President Pledges Cooperate In Inquiry

Birch Bayh, D-Ind., announce creation of a panel to investigate Billy Carter's ties with Libya. (AP Laserphoto) information. He will instruct his staff to cooperate fully, Powell said. The Senate Judiciary Committee was meeting today to discuss details of the probe by a nine-member panel — five Democrats and four Republicans — into the Billy Carter-Libyan ties and whether the White House influenced a Justice Department investigation of the president's younger brother.

By MAUREEN SANTINI Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is promising full White House cooperation, perhaps even his own testimony if necessary, in the special Senate investigation of his brother Billy's Libyan connections.

facts. They expressed pleasure at the White House pledge of cooperation. Bayh, interviewed with Thurmond today on ABC-TV's "Good Morning, America" program, said he had not chosen the other Democrats to serve on the subcommittee. Thurmond said he has named Republican Sens. Bob Dole of Kansas and Charles Mathias of Maryland to serve with him and will invite Sen. Jacob Javits of New York as well.

"We plan to investigate anything that (Billy) Carter may have done while representing a foreign nation that may have had impact on the policy of this country," Bayh said. "We plan to investigate the propriety or lack thereof and what the governmental response has been to that undertaking."

He called on White House aides and Billy Carter to testify voluntarily, rather than under subpoena.

Bayh said he hoped it "would not be necessary" to call the president as a witness, but Powell would not rule out the possibility of testimony by Carter or his wife, Rosalynn.

Powell said the president would "respond fully ... in accordance with mutually acceptable procedures consistent with the responsibilities and time constraints of his office."

Gerald R. Ford, who appeared before a House Judiciary subcommittee in 1974 to discuss his pardon of former President Richard M. Nixon, is the only president to testify publicly before a congressional committee.

Presidential counsel Lloyd Cutler told the Public Broadcasting Service that it had not been decided whether Carter, if asked, would testify before the special Senate committee, answer written questions or convene a meeting at the White House.

Like other presidential aides, Cutler took pains to discourage any comparison with Watergate, saying he was "confident nothing remotely resembling the obstruction of justice of the Watergate period could have happened."

Billy Carter registered under protest last week as a foreign agent for Libya's leftist government to avoid a full grand jury investigation. He has acknowledged receiving from Libya $220,000 in installments on what he has described as a $500,000 loan.

Both the White House and the Justice Department insist there was no collaboration during the department's investigation of Billy Carter.

"The department has nothing whatsoever to hide with regard to this investigation," said Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti. He said there were no pending investigations of Billy Carter.

Shortly after the Senate created the special panel Thursday, Powell told reporters the White House will provide any information sought by the committee about Billy Carter's ties to the Libyan government and about his contacts with the White House staff and the Justice Department.

Europeans Seek Israel Guarantees

By WILLIAM N. OATIS Associated Press Writer UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Western Europe reminded the Arabs that its recent pro-Palestinian tilt did not go all the way and demanded guarantees for Israel's existence in the resolution to be adopted by the special U.N. General Assembly on Palestine.

Thursday guarantees for Israel would be one criterion on which the nine Common Market nations would base their vote on the resolution. He said the draft being circulated does not include any guarantee of Israel's nationhood and that the measure "unfortunately is not of such a nature as to contribute to the search for an overall just and lasting solution."

of the Palestine Liberation Organization calls for Israel to begin withdrawing before mid-November from all Arab territory it occupied in the 1967 war and for Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to hand the Palestinian areas over to the PLO for a Palestinian state.

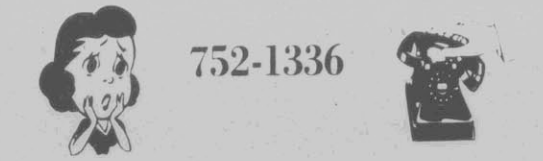

Since the PLO only a few months ago reaffirmed that its chief goal is the liquidation of the Jewish state, there was no expectation that the resolution would be amended to meet the European demand. Its adoption is assured by the large numerical majority of the Arabs and their Third World and communist allies in the assembly. But the Arabs hoped the Common Market nations would vote with them this time, isolating Israel and the United States, because of the pro-Palestinian stand the Europeans took at their summit meeting in Venice in June.

At that meeting the nine nations called for PLO participation in Mideast peace talks, endorsed Palestinian self-determination and condemned Israel's annexation of Arab East Jerusalem and its Jewish settlements in the occupied territories. But they also said Israel's security should be guaranteed.

U.S. Ambassador William vanden Heuvel also spoke at the session Thursday afternoon and condemned all draft resolutions being circulated as "totally one-sided and, as such, totally unrealistic."

He said they "make no attempt to understand, much less accept, Israel's concern for its security. Nor do they make any attempt to understand, much less reflect, a realistic procedure for moving toward peace through concrete agreements."

PREEMIE BILLS

Our baby was born three months premature and was in Pitt County Memorial Hospital from his birth in August until 10 days before Christmas. Our insurance policy paid for a normal delivery, but not for all the extra care he required. We applied for State Perinatal Funds, but were told that PCMH has used all its perinatal funds for the year. We talked to the secretary of an official out there, but never heard anything further. Our bills amount to well over $43,000. We're getting bills from a collection service. We don't feel that we can ever hope to pay all this and we don't want our credit record for all our adult lives affected by this matter. Mrs. E. B.

PCMH Patient Representative Ed Hackett said your insurance company, apparently without your knowledge, has paid its maximum, $20,000 and that State Perinatal Funds were reapplied for and covered another $20,000. There are minor charges not covered at the hospital, he said, and he asked that you and/or your husband call for an appointment to come in and talk to him. He will see if you qualify to have these remaining bills covered by Hill-Burton charity care funds. The bills you're getting from the collection agency, he said, must be for related services by private physicians. He suggested that you contact each one separately if you feel the need. Your credit record will not be affected, he said, by hospital charges if you either qualify for the aid or make an honest effort to pay the remaining relatively small bills at whatever consistent rate you can.

By SUE FERNALD Reflector Staff Writer The third in a series of design public hearings concerning the features of the proposed four-laning of U.S. 264 between Wilson and Greenville, was held at Wellcome Middle School last night. Moderator of the hearing, Bill Garrett, public hearing officer of the Department of Transportation discussed the purpose of the hearing and plans for the project. He stated that this was a federal aid project, with 75 percent of the funding coming from the government and 25 percent from state resources.

Unemployment In Pitt Is Now At Five-Year High

By JERRY RAYNOR Reflector Staff Writer

The unemployment rate in Pitt County rose to 8.0 percent for the month of June, the highest unemployment rate registered locally in over five years, since the 8.4 percent figure for January-February 1975. This figure is also a substantial increase over the 6.2 unemployment rate in Pitt County for the preceding month of May.

James Hannan, manager of the Greenville office of the N. C. Employment Security Commission, explained that the monthly report of employment and unemployment rates is compiled by personnel of the Bureau of Employment Security Research in Raleigh through surveys they carry out on a continuing basis. The survey results are supplied to Washington, and the federal agency in turn compiles and sends out monthly reports of the national employment and unemployment figures.

"One of the things about a climb in unemployment rates that worries me is that this is naturally going to affect a lot of people, but I hope that people will not panic," Hanna remarked.

"Actually," Hannan said, "this high rate comes at a time when there are more people employed in the Pitt County work force than at any time in the past five years. For example, there were 1,700 more people employed in the county during June than during May."

Hannan discussed factors that significantly affect the unemployment rates. "The figures include high school and college students, all workers over 16 as well as housewives in the job market. Because of the current inflation and the growing need for two wage earners in a family," Hannan said, "more housewives than ever before are looking for jobs to help make ends meet."

Referring to the 1,700 increase in the number of workers employed in June over the May figures, Hannan said the increase represents work more permanent than seasonal agricultural work alone. "The expansion of electrical utilities in Farmville, additional positions opening at Procter & Gamble, more jobs in the construction trades at Pitt Memorial Hospital, a moderate increase in new housing construction, and an increase in job openings in the wholesale-retail trade, these have all resulted in positive additions to the job market." On the other side of the ledger, events which have contributed to the rise in unemployment rates have been the closing of the Grady White Boat Works and the cutback at Eaton Corporation. "In both cases," Hannan commented, "the actual lay off of people began in February and continued on for several weeks. But because of severance and vacation pay, it was not until late April and later that the laid off employers began (Please turn to Page 10)

Hijacked Jet Again Denied A Sanctuary

KUWAIT (AP) — A hijacked Kuwaiti jetliner with about 40 people aboard landed here today for the third time in 24 hours, Kuwait Radio said, after it turned back from Tehran when Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr closed the city's airport.

The aircraft flew to Kuwait after trying to land in the Iranian capital on a flight from Abadan, the oil refining city in southwestern Iran. It had spent some seven hours on the ground in Abadan before heading to Tehran, the Iran state radio reported. The Iranian news agency Pars said Bani-Sadr ordered the airport closed.

The Arab hijackers were reported to have threatened to blow up the plane unless they get $750,000 they claim a Kuwaiti merchant owes them.

Fatma Faqih, a Kuwaiti journalist among 37 women and children released by the hijackers in Kuwait Thursday night wrote in her newspaper Al-Anbaa that the hijackers said they would free the passengers and crew still held by them and then blow up the aircraft if their demands are not met.

Miss Faqih and the other released passengers said the hijackers were armed with pistols and grenades.

Pars said there were four hijackers aboard the plane and that they identified themselves as Palestinians. Abadan Radio said two passengers were released in the oil refining city and taken to a hospital after feeling sick.

This left the hijackers, 35 passengers and four crew aboard the plane.

Kuwait's director general of security, Col. Mohammed Kabandi, on Thursday said there were two hijackers aboard the plane. He identified them as brothers Youssef and Khalaf Ahmed-Moufleh, and said they were Jordanians.

They were deported from Kuwait last year for issuing bad checks, and are demanding $750,000 allegedly owed them by a Kuwaiti merchant in return for releasing the plane, Kabandi added.

Cordon Area Due Violence

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Tactical police teams shot out streetlights and cordoned off a predominantly black housing project after eight officers received minor gunshot wounds in the worst of three nights of violence in this racially tense city.

The shooting occurred about two hours after a dusk-to-dawn curfew took effect Thursday, closing all retail businesses in this southeast Tennessee city of 170,000. The curfew was imposed after two nights of firebombings, looting and rock-throwing that followed a jury's acquittal of two Ku Klux Klansmen in the shooting of four black women.

Early today, at least 19 people had been arrested for curfew violations and jailed, police said. Four of the arrests were made in the area of the shooting.

All eight police officers were hit in one burst as police attempted to get people off the streets. A ninth officer cut his hand while trying to rescue comrades who were in the line of fire.

The streets were generally empty Thursday night in the city's heavily industrial, predominantly black Alton Park area where the amnush occurred.

But there were reports of scattered sniper fire in other areas and reports of at least two firebombings.

Mayor Charles "Pat" Rose said his curfew order probably would continue through tonight.

It was the latest eruption of violence that began in Chattanooga's streets Tuesday night. Trouble began a few hours after an all-white jury acquitted two Klansmen and convicted a third on reduced charges in the April 19 shooting wounding of four black women.

The city's black leaders, among them Harry Hill a spokesman for the Youth Coalition, said the Klan verdict was just one element in the explosive mix including poor housing and unemployment that sparked the violence in a city with an estimated black population of 35 percent.

"We're going to all the project areas tonight, trying to talk to the people, trying to cool them down," Hill said before the shootings erupted. "Everybody's starting to go off now ... and everybody's making the wrong moves — right down to the curfew. We're trying to avoid the funerals. We had some people die here in '71."

In May 1971, four nights of race rioting brought National Guardsmen and a curfew to this city.

May Now Apply

The Mid-East Regional Housing Authority is now accepting applications for 35 apartments of low and moderate income housing in Bethel. This apartment complex is located on Elm Street and is comprised of 8 one bedrooms, 17 two bedrooms, 10 three bedrooms apartments. Completion of construction is scheduled for October 1.

Applications are now being taken at City Hall in Bethel. Because this housing complex is located within Bethel city limits, preference will be given to residents of Bethel.

The Mid-East Regional Housing Authority manages similar housing in six counties, including Winterville and Fountain in Pitt County. Plans are pending for this type of housing in Grifton.

Third U.S. 264 Hearing Held Last Evening

estimated $118.14 million. Included in the hearing was a discussion of the types of interchanges, where they will be and what type of features will be used, as well as the amount of footage proposed in the right of way for the highway. Garrett stated that there will be no drive ways allowed on the highway, only access roads.

Several speakers came forward at the meeting to express their views. Lewis Clark, member of Greenville City Council, supported the concern to build U.S. 264, which he dubbed as our "east-west lifeline."

Tommy Edwards, Chairman of the Board of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce voiced wholehearted support for the highway. However, he added the need to explore a northern loop around Greenville, as did the majority of the speakers. The proposed new highway is planned to begin at the N.C. 58 intersection East of Wilson and end at the Stantonsburg Road (SR 1200), just West of Pitt Memorial Hospital.

The major concerns involved in obtaining a loop around Greenville included added traffic congestion to an already congested area and interference in an already growing medical complex.

Dr. Thomas Brewer, Chancellor of ECU, expressed the need for the new highway to accommodate the growing amount of traffic intended for the university. He said an estimated 365 students use 264 on a daily basis 6,500 on weekends and an estimated 300,000 come to ECU during the year. 75 percent of whom use 264. He said that he expected the traffic to increase over the next decade as the university grows. (Chancellor Brewer was (Please turn to Page 9)

Life As It's Lived

Sibling Rivalry Rears Its Head In Household

By GAIL MICHAELS
As long as Phillip and I were both at home after Zachary arrived, we managed to hold sibling rivalry to a minimum. But when Phillip left town for a few weeks, Meg's jealousy quickly surfaced.

"Why do you spend all your time with that stupid baby?" she asked me one evening. "He can't even talk. Now if you spent that time with me, I could talk to you. Then we'd both be happy. You'd be entertained, and I wouldn't be so lonely."

"I'm sorry you're lonely, but little babies need lots of attention because they can't do anything for themselves. If I don't do those things for him, he won't think anybody loves him. And that would be terrible, wouldn't it?"

She curled her bottom lip. "Well, I don't think anybody loves me, and that's terrible, too."

"Oh, Meg, I know I haven't spent much time with you, but I do love you - very, very much. And as soon as Daddy gets home, I'll be able to play with you more, I promise."

Two days later she confronted me while I was folding diapers.

"Children who don't get attention get sick. I think I need some aspirin."

"No you don't. You just need a story read to you."

"Yes, or we could play Super Heroes, and I'll be Superwoman trapped in a pool of aerosol."

"That sounds interesting. We'll play it as soon as I bathe Zachary."

She put her hands on her hips. "That kid is really making trouble."

"All babies disrupt their families' lives a little bit, but it's worth it."

"It is?"

"Of course. It just seems worse now because Daddy's not home. As soon as he gets back, everything will get back to normal."

"Things will never get back to normal. Normal was before Zachary."

"Well, things will get a lot better when Daddy gets back."

"Daddy, Daddy, Daddy, that's all I hear. I don't think he's ever coming back. Zachary scared him off."

"Meg," I sighed. "Please try to understand. Just try to be good for a few more days."

She flounced down the hall. "Being good around here is a waste of time."

She proved her point the next day. I had set up her swimming pool in the backyard in hopes of taking her mind off her problems, but it didn't work.

"Look at me," she squealed.

"I can't sweetie. While Zachary is asleep, I have to write."

She was silent for awhile, then she called out. "Don't watch Mom."

Immediately, my head shot up. Meg swam across the pool. "Wonderful!" I said. "You did that well. I'm glad I saw it."

"Yeah, I knew you'd watch if I told you not to."

Murder In The Opera House

NEW YORK (AP) — Deep in the bowels of the Metropolitan Opera House, past the giant Chagall paintings and the crystal chandeliers, someone tossed the bound, nude body of a blonde violinist down an airshaft as the Berlin Ballet danced on the main stage.

Helen Hagnes, who disappeared after telling friends

Although the murder was a topic of conversation among the crowd of some 3,200 ballet fans, neither the ballet troupe nor the orchestra of free-lance musicians publicly mentioned the killing.

"They're very upset," opera spokeswoman Johanna Fiedler said of the dancers. "But everyone's professional. There's just the feeling that the show goes on. It's something that's ingrained through years of practice."

Dancers were escorted in groups around the opera building by police detectives. Ms. Fiedler said the normal house security force of eight would be doubled until the troupe moved on to Washington after Saturday night.

Miss Hagnes had performed for the first two selections of a four-ballet program Wednesday night. Theater officials said she left her violin on her chair, stopped in a dressing room and then left around 9:30 p.m. for what was described as an "artistic discussion" with Panov, the Soviet emigre dancer and choreographer, in his dressing room.

But she was never seen in or near Panov's dressing room, and police said Panov is not a suspect in the case.

Miss Hagnes' disappearance was noted when she did not return at 10 p.m. for the fourth ballet of the night and when her husband, Janis Mintiks, a sculptor, could not find her at the end of the show.

Detectives began searching the 14-year-old building, which has a white marble edifice with an imposing front of glass. They followed the red-carpeted hallways that run through the building.

Ten hours later, the woman's shoes were found on the roof. Her body was discovered in the air shaft a short time later.

Deputy Chief Inspector Richard Nicastro said Panov's dressing room was on the stage level and there was no known reason why Miss Hagnes should have been on a higher floor. He said he believed her death was the result of "a chance encounter."

A student of music since age 4, Miss Hagnes left her native Canadian village of Aldergrove, British Columbia, at age 19 to continue her studies at the Juilliard

School in New York City.

After earning a master's degree in 1976, she went to Europe and studied under violinist Nathan Milstein.

Anthony Bliss, executive director of the Metropolitan Opera Association, described Miss Hagnes as "highly respected and well known to many in the house."

At a news conference Thursday, Panov said he had never met the violinist. Shown her picture, he said he thought she might have been "a face passing by."

"Yesterday, no blonde approached me," he said. "It's terrible. It makes bad publicity for such an art. It's so terrible, but that's life."

HELEN HAGNES

she was going to meet star Valery Panov, apparently died after a chance encounter backstage Wednesday night, police said.

The mystery deepened when Panov said he did not know Miss Hagnes.

An autopsy was scheduled today to determine what caused the death of the 30-year-old professional musician, whose body apparently was dropped 60 feet from the opening of a rooftop air duct to a protruding beam below. Police said there were no apparent wounds on her body.

The murder occurred some time after Miss Hagnes left the orchestra pit between portions of the ballet company's program.

The company performed its scheduled ballet, "The Idiot," with the orchestra playing music by Dmitri Shostakovich on Thursday night as more than a dozen detectives combed the building for clues.

Declare A Ban On Summer Trawling

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — The state Marine Fisheries Commission has declared a ban on trawling off the Onslow County coast during the summer months and plans to establish a sea-turtle sanctuary.

The commission said it took the action to protect the turtles, which are an endangered species.

In a meeting Wednesday, the commission approved a compromise plan that would prohibit trawling within three-quarters of a mile of the shore, except for two areas located just off Bear Island and Brown's Inlet.

The ban will be in effect from June 1 to Sept. 1, according to the commission.

The sanctuary was proposed originally by Dr. Frank Schwartz of the University of North Carolina's Institute of Marine Science in Morehead City. The ban was proposed after Schwartz told the commission that sea turtles are often caught in trawls and drown before they are released by fishermen. Schwartz reported 41 such deaths caused by trawling last year.

He also told the commission that the federal government may intervene with its own trawling ban unless the state acts to protect sea-turtles, an endangered species protected by federal law. Under federal law, a person convicted of possessing or selling the turtles can be fined $10,000 and sentenced to five years in prison.

Connell Purvis, director of Marine Fisheries, said a proclamation declaring the area closed to trawling probably would not be issued until next year because the commission's action comes near the end of the turtle nesting season this year.

"The area of the sanctuary will be published on nautical charts and in other fishing publications," Schwartz said. In 1979, Schwartz identified 158 turtle nests along a 12-mile stretch of the Onslow County coastline.

Joyride By 8-Year-Old

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Authorities are investigating the 56-mile joyride that an 8-year-old boy took, hanging onto the back of a tractor-trailer as it made its way from Greenwood to Greenville.

The ride ended Monday when a Greenville policeman, Ed Whitmore, noticed the boy on the truck and called Greenville County sheriff's deputies, who stopped the vehicle.

The boy, made matters worse by giving deputies a false name, impeding their efforts to find his parents.

Lt. Earl Barnett of the sheriff's department said the youngster eventually gave his real name and deputies located his father. Barnett said the father came to the sheriff's office to pick up his son but, for some unexplained reason, left without him.

The boy, whose name was not released, was returned to the Greenwood County Department of Social Services Wednesday.

Other details were sketchy because authorities are treating the case as a juvenile matter which must be kept confidential.

Betty Dorn, supervisor of child protective services for the Greenwood DSS office, said the youngster was doing fine. She said the case was under investigation but refused to give out any other information.

AMA Refuses Endorse Report

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Medical Association has refused to endorse a controversial committee report that says health maintenance organizations may provide a less expensive alternative to traditional medical care.

When a person belongs to an HMO, he pays a fixed fee to a clinic to provide most or all of his medical care.

A report by the AMA's Council on Medical Service was considered Thursday, the final day of the five-day annual meeting of the AMA's House of Delegates.

The delegates accepted most portions of the report, but sent back for study a section that dealt with HMO costs.

"Anybody who studies HMOs for very long realizes that they cost less, but at a price — the sacrifice of the doctor-patient relationship," said Dr. John J. Ring of Mundelein, Ill., a member of the council.

Ring said the AMA might be able to learn how to cut costs by studying HMOs.

But Dr. Theodore Grevas of Rock Island, Ill., said "If that report had been accepted it would have given the impression that the AMA thinks HMOs save money, which they don't."

Grevas and other critics maintain that HMOs save money only by rationing health care, a practice they say leads to inferior care.

Nine million Americans are enrolled in the nation's 233 HMOs, whose number has expanded rapidly since the federal government began providing them grants and loans under a 1973 law.

The report by the AMA council said HMOs seem to cost less than traditional

Setback For Salvage Plan

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Edward Lee Spence has suffered a setback in his legal efforts to get exclusive salvage rights to two sunken Civil War-era ships which he claims to have discovered off Charleston harbor.

U.S. District Judge Solomon Blatt Jr. said Thursday he couldn't do anything because he does not have jurisdiction outside the United States' three-mile territorial limit.

Blatt said if salvaged items are brought inside the three-mile limit, he would have jurisdiction and could take possession of them if a legal squabble ensued.

Spence says in 1970 he found the wrecks of the Union corvette Housatonic or the Confederate submarine Hunley — or both — in an area just outside the three-mile limit.

According to Spence's attorneys, Robert DeMarco of Charleston and Paul Horan of Key West, Fla., salvage efforts which began earlier this year have been hampered by other treasure-hunters.

Spence claims to have raised some items from the ocean floor, covered with rust and marine growth, that are from either the Housatonic or the Hunley or both. Neither Spence nor his attorneys would identify the items.

Driver Charged In Costly Wreck

Robert Harris III of Winterville, was charged with careless and reckless driving, following investigation of a 12:10 a.m. collision today on Fifth Street, 200 feet East of the Vance Street intersection, that resulted in an estimated $10,000 property damage.

Investigating officers said the Harris car collided with a truck operated by Grady Don Gaskins of 506 East Gum Rd., forcing the Gaskins vehicle into a parked car owned by Joseph James Shelly of 707 West Fourth St.

Police, who said Gaskins and Harris were injured in the mishap, estimated damage at $3,000 to the Shelly and Harris cars, and $4,000 to the Gaskins truck.

Southern Bell Eyes Rate Hike

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Southern Bell customers in North Carolina may see an increase in their telephone rates about Sept. 2.

The company announced the proposed rate increase in a letter of notification to the state Utilities Commission.

The company said it has not decided how much the increase will amount to, but it said it would conform to national anti-inflation guidelines.

Southern Bell's most recent rate application was filed July 1979 for a test period that began in April 1978. The company at that time asked for $45.3 million in additional revenues.

The commission awarded a 5.7 percent increase totaling $25.49 million following seven months of hearings and investigation into the request.

Color Plays Role In Diamonds

NEW YORK (AP) — Interplay of varied-color metals, colored diamonds and other colored stones in geometric, sculptured, innovative designs were the trends noted in the winning pieces in the 1980 Diamonds-International Awards competition.

More than 1,400 designers from 31 countries competed in the 26th running of the contest. The grand prize winner, who received $25,000 in recent ceremonies at Goldsmiths' Hall in London, was Tadashi Honma of Japan. He set baguette diamonds in white gold in a sculptured geometric ring.

The aim of the competition, sponsored by De Beers Consolidated Mines Ltd., is to interest new talent in entering the field of precious jewelry design and to stimulate creative interest in the design of trend-setting jewelry, according to Betsy Irwin of the Diamond Information Center here.

"Diamonds International Awards has greatly influenced the design of diamond jewelry throughout the world," Ms. Irwin says. "It has resulted in the creation and distribution of exciting diamond jewelry, which is now more readily available to a wider buying public."

Other designers among the 10 finalists were Hans Bauer, Klaus Bohnenberger and Ewald Moller of Germany; Kimiyo Nakamura, Kuniko Watanabe and the firm of Jucre Inc. of Japan; Asuncion Garcia Juan of Spain; and Claire Goulden and Anthony Power of the United Kingdom.

Innovation played a big role in two of the award-winning pieces by Japanese designers, Ms. Irwin reports. Miss Watanabe created a yellow-gold mesh cap studded with diamonds that doubles as a pendant. Mrs. Nakamura set diamonds on a yellow-gold adjustable chain that can be shortened or lengthened by gathering the chain inside a yellow-gold, black onyx and glass locket.

Enamel mixed with yellow and white gold set the stage for diamonds in an award-winning pendant by Moller and a graceful curving brooch by Power.

Jucre Inc. combined yellow gold and platinum in a geometric squared-off diamond-studded brooch.

Bauer combined yellow and white gold with diamonds and a cabochon rose tourmaline in a "drag-only" brooch. Bohnenberger designed a "face" necklace using yellow and white gold, yellow and white diamonds and lapis lazuli.

Mrs. Garcia set 520 diamonds varying in color from white to yellow to cognac in a varied-color gold fringe necklace.

Miss Goulden chose platinum as the setting for 82 diamonds in her award-winning dangle earrings.

Dear Abby

Selling Out For Marriage: Beware

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I need an answer soon. I am a good-looking woman in my late 30s. I want more than anything in the world to send my two children to college, but it will take more money than I have.

I have recently met this older man who wants to marry me — right now! He is very rich and he's crazy about me. We are the same religion, but we live in different parts of the country.

It will take seven years to get my children through college and on their own. After that, I plan to terminate my marriage from this rich old man.

If I live with him for seven years, I might as well stay 10, as I have been told that if I do, I will be entitled to half of everything he has. Is that true?

Please, no lectures on my reason for marrying him. You and I both know that since the beginning of time, younger women have been selling themselves to older men for security, and older men have been happy to make the deal. Hurry your answer.

NORTH AND SOUTH

DEAR NORTH: I offer advice on affairs of the heart. There's no heart involved here — only money and the law. Consult a lawyer. And be prepared to sign a prenuptial agreement with this "rich old man." I've never known a rich man who wasn't also very smart.

DEAR ABBY: My husband recently gave a bachelor party for one of his co-workers who is being married soon. He wanted to have the party in our home, which I agreed to until he told me he had hired a dancing girl to strip down naked, then jump into the lap of the prospective groom while someone took pictures of all this as a joke!

I told him I wouldn't permit this sort of thing in our home, whereupon he informed me that this is routine for all bachelor parties.

Seeing as how I refused to let him have the party at home, he made arrangements to have it somewhere else.

What is your opinion of entertainment like this, Abby?
GEORGIA WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I think it's over-baring.

DEAR ABBY: I notice you sometimes use your column to help a lot of people, so I sure hope this letter makes it, because now that the tourist season is here, we motel owners sure could use a break.

We own a small motel in Independence, Kan., and, Abby, you wouldn't believe what some people do with our towels! They use them to polish their shoes, mop up the floor, dye their hair, take makeup off their faces, wipe mud off their shoes and clean their cars.

We provide plenty of facial tissues and toilet paper that would serve these purposes nicely, but no, everybody goes for our clean white towels!

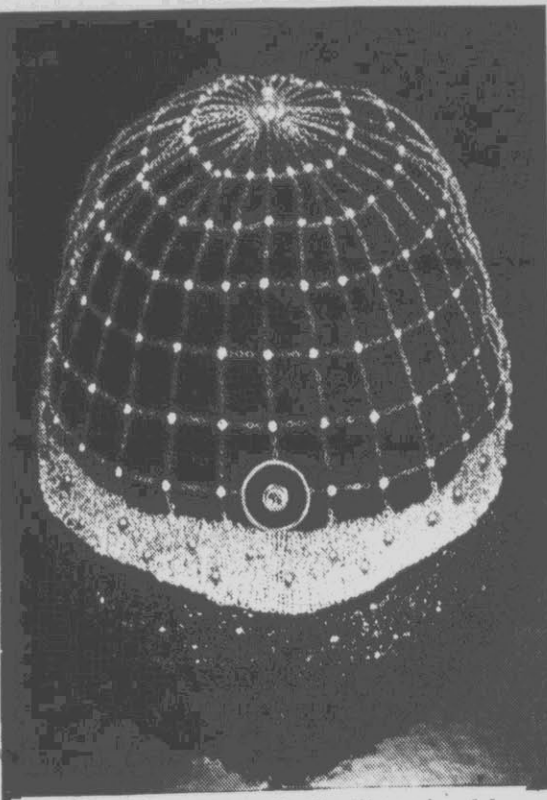

There is no bleach, detergent or spot remover that will restore these towels to their original whiteness, regardless of what the TV commercials say.

Maybe we shouldn't complain. At least the towels are left behind so we can use them for rags. A lot of people just steal them.

HURTING IN KANSAS

DEAR HURTING: Here's your letter. Readers, have a heart and reach for a tissue instead of a towel.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

INNOVATIVE IDEA — Kuniko Watanabe of Japan won a 1980 Diamonds-International Award with her trend-setting hat that doubles as a pendant. There are 260 diamonds studding the gold mesh cap, which can be worn over a black cloth cap as an elegant evening hat — or it can be worn on a leather cord as a pendant. A total of 12.22 carats of diamonds were used to create this spectacular versatile accessory.

Reaction Is Exaggerated

Try as we may, we just do not comprehend the occasional displays of exaggerated indignation and opposition to simply registering with the Selective Service.

It's no big thing. There is no prospect of setting the wheels in motion for a call-up of anybody in the foreseeable future. The fathers of the present generation registered with the very real prospect of being called, and no fuss was made about it. Some were called and many, most of them, were not.

The process of registration which got underway this past week was not marked by appeals to patriotism or flag-waving or anything like it. This was a quiet business-like approach to an unpleasant side of life — like facing up to a sink full of dirty dishes, or a field in need of attention.

There are some who'd just shrug off those chores and settle for something that is more fun; but mature people don't. We're inclined to believe our young people belong in the latter category.

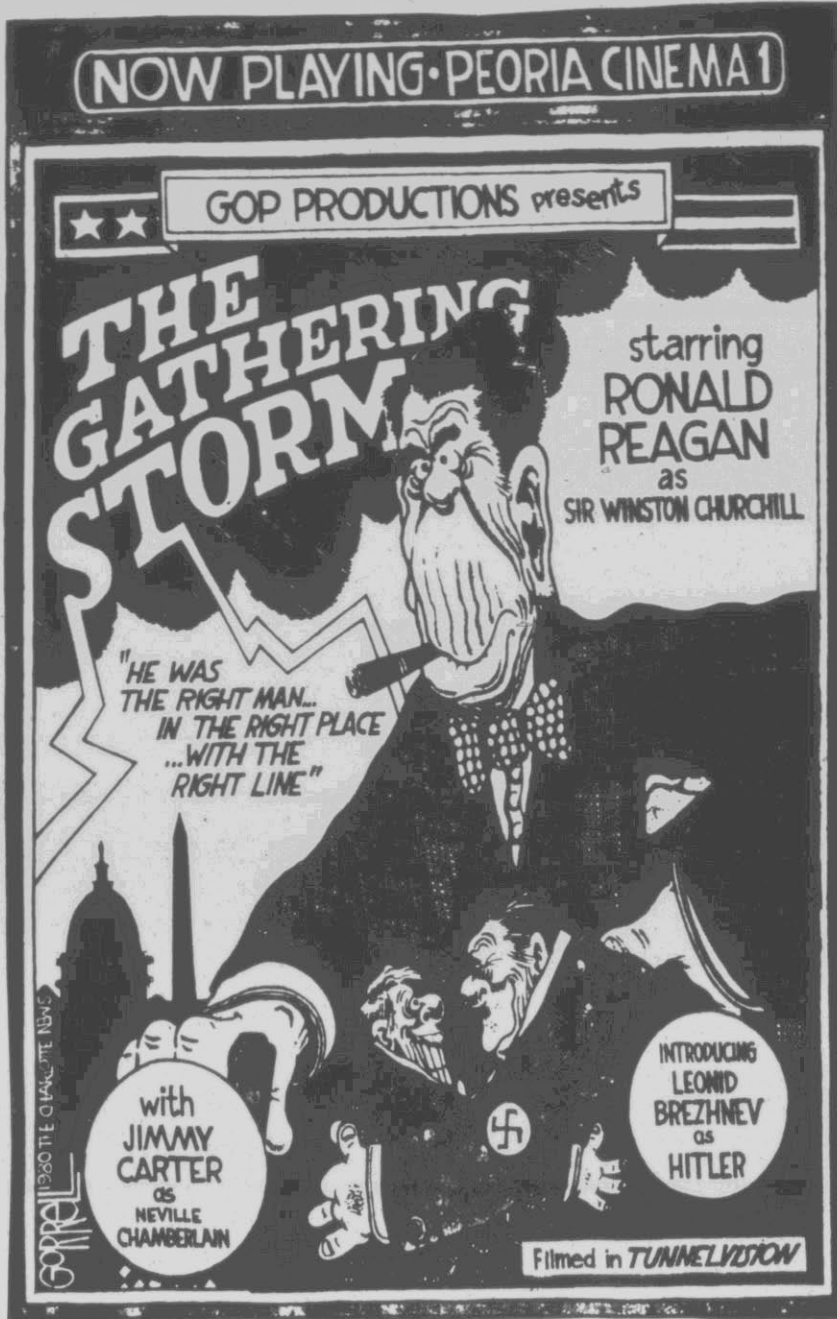

Realistically, the odds are against anything like an early call-up. It took a long time for a majority of members of Congress to concur a simple registration was an idea whose time had come. It would take even longer to agree there was sufficient national need to warrant invoking the draft, and there would be more time required to finance the project as well as arranging how to accommodate the anticipated influx of draftees. Hopefully, we'll all grow old waiting for the second shoe to drop.

For the present, we have a scattering of excitable people seeking attention for a multitude of causes, among which might be opposition to the draft — something which has been neither sought, authorized or invoked by their government. Maybe our demonstrators know something the rest of us don't know.

The procedure is simple and unhurried. This past week young men born in 1960 were asked to register at their local post office. During the coming week young men born in 1961 are asked to register. Next January, those born in 1962 will be registering; if the present order is still standing after the courts, the lawyers and sundry other involved elements have their say.

Obviously, with such a timetable there is no emergency, per se. For those who are patriotically inclined but abhor the draft on principle, there is another option: volunteer. Your friendly neighborhood recruiter might find a spot for you...and he might not. There are standards that not everybody can meet.

The 'Filler' Job Is Gone

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Time and technology have had their fill of the filler and the filler writer.

In the newsrooms of your large American dailies like the Washington Post and the Los Angeles Times you no longer find, off in a monastic cell behind the clipping morgue, reclusive scholars grinding out terse graceful facts on the order of:

—Lake Nicaragua is the largest lake in Central America.

—Niniveh, the ancient capital of Assyria, attained its greatest glory in the 8th and 7th centuries B.C. under Sennacherib and Assurbanipal.

—Babe Ruth struck out 1,330 times.

—The Macaronies, whom Yankee Doodle emulated with that feather in his hat, were a Maryland regiment famous for their flashy uniforms in the American War of Independence.

—Margaret Roper was buried with the head of her father, Sir Thomas More, in her arms.

—Torquemada, a Dominican friar of excessive zeal, was the Inquisitor General of Spain in the late 15th century.

—The three wonders of Babylon were the Hanging Gardens, the royal palace which was eight miles in circumference, and the Tower of Babel, said by some Jewish writers to be 12 miles in height.

—The Great Wall of China is the only man-made object visible from the moon.

Facts like that were hand hewn and precision-pared not to fill minds but to fill space. The writer's shtick was not to dazzle, like the Guinness Book of World Records, but to fill a stick or two of type to even off a newspaper column at the bottom of the page or between stories.

The Random House Dictionary of the English Language defines the craft of the filler writer indirectly by providing this explanation of the filler: "n. journalism, material considered of a secondary importance used to fill out a column or page." The Oxford English Dictionary is even more concise and precise: "To put in what will fill a vacancy or blank space."

In the days of hot type, which are numbered but not completely vanished from newspaper backshops, it was not always easy to gauge the length of a story as it was coughed out of the linotype machine. One, two, three or three and one-half line facts were used to fill in the empty spaces at the bottom of the page, based on the cold calculation that three and one-half lines of hot type measured an inch. Now, with cold type technology brought about by the marriage of the computer with the printing process, the laying out of a newspaper page can be predicted right down to the final pica or one-sixth of an inch. The computer tells the layout man exactly how much space a story sent down by the city desk or coming over The Associated Press wires will occupy. He no longer has to reach for one of those filler facts about the Nile being the longest river in the world if you count the tributaries.

The passing of the filler writer, like the passing of the passenger pigeon, leaves a void on the American scene that cold type can never fill. In my journalistic youth down in New Orleans it was a rewarding experience to meet one of the filler writers on the Times Picayune en route to your first cup of coffee and have your day brightened with the knowledge that St. Crispin is the patron saint of shoemakers and that Monday is known as St. Crispin's holiday in Rome because cobblers are closed on that day of every week.

Even in those endless books of lists they don't have facts like that anymore.

By the time I got to New York with The AP, Mark Barron, a former war correspondent and drama critic, had renounced invasions and first nights to churn out fillers by the dozens each day for newspapers around the world.

I don't know; maybe he turned them out by the hundreds every day, because once when he was out sick Joe Wing, the features editor, ordered all us feature writers to turn in 50 fillers

Everybody Needs 'Time Out'

It seems while a lot of people are in a rush to "pass a new law" or add another amendment to a perfectly good constitution, that one more proposal shouldn't hurt; we will refrain.

But, if ever there was a cause that deserves a mandatory observance it would be the annual vacation.

There is nothing, absolutely nothing, that lifts a person or a family out of the circumscribed life like the escape from routine a vacation represents.

Even anticipation lightens the step and instills a song in the heart. Often as not expectations surpass reality. Even so, given the opportunity, people learn to unwind from drudgery and worn patterns of thought and habit; and see their world in a brighter light.

They return refreshed and younger in spirit. Enthusiasms run rampant and their new spirit permeates their work, their relationships and adds another smile to the world.

Best of all, for a little while they lift their gaze to horizons forgotten in their daily lives. That in itself is reward beyond price.

THIS AFTERNOON A Grimy Side, Too

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Being a Sun Belt Superstar has its rewards. There are new jobs, economic growth, diversification of industry, lots of new people moving to town.

But there's a grimy side to that shiny coin. There are shopping center strips, fast-food outlets, billboards, clutter and decay.

One of the things which North Carolinians invariably say when surveys are taken about what they hope the future will be like for them is that this state's beauty, outdoors attractions, and quality of living will be protected, that we will never become congested and polluted as have some industrial giants of the North and Midwest.

Time is short to guard against that says J. Myrick Howard, executive director of the Historic Preservation Fund of North Carolina, Inc.

"If North Carolina continues to grow at its present rapid pace, in 10 years it may no longer be such a beautiful place.

"Our heritage could be destroyed by then — the state characterized by endless suburbs, commercial strips, and faceless buildings," Howard predicts.

Ten Years
To maintain and enhance the quality of life which citizens of North Carolina enjoy — and want to defend — means that "we must seriously consider what the state will look like in another decade," Howard says.

The first important step has already been taken in some communities, but has yet to become a concern in others; taking a thorough inventory of what the com-

Strength For Today

Jesus made the statement that he was the light of the world during the Feast of Tabernacles, when each night, the giant candelabra of the temple cast its light over the city of Jerusalem. Some scholars believe he may have made this statement at dawn, as the lights of the temple were being extinguished. His words meant the dawning of a new day. The light he would cast upon humanity would be more brilliant and illuminating than anything humanity had ever known before.

Two thousand years later that prediction has been partially fulfilled. Jesus Christ has cast new light across the home, across standards of moral decency, and across such agonizing historical problems as chattel slavery and political bondage.

But there are many dark corners of existence which have not yet experienced the light. One of these is war. It is up to us to open up these corners so that the light can sweep in and do its transforming work. — Elisha Douglass

Leaving The Country

Every four years, 40 to 50 million Americans vow that if their man doesn't win the Presidency, they will move to Canada.

This year is no different, and I have heard many of my dearest friends say, "If Reagan is elected, I'm taking the family to Canada." Or, "If Carter gets in for another four years, I'm leaving the country."

The trouble with these threats is that the Canadians take them seriously. Since they are so short on population, the idea of 40 to 50 million new immigrants makes their mouths water.

The Canadians start building new homes and schools to accommodate the disenchanting American voters. Shopping centers are constructed, contracts are given out for drive-in theaters and motels.

The Canadians repaint all their buildings and touch up their lawns to make the Americans feel at home.

Night classes are given on how to treat the new arrivals. Welcome Wagons are beefed up, and new factories are built to provide jobs for the millions of Democrats or Republicans, who say they cannot live in the United States under a Communist Democratic or Fascist

ART BUCHWALD

Republican regime.

To facilitate the move, Canadian customs officials are told not to open any luggage of American immigrants. Canadian Mounties are instructed to go easy on traffic tickets. No expense is spared in preparing for the influx of people.

But what inevitably happens is that after the election the 40 or 50 million people, who vowed they would go to Canada, change their minds and remain in the United States to stick it out under "That Man in the White House."

I saw it happen when Nixon beat Hubert Humphrey, then when Nixon defeated McGovern, and again when Jimmy Carter beat Ford.

Canada was waiting with welcome arms for all the people who said they couldn't live in the U.S. any more.

Nobody came.

All the hopes and dreams of the Canadians to double their population overnight vanished, but it left a taste of bitterness that lingers on.

The greatest cause of anti-American feeling in Canada can be attributed to our presidential election-year promises which people in this country have failed to keep.

How long can the Canadians keep building up their country for people who promise to go there, and then refuse to leave the U.S.?

At the moment Canada is in a terrible quandary. The ambassador in Washington has reported that 45 million Democrats have vowed to go to Canada if Ronald Reagan is elected President of the United States. He has also reported that surveys indicate that 40 million Republicans will go if Jimmy Carter stays in the White House.

Canada must decide in the next few weeks whether to go through the motions of preparing for them or to ignore those vows as idle threats. Suppose this time all the people who say they're going to Canada really do? Yet suppose the Canadians spent all the money and nobody shows up?

It seems to me it is incumbent on every American voter not to say he's going to Canada unless he really means it. If he is sincere about it, he should notify the Canadian immigration authorities.

I know it's hard to ask people at the height of an election campaign not to make threats they have no intention of keeping. All I'm suggesting is that if you want to tell someone you're leaving after

Unemployment A Key Factor

JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Incumbent political figures might never again underestimate the election year impact of unemployment if they listen to Rosanne Hersh's arguments.

Her unemployment numbers add up in a way that we aren't used to seeing. They are double digit; in fact, so high are her "unemployment experience" levels they might be mistaken for inflation rates.

To be sure, politicians in the past rarely failed to recognize the importance of jobs, preferring overwhelmingly to inflate the economy rather than permit unemployment to rise.

But this year they have no choice. So bad has inflation been that the administration has felt compelled to let joblessness rise. And the jobless are a huge constituency, larger than is generally recognized.

By Ms. Hersh's estimates, about 22 million workers will experience joblessness this year, most by election time. Since there are 2.8 persons per household, about 62 million persons would be hurt directly. The 22 million figure by itself might represent 25 percent of voters in the 1980 election, she continues. Add in other voting members of households, she concludes, and conceivably it could mean a majority.

Compiling the numbers in the manner used by Ms. Hersh, an economist with Goldman Sachs, the investment house, certainly gives a different picture than does the technique used by many other economists.

Given the seemingly small number of people involved in traditional counts of unemployment, she comments, many people tend to think the political impact is small.

They reason that if "full" employment is around 5.5 percent of the unemployment rate, a recessionary rise to 9 percent would create only 3.5 million more unemployed out of a total population of 222 million.

But 3.5 million, Ms. Hersh maintains, is not the significant figure because it numbers only those who are jobless at a specific time — to be exact, the number without a job at the time the survey was taken.

However, the people who were unemployed in April, for example, differ from those without jobs in May. And, of course, the changes continue through the year. Many more than 3.5 million experience unemployment.

"Historically, the number of workers experiencing unemployment during a year has been 2.7 to 4.2 times the number unemployed at any given survey date," she writes in the company's economic research monthly.

When unemployment averaged 8.5 percent in 1975, for example, more than 21 million workers experienced unemployment, far larger than the average 7.8 million unemployed each time the monthly survey was taken.

This year, she estimates, the unemployment experience will affect more than 22 million workers. She foresees next year as being worse, with 24 million, or 20 percent of the work force, experiencing unemployment.

To the editor:

July 25-31 has been proclaimed National Farm Safety Week by President Carter. This marks the 37th consecutive observance of the rural safety effort. National Farm Safety Week is sponsored by the National Safety Council and Extension Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The theme this year is to encourage the use of personal protective equipment. It has been noted that the best safety device is a willingness to work in ways that minimize the chance of accidents. When these individual efforts are backed up by the use of protective equipment such as safety shoes, hard hats, safety eyewear, acoustic earmuffs or inserts, gas masks, filter masks and respirators, the number of farm-related accidents can be greatly reduced.

Each of the above-mentioned protective equipment devices serves a purpose of its own and should be used when applicable. One example: Lungs can be protected from dust, mold, paint spray or pesticides with the use of gas/filter masks or respirators.

It is estimated that more than 5,000 farm and ranch residents could lose their lives this year and some 450,000 suffer disabling injuries. The cost of these accidents could exceed $5 million. These figures could be reduced with the adoption of safer work, play and driving practices, by remedying hazardous conditions and making full use of personal protective equipment.

If we do not live or work on a farm, we could and should put these safety practices to work, also.

To the editor:

The public is waiting to learn whether Senator Robert Morgan will respond "yea" or "nay" to Dr. John East's challenge to debate the vital issues, such as national defense and government spending. Morgan's roll-call vote in the U. S. Senate has been alarming to informed moderates and conservatives because he has too frequently voted exactly as the ultra-liberals have. One very recent example: June 10 of this year, he abstained from voting on the Kassebaum Amendment which would require the draft registration of 19- and 20-year-old women. The amendment was defeated 51 to 40, but Robert Morgan was one of nine Senators refusing to vote, as were Ted Kennedy, George McGovern and Frank Church. Thus, on this issue, also, Morgan has aligned himself with avid liberals.

Perhaps Morgan feels poorly informed on the ramifications of the drafting of women, or perhaps he feels his personal opinion on the drafting of women conflicts with the values of the majority of his constituents. If he feels confident and competent to take on John East's challenge to debate, perhaps Morgan's philosophy on such an issue will be made obvious to those he is supposed to represent.

We sincerely hope Morgan will not meekly abstain from participating in public debate with John East at this time.

each to fill the vast empty spaces left by Barron's absence.

I didn't have 50 odd facts at my fingertips in those days, but I improved little gems like:

- New Jersey produces more cranberries than Alaska.
- Irish golf balls are smaller than American golf balls, but the holes are bigger. (Not a single duffer anywhere challenged this assertion).
- Saul Pett took a more personalized approach to the assignment. He devised 50 fillers all using the word wing, such as:
 - A wing is found on a bird.
 - Princeton's Charlie Caldwell is considered the master of the single wing.
 - The wing chair was designed for use in front of the fireplace.
 - A wing is a tactical unit of the Air Force consisting of two or more groups.
 - Saul winged it all afternoon, ending up with the delightful:
 - Wing is a common Chinese name. So is Wong.
- For weeks afterwards I searched three or four newspapers a day trying to find the Wing-Wong filler, but I never did. As a newspaper filler, in print, it would have been a classic in a class with the TV talk show host, who intoned, "Please welcome the author of the new best seller 'I Saw the Fill of the Philippines.'" munity has worth protecting. Howard says it usually takes a few months, depending on the size of the community, to produce an inventory leading to a publication containing an essay on the history and architecture of the area complete with pictures and descriptions of the buildings, sites, and structures; and recommendations for planning steps to protect the heritage of the community.

The division of Archives and History of the state's Cultural Resources Department will share in the cost, provide guidance, and otherwise help in the process.

Writing in the current issue of Popular Government, a periodical published by the Institute of Government at Chapel Hill, Howard puts much of the responsibility for maintaining a livable and attractive community on local governments.

There have been regrettable incidents in recent months in which several local governments have allowed historic buildings to be demolished to make way for commercial ventures or parking lots.

"Local governments cannot expect private citizens to preserve buildings and to be concerned about community appearance if they do not set good examples with government properties. In many N.C. towns a look at government owned property provides a clue to the community.

Set Example

"Some counties are allowing landmark courthouses to deteriorate seriously, and some town halls have an unkempt appearance. In these communities many privately owned properties look the same way.

"Towns and counties should set good examples...even if it costs a little more at the present time," Howard insists.

And when older buildings no longer serve original purposes, local governments should adapt them to other uses, Howard notes, and describes art centers in water towers, condominiums in old schools, and numerous local and state offices located in older houses.

"Adaptive use of older buildings has saved the taxpayers money and at the same time preserved community landmarks," Howard says.

Howard presents a thorough review of the various zoning and planning techniques available to communities such as historic district commissions, awards programs, financial incentives and tax breaks, and designation of buildings as historic sites to both encourage and to push preservation.

Protecting the best from the past is one way to stand off spreading blight results from rapid growth, Howard believes.

Car Sales Are Still In Neutral

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — Sales of domestic cars, down 27 percent in mid-July compared with the same period last year, have returned to their old course — going nowhere — now that big rebates are no longer being offered.

The five major producers said Wednesday they delivered 151,755 cars from July 11 through July 20, compared with 233,198 last year. There was one more selling day in 1979, so the percentage comparison is based on sales per day.

The sales rate, 18,969 a day, was the lowest for the period since 17,490 in 1960.

Early July sales trailed the 1979 period by only 19 percent, but rebates were being offered by Ford Motor Co. at the time.

Rebates typically attract buyers who would have bought later anyway, analysts say, leaving demand depressed in following weeks.

"Overall, the month promises to be better than May and June," said Bennett Bidwell, vice president in charge of Ford's car and truck group.

If the mid-July sales rate were carried through for the entire year, 5.8 million vehicles would be sold, compared with actual sales last year of 8.3 million.

Imports, which do not report sales until August, added another 2.3 million to last year's sales and would add about 2.1 million to the July annual rates.

General Motors Corp. recorded a 24 percent sales decline, from 144,414 cars to 97,129 in mid-July. Ford sales fell 36 percent from 56,142 to 32,159. Chrysler Corp. sales dropped 29 percent from 17,550 to 14,037.

Volkswagen of America sales fell 10 percent from 5,917 to 4,730 and American Motors Corp. sales dipped 5.1 percent from 4,386 to an estimated 3,700. AMC does not report 10-day sales.

For the year so far GM was off 18 percent, from 2,816,547 to 2,300,440. Ford declined 31 percent from 1,253,460 to 859,630; Chrysler fell 34 percent from 539,195 to 356,258; VW was up 11 percent from 94,465 to 104,639; and AMC rose 6.1 percent from 81,214 to an estimated 86,188.

Lights Out And Petty Crime Up

SCAPPOOSE, Ore. (AP) — There's been an upswing in petty crime in this Columbia County town since the town council decided it couldn't pay its light bill, but police don't know whether the lack of streetlights is to blame.

The council found it necessary to pull the plug on the lights last week after voters rejected tax measures aimed at balancing the budget in this community of 3,200.

Police Chief Richard Plane said Scappoose has experienced a recent upswing in petty crime. "But we don't know yet whether it's the lights or people being out because the weather's finally nice."

Taste Of College Life For The Gifted, Talented

By LEIGH COAKLEY
Reflector Staff Writer
Junior high and high school students across the state are getting a taste of what college life is all about this week at East Carolina University, during the 1980 Gifted and Talented Science Camp. They are staying in Tyler and Aycock dormitories on the ECU campus.

The camp is now in its second year and was formed to provide exceptional students with exposure to equipment and theory in the science fields that they otherwise may not get in their high school classes. The Gifted and Talented Science Camp goes a few steps further.

Students are selected for the camp on the basis of recommendations from their school teachers, counselors, principals, and on the basis of their grades in science and mathematics and their latest achievement scores.

According to Floyd E. Mattheis, Camp Director and Professor of Science Education at East Carolina, the purpose of the camp is to "bring bright kids in that are interested in science and allow them to spend a week with university professors in specific science fields. Our intention is to hire top faculty members rather than graduate students to teach these kids. I think we have accomplished this," he said.

Many of the professors working with the camp are dealing with students in these age groups for the first time. Mattheis said that it has proven to be a rewarding experience for all concerned. The professors are genuinely impressed with the questions and abilities of these students. Four or five of the students attending the camp this year will be attending the North Carolina High School of Science and Mathematics next year in Durham.

Last year, the Science Camp grouped 116 seventh, eighth, and ninth graders together. This year, however, the students have been divided into two groups according to their class ranks - seventh and eighth graders and ninth and tenth graders. "We feel this way of grouping the students has been more effective," said Mattheis.

This year, there is a total of 176 students attending the camp. The first week of the camp held last week, 116 attended; this week 96. Most of the students are from North Carolina. "Bringing students in from out of state for one week would be difficult for obvious reasons," Mattheis said. "We concentrate on the Charlotte, Piedmont, Southern Virginia and local areas."

Each student selects two areas in science to study during their week at the camp. Areas of study to choose from include Applied Plant Science, Photography, Astronomy, Computer Science, Solar Energy, Relativity, Analytical Chemistry, Prehistoric Cultures of Eastern N.C., Archeological Techniques, and Biological Applications of Electron Microscopy.

ECU science majors serve as counselors and escort the groups of students around the campus. According to Mattheis, their schedule during the week is quite busy. The students attend classes all day; have recreational periods in late afternoon; and attend lecture demonstrations during the evening. On Monday night, Dr. Carl Adler, Professor of Physics at ECU, gave a lecture on the theories behind colonizing space. Tuesday night's lecture was given by Dr. Chai-Yu Li, Professor of Chemistry, on chemistry concepts, and on Wednesday night, Adler spoke on the controversies of Galileo's theories.

"We try to keep the classes small - no larger than 15 or 16," stressed Mattheis. He indicated that when the students first come to the camp, they are concerned about how they will be evaluated. "There are no tests and no grades. They are highly motivated students."

Mattheis said that DuPont sponsored 16 students this year. They recruited the students themselves and awarded them "scholarships" so to speak to attend. "These camps need to be for students from rural areas as well as for the rich kids."

Karen Collier, Associate Camp Director said that the camp is good publicity for ECU. "The camp brings ECU into their realm of thinking and familiarizes them with what we have to offer," she said. "Perhaps they will come to school here."

Collier indicated that this particular camp differs from other camps in that it provides them with a more realistic setting. They attend classes in different buildings on campus and participate in various activities. "The basketball and band camps here are limited in that the students go from their dormitories to the gym and music building to the cafeteria and back to the dormitories. We give them some freedom."

"I was walking two girls down College Hill attending the camp for their second year, smiled Collier, "and they were concerned about not being able to attend the camp next year. They want to come back and help."

Ass'n Says Favoritism In Insurance Selection

Officials of the North Carolina State Government Employees Association say the Hunt administration has undercut the association in its selection of a private insurance company, to do business with Department of Corrections employees and that there was favoritism behind the selection of a Farmville firm that is the carrier for the company chosen.

J. Arch Laney, the association's executive director, said the choice of National Savings and Life Insurance Company of Tennessee by Department of Corrections (DOC) officials as the provider of optional payroll deduction insurance policies for DOC employees, invades the province of the employees' association. He added that he believes the carrier, Pierce Insurance Agency of Farmville, was picked because of the acquaintance of Lonnie Pierce, owner and operator of the agency, and Thomas S. "Rip" Ryon, DOC Secretary for Fiscal Affairs, who chose the agency. Pierce lives in Farmville and Ryon is originally from Farmville.

Hunt Special Assistant Joe Pell said that to allow only the employees' association to choose insurance carriers cuts out competition and was not in the best interest of state employees.

Ryon said he knew National Savings agent Pierce while he was growing up in Farmville, but that he had not seen him in 10 or 15 years prior to the time Pierce submitted a proposal for the DOC business. He said his investigations proved that National Savings offered the best coverage of any of the 15 to 18 companies that submitted proposals.

Ryon said the final choice was delayed 90 days because the State Employees Association asked DOC officials to wait and let the association perform its traditional duty of selecting the carrier. "We held up 90 days and, at that point, they still had not gone anywhere," he said. "So we went ahead and acted."

"I really don't feel there is a controversy," Mrs. Wanda Pierce, co-owner and operator of the Pierce Insurance Company with her husband, Lonnie, said. "We are not in competition with the State Employees' Association. On the contrary, we think it has made wonderful gain for state employees. We have been offering our programs to many state departments for the past 22 years. This program was presented back in December to an insurance committee for the DOC. Nine other companies made presentations at the same time and there was no indication of who would be selected. I think the department finally decided that our disability policy had the most benefits for the premium involved."

'The School Prayer War' Is Resuming

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - A new battle in an old war opens on Washington's Capitol Hill next week over prayers in public schools. It comes amid some apparently discordant notes between most people and some of their religious leaders.

Surveys repeatedly and consistently show that most Americans favor school prayers. But with new congressional maneuvers to allow such devotions, representatives of major Protestant and Jewish bodies are working to maintain the court restrictions.

The contrasts came into focus as a House judiciary subcommittee scheduled public hearings on the matter July 29-30 and Aug. 9, and with the religious representatives issuing statements and writing legislators opposing moves to lift the restraints.

For 17 years, ever since the U.S. Supreme Court outlawed officially sponsored prayers in public schools, unsuccessful efforts have been made to circumvent the decision, usually through a constitutional amendment.

But this time, "voluntary" school prayers also being ruled out by some courts and school officials on the basis of the Supreme Court stand, a new tactic is being pushed to get around the barrier.

The U.S. Senate last April passed a bill to remove Supreme Court jurisdiction over state laws relating to "voluntary prayers in public schools or in public buildings."

In the House, the proposal has been bottled up in committee for more than a year, but in recent weeks, a high-pressure drive has been under way to force the bill out of committee and on to the floor.

At latest count, 177 House members had signed the discharge petition, with 218 necessary to accomplish it. In the face of that crunch, the subcommittee chaired by Rep. Robert Kastermeier, D-Wis., scheduled the hearings to try to diffuse the pressure.

The hearings may take some steam out of the discharge-petition drive, says John W. Baker, general counsel of the Washington-based Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs, which strongly opposes the measure.

Its sponsor is Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-Ind., while the already passed, parallel measure in the Senate was Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Washington representatives of major Protestant bodies - Baptists, Methodists, Lutherans, Episcopalians, Presbyterians and others - have spoken out against the measure as undermining separation of church and state.

But many evangelical bodies, including the relatively smaller denominations in the National Association of Evangelicals, have steadily pressed for restoration of school prayers.

Recently, too, that effort has been bolstered by several newly formed conservative religious organizations to exert influence in the political arena, such as Religious Roundtable, Moral Majority, Christian Voice and various TV evangelists.

Although Roman Catholic bishops have not voiced any position on the specific current legislation, they have favored amending the Constitution to say it should not be "construed to forbid prayer" in public schools or institutions.

Meanwhile, the Princeton Religious Research Center reports the latest Gallup poll finds 76 percent of Americans - 82 percent of Protestants and 77 percent of Catholics - favor changes allowing Bible reading and prayers in public schools.

That balance of opinion has remained almost the same in successive polls ever since the Supreme Court in 1962 and 1963 ruled school-sponsored religious exercises were unconstitutional.

Recently, however, some courts also have struck down as illegal laws allowing "voluntary" prayer. The Massachusetts Supreme Court did so last April, and last year, a federal district judge did the same in Chandler, Ariz.

Although the U.S. Supreme Court in its landmark decisions specifically barred government-sponsored religious exercises in schools, some schools and courts have taken it to mean any religious manifestations.

When a group of high school students in Guilford, N.Y., a suburb of Albany, sought to gather voluntarily in an empty classroom for prayer before each school day, school officials prohibited it on advice of legal counsel.

In St. Louis last month, the nation's biggest Protestant denomination, the Southern Baptist Convention, adopted a two-sided resolution about the matter, opposing any undercutting of the Supreme Court decisions, but also saying:

"We hereby affirm our belief in the right to have voluntary prayers in public schools."

That's what the new legislative formula seeks to do, but the major Protestant voices in Washington, Baptists among them, say it would not be in the best interest of First Amendment assurances of a government "hands off" policy about religion or of religion itself.

Vigils Held By Quakers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Through this week and next, the American Friends Service Committee representing Quakers and various church-related and other anti-draft groups are staging vigils at post offices in many cities.

"THINK before you register for the draft," reads an AFSC leaflet handed out in front of postoffices. "Remember, there has never been a draft registration without a draft and seldom a draft without a war."

Like several church groups, the Quaker organization urges young men to heed their consciences about registering. It offers support to those refusing to register or who conscientiously object to military service.

The purpose is to help youths "make informed decisions based on individual conscience wherever it leads," says Asia A. Bennett, AFSC executive secretary.

The Lutheran Council in the U.S., in a letter to pastors, says that if a young man decides not to register, "the churches stand ready to support him with counseling and love."

Guests Will Lead Services

Special weekend guests of the Nazarene Church of Christ will be Eldress Martha Green and Eldress Pierce, choir and ushers of St. Mary F.W.B. Church of New Haven, Conn.

Terry's Farewell Recital Sunday

A farewell recital will be given Sunday at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church by organist Mickey Terry. The recital will be at 10:30 a.m., just prior to the morning worship service.

Terry has been accepted into the Ph.D. program in European History at Georgetown University, Washington, D. C., and is scheduled to begin studies this fall.

The recital, dedicated to Jarvis Church members, will consist of J. S. Bach's "Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor;" Louis Vierne's "Mediation" from "Trois Improvisations," and Vierne's "Finale" from the Fifth Symphony.

The public is invited.

THE OLD WAY

The old pump handle was the counterpart of our modern water faucet. You simply had to be thirsty enough to want to pump water.

New ways often bring little that's new. They just make it easier to satisfy our necessities.

But those who spiritually thirst - for souls that are dry, there is no new way. There is no way to pipe the water of a new life into the soul of man.

It isn't difficult to overcome the spiritual drought of our time. But you've got to realize your own thirst for God. And you've got to draw on the deep, refreshing resources where they are. Let the church or synagogue of your choice help you rediscover the old way.

Says New AMA Code Has Less Protection

By SUE FERNALD
Reflector Staff Writer

"The new American Medical Association Code of Ethics provides less protection for the public," according to Dr. James Carter, president of Pitt County Medical Society. He also stated that the code was adopted purely under the direction of the government, and the public is getting less protection because of this government involvement.

The new code was adopted by the AMA Tuesday in Chicago, and allows physicians to advertise their fees and services and to refer patients to chiropractors.

According to Carter the whole purpose of the AMA and the new Code of Ethics is to provide the best possible care to patients. He stated that the previous code was very restrictive in that it said physicians should not associate with practitioners of unscientific methods. This acceptance of chiropractors, naturopaths and osteopaths, he explained.

Naturopaths have been outlawed in most places and one of the causes for this was the AMA's organized campaign against this sort of practice. This type of practitioner uses all sorts of manipulative methods in treatment according to Carter.

"The AMA has accepted osteopaths," commented Carter. These practitioners generally have four years of medical training considerably similar to that of MD's and are accepted on almost all hospital staffs as well as their referrals.

One of the reasons for includes chiropractors, according to Carter, was the expense involved in fighting the suits brought against the AMA by the chiropractors, who said the old code was restrictive.

"A great number of chiropractors are totally ethical, however, there are some who step beyond their bounds," Carter said. He pointed out that the AMA does accept them doing the things that they were trained to do. Other sections contained within the code include segments concerning advertising and solicitation. According to Carter the AMA has made a distinction between solicitation and advertising for a long time, and the AMA for almost 20 years has not opposed doctors stating their fees and the services they can perform, which would be classified as advertising.

However, as Carter interprets the code, it does not approve solicitation. This would involve actually trying to talk a patient into one physician as being better than another and making claims one could not back up.

A doctor who asked not to be identified said that he feels, "the AMA is too concerned with protecting doctors and not concerned enough with helping patients."

Some examples of this, he pointed out, are the AMA's opposition to insurance policies, such as those controlled by Blue Cross-Blue Shield. Other situations that would benefit patients that the AMA has been against in the past are Medicaid and Medicare, he said.

The new code encompasses

Weyerhaeuser Tries A Remedy

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — The Weyerhaeuser Co. has begun an experimental pumping of oxygen into its wastes from its pulp mill near New Bern to see if it will help clean up the Neuse River.

Glenn Wood, the company's environmental affairs manager, said the mill's waste products normally caused a reduction of oxygen in the water.

Wood said the project was designed only to offset the impact of the pulp mill and he did not know if it would improve the overall quality of the river.

seven points which stipulate that the physician "shall respect the rights of patients, of colleagues, and of other professionals," that the physician should, "continue to study, obtain consultation, and use the talents of other health professionals when indicated," and to deal honestly with patients and colleagues.

However, the new code inherently recognizes the powerful new role of the government in medicine through Medicaid and Medicare. This addition deletes Section six of the old code which said that the physician should not be compelled to perform "under conditions which tend to interfere with or impair the free and complete exercise of his medical judgement and skill."

New Police Chief Named 264 Hearing....

WILLIAMSTON — Willie Rogers, a former North Carolina Highway Patrol sergeant, and chief of the Williamston Police Department for the past four years, has been appointed sheriff of Martin County.

The Martin County Board of Commissioners voted Tuesday to hire Rogers to fill the unexpired term of Sheriff Raymond Rawls, who will resign September 1.

Rogers submitted his resignation to the Williamston town board yesterday, to become effective August 31.

Rogers, 48, said, "I think it's a big challenge. It's something I always wanted to do."

He began his career in law enforcement as a military policeman in the Army between 1953 and 1955. He joined the Highway Patrol following his discharge from service and held the rank of sergeant when he went to Williamston as chief of the Police Department.

Rawls is resigning the post as part of a plea-bargaining arrangement on a charge of illegally receiving prescription drugs.

also in favor of a northern loop around Greenville.

The manager of Boroughs Wellcome Co. spoke in favor of the loop as the majority of materials coming and going from the plant are shipped by motor freight.

Jack Webb, spokesman for the mayor of Washington and Jimmy Glen, chairman of the transportation division of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, put in a few words urging the completion of the Pitt segment of 264 so it could be continued into Washington.

A resident of the area, W. Smith Kirkland, who is being relocated by the highway, also expressed support of the highway. "I have dodged as many pickups, farmers, tobacco trucks, dogs, and tractors as anyone else" and is looking forward to the completion of the highway, he commented. He made a suggestion that there be a loop, but suggested that it be located a good way out from the city to avoid any overflow from the city's growth.

According to T.L. Waters, manager of Planning and Research for the Department of Transportation said the DOT is still involved in plans concerning the proposed loop. He said there is a consultant under contract and that they are "getting close to circulating a draft environmental impact statement."

As to the location of the proposed loop, the only information Waters could give was that it might leave off a mile or so from the hospital. The loop would be north-westerly, and would circle around, cross the river and possibly tie into the eastern by-pass. However no location is concrete as of yet and several locations are being looked at, he added.

Prison Rioters Videotaped To Aid In Damage Prosecutions

By QUANE KENYON
Associated Press Writer
BOISE, Idaho (AP) - Drawing on lessons learned from another prison riot, Idaho State Penitentiary officials say they preserved evidence and videotaped destructive acts to help prosecute inmates who caused an estimated $2.7 million in damages during a 20-hour prison riot.

Heavily armed police restored order early Thursday at the 500-inmate prison eight miles south of here after officers rescued a prison guard held hostage by inmates.

No deaths were reported in the rampage, but state Corrections Director C.W. "Bill" Crowl said 18 inmates were injured and four cell blocks severely damaged.

Crowl said the most serious injuries were the broken arm and head injury after a riot at the New Mexico State Penitentiary that claimed 33 lives, that prosecution could be hindered if crime scenes were destroyed as officials regained control of an institution.

"We hope to get some prosecution this time," Crowl said. "We were very careful to preserve the crime scenes wherever we could." He said lower guards videotaped inmates engaged in destructive acts Wednesday evening.

The riot began Wednesday after prison officials made a surprise but routine search of cells while prisoners were at lunch. When inmates returned to their cells and found items missing, they seized control of the main prison compound and took guards Lynart Orr and Calvin May hostage.

Officials decided not to use force to contain the uprising, but began negotiations that led to May's release Wednesday night.

Early Thursday, Crowl, fearing for Orr's safety after hearing reports that inmates were sniffing glue and lacerating and brewing homemade whiskey, ordered a special squad of 12 men to storm Cell Block 11 and free the hostage. The operation, aided by five inmates inside, took about five minutes and caused no injuries.

About 30 minutes later, some 100 police carrying riot guns and automatic weapons swept through the prison yard and buildings, herding 400 inmates to an athletic field. The inmates offered no resistance.

Besides setting numerous fires, inmates smashed vehicles into walls and broke almost every window in the institution, officials said.

Evans said he would appoint a commission to look into inmate grievances. During negotiations, inmates complained of bad food, poor visiting hours and inadequate recreation and rehabilitation.

Eagle Sarmont Is Looking To Public

MONTREAL (AP) - California hang glider pilot Eagle Sarmont appealed to Canadian media today for help in getting the transport ministry to approve his plans to fly across Canada as part of a trans-Atlantic crossing to Paris.

Sarmont, 28, of Santa Cruz, Calif., said he would also like to meet with Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

"Being a sportsman himself, he might appreciate what I'm trying to do...I haven't given up yet," Sarmont told reporters here after a train ride Thursday from Baie Comeau, Quebec, 380 miles to the northeast.

Sarmont, his glider, "Spirit of California," and back-up crew have been stranded there since Monday, when aviation officials ruled he was not well enough equipped to travel safely over the sparsely-inhabited terrain.

Sarmont appealed directly to Canada's Transport Minister, Jean-Luc Pepin, who agreed to review the decision. On Thursday, the minister upheld the earlier ruling, saying Canadian taxpayers shouldn't run the risk of paying for a costly search and rescue operation if Sarmont ran into any trouble. There was also concern Sarmont might fly in the path of commercial traffic.

"One of the things I was trying to prove on this trip was that the technology (aviation pioneer Charles) Lindbergh used to fly across the Atlantic is now available to anybody," Sarmont told reporters here.

"But what else has changed since then is the bureaucracy which just won't let you do it."

Chosen For Court Post

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Gov. Jim Hunt today appointed Democratic state Sen. Willis Whichard of Durham to the state Court of Appeals, effective Aug. 31.

Whichard, a five-term legislator and ally of the governor, will replace Judge Frank M. Parker. He will retire at the end of August after 13 years on the state's second-highest court.

Brent Hackney, deputy press secretary to Hunt, announced the appointment today.

Parker's term expires Dec. 31, 1982, but Whichard's appointment will run only through the end of 1980.

To fill out the remainder of Parker's term, Whichard must face election to the seat in the November general election.

Appeals court judges normally are elected statewide for eight-year terms, but the governor may make an appointment - lasting until the next general election - when a vacancy occurs.

Hackney said the appointment also means that Democrats must find a new candidate for Whichard's state Senate seat, Whichard had been unopposed as a candidate for re-election until the bench appointment was made.

The appointment of a new candidate will be up to the Democratic Party's 13th Senate District committee, Hackney said.

Whichard is a Durham lawyer who flirited briefly with the idea of running for lieutenant governor this year. Whichard ruled himself out as a candidate, however, before filing for that office began.

Unemployment...

filing for unemployment. A person cannot file while drawing severance or vacation pay.

Hannan remarked that in connection with local industries he wanted to emphasize his opinion on industrial development in Pitt County. "Lots of people have condemned the attitude and actions of governing bodies in Greenville and Pitt County in their choice of smaller, clean industries. But we can see now that it's been a wise policy. We have a diversified industry base and diversification helps at tight times like these. I say a lot of credit must go to people who have planned for industries coming into the area."

Statewide, Pitt County has fared about average in the unemployment picture. The report for June shows that Person has been the county hardest hit, with a June unemployment rate of 14.6 percent (compared to 8.2 percent for that county June a year ago). Two counties, Wake and Polk, have the lowest unemployment rates for June, each at 4.7 percent. "Pitt is in the middle, average group," Hannan said.

Also significant in the current unemployment picture in Pitt County is, Hannan said, "the fact that the unemployment is scattered throughout a wide spectrum of job and pay levels. Workers from those drawing minimum wage on through employees making $7 and $8 an hour are involved."

Again, there's the other side of the coin - jobs on file that cannot be filled because of the lack of persons qualified for the job or the failure of qualified people to come in to apply for these particular jobs. "At this time," Hannan said, "our register lists about 235 jobs needing to be filled, ranging from some laborers to secretaries, a carpenter foreman, credit counselors, x-ray technicians, census evaluators and tool setters."

Currently, the 8.4 percent unemployment figure in Pitt County equates to a total of 3,660 persons in the job market being unemployed. Of the 3,660, Hannan explained, approximately 1,000 filed application for unemployment benefits. Of that thousand, 800 unemployed workers have qualified for unemployment benefits at this time. "This is a little on the high side," Hannan said. "The average number drawing unemployment compensation runs between 500 and 600."

Workers in good employment times, the figure is as low as 300."

Pirates Nip Heels, 5-4 In League Playoffs

Whew! Sage's Single In 9th Gives ECU Victory

By LARRY SULLIVAN
Reflector Sports Writer
Whew!

The East Carolina Pirates came about as close to ending their season as they cared to last night.

Leading 4-0 after seven innings in the do-or-die first round game of the N.C. Collegiate Summer League playoffs at Harrington Field, the Gary Overton-coached unit watched as the Tar Heels of North Carolina tied the game in the eighth on four hits and an ECU error.

Nevertheless, dependable designated hitter Mike Sage kept the Pirates' season going with a bases-loaded infield single in the bottom of the ninth to drive home Kelly Robinette with the fifth and decisive run.

The 5-4 victory advances East Carolina, 19-12, to the second round of the playoffs, slated to get underway today at Louisburg College where ECU will battle the Hurricanes at 1:00 p.m. The loss eliminates UNC, 7-22, from Summer League action.

"I just tried to hit the pitch somewhere," Sage said of his game-winning hit. "I was ahead of everything all night. The pitch I hit looked like either an off-speed pitch or a tailing fastball. All I know is that the run got in, and that's all that matters."

Not only did Sage knock in the winning run, but he also allowed Pirate hurler Kirk Parsons (8-2) to beat the Tar Heels for the fourth time this season. ECU won all six of its regular season games against UNC.

Parsons, a rising sophomore, tied injured ace Bill Wilder for the team lead in pitching victories with his distance-going eight-hitter last night. The crafty right-hander gave up the four runs in the eighth while striking out three and walking four.

"My arm felt a little tight at the very beginning. After the first couple of ground outs, though, I started feeling better. I really have to credit the infield tonight," Parsons said, referring to the Pirates' three double plays. "They won this game for us."

For UNC, southpaw Ron Huffman started the game, lasting six innings, before giving away to righty Bruce Woods. Huffman gave up four runs on six hits while fanning three and issuing four walks. Woods, who took the loss, worked three innings and gave up four hits. He walked two and struck out none.

Coach Overton, who was obviously upset over the conditions surrounding the game, was pleased with his team's pressure performance. "It was a hard fought ball game. Both teams were loose. I think. Our players wanted to play."

"I think because of the situation, we thought about our season as a whole during the game. I think it's been a success and we're happy."

The bottom of the ninth inning made it very happy for the Pirates. After one out, Robinette and Todd Hendley singled and John Hallow walked to load the bases. Sage then followed with his slow roller to shortstop Mitch McCleny who threw too late at the plate to catch Robinette.

"We played well together. We knew it was do-or-die."

Overton added.

After the first double play got the Pirates out of a jam in the first inning, ECU tallied the first run of the game in the home half of the second. Sage reached on an error and moved to second on Charlie Smith's walk. Mark Wakai advanced both runners one base with a sacrifice bunt before Jay Carroway's sacrifice fly scored Sage.

While Parsons was limiting the Tar Heels to just one hit over the next four innings, his team backed him up with three runs in the fifth.

Robert Wells led off with a walk and moved to second on Mike Sorrell's sacrifice bunt.

Robinette followed with his second of four hits in the game, and when the left fielder bobbled the hit, Wells scored.

Hendley walked to put men on first and second. Hollow then ripped a single to right, scoring Robinette before Sage drove home Hendley with a single, his first RBI of the game.

The 4-0 spread stood until the top half of the eighth when the visitors opened up for four hits, including a double and a two-run home run, and used a Pirate miscue.

Tom Daily reached on Robinette's error and moved to third when Parson's pick-off throw was wild to first. Joe Reto then singled, driving home Daily. David Price singled, moving Reto to second, before McCleny hit into the third double play, allowing Reto to go to third. Lee Sullivan then followed with a smashing double to dead center, easily scoring Reto.

Pirates Get Forfeit, Not First-Round Bye

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

What the rain brought East Carolina's baseball team Wednesday was washed away abruptly Thursday afternoon when North Carolina Summer League officials ruled that the Pirates must forfeit a makeup game left unplayed.

The Pirates' makeup game Wednesday with Louisburg was rained out and could not be reset because the league tournament, already one day behind schedule, was set to begin Thursday night. Without playing that game, the Pirates were left at 18-11, one game behind league champ Louisburg and one game ahead of UNC-Wilmington.

A win Wednesday would have left the Pirates tied with Louisburg for the league title. A loss, however, would have left the Pirates and the Seahawks tied for third. Previously, it had been thought that since UNC-W had beaten ECU five of six times this summer the Seahawks would be awarded second place and the first-round bye in the tournament which goes to the top two teams. According to ECU coach Gary Overton this isn't necessarily so.

"I just found this out a few days ago, that it isn't in the league bylaws that a tie is broken by which team has won the most games between the two," he said.

"He's right, it's not in the constitution," League President James Mallory said. "It is in the minutes, though."

As it was after Thursday's forfeit ruling, the Seahawks received the bye anyway.

"It wouldn't have been fair to UNC-Wilmington to have couldn't push the tournament back one day for that then what's the league for?"

Thursday's decision centers on a Pirate game with Louisburg, set for July 8, which was rained out. Since then, the Pirates have played the Hurricanes three times, including a makeup game Monday night for a game originally set for June 25 at Louisburg, without making the July 8 game up.

League officials argue ECU had plenty of time to make up the game. Overton, however, disagreed.

"What they're saying is we had ample opportunity to make up the game," he said. "It appears we did, but we had a load of games during that period - I think we had seven games in six days and I just didn't want to play another game in that stretch."

Another point Overton disputes is that the Pirates may have been hoping that the game would just not be played, an accusation hinted at by more than one official.

(Please turn to page 12)

busted their butts for 30 games and ECU to have played only 29 games." Summer League President James Mallory said yesterday afternoon. "Yes they squawked about it. That started the ball rolling. I spent from 8 a.m. to about 2 o'clock on the phone with the coaches of all the teams and (vice-president) Walter Rabb. The league tournament is already one day behind and we figured this was the fairest solution."

"ECU and Louisburg were to have played their final makeup game Wednesday night and since it was not played that game is as good as a forfeit," League secretary Lewis Rubin added. "The should have made the game up long ago."

ECU coach Gary Overton saw it differently.

"Did they say it was a forfeit?" he asked. "Well, as far as I'm concerned we're 18-11. Until we lose on the field that's our record. We play our games on the field, not in the office."

"I think the league handled this badly and they're trying to make us out as the black sheep, when we aren't," Overton said. "We did not know about it until one o'clock and I had no inkling about something like this until about 11. I had been told by the league president and vice-president earlier that if the game (Wednesday) was rained out it would not be played."

"What I don't understand is why they couldn't put the tournament back one more day and let us play Louisburg tonight," he added. "My point is, we had a chance to play for the league title and if they

Coe, Ovett Win Heats, Could Meet Saturday

MOSCOW (AP) — At the awards ceremony, Nadia Comaneci, silver medalist, shook hands with Yelena Davydova, gold medalist.

Tonight they were to come out fighting.

Comaneci's last chance for Olympic gold was to be the highlight of the sixth day of Olympic competition that also included the semifinals of the 800 meters. On Thursday, bitter rivals Steve Ovett and Sebastian Coe each took it easy in winning his heat, the first step toward their expected classic clash of running talent and egos in the 800 final Saturday night.

Also on today's schedule was the first appearance of two-time Olympic heavyweight champion Teofilo Stevenson, the Cuban knockout artist with the lethal right hand; the 100-meter dash final, and possibly more gold for the amazing Soviet gymnasts in the men's individual events.

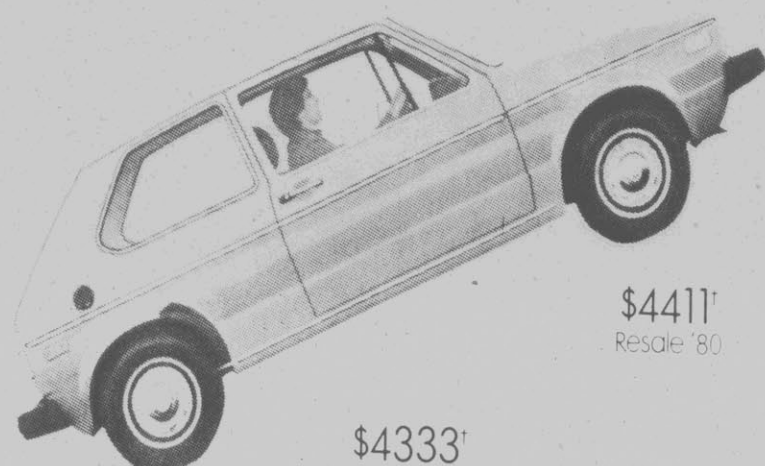

The Soviet Union continued to pile up the medals in the only Games in modern times without an American team. Through Thursday, the Soviets had 27 gold medals — the rest of the 80 nations here totaled 23 — and 53 medals overall. East Germany was a slipping second with nine gold and 37 total.

The Soviets picked up one gold medal Thursday night, which some will say was picked right out of Comaneci's

G'ville's Tarheel Champs Win Title

Greenville's Tarheel League all-stars, sparked by a seven-run first inning, whipped Greenville's North State League all-stars, 11-6, Thursday night to win the District IV Area II championship.

The win moves Tarheel into tonight's 5 o'clock showdown with ... in Havelock for the district crown.

The Tarheel wasted little time in taking the lead Thursday night, pushing across seven runs in the bottom of the first. North State narrowed the gap to 8-5 going into the bottom of the fifth but Tarheel scored three more runs to seal the victory. North State's final run came in the sixth.

In the first, Sterling Edwards walked to lead off and moved to second when Terry Warren reached on a fielder's choice. Ricky Outlaw then singled home Edwards and Brian Joyner followed with a single to score Warren.

Mitch Phillips then reached on a fielder's choice which scored Outlaw and when Monte Atkinson followed with a single Joyner came home. Phillips later scored on an error, giving Tarheel a 5-0 lead. Tarheel's final two runs came when Rodney Harris blasted a two-run homer with Atkinson.

North State scored once in the third and then rallied with three runs in the fourth to cut the lead 8-4. Mike Sasser and William Smith hit back-to-back singles to lead off the inning. Sasser then stole third and came home on an error, which moved Smith to third. Barnhill reached first on the error and both he and Smith scored on Scott Davis' double.

Tarheel, however, came up with three runs in the bottom of the inning on Phillips' three-run homer to seal the victory.

Ovett More Impressive In Heats, But Coe Has Better 800 Time

MOSCOW (AP) — Sebastian Coe and Steve Ovett — first round even.

That was how the British rivals for the middle distance Olympic gold medals stood after the first heats of the 800 meters.

"Things begin to warm up in the semifinals," said Coe, 23, holder of the world records in the mile, 1,500 and 800 meters. "Heats don't matter very much. Sometimes they are fast and sometimes they are slow. That's the way it goes."

The way it went in Moscow's Lenin Stadium Thursday was that Ovett, 24, was the more impressive winner in his heat, striding ahead over the last 50 meters to win by a clear margin in 1:49.4, but Coe, though harder pressed, had the better winning time of 1:48.5.

The two Englishmen, who have vied for world supremacy but never raced against each other since they attained athletic maturity, faced the semifinals of the 800 meters Friday and the final Saturday. Next week they are due to clash again in the 1,500 meters.

Ovett was never in any trouble in his heat. He stepped up the pressure on the home straight and finished several strides ahead of Antonio Paez of Spain.

Coe had a tougher battle winning his heat. He nosed ahead over the last few strides to edge Roger Milhau of France, who clocked the same time. Binko Kolev of Bulgaria was third, two-tenths of a second behind.

The 800 meters heats were run in the evening, after the torrid heat had subsided a little. But it was still around 86 degrees with a high humidity.

"Not very good conditions for running," said Coe. "But we were lucky to be running so late in the day. The conditions were worse in the afternoon."

The first day of track and field brought Italy's first gold medal. Maurizio Damilano, one of twin brothers in the 20 kilometer walk, went past a disqualified Russian to win in 1:23:35.5 — the best Olympic time ever.

Anatoly Solomin of the Soviet Union led throughout most of the race and was still in front approaching the entrance to the stadium. But within sight of victory he was disqualified, and Damilano swept to victory.

Daniel Bautista of Mexico, who won the gold medal in Montreal in the previous best Olympic time of 1:24:40, was also disqualified in the closing stages of the race. He and Solomin were both penalized for running.

Two women stars who have come back after being suspended for using anabolic steroids, the banned body-building drug, won gold medals.

Nadyezhda Tkachenko led a 1-2-3 sweep for the Soviet Union in the women's pentathlon and became the first woman to top 5,000 points. She won with 5,083, followed by Olga Rukavishnikova with 4,937 and Olga Kuragina with 4,875.

Iona Slupianek of East Germany, the other ex-steroids offender, won the women's shot put with a heave of 22.41 meters (73 feet, 6 1/4 inches.)

Finland's Lasse Viren, defending gold medalist in the 10,000 meters, was one of the luckiest qualifiers, and John Treacy of Ireland was the unluckiest loser.

Both ran in the same heat of the 10,000 meters. The first four men were certain to qualify. Viren dropped out of the running three laps from the finish, but Treacy was up with the leaders.

On the final lap Treacy's legs began to wobble. On the back stretch he collapsed and fell, and Viren, some 50 meters behind, took his chance and toiled in for fourth place.

Treacy was carried from the stadium on a stretcher and was treated at Olympic Village for dehydration. The Irish delegation reported later his condition was not serious.

Gold medals to be decided today were the men's 100 meters and triple jump and the women's javelin throw. In the triple jump Viktor Saneev of the Soviet Union was in contention for an unprecedented fourth straight gold medal.

Kush Said To Still Have ASU Ties

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Ousted Arizona State University football coach Frank Kush has continuing ties to the university that will give him $30,000 a year for the rest of his life, beginning at age 58, the Tempe Daily News said today.

The newspaper said guarantees to the 51-year-old Kush, who already has been paid $200,000 by the state as part of an agreement to leave the university, total another $350,000 and are contained in a little-known provision of the settlement pact.

The story continued: Part of the agreement allows the deposed coach to retain a financial link connected to about 100 of the best seats in Sun Devil Stadium. The university has agreed to continue providing the seats to a special trust fund known as the Legna Trust until 1987.

The choice seats set aside for Legna contributors will be paid at standard prices up to $68 a season and then resold by the trust for prices up to $500, said Kush's attorney, Harry Cavanagh, a Legna vice president when the trust was incorporated.

Arizona law doesn't prohibit ticket scalping.

Interviews and an examination of documents indicated the Legna foundation was born about nine years ago and, according to Kush, the trust now has about $148,000.

Cavanagh said when the trust matures in 1987, it will be worth about $350,000 and that at that time, Kush will start receiving payments of $30,000 a year for life, regardless of whether he is working elsewhere.

The agreement for the university to continue to provide the choice tickets to Legna apparently had the approval of university President John Schwada, who in 1977 was listed as a Legna director, the newspaper said. Schwada was not available for comment.

Cavanagh was quoted as saying about $28,000 a year is pouring into the trust fund, adding that if the fund fails to net at least $20,000 in any one season, Kush may withdraw the money.

If the trust had remained as originally set up, it would have dissolved when Kush was fired or left the university.

It was written so if Kush quit, the money would go to the university for scholarships. If he were fired, he then would get the accumulated money in the trust.

Conley Moves Football Time

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's varsity and junior varsity teams will meet Monday, not Sunday as previously scheduled, at 6:30 at the school.

Pirates Get Forfeit...

"Absolutely not. We did not try to get out of playing the game," said Overton following ECU's dramatic 5-4 win over UNC Thursday night in the first round of the league playoffs. "We had a chance for the league title — why would we not want to play?"

"I'm not falting Wilmington. They had a chance to finish second and I understand that. But what I'm saying is the league handled this very poorly," he said.

In fact, Overton said he tried to get Louisville to make the game up Thursday night and have the league put the tournament back one more day. However, neither Louisville, nor league officials, would agree to that.

"They wouldn't make up the game tonight because they said the posters and the media had already been told about the tournament and the schedule had already been set," Overton said.

Reportedly, at one point Thursday, league officials were going to put the tournament back one more day and let ECU-Louisburg play on Thursday. But Louisville coach Russ Frazier persuaded the league against this.

Oddly enough, Overton said he was not the one who wanted the game put off to the end of the season. "I'm not the one who suggested the game be put off until the end of the season," Overton said. "Frazier did. Later, he said we might be able to play it as a doubleheader before then, but we couldn't work it in."

"If we were trying to get out of playing Louisville, then why would we go to Louisville first," Overton said. "I let them have the first game at home. It wasn't my fault it rained Wednesday."

"Our players wanted Louisville. Look," said Overton, fist pumping in the air. "we had a chance for a league title. We weren't in sixth place and out of it. I've heard our pitching's hurt. But we didn't know (Bill) Wilder was out for the season until last week. If our pitching's so bad, why have we won 19 ballgames this summer?"

The Pirates get their chance at Louisville this afternoon, playing the Hurricanes at 1 p.m. in the second round of the tournament in Louisville.

SCIROCCO. A FAST ANSWER TO HIGH GAS PRICES.

If high gas prices are stopping you from buying a sportscar, consider this:

A Volkswagen Scirocco gets an EPA estimated 24 MPG 38 MPG highway estimate. (Compare these estimates to the "estimated MPG" of other cars. Actual mileage may vary with weather, speed and trip length. Actual highway mileage will probably be less.) What's more, the Scirocco's 1.6-liter, fuel-injected overhead cam engine with front-wheel drive will send you hurtling from a dead stop to 50 mph in 7.5 very short seconds.

And its dual diagonally linked disc/drum brakes will bring you safely back to 0.

On top of it all, you can get one right now.

scoreboard

Coe, Overt May Meet...

Finally, the digits 9.85 flash brightly on the scoreboard. Davydova was the Olympic champion, dethroning Comaneci, who settled for a silver medal with East Germany's Maxi Gnauk.

The Romanian coach seethed. He couldn't understand the 9.85, nor could the Romanian head judge, Maria Simionescu, who initiated a long dispute by refusing to accept Comaneci's mark from the four-referee panel from Czechoslovakia, Poland, Bulgaria and the Soviet Union. The competition jury, which rarely overrules the referees, eventually disallowed Simionescu's objection.

In gymnastics scoring, the high and low marks are discarded and the middle two are averaged. The results are always subjective, sometimes political. Whatever they were Thursday night, they weren't good for Comaneci, whose Olympic high in 1976 is turning into an Olympic low here.

On Monday, she picked up a 10 on the beam, but shared the spotlight with another young Soviet star, Natalia Shaposhnikova, who also scored a perfect 10. On Wednesday, the team event was concluded, with Nadia falling off the uneven parallel bars. She dropped to a humiliating fourth in the individual standings, and Romania, world champion in 1979, finished behind the Soviets.

She redeemed herself on the uneven bars with a 10 Thursday night, but lost it on the beam. Will tonight be her night? Individual medals will be awarded after competitions in the uneven bars, beam, vault and floor exercises. Nadia is 18 going on a lot more. Her sad, weary eyes show she's been through a lot since becoming television's darling when she won three gold medals four years ago.

Tonight will be her last chance for gold at these Olympics, and maybe forever.

Thursday's biggest dispute was in the gymnastic arena, but there were differences of opinion in other areas.

For the first time in Olympic history, an awards ceremony was held with no national flags. The three medalists in the 4,000-meter pursuit cycling came from Switzerland (gold medalist Robert Dill-Bundi), France and Denmark. Instead of boycotting, these nations chose to protest the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan by not displaying their flags or playing their anthems at Olympic ceremonies.

While the Olympic hymn was played and the five-ringed flags of the International Olympic Committee were raised, the Soviet spectators jeered and whistled, the European form of booing.

Bank Robberies In N.C. Almost Match 1979 Pace

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Bank robbers in North Carolina are continuing to hit financial institutions at a pace almost equal to last year's record number of bank robberies, according to the FBI.

But at the same time, bank robbers are being put behind bars almost as fast as they are robbing banks, and law enforcement agencies solve most bank robberies soon after they occur.

"It's really a stupid crime. The take is low and the penalty is high," FBI agent

Cecil Moses, second-in-command of the 80 agents in North Carolina, said in an interview.

North Carolina earned a dubious distinction last year by counting 115 bank robberies in the state, up a whopping 145 percent from the 48 robberies in 1978.

So far this year, there have been 62 bank heists in the state, compared with 79 robberies at this time last year.

But the FBI says the early solution rate for bank robberies is running about 70 percent, increasing to about 90 percent in the weeks and months after a robbery.

Under federal law, a convicted bank robber can get up to 25 years in prison. Under state law, a conviction for armed robbery can bring a sentence from seven years to life in prison.

So why do people keep robbing North Carolina banks?

"We're still trying to figure that out," said Moses, who worked as an agent in Tennessee last year. That state had 40 bank robberies.

The stock explanation for an increase in bank robberies is the economy — in hard times, Daddy takes it upon himself to stick up a bank to buy food and new shoes for the kids.

Moses said that's just not the way it is. Only one robbery so far this year was pulled off by a man who was apparently pushed over the economic brink, Moses said. "The profile of the average bank robber in this state is a male, early 20s, single and unemployed — but unemployed by choice," Moses said.

"Many of them are really parasites, committing bank robberies to feed serious drug habits. Or they may get hopped up on drugs and decide to rob a bank," he said.

There are also bank-robbery gangs at work in the state — locals and outsiders — who pull off a robbery with a touch of professionalism. Moses said one gang involving about seven men — most of whom are behind bars now — is believed responsible for at least 10 robberies.

"Groups tend to do their homework more. You can tell it's been planned by the way they deploy in the bank and the way they're not nervous. But it's not as highly organized as something like a Jesse James or John Dillinger-type gang," he said.

Another reason for robberies could be traced ironically to the high rate of conviction and imprisonment.

FBI figures say there is a 65 percent chance that a novice bank robber will try again once he gets out of prison. While he's in prison, he can pick up a few pointers.

"Bank robbers are apparently learning the trade inside prisons," Moses said.

But there is one factor that stands out. Robbers in North Carolina can choose from hundreds of branch banks, many in rural and isolated areas, that operate under liberal branch-bank laws not found in many states.

"What you have in North Carolina is really 85 banks and approximately 1,800 branches," Moses said. "Robbers are not hitting banks downtown. What they go for are banks in the suburbs and rural areas that offer easy escape."

Many banks have increased their security systems in the wake of the sudden upsurge in robberies last year.

Some banks are equipped with time locks on the vaults so if a robber wants to get into the vault, even if the bank president is there to nervously twirl the lock dials, the robber has to wait a few minutes for the timer to tick off.

But there are still weak spots.

"We had an instance in the state in the past six months where a bank didn't even have film in the camera. There's just no excuse for that," Moses said.

Three Aliens Killed By A Border Bandit Gang

SAN YSIDRO, Calif. (AP) — A search for a possible fourth victim of what one official called the most serious border violence in years has been canceled, the Border Patrol says.

Police, Border Patrol agents and volunteers called off their search Thursday after crews failed to find any clues to the source of a trail of blood near the bodies of two of three illegal Mexican aliens.

Don Cameron, chief of the Border Patrol's busy Chula Vista section, said he was "stunned" by the deaths and concerned that border bandits are moving deeper into the United States.

The bodies of the three illegal aliens were found on Wednesday, one near a busy highway and the other two in a canyon. The victims were shot repeatedly with a small-caliber pistol and all were found at locations three miles inside the border, officials said.

The men were identified as Norberto Valenzuela, 26,

Samuel Arriaga-Lopez, 18, and Froylan Juarez Deciderio, 25. No hometowns were given.

"Normally the bandits stay close to the border to make a quick getaway back to Mexico," Cameron said. "Usually the bandits operate in canyons that are inaccessible to our patrols."

But, he said, recent foggy weather may have made the bandits "a lot bolder." The weather has grounded Border Patrol helicopters most of this week.

In earlier incidents of border violence, five Border Patrol agents were confronted on June 30 by five masked bandits, one of whom fired a shot at the agents, Cameron said. That man was apprehended and jailed, he said.

In late May, an illegal Mexican alien was found shot four times and stabbed twice.

Many of the alien groups crossing the border are infiltrated by criminals, who rob, rape and assault the group members, Cameron said.

Capt. Charles Schilder, commander of the San Diego County police department's southern division, said reports of robbery and violence are increasing.

"It is a very lucrative business to victimize these people," he said.

Cameron agreed: "I've been here 28 years and in the past the Mexican nationals seldom came over with any money. Now they are selling their houses and properties to get up here and they are coming over with large sums of money."

Tests Conducted By Cosmonauts

MOSCOW (AP) — A Vietnamese cosmonaut and his Soviet partner are carrying out medical and scientific tests today in space following their linkup with the Salyut 6 space station and the two Soviet cosmonauts already aboard it, Tass reported.

The Soviet news agency said Russian flight commander Viktor Gorbalko and Vietnamese Lt. Col. Pham Tuan, the first Asian in space, docked with the station Thursday. They went aloft Wednesday aboard a Soyuz 37 shuttle craft from the launching grounds in Central Asia.

The two are scheduled to stay on board Salyut 6 for a week carrying out a variety of experiments, including aerial photography and medical tests, with cosmonauts Valery Ryumin and Leonid Popov. They have been aboard the station since April 9.

Cambodians Are Barred

GRAND PRATHEI, Thailand (AP) — Thai troops have killed some 2,000 guerrillas and civilian followers of ousted Cambodian Premier Pol Pot from fleeing across the border today after the Vietnamese took the guerrillas' Maai Hill stronghold in western Cambodia. Thai military sources said.

They said the Cambodians, some of them armed, were turned back at the Thai border at Ban Pan Suek, about 12 miles south of Grandprathet, after fleeing to the area when the Maai Hill fell on Thursday.

They said Thai planes and troops were sent to reinforce the border area in the event of possible spillover from the fighting.

The officers said the Vietnamese backed by tanks and artillery, took control of the Maai Hill after a month-long effort, forcing many of the guerrillas to retreat several miles to the south to another hilly frontier area.

The Thai command in Bangkok reported a continuing heavy Vietnamese offensive around the 1,000-foot Maai Hill but did not comment that the entire area had fallen to the Vietnamese.

The command said it got a report Thursday that the Vietnamese have been building a bridge in an attempt to transport tanks and heavy weapons from their stronghold at Phnom Mak Hoven into the Maai Hill area.

The Vietnamese invaded Cambodia on December 25, 1979, ousted Pol Pot two weeks later, and installed a pro-Hanoi government of Cambodian communists headed by Heng Samrin.

Sitton Named To Judgeship

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Morganton attorney Claude Sitton was appointed Thursday by Gov. Jim Hunt to a Superior Court judgeship for the 25th Judicial District.

Sitton, 42, will fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Judge Sam J. Ervin III, who has accepted a seat on the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals.

Sitton will be the Democratic nominee in the fall election to serve the remainder of Ervin's term, which ends Dec. 31, 1986.

Sitton is a former solicitor in Burke County criminal court. He received his undergraduate degree from the University of North Carolina and his law degree from Wake Forest University.

He is a past president of the Burke County Bar Association and a member of the N.C. Academy of Trial Lawyers and the American Bar Association.

By PETER J. BOYER
 AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC wouldn't have you know it, but there's a pretty good show running on that network on Saturday nights, a quick-witted newspaper sitcom called "Goodtime Harry." Catch it soon, because it is fast bound for that oblivion reserved for network unwanted.

"Goodtime Harry" is Ted Bessell, as an irresponsible wanderer whose considerable sportswriting talent is almost enough to balance his transgressions, but not quite. He has returned to San Francisco to beg one last chance from Gene Roach, a crusty old sports editor who had been Harry's mentor, as well as the first in a long line of bosses to fire the boy.

In last week's premiere episode, "Goodtime Harry" revealed itself a sort of newspaper version of "Taxi," with good, fast humor (worth some genuine laughs), solid characters and some very clever writing that gently lampoons the newspaper game without vilifying it.

When Harry misses the first assignment in his last-chance bargain with Roach, he explains, truthfully, that he was helping a friend keep her daughter out of the clutches of the child's gangster father.

"Is your story about a fight more important than a child's life?" Harry pleads. "Well," responds Roach, deliberating the matter. "...It wasn't a title fight."

NBC ordered six episodes of "Goodtime Harry" from Universal, but decided not to put the show on the fall schedule. It apparently didn't score well in audience tests (a popular programming tool that allows the executive cop-out, "Gee, boss, it tested well" — almost every show on the air, even the biggest losers, "tested well" before making a network schedule).

So, NBC is now in the process of "burning off" its inventory of "Goodtime Harry," which is to say, it is going to broadcast the six shows it has paid for, but not very proudly.

The network claims the show might still make it as a midseason replacement series if it rates big during its current run. That's not likely, observed someone close to the show, because NBC "crippled the show by putting it on opposite (ABC's) 'Fantasy Island' and giving it no advertising at all."

Another sure sign that NBC isn't interested in "Goodtime Harry" is the network's scheduling of two episodes back-to-back this Saturday, the same "burn-off" method used to deplete unwanted episodes of NBC's late "United States" series.

If, for some reason, "Goodtime Harry" does catch on, it will probably be too far gone to salvage. Bessell's contract is up, and Roach is working on another show for ABC.

The shame of it is that "Goodtime Harry" really isn't one of those artsy, inaccessible creatures loved by critics and scorned by audiences. It's a good, honest TV entertainment, broad enough to be a ratings winner, bright enough to admire.

Instead, NBC found room on its schedule for "Speak Up America" and "Harper Valley PTA."

From Gossip To New Role

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rona Barrett, the Hollywood reporter on ABC's "Good Morning America," will leave the show in October to join the "Tomorrow" show on NBC.

Miss Barrett, who was instrumental in bringing the ratings of "Good Morning America" up to par with NBC's "Today," will also make regular appearances on "Today," an NBC spokesman said Thursday.

ABC has been negotiating to renew Miss Barrett's contract, which expires Oct. 24, but the talks reached an impasse, according to a statement issued by the network.

Miss Barrett will be an NBC news correspondent, a status she was refused at ABC. And that was what prompted her move, Miss Barrett said. She said she has been trying to change her image to an entertainment industry newswoman from that of a gossip reporter.

Neither ABC nor a spokesman for Miss Barrett would say what her ABC salary had been and her new salary also was not disclosed.

Declarer ruffed the ace of clubs with a high heart, crossed to dummy with a trump suit. Can you spot the second entry?

Declarer ruffed the ace of clubs with a high heart, crossed to dummy with a trump suit. Now he led a diamond and boldly finessed dummy's nine! When that held the trick, declarer needed only a 3-2 split in both red suits to bring home his ambitious contract.

Dummy's last club was ruffed with declarer's last trump, and a diamond to the king provided the entry to draw trumps. On those two tricks, declarer discarded two spades from his hand. Then he ran diamonds to sluff two spades from dummy, and the ace of spades and dummy's remaining trump took the last two tricks.

In all, declarer made one spade trick, four heart tricks, five diamonds and three club ruffs in his hand for thirteen tricks.

Our experience shows that good card players often tend to be overbidders. They feel that their skill in handling the dummy justifies their indiscretions during the auction.

Herve Plans An August Wedding

NEW YORK (AP) — Midget actor Herve Villechaize of the television series "Fantasy Island" has a tall tale to tell; but every word of it is true.

Villechaize, who is just under 4 feet tall, announced in Hollywood Thursday that he was marrying statuesque actress Camille Hagan on Aug. 5.

Declarer was not hit the table. It appeared that he would have to rely on a spade finesse for his hand, but the likelihood of that succeeding was practically nil.

But declarer uncovered another finesse that would enable him to bring home the

Sues, Claiming Contract Breach

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Deborah Raffin has filed a $1 million suit against Paramount Pictures Corp., alleging the company failed to honor her contract for the projected television series "Foul Play."

Ms. Raffin contended in the suit, filed Wednesday in Superior Court, that Paramount failed to pay her $40,000 per episode for her starring role in the series, which is based on the movie "Foul Play."

The suit alleged that the contract, signed last March, called for 13 episodes to be filmed and for her to be paid

Writer's Gift To Alma Mater

ORONO, Maine (AP) — Stephen King, the author of best-selling horror stories, has donated six boxloads of papers to his alma mater, the University of Maine at Orono.

The papers, deposited in the university's special collections division, include original typescripts and drafts of King's novels, as well as some letters, said library director James MacCampbell.

King's novels include "Carrie," "Salem's Lot," "The Shining," "The Stand" and "The Dead Zone."

In accepting the gift this week, university trustees said the papers had an estimated value of $5,000. A formal appraisal is planned.

A Galaxy Of Stars On Hollywood Picket Line

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A galaxy of stars — including Carroll O'Connor, Walter Matthau and Ricardo Montalban — exchanged stage makeup for picket signs in the first demonstration by television and film actors since their unions went on strike this week.

Thursday's colorful picket line outside the Burbank Studios indicated resounding rank-and-file support for the strike by the Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, now in its fifth day.

Clad in clothes from running shorts and roller skates to business suits, the actors — up to 1,000 of them at a time, by Burbank police estimates — smiled and joked as they paraded the length of the sprawling studio complex.

Other celebrities, carrying the simple, black-and-white "SAG-AFTRA on strike" signs, included Loretta Swit, Jack Klugman, Wayne Rogers, Ralph Bellamy, Burgess Meredith, Michelle Lee and Isabel Sanford.

Police said the two-hour demonstration was orderly but that some traffic problems were created by reporters, photographers and autograph-seekers spilling into the streets.

Talks between the unions and the Motion Picture Industries Negotiating Committee broke off indefinitely Wednesday over the actors' demands for 6 percent of gross revenues from sales to supplemental markets — pay TV, videocassettes and videocassettes.

"You can go into any store and buy films now, and we don't get a piece of it," said Kathleen Nolan, a former SAG president. "It's frustrating to see your work on pay TV or walk into a store and see it on sale and not know where you fit in."

The producers have scheduled a news conference for today to give their side of the dispute.

The actors are also seeking an immediate 35 percent increase in minimum scales — now $225 a day and $785 a week — that would stand for the duration of a three-year contract. The producers have offered raises of 12 percent in the first year and 8 percent in each of the next two years.

But both sides say the pay issue is secondary to the supplemental market question.

The producers have offered some additional compensation in the new fields. But in pay TV, the extra payments to actors would not begin until a film or other program has played for two years.

By that time, the unions say, a program would have been so exhausted that actors would have little to gain.

In videocassettes and videocassettes, the extra payments would begin only after a certain number of units had been sold — "and the figure is so high, the actor would never see anything," said SAG spokeswoman Kim Fellner.

Leaf Prices Go Higher

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — Most grades of tobacco in the Georgia-Florida flue-cured belt drew higher prices Thursday, while the practical top price was unchanged at $159 per hundredweight.

At Georgia markets, an average of $128.68 per hundred was paid for 2,058,979 pounds of tobacco. In Florida, 256,534 pounds sold for an average of $120.54. The total for the belt was 2,315,513 pounds, selling for $127.78 per hundred, down from $129.39 on Wednesday.

For the season, 12,790,332 pounds have sold at Georgia markets at an average of $127.40 per hundredweight. At Florida markets, sales have totaled 2,329,303 pounds at an average of $126.25. For the belt, 15,119,635 pounds of tobacco have brought an average of $127.23.

The Federal-State Market News Service reported increases of mainly $2 to $8 per hundred pounds in 70 percent of the grades on Thursday.

Some non-supported grades showed greater increases, chiefly from $9 to $16 per hundred. Quality was better as a larger ratio of upperstalk tobacco was marketed.

Cutters comprised 13 percent of the offerings, lugs 33 percent; primings 40 percent; and nondescript 11 percent. The volume of sales was light at some markets and heavy at others.

Gross sales Wednesday totaled 3,336,981 pounds and averaged $129.39 per hundred, a gain $2.92 over Tuesday's average.

Auction bid averages per hundred pounds on several U.S. grades Thursday were: C4KM $153 down $3, X4F $154 up $2, X5F $147 up $6, X4KM $143 up $2, P4F $127 up $8, P5F $117 up $16, P4G $111 up $7.

Trucking Firm Reports Losses

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — McLean Trucking Co. has reported losses of $2.4 million during fiscal 1979-80, a loss of 43 cents per share for the 12-month period ending June 30.

Joe Eldridge, the company's executive vice president and treasurer, said the losses were due to the nation's economic downturn and actions by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Reports Federal Pressure Plea

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Watts Hill Jr., former chairman of the North Carolina Board of Higher Education, said Thursday he and other board members urged the federal government in 1970 to pressure the state to desegregate its university system.

Hill, a prominent Chapel Hill businessman, testified as a government witness in a hearing that could lead to the cutoff of about $90 million in federal aid funds to the 16-campus university system.

Hill said he and other members of the board had helped the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare draft a letter telling North Carolina that it must develop a desegregation plan for the university system.

After the hearing, university and state officials expressed surprise that Hill had assisted the federal government in beginning anti-discrimination proceedings.

"Mr. Hill did not advise me of his role with HEW, as far as I can recall," UNC President William C. Friday said in a telephone interview from his Chapel Hill home. He declined further comment.

Hill was scheduled to be cross-examined today by attorneys representing UNC.

The lawyers for UNC had sought to limit Hill's testimony, saying he was a layman and not an expert. But Administrative Law Judge John J. Mathias agreed in most cases to allow Hill to testify.

In his testimony Thursday, Hill said the five predominantly black campuses in the university system historically had been underfunded. He said the black campuses had suffered from inferior facilities, ill-prepared students and under-educated faculty.

Hill served as chairman of the now-defunct Board of Higher Education from 1965 to 1969.

He said he helped HEW in 1970, one year after he had stepped down as chairman but while he still was a board member, because a federal judge in Washington had ruled HEW was violating the Civil Rights Act of 1964 by giving federal money to North Carolina and other Southern university systems that were segregated.

He declined to identify the other board members who helped him. Hill said he and the others talked by phone three times with Dr. Elaine Severinson, an HEW regional official in Charlottesville, Va.

Mrs. Severinson then sent Gov. Bob Scott a letter saying UNC must develop a desegregation plan and submit it to HEW for approval. The state was given 90 days to respond.

The board members helped Mrs. Severinson, Hill said, because they wanted the letter delivered so the Legislature could consider additional funding for the black campuses while it still was in session.

Hill is a former state legislator, the grandson of a UNC trustee and the son of a member of the UNC Board of Governors. He has worked for the Inter City Fund, a consulting firm that has made educational studies for HEW.

Friday disagreed with Hill's comments about predominantly UNC black institutions being underfunded. "I don't agree, but I regret his (Hill's) information is not current in some respects. For instance, considerably more has been done for black institutions (than Hill said)," Friday said. Hill also described how he said politics has played a key role in shaping the university system during the last several decades. For example, he said, political pressure led to the creation of a medical school at East Carolina University and a veterinary school at North Carolina State University.

He also said political lobbying transformed three junior colleges into state universities at UNC-Charlotte, UNC-Wilmington and UNC-Asheville.

Governor Tries Methanol Truck

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt announced $144,500 in state contracts for energy-research projects Thursday, then took a spin in one of the state's new alcohol-fueled trucks.

"It drove fine. It had good pickup," Hunt said after driving around the Capitol square in the converted truck. "I'd like to take that pickup with me back to my farm in Rock Ridge."

The state got the truck from Future Fuels of America Inc., a San Francisco company that is selling the state four of the pickups and converting 15 other existing state vehicles to use methanol. It was part of a cross-country promotion trip sponsored by the U.S. Department of Energy and several private companies.

"The variety of these projects is an indication of how we can and must tackle our energy challenges on a broad front, including universities, private sector, government and individuals," Hunt said.

One of the projects funded by the N.C. Energy Institute calls for the conversion of methanol vehicles for use by the state Department of Transportation. N.C. State University will conduct research on the cars.

The vehicles are expected to get only about two-thirds the miles per gallon of fuel with methanol as they would using gasoline, but institute director James Bresee said overall costs will be lower because methanol is cheaper than gasoline.

Methanol, or wood alcohol, can be purchased commercially for about 70 cents a gallon, Bresee said. Each vehicle costs about $1,000 to convert, he said.

Robert Fri, president of Energy Transition Corp. of Washington, said Thursday his company is considering building a $150 million plant in eastern North Carolina to produce methanol from the large peat deposits there.

Fri said the company is currently considering locations in several coastal counties, including Tyrrell, Dare, Washington, Hyde and Beaufort.

Fri, a former administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, said the company is planning the project with First Colony Farms, a large corporate-farming project in the eastern area.

"It's got the potential for a major supply of methanol," he said.

Salvage Co. Wins Right To Treasure

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A private salvage company — not the state of Florida — owns any booty recovered from a Spanish galleon that sank in the Florida Straits in 1622, a federal appeals court has ruled.

In its 2-1 decision Thursday, the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals said Treasure Salvors Inc. and its owner, Mel Fisher of Key West, Fla., have the salvage rights to the Nuestra Senora de Atocha, which was carrying a fortune of gold and silver when it sank.

The court upheld an earlier decision by U.S. District Judge William O. Mehrrens.

The appeals court opinion, written by Judge Sam D. Johnson, held that the state had no salvage rights because the wreckage lay 40 nautical miles off the state's coast on a seabed that "was not and had never been owned by Florida."

The Atocha was one of a fleet of 28 Spanish ships that set sail Sept. 4, 1622, from Havana, Cuba, for Cadiz, Spain, carrying bullion, spices and tobacco for King Phillip IV.

When the fleet entered the straits in search of favorable Gulf Stream currents, the Atocha was one of six ships that sank when hurricane winds stripped them of their masts, sails and rigging.

The opinion noted that attempts had been continuing since 1633 to salvage the Atocha, whose hold "contained a treasure worthy of Midas: 160 gold bullion pieces, 900 silver ingots, over 250,000 silver coins, 600 copper planks, 350 chests of indigo and 25 tons of tobacco."

By 1978, the court said, the cargo was valued at $250 million but has "undoubtedly substantially increased" because of the inflated market for precious metals.

Energy Levels Talked by GEC

Targeted levels of energy savings and the ways to accomplish those savings were discussed by the Greenville Energy Commission at its regular meeting recently.

Chairman David Duffus reported that the commission is developing a program for conservation and alternative energy utilization that will accomplish the goals established at the June meeting. Further work on the program objectives will take place at a special workshop at 4 p.m. on Aug. 11.

The next regular meeting of the Greenville Energy Commission is scheduled for 8 p.m. on Monday, Aug. 18.

Will Speak On Mental Health

Brenda Gray, Executive Director of the Mental Health Association in Pitt County, will be guest Sunday at 1:06 p.m. on "Mental Health Matters" on WNCT radio. She will talk about the close relationship of the Association with the Pitt County Mental Health Center.

A volunteer non-profit county-wide citizens' organization, the Mental Health Association has three main purposes, Gray said — to improve attitudes toward mental illness, to improve service for the mentally ill and to work for the prevention of mental illness and promotion of mental health. Mobilizing citizen support of mental health legislation for improved care and treatment for the mentally ill is a function of the volunteer group, she said.
