

And most shots were used — if not nationally, at least in the hometowns of the people in the picture.

Adopt-A-Pet

The Adopt-a-Pet of the Week is Carey, a black spayed female dog four years old.

She's had all her shots and needs the companionship of children, her owner says. Her owner is having to give her up because she's moved into an apartment where she cannot keep her. Call 756-8539.

Other animals being sought homes by the Pitt County Humane Society include:

— Bozo, a one-year-old that resembles the RCA Victor dog. He's affectionate and in need of a home in the country. 758-0797 or 758-2856.

— A white cat with six kittens.

— A blonde male Afghan

— Three orange long-haired kittens.

— A gray tabby female cat whose owner died. This cat desperately needs a home.

To place an animal in Adopt-a-Pet, call Mrs. Elizabeth Savage, 756-4867; Charlotte Price, 752-3290; Heather Chaney, 758-0556; or 752-6166, Ext. 286.

Hearing On Coastal Impact Regulation

The Coastal Resources Commission will hold a oe-day meeting beginning 8:30 a.m. on Thursday at the Ramada Inn in New Bern.

The commission's opening session will include a report on a study prepared for the 1980 General Assembly of the impact of coastal regulation on land values.

The commission will hear an appeal at 9:30 a.m. by M.A. Boryk, J.C. Anderson, and B.F. McLeod of Topsail Beach of a Coastal Area Management Act permit de-nial. The applicants propose to extend a water line in an inlet hazard area of environmental concern (AEC).

There will be a public hearing at 10:30 a.m. on proposed regulations to establish procedures to notify developers of activi-ties that are in violation of CAMA standards and to set a six-month expiration date for CAMA permits issued for ocean hazard AEC devel-opment.

Standing committees will discuss draft standards for ocean bulkheading, financial assistance for regulated land, peat mining issues, the review of submitted land use plan updates and other items. Both committees will meet at 10:45 a.m.

To Hold Hearings On U.S. 264 Plans

The North Carolina De-partment of Transportation will hold public hearings on the proposed improvements to U.S. 264 between Wilson and Greenville, July 22, 23 and 24.

The July 22 hearing will be at Beddingfield High School on the Old Stantonsburg Road in Wilson.

The hearing on July 24 will be at the Wellcome Middle School on N.C. 11 North of Greenville. The sessions will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The proposed 28-mile four lane highway will be on a new location and run from N.C. 58 at Wilson to the Stantonsburg Road (SR 1200) near Pitt Memorial Hospital in Greenville. Access to the proposed highway will be at designated interchanges.

DOT personnel will be at the hearings to explain the proposed design of the highway, right-of-way re-quirements and procedures and other information re-lated to the project.

A map of the proposed design and copies of the final environmental impact statement are available at the NCDOT offices in Greenville and Wilson, and at the Farmville Town Hall.

Persons interested in the project are encouraged to attend, ask questions, make comments, or submit mate-rial pertaining to the highway project. Additional information concerning the hearings may be secured by contacting W. A. Garrett Jr., Public Hearing Officer, NCDOT, Division of Highways, P.O. Box 25201, Raleigh, N.C. 27611 or tele-phone 733-3244.

COMMISSION MEETS

The Redevelopment Commission will hold its regular July meeting on Monday at 7:30 p.m. at its 1103 Broad Street central offices.

Commissioners will con-sider progress reports con-cerning finance, land ac-quisition, disposition, demoli-tion and relocation in the various urban renewal and Community Development areas.

1980 Summer Games

Games Begin Saturday Behind The Iron Curtain, Without United States

MOSCOW (AP) — The Summer Olympics, conceived as a two-week festival of sport and athletic comradery, will open Saturday but has already seen two records set. For the first time the Games are being held behind the Iron Curtain and for the first time since the Modern Games were revived in 1896 the United States isn't sending a team.

The credo that politics and sport don't mix has been obliterated by President Carter's Olympic boycott, which was initiated after Soviet troops invaded Afghanistan late last year. Among the nations aboard the boycott bandwagon are the United States, which finished second behind the Soviet Union in total medals four years ago, West Germany, Canada and Japan.

Both sides point to the numbers and claim victory, although the exact number of boycotting countries is still not clear since countries may not send teams for other reasons.

There were 29 nations that notified the International Olympic Committee of their intention not to particpate, with 20 other countries not respondeding to the Olympic invitation. The State Department says more than 60 countries are boycotting and that 50 sports federations have broken from their national Olympic committees and opted to stay home.

"We don't foresee any slippage," one State Department official predicted, adding that in some sports "a gold medal will merely be a chocolate gold medal" since so few participants will compete.

The boycotting nations accounted for roughly 40 percent of the medals awarded at the 1976 Summer Games in Montreal, when 87 nations competed after a walkout by 20 African countries. There were 112 countries competing in Mexico City in 1968 and 121 in Munich in '72.

The Soviet Union has labeled the boycott a failure, pointing out that 85 nations have accepted invitations. This is comparable to the figure for the Montreal Games, which were boycotted by a number of African countries. Additionally, in several countries heavily courted by Carter's campaign the Olympic committees refused to boycott, notably Great Britain, France, Italy and Australia.

That the Games will be held is a testament to the unswerving commitment and subtle diplomacy of Lord Killanin, the president of the International Olympic Committee. The Irishman, who will turn 66 during the Games, will retire this year after two four-year terms.

The Soviet Union and East Germany, which finished one-two, respectively, in gold metals four years ago, are expected to benefit the most from the absence of the boycotting sports powers. Of 609 medals in 21 athletic disciplines to be awarded, some observers predict the Soviets could reap a harvest of some 200 medals.

"As at Montreal, the real favorites for the medals at the 22nd Games will come from the U.S.S.R. and the German Democratic Republic," said Sergei Pavlov, the first deputy chairman of the Moscow Organizing Committee.

In 1976, the Soviets took home a total of 47 golds and 125 medals, followed by East Germany's 40 golds and 90 medals and the United States' 34 golds and 94 medals.

The Americans' missing presence will be felt most in swimming, boxing, basketball and track and field. Four years ago, the United States won 12 of 13 men's swimming events, five gold medals in boxing and the basketball title for the eighth time in the nine Olympics the sport has been on the schedule.

Because of the boycott and retirement, nine of the 11 men's world record-holders and seven of the 11 women's world recordholders in swimming will not be at the Olympics. The U.S. women,a major disappointment with only one gold medal at Montreal, were expected to do much better here with the rise of Tracy Caulkins and Cynthia Woodhead to the top of the swimming ranks.

With the Americans gone, East German women should rule the pool. At the recent East German national championships, Ute Geweniger broke the world record in the 100-meter breaststroke and Petra Schneider set world marks in the 200- and 400-meter individual medleys.

Soviet men swimmers, who have never won an Olympic gold medal, are certain to benefit from the boycott. Vladimir Salnikov, world record-holder in the 400-and 800-meter freestyle, leads a Soviet contingent that includes former world record holder Sergei Kopliakov in the 100-and 200-meter sprints and Viktor Kuznetsov in the backstroke.

The Soviet Union, which spoiled the United States' perfect slate in basketball with a controversial, last-second victory at Munich in 1972, rates the favorite this year with an attack centered around hulking 7-foot-5 Vladimir Tkachenko and playmaker Sergei Belov.

Second choice is Yugoslavia, which gained the silver medal at Montreal after losing 95-76 to an American squad well-schooled in team play by North Carolina's Dean Smith.

With the Americans and Japanese on the sidelines, there doesn't seem to be any team capable of challenging the women's basketball team from the Soviet Union, with its 7-foot star, Ulyana Semenova.

The Soviet Union, which won just one silver medal in boxing at Montreal, should improve here, while Cuba is favored to win the most medals in the ring, even though its two-time defending Olympic heavyweight champion, Teofilo Stevenson, might not compete. There was a report that big Cuban knockout artist was beaten in an elimination tournament in Cuba by young Angel Millian.

But the chance to use an Olympic title as a springboard to a pro career won't be available to American boxers this time around. The U.S. gold metal winners from Montreal were Sugar Ray Leonard, Leon Spinks, Michael Spinks, Leo Randolph and Howard Davis.

Karr, ECU's New AD, Already Selling Bucs

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Kenneth Karr will not officially take over as East Carolina's Athletic Director until August 1 but he is already hard at work selling the Pirates.

His sales pitch is one of hope for the future tempered by a realistic view of the present. Karr isn't promising miracles overnight. He is promising hard work.

"Our biggest job is going to be to communicate what we're trying to do to all our fans, friends and alumni in North Carolina," Karr said. "We're going to have to ask them to join hands one more time and help us, through the purchase of tickets, the attending of games and by giving money through the Pirate Club.

"We then are obligated to spend that money to support and build our program. That's the starting point."

Eleven years ago the starting point for Karr was San Diego State. While Karr was at SDSU the football team broke into the top 20. The basketball team has been to the NCAA tournament twice in the last five seasons and the baseball team has averaged 45 wins a season since 1976.

But perhaps Karr's biggest accomplishment — and the one many ECU backers will be most interested in — was getting the Aztecs into the Western Athletic Conference.

Named AD in 1969 at SDSU, Karr began his 10-year stint as the Aztecs were just reaching Division I status. Six years later the Aztecs' football team became an independent, leaving the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. Then, in 1978, SDSU became a member of the WAC.

The move was significant for one main reason — the WAC champ is quaranteed a spot in the Holiday Bowl, held, ironically, in San Diego.

"That solved one of my problems," Karr said. "It gave us a chance to know that we could at least play for the right to play in a bowl game."

A similar problem exists at ECU, where the fans would dearly love to have the Pirates in a conference with a bowl tie-in.

"Ideally, we'd like to have a good conference alignment for all sports, men's and women's. But realistically, it'll probably be somewhat different. A competitive conference would entail men's basketball and baseball and conference play in all the women's sports.

"In five years I'd like to have our basketball program upgraded so it is participating regularly in postseason play. Both basketball and baseball need a conference so they can qualify for postseason play without having to be an at-large team.

"With football, it's going to be hard to find eight teams, which would probably be the minimum you'd need to have a good, competitive football conference, that shared similar philosophies and interests."

For the present, Karr hopes to improve the Pirates' football schedule.

"To me, the prime need we must achieve is to find a way to make it financially sound for other teams to play us," Karr said. "I would like to continue the competition within the state with the (ACC) schools ECU has played

ECU Splits Pair

One good turn deserves another.

That's the way it turned out after the East Carolina Pirates and the Camels of Campbell College squared off in a North Carolina Summer League Baseball doubleheader at Harrington Field last night.

The Pirates, enjoying their first day as league leaders thanks to a 6-3 Campbell win over Louisburg Friday night, greeted their visitors with an 11-9 victory in the first game of the twinbill. Campbell returned the favor in the second game, shutting the Pirates out for the first time this summer, 9-0, behind the four-hit pitching of ace hurler Dan Crewes.

The split leaves the Pirates with a 15-7 slate, one-half game ahead of the Louisburg. ECU plays the first of what Coach Gary Overton calls a "crucial" two games tonight as the locals travel to Louisburg before entertaining the same Hurricanes Monday night.

"We're playing as hard now as we have all season," Overton said after the final out of the second game. "We have to. In the first game, we hit the ball well and put pressure on them offensively. In the second game, Crewes made the difference. He's their ace, and he did a fine job.

"These next two games are crucial and we are going to have to keep playing as hard as we can," he added.

The Pirates were able to muster only four hits off of Crewes in the finale of the two-game set last night as the crafty righthander held ECU scoreless. He struck out one and walked two, relying on his teammates to make the majority of the putouts.

After allowing two hits in the first inning, the Campbell hurler yielded a third-inning single and a seventh-inning single and did not allow a runner past second base.

The Camels, meanwhile, tallied four runs in the third, two in the fifth, one in the sixth and two more in the seventh. The visitors connected for six doubles and one triple in the seven-inning affair to back the pitching of Crewes.

In their four-run third, the Camels collected five hits while chasing Pirate starter and loser Mike Williams from the mound. Tim Handy singled, moved to second on Wayne Dale's sacrifice bunt and advanced to third on John Baldwin's hit before Herbie Williams brought Hardy home with a double. After an out, Tim Montgamery sliced another double, bringing home both Dale and Baldwin. Kevin Barger followed with the fifth hit of the inning to knock home Williams and drive the ECU pitcher Mike Williams off the mound.

Coach Cal Koonce's unit used two more doubles to record a pair of runs in the fifth. Montgamery doubled and scored on Barger's single. Ken May hit into a fielder's choice, on which Barger was out at second, before scoring on Ron Brooks' two-bagger.

Back-to-back doubles in the sixth scored another Camel run when Kirk Pollard crossed home on Bob Spicer's double.

The visitor's finished the game's scoring in the seventh with two runs, again using an extra base hit. May led off with a triple and walked home on one of two wild pitches by Ben Wilson, who came on in relief of Williams.

In the opener of the doubleheader, Overton's team used a four-run fifth and a six-run sixth to assure themselves of at least one more day at the top of the standings.

Campbell scored first when Williams tripled and scored on Spicer's base rap in the first.

The Camels added another run in the second when Dale singled, moved to second on a sacrifice bunt and scored on Mike Sage's error.

Ron Brooks' three-run double in the third inning gave the Camels a four-run cushion. Williams' and Spicer singled and both advnaced one base on Barger's sacrifice before Montgamery walked to load the bases. Williams was out at home on Dale's fielder's choice before Brooks smashed a Charlie Smith fastball into the gap between left and centerfield, clearing the bases.

The Pirates used two hits and a pair of errors in the fifth to knot the score. Robert Wells and Mike Sorrell walked and Robinette singled to load the bases. After one out, Wells scored when John Hallow's grounder was booted, moving Sorrell to third and Robinette to second. Sage then slapped a two-run double, scoring Sorrell and Robinette. Centerfielder Williams then misjudged Smith's fly ball, enabling

Top Tennis Players May Boycott U.S. Open

BOSTON (AP) — All but five of the top 100 tennis players in the world may boycott next month's U.S. Open in New York because officials plan to stage the tournament without super referees, Harold Solomon, president of the Association of Tennis Professionals, said Saturday.

Solomon, ranked sixth in the world, said players are upset because the Men's International Professional Tennis Council decided to do away with super referees for the French Open, Wimbledon and U.S. Open.

This is the second year super referees have been used and Solomon said the system, agreed to by the players at the beginning of this year, has worked well.

"It provides for an arbitrary referee who has the final say. Not an Italian for the Italian Open, a Frenchman for the French Open and an American for the U.S. Open," he said.

"It's worked completely in the past and there have been great improvements in officiating."

Solomon said the pro council changed its rule after the French Open. In that tournament, he added, the head of the French tennis federation overruled super referees and allowed Guillermo Vilas more time to recover from illness in his match with Manuel Orantes, who eventually defaulted.

"They didn't abide by the rules and they didn't go by the super refs," Solomon said.

There were no super referees at Wimbledon and players agreed there that they would not enter the U.S. Open unless super referees were used, Solomon said.

The top five players in the world, Bjorn Borg, John McEnroe, Jimmy Connors, Vitas Gerulaitis and Vilas have entered the U.S. Open, he added.

"Right now, 80 of the top 100 have not entered and, with withdrawals before the deadline; I think 95 out of the top 100 won't enter," he said. "I don't know if they can have a tournament with the top five and then the next guy is ranked 200th."

Keeps The Lead

Bill Kratzert reacts after almost sinking a chip shot for an eagle on the 16th hole during the third round of the Greater Milwaukee Open Saturday. Kratzert got a birdie on the hole and finished the round with a 67. He has a 54-hole scored of 200, 16-under-par, and a one-stroke lead. See story page B-1. (AP Laserphoto)

3 Area Coaches In East-West Games

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Later this month, when the annual East-West All-Star game is played in Greensboro, Pitt County will be quite well represented.

The head coaches for the East football and basketball teams will both be from Pitt County, Rose High School's Dave Bumgarner, and D.H. Conley's Shelley Marsh, respectively, and the girls' assistant coach for the East will be Farmville Central's Hilda Worthington.

For each of them, it will be their first coaching duties in the annual affair, which is the only all-star game for the cagers, and the more prominent one for football.

The football game is scheduled for July 31, and Bumgarner and his staff will report on July 23, welcoming in the players on the next day.

A graduate of East Carolina University, Bumgarner has served as an assistant coach on both the North-South game (played in Greenville) and the Shrine Bowl in Charlotte.

Following his career at East Carolina, where he was a record-setting wide receiver, Bumgarner played a year of professional ball before beginning his coaching career at Edenton Holmes. After two years at that school, he moved to Greenville, joining the Rose staff in 1968. He became head football coach in 1971, and in the past nine seasons, has amassed a 58-24-2 record. His 1975 team won the State 4-A title, and this past season's team was the runner-up for that title. His teams have won or shared in four Division I championships over his career.

While Bumgarner uses the wishbone offense in Greenville, he will not employ it during the all-star game, using the veer and power-I formations instead.

"We want to have a more wide-open approach to this game," Bumgarner said. "We want to get outside quick and we want to be able to pass more. I think an all-star game should be as wide-open as it can be."

Bumgarner's offensive assistant will be Bing Mitchell, who will switch from Bertie to Washington this fall, and he will handle most of the work in getting the offense ready, using the system he used during regular season. Bob Lewis of East Bladen will handle the defensive duty. "I'll coordinate things and work with the specialty teams," Bumgarner said.

The team will have 30 players to work with and Bumgarner feels that this is a good number. "We want to get everybody into the action, and more than 30 would be too many," he pointed out.

Since the backs will be using the veer and I, the selections were made with this in mind, he added.

Bumgarner said that he wanted the game to be fun for everyone, but at the same time, he wantsto win. "The West, I believe, holds an edge in the series and has won two or three of the last few games. But I'm not going to be conservative just to try for a win; I want it to be fun."

The East team should have good talent, since at least 24 of the group has signed college scholarships.

Bumgarner will also be coaching three area players, too. From Rose, he will take along Ron Butler, signed with UCLA, and Ted King, signed by East Carolina. Donald Reid, also signed with ECU, will represent Farmville Central High School in the game.

Farmville Central's Hilda Worthington is a native of Calhoon, Ga., and received her undergratuate degree from East Carolina University. She holds a masters' degree from the University of Tennessee.

Following her college work, she taught at Lynchburg Women's College and at Rose High School prior to joining the Farmville Central staff. Her coaching career began there eight years ago.

As an undergraduate and high school participant, her sports activity was confined to intramural programs, and softball on a non-scholastic basis. "We just didn't have intercollegiate or interscholastic sports for girls when I was coming along," she explained.

Worthington admits that she feels quite honored to be chosen to serve as an assistant coach in the All-Star game. "To be chosen by your fellow coaches is an honor, especially since I haven't been coaching that long."

She noted that the head coach is usually from the 4-A ranks, and has been a male through the short history of the girls' game, which began only a few years ago. The principal assistant has usually been from the 3-A ranks.

Asked if she thought that it was time for a woman to be the head coach for the game—since it is played by female athletes—Worthington declined. "I don't want to get into the sex thing," she said. "I think that it will come. The head coach will be a woman in the future. These things will come in time, and I'm not going to try to be a women's libber about it. The men have done a pretty good job so far with the girls' game."

Worthington said she was not sure just what her duties would be in the game as yet. "I guess that will be up to the head coach (Eddie Summerlin of Wilson Fike)," she added.

Worthington reports to Greensboro on July 24, with the players reporting on the next day. The game is set for Tuesday, July 29.

Like the others, the honor of coaching in the All-Star game will also be a first for Conley's Shelly Marsh, who will head the East Boys' team.

A native of Bonlee, Marsh holds both a bachelors and masters from North Carolina A&T University.

He has been in coaching for 15 years, serving all his time in the Pitt County system. He served for the first few years at W.H. Robinson High School in Winterville, then moved on to become head basketball coach at D.H. Conley when the county consolidated its schools.

During his tenure as a head coach, he has won six conference championships—three in the old black Pitt County Conference, and three in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

A number of his players have gone on to college careers. "I guess the one who has gone the furtherest is Melvin Williams, currently playing with the Canadian Athletes In Action team. He was offered a look after this season with the NBA, but he had another year to go

Holmes To Defend Title Vs. Ali

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Holmes will defend his World Boxing Council heavyweight championship against ex-champ Muhammad Ali at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas in either late September or early October, promoter Don King announced Saturday.

King said a press conference announcing details would be held next week.

Holmes and Ali originally were scheduled to fight in Rio de Janeiro this month and then there was talk of the bout being held in Cairo in the fall. But King said that Ali requested that the bout be held in the United States and Las Vegas, site of many championship bouts, was selected.

Ironically, Holmes and Ali originally had been scheduled to fight in Rio on Saturday, the same day that King announced the new site for their bout.

Search For Reaves Continues

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — As the police search for reserve quarterback John Reaves continues, his Minnesota Vikings teammates say they're surprised by reports of his bizarre behavior.

At the same time, they acknowledged there is a lot of pressure in professional sports and that Reaves, as a talented benchwarmer on a National Football League team, was a likely person to feel it.

Reaves has been the object of a police search since a circuit court judge in Tampa, Fla., on Wednesday ordered him committed to a mental health center.

In his order, Circuit Judge Benjamin C. Sidwell wrote that Reaves "appears to be mentally ill, and because of such illness is likely to physically injure himself or others unless immediately detained..."

Reaves' wife, Patti, says her husband has been depressed about his football career and has a drinking problem. She disputes sworn affidavits that Reaves, apparently under the influence of drugs, has been violent.

"It sounds real strange," Viking wide receiver Ahmad Rashad said Friday of the reports about Reaves. "But there is a lot of pressure in pro sports. Maybe some of it got to him.

Hope Retains Championship

WEMBLEY, Engand (AP) — Maurice Hope of Britain retained his World Boxing Council super welterweight title by stopping former champion Rocky Mattioli of Italy in the 11th round at Wembley Conference Center Saturday night.

Antigua-born Hope was making his second defense of the title which he won from ItalianAustralian Mattioli in San Remo, Italy, 16 months ago.

Hope, inactive for 10 months after undergoing an eye operation, started slowly but bombarded Mattioli from the eighth round on.

American referee Arthur Mercante jumped in to save Mattioli from further punishment as Hope pummeled the challenger from all angles.

Mattioli, born in Italy but brought up in Australia, previously had been stopped only twice in more than 60 professional contests.

He broke his right arm in the first round of his previous meeting with Hope and had claimed he would be a clear winner in the rematch.

Rossman Wins By Decision

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Former light-heavyweight champion Mike Rossman started on a last-ditch comeback attempt Saturday with a 10-round unanimous decision over Don Addison.

Although he showed the effect of a 10-month layoff, the 24-year-old Rossman, of Turnersville, N.J., lived up to his old reputation as the "Jewish Bomber" by pounding Addison with tough blows to the head and body.

But Rossman took almost as many hard shots as he handed out, allowing the less experienced Addison to score with crisp uppercuts and combinations to the head and body.

"I was surprised, the guy was really strong," Rossman said of Addison. "When a man's in shape, he can really take a lot of punishment. They all come in tough to fight Mike Rossman."

Rossman upped his record to 37-6-3, including 23 knockouts. The fight with Addison clearly was a crucial one for the young boxer's faltering career.

"I was worried about the layoff," he said. "I just wanted to go 10 rounds. I was happy to go 10."

Addison, 24, of Waterbury, Conn., now has a 10-5-2 record with two knockouts.

Addison opened a small cut over Rossman's right eye in the first round, but it caused no problem for the former champ. Both had the same strategy, working inside with short, powerful blows.

Alcott's 68 Leads Open

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Amy Alcott fired a torrid 3-under-par 68 Saturday, bringing her 54-hole score to 208 — five strokes below par — after the third round of the U.S. Women's Open golf championship.

The 208 — a record for 54 holes at a U.S. Women's Open — left her eight strokes ahead of Hollis Stacy, a two-time Open winner who had mounted a charge of her own Saturday, shooting a 1-under 70.

Temperatures that soared to 102 degrees bothered the 60-player field as the women toured the par-71, 6,229-yard Richland Country Club course in this 72-hole, $140,000 event.

The opening day field of 150 had been trimmed at the midway point Friday to those players who carded 36-hole scores of 153 or lower.

Alcott shared the opening day lead with Barbara Moxness, but had it all to herself after Friday's second round when Moxness developed trouble on the putting green.

The personable 24-year-old brunette from Santa Monica, Calif., started the day four strokes ahead of Moxness, Donna Caponi-Young and Penny Pulz.

When it was over, Moxness and Caponi-Young each had dropped 11 strokes back while Pulz fell off the leader board, turning in a 77 for a 221.

Despite a wide lead, Alcott told reporters after returning to the clubhouse that she's not a good hot-weather player.

"My tempo gets all messed up," she said. "My heart pumps so fast my swing goes out of kilter. But you try to keep it under wraps and play with what you have."

Looking toward Sunday's final round, Alcott said she wasn't worried about anybody else's score.

"I'm not thinking of people chasing me. I'm out there playing just for me."

Stacy, who had two consecutive bogies on the back nine, recovered her concentration and still managed to post a sub-par round. She blamed the heat for some of her problems.

"I think I lost my concentration because I felt so hot," the 26-year-old from Savannah, Ga., said. "I was so busy trying to get cool again that I think it affected me down there."

Kratzert Still Atop GMO

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Bill Kratzert, a consistent money-winner on the PGA tour, maintained a 1-stroke lead Saturday in the Greater Milwaukee Open with another par-shattering round of 67 for a 54-hole total of 200, 16-under par.

Kratzert, son of a Fort Wayne, Ind., golf pro, is seeking his first tour victory since taking the Greater Hartford Open in 1977. Despite a drought of victory, however, he has had four straight $100,000 money-winning years.

Howard Twitty, missing only one green and planting his approaches near the pin most of the way, carded a 66. He had an eagle 3 at the 12th hole and birdies on 17 and 18 with putts of 35 and four feet. His round left him at 201 with a 2-stroke edge in second place as par 72 took a licking in cool, misty weather over the 7,010-yard Tuckaway Country Club course.

The surprise of the third round was pulled by little-known Dana Quigley, the 1974 Rhode Island Open winner who has done little in three years on the Professional Golfers' tour because of a painful elbow that he injured as a 14-year-old playing basketball.

Quigley, 33, posted a 65 after scoring birdies on four of the first six holes on putts ranging from three to 25 feet.

"I had only 25 putts, hit 13 greens and kept popping aspirin to relieve the pain that always seems to be in my elbow," Quigley said. "It was the best putting round in my life."

Quigley said he putts cross-handed and uses a baseball grip. Tied with him in third place at 203 was Mark Lye, who also had a sensational day with the irons that left him with five birdie putts of six feet or less on the backside for a 31 and a 66 round.

Colorful ChiChi Rodriguez bogeyed the last hole but rounded out a 68 to be alone in fifth place at 204.

The par wreckers are so bunched together that the pursuit for the $36,000 first prize should resemble the charge of the light brigade Sunday. In all, 43 of the 71 players who made the second-round cut were 6-under or better, and 12 were within six strokes of the lead.

Johnny Miller, with a 70, was grouped at 205 with Jim Dent, who had a 67; George Cadle, 66, and first-round leader Ron Streck, who shot 71.

Oberkfell's 12th-Inning Triple 'Drops' Mets, 8-6

NEW YORK (AP) — Ken Oberkfell of the St. Louis Cardinals, the hitter, knew the ball should have been caught. Lee Mazzilli of the New York Mets, the fielder, knew it should have been caught.

But Oberkfell's 12th-inning drive to left-centerfield wasn't caught Saturday, and that helped lead to an 8-6 Cardinals victory.

Oberkfell was more than halfway to first base when he saw Mazzilli coming in on the ball.

"I knew he wasn't going to catch it coming in. I hit it real hard, but he played it into a hit," said Oberkfell, who ended up with a triple for his third hit and a game-winning RBI after the ball went over Mazzilli's head. The hit scored Terry Kennedy with the run that snapped a 6-6 tie.

The Cardinals overcame a 6-1 Met lead, taking advantage of second baseman Doug Flynn's first error in 40 games. They tied the score with two unearned runs in the ninth, then won the game on Mazzilli's judgment error in the 12th.

"I should have caught the ball," said Mazzilli. "I started in on the ball, then slipped when I tried to go back."

After the Cardinals' 18th victory in the 31 games since he took over as manager, St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said, "This was a typical Cardinal game. We can't win just with our hitting. We won this game with our relief pitching."

"When I took over, I decided to use the bullpen. Guys like John Urrea, Kim Seaman and John Littlefield have got to pitch — and they have done well."

Littlefield, 4-2, the fifth St. Louis pitcher, worked four scoreless innings. For the Mets, their fourth pitcher, Ed Glynn, 3-2, took the loss.

The Cards, behind 6-4 in the top of the ninth inning, tied it on a single, a triple and a sacrifice fly.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bob Boone's one-out, ninth-inning single scored Garry Maddox and gave the Philadelphia Phillies a 5-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday night.

Maddox led off the inning with a single off Kent Tekulve, 5-5. Manny Trillo followed with his third single of the game, Maddox stopping at second. The runners advanced on a sacrifice bunt by Larry Bowa and Boone followed with his hit.

Kevin Saucier, 4-3, was the winner.

HOUSTON (AP) — Jose Cruz drove in three runs and Rafael Landestoy scored three times to lead the Houston Astros to a 9-5 victory over the Atlanta Braves Saturday night.

Cruz increased his season RBI total to 51 with two doubles and a single while Landestoy went 3-for-4 as the Astros won only their third game in July.

Winner Joe Niekro, 10-7, scattered 12 hits, walked five and struck out two before needing Dave Smith's last-out relief help.

Houston touched loser Larry McWilliams, 5-6, for two runs in the first on Cruz's two-run double. The Astros increased their lead to 5-0 in the second, as Cruz singled home one run and Cesar Cedeno knocked in two more with a triple.

Atlanta cut the Houston margin to 5-1 in the third when relief pitcher Preston Hanna led off with a triple and scored on Chris Chambliss' sacrifice fly.

Houston added single runs in the third and fourth. Enos Cabell led off the third with a single, took second on a fielder's choice and scored on Luis Pujols' single. Cabell scored again in the fourth, reaching on a fielder's choice, stealing second and coming in on Jeff Leonard's single.

Houston added two runs in the fifth whne Dave Bergman drove in Landestoy and Terry Puhl with a single.

MONTREAL (AP) — Ellis Valentine and Gary Carter drove in three runs apiece to support the eight-hit pitching of Scott Sanderson as the Montreal Expos blasted the Chicago Cubs 10-2 in the first game of a rain-delayed National League doubleheader Saturday.

Sanderson, 8-5, walked one batter and struck out seven on the way to his fourth complete game of the season.

He allowed the first run in the third inning as Cubs starter Rick Reuschel, 5-9, doubled, moved to third on an infield out, and came home on a wild pitch. In the eighth, Steve Dillard hit his second home run of the season to account for the Cubs second run.

Decker Continues Record Run

Decker's smashing performance of 4 minutes, 1.17 seconds., was the highlight of the two-day competition for the U.S. Olympic team, which has been denied an oportunity to participate at the Summer Games in Moscow. In the Stuttgart session, the first of seven international meets scheduled for the boycotting Americans, the U.S. team won 14 of 31 final events to top the entries from among 25 countries.1

Five other victories were produced Saturday.

Decker, 21, obliterated the American 1500-meter mark of 4:02.1 set by Jan Merrill at the 1976 Olympics in Montreal.

For the disappointed and somewhat bitter Americans, this current trip, which continues in London Sunday, Oslo on Tuesday and Philadelphia on Wednesday and Thursday, this is their Olympics.

"I felt I had a lot left at the finish and if I had been challenged I felt I could respond," added Decker, who has been plagued by injuries in recent years and underwent an operation a couple of years ago to repair shin damage.

Injuries also have hampered her this year, but when healthy she has been devastating.

Decker"s performance was the showcase of the meet that attracted sparse crowds to 80,000-seat Necker Stadium — bad weather was mostly to blame for the small attendance, which never was officially announced.

But other Americans also performed well.

Don Page of Villanova, tuning up for his 800- and 1,500-meter specialities later in the summer, won the 1,000 in 2:19.00. James Butler of Oklahoma State University continued his surprising string of success in the 200, winning in 20.65.

Tom Hintnaus of the University of Oregon took the pole vault at 18-0½ and Kathy McMillan of Tennessee State University captured the women's long jump at 21-11¾.

Saturday's competition was marred by a controversy over lane assignments in the men's 400.

Shank, Brown In Boys' Game

Greenville Rose' Mark Shank and Wallace Brown were added to this Saturday's Jaycee Boys Home All-Star Football game, it was announced yesterday.

Shank and Brown were originally alternates to the game but joined the South squad when two other athletes were unable to attend. The pair make now three players from the Greenville area to participate in the game, set for 7 p.m. Saturday in Ficklen Stadium. D.H. Conley's Jeffrey Cooper was previously named to the South team.

Shank, a running back, and Brown, a linebacker, helped lead the Rampants to the state 4-A finals this past season. Brown has been all-conference this past two seasons and was a captain on this year's Rose team. Shank was named to the all-conference team this past season.

The players for the game will begin arriving in Greenville Sunday. Practices will be held all week at the Ficklen Stadium practice field at 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

North Carolina Jaycee President John Lowry will be on hand Tuesday for picture day, which will begins at 9:30 in Ficklen. Miss North Carolina, Janet Black, will be on hand for Saturday night's game.

A players' banquet will be held Friday at 6:30 in the American Legion Hut and Saturday at 6:30 a pre-game social will be held at the Pirates' Club Building.

Tickets are on sale now from all Jaycees. The cost is $3 in advance and $3.50 at the gate.

Hallow to score the tying run.

A solo homoer by Brooks in the top of the sixth put the Camels back on top for a while before ECU erupted for six in the bottom of the frame.

Three bases on balls, two hits and an error aided ECU's six-run sixth. Wells walked and was safe at second on Sorrell's fielder's choice before Robinette singled to load the bases. Hendley, the team's leading hitter, then laced a bases-clearing double. Hallow reached on an error and Sage walked to load the bases. Smith then walked to force in Hendley. Pinch-hitter Mark Wakai then delivered a two-out two-run single to drive home Sage and Smith with what turned out to be the winning and insurance runs.

Montgamery's three-run homer in the top of the seventh put a scare into the home troops, but Brian Felton set down the final two batters to preserve the win.

Three To Coach...

with the Athletes on his contract, and decided to stay with them," Marsh said. Williams played his college ball at Kings College and N.C. Central.

"I guess my best known player is Al Tyson," Marsh said. Tyson, a highly sought recruit, originally enrolled at East Carolina University, but transfered to Virginia Commonwealth after his freshman season. He will be eligible there after the end of the first semester this year.

Several other players have gone on to play on the college level, and several others are currently in the coaching ranks.

In the last few years, the East has dominated the All-Star game, and Marsh doesn't want to see that ended—at least not this year. "It's going to be very difficult to keep it going," Marsh said. "The West has a tremendous advantage in height. They've got a 6-9 and a 6-11, and our tallest is (Anthony) Teachey (Goldsboro) at 6-8.

"What I'm hoping is that we'll be quicker. We're going to have to rely on our speed and quickness."

The only player from the immediate area picked for the team is Rose High School Donald House. "I wanted to have someone from the area, and I thought he was about the best. Really, it's one of the few times that I haven't had a player of my own I thought deserved it."

Birds' Stone Hurls 13th Win

BALTIMORE (AP) — Right-hander Steve Stone, with relief help from Tippy Martinez and Tim Stoddard, won his 11th consecutive game as the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Kansas City Royals 3-1 Saturday night.

John Lowenstein hit his first home run of the season in the second inning off Renie Martin, 8-6, and Eddie Murray's two-run double gave Baltimore a 3-0 lead in the sixth. Murray, 0-for-21 before the All-Star break, has eight RBI in his last three games.

Stone, 13-3, allowed three hits over seven innings. The right-hander, who will be 33 Monday, struck out six batters in the first four innings but also walked six.

He issued three consecutive two-out walks in the sixth and then retired Amos Otis on a fly ball to left field. Then Clint Hurdle drew Kansas City's sixth walk to open the seventh and scored on a two-out triple by Willie Wilson.

Stone, who retired nine consecutive batters Tuesday night as the American League starter in the All-Star game, has not lost since May 5. He has a 17-2 record at Memorial Stadium since joining the Orioles at the start of last season.

Boston 9
Detroit 3

BOSTON (AP) — Dwight Evans collected four straight hits, including a three-run homer and an RBI double, and Carlton Fisk lined a two-run shot Saturday night, powering the Boston Red Sox to a 9-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers behind the six-hit pitching of rookie southpaw John Tudor.

Fisk became the first Boston player to homer at home in 12 games since June 16 when he lined his 11th with two out in the third off Detroit starter Dan Petry, 5-5.

Detroit, which got second-inning homers from John Wockenfuss and Tom Brookens, pulled into a 3-3 tie with an unearned run in the fourth before the Red Sox broke open the game with five runs in the fifth.

With one out Fred Lynn singled and took second as Tony Perez grounded to third. Fisk was walked intentionally, but Petry then walked Butch Hobson to load the bases.

Jim Dwyer lined a two-run, tie-breaking single and Evans followed with his sixth homer, a towering drive over the screen atop the left field wall.

Evans drove in a fourth run with his fourth hit, a double off the left field wall after Jim Dwyer walked with two out in the seventh.

TORONTO (AP) — Milwaukee Brewers exploded for seven runs in the second inning and Bill Travers pitched a six-hitter en route to a 9-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Saturday.

With one out in the second, Toronto starter Balor Moore, 1-1, normally a reliever, walked Ben Oglive and Sixto Lezcano singled. Don Money's double scored Oglivie and Mark Brouhard's grounder to third scored Lezcano when Bob Davis couldn't handle the throw to the plate.

Jim Gantner's single made it 3-0, and Charlie Moore's single loaded the bases and brought on Tom Buskey. Robin Yount gretted him with a single to short that scored Brouhard when Gantner was called safe on a close play at third.

Cecil Cooper then delivered a two-run single and Gorman Thomas added an RBI single to chase Buskey. Paul Mirabella came on to induce Oglivie to hit into a double play to end the inning. Mirabella allowed just one hit over the next four innings.

Travers, 9-3, was the winner.

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Dave Edwards slugged a two-run homer and doubled to spark another run as the Minnesota Twins defeated the Seattle Mariners 8-3 Saturday night.

Geoff Zahn, 8-10, was the winner with relief help from Doug Corbett in the ninth, when the Mariners scored three runs, two of them on Tom Paciorek's double.

Floyd Bannister, 6-7, gave up six Twins' runs and was pulled when Edwards hit his second homer of the season in the sixth inning.

New York 8
Chicago 0

CHICAGO (AP) — New York's Tommy John tossed a seven-hitter, shut out Chicago for the third time this season and recorded his 13th victory Saturday night, riding an 18-hit Yankees attack to an 8-0 triumph over the White Sox.

The shutout was John's fifth overall, tops in the American League. The Yankees left-hander defeated the Sox 6-0 on a two-hitter April 16, and beat them 1-0 with a six-hitter in New York 11 days later.

He was supported by RBI singles from five Yankee batters — four of them in the Yankees' seven-run ninth. Eric Soderholm delivered a first-inning run, then Reggie Jackson, Rick Cerrone, Ruppert Jones and Bucky Dent had RBI singles in the ninth before Willie Randolph added a three-run triple.

Soderholm's first-inning single off Ross Baumgarten, 2-6, drove in Lou Piniella, who had reached base on a fielder's choice and moved to third on Bob Watson's single. Piniella also scored in the ninth, singling and scoring on singles by Watson and Jackson.

In Baumgarten's last 12 starts, the White Sox have scored more than one run for him only once.

John, 13-3, walked two and struck out six. He worked out of situations with runners in scoring position in the third and sixth innings.

Todd Cruz singled to open the Chicago third and was sacrificed to second, but John struck out the next two batters to end the threat.

Earnhardt Holds Off Cale To Take Nashville 420

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — NASCAR points leader Dale Earnhardt had Cale Yarborough on his back bumper for the final 30 laps, but held on Saturday night to win the blistering Nashville 420 Grand National Stockcar Race.

Benny Parsons was third, with Darrell Waltrip fourth and Richard Petty fifth in the $95,500 race at the Nashville International Raceway.

Nashville's 101 degree heat plagued the drivers, with Petty collapsing on the 347th lap and Harry Gant taking his place. Gant earlier drove in relief for Don Sprouse until his car experienced engine trouble. Gant said the temperature in Petty's car was 150 degrees.

The victory was Earnhardt's first Grand National checkered flag at Nashville after being a popular late-model sportsman competitor at the track in the late 1970s. His average speed was 93.811 mph.

Describing the race, Earnhardt said, "Cale kind of gave me a fit at the end, but it was good race for us. I thought it was going to be bad hot at first, but it seemed the longer I ran, the cooler it got."

Allison finished sixth. Sterling Marlin was seventh. Jody Ridley was eighth while Buddy Arrington placed ninth and Richard Childress was tenth.

The great tennis player, Ken Rosewall, won every major tournament except Wimbledon, where he was beaten four times in the finals.

Kennedy Wins L.L. Awards

Mike Kennedy was voted Farmville Little League's MVP and and also received the Hap Nicola Sportsmanship Award Saturday night.

The MVP award was voted on by the players while the Hap Nicola award was made by the coaches.

Karr Already Selling...

in the past. In five years I'd like to have the football program with a solid Division I schedule and with 35,000 attending the home games."

Karr, however, is aware of the problems the Pirates continue to face in scheduling the Big Four schools.

"When one of those schools says its fiscally impossible for them to play us, that's an argument you can't deny," Karr said. "Of course there are other arguments. It's a matter of prestige a lot of times, with them saying what do we have to gain by playing you.

"It's a valid approach, but hopefully as ECU continues to grow and continues to win it will become far less of a risk for them to be in good competition with us."

But to continue to win ECU must grow and growth requires money — something ECU has not had a lot of in the past.

"We must get more money from the private sector," Karr said. "If we are to achieve the fiscal soundness and the growth in the program I feel the friends, fans and alumni of East Carolina want, we're going to need this."

A native of Seymour, Illinois, Otis Kenneth Karr Jr. earned his B.S. from Illinois State University and his M.S. and Ph.D. from the University of Illinois at Urbana. His doctorate is in physical education with a minor in education.

He was head football caoch a Eastern Montana College from 1958-1964 before moving on to Wake Forest, where he was an assistant coach until 1967. From there he had a two-year teaching stay at Arizona before taking the AD job at San Diego State in 1969.

Karr stepped down from the AD job in 1979 to become chairman of the Department of Athletics before coming to Eastern North Carolina, where he has parents now live.

"My sister lives in Goldsboro and about a year ago I opted to move my parents to Goldsboro. So, the family aspect made this job attractive.

"Beyond that, I'd been out of athletic administration for about 15-to-18 months, of my own choosing, and really missed it. So it was a combination of factors — also one of my coleagues put my name in the hooper."

Over sixty candidates applied for the AD job at ECU following the announced resignation of Bill Cain in early May. The field was narrowed to three, from which Karr was chosen.

"It's a challenge," Karr said late Friday afternoon near the end of another in a long string of interviews. "I've been afforded the opportunity, if we can become better organized, to help ECU reach its goals. It's an interesting problem. Whether or not I'm successful will depend on a lot of factors."

Jones, King To Meet In Finals

John Hill upset second-seeded Tom Sayetta only to beaten by Walter Jones later Saturday afternoon as the Greenville Tennis Tournament advanced to its final rounds.

Playing in the Men's 35's match, Hill defeated Sayetta 6-4, 1-6, 7-6 (5-3) but then fell to Jones later in the day 6-1, 6-1 in one semifinal match. Top-seeded Al King blanked Larry Graham 6-0, 6-0 in the other semifinal. The two will meet today in the finals.

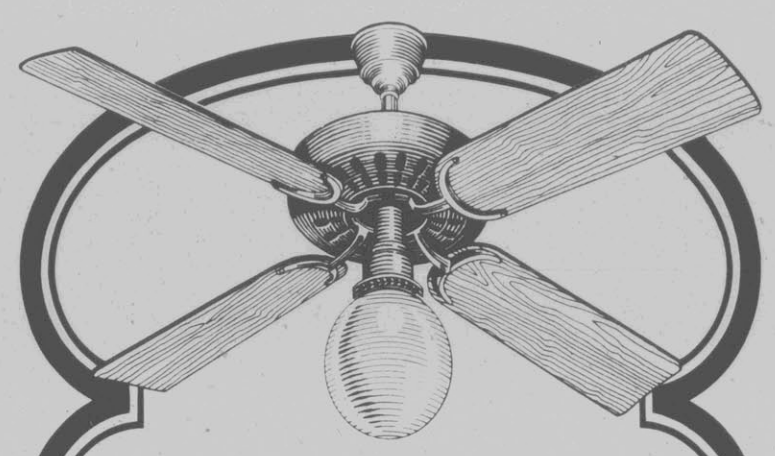
In women's play, #1 seeded Carlie Wille advanced to the finals with a 6-2, 6-3 victory over Nancy Powell while #2 seeded Francis Cain fought off Anne Sayetta 7-5, 6-1.

First-seeded Randy Baily and second-seeded John Eatman rolled past two Rose High stars in the Men's Open division semifinals. Baily whipped Larry Talbert 6-0, 6-1 and Eatman defeated Jeff Quin 6-0, 6-2.

In the men's novice division, J. Ritzen downed Chuck Ball 6-2, 6-3 and Steve Creech dropped Tim Dale 6-2, 6-0, to advance to today's finals.

The King-Jones and Wille-Cain finals will be played today at 4:30 at the River Birch Tennis Center. The men's novice finals between Bailey and Eatman will be held Monday at 5 p.m.

John McGraw managed in the major leagues for 33 years and his teams won 2,840 games.



Hunter. The Original Olde Tyme Ceiling Fan.

$149.95 UP

Air movement, as well as temperature, determine your comfort level. So a room with a Hunter ceiling fan at 78° has the cool comfort of a room at 70°. Set your air conditioner thermostat up 8° and save, because a Hunter runs on the power for one lightbulb. In winter, a Hunter recirculates hot air that rises to the ceiling and cuts heating costs. But all ceiling fans aren't alike. Hunter is the original. Since 1886. Cast iron housing. Permanent oil reservoir. Real wood blades. No short cuts. No cheap substitutes. Choice of models and finishes makes Hunter fit any decor.

"Hunter, the oldest name in the business—what you get that your great grandfather didn't is a five year warranty and the assurance that comes with a reputation stretching back to 1886. Hunter is still the industry standard."

"Hunter confidently predicts a fan life of well over 40 years. Less expensive fans have large lightweight motor cases with small capacitor motors inside—the extra weight of solid cast pancake cases contributes to smooth operation, stability, and long life expectancy."

ROCKY MOUNT — Mike Sorrell and John Hallow accounted for seven runs in a nine run, third-inning explosion Friday night, and East Carolina rolled to a 21-7 victory over North Carolina Wesleyan in Collegiate Summer League Baseball action.

The win, coupled with Lousiburg's 6-3 loss to Campbell Friday night, left ECU atop the conference. ECU was 14-6 going into last night's doubleheader with Campbell. Louisburg is 15-8.

After trailing 4-3 going into the top of the third, the visiting Pirates reached two Wesleyan pitchers for a three-run shot by Hallow and a grand slam by Sorrell. Mike Sage also hit a grand-slam home run in the sixth inning, his third of the summer season.

Kelly Robinette singled to lead off the third before Todd Hendley reached on an error. Hallow, who was two-for-five on the night, then hit his three-run blast, giving ECU the lead for good.

Sage followed with a double and, after Charlie Smith walked and Pete Persico reached on a fielder's choice, the Pirates had the bases loaded. Jay Carrway's single scored Sage and when Robert Wells walked Smith came home. Moments later, Sorrell unleashed his grand slam, giving the Pirates a 12-4 lead.

Wesleyan added a single run in both the bottom of the third and fourth. ECU, meanwhile, scored once in the top of the fourth, when Persico singled home Sage, who had walked earlier, and four times in the fifth and sixth.

In the fifth, Robinette singled, Hendley doubled and Hallow walked to load the bases. Smith and Persico received back-to-back walks to score Robinette and Hendley. Carraway then singled Hallow home before Wells' reached on a fielder's choice, which scored Smith and ECU led, 17-7.

In the sixth, Robinette singled, moved to third when Hendley and Hallow walked. Sage then ripped his grand slam, his seventh home run and third grand slam of the summer, giving the Pirates their final margin of victory.

With the win, ECU is now 14-6. Bill Wilder recorded the win, his eighth of the season without a loss.

ECU was led in hitting by Sage, who was four-for-five. He knocked in four runs and also scored five. Carraway and Robinette both had three hits for the Pirates while Sorrell and Hallow had two each. Sorrell had four RBIs on the night and Hallow had three.

Greenville's Babe Ruth, Prep Teams Triumph

WASHINGTON — Greenville's Babe Ruth team and its Prep League all-stars are in Washington this weekend and the locals are having things their way. Greenville, sparked by a three-run outburst in the fourth, whipped Washington, 9-3, Friday in the Babe Ruth District Playoffs.

Greenville's prep league club pushed across three runs in the fourth and fifth en route to an easy 11-1 win over Washington Friday night in the District Prep League Tournament.

The Babe Rut squad will face the winner of the Saturday's Pitt County-Washington battle. Greenville's prep league team, undefeated after two games in the double-elimination tournament, will face the winner of Saturday's Washington-Pitt County winner Sunday in Washington.

Washington took a one-run lead after the first inning in the Babe Ruth battle only to see Greenville come back to tie it up with a run in the second and then go ahead with a run in the third. Greenville scored what proved to be the winning run in the fourth, when the locals pushed across three runs.

Troy Hudson tripled to lead off the inning and then, with one gone, was cut down at the plate. Terry Smith reached on the play with a fielder's choice. Curt Evans then doubled home Smith before Billy Godley walked and then scored on Randy Warren's double.

Greenville added two more runs in the fifth and sixth while Washington was scoring once in both innings.

Hudson and Kirkland both had two hits for the winners.

Both clubs scored once in the opening inning but Greenville grabbed the lead for good in the second with a two runs. T. Barrett singled, moved to second on a passed ball, and then went to third on a ground out. D. Kirkland singled home Barrett. Kirkland was out on S. Wall's fielder's choice. Wall subsequently scored on P. Rand's double, giving Greenville a 2-1 lead.

Greenville added two more runs in the third and three runs in the fourth and fifth to win going away.

B. Michel had two hits for Greenville.

Sadri Defeated

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Vijay Amritraj of India scored a surprisingly easy victory over top-seed John Sadri on Saturday to advance to the finals of the Hall of Fame Tennis Championships against Andrew Pattison.

Amritraj, who made returning Sadri's hard service look easy, won 7-6, 6-0. Pattison also had to win a first set tiebreaker to defeat longshot Nick Saviano in Saturday's semifinals, 7-6, 7-5.

Amritraj, who won in Newport in 1976 when he last played here, traded breaks with Sadri in the seventh and eighth games of the first set, then took the tiebreaker 7-1.

Amritraj went on to break Sadri in the second, fourth and sixth games of the second set by repeatedly firing Sadri's bullet-like serves back at him.

"The breaks just went my way," said Amritraj.

He said the grass at center court at the Newport Casino was soft and slowed down Sadri's serve.

"It's like a pistol shot when he hits it, but when it hit the grass it did slow down and give me the right momentum to hit it. Some of the serves I hit back today I normally wouldn't even see," said the 13-year veteran.

"I knew once he got ahead of me (by taking the tiebreaker) it would be tough," Sadri said. "He's a real good frontrunner."

Dick Howser

Yankee Manager Has One Main Attribute: He Wins Games

NEW YORK (AP) — The new manager of the New York Yankees doesn't get involved in one controversy after another like Billy Martin did. He doesn't smoke big cigars or fly into violent rages like Ralph Houk did.

The veins in his neck don't bulge out like Bill Virdon's did when he argues with an umpire, and he doesn't go around calling everyone "Meat," which was Bob Lemon's favorite term of affection.

The new manager played or coached for those four previous Yankee managers but he doesn't seem to have any of their distinctive attributes ... except winning baseball games.

His name, by the way, is Dick Howser and he has managed the Yankees to their best start since 1958 and into first place in the American League East at the All-Star break, a position they have occupied since May 14.

"I told myself to just be Dick Howser, not to try and be like any other manager I've worked for, although I took some things from them. Three years down the line, if I'm still fortunate enough to be here, I'll still be the same."

After two years as a player and a decade as third-base coach, Howser left following the 1978 season to return to his home in Tallahassee and his alma mater, Florida State University, as head coach.

Last year, he was trying to get his team into the College World Series (he didn't). This time, he's shooting for the real thing. And it all came about last October because Billy Martin punched a marshmallow salesman in a Minnesota hotel.

"It was a Saturday morning," Howser recalls. "We were playing Indian River Junior College. I was on the step of the dugout talking to one of the players about a baserunning mistake. The phone rang, one of the players answered and said, 'Hey, Coach, it's George Steinbrenner.' I thought it was a hoax. They were always doing things like that, saying it's Steinbrenner, Lee MacPhail, Billy Martin.

"George asked what was going on, who we were playing. He asked about our football team. Then he said, 'The reason I called ... you've read about the incident with Billy. If we find out that he hit the guy, he won't be the manager of the New York Yankees. Are you interested?'

"I was taken aback a little bit. I said, 'Yeah, it's a possibility, but I don't want to discuss it over the phone.' He said, 'I'll call you tomorrow.' He called me Sunday morning and said Billy was no longer the manager. I told him I was willing to discuss it."

Howser flew to the owner's ranch in Ocala, Fla., where he met with Steinbrenner and Gene Michael, the Yankees' new general manager.

"I got there about 11 a.m. and we talked about the job on and off all day. We talked about a lot of other things, too. I made the decision to accept the job around 5 p.m. There were two reasons — I thought we had a chance to win and because it was the Yankee organization. I don't know in which order, which consideration was ahead of the other."

As a Yankee coach, Howser had several managerial feelers but it never really was in his blood.

"As a third-base coach, you have to think like a manager," he says. "But I never really sat back and said, 'I'd like to take over this club or that club.'

"When I went to George's ranch, I told my wife that I'd be staying at Florida State. There was nothing specific that changed my mind. George was very convincing, Gene Michael was very convincing and the contract was very nice."

Despite a series of injuries to several key players, Howser has been able to keep things on an even keel. The only controversies came when several veterans griped about the way they were being used.

Moore's 5 Singles Leads Milwaukee Past Boston

By The Associated Press

Milwaukee's Charlie Moore found himself going from one end of the batting order to the other and the Brewers' bats went from one extreme to the other against the Boston Red Sox.

Moore, shifted from ninth place to leadoff in the Brewers' lineup, came up with five singles in as many at-bats Friday night. And the Brewers, who had been shut out in three of the last five games and scored only six runs while batting just .179, awoke from their slumber in a 7-6 triumph.

Ben Oglivie drove in four runs with a three-run homer and an RBI single and Cecil Cooper drove in three runs and had three hits in the victory.

A's 6, Angels 2

When the phone rang in the Oakland bullpen, it might have startled the inhabitants. A's starters had gone the route in 11 of the prior 14 games, but when Manager Billy Martin called on Jeff Jones with the bases loaded in the eighth against California, the rookie was ready.

He struck out four of the five batters he faced and held off the Angels to record his third save of the season — and only the fifth for the Oakland relief staff.

White Sox 5, Orioles 4

Wayne Nordhagen drove in three runs and three Chicago pitchers combined on a seven-hitter to pace the White Sox' triumph. Chicago drove Jim Palmer from the mound in defeating the Baltimore star for the first time since June 1, 1977 while Ed Farmer — who followed Rich Dotson and Mike Proly to the mound — recorded his 18th save.

Royals 7, Tigers 3

George Brett, in only his second game back after missing 26 contests with an ankle injury, cracked three doubles — one short of the American League record for one game — to pick up exactly where he left off before the injury.

Rangers 10, Yankees 8

The Rangers, raked for 10 runs in the first inning by New York Thursday night, amassed 18 hits in blasting the Yankees Friday.

Former Yankee Mickey Rivers extended his hitting streak to 20 games with two singles and a triple.

Twins 6, Mariners 3

An inside-the-park homer by Rick Sofield and an outside-the-park homer by Ken Landreaux powered Minnesota past Seattle.

Blue Jays 6, Indians 3

A two-run, fifth-inning homer by Otto Velez delivered the winning runs.

Dodgers' Playpen Doing Man-Size Job - And Howe

By The Associated Press

Because of its youth, the Los Angeles Dodgers' bullpen is kiddingly referred to as a "playpen." But that doesn't mean the relievers aren't doing man-size jobs these days.

"When the manager calls down to the bullpen, he doesn't ask our age," says 22-year-old Steve Howe, a key member of the Dodger Kiddy Corps.

Howe came on to record his eighth save of the season Friday night as the Dodgers beat Houston 3-2 and improved their lead to two games over the Astros in the National League West.

Howe preserved Jerry Reuss' 10th victory in 12 decisions.

Pirates 4, Mets 2

Mike Easler hit his fifth home run of the season against New York — a three-run blast in the third inning — that lifted Pittsburgh over the Mets.

Easler hit his 12th homer of the season following a double by Dave Parker and a walk to John Milner. The homer came off Craig Swan, 5-7, and enabled Bert Blyleven, 3-7, to record his second victory in three decisions against New York with eighth-inning relief help from Grant Jackson and Kent Tekulve.

Phillies 7, Cubs 2

Pete Rose hit three doubles and drove in three runs while Mike Schmidt collected two triples and scored twice, as Philadelphia beat Chicago and tied Montreal for first place in the NL East.

While the Cubs were charged with only one error, a number of erratic fielding plays contributed to starter Lynn McGlothen's sixth loss in 12 decisions and a three-run rally against a pair of relievers in the seventh.

Reds 5, Braves 3

Johnny Bench's two-run homer in the seventh inning and George Foster's two-run blast in the eighth carried Cincinnati over Atlanta.

Bench's 13th homer of the season came after Dan Driessen had singled and stolen second in the seventh inning and was only the fourth Cincinnati hit off Braves starter Doyle Alexander, 7-4.

Cardinals 5, Expos 3

Keith Smith's two-run double capped a four-run rally in the ninth inning that carried St. Louis over Montreal. Trailing 3-1, the Cardinals chased Montreal starter Steve Rogers with their big inning.

Silvio Martinez, 2-3, who came on to relieve starter Pete Vuckovich, in the seventh inning, gained credit for the victory.

Giants 7, Padres 3

Two-run singles by Johnnie LeMaster and Rennie Stennett helped San Francisco beat San Diego.

LeMaster's hit capped a three-run rally in the first inning and Stennett's single gave the Giants a 5-0 rally in the second.

Lopez Faces Muhammad In Title Fight

McAFEE, N.J. (AP) — The last time they met, Matthew Saad Muhammad was Matthew Franklin and Yaqui Lopez was recovering from yet another unsuccessful bid at the light heavyweight championship.

The fight went 11 rounds before it was stopped with Lopez bleeding heavily from cuts. In his next bout, Franklin won the World Boxing Council's version of the championship (in April 1979) and then weeks later changed his name to the Muslim version, Matthew Saad Muhammad.

Sunday, Muhammad and Lopez meet again, this time with Muhammad's title on the line. Lopez, naturally, says things will be different this time. Muhammad said the outcome will be very much the same.

"I will do a lot of things different this time," said Lopez, who will earn $40,000 compared to the champion's reported $150,000. "I stayed in front of him last time. I have to move more, every move will be different."

But in the end, Muhammad said, the result will be similar.

"Nobody," he said, "is taking my title. You got to knock me out to take my title but nobody is going to knock Matthew Saad Muhammad out."

Muhammad, 26-3-2, has defended his title three times while Lopez has been shut out in three previous attempts at the championship.

Nicklaus, Watson, Trevino To Test Muirfield

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP) — The United States' waning domination of international golf will receive a further test next weekend in the oldest and most revered of all the world's championships, the 109th British Open.

About three dozen Americans, including such prime favorites as Jack Nicklaus, Tom Watson and Lee Trevino, are included in the 150-man field that will test — and be tested by — the subtle demands of the Muirfield Golf Links on Scotland's eastern coast.

Spectacular Severiano Ballesteros of Spain is the defending champion. His triumph at Royal Lytham-St. Annes last year, achieved on a remarkable, oft-repeated escape act from potential disaster, touched off a series of non-American victories in the major championships that is unequalled in history and must be regarded as a possible trend.

It was followed by Australian David Graham winning the PGA national championship in the fall of 1979 and Ballesteros' runaway victory in the Masters this spring. And Isao Aoki of Japan very nearly converted his unorthodox but deadly putting style into an upset in the U.S. Open a month ago.

That non-American sweep of four consecutive major titles was averted only by the stirring culmination of Nicklaus' hard-won comeback from the ranks of mediocrity in which he had struggled in discomfort and dismay for two long years.

Nicklaus' record-breaking performance in the American national championship, however, signalled his return to a position of leadership in the game he has ruled so long.

"This gives me the confidence to go ahead and play well for several more years," the 40-year-old Nicklaus said.

It was his fourth U.S. Open triumph. His unmatched collection of 16 major professional titles also includes four PGA championships, five Masters green jackets and three British Open victories.

While he has won fewer British Opens than any of the other majors, it is in this event that he has his best overall record. In addition to three victories, he has finished second an astounding seven times and was third in three others, a total of 13 times in 18 appearances in which he finished third or better. (He also has a fourth-place finish, a fifth and a sixth.)

Those incredible statistics, along with his American Open victory, make him a prime candidate for this ancient title that first was put up for competition in 1860.

"I'm looking forward to it," Nicklaus said. "I feel I'm playing reasonably well, my confidence is up and I enjoy playing Muirfield."

And he enjoys it for good reason. Nicklaus has ranked Muirfield at the top of his favorite courses in the world and took its name for his own course in Ohio. In two previous British Opens at Muirfield, he won (in 1966) and lost by a stroke to Lee Trevino (in 1972) despite a painful back ailment that almost forced him to withdraw.

All those factors combined prompted Britain's legal bookies to make him a co-favorite with Tom Watson at 6-1.

The other betting favorites were Ballesteros 9-1, Trevino and Ben Crenshaw 14-1, Aoki 16-1, Hale Irwin 20-1 and South African Gary Player, who won the first of his three British Open Titles in 1959, at 28-1.

Graham, who has been troubled by a back ailment recently, and Americans Hubert Green, George Burns, Lon Hinkle, Jerry Pate and Larry Nelson were listed at 33-1.

Watson, a two-time British champion, has been the outstanding figure in the game for the past 3½ seasons. This year, he's scored five victories in the United States and tops the American money-winning list with $387,725.

Winterville, Kiwanis Advance In Tournament

Winterville coasted and Kiwanis rallied to keep their hopes alive in the Senior Babe Ruth Double-Elimination Baseball Tournament Friday night.

The wins set up a Saturday night confrontation between the two teams to decide the semifinal winner of the losers' bracket in the six-team tourney.

Winterville pushed across seven first-inning runs and coasted to a 22-2 victory over Ayden-Grifton in the first game while Kiwanis rallied for for six two-out runs in the sixth inning against Greene County to register a 9-4 quarterfinal decision.

Winterville picked up only one hit in the first inning—a leadoff double by Emory Vines — but took advantage of five A-G errors to tally the seven first inning scores.

After his double, Vines moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on a passed ball. Micah Dixon walked, stole second and moved to third on Pony Credle's grounder before scoring on a wild pitch. Sammy Tucker walked and moved to third on a wild pitch before scoring on another.

Mike Edens reached on an error but was nailed at second on Dixon Page's fielder's choice. Page moved to second on a passed ball, to third on another wild pitch and scored when Jeff Cox's grounder to third was booted. After Cox stole second, he scored on Joel Brown's errored grounder to second. Brown then stole second, third and home for the sixth run. Jeff Allen then walked and stole second before scoring on a couple of throwing errors.

Winterville picked up five more runs in the second, two in the fifth, five in the sixth and three in the seventh while Ayden-Grifton managed its two scores in the seventh.

In the second game, Kiwanis entered the sixth behind by a run and exited with a five-run lead, largely due to timely hitting by the Kiwanis players.

Kenny Barnes led off the bottom of the sixth with a single and scored on Jeff Worthington's double. A pair of outs followed the double before Kiwanis went on to score five more runs.

Chris Jones and Brian Dye walked and Danny Woods singled to load the bases. Jones scored on Bobby Hopkins' single and Dye crossed the plate on Mike Mills' hit before Barnes delivered a two-run single to drive home both Woods and Hopkins.

Greene County, after scoring a single run in the third and three in the fourth, put men on second and third with no outs in the top of the seventh but failed to score, thereby eliminating the team from the tournament.

Barnes was a perfect four-for-four at the plate for Kiwanis in leading the winner's attack. Hopkins picked up a pair of hits for the winners. Butch Brown collected three hits for Greene County and he was the only loser to garner more than one hit.

The championship game of the week-long tourney is scheduled for this afternoon with teams and times depending on last night's semifinal action.

Babe Ruth Players Need Hosts In Town

Hosts are still being sought for players to be in Greenville later this week for the State Senior Babe Ruth League Tournament.

According to Bob Dough, chairman of the host families committee, host families for only eight players have been found, and a total of 90 boys will be attending the tournament.

Players, ages 16-18, will arrive on Thursday, and will leave as soon as their team has been eliminated from the double elimination tournament.

Host families are expected to provide sleeping accomodations, meals and transportation to the ball park for practices and games.

Area Golfers Place In Match

KINSTON — Several Brook Valley women were among golfers who placed in the Eastern Women's Golf Tournament at Kinston this week.

Barbara Walker took low gross in the championship flight, carding a 78. Sue Hallow took second low gross at 79.

Tarpon Catch

Billy Stokes of Ayden caught this 68-pound tarpon while float fishing off Emerald Isle. He was using live menhadden on a 40-pound test line when he made the catch. The fish is eligible for a North Carolina Fishing Citation.

WORKING UP A SWEAT — Construction worker Ron Carter of Augusta, Georgia, pauses to wipe sweat from his forearms, as beads of perspiration create a watery covering on his back and shoulders. With temperatures near the 100 degree mark, Ron notes he doesn't have to work too hard to work up an impressive sweat. (AP Laserphoto)

Unearths Relics Of Civil War

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Every Christmas Mike Parker of Roebuck loads up the family — wife Laurie and 2-year-old son Forrest Lee — and heads for Richmond, Va.

There aren't any relatives up there to speak of, just Richmond and Petersburg, a couple of dandy cities to spend time in...if you happen to be a Civil War relic hunter.

And 31-year-old Parker is a Civil War relic hunter.

"In the winter," says Parker, a wholesale roofing salesman, "that part of the country is really beautiful. You get some snow on the ground and it's something to see."

So is Parker's Civil War collection. It's a potpourri of relics from the Gray and Blue war days, from places like Gettysburg, Richmond, Williamsburg, Vicksburg, Shiloh and Chickamauga.

Relics include CSA (Confederate States of America) belt buckles and buttons, Colt 45s, Springfield rifles, cannonballs, canteens and an assortment of shells and shell fragments.

His collection will be one of dozens on display as part of the Third Annual Gray and Blue Arms Accoutrements and Relics Show, presented by the Alabama Gun Collectors Association. The show is set for the Birmingham-Jefferson County Civic Center this weekend.

"I've been a collector for about 12 years," added Parker. "I got started in a serious way when I was in college. Back then it was fairly easy to find belt buckles, bayonets and buttons. Now, with more people into the hobby, it's a little tougher."

Parker's early collecting trips were at Shiloh, Tenn., Vicksburg, Miss., and Gravelly's Spring in north Alabama.

His interest in Civil War relics, however, can be traced back to a family vacation to Vicksburg, a 16-mile battlefield, when he was 12 years old.

"My daddy took us all to Vicksburg on a summer vacation trip," he recalled. "I remember eating a picnic lunch in the park and then taking an old can and scratching around in the dirt. That's how I found my first bullet and, really, how my interest started growing."

Some of Parker's interesting finds over the years include a rare solid cast "Texas Button" at Shiloh and Confederate belt buckles and buttons with the "CSA" engraving.

"Buckles or buttons with 'CSA' on them are actually pretty rare," he said. "Probably one out of every 20 or 30 Confederate soldiers had them. And that's because equipment and uniforms weren't as plentiful as was the case with the North."

"For every hour spent scouring a battlefield or an old Rebel or Yankee camp with a medal detector, "you'll spend four or five hours researching that particular place. Because most all of your battlefields and national parks have been hunted extensively, you've got to study material other than what you'd normally read on a battle site.

"You've got to read books like personal diaries and regimental histories, looking for clues to some old camp or where a skirmish might have taken place. That's when you can turn up some interesting finds.

"It helps if you aren't bored with all that reading," Parker said. "Me, I enjoy reading about the Civil War. I can't get enough of it. A lot of that interest is knowing you had ancestors who fought in the war."

Parker is particularly proud of his wife's great, great grandfather — Gen. Joe Wheeler, a confederate calvary commander.

"I was dating my wife back when I found out Gen. Wheeler was related to her," said Parker, smiling. "I guess that's why I married her. There's a lot of Civil War history in our family tree.

25th Anniversary Of N.C.'s Mountain Highland Games

GRANDFATHER MOUNTAIN — The Grandfather Mountain Highland Games and Gathering of Scottish Clans reach a milestone today when visitors from all over the world gather to celebrate its Silver Anniversary.

The Games were begun in 1955 by Mrs. Agnes MacRae Morton and Donald MacDonald "... to foster and restore interest in traditional Scottish dancing, piping, and athletic achievement and Gaelic culture."

Today, The Cairn, a memorial made of stones brought over from Scotland by over 50 clans and societies, will be dedicated to the memory of the event and what it stands for, and to the people who have been a part of the Games. The Cairn was designed and built by master craftsman Douglas Ferguson of Pigeon Forge, Tennessee.

An unprecedented influx of clan leaders from all over the world are here to see the games and partake in the pageantry and fellowship.

Honored guests for the 1980 Games are Lady June Gordon, Marchioness of Aberdeen and Temair; Merlin Jay, the Earl of Erroll and Chief of Clan Hay; J. Finlay Fergusson, President of Clan Fergusson Society of Scotland; John MacRae of Conchra, President of Clan MacRae Society of Scotland; and Kennith Trist Urquhart, Laird and Baron of Urquhart and Chief of Clan Urquhart.

Activities actually begin Friday night at Lees McRae College in nearby Banner Elk with a Ceilidh (pronounced "Kay-lee"), a Scottish folk festival, plus a piping concert and an evening of Scottish country dancing, the traditional ballroom dancing of Scotland.

On Saturday the games formally opened at 10 a.m. when the athletic competition began. Featured were the traditionally Scottish heavyweight events such as tossing the caber (a 120 pound telephone-type pole), the Clachneart (a 16 pound stone), and the sheaf (a burlap bag of hay). Other Scottish events were highland wrestling, the tug of war between the clans, and the kilted mile.

AAU-sanctioned events at the Games were the 100, 220, and 440 yard dashes; the 880 yard, mile and 2-mile runs; plus the pole vault, long jump, high jump, and Mountain Marathon.

Participants from all over the country are here for the Scottish Dancing competition which started Saturday and continues today. Traditional Scottish dances are ones such as the Highland Fling, Hornpipe, Sword Dance, Seann Triubhas, Lilt, and the Irish Jig (Scottish version).

Piping competition as well as the popular Sheep Dog Demonstrations are also taking place both days.

Today's celebration opens with a 10 a.m. worship service and the Kirkin' o the Tartans, followed by the dedication of the Memorial Cairn. The honored guests will be introduced by N.J. MacDonald, Chief of the Games, after which the pipe bands pass in review and the Parade of Tartans follows. This moving ceremony has always been a crowd favorite.

This afternoon is a time for athletic competition among the clan members with the kilted miles, junior and intermediate Scottish events, children's activities, and the tug of war.

RECORD PRICE FOR A RUBENS — This Rubens painting of "Samson and Delilah" was auctioned in London on Friday for 2.3 million pounds (5.7 million dollars), the highest price ever paid for a Rubens work at an auction. Sir Geoffrey Agnew, representing his firm of Thomas Agnew and Sons, Ltd., purchased the painting for an unnamed client. (AP Laserphoto)

Treasures From Spanish Ship Margarita Total $20 Million

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Treasures taken from long-sunken Spanish galleon Margarita now total $20 million, treasure hunter Mel Fisher claims.

Booty taken this week totaled an estimated $12 million, including 15 gold chains with 3/4-inch links which were used for money, Fisher said Friday. He said the longest of the chains was 11 feet.

Divers from his Treasure Salvors Inc. recovered an additional estimated $8 million in treasure in February from the ship 35 miles off Key West, Fisher said.

Fisher said he based his estimate of their worth on current gold prices and auction bids for recovered treasure.

Divers Pat Clyne and Don Kincaid recovered two silver bars, each weighing about 80 pounds, a bronze cannon and rare artifacts including an "exquisite rapier," silver plates, scissors, an ivory-handled knife, a silver cross, and several thousand silver coins, two of which were minted in Lima, Peru, in the late 1500s, Fisher said.

Divers also have salvaged millions in treasure from the galleon Atocha, about three miles away. The two ships were traveling together when they were blown off course and lost in a 1622 hurricane.

Fisher, who spent 10 years searching for the Margarita, has fought numerous court battles to prevent federal and state governments from taking his find.

"I've been in litigation on (the Atocha find) for several years," Fisher said. He said he has beaten back government claims to to the treasure.

Fisher said about half of the find will go to investors who helped with the costs of recovering the treasure.

But for the next five years, National Geographic will exhibit the treasure around the United States and then to other parts of the world, Fisher said. The magazine also is doing a television show and magazine story on the treasure.

Toni Dropping The Old Billing

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Toni Tennille will go it as a single, or at least drop the old billing, "The Captain and Tennille," when she stars in her new syndicated television series.

Toni will be joined by comedian Sydney Goldsmith, psychic Tamara Rand, humorist Jim Wiegand and consumer law expert Harvey Levin several times each week on the daily variety-talk show.

"The Toni Tennille Show" will begin syndication this fall for the Hill-Eubanks Group and Moonlight and Magnolias Inc.

Living Room Overlooks Private Garden

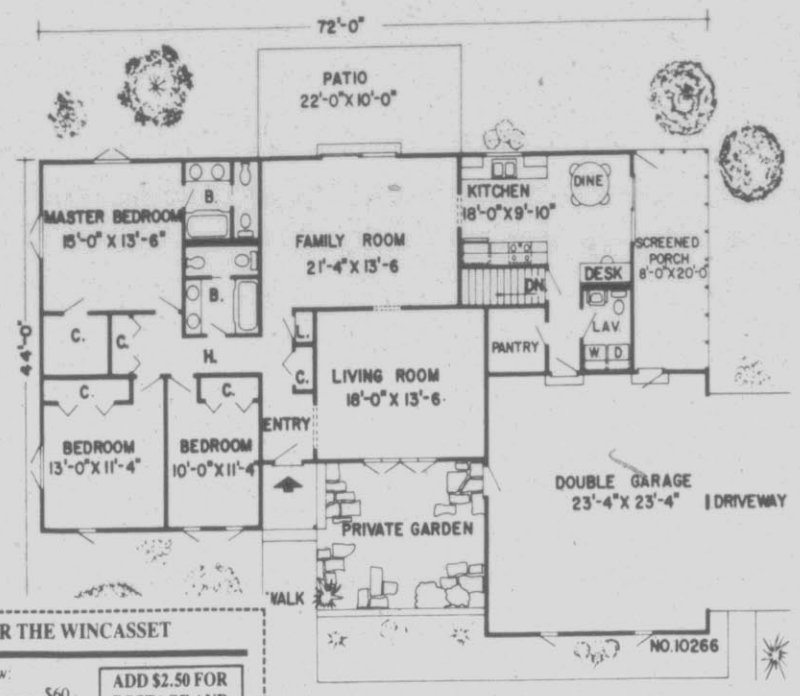
By Jerry Bishop

Formal and informal living areas are each given maximum attention in the Wincasset, a three bedroom ranch style.

For the formal occasions, the living room is zoned for quiet and favored with a view of the private garden, while for more casual moments, the plan offers a family room, patio, screened porch, and eat-in-kitchen.

Vertical siding layers the exterior, and careful planning sets the garage doors to the side to maintain the clean lines. The foyer, lined with two closets, allows guests direct entry to the 18-ft. living room where a series of windows look out over the front garden.

Beyond the living room, the family room answers the needs of an active family with more than 21 ft. in length. A sliding glass door enlarges the living area to the patio at rear.



The kitchen complex combines a compact corridor kitchen with a substantial dining area that opens to the long screened porch for bug-free barbecues. Also featured is a planning desk opposite the dining area. Plans call for a large, walk-in pantry and a handy laundry/half bath combination.

Bedrooms occupy the let wing of the home, with baths and hallways used to buffer living area noises. Well-supplied with natural light, the master bedroom also enjoys a walk-in closet and compartmented bath. Another similar bath, with double sinks, serves the remaining bedrooms. Closets in bedrooms and hallways, are plentiful.

Included in the plan is a double garage, with entries to garden, porch, and kitchen. A basement is also specified.

Do-It-Yourself Ideas Are Helpful If Guests Are Due

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Years ago, spring and early summer issues of decorating magazines often included articles on furnishing the guest room.

Editors knew such articles would be in demand since Americans are a traveling and a sociable people. And summer was sure to herald the arrival of visitors from afar.

Nowadays, stories on furnishing the guest room are few and far between. The reality is that space for a once-in-a-while room is lacking in the one- and two-bedroom apartments and small tract houses many Americans live in today.

However, the social impulse need not be stifled, even if space is tight. A walk through any large furniture store shows there is a wide variety of furniture that solves the problem of providing a bed for a night or two in rooms that usually serve other purposes.

The most obvious way to accommodate guests is to outfit the living room with a dual-purpose sofa. Convertible sofas open out to become single, double or queen-sized beds at night. Extra-large chaise lounges, daybeds and foam lounges also are comfortable enough to provide a night's sleep for a guest while integrating well into a conventional living-room decorating scheme.

A recent development in dual-purpose sitting and sleeping furniture is the sofa or seating system composed of a number of all-foam pieces which unbuckle, fold out or otherwise separate to provide a flat surface for sleeping.

Furnishing a living room or a family room with seating components of this type can provide enough sleeping room for a family reunion.

Look for such pieces in the casual-living departments of stores, where you also will find such useful items as storage ottomans, inexpensive cubes, folding screens and other accessories to provide temporary and convertible storage and privacy for guests.

Solutions to the question of where to put guest children are easily found through bunk beds and trundle beds or even the inexpensive expedient of foam pads and sleeping bags.

If purchasing new furniture is not in the cards, there are methods of converting what is already on hand into comfortable accommodations for a guest. You can offer someone a pallet on the floor.

It would have been unthinkable in the past to offer guests the floor as a sleeping place, but the advent of the modern, carpet-covered platform has helped to make the floor an acceptable place for lounging.

Consider this do-it-yourself idea: Take an old mattress and cover it with a fitted, printed sheet. Or, if you are a good home sewer, upholster the mattress with an attractive, heavy-duty fabric. Add some throw cushions and set the pillows and mattress on a carpeted platform for height, or on the floor itself, if appropriate. At small expense you have created space for a guest.

For privacy, add a folding screen upholstered at home in the same fabric. It's an unorthodox solution to the problem of accommodating overnight guests. But it is a solution which works.

The old tradition of the spare bedroom kept ready for any occasion was a gracious one. But the new way is to fit the hospitality to the circumstances. Conquering apparent lack of space allows one the pleasure of opening the home to family and friends for an overnight visit.

Getting a wood-burning fireplace or stove in good working order should be done when it's not being used. Assembling and storing firewood for cool weather should be done when it's warm.

All of which comes to mind because I just saw a simple but useful firewood storage bin a neighbor had built in one day. It can be visualized by thinking of a rectangular toy chest with one side missing. Wolmanized pressure-treated lumber was chosen because the bin was for outdoor use.

The lumber needed for the project is five pieces of 2 x 6 x 4' 11½" for the top boards; five pieces of 2 x 6 x 4' 7" for the bottom boards; 20 pieces of 2 x 6 x 2' 4" for the side and rear boards; four pieces of 1½" x 2½" x 4' 7" for the framing; and eight pieces of 1½" x 2½" x 1' 9", also for the framing. The hardware includes two pounds of 10-penny common galvanized nails and one pound of 20-penny common galvanized nails.

Begin by cutting and trimming all the lumber to size. Note that all pieces are standard width with two exceptions: One 2 x 6 bottom panel plank must be ripped down to 4" in width from its 5½" dressed lumber-yard width; and the top and bottom panel frame components must be ripped to 2½" in width from the 5½" dressed width. Barring these exceptions, all planks 2 x 6 require only trimming to length. The top and bottom panels are not identical because the bottom plank is flush with the frame edges on all four sides while the top plank overhangs the frame on three sides.

Use the longer planks on the top panel frame, placing them to overhang by 2¼". Nail five side planks of 2 x 4 to each short end of the bottom panel, with the plank ends flush with the panel bottom. The last side plank will overhang the panel by 1½". Then nail in the 10 back planks flush with the panel bottom. The back planks on either side will just fit inside the 1½" overhang of the last side planks.

Set the top panel in position on the main assembly with the overhangs completely covering the exposed ends of the side and back planking. Finish the storage bin by nailing the top panel to the side and back planks, towing the nails for extra strength. Nail through these planks into the top panel frame.

All instructions of this type seem more complicated than the actual project. Once the pieces of lumber are cut and in front of you, the directions on the assembly of the bin will become clear.

(Do-it-yourselfers around the house will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Fewer Airline Mishaps In 1979

MONTREAL (AP) — The U.N.'s International Civil Aviation Organization has released preliminary information on fatal aircraft accidents on scheduled airlines in 1979.

According to the statistics, there were 31 fatal aircraft accidents in 1979 involving 871 passenger fatalities. The corresponding figures for 1978 were 25 fatal accidents and 755 passenger fatalities.

The U.N. agency points out that the level of safety, in view of increasing traffic in scheduled passenger services in 1979, kept close to the level of 1978 although the number of accidents and fatalities increased last year.

Fire Research Lab Is Built

GRANVILLE, Ohio (AP) — To help meet government and public demands for safer products, a $1 million safety laboratory, specifically for fire research, has been constructed here.

Unique to the fiber glass industry, the facility has room to construct and burn the equivalent of two rooms, a mobile home or the first floor of a small house.

In the laboratory, Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. engineers study fire codes, test standards and the fire performance of both fiber glass and competitive products.

Lawn Care Ass'n Convention Set

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Professional Lawn Care Association of America will hold its First Annual Convention and Trade Show, Nov. 12-14, in Louisville, Ky., the Association announced. The show will be held in the Commonwealth Convention Center the first two days and then move outdoors to an open area on the last day.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — One of the walls in our house has flaked and peeled for years no matter what kind of paint we use and regardless of how much scraping we do ahead of time. What we would like to do now is to cover the wall with a canvas we have read about. Is this a practical solution to our problem?

A. — Yes, to a degree. The canvas you mean provides a smooth surface all right, but most of the time it is painted over after the usual preparatory scraping, sanding and spackling. Since you do not want to go through the painting chores any more, it might be advisable to install the canvas according to the instructions given to you by the dealer and then place wallpaper over it. Even then, you should prepare the surface.

Q. — Do I have to paint a wall over which a vinyl wall covering is to be hung? A friend says wall-covering paste will soften the old latex paint now on the wall.

A. — No. The important thing is whether the old paint is solidly attached to the wall, whether it be latex or oil paint.

Q. — We just moved into a house where the previous owner painted the brick fireplace. We want to get the bricks back to their natural color. Can the paint be removed with paint remover?

A. — Yes, but it won't be an easy job. You may have to use several applications of the remover, preferably of the kind that is washed off with water. Paint removal at its best is a messy job. With a brick surface, it may be even messier.

Q. — There are 16-foot ceilings in our living room. I want to install wood panels on the walls and I am having trouble getting them that size, although one dealer says he can get them for me. I have decided to put up two 8-footers, placed so that there is a horizontal seam between them. What's the best way to treat the seams? Is ordinary moulding best?

A. — You can use regular wooden mouldings to match the paneling or you can buy metal mouldings which have veneered coverings of various colors to match different kinds of wood.

Q. — Some time ago you advised a reader to use a semi-rigid plastic foam for the inside of a toilet tank to prevent condensation on the outside of it. I have been unable to purchase one of the kits for this purpose. Can I cut my own from the same material?

A. — Yes, but be sure you use a waterproof cement.

(Leaky faucets, balky toilet tanks, noisy pipes and clogged drains are among the subjects in Andy Lang's booklet, "Simple Plumbing Repairs," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents PLUS a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

GARDEN CLINIC

Q. I fertilized my garden before I planted but forgot to apply lime. Can I sidedress with lime now? (S.P., Winston-Salem)

A. Yes, but it will not do you much good this gardening season. Lime breaks down slowly. It is most effective when applied in the fall and thoroughly mixed with the soil. (Larry Bass, extension horticulturist)

Q. I am an organic farmer. Ants have invaded my strawberry beds. Is there anything I can do to get rid of them that is not chemically based?

A. Ants have invaded your strawberry beds due to the presence of strawberry aphids. Removal of the aphids will result in movement of the ants. High pressure water sprayed from your garden hose can help remove the aphids. Natural enemies such as lady beetles are also effective. It is also helpful to establish new beds every third year. Of course, you can live with aphids and ants. Should you need an insecticide, malathion is suggested. (K.A.Sorensen, extension entomologist)

Q. My bed of rose bushes has a nematode infestation. What treatment would you suggest?

A. First, be sure you have a nematode problem. Your county extension office can advise you on how to have your soil analyzed for nematodes. If you have nematodes, there are no effective chemicals that you can use on roses and other woody ornamental plants in the landscape. Fertilize, mulch and water your plants to keep heat and moisture stress to a minimum. Promptly prune out dead branches. If your plants die, replace them with plants that are not as susceptible to that particular type of nematode. (R.K. Jones, extension plant pathologist)

Quakers Oppose Registration

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends (Quaker) says it will support all people who feel compelled not to comply with military draft registration or who seek to qualify as conscientious objectors.

Francis G. Brown, general secretary of the pacifist Christian group, said its peace committee would "make available information defining alternatives and consequences" for those facing draft registration at post officies.

Let's Talk Real Estate

Considering home renovations? Remember that there is little money invested in a house that does not increase its value somewhat on the real estate market. Consider the addition of a room, installation of a fireplace, or closing in a porch as an investment in your own property. Sometimes these additions or personal touches are just the things that makes a house attractive to a buyer. These additions will distinquish your home from all others in the neighborhood. In the interim, enjoy it yourself.

When considering selling your property, the major concern is establishing a fair market price. The best way to accomplish this is to call the real estate experts at REALTY WORLD-CLARK BRANCH REALTORS INC., 1902 S. Charles, 756-6336. We are out in the market on a day-to-day basis and are aware of the price fluctuations, demand and supply changes, financing considerations and other points that will affect the sale of your property. "Our World Revolves Around You" Open: Mon.-Fri. 8:30-5:30, Sat. 8:30-1, other times by appointment.

DID YOU KNOW? Your real estate professional can tell you which additions will add the greatest value to your home.

What to expect when you install a Solar Hot Water System now...and the IRS and Utility Company find out about it.

Expect to get about $2000

Solar Energy. It makes sense. And using a Solar Hot Water Heater now makes the most sense.

$1820 IN TAX CREDITS.

A typical system for a family of four can cost about $2800. However, you're entitled to a $1120 Federal Tax Credit and a $700 State Tax Credit when you install a $2800 Solar Water Heater Now.

$150 SAVINGS A YEAR IN ELECTRIC BILLS.

In addition, a typical Solar Water Heater for a family of four can save you 50% of yearly utility bills for hot water. That can amount to more than $150 the first year on your electric bill. Add that to the available tax credits and you could save more than $1970 for the first year. And that's only the beginning. Because you'll continue to save even more year after year on your utility bills as the cost of energy continues to rise.

Thinks Wreckage Is That Of 1938 'Hawaii Clipper'

By PATRICK ARNOLD
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Joe Gervais was trying to solve the greatest mystery in aviation history, the disappearance of Amelia Earhart, when he stumbled across what he now believes is the answer to an equally mystifying airplane puzzle.

In July 1938, Pan American World Airways' Hawaii Clipper vanished while flying from Guam to the Philippines. No trace was ever found of the plane or the 15 people on board.

Gervais, who spent a decade trying to prove that Miss Earhart is still alive, says that during his search for evidence more than 15 years ago he was shown aircraft wreckage on the Pacific atoll of Truk, wreckage he now thinks could be that of the Hawaii Clipper.

And, he said in an interview, information indicates the disappearance may have been the world's first hijacking. A local islander told him the 15 crew members and passengers were killed by the Japanese and buried beneath a hospital on the island.

Gervais said he thought an investigation by Pan Am was warranted to determine if the wreckage is in fact that of the Hawaii Clipper.

"I would think that to look further in this ... Pan Am would have to become interested," he said. "After all, it was a Pan Am airplane, their passengers, their responsibility. If there is evidence that those people are there on that island, I would think that Pan Am ought to make a request to Trust Territory officials ... to conduct a local investigation. That is, go where the remnants of the hospital are and determine if those 15 people are there."

James Arey, director of corporate public relations at Pan Am headquarters in New York, said the airline would "welcome the opportunity to examine the evidence that Mr. Gevais has."

Gervais said he realized what he may have found only this year, after reading a new book, "China Clipper" by Ronald W. Jackson. The book is a history of Pan Am's flying boat service in the Pacific and discusses the disappearance of the Hawaii Clipper.

Gervais, a retired Air Force pilot and now a Las Vegas truant officer, said he had flown to Truk — a formidable Japanese naval base during the war — in November 1964 to investigate the wreckage of a plane he thought could have been Miss Earhart's.

Gervais based his search for Miss Earhart on the belief the famous flyer and navigator Fred Noonan were shot down and captured by the Japanese while on a spy mission in 1937.

Gervais said the wreckage a Trukese native showed him was obviously not the Earhart plane. Gervais now believes it is the remains of the clipper. He was told that 15 persons aboard the flying boat were executed by the Japanese and was shown where the bodies allegedly were buried.

Gervais said he didn't think much about it then because he was unfamiliar with the missing clipper story.

The Hawaii Clipper, one of several four-engine Pan Am flying boats plying the Pacific in the late 1930s, was last heard from about noon, July 29, 1938, when it radioed its position and weather report.

No further messages were received, setting off a week-long sea search. A trace of oil was found in the area where the plane was last heard from, but an analysis of the substance proved inconclusive.

Jackson, in his book, theorizes that two Japanese naval officers from Saipan, about 100 miles from Guam, sneaked aboard the clipper when it anchored for the night at Guam. He suggests the two officers took command of the plane and ordered it flown to Japanese-held Koror, an island about 400 miles southwest of Guam.

Gervais disagrees, saying it was more likely the plane was flown to Truk, part of the same island chain, because the Japanese were building a seaplane base there.

Jackson has told Gervais he hadn't known about the Truk wreckage and expressed interest in pursuing the new theory, according to Gervais.

Gervais said he "took a few pictures" of the craft, which appeared to have been cut into sections, and then was asked by his guide if he wanted to know "where the people were."

"And I said, 'I'm not interested in a plane with 15 people. I'm interested in a plane with two people, a man and a woman.' And he said, 'No, 15 Americans, and the Japanese executed them.'"

The bodies, Gervais said his guide told him, lie beneath the crumbling foundation of a bombed-out Japanese hospital on the atoll.

"I don't know how many people were on it (the clipper)," Gervais said. "I don't know whether there were 40 people on it, three or 10, and I had forgotten about it. Then this book came out and I thought back at that time and said, 'Hey, that's how many people he told me. Fifteen. Not 45 or 30, but 15.'"

The book also describes a plane passenger named Wah Sun Choy, a New Jersey restaurant owner and chairman of the Chinese War Relief Committee who reportedly was carrying as much as $3 million raised in the United States to help the Chinese in their war against Japan.

Gervais said that when on Saipan pursuing his Earhart investigation, he talked to a retired Marine who told him that while the military was searching a bank vault in Garapan, the island's largest city, they found $3 million in old U.S. "goldback" currency in use during the pre-war years.

Flying Fortress Goes To Colorado Museum

By DENIS SEARLES
Associated Press Writer

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — A part of America's military aviation history lived again as a B-17 flew with a P-51 fighter escort over eastern Colorado.

One of the last Flying Fortresses — the type of propeller-driven bomber that wreaked destruction on Nazi Germany during World War II — roared down the runway at Fort Collins-Loveland Airport Friday morning and lifted off over the Larimer County wheatfields.

Pilot Bill Harrison, a surgeon from Tulsa, Okla., banked the 35-year-old bomber into a turn, its four 1,200-hp Curtis-Wright radial-piston engines screaming. He made one high-speed pass over the small airport's runway, then headed the old war bird east into the rising sun.

A P-51 fighter plane, the type that protected the B-17s from German Messerschmidts and Fokker fighters on their bombing runs from the airfields in England to Berlin, flew escort across Colorado's eastern plains to Sterling. Then the Mustang's pilot, Jerry Hayes of Denver, dipped his wings and headed back.

Harrison and his crew of three landed the B-17, dubbed "The Aluminum Overcast," at the Experimental Aircraft Association's Museum in Burlington, Wis., five hours and 800 nautical miles later.

"It was a beautiful flight, but knock on wood," Harrison said by telephone after landing at Burlington. "Something may fall off tomorrow."

Harrison and five other partners had donated the B-17 to the EAA's museum.

The old bomber was fueled with 1,086 gallons of flight fuel for Friday's trip at a cost of $1,987.

"With fuel at $1.90 a gallon, it just makes it impossible to operate the darn thing as an individual. I feel like it needs to be flown to show people what they are. I think it will get better service with the museum," Harrison said.

Business Notes

INCREASE PLANNED

Procter & Gamble announced that it plans to increase the annual rate of its common stock dividend from $3.40 to $3.80 per share.

The company's fiscal year, which began July 1, will be the 25th consecutive year in which the per share dividend paid by P&G will have increased, it was noted. P&G said it has been paying dividends without interruption since its incorporation in 1890.

FIGURES UP

The Wachovia Corporation's income before securities transactions for the second quarter was $13.760 million, 17.6 percent higher than the $11.703 million earned in the same period of 1979.

For the first six months of 1980, the corporation earned $26.228 million or 10.7 percent more than in the first half of 1979.

Net income for the second quarter was $12.709 million compared to $11.309 million. For the first six months, it was $23.024 million, up from the $22.286 million earned in the same period of 1979.

NEW DIRECTORS

The Aviation Group Inc., an air cargo firm with world headquarters in Chapel Hill, announced that it has added three new directors to its staff.

Bobbie J. Ferguson has been appointed director of maintenance for the company, while Roderick D. Swank has joined the company as director of flight standards. Jerry G. Usry has been appointed director of maintenance inspection.

GRANTS AWARDED

The TRW Foundation, funded by TRW Inc., recently awarded $70,725 in grants to independent college funds, Thomas J. Fay, foundation president, announced.

Fay said the gifts to funds in 21 states and regions support the educational goals of private colleges and universities in those areas.

The gifts include a grant to the Independent College Fund of North Carolina Inc.

Farmers Calling For An End To Grain Embargo

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Declaring that President Carter has broken his pledge to farmers, the National Farmers Organization is calling for an end to the grain embargo on the Soviet Union as soon as the summer Olympic Games end.

"A message has been sent to the Soviets, and received, that the United States will not sit idly by and tolerate Soviet aggression," NFO President DeVon Woodland said Friday from NFO headquarters at Corning, Iowa.

The embargo was imposed after Soviet troops moved into Afghanistan last winter. In addition to the embargo, the United States and other nations are boycotting the Olympics in Moscow in protest.

"When the flag comes down from the summer Olympic games, that boycott will be over," Woodland said. "Then, I think, it will be time to rescind the agricultural boycott and re-establish our trade relationship as a reputable and quality supplier with the Soviet Union."

Woodland and NFO spokesman Bill Wagner said they "have every reason to believe" that U.S. grain is winding up in the Soviet Union despite the embargo.

"It was our fear all along that grain could be bought in other countries, then shipped to the Soviet Union. There seems to be ample evidence to us and everyone in the grain business that it is getting through," Wagner said.

He said that even if American grain is not getting to the Soviet Union, it is going to Soviet satellite countries and relieving Soviet agriculture of supplying grain to those nations.

The NFO and several other farm groups initially supported the grain embargo, but Woodland said that support followed two promises from Carter and Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland: that farm income would not suffer and that efforts would be made to ensure that U.S. grain did not get to the Soviets through Third World countries.

Grain, Soybean Prices Higher

By PAULINE JELINEK
AP Business Writer

Grain and soybean futures prices closed the week mostly higher, gaining some strength from weekend weather predictions while traders showed some caution in anticipation of the U.S. Agriculture Department's yield predictions.

Soybeans finished strongly on some heavy commercial buying right before the close. Prices had moved up and down nervously in the afternoon, traders said, with evening up before the weekend and forecasts for high temperatures in the Southern and Midwest growing areas.

Wheat and corn trading was said to be cautious because it wasn't known whether the USDA crop report would be favorable, and profit taking was noted in both pits.

The USDA report, which was released after the close, was later interpreted by some traders as positive for corn and neutral for wheat.

It said this year's corn crop is estimated at 7.28 billion bushels, down 6 percent from last year's record harvest, and wheat was estimated at 2.32 billion bushels, an 8 percent increase from the near-record 1979 harvest.

Some early advances in oats were shaved by mid-session on speculative selling.

At the close on the Chicago Board of Trade, wheat was 1¾ cents lower to 1½ cents higher, July $4.22¾; corn was 3½ to 6¾ cents higher, July $3.05¾; oats were ½ cent to 1¼ cents higher, July $1.82; soybeans were 15½ to 25½ cents higher, July $7.46½.

The metals closed mixed Friday with silver rising in a correction from recent price dips and gold falling on some profit taking, said Betty Raptopolous, a senior metals analyst with Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc.

She said copper advanced again under the influence of the weekold strike by the United Steelworkers of America.

"It's the strike and the perception now that is is going to be of a good length," she said.

At the close on the New York Commodity Exchange Inc., gold was $0.80 to $1.50 per troy ounce lower, July $666.50; sil-ver was 45 cents per pound higher in all contract months except spot, where it was 46 cents higher, July $16.32; cop-per was .60 cent to 1.35 cents per pound higher, July 97.05; platinum was $5 to $8.96 per troy ounce lower, July $690.

Coffee, influenced earlier this week on an increase in produc-er prices and news that several Central and South American countries were suspending ex-port registrations, rose Friday.

At the close on the Coffee Sugar Cocoa exchange in New York, coffee was 5.68 to 8.96 cents higher, July $1.67.96; sugar was 5 cents lower to 6 cents higher, July $1.2½ per pound.

Livestock on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange closed mixed with live and feeder cattle down and hogs and pork bellies higher.

Live cattle were .50 cent to 1.33 cents per pound lower, August 70.45; feeders were .10 cent to .40 cents per pound lower, August 74.82; live hogs were .20 cent to .72 cents per pound lower, July 44.57; pork bellies were 1 cent to 2 cents per pound higher, July 43.02.

Saturday's Hot Sunny Weather Was Ideal For Greenville's First Annual 'Dog Wash'

Photos By Tommy Forrest

Although it was not as hot as a Texas summer day, the bright cloudless sky in Greenville on Saturday left no doubt that summer time is definitely here — a time to enjoy the outdoors, including the delectable experience of splashing in water.

At Carolina East Mall, water splashing took on an added dimension, as members of the Pitt County Humane Society undertook to carry out the activities involved in the first annual "Dog Wash" day — which included a canine health and beauty treatment in the form of a "flea and tick dip."

One thing seemed evident — the people involved had as much or more fun than the animals.

The Love Of Bells

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

QUINCY, Ind. (AP) — One day Francis Kennedy's neighbor had a bell he wanted to sell, an old dinner bell, rung with a rope, used in the old days to call in the field hands.

Francis thought a bell might look nice mounted on a post beside his farmhouse gate, a reminder of simpler times. He bought it. It did look nice, and it had a clear, honest sound when he rang it.

"It looked so nice," Francis recalled, "that I thought a second bell, on the other side of the gate, might look even nicer."

He searched and found a matching bell. He hung it, and it certainly did, it looked even nicer. That was in 1953.

There is something about a bell, the graceful shape, the sturdy construction, the clear tone, the purely functional design, that Francis Kennedy finds appealing in a world of gadgetry and excess.

He bought a third bell. He got it when they tore down the schoolhouse in Manhattan, Ind. Paid $6 for it.

He doesn't remember where he got the fourth one, or the fifth or sixth. He got one from the old courthouse in Logansport and another from the church in Danville after the tornado came through and another from the abandoned Methodist church in Shelbyville.

He picked up some big brass locomotive bells from here and there, four in all. He found a bell in a shop in Clayton, stamped 1734, that might have come from a Spanish mission. Wherever Francis Kennedy went, he seemed to find bells, and he couldn't resist them.

Now the original two bells at his gatepost are lost among a magnificent gathering of bells all around his farmhouse.

Bells hang in the front yard, back yard, side yard. They hang from the barn, the house, the pine trees. They perch atop the root cellar. Bells everywhere. Bells from a foot in diameter to four feet. Brass bells, bronze bells, iron bells. A mighty chorale of bells. A tintinabulation of bells.

"I have 234 bells," Kennedy said. "I must be cracked in the head."

Francis Kennedy doesn't really believe he is cracked in the head, but it is the best answer he can think of when people ask him why he has all those bells.

Francis and his brother, Lewis, both in their 70s, both bachelors, live on the farm where they were raised from boyhood, out where the only roads are the ones that follow the section lines and the sound of a well-struck bell travels for miles.

"Out here," Francis Kennedy went on to explain, "the things I find interesting, I find very interesting, so I collect them. I find bells interesting.

"The things I don't find interesting, I forget about. I've never been up in an airplane, never smoked a cigarette, never gone to a ball game. You can have all that.

"I'm interested in bells. I'm also interested in old farm wagons. I have 26 of them. I have 50 wagon wheels. Wagon wheels are interesting. So are gasoline engines. I have 12. Millstones are interesting. Did you notice all the millstones?

Amid all the bells, it is easy to overlook the millstones, as well as the wagons and the wheels and the engines, which are out in a shed.

Francis Kennedy tried again.

"If a person likes something, he has a knack for finding it. He learns to smell it out. A man who likes whiskey will find whiskey, you can bet on it. Well, what I like, I like, and I seem to be able to find what I like. Do I make myself clear?"

Clear as a bell.

Secret Told: Lois Patterson Honored

Mrs. Lois G. Patterson of Greenville was the center of a well-kept secret until two weeks ago.

Mrs. Patterson and daughter, Mrs. Carol Lundegard, represented Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church at a meeting in Connecticut. While attending the annual conference of the Church and Synagogue Library Association, Mrs. Patterson received the 1980 award for Outstanding Congregational Librarian.

Mrs. Patterson wasn't informed of the award "because the national awards committee asks that the winners' names not be revealed in order to add more color to the event."

Last year in Richmond, Va., at the awards banquet of the CSLA, Mrs. Ramona Tucker of Greenville was impressed with the caliber of people receiving the award. "In my estimation, no one deserved a church library award anymore than Lois Patterson for her 25 years of service," said Mrs. Tucker.

In pursuing her idea, Mrs. Tucker received requirements for the award from the awards chairman, who indicated the committee needed letters of recommendation from people who had worked closely with Mrs. Patterson in the development of the church library.

In addition Mrs. Patricia Moore wrote two stories — one on the library development and the other about Mrs. Patterson's contributions to the library program. The first article was published in the May-June issue of "Church and Synagogue Libraries." The second article will appear in the next issue.

When asked if she was suspicious in anyway concerning the conference or award, Mrs. Patterson said, "I had no reason to be expectant — it had never occurred to me that I was eligible to receive that type of award."

In explaining her continued interest in the library, she added, "I thought the idea of a library was worthwhile and it was needed. I just didn't want to stop once I got started and I enjoyed it. Basically I thought it was something we should have. A church library is a ministry, it adds to the church's educational program as well as providing fun reading.

"The children and their interest really kept this library going when we were trying to get started. I enjoyed working a little harder for them. Since we have moved into our new facility, people's interest has increased.

"The Library Committee is making a small beginning to have an archives collection and oral histories of Greenville and church members. I think we have good things ahead of us and a bright future. We have a lot of goals and are working at different things."

Lois and Tom Patterson have lived here 27 years and are the parents of two children, Dr. Thomas Patterson and Mrs. Lundegard. Tom Patterson is a research associate at Dupont. Mrs. Patterson is a member of the Round Table Book Club and a former member of the American Association of University Women. She enjoys needlework and collecting things including Depression Glass.

"Basically mother's a collector — she enjoys a lot of different things. She also collects for me and we collect things we can use. Mother's an organized pack rat," said Mrs. Lundegard.

"Keeping the award a secret was the hardest thing I've ever accomplished — I was very proud," said Mrs. Lundegard.

While Mrs. Lundegard and Mrs. Patterson were packing for their trip, Tom Patterson was also packing. "He told me a long story of having to go to Wilmington on a business trip," said Mrs. Patterson. However, her husband and a group of close friends were present in Connecticut to see her receive the award. Others making the trip were Mrs. D. W. Branch, Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Williams, Mrs. Karl Turner, the Rev. David Goehring and Mr. and Mrs. Tucker.

"We waited outside the banquet hall and when the award's chairman called Lois' name, we went inside," said Mrs. Tucker. The group returned home Monday night after the award presentation on Sunday, July 1.

"I appreciated the honor and I was honored, but primarily I think it was an honor to the church and the work done here," said Mrs. Patterson.

Two Days, A Night In Resident's Life

By GEORGETTE HEDRICK
ECU Medical Writer

6:30 a.m. The corridors are quiet and dimly lit as Dr. Karl Hasik walks briskly into the physician's entrance at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The labor and delivery unit is the first stop of the day for Hasik, a second-year resident in obstetrics and gynecology at the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

He checks to see if any deliveries are due soon and consults with a family practice resident about the condition of a diabetic patient.

"Things are quiet this morning in Labor and Delivery," says Hasik as he heads for the nursing station on the obstetrics floor. "But it's a different story out here on the floor. We have 26 patients, and many of them have complicated pregnancies."

At the nursing station Hasik meets two students from the ECU medical school. The students are on an eight-week rotation in OB/GYN, and Hasik is responsible for teaching them as he makes his morning rounds.

Hasik stops outside the room of a patient from Kinston. He explains to the students that the patient has placenta previa, a condition in which the placenta is implanted in the lower segment of the uterus below the baby's head. The mother has stayed in bed three weeks to prevent the placenta from rupturing.

"We always think of the bad things that could happen," explains Hasik. "That way we're prepared for problems. We have two patients — the mother and unborn baby — and we must pay meticulous attention to all the details of their care and progress if we are to have a healthy mother and baby."

9 a.m. Hasik's beeper notifies him that his first patient has arrived at the School of Medicine Clinic. Seeing patients at the clinic is a special feature of the residency program at ECU, Hasik explains, one of the points that attracted him after completing medical school at the University of Missouri.

"Patients see me here at the clinic just like they would in a local doctor's office, and I appreciate the opportunity and privilege of serving them. Establishing a rapport with a patient throughout her pregnancy and then delivering her baby gives me a very special feeling."

At the clinic Hasik meets with Dr. Lynn Borchert, a specialist in the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology who will be supervising Hasik during the clinic. Between visiting patients, the two physicians consult with each other in the conference room.

Hasik has a busy morning at the clinic. Of the five patients who are scheduled, four of them are new, and Hasik spends extra time with them discussing their special needs and learning their medical histories. He finds time to eat a hamburger at 2:00 during a final conference with Borchert.

2:30 p.m. Back at the hospital, Hasik is responsible for the day's teaching conference. As he enters the auditorium at the stroke of 2:30, he takes some good-natured kidding about being

Miss Donna Goodson Weds

Donna Sue Goodson and Charles Ray Harris Jr. were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. James Bailey.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Higgs Goodson of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Jimmy Warren Brewer of Greenville, and the late Mr. Charles Ray Harris.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mickey Terry, organist. Mrs. Susie Pair sang "The Wedding Song" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. Diane Goodson of Greenville, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Mrs. Debbie Bunn, sister of the bride, Mrs. Christie Priestley Garner, Mrs. Laura Minges Greene, Mrs. Anne Hepler Johnson, Dorsey Sanderson and Martha Wilkerson, all of Greenville.

The attendants wore formal gowns of matte jersey in shades of coral, periwinkle, marigold and spearmint designed with an open neckline and empire bodice styled with a gathered overlay. The sleeveless gown was enhanced by a deep cowl drape extending to waist length in back. A self-tie rolled sash encircled the waistline from which fell the full flared skirt. They carried European nosegays of yellow tiger lilies, sonia roses and white daisies, accented with blue silk bell blossoms and greenery.

Honorary bridesmaids were Mrs. Elise Goodman Davis and Pam Robinson, both of Greenville. They carried a long-stemmed sonia rose accented with greenery.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown of chantilly lace over satin designed with a scooped neckline appliqued with sequins and seed pearls. The full skirt extended into a chapel train. She wore a fingertip length illusion veil edged in lace and held in place by a Juliet cap of imported lace and seed pearls. Her bouquet was a flowing cascade of white lilies and sweetheart roses, accented with ornamental foliage.

The bridegroom's stepfather, James Warren Brewer, served as best man. Ushers were Randy Harris, Jim Brewer and Todd Brewer, brothers of the bridegroom, Joe Goodson, brother of the bride, Glen Carpenter, Steve Denton, Dean Nunn and Terry Savage, all of Greenville.

The bride's mother wore a lemon yellow crepe knit dress. The bodice, with long dolman sleeves, featured a boat neck dropping into a draped cowl back. The mother of the bridegroom wore an A-line full length dress of pink crepe knit. The dress was styled with a V-neckline and accented by matching lace and beaded applique. They wore phaleanopsis orchid corsages, accented with greenery.

MRS. CHARLES RAY HARRIS JR.

Mrs. Katherine Vinson directed the wedding.

The reception was held at the Gathering Place, former home of the bride's great-grandparents. Assisting in greeting guests were Mr. and Mrs. Phil Goodson and Mr. and Mrs. Billy Goodson. Mrs. Charles Kavanaugh assisted in pouring punch.

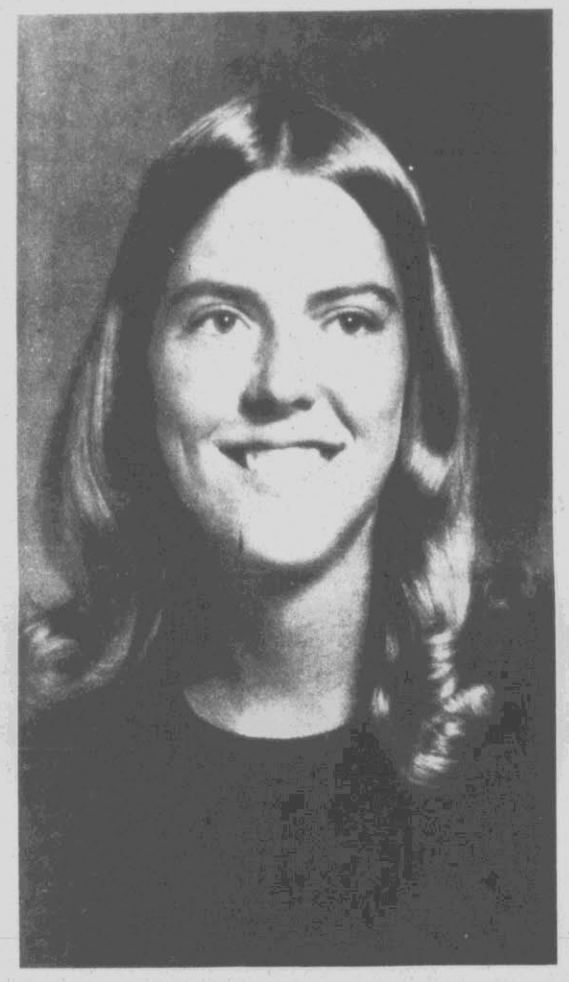
An after-rehearsal dinner was held Friday evening at the Three Steers given by the parents of the bridegroom. Following the dinner, a dance was held at The American Legion Building given by friends and relatives.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Broome served a brunch at their home Saturday morning for the wedding party.

Mrs. Ed. Clement and Mrs. Charles Moore were hostesses for the bridesmaids luncheon held at the home of Mrs. Clement.

Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of J.H. Rose High School. The bride graduated from ECU with a B.S. degree in housing. The bridegroom is a graduate of Pitt Community College, is attending ECU and is employed at Burroughs Wellcome.

After a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will reside in Greenville.



MRS. WILLIAM GLEN CHASE

Couple Marries On Saturday

EMERALD ISLE — Susan Allen Stanford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Dean Stanford of Emerald Isle, and William Glen Chase, son of Mrs. Vera Chase of Winterville, and Mr. William M. Chase of Bristol, Conn., were united in marrige Saturday at noon.

The double ring ceremony was performed in the Chapel by the Sea by the Rev. E. Leslie Thomas. A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. E. Leslie Thomas.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her honor attendant was Carolyn Stanford of Emerald Isle, sister of the bride.

The best man was the father of the bridegroom.

The couple will be living in Douglasville, Ga.

High Noon Ceremony Held

WASHINGTON — Miss Elizabeth Barnes Buckman became the bride of Dennis Alvin Nichols in a high noon ceremony Saturday in the First Methodist Church here. The Rev. Odell Walker officiated at the double ring ceremony assisted by the Rev. Gayla Estes.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Franklin Buckman III of Washington. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Vick Nichols of Greenville.

Mrs. Blake Lewis, church organist, presented a prelude of wedding selections. Miss Elizabeth Marie Jennette served as flutist accompanied by Mrs. Ray Hodges Harris, pianist.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride was escorted by her father. The bride wore an ivory gown in silk organza and alencon lace. The all-over alencon lace bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline with long fitted sleeves appliqued with lace and covered buttons. The bodice was fitted to the natural waistline and showed a miniature scalloped edge. A full skirt of silk satin organza flowed from the waist to form a chapel length train. She chose a fingertip veil edged with ivory alencon lace attached to a lace covered caplet. She wore an antique gold and pearl lavalier, a gift of her great aunt, Mrs. Jefferson Davis Snuggs. She carried a bouquet of stephanotis, roses and gypsophlia with a New Testament.

The bride's sister-in-law, Mrs. James Franklin Buckman IV was matron of honor and maid of honor was Dorothy Olivia Bridger. Bridesmaids included Miss Vanessa Ellen Blackwell of Chapel Hill, Mrs. James David Duncan of Charlotte, Mrs. Henry Makepeace Johnston of Greenville, and Miss Carolyn Carter Maness of Richmond, Va. They wore gowns of dusty rose butter crepe designed in a classic wrap style with a sash draped at the waist. Nosegays of roses, daisies, gpysophlia and baby's breath accented their dresses.

Honorary bridesmaids were Mrs. James Alan Boyer of Zebulon, Miss Deborah Roebuck of Greenville, Miss Mary Elizabeth Tucker of Kinston, and Mrs. Marshall Neilson Woolard of Washington. They wore formal length gowns of various shades of rose and carried a long-stemmed pink rose.

The father of the bridegroom was best man while groomsmen included Samuel Kevin Price, Keith Michael Beatty, Ronald Vick Nichols, brother of the bridegroom, all of Greenville, Tony Richard Nichols of Greensboro, also brother of the bridegroom, Walter Greene Benton of Tarboro, James Franklin Buckman IV, brother of the bride of Washington, and Tyler Bowe Harris of New Bern.

Mrs. Buckman wore a floor length gown of wisteria qiana and the mother of the bridegroom selected a floor length gown of pale blue jersey. Mothers and grandmothers were given corsages of white cymbidium orchids.

John Davenport Williams IV and Thomas Harvey Franz were acolyte and bell ringer respectively. Mrs. John Irvin Morgan Sr. and Mrs. William David Pemberton served as church hostesses.

The bride graduated from Peace College, UNC-CH and ECU. She was a member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority at Carolina. She is presently teaching at Washington High School. The bridegroom graduated from ECU and was a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity. He is presently manager at NCNB West End Branch Bank.

After a wedding trip to Hilton Head and Charleston, S. C., the couple will live in Greenville.

Immediately following the wedding, a reception was held given by the bride's parents and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Claude Willard.

The bride's table was covered with an ecru handmade cut-work cloth centered with a crystal epergne filled with roses and summer flowers.

Immediately after the wedding rehearsal, the parents of the bridegroom entertained at an after-rehearsal dinner at the Washington Yacht and Country Club for members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests.

The main table was centered with an arrangement of summer flowers in rose and white. Auxiliary tables were decorated with rose candles and miniature mixed arrangements of summer flowers.

Cooking Is Fun

SUCCOTASH HAM SALAD

Good way to use leftovers.

1 cup diced (¼ inch) cooked ham or boneless pork shoulder butt
1 cup finely diced celery
¼ cup leftover cooked green lima beans (fresh or frozen Fordhook)
½ cup leftover cooked whole-kernel corn (fresh, frozen or canned)
¼ cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon prepared yellow mustard
2 small scallions (thinly sliced)
Salt and pepper to taste
Lettuce

Mix together all the ingredients except the lettuce and chill if you like. Serve on lettuce. Makes about 2½ cups — 4 small servings.

SUNTANNING CAN BE HAZARDOUS TO YOUR HEALTH

Every day people are exposing themselves to the ultraviolet radiation of the sun strictly in order to get a tan. These people have no regulations or warning labels to tell them how long in the sun is enough. Other people purchase home sunlamps and may or may not follow the manufacturer's recommendations. Last year 7,700 people required hospitalization because of misuse of sunlamps.

Without doubt the tanning process can be dangerous, but it need not be. The value of our business is to operate tanning facilities with knowledge, care, and safety awareness. We are the professionals to whom people can go for a tan, feeling confident that under our trained guidance they will be as safe as possible.

Given the fact that people want suntans and will often injure themselves in obtaining them, it would seem that the opportunity to obtain a relatively safe, comfortable, and inexpensive tan would be encouraged.

Anyone who tans in the sun can do so safely in a tanning booth. Moreover, professionally-guided tanning can prevent the number of ultraviolet accidents annually. So come now to the Hawaiian Suntanning Center, 3006 E. 10th Street for a safe, even and inexpensive tan.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

The current name for them is displaced homemakers. They're at that awkward time of their lives. Too old for camp. Too young for Social Security. Too overqualified for yellow wax build-up. Too tired for an affair.

They decide to re-enter the job market.

They're terrified, insecure, intimidated, apprehensive, desperate, confused, put-down and frustrated. They're sensitive about being the last parenthesis of the age brackets (35 or over) on the application form. There is one thing they are definitely not . . . and that's alone.

Every week, letters come over the desk asking me to find some humor in their situation. It's not easy. Can a woman who gets leg cramps from wedgies find happiness with a young girl whose life revolves around a yogurt pyramid club?

Mostly, displaced homemakers are amazed at what they see when they emerge from their domestic time capsule. One woman from Maumee, Ohio, summed it up better than anyone else.

"I was interviewed by a child," she said. "I knew that child and all the others like her. Didn't I hold them in my arms, nurse them, powder their behinds? Didn't I feed them and hang crepe paper for their birthday parties? I went to their class plays and clapped the loudest. I went to their science fairs and walked for hours while they explained their projects to me about how bread mold can cure cancer.

"I went to their noisy concerts, their plays and listened to their voices crack between youth and adulthood.

"I balanced their meals and balanced our budget. I learned how to sew and cut hair. I enrolled them in school and gave them words in English while they responded in Spanish.

"Now my professional life hangs in their balance and they are asking me if I'm qualified for anything.

"I have been told in the same day I am too quiet and too aggressive. One said my eyebrows showed 'negativism.' (I developed those when I was 'into diapers.') One asked if I could drive under pressure. (Get serious!) Another said if I could get a No. 2 license I could drive an airport shuttle or if I were a size 9 I could rent cars.

"The girl in front of me had hipbones and mouth like Emmett Kelly. She was young and got the job."

Do not despair, ladies. Try to remember Helen who wrote in one of the letters, "When I was given an application blank and I came to a small spot marked, 'Experience,' I said to the personnel manager, 'Pardon me, sir, I've been a wife and mother for 15 years. I'll need two extra sheets of paper to list my background and skills.'"

She got the job.

MINT CHICKEN

Served as a side dish here, but may be offered as an appetizer on other menus.

- 2 each chicken drumsticks and thighs (1¼ pounds)
- 3 cups water
- 1 small onion, thinly sliced (about ¼ cup)
- White vinegar
- 1-3rd cup fresh mint leaves, finely chopped
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

Boil the chicken in the water for 20 minutes; remove chicken; discard broth or save for some other use. Bone chicken and shred — there will be 1 generous cup, firmly packed. Cover the onion with the vinegar and let stand for 10 to 15 minutes. With your hands mix together the chicken, mint, salt and pepper until salt is completely dissolved. Drain onion; stir into the chicken mixture. Makes 6 servings. Adapted from "The Classic Cuisine of Vietnam" by Bach Ngo and Gloria Zimmerman (Barron's).

ROSA MURCHISON. . .is the granddaughter of Mrs. C. B. Parker of Stokes, who announces her engagement to Joe Terry Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Brown of Greenville. The wedding will take place Aug. 16.

Crisp Cereal

High humidity can take the crispness out of ready-to-eat cereals if they're not stored in a tightly closed package.

To restore crispness, heat the cereal in a shallow baking pan in a pre-heated oven at 350 degrees for about five minutes, say specialists with the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service.

Miss Ellis Marries Capt. Miller

Donna Rose Ellis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy C. Ellis of Greenville, became the bride of Capt. Melvin Lee Miller of Cherry Point Saturday at 3 p.m. at the Arlington Street Baptist Church.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard G. Miller of Morrison, Col.

The Rev. Harold Greene performed the double ring military ceremony. A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Louise Hearne, organist, and Sigsby Duck, soloist and guitarist, who sang "Longer" and "The Wedding Song." Both are from Greenville.

MRS. MELVIN LEE MILLER

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore a formal gown of white chantilly lace fashioned with a V-neckline. The bodice was accented with an applique of Venise lace centered with seed pearls and had long lace bishop sleeves and natural waistline of French chantilly lace. The full chantilly lace skirt was enhanced with an organza flounce hemline with lace flowing into an attached chapel length train.

The bride wore a walking length veil of silk illusion trimmed with Venise lace attached to a Juliet cap overlaid in matching lace and seed pearls. She carried a silk bouquet of victorian mellon roses, mint green miniature carnations, white tube roses and white baby's breath with mellon streamers and bridal lace.

Mrs. Richard G. Juberg of Greenville was honor attendant. She wore a formal sweetpea gown of silesta fashioned with a high neckline, blouson bodice and capelet sleeves. A fabric tie belt accented the full circular skirt. She carried a basket of silk mellon roses and mint green and white miniature carnations with mellon puffs of ribbon and white and mellon streamers.

Bridesmaids included Mrs. Billy Don Ellis, sister-in-law of the bride, Susan Riggs, and Theresa Oakley, all of Greenville. Their gowns and flowers were identical to that of the honor attendant except for the streamers on the basket of silk flowers they carried.

Best man was Capt. Denny Sorrell of Cherry Point, and ushers included Capt. Burney McMann, CWO-4 Bill Rohleder and 1st Lt. David Durham, all of Cherry Point.

Billy Don Ellis of Greenville, brother of the bride, and Steve Miller of Morrison, Col., brother of the bridegroom, ushered their mothers.

The mother of the bride wore a pink formal gown of silesta fashioned with a scoop neckline, blouson bodice and cap sleeves. The mother of the bridegroom selected a lilac gown of polyester. Both were honored with a corsage of white roses.

Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Baldree of Farmville are grandparents of the bride.

Following the recessional, the bride and bridegroom exited the church through the arch of swords.

A reception was held at the Greenville Moose Lodge. Cake was served by Mrs. Brink Lilley while Paula Fibson, Debra Ellis, cousin of the bride, and Mrs. Fred Cargile poured punch. Mr. and Mrs. Gleen Olmstead presided at the register and greeted guests.

The bride is a graduate of ECU with a degree in nursing. She was recently employed by ECU School of Medicine, Dept. of Pediatrics. The bridegroom is a graduate of Huron College, Huron, S. D., with a degree in fine arts. He is in the United States Marine Corps.

Following a wedding trip to Colorado, the couple will reside in Quantico, Va.

Marriage Announced

MRS. JAMES GRADY WILLIAMS JR. . . . is the former Donna Kay Bostic, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ray Bostic of Rt. 2, Winterville, whose marriage to Mr. Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Grady Williams, took place Saturday afternoon at three o'clock. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Travis Owen in the Ayden United Methodist Church.

Tripp-Bailey Vows Solemnized

Deborah Nachman Bailey and Willie Hubert Tripp Jr. were united in marriage Saturday at two o'clock in a double ring ceremony at St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Officiating clergyman was Lawrence Patrick Houston Jr.

Mrs. E. Robert Irwin, organist, and David Nichols, guitarist, provided a program of wedding music. Mrs. Robert Benton, sister of the bridegroom, sang "The Wedding Song" and "Entreat Ne Not to Leave Thee."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Nachman of Vienna, Va. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Willie H. Tripp of Greenville.

Dennis Lee Tripp of Jacksonville, brother of the bridegroom, was best man and ushers included Robert Benton of Swansboro and Gary Best of Greenville.

The mother of the bride wore a street length dress of floral silk. The mother of the bridegroom selected a dress of pink floral crepe. Both wore corsages of white carnations.

MRS. WILLIE HUBERT TRIPP JR.

Following the wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Greenville.

An after-rehearsal buffet was given by the parents of the bridegroom.

The bride graduated from East Carolina University and is currently pursuing a master's degree in special education. She is employed by the Caswell Center, Kinston. The bridegroom graduated from the Coastal Plain Law Enforcement Academy, Wilson, and is employed by the Pitt County Sheriff's Dept. as identification supervisor.

Meal-In-One

Here's a handy meal-in-one for campers from NCSU agricultural extension specialists:

Wrap ground beef patties topped with raw potato strips, sliced onions and carrot strips in heavy foil. Season to taste and place ¼ strip bacon on top. Seal using a double fold.

Cook on grate or in top coals about 30 minutes, turning frequently. Fold foil back to serve.

Dear Abby

Shut Your Eyes And Turn The Page

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: We were both kids when we married. We didn't have a pot to cook in or a window to throw it out of, but we were in love.

He was ambitious, smart as they come, and worked like a horse. I did all the things a good wife should do, including raising three nice kids practically single-handedly while my husband was all over the map on business most of the time.

To make a long story short, we sort of drifted apart. Twenty years later he was a multimillionaire, and we were living in different worlds. That's when he asked for a divorce. He said there wasn't anybody else — he just wasn't "happy."

Well, I wasn't going to hang onto a man who didn't want me, so I didn't fight it. My lawyer got a much better settlement than I asked for or expected, so I am well provided for financially.

I've been alone for four years. He is now married to a younger, stylish woman who is very pretty and active socially. I frequently see her picture (usually with him) in the society section of the newspaper. Abby, every time I see a picture of that woman with my ex-husband, I get so upset I have to go to bed for a week!

I would cancel my subscription to the paper, but I love your column. What should I do?

JEALOUS

DEAR JEALOUS: Don't cancel your subscription. Just quit reading the society section.

DEAR ABBY: What is your opinion of a neighbor who brings her dog next door to do his business on MY lawn — and on a leash yet!

That dog's urine has burned white spots all over my lawn. Her lawn is lush, green and perfect.

I would give her a piece of my mind, but I don't have the nerve.

FUMING

DEAR FUMING: I think your neighbor has a lot of nerve and you don't have enough.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 21-year-old unmarried woman. Whenever I travel on a bus or plane, I enjoy conversing with the person sitting next to me. It's easy to strike up a conversation. I just introduce myself, then I'm asked where I'm going, and what for, etc.

Well, Abby, I've got this terrible habit of making up the most fantastic stories. I never lie to people I know, but just let me start talking to a stranger on a bus, and I start to spin the most outrageous yarns. I even amaze myself.

I suppose it's just a matter of time before I meet one of these fellow travelers again and get tripped up in my lies.

I keep promising myself I'll quit making up stories, but the first chance I get, I do it again. What's wrong with me?

STORYTELLER

DEAR TELLER: Probably nothing more than a lively imagination and a strong desire to exercise it. Why not try your hand at creative writing? It will fulfill your urge to fantasize without telling lies.

DEAR ABBY: I have just received an invitation to the wedding of two friends. Both are professionals and financially well-off.

The invitation indicated that the reception is to be a "potluck feast." I find this very offensive, and think that on such an occasion the least they can do is provide refreshments for their friends.

How should I respond?

DISGUSTED IN SEATTLE

DEAR DISGUSTED: A disgusted guest makes poor company. Decline — with no regrets.

DEAR ABBY: Now that Mother's Day and Father's Day are gone, and lots of June weddings have taken place, please say something about children who get married and never ask their parents to their apartment or home.

Most parents would appreciate an invitation to visit their kids, and if the kids don't want to bother preparing dinner, they could take their parents out. It would mean so much more than flowers, cards or a fancy gift.

Our son has been married for two and a half years, and we have never been asked to his place. I have hinted plenty. Is it OK to just drop in?

BEWILDERED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: If after "hinting plenty" for two and a half years, you haven't been invited, you can assume that there's still a "DO NOT DISTURB" sign hanging on their door. And I agree, most parents would consider an invitation the best gift their kids could give them.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Prolong the life of machine-made buttonholes by going over them with a buttonhole handstitch or a machine zigzag stitch. Use strong cotton, cotton covered polyester or 100 percent polyester thread.

Often called finochino, fennel looks somewhat similar to celery. Italians use this in much the same way Americans use celery. The seeds are used in many Italian dishes, spaghetti and lasagne.

Resident's Life. . .

late from the students, residents and faculty. During the next hour he gives a detailed history of two patients — one who had an unexpected stillborn delivery, and one whose baby is dead in utero.

Faculty physicians lead the discussion. What went wrong? Could the treatment plan have been changed? How could we have predicted the problems?

3:45 p.m. Hasik returns to the floor "to check on a few problems" and to visit Labor and Delivery. A 21-year-old patient has just been admitted. It is her fourth delivery, and she has not received any prenatal care. Hasik wonders if the baby is premature.

4:00 p.m. Hasik attends a grand rounds lecture on transsexuals given by the medical school's specialist in psychosomatic OB/GYN, Dr. Paul Mozley.

5:00 p.m. Hasik returns to the floor with the attending physician who is on call for the night with Hasik. They are discussing a patient who may arrive through the emergency room when Hasik's beeper blares. "Hasik! Labor and delivery!" He runs down the corridor, a medical student close on his heels. At the nursing station in the unit, the staff is ready with sterile suits.

"How much time do I have?" says Hasik. "None," replies the nurse. Seven minutes later a newborn cry drifts into the hallway. Hasik, who decided on his specialty during his junior year in medical school, has delivered about 60 babies since he began his residency at Pitt Memorial less than a year ago.

6:30 p.m. A critically ill patient with hypertension is transferred to the special fetal-maternal unit in the labor and delivery area. MacKenna and Hasik watch her closely for the slightest change in condition.

For the remainder of the evening, Hasik spends his time between this patient and those on the floor who require special attention. At 3:00 a.m. he takes a break for a sandwich in the hospital's 24-hour snack bar.

4:15 a.m. Hasik goes to the "on call room" provided for residents and faculty physicians who spend their nights at the hospital. He enjoys 45 minutes of sleep before being called to do a delivery, the first of four he will perform during the day.

2:00 p.m. After a quick sandwich, Hasik spends the rest of the day in Labor and Delivery. He completes another set of rounds and gives the next resident reporting for work an update on special problems to watch.

7:45 p.m. Hasik leaves the hospital. He has worked over 37 hours, and he is tired. "The schedule is as stressful as you would expect," says Hasik. "It takes a toll on your personal life, social life — and your sleep. But it is the pressure that helps me develop my judgment and teaches me how to set priorities and make decisions. After all, dealing with problems cooly, smoothly and efficiently is what being a physician means.

"I love it."

Claude Pepper, Upholding Dignity Of The Elderly

By JANET STAIHAR
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress' crusader for old folks, Claude Denson Pepper, is galloping toward his 80th birthday and ready to go to war with any wet-behind-the-ears politicians who want to trample the rights of aged underdogs.

At a time in life when others have packed it in, Pepper — who was a confidant to Franklin D. Roosevelt and is now the oldest man in the House of Representatives — is running to fight off any slur on the dignity of the elderly.

"Don't get under the assumption that when you get 65, life is over," the Florida Democrat scolds as he fine-tunes one of his hearing aids.

"My Lord, how long has that been for me? That's 14 years."

With his flamboyance and penchant for publicity, Pepper, as chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging, has drawn attention to senior citizen problems, although his panel is only an advisory, investigative body that cannot produce legislation.

Once Pepper nabs golden-age film and television stars like Ruth Gordon, Lee Strasberg and Jack Albertson to testify on issues dear to the hearts of the aged, his press staff notifies the television networks, the news services and the influential newspapers.

And it isn't a rare occurrence when Pepper, street smart in the ways of the broadcast media, will turn to the cameras with booming oratory to blister any witnesses who aren't doing right by the old folks.

Although his actual legislative muscle is limited to jawboning his pet bills through others' committees, Pepper's aggressiveness and constant pecking away at recalcitrant House members and federal agencies have won important triumphs for the elderly:

—Meals-on-wheels for those too incapacitated to leave home;

—A $32-million program to combat crime in public housing projects dominated by the elderly;

—Amtrak discounts for the elderly.

Pepper, as a member of the Rules Committee which decides what bills get onto the House floor, can rake in IOUs from the Democratic leadership and the White House. He cashes them in later to win legislation he thinks is imperative.

In 1978, he called in a pile of chits from House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill.

Pepper, with O'Neill's blessings, maneuvered through Congress a bill abolishing mandatory retirement in the federal government and raising the retirement age from 65 to 70 in the private sector.

"Me?," Pepper replies to the question when he might end a career that spans 14 years in the Senate and 18 years in the House. "I have set the year 2000 for my retirement, but I might change my mind."

And, by that, it's obvious that if Pepper has his way, he may retire later than age 100 — not sooner. He marks his 80th birthday Sept. 8.

During a typical afternoon in Pepper's office, a flow of elderly people came in to get a glimpse of their hero. Often they only drop in to tell him to fight on and applaud the job he's done.

"People write to me every day that they just want to live with reasonable satisfaction and comfort," says Pepper. "That means to have decent income. In South Miami Beach (part of his district), there are elderly who have to choose between a cup of coffee and a newspaper. Many, many live in abject poverty.

"I would like every person who reaches 65 to be able to continue work and earn all they can without diminution in their Social Security checks," Pepper says of a goal he is shooting for.

He bristles at the notion that old people should be retired to make room for younger workers.

"That's utter tomfoolery!" Pepper says, pounding his desk.

Pepper's own formula for longevity is "keep on doing what you've been doing" all along, but maybe at a slower pace.

"I was playing golf one day, when I noticed my partner's clubs were lighter than mine. I tried his and I found I could handle them easier. So I changed to less weighty clubs.

"So that's what you do in life. When you come to a time when there's a need for any sort of change. Simply lighten your clubs and change your behavior a little bit, and go right ahead."

Pepper is still outpacing aides in the hallways as they puff along trying to brief him on the next topic awaiting his attention.

Four years ago, Pepper had open heart surgery to replace a calcified valve. When he awoke from anesthesia, Pepper — with his reddish-blond toupee and bulbish nose — jokingly reprimanded the surgeon for not making him 30 years younger and better looking.

The lowest time of his life was two years ago when his wife Mildred, an accomplished artist and spirited grande dame, died after a long struggle with cancer.

"Claude went numb for over a year," recalls a friend. "He couldn't get a handle on anything. Some of us expected him to fade away. But he has popped back, and it surprised many of us."

Still suffering deeply from the loss of his wife, Pepper conducted an emotional hearing months after she died, where he called in the top medical experts to testify on the newest anti-cancer drugs. He was near tears as he chaired the hearing, but aides say it seemed to be the turning point when he became involved in legislation again.

"I've got a lot to do," Pepper says now. "Except for my terrible burden of loneliness, I enjoy life. It has always been good to me."

Patience wasn't one thing in life that Pepper excelled in, neither as a farm boy in Dudleyville, Ala., nor in his buzz-saw years in the U.S. Senate where his civil liberal philosophy and pro-New Deal views brought him the derisive nickname, "Red Pepper." He went to Washington as a senator at age 36.

While at the University of Alabama and Harvard Law School in the 1920s, he waited on tables in cafeterias and emptied coal ashes in a power plant to pay his tuition. But he still managed to find time to graduate with top honors and compete on the track team.

He taught law at the University of Arkansas where one of his students was senator-to-be J.W. Fulbright. He next practiced law in Perry, Fla., in 1929. When death caused a Senate vacancy, Pepper was elected without opposition to the term's remaining two years.

As an ambitious senator, Pepper became famous for his support of the 40-hour work week, civil rights of blacks and other underprivileged classes, his anti-Hitler views, and pro-United Nations stand.

In those days, Pepper carried clout among the liberals, and there was talk in high circles that he was destined for No. 1 or No. 2 spot on a Democratic ticket.

"Mistakes, yes, I've made them, and if I listened to my wife more often, some tell me I could've been vice president," he says aloud as he looks back over what might have been.

Pepper was defeated for the Senate seat in 1950 by young congressman George Smathers.

Pepper bided his time in a Florida law practice, then came roaring back to win election to the House in 1962, a job he has held since.

Credits Bridge To The Soviet

VULCAN, W.Va. (AP) — John Robinette, self-proclaimed mayor of this 50-family hamlet, sipped Russian vodka as the red ribbon was cut, opening the bridge — and the only public road — to the isolated community.

"The Russians are responsible for this bridge," said Robinette, who had asked the Soviet Union for foreign aid in his five-year fight to replace the old bridge that collapsed.

Robinette proudly christened the new, single-lane, cement span in a Fourth of July ceremony with two bottles of Russian vodka. But the 43-year-old former carnival worker was bitter, too, because some Vulcanites resented his drive to restore the link with the rest of the world, while others didn't like his methods.

The tiny southern West Virginia hamlet is wedged between the Appalachian Mountains and the Tug Fork of the Big Sandy River. It has no roads, only a private railroad right-of-way by the river. There used to be a passenger stop here, but now the trains carry only coal.

Until 1975, Vulcan's residents, mostly coal miners, could walk across a turn-of-the-century, wooden footbridge into Kentucky, where they'd park their cars. Or they could reach a road by going 2 miles downriver on the rocky right-of-way.

When the bridge rotted away five years ago, leaving Vulcan more isolated than ever, Robinette launched his campaign.

The Kentucky native gained worldwide attention in 1976 after he asked the Soviet Union for help when he was frustrated by bureaucratic delays here.

The Soviets quickly dispatched Iona Andronov, described as a journalist, to investigate. Within hours of his visit, Kentucky and West Virginia officials announced they would build a new bridge.

Charles Preston of the state Highway Department speculated "that somebody in Washington said 'do it and shut this guy up.' The story was embarrassing. It became an international incident."

Ironically, Robinette doesn't live in Vulcan anymore. Many of his neighbors resented the attention focused on Vulcan, he said, so he recently moved to Edgarton two miles down the railroad track.

At one point, some Vulcanites even threatened to "blow the bridge out of the water," Robinette said.

"My own brother didn't want to get involved," he said. "I don't like the tactics I used, the Soviet bit, but I had to. I didn't care who built it."

Andronov, who was on hand to help inaugurate the bridge, said, "Let them fight over Afghanistan. We'll drink to the new bridge.

"When I go back to Moscow there will be a part of me here, in West Virginia, over the Tug Fork."

Campaign Songs Of Past Didn't Bore

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Peter Janovsky is assistant principal at Grace Dodge Vocational High School in New York City. He also is chairman of the social studies and music departments and an occasional nightclub and coffee house entertainer.

So when his students are becoming bored with the ups and downs of the Republican Party, what better way to liven things up than by whipping out the old guitar and hitting them with a ditty?

"In everlasting glory stand the great Republicans,

"Hoover, Taft and Coolidge and the man called Abraham.

"Now Ike is there beside them, in our nation's Hall of Fame.

That song, by Al Lamm and Joe Martin, was used in Nixon's 1960 campaign. With dozens like it, it's on a new record of campaign music dating back to 1896, "Winners and Losers, Campaign Songs from Critical Elections in American History," compiled and performed by Janovsky.

Janovsky, 32, has often used music to bring history to life. He hit on the campaign song several years ago when he was assigned to teach political science, "What can you use with that, a singing V.O. Key Jr. textbook?" he asks. "Campaign songs seemed like a good idea."

It also seemed like a good idea to Folkway Records, which took notice when Janovsky performed some of the songs at a convention in Cincinnati three years ago and signed him up. His first volume of campaign songs from 1800 to 1876, was issued in 1978.

The material, gleaned from folk song anthologies and libraries, includes things like the Democratic standard, "Happy Days Are Here Again," first used for Franklin Roosevelt in 1932; parodies of popular songs by such as Sammy Cahn and E.Y. "Yip" Harburg; Jimmy Carter's "Why Not the Best?" and a 1976 Gerald Ford tune recorded in English and Spanish and used as background in television commercials.

The most applicable to today's politics may be a parody of "The Whippenpoof Song," composed spontaneously by a group of Harry Truman's workers on election night, 1948, after Truman befuddled the pollsters and defeated Thomas Dewey.

The second verse goes:

"Yes the music of their weeping,

"O'er the polls which missed like hell,

"Elmo Roper, Georgie Gallup and the rest.

"We will serenade our Dewey,

"While life and breath do last,

"Then we'll pass and be forgotten like Digest.

"We are poor little lambs who were led astray,

"Bah, bah, bah.

"Little black sheep who will miss our pay,

"Bah, bah, bah.

"Gentlemen pollsters up a tree,

"Damned from here to eternity,

"God please save us from Tom Dew-wee'

"Bah, bah, bah."

If you're interested in issues, best to listen to the earlier campaign anthems. Yale student Charles Ives, who was to become one of America's foremost composers, wrote a Gilbert and Sullivanesque campaign song for William McKinley in 1896 that dealt with stirring things like free silver and tariffs:

"Give us no depreciation

"With a silver variation

"Juggle not the workman's pence!

"For it rouses all his choler

"When he finds his well-earned dollar,

"Has been whittled down to only 50 cents!

"Has been whittled down to only 50 cents!"

More recent hymns have their share of personal venom, applied in heavy-handed doses: A 1932 Herbert Hoover ditty refers to Franklin Roosevelt as "that slicky wacki wicki Bolsheviki Mickey Mouse."

"John Quincy John, my Joe, John,

"You mind your father's creed,

"Was that the rich should govern, John,

"But that the poor should bleed."

Or this 1800 tune for Thomas Jefferson's campaign, a thrust at John Quincy's father:

"The gloomy night before us flies,

"The Reign of Terror now is o'er,

"Its Gags, Inquisitors and Spies,

"Its herd of harpies are no more."

The simplicity of the old era may have been lost forever in 1976 with Gerald Ford's "I'm Feelin' Good About America," written by Robert Gardner and performed by Janovsky in both English and Spanish.

There were numerous versions — hard rock, country, soul, California rock, marching band, as well as Cuban, Mexican and Puerto-Rican accented Spanish — varied according to the most likely audience for a television spot.

"Six days before the election "Feelin' good about America" became trapped in my mind," wrote Malcolm MacDougall, a Ford advertising consultant quoted in Janovsky's program notes. "No one suspected that I was a walking juke box, playing the same song over and over again."

Janovsky also writes his own New York-oriented tunes for his nightclub act. His voice seems a cross between the late Phil Ochs and Tom Lehrer. Working out of a studio apartment on New York's West Side cluttered with musical instruments and taping equipment, he serves as his own agent and publicist.

Right now, he's eager to get going on 1980 campaign music. He hasn't found much he can use.

"I called Reagan headquarters the other day to see what they had," he says. "They said they haven't really thought about a song yet."

Lutherans Adopt Title Of Bishop

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — Use of the title, "bishop," is becoming the style among Lutherans in the United States.

A shift to that usage was voted at the governing convention of the 3 million-member Lutheran Church in America for the head of the denomination, Bishop James Crumley, and heads of its 33 regional synods.

They previously were called presidents.

Earlier, a sister denomination, the 2.4 million-member American Lutheran Church, adopted the usage of "bishop," which long has been common among Lutherans in Europe and elsewhere.

But the third major U.S. branch of Lutheranism, the 2.6 million-member Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, still sticks to the term, "president."

That usage was favored among early American Lutherans to avoid the ecclesiastical pomp associated with the "Old World" of Europe.

Named Chairman For Bible Week

NEW YORK (AP) — The Laymen's National Bible Committee has named North Dakota's Gov. Arthur A. Link as chairman of the governors' committee for National Bible Week next November. Accepting, he said in a statement: "Biblical principles are deeply rooted in our social fabric."

Hoping For U.S. Roles

By ALISON SMALE

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — In the mass of refugees streaming across a Germany ravaged by war in 1945, a 2-year-old girl came with her family from Silesia to Munich.

Thirty-five years later, American critics call her "the new Marlene Dietrich." She has won international fame for portraying a woman's struggle for survival in those confused post war years in a new movie.

Hanna Schygulla is a frizzy-haired blonde whose black-stockinged figure stares seductively from posters advertizing "The Marriage of Maria Braun."

"Maria Braun," first shown in West Germany in 1979, is the story of a woman married for one day before her husband goes off to fight in World War II and remains a prisoner when it ends. Maria first lives with a black American GI, then abandons him for a rich man who helps her establish an independent career. When her husband finally returns they are together for only a day before both are killed in a fire.

With other German films such as Hans Juergen Syberberg's "Hitler," Wim Wender's "The American Friend," and Werner Herzog's Dracula tale "Nosferatu," "The Marriage of Maria Braun" has won new recognition for the German cinema in the United States. It catapulted Schygulla to stardom.

How far she had moved became clear when she went to New York last fall to help launch the film, and contrasted the trip with an earlier vacation.

"On the first journey, I hitched. People would ask me, 'What do you do in Germany?' I said I was an actress. 'Oh, are you famous?' Oh, no, no.

"When I went there the second time, it was so different and sometimes it made me laugh."

Schygulla welcomes the success of "Maria Braun" because it gives her the chance to work in America.

"In contrast to Germany, it really excites me. Here, people look at you critically, without trust, and there it is quite different. The readiness to excite one another, it's like a national virtue, super oxygen for the spirit."

In a nation where school theater is rare and the study of drama more theory than practice, it scarcely occurred to Hanna Schygulla to become an actress. She studied languages at Munich University and only turned to acting when a friend took her along to drama classes.

There, Miss Schygulla met Rainer Werner Fassbinder, the bombastic director of "The Marriage of Maria Braun" and more than 50 other films made at a phenomenal pace. He made his first film in 23 days. A few months later his second won a huge cash prize.

Fassbinder, and a blonde actress with perfect skin and a soft, wistful gaze, were on their way.

"When we started filming there was a gap in the market," Miss Schygulla said in an interview. "Where there is hardly anything happening, everything that happens is looked at especially carefully. In another country, it certainly would have been very different."

She made 10 more films with Fassbinder and took the title role in the film of Theodor Fontane's 19th century romance, "Effi Briest," which for the first time took Hanna Schygulla's name outside the confines of a small circle of film buffs in Munich.

But in 1975, with national fame at her fingertips, Hanna Schygulla turned her back on acting, alternately living as a recluse in Munich, then devoting herself to painting and children's theater.

"Maria Braun," directed by Fassbinder, was the comeback, and the actress firmly believes her years of "resting" helped make it a success.

"For those years, I followed my inclinations," she says. "I breathed in new air, and had a new desire to act, a feeling that I had moved on."

Award Status Of Diplomate

Dr. E. G. Crawford Jr., Greenville oral surgeon, has been awarded Diplomate Status by the American Board of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgeons.

Recognition by the board is granted to candidates who demonstrate, in written and oral testing, qualifications beyond those required for basic oral surgery training.

A Franklin native, Dr. Crawford is a graduate of the University of North Carolina School of Dentistry and a former member of the faculty of the UNC Dental School. He has practiced here since 1976.

Mexican-American Has Strong Voice

By MACK SISK

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — Some say Archbishop Patrick Fernandez Flores — hailed by supporters as a saint, criticized by detractors as a devil — may be the single most powerful Mexican-American in the United States.

Since Flores became the first Mexican-American elevated to the rank of bishop in the Roman Catholic Church a decade ago, he has shown no reluctance to become involved in political debate.

Recently, Flores stirred up a controversy by writing a letter to the mayor and city council here criticizing the appointment of an anglo, instead of Mexican-American, as police chief.

One critic wrote to a local newspaper that the archbishop's actions were "reminiscent of the fiendish, devilish Ayatollah Khomeini, who began about 15 years ago by writing letters attacking the government in Iran."

Flores, 50, never has shied away from controversy since he chose May 5, 1970, the Mexican holiday known as "Cinco de Mayo," to be ordained as "a successor of the apostles" and invited Farmworkers Union chief Cesar Chavez and La Raza Unida party founder Jose Angel Gutierrez to take part in the ceremony.

He says he has no intention of changing now, despite allegations from his opponents that his statements on what they deem purely political matters may violate Pope John Paul II's policies.

"I agree with what the Holy Father said in Mexico (in 1979)," he has said. "We should not be involved in politics except in response to our gospel commitment. Since the lives of people are controlled, destroyed or enhanced by those in politics, we have to speak to them, but as part of our Gospel commitment."

Besides his criticism of the San Antonio's hiring practices — particularly the naming of Robert Heuck, a Catholic, instead of Capt. Pedro Casias, whom Flores said was more qualified by virtue of a master's degree — the archbishop has been outspoken on other issues.

He has denounced alleged discrimination by the criminal justice system against the disadvantaged, the treatment of Mexican aliens who cross the Rio Grande looking for work and abortion or sterilization of welfare mothers. He has supported unionizing impoverished farm workers and reducing the number of bars in the nation's 10th largest city.

Flores, who was elevated on Oct. 13, 1979, to lead 700,000 Catholics in 32 South Texas counties, the overwhelming majority of them Spanish-surnamed, wrote President Carter on April 3, asking him to curtail shipments of arms to the government of strife-torn El Salvador.

"In a very real sense," he wrote, "this appeal was the last will and testament of Archbishop (Oscar Arnulfo) Romero" who was assassinated on March 24. "It is no secret that 8 percent of the people control over half the national income" in El Salvador.

In 1976, Flores and 57 others were arrested and detained by the government secret service at a religious meeting in Riobamba, Ecuador. Flores said the arrests were intended to embarrass Bishop Leonedas Porano of Riobamba, "who has been experiencing a great opposition from wealthy persons and politicians for his interest in the education and well-being" of impoverished and oppressed Indians.

Through a busy pace of visits to each parish, homes for the aged, jails, hospitals, prayer groups, community conferences and rallies, Flores has solidified his support in the Mexican-American community, sometimes angering other members of the church.

In the police chief flap, city councilman Bernardo Eureste said the archbishop was right.

"I agree with what he's saying and a lot of people feel he is speaking for them," Eureste said. "We tell Chicanos and blacks to get an education. Casias gets a master's degree and is told that doesn't count as much as street experience. There is an irony there."

Councilman Henry Cisneros said he disagreed with Flores' stand on the police chief appointment, "but he has a right to express his opinion."

Carter and Texas Gov. Bill Clements have sought his advice. Local politicans try not to irritate the former high school dropout who has become a champion of the nation's 10 million Mexican-Americans.

The seventh in a poor migrant family of nine children, Flores has made it plain he intends to continue speaking out on the issues that affect his parishioners.

During his 24 years as an ordained priest, Flores has established a record of activism in civil rights and equal employment opportunities. He was a member of PADRES, a group of activist priests that backed the Rio Grande Valley farmworkers strike a decade ago. He supported strikers who eventually put Farah Manufacturing Co. out of business in San Antonio. He was a driving force behind the founding of Citizens Organized for Public Service, a confrontation coalition that has changed San Antonio politics.

To those who claim his entrance into public debates runs afoul of church doctrine, Flores replies:

"Precisely because there is a Gospel command, I will continue to speak up when I feel it is necessary.

"Would my critics have me not speak? If that's true, then why does President Carter call and ask for my opinion on occasion? He knows I am a churchman. Why does Gov. Clements want to meet with me? He knows I am a churchman."

Flores makes it clear he does not consider the Vatican's announced intentions to enforce a longstanding prohibition on priests' involvement in partisan, electoral politics as applicable in the questioniing of governmental policies when Flores thinks they interfere with church doctrine.

Thumbing a red and white booklet entitled "As One Who Serves," Flores read: "When the priest senses conditions in which the people live where he serves and when he experiences the poverty and hunger of so many others in the local community, the nation, and the world, he cannot remain passive. Such silence would be a form of tacit approval of the way things are and a misinterpretation of what the Gospel demands."

"We cannot remain silent," Flores added.

In addition to his other duties, Flores serves as chairman of the Texas Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights which recently issued a scathing criticism of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Richard Casillas, head of the local INS office, accused the committee of pre-judging the federal agency. He said the report, signed by Flores, was "McCarthyism at its finest hour."

Later in criticizing Hilmar Moore, chairman of the Texas Board of Human Resources, who suggested that welfare mothers ought to be sterilized, Flores said, "that issue is a political issue. It's a religious issue, too, because it concerns the dignity of women."

Since assuming the archbishop's position, Flores said the issues he is involved in "are those the Lord would want us to do: helping children stay in school, getting just treatment in the jails, helping undocumented workers get their pay."

Born July 26, 1929, in Ganado, Texas, Flores dropped out of high school in the 10th grade to help his family make a living on farms in the Houston and Galveston area. At the urging of an elderly nun, he resumed his studies three years later and graduated from parochial Kerwin High School in Galveston.

In 1949 he entered St. Mary's Seminary at La Porte, Texas. He later attended St. Mary's Seminary in Houston.

For his coat of arms on being selected the first Mexican-American bishop, Flores chose a shield depicting the Aztec eagle of Mexico, a palm branch, the lone star of Texas, a white rose and two bees.

He said the shield's emblems depicted his life: poverty, migration, hard work, discouragement and success.

His childhood left a deep impression on Flores. He spent four or five months of every school year on the road with his migrant parents and said, no matter how hard he worked, he was not allowed into neighborhood swimming pools.

Because some of his brothers had lighter skins, they were allowed into a skating rink, but Flores, with a darker complexion, was not.

Some people called the children "Meskins" and told them "you will always be that and you will never be anything better," the archbishop once said.

"So many things like this happened that we began to question whether we really were created equal in the eyes of God and whether we were equal as citizens as we had been taught in school.

"My parents had blind faith in the church and blind faith in America. They believed that, even though many of us suffered from these conditions, some day things would change for the better."

Makes A Living Keeping Expensive Cars 'Tuned'

By TERRANCE W. McGARRY

HARBOR CITY, Calif. (UPI) — Knifing down the freeway in a car that looks capable of mach 2, his teeth flashing behind a wind-whipped black beard, he is a turbanned shark among the "commuter fishes" dullmobiles.

He keeps expensive, fast automobiles from going the way of the buffalo herds.

The masterpieces of European sports car designers, such as Lamborghinis and Ferrari Boxers, were almost driven off U.S. highways in the 1970s by the barrage of environmental, safety and mileage regulations.

Many European firms have stopped selling their cars in the United States, or restricted the models available.

Rarewala once represented Lamborghini of Italy in its dealing with U.S. governmental agencies. In 1974, he opened his own business to bring such "forbidden" autos into compliance with American laws.

"Part of me hates to do this," he conceded. "Putting on these devices strangles these marvelous engines. We are killing things of beauty."

In 1975 ACI (Auto Compliance Inc.) converted two cars. Now, at 34, he has a staff of 10 mechanics and handles about six cars a month, taking in $50,000 a month in conversion fees at a profit of more than $120,000 a year.

The parking lot of Rarewala's shop is a car nut's dream. Countaches stand fender to fender with Kremmer Porsches, the $22,000 four wheel drive Range Rover and the recently revived orginal version of the Cobra.

He has got the paperwork down, he says, to the point where he can now gather all the information needed before Washington can get the forms to him. Someone who buys a non-import model in Europe and has it shipped to Rarewala can expect to wait about three months for its return and pay from $10,000 to $20,000 for the conversion.

That may not be chicken feed, but it is not so steep for a car that may have cost more than $90,000 in Europe to begin with, such as the 210-mile-per-hour Lamborghini Countach, one of his most popular items.

For those who don't have time to car shop in Italy, Rarewala will turn over a fully Americanized Countach for about $120,000.

The recession may be hitting dealers in lower priced cars — in Rarewala's league, Porsches and Rolls-Royces fall into that class — but his business is just fine.

"People who have serious money are still buying. The high priced market is not affected by these short recessions. And this will continue as long as these cars are built.

"Everyone seems to agree that there are a finite number of years left for these super exotic cars. Regulations are closing in on them from all sides.

"This is their last hurrah. Germany and Italy are the only countries that invite them in with open arms. In Italy, even the police look disgusted at you if you are going less than 120 kilometers an hour (75 mph) in one of these cars."

Exotic autos are included in the rush by wealthy Americans to convert depreciating dollars into assets that will increase in value, and some buyers purchase them, not to drive, but as an investment in "rolling real estate," he said.

"One of my customers, a San Jose sheet metal manufacturer, has four Countaches. He would have five but as he was driving the last one home, he stopped for coffee and a guy in the restaurant offered him a $10,000 profit if he would sell it to him.

"He sold."

"These cars will be the Bugattis of the future," said Rarewala, referring to the French-built cars of the 1930s for which collectors now pay $100,000 or more.

It is not just California car freaks who indulge. Up to 40 percent of his customers come from the East and South.

"I know of a guy in Oklahoma who is putting his money in Rolls-Royces. I hear he has 300 to 500 Rolls-Royces."

"These cars bring the advances of racing technology to passenger cars. They apply a lot of radical stuff the bigger manufacturers are slow to utilize, and that gives them an influence out of proportion to their numbers. That Countach is the best braking car on the road today, and its structure is very sound, very crashworthy."

"It's a pet peeve of mine that Washington has related speed itself to fuel economy. Speed makes a difference but there is not an absolute relationship. Washington has excluded speed from personal transportation, but it is possible to design cars that are very fast and yet fuel efficient.

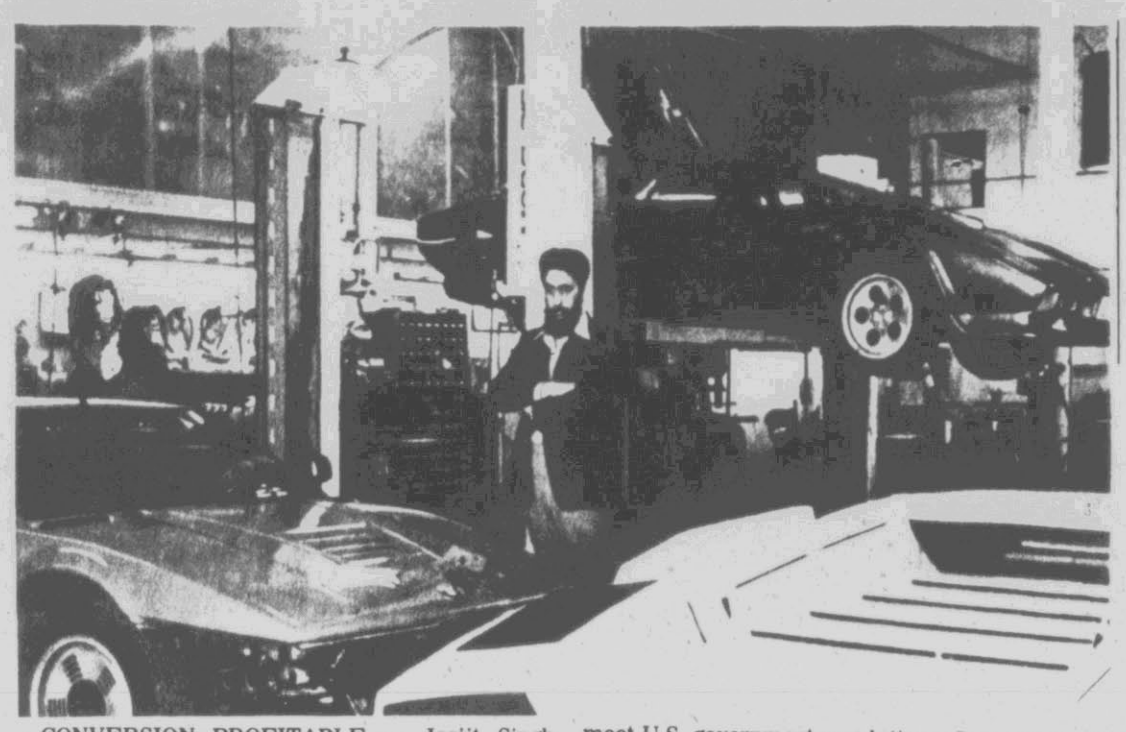
"These cars get better mileage at high speed. The Countach gets about 9 mpg running at 55, but more than 20 mpg at 90. At high speed it's getting the same mileage a little Fiat or Toyota is under the 55 mile limit."

"I'm going to design my own car, a car that will give very good fuel economy at high speeds too. My target is to meet the government's 27 mpg requirement at 100 mph, to design a car that will do 150 mph on a 125 horsepower engine.

"It can be done. The French Mantras I convert can do 118 with a 78 horsepower engine, which is less powerful than many motorcycles today."

Rarewala is the son of Gian Singh Rarewala, a well known Sikh political leader in India. The elder Rarewala was a judge under the British Raj, and later chief minister of East Punjab and education and agriculture minister in the Indian government.

"We are a political family from way back," said Rarewala. "My sister is still active in Sikh politics in India." He came to the United States to attend Pratt Institute and got into the exotic car industry through a school project in auto design.



CONVERSION PROFITABLE — Jasjit Singh Rarewala stands among some of the exotic foreign cars in his shop that mechanics are converting to meet U.S. government regulations. Conversion cost is from $10,000- to $20,000. (UPI Photo)

Winterville Board Meets

WINTERVILLE — The Board of Aldermen will hold its monthly meeting Monday night to discuss several items.

On the agenda for the meeting is a petition on a drainage ditch between Worthington Heights and Robinson Heights. The Board wiull also approve the advertisement for bids for street paving for Gaylord, Liberty, parts of Bethanna Court, S. Railroad from Cooper to Blount, Blount Street from S. Railroad to Mills, widening S. Railroad from Main to Cooper, and Hammond from Mill to Grimes.

A petition will be presented for the annexation of Ragland Acres. Service fees will be considered, and approval will also be considered for the annual audit contract from Farley, Prescott, Mizelle and Co. for $3,375. The Board will also consider approval of the printing of the 1980 tax bills by Pitt County Data Processing.

Finds Problems Simply Dressing

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — "Dressing is such a common thing. It's so routine, we don't stop to think about it. But if you have a handicap, even a simple act of dressing can be a problem."

So says Elanor [illegible]tke Hotte, professor emeritus of the School of Home Economics and Family Studies at the University of Connecticut and author of the booklet, "Self-Help Clothing."

The booklet, written for parents of children with physical handicaps, is published by the National Easter Seal Society. It contains suggestions on how to teach children to dress themselves; how to adapt ready-to-wear clothing to fit the different needs of handicapped youngsters, and what fabrics to look for and how to care for them.

Hurricane Data On Shopping Bag

Backgammon Could Take A Lifetime Of Learning

By MARK BARABAK
United Press International

Poor Grandpa, whiling away yesteryear summer nights on the porch swing with his humble checkerboard, probably never realized what he was missing.

Those funny triangles on the flipside offered a lot more than he might have reckoned — as 20 million Americans and countless backgammon enthusiasts worldwide will attest today.

Long relegated to secondary status, backgammon has taken off. It's a newfound resurgence for a game that's been around so long one wag suggests next to sex, it's civilization's oldest game.

The earliest board, found in what is now Iraq, has been dated at 3,000 B.C. The Egyptians played it, placing game pieces in King Tut's tomb. Plato, Sophocles and Homer mulled its complexities and Thomas Jefferson was a consistent loser.

Literally hundreds of tournaments are held worldwide each year, with cash prizes climbing into the millions. The pervasive rattle of dice and clack of chips has come to confer a new chic and elegance on the social scene.

Part of the rage stems from the game's deceptive simplicity.

"A woman came into our office to ask about entering her son in our tournament," relates Louise Goldsmith, director of the World Amateur Backgammon Championship.

"She kept saying how great he was, how he knew all the moves and then paused and asked if maybe she wasn't pushing him.

"We asked how old he was... she said 4."

So what's all the mania for a game that can be mastered by a kid a year shy of kindergarten?

Says Howard Markowitz, part owner of one Chicago gaming establishment, "It takes only 15 minutes to learn to play, but you spend the rest of your life learning to play properly."

"It's deceptively simple," said Sidney Jackson, Los Angeles-based director of the American Backgammon Players Association. "Only when you start to learn the game can you realize how little you really know."

Quite simply, backgammon is a race between two players trying to remove all 15 of their chips from positions throughout the board. The moves are determined by the throw of two dice, a variant that lends the game a compelling twist.

"When using the dice, the most improbable things can happen and usually do," says William Boyd, a San Francisco attorney, tournament organizer and player.

Quoting an age old sports adage he insists, "It's probably the only game where any given time, any given player can beat any other.

"Even the world's greatest player can be beaten, maybe not as often, but he is just as susceptible as anyone else, totally unlike chess. In chess, the better players always wins, in backgammon he usually does."

Boyd feels this shot-at-the-big-guy mentality provides much of the game's appeal.

"It's another thing that keeps it exciting. You know that Bobby Fischer is better than you are in chess, but there's this blindspot backgammon players have that won't let them admit this other guy is better. And they keep plugging."

"Unlike chess, which is strategic but dry and slow, backgammon has an inordinate amount of strategy and moves fast", says Markowitz, part owner of Gammon's of Chicago. Most games take about 10 to 15 minutes.

The inherent fast-paced nature of backgammon makes it an exciting, wide-open game, hence more suited to the social milieu.

"You couldn't play monopoly or chess in a bar," Boyd maintains. "But backgammon can be played reasonably well in any setting — at home, in a bar, a disco and people can still enjoy themselves."

Markowitz echoed the sentiment, noting the game's popularity soared when it become a social phenomenon.

"There was and is an incredible untapped market out there of people who would take the board out at home and play just a couple games. Then they see it in a bar or restaurant and start going out for an evening to play it."

"It's the ideal social situation," says Players Association President Sid Jackson. "You don't have to throw money around, afford a snazzy car or have the stamina to run a marathon. All you need is moderate intelligence and to enjoy the competition."

Boyd claims backgammon for a long time was a game for the effete and well to do, very social, high society kind of game.

"In the last 15 years though it's slowly filtered down and more and more people have become interested."

"The game itself long had the image of sexy, jet setting players flying off to exotic places for tournaments," Jackson says. "But it's since transcended that crowd."

Boyd recalls going to a client's home in a poor section of San Francisco several years ago and noticing the children upstairs playing backgammon.

"That's when I decided the game had arrived," he says.

A book buyer for one of the nation's major chain stores indicates sale of backgammon books in their franchises continue to soar.

"It began about a year-and-a-half, two years ago and has carried on. The craze still seems to being going on very strong."

Still, the owner of one Southern California chain of retail gaming stores insists the popularity remains localized, centered mostly in major cities.

"There are a lot of places like Tucson, Ariz. or Muskogee, Okla., where it's just catching on. It hasn't had the impact yet it has had here in Southern California."

But he's confident it's just a matter of time.

"It's slowly catching on, like any fad," he said, using a word that's anathema to most serious students of the game. "It has the perfect balance of luck and skill to attract a wide audience.

"But it's not just a fad, it'll be around, played by families like checkers was in older generations. But these days, no one plays checkers anymore."

REST OF YOUR LIFE? — Martin Weinstein and Judith Naschien play backgammon. "It takes only 15 minutes to learn to play, but you spend the rest of your life learning to play properly," says a gaming establishment owner. (UPI Photo)

Exile Somoza Lives As A Very Rich Recluse

By TOM FENTON
Associated Press Writer

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — A year after Sandinista guerrillas drove him from his homeland, Anastasio Somoza is living the life of a wealthy recluse, tending his businesses from afar, toying with new investments and dreaming about going back to Nicaragua.

He also worries about extradition, is growing fat, feels depressed over losing his country and is trying to avoid doing anything that will embarrass his host, President Alfredo Stroessner.

In a 90-minute interview — given on condition that he not be quoted directly — the toppled Central American leader talked freely about his life and his regrets.

Somoza blames communism, President Carter and former Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez for his fall from power, but he said he is not bitter.

If he had to do it all over again, he said, he might have surrendered power earlier to some form of provisional government, avoiding further bloodshed. The Nicaraguan Red Cross estimates 50,000 people were killed in a year of fighting that ended shortly after Somoza left Nicaragua July 17, 1979.

He said he believes the left-wing Sandinistas were foolish to press socialism so quickly on Nicaragua, that a popular revolt is inevitable, and that it could pave the way for his return — maybe even to political power.

Somoza, 54, is heavier now than a year ago. His jowls dangle and his belly spills over his belt when he sits, although he said he runs four miles a day and occasionally swims more than a mile.

The former president lives with his Nicaraguan mistress, Dinorah Sampson, on broad, tree-lined General Genes Avenue, where he has rented a rambling Spanish-colonial mansion. His wife, Hope, reportedly lives in Britain.

Behind its high walls, the Somoza home has trim lawns and a swimming pool. Two Mercedes Benz automobiles and a Ford station wagon sat in the driveway. The gates were manned by plainclothes Paraguayan security officers, and a submachine gun-toting Paraguayan trooper patrolled the grounds.

Some Paraguayans, quoting indiscreet servants, said Somoza drinks heavily, and others said he has been seen enjoying himself in Asuncion nightspots, where he has gained a reputation as a lavish tipper.

But during a recent visit by a reporter who knew him in Nicaragua, Somoza spurned Chivas Regal brought on a silver tray by a white-coated houseboy and called for coffee instead.

Somoza, a West Point graduate, said the United States dealt the fatal blow to his government when it cut off military assistance to Nicaragua because of the regime's alleged human rights violations and pressured other nations to do likewise.

He blames President Carter for this and warns that unless the United States gets tougher on communism, an American will not be able to set foot across the Rio Grande 10 years from now.

Somoza's opponents contend the fallen strongman fought so hard to perpetuate his family's 45-year rule of Nicaragua merely because he wanted to continue plundering the country.

With an "I-told-you-so" smugness, Somoza claims that the Sandinistas are holding almost 8,000 prisoners, pending trial by what he described as kangaroo courts. He said his regime on the average held about 200 prisoners at a time.

Somoza claimed there are 37,000 Nicaraguan refugees scattered around the Western Hemisphere, and he said he receives 10 to 15 letters a day from them, many containing pleas for help.

The wealthy exile makes clear he does not wish to jeopardize his stay in Paraguay, where there has been some opposition to granting him permanent-residence status.

The Sandinistas said they would seek to have Somoza extradited back to Nicaragua on charges ranging from corruption to genocide — his national guard was accused of committing repeated atrocities during the revolution. But the new Nicaraguan government apparently has made no serious attempt at extradition.

Somoza, nevertheless, is obviously concerned. He said he left the United States because he was warned an extradition request might be honored.

He contends that any charges brought against him would not stand up in a fair court.

Somoza also said he is content in Paraguay and has no intention of leaving soon. He has bought 19,200 acres of land in western Paraguay's Chaco region and said he plans to build a house on it and plant cotton.

He also said he is contemplating other investments in Paraguay, but he gave no specifics. Somoza has said his net worth is about $20 million, and that he lost $80 million when he fled Nicaragua.

The Chaco land purchase has drawn criticism from Paraguayans who contend Somoza used his influence with Stroessner, Paraguay's ruler for the past 26 years, to buy it at bargain-basement prices from a government agency designed to parcel out the land to peasants.

Somoza is not the first controversial figure to receive asylum in Paraguay. Others have included former Argentine President Juan D. Peron and Nazi war criminal Josef Mengele. Mengele's citizenship was revoked in the 1960s, and one report said he left for Chile.

BSA Jamboree Plans Made

The 1981 National Scout Jamboree, the tenth national encampment that brings together Boy Scouts and leaders from all over the nation, will be held July 29 through August 4 of 1981.

The jamboree will be held at Fort A.P. Hill, near Fredericksburg, Va., the historic triangle of Washington, D.C., and Williamsburg, Yorktown, Richmond and Norfolk, Va.

A total of 120 Boy Scouts and leaders from the East Carolina Council, Boy Scouts of America, will join with over 25,000 other scouts and leaders at the jamboree. The theme will be "Scouting's Reunion With History."

Participants in the 1981 jamboree are selected from Boy Scouts who are 12 years of age and are Second Class Scouts who have earned the hiking, camping, and cooking skill awards. They must have been active for at least six months.

Program features will reflect skills of scouting, the nation's heritage, physical fitness, conservation, and spirit of brotherhood.

SOME PEOPLE HAVE LEARNED FROM PAST EXPERIENCE!

CASH FOR GOLD

Many people sell to Coin & Ring Man time and time again because of our prices, service, and REPUTATION. Here are some of the kinds of things our customers tell us have happened to them.

1. Some dealers quote that they're paying a certain price and then weigh the merchandise light.
2. Some dealers quote a higher price for rings but then subtract for the weight of the stones.
3. Some dealers quote a much higher price on the phone and then pay much less when the customer gets there in spite of how the market may have changed.

Coin & Ring Man doesn't practice these kinds of business tactics because we want our reputation to speak positively to you about the Professional Integrity you can rely on when you sell to Coin & Ring Man.

FOR THE YOUNG AND OLD...The youngest member of Pitt County square dance clubs is nine, and the oldest is 76. It is truly for all ages.

AND GREAT EXERCISE TOO...Square dance enthusiasts not only enjoy the fun and companionship of square dancing, but also its health benefits.

Local Dancers Pursue Degree

"If you can tell your right hand from your left," smiled Jerry Powell, instructor of square dance in Greenville, "you can learn to square dance.

According to Powell, a New Dancer Club is formed each year, and those interested in enrolling in the course may come out at no cost to see "if it's their thing." "Everyone is in the same boat at the beginning level," said Powell. "We learn something new each week. We are here to learn to dance and have fun."

CAN YOU TELL YOUR RIGHT HAND FROM THE LEFT?...Mike Crutchfield, a blind square dance student, and partner advocate that "if you can tell your right hand from your left, you can learn to square dance.

What is a caller? A caller is, in a sense, the leader of the dance. He calls a sequence of movements which are understood by the dancers. The movements are called in a choreographic sequence that is fun to dance to and in such a way that each dancer is back in his or her starting position with their original partner.

After calling for six and a half years, Powell has helped to establish three square dance clubs in Pitt County. Each club represents a different level of square dancing skill and degree of involvement — for those who want to dance a little or alot. Several members dance three or four nights a week.

At the end of each class, those enrolled in the course receive a Bachelor of Square Dancing Degree from the College of Allemande Left and Do-si-do's. For those who want to progress and move to a different level of square dancing, there are transition programs. "There's something here for everyone," Powell said.

The Tar River Twirlers, the oldest of the three clubs in this area, is now six years old. The other clubs, the Dixie Diamonds and The Sunshine Squares are four and a half and two and a half years old respectively.

Powell indicated that square dancing is more popular than most would think. There are 130 square dance clubs across the state belonging to the Federation of Square Dance Clubs. Mini-conventions of square dance clubs are held four times a year. The next dance convention is scheduled to be held in Raleigh for the third Saturday in August with 700-800 dancers participating.

The members of these dance clubs not only enjoy the fun and fellowship of square dancing, but enjoy helping to raise money for charities. Last year alone, $20,000 was donated to the Burn Center in Chapel Hill. Another of these fund-raising dances will be held in Greenville on September 27.

Powell stressed that square dancing has rewarding health benefits. "Several members of these clubs have had open-heart surgery and are now dancing. Many feel that dancing has helped them to survive," he said. "Jogging can be very lonely — here you have music and companionship."

"Our youngest member is nine years old, and one is now 76. He joined the Sunshine Squares when he was 74. It is truly for all ages — a family kind of thing. It's a great way to bring the family together."

"We have one blind member," said Powell. Mike Crutchfield began the New Dancer Class in January and seems to be doing well.

"Sometimes it's hard to find a partner, but everyone gets the opportunity to dance," Crutchfield said.

"It's great exercise, and everyone is so helpful. I've made a lot of friends here and would like to join the club and progress to the next level."

SWING YOUR PARTNER...Square dance instructor, Jerry Powell, calls a sequence of movement to dancers. Hopefully, they will end up in their starting position with their original partner.

Text and Photos by Leigh Coakley

Following the interview and after observing the dancers, Powell invited me to take part in one of the dances.

One of the lady club members volunteered to take a seat so that I could have a partner. When the music started, I was a bit apprehensive — knowing very little about square dancing. They soon, however, made me feel at ease and right at home.

I got lost among the dancers several times, but for one who often has difficulty "telling my right hand from my left," I managed to follow his instructions, learn a few steps, and enjoy myself without stepping on too many toes. -

Study Of Minks Leads To Discovery In Human Genetics

BY DAVID WILLIAMSON
Duke University News Service

DURHAM — Minks are usually associated with cold winters, warm coats and wealthy women, not with dermatologists and hereditary illnesses.

Now, however, a Duke University Medical Center scientist has made that unlikely connection by discovering the cause of a disease that has been plaguing the fur industry in the United States for the past several years.

In the process, Dr. Lowell Goldsmith also may have found an invaluable research tool for studying human genetic diseases.

Goldsmith, a Duke dermatologist, said he and his colleagues at Duke and at the University of Wisconsin have successfully treated a baby mink for pseudo distemper, a previously unexplained fatal illness among minks.

The disease appears to be a perfect model for tyrosinemia type II, a rare human illness that Goldsmith and others first identified at Harvard University nine years ago.

The treatment that succeeded with the mink kit is the same one they devised for humans — a special milk diet low in the amino acids tyrosine and phenylalanine which affected patients cannot metabolize on their own.

"Previously, all mink kits that had this disease died within 10 days after they were weaned, with runny eyes and open sores and blisters on their feet," Goldsmith said. "Because there is more and more inbreeding to get the dark, natural color fur that is popular now, this genetic disease is appearing more and more frequently, and mink breeders are losing more and more animals."

Tyrosinemia type II in humans and pseudo distemper in minks result from the liver's inability to produce an enzyme known as tyrosine amino transferase (TAT), the dermatologist explained.

The enzyme normally converts the amino acids into components of skin pigment, thyroid hormones, adrenalin and other metabolic products. But when the acids are not converted, they eventually crystallize, causing blindness, mental retardation and the characteristic open sores.

Both disorders appear on an average of once in every four births when both parents carry the defective trait. Geneticists call the hereditary condition "autosomal recessive."

Unlike many hereditary diseases, however, which are relatively common, tyrosinemia type II is extremely rare. There are only three known cases in North Carolina, and a total of six in the United States.

Goldsmith has treated three of those cases, including a 15-month-old Jones County, N.C., girl who was blind before treatment four years ago and a blind, 58-year-old Pink Hill man who received widespread publicity in May when he was unable to find government help to pay for his special diet.

"In October last year, I was reading a copy of Canadian medical journal when I noticed a reference to a little-known magazine called 'U.S. Fur Rancher,'" said the physician, explaining how he got interested in the mink problem.

"After a lot of effort, the people at the medical center library were able to get me a reprint of an article that appeared in it seven years ago."

Goldsmith recognized that the pseudo distemper described in the article sounded remarkably like tyrosinemia. It was costing Wisconsin mink breeders thousands of dollars a year.

Working with mink specialist Dr. Richard Marsh, a University of Wisconsin veterinarian, Goldsmith, Dr. Jeanne Lesiewicz, a research associate in dermatology at Duke, and research technician Judith Thorpe were able to demonstrate which specimens of frozen mink liver flown to Durham were deficient in the enzyme TAT.

Marsh then confirmed that the specimens the group had identified had come from mink kittens that had died in infancy.

The next step was to determine if the special milk diet would save the baby minks, the physician said. It did.

Goldsmith said he's pleased that the finding promises to benefit the fur industry in Wisconsin, which produces one third of the mink in this country and a tenth of the world's supply.

"AS THE SUNFLOWER TURNS — to its god when it set, the same look that she gave when she rose," one of the lines in Thomas Moore's beloved song, "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms" is as apt today as when the poet-composer expressed the action of a sunflower. Here, the heavily seeded flower of a sunflower turns westward to the sunset, revealing layers of hairy green sepals enclosing the flower's silky petals of brilliant gold. Southern GOP Delegates Apparently Are Unified

By PEGGY WALSH
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Southern delegates to the Republican National Convention, split in 1976 by the tough battle between Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan, appear ready to unify in Detroit this week behind Reagan.

Many party leaders in the Southeast say they feel Reagan is the man who can beat President Carter in his home territory this fall, even though Carter won all eight Southeastern states in 1976.

A survey of the 264 Republican delegates from Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee indicated that 233 are committed to vote for Reagan.

Twenty-seven are committed to former CIA chief George Bush, who has since withdrawn from the race. Four are uncommitted, but two of those have said they will vote for Reagan.

"I think he's going to win," said Alabama GOP Chairman Bill Harris of Reagan. "I think in 1976 the people didn't have anything against Jerry Ford but they wanted to try something different.

"Here was a guy (Carter) who was a born-again Christian, a new face and a Southerner, all wrapped in one package," said Harris. "Now people are very disillusioned with Jimmy Carter as president. He is a nice guy and you wouldn't mind him living in your neighborhood, but the people are unhappy with his domestic and foreign policies."

John Cade, Reagan's campaign manager in Louisiana and a special assistant to GOP Gov. David Treen, echoed Harrris, saying he expects a close race between Carter and Reagan in Louisiana, even though Carter is a Southerner.

The difference in the vote this year could be the support Reagan will get from Treen, Cade said.

"If the political structure were in the hands of someone who supported Carter, he could overcome the Reagan lead," he said. "Ford led Louisiana (in 1976) in everybody's poll until the final week, and (former Democratic Gov. Edwin) Edwards mobilized the courthouses and his basic political crowd, and in that final week they put Carter over the top."

In 1976, when Carter swept the Southeast, it was the first time a Democrat had captured the South solidly since 1944. In 1972, the eight states all went to former President Richard Nixon.

On the question of vice president, the delegates were not as unified. Preferences for the No. 2 spot on the ballot were scattered, with the majority remaining uncommitted. The names most frequently mentioned by delegates were Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee, Bush, Rep. Phil Crane of Illinois and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York.

Unlike the Democrats, whose rules require equal representation of men and women in the delegations, Southern Republicans will field a predominantly male delegation. Of the 264 delegates, 188 are male and 76 are female.

But perhaps the biggest change in the 1980 delegations is early show of unity, something pointedly lacking in 1976 when Ford and Reagan were battling in the final weeks for the nomination.

Georgia GOP leaders have gone as far as to hold a unity news conference, dispelling earlier reports from supporters of losing GOP candidates that they had been excluded by the Reagan camp.

"There were some hard feelings that get down on the grass roots level, but that is all over, finished and gone," said Nolan Murrah Jr., chief of the Georgia campaign for former Texas Gov. John Connally, who withdrew as a candidate just before Georgia's March 11 presidential primary. "The olive branch subsequently came out."

"I think you are going to find . . . Georgia Republicans working shoulder to shoulder, no matter who they worked for in the primary," said Harry Geisinger, Phil Crane's Georgia campaign manager.

"I know of no one who supported George Bush who will not be supporting Ronald Reagan," said Fletcher Thompson, Bush's Georgia campaign manager.

Cade of Tennessee, agreed, saying the convention "will give the party leaders an opportunity to have a real show of unity." Baker, an early casualty in the presidential race, and Republican Gov. Lamar Alexander both have strongly endorsed Reagan.

In Mississippi, the 1980 delegation contrasts sharply with 1976, when delegates were sharply divided between Ford and Reagan. "There is an excellent opportunity this year for the Republicans to win," said Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., the only Republican elected to statewide office in Mississippi in modern times. "We have a better chance than four years ago."

The North Carolina Republicans, who were plagued by divisions between conservatives and moderates in 1976, also are united, according to Sen. Jesse Helms, a Republican.

In Florida, a united Republican Party already is working toward the general election in November, contrasting sharply with 1976 when the state split over the hard-fought primary between Ford, who won, and Reagan.

In South Carolina, former state party Chairman Dan Ross said Carter "is not going to be easy to beat as an incumbent." But, Ross, who supported Reagan in 1976, said, "I think he's (Carter's) going to get beat, but he's not going to be easy to beat in this state."

Of the eight states, only Bush's chairman in Alabama, Ray Scott, expressed any reservations about supporting Reagan. Scott said he would vote for Reagan for president, but added, "I won't bust my britches for him" unless Bush is the vice presidential nominee.

Tips for Preventing Motion Sickness

I have been blessed with good health. Because of it I am active and filled with enthusiasm. My great problem is that I get seasick and carsick on trains, buses, planes, boats and automobiles. Are there any new ways to control this? — Mrs. R.I.B., Pa

Dear Mrs. B.:

In the excellent magazine, Patient Care (published for doctors), the problems of motion sickness were recently presented.

If one is susceptible to motion sickness, one can take several precautionary measures:

1. Be well rested when you begin your trip.

2. Wear loose-fitting clothes and comfortable shoes to permit as much blood circulation as possible while traveling in cramped vehicles.

3. Do not eat heavy meals before or during your trip.

4. Avoid alcohol, particularly if you are flying. In an airplane, two or three cocktails are equal to three or four at sea level. Lower air pressure in the cabin reduces the oxygen that is available to burn up the alcohol.

5. Avoid tobacco smoke and other unpleasant odors.

6. Try to keep your head in a fixed position. When necessary, move it slowly.

7. Look at the horizon or at a stationary object in the distance.

8. The sensation of motion is minimized in the front seat of the car, over an airplane wing, or on the deck of a boat or ship.

As you undoubtedly know, many drugs are now available that prevent or alleviate motion sickness, even among those who are particularly prone to it. It must be remembered, of course, that these drugs can cause drowsiness, and special care should be taken by those who are driving automobiles.

A great deal of research is constantly under way by the Nationa Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) to uncover new and effective treatments for motion sickness.

One such study involves the "patch" device. A small piece of adhesive tape, about the size of a dime, is saturated with an anti-motion sickness drug, scopolamine. It is placed behind the ear and is absorbed slowly through the skin. NASA believes that the long-lasting effect of the drug may yet turn out to be very valuable in solving this problem. Other drugs, too, are being actively studied.

Biofeedback has long been used to control the rate of the heart, the skin temperature, and respiration. It is believed that biofeedback may eventually be another excellent method of reducing the unpleasant aspects of motion sickness.

With all the methods that are now available, there is no reason why you should be so burdened during travel.

Build An Organ For His Wife

PASADENA, Tex. (AP) — Harry House loves organ music.

So he paid $3,500 for a kit to make his own electric organ for his wife's 25th wedding anniversary.

House, a marketing manager for Phillips Petroleum, drew on his electrical-engineering experience from the Navy as he soldered more than 4,000 tiny wires connecting the 48 voices on the organ.

When House and his wife, Cherre, plugged the cord in after six months work, the organ wouldn't work — no sound.

House says he panicked a little, but after one week he found his mistake in the power units for the speakers.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: S equals A

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—I have been hearing more and more about "splinter bids" to show short suits. How good is this convention? Can it be used to show a void? How does it work? L. Allen, Pittsburgh, Pa.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—I think I will take these queries in reverse order by explaining exactly what a splinter bid is. It is an unusual jump in a side suit which shows game-going values in partner's suit, four or more trumps and a singleton in the bid suit. For example, suppose that partner opens one heart. You would jump to four in your short suit with either of the following hands:

a) ♠ AQx ♡ QJxxx ◇ x ♣ KJxx

b) ♠ AQx ♡ AJxx ◇ Kxxxx ♣ x

Similarly, suppose you open the bidding with one diamond and partner responds one spade. You hold:

♠KQxx ♡AJx ◇AQJxx ♣x

Jump to four clubs to show the values for a raise to four spades and a singleton club.

To see how this affects the splinter bidder's partner, let's look at two possible one spade responses opposite the above hand which has opened one diamond and then splintered with four clubs.

1) ♠ Axxxx ♡ Qxx ◇ Kx ♣ xxx

2) ♠ Axxxx ♡ xxx ◇ xx ♣ KQx

With hand 1), you almost surely have a slam. All your points are working, and you know that you have only one loser in your weak suit. Contrast that with hand 2), which should, in theory, be stronger because a king and queen in the same suit work more effectively than in separate suits. But now they represent duplication of values, and you really don't want to be any higher than four spades. Indeed, on this layout you might be defeated in four spades because of the waste.

There is one occasion, and only one, where the splinter bid is made at the three-level. That is when the agreed trump suit is hearts and the singleton is spades. In all other cases the splinter bid will occur at the four-level.

Can you use a splinter bid to show a void? Many play that you can. If so, you have to rebid the short suit at your first opportunity to show the void. However, I do not think that is a good idea. Here's why:

Suppose that partner, over your one spade opening bid, jumps to four diamonds. You are looking at the ace of diamonds, and you think that it is a useful card. You are interested in slam and cue-bid four hearts. Suddenly partner bids five diamonds, showing a void. What you thought was a useful card suddenly represents duplication. Instead of covering a loser, it is no longer a working card. Indeed, in some cases your hand might now not even be worth a full opening bid because you have "lost" an ace, yet you are at the five-level!

Is this convention worthwhile? Any method that allows you to describe your hand accurately and leaves partner perfectly placed to evaluate slam possibilities must improve bidding accuracy. And what you must give up to make room for splinter bids is insignificant. I believe that this convention is one of the better ideas to have come into vogue in recent years.

SALESMAN OF PANELIZED HOMES

We need a salesman to represent us in a multi-county area around Raleigh, North Carolina. We're Mayhill Homes, and we're a proven company that produces a complete house package, with extra services that builders ask for.

The job is to sell our package to homebuilders in your area. You must be experienced, know how to manage a territory, and be able to generate new business as well as give after-the-sale service. You need to know finance, cost of construction, subcontracting, and in general, your way around the homebuilding business.

What's in it for you? Just about what you want to make it. We begin on salary and expenses, but you work towards a full commission basis that will pay you in direct proportion to what you sell. $30,000 to $50,000 per year is not uncommon. We're also a growth company with plenty of opportunities for the effort you invest. If you are interested, send us a letter of facts. No calls, please.

"Thanks A Lot" For Calling Us!"

Hobby Pays Off In More Than Pleasant Memories

By TOM UHLENBROCK

WARRENTON, Mo. (UPI) — A hobby built upon childhood fantasies is paying off in more than pleasant memories for Carlos Sardina.

Sardina collects and restores carousel figures and has assembled a colorful assortment of richly carved wooden horses, zebras, pigs, a dog and a rooster.

"The little town of Guines in Cuba, where I was born, had a big church in the middle," he says. "I remember the carousel being dismantled and the horses stacked one next to the other near the church.

"For some reason, that vision stayed with me."

Sardina, a 40-year-old furniture designer, read what he could find on carousels, and came to appreciate the works of the turn-of-the-century carvers as a lost American folk art.

"The carousel dates back to the Byzantine period, they have found manuscripts from around 500 B.C. with drawings of a center pole with baskets around it. The Aztec Indians also had things of that sort, but the carousel as we know it started in France.

"In England, they were called roundabouts, and in Italy tourneos. In this country, of course, they are called merry-go-rounds or flying horses."

Sardina says the first American carvers were German and Italian immigrants such as Gustav Dentzel, who made the first two-story carousel, and Allan Herschell, who set up shop with his brother-in-law, Edward Spillman, in North Tonowanda, N.Y., around 1900.

The earliest American-made horses were plain with natural horse hair for tails. The horses made later were larger and more decorative, often copying the saddles and jewels used by the Turkish Army in the 1600s.

"The horses were all wood until the late 1920s," says Sardina. "The amusement park owners realized the cost of operating a carousel was getting higher because the wooden legs and ears were always breaking.

"The companies soon began making horses with machine-carved wooden bodies and aluminum heads and legs — these are called half-and-halfs. In the 1940s, they used all aluminum horses until the price of aluminum skyrocketed about 10 years later. Now, they're making only fiberglass horses.

"To a collector, there's nothing that can compare with a hand-carved carousel horse from the turn of the century. It's a sculpture that represents an era and a quality of work no longer available. The art is completely lost.

"They also represent a fantasy for a lot of people — the fantasy of happier days, of childhood times. You get a good feeling when you look at them. It's a therapy."

Sardina and his wife, Judy, both are sculptors and painters and have set m[illegible] workshop near their [illegible] for repairing and restoring the horses.

"Occasionally, you'll see horses with original paint from a carousel that was kept inside, but most of the horses are in pitiful condition," Sardina says. "Carousels in country fairs often were moved weekly every summer for 40 or 50 years so you can realize the abuse the horses were taking.

"Most of the horses have been painted several times — some amusement park owners even used auto paint because it doesn't rub off as easy. We try to determine original paint and use the same colors for restoration."

Because the horses were glued together using wooden dowels, the paint cannot be removed with liquid strippers. Instead, the Sardinas use heat guns and sanders to remove the paint, then make repairs with wood filler. Sometimes an ear or leg is missing and Sardina carves a replacement. The horse is then ready for painting.

"Judy is an artist and she loves to paint the horses. She can work on them all day long. She uses pastel colors and a patina stain that is rubbed off to accentuate the nicks from the shoes of the children."

The finished horse is mounted on brass poles which Sardina also obtained from abandoned carousels.

"I am not for destroying the carousels as carousels, in fact Judy and I are members of the Society for the Preservation of Carousels. But we think if the horses are going to be left in a barn or trailer or whatever, rescuing those horses and putting them in homes is the best way to preserve them."

Because of the expense of buying a single horse from a collector or antique dealer, Sardina has amassed his collection by bidding successfully on three carousels sold in Dallas, Tuscon, Ariz., and Columbus, Ohio. He also is selling part of his collection to finance bidding on two other carousels.

"Even though my first love is the horses, my ultimate goal is to have a menagerie with a few larger animals like the tigers and lions. I would like to have an animated, two-abreast carousel with lights and music. I even have a tape recording of the music played at the original carousel in Coney Island."

Sardina has found he is not alone in his affection for the carousel, even though the price of an unrestored horse starts at nearly $1,000 and rises quickly.

"I thought I was silly for loving them so until I found hundreds of other people with the same taste," he said. "I have sold some to movie stars, to doctors, to truck drivers, all types of people with a common love — the carousel."

Inflation Is Reaching Those Penny Gumballs

By JOHN C. GIVEN
Associated Press Writer

AKRON, N.Y. (AP) — Forget about the credit crunch. About mortgage rates and prime rates and discount rates. There's a much more serious problem: Inflation is biting down hard on that American institution called the penny gumball.

The Ford Gum and Machine Co. has been making the brightly colored gumballs for nearly half a century — since 1934 to be exact. On an average working day, the plant here turns out 4.95 tons or almost 10,000 pounds of gumballs. That's about 2,227,000 balls a day. Licorice and lime. Orange and cherry. And lots more. If all the gumballs produced in a year were laid end-to-end, they'd stretch around the world.

Officials at Ford Gum are worried, however. Can they keep the price of a penny gumball at a penny? The problem is that the cost of refined sugar has more than doubled, rising to more than $40 per 100 pounds because of a drop in the world sugar crop.

"When you consider that sugar is about 75 percent of our product, that's really killing us," said John Fry, the executive vice president of Ford Gum.

If the price of sugar stays where it is, or goes still higher, said Fry, "You can definitely say the one-cent gumball is in jeopardy ... We may have to ... charge two cents."

The Ford Gum and Machine Co. was founded by Ford S. Mason, a roofer who wanted a way to survive during winters when there wasn't much work. He originally tried to use a symbol similar to the car company's. Fry said that when the Ford Motor Co. told Mason to stop, he replied: "I'm the Cadillac of the gum business and besides, Ford is my name." It didn't work and the company emblem was redesigned.

Back in the early days, Ford Gum had more than 30 competitors. Today, said Fry, it's one of only a handfull of gumball manufacturers.

Ford — which is owned by the Atlanta-based Automatic Service Co. and, according to Fry, makes "about $5 million a year" manufacturing gumballs and rectangular "chickle-chews" — has tried to hold the penny line.

The gumballs have gotten smaller. Back in 1939, they were three-quarters of an inch in diameter. Today, they're only half an inch in diameter.

Shrinking the gumballs still further to hold the price steady is a possibility, but company officials say it wouldn't work. They would have to retool all 350,000 Ford gumball dispensers in the United States, Puerto Rico and Canada.

Ford Gum also has tried injecting a little air bubble into each gumball to take up space that otherwise would be filled with expensive ingredients. But Fry said there is no room left for adjustment. "The inside hole will meet the outside shell," he warned.

"If sugar prices return to where they were about six months ago — in the $20s — then you can say the one-cent gumball is secure," Fry said. "If in the $30s, we would have to check around to see what we could do."

If the price of sugar stays high, however, watch out: The two-cent gumball is on the way.

Has Menagerie Put On Rockers

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

PARKERSBURG, W.Va. (AP) — Out of formless lumps of cherrywood and walnut, Bill Reed fashions rocking pigs, rocking ducks and rocking horses that will last through decades of dreams and adventures.

The solitary lightbulb in Reed's cluttered workshop near the banks of the Ohio River nearly always burns late, its pale rays shining on the latest wonderous beast to take shape under the darting strokes of the hatchet and carving knife.

A gnomish man whose neat, tufted gray beard and flower-shaped hat suggest a trace of elfin blood, Reed spends his days and nights building wooden rocking animals of every imaginable species and size.

Reed's rocking menagerie includes donkeys, cows, ducks, dogs, cats, goats, giraffes, buffaloes and even an occasional horse in heights ranging from 18 inches to six feet for the largest rider.

"Everyone buys them from college students to bank presidents. I say they're for kids from 1 to 100," Reed says.

"About half my customers are adults who say they use them for decoration. But I think most people ride 'em."

Giving up his regular job as a house builder for endless hours of carving and daydreaming was easy, Reed recalls. But he says it's more difficult to explain how rocking horses came to be his life's work.

"I really couldn't tell you why rocking horses. But it's been working for 10 years now," he says. "I started with horses and there didn't seem to be any reason to stop there.

"The donkeys are the most popular, while the giraffes sell the least. But I don't know why."

Setting demanding standards, Reed carves and shapes the animals from wood he selects and seasons himself. Each body is fashioned from a single piece of wood and fitted with a face meticulously carved into the braying snarl of a donkey or the curious gaze of a giraffe.

Odd bits of rope make tails, and scraps of leather are transformed into ears. The finished animals are set on rockers with wooden pins that Reed says hold firm through years of rocking.

"These are made to last. With normal use they're good for a hundred years," he says.

But despite his products' durability, Reed throws in a guarantee for good measure. "I replace and repair any broken parts free — just as long as I'm living," he says.

Irrepressible Twosome Together Again

Both David Brinkley and John Chancellor have been unintentional participants in convention proceedings.

Brinkley, it may be remembered, got one vote for the Vice-Presidential nomination at the 1972 Republican convention in Miami Beach. When Oregon's Gov. Tom McCall reported that his delegation had cast 16 votes for Spiro T. Agnew and one for Brinkley, the news commentator — off-camera but with an open microphone — was heard to remark: "This convention has gone to pot."

"We are trying to check on the name put in nomination to see if the man is anywhere in or near the hall," Chancellor reported. He later added, "David Brinkley has become the most seriously defeated candidate of 1972 or any other year." Agnew, Brinkley's only opponent, received 1,345 votes.

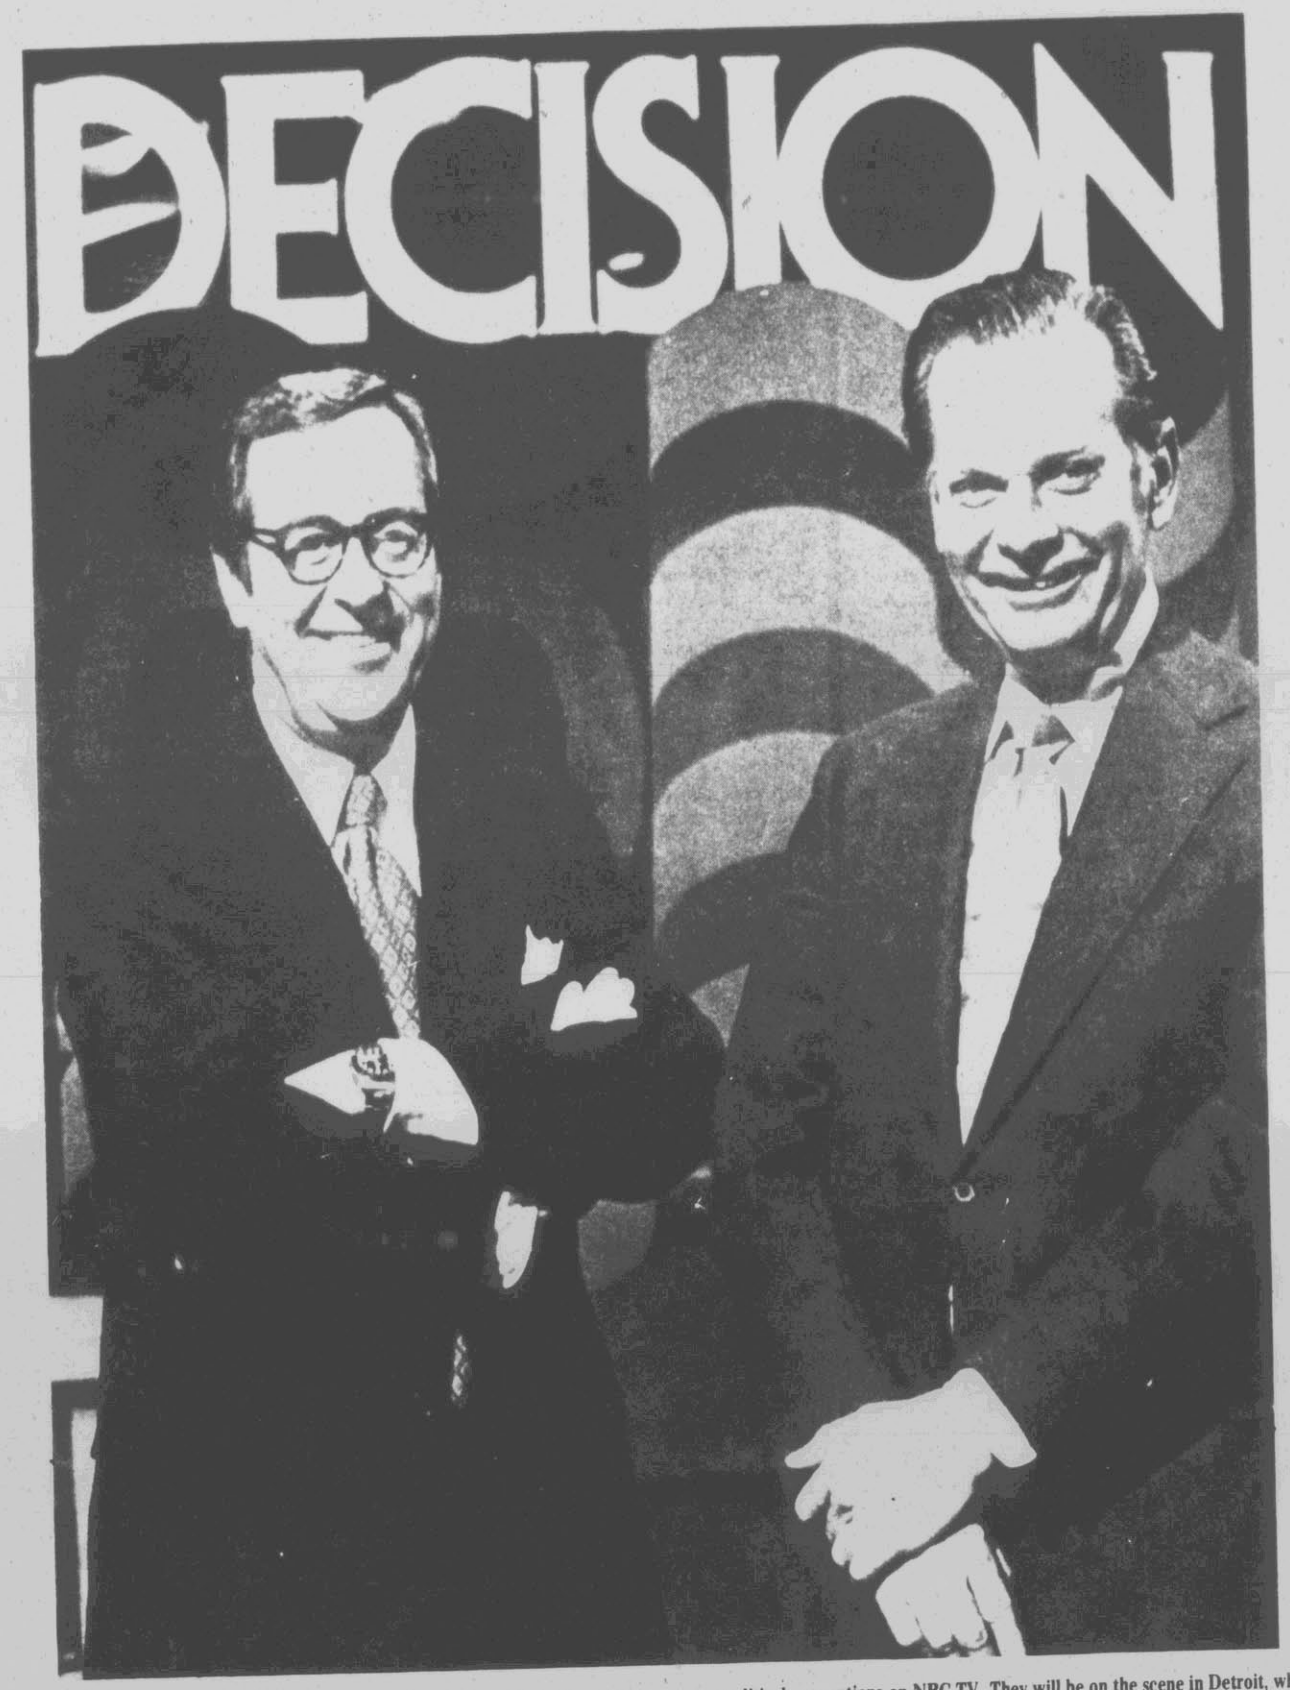
Chancellor's unwitting participation in convention proceedings came at the Republican convention in San Francisco's Cow Palace in 1964, when he was one of NBC News' agile floor reporters with a heavy transmitter pack on his back and microphone in hand. As the chairman diligently tried to "clear the aisle," Chancellor suddenly found himself singled out as a principal aisle traffic hazzard and was arrested by police and convention sergeants-at-arms.

Having available to himself instant communication with the network's control center, he reported that he was being arrested even though he had all the proper convention credentials to be in the aisles. On camera, in view of millions of Americans, he was hustled off the floor by the police. And he described his unusual arrest every step of the way.

Finally, as he was escorted out of the hall and disappeared from view, he realized that his broadcast was ending. "This is John Chancellor, somewhere in custody," were his closing words.

Then, the cameras cut back to the anchor booth with its smiling occupants, Brinkley and Chet Huntley. "John," said Brinkley, "let's hear from you."

NBC handled the moment lightly, but it had serious import. Not too long after, the embarrassed Republican convention officials escorted Chancellor back onto the floor and publicly apologized to him and to the network.



CONVENTION TIME — John Chancellor (1) and David Brinkley will be together again as co-anchormen of NBC News' coverage of the national political conventions on NBC-TV. They will be on the scene in Detroit, where the Republicans convene Monday, July 14 through Thursday, July 17.

Let's Talk Antelopes

There are four-legged antelopes, as well as towns of Antelope — in Montana, North Dakota, Oregon, Saskatchewan, Texas and Utah. ABC News' "Animals Animals Animals" looks at all kinds of antelopes and examines their world in art, history, literature and legend Sunday, July 13.

Antelopes have hooves and hollow horns and belong to the same family as goats, oxen and cows.

The series' host, Hal Linden, explains: "Like the cow and the goat and the ox, the antelope is a ruminant, which simply means that it chews its cud. Now when a cow or a goat or an ox or an antelope chew their cud, they seem to look very thoughtful. And this is how we got the word ruminate. Which, of course, means thoughtful or meditating."

The program covers the wide world of the antelope via fast-moving graphics, animated poetry and fables, filmed rhymes and original music.

Disney Presents 'Classic'

Bobby Driscoll and Robert Newton star in Disney's delightful two-part version of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Treasure Island," beginning Sunday, July 13 (7 p.m. on NBC-TV.)

The action begins when sinister Black Dog (Francis DeWolff) arrives at the Admiral Benbow Inn, located on a desolate stretch of sea coast in western England. And he's there to find Capt. Billy Bones (Finlay Currie).

Young Jim Hawkins (Driscoll), who runs the inn with his mother, quickly senses something evil in the way Black Dog slips away after seeing Bones. His fears are realized when Blind Pew (John Laurie) appears shortly afterwards and hands Bones the Black Spot. That's the sign of death from his old shipmates!

After Pew departs, Bones gives Jim a map he'd hidden in his sea chest and sends the lad for help. When Jim returns with Dr. Livesey (Denis O'Dea) and Squire Trelawney (Walter Fitzgerald) from the village, they find Bones dead and the inn ransacked by pirates.

Dr. Livesey and the Squire realize that Jim's map is the key to South Seas treasure buried by a bold buccaneer, Capt. Flint. They then travel to Bristol, outfit the square-rigger Hispaniola and sail for the secret island with Capt. Smollett (Basil Sidney) in command. Jim goes as cabin boy.

The crew members are a motley group. Dominating them is the sea cook, Long John Silver (Newton), a one-legged mariner whose pet parrot's constant cries of "Pieces of Eight!" indicate that Silver is more pirate than cook.

Silver wins Jim's friendship until the boy, hidden in an apple barrel, overhears Long John and the crew plotting to mutiny. Because Capt. Smollett has wisely kept all firearms in his cabin, the pirates decide to wait until they arrive at Treasure Island before taking action.

The mutiny occurs the moment the Hispaniola anchors at her destination, and during the uprising Jim is held as hostage by the mutineers.

ON TREASURE HUNT — Bobby Driscoll (l) stars as young Jim Hawkins and Robert Newton portrays Long John Silver in "Treasure Island," a two-part presentation of Robert Louis Stevenson's adventure classic on "Disney's Wonderful World," Sundays, July 13 and 20 (7-8 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Now He's 'Ron'

Ron Howard was understandably nervous when production began on his latest motion picture, titled "Skyward." After all, it's not often that a young director has a star such as Bette Davis working for him.

Despite the difference in their ages (he's 26 and she has been a major box-office star for nearly 50 years), Davis insisted on saying 'Mr. Howard.' He, of course, called her 'Miss Davis.'

"Please, call me 'Ron'," the young director-actor asked her.

"I'll call you 'Mr Howard' until I decide whether I like you or not, then I'll call you 'Ron!'," Davis replied.

At the end of the first day's shooting, she said, "Good night, Ron."

Michele Will Tell

Q: Did the star of "Trapper John, M.D." play the eldest son on the popular "Bonanza" series several years ago? R. BURLESON, MORGANTON, N.C.

A: Yes! Pernell Roberts was cast as Adam, the oldest son of Ben Cartwright (Lorne Greene). Pernell left the series, however, in 1965, stating at the time that he was "disillusioned" with the weekly grind of a show. It's good to have him back on the small screen.

Q: Who are the stars of the new series "Phyl and Mikhy"? What other shows have they been in and how do I write to them? D. BRYANT, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: They are Murphy Cross and Rich Lohman. Murphy's a talented gal who has extensive Broadway and Off-Broadway credits. She's also made two TV movies over the past year — "How to Pick Up Girls" and "Torn Between Two Lovers." You may remember Rick if you happen to be a fan of "Search for Tomorrow." He had a running part on the show for three years. Write to them c/o the show, CBS-TV, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90036.

Q: Why did they 'kill off' Bob Anderson on "Days of Our Lives"? Is the actor who played him, Mark Tapscott, still alive? I know he had a heart attack not too long ago. R. GALLOWAY, HICKORY, N.C.

A: Bob may have gone to that 'playground in the sky' but Mark's alive and well, thank goodness! He's made an excellent recovery and should surface in another show sometime soon. The ratings of 'Days' are just dreadful, and the producers — in a desperate effort to save the show — fired the writers and got rid of about seven characters, Bob included.

Walter Cronkite's Grandest Finale

Walter Cronkite will head the CBS News team of correspondents who'll provide viewers with live coverage of the Republican and Democratic National Conventions.

Cronkite's led the network's coverage of conventions and elections for the past 28 years. That's the equivalent of seven Presidential terms, and — since this summer's confabs will be his last ones from the anchor booth — they should be a grand finale.

Bruce Morton will report from the podium, while Charles Kuralt, Andy Rooney and Charles Osgood are expected to contribute special feature reports.

Approximately 600 people will be involved with the network's coverage — this includes producers, correspondents and other editorial personnel as well as the all-important technical staff. Plans call for 14 cameras to be positioned in and around the convention halls. These will be supplemented by at least five minicam crews and four Flash (mini-mobile) units covering events away from the convention sites.

All convention events each evening will be covered in their entirety. In addition, CBS will have cameras in the demonstration areas and will also present related substantive proceedings along with developments at party candidate headquarters.

A favorite convention story of Walter Cronkite has to do with Adlai Stevenson's acceptance speech at the 1952 Democratic Convention in Chicago.

As Cronkite tells it, he and fellow-correspondent Eric Sevareid were sitting up in an anchor booth waiting for Governor Stevenson to arrive at the hall to make the speech in which he would accept the nomination.

"We didn't get any advance text until just the moment that Stevenson went up to the podium," Cronkite recalls. "The advance text was rushed in to us. Eric was thumbing through it and I was thumbing through my copy. I thought it was tremendous, quite a speech. And I assumed that Eric was thinking the same.

'Majors' Stars

Lee Majors is starring in "High Noon, Part Two — The Return of Will Kane." The television movie, which will air during the upcoming season on CBS, is now in production near Tucson, Arizona.

The drama, to be filmed entirely on location in Arizona, is a sequel to the classic 1952 theatrical release that starred Gary Cooper and Grace Kelly. Majors is portraying Kane, the role undertaken by Cooper in the earlier picture.

Majors has starred in four television series — "The Big Valley," "The Man From Shiloh," "Owen Marshall, Counselor at Law," and "The Six Million Dollar Man." His recent pictures include the upcoming "Steel," with Jennifer O'Neill, Art Carney and George Kennedy; "Agency," with Robert Mitchum and Valerie Perrine; and "The Last Chase," in which he shared equal billing with Burgess Meredith.

Who's Speaking?

Actress Dorothy Lamour, who co-starred with Bing Crosby and Bob Hope in numerous 'Road' pictures, has a great deal of respect for Hope's enduring sense of humor.

"I was on a radio show out in California a few weeks ago and they were getting calls in from people. The host said to me, 'There's a man on the phone who wants to know how to get into show business.'

"I got on and it was Hope."

'Tomorrow's' New Look

There'll be a different 'look' when the expanded, 90-minute "Tomorrow" show launches a new season on NBC-TV in September. Back to preside over the exciting and ever-changing mixture of interviews, comedy and timely reports will be Tom Snyder.

The new "Tomorrow" will be presented in the 12:30 to 2 a.m. time slot following "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson," Mondays through Fridays.

The core of the program — Snyder's interviews of a wide variety of guests covering a broad range of interests — will remain. And there will be one or two interviews each night.

New, regularly scheduled elements will include a feature pinpointing top entertainment events in various parts of the country. And two news segments giving up-to-the-second reports on national and international events will be presented as well.

"The 'Tomorrow' show is Tom Snyder," he says. "And it always will be. Tom has been the show's only host since it premiered in 1973 — and he is the chief reason for its longevity and success. The Emmy Tom won as host of the show is well-deserved. We are very happy that he will continue to host 'Tomorrow' now that it is breaking new ground with its pioneering format, which has a broader scope and a faster pace."

"An exciting thing about this is that 'Tomorrow' is adding another 'first' to its history. This is because it's becoming the first late-night magazine to encompass entertaintment, information and news."

In addition of Snyder's Emmy Award (1973-74 season), the program received Emmy nominations for the 1975-76 season.

Who's On Sanford?

Clinton Derricks-Carroll joined the cast of NBC-TV's "Sanford" in the episode titled "Cissy and the Nephew," that aired in May. His character, Cliff Anderson, appeared in two other episodes, closing the season with a promise of new conflicts and comedic interactions for Fred Sanford.

Cliff is Fred's nephew and lives with him while attending classes at UNC. Naturally, his uncle keeps a watchful eye over the young man, but Cliff watches Fred, too!

"I had never met Redd Foxx before," said Clinton, who's been a headliner in several Broadway musicals, "but I have known about him for a long time. I have a great deal of respect for him and I expect to learn a lot from him. He's a master of comedy."

Clinton, son of the late gospel composer-minister Cleavant Derricks, began singing in church at the age of five. He became interested in acting while a senior at Federal City College in Washington, D.C. "The drama department was doing a musical — 'Man Better Man' — and they needed a singer for the leading role," he said. "I was a music minor and I got the part."

New Talent

Fresh, new talent will be spotlighted in ABC-TV's new series "Bosom Buddies," slated to air on Thursdays (8:30 p.m.), beginning this fall.

The story lines center around two struggling ad men, Henry Desmond and Kip Wilson, who find their lives dramatically and hilariously changed when they move into a hotel that fits their pocketbook and fulfills their wildest dreams.

Don't think for a moment that the Susan B. Anthony Hotel is just another establishment. It's actually a women's residence filled with floors of gorgeous women. However, the catch to this low-rent paradise is that Henry and Kip occasionally have to pose as women!

Peter Scolari and Tom Hanks star respectively as Henry and Kip. The men work for a New York advertising agency — Henry's a sharp copy writer and Kip's a talented illustrator. Life is never dull for these two bright young men whether they appear as themselves or disguised as their alter egos, Hildegarde and Buffy.

The cast also includes Wendie Jo Sperber, who plays Amy Cassidy, a fiesty young receptionist who works in Henry and Kip's office. Amy knows their true identities because she's the one responsible for getting them in the residence. Also, she's openly smitten with Kip and won't let him forget it — for a minute.

Holland Taylor is Ruth Dunbar, the men's sardonic boss who takes great delight in claiming their ideas as her own.

Fellow residents of the Susan B. Anthony Hotel include Sonny Lumet (Donna Dixon), a ravishing blonde for whom Kip has a strong hankering, and a vivacious model named Isabelle (Telma Hopkins).

Wins Award

"ABC News Closeup — The Shooting of Big Man: Anatomy of a Criminal Case" is the recipient of a Monitor Award for Best Editing in the first Monitor Awards competition.

The Monitor Awards, sponsored by the Videotape Production Association of New York, is the only national competition established to recognize excellence in videotape production.

The two-hour documentary was the first in the 'Closeup' series, and was also television's first examination of an entire criminal case. It began with early meetings between a defendant and his lawyers and followed the events to the jury's verdict. There was also a revealing post-trial look at the defendant. The documentary was distilled from more than 100 hours of videotape.

Fun & Fireworks

When a gal and her father are thrown together after both divorce their mates, you can count on a lot of fun and a sizable amount of fireworks. That's the premise of one of ABC-TV's new comedy series premiering this fall, "But I'm a Big Girl Now." Diana Canova and Danny Thomas as star as the two strong-willed adults learning to deal with each other as equals.

Canova's character, also named Diana, divorces her husband about the same time her mother deserts her father, Ben (Thomas), by flying off to Spain with his business partner. The two, more than a little traumatized, decide to live together for mutual support.

Ben's a doting, protective father who tries to take his daughter under his wing — again. But things have changed. Diana's now the mother of a seven-year-old daughter, and she insists on being treated as an equal. The series tells how the two battle — with great love and intelligence — to find some sort of new relationship both can accept.

Diana Canova's a beautiful girl who's never wanted to do anything but entertain. And now, after three years as the madcap Corrine Tate Flotsky in "Soap," she's starring in her own series.

The daughter of comedienne Judy Canova and the late Filiberto Rivero, Diana has been living in Los Angeles since she was three. With a background like this, is it any wonder that show business has always been her goal?

"Growing up in Hollywood and being around my mother — what else is there? — was my attitude," she says.

Besides "Soap," her television credits include guest stints on "Happy Days," "Mel & Susan Together," "Starsky & Hutch," "The Love Boat" and "Fantasy Island." She's also made two TV films — "With This Ring" and "Amusement Park" — and appeared in "The First Nudie Special," a theatrical release.

Diana is also a serious singer and songwriter who's studied voice for years. Recently she emphasized this side of her show business talents by making appearances at clubs like the Troubadour in Hollywood and the famed Palomino Club in the San Fernando Valley.

Is Still Together

Barney Martin first teamed with actress Lisa Minnelli when he played her husband in the Broadway production of "Chicago." Now the two are together in Liza's latest film — "Arthur."

It's All In The Pitch

Ever since the sport of baseball was invented 135 years ago, the individual on the mound has been, by far, the most important player on a team — more crucial than a dominating basketball center or even a football team's quarterback. According to freelancer Tony Sherman, pitching is no less than 90 percent of baseball.

THE BALTIMORE ORIOLES' Jim Palmer, probably the most effective finesse pitcher in the major leagues, uses certain techniques to fool the batter, unlike a powe pitcher.

While this has been true since the game's inception, today the hurler's importance is becoming more and more obvious by the number of zeros included in his yearly salary. Nolan Ryan, in his first season as a Houston Astro, is currently the highest-paid baseball player in the game with an annual take of $1 million.

But the pressures associated with standing on the mound and facing an onslaught of hitters can be extremely intense.

One of the best in the game, Baltimore's Mike Flanagan, calls himself "The Fool on the Hill," and on the night before a big game, he will often shout out "Swing" in his sleep, startling his wife into quick consciousness.

There are basically two broad categories in which pitchers may be classified: finesse and power.

New York Yankee Ron Guidry, who had a phenomenal 25-3 record in 1978 and an 18-8 tally last season, is a power pitcher. He depends on aggression and velocity ("good stuff") while on the hill to overpower the batter.

A power pitcher has been referred to as someone who can get you out even when you know what and where he's going to throw.

Guidry uses primarily a fastball or a hard slider. When throwing the former, a hurler must reach back as far as possible to make his arm cover a larger arc than usual to increase his leverage. A proper follow-through can increase the ball's speed by 10 percent. A slider is thrown with almost the speed of a fastball, but instead of crossing the plate in a straight line, it breaks down at the last moment and skids across.

Other power pitchers include Ryan, whose fastball often averages 98 mph, and Houston's J.R. Richard, whose unusual height (6 foot 8 inches) in the game allows him additional strength and speed.

A finesse pitcher relies on pinpoint control, or "spotting" the ball in exact locations around the plate, while he can get away with using less-than-spectacular stuff.

The Orioles' Jim Palmer is probably the best-known finesse artist still working the game today. Palmer says: "Ron Guidry can't spot his slider. I can, but as slow as I throw, I need to." Palmer compromises with the batter and forces him to hit the ball except when he absolutely can't afford to. "There are eight other guys on my team. Hell, I may as well use them."

In order for a pitcher to throw with relatively good control, he must complete the mechanics of a pitchers' motion: (1) wind-up, (2) roll or lay-back, (3) delivery, and (4) follow-through.

Besides a fastball and slider, other pitches contained in a hurler's arsenal may include a curve — a pitch that breaks and curves as it crosses the plate; sinker — a pitch that drops as it nears the plate; screwball — a seemingly straight pitch which unexpectedly swerves to the right or left (depending on whether the pitcher is right- or left-handed), and the change-up — an offspeed pitch thrown with the same wind-up motion a pitcher has been using to fool the batter into swinging in front of the ball.

Bar those tailpipe emissions.

FOR HENRY FORD, II

I am confused about this, and I know you can explain it. What happens when you use leaded gasoline in engines that are designed for unleaded gasoline only? — Chris Lyszczak, Trenton, N.J.

● The consequence of this is that the lead in the fuel attacks the catalyst (a speed-up agent) we use to control hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide exhaust emissions, first deactivating the catalyst and eventually plugging it. This blockage not only destroys the catalyst's ability to reduce tailpipe emissions but it penalizes vehicle engine performance and fuel economy as well. As you know, our vehicles must meet Federal emissions and fuel-economy standards, and the catalytic converter systems are critical to our ability to do so. There is a self-serving obligation of the public to protect the environment.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Is Princess Margaret going to marry her young boyfriend, Roddy Llewellyn? — R.E.D., Parkersburg, W. Va.

● It seems highly improbable. Roddy is as unwelcome in Buckingham Palace as a bull is in a china shop. For instance, to celebrate the Princess' 50th birthday on Aug. 21, Roddy planned a party befitting the sister of the Queen of England. It would also be his way of reciprocating the nice bash she threw him three years ago when he turned 30. But advance word disclosed that the royal family and acquaintances would be conspicuous by their absence. So he gave up the idea. And just recently a leading English clergyman captioned Princess Margaret's friendship with Roddy as "embarrassing." He said she was making a laughingstock of herself by seeing him.

FOR SALLY KELLERMAN, co-star of Serial

What was the trick you used to keep your spirits up when you were starting out? — J.M., Salem, Ore.

● Something that my manager told me. Get out, he said, and keep walking up and down Sunset Boulevard for as long as you can and smile at everyone so that your face will get known, and you'll make friends. That, along with a sixth sense that things would work out — even when things seemed at their bleakest — helped pull me through my dismal start.

FOR GEORGE BURNS

How does your schedule of the old days with Gracie Allen compare with your present one? — G.B., Marion, Ind.

● When I did our TV series with Gracie, we got up at 6 A.M., and worked five days a week. I decided movies were a better bet. Now I get up at 5 and work seven days a week and then come home and start reading a new script. Incidentally, I still think I'm one of the world's greatest singers and may resume my musical career any day now.

FOR SENATOR BARRY GOLDWATER (R.-Ariz.)

You stated in a TV interview that Iran needs the U.S. and the U.S. needs Iran. Please explain. — Ken Stevenson, Hollidaysburg, Pa.

● Get out a map and see where Iran fits into the geographic structure of the Middle East and see where the Soviet Union is. With its control of Iran would go the control of the Indian Ocean, the control of world economics, not to mention the control of Middle East oil. That's why we need Iran, and they need us.

FOR BELVA PLAIN, author of Random Winds

Since you were a grandmother when you wrote your best-selling first novel, Evergreen, in what way has this changed your personality? — E.T., Odessa, Texas

● It makes me feel younger. Or perhaps more stimulated. Every morning, when I wake up, I know there is something important I have to do. Writing has let me avoid the "boredom" trap that so many women fall into when their children grow up. Writing has given me an edge; it's the icing on the cake.

FOR DIANE LADD, co-star of CBS-TV's Alice

Why do you have such unpleasant memories of your first job? — N.J., Pocatello, Idaho

● I finished high school at 16 and went to work at a family finance company. I wasn't popular because I started telling people not to take the money because the interest was too high. I guess my heart wasn't in my job. In those early days, my hero was the famed lawyer Clarence Darrow, and my ambition then was to be a criminal lawyer.

FOR KEN NORTON, heavyweight boxer

What part of a fighter's body fails him first as he gets older? — D.S., Bangor, Maine

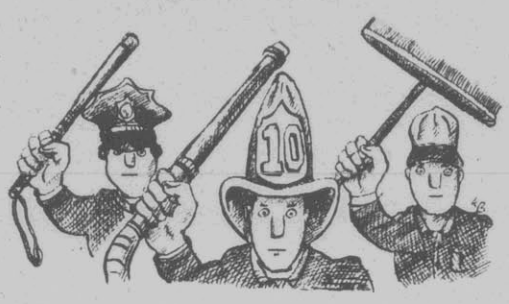
● I have heard that the legs are the first to go; but I've been lucky, as nothing has yet failed me. I pride myself on being a well-conditioned athlete and work very hard at keeping myself in good physical condition. Athletes who keep themselves in good condition the year round — instead of training just before an event — will find it adds years to their careers.

PRO AND CON

Should Public Servants Have the Right to Strike?

PRO Rep. Frank Thompson, Jr. (D.-N.J.)

The right to join unions and bargain collectively is the foundation of our national labor policy. When exercised responsibly, it has improved labor-management relations. Public employees deserve the same bargaining rights as private-sector employees with the understanding that in areas involving public health and safety — such as police and firemen — the right to strike could be restricted. Collective bargaining would reduce public employee strikes by providing a stable mechanism to resolve disputes.



CON Hugh C. Hansen, associate professor, Fordham University School of Law

In a democracy, the people should decide what services the government will supply. The right to strike is a powerful weapon, subject to abuse, which would indirectly give workers the power to make those decisions. A public-employee strike is only successful if it hurts the public. There is no equitable reason why these workers, especially police and firemen, should be allowed to purposely endanger the public or to even bankrupt the government itself. The public has rights; it should not be reluctant to assert them.

Ronald Reagan's Quest for the White House

Michael Evans/Liaison

Reagan is convinced that his philosophy of conservative economics and less government interference will win him the Presidency.

By Jim Dickenson

At the close of every campaign speech, which is to say about 1,000 times in the last year and a half, Ronald Reagan earnestly tells his audiences: "I believe that the best way to solve our problems is simply to get government off the backs of the American people and allow them in the working of the free marketplace to do what they do best on their farms, in the factories, in their shops and stores. . . .I would like to do that more than anything else in the world."

As the 1980 Republican Presidential candidate, Reagan may get the chance to do just that. In those few sentences one has the essence of Ronald Wilson Reagan — and an idea of his priorities if he succeeds to the White House in November.

These words reflect Reagan's long-evolving distrust of Big Government and a deep-seated belief not only in the workings of the free-enterprise system, but also in the genius of the individual American functioning unhampered by government in the free marketplace. They outline his belief in the need for a strong America ("No more Taiwans. No more Vietnams. No more betrayal of our friends and allies. . .") that must recapture its past confidence to lead the free world. And they reveal his gentle, earnest politeness that captures the hearts of his listeners.

Many who have turned out to see Reagan on the campaign trail for the first time have not known exactly what to expect. Some anticipate a red-eyed, fire-breathing, right-wing wild man; others a blithering, lightweight "B" movie actor who was appropriately cast in Bedtime for Bonzo.

What they see is a man shaped by his small-town Midwest past. Reagan makes no apology for this; to the contrary, he thinks the old-time virtues and ideals worked just fine and is firmly convinced that many Americans share his belief that the nation needs to get back to them.

"Americans don't need any big economic theories or any sermons on political philosophy," he says. "We just need five short words — family, work, neighborhood, freedom and peace."

Reagan is astonished that anyone would consider him a right-wing radical. Needless to say, he doesn't share the view of many politicians, including some Republicans, who believe that he carries a number of major liabilities into the general election.

These include: a too narrow conservative political base; his age (he'll be 70 next February 11); and the perception that he is a Hollywood creation who is something of an intellectual lightweight, has no experience in Washington or with foreign affairs and shoots from the hip on the issues.

Reagan argues that, quite the contrary, the country has finally shifted right-ward to his views. "I hear the Democrats talking about balancing the budget, cutting the growth of the bureaucracy and government spending, and fighting inflation, and I think I've written their speeches for them," he quips to his audiences.

He also argues, with justification, that his views have not changed substantially since he burst on the national political scene nearly 16 years ago with an eloquent, nationally televised speech on behalf of Barry Goldwater in the last days of the 1964 Presidential campaign. Since then, he has been the leading spokesman for conservatives in the Republican Party.

This steadfast conservatism over the years is a major reason why Reagan will be the GOP candidate this year. With the exception of Goldwater, the party has a history of nominating comparatively moderate Presidential candidates. But Reagan's nomination reflects the movement of the party to the right, a movement that has been going on ever since the conservatives got control at the grass-roots level while organizing for Goldwater in '63 and '64. Reagan stood up to be counted for Goldwater and conservatism when they were down, and such latecomers as Howard Baker and George Bush couldn't overtake all his work.

Reagan's overall success has been marred somewhat by the fact that his primary losses in states such as Michigan, Pennsylvania and Connecticut reinforce party moderates' fears that he is vulnerable in the northern industrial states, which have traditionally voted Democratic in Presidential elections and which the Republicans must crack to win the White House.

The first thing Reagan has promised to do if elected President is to clamp a hiring freeze on the Federal Government in order to reduce the size of the bureaucracy through attrition due to retirement and resignations.

The second probably will be to push for a "supply side" tax cut to stimulate the economy and increase productivity by encouraging capital formation for new industrial plants. The theory is that increased tax collections due to the economic upsurge — combined with cuts in Federal spending aimed at eventually reducing it from 22 percent of the Gross National Product to 19 percent — will enable him to balance the budget.

The tax cut Reagan favors is one that Representative Jack Kemp of New York and Senator William Roth of Delaware, both Republicans, have unsuccessfully introduced in the Congress. The Kemp-Roth bill would cut income taxes across the board by 10 percent a year for three years.

Reagan also promises to cut back the money supply, on which he partly blames the current ruinous inflation, to reduce government regulations of business and to abolish Federal inheritance taxes and income tax on savings account interest.

Despite his tax cut, Reagan wants to increase defense expenditures. He argues that the U.S. needs a new strategic nuclear missile system to enable it to counter Soviet aggression and subversion, but he has not detailed specifically what weapons he favors.

His energy and agriculture policies are simplicity itself. "Just get the government out of the energy business and off the farmers' backs, and they'll produce all the food and fuel we can use," he says over and over.

It is risky to try to predict what Reagan would do as President, however. One reason for this is the lack of specifics behind his generalized proposals, such as the strategic weapons systems. Another is his willingness to compromise when necessary.

As governor of California — from 1967 to 1975 — he soon learned that he had to compromise sometimes in order to do business with the state legislature. Despite the famous question he asked in his first gubernatorial campaign, "A tree's a tree, how many do you have to look at?" which outraged environmentalists fearful for California's famed Redwood forests, Reagan compiled an excellent record as a conservationist.

And despite his war of words with student demonstrators at the University of California ("If we're going to have a bloodbath, let's get it over with," he said at one point), he did not destroy the state's excellent university system as liberals feared.

In the end, Reagan's record as governor was surprisingly moderate, which lead Jess Unruh, the former Democratic speaker of the Assembly and a frequent political adversary, to comment that "He wasn't as bad as the liberals feared or as good as the conservatives hoped." Nonetheless, moderate Republicans fear that Reagan's pragmatism as governor was forced by the Democratic legislature and other circumstances that may not be present in the fall campaign.

Interestingly, although he has become the most popular spokesman for conservatism in the country, Reagan started out as a New Deal Democrat and long was an admirer of Franklin D. Roosevelt. (His father was fired as a traveling shoe salesman during the Depression and wound up with a WPA job administering relief benefits.) Roosevelt's second inaugural speech moved Reagan greatly:

"I was just a young radio sportscaster in Des Moines," he says, "but I still remember the thrill I felt when I heard that speech coming across over the radio...."

In the years immediately after World War II, when he served three years in the Air Force making training films in Hollywood, Reagan devoted most of his energies to serving as president of the Screen Actors Guild. This was during the McCarthy era when Hollywood "blacklisted" many former Communists in the movie industry. And Reagan earned high marks for his skill in convincing critics that the Guild had remained free of Communist influence.

In the 1950's, partly because of his growing affluence and marriage to his present wife, the former Nancy Davis, Reagan began moving politically to the right. He had become a millionaire, and taxes were beginning to hurt both him and his friends — his pro-business, anti-government philosophy started to evolve. He became an admirer of Dwight Eisenhower, and in 1962 first registered as a Republican.

In executive style he is much closer to Eisenhower than to Roosevelt. As governor, Reagan carefully searched out talented conservatives from the business community for governmental appointments and, like Eisenhower, delegated considerable authority to them.

Though Reagan is capable of making decisions quickly and cutting to the heart of an issue — without second guessing himself — critics have claimed this reflects his being intellectually shallow, lazy and poorly informed.

Part of this impression is due to the one-liners that often seem to dominate his speeches. One favorite: "Do you know that someone has figured out that if all the government forms businessmen have to fill out here were spread out, they would cover the entire District of Columbia 25 layers deep." Pause. "And maybe that's not such a bad idea."

Reagan has also gotten into trouble for asserting things that don't check out. One is his statement, repeated frequently, that the Alaska North Shore has more known oil reserves than Saudi Arabia's potential reserves. All geological studies indicate that just the opposite is the case.

On the personal side, Reagan is a nice guy, very straightforward, uncomplicated, emotionally secure, a quintessential optimist who looks for the best in people.

He has a close, strong, affectionate relationship with his wife, whom he sometimes calls "Mommy" and who takes a strong, detailed, day-to-day interest in his career. She is as strong-willed as he, if not more so, and shares his values. "Nancy and I have never been much for cocktail parties and the social whirl," Reagan likes to say. "Our favorite way to spend an evening is to have dinner in front of our television set. Our favorite program is Little House on the Prairie... and sometimes when we're watching our eyes get moist."

His personality has inspired confidence in many primary voters and is his prime political asset. Unlike many campaigns of this year and the past, his character will not be at issue.

His competence will be. And on that, the record is mixed and the jury is out. FW

Where Reagan Stands on the Issues

Economy: Would cut personal income taxes by 30% over three years; favors a Constitutional amendment to balance the budget; wants to limit Federal spending to a set percentage of GNP; against mandatory wage and price controls.

Energy: Wants less Government interference with oil and gas companies; opposed windfall profits tax; against any new gas or oil rationing; supports nuclear energy — but with strict safety requirements.

Foreign Policy: Urges tougher stand vs. Soviets (favors U.S. blockade of Cuba in retaliation for Soviets' invasion of Afghanistan); supports Israel's stand on West Bank settlements.

Defense: Wants U.S. to rebuild military strength; rejects SALT II; approved of both B-1 bomber and neutron bomb; opposes restoring draft.

Social Issues: Opposes gun control, abortion and E.R.A.; favors capital punishment; would turn Federal welfare programs over to the states.

The Enduring Wit of American Presidents

By Joey Adams

Every President of the United States has had his own special brand of humor. My all-time favorite White House wits down through the years have to be Harry Truman, John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson.

Harry Truman always told it like it was. He used to say that if he hadn't been President of the United States, he probably would have ended up "a piano player in a bawdy house."

One of my favorite Truman comments has to do with campaign speeches: "I heard a fellow tell a story about how he felt when he had to make speeches. He said he felt like the fellow who was at the funeral of his wife, and the undertaker had asked him if he would ride down to the cemetery in the same car with his mother-in-law. He said, 'Well, I can do it, but it's just going to spoil the whole day for me.'"

John Kennedy's sense of humor was an integral part of his inspiration. The American public was aware of it from the moment he took office: When he was criticized for appointing his kid brother Bobby as Attorney General practically out of law school, he said, "I see nothing wrong with giving Bobby some legal experience as Attorney General before he goes out to practice law."

My favorite story about L.B.J. is the time he had a group of friends over to a barbecue on his ranch. "I got 3,000 head of cattle on this ranch," he bragged. His neighbor interrupted, "Mr. President, I don't want to bring you down — but this is Texas. Every rancher in Texas has at least 3,000 head of cattle." To which the President replied, "In his refrigerator?"

George Washington: [In a letter of congratulations to Governor Lee of Virginia on his marriage] "You have exchanged the rugged field of Mars for the soft pleasurable bed of Venus."

Thomas Jefferson: "Never buy what you do not want because it is cheap; it will be dear to you."

Abraham Lincoln: "Public discussion is helping to down slavery. What kills a skunk is the publicity it gives itself."

Ulysses S. Grant: [General Grant was expressing to one of his officers his dislike for a member of his staff. The other officer protested, saying that the man in question had been in 10 campaigns.] "So has that mule yonder, but he's still a jackass."

Theodore Roosevelt: "There is only one quality worse than hardness of heart — and that is softness of head."

Woodrow Wilson: "Conservatism is a policy of make no changes — and consult your grandmother when in doubt."

Calvin Coolidge: "If you don't say anything, you won't be called on to repeat it."

Herbert Hoover: [When word reached President Hoover of the birth of a granddaughter] "Thank God she doesn't have to be confirmed by the Senate."

Franklin Delano Roosevelt: "When you get to the end of your rope — tie a knot and hang on." FW

Comedian Joey Adams has been good-will ambassador for three Presidents.

Shown greatly reduced. Approximate size of framed work is 34 x 25 inches.

Double-matted and handsomely framed, ready for hanging—order by July 31st.

'It's a morning so perfect you savor every breath. Not a sound anywhere, yet your dog trembles with excitement. Then it happens—a brace of pheasant rush up out of nowhere! It's over in a second. But the memory stays with you all your life.'

KEN MICHAELSEN

'Autumn Wings' by Ken Michaelsen

KEN MICHAELSEN is one of today's most talked-about wildlife artists. And in a field of art scrutinized keenly by collectors, few artists have received higher accolades. Most recently, Michaelsen was honored with America's prestigious Duck Stamp award. This is the most coveted single award in the world of sporting art—and the only artistic competition regularly sponsored by the United States Government.

Autumn Wings' is Michaelsen at the height of his powers. It portrays America's most splendid game bird, the ring-necked pheasant—at a moment of intense beauty and wonder.

The work is vibrant with the colors of the autumn world—perfect in its depiction of the finest details. Each feather, each beautiful marking of the cock pheasant is shown, with a sense of motion so real you can practically hear the thunder of wingbeats. And every other element is captured with equal skill. Even the peeling shingles of the abandoned barn, far in the distance.

To evoke such subleties, Michaelsen chose the medium of the collotype print. Collotype has been called the 'Rolls Royce' of the graphic arts. And authentic collotypes are relatively rare on the limited edition market. Because no other comparable medium demands more care and craftsmanship to realize each print. For example, each print of 'Autumn Wings' must be hand-fed into the special press and 'pulled,' not once—but eight times in slow succession.

The results are well worth the effort: crisp, exacting detail. Absolute continuity of tone. Unparalleled sensitivity of color. Qualities which have made the collotype a chosen medium for some of the world's greatest living masters of realism—including Andrew Wyeth, Ken Davies and Robin Hill.

After each print is pulled, Ken Michaelsen will carefully examine it. If it possesses the smallest flaw—it will be destroyed. Only if it completely satisfies him will he hand-pencil his signature and the date on the work.

Ken Michaelsen's 'Autumn Wings' is a new and original work, created solely for issue in a single, limited edition. It will be issued exclusively by The Franklin Gallery . . . available only by direct application . . . with a further limit of one signed print per person. At the end of this year—1980—this single edition will be permanently closed, and the plates will be defaced after each collector has received his work.

'Autumn Wings' will be double-matted for you, to complement its mood and colors. It will then be handsomely framed, in finely finished solid hardwood. Considering the size of the print—and the cost of similar custom-framing at retail galleries today—this service alone is a benefit of substantial value.

This is a special advance notice of the issuance of Ken Michaelsen's 'Autumn Wings.' Please note that your application must be postmarked by July 31, 1980.

HOW TO WIN COMPLIMENTS, COMPLIMENTS OF SPAM.

It's easy to win compliments when you start with SPAM® Luncheon Meat. Because SPAM can be the start of a whole world of good things. Put it in a casserole. Add it to a salad. Make it into a midnight snack. Dice it up with eggs. Or fry it up by itself.

Our special blend of pork shoulder and Hormel ham can really make a meal. And it's the perfect ingredient for your food budget, too.

SPICY SPAM SANDWICH

1 can (12-oz.) SPAM® Luncheon Meat, cut in strips
¼ cup diced green pepper
2 tbsp. minced onion
3 tbsp. salad dressing or mayonnaise
1 tbsp. horseradish sauce

Combine SPAM, green pepper, and onion. Mix salad dressing and horseradish sauce; toss gently with SPAM mixture to coat. Serve in sandwich buns with lettuce, American cheese, tomato and cucumber slices. Makes four sandwiches.

GRILLED CHICKEN ZURICHOISE

(Jacques and Suzanne, Little Rock, Ark.)

3 (2½-lb. size) broiler-fryers, split
1 cup dry white wine
¼ cup light olive oil or vegetable oil
⅓ cup peeled whole shallots
1 clove garlic peeled
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon light olive or vegetable oil
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallots
¼ cup dry white wine
⅔ lb. fresh mushrooms, sliced
1¼ cups heavy cream or half and half
1 cup brown sauce
1 small clove garlic, peeled and finely chopped
3 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley

1. Place chicken halves into shallow glass or porcelain container.

2. In blender, combine 1 cup dry white wine, ¼ cup olive oil, shallots and garlic. Blend, covered, until shallots and garlic are finely chopped.

3. Pour blender mixture over chicken halves, coating on both sides with mixture. Cover and refrigerate.

4. Make sauce: in Dutch oven, heat 1 tablespoon butter and 1 tablespoon oil; add 1 tablespoon finely chopped shallots. Sauté, stirring about 3 minutes.

5. Pour in ¼ cup white wine and add mushrooms. Heat to boiling; reduce heat and simmer until liquid is somewhat reduced and mushrooms are tender.

6. Add cream and brown sauce, stirring over low heat. Add the remaining small clove of finely chopped garlic. Add lemon juice and parsley to the sauce. Taste, correct seasoning if needed with salt and freshly ground pepper.

7. Grill chicken halves, skin side up, first for 20 minutes, about 8 inches from hot coals. Baste frequently with shallot wine marinade.

8. Turn chicken halves, brush with marinade and broil about 15 to 20 minutes longer or until cooked through.

Makes 6 servings

FRESH FRUIT BOARD

(Jim's Tiffany Place, Lansing, Mich.)

2 wedges fresh Hawaiian pineapple
2 triangular wedges watermelon
3 wedges cantaloupe
2 small clusters grapes
1 cup fresh strawberries, with stems
½ cup fresh bing cherries
½ papaya

1. Arrange fruits in a pleasing arrangement on a marble platter. A large serving platter or cheese board would also do nicely. Fruits may vary seasonally.

Makes 4 to 6 servings

Editor's Note: Jim's is also known for its popular Fresh Fruit Salad made of seasonal fresh fruits on a bed of lettuce, served with a scoop of orange sherbet and cottage cheese and garnished with blueberries and granola.

RATATOUILLE

(Historical Briarhurst & Manor Inn, Manitou Springs, Colo.)

3 cloves garlic
1 lb. (6 medium) zucchini
1 lb. (4 large) green peppers
1 lb. (4 large) red bell peppers
1 lb. (4 medium) onions
1 lb. (1 medium) eggplant
2 lbs. (4 large) tomatoes
¾ cup light olive oil
1 tablespoon chopped fresh thyme leaves
Salt, freshly ground white pepper

1. Prepare vegetables for sautéing: slice garlic thinly, cut zucchini into ¼-inch-thick slices, green and red peppers into ½-inch-wide strips; slice onions thinly, cut unpeeled eggplant into 1-inch cubes and peel and quarter tomatoes.

3. In additional ¼ cup oil, sauté onion and eggplant for 5 minutes, stirring. Add to zucchini mixture.

4. In ¼ cup oil, sauté tomato quarters and thyme for 2 minutes, stirring.

5. Turn all vegetables into skillet with tomatoes and thyme. Season with salt and pepper; stir gently to mix. Heat to boiling. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, 5 minutes. Uncover and simmer 5 to 8 minutes or until liquid is practically all absorbed. Vegetables should be soft and tender but retain their individual identity. Serve hot or cold.

Makes 8 to 10 servings

SANGRIA

(Cantina, Ardsley, N.Y.)

5 gallons barbarone red wine
1 can (6 ozs.) frozen orange-juice concentrate
1 can (6 ozs.) frozen pineapple-juice concentrate
1 can (6 ozs.) frozen apple-juice concentrate 15 ozs. superfine sugar
Ice
Sliced oranges
Sliced lemons
Lemon-lime soda, chilled
Brandy, if desired

1. Make up concentrate base: combine red wine, thawed juice concentrates: orange, pineapple and apple. Add sugar;

SPICED BUTTERMILK POUNDCAKE

(The White Gull Inn, Fish Creek, Wis.)

1 cup granola or coarsely chopped walnuts
2 tablespoons sugar
3 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon ground cloves
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 cup butter or margarine
2 cups sugar
4 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup buttermilk or sour milk
Creamy Vanilla Frosting*
3 tablespoons granola

1. Preheat oven to 350°F. Grease well and flour a 10-inch tube pan.

2. Combine granola and sugar and sprinkle on bottom of pan.

3. On waxed paper, stir together the flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt, cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg.

4. In large bowl, beat butter until softened; gradually add sugar and continue beating until light.

5. Beat in eggs and vanilla.

6. At low speed, beat in flour mixture (in fourths) alternately with buttermilk (in thirds), beginning and ending with flour mixture; beat only until combined.

7. Spoon batter over granola in prepared tube pan. Bake 60 to 65 minutes or until the cake tests done.

8. Cool in pan on wire rack, about 10 minutes, then turn out on rack and cool completely.

Makes 12 to 16 servings

*To sour milk: place 1 tablespoon vinegar in measuring cup, add milk to fill to 1 cup level.

*CREAMY VANILLA FROSTING

⅓ cup butter or margarine, softened
3½ cups sifted confectioners' sugar
3 to 4 tablespoons light cream or milk
1½ teaspoons vanilla extract

1. In medium bowl, with electric mixer at medium speed, or wooden spoon, beat butter with sugar, 3 tablespoons cream and vanilla until smooth and fluffy.

2. If frosting is too thick to spread, add remaining tablespoon cream.

Headaches: The Kinds, The Causes, The Cures

By Brie Quinby

"But physicians could provide little help for people with headaches until recently because the medical technology just didn't exist," admits Dr. Seymour Diamond, executive director of the National Migraine Foundation in Chicago. "Fortunately, that's changing."

Research into the subject has revealed that not all headaches are the same and that most headache sufferers can be helped. A doctor can often tell what kind of headache a person has by doing a physical examination, paying particular attention to the head, eyes and nervous system and listening to a description of the quality, intensity, location and timing of the pain.

Types of Headaches— And What Causes Them

"Although most people who get repeated headaches immediately think they have something organically wrong with them," explains Dr. Diamond, "fewer than 10 percent of all headaches are what are known as traction headaches, those caused by organic problems such as brain tumors." (Traction headaches also can be caused by sinus, ear and dental problems, eye strain and blood clots in the brain.) The large majority of headaches fall into two other categories.

The most common type of headache, which nearly everyone experiences, is the psychogenic or tension headache. Psychogenic headaches originate from emotional stress — such as anxiety or depression — which is sometimes not even consciously recognized. They are characterized by a steady, non-throbbing, squeezing pain, and sufferers may complain of discomfort all the way around their head, as though they are wearing a hat that is too small. This "hatband" pain is caused by the tightening of the muscles in the head and the back of the neck.

The other type of headache that afflicts millions of people is the vascular headache, which is caused by the swelling of blood vessels in the brain. The most frequent type of vascular headaches are classic and common migraines. The classic migraine often begins with an aura — sparkling lights or bright spots that disturb the vision. As the aura subsides, a throbbing headache that may last several hours sets in. Common migraines have many of the same symptoms, minus the visual disturbances.

Another kind of vascular headache is the cluster headache, which affects mainly men. These headaches may occur as often as four or five times a day for several weeks and then disappear for months. The pain, which is excruciating, usually begins on one side of the head, and often the blood vessels in the temple area on that side can be seen throbbing.

Headache Treatment

Treatment for headaches varies. For psychogenic headaches, doctors generally prescribe pain-relieving, tranquilizing or mood-elevating drugs, depending on the severity and type of pain. However, since the pain is caused by anxiety and tension, the physician will also try to help the patient locate and deal with the stressful situations in his life.

For infrequent migraines, a doctor may prescribe a drug such as ergotamine, to be taken at the onset of the headache. In cases where the migraines are frequent, a daily dose of medicine may be prescribed to keep them from starting.

Another form of therapy that is being used successfully for migraines is biofeedback, in which patients learn to use intense concentration to control the flow of blood in their body. By increasing the blood flow through their hands, migraine patients are able to lessen the amount of blood pulsing through the swollen blood vessels in the head — thus decreasing the migraine pain. "But," warns Diamond, "biofeedback doesn't work for everyone; it requires tremendous concentration."

Unfortunately, the cluster headache doesn't respond to biofeedback. However, many of the same drugs that are used to treat migraines work for cluster headaches, since both are caused by the swelling of blood vessels in the brain.

When should you see a doctor about a headache? "If a headache is so severe that it incapacitates you, changes your personality, your thinking processes or your emotions, you should seek help," advises Diamond. "Most people get occasional headaches, and those can be treated with aspirin or aspirin substitutes, but if a person finds he's taking more than 12 tablets a week, or if the headaches are persistent or becoming worse, he should look into it." Solid 22-Karat Gold Krugerrand

The World's Most Famous Gold Coin in exact miniature

Only $22 if you act by July 31, 1980!

The famous Krugerrand, symbol of gold's elegance, beauty and value! In today's gold market, the Krugerrand is the most popular gold coin of our time because it contains one ounce of fine gold; in fact, on June 10, 1980 the First National Bank of Chicago was selling the famous Kruggerand for $675.

Now, you have the rare opportunity to possess a Solid 22-Karat Gold Miniature Krugerrand available exclusively through the Columbia Mint for the special price of $22 if you act by July 31, 1980.

AN EXQUISITELY DETAILED MINIATURE

Individually die-struck by master craftsmen, each miniature captures the full three-dimensional relief of the full sized coin. Each brilliant uncirculated 22-Karat gold piece has the likeness of Stephanus Johannes Kruger, the late 19th century President of South Africa on one side, and the distinctive depiction of the Springbok, the small African antelope on the reverse side.

Each solid 22-Karat Gold Piece is presented to you in a specially designed collector's case, accompanied by an individually numbered Certificate of Authenticity and a historical account of the Krugerrand. It's a golden treasure to be cherished for years to come—and the ideal gift for every occasion. A stunning solid 14-Karat Gold Frame for your miniature gold piece is also available.

AVAILABLE FOR A LIMITED TIME!

Due to the constant fluctuation in the price of gold on the world market, our low price for these stunning Solid 22-Karat Gold Miniature Krugerrands can be guaranteed only until July 31, 1980. In addition we must set a strict order limit of five coins per order.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED

We are so sure that you will be thrilled with the workmanship and value of your Solid 22-Karat Gold Miniature Krugerrand that we offer it to you with a guarantee of satisfaction:

You may return the coin(s) within thirty (30) days in the original collector's case with the Certificate of Authenticity for full refund of your purchase price (except postage and handling, of course) no questions asked.

Obviously, we anticipate unusually heavy demand for these exquisite Solid 22-Karat Gold Miniature Krugerrands and we will fill orders strictly on a first-come, first-served basis. To avoid disappointment or delay you are urged to place your order now as this special price of $22 is guaranteed only until July 31, 1980.

ROACH PRUFE NO.1 IN UNIVERSITY TESTS

In a report just released by the UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, eight commercial and test products that included a broad spectrum of insecticides were tested against a product called "ROACH PRUFE." The report concluded "Our experience under field conditions has shown that when properly applied, the ROACH PRUFE formula provides a degree of cockroach control that is usually superior to all other registered commercial or consumer products."

Alan Brite, who 30 years ago developed and lent his name to what is now a standard household cleaner, Copper Brite, stated: "Because roaches simply do not recognize ROACH PRUFE as an insecticide, they do not try to avoid it by scattering to other parts of your residence as they do with the other insecticides. Plus the electrostatically charged powder sticks to their bodies, which they then carry back into the walls spreading among the other roaches. The result is you kill not only the roaches you see, but also those hiding and multiplying in your walls."

Odorless. Easy To Apply

ROACH PRUFE is odorless, non-evaporating, non-staining and non-flammable. It is simply applied with a teaspoon under kitchen appliances and other hidden areas. It can be used in homes, schools, hospitals, restaurants, plus new construction.

Brite has a problem, however. He says most retailers apparently think it's unprofitable to stock ROACH PRUFE on their shelves when the same customers will come in again and again to buy the other insecticides. So until they do, he's decided to sell his product direct to consumers.

ROACH PRUFE costs $7.95 plus 95¢ for postage for a one-pound can, add 6% tax in California. One can covers up to a 9-room residence, plus one can for basement and garage. To obtain the product, send a check or money order to Copper Brite Inc., Dept. 93 at 5147 West Jefferson Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90016. Copies of the University tests are available by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Copper Brite, Inc., Dept. A.

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Can Self-Esteem Ease Your Pains?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. To be on good terms with yourself and to know what you are really like, you've got to be yourself.

2. How sensitive you are to aches and pains depends on what you think of yourself.

ANSWERS

1. True. University of Florida studies show that many people actually don't know what they're really like. They wear social masks for various situations. ("Why, I can't imagine him behaving that way. He's never like that at home. And his boss says he's a completely different man at the office.") Wearing different faces may facilitate getting along smoothly with various types of people and adjusting to varied social situations, but it takes a toll. And like an actor who plays diverse roles, the person may become less and less certain of which character is actually himself. Psychologists term this condition self-alienation. "People pleasers" are the most likely to find themselves in this situation. They very much want everyone to like and admire them, and to satisfy this ego-hunger they show different faces to different people, often losing track of who they really are and how they really feel about themselves.

2. True. This was the conclusion to studies conducted by a team of behavioral scientists — psychologist Gordon V. Stanley (Australia) and psychiatrists Diana Elton and Graham D. Burrows. Men and women subjects were administered tests to determine pain-sensitivity thresholds and psychological tests to determine self-esteem. Results: Subjects who had good feelings about themselves, who felt they were inspired by worthy motives, who were doing their best and who were on good terms with themselves were found to be significantly less sensitive to pain than those whose opinions of themselves were clouded by self-doubt, feelings of guilt or lack of rapport with the promptings of conscience. (It has been noted that a person's mood or state of mind is directly related to how the brain evaluates pain impulses received from various parts of the body.) FW

Gives prompt temporary relief in many cases from hemorrhoidal pain and burning itch in such tissues.

There's an exclusive medication which actually helps shrink painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by inflammation. And in many cases it gives prompt relief for hours from rectal itching and pain in such tissues.

Tests by doctors on patients showed while it gently relieved such pain, it also helped reduce swelling of such tissues.

The medication used in the tests was Preparation H®. No prescription is needed. In ointment and suppository form. Use only as directed.

Organize Yourself – and Save Time and Money

By Samuel J. Gulino

When you are born, when you get married and when you die, official documents record the event. And in-between these momentous occasions, hundreds upon hundreds of paper records enter your life — almost on a daily basis.

What should be saved and where? What should be discarded? How does a family organize itself for efficient, money-saving record-keeping? Every family should have a system of record-keeping and — with a little organization — it's easy to control the ever-growing flood of paper records.

Safe-Deposit Box

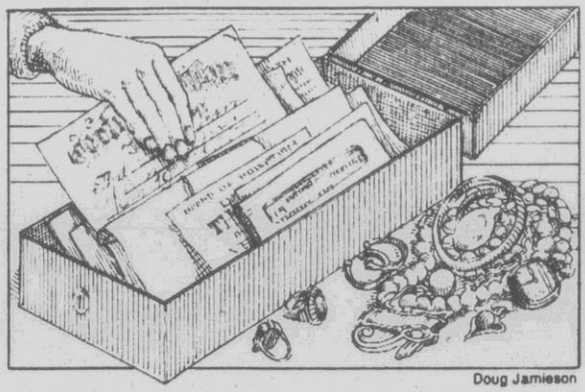
The rental fee for a safe-deposit box at your bank or savings and loan association is at most only a few dollars per year. Your safe-deposit box should not be cluttered with souvenirs, unimportant papers or your child's first tooth. Put in only what is important, irreplaceable or costly and difficult to replace. Such items include: birth certificates, bonds, securities, marriage license(s), divorce papers and child-custody agreements, citizenship papers, death certificates, adoption papers, deeds, mortgage papers, important contracts, automobile titles, copyrights and any other document recorded by the Government or the courts.

Canceled Checks

Saving all your canceled checks for years is, in most cases, unnecessary. Utility bills and charge-account statements show the current balance owed. It is true, however, that billing mistakes are sometimes made. A good rule of thumb, therefore, is to save all canceled checks for a year and then discard all those except those needed for proof of payment of long-term installment debts, estate settlements and for income-tax purposes. (The Internal Revenue Service is allowed, by law, three years to audit Federal income-tax returns and, in unusual cases, up to five years.)

Household Inventory

A thorough household inventory is an important record. In case of fire or burglary, you will need detailed information as to what is missing, damaged or destroyed. All major household items should be listed separately on index cards and then arranged alphabetically for easy reference. Information noted should include a general description of the item, brand name, date purchased, price (it's good to attach the receipt), store name and model and serial number. A lump sum can be listed for clothes, jewelry and miscellaneous items, although expensive items in these categories should be listed separately. Two copies of your inventory should be made — one for your safe-deposit box and the other to be kept at home.



Doug Jamieson

Net-Worth Statement

Each family should fill out a "net-worth statement" as a means of keeping tabs on all family possessions. The statements should be filled out on roughly the same date each year (such as January 1) and include assets in one column and obligations, or debts, in another. Assets would include all cash, both that on hand and that in savings and checking accounts; the market value of your house and any real estate; the value of household furnishings; the blue book value of all cars; the cash value of life insurance, stocks and bonds; and any money owed you. Obligations would take in the balance due on your mortgages; the balance due on any installment debts; the balance due on credit cards and charge accounts; and any other money owed. Your net worth equals assets minus debts.

A net-worth statement is also a way of keeping a tab on yourself. By annually doing such a review, consumer specialists say, you can see quickly whether you are getting ahead financially or falling behind, and, in either case, how fast.

Other efficiency tips for household record-keeping include:

• Buy a "stand-up" metal file box with two or three dozen file folders stored inside. Small ones are usually available for around $5 to $7. A list of all items in your safe-deposit box, your household inventory, bills to be paid, items of correspondence from stores, banks and other commercial establishments, records of energy consumption and so forth, should all be filed and organized. By doing so, you are less likely to lose important papers and more apt to pay your bills on time. And, periodically go through your files and discard items no longer needed.

• A kitchen bulletin board and calendar — posted with upcoming events, appointments, social obligations and shopping lists — is an invaluable aid to efficiency. They are not expensive and can be purchased in varied and attractive colors. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

A Matter of Taste

If your fondness for peppermint fudge ice cream is diminishing with each birthday, Dr. David Stevens, a psychology professor at Clark University, may be able to tell you why.

Stevens has been studying how the dimensions that underly people's flavor perceptions change with age. He divided 36 volunteers into three groups and had each rate 66 pairs of pureed food for similarity. He found that the youngest group (aged 18 to 25) rated food according to its texture, the biting sensation it had and the hedonic or pleasant aspect. "In this age group, the hedonic rating was correlated with the sweetness of the food," explains Stevens. "In the group of volunteers aged 36 to 45, sweetness and hedonic were separate categories. And in the 56 to 65 age group, neither pleasantness nor sweetness accounted for much; the intensity of a flavor was what older people remarked on."

J.L. Hamar

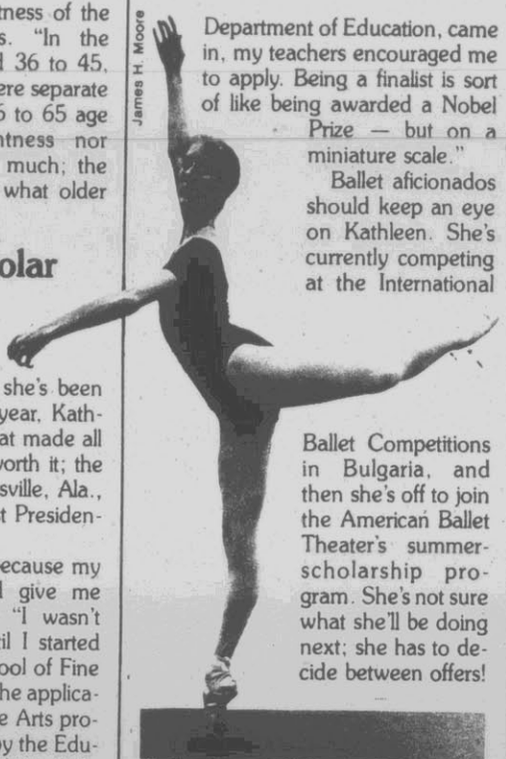
An Arts Scholar

On her ninth birthday, Kathleen Anne Moore received her first ballet lesson as a present, and she's been dancing ever since. This year, Kathleen received an award that made all those hours at the barre worth it; the 16-year-old girl from Huntsville, Ala., was named one of the first Presidential Scholars in the Arts.

"I started taking ballet because my mother thought it would give me poise," laughs Kathleen. "I wasn't really serious about it until I started going to the Alabama School of Fine Arts in ninth grade. When the applications for the Scholars in the Arts program, which is sponsored by the Educational Testing Service and the U.S. Department of Education, came in, my teachers encouraged me to apply. Being a finalist is sort of like being awarded a Nobel Prize — but on a miniature scale."

Ballet aficionados should keep an eye on Kathleen. She's currently competing at the International Ballet Competitions in Bulgaria, and then she's off to join the American Ballet Theater's summer-scholarship program. She's not sure what she'll be doing next; she has to decide between offers!



James H. Moore

Shy Children

Giving a shy child a younger playmate is an effective antidote to shyness, according to a study by a professor of child development at the University of Minnesota.

During preliminary observations in seven day-care centers, Dr. William Hartup singled out those children who talked or played with their peers less than a third of the time. He then placed each of the shy children in a separate room to play with one other child for 20 minutes during the school day. Some were given a younger playmate and others were given a playmate of the same age. After only 10 play sessions, the shy children with the younger friends became virtually as sociable as the rest of their classmates.

Hartup suggests that parents can help their shy children by inviting a younger child over to play and then progressing to older children and more complicated social situations. "But," he adds, "avoid inviting four or five kids over and shoving yours into the backyard with them."

Farming For Energy

On a 500-acre farm outside of Ithaca, N.Y., researchers from Cornell University are demonstrating that dairy farmers can meet nearly 65 percent of their energy needs with power produced on their own property.

According to Dr. Larry Walker, who heads the team of scientists, the "energy integrated dairy system" relies primarily on alcohol distilled from corn and methane gas produced from cow manure. "The methane passes through a generator where it is converted to electricity, and the heat given off by the generator is used to heat the water that's needed for all the farming and household operations," he explains. "And by converting about 10 percent of the corn crop to alcohol, we'll be able to run two or three vehicles exclusively on that.

"What makes this experiment unique is that we're integrating so many energy systems," adds Walker. "Most of these operations are already available to the agricultural community, but getting them to all work together has never been tried before."

Lifestyles

Health. Most people seek a second medical opinion after being told they need surgery, but how often do the opinions of the two physicians agree? According to a report in the New England Journal of Medicine, 88.7 percent of 1,591 patients who were told they needed surgery had the recommendation confirmed by a second doctor; of the patients who received conflicting opinions, 69.5 percent then had their need for surgery confirmed by a third physician.

Medicine. Horseback riding is being used as a therapeutic activity for some disabled people. At the Thorncroft Equestrian Center in Malvern, Pa., children with cerebral palsy are taking riding lessons to help stretch and relax their impaired muscles, reports the United Cerebral Palsy Association's newsletter. According to Saunders Dixon, Thorncroft's owner, "To a kid who may not even be able to walk, riding a horse is quite an achievement. Every time the horse moves, the child has to make physical adjustments. And riding seems to really help build their self-confidence."

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

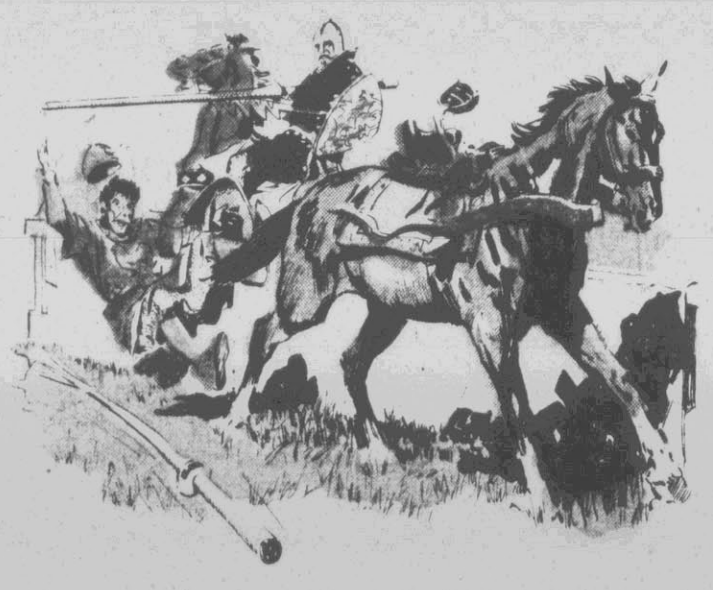
"STOP HER!" HE CRIES. BUT FORCE PROVES UNNECESSARY. "THANK THE GODS I AM FOUND OUT," WEEPS THE OLD NURSE. "TAKE THIS FROM ME BEFORE I DRINK IT MYSELF." IT IS MANY MINUTES BEFORE ALETA CAN CALM THE CRONE. FINALLY THE NURSE FINDS HER TONGUE.

"MANY YEARS AGO," SHE BEGINS, "MY ONLY SON, ODO, RESOLVED TO TRY HIS LUCK IN THE LISTS. HE TURNED A DEAF EAR TO MY PLEAS. THE POOR BOY: HIS FIRST OPPONENT WAS SIR MORDRED.

"I BEGGED THE MAN TO HAVE PITY. HE MERELY LAUGHED. ON THE FIRST PASS, MORDRED'S LANCE CAUGHT ODO ON THE HELMET AT FULL TILT. SINCE THAT DAY HE HAS BEEN A SIMPLETON.



"A MONTH AGO, SIR MORDRED FOUND ODO STEALING A CHICKEN. 'YOU WILL DO ME A SERVICE,' HE THREATENED, 'OR YOUR SON WILL HANG.'

"EVERY NIGHT AS I BROUGHT THE KING HIS TONIC, MORDRED LURKED IN THE PASSAGEWAY. I ASKED NO QUESTIONS."
