Iranian Parliament Plans To Nominate Another PM

By The Associated Press
Iran's Parliament is preparing to consider selection of a new prime minister, a move that could clear the way for discussion of the American hostages and shift international attention away from two weeks of protests and hunger strikes by Iranian militants on both sides of the Atlantic.
Revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has given the Parliament, or Majlis, final authority over the fate of the 52 Americans held in Iran since Nov. 4. Formal debate on the issue has been delayed pending parliamentary approval of a prime minister, who will be in charge of forming a new government.

Tehran Radio predicted Thursday that Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr would nominate Education Minister Muhammad Ali Rajaie for the post. Rajaie, 47, spent four years as a political prisoner during the reign of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Late last month, Bani-Sadr withdrew his nomination of the national police chief, Mostafa Mir-Sa'im, in what was seen as a concession to the majority Islamic Republican Party. It was not immediately clear, however, whether Rajaie was closer to Bani-Sadr or the more radical Islamic party.

Radio Moscow quoted an interview with Rajaie by the Iranian news agency Pars in which Rajaie appeared to follow the party's fundamentalist line. He said he was opposed to forming a coalition government, adding: "The government must consist of followers of Ayatollah Khomeini," Radio Moscow said.
A recent poll by the party's newspaper revealed many in the party favor trying the hostages as spies and either expelling or subjecting those convicted to some kind of unspecified punishment.
Iranian calls for spy trials increased over the last week with the arrest of Iranian militants in London, Washington, D.C., and San Diego, Calif.
Many of those arrested during pro-Khomeini demonstrations refused to give their names to police, refused to eat while in jail and later accused authorities of brutality.

Both British and American officials denied the charges.
Dozens of Iranians demonstrated outside the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, Lebanon, today while 13 of about 200 anti-American Iranians were arrested during a downtown demonstration in Philippine capital of Manila.
More than 60 Iranians continued a hunger strike today at jails in London. Tehran radio quoted an Iranian diplomat in London as saying three of the protesters were seriously ill from the effects of the hunger strike. British officials confirmed the Iranians were continuing to refuse to eat but declined to comment on the broadcast report.
Another 27 Iranians remained jailed in San Diego following their arrest during a hunger strike and sit-in at San Diego State University. The group claims to be on a hunger strike in jail, but that assertion has been disputed by authorities.
California supporters of the Iranians jailed there said they would return to the university today for another demonstration.
Almost 200 Iranians, many of whom were arrested during an anti-American demonstration in Washington July 27, returned to the U.S. capital Thursday for another protest march following their release from federal prisons in New York late Tuesday.
There were no arrests during the latest Washington demonstration, but hundreds of District of Columbia police were needed to keep angry American counter-demonstrators away from the Iranian militants, many of whom were pelted with garbage as they marched in front of the White House.
Some of the Americans chanted anti-Khomeini slogans and demanded release of the hostages, who began their 279th day in captivity today.
The Iranians vowed to resume their Washington demonstrations today.

Protesters

NEW YORK (AP) — As much as campaign buttons, funny hats, cajoling lobbyists and general hangers on, protests have become a part of political conventions. Indeed, protesters are virtually holding a contrapuntal convention to the Democrats' meeting here.
Starting today, there is the promise of marches, civil disobedience, tent cities in parks and even a so-called "die-in."
The protesters will be from homosexual, pro-marijuana, anti-Klan anti-nuclear, anti-war and anti-draft groups, among others.
The activities counter point to the Democratic meeting are to begin today with the opening of the two-day People's Convention in the South Bronx and will continue every day of the convention and include "tent cities" at Manhattan's Central Park and Liberty Street in The Bronx.

SHE'S AT IT AGAIN — Mount St. Helens, Longview, Wa., which erupted May 18, killing dozens and devastating the countryside, erupted again Thursday late afternoon, sending an ominous plume of ash and steam skyward. Hurricane Watch For Texas Coast

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A hurricane watch was issued for the entire Texas Coast early this morning as Texans stocked up on candles and bottled water, homeowners hammered plywood over windows and 100 Red Cross workers headed for the Lone Star State.
The National Hurricane Center in Miami issued the hurricane watch at 5 a.m. today as Allen moved within 500 miles of this South Texas port city. The government of Mexico also issued a hurricane watch for that country's northeast coast.
The hurricane, with winds at 145 mph, was moving west northwest at 78 mph, and forecasters said it could reach the Texas Coast within 36 hours if it continued on its present course at that speed.
Hurricane warnings will likely be issued for portions of the coast later today. A watch means that preparations to protect against a hurricane should begin. When a warning is posted, evacuations should begin and other emergency measures should be implemented.

"Allen continues to be an extremely dangerous hurricane and is expected to strengthen again later today," forecasters said.
Along the Gulf Coast, standby emergency plans were taking shape as the death-dealing storm churned nearer to Texas.
The Disaster Emergency Management Agency was holding a planning meeting in Dallas today to organize the 35 federal agencies and volunteer relief agencies that would go into action if the hurricane struck.
While the storm was still moving through the Caribbean, oil companies began battening down offshore rigs and evacuating more than 2,500 workers.

And worried Texans — many of them new to a hurricane area — began laying in supplies.
"We're just about clean out of candles," said Rod Nichols, a Houston supermarket manager.
Besides restocking his store with powdered milk, canned meat, batteries and sterno, John Stewart also was dispensing advice. Some of his customers had moved to Houston since hurricane Celia in 1970 and had never coped with a hurricane.
At a building supply company, customers bought 5,000 sheets of plywood by Thursday afternoon, said assistant manager David Flemmings.
Bottled water suppliers said hospitals were boosting (Please turn to Page 10)

TRUCK DRIVING FEEDBACK

Bill Taylor of ABC Moving here has pointed out, in response to Wednesday's Hotline item, that though you can attend truck driving school at 18, you can't drive an interstate truck until you're 21. "It doesn't make sense," he said, "that I can send a 19-year-old to Asheville, but can't send him to Richmond, but that's the law and it prevents a lot of guys under 21 from getting truck-driving jobs."

TAR HEEL CARD

Where can I get the Tar Heel card I understand is offered for persons 60 and older in Pitt County to get discounts at some stores? B. K.

If you're 60 or older and can prove it, you should visit the Pitt County Council on Aging Office in the annex to the Pitt County Office Building, 1717 W. Fifth Street and get a Tar Heel Card. This card will entitle you to discounts and other special services at participating businesses throughout Pitt County. You may also want to put your name on the mailing list of the Council on Aging newsletter, because an updated list of the participating businesses is published in it every three months. If you've already signed up for a card, but not for the newsletter, you can call in, 752-1717.

There are now 56 businesses signed up, Council on Aging Director Jeff McAllister said. Any business person interested is invited to call him for information on how to take part. There is no charge to the business person, he said. On the contrary, McAllister will gladly make a personal visit to the business to discuss the program if requested.

This is a statewide program run through the Department of Human Resources Division of Aging, McAllister said, so people from other counties should also inquire at their county Council on Aging offices.

Two Killed In Wreck

In an early morning accident in the Penny Hill community west of Greenville, two Tarboro men were killed and three others injured.

According to investigating Trooper Fred Davis, Johnnie Franklin Scott, Jr., 19, and Allan Clark Sumerlin, 22, both of Tarboro, were killed instantly in the 3 a.m. crash.

Davis said the men were passengers in the late model van along with Thomas Hooks Mills, 18, and Chris Thomas Baker, 17, both of Tarboro, who were reported injured.

The investigator identified the driver of the van as Ralph Wayne Trevathan, 17, of Tarboro, who received minor injuries in the accident.

Davis said the truck was headed northwest toward Tarboro on N.C. 33 about 12 miles from Greenville, when the driver apparently fell asleep at the wheel, crossed the center line, and struck the bridge guard rail, overturning into the creek.

Parts of the bridge rail penetrated the front of the truck, separating the engine from the vehicle, finally lodging toward the rear of the van.

A crane from Greenville was called to assist in the removal of the truck from the creek along with Department of Transportation workers using cutting torches to cut parts of the railing from the van.

Davis said Trevathan was charged with careless and reckless driving and two counts of death by vehicle upon investigation of the wreck.

The van was listed as a total loss.

Kennedy In Command Of His Final Drive

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, his underdog presidential campaign nearing its climax, flew to this convention city today and took personal command of his final drive to convince Democratic delegates to repudiate President Carter.

Kennedy planned a day of interviews and was to address an outdoor rally on Park Avenue. Political operatives for President Carter also arrived today and set a schedule of meetings and interviews.

Over the weekend, with Carter relaxing at Camp David, Kennedy personally will lobby delegates arriving for next week's Democratic Convention.

Before leaving Washington, Kennedy refused again to commit himself to support Carter if the president is renominated by the Democratic National Convention.

In an interview on the ABC-TV show "Good Morning, America," Kennedy said he would have "no hesitancy" in supporting a nominee who adheres to the concepts of the Democratic Party. But differences in their views of those concepts have been major issues in the Carter-Kennedy fight for the 1980 nomination.

President Carter was waiting until Wednesday, the day the convention will vote on the presidential nomination, before heading for New York, but he was heavily involved in lobbying delegates.

Both camps maneuvered for advantage, each trying their best to convince delegates they were the winning side.

Kennedy let it be known he had ordered work begun on his speech accepting the presidential nomination.

Carter's campaign chairman, Robert Strauss, let it be known that if the president wins the rules fight on Monday, the opening night of the Democratic convention, there is no chance he will release his delegates to vote however they want on the presidential ballot.

"There is no possibility of releasing them after the vote, none whatsoever," said Strauss, who had said on Wednesday that he wouldn't rule out such a move, which had been mentioned as a possible conciliatory gesture.

Carter picked up the endorsement Thursday of the United Steel Workers of America, which is holding its convention in Los Angeles. It is the last major union to take sides in the presidential race.

In Washington, sources said that the political arm of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, its so-called Political Action Committee, will endorse GOP nominee Ronald Reagan for president the week after the Democratic convention. Reagan planned to spend the week of the convention off the campaign trail.

Independent candidate John B. Anderson campaigned in Pittsburgh on Thursday and predicted that Carter would be the Democratic nominee.

NICE, France (AP) — A suspect in Italy's worst postwar terrorist bombing claims an urge to impress a girlfriend with a bouquet of different colored roses can place him in Nice at about the time an explosion ripped apart a train station 200 miles away, according to a police transcript released today.

Marco Affatigato, described as a 24-year-old right-wing extremist, told police after his arrest Wednesday he haggled at length with a flower vendor in the old market of this Riviera resort Saturday morning around the time a bomb went off at a Bologna, Italy, train station. A total of 79 people either were killed instantly in the blast or died later of injuries.

The police transcripts said a British friend of Affatigato, Marie-Louise Kump, told officers the flowers were for her and said she was with Affatigato when he tried unsuccessfully to persuade the vendor to sell him an assortment of roses.

"The seller, who must remember me, said this wasn't done and finally convinced me" to buy roses of the same color, the transcript quoted Affatigato. Officers said they were searching for the flower vendor to confirm the story.

Authorities said Affatigato also told them he called his parents in Lucques, Italy, collect from Nice after hearing of the bombing, told them he feared being implicated and asked them to contact local police to assure them he was in France.

Detectives said they were checking local telephone records in an effort to confirm that story. Before he was taken to prison, Affatigato told newsmen, "I am certainly a political militant but I have never touched a weapon in my life."

Affatigato's lawyer, Gabriel Dufares de Citres, said a photograph of Affatigato was shown to survivors of the explosion, some of whom said it resembled a man they saw carrying a suitcase in a station waiting room before the explosion. But the lawyer claimed the photo was an old picture that showed a clean-shaven Affatigato, who now sports a full, black beard.

Affatigato was arrested on an international warrant from Italy. French and Italian authorities emphasized the warrant only charged him with falsifying a drivers license and petty theft.

But Italian authorities said they wanted to question him in connection with the bombing and about other extremists.

Someone claiming to speak for a right-wing Italian group initially claimed responsibility for the bombing, but a written communique carrying the group's signature later refuted the claim.

School Names Headmistress

Veteran school administrator Mrs. Bettie T. Forrest has been appointed headmistress of Carolina Country Day School here.

"We are delighted to have an educator of Mrs. Forrest's caliber directing the activity of our school," Board of Trustees Chairman Bill Blount said. "She has the responsibility of selecting faculty members, planning curriculum, doing all that is necessary to offer our children the best in private education."

Mrs. Forrest, a Greenville area native, has A. B. and M. A. degrees from East Carolina University. She has been a teacher in Grimesland and Greenville for 21 years and the principal of first Elmhurst Elementary and then South Greenville Elementary here for 13 years. She retired from public school work at the end of last school year and is already at work at Carolina Country Day, she said.

She and her husband, Elvy Forrest, are the parents of one son, Elvy Jr., 17.

The private school, located south of Greenville off State 1708, has Grades K-Six. Mrs. Forrest said she expects one class of each grade level, with no first-sixth grades having more than 25 students and no kindergarten class more than 20.

Ice Storm Hits Dakota

By LAURIE BOEDER Associated Press Writer WALSOTT, N.D. (AP) —

Theo Jordheim was one of the lucky ones: North Dakota's drought spared his farm and he had a bumper corn crop. Then a freak storm flattened 400 acres of crops, pummeled his livestock with hail and left his fields white with ice.

"The ground was all white when I came home," Jordheim said. "The trees were stripped, too. Not a leaf left on them."

"That was one of the best corn crops I ever had coming up. It's gone, all gone," he said.

The damage to crops and property in Wednesday night's storm was estimated at $50 million by the U.S. Department of Agriculture County Emergency Board. Damage to farm homes, buildings and machinery was estimated at more than $4.4 million.

Only scattered pockets of farmland in eastern North Dakota had escaped the summer's withering drought. They were thriving until hail and wind destroyed some of the few good crops left.

Hailstones — some as large as baseballs — pounded a six-county area, and the storms cut a swath seven miles wide along a 40-mile path.

Preliminary estimates show a 50 to 100 percent crop loss on more than 535,000 acres, or 836 square miles of North Dakota farmland, said David Strauss, state director of the U.S. Agricultural Conservation and Stabilization Service.

Afgans Fight For Gas Supply

NEW DELHI, India (AP) —

Afghan troops have been called to maintain order among taximen, bus drivers, private motorists and even military chauffeurs competing for the limited supply of gasoline in Kabul, the Afghan capital, a Western diplomatic report said today.

Some fistfights have broken out at the gas pumps where individual purchases have been limited to five liters (1 1/2 gallons) for the past seven days, the report added. No formal rationing has been announced.

Afghanistan's entire crude oil supply comes from the Soviet Union, whose troops thrust into the country last December to try to put down a burgeoning guerrilla uprising. Occasional shortages have been reported in the past, when overland petroleum convoys were delayed.

The current shortage, going into its second week, was becoming a major problem in the capital, the source said.

Security was reported increased on the streets of Kabul, with more armed patrols and armored vehicles seen the past few days and spot searches of taxis and private vehicles by police and Marxist vigilantes.

Fighting outside the city, appeared to have slackened however, with no new reports of battles and some military units apparently returning to their bases, the diplomatic report said.

Miss Styres Is Married

LENOIR — Mary Catherine Styres and Stanley Clarence Bracey were united in marriage in a 4 p.m. ceremony Saturday at the First Presbyterian Church here.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Newland Styres of Lenoir and granddaughter of Mrs. Marvin Dixon Sugg of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Richard Bracey of Montezuma.

The Rev. Parker T. Williamson, church minister, officiated at the double ring ceremony. Guests were greeted in the narthex by Amy Chapman of Goldsboro, cousin of the bride, and Donna Marie McMahon of Boulder, Col., who haded guests programs.

Mrs. Lynn Richmond Bernhardt presented a program of organ music. Gerald Wayne Jones of Pinnacle sang "A Wedding Prayer."

The bride, escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, chose a gown of white chiffon with a Queen Anne neckline and capped sleeves. The bodice was of re-embroidered alencon lace which continued down the front of the full length skirt and extended into a chapel train. She wore a mantilla style veil with a re-embroidered alencon lace border. Lace appliques accented the cathedral length veil. She wore a necklace of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom, and carried a bouquet of roses, miniature carnations, daisies and baby's breath.

The bride's cousin, Malinda Elizabeth Chapman of Goldsboro, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Sara Carver Camp of Durham, Rebecca Lynn Campbell of Charlotte, Pamela Joy Conrad of Greensboro, Anna Leigh Foushee of Lenoir, Mrs. Anthony Frank Gentile of Charleston, S. C., Julie Ann Poteat of Lenoir and Melissa Dawn Ruffy of Houston, Tex.

They wore floor length dresses of white voile over yellow taffeta styled with rounded neckline accented with lace banding worn off the shoulders. They each carried a whiter wicker basket of yellow and white daisies and baby's breath with white lace streamers.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Richard William Fanning of Boone, head groomsman, William Richard Jr. of Granite Falls and James Stephen Bracey of Montezuma, brothers of the bridegroom, Robert Newland Jr. and William Sugg Styres of Lenoir, brothers of the bride, James Michael Lemons of Charlotte and Paul Larry Baker of Gastonia.

The mother of the bride wore a street length dress of mauve chiffon and the mother of the bridegroom selected a handwoven Irish linen beige ensemble. Both wore cymbidium orchids.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Leslie Darrell Hines Jr. of Lenoir.

The bride's parents entertained at a reception at Cedar Rock Country Club after the ceremony.

A dinner for immediate families and the bridal couple was held after the reception. The couple will be living in Charlotte after a trip to New Orleans.

The bride is a graduate of Lenoir High School, attended UNC-CH and graduated from Appalachian State University. She was a member of Alpha Delta Pi social sorority, Gamma Beta Phi and Beta Alpha Psi. She is now an accountant with Belk Stores Services. The bridegroom is a graduate of Avery County High School and Appalachian State University. He was a member of Tau Kappa Epsilon social fraternity. He is also an accountant with Belk Stores Services.

The bridal couple was honored at brunch at the Green Park Inn, Blowing Rock, prior to the wedding. On Friday evening after the rehearsal, the bridegroom's parents entertained at dinner and porch party at Cedar Rock Country Club.

Engagement Announced

MARGARET ROYCE JONES, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Jones of Danville, Va., who announce her engagement to David Edward Davenport, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Davenport Jr. of Farmville. The wedding is set for Aug. 30.

Dear Abby

Ignore Requests From Clods

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am sure my problem is not unique, but it has me stumped. I am an artist and a craftsman who has given many pieces of handmade jewelry and art to friends and relatives. They seem to think that if they lose an earring, or drop it and step on it, it's my responsibility to repair or replace it. Or if the colors in one of my paintings doesn't match their sofa pillows, I should change it for them! (Why don't they change their slipcovers to match my painting?)

Why should I have to replace, repair or adjust a gift after I have given it?

If my gifts were ordinary it would be another matter, but I get top prices for my work, and I think the recipients of my gifts would have the good manners to thank me and keep quiet, or throw them away if they so choose. After I give something I don't care what they do with it; neither do I want the responsibility for it for the rest of my life.

Short of including a statement to that effect along with each gift, I don't know how to convey this to them. Any ideas?

IMPOSED-UPON ARTIST

DEAR IMPOSED-UPON: Don't offend those with good manners by including such a disclaimer along with your gift. Simply ignore requests from presumptuous, insensitive clods.

DEAR ABBY: Have you ever heard of a sexy 7-year-old? My sister has one. Her daughter, Linda, is the sexiest kid you'll ever see. She's rather shy around women, but she flirts and climbs all over every man she sees. She doesn't have to know him very well, either. I've seen her act this way with strangers. She's such an affectionate little thing. I worry about her.

Linda is an only child. Her parents were divorced when she was 2, and she hasn't seen her father since. My sister is soured on men and hasn't had a man in her life since Linda's father took off.

Abby, what would make a 7-year-old girl act like this? And how can I help? I'm so afraid her actions will get her into trouble one day.

CONCERNED AUNT

DEAR CONCERNED: It's natural for little girls who have been ignored or neglected by their fathers to reach out for male attention and approval from any man who's handy. Share your concern with your sister and urge her to get counseling for Linda. Early therapy could avert a tendency toward sexual promiscuity later.

CONFIDENTIAL TO RED IN RENO: Be a pal and tell your buddy the bartender that his wife has taken up bird-watching. And he's the bird she's watching.

Marines Honor Grant

Granville Grant of Falkland was honored recently on his 85th birthday at the Officers Club of Cherry Point Marine Air Station.

Grant and his wife, Mrs. Marguerite Moore Grant, attended ceremonies honoring his nephew, Col. Harvey Bradshaw, who was retiring after 30 years of service with the Marine Corps. The Grants were seated at the head table with Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Corliss and Col. Bradshaw. Grant was presented a birthday cake with 85 candles. His military service during World War I was recognized and he was given an Honorary Aviators Award, Marine emblem jewelry and a painting. The Marine Band played "Happy Birthday" to him.

Other guests attending were Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Grant and Miss Lisa Grant of Sneads Ferry, Mr. and Mrs. Stacy Grant of Sanford, Reginald Summerell and Norwood Whitehurst of Greenville, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Shepard of Detroit, and Miss Betty Grant of Atlanta.

Col. Bradshaw lives on Hooker Road in Greenville.

Before you put that new garment into the closet, look at the labels. Some garments must be washed before they're worn. Others could be damaged just by ordinary washing or drycleaning.

Couple Weds Recently

Lt. (jg) Susan Still French and Lt. John Leo Jannuzzi were married July 26 in the Hickam AFB Chapel, Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. N. Still Jr. of Greenville, N. C. and a graduate of East Carolina University. The parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Leo Joseph Jannuzzi of North Plainfield, N. J., who were present for the ceremony.

Mrs. John Leo Jannuzzi

The bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest M. Boling Jr. of Cleveland, Miss., were also present and the bride was given in marriage by her uncle.

After a wedding trip to Maui Island, the couple will live in Hawaii where they are members of the Naval Community at Pearl Harbor.

Family Picnic Held Tuesday

Impossible Scenario

As we understand it, when a state holds a presidential primary, delegates are elected (not a candidate or candidates), and the delegates are named to cast their votes for a particular candidate at a national convention.

Some are allotted to one contender, some may be allotted to others; but the principle is that delegates are chosen at state conventions to cast their votes for particular individuals.

It isn't a new rule. It has been around quite a spell.

And now, at this late date, there is a rising clamor to let the delegates vote for whom they please. This is unreasonable.

Who has the authority to "release" delegates? It seems to us it rests with the people who actually chose them. Their positions are dependent upon the wishes of the voters; thus, to "release" them from their support for any candidate would have to come from the people who elected them.

That would require another series of party primaries . . . and time has run out. It's an impossible scenario.

Steps Tedious, But Essential

The first step in the long process of obtaining capital improvements for university campuses has been taken; chancellors have submitted requests for $700 million in construction projects for the 1981-83 biennium to the UNC administration.

From that list the administration will make recommendations to the Advisory Budget Commission which will, in turn, recommend to the legislature.

It is well known, of course, that $700 million won't be available to fund all the requested projects. Priorities will be established and the most essential of the requests will eventually find their way into the final appropriations measure.

It is a tedious, but necessary, process to provide for the most pressing needs of the university system.

THIS AFTERNOON History Slighted

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Tar Heel youngsters in school today are being slighted when it comes to learning the colorful history of North Carolina, a Chapel Hill history professor thinks.

That's one reason that William S. Powell wrote his history of the state. It is not a stuffy recitation of forgettable dates and unremarkable people. Indeed, Powell did little original research pinning down obscure facts. To the contrary, he wrote it chiefly from lecture notes, memories, and impressions.

The result? "It was almost like writing a novel. . . I would just sit down and let it flow. The difference being, of course, it is based on fact," Powell recalls.

The central theme in the slender volume is independence. "North Carolinians don't like to be told what to do. . . never have," he says.

This strong streak of independence leads directly to another Tar Heel characteristic: a propensity to set off on the wrong track with everybody moving off in a giant, sweeping stampede aimed at certain disaster.

Throughout North Carolina's history, this has happened time and again. Students of the state's government and her people still see this strong-headedness from time to time.

But then, short of total disaster, the stampede stops. "The good sense of the people prevails at last," the University of North Carolina professor recounts.

From many years of scholarly pursuit of his native state, her people, and her idiosyncracies, Powell concludes that Tar Heels are very tolerant of others and their divergent viewpoints. That is one reason so many newcomers from elsewhere in the nation find a home in North Carolina and learn to love the state. . . many of them adopting the state and wishing they were, indeed, Tar Heel born and bred.

Despite their best efforts, however, the truth will out: you can spot a native by the way he or she talks. Powell can even pin down the disiect down to the county where the person grew up in a good number of cases.

There are three distinct dialects across the state: the trained ear can spot a mountain-reared person; an easterner; or the Outer Banks native.

Actually, native North Carolinians talk two different languages, switching from one to the other without really being aware of it. This trait is a dead giveaway of the true Tar Heel, Powell finds.

In the sophisticated, urban centers, the universities, the downtown commercial installations, Standard English is the rule.

Down Home
But back home on the weekends, or even in some plush board room whenever enough Tar Heels are present, the language slips almost imperceptibly back in time till all are talking that down-home stuff. Then is when the Yankee who is trying to pass is trapped by his tongue.

What else does Powell conclude about North Carolinians? You can typically trust a Tar Heel to do the right thing; once he figures out what is the right thing. And, you will find that individuals who at first blush are rural, backwoods types

"O-O-OH, B-B-BROTHER!"

By ART BUCHWALD

Many Willing Helpers

One of the advantages of being president of the United States is that you don't have to support your brother. There are so many other people who are willing to do it for you.

I thought of this the other day when I read that Billy Carter had received more than $220,000 from Col.

Kadafi's Libyan government in what Billy described as part of a $500,000 loan. (It was done with a handshake, which shows you how trusting the Libyans are.)

ART BUCHWALD

There were some people in the U.S. who believed that Kadafi had given Billy the loan because he was hoping that Billy could influence his brother when it came to Arab affairs. But the truth of the matter is that the Libyans have always had a warm spot in their hearts for anyone who owns a gas station in Georgia, and Billy's White House connection was the furthest thing from their minds.

This is how the loan came about. The Libyans, as part of their goodwill policy to encourage Americans to use Libyan petroleum products, decided to hold a contest among independent gasoline station owners in the United States. All the names were put into a giant oil drum at a terrorist training camp outside of Tripoli, and Col. Kadafi pulled out one, who was selected as the "American Gas Pumper of the Year." Lo and behold, the name he selected was Billy Carter of Plains, Ga.

A call was placed to Billy, and Kadafi said, "Congratulations, you have just won an all-expense trip to Libya for two. One of our official airplane hijackers will be in touch with you to make the arrangements."

Billy was so excited he couldn't see straight. All his life he had wanted to visit Libya and in less than a month he was winging his way toward the land of his dreams. As Billy got off the plane, he was presented with four gold bracelets, a silver saddle worth $2,000, a serving platter, a ceremonial sword and a suit of clothes.

Then he was given a grand tour of the country. Finally he got to meet Kadafi, who personally thanked him for all Billy had done to push Libyan gasoline products. "If I can ever do anything for you," Kadafi said, "don't fail to ask."

"Well, I could use a $500,000 loan," Billy said, "to buy a new sign for my gas station." Kadafi smiled and reached into his pocket. "No sweat," he said, and started to count out the money. "I have only $220,000 with me. We'll send

To the editor:

The performance of the Pitt County Schools in educating our children has been appalling. One out of four high school students leave the Pitt County Schools without graduating. In the main, these are the black, the poor, the oppressed.

The reading levels of most black Pitt County students are appalling. The N. C. Competency Test reflects that 27.3 percent of the black children failed reading, whereas only 2.6 percent of the whites failed the same test.

There have been many alibis presented by the Pitt County Schools. One alibi is to blame the student. Another is to blame the student's economic status and cultural deprivation. Let's remember that whites do not always come from 100 percent high-class homes. It's not the project that's responsible for the massive failure of the Pitt County Schools; it's the attitudes toward the children who come out of the projects.

The Pitt County Branch of the NAACP is engaged in a campaign to reeducate the public and reorganize the Pitt Co. Public Schools System. Our black students are entitled to equal educational opportunities and to the truth about their abilities to gain master knowledge.

The Pitt Co. Branch of the NAACP is not against competency. We welcome it. But we want truth-in-testing, so that tests are validated and accurate measurements of what a student knows. We insist that the test be fair — that it test what the school is required to teach, and that the results be used, not to stigmatize black pupils, but to measure teacher effectiveness and to help black students attain a meaningful diploma.

The Pitt NAACP demands:

1. that the number of black teachers be in proportion to black student population.
2. that black guidance counselors be placed in schools with a high percentage of black students.
3. that dismissal and transfer policy be written, clearly understood by administration and teachers, and fairly and equally administered.
4. that testing be on what the schools are required to teach.
5. that testing be used, not to stigmatize black pupils, but to measure teacher effectiveness and help black students attain meaningful diplomas.

Strength For Today

Emptying The Mail Bags
Postal Service employees emptying mail bags are not allowed simply to shake out the contents. Regulations require that they turn the bags inside out to be absolutely certain that no letters are sticking to the bottom of the bag.

When people really get religion they turn their lives inside out in similar fashion. There are a lot of nominal Christians in the world who acknowledge the faith because they were brought up in a Christian home and in a Christian church. But there are others who become religious as the result of a profound experience. There is nothing inherited about their religion. The time came when for some reason—of the greatest importance for them—they turned their lives inside out.

Psychology and religion both unite in affirming that life can be improved in a meaningful way only when it is basically transformed. Said Jesus to Nicodemus, "Ye must be born again."

Is Disaster Just Ahead?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
DENVER — The hard reality afflicting the Democratic Party the week before its national convention prepares to renominate Jimmy Carter was brought home to Democratic governors over breakfast here when Gov. Joseph Brennan of Maine voiced a prophecy of doom.

Brennan, the only governor endorsing Sen. Edward M. Kennedy for president, declared to the closed-door meeting "a disaster on a magnitude with 1972" awaits Democrats if President Carter leads the ticket. Not one of 21 avowed pro-Carter governors present disputed him. "I couldn't really hear very well what Joe was saying," one silent Carterite later explained to us. But he and others, in private, substantiated Brennan's prophecy. They were accepting it in a mood of fatalism.

Refusal by Democratic governors, attending the annual National Governors Conference, to join dump-Carter efforts does not stem from either faith in the president's ultimate political recovery or admiration for his leadership. As for Carter's insistence on a rule binding delegates to primary election results, some of his staunchest advocates consider it a blunder.

But they will not take personal risks to challenge the inevitable — an attitude typifying governors of both parties the past two decades. Just as then-Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia played to an unresponsive audience at the Houston governors conference in 1972 when he warned of perils in George McGovern's impending nomination, so advocates of an "open convention" found no allies here.

Democratic congressmen who launched that movement a week earlier had counted on this Denver meeting yielding influential recruits. They had expected proselytizing led by Gov. Ella Grasso of Connecticut, a Carter backer who had apparently come out against the binding rule, and Gov. Hugh Carey of New York, who claims credit for the "open convention" idea.

That these congressmen were poorly advised to put their faith in governors soon became clear. Gene Eidenberg, the effective White House liaison with the governors, soon had Grasso on the telephone; she informed him she really did not oppose the rule, only its enforcement, and therefore would vote with Carter for the rule. Grasso, who has had health problems, did not come to Denver.

Carey, often absent from governors conferences, did attend. At the breakfast meeting, he used his Brooklyn Irish eloquence to proclaim the inappropriateness of "loyalty oaths" for Democrats. He told a former colleague in Congress, John Bell Williams of Mississippi, had been disciplined by House Democrats for disloyalty and then went home to be elected governor on the Democratic ticket. Carey's performance was immensely enjoyed and totally ignored.

"I would say that Hugh Carey is not the most influential governor," one of his highly influential Southern colleagues told us, in dry understatement, adding: "But he is probably a little more influential than the governor of California." Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., who for years has privately proclaimed Carter a sure loser in California, was on his good behavior here as part of his political rehabilitation program; he ventured no opinion on anything so political as the convention rules fight.

With the governors of New York and California discounted, big-state influence among the Democratic governors is negligible (the governors of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and Texas are Republicans). The rest of the 31 Democratic governors are mainly from smaller states and do not share the same contempt for Carter's performance in office felt by Carey, Brown and many senior members of Congress.

Instead of contempt, there is a sense of futility about trying to guide the president. At the annual governors meeting in Louisville a year ago, Democrats pressed hard for a Carter switch to bread-and-butter concerns (including priority for economic growth and energy development over environmental protection). There was no such talk in Denver. Nor did any governor press for a resolution praising the president's record in office.

There was private grumbling about tactics from Carter's most loyal supporters: liberal Southern governors. Gov. Jim Hunt of North Carolina disagrees with Carter's insistence on the new rule binding delegates and considers it a sign of the president's intransigent morality unwisely applied to politics.

No governor is closer to Carter than Hunt, but he never has discussed this with the president. Nor has another important Carterite, Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas. Burdened with the serious drought crisis, Clinton told us he had not had time to either approve or not approve of the president's adamant position on the rule.

The star of Denver was not a governor but Carter's campaign chairman, Robert S. Strauss. He put on a virtuoso performance at the breakfast, vigorously invoking personal ties, loyalty to the president and even patriotism in behalf of binding the delegates. "It was a helluva show," one admiring governor told us. It was also overkill. Strauss was talking

Families Having To Double Up

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Big bills and lost jobs are forcing households to double-up.

Married couples are moving in with parents. Singles are giving up apartments. Elderly parents are moving in with children.

The result, says Sindlinger & Co., is a household decline of 239,000 in June and July, and the potential for a one-year shrinkage of a million units, which would be the greatest since World War Two.

Albert Sindlinger, chairman of the Media, Pa. economic research and forecasting firm, blames "rising utility bills, high property taxes, the high cost of household maintenance and rising rents."

Sindlinger discovered the shrinkage, which seems to have begun around Memorial Day, during his company's telephone survey of 1,200 households a week, which has been a regular routine for close to 25 years.

He calculates that in the following two months the household count declined from 73,931,000 units to 73,692,000, and that further declines can be expected, especially if the economy continues to worsen.

He feels the extreme possibility — not a forecast — would be a falloff of up to 10 million units, a range that presupposes a depression. For now, however, he sees the decline continuing "for a year at least."

In a way, he said, we are retreating to the lifestyle of 50 years ago when three generations lived under one roof, a style that in more recent years gave way to one-generation and even one-member households.

Sindlinger, whose analyses are widely followed by retailers and manufacturers, believes that if the trend continues for more than a year it could change many other economic expectations and projections.

It could, for example, mean reduced appliance and automobile sales, he says. He believes it would certainly mean less than anticipated demand for housing. And it probably means more additions to existing housing. Sindlinger's researchers found the greatest household contraction in the heavy industry states of the Midwest and Northeast, excluding New England. He finds the trend especially clear in such states as Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey.

The tipoff came, he says, when researchers found 4 or 5 adults living at the same address and sought to determine the reason why. With growing frequency, he said, it was explained that "our daughter just moved in," or "our son moved in with his wife and child."

The doublers, they found, are mostly from three age categories: very young adults or even teenagers; 40-year to 45-year singles, many of them divorced or legally separated; and those 70 years or older.

The doublers include some members of the social set sometimes called the swingling singles, named because of their carefree, sometimes cash-rich lifestyle in which a separate apartment played a central role.

Strains on that lifestyle have intensified as rents, utilities and other household maintenance costs have soared, and as apartments in many areas have been converted to condominiums and cooperatives.

Housing industry officials generally have forecast a continuation of conversions, a shortage of rental apartments and a shortage of single-family houses, in large part because of demographic reasons.

During the 1980s, these housing officials generally point out, more Americans will become age 30 — considered a home-buying age — than ever before in history. Housing shortages have been widely forecast.

If doubling-up continues for several years it might lessen that demand for housing, as well as for a host of other items that accompany the purchase of a home. It would seriously upset many economic projections.

The new measure of economic change, generally ignored until now, will probably be as closely watched in the future as the far more popular economic indicators, such as unemployment and housing starts.

Carter Panel Looking For Lawyer

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
The Senate's Billy Carter subcommittee, which says it wants to have most of its work done by month's end, is still looking for a top-flight lawyer to lead its investigation. Thursday, the panel's first choice said no.

And one of the second choices says he might not be able to do it, either.

James F. Neal, the former Watergate prosecutor who was offered the job, said he can't spare the time from his Nashville, Tenn., law practice to be special counsel for the investigation into Billy Carter's Libyan connection and White House involvement in it.

A subcommittee source said the search now is concentrating on Philip A. Lacovara of Washington, who argued the Watergate tapes case before the Supreme Court, and former U.S. Attorney Robert B.

Fiske Jr. of New York.

But Lacovara said that while he "might be interested," he could be available only part time as an outside counsel to oversee the probe.

The subcommittee already has completed two days of background hearings and is expected to start work in earnest after next week's Democratic National Convention.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., the subcommittee chairman, said the panel hopes to finish investigative hearings by the end of this month. It is to submit its report by Oct. 4, a month to the day before the presidential election.

Bayh said the search for a special counsel has been hindered by publicity that Neal was offered the job. "Whoever is next is number two or three choice, and that lessens the chance of getting someone."

Many of the nine senators on the panel already have left Washington for the congressional recess, but Bayh said "we're going to bust our tail trying to find" a chief counsel in the next week or so.

The slow start drew criticism Thursday from both political parties.

Sen. Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind., a subcommittee member, cautioned that the longer the "tedious and glacial pace" continues, "the more we intrude on the election and the more partisan it could become."

"The majority of subcommittee members are serious about this investigation, but we don't want to make it a lifetime career," Lugar said.

While more than a dozen attorneys from Bayh's personal and committee staffs have been assigned to the case, the Washington Post quoted an unidentified top aide to one Democratic senator as saying, "No one has a clear concept of what to do. It's a turkey in terms of being a real investigation. The president's news conference took the wind out of our sails."

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said whoever is chosen as special counsel should give "top priority" to Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti's revelation that he temporarily withheld intelligence information about the president's brother from Justice Department investigators.

Civiletti said Wednesday he saw "highly sensitive" intelligence reports in April that the Libyan government might be preparing to make payments to Billy Carter. He said he did not tell his investigators about them until nearly two months later because he did not want to risk either compromising an intelligence source or aborting the payment.

Dole said Civiletti's disclosure "raises serious questions, including the possibility that the attorney general deliberately obstructed justice."

the rest of it to you through one of our assassination squads."

"That's mighty white of you, Colonel. Do you want me to sign anything?"

Kadafi laughed. "For a lousy $500,000? What kind of people do you think we are?"

As Billy put the money into his pocket he said, "I believe I should tell you something, Colonel. I may be just a good ol' boy gas pumper, but my brother is president of the United States. Do you still want to give me the loan?"

"Of course. We never hold it against anybody what his brother does. If we did we'd be out of the personal loan business."

Meanwhile, the Justice Department widened its internal investigation launched after Civiletti admitted talking with the president about Billy Carter's refusal to register as a foreign agent.

A department directive issued Thursday gives Michael E. Shaheen Jr., head of the Office of Professional Responsibility, authority to question the president, other White House officials, Billy Carter and his attorneys and Justice Department officials. He also may convene a grand jury, grant immunity to witnesses and bring criminal or civil charges against anyone under investigation.

Shooting Film To Be Shown To Jury

By ELISSA McCRAY
Associated Press Writer
GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) - A film showing the shooting during an anti-Klan rally in which five people were killed last November was to be shown to jurors today in the murder trial of six Ku Klux Klansmen and American Nazis.

Superior Court Judge James M. Long cleared the way Thursday for jurors to see the film when he allowed its introduction as evidence. Long's ruling came after lengthy arguments by prosecution and defense attorneys, who tried to block use of the film.

Earlier Thursday, television photographer George G. Vaughn testified that the film shows several instances of shootings and beatings during the rally disturbance.

Vaughn's testimony came on the fourth day of the trial in which the six Klansmen and Nazis are charged with the slaying of five Communist Workers Party members and sympathizers.

In a related development, District Attorney Mike Schlosser said in an interview that he will turn over to the defense only one-half page of a 12-page report filed by an undercover federal agent who infiltrated a Forsyth County Nazi group before the November shootings.

Schlosser was ordered earlier this week by Long to give the defense any portion of the agent's report that might tend to exonerate the defendants. The agent, Bernard Butkovich of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Firearms and Tobacco, reportedly participated in planning that preceded the Nazi-Klan motorcade to the CWP rally site.

In allowing the use of the television film, Long denied a prosecution request that it be admitted as substantive evidence - evidence that can stand on its own merits. Instead, he ruled it could only be used to illustrate Vaughn's testimony.

Under North Carolina law, films and photographs can only be used as illustrative evidence. On Tuesday Long refused to allow photographs of the rally taken by a police photographer to be introduced as substantive evidence.

After the jury was dismissed from the courtroom Thursday, prosecutor Rick Greeson argued that the film was "a piece of evidence that speaks for itself." He also told the court that the film would show defendant Jerry Paul Smith firing a pistol.

ATTENDS CONFERENCE
CHAPEL HILL - Robert Edward McAdams of Dobbs Training School, Kinston attended the 36th annual conference of child care personnel held at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill July 27-31.

The conference was sponsored by Group Child Care Consultant Services of the UNC School of Social Work. More than 125 people from across the country participated.

"This camera speaks for itself, it doesn't lie, it doesn't have a faulty memory," Greeson said. "Mr. Vaughn took film out there on Nov. 3 that shows exactly what happened."

Defense attorney Harold Greeson - who is not related to the prosecutor - argued that the film should not be introduced in any manner. By using the film, Greeson said, "the state will be able to do indirectly what they can't do directly."

After listening to the attorneys, Long said "this is an unusual case in which what the witness saw and what is on the film is identical." He then directed prosecutors to have projection equipment brought into the courtroom for the opening of court today.

Vaughn, who is a cameraman for WGHP-TV in High Point, said he was assigned by the station to film the Nov. 3 rally.

He said the first incident of violence that he saw occurred as cars in a motorcade moved slowly along a street near the demonstrators. He said, "Some people ran up and started beating on the cars with sticks."

Vaughn also testified that he saw two men firing long-barreled pistols into the air.

Vaughn said he saw a man in a rust-colored jacket standing across the street from him. "A man came up behind him and hit him over the head with a long stick. He fell to his knees, then lay down on the ground," Vaughn said.

After the shooting ended, Vaughn said he walked around the area, filming bodies and people trying to help the wounded.

"I filmed some people as they crawled out from under a car and they were helping a woman covered with blood," Vaughn said.

Several other reporters and photographers are among more than 280 potential witnesses the prosecution has alerted to testify during the trial.

The phonics series which is geared toward beginning readers is available at the Children's Library and Carver Branch during regular operating hours. The reading words in context designed to assist problem readers from first through fifth grade reading level is available only at the Children's Library.

Also available only at the children's Library is Basic Math for grades kindergarten through fourth grade. This material includes addition, subtraction, multiplication and division. Beginning French for third through eighth graders is also available at Sheppard Memorial Library.

Testimony Begins Today In Board Suit

NEW BERN — Testimony in U.S. Eastern District Court here today in a suit against the State and Pitt County Board of Education, by Lorraine Hines, guardian of 10-year-old James Bradley Hines of 204 Pinewood Dr., Greenville.

The complaint, filed with the U.S. Eastern District Court on May 30, charges that the defendants, "have not provided free and appropriate education," for the "emotionally handicapped" youth, in accordance with the Education for All Handicapped Children Act of 1975.

According to the complaint, a series of placement committee reviews, which began during the 1978-79 school year, determined that, "long term residential placement would be necessary to appropriately serve the education needs of the plaintiff," and ultimately resulted in recommendations that Hines be placed in Cherry Hospital in Goldsboro.

The suit, charging that the defendants, "have not provided full and appropriate education," contends that Cherry Hospital is, "not an appropriate education placement . . . in the least restrictive environment," as required under the law.

The suit asks that the defendants, "provide such education at," private school in Glen Moore, Pa., which, the complaint alleges, "is appropriate."

In addition, the complaint asks for $100,000 damages for the defendant's alleged failure to provide, "appropriate education," for Hines, who has attended schools in Winterville, in the past.

Hines' parents are Mr. and Mrs. Connie Hines.

Youth Minister Visits St. Peter's

This weekend, Thomas R. Davis, former youth minister at St. Peter's Catholic Church, will return for a formal visit.

Davis is now an ordained deacon of the church and will preach at the weekend services. Masses are at 5:30 p.m. Saturday and 8 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. Sunday morning.

Tom has been doing theology studies at the University of Louvain, Belgium for the last four years. He was recently ordained there as a deacon, the last step before priesthood in the Catholic Church.

Coffee Time, after the 10:30 Sunday Mass, will be sponsored by St. Peter's Women's Club.

Davis will return to Belgium for his final studies in September. Meanwhile, he is serving at St. Raphael's Church, Raleigh.

Protesters....

announced the plans at a news conference earlier this week.

"We intend to leave more of a mark on this convention process than people did in '76," said Dana Beal of the Rock Against Racism, a group planning a protest on Monday, the opening day of the convention.

He said that next week members of the Coalition for Direct Action at Seabrook and the Coalition Against Registration and the Draft planned to stage a "die-in" — a refusal to move in an effort to tie traffic.

Beal said that if demonstrators are dispersed by police, protesters would distribute a list of 500 major corporate headquarters in Manhattan to be the sites of protests.

The Bronx convention will consist of two days of public workshops on social and political issues and culminate in a caravan and noon rally and march to end outside the Democratic Convention site at Madison Square Garden, according to spokeswoman Margie Fine.

She said the convention's aim is to form a new party or movement to address social problems.

Members of the Bronx group would rally and march from Columbus Circle at the edge of Central Park, police said. They said homosexual groups have applied for permits to march from Washington Square in Greenwich Village to join the protest at the Garden and one group plans a march from 125th Street in Harlem.

ROUND WE GO

Going around in circles used to be fun. Now it has become the identifying mark of human bewilderment. For millions of people life seems a whirling confusion that takes them nowhere . . .

All religions have one thing in common: they stress the belief that life has purpose which man needs to seek, discover and fulfill. In short, religion is the cure for going around in circles.

Christianity inspires people to seek life's purpose in the love and will of God. When we join with others in the worship and work of our churches we discover goals for living and the spiritual strength to reach them.

When the merry-go-round has ceased to be merry it's time to get off. Yes, and time to get on with purposeful Christian living.

How's The Weather?

Anderson Won't Withdraw

WEATHER FORECAST — Warm weather is expected in the forecast period, Friday until Saturday morning, for most of the country. Cool weather is forecast for the Pacific Northwest coast and Minnesota. Showers are forecast for the northern Plains, east Texas, southern Florida and from the Midwest to New England. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
A hurricane watch was posted for the entire Texas Coast as Hurricane Allen moved within 500 miles of Brownsville, Texas, and Mount St. Helens erupted with a series of blasts for fifth time in three months.

The series of eruptions spewed plumes of ash and gas as high as eight miles, showering southwestern Washington communities with a light dusting of ash.

The hurricane was moving west-northwest with maximum winds up to 150 mph, and forecasters said if it continued on its present course, it could reach Texas over the weekend.

Showers and thunderstorms swept across Minnesota, Wisconsin and upper Michigan, storms extended across the lower Great Lakes and from southeast Wyoming and northeast Colorado into the Nebraska Panhandle.

There were also some widely scattered thundershowers in New Mexico, parts of Georgia, along the east coast of Florida and along the northern Pacific Coast.

Temperatures at 3 a.m.

EDT ranged from 46 degrees in Lewiston, Mont., to 101 degrees in Blythe, Calif.

Here are some early morning temperatures and conditions around the nation:

Eastern U.S.: Atlanta 81, fair; Cincinnati 75, fair; Cleveland 75, partly cloudy; Detroit 73, fair; Miami 82, partly cloudy; New York 79, fair; Philadelphia 72, fair; Pittsburgh 73, foggy.

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer
CLEVELAND (AP) — Eight days ago, independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson was asked what he would do if Sen. Edward M. Kennedy became the presidential nominee of next week's Democratic National Convention.

Anderson said he fully expected President Carter to be the choice of the Democrats but "should a different decision emerge ... it would only be prudent for one like myself who believes in the two-party system to consider what my position there would be."

Now, after fielding insistent questions about an apparent alliance with Kennedy, Anderson is saying that even if Kennedy pulls a dramatic political upset and wins nomination, "I am not going to withdraw from the race."

Events since Anderson met with the Massachusetts senator in Kennedy's Washington office last week exemplify Anderson's tightrope role as a Republican and an independent candidate who must seek Democratic votes if he is to present a serious election challenge.

While his meeting with Kennedy drew network television coverage and was front page news, some of his strongest supporters and major fund raisers were disillusioned with his discussion with a Democratic liberal.

So, over the last week, Anderson has been steadily putting distance between himself and Kennedy, although in reality he still needs to draw support from the senator's backers whom he hopes will be firmly disillusioned by the likely renomination of the president.

At a news conference in Pittsburgh on Thursday, Anderson said no matter what occurs in the Democratic convention next week, "I have no intention of withdrawing."

Should Kennedy mend his fences with Carter and endorse the president, Anderson said, "It won't affect my campaign. I'm just going to plow ahead and attract those people without his help."

That contrasts with Anderson's statements early this week when he indicated that if Kennedy were not nominated, he would seek to meet with him and seek his help for Anderson's own independent candidacy.

Last week's meeting with Kennedy, Anderson said on Thursday, "was an effort to indicate that I want to reach out to people in the Democratic Party as well as in the Republican Party and independents to provide support for this campaign."

Later he said, "What's wrong with going to a prominent member of the Democratic Party and saying, 'If you are not nominated, I want some support.'"

Continuing, he said, "There are 22 percent of the people in this country who are Republicans. I'm not going to be elected with Republican votes as an independent. I've got to have some Democratic votes."

Despite Anderson's protestations, the progress of next week's convention is conceded by those close to Anderson to be critical to the success of his independent effort.

They say that if the Democratic convention ends in harmony, that would be disastrous for Anderson because he would likely be unable to find a vice presidential running mate among seriously disaffected Kennedy supporters, or to locate important endorsements from among the senator's former backers.

More importantly, if Kennedy gives an apparently full-fledged endorsement to Carter, that will deny Anderson the votes of millions of Americans who backed the Massachusetts senator.

Today, Anderson is scheduled to make his second major appeal in five days to a black organization with a speech to the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

In a prepared text, Anderson pledged that his administration would focus on providing jobs for black youths whose unemployment rate runs as high as 50 percent in some large American cities, much the same thing he said to the National Urban League early this week.

While providing no immediate pledges of relief for the jobless, Anderson told the SCLC he would propose an $8 billion annual revitalization program for big American cities which would restore mass transit systems, rebuild streets and sewers and in the process provide jobs for unemployed young blacks.

Life As It's Lived

Oh, For Just One Little Lie

By GAIL MICHAELS
Whoever said that honesty is refreshing has never met my mother. I love my mother dearly, and that's why just once I wish she would lie to me.

If she would once say that I'm an excellent cook or a terrific housekeeper, I might be able to feel that I had successfully completed my passage into adulthood. As it is, I feel as if I should be making marshmallow sculptures in a halfway house.

Of course, she does compliment me occasionally. In fact, the last time she was here she told me, "Thank goodness you cut your hair. That last hair style was atrocious."

She also told me that the meal I had cooked for her arrival was very good — except that she always cuts the seed out of her squash and peels the tomatoes.

But my lackadaisical approach to mothering is what bothered her the most. Everytime I let Meg get close to the baby, Mother went pale. She regularly accented her visit by sucking in her breath so sharply that she sounded like a blow-out in reverse.

She followed Zachary's feet around the house with a receiving blanket. She wouldn't let him sit in his baby swing for fear it would cut off the circulation in his legs.

Even my method of feeding was in her estimation entirely the wrong choice. "If you didn't nurse, I could keep him for you for a couple of weeks while you were getting the house straight. I could give him a bottle, and he wouldn't even know you were gone."

A simple visit to a shopping mall became a major production under her direction. "Your'e going to let Meg go out in public in a Spiderman T-shirt?"

"I refuse to accept responsibility for Meg's taste."

"But she has a closet full of beautiful dresses that her grandfather and I sent her."

"For heaven's sake, she's going to eat chocolate ice cream."

"I want my grandchild to look nice."

"So you can sit there and hold a napkin under her chin like you did the last time?"

We waited for Meg to change; then I grabbed the diaper bag and headed for the door.

Mother couldn't resist. "Do you have enough blankets for him?"

"Mother it's 95 degrees outside."

"Now I don't mean to interfere, but I've always heard that cold feet cause colic. I'll get him a blanket."

"I swear, Mother, you make me feel incompetent."

She looked astonished. "I don't mean to..."

"Well, you do. You sound as if you don't think these children will survive under my care."

"I'm sorry. I guess I wish that I could be in your shoes."

"Aw, Mom."

"If you cover his feet."

30 industrials, which closed Thursday at its highest level in nearly 3½ years, jumped another 8.53 to 959.47 in the first two hours.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about a 5-2 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market's recent gains had created a "bandwagon" effect, attracting waves of new buyers.

For many weeks now, many analysts have been warning that the market was overdue for a downward "correction."

But that decline has repeatedly failed to materialize, and traders who had been holding back have rushed to join the party.

Among actively traded blue chips, General Motors was up ½ at 54½ and International Business Machines gained ¼ to 66.

The NYSE's composite index rose 58 to 71.18. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 3.84 at 320.97.

Volume on the Big Board reached 29.45 million shares at noontime, up from 28.79 million at the same point Thursday.

O's Nip White Sox, Within 5 1/2

BALTIMORE (AP) — For a long time, the Baltimore Orioles were treading water in pursuit of the New York Yankees. Now it's time for the defending American League champions to sink or swim.

A 2-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox Thursday night pulled the Orioles within 5 1/2 games of the first-place Yankees in the AL East, the closest they've been to the top since May 20.

But starting with the opener of a three-game series in New York tonight, the Orioles face the Yanks eight times in the next 11 days and play three against Kansas City's West Division leaders.

"Those next 11 games are going to be nasty," said Manager Earl Weaver. "If we come out of that last Yankee game as much as four or five out on the loss side, I'll still like our chances."

Baltimore's 33-14 record since June 15 is the best in baseball. Yet, only a current 13-2 string has enabled the Orioles to close ground on New York. During a 23-12 stretch at the start of their streak, the Orioles actually lost one-half game in the standings.

In other AL games Thursday night, the Cleveland Indians nipped the Toronto Blue Jays 7-6, the Boston Red Sox defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 7-3 and California edged Minnesota 4-2 in 15 innings.

The Orioles extended their winning streak to six games, their longest of the season, with the help of some charitable fielding by the White Sox in the decisive sixth inning.

Three routine grounders to the right side of the infield produced the first of two unearned runs and Ken Singleton's two-out double drove in the tie-breaker.

First baseman Lamar Johnson ranged far to his right for Kiko Garcia's leadoff grounder, fielding the ball in front of second baseman Jim Morrison. Johnson's throw was a bit low and when pitcher Steve Trout fell as he crossed the bag Garcia continued to second on what was scored as a throwing error.

Rich Dauer, giving himself up to advance Garcia, hit a weak tapper toward Morrison, but again Johnson fielded the ball. This time, Trout slipped on the mound and didn't even cover first. It went as a hit.

Garcia moved to third on the play and scored when Al Bumbry grounded into a double play started by an unimpeded Morrison. Rick Dempsey followed with a single and scored on Singleton's double.

Trout, 6-12, took the blame for the fielding mistakes. "The throw was down, but I should have caught it," he said. "After I slipped on the second grounder I conceded the hit because I felt I wouldn't get there in time."

Scott McGregor, 13-5, allowed seven hits, including a third-inning homer by Harold Baines.

"We had the defense and they didn't," said Singleton, who said he was looking forward to the New York series. "Let's see," he said, "it's Jim Palmer against Ron Guidry in the first game. If I weren't playing, I'd pay to see that one myself."

Indians 7, Blue Jays 6
Bo Diaz' one-out single in the bottom of the ninth gave the Indians their fifth consecutive victory and 13th in the last 15 games. Toby Harrah walked with one out against loser Jerry Garvin. Mike Barlow relieved and yielded a looping single to Joe Charboneau, advancing Harrah to third. With the infield and outfield drawn in, Diaz lined a shot over right fielder Lloyd Moseby's head.

Red Sox 7, Brewers 3
Veteran slugger Carl Yastrzemski triggered a four-run seventh inning with a bunt single. Yastrzmski, who will be 41 in two weeks, surprised the Brewers by putting down a bunt to the left of the mound which Milwaukee pitcher Paul Mitchell was unable to handle.

"Starting it off was the key," Yastrzmski said. "I motored down that first-base line like a 22-year old."

"The reason I didn't field the bunt is because my contact lens came halfway up my eye and I didn't have any depth perception on the ball," Mitchell said.

Jim Rice, one of baseball's most feared sluggers although in an 0-for-10 slump, then bunted Yastrzmski to second with his first sacrifice since 1978. Dwight Evans was the tie-breaker.

Yanks Juggle Lineup For Meeting With Baltimore

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees juggled their pitching rotation to have ace left-hander Ron Guidry ready for tonight's opener of the three-game weekend series against the Baltimore Orioles, but even Guidry isn't sure if it was the right move.

"It's not my decision. It came from the top. Therefore, I can't do anything about it," said Guidry, who came to Yankees Stadium Wednesday night ready to pitch against the Texas Rangers, then was told to take the night off and rest up for tonight's game against the second-place Orioles.

"I don't know if it'll have any effect on me, waiting a couple of more days to pitch, but obviously I would like to pitch when I'm supposed to pitch," added Guidry. "What concerns me most is that I've only pitched twice now in 16 days. I really wanted to get back out there."

Guidry, 12-6, will get his chance tonight against Baltimore veteran Jim Palmer, 11-8, in the first of eight meetings between the two clubs in the next 11 days.

The Yankees have occupied first place in the American League East since May 14. But Baltimore has been a hot team of late, winning its last six in a row and 13 of its last 15 to trim the Yankees' lead to 5 1/2 games. That's the closest the Orioles, defending A.L. East champions, have been since May 20.

"We're admitting this is a big series," said

Yankees General Manager Gene Michael, when asked why the club shuffled its pitching rotation. Rudy May stepped in for Guidry Wednesday and beat Texas 2-1 with last-out relief help from Rich Gossage, but that was only the first half of the gamble. The second half comes tonight.

"We felt it would be better to have Guidry pitch against the Orioles twice instead of only once, as it had been originally planned," explained Michael. "We also didn't think Tommy John would want to pitch three times, once with three days rest."

The Yankees will send Luis Tiant to the mound against Baltimore's Steve Stone on Saturday, with John pitching for New York on Sunday against the Orioles' Mike Flanagan. A crowd in excess of 150,000 is expected to attend the three games.

Then come three night games against the Chicago White Sox at Yankee Stadium before New York travels to Baltimore for a five-game series starting Thursday night.

"This is the time," said Yankees outfielder Bobby Murcer. "The games in August and September are the ones in which you can win or lose pennants."

"Rudy's win gave us a great psychological boost," said New York slugger Reggie Jackson, "and also made for a nice day off. But now it's up to the rest of us to go out and win this thing."

walked intentionally but Glenn Hoffman extended his hitting streak to 1 games with a tie-breaking single. Fred Holdsworth then gave up an RBI single to Dave Stapleton and a two-run double to Fred Lynn, who drove in a first-inning run with a sacrifice fly.

Angels 4, Twins 2
Rod Carew's two-out, two-run homer in the bottom of the 15th inning carried California to its fourth consecutive come-from-behind triumph and handed Minnesota its seventh straight loss. Carew's drive into the right-center field seats came off right-hander Al Williams, 1-1, who entered the game in the 15th. Andy Hassler, 3-0, pitched five scoreless innings of relief to get the win.

The Angels tied the game in the eighth on a bases-loaded, two-run single by Carney Lansford.

Five Tied For Second Stadler Leads PGA

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Craig Stadler, despite what he described as an erratic day, believes he's in fine position to capture the 62nd Professional Golfers Association championship.

"I've only shot under par four times on a Thursday and I either won or finished high," said Stadler who had a 34-33-67 opening round Thursday, over the 6,964-yard par 70 Oak Hill Country Club course. "That sort of pumps me up. I'm looking forward to tomorrow."

The 27-year-old Stadler, a five-year touring pro who won the Bob Hope and the Greensboro, said he was fortunate because he had to scramble to have pars Thursday. But, he added, every time he made a shot to get the par, he came right back with a birdie on the following hole which enabled him to take a one-stroke lead over a group of five.

Howard Twitty, Bobby Wazell, Curtis Strange, Gil Morgan and Bob Murphy.

"I didn't play real well at times but then I play awfully good at times," said Stadler, a winner of $183,297 this year, good enough for fourth place on the money list. "Every time I made a bad shot, I made a good shot to save par. That made the day."

"It was a fun day," said Stadler, the only player in the second half of the field who played in the afternoon to break par.

Favorites Tom Watson and Lee Trevino, who also played in the afternoon, came in at 75 and 74, respectively, while Jack Nicklaus, another considered in the class of the field, shot an even par 70.

However, Watson and Trevino showed no outward concern for their plight.

"I still believe that over par will win," said Watson, who couldn't recall the last time he played a round without at least one birdie. "I have to think 290 is still a good target for me. And it is usually easier to play in the morning. By the afternoon, all the greens are spiked up."

Trevino, who won the U.S. Open here in 1968, said he also believes a morning round, which he and Watson have today, will enable him to get back into the hunt.

"I had to fight very hard for the 74," he said. "I had a lot of crucial putts. But there will be one round where the winner of this tournament will shoot a 73 or 74. It is impossible for a person to play four rounds and keep it in the 67 or 68 range."

At 1-under par, two-strokes behind Stadler, were defending champion David Graham, Ben Crenshaw and Hale Irwin.

In addition to Nicklaus, nine others shot par on the humid Thursday, including Lee Elder, Johnny Miller, Jack Renner, Ray Floyd, Lon Hinkle, George Archer, Japan's Tohru Nakamura and club pro Morris Hatafsky of Daytona Beach, Fla.

Player: An Ambassador

ROCHESTER, N. Y. (AP) — South Africa's gutsy Gary Player hasn't given up hope of matching Jack Nicklaus' cache of major titles but never at the expense of his cherished role as "golf's world-girdling ambassador."

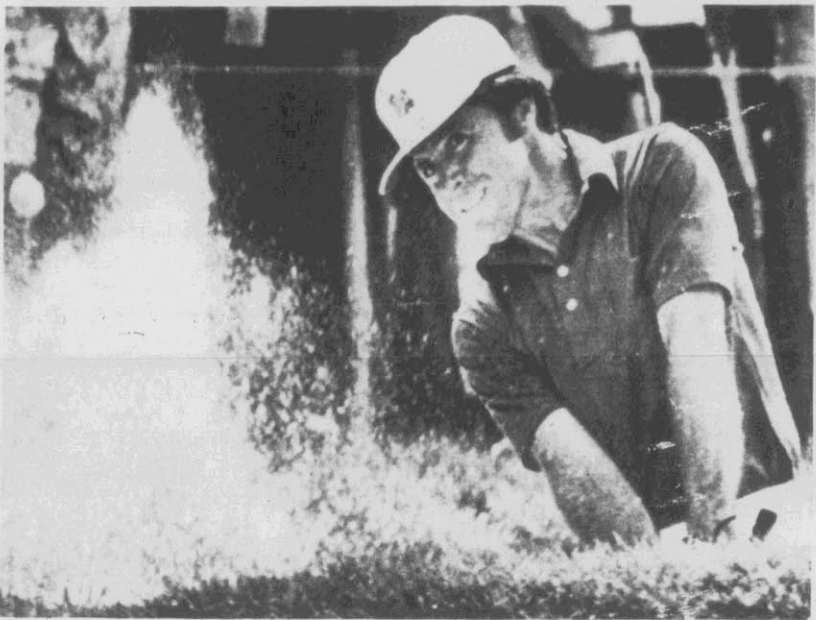

"One day I may look back and say, 'Why didn't I give myself a better chance in America?'" said the 44-year-old fairway gypsy from Johannesburg, seeking his third PGA championship at Oak Hill here this weekend.

"I may ask myself, 'What would have happened if I had played 28 tournaments a year on the U.S. tour instead of 14? How many more major crowns would I have won?'"

"Right now, I don't regret any of it. I've traveled 5 million miles — 200,000 miles a year, crossing oceans, playing everywhere golf is played and sometimes where it isn't. I've accumulated countless friends. I have broadened my education and viewpoint."

Player has won 119 tournaments since turning pro in 1957 but none that gave him greater satisfaction than his victory earlier this year on Africa's black Ivory Coast.

"I won after shooting a 64 to beat out Peter Townsend at Abidjan," Player related. "After I sunk the winning putt, a horde of the black Africans rushed in, lifted me onto their shoulders and carried me 400 yards in the air. When one of them got tired, another moved in to take his place.

"President Boigny personally presented me the champion's trophy — pure ivory. What a thrill it was for me — a white South African — to get such a reception."

Player is one of four men to have won each of the four Grand Slam championships — the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and PGA. The others are Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan and Nicklaus.

Nicklaus is the undisputed king with five Masters, four PGAs, four U.S. Opens and three British Opens.

"I am as interested as Jack in winning the majors," said Player. "I just don't point to them as practice for them as much as Jack does. I am more globally oriented."

The little South African once was the middle link between Arnold Palmer, 50, and Nicklaus, 40, as the sport's "Big Three," and there have been hints of a bitter rivalry between Gary and Jack.

Cox To Request Lie Detector

ATLANTA (AP) — Manager Bobby Cox of the Atlanta Braves said late Thursday night he will request a lie detector test at a hearing today on his appeal of an indefinite suspension for a spitting incident with umpire Jerry Dale.

Cox said he was "completely shocked" when he got a telephone call Thursday from National League President Chub Feeney advising him of the suspension.

Cox got a one-day reprieve and was allowed to manage the Braves in a 4-3 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers Thursday night by filing an appeal to Feeney's decision.

The manager was to meet with Feeney in New York Friday to state his case.

"I've already told him the truth," Cox said.

Feeney's action came after he reviewed a report on the spitting incident involving Cox and Dale during a ninth-inning rhabarb Wednesday night.

Cox charged the field when Dale ruled the Dodgers' Dusty Baker safe at second on the front end of a potential double play, saying Atlanta shortstop Rafael Ramirez failed to touch the base. During the argument, Cox hurled his cap to the ground and was immediately ejected and drew a $100 fine.

The manager and umpire then went jaw-to-jaw and Dale said after the game that Cox "spit right in my eye the first time. Then he spit tobacco in my face and all over my shirt."

in different ways. Terry Moor and Wojtek Fibak were able to handle the problem, but top-seeded Gene Mayer and No. 2 Harold Solomon weren't as fortunate.

Moor turned in the biggest upset in the U.S. Open Clay Court tennis tournament Thursday, beating Mayer 6-2, 6-3 under stifling conditions at the Indianapolis Sports Center. Fibak, seeded No. 6, ousted former champion Zjelko Franulovic 6-4, 6-3, to advance to today's quarterfinals against another giant-killer, Mel Purcell.

"He played well, and the heat was unbearable," Mayer said of the third-round loss to 16th-seeded Moor in 90-plus degrees. "After four or five games, I just don't feel right. The heat is very tough to get used to. I didn't handle the heat as well, and I lost."

Purcell, a 21-year-old first-year pro, turned in another stunning upset Thursday night over Solomon.

"It's the best win of my life," Purcell said of the 4-6, 6-0, 6-2 victory. "But I've got to get used to playing these guys. It's going to help me in the long run as far as confidence, but I've got to put it aside and get ready for the next one."

"It was hot, and I was getting tired. But it was a matter of who could last longer," said Purcell, whose quarterfinal opponent is Fibak.

"It was like somebody was standing on my chest," Solomon said. "It was very difficult for me to breathe. It's just one of those things."

The No. 1 women's seed, defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd, had to play twice on Thursday because of a rainout Wednesday night. She reached Friday's semifinals with easy victories over Dianne Evers and Anne White. No. 2 Evonne Goolagong, runner-up last year, also advanced with a 7-5, 6-3 victory over Regina Marsikova.

In other matches Thursday, No. 6 Ivanna Madruga ousted Hana Strachonova 6-1, 6-2, to advance to today's round against Lloyd. Goolagong was matched against 15-year-old Andrea Jaeger, a 6-1, 6-1 winner over Mary Lou Piatek.

Eighth-seeded Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina won twice Thursday, beating Ricardo Ycaza 6-1, 6-2, and No. 13-seed Kim Warwick 6-2, 6-1. Clerc was to face Moor in Friday's quarterfinals.

No. 3 Eddie Dibbs, ousting Sweden's Per Hjertquist 6-1, 6-1, was matched against Bolivia's Mario Martinez.

Also on Thursday, fifth-seeded Jose Higuera had to go three sets to beat John Hayes 7-5, 3-6, 6-1; No. 10 Eliot Teltscher beat Christophe Freyss 6-2, 6-4, and the unseeded Martinez defeated Jose Damiani 6-2, 6-2.

Pair Pitch Distance

Padre Throws 4-Hitter, Met Hurls Six-Hitter

By HERSHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

New York's Ray Burris, back after more than a month on the sidelines, and San Diego's Bob Shirley, a relative newcomer to the starting rotation, pitched their first complete games of the season Thursday.

Burris, out since July 3 with a broken thumb, fired a six-hitter as the Mets downed the Montreal Expos 7-1. It was his 18th starting assignment. Meanwhile, Shirley, making only his fourth start after working out of the bullpen until July 18, allowed only four hits as the Padres whipped the Houston Astros 5-1.

In other National League action, the Pittsburgh Pirates flattened the Chicago Cubs 11-3, the Atlanta Braves edged the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3 and the Philadelphia Phillies shaded the St. Louis Cardinals 3-2. Cincinnati and San Francisco had the day off.

"I haven't had to wait this long for a win since there was a blackout in New York in 1978," said Burris, who notched his first triumph since June 8. "I had to wait two months for that game to finish."

Burris was pitching for Chicago against the Mets in New York when the game was suspended because of a citywide power failure and resumed on the Cubs' next visit.

This time, the Mets supplied some power in the form of home runs by Jerry Morales and Joel Youngblood off Fred Norman while Burris blanked the Expos until Rowland Office's homer in the seventh inning.

"I felt that if I stayed in front of the hitters and followed my game plan, which meant keeping the first two hitters off base, that I'd have a good game," said Burris.

Despite his long layoff, Burris did not walk a batter.

Padres 5, Astros 1

Jerry Mumphrey rapped out three hits and drove in three runs in support of Shirley's pitching as San Diego snapped a 10-game losing streak in Houston's Astrodome and a four-game skid over-all. Mumphrey drove in San Diego's first run with a third-inning single and added a two-run double in the sixth against loser Joe Niekro.

Despite the setback, the Astros maintained their half-game lead over Los Angeles in the NL West when the Dodgers also lost.

"We hadn't won here in a long time," said Shirley. "A complete game like that really helps out. We only had six all year before tonight and that will give our bullpen a chance to rest for a while."

Pirates 11, Cubs 3

Bill Madlock hit a two-run homer, pitcher Eddie Solomon cracked a pair of doubles and Tim Foli drove in three runs with a double and two singles to highlight a 16-hit attack. The triumph moved the Pirates within 1½ games of first-place Montreal in the NL East.

Solomon allowed early home runs to Mike Tyson and Jesus Figueroa but then settled down and pitched his first complete game in 11 starts, scattering eight hits.

Madlock was booed heartily by the Chicago fans for knocking second baseman Steve Macko out of the game and onto the disabled list while breaking up a double play a day earlier. He responded with a single in a two-run second inning, then broke a 3-3 tie with a two-run homer in the fifth.

"The boos don't bother me," said Madlock, a former Cub. "I understand. The fans are frustrated. They've never had a winner and they have to take it out on somebody. Really, it's fun when the fans boo me here. The things they boo me for now are the things they cheered me for when I was here."

Braves 4, Dodgers 3

Jeff Burroughs and Bruce Benedict delivered consecutive sacrifice flies in the sixth inning to bring Atlanta back behind. The Braves began their winning rally on a Bob Horner single and Dale Murphy followed with a double. Both sacrifice flies carried to deep center, with Murphy moving to third on Burroughs' drive.

Doyle Alexander picked up his 10th victory, working into the eighth inning before he was replaced by Rick Camp because of leg cramps. Atlanta's Glenn Hubbard homered in the third inning, a two-run shot off Bob Welch that followed Alexander's single.

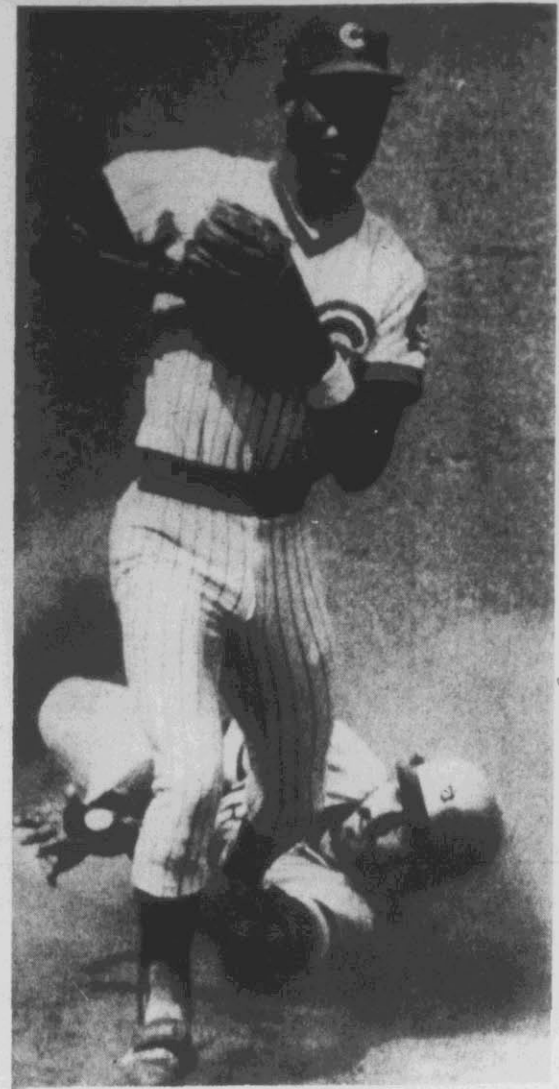

Phillies 3, Cardinals 2

Pitcher Steve Carlton drove in the eventual winning run and became the NL's first 17-game winner with the help of a superb defense and a key two-run single by Larry Bowa.

The Cardinals' John Fulgham pitched four perfect innings before the Phillies scored all their runs in the fifth.

Mike Schmidt walked and was forced by Garry Maddox. Manny Trillo doubled Maddox to third and Bowa then singled, sending the Phillies ahead 2-1 and taking second on the throw to the plate. Carlton, who allowed six hits in 8 2-3 innings — he needed last-out help from Tug McGraw — singled Bowa home with what proved to be the winning run.

The victory was the 27th against only eight losses for Carlton against St. Louis since the Cardinals traded him to Philadelphia in 1972.

Bradley Regroups, Leads LPGA By 3

TORONTO (AP) — After the first three holes Pat Bradley figured she was going to be in for a long afternoon. It was — to her advantage.

Bradley opened the $150,000 LPGA tournament Thursday by bogeying the first hole with a 3-putt green. After missing the next two greens in regulation she salvaged par through some good chipping.

Bradley regrouped in a hurry and by the end of the day she held a three-shot lead over the field with a dazzling 8-under-par 65.

"Kathy Whitworth was six under before I even got to the first tee and after the first three holes I think she had gone seven under," said Bradley. "I knew I had my work cut out for me."

Bradley, one of the long hitters on the women's tour went to work on the par fives. At St. George's Golf and Country Club, there are six of par fives with five greens attainable in two big shots.

Bradley was seven under on the par five's logging five birdies and one eagle.

Whitworth, who also had good success on the par five's recording four birdies, was alone in second spot at 68, one shot ahead of Janet Coles, Donna Horton White, Jane Blalock and Beth David.

JoAnne Carner, who won the event, officially known as Peter Jackson tournament, the previous two times it was played at St. George's in 1975 and 1978 and holds the course record, shot 69.

At 69 were Carner and Cathy Hill, while Nancy Lopez-Melton, Jan Stephenson, Penny Pulz, Barbara Moyness, Marlene Floyd, Jan Ferraris and Myra Van Hoose were grouped at 72.

Going For The Block
Seattle Seahawks' Brad Reid (97) was attempting to block a punt against the Atlanta Falcons Thursday night in the Kingdome but ended up blocked out of the play himself and upside down at the same time. Seattle Nips Falcons SEATTLE (AP) — In the Seattle Seahawks' first four seasons in the National Football League, they were unsuccessful in finding a quality kickoff return specialist.

For example, six different players returned the kickoffs for the Seahawks last season. But maybe they've had the right man — without knowing it — for the past three years.

Cornell Webster raced back the opening kickoff 98 yards Thursday night and the Seahawks went on to beat the Atlanta Falcons 14-10 in a National Football League exhibition opener for both clubs.

Webster, a cornerback from University of Tulsa who came to the Seahawks as a free agent in 1977, took Falcon placekicker Tim Mazzetti's kick on the Seattle 2 and it was good by Atlanta.

Webster volunteered for kickoff return duty after Jeff Moore, who returned 31 kickoffs for Seattle last season, suffered an ankle injury in practice last weekend.

"I've been trying to get them to put me back there for three years," Webster said.

Atlanta lost the war but won the battle. Trying to come back after a 6-10 season in 1979 after making the playoffs in 1978, the Falcons had a 315-198 advantage in total yards Thursday night.

"I was pleased with our offense," said Falcon Coach Leeman Bennett. "We moved the ball pretty well especially with our No. 1 offense in there."

Second-year quarterback Larry Fortner almost pulled the game out for the Falcons in the final quarter. He marched Atlanta from its own 6 with 8:02 left to the Seahawk 32 with 1:31. But he misfired on three straight passes to tight end Junior Miller.

Cincy's Bench Cast In Bronze

CINCINNATI (AP) — Collecting bubble-gum cards is fine for kids, but now the Cincinnati Reds have cast Johnny Bench in bronze for the really serious baseball art collector — if there is such a person.

The Reds unveiled "The Catcher" on Thursday, an off-day before the Los Angeles Dodgers arrived for a weekend series.

"The Catcher," by sculptor Bob Scriver, is a 12-inch-high replica of Bench. Each costs $950.

That's the price tag on the first 30 "Catchers," at least. The price goes up to $1,425 as soon as just 33 of the 100-piece, limited edition set is left.

"This is a great honor," Beoch said at the unveiling reception, comparing the sculpture with the paintings and other art works on display.

"In no way does this compete on their level — but they couldn't catch, either."

The Reds said commissioning the sculpture was in line with their image as an innovator among major league baseball teams. They already sell a series of lithograph art prints, "Greatest Moments in Reds History," in their souvenir shop.

"The sculpture is viewed as an opportunity for baseball fans and art fanciers alike to secure a fine-quality piece of art likely to become a true collector's keepsake," says the Reds' brochure promoting "The Catcher."

Reds President Dick Wagner said in looking for a player to model for the initial bronze, "I don't think we could have had a finer person than John. He's always been a gentleman ... a delightful person and a delightful athlete. He's made a great contribution to our ballclub."

Bench, 32, is Cincinnati's career leader in home runs and runs batted in. Last month, he surpassed Yogi Berra to become baseball's all-time home-run hitting catcher.

Wagner and Reds chairman Louis Nippert presented Bench, who wears No. 5, with the fifth bronze in the numbered series.

Richard had "his best day yet," Brelsford added.

The right-hander was transferred Tuesday from a Methodist Hospital intensive care unit to a private room.

The Astros' pitcher suffered a major stroke and had left arm and left leg weakness after the surgery. Brelsford said Tuesday, however, Richard was responding to therapy and there was some movement in the fingers and toes.

Richard was placed on the 21-day disabled list July 16 after complaining several weeks of a "dead arm."

Title IX Probe Near For Eight

ATLANTA (AP) — Department of Education investigators will begin on-campus reviews of sex-discrimination complaints against athletic programs at eight universities on Sept. 8, a federal official in Atlanta said Thursday.

Lou Bryson, southeastern regional Education Department official in charge of collegiate sports discrimination investigations, identified the schools as Cornell, Hawaii, North Texas State, Kansas, Washington State, the University of Akron, Michigan and the University of Bridgeport, Conn.

Federal complaints have been filed by students against 84 colleges across the country charging sex discrimination in athletics. Many of those complaints have been on file for several years.

Although Congress banned such discrimination in 1973, the federal government has never directly acted to enforce the statute. Bryson said the Sept. 8 investigations would be the first move toward enforcement.

'Real People' Spawns Latest Series Of Copycat Programming

By PETER J. BOYER
 AP Television Writer
 LOS ANGELES (AP) —

When George Schlatter invented "Real People" for NBC last year, it seemed a development to be welcomed. If the show sometime slipped into a carry attitude, at least it was a stark departure from the teenycoms that flooded prime time.

Producer's Schlatter's idea was quickly seized upon by other TV executives, and we all know what came of it. Prime time is suddenly crawling with populist entertainments, "Real People" imitations that get right past the spirit of "real television" and straight to the freak show stuff.

NBC leads the pack in this line, with three oddball series on its fall schedule — "Real People," "Games People Play" and the frenzied "Speak Up America." ABC is a close second, with "That's Incredible" and "Those Amazing Animals," a sort of Ripley's Zoo.

Until now, CBS has shied from "reality entertainment." Perhaps, an idle fancier might suppose, because CBS sees itself as the class of the business. Lordly Bill Paley's high standards, and all that.

But CBS is as willing to deal in junk as the next guy, a fact proven by its entry in the human circus, "That's My Line," cleverly titled to evoke memories of "What's My Line." The connecting thread is thin.

In fact, in watching this new entry, which makes its premiere Saturday evening, it may occur to you that "What's My Line" quite deftly allowed its strangely employed guests to maintain some degree of dignity. That's a taboo approach these days. Odd is in.

You can train a parrot to speak, but you cannot teach it when to use its vocabulary. Some bridge players seem to suffer from a similar disability.

Early in his career, the bridge player is taught that, at no trump contracts, it is usually unwise to win the ace of the suit led by the enemy if that is his only stopper in the suit. It pays to hold up winning the trick in an attempt to exhaust one of the defenders of his cards in that suit. Sterling advice, to which we can take no exception — when the time is right. But refusing to win tricks indiscriminately ultimately leads to poverty.

The modern tendency is to rebid one heart with the South hand. However, we have no objection to his refusal to introduce a suit that is not really biddable, and the final contract was normal.

West led his fourth-best heart, and declarer, heeding the old advice, ducked in dummy. East won the queen and forced out the ace. Declarer had only eight running tricks — he had to set up a diamond for his contract. But when West took the ace of diamonds, he still had three hearts to cash for down one.

"I didn't win the first heart because I was hoping that East held only two hearts and the ace of diamonds," commented South. His reasoning was good as far as it went, but it didn't go far enough. By simply winning the ace of hearts at the first trick, he could have guaranteed the contract no matter who held the ace of diamonds.

If West held only four hearts, the contract was unbeatable. The defenders could get no more than three heart tricks and the ace of diamonds.

The holding to fear would be if West held five hearts and East, two. In this case, however, East must have one of the missing heart honors, for if West held all the heart honors, he would have led the king, not low. The play of the ace, therefore, would block the suit and the contract would be safe.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" My Line," which he promises will take a look "at the off-beat, funny and fascinating ways America earns a living." As the form demands co-hosts, Barker (what a perfect name for this genre) has the help of two lovelies, Tiiu Leek and Suzanne Childs.

In the first episode, we get to see a meek-looking man who has always wanted to be a boxer, and gets his chance from an enterprising fellow who makes fantasies come true. Perhaps realizing this is fairly tepid stuff, Barker screams it up:

"This intellectual-looking man wants to be a prize-fighter!"

Imagine that. There is a guy who jogs with pigs, and a college student who tucks women into bed for extra spending money. It's not as exciting as it sounds.

Then, Barker introduces a chicken sexer — a guy who looks at little chickens' behinds to determine their sex for chicken farmers. This gives barking Bob the chance to ask, "How many chickens does a chicken sexer sex when a chicken sexes sexes chickens?"

"That's My Line" is certainly no tackier than the others of its kind. It's just not very interesting, even by this breed's rather broad standards.

I think that's a good sign. Oddball stuff wears out fast, and I have a feeling some of these freak shows will go out of business pretty soon. You don't need TV for this kind of entertainment. You can just go visit your crazy aunt.

'Grant' Tops Nominee List

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The star-studded Emmy awards ceremony could be a bit lackluster this year if striking actors — including some of the top nominees — follow through on a threat to boycott the awards night.

Nominations for the 32nd annual Emmy Awards were announced Thursday by the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. The nationally televised awards show is set for Sept. 7, but one spokeswoman for striking actors has said the walkout could last into that month.

For the second straight year, the "Lou Grant" series picked up the most nominations. The show, set in the newsroom of a Los Angeles newspaper, was nominated for 15 Emmys, including best drama series and best actor in a drama series for Ed Asner in the title role.

Asner, one of 60,000 Screen Actors Guild and American Federations of Television and Radio Artists members on strike since July 21, has been active on picket lines.

The awards ceremony are to be emceed by "Little House on the Prairie" producer-star Michael Landon, Lee Remick and Bob Newhart.

CBS led all other networks with 98 Emmy nominations. ABC followed with 77 nominations, NBC got 68, PBS received 19 and 12 went to syndicated programs.

Second to "Lou Grant" in number of nominations was NBC's "Moviola," a three-night retelling of three Hollywood legends, that captured 13 nominations.

"M-A-S-H," the free-wheeling series about an Army field hospital, was third with 11 nominations, including best comedy series and best actor in a comedy for Alan Alda as Capt. Hawkeye Pierce.

Other shows with several nominations were "All Quiet on the Western Front" with seven, "Amber Waves" with six, NBC's "The Big Show" with six, "Baryshnikov on Broadway" with six, "The Muppet Show" with eight and two cancelled NBC series, "The Rockford Files" with six and "Skag" with seven.

 Today's Cryptoquip clue: P equals O

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Gasohol Goes Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Incentives for gasohol production have dropped the fuel's wholesale price at least a penny below that of regular unleaded gasoline. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland says.

"Petroleum prices have risen to the point where federal and state incentives have made production of gasohol commercially viable," Bergland said Tuesday. Many farmers are promoting increased use of gasohol, a blend that is 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent alcohol, to expand markets for their grain, used in alcohol production. Gasohol backers say it's an effective substitute for unleaded gasoline, which was at the center of last year's fuel shortage. The Carter administration has supported gasohol production despite continued debate over its energy-effectiveness and impact on food supplies.

Seven Killed In Hotel Fire

BUNDORAN, Ireland (AP) — Fire swept through a resort hotel on Donegal Bay early today, killing seven people, including a family of four, police said. At least eight other people were injured, some jumping from windows in their pajamas and robes.

The family that perished was from Nass in County Kildare, police said, and included a girl of 17 and a boy of 10. A number of other guests were unaccounted for and a search of the badly damaged building was under way.

The nationalities of the other victims and the cause of the blaze were not immediately known.

The fire broke out just after midnight at the 40-room Central Hotel in the County Donegal seaside resort on the northwest coast of the Irish Republic.

First reports said 100 guests evacuated the burning hotel, and that several were rescued from upper floors by firemen with ladders.

Bundoran attracts vacationers from both the Irish Republic and the nearby British province of Northern Ireland.

One witness, Paddy Fitzpatrick of Dublin, said he was passing the hotel when he spotted the blaze and helped a man and child out through a window.

"There was total confusion. People were crying in the streets because their friends and families were still in the fire," he said.

City Clerk In Program

Lois D. Worthington, city clerk here, was recently selected to participate in the certification program for the International City Clerks Association.

Mrs. Worthington's program consists of attending three one-week sessions at the Institute of Government in Chapel Hill over a three-year period.

She is presently serving as third vice president of the North Carolina City Clerks Association. Mrs. Worthington was employed by the city in 1955 and was appointed to her present position in 1974.

Economic Forecast Sees Lower Inflation, Higher Unemployment

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — An economic forecast released today by University of Michigan economists says unemployment will remain high in 1981 but inflation should ease to near 11 percent.

The national jobless rate will rise from a projected 7.7 percent at year's end to 9 percent next year, but inflation should decline from 12 percent to 11.1 percent, the study said.

The forecast was released by University President Harold Shapiro and fellow economists Saul Hymans and Philip Howrey.

Their other projections included:

—A modest gain in the volume of goods and services produced will expand the gross national product, reducing the expected $20 billion decline in the GNP by 3.6 percent.

—Disposable income and corporate profits will continue to suffer from the recession. Real disposable income will fall 0.5 percent in 1980 and 0.4 percent in 1981.

—The residential construction and automobile industries — hardest hit by the recession — will rebound in 1981. Eased credit restrictions and passage of a proposed $30 billion could help consumers afford new homes and cars, they explained.

—Declines in other sectors of the economy, like farming, may be offset by "substantial growth in the volume of U.S. exports and government purchases."

—Energy inflation rates may be moderated, compensating for persisting overall inflation. However, farm prices will increase despite lower energy costs because of heat and drought damage.

The economists say their forecast depends on assumptions that monetary policy remains unchanged, social security taxes increase and a $30 billion tax cut takes effect in the second quarter of 1981.

If the tax cut is not approved, the forecasters say GNP will rise only 2.7 percent compared with their predicted 3.6 percent, and corporate profits and disposable personal income will decline further.

Two Accidents Are Reported

An estimated $2,150 property damage resulted from two traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted from a 10:40 a.m. mishap on Greenville Boulevard, ¼ mile West of the Red Banks Road intersection, involving cars driven by Ruth Irene Boxberger of 2102 Southview Dr., and Earl Willard Schamp of Morehead City.

Investigators, who charged Schamp with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident, estimated damage at $250 to the Boxberger car and $1,200 to the Schamp auto.

A car driven by Charles Alexander Woody of Durham, and a truck operated by Elmer Hayes of Route 2, Madison, collided about 10:51 a.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 200 feet East of the Arlington Boulevard intersection.

Damage was estimated at $700 to the Woody vehicle. No damage resulted to the Hayes truck.

Farmville Hits Its Highest Average

FARMVILLE — The Farmville Tobacco Market recorded its highest average of the young season Thursday, according to Louis Williams, sales supervisor of the Tobacco Board of Trade here.

Williams said that warehouses averaged $131.49 per hundred pounds yesterday as 432,458 pounds sold for $568,651.

The spokesman said that sales volume was heavy with most of the volume consisting of non-descript offerings and priming grades. Lugs and cutter grades continue to increase in volume, he added, noting that the quality of sales remained the same as on the previous sales day.

Top price paid by the buying companies was $1.65 per pound. Williams said that more quality grades of primings helped to increase the average to its highest mark so far.

Stabilization receipts Thursday accounted for only 5.83 percent of total sales.

The market activity yesterday brought the season totals to 4,160,003 pounds sold for $5,177,797, an average of $124.47 per hundred pounds.
