Third Night Of Disorder For Central Fla. City

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Riot-equipped police met little resistance early today as they swept through a predominantly black neighborhood following a third straight night of sporadic violence.

Two officers received minor injuries and at least 30 people were arrested as police and troopers cordoned off a 20-square-block area of this Florida city.

Early this morning, police were "putting away the riot helmets, so it looks like it's coming to an end," said Orlando police spokesman Michael Burns. But increased patrols would continue in the area all night, he said.

The only property damage reported late Thursday was a shattered window at a convenience store and the firebombing of a boarded-up liquor store. That blaze was extinguished quickly by passing police officers.

More than 60 people have been arrested here during three nights of trouble sparked by the arrest of a robbery suspect. Two other Florida cities have erupted in race rioting since May.

Black ministers, who took to the streets early Wednesday trying to restore calm, again volunteered to patrol the streets Thursday night to help coax youths to return home. But police said that tactic met with little success.

"The type of crowd we're talking about, if they were inclined to listen to a minister in the first place, they wouldn't be out there doing what they're doing," said Lt. Tom Wylie.

Wylie said patrolmen met only scattered resistance as they approached congregations of blacks and urged them to disperse.

Orange County Sheriff Melvin Coleman suffered a minor cut on his face when his car was hit by a rock. An Orlando policeman suffered a bad leg bruise when he was run over by his own patrol car.

The neighborhood, about 19 miles east of Disney World and other area tourist attractions, was sealed off late Thursday when sporadic rock and bottle throwing erupted. Helmeted police carrying nightsticks, mace and shotguns patrolled the area four to a cruiser.

They warned black youths to go home and arrested those who refused.

The city's violence exploded early Wednesday when white officers arrested a black female robbery suspect inside a bar in the predominantly black neighborhood of southwest Orlando.

An unmarked police car was torched and an angry group of about 150 blacks pelted police and passers-by with rocks and bottles. On Wednesday night, the youths returned to the streets. Several buildings were set on fire and by Thursday morning, police had 29 adults and two juveniles in custody.

"We don't know who we're dealing with except a bunch of rowdy youngsters," Coleman said. "It seems like some of the traditional leadership such as the ministers, have not been able to communicate."

"The ones I saw that were apparently the ones causing trouble appear to be teenagers anywhere from 13 to their early 20s. I'm not sure they have any responsible leadership themselves other than street types," the sheriff said.

"Black ministers, led by the Rev. W.D. Judge, had called for a curfew in the neighborhood instead of a police show of force. But Orlando city officials, apparently worried about the city's tourism image, decided against a dusk-to-dawn curfew and restricting liquor sales in the neighborhood."

Lone Detective Arrests 12 And Seizes Aircraft

SOUTHPORT, N.C. (AP) — When Brunswick County Detective Paul Campbell found himself face-to-face with 12 men and an airplane loaded with marijuana Thursday morning, he didn't have time to be nervous.

Instead, Campbell arrested the men and then he radioed for assistance.

By late Thursday, a total of 18 men were in custody on charges of drug trafficking. Authorities also had seized a four-engine DC-4 airplane and confiscated about six tons of marijuana.

Campbell said his suspicions were aroused when he heard a large airplane make a low pass over his house.

He hurriedly put on some old clothes and drove to the airport in an unmarked car. When he reached the grass landing strip, he saw three men walking away from the plane. Campbell stopped and spoke with them, then placed them under arrest.

A few minutes later, nine other men arrived in an open bed pickup truck carrying landing lights. Campbell placed the newcomers under arrest also, then stopped long enough to call for help.

"It didn't occur to me (to be nervous)," he said later. "You don't ever have time to think about that. Once you're in it, you don't back down."

Three more men were arrested in an allegedly stolen van. They were stopped at a roadblock set up by Brunswick sheriff's deputies and area police.

Two other men were arrested in a fuel truck on N.C. 211 between Southport and Supply. The truck was full of high-octane airplane fuel.

The last man was arrested near the airport after he stopped to call a taxicab.

Bond for the 18 men charged ranged from $30,000 to $115,000 each.

Those arrested included Garcia Felix Agustin Gomez, 28, of Venezuela; Elio Pedro Napoles, 30, of Miami; Rolando Michael Rodriguez, 24, also of Miami; Henry H. Olterman, 48, Oklahoma City; Brooks Alan Moore, 42, Bethany, Okla.; Leslie Carl Hildenbrand, 32, Yukon, Okla.; Edward Gregory Bass, 33, Sarasota, Fla.; Glen Edwin Biggs, 30, Banner Elk; Kevin Jose Witherspoon, 19; Leon Reginald Witherspoon, 24, Bernard Latham Buey, 29, Delano Decasta Davis, 17; James Edward Cunningham, 24, Jerry Wallace, 20, Herman Lester Wilson Jr., 32, Rodney Dwayne James, 22, all from Winston-Salem; David Lloyd Brock, 38, and David Lloyd Brock Jr., 18, both from Leland.

Gomez, Napoles and Rodriguez also are charged with auto larceny and possession of a stolen auto.

It was third seizure this year of marijuana being smuggled into Brunswick County.

Billy Admits Being Given Cable On Trip

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Billy Carter, reversing statements he made a day earlier, acknowledged today that someone in the White House gave him a State Department cable concerning his 1978 trip to Libya.

President Carter's younger brother told reporters in Plains, Ga., this morning that he did indeed receive a copy of a cable from the American charge d'affaires in Tripoli saying "that he appreciated me coming there and that it helped his job."

Asked who gave him the cable, Carter replied, "I assume I got it from someone in the White House." Asked if that person was the president, he replied: "I won't comment on that directly. It was over a year ago and I don't remember."

He said the cable is now in his lawyer's possession.

In Americus, Ga. on Thursday, Billy had strongly denied that he had any government cables, that the president ever gave him any or that he ever said otherwise to Justice Department investigator Joel Lisker.

"I have State Department copies of nothing," the president's brother said at the time. "Jimmy has not shown me anything."

Asked today why he had initially denied receiving any cables, Billy replied, "I didn't realize you were talking about it (the charge d'affaires' memo)."

Billy Carter also had denied lying to Lisker last January about receiving any money from Libya. Today, Billy said Lisker never asked him directly about the money.

"The record speaks for itself," Lisker, who heads the Justice Department's foreign agents registration section, said Thursday.

Also on Thursday, the White House released seven apparently innocuous State Department cables on Billy's visit to Libya and sought to discount any suggestion that the president gave his brother sensitive government information.

The cables reported there was "no negative fallout" from the trip, and one consisted of nothing but a news account on the lack of beer, then Billy's favorite drink, in Libya.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said

Thursday that even if the president had given the cables to his brother, "it wouldn't have amounted to a hill of beans."

This morning, Powell upbraided members of Congress and the news media for their handling of the disclosures of the cables earlier this week.

"I just think that when you're dealing with the integrity questions about the conduct in office of a president of the United States, members of Congress and everybody else ought to know what they're talking about before they leap to conclusions."

Powell, interviewed on ABC-TV's "Good Morning, America" program, said he saw no impropriety in the president sharing the cables with Billy, especially since they had been made available to syndicated columnist Jack Anderson 14 months ago.

"There is absolutely nothing wrong," Powell said. "If he shares them with the news media, which happens all the time, then there's certainly nothing wrong with saying (to Billy) that reports from Tripoli say the trip went well."

Unemployment Up But More People Holding Jobs, Too

By OWEN ULLMANN
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

In defiance of economic predictions, the number of Americans holding jobs in July rose sharply for the first time in five months, but the unemployment rate crept back up to 7.8 percent, the government said today.

In a report laden with encouraging but also mixed economic signals, the Labor Department said total employment based on its survey of American households rose by 459,000 jobs — reversing four straight months of declines brought on by the recession.

At the same time, unemployment, which had dropped from 7.8 percent in May to 7.7 percent in June, returned to 7.8 percent last month as the number of jobless Americans increased by 201,000.

The department said unemployment rose in July despite the gain in jobs because people entered the labor market at a faster rate than jobs were created.

The figures, combined with a positive Commerce Department report on economic trends issued earlier this week, suggested that the recession is bottoming out sooner than economists had expected.

In fact, the government had been looking for another drop in employment in July accompanied by a larger rise in the jobless rate, which had surged from 6 percent in February.

Only two weeks ago, the Carter administration predicted in a revised economic forecast that unemployment would peak at 8.6 percent by early 1981 and remain there throughout the year. The prediction, however, was based on the very rapid deterioration in economic activity during the spring, a trend that appears to have slowed significantly in the past month.

But department economists also pointed to a conflicting report suggesting that the government may have overestimated the rise in employment in July.

A separate survey of business establishments reported a 240,000 drop in employment, an opposite trend from the household survey.

Department economists sought to reconcile the differences by suggesting that perhaps employment remained essentially stable in July, and that its statistical treatment of the information may have been somewhat off base.

In another sign of the bottoming out of the recession, the government said the unemployment rate in Michigan edged downward for the second month in a row. That state, suffering a severe slump in the auto industry, had a 13.6 percent jobless rate, down from a 14.1 percent rate in June and 14.4 percent rate in May.

Total employment in July stood at 97 million, a drop of 950,000 jobs since the peak employment reached in February.

The number of unemployed Americans stood at 8.2 million, up about 2 million from the start of the year.

Carter Won't Free Delegates

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter told House Democrats today that he would refuse to release his Democratic National Convention delegates to vote as they choose and described the efforts to encourage an open convention as "a travesty."

The president was urged to allow his delegates — 315 more than are needed to win the Democratic presidential nomination — to ignore commitments made to support him.

Rep. Thomas Downey, D-N.Y., said after the meeting that he told Carter that opening the convention would allow the delegates to "affirm their support for you."

Otherwise, he said, "the party will be split apart."

Carter, the congressman said, responded "Tom, I understand that, but this is a matter of principle with me."

Downey said that the president described the open convention movement as a "public relations effort and he used the word 'travesty' to initiate that sentence."

According to several participants, Carter spoke for about 11 minutes and discussed the open convention development only when Downey asked him about it as Carter shook hands with his visitors at the end of the morning meeting in the State Dining Room.

The proposals for an open convention focus on a Democratic Party rule that binds delegates to vote on the first presidential ballot for the candidate to whom they were pledged when they were chosen as convention participants.

It has been the focal point of Carter's opponents as the last chance they have to wrest the party's nomination from him.

A number of congressmen supporting the movement have expressed fears about their own re-election chances if Carter heads the party's ticket in November.

Greenville Market Is Steady

The Greenville Tobacco Market completed its third sales day of the 1980 season on Thursday with an average of $114.97 per hundred pounds, down from Wednesday's $117.71.

J. N. Bryan sales supervisor of the Tobacco Board of Trade here, said that the market was steady yesterday with prices up on the better grades of tobacco and down on non-descript offerings and primings.

Top practical price paid on the local market was $1.59 per pound, he reported.

Bryan said that offerings consisted of some 80 percent primings, ten percent lugs, eight percent non-descript, and two percent leaf. Stabilization receipts dropped to 18.40 percent of total sales, compared with Wednesday's 28.62 percent.

The market sold 1,074,596 pounds yesterday for $1,235,467 in averaging $114.97 per hundred pounds. For the early season, local warehouses have sold 3,082,380 pounds for $3,512,752, an average so far of $113.96 per hundred pounds.

RUNAWAY FEEDBACK

Elaine Denny of Dobbs Training School, Kinston, called Hotline this morning to say that the young man with diabetes who ran away from the school Sunday has turned himself in in South Carolina. There had been an urgent search, including an appeal in this column, for him and his two companions, because he was in danger of going into shock if he did not receive insulin. The other two, a 15-year-old white male and a 16-year-old black male, have not been found, she said.

WALLET RETURNED

We don't know who it is and don't know how to find out, but an honest, conscientious person found my son's wallet at a self-service gas station on Highway 33 and returned it to him with all contents, including money, intact. The person even went to the trouble to take it to him at the court house where he works. It was a wonderful thing the person did and we want to publicly praise him or her. Mrs. Day

Attorney Is NSA Speaker

Michael Columbo, local attorney associated with James, Hite, Cavendish and Blount, spoke Monday evening to the Greenville Chapter, National Secretaries Association, on "Women and the Law."

The program included a summary of some changes in women's status under the law due to the women's liberation movement such as equal pay and benefits for equal work, women paying alimony, changes in child custody rulings and the issue of draft registration for women.

Columbo gave examples of conditions presently in the law which he expects to be declared unconstitutional regarding women's rights. Finally, facts about wills, estates and possession of property were discussed followed by a question and answer period.

Newly installed officers presiding at the meeting were: Janie Radford, president; Helen Rollins, vice president; Carol Edwards, recording secretary; Amy Mills, corresponding secretary; and Kathy Hunnings, treasurer. Present for the meeting were new members Kathi Staton, Janie Chance and Linda Mills.

Reports were given by members attending the NSA International Convention July 14-19 in New York: Betty Thompson, delegate, Mary Kittrell, alternate, and Nila Bland, member represented the Greenville chapter. Mrs. Thompson reported on the business sessions of the convention whose theme was "New Decade, New Dedication." She said Mario Thomas was a keynote speaker.

Mrs. Kittrell reported on the social aspects including a tour of New York City, a Rockettes performance and attendance at a baseball game at Shea Stadium.

It was announced Ina P. Simpson, a member from the Southeast District of which Greenville is a member, was elected first vice president of the International organization.

A donation had been made to the NSA Home Trust Fund and members voted to present the scrapbook each year to the outgoing president of that year.

Wedding Invitation

Mrs. Dorothy Thorpe requests the honor of your presence at the marriage of her daughter, Dorothy Ann, to Glenn Vincent Gentile, on Saturday, Aug. 9, at 2 p.m. at Grimesland United Methodist Church.

Pitt Co. Native Gets Degree

By today's standards, they never should have made it. They married too young, never had enough education or made enough money, and they had too many children.

But the 20 black couples who took part in a study by a Pitt County resident for her doctoral dissertation at Ohio State University all have memories of their 50th wedding anniversaries. They show that current information on what makes marriages work may not be applicable to black families, especially the elderly ones, says Cynthia Johnson.

"Research has indicated that high levels of income, occupation, education, older age at marriage and small family size contribute to stable marriages," said Johnson, who received a doctorate in family relations and human development in June.

By these standards, the marriages of the couple interviewed had little chance for success.

So what kept them together?

"The sacredness of the marital vows, a dominant spouse — usually the wife —, and economic hardships," Johnson said.

The men and women who successfully completed 50 years of marriage felt a sacred obligation to each other, the Ohio State graduate said.

"These couples seemed to hold on to the traditional values. As a group they took their vows very seriously," she said.

Most of the couples were members of an established religion. "However, the couples reported little pressure from their religious organizations against divorce," Johnson said. Because they could afford little money for entertainment, the churches served as social gathering places, as well as sites for religious meetings.

The marriages were not without their problems, especially economic difficulties, but on the whole, the hardships seemed to help strengthen their unions, Johnson said.

"It was suggested that perhaps the couples in the study stayed together all these years, in part, because of survival needs," she said.

But the majority of them reported that their marriages were at least satisfactory. Their satisfaction ebbed during some of the problems of the childbearing years, a condition which is typical of almost all marriages, Johnson said. Most rated their early years and those after the children were grown as the happiest.

Despite the problems the children may have caused, close family ties served as binding forces in the marriages. "Children had even more to do with the stability of the relationship than other relatives," she said.

Both men and women admitted that in the struggle to keep the family together, women probably worked harder at the marriage.

"About 60 percent of the women said they worked harder and gave more to the relationship, and more than 50 percent of the men agreed," Johnson said.

In retirement, the share of family duties became more evenly distributed between the men and women, Johnson said. It was not unusual on a visit to one of the households to find the man sweeping the floor, washing dishes or dusting, she said.

Through the years the couples also learned to put up with each other's foibles. Spouses did not forget acts of kindness and moments of giving, but they seemed to overlook a bit of stubbornness or lack of cooperation.

"Those positive characteristics remained stable over a long time, but the negative characteristics seemed to decrease," Johnson said.

Many couples reported their marriages survived because they worked together on the big problems, but never took the little ones too seriously.

More research is needed on marriages of older couples and blacks in particular, Johnson said. At present, counseling for both groups is usually based on information gained from the middle class white majority who often have different backgrounds.

It is important for older blacks to know more about each other, form support groups and let their concerns and needs be known to legislators and others who make decisions affecting them, she said.

EDITOR'S NOTE: A Falkland native, Ms. Johnson has recently completed her Ph. D. at Ohio State and returned to Pitt County. She is a graduate of H. B. Sugg High School who earned her B. S. degree at North Carolina Central University and her M. S. degree at East Carolina University. The daughter of Mrs. Annie Wooten Johnson of Rt. 1, Greenville and the late Thomas Johnson, she is the sister of Dr. Hazel J. Brown, a local dentist.

Dear Abby

Separate Checks At Wedding Dinner?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter is being married to a young man whose parents we have met only once, when the couple announced their engagement last June. They live 90 miles from us.

I wrote to the mother of the groom, explaining that we planned a catered reception and dinner, but because we are on a very tight budget she should limit her guest list to 100 people. (Our list is also limited to 100.)

She sent a list that numbered 130, explaining that she couldn't possibly trim it because they "owed" so many people. (Her guests were mostly friends — not relatives.)

I wrote back saying our budget would allow for only 200 and no more. She phoned to say that she could eliminate only two, and that was final!

Abby, the invitations must be mailed soon. I have two choices: Either trim my own list to 72 so she can have her 128, or trim her list myself and take the consequences. In view of her unreasonable attitude, would I be justified in doing this?

WEDDING HEADACHE

DEAR HEADACHE: Don't trim her list unless you want to start World War III.

Tell her you regret that your budget doesn't allow for any more than 200 guests, so she will either have to trim her list to 100 or pay the tab for the extra guests who cannot be eliminated.

DEAR ABBY: Can a girl get pregnant from kissing with her mouth open?

NEEDS TO KNOW IN JUNEAU

DEAR NEEDS: No. But it's a good beginning.

DEAR READERS: Sheila Cole, formerly of England, and now of Mulga, Ala., sent me a poem from "This England," an English publication. She wrote "I hope you think it's good enough to share with your readers."

I do, and I shall:

IF GOD SHOULD GO ON STRIKE

How good it is that God above has never gone on strike,

Because He was not treated fair in things He didn't like, If only once He'd given up and said, "That's it, I'm through!"

"I've had enough of those on earth, so this is what I'll do.

"I'll give my orders to the sun — cut off the heat supply! "And to the moon — give no more light, and run the oceans dry.

"Then just to make things really tough and put the pressure on, "Turn off the vital oxygen till every breath is gone!"

You know He would be justified, if fairness was the game, For no one has been more abused or met with more disdain

Than God, and yet He carries on, supplying you and me With all the favors of His grace, and everything for free.

Men say they want a better deal, and so on strike they go, But what a deal we've given God to whom all things we owe.

We don't care whom we hurt to gain the things we like; But what a mess we'd all be in, if God should go on strike.

ANON.

DEAR ABBY: I am a shoplifter. I started out as a teenager taking small, inexpensive items, and I always got away with it. I kept telling myself it would be the last time, but I just couldn't stop. I prayed to God to help me stop, and I thought I had because I didn't take anything for over a year. Then it happened again. I just had to take something! As I was walking out of the store, I was stopped and caught with something marked $1.99, but I ended up paying a $60 fine plus the hurt to my family, myself and mostly to God.

I have promised God and myself that I will never again steal as much as one bobby pin, and I think now I can keep that promise.

This letter is for everyone who thinks it is not so bad to shoplift an item or two. Never start! It can get to be a bad habit or a game, and it's hard to stop. Please correct my mistakes in spelling, Abby, but print this. It may help someone. Thank you. Sign me...

SHOPLIFTER

DEAR SHOPLIFTER: You have paid the price, so drop the label. There is a lot of good in one who wants to help others through her own unfortunate experiences. Thanks for writing, and God bless.

Hunter: The Original Olde Tyme Ceiling Fan.

$149.95^{UP}

Air movement, as well as temperature, determine your comfort level. So a room with a Hunter ceiling fan at 78 degrees has the cool comfort of a room at 70 degrees. Set your air conditioner thermostat up 8 degrees and save, because a Hunter runs on the power for one light bulb. In winter, a Hunter recirculates hot air that rises to the ceiling and cuts heating costs. But all ceiling fans aren't alike. Hunter is the original. Since 1886. Cast iron housing. Permanent oil reservoir. Real wood blades. No short cuts. No cheap substitutes. Choice of models and finishes makes Hunter fit any decor.

"Hunter, the oldest name in the business—what you get that your great grandfather didn't is a five year warranty and the assurance that comes with a reputation stretching back to 1886. Hunter is still the industry standard."

"Hunter confidently predicts a fan life of well over 40 years. Less expensive fans have large lightweight motor cases with small capacitor motors inside—the extra weight of solid cast pancake cases contributes to smooth operation, stability, and long life expectancy."

Sooner Or Later They Learn To Tell Stories

By GAIL MICHAELS
Last fall a friend of mine spent an afternoon helping at her church's bazaar while her three-year-old son played on the church's playground. The mother had left him with explicit instructions not to go near the busy street, but the next time she checked on him, he was playing with a toy that he had left on the front seat of their car. The car, as you might have guessed, was parked on the other side of the street.

The mother stormed over to confront him. "John, did you get that toy out of our car?"
He stiffened. "I don't remember."
"What do you mean, you don't remember? You got that out of the car and to do that you had to cross the street by yourself."

He shook his head and his eyes widened. "No I didn't."

"Did someone help you?"
He looked relieved at the suggestion. "Yes, someone helped me."
"Who?"
"Um, a nice lady . . . in a blue dress . . . and a cowboy hat."

"You mean to tell me you left this playground with a stranger? What have I told you about strangers?"

"She wasn't a stranger," he wailed desperately.

"Then who was she?"
"Uh, I think it was Grandma!"

I don't think he would have convinced his mother even if his grandmother hadn't lived 200 miles away.

Convincing or not, though, at one time or another, in a threatening situation, most kids will attempt a lie. No matter how much the parents stress honesty, no matter how many times they read "The Boy Who Cried Wolf," there comes a time when their child will try to duck responsibility.

So I was disappointed, but not surprised, when Meg tried to conceal a recent fall into her swimming pool. She was wearing a brand-new, hand-embroidered dress which her grandparents had brought her from Switzerland. Naturally, she had ignored the suggestion that she change it.

Phillip and I were sitting in the livingroom when we heard the splash. As Phillip ran to investigate the noise, he heard something rubbing vigorously against the side of the house. Then Meg appeared around the corner, soaking wet and streaked with wet paint.

"What happened to you?" Phillip asked.

She tried to look nonchalant. "Oh don't worry, Daddy. I just sweat a lot."

"Something tells me that you aren't telling me the truth, Meg."

"Oh yes I am, Daddy."

"No you are not. You fell into your pool, didn't you?" She burst into tears.

"And what were you doing behind the house?"

"I was trying to dry my dress on the wall," she sobbed.

"Well I am very disappointed in you. It's bad enough that you ruined your dress, but then you told me a story about it. Now what do you think I should do?"

Her voice quivered. "Spank me?"
"I suppose you're right. But it's going to hurt me more than it hurts you."

She gave him a withering look. "I guess I'm not the only one who tells stories around here."

Reason To Think 'Lies' In Abscam Leak Probe

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Conflicts between a secret Justice Department report and court testimony on the Abscam investigation may support allegations that one or more government witnesses lied when they denied leaking information to reporters, a federal judge says. U.S. District Judge John P. Fullam issued an opinion

Thursday that the report on an investigation of Abscam news leaks "provides some further support for the view that not all of the witnesses who denied leaking information were telling the truth."

The judge did not identify the witnesses. Fullam said, however, that he was "satisfied" the Blumenthal Report did not provide any significant information about the leaks that has not already been given during pretrial hearings.

The judge read the report, prepared by Deputy Attorney General Richard Blumenthal, on Monday. At the request of the Justice Department it has not been disclosed publicly or to attorneys for three Philadelphia city councilmen and a lawyer indicted in the FBI's undercover investigation.

Abscam is the FBI code word for an operation called Abdul Enterprises Inc., in which undercover agents posing as Middle East businessmen sought help from public officials for various enterprises.

The four defendants contend their indictment on conspiracy, racketeering and attempted extortion charges should be dismissed because of prosecutorial misconduct and leaks to reporters before their indictments on May 22.

But Fullam said the possibility that witnesses made "self-protective falsehoods" did not warrant dismissal of the charges against attorney Howard Criden and Democratic councilmen George X. Schwartz, Louis Johanson and Harry Jannotti.

"I do not minimize the importance of an ultimate determination, in some forum, as to whether witnesses associated with the government have lied under oath in the course of a pretrial hearing," Fullam said.

"But the possibility that one or more persons suspected of having made improper disclosures to the press has falsely denied having done so is not, in my view, a valid reason for dismissing an indictment," he said.
Fullam also refused to enforce subpoenas against reporters Leslie Maitland of The New York Times and Brian Ross of NBC News. Defense lawyers had sought the reporters to answer questions on the source of their Abscam stories.
Fullam said testimony concerning the Abscam investigation already has established "that government personnel were responsible for the leaks, and that the motives were self-interest, a desire for the limelight, misunderstandings concerning what had already been revealed, and human frailty, or a combination of these factors."

Wild Horse Roundup Set

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The federal Bureau of Land Management says it will use helicopters to help round up wild horses on federal lands in southwestern Idaho this fall.

Using helicopters would be the most humane way to avoid injury to the horses, a bureau spokesman said Thursday. The agency hopes to corral more than 250 wild horses beginning Sept. 2 in barren Owyhee County.

The herd has about 410 horses, too many for the range to support, the bureau said.

The agency was criticized a year ago by horse protection associations for a similar drive in central Idaho, during which several horses were killed or injured.

Experienced cowhands are being hired for this year's roundup, and observers from the horse protection associations will be invited to watch, the agency said.

Acting district manager Jim Gabettas said the helicopters will herd horses into wing fences leading to a trap camouflaged by brush. Later, the horses will be held for the agency's "Adopt A Horse" program.

Under that program, qualified applicants are allowed to adopt the horses and get permanent title to the animals if they care for them properly for one year.

Expansion Is Welcome

Farmville and Pitt County can take satisfaction in the announcement of plans by Collins & Aikman to further expand its Bangor Division plant in Farmville.

Leon C. Frederick, division president, announced that the major expansion in productive capacity is nearing completion. It is part of a capital improvements program totalling $6 million.

A South Carolina plant is to be phased out and production will be consolidated at Farmville. Some of the South Carolina employees will be transferred to Farmville. In addition to the plant improvements, a new Product Development Center will be established at Farmville.

Frederick said the changes are part of an effort "to streamline the division's output and improve overall productivity." He said the company has confidence in the future of the warp knit market.

Collins and Aikman's improvements at the Farmville plant are a commitment which is encouraging to the people of Pitt County. We are most pleased to have this plant expansion.

Case Takes A New Turn

A federal U.S. appeals court has reversed the murder conviction of Jeffrey MacDonald, former Army Green Beret physician accused of killing his wife and two daughters. The court ordered indictments against him dismissed.

The reversal was based on the long delay in disposition of the case, which the court found violated the constitutional right to speedy trial.

It would be difficult to argue the constitutional question raised by the court of appeals although an appeal of the ruling may be possible.

It is a case that caused mental anguish for legal authorities and the public in general. The questions surrounding this case will be debated for a long time.

THIS AFTERNOON

Study Court Need

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Noting that his office has been "virtually deluged" with complaints by prosecuting witnesses that they failed to get their day in court, Attorney General Rufus Edmisten is pushing for a change in notification procedures.

There is a need for "more efficient methods to notify parties and witnesses, especially prosecuting witnesses, in criminal matters of the fact that their court appearance is required on a certain date," Edmisten says.

He has talked with the North Carolina Courts Commission about this problem, and suggested action to correct the condition.

The problem is apparently widespread in North Carolina, and has existed for years. Both law enforcement officers and private citizens suffer from the system.

It had been hoped that the state's Speedy Trial Act would help, but implementation of that provision has been delayed, and during the meantime it has been demonstrated in numerous courtrooms that the deadlines in the Speedy Trial Act still leave considerable room for error and maneuvering.

Two Reasons

There are essentially two reasons for the foulups:

1. Scheduling of cases is changed abruptly for a variety of reasons, including conflicting appointments on the part of judges, prosecutors or defense attorneys; a slack time in court when the judge or prosecutor decides to fill the gap with another case; or a particular case needs to be disposed of so that other action pending against the defendant can be handled.

2. Defense attorneys shuffle cases around as they "shop" for a more lenient judge, take advantage of days off for law enforcement officers by calling cases in their absence, or merely seek delays to wear the case out and frustrate the prosecuting witnesses.

There have been numerous instances, Edmisten complained, in which defendants have gone free because of the absence of prosecuting witnesses when those witnesses received no notice, or inadequate notice, of scheduled trials.

BILL NOBLITT

A companion to this dilemma is the situation in which the prosecuting witness returns to the courtroom time and again to spend long hours awaiting trial of a case which is never called.

There must be, Edmisten feels, a more efficient and effective way to handle this situation which would not only increase the efficiency of the court, but "would favorably affect all who come into contact with our court system."

The attorney general also suggested Court Commission action in two other areas of concern: traffic cases, and court operating hours.

Decriminalization of most traffic offenses "would greatly expedite judicial proceedings" whether such cases were handled through administrative hearings and procedures outside the court, or in separate court-related procedures, he said.

Save Time

"In either event, judicial time expenditure would be minimized," Edmisten noted.

He also urged the commission to "consider the feasibility of creating a night court system" which would aid the court system in clearing its dockets in both criminal and civil matters.

"In many cases it would be more convenient for parties and witnesses to attend court sessions," he feels.

The Courts Commission was reactivated by Gov. Jim Hunt to continue the process of court reform in the state, which was begun with elimination of the local and magistrate's courts and creation of the uniform statewide system of district and superior courts.

State Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, is chairman of the study group which plans to make a full report on findings and recommendations to the 1981 General Assembly.

To the editor:

I was interested in your editorial about the state living within its means. I was also reminded of a recent editorial about Bev Lake, the Republican candidate for governor. Bev Lake had some specific proposals about what was happening to the large state surplus — collected illegally — and how it was going to be used to fund increased pay for teachers and other state employees. It was a political move — no provision made for permanent financing of the increased pay. Bev Lake had proposed that the public not be fooled in such manner, but you, in your editorial, said, "Lake's plan will not hold water."

North Carolina has long been known as the "Good Government State." In November I do not think the people of North Carolina are going to do anything about changing the leadership that would do such a thing to them, but like Gomer Pyle I would say, "Shame, shame, shame" on the leadership and the news media for taking advantage of the poor ignorant people of North Carolina. We trusted you to be good stewards of the treasury, but most of all we trusted you to maintain the principle of the "Good Government State" and you gave us politics as usual. A pox on you!

RELIGION AND REASON

Sir Isaac Newton was one of the greatest minds of modern history. He laid the foundation for the study of modern physics. Moreover, he was nearly as influential in the formation of modern mathematics and philosophy.

But one of the most notable things about Newton, from the modern point of view, was that he was profoundly religious. Sometimes we believe that it is impossible for a man to be a great scientist and a firm believing Christian. Also, we sometimes regard science as the product of good minds and theology as the product of mediocre minds possessed by well-intentioned men, but not first-class thinkers. This is, of course, untrue. The world has never had greater thinkers than St. Paul, Augustine, Thomas Aquinas, and John Calvin. During the 1500 years preceding the modern industrial revolution, the best minds of Europe and America were devoted to the pondering of religious truth.

Sound reason and sound religion are not contradictory but complementary. — Elmhna Douglass

LIBYAGATE?

By ART BUCHWALD

The 'Billygate' Affair

If the president is really serious in his campaign to protect Americans from invasion of privacy, he might start with automobile safety belts. These harnesses, which are attached to screaming buzzers on the dashboard, may save lives, but they're also wrecking marriages, driving people stark-raving mad, and causing untold havoc on the road.

Just the other day I was in Tucson, and the Sheltons offered to take me to dinner in their new station wagon. There were six of us in the car, three in the front seat and three in the back. Everyone was in a jovial mood.

Then Shelton tried to start the car. A red light, the size of a highway billboard, lit up and a buzzer that sounded like an air-raid siren went off.

Shelton yelled to his wife "Fasten your safety belt!" "It is fastened!" she screamed back over the din.

"Well, it isn't fastened right. Put the shoulder strap over your chest."

"It is over my chest," she said angrily. I was sitting between them in the middle seat.

"Maybe it's my belt!" I yelled. I unhooked and then rehooked the belt, but the buzzer wouldn't stop.

"Hurry up," someone in the back seat shouted, "or the whole car will self-destruct."

Shelton leaned over me, grabbed his wife's shoulder, harness and pulled it tightly around her.

The red light went off and the buzzing stopped.

ART BUCHWALD

"There," Shelton said, "that's better."

"I'm choking," Mrs. Shelton gasped. "I can't breathe."

"Don't do anything," Shelton cried, "or the buzzing will start again."

"I can only hold my breath for two minutes," Mrs. Shelton gagged.

I lifted the shoulder harness from her neck and the red light went on again and the scream of the buzzer filled the car.

"Everybody get out!" Shelton said. "Let's see if I can solve this thing."

We all got out of the car. Shelton studied the front seat.

"All right. My harness goes in this slot, your harness in this slot and her harness goes in this one. Now let's all get back in the car again, and I don't want to hear any buzzers."

We got back in and in five minutes managed to get the harnesses around us.

Shelton turned on the ignition and everything on the dashboard flashed red.

"You hold her harness," Shelton yelled to me, "and let her hold yours."

"Who's going to hold yours?" I shouted.

"I'll hold my own."

"How are you going to drive?" I asked him.

"Who cares, as long as I can stop the buzzing."

I was holding on to Mrs. Shelton's harness for dear life, and she had my seat belt in the crook of her elbow.

Shelton had one hand underneath his seat and was driving with the other.

For five minutes it was quiet in the car. Then Mrs. Shelton said, "I think the circulation in my arm has been cut off. There's no feeling in it."

"We've only got three miles to go," Shelton raged. "Hang on."

"Please let go of my harness," Mrs. Shelton begged me.

"If you do, I'll kill you," Shelton told me.

We made it to the restaurant just before Mrs. Shelton passed out.

It was a good dinner, but no one really cared. Everyone was thinking of the drive back to the hotel.

Last Words Remembered

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
(AP) — Life's last lines and death's coldy chiseled first ones have always intrigued me.

My fascination with such grave concerns probably dates back to Boy Scout camp, when around a campfire one moonless night our counselor chilled our very marrow with a ghostly tale of man encountering a stone cutter on a steaming August day in a weed-grown country cemetery.

He is shocked to see the workman is carving his name on a tombstone, and the date, of course, is that very day.

James Cagney's exit lines in his classic gangster movies — "Top of the world, Ma" — further whetted my appetite for eschatology, which is the study of final matters.

If all the world's a stage, as Shakespeare tells us, people who leave it with a memorable curtain speech, like Marc Antony, steal life's show away from death at the climactic moment. Antony's farewell lines to Cleopatra are more moving than anything in his funeral oration for the stabbed Caesar:

"I am dying, Egypt, dying; only I here importune death awhile, until of many thousand kisses the poor last I lay upon thy lips."

O'Henry's real life, or what was left of it, last words are as haunting as any of the fictional passages in his short stories: "Turn up the lights; I don't want to go home in the dark."

Dying, Henry James is reported to have said, "So there it is at last — the distinguished thing." If he didn't, a ghost writer was writing some fine ghostly stuff for him.

Captured while leading the 7th Crusade, St. Louis, king of France, died in Tunis murmuring his goal, "Jerusalem, Jerusalem."

Shot by his own men by mistake at Chancellorsville, Stonewall Jackson uttered a memorable last line for Ernest Hemingway to rip off later as a book title:

"Let us cross the river and rest in the shade of the trees."

Some authorities end his death sentence at the word "shade," leaving out the trees, but there are always kill-joy rewrite men even in the realm of deathly prose.

Strangely, Gen. George Meade, who commanded the Union forces at Gettysburg, uttered almost similar words at his death, as if perceiving Paradise: "I am crossing a beautiful wide river, and the opposite shore is coming nearer and nearer."

Journalist Henry Stanley, famous for his African conversation opener, "Dr. Livingston, I presume," ended life's last adventure with: "How strange! So that is time."

Those who leave this vale of tears laughing most win my admiration.

Convinced at last that his end was near, Spanish playwright Lope de Vegas garnered enough courage to get off the line he was dying all his life to utter: "All right, I'll say it: Dante makes me sick."

Dominique Bonhours, a famous French grammarian, died, as he lived, by the rules: "I am about to die — I am going to die; either expression is correct."

Oscar Wilde, as expected, is credited with a delightful mot de morte: "I am dying as I have lived; beyond my means."

Benjamin Franklin chose his own epitaph 60 years before his death:

"The body of Benjamin Franklin, Printer, like the cover of an old book, its contents torn out and stript of its lettering and gilding, lies here, food for worms. But the work shall not be lost, for it will as he believed appear once more in a new and more elegant edition, revised and corrected by the author."

Sentenced to be hanged by the British, Robert Emmet had the last word in Irish history by spurning an epitaph:

"Let there be no inscription upon my tomb. Let no man write my epitaph. No man can write my epitaph. I am here ready to die. I am not allowed to vindicate my character; and when I am prevented from vindicating myself, let no man dare calumniate me. Let my character and motives repose in obscurity and peace, till other times and other men can do them justice."

Tombstone, Arizona, fittingly is purported to possess a gem of an epitaph on the tombstone of a slain Wells Fargo agent:

Here lies
Lester Moore
Four slugs
From a .44
Noles
No More.

In the same vein, William Makepeace Thackeray quotes an epitaph to Frederick, Prince of Wales, father of King George III:

Here lies Fred,
Who was alive and is dead.
Had it been his father,
I had much rather.
Had it been his brother,
Still better than another.
Had it been his sister,
No one would have missed her.

Had it been the whole generation,
Still better for the nation.
But since 'tis only Fred,
Who was alive, and is dead
There's no more to be said."

The epitaph I remember best is written over the charnel house at St. Katherine's monastery on the slopes of Mount Sinai, where hundreds of skulls and skeletons of monks and abbots from bygone centuries are displayed on shelves for the living to view and contemplate.

The Mood Is One Of Failure

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — There is no shortage of research and development funds, nor of ideas, inventions and ingenuity in the United States, said E.E. David Jr., president of Exxon Research and Engineering Corp.

"Overall, industrial research and development in the United States is thriving," said David. "There is a spirit of vitality."

Why, then, has the U.S. growth rate shrunk? Why can other nations, West Germany, Japan and, in isolated instances, even less developed nations, so effectively challenge U.S. industrial leadership?

David, former presidential science adviser and past president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, laid it on the line recently in a talk to engineers at the University of California.

While recognizing the truth of some of the usual explanations, and agreeing that they contribute to the problem, he dismissed them as the fundamental cause.

Inadequate spending for research and development is often the first to be mentioned.

Nonsense, said David. Real spending for industrial research and development turned up in 1972 and since then has been rising at 5 percent a year in deflated dollars.

"In 1979 industry spent some $24 billion of its own funds on R&D. Venture capital was readily available in the late-1970s, and new small enterprises have been playing their accustomed innovative role."

Inflation, the low savings rate and, compared with other nations, the low level of capital investment, are frequently cited. David didn't disagree. But he said we must look for an even more basic reason.

Still withholding from his audience what he considered this reason to be, David went on to list what he called two other symptoms for the slow rate of economic growth in the United States.

He described rather than labeled the first of these two.

"Hewlett-Packard Co. tested 3,000 '16-K random-access-memories' manufactured by three U.S. and three Japanese firms. The failure rate of the best Japanese product was one-sixth that of the best U.S. product, while the failure rate of the worst Japanese product was one-twenty-seventh that of the worst U.S. product."

Of the second, he simply said: "The U.S. has four times as many lawyers per capita as West Germany, and 20 times as many as Japan."

Also mentioned as a reason for the poor U.S. economic growth rate is a stagnation in the growth of scientific manpower. While David said the pool is again growing, he also agreed we have lost plenty of ground.

"Between the years 1968 to 1978 the relative fraction of scientists and engineers found in the U.S. labor force declined by 13 percent," he said. "Meanwhile, the Soviet Union, West Germany and Japan were boosting their technical manpower by 55 percent or more."

In an age when countries must live by their wits and brainpower, and not through any corner on technology or natural resources, all these deficiencies can be translated into economic problems, he suggested.

Still he hadn't mentioned what he considered the most fundamental flaw of all.

"You have heard recitations of this sort before," he continued, "and I've not gone through the entire litany. For example, I haven't mentioned the vital areas of productivity and government regulation."

But beyond all these symptoms, he said, there is something more fundamental. It is, he said, "a shift toward a national pessimism which dwells on failure and ignores success."

This national mood, he said, "has afflicted nearly every social sector," including ordinary citizens, scientists, engineers and corporate managers, to name a few.

"Corporate managers are often as shy of healthy risk-taking as government bureaucrats," he said, and Americans in general feel life has become riskier, despite the contrary evidence of mortality tables.

"A reversal of our pessimistic, suspicious and mistrusting national mood is a key to resolving our other problems," he concluded.

"We may hope that Americans will develop a finer understanding of the need for trade-offs between the imperatives of economic growth and desires for a completely risk-free society."

Four Wrecks Investigated By Police

An estimated $7,150 property damage resulted from a series of four traffic accidents investigated by Greenville police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 6:49 p.m. collision on Beaumont Drive, involving a truck operated by Floyd Preston Harris of 1205 Greenville Blvd., and parked cars owned by Louise Cox Hudson and Mary Louise Hudson, both of 1613 Beaumont Dr.

Investigators, who said the Harris truck collided with one of the cars, forcing the vehicle into the second auto, estimated damage at $2,200 to the truck, $3,500 to the Louise Cox Hudson car, $500 to the Mary Louise Hudson vehicle, and $100 to shrubs in the Hudson yard.

Harris was charged with careless and reckless driving in connection with the mishap.

An estimated $500 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in an 11:23 p.m. collision at the intersection of Cotanche and Fourth Streets, according to police, who identified the drivers involved as Steven Fletcher Eddings of Route 2, Greenville, and Jerry Lorenza Williams of 300 Paige Dr.

Investigators charged Eddings with driving under the influence, and charged Williams with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

Alander Barnhill of 1506 Myrtle Ave. was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 5:51 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Farmville Boulevard.

Police, who identified the driver of the second car involved as Samuel Adam Langley of Bethel, estimated damage at $300 to the Langley car and $250 to the Barnhill vehicle.

Officers charged Nicholas George Simonowich of 1303B East First St. with improper backing after his car collided with a parked vehicle owned by Janet Charlene Robinson of Riverview Estates, about 8:55 p.m. on First Street, 50 feet East of the Eastern Street intersection.

Police said no damage resulted to the Simonowich car while damage to the Robinson vehicle was set at $300.

CWP Widows Arrested Over Disruption Of Council Meet

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The widows of two men slain during a confrontation between communist demonstrators and a Klan-Nazi motorcade last November were arrested Thursday after several Communist Workers Party members interrupted a meeting of the Greensboro City Council.

Signe Waller and Dale Sampson were arrested after police were summoned to the council chamber. They were held in lieu of $500 bond each on charges of creating a disruption in a public building.

They were among a half-dozen CWP members who burst into the chamber soon after the council session had begun, shouting "You've got blood on your hands" at Mayor Jim Melvin and other council members.

Spokesmen for the demonstrators say they were protesting what they called a cover-up of facts about the Nov. 3 killings of five CWP members at an anti-Ku Klux Klan rally and the choice of an all-white jury for the trial of six Klansmen and Nazis charged in the shootings.

Members of the CWP also staged demonstrations in several cities across the country last month protesting alleged government involvement in the Nov. 3 deaths.

Thursday's disturbance began when CWP leader

Nelson Johnson entered the council chamber and began handing out press releases to reporters and others present, drawing comments from city officials but not impeding the meeting.

At one point, as he roamed around in the speaker's area at the front of the chamber, Melvin asked Johnson to be seated. Johnson shouted back: "Shut up, Melvin, you can't tell me to sit down."

Moments later, two other CWP members, Kurt Krumpnerman and Rowena Cannon, entered the room, carrying a large red banner that read "Avenge The CWP 5."

At that point, City Manager Tom Osborne said he pressed an emergency button on the council desk that signaled officers. Another police officer who had followed the CWP members into city hall also went for help.

Moments later, before the other officers arrived, the two women entered the council chamber and went toward the front where the council sits. "Melvin, I want to talk to you about the blood that's on your hands," Mrs. Sampson screamed.

Other CWP members shouted from the back of the room.

Several uniformed policemen entered the council chamber approximately two minutes after Osborne summoned help. Over the shouting of the demonstrators, Melvin asked them to clear the room.

When one officer took Mrs. Waller's arm, she shouted, "You're breaking my arm," and struck at him with a sheaf of papers she was carrying, prompting another officer to hold her other arm.

Testimony in the Klan-Nazi trial begins Monday. The CWP members said Thursday they intend to have a demonstration in front of the courthouse and city hall at noon Monday. Superior Court Judge James Long, who is presiding at the trial, has issued an order forbidding demonstrations that could disrupt the trial.

Overrules Plaintiff Of Discrimination

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal judge, ruling on a suit by an unidentified 19-year-old man, has refused to halt the nationwide draft registration program.

U.S. District Judge John F. Grady on Thursday rejected arguments that the program discriminates against 19- and 20-year-olds.

The ruling came as a result of a suit filed by attorney Nicholas Kitsos on behalf of the unnamed young man. The suit charged that 19- and 20-year-olds were the victims of discrimination because there was no registration of others in the 18- to 26-year age group eligible for the draft under the Selective Service Act. "Registration is not the same as induction," Grady said in denying a request for a restraining order. "It is a long way from induction... I do not see that enrolling on a registration list (constitutes) irreparable harm."

The two-week nationwide registration, which ends Saturday, applies to an estimated 4 million men born in 1960 and 1961, which includes some people who are now 18.

Failure to register is a felony and carries maximum penalties of up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Film, TV Musicians Join Actors In Strike

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Film and TV musicians went on strike today, compounding the woes of producers who lost the services of 60,000 striking actors 11 days ago.

Negotiations reached a "total impasse" and broke down Thursday night. Two hours later, at midnight, the strike officially began, said officials of the American Federation of Musicians. There were no announced plans by the musicians regarding the use of picket lines.

The work stoppage by the 5,000 musicians could halt all scoring sessions at most major studios and networks. It also could cut down the supply of new TV programs since some shows shot before the actors' strike began July 21 have not yet been scored and could not be broadcast without music.

With the halt of filming and taping, and the prospect of a fall without new TV shows, network officials are already scrambling for contingency programming.

The "total impasse" reached Thursday night, according to AFM president Victor Fuentelba, involved the musicians' insistence on receiving compensation for reruns of TV programs and films.

"We've always felt this was an inequitable situation," he said, citing residual payments to actors, directors and writers for prime-time network TV shows that are repeated.

However, a management negotiator, who requested anonymity, said there was a significant difference between paying residuals to a few actors and doing the same for an orchestra with 50 members.

In contrast to the musicians' issues, the dispute between the actors and producers revolves around actors' demands for contract provisions to cover compensation for home video cassette sales.

There were no comprehensive figures available, but union and studio officials have said the actors' strike has caused widespread layoffs of non-acting studio personnel. And agents, who in most cases are paid a percentage of an actors' income from bookings, are also losing money, agent association president Marvin Faris said.

The next negotiating session between the actors and the producers has been scheduled for Monday by a federal mediator. No talks were set between the musicians and the producers, said Fuentelba.

Apparent Coup Said Blocked

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Afghan army forces apparently planning a coup against the Kremlin-backed regime of President Babrak Karmal were foiled by Soviet troops after word of the plan leaked to the Soviets, according to reports from Kabul.

The reports, which could not be independently confirmed, were quoted Thursday by a diplomatic source who declined to be identified by name.

He said the plot was said to have been planned by Afghan forces stationed at the Pul-i-Charki army base near Kabul, the Afghan capital. After the Soviets heard of the plan, they surrounded the base on July 18, according to the reports.

The source said he had no information on how many Afghan troops were involved nor of any fighting or casualties.

An Afghan traveler who recently arrived here from Kandahar in southern Afghanistan said the Kandahar Afghan army garrison and air units had been preparing to attack government strongholds in Kabul.

But the plan was discovered and heavy fighting broke out in the south between mutinous Afghan troops and others loyal to the regime and its Soviet allies.

According to Western accounts, the Afghan army has been hit by thousands of defections by disenchanted troops and its force has shrunk from 85,000 two years ago to 35,000 at present.

Meanwhile at the United Nations in New York, U.S. delegate Jerome Kahan said Thursday while addressing the U.N. Special Committee on the Indian Ocean that the Soviets had more than 100,000 troops in Afghanistan. That figure was 15,000 higher than recent estimates from U.S. officials in Washington.

The Soviets entered the neighboring Central Asian country last December, ousted the regime of Hafizullah Amin, who was killed in the turmoil, and installed Karmal.

Say Insanity Plea Planned For Garwood

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C.
(AP) — With defense attorneys continuing to press for dismissal of charges in pre-trial motions, the prosecutor in the court-martial of Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood has revealed that Garwood plans to plead insanity as a defense against charges of desertion and collaboration with the enemy in Vietnam.

Capt. Werner Hellmer said Thursday that defense attorneys had previously told him the insanity defense would be used and he asked defense attorneys for a list of witnesses they planned to call in connection with that defense.

Pre-trial proceedings were scheduled to continue today with more arguments and perhaps a decision on a defense request for witnesses to bolster a defense motion that declared President Richard M. Nixon granted amnesty to all POWs.

Little was said about the insanity defense except for Hellmer's request for a witness list and the defense response that it would comply.

But, jury selection in the trial appeared to be nearing with only a few major motions left to be decided in the nearly nine-month-old pre-trial session.

Garwood's lawyers argued Thursday that they should be able to present testimony — including statements from Nixon — to show that a policy of amnesty prevented prosecution for misconduct of POWs who came back from Vietnam.

The defense said it needed that testimony because it could find no proof that a written proclamation of amnesty existed, but the testimony may show there was one or may lead to proof of an amnesty policy.

John Lowe, Garwood's chief defense attorney, said he had contacted Nixon's lawyer and had been told the former president was willing to cooperate but only after reviewing pertinent parts of his presidential papers to see if indeed a policy existed.

Lowe asked for a subpoena for a search of Nixon's papers in the National Archives in Washington to aid the former president in refreshing his memory.

"Until we see those documents in the Nixon collection, we can't say whether there is a written proclamation," Lowe said.

Col. R. E. Switzer, the trial judge, delayed ruling on that request as well as on the other motions.

Hellmer fought the defense contention that amnesty was granted to former POWs, saying, "there was no amnesty."

"We don't know that until we find out," Lowe responded, repeating his request for witnesses.

Switzer must approve the request for witnesses to be heard in the pre-trial proceedings, and he handed the defense a setback Thursday by refusing to hear from one witness.

The defense had wanted testimony from a former Air Force Colonel, who was a POW and who tried unsuccessfully to prosecute other POWs for misconduct. That man, defense lawyers said, was told by Nixon and others that there would be no prosecutions because officials did not think the nation had anything to gain by lengthy court proceedings.

Switzer denied the request for the witness, saying his testimony would amount only to heresy.

Defense lawyers emphasized that Garwood, who returned in 1979, nearly six years after the mass release of POWs, is the only former prisoner to stand trial. But, prosecutors have argued that if there was amnesty for the mass release in 1973, it may not apply to Garwood.

Show Tent-Revival Enthusiasm

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — It's
the wildest, loudest, friskiest portrayal ever of the passion story — Jesus, his execution and resurrection — but somehow it mostly comes off as rambunctiously reverent.
"He rules!" the chorus blasts it out. "Didn't I tell you? There'll never be a man like him!... When the power comes... the Jesus power!"

And the audience is swept up into the compulsive sound and dancing fervor, clapping, whistling shrilly,
stomping, standing and swaying and then shouting out its affirmation:
"Yeah! Yeah!"

That's after the robust resurrection scene in the current Broadway hit, "Your Arms Too Short to Box with God," a flashy, bouncing musical rendition of the Jesus story in song and dance.

It begins on a gentle note, a choir softly singing the Beatitudes, "Blessed are the meek... the merciful... the poor... the persecuted... the peacemakers..." But it quickly turns tempestuous as the preacher exhorts the audience:

"Hey Lord! We're gonna have a good time!" He gets the audience clapping cadence and rooting for it.
"Don't be afraid to raise your voice. The Lord said make a joyful noise... Yeah, Lord, we're gonna have a good time. Say yeah!"
"YEAH!"

That's the sort of tent-revival enthusiasm built up repeatedly between audience and performers, a kind of high-powered reflection of the black-church style, done by a black cast.

It's "earthy, joyous, gutsy Gospel," says Vinnie Carroll, artistic director of the Urban Arts Corps and author-director of the show, originally commissioned by the Italian government and first performed at the Spoleto Festival.

It opened on Broadway in May after a year-long tour of 66 U.S. cities to wide critical acclaim.

"It's the theater that stimu-lates, that pushes, pulls and sometimes almost pummels its audience into a catharsis of emotion," says Ms. Carroll, award-winning actress and writer-director whose works often contain strong religious elements.

One of the unusual features of the current show is the portrayal of Jesus by a black ballet dancer, Elijah Gill from Henderson, N.C., who with all his leaps and spins conveys immense dignity and power.

He never speaks or sings a word, but masterfully displays the character through his dancing.

"There's a stranger in town," the talk goes. "He looks like no one you've ever seen before... He's called a troublemaker because he disturbs the status quo."

Back home in Nazareth, his mother Mary, does a troubled dance while big-voiced Jennifer-Yvette Holliday, sings, "Something is wrong in Jerusalem... I can't dismiss that nagging feeling... Be careful, darling, who you walk with... those who betray your trust."

She goes there, and the tumultuous scenes unfold in that special romping, singing, zestful fashion, the arrest, the flogging the trial and condemnation, with the betrayer Judas doing a tormented, suicidal dance after the priests laugh off his efforts to return the bribe.

"It's a too late Judas," they sing. "What's done is done."

One interlude, the mockery of Jesus on the cross (Gill's arms outstretched at the lighted top of a dark mound) gets a little raucous, drawing some spectators into seemingly identifying, if strained, laughter with the mockers.

"Come on down!" they hoot and sing. "Some Son of God... turning water into booze... Why don't you tell your pappy, huh?... Don't you trust your old man?
Where's your big daddy?"

But then the whole theater
seems to shake with kettle-
drum thunder, booming
brass, bells, a swishing
sound like wind, and the mockers cringe. "God, can't you take a joke?" they quaver.

The resurrection scene comes with frenzied dancing and joyous singing. "Can't no grave hold my body down!"
They put a gold-embroidered royal robe on the shoulders of the loincloth-clad Jesus.

"I love you Jesus," they sing. The second-act epilogue beats and whirrs with rousing salutes to Gospel greats of the past, a panoramic crescendo building up to a rollicking finale, "The Saints Come Marching In!"

But then the whole theater
seems to shake with kettle-
drum thunder, booming
brass, bells, a swishing
sound like wind, and the

Immigration Officials Take Custody Of Iranians

WASHINGTON (AP) — Immigration agents, seeking to start deportation procedures, have begun taking custody of almost 200 Iranian demonstrators arrested here last weekend.

The Iranians, mostly supporters of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, have been in a District of Columbia jail since last Sunday when they were arrested on disorderly conduct charges in a clash with police and anti-Khomeini protesters.

Deibert Jackson, head of the D.C. Department of Corrections, Thursday night released the first group of prisoners, the 20 women who were arrested. Jackson said he would begin releasing the 171 Iranian men at the jail today.

Immigration officials, who obtained legal detainers against the demonstrators

Monday, set up housing facilities at the local field office here to keep them in custody during processing.

Legal proceedings against the Iranians have been complicated because they have refused to give their names.

Once in federal custody, however, the Iranians are to be photographed, fingerprinted, and questioned. The results will then be matched with Immigration and Naturalization Service records to ascertain their identities, said an INS spokesman who declined to identified.

Protesters who voluntarily give their names and have valid visas will be released, officials said. Those who don't will be brought before an INS judge to show cause why he or she should not be deported, according to Justice Department spokesman John Russell.

Agency officials have said that many of the Iranians, most of whom claim to be members of the Moslem Students Association, were probably already violating their student visas and were refusing to identify themselves for fear of deportation.

The schools they were attending would be contacted to see if they were still students, Russell said.

But representatives for the protesters said they were not cooperating because they were protesting allegedly poor treatment by police and jail guards.

The Iranian prisoners continued a protest fast Thursday, taking only water and sugar. About 50 Iranians also continued a fast in front of the White House, in support of their jailed countrymen.

Under hazy sunshine, temperatures climbed well into the 90s Thursday. Fayetteville had a reading of 99, followed by Wilmington at 97. Asheville recorded another record with a 91 for the second day in a row.

Overnight lows were mostly in the 70s, except for the 60s in the mountains.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices turned down against to day as the government reported only a small increase in the unemployment rate in July and said the number of Americans with jobs rose during the month.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues fell 2.73 to 932.59 in the first two hours of trading, as declines outnumbered advances by a 7-6 margin among New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Labor Department reported the unemployment rate rose to 7.8 percent in July, up from 7.7 percent in June but unchanged from

May. But the number of persons with jobs rose for the first time in five months.

The market, where prices set a three-year high earlier in the week, has been jittery. A late rally Thursday wiped out major losses, but prices began drop-ping shortly about 30 minutes after the opening today.

Oil stocks were weak again. Mobil was down 1 to 73¼. Texaco lost ¼ to 36 and Standard of California dropped 1 to 73½. El Paso Co. rose ¼ to 21½. It said insurers offered a $300 million settlement regarding damage to three liquefied natural gas vessels under construction.

General Motors rose ½ to 52½. It suspended merit raises for white-collar employees.

On the American Stock Exchange, Resorts International Class A stock dipped 1½ to 34½ after the company reported lower earnings for the second quarter.

Big Board volume totaled 23.06 million shares in the first two hours, compared to 24.96 million at the same point Thurs. day. The NYSE's composite in-dex fell .26 to 69.38.

At the Amex, the market value index was down .88 at 313.61.

Trucking Firm To Close Down

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Citing continuing financial difficulties, Johnson Motor Lines Inc. said Thursday it will shut down its operations permanently next week.

The company, which lost $1.5 million last year, is a common freight carrier making pickups and deliveries of all types of freight. It employs 2,300 workers in 19 states ranging from Boston to Dallas.

Johnson's general offices are in Charlotte, although the company was sold last year for $25 million to Republic Industries Inc. of Kansas City.

H.E. Henderson, chief operating officer for Johnson, said the company would stop picking up freight next Friday. He said it would take six to eight weeks to complete all operations.

The company, in a prepared statement, said the closing was due to "financial difficulties attributed to various prevailing circumstances, a deep decline in the economy, high interest rates and seriously imbalanced lanes of traffic."

Charles Sims, the company's vice president for administrative services, said Johnson employees were notified Thursday although some drivers were still on the road and could not be reached.

CHOIR ORGANIZED

Elder Tyrone Turnage will organize the Tyrone Turnage Interdenominational Crusaders Choir Saturday at 5 p.m. at Little Creek F.W.B. Church. Persons between the ages of 14 and 40 are invited join this group. Older persons will be accepted.

SUNDAY SERVICE

The Rev. Martha Strong of Haddock's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church will preach at the St. John Baptist Church, Falkland Sunday night at 8 p.m. The pastor, the Rev. Anton Wesley, invites the public to attend.

Johnson has been in business since 1945, and has always been headquartered in Charlotte.

Johnson Motor Lines slipped from 51st largest to the 60th largest trucking company in the nation last year, according to the American Trucking Association.

Republic International, a privately held organization, also owns Riss International truck lines but Sims said that company was not involved in the closing of the Johnson company.

Sims said a decision had not been made on what to do with Johnson's equipment and facilities at approximately 48 office locations.

Services Set

Homecoming-Quarterly meeting services will be held at Warren Chapel F.W.B. Church beginning Saturday at 8 p.m. with Holy Communion services conducted by Eldress Martha Tyson and the youth department of the church.

Ovett-Coe Duel At Center Stage Today

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Since their last meeting, Steve Ovett has revealed his humanity, Sebastian Coe has admitted his stupidity and the two of them have declared their everlasting non-animosity.

Today, it didn't matter what they thought of each other. All that counted was who won a mere footrace over 1,500 meters.

The sequel of Ovett-Coe has taken center stage on the final day of track and field. It was only one of 10 finals, including the marathon, but it certainly created the most interest.

Besides these two brilliant British runners, the flap over the "Red Coats" and possible Russian "red faces" has drawn a great deal of attention at the track. Although the head of the international track federation said Thursday that he had caught a Soviet pole vaulter cheating, he said his organization was satisfied with the all-Soviet judging at the Olympic track competition.

Adriaan Paulen, president of the International Amateur Athletic Federation, said the alleged judging irregularities of the Soviet officials, which prompted the IAAF track officials coming down to the field to oversee events, were just "ugly rumors."

Paulen wanted to keep the IAAF officials off the field, rather than embarrass the Soviets, but was outvoted by his executive council 14-1 Wednesday.

There have been no incidents of judging improprieties since then, but Paulen saw Soviet pole vaulter Sergei Kulibaba providing illegal assistance to a teammate and was removed from the field. Kulibaba had been making hand signals about the wind conditions.

Boxing had the day off today in preparation for Saturday's 11 finals, which will have eight Cubans and seven Soviets going for gold medals. The headliner, as he's been for the past two Olympics, will be Teofilo Stevenson. On Thursday, the Cuban heavyweight had to go three full rounds for the first time in his Olympic career stretching over 10 fights. His opponent in the final will be Pyotr Zayev of the Soviet Union.

The confrontation between the White House and the International Olympic Committee seems to have been averted with the IOC's decision to abandon normal protocol, bow to President Carter's wishes and not fly the American flag at Sunday's closing ceremony.

Instead, the flag of the city of Los Angeles, host of the next Summer Games, will be flown as the symbolic linking of one Olympics to the next.

Interestingly, it was the Soviets who pushed for some sort of compromise on the issue, preferring to de-escalate tensions over the issue of Afghanistan. The IOC reluctantly gave in.

"We didn't make the decision without a good deal of soul searching," said Lord Killanin, who ends his presidency of the IOC with Sunday's closing ceremony. "The people here have been so good at running the Games that we didn't want to create any problems for them."

"It is better to end the Games on a happy note than a sour one."

If the Games ended today, the dominating Soviets would still have medals records that seem invincible. The assumption is that in future Olympics the United States will be represented, making it much harder for any one nation to better the Soviet totals thus far of 69 golds and 163 medals. The previous marks were 50 golds, set by the Soviets in Munich in 1972, and 125 medals, established by the Soviets in Montreal in 1976.

One medal the Soviets weren't expected to win was the gold in the 1,500 meters, which, according to the form, was reserved for Coe or Ovett, the two Britons who share the world record of 3:32.1

They also share a relatively peaceful co-existence, which Ovett and Coe recently revealed in separate television interviews.

Ovett won the first encounter in the 800 meters last Saturday, which was only the third time they have raced each other. But Ovett intimated that his victory might take a slight edge off the 1,500.

He said motivating yourself "after you win the gold is very difficult. And others want to prove they're better than you are."

It was during this interview with ITV, Britain's independent TV network, that Ovett revealed he wasn't the ogre the media had depicted. He came across as a warm, intelligent man who is a devoted son and a sentimentalist at heart.

After winning Thursday's semifinal heat in a casual 3:43.1 for his 28th consecutive victory, Ovett drew three letters in the air as a message to his girlfriend back home in England, 18-year-old art student Rachel Waller. The letters were I-L-Y for "I love you."

Ovett claims the reason he doesn't get along with the media is because he surrounds himself with a self-protective shield, which others misconstrue as arrogance. "I don't want to become public property. I'm a very shy person."

But he may have the perfect temperament on the track, just mean enough to have an edge when the running gets rugged, or as he puts it "middle distance running is a contact sport."

"I thrive on pressure, like a coiled spring," Ovett said. "But I'm not some kind of rebel without a cause. I'm no James Dean. I'm not really aggressive at all. All my aggression goes out on the track."

Coe has choirboy looks and a placid nature. He was interviewed by the British Broadcasting Corp. Monday night and publicly kicked himself for running a stupid race.

"I suppose I must have compounded more cardinal sins in middle distance running in 1 1/2 minutes than I've done in a lifetime. What a race to choose," he said, referring to his move that came too late. "I got into a silly mess 150 meters from home."

Coe, the world record holder in the 800, managed to catch the rest of the field for second place, but at the end he wasn't gaining ground on Ovett. "There's no joy in that silver medal," said Peter Coe, Sebastian's father and trainer.

Ovett has now beaten Coe to the tape in all three meetings. And the 800 was supposed to be Coe's best distance.

Racing is very much psychological, and Ovett looked the picture of confidence Thursday. Just as he was making his big kick past the leaders on the last turn, Ovett smiled and waved to a group of Britishers in the crowd.

After accelerating in the far turn and racing away for a victory in 3:39.4, Coe was equally playful. While unwinding, he saw the camera on him, and he went into a boxer's pose, throwing several combinations into the air.

Triumphant Winner
Arms raised, Teofilo Stevenson of Cuba is presented to the public as unanimous winner of his heavyweight semifinal bout against Istvan Levai of Hungary, Thursday.

For the third consecutive time, the gold medal winner of 1972 and 1976 has reached the finals of the Olympic boxing event. (AP Laserphoto)

McRae Happy Over 'Late' Hit

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer
You can't take anything away from Hal McRae.

The official scorer at Kansas City's 13-3 trouncing of the Boston Red Sox Thursday night tried to do just that — and vilified a number of Royals, including Manager Jim Frey.

"I've been struggling all year and now that I'm getting some hits it seems like I have to worry about the official scorer," said McRae, who has been known in the past to complain at times when things didn't go his way.

Against the Red Sox, McRae smacked a sixth-inning drive into right-center field. It would have been a routine catch for Dwight Evans, coming over from right. But Fred Lynn, the center fielder, arrived at the last instant and tried a leaping catch over his teammate. The ball bounced off Lynn's glove and McRae circled the bases, crossing the plate behind two teammates.

The official scorer, Alan Hoskins, sports editor of the Kansas City Kansas, gave Lynn an error on the play. "I thought Lynn interfered," he explained after the game.

Then Frey stepped in. "This is 31 years of baseball experience talking," he told Hoskins pointedly, "and any time two outfielders collide like that, it's a hit."

And then it was no longer an error. Then it was a three-run, inside-the-park homer for McRae.

In three other American League games, Texas trimmed Baltimore 7-4, New York beat Milwaukee 7-6 in 11 innings and Detroit demolished California 15-6. In the lone National League game, San Francisco beat St. Louis 6-4.

"This scoring is the weakest I've ever seen," the outwardly calm McRae said after the runaway gave Kansas City a whopping 12-game lead over Oakland in the AL West. And Willie Wilson, who rapped out four hits and scored four runs for the Royals, added: "You can't be happy about having a good night when you have to argue with your official scorekeeper. I'm glad we're going on the road."

Dennis Eckersley and three Boston Red Sox were raked for 17 hits by the Royals, who built a 4-0 lead after four innings and added five runs in the controversial sixth. The beneficiary of all of that was Dennis Leonard, who gave up six hits in eight innings. Jeff Twitty gave up two Red Sox runs in the ninth, one on Jim Rice's homer.

Rangers 7, Orioles 4
Baltimore's Steve Stone, it seems, isn't quite in a class with Walter Johnson, Lefty Grove, Schoolboy Rowe and Smokey Joe Wood. They share the American League record of 16 consecutive victories. Stone's run ended at 14, thanks in part to Texas' four-run first inning.

"There was never any pressure. I didn't think about it that much," Stone, the winningest pitcher in the league at 16-4, said of the streak. "The streak is over now, but I still haven't won my 17th game."

Mickey Rivers, Al Oliver and

Jim Sundberg collected three hits apiece, and Buddy Bell had a two-run double in the Rangers' big first inning. Ferguson Jenkins scattered eight hits before getting last-out relief from Danny Darwin following Ken Singleton's two-run single in the ninth.

Yankees 7, Brewers 6
Milwaukee catcher Charlie Moore, thinking "triple play," forgot to tag Bobby Murcer as he crossed the plate on Eric Soderholm's 11th-inning bases-loaded grounder, giving the Yankees their victory.

Murcer and Bob Watson singled, then Reggie Jackson, who had hit a three-run homer in the ninth to tie it, was safe when shortstop Robin Yount bobbled his grounder. Soderholm then grounded to Jim Gantner, who stepped on third to force Watson and fired home. But Moore failed to tag Murcer.

"I messed up. I saw him step on third base and all, and all I was thinking about was triple play. But I just messed up. That's all I can say," said Moore.

"Somebody might have hollered at him to make the tag, but there is just no way he could have heard anybody in a game like that with more than 40,000 people screaming," said winning reliever Rich Gossage.

Tigers 15, Angels 6
Lou Whitaker, with a double and a sacrifice fly, drove in four runs and Steve Kemp knocked in three with a homer and a triple as the Tigers snapped a four-game losing streak by battering California.

The game was over by the end of the first inning, when Detroit scored seven runs. Richie Hebner had a two-run single and Whitaker a three-run double in the burst.

Giants 6, Cardinals 4
Jack Clark's single and Darrell Evans' double preceded Rennie Stennett's double down the left field line that broke a 3-3 tie and propelled the Giants past St. Louis.

Larry Herndon had a three-run homer for San Francisco in the first inning and an RBI single in the eighth.

All-Star Action

West quarterback Jeff Williams of South Point eludes a tackle from East linebacker Willie Harris of Wilson Hunt during first quarter action in the annual East-West All-Star game in Greensboro last night. Williams passed for two touchdowns as the West took a 39-19 win over the East team, which was coached by Rose High's Dave Bumgarner. (AP Laserphoto)

West Quarterback Guides Team To 31-19 Win In All-Star Game

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — South Point's Jeff Williams threw for two touchdowns and High Point Central's Billy Wilson went 60 yards with an intercepted pass for another score Thursday night as the West beat the East 31-19 in North Carolina's 32nd high school all-star football game.

The West's offensive diversity, centering around Williams' passing, proved the difference. The West had 106 yards in the air and 147 on the ground, while all but 10 of the East's 259 yards came on running plays.

Williams, who was named the game's outstanding player, hit Greensboro Page's Lee Rouson with a 28-yard scoring pass in the second quarter and then put the game away with a nine-yard scoring toss to Tuscola's Johnny Aldridge in the fourth quarter.

Brevard's Jack Cole, on his only passing attempt of the night, hit Perry Oates for a 46-yard play and another West touchdown. The West also got three points on a 37-yard field goal by Hibriten's Jimmy Bently.

Wilson's interception came on a fourth-and-one play. East Coach Dave Bumgarner of Greenville Rose thought the previous play had gained a first down and went for the pass, realizing his mistake too late to change it.

The East did score on the next series, with Farmville Central fullback Donald Reid, an East Carolina recruit, scoring from 11 yards out.

Another East touchdown came on a 72-yard drive that ended with Richmond County's Chuck Bishop, also headed for ECU, going over from the one. That score was set up by a 42-run by Louis Craft, who came back moments later with a 33-yard dash and the East's final touchdown.

The first of August has arrived, and with it, football season is in the air.

While two of our local baseball teams are currently winding up their season, it will not be long before the crack of shoulder pads is heard throughout the state, as high school and collegiate gridders begin preparation for the coming season.

First off, we would like to offer our congratulations to the 16-year-old Senior Babe Ruth League team from Pitt County, which begins competition tonight in Butler, Ala., in the Southeastern Regionals. They are seeking a berth in the national tournament, to be held later this month.

Then, too, we offer our best wishes to the Greenville Little League team which will travel to Asheville next week to participate in the State Tournament. The winner there goes on to the Southern regional, to be held in St. Petersburg, Fla., a little later in the month.

The success of these teams once again shows the strength of the baseball programs in the area.

The East did fairly well in the All-Star games which concluded last night in Greensboro. The two Eastern basketball teams both won. The boys were coached by D.H. Conley's Shelley Marsh, while the girls were assisted by Farmville Central's Hilda Worthington. Rose High School's Donald House participated in the boys' game, scoring ten points, one of five players in double figures for the contest.

The East football team, coached by Rose High School's Dave Bumgarner, while not posting a victory, did perform well, as the two teams put on one of the more entertaining games in the series' history. Three area players participated in that contest, including Ron Butler and Ted King of Rose, and Donald Reid of Farmville Central.

We applaud the efforts of all these players and coaches for helping to keep the sports spotlight on Pitt County and the surrounding area.

With the beginning of high school football practice next week, players will undergo a week-long conditioning drill first, before putting on pads. After that, it will be a three or four week period before the first games are played.

College play will not be far behind with East Carolina opening its season at Duke on September 6. Freshmen report to begin practice on August 10, while the returning players come back on August 13. Full practice begins on the 15.

This year at East Carolina can only be regarded as a transition and rebuilding year. All but one member of the offensive line is a newcomer, and there is also a rookie quarterback operating behind that line. That combination is going to put a lot of pressure on the defense to keep the opponent score low.

Patience is advised for the fans of the Pirates. With the loss of over 25 veterans through graduation, including all those starters, plus the always difficult situation brought on by coaching changes, it will probably be a tough year.

But people might well remember that screams were heard for the scalps of coaches like Pat Dye, Bo Rein, and Dick Crum during their first years. Those scalphunters have since turned into staunch backslappers.

With the start of the fall athletic season upon us, we would request that area athletic directors send copies of their fall schedules in all sports to us, so that we may begin our coverage plans.

Olympic Tourists Find Problems

EDITOR'S NOTE: AP sports writer Kiley Armstrong has just returned from an Olympics package tour of the Soviet Union. In Part II of a three-part series she deals with the impressions of Soviet life formed by the Americans who didn't boycott.

By KILEY ARMSTRONG
AP Sports Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — It was the kind of thing you laugh about later.

But for an American tourist struck suddenly with Rasputin's Revenge, there's nothing funny about a toilet that consists of two footprints over a small drainpipe.

Improvisation was nothing new for most of the Americans who arrived in the first package tour of the Soviet Union before the Moscow Olympics.

Many of the 46 people on the seven-city tour already were seasoned travelers, prepared for the perils of waxed-paper toilet tissue and Big Mac attacks. They accepted in stride the countless hours spent on cramped, foul-smelling planes and occasional spiels on "the noble goal of Communism."

The Soviets had armed themselves against capitalist cravings with Pepsi-laden carts being pushed through hotel dining rooms in Moscow and Leningrad. Busloads of tourists frequently were wheeled past lines of Soviet shoppers waiting outside sparsely-stocked stores — and taken to "Beriozka" shops, which offer good-quality merchandise and accept only foreign currency.

Recorded music played in the lobby and elevators of an ultra-modern, Swedish-built hotel in Leningrad that included liberal doses of the Swedish singing group ABBA.

The hotel, whose employees waved to departing Americans and called, "Bye-bye," was a bus ride away from Leningrad's main business and residential areas. It featured built-in converters on the bathroom walls to adapt the electrical current for American appliances. As in Moscow, guests had to show a room registration card before they were allowed to enter the hotel.

"They've really given the area a facelift since I was here in 1971 and 1973. Everything seems freshly painted and reconstructed for the Olympics," said Carolyn Shepherd of Peoria, Ill.

"The (Soviet) Intourist guides are a lot better dressed than last time I was here — their clothes look like they were tailored in France," Shepherd said. "But I still saw a lot of shabbily-dressed people on the street. My Soviet friend had on the same clothes he was wearing when I saw him in 1973."

Tourists frequently are approached by Soviets offering to pay "many rubles" for jeans, other clothing, sunglasses, cigarettes and American dollars. A Russian-American guide said such black market offers sometimes are made by undercover police and could lead to the tourist's arrest for profiteering.

An Intourist guide, asked about the jeans he wore during the three-week tour, proudly replied, "Soviet made."

Some Beriozka shops, foreign currency bars and hotel service bureaus accepted travelers checks and American charge cards. But even when Americans were re-exchanging rubles for dollars at the Soviet bank, they were told no change was available in the form of American coins.

A purchase was made at a Moscow bookstore by asking the clerk to remove a book from the glass case for inspection, telling the cashier the amount of purchase and getting a receipt, then presenting the receipt to the clerk, who wrapped the book in tissue paper.

"I can't help but appreciate the place we live in when I see the nonsense they put up with, the permanent rules that change every 15 minutes," said Katie Quastler of San Diego who is working toward a master's degree in Russian.

"In our country, it's a waiter's duty to serve people, to make them happy. In the Soviet Union, their only duty is to bring the food. The stewardesses on the airplane never even smiled."

"In Montreal (where the tour embarked), perfect strangers were friendly to me. Maybe it's just words, but it's the oil that helps lubricate the social machinery," said Quastler.

Bob Cooper of Kansas City believes Americans "get more upset about having to wait than Europeans do. But it does seem like a nuisance to go to one place and pick out something, go to another and pay for it, then go back to the first place and pick it up."

"Everyone seemed friendly and the country was putting its best foot forward. But we were kept too busy and we didn't get the feel of how people lived,"

Cooper said.

Yet, Cooper agreed with Fred and Pat Miller of Flagstaff, Ariz., that the country is more progressive than they had expected.

"People told us the food would be lousy. It wasn't American — we have an infinite variety — but it certainly wasn't lousy," she said.

Florida's Image Still Sunny Despite The Rioting

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — As he lazed on the lounge chair and watched children frolic in the famed Fontainebleau Hotel's swimming pool, Mark Thomas felt far removed from the social unrest — and potential danger — only a causeway away.

"Of course, having children, we were concerned when we heard about the riots in Miami. But we were told the problems were confined to a small area of the city, and there's no reason for us to go there anyway," said the visitor from London.

"That's one tourist attraction we can overlook, thank you," he chuckled.

This has been a year of unrest in the nation's "Sunshine State," where over 35 million tourists spend $16 billion a year and pour $780 million — one-fourth of all tax revenues — into state coffers.

Three days of May race riots in Miami left 18 dead and caused over $100 million in property damage. Then came three days of rock-throwing, sniper fire and looting in the Gulf Coast city of Tampa. Two weeks ago, a predominantly black Miami housing project erupted into three days of violence.

And this week, Orlando — neighbor of Disney World, Sea World, Circus World and Cape Canaveral — was disrupted by its first major racial disturbances in memory.

Tiny Key West, meanwhile, is trying to overcome misconceptions about the 117,000 Cuban refugees who began coming ashore there in April.

Despite all that, tourist hotels are booked up, airlines report heavy business, beaches are lined with tanned and lobster-red bodies and thousands of families pack Florida amusement parks.

"We're not having a great summer, but it seems we're pretty much holding our own with last year. In view of all the things that are occurring around the state, we're grateful," said Dean Gaiser, state assistant director of tourism.

In fact, although the Miami riots — most of which occurred five miles and across a bay and a canal from Miami Beach — were the nation's bloodiest in a decade, Dade County tourism is booming.

"They're not seeing any indications that (the riots) have hurt business," Gaiser said. "The international business is the real plus for the Miami area."

Some 1 million foreign visitors, including 200,000 Britons, have more than negated a drop in domestic tourism attributed more to inflation and the high price of gasoline than to racial strife.

Local hoteliers say the May riots caused scattered cancellations, but most foreigners figure they can bask on the beaches without worrying about unrest downtown.

"We've been very hesitant about going over to Miami. We were told by the hotel people here that it could be dangerous, so we haven't ventured far," said Peter Locky, an Englishman staying at the Sea Isle Hotel here.

"Frankly, I wouldn't steer people over to Miami," said Eddie Devine, a manager for Intasun, an aggressive British tour group. He said Britons are content with the sun by day and hotel entertainment by night.

"I suspect at night," he said, "most watch TV in their rooms with a six-pack of beer."

Although Orlando's disturbances made headlines nationally, officials don't expect a tourist backlash.

I wouldn't think so. You're never sure how people are going to react, but I know that the disturbances are certainly totally divorced from any area tourists would go into," said Charlie Ridgeway, a Disney World spokesman.

Disney World, which doesn't disclose its attendance, is having a solid summer, Ridgeway said, and he doesn't foresee any dropoff.

"Our visitors do stay in Orlando (19 miles away), but the areas where the hotels are on the outskirts of town," Ridgeway said. "I think the disturbances have been overplayed."

Gaiser said the Tampa-St. Petersburg tourism "has been holding about the same."

"We haven't detected any pattern we could relate or attribute to any disturbances in Florida. Our attraction has had an excellent summer. We're up about 10 percent in tourists," said Rod Caborn, marketing manager for Busch Gardens, Tampa's main tourist attraction.

The only serious problems have been in the Florida Keys.

"There was a probusiness, and there's no way to replace that business," Gaiser said.

Although Cubans who arrived in the "Freedom Flotilla" were met at the Key West docks by immigration officers and taken to holding camps, many tourists were nevertheless scared off.

"People got the idea that refugees were sleeping on the beaches and roaming through the motels, and that Marines and tanks were in the streets," said Key West City Commissioner Richard Heyman.

Key West, an island city of 35,000, attracts 1.3 million tourists a year. Business leaders say tourism dropped 50 percent during the peak of the Cuban boatlift.

But Heyman noted Key West's best seasons are fall and winter. The state has spent over $5,000 "enticing a number of travel editors to visit Key West," Gaiser said. Motel owners and restaurateurs have covered the writers' other expenses.

"They have generated positive stories about Key West. They come down and see that you can still swim in the water and walk the streets and whatever else," Gaiser said.

Gaiser doesn't see any signs that the refugees or racial disturbances will combine to change Florida's sunny image. "It's conceivable that it could," he said. "But so far, it hasn't happened."

"I think a big plus is that about 80 percent of our tourists are repeat visitors. They know the state," he said. "I don't know what the magnitude of the problems would have to be to have an effect. Maybe it would have to be two or three uprisings at the same time."

Refusal Said No Divorce Basis

HAUPPAUGE, N.Y. (AP) — A man is not entitled to divorce his wife just because she refuses to bear him children, a state Supreme Court Justice has ruled.

"It follows naturally that if a woman can terminate a pregnancy without the consent of her husband, she should be allowed to make the unilateral determination to prevent it," said Justice Joseph Jaspas.

Herbert Zagarow, 34, of Stony Brook had filed a divorce action against his wife, charging mental cruelty because she would not have sex with him unless he used contraceptives.

In a ruling last week, Jaspas said that was not sufficient reason to seek a divorce. But Jaspas granted a divorce to the couple anyway, because Zagarow's wife, Eileen, 30, had also filed a divorce suit. She accused Zagarow of adultery and was awarded $75 a week in alimony.

The couple had no children after 10 years of marriage. Jaspas based his ruling against Zagarow's suit on a U.S. Supreme Court decision that said a woman could have an abortion in the first 12 weeks of pregnancy over the objections of her husband.

Mrs. Zagarow's lawyer, Ira Sloan, said there was precedent in New York that a spouse does not have the right to refuse intercourse. But he said the case was the first in New York "that gives the woman the right to determine whether or not she wants to have children without subjecting herself to divorce if she refuses."

Mrs. Zagarow is an employee of the Suffolk County Department of Social Services. Zagarow is dean of students at Suffolk Community College in Selden.

Zagarow has 30 days to decide whether to appeal. The couple declined comment on the suits.

Claim Will Was Forged

INDIO, Calif. (AP) — A new set of documents filed in a challenge of Darryl F. Zanuck's will contends the movie mogul's signature on the will was forged by his daughter.

The contention came in an affidavit filed Thursday in Riverside County Superior Court by attorneys for Genevieve Gilles, 34, who says she was Zanuck's mistress for eight years. She contends earlier wills named her as an heir to 45 percent of Zanuck's estate. Miss Gilles was not mentioned in Zanuck's most recent will.

The affidavit by Thomas Shirley, a friend of the Zanuck family, said Zanuck's daughter, Darrilyn Pineda, told him in 1975 that she signed her father's name to the will that was submitted for probate.

It is this will, dated Oct. 31, 1973, which is being challenged by Miss Gilles who seeks a $15 million share of Zanuck's estate.

Zanuck, head of 20th Century Fox Studios for 40 years, died in Palms Springs last year. He left the bulk of his estate to his wife and children.

Won't Identify Baby's Father

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Soraya Khashoggi, who is seeking a $2.5 billion settlement in a divorce suit against a Saudi Arabian billionaire, has refused to identify the father of her new child.

Mrs. Khashoggi gave birth to the 8-pound, 9-ounce girl Thursday, according to lawyer Marvin Mitchelson, who is representing Mrs. Khashoggi in the divorce.

Mrs. Khashoggi had five children during her marriage to the Saudi arms dealer and had one child before that. She has been estranged from her husband for six years.

Her divorce suit against Adnan Khashoggi, which is pending in court in Los Angeles, asks for half of his fortune.

Few Join With Nobel Winner

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Despite the fame that Mother Theresa garnered by winning the Nobel Peace Prize last year, she says there has not been a surge of young people seeking to enter her order, which aids the poor in India.

And, she said, there has not been a dramatic increase in financial assistance to the order since the award was announced.

Producer Will Be Sentenced

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert Evans, the producer of such movies as "Love Story" and "The Godfather," will be sentenced Oct. 7 on a conviction for possession of five ounces of cocaine.

Evans, 50, of Beverly Hills, Calif., pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor in U.S. District Court on Thursday, as did his brother and brother-in-law. The pleas were entered as part of a bargain in which prosecutors agreed not to press for other indictments.

Prosecutors said the cocaine was purchased from a federal undercover agent for $19,000 in May.

Each of the three men could receive up to a year in jail and a fine of $5,000.

It seems to us that the bidding of today's hand might be characterized as picturesque rather than accurate. East's jump to two hearts over the takeout double was intended as preemptive, but in view of his distribution, he did not much mind if his partner misinterpreted his effort. South had ample values for his free bid. His decision to bid his four-card major suit rather than the longer diamonds was entirely logical—in light of the bidding, North surely had at least four spades. From that point on, the auction became highly speculative, with each side resorting to guesswork since there was no clean-cut way to determine the possibilities of the hands.

West led the king of hearts, and declarer was delighted to find the ace-queen in dummy. Declarer took the ace and drew trumps in three rounds. The fate of the contract hinged on the diamond suit. Obviously, the ace of diamonds rated to be with West, so without giving the matter much thought, declarer led a diamond to the queen, which held, and returned the suit. When East showed out, the contract was down one.

Wins Divorce From Pete Rose

CINCINNATI (AP) — Carolyn Rose has been granted a divorce from her husband, Philadelphia Phillies first baseman Pete Rose.

Mrs. Rose filed for divorce last September, accusing her husband of gross neglect of duty. Rose, who formerly played for the Cincinnati Reds, did not contest the divorce, granted Thursday by Domestic Relations Judge George Paul.

Audience Aware Of Prime Time Joke

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — On a recent "Tonight Show,"

Johnny Carson was trying to tell a joke about the actors' strike.

The punch line was, "The strike might get an Emmy for most improving the quality of television." But before Carson could deliver it, he was interrupted mid-joke by enthusiastic applause from the studio audience.

They were cheering the joke's set-up line, which was: "Because of the actors' strike, there may be no new shows in the fall."

That familiar half-surprised, half-knowing grin came to Carson's face. He'd registered another direct hit on the American mood.

This wasn't a group of hip critics that was cheering the possibility of no new TV season. Carson audiences are avid TV watchers, vacationing heartlanders who swelter in the Burbank heat and smog for the privilege of sitting in the presence of television's biggest star.

When a Carson audience boos prime time, prime time is in trouble. And they have a point.

Suppose that the strike by the Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of TV and Radio Artists strike is a prolonged one, and there is no new television season in the fall... what will we miss?

There would be no new episodes of "Charlie's Angels," which means we'd miss meeting Charlie's newest angel, Tanya Roberts. But as this is a series whose success turns on its... er, action, rather than dramatic value, it's possible that no one would notice they were watching last season's reruns.

How can you tell if you're watching a rerun of "Charlie's Angels?"

If the strike wipes out the new season, there will be no new episodes of CBS' "Archie Bunker's Place." There is a bright side here. This is the season in which Edith Bunker was going to die, remember? The strike is dear Edith's life-support system, proving, as Archie has so often said, that the Lord takes care of drunks and dingbats.

A protracted strike would mean no new episodes of "Vegas," "Sheriff Lobo," "House Calls," "Flo," "The Facts of Life" or "Laverne and Shirley." The democracy could survive that. "Monday Night Football" is not affected by the strike.

On the other hand, "Those Amazing Animals," "Real People," "That's Incredible," "Games People Play" and "Speak Up America," not being dramatic or comedy shows, aren't affected by the strike and would premiere as scheduled. The new season would comprise a group of freak shows.

Worse, there would be no new "M-A-S-H," or "Lou Grant" or "Barney Miller." No "White Shadow" or "WKRP in Cincinnati" or the promising new NBC series, "Hill Street Blues." There would be no "Dallas."

All summer, CBS and Lorimar Productions have done a yeoman's job of hyping the shooting of J.R. Ewing. Prolonging the mystery (to say nothing of the hype assault) would be cruel to a nation already suffering hard times.

And if there is no new TV season, think of all the TV critics who'll have to find honest work.

Entertainer A Cancer Victim

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor-singer Bobby Van, a 25-year veteran of show business, has died following a long battle with cancer, a spokeswoman said. He was 47.

The boyish-looking performer died Thursday at UCLA Medical Center, said publicist Nancy Strauss.

In June, Van had apologized for his appearance as he served as emcee of the nationally televised Mrs. America pageant. He had also thanked his wife and friends for their support in his "time of trouble," but did not say specifically what his trouble was.

Van, who had appeared in nine movies and some two dozen television shows, once said the highlight of his career came Jan. 19, 1971, when the Broadway revival of "No, No, Nanette" opened.

"It was a thrilling experience when 2,000 people rose to their feet to applaud and cheer," said Van, who earned a Tony nomination for his portrayal of lawyer Billy Early in the popular musical.

The New York City-born Van was one of the last contract players at MGM. He played the original Dobie Gillis in "The Affairs of Dobie Gillis" and did his "Hop" routine in "That's Entertainment, Part II."

Other films included "Small Town Girl," "Kiss Me Kate," "Lost Flight" and the remake of "Lost Horizon." For seven years, he and Mickey Rooney were a popular nightclub attraction. Van also appeared in clubs with Judy Garland.

His television credits included the Ed Sullivan and Perry Como variety shows, a widely acclaimed appearance on "Skag," and guest spots on "Vegas," "Love Boat," "Battlestar Galactica" and "Fantasy Island."

Recently, he served as host of the game show, "Make Me Laugh."

Van is survived by his wife, actress Elaine Joyce, and his 4-year-old daughter, Taylor.

Graveside services will be held in Burbank on Friday, Ms. Strauss said.

Coordinator On Radio Show

Scott R. Lyman, coordinator of the Alcohol and Drug Center of Pitt County, will be guest Sunday at 1:06 p. m. on "Mental Health Matters" on WNCT radio.

He will talk about services offered at the center, as well as developmental plans which he anticipates as new coordinator.

Educated at American University, Washington, D. C., the University of Vermont and Dalhousie University in Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada, Lyman has had extensive experience in the alcohol and drug abuse field. Interested in prevention services, as well as direct services, he is analyzing, evaluating and formulating plans related to services at the Alcohol and Drug Center, which is a component of Pitt County Mental Health Center.

While You're Reading This Ad We're Putting Together Tonight's "Speak Up America."

Because "Speak Up America" is so fresh, we can't even tell you what's going to be on tonight. Except that it's going to be very entertaining. Because it's from George Schlatter, the creator of "Laugh-In" and "Real People." And because it stars you. And nobody's more fun to watch than Americans reacting to everything that's going on in this country right now. That's why the first show of the new TV season is being done at the last minute.

Georgia Prison Shakeup After Death Row Escape

ATLANTA (AP) — In the aftermath of Monday's escape by four Georgia State Prison death-row inmates, two guards at the prison have been fired, a third has been suspended, and 28 death row inmates have been shipped to another prison.

The sudden transfer of prisoners to the Georgia

Diagnostic and Classification Center near Jackson on Thursday left only one prisoner under death sentence at the huge prison near Reidsville. He is to be moved after a scheduled court hearing, prison spokeswoman Lucy Justus said.

Officials of the state Department of Offender Rehabilitation officials declined to disclose the names of the guards who were disciplined. But guards Charles Day and Alfred Cason confirmed to the Atlanta Journal that they had been fired. The men have 15 days to appeal the decision, Ms. Justus said.

"They were terminated because of negligence, not because of any aid, or anything given to the escapees," she said.

She added that the third guard will be suspended in two weeks. Ms. Justus said the suspension was delayed to give the employee the required notice of the unpaid leave.

Four prisoners, dressed in fake guard uniforms, sawed through their cell bars and escaped from the prison at Reidsville Monday morning. Authorities said the men walked past several prison guards as they left the facility.

Three of the men were recaptured early Wednesday near Charlotte, N.C. The body of the fourth was found in a river nearby.

In other developments: —A group of black inmates, among those transferred Thursday from Reidsville to Jackson, said in a letter to The Atlanta Constitution that the four men who escaped and two other white inmates benefited from special privileges.

The blacks said guards allowed the white inmates more time outside their cells in an area where iron bars were sawed to allow the escape. Ms. Justus said the charges of favoritism were being investigated.

—Some inmates at the Jackson prison said in a letter to the American Civil Liberties Union of Georgia that they mailed 10-inch homemade knives to a federal judge and a Justice Department investigator, the Constitution reported.

The inmates said they mailed the weapons "to make a point and to get some action and to prevent, we hope, the abundance of weapons."

U.S. District Judge Wilbur Owens of Macon declined to confirm or deny that he had received a knife, saying, "I don't think it is appropriate for me to be embroiled."

—Gov. George Busbee said Thursday he expects an investigation of the breakout will lead to prosecution, but he said the state was not seeking scapegoats.

"I'm not going to blame anything. We had custody of them and we did not fulfill our duty," the governor said at a news conference. "We're not having scapegoats. We'll get to the bottom of this, and we'll correct it."

—Charles Postell, the reporter for The Albany Herald who alerted authorities to the escape after receiving a telephone call from the escapees, said he expects to be arrested by agents of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation.

GBI agents executed a search warrant at Postell's home Tuesday, taking five letters written by the death row inmates who later escaped. Postell said the letters could be construed as informing him of the escape plans, but that he never believed them.

"I think they're going to arrest me. Winding all of this backwards, you can see where all this might be incriminating," Postell said. "If you read them to the public, they might say, 'Aha.' But I had no prior knowledge, and the bottom line is that if I had known, I would have told someone."

Charles Montgomery, warden of the Georgia State Prison, had said Tuesday that two guards were taken off duty as a result of the breakout. Ms. Justus said they were the same men fired Wednesday.

Cason told the Journal he was in a guard tower when the prisoners broke out. He said he was fired for not reporting what appeared to be a prison guard walking on the roof of one prison dormitory.

"If you see a man dressed like that, you just assume it's a prison guard working on the roof," he said.

Day said he was fired for telling prison officials shortly before noon Monday that the prisoners were still in their cellblock. Authorities said the men apparently broke out about 9 a.m.

"I was the only officer on the fourth floor at the time," said Day, whose guard post overlooked the 20-cell death-row area. "There are supposed to be two officers on the floor at all times and prison rules say a guard cannot open the door and enter the cellblock unless another guard is present."

Gun-Smugglers Recruit Buyers

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Arabs living in Detroit have been recruiting Toledo residents to buy guns in Ohio, where weapons laws are looser than in Michigan, for eventual smuggling into the Middle East, according to the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

The ATF has set up a special "Mideast Firearms Task Force" to investigate the cases, according to Tom Hersel, group supervisor for the ATF in Detroit. He said the force also includes customs and immigration agents.

The ATF says the Toledo residents are told to bring the weapons to Detroit Metro Airport and from there attempts have been made to transport the weapons to Lebanon and Yemen.

Three Toledo residents have been arrested on charges related to the smuggling.

Ericex Campbell, 50, was charged on Wednesday with selling firearms without a license.

Muhammed Mallah was charged on Monday at the airport with illegal export of firearms. Police said Mallah and two Detroit men tried to export eight handguns aboard a flight to Beirut, Lebanon.

Mahamoud Sallameh was arrested July 23 along with three Michigan men as they crossed from Toledo into Michigan. The ATF said the four were charged with illegal interstate sale of firearms and making false statements to firearms dealers.

An affidavit filed by ATF charges that Campbell bought nearly 30 handguns between January and May. Some of the weapons had serial numbers that matched those seized by agents at a Detroit airport in June, the affidavit said.

Agents said the guns were traced after the arrest of a Michigan man who was trying to have parcels and suitcases containing guns and ammunition shipped to Yemen.

Ask Bail On MacDonald

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Lawyers for Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald, whose triple-murder conviction was overturned this week by a federal appeals court, have asked the court to release him on bail.

MacDonald is serving three life sentences in a federal prison at Long Beach, Calif.

Attorney Bernard Segal of San Francisco, one of MacDonald's attorneys, said the petition for bail was filed Thursday with the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond. He said he expects no decision from the court before next week.

MacDonald, a former Green Beret doctor, was convicted by a federal court jury in Raleigh, N.C., last year of murdering his pregnant wife, Colette, 26, and their two young daughters. He maintained that a group of drug-crazed hippies broke into the family's home at Fort Bragg in 1970, attacked him and slaughtered his family.

A three-judge panel of the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals on Wednesday overturned the convictions, saying the government waited too long to bring MacDonald to trial.

U.S. Attorney James L. Blackburn of Raleigh and Justice Department attorney Brian Murtagh of Washington, two of the prosecutors of the case, have said they will seek to have the ruling appealed.
