Carter Sees More Jobs

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter, interrupted repeatedly by left-wing demonstrators, told leaders of the black community today he soon will propose an economic recovery plan he claimed would provide millions of jobs without reigniting the flames of inflation.

He also criticized Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan's tax cut plan as "sugar-coated poison" that would soak the poor while benefiting the wealthy, and would be so costly it could force elimination of many vital federal programs.

Carter's self-proclaimed "economic renewal program," would be the first major new domestic program the president has announced during his reelection campaign. Numerous other administration proposals, notably for overhaul of the welfare system, national health insurance and hospital cost containment, have been stalled in Congress throughout much of Carter's first term.

He said his plan, outlined in general terms, would "put millions and millions and millions of people back to work in new jobs, exciting jobs, stimulating jobs to make our nation greater, stronger and more secure."

Carter's speech before the National Urban League convention here was interrupted four times by demonstrators shouting slogans of the Communist Workers Party — the same group that interrupted a speech Tuesday by independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson with two egg-throwing incidents.

After the last of the protesters was hustled from the hall, Carter commented: "We have a lot of people trying to escape out of communist countries and come to our nation. You don't see many boats trying to escape from Key West (Fla.) and go to Cuba, though."

Carter sharpened his attack on Reagan's plan for a 30 percent, across-the-board cut in federal income taxes totaling an estimated $36 billion over three years.

One month ago, speaking to the National Education Association convention in Los Angeles, Carter called the GOP tax cut proposal a "classic offer of a free lunch" and said there is no such thing.

Today, the president said it "is even worse than a free lunch; it is sugar-coated poison."

Allen Huffs Over Jamacia

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Hurricane Allen unleashed 100-mph winds and torrential rains against Jamaica's eastern and northern coasts today and left much of Kingston powerless. Hours earlier, it gave Haiti's southwest peninsula a devastating sideswipe that officials feared would raise the death toll sharply from the 18 known victims in its sweep through the eastern Caribbean.

Allen passed within 10 to 20 miles of the Haitian coast Tuesday night. Officials feared widespread destruction and possibly heavy loss of life on Haiti's isolated Jacmel peninsula.

Miami, Fla., the closest major mainland point, is 575 miles north of Kingston. If the hurricane reaches the mainland, it is not expected to do so before early next week, according to forecasters.

Still packing 135-mph winds at the center, down from the 170-mph winds of the day before, Allen's center this morning passed within a few miles of Jamaica's north coast, an area lined with tourist hotels from Port Antonio in the east to Montego Bay in the west.

The National Weather Service said the center of Allen was located about 50 miles east of Montego Bay at 6 a.m. EDT. It said the storm should pass within 25 miles of Montego Bay by late morning, then head out to sea again on a path that would take it 50 miles north of Grand Cayman Island and south of the Isle of Pines off Cuba's south coast, and then into the Gulf of Mexico.

At that time, the weather service said, Allen's eye was just off Jamaica's north-central coast near latitude 18.6 north, 77.3

west, and was expected to continue moving west-northwest toward the Caymans at 20 mph.

It said hurricane force winds extended 55 miles north and 35 miles south, and that gale force winds extended 175 miles north and 100 miles south.

Dr. Jose A. Colon, director of the weather service in San Juan, Puerto Rico, said the eye of the storm was staying mostly over water, meaning the storm was more likely to maintain its strength and to intensify again when it moved away from land.

Correspondents for government-owned Radio Jamaica said there were as yet no known casualties in the northeast, but noted much of the area was cut off from telephone communications.

Jamaica's electric power authority announced in Kingston that it had shut off its generators before the height of the storm struck after midnight to protect its equipment, and power would probably remain off most of today, the radio reported.

Jamaican Prime Minister Michael Manley told his people he had asked for "God's blessing," and urged a massive evacuation of coastal areas as tides rose and heavy rain squalls built in advance of the storm's arrival.

Allen took at least 16 lives on the island of St. Lucia on Monday. At least two people were known dead in Haiti — in a boating accident near Port-au-Prince reported by ham radio operators who heard the SOS.

Haitian President Jean-Claude Duvalier declared the southwest peninsula a disaster area. A government spokesman said widespread damage and heavy loss of life was possible in the primitive area around Les Cayes near the peninsula's western tip.

Housing Shortage Is Farmville Board Topic

By CAROL TYLER
Reflector Staff Writer
FARMVILLE — Farmville citizens turned out for the Town Commissioners' meeting last night to talk about the town's housing shortage.

Housing, especially for middle- and upper-income people, is just not available, according to speakers Roger Adams, Ann McLaughley, Robert May, Joe Joyner, Ben Raeford, Alex Allen, Jim Lancaster, Rusty Duke, Wilton Duke and Jack McDavid.

Adams, who is personnel manager of the Collins and Aikman, a corporate citizen now expanding its Farmville operation, said he lives in Greenville as do 21 of C & A's 72 managers. Only 34 of the 72 live in Farmville, he said. The rest live as far away as Wilson and Macclesfield, wherever housing to fit their lifestyles and pocketbooks can be found.

Mrs. McLaughley, Farmville Economic Council Director, said she is hampered in her efforts to attract industry here, by the lack of housing in the $70,000 to $80,000 category. "Farmville does a super job in every other area — services, recreation, cultural arts, religious institutions," she said. "Then we hit housing. . . ." She said families being transferred to a new area want a comfortable house that does not need a lot of work done to it during the first year when the working members of the family are getting established in their new jobs. "If they have to move to another town, we usually never have them as the good citizens they would no doubt be. It's just too much trouble to uproot a family again."

Robert May, who heads the Planning Board of the town, said the town needs to change its water and sewer, street, and utilities installation policies to give investors some incentive to develop new housing. "The town must make a commitment," he said.

Joe Joyner, a local realtor, said, "We've been stifling ourselves for years with our restrictive policies." He said he personally has been involved with the development of three subdivisions over the years and every one has been more difficult to complete than the last. "I swore never again," he said, "and this will remain true, unless Farmville changes its policies."

Alex Allen said a survey of available lots should be made.

Jim Lancaster, a realtor, said, "We'd better start wining and dining real estate developers they way we've wined and dined industry. Let's study what other towns of comparable size have done."

Rusty Duke said present town policy is disincentive, not incentive for building and must be changed. Wilton Duke agreed, saying he did some building a few years ago, but has found it unappealing in recent years.

At present, the developer must pay total cost of streets, water and sewer, and other services and must pass these costs on to the buyers, making pricing unattractive.

McDavid said taxpayers shouldn't bear the burden for (Continued On Page 16) reminded of the trial Tuesday by a man who claimed to be a member of the Communist Workers Party and who threw a raw egg at Hunt.

Independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson also was singled out as a target of three egg throwers at two separate appearances.

In the first incident, the egg splattered on a table in front of Hunt during a meeting of the National Governor's Association.

The egg thrower screamed, "Free the Communist Workers Party. Free the CWP 5." The statement was an apparent reference to five persons arrested following a shootout in Greensboro, N.C., between right-wing extremists and members of the CWP that left five communists dead.

Six Klansmen and American Nazis are on trial in Greensboro on five counts of murder and one count of felonious rioting each in connection with the communists' deaths.

It was the second time Hunt had been confronted by the CWP. Two CWP activists, Dale Sampson and Nelson Johnson, interrupted one of Hunt's weekly news conferences in Raleigh, N.C., recently.

They shouted similar complaints, saying the slayings of the five CWP members were part of a government conspiracy.

After the incident Tuesday, Hunt said he was both surprised and angered by the attack. He said he was ready to help prosecute the man, who identified himself as Jose Calderon, 33, of Greeley, Colo.

Pitt School Board Okays Several Programs; Assistant

BY JILL ALLEN
Reflector Staff Writer

An Extended Day Program, a PSAT/SAT Improvement Plan and the naming of Sue Branch as assistant director of Title 1 for the 1980-81 school year were among topics approved yesterday by the Pitt County Board of Education.

Prior to the meeting, library-media personnel, principals, and other educators were present for the viewing of "The Winning Combination," a film concerning the Pitt County Library-Media program. The Pitt County program was recognized as one of the top two programs in North Carolina this past school year. Ms. Elsie Brumback, director of the Division of Educational Media Services, showed the film.

Pitt Community College and the Pitt County schools will be working together on the Extended Day Program. Assistant Superintendent Kathryn Lewis discussed arrangements in support of the program. "This program is for drop-outs or others who have special needs," she said, mentioning that this may be the best way for some students to complete their high school education.

Beginning August 1, Mrs. Irene Hanifer, director of the Pitt County Extended Program, will be relocated with her staff at Pitt Community College. Their function will be to take referrals of drop-outs and special needs students from the high schools and assist them in whatever their best "next step" in their education is.

Lewis also recommended grouping practices in grades 1-3 for each school. After discussions of board members, the topic was approved. "This represents the best thinking on the part of the principals," said Superintendent Ott Alford. "This is the best choice of what they think will work best."

George Laws, an energy control officer here, led discussions for a proposed Energy Assistance grant. No action will take place until further notice from the federal government. The county agrees to match 50 percent of the additional technical assistance grant of $9,050, but is requesting a "hardship grant" of 18 percent with the federal government matching the other 82 percent. The $9,050 will cover expenses for an engineer for the 14 county schools.

D.D. Garrett, president of the Pitt County Branch NAACP, addressed the board concerning deficiencies in the hiring of educators relating to students' poor performances. "The performances in Pitt County in educating children has been appalling," said Garrett, including that one of every four children leave school without graduating. He presented statistics comparing Pitt County white students' failures on the competency test with Pitt County Black failures which were much higher. He also made demands in support of Black teachers and Black children he thought would help improve student performances.

The statistics he presented were unlike those the board members said they were aware of. Chairman Mark Owens said he was not personally aware of discrimination against any student. The board felt action was unnecessary at this time.

Tom Craft, associate superintendent, reported a recommended lunch price for 1980-81. For the 1979-80 school year, prices were 45 cents for K-5 and 50 cents for 6-12. Approved lunch prices for 1980-81 after discussions were 50 cents for K-5 and 60 cents for 6-12. Adult prices will be $1.00. The board was concerned with the differentials of plate size, etc.

There are three actual different portion sizes, mainly in vegetables and breads.

High School Supervisor Tina Drye requested that instead of marshals being chosen only from the 11th grade, that they be selected on the basis of ninth and 10th grade averages from the first five marking periods plus the first semester exam of the 11th grade. Her suggestion was approved by the board.

She also presented a plan and supporting budget to increase students' test taking ability and awareness of PSAT/SAT requirements. The plan was divided in to four sections: 1) In-Service For Teachers — Reviewing of scores and data, 2) Student Assistance Plan and Time Line — Beginning with seventh grade — and in the eighth grade, students in the GT and STRATA programs will actually take the PSAT for practice, 3) Guidance Counselors' Responsibility for conducting and coordinating student study sessions, and 4) Research — a trial testing in the fall will be conducted for students who have registered to take the SAT. Test samples will provide Pitt County with information which will determine specific areas of students' strengths and weaknesses.

Two new positions have been okayed by the board — one at A.G. Cox and one at W.H. Robinson. Both are secretary/library-media aide positions.

TRUCK DRIVING SCHOOL?

I am interested in becoming a long-distance truck driver and would like to go to school and do it right. Where is the nearest reputable school? A. J.

The N. C. Truck Driver Training School is held in Raleigh by Johnston Technical Institute. Established in 1949 by N. C. State University, it is the oldest truck driving school in the country and is said to be one of the best. The course is six weeks in length and draws students from all over the nation.

The only prerequisites are that the student be at least 18 years old and be a licensed driver.

The cost for the course is $56. Plans are underway to construct a new school facility in Smithfield. For more information, call Johnston Technical Institute, 934-3051.

AT GROUND BREAKING PROGRAM — First District Congressman Walter Jones is shown speaking at ground breaking ceremonies yesterday for a $4.87 million recreation and housing complex for the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center here. Jones was a leader in efforts to secure the 90 percent federal grant — some $3.9 million — needed for the new facility, which will include a gymnasium, pool and other recreational facilities, and 40 semi-private rooms with bath, as well as four apartments. Other platform guests, behind the congressman, included: Deputy Secretary of Human Resources Tom Gilmore, State Sen. Vernon White, Assistant Director for Vocational Rehabilitation Services Bob Philbeck, vocational center director Howard Dawkins, Rev. Gene Adams, Rep. Sam Bundy, and EC Vocational Center president James H. Dupree.

Greenville Is Mailing Tax Notices

Floyd Little, city tax collector, reported this morning that his office is now mailing notices to local citizens for 1980 taxes.

Little said that the city taxes are due Sept. 1 but he reminded Greenville residents that a two percent discount is allowed for prepayments during August.

The total valuation bill for 1980 is some $390 million, he noted, and constitutes 18,000 bills. Total taxes due amount to $3,019,000, excluding corporate excess which will be billed at a later date.

Little urged citizens to pay their taxes early.

If Freezer Stops, Do What?

Homemaker's Haven

By Addie Gore
Pitt Home Agent

Have you thought about what you would do if your home freezer stopped running? If you haven't you should. If your freezer stops operating due to a lack of electrical power, you may or may not have advanced warning. If your freezer stops running because it is in need of repair, chances are you will have no advanced warning. So your best motto is "be prepared."

In advance you should find out about the nearest locker plant and try to locate a source of dry ice in the community. This information will be helpful in case you need services.

If you know in advance that power will be off in your house, set the freezer control at its coldest setting. Lower temperature of the freezer and food will delay thawing when the power actually goes off.

Try to find out how long it will be before the freezer will be operating again. This will determine exactly what you must do to save frozen food.

Here are some steps you can take to prevent food from spoiling:

1. Do not open the freezer door or lid while the freezer is not operating, except as a part of food-saving procedure.

2. If the freezer will not be operating for several days, move the food to a locker plant or another freezer.

3. If dry ice is put in the freezer soon after it goes off, 50 pounds should keep the temperature of food in a 20-cubic foot freezer below freezing for 4 days. If the freezer is only one-half or less full, it will remain below freezing for only 2 or 3 days. Care must be taken in handling dry ice. Use gloves to prevent burn. Do not place directly on packages. Place on cardboard on top of the packages or on shelves.

4. If absolutely necessary, the food can be canned.

HOW LONG WILL FOOD KEEP?

Try to estimate how long food will stay frozen. With the freezer closed, food will usually stay frozen in a fully loaded cabinet 2 days, and in a cabinet with less than half a load, not more than a day.

How long the food in your freezer will stay frozen depends on:

1. The amount of food in the freezer. A full freezer will stay cold many hours longer than a freezer only a quarter full.

2. The kind of food. A freezer full of meat will not warm up so fast as a freezer full of baked food.

3. The temperature of the food. The colder the food, the longer it will stay frozen.

4. The freezer itself. A well-insulated freezer will keep food frozen much longer than one with little insulation.

5. Size of freezer. The larger the freezer the longer the food will stay frozen—depending, of course, on the four factors listed above.

WHAT TO DO WITH FOOD IF IT THAWS

Sometimes, frozen foods are partially or completely thawed before you discover that the freezer is not operating. Partial thawing and refreezing does reduce the quality of foods particularly fruits, vegetables and prepared foods. Red meats are affected less than many other foods. Thawed ground meats, poultry and fish that have any off-color or off-odor should not be refrozen. You may safely refreeze foods that have thawed if they still contain ice crystals or if they are still cold (about 40 degrees Fahrenheit) and have been held at this temperature no longer than 1 or 2 days after thawing. Foods warmed to 40 degrees Fahrenheit or higher are not safe for refreezing.

Use care in preparing, packing and freezing food. The most sanitary you are in preparing food for the freezer, the better it will be able to withstand a stoppage of the freezer. Sanitary preparation means fewer bacteria to cause spoilage.

Bran Is In — In Bagels

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: My family is wild about the Jewish rye bread I bake from your recipe. Now they want me to make bagels. Have you a recipe I can try? — ADVENTUROUS.

DEAR ADVENTUROUS: Yes, but not for the Jewish kind. I've made bran bagels — bran now being "in" — and they're delicious. The recipe is not my invention, but I did add some technical details I hope will be helpful to new bakers. In addition, I decreased the sugar in the original recipe because, in my opinion, practically all bagels are too sweet. — C.B.

BRAN BAGELS

1 package dry yeast
1 cup warm water (105 to 115 degrees)
¼ cup butter, soft
1 teaspoon sugar
2 teaspoons salt
1 large egg
1½ cups 100 percent bran cereal
2½ to 2¾ cups all-purpose flour

In a cup dissolve yeast in ¼ cup of the water. In a large warm bowl stir together the remaining water, butter, sugar and salt; butter does not need to melt; whisk in until blended the yeast mixture and egg; stir in bran. Gradually stir in 2¼ cups flour; form into a ball; knead on a smooth surface, using as much of the remaining flour as necessary, until elastic — about 10 minutes. Place in a greased bowl; turn to grease top. Cover with saran and let rise in an 80-degree draft-free place about 1 hour — dough will not double in bulk. Shape into a 12-inch long roll; cut crosswise into 12 one-inch pieces; form each into a ball; with your thumb make a large hole (¾ to 1 inch) in the center of each and spread the dough to 2½ inches in diameter. Place 2 inches apart on an ungreased cookie sheet in a warm draft-free place until dough starts to rise, — about 20 minutes. Fill a 12-inch skillet about 2-3rds full of water and bring to a boil. Drop 6 bagels, one at a time, into the skillet. Simmer uncovered, turning once, for 2 to 3 minutes. With a slotted spoon remove to paper toweling to drain. Place 2 inches apart on a lightly greased cookie sheet. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until lightly browned and an inserted cake-tester comes out clean — 17 to 20 minutes. Remove to wire rack to cool. Good served warm, or cooled, split and toasted. Makes 12 three-inch bagels.

DEAR ABBY: My younger sister, who lives 1500 miles away, blurted out in a telephone conversation that after I had left home (some 20 years ago) our father had raped her! Abby, she knew I worshipped our father, and he adored me. I was his favorite. He has been dead for six years.

At first I felt sorry for my sister who has had to live with this terrible secret all these years. (Our mother still doesn't know.) Then I began to feel anger and resentment toward her for having told me. She made ashes of all my loving memories of my father. Now I'm asking myself, why did she suddenly decide to tell me? What good purpose did her telling serve?

MISERABLE

Mrs. Reaves Is Intern

Mrs. Josephine Reaves is spending the week serving as an Intern for Senior Citizens in the office of Sen. Robert Morgan in Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Reaves, who retired in 1969 from the Pitt County Schools for which she had long been a first grade teacher, has been involved in the Pitt County Senior Citizens movement from its conception under the Governor's Coordinating Council on Aging till now. She has help to organize more than 10 senior citizens clubs throughout the county. She has helped Pitt Countians to know what services and resources are available to them. She holds leadership roles at the county, district, state and national levels in several government, civic, social, fraternal and church organizations, according to a release from the Pitt County Council on Aging.

DEAR MISERABLE: Assuming that what your sister told you is true, the only possible good achieved by telling you was the relief she felt in getting it off her chest. She surely must have known that it would destroy all your loving memories of your father, so don't discount the possibility that she may still be suffering from sibling rivalry, and this is her way of getting even with you and your father. However, since your father is unable to defend himself, don't rule out the possibility that perhaps it never happened.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday my daughter asked me a question she's asked often: "Where's my daddy?" That's not easy to answer. I felt like saying, "He's probably in jail. Or dead from an overdose."

My daughter is 2½ years old, and she's seen her father a total of five times — three of which have been support hearings.

What do you tell a child when her father makes no move to see her or accept any responsibility for her?

How do you tell a child that her father uses drugs? And has been under the care of a psychiatrist, who told her mother if she stayed around much longer she'd probably end up dead from one of his beatings?

I realize that a 2½-year-old child is much too young to understand these things, but in the meantime, what do I say?

NORTH BEND, OHIO

DEAR NORTH BEND: You say, "Daddy is sick, and with God's help, I hope he gets well enough to be a good daddy to you." Period.

DEAR ABBY: Can you take one more letter about being "the other woman" in a married man's life?

We worked for a large company. I was 20, he was 29 when we became involved. It was to last 10 years. I told myself all the usual things — "He never promised me anything, we weren't hurting anyone, he really doesn't love his wife, he can't divorce her, blah, blah..."

He was smart, highly respected and went up the ladder in the company. He kept telling me I gave him incentive and peace of mind to make it possible. Then he got a big promotion that meant moving 2,000 miles away. Did he turn it down? Of course not!

A big testimonial farewell dinner was given in his honor. Naturally his wife was there. After hearing all the compliments and congratulations, he gave his speech. He told us all how much he owed to his wonderful wife. He took her hand and asked her to rise and share the honors. They looked adoringly at each other, then he took her in his arms and gave her a long and obviously affectionate kiss. Their children applauded.

Later on he said something to me about grabbing a plane every now and then to meet him somewhere. But it was all over. You see, I had never seen him with his wife, and it was my fantasy that they hardly spoke, let alone touched. He used to tell me that what we had was beautiful. It wasn't. All that sneaking around was cheap, tawdry and dishonest. Please print this. I want to carry it in my wallet.

Sharp knives are safer than dull ones because they need less pressure to work and have less chance of slipping. It's best to get into the habit of sharpening knives regularly with a sharpening stone, sharpening steel, or one of the new ceramic sharpening rods. The ceramic is super-hard and makes it easier and quicker to sharpen knives.

Untold Benefits Possible

Gov. Hunt was clearly ecstatic over General Electric plans for establishment of a micro-electronics center in the Research Triangle Park.

He was so happy over the development that he arranged for a satellite press conference from Denver where he was attending a meeting of the National Governors' Association. The hook-up cost $1,300 but Gov. Hunt felt it was worth it to share the official announcement.

The GE plant will hire about 160 highly trained people initially and is expected to employ over 500 persons in ten years. There are much larger industries in the state in terms of employment, of course, but the governor was excited over the location of the GE plant because it represents a potential breakthrough.

We haven't scratched the surface in the development and use of micro-electronics. All our lives are touched by computers. Soon they will be common place in handling production line tasks — and they will regulate our automobiles and households. It is, in all likelihood, the field which will give this country the great economic surge it needs for the remainder of this century.

North Carolina now has its foot in the door in the development of micro-electronics. Almost surely other similar industries will follow General Electric's lead in locating in North Carolina. It will mean highly technical jobs and relatively clean industry.

Small wonder, then that the governor was so pleased over the announcement. It could have untold benefits for North Carolina in the future.

First Hurricane Is With Us

The season's first hurricane, Allen, has hit the Barbados and moving westward.

Chances are good this particular hurricane won't affect our area, but it is a reminder that the hurricane season is here again.

We have been spared a devastating hurricane on the North Carolina coast in recent years but the storms can rip through Eastern North Carolina.

It pays to be alert to forming hurricanes to take proper precautions if the storms threaten our area.

THIS AFTERNOON Persuasion Is Key

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Perhaps the most difficult part of a hazardous waste disposal plan for North Carolina will be convincing people that keeping track of the material, hauling it, and burning — burying or storing it effectively — is critical to their health and economic well-being.

Gov. Jim Hunt obviously recognized the hot political potato he is handling when he recently established a Governor's Task Force on Waste Management, and commented, "I also want to emphasize that the task force will have the responsibility of developing a plan for educating and involving the general public in this process."

Educating and involving the public, judging from citizen resistance to transporting or disposing wastes in numerous communities across the state, must be a big and ongoing part of the task force work. The task force report is due at the first of next year, and will present the 1981 General Assembly some of its most controversial work.

A Plan

Actually, appointment of the Governor's Task Force is not the initial step in the process. Another task force, headed by Dr. Quentin Lindsey, has been at work for more than a year drawing up proposals and alternatives which will be acted upon by the more recent commission.

The over-riding policy consideration is just how deeply the state must get involved in the process. There are clear signs that given the militant opposition invariably accompanying the location of a disposal site in a community, the state will have to take charge.

Two important changes in state law would accompany this:

- State power to condemn property, buy it, and install a disposal operation despite local objection;
- An incentive plan to reward a community in which a disposal site is located; both to offset any loss suffered because other economic growth is hampered by that operation, and to provide an inducement to accepting the operation.

BILL NOBLITT

While state government is cooperating with Research Triangle Institute in development of an incinerator to burn hazardous wastes, questions remain: should there be one or two big incinerators, or smaller ones located closer to waste producers, or even on the site where the waste is produced; should the state own and operate a disposal facility, or should it use state powers to assist a private owner in setting one up?

Some members of the General Assembly, when they first learned of the proposal to reward a community for accepting a disposal facility, considered the step a bribe.

Read The Instructions

There are so many different kinds of clothes made of miracle fibers that one is hard put to remember the instructions on how to launder and clean them. Each new piece of clothing now comes with a long list of instructions explaining how the garment must be treated, plus many warnings about what will happen if the instructions are not adhered to.

One day I came home to find my wife washing my 45 percent alpazate, 25 percent pyrrmon, 30 percent cotton turtle-neck sweater. I was horrified to discover that she was washing it in warm lamb's milk, and you're washing it in warm lamb's milk.

"No," she said. "I read the instructions quite clearly. You wash it in warm lamb's water," I reminded her.

"Are you sure? It seems to me that there was a warning attached to the shirt that if you used distilled underground spring water, the colors would run."

"That applies only to shirts with French cuffs," I told her.

"Of course," she said. "What an idiot I am for not keeping it straight."

I started to put on a clean pair of socks. My large toe went right through the sock.

"What the blazes did you do with my socks?"

"Nothing. I put them in the washing machine, added virgin calf detergent, two tablespoons of chlorine, and a cup of epsom salts, according to the instructions sewn in the sock."

I read the instructions. "Did you set the washing machine at seven and a half revolutions per minute?"

"I tried to, but I had to hold it manually and my arm got tired," she confessed. "I guess at the end the machine was going nine revolutions per minute. But I figured it didn't matter."

I threw down the socks in disgust. "If I didn't matter, why would they sew the instructions into the sock?"

She started to sob. I felt bad and sad. "It's all right. I'll buy another pair of socks that can be washed at nine revolutions per minute. Well, I think I'll put on my hundred percent stay-pressed-forever seersucker suit."

I put on the pants. As I was inserting the belt, the legs, just below my hips, collapsed and fell to my ankles.

"What did you do to my suit?" I yelled.

"I had it dry-cleaned."

milk and then you rinse it out in cold."

"You're thinking about my hundred percent all-kozel undershirts. My turtle-neck sweater is just the opposite."

I was right, because as we were talking, the turtle-neck started to disintegrate before my eyes.

"That sweater cost me $12," I cried.

"I can't keep all these washing instructions straight," she said angrily.

"What are you going to do now?"

"I'm going to wash your 89-1/3 percent rogiflex wash-n-dry shirt."

"You have to use fresh essence of lime, mixed with distilled underground spring

Other Editors Say Brother's Keeper?

(Washington Daily News)

President Jimmy Carter must have asked himself a thousand times in recent hours "am I my brother's keeper?". And, if it should so happen that the president should conclude at any time that he is brother Billy's "keeper", then that very conclusion has more difficulties and more ramifications than we imagine.

We cannot believe as of now that the president had any part in the operations of brother Billy in the deal with officials of Libya. After all, this nation is one that certainly ought to look at Libya in terms of derision and detachment for what it has done to so many of its people. In simple terms, Libya should be an outcast in the eyes of real Americans.

We do not feel that the president is being blamed directly for what Billy has done. But has favoritism been shown to Billy by the president or by those around the president anywhere along the way?

The president cannot sit smugly in the White House and not answer that question fully and completely. He might think he can squeeze by with half an answer, but he cannot. He cannot hold to any measure of confidence by the American people if he holds to a position of non-interest in a matter the people and nation feel they have a direct interest.

The whole matter smells bad under the best of circumstances. If Billy has violated any law he should be prosecuted. If the president has tried to protect him anywhere along the way, then he will pay a high price.

Now President Carter faces a double-barrelled portion of public concern. As president he occupies another position. And let us not be deluded into thinking that either position is an easy place to be right now. We respect the office of president. We admire the very concept that Jimmy Carter loves his brother, Billy Carter. But the very image of a nation with many other problems is at stake right now, and as president of a great nation President Carter must act as president first, and brother next. We say this in no mean and no uncomplimentary way. But as president, he must seek to serve all the American people ahead of serving his beloved brother.

Billy Carter has been in too many positions indicating buffoonery. He never would have been heard of had not his brother not become president. Apparently he has used his brother's position to feather his own nest; and he might be doing a real good job of it.

The president might be his brother's keeper in the sense that any of us might be in relation to our own brother. But he is not his brother's mentor; and he is not his brother's protector.

Strength For Today

THE KING LOSES AND WINS

Frederick the Great, desiring a property bordering on his royal domain in Potsdam, first tried to purchase it, and when his subject refused to sell, confiscated it. When the king's subject sued, a court subsequently restored the property to him, with substantial damages.

A century passed, and Frederick's descendant, Frederick William, received a letter from the descendant of the property owner saying that he was now in need of money and would be glad to sell the property to the king. The king immediately wrote back: "My dear neighbor, the property must remain in your possession as long as one member of your family exists, for it belongs to the history of Prussia. I lament, however, that you are embarrassed for funds, and therefore send you 10,000 marks to arrange your affairs. Consider me always your affectionate neighbor, Frederick William."

Considering the rank and power of the men involved, here indeed is an example of good neighborliness. — Elisha Douglass

Reagan-Tilt For Precinct

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WALTHAM, Mass. — The overwhelmingly Democratic blue-collar voters in this Boston suburb, who gave Jimmy Carter a landslide over Gerald R. Ford in 1976, have not only turned against the president but have embraced the basic economic and defense policies of Ronald Reagan.

That is the inescapable conclusion from interviewing in precinct 7-1 just 10 days before the Democratic National Convention. It was selected for us by Patrick Caddell's Cambridge Survey Research as prototypical of blue-collar precincts that heavily supported Carter four years ago in one of his best states. Is it possible that such a Democratic stronghold in the only state won by George McGovern in 1972 could embrace the hero of the Republican right?

It is. Out of 79 registered voters interviewed in precinct 7-1, this was the outcome (in votes, not percentages): Reagan, 37; Carter, 12; Rep. John Anderson, 22; Ed Clark (Libertarian), 1; would not vote, 2; undecided, 5.

If Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie is substituted for Carter, Reagan's margin shrinks (Reagan 30, Muskie 26, Anderson 19). But that is still a shockingly poor Democratic performance among voters that include only 12 avowed Republicans. Nor can Anderson's independent candidacy be blamed; more of the 22 Anderson voters prefer Reagan to Carter in a two-man race.

Typical is the 47-year-old wife of a telephone lineman, a Democrat who backed Carter last time but prefers Reagan this time. "My problem is the cost of living," she told us. "Carter just hasn't done anything about it."

The 79 voters interviewed were even more pro-Carter in 1976 (69 percent) than the precinct at large (64 percent). When asked how they voted then, many voluntarily added, "Sorry to say," after saying Carter's name. The most frequently given reason by Carter-switchers for supporting Reagan was voiced by a 40-year-old nurse: "Just to get rid of Carter."

These voters give Carter a favorability rating of only 21 percent (compared to 67 percent for Reagan, 63 percent for Muskie, 53 percent for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and 46 percent for Anderson). But the upheaval in precinct 7-1 cannot be explained by Carterphobia that will dissipate once the Carter campaign paints Reagan as a missile-rattling warmonger.

That was shown by answers to questions prepared for us by Caddell: 3-to-1 supporting higher national defense spending; 3-to-1 favoring the Republican platform plank calling for "military superiority" over the Russians; 4-to-1 disagreement with the proposition that Reagan as president would bring nuclear war closer; 5-to-1 preference for Reagan over Carter in dealing with the Russians.

But it is not their sense of a diminished America in the world that most bothers these middle-income Americans. Unable to make ends meet while earning a higher salary than they ever dreamed possible (the precinct's median annual income: $19,500). These voters rate Reagan as poorest of the three candidates in ability to quickly end the recession (Anderson is, curiously, the highest by nearly 4-to-1). But it is not recession that worries precinct 7-1 today.

Asked to name the nation's two biggest problems, 47 voters mentioned inflation ("the economy" was second with 20 mentions; only seven named unemployment). By 6-to-1, these voters rate Reagan as more capable than Carter on inflation. By 4-to-1, they prefer him on taxation.

This contradicts Democratic certainty that Reagan is on the wrong political track calling for an immediate 10 percent "inflationary" tax cut. The opinion (Continued on page 5)

To the editor:

I found the letter, ad or whatever of Mr. Van Dale Hudson in the July 29 edition of "The Daily Reflector" most interesting. He went to great lengths to compliment Mrs. Greene and Mr. Gray for voting against the referendum or liquor by the drink. It is strange to me that Mr. Hudson did not comprehend that this was not a vote for or against liquor by the drink, but giving the citizens of Greenville the right to vote on the issue. By refusing the citizens this right, Mrs. Greene and Mr. Gray denied the right of those who are against the issue to vote. The people of Greenville like Mr. Hudson who are opposed to liquor by the drink have been refused their right to vote as they wish. To me, Mrs. Green and Mr. Gray did a great disservice to the citizens of Greenville by taking their right to vote for or against away.

Mrs. Greene and Mr. Gray were not elected to the Greenville City Council by Mr. Hudson or the members of Trinity Free Will Baptist Church alone, but by people of all faiths and by many with none at all. It may be that Mr. Hudson will have a lot of overtime work when the next City election comes up.

It Just Doesn't Pay To Save

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — It has been made to seem one of the deepest mysteries of personal finance, when in truth a pretty fair explanation of it could be provided by almost anyone who ever had a dollar bill in hand.

And yet, Congress has wrestled its way through thousands of pages of testimony about it and apparently still hasn't caught on, and it is joined in confusion and doubt by some otherwise sophisticated people.

The so-called mystery is why Americans, unlike Japanese and Europeans, seem unwilling to save. The answer is simply that it doesn't pay to save.

It doesn't pay because of (1) inflation, (2) poor yields, (3) lack of incentives, particularly tax incentives. Why save when inflation and taxes erode values faster than they are replaced by interest earned?

Some other reasons also are offered: High prices make it difficult to save, many households are unwilling to trim living standards, pensions and health insurance make people feel less dependent upon savings.

Whatever the reason, Americans have dropped their savings rate to below 4 percent, and seem likely to retain that rate until savings pay, either through inflation control, higher yields or tax incentives.

In other nations, one of the strongest incentives to saving is to link it to the desire to own a home. Those who save for the down payment on a house find themselves the recipient of various other benefits as well.

In West Germany, savers at building societies (equivalent to U.S. savings institutions) can earn 18 percent a year tax-free if, as agreed under a contract, their savings go to the purchase of a home.

The British government also sponsors a plan. Savers there agree to put away a certain sum regularly for five years, after which they're paid a government bonus equal to 14 months' savings. If the funds are left for two more years, the bonus is doubled. And yields are tax-free.

Australians buying their first homes received matching government grants of one-third to amount saved up to a maximum of $2,000. That is, a saver who accumulates $6,000 would have $8,000 for a downpayment.

Austria offers a plan to persons under age 25 in which the government pays a bonus of 17 percent a year. In France, those saving for a house receive tax-free bonuses. Other countries have similar plans.

The achievement of such plans is difficult to underestimate. Some countries have savings rates several times the size of the anemic U.S. rate, and they almost always surpass the U.S. norm of 6 percent.

Because they save, some of these nations face a less severe shortage of capital to invest in economic growth.

Perhaps even more important, they help solve another pressing problem, that of providing housing.

In the United States, however, millions of potential homebuyers are said to be lacking the wherewithal to buy. Unable to raise the money for a downpayment, they stand by while housing prices rise.

Because of inflation, taxes and low savings rates, many critics now fear that an entire generation of Americans may find itself unable to afford single-family dwellings — a disaster in the making.

It takes savings to make lending possible. With the savings rate stuck in the 4 percent range, half of what it has been in some years, savings institutions aren't likely to provide sufficient funds.

But why should people save when it doesn't pay to save? No mystery to that. The mystery is why it has been permitted and why so little is being done about it.

White Farmer's Death Threatens The Shaky Peace In Zimbabwe

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) — A top black nationalist politician questioned in the slaying of a white farmer was visited by police again today, a day after an armed standoff between security forces and guerrilla bodyguards.

Sources said Edgar Tekere, minister of manpower and the No. 3 man in Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's ruling Zimbabwe African National Union Party, agreed to voluntarily appear in court.

But Tekere did not show up by midmorning as scheduled, and Police Superintendent Jim Carse went instead to Tekere's house seeking a statement. The case threatens to mar the peace between Zimbabwe's blacks and whites.

Police surrounded

Tekere's high-walled house in St. Martin's Township, just south of the capital, on Tuesday night, and witnesses said about 10 vehicles, including armored cars, and 100 police agents were present.

During the two-hour standoff, with Tekere's bodyguards aiming at police, sources said, a police official talked with Tekere. The sources said his bodyguards handed over two Soviet AK-47 assault rifles in their possession, presumably for a police ballistics check, and were given in turn, two FN's, the NATO assault rifles used by police and military units in Zimbabwe.

Police left the scene, the sources said. Tekere and his bodyguards remained inside the house until just before dawn today, then left for another undisclosed location, the sources said.

The former white-minority-ruled rebel British colony of Rhodesia became the independent black-majority-ruled nation of Zimbabwe in April, after a truce in a bloody seven-year guerrilla war which saw 27,000 on both sides die. Mugabe, co-leader of the guerrilla alliance, was elected prime minister in British-sponsored elections in February.

Mugabe immediately moved to reassure the 230,000

white minority that his government wanted reconciliation and not revenge. And so far, except for isolated incidents of violence, most whites have stayed on.

But the questioning of Tekere, on the militant fringe of Mugabe's government, in the shooting death on Monday of white farmer Gerald William Adams, 68, was almost certain to cause second thoughts among whites.

of these voters on Reagan's tax proposal: 67 favor, eight oppose, four don't know. Their reasoning is simple, as expressed by a 51-year-old machinist switching from Carter to Reagan: "I sure could use the money."

Some voters who agree with Reagan's defense and tax positions oppose him anyway. A 35-year-old teacher told us, "I'm afraid of Reagan's kind of conservatism" and will support Anderson even while endorsing the tax cut and military superiority.

A few voters called Reagan too old, and some insisted that Carter be given another chance. But no avowed Reagan voters seemed receptive to the anti-tax cut, anti-military superiority campaign planned by the president once he emerges from Madison Square Garden. That suggests what is happening in Waltham's precinct 7-1 is not just another swing by supposedly volatile voters, but a basic revolution in American political attitudes.

Assembly because the present hodge-podge of state and federal law and splintered agency responsibility invariably keeps proceedings tied up in courts and hearings for months, as seen in the two-year impasse over PCB spilled alongside the state's highways.

Another problem inherent in developing a disposal plan in North Carolina is that other states face similar acute problems and the federal government has made no effort to help resolve the dilemma. Many state specialists fear that a working disposal facility in this state would be flooded with wastes from other states in short order.

This would prove especially troublesome by the location of a major burial facility at Barnwell, S.C. South Carolina officials have already told those in this state that if the incinerator is installed, they will bury the ashes at Barnwell, if North Carolina will burn the material.

New Recruiter Assigned Here

The Army's Raleigh District Recruiting Command announced the assignment of S.Sgt. Phillip Eugene Bazemore as a new recruiter to the Greenville area.

Bazemore, an 11-year Army veteran, will be working with the Army's Greenville recruiter at 326 Evans Street.

A Williamston native, Bazemore served in Vietnam and Germany and also had assignments at Ft. Bragg, Ft. Riley, Kan., and Ft. Sill, Okla. He served as a recruiter in Cleveland, Ohio before transferring to the Greenville area.

The new recruiter has received the Good Conduct Medal, the National Defense Service Ribbon, and the Gold Badge with Sapphire star, awarded to recruiters on the basis of the education level of enlistees.

"It didn't say so in the coat."

Judge Crater, Where Did You Go?

NEW YORK (AP) — Joseph Force Crater was declared dead in 1939. Police File 13595 was closed last year. But for five decades the question has remained—where did the state Supreme Court justice go?

Fifty years ago today, Crater left dinner with a lovely chorus girl and a friend, stepped into a cab and vanished to become one of the most famous missing persons cases in the nation's history.

During their 49-year investigation, police got 16,000 tips on the judge's whereabouts. Calls led them to all 50 states, Canada, Mexico, South America and Europe. He was "spotted" as a prospector in California, a steamship passenger in the Adriatic sea, a bingo game operator in Africa and a member of the French Foreign Legion.

The tips still come. If he is alive, the judge is 91.

The night of Aug. 6, 1930, was sultry. Crater had eaten dinner in a steakhouse on West 45th Street near Times Square with lawyer William Klein and Follies girl Sally Lou Ritz.

Dressed for the theater in a brown suit and gray spats, Crater bid his friends good bye, stepped into a cab and was never seen again.

A grand jury, after hearing 95 witnesses, concluded in 1930:

"The evidence is insufficient to warrant any expression of opinion as to whether Crater is alive or dead, as to whether he has absented himself voluntarily, or is a sufferer from disease in the nature of amnesia, or is the victim of a crime."

Emil K. Ellis, an attorney for the judge's wife, Stella, vainly sought to obtain $50,000 double indemnity for her on Crater's life insurance policies by seeking to have him declared a murder victim.

Mrs. Crater, whom the judge married after obtaining for her a divorce from her first husband in 1917, charged in 1937 that her husband could have been the victim of a political murder that police wouldn't touch.

Three days before his disappearance, Crater was vacationing with his wife in Belgrade Lakes, Maine. He got a telephone call from New York City and told his wife: "I've got to straighten those fellows out."

The day he disappeared, he had an assistant cash checks for him totalling $5,150. He went to the Arrow Theater Ticket Agency and reserved a seat at the Broadway show "Dancing Partners." Witnesses said he never showed up, but the ticket was used.

Mrs. Crater waited 10 days before reporting the disappearance, and the famous search for her husband began.

The theories multiplied among a dearth of clues.

Crater owed his judgeship to corrupt Tammany Hall politicians and his disappearance came shortly before the launching of a district attorney's inquiry into the reported sale of judgeships by Tammany.

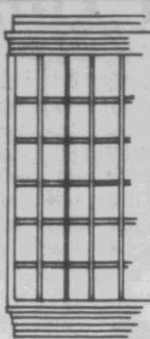

Speculation also had the judge, who was known to be fond of women, as the target of a $100,000 breach of promise suit by an expensively dressed woman he was said to have jilted.

Another unconfirmed theory came in 1956 from an former inmate of Sing Sing who said Crater was paid $5,000 through a "politically connected middleman" to guarantee an innocent verdict for an accused forger. The forger was convicted and his friends supposedly hustled Crater off to Philadelphia, shot him, soaked him in acid, and dumped the body in the Passaic River, according to that account.

There was one theory that suggested Crater himself wanted to spice his legacy.

For in a bureau drawer, among a number of checks and papers, was a long note written by the judge to his wife. It contained mostly personal information, including debts and assets. At the end, in the judge's handwriting, was an intriguing six-word sentence: "I am very weary. Love, Joe."

Det. Edward Gannon, one of the police investigators still assigned to the case when it was closed, says "very few" people still call with tips on the case.

Law Would Ban Searches

WASHINGTON (AP) - Law enforcement officials would be banned from making surprise searches of newsrooms under a bill approved by the Senate and sent to the House.

The measure, approved Tuesday on a voice vote, would require police to get a subpoena when they want information from the media that could be related to a crime. It would require advance warning of any searches.

The Senate bill and a broader measure now in the House come in the wake of a Supreme Court ruling two years ago that upheld a police raid against a Stanford University newspaper.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., sponsor of the Senate version, noted a recent police search of an Idaho television station and said he prefers the more lenient House version of the bill.

"It seems to me that there is no real reason for the police to search a newsroom from top to bottom" if a subpoena might result in the voluntary production of the requested information by a news organization, he said.

"Home Owned & Operated For Over 62 Years"

Seek To Shorten Long Lines

RALEIGH — With increased unemployment, action is being taken to shorten the lines at Job Services (Employment Security Commission) offices familiar throughout North Carolina during the 1975 recession.

A state spokesman for the commission notes that several changes have been made in an effort to shorten lines. Warren G. Wittmer, director of the commission's Unemployment Insurance Division, said that changes include installation of computer terminals in local office for handling claims and a mail-in system for distribution of checks.

"With the changes and what we think are improvements, we expect that the type of lines that existed in 1975 will be greatly diminished," Wittmer said. He added that in 1975 the commission was unprepared for the huge volume of claims generated by that year's recession. "It was unprecedented," he explained. "In just a short time, we went from paying 20,000 checks to 220,000 checks a week. The suddenness of it was a shock."

One major change in claims-handling since 1975 involves filing procedures for checks. In the past, claimants were required to file in person at Job Services offices each week for each week of unemployment claimed. Now, claimants can mail in claim forms and certification cards for each week of unemployment biweekly. Claimants still receive their checks by mail.

During June the commission issued about 78,000 checks per week. A year ago, the commission was issuing about 32,000 checks per week, Wittmer said.

Under a new computerized claim system, expected to be installed in most local offices by October, employment interviewers will be able to tell claimants almost instantly if they are eligible for benefits. Benefits range from $15 to $130 per week, depending on the person's wage history.

North Carolina currently has about $575 million in its unemployment insurance fund. On August 1, the commission will collect quarterly unemployment insurance taxes from the state's employers, boosting the level of the fund to about $625 million. "We feel our fund is sufficient to meet the demands of whatever comes up. But if we have another 1975 situation and it lasts as long as it did then, we're going to need every dollar," Wittmer commented.

The Unemployment Insurance Fund is financed entirely by employer taxes. Employers pay a payroll tax to North Carolina ranging from 1 percent to 5.7 percent, depending on their employment experience. The tax is paid on the first $6,000 earned by each employee per year. In addition, all employers pay 7 percent to the federal government to cover administrative costs.

More employers and employees are covered by unemployment insurance than ever before. Nearly every employer of one or more workers for at least 20 weeks must pay unemployment taxes. And the average number of workers covered by those employers was 2,250,344 in North Carolina during 1979, compared to only 1,345,55 in 1970. State and local government employees were the last major groups to be covered by unemployment insurance, in January, 1978.

To Attend Workshop

(ECU News Bureau)
Dr. William R. Hoots Jr., professor and chairman of Graphic Arts in East Carolina University's School of Technology, is one of 20 educators chosen nationally to attend a two weeks' series of technical workshops and demonstrations in the art of printing.

The Workshop for Graphic Arts Teachers is being held Aug. 4-25 at Pittsburgh, sponsored by the Graphic Arts Technical Foundation and the American Association of Printing Equipment Manufacturers Inc.

Hoots said the workshop sessions will focus on rapid changes, advances and "really remarkable developments" in printing technology.

CP&L Rates Will Rise

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — With power demand running at record levels and its nuclear generators out of operation, Carolina Power & Light Co. says its rates for residential customers are certain to go up.

"There will be a substantial increase in rates. I don't know how much," CP&L vice president Lynn W. Eury said Tuesday.

The increase in rates probably will come in November, when the next quarterly revision of fuel adjustment rates will be made by the state Utilities Commission.

That increase will come when many people are using even more power for heat, and probably will add several dollars to the monthly bill. A residential bill for 1,000 kilowatt-hours this month would be $46.54.

It cost CP&L an average of 90 cents to produce 1,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity from its Brunswick nuclear units last year. The Brunswick plant, however, has been out of use for most of the summer and CP&L has been buying much of its electricity from other utilities.

The result is that CP&L's purchases have made the cost of such electricity go to $4.50, according to the Utilities Commission's Public Staff. Fuel costs, by law, may be passed on to the consumer.

"It means the fuel cost is going way up and that's going to hit next winter when people are using a lot of power," said Dennis J. Nightingale, electric division director of the commission's Public Staff.

While CP&L's own production from nuclear power has gone from 36 percent of its total output to 8.4 percent last month, the utility's demand has soared. The company has set several records for peak demand this summer, and for the first time went over 6 million kilowatts Tuesday.

Palestinian Talks Appear Deadlocked

By SAMI RIZKALLAH
Associated Press Writer
CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt says Israel's refusal to consider Jerusalem as part of negotiations on Palestinian autonomy has stalemated the talks and they will not be resumed soon. But Israel was reported to have called Egypt's position the real obstacle to peace.

"There is no possibility for resuming the talks now unless Israel changes its position on Jerusalem," Egyptian Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Aly said Tuesday.

He spoke with reporters here hours after the Israeli government of Prime Minister Menachem Begin released a statement saying it was willing to discuss Jerusalem with Egypt but not within the context of the autonomy talks.

The talks were scheduled to resume this week in Alexandria, but were broken off — for the third time in three months — by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to show displeasure over Israel's new Jerusalem Law making the holy city the capital of the Jewish state. The law was passed by an overwhelming majority last Wednesday in the Knesset, the Israeli Parliament.

In a statement authorized by his government, Israeli Foreign Ministry spokesman Yoram Ben-Zeev told reporters the Jewish state stood by its longstanding refusal to include the 100,000 Arabs living in Jerusalem in a plan to give limited self-rule to more than 1 million Palestinians who live in occupied territories seized in the 1967 Mideast War.

Israel has maintained the Jerusalem Arabs, who make up about one-third of the population of the city holy to Jews, Arabs and Christians, would not be able to vote for a Palestinian council that would represent Arabs living in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

"Jerusalem is not part of the autonomy," Ben-Zeev said. But he added "All issues on all matters are subject to negotiation, because the idea is to overcome obstacles by negotiation."

Meanwhile, Begin and his Cabinet drafted a reply to a letter sent by Sadat last weekend. It was not made public but the Israeli newspaper Maariv reported today that the communique was a blunt rebuff that blamed Egypt for the talks' failure.

According to the newspaper, the letter said: "If Egypt complains that all West Bank (Jewish) settlement, and what Israel has done in Jerusalem are null and void ... and demands that they be removed and calls them an obstacle to peace ... then we say all their (Egyptian) demands are null and void ...

"Why is Egypt allowed to argue, as Sadat does, that East Jerusalem is Arab and you have to give it Arab sovereignty? Why is this not considered an obstacle to peace but Israel's position, which was never mentioned in any stages of the peace treaty, is considered an obstacle?"

In Cairo, Foreign Minister Aly reiterated Egypt's view that the Arab or eastern sector of Jerusalem was an integral part of the West Bank and should therefore be entitled to autonomy.

"East Jerusalem is part of the land occupied in 1967, and U.N. Security Council resolution 242 applies to it as it applies to all lands occupied by force," Aly said.

The council resolution, which is the basis for the U.S.-sponsored Camp David agreements which begat the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty and guides the stalled autonomy talks, calls on Israel to withdraw from Arab lands it occupied in the 1967 Mideast war.

Egypt's Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Butros Ghali held what Cairo press reports termed "urgent consultations" with James Leonard, the U.S. delegate to the autonomy negotiations who was said to be planning to fly soon to Israel on a mediation mission.

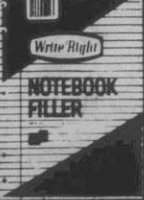

Meanwhile, former foreign minister Ismail Fahmy, who resigned in 1977 to protest Sadat's historic visit to Jerusalem, called the new Israeli law an "act of war" and called for a national referendum in Egypt to approve making the Arab-occupied eastern sector of Jerusalem the eternal capital of a future Palestinian state.

New Class Will Start

The Human Relations Development (HRD) Program at Pitt Community College is now taking applications for the next classes which will begin August 11. It is stressed that applications should be made as early as possible.

The program provides job orientation and motivation for the underemployed, unemployed, and recipients of public assistance (AFDC). Counseling is used to change negative attitudes toward employment, self-awareness and positive thinking and includes instruction in basic adult education. This program also assists in job placement and provides follow-up counseling.

Charles Dickens, HRD coordinator states, "There are no failures in our program. Although some participants may become more successful than others, no one absolutely fails." Dickens reports that this is especially encouraging for unemployed persons and recipients of public assistance (AFDC). "Rising living costs and falling employment possibilities make our goals very challenging to accomplish," he added.

Unemployed, underemployed and economically disadvantaged persons are eligible to apply. They must be committed to obtaining job skills and/or education which will help them achieve occupational goals.

The program offers opportunities in developing communication skills and skills related to the world of work through simulated job experiences, role playing, interviews, personal growth groups, and group discussions. Proper job attitudes, preparing job applications, seeking employment, and other areas of concern and assistance are not jeopardized in any way in terms of benefits received from public assistance. The program tends to enhance and motivate such individuals to become gainfully employed.

For enrollment information, call Pitt Community College (919) 756-3130 Ext. 255 from 8 AM to 5 PM Monday through Friday.

Trys Novel Way To Cross Water

DOVER, England (AP) — An American stuntman set out from Dover today in a bid to become the first person to swim the English Channel with his hands and feet tied.

Vietnam veteran Alan Jones, 33, of San Diego, Calif., said he hoped his daredevil feat would encourage young Americans to "expand their perception of human potential."

But an official of the Channel Swimming Association, which documents attempts across the famous waterway, described the swim as a mere publicity stunt. "We are not recognizing it," he said, adding that one reason was that Jones was wearing a wetsuit which aids buoyancy.

In the past, Jones claims, he has swum manacled, non-stop, for six days and plunged 35 feet into a pool full of deadly snakes.

When he gets back home, he said he plans to dive from a three-story building into 12 inches of water.

Blacks Give Reagan Mixed Reception

CHICAGO (AP) — Ronald Reagan's courtship of black voters is off to an uneven start after an angry shouting match with residents of a South Bronx ghetto and some words of praise from civil rights leader Jesse Jackson.

Reagan focused primarily on black voters Tuesday in his first campaign trip since winning the Republican presidential nomination for president. He spoke to the National Urban League convention in New York, took a tour of the South Bronx and had private meetings in Chicago with Jackson and editors of Ebony and Jet magazines.

Reagan also repudiated an endorsement several days earlier from the Ku Klux Klan, saying he just learned of the Klan's support Tuesday.

"I have no tolerance whatsoever for what the Klan represents and will have nothing to do with anything of that kind," Reagan said at a joint news conference with Jackson. "Indeed, I resent their even using my name."

Jackson praised Reagan for denouncing the Klan and said it was a "hopeful sign" for blacks that Reagan was making an effort to meet with them and win their support.

"Many Democrats think they don't have to work to get the black vote, and Republicans have tended to think that no matter how hard they work for it, they won't get it," Jackson said. "The emerging competition is in the national interest."

Tuesday's events were Reagan's last scheduled public appearances until after next week's Democratic National Convention. He is vacationing until then at his secluded Santa Barbara, Calif., ranch.

The trip to the South Bronx was intended to dramatize President Carter's failure to fulfill a promise three years ago to revitalize the area with a $1.5 billion redevelopment project.

But Reagan's attacks on Carter were overshadowed by a confrontation with a chanting, jeering crowd of about 100 black and Hispanic residents of the neighborhood of dilapidated brick tenements in rubble-strewn vacant lots.

Reagan's temper flared as a black woman heckler repeatedly interrupted his prepared criticisms of Carter with shouts of "What are you going to do?"

"I can't do a damn thing for you if I'm not elected," the former California governor shouted back.

"Stop talking and listen," he snapped after more interruptions.

"I am trying to tell you that I know now there is no government program or promise that a president can make, that a federal government can come in and wave a wand and do this," Reagan said.

Reagan fared better before the National Urban League convention, receiving a polite, but restrained response to a speech in which he discussed what he described as false "perceived barriers between my political beliefs and the aspirations of black Americans."

Reagan also unveiled his proposal to "reindustrialize the cities" with special tax breaks for persons locating job-creating businesses in economically depressed neighborhoods.

He received scattered applause about a dozen times in the 30-minute speech, far short of the tumultuous response for Democratic presidential challenger Edward M. Kennedy a day before. Reagan's attacks on Carter's economic policies were received in silence.

But Reagan said later he was "very pleased" with the reception. "I can say I probably would not expect an enthusiastic reception, but they were very courteous, and since then I've heard very favorable reports on it," he said.

Jackson said that while Reagan pointed out many problems facing black Americans, "pointing out problems is not the same as solving them."

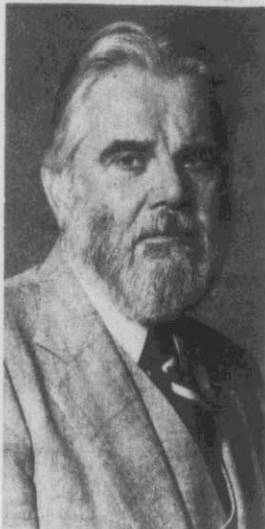

Jackson, president of the "Operation PUSH" self-help program for blacks, said he was disappointed at Reagan's failure to make any proposal for immediate help in eliminating unemployment. He also said he disagreed with Reagan's proposal for a lower minimum wage for teenagers without job skills to help them enter the job market, and he said he was troubled by the lack of blacks in high positions in Reagan's campaign.

But Jackson said the most important thing was that Reagan and GOP vice presidential candidate George Bush are actively seeking meetings with black leaders and making speeches before black groups.

School Adds Psychiatrist

Dr. Irvin L. Blose, a specialist in alcohol and drug abuse, has been appointed professor of psychiatry at the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

He has served as chief of alcohol and drug services at the Nebraska Psychiatric Institute.

Dr. IRVIN L. BLOSE

Blose has conducted laboratory and clinical studies on the effects of alcohol and chemical dependency on human behavior. He serves on a number of alcoholism study committees sponsored by national groups, including the American Medical Society, the Alcohol and Drug Problems Association of North Carolina and the National Council on Alcoholism.

Blose also is a pioneer in the use of closed-circuit television for teaching psychiatry and for providing psychiatric therapy and consultation.

Prior to joining the School of Medicine, Blose was associate professor of psychiatry and director of alcohol and chemical dependency services at the University of Nebraska Medical Center. He was director of the center's rehabilitation internship program and chief of psychiatry services at the Veterans Administration Hospital, Grand Island, Neb.

Blose also was psychiatric consultant to Glenwood State Hospital and School, Glenwood, Iowa, and the disability section of the

Ayden Rescue Recovers Victim

AYDEN — Members of the Ayden Rescue Squad recovered the body Tuesday night of a 24-year-old local man from Contentnea Creek.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said today that two companions of Victor Williams of 610 Woodcrest Drive reported that the three were wading in the creek near Camp Contentnea outside of Ayden when Williams got into deep water and went under.

The sheriff said that the two men told officers that Williams went under four times but they were not able to reach him before he disappeared the last time.

Sheriff Tyson, who said that his department's investigation is continuing, added that an autopsy was scheduled. Dr. Stan Harris, medical examiner, could not be reached this morning for a report on the autopsy.

The incident was reported to the Sheriff's Department at 4:58 p.m. Tuesday, the sheriff said.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service Forecast for Wednesday predicts showers for the Great Lakes Region, and sunny skies elsewhere. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
Thunderstorms reached from the Texas Panhandle to the mid-Mississippi Valley. In western Missouri, heavy thunderstorms and high winds damaged a mobile home park and pushed the Blackwater River over its banks.

High winds late Tuesday took the roof off a mobile home and slammed it into two other trailer homes on Kansas City's north side.

No one was injured, but the damage was estimated at between $12,000 and $14,000.

After torrential downpours Monday night and early Tuesday, late-night rain filled many west-central Missouri streams to capacity. And the Blackwater, some 60 miles west of Columbia, spilled over its banks, flooding nearby roads and fields.

Thunderstorms also were scattered over the Northeast and the middle Atlantic coast. Florida also had a few thundershowers.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 48 degrees in Cutbank, Mont., to 95 degrees in Blythe, Calif.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were expected to reach into the upper half of the Mississippi Valley into the lower Ohio Valley and western part of the lower Great Lakes. Wet weather also was in store for the Gulf Coast region, and parts of New England stood a chance of isolated showers.

Ted Looks For Running Mates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy says Sens. Robert C. Byrd and Henry M. Jackson, allies in his effort to unlock the Democratic National Convention, are both on his list of possible running mates.

Kennedy said he told Byrd and Jackson they were on that list during strategy meetings Tuesday on his drive for a convention rule that would unbind President Carter's majority of delegates.

But Kennedy said he did not offer either of them the vice presidential choice should he win the Democratic presidential nomination. He said he does not intend now to make that choice before the convention next week in New York City.

Other names Kennedy campaign sources have said are on that list are Vice President Walter F. Mondale, former Rep. Barbara Jordan of Texas, Gov. Robert Graham of Florida and Gov. Richard Lamm of Colorado.

Senate Democratic Leader Byrd of West Virginia refused to talk to reporters about his meeting with Kennedy. But Jackson, D-Wash., did not rule out the possibility of accepting the vice presidential nomination if it is offered.

"I am not a candidate for president or vice president at this time," Jackson said.

"That's the way we'll leave it."

Jackson also told reporters that he believes Kennedy would be a stronger Democratic candidate than President Carter against Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan.

"Being a non-incumbent, I would think he would have a better chance," Jackson said. "Yes, he would do better. But the problem is can he beat Reagan?"

Later, Jackson added: "I think he'll make a fighting candidate. People love a fighter."

But Kennedy and Jackson disagreed on the prospects for winning a convention rule that would free the delegates

Carter won in primaries and state meetings to now vote for anyone they wish.

Kennedy said contacts with delegates show "we have a sufficient vote" to unbind the delegates. But Jackson said "I've seen some surveys, and some will be coming out, that show we're fairly close."

Carter has some 300 more delegates than the 1,666 needed to win the nomination. Kennedy has 1,234 delegates.

Kennedy sidestepped the question when asked if he would support Carter if Carter wins the nomination.

"I've indicated that I believe the Democratic party has to stand for its traditional values and its traditional historical commitments to the senior citizens, the working people, the middle income people, the young," he said.

Garwood To Get Nixon Papers

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — In a victory for the defense, a military judge has ruled that at least one of former President Richard Nixon's presidential papers may be relevant to the court-martial of Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood.

Garwood, 34, is awaiting trial on charges that he deserted and collaborated with the enemy during nearly 14 years in Vietnam.

His lawyers have argued that charges should be dropped, saying the Nixon administration set down a policy of not prosecuting returning prisoners of war from Vietnam for alleged misconduct.

The defense sought testimony from Nixon and other former officials but they lost that effort when the judge ruled against Garwood's lawyers last week.

But on Tuesday, when pretrial proceedings in the case resumed, Judge Col. R.E. Switzer ruled that papers from one discussion by Nixon officials should be given to the defense.

That paper is now in the National Archives in Washington, and Switzer ruled that he would subpoena the material if necessary.

The defense uncovered the existence of the paper, which concerns a meeting before the mass release of POWs in 1973, when officials of the archives made a cursory check of Nixon's papers for material pertinent to the POW issue.

Defense lawyers won't know exactly what the meeting dealt with until they get the paper, so there is no guarantee it will help them argue their case for dropping the charges.

Defense lawyers said last week the paper may show Nixon was personally involved in setting a policy of not prosecuting POWs for misconduct.

In an unrelated development, the defense has asked for a full accounting of whether telephones used by the defense team and Garwood have been tapped by the government or whether the government has kept lists of numbers called from those phones.

Vaughan Taylor, one of the three defense lawyers, said Tuesday that his home phone in Charlottesville, Va., has been affected by "hanky panky" since the day after he first met Garwood. There has been clicking and buzzing on the line, he said.

"The clicking has never stopped. The phone company is unable to relate to me why it hasn't," Taylor said.

Capt. Werner Hellmer said the government began an inquiry into the possibility of wiretaps at the request of the defense several weeks ago. While that inquiry is not complete, he said, "to the best of my understanding there have been no wiretaps."

Hellmer and Taylor agreed to write a letter to the U.S. Justice Department asking for further inquiry into the possibility of phone surveillance but there was no indication how the Justice Department would react to the letter.

Taylor said Tuesday the defense has lined up 100 witnesses who may testify at the trial, and the defense is asking for a full list of potential witnesses from the prosecution.

Prosecutors already have given the defense 17 names of witnesses, but Taylor was worried the prosecution may be withholding the names of witnesses planned for late in the trial.

Hellmer indicated the prosecution plans a straightforward case based simply on the charges against Garwood, omitting any related issues, such as the dilemma a prisoner faced in deciding to cooperate with the enemy for survival or the morality of the Vietnam War itself.

"It's not complicated," Hellmer said.

"It's the government position that we don't need to call 50 or 100 witnesses to put on our case. We can put on our case with those 17 witnesses if that many," he added.

Farmville Mart Shows Gains

FARMVILLE — Some of the better grades of primings and lugs showed a gain on yesterday's sales on the Farmville Tobacco Market, according to Louis Williams, Sales Supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

Low grades of primings and nondescript grades remained unchanged. Top practical price paid for several sheets of good, clean lugs was as high as $1.65 per pound. Volume of sales was heavy, with primings and nondescript grades accounting for most of sales. Stabilization receipts accounted for 12.06 percent of gross sales. Receipts have declined for the last two sales days, Williams said.

The market sold 428,417 pounds for $535,619, for an average of $125.02 per hundred. To date, the market has sold 2,931,893 pounds for $3,576,679, for a season's average of $121.99.

development, but that, once the developer has paid the up front costs, there should be some method of partial reimbursement that would make it appealing for the provision of homes that would bring in new taxpayers.

According to Raeford, a member of the Snow Hill Town Board, in Snow Hill, 20 percent reimbursement is given to developers for water and sewer installation, 33 and a third percent on streets, curbing, etc., both at specified stages of development.

Mayor Linwood Mercer appointed a study committee composed of Bob Morgan, Joe Joyner, Van Lewis, Jim Lancaster, J. A. Wooten, and H. P. Norman. This committee is to meet with the Planning Board and bring back suggestions to the commissioners for ways to encourage development of housing in Farmville, he said.

Since there was some negative comment during a public hearing on zoning classification changes in the Marlboro area, the matter was sent back to the Planning Board by the Mayor.

The board approved:

- an agreement with the N. C. Department of Transportation for town maintenance of traffic control signals;
- a library board ordinance;
- a contract with Pitt County for the provision of an animal control officer to serve Farmville and its three-mile radius. The town will provide $17,000 per year toward this effort.
- conversion from mercury to sodium vapor lights on Wilson and Main streets for cost savings and more lumens.
- commendation of the utilities department employees who labored above and beyond the call of duty after Friday's storm.
- no parking on the south side of Bennett Street.
- elimination of the four-way stop at the corner of Home Avenue and Contentnea streets.
- one-way traffic on Jones Street and Ryon Drive Monday through Thursday during softball season and during other town activities at the town athletic park.

— the closing of Wright Drive between Acton and Perry street Saturday, Aug. 30, from 5:30 p. m. to midnight for a community party.

— the designation of two handicapped parking spaces in front of the First Baptist Church on Sundays only.

— an emergency fire aid pact between the Farmville Fire Department and other fire departments of the county.

— the bid of HESCO Inc. for the provision of electric distribution transformers — amount, $18,909.

— the bid of Rigby Electric for the provision of electric cable — amount, $8,964.20.

— the sale of a 1975 police car by sealed bids.

— an amendment that would move from outstanding purchase order from the Fiscal Year 1980 to the FY 81 budget.

CPA Vance Taylor presented the town audit. He said he found no discrepancies and some improvements in the town's record-keeping. He praised the town's decision to begin appraising various systems owned by the town. Many towns have not taken this step, he said.

The Board said it would not honor Alex Allen's request to be reimbursed for $1,956 worth of drainage work done in Middle Swamp. Allen told the board, after the decision was announced, that the whole southern end of Farmville is drained through Middle Swamp and that he "wonders at the wisdom of the town fathers' ignoring the responsibility of the town." Commissioner David Stowe, Allen's son-in-law, abstained from voting on the issue.

The board agreed that the town will not follow the state's new staggered motor vehicle registration system.

Even such is Time, which takes in trust
Our youth, our joys, and all we have,
And pays us but with age and dust,
Who, in the dark and silent grave,
When we have wandered all our ways,
Shuts up the story of our days.
Yet from this earth and grave, and dust,
The Lord shall raise them up I trust.

Watson, Nicklaus Set To Battle

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Tom Watson, five-time winner and British Open champion this year, may be the current tour leader but he hasn't yet reached the plateau of Jack Nicklaus, says fellow pro Lou Graham.

"Watson is winning more tournaments now, so he is the one to beat," said Graham, the 1975 U.S. Open winner, after a practice round Tuesday in preparation for the 62nd PGA Championship which starts Thursday. "Tom is a heck of a player, but Nicklaus has a heck of a record."

Watson has won four major professional tournaments, three British Opens and a Masters, compared to the 16 by Nicklaus, four U.S. Opens, three British Opens, five Masters and four PGA titles.

"Nicklaus was just awesome," said

Graham, winner of three tournaments in 1979 but whose play has been limited this year because of an injured back. "It got to a point where players would just stand around and watch him play."

Watson, who has won $387,725 this year which does not include the $59,000 from the British Open, said earlier this season his major goals this year were to win the U.S. Open and the PGA. Nicklaus won the U.S. Open at Baltusrol in June.

Watson and Nicklaus, along with Lee Trevino, are the favorites in the field of 150 seeking the $60,000 first prize over the par 70, 6,964-yard Oak Hill Country Club course here.

Montreal Batters Mets

Williams Wins 1,000th

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

Montreal Manager Dick Williams would like to savor his latest victory sometime in October. Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda would like to forget his latest setback as soon as possible.

"Either I'm real old or I've been with a lot of good ballclubs," Williams said after the Expos battered the New York Mets 11-5 Tuesday night for his 1,000th triumph, making him the 32nd major league manager to reach that figure. "I guess it's a combination of both."

Lasorda, on the other hand, was one out away from his 333rd victory when it suddenly turned into loss No. 264 as the Atlanta Braves rallied for five runs in the bottom of the ninth — all with two out, all unearned and the last, three coming on Glenn Hubbard's home run — to defeat the Dodgers 6-4.

"That game belonged to us," Lasorda said. "That's the kind you should pack away. You have a three-run lead and you get the first two outs in the ninth and you still let it get away. That's tough to take."

Gary Carter, Rodney Scott, Andre Dawson and Larry Parrish drove in two runs apiece in Montreal's victory, although New York's Doug Flynn tied a major league record with three triples. The Expos built an 8-1 lead after four innings, highlighted by Carter's two-run double in the third and Scott's two-run triple an inning later. Parrish contributed a two-run homer in the seventh.

Williams called his 1,000th victory "an individual honor, but it has nothing to do with what we're trying to do with our club here. Hopefully, I'll be able to cherish it after we win the playoffs and World Series."

The Expos have a three-game lead over Pittsburgh in the NL East. The Dodgers could have recaptured first place in the NL West. Instead, they still trail Houston by one-half game.

They built a 4-1 lead on pitcher Dave Goltz' two-run single and Rich Monday's two-run homer. But with two out in the ninth, Atlanta's Jeff Burroughs was safe on third baseman Ron Cey's fielding error. After Rick Sutcliffe walked pinch hitter Mike Lum, Charlie Spikes greeted Steve Howe with a run-scoring pinch-single, bringing on Don Stanhouse. Jerry Royster, the Braves' third consecutive pinch-hitter, singled home another run and Hubbard followed with his homer.

"I knew I hit the ball well," Hubbard said, "but the way Dusty (left fielder Baker) was going back I thought he had a chance to get it. I didn't go into my trot until I knew it was out."

Los Angeles first baseman Steve Garvey said the loss "could make our team mad, which has a tendency to make us come out blazing. But it really takes the wind out of your sails to lose one like this."

Giants 9, Astros 3

Mike Sadek drove in three runs and Darrell Evans scored three as the Giants overcame an early 3-1 deficit. Reliever Gary Lavelle pitched four innings to earn the victory. Sadek's RBI-single in the second inning tied the game 1-1. In the fourth, trailing 3-1, Houston's Gordy Pladson walked Evans, Rennie Stennett and Sadek consecutively and the Giants jumped on Joaquin Andujar for three singles, with pinch-hitter Max Venable and Bill North each driving a run across and Jack Clark adding a two-run hit for a 5-3 lead. They scored two more in the fifth on

Langford Starts, Ends 15th Straight

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Rick Langford completes games ... but George Brett is effective even when he doesn't.

Continuing to finish what he starts for the Oakland A's, Langford completed his 15th straight game with a three-hitter Tuesday night in a 3-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Brett, meanwhile, slugged a three-run homer and then tried to slug a pitcher in Kansas City's 6-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers. Brett's behavior triggered a bench-clearing brawl and got him ejected in the sixth inning.

The incident was sparked by some apparent brush-back pitches from Detroit starter Milt Wilcox that twice knocked Brett down.

"I didn't plan it out," said Brett. "He (Wilcox) had that look in his eye and I just reacted, that's all. I don't know if he threw at me intentionally or didn't. I did what I had to do."

Brett went after Wilcox after rounding first base as his fly ball was caught. The Tiger right-hander dropped his glove to meet Brett as both benches emptied. The melee consisted mostly of pushing and shoving and play was resumed after about eight minutes with no apparent injuries.

In other AL action, Texas routed New York 8-1; Cleveland trimmed Toronto 8-5; Boston defeated Milwaukee 3-1; Baltimore whipped Chicago 8-2 and California nipped Seattle 5-4.

Brett's 13th homer of the season—a blast that extended his hitting streak to 18 games—gave the Royals a 3-0 lead. The Royals finished up Wilcox with three more runs in the eighth on an RBI-triple by Willie Wilson and RBI-doubles by Hal McRae and Dave Chalk.

At Oakland, Langford, 11-9, was his usual consistent self, winning his seventh straight decision as the A's won for the eighth time in nine games.

The A's came from behind with two runs in the seventh inning, scoring on Jeff Cox's suicide squeeze bunt and an RBI-single by Jim Essian.

Two of the hits off Langford came in the fifth inning when Minnesota scored twice and took a 2-1 lead.

Then Jerry Koonsman, 9-10, walked Mario Guerrero to open the A's seventh and Mike Edwards sacrificed Guerrero to second. Dave McKay singled with Guerrero stopping at third before the A's pulled off their 11th successful suicide squeeze play of the season.

After Rickey Henderson was hit by a pitch, Essian singled for his third hit of the game to score McKay.

"Rick throws strikes and makes them hit a lot of ground balls," said Cox. "He keeps us on our toes. It's a pleasure to play behind him."

Rangers 8, Yankees 1

Mickey Rivers and Richie Zisk hit first-inning homers, triggering Ferguson Jenkins and Texas past New York. Rivers opened the game with his fourth homer of the season, and Bump Wills followed with a double. With one out, Buddy Bell singled off Tommy John, 15-5, to score Wills, and Zisk then hit his 15th homer to cap a four-run first inning.

Jenkins, 10-9, allowed 10 hits before needing Danny Darwin's last-out relief help. Jenkins struck out three and walked one, giving up New York's only run on Reggie Jackson's RBI-triple in the third.

Indians 8, Blue Jays 5

Ross Grimsley gained his third straight victory with Victor Cruz's relief help as Cleveland bunched nine singles and scored seven runs in the second and third innings to beat Toronto.

Grimsley, 3-0 since being acquired by Cleveland on July 11 from the Montreal Expos, yielded 12 Blue Jay hits and their five runs before being relieved by Cruz after a three-run homer by Barry Bonnell in the eighth.

Red Sox 3, Brewers 1

Dave Stapleton singled home the winning run in the eighth inning, sparking Boston over Milwaukee behind the clutch pitching of Dennis Eckersley and Tom Burgmeier.

After Eckersley worked out of a none-out, two-on jam in the top of the eighth, the Red Sox bounced back in their half for their fourth straight victory. After Stapleton singled home the tie-breaking run, another scored on Fred Lynn's infield hit and an error by second baseman Paul Molitor.

Eckersley, 7-10, allowed seven hits before needing Burgmeier's ninth-inning relief help.

Orioles 8, White Sox 2

Terry Crowley hit a grand-slam home run and Steve Stone posted his 17th victory as Baltimore defeated Chicago. Crowley connected for his fifth homer of the season off Lamarr Hoyt, 4-1, in the Baltimore fifth, following a bases-loaded single by John Lowenstein.

Stone, who leads the AL in victories, allowed six hits before being relieved by Dennis Martinez at the start of the eighth. Stone, 17-4, has a 19-2 record in Baltimore's Memorial Stadium since joining the Orioles last season.

Angels 5, Mariners 4

Jason Thompson's RBI-single with two out in the eighth inning capped a two-run California rally as the Angels beat Seattle and extended the Mariners' losing streak to 11 games, equaling a club record.

Seattle had taken a 4-3 lead in the sixth on a two-run single by Marc Hill.

The loss was the second straight for Maury Wills, the new manager of the Mariners.

Stan Floyd of USA crosses the finish line in the 100-meter dash ahead of Carl Lewis and Mel Lattany at the Golden Gala Track and Field meet held in Rome Tuesday. (AP Laserphoto)

Americans Beat 3 'Gold' Marks

ROME (AP) — American track and field athletes, who boycotted the Olympics, enjoyed a modest consolation prize by beating Moscow gold medal performances in three events at an international meet.

The Golden Gala meet Tuesday night came just two days after the end of the Olympics and was billed as a chance for representatives of boycott countries to show what they could do against the Olympians.

"We all want to prove ourselves to athletes in each country—around the world," said U.S. high jumper Nat Page.

Page finished fourth in his event behind a West German sweep led by Dietmar Moegenburg, who cleared 7 feet, 6¾ inches.

But Americans Edwin Moses in the 400-meter hurdles, Stan Floyd in the 100-meter dash and Ben Plucknett in the discus throw all bettered the marks that had won Olympic gold.

Moses, who holds the world record of 47.13 seconds in his event, ran a slow 48.51 and said afterward he felt "ragged" from lack of practice. His time was still almost a fifth of a second faster than the 48.70 that triumphed in Moscow for East German Volker Beck.

"I definitely expected to win if I'd been in Moscow," Moses said. "My result here was better than the Olympic final, so what else can I say?"

Moses led an American sweep. James Walker was second in 48.82 and David Lee was third in 49.67.

Floyd also led a U.S. sweep in the 100 meters, where he is unbeaten this year. He was clocked in 10.20 seconds, setting a new record for the Olympic Stadium here. Carl Lewis placed second in 10.23 and Mel Lattany was third in 10.25.

Alan Wells won the Moscow race in 10.25.

Plucknett upset fellow American Mac Wilkins in the discus, 219-9¾ to 218-6. Plucknett surpassed Viktor Rashchupkin's victorious throw in Moscow of 218-7½.

While the Americans were beating Olympic times and distances, the West Germans defeated two Olympic champions who were present and competing.

Karl-Hans Riehm won the hammer throw with a mark of 265-0¼. That beat the 264-3 here of Soviet gold medalist Yuri Sedykh, although it fell short of his Moscow world record throw of 268-4.

In the 400-meter run, West German Harald Schmid set a personal record of 45.17 seconds to win. Olympic champion Viktor Markin of the Soviet Union wasthird with 46.02.

Five Olympic champions, including two Soviet women and three Italians, managed to win their events.

Soviet Vera Komisova shaved 0.17 second off her own gold medal time to win the 100-meter hurdles. Tatyana Kazankina ran a slow 3.58.94 in the 1,500 meters but overtook early leader Mary Decker of the U.S. to win.

Dave Concepcion homered and Ken Griffey and Dan Driessen drove in two runs apiece for Cincinnati. Meanwhile, Paul Moskau kept the Padres scoreless until the sixth inning. By defeating the Padres for the third time in two nights, the third-place Reds closed within 2½ games of the top in the NL West.

Cubs 10, Pirates 31

Jerry Martin hit two home runs and drove in four runs and Cliff Johnson and Bill Buckner each collected three hits, including solo homers, as Chicago handed the world champion Pirates their sixth consecutive defeat. Martin's 18th homer, a three-run shot in the third inning, followed singles by Buckner and Johnson and came off John Candelaria. Johnson hit his fifth homer with two out in the fifth and Martin hit Candelaria's next pitch for his 19th home run, tying his career high.

OSU's Bruce Not Feeling Pressure

NEW YORK (AP) — Pressure, says Earle Bruce, isn't replacing an Ohio State coaching legend named Woody Hayes.

Pressure, says Bruce, is coaching at football-mad Massillon, Ohio, High School, in 1964-65 "where I didn't sleep three days a week."

As he prepares for his second season as Hayes' successor, imported from Iowa State after short-fused Woody punched a Clemson player in the 1978 Gator Bowl, Bruce seems to have shrugged off the yoke of being Woody Hayes' successor.

And if he goes 11-0 again, as he did during the 1979 regular season, the time may not be too far off when folks will be wondering who that white-haired old guy in the black baseball cap was who preceded Earle Bruce as coach of the Buckeyes.

Although he still has an office on campus, Hayes has stayed in the background where Ohio State football is concerned, although for 28 years, with a 205-61-10 record, he was Ohio State football.

"From what I gather, he wanted it to be Earle Bruce's show," an appreciative Bruce said Tuesday as the annual NCAA-ABC college football promotion tour zipped through New York. "He said the right things and made the transition very easy when he could have made it very difficult."

Even though a 17-16 loss to Southern Cal in the Rose Bowl cost the No. 1-ranked Buckeyes a possible national championship, the 1979 campaign was a relatively pressure-free one once people stopped comparing Bruce to Hayes.

"If I were afraid of pressure I wouldn't have come to Ohio State," Bruce said. "I tried to stop talking about that after the first game. I said I'd rather not discuss that any more, it's been hashed over long enough."

"I didn't realize there would be all that pressure, but it finally dawned on me around the first game that there'd be a lot more pressure than I anticipated. But I guess it wore off as the season wore on."

"During the season, I couldn't believe how everything broke right. We came from behind to win some early games and there were no problems off the field. Everybody just thought about one thing — playing football."

There wasn't one complaint from a player during the season and that's unusual."

For 1980, Bruce's Buckeyes are being touted as possible national championship caliber.

14 Inducted Into College Hall Of Fame

KINGS MILLS, Ohio (AP) — Mike Holovak, a head coach for nine years at Boston College and a former head coach and general manager for the Boston Patriots of the National Football League, was among 14 players and coaches inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame.

The other living players and coaches inducted into the Hall included Howard Cassady, Ohio State; John Latner, Notre Dame; Agostine Lio, Georgetown; Dick Maegle, Rice; Edward McGinley, Pennsylvania; Thomas Scott, Virginia; Vernon Smith, Georgia; Herman Wedemeyer, St. Marys, and Coach John Vaught of Mississippi.

Ernie Davis of Syracuse, Joe Donchss of Pittsburgh and Ernest "Pug" Rentner of Northwestern were inducted posthumously, as was Washington State Cach O.E. "Babe" Hollingbery.

On The Green

Watson, Nicklaus...

the exception of Masters champion Seve Ballesteros of Spain who was given one of seven special invitations but declined, according to Frank Card, PGA president.

Card said Ballesteros, who was disqualified in the U.S. Open when he showed up late for his tee time, and Sandy Lyle of England, who also had a special invitation, could not get out of commitments to play in the European Players Championship. Lyle is defending champion there.

Card said both notified the PGA in the spring that they could not play in the Championship.

He also said Isao Aoki of Japan, who finished in second place behind Nicklaus in the U.S. Open, also could not accept the PGA invitation.

Those accepting were three Americans, Arnold Palmer, Billy Casper and Gene Littler, and Tohru Nakamura of Japan.

David Graham, defending PGA champion, said the Oak Hill course "is magnificent. There are near perfect tees, fairways and greens. It is very difficult and yet very fair. It will reward the straight hitter and the good long and middle iron player."

Graham, no relative of Lou Graham, said the Oak Hill course is not unlike Oakland Hills in Detroit, where he won the championship a year ago in a playoff with Ben Crenshaw, "but it will play differently. I can't see anybody tearing up the golf course."

"The rough last year was very questionable and the greens putted only about 60 per cent speed," he said. "This course is tougher because of the rough and the fastness of the greens. They already have the grass cut on the greens to tournament speed. And if you get in the rough, forget it. If you do hit it bad off the tee, you have to be content to hit it 70 or 80 yards."

Clemson Halfback Ready For Season

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Cliff Austin feels he is in good enough physical shape this year to have a shot at doing what injuries prevented last year — winning a starting spot at running back for Clemson.

Perhaps more important that Austin's physical well-being, however, is his mental attitude.

The 6-foot, 190-pound Scotsdale, Ga., native admits it took him longer to recover mentally from the injury he suffered after his freshman year than it did to get his body back in shape.

Austin had a strong freshman season for the Tigers two years ago that included four touchdowns, including the winning score against Ohio State in the Gator Bowl. He was looking forward to the possibility of starting during the 1979-80 season.

But Austin tore leg ligaments in spring drills last year and was redshirted so he could have three more years of eligibility.

"I was on a special program for a long time. They gave me a bunch of special exercises and whirlpool treatment. Then I started lifting weights of, like, about, 10 pounds twice a day."

"It was real slow work," Austin says.

"I was scared to get hit. ... It hampered my comeback more than anything wrong with my knee. My head kept me from getting better sooner."

Trainers said he was ready to play last fall, but Austin's worries and the arrival of freshman sensation Chuck McSwain caused coaches to sideline him.

"I was so frustrated I almost quit," Austin recalls.

"I didn't have enough patience. The guys talked to me and so did the coaches, especially the coaches. They gave me a lot of help and it upped my confidence."

"But it was up to me to shake it and get back in shape."

Practice this spring was the beginning of the 20-year-old's comeback attempt. He says, "I wanted to show to myself that I was able to play again — and I did. I think I'm in better shape now than I was and I'm ready to play."

Dennis Eckersley

A Refreshing Change Among Highly-Paid Pros

BOSTON (AP) — Dennis Eckersley of the Boston Red Sox is refreshing among today's highly-paid professional athletes. He refuses to alibi, and he never hides out in the trainer's room.

The 25-year-old right-hander, working on the first season of a reported $2.5 million contract after winning 37 games in his first two campaigns with the Red Sox, is trying to redeem himself.

"It's been kind of embarrassing for me this year," Eckersley said Tuesday night after combining with Tom Burgmeier for a 3-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers. "Things haven't worked out like I'd like — but that's life."

"The fact that people pay me a lot of money to do well, and I don't, bothers me, though. Sure, I've had a bad back, but I'm not using that as an alibi. I just haven't pitched good this year."

Eckersley allowed only six hits, including Ben Oglivie's third homer off him this year, before Gorman Thomas singled with one out in the ninth.

Then, with Oglivie again at bat, Manager Don Zimmer brought Burgmeier from the bullpen. Burgmeier got ahead 1-2 on the count, then induced Oglivie to ground into a game-ending double play.

Although his back still bothers him, Eckersley hopes to put together a winning streak to improve on his 7-10 record and help the Red Sox in the final two months of the season.

"This was a big boost for my confidence," he said. "I just hope it keeps me up for the year — and it keep the fans up, too."

"The eighth inning did a lot for me when I got out of a big jam with runners on first and third and none out and the game tied 1-1. Sure, I got pumped up. I haven't had many chances this year to get pumped up that late in the game. "I love close, tight games. But this year it seems I've either been knocked out in the early innings or the game was decided in the later innings."

Eckersley was at his best in the eighth when Dick Davis doubled and Charlie Moore, after fouling off five pitches on a 3-1 count, grounded a single to left.

Eckersley looked like his old self. First with the infield playing in, he got Jim Gantner on a fly to shallow right. Then, after Paul Molitor tried to put down a squeeze bunt, he struck out the Milwaukee second baseman. Eckersley ended the threat by retiring dangerous Robin Yount on a foul pop.

Minutes Left—And Here Comes Roger

By WILL GRIMLEY
AP Special Correspondent

It's next Oct. 19 and the Dallas Cowboys, playing in Philadelphia, are trailing the Eagles 24-19 with two minutes remaining in the important National Football League game.

Suddenly, this slender guy with dark curly hair and wearing a sport jacket and slacks bursts out of the CBS broadcast booth, scrambles over the shoulders of the crowd, rushes onto the field and breaks into the Cowboys' huddle.

"Okay, gang, this is it — let's go!"

"Could happen," Roger Staubach admitted with a grin, obviously relishing the fantasy. "I'm itchy already. I've kept myself in good shape. I could play tomorrow. It's going to be tough for me to watch without being eager to get in there."

"With me, it's a natural instinct. I have been competitive ever since I can remember."

When the whistle signals the opening of the 1980 pro football campaign, it will mark the first time in 20 years, including his five-year stint in the Navy, that Staubach hasn't had to wrap his ankles, pull on those stretch uniforms and concentrate on the play book.

"I even played some service football in the Navy — at Pensacola," said the retired passing ace of the Cowboys, a Heisman Trophy winner at the U.S. Naval Academy in 1963 and statistically the all-time No. 1 quarterback of the NFL.

"It's been a pretty long grind — but I wouldn't have swapped it for anything."

Last March 31, Roger, now 38, stood before a Dallas news conference and tearfully announced his retirement after 11 productive years as the whiphand of the Dallas offense. During that period, he had thrown 2,958 passes, completing 1,685 for 22,700 yards — some 13 miles — and 153 touchdowns.

The most meaningful of these numbers seemed concentrated in the fading minutes of the games. Staubach figured in 23 come-from-behind fourth quarter triumphs, 14 in the last two minutes.

The NFL hasn't seen a better "two-minute quarterback."

"I don't think I was talking off," he said. "I will miss the game but I think my decision was the right one. I had five concussions in 1979. That worried my wife, Marianne. I felt I was getting a message."

Although he has a real estate business in Dallas and an interest in a fastfood franchise in Ohio, Staubach has decided not to divorce himself completely from the game that has saturated his life.

He was in New York this week for some advance promotional work with the CBS-NFL broadcasting team.

He will be a rookie analyst with such personalities as former quarterback Sonny Jurgensen, former coaches Tom Madden and Hank Stram and Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder.

Richards In Camp; Looking For Position

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — After a two-week absence, veteran wide receiver Golden Richards has reported to the Denver Broncos with every intention of competing for a position on the National Football League team.

He said he had missed camp for "personal reasons," and would not elaborate.

"I realize that coming in now will be tough," the five-year veteran of the Dallas Cowboys said. "If I had played here a year maybe it wouldn't, but to them (the Broncos) I'm a raw, absolutely unproven product."

"But for all the neative aspects you can come up with, I have a lot of positive ones," Richards said. He signed on with the Broncos last spring as a free agent after playing briefly for the Chicago Bears last season.

Head Coach Red Miller has said that Richards' absence put him markedly behind the other candidates at wide receiver.

"All I want to say is that I hope I'm not coming in on a stacked deck. I know everyone has the jump on me but I hope I can go out and pick things up," Richards said.

China Delegation Gets Baseball Peak

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The delegation from the People's Republic of China was impressed by the Los Angeles Dodgers' brand of baseball, and also by the fans at Dodger Stadium.

"We were told baseball was your national pastime, but we didn't know what that meant until we saw the participation of the fans," said Xie Lang, head of a five-member group who visited the National League club at Dodger President Peter O'Malley's invitation. "They really become involved in what is taking place on the field."

"Dodger Stadium is very impressive and very beautiful — lots of seats and beautiful color schemes."

The Chinese are rediscovering baseball, which was introduced to them by missionaries in the early 1900s. At the height of the sport's popularity in China, there were 25 teams competing in the country's national games.

"The game gradually developed in old China and by 1959 we had a few good teams," Lang, a member of the competition department of the All-China Sports Federation, said through an interpreter. "However, development of all sports was slowed for almost 10 years (1960-70), and in recent years we have strived to restore our respectability."

"But we have not returned to the days of 1959."

The delegation, which met with Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda, a number of coaches and players, were tutored during three clinics on hitting, pitching and tactics.

"We are very much impressed by the high level of play of your professional teams," said Lang. "The techniques of your players are very good and we are most impressed by the Dodgers — especially their home run power."

Lang pointed out there are no professional sports as such in the People's Republic.

"We find it is better that everyone has his own work to perform and let individuals participate in sports for relaxation," he said.

O'Malley, who visited China last February, said he was pleased to host the visitors, adding, "We have always supported amateur and international baseball and we are delighted to have this group from China here as our guests."

Opening lead: King of ♣.

Some things are routine to the experienced card technician. Look what happened when this hand turned up in a team match we happened to be watching.

The auction was highly competitive. West took advantage of the vulnerability to make life difficult for his opponents, and it is to South's credit that the diamond slam was reached at both tables.

The king of spades was the opening lead at both tables, but the declarers chose different paths. The first declarer realized that his slam was cold if he could hold his minor-suit losers to one. He optimistically cashed the ace-king of diamonds, and when the suit failed to break evenly, he tried the ace-king of clubs. But that suit did not behave either. So declarer ended up down one as he moaned the fates.

At the other table, declarer easily reeled in his slam. It required no magic—just a simple matter of card-play technique.

He, too, ruffed the opening spade lead, but before drawing trumps he cashed the ace of clubs. Next he entered dummy with the ace of diamonds and led a low club toward his hand. It would not have helped East to ruff, for he would be trumping one of declarer's losers with his trump trick, so he sluffed a spade. Declarer won the queen of clubs and ruffed a club with dummy's last trump. Whether or not East overruffed, the defenders could not get more than one trump trick, for declarer's last club would go on a high heart.

Note that the first declarer would make the contract only if diamonds were 2-2 or clubs 3-3. The second declarer had considerable extra chances, for he would succeed against all normal breaks, including 3-1 diamonds and 4-2 clubs, as well as with the actual distribution in the diagram.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Soviets Execute One Of Two Men MOSCOW (AP) — One of two men sentenced to death in a large-scale economic crime case in Soviet Georgia was reported to have been executed. But there was still no word on the fate of the second man involved.

The two men, Rafael Adzhishvili, 55, and Mahmed Abbassov, 50, were convicted in 1978 of illegal dealings in textiles that relatives said amounted to the ruble equivalent of $3 million over six years.

Relatives of Adzhishvili said the execution of Abbassov was officially reported to his family two weeks ago. They said there was still no word on the fate of Adzhishvili.

Executions in the Soviet Union are usually carried out by firing squad.

A third and a fourth man were also sentenced to death in the case, but their sentences were reportedly commuted to prison terms.

Relatives said Adzhishvili and the two men with commuted sentences are Jewish. But Adzhishvili's family has said they didn't believe religion was an issue in the case.

GOP Govs Happy; Foes Not

DENVER (AP) — Republican governors are leaving Denver biting their tongues and unable to believe their good fortune, while the Democrats are going home from the annual governors' conference mumbling about healing their wounds.

For the Democrats, the three-day conference which ended Tuesday was a battle most of them didn't want and an election-year embarrassment.

First, they were caught in a cross-fire between President Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, rivals for the party's presidential nomination, over the distant issue of a national convention issue.

Then, they had to fight off Republican assaults on administration programs which some of them weren't too fond of themselves. The best example: farm-state Democrats in the squirming position of preventing a Republican condemnation of Carter's embargo on grain sales to the Soviet Union.

The Republicans definitely had the best of it. They could go all-out against the grain embargo, knowing full well they would come out winners no matter how the vote went. And they saw the conference take a number of steps critical of Washington.

The best the Democrats could do was keep the resolutions from calling Carter by name.

The conference blasted federal handling of low-level radioactive waste and said the states should take it over. It called energy policy a failure. And it said even if embargoes may be necessary sometimes, the next one should be handled better.

The Democrats passed a resolution in their caucus which spent six pages condemning Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan and the GOP platform but not once mentioning their own Democratic president, pro or con.

Faced with the prospect of a real debacle, the Democrats refused to back Carter in the rules fight or renew their year-old endorsement of him.

"They seem to be doing a tremendous job of tearing themselves apart," observed Republican Gov. Robert List of Nevada. "We're simply spectators in this one. And as a spectator, I have to say that every day they dig themselves a hole that is going to leave them a bigger job to climb out in November."

The Republicans had a hard time restraining themselves from gloating, particularly with President Carter's televised defense of his problems with brother Billy coming in the midst of the conference.

"The things that are happening to Carter now are potentially disastrous for him," said Gov. David Treen of Louisiana. "But I think if Republicans try to manipulate that and press that, it could come back to haunt them."

"It's good to be on top of the heap," mused GOP Gov. Richard Thornburgh of Pennsylvania, "but we all remember that this is only the beginning of August. When I ran for governor, I was about 30 points behind in the polls at this time."

But the code words for the Democrats were "uphill" and "heal," hardly an upbeat theme for the rest of the year.

"It's going to be an uphill battle," California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. said, "and I think Reagan's ahead. But with some luck we can win in November."

"I definitely think that the Democratic Party is going to heal," said Gov. Richard Lamm of Colorado. "There have been schisms before in it, but there's been a history where they tend to come together."

"I think the thing that will bring us together," Lamm wished out loud, "is not necessarily going to be President Carter, but it's going to be a fear and realization of the platform of the Republican Party and Ronald Reagan."

Juror Says Court Lost Touch

SPRING LAKE, N.C. (AP) — An appellate court that overturned the conviction of former Green Beret Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald has lost touch with justice, according to the foreman of the jury that convicted MacDonald in 1979.

"They're aloof from what's really happening. Our courts have become too liberal and this is the result," David Hardison of Spring Lake said Tuesday.

"They're going to let him go on the technicality that he wasn't tried soon enough and ignore the fact that he received a fair trial and was convicted by a jury of his peers."

MacDonald was convicted in 1979 for the 1970 slayings of his wife and two daughters at Fort Bragg. A three-judge panel of the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the conviction last week, saying too much time had elapsed before MacDonald was brought to trial.

U.S. Attorney James Blackburn said this week he would appeal the decision, asking the full appellate court to review the case.

Hardison, the first juror seated for MacDonald's trial. He is a veteran of 22 years' service in the Air Force and of two years in the state Highway Patrol.

The MacDonald trial caused him endless hours without sleep, Hardison said, adding that he never lost a moment's sleep over the verdict.

"I had terrible dreams. I'd wake up in the night, hearing a baby crying and ask my wife, 'Do you hear that baby crying?' and actually get up and walk outside to see if there was a child crying somewhere," Hardison said.

Hardison said the "evidence presented to us at that trial pointed to the guilt of one man and one man only ... We kept waiting for the defense to come up with something — anything — that could raise a reasonable doubt in our minds."

Hardison said the appeals court's decision last week overturning the conviction made him more sympathetic with the frustration and cynicism that blacks and poor people often have expressed about justice in the United States.

"There really seems to be a double standard," he said. "If Jeffrey MacDonald had not been white, an officer, and a member of the Army's elite Special Forces, he might well have been convicted of these crimes long ago."

Hardison added, "I'm sorry that all this has happened," he said. "But I will find it hard to live with if MacDonald goes free. Knowing what I know, yes, it would be hard to live with."

Talmadge Leads, But Must Face Runoff

By The Associated Press
Sen. Herman Talmadge, denounced by his Senate colleagues for financial misconduct, overwhelmed five Democratic primary election challengers but not by a great enough margin to avoid a run-off vote later this month.

Talmadge's victory came Tuesday in Georgia's Democratic primary after the toughest re-election campaign of his political career. In other primaries, Rep. John B. Anderson won a spot as an independent presidential candidate on Michigan's general election ballot in November, and Sens. Bob Dole, R-Kan., and Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., easily won renomination.

Talmadge, 66, will face Lt. Gov. Zell Miller in the Aug. 26 run-off election to decide Georgia's Democratic nominee for U.S. Senate. With nearly three-quarters of the vote counted, Talmadge had 40.8 percent of the vote and Miller 24.7 percent. Georgia requires a run-off election if no candidate gains 50 percent of the vote.

Talmadge, a popular Georgia politician seeking his fifth Senate term, was denounced by the Senate after an investigation of his finances. Miller, a 48-year-old career public official, had the support of many prominent black leaders, including Coretta Scott King and Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson. Talmadge told supporters after it became clear he would face the first run-off election of his career: "I want you to know we have just begun to fight. Get ready. Get your fighting clothes on."

In a six-man race for the GOP Senate nomination, former state GOP chairman Mack Mattingly won the right to meet the winner of the Talmadge-Miller runoff in the November general election. In Michigan, with 60 percent of the vote counted, Anderson had gained 35,000 votes, far more than the 3,000 to 5,000 needed. The amount required by law to get on the ballot is three-tenths of 1 percent of all votes cast in the election.

The primaries showed these results in major contested races early today: —KANSAS: With nearly three-fourths of the votes counted, Sen. Dole had rolled up a 4-to-1 margin over Jim H. Grainger, a suburban Kansas City computer salesman who did not conduct a statewide campaign. John M. Simpson, a Salina attorney, won the Democratic bid to face Dole. Simpson is a former Republican.

In congressional races, incumbent 2nd district Republican Jim Jeffries won renomination. Sam Keys, whose wife, Martha, lost the 2nd district seat two years ago to Jeffries, won the Democratic nomination. Pat Roberts won the GOP nomination to succeed 1st district Rep. Keith Sebelius, a Republican who is retiring. State Rep. Phil Martin won the Democratic bid. The Democratic nomination in the 3rd district was won by Dan Watkins. Republican incumbent Larry Winn Jr. had no primary opposition.

—MISSOURI: Eagleton swamped two Democratic opponents, Lee Sutton of Columbia and Herb Fillmore of Independence. St. Louis County Executive Gene McNary captured the GOP bid to oppose Eagleton. Gov. Joseph Teasdale defeated state Treasurer James Spainhower in the Democratic gubernatorial primary. Former Gov. Christopher Bond defeated Lt. Gov. William Phelps for the GOP nomination.

Reps. William Clay of the 1st district, Robert Young of the 2nd district, Ike Skelton of the 4th district, Richard Bolling of the 5th district, Harold Volkmer of the 9th district and Bill Burlison of the 10th district, all won renomination in the Democratic primary.

GEORGIA: Three of the four congressional races were decided. In the 6th district, Dock Davis, an attorney, won the right to oppose Georgia's only Republican congressman, Newt Gingrich, who had no primary opposition.

Democratic incumbent Wyche Fowler won renomination in the 5th district, and Rep. Larry McDonald, also a Democrat, won the right to run again in the 7th district.

MICHIGAN: A retired Detroit judge, George Crockett Jr., won two Democratic nominations — one to fill the U.S. House seat vacated by Charles C. Diggs Jr., and another to succeed Diggs as representative for the 13th district. Diggs is serving a three-year prison term on a federal payroll-padding conviction.

Crockett, 70, is expected to overcome Republican challenges this November in the predominantly black, traditionally Democratic district.

Meanwhile, Wayne County voters resoundingly approved creation of a charter commission to reorganize government in that financially strapped county, which includes 2.6 million residents of Detroit and its southern and western suburbs.

Hiroshima Looks Back

HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — Hiroshima marked the 35th anniversary of the world's first atomic bomb attack today with prayers for the souls of the estimated 140,000 victims and appeals for international peace.

Some 35,000 people, including representatives of the U.N. Disarmament Center, gathered at the memorial Peace Park in the heart of this city in southwestern Japan to attend annual rites for those who perished in the devastating blast when the bomb was dropped Aug. 6, 1945, in the final days of World War II.

At 8:15 a.m., the moment the bomb was dropped, bells were tolled throughout the city and some 2,000 doves scattered into the overcast skies as participants observed a minute of silent prayer.

The names of 2,279 people said to have died during the past year from diseases attributed to the bomb and exposure to radiation were placed in the park's cenotaph.

Representing Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, chief cabinet secretary Kiichi Miyazawa told the audience "We are concerned that nations maintain nuclear arms, and are repeatedly conducting atomic explosion tests. We are determined to abolish all wars and nuclear weapons."

In his speech, Hiroshima Mayor Takeshi Araki proposed a "peace summit" of the world's superpowers to bring about the abolition of all nuclear weapons.

"Conflicts now going on in the Middle East and Southeast Asia, if joined by the superpowers, could develop into full-scale wars."

"We propose that major nations like the United States and the Soviet Union gather in a top meeting to discuss world peace. The government of Japan should play a leader's role toward it," the Hiroshima mayor said.

The city of Nagasaki will hold memorial services Saturday for the estimated 70,000 people killed in the second atomic blast on Aug. 9, 1945.

Police Department investigators estimated damage from the mishap at $300 to the Strickland car and $500 to the Page auto.

Nothing But Mondays In Television World

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Had a television executive created this world, there would be nothing but Mondays. He would have stopped after the first day, assessed his work, and copied it six times to fill out the week.

In television, a new product is unique for just as long as it takes to imitate it. The captains of television, dedicated competitive capitalists for the most part, become absolutely communal in the matter of original ideas.

And so it is that CBS' "Dallas" has multiplied into so many likenesses of itself. CBS cut "Knots Landing" and "The Secrets of Midland Heights" from the "Dallas" prototype. NBC borrowed the idea for its "Flamingo Road."

It is noted that "Dallas" itself was not an original idea, deriving from television's daytime soaps. They, in turn, extended from radio's soap operas, which could probably be traced back to some prehistoric original thinker who was promptly devoured by his neighbors, the antecedents of modern TV executives.

The latest incarnation of the "Dallas" idea is NBC's "new" daytime soap opera, shamelessly titled "Texas." It is about lust and greed among the Texas gentry — oilmen, land barons and the like.

To complete its incestuous pedigree, "Texas" is not only a derivative of "Dallas," but is a spinoff from one of NBC's own soaps, "Another World." So, in the matter of its lineage, "Texas" is a television blue-blood, created completely from extant ideas.

As dictated by its position on the NBC schedule, "Texas" resembles "Another World" more than "Dallas" in that it requires from its viewers that special daytime soap opera state of mind. That is, the patience of a jigsaw puzzle addict and the dexterity to juggle dozens of character and plot pieces at once.

And a willingness to indulge clumsy exposition devices — the favorite being the whispered soliloquy — doesn't hurt.

The series opened on an airplane, where we see one Iris Bancroft (Beverly McKinney), a faded flower who, sources tell me, was a witch on "Another World." She is surprised to learn that the plane is turning around and returning to Houston on her behalf.

It seems that a long-ago boyfriend, penniless charmer Alex Wheeler, has become a rich Texan. So rich that he can order an airline to turn around and deposit his long-lost lover into his arms. Happy for Alex is Terry Dekker, his secretary (I think), who seems to be in love with a no-good former Houston Oiler named Clipper Curtis. It is suggested that Clipper had something to do with the murder of Alex's oil sheik partner, whose daughter, Princess Jasmine, is in love with a fellow named Connor, who was the sheik's head of security.

Clipper thinks Connor is with the CIA, which seems possible in light of the sheik's fate. Connor thinks Clipper iced the sheik, which seems possible because Clipper says things like this:

"I came to Houston because the Oilers had the bucks and they laid them on me. Do you think it was because of love? Hell no! Money talks."

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Like heavyweight boxers in the main event, President Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy are ready to come out fighting under the glare of television lights next week at the Democratic National Convention.

But after the brawl is over, they say they can unite for a fall campaign against a common foe — Republican Ronald Reagan.

Aides to the president and his challenger for the Democratic presidential nomination agreed Tuesday on a schedule calling for a prime time television debate on the first night of the party meeting over a controversial "open-convention" rules fight.

Twenty-four hours later, the convention will debate economic plans to the party platform — also on prime time television.

But after a long and sometimes bitter campaign for the nomination, both sides pledged in a joint statement that the convention debates would be "constructive and conducted in a spirit of mutual respect."

"Whatever differences we may have, they pale in comparison to our common differences with the Republicans and their nominee," the statement said.

"Whoever is on our ticket, we are determined to conclude our convention united behind our nominees. With so much at stake in this presidential election, the Democratic Party must prevail in November."

Dick Moe, a top aide to Vice President Walter F. Mondale, told reporters, "I think both sides are in a position to go to the other depending on who prevails and seek their support in the general election."

"And get it?" he asked.

"And get it," he replied.

Paul Kirk, a top Kennedy aide, said the agreement made "reconciliation a lot easier." But asked whether it is certain if Carter win re-nomination, he replied, "Nothing is certain in politics."

Carter always has said he expects to support the party nominee this fall. Kennedy generally has dodged questions of whether he could support Carter, saying at one point that the president would need to make significant changes in his economic policy before he would back him.

The convention agreement came after a 4½-hour meeting involving top aides to Carter and Kennedy, who is going to the convention 700 votes behind the president.

And neither side was willing to concede that the other will triumph in the end.

Kirk, asked whether Kennedy would address the convention, said he hoped the senator would deliver an acceptance speech after being nominated.

Kirk also predicted the convention would reject a Carter-backed rule requiring delegates to vote on the first nominating ballot for the candidate they were pledged to support.

But Moe said he was "absolutely confident" his side would prevail on the issue.

Under the agreement reached by the two sides:

—The convention will debate the "open rule" question for an hour beginning at 6:30 p.m. on Monday, the first day of the convention. The debate, which will begin 2½ hours after the convention officially opens, is later than the Carter forces originally proposed but earlier than the Kennedy side wanted.

—The economic planks to the platform will be debated for two hours beginning at about 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Camera Angles

By SANDY COLTON
AP Newsfeatures

Years ago, when I was young and eager to understand this photography business, multiple flash was all the rage.

Not just one or two bulbs, but thousands, all paid for, of course, by the companies that made the bulbs like Sylvania.

They lit up the pyramids of Egypt, and trains rounding Horseshoe Curve in Pennsylvania—all at night. And, because they were using flash bulbs, not electronic flash units, they had just one shot.

Fascinated, I began to try to learn how it was done, first with just two bulbs, then three, and finally, I once wired together 47 bulbs for a shot. I'm thankful that at the time I was a military photographer and didn't have to pick up the tab.

I doubt that anyone will ever try to repeat those shots but some of the lessons learned from them are still applicable.

Long before I began experimenting with using more than one flash I had been doing essentially the same thing with only one flash unit. It's called painting with light, but the technique is limited in that it can only be used with non-moving subjects.

In one case I had to document at night an airplane crash, showing where the plane had impacted and the relationship of parts of the plane that had broken away. Everyone had bailed out in a snowstorm and the plane had come down in an empty field. There was no light nearby.

I had a friend shine the headlights of our truck on the wreckage while I set up and focused on the ground glass of a Speed Graphic on a tripod.

With film in place and the camera set on time exposure, my friend now stood by the camera holding a dark slide over the front of the lens to prevent exposure while I took a flash gun and a bag of bulbs and walked around the wreckage. Every thirty feet or so I would shout and my friend would remove the slide from the lens while I shot off a bulb. Then he would cover the lens again and wait for the next shout.

I walked down one side of the wreckage and back up the other, cross lighting the furrow the plane had dug up and the various pieces of wreckage, being careful to keep myself between the flash and camera so that it wouldn't flare back into the lens.

I don't remember how many bulbs I used, 30 or 40 I suppose. I only tried it once. I didn't have enough bulbs for another try. The result was well worth the effort. The furrow and various pieces of debris were sharply etched against the black background.

I had to use this same technique another time, but for a different reason. I was in Japan and a friend asked me to photograph a huge red rock he had placed in the middle of his garden.

The best composition I could get of the rock in relation to the rest of the garden had a serious fault. The top of the photo showed telephone wires and a pole behind the garden wall that detracted from the picture. To eliminate this, I waited for night.

Then I moved around with the flash and painted his garden with light, just as I had done with the airplane, being careful that no light spilled over the wall to illuminate the wires and pole. In the final color print, the rock, garden and flowers stood out like gems with nothing but black where the wires and pole were.

You can do the same thing today with electronic flash units. Just remember, if you're working outdoors at night, open up a couple of stops to make up for the loss of reflectivity. It will take a little experimenting to know exposure differences inside a room and outdoors. But, with electronic flash units, it should be a lot cheaper than working with bulbs.

Here's a trick that may come in handy. Suppose you find out that your flash unit doesn't give out enough light. Maybe it's one stop under, or more?

For each additional f-stop needed, simply double the number of flashes. If you need one more f-stop hit the flash unit again after it has completely recycled.

Thailand Is Concerned Over Its Internal Problems

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer
BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — This front-line nation of non-communist Southeast Asia finds itself these days with serious internal weaknesses and some officials are expressing concern.

Vietnamese communist forces next door in Cambodia are a threat to the Thais but what has them more concerned is their own political set-up, regarded by some as outdated and clique-ridden. There also is a long-standing communist insurgency inside Thailand itself, partially kept alive by glaring economic gaps between the urban rich and the rural poor.

Recent interviews with reform-minded government officials, academics and businessmen revealed an anxiety about Thailand's "softness" and a fear that these internal problems — coupled with militant communists in nearby Cambodia, Vietnam and Laos — could one day lead to dramatic changes in Thailand — a Buddhist kingdom with a capitalist economy and a society which allows considerable personal freedoms.

"Thailand has never been colonized," said one senior government official who asked to remain anonymous. "It has always managed in difficult times. This has led to a deep complacency... This may be a pleasant approach to life but these days it is a dangerous one."

This official and others interviewed said that Thailand in the 1980s could not afford a repeat political and economic performance of the past decade.

This performance included 10 changes of government in as many years, sometimes through violent means. There was one student uprising, a bloody right-wing-led government change and several military coups.

Economically, the Thais enjoyed an enviable growth rate but income disparities widened. The average monthly income in Bangkok, the capital with five million people, is currently $172 per family as compared to $74 per family in the rural northeast.

While Thailand's wealth is derived from its agriculture, it is funneled into a relatively small, privileged urban sector. International agencies have estimated that one-third of agricultural households — some 10 million people — live in a state of absolute poverty.

In the past, the Thais liked to say that there were always "fish in the water and rice in the fields" for everyone. But the country's population has soared to 46 million and is expected to reach 75 million by the turn of the century, while land for agricultural expansion is shrinking.

Competition for the diminished economic pie has led to social tensions, one of the highest crime rates in Asia and what many educated Thais say is a headlong pursuit of personal gain. Thongchai Thongpao, Thailand's top civil rights lawyer, said he believes the country urgently needs a large injection of social responsibility and discipline to cope with its problems.

Thongchai added that Thais have tended to allow the injunction of the 18th century poet Sunthorn Phu whose most famous verse exalted the virtues of each individual trying to get the best out of life. That was when Thailand was the Kingdom of Siam.

"Such an attitude cannot work in a modernizing society," Thongchai said. "It leads to greed and corruption. I have hope that the younger generation can be educated to improve society. I have no hope at all for the old one."

Discipline, social justice and efficiency, especially in government, is a key theme of many Thai reformers.

One controversial proposal, initiated by Deputy Prime Minister Boonchu Rojanastien and his economic team, calls for the development of "Thailand, Inc.," partially modeled on the successful Japanese political-economic model.

As explained by Boonchu's supporters — Chote Sophonpanich, a bank vice president, and Paul Sitthi-Amnuey, who heads a group of companies — "Thailand, Inc." would replace stifling bureaucratic methods with modern management, encourage promotions based purely on talent, stress long-range planning and develop an orderly and profitable relationship between private enterprise and the government.

"Thailand, Inc." would not, its proponents say, immediately solve problems like the urban-rural gap, but it would provide a framework that would make such things as large-scale land reform easier and eventually get people more oriented toward the goal of a stable and prosperous Thailand.

While others, especially those in the academic world, are critical of "Thailand, Inc.," most reformers agree that one of the primary tasks is to sweep clean the halls of power and to foster responsible public pressure groups to lend support to honest, dedicated individuals within the power structure.

Pollution Peril Seen Growing

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The one million cubic miles of ground water, stored one-half mile from the earth's surface, is the most recently identified natural resource that may be threatened by pollution.

Out-of-sight and unseen oil, gasoline and other hydrocarbons can seep into this vital resource that supplies at least half the U.S.'s drinking water, according to Hugh Peters, manager of detection systems for Emhart's Mallory group here.

Peters says recent government surveys show there are water-supply problems in 21 water-resource regions and in nearly all of the 106 sub-regions. Increasingly, he says, pollution is being caused by oil spills, leakage from underground tanks and from surface spills that infiltrate ground water.

Passing Through 'Comet Debris'

NEW YORK (AP) — All that glitters next week won't be reflections from the Democratic National Convention here.

The earth will be plunging through a band of comet debris that is expected to produce a spectacular shower of meteors.

The peak of the sky show is to start around 10 p.m. Monday, during the opening convention session, and it is last into the early hours of Tuesday. The earth will also be in the path of the meteor shower — known as the Perseids — the nights before and after.

How Tar Heel Representatives, Senators Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Her's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes July 24 through July 30.

HOUSE
BILLY CARTER The House voted, 233 for and 139 against, to uphold a temporary ban by the Democratic leadership on the one-minute speeches that some members customarily make at the beginning of the day's session. The effect of the party-line vote was to silence that morning Republicans who had been making brief floor speeches on the Billy Carter scandal.

Members voting "yea" wanted to muffle GOP criticism of the scandal.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Richardson Preyer, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "yea."

Reps. James Martin, R-9, and James Broynhill, R-10, voted "nay."

'ACTION GRANTS' By a vote of 136 for and 262 against, the House rejected an amendment to cut fiscal 1981 spending for the Urban Development Action Grant (UDGA) program from $675 million to $500 million. The amendment was offered to an appropriations bill (HR 7631) later passed and sent to the Senate. UDGA money goes to cities for economic development ventures. Private companies are directly helped by the grants.

Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., a supporter of the $175 million cut, said: "UDGA is one of those grant programs which gets bigger and bigger because more and more people can get their fingers into free money."

Rep. Edward Boland, D-Mass., an opponent of the cut, said: "UDGA has widespread support throughout the country and widespread support in this Congress . . . this is a program that works."

Members voting "yea" favored spending $500 million rather than $675 million on the UDGA program in the next fiscal year.

Jones, Whitley, Andrews and Broynhill voted "yea."

Fountain, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin and Gudger voted "nay."

GASOLINE RATIONING

The House rejected, 205 for and 209 against, an attempt (HJ Res 575) to keep the Administration's standby gasoline rationing plan from becoming law. The vote means that a president can now order rationing if gasoline supplies fall at least 20 percent below those of a recent 12-month base period. During the 1973 Arab oil embargo, the shortfall was about 11 percent. The rationing plan would limit the average motorist to 34 to 50 gallons monthly, depending on where he lives.

Rep. Clarence Brown, R-Ohio, a supporter of killing the plan, said "it will cost $2 billion per year, and will require tens of thousands of bureaucrats."

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., replied that "the only thing worse than a rationing plan in the midst of a crisis is no rationing plan in the midst of a crisis."

Members voting "nay" wanted the standby rationing plan to take effect.

Martin and Broynhill voted "yea."

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner and Gudger voted "nay."

SENATE
GASOLINE RATIONING By vote of 31 for and 60 against, the Senate also rejected the resolution (HJ Res 575) intended to keep the standby gasoline rationing plan from taking effect (see preceding vote).

Senators voting "nay" favored the standby gasoline rationing plan.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

Sen. Robert Morgan, D, voted "nay."

NUCLEAR WASTE The Senate passed, 88 for and seven against, a bill directing the U.S. Department of Energy to build facilities for temporarily storing the radioactive wastes of nuclear power plants. These "away from reactor" (AFR) disposal sites would be selected later by the government. A chosen state could veto the federal decision only if one house of Congress voted to back up its objection. The bill (S 2189) was sent to the House.

Presently, spent uranium fuel rods are stored on-site at nuclear power plants. The bill offers a 10-to-20 year storage solution. Meanwhile, Congress and the Administration are exploring permanent disposal means.

Supporter Warren

Magnuson, D-Wash., said the bill "will promote the storage of high-level waste on a regional basis and reduce the chances that Washington or some other state will have to be the site of a national storage facility."

Opponent Charles Percy, R-Ill., said the bill did not go far enough. "In 38 years, 7,700 metric tons of highly radioactive waste have been accumulating . . . and never has the federal government faced the issue with adequate concern," he said.

Senators voting "yea" favored the bill.

Morgan and Helms voted "yea."

NUCLEAR WASTE By a vote of 51 for and 44 against, the Senate killed an amendment to virtually eliminate the "away from reactor" (AFR) storage plan for nuclear wastes. The amendment was offered to S2189 (see preceding vote). It sought to require most nuclear power plants to continue storing their own radioactive wastes until the government provides a permanent means of disposal. Utilities could use AFR sites only if the alternative were shutting down the power plant. The nuclear power industry favored killing the amendment, and a Ralph Nader energy group supported the amendment.

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., a supporter of killing the amendment, said: "If this amendment passes, the nuclear industry in this country is going to be in deep trouble and you will probably have to shut down reactors."

Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., who co-sponsored the amendment, said he wants to limit away-from-reactor disposal because it will involve "substantial costs" to the Treasury, and because "the more AFR's there are, the more transportation of spent fuel there will be through many of our states."

Senators voting "nay" wanted to require most utilities to continue storing their own radioactive wastes.

Morgan and Helms voted "yea."

Zoo's Gamble On Tiger Pays

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Henry Dooley Zoo director Lee Simmons' gamble with a poker-playing circus trainer has paid off with the birth of two tigers, one a rare white animal worth an estimated $60,000.

Simmons says there are only about 12 white tigers living at three zoos in the United States.

The whole thing started several years ago when Simmons was called by the circus trainer whose tigers, in Omaha with a show, needed medical attention.

During their conversation, the trainer said the tigers had produced a white cub, but he had lost it in a poker game with another circus performer. Later, the trainer offered to sell the parents, Rajah and Sheba.

Simmons said he had been skeptical that they had white genes, but did some checking, thought the story credible and decided to gamble and buy them, hoping they would produce another white cub.

Refugee Spending Is A Boon To Depressed Areas

By The Associated Press
The recent influx of Cuban refugees into this country has provided a shot in the arm to businesses in small towns bordering major refugee camps and processing centers, federal officials say.
The U.S. government and state, local and private agencies have spent more than $200 million on food, shelter, clothing and transportation for the more than 118,000 Cubans who have arrived recently aboard "Freedom Flotilla" boats.

And that, officials say, has meant extra business for towns near refugee facilities at Key West, Fla., Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., Fort McCoy, Wis., Fort Chaffee, Ark., and Fort Indiantown Gap, in Pennsylvania.
All figures are not in, but government spokesmen say the overall total will be much higher than $200 million.
Cornelius Gilbert, a Miami purchasing agent for the General Services Administration, said he coordinated about $5 million in purchases for refugee operations in South Florida.

At Eglin AFB, local Air Force contracts have pumped about $1.7 million into the area's economy in a short period, according to a base spokeswoman. She said the largest local contracts went to the Louisiana Pacific and the Sequoia Co. for construction materials.
The refugee center at Indiantown Gap near Harrisburg, Pa., awarded approximately $9 million in contracts and created 750 jobs with a $38,000 daily payroll, according to Diana Diaz, spokeswoman for the camp.

The refugee center in Fort Chaffee, although opposed by many residents of nearby Fort Smith, Ark., has generated approximately $8.9 million in contracts for private business, according to copies of reports obtained by The Miami Herald.
"A lot of businesses had to cut back and lay people off because of the recession," said Paul Latour, manager of the Fort Smith Chamber of Commerce. But this refugee situation has come along, and picked up a lot of employees.
"We've had problems with the riots, and the camp has been a public relations fiasco."

co. But from an economic standpoint it has been an economic boost."
In Wisconsin, several small towns around Fort McCoy have benefited because of the refugees' presence. By early July, the government had spent $1.38 million in Sparta, Wis., $1.45 million in LaCrosse, and $48,000 in the tiny hamlet of Tomah.

"The recession we have faced here is not as drastic as it could have been because of the operation at Fort McCoy," said Jim Ebert, mayor of Tomah, a town of 7,000 just 12 miles away from the camp.
The town's largest employer, the Toro Co. is closing its lawnmower and snowblower plant for six weeks because of slow sales, so the town welcomes the extra jobs at Fort McCoy, Ebert said.

"It has definitely been a boon to the economy."
The biggest beneficiaries have been some of the biggest businesses. Sears, Roebuck and Co. was paid more than $1 million for supplying clothing, including 10,000 pairs of shoes, to Fort McCoy, Fort Chaffee and Indiantown Gap. The Ryder System was paid more than $100,000 to provide trucks and vans for Key West, Miami and Fort Chaffee.

But smaller business also have gained. In Key West, a Winn Dixie store profited in the early days of the spontaneous boatlift when government purchasing agents, trying to feed the refugees, nearly stripped the store of its groceries.

Singleton Enterprises of Key West sold $10,000 worth of ice to the military in Key West for food preservation. Atlantic Inter-City Ambulance Service of Pompano Beach, Fla., provided its services for the refugees in Key West for nearly two months and $100,000.

In Miami, A&B Maintenance cleaned up refugee centers and $110,000; Able Builders Rental supplied more than 200 portable toilets to the same centers and received $100,000.

While some businessmen are still frustrated by the red tape that goes along with such spending, most say the government's buying procedures have been successful, considering the crisis condition.

World Crime Incidence Is Up

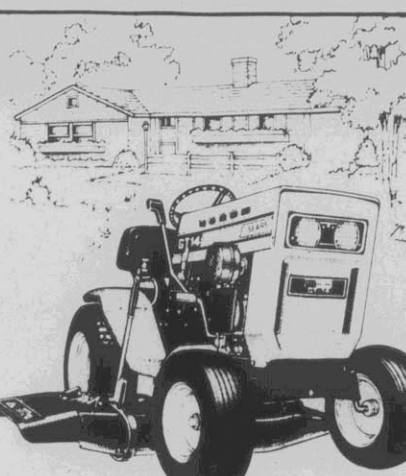

NEW YORK (AP) — A recent United Nations survey of world crime showed that during a five-year period beginning in 1970, intentional homicide rose by 20 percent, robbery by 197 percent, drug abuse by 114 percent, while crime overall increased by 15 percent.
During the same period, however, several nations were able to report decreases in their crime rate.
Against this background, the U.N. is scheduled to hold its Sixth Congress on the Prevention of Crime and Treatment of Offenders. The meeting will open in Caracas, Venezuela, at the end of August.
Among topics to be discussed are "Crime Trends and Crime Prevention Strategies"; "Juvenile Justice: Before and After the Onset of Delinquency"; and "Crime and the Abuse of Power: Offenses and Offenders beyond the Reach of the Law?"
More than 1,000 persons are expected to attend.

Suspect Cancer Risk In Loners

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Loners may run a greater risk of developing cancer than people with close friends and family, a University of Florida doctoral candidate says.
"In many cases, people who tend to get cancer do not have close relationships with family and friends and don't share their anxieties with others," said Diana Rivera. The graduate student in counseling education based her statements on her doctoral work. She hopes to be one of the first researchers to test the psychological aspects of cancer.
She plans to compare personality traits of 30 cancer patients with 30 healthy people who have no history of cancer in their families.

Miami Hispanics Seek Organize The Cuban Vote

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — Hispanic politicians trying to organize their giant "silent minority" are looking to Miami's Cubans for impetus.

"Hispanics must stick together. Our ability to attract attention or respect is very, very limited. I don't see another community that can set the pace the way Miami can," said Graciela Olivarez, director of the U.S. Community Services Administration and among the highest-ranking Hispanics in the Carter administration.

Hispanics will become the United States' largest minority in the 1980s and could number 37 million by the year 2010, White House policy analyst Roberto Anson told the Global Conference on the Future in Toronto in July.

Although the nation's Hispanic population, growing by nearly 15 percent a year, is estimated at over 23 million, fewer than one-sixth of Hispanic-Americans are registered to vote.

There are only five Hispanic congressmen and one lieutenant governor among the nation's top federal and state elected officials. And Hispanics complain they get short shrift from government programs.

"Here's a large segment of the population that has been ignored. We are not included in affirmative action and other minority programs. We have hardly made any advancement," said Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif.

"We must have a united political front," he said. "A politician understands only one language — not English or Spanish, but votes. If our community doesn't have registered voters, we have no strength."

Roybal, president of the two-year-old National Organization of Latin Elected Officials, and other Hispanic officials are excited by increased political participation by Cuban-Americans.

They note that unlike Mexican-Americans and Puerto Ricans, who left their homelands for economic reasons, the Cuban influx that began with Fidel Castro's revolution in 1959 includes many well-educated members of Cuba's former elite.

Cuban-Americans now number nearly 1 million in the United States, their ranks swelled by more than 117,000 refugees in the "Freedom Flotilla" that began in mid-April.

"They ran every system in their country: Political, economic, educational. There is no other sizable group in this country that can claim that. And their younger generation certainly has role models already present in their community," said Ms. Olivarez of the early Cuban immigrants.

In what the Florida Democratic Party's immediate past chairman, Alfredo Duran, calls "a realization of permanent status as Americans," Cuban-Americans — their expectation of Castro's ouster undermined by 21 years of waiting — have been registering to vote in Dade County at a much greater pace in recent years.

There are more than 105,000 Spanish-surnamed voters among Dade County's 500,000 registered voters now, and Cubans displayed muscle in last year's Miami elections, electing a Latin majority to city commission for the first time.

According to the Census Bureau, 59.4 percent of the nation's Hispanic-Americans are Mexican, 15.1 percent are Puerto Rican, 5.7 percent are Cuban, 7.2 percent are South American and 12.6 are of other Spanish origins. Thirty percent of Hispanic-Americans live in California, 22 percent in Texas, 13 percent in New York, and 8 percent in Arizona, Colorado and New Mexico.

Duran, son-in-law of former Cuban President Carlos Prios, was one of the first Cubans to run for office in Miami. He recalled his unsuccessful 1974 bid for Dade County school board: "Bilingual education was my key issue, and it became a flagword for anti-Cuban sentiment. They would yell, 'Go back to Cuba,' and say that if I got elected, we'd have all the kids dancing the rumba in school." Duran said the lesson was that Cubans couldn't "run as Cubans." He said he believes Cuban-Americans are now more sophisticated politically.

Cuban-Americans follow U.S. domestic issues and don't base their politics on which candidate talks toughest against Castro, Duran said, adding: "On Cuba, we are now like the Jews with Israel. It is very important, but it is not the only issue."

He said young Cuban-Americans are more liberal than their parents, most of whom are conservative Republicans. For the first time, there are more Cuban Democrats — about 52,000 — than Cuban Republicans — about 42,000 — in Dade County. There are an estimated 511,900 Miami residents of Hispanic origin.

A key problem in shaping the Hispanic coalition is that Cubans, generally in a higher economic bracket than other Hispanic-Americans, may not identify with Hispanics.

"I can see where, as a group, they may not really associate their particular situation with that of anyone else," Roybal said. "One of the things we find is that Hispanics many times divide among themselves, instead of coordinating activities." Duran is optimistic. "We're in different geographic areas — the Puerto Rican community in the northeast United States, the Mexican community in the southwest, and the Cubans in Florida — we aren't really competing with each other," he said. "We're identifying the issues we have in common: Bilingual education, jobs, housing. We can work together on them."

Occupation By Turks Assailed

ATLANTA (AP) — The recent Clergy-Laity Congress of the Greek Orthodox Church in the Americas condemned continued Turkish occupation in Cyprus and urged United Nations and U.S. officials to "take all steps within their power" to end the "tragic situation."

The resolution said Turkish occupation troops have held 40 percent of Cyprus since their 1974 invasion and refused to let 200,000 Greek-Cypriot refugees return to their homes and properties.

Turkish forces have prohibited regular Greek Orthodox worship and desecrated Greek Orthodox churches, the resolution said, despite appeals by the United Nations, Amnesty International and the U.S. Congress supporting independence of Cyprus and urging Turkey to withdraw its troops.

History-Rich Island Is Becoming New Public Park

By BOB ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer
PARKERSBURG, W.Va.
(AP) — Hidden just beneath the scrub that covers Blennerhassett Island are the remnants of a dream that failed and changed American history in the process.

But soon the ruins of Harman Blennerhassett's outpost of civilization on the frontier will once again see the light of day.

An ambitious plan to turn the island into a public park is nearing completion. Overseeing the work is Dan Fowler, executive director of the Blennerhassett Historical Park Commission, who describes the island as "a very special piece of real estate" in the history of the Ohio Valley and the American frontier.

An archaeologist, Fowler has spent years laboring in the deep, sandy soil where a half-dozen prehistoric Indian villages have been discovered. But the island's ancient history is overshadowed by the legend of the man who gave it his name at the dawn of the 19th century.

Harman Blennerhassett was an Irish aristocrat who came to the New World only to become tragically involved with Aaron Burr, the young nation's vice president. The alliance ended in death, ruin and bitterness for all concerned.

Blennerhassett, from his ornate island mansion, contributed men, money and materials to Burr's grandiose scheme for military conquest in the Southwest. The expedition made it as far as Natchez before disbanding, its organizer and bankroller soon to face treason charges.

Although neither Burr nor Blennerhassett was convicted, the episode left the careers and finances of both in shambles. Historians still argue over their motives, with some saying Burr wanted to spark a secessionist movement in the Louisiana territories while others speculate that he hoped to establish an empire in Mexico.

Blennerhassett Island's 227 acres lie about a mile south of Parkersburg. The park commission is trying to hack away years of neglect and put in their place hiking trails, picnic areas, sternwheeler excursions and an array of special events.

Commission historian Ray Swick says visitors will be taken by paddleboat to the park, which is tentatively scheduled to open in early fall.

The work is being paid for with part of a $2.8 million appropriation authorized by the legislature in 1975. Fowler says he expects the rest of the money to go for the eventual construction of a Blennerhassett Island museum.

On the island are the ruins of Blennerhassett's lavish estate, modeled after the mansions of the European aristocracy and built over the course of two years at the then-exorbitant cost of $40,000. Still standing are the Neale House, a large brick structure built in 1832, and the remains of a late 19th-century broom factory.

The last time the island was given a facelift was in the mid-1930s when retired businessman Amos K. Gordon planted hundreds of black walnut, sycamore and elm trees. With his death in 1956, the island went to weed.

The latest restoration plan harkens to the decade before the turn of the century, when Blennerhassett Island was a popular park with a shooting gallery, bowling alley and dance pavilion. It had a lovers' lane where couples could stroll quietly down a boulevard of trees, wild grapes and honeysuckle. Major-league baseball teams including the Cincinnati Reds and Pittsburgh Pirates played there.

But the island's mystique goes back even further, says Swick, who has devoted more than a decade of study to it.

Fowler has found evidence that the island was inhabited as long as 12,000 years ago.

For some of the early residents, river clams were a diet staple. Flint needed for toolmaking was also abundant, and the island's desirability apparently led to a good deal of bloodshed. Fowler has unearthed numerous Indian graves, the bodies riddled by arrows.

But it was a peaceful paradise that Harman Blennerhassett and his wife found when they came to the island at the close of the 18th century.

It took the couple two years to build their island estate, and when they were through, its Spanish-white mansion and lush gardens were unlike anything on the frontier.

It was to this Eden that Burr came in 1804 in search of someone to finance his military plans. Whatever his goal, the fiasco that ensued signaled the end of the Blennerhassetts' idyllic life on the island.

Tobacco Queen At Openings

The Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival was represented last week at the Eastern Belt Tobacco Market Opening by Festival Queen Jeri Bullock. Miss Bullock was accompanied on the floor of the Farmers' Tobacco Warehouse by Kaye Hampton, the organization's executive director.

Ms. Bullock welcomed farmers, buyers and warehousemen to the opening and took time to answer questions for the various news media. When asked about her activities in the past few months she stated that she had been very busy through the growing season and expected her schedule to intensify even more now that the marketing season is here.

The day before the Eastern Belt Opening Ms. Bullock had been in Fairmont to address a gathering at the opening of the North Carolina-Border-South Carolina Markets and also carried the festival's banner to the traditional opening of the Lumberton Market. On opening day she also traveled to Wilson for the market opening there.

The Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival is a non-profit organization representing the five-state producing area of Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. It has its headquarters in Greenville.

Vanishing Condor Of California Has Some Allies

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer
VENTURA, Calif. (AP) — The California condor — a giant, soaring relic of an earlier time — is fast disappearing from its shrinking share of the Western sky.

And efforts to save North America's largest land bird from extinction are opening a deep and sometimes bitter schism within the environmental movement.

On the ground, the big vulture is ungainly and unattractive. "But when they're flying, they're just magnificent birds," said John Borneman of the National Audubon Society.

Like some prehistoric aircraft, the condor tucks its head and glides above its domain of bare, brown rocks and dull-green chaparral. The wind whistles softly as it curls black wings that can span nine feet.

The condors, with roots 10,000 years old, once ranged the Pacific Coast from Canada to Mexico. Now fewer than 30 survive to soar above the mountains, scrublands and concrete freeways barely two hours drive from smoggy Los Angeles.

The Audubon Society and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service are preparing a $2 million, decades-long program that includes breeding captured condors and tagging birds with solar-powered radio monitors. Approved by Congress last year, the project is billed as the most expensive rescue ever tried for an endangered species.

But conservationists are split over whether man and technology are the condor's hope for survival or the instruments of its oblivion.

"I doubt if we're ever going to be able to say the condor is secure. It's always going to need man's help," said Borneman, an Audubon condor specialist for 15 years.

"The condor's problem is man's refusal to give it a chance to recover on its own," said David Brower, veteran of four decades of environmental battles and founder of Friends of the Earth. "We should not try to make a synthetic condor (that is) dependent on human beings. That would be a kind of immortality."

Brower warns the intrusions could do more harm than good. Condors live 30 to 40 years, he said, so "we've still got time. Let's hold off and put in every effort we can to give the wild bird a chance in its own wild home."

His organization proposes habitat protection — a 360,000-acre wilderness area in the Los Padres National Forest north of Los Angeles.

Evangelized At GOP Gathering

DETROIT (AP) — Southern Baptists report more than 6,000 pieces of Christian literature were distributed during six days of operating a booth at Republican National Convention, and at least one young man had accepted Christ as a result of evangelizing at the booth.

Among other things, it distributed a button which said, "Ask me about the GOP." But the Baptist version of the letters was not Grand Old Party, but "Gospel of Peace."

— as the primary alternative to captive breeding. It also urges curbs on pesticides.

Friends of the Earth, allied with the Sierra Club, has threatened court action against the Fish and Wildlife Service and Audubon, which supports the wilderness area but contends it alone can't save the condor.

The controversy boiled over June 30 when one of only two known condor chicks died while being weighed and measured as part of an information-gathering phase of the project. The surviving chick apparently suffered no ill effects.

The state Fish and Game Commission, which must approve the federal program, withdrew its permits for the plan pending study and hearings. That could delay the program by a year or scuttle it.

Greg Serrurier of Friends of the Earth called the death "a tragic loss that we feel was an avoidable tragedy" — proof condors are so sensitive that no hands-on study can be allowed.

Fish and Wildlife biologist Noel Snyder, who was at the scene, agreed the death was tragic. But he said risks must be taken to learn why condors are disappearing and how to save them. "We contend the biggest risk — the risk to the whole species — is to do nothing."

Borneman said the project hopes to attach transmitters to at least eight condors. Five other unmated birds would be captured and, with a male condor at the Los Angeles Zoo, form three pairs for captive breeding.

He said capturing the birds would take several years. The breeding lifespan of condors is not known, but scientists say they seem to mate for life. No California condor has been born in captivity.

Biologists say captive breeding should increase the number of offspring from the birds, which apparently lay only one egg every other year in the wild.

"It's called double-clutching," Snyder said. "If you take an egg from the nest (for artificial incubation), they will lay another egg. That happens in captivity with other species such as the Andean condor," a relative of the endangered California bird.

Borneman said descendants of the captive condors would be returned to the wild after being taught to survive.

"To the best of our scientific knowledge and opinion," he said, "this is the only way to save the California condor. The alternative is total extinction."

But Serrurier said, "We don't think zoo-reared birds are the key to this. These (captive) condors may become nothing more than feathered pigs."

Borneman said research is vital because "it looks as if the population has been declining by one or two birds each year" and no one knows why.

Major losses occurred at the turn of the century, when collectors paid up to $250 each for eggs. At least 200 birds were killed for museum displays.

The current problems, Borneman said, include pesticides, indiscriminate hunters, loss of habitat and other unrecognized factors. He said only intensive study can reveal solutions.

The state Fish and Game

Commission, meanwhile, is caught in the middle and has responsibility for overseeing the operation.

"The commission is going to want a lot of questions answered before it considers any new application," said spokesman Joe Sheehan.

"They certainly don't want anything to happen to any more chicks."

FACES EXTINCTION — This giant California condor perched in its cage in the Los Angeles Zoo is one of the fewer than 30 condors that survive in an area that once ranged along the Pacific coast from Canada to Mexico. (AP Laserphoto)

Adult Homes Program In W. Virginia.

By BRYNA BRENNAN
Associated Press Writer
RONDA, W.Va. (AP) —
Time has slowed Edna Persinger a bit, but it hasn't diminished her passion for helping.

The 65-year-old Ronda woman had "been doing private duty, taking care of the sick, you know." Age restricted that endeavor last year, but not her usefulness.

Mrs. Persinger responded by joining the hundreds of West Virginians who open their homes to adults who otherwise would be in state hospitals or nursing homes.

"It's company, really, and it helps out financially," Mrs. Persinger said of the welfare department's Adult Family Care program. "I just like taking care of people."

Begun nine years ago, the program was praised by its director, Ronald Nester of the state's Division of Services for the Aged, Blind and Disabled.

"People seem to be more willing to open their homes in West Virginia," Nester said. "Many other states don't want to let people in. They dump their old people and mental patients onto the streets."

"It's quite a contrast to what we have here."

Mrs. Persinger opened her home, along Cabin Creek in Kanawha County, last year to two women. Rose Mae West, 52, is the latest boarder.

"She was abandoned as a child," Mrs. Persinger said. "They found her as a baby in a shoe box. I've never got to knowing who cared for her through the years."

Iva Riffle, 73 and a widow for the last 35 years, moved into the four-room Persinger home last year when she "couldn't climb the stairs anymore."

If she didn't need help, "I'd rather be alone," Mrs. Riffle said with a sigh. But she readily admitted that her circumstances could be worse, and said Mrs. Persinger is "good company."

Statewide, the program assists about 2,000 adults who need help caring for themselves, Nester said.

When it began, he said, the program catered to the elderly who could not stay at home alone but did not require hospitalization or nursing home care. Now the majority of clients, as he calls them, are former mental patients who have been moved out of institutions.

"We slowly moved patients out rather than passing legislation and turning hundreds loose on the state," Nester said. "Most of the states don't have a program like this."

The home's owners are given the monthly Supplemental Insurance Income checks sent to those in their care. In exchange, they provide room, board and a $30 stipend for personal items. The state supplements the government checks at an average monthly rate of $70 per client, Nester said.

Last year, the state paid out about $900,000 to the homeowners, he said, adding that wages for social workers and the 27 state offices were not included in the figure.

The maximum monthly amount paid to an owner, based on the amount of care required, was $295 per boarder as of July 1, Nester said.

"The rates that we're paying, they're not getting rich out there," he said.

Nester said many of the homes' owners are widows.

"A lot of women in West Virginia and everywhere outlive their husbands by six, eight years. They want to contribute," he said.

The state recruits the homes by advertising, but Nester said the primary source is word-of-mouth.

"We're trying to give people some choices instead of having them be dumped in one place," he said.

GROWING CONVICTION
EMMAUS, Pa. (AP) — A survey by a national publication dedicated to organic gardening has shown that more American home owners than ever before are returning to the "old-fashioned way" of growing vegetables.

Organic Gardening based this conclusion on a poll of its nearly 1.5 million subscribers. It says they indicated a preference for natural fertilizers and mulches.

Proper Use Of Hebrew Is Proposed

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli legislator Moshe Shamir has introduced a bill that has rekindled an old dispute in Israel: What is the right way to speak Hebrew?

The proposed legislation has led to charges that Shamir, a member of the small, ultra-nationalist Tehiya Party, wants to establish a "language police."

But he said in a recent interview: "We are in real danger that the Hebrew language will die through assimilation."

He is demanding that all foreign movies in Israel be dubbed in Hebrew and that all shops bear Hebrew names. His bill also would require that English trade names and billboards — which are common here — be translated into Hebrew, and foreign language publications carry Hebrew summaries of their contents.

Obligatory dubbing would be a revolution for Israeli film viewers, since dubbing is virtually unknown in Israel, and foreign films are shown with Hebrew subtitles.

Some Cabinet ministers have supported a bill on the Hebrew language, but Shamir's version, which is being reviewed by a committee of Israel's Parliament, the Knesset, could undergo profound changes before it comes to a vote.

Shamir's fears of a dying Hebrew are not shared by other linguists, such as Dr. Reuven Sivan, who says he thinks the language has never been healthier.

"One shouldn't be a linguistic chauvinist," he says. "You can't force a shop owner to use a Hebrew word instead of 'boutique'."

The language of the Bible died out as a spoken tongue by the first century B.C., although Jews kept it alive in writings through the centuries. The early Zionist settlers who came to Palestine from Eastern Europe 100 years ago revived it, stubbornly refusing to speak their native languages of Yiddish, Russian or Polish.

They used ingenuity to update the ancient tongue, transforming the word for "chariot" into "railroad," for example, and putting together "voice" and "movement" to form "kol-noa" — movies. They also were not above using force.

"During the 1920s a Jew speaking English in the street was in danger of being physically assaulted by Hebrew purists," says Sivan.

But the settlers' dream of a Jewish nation speaking the pristine tongue of the Prophets lives on today.

A national language institute checks all government documents to ensure that they adhere to the rules of Hebrew grammar. The Israel radio carries daily programs correcting common grammatical errors. A weekly television program introduces new words and new meanings and grapples with such esoteric problems as the linguistically correct way to address a resident of Haifa: Is it Haifai, Haifi or Haifati?

Yet, despite all these efforts, Israelis continue to pepper their speech with slangy English, Arabic and Yiddish imports. And, says linguist Netiva Ben-Yehuda, that is as it should be.

"I am sick of being told how to speak my own language," she said in a recent debate on Shamir's bill. "Israelis are the most insecure people in the world because they are constantly being told they don't know how to talk. That's why all Israelis are hoarse by the age of 14 — they shout because they're afraid they won't be understood."

Mrs. Ben-Yehuda, co-author of a new dictionary of Hebrew slang and a leader of the anti-purity camp of linguists, says Shamir's draft bill is an attempt to expand "the language police."

"If you want people to speak differently, then educate them, don't try to force them with a law," she says. "If this keeps up, we'll get six months in jail for mixing tenses."

Hopeful News in Medicine

One of the most emotionally distressing aspects of the use of chemotherapy for cancers is the loss of hair that sometimes is associated with it.

A group of research workers at the University of Arizona College of Medicine found that chilling of the scalp during the course of treatment tends to preserve the hair in many patients.

They recommend that the patient's head be packed in plastic bags of crushed ice. This is held in place by turbans or elastic stockings. The ice treatment is started ten minutes before the chemotherapy is given and continues for about 30 minutes afterwards.

This treatment is used only with certain forms of chemotherapy.

Confirmation of a heart attack sometimes takes 24 or 48 hours. It takes about that length of time for the electrocardiogram to pick up the subtle changes that indicate the nature and severity of myocardial infarction, or heart attack.

In recent years, delicate enzyme studies have made possible the detection of heart attacks in as little as six hours.

Now, at the Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis, a group of scientists have found a method of detecting the presence of these enzymes in two hours. The research workers, using a glass bead technique, have found a high degree of accuracy. They believe that soon this simple test will be performed in hospitals all over the country.

Many remarkable drugs are now being used in the treatment of major psychiatric disorders. These drugs have revolutionized the treatment and control of mental diseases that would otherwise have incapacitated and hospitalized thousands of people.

One of the complications associated with drug treatment of schizophrenia and other psychoses is an involuntary movement disorder (dyskinesia). Sometimes it has been necessary to discontinue the use of the drug and deprive patients of the use of such valuable treatment.

A group of doctors at the Missouri Institute of Psychiatry recently showed that this complication could be controlled with "lecithin." This nutrient, which is derived from soy beans, has been so significant that a number of studies all over the country have been instituted to support these important findings.

In the American Heart Journal, a new experimental drug was described for use in angina attacks of the heart. They reported that research workers in Israel found that the drug, acebutolol, is a safe and effective treatment for the transient chest pains that occur when the blood supply to the heart is diminished. The drug seems to reduce the number and the severity of the attacks.

Working Outside Their Homelands

GENEVA (AP) — An estimated 140,000 physicians, about 6 percent of the world's total, are working outside their countries of origin or training, according to a recent study.

Citing statistics from the early 1970s, the report indicates that there were about 77,000 migrant doctors in the United States, 21,000 in Great Britain, and 11,000 in Canada.

The No. 1 "donor" country today of physicians is India, with an estimated 15,000 doctors abroad. The figure represents 13 percent of the country's total. The Philippines is the second largest donor with more than 9,500 doctors working overseas.
