Tobacco Mart Will Open Sales Tuesday

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
The 1980 tobacco auction season will get underway on Tuesday as Greenville and 13 other markets on the Eastern Belt begin sales.

begins its 90th auction season. Local tobacco officials, as well as farmers and warehousemen, are hopeful that last year's opening day set a trend. First-day sales here in 1979 established a record as the market posted an average of $125.73 per hundred pounds, by far the best opening in the history of the local market.

As in past years, however, the Eastern Belt markets open amid concern that prices offered by the various buying companies will not keep pace with increased production costs. Industry officials are saying that leaf quality this year in the state is favorable, planting the seed for optimism with regard to quote levels. State marketing specialist,

John Cyrus, who has followed flue-cured activities in North Carolina for years, told the Associated Press that, "We have the potential across the whole state for one of the best-quality crops we have had in a number of years." Cyrus, who will join N.C. Commissioner of Agriculture Jim Graham for opening sales here tomorrow, added, "Our crop certainly is as good, and it may be a little better, than the Georgia-Florida crop."

Area farmers, while facing some disease problems with their 1980 crops, apparently fared better this year from a disease standpoint and weather conditions were not viewed as a deciding factor, in contrast with several recent growing seasons.

Greenville warehouses will kick-off sales at 9 a.m. Tuesday following opening ceremonies around 8:30 a.m., according to J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the Tobacco Board of Trade here. Bryan reported that the market will begin sales with three sets of buyers on hand, with initial auctions at Farmers Warehouse (set one of buyers), New Greenville (set two), and Cannon's (set three).

The official reported that the first set of buyers will be at Raynor-Forbes & Clark Warehouse for the second sale tomorrow and at Keel's for the third sale. The second set of buyers will be at Grower's for the second sale and at New Independent for the third sale Tuesday. Bryan added that set three will go to Hudson's for the second sale, Star-Planters for the third and New Carolina for the fourth sale. Bryan noted that the Greenville Market will (Please turn to Page 3)

Tough Week Faces President Carter Over Billy's Role

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter, at a time when he could well have been looking forward to a triumphant Democratic National Convention, this week faces twin threats stemming from the conduct of his brother Billy that could turn the convention into a personal disaster.

A special Senate subcommittee opens an investigation Tuesday into Billy Carter's dealings with Libya and the president himself could be called to testify. At the very least, the probe will raise embarrassing questions about the president's brother - and the president's administration. At the same time, several dozen members of Congress are continuing efforts toward holding an "open" Democratic convention, a move that could deny Carter the renomination he seemed to have so firmly in grasp only a week ago.

Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., a spokesman for the effort, said Sunday he expects more meetings this week in Congress pushing the idea as well as the creation of a "boiler-room operation" with volunteers contacting convention delegates to urge them to vote for an open convention.

Such a convention would free delegates now pledged to Carter or Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and allow them to vote for whomever they wished. Barnes said in a broadcast interview that he wants this simply because he believes it would be "extraordinarily difficult to reelect" the president.

Kennedy himself said Sunday he continues to favor an open convention, but presidential spokesman Jody Powell cautioned Democratic members of Congress against judging the president's troubles with brother Billy until all the facts are in. President Carter has promised the nine-member Senate panel full cooperation. Billy Carter and his wife, Sybil, reportedly left Georgia for Washington on Sunday and plan to remain in the capital until its investigation is completed.

Billy Carter, whose irreverent comments and once-fabled penchant for beer drinking have been troublesome to the president in the past, has developed into much more than a mere embarrassment since he was forced by the Justice Department to register as a foreign agent of Libya.

The president's brother has acknowledged receiving a $200,000 installment on what he described as a $500,000 loan from the Libyan government, and questions have arisen over the behavior of the White House and Justice Department in the handling of the matter.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chairman of special panel, said staff investigators will begin interviews this week with administration officials and possibly with the president's wife, Rosalynn. But he said the panel will probably be able to hold only the "briefest kind" of hearings before the Democratic convention opens in New York on Aug. 11.

Barnes said in an interview on NBC's "Meet the Press" that the group in Congress backing an open convention now numbers about 50 but was growing daily and could "be tomorrow 150."

"There is a great deal of momentum toward an open convention," he said. "My phone has not stopped ringing."

Barnes said it would be "extraordinarily unlikely" for Kennedy to be the nominee of an open convention. George Barrett, a Kennedy delegate from Tennessee, mentioned as more likely possibilities Secretary of State Edmund S.

Muskie, Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash.

There are reports also that a prominent Democratic fundraiser from Philadelphia, S. Harrison Dogole, has formed a group supporting Jackson, who lost the nomination to Carter in 1976.

But Jackson, who gave his backing Sunday to an open convention along with Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., said he was not after the nomination. "As a politician, I am flattered, but I am not a candidate," he said.

Kennedy, of course, does not share the view that an open convention would not lead to his own nomination. He said Sunday he has been encouraged by the reception he has received recently (Please turn to Page 8)

Productivity Is Sharply Off In Second Quarter

WASHINGTON (AP) - The productivity of the U.S. economy fell at an annual rate of 3.1 percent this spring, marking the sixth consecutive quarter that the measure of economic efficiency has fallen, the government reported today.

The Labor Department attributed the sharp drop to a record decline in output during the second quarter brought on by the recession.

The department said output of goods and services during the April-June period fell at an annual rate of 12.5 percent, the largest quarterly drive since the department began issuing productivity reports 33 years ago.

Paid working hours declined at an annual rate of 9.7 percent during the quarter, the department said.

Productivity is a measure of goods and services produced by the economy in each hour of paid working time. A decline in the rate can fuel inflation because rising wage rates cannot be offset by increased production per hour.

The latest productivity decline compares with a 0.3 percent drop, on an annual basis, during the first three months of this year, and is the largest decline since the first quarter of 1979, when productivity fell by an identical 3.1 percent, on a yearly basis.

Grady-White Says 'As Busy As Can Be'

"We've been fighting rumors all spring and summer. This is just fuel added to the fire," Edward C. Smith Jr., president of Grady-White Boats said this morning while commenting on a news story published in Friday's edition of "The Daily Reflector."

The article, dealing with unemployment in Pitt County, indicated that one of the contributing factors to the high jobless rate was the "closing" of Smith's firm.

Smith emphasized today that Grady-White Boats has not closed. In fact, Smith said, "we're busy as we can be."

"We cut back," earlier this year, he acknowledged. "We had laid some folks off." But according to Smith, G-W

Boats is hiring some of the people back.

Acknowledging that this has been one of the hardest years for the recreational boating industry, Smith said G-W Boats, "has fared a lot better than most in the industry."

The official noted that the firm has, "150 or so," employees working today.

James Hannon, manager of the Greenville Employment Security Commission office, who was quoted in the article, said this morning that the word, "closing," was in error. "They didn't close."

The word describing the Grady-White Boats situation, he said, should have been, "curtailment or cut-back," rather than "closing."

Deposed Shah's Burial Is Slated In Egypt Tuesday

By SAMI RIZKALLAH
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) - The deposed Shah of Iran, dead after a long fight against cancer and 18 months in exile, will be buried in a traditional Moslem ceremony Tuesday, his coffin draped with the Iranian imperial flag, his body facing Mecca, a Cairo newspaper reported today.

Former President Richard M. Nixon and ex-king Constantine of Greece are scheduled to attend. But, although Egyptian President Anwar Sadat ordered a state funeral, no foreign chiefs of state or government are expected.

Pahlavi, 60, died Sunday at Maadi military hospital outside Cairo from complications resulting from his lymphatic cancer, first detected seven years ago.

News of his touched off public jubilation in the nation he ruled for 38 years. "The bloodsucker of the century has died," said Tehran Radio.

But a spokesman for President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said the death would have no effect on the fate of the 52 American hostages who today were spending their 268th day in captivity.

The young Moslem militants who seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran to try to force the United States to return the shah for trial said their captives would not be freed until Pahlavi's "stolen" fortune was returned to Iran, a French radio correspondent reported from Tehran.

The semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahran said Pahlavi's body will lie in state in a close coffin in Abdeen Palace in downtown Cairo for a brief period Tuesday morning.

The Pahlavi and Sadat families will gather around the coffin and read silently from the Koran, the Moslem holy book, Al Ahran said. The coffin will then be taken by horse-drawn caisson to a nearby mosque for prayers led by a clergyman of the Shiite sect, the dominant sect in Iran, the report said.

The cortege will then move on to the Al Rifai Mosque, where Pahlavi will be buried in a room in the southwest corner. By Moslem practice, corpses are placed facing Mecca, the Saudi Arabian city that is the holiest spot in Islam.

The mosque is the burial place of Egypt's last two kings, and Pahlavi's father, Reza Shah, was entombed there for several years after he died in exile in 1944.

It appeared that foreign leaders would not be invited because many of them would probably refuse rather than antagonize Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary regime in Iran.

A State Department spokesman said the United States would probably be represented by its ambassador to Egypt, Alfred Atherton. The department issued a brief statement that expressed sympathy for Pahlavi's family and said his passing "marks the end of an era in Iran, which all hope will be followed by peace and stability." But it made no mention of his long, close alliance with the United States.

Other former Western allies were also muted in their responses.

Nixon, however, issued a statement saying the shah was "a loyal friend and ally of the United States and a personal friend as well." And his secretary of state, Henry A. Kissinger, eulogized the dead man as "a good friend of the United States who stood by seven presidents over 35 years of his rule ... (and) died abandoned by all his friends except President Sadat."

The former president and seven years ago his son-in-law Edward Cox left New York Sunday night to attend the funeral.

Extraordinary security precautions were expected here to prevent assassination attempts. An Iranian emigre in Washington reported three weeks ago that about 20 Iranian extremists were infiltrating Egypt to kill relatives and associates of the shah when they assembled for his funeral. Although there was never any confirmation from Egyptian officials of the report, it was obvious that the government would do everything it could in the way of protection.

Sadat, who had given the shah refuge after he fled from Iran 18 months ago and again in March when no other government wanted him, interrupted a vacation in Alexandria and hurried to Cairo with his wife to comfort the dead man's widow and four children.

The shah had been under treatment for lymphatic cancer since 1973, but his condition did not deteriorate noticeably until last October, nine months after the revolution drove him from Iran. Then the U.S. government allowed him to come from Mexico to New York for removal of his gall bladder and analysis of his cancer, and a crowd of militant students in Tehran reacted by occupying the American Embassy and seizing its staff.

After three months in Panama, he flew to Cairo and entered Maadi military hospital. His cancerous spleen was removed on March 28, but the disease had spread to his liver, and he was given chemotherapy. This weakened his body's natural defenses against infection, and he developed pneumonia last month.

He developed an abscess on his pancreas and other infections, and his condition for a time was described as extremely grave. But lately he was reported improving.

Egypt's official Middle East News Agency said the pancreatic abscess began hemorrhaging Saturday night and he died at 9:50 a.m. Sunday "as a result of shock to the circulatory system."

See No Benefit In Shah's Death

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Dismissing the death of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi as almost irrelevant to the hostage crisis, U.S. officials say they believe recent political developments in Iran hold more promise for the eventual release of the 52 American captives.

These officials point to the recent installation of a new parliament and the appointment of a new prime minister in Iran as hopeful, though inconclusive, signs that a breakthrough may be forthcoming.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said in an interview Sunday on CBS's "Face the Nation" that the designation of a new prime minister "perhaps offers a more reasonable structure" for dealing with the crisis.

Other officials, who asked not to be identified, said the convening of a new parliament was equally important.

These officials agreed with a statement Sunday by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger that the "hostage question was only vaguely related to the shah."

The crisis will end, Kissinger said, "according to the internal dynamics of the Iranian revolution."

Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie and other officials have said in recent weeks that the principal obstacle blocking the release of the hostages was the absence of a central governing authority in Iran.

That obstacle is being overcome as Iran's process of political development continues, but Powell stressed that no short-term solution is yet in sight.

"I wish I could say something that gave me reason to believe that the crisis soon would be resolved," he said. "I know of nothing."

Powell said the administration will decide who is to represent President Carter at the shah's funeral in Cairo when more is learned about the arrangements. But State Department spokesman David Passage said he expects that role will be filled by the U.S. ambassador to Egypt, Alfred Atherton, who was asked to give Carter's personal condolences to the shah's family in Cairo.

The Carter administration's official response to the shah's death was unusually cautious, considering that the former monarch had made 11 visits to the United States and was a friend of seven American presidents.

The administration, obviously intent on not provoking Iranian authorities, offered no hint of the special relationship the United States had with the shah over almost four decades.

The terse "U.S. government statement" made no reference to the hostage crisis and refrained from any expression of sorrow over the shah's death.

It contained phrases to which even the shah's detractors would not take exception.

"The shah was the leader of Iran for an exceptionally long period of time — 38 years," the statement said. "History will record that he led the country at a time when profound changes were taking place. His death marks the end of an era in Iran, which all hope will be followed by peace and tranquility."

Richard Helms, former CIA director and U.S. ambassador to Iran, said today he saw no need for this country to apologize for its past role in Iran as a means of getting the hostages released.

"I don't know why we should apologize," Helms said on NBC-TV's "Today" show. "I don't know of anything that the United States has ever done vis-a-vis Iran that was incorrect or improper, and I think that the record of our government over the years has been exemplary."

Reminded that the Iranians have accused the United States of aiding the shah's SAVAK secret police, Helms said that organization's role has been highly exaggerated. He said violence has been common in Persian history.

The reaction of leading Republicans stressed the long years of Iranian-American friendship during the shah's reign.

GOP presidential nominee Ronald Reagan, at his California home, said the shah was a "valued and loyal friend" whose "passing reminds us of the importance of remaining true to our friends."

"The shah and the United States were linked in honorable and necessary ways," Reagan said.

Reagan's vice presidential running mate, George Bush, and former President Richard M. Nixon also emphasized the shah's role as a loyal friend of the United States. Nixon plans to attend the shah's funeral Tuesday and departed Sunday for Cairo.

Independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson said he hoped the shah's death would prompt the Carter administration to "accelerate its efforts to gain the release of the 52 hostages...."

The market spokesman observed, "Every warehouse firm in Greenville will have a sale every day during the season. Under the designation program farmers have designated the warehouse of their choice on the Greenville Market."

He added, "I would like to urge any farmers who have not already scheduled their sales to please contact the warehouse where their tobacco is designated... in order to set up a schedule of sales for the 1980 season."

Bryan said that, "Tobacco farmers must again respond to the needs of our industry if we are to maintain our number one position throughout the world in quality tobacco production."

He mentioned that with tobacco price support for this year up 12 percent, "buying companies will be more conscious of tobacco presented for sale. Be sure to take the necessary steps to provide a product free of sand, dirt and other foreign matter," he urged farmers.

Bryan said that price support this year is $1.41 per pound.

Roger Cobb, agent with the Agricultural Extension Service in Pitt County, observed that this year's crop "looks pretty good." He said that "disease hasn't been too bad" although farmers have experienced some Granville wilt and Mosaic. Chemical treatments helped to hold down blue mold in the area.

Cobb noted that the recent rains "helped a lot," adding that moisture will help the top leaves of the plant to fill out. He said that prior to the rains, the top leaves were not filling out because of the lack of rainfall.

Industry officials, including Cyrus, are predicting that income from the 1980 leaf crop in North Carolina should approach $1 billion but most indicate that it will not exceed the record $1.1 billion received in 1978. The 1979 crop, affected heavily by herbicide damage, blue mold and unfavorable weather, grossed only $856 million in the state.

Yield this year is forecast at 750 million pounds, more than 100 million pounds above last year's state production.

North Carolina markets averaged $121.25 per hundred pounds on opening day last year, with the Eastern Belt posting a figure of $123.49.

Bryan reported that owners and operators of the local warehouses are: Cannon's, W. T. Cannon, Carlton Dail; Farmer's, Harold L. Watson, T. Jack Warren and Willie Edwards, sales manager; Grower's, Jasper L. Tripp; Hudson's, Larry Hudson and Bobby L. Hudson; Keel's, J. A. Worthington, J. B. Worthington, Fenner Allen, Carl Averette; New Carolina, Laddie Avery, W. H. Mills; New Greenville, Hugh Hardee Jr., Rob Jones Jr., Wayne Stokes; New Independent, Winston A.

Buying companies located here include: American Tobacco Co., C. C. Whitt, area supervisor and Jimmy Hanlon, head buyer; Austin-Carolina Co., H. N. Hardy Jr., president; Carolina Leaf Tobacco Co., William B. Glenn, president, and Fred Pollard, head buyer; Export Leaf Tobacco Co., Joe Gaston, branch manager; Greenville Tobacco Co., C. W. Bloodshot eyes may be the result of excessive strain, exposure to smoke, smog or dust or the result of the night before the morning after. Observe the many, tiny, swollen red blood vessels which are typical of this condition. It usually requires a doctor to distinguish between a bloodshot eye and a more serious problem. It is nature's own fear fluid that provides the best cure, short of a prescription eye drop. Tears contain a strong harmless to the eye bacteria known as lysozyme. During the day the constant mopping action of the blinking lid with lysozyme keeps eyes clear and white.

If you are experiencing eye difficulty or discomfort, a thorough exam is in order. If such an exam results in the need for corrective eyewear, bring that prescription to CLEAR VUE OPTICIANS, 1706 6th, Physicians Quadrangle Building A. We will prepare the prescription as your doctor dictates while at the same time helping you select the frame that we will properly fit to your facial features taking into consideration shape and color. After you've been to CLEAR VUE OPTICIANS you will not only see better, but you will look better also.

Eye TIP: See your optical specialist for frame adjustments which may add immeasurably to daily comfort.

'Support' Said Spurring IRA

CORK, Ireland (AP) — The Irish Republic's prime minister appealed to Irish-Americans to cut off all support, "financial or moral," to the Northern Ireland Aid Committee of New York's Bronx. He said the organization, known as Noraid, is giving direct aid to the Irish Republican Army's guerrilla war in Northern Ireland.

Charles J. Haughey also said in a speech Sunday that there were suspicious links between Noraid and the Irish National Caucus in Washington, D.C.

In Northern Ireland, meanwhile, an IRA bomb in a booby-trapped car killed one British soldier Sunday and seriously wounded another in the town of Aughnacloy, bringing the known death toll in nearly 11 years of warfare in the province to 2,042. Forty-seven people have been killed this year.

Attended Recent Plant Workshop

KINSTON — Jesse P. Smith of 205 N. Oak St. Greenville, recently attended a three-day horticulture workshop on plant propagation held at Lenoir Community College.

The workshop, sponsored by the college's Division of Continuing Education, attracted some nineteen public school teachers from eastern North Carolina. John Deme, head of the Horticulture Department, directed the workshop.

Topics covered included grafting techniques, seedling sewing and growing methods, and proper cutting techniques. Certification credit was awarded students who successfully completed the course, which included both classroom and lab work.

This year's workshop was the eighth annual program the college has sponsored for area high school teachers in the horticulture field.

Living Within Means

The economic slowdown being reflected in North Carolina by the rise in unemployment figures for most of the 100 counties is going to also be reflected in state revenues, particularly in income and sales taxes. It will further depress the revenues from gasoline taxes as well.

Unless measures are taken at the state level to compensate for these changes by curtailing expenditures, the 1981 legislative session may find itself faced with a deficit budget situation rather than the traditional surplus. In recent years, the legislature has faced an increasingly difficult task of stretching revenues to meet the needs of North Carolina. But by and large the economic curve has been moving upward, and this produced increasing rather than decreasing revenues for state coffers.

To be sure there are more people employed in North Carolina today than there were a few years ago because of the rate of industrial and economic development. But if economic conditions continue to sag, the curve of increasing state revenues will hardly match the curve of increasing cost of operating state government we have seen in recent years.

Like businesses and individual families faced with the prospect of a temporary economic setback, the state government in North Carolina needs to be looking now with increasing intensity at where it needs to shave expenses to live within its means.

Some Are Bound To Be Hurt

"Some will be hurt and others will be happy...."

That was the way Board of Transportation member George Harper of Kinston described reaction to the final routing of the new four-lane highway 264 between Wilson and Greenville. And for whatever other beating around the bush the public may hear about this major highway undertaking, Commissioner Harper was flat-out and straight-forward with that statement.

The 28 mile project which will cost the state upwards of $18 million is of utmost importance to the people of this immediate area of North Carolina. It is unfortunate that the final routing of the new highway cannot be to everyone's liking. The most important thing is that the route finally settled upon be the one which will be the most efficient in terms of cost and in terms of providing the best possible transportation artery.

In the long run, the route which will best serve the total area and its people will be the one which will make the greatest number of people happy and will hurt the fewest number as little as possible.

THIS AFTERNOON

Agency Programs

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Most people intimately knowledgeable about state government know that many agencies keep at their fingertips three different sets of figures related to a given program:

1. The chief agency people have raw, computer-printout data which only they understand to keep them posted on what is really going on.

2. Members of the General Assembly get a refined set of figures designed to make the program look good and to justify expanding the staff and budget.

3. The public is told what the agency chiefs think the public ought to know in order to gain and keep citizen support, and especially the active involvement of special interest groups.

All of which produces, for the public which foots the bill, two important questions:

No Measure

1. It is almost impossible for government to function efficiently, effectively, productively, and in a manner suiting most taxpayers because there is really no way to measure what government is doing.

2. Only the bureaucrats have the time, the staff, the full knowledge and the motivation to make law and policy for government.

State Senator Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, put his finger squarely on the most critical problem in government in a recent interview when he described lawmakers as mere rubberstamps for the bureaucracy.

Indeed, legislators become expert only in narrow fields which most interest them, and for the rest depend upon their colleagues who have developed their own special expertise in other fields; but above all, they depend upon the full-time professional in

BILL NOBLITT the government agency to provide details and advice.

Charles R. Knoeber, a member of the staff in the department of economics at N.C. State University, has spent considerable effort analyzing the situation.

Governmental administrators are not, says Knoeber "incompetent or lacking motivation. On the contrary... these people are highly motivated and able to provide those outputs for which they are rewarded."

The problem is that they are not rewarded as are private citizens, for the success they enjoy in a free market system where increased productivity leads to increased sales which lead to increased profits which lead to more money for all.

Create Demand

There is no supply and demand law at work in government, so agency people have to create the demand and then supply the

The Last Flat In Paris

It is incumbent on every columnist to see "Last Tango in Paris" and comment on it. Some critics have called it the greatest movie of our time. Others have written that it is one of the great ripoffs of the film industry.

But having seen the movie, I would like to advance the opinion that most critics have missed the point of the picture.

"Last Tango in Paris" is not, as it has been described, the story of an aging American (Marlon Brando) and a young girl (Maria Schneider) in a desperate sexual battle for survival.

It is really a simple heart-warming film about two people trying to rent the same apartment in Paris.

Only those who have ever searched for an apartment in Paris can appreciate what Brando and Maria Schneider go through for this lovely flat near the Seine.

In the film, Brando plays a washed-out American, whose wife has just committed suicide. He wants the apartment in the worst way. So does the young French girl.

They meet by accident in the empty flat and you see Brando's mind working. He bed throws her down on the bed and keeps muttering, "It's mine, it's mine." Miss Schneider just laughs at him.

All the time they are making love, she is looking at the window, trying to figure what size curtains she'll need for the room.

Brando, exhausted and fearful that he'll lose the flat, visits his mother-in-law and dead wife. We see the tiny hotel he lives in and realize why Brando is so intent on getting the apartment. Miss Schneider goes off with her fiancé and we discern why she wants a new place to live.

Back to the apartment. Rather than being frightened by Brando's brutality, Miss Schneider becomes more determined than ever to wrest the key away from him.

A group of 16-year-old baseball players from right here in Pitt and Greene Counties has won the right to represent half of North Carolina in the Southeast Regionals of the National Babe Ruth Championship Tournament in Butler, Alabama next week.

Boys and coaches from the Senior Babe Ruth Baseball teams in Greenville, Farmville, Snow Hill and Winterville, known as the Coastal Plain South All Stars, won the state 16-year-old tournament in Goldsboro last weekend. Starting with a game Friday night against Georgia's state champions, they will face teams from eight other states, hoping to bring more laurels to their home towns. Most of these young men you will hear from during your high school baseball season next spring — Rose High, Farmville Central, D. H. Conley and Greene Central.

They desperately need donations for transportation, approximately $2,800. Butler, Ala. is almost on the Mississippi state line, so it will take a substantial amount of financial support just to get them there and home safely. All donations are tax-deductible and any contributions will be more than welcome. These fine young people will represent you well.

Please call 756-3545, 756-4961 or 756-3517 or make your check payable to "Coastal Plain 16-18 Baseball and mail to 200 Dellwood Drive, Greenville. They leave on Wednesday.

To the editor:

Wednesday night the Planning and Zoning Commission okayed a preliminary plat to develop 154 condominiums within Lake Ellsworth Subdivision. Unfortunately, residents' grievances regarding increased traffic, safety and flooding fell on deaf ears. All of the guidelines for subdivision development were met, so the Commission had no choice but to approve the plat. It is regrettable that criteria for storm sewers, easements and curbing supersede those of hazardous traffic congestion in an area heavily traveled by young children.

A mandate of the people was ignored because the Commission had no power to do otherwise — it can either approve or table issues, but not disapprove them. Why not save taxpayer dollars and replace the Commission with a large rubber stamp? It would be much more efficient and just as effective.

Strength For Today

GOD NEVER HURRIES

A visitor once found Phillips Brooks, famous Boston preacher and bishop, pacing up and down his study and nervously pounding a fist into the palm of the other hand. When the visitor inquired about the reason for this excitement, Brooks replied, "I am always in a hurry, and God never is."

As human beings we grow slowly. We look at our children and wonder when under heaven they will ever grow up and behave like adults. Then one day, perhaps in mid-adolescence, they make some penetrating observation, offer some good advice, or face a tough situation and handle it skillfully, and we know that all through the years they have been growing — growing slowly, but growing none the less.

We would all like to hand the Lord a time schedule. But at the same time we know that any such gesture would be futile. God listens to prayer but He has waste-paper baskets ready for our time schedules. God is never in a hurry.

Hunt Jumps Debate Plea

By WILLIAM M. WELCH

Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

Conventional wisdom says the frontrunner always avoids a debate with his opponent while the trailing candidate desperately seeks it.

Sen. Robert Morgan apparently agrees with that and so does Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green.

So why, then, is Gov. Jim Hunt acting so anxious to tangle with Republican challenger I. Beverly Lake Jr. when the other Democrats seeking re-election turned down debate invitations last week?

"The question of a debate always comes up, so we just figured he would get ahead by issuing a challenge," said Hunt press secretary Gary Pearce.

Hunt was able to take some of the credit for instigating a debate with Lake through his invitation issued at a news conference last week.

In fact, though, he wasn't first. Lake, when he filed for office back in January, made a sweeping challenge to debate.

But as the incumbent and the acknowledged frontrunner in the gubernatorial race, Hunt has still countered the common political advice that it is only the underdog who has reason to want a debate.

The reason, say observers and at least one has run a campaign against Hunt, is that Hunt has again proven skillful at minimizing the debate by political effects of a possible being eager to hold one early — and getting it over with long in advance of the election day.

In asking for a debate, Hunt told reporters it would have to be held early in September, around Labor Day, or not at all.

Hunt's campaign handlers have even turned down the N.C. Association of Broadcasters' invitation to hold a debate Oct. 14 — three weeks before the election — when the broadcasters could have guaranteed wide television coverage.

Hunt protested that his schedule was too full except in early September.

"I do feel Hunt is debating early so that Lake will not be able to press that issue," said Julian Mann III, who managed former Gov. Bob Scott's unsuccessful primary challenge against Hunt this year. "He is a great one at being able to eliminate issues before they come up, to defuse the issues."

Mann should know. Trailing badly and wanting a debate, Scott got one — but on Hunt's terms. Their debate was held in mid-February — 11 weeks before the primary election.

Being held that early, public interest in the debates — and the campaign itself — was lower than it would have been closer to election day.

Further, the timing was early on a Saturday night, and no commercial television stations would carry it live because of the time. The audience on the public television stations that aired it were minimal, and as a result the debate had no impact at all on the election, even though Scott was acknowledged to have given a good account of himself in the confrontation.

"Our polling showed us there were very few people who saw the debate," Mann said.

The general hope of a challenger in debating is that the leader will make a mistake causing him to stumble. "You minimize all that," said Mann, "when you hold the debate months before the election. If he does make a mistake, it has time to be dimmed in the memory of voters."

As the challenger, Lake will likely be faced with debating on Hunt's terms or not at all. But that is at least more than his GOP friends, Senate candidate John East and lieutenant governor Bill Cobey, will get.

They were flatly turned down by Morgan and Green last week — even though Hunt's acceptance may make their position more difficult.

"We kind of made it hard for them, didn't we," quipped Pearce.

ART BUCHWALD

figures if he rapes the girl, she'll go away and he'll get the apartment.

But Miss Schneider, a child of the French bourgeoisie, is made of sterner stuff, and she puts up little resistance to Brando's assault. As a matter of fact, while she's being bounced around by Marlon, she is really measuring the floor to see how much carpeting it will take.

The next day they are back at the apartment again. Brando has brought a table, chairs and a bed to assert his claim to it. But Miss Schneider is not impressed and walks about the place as if it were hers.

This infuriates Brando and

The Dispossessed Flee Death

By RICHARD TOMKINS

Associated Press Writer

HARGEISA, Somalia (AP) —

They come in droves, 750 a night, with little more than tattered clothes on their backs, crossing the desert plains on foot to avoid the sudden and violent death that stalks their homeland.

They spend endless hours in wind-swept makeshift communities, digging in dry riverbeds for a few precious drops of water.

They are refugees from the Ogaden — some 1.4 million Somali tribesmen who have fled the continuing guerrilla war in southeastern Ethiopia between Cuban-backed government troops and independence-minded rebels of the Western Somali Liberation front. They represent an estimated 3 million population.

Refugees in Somalia, one of the world's five poorest nations, form the single largest concentration of the dispossessed anywhere in the world, according to Somali and international refugee workers.

More than 600,000 of them live in 22 isolated camps, stretching from El Wa in the south to Abudcadir in the far north. Another 800,000 live among friends or relatives in Somalia.

An estimated one of every four persons in Somalia is a refugee and dependent on Somali and international agencies for survival, according to conservative estimates. The country's population, excluding refugees, is estimated at 3.8 million.

There are no cases of mass starvation or malnutrition in camps here, thanks to Somalia's massive diversion of food and medical aid.

The Ethiopian Ogaden, along the border with Somalia, is home for primarily nomadic livestock breeders or subsistence farmers. They are ethnically and culturally Somali and consider the Ethiopians colonial oppressors.

Ceded to Ethiopia at the turn of the century by European powers, the Ogadenis have waged guerrilla war since the early 1960s. The rebels and Somali regular forces aiding them were defeated in conventional warfare in 1978, but fighting continues. Each new skirmish adds to the number of people fleeing to Somalia for safety.

Refugees tell of Ethiopian troops burning villages in reprisal for nearby guerrilla activity, of wells being poisoned to deny guerrillas water, of indiscriminate bombing and strafing of civilians.

Somali officials say nearly one-third of the country's 689,858 camp inmates are located in the northwestern region. The refugees overtaken Somalia's meager social services and use funds earmarked for native Somalis.

Development projects have ground to a halt and foreign currency reserves have been depleted to pay for the refugees' upkeep. During a drought and a pause in foreign food supplies earlier this year, Somalia dug into its own grain reserves to avoid famine in the camps.

Teachers, transport and social workers have been diverted to refugee care. Some 200 of Somalia's 300 doctors care for refugees only, leaving 100 doctors for 3.8 million Somalis.

Last year, Somalia declared a state of national emergency and appealed for international support.

Steffan Bodemar, outgoing head of the United Nations refugee operations in Somalia, says 160,000 metric tons of food is needed in 1980 to feed the refugees. He says only 110,000 tons have been pledged from abroad, including 90,000 tons of food and non-food material from the United States.

Although Somalis feel committed to helping victims of the Ogaden war, there are reports of resentment as the country's poor see international help being directed to the refugees.

In Hargeisa, a Somali businessman says "We don't have enough jobs here and we don't have enough food, but we see international help coming for the refugees."

"The situation is very explosive."

product.
How to measure success? In the free market it is simple. People either buy the product, or it fails. In government, the manager produces various "measures" such as individuals served, cases treated, miles paved, children taught, etc. Seldom is there any indication of how successfully, or how poorly, this was done.

Senator Rauch point out that privately, government agency heads measure their individual success by numbers of employees in their jurisdiction, and numbers of divisions or programs sufficiently large to merit top-level assistants to run them. The more employees at high salary, the higher the chief's salary because he or she must be paid more than the highest ranking subordinate.

When, wonder many close to the scene, will government go back to ground zero and take a look at what it has done and wonder aloud of all those ongoing programs need to be kept.

The next time they meet, she's in her wedding dress and Brando is so mad he throws her in the tub. Miracle of miracles, the plumbing works, and Brando gives Miss Schneider a bath while she figures out what color scheme would go best with the white medicine cabinet.

By this time, Brando is worn out and figures the apartment isn't really worth it. He leaves without telling Miss Schneider his name.

A little battered from the sexual encounters, Miss Schneider returns triumphantly with her fiancé to show him the flat. But after all Miss Schneider's been through, the fiancé takes one look at the place and declares, "It's too big." This is when I started to cry.

I don't know if "Last Tango in Paris" is a great movie or not, but I believe that director Bertolucci has made an important social statement about one of the real outrages of our time, which happens to be the housing shortage in France.

Courses Available In Program

ECU News Bureau
Prospective college students put on waiting lists since East Carolina University temporarily suspended new freshman admissions applications can still enroll this fall through the campus's University College.

About two years of general college credits can be earned in evening and weekend classes offered through University College, according to Allen Churchill of the ECU Division of Continuing Education.

This fall's course offerings include freshman and sophomore level classes in English, psychology, geography, history, art, mathematics, health, political science, speech, coastal marine studies, music, business administration, business education, accounting and economics.

The University College provides an opportunity for persons with commuting distance to Greenville to earn college credit in evening and Saturday classes. Completion of high school is the only requirement for admission.

After the initial $10 application fee, University College students are charged $19 per semester hour (North Carolina residents) and a $5 registration fee. The only other cost is the purchase of textbooks, which varies with individual courses.

Registration for University College's fall semester courses is scheduled for August 26, from 8 a.m. until 6:30 p.m. in Erwin Hall on the west end of the ECU campus.

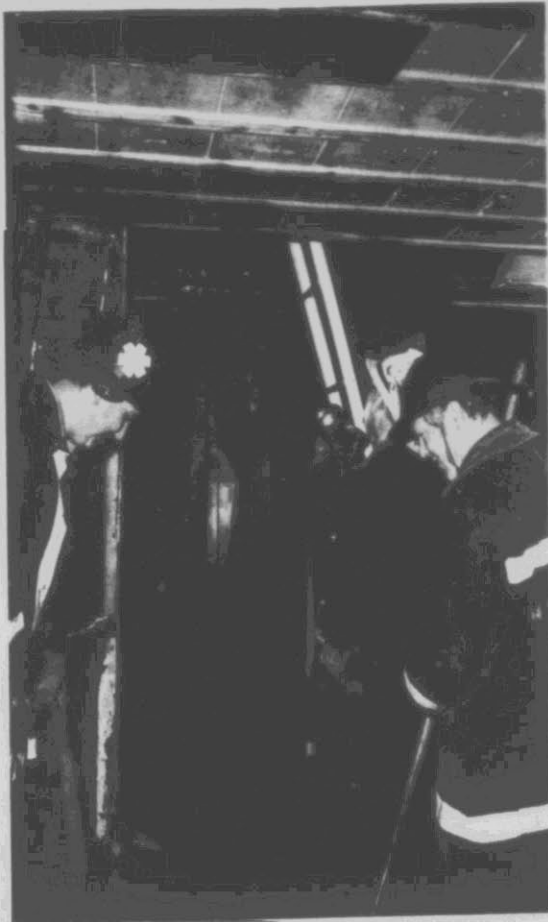

Further information about University College is available by contacting the Division of Continuing Education at ECU (757-6324).

Warmly Receive 'Gap' Mangione

Gaspere Mangione, better known as "Gap," and his three-piece jazz ensemble received a warm but rather small reception during their performance Saturday night at JJ's Music Hall.

Buford T. a local blues rock group, opened for Mangione.

Gap's newest album, "Dancing Is Making Love," was released last year about the same time that his brother, Chuck Mangione's, album hit the charts. According to Gap, their music is very similar, but each have different talents and goals. The brothers toured together a year ago, but since that time are performing individually.

Their recent tour of the East Coast has included several performances in Charlotte, Kannapolis, Charleston and Raleigh. They have appeared at the Pier in Raleigh on several occasions. They will also visit Chicago, and Boston. Gap will celebrate his 42nd birthday next week on the

Workshop Planned At Nags Head

"Quality and Equality in Education," a summer workshop for teachers, will be co-sponsored by East Carolina University's School of Education in Nags Head August 6-8.

The program is arranged by the ECU Sex Desegregation Training Institute in cooperation with the Southeast Sex Desegregation Assistance Center, University of Tennessee-Knoxville, and the N.C. Department of Public Instruction.

Its purpose is to help participating classroom teachers, counselors and school administrators become aware of the presence and effects of sex bias in schools and to acquire knowledge of ways to overcome this problem.

Dr. Lillian Woo, director of Project Aware, Chapel Hill, will give the opening address, "Women: The Promises and Problems."

Other featured speakers are Alexena Irving Furgess, assistant director of the University of South Carolina's Title IX Training Institute and Dr. Karen Kale, Title IX specialist at ECU.

Workshop topics include "Women in History," "Sex Stereotypes and Values," "Textbook Maneuvers," "Vocational Education: Career Choice and Title IX" and "Stress: Is There a Difference Between His and Hers?"

Calm Weekend In Chattanooga

By PHILLIP RAWLS
Associated Press Writer
CHATTANOOGA, Tenn.

(AP) - Chattanooga's racially troubled neighborhoods were calm over the weekend as Ku Klux

Klansmen who planned a march were persuaded to keep a low profile and a curfew forced most residents off the streets.

Broken glass still littered streets Sunday in predominantly black areas hardest hit by three nights of violence last week that caused $350,000 damage to property.

Police have arrested more than 200 people since trouble began Tuesday night, including 27 persons arrested Sunday night and early today for curfew violations. The disturbances began after two Klansmen were acquitted Tuesday on charges of shooting and injuring four black women and a third Klansman was convicted on reduced charges. The violence peaked Thursday when eight policemen were slightly injured in a shotgun ambush.

Klan leader Bill Wilkinson arrived in town Saturday and said his followers would march to city hall Sunday. But Wilkinson, imperial wizard of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, based in Denham Springs, La., said he changed his mind after meeting with Mayor Charles "Pat" Rose. Wilkinson promised his followers would keep a low profile.

A few hours later, three Klansmen from a rival group were arrested on charges of carrying bomb-making material. Police said they spotted the Klansmen, wearing camouflaged military fatigues with KKK emblems, about a mile from the troubled area.

Late Sunday, four black men were arrested in a housing project across town from the troubled area and charged with possession of weapons and curfew violations. Police said the four were in possession of firebombs.

Police spokesman Bob Gill said Sunday appeared to be the quietest day since the trouble began. Black ministers and volunteers have been patrolling black neighborhoods instead of police as part of an agreement reached between city officials and civil rights leader Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Rose continued an 11:30 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew as well as a ban on the sale of firearms and gasoline in portable containers.

"We are conducting our lives as normal as possible," said Joyce Williams, president of the Spencer J. McCallie housing project tenants association. "It's certainly not a panic or anything like that."

Harry Hill, leader of the Youth Coalition community group and one of those on patrol, said black neighborhoods were becoming armed camps.

"We're running more into armed dudes concerned about protecting their kids," Hill said.

But Minnie Peoples, president of the citywide Tenants Association, disagreed with Hill's assessment of an armed camp.

"There is no one armed over here," she said. "People are still jumpy, but no one's going to come in here and do what they please."

Meanwhile, Fire and Police Commissioner Walter Smart told about 250 angry officers at a hastily arranged meeting he would try to get them overtime pay for the extra hours they have been ordered to work because of the disturbances.

Black leaders said they hoped the turmoil would lead the city to meet demands presented Saturday, including a stronger affirmative action program, more black police and public officials, and a street named after slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

Minister And Wife Gunned

SELMA, N.C. (AP) - A visiting minister and his wife joined Dorothy Mae Holt in prayer at lunch Sunday for Mrs. Holt's estranged husband. An hour later, police said, the minister and his wife were dead and Mrs. Holt was critically wounded at the hands of her husband.

The husband, Thomas Milton Holt, 61, of Selma, died in a hospital emergency room from injuries received when his car wrecked as he fled away from the house.

Police Lt. O.E. Evans said the Rev. Erwin Norman Williams, 59, and his wife, Edna, both of Wilson were visiting Mrs. Holt. They had just finished eating when Holt burst into the house, spoke briefly to his wife and then opened fire with a 25-caliber automatic pistol, Evans said.

Mrs. Holt underwent surgery at a Smithfield hospital Sunday night for the removal of two bullets, one of which was lodged near her spine.

Evans said Holt's son, Mack Holt, had gone to a magistrate earlier Sunday to obtain involuntary commitment papers for Holt, apparently because of a drinking problem. Evans said the elder Holt apparently was intoxicated when the shooting occurred.

Evans said Holt still had the pistol in his pocket when the car wrecked in a curve 10 miles from Mrs. Holt's house.

A 14-year-old foster daughter of the Williams witnessed the shooting, Evans said, but escaped to the front yard where the Williams' three other foster children were playing.

The children ran to a neighbor's house and called police.

Evans said the teen-ager told police she had directed Holt to his wife after he burst into the house. She also told police that the Williams and Mrs. Holt had prayed for Holt during the meal.

TO SHAH'S FUNERAL — Richard Nixon stops to answer a question as he leaves his home Sunday evening on his way to Cairo to attend the funeral of the deposed Shah of Iran. During his reign, the Shah was a frequent visitor of U.S. Presidents. (AP Laserphoto)

Clashes Mark Iranian Demonstrations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Iran Freedom Foundation's long-planned day of protest against the Khomeini regime began with word of the former shah's death and ended with clashes among pro- and anti-Khomeini demonstrators, police, U.S. military personnel and passers-by.

Authorities said 169 persons were arrested, most on charges of unlawful assembly and refusing to obey a police order. Dozens suffered minor injuries in Sunday's melee.

Preparations for the foundation's demonstration had been under way for months by the group's leader, Ali Akbar Tabatabai, who sought a democratic government in Iran. Supporters of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, spiritual leader of Iran's revolutionary government, planned a counter-demonstration.

When Tabatabai was shot to death last Tuesday at his suburban home in Bethesda, Md., police became concerned about the juxtaposition of the two groups. Efforts were made through scheduling and siting to keep the two demonstrations separate.

The trouble started when about 300 pro-Khomeini demonstrators overstayed the terms of their demonstration permit for Lafayette Park, near the White House. Violence broke out when police, concerned that they would clash with the anti-Khomeini protesters due to arrive later, began to clear them out.

Two Iranians were hospitalized and a police motorcycle patrolman suffered back and leg injuries when he was knocked off his scooter, authorities said. Other demonstrators suffered cuts and bruises.

Meanwhile, the Iran Freedom Foundation group of several hundred demonstrators began its march to the park from the Capitol. About 70 pro-Khomeini demonstrators, most of them members of the Moslem Students Association, followed. The two groups taunted each other as they walked until police headed off the Khomeini supporters.

Not all of the counter-demonstrators had left Lafayette Park when the Iran Freedom Foundation assembled there, however.

Tabatabai's twin brother, Mohammad, was charged by one or two men and grazed on the neck with a stick when he began addressing the crowd. One of the assailants was wrestled to the ground by foundation members who kicked and beat him until National Park police led him away.

The outnumbered pro-Khomeini demonstrators eventually retreated to a grassy area near Capitol Hilton Hotel about three blocks from the park, where they began to pray.

They were surrounded by the jeering American youths yelling, "Go home, go home" and "Stars and Stripes forever." The Iranians held their ground, arms locked, for more than an hour, when police moved in to make arrests.

As the crowds dispersed, there were two confrontations involving Khomeini supporters and U.S. military personnel. In one incident, several marines began shouting, "We want war." A U.S. airman shouted, "I hate them. Nuke Iran."

In the other, a dozen protesters met a group of Army enlisted men on leave from Fort Knox, Ky. A Khomeini loyalist grabbed for an American flag on a pole being carried by one of the soldiers. In the ensuing struggle, the pole snapped in two. The Khomeini supporters fled, soldiers and police giving chase, back to the hotel.

A witness to the Tuesday murder of Ali Akbar Tabatabai — Seyed Mortazavi, 29 — was arrested on a charge of carrying a pistol without a license. He was released after posting $1,000 bond.

Tabatabai's assassin, disguised as a postman, gained access to the home after insisting that the victim had to sign for two special delivery packages. Mortazavi had answered the door.

An American Black

Muslim — Daoud Salahuddin, also known as David Belfield — with close ties to Iranian student groups has been charged with Tabatabai's murder. He is still at large.

Despotism In Shah's Reign Like Others

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent

Just how villainous were the nearly four decades of rule by Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi?

Following the announcement of his death on Sunday, Tehran Radio called the deposed shah the "bloodsucker of the century."

The Iranian leaders who ousted him from office in 1979 declared that the shah was "comparable only to Hitler as viewed by the Jews."

They displayed instruments of torture said to have been used by his agents, and produced hundreds of alleged victims.

The shah, who died Sunday in Cairo at age 60, had publicly insisted these charges were exaggerated. One of the few to come to his defense was his sister Princess Ashraf Pahlavi, who bought a full-page advertisement in The New York Times for a letter to the secretary-general of the United Nations, Kurt Waldheim.

She said Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, leader for life in Iran, "pretends that the shah has eliminated more than a hundred thousand political prisoners, while you know full well that in the entire 37 years of his reign nothing of the sort ever happened."

Just what did happen under the rule of the shah, Iran's King of Kings, and does he deserve a place on the blacklist of international despotism that has cast a shadow over the 20th century?

An Iran expert at the Institute of International Studies in London estimated that 10,000 persons died under the shah's rule.

Outside investigators long documented allegations of systematic torture of political opponents by SAVAK, the shah's secret police, that helped him and his family maintain the absolute rule of the Peacock Throne.

Iran's new leaders charged that the U.S. helped train the SAVAK agents. This alleged complicity represents the background for the seizure of the American hostages in November 1979.

President Carter criticized Iran's human rights record in 1977, and the shah announced an end to torture in his prisons. Amnesty International, the London-based human rights organization, said in a report that the use of the wide range of torture methods appeared to decrease — but not stop — at that time.

In the long list of countries where basic human rights were allegedly being violated in the 1970s — Amnesty International listed 100 in 1979 — Iran under the shah was often compared with the right-wing governments of Argentina and South Korea, which reportedly used similar practices to maintain power.

In Argentina, according to outside investigators, 15,000 political opponents disappeared or were killed in the two years following the 1976 military coup. Human rights groups charge there are 60 camps in Argentina where torture is routine, and that the number of "los de-saparecidos" — the disappeared — continues to rise.

In South Korea, under since-assassinated President Park Chung Hee, there was a pattern of frequent arrests and releases of many "suspects," some of whom were brought to trial and given long sentences for their opposition to the ruling clique.

Political repression has taken a different form in the communist world since the days of Soviet leader Joseph Stalin. His administration is blamed for the loss of 50 million or 60 million lives during the collectivization process of the 1920s. Millions were slaughtered in the Stalin purges of the 1930s.

Human rights organizations still charge that Soviet corrective labor colonies and prisons continue to be characterized by chronic hunger, overwork, cold and inadequate medical attention.

The shah's place in a despot's hall of fame would have to yield to four other rulers dislodged in 1979.

Idi Amin Dada ran the African nation of Uganda with a grip so oppressive, so merciless, that Ugandans said after his ouster they thought God had forgotten them. Human rights groups estimated more than 200,000 of Uganda's 13 million people died in purges during Amin's eight-year reign.

Emperor Bokassa I of the Central African Empire, now the Central African Republic, a former second lieutenant in the French army, capped a long career of bloodshed by participating in a massacre of 100 schoolchildren, according to human rights investigators.

President-for-life Francisco Nguema of Equatorial Guinea was said by critics to have turned his tiny country of 333,000 into "the concentration camp of Africa," and a "cottage industry dachau." An estimated 100,000 people were killed during his 11 years in office.

Premier Pol Pot, whose 4½ years of communist rule was ended by the Vietnamese invasion of his country, was accused of imposing cruel punishment, usually death, for any infringement of the strict rules governing everyday life, leading to what human rights organizations charged was "a continuing bloodletting." As many as two million may have died under Pol Pot.

The model for 20th century repression remains Adolf Hitler, whose "Thousand Year Reich" ended with his suicide in a Berlin bunker in 1945. Ten leaders of his Nazi party were hanged for their part in the Holocaust that took the lives of millions of Jews and others.

The overthrow of one despotic regime does not necessarily lead to an improvement in human rights. Amnesty International returned to Iran after the shah's departure and was critical of the hundreds of summary executions conducted by the new Islamic regime.

And Amnesty International, which opposes capital punishment, also opposed Iran's demand that the shah be sent back to that country, where he would almost certainly have faced execution.

Food Service Meeting Held

Donna R. Ware, school food service director for the Pitt County Schools and president of the North Carolina School Food Service Association, attended the American School Food Service Association (ASFSA) 34th Annual Conference in Kansas City, Mo., July 20-24.

Attendees represented more than 95,000 federally-funded child nutrition programs throughout the country.

The conference focused on the impact of rising costs and decreasing resources. Keynote speakers, including Astronaut Wally Schirra and Senator George McGovern highlighted the four general sessions.

Raven Serves As A Doorbell

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Sarah Gorby's home doesn't need a front doorbell.

When someone approaches, a 5-year-old raven in a cage croaks: "Hello, Arnold! Hello, Arnold!"

Arnold, the living doorbell, is among dozens of injured or orphaned birds and animals living temporarily in Mrs. Gorby's two-bedroom home.

Mrs. Gorby, a 64-year-old widow, was certified as an animal custodian by the Arizona Game and Fish Department several years ago.

She receives animals from neighbors and hunters, nurses them to health, and then takes them to the department.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices turned mixed today as the government reported that productivity in the nation's businesses fell for the sixth consecutive quarter. The Dow Jones industrial average, down more than four points in early trading, rallied and was up 2.64 to 920.73 after two hours of trading. But declines outnumbered advances by a 7-5 margin among New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Labor Department said productivity in the private business sector fell at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.1 percent in the second quarter, following a 0.3 percent rate in the first quarter. The decline was attributed to a large drop in output by the economy as the recession deepened.

Among volume leaders, Citi-corp fell 1/4 to 21 1/4 and Norton Simon rose 1 to 17. General Motors, which last week reported a record quarterly loss, was up 1/2 to 49 1/2.

Mobil, which announced it is raising its exploration and production budget for this year by $744 million to $2.84 billion, was up 3/4 to 78 3/4.

Big Board volume totaled 15.56 million shares in the first two hours, compared to 17.39 million at the same point Friday. The NYSE's composite index rose .14 to 69.24.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 41 to 316.06.

Such a change would "give delegates more time to become familiar with the different points of view," Kennedy said. He added that the Carter forces have not agreed to the switch.

Powell said on CBS "Face the Nation" that there was "no reason" for the president to release his convention delegates, as the dissident congressional Democrats are urging.

The president's chief spokesman predicted that when all is known about Billy Carter's relationship with Libya, "the conclusion will be reached that the president and the administration conducted themselves in a way that was right and proper."

Republican candidate Ronald Reagan and independent John Anderson have not been pushing the Billy affair, meanwhile, assuming correctly that it would simmer to a boil by itself.

Anderson was in Chicago today for strategy and fund-raising meetings. Reagan, whose own troubles over his choice of a vice presidential candidate seem to have melted in the face of the Billy affair, was off the campaign trail in California.

 from convention delegates who are either uncommitted or pledged to support Carter. In an interview on ABC's "Issues and Answers," Kennedy proposed a 24-hour postponement of a convention fight over his challenge to a rule that would require convention delegates to vote on the first nominating ballot for the candidate they were pledged to support.

The rule would guarantee Carter's renomination, because he already has 1,981 delegate votes, with 1,666 required for nomination. Kennedy said his advisers have been negotiating with Carter aides to postpone the vote from the opening day of the convention to the following day.

Applicants Are Placed In Jobs

During the nine months from October, 1979 to June, 1980, the Greenville Job Service Office of the North Carolina Employment Service Commission placed 1808 individual applicants into gainful employment.

"There were 8446 persons placing new applications with us or renewing old applications," James E. Hannan, Manager, said.

"Many employers have found it convenient to list their openings with our agency," he said. "They just supply our office with the desired job requirements and we screen applicants and refer to the potential employer as many qualified applicants as he or she wishes to interview," he said. "This procedure saves the employer valuable time during his selection process."

Through June of this year, the Greenville Job Service has received 3439 openings from local employers. "Of these, our staff has succeeded in filling 2677 or 77.8 percent," Hannan said.

He said Job Service is constantly seeking ways to improve its service to employers and applicants alike and to promote its major service — job placement. "We seek constructive comments from employers regarding our services on acceptable means of making improvements," he said.

"We had 904 veterans apply for jobs this fiscal year and have placed 349," Kendrick Taylor, Veterans Employment Representative said.

Employers are encouraged to use the services of the Greenville Job Service by calling 756-2686, Hannan said.

Concern In Alternatives

SUDBURY, Ontario (AP) — Canadian energy officials are worried that part of the cost of the U.S. effort to find alternatives to expensive imported oil could fall on Canada as acid rain, the polluted precipitation that forms when sulfur dioxide from coal mixes with moist air.

Environment Minister John Roberts said Sunday he asked the United States for a firm commitment that U.S. pollution control standards will be enforced strictly and stronger legislation implemented in the future.

Roberts said he made the request after President Carter announced the industrialized northeastern United States would undergo a massive conversion from oil to coal, which would significantly increase the amount of sulfur dioxide in the air. Scientific studies have shown that more than 80 percent of the acid rain contaminating Ontario lakes comes from the northeastern United States, Roberts said.

Find No Cause For Libel Suit

DETROIT (AP) — A U.S. District Court jury has ruled that a millionaire suburban Detroit labor consultant had "no cause of action" in his $8 million libel suit against Reader's Digest and Leslie Velie, author of "Desperate Bargain: Why Jimmy Hoffa had to Die."

Leonard Schultz, 62, of Southfield had contended that he and his business were injured by Velie's allegations indirectly linking him with the unsolved July 1975 disappearance of Hoffa, former international Teamsters Union president.

Schultz was a minor character in Velie's book, published in November 1977. The jury ruled on Friday after eight weeks of testimony.

The Olympics

A Losing Streak, A Winning Streak, A Blue Streak

The Last One Is The Hardest
A hurdle goes flying as Soviet Aleksandr Puchov, left, accidentally grabs arm of East Germany's Thomas Munkelt clearing final obstacle toward finish in men's 110-meter hurdle finals Sunday in Moscow. Munkelt won the race and gold medal in 13.39 seconds. Puchov finished third for bronze. Cuba's Alejandro Casanas (not shown) won second. (AP Laserphoto)

MOSCOW (AP) — Little Miruts Yifter is on a winning streak, the big Soviet basketball team is on a losing streak and, somewhere in between, Steve Ovett was talking a blue streak.

Yifter's victory in a thrilling 10,000-meter race that ended the two-Olympics reign of Lasse Viren of Finland wasn't surprising.

His country, Ethiopia, was competing at this Olympics after joining other African nations in a walkout of the 1976 Games over New Zealand's sporting contacts with apartheid South Africa. And he had excellent pre-race directions this time, after missing the 5,000-meter race at Munich in 1972 when he got lost on the way from the bathroom to the track.

But the twin defeats of the Soviet basketball team, favored to win the gold medal, were real shockers. Before this weekend, the possibility of the Soviets losing consecutive games to Italy and Yugoslavia was about as good as the usually silent Ovett running off at the mouth in the presence of a member of the fourth estate.

Well, all those things happened this weekend as the Summer Olympics began its second of two weeks on Soviet soil.

Despite the double defeats by its basketball team, the Soviet Union continued to dominate the medal standings at the first-ever modern Games without an American team. Through Sunday, the Soviet Union had 43 gold medals and 115 overall, more than the total for any team in a full Olympics except the 125 medals the Soviets won at Montreal four years ago. East Germany was second with 31 gold and 81 total medals.

The swimming competition ended Sunday, with East Germany capitalizing on its wealth of female swimming talent and the absence of the Americans, who are boycotting the Summer Games in protest of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

The East German women won their 10th and 11th gold medals in the swimming competition but missed surpassing their 1976 total of 11 victories when Australia's Michele Ford took the 800-meter freestyle in an Olympic record 8 minutes 28.90 seconds.

Rica Reinisch won her third gold, clocking a world record 2:11.77 in the 200-meter backstroke. Barbara Krause and Caren Metschuk also became triple gold medalists as they joined teammates Ines Diers and Sarina Hulsenbeck in winning the 400 freestyle relay in 3:42.71.

The East German men swimmers avoided a gold medal shutout when Jorg Woithe won the 100 freestyle in 50.40, well off American Rowdy Gaines' best time of the year, 49.61.

Aleksandr Siborenko of the Soviet Union won the 400-meter individual medley in 4:22.89, an Olympic record.

Ethiopia, which produced one of the greatest long-distance runners of all-time in marathoner Abbe Bikila, won its first two medals of the Games in the 10,000.

For most of the race, three Ethiopian runners leap-frogged at the front of the pack in an effort to destroy the rhythm of the two persistent Finnish runners, Kaarlo Maaninka and Viren, whose greatness was established by his twin victories in the 5,000 and 10,000 at the past two Olympics.

"We planned to run the race on teamwork," said Yifter, a tiny, balding man who has been outrunning Father Time for some time now. "That is necessary in long distance running."

Yifter, listed as 35 years old, unleashed a brutal kick with 300 meters to go to win the gold medal in 27:42.7. He was barely breathing hard at the end. Asked about his true age, the amazing runner said he might provide an exact figure next week. "After I have won the 5,000."

Maaninka rallied in the stretch to finish second in 27:44.3 and Mohammed Kedir of Ethiopia won the bronze ahead of teammate Tolossa Kotu.

Viren, 31, faded in the final lap to finish fifth. It appeared that injuries and the calendar had finally caught up to him. He said he would decide overnight whether to test Yifter again in the 5,000 or try the marathon instead.

"It was a rotten race. I waited too long, way too long," Viren said. "The Ethiopians commanded the race with murderous tactics. They broke the pace, continuously changing the lead, stopping and then pushing harder again to crack our nerves and resistance."

The Soviet fans found a tactic to help their struggling basketball team. On Saturday, whenever Italy brought the ball upcourt, the crowd would fill the air with shrill whistles. But they never could shake the Italians' composure, beating the Soviets 87-85 for their first loss at home since a U.S. all-star team beat them in 1973.

Sunday, the fans were quieter, but the team still looked clumsy in losing to the undefeated Yugoslavs 101-91 in overtime. The Yugoslavs, who lost in the finals to the United States in 1976, are now assured of a spot in Wednesday's final. The Soviets, the only team to beat the United States in Olympic

Bonnett's Pocono Win Almost Unbelievable

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) —

Neil Bonnett got out of his winning Mercury and stood still as a statue, his eyes closed for a moment as the well-wishers crowded around him.

For the 33-year-old driver, the victory in Sunday's Pocono 500-mile Grand National stock car race was almost too good to believe.

It isn't that Bonnett hasn't won before. It was just beginning to seem like way to him after a 19-race dry spell in which every kind of gremlin seemingly has conspired to keep him and the famed Wood Brothers team out of the winner's circle.

"I felt down deep that the car would run well in every race and we would win," Bonnett said. "It's just that it seemed everything that could go wrong, would go wrong at the wrong time."

"We'd break something, or cut a tire..." he added, his voice trailing off.

But, other than an early vibration problem, corrected by two quick pit stops, there was no holding down Bonnett Sunday.

"The vibration was so bad that it was cracking the windshield," he said. "I came in once for right-side tires, then came back around for the left side, and that did it. Then I got lucky and got back up close enough to get up with the leaders again when the yellow flags came out a little while later."

In a hotly-contested race that saw 49 lead changes among 11 drivers, Bonnett led eight times for 59 laps, including the last four.

A three-car sprint to the finish was set up by the fifth and last caution flag of the 200-lap event. Bonnett and his two principal rivals, Buddy Baker and Cale Yarborough, pitted under the yellow when Roger Hamby nicked the wall with 28 laps remaining.

The green fell again on lap 175 and the trio went virtually nose-to-tail the rest of the way. Bonnett beat Baker by a car-length and Yarborough by less than two.

"Buddy and I could swap the lead down the straightaways, and Cale's car was a little better in the turns. I was glad that I wasn't just going against one of them because, this way, I felt if they swapped the dust it would give me a better chance," Bonnett said.

There were three accidents, including one in which seven-time NASCAR champion Richard Petty was eliminated while leading.

DHC's Marsh 'Dreaming' As East-West Nears

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
D.H. Conley basketball coach Shelly Marsh is in the middle of a dream that will end late Tuesday night.

For now, however, Marsh dreams on, to the sound of basketballs swishing through the nets of the Greensboro Coliseum. It is here that Marsh's dream will become alive when he leads the East into Tuesday night's annual East-West basketball game.

This is Marsh's first time as head coach in the East-West battle and he has enough talent on his side to start his own college team — and win more than a few games. A high school team with these 10 players might be unbeatable, except perhaps by the 10 players who will oppose the East tomorrow night.

"This is a utopia for a coach," said Marsh, in a telephone interview Sunday night from the Greensboro Coliseum. "This is a dream come true for a coach. There's so much talent here it's unbelievable."

Shelly Marsh

Marsh said this knowing that perhaps the most talented player on the East's team — Cecil Exum — would not be able to play. Exum, who led Southern Wayne to the state 4-A title and is headed to UNC, injured his leg the first day of practice and will sit out the game. Herbert Gilchrist, who is headed to East Carolina from Western Harnett, reinjured his back Friday and also may not play.

"The West has real quick guards and Gilchrist was the quickest guard we have," Marsh said. "Even if he plays he'll only be at 80 percent at best. But I think we'll be able to overcome their quickness with our intelligence in the backcourt."

"I think we'll be able to take it inside," Marsh added. "We're a little quicker than they are and our guards are disciplined enough to get it inside." Among the players Marsh will be counting on at guard is Greenville Rose's Ronnie House. House, who is headed to N.C. Central, will alternate at small forward and #2 guard, a position he played only sparingly in high school.

"His shooting has been real good so far and his defense is looking real good," Marsh said. "He's got real long arms which help him and, of course, he's got excellent leaping ability."

For House, however, playing guard will be a switch from high school. "I only played guard a little in high school. Mainly, I played forward and center. But I think it'll help me. They want me to play guard at North Carolina Central and I think playing with this kind of talent now is going to help me. Just about all these players are going to major colleges."

Something, House admitted, left him in awe the first few days of practice.

What Would Olympics Been Had All Entered?

MOSCOW (AP) — What would have happened if they had held an Olympics and everybody came? Well, for one, this story wouldn't have been written. And, for two, back in the U.S. of A., the Moscow Games would have been America's favorite television companion for two weeks.

But the Games themselves:

Would they have been improved significantly in quality had the Americans, West Germans, Japanese, Canadians and athletes from 32 other nations not boycotted in protest of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan? A check of best times for the boycotters in certain events, some 1979 world championship results and a look back at the 1976 Olympics give some indication.

It is clear the Soviet Union and East Germany, which already have divided nearly two-thirds of the 332 medals handed out, still would be among the top three teams in medals — like they were four years ago, when the Soviets led in golds and total medals, the East Germans were second in golds and the United States was runner-up in total medals and third in golds.

But the U.S. flag would have been flying enough to put a dent in some of the domination of the East Europeans' Big

Two, particularly in America's traditionally strong sports — swimming, track and field, boxing and basketball.

And an improving American gymnastic contingent — led by Kurt Thomas and Bart Connor — coupled with the perennially powerful Japanese, would have had an affect on the medals. They also might have had some influence on the Eastern-controlled judging shenanigans that demeaned the competition here.

In a lot of sports, in which the Americans are bit players, the East Europeans still would pile up medal after medal. That wouldn't have changed. The bulky weightlifters and Greco-Roman wrestlers, rowers and cyclists who win would still have unpronounceable names with lots of letters, and their languages would all sound foreign to us. They would still do some of their lifting, rowing and cycling in world record numbers.

Through Sunday, the halfway point in the Games, there have been 27 world records set and one tied.

The midway point of the Games also signals the conclusion of the swimming competition, Uncle Sam's favorite summertime sport.

Johnson Team Wins Crown

Robert and Leon Johnson defeated Bobby Shortand Stan Tyson 6-2, 6-4 Sunday to win the Greenville Tennis Association's men's doubles tournament at the Thomas Foreman Park tennis courts.

Johnson-Johnson downed Graylin Johnson and Marvin Hardy in the semifinals 6-3, 6-4 while Short-Tyson beat Bernard Haselrig and Curtis Ward 6-4, 6-1.

competition, still have a chance at the gold medal. Dragan Kicanovic and Drazen Dalipagic were the heroes for Yugoslavia. Kicanovic was at his ball-hawking best in the overtime and finished with 22 points. Dalipagic grabbed a pair of crucial rebounds in the final minute and totaled a game-high 28 points.

Moscow television switched to a newscast with the score 81-81. Later, it reported the game had gone into overtime and said "our team lost."

In the long-awaited duel between Overt and Sebastian Coe, who had only raced each other twice before, the press had put a black hat on Overt and a white one on Coe. But the race went to the swiftest, not necessarily the nicest. Coe never went to the front, and the big-kicking Overt had a relatively easy victory in 1:45.4.

Coe took the silver medal and appeared at a news conference. Overt, as is his custom, didn't talk to the press on Saturday.

But on Sunday, in an exclusive interview with Adrian Metcalfe of ITV, the independent British television network, Overt came across as an amiable, quick-witted man with keen insights and a touch of humility. The conversation was monitored by The Associated Press and portions of it will be seen in the United States on NBC this week.

"I thrive on pressure, like a coiled spring," Overt said. "But I'm not some kind of rebel without a cause. I'm no James Dean."

He also said he holds no animosity toward Coe. The two expect to race again in this week's 1,500 meters, in which they share the world record at 3:32.1.

"We can't call each other friends. We're really more associates, business associates...I don't know him very well. We only have contact once or twice a year. I've never talked to him in any depth."

But Overt said the press' constant pushing of Coe and Overt into different corners was unfortunate. "It's really a sad loss that they don't enjoy us while we're here instead of putting one down and raising one up," Overt said.

"We're not going to be around very long. They should enjoy us as a team."

Saturday was a big day for Britain as 21-year-old Daley Thompson joined Overt as a gold-medal winner, taking the decathlon with 8,495 points. During the awards ceremony, while the Olympic hymn was played as Britain's protest against the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, hundreds of British fans held up Union Jacks and sang "God Save the Queen."

Marsh Dreaming...

"The first few days I was just standing around watching them. But that was only for the first day or so," House said. "The talent here is just super. I've never been around so much."

Besides House, Exum and Gilchrist, seven other players make up this year's East team. They are at center 6'9" Anthony Teachey (headed to Wake Forest) and 6'7" Bill Nearly (junior college in Florida); at forwards 6'5" Bill McNair (ECU), 6'5" Harold Thompson (N.C. State); at guards 6'4" Kenny Wilson (Davidson), 6'1" Frank Dickens (UNC-Wilmington) and 6'0" Ben Wilson (UNC walk on). Edward Hicks, a 6'6" forward from Louisville High School, will replace Exum on the East roster.

Usually, all-star games are little more than offense shows. The East-West game promises to be that, but Marsh believes his team's defense may surprise the West.

"It should be a high scoring game — we're going to look for the fast break and the secondary break whenever we can — but these guys have really worked hard on their defense. I think we'll out defend them and that may win the game for us," said Marsh, who credits his assistant, South View's Ron Miller, with getting the East's defense in shape.

"Miller's known for his defense and he's come in here and made the kids work hard on defense," Marsh said. "It helps that the players have gone along with the system. 'The players have come in here confident but not cocky,' Marsh said. "I thought I might be working with a bunch of cocky kids, but they act like they've never heard of a university or college scholarship. They're more like high school juniors."

East-West Notes...The game will be played on a 94-foot court, 10-feet longer than high school games are played on...As in most all-star games, no zone defense or zone presses will be allowed...

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — As he sat slouched over, red-faced and clutching a cup of ice, Howard Twitty looked like a boxer who had taken one too many punches, rather than the golfer who had just won the $300,000 Greater Hartford Open.

"I feel very good, but I'm not flying that high," Twitty said after winning the $54,000 first prize. "Maybe because of the six-hole playoff."

The playoff he referred to was the longest on the Professional Golfers Association tour this year. It ended when Twitty sank a 9-foot birdie putt to defeat Jim Simons.

Twitty's birdie ended five holes of cautious putting, in which both golfers had collected four pars and one bogey.

Simons and Twitty had 18-under 266s following 72 holes of play at the 6,534-yard Wethersfield Country Club.

Simons shot a final-round 67 and Twitty a 69 to force the playoff at the par-71 course.

"I was a bit impatient the first five holes," Twitty said. "But from the sixth hole on, I settled down."

Twitty had three bogeys in the 18 holes of regulation play, and all of them came in the first five holes, one coming on the first, another on the fourth and the final one on the fifth. But he birdied the 13th and 16th holes and sank a 45-foot eagle putt on the 14th to draw even with Simons, who had taken advantage of Twitty's bogeys to take a 2-stroke lead.

"I felt I played good enough to win," Simons said. His bogey on the third hole of the playoff was his first since Friday's second round, or his first in 50 holes.

Twitty, however, played a little better. He was the leader after three rounds, setting a tournament record for 54 holes in the process. He shot an 8-under 63 Saturday to finish with a 16-under 197.

The victory also kept alive a recent string of good tournament performances by Twitty. Two weeks ago he finished second at the Greater Milwaukee Open and last week he finished fifth in the Quad Cities Open.

Simons had been the first- and second-round leader and had been alone in second with a 199 total after three rounds. That put him at 14-under, two strokes behind Twitty. Simons had tied the opening-round record with a 62, which was also the low score for the four-day tournament.

Jay Haas finished alone in third at 15-under 269. He shot a 6-under 65 to earn his best finish of the year.

Lindy Miller also had his best showing of the year as he finished alone in fourth with a 14-under 270.

Ninth-Inning Run Ends Season For Greenville

KINSTON — Wilmington, after watching Greenville tie the game in the bottom of the seventh with three runs, pushed across the winning run in the top of the ninth to edge Greenville, 8-7, Saturday night in the losers bracket semifinals of the State 14-15-year-old Babe Ruth State Tournament.

Only two innings earlier, in the bottom of the seventh, Greenville had scored three runs to tie the game and force it into extra innings. Hudson singled, moved to second when Jamie Jones reached on an error, and scored on Carter's single. Tommy Shirley then reached on an error which scored Jones. Warren then walked to load the bases before Shirley scored on a passed ball to tie the game.

After Wilmington took the lead in the third with a run Greenville rallied to move ahead with two runs in the fourth. Stalls singled and scored on Hudson's triple. Hudson then scored on Monte Carter's single and Greenville led, 3-2.

Only an inning before it appeared Greenville, the District V champions, would advance into the finals of the losers' bracket. But it wasn't to be. Marshall Rand reached on an error to lead off the inning and then stole second. He moved to third on Troy Hudson's single. Rand, however, was out in a rundown at third moments later to squash

Both clubs scored in the first. Randy Warren singled to lead off the inning, stole second and moved to third on a passed ball. Rand then put down a suicide squeeze to score Warren.

Wilmington regained the lead in the fifth with two runs and added three more in the sixth while Greenville could manage only a run in the sixth. With one gone and Terry Smith on second with a walk and on first with a fielder's choice, Curtis Evans reached on an error to load the bases. Smith then came home when Rand was on with an error.

Rock Hudson Is Out Of Hospital

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Rock Hudson has been released from a Los Angeles hospital following a week-long treatment for a viral illness, his doctors said.

A doctor at the Los Angeles New Hospital, who asked not to be named, said the actor was "doing very well." He said Hudson, 54, had suffered from fever and possible flu, but that his admission to the hospital last Monday had been merely precautionary.

Hudson was hospitalized after returning from Europe, where he filmed his latest movie, Agatha Christie's "The Mirror Crack'd."

With more than 60 movies to his credit, the tall, ruggedly handsome Hudson established himself as a perennial box-office attraction during the 1950s and 1960s with comedies such as "Pillow Talk" and "Lover, Come Back."

His dramatic films include "Giant," for which he won an Academy Award nomination in 1956. He starred in the successful "McMillan & Wife" mystery-comedy television series from 1971 to 1976.

'Burton Trades Sword For Bat

NEW YORK (AP) — It wasn't a performance of "Camelot" or even a good British game of cricket. But actor Richard Burton still managed to put on a kingly show on the softball field.

Burton, returning to his role as King Arthur in this year's revival of the musical, traded Excalibur for a softball bat and showed up Sunday at Shea Stadium to cheer the Broadway Show League All-Stars in their battle with the Albany Maulers.

"I know the Mets are having problems with injuries," the Welsh-born actor told Mets manager Joe Torre. "I understand because I've had the same problem."

And in response to a query from Tom Seaver, now with the Cincinnati Reds, he said, "I have a pinched nerve but still have about 42 weeks of 'Camelot' to do yet."

Leif Garrett To Register In Fla.

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Leif Garrett says he doesn't want to go to war and kill somebody — "that's not in my nature." But "I hate the Iranians so much that I would go to war against them tomorrow."

The young rock singer went to the New York General Post Office on Sunday to register for the Selective Service System. But he arrived too late, and now plans to register on Tuesday in Miami, before a court day.

"I don't want to go to war," he said. "I don't believe in killing. But I would go to war tomorrow over Iran. I hate them for what they did to our hostages."

Garrett said he believes each person should make up his own mind about the draft, but said women should not be drafted.

GOREN BRIDGE

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠5 ♥J74 ♦Q9852 ♣Q742
 Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
 A.—You probably have a better contract than one spade, but you cannot find it without exposing yourself to grave risk. It would be pleasant if you could respond one no trump, secure in the knowledge that partner would rebid in another strain. But in real life partner usually makes some jump in spades, an opponent doubles, and your side gets carried out. The prudent course when you have 5 HCP and a misfit with partner is to pass.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠A5 ♥KQ1053 ♦AK82 ♣K9
 The bidding has proceeded: East South West North 1♦ Dble. 1♣ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Your hand is too strong to let the opponents bid the hand at one spade. However, it is wrong to bid two hearts, even though you have a fair five-card suit. The correct action is to double again. Partner could be short in hearts and have long diamonds, and he might even want to defend against one spade doubled. Give him the choice by reopening with another double. Since he has not yet bid, this is still for takeout.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠52 ♥Q985 ♦Q97 ♣A1043
 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1♥ Pass 2♥ Pass 2NT Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You are near the top of your range for a raise to two hearts, and since partner is interested in game, you should be happy to cooperate. However, you should prefer the suit game because of your weakness and ruffing value in spades. Jump to four hearts—three hearts would be a denial of partner's game invitation.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠92 ♥AJ8 ♦K10984 ♣KQ3
 The bidding has proceeded: West North East South 1♣ Pass 3♣ ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Even though you have five diamonds and only three cards in the other two unbid suits, a balancing bid of two diamonds does not do your hand justice—normally this shows much less. As a rule of thumb, all good hands in the balancing seat should reopen with a double. (By good hands, we mean hands of 11 HCP or better.) Partner will take into account that you are reopening and might not have perfect shape or opening bid strength, so he will not go jumping all over the place unless he has additional values—certainly something more than required for a jump response to a direct takeout double.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠73 ♥KQJ1065 ♦A762 ♣8
 The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1♥ 2♣ Dble. Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Partner's double of a low-level contract is a strong suggestion, but it is not an absolute command. Defensively, your hand will be a big disappointment to partner. Offensively, however, it should produce six tricks, even if partner is short in hearts. So take out to two hearts. Blush violently if you thought of jumping to three hearts, for which there is no earthly justification, especially since partner rates to have some wasted length and strength in clubs.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠A962 ♥73 ♦KQ84 ♣A72
 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1♦ 2♥ 3♦ 4♥ 4♦ 5♥ ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Strange as it seems, the strongest action you can take at this point is to pass! This does not mean that you are too frightened to act. On the contrary, it tells partner you are full value for your bid and that he is free either to go on to five spades or to double five hearts, and you will be happy to abide by his decision.

No Negotiations Seen In Walkout By Actors

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The strike by film and prime-time television actors began its second week today with no negotiations in sight and no new signs of either side softening on the controversial home video issue.

"As of today, the producers are still not willing to continue the contract talks which are necessary to end the dispute," a Screen Actors' Guild spokesman said Sunday in a taped message on a telephone information hotline for SAG's 47,000 members.

"They are still toughing it out," the tape continued. "They mistakenly believe that by some magic, the Guild and AFTRA (American Federation of Television and Radio Artists) will hand them your services on a silver platter for almost nothing."

Billy Hunt, head of the Motion Picture Industries Negotiating Committee, said Sunday he didn't expect any breakthrough in the dispute this week, noting that producers are busy negotiating with the American Federation of Musicians, whose contract expires at midnight Thursday.

"The ball is in the court of both sides," he said. "Each side has a responsibility to come up with a solution."

The dispute centers on the two actors unions' demand for 6 percent of the producers' gross receipts for original programs for pay TV, videocassette and videodiscs.

The producers have offered to pay the actors 3.6 percent of the gross for dramatic, comedy and variety shows and 2 percent for other kinds of programs — talk shows, game shows and the like.

But on pay TV the payments would begin only after a program has been broadcast for two years — one year in the case of a series — or 15 24-hour periods, whichever came first. And on videodisc-cassette shows, the payments would begin only after 100,000 units were sold.

Meanwhile, with fall approaching, television executives and analysts are beginning to face the possibility that new programs may not be available for the traditional September start of the new TV season.

BLESSING PROCESSION — Archbishop Philip Hannan leads a procession of about 90 boats to Bayou La Loutre for the annual blessing of the fishing fleet. This year's ceremony included a special prayer for those hurt by a spill of toxic chemicals in the nearby Mississippi River-Gulf Outlet, which crosses the bayou. The chemicals were lost when two ships collided in the canal Tuesday. (AP Laserphoto)

'Young Man' Population Growth Is A Woman Continuing Up In N.C.

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Dorcas Evans, a graduate student at the University of Wisconsin at Madison, is an Outstanding Young Man with a difference — she's a woman.

Ms. Evans was one of 13 Madison residents recently notified by an Alabama company called Outstanding Young Men of America that she was being honored for "outstanding civic and professional contributions." Officials of the concern said about 19,000 young men nationwide received awards this year.

Another winner from Madison was Olympic speed skater Eric Heiden.

Ms. Evans was nominated as a joke by her husband, a former winner of the award.

The sociology student said she filled out the application form truthfully, outlining her memberships in professional organizations. She also listed her accomplishments, which she said included "nothing outstanding."

"They asked for 'wife's name' and I said I didn't have one," she said.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The growth trend of North Carolina has continued as expected over the last 10 years, but some of the state's larger cities have not increased in population as rapidly as officials had thought they would.

In at least two of the state's larger cities — Winston-Salem and High Point — officials are considering questioning preliminary census figures that have come as a surprise to them.

Projections in Winston-Salem went beyond what preliminary figures say the city has in terms of population. It is the only one of the state's five largest cities to lose population in the last 10 years.

The preliminary 1980 figures show the city with a population of 129,974. That represents a decrease of 2.8 percent.

High Point officials may question the government's finding of 63,322. That represents no change in percentage and means the city gained just 93 residents since 1970.

The largest gain in the state was made by its largest city, Charlotte. But the 23.4-percent boost did fall short of projections. The city could add to its 297,807 total if nearly 11,000 residents from recent annexations are included later.

The loss of population in Winston-Salem, coupled with a 17-percent rise in Raleigh makes the capital city the third largest in the state. Preliminary figures show Raleigh now has 145,156 residents.

Greensboro remained as the state's second largest city, according to the figures. The city gained 7.2 percent over the last 10 years to 154,383.

Slower growth was reported in Durham, which inched closer to the 100,000 mark with a 2.6-percent rise since 1970. Durham's population has reached 97,879.

Unofficial figures obtained from other sources show Fayetteville climbed by about 12 percent to 62,584.

Gastonia fell off by about 2,000 people to 45,616, according to the figures, while Asheville's population declined by 7.9 percent to 53,275.

No figures could be obtained from Wilmington, which as one of the state's 10 largest cities in 1970 with 46,200 residents.

Kaye Hampton Promotes Event

Executive Director of the Southern Flue-cured Tobacco Festival Kaye Hampton traveled to Valdosta, Ga. last week to speak to the annual meeting of the Georgia and Florida Warehouse Associations. The flue-cured tobacco market opens first in Valdosta, and this meeting was to discuss rules and regulations for the upcoming season.

Ms. Hampton was also present to promote the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival with the warehousemen and to encourage more participation in their schedule of events from Georgia and Florida.

According to Hampton, the expanded schedule of this year's festival and increased awards and prizes, competition promises to be keen. "In 1979 the Tobacco Farmers Show and the Tobacco Festival brought approximately 60,000 visitors to Greenville and the area, which proves that not only is the tobacco industry of vital importance to Pitt County, but the Tobacco Festival is benefiting our local economy also," said Hampton.

Blank Check Is No Free Ride

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Motorists traveling the New York State Thruway have discovered that a blank check doesn't always mean a free ride.

A toll increase went into effect at midnight Sunday and new toll tickets were printed up. But booths at two Thruway entrances near Albany ran out of the old forms earlier in the day and had to give out blank substitutes that contained only a few key-punch holes.

Thruway Authority spokesman Dave Alexander said no one traveled free, however. The coding assured that motorists paid the correct tolls — at the old rates.

Fourteen States Felt Earthquake

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer

More than 60,000 baseball fans felt it in Detroit and Cleveland. Pradeep Talwar measured it in Columbia, S.C. And Joel Mans said it "busted the whole back side" of his house in Frankfort, Ky. It was a "very rare" earthquake registering 5.1 on the Richter scale that struck in northern Kentucky on Sunday and was felt for 300 miles or more in all directions — shaking people in 14 states and southern Canada.

No deaths or injuries were reported from the tremor, which was centered about 30 miles northeast of Lexington and occurred at 2:52 p.m., lasting 15 to 45 seconds. But hundreds of buildings — mostly in the Ohio River town of Maysville, Ky. — sustained damage ranging from shattered windows and toppled chimneys to cracked foundations.

States where residents reported feeling the earthquake were Michigan, Wisconsin, Ohio, West Virginia, Virginia, Illinois, Indiana, Pennsylvania, New York, Kentucky, Tennessee, North and South Carolina and Alabama. People in high-rise buildings in Toronto and other cities of southern Ontario also felt it.

For most people, the quake brought excitement, puzzlement, even disbelief. "I was upstairs when the radiator started to jiggle and then the whole house rattled," said Fran Zaniello, a college English instructor who lives in Fort Thomas, Ky., 20 miles south of Cincinnati. "I went downstairs and said, 'Hey, I just felt an earthquake,' and everybody laughed."

Elba Cunningham, 56, of Dayton, Ohio, said it felt like "a great big giant shaking my house." She added, "I've lived here all my life and I never felt one before."

At Cleveland Stadium, where 20,000 were watching the Indians play the California Angels, announcer Herb Score said "the whole crowd became very quiet and were looking around," when the tremor was felt.

At Tiger Stadium in Detroit, an announcer told 40,000 fans watching the Tigers and the Oakland Athletics that the swaying they felt was not their imagination. "The fans all looked at one another, but there wasn't a stampede to get out," said police officer Mike Werner, stationed in an upper deck.

Waverly Person, a geophysicist with the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., said it was the first time a quake had been recorded in that part of northern Kentucky. He said earthquakes anywhere in the area were "very rare" and that Eastern quakes rarely registered above 4.0.

The Richter scale measures ground motion as recorded on seismographs and every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. An earthquake of 5 can cause considerable damage.

Scientists said they did not know what caused the quake, but they said it differed from the kind of earthquakes common in California, which are triggered by two large plates of the earth's crust moving against each other along one of several faults.

The Kentucky quake occurred in an area that has only one plate and no fault. In northern Alabama, more than 300 miles from the epicenter, Billy Joe Cooley, news editor of the Huntsville News, said callers reported tables, lamps and dishes shaking.

"The phones just started going wild," said Bob Martin at radio station WCZY in Royal Oak outside Detroit. "A woman from Farmington Hills called at 2:57 and said she was thrown off her bed."

At the University of South Carolina in Columbia, Talwar, an associate professor of geology, said his seismograph picked up the tremor one minute after it was recorded in Kentucky. "If somebody tells you they felt it, they did," he told a reporter.

In Cincinnati, the steps to City Hall caved in when a stone ornament fell on them from a wall. In Lexington, cans were knocked from the shelves in a grocery store.

Most of the damage was concentrated in and around Maysville, a town of 7,500 people 70 miles northeast of Lexington. State emergency officials estimated 200 homes and businesses were damaged and said assessment teams would tour the area today.

Two chimneys fell on the Mason County, Ky., jail, and jailer Lloyd Berry said, "It felt like the whole damn jail was coming down."

Near the Kentucky state capital of Frankfort, 25 miles west of Lexington, Joel Mans said the earthquake "busted the whole back side of my house. You can pull the bricks out of my house on the back." He said other homes in his subdivision had similar damage.
