A HELPING HAND — Pitt County firemen and rescue workers join forces to lift the floor section of a mobile home when the occupants were believed trapped after a strong gust of wind overturned it yesterday afternoon, during a storm. Pitt County Fire Marshall Bobby Joyner said the occupants, Mrs. Jean Lowery and her stepson, who was not identified, were in the home when the high winds struck. Joyner said Mrs. Lowery and the boy received minor injuries. Mrs. Lowery said she and her stepson crawled out of the wreckage and went to a neighbors home. According to Joyner, it is not uncommon for strong gusts of wind, even up to 60 miles per hour to be frequent before a thunder storm. The mobile home, which was located in the Homestead Mobile Home Park on the Old River Road west of Greenville, was listed as a total loss. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Glum Prospect Provided In Future World's Study

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Mass poverty, malnutrition, overcrowding, food shortages and deterioration of the planet's water and atmosphere resources — that's a bleak government prediction that says civilization has perhaps 20 years to act to head off such a worldwide disaster. The three-year U.S. government study released today warns that the world faces those grim problems unless nations cooperate as never before to head them off. In response to the "Global 2000 Report to the President," President Carter has written top government officials that "unless nations of the world take prompt, decisive action to halt the current trends, the next 20 years may see a continuation of serious food and population problems, steady loss of croplands, forests, plant and animal species, fisheries, and degradation of the earth's water and atmosphere." The presidential report estimated real food prices would double and energy prices more than double by the turn of the century. The report said its findings "point to increasing potential (Please turn to page 8)

Preliminary Subdivision Plat OK'd, But Concern Evident

By TOM BAINES

Greenville Planning & Zoning Commission members, with some apparent reservations, voted to approve a preliminary plat involving property adjacent to Lake Ellsworth and urged the City Council to address the increasing problems of area flooding. The commission action, involving a three-to-one vote, followed over two hours of discussion and expressions of opposition from Lake Ellsworth residents, who cited flood, traffic and safety factors as key reasons for their concern. The developers, who purchased the Lake Ellsworth project from the original owners a year and a half ago, proposed the development of some 155 condominium units on the 30-acre portion. The tract is located west of the existing lake within the Lake Ellsworth Subdivision. Property owners in the existing subdivision voiced strong objections to the proposed Lake Placid condominium development, pointing out that many of them purchased their homes on the assurance that the remaining portions of the overall development would also involve single-family structures. Those residents, who turned out as a group at last night's meeting, emphasized their concern regarding increased flooding of the lake and mill run, increased traffic which they said would have only one point of access to the development, and subsequent safety hazards for their children. Tom Taft, speaking for the developers, said that they planned to build "high quality luxury condominiums" in a way that would be sensitive to the surroundings. Taft, suggesting that a market exists here for the condominiums, said he felt the development would be a benefit to the neighborhood, a credit to the community, and serve to increase the tax base. Taft said that the developers planned a "low density" of some five units per acre. In spite of the concern and opposition expressed by the residents, including a petition signed by a reported 133 Lake Ellsworth property owners, city planning director Bobby Roberson explained that if the development met all of the criteria outlined in subdivision manuals, the planning board had no choice but to approve the plat. Several of the property owners said they were not opposed to development of the property but to development of condominiums in lieu of individual homes. It was mentioned that the primary area of traffic and safety concern involved the corner of Lake Drive and Ellsworth Drive, where recreational outlets for children of the subdivision are concentrated. All of the traffic would pass through that section along Ellsworth Drive, it was pointed out. Several home owners said they could not stand additional flooding pressure on their lots, contending that additional development would add to the water problems that already exists. They said the flooding problem is unbearable now, even without the consideration of new development. Commissioners agreed that something must be done in an effort to meet the water problems, but it was noted that the local terrain unfortunately lends itself to flooding and run-off difficulties. Commissioner Wes Hankins said that the same problems have been coming up on a regular basis and he contended that if a city plan for water management and flooding is not addressed, the problems will increase. He suggested that the council undertake work on a master plan as soon as possible. Hankins said that, "We can't say no to development. On the other hand, we are facing real problems with water." Commissioner Clarence Tugwell agreed that some type of water and flood control measures for the whole area is needed. Ernest Adams, newly installed member of the board, voted against approval of the (Continued on page 11)

Diggs Entering Prison Today

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Former Rep. Charles Diggs Jr. of Michigan entered the federal prison camp here today to begin serving a three-year sentence for mail fraud and payroll kickbacks. Diggs entered the prison camp at Maxwell Air Force Base at about 8 a.m. CST. He had until 5 p.m. to surrender to federal custody. The Maxwell prison is a minimum-security facility which has housed numerous inmates with prominent government backgrounds, including several Watergate defendants, among them former U.S. Attorney General John Mitchell. Diggs was convicted in 1978 of obtaining kickbacks to help meet personal and business expenses. (Continued on page 11)

Way Cleared For Probe Of Billy Carter

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — An agreement among Senate Republican leaders today apparently cleared the way for a congressional investigation of Billy Carter's ties with Libya and the way his case has been handled by the Carter administration. A spokesman for Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said Baker and senior GOP members of key Senate committees in the case decided to accept a Democratic proposal for a seven-member panel drawn from the Judiciary Committee. In lengthy sessions on Wednesday, Republicans had pressed for a larger special committee similar to that which investigated the Watergate scandals during the administration of Republican President Richard M. Nixon. Democrats insisted on the Judiciary panel. The Baker spokesman, Tom Griscom, said Baker planned to meet later today with Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., to put the finishing touches on the agreement. Griscom said Republicans would be prepared to ask the Senate to approve a larger Watergate-style committee "if during the course of the Judiciary hearings there is a feeling that the committee is not really going after the facts." White House spokesman Jody Powell objected Wednesday to any comparison of the matter with Watergate, but said, "In general, we are dedicated to the proposition that we ought to be as forthcoming and straightforward in this matter as we possibly can be." Powell added, however, that he could not say whether President Carter's aides would be available to testify before Congress concerning the activities of the president's younger brother. Billy Carter registered under protest last week as a foreign agent for Libya and said he had received $220,000 in payments from the Libyan government which he said were the first installments of a $500,000 loan. On Tuesday, the White House announced that the president's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, used Billy Carter as an intermediary last fall in seeking Libyan assistance to free the American hostages in Iran. The Washington Post reported in today's editions that President Carter met with the same Libyan diplomat as Brzezinski about three weeks later, on Dec. 6, to discuss a stiff U.S. rebuke over the burning of the U.S. Embassy in Tripoli four days earlier. However, the Post said there was no suggestion that Billy Carter helped arrange the president's meeting. In a companion story, the Post reported that records on file in the Marion County, Ga., courthouse show that the Internal Revenue Service last April placed a lien for back federal taxes on 38.6 acres of land in Buena Vista, Ga., owned by Billy Carter and his wife Sybil. The lien bars the couple from selling the land — part of a $196,080, 58-acre site that includes their home — and (Please turn to Page 14)

Pitt School Needs Aired At Meeting

By SUE FERNALD

The Pitt County Board of Education met Wednesday to discuss facility needs for 1980-81 and capital outlay funding for construction projects. Included in the meeting was a discussion by parents of Belvoir fifth graders concerning moving the children to Wellcome Middle School. Plans for the use of capital outlay funds approved by the Board of County Commissioner and athletic funding were listed. A discussion concerning moving the Belvoir fifth grade was prompted by Tom Harrell, a spokesman for the community. The parents presented a petition requesting that the children be allowed to remain at the Belvoir Elementary School and expressed concerns over the amount of class space available at Wellcome. Superintendent Ott Alford replied that space available included one classroom completely clean and two others which would be available if teachers used the available resource rooms. As to why the students were being moved, Alford said it was the need for more space at Belvoir. Board Chairman Mark W. Owens raised the question of why couldn't Belvoir house the fifth graders in the coming year if it was possible to house them the previous year. Another question raised by the parents concerned transportation. They apparently (Please turn to Page 8)

FARMVILLE — About 70 people attended the Department of Transportation's Design Public Hearing held last night at Farmville Central High School. The public was invited to voice their opinions on the proposed four-laning of U.S. 264 with fully controlled access from Wilson to Greenville. Moderator of the hearing, Bill Garrett, public hearing officer of the DOT, said the purpose of the hearing was to "discuss the design features of the plan," which according to Garrett, "includes the number of lanes, right of way, interchanges and location of the project." Last night's hearing was one of a series of three on the proposed Farmville East Thoroughfare and existing 264 plans which were recently approved. A public hearing will also be held tonight at Wellcome Middle School North of Greenville. Estimated cost of the 28.07 mile project is $118,140,000. According to the proposal, approximately 20 residential occupants from Wilson, Greene, and Pitt counties will need to move from their homes and farms. Garrett explained the Right of Way Assistance Plan and the "Before and After Appraisal Method" that will be conducted by relocation appraisers to see how each individual and landowner is effected by the plan. Each landowner's property will be appraised individually. "Comparable replacement will be provided by the Federal Board of Transportation for residential as well as commercial moves," said Garrett. Several speakers came forward to make public statements at the hearing. "Everyday, the route from Wilson to Greenville is becoming more and more important," said Janis James, Chairman of Downtown Wilson Associates speaking on behalf of the city of Wilson. "We need to have the shortest route from Greenville to Wilson due to the services provided by the Greenville community." She said more and more Wilson citizens are utilizing the services provided by Pitt County Memorial Hospital and East Carolina University. "The Board of Transportation and the Department of Transportation can be assured that the interest on this project is very high in Wilson" she said. Police Moving Regain Control Idaho Prison

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A special prison tactical team using tear gas this morning freed a guard who had been held hostage for nearly 18 hours by rioting prisoners at Idaho State Penitentiary, and police closed in to regain control of the smoldering institution. Corrections Director C. W. "Bill" Crowl said no shots were fired and no one was injured in the five-minute assault by about a dozen heavily armed prison guards. Shortly after guard Lynart Orr was freed about 5:30 a.m., inmates were told over bullhorns to leave the cell houses and go to a nearby football field. At sunrise about 200 law enforcement officers who had ringed the facility closed in. Prison guards, state and local police and sheriff's deputies stormed into the prison. Inmates began trickling out of the cell houses, hands over their heads, moving toward the football field. At least one canister of tear gas was fired toward one of the buildings by police. Ladders were used to put rifle-toting law officers on top of buildings in the compound. The decision to send in the tactical team came after inmates had burned nearly everything in the prison compound and fears for the hostage's life grew. Crowl said. Only the kitchen was spared the flames. Crowl said the inmates were brewing a big batch of homemade whiskey and he feared that when it was ready, the inmates would go on "a wild drunk." The only other hostage taken in the riot, guard Calvin May, was released unharmed just before nightfall Wednesday. Efforts to free Orr through negotiations failed when inmates refused to talk further after dark. Nine prisoners have sought aid for injuries suffered in the rioting, and one was hospitalized after being badly beaten on the face and arms by other inmates, Crowl said. The others suffered smoke inhalation, minor cuts and bruises. Negotiations broke down at dusk, and the Idaho National Guard was placed on standby. (Please turn to Page 14)

Need Housing

More than 200 of 13,000 students expected to register for classes at East Carolina University this fall do not have rooms. According to Dan Wooten, director of housing at ECU, the university's residence halls, which have a capacity of 5,568, are filled for the fall semester and a waiting list of approximately 200 exists. Chancellor Thomas Brewer reported that the supply of off-campus housing information maintained by the Housing Office has been exhausted. For these reasons, the Student Housing Task Force of the ECU Liaison Council is encouraging chamber members who have available housing on either a temporary or permanent basis to offer it to students. According to Jeanette Cox, chairman of the Housing Task Force, anyone who has available housing should contact the chamber office at 752-4101. Students may also call the chamber and request information about available housing. "This is a positive way the chamber can help the university," said Cox. "Most of the housing problems will be alleviated within six to eight weeks. It would be great if chamber members would work together to solve this temporary shortage," added Cox.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

The dull thing about men's fashions is that they're always so "practical."

They always put zippers and buttons in the front of their clothes where they can see to fasten them. They never let their ankles see daylight. They always have a jacket handy to slip into and cover their stomachs after they eat. Their styles are controlled by the "conservative party," which has been in power since they voted out white knee socks and satin breeches.

It was rather predictable that during a recent transit strike in New York, men started to wear sneakers with their "serious suits" to work just to be comfortable when they walked long distances.

However, the real shocker is that the strike is over and men are still wearing their sneakers. I never thought I'd live to see the day when Prof. Irwin Corey and my husband would be trend-setters.

With Prof. Corey, it's an act. With my husband, it's a statement against style. He started wearing gym shoes ten years ago when he began to jog. "Healthy feet are my life," he would say dramatically. I went shopping with him just once for a pair of running shoes. With three more days, he could have created a world. We saw the inner sole dissected ... the construction blueprint of the heel ... the stress areas diagrammed. We looked at them in mirrors, in a crouching position and under an X-ray machine. He paid more for them than our wedding pictures. He never takes them off.

It's like traveling with Woody Allen. He walks into a room and just in case no one notices he's wearing blue sneakers with an 18-inch optic yellow cushioned tongue and grip-fast shoestrings with a star on each heel with a dress suit, he calls attention to it. "Yes, these little babies have carried these legs over the finish line at Boston, San Diego and Phoenix," etc.

I think there's more to it than just "comfort." I think "conservatives" are once again flexing their muscles and saying, "I'm sick of being told by my mother, my wife and my employer to wear 'hard' shoes. I'm sick of being told I have to wear a tie to be dressed up or a coat to be allowed to eat dinner in a restaurant with valet parking. From here on in, I wear what I want, when I want, and where I want."

As my hostess welcomed my husband the other night, she whispered, "What's he supposed to be?"

"Simple. From the ankles up, he's Ivy League. From the ankles down, Little League."

Dear Abby

Gift Of Sight Leaves A Lasting Legacy

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: As a teen-ager a few years ago, I underwent two cornea transplants — one in each eye. I have seen your columns urging people to donate their organs. Maybe the two corneas I received came from people who got the idea from your column.

I want to address my feelings to my unknown donors: "I never knew you, yet your generosity changed my life. You died, yet a part of you still lives."

"You gave of yourself. It was the last thing you gave, and you gave it to someone you didn't even know."

"My life is so different because of you. Every day I am reminded of the gift you gave me."

"I wonder about you often. Who were you? What were you like? What wonderful things did you see through these eyes?"

"Your generosity helped a stranger, and with the help of God you created a miracle — the miracle of sight."

Abby, I can only praise your work in this area. It means the world to those of us who have benefited from it. God bless you.

SEEING AGAIN

DEAR SEEING: Thank you for a beautiful letter as well as another opportunity to let readers know that they, too, can give the gift of sight. To get a donor's card, call your local Lions Club. It is listed in your phone directory.

DEAR ABBY: My boss jingles the change in his pocket constantly, which drives me nuts!

Whenever he stands up, he puts his hands in his pockets, then it's jingle, jingle, jingle until I want to scream. He stands by my desk while doing this.

I told him that it bothers me, and he said, "Oh, it bothers my wife too, but it's an old habit I can't seem to break."

Abby, how can I help him break this old habit? He knows it's irritating to me and others, but he goes right on doing it.

UP A WALL

DEAR UP: Ask him if he really wants to break the "old habit." And if he does, try this: As soon as he approaches you, ask him if he has change for a $5 bill, a $10 bill, or whatever it takes to deplete his coin collection. Repeat this procedure daily. End of problem. (P.S. It could also be "end of job," but it's a solution.)

DEAR ABBY: Since it was recently graduating time, as well as the season for weddings, please say something in your column about thank-you notes.

These people have the time to send graduation invitations (or announcements) to people they haven't seen in years. The same for weddings, and even to some bridal showers! They just put anyone they can think of on the list, no matter how long it's been since they last saw him. Just get those gifts rolling in!

A thank-you note takes less than 15 minutes to write. The stamp is only 15 cents and the card or note paper is about a dime. They get a gift worth $10 or more. That's a pretty good return on such a small investment.

But what gets me are people who don't even acknowledge the gift with any kind of thank-you note.

They say everything comes back in style eventually. Tell me, Abby, do you think good manners will ever make a comeback?

R.C. IN ALEXANDRIA, LA.

DEAR R.C.: Good manners have never been out of style. Unfortunately, there will always be those who are too lazy, thoughtless or ignorant to use them.

Do you have questions about sex, love, drugs and the pain of growing up? Get Abby's new booklet: "What Every Teen-ager Ought to Know." Send $2 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Blueprint For Growth

Development of a "blueprint" for the growth of Greenville for the next decade is an ambitious undertaking for the city government, but one which should stand the city and its citizens in good stead.

Initial census figures notwithstanding, Greenville has experienced significant growth in the past decade, and its present momentum suggests sustained growth over a period of years. With careful planning by the city government that growth can be enhanced. With little planning or poor planning, that growth at best would be impeded, and at worse could result in chaotic conditions for the city and its citizens a few years down the road.

What City Manager Ed Wyatt has envisioned as a "comprehensive plan" would include all geographic areas of anticipated city jurisdiction and would deal with physical development of the area plus the development of city services to meet the needs of those areas. Obviously such a plan would also include the impact of development on city residents. The plan for each long range planning will be based primarily on two factors: how realistic and comprehensive the plan is; and how well the plan is developed, is implemented, and the city's government.

To undertake the kind of long range planning that has been outlined will cost considerable tax dollars. There is little doubt at the outset that such planning will touch on many controversial issues with respect to traffic patterns, annexation, funding of city services, to name only a few. It is unlikely that all of these issues—indeed any of them—will be resolved to the satisfaction of everyone. Yet such planning is essential to a growing community like Greenville.

The challenge is to be met successfully. It requires the involvement and agreement of the community. The quality of the plan and the quality of the policies developed to implement the plan may well determine the quality of life of Greenville in the next decade.

GREAT ACT---IF HE CAN DO IT!

Inflationary Ford 'Price'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

DETROIT — When a trusted aide of Ronald Reagan promptly informed him just before 6 p.m. last Wednesday that the price for Gerald Ford on the ticket was Henry Kissinger as secretary of state and Alan Greenspan as secretary of the treasury, a startled Reagan blurted out: "You're kidding!"

This inflationary asking price by Ford predetermined Reagan's decision hours later. What was planned by the former president and his agents was a restoration of the Ford presidency, totally unacceptable to Reagan.

The fact that Reagan vetoed the unseemly business 90 minutes before Ford's famous interview with Walter Cronkite was supposed to have killed it, puts a new light on the Republican presidential nominee. Reagan is decidedly less guilty of dishonoring the presidency and more aware of the grave trust he covets. For that reason, it is worth recounting fresh details of Wednesday night based on first-hand observations by several Reagan insiders.

After Ford opened the vice presidential door wide in his Cronkite interview, Reagan told advisers in his 69th floor suite: "There is no way that I could take Ford under these circumstances; in the eyes of the world it would look like a deal; we cannot accept."

Why, then, did the Republican presidential nominee allow the matter to proceed, to his own and his party's ill repute?

The answer goes to a question not fully understood by any politicians outside the inner Reagan circle. Reagan and his forces, on the verge of complete party control, felt besieged by Republican heavyweights generously financed by the Republican National Committee. Rightly or wrongly, Reagan felt he would be blown out of the water if he pushed the off button.

"The governor knew at 6 o'clock it was no go," one aide told us, "but he also knew there was too much momentum to stop it cold. It had to cool for a few hours."

Shortly after 6 o'clock, Reagan political director William Timmons entered the candidate's suite. His feet propped on a chair watching the television networks steadily closing in on him, Reagan said: "Maybe this ticket never was meant to be." Upstairs, negotiations were grinding away. Reagan's own veto was a secret inside the Reagan suite.

A Reagan agent, planning what he knew would have to happen later, called an adviser of George Bush for the answer to this question: Does Bush support the entire Republican platform? The question, never asked before, was quickly answered: Yes, Bush did (Ford did not).

Meanwhile, Reagan ruled out Kissinger and Greenspan for the Cabinet. He felt that Kissinger as secretary of state would at once take over about 50 percent of his administration. Reagan called Greenspan "a good man" but agreed that at the Treasury, he would control another 25 percent of the new administration.

Ford men modified the scenario. At 9 p.m., Reagan telephoned Ford and was informed by him that Kissinger was taking himself out of the action. By 10:40, Ford's terms were these: Kissinger's role downgraded to "foreign affairs adviser" to President Reagan; Ford to control appointments to the powerful Office of Management and Budget (OMB) and the National Security Council (NSC).

There was more. Ford would have veto power over two Cabinet appointments: State and Defense. Reagan aides William J. Casey and Edwin Meese brought that word to Reagan shortly after 10:30. Those were the new proposals from Greenspan and ex-Congressman John Marsh, an increasingly active player in the Ford camp.

In Reagan's suite, the three networks were carefully monitored. Sen. Robert Dole appeared on the screen saying that he felt sure Reagan and Ford would work something out. Reagan, watching, shook his head at the TV set: "No, Bob," he murmured.

When ABC's Sam Donaldson aired a report that Reagan and Ford were about to leave the Detroit Plaza for convention hall, Reagan's aides felt the networks had become an unwitting instrument of Ford propaganda. "We felt quite literally surrounded," one aide told us. From the Reagan side, no word had been put out.

A Ford plan, attributed to Kissinger, surfaced: Adjourn the convention, by now jubilant with Reagan-Ford talk, and continue negotiations until Thursday. Reagan instantly vetoed it: That would only give more space and time for consolidating the Ford takeover.

Ford arrived in Reagan's suite, as the world knows, at 11:30. After he left, Reagan quoted him: "It's my instinct," he told Reagan, "that this thing won't work." Reagan had long since come to that conclusion. He had been far more sensitive to protecting the presidency than the outside world could know.

THIS AFTERNOON

'Biggest Bargain'

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The parents were genuinely happy as they told a group of friends about their son, recently graduated from high school, who had enrolled in the local community college.

It was not that the young man looked forward to a career needing vocational or technical training. He really didn't know exactly what he wanted to prepare for; not unlike many of his colleagues.

"And...it is saving us $5,000. He can take a year to decide and still not be left behind," the mother bragged.

A not inconsiderable factor in today's economy is the cost of college, and the latest figures compiled by the University of North Carolina show that inflation continues to hit the family with college-age youngsters in the pocketbook.

The biggest bargain around continues to be the state's 58-campus network of community colleges and technical institutes at which the first year or two of college can be gotten for less than $150 per year; that is if the student lives at home.

Trimmed

While upward spiraling costs are the rule at other institutions of higher learning, the community colleges have, for the most part, held the line on increases, and in some cases actually trimmed tuition and fees.

Thanks to support from the taxpaying public, the state's university system has escaped without major increases, but the trend is upward, however, slightly, and at least two campuses, tuition and fees have increased nearly nine percent since last year.

It is at the private college, however, where the ravages of inflation have hit hardest, and increases in the area of 10 percent are standard, with some shooting nearly to 20 percent.

The combined tuition and required student fees at the 16-campus university system range from a low of $170 at Pembroke and $190 at Asheville and Wilmington, to a high of $739 at the School of Arts in Winston-Salem. The highest at a regular university is $630 at Durham's Wake Forest. At Greensboro the cost is $603.

In the middle range with charges from $520 to $590 are most of the schools, with the UNC average running $490. That average is up from $473 just four years ago.

The required fees, incidentally, make up a sizeable portion of the total cost. Room- and board costs about $1,000 at the state schools. Tuition continues to be the most variable charge, with tuition at UNC totaling $1,690. At other schools, costs run from $100 to $1,000.

One of the major sources of the imponderable support to the state university system at Greensboro is the $100 million bond issue which provides for the construction of new dormitories for students from other parts of the state.

The cost is over $100 million, but just over $50 million is paid annually at the community colleges, compared to $100 million at the average university. For instance, at UNC the cost is $137 at the community colleges.

able portion of the college costs, ranging from around $200 to more than $300 for such things as athletics, health services, general activities, and debt service retirement. That is included in the totals used above.

Then, of course, there are costs of living away from home, with a dormitory room running between $525 and $800 yearly, and meals ranging from $50 to well over $1,000.

Some Are More Equal

WASHINGTON — If nominations are in order for the worst Supreme Court decision of the term, let me propose Fullilove vs. Klutznick, decided on July 2. This was the case in which the court held that when it comes to equal access to federal contracts, some are more equal than others.

One of the oldest and most cherished doctrines of our constitutional law is that constitutional rights are individual rights. Another doctrine, not so old but just as precious, is that the Constitution is color-blind. The Fifth Amendment says that "no person" shall be treated unjustly, and the Fourteenth Amendment prohibits racial discrimination — implicitly, racial discrimination — against "any person."

But with its decision in Fullilove, a majority of the court cast these old doctrines to the four winds. The effect is to rule that some persons may be treated unjustly, that some persons may be excluded from federal programs solely because of the color of their skins.

We are talking, of course, of white persons.

These are the facts: Through the Public Works Employment Act of 1977, Congress appropriated $4 billion for projects across the country. The law contained this express provision: "Except to the extent that the Secretary of Commerce determines otherwise, no grant shall be made under this Act for any local public works project unless the applicant gives satisfactory assurance to the Secretary that at least 10 percentum of the amount of each grant shall be expended for minority business enterprises."

The act went on to define acceptable minority group members as "Negroes, Spanish-speaking, Orientals, Indians, Eskimos and Aleuts."

The effect of this racially discriminatory provision was absolutely to bar non-minority contractors from even bidding upon $400 million in federal contracts. The provision precisely echoes the anti-Catholic notices that once were posted in parts of New England: No Irish need apply. The law is a racist law.

But, ah, said the court, the provision is benignly racist. It is remedially racist. It is temporarily and experimentally racist. Nothing in the Constitution prohibits Congress from enacting racially discriminatory laws if the laws are intended to assist minorities who have been socially or economically disadvantaged in the past. And, besides, $400 million really isn't much. Barring non-minority contractors from this paltry sum is only "an incidental consequence" of the program. The burden imposed upon the barred contractors is "relatively light." And after all, the 1977 appropriation is limited in its scope.

Incredibly, these specious contentions were accepted by such ordinarily sound justices as Burger and Powell. Three members of the court — Stewart, Rehnquist and Stevens — emphatically dissented. Stevens said bluntly that the $400 million set-aside "creates monopoly privileges for a class of investors defined solely by racial characteristics." And he warned that the court was creating a precedent for racial quotas that will come back to haunt the law.

Stewart had the last word: "The equal protection standard of the Constitution has one clear and central meaning — it absolutely prohibits invidious discrimination by government... Racial discrimination is by definition invidious discrimination. The rule cannot be any different when the persons injured by a racially biased law are not members of a racial minority. The guarantee of equal protection is universal in its application."

In Stewart's view, the majority had abandoned a long line of decisions attempting to get away from racial classification. Now, the majority had placed an imprimatur "on the creation

Other Editors Say A National ID?

(Greensboro Daily News)

That Americans should carry a national ID card is not a new one. It pops up from time to time to be hooted down by wiser heads.

The Select Commission on Immigration and Refugee Control has a proposal to set up a national ID card to help solve our country's illegal immigration problems. We doubt if it will help.

We worry that these inconspicuous little cards pose a real threat to personal freedom. National ID cards would be required of every American and legally admitted immigrant.

The cards would contain an assortment of data: name, social security number, date of birth, place of birth, sex, height, photograph and several other items.

They would require that the card must be shown to an employer before an individual can be hired. Presumably this would mean that illegal immigrants from the marketplace would be required to show ID cards probably wouldn't bother some folks who already are bulging with Social Security card, driver's license, credit cards and other possessions. So what's the point? They should think again.

A computer file containing the details of our lives would be housed in Washington. The data bank would be but one more way for government to poke its nose into our lives. For those who value our personal privacy resent more the government's intrusion.

The commission, moreover, is naive to think that such a card would always request that job-hunters show their IDs.

For many migrant workers who illegally cross the Rio Grande to tell you, most employers are looking for cheap labor and not for work permits. We doubt national ID cards would change their attitude.

Instead, that Uncle Sam confront the illegal immigration problem by enforcing the laws already on the books. The existence of thousands of illegal immigrants is a fact that will attest that these laws are honored in the breach.

Strength For Today

SEARCHING FOR THE FACTS?

At one time or another, most people who make up their minds to do anything, they say, "I'll do it when I have all the facts." But in the end we will have to make our decisions on the basis of partial evidence. Otherwise, we will never take needed action.

We should always beware of snap judgments; but we should be equally on the alert to avoid that detachment of mind which keeps us from arriving at definite decisions. — Elisha Douglass

Savings Bonds Looking Better

By FLOYD NORRIS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Savings bonds — hailed as an "investment in America" by the government — may finally be losing some of the bad image they gained as interest rates rose to record highs earlier this year.

Investors are still redeeming more bonds than they are buying, forcing the government to borrow more money at market interest rates by issuing Treasury bonds and bills. But redemptions have declined from the feverish pace of early this year.

For most investors, there are still many investments better than savings bonds. But those bonds are a better investment now than they were a few months ago, and they have special features that may make them attractive to some investors.

The new Series EE savings bonds are sold in denominations ranging up to $50. Buyers pay half the face price, with the bonds maturing in 11 years. At that point the Treasury promises to pay back the face price or more.

The bonds have escalating interest rates. A bond held for only two months pays just 4 percent annual interest. That rises to 4.5 percent after one year and then gradually edges up to 6.5 percent in five years. Bonds held for 11 years pay 7 percent a year in interest.

In the early years, those rates are below what a saver can get from a bank or thrift institution on passbook accounts. And savers willing to commit their money for long terms can get higher rates on such certificates from banks. The rates available on corporate and government bonds are also considerably higher.

But savings bonds have the advantage of always being redeemable, without penalty, unlike long-term bank certificates. And as many burned investors can testify, the market prices of regular government or corporate bonds can decline. A person who bought savings bonds a year ago would now be better off, if he decided to cash them in, than a person who bought 30-year government bonds. The 30-year bonds pay higher interest, but their market value has declined.

There are also significant tax advantages for some holders of savings bonds. Holders of such bonds, like holders of other government bonds, do not have to pay state or local income taxes on the interest.

More importantly for some holders, the interest is not subject to federal income taxes until the bonds are cashed in, at a time that may be many years after they were bought. A person nearing retirement could postpone selling the bonds until he has retired, when he will presumably be in a lower tax bracket.

Before redeeming savings bonds prior to maturity, a person should consider both his tax status and the fact that the interest rate keeps rising the longer the bonds are held.

Early this year, there was what amounted to a run on the Treasury, as savers redeemed their savings bonds in unprecedented volumes. In April a record $2.526 billion in bonds were redeemed, while sales of new bonds were only $390 million.

But redemptions slowed to $1.346 billion in May and $965 million in June as interest rates on alternative investments declined. Still, for the first half of the year, redemptions totalled $11.142 billion, almost as much as the $12.368 billion redeemed in all of 1979 — itself a record.

While people seem more willing to hold on to bonds they have, sales of new bonds continue to decline, falling to $301 million in June and to $2.454 billion for the first six months. About 80 percent of what sales there are come from payroll savings plans, up from 60 percent in previous years.

Despite the loss of favor, there are still a lot of savings bonds out there. Including the interest they have earned, the total at the end of June was $73.38 billion, a figure that is down from the record $80.93 billion set in December 1978 but still accounts for 8.3 percent of the national debt.

once again by government of privileges based on birth." Statutes will have to be drawn to define such terms as "Negro" and "Spanish-speaking." The result will be to foster notions of "racial entitlement" - a system of rewards and apportionments geared to racial criteria.

Thirteen times in his opinion for the court, Burger remarked upon the "limited" or "narrow" scope of the 1977 act. But in upholding this unjust and evil law, he opened broad doors to a return of discrimination by race. Sound law would slam them shut.

We've Got Gigantic Buys For the Entire Family!

Detained In South Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) - South Korean correspondents for The Associated Press and four other Western news organizations were taken into custody early today by martial law authorities.

The explanation to families of the detained men was that they were being picked up for questioning of "character references." There was no further explanation from South Korean officials and by mid-afternoon the five were still being held.

K.C. Hwang, veteran Seoul correspondent for The AP, was among those detained. The others were Oh Il-son of the British Reuters Ltd. news agency, Shim Jae-hoon of The New York Times, Chung Ho-sang of the Asahi Shimbun and Chon Hak-bum of the Japan Broadcasting Corp. (NHK).

Spokesmen for both the U.S. Embassy and the British Embassy said they asked the South Korean martial law government for an explanation but had not received a reply.

The Korean government has been critical recently of reporting by some foreign agencies and newspapers of the disturbances in the southern city of Kwangju and other events. There was no indication that the detention of the Seoul correspondents was connected with such criticism, however.

School Meeting.....

did not feel that it was in the best interests of the child to be bused 15 to 20 miles to a new school in which they would be practically socially separated because of age differences.

Board Member James W. Black asked if the community had any long range plans.

Another member of the community replied that they needed to find some way to put up buildings cheaper and more energy efficient. He suggested the possibility of steel buildings. He also suggested that instead of moving the children, which would not be in their best interest, the board should concentrate on expanding the school.

Another spokesman for the group also raised questions concerning the board's suggestion to convert the gymnasium at Belvoir in to a cafeteria, which would involve lowering the ceiling of the gym, renovating the cafeteria, and using gym space for seating the students. It was pointed out that one is already in satisfactory operation in Falkland.

Parents of the students expressed the need for the gym as it stands at the present time, because it is used for community activities, including voting as well as for the student gym classes, which are already reportedly overcrowded.

The possibility of using mobile classrooms was brought up by Alford and after much debate concerning both the cafeteria and moving the students the board passed a motion allowing the students to remain at Belvoir, meet the classroom needs with either mobile units or new buildings, and leave the cafeteria and gym as they are at this time.

A motion was made for the Board to look into the situation of the mobile units and optional construction plans.

Concerns were also expressed over the amount of money received from the sale of the Belvoir school earlier this year. Concerned parents wanted to know where this money was and why it wasn't being used to help expand the Belvoir school. Reference was also made in reference to four classrooms that were promised to the school in the past and never materialized.

Owens replied that the board had already purchased "a lot of property on the left hand side of the school building."

After considerable discussion other recommendations were brought to the attention of the board.

A motion to purchase cafeteria equipment to replace some of the older materials was passed. Alford stated that they would begin with one school and go down the list replacing the equipment. He also said that the Federal government is supplementing the costs with approximately $12,000.

The purchase of an activity bus, van for the handicapped and administrative vehicles were approved, at a cost of $35,000.

Two classrooms were approved for W.H. Robinson at $12,000.

Plans concerning the escrow for the Ayden Middle School were approved and it was suggested that the proceedings start immediately with the purchase of land as well as letting a contract for construction of the building with the $970,094 on hand.

Restroom renovation, closed walkway and a fence were approved for the Belvoir school for $85,000, which originally included the transformation of the gym to cafeteria and transfer of the fifth grade to Wellcome. As the last two items were not approved the extra monies will be put in escrow and will not be spent anywhere else said the board.

Transfer of mobile units to A.G. Cox, D.H. Conley and Ayden Elementary were also discussed. However, plans concerning the mobile units and alternative construction plans were not complete enough to make concrete decisions. The board was instructed to do whatever they could.

Monies for athletic facilities at each high school on the basis of $25 per student was passed, amounting to $125,000.

There was some discussion concerning the academic points of school versus athletic, but as was pointed out by several concerned teachers and principals, athletics are a much needed facility at the schools. It was said the facilities were needed so athletic proceedings would not interfere with class and auditorium space as it has been doing in the past at D.H. Conley High School. It was also pointed out that athletics created a needed channel for the students energies and contributed to the overall good feelings of spirit in the schools.

Cafeteria expansion was approved at Chico, including the expansion of the cooling and dry storage facilities there.

Contingency monies were left as suggested at $19,479.63.

Gospel Expo Friday Night

Johnny Wooten of York Memorial Church will unveil his "Wootenaires" at the Gospel Expo, to be held July 25 at 8 p.m. at York Memorial Church. Wooten has compiled a group of music directors and organists from area churches into a gospel ensemble. This group was created for the Gospel Expo.

The Gospel Expo is a building fund program sponsored by the church and the Rev. Luther Brown, who invite the public to attend.

Future World....

for international conflict and increasing stress on international financial arrangements." Despite some economic growth, it said, the gap between rich and poor will grow wider.

And the study, headed by the President's Council on Environmental Quality and the State Department, said that, if anything, it is probably too optimistic.

President Carter, who ordered the study in 1977, immediately announced appointment of a Presidential Task Force on Global Resources and Environment to recommend new, top-priority studies "as soon as possible" and to provide a progress report within six months.

The report did not suggest specific policies, but concluded that "sustainable economic development, coupled with environmental protection, resource management and family planning, is essential."

The report included these findings:

—World food production may increase 90 percent from 1970 to the year 2000, but population will swell more than 59 percent from some 4 billion in 1975 to about 6.35 billion in 2000.

—Per capita food production, therefore, will increase only about 15 percent and those already eating well will get most of the increase, leaving the poor of South Asia, the Middle East and Africa with little more food, and maybe less, than they get now.

—Farmland will increase only about 4 percent; increased food production must rely on techniques using oil and natural gas, causing food prices to spiral upward along with energy prices.

—"There will be fewer resources to go around," the report says, adding, "Resource-based inflationary pressures will continue and intensify."

—"Regional water shortages will become more severe" because of forest destruction and increased demand.

—"Extinctions of plant and animal species will increase dramatically. Hundreds of thousands of species — perhaps as many as 20 percent of all species on earth — will be irretrievably lost as their habitats vanish, especially in tropical forests."

"Barring any revolutionary advances in technology," the report said, "life for most people on earth will be more precarious in 2000 than it is now — unless the nations of the world act decisively to alter current trends."

The report said one of its chief findings was that the U.S. government was not prepared "to make such a comprehensive study of future trends, so it was marred by flaws that probably hid the full severity of the outlook. Carter urged the new task force to figure out how to improve the government's ability to analyze long-term resource.

UNC Desegregation Case Still Underway

WASHINGTON (AP) — The former chairman of North Carolina's now defunct Board of Higher Education was scheduled to testify today as a government witness at a hearing to determine whether federal funding will be cut off for the state's public university system.

An attempt by George Watts Hill Jr., a Chapel Hill businessman, to testify Wednesday was halted after strenuous objections by attorneys for the University of North Carolina.

UNC lawyers attempted to limit Hill's testimony, restricting his comments to a historical recitation of his years with the state board, which was replaced in the early 1970s by the UNC Board of Governors.

The dispute over Hill's testimony arose when the government announced Hill would testify as an expert witness on higher education and the improvement of black colleges in North Carolina.

Hill was appearing at a hearing on UNC's appeal of an effort by the Department of Education to cut off about $90 million a year in federal education funds for the university system. Federal officials contend the system has operated separate campuses based on segregation.

The 16-campus UNC system includes five predominantly black schools.

Hill, possibly the most prominent North Carolinian who has agreed to be a witness for the federal government, is from a family that has been a major benefactor of the university. His father, George Watts Hill Sr., is a member of the Board of Governors.

The younger Hill was chairman of the old higher education board from 1965 to 1969. That board governed the five historically black campuses and several historically white campuses before they were consolidated into the UNC system in 1972.

Hill briefly took the stand Wednesday, but he did not testify because of the dispute.

"I don't see myself as a witness for one side or the other," Hill said after the hearing. "If the university had asked me to testify I would have. I see my role as shedding light, not partisanship."

Earlier Wednesday, the government presented Jane E. Browning, a black, Harvard-educated sociologist. She testified about the inequities suffered by black colleges during segregation.

Mrs. Browning, an assistant vice president at Atlanta University, did not talk specifically about black colleges in North Carolina. She said that in general, black colleges were underfinanced and had few programs during segregation.

Six Local Traffic Mishaps Yesterday

An estimated $6,200 property damage resulted from a series of six traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 1:15 p.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Club Pines Road involving cars driven by Elbert Allen Jr. of 702 Vanderbilt St., and Susan Rodgers Davenport of 121 Chatham Way.

Damage from the mishap was set at $1,000 to the Allen car and $900 to the Davenport vehicle.

An estimated $800 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 6:11 p.m. collision at the intersection of Tenth and Cotanche Streets, according to investigators, who identified the drivers of the cars as Betsy Ann Kurzinger of 309 Summit St., and Quincy Pace Cannady of Wilmington.

A 1:15 p.m. collision on Fifth Street, 175 feet West of the Contentnea Street intersection involved cars driven by Joy Whitfield Robertson of Williamston and Bette Watson Hudson of Roanoke Rapids.

Damage was set at $250 to the Robertson car and $550 to the Hudson vehicle.

Police reported a truck operated by Dempsey Claude Sullivan of Kinston, and a car driven by Robert Gene Strum of 1706 East Third St. collided about 12 noon at the intersection of Greene and Third Streets, causing an estimated $400 damage to the truck and $275 damage to the car.

A 2:15 p.m. mishap in the 400 block of Lewis Street involved cars driven by Janice Chambers Kidd of Wilson, and Betty Fuller Maxwell of Chapel Hill, officers said.

Damage from the collision was estimated at $250 to the Kidd car and $375 to the Maxwell vehicle.

Cars driven by Kevin Bryan Riggs of Greenville, and William C. Mercer Jr. of Farmville, were involved in a 9:45 p.m. mishap on Memorial Drive, 30 feet South of the Dickinson Avenue intersection according to police.

Damage from the mishap was set at $100 to the Riggs car

Anderson Trying To Avoid A Summer Fade

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) —
With the political focus now on the Republicans and Democrats, John B. Anderson's aides are seeking new ways to keep his independent presidential campaign from melting in the summer heat.

Europe, meeting with leaders in Israel, Egypt, West Germany, France and Great Britain.

While in Europe for three days, Anderson was interviewed on NBC's "Today Show" on his views about the GOP convention.

But with the hot days of August still before him and no further overseas ventures planned to counter the Democratic National Convention next month, campaign organizers are seeking new ways to at least sustain current public interest in his challenge to the two major party nominees.

The plans include paid political ads, which ran for the first time Wednesday night, on television stations in eight U.S. cities — New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Denver, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Detroit and Boston.

The ads, the first since Anderson announced an independent April 24, run one, two and five minutes in length and are the creation of media wiz David Garth, the political consultant hired by Anderson to plan strategy for the campaign.

1973 quote attributed to former President Gerald R. Ford.

"The problem with John Anderson," Ford said, "is that he votes his conscience rather than his party."

Besides the television ads, aides are discussing sending Anderson to campaign on the West Coast, to put as much distance as possible between himself and the Democrats meeting in New York Aug. 11-14 and to emphasize his differences with President Carter.

There also has been discussion of dropping Anderson from active campaigning while the Democrats convene, or traveling through states where he would not be expected to do well in the November election. Both possibilities would be intended to eliminate him from comparison with the Democrats until the general election campaign is under way.

Another means of competing with the Republicans and Democrats is the likely publishing of an Anderson platform on issues. The timing and final content of the platform has not yet been decided.

Once the Democrats have a nominee — assuming it's Carter — Anderson hopes to build momentum by choosing a popular vice presidential candidate, most likely a liberal Democrat.

Beyond that, Anderson is counting heavily on participating in televised League of Women Voters debates in the fall with Carter and Reagan.

If he is invited, his aides consider how well he performs to be critical in whether voters view him as a serious and credible challenger to Carter and Reagan.

But as one senior campaign aide said, by mid-September it is hoped that Anderson will be "like a horse who has been laying back and will suddenly pull out of the pack."

Suit Filed For Malpractice

Mrs. Mildred T. McGrath, a former member of the Greenville City Council, has filed suit against Dr. Jack Wilkerson of Greenville and two other physicians, to "recover...compensatory damages in excess of $10,000," in connection with the death of her husband Harold M. McGrath, 63, in October 1979.

carcinoma of the pancreas as was improperly diagnosed by the defendants," the complaint continues, "that they continued to allow," the chemotherapy treatment to continue, "up to and including August 23, 1977, when they knew or should have known that the original diagnosis made of the deceased as having carcinoma of the pancreas was in error in that the mean survival time following the diagnosis of cancer of the pancreas with or without cancer chemotherapy was approximately 11 months..."

The suit, filed with the Clerk of Superior Court in Pitt County earlier this month, names Wilkerson and two former Greenville doctors, Frank F. Martin of South Carolina, and David H. Riddick of Virginia, as defendants.

According to the complaint, surgery was again performed on McGrath, "on or about August 23, 1977," and, "during said operation said surgeon determined for the first time since January 8, 1974 that the deceased did not have carcinoma of the pancreas nor had he ever had such a condition."

The complaint charges that as a result of surgery performed in January 1974, McGrath was diagnosed as having carcinoma of the pancreas, and that Wilkerson and Martin, "along with the consultation of...Riddick, each prescribed and directed that," McGrath be given a treatment, "commonly known as chemotherapy...without a biopsy of the pancreas having been done."

"As a proximate result of the aforescribed negligent acts and omissions of the defendants," the complaint added, "the plaintiff's deceased incurred extensive pain and suffering, loss of livelihood, loss of enjoyment of life...was caused to live through a period of several years existing only on a liquid diet," and, "his death was hastened and accelerated by the actions of the defendants..."

Charging that the drug prescribed, "was an improper choice to be administered...even if the deceased were to have had

The complaint asks for a jury trial.

Afghan Relief Week Declared

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The governor's office Wednesday declared this week as "Afghanistan Relief Week" in North Carolina.

Voted President Of Boy's Nation

Gov. Jim Hunt said his office would collect any contributions to provide food, water, shelter and medical care for Afghan refugees.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jonathan S. Shapiro of Woodland Hills, Calif., was elected Wednesday as president of the American Legion's 35th annual Boys Nation, defeating Charles T. Francis, 17, of Raleigh, N.C., by one vote.

"The opening of the Olympics in Moscow this week should remind us of the Soviet Union's brutal invasion of Afghanistan. But the people of Afghanistan need more than our sympathy. They need our help," Hunt said.

An announcement of Shapiro's election was made through the national American Legion headquarters in Indianapolis.

preliminary plat. In other business during the three-hour session, it was decided that in view of a provision regarding notification of adjacent property owners not being met, the commission could not act on the preliminary plat of the Eastern Realty property, located west of Rock Springs Road and east of Green Mill Run.

Commission chairman Lyman Ormond, following a conference with the city's legal advisor, said that questions had been raised as to whether the property owner notification requirements had been met and there were no records to indicate the adjacent owners were notified. He said that under the circumstances, it was felt the matter should be continued until a later meeting.

Bill Blount, appearing for the developers, requested that the matter be placed on the agenda for a special call meeting after notification requirements are met. Commissioners agreed to schedule the item for consideration on Aug. 13 at 7 p.m. prior to the regular board workshop.

Questions have been raised concerning the surveying of the property, the existing dedication, and cul-de-sac development. Some of the property owners on Rock Springs Road have expressed opposition to the development.

Commissioners voted to recommend that the city council approve a request by the Redevelopment Commission and Planning Department to rezone two-tenths of an acre in the 100 block of W. 16th Street, adjacent to the property of Dr. Isaac Artis, from R-6 to Office and Institutional.

Approval was also given to the Sedimentation and Erosion Control Plan for South Park Shopping Center, located on the north side of Red Banks Road between Plaza Drive and Evans Street, conditional upon the receipt of comments from the Soil Conservation Service.

In a matter not on the scheduled agenda, commissioners agreed that an item involving cul-de-sac development in Section II of Orchard Hill Subdivision be discussed as an agenda item at the next board meeting.

Board members also agreed to place on the agenda for the Aug. 13 special call meeting consideration of a rezoning request, from R-6 to Office and Institutional, involving property at 422 W. Fifth Street.

Joint city-county commissioners voted to recommend to the council that, stemming from a request by Charles Speight, the Neighborhood Commercial (CN) zoning classification be amended to allow a dance studio as a permitted use. It was pointed out that the planning staff, after studying the request, felt that dance studios would be compatible uses within the CN zone.

A request by Hollowell's Drug Store and Louise H. Moye, agent, to annex property located on the Old Stantonsburg Road across from Medical Drive, will be recommended to the council. The board recommendation for the property, which now adjoins the corporate limits, was made subject to sewer requirements being met.

The joint commission voted to have minor subdivision plats, involving one to four lots, considered by the Subdivision Review Committee in lieu of presentation before the planning board. Some questions were raised as to attendance by committee members at their regular sessions and commissioners agreed that the attendance problems should be addressed.

U.S. 264....

Council expressed concern and proposed several questions in regard to the relocation of US 264 from east NC 121 at the Farmville East and West Thoroughfare. She urged the Department of Transportation "to meet with city officials and landowners to see if a better access Western Thoroughfare" can be provided. She also said that the people of Farmville are looking forward to the opportunity for increased trade and the "completion of a long awaited dream."

Lynwood Mercer, mayor of Farmville offered several thoughts on the project. Mercer pointed out that the proposed Western intersection on US13-11 does not "address any needs" and also invited the Board to meet with city officials, landowners and himself to see if there was some way to make the people in Farmville a little happier. "We hope that this subject is not closed," said Mercer.

Chairman of the Farmville Planning Board, Robert May, too, expressed concern about the Western Interchange and SR1229 proposal. "There is great concern and need for connecting 264 West and 258 North. We would prefer to see a bridge in due time, he said.

To stress and reiterate what was previously said, C.J. Harris, President of the Farmville Chamber of Commerce, asked the DOT to "accept Lynwood's invitation to meet with town officials, landowners, and people of the community to discuss a more prudent, rewarding placement of the Western interchange."

Landowners in the Farmville area came forward to express their feelings on the proposal concerning SR1228. Several landowners will not have direct access to their land and will be "landlocked" if the plan goes through, they said.

"I am pleased with the planning that has been done so far and hope that it will stay on early schedule," said John Anthony, a CPA and resident of Wilson. According to Anthony, this new proposal will bring a "better standard of living, better education, and make Eastern North Carolina a better place to live."

George Harper of Kinston, and member of the Board of Transportation, brought the hearing to a close saying that "some will be hurt and others will be happy." Successful completion of this plan, according to Harper, "depends on how we work together. Progress is here and we want it to continue. During his tenure, Governor Hunt plans to carry out the plans for the Wilson-Farmville-Greenville route."

Some Relief From Rain

Relief from the hot dry weather of the past two weeks came in the form of rain Wednesday, bringing help to area farmers and their crops.

"Most of the corn has already been hurt," said Roger Cobb, Pitt County agricultural extension agent, "so this rain won't help it much. It will help some of the late corn."

According to the Greenville Utilities water plant, the area received 2.01 inches of precipitation yesterday. The high and low temperatures for the day were 92 and 71 degrees Fahrenheit. At 8 a.m. Thursday the level of the Tar River stood at 3.4 feet on the National Weather Service Gauge.

"The soybeans it will really help," added Cobb. "Some of them were in very dry condition."

Cobb explained that tobacco will also benefit from the showers. "It will help fill out the top leaves," he said. "The dry weather has kept some of the top from filling out completely, so this rain is very beneficial to the tobacco."

Waynick Papers Are Donated To ECU

ECU News Bureau
The papers of one of North Carolina's most distinguished citizens have been donated to East Carolina University.

For more than half a century, Capus M. Waynick of High Point was involved in the public affairs of North Carolina, the nation, and the international community as an editor, politician, state and federal official, diplomat, and foundation official. More than 14,000 items of correspondence, reports, photographs, clippings, and scrapbooks reflecting these activities have been received by the East Carolina Manuscript Collection in J.Y. Joyner Library on the East Carolina University Campus.

Waynick, now retired, is a native of Rockingham County. He began his journalistic career in 1911 as a reporter for the Greensboro Record. He subsequently served as acting editor of the Record, city editor of the Greensboro News, and editor of the High Point Enterprise. He remained associated with the Enterprise for much of his career.

While a member of the N.C. General Assembly (1931-1934) he attracted statewide attention in 1932 for his leadership in arbitrating the High Point hosiery mill strike and other strikes in the High Point-Thomasville area.

Waynick subsequently became chairman of the State Highway Commission and the State Planning Board, state director of the U.S. Re-employment Service, and founder and director of the Veneral Disease Education Institute. In 1948 he managed W. Kerr Scott's successful gubernatorial campaign and thereupon became State Democratic Party chairman.

In 1949 Waynick was appointed ambassador to Nicaragua by President Harry S. Truman. The following year the president requested that Waynick organize and direct the Point Four Program. Once this was accomplished, the ambassador resumed his duties in Nicaragua until 1951 when he became ambassador to Colombia.

Waynick returned to the U.S. in 1953 and became senior advisor to the Smith Richardson Foundation. In 1957 he was appointed adjutant general of North Carolina by Gov. Luther Hodges. This post, which he held until 1961, carried the rank of major general. During the Terry Sanford administration he served as special advisor to the governor on race relations. Waynick is author of North Carolina Roads And Their Builders and co-editor of North Carolina And The Negro.

Manuscript Collection director Don Lennon said that the Waynick Papers constitute "an extremely large and extraordinarily important collection. General Waynick is one of those truly unique individuals who has already left his indelible imprint on the state and nation. Whenever there was a problem to solve or a mission to accomplish, Capus Waynick is the man to whom they turned. His papers reflect his versatility, his energy, and his remarkable talents."

Lennon also noted that the Waynick papers have research potential relating to innumerable aspects of twentieth-century life.

"The collection is rich in material pertaining to state and national politics, labor arbitration, diplomatic activities for Nicaragua and Colombia, race relations, National Guard, philanthropy, and many other topics. We at East Carolina University are extremely pleased to have a part in permanently safeguarding the papers of such a remarkable gentleman," Lennon said.

The Waynick papers will be housed with other collections in the East Carolina Manuscript Collection in J.Y. Joyner Library on the East Carolina campus. After proper arrangement and description have been completed, the Waynick Papers will be available to students and historians for research purposes.

Precautions For Heat Are Urged

Take along a jug of cold water and drink from it frequently during your outside activity in extremely hot weather, advised the North Carolina Medical Society.

It has been proven that large intakes of water will prevent 98 percent of all heat casualties. Salt tablets, a popular item among summer athletes and sun worshippers, should NOT be taken (unless under a doctor's supervision), since they are not as effective as drinking water and are often abused. Alcohol should be avoided, since it dehydrates the body and can contribute to the ill effects of heat, the Medical Society said.

Persons suffering from heat exhaustion pale and have clammy skin, weak pulse and are usually nauseated. In many cases, their breathing is labored and they are dizzy. Call a doctor, then have the person lie down and do your best to lower his body temperature. A teaspoon of salt in a glass of tomato juice or a pint of water is advisable to restore the liquid in his body.

If a person has been sweating heavily and stops, and if his skin is hot and dry, then he may be the victim of heat stroke. Other warning signals of heat stroke are dizziness and confusion, high fever, rapid pulse, and muscle spasms. In severe cases, the person may be unconscious. Call a doctor or emergency team immediately, since heat stroke can be fatal. The most important thing to do is to lower body temperature as quickly as possible. Put the victim in a bathtub of cold water. If a tub is not available, cover him with ice packs. If you are outside, gently spray him with a garden hose. If there is no immediate source of water, fan him, the Medical Society advises.

Talk PCC Study Plans

The Farm Machinery Mechanics Advisory Committee of Pitt Community College met on campus recently with sales and service representatives of several farm machinery firms. The progress of the program was discussed, as well as immediate plans for the program.

Meeting with the committee were Bob Barbour of John Deere Sales; Lloyd Keen of Massey Ferguson Service; Andy Anderson of Case Service; and Joe Lovelace of Case Sales.

Joe Downing, assistant dean of curriculum programs, reviewed the progress of the program. His report included readiness of facilities, tooling and student progress.

Dean of Students Edgar Boyd discussed enrollment and advised that 18 applications have been approved for the September class.

Immediate plans for the new program include the forwarding of scholarship funds to PCC so funds may be awarded to students; promotion of the new class by sales and service representatives; development of a work experience form enabling dealers to determine the amount of learning experience the student receives.

The next meeting will be called as need indicates.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices edged down today as some major banks cut their prime lending rates to 10.75 percent and Mobil joined the list of major oil companies reporting large profit increases.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 3.92 to 924.66 in the first two hours of trading and declines outnumbered advances by a narrow margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Signs of further declines in interest rates came from Chase Manhattan Bank, which cut its prime rate to 10.75 percent and was joined at the level by a few other banks, and from a federal regulator who predicted mortgage rates will fall further, perhaps to 11 percent by the end of the year.

The prime rate has not been below 11 percent since November 1978. It has fallen from 20 percent as the recession has depressed loan demand.

Jay Janis, the chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, made his mortgage prediction despite the action by some California institutions raising their rates this week.

Mobil, which announced its profits rose 64.6 percent in the second quarter to $688 million or $3.24 a share, still fell 1/4 to 78. Marathon Oil, which reported a smaller increase, dropped 1/4 to 59 1/4, but Union Oil, which reported a gain earlier in the week, rose 1 1/4 to 59 1/4.

Xerox, which also reported higher earnings, climbed 1/4 to 57. Pan Am was unchanged at 5 1/2 after reporting a second quarter loss.

Big Board volume totaled 16.05 million shares in the first two hours of trading, compared to 19.64 million at the same point Wednesday. The NYSE's composite index fell 13 to 69.634.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 35 to 316.315.

Billy Carter.....

permits the IRS to confiscate it if the Carters fail to meet a repayment schedule, the newspaper said.

The records did not indicate how much in back taxes were claimed, and IRS officials said they were barred by law from discussing disputes involving individual taxpayers.

The Post quoted a friend of Billy, Gainesville, Ga., real estate man Donald J. Carter, as saying the tax problem was further evidence that Billy began his involvement with the Libyan government because "he needed to make money."

"That's what he was after," said Donald Carter, who is not related to the president's family. "He just needed to support his family."

Republicans pushed for a special Senate committee, similar to the one that looked into the Watergate scandals of the Nixon administration. Democrats resisted this and wanted the investigation done by the Judiciary Committee or a panel drawn from it.

At the White House, Powell was quick to assail any suggestion that the Billy Carter case in any way resembles Watergate.

"When I hear these (congressional Republicans) compare this to Watergate, it seems to me it might be worthwhile to make that comparison in detail," Powell said. "I think it will be very clear that in this instance the president has not attempted to obstruct justice or to influence the Justice Department or to contact the head of the criminal division" or have his chief of staff and the White House counsel mislead the public "in a conspiracy to withhold information."

Republicans on both sides of the Capitol were calling for the appointment of a special prosecutor in the matter.

"I don't know how even under the fairest attorney general you can get an investigation that would appear to the public to be unbiased when it's the president's brother," Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., said.

In the House, Rep. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., also called for a special prosecutor to look into Billy Carter's "wheelings and dealings."

In Los Angeles, Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan gave his support for a federal investigation, saying, "Any time a charge is made I think we're better off if we clear the air."

In San Francisco, independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson also called for a special prosecutor, although he said he was not accusing President Carter of personal involvement in any wrongdoing.

Anderson said having the president's brother intercede with Libya on the Iran crisis was "unbelievably distressing... The impropriety of any member of the president's family dealing with a foreign power is so egregious it goes beyond description."

Local Firm Files Suit

NEW BERN — A Greenville firm, Southeastern Cash Register Co., has filed suit in U.S. Eastern District Court here against a Minnesota-based company, seeking damages in connection with a dispute over cash registers it sold for use in ABC stores in a number of Eastern North Carolina counties, including Pitt.

In the complaint, filed Tuesday, the company charged Delta Systems with negligent manufacture and deceptive trade practices and asked for $9.5 million in compensatory damages and $5 million in punitive damages.

Southeastern sold cash registers made by Delta to Pitt and eight other county ABC systems in the East. The complaint charged that the machines could not handle the functions they were supposed to, and that the machines break down frequently.

The complaint also alleges that Southeastern has lost business because of the problems with the machines and has been forced to close two of its offices — in Wilmington and Wilson — and has had to repair the machines it sold.

Leaf Prices Still Steady

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — Prices were steady to a little stronger for most grades at Georgia-Florida flue-cured tobacco markets Wednesday.

The practical top price was $159 per hundred pounds, the Federal-State Market News Service said.

Fourteen markets held sales on Wednesday with a total sale of 3,044,895 pounds at an average of $124.72 per hundred for a value of $3,797,694, bringing season totals to 12,512,036 pounds at an average of $125.94 per hundred for a value of $1,575,377.

Georgia sales were 2,655,031 million pounds at an average of $123.95 per hundred for a value of $3,290,833, bringing season totals to 10,731,572 pounds at an average of $126.13 for $1,353,849.

Florida sales were 389,864 pounds at $130.01 for $506,861, bringing season totals to 1,780,464 pounds at $124.78, for $2,221,528.

An increase in the percentage of nondescript offerings to 12 percent of sales slightly lowered the quality of tobacco, the news service said.

Lugs and primings made up most of the sales, and the volume ranged from light to heavy.

Auction bid averages per hundred pounds on several U.S. grades and comparisons:

X4F, $152, up $1; X4GK, $126, up $2; P4L, $124, up $5; P5L, $105, up $5; P4F, $119, down $9; P5F, $100, down $3; P5G, $86, down $3; N1GL, $81, unchanged.

'Perfect' Comaneci Falls

Nadia Slips
Romanian gymnast Nadia Comaneci is shown in this sequence Wednesday night at the Moscow Olympics as she slipped and fell from the uneven bars while going through her routine. (AP Laserphoto)

MOSCOW (AP) — The problem with perfection is you can only go down. The problem with spectacular buildups is that they rarely achieve any height.

Nadia Comaneci learned the first lesson Wednesday when her individual lead in team gymnastics slipped away in a tumble from the uneven parallel bars. Comaneci, who couldn't improve on her perfect routines at the 1976 Olympics and here on Monday, finished fourth in the competition won by the awesome Soviets.

But the acrobatic Romanian was to get a chance for redemption in the individual all-around event today.

The Moscow Olympics today will also begin to see if the second lesson is true when Sebastian Coe and Steve Ovett, two running Britons engaged in a running feud, embark on their collision course.

Among the events in today's opening Olympic track and field session are finals in the women's shot put, the men's 20-kilometer walk and the women's pentathlon, plus the first heats for the men's 800-meter race. Coe is the world record holder in this event (1:42.4), with Ovett right on his heels. The semifinals are Friday and the long-awaited final Saturday.

"I'd like to think I'm well-prepared," said Coe. Ovett predicted his chance of winning the 800 is about 50 percent.

If all goes as planned and they meet in Saturday's final, then their next confrontation would be next week in the 1,500 meters, in which they share the world record of 3:32.1.

Since no one has ever run a faster 1,500 than the two Britons, a case could be made for them being the best middle-distance runners of alltime. Throw in the facts they don't take tea together and they've only raced twice against each other, and you have a couple of "Races of the Century" coming up.

Oops, there's that big buildup again. Well, better to wax hyperbolic about races than to write about the conditions here at these first Games behind the Iron Curtain, says Vladimir Popov, vice president of the Moscow Olympic Organizing Committee.

On a day when sports — and not politics — managed to dominate, it was Popov who raised the possibility of deporting journalists for negative reporting. Popov was critical of western press coverage that has included stories on the stringent Soviet security here and the police's manhandling of an Italian gay rights demonstrator.

"You may be sure that if the national dignity of the host country has been offended, we shall demand that resolute sanctions should be taken against these journalists," Popov said through an interpreter at a news conference.

Citing the precedent of two reporters he said were sent packing from the Mexico City Games in 1968, Popov said it could happen again if "journalists have stepped beyond the limits of elementary decency and tact." But he said such an ouster would have to be made by the International Olympic Committee, not the Soviets.

It isn't any exaggeration to report that the Soviets and their comrades from East Germany are turning these Games into their personal playthings. After Wednesday, the fourth day of competition, the Soviets led with 17 gold and 32 total medals. East Germany had 26 medals, six of them gold. Next was Hungary and Bulgaria, each with seven medals.

Soviet diver Aleksander Portnov won the springboard event, but he won't receive his gold medal until Friday because of a protest that was turned down by the International Swimming Federation Wednesday night. Other divers had protested when Portnov was allowed to repeat a dive after complaining that crowd noise distracted him on an earlier attempt.

The Soviets were favored today in both the men's and women's all-around gymnastic events, while the East Germans and Soviets were solid choices in tonight's four swimming finals.

More than any other area, the swimming pool has felt the impact of the boycotting Americans. The American men won 12 of the 13 swimming events contested four years ago at Montreal. Although the East Germans and Soviets have powerful swimming programs, an American presence probably would have cut into their pool domination.

In fact, only three swimmers have cracked the Soviet-East German control, and two of them got their scholastic swimming training in the states.

Rain Brings Delays; Pirates Playoff Bye

The rain proved a blessing for more than just the farmers as it brought East Carolina's baseball team a second place finish in the Summer Collegiate League.

The Pirates were scheduled to play host to Louisburg last night and a loss would have dropped them to 18-12 and into a second place tie with UNC-Wilmington. Having defeated ECU five-out-of-six games this summer, the Seahawks would have taken second and the first-round bye in the league tournament.

As it stands, ECU will play the winner of Thursday's North Carolina-UNC-W game Friday at 4 p.m. in Louisburg. Louisburg will face the Campbell-N.C. Wesleyan winner. The losers will square off at 7:30 in the double-elimination playoff.

In other rainouts Wednesday:

•The scheduled Greenville Tar Heel-Greenville North State fight for the District IV Area II Little League Championship will be played tonight at 5 p.m. at the Elm Street Field. The winner play the Area I champ Friday in Havelock at 5 p.m.

•The opening round of Babe Ruth State Championship in Kinston has been reset for today. The Greenville team will play tonight at 6 p.m.

•The recreation softball playoffs and makeup games were all rained out and all City League playoff games scheduled for Wednesday will be played tonight. Makeup games in the Ladies League will be played tonight while Industrial League makeup games are reset for Friday.

The Industrial League tournament will start Monday and the Ladies' League tournament is set for Tuesday.

Coe-Ovett

British Pair Battle Tonight In 800 Meters

MOSCOW (AP) — The mental war is over between Sebastian Coe and Steve Ovett, and now it's time for physical competition.

The two Britons, considered the world's best middle-distance runners, have been waging a battle of words for a long time. Tonight, they go into action.

It's Round One of the Olympic 800-meter race, and Coe, the world record holder with a time of 1 minute, 42.4 seconds, and Ovett, his dogged rival, are expected to move easily through their heats and into Friday's semifinals. The final, their first encounter at this distance in two years, is set for Saturday.

The skirmishing resumes again next Wednesday, in the first round of the 1,500-meter race. The semifinals are scheduled for July 31 and the final on Aug. 1.

Coe is the favorite in the 800 and Ovett is the choice in the 1,500 in which the pair share the world record of 3:32.1. Surprisingly, Coe has not run a 1,500 this year, but he is not worried.

"I like to think I'm well-prepared for both events," he said.

But he added, "I haven't gotten down to thinking about my chances in either."

Ovett has taken care of that. He has said that his chance of winning the 800 is about 50 percent and his chance of winning the 1,500 is about 90 percent. He has not lost a 1,500 since 1977 when Steve Scott of the United States beat him at Kingston, Jamaica. Since then, he has won 28 races at that distance.

Scott and other American

Olympians are not competing in the Games because of the U.S. boycott, a protest of the Soviets' intervention in Afghanistan.

Should either of the Britons win both events, it would be the first time a runner has doubled in those races in the Games since 1964 when Peter Snell of New Zealand accomplished the feat.

The man who beat both Coe and Ovett in the 800 at the 1978 European Championships — Olaf Beyer of East Germany — also is entered in the race, as is 1976 Olympic champion Alberto Juantorena of Cuba. Agberto Gilmaraes of Brazil, Owen Hamilton of Jamaica, Andreas Busse of East Germany and Carlo Grippi of Italy.

Juantorena is trying, under the most difficult of circumstances, to repeat his 400 and 800 double of four years ago. He underwent a tendon operation in March and has not run a race this year.

Another notable doubler is Lasse Viren of Finland. The modern-day "Flying Finn" — the original was the legendary Paavo Nurmi — will be shooting for victories in the 10,000 and marathon. In each of the

Low Scores Seen At Hartford

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Talk had it that scores at the 1980 Greater Hartford Open would be very low this year, and some golfers point to the excellent condition of the course as the reason for their opinions.

The $300,000 tournament, officially known as the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open, began today at the Wethersfield Country club. More than 150 professional golfers will be shooting for the top prize of $54,000 on the par-71 course.

"The course is very good," Hubert Green said Wednesday. Green, who tied for eighth in last year's GHO, said he expects to do well in the tournament but stopped short of making a prediction.

Defending champion Jerry McGee won the tournament with a 17-under-par 267 last year, but he said it would take 20-under to win this year. And Lee Trevino, who won the GHO in 1972, agreed.

"I had been saying that an 18-under would win here," Trevino said, "but I think now it will take a 20, maybe even a 22 to win."

Trevino said he decided to change his prediction after playing in a rain-delayed, nine-hole Pro-Am event. Trevino said the half-inch of rain that fell Wednesday morning made an already excellent course even better.

"It will be impossible to hide the flag now because of the rain," Trevino said. "You can stop the ball dead," which will improve scores, he said.

Trevino later called the course an "ego builder," and if he's correct then the GHO may be just what the ailing McGee may need.

Coming off his best year as a pro in 1979, when he won two tournaments and more than $166,000, McGee said 1980 has been "kind of a disappointment."

He came into the GHO with only $19,028, good for 104th on the PGA money leaders list.

The reason for McGee's disappointing play is hypoglycemia, a low blood-sugar illness that he says causes his "dizziness, weakness" and blurry vision. The dizzy spells are not limited to his time on the golf course, but McGee said he usually experiences an attack anywhere from the seventh hole on.

To combat his medical problem, McGee's doctors have told him to eat while playing.

Guidry 'Back', Shuts Out Milwaukee

By Associated Press
After giving some serious thought to his recent pitching problems, Ron Guidry went out and gave the rest of the American League something to think about.

Shelled in the second inning of his last outing — his earliest kayo ever — and saddled with a personal two-game losing streak, Guidry resurfaced with only two days' rest Wednesday night and hurled a four-hit shutout as the New York Yankees blanked the Milwaukee Brewers 4-0.

"I thought about it all day. I thought about it all week," Guidry said. "I felt I lacked going after the hitters. I'm going to throw the fast ball and slider as hard as I can. It's good to see that they haven't left."

Elsewhere, the Kansas City Royals trounced the Chicago White Sox 9-2, the Boston Red Sox pounded the Texas Rangers 12-5, the Baltimore Orioles edged the Minnesota Twins 8-7, the Detroit Tigers nipped the California Angels 7-6, the Oakland A's downed the Toronto Blue Jays 6-2 and the Cleveland Indians outslugged the Seattle Mariners 12-6 in 11 innings.

In recording his third shutout of the season, Guidry, 11-6, struck out six, walked one and was in trouble only in the fifth inning when he retired Buck Martinez for the final out with runners at second and third.

"I was determined to get ahead of the hitters tonight," he said. "I knew if I could make my slider work that I had a good breaking pitch and

I could get a lot of their hitters to pop the ball up.

"If I throw my fast ball or slider right, they can't hit. They couldn't hit it then (1978, when he was 25-3 and won the Cy Young Award) and they can't hit it now.

"I feel next time I can go out with the same attitude. At least I'll have the main weapon. I'll try to blow the ball by them. Every time I threw the slider I tried to get my arm as high as I could and get the ball down. I'm just going to take the same attitude as in 1978.

"I was amazed at the mail I got. People were worrying about me. They said they saw Sandy Koufax when he couldn't get the ball over the plate and Whitey Ford when he wasn't winning. I didn't get too far down; it was only a two-game slump." The Yankees scored off Moose Haas in the fourth inning on Graig Nettles' double, a wild pitch and Jim Spencer's sacrifice fly. In the fifth, Bucky Dent doubled and scored on a single by Bobby Murcer, who stole second and scored on Oscar Gamble's single.

Royals 9, White Sox 2
Larry Gura, who leads the league with a 2.22 earned run average, worked seven innings for his seventh consecutive victory and 13th in 17 decisions.

The Royals rapped out 15 hits, with every starter collecting at least one hit and all but two driving in a run, including homers by U.L. Washington, Willie Aikens and George Brett. A year ago, Gura struggled to a 13-12 record with a 4.47 ERA. "I'm really not pitching that differently," he said. "It's just the little things."

Red Sox 12, Rangers 5
Tony Perez triggered a five-run seventh inning with a homer and rookie Dave Stapleton capped the rally with a three-run double. The Red Sox bounced back from a 4-2 deficit behind the relief pitching of Dick Drago, who allowed one run and three hits over the final five innings. The Red Sox wrapped it up with four runs in the eighth, two on a double by Dwight Evans.

Orioles 8, Twins 7
Dan Graham continued to haunt his old club, driving in three runs for a total of 13 in his last three games, all against Minnesota. Ken Singleton drove in two runs and had four singles to pace a 12-hit attack.

Graham, who was hitless in four at-bats with Minnesota last season and was acquired by the Orioles in December, hit sacrifice flies in the first and seventh innings and delivered an RBI single in the third.

Tigers 7, Angels 6

California third baseman Carney Lansford's throwing error with two out in the ninth inning allowed the winning run to score. Lansford fielded pinch-hitter Champ Summers' hopper and threw the ball into right field trying for an in-ning-ending force at second after two-out singles by Cowens and Richie Hebner. Jason Thompson hit two homers for the Angels, who have dropped their last nine series at home.

A's 6, Blue Jays 2
Rookie Jeff Cox stroked three hits and drove in his first two major league runs and Tony Armas cracked his 22nd homer. Cox, hitting only 209 coming into the game, drove in the first run with a third-inning double and added an RBI single in the fourth after Armas opened the inning with his homer.

Indians 12, Mariners 6
Miguel Dilone and Jorge Orta cracked run-scoring doubles and Joe Charboneau belted a grand slam homer as Cleveland erupted for seven runs in the top of the 11th inning. Victor Cruz, who struck out Willie Horton and Tom Paciorek with the bases loaded in the bottom of the ninth, got the victory.

Templeton Breaks Thumb Cards Get Break Of Wrong Kind

By The Associated Press
For much of the season, the St. Louis Cardinals have been waiting for the breaks to come their way. On Wednesday night they got the worst kind of break — but it could be a big break for Mike Phillips.

Garry Templeton, who tripled in the first and second innings to raise his batting average to .326 with 133 hits — both tops in the National League — broke his left thumb in the third inning and will be sidelined for perhaps four weeks.

"This is the worst time it could have happened," said teammate Ken Reitz, "just when we were trying to make a bid for 500."

With their 7-3 triumph over Los Angeles, their fourth consecutive victory and seventh in the last nine games, the Cards are 43-51 and fifth in the East, 9½ games out of first place.

"We know we've got Mike, too," Reitz said of Phillips, a bench-rider with a .171 average this year. "He'll be able to do a good job. Phillips in the past has always come in and done a good job."

In fact, Phillips took over for six games last year when Templeton hurt his wrist and the Cards won five of the six.

"I'll do my best," Phillips said. "If things get off to a good start, we'll be alright."

Templeton's triples helped the Cards build a 5-0 lead against Bob Welch. In the third inning, though, he hit a roller down the first base line. Welch fielded it, then it became a race down the line. Templeton, trying to avoid the Dodger pitcher, swerved to his right, stumbled, then stuck out his left hand to tag the bag and jammed his thumb in the process.

"I don't even know how it happened," he said. "I just fell and when I got up it hurt. It felt like a sprain."

"That's a tough break for them," said Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda. "The kid was hustling his tail off and he winds up getting hurt. I hope he comes back soon."

After Templeton's first-inning triple, singles by Leon Durham, Ted Simmons and George Hendrick made it 2-0. And in the second, Ken Oberkfell walked, Templeton tripled, Durham walked, Keith Hernandez hit an RBI grounder and Simmons doubled for another run. Dane Iorg had a two-run double in the fourth as the Cards handed the Dodgers their 10th loss in 13 games.

Braves 6, Expos 5
Gary Matthews punched a bases-loaded single in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Braves their fifth victory in their last six games.

"I just tried to hit the ball hard," Matthews said. "I was confident when I went up there. It doesn't matter who drives in the winning run, but this is what's it's all about — winning."

It appeared Jeff Burroughs had driven in the Braves' winning run with a three-run double in the eighth inning. But Montreal tied it in the top of the ninth on Jerry White's sacrifice fly.

Giants 14, Cubs 6
Jack Clark's four RBIs and Mike Ivie's three led a 21-hit San Francisco assault against the Cubs.

Reds 7, Phillies 3
"We know we're certainly not as bad as we've played the last 10 days," Philadelphia Manager Dallas Green said after the Phils lost their sixth consecutive game and ninth in the last 12.

Padres 3, Pirates 2
Jerry Mumphrey's second RBI of the game, a tie-breaking single in the eighth inning, enabled San Diego to break a three-game losing streak and keep Pittsburgh from widening its one-game lead over Montreal in the East.

Gene Richards, who singled and scored one of the Padres' two first-inning runs on Mumphrey's grounder, singled to open the ninth and was bunted to second before Mumphrey drilled his game-winner up the middle.

Mets 4, Astros 3
The Mets, who had won only one of eight games against Houston this year, finally got a win in the Astrodome when Elliott Maddox tripled in the ninth inning and scored on pinch-hitter Jerry Morales' sacrifice fly.

It also ended New York's three-game losing streak, handed reliever Frank Lacorte his first loss after six wins and left the Astros 2½ games ahead of second-place Los Angeles in the West. The Houston highlight of the game was Cesar Cedeno's triple in the eighth inning, his 1,500th career hit, a club record.

Duran-Ray Show Points To Free TV Problems

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

Last Saturday, nearly one month after Roberto Duran proved he was more macho than Sugar Ray Leonard, the American TV viewer was able to see the fight for free on ABC. Although this doesn't prove sports on free TV is in serious trouble, it points up some real danger signals.

At a recent press conference, Fred Pierce, president of ABC-TV, warned that the lucrative Duran-Leonard closed-circuit title fight was "the start of the have and have-not era of television."

One million people (paying roughly $20 each) saw the fight; 49 million did not, he said.

"Pay television is far beyond the threat stage now," Pierce said. "Today what you receive free, tomorrow you're going to have to pay for. The big loser is going to be the American viewer."

For the commercial networks to have been competitive with closed circuit, an advertising minute would have had to go for over $550,000. At that price, few sales would have been made and the television network would have seen more red than the combative Duran.

"We'll be hard-pressed to compete for special events," said Jim Spence, senior vice president of ABC Sports.

Certainly for events of the magnitude of Leonard-Duran and Ali-Holmes, when and if, the commercial networks are at a distinct disadvantage. But they still have the edge for showing the major team sports, the major golf and tennis events and the catch-all events seen on the networks' anthology sports shows.

Their interest in these sports, however, may be waning. The networks don't want to finance and promote Sugar Ray Leonard's career and then get his biggest fight on taped delay 29 days later. And how valuable are their national games in baseball or basketball when the rest of the week is filled with dozens of local games on free and cable TV?

Pro basketball's ratings on CBS were up 13 percent, after dropoffs of 20 and 26 percent the previous two seasons. CBS is midway through its four-year, $74 million contract with the National Basketball Association. But CBS and the league have serious concerns about the value of the national package when local games on free and cable TV make Sunday's game less than special.

"I can sit in my apartment and watch 250 NBA games a year without ever leaving my living room," said NA Commissioner Larry O'Brien at the Board of Governors meeting last month. "That may be nice for the fan, but I'm not so sure it's a good thing for the league."

"When you get that many games, it's really hard to identify any one as a Game of the Week, and of course that is of concern to CBS, which pays us a considerable sum and expects something in return."

The best protection is to play a 16-game schedule, put every game on network television and call yourself the National Football League.

Ali Making Sure, Has A Physical Exam

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Muhammad Ali, never at a loss in the confidence department, is taking no chances.

The three-time former heavyweight boxing champion is undergoing medical tests at the Mayo Clinic prior to taking a physical exam in Las Vegas, Nev., next month. He is scheduled to fight WBC champ Larry Holmes in October.

"I think there's something crooked in boxing," said Ali, who is going through comprehensive tests at the world-renowned medical facility. "I came here independently because they (promoters) don't want me to win the title back for a fourth time."

"They might pay somebody off (in Las Vegas) and say I'm hurt just to stop the fight because they know I can beat Larry Holmes," Ali said. "I cut training camp just to come here and prove them wrong."

Many boxing observers have said that the 38-year old Ali would be risking permanent injury if he attempted a comeback against the powerful Holmes. But Ali says that the reputation of the Mayo Clinic is good enough for him.

"These are the best doctors, the best hospital in the world, right?" he asked. "They put their best machines on me and said I'm 100 percent. They can't see why anybody would say I'm not able to fight."

"My kidneys are perfect, my brain in perfect, my blood, my heart, everything. They gave me their stamp of approval."

Ali will conclude his tests today and then return to his Pennsylvania training facility.

Renee Powell

Only Black On Tour Roughing It

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — Renee Powell has been on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour since 1967 and has earned only $37,060.

Divide the two statistics and you have an average annual salary of $3,088. Hardly enough to keep one in gas even before inflation struck, right?

In the case of Powell, who started playing golf at the age of 3 at a club owned by her father, Bill, in East Canton, Ohio, statistics do not tell the story.

"I've played only about six months most of the year since I joined the LPGA," explained the 34-year-old golfer prior to teeing off Thursday morning in a 72-hole, $125,000 tourney at the Meadow Brook Club.

"From 1974 until now, I have been living in England and I have been into more things than just golf. For example, I have been designing sportswear over there and I also have been writing for golf magazines."

"Let's just say that I haven't been dedicated to tournament golf every weekend."

To complicate matters for the only black now on the circuit, Renee had been ill for a good part of 1978 and '79. This resulted in a 35-pound loss in weight.

"It was very discouraging," continued the ex-captain of the women's team at Ohio State. "In 1978 I never touched a club for the entire year."

"You just can't return and pick up where you left off. When I came back, I found that I couldn't even walk a full 18 holes. Last week, when the tour was in Baltimore, I spoke with Frank Robinson (a coach with the Baltimore Orioles) and he gave me a great deal of encouragement. So did Jesse Owens, another good friend, last year."

Doesn't Powell find it tough going up against the likes of Amy Alcott, currently the leading money winner on the tour; Nancy Lopez-Melton, JoAnne Carner and Donna Caponi Young, all entered in the tournament on the par-72, 6,347-yard Meadow Brook course?

"I can't get down on myself and exert a lot of pressure," she said. "If I didn't think I belonged out here, I wouldn't be playing. I just need the competition to get me going once again."

The tournament is sponsored by Western Union International.

Falcons' Top Choice: It's Rough

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — There's an old axiom in sports. No matter how hard you work yourself, a coach will work you harder.

Junior Miller, the Atlanta Falcons' No. 1 draft choice, who has been working out daily during a week-long holdout, got his first taste of being worked on Wednesday.

"It was rough," the 6-foot-4 tight end said after the day's second practice. "A little bit like I expected, but I thought maybe I was in better shape. I guess they're working me out a little harder than I worked out."

Then, as he headed for the shower, receivers coach Jimmy Raye sent him out to catch passes from the Falcons' passing machine.

The newly signed No. 1 draft choice from Nebraska was the only player on the field.

"I know I'm just like any other player," Miller said later when asked if the Falcons were not throwing to their tight ends much Wednesday in order for him to avoid contact on his first day in camp.

"I don't think that was the case," he said. "Just because I'm a first-rounder doesn't mean I should be treated any different."

Coach Leeman Bennett said it appeared Miller had been working himself pretty hard.

"To me, it looked like he was in pretty good condition," Bennett said. "From what I saw today he is a tremendous athlete and he can do what we want him to do. Just eyeballing him he looked a lot better today than he did in minicamp."

Miller weighed 10 pounds less than he did in minicamp two months ago.

The only holdout as the Falcons' 6 p.m. reporting deadline passed was Alfred Jenkins, who visited camp Wednesday, but said he was not ready to sign a contract.

All the other veterans, many of whom have been in camp, were to join workouts today.

Bennett said Jeff Mellow, who is penciled in at starting defensive end in the 3-4 lineup, has a stretched ligament in a knee and "could miss a few days or a few weeks."

Mellow underwent toe surgery in the off-season. He hurt the knee in a workout Tuesday.

"I had five toe operations to practice 34 minutes," he said.

Meanwhile, last year's No. 1 draft choice, Don Smith, is penciled in at middle guard on defense and Wilson Faurmuina, who has been running for two days to shed the nine pounds needed to make his assigned reporting weight of 267, is penciled in at the other end spot.

Cal Star's Doubts Turn To Gold

MOSCOW (AP) — Par Arvidsson had to beat his own self-doubts in a hard-won swimming triumph in Olympic Games 100-meter butterfly.

"After the 200-butterfly (in which he finished seventh after being favored to win), I knew I had not reached my peak of training," said the Swedish star from the University of California as he reflected on his come-from-behind effort which won a gold medal Wednesday night.

"I am the world record holder, everyone expected me to win, and the knowledge that I had not reached my peak served to increase the pressure," Arvidsson added. "I began to doubt my ability. I believe the doubts were my hardest competitor tonight."

Before the Olympics, Arvidsson's world record of 54.15 seconds and the best times of eight Americans stood as the best in the world 100-butterfly rankings.

With the United States boycotting because of the Soviet presence in Afghanistan, Arvidsson was able to win the Olympic gold despite being off form.

His Olympic time 54.92 was only two-hundredths of a second better than silver-medal winner Roger Pyttel of East Germany. David Lopez of Spain captured the bronze in 55.13.

Arvidsson's less-than-peak performance allowed the eight-year old Olympic record of 54.27 of Mark Spitz to stay in the books. The best U.S. time in the event this year is 54.43 by Joe Bottom of San Ramon, Calif.

One swimmer who hasn't been off form this week is Rica Reinisch of East Germany. She won her second gold medal Wednesday night, breaking or equaling the world record for the women's 100 backstroke for the third time.

Reinisch tied the world record 1:01.51 on Sunday as the East Germans won the women's medley relay, broke it by one-hundredth two nights later in the 100-backstroke preliminary and lowered it to 1:00.86 in the final to lead a 1-2-3 East German sweep.

Ina Cleber won the silver and Petra Riedel took the bronze.

"When I set the world record in the preliminaries, I knew I could go faster," Reinisch said. "I was aiming for another one today."

The victory by Reinisch was the sixth in a row during the Games for the East German women, but a medal-sweep by the Soviet Union in the 200 breaststroke ended the streak.

Lina Kachushite won the gold in 2:29.54 and Svetlana Barganova the silver in 2:29.61, both breaking the Olympic record of 2:29.77 set by Barganova in the preliminary. Ylva Bogdanova captured the bronze 2:32.39.

Both Reinisch and Kachushite were far ahead of U.S. standards this year. Linda Jezek of Mission Viejo, Calif., has an American best of 1:03.06 in the backstroke and Tracy Caulkins of Nashville, Tenn., set an American record of 2:33.06 in the breaststroke last April.

Vladimir Salnikov and Sergei Koplakov of the Soviet Union added a relay gold medal to the individual golds they won earlier this week. They joined with Andrei Krylov and Ivor Stokolkin to win the 800 freestyle relay. East Germany was second and Brazil third.

Comaneci Falls

100-meter butterfly in 54.92 seconds Wednesday. It is worth noting, American, he said he would have been proud to surpass President Carter's boycott.

Earlier in the competition, Great Britain's Duncan Gooden, who swam three years for North Carolina State, and Ping Baron of Sweden joined Arvidsson as the only swimmers to win medals not from East Germany or the Soviet Union.

The East German women won another swimming gold when Rina Reinisch lowered her world record in the 100-meter backstroke to 1:00.86. But the flying frauleins' bid for all swimming gold medals was foiled by a Soviet sweep in the 200-meter breaststroke, as Lina Kachushite won in 2:29.54, an Olympic record considerably better than the best American time of the year, Tracy Caulkins' 2:33.06.

But in gymnastics, nobody is in the same league with the Soviets, who send out waves of young teen-agers who all look like the girl next door, except that they all can jump over the roof. Only their Eurasian beauty Nelli Kim, who will turn 15 this month, is cast from a different mold.

But even though she only finished sixth behind two Soviet teammates in individual scoring, Kim is the unmitigated team leader. When the triple gold medalist of the Montreal Games sealed the Soviet victory Wednesday with a 9.95 in the floor exercises, she was swept into the arms of her teammates and began sobbing tears of joy.

Soviet Coach Aman Shaniyazov called Kim the captain of the squad. "She helps me in all points of training," he said. "She is very friendly to the other girls and teaches them in training. The others regard her as a close friend."

Kim, in turn, like many Soviet athletes, spreads the praise around. "The success of the Soviet team can be explained by the socialist system and the coaches we have," she says.

Talent helps, and the Soviets are deep and powerful. Natalia Shaposhniova, who finished second, the Soviet, avenged their loss to Romania at the 1979 world championships by totaling 394.90 points and winning the Olympic team title for the eighth consecutive time. Romania was second and East Germany took the bronze.

Comaneci, who won the all-around gold medal in the uneven bars and balance beam at Montreal, was the team's top scorer by one-tenth of a point over East Germany's Mari Gnauck going into the eighth and final maneuver of the two-day event. But the 18-year-old with the weary eyes held her grip while trying to flip from the higher to the lower bar and fell on her stomach.

Low Prices And High Costs Squeezing Fishermen

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer
GLOUCESTER, Mass. (AP) — For as long as most of them can remember, New England fishermen had the same complaint: too few fish.

Three years ago, the United States imposed a 200-mile fishing limit and eliminated competition from the Soviets and Europeans whose voracious fleets swept the seas clean. Now New England fishermen have a new complaint: too many fish. Prices have crashed during the past few months, and the dream of a profitable rebirth for their ancient industry has been wrecked by the forces of supply and demand.

At 4 a.m. every day, Charles Frontiero and his son and a mate churn out of Gloucester Harbor aboard the old wooden Madrugador. And at 4 p.m., they return with their day's catch of flounder. At the end of a week, each man took home $188. "A hundred and eighty-eight dollars," Frontiero repeated with disgust. "A week's pay. What can you do with that?" For hundreds of other fishermen in Gloucester, a city that has lived on fishing for 357 years, the story is the same. It is the same at other big and little fishing ports along the New England coast. The United States assumed jurisdiction over all fishing within 200 miles of its shores in 1977. Virtually all foreigners who had dominated these fishing grounds for decades were banned.

For the first time in memory, the crusty, antiquated New England fishing fleet began to grow. Backed by federal loans, shipyards turned out big, gleaming steel ships that cost $1 million or more. The number of fishing boats based in the region increased 30 percent to almost 800. New fishermen joined old fishermen on the seas.

But while the catches of fresh fish have steadily increased, demand has not. So when the recession struck, fish prices abruptly fell. Around February, the price of fish on the docks dropped from about 40 cents a pound to about 10 cents.

"The fish prices go up and down, but mostly down," said Frontiero, who has been fishing for 47 of his 60 years. "We're making a third of what we should be making. There's too damned many boats. That's the cause of all our problems. The more boats there are, the worse it's going to be."

Jeff Tutein, 24, stood on the wharf sewing new nets for the Stella G. Like most New England fishermen, he works for a share of the catch, not an hourly wage. Until recently, he and his mates were getting 30 cents a pound for whiting, enough to make a decent living. "But then the price went to eight cents, just like that," he said.

So they were outfitting the boat to catch bottom-feeding fish — mostly cod, flounder and haddock. The price of these fish is depressed, too, and in recent weeks they have been scarce.

"You have to do something," he complained. "The ground fish haven't been around either, but you have to try it. You can't stay home."

Nearby, skipper Salvador Albano was getting the Annie Marie ready to sail for Georges Bank. "We're working for nothing," he lamented. "We stay out eight, 10 days. Then we come back to Gloucester and get 10 cents a pound." As on all boats, the Annie Marie's mortgage and insurance payments and other expenses must be met before the crew is paid. And the price of diesel fuel, ice and food has risen steadily.

"I don't know what's going on in America," Albano said. "Everything else is up, and the price of fish is down. It's futile."

Last month, 50 scallopers and 130 draggers in New Bedford stopped fishing for a month to protest the low prices. But there was still so much fish available that their catches were not missed. And the low prices never budged.

Because the dockside cost of fish is such a small part of the retail price, the cost of fish in markets and restaurants has not dropped correspondingly.

During better times a couple of years ago, fishermen on large trawlers were earning $35,000 a year; the pay for scallopers reached $50,000.

But Joseph Mueller, an economist with the National Marine Fisheries Service, says fishermen's earnings have been declining since 1978. And this year, things have gotten decidedly worse. Besides the recession, demand for New England's fresh fish is being dampened by competition from imported frozen fish and relatively cheap chicken and pork.

"All of these factors were resulting in pressure at the vessel level to drive prices down," he said. "Combined with that, fishermen were experiencing considerable cost increases. They are getting caught in a real cost-price squeeze. There isn't any single culprit, but certainly the big expansion of the fleet has played a large role."

And Mueller sees no rise in prices anytime soon. Any recovery will be slowed by the large catches of the growing fishing fleet.

Foreign Friendship Is Still Suspect In China

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer
CHENGDU, China (AP) — Comrade Wu, a bespectacled university professor, stopped a foreigner walking down a street one evening. "Now it's all right for us to contact foreign friends," he said. "Now we Chinese are free to speak what's in our hearts."

He then added hastily: "Of course, I had to have permission to talk to foreigners or I couldn't possibly dream of doing it. My party leader said it was all right for me to practice English."

Comrade Wu — a pseudonym for the mild-looking, middle-age man — and many other Chinese haunt the streets near a Chengdu hotel, waiting for foreigners. Wu is eager for fresh ideas and asks what foreigners think about China. He listens thoughtfully then speaks a caveat.

"Please," he said urgently, "don't try to contact me at my school. And if you write to me, don't write in English."

He carefully wrote his address in Chinese on an envelope: "Here. You can mail this. That's what my other foreign friends do."

tenced to 15 years in prison for allegedly trying to subvert the socialist system and for giving military information to a foreigner. Since then, reporters have found some Chinese less willing to talk. Last month a French journalist reported that just as he was meeting a Chinese family to take them to his home for dinner, the man was arrested by plainclothes police. He was pushed roughly into a jeep and driven away.

The reporter photographed the jeep but an angry crowd made him give up his film. No public explanation was given. Chinese young people and foreign students used to mingle in the often rowdy Peace Cafe in Peking. Last winter it was closed down.

Chinese seldom show up at the Wednesday disco at Peking's Minzhu Hotel these days. To go they must have permission from their work units and show identification. Nor are foreigners permitted to attend most Chinese dances. At Peking's International Club, foreigners were not even permitted to stand in the doorway and watch for a few minutes. In Hohhot, Inner Mongolia, doors were chained after foreigners asked to watch.

It also is required that all Chinese visitors identify themselves or show identification before entering hotels where foreigners stay. One youth commented, "If you go to a hotel to see foreigners and just chat too many times, and if you don't have official business, someone is likely to ask what you're doing. They'll want to know what you're talking to them about."

In Chengdu, Wu insisted he doesn't mind that he can't walk into a hotel and talk with foreigners. "It's for their own protection," he said obliquely. "The best way to contact Chinese," he said, "is in a public place with lots of people, a park or an airport, and to keep walking." Wu often leads foreigners to a crowded tea house and asks how socialism compares with capitalism. One foreigner suggested that many Chinese are wary of telling other Chinese what they really think because they fear they might be reported, as they were in the past.

"That shows a profound understanding," said Wu. "It is a very complicated situation." Some young people, however, don't seem to mind disapproval. They throng hotel gates, waiting for foreigners to go for an evening stroll. They guide them to a crowded park along a canal.

Their talk is animated and they freely give their Anglicized names, given by their English teachers. "We're not supposed to talk to you," said one 18-year-old. "They said we should study but we're not afraid. ... Tell us about the trial of Wei Jingsheng. We didn't hear much about it. ... Yes, many young people have their doubts about everything, including socialism."

Like millions of others, he said, he had been sent to the countryside during the cultural revolution. "We're not afraid of talking to you," he said. "After the cultural revolution, there's not much more they can do to us."

House Tests Soviet Grain Embargo, And Approves

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's Soviet grain embargo has survived its first major test in the House since public support for the policy began eroding this spring.

In a series of lopsided votes Wednesday, the House rejected attempts aimed at forcing Carter to end the sales suspension that critics claim has depressed prices for farmers who already face a 20 percent decline in income this year.

Invoked by Carter Jan. 7 in retaliation for the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, the embargo blocked the sale of 17 million metric tons of grain to Russia this year. It allowed the sale, however, of another 8 million tons under a long-term trade agreement and the administration says it will sell 8 million more tons under the same agreement beginning in October.

During the first 30 days of the embargo, Congress did not use its authority to end it. At the time the nation's major farm organizations were behind the move.

Since then, however, that support has eroded despite persistent claims by the administration that it has effectively disrupted Soviet food supplies.

The series of proposals, all defeated by more than 100 votes, were amendments to the $8.6 billion appropriations bill funding the Commerce Department and other federal agencies beginning in October. Specifically, they would have prohibited the Commerce budget to be used to enforce the embargo.

"The administration has not followed through on its commitment to protect the American farmers," Rep. Tom Hagedorn, R-Minn., said Wednesday, "and consequently today we've got the American farmers paying the price."

Although legislators opposing the attempt to end the presidential action also have been critical of the embargo, they claimed the proposals before them would have done nothing to resume full grain trade with the Soviets. They also said going on record against the embargo could undermine the nation's foreign policy and complicate relations with U.S. allies.

"The worst fraud we could allow ourselves to perpetrate on the American farmer is that this will stop any effort to embargo grain exports," said Agriculture Committee Chairman Thomas Foley, D-Wash., an embargo opponent. Nothing in the proposals could force the issuance of export licenses needed to send grain to Russia.

"Whatever the effect is, and some will differ on the legal effect," countered Rep. Harold Volkmer, D-Mo., "one thing is for sure — it will give a signal to the American people of the House feeling on the issue."

Foley and Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., said they will hold joint hearings in the coming weeks on the embargo question.

"We have a president who's been prone to errors," said Illinois Republican Edward Derwinski. "Yet in this case he's been strong. He's been tough. He's stuck to his guns and it's worked. This is no time to deny this president or any president a key tool."

"We must stand behind the president until the Russians make some good faith effort," said Rep. William Gooding, R-Pa. The official Soviet news agency Tass, in a report Wednesday, called the embargo an attempt at economic blackmail that is "doomed to failure."

"In an attempt to secure the realization of their selfish goals, the leaders of the administration do not reckon with the Americans' vital interests," the Tass report said.

Soviet Troops Given Armored Vests For Fighting Afghans

By FREDS HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Russians have started issuing armor vests to their soldiers in Afghanistan to protect them from sharpshooting rebel tribesmen, U.S. sources report.

The vests are described as similar to the "flak jackets" worn by U.S. soldiers while fighting in Vietnam.

Experts said such body armor usually will stop rifle bullets unless they are fired at close range.

"The partisans are extremely effective marksmen," said one intelligence source. "They've been picking off Russians at long range."

Despite persistent rumors that Afghan rebels have been getting arms aid from outside the country, U.S. intelligence sources said tribesmen still are using mostly old single-shot, bolt-action Enfield rifles which they've had for years.

Some analysts suggest the issuance of protective vests could be a sign the Russians may be preparing to move deeper into Afghanistan's mountains to get at the stubborn tribesmen.

The Soviet Army has concentrated most of its 80,000-man force in Afghanistan in controlling the main cities and securing principal roads, although it has widened its operations somewhat in recent months.

So far, the sources said, there are no indications of a forerunner of a reinforcement from Russia which might be a forerunner of a major Soviet offensive. However, there are an estimated 40,000 Soviet troops in nearby provinces and they could be sent into Afghanistan without much visible preparation.

U.S. intelligence sources said rebel tribesmen still appear to be moving back and forth across the Pakistan border despite antipersonnel mines dropped recently by Soviet helicopters in mountain passes separating the countries.

"But there may be a lot more dead partisans," said a military source.

The mines are reported to resemble rocks, making them difficult to detect in that terrain even in daylight. They are believed to have severely limited night movements across the border.

Meanwhile, there are growing reports of Russian construction, indicating Soviet forces are settling in for a long occupation.

A pipeline is under construction from Termez in southern Russia toward Pol-e-Khomi. Eventually, the pipeline is expected to extend to the Kabul area. This would solve what analysts say is Russia's biggest logistics problem, supplying fuel for its aircraft and armored vehicles.

Also, Russian engineers are reported improving facilities at eight Afghan airfields from which some 200 Soviet helicopters, mostly gunships, have been flying against the rebels.

Sit-In Tactics By Communists

Communist Workers Party members hit Chicago police with sticks and placards and barricaded themselves in a federal office in New York for six hours during demonstrations aimed at state and federal officials in a dozen cities, officials said.

The sit-ins and picketing were staged Wednesday to protest what the CWP said was the government's role in the slaying of five comrades at an anti-Ku Klux Klan rally in Greensboro last November.

Five demonstrators were arrested in Chicago, and seven in New York.

Protests also occurred in Charlotte and Greensboro, Detroit, Philadelphia, Denver, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Baltimore and Washington, according to Les Stanford, a spokesman for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms in Washington, D.C.

In Chicago, a probable cause hearing was set for Friday for five CWP members arrested after a scuffle as demonstrators were being removed from the Kluczynski Federal Building.

In New York, seven CWP members were arraigned Wednesday night on charges of interfering with federal officers after barricading themselves inside ATF offices with file cabinets and chairs. They surrendered without incident.

Demonstrators disrupted a news conference in Raleigh by Gov. Jim Hunt and were "exceptionally loud, profane and abusive" when they were asked to disband a protest in Charlotte, said John Westra, special agent in charge of the Charlotte ATF office.

Some 15 sign-carrying CWP members eventually left the office without a confrontation, he said.

Protestors in Greensboro shouted accusations at U.S. Attorney Henry M. "Mickey" Michaux as he entered his office.

Two CWP members called Hunt a "murderer" during a news conference. Dale Sampson, widow of one of the five slain communist sympathizers, shouted at Hunt. "You have the blood of my husband on your hands."

The killings occurred Nov. 3 at a "Death to the Klan" rally staged by the CWP. Six Ku Klux Klansmen and American Nazis, charged with murder in connection with the slayings, currently are on trial in Greensboro.

One of the Nazi defendants, Roland Wayne Wood, told the Greensboro Record last Tuesday that Bernard Butkovitch, an ATF agent, had urged him to take a pistol to the rally.

The story said Butkovitch had infiltrated the Forsyth County unit of the American Nazi Party and witnessed the planning of the motorcade.

Butkovitch has declined comment, and the ATF has said that an investigation of the undercover agent revealed he had done nothing improper.

Summer Boosts N.C. Jobless

RALEIGH — Summer job-seekers and recent school graduates pushed North Carolina's June unemployment rate to 7.4 percent, 4 percent below the national rate of 7.8 percent, the state Employment Security Commission reported today.

The state unemployment rate for May was 6 percent, compared to the national rate of 7 percent. State unemployment last June was 138,700 or 5 percent.

While unemployment increased dramatically, 12,000 more people were working in June than in May.

The number of unemployed increased 41,800, from 167,000 in May to 208,800 in June this year. At the same time, the total number of people in the labor force and the number of those employed also rose. The labor force increased by 53,800, from 2,765,600 in May to 2,819,400 in June, the commission reported. The number of employed rose from 2,598,600 in May to 2,610,600 in June.

"This increase in the unemployment rate for June is more than we had expected, but it is caused primarily by the tremendous flood of students entering the labor market at a time when industry is cutting back on hiring and laying off workers," Commission Chairman J.B. Archer said.

While the rate reached its highest June point since June 1975's rate of 8.9 percent, it did not come close to March, 1975 rate of 11.9 percent.

Traditionally during the summer months, students who are not covered by unemployment insurance, compose more than a third of the total number of unemployed persons in the state, Archer said. Last June employers were offering jobs to more of these students. This June they did not offer as many, he said.

Coupled with a gradual increase in the number of insured unemployed due to layoffs, student unemployment contributed substantially to the 25 percent increase in the unemployment level between May and June. "We expect the rate will go back down in August, because most of these students will stop looking for work," Archer said. While students entering the labor force were the major cause of the increased rate, layoffs in manufacturing industries also contributed to the increase. "There were mixed trends in manufacturing employment which resulted in a net decline of 900 jobs in the manufacturing industries," Archer said.

The furniture industry was down 1.6 percent since May, representing a loss of 1,300 jobs, according to figures compiled by the commission's Bureau of Employment Security Research.

There were 600 jobs in the lumber and wood industry, a decrease of 1.7 percent from May. But the apparel industry was up by .5 percent or 400 jobs over May.

Chemicals, including pharmaceuticals, paints, fertilizers and pesticides, were down 2 percent or 800 jobs.

In the non-manufacturing division, every category showed a slight increase except mining, which stayed even. Construction showed the largest percentage increase of 1.3 percent or 1,600 jobs. Finance, insurance, and real estate were up by 1,200 jobs or 1.2 percent.

There was virtually no change in retail and wholesale trade. The largest employment increase in any single industry was in agriculture, which was up by 20,400 or 23.9 percent.

June's average hourly wage was $5.27, up three cents over May and $.47 from June, 1979.

Total unemployment insurance payments in June measured $19,851,145 up $2,105,124 since May and $12,195,296 since June last year.

Pentagon Sets Test Of Mobilization Ability

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon plans a large-scale exercise late this year to test its belief that it has made "substantial progress" in correcting problems in the nation's military mobilization plans that cropped up during a 1978 test.

"Substantial progress has been achieved in improving mobilization and deployment planning and capabilities, but much remains to be done," said the Pentagon Wednesday in an evaluation of the 1978 exercise.

Undersecretary of Defense Robert W. Komer said in a forward to the report that the 1978 exercise, involving some 2,000 military and civilian officials in 30 federal agencies, "revealed significant difficulties and shortfalls that have to be resolved if we are to reinforce the European theater" quickly against a Russian-led Warsaw Pact attack.

The 1978 test was a "command post" exercise. No troops or equipment were moved.

Wednesday's report buttressed many readiness problems widely reported both before and since the test, including shortages in strategic airlift, sealift, some key air and ground weapons and essential spare parts; and weakness in the military reserves.

The Carter administration has proposed corrective programs that may ultimately cost billions of dollars.

The current registration of youths for the draft "is not a remedy for the current shortfall in pre-trained people required ... in the first few months of combat."

But eventually, the report said, registration and a revitalization of the Selective Service system "will substantially improve ... responsiveness" of the system.

On the civilian side, the report said, the 1978 exercise disclosed that the Labor Department "could not accurately determine" where there are critical shortages of skilled workers in industry.

Early Diagnosis Seen Necessity

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The death rate for people who seek treatment for Rocky Mountain spotted fever should be zero, but deaths from the disease do occur when doctors fail to diagnose it quickly, a disease specialist says.

Between 5 percent and 8 percent of the people contracting spotted fever die. So far this year, 140 cases of the disease have been reported in North Carolina, and seven have died.

"The death rate should be zero," said Dr. Janet Fischer, professor of medicine at the University of North Carolina. "The disease can be treated and therapy administered early is nearly always effective."

However, Ms. Fischer said the disease is not always diagnosed promptly.

"The continuing mortality rate suggests that maybe they (doctors) in North Carolina don't suspect it as early as they should," she said.

In defense of doctors, Ms. Fischer said spotted fever can look like "everything from brain tumors to appendicitis to measles to allergic reactions to viral infections."

And she said there is no early diagnostic test for the disease. All the doctor has to go on is how the patient feels, early signs and if the patient has been bitten by a tick.

Spotted fever is transmitted by ticks, and its symptoms include high fever, severe headaches and a rash. Ms. Fischer said only about half of spotted-fever patients remember being bitten by a tick, and rashes may appear too late for a physician to make a positive diagnosis.

"Therapy should begin within six days. If it does the patient will get well," she said.

Treatment is simple. One of two antibiotics is administered for five to seven days.

Ms. Fischer said doctors should begin treatment even if they only suspect a patient has the disease.

Mexico Sells Tuna Catch

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico has sold most of its tuna catch to Western European nations after the United States boycotted Mexican tuna in retaliation for Mexico's seizure of six California tuna boats, a Mexican legislator said.

Jorge Montufar Araujo, chairman of the House Fishing Commission, said Tuesday he had personally negotiated the sale of 80 per cent of Mexico's catch to Norway, Italy, France and Spain during a trip to Europe last week.

"This virtually nullifies the effects of the boycott imposed by the United States on Mexican tuna exports," he said.

Mexico announced on July 7 that it would bar foreign-owned tuna boats from operating within 200-miles of its coast unless they had special permits.

The 25th of July? Of course. That's the day Branch Banking and Trust opens its new Medical Village Office in Greenville on Stantonsburg Road near Pitt County Memorial Hospital. And the daylong celebration that marks that event will make this the best 25th of July you've ever had.

The festivities get under way at 9 a.m. and go on until 6 p.m. In between, there'll be free refreshments and a free gift just for coming in. You'll also have a chance to win prizes from BB&T's Treasure Chest and to register for some terrific door prizes.

And if you leave your luck at home, you can still select a prize from our Treasure Chest by simply opening a new checking or savings account with $50 or more or by adding $50 or more to an existing savings account.

From 10 a.m. to noon, you can meet East Carolina's new head football coach, Ed Emory. From 2 to 4 p.m., you can see a special weaving demonstration by Greenville artist Myra Sexauer. And all day long, you can get acquainted with some of BB&T's top personalities (our staff — who else?).

So make sure you don't miss the opening of our new Medical Village Office on Stantonsburg Road.

After all, it's a perfect excuse for some holiday-style fun in that long stretch between the Fourth and Labor Day.

And it's a sure sign that nobody works harder for your money than BB&T.

Don't miss the July 25th opening of BB&T's new Medical Village office.

Comedian Peter Sellers Is Dead At 54

LONDON (AP) — Comedian Peter Sellers, British star of more than 40 hit movies that in 20 years made countless millions roar with laughter, died early today without regaining consciousness after a heart attack. He was 54.

Sellers died at 12:28 a.m. in the intensive care unit of London's Middlesex Hospital, 34 hours after suffering his third major heart attack in 16 years.

At his bedside were his fourth wife, actress Lynne Frederick, and two of his three children by previous marriages, Victoria, 15, and Michael, 26.

"Every effort was made to keep his heart going but it just did not respond," a spokesman told reporters. "There was a very rapid deterioration. He had really had all the drugs and all the machines it is possible to have. His death was entirely due to natural causes. His heart just faded away."

The hospital, not far from a movie theater showing the star's latest hit "Being There," had been inundated with telephone calls, telegrams, flowers and cards from well-wishers and fans.

Prince Charles, 31-year-old heir to the British throne and a fan since Sellers' radio days, cabled from the royal yacht Britannia in France a few hours before the death. He wished Sellers "a complete and speedy recovery."

Sellers had been scheduled to fly to Los Angeles today to join his wife for a vacation and her 26th birthday Friday. But he collapsed in his hotel suite Tuesday afternoon, and she flew to London Wednesday. She said they had talked on the telephone Monday night and he was "absolutely fine, really bubbling."

Sellers suffered his first heart attack in 1964, seven weeks after marrying his second wife, Swedish actress Britt Ekland. He had another daughter, Victoria, to London from Stockholm Tuesday but did not herself visit the hospital, saying Miss Frederick and not she should be with him.

Sellers made 54 movies over a period of 29 years and a fortune said in press reports to total nearly $12 million. His first big international hit was "The Mouse That Roared," in 1959; his greatest success was as the bumbling Inspector Clouseau in the "Pink Panther" series.

Despite his fame, wealth, homes on two continents, private jet, yacht, expensive cars and love life with beautiful women, he remained riddled by doubts.

Son of a vaudeville performer mother and a father who was a piano player and musical director in an English revue company, he once confessed:

"I have no personality of my own whatsoever. No personal identity to offer to the public. I can't do anything within myself. I have nothing to project. I've got so many inhibitions that I sometimes wonder whether I exist at all."

He began his career at London's now closed Windmill Theater, a plump, carefree young man just out of World War II service in the Royal Air Force, working with nude chorus girls and fellow comedians. He became a world star but on the way grew thin and fretful with a reputation for being quarrelsome and sharp-tongued on film sets. He once admitted: "The older I get the less I like the film industry and the people in it. I am at a stage where I almost loathe them."

The stormy passage of his four marriages and other love affairs made constant headlines. He married Australian actress Anne Howe in 1951. They divorced 11 years later after having two children, Michael and Sarah Jane. He married Miss Ekland in 1964 and they divorced in 1969. In 1970 he married socialite Miranda Quarry and they divorced in 1974. He married Lynn Frederick, with whom he had only just been united this year after a split.

Sellers' Talent Loomed Large In Comedy Field

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Peter Sellers suffered his first heart attack in 1964 in Los Angeles. Prompt, exceptional care gave him 16 more years, and his performances in that time may have established him as a comic genius in the tradition of Charlie Chaplin and Groucho Marx.

If he had died in 1964, Sellers would have been remembered as an amazingly versatile and talented comedy actor.

Like many comics of talking films, Sellers came out of radio. His amazing capacity for impersonation first became known on BBC's "Goon Show." He carried that faculty into films, convincingly portraying multiple characters in a single movie with his extraordinary range of voice.

He assumed various roles in "The Naked Truth" (1958) and "The Mouse That Roared" (1959) and played several disguises as Clare Quilty in "Lolita" (1962).

But his tour de force came in 1964 with "Dr. Strangelove, or How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb."

He portrayed Capt. Lionel Mandrake, the bald President Muffley, and the defense genius Dr. Strangelove, who many critics remarked was patterned after Henry Kissinger.

Sellers will be remembered most for his portrayal in the "Pink Panther" series of the terminally klutzy Inspector Clouseau.

The series began with the 1963 original and continued with the 1964 sequel, "A Shot in the Dark." After each subsequent film — "Return of the Pink Panther" (1975), "The Pink Panther Strikes Again" (1977) and "Revenge of the Pink Panther" (1978) — Sellers and producer-director-writer Blake Edwards swore they would never work together again. But each new film proved so successful that they relented.

Last year, some reviewers declared that Sellers had given his best performance as the gardener-turned-media star in "Being There," in which the actor's comedy was far more subtle. It brought his second Academy Award nomination — the first was for "Dr. Strangelove" — and hinted at an unlimited career in roles less farcical than the "Pink Panther."

In his last, not yet released film, "The Fiendish Plot of Dr. Fu Manchu," he returned to the cover of an outlandish character.

"I have no personality of my own," Sellers often remarked. "I only feel 'real' when I'm playing a part."

Additions or alterations were listed for 80 units at a cost of $361,321. Total construction costs in the county amounted to $1,204,316.

Deadline To Join Performing Groups

RALEIGH — August 1 is the deadline for North Carolina dancers, musicians and performing groups to apply for participation in the 1981-82 North Carolina Touring Program of the N. C. Arts Council.

Organizations and individual artists may apply to qualify for touring support, and groups may seek grants to assist in preparation of promotional materials.

Both aspects of the program are designed to encourage touring activities within the state by the state's own artists, according to Arts Council director Mary Regan.

Dancers, musicians and performing companies qualifying for touring support will be eligible to receive Arts Council funds indirectly as partial payment for performances while on tour.

Also, several grants will be awarded to assist professional non-profit performing arts companies in preparation of promotional programs. Each of these grants, which may be up to $2,000, will be used to help pay for things like posters, photographs and press kits.

To receive the application forms and to learn more about the program, write to: The Performing Arts Coordinator, N. C. Arts Council, Dept. of Cultural Resources, Raleigh, N. C., 27611, or telephone 733-7897. Organizations who may wish to take part as local sponsors are also encouraged to contact the Arts Council.

Judge Demands CBS Documents

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ruling that information from an investigation of fast-food restaurants was "unique" and could not be obtained from any other source, a federal appeals court has told CBS officials to give a judge documents on a "60 Minutes" probe or continue to be held in contempt.

A contempt citation called for fines of $1 for every day CBS failed to produce the documents. It had been stayed pending an appeal by CBS.

The ruling Wednesday, upholding a lower court decision in March, was issued by a three-judge panel of the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

CBS lawyers declined comment on the ruling, saying they hadn't seen a copy of the opinion.

The case stems from a "60 Minutes" feature on fast-food franchising broadcast on Dec. 3, 1978.

In the report was a statement by correspondent Mike Wallace that the FBI and the U.S. attorney in Newark, N.J., were investigating allegations of fraud against Wild Bill's Family Restaurants of New Jersey in its business dealings with its franchises, according to the ruling.

Nine months after the telecast, several Wild Bill's officials were indicted and charged with conspiracy and fraud in connection with the restaurant's franchising.

In two subpoenas approved by U.S. District Judge Herbert Stern in Newark, the restaurant's lawyers asked CBS to turn over records of statements made by nearly 100 individuals interviewed for the televised report.

The subpoenas, contested by "60 Minutes" lawyers, called for Stern to privately examine the records before allowing them to be disclosed at the trial.

CBS officials declined to comply with the subpoenas, contending one was too broad and that both violated the network's constitutional privilege not to disclose unpublished information.

Wednesday's ruling upheld CBS's claim that one of the subpoenas was too vague. But the appeals court left intact the second subpoena, denying the network's claims by ruling there was no other source for the information.

Guess Fortune At $8 Billion

NEW YORK (AP) — The wealthy Hunt brothers of Dallas, who got caught in a billion-dollar squeeze when the silver market collapsed this year, say their family fortune is at least $8 billion.

Despite the wealth, one of the brothers, Nelson Bunker Hunt, 54, doesn't make airline reservations, "he just shows up at the airport and waits in line to fly standby," according to his brother, Herbert Hunt, 51.

The brothers' comments were contained in an interview published in the Aug. 11 issue of "Fortune" magazine.

The Hunts had to borrow $1.1 billion to get themselves out of a jam created when their vast holdings in silver securities quickly lost value as the price of silver fell, they said.

Herbert Hunt said that to secure the loan, they had to put up as collateral virtually every income-producing asset they own and that the value of the collateral "is probably eight or nine times as large" as the loan.

Nurses Needed In N.C. Hospitals

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A survey of 101 North Carolina hospitals shows that 1,499 registered nurses are needed to fill staff vacancies, the state Hospital Association said Wednesday.

"It seems to me we have a pretty critical shortage of nurses," said Joan M. Reed, assistant director of the North Carolina Nurses Association. "In many hospital situations, things are so bad nurses tend to just pull out."

She and other nursing and hospital officials blamed the situation on such factors as low pay, scheduling, stress and conflicts with physicians.

A preliminary study by the Area Health Education Center in Chapel Hill shows the average starting pay for nurses in North Carolina is $5.29 an hour, or $11,000 a year. The national average is $6.35 an hour and $13,200 annually.

AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Carson's new, shortened "Tonight Show," it turns out, isn't going to be so "new" when it starts rolling in September. Just shortened.

Carson has often said that the 60-minute format he wrestled from NBC would give the show new energy and vitality, leading to speculation that the show might be revamped in some way to accentuate, perhaps expand upon, its strengths — those segments featuring Johnny Carson telling jokes.

It was learned that "Tonight" was to reduce its talent coordination staff and add to its writing staff, further suggesting that "Tonight" would become more "The Johnny Carson Show" than it has been in its present 90-minute form.

But Fred De Cordova, "Tonight" producer, says "The last thing we want to do is give people the impression we're doing a new 'Tonight.' We're not."

There will be staff changes, De Cordova says — "We are considering dropping either one or possibly two of our (six) talent coordinators, and we're always looking for more writers" — but they reflect a lighter guest load, not a changed format.

"The structure of the new show is 'The Tonight Show' less 30 minutes from the bottom," De Cordova says. "There will be the same first half-hour, the same second half-hour, but no third half-hour. There is no big deal, no restructuring. The major change will be the elimination of the last half-hour."

So how does the change help the show?

It's the feeling of Carson and others that, shed of the slow, final 30 minutes, the rest of the show will pick up speed.

"I don't want to be rude to the many wonderful guests we've had in the last half-hour," the producer says,

"but often, in that 30 minutes, a graduated amount of our audience says, 'Let's go to sleep.' So, you load the front part of the show with your best spots."

Carson's monologue will remain at about 12 minutes, and the desk segment, in which Carson yuks it up with Ed McMahon, will stay where it is, as well. Those segments provide the best comedy on television, and the final TV attraction of the night for many viewers.

The nightly guests will be cut from five to three, a development not likely to be welcomed by plug-hungry authors, actors and other feeders at the talk-show table.

They'll survive.

Non-Political TV Had Best Tally Of Viewers

NEW YORK (AP) — The networks devoted more than half of last week's prime time to coverage of the Republican National Convention, but it was non-political programming that attracted the most viewers, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

"The Jeffersons," a consistent hit on CBS, was the highest-rated show for the week ending July 20, followed by five other CBS shows, including "60 Minutes" in second place and "Alice" in third.

CBS beat the opposition by a narrow margin in the three-way competition for convention viewers, and with help from the half-dozen non-political programs, finished first in the weekly ratings race.

CBS' rating for the week was 11.3 to 8.7 for both NBC and ABC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 11.3 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were tuned to CBS.

Poor, though not necessarily unexpected, ratings for the convention contributed heavily to the extraordinarily low marks for the week.

More than half the viewers during the four nights of the convention, Monday through Thursday, chose alternate programming on independent or public stations. CBS' coverage of the convention finale Thursday night was the highest-rated of the programs from the Joe Louis Arena in Detroit — 24th in the ratings.

The three networks carried 13 hours of simultaneous convention coverage in prime time, and CBS had the highest rating, 7.7 to 7.6 for NBC and 6.5 for ABC. That means in an average minute during the convention, 7.7 percent of the country's homes with television were watching CBS.

A special Monday night edition of CBS' "60 Minutes," featuring an interview with the eventual GOP presidential nominee, Ronald Reagan, scored in the ratings — 17th place — as did two convention-oriented editions of ABC's "20/20." A Tuesday night installment was 23rd for the week, while a Monday night program finished 25th.

In a non-prime time sidelight, ABC's "World News Tonight" finished No. 1 in the weekly evening news sweepstakes for the first time ever. Twice in the week, however, CBS began its convention coverage at 7 p.m., bypassing the regular "Evening News" broadcast.

Here are the week's highest-rated programs:

"The Jeffersons," with a rating of 20.7 representing 15.8 million homes, "60 Minutes," 19.6 or 15 million, "Alice," 19.4 or 14.8 million,

"Trapper John, M.D.," 19.1 or 14.6 million, "Dallas," 18.6 or 14.2 million, and "Dukes of Hazzard," 17.7 or 13.5 million, all CBS, "CHiPs," 16.2 or 12.4 million, NBC, "Love Boat," 15.9 or 12.1 million, and "Fantasy Island," 15.4 or 11.8 million, both ABC, and "The Awakening Land," Part 1, NBC, and "Archie Bunker's Place" and "One Day at a Time," both CBS, all 14.2 or 10.8 million.

The rest of the Top 20: "Moonrunners," ABC; "The Islander," CBS; "Ed Clark for President" spot, and "240-Robert," both ABC; "60 Minutes," Monday edition, and "The Incredible Hulk," both CBS, and "Diff'rent Strokes," Friday edition, and "Me & Maxx," both NBC.

The technique of a crossruff is not very difficult. The question of whether to embark on a crossruff is sometimes harder to decide. You may have the option of trying to set up a side suit in either the closed hand or in dummy, and selecting the better line of play involves sound judgment rather than the application of fixed principles.

One thing is certain. Before deciding to play a hand on crossruff lines, you should be able to count in high cards and ruffs the number of tricks needed to fulfill your contract. Bear in mind that, if you ever relinquish the lead, the opponents will shift to trumps in an effort to spoil your party.

In today's hand South became declarer at six diamonds. He failed to land his slam because he ignored a fundamental principle of crossruff technique—the prompt cashing of high cards in the side suit not involved in the crossruff.

The bidding was rather weird. No one seemed to have had a clear idea of what was going on, and all appeared to have been swept along by the rhythm of the auction. South's refusal to pass five spades round to his partner, who might have been aching to apply the axe, was a model of impropriety, but that is not the point at issue.

The king of spades was led and ruffed, and declarer set about ruffing clubs in dummy and spades in his hand. Everything went merrily on its way until, on the fourth spade, East discarded a heart. Now declarer awoke to the necessity of cashing his heart tricks, but it was too late. Declarer took the king of hearts and led a heart off dummy, but East ruffed and returned a trump, and declarer could not avoid losing another trick.

Declarer had been blessed with great fortune—his trumps were all high, so he could not be overruffed. He could count two heart tricks in high cards and ten trump tricks via a black suit crossruff. All he had to do was cash his high hearts before setting out on the crossruff and he would have avoided suffering the indignity that occurred.

Winchell Role For Bob Hope

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Hope will portray journalist Walter Winchell in a made-for-TV movie scheduled for release in 1981-82.

The three-hour movie will go into production in March, the New York Daily News said in a story in today's editions.

Winchell had a highly successful gossip show on radio in the 1930s and 1940s. On television, he was narrator of the hit series, "The Untouchables."

Winchell died in 1972.

Rock Singer's Charges Dropped

CINCINNATI (AP) — A municipal judge has dismissed charges against a rock singer who allegedly urged a crowd at Riverfront Coliseum "to light up," despite a strict ban on smoking in the arena.

The April 24 performance by singer David L. Roth and his group, Van Halen, was the first at the coliseum by a rock group since 11 people died in a crowd stampede at a December performance by "The Who."

Roth, 26, was charged with complicity to violate Cincinnati's fire code. The charge was dismissed Wednesday by Judge Ralph Winkler, who said the fire code does not specifically outlaw what Roth did.

A spokesman for the group said Roth may file suit against city officials for allegedly taking away his right to free speech.

Mayor J. Kenneth Blackwell said the dismissal does not change "the fact that a performer's action on stage is a key ingredient to effective crowd management."

GATHERING OF SAILS AMSTERDAM, Holland (UPI) — Some 1,000 old sailing ships from Holland and around the world are expected to take part in "Sail Amsterdam 1980" from August 16 to August 22.

Katie Tied To Men In Capes

NEW YORK (AP) — Kate Burton, the actress-daughter of Richard Burton, just can't seem to get away from men in capes.

She's been working at the Williamstown Theater Festival in Williamstown, Mass., in the play "Cyrano," according to a story in today's editions of the New York Daily News. The star of the show is Frank Langella, who capered to fame in the movie "Dracula."

Next week, she'll be featured in a production of "Front Page" opposite Christopher Reeve, star of the movie "Superman."

Staging 'Equus' At St. Andrews

LAURINBURG — "Equus," the award winning play by Peter Shaffer, will be presented on three dates — July 30 and 31 and August 1 in the Liberal Arts auditorium on the campus of St. Andrews Presbyterian College. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m. each evening.

The role of Strang is portrayed by Mark Franklin, and Marc Matney plays the role of the psychiatrist, Dysart.

Patricia Dean (Pat) McDermott of Ayden has a role as one of the horses. The assistant director, Laura Prince, is currently working toward a master's degree at East Carolina University.

The public is invited to attend any of the performances, and there is no admission charged.

Halting Sales Of Fake Jeans Charged Again After Release

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said Tuesday his office is halting the sale of counterfeit Calvin Klein designer jeans in North Carolina.

Edmisten said 450 pairs of the fake jeans were seized last week in Hendersonville. He said it was difficult to recognize the difference in the authentic and the fake jeans. However, some of the fakes carry "made in Jamaica" labels while the real jeans do not have anything showing where they were made, he said.

DETROIT (AP) - A man convicted of assault and battery and recently released from prison has been arraigned on charges stemming from the beating death of his 3-year-old son, police said.

Police said Herman Bonner, 27, was arraigned Monday on a charge of first-degree murder and was ordered held without bond.

The body of D'andre Parker was found dangling on a fence with a rope around his neck Sunday, police said. The boy died of head injuries inflicted by a brick.
