GE Micro-Electronics Center For N.C.

By KATHRYN P. WHITE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — General Electric Co. will build a new multimillion-dollar micro-electronics center in the Research Triangle Park near Raleigh, Gov. Jim Hunt announced today.

Hunt, who had pushed for location of the GE plant at RTP, said the move will place "North Carolina in the vanguard of a micro-electronics revolution."

The governor made the announcement via satellite from Denver, where he is attending a meeting of the National Governor's Association. Using satellite transmission, he beamed the announcement to reporters in Raleigh and answered their questions.

The news conference cost the state an estimated $1,300, but Hunt said the cost was modest in light of the impact of the center planned by GE.

GE vice president Don Beilman, who was in Raleigh, said the state's commitment to develop training programs at regional colleges and technical schools was a "pivotal factor" in the decision to come to North Carolina.

Beilman said the initial phase of development at the facility would involve 160 high-technology professional and technical support personnel. He said about half of those jobs would be filled with GE personnel transferring here from other locations.

But Beilman said that with the company's planned expansions, the facility should employ over 500 persons within ten years.

Micro-electronics is the technology of placing on tiny silicon chips complex electrical systems that formerly filled entire rooms. Some elements are 100th the size of a human hair.

Hunt said the state planned an advertising campaign and a trip to Silicon Valley in southern California, the nation's largest microelectronics center, to lure other companies to North Carolina.

But he said the state would go "to great lengths to insure that we don't have the kind of congestion and sprawl that Silicon Valley has."

The GE board of directors met in closed session at Fairfield, Conn., Friday and approved location of the center at RTP. GE officials refused to divulge their plans at that time.

Hunt provided $1 million from a special state emergency fund a month ago to establish a public micro-electronics agency. He said it was needed to coordinate research and development if the state is to recruit the high-technology, computer-related industry.

Earlier this year, GE secured an option to buy 71.7 acres of land at RTP.

President Hopes End Rumors

Rushing Report On Billy

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, eager to get his side of the story before Congress and the public, is rushing to complete a report on his brother's Libyan connection as a special Senate committee begins hearings on the Billy Carter affair.

Carter, in a precarious political position with the Democratic National Convention just a week away, said Sunday he hopes the report will put an end to weeks of rumors and revelations about White House involvement in the Billy Carter-Libyan matter.

After spending the weekend with top aides at his Camp David, Md., retreat, the president told reporters upon returning to Washington that the document was "just about" complete.

Alfred Moses, one of the lawyers working on the account, described it as "a full report to the Senate" containing no surprises. However, White House press secretary Jody Powell said the report would include some previously undisclosed documents to support the president's case.

"It should be delivered to the Senate late" today, Moses said. By that timetable, Carter then would hold a nationally televised, prime-time news conference tonight to answer questions about the report.

The special Senate committee was opening its public hearings today with a review of U.S.-Libyan relations.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-Va., predicted the investigation will show "bad judgment and rather amateurish handling of foreign policy" in the Billy Carter case, but he said he doubted it would find evidence of wrongdoing by the president or his staff.

Billy Carter registered with the Justice Department three weeks ago as a representative of Libya and disclosed that he had received $220,000 in installments on a $500,000 loan.

One of the president's key political allies, Democratic National Chairman John C. White, tried Sunday to play down the political fallout.

"There's no fire. Not even any smoke. Just a lot of hot air," White said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

"I think this will pass"

once the public knows the entire story.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., a member of the special Senate committee, urged the president to make sure his report is complete, even if it means delaying it.

"Rather than rushing to tell all on Monday — and risk a spate of denials and clarifications throughout the rest of the week — I would suggest that the president might do well to take his time until he is sure he has worked out the definitive version," Dole said.

Powell also alluded to that before joining Carter, Moses, White House counsel Lloyd Cutler and long-time Carter adviser Charles Kirbo at Camp David.

"What we have been dealing with here is a tremendous quantity of material and paperwork and peoples' recollections and the White House counsel's office has had to talk to a lot of people," the spokesman said. "They've had to have a lot of people combing back through records, notes. ... There is always a possibility that there is something that does not show up there."

Partisan Debate Among Governors

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — Wrangling by partisans for President Carter, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and a phantom Democratic "unity" candidate is turning the annual meeting of the nation's governors into a battle of presidential politics.

The political intrigue at the 72nd annual meeting of the National Governors' Association is causing a stir because political heavyweights are doing the lobbying and doing it just the week before the Democratic National Convention in New York. It is also overshadowing the less glamorous but pressing state problems that the governors came here to discuss.

The lobbying is being done with fervor because most Democratic governors are delegates to the party's convention and play an influential part in deciding which direction their delegations will go at the convention.

One group of lobbyists wants to lock up a second presidential nomination for Carter by getting the Democratic convention to adopt a rule tying delegates to the candidates they were selected to vote for in primaries and state party meetings.

Another wants to open the way for Kennedy by defeating the rule.

A third group wants to defeat the rule, then dump both Carter and Kennedy.

Those speaking out on the so-called "open-convention" movement include Govs. Hugh Carey of New York and Richard Lamm of Colorado and former Wisconsin Gov. and Ambassador to Mexico Patrick Lucey. Being quieter, but very much in evidence, is Carter campaign chief Robert Strauss, who is leading what Carey calls the "White House shock troops" against an open convention.

Carey's salvo on the question was issued at a news conference Sunday. He said many of the party's candidates for lower offices are trailing Republicans in early polls and he attributes it in large part to Carter's own unpopularity.

"That's a dangerous condition, a dangerous situation," Carey said. "And that's why I feel that this is an issue that should be taken from the point of view of the entire party."

Other opponents to the loyalty rule predicted at the governors' opening sessions that a captive Democratic convention could split the party, cost Carter his job and maybe flush a lot of other Democrats down the tube with him.

Carter's defenders said the whole commotion was a fraud designed to salvage Kennedy's losing campaign, but those speaking out against the White House strategy outnumbered its friends and reached beyond the Kennedy camp.

Swift Creek Funds OK'd

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County commissioners this morning approved a plan by the Department of Transportation to begin work on 32 road crossings as part of the Swift Creek drainage project.

The board approved recommendations by C. W. Snell, division highway engineer that $12,600 in secondary road funds not allocated to specific projects and any under-runs on other projects be used to fund part of the estimated $106,500 cost involved in work on the crossing.

The work will involve installing larger tile or lowering present tile at the crossings, with the drainage district providing the tile and other material, and the Department of Transportation supplying the labor and equipment.

Snell noted that the crossing work is programmed to be completed over a two year period.

In other business this morning, the board agreed to pay professional employees of the Department of Social Services and the Mental Health Department, which are mandated by federal and state regulations to provide 24-hour service, $175 per week for weeks they are on call, rather than paying them on a per hour basis or giving them time off.

Commissioners also gave approval to the Pitt Memorial Hospital budget for the coming year.

Hospital Director Jack Richardson noted that the budget included $1.9 million in capital improvement funds, primarily for enlarging laboratory, medical records and cafeteria facilities, and $20.4 million for salaries, which amounts to 52.7 percent of the total operating budget for the medical facility.

Afghan Mutiny Story Unfolding

NEW DELHI, India (AP) —

Some 4,500 of the 5,000 Afghan government troops guarding a garrison outside Kabul deserted or joined the Moslem rebels they were fighting, a report from Afghanistan said.

A Kabul resident, whose reports have proved accurate in the past, also said 200 Soviets and 300 Afghan rebels were killed in 10 days of fighting before recapturing the Ghazni garrison 75 miles south of Kabul.

He said the Afghan troops mutinied July 24 after President Babrak Karmal replaced the Ghazni commander with a member of his own Parchamite faction of the ruling Marxist party. A majority of the army officers belong to the rival Khalq faction.

After regaining control of the Ghazni base, Soviet forces launched a large-scale air and ground attack against rebels at the Tangi Wardak military base, 24 miles west of Kabul, the informant said.

Hurricane Leaves Barbados Damage

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados

(AP) — Hurricane Allen, packing winds up to 125 mph, tore into the Caribbean island of Barbados, ripping roofs off houses and flooding some coastal areas. It took aim at St. Lucia in the Windward chain but passed the island and moved over open Caribbean waters today.

There were no immediate reports of deaths or injuries from Allen, the season's first hurricane, but authorities said thousands were driven into public shelters and that houses in the northern and eastern parts of Barbados were heavily damaged.

The wind picked up corrugated sheets of metal used as fencing in Bridgetown and tossed them about. On the southeast coast, flood waters were reported three feet high.

Telephone communications to the area were knocked out when the storm passed Barbados shortly after midnight. In San Juan, Puerto Rico, telephone operators said they had been unable to reach any of the Lesser Antilles since coming on duty at midnight.

At 9 a.m., the U.S. National Weather Service in San Juan reported the center of the hurricane was near latitude 14.2 north, longitude 63.5 west, or about 170 miles west of St. Lucia and 350 miles southeast of San Juan.

It said the storm was moving in a direction slightly north of due west at about 20 mph, that a slight turn toward a west northwesterly direction and a decrease in forward speed was likely during the next 24 hours, and that conditions favored further strengthening.

An amateur radio operator at the Barbados airport, monitored in Haiti, said there had been no loss of life and no serious injuries on the island. The radio operator, who said his name was Mack King, said five buildings had been knocked down and there was heavy flooding.

Iran's Militants Call For Hostage Spy Trial

By The Associated Press

The 52 American hostages began their 10th month in captivity today with Moslem militants calling for immediate spy trials and urging a mass rally outside the U.S. Embassy in Tehran to protest the alleged mistreatment of 193 Iranian demonstrators arrested in Washington.

The arrest of the demonstrators, many of whom are on a hunger strike, touched off a series of angry protests in their homeland over the weekend and elicited a bitter reaction from revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini accompanied by threats of reprisals against the hostages seized Nov. 4.

Angry demonstrators in one Iranian city demanded the hostages be put on trial immediately in retaliation, Tehran Radio reported.

U.S. officials said all the imprisoned Iranians were examined by an Iranian doctor from New York on Sunday who found less than half a dozen injuries, all of them minor. Officials added about 40 Iranians had been treated for the effects of their hunger strike and said charges injured demonstrators were locked up without treatment were "categorically untrue."

But Tehran Radio quoted Khomeini as telling Greek Catholic Archbishop Hilarion Capudjji, "Do you know what America and the American police are doing right now to our students? Do you know that our youngsters are being kept unconscious under lock and key with broken ribs?"

Capudjji had delivered a letter from the pope asking that Catholics living under the fundamentalist Islamic regime be allowed to live in peace and practice their religion.

MOTOR DELIVERY

On Apr. 17 Boggs Pontiac of Havelock sent someone to pick up a 400 Ford Motor and C-4 transmission from my business, Grimesland Tire and Parts Distributors. We have gone round and round with them since then. They won't pay for them and they won't return them. Once when we sent someone to pick up the motor, which they said did not fit, they said they'd sent it to the junk pile. Then a secretary called the next day and said they had it back. Since we've made several trips to correct this matter, we feel it is their obligation to return the merchandise that does not belong to them. July 15 someone there called and threatened to throw the motor in a salvage yard if we didn't pick it up. How can anyone destroy merchandise not belonging to them? T. G.

Hotline wrote a letter to the car dealer and received a phone call the next day. Mike Mandela said he has proof that the transmission was paid for. You checked your records and agreed that it was true that this particular one was. He said that his company went to considerable trouble trying to get the correct motor and never did. The motor is being kept for you, he said, but his superior in the company says that, if you want it, you will have to come get it.

Tell World You're OK By Your Walk!

CHICAGO (AP) — A walking style can intentionally or unintentionally communicate mood and self-esteem. "Subconsciously, we learn quickly to evaluate others on the basis of posture, gait and other telltale signs," adds Maurita Robarge, professor of physical education and kinesiology at the University of Wisconsin-LaCrosse, and fitness consultant for Scholl here. "A basic walking style is set early in life, formed by family or peer-group copying, personality and, possibly, structural problems," the expert notes. "But, a walk also varies according to the situation, and can be a barometer of feelings, attitudes and moods."

Ms. Robarge offers some clues to help sharpen awareness of your own and other people's walking styles.

—Posture: A slump may indicate feeling of inadequacy, if it's a normal part of a person's walk. An occasional slumping posture may just mean the person is facing a temporary "slump" in business or personal life.

—Stride: A slow, ambling stroll can be a sign of aimlessness, but a brisk, forceful walk indicates purpose.

—Head Angle: The "executive go-getter" type often walks with the upper body at a forward angle, a fast, purposeful pace. This type is willing to meet problems head-on. But walkers who keep their heads buried in their chests are in a meditative mood, and do not invite conversation.

—Arm Swing: A good arm swing expresses an open, receptive mood. When arms are limp and hands are tucked into pockets, the walker probably wants to be alone.

Dancers and gymnasts are easy to spot: They walk with a bouncy, up-down movement, sometimes called the "jock walk," Ms. Robarge says. It's a springy step that comes from well-conditioned foot and leg muscles.

Some people show off as they walk: The "macho man" often walks with an attempted swagger; his feet swing out and around from the hip joint with each step, causing a slight rocking of the upper body. He's trying to impress you with his masculinity, she says.

And, she adds, some people try to turn attention away from themselves: People who "hug the walls" as they walk may be keeping themselves out of the mainstream of life's activities. Similarly, a person who walks with the torso turned slightly aside may be trying to deflect conflicts with on-lookers.

A walk may also be used as a "come-on," with a forward thrust of the pelvis, or an exaggerated side-to-side pelvic movement.

To assess a walker's state of mind, Ms. Robarge suggests, try to assess the situa-

Have Apricot Roski On Hand

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

If you need dozens of snacks to feed a large group after tennis or swimming, or to take to a big picnic, Lillian Falcone's Apricot Roski are great to have on hand.

Mrs. Falcone lives in California, and she's been baking these Ukrainian turnovers for over 40 years. After she sent us the recipe, we queried a Czechoslovakian friend — also acquainted with these apricot turnovers — about the word "roski." She said: "It means 'corner' and refers to the fact that you cut the dough into wedges and roll them up so that a corner of the dough shows."

LILLIAN FALCONE'S
APRICOT ROSKI
1 cup cultured sour cream
1 tablespoon water
1 package active dry yeast
1 cup butter
1 cup white vegetable shortening
1 large egg
3 egg yolks (from large eggs)
5 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
Sugar
Apricot Filling, recipe follows

In a small saucepan over low heat stir together the sour cream, water and yeast until lukewarm; set aside. Melt the butter and shortening; cool to room temperature. Beat together the whole egg and egg yolks until blended. In a large bowl stir together the flour and salt; make a well in center; pour in the sour cream mixture, butter mixture and eggs; mix together with fingers until well blended. Shape into a ball. Cover and refrigerate overnight.

Divide dough into 14 equal pieces. Sprinkle a smooth surface with sugar; roll out one portion into an 8-inch round; cut into 6 wedges. Drop about 1 teaspoon Apricot Filling at large end of wedge; roll up from large end, tucking in sides as you roll. Treat remaining rounds the same way. Place seam-side down several inches apart on greased cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until lightly browned — about 12 minutes. Cool on wire racks.

Apricot Filling: In a medium saucepan cover 1 cup (about 6½ ounces) dried apricots with water. Stirring occasionally over low heat, cook, covered, until apricots are soft and almost all water is absorbed — about 20 minutes. Add 1 and 1-3rd cups sugar, 2 tablespoons instant tapioca and ¼ teaspoon cinnamon; beat until smooth. Makes about 7 dozen.

Husband Shouldn't Help Wife Overeat

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Why would an intelligent, good-looking, loving man encourage his 300-pound wife to overeat?

He appears to adore her, and she seems eager to lose weight, yet between his adoration and her good intentions she has become one whale of a gal!

When they go to a movie, he buys her candy and popcorn. After the movie, he treats her to pizza. At potluck suppers, he brings her several pieces of pie!

This dear lady is my sister. She can't tie her own shoelaces, and I know relatives who hesitate to invite her to their homes for fear the springs in their chairs and sofas won't hold.

There is something funny going on here. I would like your evaluation of this situation.

CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: Unless one knows what is in the heart and head of her husband, it is impossible to evaluate the situation accurately. But one thing is certain: Offering fattening foods to a 300-pounder is tantamount to giving alcohol to an alcoholic or sugar to a diabetic. Your sister's husband is neither intelligent nor loving.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 29, male and unattached. For the last three months I've been talking on the telephone with a young lady whose firm does business with our firm. I really dig her voice and manner of speaking. She says she's 27 and single, and she sounds bright, sharp and witty.

I would really like to meet this chick and am considering asking her for a date.

The guy who lives with me says I'm crazy to take a chance — that she'll probably turn out to be a dog.

What do you say?

INTRIGUED IN CHICAGO

DEAR INTRIGUED: Ask her anyway. If she's willing to date you sight unseen, she's risking as much as you. But don't get your hopes up. She may not dig you!

The decision as to whether or not to wear contact lenses has probably crossed the mind of just about anyone who wears glasses. These nutritional tips brought to you by
DIET CENTER

For every pound of fat you add to your body, you add somewhere between 200 and 1,000 miles of additional capillaries just to feed the cells in the body. If you take the minimum, 200 miles for each pound, that means that fifteen pounds of excess weight adds an extra 3,000 miles to the distance that blood must be pumped each day. That is equal to the distance from one coast of the United States to the other. That is a

Dollar Meter Running

Congress in its wisdom, and at the behest of President Carter, has passed a measure giving the President authority to ration gasoline under certain conditions.

If it is ever necessary to implement the measure, we have the feeling the nation will have run out of gas long before the program can get its engine started.

Proponents of the measure have asserted the rationing plan can be implemented within three months from the time the President gives the order. Others take the view that such a program may take a year or longer to put into effect once the President gives the order. Based on observations of how the federal bureaucracy has been operating in recent years, we are inclined to believe the latter estimates are more realistic.

In addition to the time factor, the plan would require some 5,000 additional federal employees and three times that many state and local government employees just for the initial three month start-up. The price tag for that 90 days is pegged at $464 million. If rationing were continued beyond the initial three months, it would cost another $474 million for each 90 days . . . and so far as we know that has no built-in inflation factor.

The trigger which would give the President authority to initiate the rationing would be circumstances under which the nation's gasoline supplies dropped by 20 per cent over a 30 day period. But there is also the provision that Congress may veto the rationing order even if it is issued by the President. That, of course, would bring on more debate and could consume considerable amount of time.

That the proposed rationing plan could be implemented to effectively cope with a short-term situation is highly doubtful in our judgment.

Meanwhile, the dollar meter is already running. Preparatory work for the plan will take up to a year and a minimum of $103 million of taxpayers' money.

Quality Needs Upgrading

Things are worse in the volunteer army than had first been supposed.

The Pentagon now says it greatly underestimated the percent of lower-mentality recruits which have been accepted. The estimate had been five percent. Now, however, the Pentagon believes 30 percent might be a more accurate figure. Technical errors were blamed for the discrepancy.

Whatever the reason 30 percent is a high number of low mentality individuals to be manning the nation's defenses. Obviously there are many persons of high intelligence in the military, but clearly, too, there are not enough.

Something will have to be done to bring qualified people into the armed services. We can't afford an incompetent military.

Reforms Assailed

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — It is time, as former Gov. Terry Sanford suggests, to "reform the reforms" in the National Democratic Party, says Gov. Jim Hunt.

In trying to become all things to all people, guarantee delegate representation to various minorities, and allow state primaries to weed out potentially outstanding candidates for president early in the process, the Democrats — since followed by the Republicans — have effectively eliminated the political party as the critical element in choosing a new President.

Sanford, now president of Duke University and once a hopeful for the White House, writes in the current issue of "The Atlantic Monthly" magazine that the reformed system is in trouble: "Recent reforms have made a fundamental change; now we require the candidates, not the constituents, to pick the delegates. . . . The delegates are then, for the most part, bound to the candidates."

"This seems so reasonable and obvious that we can't believe it is wrong. But it is," Sanford states.

Hunt, meanwhile, has taken a national leadership role in the Democratic Party pushing for thorough study and revision of the system.

Two Leaders

Thus, two North Carolinians widely experienced in political leadership have emerged as key individuals in what must become profound changes in the party process. The experience in this election year in which many citizens feel that neither party came forth with the best candidate underscores the reformation movement.

Reduction of the party's role in the selection process

BILL NOBLITT

"Hurts democracy," says Gov. Hunt, and he finds many people "fed up with it and fearing that it will not get better; but worse."

Hunt hopes the political parties themselves will take the lead and develop proposals for change to restore the importance of party involvement at the grassroots, with those who are doing the work playing an important part in selection of candidates.

A Duke professor has written the theory that abdication of leadership by the political parties and the spreading preferential primary system has created a vacuum which the national news media, particularly television, fill in weeding out potential candidates and picking the ultimate nominee.

Hunt sees "a great deal of merit" in that analysis by Dr. James David Barber, but says he is not alarmed. That condition naturally results from the size and complexity of the nation. "We are not ever going to go back to the days when you could sit on

Other Editors Say More Patrolmen?

(Kannapolis Daily Independent)

Burley B. Mitchell, Jr., secretary of crime control and public safety for the State of North Carolina, is seeking Governor Jim Hunt's help in persuading the legislature to put up the money for 200 more highway patrolmen.

He contends that because of additional duties such as monitoring for radiation, training for disaster control and monitoring compliance with gasoline pricing regulations, the 800 patrolmen he now has can't do the job that needs to be done to curb speeding and drunken driving. He also argues effectively that while the authorized strength of the patrol has been held to 800 for eight years the numbers of vehicles, licensed drivers and highway mileage have increased sharply.

Secretary Mitchell backs up his argument with statistics which show clearly that highway fatalities have declined in recent years. He likes to give credit to stricter enforcement of the laws, especially speeding and drunken driving. Others contend that there are fewer deadly accidents because people are driving less with gasoline prices what they are.

The General Assembly should give careful consideration to Secretary Mitchell's request. There is not much room for doubt that North Carolina needs more highway patrolmen — the experts in highway safety should be able to say how many.

But one thing about the request is a bit bothersome; talk around Raleigh is that North Carolina must improve its compliance with the 55 miles an hour speed limit or face the loss of federal funds for highway construction. Washington officials have, stating it bluntly, read the riot act to the folks in Raleigh. Too many motorists, they contend, are ignoring the speed limit.

It's difficult to dispute the claims that the 55 speed limit conserves gasoline and makes the highways safer for motorists. And most North Carolinians believe in obeying the laws and favor enforcement of the laws.

But we're getting danged tired of the people in Washington handing down orders and saying obey them or funds that belong to us in the first place will be cut off.

Strength For Today

HIDDEN ROOMS

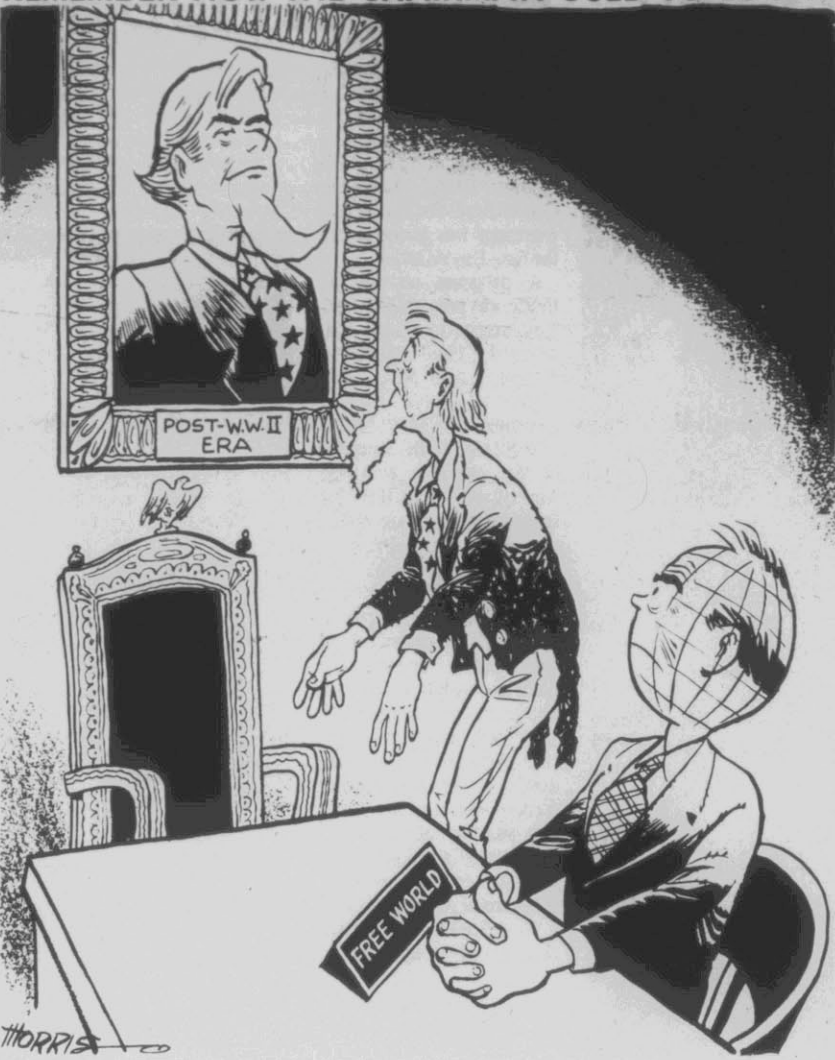

Some people live in houses some parts of which are always shut off from view. Perhaps the cellar has become so full of old newspapers and trash that the people are ashamed to have their neighbors see it. Perhaps they have used the spare room upstairs to put away unwanted odds and ends for a period of years, and so consider the room off-limits to callers.

There are also people who have such spare rooms and cellars not in their houses but in their lives. Part of their daily living is taken up with dishonesty, drunkenness, or infidelity which must be hidden from family and friends.

Just as the unsightly accumulation of old rubbish may be a fire hazard or a breeder of disease, so these shut-off areas in men's lives are dangerous to self-respect and happiness. The well-kept house is always ready for inspection; so too with a well-kept life. — Elisha Douglass

REMEMBER HOW THE CHAIRMAN USED TO LOOK?

By ART BUCHWALD

Rough On College Men

It's very hard for many college students to live up to the roles they have been given by the mass media. What newspapers, magazines, and television networks expect from students is more than most of them can deliver. I discovered this when I was speaking at a Midwestern campus not long ago.

A student, whom I shall call Ronald Hoffman, seemed very troubled, and I asked him what the problem was.

"My parents are coming up next week, and I don't know what to do."

"Why?"

"Well, you see, I told them I was living off campus with this coed in an apartment. But the truth is that I'm living in the dormitory."

"That shouldn't really disturb them."

"Oh, but it will. They're very proud of me, and they think I should have a mind of my own. When my dad heard I was living off campus with a coed, he doubled my allowance because, as he put it, 'Anyone who is willing to spit in the eye of conformity deserves his father's support.' I don't know what he's going to say when he finds out I used the money to buy books."

ART BUCHWALD

"It'll hurt him," I agreed. "What will your mother say?"

"I don't know. She's been crying a lot since I wrote her about living with this coed, and Dad's been arguing with her that her trouble is she doesn't understand youth. Mom's likely to get pretty sore when she discovers she's been crying for nothing."

"Not to mention how silly your father will look for making her cry."

Ronald shook his head sadly. "The trouble with parents these days is they believe everything they read. Time magazine, in a 'Sex on the Campus' article, made it sound so easy to find a coed who won't even do the dishes."

"Then all this talk of students living out of wedlock is exaggerated?"

"Exaggerated? When I got here, I asked 10 girls if they wanted to live with me. The first one said she didn't come to college to iron shirts for the wrong guy, four told me frankly that it would hurt their chances of finding a husband, four told me to drop dead, and one reported me to the campus police. I was lucky to get a room in the dormitory."

"I guess it's no fun for a young man to pretend he's a swinger."

"You can say that again. Every time I go home, everybody wants to know about the pot parties and orgies I go to at school. The only thing that's saved me is that I've seen 'Caligula' twice."

"You have to depend on your imagination?"

"What college boy doesn't?" Ronald said. "There are more conscientious objectors among coeds

Crossroad Facing Iran

By CHARLES HANLEY

Associated Press Writer
The Iran hostage impasse, nine months old this week, is again entering a critical stage.

The shah is dead. The Iranian revolution is under growing pressure to prove itself. The United States is approaching a presidential election.

This week or next, when the Moslem fasting month of Ramadan ends, the Iranian Parliament and President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr may finally agree on a choice for prime minister. Carter administration officials say they are looking forward to the installation of this new government, since it may revive the kind of serious backstage negotiating that has not gone on for months.

What kind of solution can be worked out?

The elements of one have been in play for months — a United Nations investigatory commission, an effort by the Iranians to seize deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's wealth, a "trial" of some kind for the 52 hostages.

Last week, the young radicals holding the Americans dismissed the ex-shah's death as unimportant. Released hostage Richard Queen told an interviewer his captors never seemed to believe they could actually obtain Pahlavi's extradition to Iran — their central demand.

But some Iranian officials acknowledge that the exiled monarch's death does indeed change the equation. It will help cool the fiery rhetoric in Iran and ease Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's fears about Pahlavi-inspired plots against his revolutionary regime.

The right-wing Islamic revolutionaries, in fact, show signs that they are becoming even more worried about possible subversion from the Iranian left and from the Soviet Union.

Government pronouncements warn of Soviet "espionage." A ban on "non-Islamic" groups has been proposed in Parliament — a clear attack on the Marxist Fedayeen organization and the liberal-left National Front. The Moslem clergy is debating keeping the universities closed this fall to complete a purge of leftist faculty.

In a letter read before the Iranian Parliament last week, 187 U.S. congressmen capitalized on these fears, telling the Iranians they should patch up relations with the U.S. as quickly as possible because of threats of "aggression by hegemonist and expansionist forces."

Eighteen months after the revolution, the Iranian leadership is under great pressure to put together a permanent government, one that can do something about massive unemployment, inflation, shortages of consumer goods and stubborn rebellions in the provinces.

The formation of a new government entails some hazards for the U.S.

For one thing, Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, long the main contact in efforts to resolve the crisis, will no longer be foreign minister. For another, Bani-Sadr, another relatively conciliatory voice, may be pushed into the background.

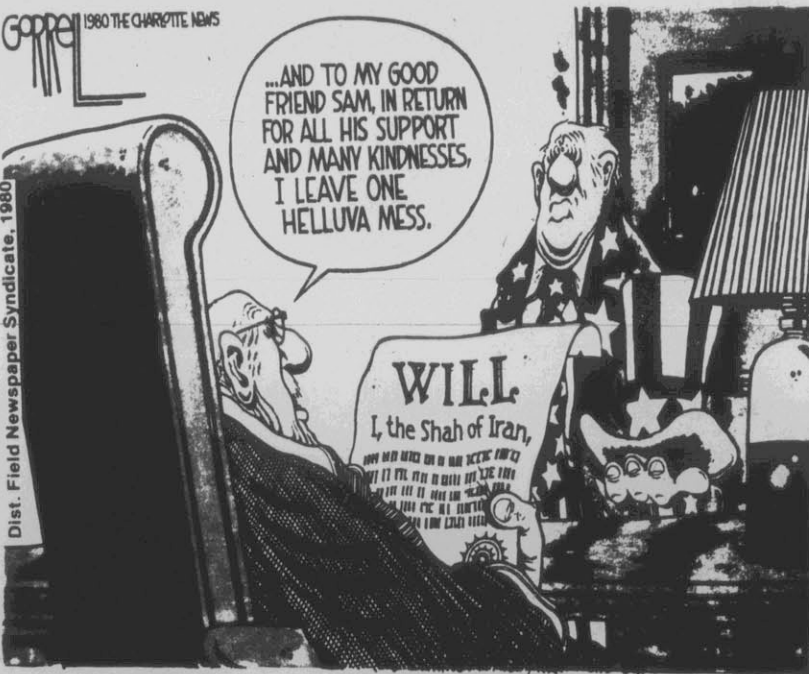

But the Parliament's confirmation of a prime minister and Cabinet will present the Carter administration with negotiating partners who at least can bargain with some confidence, since Khomeini has given them and Parliament a clear mandate to piece together a solution to the hostage puzzle.

Three major pieces of the puzzle have emerged:

—If it is issued with a U.S. stamp of approval, the report of the U.N. commission established to investigate the past American role in Iran could fulfill the demand of the revolutionaries for a public "apology" for alleged American crimes. The commissioners suspended their work last March 11 because they were barred from meeting with the hostages.

—The Iranians persist in their demand for what they call the "stolen" Pahlavi wealth. A New York lawsuit seeking $56.5 billion from the Pahlavis is pending. Some movement in this suit — perhaps coupled with a token conversion of Pahlavi property to Iranian government

Chinese Translator Aids U.S.

By JOHN BAUSMAN

Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS (AP)

— A U.S. trade show now in preparation to open in Peking this fall has prompted American companies to check out their image in China.

Businessmen hoping to strike it big in the huge Chinese market want to make sure their company names, slogans and product descriptions do not get snagged in the subtleties of Chinese semantics and symbolism.

An English name transcribed phonetically into Chinese can sometimes have an awkward meaning when one set of characters is used and a positive one when other characters with the same sound are picked.

One expert guarding against U.S. corporate blunders in Chinese is Chen-li Pang, a native of China now retired after 30 years as a United Nations translator. Last year he joined a translating firm, Euramerica Translations Inc., as director of their Chinese division.

Pang says his long career of translating with diplomatic exactness prepared him well for corporate work where a translation blunder can have hard consequences in terms of dollars and cents.

One case he handled involved a manufacturer of fabric-cutting machines. Its two-syllable name could be represented phonetically in Chinese by the characters for "plum" and "bright." The same sounds, however, could also be rendered by the characters for "beauty" and "speed" — a combination that both Pang and the company decided conveyed a better image.

"A good name can be a powerful persuader and make a big difference in a China marketing program," said Pang, who came to the United States as a student in 1944.

Born in Soochow near Shanghai, Pang originally planned a newspaper career but switched to the United Nations in 1949. The father of a son now at Columbia University, he lives in Tenafly, N.J.

Another firm that Pang advised was the well-known U.S. company, Mack Trucks Inc. Mack's bulldog symbol, conveying toughness and reliability, would have less impact in China where the dog does not necessarily enjoy the high regard it has in the United States, Pang said.

Luckily, the word Mack sounds about the same as the Chinese word for horse, giving Pang the idea of using an ancient Chinese proverb: "The value of a good horse is appreciated at the end of the longest journey." Thus ancient wisdom rather than bulldogs will promote the truck in China.

Another challenge was a construction company known by four initials, representing the last names of its founders. It discovered that duplicating the sound of its name required six clumsy Chinese characters.

Pang said he came up with a sound variation in four characters that included the Chinese words for iron or metal, birds or kites and two other words meaning "make their stride here." Since airport construction is an important part of the firm's business, the variation was deemed highly suitable.

The Chinese have a system for transliterating English names, Pang said, and this is useful for some companies. But the transliterations carry no second meaning, negative or positive.

Pang finds a more sophisticated technique is to select characters that sound like the company name and also convey a positive meaning. He cited the Chinese name for Coca Cola, used long before the Communist revolution in China and rechecked for validity after the firm re-entered the Chinese market, as the classic case of this sort of name: Ko (pleasing) K'ou (mouth) Ko (able) le (enjoy).

Klan-Nazi Trial Jury Set To Be Empaneled

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — An all-white jury of six men and six women was to be empaneled today for the trial of six Ku Klux Klansmen and American Nazis charged with murder in the shooting deaths of five communists last Nov. 3.

The presentation of testimony and evidence, including video tapes showing the violence at a "Death to the Klan" rally sponsored by the Communist Workers Party, was to begin once the jury formally was seated.

CWP members scheduled a demonstration near the courthouse this morning although Superior Court Judge James Long has banned demonstrations within 300 feet of the building.

the front porch and run a campaign. You have to communicate with people through the media...and the media people are critically important. But we can restore the parties role in the selection process."

That step, naturally, would remove the power vacuum, restore the parties, and remove the news media as power brokers.

Selection

Sanford, in his analysis, criticizes the party rule which specifies certain segments of society must be represented. Delegates should be freely selected at party meetings at the smallest district level possible well ahead of the national conventions. Those delegates should be free of commitment to any candidate; should represent all the people and not just some isolated segment; and should set about finding out all they can about the candidates so they can make a thoughtful, intelligent choice.

State primaries should be held in a short period, and be preferential only, and not binding upon delegates, Sanford believes. Candidates, then, should spend more time seeking to win convention delegates than to lead an early primary in which people never involved in the party process — even those from the opposing party in some states — decide who will be nominated.

Whatever reforms ultimately emerge, the most important part will be to restore the traditional political party responsibility in bringing together people of like persuasion so they can forcefully push candidates and ideas for conduct of government business.

Police security was expected to be tight, just as it was at the beginning of the jury selection process eight weeks ago. At that time, everyone entering the courtroom was searched.

It took seven weeks to select the jury, and court officials estimated the trial would run at least two months. Long has advised the jurors not to plan vacations in September.

This trial is the first growing out of the violence at the rally. In all 22 people have been indicted — 11 Klansmen and Nazis for five counts of murder and one count of felonious rioting each; six Klansmen and Nazis for rioting, and five CWP members or sympacontrol — might help satisfy this demand.

—Much of the Iranian leadership appears to favor a trial of the hostages as "spies." But a "trial" could mean many things, including a swift and painless judgment by Khomeini that they all are guilty and should be deported.

One U.S. official, who asked not to be named, said he was heartened by Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani's decision to accept the letter from the American congressmen. It suggests another avenue of negotiation — legislature to legislature, allowing the Iranians to avoid dealing with the man they have called the "satan" Carter.

As always, the biggest question mark is whether one faction in Iran's kaleidoscopic politics will choose to use the hostages as a weapon against another.

Bani-Sadr said last week that what is needed most is "to create an atmosphere where opinions can be exchanged freely."

thizers for rioting.

"This is only six of the 22 people who were indicted for all criminal activity on 3 November," District Attorney Michael Schlosser said. "This is not the end of it. It's not even the beginning of the end of it."

The CWP demonstration had been widely publicized, and several reporters and television cameras were present when a motorcade of Nazis and Klansmen drove through an assembly point for the rally.

On those television tapes, carloads of whites can be seen riding through a heckling crowd of blacks and whites at the communist-sponsored rally. In the gunfire that follows, four people are killed and another lies dying. Nine others are injured.

The rally was held in a predominantly black neighborhood, but residents of the area have disavowed any links with the CWP. Greensboro authorities have said there was no racial motivation in the violence, and blamed it on the political differences among the three extremists groups.

The tapes have been shown over and over to law enforcement officials and on commercial TV stations since the killings. They also are expected to be among the evidence to be presented at the trial.

The men on trial are Coleman Blair Pridmore, 36, and Lawrence Gene Morgan, 28, both of Lincolnton; Roland Wayne Wood, 34, and Jack Wilson Fowler, 27, both of Winston-Salem; Jerry Paul Smith, 32, of Maiden, and David Matthews, 24, of Newton.

Jaycee Audit Airs Odd Actions

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Auditors reported Sunday that former state Jaycee President Maurice H. Wilson of Charlotte used more than $30,000 of the organization's money to buy bank certificates in his own name.

Wilson repaid the money on July 29, one day before auditors met with a special Jaycees committee to discuss its report.

In a report released to a general Jaycee membership meeting, the firm of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. confirmed that $191,187 had been transferred from the tax-exempt N.C. Jaycee Foundation to the organization's general operating account since 1973.

Most of the money was raised through the sale of jelly, and was intended for use by the North Carolina Burn Center under construction in Chapel Hill. Jaycee members have said some of the money was used to pay national dues for fake members and chapters.

Wilson could not be reached for comment on the audit report Sunday.

In the report, auditors quoted Wilson, who is now board chairman of the state Jaycees, as saying he had transferred the money for safekeeping because he feared it would be seized as part of a pending lawsuit.

Wilson reportedly withdrew $38,625 from the charity foundation's savings account in April 1979 and bought a $38,000 bank certificate in the name of the foundation. He cashed the certificate in October, when interest was paid, and then bought a $39,818 certificate in his own name, the report said.

Wilson later exchanged that certificate for a $30,000 certificate in his own name and deposited the balance in his personal account in April 1980, the report said. In July, the report said, Wilson signed over the certificate to the foundation and paid the difference in cash.

The audit cited several bookkeeping irregularities and a failure by Jaycee officers to follow the organization's bylaws in the handling of money, including the use of three bank accounts that had not been authorized by directors.

John S. Lowery, the current state president, said after Sunday's closed meeting that the Jaycees had accepted the audit. He said the membership also had voted unanimously to repay all charitable money which might have been used for other purposes.

"Every dollar raised will be repaid," Lowery said. A special committee was appointed to develop a method of repaying the money, he said.

Some of the money already has been repaid. According to Jaycee sources Sunday, a total of $153,129 remains to be refunded.

Transfer of the funds was disclosed at a Jaycee meeting in May. After the meeting, several Jaycee members across the state said they had been pressured in recent years to expand their membership rosters, including the use of fake membership lists.

The Jaycees had claimed a membership of about 23,000 last spring, up from 11,500 in 1975, and had been scheduled to receive recognition at the U.S. Jaycees' national convention. That award, however, was canceled as the state Jaycees subsequently revised their membership list downward to show about 13,000 names.

Farmer Expenses Explain Why Profits Are Down

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
The latest figures on farmers' expenses continue to show why net profits will be down this year.
When the Agriculture Department issued its monthly report on farm commodity prices on July 31, the big news was that the index of prices farmers receive for a wide variety of products jumped 5.2 percent from June.

That was the biggest one-month increase in six years, according to USDA records.

Although important to farmers, recent increases in prices of many key commodities such as cattle, hogs, broilers, grain and soybeans still are overshadowed by the steady increases in production costs.

Those costs creep up virtually every month and sometimes go unnoticed because of the more dramatic swings up and down in the prices that farmers receive for what they produce.

In July, according to the preliminary figures, the index of prices farmers pay to meet expenses rose 0.7 percent. That is an overall expense index that includes "prices paid by farmers for commodities and services, interest, taxes and farm wage rates." Compared with a year earlier, the cost index was up 11 percent.

Meanwhile, the dramatic 5.2 percent gain in prices received by farmers still left the July index only even with what it averaged a year ago. For five months before July, the index had trailed year-earlier levels.

When farm production expenses are broken out of the overall expense index, those rose 1.1 percent in July, averaging 8.8 percent higher than a year ago.

Sifting through the production expenses still further, the report showed how rising costs in just two categories — "farm and motor supplies" and "fuels and energy" — have eaten into farmers' net profits the past year.

The index for farm and motor supplies rose 2.7 percent in July and averaged 18 percent higher than a year earlier. Fuels and energy prices rose only 0.3 percent from June but were up 36 percent from July 1979.

Here are some examples of how those important expense items have risen over the past year:

—Motor oil, an average of $3.69 a gallon as of July 15 and $2.67 a year earlier.

—Grease, a 14.5-ounce cartridge, 94.5 cents and 73.9 cents.

—Tractor tire, rear, 18.4x34, $370 and $315.

—Gasoline, leaded regular, delivered to farm in bulk, $1.18 per gallon and 91.9 cents.

—Diesel fuel, $1.01 per gallon and 72.2 cents.

—LP gas, bulk, delivered, 61.7 cents per gallon and 43.5 cents.

The report showed that the U.S. average for diesel fuel last month, at $1.01 a gallon, was the first time it topped $1 a gallon. Prices, on the average, also varied according to state.

Last month's average diesel prices were below $1 a gallon in only 16 states and then by no more than 6 cents, according to the report. Those were listed as: Alabama, Arkansas, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Utah and Washington.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Production of manufactured dairy commodities continues to exceed year-earlier levels by substantial margins, reflecting the rise in milk output in 1980.

The Agriculture Department said butter production in June was about 93.8 million pounds, up 13 percent from a year earlier. American-style cheese, at 223 million pounds, rose 6 percent.

Production of non-fat dry milk in June was shown at 133 million pounds, an increase of 18 percent from a year earlier, the department's Crop Reporting Board said in a recent monthly report.

WASHINGTON (AP) — An industry group, the National Meat Association, is among those supporting legislation to require the federal government to pay its bills on time.

Measures have been introduced in the House and Senate which would require all government agencies and federally subsidized state and local programs to pay an interest penalty of 1 percent to 2 percent a month for purchases not paid for within 30 days of delivery.

John Mohay, president of the association, said those are "very sensible" pieces of legislation and "there's no legitimate reason why the government should be exempt" from paying its bills on time like everyone else.

Mohay said the laggard habits of government bill-payers pose "a very serious problem" for the meat industry and others who supply goods and services to the government.

A recent study by the General Accounting Office showed that 39 percent of the government's bills were paid late.

"This clearly indicates the government is getting a free ride at business' expense," he said.

Hospital Team For Underloved

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — There's not a wonder drug in the world that will cure some of the languishing infants brought to St. Christopher's Hospital for Children.

Each month, three or four tiny patients are admitted for "failure to thrive." Doctors believe the infants are suffering physically from a lack of love.

The babies' symptoms include severe diarrhea and dehydration. They are smaller and lighter than the average tot. And some of them scream to be held, constantly.

St. Christopher's has formed a special team of nurses, social workers and therapists to provide the tender, loving care these infants need to survive and grow normally.

"The majority of the children we see suffer from undernourishment," said Dr. Jeremy Lichtman, pediatric consultant to the special medical team.

"But the other part of it — and this is controversial — is that probably in most cases there is a lack of stimulation, a lack of loving environment for the child's psychological development," he said.

Parents rarely withhold food from a child, but they may give their infants the wrong types of food, or the wrong amounts, said nurse Lynn Hudgins, another member of the failure-to-thrive team.

"Literally, some of these mothers may barely know how to comfort a crying child. The parents have to learn how to hold their child," she said.

But neglect alone does not explain these children's problems.

"Even when they are in the hospital and fed adequately, some do not grow right away," said Dr. Jennifer Rathbun, psychiatrist on a failure-to-thrive team at Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston.

One theory is that infant depression can shut down the pituitary gland, which releases a growth hormone.

"It is when they go from being a sad, sick baby to a happy interacting child that they begin to grow," she said.

For many children, that doesn't happen for years, a study has shown. So failure-to-thrive teams engage in prolonged outpatient work with families.

At Boston Children's, 90 percent of families have returned for follow-up discussion, Rathbun said. But in some cases, cooperation is a problem.

St. Christopher's received a 6-month-old baby with a bald spot on the back of his head that indicated the child had been picked up so rarely at home that his hair had worn thin, doctors said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices fell across a broad front today as an increase in the prime lending rate by a large New York bank helped continue the modest downturn that started late last week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 6.65 to 924.83 in the first two hours of trading. But part of that decline, 3.41 points, was the result of dividends paid by many of the 30 companies. That resulted in downward adjustments in the value of those stocks.

advances by a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange issues.

Just after trading began today, Chemical Bank raised its prime rate from 10 1/2 percent to 11 percent, a move that analysts said helped push stock prices lower amid speculation that interest rates in general were on the way up. It had been one of only two major banks to move the key rate below 11 percent.

Oil issues, which fell last week as some oil prices were cut due to large supplies, were active and lower. Occidental Petroleum dropped 1 1/4 to 25 1/4, Exxon lost 3/4 to 69 1/2, and Mobil was down 1 1/2 to 72.

American Telephone & Telegraph, the largest corporate borrower in the country and one sensitive to rising interest rates, lost 1/2 to 51 1/2.

Big Board volume totaled 17.54 million shares in the first two hours, compared to 23.06 million at the same point Friday, as the NYSE's composite index fell .58 to 68.86.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 3.71 at 310.01.

CP&L Reaches New Peak Of Power Use

Customers of Carolina Power & Light Co. reached a new peak in their demand for electricity on July 31 as usage rose to 5,955,000 kilowatts, according to Jerry W. Kirk, CP&L general manager of system operations.

Kirk said the new peak, reached between 4-5 p.m., surpassed the previous high peak demand on the system of 5,918,000 kilowatts set July 17. Before July, he added, the record peak demand was 5,907,000 kilowatts which occurred on Aug. 9, 1979.

CP&L serves more than 725,000 customers in a 30,000 square mile area of eastern North Carolina, the Pee Dee section of South Carolina and an area around Asheville in the North Carolina mountains.

Greenville Utilities applied recently to CP&L for service and received a commitment from the utility to serve Greenville as a wholesale customers. GUCO has formally notified Virginia Electric and Power Co. (Vepco) that, beginning May 1, 1981, the city will no longer purchase all its wholesale power from the Richmond-based utility.

Apparently Shot Three And Self

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston man described by relatives as "kind" and "sweet" was apparently prompted by a family argument to kill his wife, father and son-in-law and then himself, officials say.

Hugh Leon Tyner Jr., 40, was found dead early Saturday with a gunshot wound in the head, a sheriff's spokesman said. Police had been called by Tyner's stepdaughter, who said Tyner had abducted and tried to rape her after shooting the others.

Officials said the nature of the argument that apparently sparked the Friday shootings was unclear.

NIGHTLY SERVICES

Question Remains: Who Won?

'Boycott Olympics' Over

MOSCOW (AP) — The "Boycott Olympics" are over; the legions of athletes and militia which were its standard bearers are leaving the streets of Moscow. But, the question of which side won must await the judgment of history.

Out across the Soviet Union's 15 republics, which make up a quarter of the world's land mass, has gone the word that the socialist system has scored one of its greatest victories since the 1917 revolution.

Radio Moscow reported Sunday that the "100 percent Olympics" had "played out its great mission" as a "festival of youth and sports, not political intrigue."

The voice of the Kremlin added that "an American attempt to organize a widespread boycott failed" and intoned "the Olympic flame burns for all of us."

The propaganda message would have been much the same even if the United States and 35 other nations which followed President Carter's boycott call had been here. Millions of Soviets will believe that athletic superiority translates to superiority in all things, and at the same time believe the contradiction that sports and politics should not be mixed. These Games were for the Soviet Union, as much a national morale boost as an attempt to sway non-aligned countries to the socialist camp. The average Soviet citizen, standing in long lines to buy meat and fruit, needs tangible evidence that it is all worthwhile.

If one doesn't have the amenities of life, he may settle for space stations and sweeping athletic victories because it is the young who win in athletics and in its young, this country like all others, places its hope that the future will be better.

The Russians did not appear to mind the tremendous military security in Moscow during the Games. It may or may not have come across on Western television, but it was striking in its omnipresence. If the Olympics need this kind of security, then certainly they have outlived their purpose and usefulness.

With their all-time record, 80 gold and 197 total medals, the Soviets lay claim to world supremacy for an athletic system awesome in its scope and organization.

The fact that the Americans weren't here doesn't mean much to the average Russian. Interviews around Moscow before and during the Games showed that the boycott is seen as a silly, futile, gesture by the Russians, but also that they don't know much about — or question — their own country's military intervention in Afghanistan.

There is no doubt that national pride has been boosted, by the first Games ever held in a communist country. Even the Cuban sweep in boxing Saturday (six gold medals in 11 weight classes) adds to this because the Cubans are little brothers here. Fidel Castro has set up his nation's athletic system as a scale model of the Soviets'.

The success of the East Germans also is a powerful propaganda weapon for socialism. That country, much smaller than the USSR, also was ravaged by war 40 years ago, yet aside from the U.S. it is the only challenger to Soviet domination of Olympic sports.

Thus the Games, organized to bridge the barriers of nationalism, wind up entangled in international politics. The 1984 Summer Games in Los Angeles and the Winter Games in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, may face problems as unforeseeable as the ones that have plagued these Olympics.

That leaves the question: Did the boycott accomplish anything? It didn't get the Soviets out of Afghanistan. It did cut down sharply on the number of Western tourists bearing the hard currency that is so needed in the Soviet Union. And it cut to some extent worldwide television coverage.

The crowds were about the same as for other Olympics. They filled 103,000-seat Lenin Stadium for track and field. Boxing, gymnastics and swimming drew well. There are always empty seats at such sports as judo and team handball.

Russians complained they had trouble getting tickets to glamor events. This metropolitan area is about the same size as the New York area, and tickets would have been just as hard to come by there.

If the boycott was effective from the U.S. government's point of view, it will be with the allies who agreed, in many cases grudgingly, not to come to Moscow. Carter obviously hopes that a united front will deter further aggression. No one knows whether it will.

Detractors among communist nations say the Americans are so desperate to stop the advance of socialism that they use their own athletes as pawns in the arena of international politics. But the athletes, like the cosmonauts and astronauts, the wheat growers and the tractor manufacturers, the bureaucrats and politicians, have long been an inextricable part of the struggle anyway.

To say they are not is to miss the lesson of Moscow in the summer of 1980.

Bonnett Wakes, Wins 500

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Neil Bonnett awoke from a $100 nap just in time to win $35,175.

That was his take for holding off four stretch-run challengers to capture the $249,000 Talladega 500 Grand National stock car race by a car length Sunday, a week after he had won the Pocono 500 in Pennsylvania.

"I really wanted to win at home," said Bonnett, who lives in nearby Hueytown, Ala. "It was a hell of a race."

He led for the final three laps and, on the dash to the checkered flag, poured the gas to his Mercury to hold off Cale Yarborough, Dale Earnhardt, Benny Parsons and Harry Gant.

Yarborough got $20,625 for second place in the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing event.

"These close finishes are making me gray-headed," Bonnett said.

He disclosed that he had been fined $100 for missing a drivers' meeting prior to the race.

Why? "I thought the meeting was later, and I slept through it in a lounge chair. They woke me up and told me I had been fined $100, and I went back to sleep," he said.

When he awoke, he barely had time to jump over the pit wall and reach his car before his name was called during the pre-race introductions.

"I get awfully relaxed around a racetrack," Bonnett said.

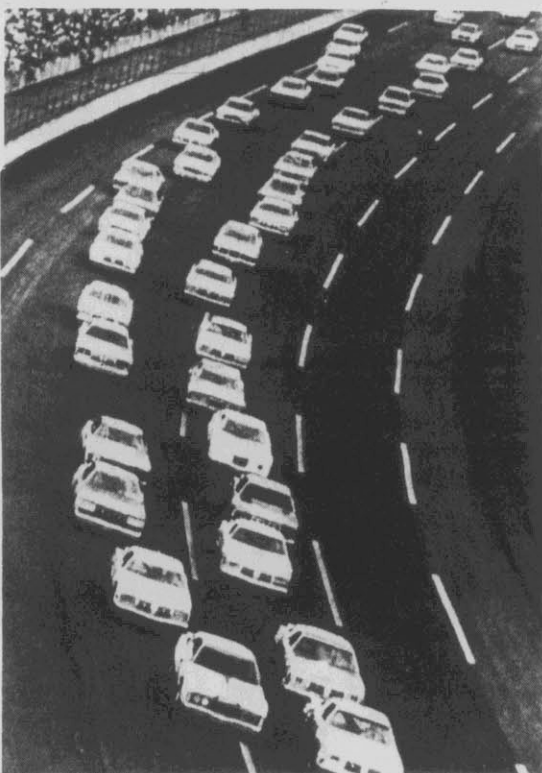

But as the race neared its end, there was no chance to relax.

"With four cars chasing me, the only thing to do was go to the outside of the track and give it all I could," he said.

"Neil was just a little stronger," Yarborough said. "At the end, it turned out that I wound up racing Dale and let Neil get away."

Parsons said, "Bonnett got us to racing each other and went off and left us."

Bonnett's winning average speed was 166.89 mph over the 2.66-mile trioval.

Tewell Edges Kite In Philly Classic

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — For a guy who was ready to give up golf for a new life last year, Doug Tewell has set some high standards for himself.

Tewell won the $45,000 first prize Sunday in the $250,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic by one stroke over veteran Tom Kite with a 12-under-par 272.

He was two strokes ahead of defending champion Lou Graham, Calvin Peete, Ben Crenshaw, Jack Renner and Fuzzy Zoeller, all with 274s.

"I'm trying to mold a career for myself like the standard set by Tom Watson," said Tewell, talking about his golf goals.

Watson is the current PGA tour's top money-winner with $387,725, and is third to Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino in career earnings.

Maybe Tewell, 30, a native of Louisiana who now resides in Edmond, Okla., can carve a Watson-like career, but he has a way to go.

His $45,000 first prize money boosted his season total to $152,392 and his career bankroll to $245,135.

He was 24th on the money list this year before his victory over the 6,687-yard Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course. He's not among the top 100 in career earnings.

True, he's only been on the tour five years, but he'll need a lot of Top 10 finishes to threaten the Watson types.

Tewell got a big boost in that direction with his second triumph on the tour this year. As a multiple winner he qualified for the World Series of Golf, Aug. 21, in which the winner's share is $100,000.

But now Tewell is concentrating on this week's PGA Championship at Rochester, N.Y. He said playing Whitemarsh was excellent practice since the course is narrow and puts the premium on accurate driving and finesse, the same as Oak Hill, site of the PGA.

Tewell wasn't unaware that his victory at Whitemarsh was in the rare category, since he made the cut by just two strokes, and was 10 behind the leader after those first 36 holes.

"I never thought about winning until I holed that 6-foot sidehill putt on 16 (Sunday)," he said. "I had been telling myself since the 15th to just trust myself."

"I had worked hard all week, scored well and didn't want to change anything," Tewell relaxed.

"With four cars chasing me, the only thing to do was go to the outside of the track and give it all I could," he said.

"Neil was just a little stronger," Yarborough said. "At the end, it turned out that I wound up racing Dale and let Neil get away."

Parsons said, "Bonnett got us to racing each other and went off and left us."

Bonnett's winning average speed was 166.89 mph over the 2.66-mile trioval.

Buddy Baker, the top qualifier at 198.545 mph in his Oldsmobile, led for 56 laps, compared with 52 for Bonnett. But car trouble forced Baker behind the wall after 60 of the 188 laps.

There was no way, Bonnett said later, for anyone to defeat Baker if his car had held up. Baker said, "If I ever had an advantage on the field, it was today."

The fast pace also took other favorites out of the race, including Bobby and Donnie

Snider, 3 Others, Inducted into Hall

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — When Duke Snider was one of the "Boys of Summer" for the Brooklyn Dodgers in the 1950s, he was always being compared to two other classy center fielders in New York — Willie Mays of the Giants and Mickey Mantle of the Yankees.

The so-called "Duke of Flatbush" had his hard-line partisans, as much as the other two, and now he has his place with Mays and Mantle in the Hall of Fame.

The silver-haired Snider was among four people inducted into the Hall Sunday. The others included, Al Kaline, a 3,000-hit man for the Detroit Tigers, oldtime slugger Chuck Klein and Tom Yawkey, the popular longtime owner of the Boston Red Sox.

Two teammates of Snider's, pitchers Ralph Branca and Carl Erskine, were among some 3,000 people at this baseball shrine who watched the onetime Brooklyn great thank former Dodger players, managers, the press and the fans for the honor.

In conjunction with the induction, Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn made reference to the three-sided argument that raged in New York during Snider's salad days.

Hunter Faces Ankle Surgery

CHENEY, Wash. — The Seattle Seahawks learned over the weekend that fullback Al Hunter will have to undergo surgery to repair nerve damage in an ankle.

Surgery on Hunter, a native of Greenville where he played at Rose High School, will be performed Tuesday in Seattle.

"It was one of the rare times Casey Stengel was laconic when he was asked who was the better of the three center fielders," Kuhn pointed out. "His answer was, he would take all three of them."

If Stengel had needed another outfielder, Kaline wouldn't have been a bad choice, either. Only the 10th player ever elected in his first year of eligibility, Kaline posted 3,007 hits in his five career years with the Tigers.

"This is the proudest moment of my life," said Kaline, who paid tribute to his wife, two sons, and father and mother who were in the audience.

Retired Detroit catcher Bill Freehan was the only Tiger teammate of Kaline's to attend the ceremonies in this bucolic community where baseball was supposedly invented in 1839.

Klein, the only man to collect 200 or more hits in his first six seasons, received the honor with his great nephew, Robert Klein, accepting for him.

"Entrance into the Hall means that Chuck will live on forever," said his great nephew.

Hall of Famer Ted Williams accepted the plaque for Yawkey, the late owner of the Red Sox.

"He was a man I loved," said Williams, "and a great sportsman. When I would sign a contract with him, he would always ask me if I was satisfied."

Also honored at the ceremonies were baseball writers Bob Broeg of the St. Louis Post Dispatch, Tommy Holmes of the Brooklyn Eagle and New York Herald Tribune and New York and San Francisco Giants broadcaster Russ Hodges. Both Holmes and Hodges are deceased.

Locals Whip Butler, 6-1, Advance In Babe Ruth

BUTLER, ALA. — Bobby Avery struck out eight and scattered six hits to help lead Eastern North Carolina to a 6-1 win over Butler Sunday in the 16-year-old National Babe Ruth tournament.

The win moves N.C. into the loser's bracket quarterfinals against Western North Carolina set for tonight at 6 o'clock. If the locals win they would play Tuesday at 6 p.m. in the loser's bracket semifinals.

Eastern North Carolina wasted little time in taking the lead Sunday, scoring twice in the opening inninc. Dixon Page and Crowell Pope singled to open the first inning and then Mitch Brann followed with a single to score Page. Pope later scored on an error.

The locals, after seeing Butler narrow the gap to 2-1, padded their lead with a three-run fifth. Paul MacMillan walked to lead off and moved all the way to third on an error and then scored on a wild pitch.

Avery singled, Bill Kittrell reached on a fielder's choice and Scott Galloway walked to load the bases. Page then reached on an error which scored both Avery and Kittrell and ENCLed, 5-1.

The locals final run of the game came in the sixth when MacMillan hit a solo homer.

Page and Brann had two hits for ENC.

As the 1980 football season draws near, the NCAA took a look back into the '70's, and found that East Carolina University played a prominent role in that decade.

The '70's opened with East Carolina's football fortunes on the floor. The team had suffered through a poor season, and the late Clarence Stasavich gave up his coaching duties to put his full attention to the ever-growing job of being athletic director. He had handled both duties prior to this.

In his stead, Mike McGee was hired to open the 1970 season as the new coach. McGee's team went through the year with a losing season, but even so, he departed to become the new coach at Duke, his alma mater.

Sonny Randle, who had been an assistant under McGee, was named to the head job, and after another losing effort in 1971, the Randle staff turned things around. For the next eight years, the remaining years of the '70's, East Carolina posted a winning record that included one visit to the Independence Bowl. Several other years saw them in consideration for bowl bids, too.

Randle moved on to his alma mater, Virginia, after the 1973 season, and that brought on Pat Dye, a former Alabama assistant. Dye remained until this past winter, when he left, moving on to Wyoming. Ed Emory was then named as the new coach.

Ironically, both McGee and Randle eventually lost their jobs at their alma maters.

According to the NCAA, East Carolina ranked 22nd among the Division I-A teams of the '70's, posting a 73-36-1 record, with a .668 percentage. Oklahoma, at 102-13-3 led the nation, followed by Alabama at 103-16-1, and Michigan at 96-16-3. Of the 21 ahead of ECU, four, Tennessee State, Central Michigan, Louisiana Tech and McNeese State, have been Division I-A members less than eight years.

The only other area team to make the top 36 teams was North Carolina, which landed in 32nd place with a 72-42-3 record.

Among regular season games only, and among teams which have been I-A throughout the decade, East Carolina is 20th with a 72-36-1 record. Michigan is first at 96-10-3. Carolina, again, is the only other area team in the top 25, placing 23. Maryland is 28th, N.C. State, 34th; Clemson, 55th, and South Carolina, 57th. A total of 62 teams played at least .500 ball during the era.

In some other areas, ECU was high. The Pirates were ninth in rushing offense over the ten years, averaging 259.2 yards a game. They were 24th in total offense with 358.8 (UNC was 18th at 265.7). The Pirates were 19th in scoring offense at 24.42 (UNC was 20 at 24.19).

Defensively, ECU was 19th in rushing, allowing 152.3 yards per game, 16th in total defense, giving up 282.0; and 21st in scoring, allowing 16.39 points. N.C. State ranked 12th in passing defense, giving up 117.3 per game.

East Carolina was 86th in attendance, averaging 17,967 at its home games during the decade.

All in all, it wasn't a bad ten years. May the next ten be even better.

Ali's Advice Helps Hearn's Win WBA Title

DETROIT (AP) — Thomas Hearn took some pre-fight advice from Muhammad Ali and it helped him win the World Boxing Association welterweight title Saturday night with a stunning second-round knockout of champion Pipino Cuevas.

"The champ told me to stick my left jab in his (Cuevas') face and hit him with the right," Hearn told a post-fight news conference, flanked by Ali and Hearn's mother.

"No matter how old he gets, I'll always believe in him," Hearn said, shaking Ali's hand.

Referee Stanley Christodoulou of South Africa stopped the fight 2:39 into the second round.

Hearn said he launched his winning flurry of punches as the shorter Cuevas moved in to attack.

"I hit him with a short overhand right as he was coming in. Then as he fell, I hit him with another right and a left hook," said Hearn, who reacted by leaping into the air and into trainer Emmanuel Steward's arms.

While Cuevas had expected Hearn to back away from him, the 21-year-old Detroit resident instead went after the Mexican from the opening bell.

Taking advantage of his 5½-inch reach, Hearn kept his jabs in Cuevas' face, hit him with rights and then backed out of the champion's reach.

A downcast Cuevas agreed. "The main thing was the right hand," he said through an interpreter.

Astros Back In First On Cedeno's HR

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

There's no place like home. Cesar Cedeno is looking forward to getting back to it. Don Robinson is still looking for it.

Cedeno hit a 10th-inning home run Sunday to propel Houston to a 3-2 victory over the New York Mets and back into first place in the National League West, one-half game ahead of Los Angeles. The Astros now head for a homestand in the Astrodome.

"We play much better at home in the Dome," said the 29-year-old Cedeno. "We have 60 games left, and how we do in those games will determine whether we win the West."

Robinson, meanwhile, couldn't find home in Pittsburgh. With the bases loaded in the sixth inning, the Pirates' pitcher walked his counterpart, San Diego's Bob Shirley, to force in the tie-breaking run as the Padres won 4-1 to complete a doubleheader sweep that dropped Pittsburgh two games behind first-place Montreal in the East. The Padres took the opener 5-2.

Elsewhere in the NL Sunday, Montreal edged Atlanta 6-5, St.

Louis beat Los Angeles 4-1, Philadelphia ripped Cincinnati 8-4 and, in another doubleheader, Chicago beat San Francisco 3-2 twice.

Cedeno had missed the Astros' first two games in New York — both losses — with a bad back. "I took 15 minutes of batting practice and felt that I could go," he said. "I punched two hits to right field earlier and felt pretty good."

One of them was a third-inning single that produced the Astros' first run. Then came the game-winning homer on a two-strike pitch from Jeff Reardon.

"In late innings or extra innings with the score tied, no matter what the count is, I try to drive the ball for extra bases at least," Cedeno said.

Padres 5-4, Pirates 2-1

In the first game, successive triples by Gene Richards and Ozzie Smith gave the Padres a first-inning run, Tim Flannery's bases-loaded single was worth a run in the fourth, then Smith singled, stole second and came home on Dave Winfield's double for the decisive run in the fifth inning. Winfield also scored in the fifth on a Willie Montanez single. John Curtis, meanwhile, scattered five Pirate hits.

"I feel good beating a team like Pittsburgh. To beat them you know you have to pitch well," Curtis said.

San Diego scored three runs in the sixth inning of the nightcap, wiping out Pittsburgh's 1-0 lead built on doubles by Willie Stargell and Bill Madlock.

Singles by Jerry Turner, Montanez and Bill Fahey tied it and Flannery's grounder moved the runners ahead, Robinson walked Dave Cash intentionally to get to the pitcher. But he also walked Shirley to force home the tie-breaking run. Grant Jackson then replaced Robinson and gave up Richards' run-scoring single. Smith's triple and Winfield's single wrapped up the Padres' scoring in the ninth.

Expos 6, Braves 5

Ellis Valentine saved one of his better games for his folks and friends, paying a visit to Montreal's Olympic Stadium. "I'd love to have them stay the rest of the summer," he said after hitting an RBI double and a two-run homer. "They've only seen me once since they came here last Sunday."

Andre Dawson was the Expos' other big gun with an RBI double and an infield hit just before Valentine homered as Montreal extended its winning streak to six games.

"I felt at the start of the season I could hit .300," Dawson said after raising his average to .312. "I'm just trying to go out there each day and utilize my God-given skill and ability to the fullest ... I want to maintain my average at .300. And if I do that the other things will fall into place."

Cardinals 4, Dodgers 1

Keith Hernandez's two-run homer and Silvio Martinez's seven-hitter dropped the Dodgers out of first place in the West after a one-day stay at the top. Tom Herr's single preceded Hernandez's homer that halted Burt Hooton's personal seven-game winning streak, then Herr's squeeze bunt wrapped up the Cardinals' scoring in the ninth.

Phillies 8, Reds 4

Rookie Lonnie Smith, who stole three bases, made the best use of veteran Pete Rose, scoring three runs.

"Pete's been telling me whenever I want to go, he'll take the pitch. He helps me out with what to expect from pitchers, too," said Smith. Two of Smith's thefts were followed by Rose's RBI singles.

One of them came in the Phillies' six-run fifth inning, climaxed by Bob Boone's three-run double.

Cubs 3-3, Giants 2-2

Two-run singles by Jerry Martin and Mike Krukow were the big hits in Chicago's sweep of the Giants — but Krukow also pitched a three-hitter in his opening-game triumph. He finished with a flourish, retiring San Francisco's final 15 batters.

After his hit in the second inning off Alan Ripley that gave the Cubs a 2-0 lead, he sacrificed to help build what proved to be the run on Ivan DeJesus' single in the fourth.

Martin's game-winning hit in the seventh inning of the nightcap wiped out the Giants' 2-1 lead. It followed Cliff Johnson's two-out single and Bill Buckner's double. Buckner also singled for a run in the first inning.

Putt Putt Roundup

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — When Donna Caponi Young's putter is hot, it's very, very hot. When it's cold ... well, it can be very, very cold.

And while Sandra Post probably feels like kissing her putter today, and most certainly her No.8 iron, Young must be wondering who put the kiss of death on her putter.

Post is $15,000 richer and the owner of her first 1980 LPGA championship after a dramatic, three-hole sudden death playoff victory over Young in the $100,000 West Virginia Classic Sunday.

But even Post acknowledges she wouldn't be back in the winner's circle if the putter that had kept Young in the lead for 52 holes of the 54-hole tournament hadn't suddenly turned into an instrument of frustration.

"You had to think it was over," said Post, referring to both the 18th hole and the first playoff hole. Young missed short, almost "gimme" putts on both holes that would have ended the match.

"But I never gave up," said Post. "You can't give up playing golf."

"All I needed was one putt ... and I just couldn't get it," said Young, who was visibly upset and refused to talk to reporters. She could have taken the LPGA's seasonal money lead away from Amy Alcott, who didn't play here, but instead had to settle for second-place money of $9,800.

Young, the tournament leader almost from the first hole of the first round, led for the first 16 holes Sunday, playing in the same threesome as Post. But the tournament took a sudden, unexpected turn on the par-4 17th hole when Young bogeyed the 375-yard hole and Post birdied by sinking a snaking, 8-foot sidehill putt that put both golfers at five-under-par for the tournament.

All Young had to do on the 18th hole was to sink what appeared to be an easy 2-footer for a birdie that would have ended the tournament. She didn't. The ball somehow skipped out of the hole, sending Post and Young off to what would be the longest playoff in the seven-year history of the Wheeling tournament.

Saturday's Cryptiquip — THE PASSENGER PIGEON NO LONGER FLIES HIGH ALOFT.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: A equals C

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKJ843 ♥9 ♦82 ♠A983
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
2 ♦ Pass 3 ♦ Pass
3 NT Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Since you have already shown a strong hand by jump rebidding your suit, now is the time to support partner's suit. Bid four clubs. Slam is a distinct possibility, and your forward-going bid of four clubs will alert partner to your ambitions.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J876 ♥A62 ♦762 ♠K72
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♦ Dble. Pass 1 ♦
Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Partner has shown a good hand by first doubling and then raising your suit freely. You have an ace and a king more than you need have had for your first response. However, your flat distribution is a slight drawback. Still, you owe partner one effort, and three spades is the logical try.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠642 ♥KQ10 ♦Q983 ♠Q65
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass
1 NT Dble. Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—You have fair defensive values and a hand that is not well suited to offense. Therefore, we would pass. True, in light of partner's original pass you should not expect to make a killing, but you ought to have reasonable chances of defeating the contract. If you do not, you probably would not fare too well in two diamonds, and at least you haven't doubled the opponents into game.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable,

as South you hold:
♦7 ♥AQ96 ♦109762 ♠A93
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♦ 2 ♦ ?
What action do you take?
A.—Your side certainly has the balance of power, but in view of your singleton spade, you might not have a playable game. However, it does appear that you have your vulnerable opponents on the hook. Your hand should develop four tricks on defense, and if partner can contribute three for his opening bid, you are looking at 500 points. Double.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ ♥K84 ♦J7 ♠AKJ1082
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass
1 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—You need to make some strong-sounding bid to describe your hand, and we cannot really fault you if you choose three clubs. However, your most likely game is three no trump, which, considering your tenaces, should be played from your side. Therefore, our choice would be a jump to two no trump. Your hand is, in fact, balanced and worth 19 points by any standards.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ9 ♥AQ862 ♦K1073 ♠A
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
What do you bid now?
A.—You have a difficult bid to make. Two diamonds runs the risk of being passed, but you are not quite strong enough to force to game by jump shifting to three diamonds. Perhaps the soundest course is the slightly unorthodox jump raise to three spades. Ideally, you want a fourth spade for that action, but in all other respects your hand measures up.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format.

Breakthrough Prospect Dim In Actors' Strike

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Striking actors were to return to the negotiating table with television and film producers today, but a union spokeswoman said chances for a breakthrough seemed slim.

The meeting — the first in almost two weeks — was called by federal mediators trying to resolve the dispute that has virtually shut down the $1.5 billion film-TV industry. Negotiations for a new three-year contract broke off two days after 60,000 members of the Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists walked out July 21.

The dispute revolves around actors' demands for compensation for home video cassette sales.

"We're not too optimistic about it, but it's better than not talking at all," said SAG spokeswoman Kim Fellner, who noted that a picketing demonstration was still planned for Tuesday at Twentieth Century-Fox studios.

The morning demonstration was expected to be similar to one on July 24 attended by up to 1,000 actors — including Loretta Swit, Walter Matthau, Burgess Meredith and Jack Klugman — at the Burbank Studios, the home of Warner Bros. and Columbia.

"We're expecting it to be rather large at the rate it's going," said Ms. Fellner. "Everyone was so enthused over the last one we started getting calls right away about when the next one will be."

Ms. Fellner said that some members of the American Federation of Musicians union were expected to join the actors on the picket line.

Nearly 5,000 musicians who score movies and filmed TV shows went on strike Friday after their contract expired. No new negotiations with producers are scheduled.

The actors' strike has stopped all filming except for a few movies where the producers have signed agreements to abide by the whatever new settlement is worked out.

Besides the home video share, actors are also seeking an immediate 35 percent hike in minimum pay scales — now $225 a day and $785 a week — that would stand for the duration of the three-year pact.

Light Shed On A TV Argument

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission recently ruled to lift some restraints from the burgeoning cable television industry, prompting the expected howls from the "free" television industry.

If nothing else, the FCC ruling illuminated the "sky is falling" argument against pay TV, revealing it to be nothing more than a smokescreen.

The commercial broadcasters have spent the past few years arguing that cable television's growth comes at the expense of local communities' good. The reasoning went something like this:

When cable TV entered a community, bringing with it new viewing alternatives, the local broadcasters lost viewers. Lost viewers meant lost revenue, lost revenue meant lower profits, and thus, less money to spend on local public interest programming.

A nifty argument, if you didn't get hung up on that part about less profit leading directly to less local public service. The prime time access rule, remember, was established to give local broadcaster more time for just such programming, and they promptly turned the extra time into the Chuck Barris hour.

The FCC saw that broadcasters were asking the commission to protect commercial broadcasting, presumably on the premise that commercial stations are the only ones that can serve the public interest.

The FCC decided that the public interest is served by the variety and freedom of choice that cable brings, and lifted two rules limiting cable TV — one rule limited the importation of distant signals, the other prohibited a cable operation from showing a syndicated program in a market where a local station owned rights to it.

What's amazing is that the FCC ever imposed those rules to begin with. The FCC isn't in the business of carrying broadcasting's hod.

The commission now seems to be in a general deregulation mood, one that doesn't hold to the premise that what's good for broadcasters is good for the community.

Andy Litsky of the National Cable Television Association says an FCC inquiry leading to its recent ruling showed that broadcasters' profits are not adversely affected by cable.

N.C. Hospital Rates Ranked Among Least Costly In Nation

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Hospital room rates in North Carolina are among the nation's least expensive, but room rates in South Carolina hospitals average even less.

An average semiprivate room in North Carolina cost $89 in January, up from $82 in July 1979, according to the Health Insurance Institute.

In South Carolina, the average charge was $80, up from $73 in July 1979.

Both are well below the national average of $127, based on January rates. The Health Insurance Association of America, which conducted the survey, said the $127 national figure is a 20.8 percent increase over two years.

The only states with cheaper rates for semiprivate rooms were Mississippi, at $65 in January, and Arkansas, with an average of $86.

Semiprivate room rates are used for comparisons among hospitals because most insurance policies will pay for semiprivate rooms but not for private.

A number of states have averages of more than $130 — twice the average in Mississippi. Those states include Alaska, $189; the District of Columbia, $170; California, $161; New York, $157; Michigan, $152; Massachusetts, $150; New Jersey, $145; Illinois, $143; Ohio, $139; Rhode Island, $138; Oregon, $134, and Pennsylvania, $133.

The cost of a room is only a small part of the cost of hospitalization, since tests, drugs, operating room charges, doctors' fees and other costs are additional.

Statewide averages also can be misleading, since individual hospitals have widely varying rates and increase rates at different times.

Duke University Medical Center in Durham, for instance, increased its rate in June to $189, making it the state's most expensive.

Other Carolina hospitals at the higher end of the rate scale include N.C. Memorial in Chapel Hill, $147; the Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston, $135, and North Carolina Baptist in Winston-Salem, $110.

That's in sharp contrast to such hospitals as Bladen County Hospital in Elizabethtown east of Lumberton, where a semiprivate room costs $55; Pungo District Hospital in Belhaven on the coast, $57.50; Brunswick County Hospital in Supply, $58; Sampson County Memorial Hospital in Clinton and Iredell Memorial Hospital in Statesville, $63; Davis Hospital in Statesville, $64.67; Cabarrus Memorial in Concord, $65.

Officials list the following reasons for why hospital rates in the Carolinas are less expensive than elsewhere:

— Staff salaries, construction costs and property tax is lower than in many other states.

— Carolina hospitals were pioneers in joint purchasing — the practice of several hospitals buying supplies together to save money — and other joint programs, including pooled specialized maintenance staffs for complex equipment and collection of overdue accounts through specialized collection agencies.

— Hospitals have long stressed productivity and use of computers to make sure the right number of staff members are on duty in the entire hospital and in specific departments.

Hospital officials also credit cost-cutting programs in both states, operated as part of a national volunteer effort to hold down hospital costs.

Nat'l Urban League Avers Black Vote Is 'Up For Grabs' In 1980

By LINDY WASHBURN Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Urban League has opened its 70th annual conference here with a warning to presidential candidates that "the black vote is up for grabs this year."

"The black vote that elected Jimmy Carter in 1976 isn't in anybody's pocket in 1980," League Executive Vice President John E. Jacob said Sunday to applause from many of the 15,000 delegates who will attend the week-long conference.

"We want to hear the candidates. But we also want the candidates to hear us," he said in a keynote speech urging four major presidential contenders — President Carter, Ronald Reagan, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and Rep. John Anderson — to pay attention to black problems.

Urban League President Vernon Jordan, in a taped address to delegates from his hospital bed, reminded them of his promise that "those pursuing the White House would have to come by here."

"... Kennedy is coming by here," he said, "Anderson is coming by here. Reagan is coming by here. Carter is coming by here. They're coming because this movement represents leadership, power, influence, and has roots deeply planted in the black community."

"They're coming because black people were decisive in 1976 and will be more decisive in 1980, if we turn out in record numbers."

Kennedy, D-Mass., and Anderson, the Illinois Republican running as an independent, were to address the conference today. Reagan, the Republican nominee, is to speak to the gathering Tuesday, and the president is scheduled to attend Wednesday.

Jordan urged conference participants to listen carefully to the candidates' messages, then "spread the word" to their communities.

Jordan, who was hospitalized here after a May 29 shooting attack by an unknown assailant in Fort Wayne, Ind., was unable to attend the conference. He

Youth To Face 'Killer' Charges

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 19-year-old Michigan man has been returned to California to face a murder charge stemming from one of the "Freeway Killer" slayings.

James M. Munro was booked into jail here Sunday pending arraignment today. The youth, arrested in Michigan on Thursday, was named in a warrant issued here for investigation of murder in connection with the strangulation of 18-year-old Steven Jay Wells of Downey, whose body was found June 3.

Munro is one of three men charged in the case dubbed the Freeway Killings. The bodies of 44 young men have been found dumped along Southern California freeways since December 1972.

downplayed the shooting as a "footnote in the National Urban League history" of service to the black community.

He is expected to be released from the hospital within a few weeks and back at his desk after Labor Day, according to Jacob, who is acting president in Jordan's absence.

Jacob said a recently released survey on black needs and attitudes conducted by the organization said that one out of four heads of black households was unemployed.

The survey also said that two out of three black households were "losing the battle against inflation."

Face Large Settlement

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Lloyd's of London may have to pay $300 million, the biggest settlement in shipping history, in a claim for improperly insulated tanks in three methane carriers built at a shipyard here, the insurance company says.

The proposed settlement calls for Lloyd's to pay $90 million as soon as an agreement is signed by various companies involved in litigation over the tankers, and $70 million a year for the next three years.

Lloyds, which provided insurance for construction risks, announced the settlement Friday. But neither Lloyd's nor any of the companies involved revealed who would get the money.

The three tankers were built at Avondale Shipyards of New Orleans Inc., but the aluminum tanks were built and their insulation installed by Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp.

Both companies have denied fault since the problem was discovered in July 1979. Avondale, a subsidiary of the New York-based Ogden Corp., has sued Kaiser for more than $95 million in damages. The suit also asks return of about $74 million in payments to Kaiser.

Cracks in the methane tanks' polyurethane coatings and in foam used to protect the tanker's hull were found during tests on the first ship built.

In its 1979 annual report, Kaiser said it believes the suit is without merit.

Avondale and El Paso Co. of Houston, which ordered the vessels, have also sued Conch LNG, the French designers of the ship's containment system.

VIOLATED ACCORDS
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union violated half the Helsinki human rights accord by occupying Afghanistan, the U.S.-Helsinki Commission says in a 269-page progress report.

VIEWS WITH CONCERN
WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger says he's disturbed by the "leisurely approach" he said President Carter seems to be taking to overcome U.S. military weakness in the Persian Gulf.

See Truman As Venting Frustration

HOUSTON (AP) — The historian who discovered personal papers in which President Harry Truman sketched plans for "all-out" war against the Soviet Union and China says Truman may simply have been venting his frustrations about the Korean War.

The late president's handwritten journal, apparently intended for his eyes only, twice threatened war against the two communist nations, said Rice University historian Francis Loewenheim.

"Truman's hot temper was well known in his lifetime, and ... cannot be discounted as a factor in his writing as he did," Loewenheim wrote. "His outpouring ... was a kind of catharsis. His feelings somewhat relieved, the president would try again, together with ... Secretary (of State) Dean Acheson, to bring about some kind of honorable, lasting peace in Korea," he said.

In the journal, Truman wrote that the Soviet Union had broken every post-World War II agreement it had made, was holding prisoners of war contrary to cease-fire terms and had kidnapped children in every country it had occupied.

"This program is evidently a continuing one. It must stop and stop now," he wrote. "This is the final chance for the Soviet government to decide whether it desires to survive or not ... This means all-out war."

There was no specific mention of using nuclear weapons.

The papers were uncovered by Loewenheim, custodian of Truman's papers, and were described in a copyright article by Loewenheim in Sunday's editions of the Houston Chronicle. Similar stories appeared in the Washington Post and the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner.

According to the Herald-Examiner, a number of Truman administration officials expressed surprise at the journal and said they had never heard Truman voice similar sentiments. They included Dean Rusk, then assistant secretary of state; Matthew Ridgway, then commander of U.N. Forces in Korea and Army Secretary Frank Pace Jr.

Loewenheim said the notes were part of an informal, intermittent journal that Truman kept while in the White House from April 1945 to January 1953. The Chronicle story quoted documents dated Jan. 27 and May 18, 1952.

Loewenheim said the journal was kept in Truman's personal records in the Truman Library at Independence, Mo., until some years after the former president's death in 1972.

The Jan. 27 memo read in part:

"It seems to me that the proper approach now would be an ultimatum with a 10-day expiration limit, informing Moscow that we intend to blockade the China coast from the Korean border to Indo-China, and that we intend to destroy every military base in Manchuria, including submarine bases, by means now in our control and if there is further interference, we shall eliminate any ports or cities necessary to accomplish our peaceful purposes.

"This means all-out war. It means that Moscow, St. Petersburg, Mukden, Vladivostok, Peking, Shanghai, Port Arthur, Dairen, Odessa, Stalingrad and every manufacturing plant in China and the Soviet Union will be eliminated."

The Art of Carpeting & Decor

by Larry C.
Whitlow

Art collectors often orient a whole room to a huge abstract canvas. Now, decorators can follow the same principle in a more modest way by devoting one wall of a room to something personal, dramatic or fun. Consider a blown-up poster or print, a paper mural or even ones own art work. Splash a super-graphic over the wall of an apartment or family room. This type of pop-art mural, in paper or vinyl, can be easily ordered. Another way of achieving the same effect is to mass personal photographs in a symmetrical wall arrangement. This, too, makes an interesting focal point for a room.

Let us at LARRY'S CARPETLAND INC., 3010 E. 10th St., 758-2300 help you decorate your rooms with wall coverings, window coverings and floor coverings. The service of our interior decorator, Sandra Thomas, is free when you use our products. Hours: Mon. thru Fri. 9 a.m.-5:30 p.m.; closed Sat. thru August.

HELPFUL HINT: Pad the walls of a small room with heavy, closely woven fabric to absorb sound.

Speaking of Your Health...

Mending Abdominal Aneurysm

During a routine examination, they found that my father had an aneurysm of the large blood vessel in his abdomen. He was operated on immediately and is now well. What could have caused this? My father was apparently a very healthy person. — Mrs. B.W., Va.

Dear Mrs. W.:

It's a testimonial to the perception and medical wisdom of your father's doctor that the diagnosis of abdominal aneurysm was so quickly made. Undoubtedly the early diagnosis, followed by immediate surgery, saved his life.

Actually, the aneurysm did not suddenly occur in a "healthy person." It probably had been progressing slowly and had not yet produced symptoms that would bring the condition to the attention of the doctor.

All blood vessels, especially the very large arteries, have delicate — but powerful — muscles in their inner lining. These muscles make the blood vessels dilate and contract to accommodate the amount of blood that is being pumped through them by the heart.

Occasionally, the muscle which lines the blood vessel becomes weakened. The pressure of blood being pumped through the vessel may produce a kind of bubble, or aneurysm, at the weakened spot. It resembles the type of large blister which sometimes appears on the inner tube of an automobile tire at the point where the rubber has become weakened.

Sometimes, aneurysms are associated with advanced arteriosclerosis. Injury, infection and even a congenital birth defect may be responsible for an aneurysm. These protrusions can occur in large blood vessels, and even in smaller ones in the brain.

The recognition of an aneurysm is made easier by the many brilliant angiogram studies that now can outline virtually every blood vessel in the body.

The surgical advances made in vascular surgery during the past 20 years is almost mind-boggling. Arteries with aneurysms can now be replaced with synthetic dacron sleeves. The surgery is now made possible by the ingenious cooperation of engineers, research workers, physicians and highly trained teams of cardio-vascular surgeons.

Our 12-year-old daughter has yellow discoloration of the teeth. The doctor feels that some antibiotic may have been responsible for this. Can anything be done about it? — Mrs. S.T., Calif.

Dear Mrs. T.:

In quite recent years, a new and very effective technique has been used for resurfacing discolored teeth. The procedure is a simple one. You will probably find a dentist in your own community who does this type of work.

ElectriCities President Is Elected

MYRTLE BEACH — Roy B. Culler Jr., mayor of High Point, was elected president of ElectriCities of North Carolina here Friday as the association of municipal electric systems began its two-day annual meeting.

ElectriCities, headquartered in Raleigh, was formed in 1965. Its association activities include participation in federal and state regulatory and legislative matters and other member services, including a statewide safety and training program for municipal electric utility personnel.

In addition, the staff provides management services for the three N.C. Municipal Power Agencies, composed of group of electric cities. They are acquiring ownership in major generating facilities owned by private power companies, and will eventually replace the private companies as power suppliers for their participating cities.
