Registering Of Men Born In 1960 Begun

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting today, Uncle Sam wants 19- and 20-year-old men to sign up for the draft, even though the law under which registration is resuming could be ruled unconstitutional before their next birthday because it excludes women.

After a flurry of late legal maneuvering, in which a federal court blocked registration only to be overruled by Supreme Court Justice William Brennan, the first of an estimated 4 million young men began filing out

Selective Service information cards at post offices around the country.

The first phase of the registration will continue over the next two weeks. Within 90 days they will receive formal notice through the mail that they are registered for possible induction in the event of a national emergency.

Early response to the government's call was light today with postal officials reporting no lines or crowds. But some young men said they came early to get it over with.

"They're going to get me anyway so it ain't no use trying to hide," said Marvin Wallace, 19, of Baltimore. He as well as other young men among the first group of registrants around the country said they signed up reluctantly.

There has been no draft since 1973, and President

Carter has said he has no intention of asking Congress to reimpose one.

But registration, which was stopped five years ago, is expected to shorten by almost a month the time it would take for a callup, officials said.

"With this, within hours of a military emergency we could start the induction process," Selective Service Director Bernard Rostker said in an interview Sunday.

This week's registration covers young men born in 1960. Those born in 1961 will begin registering next Monday and those born in 1962 are to register in January. After that, all young men must register upon reaching their 18th birthday.

During the registration the men are required to fill out a card giving their name, sex, date of birth, current address, permanent address and Social Security number. There also is a box they may check if they want to be contacted by a military recruiter.

Rostker predicted 98 percent of those required to sign up will do so. Others, including some draft critics, predict hundreds of thousands of youths will ignore the order or be unaware that registration is required.

Leaders of draft protest movements planned demonstrations across the country. Several peaceful protests, including one near the White House, were held over the weekend.

Draft critics vowed to set up shop at many post offices to urge registrants to place a gummed label declaring "I am registering under protest" on their cards.

The return to registration, approved by Congress earlier this year, was thrown into confusion Friday when a three-judge federal panel in Philadelphia declared the Selective Service Act unconstitutional because it does not include women.

Although Brennan on Saturday reversed the lower court's injunction against registration, questions about the law's constitutionality still must be resolved.

Daniel Weinberg, the attorney for the plaintiffs in the nine-year-old Philadelphia suit, said he expects his case to reach the full Supreme Court by fall with a decision late this year or early in 1981.

In explaining his order, Brennan indicated the Supreme Court could go either way in the case. But he said a failure to proceed with registration in the meantime could cause foreign policy and military problems, while the government could always just destroy the computerized information it has collected if the law eventually is found to be unconstitutional.

Draft critics said Sunday the confusion arising from the legal maneuvers, and to some extent problems the Selective Service has been having in promoting the plan, will cause as many as a half million young men not to take part.

"The Philadelphia case and Brennan's stay just guarantees that this registration will be a fiasco," said the Rev. Barry Lynn, chairman of the National Committee Against Registration and the Draft. Lynn, whose group urges people to register only under protest, said 1980 "could be the year registration began and the year it ended."

But Selective Service officials, noting widespread news coverage of the court rulings in recent days, said the publicity will help pass the word and add to the number of persons who register.

"We don't start off with the notion that the population will not obey a lawful order endorsed by the Congress and president. We start off with the basis that they will register," said Rostker. "It is the law of the land."

Although some indictments are expected to be sought against violators, several legal experts expressed doubt that the government will be quick to prosecute, particularly if large numbers do not register.

"If they get 80 percent compliance, they will have 800,000 felons. No government wants that. Then they'd really have draft protests," said one lawyer involved in draft cases. He asked not to be identified.

Failure to register carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

The National Resistance Committee, which is urging young men not to register, says it has pledges from 7,000 individuals that they will boycott the sign-up. The head of the group's Washington operation, Alex Reyes, predicts 500,000 to 750,000 persons will ignore the law.

Pentagon Seeking Reserve Buildup

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — While youths are registering for a possible wartime draft, the Pentagon is moving to expand voluntary enlistments in a reserve manpower pool that would be tapped for combat strength early in a crisis.

If it succeeds, the plan would provide what the military calls "pre-trained" men to bring Army regular, National Guard and reserve units to full wartime strength and to provide replacements for combat casualties in the first months of fighting.

So far, the idea has been tested on a very limited scale. But officials say they believe that, in a full-scale effort, they can enroll as many as 10,000 young men a year directly into the Individual Ready Reserve.

Since they would have completed basic training, these individual reservists would be available for overseas deployment in a war much more quickly than draftees, who are required by law to receive at least 12 weeks of such training after induction.

While draft registration was resuming today, Congress would have to pass separate legislation to actually reinstate the draft.

Young men would sign up for a six-year hitch in the Individual Ready Reserve.

After three months of peacetime active duty for basic training, they would spend the remaining five years and nine months at their normal civilian pursuits. They would be obligated to undergo two brief periods of refresher training, but would not be required to drill regularly as is the case with members of the Guard and reserve units.

Some critics question whether this sparse training would produce useful combat soldiers when needed.

"It's a lot better than having nobody to call when we need individual fillers and replacements in a crunch," said one Pentagon official who asked to remain anonymous.

The plan for expanded voluntary enlistments into the Individual Ready Reserve carries no provision for any bonuses. So far as can be determined, no other tangible incentives are offered.

The Individual Ready Reserve, or manpower pool, has shrunk from a peak of almost 1.6 million before the draft ended in mid-1973. In those days, youths finishing two years as conscripts were placed on the ready reserve rolls for an additional four years to complete a six-year military obligation.

Since the end of the Vietnam War, the armed forces have been reduced substantially and men serve minimum enlistments of three years. This led to a steep drop in the reserve manpower pool, which totaled only about 396,000 last October.

Pentagon officials considered proposing a two-year extension of the six-year overall military obligation for future recruits as one way of replenishing the individual reserve pool. But they dropped the idea because, as one official said, "it places the burden on those who've served."

So defense manpower specialists turned to other options, including a $600 bonus for re-enlistment in the Individual Ready Reserve by men whose obligation has expired.

County Board Meets In New Office Bldg.

The Pitt Board of Commissioners today held their first meeting in the new county office building off West Fifth Street.

The county's administrative offices moved into the facility last week. Earlier, offices of the Department of Social Services and the Board of Education had occupied space in the old Pitt Memorial Hospital building which has been renovated at a cost of more than $2 million.

The Agricultural Extension Service was moving into its new quarters on the second floor of the county office facility this morning.

Commissioners this morning awarded bids for the purchase of a land excavator and backhoe loader for use at the county landfill, and for the purchase of a pickup truck.

Low bidder for the excavator and backhoe was North Carolina Equipment Co., with a bid of $67,887 for the excavator and $20,840 for the backhoe.

Low bidder for the military truck was Bill Haddock Chrysler-Plymouth-Dodge with a bid of $5,604.

In other business this morning, the board scheduled a public hearing for Aug. 18 on three proposed ordinances: an ordinance regulating multi-family dwelling units; a flood damage prevention ordinance; and a revised soil erosion and sedimentation control ordinance.

Commissioners also set the base pay for part-time employees of the Board of Elections at $4.46 per hour, and raised the per diem pay for members of the Board of Social Services from $10 to $15 as allowed by state law.

Warmly Greet Queen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fighting back tears, freed American hostage Richard Queen returned to the State Department today to a tumultuous welcome.

"You all know how much I love to be back," the 28-year-old diplomat said. "I wish there were 52 more with me."

Thousands of department workers crowded into a lobby to greet him. He was hugged by two secretaries freed from Iran in November.

"This is just the first step back for the other 52," Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie said.

Queen told a news conference after the ceremony that he taught himself French during more than eight months in captivity, played penny-poker with a roommate and read hundreds of books from the U.S. Embassy library.

He said his captors "didn't care what we did as long as we didn't escape."

Queen, who can speak Farsi, said some of the militants were "really fine people" while there were "a few S.O.B.s."

He flatly rejected any suggestion that those who seized the embassy last November and have held it since were Communists.

EARTHY REGISTRATION — Elliott Grimes, 19, found the floor convenient to fill out his draft registration form as all the counter space was filled at the New Orleans Post Office this morning. The hard surface didn't bother Grimes as he is employed as a concrete worker. (AP Laserphoto)

Registration Procedure

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 4 million young men begin registering for the military draft today. Here are the procedures they will have to follow and what information they will have to provide:

WHO MUST REGISTER? All young men born in 1960 must register this week, followed next week by all young men born in 1961. To avoid long lines the government is asking people to sign up on different days according to the month in which they were born.

Those born in 1962 will have to register next January. After that each male must register upon reaching his 18th birthday. The only young men not required to register are those on active duty in the armed forces or at military academies, and non-immigrant aliens.

WHERE DO YOU REGIS-

TER? At your local post office. Some small postal stations in groceries or service stations may not, however, have registration points. The postmaster there will be able to tell you where to go.

WHAT INFORMATION MUST BE PROVIDED? Registrants must present identification and fill out a card giving their name, sex, date of birth, Social Security number, current address, permanent address and current telephone number. There also is a box which may be checked if someone wants to be contacted by a military recruiter.

WHEN IS IT OFFICIAL? There are no draft cards. About 90 days after the registrant fills out the information card he will receive a letter from the Selective Service System confirming he has signed up and making it official.

Heat Wave Reaches Northeast And The People Are Sweating

By DAVID GREEN
Associated Press Writer

Philadelphia declared a water emergency, Baltimore residents were forced to ration water and more than one million New Yorkers jammed Coney Island as the heat wave that baked much of the nation moved into the Northeast.

The death toll from the month-long hot weather continued to rise over the weekend, with at least 1,767 heat-related deaths reported by today, according to an unofficial tally compiled by the Associated Press.

Sunday was the hottest July 20 in New York City on record, as the temperature hit 101. In Baltimore, the mercury climbed to 102 and in Newark, N.J., it hit 100.

In Philadelphia, where temperatures Sunday reached 95, a state of water emergency was declared as children and other residents turned on fire hydrants for relief from heat. Police said they received thousands of calls complaining of open fire hydrants and little or no water pressure in homes.

"The problem is citywide," said deputy Fire Chief Roger Ulshafer. "We have the fire department out on the street turning off hydrants, and police, too. But if we have a major fire in one of those areas (where water pressure is low), we're in trouble."

Residents in a northwestern section of Baltimore and Baltimore County were placed on an odd-even rationing system for outside use of water after a voluntary plan failed.

Many beach park lots on New York's Long Island were forced to close by noon Sunday as record crowds inundated the area. More than 269,000 people jammed Jones Beach on the island's South Shore.

"The Atlantic (Ocean) is still the greatest air-conditioning system around," said Milton Berger, a spokesman for Coney Island where more than one million people swam and sat in the sun. The crowd proved a boon for the area's famous amusement park which reported heavy crowds later in the evening.

Temperatures in North Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana were mostly in the high 80s and low 90s Sunday, welcome relief from the high 90s and 100s that predominated for weeks.

"I would say that for the most part, our heat wave is over with," said National Weather Service forecaster Bob Dietlein on conditions in Alabama. However, the National Weather Service in Georgia predicted a return to 100-plus readings, possibly by week's end.

The weather service forecast for the Southeast for today and Tuesday called for temperatures in the 80s and 90s with a chance of scattered showers.

Temperatures were also scorching parts of the Midwest which have been sizzling since the heat wave began June 22.

Twenty-three heat-related deaths were reported Sunday in Kansas City, Mo. That brought the total for the city to 111, making it the hardest-hit city in the country. The statewide total was 235, which led the total for states.

National Guard troops drove around Kansas City passing out fans to residents without air conditioners.

In St. Louis, National Guardsmen went door-to-door looking for elderly people suffering from the heat.

In Oklahoma, state residents prayed for rain at the urging of Gov. George Nigh. Dr. Bailey Smith, pastor of the First Southern Baptist Church in Del City, said 3,000 people ended a three-week religious crusade by joining hands and praying for rain.

In Houston, it was too hot even to swim. More than 100 children who entered a neighborhood swim meet Saturday had to be treated for heat-related illnesses and the meet was halted.

In southern Texas, however, the heat was proving a boon for history buffs.

Dear Abby

Writing Off A Rip-Off

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a faithful reader of your column in the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin. Recently you printed a beautiful poem titled, "Take Time," reminding people to take time to make friends, to read, to play, to share, etc. . . . All lovely thoughts.

Well, I own a jewelry store in Bridgeton, N.J., and I was so taken with this poem that I had my sign painter put it on a 14-by-22-inch showcard to display on an easel on my pay counter. The title was in big, bold letters.

One of my customers, attracted by the sign, read the title, took the words literally, and walked out with one of my Bulova watches!

Enclosed is a bill for $69.95, plus tax $3.50. Please remit $73.45 to Morton's Jewelry. Very truly yours,
MORTON H. LIEBERMAN

DEAR MR. LIEBERMAN: I pay my honest debts, but this isn't one of them. Fortunately you can write off this rip-off by charging it to promotion and advertising.

DEAR ABBY: Last year my husband and I bought a summer place (a condo) because we've always wanted to get away from the city and relax for a few months in the summer.

Now the problem: My husband's brother and his wife, who live next door to us in the city, visited us at our condo and liked it so much they made an offer on the condo right next door to ours!

I love my relatives and have never had any trouble getting along with any of them, but next door all the time??

I don't want to cause ill feelings between families, but is there no way to avoid this closeness 12 months of the year? Or do you think I'm being selfish and small?

NEEDS SPACE

DEAR NEEDS: You're being neither selfish nor small — just frank in admitting that you need more space. However, it will take some master diplomacy to discourage your relatives from moving in next door without offending them.

DEAR ABBY: I am a student at the University of Missouri and will graduate with a B.S. this August 1980.

My friends tell me that I should not send out graduation invitations because I am an older student. (I am 45.) Is it proper for older students to send graduation invitations to friends and relatives?

MADE IT IN MO.

DEAR MADE IT: Proper? I'd say it's imperative. Congratulations!

DEAR ABBY: As a clinical social worker for the Pediatric Neurology Department at UCLA Medical Center, I will no doubt again be consoling parents who have lost children in swimming pool accidents.

These senseless drownings can be prevented if adults act responsibly. This means fencing pools, and never leaving children unattended near the pool or anywhere in the house where they can wander out-of-doors and into the pool.

Children should be taught to swim and how to climb out of pools.

CPR courses are given free at local Red Cross chapters, fire departments and public health agencies.

Please give this space in your widely read column, Abby. MELISSA KLASKIN, L.A.

DEAR MELISSA: These tragic drownings that claim the lives of so many children take only a minute. The grief and guilt suffered by those in whose care the youngsters were left lasts a lifetime. Thanks for a timely reminder.

LEARN TO BE A QUESTIONER:

When you feel alone, lonely and totally overwhelmed by a decision you need to make and find yourself wishing that someone would just TELL you what to do — when you feel like the world used to make sense, but now everything is falling apart, YOU'RE VULNERABLE!

When you're hurting (or even when you're not): Beware of people with magical answers or solutions who are excessively or inappropriately friendly. There are no instant friendships!

Beware of groups that pressure you into joining them. No one knows what is right for you except you. Beware of groups that recruit you through guilt. Guilt produced by others is rarely a productive emotion.

Beware of invitations to isolated weekend workshops having vague goals. There is no reason to be vague unless there is something to hide.

You should know that the two basic principles of mind control ("brainwashing") are:

- (1) If you can get a person to believe the way you want, you can get that person to believe the way you want.
- (2) Sudden, drastic changes in environment lead to heightened suggestibility and to drastic changes in attitudes and beliefs.

Don't be foolish. Protect yourself! Don't go away for a weekend or longer with a stranger or group, unless:

You know the name of the sponsoring group. You are thoroughly familiar with its beliefs and affiliations and goals. You know what will be expected of you. You know that you will be free and able to leave at any time.

So, if you ever feel overwhelmed, lonely, confused or in need of friends or direction, reach out to someone you trust: a friend, a teacher, a parent, counselor, a crisis hotline, a member of the clergy, a member of the Campus Ministry. Or, if you know someone who has these feelings, urge that person to reach out to someone he can really trust.

P.S. In cases where young people have already joined a religious group anywhere in the U.S. and loved ones are unable to locate them or reach them by phone or letter; or if parents have visited them and found them unwilling (or afraid) to leave, write to: The Rev. Peter D. Haynes; 2311 Bowditch St.; Berkeley, Calif. 94704. You will be told whom to contact in your community. And since this is a non-profit organization, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a reply.

Ga.-Fla. Tobacco Goes On The Market Today

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — As the first of the 1980 flue-cured tobacco crop goes up for sale in Georgia and Florida today, farmers and warehousemen are worried that continuing dry weather may turn a good crop into a disaster.

This year's crop is estimated to be about 8 percent greater than the 1979 crop, and so far the leaf is considered higher quality. But the lack of rain is causing concern.

"We need relief — rain — very badly," said Frank Pidcock III of Moultrie, president of the Georgia Warehousemen's Association. "The tobacco in the field now is going through a lot of stress, due not only to lack of moisture but severe heat stress."

Last year's crop brought Georgia farmers more than $142 million on 100.9 million pounds, for an average of $1.41 a pound. This year's estimated production in Georgia is 107.2 million pounds.

Pidcock and other warehousemen said increased government support prices and allotments could mean a good sales season, if the weather cooperates.

Support prices are up 12 to 15 cents a pound from last year on most grades, although some grades were dropped from the system altogether.

The average support price is $1.41 a pound, the same as the average sales price last year.

"Hopefully, our average will move up from where it was last year to $1.50 or $1.55, but so much of that is going to depend on quality," Pidcock said.

Preliminary surveys by the Georgia Crop Reporting Service at Athens show the tobacco crop is damaged, but just how badly is not known because much of the crop is irrigated.

A more detailed survey is in progress by county farm agents, and federal and state agriculture officials hope to have a better idea of the situation this week.

Richard Rogers of the Gold Leaf warehouse at Fitzgerald said he is pessimistic about this year's crop, not only because of the recent lack of rain, but because the crop is maturing later than usual.

"The crop was planted late, due to all the rains we had in March," he said. "Some of the crop is mighty green."

"We could get a good general rain now and still be in pretty good shape, but if it continues to stay hot and dry, you'll have some tobacco in the field that's not going to ever mature and it's going to have to be forced off the stalk."

Two Wrecks On Sunday

An estimated $2,850 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police early Sunday morning.

Investigators reported heaviest damage resulted from a 3 a.m. incident on Jarvis Street, 120 feet South of the intersection of First Street, involving a car driven by Tremain Ray Johnson Jr. of Route 5, Greenville.

Officers said the Johnson car collided with a parked auto owned by Conrad Dean LGoat of 109 South Jarvis St., causing $500 damage to the Johnson car, $1,500 damage to the Goad vehicle, and $50 damage to a fence at 109 South Jarvis St.

Johnson was charged with exceeding a safe speed in connection with the incident.

Police reported an estimated $800 damage resulted to a motorcycle driven by Ernest Dale Morris of Shady Knoll Trailer Park after the vehicle struck the curb on Reade Street, 35 feet South of the Fifth Street intersection about 12:35 a.m., causing the vehicle to overturn.

Police reported Morris was attempting to avoid a collision with a car which pulled into his path at the time of the incident.

A Portrait of Tranquility

Since I've been studying yoga I feel more peaceful. I know it works, but I don't understand how. Has any research ever been done to find out why yoga is so helpful? — Miss N.B., Mass. Dear Miss B.:

The study of yoga can be classified under the general term of "meditation." For many years, the portrait of tranquility was never fully understood or scientifically studied.

Today, it is possible to record changes in the blood pressure, the rate of the heartbeat, changes in the brain waves and in respiration.

Many remarkable electronic devices can be hooked up to people who are in the process of meditation. It has definitely been shown that many of the physiological behavior patterns of the brain, the heart and the circulatory system can be beneficially affected during the state of meditation.

It must be accepted as a fact that meditation in all its forms can exert tranquilizing effects on those who have studied the techniques.

I have terrible pains between my toes. I remember that my mother had the same thing when she was about my age (I am 52). Could this possibly be an inherited thing? — Mr. P.F., N.M. Dear Mr. F.:

Rangers Using Walking Horse

By DEAN FOSDICK
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Some of the state's park rangers are being trained to handle their latest equipment — Tennessee Walking Horses.

Thurman Mullins, director of Long Hunter State Park and captain of the state's mounted rangers, said the patrol program began in 1974 when officials bought eight horses and tack.

"But it's only recently that the program has really taken off," Mullins said in a telephone interview. "We've expanded the program, redefined it, and we've been getting some awfully good horses donated by the Walking Horse Owners Association."

Mullins, who trains the horses and the rangers who ride them, says only Tennessee Walking Horses are used.

"They're part of the state's heritage, after all. The horses provide us with a walking history program.

"And they're extremely functional," he said. "Feeding them is certainly cheaper than buying gas and oil."

Mullins said the horses must be trained in how to cope with such things as motorcycles, gunshots and scampering children. Rangers, he said, must learn how to use the horses for riot control, parades and day-long patrols.

"They're tremendous icebreakers with the public, and we are, after all, public servants. We find that when we go through the park with a set of blue lights on our car, people are a little reluctant to talk to us," Mullins said. "But when we go through on a horse, they come up and pet it and, generally, things are much friendlier."

Caroline Cross, of Franklin, Tenn., and a member of the Walking Horse Owners Association who was instrumental in getting animals donated to the state, said her motives hadn't been altogether altruistic.

"There are so many people who come to the state parks that having the horses there gives them good visibility," Mrs. Cross said.

Braxton-Hoover Vows Exchanged On Sunday

Vicki Elaine Hoover of Winterville and John Louis Braxton Jr. of Greenville exchanged wedding vows at three o'clock Sunday at Landmark Baptist Church. The Christian and double ring ceremony was conducted by John T. Dudley.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Preston Hoover of Hahn Air Force Base, West Germany, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Louis Braxton Sr. of Greenville.

A program of wedding music was provided by Rita Glisson, pianist, Vic Alexander, trumpeter, and John Benson, guitarist.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white organza over white peau de soie designed with a modified Queen Anne neckline outlined in scalloped Chantilly lace beaded with pearls. The empire bodice was overlaid in French Chantilly with the full bishop sleeves in the matching lace finished at the cuffs with the scalloped lace. The waistline also featured the beaded scalloped Chantilly lace. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were enhanced by cascading tiers of organza edged in the Chantilly lace. The fingertip veil was enhanced with Chantilly lace covering the headpiece and trimmed the edge of the veil. Appliques of roses were scattered throughout the three tiers of the veil. The cap of the veil featured beaded pearls. She carried an open Bible and a bouquet of red and white roses mixed with lily of the valley and streamers.

Deborah Bullock, the bride's sister, was maid of honor. She wore a formal length mint green gown of Quiana which was covered with a mint green chiffon cape. She carried an open Bible traced with yellow minicarnations and lily of the valley.

Bridesmaids were Phyllis Hill of Chocowinity, the bridegroom's sister, Jan Denmark of Greenville, Kathy Townsend of Savannah, Ga., and Sandy Braxton of Greenville, also a sister of the bridegroom. They wore dresses similar to that of the maid of honor. The chiffon cape covering the mint green dress was of a floral print. Honorary attendants were Tammy Allen of Greenville and Anne Whitesell of Burlington.

Kimberly Graham of Greenville was flower girl. She wore a white dotted Swiss dress with pink hearts. The neckline was enhanced with ruffles around the neck and puffed short sleeves and featured a ruffle at the bottom of the dress and a satin sash around the waist. She carried a spring bouquet.

John L. Braxton Sr., the bridegroom's father, was best man. Ushers were Claude Smith of Greenville, Kenneth Braxton, the bridegroom's brother, of Greenville, J.D. McClue of Greenville, and John Hoover, brother of the bride, of Greenville. Timmy Graham of Greenville was ring bearer.

A reception was held following the ceremony. The traditional wedding cake was cut by Anne Whitesell, and Tammy Allen served the punch.

The bride is a graduate of Western Alamance High School and attended Elon College. She is employed as a teller at Planter's National Bank, Pitt Plaza. The bridegroom is a graduate of North Pitt High School and is manager of Winn Dixie at Rivergate Shopping Center.

After a wedding trip to Florida and the Bahamas, the couple will reside in Greenville.

Buy herbs and spices in small amounts because they soon lose their pungency unless you plan to use some fresh and freeze the rest. The defrosted leaves will be limp but still flavorful.

Miss Nanney, Mr. Rose Are Married On Sunday

Debbie Rae Nanney and Charles Erwin Rose of Farmville were united in marriage at three o'clock Sunday at the First Christian Church in Farmville. The Rev. Myles Cartrette conducted the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Nanney of Farmville, and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. James Haywood Rose of Farmville and the late Mr. Rose.

A program of wedding music was given by Mrs. Grady Bailey, organist, and the Rev. Cartrette sang "The Wedding Song" and "Longer".

The church was decorated with two 15-branched spiral candelabra entwined with green ivy on a candelabrum arch centered in the background. There were two large and two small palms on the sides of the altar. Ivy and baby's breath were used on top of the piano.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown with a chapel train of Chantilly lace and organza. The fitted lace bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline etched with seed pearls and shepherdess sleeves cuffed at the wrist with lace. The full length lace skirt extended into a chapel train. A pleated organza inserted panel accented the front of the skirt. She wore a layered mantilla headpiece bordered with Chantilly lace motifs flowing from a lace caplet etched with seed pearls for her headpiece. She carried a cascade bouquet of white silk roses and white gardenias interspersed with blue baby's breath and tied with white lace ribbon streamers.

Gail Worthington, cousin of the bride, of Greenville, was maid of honor. She wore a formal gown of angel blue polyester. The gown featured a blouson overlay with soft cape sleeves that tied at the shoulders. She carried a bouquet of white silk roses accented with blue baby's breath and blue ribbon streamers. She wore a white picture hat with an angel blue ribbon bow.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Randy Evans, cousin of the bride, of Aulander, Martha Ellis of Wilson, Mrs. Don Baker, sister of the bridegroom, of Greenville, and Mrs. Bill Erwin, sister of the bridegroom, of Farmville. The bridesmaids wore dresses, hats, and carried flowers similar to those of the maid of honor.

Maria Mazingo of Farmville was flower girl.

She wore a formal baby blue gown with a white collar and ruffled bodice. The skirt flowed into a two tiered ruffle of lace and tied with a bow in the back. She carried a white wicker basket filled with live blue and white rose petals. Attached to the basket was a removable corsage of silk blue and white daisies.

The bride's mother wore a seafoam silesta floor length gown. She wore a corsage of white silk roses. The mother of the groom wore a formal blue quiana knit dress. Mrs. James Heath and Mrs. Otis Nanney, grandmothers of the bride, were remembered with corsages of white silk carnations.

The bridegroom's brother, Joe Rose, of Richmond, Va., was best man. Ushers were Jack Rose of Myrtle Beach, Morris Rose of Richmond, Va., Robert Rose of Tarboro, all brothers of the bridegroom, and Dan Nanney of Farmville, brother of the bride.

The bridegroom's family hosted an after-rehearsal party Saturday night at the church. Assisting with the refreshments following the wedding ceremony were Mrs. Don Baker, Mrs. Robert Rose, Mrs. H.F. Strickland, Mrs. Bill Erwin, and Mrs. Barbara Kubrick.

The bride, a 1974 graduate of Farmville Central High School, graduated from Lenoir Community College in 1976 with an AAS Degree in Mental Health. She is presently employed by the Farmville Child Development Center. The bridegroom is a 1973 graduate of Farmville Central High School and is employed by Barnhill Contracting Company of Tarboro as a foreman. The couple will reside in Farmville.

Eye color depends upon the amount and distribution of pigment that is found at the front of the iris. The absence of such pigment in blue eyes allows the longer green and red wavelengths to be absorbed by the back layer of the iris. The shorter blue wavelengths are scattered by tiny particles in the top layer of the iris to give the iris its blue hue. Brown eyes have thick pigmentation which absorbs most wavelengths to give brown coloring. Hazel and gray eyes have thin layers of pigmentation which absorbs most red and green light.

Just as eye color varies, so does visual corrective requirements. Eyeglasses are a custom made product and must satisfy the requirements of the individual patient. At CLEAR VUE OPTICIANS, 1706 6th, Physicians Quadrangle Building A, each prescription and fitting is approached with the individuality it deserves. From attention to the requirements of the lens prescription to the fit, fashionability and pricing of the frame, every one of our patients receives individualized attention.

EYE TIP: Placing glasses in their case when not in use will prolong their life.

Debutante Ball Has Polynesian Setting

BY JILL ALLEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Saturday night here, debutantes from Greenville, Washington, Farmville, Maury, Williamston, Robersonville, Edenton, Colerain, Troy, Elizabeth City and Windsor were honored by their parents with a polynesian-style buffet dinner and dance in a polynesian setting. Debutantes across the state attended the celebration held at the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

Wahines (females) wore tropical dresses, long or short, while kanes (males) were dressed in "aloha" shirts and slacks or coat and tie.

Debs honored were: Greenville: Jill Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Alexander Allen Jr.; Nancy Garrett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Corydon Dwight Garrett Sr.; Jamie Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Lester Johnson; Cora Lee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Webster Lee; Beth Mann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger LaFayette Mann; Penne Smith, daughter of Mrs. John LeRoy Howard; Hannah Taft, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Holston Taft Jr.; Lauren Taylor, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Allen Taylor; and Helen Whitehurst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Clarence Whitehurst.

Karen Moye, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Caswell Moye of Farmville; Sandy Stokes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Laughinghouse Stokes of Maury; Sherri Stout, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ray Stout of Robersonville.

Washington: Maria Deatherage, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Earl Deatherage; Laura Lynn Pugh, daughter of Raeford Theodore Pugh Sr.; Patricia Ralston, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Ramsey Ralston; Ellen Rodman, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Clark Rodman; Sarah Gray Wiley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Russell Wiley; and Catherine and Emily Winfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Bernard Winfield.

Williamston: Susan Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Ramsey Davis Jr. and Jo Anna Lilley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Eason Lilley.

Carla Fowler, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Newton Fowler of Colerain; Catherine Cochran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hilton Jones Cochran of Troy; Stephanie Anne Graham, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Calhoun Graham Jr. and Elizabeth Weatherly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Elwood Weatherly Jr., both of Elizabeth City.

Edenton: Gail Bynum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. West William Bynum; Katherine Harless, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Boyd Harless Jr.; Margaret Hines, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Norfleet Hines Jr.; and Frances Hollowell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Herbert Hollowell.

Windsor: Mary Kay Cherry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Blount Cherry Jr.; Nancy Clyde, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman E. Clyde; and Mary Jeannette Mardre, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Lewis Mardre Jr.

Illuminating the way for the arriving guests, tiki torches lined the driveway to the club house where guests were then welcomed by the honorees and their parents with the familiar Hawaiian greeting "aloha." Each was presented with a lei, while honorees wore leis flown in from Hawaii made from 100 Vanda orchids.

Upon entering the club house, guests approached a life-size stuffed tiger amid green plants. Going in further, small home-made parrots in wicker bird cages gave the hallway a polynesian look. Once inside the ballroom, music of "The Talk of the Town," a local band, could be heard along with dancing and socializing.

Throughout the ballroom, life-size handcrafted parrots made by the hosting debs and their parents were suspended from the ceiling. And greenery not forgotten, the party would not have been complete without palm trees amongst the crowd.

Tables were decorated by seashell candles, greenery and fruit while the buffet table was adorned with an arrangement of strelitzia meginae and orange majestic lilies. The bandstand, not like one seen everyday, was set underneath a grass hut. Flowers and tropical foliage were scattered throughout the club house.

A brunch was given for the Greenville debutantes Sunday at 11 a.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W.H. Collier III, 107 Wesley Road. Hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Collier, Dr. and Mrs. M.J. House, Mr. and Mrs. L.M. Land and Mr. and Mrs. E.A. Warren.

Really A Dream Ticket

Whether it was planned that way or not we may never know, but the Republican vice presidential choice turned into a real cliffhanger in Detroit Tuesday night.

The rumor swept convention hall and the nation through television like wildfire — that President Gerald Ford would be Ronald Reagan's running mate. It was hailed as dream ticket, and indeed it was. There are few more respected political leaders in the nation than Gerald Ford.

Something happened before midnight. Somehow the deal fell through and Reagan made an unprecedented appearance at the convention to announce that George Bush would be his vice presidential choice.

The questions were myriad. Did the dream ticket come so close, or was it a matter of the media grabbing rumors? The latter isn't plausible because too many top party leaders confirmed the Ford choice. Then the question has to be asked, did Ronald Reagan merely want to go through the formality of asking Ford to join him to please the moderate wing of the party? The price obviously would have been high in terms of shared power, and Reagan could always end the negotiations by refusing to give too much.

At any rate the ticket didn't materialize and Bush became the vice presidential candidate. We feel that Ronald Reagan was on the right track when he was attempting to develop the "dream ticket". Gerald Ford as a running mate could have made the difference in winning or losing in November. Of course time will tell whether the right move was made.

FOR A WHILE WE THOUGHT HE'D FORGOTTEN!

By ART BUCHWALD

Bring In A Japanese

WASHINGTON — When Ronnie offered me the vice president's job on the Republican ticket a few weeks ago, I was sorely tempted to take it. But at the last minute I told him, "I could do it, Ronnie, but it would be wrong."

"I know he was disappointed. But you're the only one in the party who thinks the way I do, except of course for Nancy. We could make a great team," he pleaded.

"It's true," I said, "that we both believe in the same things and a strong dollar and a weak Soviet Union, but I think you have to balance the ticket with someone more liberal than either one of us, if we hope to get back the worldwide respect America has lost in the last four years."

"Do you have any suggestions?" he wanted to know.

"I do. But I don't know if you'll go for it."

ART BUCHWALD

"Try me," he said. "I believe you should have a Japanese person for vice president."

"Do you mean a Japanese-American?"

"No," I told him. "I mean a Japanese-Japanese. You see, the Japanese are taking over anyway and they might as well have a say in our government. You just read where the Ford Co. was going to become partners with Toyota. The Chrysler people are in bed with Mitsubishi and Hitachi has announced they soon will start building computers in the U.S. It would be very helpful to the American economy to have a Japanese businessman as our vice president."

"I don't know if it's such a great idea. There are still some people who remember Pearl Harbor," he said.

"There are a lot more people riding around in Hondas, Ronnies," I said. "Look, the Japanese have the image of efficiency, productivity and discipline. That's what this country needs more than anything else right now. A Japanese vice president of the United States would serve notice on the world that you intend to make America No. 1 again even if it means dumping Sony TV sets all over the globe."

"But I don't know any Japanese businessmen. How would I be sure that I could work with one in the White House?"

Helms Stuck To Principle

By WILLIAM M. WELCH Associated Press Writer RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Sen. Jesse Helms was the most forceful voice of the extreme right throughout the Republican Party's week in Detroit.

Now the GOP will be hoping for cooperation from him, not carping over ideological purity on the ticket.

Helms, 58, who emerged as a convention media celebrity, played a leading role in shaping passages of the Republican platform that are most pleasing to the most conservative GOP elements — flatly opposing abortion, dropping support for the Equal Rights Amendment and making military "superiority" the goal.

His closing-night address to the convention was permitted after Helms talked with presidential nominee Ronald Reagan's campaign and agreed to drop his symbolic vice presidential challenge in exchange.

But with the vice presidential question the only real story at the Republican gathering, Helms' threatened candidacy provided the only suspense in that news vacuum — until the drama of Gerald Ford's possible addition to the ticket developed.

Indeed, one noted cartoonist drew Helms as the jar of mustard amid a Republican-style Dagwood sandwich and ice cream prepared by Reagan.

Ultimately, however, Reagan and the GOP proved more pragmatic than Helms, and with the choice of George Bush as running mate opted to shape a ticket that may be more able to appeal to the broad, middle-ground electorate that decides presidents. That meant ignoring Helms' wish for a true-blue conservative running mate.

Helms, in Detroit, was variously viewed by observers and participants as leader of the Bible-thumpers to the voice of conservative conscience.

To those of his New Right and Moral Majority ilk,

Helms' final speech was a statement of principle — and a message that while they may not like Bush, they will go along with it with the reminder that conservatives dominated their convention and expect their platform to be remembered.

"It matters not the name of the person who serves in the White House or in the office of the vice president — what matters are the principles that guide them and their faithfulness to them," Helms said to a half-filled convention as TV cameras wandered elsewhere.

He presented a litany of conservative positions against abortion, much of the foreign aid and foreign business competition, the Panama Canal treaties and communist subversion everywhere; and for God, family, country and "family-centered" rights for women.

"These are not political issues. They are moral issues," said Helms, reflecting his political view of not right versus left but right versus wrong.

"Every Republican who embraces this platform will find himself in tune with the sentiments of the American people," he said. "We will succeed in November with the new majority coalition only to the extent as we stick to our principles."

Helms made it clear he found Bush hard to swallow because of his opposition to an anti-abortion amendment to the constitution, his support for ERA and a foreign policy "defect." It was particularly hard after Helms had gotten used to the idea of Ford joining the ticket.

Although 35 of the state's delegate votes were cast for Helms for vice president, most that went to Detroit with him made it clear they voted out of obligation or friendship. In fact, most were tickled with the prospects of the Reagan-Bush ticket.

"It will play like a sound-board on election day, whispering votes, votes," (Continued on page 5)

Debates Most Desirable

One thing seems to have been settled very quickly in this year's presidential campaign — the two major candidates are both willing to debate.

Hardly had Ronald Reagan been nominated by the GOP when President Carter, on the campaign trail in Florida, challenged him to debate.

Reagan quickly agreed to a series of debates, telling reporters, "I look forward to that."

Carter has proposed a series of debates in various sections of the nation.

Debates on national television have become a part of the presidential campaigns that is virtually expected by the public now, dating back to the famous debate between John F. Kennedy and Richard Nixon.

Certainly a debate between President Carter and challenger Reagan will be highly desirable this year. It is a good way for the public to become informed on the views of the candidates.

Technology Again?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The decade ahead promises to be a time when science and technology will once more come to the forefront in the United States, and the Research Triangle Institute of North Carolina is gearing for that boom.

George Herbert, president of RTI, has told that facility's board of governors that "it is imperative that the nation turn again in the 1980s to technology."

"And, indeed, I believe we will see technology restored to a higher position in national priorities: technology for new energy sources, for new industrial processes, for new products, and for defense."

The reasons are obvious. Other nations are outstripping this one in productivity of workers, in development of new products, in quality of manufacture.

"Entering the 1980s, we find we have lost relative positions internationally in productivity and consequently in our share of world markets," Herbert reported.

Defense

Another concern is that the Soviet Union has continued to put emphasis on defense technology and expansion while the United States has struggled with the "butter or guns" dilemma. "Our relative defense position has deteriorated," Herbert told the directors.

"As if these were not adequate reasons for renewed attention to technology and the science base which feeds it, we enter the 1980s faced by a worldwide energy crisis which has the potential for disastrous consequences for our economy and for a way of life to which we have become accustomed," he pointed out.

BILL NOBLITT

Tracing the history of science and technology in the nation over recent years, Herbert recalled the "Sputnik Scare" of 1957 which caused the U.S. space effort to move into gear with President John Kennedy's promise of a man on the moon, and the nation's schools, colleges and universities to renew emphasis on math and science.

The result was a time "committed to high technology, and the consequences for industry, and for research and development, were evident...overwhelming supremacy in science and technology."

But Camelot also spawned a national commitment for social conditions at the same time it triggered a massive investment in science hardware and systems.

North Carolina's Research Triangle Institute has played a key national role in that concern for health and medicine, education, environ-

Other Editors Say There To Stay

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

While the attention of most Americans has been riveted on the political scene here at home — with the Republican Convention being the focal point — ominous things have been happening in Afghanistan.

When the Soviet Union sent troops into that country last December to help the Marxist government put down a revolt by anti-communist Moslem rebels, this country reacted with vocal bombast and little else, except the boycott of the Olympic games in Moscow.

Since then, Washington, with its usual lack of firmness, has accepted the status quo in Afghanistan just as it has accepted the status quo in Cuba and in Southeast Asia where the communists are dominant.

Last week Russian cargo planes arrived in Kabul, Afghanistan, bringing new light tanks, armored personnel carriers, fresh troops and containers of chemicals. No one knows what the chemicals are, but it's a safe bet it isn't perfume.

Russia, some weeks ago, had announced that it was going to withdraw some of its troops from Afghanistan. We believe it will "withdraw" those troops in much the same manner it "withdrew" missiles from Cuba in 1962.

A few days ago a Soviet force of about 400 tanks and heavy artillery, jet fighters and helicopter gunships, attacked and bombed homes and vineyards in the Kohdaman Valley in retaliation for an attack by anti-communist rebels on a Russian military camp.

Soldiers in the regular pro-communist Afghan army have been deserting in heavy numbers. They don't have the stomach for fighting against their fellow countrymen.

Of late, only Russian soldiers and communist party activists have been doing most of the fighting. The pace of the fighting and the influx of men and equipment designed to fight a guerrilla war have convinced experienced observers that the Russians are simply changing strategy and tactics — not preparing for a pullout.

People ask, why would Russia bother about Afghanistan? It is the first step in a plan to control the vital oil sources of the Middle East and Near East. Washington knows this, but apparently can do nothing about it, given the present miserable state of the American military forces and capabilities.

Afghanistan is only the first step; more will follow.

Strength For Today

SORROW AS A STRENGTHENING FORCE

It has often been said that when God wants to train a man for a great destiny, He prepares him by the imposition of great sorrow. Moses spent forty long years in the wilderness preparing for his great role as a leader of the Jews. The part played by Paul in the stoning of Stephen probably rested as a burden on his conscience for the rest of his life, and the sorrow of it drove him to a deep reliance on God's grace. Some historians believe that it was a blasted romance which transformed the rash and ambitious young Washington into the wise and selfless father of his country.

From our point of view it would seem that we are best prepared for the issues of life through the gentle ministrations of joy. But the passing years teach us this is not so. Days of unending sunshine wither the flowers and fields. Life is like a great tree which grows strong and stately as it wrestles with the gales. — Elisha Douglass

Crises Due To Overspending

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer NEW YORK (AP) — Five years ago, R.W. had a good job, a happy family life and a pocketful of credit cards.

Then came the effects of recession. A business loss. Some bad investments.

In the space of only a few months, R.W.'s world of credit collapsed. His debts added up to more than many people earn in a year. His creditors wanted their money. His wife talked about leaving.

"I was out of control," he recalled recently, sitting in his office at a Manhattan employment agency. To get out from under, he said, "I would have sold my soul to the devil."

R.W., who didn't want his name used, has paid off his debts. "We even have a savings account now," he bragged.

He cleared his financial slate with the help of the local Consumer Credit Counseling service, one of some 200 such non-profit groups operating under the umbrella of the National Foundation for Consumer Credit, 1819 H St. N.W., Washington, D.C., 20006.

R.W., 38, is a native New Yorker. After graduation from college in 1963, he served in the military and worked for a manufacturer before forming an employment agency with a partner.

His parents, he said, "were not poor, but we certainly did not have a lot of money." Financial success was important and it seemed easy.

"I was making $32,000 a year when I was 28," R.W. said. Credit also seemed easy. "I was getting credit cards mailed to me unsolicited."

By 1975, however, the recession had hurt the employment business. R.W.'s partner used company money to pay gambling debts. And R.W. lost money in the stock market. "All my savings," he said.

"I really started to have to scramble to pay my bills...I was so far behind, my debt was a solid, five-figure debt..."

When business had been good, R.W. lived well. "I was never really budget conscious. I was kind of living from month to month." During slow periods, he borrowed. If you think there's a good month coming, he said, "you don't reduce your spending. You use credit cards."

After his business failed, R.W. said, "there was a period when I was making zero." He finally found another job with a base salary of $12,000, but it wasn't enough. "When the checks came in they were all spoken for."

R.W. didn't tell his wife about his financial problems. "Macho, I guess," he said. "I thought if I ignored them they would go away." Finally, on a Sunday morning in 1976, the company from which R.W. leased his car came to repossess it.

"We were getting dunning calls. People knocking on doors. I had lost my car. My wife said if we could afford it, she would leave."

Whom did he owe? "Everybody. I had credit cards. I had a personal loan. There were 16 creditors in all."

R.W. considered bankruptcy. Then someone told him about the counseling service which makes arrangements with creditors to help debtors pay their bills a little at a time.

The family gathered up the bills and visited a counselor who worked out a budget. "Within two weeks, all of the calls stopped," R.W. gave the counseling service a fixed amount every month to be relayed to creditors. "It was like a bucket of cold water," he said, remembering the regular payments, the regular reminders of failure. "It was a tremendous blow, consistent blows to my ego."

R.W.'s wife went to work. "My wife is quite extraordinary," he said. "She was a young girl. I swept her off her feet, stole her from another guy, promised her the world...Then, all of a sudden; Whammo! We're living like paupers. Chicken backs and spaghetti."

It took R.W. two years to pay his debts. Some large commission checks helped him make payments ahead of schedule. Today, he does not look like someone worried about money. He looks like success — three-piece navy blue suit, long-sleeved white shirt, tasseled black loafers polished to a high shine.

But memories remain. "It was clearly a lesson. It was a lot of lessons. I'm paranoid almost about going out and spending money. I have become a very acute and astute shopper. I know who I owe and what I owe. I'm still learning. I'm still fighting it."

R.W. has been unable to get new credit cards, but he is not sure he wants them. "I'm a little bit afraid. I'm afraid that I'll fall back into that old pattern."

ment, societal problems, and similar fields focussing on the human condition, Herbert noted.

"This was good", and the institute will continue its commitment to the human condition, Herbert pledged.

Decline
But the shifting of spending priorities to "quality of life" rather than technological advancement is a key part of the nation's decline in productivity, market share, defense posture, and the energy crisis.

"I believe we will see your Institute and its parent universities devoting increasing efforts to establish capabilities in new areas of advanced technology," Herbert reported.

Those institutions which best respond "will be stronger for it, and they will be listed among those making the most important contributions at the end of the decade," he said.

In the course of his remarks, Herbert said that as the federal government concentrated on trying to solve human problems, support for "true technology" dwindled, and industries found themselves applying more of their research and development effort to "meeting new federal requirements than to research for new products and greater productivity".

You never would know. They are very polite and very quiet and would kill themselves rather than complain about not being anything as vice president. But there's no one like them when it comes to making a single reflex camera. The Japanese are going to bail out every U.S. business in the next 10 years, so why not select one of them that can help us now?"

Ronnie said he needed time to think about it.

Well, it's obvious he didn't take my suggestion, because not one Japanese-Japanese name ever came up in the vice presidential selection process. Some say the conservatives balked at the idea, while others maintained that the only way they could get a Japanese businessman to run on the Reagan ticket was to get the White House to buy 1,500 Datsun cars.

enthusiast delegate Alan Pugh of Asheboro.

One final point is worth making about Helms and the nomination of Reagan. That is that the outcome of Reagan's 12-year old candidacy may have been far different were it not for North Carolina in 1976.

His sagging campaign got the unexpected win here four years ago when it most needed it — and after Helms and Raleigh lawyer Tom Ellis took over the Reagan campaign and ran it their own way.

It allowed Reagan not only to revive enough to proceed to that narrow loss at the Kansas City convention, but to continue on to 1980. Without the North Carolina victory, the Reagan campaign might have ended in that spring of 1976.

Now, only time will tell if Helms and those of his unbending ideological ardor will hold their criticism and allow the Republican ticket enough room to appeal to less rigid voters — the ones that weren't in Detroit.

Growing Concern Over Space Junk

WASHINGTON (AP) — One year after Skylab tumbled spectacularly from the Western Australian sky, at least 4,700 man-made objects still orbit Earth, a vast space junkyard whirling at 17,000 mph.

Scientists worry that one day the debris will start colliding, breaking into smaller orbiting fragments, and create a potentially serious hazard for astronauts, satellites and space stations.

"If the current trend continues, collisions between orbiting fragments and other space objects could be frequent," says D.J. Kessler, an astrophysicist with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

There's even talk about capturing some of the larger pieces and parking them in a safe place in orbit.

"With the space shuttle, it may prove beneficial to retrieve old payloads and rocket bodies, and the designation of an area of space as a 'garbage dump' may be useful," Kessler said.

All the debris will eventually fall to Earth, most of it burning up harmlessly in the atmosphere, NASA says.

But Skylab was a special case. At 77.5 tons, the space station was the largest satellite ever sent into orbit, and sections of it were big enough to survive the searing heat of re-entry.

People watched for months as its orbit slowly decayed until it made a final fiery dive through the atmosphere on July 11, 1979. It broke into thousands of pieces, scattering over the Indian Ocean and the desert of Western Australia.

NASA says nothing that big made by the United States will be allowed to make an uncontrolled re-entry again. It will be kept in orbit or be guided to re-entry over an ocean.

Kessler, a member of NASA's Space Environment Office, said only 5 percent of the orbiting objects are operating satellites, while 12 percent are non-functioning. Another 18 percent are rocket stages, bolts, cables, separation springs and other devices that accompany the payloads.

Most of the remaining pieces are fragments of space explosions — the unplanned blowups of 11 U.S. rockets after they boosted satellites into orbit, and the deliberate detonation of eight Soviet payloads during tests of anti-satellite weapon.

So far there have been no space collisions, but in 1965 two American payloads brushed together briefly without causing any damage.

Kessler said a 1976 study indicated a collision might occur only once every 17 years. A new study indicates that by 1998 there could be as many as four a year.

These collisions, Kessler said, "could become the major source of Earth orbiting objects, resulting in a self-propagating debris belt. The resulting environmental hazard to other spacecraft may exceed the hazard from the natural meteoroid environment..."

Kessler estimates that when America's manned space shuttle begins flying next year, its chance of a collision is very slim. It can maneuver away from objects, and even if hit by a fragment will be protected by a thick skin designed to guard against meteoroids. But the odds increase as space debris increases, and large orbiting stations may become vulnerable, he said.

"The amount of shielding required to protect against impacts larger than one centimeter becomes very large and may be totally impractical in terms of additional weight requirements," Kessler said.

He said the alternative is "controlling the environment" and the best way to do that, he added, is to prevent the objects from disintegrating into fragments.

NASA has taken one step in this direction, modifying the upper stage of its Delta rocket to reduce the chance of an explosion in space.

Circling Earth like time bombs, these rocket stages have orbited for as long as three years before their unspent fuel has suddenly erupted. Six Delta explosions since 1972 have produced hundreds of fragments.

Kessler said techniques are being developed to determine the disposition of a rocket body before it goes into space. It could be guided to an area where it would pose the least danger of a collision or it could be directed to an early re-entry.

A major assignment for space shuttle astronauts will be to repair or service orbiting satellites or bring them back to Earth for overhauls. They also could retrieve old rocket bodies and satellites and return them to the planet or transport them to Kessler's space "garbage dump."

No Gas Crisis For A Paddler

BAYTOWN, Texas (AP) — Richard Gillet has stopped putt-putting and started paddling.

For the past three weeks, Gillet has begun commuting by canoe to his job as head operator at Houston Lighting & Power Co.'s Cedar Bayou plant. He used to travel by motorcycle.

"The exercise makes you feel refreshed and you save money — all at the same time," he says.

Gillet, 36, decided to start paddling to work "when I was looking out over the bayou from the plant and I noticed that my house was just about half a mile away by water, but it was five miles by car."

"It seemed like such a waste," he says.

Ninth Failure In Traffic Control

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — A computer at the Fremont air traffic control center has failed for the ninth time in seven weeks, according to officials of the Federal Aviation Administration.

The failure, which occurred Sunday, delayed area flights for up to 20 minutes, FAA officials said. Air traffic controllers used a backup system, officials said.

The center monitors air traffic over northern California, western Nevada and the Pacific Ocean halfway to Hawaii.

Retirement Raises Three Basic Questions Farmers Must Answer

A writer once said, "People only retire from jobs they don't like." This may be one reason that many farmers never do retire from their field but, more often, the factor is financial or simply a lack of knowledge of how to take steps toward the slowdown or withdrawal from business activity.

Emphasis Shift

But as retirement age is reached, the emphasis should shift to the use of some of the wealth earned during the farm operator's productive years.

Retirement planning for the farm couple may be viewed as an endeavor to answer three fundamental questions: (1) How long will we need retirement income? (2) What amount of income is needed? (3) What are the current sources of this retirement income? Some attention must be paid to certain income and estate tax considerations during development of a retirement program.

Basic Questions

Let's take a look at the three basic questions to give us planning framework. How long will the income be needed? The answer to this question is the number of years that either spouse will live.

The exact length of time is truly uncertain, however a standard mortality or annuity table used by the life insurance industry can provide a statistical starting point.

Needed Income

How much income will be needed? The income requirements for family maintenance could be as high as 70 to 80 percent of personal expenditures just prior to retirement. Your current financial records should be studied to determine expenses for family consumption and savings the past few years.

Family living expenses on many commercial farms may be $15,000 to $20,000 or more when income taxes and personal insurance premiums are included. Leaving the farm at retirement may result in income needs as high or perhaps higher than during pre-retirement.

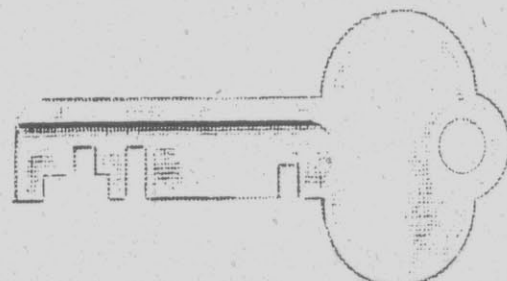

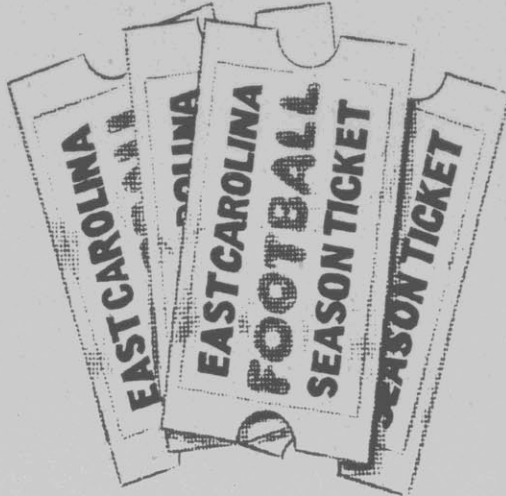

Lasting Inflation

Most agricultural economists feel that general inflation will be a lasting problem, which makes estimating retirement needs even more of a guess.

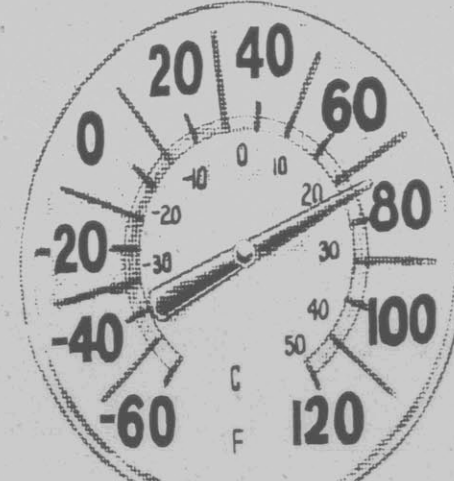

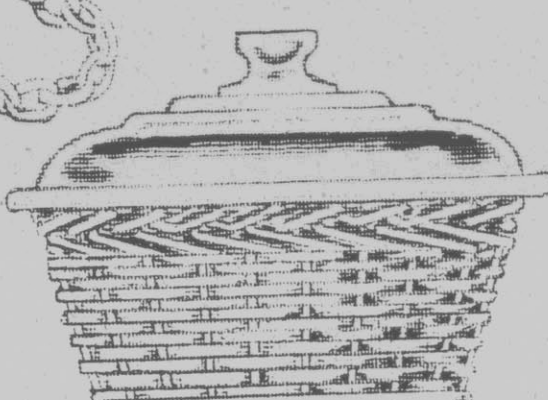

Some expenses may decline in retirement such as food and clothing. But those that could rise include recreation, travel — and medical expenses. Some of the risk of medical expense is insured through Medicare for individuals age 65 and over. You're purchasing this health coverage with part of the self-employment taxes paid during working years. It is important to know the extent of these benefits so that private medical insurance may be adjusted to account for Medicare provisions.

THE SHOE GALLERY
WEST END CIRCLE
Greenville, N.C.
HOURS: Mon.-Thur. 10-7
Fri.-Sat. 10-9

How to celebrate the 25th of July.

Try to open the BB&T Treasure Chest with the key you get just for coming into our Medical Village Office July 25th. If it works, you can choose a folding umbrella, a casserole dish or an outdoor thermometer as your prize.

Register to win one of the door prizes at BB&T's Medical Village grand opening. We'll be giving away a $250 savings account, three pairs of season tickets to East Carolina football games and a unique wall-hanging created by Greenville artist Myra Sexauer.

Have some free refreshments and pick up a free sewing kit at our Medical Village office.

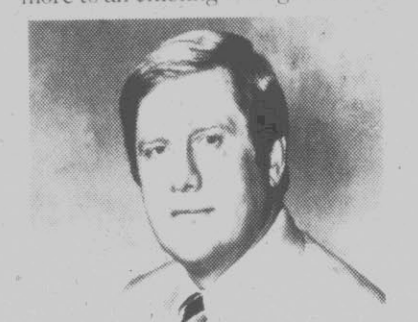

Meet Ed Emory, East Carolina's new head football coach, between 10 a.m. and noon during our July 25th opening.

The 25th of July? Of course. That's the day Branch Banking and Trust opens its new Medical Village Office in Greenville on Stantonsburg Road near Pitt County Memorial Hospital. And the daylong celebration that marks that event will make this the best 25th of July you've ever had.

The festivities get under way at 9 a.m. and go on until 6 p.m. In between, there'll be free refreshments and a free gift just for coming in. You'll also have a chance to win prizes from BB&T's Treasure Chest and to register for some terrific door prizes.

And if you leave your luck at home, you can still select a prize from our Treasure Chest by simply opening a new checking or savings account with $50 or more or by adding $50 or more to an existing savings account.

From 10 a.m. to noon, you can meet East Carolina's new head football coach, Ed Emory. From 2 to 4 p.m., you can see a special weaving demonstration by Greenville artist Myra Sexauer. And all day long, you can get acquainted with some of BB&T's top personalities (our staff — who else?).

So make sure you don't miss the opening of our new Medical Village Office on Stantonsburg Road. After all, it's a perfect excuse for some holiday-style fun in that long stretch between the Fourth and Labor Day.

And it's a sure sign that nobody works harder for your money than BB&T.

Don't miss the July 25th opening of BB&T's new Medical Village office.

Iran Keeps Firing Squads Busy

By The Associated Press
A firing squad executed five military officers convicted of plotting against Iran's revolutionary government and a court today reportedly handed death penalties to four others in the foiled coup.

On Sunday Iran's new

Parliament elected a militant Moslem cleric as its speaker. He is a leader of the conservative and influential party that has a number of members lobbying to try the 52 U.S. hostages as spies.

Revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, meanwhile, urged the Parliament to purge the government of those who are not "100 percent Islamic."
And Pars, the government news agency, today reported a man convicted of "armed revolt against the government," specifically blowing up an education facility, was executed late Sunday.

The new Parliament, or Majlis, elected as its speaker Hajjatoleslam Ali Akbar Rafsanjani, a leader of the powerful Islamic Republican Party which controls the assembly.
The election of the speaker was the final organizational step for the Majlis, and it can now turn to such business as the election of a prime minister and members of his cabinet, such pressing matters as economic reconstruction and the fate of the hostages.

The Americans today spent their 261st day in captivity.
In an address to the nation, Khomeini criticized the army and government for "indecisiveness" and told them it "must decide on a government which is 100 percent Islamic and not accept any minister like some of the present ministers."

"The Majlis should not accept anybody with the slightest doubt of his commitment to Islam," the leader of the revolution said.
This was viewed as a call for a cabinet of Moslem militants rather than Westernized moderates favored by President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr.

ITC Agrees Speed Up Probe Of Car Imports

By GLENN RITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - The U.S. International Trade Commission today agreed to speed up its investigation of foreign auto imports, but won't issue a ruling until after the presidential election.

The commission said it will decide whether imports are injuring the U.S. auto industry by Nov. 10 and will complete its entire report, including recommended remedies, by Nov. 24.
That is 19 days ahead of its original schedule, but five weeks later than the commission's chairman, William Alberger, wanted. He made his request in direct response to urgings by President Carter.

Last week, the commission rejected Alberger's appeal for a 60-day acceleration in the hearings, which would have led to a final report by Oct. 12, well before election day.

President Carter two weeks ago asked the commission to expedite its investigation. His call was part of an auto aid package

Carter unveiled in Detroit, on his way to Japan, a nation whose auto industry is booming.

To speed up the hearings, the commission will consolidate two investigations - on injury and remedies - into one, said ITC spokesman Hal Sundstrom.

At the same time, more staff will be assigned to the probe.

If the commission finds that foreign imports are harming domestic automakers, then a remedy will be proposed by Nov. 17, Sundstrom said.

The commission's recommendation then can be accepted, rejected or modified by the president.

Imports captured 27 percent of the U.S. market during the first half of the year, and domestic automakers claim this trend is deeply hurting them.

U.S. auto sales are down precipitously, with an estimated 700,000 to 800,000 persons throughout the industry out of work.

Earlier this month, 51 Democratic and Republican senators also urged the ITC to streamline its investigation.

The United Auto Workers and a coalition of 11 other AFL-CIO unions, representing industries such as steel, rubber, plastics and glass, have urged Carter to limit imports of autos to 1.7 million vehicles, a level set during the 1975-76 season.

By contrast, imports reached 2.3 million last year and is likely to be the same next year.

In requesting the ITC to move faster, Carter emphasized he is not attempting to "prejudice the UAW complaint," but he cautioned that a six-month investigation would cause severe burdens on an already devastated industry.

OPEC Refuses To Trim Prices

NEW YORK (AP) - Despite a growing oversupply of petroleum on the world market, OPEC members continue to charge as much as $10 a barrel above official prices on nearly one-fifth of their oil, a petroleum trade publication says.

After the Iranian revolution and the supply crisis last year, "the practice of charging premiums ballooned," the Petroleum Intelligence Weekly said Sunday.

The premiums come in the form of surcharges, exploration fees, and commissions to "agents with direct access" to government-owned crude supplies, the newsletter said.

The newsletter said that surcharges "are increasingly coming under siege" as buyers begin to negotiate contract renewals with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Extra charges continue to be levied on 4.4 million of the 25.5 million to 25.6 million 42-gallon barrels of crude produced by OPEC nations each day, according to the publication.

One sign that the market is weakening, the newsletter said, was Iran's announcement last week that it is cutting prices on six grades of oil by as much as $1 a barrel.

Iranian oil has sold for as much as $7 a barrel more than comparable oil from other countries, prompting resistance from European and Japanese consumers.

American companies have been forbidden by presidential order to buy Iranian oil since last fall, when 53 Americans were taken hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Oil demand also has been weakened by a recession in the United States and in reaction against to a more than 130 percent rise in petroleum prices since 1978.

A large percentage of Iranian oil - 600,000 barrels of an estimated 700,000 to 1 million barrels exported daily - are still selling at $1.87 above official prices, the newsletter said.

It said that Saudi Arabia, OPEC's largest member, sells 600,000 barrels a day at a premium price. Other major sellers who also sell at premium prices include Nigeria, Algeria and Kuwait, according to the publication.

Winds Help Contain Big Idaho Range Fire

By The Associated Press
A 1,000-acre range fire that began on Idaho National Engineering Laboratory land was contained after a decline in winds that had blown the blaze away from the nuclear reactor test site, officials said early today.

Meanwhile, in California, fire officials speculated that arson may have been the cause of a brush fire that charred more than 3,720 acres of dry timberland in the northern San Ysidro Mountains.

The fire at the U.S. Department of Energy testing facility in Idaho was believed started by lightning Friday night. Bill Casey, Bureau of Land Management district fire management officer, said that 75 BLM and Department of Energy firefighters contained the fire Sunday after winds dropped from 18 mph to less than 10 mph. The decline allowed firefighters to complete a fire line.

Fire officials had said Saturday that aerial observation showed a fire of 2,000 acres, but the high estimate was due to a lot of smoke and cut in half Sunday, officials said.

Fire officials said the blaze was being blown away from the INEL and was also burning on BLM property. The closest INEL facility was 15 miles to the north.

"They said the fire had not been considered likely to threaten the INEL even if the winds shifted.

The fire smoldered throughout the day Saturday until high winds in late afternoon fanned it into a blaze. Then the winds died down and by late evening the fire was not spreading as rapidly.

The blaze downed six power poles between the Goshen and Antelope substations of Utah Power and Light Co. Casey said the company had crews in the area Sunday attempting to restore power.

In California, the San Ysidro fire burned within nine miles of Chula Vista and was 95 percent contained by late Sunday, said Lona Holden, state Forestry Department spokeswoman.

No structures were damaged or threatened by the blaze, which began Saturday afternoon as two separate fires, officials said.

About 420 firefighters were battling the fire, Ms. Holden said. Three suffered minor injuries.

The first fire broke out about 1:30 p.m. near the Pio Pico Park area and the second erupted 30 minutes later in the Otay Lakes area.

While authorities blamed the blaze on arson, further details on its cause were not available until firefighters could investigate, Ms. Holden said.

Soviets Seize A Gay Activist

MOSCOW (AP) - An Italian gay activist was seized by Soviet plainclothesmen today when he tried to chain himself to a fence in Red Square in a protest timed to coincide with the Olympics, "a festival of the body."

Three Western correspondents were also detained. Television cameramen who witnessed the action at a fence in front of St. Basil's Cathedral in the square said they were roughly prevented by the Soviets from filming the scene.

The Italian, Enso Francone, 32, of Turin, said he planned the action in connection with the Soviet Union's hosting of the Summer Olympics "to show the world repression of the body in this country, because the Olympic Games are a festival of the body."

Francone had earlier said he wanted to unfurl a towel calling for an easing of Soviet laws. Article 121 of the Russian penal code calls for up to five years in prison for sexual relations between two men.

Scores of plainclothesmen were already at the cathedral when Francone arrived. He was bundled roughly into a waiting sedan before he could succeed in handcuffing himself to the chain or opening his banner.

Francone said he held a similar demonstration in March 1979 in Tehran, Iran, five days after 10 homosexuals were executed there. He said he was thrown into prison for five hours and expelled from Iran.

The United Press International bureau chief in Moscow, John Moody, said he was questioned for 25 minutes and had his camera taken away by seven policemen inside a tower of the Kremlin wall.

Also seized were Nicholas Meletich and Andre Birukov of the French news agency, Agence France Presse. Birukov was released almost immediately and Meletich, after an hour.

On November 16, 1977, another Italian activist, Angelo Pezzana, 37, briefly unfurled a banner reading "Freedom for Homosexuals in the U.S.S.R." in the lobby of the National Hotel.

He was surrounded by plainclothes security men and told to continue his demonstration in his hotel room, but was not detained.

NOTICE OF FILING OF AN APPLICATION FOR CONVERSION TO CONVERT TO A STOCK SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

Notice is hereby given that, pursuant to Part 563b of the Rules and Regulations for Insurance of Accounts, First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Pitt County, 324 South Evans Street, Greenville, North Carolina 27834 has filed an application with the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation (the "Corporation") for approval to convert to the Federally-chartered stock form of organization. Copies of the application have been delivered to the Securities Division, Office of General Counsel of said Corporation, 1700 G Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20552, and to the Office of the Supervisory Agent of said Corporation, at the Federal Home Loan Bank of Atlanta, 260 Peachtree Street, N.W., Atlanta, Georgia 30343.
Written comments, including objections to the Plan of Conversion and materials supporting such objections, from any member of the Applicant or aggrieved person, will be considered by the Corporation if filed within twenty (20) business days after the date of this notice. Failure to make such written comments in objection may preclude the pursuit of any administrative or judicial remedies. Three copies of such comments should be sent to the aforementioned Securities Division of the Office of General Counsel with one copy to said Office of the Supervisory Agent. The proposed Plan of Conversion and any comments thereon will be available for inspection by any member of the applicant at said Office of General Counsel and at said Office of the Supervisory Agent. A copy of the Plan may also be inspected at each office of the applicant.

Seek Sponsors For Homosexuals

FORT CHAFFEE, Ark. (AP) - A California church for homosexuals is trying to help find sponsors for 300 homosexual Cuban refugees living at the resettlement center at Fort Chaffee, a church spokesman says.

The Metropolitan Community Church of Los Angeles sent a representative to Fort Chaffee about two weeks ago, according to the spokesman, who asked not to be identified.

Judy Weiss, a spokeswoman for the Federal Emergency Management Agency, said Sunday that there were 6,859 refugees at Fort Chaffee. She said she knew nothing about the church's sponsorship offer.

The Art of Carpeting & Decor

by Larry C. Whitlow

The least expensive and most obvious way to gain apparent extra space is to carefully select the amount of furniture to be used and the way it is to be arranged. Pare down as much as possible, but do not pare down to the extent that all individuality is lost in the process. There are some rules of thumb. Two small sofas look neater than four chairs. Two small seating units pushed together take up less space than two individual chairs spaced apart. Storage using one wall is usually more effective than separate desks, liquor cabinets, shelves and tables for television and stereo units.

Your room will look larger with wall to wall carpeting. Stop by and see the fine selection we have at LARRY'S CARPETLAND INC., 3010 E. 10th St., 758-2300. Great Britain Urges End To Commercial Whaling

By LEONARD KIRSCHEN
Associated Press Writer
BRIGHTON, England (AP) — Britain today called for an end to commercial whaling in a bid to save whales from extinction.

But while urging the ban, the British government stated that it recognized the need of Alaskan Eskimos to continue hunting the bowhead whale for their subsistence although this species is considered among the most endangered in the world.

The appeal came at the inaugural session of the 24-nation International Whaling Commission which is meeting in this English south coast resort for its 32nd annual session to set whaling quotas for the coming year. Britain, where the IWC's Cambridge headquarters is located, is the host country.

"Last year the United Kingdom Government decided to support a ban on all commercial whaling. We stand firm on this policy," Jerry Wiggin, junior minister at the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries, said in his speech of welcome.

"This would allow a thorough reassessment of whale numbers and their biology, where considerable uncertainty remains, and to enable humane killing methods to be developed."

He said a ban for proper conservation of the whale stock was necessary and Britain would support it.

"It is wrong that man should inflict unnecessary pain and cruelty to animals with which he shares the earth. We consider the cold grenade-harpoon to be a particularly inhumane method and we will, therefore, support a ban on its use in all commercial applications."

Wiggin said of the Alaskan Eskimos: "You will also be considering subsistence whaling operations. The most difficult and controversial is the Alaskan bowhead hunt. The United Kingdom Government recognizes that special considerations apply to subsistence whaling by Eskimos and similar peoples to meet their nutritional and cultural requirements." "While we believe that such activities should be allowed to 06:37 continue under very strict control, it must be recognized that some of the species subject to exploitation in this way are amongst the most endangered of all whales.

"We therefore believe that every effort should be made to find alternative means of satisfying the subsistence requirements of such peoples, so as to reduce their reliance upon endangered whales."

"If this is not done as a matter of urgency, there is the serious risk that the Commission will be held responsible for the first extinction of a whale species in modern times."

He told the conference that, on Britain's initiative, the European Economic Community had agreed in principle that a ban on the import of whale products, and not only of sperm whales, should be introduced by Jan. 1, 1982.

"And clearly such a ban introduced by a group of nations working together is more effective than a ban by one nation alone," the minister concluded.

But Japan and the Soviet Union, the world's largest whale catching nations, are determined to resist conservationist pressures for a total ban on commercial whaling.

The All-Japan Seamen's Union said in a statement: "Japanese people and whalers have the right to maintain their culture and traditions. Dietary habits are aspects of specific cultures and traditions and these naturally differ by country.

"Trying to enforce value judgments on others unilaterally is tantamount to imperialism or, at worst, fascism."

The Japanese, like some Alaskan Eskimos, argue that they have eaten whale meat for thousands of years. They also argue that poor Japanese living in coastal areas cannot afford beef, and their only cheap source of meat protein is whalemeat.

Countering conservationists' assertions that indiscriminate whaling is threatening various species with extinction, the seamen's union said: "As a result of scientific research conducted by the International Whaling Commission, the increase or restoration of whale resources has been confirmed and there is no fear of extinction given the present scale of whaling activities."

"Japanese whalers fully understand that for the continuation of whaling in the future, conservation and management of whale stocks are most important aspects and a matter for concern."

The Soviet Union also wants to continue whaling for the cheap protein and for whale oil, which the Russians contend is the best available lubricant for scientific and precision instruments.

Supporting the ban in the 24-nation commission last year were Australia, Argentina, Britain, France, Mexico, the Netherlands, New Zealand, the Seychelles, Oman, Sweden, Switzerland and the United States.

Other whaling nations which joined Japan and the Soviet Union in opposing the ban were Chile, Iceland, Peru and South Korea.

Canada, Brazil, Denmark, South Africa, Spain and Norway abstained from voting last year.

The commission was set up under the International Convention for the Regulation of Whaling signed in Washington in 1946. Its purpose is to control and conserve whale stocks to enable the "orderly development of the whaling industry."

In 1972, 53 nations attending the United Nations Conference on the Human Environment in Stockholm voted in favor of a 10-year ban on commercial whaling. But the whaling commission has not been able to order the ban because it must be approved by three-fourths of the votes cast by its members in a plenary session.

Federal Officials Reluctant To End Coast Guard Blockade

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Federal officials who have spent more than $20 million to keep Cuban refugees from pouring into Key West say there's too much chance of a renewed "Freedom Flotilla" if extra Coast Guard cutters are removed from the Florida Straits.

The blockade of the waters between Cuba and the United States, which began in May under orders from President Carter, has slowed the flow of Cuban refugees to a trickle, at a cost of $285,000 a day. Nearly 117,000 Cuban refugees have come to the United States since the Cuban port of Mariel was opened April 20. Officials feel certain Cuban President Fidel Castro would keep filling boats if Cuban-Americans were given a chance to pick up refugees.

"Right now we have about 18 cutters in the area. I'm sure that if we had fewer cutters down there, we would have a renewed boatlift," said Coast Guard Lt. Norris Turner.

Four cutters are normally on duty in the Straits. The extra manpower has cost taxpayers $22.5 million so far, officials say. Myles Frechette, head of the State Department's Cuba desk, would not say when the force would be reduced.

"We are not going to permit another unauthorized exodus from Mariel," Frechette said. "I have no doubt that if we ceased our law enforcement, we would have another one."

U.S. officials would like some indication of cooperation from Castro. But Napoleon Villaboa, Cuban-American captain of the first Flotilla boat, said he was told last week by a Cuban government official that Mariel harbor would remain open.

"He said there are another 150,000 Cubans who want to leave the country," Villaboa said.

Besides providing a means of banishing political dissidents and social outcasts, the Flotilla has given Castro a political tool. He has renewed demands for an end to the long-standing U.S. economic blockade and removal of the U.S. Naval base at Guantanamo Bay.

Meanwhile, the Justice Department announced Friday it has begun prosecuting Cubans who arrive here in stolen boats. Three alleged "boatjacks" face a court hearing Aug. 4.

Frechette said the prosecutions don't represent a new policy or an attempt to placate Castro, though no previous boatjacks have been prosecuted here. "I find it outrageous that the United States is cooperating with Fidel Castro in discouraging these young men from escaping communism," said attorney Ellis Rubin, representing the alleged boatjacks.

The Carter administration tolerated the boatlift for its first three weeks. But officials became alarmed by reports that boats at Mariel were being loaded with Castro-selected refugees, including suspected criminals. On May 14, President Carter ordered seizure of all returning vessels and a blockade of Cuba-bound boats.

However, a steady trickle of small boats has kept the flotilla alive since. Some 30,000 refugees remain in federal holding camps.

The Cuban government has said it will not take any refugees back and U.S. officials have been trying with little success to find other countries that will accept some.

The overall cost of the influx isn't known. But the Immigration and Naturalization Service has told Congress it needs $14 million for extra personnel and overtime to catch up on paperwork backlogs.

Earned Certificates At Rescue School

DURHAM — About 600 persons attended the 19th annual North Carolina Rescue College, held at the Durham Public Safety Training Academy, July 12-13 and July 19-20.

Founded in Greenville in 1962 by the North Carolina Department of Insurance and the Greenville Rescue Squad, the school moved to Raleigh after four years. For the past three years, the annual training school has been held at the Public Safety Training Academy.

Rescue College graduates receive certificates after attending classes for four years covering basic rescue skills ranging from patient handling, proper use of fire extinguishers and use of hand tools for extrication, to rigging tripoDs, "A" frames and gin poles and rescue from heights by army litters, Stokes stretchers and telpher lines.

Among those receiving graduation certificates Sunday were Brent Stocks, Irvin Hardee, Frank Coburn and Larry Zicherman of Greenville.

Twelve members of the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department attended the first year Rescue College program July 12 and 13.

Dawson Nethercutt, a former member of the Greenville Rescue Squad, now director of fire and rescue training for the Department of Insurance, is director of the Rescue College. Among staff instructors for the school were: Wilburn Small, Harold Ross, and Stuart Savage of Greenville, and Joe Burris of Newton, all former members of the Greenville rescue squad.

A Birthday Parade For Rose Kennedy

HYANNIS, Mass. (AP) — Rose Kennedy was surrounded by a platoon of grandchildren and was accompanied by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, her only surviving son, as she rode at the head of a "Rose Parade" to celebrate her 90th birthday.

Mrs. Kennedy, whose birthday is Tuesday, made no public remarks during a 10-minute ceremony before the Sunday parade.

But her son quoted his brother, the late President John F. Kennedy, in praising his mother. He said she was "the glue that kept our family together."

People came out of their houses along the parade route to watch Mrs. Kennedy's car slowly drive by. They applauded and shouted, "Happy Birthday, Rose."

After a 1 1/2-mile parade, other members of the Kennedy family, including the senator, fanned across the state for other "Rose Parades" in Boston, Springfield, Worcester, Lowell and Taunton. The parades are fund-raisers for a Special Olympics program for retarded children, a cause long championed by the Kennedy family.

Kennedy, who is running for president, attended parades in Hyannis, Worcester and Boston, where he marched to a Waterfront Park celebration three blocks from where his mother was born in 1890.

Area Students Attend Session

CULLOWHEE — Two area students were among 350 elementary, junior and senior high school students who attended "The Cullowhee Experience," a summer program for intellectually gifted students held at Western Carolina University.

Tamar Faiga Rosenfeld of 230 Windsor Road, Greenville, and Christina Joy Lilley of Williamston both attended the four-week program. Rosenfeld participated in ninth-grade studies and Lilley participated in fifth-grade studies.

The program participants are selected on the basis of having individual IQ scores of 130 or better and achievement records indicating a two-grade placement level above the class they are in. Admission was also based upon recommendations from school principals and guidance counselors.

Senior Citizens Talk Trip Plans

The Town and Country Senior Citizens Club held a luncheon meeting Thursday.

Plans are being made for trips to Kenansville to see the drama, "The Liberty Cart," and to Halifax to see "First for Freedom."

Members and friends interested in going are requested to contact Mrs. Sarah Ashton, 752-2912, immediately.

Reports were given on trips to Bath to see "Blackbeard" and to Pembroke to see "Strike at the Wind."

The Luncheon Committee was appointed.

TO MEET TONIGHT

Ladies Delight Chapter Ten, Order of Eastern Star, will meet tonight at 8 p.m. Final plans will be made for the Busch Gardens trip. All members are asked to be present, according to Jacqueline Jackson, worthy matron, and Ruth Hemby, secretary.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rally stalled today, with prices dropping despite the decision by a major New York bank to reduce its prime lending rate another notch.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which was at a three-year high, fell 4.01 to 919.97 during the first two hours of trading. Declines outnumbered advances by a 4-3 margin in New York Stock Exchange trading.

Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., the nation's fifth-largest bank, cut its prime lending rate to 11 percent from 11.5 percent, undercutting the 11.25 percent rate charged by many banks. Some analysts think the prime rate will fall to 10 percent or below in the near future.

J.P. Morgan, the bank's parent firm, fell 3/4 to 46 1/4 as the volume leader on the NYSE. Citicorp, another major bank, declined 1/4 to 22 1/2.

With oil earnings reports scheduled to come out this week, petroleum stocks were mixed. Exxon was up 1/4 to 70 1/2 but Mobil dropped 1/2 to 76.

Big Board volume totaled 19.00 million shares in the first two hours of trading, compared with 28.43 million shares at the same point Friday. The NYSE's composite index fell 32 to 69.52.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 1.84 at 308.57.

Seek Build New Image

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State social service officials are preparing a $600 slide show designed to dispel such notions as the one that says welfare recipients drive Cadillacs.

The Department of Human Resources presentation will include a taped narration and companion brochures explaining assistance programs. The show will be available to local agencies at cost.

As for the Cadillac, "If you can feed and clothe yourself and your children and send them to school on $210 a month and make the payments on a Cadillac, I don't know how," said James B. Burns, a social services specialist in the department's public affairs office.

"The truth of the matter is that most mothers in the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program don't have drivers' licenses, much less a car," he said.

When people refer to welfare, they usually mean the AFDC program, he said. Under the AFDC, the maximum payment in North Carolina for a mother with three children is $210 per month.

Burns said eight states have lower AFDC rates than North Carolina.

He said that in early 1980, the poverty level income nationally was $7,450 in urban areas and $6,340 on farms. The average welfare recipient in North Carolina is expected to receive $4,548 this year.

Turns Over Government

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Gen. Policarpo Paz Garcia handed control of the government to the new 71-member Constituent Assembly in what is viewed as a major move toward ending nearly a decade of military rule in this Central American nation.

The moderately conservative body is expected to name Paz Garcia, head of a three-man military junta that has ruled Honduras since August 1978, as provisional president until it has approved a new constitution and election laws. Paz Garcia will be directly responsible to the assembly.

After the constitution is written, the assembly will call elections for a president, Congress, mayors and city councils. It will also name a 13-man executive Cabinet, Supreme Court justices, provincial officials and heads of government agencies.

Man Drowned In Tar River

A man was reported drowned in the Tar River north of Penny Hill yesterday afternoon.

The Pitt County Medical Examiner's office identified the drowning victim as Willie Gene Lyons Jr., 23. The Pinetops Rescue Squad was assisted by the Bethel Rescue Squad in searching for the body, which was found about 10:30 p.m.

The Medical Examiner's office said an autopsy had not been completed at 11 a.m.

Air expelled in a sneeze travels at about 100 mph.

Toyota Hopes For Ford Pact

By JIM ABRAMS
 Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's Toyota Motor Co. still hopes to reach agreement with the Ford Motor Co. on joint production of automobiles in the United States despite reports the U.S. automaker is against the proposal, a Toyota spokesman said today.

Eiji Toyoda, president of Japan's largest auto producer, has set the end of this year as a target date for reaching basic agreement with Ford, the spokesman said.

Responding to reports from Detroit that Ford would reject the proposal, the spokesman said, "We don't know Ford's intentions, but as far as we know there is no change in our agreement to give positive consideration to putting out a car together."

Ford sources reportedly said last week that joint production of a small car would not benefit the company because "Toyota hasn't got a thing technologically that we haven't got."

Toyoda, who returned from a trip to the United States on Sunday, told reporters his company made the offer to help the American auto industry overcome its downturn in sales and rising unemployment.

The proposal, made to Ford president Ronald Peterson during talks in Japan last month, called for manufacture of 20,000 front-engine, front-drive cars a month in a 50-50 capital investment enterprise.

Toyoda, who did not meet with Ford officials during his U.S. trip, also said the proposal called for cars produced jointly to be sold through both Toyota and Ford dealers in the United States.

At least 75 percent of the parts for the cars would be bought in the United States, he said.

Toyota and Japan's No. 2 producer, the Nissan Motor Co., maker of Datsuns, have been under strong pressure to set up assembly lines in the United States to offset the impact Japanese auto imports have had on America's auto industry. Japan's fuel-efficient, small-model vehicles now command about 22 percent of the American auto market.

Described A Killing

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A 24-year-old woman walked into the Cabarrus County Sheriff's Department and told authorities she had buried the body of her common-law husband in a cornfield in the southern part of the county.

Pam Hagerty faces a preliminary hearing in Cabarrus District Court today on a charge of murder, according to Sheriff's Detective Sgt. Tom Bryant.

Late Saturday, authorities recovered the body of Steve Johnson, 34, from a shallow grave about 200 yards from the house where he and Ms. Hagerty lived with their two children.

Bryant said Ms. Hagerty, who had been living with Johnson about four years, drove to the sheriff's department about 8:30 p.m. Saturday and confessed to the shooting a week before. She said she used a .38-caliber pistol.

Bryant said Ms. Hagerty told authorities her conscience compelled her to tell relatives about the killing. The relatives persuaded her to tell authorities.

Ms. Hagerty and Johnson lived with their two boys, aged 2 and 3, in a 150-year-old farmhouse less than a mile off Lower Rocky River Road in southern Cabarrus County.

Arrest Two On Trespass Counts

Greenville Police arrested two persons on trespassing charges early today after they allegedly entered the Tar River Estates swimming pool to take a pre-dawn dip.

The two were identified as Pamela Boyd Ross, 25 of Route 2, Washington, and John Hubbard Stallings, 21 of 120 Woodlawn Ave.

In addition to the trespassing charge, Ms. Ross was charged with resisting arrest in connection with the 3 a.m. incident.

The Moscow Olympics

Comaneci Fights Off Challenger Tonight

MOSCOW (AP) — It isn't easy to keep sports and politics separate, which is what may be the Moscow Olympics' badge in history.

Everytime one's mind is allowed to reflect on pure sport, something from the non-sports arena interrupts the image.

Today, Nadia Comaneci, no longer a pig-tailed pixie but still perhaps the best female gymnast in the world, was beginning her battle with Nelli Kim of the Soviet Union, recalling her heroics from the Montreal Olympics four years ago.

Comaneci, the 18-year-old Romanian who won the all-around title and two apparatus gold medals in 1976, against Kim, a triple gold medalist from the same competition. Pure sport.

But also on the scene was Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization. According to sources in Beirut, Arafat was here at the invitation of the Kremlin. On Sunday, Arafat toured the Olympic Village. It was only eight years ago at the Games in Munich that another Olympic Village was ravaged by Arab terrorists, who killed 11 Israeli athletes.

Although the PLO is not on record with any position on the Munich Massacre, it was the now-disbanded Black September group, terror arm of Arafat's own Al Fatah guerrilla organization, that staged the raid.

Sports and politics mixed in other areas, too. A Soviet swimmer became the first man from his country to win a gold medal in Olympic swimming competition, but his victory was somewhat devalued because of the absence of the American world recordholder in the event.

Sergei Fesenko took the gold medal in the 200-meter butterfly, the first swimming event of the Games, with a time of 1 minute 59.76 seconds. Phil Hubble of Great Britain was second and Roger Pyttel of East Germany took the bronze.

The victory should have been the crowning achievement of his career. Fesenko was all set to retire at the top, but his plans have been changed because Mike Bruner wasn't here, the result of the U.S.-led boycott in protest of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

"I was going to retire after the Olympics," said Fesenko. "But because of (President) Carter's boycott I would like to swim on for some years so I can swim against Bruner and the other top Americans."

The Soviets and East Germans, as expected, led the medal tables after one day of competition. The host nation won four gold and one bronze, while the East Germans took a gold, two silver and a bronze.

Four world records were set and one was tied Sunday.

The East German women's 400-meter medley relay team, consisting of Rica Reinisch on backstroke, Andrea Pollack on butterfly, Caren Metschuk on freestyle and Ute Geweniger on breaststroke, sliced more than a second off its record with a 4:06.67. Reinisch equalled the world mark of 1:01.51 for the 100-meter backstroke on the opening leg. And Barbara Krause of East Germany smashed her own mark in the 100 freestyle, clocking a 54.98 in the preliminaries.

Aleksandr Melentev of the Soviet Union set a world record by hitting 581 of 600 targets in the free pistol event. And North Korean weightlifter Han Gyong Si set a world mark in the snatch division of the 52 kilo class by hoisting 113 kilos, but he finished third in the overall event, which includes the snatch and the jerk, to gold medalist Kanibek Osmonaliev of the Soviet Union and Ho Bong Chol of North Korea.

As Fesenko indicated, despite the domination by the Soviets and East Germans, it was hard to ignore the fact that the Americans and 35 other boycotting nations, including the powerful Japanese, West Germans and Canadians, weren't there.

The Moscow Olympic Organizing Committee announced Sunday that 5,923 athletes and 2,402 team officials from 81 countries had arrived by the opening day of competition. The number of athletes is about half the pre-boycott expectation by the organizers. There were 6,132 athletes participating at Montreal in 1976 when 27 African nations walked out because of New Zealand's sporting contacts with apartheid South Africa.

The Soviets don't acknowledge the Games have been tainted by the boycott. And Arafat said on Soviet TV Sunday: "The colorful opening ceremony of the Olympics and the many sports delegations filling the tribunals prove that no blackmail, no boycott succeeded in disrupting the Moscow Games."

New Bern Still Is Undefeated

New Bern remains the only undefeated team as the Senior Babe Ruth State Baseball Championships heads into its final two days of action tonight.

Helped along by seven Central Carolina South errors last night, New Bern handed Central Carolina its first loss of the tourney in registering an 8-3 win for its third straight win.

In other action last night, three-hitters were the toast of the night as Coastal Plains North kept its hopes alive by killing off Albemarle, 9-0, behind the three-hit pitching of Steve Wilhelm, and Central Carolina North eliminated Kinston Lenior Duplin, 6-3, on a three-hitter by the combined efforts of Johnny Johnson and Ricky Kirkland.

New Bern pushed across two runs in the third and added six runs in the fourth to keep its record unblemished. Central Carolina South scored all three of its runs in the fourth.

Coastal Carolina North's Wilhelm surrendered two hits in the second and gave up the third in the fifth as he shut out Albemarle. He was backed by his team, who pounded out 10 hits and scored 10 runs, six of them coming in the sixth inning.

CCN took the initial lead with a run in the second and added two more in the third before icing the game in the bottom of the sixth.

Central Carolina's Johnson worked the first six innings and Kirkland came on in the seventh to preserve the win for his team. The winners tallied two runs in the top of the third and added three more in the fourth before scoring the final run in the sixth.

Kinston Lenior Duplin, who registered two hits in the third and added the third in the fifth, scored single runs in the third, fifth and sixth frames.

The state Senior Babe Ruth champion will be crowned Tuesday night in the tournament's final game.

Local Netters Lose To Tarboro

Greenville suffered its second consecutive loss of the ECTA season Sunday afternoon, falling to league-leading Tarboro, 6-0, in Greenville.

Greenville, undefeated until last week's 7-0 defeat at Washington, falls to 3-2 on the season while Tarboro remains on top with a perfect, 5-0 slate.

Summary:

Norman Bryant d. Kirk Milne 6-3, 6-1
Jim Rogers d. Ed Rhem 7-6, 7-6
Bill Goodwyn d. Woody Dixon 6-1, 6-1
Richard Anderson d. Graham Dempsey by default
Jeff Fecho d. Bob Turnage 6-0, 6-4

Allen Wins In Sky Lite Open

Jimmy Allen fired a six-under par 30 for a 125 total to pass Johnny Carrow in the fourth round to win the Sky Lite Open by one stroke last night at the Greenville Putt Golf Course.

Allen, whose victory was his second in a row, fired rounds of 32, 31, 32 and 30 to win. His 125 total was 19 strokes under par.

Carrow, who had the lead after each of the first three rounds, came in with a 33 to finish second at 126.

Third place went to Carl White with a 128. Mike Brown and Joe Kelly tied at 130 with Kelly winning fourth place on the sixth hole of a sudden death playoff.

Bonnell Wins Both In Reunion

By The Associated Press
It has been five years and hundreds of games since Mark Clear and Barry Bonnell broke into the Philadelphia Phillies' organization. Their most recent reunion came this weekend, with Clear pitching for the California Angels and Bonnell batting for the Toronto Blue Jays.

Bonnell won both battles, slashing a ninth-inning single to clinch Saturday night's 5-4 Toronto triumph and adding a bases-loaded, 10th-inning single Sunday to spark the Blue Jays' 6-3 victory.

"He's a good pitcher. I was really surprised when Philadelphia released him (later in 1975)," said Bonnell. "I just got lucky against him a couple of times."

They were opportune times for the Blue Jays and bad ones for Clear, who had not allowed a run in his last 15 innings over nine appearances before Sunday's 10th inning. Al Woods and John Mayberry singled and Otto Velez walked to load the bases for Bonnell. The batter had hit a curve ball for the winner in Saturday night's contest, so he knew what to expect on Sunday.

"His curve ball hasn't been working for him like it usually does," said Bonnell, who watched for the 3-2 fast ball and ripped it past shortstop Bert Campaneris. "I was looking for hard stuff. You have to against someone who can throw as hard as he does."

In the other American League games Sunday, the Texas Rangers blasted the Baltimore Orioles 7-1, the Oakland A's scotched the Cleveland Indians 6-5 in 14 innings, the Minnesota Twins trimmed the Boston Red Sox 5-4, the Kansas City Royals routed the New York Yankees 14-3, the Milwaukee Brewers edged the Chicago White Sox 7-6 and the Detroit Tigers beat the Seattle Mariners 5-2.

The Blue Jays tied it 3-3 in the ninth when Roy Howell singled, reached third Rick Miller let the ball roll to the wall, and scored on Damaso Garcia's single.

The Angels took a 3-2 lead in the fifth on Dickie Thon's RBI single. A run-scoring single by Velez and a homer by Woods produced the other Toronto runs. Joe Rudi's homer and Don Baylor's RBI double provided the first two California runs.

Rangers 7, Orioles 1
Jim Sundberg continued his torrid hitting against Baltimore pitching with a three-run homer, and the Rangers continued their mastery of the Orioles' Jim Palmer as Texas romped to victory.

Sundberg's homer was his seventh of the season and five of them have come against Baltimore. He has nine RBI in the nine games between the teams and a .443 average against them this year.

Lifetime, Sundberg — with a .254 career average — is hitting .306 against the Orioles. While Sundberg has feasted on Baltimore, Palmer has endured a three-year victory famine against the Rangers.

One Oriole who has done far better against Texas this season is Dan Graham, who is 12-for-20 with six RBI in five games. He had two doubles in the contest, but Baltimore managed only six other hits off the Rangers' Ferguson Jenkins.

A's 6, Indians 5
Dave McKay hit a game-winning single in the 14th inning and Rick Langford survived a five-run ninth inning to pitch his 12th consecutive complete game in Oakland's victory over Cleveland.

McKay, batting .186 entering the game and 0-for-4 until his 14th-inning at-bat, laced a Victor Cruz pitch into center to score Mitchell Page and win the contest.

Langford carried a one-hitter and a 5-0 lead into the ninth because of Oakland home runs by Rickey Henderson, Jim Essian and Jeff Newman. But he gave up an RBI single to Mike Hargrove and a grand slam to Toby Harrah to force the extra innings.

The complete game was Langford's 15th this season, tying him with teammate Matt Keough for the AL lead.

Twins 5, Red Sox 4
John Castino had a single, a double, and the game-winning homer in the seventh inning, lifting Minnesota over Boston.

Castino had five hits in 10 at-bats in the three-game series and is 11-for-21, a .521

Deacon Golfers Led The Field

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Maybe there's something at Wake Forest University that produces outstanding golfers the way Notre Dame turns out football players.

Former Deacons finished first, second and third Sunday in the $200,000 Quad Cities Open golf tournament, with PGA tour rookie Scott Hoch claiming his first victory on the sun-splashed 6,514-yard, par-70 Oakwood County Club course.

Hoch's four-day total was 266, a blistering 14 strokes under par and good enough to finish three strokes ahead of former Wake Forest teammate Curtis Strange, who is currently No. 6 on the Professional Golfers' Association money-winning list.

"I didn't make a bogey in the last three days, so I'm satisfied with my play," said Strange, who collected four birdies in his final round of 66. "I only missed one green today. It was an easy round."

Referring to the Wake Forest connection, which in the past has produced such golfing luminaries as Arnold Palmer and Lanny Wadkins, Strange grinned and said: "I wish I could have beat hell out of them."

Gary Hallberg of Barrington, who turned professional only two weeks ago, was the third member of the class reunion with a 72-hole total of 10-under-par 270. He tied for third with Pat McGowan, an interloper from Brigham Young University.

"What can I say? It's a great golf program we come from at Wake Forest," Hoch, 24, who is from Raleigh, N.C.

"I helped Gary along when he got there and can't emphasize enough how glad and proud I am of Gary getting his $8,000."

Hallberg's paycheck was actually $11,600, which exceeds the $8,000 threshold which under PGA rules exempts a player from going to qualifying schools.

By winning, Hoch collected $36,000, a trip to the Masters in Augusta, Ga., and a qualifying exemption for PGA events for the rest of the year. That's not bad for a rookie whose only other finishes on the tour this year were a tie for 19th in the Western Open, and a tie for 23rd in the Atlanta Classic.

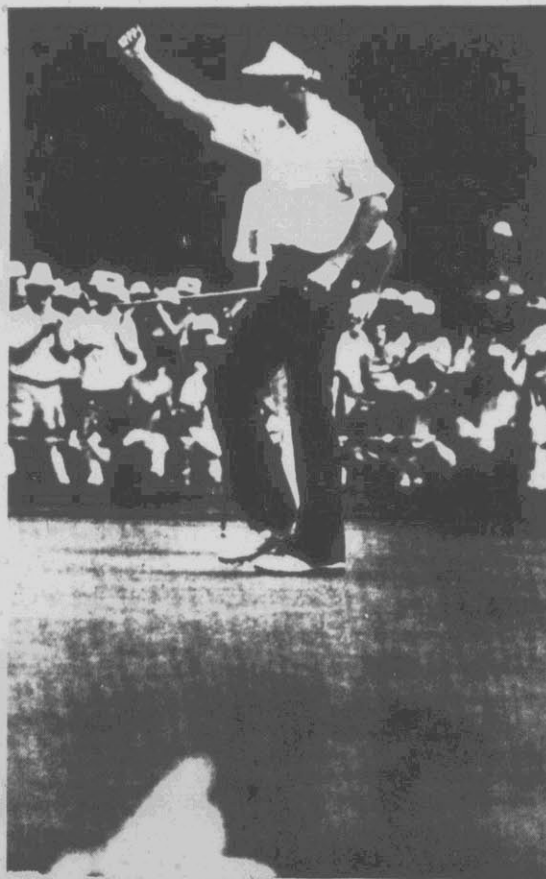

Statistically, Hoch played a sensational four days of golf. He tied the lowest 18-hole round on the PGA tour at 63, equalled the low 36-hole total at 129, and tied the low 72-hole tour performance at 266.

But Hoch's game was not a model of consistency. He fought wayward drives and erratic play all week, missing 27 of 56 fairways only to recover by guiding 56 of 72 shots to the greens in regulation.

"I knew I had it when I hit the green at 18 (on Sunday). I knew I could three-putt and still win," he said.

Hoch, who began the day at 13-under, labored through an inconsistent round of four bogeys and five birdies, capped by a 12-foot birdie putt on the final hole.

Finishing fifth at 9-under-par 271 was Howard Twitty of Phoenix, Ariz. Mike Sullivan, a five-year pro from Ocala, Fla., finished sixth at 272, 8-under-par.

The Mighty Effort

I GOT IT! - Pirates' Phil Garner holds up the ball after running down Los Angeles' Derrel Thomas between first and second bases Sunday in the first game of a doubleheader in Pittsburgh. Thomas was attempting to advance to second on a grounder by Steve Yeager to shortstop Tim Foli, but settled for breaking up the double play on Yeager at first. The Dodgers won the first game 4-2. (AP Laserphoto)

Roof Caved In On No-Hit Effort By Nolan Ryan

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Nolan Ryan flirted with a no-hitter Sunday night. So what else is new?

Ryan, who shares with Hall of Famer Sandy Koufax the record of four career no-hitters, silenced Montreal's bats for 61-3 innings, and had a Houston Astrodome crowd of 28,513 cheering with every pitch.

Then the roof caved in — figuratively, of course. With one out in the seventh, Andre Dawson singled cleanly to right. The no-hitter was gone. And before the eighth inning ended, so was Ryan. A walk to Chris Speier, Tommy Hutton's double and Ron LeFlore's single drove in two runs and drove Ryan to the showers, long before the Astros won 4-3.

"I've been farther than the seventh before and still lost it so that's kind of old hat," he said. "I don't start getting too excited until the ninth... I can't tell you how many no-hitters I've lost late in the game — I try not to remember those things — but I've lost a few."

Elsewhere in the National League Sunday night, Chicago blanked San Diego 6-0. Cincinnati edged New York 4-3. St. Louis shaded San Francisco 2-1. Atlanta trimmed Philadelphia 3-2 and, in a doubleheader, Los Angeles beat Pittsburgh 4-2, then lost 8-7.

"Tonight I didn't feel like I had no-hit stuff," said Ryan, who struck out 11 batters before running out of gas. "I can live with the fact that I don't have a very good record (5-7 with a 3.14 earned-run average) as long as we keep winning. We're not out there for personal records or goals."

Hutton was very distressed at the way Montreal lost. "When you lose to Ryan and he has good stuff, it's easier to accept than when you just give to game away," which is just how the Expos did it.

After Ellis Valentine tied it in the top of the ninth with a home run off Joe Sambito, Fred Norman walked Jose Cruz, then first baseman Warren Cromartie threw Dave Bergman's bunt past first base and Cruz raced all the way home.

Cubs 6, Padres 0
Cliff Johnson says he's not happy where he is these days. The Chicago Cubs couldn't be happier that he's with them.

Not that Johnson, a June 23 arrival from Cleveland, is unhappy in the Windy City, mind you. It's just that the Cubs' first baseman feels he's not quite up to snuff in the batting department, this despite game-winning hits last weekend against San Diego.

On Saturday he bashed a two-run double in the ninth inning for an 8-7 victory. On Sunday he unloaded a three-run homer, his fourth homer since coming over to the NL from the Indians. The blast capped a four-run first inning that backed the six-hit pitching of Lynn McGlothen.

"I'm still trying to figure things out," said Johnson. "I don't know if it's a change in the leagues, or that I'm playing defense for the first time in three years. But I'm not where I want to be."

The Padres, no doubt, would prefer to see him back in the American League.

Reds 4, Mets 3
Cincinnati's Ken Griffey was thinking long ball when he stepped into the batter's box with two outs and the score tied in the bottom of the ninth. He turned his thought to action, crashing his eighth homer of the year, a shot off Mets' pitcher Jeff Reardon into the second deck in right field.

"With two out, the only thing I was thinking about was a home run," said Griffey. "That was the second time I've done that." On May 17 he also went for broke against New York and wound up with a three-run homer.

Before his game-winning clout, Griffey had a two-run triple in the Reds' three-run third inning. The Mets' runs came on Steve Henderson's solo homer in the second inning and Lee Mazzilli's two-run shot in the eighth, his 13th homer of the year and 11th in his last 19 games.

Cardinals 2, Giants 1
Bob Knepper had St. Louis baffled through seven innings with a five-hit shutout, then the roof quickly caved in as Bobby Bonds doubled and Garry Templeton tripled to tie the score.

Braves 3, Phillies 2
Bob Walk of the Phils lost for a change. The rookie with the six wins absorbed his first defeat thanks to Bob Horner's fifth-inning sacrifice fly that drove in Atlanta's winning run.

It saddled the Phillies with their third loss to the Braves in two days and their sixth loss in nine games.

"I certainly don't see any major slump," said Phillies Manager Dallas Green. "A doubleheader win will change the momentum every time, for the team that wins it and the team that loses it. We've come back after losses before. We'll come back after this one."

Dodgers 4-7, Pirates 2-8
The Willie Stargell Day crowd of 41,932 fans was three outs away from a triple disappointment. Their hero was on the disabled list and unable to play and Pittsburgh was on the verge of a doubleheader loss.

Then Los Angeles pitcher Steve Howe came through for the Pirates. Howe, who got a save in the Dodgers' first-game victory, walked John Milner with the bases loaded to force in the tying run in the bottom of the ninth, then served up a pitch which Ed Ott laced into left field for a game-winning single.

Moscow Olympics...

were indeed spectacular Saturday, but again it wasn't all pageantry. Sixteen countries marched behind the banner of the International Olympic Committee, their gesture of protest against the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

And a U.S. flag in the stands at the opening ceremony, brought cheers and deep-rooted patriotic feelings from several American tourists here.

"We all applauded like crazy. We felt the American flag was finally represented," said Frank Zawila, from Oak Brook, Ill. "I wished I could have jumped in there and waved the flag myself."

There was a mini-opening ceremony Sunday for the Olympic yachting competition at Tallinn, Estonia, and six western nations staged a mini-protest. The Danish and Spanish teams marched during the ceremony, but flew the IOC flag. Yachtsmen from Switzerland, Holland, Ireland and Italy refused to participate at all.

The boxing competition began Sunday, with Viktor Demianenko of the Soviet Union and East Germans Rudi Fink and Richard Nowakowski scoring the most impressive victories.

Besides cheering for their own fighters, the Soviet fans warmly received a boxer from Afghanistan, Rabani Ghulam, who lost. Ghulam is part of a 17-member Afghan Olympic delegation that has been reduced in numbers by defections over the past few months.

Ted Turner Eyes August For Stride

By JAMES SIMON
Associated Press Writer

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Defending champion Ted Turner, still struggling in America's Cup trials, says his 12-meter Courageous won't hit its stride until the final trials in August.

"It's mainly a boat-speed contest," said Turner, the 1977 Cup defender, after splitting two second-round trials with Russell Long's Clipper.

"When we sail the long courses in August, we'll be ready. Speed, that's the thing that wins the long races."

Courageous, sporting a mainsail made from a new, exotic fabric, had plenty of speed in the two shortened races Sunday against Clipper.

Its loss was due to a tactical decision that backfired rather than to a lack of speed allowing Long's boat to comeback from a 16-second deficit at the second mark to go ahead by 19 seconds at the third.

"He just didn't tack fast enough," said Long, the 24-year-old newcomer to 12-meter sailing, who wound up winning the race by 10 seconds.

"There was a small wind shift, and he pushed us right into it and didn't cover quickly. He sailed too far to the right and let us get away."

Turner breezed to victory in the first match, hitting the first mark 24 seconds ahead and finishing 30 seconds in the lead. Long had a shot at catching him midway through the third leg but changed to a larger spinnaker, lost a few seconds and Turner led the rest of the way.

Long filed a protest, claiming Turner's boat illegally came within inches of his.

Turner, the Atlanta-based broadcasting and sports millionaire, was scheduled to put his new mainsail on the line against that of the third American candidate, Dennis Conner's Freedom.

Frank White's three-run triple highlighted a six-run Kansas City and carried the Royals to their second lopsided triumph in the three-game series with New York.

"Winning two of three from the Yankees doesn't make any difference," said Manager Jim Frey of the Royals, who won the opener of the series 13-1 before losing the second game 13-7. "These games with the Yankees don't mean anything later."

"Later" might mean the AL playoffs, where the two division leaders appear headed.

The Royals mounted their six-run second against Ron Guidry, 10-6, and added a five-run ninth against Ed Figueroa.

Brewers 7, White Sox 6
Robin Yount drove in four runs, two of them with an eighth-inning double that delivered the winning run, as Milwaukee beat Chicago.

Yount's double snapped a 5-5 tie before the White Sox pulled within 7-6 in the ninth on an RBI groundout by Wayne Nordhagen.

Tigers 5, Mariners 2
Al Cowens capped a four-run Detroit first inning with a two-run single, then added a sacrifice fly in the third to send Detroit past Seattle.

Dan Schatzeder, starting his first game since June 19, helped hand Seattle starter Mike Parrott his 11th consecutive losing decision. Parrott is 1-11.

HOISTS HIGH THE CUP

Eddie Dibbs of Miami, Fla. lifts the U.S. Pro Tennis Championship cup above his head Sunday after his 6-2, 6-1 final win over Gene Mayer at the Longwood Cricket Club, Brookline, Mass. (AP Laserphoto)

A Jackpot Summer Is Shaping Up For Eddie

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — As a kid, he used to hustle his lunch money playing tennis. For Eddie Dibbs, now 29, this could be the summer he hits the jackpot.

Dibbs, whose reputation as an aggressive gambler gave him the nickname "Fast Eddie," looks ready to clean up on the clay court circuit this summer.

The steady fourth-seed won the $175,000 U.S. Pro Tennis Championships Sunday by whipping No. 3-seeded Gene Mayer 6-2, 6-1 in a one-sided match that lasted just 53 minutes.

It was the first time in seven years that an American has won the event. Jimmy Connors, the 1973 champion, was seeded No. 1 this year, but he was beaten in the quarterfinals by Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina.

Dibbs didn't lose a set all week in making short work of Robert Trogolo, Nick Saviano, Hans Gildemeister, Clerc and Mayer.

"I really haven't played that well in the last year and a half," he said. "This is the easiest time I've had in winning a tournament."

Dibbs had his best year in 1978 when he won $500,000 on the tour. In 1979, he earned about half that amount as he slipped to No. 10 in the Association of Tennis Professionals computer rankings.

For less than an hour's work Sunday, he pocketed $24,500. The 24-year-old Mayer earned $12,250.

Dibbs had been nursing a hip injury that kept him out of Wimbledon. Judging by his performance on the slow, green clay at the Longwood Cricket Club here, he is fully recovered.

"I don't know if I'm playing that well or the other guys are playing that bad," he said. "I guess I'm playing well."

With two weeks of practice at his Miami Beach, Fla., home, Dibbs was better prepared than Mayer for the stifling heat and humidity.

"I knew if I lost the second set I'd win the third," he said. "The heat got to him (Mayer) right away. He didn't have any zing or punch in his shots."

Mayer blamed his lackluster performance on a virus, saying he felt dizzy. He also complained of having to play a late doubles match Saturday night after his three-set semifinal victory over defending champion Jose Higuera.

"That's why I don't play doubles," Dibbs said. "It really takes it out of you."

Mayer, who uses an oversized racket and hits a two-fisted forehand and backhand, tried to disrupt Dibbs' patient base-line game with chips, slices and drop shots. Dibbs reached nearly every ball, often answering with his own sharply-angled shots.

"He thought maybe I'd run of gas, but I was fresh and ready to go," Dibbs said. "I won a lot of points off that drop shot today."

Mayer did have some consolation. He and brother Sandy won the doubles title 1-6, 6-4, 6-4 over Gildemeister and Andres Gomez.

In other tennis action, Vitas Gerulaitis won the $75,000 Weissenhof Grand Prix tournament in Stuttgart, Germany, by defeating Wojtek Fibak of Poland 6-2, 7-5, 6-2.

Rain marred play and caused severe delays, including five hours at one point.

South African veteran Frew McMillan and Colin

Dowdeswell of Switzerland won the doubles title against South African John Yuill and Chris Lewis of New Zealand, 6-3, 6-4.

Hungary's Balazs Taroczy turned back Tony Giamalva of Houston, Tex., 6-3, 3-6, 7-6 in the finals of the Swedish Open tennis championships in Baastad, Sweden.

Meanwhile, top-seeded Martina Navratilova defeated second-seed Greer Stevens 6-2, 6-1 in the finals of the Player's Challenge professional tennis tournament in Montreal.

In Toronto, Bill Cowan of Toronto defeated Andy Avram of Winston-Salem, N.C., 6-4, 6-3 in the men's singles finals of the Ontario Open tennis championships.

Kevin Richards Sets Pace At Invitational Meet

GOLDSBORO — Kevin Richards paced the Greenville Swim Club with six first place finishes out of his seven events this past weekend in the 13th Annual Seymour Johnson Invitational held at Seymour Johnson AFB here.

Senior swimmer Richards won the 100-meter butterfly and back stroke and took first place honors in the 200 meter butterfly, back stroke and freestyle in his individual events. He was also a member of the winning relay team in the Boys Senior A 200-meter medley. His only non-first place finish was in the Boys Senior 200-meter freestyle, where his four-man team placed second.

A contingent of 50 swimmers from the Greenville Swim Club participated in the two-day event.

In the Boys Senior 200-meter medley, the team of Richards, Mark Schmidt, Eric Downes and Shaun Wallace finished first in 2:07.08.

In the Boys Senior 200-meter freestyle, the same team placed second in 1:54.05.

In the Boys Senior B 200-meter medley, Greg Churchill, Jim Hamilton, Shaun Wallace and Paul Quinn finished third in 2:46.35.

In the Boys Senior B 200-meter freestyle, the same unit finished second.

In the Girls Senior B 200-meter medley, Jane Melton, Suzanne Wille, Anne Richards and Laura Scharf finished sixth.

In the Girls Senior B 200-meter freestyle, Anne Richards, Carol Moore, Suzanne Wille and Laura Scharf finished fifth.

In the Boys 11 and 12-year-old 200-meter freestyle, Carl Wille, Jimmy Gillihan, Sellers Crisp and Paul Kelly finished first in 2:19.73.

In the Girls 11 and 12-year-old 200-meter freestyle, the team of Lisa Wallace, Melissa Littlefield, Amy Moore and Delores Williams finished first in 2:22.92.

In the eight and under boys individual event, Park Williams took sixth place in the 50-meter butterfly.

In the eight and under girls individual event, Kathryn Barnhill grabbed sixth in the 50-meter butterfly.

In the 10 and under boys category, Brian Wille finished third in the 200-meter individual medley.

In the 11 and 12-year-old boys events, Sellers Crisp finished first in the 100 meter freestyle and took third in the 100-meter back stroke. Carl Wille placed second in the 100-meter breast stroke while Paul Kelly finished fifth.

In the 11 and 12-year-old girls event, Lisa Wallace placed first in the 100-meter breast stroke and garnered second place in both the 100-meter butterfly and the 200-meter individual medley. Delores Williams ended up in first place in the 100-meter freestyle and placed sixth in both the 100-meter breast stroke and the butterfly. LuAnne Wallace finished fourth in the 100-meter breast stroke and Amy Moore placed sixth in the 100-meter freestyle.

In the 13 and 14 boys event, Paul Quinn placed third in the 200-meter individual medley, Kathryn Barnhill grabbed sixth in the 50-meter butterfly.

In the 13 and 14 girls, Laura Scharf garnered second in the 100 breast stroke, second in the 200 medley and third in the 100 back stroke.

In the 15-18 boys, Greg Churchill finished fourth in the 100 back stroke and fifth in the 100 butterfly. Jim Hamilton placed third in the 100 freestyle and fourth in the 100 butterfly.

Gary Churchill placed sixth in both the 100 back stroke and breast stroke.

In the 15-18 girls, Anne Richards placed fifth in the 100 back stroke and Suzanne Wille finished sixth in the 100 breast stroke.

In the 10 and under boys A group, Robert Williams finished third in the 50 breast stroke.

In the 13-14 girls, Maria Kelly placed third in the 200 medley.

In the senior boys, Richards won all five of his events. Mark Schmidt took the 100 freestyle, placed second in the 100 butterfly, 200 freestyle and 200 butterfly and finished fourth in the 200 back stroke. Eric Downes placed fourth in the 400 freestyle, second in the 200 freestyle and fifth in the 100 freestyle. Shaun Wallace placed sixth in the 100 breast stroke.

In the senior girls, Maria Kelly finished fourth in both the 200 back stroke and the 200 butterfly and placed fifth in the 200 breast stroke.

Tom Watson Breaks A Dry Spell In British Open

By JOHN GALE

Associated Press Writer MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP) — Tom Watson broke a "three-year dry spell" in major championships by winning his third British Open, then served notice he was ready for an assault on the two of golfing's big titles he has yet to win.

Watson ended his drought in style, finishing 13 under par with a four-round total of 271 Sunday over the 6,926-yard Muirfield course beside the windswept Firth of Forth.

The 30-year-old Kansas-born star had failed to win a major championship since 1977 when he won both the British Open and Masters. The only other major title of his nine-year career was the British Open of 1975.

"This is a nice oasis after a three-year dry spell, no question of that," Watson said after he held off a sordid challenge by runnerup Lee Trevino and a world class field including Jack Nicklaus. "My ambition now is to win the United States

Open and the PGA."

Although he has been golf's top money-winner for three years and the game's most consistent performer, Watson has yet to win the U.S. Open or Masters. He finished third in the U.S. Open last year when Nicklaus won.

Trevino, who led at Muirfield halfway through the contest, has no doubts where Watson rates. "I'm not disappointed," he said of his own failure to win the title. "You can't be too disappointed when you finish second to the greatest player in the world."

Watson would not be drawn into comparisons with other great names, but he said: "If you go by the record, Jack Nicklaus is the greatest golfer who has ever played the game."

The Golden Bear did not have his finest tournament here despite his 16 victories in major championships and the encouragement of the Scottish crowd. "Go on jack," they bawled as he drove off for his final round.

The famed Nicklaus charge never really developed, and he finished with a 69-280 for a share of fourth with Britain's Carl Mason.

Ben Crenshaw was third with 69-277 after finishing tied for second in the past two British Opens. Trevino had 69-275.

The third round of the championship was pivotal for both Nicklaus and Trevino.

Nicklaus was lagging behind the leaders and needed a superlative score to give himself a chance. "But I didn't get anything going and my putter was not really good this week," he said. His third round 71 — although par for the course — was not good enough to get him into the chase.

Trevino led the field by three strokes going into the third round but couldn't make it stick. He bogeyed the last three holes for a 71 and said later he could have shot 80.

Watson finished the third day 11 under and four strokes to the good against his nearest challenger. He went on to win the championship the way he said he would — by getting out front and staying there.

East Carolina Wins By 10-5

CHAPEL HILL — East Carolina third baseman Todd Hendley cracked out four hits in five trips to the plate Sunday afternoon and drove home four runs as the Pirates breezed by the Tarheels of UNC, 10-5.

Hendley sliced a two-run single in the visitor's four-run sixth and added a two-run triple an inning later as ECU improved its Summer League mark to 18-9.

The Pirates scored first with three runs in the top half of the initial frame. Kelly Robinette reached first and moved to second on Hendley's first hit. John Hallow followed with a fielder's choice, catching Hendley at second and moving Robinette to third. The Pirate shortstop scored when Charlie Smith's grounder was errored, allowing Hallow to advance to second. Mark Wakai singled to drive home Hallow and Jay Carroway followed with another single, bringing home Smith.

The Tarheels answered with three runs of their own in the bottom of the first, greeting Pirate hurler Kirk Parsons with four first-inning base hits. The hosts took the lead an inning later, taking advantage of a pair of hits and an ECU error.

The Pirates tied the game in the top of the fifth when Hendley singled, moved to second on an error and scored on Wakai's base hit after two were gone.

The winners took the lead for good with the four-run uprising in the sixth, highlighted by Hendley's two-out two-run single. Charlie Wells singled, but was caught at second on Jeff Warren's fielder's choice. Robinette then singled, moving Warren to third. After Robinette stole second, Hendley brought both runners home with his hit. Hallow followed with a single and Wakai brought both teammates home with his single.

Coach Gary Overton's visitors scored their final runs of the game in top half of the seventh. Warren singled and stole second and Robinette reached on a fielder's choice before Hendley blasted his two-run triple.

The Tarheels added their final run in the bottom of the inning but were set down in order over the last two frames.

The Pirates are back home tonight against UNC-W and then, if necessary, will have to play Louisburg in a make-up doubleheader Tuesday.

Rutherford Had Convincing Win

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Johnny Rutherford kept waiting for the other shoe to drop as he wheeled his yellow Chaparral to victory in a 200-mile championship car race at Michigan International Speedway.

He won going away, turning laps at between 181 and 189 mph and leaving his closest and fiercest competitor, Bobby Unser, 13.25 seconds behind at the behind.

Despite leading 71 of the 100 laps on the high-banked two-mile oval, the 42-year-old Texan had more to sweat about than the 90-degree temperatures and saturating humidity Sunday.

"The oil temperature gauge went berserk about halfway through the race, and I just wasn't sure what was going to happen," Rutherford said. "Since the oil pressure didn't drop, I thought it was probably a bad gauge."

"But I had to give some thought to what would happen if that thing opened up and dumped oil on the rear tires. It was a little scary."

The car's owner-designer, Jim Hall, and his crew remained unaware of the situation. Rutherford didn't want to worry them.

"I didn't tell them about it.

I figured there wasn't anything they could do about it anyway, so why not just let them concentrate on the things they had to do to keep me near the front," Rutherford said.

Rutherford, who won for the second straight time and the fourth time in six Indy car races this season, proved over and over throughout the 200 miles that his ground-hugging "Yellow Submarine" was the fastest car on the track.

The lead changed hands several times on pit stops, with Unser — the winner of the other two champ car races this season — going on top when Rutherford made his final fuel stop on the 83rd lap.

Unser's teammate, Rick Mears, also moved ahead of Rutherford at that point, but both Roger Penske cars still had to pit for fuel.

They waited as long as they could. Unser finally came in on the 92nd lap and Mears, who led briefly, followed him in one lap later.

That left Rutherford ahead of Unser by 9.5 seconds, but he quickly built that to an insurmountable margin.

There was a spectacularly violent accident early in the race.

Two Actors Unions On Strike

By JAY ARNOLD
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Members of two actors' unions went on strike today as negotiators for the unions and for producers continued talks in hopes of settling a dispute that could shut down a major part of the nation's multimillion-dollar film-making industry.

"We have no intention now of ending the talks, but things are going so slowly and so tediously that we decided to strike," said Kim Fellner, spokeswoman for the Screen Actors Guild. The American Federation of Television and Radio Artists went on strike with SAG.

Ed Prelock, a spokesman for the Association of Motion Picture and TV Producers, said representatives of major film companies, the three major television networks and independent producers also intended to keep negotiating despite the strike announcement.

On Sunday, Ms. Fellner said, "We are down to hard issues," but refused to enumerate them or if any progress was being made toward a new three-year agreement.

A strike would close down production of all prime time

TV shows — just now under way for the fall season — and would stop the major film companies from making movies anywhere in the world.

Ms. Fellner said a strike would not affect daytime TV programming such as soap operas and game shows or TV commercial production. News commentators, who are AFTRA members, would be allowed to cross picket lines to reach their jobs, she said.

Strike preparations began July 9, when 91 percent of SAG's members voted in favor of a strike. Some 60,000 actors, 30,000 of whom are members of both SAG and AFTRA, would join the walkout, she said.

Money was the major stumbling block during the talks, which began May 19, Ms. Fellner said Sunday. The two unions had asked a 40 percent increase in minimum scales and an increase in pension, health and welfare payments to establish dental and optical plans.

The unions for the first time also sought profit participation in films and television and a percentage of the producers' gross receipts from supplemental markets such as pay TV and videocassette and videodisc shows.

Under the old agreement, actors earned up to $785 a week, plus residuals for reruns and motion pictures broadcast on television.

The producers countered with an 8.4 percent scale increase in the first year and a percentage-of-the-gross formula for supplemental markets that the unions said would return far less than the 12 percent amount the actors sought.

Producers also wanted actors to be paid 80 percent of TV scale for original employment on supplemental market shows. Negotiations broke off June 30, the day the old three-year pact expired, with the contract extended indefinitely. Talks did not resume until July 17 and, during the hiatus, the unions voted the strike deadline.

SAG said the cost of living had risen by more than 35 percent in the past three years. In 1979, it said, 88.7 percent of union actors earned less than $10,000 — 59 percent earning less than $1,000.

The last actors' strike occurred Dec. 19, 1978, through Feb. 7, 1979, when SAG struck TV commercial producers. SAG previously struck film companies in 1960 for six weeks and TV companies for one week in 1955. The union also struck commercial producers for 10 weeks in 1952.

12-Year-Old Is Asking Asylum

CHICAGO (AP) — Ukrainian-born Walter Polovchak, who is 12 years old, says he does not want to return to the Soviet Union, even if it means never seeing his mother and father again.

Rather than go back, he is seeking political asylum in the United States. A judge is to decide later this month whether to place Walter in the custody of one of two aunts who live in this country or return him to his father.

"I would rather never again see my parents than leave Chicago," Walter says. "I want to stay here. I have new friends, a nice school, a bicycle I fixed myself, and I don't want to be sent back. Here is better than my country."

"This is a free country. It is a good country. But I want to go home," Michael Polovchak, Walter's father, said Saturday through an interpreter. "Children should stay with their parents."

His comments echoed those of the Soviet embassy in Washington, where spokesman Valentin Kamenev said: "Our position is that a 12-year-old boy should not be able to tell his parents what he wants to do. He does what they say."

Walter emigrated from the Ukraine to Chicago six months ago with his father, 42; his mother, Anna, 38; his sister, Natalie, 17; and 6-year-old brother, Michael Jr.

Last week, Walter learned that his father planned to return soon to the Soviet Union, so he and his sister moved out of the family's house and into an apartment with their cousin, Walter Polowczak, 24, a computer engineer.

Police found the boy Friday and took him to a district police station. But when his father tried to take Walter home, the police called the State Department, which issued a temporary order keeping the boy in the United States until a court hearing could be held.

An emergency hearing was held Saturday by Circuit Judge Joseph Mooney, who ordered Walter placed under the supervision of the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services pending a final custody hearing July 30.

The elder Polovchak appeared at the hearing without a lawyer or an interpreter and did not say anything until after the proceeding was over. Then he shouted, "They're kidnapping my boy!"

Julian E. Kulas, Walter's lawyer, said Soviet authorities have told Polovchak that because the two boys were on the couple's visa, both must accompany the parents or the family will not be allowed to return to the Ukraine.

Michael Jr. is too young to understand the situation and will be returning with his parents. Natalie, who entered the country with her own visa, has decided to stay in the United States.

"I am so scared for my brother," she said. "If he is forced to go back with my parents he will be punished there. He can have no good education or job and will be followed for the rest of his life for speaking out against the Soviet Union this way."

Expelled 3 Feminists

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Three Soviet feminists were expelled by the Kremlin over the weekend, a spokesman for Amnesty International said today. The women said they were connected with a feminist journal which recently urged Soviet men to refuse military service in Afghanistan.

The three women were Tatyana Mamonova, Tatyana Gorischeva and Natalya Malachuskaya, all involved with an unofficial publication called "Maria." They said Soviet authorities had offered them a choice of prison or emigration.

The publication first appeared last September, was edited by Mrs. Mamonova and called "Woman and Russia." It was considered the Soviet Union's first feminist journal and attacked male domination of Soviet society.

The original publication was reported to have been renamed and put out under the auspices of the two other women after Mrs. Mamonova was threatened if "Woman and Russia" appeared again.

Mrs. Mamonova, a chemist, painter and poet, arrived in Vienna with her husband and 4-year-old son. It was not immediately known if the other women brought any relatives with them to Vienna.

Friends in the Soviet Union said earlier this month that Mrs. Mamonova had been threatened with legal action and loss of custody of her son if she did not agree to emigrate.

Burn Telethon Fell Far Short Of Goals

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP) — A telethon billed as a star-studded program to raise $1 million for the Richard Pryor Burn Foundation fell short of both celebrities and money.

Only $140,000 in pledges were made during the course of the 14-hour show, which was aired Friday and Saturday, according to organizers.

Producer and co-host Redd Foxx said he developed back trouble prior to the show and was unable to appear. Co-host Sammy Davis Jr. was in Indianapolis, but did appear on tape.

Others who the producers said would appear, including boxer Muhammad Ali and author Alex Haley, also did not attend. But television actors Robert Guillaume of "Benson," Donny Most of "Happy Days" and Johnny Crawford of the old "Rifleman" series did appear.

The money raised will be used for research into burns and to provide financial aid to burn victims, said a spokeswoman for the foundation.

Comedian Richard Pryor, who suffered third-degree burns on the upper half of his body in an accident June 9, was in satisfactory condition

Sunday at the Sherman Oaks Burn Center. He has had three skin-graft operations and is expected to leave the hospital in the next couple of weeks, a hospital spokesman said.

CRYPTOQUIP 7-21

RBK-OYEOA NEBZ-YII NAQGVVR
 RZQGYJR KYJNA

Saturday's Cryptoquip — FINE POI PLEASED OUR PACIFIC ISLAND TOURISTS.
 Today's Cryptoquip clue: Q equals R

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

N.C. Counts Eight Deaths In Traffic

By The Associated Press
 North Carolina counted eight deaths in traffic accidents during the weekend, pushing the state's highway toll for the year to 739.

The state had recorded 804 deaths at this time last year.

William Robert Prater, 27, of Dudley was killed Sunday morning when his car ran off a rural road five miles south of Goldsboro. The patrol said Prater's car struck a sideways culvert and overturned.

Another one-car accident in Currituck County took the life of George Washington Powell Jr., 24, of Moyock. His car also struck a bridge culvert and overturned into a canal.

Charles Michael Teal, 29, of Randleman, a pedestrian, was killed Sunday morning in Randolph County. Teal was struck by a vehicle on a rural paved road near Asheboro.

A 17-year-old Climax youth died when the motorcycle he was driving ran off a rural paved road about five miles south of Greensboro. The patrol identified the teenager as Roy Joe Fields.

Samuel Frady, 74, of Waynesville was killed Saturday afternoon when his car ran off the right side of U.S.

441 south of Sylva and overturned.

Darryle Wayne Hennings, 18, of Vass, was killed Saturday when the car in which he was a passenger ran off the road and struck a tree, the patrol said. The accident occurred on a rural road less than a mile from Southern Pines.

Viola Robinson, 80, of Candler died Saturday morning, when she apparently lost control of her car on N.C. 151 and struck a bridge west of Asheville, the patrol said.

The patrol also reported that Mack Icenhour, 25, of Todd was killed early Friday evening when the car he was driving ran off a rural road in Ashe County and overturned.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.
 A chance of showers Wednesday with highs in low 90s; lows in the 70s. Thursday and Friday fair for most of state with temperatures within similar range.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AK75 ♥A8 ♦A6 ♠A10874
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—A jump to four spades does not do justice to this powerhouse with its wealth of controls and excellent trumps. To advise partner of your strength, we suggest you make a jump shift, even though you have to do it in a false suit. Our choice would be a jump to three diamonds.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AK83 ♥95 ♦KQ7 ♠8762
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Dble. Rdble. 2 ♦ Pass Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—By following his redouble with a spade raise, partner is simply telling you that he has 10-12 points in high cards and trump support. Your opening bid could hardly be described as a thing of beauty, and there is no reason to even suspect that you could make game. Pass. If partner had a better hand, he would have taken stronger action.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠J965 ♥K1062 ♦A10 ♠A9
 What is your opening bid?

Hitch Ride, Go To Jail

VIDALIA, La. (AP) — Three Concordia Parish jail escapees picked the wrong road, the wrong car and the wrong time to hitch a ride, says Sheriff John Patrick.

"The road they were on is not traveled that heavily, but it leads to my house," Patrick said after he arrested the trio on a levee by the Old Mississippi River and escorted them back to jail Saturday.

Patrick said he was taking his wife and their two sons for an evening ride to town when he noticed a hitchhiker. "He looked out of place. His clothes were wet and dirty. He just looked lost. He looked suspicious," Patrick said.

Patrick said he called for marked cars, drove a few miles up the road to meet them and then headed back to pick up the hitchhiker.

"I pulled up first in the plain car looking like I was giving him a ride. He tried to get into the car with me. I got out of the car and arrested him, and saw the other two hiding in the grass by the side of the levee," he said.

The three, who had escaped Friday, surrendered quietly and were picked up by the marked cars.

"It kind of surprised them. Sure did," Patrick said.

A.—You have an opening bid by any standards, and the fact that you have both major suits makes a first-seat opening even more attractive. However, neither of your major suits is biddable. Therefore, make the "convenient" opening bid of one club to prepare you for any rebid.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K83 ♥10873 ♦KJ ♠10872
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South
 1 NT 2 ♦ ?
 What action do you take?

A.—You rate to take at least three tricks on defense, and partner should be able to contribute four in view of his no trump opening bid. Therefore, a penalty double is the standard choice. Since you cannot be sure of making any contract in your direction, it seems prudent to try to collect a useful contribution from the enemy.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠K9852 ♥762 ♦QJ954
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South
 1 ♦ Dble. ?
 What action do you take?

A.—From your hand, it's impossible to determine what the opponents can make—or, for that matter, what your side can make. Certainly, your holding makes it appear that even six hearts might not be beyond your opponents, so make it as difficult as possible for them to get together. Jump to four spades. For offense, your hand is rather good—especially if partner has a club honor.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♥A6 ♦K109652 ♠AQ743
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ 2 ♣ 3 ♦ 3 ♣ 4 ♦ 4 ♣ ?

What do you bid now?
A.—While partner's first response did not promise earth-shattering values, he should be near the top of his bid—after all, he was not compelled to bid over three spades. We would take our chances on six diamonds. The hand could be a laydown, and it is unlikely to depend on more than a finesse.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Fantasy Games Today Replacing Time-Honored

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Anyone who thinks the evolution of games ended with Monopoly would be mystified by the current rage: fantasy role-playing games set in imaginary spaceships, cowboy towns or dungeons.

They are played with a tertile mind and some odd dice are all that's needed. The games needn't end, and if they do, no one wins or loses.

"Some of the concepts are hard for an adult to grasp," says Gary Gyax of Lake Geneva, Wis., who created Dungeons and Dragons, the original and still most popular of the games, six years ago. "Kids have no problem, because they still remember how to play cops and robbers," a time-honored form of fantasy role-playing.

A half-million basic sets of D&D were sold last year, and Gyax hopes to sell a million this year.

Fantasy games have attracted hundreds of thousands of youngsters after school and on weekends and given rise to a sub-culture of languages, clubs and magazines.

We are seated around a green felt-topped, sawhorse table in the back room of a midtown games store to witness this diversion. Or are we?

John Fluker, the mustachioed chap in the white shirt, is playing the captain of the Pegasus, a futuristic starship. He is leading a boarding expedition to DraKne, an asteroid belonging to an alien race at war with another alien bunch, the Gnr+?isht+lup2.

Captain Fluker and his crew approach a door on the asteroid.

"What will you do?" asks Vincent Amella, the game master.

"Is there a doorknob? What about an ordinary knocker?"

"No."

"What if the door's booby trapped?" someone asks the captain.

"I learned early to dance to the masochism tango," Fluker replies.

What will they find behind the door? Will they be destroyed by security androids? Will chemicals eat away their vacuum suits? Will giant microwave ovens destroy their communications?

We'll have to wait to find out. Fluker is standing. He's due at his job as a hotel doorman.

A few hours later, a new cast of characters is at the table to play Dungeons and Dragons. In D&D, a dungeon master creates a labyrinth of medieval dungeons, tunnels and castles filled with booby traps and monsters — Black Pudding, an amorphous blob; Gelatinous Cube; Giant Ticks; Green Slime; Gray Ooze; Ochre Jelly, a giant amoeba; and Purple Worm are possibilities.

Players assume the characters of thieves, fighters, elves, clerics or dwarfs pursuing a goal, such as treasure or a magic sword. Along the way they battle monsters and traps with weapons and magic spells. Only the dungeon master (known to buffs as the "DM") knows what lurks behind each corner or door. He describes what they see and hear as they progress, answers their questions and rolls the dice to determine the outcome of encounters with monsters.

The typical player is 10 to 15 years old, but college students and older adults are avid fans, Gyax says. The basic D&D set costs about $10, but aficionados can easily spend $200 on miniatures and books describing new adventures and monsters.

Mike Kilbert, a high school social studies teacher and part owner of The Compleat Strategist game store, rides herd on the mob of adolescents who emerge every Saturday to play in the back room. Part of the appeal is that nobody loses, Kilbert says. "You're not beating someone else. You're testing your wit and reasoning abilities. In D&D, you can say, I achieved my objective, my character is a little better, I'm looking forward to the next game."

"And there's a certain fascination for the game master. He creates a universe and watches his creatures go through it. He's not a referee — he's god."

Collision Fatal To Eight People

COALVILLE, Utah (AP) — Eight people have died in a head-on collision between two cars, one of which was traveling east in the west-bound lane of Interstate 80, police said.

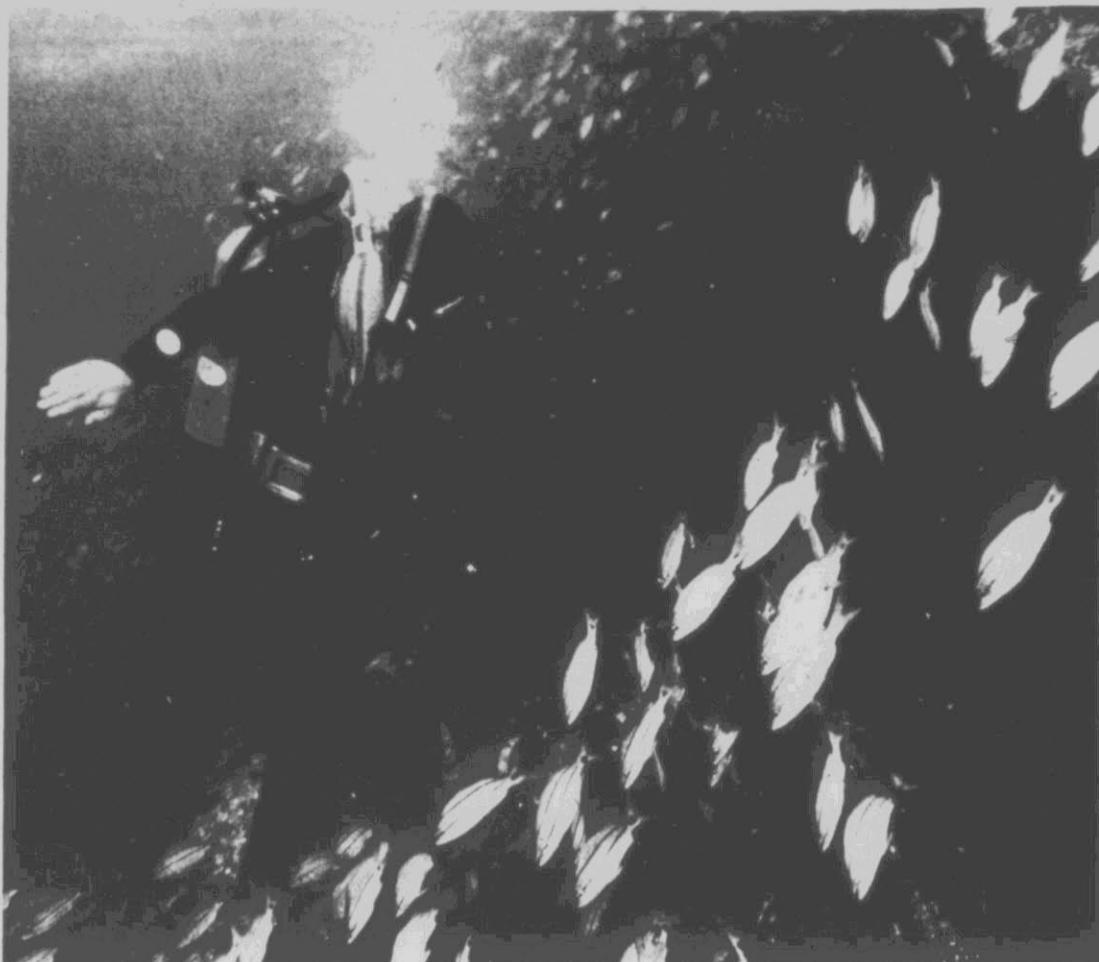

The accident occurred Sunday. Two people were in one of the cars and six were in the other, according to a dispatcher for the Summit County sheriff's department.

D&D has gained some notoriety. Last year, a Michigan State University player disappeared for several weeks. A spokesman for TSR Hobbies Inc., Gyax' company, says the disappearance wasn't related to the game, although it was reported to be. More recently, parents in the Mormon town of Heber City, Utah, scuttled the game as a school activity, charging that it promotes demonology.

In the D&D game underway at the green table, dungeon master Phil Cooper, a mortgage officer at a savings bank, has designed a medieval setting. The players are seeking "the sword of life and death." We find them in the castle chamber of a sleeping duchess, pursued by an army, watching the town go up in flames, pondering the meaning of gems found in a vampire casket, and looking for an escape route through a spooky tunnel.

Before play even begins, their imaginations are at full throttle with questions for the dungeon master.

From Paul Barnes, 44, a bookstore manager and actor, who is playing Frances the Archdeacon: "If a vampire with an invisibility ring turns into a

SHIPWRECK EXPLORATION — A diver explores one of many shipwrecks off the North Carolina coast. Film maker Bill Lovin and a team of divers visit some of the wrecks and talk about them in "Beyond The Breakers," a 60-minute documentary being shown over Channel 25, Greenville, on UNC-TV, beginning at 8 p.m. Wednesday, July 23.

bat, is it also invisible?"

And there's Suzanne Tober, a college sophomore studying physics and computer science, who plays an 11th level Druid. "I've been kidnapped by a vampire, chained to a wall, bitten by a vampire, and I have a price on my head for playing a prank on the king — putting a sign on his backside that says 'Kick Me.'"

Her question: "If a creature's wearing a ring of invisibility and someone throws black ink on it, would the ink become invisible?"

"Good question," the dungeon master replies.

Scattering Of Draft Protests

By The Associated Press

Scattered protests were scheduled today as the first group of an estimated 90,000 young North Carolina males began registering for the draft.

Registration was to be carried out at post offices across the state.

During this week, men born in 1960 will register. Today's group included those men born during the first quarter of the year. Those born in the second, third and fourth quarters are to register Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Friday will be a make-up day for any who missed their scheduled day.

Men born in 1961 will register next week. Those born in 1962 will be required to register in January — if the law requiring registration remains in effect.

Anti-draft forces have appealed the law to the Supreme Court, which may set it aside because women are not included in the registration.

In North Carolina, the Winston-Salem Committee against Registration and the Draft scheduled picket lines at the Fifth Street Post Office in Winston-Salem.

Spokesmen for the Southeastern War Resisters League said more than 200 people volunteered to hand out anti-draft leaflets at post offices in the Triangle area.

In Raleigh the Libertarian Party used television to air anti-registration messages. George H. Gardner, the executive director of the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union, called the registration "saber-rattling."

"We oppose a peacetime draft vehemently," Gardner said. "To have a large standing army is a threat to freedom."

Registrants were asked to fill out cards requiring name, age, sex, current and permanent addresses, phone number and Social Security number.

Failure to register could result in five years' imprisonment and a fine of $10,000.
